Consumer Prices Climb In August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, surging at their steepest clip in four months, rose 0.5 percent in August as both food and clothing became significantly more expensive.

For the first two-thirds of 1984, inflation is running at an annual rate of 4.2 percent, a slight deterioration from last year's 3.8 percent.

Much of last month's bad news was attributed to higher prices for food — up 0.6 percent, the most since February — and clothing — up 0.9 percent, the most since March 1980.

Housing prices rose 0.6 percent, their second big gain in a row.

Gasoline prices fell 0.9 percent. That decline, however, was only half the July improvement and helped explain the steep overall increase.

While the August gain was the steepest since April's 0.5 percent jump, Labor Department analyst Patrick Jackman said the new increase was likely to be the steepest for the rest of 1984.

"Most people are expecting inflation for the year to run at 4.5 percent to 5 percent. I think this will still be the case." He predicted that, for the balance of 1984, the department's Consumer Price Index will record monthly inflationary jumps of 0.3 percent to 0.4 percent.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes echoed that assessment, saying that "declining pressures on interest rates and low inflation make the outlook for continued economic growth very promising."

Jackman called the August gain an "aberration caused by the jump in vegetable prices" and higher prices for new fall clothing.

Indeed, vegetable prices recorded a 13.2 percent jump, their largest since February 1977.

Supply shortages were blamed for all of the increase. Specifically, hot weather in California drove lettuce prices up 28.7 percent while delivery woes forced tomato prices up 30.8 percent. Potato prices rose 12 percent, with the gain blamed on small spring crops caused by heavy rains.

As for clothing, Jackman said that this year's robust economic growth had prompted manufacturers to raise prices for fall-season clothes more than in the past. He predicted clothing prices would stabilize, or might even decline slightly, in the coming months with the next sharp increase unlikely before spring lines appear in the winter.

Auto, Coal Pacts Reached

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers tentatively agreed on a new national contract today, with the union declaring that it had won its fight to protect members' jobs and the company calling it a "win-win" settlement.

Union leaders called for an immediate halt to strikes at 17 GM plants which had idled 111,000 of the company's 350,000 UAW workers nationwide and cost GM an estimated $30 million a day. But some local leaders said they would oppose going back to work because of disputes over local issues.

Hours after the agreement was announced, workers continued to walk picket lines at 15 of the 17 plants.

UAW President Owen Bieber and chief union bargainer Donald Ephlin issued a statement at 2:10 a.m. EDT announcing the agreement, but they refused to divulge details.

"It is an excellent settlement that makes more secure than ever in history the jobs of our UAW-GM members, while providing much deserved economic improvements immediately and in the years ahead," the union officials said.

GM Vice President Alfred Warren, speaking later at a news conference, said "there were two winners — the United Auto Workers and the General Motors Corporation. I have never seen a better win-win situation."

"Our customers will benefit from this agreement through increased competitiveness of the corporation, as will our shareholders, suppliers and the many communities in which GM has concentrations of facilities and employment," he said.

Warren said the company was "confident" that the agreement would be ratified quickly by the union's membership. Bieber said the 11-member national negotiating committee recommended ratification by a 10-1 vote.

The first step toward ratification takes place Wednesday in St. Louis when the UAW leadership unveils the specific terms to the union's General Motors Council, a 300-member advisory board of local union leaders. Ratification votes by GM workers would occur afterward and would take about a week.

Both Bieber and Warren refused to divulge details of the pact until it was presented to the council.

As to the 17 strikes, Bieber said, "We're going to be advising the local union leadership that we want them to return to work immediately."

Pickets were quickly withdrawn at the GM Technical Center in Warren, Mich., and the plant in Pontiac, Mich., where the two-seat Fiero sports car is assembled. Pickets were pulled away from the gates in Warren, a Detroit suburb, soon after the agreement was reached, and negotiators in Pontiac reached an agreement on local issues early today, union and company officials said.

"I'm just going to let out a holler," said Harold Cox, vice president of UAW Local 653 in Pontiac. "We're kind of proud of how it turned out."

'No Givebacks'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The soft coal industry and the United Mine Workers reached tentative agreement today on a new contract that union President Trumka said "has absolutely no givebacks" and should avert a threatened large-scale strike.

Bargainers for the two sides settled at 4:45 a.m. EDT on the proposed pact to replace one that expires Oct. 1. The agreement came after several hours of what Trumka called "very hard bargaining."

If the rank-and-file of the 160,000-member union ratifies the contract — and Trumka said he expected a vote as early as next Thursday — it would be the first time since 1964 that the two sides will have reached a strike-free settlement.

Banks Announce Merger Proposal

A proposed merger of First State Bank and First Citizens Bank has been agreed upon in principle by the directors of both banks. First State President C.D. Langston said this morning.

However, Langston said the merger is subject to approval by the two banks' shareholders and regulatory agencies, which could come late this year or early in 1985.

First State, with headquarters in Winterville, was formed in January 1906 and opened the first of three branch offices in Greenville in 1970. The bank, with assets of $47.3 million and deposits of $41.4 million, ranks 46th in the state, Langston said.

First Citizens, headquartered in Raleigh, ranks fifth in the state with assets of $2 billion and deposits of $1.74 billion. A subsidiary of First Citizens Corp., the bank serves 60 North Carolina counties with 266 offices in 126 towns, including branches in Grimesland and Grifton.

First State has about 475 shareholders, while First Citizens has 1,376 shareholders.

Langston, who was a member of First State's board of directors for 15 years before becoming president in January 1961, said if the merger is approved, shareholders of First State may elect to receive either $130 in cash, or four shares of First Citizens Corp. Series H (9 percent cumulative convertible preferred) $32.50 par stock or a combination of both for each share of First State stock.

"I feel the community will not lose any service whatsoever" if the merger occurs. "We will still be here working with these folks," Langston said.

Langston also said that First State's 55 full-time and six part-time "employees will be taken care of" in the event of a merger.

AMA Health Concerns Cited

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer
Determining where, if and how a line should be drawn between private and public health care is one of the major concerns the American Medical Association is now faced with, AMA President Dr. Joseph F. Boyle said today.

Dr. Boyle who is in town as the guest lecturer for an ECU School of Medicine forum on controlling medical staff growth and legal constraints, said at a morning press conference here that legislation freezing doctors fees on services paid for by Medicare is just one of several current issues making it apparent that some far-reaching changes are in order. "Not superficial changes," he said, "these are generic changes that carry a lot of importance."

The AMA, Boyle said, plans to challenge the legislation because it is "unconstitutional interference with the voluntary program the AMA had begun in April. The AMA's plan called for all doctors to voluntarily freeze their fees for one year. The request also carried with it directions for doctors to "seriously" take into account patients' financial and medical conditions when charging.

Approximately 75 percent of America's physicians agreed to the voluntary measure; 78 percent of AMA members agreed. Only 8 percent declined to comply. The others,

Dr. Joseph F. Boyle
AMA Leader At Forum

Boyle explained, either haven't responded "or didn't hear of the request."

Dr. Boyle said the AMA feels the legislation is unconstitutional because it "interferes with patients' rights to contract services" and because it creates an environment that could foster medical care rationing edicts similar to those in the United Kingdom that deny hospital entry in some cases.

"Studies have shown that if the United States adopted a method like the United Kingdom's, no fewer than 38,000 people would die of kidney failure per year, no fewer than 40,000 of heart disease, and no fewer than 48,000 of cancer. That's 130,000 people who could be denied ... useful extension of productive lives," Boyle said.

However, the AMA recognizes that some of those lives would be non-productive and holds that in situations requiring extension of life decisions, that the family, the physician and whatever counselors the family desires should decide what should be done, Boyle said.

Other issues the AMA is looking into include financing of basic research — who's going to finance it, educational standards and financing, and how to handle the 20 million Americans who have either no or inadequate health care coverage.

Boyle said the AMA expects to deliver a report on those questions within a year and a half.

At Wits End By Erma Bombeck

With sexual promiscuity running rampant, I could not believe a letter I received from a woman this week who said she could not get her coat hangers to reproduce.

"I know how much success you've had and wondered how you did it," she said. "I've tried everything from hanging Burt Reynolds on the wall to spraying sexy perfume to hanging a nightie from Frederick's of Hollywood on a hanger. Nothing. Since you are obviously a sex therapist for inanimate objects, maybe you can tell me your secret. The future of my closet ngs on your answer."

Good grief! Didn't your mother tell you anything?

Sexually active coat hangers are at their peak when they are in a small closet. The smaller the closet, the better. We once lived in an apartment with a closet so small it couldn't support a rod . . . just two nails, within a week (the shortest gestation in the history of coat hangers) we had 37 of those little suckers.

Don't look for fertility among satin-covered hangers or sturdy metal skirt hangers with the clamps. The rich hangers that can afford to produce never do. It's the lower economic hangers (like the wire ones that bend over double when you put a silk blouse on them) that are bearing.

The ones that do best in my closet are the ones with no visible means of support . . . the ones with the top made out of piano wire and the bottom of rolled-up oardboard. I call them one-night stands. They're totally useless, but who has the heart to throw them out?

Hangers left in cara do well. Especially the ones that take lodging under the brake pedal or hook over the seat belt and flap out the window.

You have to know that hangers in captivity never reproduce. You know, the ones that are welded to the rod in posh hotels. I don't know how it works, but I think they're neutered when they affix them so you can slide them out of the groove, put your jacket on them and fit them back into the slot.

Some people have tried to trick hangers into reproducing by installing hooks and putting as many as 26 garments on the doorknob. Most coat hangers are too smart for that.

If you're looking for a hanger orgy, just open your closet and announce, "I'm moving next week." You'll get a population explosion you won't believe.

I've told you all I know. The rest you'll have to get from the gutter.

Performing the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Henry Lovelace.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Grissom of Zebulon and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Sullivan of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Hazel Jo Johnson of Williamston. Honorary bridesmaids were Melony Sullivan of Greenville, sister of the bride, Amber Martin of Sarasota, Fla., cousin of the bride, Beth Chamblee of Laurinburg, Gina Gurganus of Grimesland and Edie Rankin of Durham.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included David Hughes and Rob Grissom of Zebulon, brothers of the bride, Don Sullivan of Lumberton and Tony Abeyounis of Elizabeth City, cousins of the bridegroom, and Neil Thompson of Washington, N.C.

A program of organ music was presented by Jill Thompson. Jim Powers sang "Follow Me."

The bride wore a gown of candlelight Nottingham lace which featured a full tiered skirt with ivory satin ribbon bordering each tier. The long lace tapered sleeves had scalloped edging at the cuffs and on the high Victorian neckline. The fitted bodice was accented with a pleated lace ruffle draping off the shoulders and forming a V-yoke. A satin sash tied in back in a bow. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a garland of ivory silk slowers. She carried a bouquet of lavender and blue silk flowers.

The honor attendant wore an orchid point d'esprit lace gown styled with a full skirt and flounced hem. The sweetheart neckline extended into ruffled sleeves which were off-shoulder. She wore orchid flowers in her hair and carried long-stemmed lavender and blue silk flowers with greenery.

Each of the honorary attendants wore a pale blue dress and carried long-stemmed lavender flowers with greenery tied with lavender lace ribbon. Each wore baby's breath in their hair.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Rufus Abeyounis of Elizabeth City, aunt of the bridegroom.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Tilden Martin of Sarasota, Fla., aunt and uncle of the bridegroom, greeted guests.

Bonnie Temple served cake and Elaine Tant, both of Zebulon, poured punch. The reception area was decorated with a centerpiece of lavender and blue flowers flanked by silver candelabra holding white candles. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Speller said goodbyes.

A rehearsal party was given by the parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Abeyounis, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom, in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live in Greenville. The bride graduated from East Carolina University and is employed by Brody's where she does advertising and display work. The bridegroom graduated from Washington High School and is employed by White's Stores in Greenville as a buyer and assistant manager. He was recently promoted to company vice president.

Several miscellaneous showers and a wine and cheese party were given for the couple prior to wedding.

Daughter Fears Sister Will Tarnish Their Golden Anniversary

DEAR ABBY: My parents will soon celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and we, their children, are planning a grand reception for them at our country club.

We are six children, three sons and three daughters. The problem is the youngest sister—the beauty of the family. She's been on the fast track since her teen-age years and has humiliated and disgraced us many times, but our parents seem always to forgive her.

She was arrested for shoplifting in high school. Later, she was kicked out of college for stealing. At 23, she eloped with a wealthy young boy of 19. A year later, he caught her in bed with a 16-year-old caddy she dragged home from the country club.

She's on her second marriage now, and this husband doesn't have the big bucks her first husband had, so she's a hooker. Everybody in town knows this but our parents.

Do we have to include her at the 50th? I'm afraid she'll hustle men at the party. I spoke to our minister about this and he said, "I stands in the middle of pride," but then he doesn't have a hooker for a sister.

Please advise us.

THE ELDEST

DEAR ELDEST: The purpose of the celebration you're planning is to bring joy to your parents, so don't mar it by excluding your sister. Listen to your minister. Wise man, he.

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 and George (not his real name) is 34. We are very much in love and plan to marry soon. This is my second marriage and George's first. The problem: George contributes to the support of his two illegitimate sons. He became a father at 18, and then again at 20 (two different women). I have never met George's sons. Each lives with his mother in a distant state.

George plans to provide for his sons' college educations, which may mean some sacrifices on his part—and mine.

I understand this, and I'm not grumbling about it. My problem? My parents haven't been told about George's sons. George says he thinks my parents should be told now, but I've asked him not to tell them yet.

My parents are small-town conservative people, and I'm afraid they would be turned off on George if they knew he had two illegitimate sons.

Help me get my head straight, please.

CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: I agree with George. Tell your parents now. Even small-town conservative people should respect a man for facing up to his responsibilities. Your George must be quite a man. Cherish him.

Why Debate?

There is some small element of surprise in the agreement on two televised debates between Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale.

For one thing, the incumbent could not exactly be forced into such debates. With nearly four years in the White House, he could have simply said, "Let the record speak for itself; what does your record have to say in response?" For another, pollsters are in agreement that the Reagan-Bush candidacy enjoys such a one-sided lead there appears little reason for campaigning. On the surface, all that's required is to continue playing the presidential (and vice presidential) role, and just let a favorable sequence of news reports do the "work."

So, the hard fact appears to be the main beneficiary of the debates would be the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

A debate provides a forum for the Democrat rival to be heard by a nationwide audience; it carries with it the possibility of a Reagan misstep or inadvertent display of a weakness, which could turn the whole race around. There is little to gain and a chance of much to lose by the incumbent.

On the other hand, Republican campaign strategists might well think their candidate "owes" at least making an appearance of fighting to retain his seat. Too, there has to be a display of supreme self-confidence as a vital quality to justify his re-election.

The Mondale campaign officials see outcome of the debates as a critical factor in November's election. The one debate between Reagan and former president Carter was viewed as decisive in 1980.

Missed

There are few who have not had strong feelings about Muhammad Ali over the years.

Dating back to the years when he refused to be drafted, which some saw as an act of treason and others viewed as the stance of a hero, Ali has been controversial. Even changing his name from Cassius Clay and adopting the Muslim religion caused heated debate about the heavyweight champion. He was cocky both in and out of the ring. Some adored him and others could not wait for the day when he would be put flat on his back.

Criticism never stopped Ali and certainly no other boxer stopped him in his prime. A disease similar to Parkinsonism has affected him now, however, leaving him with slurred speech and slowed motion. Doctors say he is not in danger and they hope to control the disease with medication. Whether the problem is due to his years of boxing is not certain.

No doubt millions still love, and some still can't abide, the flamboyant Ali of old, but it is certain there is not one of us who doesn't wish for Mohammad Ali a full recovery. We even miss his poetry.

Environmental Protections Fall

WASHINGTON — Something is terribly askew when a rag-tag group of ecological guerrillas is the only frontline player on a potentially life-and-death issue: the transport of nuclear materials on the high seas.

Greenpeace, the 13-year-old international environmental organization, has for several years been monitoring the rapidly expanding international trade and transport of nuclear materials on the high seas.

It has located discharges of radioactive waste in the English Channel and even attempted to blockade shipments of radioactive materials.

Greenpeace was also the first to report that the French cargo vessel, Mont Louis, which sank Aug. 25 off the Belgium coast, carried uranium hexafluoride, thereby contradicting the French, who said the ship was only transporting medical supplies.

Of immediate concern to Greenpeace is an issue ready-made for Walter Mondale: the control of nuclear materials that the Reagan administration has permitted to get dangerously out of control. In recent months, the Reagan White House has approved a foolish precedent by allowing Sweden and Norway to transport, without its permission, nuclear fuels from one location to another. Similar privileges may soon follow for China and Japan.

This new policy grants "friendly nations" the "advance consent" necessary to ship nuclear materials from their power plants to other locations throughout the world without the specific approval of the United States. Under previous administrations, the United States had complete authority to approve or deny whether a purchaser, such as Japan, could reprocess spent nuclear fuel from its own power plants and when and how such shipments would be made. (The U.S. granted such permission because other countries' nuclear materials originated here.)

The dangers of such a policy are self-evident. Though a shipment of plutonium provides an opportunity for terrorists and would-be bomb makers, it also poses a serious health risk given the increasing possibility of accidents on the high seas. A mere one-millionth of a gram of plutonium can cause lung cancer. Just imagine the effect of tons of it on our ecological system.

Recently, a ship loaded with 500 pounds of plutonium was to leave France for Japan. In this case, the United States had the right to approve in advance how such a shipment would be made and took substantial precautions. Documents provided to Congress contend that "sophisticated measures will be taken to protect the cargo. Independent and redundant communication systems, including satellite relay systems, will be installed on the vessel."

Yet, the business of maintaining and producing fuel for the world's nuclear power plants means that radioactive materials are transported as far as 20,000 miles in some instances. No matter how effective your security network, long voyages raise the risk.

The nuclear fuel chain usually involves a circuitous route from mine to power plant to reprocessing center. Uranium mined in Canada, for example, might be sent to France, where it's transformed into uranium hexafluoride. It might then go on to Riga, in the Soviet Union, for enrichment; then to Seattle, via France, for conversion into uranium oxide; then to New Jersey, where it's fashioned into rod form; and then to a power plant in West Germany. The spent fuel will then usually be returned to France or Great Britain for reprocessing.

(Those two nations are home to the two largest processing centers in the world.) From that last stop, plutonium and depleted uranium are produced.

The last stage of this chain — the reprocessing end — is the most dangerous. Only 15 pounds of plutonium — about the size of a grapefruit — are required to make a crude atomic bomb. Luckily, the United States doesn't reprocess its spent fuel as yet, minimizing the risk of transporting weapons-grade plutonium long distances domestically.

While the Mont Louis wasn't carrying plutonium, its sinking highlighted the lack of proper safety regulations governing the transportation of nuclear materials by sea. The accident was well-timed, given the Reagan administration's increasingly relaxed posture on nuclear-materials trafficking, and Congress' tepid interest in the issue.

The hardball tactics of "ecoguerillas" will probably increase as a result. Greenpeace hoped to block the shipment of plutonium from France to Japan. The mission is likely to fail, but its purpose can't go unnoticed by real advocates of peace.

Green Holds Up Endorsement

Green and Edmisten have been feuding for years and Green supporters hold Edmisten responsible for the state fraud charges which were filed against Green. After being acquitted of those charges, Green had to play catch-up in the Democratic gubernatorial primary and he never caught up. He finished fifth in a 10-candidate field. Ed-misten led the field and went on to defeat former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox in the run-off. Green had endorsed Knox in that second round. Edmisten would like Green's endorsement for the November election fight he faces with Republican Jim Martin. Green has a great deal of conservative support which could, logically, choose to desert the Democratic Party and go to Martin. In a recent interview, Martin said he understood that Green couldn't endorse a Republican but he'd be delighted if Green would simply refrain from endorsing Edmisten.

Green and Edmisten met several weeks ago and rumors abounded that Green was about to endorse Edmisten. But Green said in an interview that there was no chance he was going to endorse Edmisten at that time. They only talked about the Democratic Party in general and he didn't promise any endorsement, Green said. "I don't know who was talking to the press, I wasn't," he said about the public speculation.

Asked if he was going to endorse Edmisten, Green gave this elusive answer: "I've said to people that I am a Democrat ... and that I plan to continue to be a Democrat. That's all I'm going to say. It's all I need to say."

Asked what that meant, he said, "I've got a big campaign debt which we're anxious to eradicate. We're having a fundraiser on the 22nd and I'm interested to see who is going to help."

The fundraiser is scheduled for the Hotel Europa in Chapel Hill.

How a few months change the way politicians talk about each other. Tom Gilmore is now heading the Democratic Party's Unity Campaign and he got the chance to introduce Edmisten at an event several weeks ago.

Gilmore, who finished fourth in the gubernatorial primary and then, like Green, endorsed Knox over Edmisten, said Edmisten "will make an outstanding governor, (he is) a man who really cares about people."

No wonder no one believes what politicians say.

Talk about the odd couple. Look at this pair of roommates.

Brent Hackney, press aide to Gov. Jim Hunt, recently started sharing a house with Bill Stuckey, former chairman of the Wake County Republican Party.

In 1980, Stuckey ran the day-to-day operations for Republican gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr., the man Hunt defeated.

Mixing Baseball And Friendship

George Will, the columnist, and I used to be friends. When it came to politics we didn't always agree, but it never interfered in our social relationship. What broke up the friendship was baseball — the Chicago Cubs to be exact. George is a Chicago Cubs fan, a member of that very, very small band of brothers and sisters who year after year took pride in rooting for a team that had been in the cellar so many times the Preservation Society on Monuments had declared it a National Fall Out Shelter.

George's charm was that he believed in the Cubs, who hadn't won a pennant since 1945. Every spring he would tell anyone who listened how the Cubs would rise from the ashes and regain their rightful place in baseball. To our credit, those of us who understood baseball never put George down. We always humored him and said, "Sure, George. This is the Cubs' year."

Whenever the Cubs won a game during the postwar years George considered it a religious experience. One time the team was only 63 games out of first place during the middle of the season, and George had it figured out that if every other team in the National league lost every one of its games the Cubs could win the pennant. As a believer in lost causes George was in a class by himself.

Whether Will's faith in the Chicago Cubs affected his judgment concerning the political subjects he wrote about was something we never questioned. We just assumed that Will was able to separate his emotional attachment to the Cubs from his trenchant commentary. Except for his quirk about baseball, George made as much sense as any conservative commentator in this town.

But something happened to Will this year. For reasons that no one can explain, the lowly Cubs started winning.

As they started climbing up in their division George became more morose and nervous. He was short-tempered and bitter. He refused to discuss baseball and pretended he wasn't interested in the pennant race.

When he wasn't around we discussed his sudden change in personality.

One of the pundits had a theory. "I don't think George is able to deal with success. He's so used to the Cubs losing that he can't live with the possibility that they may go all the way. After 41 years of being a loser he can't accept the fact that he might become a winner."

"It's even more than that," a Yankee supporter said. "Cub fans took pride in supporting a team that rarely won a game. They enjoyed playing the role of the underdog. If the Cubs go to the World Series there will be nothing unique about them. The fans also resent the fact that after so many years of being shunned and laughed at, everyone is now jumping on the Cub bandwagon. Their privacy has been invaded. They lived in a fantasy world for so long that it's no fun when their fantasy has come true."

I decided to have a talk with Will. "George," I said, "all your friends are talking about you. You're not the same person you were before the baseball season started. We believe the Cub winning streak has gotten to you."

"Maybe it has and maybe it hasn't."

"You can't be mad at everybody just because the Cubs aren't losing. You've got to come to terms with the fact that they are winners. It was Vince Lombardi who said 'Losing isn't everything — it's the only thing.'"

"Lombardi was never a Cub fan," Will replied.

"That's neither here nor there. You should be happy your team is on top. You stayed in the cellar with them all these years. You now have every right to enjoy their success. We don't begrudge them winning, why should you?"

"I don't think it's anybody's business."

"But your attitude is affecting your work."

"How so?"

"Just the other day you wrote that Reagan would probably win the election. No one in his right mind would make a prediction like that unless he had truly lost his marbles."

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

A Mississippi river boat captain once advertised for a pilot. A rather drab-looking individual showed up and the captain proceeded to subject him to severe questioning.

"I suppose," said the captain, "that you know where all the snags in the river are."

"Not at all," replied the applicant, "but I know where the channel is and where the snags are not, and that is where I calculate to do my sailing."

Too much we think of snags, hidden rocks, a hundred or more things which could destroy our happiness and wreck our health or our future. Too little do we think of the broad channels which God provides for man to sail in. In this channel we have depth.

If we keep to the channel we have a Pilot who is none other than the God who made the channel. And this Pilot can guide us on a course toward triumph.

GOP Senatorial Nominee Speaks At Coffee Session

Maynard Waters, Republican nominee for the 9th District seat in the N.C. Senate, says he "favors highway improvement combined with attracting acceptable industry to this part of the state."

"Our area comprises one-third of the land mass and one-fourth of the population of the state," Waters commented at a coffee held for him at Courtney Square apartments Thursday. "but eastern North Carolina does not receive one-fourth of the state's highway taxes for use in this area."

On education, Waters stressed his conviction about "going back to basics. The dignity and high calling of the teacher must be restored. I believe a merit system should be established to reward excellence in the teaching profession."

Waters said "eastern North Carolina has been overlooked because an overwhelming Democratic constituency has caused this part of the state to be taken for granted." He said he would work to change that attitude.

Calling himself a pro-life person, Waters said that "North Carolina is the only Southern state that still funds abortions. I feel that state funding of abortions should be stopped."

Waters, born on a farm near Washington, N.C., is still a resident of Beaufort County, where he is an inter-denominational minister and a farmer.

He is a graduate of Georgia State University and Lincoln Christian Seminary.

Waters and his wife, the former Kay Shelton of Eden, have four children and four grandchildren.

Aid Possible For Vets' Children

Several classes of scholarships are available to children of certain veterans, according to W.L. Tucker, Veterans Administration service officer in Greenville.

The three principal categories of eligibility and general information on these are:

•Class I and IV - Children of certain veterans who died or are 100 percent disabled as a result of service in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, or children of peacetime veterans whose death or total disability is service connected due to particular circumstances. With certain exceptions, the veteran's child must have been born in North Carolina and have been a continuous resident of the state.

•Class II - Children as described above whose parent was a war veteran who has or at the time of death had a 30 percent or more but less than 100 percent service-connected disability or a statutory award for arrested tuberculosis. disability pension benefits.

Scholarships may be used at schools located in North Carolina which are state-owned institutions of higher education, community colleges and technical institutes, or privately owned non-profit colleges and universities.

The scholarships, with one exception, provide free tuition, certain prescribed fees, and a room and board allowance in state-owned institutions or a $1,200 per academic year allowance in private institutions. The exception is that for awards provided under the provisions of less than 100 percent service-connected disability, it provides only free tuition and some fees in state-owned institutions and $444 per academic year in private institutions.

All scholarship awards are for a time limit of four academic years. Unlimited numbers of awards are made under Classes I and IV.

Scholarship awards for Classes II and III are limited to 100 awards each year in each of the two classes.

Cash Taken From Car

Greenville police are investigating the theft of $10,000 in cash from a car here Thursday.

Officer P.W. Worthington said Ford McGowan, 63, of 309 Granville Drive, reported the theft about 6:10 p.m.

Worthington quoted McGowan as saying he withdrew the cash - in $100 bills - from a savings institution, then drove to the post office on Second Street, where he left the white envelope containing the money on the front seat of his car.

After returning to his car and placing his mail on top of the cash, Worthington said, McGowan reported that a man approached his vehicle, asking for directions. Following some discussion, Worthington said McGowan drove the man to a parking lot at 622 S. Pitt St., where a second man got into the car and ordered McGowan to drive away.

Worthington said McGowan drove the two to the intersection of Pamlico Avenue and Spruce Street, where the two passengers got out and walked away.

Worthington said McGowan then checked for the envelope containing the cash and found that it and the money were missing.

Finance Bill Hits Snag Over Water Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emergency legislation to keep the federal government solvent after the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1 is bogged down by attempts to add money for dozens of politically popular water projects.

Administration officials have indicated that President Reagan will veto the measure if it includes the water projects and other items.

But the veto threat did not stop the House from voting 225-168 Thursday to reject a parliamentary move that would have cleared the way for removing nearly $140 million for the water projects.

During debate on the issue, Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., the senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee, argued for the motion surging passage adoption of the motion, warned that in its current form the so-called continuing resolution is "clearly veto bait."

But fellow Republican Rep. James H. Quillen of Tennessee dismissed the move to delete the public works projects saying, "A turkey is a turkey is a turkey."

"If you don't pass this turkey, you're going to have the biggest pig pen that you've ever seen in your life," Conte said. "You're seeing it here today. They're all down here seeking pork barrel projects and saying 'slurp, slurp slurp ... I've got to have my project.'"

Conte, his voice rising steadily to a yell, said that with expected Senate additions to the measure, "My God, it's going to make the Chicago stockyards look anemic by contrast."

The House was not in session today, but private negotiations were proceeding over how to handle the measure necessary to finance government agencies and programs for which regular annual appropriations bills have not been approved.

Only four of the 13 necessary annual money bills for the new fiscal year have been signed into law.

Since this is "must" legislation and Congress is moving toward adjournment for the year by Oct. 5, legislators have jumped on it as an attractive vehicle for pet projects that would be unlikely to be passed on their own.

Democrats and Republicans pleaded with members of their respective parties on Thursday to resist the urge to keep the extraneous items in the legislation.

But in a demonstration of the power of public works projects in an election year, 171 Democrats and 54 Republicans joined to defeat the move. There were 71 Democrats and 97 Republicans opposing it.

Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, whose panel included the water projects in the measure, protested including $1.8 billion in foreign aid money in the stopgap bill without retaining the money for the domestic public works projects.

Rep. David E. Bonior, D-Mich., said White House officials were "hoping and praying with all their might" that Congress would send the president a measure he could veto to score political points by portraying the Democrat-controlled House as irresponsible. "I beg you to consider the long-term interests of our party," he said.

The Reagan administration has served notice through a letter from the Office of Management and Budget that inclusion of the water projects and too little for the Pentagon was "seriously objectionable" and "unacceptable in its present form."

In general, the stopgap bill would provide money for affected departments and agencies at current levels or amounts already approved by the House or its Appropriations Committee.

The water projects previously have been approved by the full House, but not acted on by the Senate. Including them in the stopgap measure would make them part of the negotiations that would occur when negotiators from the House and Senate meet to work out a compromise version of the stopgap measure that both chambers pass separately.

Florida Growers Reeling As Citrus Disease Spreads

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — While federal officials were deciding how much of Florida's $1.2 billion citrus industry will be sacrificed to eradicate an incurable disease, an expert said farmers may take five years to recover.

"We've got a murderer loose, and every citrus man should be in the posse," said Wilson McGee, recently retired official of the United Growers and Shippers Association.

For many growers, their livelihoods were at stake, threatened by the highly contagious, incurable canker disease which erupted in nurseries that serve the industry.

"I hope I'm not being overly pessimistic, but it looks to me like a five-year fight, conservatively, because of all the seedlings, budwood and stock that was moved out of those (infected) nurseries," McGee said.

The only way to eradicate the bacterial spore, of unknown origin, is to burn the infected trees and let the ground lie fallow for a couple of years.

The canker, which rots the fruit and eventually kills the tree, has been found in five nurseries that supply small trees to growers. No new discoveries were made on Thursday.

No canker has been found in commercial groves, but many growers said it could show up there soon. About 54 nurseries were quarantined because they received plants from the 60-acre Ward's Nursery in Polk County, where canker was first detected.

At least 2 million trees have been ordered destroyed so far, Linda Perry of the state Division of Plant Industry said.

"We're not going to get rid of it easily, in my opinion. It's a ticking time bomb all over the place," McGee said. The disease last hit Florida 50 years ago, when 3 million trees were destroyed.

The 1983 killer frosts contributed to the spread of citrus canker, said Earl Wells, spokesman for the Lakeland-based Florida Citrus Mutual, the state's largest growers' association.

Growers had ordered a record 10 million seedlings from nurseries this year, in part to replace trees lost in the freeze, which affected 250,000 acres of groves — about one-third of the total, he said.

G. Franklin Ward, owner of Ward's Nursery, said he sold potentially infected seedlings to an estimated 150 growers all over the state since Jan. 1. More than 1 million trees were being burned at Ward's, for an estimated loss of $1.5 million.

Florida growers earn almost $1.2 billion a year, and total annual sales of all citrus products are estimated at $2.5 billion. The industry is the state's second largest, next to tourism.

Worker crews totaling almost 200 workers scoured nurseries and groves throughout the 760,000-acre citrus belt, concentrating on commercial holdings known or suspected to have received plants from tainted nurseries.

At the affected nurseries, state Agriculture Department workers and volunteer prison convicts were bulldozing and burning an estimated 2 million trees.

Inspectors cleared eight packinghouses for handling and shipping fresh fruit as soon as harvesting season begins in earnest next month.

Two Killed

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Two people were killed and 16 injured by an earthquake that shook three provinces in eastern Turkey, the state-run Turkish television reported.

It said the quake had its epicenter 400 miles east of Turkey in northern Iran. U.S. Geological Survey earthquake monitors in Golden, Colo., said the tremor was recorded at a magnitude of 5.4 on the Richter scale and was centered northeast of Erzurum, the capital of Erzurum province.

British Oil Companies Predict North Sea Boom

LONDON (AP) — British oil companies are predicting a new production boom in the North Sea that will keep the country self-sufficient in oil and natural gas into the 21st century by exploiting 80 new oil fields.

The 41-member United Kingdom Offshore Operators Association said in a report published Thursday that tapping the undeveloped fields would head off a decline in North Sea production expected in 1986.

The report, the latest in a string of optimistic forecasts by leading oil industry figures, boosted hopes of prolonging the income from North Sea drilling that underpins Britain's economic recovery.

George Band, the association's director-general, said the study was "a signpost to a very bright future."

"The oil industry is firmly committed to the second phase of development with the aim of carrying those benefits as far forward into the 21st century as possible," he said.

Britain, self-sufficient in oil since 1981 and now a major oil exporter, currently is producing a record 2.6 million barrels of oil a day, with 4 billion cubic feet of gas daily.

The study pinpointed 96 undeveloped discoveries containing an estimated 4.1 billion barrels of oil and 27.4 trillion cubic feet of gas.

By exploiting these known reserves, some bypassed earlier as uneconomical, the report said Britain's oil output by the end of the century could still be as much as 1.4 million barrels a day, with gas production of 5.3 billion cubic feet.

The survey came amid rising hopes that big new fields will be discovered in the deeper waters north and west of Scotland's oil-rich Shetland Islands.

Major companies led by Continental Oil Co., Shell-Esso and British Petroleum are developing new technology to move into the so-called "frontier zones."

They believe that up to 7 billion barrels of oil, about half as much as has already been discovered in the North Sea, is lying in the frontier areas, including the Eastern Atlantic.

The waters there are more than 2,000 feet deep, posing major technical problems. The deepest operating zone in the North Sea is 600 feet.

The government has made clear it will give preferential treatment in next year's allocation of new North Sea blocks with proven oil deposits to companies prepared to spearhead the new phase.

Conoco is scheduled to start drilling soon in 2,200 feet of water 380 miles northeast of the Shetlands, the deepest well in Britain's oil bonanza.

Exploration Director George Watkins said seismic surveys indicated it could contain 1 billion recoverable barrels of oil, comparable to big North Sea fields.

The government earns more than $9.84 billion a year in revenue from North Sea oil production.

Tax incentives by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government earlier this year have triggered a surge of drilling. Forty-two rigs are operating in the British sector of the North Sea compared to 33 this time last year.

The Operators' Association report noted: "A critical stage has been reached in the development of Britain's oil and gas resources. Production is near its peak and is expected to decline in the mid-1980s."

"That trend can only be mitigated by developing a substantial number of existing discoveries and ensuring a steady flow of new finds through a continuous exploration program."

Oilmen have long sought tax concessions to boost output from existing fields by using costly methods such as pumping steam or chemicals into the reservoirs to flush out deposits not recoverable by conventional drilling.

Bunker Critical

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — Ellsworth Bunker, who was the U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam in the latter stages of the Vietnam War, was in critical condition today at a hospital where he was admitted with shingles, his daughter-in-law and a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 90-year-old former diplomat, whose career spanned 35 years and seven presidencies, was admitted to Brattleboro Memorial Hospital Sept. 13, said hospital spokesman Paul Stillman.

He was in critical but stable condition today, said night supervisor Martha Roberts.

Bunker "went in with shingles and there were some complications," said Bunker's daughter-in-law, Margery Bunker. "When you get ill and you are his age, you run into problems."

Bunker's health was "very good" before he was admitted to the hospital, she said. "He was fine, doing all kinds of things."

She said the family would not have information on Bunker's health "until the tests are finished and they give us the results."

Reagan Returns To White House Activity Today

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

President Reagan is off the campaign trail after denouncing the Democrats for taxes "from here to eternity," while challenger Walter F. Mondale renews his demand for a White House plan to cut the federal deficit.

"Mr. Reagan, where's the plan," was the line the Democratic presidential nominee was repeating Thursday as he criticized the president on federal budget deficits, jobs, education, civil rights and arms control.

But the rhetoric on both sides was tempered by the tragedy in Beirut, where a terrorist's suicide truck-bomb again claimed American lives Thursday. Twenty-three people died in the explosion at the U.S. Embassy annex, two of them U.S. servicemen.

Vice President George Bush, campaigning in Burlington, Vt., even offered praise for Mondale, saying the Democratic nominee was "acting in a most statesmanlike way in supporting the president of the United States" in his reaction to the attack.

Mondale voiced "full support for appropriate countermeasures" that Reagan might take in response to the bombing and sidestepped questions about whether Reagan's policies might be a factor in the terrorist attack. "I would not give these terrorists any excuse for what they've done."

Reagan was following a normal White House schedule today with no political events planned.

Mondale was holding a strategy session with Hispanic leaders in Washington today before heading on to Montgomery, Ala., for his weekly foray into the South.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was in Southern California before heading home to New York. Bush was winding up a New England swing with appearances in Bangor and Portland, Maine.

Reagan kept to his schedule Thursday, despite the bombing. He campaigned in Iowa, where he visited a farm and a church picnic, and toured a factory and campaigned with former President Gerald R. Ford at a rally in Ford's hometown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Although Mondale refused to link Reagan's policies with the bombings in Beirut, it was only Monday that Mondale had linked Reagan to the October 1983 bombing of the U.S. Marine compound in Beirut where 241 U.S. servicemen died. He said then that the administration had so bungled its Middle East policy that "in that swamp of policy confusion, we lost nearly 300 brave Americans who were placed in a vulnerable position over the objections of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

At his stop in Michigan, Reagan avoided direct mention of Mondale but said of his Democratic opponents, "Their legacy to our children would be built-in tax increases that could only be described in one way: from here to eternity."

He also used a football analogy as he invoked his familiar rosy imagery of America under the Reagan administration: "Isn't it great to see America beginning to score touchdowns again?"

Campaigning with the president he unsuccessfully challenged for the GOP nomination eight years ago, Reagan sought to take advantage of Ford's home-state popularity. Ford "brought back our economy, began rebuilding our defenses," Reagan said of his old Republican rival.

He drew a crowd of about 10,000 earlier in Iowa, where his way was paved by an announcement Tuesday of additional government guaranteed farm loans and deterrent of some existing farm loans. Reagan said that Mondale's farm and economic proposals "would reap a harvest of hardships" for farmers.

Mondale spoke to a union audience in Seattle, where he invoked the variation on the "Where's the beef" question Mondale used so successfully against Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado in the Democratic presidential primaries.

Then it was to suggest Hart's "new ideas" lacked substance, this time, it was to demand a response to Mondale's own proposal to cut the federal deficit by two-thirds through a tax increase and spending cuts.

"Today I ask Mr. Reagan, where's the plan? Where's your plan? Let's hear it," he said.

Back in Washington for an annual Hispanic Caucus dinner, Mondale charged that the Reagan administration tries to "make Hispanic Americans forget four years of neglect and keep them happy with a few fiestas."

Both Bush, in Vermont, and Ms. Ferraro, in Texas, faced heckling Thursday. Bush chided his hecklers, saying "they can't do it quite as well as they used to in the Vietnam days."

Ms. Ferraro was unable to complete a sentence about Reagan at one point and shot back at her hecklers. "I want to tell you — if I had a record like Ronald Reagan's I wouldn't want anybody to talk about it either."

The Democrats have been particularly clobbered by hecklers and protesters lately, but Reagan dismissed suggestions that his people were organizing them.

"Good Lord no," Reagan said. "I wish people wouldn't do it. But I suppose if the speaker has a right to be heard, they've got a right to be heard."

Port Budget

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Ports Authority Board of Directors has approved a record budget of $18.5 million that projects a $3.8 million profit at the state's two major ports.

The budget is an "excellent planning document," said Board Chairman Thomas F. Taft of Greenville. Taft said in a news release that recent market reports indicate the $18.5 million revenue goal will be met.

Revenues at the port in Wilmington are projected to hit $13.4 million, with a profit of $2.2 million, while record revenues of $3.2 million are expected at the port in Morehead City, with a projected profit of $126,151, according to the budget.

EMBASSY BOMBED — A Lebanese army soldier blocks the way to the American embassy annex in Christian East Beirut on Thursday after a car bomb killed 23 people and injured more than 60 others. (AP Laserphoto)

Embassy Toll Is Revised As Rescuers End Search

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rescue workers today ended their search for bodies in the wreckage of the U.S. Embassy annex, and authorities said the death toll from the suicide car-bomb attack was sharply lower than first reported.

Lebanese military investigator Elias Mousa said the casualty toll, based on hospital and coroners' reports, was 12 dead and 72 wounded, while one U.S. diplomat said he believed only eight people were killed and 36 wounded. Earlier police reports had said 23 people were killed and 60 hurt when a van filled with explosives blew up Thursday just outside the annex.

U.S. Embassy Deputy Chief of Mission Stephen R. Lyne told reporters at the scene today that the search for victims was over.

"We have accounted for all Americans and foreign service nationals. All we are doing now is removing classified material for the sake of security," Lyne said.

Lyne put the final toll of U.S. casualties at two killed and 16 wounded seriously enough to be hospitalized. A U.S. source close to the search said earlier that 21 Americans were injured.

Another U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said rescue workers had "found all the bodies we will find," but "there are people we're not going to find any part of."

It was impossible to determine how many Lebanese visitors or visa applicants were at the annex when the van exploded, the source said.

The blast injured U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew and British Ambassador David Miers, neither seriously, the source said.

Bartholomew left the Abu Jawdeh Hospital in a wheelchair today, with stitches across his upper lip, a small bandage on the back of his head and a cast on his arm. He said his arm was not broken. Surrounded by bodyguards, he was driven to his residence east of Beirut.

Speaking to the American NBC television network, Bartholomew said the bomber zigzagged through anti-vehicle concrete barricades after shooting a Lebanese guard. The bomber was fired at and slumped over the wheel before the bomb went off, Bartholomew said.

British guards who were waiting for Miers outside the annex when the explosion occurred said they also fired at the attacker and believe they hit him.

One British guard, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he fired five shots and saw the driver slump to the right, apparently preventing the car from reaching an underground parking entrance. If he had gotten under the building, the damage would have been much worse, Bartholomew said.

"God knows, this was bad enough, but it could have been a hell of a lot worse," he said.

In Washington, the Pentagon identified the American dead as Army Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth V. Welch, 33, whose mother lives in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Michael Ray Wagner, 30, of Zebulon, N.C. Both were described as embassy staff members.

The explosion was the third almost identical suicide bombing against U.S. targets in Lebanon in the past 17 months.

The twin truck bombings of U.S. Marine and French paratroop command posts in Beirut killed 299 people last October, and 63 people, including 17 Americans, perished in the April 1983 bombing of the U.S. Embassy in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital. All three bombings were claimed by Arabic-speaking anonymous telephone callers on behalf of the shadowy terrorist group Islamic Holy War.

U.S. State Department spokesman John Hughes said there were two terrorists and that they drove 500 feet under fire from guards. But the American source in Beirut said witnesses at the annex saw only one man in the vehicle.

Lebanese guards, Marines and U.S. Army guards were at the annex entrance today. Lebanese employees and visa applicants who showed up this morning were told to go home.

A State Department official in Washington said the annex was "no longer useable" and that embassy officers were being moved to another suburban location east of Beirut.

Workers and embassy officials were seen removing boxes and involved in what appeared to be investigative work.

Security was also tight at the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut. Two Lebanese army armored personnel carriers blocked off the area off Ein Mreisseh seafont cornice. Sand-bagged posts atop the building and a neighboring structure were manned by guards with M-16 rifles.

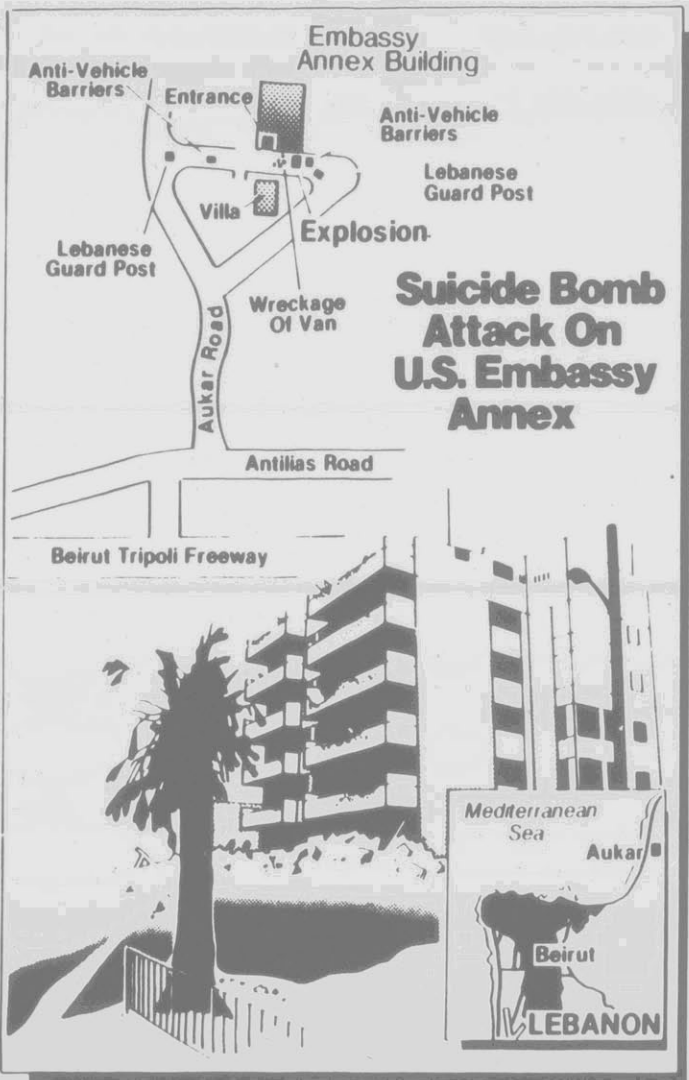

Thursday's bombing was the first against Western embassy facilities in Christian areas of Lebanon, which have been considered safer than mostly Moslem west Beirut, where all previous embassy bombings were staged.

President Reagan was dispatching assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy to Beirut to conduct an on-site investigation.

Although Reagan administration officials defended security measures at the annex against criticism that they were inadequate, the measures are "one of things we will be looking at," Hughes said in Washington.

Most of the American staff had just moved to the annex in July because the old British compound to which it had transferred after the embassy was destroyed in 1983 was considered too vulnerable to terrorist attack after the Marine peacekeeping contingent was withdrawn.

The main road leading to the annex building — in the Christian suburb of Aukar — is partially blocked with large concrete barriers and anti-tank traps that force entering vehicles to move in a zig-zag pattern.

Reagan Retreats On MX Missile, Defense Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has beat another multibillion dollar retreat from his Pentagon spending demands, agreeing to put the centerpiece of his defense buildup, the MX nuclear missile, on hold for further — and possibly ruinous — political tests next year.

With Reagan's consent, Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee struck a comprehensive compromise with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., late Thursday over a Pentagon budget battle that had the Congress in knots.

The major concessions came from Reagan's corner. They were: —That both the House and the Senate each will have, in effect, two chances to singlehandedly kill the 10-warhead MX in votes next April. O'Neill said that means the MX "will never be deployed... the defeat of the MX is well at hand."

—That total defense spending will not exceed $292.9 billion, roughly the figure approved months ago by the Democratic-controlled House, in fiscal 1985. That would mean a real, or inflation-adjusted, increase of about 5 percent over the current year, and less if the MX doesn't survive the four "votes of approval."

Reagan originally sought $313 billion, or an increase of 13 percent, for defense. He later backed off to $299 billion, the figure approved in June by the Senate, and until Thursday had refused to budge further.

But the president's greatest retreat was on the MX, where he agreed to a procedural scenario crafted by House and Senate opponents of the missile. It works like this:

Instead of the 40 missiles originally sought by Reagan or the 21 approved by the Senate, the authorization and spending bills which emerge in the coming days will earmark $1.5 billion for production of just 15 missiles — but only if each chamber gives another go-ahead on each of those legislative fronts next April.

In short, Reagan must win four votes next April. MX opponents need win only one to kill the weapon.

The compromise buys time for both sides. House Democrats said they had the votes to kill the MX this year when the actual spending bill came up; Reagan is counting on an election victory that will give him more support on the MX in the House next year, though Democrats are virtually certain to retain their majority.

Italians Resume Hunt For Mines

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Three Italian mine-hunting vessels headed back to the Gulf of Suez today to resume the search for explosives in the northern reaches of the Red Sea after a Saudi passenger ship became the first boat jolted by a blast since Aug. 15.

An Italian Embassy spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the Castagno Frassino, the Loto and the Cavezalle would return from a search operation in the Suez Canal because of the reported explosion Thursday that damaged the Belkis I, about 20 miles south of the canal.

The Belkis was hit as it steamed toward the Saudi port of Jidda to pick up Egyptian Moslems who had completed a pilgrimage to the Islamic holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

The Italian vessels had been searching the Great Bitter Lake in the southern portion of the strategic canal since Tuesday after completing a sweep of parts of the Gulf of Suez as part of a multinational hunt for explosives which have damaged 19 ships since July 9.

Canal sources said the three Italian vessels were expected to arrive at the port of Suez at the southern end of the canal around midday.

U.S. mine-hunting units ended their search of Egyptian waters last week after a month-long operation in the oil-rich central sector of the Suez Gulf failed to turn up any mines.

An Egyptian newspaper, Al-Ahram, said the American warship Lasalle was still searching waters off the Saudi Arabian coast and would probably remain there through the end of the month.

Egyptian sources said there were no injuries to the 55-man crew of the Belkis, which was not carrying passengers, but the vessel was damaged. The 2,110-ton vessel, sailed back to Suez under its own power late Thursday, shipping sources said.

The explosion came as British and Egyptian demolition teams continued inspecting a suspicious, "mine-like device" found last week in the northern sector of the gulf near where the Belkis was struck.

Egypt's defense minister, Field Marshal Abdel-Halim Abu-Ghazala said the device is of a type "unknown to our technology and even Western technology," and British Embassy sources said it appeared the mine had not been in the water long.

Egyptian officials suspect Libya and possibly Iran planted the mines to disrupt shipping in the Suez Canal, but they admit they cannot prove the charge.

Libya and Iran have denied responsibility.

The French Defense Ministry said today that French minesweepers in the Suez Canal and Red Sea will continue their operations for a few more days at Egypt's request. Defense Minister Charles Hernu told reporters Thursday that France was ending its month-long search operation after finding no mines linked to the recent string of explosions.

French units found two devices in waters in the southern end of the Gulf of Suez but determined they were from previous wars and not linked to the recent explosions.

Resister Wins Two-Year Battle Over Registration

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Some law school students dream of winning their first case after graduation, but draft registration resister Gillam Kerley stood alone in court and beat the U.S. government in his two-year case without any legal training.

Kerley, 23, of Madison, won his battle against the government Sept. 17 in U.S. District Court in Madison after being indicted in 1982 for failing to register for the draft under the U.S. Selective Service Act. His arguments won a dismissal of the indictment, although the government has said it will appeal.

Then 19, Kerley began his David-vs.-Goliath battle against the government by deciding to represent himself to "speak with the jury person-to-person...so that they could see I was a real human being."

"Once the prospect of being prosecuted and possibly going to jail hit me, I knew I wanted to speak for myself," Kerley said. "I could also concentrate solely on my case. No attorney would have time to do the research for me."

If he lost, Kerley stood to serve up to five years in prison or pay a $10,000 fine.

Several attorneys he consulted wanted to be involved in the case, but Kerley refused their help from the Wisconsin chapter of the Libertarians Union, he was told by his attorney would have to be in control and I would have to say what I wanted to say and say nothing."

Kerley is the only person ever taken to court by the government for failing to register for the draft who has waged a successful battle by himself.

He said he was "very nervous" at the first arraignment in 1982, because he did not know if the magistrate would let him speak. He pleaded "not guilty" and was found guilty.

"I had rehearsed a 15-minute statement to explain my reasons for not registering," Kerley said.

U.S. Magistrate William J. Lett let him to speak, but he was

State Department Ship Was In Soviet Waters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American supply vessel Frieda K was in Soviet waters when it was taken into custody by the Soviets nine days ago but it is still not clear whether Moscow's seizure of the vessel was legal, the State Department says.

The official assessment Thursday of the Frieda K's location contrasted with that of the vessel's skipper, Tabb Thoms, who said he is not convinced he crossed into Soviet waters.

"It's such a fine line, and we were so close to that fine line, I find it hard to answer that question," Thoms told reporters Wednesday night after arriving with his four partners in the village of Gambell on the Alaskan island of St. Lawrence.

At another point, Thoms said that if he guided the vessel across the line, he did not do so intentionally.

State Department press officer Kathleen Lang said the detention of the Frieda K had the potential of becoming a serious incident but "it is now behind us."

Nonetheless, she said, the United States is "very concerned about the circumstances surrounding the seizure of the Frieda K. We are urgently attempting to secure a safe return of the vessel to American waters," she said.

Chaplains Retain For Sessions Of

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has started sessions with a prayer since the late 1700s and there is no reason now to change to a secular statement, House and Senate chaplains say.

The chaplains reaffirmed Thursday their opposition to a demand by a Buffalo, N.Y., philosophy professor that he or another secular humanist be allowed instead to make an opening statement.

"The rules of the House say the chaplain is to give a prayer," said the Rev. James Ford, House chaplain. "He did not want to give a prayer. He wanted to make a statement. The only people who can speak on the House floor are elected representatives."

The Rev. Richard Halverson, Senate chaplain, also declined to let Kurtz take his place for a day because Kurtz acknowledged that what he would say "would not be a prayer."

Kurtz, a philosophy professor at the state University of Buffalo and editor of the quarterly magazine "Free Inquiry," made his requests in letters to the chaplains last spring. On Tuesday, he filed suit in U.S. District Court.

Kurtz charged that the prayers infringe on the constitutional separation of church and state because non-theists are not allowed to similarly address Congress. He asked that he and others who question the existence of God be allowed to address Congress.

"They've given me the address," Congress spokesman said in a telephone interview.

"There are tens of millions of Americans who do not believe in our contentions and their view ought to be heard."

The tradition of opening sessions with prayer dates to the beginning of the House and Senate.

them. He asked for transcripts and documents of meetings of the Presidential Military Manpower Task Force to prove his contention.

Kerley also contended that the Selective Service System had violated its public notice rule by implementing draft registration after only 32 days of notice, rather than 60 days.

U.S. District Judge James Doyle Sr. ruled against dismissal on the public notice motion, but agreed Kerley had a right to the documents. When U.S. Attorney John Byrnes of Madison refused to turn them over, Doyle dismissed the case.

Although he is "delighted," Kerley fears being brought into court again.

Byrnes has said the case will be appealed.

Kerley, who grew up in Rock Hill, S.C., said that his parents supported him during the trial and that his anti-military views probably were nurtured by their opposition to the Vietnam War. They were upset, however, at the possibility he might go to jail.

Researcher Says Zinc Diet May Cause Harm To Body

CHICAGO (AP) — People who take moderately large amounts of zinc as a "health food" supplement may be weakening their ability to fight disease, adversely affecting their cholesterol levels and inviting other problems, a researcher says in a study published today.

Suggestions that "if small amounts (of zinc) are good, large amounts would be better" are untrue for most people, said the researcher, Dr. Ranjit Kumar Chandra of Memorial University of Newfoundland at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

In a study published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, Chandra reported on 11 healthy men who took zinc for six weeks in amounts 10 times to 20 times greater than the generally recommended adult daily intake of 15 milligrams per day.

None of the subjects experienced any side effects, but tests showed that their immune systems became weaker and slower while they were taking the large supplements of the mineral, he reported.

Also, high zinc intake was accompanied by increased blood levels of low-density lipoprotein cholesterol, or LDL cholesterol, and by lowered levels of high-density lipoprotein cholesterol, also called HDL cholesterol, he said.

Increased LDL cholesterol and lowered HDL cholesterol have been associated with increased risk of heart attack. Also, the increased LDL cholesterol levels of the men in the study may have contributed to their weakened immune responses, Chandra said.

Six weeks after discontinuing zinc supplements, the men's immune responses and blood cholesterol levels returned almost to normal, Chandra said.

Zinc is essential to more than 100 enzymes that play important roles in body processes, Chandra said. A deficiency of the mineral can cause a variety of problems, including a shrinking of the thymus, a gland near the heart that produces hormones. And zinc deficiency can compromise certain immune functions, he said.

"These observations have led to the advocacy of zinc supplements for the prevention and management of a variety of disorders, including growth failure, cancer, infections, skin disease and wound healing," Chandra said.

But "most people get it (enough zinc) from a balanced diet. ... Therefore, there is really not much evidence that they need a supplement," Chandra said in a telephone interview Thursday.

If you don't face your decision together... one of you will face it alone.

You do have a choice now.

Study Shows Pap Smears Effective

CHICAGO (AP) — A study published today showing that Pap smears contributed to drops of nearly 70 percent in the rate of cervical cancer has finally "laid to rest" questions about the efficacy of the tests, a researcher says.

The Swedish study, which followed 207,455 women for 10 years, found that regular Pap smears reduced the incidence of the cancer by nearly 70 percent among women who had at least one test in that period.

"I think this study laid to rest, for once and all, the age-old question, 'Are Pap smears effective in reducing cancer of cervix?'" said Dr. Cecil Fox, who worked on the research. "Yes, they are."

Fox, a senior scientist at the National Cancer Institute, said Pap smears cannot eliminate cervical cancer but can reduce the number of cases — perhaps by as much as 10 times.

In the study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, the incidence of cervical cancer was two times to four times as high among women who had no Pap smears as among those who had the tests.

Pap smears, named for developer George Papanicolaou, help reduce the rate of the disease because they can detect cell abnormalities that are often precursors of cancer, Fox said. He said if the abnormalities were detected early, removing them was simple.

"We believe we can reduce a lot of human suffering by (women) getting Pap smears on a regular basis," Fox said.

A Pap smear is done by taking a scraping of the mouth of the uterus, then smearing it on a slide, staining it and then examining it under a microscope. The procedure is considered harmless.

Men React Differently To Hormones

WASHINGTON (AP) — The discovery that homosexual and heterosexual men react differently to sex hormones could mark the first known biological difference between the two groups, according to a scientific report published today.

The New York study said some homosexual men have different reactions to hormonal stimulation than heterosexuals, but cautioned that the findings may not apply to all homosexual males since only a highly select group was tested.

The researchers reported in the journal Science that when they measured hormone level changes stimulated by other hormones, the responses of homosexual men differed from those in heterosexual men and women.

Scientists looking into the causes of homosexuality are attempting to find out if this sexual preference is based upon psychological or physical factors, or both.

In the past, a number of scientists have been unable to find a relationship between levels of so-called sex hormones in the body and homosexuality. The regular hormone levels of homosexuals and heterosexuals measure about the same.

Dr. Brian A. Gladue, who recently moved to North Dakota State University, said the newest study examined the responses of these levels to outside hormonal stimulation and found statistically significant differences between the groups of men.

"This is the first study in this country clearly suggesting and presenting evidence of a biological difference between homosexuals and heterosexuals as a group," Gladue said in a telephone interview.

The research, done at the State University of New York at Stony Brook by Gladue and Drs. Richard Green and Ronald E. Hellman, shows a definite hormonal response variation in 9 out of 14 men selected for long-time homosexuality.

Gladue said the findings may not apply to all homosexuals because everyone in the trial did not show the same response, and because bisexuals and less-committed homosexuals were not tested.

Graham Ending His Soviet Tour

MOSCOW (AP) — American evangelist Billy Graham delivered the final sermon of his 12-day Soviet tour today, joining hundreds of Russian Orthodox faithful and the patriarch of Russia in a prayer for peace at Moscow's glittering main cathedral.

"If the peoples of the world and the nations of the world could have a new feeling in their hearts, we would never have war," said Graham as he stood before a 30-foot-high, gold-painted wall of icons.

Graham spoke at a plain wooden lectern, wearing black robes and preaching in his Southern Baptist gospel style. He was flanked by Pimen, patriarch of Moscow and Russia, who presented Graham with a wooden icon depicting Jesus Christ.

Graham, who has visited Leningrad, the Estonian capital of Tallinn and the city of Novosibirsk in Siberia, was to hold a news conference today before leaving the Soviet Union.

Pimen spoke for 10 minutes before Graham began his sermon at the cathedral. The white-bearded patriarch called for "efforts to promote more understanding and friendship between nations."

"The idea of military superiority is abhorrent to the people of our motherland," he said. "Our people long for peace. It is this longing which determines the constant peaceful course of the Soviet Union, a course that is difficult to maintain in the tense international situation."

Hundreds of believers, most elderly women, pressed toward the altar and stood in rapt attention as Graham spoke through an interpreter who mimicked his gestures and tone.

His voice ringing through the vaulted chamber, Graham's style was a startling contrast to the somber liturgy that had started three hours before he began speaking.

Reactions to the Baptist preacher's fiery oratory varied widely,

VIRTUOUS WOMAN

THROUGHOUT THE AGES A VIRTUOUS WOMAN HAD BEEN REVERED AND ESTEEMED BY ALL NATIONS AND THE BIBLICAL PEOPLE TENDED TO PUT HER IN A POSITION OF HIGH HONOR. ALL ONE HAS TO DO IS TURN TO THE BOOK OF PROVERBS TO FIND THE POETIC DISSERTATION ON THE QUALITIES OF A VIRTUOUS WOMAN. "OPEN THY MOUTH, JUDGE RIGHTEOUSLY..." SAYS THE BOOK OF PROVERBS. "WHO CAN FIND A VIRTUOUS WOMAN? FOR HER PRICE IS FAR ABOVE RUBIES." ACCORDING TO THE SAME CHAPTER OF PROVERBS, "THE HEART OF HER HUSBAND DOTHS SAFELY TRUST IN HER..." AND ACCORDING TO THIS VENERABLE BOOK, "SHE WILL DO HIM GOOD AND NOT EVIL ALL THE DAYS OF HER LIFE." THE BIBLE'S PORTRAYAL OF ITS VIRTUOUS WOMAN GOES ON, "SHE STRETCHETH OUT HER HAND TO THE POOR, YEA, SHE REACHETH FORTH HER HANDS TO THE NEEDY, SHE OPENETH HER MOUTH WITH WISDOM, AND IN HER TONGUE IS THE LAW OF KINDNESS." THIS IS BUT A SMALL SEGMENT OF CHAPTER THIRTY ONE OF THE BOOK OF PROVERBS BUT ONE CAN SEE THAT THE BIBLICAL OPINION IS A STRONG ONE IN PRAISE OF A MORALLY CORRECT AND UPRIGHT WOMAN, AND TO GIVE THE BOOK OF PROVERBS THE LAST SAY, "GIVE HER THE FRUIT OF HER HANDS, AND LET HER OWN WORKS PRAISE HER IN THE GATES!"

John Paul Asks Canadians To Become Justice-Hungry

OTTAWA (AP) - With a final appeal to Canadians to be "peacemakers hungering for justice," Pope John Paul II completed his coast-to-coast pilgrimage and today returned home.

In the last sermon of his 12-day, 8,500-mile journey in Canada, the pope Thursday urged 250,000 people in a windswept riverside park to "seek untringly the ways which lead to justice and peace."

During his exhausting travels, the 64-year-old pontiff defended conservative church doctrine on sex, while calling on modern society to put the needs of workers and the poor ahead of the drive for profit.

The pope's special Air Canada jetliner landed in Rome this morning, and Vatican officials said John Paul will rest until next Wednesday at his summer residence in nearby Castel Gandolfo. But he will be on the move again soon, flying to Spain, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico Oct. 10-12.

Talking to reporters aboard the flight home, the pontiff said he may write a new encyclical - an authoritative form of papal teaching - on social issues he raised during his pilgrimage to update the teachings of Pope Paul VI.

Asked about the debate in the United States over religion and politics, the pope said "the church cannot be involved in politics as such. But the church has a duty to express itself - herself - in all moral problems of the politics."

"Of course it is possible for a Catholic to be a politician. She should, he should follow his Christian conscience being a politician," he said.

For his final homily Thursday, John Paul expanded on a line from the Sermon on the Mount: "Happy the peacemakers: They shall be called children of God."

The pope, his hair fluttering in the wind, said all humanity is threatened by the nuclear arms race and hunger.

"It is necessary to protect people from death - millions of people - from nuclear death and death from starvation," he said.

"Will we be peacemakers hungering for justice if we consent without reacting to the breathtaking spiral of armaments presented as being at the service of world peace, while the arms race is a real threat of death and while its economic cost deprives so many countries of the effective means for their development?" the pope asked.

"We know that the sources of the conflicts are found wherever injustice kills, or wherever the dignity of people is scoffed at," he said. "To build peace we must establish justice."

Before the Mass, the pontiff met with the 129-member Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, telling them not to be swayed by popular ideas.

"We must proclaim the good news of God in season and out of season," he said, and must never reduce "the greatness of the message to the expectation of the listeners."

Opinion polls have shown a majority of Canadian Catholics disagree with church teachings on artificial birth control and other issues, while even some bishops have said there should be exceptions to the rule of priestly celibacy.

The meeting occurred behind closed doors, but a text of the pope's remarks was released.

Representatives of the bishops said later that such issues as ordination of women, birth control and priestly celibacy were not raised with the pope.

In some areas, such as priest's clothing and the use of girls as "altar boys," many Canadian Catholic parishes quietly depart from Vatican directives.

"We listen to the Holy Father and interpret the rules and regulations as we see appropriate," said the Most Rev. John A. O'Mara, bishop of Thunder Bay, Ontario.

Asked why some of the same points have created more controversy among American Catholics, O'Mara said, "The United States tends to have a more confrontational attitude in society and I think it's reflected in the church. It's not a burning issue in Canada."

Even when visibly weary at the day's end, John Paul reached out to the crowds that followed him, touching hands and kissing children's heads as he walked onto the runway to his jet for the flight back to Rome.

In the 13 cities he visited, the pope was greeted enthusiastically.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 47.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The market is generally weak and the live supply is adequate for a light demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,802,000, compared to 1,703,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market is firm. Supply adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 17 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today as interest rates moved up a bit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped .33 to 1,216.21 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Long-term interest rates rose and bond prices declined in the credit markets this morning following the Federal Reserve's report late Thursday of a $7.8 billion jump in the money supply.

In addition, the government reported that consumer prices rose 0.5 percent last month, up from 0.3 percent in July.

Neither piece of news came as any dramatic surprise to Wall Street, however. Analysts noted that a tentative contract settlement between General Motors and the United Auto Workers union seemed to be a plus for the stock market.

Regional telephone issues dominated the list of volume leaders in brisk institutional activity this morning.

U.S. West gained 1/4 to 65 1/4; Southwestern Bell was unchanged at 65 1/4; Nynex slipped 1/8 to 71 1/4, and Bell South lost 1/4 to 32 7/8.

Six of the seven stocks that were divested from the old American Telephone & Telegraph Co. last winter reached new highs on Thursday. The issues have benefited lately from declining interest rates and favorable reviews from several Wall Street analysts.

Churchgoers Offer Help To Intruders

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)— Two men who allegedly forced their way into a New Bern Church were released in the custody of a church member who said the pair was "down on their luck."

The charges of breaking and entering and carrying concealed weapons were also dropped against Mickey Lee Green, 21, of Akron, Ohio, and Anthony Capaldo, 27, of New York City.

Members of the New Bern Seventh-Day Adventist Church appeared in court Tuesday to ask that charges be dismissed, according to the Craven County Clerk of Courts office. They also offered to help the men following their release from custody, a clerks office employee said.

Capaldo and Green were released Tuesday from the Craven County jail and are staying with Elder Don Miller, a Marine Corps captain stationed at Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station.

"They're just nice young men down on their luck," Miller said in a telephone interview Thursday. "When we picked them up, they had just pennies in their pockets."

Miller said the two had come to Craven County Fair with a carnival from Ohio. The bad weather brought by Hurricane Diana last week washed out attendance and 28 fair workers were released without pay, the two told Miller.

Green and Capaldo spent their first jobless night in the woods, but rain and cold prompted them to seek shelter in the church the second night, Miller said.

Miller said the men told him that they planned to clean up after themselves and leave a note of explanation when they left the church.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.53 to 1,216.54.

Advances outpaced declines by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 92.03 million shares, against 119.97 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained .30 to 96.51. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .05 at 216.25.

Pentagon Contends Gun Costs Too Much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor contracting procedures mean the Army is paying $84 million too much for its new Divad gun, says an internal Pentagon investigation in the latest criticism of the much-maligned weapon.

The service should seek to reduce its contracts with Ford Aerospace, said the report by the Pentagon inspectors office.

The report, released by Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., was the latest blow for the Divad, or Division Air Defense gun.

The gun, known formally as the Sergeant York, has been plagued throughout its 10-year history with high costs and poor performance in test results. The Army eventually wants to spend $4.5 billion for 618 guns which would be used to protect ground troops and artillery against armed helicopters and aircraft.

The Army has already purchased 146 of the guns, but Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has ordered more tests before deciding whether to commit the service to buy 117 more weapons. Those tests were completed several weeks ago and the preliminary results have been sent to Weinberger.

The inspector general's report says the Army was in such a hurry to start Divad production that it wasn't aware that it was paying higher prices than necessary.

Pirates Host Surprising Eagles

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When East Carolina football coach Ed Emory says that Georgia Southern has him concerned, he might be understating the situation just a little.

The Eagles from upstart Georgia Southern come into Ficklen Stadium for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. contest against the Pirates with a 3-0 record, while the Pirates are 0-3 and still searching for that elusive first victory.

"They shut out Florida A&M, one of the better I-AA teams in the country, and they haven't slowed down since then," Emory said. The Eagles took a 14-0 win over the Rattlers then bombed Presbyterian, 41-6 and Central Florida — now coached by Lou Sabin — 42-28.

East Carolina represents the high mark on the Georgia Southern schedule. The Pirates are the only Division I-A team the Eagles play and it is their opportunity to make a name for themselves.

"Their program is a strange thing in today's sports," Emory said. "They got back into football after being away for about 40 years and hired Erk Russell away from Georgia, where everyone thought he was a fixture. He's a great defensive coach, a great motivator and a great organizer. He's built up that team from the ground up, and was 7-3-1 his first year and 6-5 in 1983 after losing his quarterback for several games.

"But," Emory pointed out, "they called themselves a club program until this year, so their guys have experience, but they don't have the same class standings. They've also brought in a number of transfers who have experience at other bigger schools. They have a lot of experience and they've lost no one from their program since they started."

Emory calls Eagle quarterback Tracy Ham one of the finest in the south. "Their defensive tackle, Jeff Evans, is outstanding, and (guard) Theoria Ward is a great pro prospect.

"This is the biggest game in the history of their school and if we go out feeling sorry for ourselves and not ready to play, it will be a tough, tough game for us. If our players think Georgia Southern is a patsy, then we'll really be in trouble.

"Certainly, they're not in the league with Florida State, Temple or Central Michigan, but they may think they are, so who knows what can happen," Emory said.

The key to the Eagle offense is, of course, Ham. In three games thus far, he's hit on 22 of 40 pass attempts for 397 yards and five touchdowns. He's had two picked off. He's also rushed for 180 yards on 35 carries, a healthy 5.1 yard average — that despite being thrown for 43 yards in losses. He's scored twice on runs.

Tailback Melvin Bell is the leading rusher with 22 carries for 192 yards and one touchdown. Fullback Ricky Harris has rushed 28 times for 117 yards and a score, while backup fullback Dexter Sanford has 109 yards on 17 lugs, also scoring a touchdown.

Wide receiver Robert Baker is the leading receiver with eight catches for 105 yards. However, wide receiver Monty Sharpe — not listed as a starter this week by the Eagles — has caught four for 141 yards and three touchdowns. Another wide receiver, Delano Little had six for 90 yards.

Georgia Southern's defense has intercepted 10 passes in the three games, and has held the opponents to 96.3 yards a game on the ground.

While this is the first meeting of the two teams, it's not the first time the Eagles have played against North Carolina teams. They're 4-2 against the state since resuming the sport, defeating Mars Hill twice, while splitting two games with Garner-Webb and Catawba each.

On the Pirate side of the field, the Pirates will start either Darrell Speed or Ron Jones at quarterback. Last week's starter Robbie Bartlett suffered a knee injury against Central Michigan and will be lost for the season.

Speed, in two games, has connected on six of ten passes for 55 yards, while Jones has hit on six of 22 for 109 yards. Speed has had one picked off and Jones, three.

Tailback Jimmy Walden in the leading rusher with 139 yards, while fullback Reggie Branch has 116. They are the only two Pirates with over 100 yards in the first three games. Speed has rushed for 19 yards and Jones for 20.

Walden in the leading scorer for the Pirates with 12 points while kicker Jeff Heath has nine.

Stefon Adams is the top receiver both in catches and yardage. He's pulled in seven for 110 yards, while Ricky Nichols had four for 54 and Henry Williams has four for 50.

"We've played three great teams, two of them with great tradition," Emory said. "But we have to make some readjustments, both in our play and our goals. We spend a lot of time on goals and positive thinking.

"Right now, we've had to make some goal adjustments, and we very badly need that first home win."

Saturday, it will be seen if the Pirates have successfully made the adjustments necessary to get that win.

Next week, ECU travels to Raleigh to face N.C. State in a game already sold out except for tickets on the grassy bank at the end of the stadium.

Cobb's Running Paces Rose, 28-13

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With high school contracts running out after this season, Rose High School officials might not be surprised if Eastern Wayne demures when it comes time for renewals.

After last night, they may prefer to take the next two years off the Rampant schedule. Then, maybe they'll consider returning — Anthony Cobb will be gone by then.

Cobb, just a sophomore, was a one-man wrecking crew against the Warriors last night, scoring three touchdowns and rushing for 252 yards as Rose took a 28-13 decision.

Cobb, making his third start for the Rampants, carried the ball 21 times, ripping off touchdown runs of six, 39 and 94 yards in the contest. And for the second straight game, he finished with more yards than the Rose team got as a whole — much to the displeasure of Rampant Coach Chip Williams.

Rose finished the night with a net of 221 yards, 31 less than Cobb's total. Most of that, however, was lost on one play, a bad snap over the head of Battle Emory on an aborted punt attempt.

Nevertheless, it was a banner night for Cobb who put together his second straight game of 100 yard-plus rushing.

For a while there, however, the game was in doubt. Eastern Wayne scored first, and then came back later in the game to cut the lead to 20-13 with enough time remaining for the Warriors to have a chance to pull it out.

Both of the scores came on passes — as have all of the scores against Rose this year. "Other than the two passes, I thought we did a pretty good job of defense," Williams said.

pointing to the minus 26 yards rushing the Rampants held Eastern to. "But we've got to improve on that pass defense."

Williams said that if he had to be scored on, however, it would prefer to have it done through the air. "At least that shows they're not just blowing us away on the line. If that were true, we'd be in trouble."

The coaches complimented Steve Wall and Brian Bridges for their offensive blocking. "We came on more tonight. We were more aggressive," Williams said.

Naturally, Williams was pleased with the play of Cobb, but noted that the Rampants must come up with a complimenting fullback. "I thought Mo Matthews had a good game tonight blocking for Anthony. But we need to get improved running from that position. Right now, Cobb is a marked man. Everyone knows what he can do, and they're going to be keying on him from now on."

Williams also wasn't pleased with the pass offense. The Rampants hit on just four of 10 tries for 49 yards and were sacked on several occasions.

On their first series, the Rampants had the opportunity to take the lead, but got themselves in a hole with an unnecessary clip. Cobb, after ripping off 36 yards to the Eastern 16 on the first play, saw that wiped out by a clip behind the play that moved the ball instead back to the Rose 33. Emory was sacked on the next play, making it second and 36 and the Rampants failed to come out of that hole.

Eastern then got field position when Emory's punt went out of bounds at midfield. Two plays, however, netted minus 13 yards, but Warrior quarterback Mike Couture hit Robbie Strickland for 22 yards, leaving Eastern with fourth and one at the Rose 40. Scott Goodwin picked up three yards for the first down, and then — after a 12-yard loss back to the 49 on another sack — Couture hit Kenny Casper on a screen pass. Casper then outraced the Rampants to the end zone, and Billy Peterson's kick made it 7-0 with 4:28 left.

Ponys Defeat Hawks, 20-18

KINSTON — A one-yard run by Eric Blount with 1:12 left capped a 60-yard spring drive to lift Ayden-Grifton to a 20-18 victory over North Lenoir Thursday in junior varsity football action.

John Eadus connected with Sterling Mills for a 27-yard touchdown with 8:49 left in the first quarter to give the Chargers the early lead, but North Lenoir scored twice to take a 12-8 lead at halftime.

North Lenoir added another touchdown with 7:18 left in the third quarter to take an 18-8 margin.

But Reggie Jackson plowed over from one yard out with 2:25 left in the third quarter to trim the margin.

Ayden-Grifton, which beat Richlands 28-14 Tuesday, is now 2-0 and visits Southern Nash Thursday.

Rose came immediately back, however, scoring on the next series to tie it up. Cobb did almost all the work on the drive, carrying the first six times as the ball moved from the Rose 33 to the EW 15. Emory then hit Tyrone Smith for nine more yards before giving it back to Cobb for the final six.

Bridges' kick tied it up at 7-7 with 36 seconds left in the quarter.

Rose drove again on its next drive, but ran out of gas this time, failing to pick up a first down after reaching the EW 24.

The next series, however, saw the Rampants score quickly on a 49-yard drive. Taking over after a punt, Rose saw a pass fall incomplete before Emory hit Smith again for 10 yards. On the next play, Cobb took a quick pitch around the left side to dash to the end zone 39 yards away. Bridges again kicked, and with 4:42 left, Rose was ahead, 14-7.

A holding penalty put Rose in poor field position early in the second half and a short punt let Eastern take over on the Rose 40. They failed to advance, however, and kicked it away.

After an exchange of punts, Eastern got it back on its own 43 and picked up a face masking penalty against Rose to move it to the Rampant 37. The drive reached the 19 before Coutour was sacked back on the 32 by Charles Hill, ending the threat.

Rose got it back on its own six-yard line after the punt, but got out of the hole quickly as Cobb did it all on one trip. Taking a pitchout to the left, he got a good block at the corner, then danced past the remaining defender there, outrunning the rest of the defense as he went 94 yards for the score. That upped it to 20-7 with 1:57 left in the third period. Early in the final quarter, with Rose back to punt, Emory saw the ball sail over his head. He raced back to cover it but was downed at the Rose 39.

That set up the second Eastern score. Two plays netted five yards, before Couture hit Strickland on a 34-yard scoring aerial. But, as Rose had done on the previous score, the PAT try failed, leaving it at 20-13 with 7:34 left.

To make sure there was no rally, however, Rose drove the ball 69 yards for the final score after that. The drive appeared stalled at the EW 48 when Rose shifted into punt formation on fourth and one. Eastern dashed offside as Rose shifted, however, and was called on the play. The Warrior coaching staff blew up, saying Rose had pulled the defense offside, and a second 15-yard penalty was assessed for un- (Please turn to Page 17)

OUCH!!!
That yelp of pain you heard last week was the anguished voice of the combined panel of experts — and that term is now in serious doubt. As upset followed upset over the past weekend, the panel's integrity followed on a downward course. By the time it was all over — after Monday night's tie between Rose and New Bern — which we threw out, we found that Tom Baines had the best record — and we use the term "best" lightly, very lightly. Tom was 5-6, while all the rest were 4-7.

In the entire history of this column, there has never been a week like this one. And everyone is hoping that there never will be another. On occasion, we've had a few people to record a losing week, but never have we all done it.

Of course, too, it points out that we're not picking pushover games. At any rate, Jimmy DuPree still leads the way with a 22-13 record, followed by Baines at 21-14. Vickie Spivey and the guests are tied at 19-16, followed by this writer and Joe Jenkins at 18-17.

Our guest of last week was Rose High's new coach Chip Williams, who, like the rest, went 4-7. This week, we've got another of the area's new coaches, D.H. Conley's Donnie Bunn, as our guest.

Before getting to the panel, a look at this week's area high school games. Our record last week was 5-2 which brings us to 20-10 on the year.

Chief among the area games is the matchup between unbeaten and unscored on D.H. Conley, 3-0, and Farmville Central, 1-1. This should tell a lot about the Vikings, like are they for real? We'll soon know. Our choice will be Farmville, however.

Washburn Convicted

RALEIGH (AP) — Christopher Scott Washburn, North Carolina State's 6-foot-11 basketball recruit, has been convicted in Wake District Court of assault on a female.

Washburn, 20, pleaded not guilty to the misdemeanor charge but was found guilty Wednesday by Wake District Judge L.W. Payne after a trial in which Washburn and NCSU basketball player Cozell McQueen testified.

Washburn was given a suspended 30-day sentence and ordered to pay a $25 fine plus court costs.

During the trial, Patricia Peterson, an NCSU student living in a campus dormitory at the time of the incident, testified that on Aug. 26, she answered a knock on her front door to find Washburn and McQueen.

She said that Washburn told her he wanted to talk to her because he had heard that she had been spreading rumors about him and McQueen.

Ms. Peterson said McQueen left after she and Washburn started arguing and that Washburn then slapped her and pushed her until she fell on a bed. She screamed, and Washburn fled, she said.

Washburn testified that he and McQueen did visit Ms. Peterson but that he did not strike or push her.

A Hickory native and a freshman at NCSU, Washburn was regarded as one of the premier high school players in the country and highly recruited before accepting a scholarship at NCSU.

John Merritt put Rocky Mount into the lead, assisted by Tom Shannon, after 17 minutes of play.

Padres Cautious After Clinching Title

By The Associated Press
The wisened baseball veterans who led the San Diego Padres to their first-ever National League Western Division championship mixed their jubilation with a warning that the real baseball season is just beginning.

"We have some momentum, although you don't want to peak too early and you don't want to peak too late," San Diego Manager Dick Williams said Thursday after the Padres clinched a berth in the NL Championship Series with a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants. The Padres' victory and Los Angeles' 6-2 triumph over second-place Houston gave San Diego a 10½-game lead with 10 games remaining.

Added relief ace Rich Gossage: "It's a game of mountains and valleys, and when you're sitting on top of a mountain, it feels pretty good. But we're only part of the way up."

In other games Thursday, the downtrodden Pittsburgh Pirates beat East Division leader Chicago 7-6. Atlanta ripped Cincinnati 9-3 and St. Louis got by Montreal 3-2.

Williams, who managed Boston to an American League pennant in 1967 and won world championships with the Oakland A's in 1972-73, reveled in his latest success.

"Believe me, gentlemen, it's a great feeling," he said. "I'm 10 (actually 11) years older than I was the last time this happened. You can never have enough of this."

Among the keys to San Diego's title drive were former New York Yankees Gossage and Graig Nettles and former Dodger Steve Garvey. The trio tangled in three World Series, with the Yanks winning in 1977 and 1978 and Garvey's Dodgers prevailing in 1981.

"At the beginning of the season, I didn't know what to think," Nettles said of the Padres' prospects. "But after a while, I realized we were good enough to play with anyone in our division. Not to be a pessimist, but even if we lost in the playoffs, this would be a very successful season."

"You look at our team," Gossage added, "and we're not high in any of the statistics, but we do everything well — just enough to win."

"This is as special as any of them," said Garvey, who played in four World Series for Los Angeles, "because it's the first time the Padres have won. It feels great."

San Diego scored all its runs in the second inning off Giant starter Mike Krukow, 10-12, with the key hits Garry Templeton's two-run single and a three-run homer by Padres starter Tim Lollar, 11-12. It was Lollar's third homer of the year.

Nettles lead off the inning with a single, Kevin McReynolds walked and Carmello Martinez was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Templeton then drilled a two-run single to left, and Lollar followed with his blast over the rightfield wall.

Lollar, who went 5 1-3 innings, surrendered an RBI single to Manny Trillo and a sacrifice fly to Jeff Leonard in the third. John Rabb stroked his third homer of the year in the fourth.

Dave Dravecky, who gained his eighth save, allowed the final Giant run on Chili Davis' single in the ninth.

Pirates 7, Cubs 6
Johnny Ray's eighth-inning sacrifice fly broke a tie and gave the Pirates a three-game sweep over the Cubs. The result kept Chicago's magic number for clinching the National League Eastern Division title at three. Any combination of Chicago victories and New York Met losses totaling three would advance the Cubs into postseason play for the first time since 1945.

The Pirates, trailing 6-5, loaded the bases with no one out in the eighth off relief ace Lee Smith, 9-7. Lee Lacy tied the game with a fielder's choice grounder and Ray's fly to left scored the deciding run.

Jim Morrison drove in two runs with a single and a home run for Pittsburgh.

Kent Tekulve, 3-9, got the victory and John Candelaria went the final 1 2-3 innings for his first save.

Dodgers 6, Astros 2
Rookie Orel Hershiser, 10-8, scattered eight hits, struck out five and didn't allow a walk in pitching his seventh complete game of the season. Nolan Ryan, 12-11, lasted only 1 1-3 innings before leaving with a strained left hamstring. Ryan's lone strikeout gave him 3,874, two more than runner-up Steve Carlton of Philadelphia on the all-time strikeout list.

Candy Maldonado had a two-run single and Dave Anderson drove in a pair of Dodger runs.

Braves 9, Reds 3
Gerald Perry slugged a three-run homer in the third inning and added a two-run double in the fifth as the Braves moved into a second-place tie in the West with Houston. Randy Johnson added a two-run homer for the Braves, and Wayne Krenchicki had a two-run shot for the Reds.

Atlanta right-hander Rick Camp, 7-6, scattered five hits over seven innings. Reds' starter Jeff Russell, 6-18, took the loss.

Cardinals 3, Expos 2
Tim Lincecum tripled and scored on Doug Flynn's single in the first, but the Cards responded in the bottom of the inning on Andy Van Slyke's two-run homer off Bill Gullickson, 11-8. The Cards added a run in the third when Willie McGee singled, stole second, went to third on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice bunt and scored on Pendleton's double to left.

Jim Wohlford belted his fifth home run in the eighth off Bruce Sutter, but the Cardinal relief ace held on to extend his league save record to 43. Sutter is within two of the major league mark of 45, set last season by Dan Quisenberry of the Kansas City Royals.

Dave LaPoint, 12-10, went seven innings for the victory.

Padres Remember Kroc With First West Crown

"I'm dreaming of a World Series title for the Padres." — Ray Kroc, '902-1984.

By MARK J. KREIDLER
AP Sports Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ray Kroc didn't live long enough to see his San Diego Padres win their first National League West crown, but he wasn't forgotten on the day his once-laughable team wrapped it up.

"Ray would have loved this," said Ballard Smith, president of the San Diego Padres, after the team beat San Francisco 5-4 on Thursday en route to clinching the division title. "This was his dream."

Kroc, the man who turned McDonald's into the world's leading fast food chain, was widely credited with saving the languishing San Diego baseball franchise when he bought it in 1974, its fifth year of existence.

But by the time Kroc passed away at age 81 in January of this year, he had seen his sad sack team play above .500 only once, and his dream of a world championship was mired in the reality that the Padres never finished better than fourth in the West while he was alive.

Ironically, the Padres' most probable opponent in the NL championship series is the Chicago Cubs, the team that Kroc — born in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park, Ill., in 1902 — grew up adoring.

"It's doubly exciting that we're playing the Cubs," said Smith, Kroc's son-in-law, who was given charge of the team in 1979. "It's hard to believe that Ray didn't play some part in orchestrating all of this."

If he didn't, his acquisitions certainly did. The Padres combined young talent and enthusiasm with the experience of players like Steve Garvey, Graig Nettles and Rich "Goose" Gossage, all signed via free agency in the two years prior to Kroc's passing.

The entire club — players, coaches and trainers — gathered at Gossage's home in nearby Tiersanta after the game and listened as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston, eliminating the Astros from the race.

"This is as special as any title, because it's the first time the Padres have won," said the 35-year-old Garvey, who played on four World Series teams with Los Angeles. "One of my goals when I came here was to help this organization build a winning tradition, and I think we're beginning to do that."

Thursday's victory was fashioned in the usual manner for the Padres, who have developed a reputation as scratchers and clawers. Starting pitcher Tim Lollar boosted a sagging offense with a three-run homer, highlighting a five-run second inning that provided the winning margin.

Lollar, Greg Harris and Dave Dravecky combined for the victory. Dravecky pitching the final 2 2-3 innings to earn a save. When he retired Steve Nicoscia on a grounder to end the game, the team spilled onto the field and formed a cluster between home plate and first base, hands raised, accepting the wild cheers of an afternoon crowd of 15,766.

"It's too bad our game only clinched a tie, and we had to wait for the Astros to lose," said Nettles. "A lot of these guys wanted the chance to pop the champagne corks and run around the clubhouse and act like little kids, and that's the way it should be, really."

They got their chance instead at Gossage's home. Said the 33-year-old fireballing reliever, who has 25 saves: "We haven't done anything yet. We've won a division, but now the real work starts."

"A lot of guys in this league have come close to a division title so many times," said Tony Gwynn, the league's leading hitter at .355. "For some of us to win it in only our second year is really something special."

Kroc, a fiery man who hated to lose, once rushed to a microphone after a Padre defeat and apologized to the home fans for "for some of the most stupid ballplaying I've ever seen in my life."

In 1984, Smith said, he would have had little to be sorry for.

Religious Pressure At Memphis St.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Athletes at Memphis State University are being pressured to accept fundamentalist Christian beliefs, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union says.

The lawyer, Bruce Kramer of Memphis, said his group will file suit if necessary to stop such practices. "We don't want to go to court, but we will," he said Thursday.

"We've had any number of complaints about the football and baseball coaches mixing religion and sports."

The complaints have come from players, parents, alumni and Memphis State fans who are upset about football Coach Roy Dempsey and baseball coach Coach Bobby Kilpatrick.

Kramer said the ACLU is not opposed to the coaches practicing their religion.

"What we object to is mixing religion and sport," Kramer said. "It shouldn't matter whether an athlete is a Christian, Jew or atheist. The only thing that matters is his ability."

Neither coach could be reached for comment, and an Athletic Department spokesman said Dempsey told him he would not comment.

Charles Cavagnaro, the school's athletic director, said none of the complaints noted by the ACLU has reached his office.

"Until we've got something to deal with I don't know what we could say," Cavagnaro said. "The only thing I know is what I read in the newspaper."

sportsmanlike conduct. That put the ball at the EW 28.

The flags continued, however, as Rose was pushed back 18 yards for holding, then Eastern was assessed 15 — and an automatic first down — for pass interference. All that moved the ball to the 31. Cobb ran twice from there, picking up 24 yards, and finally Matthews crashed over from the one with 1:12 left. Emory ran over the PAT to bring it to 28-13.

The Rampants are now 2-0-1 on the year, while Eastern falls to 0-3. Rose opens Big East Conference play next Friday night, traveling to Northern Nash.

ECU Spikers Host Meet

The East Carolina University women's volleyball team will host its second tri-match in three days when Wake Forest and UNC-Charlotte visit Minges Coliseum tonight and Saturday.

The Lady Pirates, 2-3, will take on Wake Forest at 7:30 p.m. Wake Forest plays UNCC at 10 a.m. Saturday, with ECU facing UNC-Charlotte in the final match at noon.

Bodine Sticks With Winner In Goody's

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Geoff Bodine knows that when you find a winner, you stick with it.

Bodine, of Pleasant Garden, N.C., turned in an 89.523 mph time Thursday on the Martinsville Speedway track to claim the pole position for Sunday's running of the Goody's 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

Bodine won his first-ever Winston Cup race here last spring when he captured the Sovran Bank 500.

"It was exactly the same car with exactly the same set-up as what we had when we won here in the spring," he said of his Chevrolet. "I really can't believe it. We didn't change a thing."

Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala., ran an 89.458 mph lap on the .526-mile track to earn the spot next to Bodine in the front row for the $255,850 Winston Cup event.

Starting in row two will be Darrell Waltrip, 88.989 mph, and Terry Labonte, 88.797. Defending Goody's 500 champion Ricky Rudd qualified in the fifth position, followed by Ron Bouchard, Harry Gant, Rusty Wallace, Butch Lindley and Kyle Petty.

The final 20 starting positions will be determined today.

Bodine also won seven Modified and two Sportsman races at Martinsville before entering the Grand National circuit.

"I don't really know what it is but every track has its own technique and I've been very lucky every time I've been here ... the only thing that would have made me feel better today was if I had been able to set a record in qualifying."

Bodine's speed was well off the track record of 90.129 set by Labonte in 1983.

Speeds recorded Thursday at the Martinsville Speedway for the first 10 starting positions in the Goody's 500 Winston Cup grand national stock car race Sunday. The list includes driver, type of car and speed.

1. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 89.523
2. Neil Bonnett, Chevrolet, 89.485
3. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet, 88.989
4. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet, 88.797
5. Ricky Rudd, Ford, 88.748
6. Ron Bouchard, Buick, 88.636
7. Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 88.630
8. Rusty Wallace, Pontiac, 88.629
9. Butch Lindley, Buick, 88.571
10. Kyle Petty, Ford, 88.271

Witt Hurls California Past Kansas City, 2-0

By The Associated Press
While the winning has been ugly for the most part this season in the Mid, Mid West, California's Mike Witt pitched a very pretty three-hitter against first-place Kansas City.

"Mike was excellent through the first six innings," said California catcher Bob Boone. "Everything was working for him. He lost a little bit during the last three, but his control and placement was still there and the hitters didn't know what to expect."

Brunansky lead off the 13th with a walk, took second on Gary Gaetti's sacrifice bunt, moved to third on catcher Joel Skinner's passed ball and scored on the wild pitch.

By beating the Royals 2-0 Thursday night the Angels moved within a half-game in the American League West of division-leading Kansas City. Kansas City has a record of 78-74, while California stands at 77-74.

Witt, 14-11, pitched four perfect innings before Jorge Orta and Steve Balboni singled in the fifth. Pat Sheridan got the only other hit with a ninth-inning single. Witt walked none and struck out seven to raise his season total to 184.

Ken Singleton rapped a grand slam homer and Mike Young drove in five runs with a homer and two singles as Baltimore left-hander Mike Flanagan, 13-13, pitched the Orioles over the Boston Red Sox.

Businessman Considers L.A. Express

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte businessman George Shinn, a former millworker whose rise to riches won him the 1975 Horatio Alger Award, is considering buying the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League.

Witt's effort comes in a pennant race like this, said Angels' Manager John McNamara. "It was a pivotal game and he was superb."

Al Bumbry contributed three of Baltimore's eight doubles in a 20-hit attack. Both the run and hit totals marked season highs for Baltimore.

Shinn, 43, met in Charlotte Thursday with John Bassett, owner of the Tampa Bay Bandits and chairman of the USFL's executive committee and Steve Ehrhart, president and general manager of the Memphis Showboats.

McNamara lodged his protest in the top of the second, claiming that the Royals' Jorge Orta had used an altered bat. Then in the bottom of the third, Hower countered by claiming that the Angels' Juan Beniquez was using a doctored bat.

Ken Singleton connected on a 3-2 pitch off Al Nipper, 10-6, following an intentional walk to Wayne Gross in the third inning. The loss snapped a personal six-game winning streak for Nipper.

"This has got to make sense financially before I'll do it," said Shinn, whose dream is to own a major league baseball team — preferably moving the Atlanta Braves to Charlotte.

The victory gave the second-place Angels a split with the Royals in the four-game series at Anaheim Stadium. The clubs play each other four more times next week in Kansas City.

Dave Collins doubled in his second run of the game in the Blue Jays' three-run seventh inning to snap a 3-3 tie to pace Toronto over the Milwaukee Brewers. Collins also scored three runs and stole two bases.

Mondale Daughter Speaks

AFL-CIO Endorses Hunt

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — President Reagan has forgotten working people, the daughter of Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale told the annual convention of the state AFL-CIO, as the labor organization endorsed Gov. Jim Hunt in the U.S. Senate race.

"A few years ago, the president of my union was Ronald Reagan," said Eleanor Mondale, 24, who is an actress and belongs to the Screen Actors Guild. "He seems to have forgotten what unions are all about."

She told the convention Thursday night that her father was committed "to improving the economy and reducing Reagan's deficit. And you know about his strong commitment to controlling those God-awful nuclear weapons."

Earlier, Hunt called on the labor organization to help him win and "take the burden off the working people in America."

Hunt, addressing more than 400 delegates, said he was in a "tough campaign ... running neck and neck" against Republican Sen. Jesse Helms. He asked the delegates to make personal contacts with all their local union members and their voting-age family members before the election.

"We need a broad base of support," said Hunt. "A senator ought to represent all the people. ... And a senator ought to be fair."

"I want people talking this in every local in North Carolina, on every floor of every single plant, that this year it is more than a choice between candidates. It's a choice about what kind of future we're going to have."

Hunt assailed Helms as a supporter of huge tax breaks for big business and oil companies, and said he expected Helms to criticize him for seeking organized labor's support.

"I think that North Carolina ... needs in the U.S. Senate, not a man who goes up there and snuggles up to those lobbyists and all of those people representing the special interests and the big corporations," said Hunt. "I think we need a senator who'll put an end to those tax breaks and take the burden off the working people in America."

The AFL-CIO spurned Republicans as it endorsed a slate of candidates for statewide office headed by Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the Democratic candidate for governor who's opposed by Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin. The convention also heard several national labor leaders blast President Reagan and support Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale.

The convention backed state Sen. Bob Jordan for lieutenant governor over Republican John Carrington. It also sided with the Democratic Council of State ticket and most Democratic congressional candidates, but remained neutral in some congressional races.

Edmisten told the convention delegates that if elected governor he'd "stand up for the people who do not have rank and power."

Edmisten said Martin had hurt working people by voting three times in Congress to allow telephone companies to impose long-distance access charges.

Also, Edmisten said, Martin voted to give tax breaks "to big oil corporations ... who had made more profit than they knew what to do with" while voting against social programs such as Meals on Wheels for the elderly.

"That's an issue of fairness," said Edmisten. "The elderly people of this nation ... should not have to grovel." He also vowed not to tell industrial prospects "to come down here because we've got cheap labor."

James Sala of Washington, D.C., regional director of the national AFL-CIO's Department of Organization and Field Services, urged the delegates to "fight for our survival" by working to elect Mondale.

"Reagan promised a balanced budget, he promised he wouldn't bother Social Security, he promised not to cut aid to education," said Sala. "He's lying to us. You know it and I know it."

Edward Carrough, a national AFL-CIO vice president, said "the eyes of the country" were on North Carolina because of the Senate race.

"It is impossible to talk with Jesse Helms," said Carrough. "I do not consider him to be a conservative. I consider him to be a radical of the far right."

The convention endorsed Supreme Court justices Burley Mitchell and Henry Frye and appeals court judge John C. Martin. All are Democrats.

Democratic congressmen backed by the AFL-CIO included Walter Jones, 1st District; Steve Neal, 5th District; Robin Britt, 6th District; Charles Rose, 7th District; Bill Heiner, 8th District; and James Clarke, 11th District.

The group took no position on the 10th Districts race, where Republican Rep. Jim Broyhill is seeking re-election, or in the 9th District race, where Democrat D.G. Martin and Republican Alex McMillan are seeking the seat being vacated by Jim Martin, the GOP gubernatorial candidate.

The convention delayed action on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Districts.

Flaherty Says Can Support Suit Over Use Of Airplanes

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

State Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty says he has enough information to substantiate a lawsuit about Gov. Jim Hunt's use of state aircraft, but a Hunt spokesman says the campaign is trying to clear up the matter.

"We've got enough information to substantiate our lawsuit," Flaherty said Thursday. "We are convinced there's several hundred thousand dollars involved."

Flaherty declined to reveal the source of his information, saying only, "There are plenty of people who will come forward under the protection of the courts. They (the Hunt campaign) don't have any idea of the depth of frustration people have."

Flaherty, who filed suit Monday asking that Hunt repay taxpayers for allegedly underbidding himself for the aircraft, said Hunt has "attempted to cover up these these illegalities by hiding the records."

Hunt spokesman Will Marshall said the records were being examined by the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell and that the firm is "going to make a determination of what the campaign should pay the state by way of reimbursement. Gov. Hunt has said if there are any questions to err on the side of paying too much rather than too little."

"The governor wants to clear this up as soon as possible," he added.

Marshall also noted that Flaherty has had several press conferences on the issue of Hunt's plane travel without adding any new information.

"Everybody in North Carolina understands the political motivation behind his antics," Marshall said. "And everybody understands that Jesse Helms is jerking his string."

Helms, North Carolina's Republican senator, is being challenged by Hunt, a Democrat.

Flaherty said sending the records to the independent firm violated a state law which states, "All public records should be kept in the buildings in which they are ordinarily kept."

He also said records at the Commerce Department indicated Hunt used state aircraft more than records being audited. "And it is the records kept by Hunt's office that are used to bill Hunt's Senate campaign," Flaherty said.

Elsewhere in North Carolina politics Thursday, the state Democratic Party filed a complaint with the Federal Elections Commission asking for an investigation of the relationship between the Helms for Senate Committee, the National Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing Inc.

David Price, state Democratic chairman, said the three were part of the same organization and that the club was funneling illegal money to the Helms for Senate Committee.

Claude Allen, spokesman for the Helms for Senate Committee, said the complaint was "purely political" and "doesn't hold any water."

Also Thursday, television star Bonnie Franklin spoke on behalf of Hunt.

"I am here from California, because although I cannot vote in this election, I feel it is a national campaign," she said at a news conference Thursday in Greensboro. "There are only 100 senators, and each of their votes is important to the way all of us live, she said, and that makes it a national campaign."

Franklin, the star of the former CBS situation comedy "One Day at a Time," is stumping from High Point to Raleigh, from Fayetteville to Charlotte, at fund-raisers.

IN THE STATE

House Approves Oregon Jetties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed $100 million jetties to stabilize Oregon Inlet narrowly escaped defeat in the U.S. House after a stormy debate as legislation to build the jetties was sent to the Senate.

The House voted 203-194 Thursday to defeat an amendment that would have stripped jetty legislation from a bill calling for major acquisition of protected federal wetlands.

Then, in a 351-45 vote, the House approved the overall wetlands legislation, which channels more money into the conservation of migratory waterfowl.

The Senate will consider the legislation next to build the two nine-mile-long jetties.

"It would be an environmental disaster," shouted Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., one of the most vociferous voices against the jetties.

He labeled the project a "boondoggle" and said he didn't want taxpayers' money spend on it.

The jetty proposal was strongly supported by the entire North Carolina House delegation, as well as the state's two senators and Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Our firm conclusion is that construction of jetties is the only way to provide a safe navigation channel through the inlet," Hunt said. "The lack of a safe navigation channel through the inlet now is crippling our efforts to provide better jobs and income in northeastern North Carolina."

Construction of the Oregon Inlet jetties was recommended by the Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps would use lands at Cape Hatteras National Seashore and the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge to anchor the jetties.

Cost was estimated at $100 million for the pair of rock jetties.

Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., chairman of Public Works and Transportation's water resources subcommittee, said the accusation that the jetties would hurt the environment was "bunk." In fact, he said, it would protect the inlet from storm erosion.

Roe said he is wary of members from inland states trying to impose their environmental prejudices on those delegations from coastal areas.

Rep. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio, chairman of Interior's public lands and national parks subcommittee, opposed the jetty project.

"It isn't fair to say that it is some outsider that's telling the states what to do," said Seiberling. He called the Oregon Inlet jetties "a flagrant waste" of taxpayers' money and said that area newspaper editorials opposed the project.

In a "Dear Colleague" letter, Seiberling, Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., and other opponents argued that "it is bad enough that these jetties would be an eyesore on Oregon Inlet itself ... but distinguished scientists have spoken with unequivocal unanimity that these jetties would cause serious erosion to miles of heavily used public beaches."

Seiberling also contended that the two jetties would cause a "series of washouts, making it necessary to construct still more jetties." He said he prefers the use of a modern hopper dredge in the channel.

In 1970, Congress first authorized the project to stabilize Oregon Inlet. Over the years, the project was delayed because of controversy.

Merchant Marine and Fisheries Chairman Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said the bill permits the Corps to use the land necessary to anchor the jetties. The project funding must still go through the Appropriations Committee.

In supporting the project, Jones said human safety is at stake.

"The fishermen of this area are being asked to risk their lives to make a living," he said. "They are forced to land their catches at other ports many miles distant and pay the costs in time and money when the inlet is too rough to cross."

Since 1971, nine people have been killed in the Oregon Inlet.

Beach Damage Minimal

By The Associated Press
Officials in many beach towns say Hurricane Diana caused minimal damage to property and little or no erosion along the beaches, as the state's beaches open once again and business gets back to normal.

The storm swept across southeastern North Carolina last Thursday, causing almost $79 million in damage.

"Our recent beach renourishment saved us from any noticeable erosion," said Linda Gardner, secretary for the Pleasure Island Chamber of Commerce which serves Carolina Beach, Kure Beach and the Fort Fisher area.

"We're amazed we got away with so little damage," she said in a news release.

Edwards estimated there was about $5,000 in damage at Wilmington, while no damage was reported at Morehead City.

must provide copies of their federal income tax returns for the past three years.

"We are very pleased to be able to offer this low interest rate to potential borrowers," Kane said in a news release Thursday.

State Housing Agency Plans New Home Loans

RALEIGH (AP) — A limited number of 10.7 percent mortgage loans will be made available starting Oct. 1 for first-time homebuyers in North Carolina, state officials say.

A $91 million bond sale authorized by the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency on Thursday is expected to provide about 2,300 fixed-rate, 30-year loans for low and moderate income families.

Gary Paul Kane, executive director of the agency, said applicants must have a sales contract in hand before filing a loan application with a lender, and all applicants

TV Will Hand Out Emmys Sunday Night

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — All week, the cantankerous Dr. Mark Craig had been practicing his best humility face. His tuxedo was neatly pressed, and his acceptance speech was written on stacks of 3-by-5 cards.
Craig's colleagues at St. Eligius Hospital said he was a shoo-in to win Doctor of the Year.
After all, hadn't he performed the area's first heart transplant? Hadn't he stimulated tremendous publicity for the hospital? By his own accounting, but with few dissenters, wasn't he considered the most gifted surgeon around?
On awards night, the writers for NBC's "St. Elsewhere" threw Craig a cruel curve. Not only did hospital chieftain Dr. Donald Westphall win Doctor of the Year again, but Craig had to accept the award on his boss's behalf. The saintly Westphall had been called away for a hospital emergency.

Craig was not prepared for fate's fickle hand. In his remarks, he couldn't disguise his bitter disappointment. But slowly, through some wonderful acting by William Daniels and some poignant dialogue crafted by the writers, Craig convinced himself and the audience that Westphall deserved the award.
That performance, and others of similar excellence, have convinced us that Craig, Daniels and "St. Elsewhere" deserve their turn Sunday night when the TV industry hands out its annual prime-time entertainment Emmy awards.
Outstanding Drama Series: "Cagney & Lacey" (CBS); "Fame" (syndicated); "Hill Street Blues" (NBC); "Magnum, P.I." (CBS); "St. Elsewhere" (NBC).

"St. Elsewhere" should win; "Hill Street Blues" probably will win for the fourth consecutive season.
In our judgment, "St. Elsewhere" has surpassed NBC's "Hill Street Blues," still no slouch. "Hill Street Blues" always has been a cop opera, but the mixture between police work and personal stories was slightly out of kilter last season.
The professional-personal blend on "St. Elsewhere" was better. The show took more chances, even killing off one regular to illustrate life's grim realities. The show's humor never flagged, and we constantly cared what happened to these credible, often flawed, characters.
Outstanding Lead Actor in a Drama Series: William Daniels as Dr. Craig in "St. Elsewhere." Ed Flanders as Dr. Westphall in "St. Elsewhere." John Forsythe as Blake Carrington in ABC's "Dynasty." Tom Selleck as Thomas Magnum in "Magnum, P.I." Daniel J. Travanti as Capt. Frank Furillo in "Hill Street Blues."
Craig should win; Travanti probably will win.
Flanders, last year's winner, is fine as the caring, Solomonic Westphall. But Craig has taken an ornery character full of sharp edges and invested him with some round moments, in spite of himself.
Outstanding Lead Actress in a Drama Series: Debbie Allen as Lydia Grant in "Fame." Joan Collins as Alexis Carrington Colby in "Dynasty." Tyne Daly as Mary Beth Lacey in "Cagney & Lacey." Sharon Gless as Chris Cagney in "Cagney & Lacey." Veronica Hamel as Joyce Davenport in "Hill Street Blues."
Miss Daly should win; Miss Hamel probably will win.
Miss Daly, last year's winner, brings the streets of New York City to Mary Beth and manages to make her both tough and touching.

Outstanding Comedy Series: "Buffalo Bill" (NBC), "Cheers" (NBC), "Family Ties" (NBC), "Kate & Allie" (CBS), "Newhart" (CBS).
"Family Ties" should win; "Cheers" probably will win.
This is a close category. "Cheers," last year's winner, had some great shows but dwelled incessantly on the conflict between Sam and Diane without developing the other characters. "Buffalo Bill" should get some support because some enjoy watching the networks by voting for canceled series. "Kate & Allie" was realistic comedy at its finest, but, as a short-flight series, only had to do it for six episodes. "Family Ties" made a TV family funny and meaningful for an entire season.
Outstanding Lead Actress in a

Comedy Series: Joanna Cassidy as Jo-Jo in "Buffalo Bill." Jane Curtin as Allie Lowell in "Kate & Allie." Shelley Long as Diane Chambers in "Cheers." Susan Saint James as Kate McArdle in "Kate & Allie." Isabel Sanford as Louise Jefferson in CBS' "The Jeffersons."
Miss Long should win; Miss Long probably will win.
Miss Long has turned a condescending, clownish egghead into a charmingly vulnerable character with a deft comic touch.
Outstanding Lead Actor in a Comedy Series: Dabney Coleman as Bill Bittering in "Buffalo Bill." Ted

Danson as Sam Malone in "Cheers." Robert Guillaume as Benson Dubois in "Benson." Sherman Hemsley as George Jefferson in "The Jeffersons." John Ritter as Jack Tripper in "Three's Company."
Coleman should win. Coleman probably will win.
Coleman is the most clear-cut winner. Without him, there would have been no series. The tour de force comic performance of last season or maybe any season was egocentric Bill's fantasy baseball game, in which he played pitcher, hitter, public address announcer and Lou Gehrig.

Gas Leak Forces Area Evacuation

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Some 120 elderly residents of an apartment complex spent about seven hours in temporary housing after thousands of cubic feet of natural gas spewed from a broken pipeline near the complex.

Susan Edsall of the Asheville Red Cross said tenants at the Bartlett Arms Apartments were evacuated about 3 p.m. Thursday after a gas main in downtown Asheville was cut by construction workers working behind the complex.

No injuries were reported, authorities said.

Natural gas spewed from the leak as crews from Public Service Co., a natural-gas distributor in Asheville, struggled to bypass the leak, firefighters said.

Emergency workers started returning the evacuees to their houses in the 114-unit subsidized housing for the elderly and handicapped about 10 p.m. when it was determined the danger of an explosion had ended.

Some of the tenants were taken to a nearby junior high school, where the Red Cross set up cots and a disaster van, Ms. Edsall said. She said fast-food restaurants are providing food for the tenants.

The leak occurred when earthmoving equipment working at a construction site behind the apartments rolled over an exposed natural-gas line and tore a section of the 8-inch pipe from the ground, according to Jerry VeHaun, Buncombe County emergency coordinator.

VeHaun then ordered the evacuation when he learned a gas detector at the complex indicated that there was a strong potential for explosion.

Fran Dissolves Into Depression

MIAMI (AP) — Fran, the sixth named storm of the 1984 Atlantic hurricane season, was downgraded to tropical depression status but forecasters are closely watching a low pressure area affecting the Texas and Louisiana coast.

Fran's winds dropped to 35 mph Thursday, when its poorly defined center was some 1,200 miles east of the Leeward Islands in the central Atlantic, the National Hurricane Center said. The depression was moving west at 10 to 15 mph late Thursday night and was expected to weaken further, forecasters said.

Meanwhile, the coast along Texas and Louisiana was being affected by gale-force winds and above-normal tides caused by the proximity of low and high pressure areas, the weather service said in a 5 a.m. CDT statement. Tides were expected to be 2 to 4 feet above normal later today, the weather service said.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane monitoring the low pressure area just off the lower Texas coast found "no significant change," the weather service said.

"What we're doing is keeping an almost steady watch to see if it's forming into a tropical storm," said forecaster Hal Gerrish at the National Hurricane Center.

MacDonald Case Sees New Delay

RALEIGH (AP) — A hearing to determine if Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald will get a new trial was postponed until attorneys can obtain transcripts of the court proceedings and interviews with a woman who told some investigators she may have been present when MacDonald's family was killed.

MacDonald is serving three life sentences in a Texas prison for the Feb. 17, 1970, slayings at his Fort Bragg home. He has maintained the killings were done by four drug-crazed hippies. His attorneys hope to prove that Helena Stoeckley Davis and Greg Mitchell, who are both dead, were present or participated in the slayings.

U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree recessed the hearing until attorneys can obtain transcripts of the court proceedings and transcripts of interviews with Ms. Davis.

Dupree said it could be weeks before the transcripts are available and attorneys can submit proposed findings. He said he would set a date later for arguing MacDonald's motion for a new trial.

They say that behind every great man there's a woman. But in this case it's ridiculous.

When rich, eccentric Edwina Cutwater died, she wanted her soul transported into the body of a beautiful woman. But due to a cosmic error, she's taken over the entire right side of Roger Cobb, instead.

Now, he's losing his job. He's losing his girlfriend. And he just can't get her out of his system. No matter how hard he tries.

GAO Report Raps UNESCO Management

WASHINGTON (AP) — A General Accounting Office study of UNESCO supports the Reagan administration's argument that the 161-member international agency wastes money because of sloppy management practices.

The Reagan administration has given formal notice that it will pull out of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at year's end, charging the agency with irresponsible budgetary growth and mismanagement, and with promoting anti-Western policies.

The report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was submitted this week to UNESCO, the State Department and some congressmen for comments to be included in the final version.

There is a solution to almost every problem, especially if there is someone around to give you a helping hand. Look at the problem faced by Steve White of Broomall, Pa., on this hand from the recent Summer North American Championships.

White and his partner were playing a forcing club system, so North's jump simply showed a positive response with a diamond suit. That it is seldom wise to play three no trump with a singleton in partner's suit was made evident by the opening lead.

West led his singleton heart, East overtook and continued the suit to knock out one of dummy's entries before it could be put to good use. However, there was no way that declarer could come to nine tricks without the diamond suit. His only hope was to find West with length in both spades and diamonds.

Declarer started to prepare for a strip and throw-in. He cashed the ace of diamonds and then carefully led the nine of spades to the king. Next came the ace-queen of spades and the ace-king of clubs. The groundwork was now complete.

To West's great discomfort, he was thrown on lead when declarer exited with the two of spades. West could take his two spades and the king of diamonds to go with the king of hearts his side had already banked, but then he had to put declarer in dummy with a diamond to score the fulfilling tricks.

North was perhaps a little conservative to settle for three no trump. Note that it takes a 5-0 trump split to defeat six diamonds — as a matter of fact, looking at all of the cards even that contract can't be defeated. Try it.

Rubber Bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? # EPA Agrees To New Look At Its Pesticide Decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bowing to a court challenge, the Environmental Protection Agency will reconsider its controversial decisions allowing continued use of paraquat and a dozen other pesticides suspected of causing cancer and birth defects.

The agency, accused by labor and environmental groups of allowing manufacturers of the pesticides to dictate EPA decisions behind closed doors, agreed in a settlement to reassess the health risks posed by the 13 chemicals by the end of 1986.

EPA agreed in papers filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here to settle a lawsuit filed in May 1983 by the AFL-CIO and the Natural Resources Defense Council that challenged the decisions made in 1981 and 1982.

Without admitting any wrongdoing in the past, the agency promised not to do it again. Specifically, EPA said it would "eliminate the preparation of industry-assisted registration standards" and "provide for public participation in the pesticide decision-making process."

"No person or party outside of the government will be afforded special or preferential access to agency pesticide decision-makers or to the agency's decisional process," according to the settlement.

In addition to paraquat, the settlement covers lindane, benomyl, EPN, PCNB, DDVP, terbutryn and six varieties of EBDCs — AmAmobam, Mancozeb, Maneb, Metiram, Nabam and Zineb.

The 13 chemicals are believed to be the most toxic among 600 chemicals that go into the manufacturing of some 35,000 pesticide products.

For example, paraquat, a widely used herbicide associated with marijuana eradication programs, is extremely toxic, with one swallow considered a lethal dose.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland praised the settlement as "a major victory for workers and the public."

"If EPA conducts future pesticide determinations in good faith, we have every confidence the result will be better control of these hazardous substances," Kirkland said.

Al Meyerhoff, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said its investigation had documented more than 100 illegal meetings between EPA officials and representatives of the pesticide manufacturers in 1981 and 1982.

Meyerhoff said nearly 20,000 pages of documents collected from EPA and industry files as a result of the suit show that EPA in several cases permitted representatives of the chemical companies to actually draft the agency's decisions.

He said the records also show that advance copies of key documents were often circulated to industry officials while at the same time they were being denied to other interested parties.

"The evidence demonstrates wholesale complicity... resulting in sweetheart regulatory decisions on potentially some of the most dangerous chemicals in American agriculture," Meyerhoff said. "We don't think the restrictions went far enough for any of the chemicals considered here."

Under the settlement, EPA agrees to openly reassess all 13 chemicals.

Panel Says Thousands Tortured in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An investigative commission says at least 8,961 people — probably many more — disappeared during the former military regime's anti-leftist crackdown, with most of them abducted to torture camps and then killed in Argentina's "most savage" tragedy.

After the commission's report was delivered to President Raul Alfonsin on Thursday night, demonstrators in a crowd estimated at 70,000 rallied outside the presidential palace to urge the government to punish those responsible.

Alfonsin set up the commission immediately after taking office in December, ending nearly eight years of military rule. The commission said it documented the cases of 8,961 people who disappeared after March 1976, when the military took power and launched a campaign to wipe out leftist terrorism which gripped the nation in the early- and mid-1970s.

But the report said the actual number of missing people is probably "much higher" because relatives were afraid to talk.

It said the majority of victims were innocent of involvement in terrorist activities.

The report, containing 50,000 pages of testimony, evidence and conclusions, said: "We are certain that what the dictatorship produced was the greatest tragedy in our history — and the most savage."

"Human rights were violated in an organic and official manner through the repression by the armed forces," said the National Commission on the Disappearance of Persons. "And not violated sporadically but systematically...with similar abductions and identical tortments across the entire country."

Only a 20-page summary of the report was made public. Alfonsin has not said if he will release the entire report, including the names of any military men blamed by the commission.

Hundreds of military officials are believed to have been implicated in the full report.

Alfonsin said the report would be passed along to the courts but did not specify what they might do.

The repression was aimed mainly at groups the rightist armed forces considered "enemies of Western and Christian values," the summary said.

"Everyone fell into the net: labor leaders fighting for a simple raise in salaries; youngsters that were members of student groups; journalists who were not addicts of dictatorship; psychologists and sociologists for belonging to suspect professions: pacifist youths, monks and priests who tried to carry the teachings of Christ to miserable neighborhoods; and whatever friends they had, or friends of those friends, people who were named through personal vengeance or by captives under torture," the commission said.

Many victims were abducted at their homes, beaten, dragged away to a detention center and almost always tortured, it said.

"Torture was an essential element of the methodology used. The clandestine detention centers were conceived, among other things, for practicing it with impunity," the summary said.

While saying it did not want its report to emerge simply as "an encyclopedia of horror," the commission cited testimony from some survivors who described being tortured.

"Of some of the methods employed, there are no known antecedents in other parts of the world."

the commission said. "There are many statements of children and old ones being tortured in front of a relative."

The summary said: "The armed forces responded to the crimes of the terrorists with a terrorism infinitely worse than that of the combatant, because after March 24, 1976, they used the absolute power and impunity of the state, kidnapping, torturing and killing thousands of human beings."

Many pregnant women were arrested and bore children in captivity before they were presumably killed, the summary said. Those infants, as well as young children of abducted parents, were divided up "like war booty," the commission said. Many of the children are believed to have been sold or given to other families.

"Many families were unwilling to disclose abductions because of fear of reprisals," the commission said, explaining why it felt its count of the missing was conservative. "And they still are unwilling, out of a fear of resurgence of these evil forces."

Alfonsin has vowed to punish armed forces members who violated human rights but has concentrated on a handful of top commanders. He has ordered a military tribunal to prosecute nine members of juntas that ruled after the 1976 coup. The tribunal has yet to announce any verdicts.

Human rights groups, contending military courts will favor the defendants, want civilian judges to handle the cases. They also want middle- and lower-ranking officers to be prosecuted.

Grenada Sets Vote Dec. 3

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The interim government has set Dec. 3 as the date for Grenada's first general election since 1976, the final step in restoring parliamentary rule after last year's U.S.-led invasion to oust a leftist regime.

Sir Paul Scoon, Grenada's governor general, announced the election in a 15-minute radio speech Thursday night. About 50,000 of the eastern Caribbean island's 110,000 residents will be eligible to vote.

Officials had predicted an election would be held before the end of the year to restore constitutional government in Grenada, a member of the Commonwealth of Britain and its former colonies.

The foreign military presence in Grenada now amounts to about 100 U.S. military policemen and about 200 Caribbean peacekeepers. The Oct. 25 invasion involved 6,000 U.S. troops and a 500-man force from seven Caribbean nations.

Grenada covers 133 square miles, about twice the size of the District of Columbia.

Scoon said he would invite representatives from the Commonwealth, the United Nations and the Organization of American States to observe the elections. He made no mention of U.S. observers.

Once the election is held, Grenada will again be legally governed by the 1974 constitution, written when the island became independent of Britain.

Under that constitution, Grenada voters elect 15 representatives to seat in the House of Representatives as they did following independence. The new prime minister will then appoint 10 of 13 members of the Senate and the opposition three, to round out Grenada's new parliament.

Since the invasion, Grenada has been governed by a nine-member interim government headed by Nicholas Brathwaite.

Grenada's residents last voted in December 1976, when the Grenada United Labor Party, headed by Sir Eric Gairy, won nine of the 15 parliament seats.

Maurice Bishop, head of the Socialist New Jewel Movement, ended the electoral process in March 1979 by toppling Gairy's government.

Bishop became prime minister and established the leftist People's Revolutionary Government, putting an end to the British-styled parliamentary system.

Bishop and three of his Cabinet members were slain last Oct. 19 during a power struggle with more radical members of his government and armed forces. The invasion took place six days later.

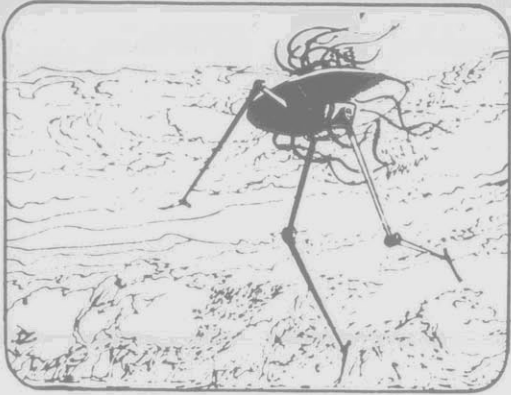

Dominica's Prime Minister Eugenia Charles, chairman of the Organization of the Eastern Caribbean States, had asked the United States in the name of that organization to help stabilize Grenada following Bishop's death.

Scoon made a special plea to the voters after announcing the election date.

"Fellow Grenadians, I beg all registered voters to do your duty on election day... that is go out and vote."

Election Supervisor Roy Chasteau said before the speech that an official voter list was expected to be ready shortly. Although the official number of registered voters will not be known until the list is ready, the number is expected to be roughly 50,000.

FOCUS

An Active Imagination

H.G. Wells was born in on this day in 1866. His writings often stirred the imagination. For example, Helen Keller became a socialist after reading one of his books. His novel "The War of the Worlds" caused a panic in the United States in 1938 when a radio play based on the novel was broadcast from New York. Horrified listeners believed Martians had landed in New Jersey! That night, at least 20 people in the New York area were hospitalized for "hysteria."

Salvadoran Rebels Step Up Attacks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels stepped up their guerrilla campaign against the U.S.-backed government by derailing a freight train, shooting down a crop-dusting plane and raiding army posts in three Salvadoran towns.

In Honduras, 6,000 workers and students marched in the capital

Thursday to protest the presence of 2,000 U.S. soldiers taking part in the latest of a series of joint military maneuvers that began in February 1983. The march in Tegucigalpa was organized by a labor federation.

In Nicaragua, an opposition party source said the leftist Sandinista government has "tentatively" agreed to an opposition demand to postpone the planned Nov. 4 elections until Jan. 15.

The report was not confirmed. Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said earlier this week it was too late for a postponement, but he later held out the possibility that the main opposition coalition, currently barred from the campaign because it refused to register, may be allowed to participate.

A spokesman for the state-operated Salvadoran National Train Co. said Thursday that guerrillas dynamited a train carrying cement from Usulután to San Miguel, the two largest cities.
