Economists Project Clear Skies But Distant Storm Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current economic recovery should continue for at least another nine months, but after that rising interest rates and giant federal budget deficits make a recession more and more likely, a national group of economists said today.

The National Association of Business Economists said a survey among its members found them much less optimistic about future economic growth than the Reagan administration.

Where the administration's latest forecast sees no recession on even the far horizon, a majority of the economists surveyed — 53 percent — believe the next downturn will begin either in the second half of 1985 or the first half of 1986.

Asked to cite a reason for the recession, over 70 percent picked large federal budget deficits and high interest rates.

An overwhelming 82 percent of those surveyed believed that current deficits were stimulating the economy too much, but the group split on the best approach for attacking the problem.

President Reagan's view that government spending should be cut without raising taxes was supported by 42 percent of the economists, while 41 percent favored some type of tax increase.

But the group overwhelmingly favored action even if it came in the midst of the next recession — a time traditional economics would warn against either budget cuts or tax increases for fear of worsening the downturn.

"Business economists are more concerned about the correct structural policies for the long-run than they are about trying to fine-tune the business cycle," said Ben Laden, vice president of the association.

Even though the economists were critical of the fiscal policy being pursued by the administration, they overwhelmingly endorsed Reagan over his Democratic opponent, Walter Mondale, who has released a deficit-reduction plan calling for a combination of budget cuts and tax increases.

Asked which candidate has the best plan for solving economic problems, 64 percent said Reagan, 9 percent picked Mondale and 27 percent said neither candidate. A similar question in 1980 found 60 percent supporting Reagan and 11 percent picking then-President Jimmy Carter.

The economists said the current marked slowdown in economic growth was a "temporary lull" and not a sign that the recession will begin this year.

But the view among the economists was for slower growth next year than the Reagan administration is predicting with somewhat higher inflation and less of a decline in the unemployment rate.

The survey — giving consensus views — was released at the association's annual meeting in Atlanta. Copies were also made available to reporters in Washington.

The predictions, gathered from the 205 members who took part, included:

—The general economy, as measured by the gross national product, will grow 3.1 percent from the fourth quarter of 1984 to the fourth quarter of 1985, down substantially from an expected 6.4 percent growth this year. The administration is forecasting growth next year of 4 percent.

—Inflation, measured by the Consumer Price Index, will be 5.4 percent next year, compared to an expected 4.2 percent this year. The administration is predicting inflation will be a lower 4.7 percent next year.

—Unemployment will average 7.2 percent of the labor force next year compared to an administration prediction of 6.6 percent. Currently, unemployment stands at 7.5 percent.

Reagan Calls For Regular Talks With Soviet Experts

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Reagan, declaring he is ready for "constructive negotiations" with the Soviet Union, today proposed regular meetings between senior experts from the two sides to reduce tensions and the threat of war.

"We recognize that there is no sane alternative to negotiations on arms control and other issues between our two nations," Reagan said in a prepared speech to the U.N. General Assembly.

He said these experts and other, senior U.S. and Soviet officials could set as their goal a "road map" to guide relations between the two superpowers over the next 20 years.

"We need to extend the arms control process, to build a bigger umbrella under which it can operate," Reagan said.

The president, who once condemned the Soviets as an "evil empire," today said that, "while there will still be clear differences, there is every reason why we should do all that is possible to shorten that distance."

A senior U.S. official who demanded anonymity said one measure Reagan had in mind is to use the recently improved "hotline" between Washington and Moscow to prevent war by miscalculation.

"America has repaired its strength," Reagan said. "We have invigorated our alliances and friendships. We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union."

In a major step in that direction, Reagan will meet at the White House for three or four hours Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

As for further meetings between officials of the two sides, Reagan said such regular sessions could be conducted between Cabinet-level officers and other top officials "on the whole agenda of issues before us, including the problem of needless obstacles to understanding."

He said such talks could consider exchanges of weapons-development and arms-purchase plans.

Reagan also said ways should be found by next spring to have Soviet and U.S. observers at each other's nuclear test sites.

The president called for negotiations to begin in Vienna by early 1985 on ways to prevent the militarization of space.

While Reagan did not accept the Soviets' demand for a test ban preceding such talks, he said that once the discussions are under way, "we would consider what measures of restraint both sides might take while negotiations proceed."

He urged Moscow to agree to hold "periodic consultations at policy level" to reduce tensions in various regions and said that Secretary of State George Shultz would bring up that subject with Gromyko when the two meet Wednesday.

"Spheres of influence are a thing of the past," Reagan said. "Differences between American and Soviet interests are not. The objectives of this political dialogue will be to help avoid miscalculation...."

SOCIAL CHAT — President Reagan, left center, talks privately with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at a reception in New York Sunday. Reagan met Gromyko in the reception line, and later made his way to Gromyko for a private conversation that lasted away five minutes. The two men are to meet in Washington later this week. ### FOOD BANK HERE?

I have heard of a food bank which channels non-marketable food from industries to local charities. I would like to find out if it's feasible to establish one in Greenville. I can imagine how helpful it would have been following the March 28 tornado. L.W.

Tim Whelan, the eastern regional coordinator of "Second Harvest," a non-profit corporation which is a national network of 62 food banks, said there is a certified food bank in Charlotte, one about to be certified in Raleigh, and one well into work leading to certification in Winston-Salem. He suggested that any individual or agency interested in either getting assistance from or contributing to a food bank contact the Raleigh Community Food Bank, 1513 Sunrise Ave., Raleigh, N.C. 27608; phone, 919-833-9027. Lois Voelker is the director. He believes there should be involvement by coalition of agencies here and could even be a distribution center here that could work as a part of the Raleigh bank.

Five Felons Escape Kansas State Prison Through Air Shaft Opening

LANSING, Kan. (AP) — Five prisoners, three serving life terms for murder, escaped from a dormitory-like cell house at the Kansas State Penitentiary early today, apparently by climbing down an air shaft and out a "very small air intake," authorities said.

The inmates were discovered

Life Term Means Little

WASHINGTON (AP) — Half the convicts sentenced to life in prison are released within 52 months, a Justice Department survey says.

Two-third of those sentenced to life behind bars are freed within seven years, the Bureau of Justice Statistics said in survey results released Sunday.

The survey studied prison admissions and discharges in 33 states and the District of Columbia in 1981.

Most of the life sentences studied by the bureau were for murder, but "a significant proportion were imposed for drug offenses," the study said.

The median time served for murder among 840 life-sentence cases studied was 63 months.

The survey found that about 40,000 of the 101,943 convicts released after serving time for various crimes had been in prison for 12 months or less, while 1 percent had served more than 10 years.

Other median amounts of time served were 33 months for rape, 25 months for robbery and 13 months for narcotics offenses.

missing moments after the 1 a.m. escape, and prison officials and area law enforcement agencies immediately began searching for them, said prison spokesman Troy Baker.

"They are fleeing felons, and under the circumstances, we consider them to be dangerous," Baker said. "These are running prisoners, and it would be naive for anyone to think otherwise."

The prisoners apparently escaped by climbing down a third-floor air shaft "and exiting a very small air intake on the side of the cell house, like a small window" between the second and third floors, Baker said. The inmates apparently jumped to the ground from there, he said.

Prison officials at first believed the men had escaped by climbing through the air shaft to the roof, but scuff marks and other evidence, including signs that "something had been cut near the window" were found later, Baker said.

After reaching the ground, the prisoners apparently "went through a low corner" of the fence surrounding the prison, he said.

Officers on foot and with dogs were searching for the escapees in an area between Lansing and nearby Leavenworth, Baker said, adding "There's plenty of open ground and brush in that area."

The cell house, a dormitory-like structure with no bars on the cells, houses between 275 and 280 prisoners, Baker said. The prison, located about 30 miles northwest of Kansas City, Mo., in northeast

Kansas, had a population of 1,864 prisoners as of Sunday, Baker said.

Baker identified the escapees as Thanh Van Pham, 20, serving a life sentence from Sedgewick County for his November 1982 conviction for aggravated robbery; John Allen Purdy, sentenced in May 1979 to life imprisonment from Sedgewick County for first-degree murder, aggravated robbery and burglary; Lawrence Eugene Lane, 33, sentenced in June 1983 from Douglas County to a 10- to 20-year term for aggravated robbery; Thaddeus Jones, 28, serving a life sentence from Sedgewick County for his May 1983 conviction for first-degree murder and aggravated robbery; and Arzo Tucker Jr., 28, sentenced to 15 years to life from Sedgewick County in April 1979 for aggravated kidnapping, aggravated sodomy, rape and aggravated robbery.

Author Says Myth Can Breed False Expectations

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Mental health expert Lee Morical, a professor at the University of Wisconsin-Stout, bought a new pair of tap shoes the other day. She also picked up some new tapes.

"It's something I wanted to do, to grab some fun and joy," the 50-ish college professor and mother of three grown-ups said in an interview.

"I will not take lessons but I intend to enjoy tap dancing for the moment, as I now make time to enjoy other things — like getting up an hour early and watching the river behind my house running. Or picking an apple in the local orchard and later putting it on my desk and taking time to think about it before I eat it."

Morical, of Menomonie, Wis., once was a cross between Wonder Woman and a juggler, made that way, she claims, by panting along the "You Can Have Everything" trail blazed by the women's liberation movement.

She had everything but free space for herself.

She said she started making space while recuperating from a cancer operation and has been at it ever since — "to get in touch with my being."

Morical has counseled thousands of women. With funding from the National Institute of Mental Health, she helped develop training centers for others who counsel women who don't seem to be basking in limitless joy-through-liberation.

The myth of the women's liberation movement, she said, is that women who try hard can have a career, marriage, children, everything.

"But everyone is different and women don't fit lockstep into a pattern. We must pick and choose what helps us to more fully be ourselves."

"There are hundreds of good choices. You can say yes or no or maybe. You don't have to say yes to everything."

Before her illness, Morical thought she had everything — a successful career, marriage, children, appearances on the "Donahue" and "Today" shows, articles about her

"Woman Helping Women" work in Ladies Home Journal, Woman's Day, Redbook and McCall's.

Looking back, Morical said she had no time for herself. Perhaps even worse, she recalled, she didn't even realize there was "no time for me and no fun."

The mastectomy wasn't her only loss. During recuperation, a windstorm tore giant trees from the riverbank in Morical's yard. Power lines snapped against the house and the basement was flooded. A robbery followed.

Capping the string of disasters was the breakdown of a "friendship that had been very important to me," Morical said.

"During the time when so much loss was juxtaposed against what my life had been, I first began to understand the wisdom of my father's words when I was a teenager — 'You can't have everything.'"

"And it was in the months and years that followed (the illness and disasters) that I have been able to see clearly for the first time that the fullness of our lives has nothing to do with how much we cram into them — and everything to do with making choices and letting go."

Her basic message to fledgling superwomen:

Pause. Meditate. Get in touch with the truth — "You can't have it all."

"You really can't," she said.

"I think I was about 17 or 18 the first time I heard my father say, 'You can't have everything,'" Morical says in "Where's My Happy Ending: Women and the Myth of Having It All" (Addison-Wesley, $15.95), due out Oct. 22.

"I don't remember what the occasion was — probably some high school disappointment of mine that he tried to remedy with this annoying maxim — but all it did was show me clearly that once again he didn't understand. On the one hand I was being told the world was mine if I just worked hard enough, and on the other I was being told I couldn't have it all."

"By the time I was 22 the words had become particularly bothersome to me, by the time I was 30 I couldn't stand to hear them, and by 40 I was out to prove them wrong."

After illness and disasters slowed her down, she said, she became more acutely aware of troubles or unhappinesses waiting for other women wanting to have everything.

For them, she said, she wrote "Where's My Happy Ending?"

Women were caught up in the stereotype of home, family, husband in the 1950's and that's the stereotype that led to the women's liberation movement, she said.

She fears today's women are trapped by the new myth — the "superwoman myth."

Through her counseling of thousands, Morical has found a theme of disappointment.

Women are saying:

"I did it right. I got a job or stayed home, married the right guy or divorced the wrong one. Now that I've found myself, where do I go from here?"

To find happiness, Morical recommends that women throw out scenarios written by others, and shape their own without apologizing to anyone.

"Fashion goals that take into account the realities, not the myths, of your own life," she said.

In "Where's My Happy Ending?" Morical goes to the mat with what she describes as major women's myths. Some examples:

—Getting a job is the answer.

"Taking a job as an answer to a problem you haven't even defined makes about as much sense as taking medication for an undiagnosed physical problem."

—Marriage is the answer. "The first thing to remember is that no one is ever going to be as interested in what you are doing as you are ... you must give only what you can psychologically afford to give knowing there may be no thanks or reward."

—Accommodation is always wrong. "Deciding which things are worth standing firm on, and then letting go of the rest, can provide us with stores of energy and time to use for more creative pursuits."

—If I just run a little faster, I'll catch up. "The bad news and good news about all this is that everyone is not doing it and you can't either."

Shattering the myths opens the way to exercise real freedom of choice, Morical said. Some of her ideas for helping:

—Rediscover the meaning of play. "Not obligation, not duty, not business, and not necessarily worthwhile. Not anything but pure, sheer fun."

—Recognize the value of silence. "Not the frightened silence of a woman who is afraid to speak lest she offend, but the mature silence of a woman who knows that there are many things that simply do not have to be said ... to have integrity, each of us must keep a part of ourselves to ourselves."

Many Varieties Of Grapes Meet Growing Demand

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

California, which produces about 97 percent of America's table grapes, reports that they have risen from tenth to fifth place as our most popular fruit.

Per capita grape consumption in the United States actually jumped from 1.8 pounds in 1972 to nearly 6 pounds a decade later.

About 84 percent of these grapes were eaten out of hand, while the remaining 16 percent are used as ingredients in various recipes, according to a survey.

Of the 13 major grape varieties grown in California, one or more are available most of the year.

One of the most popular is the Thompson green seedless, a durable fruit which is on the stands from June through November. The Thompson is referred to in the trade as a four-way grape, since it is sold not only to eat fresh, but also for making raisins, producing wine and for canning.

The Thompson seedless is the only grape used in fruit cocktails, a canned treat of which some 11 million cases are produced on the West Coast each year.

In fall, two other grapes come on the market. They are the Calmeria, an elongated green fruit sometimes referred to as the "lady finger," and the Almeria, a large light-green grape which has a full, robust flavor. Both make their appearance in October and are available through February.

Two grape varieties, which become available mid-summer, are the rich, black Ribier with its full-bodied flavor, lasting into February, and the bright red Ruby seedless, which will be on the market through January.

Grapes are among the world's oldest fruits. They were grown as far back as 4000 B.C., when Swiss lake dwellers kept vineyards, according to historians.

The Scriptures indicate that the first vegetation planted by Noah after the great flood was a grape vine.

Most of the grapes produced in America are grown on vines similar to those propagated in Asia Minor near the Caspian Sea in ancient times.

Here's a dessert recipe which features seedless grapes. It's called Grape Swirl.

- 1 package (3 ounces) strawberry-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 cartons (8 ounces each) peach-flavored, low-fat yogurt
- 2 cups seedless grapes
- Sweetened whipped cream (optional)

Teen-Age Tootsie Gets Neighbor's Dressing-Down

DEAR ABBY: Recently I went away for a week. Before leaving, I hired a neighbor's 17-year-old son to look after my dog, plants and mail. I've known this boy and his family for about 10 years and felt that he could be trusted with my home and possessions.

When I returned home a day ahead of schedule, I got the surprise of my life when I walked in and found my house sifter all decked out in my best clothes—high heels, makeup, wig, the works! He explained that he liked to dress up in women's clothes, and he didn't think I'd mind.

I not only "minded," I was furious! He was even wearing my underwear, including a brand-new slip I had never worn.

I ordered him to get out of my clothing immediately, then I phoned his mother. When I told her about her son, she made a joke of it. I demanded that she pay to have my clothes cleaned, but she refused and said I was making too big a deal over a small thing.

Abby, this is no small thing to me. I feel that my privacy has been invaded, and I can't bear the thought of putting those clothes on until everything has been dry-cleaned or laundered.

As for my neighbor's 17-year-old "Tootsie," I think he needs counseling. Am I wrong?

ANGRY IN COOPERSTOWN, N.Y.

DEAR ANGRY: No. The boy or his family should comply with your demands. And if "Tootsie" has trouble accepting himself for what he is (a transvestite), he needs counseling.

SPARE DENTURE TO THE RESCUE
 Any denture wearer worries about going in public without them due to damage or loss. This is understandable, but preventable. If you wear dentures and care about your ability to eat or appearance in public, it makes a lot of sense to always have a spare set handy just in case your number one set breaks or is damaged (or lost in the lake or ocean while swimming). Your dentist can have an exact duplicate of your present denture made in a short amount of time and at a very reasonable cost. (Probably for less than half of what your original set cost.)
 You can take it with you when you travel (just like it makes sense to carry an extra pair of glasses) and carry it conveniently in a small container in your attache case, pocketbook or keep it wherever your imagination dictates. It will also come in handy if your original denture needs repair.
 Just think about this: If you have a spare denture, you might not miss a dinner with your dentist. That's a reward - especially if your dentist is paying for dinner.

Ten Mistakes Made In Dieting

By REDBOOK A Hearst Magazine

Americans are walking a dietary tightrope these days, trying to balance nutrients and count calories while being bombarded with seemingly contradictory eating advice.

To take the mystery out of healthy eating, Redbook asked leading nutritionists for the 10 most common mistakes people make in their diets, and the results appear in the September issue.

The experts agreed the most common - and deadliest - dietary sin was eating too much fat. Most dangerous are the saturated fats found in animal and dairy products that raise the cholesterol level and are culprits in heart disease and stroke.

A diet high in any fat also may increase the risk of cancer of the breast, endometrium, ovaries, colon, rectum and possibly pancreas.

Fat also has twice the calories per gram of other nutrients - which means overindulgence can lead to obesity.

Next on the list of dietary mistakes was overloading on protein. About 12 to 15 percent of a person's daily caloric intake should be made up of protein. But most Americans eat twice that much, and a large proportion comes from such high cholesterol foods as beef and eggs.

"For your heart's sake, have burgers or steak no more than two or three times a week," advised Gail Levey, spokesperson for the American Dietetic Association of Chicago.

The third diet error was getting too little iron. It isn't necessary to eat iron-rich - and cholesterol-high - red meat in order to increase iron intake. Legumes, oysters, clams, sardines, whole-grain cereals and bread, leafy green vegetables, brussels sprouts and dried prunes, dates and raisins are good sources of added iron.

Don't assume starches are fattening. Such complex carbohydrates as pasta, potatoes, rice and bread are top sources of B-complex vitamins and are no more fattening than protein. It's the butter, oil and sour cream we put on starches that add calories.

People who avoid starches also probably are not eating enough fiber. The experts say that if half the foods you eat are complex carbohydrates, you should be getting enough fiber.

Drink milk. Women tend to avoid milk because they think it is fattening, and lose out on calcium as a result. Skim milk, low-fat plain yogurt and such non-dairy products as canned fish, tofu, turnip and collard greens and broccoli are good sources.

Americans eat far too much salt. Some comes from the shaker, but sodium also sneaks into the diet via processed foods, cured meats and packaged baked goods.

Three additional dietary sins are eating too much sugar, relying on vitamin pills for nutrients, and crash dieting.

"We're always better off getting nutrients from real foods, not pills," said Betty Perkins, associate administrator of the Human Nutrition Information Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Helen Guthrie, professor of nutrition at Pennsylvania State University in Philadelphia agreed, saying, "Eating a wide variety of foods - that's the best insurance of all."

No Smile

Return of Andrei Gromyko to our shores, and those anticipated meetings with Walter Mondale and President Reagan, stirs old impressions.

He first came on the world scene more than three decades ago when he worked in the shadow of V.M. Molotov, the U.S.S.R. diplomat who was the main Soviet spokesman in what was known as the United Nations Organization. Gromyko was a relatively young man, and learned much from his mentor — especially how to vote "nyet." He did not smile for the camera.

In due course, Molotov moved to a bigger role; his protege continued to deal with diplomatic chores and advanced in skills and responsibilities in dealing with other governments. His news photographs never showed him smiling.

Some individuals in the Soviet hierarchy run afoul of the party leadership; perhaps supporting the "wrong" person or point of policy in a given situation. Molotov was among them, and he was sidelined under a cloud. Gromyko was untouched. He did his job ... and still looked grim no matter the camera's angle.

Today Gromyko is known as the most dependable voice leadership the Kremlin could possibly find to speak for his government in foreign affairs. He knows his world of diplomacy as do few men. Whatever honors he has received from his country have been quietly ... almost privately ... accepted and unostentatiously fitted into his personal and very private life.

His government quite probably could not have found a more reliable and discreet person to evaluate the words of Walter Mondale and Ronald Reagan as a basis for future foreign policy.

We do not expect to see news photos of the diplomat smiling before, during nor after his meetings with the two Americans. It would be completely out of character. Walter will smile. Ronald will smile. But not Andrei.

Decision

The case against presidential counselor Edwin Meese III has been laid to rest by a special prosecutor.

Jacob A. Stein reported to a special court last week that he found no basis for bringing a prosecution against Meese.

Stein investigated 11 allegations concerning Meese and reported his findings to a three judge panel. His investigation, of course, only concerned legal matters and not the propriety of Meese's dealings.

Meese has been nominated by President Reagan for the post of attorney general. No action will be taken by the Senate to affirm the appointment prior to the election, but Reagan says he plans to reaffirm the nomination if he is elected.

The special prosecutor's report properly should end consideration of legal action against Meese. Nevertheless his nomination as attorney general must face action by a Senate whose makeup is not yet known.

Meese's Ideas Spurred Investigation

—Mike Feinsilber—

WASHINGTON (AP) — From one viewpoint, the fight over the fitness of Edwin Meese III to serve as attorney general was over his ethics. But that was only part of the story. Much of the opposition facing Meese was based on his political philosophy rather than his ethics.

The long, painful, expensive fight over Meese's nomination illustrates a point about the way Washington works.

These occasional confirmation battles — always distasteful because a person's reputation is at stake — are almost always over a hidden question.

Usually the battle grounds are the nominee's ethics while what's really at issue is his philosophy.

In Meese's case, special prosecutor Jacob A. Stein absolved Meese of criminal wrongdoing last week in the culmination of a five-month grand jury investigation.

The fight wasn't over a $15,000 interest-free loan from a long-time California friend who ended up on the federal payroll. Nor was it over Meese's forgetfulness in neglecting to list some stock transactions on his financial disclosure forms, or his hasty promotion in the Army Reserves or his failure to turn over to the government a $375 pair of jade and gold cuff links given him by the South Korean government.

Meese's ideological foes in the Senate raised those issues in an attempt to keep him from becoming head of the Justice Department because they don't like his ideas, not because they cared what he did with a pair of cuff links.

Meese's critics don't like his conservative political philosophy, his feelings toward the poor, his attempts to weaken or abolish the Legal Services Corporation, his attempt to restore tax-exempt status to Bob Jones University despite its record of discrimination on the basis of race, his opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment and what one witness at Senate hearings called "the administration's insensitivity, unfairness and indifference to women, minorities, the disabled and many other victims of discrimination."

The witness, Ralph Neas, testifying on behalf of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, told the Senate Judiciary Committee last Feb. 2, "Bluntly put, we oppose the nomination because, on the basis of our observations over the past three years, we do not believe Ed Meese, as the nation's chief law enforcement officer, would enforce, vigorously and objectively, our nation's civil rights laws."

That sort of argument doesn't get very far, and the Meese nomination was headed for the Senate floor, and probable confirmation, when the personal financial questions that caused the appointment of a special prosecutor arose.

Opponents hoped Stein would give them ammunition to fight the nomination on grounds other than ideology. He apparently did not.

The same sort of thing has happened in some of the other great confirmation battles.

During the Eisenhower administration, a Democratic-controlled Senate voted 49-46 to reject the nomination of Lewis Strauss to become secretary of commerce. Strauss was only the eighth Cabinet nominee ever turned down by the Senate.

It was clear that Strauss was rejected because of his strong conservative views. But the reasons opponents cited were the "unnecessary untruths" he was accused of telling and his involvement in an obscure financial scandal called Dixon-Yates. Opponents said he was involved in "a deliberate use of public office for improper aid to private business."

And when the Senate rejected two nominees put forth by President

Nixon for the Supreme Court — Clement F. Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carswell — most felt it was because of their philosophical views even though other grounds were cited.

Because of the ways Washington works, a candidate is rarely rejected on grounds that he is philosophically incompatible with a majority of the Senate.

The rule is that "a president is entitled to his own official family."

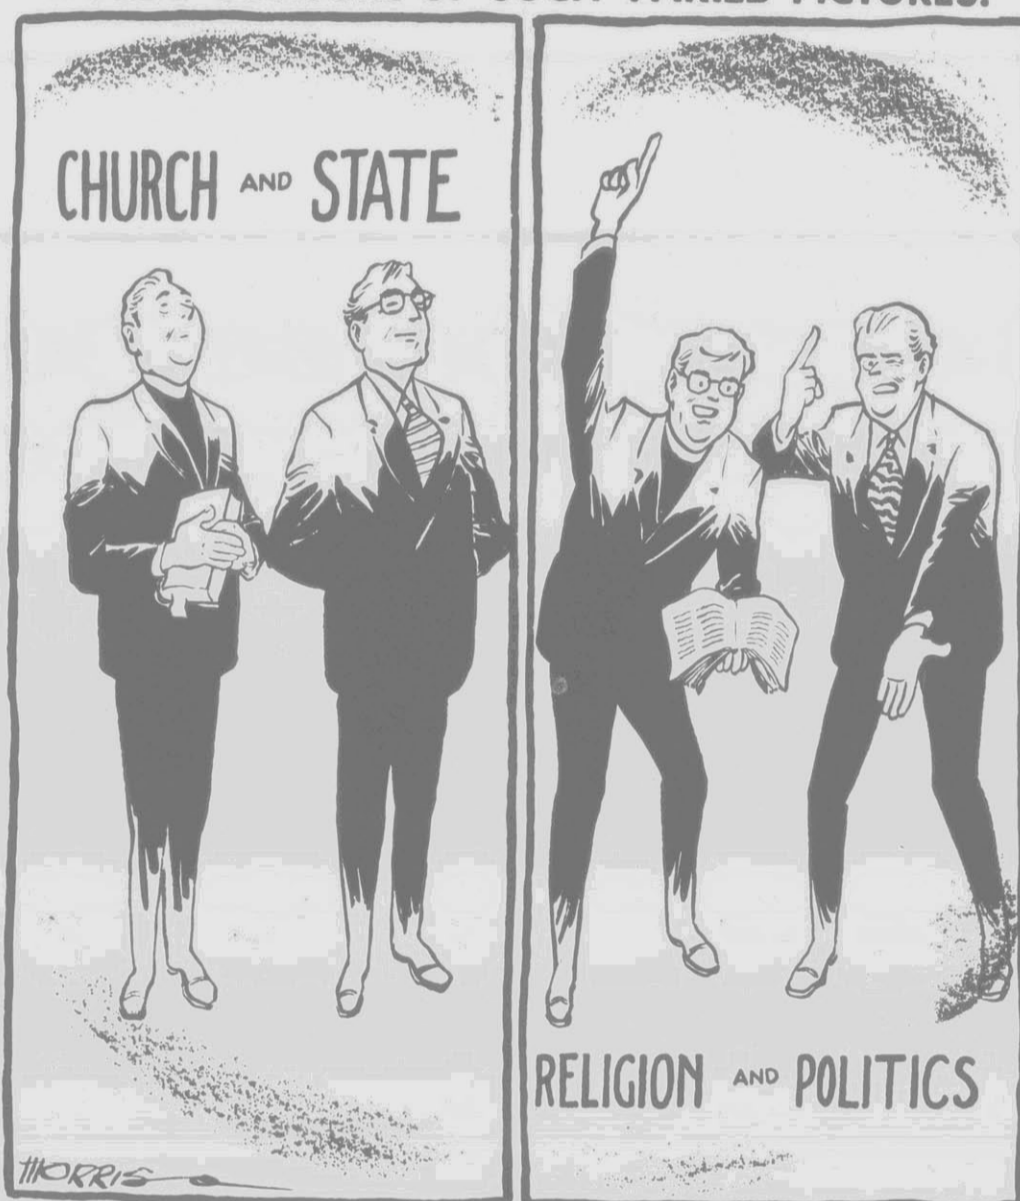

That's so even though the decisions and philosophies of Cabinet members and other high officials can affect the lives of millions, quite independent of what a president thinks or does.

What a transportation secretary does about air bags in automobiles can save lives. What an agriculture secretary does about the programs he runs can put farmers out of business or beef on families' tables. Presidents don't get involved in questions such as these. Cabinet members — or the aides they appoint — do.

But these issues aren't likely to be decisive when the Senate is asked to advise and consent on a presidential nominee.

And thus opponents often are forced to search for dirt when they don't like what a nominee stands for.

Deaver Takes More Initiative In White House

WASHINGTON — Without informing President Reagan, White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver turned down an invitation for the president to appear on Roger Mudd's NBC election special Sept. 9.

Walter F. Mondale appeared on the program with no rebuttal at all from the president. Reagan complained privately about that and what he termed pro-Democratic bias on the program. Far more upset were insiders, outraged that the increasingly powerful Deaver did not even tell his boss about Mudd's invitation.

A footnote: Deaver did not inform Reagan when he decided against inviting Henry A. Kissinger to the Republican National Convention in Dallas. William Timmons, the Washington lobbyist managing the convention, twice recommended that the former secretary of state be invited. But Deaver said no.

Besides demolishing the Democratic campaign issue that Ronald Reagan is the first president since Herbert Hoover not to sit down with a top Soviet leader, Andrei Gromyko's Friday visit to the White House also frustrates Walter Mondale's desire for an early first debate against the president.

James A. Johnson, Mondale campaign chairman and debate agent, had pressed hard for the first debate to be held before Oct. 1. But his canny White House counterpart, James A. Baker III, knew that Mondale would have to accept Reagan's plea for time to get ready for Gromyko. Result: The debate is now scheduled for the first weekend in October, probably Oct. 7.

That forces Mondale into a delay of his badly-needed counterattack against Reagan. With his other tactics failing so far, Mondale had hoped to turn the tide with a dramatic early victory.

Although maneuvering over his successor began months ago, James A. Baker III probably will have to stay on at least temporarily as White House chief of staff in a Reagan second term, thanks to a logjam in Cabinet posts.

Baker's interest in the top jobs at State, Defense, Treasury and even the CIA is met by the disinclination of George Shultz, Caspar Weinberger, Donald T. Regan and William Casey to give up those jobs. That leaves the Justice Department, but presidential counselor Edwin Meese III shows no sign of asking President Reagan to withdraw his nomination as attorney general.

Baker's lieutenants, while grumbling about Meese's refusal to drop out, believe the job could open if the Senate refused to confirm Meese. But if he is given a clean bill of health, as expected by independent counsel Jacob Stein, Meese's advisers see an excellent chance for him to win Senate confirmation — particularly on the heels of a possible Reagan election sweep.

President Reagan's failure scarcely to mention, much less praise, Sen. Charles H. Percy during a recent visit to Chicago may have signified more than what was thought to be a political lapse.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

What is a miracle?

Some would say that a miracle is an act which results from natural laws which we have not yet discovered, or natural laws with which we are at present familiar but are operating in unfamiliar combinations. Still others would say that a miracle is the result of a breakthrough of certain spiritual forces plunging into the stream of human life.

There are valid arguments to support these points of view. On balance it would seem, however, that miracles cannot be adequately explained in terms of physical law. Miracles have about them characteristics which bespeak a heavenly origin.

Look into your own life, inquire of believing friends, and you will come to the conclusion that many things have happened in your life and theirs which bear upon them the true mark of miracle.

—Art Buchwald—

Let Robots Have The Desks

When Gibbs first brought up the subject I thought he was kidding. But he was dead serious. "I have the answer to our education problem," he said.

"What's that?"
"We replace students with robots in our schools."

"Robots?"
"I got the idea from watching Walter Cronkite's TV program on robots replacing people in blue collar jobs. The robots' productivity was much higher than the human workers', and companies were saving millions in Social Security, medical benefits and pensions. Walter predicted by 1990 every factory in America would be robotized."

"How do you apply the principle to schools?"
"Statistics show educational standards are getting lower and lower. Students can't read or write and are getting dumber and dumber. So if they can't cut it, we'll enroll robots in their place."

"What would you teach the robots?"
"Artificial intelligence. We'll teach them the skills they need to replace the manpower this country so desperately needs."

He pulled out a blueprint. "Look, I've designed the perfect robot student. It doesn't watch television, listen to rock music, smoke grass, drink, and it never asks for a car when it becomes 16 years old. I've programmed it to do all its homework, and also keep its room clean."

"It looks pretty good," I admitted. "How does it do in math?"

"It can solve a math problem a million times faster than any human student. It has a built-in dictionary so it can't misspell a word, and a chip which keeps it from making any grammatical errors. With robots instead of live students, national test scores would go soaring, and we could once again take pride in the American school system."

"Do you think the school board would go for enrolling robots?"

"Once they see what robots can do in the classroom, the board members would have no choice. Robots don't eat, so the school district would no longer have to underwrite cafeteria costs. Robots don't fight, so they would no longer have a security problem. And robots can't get pregnant, so they won't need student counselors. But the big saving would be, since robots all look alike, you wouldn't have to bus them 20 miles from their home."

"Would you have live teachers instructing the robots?"

"At the beginning. But the beauty of robots is that you can teach them to teach other robots. Once you program them as 'Master Robots,' all a school would need is one system manager to monitor what was going on in the classrooms. When they see the savings that could be made in running a school, a board would be out of its mind not to replace young people with a robot student body."

"Adults would go for it if it meant lowering real estate taxes," I admitted. "What about athletics at the school? I can't see people coming out on Friday night to see robots playing football."

"I've thought about that. Each school would still maintain enough human students to maintain an excellent athletic program. Since the kids won't be able to compete intellectually with robots in the classroom, they could spend all their time on the practice field and we'll produce quality athletes, the likes of which this country has never seen."

"What do you do with the millions of live students who are not athletes?"

"They'll have to be retrained to do something else. It's a waste of money to try to educate them if robots are going to take all their jobs when the kids get out of school."

U.S. Math Scores Fall Below Foreigners

CHICAGO (AP) — Clear national goals for mathematics education might improve U.S. high school students' math ability, says an author of a study that found U.S. students scoring below the international average in math tests.

The Second International Mathematics Study of 21 countries found test scores of American eighth- and 12th-graders "fell below the international median in every area," said John Dossey, a professor at Illinois State University.

"In many cases they were close to the median, but always below it," said Dossey, who wrote the portion of a report dealing with U.S. high school seniors. The median is the point at which half those taking the test scored better, and half scored worse.

"If we had the luxury of more time for mathematics and had clearly established national goals for secondary math courses, I think our students are capable of better performances," Dossey said Sunday.

"But given the short exposure they have to many important concepts, and the lack of time devoted to mathematics ... I'm not altogether surprised," he said.

Preliminary results released in May showed U.S. 12th-grade students receive about 150 hours a year in math instruction, less than the average in other countries at the senior high school level.

The findings of the tests conducted during the 1981-82 school year were to be officially presented to math educators today through Wednesday at a mathematics instruction conference at the University of Illinois in Champaign.

The tests were given to 13,500 students in 237 12th-grade classrooms and 300 eighth-grade classrooms, chosen at random by the University of Illinois, which had the contract to conduct the study in the United States, Dossey said.

The students were tested in seven areas — including sets and relations, number systems, algebra, geometry, elementary functions in calculus, probability and statistics and finite mathematics.

The New York Times reported

Sunday that on the sets and relations test, U.S. students answered 59 percent of the questions correctly, compared with an international average of 62 percent. In number systems, U.S. students got 45 percent correct, compared with an average 50 percent; in algebra, 48 percent compared with 57 percent; in geometry, 37 percent compared with 42 percent; in calculus, 36 percent compared with 44 percent; in probability and statistics, 45 percent compared with 50 percent; and in finite mathematics, 36 percent compared with an estimated average of 44 percent.

U.S. 12th-graders enrolled in calculus courses had the best performance among the nation's students, Dossey said. But the students enrolled in these courses represented only about 2 percent of the nation's 12th-graders.

"Calculus students were always above the median, but never over the 75th percentile," Dossey said. "In elementary functions of calculus, they came close to the 75th percentile, which was still disappointing, since that's what they study."

Among 12th-graders not taking calculus, the U.S. scores all fell between the 25th and 50th percentiles, except in algebra, where they fell below the 25th percentile.

At the eighth-grade level, U.S.

students performed at the median in arithmetic, algebra and statistics but lower in geometry. And they slipped below the 25th percentile in measurement, Dossey said.

He said most U.S. students had studied only 67 percent of the items on the tests, while many others had studied 75 percent of the items.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ62 ♥AQ5 ♦76 ♣AQJ
What is your opening bid?
A.—If you opened two spades, you could get into trouble. You have only 21 HCP and a five-loser hand, and that is too weak for a demand bid. We would not fault you greatly if you opened two no trump, but we prefer a bid of one spade. If partner can't respond voluntarily, you probably are not missing a game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q6 ♥Q93 ♦10982 ♣9765
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—While you can pass this auction if you have a trickless hand, that does not apply here. You must upgrade the queen of spades to a sure trick, and the queen of hearts might prove useful, too. Partner has announced at least a six-card spade suit, so you have more than adequate support. Bid four spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J6 ♥J10 ♦AQ876 ♣A972
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner surely has six hearts and four spades, and his reverse shows a good hand. Therefore, you are in the slam zone. Partner knows this from your first two bids, so there is no need for dramatic action from you. Four hearts now is more than adequate. The next move must come from him.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ8 ♥8 ♦A98 ♣AK853
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Dble Pass 1 ♦
Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—There is a possibility that, with a terrible hand, partner would be forced to respond one spade on a three-card suit. But don't let that possibility deter you from making your natural bid. With your hand, you want to be in game, and the way to get there is to bid four spades. Don't make the mistake of raising to three spades — that is only invitational and partner is unlikely to know what he needs to accept.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ ♥K103 ♦AKJ76 ♣Q98
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You have already suggested to partner that you would like to play the hand at three no trump, and he has declined the invitation, so why repeat the message? Partner's hand is either unsuited to no trump, or he is interested in more than game. In either case, he most certainly would want to hear about your support for his suit. Bid three hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A76 ♥AQJ987 ♦6 ♣853
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♥ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
4 ♥ Pass 5 ♥ Pass
What action do you take?
A.—From the auction, it would seem that you have the wrong ace. Partner has gone out of his way to cue-bid the enemy suit and then diamonds before supporting hearts at a level over game. It seems he lacks club control, and so do you. Pass.

Mondale Portrays Reagan As 'Scary'

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is seeking to limit defections of Democratic voters to President Reagan by forecasting a "scary, intolerant and dangerous future" under a second Reagan administration.

Facing polls showing substantial numbers of Democrats are ready to vote for Reagan, Mondale said Sunday the president has been doing a "cynical rewrite of history" by praising past Democratic heroes like John F. Kennedy, Harry S. Truman and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Mr. Reagan wants Democrats to cross the line and become Republicans," Mondale said in his weekly paid radio address. "Today I am asking Americans, especially young Americans, to take a look at the Republican home they are being sold, and the platform it's built on."

Mondale was traveling today to Reagan territory in Texas, where 29 of the 270 electoral college votes needed to win the presidency will be contested Nov. 6, the third largest total in the nation.

A recent ABC News-Washington Post poll showed the president holds a 30 percentage point lead in Texas, the state where the Republican National Convention was held last month. Stops were planned for Mondale in Texarkana and Houston.

Reagan was in New York today to address the United Nations General Assembly, after attending a reception late Sunday. Also there was Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who is scheduled to meet Thursday with Mondale and Friday with Reagan.

Vice President George Bush was heading to Illinois today on the first leg of a four-day trip through the Midwest. Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning in New York and Baltimore.

In Washington on Sunday, Monday said that under a second Reagan administration, women would be paid less than men for the same work, the "illegal war in Nicaragua" would be heated up, politicians would write prayers for children, and Moral Majority leader the Rev. Jerry Falwell would pick Supreme Court nominees.

"That's a scary, intolerant and dangerous future," he said in a direct appeal to Democrats broadcast on network radio. "If you cross over to Dallas Republicans, that's what you get. You don't just get the balloons, the pep rallies and the happy talk. You get Falwell, Nicaragua and Star Wars too."

Mondale recalled that at the Republican convention last month in Dallas, "You didn't hear much praise of (Richard M. ) Nixon, (Herbert) Hoover, or even (Dwight D.) Eisenhower. Instead, they quoted FDR, Eleanor Roosevelt, Truman, (Sen. Henry) Scoop

Jackson and even my friend Hubert Humphrey."

"What a cynical rewrite of history that is," he said. "Can you imagine Roosevelt giving tax breaks to millionaires and socking it to working people ... Can you imagine Truman letting 300 Marines die in Lebanon, and then passing the buck? Can you imagine Jack Kennedy trying to cut Social Security? Can you imagine Lyndon Johnson trashing the civil rights laws and denying the existence of hunger?"

At a news conference, Mondale said the president has isolated himself in a "question-free zone" that allows his campaign managers to prevent any real dialogue between the candidates.

But Mondale predicted that Reagan's lead would fall as the election approached and the president was forced to respond to voters' questions about the path of his second four years in office.

Also on Sunday, Mondale won the endorsement of the National Women's Political Caucus, which had never before backed a presidential candidate in its 13-year history.

Kathy Wilson, a Republican who chairs the conference, said: "Under Ronald Reagan's leadership, we've been deserted and double crossed. Our Republicans who have been active in the party for years have been forced to choose between their commitment to women's rights and their commitment to party. That is simply no choice."

And she added: "When it comes to women, Walter Mondale stands tall. Ronald Reagan develops back problems."

About 77,000, or 40 percent, of the caucus' members are Republicans, Ms. Wilson said.

At the news conference, Mondale also said the bombing at the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut on Thursday was "a very severe breach of essential security on the part of this administration." Following similar attacks over the last year, Mondale said recommendations for improving security were either ignored or delayed.

"Who is in charge? Apparently no one ... There is an absence of strong presidential leadership," he said.

Reagan denied the suicide terrorist to get near the embassy. "About 75 percent of all the work that had to be done had been completed," the president told reporters.

"Anybody that's ever had their kitchen done over knows it never gets done as soon as you wish it would," said Reagan.

47 Farmers Got Million Each In PIK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-seven farmers each received commodities and crop support payments worth more than $1 million in exchange for idling their fields last year, the Agriculture Department says.

They were among about 12,000 farmers who each got government-owned commodities and supports worth more than $100,000 for not growing crops under the Reagan administration's payment-in-kind program, the department said.

Under PIK, farmers were given free surplus commodities for taking land out of production. Slightly more than 73 million acres were idled in 1983 as a result, the department said as part of its first national accounting of the program.

Although exact figures have not been disclosed, the total value of PIK benefits to farmers may reach nearly $10 billion at recent market prices for the commodities — wheat, corn, cotton, sorghum and rice.

The Agriculture Department is preparing a detailed accounting of the PIK program, and preliminary figures show 47 of the program's 827,511 participants received commodities and crop support payments totaling more than $1 million. Those producers idled slightly more than 241,000 acres.

The information does not specify the amount of individual payments, but indicates the number of recipients nationwide by various ranges of payments.

A total of 185 producers received payments between $500,000 and $1 million. And 2,153 others reaped benefits ranging from $200,000 to $500,000. A total of 9,911 producers received from $100,000 to $200,000.

Payments from $55,000 to $100,000 were made to 25,256 farmers. Another 6,216 producers received payments between $50,000 and $55,000.

In all, about 5.3 percent, or 43,700, of the farmers who participated in the PIK program received payments exceeding $50,000.

Lawmakers Entering Final Segment Of 99th Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, beginning what leaders hope will be the last two weeks of this year's session, is trying to clear away measures that would allow the government to keep spending and borrowing until the 99th Congress convenes early next year.

A major roadblock in the way of a planned adjournment by Oct. 5 was removed last week when House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., agreed on the outlines of a Pentagon budget of $292.9 billion.

Included in the settlement of a summer-long standoff between the House and Senate was agreement to postpone further deployment of the MX nuclear missile, pending two additional votes on the controversial weapon by each chamber next April.

The deal on military spending clears the way for Congress to finish work on a budget blueprint for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. The lawmakers also must approve a stopgap measure, called a continuing resolution, to finance government operations which have not yet received their regular annual appropriation.

Only four of the 13 annual money bills have been signed into law, making it necessary to pass the stopgap bill, which the House will consider on Tuesday.

Action on the measure bogged down last week when legislators seeking to pass pet projects they have been unable to otherwise enact jumped on the emergency bill as an attractive vehicle for those items. Despite an implied veto threat from the administration, the House voted to block action to remove such extraneous items from the bill.

Meanwhile, the Treasury Department has said the government's $1.573 trillion line of credit will be reached by the end of the week, meaning that Congress must pass another increase in the national debt limit.

Without an increase in the government's borrowing authority, sales of government securities could be disrupted and a long-term lapse in raising the limit could create problems for the government in meeting its obligations.

Congress last raised the national debt ceiling on June 29, when it was raised by $53 billion.

Also pending is work on a compromise version of a comprehensive immigration control bill.

House and Senate negotiators face one last hurdle before sending the measure back to their respective chambers for final approval.

The conferees have already hammered out the two main elements of the legislation — stiff sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, and amnesty for those who arrived before Jan. 1, 1981, and have no criminal record.

They are scheduled to vote today on a proposal by Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., that forbids employers from discriminating against U.S. citizens or legalized aliens because of their national origin or status as aliens.

O'Neill said Friday that he would demand "an absolute assurance" that President Reagan will sign the bill before he would bring it to the floor.

U.S. Hints At New Peace Offensive

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration appears poised for a new round of diplomacy aimed at bringing peace to Lebanon in response to an Israeli plea for assistance in pulling its troops out. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Sunday in New York that although the administration has left Lebanon alone since the collapse of the U.S.-brokered 1983 troop withdrawal agreement, the time might be right for another try. "We always want to be helpful," Shultz said. "You can be helpful if all the parties want you to be." Shultz said Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy was in Damascus on Sunday for talks with Syrian leaders. It was Syria that torpedoed the 1983 accord. But Shultz hinted that in addition to direct talks with Syria, the United States might also make an approach through the Soviet Union, which has close ties with Syria. Shultz will meet here with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Wednesday. Gromyko will go to Washington for a meeting with President Reagan on Friday. Shultz said the United States would welcome "a constructive role" by the Soviet Union. "We are always glad to have a constructive role played by anybody," Shultz said. "I think the Middle East is a subject that is very important to both countries." A senior White House official said the visit of Assistant Secretary Murphy to the Middle East was planned even before the bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut last week. "The potential for us to assist is there," he said.

Murphy was expected to visit other Middle East capitals after his stops in Beirut and Damascus. Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who was prime minister in the previous Israeli government, has proposed the new American role. He has said he wants Washington to arrange with Syria for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon. Israel is dropping its previous demand that Syrian troops withdraw at the same time, but it still wants an understanding with Syria that Palestinian guerrillas will be barred from moving into the south when Israeli forces leave. Shamir told reporters here Sunday night that Israel "will not ask for a military presence of the United States, but only for a diplomatic activity and a diplomatic activity is not dangerous..." Meanwhile, Reagan told reporters that he didn't think there was any negligence was involved in the terrorist bombing of the embassy annex in East Beirut, even though only about 75 percent of the security measures had been completed. "We moved into that building because it represented more safety than the one we were in," he said. While he said some security work still needed to be done. "Anyone that has ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would." The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Jeane Kirkpatrick, said on ABC-TV Sunday that she wouldn't rule out retaliation for the embassy bombing because "I think it is perfectly clear that we cannot continue to accept such attacks on Americans and American people." She said it is generally known who carried out the attack but "we have to know which Lebanese and Syrians and Iranians and Libyans" before retaliation is possible. Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said if reprisals are planned, the United States should "do it swiftly, surely and talk about it afterward."

Mexico Braces For Hurricane

MEXICO CITY (AP) — After meandering off Mexico's Pacific coast for a week, Hurricane Norbert was reported heading today toward the Baja California peninsula. Meteorologists described the storm as "big and ugly" and warned ships and planes to use caution while navigating in the area. "If it keeps on its present course it may brush the tip of Baja California and then run parallel to the peninsula," National Weather Bureau meteorologist Martin Leon said Sunday night. Norbert, which began as a tropical depression Sept. 14, became a full-fledged hurricane on Sept. 17, moving along an erratic course between Baja California peninsula and the Mexican mainland. "It is definitely big and ugly and has a very high intensity," said Leon. He said that after keeping on a northeasterly course all morning Sunday, Norbert suddenly veered in the afternoon, moving steadily northwest at 6 mph. Leon said Norbert, at 8 p.m. EDT

Sunday, was about 263 miles southeast of San Jose de los Cabos in the state of Baja California Sur, packing sustained winds of 125 mph, with gusts of up to 144 mph. In Manzanatlan, Ignacio India, duty operator at the government's Maritime Radio Station, said repeated bulletins "warned shipping to exercise extreme caution" in the area along the coasts of Baja California and a stretch between Jalisco state and Sinaloa state.

The only real 'special' is quiet dignity.

There's no known way you can make decisions about what's going to happen to you after you've passed away. Which explains the need for 'pre-need' decisions about what you want for yourself and your family. But, these matters are seldom discussed. And most people are so uninformed about what's available and what transpires, that it's difficult for them to make a well-advised decision. So, it's smart to find out just a little about the subject; the better — and the easier — to suit your wants and needs when the time comes. Is a bargain a bargain? Chances are, you'll soon be approached by people selling 'pre-need' cemetery plots. And as professionals with 26 years in these matters, we at S.G. Wilkerson & Son's Pinewood Memorial Park have nothing at all against buying 'pre-need' grave sites. In fact, it's a good idea. But in order to make an informed decision, find out if a bargain's a bargain. Other ads in this series will explain the meaning of, and requirements for, 'Perpetual Care' cemeteries. But, there are other things to consider. For example, a 'pre-need' grave site might be a good idea. But we at Pinewood Memorial Park can think of no really good way to store a 'pre-need' vault over the years. And what about 'pre-need' markers? Is everything included? Or will there be added costs? It may well be that Pinewood Memorial Park, maintained carefully by the Wilkerson family for more than 25 years, costs less, not more, than unknown quantities or "package deals." Make an informed decision. We at Pinewood Memorial Park would like to explain more. Because, as professionals, we'd like for you and your family to make an informed decision about these matters. And we won't pressure you to deal with us. We've been in this business for many, many years. And we'll be in it for many more. We'll respect your decision. But, if you have questions, we'd like to answer them.

Controllers Unable To Talk Down Plane

COLLEYVILLE, Texas (AP) — Air traffic controllers spent about 10 minutes relaying instructions to a woman forced to pilot an airplane after her husband fainted at the controls, but she lost control and the plane crashed, killing the couple, authorities said.

Icey Matthews, 62, and her husband, Dr. David Matthews, 59, of Sherman died in the crash Saturday of the single-engine Cessna 210, officials said.

"She said her husband had fainted and that she didn't know how to fly the plane," said one Federal Aviation Administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified by name.

Several nearby airports turned up their lights to help guide the woman, he said.

"They talked to her for about 10 minutes and tried to talk her down, but she couldn't do it," the official said.

Matthews' son, Daniel, said his father, an experienced pilot, might have been turning the plane around to return to Addison Airport, from which the couple had taken off, when he lost consciousness.

"Apparently my father had taken off, recognized the weather trouble and began turning around when he lost consciousness and my mother was left to fly the plane," Matthews said. "My mother had briefly taken a couple of lessons about three years ago, so she would have had a general feel for the plane, but she had no real flying ability and no air time."

The plane crashed in a field just west of Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Frank Roth, an air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, said weather conditions were extremely poor at the time of the crash, with 300-foot visibility, heavy fog and drizzle. He said nothing appeared to be mechanically wrong with the plane.

Steelworkers Hold Convention

CLEVELAND (AP) — Facing its worst membership decline since the Great Depression, the United Steelworkers gathered for a constitutional convention pledging support for Walter F. Mondale and blaming President Reagan for the ailing state of America's steel industry.

"The Reagan years have been desperate years," USW President Lynn Williams said Sunday as delegates of the 720,000-member union prepared to meet today. "We'll do everything we can to bring about the Democratic victory."

"There's been a depression ... created deliberately by the Republican administration," Williams, the first Canadian to head the union, said. "The United States is on the edge of ceasing to be a major manufacturing power and is slipping ... The price our members have paid for that is staggering."

The union, with roughly half the members it had in the early 1970s, is meeting in Cleveland for the first time since the organization was founded here in 1942. Its endorsed candidate, Mondale, is scheduled to address an estimated 3,000 delegates Wednesday morning.

The union has criticized Reagan's plans to stem imports of cheap steel by negotiating voluntary quotas with foreign producers. Last week, Reagan refused to set mandatory quotas despite the U.S. International Trade Commission's recommendation that quotas and tariffs be placed on 70 percent of all steel imports.

Williams has called Reagan's plan an amalgam of "weak and uncertain promises" and said he is "terribly concerned" that they may evaporate after the election.

More than 2,000 resolutions have been submitted for consideration at the weeklong convention, said union spokesman Gary Hubbard. Some reflect the tensions created by hard times.

The proposal stems from a bitter presidential election in March in which Canadian and U.S. members selected Williams.

America's newspapers trace their origin to a modest little publication called "Publick Occurrences." Benjamin Harris of Boston published that four-page "newspaper" on September 25, 1690. It consisted of three pages of print and one page for readers' notes. The next day, the British colonial government banned the newspaper for violating a law requiring all publications to be licensed. The next colonial newspaper was published 14 years later.

Japanese Hold Fuel Lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese automakers are maintaining their newly acquired reputation for turning out the most miserly of the gas misers, but, for the first time, Detroit also has moved ahead of Germany in America's fuel economy rankings.

A two-seater Honda Civic captured the Environmental Protection Agency's top mileage rating for the second year in a row, followed by the Japanese-made Chevrolet Sprint and a diesel engine Nissan Sentra among the 1985 models coming out this fall.

But capturing fourth and fifth place ahead of a Volkswagen, for the first time since EPA began publishing the ratings in 1973, are American-made Fords and Chevrolets. Both those American models, however, are powered by diesel engines produced abroad.

The gasoline-fueled Honda Civic CRX-HF with a 1.5 liter engine recorded 49 miles per gallon in EPA's city driving test and 54 miles per gallon on its highway tests.

Last year, the two-seater Honda Civic with a 1.3 liter engine ranked first at 51 miles per gallon. But the two ratings cannot be compared directly because EPA is deflating the laboratory results for the first time this year to better reflect what a motorist can expect in real-world driving.

"Consumers wanted more credible mileage figures and display of both a city and highway number," said EPA spokeswoman Martha Casey.

So, in addition to deflating the laboratory results by 10 percent for city driving and 22 percent for highway use, the agency also is returning to publishing both figures instead of combining them, as it has done since 1979.

The labels, required on every new automobile, also have been redesigned to make them more readable. That new design, however, is optional this year and will not be required until the 1986 models come out. Dealers also are required to make free guides comparing models with one another available in their showrooms.

The three-cylinder Chevrolet Sprint, a "minicompact" that also is marketed as the Pontiac Firefly, ranked second behind the Honda coupe, yielding 47 mpg in the city and 53 mpg on the highway. Though marketed under American nameplates, the gasoline-powered car is a Suzuki SA310 produced in Japan.

The third-place Nissan Sentra diesel got 45 mpg in city driving and 50 mpg on the highway.

That was just slightly ahead of the most efficient American-made car, the Ford Escort diesel and its sister, the Mercury Lynx, at 43 mpg city and 52 mpg highway. The engines for both cars are made in Japan by Mazda.

In fifth place was Chevrolet's Chevette diesel, also sold as the Pontiac T1000, at 39 mpg city and 47 mpg highway.

The Volkswagen diesel, being marketed for the first time this year as a "Golf" instead of the Rabbit, continued its fall from fourth place last year and first in 1983 to eighth in 1985, behind Toyota's diesel Corolla and Honda's four-seat Civic models.

For those auto aficionados whom the price of gasoline or diesel fuel is no problem, six Rolls Royce, two Jaguar and two Mercedes Benz models can out-guzzle any other new cars on the road.

Any of the Rolls, at 8 and 9 mpg in the city, will mount up an annual fuel cost of $2,083 based on driving 15,000 miles per year and a gasoline price of $1.18 per gallon. To go the same distance in a two-seater Honda costs $368.

Meanwhile, General Motors Corp. extended its 1984-model production run for some models to make an extra 225,000 small cars and delay the introduction of 1985 versions of those models in order to boost its '84 mileage figures.

Both GM and Ford failed to meet the 1984 government standard of 27.0 mpg for their fleets and could face

The Best And Worst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the best and the worst cars for mileage among 1985 models as reported by the Environmental Protection Agency on Sunday:

This year the agency is, for the first time, deflating its city mileage ratings by 10 percent and its highway ratings by 22 percent to better reflect actual driving experience.

The rankings below are by city rating, with the highway rating used to break ties. The fuel cost is based on 15,000 miles of driving annually, with 8,250 miles in the city and 6,750 miles on the highway, and a cost of $1.25 per gallon for gasoline and $1.20 for diesel fuel.

Republicans Say Voter Registration Increase Will Help GOP Candidates

By The Associated Press

North Carolina GOP leaders say more Republicans are being registered than Democrats and predict picking up as many as five congressional seats on Nov. 6, but Democrats say prospects are good to maintain their 9-2 majority in the U.S. House.

As of April 9, of 2,961,719 registered voters, 2,137,005, or 72 percent, were Democrats and 704,301, or 23 percent, were Republicans, state Election Board records show. About 4 percent were unaffiliated and the rest were Libertarians or Socialist Workers.

"I think it substantiates what ... polls are showing: that there is a very real trend toward Ronald Reagan and the Republican Party," said David Flaherty, chairman of the state Republican Party. "It's not because of any organized effort. People are doing this on their own."

David Price, chairman of the Democratic Party, agreed there "has been much activity" among Republicans but added, "How someone registers is not a foolproof predictor of how they will vote."

Flaherty said the November elections should improve Republican showings because of the coattail effect of the popularity of President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms. He said in the 1982 congressional elections, where the GOP lost two seats, there were no major races.

"There was no drum major out there pulling them to the polls," Flaherty said.

But Price said the coattail effect would not be as strong as it has been in the past.

"I think all this talk about long and strong coattails is reckless," he said.

Price said that in 1980, when Republicans picked up 33 House seats nationwide, voters in 147 congressional districts voted for one party in the presidential election and the other in congressional races. In most cases, he said, the districts went for Reagan in the presidential race and a Democrat for Congress.

Even in the Richard Nixon landslide of 1972,

Republicans picked up only 12 House seats while losing two in the U.S. Senate.

Price added that while Reagan is personally popular in North Carolina, "many of his policies are very unpopular."

Flaherty, however, said Bill Cobey will give incumbent Democrat Ike Andrews a strong challenge in the 4th District.

"Cobey was the number one challenger in the country" in 1982, Flaherty said. Andrews beat Cobey by about 5,000 votes two years ago.

Flaherty also said strong GOP showings will be seen in the 5th, 6th, 8th and 11th districts. Stuart Epperson opposes Democrat Steve Neal's reelection in the 5th, while Robin Britt takes on Democratic incumbent Robin Britt in the 6th, which Flaherty said "should be a Republican district" with the removal of Rockingham County through redistricting.

Harris D. Blake faces Democratic Rep. Bill Hefner in the 8th while Republican William Hendon and incumbent James McClure Clarke are in a rematch in the 11th.

Sam Ervin Still Going Strong At 88

By TOM MINEHART

Associated Press Writer

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Former Sen. Sam J. Ervin, who turns 88 on Sept. 27, walks with a cane. Cancer has thinned the white forelock, jowly countenance and robust bulk that presided over the Senate Watergate Committee 10 years ago, when Richard Nixon quit the Presidency in disgrace.

But when he talks about the Constitution and the civil liberties it protects, Ervin's blue-gray eyes show the same flashes of indignation and twinkles of merriment they did during the Watergate hearings. His speech rumbles forth with the same recall of quotation and anecdote and his famous eyebrows punctuate points with the same wild bounce.

Ervin said in an interview at his Morganton home that the Constitution faces threats from misguided proponents of the Equal Rights Amendment, civil rights and affirmative action as well as politicians.

Ervin pounds the desk in his book-lined study when asked to name the greatest threat to the Constitution today: "Reagan's efforts to exploit religion for political purposes."

Ervin said President Reagan's efforts to restore prayer to public schools, provide tuition tax credits for parents of parochial school students and send an ambassador to the Vatican all violate the Constitution's provisions against establishing an official state religion.

When parents of private school students pay less in taxes, the burden falls on everyone else, he said.

"And I don't think there can be any voluntary prayer in the schools as long as the prayer is authorized by public officials," he said.

Ervin fought a constitutional amendment permitting school prayer as a senator in 1966.

"I prayed that it would go way off somewhere and never come back to bother the Senate," he smiles.

"Well, the Bible says that the fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. My prayer was not answered. ... I knew I prayed fervently ... so I decided I wasn't righteous."

"There have always been people in society who wanted to regulate other people's beliefs," he said. "They are in favor of freedom of religion for themselves but are opposed to freedom of religion for everybody who disagrees with them ..."

"I was a Southern senator from the so-called Bible Belt," said Ervin, a Presbyterian. "I've always felt that faith in God is the most potent force in the universe ... But it's a man's individual faith, and not something prescribed by government."

Ervin also blasted a Supreme Court ruling allowing evidence obtained in illegal searches to be introduced in court if police reasonably believed they had a valid search warrant.

"Instead of depending on the words of the Constitution, we are to be ruled by the ignorance of a law enforcement officer and the courts," he said.

Ervin scoffs at people who say Nixon committed no crimes that previous presidents haven't committed.

"I challenge anybody in the United States to tell me of any time in history, where with the apparent approval of the White House, they spent between $300,000 and $400,000 in campaign funds to pay hush money to burglars to keep them from testifying," he said.

During his Senate career from 1954 to 1974, Ervin voted against nearly every piece of civil rights legislation that was introduced and said most of it "made a shambles of the Constitution."

Farm Scene

By Sam Uzzell
Agricultural Extension Agent

The first of September is an important time of year for pecan growers. The worst pest of pecans, the pecan weevil, becomes somewhat more numerous at this time of year.

The pecan weevil is the insect that bores a hole in the end of the pecan after it has consumed the kernel. This insect can be damaging to the commercial pecan grower as well as the homeowner with one or two trees.

The pecan weevil is seen more often as a white, legless grub within the pecan. This is an immature stage; it will become a 3/8 inch long brown adult weevil with a beak that is longer than its body.

Two kinds of nut damage occur. One is the feeding of the grub inside the kernel, and the other type of damage is due to the falling of nuts that have been fed upon. The premature dropping of pecans from the tree is easily recognized by the shuck still adhering to the pecan, kernels destroyed and/or an exit hole in the nut.

Adult weevils appear to be active from July through September. They can be collected by jarring trees and/or limbs beginning around mid-August. They can be killed by crushing or dropping them into kerosene.

Another method of control involves the use of an insecticide and proper timing. The commonly available and safe insecticides carbaryl (Sevin), diazinon (Spectracide) and malathion can be used. Whatever insecticide is chosen, it should be sprayed on the ground beneath the tree, the lower trunk and lower limbs if they can be reached. It is most important that spraying be done after a good rainfall breaks an extended dry spell. The reason for spraying at this time is because large numbers of weevil adults emerge from the soil, and an insecticide sprayed just after the rain can be quite effective.

Weevils emerge from the soil when they've undergone transformation from the legless grub to the adult snout beetle. They spend one or two years beneath the soil surface after the grub has chewed its way out of the fallen pecan and gone into the ground.

The control of this pecan pest requires a knowledge of its life cycle. Successful pecan production also requires adequate and regular yearly fertilization, pruning, clean cultivation practices and other cultural considerations.

For additional information on pecan culture, contact the local Agricultural Extension office.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in a session marked by strength in auto issues. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.19 to 1,207.93 in the first half hour. But declines took a 3-2 lead over advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Wall Street generally viewed the tentative contract agreement reached late last week between General Motors and the United Auto Workers union as favorable for GM and the industry. The auto group also was the subject of an upbeat appraisal in a Wall Street Journal article. GM shares climbed 3/8 to 76 3/4; Chrysler 1/8 to 30 1/4, and American Motors 1/8 to 4 1/8.

The overall market remained subdued, however, following a sharp drop in the dollar Friday. Analysts noted fears that weakness in the dollar, if it were to continue, might increase inflationary pressures in this country and pose problems for the credit markets by dampening foreign demand for U.S. securities. On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 14.80 to 1,201.74. Declines outpaced advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 120.64 million shares, against 92.03 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index fell 84 to 95.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .60 at 215.65.

IMF Leader Urges U.S. To Cut Deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the International Monetary Fund urged the United States today to cut its budget deficits to relieve pressure on interest rates and ensure a lasting economic recovery. Jacques de Larosiere, at the opening session of the 39th annual meetings of the IMF and the World Bank, said in a prepared text that high interest rates haven't hurt the rebound in the world economy so far. But, he warned, "high interest rates undermine its long-term sustainability and compound the problems of heavily indebted developing countries." He said the way to relieve pressure on interest rates was to reduce the budget red ink and not to pump up the supply of money. The U.S. deficit is expected to run about $175 billion in the fiscal year that ends next Sunday. "This involves action both to bring down fiscal deficits and to curb the growth of public expenditures," he said. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who was scheduled to address the group late in the day, predicted over the weekend that lower interest rates are ahead. De Larosiere also urged monetary officials to guard against a renewed outbreak of high inflation. He noted inflation rates were sharply under their high levels of just a few years ago but said they were still ahead of the 1960s. "The fight against inflation is not yet over," he said. Striking a similar chord was World Bank president A.W. Clausen. Clausen, in prepared remarks to the opening session of the meetings, said the worst of the debt crisis may be over but that many nations still are suffering severely under the burden of their enormous foreign loans. "The dead hand of pervasive and persistent poverty still smothers the hopes of millions upon millions of our fellow human beings," he said. "Their appalling condition," he went on, "is intolerable to all of us on this earth." He made a special pitch for the nations of sub-Saharan Africa, stricken not only by the world recession but also by a severe drought. "The continuing fall in per capita incomes in many of these nations demands firm and immediate action on the part of all involved to reverse the decline," he said. Officials of the World Bank on Sunday outlined a special program the agency has put together to try to help out the African nations. Unlike the IMF, the World Bank provides medium- and long-term assistance for developing nations.

Seven Charged With Possession

Seven men were arrested on marijuana possession charges by Greenville police in connection with two separate incidents Saturday. Officer P.W. Worthington said Todd Jay Woolard, 18, of Route 4, Washington, Johnny Samuel Martin, 19, of Route 2, Washington, Wesley Roscoe Davenport, 19, of Route 1, Plymouth, and Vance Roy Davenport, 19, of Route 2, Washington, were charged with possession of marijuana about 1 a.m. Worthington said a small amount of marijuana was found in a car, parked in a lot at the intersection of Third and Cotanche streets, that was occupied by the four men. Officer T.G. Shane said Thomas Earl Harris, 39, of 29 Quail Hollow Trailer Park, John Whitaker, 23, of Bethel, and Luther Whitehurst, 23, of Bethel, were arrested on marijuana possession charges about 10:30 p.m. According to Shane, the three were charged after a small amount of marijuana was found in their possession as they stood in an alley in the 400 block of Cotanche Street. Shane reported that in addition to the drug charge, Whitehurst was charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?
Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Take your case one step further and go before a Social Security Administrative Law Judge for a hearing with a qualified representative to present your case. Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and your representative will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

If you have a hearing requested or scheduled before an Administrative Law Judge, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

Kemp Leads Ram Victory In Premier

By The Associated Press
Quarterback Jeff Kemp, who had never started a game in the National Football League, was getting a bit anxious. So was quarterback Matt Cavanaugh, who was making his first start in two years.

The Los Angeles Rams, with Kemp at the controls, kept the ball on the ground their first two possessions Sunday.

"I was ready to throw, but I wasn't going to complain," Kemp said after he filled in for injured Vince Ferragamo and came up with a steady performance that included a touchdown pass in a 24-14 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Cavanaugh, replacing the injured Joe Montana, threw three touchdown passes as the San Francisco 49ers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 21-9.

"I was nervous at the start of the game," Cavanaugh said. "I put pressure on myself because I'm following a guy like Joe Montana, who doesn't make mistakes."

In other NFL games, Washington downed New England 26-10, Atlanta routed Houston 42-10, Cleveland halted Pittsburgh 20-10, New Orleans topped St. Louis 34-24, the New York Jets nipped Buffalo 28-26 and Minnesota edged Detroit 29-28.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

MONDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 24, 1984

Also, Miami blasted Indianapolis 44-7, the New York Giants defeated Tampa Bay 17-14, Dallas tripped Green Bay 20-6, Denver blanked Kansas City 21-0 and Seattle crunched Chicago 38-9.

The San Diego Chargers visit the Los Angeles Raiders tonight.

Kemp, a fourth-year pro, helped guide the error-prone Rams over the 0-4 Bengals. Eric Dickerson, who scored the Rams' first touchdown and gained 89 yards before leaving the game with a wrist injury in the fourth quarter, lost three fumbles inside the Cincinnati 20 in the second half.

Kemp connected with Olympic gold medal sprinter Ron Brown on a 52-yard TD pass to give the visiting Rams a 14-7 lead in the third quarter.

"I thought I played a pretty good game," said Kemp, who completed 13 of 23 passes for 205 yards without an interception. "A few times, I was little impatient and threw the ball when I wasn't quite set up."

Raved Rams Coach John Robinson: "Jeff Kemp played an absolutely great game. He did what we asked him to. He really didn't make any mistakes that I know of."

"Jeff hasn't had that many opportunities, and I doubt if there was anybody in the world that thought he was going to come in and do what he did, at least outside of our group."

Ken Anderson threw a 10-yard scoring pass to Cris Collinsworth to pull the Bengals within 17-14 with 1:49 left in the game, but Mike Guman scooped up an ensuing on-side kick and returned it 43 yards for a clinching touchdown.

Cavanaugh, in his seventh pro season, made up for the time he has spent as a reserve.

He hit Roger Craig on a 35-yard scoring pass in the first quarter, teamed with Freddie Solomon for a 2-yard TD with 12 seconds left in the second quarter and threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Clark in the fourth period.

"I'm happy, elated and relaxed," said Cavanaugh, 17 of 34 for 252 yards and no interceptions during the victory in Philadelphia. "I feel real good and comfortable about the way I played."

The 49ers and Miami are the only 4-0 teams in the NFL. The Raiders are 3-0.

Dolphins 44, Colts 7

Miami's Dan Marino, the NFL's top-rated quarterback, upped his season TD pass total to 12 with scoring strikes of 80 and 5 yards to Mark Duper.

Pete Johnson, acquired this week by the Dolphins because of a fullback shortage, ran 1 yard for a score and Woody Bennett, another fullback, ran for two short touchdowns to help roll the visiting Colts.

Seahawks 38, Bears 9

Chicago's Walter Payton passed Franco Harris to become No. 2 on the all-time rushing list, but it was Seattle's Harris who played on the winning team. Payton went into the game trailing Harris by 34 yards and gained 116 on 24 carries. Harris was held to 23 yards on 13 carries. Payton now has gained 12,091 career yards and he trails only Jim Brown's 12,312.

Quarterback Dave Krieg routed the Seahawks in the third quarter, running 3 yards for one score and passing 55 yards to Eric Lane for another, in handing the Bears their first loss.

Browns 20, Steelers 10

Paul McDonald passed for two touchdowns and 222 yards in the second half to help Cleveland win its first game of the season. The Browns trailed 7-0 at halftime after Steeler defensive back Sam Washington returned an interception for a touchdown.

Jets 28, Bills 26

Pat Ryan teamed with Wesley Walker on TD passes of 12, 44 and 35 yards as the Jets held off the Bills.

Giants 17, Bucs 14

Phil Simms threw touchdown passes and linebacker Lawrence Taylor recorded four sacks in the Giants' triumph over Tampa Bay.

Redskins 26, Patriots 10

John Riggins ran for 140 yards and his 100th career touchdown in Washington's victory. The Redskins ground out 235 yards rushing against the Patriots, who had allowed just 205 rushing yards in their first three games.

Mark Moseley added field goals of 19, 42, 22 and 27 yards for Washington.

Cowboys 20, Packers 6

Everson Walls had two of Dallas' four interceptions and the Cowboys sacked Packer quarterbacks six times. Still, Dallas did not put away Green Bay until Tony Dorsett scooted 7 yards for a touchdown with 46 seconds remaining.

Vikings 29, Lions 28

Jan Stenerud booted field goals from 35, 32, 37, 34 and 19 yards and Minnesota recovered three second-half fumbles as the Vikings stopped the Lions. Detroit quarterback Gary Danielson threw four touchdown passes, three to Leonard Thompson, in a losing effort.

Broncos 21, Chiefs 0

Sammy Winder rushed for 139 yards a second-quarter touchdown to key the offense while cornerback Mike Harden returned an interception 45 yards for another score to highlight the Broncos' strong defense as Denver beat the Chiefs.

McEnroe Sets High Pro Tennis Standard

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In 20 years, maybe 50 years, John McEnroe says, a far superior tennis player will come along.

For the moment, though, McEnroe says he is the standard against whom all others are measured. And if some would argue that Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors, Rod Laver, Don Budge, Fred Perry or Bill Tilden at their prime were on the same level, McEnroe would respond, "aw, phooey."

McEnroe has reached the stage in his career at age 25 when there are so few players to challenge him that his toughest opponent is boredom.

He acknowledged as much Sunday night after a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Brad Gilbert in the finals of the $265,000 Transamerica Open tennis tournament.

The triumph was the left-hander's 69th in 71 matches this year and the title was his 11th, including Wimbledon and the recent U.S. Open.

The $40,000 singles prize, plus the $6,000 he and Peter Fleming each picked up for winning the doubles, 6-3, 6-4, against Mike DePalmer and Sammy Giammalva, pushed McEnroe's official earnings in 1984 to $1,243,463.

That doesn't include the hundreds of thousands of dollars he picks up for exhibitions such as the one he'll play Tuesday against Jimmy Connors in Seattle as a tuneup for the weekend Davis Cup matches against Australia.

The match against Gilbert wasn't as close as the score would indicate. In both sets, McEnroe was ahead 5-1, despite serving erratically, and it was all he could do to keep from yawning while Gilbert struggled back.

Beyond Ivan Lendl and Connors, both of whom McEnroe beats regularly, no one can touch him these days. The victory here was a foregone conclusion since the moment when Lendl pulled out to go to Europe to practice for a Davis Cup match, Connors never was entered.

Compared to some of his psyched-up performances in big matches this year, McEnroe played as if he were sleepwalking — and he still won easily.

"Sometimes when you don't feel like being out there as much, you have to push yourself to do it," he said. "It feels like a job a lot more. Sometimes, when you're tired it becomes a job. Tonight was just a job."

The only time he became excited was after the match when someone asked him how he would rank himself in tennis history.

McEnroe declined to name an all-time ladder or to place himself on it, but he said he's annoyed when some people say he's on a level with past champions.

"You can't possibly compare a guy like (Don) Budge," he said, using as an example the first player to win the Grand Slam nearly 50 years ago. "It's not a comparison, it's like comparing the 1940 Chicago Bears to the 1984 team. People get better."

"I expect in 20 years somebody's going to come out, maybe in 50 years, (and) maybe the guy will have the touch that I do, the mental toughness that I do, the shots that I do and is also 6-foot-6 and is twice as strong as me and quicker. Players get better and better."

He frowned and rubbed his unshaved face, looking much in need of the razor he advertises.

"It kind of irritates me when the old guys say, 'Oh yeah, these young guys couldn't play with us.' I think when I played Connors at Wimbledon this year I put that pretty much to rest."

Since 1931 the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico has always been run on a Saturday but before that it was held 42 times on other days of the week.

Alcott 'Coming Around'

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Amy Alcott thinks her game "is just coming around" after 10 years on the LPGA Tour.

"I'm playing better and putting better than I ever had before," said Alcott, who captured the $175,000 San Jose Classic by two shots Sunday over the par-73, 6,290-yard Almaden County Club course.

Alcott's closing round in the 54-hole tournament consisted of two birdies and a bogey for a 72 to hold off Pat Meyers, Kathy Whitworth, Betsy King and Beverly Klass, who were at 213.

"I used to be a good putter, but now I'm a great putter," said the 28-year-old Alcott, who won her fourth tournament of the year and the 21st of her tour career. "My game is more consistent and I'm more patient in hitting my shots."

The first-place money of $26,250 increased Alcott's yearly earnings to $212,473 and her career total to $1,271,188.

"I think my best golf is in front of me," she said. "I feel like my game is just coming around after a lot of years of hard work."

Patty Sheehan, the tour's leading money winner, finished with 73-218 to tie for 18th place, worth $1,698. She has a yearly total of $251,855 to stay ahead of King, who has $245,125 after winning $11,156 for her second-place tie Sunday.

Saturday afternoon, East Carolina fans — those that were there (the 25,000 estimated present was generous) — got a chance to see a battle of quarterbacks, and it's anybody's guess as to who won.

East Carolina's Darrell Speed took advantage of his opportunity to start for the first time by turning in one of the better performances in a while. He passed for 183 yards making good on 12 of 21 attempts. He did a good job in getting the Pirates on the scoreboard three quick times, and it could be that, like some Pirate teams in the past, ECU got a little satisfied with itself.

Nevertheless, Georgia Southern's Tracy Ham also put on a show. He put the ball up 52 times, completing 26 of those for 403 yards passing. The Eagles finished the game with over 600 yards in total offense.

Both Ham and Speed had good protection when passing. No one got to Ham and Speed was sacked but once.

The Pirates showed that they could move the ball behind Speed, but they would also seem to have shown that they cannot stop the pass.

Which brings us to N.C. State. The Wolfpack has lost its last two games after winning the first one in a lopsided manner. But they will be geared up to stop the Pirates.

There seems to be bad blood between the two schools and it is unfortunate. State's Tom Reed has taken exception to some of the statements by Coach Ed Emory, and would like nothing better than to stick it to the Pirates in the worst way.

The Pirates must, Emory admitted Saturday, play much better to have a chance to defeat the Wolfpack. Whether they can is the question.

Perhaps the most shocked people in the South, however, are the fans of the North Carolina Tar Heels. Few people expected the Heels to fall to Navy, and few probably expected the boys in blue to lose to Boston College like they did.

Carolina was picked to finish at the top in the Atlantic Coast Conference this year, but the shell-shocked Tar Heels are going to have to do a big turnaround if they are to do it.

Both Virginia and Georgia Tech, long cellar dwellers (Tech has really just become eligible), are making noises like they might be up there. Wake Forest may also be considered. And even the Terps are showing signs of coming around, witness their victory over West Virginia Saturday.

And the upsets continue across the country — look what Florida State did to Miami.

It's going to be another interesting season.

Manager Jim Frey stared at a blank lineup card, trying to figure out the combination of players who could end a five-game tailspin and put the Chicago Cubs over the top in the National League East Division title chase.

"I guess I spent 12 hours in the room last night. I thought about everything," Frey said. "I put down lineups. I decided that if we won the first game, I was going to keep the same lineup."

One of the best moves Frey made was to chat Sunday morning with Gary Matthews and then pencil in the veteran outfielder's name on the lineup card. Matthews, nicknamed Sarge, slugged a three-run double in an 8-1 first-game victory Sunday over the St. Louis Cardinals, then whacked a two-run home run in the 4-2 nightcap victory that earned the Cubs at least a tie for the division crown. With six games remaining, the Cubs need only one victory — or one loss by the second-place New York Mets — to advance to postseason play for the first time in 39 years.

The Mets prevented Chicago from clinching the title outright on Sunday by stopping Montreal 6-1 behind the pitching of Dwight Gooden. In other games, West Division champion San Diego needed 11 innings to beat Atlanta 2-1. Pittsburgh got by Philadelphia 4-2. Houston shaded Cincinnati 2-1 and San Francisco beat Los Angeles 4-2.

"Gary Matthews, for the last four or five weeks, has gotten some big hits for us," Frey said. "He's a tremendous influence on this ballclub. "We talked this morning when he came in," Frey noted. "The thrust of it was we've got to start doing things right. He said the right things. He did the right things."

"We now have to win one," Matthews said. "Everything is downhill for us now. We can play fancy free. Even if we do lose three in Pittsburgh, which I don't really think we'll do, it's going to be tough for New York."

The Cubs took control of the opener with a six-run fourth inning keyed by Matthews' bases-clearing double. St. Louis starter Rick Ownbey, 0-3, walked Bob Dernier and Ryne Sandberg to load the bases before giving way to Jeff Lahti. Matthews drilled Lahti's first pitch into the gap in right-center to break a 1-1 tie. Keith Moreland's single and a two-run double by Ron Cey capped the outburst.

Left-hander Steve Trout, 13-7, scattered seven hits in going the distance for the visiting Cubs.

Matthews tagged a two-run homer in the first inning of the nightcap to get the Cubs off to a quick start against Cardinal ace Joaquin Andujar, 19-14, who failed for the third time to win his 20th game.

The Cards pulled within 3-2 on Andy Van Slyke's sixth-inning single, but Sandberg singled in Dernier in the eighth to provide a cushion for Lee Smith, who pitched the last two innings for his 33rd save. Dennis Eckersley, 9-8, gave up six hits in seven innings.

Mets 6, Expos 1
Dwight Gooden, 17-9, allowed only five hits in eight innings and struck out eight to extend his major-league rookie record total to 276. He failed to go the distance for the first time in four starts and failed for the first time in six outings to strike out at least 10 batters.

Mookie Wilson scored two runs for the Mets, who fell 6½ games behind the Cubs. Joe Hesketh, 1-2, was the loser for the visitors.

Padres 2, Braves 1
Kurt Bevacqua lashed a two-out single in the bottom of the 11th inning off Braves reliever Donnie Moore, 4-5, to score Alan Wiggins from second base. Greg Booker, 1-0, pitched the final two innings.

Each starting pitcher was outstanding. Atlanta's Craig McMurtry pitched hitless ball for 6 2-3 innings before Carmello Martinez doubled, and allowed only three hits in nine innings. Andy Hawkins, meanwhile, allowed but four hits in eight innings for the Padres.

Pirates 4, Phillies 2
Johnny Ray singled in two runs and scored another as the Pirates roughed up Philadelphia starter

Shane Rawley, 10-5, for six hits and four runs in five innings. John Tudor, 11-11, allowed only a run and five hits through seven innings, but needed Kent Tekulve's help to get out of a jam in the top of the eighth. John Candelaria pitched the ninth for his second save.

Astros 2, Reds 1
Bill Doran and Terry Puhl each hit solo homers and Bob Knepper, 15-10, allowed only four hits in pitching his 11th complete game. Knepper's only mistake came in the top of the second when Nick Esasky homered for Cincinnati's only run. Joe Price, 7-13, took the loss.

Giants 4, Dodgers 2
Rob Deer hit a solo homer and George Riley, 1-0, finally won his first major-league game. Riley was 0-5 during stints with the Cubs in 1979 and 1980 before undergoing arm surgery. Riley was touched for 11 hits, but was in charge until the Dodgers struck for a pair of runs in the top of the ninth. Burt Hooton, 3-6, gave up two runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Waltrip Cruises To Goody's 500 Win

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — They thought Darrell Waltrip was in trouble early in the race, the way everyone was breezing by him with apparent ease.

But Waltrip was just waiting for the right track conditions. His patience paid off.

By the end of Sunday's $288,885 Goody's 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, nobody else was even on the same lap as Waltrip, who had been in the lead since the 266th lap.

"The weather was supposed to be sunny and hot, so we felt the track would get slick," said Waltrip. "As the track got slicker and slicker — it was the slickest I've ever seen it — our car got better and better."

The win was the sixth of the season for Waltrip, twice as many as anyone else on the circuit. His average speed of 75.532 mph on the .525-mile Martinsville Speedway oval was well off the track record of 79.336 set by Cale Yarborough in 1979.

Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., led 313 of the 50 laps and collected $38,300 for the win.

Terry Labonte came in second, followed by Bill Elliott. Both drivers were a lap down.

Rounding out the top 10 were Harry Gant, Neil Bonnett, Buddy Baker, Dave Marcis, Richard Petty, Lennie Pond and Kyle Petty.

In the Winston Cup point battle, Waltrip gained just 10 points on leader Terry Labonte, who entered Sunday's race with an 81-point margin on Gant and increased that spread to 91 with only five races left.

"I've said this before and I'll say it again — there should be something extra for the guy that wins the race," said Waltrip, who is in fourth place in the Winston Cup standings. "I'm not talking about a 100-point bonus or anything like that, but just something to make everybody race hard. I don't really care what it is — maybe 25 points, maybe 20, maybe just 10, but something."

Dale Earnhardt remained in third place in the Winston Cup standings, but dropped further behind by finishing 12th on Sunday.

Despite Waltrip's late domination of the race, he was not a factor early. Before he assumed command, there were 11 lead changes among eight drivers.

Bodine fell out only 36 laps into the event after his oil pump locked up.

Defending national champion Bobby Allison, who broke a bone in his shoulder last week at Dover, Del., got a break on the third lap when a caution flag permitted him to pit and have Butch Lindley take over as his driver.

Fan Helps Ranger Rally

By The Associated Press

It was "Fan Appreciation Day" at Anaheim Stadium, but there was one fan the California Angels did not appreciate.

In their final home game Sunday, the Angels blamed a costly 2-1, 10-inning defeat by Texas on an over-zealous customer in the box seats.

"That cost us the game," said Doug DeCinces, referring to a fan who interfered when the California third baseman tried to catch a foul ball in the stands. "It was the turning point for them. I was yelling all the time, 'let it go.' If you're into the game at all, you've got to let me catch that ball."

The incident gave new life to George Wright, and the Texas hitter promptly belted a fly ball that allowed Billy Sample to move from second to third. Sample then scored on a single by pinch-hitter Marv Foley.

The loss kept the Angels in third place in the American League West, 1½ games off the pace of Minnesota and Kansas City. Those two teams moved into a tie after the Twins beat Cleveland 5-1 and Kansas City dropped a 5-1 decision to Oakland.

Foley's single was just out of reach of first baseman Darrel Miller and California Manager John MacNamara felt the extra base gained by Sample on the controversial play was decisive.

"It changed the complexion of the inning by changing where we played," said MacNamara, referring to the Angels' defensive alignment. "With a man on second, Miller plays deeper at first, and the ball went just under his glove."

In the other AL games, it was Detroit 4, New York 1; Milwaukee 8, Toronto 5; Boston 6, Baltimore 2, and Chicago 4, Seattle 0.

Brian Downing's homer, his 22nd, with one out in the second inning gave California a 1-0 lead. But the Rangers tied it in the eighth on Tommy Dunbar's RBI-single.

California right-hander Dave Stewart, 6-14, pitched all 10 innings for only his second complete game. Stewart walked two, struck out three and held the Angels to four hits.

Twins 5, Indians 1
Randy Bush snapped an 0-for-17 slump with a two-run, tie-breaking homer in the sixth inning and Rick Lysander pitched four scoreless innings in relief to lift Minnesota over Cleveland.

Minnesota's Mike Smithson, Ed Hodge, Lysander, 4-3, and Ron Davis combined on a five-hitter. Davis finished up for his 29th save.

The score was tied 1-1 in the bottom of the sixth when Jerry Ujdr, 1-2, walked Kent Hrbek. On a 2-and-2 count, Bush hit his 10th homer to put Minnesota ahead 3-1.

"I was surprised. I was just trying to make contact and hit the ball up the middle," Bush said. "It's been a long drought. I didn't do anything different today. I just kept concentrating and kept hacking."

A's 5, Royals 1
Rickey Henderson singled, doubled and slammed a two-run homer, carrying Oakland over Kansas City.

Chris Codiroli held the Royals to four hits until Bill Caudill relieved in the top of the seventh and finished up for his 34th save. The loser was Mike Jones, 2-3.

Henderson also stole his 60th base of the season and scored two runs before leaving the game because of a jammed finger he suffered stealing third base after doubling leading off the game.

"We won two out of three from Oakland," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "I'll take it. If we can keep winning series, winning two out of three, that's all we can hope for. We wanted a sweep but Codiroli wouldn't let us. He's a good pitcher with a good live arm."

Tigers 4, Yankees 1
Jack Morris teamed with two relievers on a two-hitter for his 19th victory and Sparky Anderson became the first manager in major league history to win 100 games in both leagues as New York lost in Detroit.

Marty Castillo drove in two runs with a single and a homer, Kirk Gibson homered and Lance Parrish singled home a run as Detroit — which clinched the American League East title Tuesday — raised its record to 100-55.

Anderson's Cincinnati Reds teams won more than 100 games in 1970, 1975, and 1976 in the National League. Detroit needs five more victories in the final seven games for its winningest season ever.

Morris, 19-11, got relief help from Bill Scherrer and Willie Hernandez, who pitched the last two innings to earn his 32nd save in 32 save opportunities.

Brewers 8, Blue Jays 5
Doug Loman hit his first two major-league home runs and Jim Sundberg doubled in the winning run in Milwaukee's three-run eighth inning to power the Brewers over Toronto.

The Blue Jays had gone ahead 5-4 in the bottom of the seventh on a run-scoring single by Lloyd Moseby and an RBI-single by George Bell.

Jim Kern, 1-0, won in relief of Bob McClure, and Ray Searage recorded his sixth save.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 2
Tony Armas and Jim Rice, battling for the major-league lead in runs batted in, each hit a two-run homer as Boston whipped Baltimore. Rice had a sacrifice fly in addition to his 28th homer, giving him the lead with 121 RBI. Armas tops the majors with 42 homers, and has 119 RBI after starting the day tied with Oakland's Dave Kingman.

Armas connected for his third homer in three games in the top of the first inning off Dennis Martinez, 6-9, after Dwight Evans singled and was thrown out at the plate after a double by Rice.

White Sox 4, Mariners 0
Britt Burns and Ron Reed combined on a three-hitter and Vance Law had three hits, including a home run, and drove in two runs, leading Chicago over Seattle. Burns, 4-11, retired the first 13 batters before Steve Henderson doubled with one out in the top of the fifth. Burns struck out four and recorded his 11th save. Mike Moore, 6-17, took the loss.

Lady Deacons Win Tri-Meet

Wake Forest defeated East Carolina Friday and UNC-Charlotte Saturday to win the women's volleyball tri-match held at Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Deacons needed just three games to defeat ECU 15-2, 15-5, 15-2, but their match against UNCC went the full five games. Wake Forest rallied to win the match 6-15, 15-13, 13-15, 15-10, 15-9.

The Lady Pirates also lost the last match to UNCC 15-12, 15-9, 18-16 to drop to 1-3 on the season.

East Carolina travels to Richmond to take on Virginia Commonwealth Wednesday.

Denis Watson Takes Las Vegas PGA Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — It was six weeks ago, in Flint, Mich., that Payne Stewart turned prophet.

He had just lost, by one shot, to Denis Watson in the Buick Open. It was the first triumph in four years on the American PGA Tour for Watson, a South African.

"By letting him win, I think I've created a monster," Stewart quipped at the time.

And now, less than two months later, Watson suddenly, dramatically is challenging the more famous (and no relation) Tom Watson for Player of the Year honors.

Denis Watson credited a coach and a sports psychologist with his brilliant burst that was temporarily capped by his one-shot triumph Sunday in the richest event on the American tour, the $1,122,500 Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational.

The latest triumph, secured by a last-hole birdie in howling, 40-mile per hour winds that swirled and twisted off the towers of a nearby resort hotel, enabled Denis Watson to join Tom Watson, who did not play here, as the only three-time winners on the tour this season. It also lifted Denis Watson into second place (behind Tom) on the year's money-winning list, and boosted him into second place (60-58 behind Tom) on the complicated points list that determines Player of the Year.

It also prompted Tom Watson to make a last-minute decision Sunday to compete in the LaJet Classic in Abilene, Texas next week.

'Hill Street' Again Leads Emmy Awards

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A taboo-breaking drama of incest, a re-created slice of America's Cold War history and perennial favorite "Hill Street Blues" won top honors at the Emmy awards, with NBC taking home the most for the fourth consecutive year.

Four Emmy first-timers — Jane Fonda and CBS stars Tom Selleck, Jane Curtin and John Ritter — won acting awards Sunday night at the 36th annual Television Academy award ceremonies. "Cagney & Lacey's" Tyne Daly received her second straight, and Laurence Olivier collected his fifth.

"Something About Amelia," aired by ABC, was named best drama or comedy special and took the writing award in a limited series or special. Roxana Zal, 14, who played daughter victimized by incest, won as best supporting actress in the category and said before she won: "I hope the program helped kids."

"Concealed Enemies," about the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers controversy over alleged communists in the U.S. State Department that propelled Richard Nixon into the limelight after World War II, was named outstanding limited series, with director Jeff Bleckner also honored.

The Academy of Television Arts & Sciences presented the awards at Pasadena Civic Auditorium, the ceremony starting 37 minutes late because NFL football ran over on CBS. At just over 3 hours, 34 minutes, it was only 40 seconds short of the 1978 record for the longest show.

NBC won the most Emmys by a narrow margin over CBS and ABC, collecting 20 including the craft awards that were given Sept. 16. CBS had 18, ABC 16, PBS 10, and five went to syndicated programs.

NBC's "Hill Street Blues" led all comers with five Emmys, including best drama series. NBC's barroom comedy "Cheers" was named best comedy series for the second year and also won Emmys for best writing and supporting actress.

In four years the gritty urban police drama has won 25 Emmys, one shy of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," making it the winningest television drama series ever.

Miss Fonda, a two-time Oscar winner, won as best lead actress in a limited series or special for her first TV dramatic role in ABC's "The Dollmaker." She spent 12 years bringing the project about a persevering Kentucky woman to the screen.

Backstage, she said, "I never got that nervous at the Oscars. My heart was racing. I almost burst into tears when I got up there. It's my best work."

Selleck, who stepped in as Emmy host when Carol Burnett took ill, won his first Emmy as best lead actor in a drama series for his role as the laid-back detective in CBS' "Magnum, P.I."

"I was quite shocked," Selleck said.

Ritter, after three nominations and eight years on ABC's "Three's Company," got his first award as best lead actor in a comedy series.

"I'm totally surprised," he said.

adding he thought the academy members would pick a "more intellectual show."

Miss Curtin was selected as best lead actress in a comedy series for her role in CBS' "Kate & Allie." She and Susan Saint James, who was also nominated, play divorced mothers living together for mutual support.

Miss Daly won for the second year for her role as Mary Beth Lacey, who combines police work and her family in CBS' "Cagney & Lacey."

"I wish Sharon had won," she said of co-star Sharon Gless. But, she added, "It feels wonderful to both be nominated because we have two of the best parts for women on television right now."

Olivier won his fifth Emmy as best lead actor in a limited series or special for the syndicated "King Lear."

Rhea Perlman was selected best supporting actress in a comedy series for her role as the earthy cocktail waitress Carla in "Cheers."

Art Carney, who won an Oscar for "Harry and Tonto," was named best supporting actor in a limited series or special for James Cagney's first TV movie, CBS' "Terrible Joe Moran." Carney won five Emmys as Ed Norton on "The Honeymooners."

Pat Harrington Jr., the irrepresible Schneider on "One Day at a Time," won as best supporting actor in a comedy series as the CBS show closed out nine years on the air. "You're looking at a man who's wanted one of these things for 30 years — ever since I was a child actor," he said.

Cloris Leachman was named best individual performer in a variety or music program for her appearance on the "Screen Actors Guild 50th Anniversary Celebration" on CBS. The camera panned to the audience, where losing nominee Lily Tomlin, attired as her popular character Ernestine, made a face.

David Wolper, who earlier produced "Roots," was cited for producing the opening and closing ceremonies of the Los Angeles Summer Olympics seen on television by 2 billion people worldwide. Gold medalist Mary Lou Retton and former medalist Rafer Johnson presented the award.

"Hill Street's" Alfre Woodard won as best supporting actress in a drama series for portraying the mother of a young boy killed by police. Bruce Weitz won best supporting actor and the show also won awards for directing and film sound mixing for a series.

Comedian Bob Hope received the academy's Governor's Award, presented for "outstanding achievement."

Seven new inductees into the academy's Hall of Fame were announced by Lucille Ball, an original member last year. They are Carol Burnett, Sid Caesar, Walter Cronkite, Rod Serling, Ed Sullivan, Joyce Hall of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame," and Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, who launched the "Today" and "Tonight" shows as NBC president.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They won't be giving any Emmy awards to the Emmy award show that ended early this morning.

The 36th annual Television Academy awards broadcast, which was delayed by Sunday football and then seemed about to catch up to "Monday Night Football," was another mere booster shot for the television community — not a lively, exciting program for the TV audience.

It was overblown and overweight, filled with gratuitous gratitude and lengthy tributes.

Sunday night's 3½-hour marathon on CBS must have caused a lot of dial-switching to NBC's Clint Eastwood movie, "The Enforcer," and ABC's "Paper Dolls." If this wasn't the longest Emmy show ever, it sure seemed that way.

It boggles the mind. Why can't the TV industry do a top-notch awards show?

This is the same creative community that can powerfully destroy the world in "The Day After." It can tastefully draw attention to a whispered social blight in "Something About Amelia." And it can, on a weekly basis, inspire laughter and sympathy in its best series, "Cheers" and "Hill Street Blues."

But TV annually produces an awards show that puts audiences to sleep, always opting for long and self-serving over short and entertaining.

Why? The reason is that the Emmy awards show has become an ego trip for the industry. The priority of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences and the show's producers is to spotlight Hollywood's brightest, then give them a minute of prime time to thank their dog, hairdresser and therapist.

Using that much time for their gushy appreciations is like throwing a birthday party and spending the whole time opening presents.

If they're handing out awards for programs and actors, the least they can do is show clips of the shows and performances from all the major categories.

Debate Brings On Heated Exchanges

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he made it clear that Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt is a liberal during the Senate candidates' third debate but Hunt says Helms only proved he doesn't want to discuss his 12-year voting record.

Much of the one-hour debate Sunday night focused on Helms' charges that Hunt is a "Mondale liberal." The discussion prompted several heated exchanges, in which the candidates ignored debate rules on taking turns speaking.

Helms said Hunt supports Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale and his promises to raise taxes to lower the federal deficit.

"His solution to everything is more government, more taxes," Helms said of Hunt in opening remarks. "Like Walter Mondale, the governor would return America to the tax-and-spend policy of the past."

"I am a Reagan conservative and proud of it. Mr. Hunt is a Mondale liberal and ashamed of it," Helms said.

Hunt acknowledged that he supports the party's nominee. But he said he disagreed with Mondale about the need to raise taxes and he questioned how strongly Helms has supported Reagan.

"I'm the kind of person who would go to the Senate to vote independently," Hunt said. "I won't tow anybody's party line and I'm not going to be hand maiden to any special interest the way you've been."

A Gallup Poll conducted Sept. 10-13 showed that President Reagan holds an almost 2-to-1 margin over Mondale in the state. The same poll showed that 48.5 percent of the 1,187 voters surveyed favored Helms compared with 44.5 percent for Hunt, 7 percent undecided and a 3 percent margin of error.

"Senator Helms is not talking about the real issues," Hunt said. "That's because he does not want the people to know how he voted. I just don't believe the people of North Carolina will be fooled by that."

The 7 p.m. debate was broadcast from WSOC-TV. It followed the same format as the two earlier debates with two-minute opening statements by each candidate, six questions posed by the moderator and 30 minutes of direct questioning by the candidates.

The moderator was Lee Morris, vice president and general manager of WSOC AM and FM radio and president of the N.C. Association of Broadcasters.

A final debate is scheduled for Oct. 13 in Charlotte.

Another source of heated debate was Hunt's use of the state aircraft for political purposes and Helms' payments for advertising to a firm that Democrats say is tied to the National Congressional Club.

"I have not misused any state property at all," said Hunt, who last week repaid the state more than $185,000 for use of the state airplane.

Hunt ordered an audit in light of charges that he failed to pay the full price for using the aircraft. The chairman of the state Republican Party filed suit against Hunt despite the action.

Hunt noted that the Democratic Party chairman has filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission questioning whether Jefferson Marketing Inc., which does Helms' campaign ads, offered Helms illegal campaign contributions.

Helms said he would turn over campaign records if Hunt would hire a special prosecutor to investigate political use of state equipment.

"You're grandstanding," Hunt said.

"You're ducking the issue," Helms replied.

In other issues:

Special Interests
Hunt repeatedly attacked Helms for catering to the "rich and powerful." He said in his opening statement that he was challenging Helms because of his belief that "government ought to serve all the people."

"I reject the kind of leadership that pits white against black, rich against poor and old against young," Hunt said.

Social Security
Hunt charged that Helms voted three times against minimum Social Security benefits while "voting for those big tax breaks for the big oil companies, big chemical companies, your friends who are putting so much money in your campaign."

Helms told Hunt that "you and Mr. Mondale are just trying to scare our senior citizens" by questioning support for Social Security.

Taxes
Helms charged that Hunt presided over the two largest tax increases in the state's history — the gasoline tax and sales tax increases.

"The only taxes I supported were taxes to save the roads in North Carolina," Hunt said.

He questioned Helms' support for a $100 billion tax increase on cigarettes, telephone service and other items and $227 billion in tax advantages for oil companies, enough money to run the state for 38 years.

Helms said that was a bill closing tax loopholes and if oil companies paid higher taxes then consumers would be paying more for gasoline.

He asked why Hunt supported a resolution at the National Governors' Association for a $217 billion tax increase.

Hunt said the resolution was "a vote to tell Congress to get the deficit down."

Observers Give Victory To Helms

By The Associated Press
Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., gave his strongest performance to date in his third debate with Democratic opponent Gov. Jim Hunt, say six political scientists who have watched the candidates' three encounters.

Helms was able to set the agenda and keep Hunt on the defensive, they say.

"I think this is the performance that Helms supporters have been waiting for throughout the campaign," said Donald N. Schroeder, associate professor of government at Campbell University in Buies Creek and a Helms' supporter. "He came out every bit as aggressive as in the last debate, but he was much more polished and better prepared."

Abraham Holtzman, a political science professor at North Carolina State University and a Hunt supporter, agreed with Schroeder.

"I think in this debate, that probably Jesse Helms came off better than Hunt. He (Helms) basically set the agenda and took the initiative, and although Hunt made his points, he was not as aggressive as Helms. It was Helms forcing the governor to respond to his accusations," Holtzman said.

Most of the six political scientists judged Hunt the clear winner during the first debate July 19, and they said Hunt won more narrowly when they met a second time Sept. 9.

They agreed that Helms' performance Sunday night was his best by far.

"Hunt looked more apologetic and not on top of things and not really getting with it," said Merle Black.

Tuition Forces Many To State Colleges

By The Associated Press

For middle-class parents, in-state public colleges and universities are becoming the only financially feasible option as the cost of attending a private school in North Carolina can top $12,000.

An annual survey conducted by The College Board, the association that sponsors the Scholastic Aptitude Tests, found that nationwide the average annual tuition at state-supported four-year public colleges is $1,105.

In contrast, the average annual tuition at four-year private colleges is $4,627.

"It's clear that a substantial number of students don't have the financial capability and lose the choice of attending an independent institution because of the cost difference," said James Fred Young, president of Elon College and chairman of the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

"Parents say to their children, 'You can go anywhere you want as long as it's a state school,'" he said. "That's become almost a cliché."

At private schools like Duke University, yearly expenses for students can top $12,000 for tuition, room and board. And college officials are struggling to assemble packages of loans, scholarships, grants and jobs for worthy students, but federal cutbacks are making the task more difficult.

Gregory F. Gault and his wife of Raleigh appear typical of middle-class families caught in a higher-education squeeze.

They are both public school teachers who earned a total of $41,000 last year. Now they are trying to decide how they can send their two teenage daughters to college.

"We haven't been able to save money over the years so we could say to our kids, 'OK, you go where you want to go,'" Gault said. "We simply couldn't put aside $10,000 a year."

Based on last year's enrollment figures, approximately 44,000 students are expected to attend private colleges and universities in North Carolina on a full-time basis this year. Another 102,000 are expected to go to public colleges and universities in the state.

The average tuition for students in private four-year schools in North Carolina rose this fall from $3,891 to $4,108, according to statistics compiled by the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities

In contrast, the average tuition for in-state students attending the public University of North Carolina system was $727, the same as last fall.

Currently, the most expensive private college in North Carolina is Duke University where students are advised to plan for a total budget of $12,040 for the year, including books and personal expenses, said Jean A. Scott, director of undergraduate admissions at Duke.

The least expensive North Carolina private college is Shaw University, where tuition, fees, room and board totaled $4,014 this year.

By comparison, it costs an average of $3,319 for an in-state student to attend the public University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill — a figure that includes tuition, fees and average room and board, UNC officials say.

County Recycling Its Trash

WILMINGTON (AP) — Converting garbage to energy will increase costs for customers for awhile, but New Hanover County officials say the first conversion plant will produce energy, save money and increase the life of a landfill.

The $13 million New Hanover County Resource Recovery Plant began full operation this month and will produce enough steam to operate a 1,000-ton-per-day fertilizer plant and enough electricity to serve about 366 homes, plant officials say.

For W.R. Grace and Co., it promises an annual savings of $50,000 on fuel costs at its Wilmington fertilizer plant, said David B. Sims, engineering manager.

For county residents, it means an increase in garbage disposal rates — $1 to $3 per home per month and more in some cases.

"The incinerator was promoted as making money by generating energy, and the customer feels it should be self-sustaining," said Carolyn B. Buchana, sales manager for Waste Industries Inc. in Wilmington. "They don't understand it won't be until it's paid for."

"Producing energy is a plus, but the bottom line is burning garbage to reduce the volume," said C. Edward Hilton Jr., the county's director of engineering. "For $13 million, we'll make a $15 million landfill as well as a $40 million to $55 million landfill."

Garbage is dumped into the three-story high loading bay at the plant, where an overhead crane mixes up to 600 tons of trash, discarding large metal items. The crane regularly feeds hoppers, which in turn automatically adjust the flow into one of two incinerators.

The heat is drawn from boilers and the steam piped through a turbine that generates electricity for the plant while cooling the steam to a temperature that the Grace plant can use, Hilton said.

Excess steam drives a second turbine, producing electricity sold to Carolina Power & Light Co.

Ashes and embers from the waste are dropped into troughs of water and then carried by conveyor to waiting dump trucks. New Hanover County's refuse has then been reduced to soggy clods 15 percent the size of what was dumped in the plant loading bay, officials say.

IN THE STATE

Donors Pay State For NCSA Furniture

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Two people have paid for furniture from the chancellor's house of the North Carolina School of the Arts, the president of the University of North Carolina system says.

System president William Friday said the matter was settled Friday when two people paid the state for the furniture.

"In my view, it's not a situation involving a willful and deliberate taking of anything," Friday said. "It's a situation of honest disagreement."

Friday said Chancellor Robert Suderburg thought the furniture was his because it was given to him by school officials who recruited him.

"It was apparently an understanding that was necessary to get him to take the position," Friday said. "He's never felt he's done anything improper."

Suderburg took about a dozen items of furniture with him when he left NCSA because he thought the items were gifts, school officials say.

Suderburg, now president of the Cornish Institute in Seattle, was given the items when he became chancellor of the North Carolina school in 1973, school officials said. The items, which were paid for with state money, were given to Suderburg by school trustees as an incentive to become chancellor.

Questions were raised about the ownership of the items when an inventory showed the items missing.

Friday said trustees for schools in the university system no longer can offer special incentives to prospective employees such as chancellors.

"They're paid their salaries and that's it," Friday said. He said that chancellors and other employees receive normal fringe benefits.

Charles B. Nelson, vice chancellor for finance at the School of the Arts said two people sent checks totalling $2,000 to the school. Nelson said that the people, whom he declined to identify, paid the money to resolve the matter.

Nelson said Suderburg took two short sofas, a Chippendale desk, two rugs, two wing chairs, a piece of hall furniture, a lamp and a cluster of a dresser, mirror and two night stands from the chancellor's residence.

Young Couple Face Charges In Murder

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A young Reidsville couple will be arraigned in Eden after being charged with murder in the slaying of a 92-year-old retired minister Aug. 28, Reidsville Police Chief James Festerman says.

Perrie D. Simpson, 21, and Stephanie Yvette Eury, 16, were to be arraigned today after being charged Saturday with the slaying of the Rev. Jean E. Darter. They were being held in the Rockingham County Jail this weekend without bond.

Ms. Eury was arrested at 7 a.m. Saturday at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital, where she had given birth recently, Festerman said. Simpson was arrested about 10:30 p.m. Friday in Reidsville.

Darter, a widower who lived alone, apparently had invited his assailants inside his home where he was beaten with a soft drink bottle and strangled.

His home was ransacked, leading police to suspect robbery as a possible motive in the attack.

Study Cites High Repeat Rate For Women Having Abortions

By The Associated Press

State health officials say they are alarmed about figures that show about a fourth of the North Carolina women who received an abortion in 1983 had undergone one previously.

They fear the numbers are a sign that abortion is being used in place of birth control.

State health statistics show one in four pregnancies in North Carolina ended in abortion in 1983, and about a fourth of those receiving abortions have had one previously.

"There are people out there, usually young adults, who do consider that's what they'll do," said Betty Stevens, a family-planning nurse practitioner with the Wake County Health Department. "That type of person lives for today and doesn't worry about tomorrow. They're out there, and there are a lot of them, too."

According to the state Center for Health Statistics, 31,892 abortions were performed on North Carolina residents in 1983, or 27 percent of the 116,564 pregnancies whose outcomes were reported to the state.

The state abortion rate has increased by four percentage points in the last six years, but there is some indication that the rate hasn't grown significantly since 1973, when the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortions for women in the first three months of pregnancy.

In 1968, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill conducted a study that estimated an abortion rate of about 22 percent. Most abortions were illegal then, were not documented and were performed outside a clinic or hospital.

"The point is that abortion rates have not changed really in the last 15 years," said Dr. Jaroslav Hulka, a UNC professor of obstetrics and gynecology.

The four counties with the highest 1983 abortion percentages were Orange and Durham, each with 42 percent, Wake with 39 percent and Watauga with 38 percent.

Farmers Fret Over Future Of State Tobacco Industry

By The Associated Press

Thousands of North Carolinians depend directly or indirectly on tobacco for their livelihood, and fear is spreading among them about the stability of that livelihood.

The fear is spreading from the farmers to merchants and manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, bankers and politicians.

"Something's got to give," said David Hopkins, a Browns Summit farmer. "A broke business can't keep on operating."

The problems for tobacco are many, and the solutions are muddled. The industry faces a federally administered production control and price support system, which farmers say has contributed to sharp increases in their cost of producing and selling tobacco.

Farmers are also concerned about increased foreign competition and fewer overseas sales of their domestic leaf. They're worried that these complex economic, social and political forces will financially cripple or destroy the state's tobacco business.

"If we should ever lose tobacco, North Carolina would be the biggest welfare state in the nation," said John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

Pitt County tax supervisor Jim Hardy is worried, too. Tobacco allotments in that county add $30 million to the tax base, and the demise of the crop in that county worries him.

"Land values would plummet around here without tobacco," Hardy said, whose county grows tobacco more than any other in the state. "I don't know how we'd make it up. I don't know that we could."

W.C. Mazingo, assistant vice president of NCNB National Bank in nearby Farmville is also concerned. About 75 percent of the banks commercial loans go to tobacco farmers, he says.

"I worry every day about what might happen,"

Mazingo said.

In 1983, sales of flue-cured and burley tobacco in North Carolina came to just under $1 billion, one-third of the nation's total tobacco sales and about 25 percent of the state's agricultural income.

But economists at N.C. State University say the agricultural dollar usually multiplies itself five to seven times.

In 1979, the economic power of this multiplier effect was shown in a study prepared for the Tobacco Institute, a Washington tobacco lobby, by the University of Pennsylvania Wharton Applied Research Center.

Wharton researchers surveyed jobs, income and taxes in five sectors of the tobacco industry — farming, auction warehousing, manufacturing, distribution and sales. Then they calculated the multiplier effect of the money generated in those sectors.

Tobacco is grown in 20 states and the territory of Puerto Rico. Nationally, Wharton concluded that in 1979, the tobacco industry was responsible directly or indirectly for 2 million jobs, $29.9 billion in wages and earnings, $15.5 billion in capital investments and $22 billion in federal, state and local taxes.

Cyrus, like other tobacco leaders, is troubled about the new attack on tobacco. He believes it will weather this storm, but is concerned. He says he becomes irritated when he hears of a church group or anti-tobacco organization urging tobacco farmers to grow food rather than tobacco.

"The fact is, tobacco prevents hunger," Cyrus said. "It's given farmers the money to diversify and plant food crops."

"Just think of this," Cyrus said. "We have just under six million acres of tillable land in North Carolina. Tobacco is grown on only 265,000 of that land. And it's been bringing in about one-third of the state's agricultural income. Tobacco can give a farmer a $2,000-an-acre return."

"No other crop can do that."

Police Report Mass Arrests In S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they were holding more than 665 people arrested at three banned weekend funeral and memorial services in black townships.

Authorities said police also used tear gas and rubber bullets against stone-throwing blacks in four segregated townships in the Vaal area, 40 miles south of Johannesburg on Sunday. Police said 500 people were arrested in Sebokeng on Sunday, 132 in nearby Bophelong on Saturday and 34 in Sharpeville, near Sebokeng, on Sunday. All remained in jail, and were due to start appearing in court today, police said.

Those arrested in Sebokeng were mourners at a banned funeral for Johannes Sithole, a black man killed in rioting, Lt. Derick van der Walt said from police headquarters in Pretoria. On Friday, Magistrate Ernest Marais Arndt banned the funeral from taking place on a weekend, saying it was likely to endanger public order.

Van der Walt he did not know what the 500 mourners were charged with or if they were kept in custody. The arrests in Bophelong and Sharpeville also occurred at memorial services, police said.

Two weeks ago, the government banned all indoor meetings critical of the government, effective until Sept. 30, to complement restrictions on outdoor meetings already in place.

Youths stoned buses in Sebokeng, and police used tear gas and rubber bullets to scatter protesters hurling rocks at police cars in Sharpeville and Bophelong on Sunday, van der Walt said. In Bopinatong township, police used tear gas to disperse youths who were stoning police cars.

The unrest came after several days of relative calm following rioting in black townships. The worst rioting on Sept. 3 was in Sharpeville. It was Sharpeville that drew world headlines in 1960 when police gunfire killed 69 blacks during a protest against the white-minority government's policy of racial segregation, or apartheid.

Last week, thousands of black mourners turned out for two mass funerals of 34 riot victims in Sharpeville and Evaton townships. There were scattered clashes after those funerals and numerous arrests.

Vaal's black council, three of whose members were killed by mobs during the rioting, announced it was suspending at least until next April rent hikes that sparked the rioting.

According to figures from police and clergy, at least 60 blacks have died nationwide in clashes with police since Aug. 31.

A newly published survey — taken last spring before the latest outbreak of rioting — found that 75 percent of black workers oppose halting foreign investment as a method of bringing an end to white-minority rule.

The survey of 551 black men, most of them factory workers, was conducted by a respected analyst, Lawrence Schlemmer's Center for Applied Social Sciences at Natal University at Durban.

The poll found that two-thirds of the workers said they were "unhappy" or "angry or impatient" with their lot, and 60 percent believed their situation was getting worse — higher proportions than in previous surveys.

Several American states and two dozen cities have adopted laws barring investment in companies doing business in South Africa in hopes the lack of revenue will pressure the government into turning away from apartheid.

The country's 22 million blacks — the vast majority of the population — cannot vote or own property.

While their anger is growing, Schlemmer said, black workers "take an unabashedly short-run and material view" on disinvestment, believing it would mean fewer jobs, hitting them first and hardest.

Schlemmer said the margin of error in a survey of 551 people was about 4 percent.

Chernenko Turns 73

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko, the oldest man ever to become leader of the Soviet Union, turned 73 today after being awarded another prestigious medal for service to the Communist Party.

An Order of Lenin medal was bestowed upon Chernenko through a decree from the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the state-controlled media reported.

Despite the front-page and top-of-broadcast treatment afforded the medal announcements, the media reports did not mention that today was Chernenko's birthday.

The decree bestowing the Soviet leader's new medal, the nation's second-highest civilian award, said the honor was given to the Communist Party chief "for his outstanding services in the party and state activities."

Speculation this summer that Chernenko was ill has been quieted somewhat by his three televised public appearances this month.

He is known to suffer respiratory problems and his nearly two-month absence from public view fueled rumors around the capital that he was ailing. After Soviet media reported that Chernenko left Moscow for his summer vacation on July 15, he was not seen in public again until Sept. 5, when he appeared at a televised awards ceremony for three Soviet cosmonauts. He made two other public appearances last week.

Chernenko, born Sept. 24, 1911, in the Siberian region of Krasnoyarsk, has been Soviet leader since February, when he was chosen to succeed the late Yuri V. Andropov.

His career was built along ideological lines and his service as Kremlin chief this year has been described by Western diplomats as that of a transitional leader.

The son of Siberian peasants, Chernenko was first a party propagandist at 18, then a member of the border guard. He left his native region in 1943 for the higher party school in Moscow.

Chernenko began a long association with late leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who preceded Andropov as Communist Party boss.

Old Bridge Blown Up

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — With a crash into the San Francisco Bay, the center span of the Dumbarton Bridge ended 57 years of service as the first structure to reach across the shallow waters.

While tourists lined the shores and helicopters circled overhead, the 225-foot drawbridge section of the steel bridge on Sunday was blasted with dynamite planted by state Department of Transportation engineers.

The explosion had been set for Thursday, but was rescheduled several times by demolition experts.

Opened to the public on Jan. 15, 1927, the bridge was the first span to traverse any part of the bay, preceding the Golden Gate, Bay and San Rafael-Richmond bridges.

The outdated drawbridge has been replaced by the new Dumbarton Bridge, a larger, concrete span that opened in October 1982. The new bridge rises 85 feet above the southern bay, making a drawbridge unnecessary.

Engineers said the demolition could occur only during four months of the year — September, October, January or February — when migratory birds abandon nests they build on inaccessible portions of the old bridge.

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission, which is charged with protecting the bay environment, is requiring demolition crews to retrieve all parts of the bridge that fell into the water.

The blast was the first of several that will remove the bridge's steel superstructure, leaving the two eastern and western trestles as fishing piers.

Private Parties

MOSCOW (AP) — At least six sports officials, including the director of a Moscow stadium, reportedly have been sentenced to up to 15 years in prison for holding private parties in the stadium sauna and defrauding the state.

The trade union daily Trud said the director of the 40,000-seat Locomotive Stadium and his deputy each were sentenced to 15 years and their property confiscated after they were convicted of corruption.

Ex-Police Official Gets Prison Term

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A former deputy police commissioner was ordered to serve 18 years in prison today for leading a police conspiracy that extorted more than $300,000 to protect illegal gambling.

A former police officer was sentenced to 15 years in prison, and five more ex-policemen faced sentencing today in what was described as the biggest police corruption case in Philadelphia history.

"Corrupt activity cannot and will not be tolerated, and when it is uncovered, it must be dealt with severely," U.S. District Judge Daniel Huyett 3rd said in sentencing former Deputy Police Commissioner James Martin, 53, once the No. 2 man in the department.

"I would like to apologize to my profession and to my family, and I'm sorry about what happened," he told the judge before he was sentenced.

Martin was convicted of conspiracy, racketeering and extortion, as well as of obstructing the FBI probe into police corruption by creating a secret fund to buy the silence of potential witnesses.

Huyett actually imposed jail terms totaling 233½ years plus three years' probation on Martin, but directed that the prison time be limited to 18 years on a conspiracy count.

Former Chief Inspector Joseph DePeri, 48, who was convicted on the same charges as Martin, was sentenced to 15 years in jail plus three years' probation.

He, too, stood contritely before the judge and, with a voice cracking slightly with emotion, said, "I deeply regret what happened." He added, "It is important that police officers act within the law."

The judge, adopting language used by the government in a sentencing memorandum, charged that the evidence at the five-week trial showed that the defendants "engaged in a coordinated, systematic pattern of extortion, (and) the corruption was operated with the efficiency of a business."

"The defendants used the power inherent in their badges and guns to extort the payments," Huyett read from the memorandum filed by U.S. Attorney Edward Dennis Jr.

"The power of police on the streets of the city, when abused, can be a frightening thing. The violation of the public's trust by these defendants is serious, indeed," he said.

He said, "The public's respect for its government, so essential to the viability of the society, has been impaired. The jobs of honest policemen who must deal daily with the city have been rendered more difficult."

Last year, seven other policemen were convicted of taking bribes to protect prostitution, gambling and illegal liquor sales. Former Inspector John DeBenedetto, then the highest ranking officer found guilty of corruption, received the stiffest sentence, eight years in jail.

The 7,300-member force is still under investigation. More indictments by a special federal grand jury are expected.

Westmoreland Trial Ordered

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge ruled today that CBS must stand trial in a $120 million libel suit filed by Gen. William C. Westmoreland over a report that he distorted enemy troop figures during the Vietnam war.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval clears the way for a trial that would raise issues about both the conduct of military leaders during the war and of news reporting methods.

Trial is scheduled for Oct. 9.

Westmoreland contends the CBS allegations that he falsified enemy strength reports were false.

CBS had argued that the suit should be dismissed before trial because charges raised in the Jan. 23, 1982, "CBS Reports" documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," clearly were true.

Leval said his ruling "says no more" than that CBS was unable to show there is no "genuine issue" for a jury to decide.

There are no bargains in health coverage. Some plans are just better than others.

Common sense and past experience will tell you that, if your health plan is sound, its cost will be fair.

Well then, how sound is it?

How appropriate is the coverage and how accurately does it anticipate your needs?

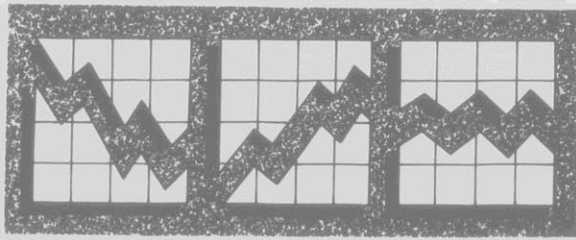

You know what it costs. But what is it worth?

High-value coverage vs. bargain rates.

The single most important determinant of your plan's value will be the information used to construct it.

For example, annual utilization estimates for a specific group in a specific locale should not be based on gross regional or even state averages, but on actual local data.

How much will your coverage cost 12 months from now?

And even within communities, careful distinctions should be drawn between facilities, physicians, and support services such as labs.

That's why we maintain the most comprehensive database of its kind in North Carolina.

It's the basic resource that enables us to help our subscribers choose their options so wisely.

And their deductibles.

And their risk-levels.

And it also makes all the difference between paying lip-service to cost-containment and actually helping our subscribers adopt workable strategies.

Cost-containment made practical.

For example, since an average hospital day in North Carolina now costs about $418, every group should do what it can to control its need for hospitalization.

But given the specific composition of your group, how and to what extent would reduced hospital stays be possible?

And given the specific cost of health care in your community, what would be your options for containing those costs?

We can help you answer those questions with a precision that simply isn't possible for anyone else.

How we save $185 million a year.

Precision, as a matter of fact, might be our most distinguishing characteristic.

You'll find it in the way we review claims to verify their validity.

And coordinate benefits to prevent overpayments.

And monitor changes in health-care costs, so we can question claims that appear unusual or excessive.

Out of each dollar received in fees, we spend less than 6¢ to cover all our expenses. The rest is used to benefit our subscribers.

The result is high-value coverage that saves more money than any bargain-rate ever could.

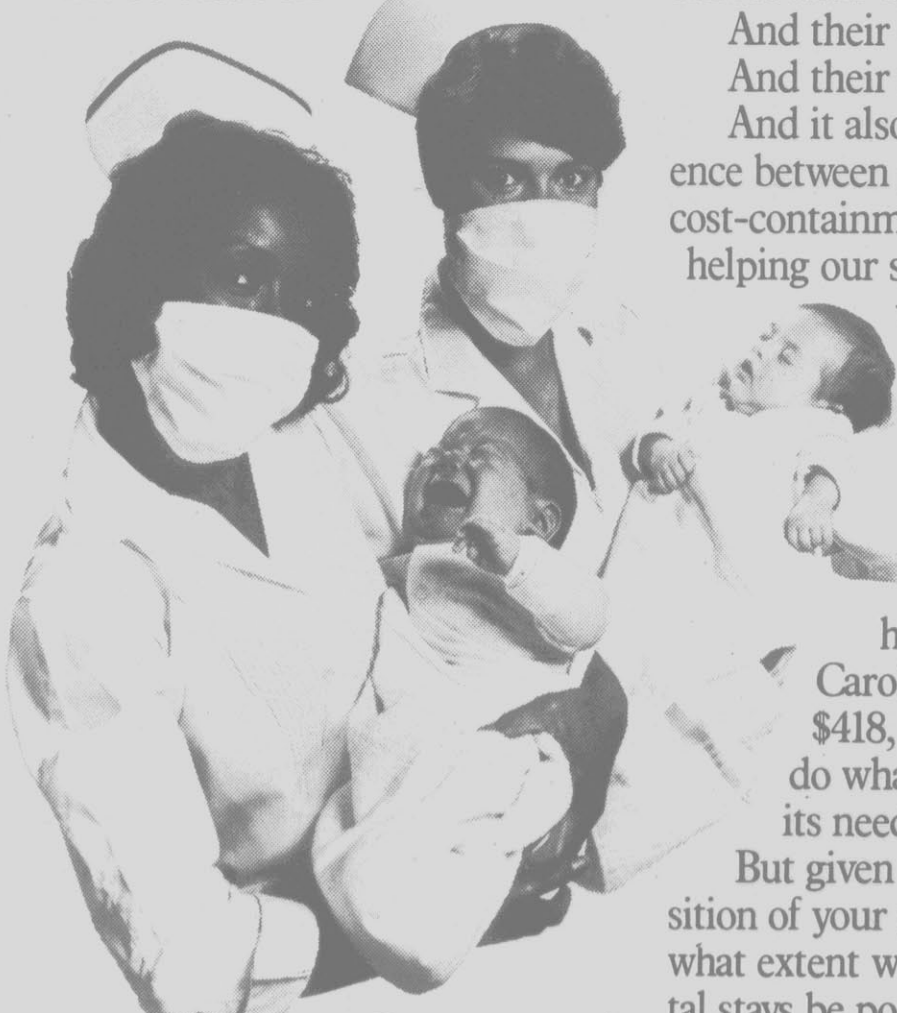

Last year those savings came to more than $185 million. To learn how your group can share in them, just call our nearest office.

Or write to Cost Containment, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, Box 2291, Durham, NC 27702.

The better you understand health coverage the more you'll prefer ours.
