Soviets Nix Reagan Proposals

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today rejected proposals made by President Reagan in an address to the United Nations, saying his initiatives "boiled down to absolutely groundless assertions" that the United States seeks an end to the arms race.

The official news agency Tass said Reagan's statements that he seeks an improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations were an attempt "to present in a somewhat modified form the self-same policy aimed at further aggravating international tension, achieving military superiority and interfering in the internal affairs of other states."

The president offered "a vessel with nothing inside it," Tass said.

"His speech contained no indication of any change in the essence of the present U.S. policy and boiled down to absolutely groundless assertions that the U.S.A. allegedly wants the arms race to be curbed and supports the basic aims and principles of the U.N. charter," the news agency said.

"The president's words concerning peace were only meant to camouflage Washington's basic foreign policy guidelines and its interventionist policy in all regions of the world — in the Middle East, in Central America, in the south of Africa, in Europe, in the Far East," Tass said.

The agency said "The U.N. rostrum was actually used by Reagan for his political, electioneering aims."

"What kind of president will Reagan be if re-elected?" Tass asked.

The Tass dispatch quoted several U.S. media reports describing Reagan's change of tone as designed to alleviate American voters' uneasiness about U.S.-Soviet relations.

In his address to the General Assembly on Monday, Reagan called for talks between the superpowers and an easing in tense U.S.-Soviet relations. As Reagan spoke, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko sat impassively.

Gromyko and Reagan are scheduled to meet in Washington on Friday in the American president's first high-level talks with a Soviet official.

In an initial Soviet response today, Radio Moscow criticized Reagan's speech, saying he insisted on U.S. military superiority and rejected Soviet invitations for a moratorium on space weapons' development.

The English-language radio report said Reagan "claimed that the increased military might of the United States (would provide) the basis for talks with the Soviet Union."

The broadcast said Reagan called for negotiations to stop the military use of outer space, but added: "he again rejected the Soviet proposal to ban the testing and deployment of anti-satellite weapons when talks (on space arsenals) open."

'Other' Candidate Wants 10 Percent

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Libertarian Bob Emory of Raleigh, campaigning here today for the U.S. Senate, doesn't expect to win the seat in November, but said "we are hoping for 10 percent of the vote."

According to Emory, "building a new party is always a very slow, hard process. People tend to follow their grandfather's lead."

But the candidate emphasized, "we are offering an alternative" and suggested that both the Democratic and Republican parties have "abandoned the principles" that the founders of the two parties stood for.

Emory outlined his platform simply: "To reduce taxes and to reduce regulation," saying "the idea behind America was a land of free people ... to be free to do what they want to as long as they don't harm someone else. And to reduce taxes."

Government regulations and high taxes, Emory suggested, "destroy growth opportunities and are morally wrong." He said the practical side of regulation is that it "destroys people's initiative for innovation and prevents progress."

The philosophical side of regulation: "Do whatever they want to as long as it doesn't harm someone else."

As for relations with other nations, Emory said he takes the "strong position that the United States should not involve itself in other people's business." The U.S., Emory suggested, should "be friends with everyone and allies with no one."

Emory said he has "had surprisingly more funds coming in than I expected" to support his campaign, although he said the number of dollars contributed is "piddling compared to my opponents. I've been pleased with it." But Emory suggested that the finances would "not allow a media campaign to sell me like a bar of soap."

A North Carolina native, Emory graduated from high school in Windsor, and holds degrees from

Space Battles 'Inevitable'

Jane's Cites Changes In U.S. Space Program

LONDON (AP) — The United States is developing a new breed of military astronauts because generals fear that superpower skirmishing in space is "almost inevitable" in the next 25 years, says the new Jane's Spaceflight Directory published today.

Although the United States is ahead in space technology, "the Russians have been far more energetic and successful in applying the technology that they possess," editor Reginald Turnill said in an introduction to the 311-page directory.

The directory is produced by the Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks that are considered highly authoritative by the defense establishment.

Turnill said the formation of space commands by the U.S. Air Force and Navy reflected growing concern about increased military activity in space. "The belief among U.S. defense chiefs that in the next 25 years contests in space are not only possible but almost inevitable, have led to the setting up of the new USAF Space Command," he said.

In a radio interview today, he said that means fierce superpower competition and technological skirmishing, rather than outright space battles, as the United States and the Soviet Union jockey for the "high ground" above the Earth.

"The feeling is that contests, rather than war, are likely. And this sort of thing has already begun, of course, with the superpowers pushing and shoving one another up there in space," Turnill said. "There's some indication that possibly the Russians have interfered with one or two U.S. satellites used for reconnaissance or spying purposes."

"There is a growing tendency on both sides to try out interfering with each other's satellites just to see what happens," he told The Associated Press. "In a way that is more convenient for those of us down here on Earth."

He wrote in the directory that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's "tradition of an open space program is being steadily eroded by the addition of secret

Drivers May See Gasoline Dealers More Competitive

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 50,000 gas stations that display a star or a shell or any of the other symbols of 13 major oil companies will be able to sell competing brands of gas if a judge OKs an agreement in a 13-year-old antitrust case, oil company spokesmen said.

Under the settlement between franchise retailers and the oil companies, dealers could shop for the cheapest wholesale gasoline — a Texaco dealer, for example, could buy Mobil gas, or the gasoline from any other of Texaco's competitors.

The move, called "debranding" by station owners, would mean more competition and lower gasoline prices, said Vic Rasheed, the executive director Service Station Dealers of America.

But oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg, publisher of the weekly Lundberg Letter, said selling multiple brands could lead to inefficiencies in gasoline distribution which "will work against any reduction in price."

The agreement was reached Friday and Monday, one week before the antitrust lawsuit was set to go to trial in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, officials said Monday night. It must still be approved by U.S. District Judge Donald Van Ardsalen.

"This is a tremendous victory for the independent dealer," said Lundberg, reached by telephone at his home in Los Angeles. "The dealer has won something that will tremendously decrease the supervisory influence" of the big oil companies.

"This goes a long way toward establishing the principle that a gasoline dealer is not a captive of his refiner and will be able to offer motorists significantly lower prices by shopping around," said Rasheed.

GOLF-GENERATED GIFT — The proceeds from the first annual Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic, a check for $47,000-plus, was presented this morning to William R. Freelove (center), vice president of Children's Services of Eastern Carolina, which is well under way with plans for the facility to serve families of children hospitalized at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Reid Hooper (right) and Reynolds May (left), coordinators of the tournament, made the presentation on behalf of those who participated or contributed to the project, which is expected to become an annual event for the ongoing support of the Ronald McDonald House and other children's charities in this area. Northern Plains Hit By Snow

By The Associated Press

A winter storm system that dumped up to 21 inches of snow on the northern Plains and Rockies released its icy grip today but left frigid temperatures and light snow in its wake.

The bulk of today's snow was on the ground in Montana, Wyoming, Utah and the Dakotas, deposited Monday by a blast of arctic air propelled by a stiff north wind.

"It's the usual kind of storm that comes in from the Northwest, and this time it just happened to hit Montana and the northern Rockies," Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "There's no immediate threat of more heavy snow at this time."

Light snow fell overnight in western North Dakota and western Wyoming. A strong cold front stretched from central Wisconsin across eastern Iowa and northwest Missouri to south central Kansas, according to the National Weather Service.

Agriculture officials said the moisture from the snow may not help dry fields this year, but its residual effect could be a plus next year.

"It's a little late in the year to get enthused about greening up the pastures, but it's definitely good," said Norm Tomon, agriculture extension agent in Minot, N.D. "The ground isn't frozen yet and I'm sure it will soak in."

Although winter is officially two months away, a winter storm watch was issued Monday for central Wyoming. Travelers' advisories were posted for southeastern Montana and north-central and southwestern Wyoming.

The heaviest snow in the storm that started Sunday was 21 inches at Dubois, Wyo. Cody, Wyo., got 17 inches.

Sheridan, Wyo., was hit with 15 inches of snow, breaking a record for the whole month of September, 9.5 inches in 1970. The 12.9 inches that fell Sunday broke a 24-hour September record of 6.9 inches, set in 1982.

Bismarck, N.D., received 4.6 inches of snow, breaking the previous record for all of September of 4.1 inches, set in 1942, but most of it melted Monday on the warm ground.

Up to 14 inches of snow fell on parts of northwestern South Dakota.

The wet snow snapped tree limbs and power lines in Wyoming's Green River area, causing scattered blackouts, but Pacific Power & Light Co. crews had all the outages repaired by about 10:30 a.m. Monday after five hours of work.

The state Highway Patrol said U.S. 14A between Lovell and Burgess Junction, over the Big Horn Mountains, was closed Monday. Yellowstone National Park's south and east entrances were closed Monday night as were several other high country roads because of the snow.

Johnson-Craddock Wedding Vows Performed Saturday

Debra Jean Craddock and Walter Ellis Johnson were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Red Oak Christian Church by Dr. Maurice Ankrum.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Williak of Albany, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis C. Johnson of Fayetteville.

Sam Winchester was organist for the double ring ceremony. Julie Tucker was vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Melanie Irvin of Greenville. Jackie Dudley of Ayden. Donna Johnson of Greenville and Carolyn Mallard of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Beth Mallard of Fayetteville, niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Matthew Mallard of Fayetteville, nephew of the bride.

Steve Johnson of Fayetteville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included Tim Warrington of Greenville, Ron Brubaker of Stokes and Steve Carlin of Fayetteville.

The bride wore an organza and chantilly lace empire style gown. Daisy trim accented the high neckline of the lace bodice and highlighted the cuffs of the bishop sleeves. Defining the waistline were bows. Two chantilly lace panels enhanced the A-line skirt which was bordered in matching lace and the chapel length train was attached at the gown back. Her chapel length mantilla was bordered in chantilly lace. She carried a cascade of white miniature carnations, daisies and greenery.

Each of the attendants wore a formal gown of petal faille taffeta designed with an opal portrait neckline outlined in a double ruffle of matching taffeta. The gowns were fashioned with short puffed sleeves and full gathered skirts. A tie sash enhanced the modified natural waistline. Each carried long-stemmed red roses accented with baby's breath and greenery.

The flower girl was attired in a similar styled dress and carried a basket filled with rose petals.

A reception followed at the church and was directed by the bride's circle at the church. Night Worshipers. Patty Pollard greeted guests. Rice bags were distributed by Mark and Christy Pollard and Jackie Mitchell. Betty Lyles, sister of the bride, served cake and Dona Mitchell, sister of the bride, poured punch.

Nelda Highsmith directed the wedding.

The couple will be living in Fayetteville after a wedding trip to the North Carolina and Tennessee mountains.

The bride was employed as a preschool teacher at Red Oak Nursery School. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is an independent insurance agent in Fayetteville.

A rehearsal dinner was held Friday night at the Sheraton. The couple was honored at a pig picking and several showers prior to the ceremony.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place On Saturday Evening

Denise Worthington and Rene Otto Steiner Jr. were married Saturday evening at five o'clock in a double ring ceremony conducted at the home of the bridegroom.

The Rev. Willis Wilson performed the ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by guitarist, Arlee Lawrence of Greenville. He chose as his song, "Two Little Words." Soloist Sherri Lawrence of Greenville sang "Love Me With All Your Heart."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worthington and Estelle Steiner, all of Route 4, Greenville. The bridegroom is also the son of the late Rene Otto Steiner Sr.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her brother, Tony R. Clark of Route 4, Greenville. She selected an ivory dress with a bodice overlay and elbow length sleeves. She carried a nosegay of carnations and daisies.

Serving as matron of honor was Pat Lawrence of Greenville. She wore a dress of ivory and burgundy and carried a nosegay of assorted daisies and carnations with burgundy streamers. Sonja and Cynthia Warren, nieces of the bridegroom, served as junior bridesmaids. They wore dresses of ivory with long sleeves and burgundy trim. Each carried a nosegay like that of the honor attendant.

Dana K. Tripp, daughter of the bride, was flower girl and wore a lavender dress and carried a basket of assorted flowers.

David Robinson of Route 4, Tarboro, served as best man. Gary Steiner of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was usher. Jason Lang of Ayden, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bride's mother wore a blue dress accented by white. The mother of the bridegroom selected a dress of lavender. Both were presented corsages by the bridal couple.

Mary B. Jones, of Route 4, Greenville, grandmother of the bride, and Estelle Cox, great aunt of the bridegroom of Winterville, were presented corsages by the bridal couple.

The bridal couple was entertained at an after rehearsal party given by friends Friday night.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bridegroom and was given by parents of the bridal couple.

A floral arrangement of fall colors decorated the refreshment table.

The wedding cake was served by Winnie Harper of Tarboro. Janice Everette and Marlene Warren of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom, served refreshments assisted by Charlotte Davis of Rocky Mount.

Michelle Warren and Jacqueline Everette, nieces of the bridegroom, presided at the register and gave out rice bags.

Janice Everette of Greenville directed the wedding.

The bridegroom is employed by Vermont American and the bride is a student at Pitt Community College.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will live at Route 4, Greenville.

Mistletoe Show Set For November

The seventh annual Mistletoe Show is scheduled for Nov. 9-11 at the Knobbs Creek Recreation Center in Elizabeth City. The show is being sponsored by the Elizabeth City Junior Woman's Club.

It will feature 70 booths stocked with various handmade craft items. Included will be cross-stitch, dolls, ornaments, ceramics, kitchen and wood items, stained glass, country crafts and numerous Christmas crafts. All crafts were made by Albemarle area residents.

The show will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Meals and snacks will be served daily by women of the Ramoth Gilead Baptist Church.

A special treat will be the arrival of Santa Claus Saturday afternoon.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A friend of ours (we'll call her Joan) telephoned her mother, Mrs. A, long distance. A gentleman answered Mrs. A's telephone. Joan did not identify herself as Mrs. A's daughter, so the gentleman asked Joan, "Who is calling, please."

Joan responded, "Who are you?" The gentleman replied, "My name is Paul."

Then Joan said, "Well, Paul, please put Mrs. A on the phone."

Joan believes that Paul was rude to have asked who was calling, as it was none of his business. We believe it was an appropriate question. We would like your opinion.

FRIENDS OF JOAN

DEAR FRIENDS: It was not rude of Paul to have asked who was calling. (Perhaps Mrs. A had instructed him to inquire.) Joan should have immediately identified herself as Mrs. A's daughter.

And speaking of rudeness, I think Joan was rude to demand that Paul identify himself, as it was none of her business.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you a few weeks ago telling you that Michael Jackson was my idol, that I worshiped him and would give anything in the world if I could meet him personally. I asked you for a few suggestions on how I could meet him, and you wrote me back a crummy letter full of put-downs.

You gave me no hope at all. Instead you told me that thousands of girls felt the same way about Michael, and I didn't have a chance of meeting him in person.

Abby, I turned to you hoping you would give me some advice, and I can't believe how bad you made me feel.

EX-READER

DEAR EX: Sorry I let you down, but I gave you the best advice I had to offer. Celebrities like Michael Jackson hire a retinue of bodyguards to protect them from all the admirers who want to meet him personally. I would have been even more unkind to have given you false hope.

DEAR ABBY: Here is one older widow who elects to be called by her Christian name. I deplore being called "Mrs." anybody. How can "Missus" be abbreviated Mrs.? There is no "r" in Missus. I can only presume we get a Mrs. when we marry because we become a plural of a Mr. Or perhaps in some bygone

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Now is the perfect time to try your hand at fascinating Fair Isle knitting with this Scandinavian inspired sweater with a stunning snowflake yoke. Best of all, it is worked back and forth on circular needles so that there are no sleeves to set in and only underarm sleeve seams to be sewn.

The simplified directions are written for sizes 12 through 18. Readily available knitting worsted-weight yarns are used.

To obtain directions for making the Snowflake Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0923 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0923 by sending a check or money order for $17.50 for sizes 12/14 or $20 for sizes 16/18 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Please specify your choice of the following color combinations: white with royal blue, scarlet, purple or black; ecru with rust or brown. The kit price includes full instructions, Bernat Berella 4 yarn and shipping and handling charges.

Dear Pat: Years ago I clipped from one of your columns the instructions for making a knitted cord you had named "Idiot's Delight." I have used it many times for many purposes, but I like best my latest innovation with this pattern. I am enclosing two belts made using this technique. — Polly Curtis, College Park, Md.

Polly didn't say what size needle she used, but I am guessing it was about a size 15. One of the belts was made with 1/4-inch ribbon in three shades of brown ranging from light beige to coffee brown. She worked it holding the three ribbons together throughout. The other was worked with pastel shades of a bulky "thick and thin" yarn. Both are truly stunning, adding a real couturier touch to any garment.

To make an Idiot's Delight cord or belt, cast on 3 stitches on one double-pointed needle. (Two double-pointed needles are a necessity with this pattern.) After you knit one row, slide the 3 stitches to the opposite end of your needle, pull your yarn (or ribbon) tight and knit 3 again.

Repeat these steps over and over until the piece is the desired length. Always give the cord or belt a gentle tug as you slide the stitches.

I had never thought of working it on multiple strands with the large needles, so I am very grateful to Polly for sending me this adaption of an old idea!

Another old idea that will be very useful in creating an up-to-the-minute finishing touch on new garments is a knitted bias trim. For those knitters who don't like to crochet borders on jackets or coats, this may be the perfect answer.

You can cast on any number of stitches, with the number to be determined by the desired width. To practice, cast on 8 or 10 stitches. Purl the first row and knit the second row, increasing 1 in the first stitch and decreasing at the end of the row by knitting 2 stitches together. Repeat these two rows for the desired length.

Fold the bias piece in half and whip it over the edges of your knit garment. You will find that it turns corners very neatly. A solid-color garments takes on a special air of pizzazz with a contrasting bias bond — one in tweed or a blending shade of a different type of yarn.

FAIR ISLE...sweater with a snowflake yoke is knitted on circular needles so there are no sleeves to set in.

There is also a double-bias band with a definite fold line in the center. For this one, cast on 11 stitches, purling the first and all odd-numbered rows. On the even-numbered rows, increase in the first stitch, knit 3, work the double decrease described below on the next three stitches, knit 3 and increase in the last stitch.

Repeat these two rows for the desired length. Bind off. You will see that there is a well-defined fold line at the center of the strip and that the two ends can easily be mitered for joining.

To work the double decrease, slip 2 stitches from the left to the right needle, slipping them knitwise, one at a time. Then, knit 1 stitch and pass the 2 slipped stitches over the knitted stitch.

To slip stitches knitwise, insert the right needle tip into a stitch on the left needle as if you were going to knit it, but just pass it from the left to the right needle.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I'd like to put you in the mood for this column.

Imagine you're a part of a militant group of women, marching around the park holding banners that read, "UNISEX BABY SHOWERS! LET IT RAIN ON MEN'S PARADES," and "EVERY TOILET BOWL COULD USE A FEW GOOD MEN!"

Standing on a tree stump is a woman shouting, "wedding and baby showers have done more to hold women down in the depths of oppression than any other single custom in our society. (SHOUTS OF "RIGHT ON, SISTER!")"

"Think of it! When you receive from your future mother-in-law a gift of matched pots and pans, a cookbook, a dozen dishtowels and a cute little scouring-pad holder, who do you think will be using them? Her precious son?" (WOMEN BEGIN SHAKING TREES IN ANGER AND PULLING OVER STATUES SHOUTING, "NO!")

The television crews for the six o'clock news move in for a tight shot. "Men are nowhere near a baby shower when you get all those feeding spoons and plastic bibs and carriers to strap on your back. Why? Because they'll never use them. I say women will never be free until both members of the union attend showers and share in all those gifts that keep giving." (POLICE HAVE TO BB

SUMMONED AS WOMEN TRY TO TURN OVER A BUS.)

Now, I'm a realistic woman. Somehow I don't see men sitting around at a unisex wedding or baby shower in this decade. But what is reasonable are wedding and baby showers for men who can at least get some feeling of what it is like to share responsibilities.

It would warm my heart to see the daddy of the bride give his future son-in-law a tool box, a lawn mower, or a cute little can of cleanser to unclog the sink.

His friends could send him on his honeymoon with dreams of a new stepladder, an alarm clock with his own set of headphones, and his own set of lug wrenches awaiting his return.

Lessons

The plight of the Louisiana World's Fair carries with it some bitter lessons applicable to future ventures in that direction.

Perhaps the first thought is that there are distinct limits as to the size of practical investments by sponsors. So much depends on public attendance, which has proven disappointingly poor.

Too many world's fairs detract from their luster, especially when their sequence in the same country is in a too-frequent pattern. The intervals require spacing out. A world's fair should not become a routine event.

Themes are important in that they must stir public imagination and provide a basis for exhibits that hold greater attraction than that posed by pictures and small-scale models. (Do you remember the Louisiana World's Fair theme?)

The carnival attractions (rides and shows) cannot carry the burden alone. The scores of existing theme parks have pretty well captured that market.

Geographic accessibility is another factor. Look at a map and you'll note that New Orleans' access by land (a necessity for most people who travel in the family car) is restricted by its location adjacent to the Gulf of Mexico, and a limited perimeter "halves" the number of potential roads leading into the city. (A site of only a few hundred miles farther northward would have held more promise.)

To say we're sorry over the cash-flow problems of the Louisiana World's Fair is an understatement. It proved one more instance of ambitions outreaching realities.

Benefits

There are some who say the United States' economy is precarious, but the administration's good fortune seems to be continuing as November election approaches.

Inflation rate and unemployment rate are favorable to President Reagan as he seeks a second term in office. Now another potential economic problem has been eliminated with General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers reaching an agreement on a new national contract. As if that weren't enough in positive developments, the soft coal industry reached a tentative agreement on a new contract with the United Mine Workers. A protracted strike in either of these basic industries could have meant economic problems for the economy and, consequently, for Reagan.

From a political standpoint, the likelihood that strikes have been averted in the auto and coal mining industries is good news for the administration. The continuation of production should mean further economic stability, and the incumbent administration always benefits from that.

Illinois Goes To Reagan

CHICAGO — The magnitude of Walter F. Mondale's campaign task is measured by the quiet transformation of Illinois from his strongest Midwestern state into a potential runaway for Ronald Reagan.

No longer is the state of the president's birthplace and boyhood home a cliffhanger. A variety of public and private polls show Mondale trailing by a minimum 10 percentage points in surveys taken nearly a month ago, with newer data pushing the gap into the 15- to 20-percentage-point range. Prominent Democrats here have given up, choosing to concentrate on Rep. Paul Simon's challenge against Sen. Charles H. Percy.

This is crushing news for the Mondale campaign in a smokestack industrial state that the Reagan recovery seemed to have left behind. What's more, politicians of both parties reckoned continued tension between Gov. James Thompson, the president's state campaign chairman, and old-line Reaganites spelled big trouble for Reagan in Illinois.

That's why the president made no less than three appearances in Illinois just before and after Labor Day. But in a state where Cub fever transcends a dull political race, Reagan's surge was not the result of his ho-hum appearances here. It may be attributable to the state's slowly improving economy; more likely it is part of the national frame of mind.

What's happening here contradicts Tip O'Neill's maxim that all politics is local. To have a chance, Mondale cannot hope to pick off promising states one by one — as in a fight for the nomination — but must transform the national climate.

No major state looked more promising for Mondale than Illinois. Depressed agriculture, farm implements and steel, combined with expanded black registration, made Reagan's prospects bleak.

The topper seemed to be the absence of grass roots Reaganite activity. The decision by the White House to grant Big Jim Thompson his desire to be state campaign

WASHINGTON — Once again the International Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide is back in the news. If the Senate will agree to the two sensible and prudent reservations sought by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the treaty should be ratified. Nothing of significance will be lost by the Senate's consent and some minimal measure of good will may be gained.

The Genocide Convention was approved unanimously by the U.N. General Assembly in December 1948. The following June, President Truman sent the treaty to the Senate with a recommendation that it be approved. The Senate balked then, as it has balked for the ensuing 35 years, on questions of "understanding." It is time to have these questions resolved.

As the term "genocide" generally is understood, the crime arouses revulsion almost beyond description. Hitler's slaughter of more than 6 million Jews provides the most appalling example of genocide in this century, but there have been other instances — notably the near extermination of the Ibos of Nigeria — that have aroused the condemnation of the civilized world. In his recent statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Helms spoke of the "horror" of genocide. It was precisely the right word.

Given this unanimity of opinion on genocide itself, why has a treaty with so noble a purpose languished so long? The answer lies in part with the language of the convention, and in part with the language of our own Constitution.

The convention defines five acts committed with intent to destroy "in whole or in part" a national, ethnical, racial or religious group. These are 1) killing members of the group; 2) causing serious bodily "or mental" harm to members of the group; 3) deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part; 4) imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group; and 5) forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.

The convention commits the signatories to adopting legislation "in accordance with their respective Constitutions" — note the language — providing for the punishment of public officials or private individuals who commit any of the prohibited acts. Such persons would be tried in the country in which the acts were committed "or by such international tribunal as may have jurisdiction with respect to those contracting parties which shall have accepted its jurisdiction."

Under Article IX of the convention — and this is one of the serious sticking points — questions of interpretation and state responsibility "shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute."

A threshold problem is that our own Constitution, in defining the supreme law of our land, says that the supreme law includes treaties "made under the authority of the United States." This convention would be such a treaty. It would bind all state and federal judges. The first of the Helms reservations would make it clear that the treaty authorizes only legislation "which would be valid in the absence of the convention." Surely this is a reasonable proposal.

Helms' second reservation goes to Article IX. He wants a formal understanding that the United States will not accept the World Court's jurisdiction over any domestic matter "as determined by the United States." This language echoes the Connally Amendment of 1946, which the Senate prudently adopted as a condition of recognizing the World Court at that time. Again, Helms is on sound ground.

It is unlikely that the Genocide Convention, if ratified, ever would be invoked in the United States. To be sure, opponents have concocted horror stories. By tortuous interpretation, the treaty conceivably could be invoked against racial homicides, or against a bigoted Louis Farrakhan who causes "serious mental harm" to Jews, or against public officials who fail to protect Aleuts, American Indians, and braceros who come in to pick lettuce. These are frivolous conjectures.

It is doubtful, indeed, that the Genocide Convention ever will amount to anything more than a symbol of man's revulsion at inhumanity to man. So long as it is made clear that we are not effectively amending our Constitution, and that we are not surrendering sovereignty over our domestic affairs to any world tribunal, the Senate would do well to advise and consent.

Taking The Oath On Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the presidential election is still more than a month away, plans are already being laid for the winner, whether it's President Reagan or Walter F. Mondale, to take the oath of office next Jan. 20 — a day before the inauguration.

Although the Constitution requires that the new president be sworn in on Jan. 20, the traditional ceremony on the steps of the Capitol is scheduled for Jan. 21 this time around.

Inaugural Committee officials, who have already begun preliminary plans for the festivities, deny that the inauguration was moved up a day to keep it from conflicting with the Jan. 20 Super Bowl.

In fact, says John Chambers, the committee's executive director, the inauguration is always moved up a day when Jan. 20 falls on a Sunday, as it does this year.

But, to comply with the constitutional requirement and to make sure that the country doesn't go without a chief executive for a day, the next president will be sworn in on Sunday, Jan. 20, probably in a short, private ceremony, Chambers said.

"He has to do it. How he does it is his prerogative," he said.

That will mean that the next president will come to the inauguration the next day already sworn in, and that when he takes the oath from Chief Justice Warren Burger, it will be just for show, Chambers said.

The last president to be sworn in twice for the same term was Dwight D. Eisenhower, in 1953. He first took the oath in a 3½ minute private ceremony in the East Room at the White House on Sunday, then took it again at his inaugural on Monday.

The Jan. 20 swearing-in date is contained in the 21st Amendment, made part of the Constitution in 1933. Before that, a new president took office on March 4. Four other presidents before Eisenhower had their swearing-in date fall on a Sunday: James Monroe, Zachary Taylor, Rutherford Hayes and Woodrow Wilson.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., isn't one to take no for an answer.

As Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., tells it, Goldwater wanted to put up a set of pull-down maps on the wall of the Intelligence Committee room.

But Goldwater, chairman of the committee, was told by the Capitol architect that he could not drill through the sandstone walls there, Biden related at a recent public Judiciary Committee meeting.

Goldwater came in with his home drill, told the guards they could arrest him if they wanted, and drilled the holes himself, Biden said.

A spokesman for the intelligence panel, Sam Bouchard, confirmed the story. "The map is there," he said. "Sen. Goldwater eliminated a lot of red tape by doing it himself."

During a House-Senate conference committee on a hazardous waste disposal bill, Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, sat silently for about an hour. He had reservations about the bill's impact on business — a position that put him at odds with House conferees seeking to expand federal regulation of small businesses. Finally, Symms said he felt compelled to speak.

"I had hoped to remain silent throughout this meeting," he began.

Then he paused — just for a moment, but long enough for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., to jump in and comment:

"And let me say, senator, that all of us here fervently shared your hope."

Strength For Today

The Bible gives us a picture of failure, recovery and triumph in the career of John Mark — the author of the second Gospel.

Mark as a young man started out with Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey. When the going got hard and hazardous, Mark deserted his older companions and lit out for home. Paul was furious about the episode.

Yet years later Paul spoke of Mark in terms of tenderness. In the epistle to Philemon, for example, Paul speaks of Mark as "a fellow laborer." Time appeared to have made a difference with Paul and Mark. The first acquired compassion; the second, courage.

The mistakes of life are never failures unless we make them so. John Mark, the failure, ended up as one of the greatest figures in the history of the church. His career has often been reenacted.

Unable to come to grips with this hard reality, local managers of both presidential candidates tend to play "inside baseball" — particularly the Democrats. "Illinois is a most peculiar state to do business in," one Mondale tactician told us, "but I think we're going to be OK."

He referred to the art of keeping both Mayor Washington and Alderman Vrdolyak in harness (a task complicated by the mayor's insistence that the black vote may not be energized unless Mondale embraces a multibillion-dollar national jobs program). Chuck Champion, an ingratiating young Boston pol who is one of Mondale's personal favorites, has been sent here to hold hands with City Hall's warring factions.

The first meeting of the Wahl-Coates PTA for the 1984-85 school year will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the school auditorium. After a brief general meeting, parents will be given the opportunity to visit classrooms and talk to teachers. Projects and plans for the school year will be discussed.

PTA dues are $2 per person for the school year. Parents can join at this meeting.

Home Thefts

The theft from two homes of more than $400 in cash and $8,200 in jewelry were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer J.C. Mulford said a 3:54 p.m. call reported $325 in cash and $2,250 worth of jewelry missing from a house at 102 Prince Place.

Officer K.P. Fuller said thieves entered a home at 205 S. Sylvan Drive through a door and took $80 in cash, $5,990 in jewelry, and other property. That break-in, according to the officer, was reported at 5 p.m.

Investigation of the thefts is continuing.

Edmisten Meetings

Special meetings for supporters of Rufus Edmisten, a candidate of governor of N.C., will be held starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Democratic Headquarters, 604 Arlington Blvd.

Meetings will be held in October on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Man Loses Pants, And His $10,300

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A 52-year-old man told police that someone stole his pants — with $10,300 in the pockets.

Waverly Brookman said he was watching television early Wednesday at his wife's Henrico County flower shop in suburban Glen Allen when a noise drew him to the front door.

Returning to a back room, where his pants had been placed on a chair, he saw an open window and no pants.

A pallet had been placed against the building, Brookman said. A stick was found nearby and probably was used to reach inside the window and lift the pants, he said.

Brookman said he did not want to put his money in a bank because of a $14,000 judgement against him.

Charge Dropped Against Beauty

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — One of two misdemeanor charges against former beauty queen Joyce McKinney has been dismissed.

Ms. McKinney, 34, of Asheville, N.C., was accused last June of harassing Kirk Anderson, 28, who as a Mormon missionary in Great Britain in 1977 claimed Ms. McKinney kidnapped him and forced him to have sex with her. She fled the country before British authorities could bring her to trial, and they decided not to seek extradition.

The woman was charged in the June 16 incident with disturbing the peace — by following Anderson — and falsely identifying herself to a police officer.

Fifth Circuit Judge Eleanor S. Lewis has granted a defense motion claiming the charge of disorderly conduct was misfiled.

Bikes Missing

Police are investigating the theft of bicycles from two homes here Monday.

Officer W.R. McLawhorn said a 10 speed bicycle was reported taken from A3 Wilson Acres in a break-in reported at 10:20 a.m. McLawhorn also said a bicycle was reported stolen from 505 E. Fifth St. That report was received at 1:30 p.m.

Toastmasters

Toastmaster of the evening will be Bill Sanders. Table topics master will be Steve Martin and general evaluator will be Janie Martin. Speakers will be Charlotte Flanagan, Carol Lunney, Steve Johnston and Pat Flanagan.

The meeting is open to the public. For more information about Toastmasters, call 756-7192.

Journal Acquired

"Teaching English in the Two-Year College," a journal for educators founded at East Carolina University 10 years ago, has been acquired by the National Council of Teachers of English.

The journal's editors, Dr. Bertie Fearing of ECU and John E. Hutchens of Pitt Community College, will continue as editors for a three-year term beginning this year.

"NCTE's taking over the printing costs, plus providing support personnel, equates to a contractual arrangement with ECU for $75,000 during the next three years," Dr. Fearing explained.

Public Forum

A public forum on 1984 state and national elections will be held by East Carolina University Thursday from 8-9 p.m.

Panel members will discuss organization of and prospects for victory of the major president candidates, and senatorial and gubernatorial candidates. The speakers will also talk about campaign themes and activities that have been successful.

Forum speakers are Betty Speir, vice chair of the North Carolina Democratic Party; Nelson Crisp, Greenville attorney and Republican Party activist; and Dr. Thomas Eamon, associate professor of political science at ECU. Janice Faulkner, director of the ECU Regional Development Institute, will be the moderator.

The forum is sponsored by the ECU departments of history and political science and will be held at the Willis Building, located at the corner of First and Reade streets.

Seminars Planned

Development of business-related skills will be emphasized in a series of seminars planned by East Carolina University's Division of Continuing Education in five North Carolina and Virginia locations this fall.

Seminar topics and locations include "Management Skills for Supervisors," Sept. 27-28 in Raleigh; "Leading People to Higher Productivity," Raleigh, Norfolk, Greensboro and Arlington (dates available from ECU, Division of Continuing Education); "Time Management for Managers and Professionals," Raleigh, Greenville, Greensboro, Arlington and Norfolk; "Professional Sales Skills," Greensboro, Raleigh, Richmond and Arlington; and "Negotiation Techniques for Salespeople," Greensboro, Raleigh, Greenville, Richmond and Arlington.

Additional information on seminar leaders, seminar content and registration materials is available through the East Carolina University Department of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall.

PTO Open House

Pactolus Elementary School is holding a PTO Open House tonight at 7:30 p.m. with Pitt County school Superintendent Eddie West as the guest speaker. Following a short slide presentation, parents will be invited to visit their child's classroom.

Council Meeting

The Pitt County Council on the Status of Women will meet Wednesday starting at 5 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office. Reports on upcoming seminars will be given by Louise Downing and Helen Simpson.

'Rural Advantage' Conference Planned

A one-day conference Friday at J.H. Rose High School will deal with "The Rural Advantage: Political, Economic, and Educational Advantages of Rural, Small, or Isolated Areas."

The conference will be sponsored by five state and eastern North Carolina agencies: the N.C. Association of Educators; N.C. Parent Teachers Association; Northeastern North Carolina Tomorrow; Regional Development Institute, East Carolina University, and the Rural Education Institute of the school of education, ECU.

One phase of the conference will be exhibits to be shown in Elm Street Gymnasium, from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m.

The agenda at Rose is: 9:30-10:30 a.m., a general session in the auditorium; 10:45-11:30 a.m., first group session; and 11:45 a.m.-12:30 p.m., second group session.

A number of speakers in several fields will take part in the conference. Among them are: Janice Faulkner, director, Regional Development Institute, ECU; Dr. Roy Forbes, consultant, N.C. Commission on Education for Economic Growth; Dr. Jonathan Sher, president, Rural Education and Development Inc.

Also, Sen. Wilma Woodard, Wake County; Commissioner George Graham, Lenoir County Board of Commissioners; Ferrell Blount, Pitt County Board of Education; Dr.

Paul DeLargy, director, Institute of Community and Area Development, University of Georgia; Joan Giardano, manager, Public and Governmental Affairs, Pitt/Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and Patricia Sugg, Greene Lamp Inc., a Head Start Program for Lenoir and Greene counties.

Generic Bill Signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, signing legislation to speed to market cheaper generic versions of trade-name prescription drugs, said that under the new law "everyone wins."

Consumers will save millions of dollars, say backers of the measure signed into law Monday. Pharmaceutical firms will be able to develop more drugs thanks to extended patent protection for their discoveries and, once the patent protection expires, can more quickly market copies of brand-name products.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who sponsored the bill in the Senate, estimated consumers would save $1 billion over the next decade by being able to purchase less expensive generic equivalents of brand-name drugs.

Generic drugs have been available for years, often at a fraction of the cost of their trade-name versions, but only after their manufacturers went through the laborious and lengthy process of proving their safety and effectiveness as if no chemical equivalents already were on the market.

The law Reagan signed allows drug companies to market generic versions of drugs without having to reprove their safety and effectiveness.

Judge OKs Veterans Settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge today tentatively approved a proposed $180 million settlement in a suit by Vietnam veterans who said they and their families were harmed by the wartime herbicide Agent Orange.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein of Brooklyn would, if he gives his final OK, effectively end the 5-year-old legal battle between the veterans and the seven companies that manufactured Agent Orange.

Veterans and the companies are still suing the U.S. government.

Weinstein must still establish a mechanism to determine which veterans and relatives qualify to receive money from the settlement fund, and how much. He said he might still reject the settlement if a satisfactory plan for distributing the money is not developed.

Weinstein will hold hearings, starting Wednesday, on how much of the $180 million will go to hundreds of lawyers for the veterans, who have submitted claims estimated at more than $10 million.

Agent Orange was sprayed over millions of acres of Southeast Asia to destroy jungle vegetation that sheltered Communist insurgents. Though it was supposed to have been safe for humans and animals, it was later found to be contaminated with a highly toxic form of dioxin.

About 15,000 veterans filed lawsuits beginning in 1978, charging that their exposure to Agent Orange caused them to suffer ailments ranging from skin rash to cancer. They also blamed the herbicide for miscarriages by their wives and birth defects in their children.

The chemical companies insisted that Agent Orange was safe, that they produced it under orders from the government and that any harm by the chemical came from misuse.

The individual suits were consolidated into a single class action before Weinstein, which was to have gone to trial on May 7.

Lawyers reached a proposed settlement just hours before jury selection was to have begun.

The deal required the chemical firms — Dow Chemical, Monsanto, Hercules, Uniroyal, Diamond Shamrock, Thompson Chemical and T.H. Agriculture and Nutrition — to immediately place $180 million in a trust fund that would pay claims for up to 25 years.

Search Party Reports Three Escapees Spotted In Kansas

LANCASTER, Kan. (AP) — Officers with search dogs combed barns and homes in a 2-square-mile area today after three of five inmates who escaped from a top-security prison were spotted getting out of a car and running into a field.

Authorities believe the five — three of them convicted murderers, four serving life sentences — split up shortly after they sawed their way out of the Kansas State Penitentiary on Monday. Sightings of the inmates were reported within 10 miles of the prison, in Leavenworth, Basehor and Tonganoxie.

The escape appeared to be well planned. The inmates used hacksaws to cut through a mesh gate, crawled through ductwork and then cut through a bar covering a window opening.

Prison officials dispatched a team of officers to this northeastern Kansas town at 10:30 p.m. Monday after authorities spotted three men matching descriptions of the escapees, Atchison County Sheriff Hugh Gillen said.

Lancaster City Marshal Larry Meyers reported seeing two black men and a white man leave a car northwest of Lancaster, about 30 miles from the prison in Lansing.

Meyers notified county authorities in Lancaster, then returned to the area with Atchison County deputies, where they spotted the trio along the road, Gillen said.

Seeing the patrol car, the men ran down the road and into a field, Gillen said. "They observed our car and they just disappeared," said Gillen, who was monitoring the officers' radio dispatches.

Prison Deputy Director Randall Buford said 10 men and two supervisors were sent to the area and Gillen said a team of dogs from the prison and Kansas Highway Patrol troopers were on the scene early today.

Prison officials also reported a sighting near Lebo, Kan., in Coffey County, about 100 miles from Lansing. Buford said no one from the prison was checking out that report, but that local authorities were investigating.

Prison Director Herb Maschner told reporters at a news conference Monday that the inmates apparently took advantage of a prison renovation project that followed a breakout in 1981.

Maschner said the five inmates apparently used pieces of hacksaw blades to cut through a mesh gate on the third floor of Cellhouse D.

The five then apparently slid down three floors in a space about one foot wide between a mesh fence and galvanized steel air duct, entered a blower and crawled ten to 12 feet through the 3-foot-wide duct to an opening to the outside. From there the escapees sawed through a bar about 1 1/4 inches thick, Maschner said.

Buford said the inmates were discovered missing shortly after the escape when a guard in a prison tower reported seeing two inmates running in the shadows.

U.S. Seeks More Security Funding

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking to prevent any more devastating attacks on U.S. embassies abroad, is asking Congress to urgently approve $372 million in emergency funds to strengthen embassy security.

John Hughes, the State Department spokesman, said the funds would be used to begin construction of more secure embassies in "high threat areas," to build protective barricades, improve entry controls and provide armored vehicles.

At the same time, the State Department has sent out a warning to all Mideast diplomatic posts in the wake of new threats of terrorist attacks.

"We are taking these all seriously," Hughes said of the threat, reported to have come from the terrorist group "Islamic Jihad."

That is the same group that took responsibility for the devastating bombing of the embassy annex in Beirut last week.

Hughes disclosed Monday that the explosion that devastated the embassy annex was equivalent to 3,000 pounds of dynamite, nearly 10 times the previous estimate of the blast's force.

But Hughes said the United States has no intention of withdrawing completely from Lebanon, although new security measures will almost certainly be required.

"The embassy is going to stay, but obviously we need to do some hard-thinking on how it will operate," Hughes said.

Hughes said the State Department wants Congress to approve the additional funds for embassy security before it adjourns. If approved, the amount will more than double the funds allocated to embassy security. The current amount is about $145 million.

Hughes said Secretary of State George P. Shultz was given a report on the Beirut embassy attack by Robert Oakley, head of the State Department's office of counter-terrorism.

Oakley had just returned from an inspection of the embassy destruction and reported here to Shultz, who is attending the U.N. General Assembly session.

Hughes said the Oakley probe disclosed that the Lebanese guards employed by the embassy fired at the terrorist when he drove his van through an embassy checkpoint and that the terrorist may have been dead when the van exploded.

But he said members of the regular Lebanese army who were nearby apparently did not open fire, nor did Lebanese police, also nearby.

In Washington, the State Department put the casualty total at two American dead and 20 injured, six Lebanese embassy employees dead and 19 injured and between five and 15 Lebanese visitors dead and between 20 to 30 injured.

Alan Romberg, the deputy department spokesman, disclosed that embassy security was being put on new alert in the Middle East after the Beirut newspaper, As-Safir, reported a telephone threat from someone identifying himself as a member of the Islamic Jihad that "a big operation will be carried out against American interests soon."

Reagan Speech: Just Politics, Or Offer?

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The last question put to Secretary of State George Shultz at his news conference was whether the impending election prompted President Reagan to take a conciliatory stand toward the Soviet Union in his speech to the U.N. General Assembly.

"When is that election anyway?" Shultz quipped Monday.

He started to move away from the microphone in the hotel ballroom, but thought better of it.

"I don't think it has a bearing on this," he said in a serious tone. "Really, I don't."

But the skepticism will probably endure.

Indeed, Reagan's proposal for meetings between high-level Soviet and U.S. officials appears to shadow a recommendation in the 1984 Democratic Party platform.

That platform, which scored Reagan for failing to reach an arms control agreement or meet with top Soviet officials, said one way "to reopen the dialogue" with the Soviets is to have "meetings between senior civilian and military officials, in order to reduce tensions and explore possible formal agreements."

Reagan comes from the right wing of the Republican party that has always taken a dim view of agreeing to restrain U.S. weapons — especially in agreements with an adversary they consider unreliable or worse.

Four years ago, he was busily campaigning against the SALT II treaty limiting U.S. and Soviet strategic weapons. Earlier, he had condemned most other major arms control accords.

But here was Reagan at the United Nations, only six weeks before Election Day, declaring "we recognize that there is no sane alternative to negotiations on arms control and other issues between our two nations, which have the capacity to destroy civilization as we know it."

Could he be trying to nail down the commanding lead he appears to hold over Democrat Walter F. Mondale by convincing moderates and liberals he has his heart in arms control?

Robert C. McFarlane, his national security adviser, told an audience of graduate students last week in Washington that "the passion and preoccupation" of the president is to reverse the arms race.

Kenneth Adelman, his arms control director, said in an interview "we are going to make it as easy as we possibly can in our power for the Soviets to get back to real negotiations."

It took Reagan 10 months to approve negotiations to reduce U.S. and Soviet medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe. It took six more months for him to adopt a position to cut back longer-range missiles.

And yet, the speech was hardly his first burst of conciliation.

From his hospital bed after the attempt on his life in March 1981, he wrote the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev urging an easing of U.S.-Soviet strains.

Reagan has had a number of such exchanges with Brezhnev's successors, the late Yuri Andropov and current President Konstantin U. Chernenko. He also had modified the U.S. position in both sets of talks.

And yet, the Soviets walked out of the arms talks 10 months ago and have not been resumed. Reagan turned out to be wrong in his prediction that once U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles were sent to Western Europe the Soviets would strive for an agreement.

Mondale and the Democrats are on the attack, insisting Reagan must shoulder some of the blame for the breakdown. He has come forward with a number of proposals to revive the talks and to repair the rupture in U.S.-Soviet relations. Among them: a temporary ban on U.S. nuclear weapons tests, a negotiated freeze and regularly scheduled summit meetings.

These are the kinds of concessions Reagan and his key advisers have ruled out. They have promised U.S. negotiators would be flexible if talks resumed. But that has been the limit of American inducements.

Reagan's speech did not depart from that policy. In it, he hinted that he might agree with the Soviets to halt the militarization of space if negotiations were begun. But that fell short of the Kremlin's demand for a moratorium beforehand.

Any objective observer would have to agree Reagan was conciliatory in his speech. "We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union," he said. And he offered a number of ways to accomplish that — including period meetings between top U.S. and Soviet officials that could blossom into renewed arms control talks.

However, the conciliation dealt largely with what diplomats call "atmospherics" — the environment in which relations are conducted.

Reagan concentrated on suggesting ways for the two superpowers to communicate. But he did not make specific offers to change the substance of what the United States has been saying in the talks.

After returning to the White House Monday, Reagan was asked how he expects the Soviets to respond to his proposal. "We'll know Thursday" when Gromyko addresses the assembly. "I made an offer there that I hope they can't refuse."

Ferraro Playing Role Carefully

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is playing a carefully scripted vice presidential candidate's role, demanding that President Reagan accept "presidential accountability" for the latest bombing of Americans in Lebanon while trying not to upstage her Democratic ticket-mate on the issue.

"This administration cannot deal with the underlying questions of this tragedy by trying to shield Mr. Reagan from presidential accountability," Ms. Ferraro said Monday in a written statement on the bombing Thursday of the U.S. Embassy annex in Lebanon in which two Americans were killed.

"Mr. Reagan cannot absolve others of responsibility as he did after the Marine massacre and not expect to have the responsibility that goes with the office of commander in chief," the statement added.

But while Ms. Ferraro was attacking Reagan on the Democrats' newest campaign issue, she did it in a way calculated to guarantee presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale the spotlight for his own attack.

Mondale, in Texas on Monday, said Reagan is "letting terrorists humiliate us, push us around and kill our people" and demonstrating "an atrocious abdication of leadership."

Ms. Ferraro made no mention of Lebanon in early campaign appearances in New York and Baltimore. Her first reaction came in a television interview with a Baltimore station — an interview where network cameras were barred and that reporters learned of only afterwards.

She next mentioned the subject in a two-page typewritten statement handed to reporters as her chartered jet landed at New York in late afternoon, after Mondale had made his own comments.

Mondale Sees Terrorist Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, using words reminiscent of the Iranian hostage crisis, says President Reagan is "letting terrorists humiliate us, push us around and kill our people" in Lebanon.

Campaigning in Texas where polls show him far behind, the Democratic presidential nominee said Monday that Reagan has demonstrated "an atrocious abdication of leadership."

"We need a president who will take charge," Mondale told about 2,000 people who waited through a drizzle at a rally in Texarkana, Texas.

Mondale was expected to sound a similar theme today during a foreign policy speech at George Washington University.

Reagan was remaining in Washington today before heading out Wednesday on a campaign trip to Bowling Green, Ohio and Milwaukee. On Friday he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, was campaigning all day in Chicago, and Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning in New York, Detroit and Youngstown, Ohio.

Mondale's criticism was almost identical to that leveled four years ago by Reagan at Democratic President Jimmy Carter's leadership while Mondale was vice president and 52 Americans were held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Iran.

The hostages, taken in November 1979, were released in January 1981 on Reagan's Inauguration Day.

In Texarkana, Mondale said Reagan had a chance Sunday to explain how two Americans died last week in the truck-bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut.

Mondale reminded his audience of Reagan's comment Sunday, in reference to the incomplete installation of security measures at the building. "Anyone who ever had the kitchen done over knows it never gets done as soon you wish it would."

"Being president and countering terrorists is a more difficult task than fixing up your kitchen," Mondale said.

The bombing was the third fatal attack on a U.S. installation in Lebanon in 17 months: 46 people, including 16 Americans, died in the April 18, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, and 241 U.S. servicemen died in the Oct. 23, 1983, truck bombing of the Marine compound at Beirut airport.

Mondale said the Reagan administration has ignored the advice of the military Joint Chiefs of Staff on improved security, withdrawn 80 Marines assigned to protect the embassy, leaving local Lebanese forces with that job.

Violence Flares Anew In Britain

LONDON (AP) — Striking miners fired air rifles and hurled stones at trucks loaded with iron ore on a main highway in southern Wales today as violence continued in Britain's six-month coal strike.

Pickets lining about 20 bridges over the M4 expressway between the Port Talbot and the Llanwern steel plants smashed one truck's windshield with a lump of concrete. A police spokesman said the driver was not hurt.

Most of the pickets' missiles bounced off metal grills protecting the windshields, the spokesman said.

Eldon Griffiths, a Conservative member of Parliament, said Monday night that police may be forced to use plastic bullets "to protect themselves" against striking miners armed with airguns and slingshots.

The miners have been attempting to cut all coal and iron-ore shipments to steel plants to halt production and gain backing for their strike. But the steelworkers union has said any cut of supplies would force drastic cutbacks for the financially troubled state-owned British Steel Corp. and have refused to support the miners.

Gavin Laird, general secretary of the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers, pledged his union's help for the miners and predicted power cuts "within six or eight weeks at the outside."

But Energy Secretary Peter Walker maintained that present coal stocks at Britain's power stations were sufficient to last "way into 1985."

On Monday, the 17,000-member mine foremen's union, which carries out vital safety checks at all Britain's 175 state-run mines, began three days of voting on a strike recommendation by their leaders.

Some 50,000 moderate miners who have defied the strike call have kept one-third of mines open.

Queen Opens Two-Week Visit To Canada

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II was warmly welcomed by descendants of French colonists persecuted by Britain as she arrived to join in New Brunswick's celebration of 200 years of settlement.

The queen began her two-week Canadian tour Monday, visiting a predominantly French-speaking fishing town of Shediac and unveiling a plaque to mark the 100th anniversary of the Roman Catholic parish of St. Joseph.

Today in Fredericton, she was to present a new coat of arms to cap a year-long celebration of New Brunswick's 200 years as a province. Her schedule also included a service at Christ Church Cathedral and a bicentennial picnic on the shady lawns of Wilmot Park.

While in Moncton, the Queen met privately with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney before dining with him Monday night. Her Canadian tour was delayed by the election that led to Mulroney's victory.

Earlier, she and her husband, Prince Philip, were greeted by a crowd of 5,000 people, most of whom craned their necks to get a peek at the royal couple on a "walkabout" through Moncton's Victoria Park.

When the Queen and Philip arrived in Shediac, the largely French-speaking crowd of several thousand clapped and waved, clutching Canadian, New Brunswick and British flags as the Acadian flag flew overhead with the others.

The couple was greeted by Mayor Michel Leger, who had last seen the Queen in person in 1959, as a boy scout saluting her during her first visit as monarch.

Leger's ancestors, like those of others in the crowd, were once outcasts under the British crown. In 1755, Acadians were expelled from what is now New Brunswick by King George II when they refused to swear allegiance to Britain.

The queen is on her 14th visit to Canada, but the trip is her first major tour since 1976. She will be in New Brunswick for two days and then leaves for Ontario and Manitoba. Philip, 63, will return to England from Toronto on Oct. 5, but the 58-year-old queen will continue the trip, going to the United States on Oct. 7 for private visits to a stud farm in Kentucky.

Chad Sees Withdrawal Of Troops

PARIS (AP) — The withdrawal of French and Libyan troops from Chad got under way without problems today, a French Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

He said the Defense Ministry would furnish additional details as the operation continued.

French military sources said the withdrawal would proceed as planned even though there was doubt about Chad's willingness to accept observers from other African countries that France and Libya agreed should oversee the operation.

A group of 35 Senegalese troops arrived Monday night in N'Djamena, Chad's capital, as part of the observer force.

The 3,000 French troops are scheduled to move south from Salal Arada to Biltine and Moussourou in the government-controlled southern part of the central African country. Under the agreement, an undisclosed number of Libyan troops were pulling back from their positions in the rebel-controlled north.

Operations were normal in the morning at N'Djamena airport with Jaguar and Mirage F-1 planes continuing to accompany the C135 transport planes that supply the French troops.

A mixed French-Libyan commission is supposed to meet in Kano in northern Nigeria to review the withdrawal.

France and Libya announced the withdrawal agreement Sept. 17, signaling an end to a 13-month military standoff in Chad. The pullout is to be completed by mid-November.

The French troops backed the government of President Hissene Habre, while Libyan units supported rebels in the north led by former president Goukouni Oueddei.

French government spokesman Roland Dumas said in Paris on Sunday that the absence of observers in the first phase of the withdrawal would not be a major obstacle.

Another problem to be resolved is the eventual withdrawal of 1,700 troops from Zaire, who were sent to Chad a few days before the French arrived to support the Habre government.

Zaire's president, Mobutu Sese Soku, currently on a visit to the United States, is due in Chad on his way home to discuss a withdrawal of the Zairian troops.

Financier Extradited

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Convicted Italian financier Michele Sindona, once a top financial adviser to the Vatican and a prominent banker, was extradited from the United States today, court officials said.

Guido Viola, a Milan judge who has been investigating Sindona's alleged wrongdoings, said Sindona arrived this morning at Milan's Malpensa airport aboard a commercial flight from New York and was taken away in a police car.

Viola said Sindona might be taken to a maximum security prison in Rome for preliminary questioning.

Sindona, 64, was serving a 25-year term in the United States for the 1974 collapse of the Franklin National Bank.

He is wanted in Italy on numerous charges, including the 1979 murder of a Milan attorney.

Last year, the United States and Italy signed a new extradition treaty that allows either country to extradite an inmate to testify.

It was not immediately clear how long Sindona would remain in Italy. Under the treaty, he cannot be tried here until he completes his term in the United States, which he began serving in 1980.

Broadway George

Tomorrow is the birthday of George Gershwin, perhaps the most popular composer born in America. Born to Russian immigrants in 1898, he composed in many styles. His first hit song was "Swanee," sung by Al Jolson. His jazz symphony, "Rhapsody in Blue," first performed in 1924, has become the most frequently performed orchestral work composed by an American. "Of Thee I Sing," for which Gershwin wrote the score, was the first musical comedy to win the Pulitzer Prize.

By Day, Superstar; By Night, A Junkie

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Editor

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — By age 28, Dr. Martha Morrison, a psychiatrist at the University of Arkansas medical center, was one of the state's leading experts on alcoholism and drug abuse.

She was also a heroin addict.

"By day I was a superstar. By night I was a hard-core junkie," she said. She called it a con game, and she had played it for 16 years.

She had abused drugs since she was 12, when she began stealing the Darvon capsules her mother took for migraine headaches. By age 13, she had a daily habit.

Through it all, her medical career remained flawless. The con game worked.

As a medical student at the University of Arkansas, she received a national medical research award from a pharmaceutical company. She graduated among the top 10 in her class.

The next year, she was chosen intern of the year. "I spoke to the incoming intern class about the values and morals of a physician," she said in a recent interview here at the American Medical Association's Sixth National Conference on the Impaired Physician.

When she was 16, she gave herself her first injection of speed, amphetamines. "I thought: 'This is my life, this is my love. I will do this until the day I die.'"

A year later, she was dealing drugs and had contracted hepatitis. Police were watching her parents' house in Fayetteville because they knew she was dealing.

Her parents confined her to a psychiatric ward against her will. It was her senior year of high school. They did the same thing again later that year, and again in her freshman year of college. The last time, she had lapsed into an amphetamine psychosis.

But the con continued. "I took drugs when I was locked in the psychiatric ward. I got them from other patients, friends would mail them to me. In fact, I mailed them to a friend in there when I got out," she said.

"What those three hospitalizations taught me was to clean up my act." Not to stop taking drugs, no. To "cover up better." The stakes were higher, but the con game went on.

In view of her excellent academic record, medical school admission officials overlooked her bout with drugs. Having pointed toward medical school since childhood, she convinced them she was cured.

At 2 a.m. one day in her second year of medical school, she left her the married students' dormitory room where she and her then-husband — also an addict — lived. In a house in an upper-middle class neighborhood five minutes from the campus, she picked up two hits of heroin for herself and two for her husband.

On impulse, she injected all four doses into her vein right there. The next thing she knew it was 6 o'clock in the morning and "John," who had sold her the dope, was saying, "You turned blue and I've been pounding on your chest and breathing for you." Her heart had stopped.

Still the con continued. "My purpose was two-fold in life: medicine and my dope. And my dope came first."

She told her teachers she had the flu, and she spent five days in bed. "I didn't shoot any dope that weekend, but I did the next weekend."

By the time she was 29, she had lost 50 pounds. Three times in six months, she had blacked out while driving, causing serious accidents that did not involve anyone else.

She struggled to maintain the con. "I took care of all the people in the state facility with alcohol and drug problems," she said. "I detoxed them and sent them to Alcoholics Anonymous, because I knew AA worked and psychiatry didn't. I didn't think I was one of them.

"My colleagues sent me to a psychiatrist because they thought I was depressed and overworked."

Then the drugs began to fail her. "It got to where I couldn't get enough to get high." She blacked out more easily.

In her purse, she carried a lethal dose of Dilaudid, a synthetic narcotic, in a syringe. "I knew if it got too bad I could overdose and die."

In September 1981, two doctors from the Arkansas impaired physicians program came to see her. They knew. "They told me I was going to die. I knew my time was up."

The con game was over.

The only thing that kept her alive was finishing her previously scheduled duties at the hospital. "I was such a workaholic," she said.

She bought a one-way ticket to Georgia to begin treatment with Dr. G. Douglas Talbott at the Ridgeview Institute in Smyrna, Ga., near Atlanta. Thirty-six hours after she arrived — her first day-and-a-half without drugs since she was 13 — she tried to hang herself from a tree on the institute's grounds.

"I had nothing else."

Two patients found her unconscious and brought her back to the hospital, where Talbott and his colleagues tried to help her. "They taught me it was a disease. I was the expert in Arkansas, and I'd never heard that," she said.

"Doug Talbott was the only one who thought I could get clean and stay clean."

On a rainy day six months after she arrived in Georgia, she went for a walk near the Chattahoochee River and fell on her knees in the mud, praying to die or get better. The rain stopped and a rainbow appeared. She had what she calls a "spiritual experience."

For the first time since she was 12, she said, "I didn't want to use."

Talbott helped her resume practice as a psychiatrist at Emory University in Atlanta. Emory established the country's first medical fellowship in addictionology, and Martha Morrison was the first fellow.

She now directs the Ridgeview Institute's adolescent chemical dependence unit.

"I'm happy with what I'm doing. I'm happy with me," she said.

"The only reason I am where I am is sheerly by the grace of God."

AMA Study Sees Doctors Prone To Addiction, Abuse

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Editor

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — One in 10 American doctors is an alcoholic. At least 4,000 of the nation's almost 500,000 doctors are addicted to drugs — a rate of addiction 30 to 100 times higher than in the general population.

Doctors are abusing a wider variety of drugs, often in combination, and are increasingly getting them from the drug culture rather than from their workplaces, the traditional source of drugs for doctor-addicts.

Cocaine is quickly becoming the addicted doctor's drug of choice.

Those disturbing findings were presented early this month at the American Medical Association's Sixth National Conference on the Impaired Physician. Addiction specialists also reported that programs to treat addicted and alcoholic doctors have increased dramatically in the past decade.

Today, 50 percent of doctors with chemical dependencies are getting back into practice, said Dr. Rogers Smith, the author of a landmark 1972 American Medical Association report entitled "The Sick Physician," one of the first studies to call attention to the problem.

In 1971, only seven state medical associations had programs to deal with "impaired" doctors, said Dr. Donald Keith, chairman of the American Medical Association's committee on impaired physicians. Now, he said, every state medical association has some program, and at least 35 state legislatures have passed laws to govern the discipline and treatment of impaired doctors.

Dr. G. Douglas Talbott, director of the alcohol and addiction treatment program of the Medical Association of Georgia — one of the oldest and most successful such programs in the country, said he was pleased with the success of his program but saw ominous signs for the future.

"It is very rare for us now to see a physician with a single drug addiction," said Talbott. "It's not unusual for us to see physicians with five, six, seven drugs that they're involved with."

Dr. David Smith, founder and director of the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic in San Francisco, said that as many as 22 percent of doctors entering treatment nationwide were using cocaine.

"Ten years ago it was very rare to have a cocaine abuser," he said. "Opium abuse is still the No. 1 problem, but cocaine is the fastest increasing problem."

Seventy percent of cocaine abusers also use other drugs or alcohol, and many of them are obtaining their drugs from dealers on the street, Smith said.

"The newer health professional doesn't have the taboo of the drug culture," he said.

Many inject cocaine rather than snorting it because injections, even though more potent, are "clean," Smith said. "That logic would dominate the physician mind," he said.

The changing patterns of drug

Defections

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Police say three Poles in a shipping crate aboard a truck and a Czechoslovak man and his son who swam across a river reached Austria in defections over the weekend.

Police in Graz said Ivan Navara, 30, and his 6-year-old son Viktor waded and swam across the Mur River on Saturday from Yugoslavia to Weitersfeld, Austria. But they said Navara's wife apparently was too weak to swim through the rapid currents, turned back and was pulled from the river by Yugoslav militiamen.

abuse among doctors may be an indicator of what to expect in addicts outside the medical profession, Talbott said.

"America is turning into a chemical culture," he said. "I firmly believe that by 1990 alcoholism and drug addiction will have surpassed cancer and heart disease as the No. 1 health problem."

Talbott said that enough Valium and Librium are prescribed in the United States to provide 32 doses a year for every man, woman and child in the country. In the state of Georgia, to choose an example Talbott was familiar with, the annual alcohol consumption amounts to 27 gallons for every person in the state, Talbott said.

Alcoholism is no more common in doctors than it is in others, but doctors' drug abuse is much different, said Dr. J. Patrick Tokarz, a member of the AMA's impaired physicians committee.

"In this profession, we have much easier access to much purer drugs," he said. Even the average doctor, not alcoholic or addicted to drugs, uses excess tranquilizers, sleeping pills and alcohol, said Tokarz.

"Doctors treat themselves in a way that they would not allow patients to be treated," said Talbott. Are the doctors who use such drugs capable of doing their jobs? Are they hurting patients?

The consensus, so far, is that in almost all cases they are not.

"It's been instilled in physicians — never hurt the patient," said Dr. Elton Hurst, director of the Anclote Manor psychiatric hospital in Tarpon Springs, Fla., which is believed to be the first hospital unit exclusively devoted to the treatment of psychiatric disorders in doctors.

"The doctor might be in but not seeing patients. The nurses will cover for him, saying he's been called away on an emergency. That you'll see before they start hurting patients," Hurst said. So far, he added, he has never seen a case in which a doctor hurt a patient.

When it comes to malpractice awards, however, juries are penalizing doctors with drug and alcohol problems. In New Jersey, which has a widely respected impaired physicians' program, malpractice awards against impaired doctors are more than three times higher than those for other doctors, said Dr. Douglas Sargent, a lawyer-psychiatrist at Wayne State University in Detroit.

Sargent also expressed concern that not all states offer legal protection to doctors who report suspicions of physician alcoholism or drug abuse to medical examining boards.

Many doctors blame alcoholism and addiction on the unique stresses of a medical career.

"Stress is inherent in studying to become a physician," said Keith. "We are all at risk."

"When you're dealing with a physician, he's omniscient, omnipotent, intelligent, a self-centered person," said Rogers Smith. "We are raised in medical school to be many of those things — to walk into a situation where there's blood or disaster and take over."

"Then somebody taps you on the shoulder and says you've got a problem. The usual response is, 'Go to hell.'"

Tokarz cited studies that indicated 10 percent of doctors are emotionally disturbed. Thirty percent of interns — doctors in their first year of training after medical school — suffer from clinical depression.

"This is almost the norm for the younger generation of physician," he said.

As many as 90 percent of medical students say they would seek psychiatric help if they could afford it, Tokarz said. Ten percent of medical students have alcohol problems and 20 percent use marijuana, the studies indicated.

The reason for the emotional problems include long hours, family pressures, lack of sleep, poor nutrition, exposure to diseases, lack of exercise and emotional factors such as the overload of medical information and confusion about the doctor's role.

The rigors of medical training, in which interns are often required to work marathon hours through the night and all the next day without sleep, are unnecessary, Tokarz said.

"There's no excuse for the destructive attitudes, the destructive procedures we have," he said.

Not all experts agree that doctors are uniquely subjected to stress. "Nowadays, most people have started thinking that physicians are not different from a lot of professionals," said Hurst. "Traditionally, this was viewed as one of the more stressful occupations."

Educators On Strike In 5 States

By The Associated Press

New teacher strikes in Pennsylvania and New Jersey out-paced contract settlements in other districts nationwide as more than 2,800 educators remained on strike at schools serving 54,000 students.

Teachers walked out Monday in two Pennsylvania school districts and at a New Jersey community college, but nearly 2,000 instructors went back to work without a contract in Rockford, Ill., the state's second-largest district.

Other strikes continued in Michigan, Louisiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

In Rockford, 29,500 students were in school Monday for the first time this year after teachers agreed to return to work while contract negotiations continue, Superintendent Mel Grell said.

The district's 1,836 teachers and professional workers walked off the job on Aug. 27, the day before classes were to begin, in a dispute over salary and other contract issues.

The agreement between the district and teachers' union called for negotiations to resume Tuesday and continue until Oct. 1, when binding arbitration would begin on selected issues if no settlement has been reached.

Even though there has been no contract signed, Grell said he believed "the kids are in school for the year."

But picket lines went up Monday in Abingdon, Ill., bringing to more than 11,000 the number of students affected in five districts in the state.

New strikes also began in Pennsylvania's Butler and Beaver area school districts when agreements could not be reached on salary and health benefits. Classes for 11,200 students in the two western Pennsylvania districts were canceled Monday as pickets marched outside schools.

In Springfield Township, Pa., officials of the 134-member teachers union had offered to end their walkout if the school board agreed by Sunday night to let an arbitrator decide the last contract issue, salaries. But the board rejected the offer, with Superintendent Thomas Davis saying "an outside third party shouldn't set public policy," and picket lines were back up Monday.

A total of nine strikes by some 1,600 teachers are affecting more than 28,000 students throughout Pennsylvania.

In Louisiana, the school board of St. John the Baptist parish met in closed session Monday morning after a parents' group reported that four of the board's 10 members had indicated they might accept collective bargaining in a strike by 700 teachers and support workers.

The strike, over the union's request for a 5 percent pay hike, began

Aug. 28. The district's 15 schools have remained open, but few of the 6,200 students have attended.

About 100 professors and instructors at New Jersey's Burlington County College walked off the job Monday after negotiations on salary and workload reached a deadlock. However, support staffers reached an early morning agreement on a contract and college spokesman Richard Pokrass said classes for the 6,000 students would remain open.

Teachers were the strikers instead of the strikers in St. Paul, Minn., when nine staff members for the Minnesota Federation of Teachers union walked out over seniority rules.

MAYNARD WATERS Candidate N.C. State Senate 9th District Beaufort - Pitt - Martin Counties

Dear Voters in the 9th Senatorial District:

As a candidate for the 9th District State Senate seat in Pitt, Beaufort, and Martin counties, I wish to state my position on the issues which concern all of us. This Senate seat is much too important to have someone elected without allowing the public to know fully the positions of the candidates. I want to make the voters aware of my stand on the issues.

ACCOUNTABILITY IN GOVERNMENT:

Time was made available to myself and my opponent, Tommy Taft, on a local radio station to debate the issues which are before us; but he has refused to come forth. I feel that you as citizens of the 9th district have a right to know where the candidates stand on the issues before the election is held, not after. I am willing to make myself open and accessible to you but so far Tommy Taft has not done so. Such situations as quietly hiding Mather Slaughter (who was fired by the state legislature because of unethical practices) within the N.C. Ports Authority which is headed by my opponent, Tommy Taft, at the tax payers' expense of $26,000 per year are an embarrassment to the integrity of the government of North Carolina. Such practices should not be allowed to continue. As your senator I will offer a bill on the opening day of the 1985 legislature to remove funding for Slaughter's job.

FARMERS:

All through history the farmer has been the backbone of every great nation. Whenever the welfare of the farmer was neglected the result has been disastrous to the economy. We as a people can no longer look the other way while the farmer struggles to survive. Having lived on the family farm most of my life, I am prepared to pursue the best interests of the farmers of eastern N.C. as their senator in Raleigh.

STATE EMPLOYEES:

State employees should not be used as political footballs. They should be encouraged to express their political views freely without harassment or pressure from the current administration. Instead of a large raise in election year, state employees should receive raises in accordance with their performance on a regular basis.

ABORTION:

While I have been traveling through the 9th district, people in large numbers have expressed their concern over state and federally funded abortions. I share their concern and am opposed to such abortions on demand for convenience sake and will champion the rights of the unborn in the Senate when elected. I also feel that it is morally wrong to force our citizens to participate in such killings against their wills through taxation. North Carolina is the only southern state that still funds abortions.

LAW AND ORDER:

I believe it is time to take the handcuffs off of our law enforcement personnel and put them where they belong, on the criminals. Our citizens need the full protection that officers can deliver without having to worry about technicalities that release the same criminals over and over again to prey upon our citizens. The laws we have need to be strictly enforced. Greater emphasis should be placed on dealing with drug trafficking and pornography. Those operating outside the law need beware because you have no friend here.

EDUCATION:

It is not a secret to our educators that they have been pushed around over the years and because of this our children have suffered. We can no longer afford politics as usual because our very future is at stake in our youth. We must listen to those in the classroom—not an elite few. A merit system of pay for the hardworking teachers must be established. The dignity and high calling of the teacher must be restored.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND COMMERCE:

We are no longer just an agricultural region, and have a growing economic base of manufacturing, fishing, and distribution. I am for repealing the inventory tax in order to attract acceptable industry to our area. I will work to insure the survival of our fishing industry by protecting the fishing grounds and access to them. The continued development of adequate highways in our region will create a climate of growth which will allow us to choose those industries which will be suitable to our area. With proper planning we can develop our economic base, industry, fishing and agriculture and protect our environment. No aspect of our economy can be ignored if we are to provide quality jobs for our people.

SPORTSMEN:

Our state is one of the richest in the union in terms of exceptional beauty and wildlife. Our sportsmen have paid in millions of dollars annually to our economy, and in so doing have contributed toward the establishment of a wildlife program which ranks among the best in the nation. His right to own firearms and other sporting equipment should not be encroached upon. It is not the sportsman who needs to be punished in this land. It is the criminal who needs to be prosecuted. If we allow gun control legislation to pass, who knows what freedom under the constitution will be attacked next?

The Ninth District must elect a state senator who is sensitive to the needs of the people and of whom the people can be justly proud. We cannot afford to place in office power-seeking individuals who are not in touch with the people. I promise my door will always be open to you and I will do my best to represent the people of the Ninth District as your senator. I look forward to serving the people of the Ninth District for the next two years.

Sincerely yours,

Maynard Waters

Bill Root of Boca Raton, Fla., is acknowledged as the country's most successful bridge teacher. If you don't believe us, take a Royal Viking Sea Mediterranean-Wine Country cruise this coming May and see for yourself how he conducts a bridge course.

At the recent Summer North American Championships, Root and his partner, Richard Pavlicek of Ft. Lauderdale, bid well to reach slam on this hand. Note that Root didn't rebid hearts immediately — he showed his good four-card minor instead. After North jumped in hearts, Root made a move toward slam by cue-bidding his ace of clubs. He signed off after his partner's diamond cue-bid, but then launched into Blackwood when North took a second cue-bid over game. East's lead-directing double was based on the fact he felt his trump holding would prove troublesome.

West duly led a spade, and declarer's only problem was his fourth diamond. However, this was a hand that Root might easily have used in one of his classes, and he made no mistake.

First, he won the spade opening and cashed the ace of trumps. The break bothered him not the slightest, but it was revealing. Next came ace of clubs and another. West won and forced declarer with a spade. Root crossed to the table with the queen of trumps and ruffed a club. By now he knew East had started with four hearts and three clubs and, since he had doubled for a spade lead, some length in that suit. Therefore, he had to be short in diamonds.

Accordingly, declarer drew the rest of the trumps and led a low diamond. Since West had the diamond length, he rated to hold the jack. Therefore, Root boldly finessed the 10. When that succeeded, the slam was home.

Obituary

Porter

The Rev. Ola L. Porter, 77, died this morning in University Nursing Center.

His funeral service will be conducted Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. J. Doner Lee, superintendent of the North Carolina Pentecostal Holiness Conference, and the Rev. Sam Whichard. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

A lifelong resident of Pitt County, Mr. Porter was a retired building contractor and a Pentecostal Holiness minister. He was the founder and pastor of the Winterville Pentecostal Holiness Church and later held pastorates of the Grifton and then the Ayden Pentecostal Holiness churches.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Troy Lee Jones of Shermerside and Mrs. C.D. Forbes of Merritt Island, Fla.; two sons, Ola Lenward Porter of Greenville and F.E. (Sam) Porter of Bell's Fork; two brothers, Allen Porter of Savannah, Ga., and William Porter of Chattanooga, Tenn.; two sisters, Mrs. Joe Woodson of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Loyd Stocks of Greenville; nine grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. At other times they will be at the home of F.E. (Sam) Porter.

control rooms at the Kennedy and Johnson space centers, and by pressure for a separate military fleet of space shuttles."

The long-term aim is to form the "new breed of military astronauts" among NASA's 77 space travelers into "a separate team who will nurse their secrets," flying shuttle craft "to and from the inevitable manned military reconnaissance platforms," Turnill said.

But he said the Soviets appear to be winning the second space race — to build a manned station above the Earth. "The battle for space-based laser weapons is settling down to be grimmer and much more expensive than the race to the moon 20 years ago," he said.

Citing U.S. intelligence sources, he said the Soviets could be able to place high-energy laser weapons in orbit by 1986. The United States does not expect to do that until 1989.

"As a result, the United States cannot hope to catch up with the Soviet Union in space station operations, from crew rotation to materials processing, until well into the 1990s."

More than 70 percent of Soviet space launches have been "military in purpose," and another 15 percent "partly military," Turnill stressed.

By comparison, he said 37 of 92 U.S. shuttle missions planned by September 1988 will include Defense Department payloads with 18 "dedicated entirely to military purposes."

The directory was published the day after President Reagan said he would consider restraining his plans to establish a space-based strategic defense as part of a new effort to entice the Soviets back to nuclear arms reduction negotiations. The Soviets have demanded a moratorium on testing anti-satellite weapons in space as a precondition for resuming the stalled talks.

The Soviets spend an estimated $18 billion a year on their space program, Turnill said, about $3 billion more than the United States.

The U.S. military's space program was allocated $8.5 billion in fiscal 1983 compared with $6.4 billion for NASA.

The Soviets are estimated to be spending three to five times as much as the Americans on space laser development.

The Soviets have included their military space activities in the vast Cosmos series that has produced more than 1,500 launches, making it difficult to spot military missions among the purely scientific projects. But U.S. experts believe the Soviets are launching at least 80 military satellites a year.

Western defense analysts say space-based weapons would radically change the strategic relationship between the superpowers.

Until now, both superpowers have concentrated on offensive nuclear weapons. Militarizing space would force them to focus on defensive systems, specialists believe.

Turnill said battle stations in space would "transform defense strategy as dramatically as did the deployment of operational nuclear weapons in the 1950s."

They would be able to detect and destroy ballistic missiles moments after they were launched, "providing an effective defense not only for the United States, but her allies as well."

Engineer Arrested

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Authorities say a senior engineer at West Germany's largest aerospace company has been arrested on charges of spying for the Soviet Union for 17 years.

Federal prosecutor Karl Rebmann said 60-year-old Manfred Rotsch, an immigrant from East Germany, is suspected of passing information about space and aviation projects to secret agents of the Soviet KGB.

Rotsch was chief engineer of the aircraft construction department of Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm in Ottobrunn, outside Munich.

Storm Still At Sea

MIAMI (AP) — Hortense, an aimless North Atlantic tropical storm, is keeping ships out of its path but posed no threat to inhabited areas today, according to a National Hurricane Center forecaster.

Hortense was recognized as the eighth tropical storm of the Atlantic hurricane season early Monday when an Air Force reconnaissance plane tracking the system found maximum winds of 55 mph.

Week Focuses On Drug Abuse

This week has been proclaimed as National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week by the U.S. Congress. President Reagan has issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to participate in drug abuse education and prevention programs in their communities and encouraging parents and children to investigate and discuss drug abuse problems and possible solutions.

North Carolina has approximately 150 alcohol and drug programs provided through community mental health facilities and alcohol rehabilitation centers, according to Steve Hicks, deputy director for alcohol and drug abuse services in the N.C. Department of Human Resources. It is estimated that more than 66,000 North Carolina teenagers are heavy drinkers, and 500,000 have used marijuana.

At 6 a.m. EDT today, the poorly developed center of the storm was near latitude 29.1 north and longitude 60.4 west, or about 350 miles southeast of Bermuda, the National Weather Service said.

"About the only interest in it now will be people in shipping, and they are staying out of the area," said forecaster Gil Clark. "It doesn't seem very well organized. The pattern is not good for strengthening."

Clark said Hortense is expected to drift slowly to the northwest for 12 to 24 hours and then turn to the north.

"It's in an area of very light steering," Clark said.

Long Drought Over For Cubs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Their critics jokingly called them the Flubs, not the Cubs, and claimed a team that insisted on living in the past had no future playing strictly daytime baseball.

But they were wrong, these would be Cub-Busters. The Chicago Cubs, the only team in the major leagues that continues to play all-day baseball at home, suddenly has learned how to beat the daylights out of the rest of the National League East.

"The Cub-Busters, where are the Cub-Busters?" shortstop Larry Bowa joked Monday night as the Cubs poured champagne and heaped praise on one another following a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates that clinched the NL East championship — their first title of any kind in nearly four decades.

Since 1945, when the Cubs last won the NL pennant, rooting for Chicago has been downright unbearable. Until now.

"We've come a long way. I'll tell you," said first baseman Leon Durham.

"We haven't won in a lot of years.

39 to be exact," said outfielder Gary Matthews. "So this is what it's all about. Any time you taste the champagne in September or October, you know you've done the job."

What the Cubs did was a job on the rest of the National League.

The only team that previously had not won an NL East title since divisional play began in 1969, the Cubs — in one magical summer week that their fans will remember for years — turned a 4½-game deficit behind the New York Mets into a 4½-game lead they never lost.

"The magic number is zero, zero, zero!" yelled winning pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, whose 1984 season has been one for the record books.

Sutcliffe, overpowering the Pirates with a 90 mph-plus fastball, allowed just two hits in raising his NL record to a dazzling 16-1. Coupled with the four victories he recorded with the Cleveland Indians before being dealt to the Cubs in June, he established himself a strong Cy Young Award candidate — and just the fourth pitcher to win 20 games while pitching for two clubs in two leagues in the same season.

"I have no idea how to describe this," Sutcliffe said.

The Cubs won their championship with a combination of pitching, power and persistence. Sutcliffe was a streak-stopping starter, fireballing Lee Smith a rally-stopping reliever and six Cubs, including Most Valuable Player candidate Ryne Sandberg, had 80 or more runs batted in.

And General Manager Dallas Green, who engineered the Philadelphia Phillies' 1980 NL championship, might have stolen this title away from his old team by trading for former Phillies such as Sandberg, Bowa, and outfielders Keith Moreland, Bob Dernier and Matthews.

"We've still got a three-out-of-five series to play against the San Diego Padres," Green said of the NL Championship Series, which begins Oct. 2 in Wrigley Field. "We know that. But I want our guys to enjoy this and our fans to enjoy this."

"If it wasn't for Dallas Green, I don't think we'd have this kind of ability and we wouldn't be popping champagne corks around here,

Durham said. "He waited around, shopped around and got us this ability."

And he brought in Manager Jim Frey, who in just one season was able to do what even a rotating staff of coaches couldn't do in the mid-1960s, bring a winner to the Windy City.

"I'm buying a beer for the whole city of Pittsburgh," Frey joked, a smile lighting up his face as he wiped champagne from his eyes. "I had a great day, a wonderful afternoon and an excellent evening. Somebody told me the Cubs won the National League East championship tonight. Is that true? I'm not going to come back down to earth for three days?"

Some of the NL East's traditional powers, like the Pirates and Phillies, might have had off-seasons, but the Cubs are no fluke, claimed third baseman Ron Cey.

"This team deserves this," he said. "This team has the second-best record in baseball and the best record in the National League. The numbers are there and so are we."

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner agrees.

"They have as good a team as I've seen in the National League in my seven years here," he said. "They can do it all. If they win the playoffs, they will win the World Series."

The Cubs endured a five-game losing streak, including three losses last week to the Pirates, before sweeping a Sunday doubleheader in St. Louis to set up the clincher. They quickly jumped on Pirates' starter Larry McWilliams, 11-11, for solo runs in each of the first three innings, then breezed behind Sutcliffe, who won his 14th straight decision.

Sandberg lined the first of his two doubles with one out in the first inning before coming home on Matthews' run-scoring single, his league-best 19th game winning RBI of the season.

Sutcliffe himself drove in the Cubs' second run of the game with a second-inning single after Bowa singled and advanced on third baseman Jim Morrison's throwing error.

Another Morrison throwing error, in the third, scored the Cubs' third run after Sandberg's double, Matthews' walk and Keith Moreland's infield single.

Both of the Pirates' hits were by rookie outfielder Joe Orsulak, who lined a triple just under the glove of first baseman Durham in the fourth and reached on a bunt single in the sixth.

"Was I thinking about a no-hitter?" Sutcliffe said. "I wasn't worried about that. I just wanted this victory."

He got it.

Arp Captures Grid Contest

Odus Arp of 2706 Edwards St., Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Arp correctly picked the winners in 27 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's contest pages.

Second place went to Chris Riggs of 1002 Fawn Rd., Ayden. Riggs picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games. His victory came on the basis of his point total guess after two other entrants also picked 26 games correctly. Riggs' guess of 74 was closest to the actual 77 scored in Missouri's 47-30 victory over Mississippi State.

The next contest is the series appears in today's edition.

Contestants are reminded that ties are counted wrong unless picked as a tie, and only one entry may be submitted per person. Those entering more than once a week will be disqualified for that week.

West Featured In Magazine

Greenville native Joe West, featured earlier on an NBC pre-game baseball show, is the subject of a short article in Sports Illustrated's September 24 issue.

West, an all-star quarterback both at Rose High School and Elon College, opted for a career as a baseball umpire after his collegiate career ended, and in five years had made it to the major leagues.

Now, he's attempting to make it to the top in another medium — this time as a country and western singer — the Blue Cowboy.

West has wrote and recorded "Blue Cowboy" in Nashville (Colonial Records) and has an upcoming album coming out of the same title. He also wrote two other songs included in the album. Some of the recordings were done at Houston's "Gilley's." West now makes his home in Houston.

NBC, too, created a video version of the song to go with the feature it ran on West.

Following the season, West will be appearing on the same bill with Mel Tillis in Las Vegas and has already appeared on the syndicated "Nashville Now" television program.

Known previously for his "on-field volatility," SI says, West has had a quiet year in 1984, ejecting only one player and one coach this season. He did gain fame this year for throwing out two TV cameramen for showing replays of a call (not involving West) to the Mets. Baseball rules forbid teams from having access to instant replays.

West's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude (Kip) West still reside in Greenville.

Rose Girls Top Northeastern

Summary:

Kathryn Land (R) d. Jackie Tolson, 7-6, 3-6, 6-4.

Karen Poole (NE) d. Kelly Wall, 6-0, 6-0.

Ginger Gregory (NE) d. Vicki Parrott, 7-6, 6-3.

Susan Taylor (R) d. Stephanie Shanley, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Anne Lynne Davis (R) d. Debbie Leete, 6-4, 6-3.

Susan Evans (R) d. Sandy Dunlow, 6-2, 6-4.

Land Davis (R) d. Poole Tolson, 7-1 (called by darkness).

Wall Taylor (R) d. Gregory Shanley, 7-7, 40-15 (called by darkness).

Parrott Evans (R) d. Gail Wells-Renee Jennings, 8-2.

There was some dispute as to the actual final score, since darkness interrupted the first and second doubles matches with Rose ahead 5-2. Rose led in the number one doubles, 7-3 at the time, needing only one more game to win. Rose was tied in games, 7-7, in the number two doubles, but was up 40-15 in the game and serving.

Rose took a 4-2 lead in the singles and then won the number three doubles match to insure the victory.

The loss left Northeastern at 5-1 overall, while Rose is now 4-1 overall and 4-0 in Big East play. Rose travels to Wilson Beddingfield today.

Nebraska Holds To Top; Clemson Falls To 13th

By HERSCHEL NISSESON

AP Sports Writer

Nebraska is college football's No. 1 team for the third straight week while Clemson dropped from second place into the Second Ten and Oklahoma State cracked the Top Ten for the first time in 39 years.

Nebraska whipped UCLA, No. 8 last week, 42-3 and received 52 of 56 first-place votes and 1,116 of a possible 1,120 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in today's Associated Press poll.

Texas, idle over the weekend, moved up from third to second — Clemson lost to Georgia 26-23 — with two first-place votes and 1,027 points. The other two first-place ballots went to Ohio State, which trounced Iowa 45-26 and jumped from fifth to third with 995 points.

Miami's defending national champions had been fourth but were crushed 38-3 by Florida State and skidded to 16th place. Meanwhile, Penn State, a 56-18 winner over William & Mary, rose from seventh to fourth with 834 points.

Boston College vaulted from 10th to fifth with 831 points following a 52-20 rout of North Carolina and Washington shot from ninth to sixth

Oklahoma, a 34-15 victor over Baylor, climbed from 11th to seventh with 797 points and Brigham Young, which rallied in the final period to defeat Hawaii 18-13, slipped from sixth to eighth with 781 points.

Florida State's impressive victory over Miami lifted the Seminoles from 15th to ninth with 665 points and Oklahoma State moved up from 12th to 10th with 597 points by defeating San Diego State 19-16. The Cowboys last appeared in the Top Ten in the final 1945 poll when they were ranked No. 5 and the school was known as Oklahoma A&M.

This week's Second Ten consists of Southern Methodist, Georgia, Clemson, Michigan, Southern California, Miami, UCLA, Georgia Tech, Notre Dame and Auburn.

Last week, it was Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, SMU, Iowa, Florida State, Michigan, Southern Cal, West Virginia, Auburn and Georgia.

ECU Women Top 'Dogs

East Carolina's women's tennis team romped over Atlantic Christian College, 7-2, yesterday, winning their second match of the season.

The Lady Pirates dropped the number one and number four singles matches, but swept through the remainder to come up with the victory.

"Ann Manderfield did really well," Coach Pat Sherman said. "However, it takes a super team effort to win a match and so far the team has done that."

Now 2-0, East Carolina travels to Campbell on Thursday. ACC falls to 0-3 on the season.

Summary:

Annika Anderson (AC) d. Janet Russell, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Ann Manderfield (EC) d. Susan Maxwell, 6-3, 6-3.

Ty Myers (EC) d. Wendy Smith, 7-6, 6-4.

Ginger Hill (AC) d. Susie Brown, 6-0, 6-2.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Royals' Rookies Aim At West Title

By The Associated Press
The American League West, a have-not division throughout this baseball season, is now the only one without a champion. But a pair of rookie pitchers have done their part to bring the title to the Kansas City Royals.

Bret Saberhagen tossed a three-hit, 4-0 victory over the California Angels in the opener of Monday's key doubleheader, and Danny Jackson pitched seven strong innings in a 12-4 Royal triumph in the nightcap.

The sweep at Kansas City gave the Royals a half-game edge over Minnesota, which rode the pitching of Frank Viola to an 8-4 victory over Chicago. California, meanwhile, slipped 3½ games off the pace with only six to play.

"I'm very, very pleased, but it doesn't surprise me," Royals Manager Dick Howser said of the performances by Saberhagen and Jackson. "They've both been pitching good. They've both been impressive. Jackson should have won his last four starts."

Angels Manager John McNamara seemed to be playing taps for his club's title chances.

"You work every day since February and you have your hopes and expectations, then in a crucial day you lose two. It isn't much fun," he said.

In other AL games, Baltimore swept a pair from New York, 8-1 and 7-6. Toronto outscored Boston 9-8. Detroit beat Milwaukee 7-3 and Oakland dumped Texas 10-6. Cleveland and Seattle were idle.

Saberhagen, 10-10, got the only run he needed in the opener on doubles by Frank White and Willie Wilson off California starter Geoff Zahn. 12-10. After Lynn Jones hit a solo homer in the sixth, Hal McRae and Darryl Motley doubled for a run in the seventh and McRae singled in Jones in the eighth.

Jackson, 2-6, allowed seven hits and three runs in the nightcap before Mark Huisman finished up. Motley provided the offense with a two-run double in the third off Angels starter Rick Steiner, 0-1, and a grand slam home run that highlighted a six-run

Royals uprising in the sixth.

Twins 8, White Sox 4
Viola, 18-12, scattered eight hits, but left after Scott Fletcher's run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth. Rick Lysander came on to get the final out for his fifth save. The Twins exploded for seven runs in the fifth inning off Chicago's Floyd Bannister, 13-11, with the big blows a three-run homer by Kent Hrbek, his 27th, and a two-run single by Dave Meier.

Orioles 8-7, Yankees 1-6
Benny Ayala's opposite-field, three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth capped a five-run Baltimore rally against Yankee relief ace Dave Righetti, 5-6. Righetti's predecessor, Jay Howell, set the stage for Ayala when he threw wildly past second base in an attempt to turn a double play. A run scored to cut the Yankee lead to 6-3 and Ron Roenicke greeted Righetti with a run-scoring single. Ayala followed with his game-winner. Nate Snell, 1-0, got the victory.

In the opener, Mike Boddicker, 19-11, scattered 10 hits in joining Detroit's Jack Morris as the winningest pitcher in the league. John Shelby homered and drove in three runs and Roenicke and Mike Young added homers as the Birds roughed up Ron Guidry, 10-10.

Blue Jays 9, Red Sox 8
Cliff Johnson and Jesse Barfield homered in support of Jim Clancy, 13-15, who solidified Toronto's hold on second place despite being touched for five runs in 6 2-3 innings. Barfield's two-run shot highlighted a five-run Blue Jays rally in the top of the seventh against Bruce Hurst, 12-11. Boston stayed within range on homers by Rich Gedman, his 23rd, and Dwight Evans, his 32nd, but Ron Musselman pitched the last two-thirds of an inning for the save.

Tigers 7, Brewers 3
Lou Whitaker and Chet Lemon hit homers and Juan Berenguer, 10-10, survived a shaky first inning to give East champion Detroit its 101st victory of the season. Darrell Evans' sacrifice fly and Ruppert Jones' single made it 2-0 in the top of the first and the Tigers made it 3-1 in the second on doubles by Nelson Simmons and Doug Baker. After Robin Yount's 15th homer of the year drew the Brewers within 4-3 after seven, Lemon hit a solo homer in the eighth and Whitaker a two-run shot in the ninth. Paul Hartzell, 0-1, was the loser.

A's 10, Rangers 6
Rickey Henderson scored four times and Carney Lansford drove in four runs in a game that saw eighth pitchers assailed for 27 hits and 17 walks. Lansford doubled in Henderson in the top of the first, scored him in the fourth with a sacrifice fly and plated him again in the seventh with a two-run triple that tied the game 6-6. Lansford scored the deciding run on a throwing error by Texas shortstop Curtis Wilkerson. Henderson added an insurance run in the ninth when he came in ahead of Gary Hancock's double.

Larry Sorensen, 6-13, was the winner in relief, while Dwayne Henry, 0-1, lost it.

NEW BERN — D.H. Conley's boys' cross-country team finished last in a four-team field yesterday at New Bern.

Eastern Wayne led the field with 32 points while New Bern was second with 54, followed by Goldsboro with 55. Conley finished fourth with 69.

Goldsboro's Rodney White was first across the line in 18:30, followed by Eastern Wayne's Chris Daniel in 18:33. Conley's Chester Paramore finished third in 18:48.

New Bern had the next two, as Simpson finished in 15:49 and Barfield in 19:39. Eastern's Mark Beckert was sixth in 19:50, followed by teammates David Combs in 19:54. Steve Wilson in 20:04 and Mark Johnson in 20:13. Bill Matthews of New Bern was tenth in 20:18.

Other Conley finishers were Derrick McLawhorn, 14th in 20:36. Gene Wozny, 16th in 21:11. Charles Wilkerson, 17th in 21:12. Carl Dunn, 19th in 21:26. Richard Patch, 32nd in 23:22. Hall Dunn, 33rd in 24:02, and Steve Eroh, 38th in 25:08.

Conley is now 4-3 on the year and entertains White Oak on Thursday.

Plunkett Carries On Tradition In 33-30 Rally Over San Diego

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Plunkett has been the instigator of many last-gasp victories by the Raiders, both in Oakland and Los Angeles, since he joined the club in 1978. His explanation for such heroics is almost mystical.

"It's Raider tradition," Plunkett said with a smile Monday night after guiding Los Angeles 76 yards to a touchdown in the closing moments of a 33-30 triumph over the San Diego Chargers. "It doesn't matter who's wearing the uniforms."

The Raiders needed 10 plays to negotiate those 76 yards, with the first 74 coming on passes by Plunkett. As the Los Angeles Coliseum crowd of 76,131 went wild, Marcus Allen dove into the end zone from a yard out with 45 seconds remaining.

Not only did the victory give the Raiders a 4-0 record, enabling them to join Miami and San Francisco as the only unbeaten teams in the National Football League, it extended their mark on Monday nights to 21-2-1 since the prime time series began in 1970.

"It's a win, it's Monday night, I'm very pleased with the way things came out, I'm tired," said Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores with a weak smile. "We don't plan to win them in the last quarter, but as long as we can continue to do so, I'll be happy."

It didn't appear the Raiders were going to do so when San Diego linebacker Woodrow Lowe returned a tipped Plunkett pass 32 yards for a touchdown with 10:21 remaining. That gave the Chargers 17 points in a span of 3:21 and a 30-20 lead.

"Those things happen," Plunkett said when asked about the interception. "Fortunately, there were still 10 minutes to go."

After a 44-yard kickoff return by Dokie Williams, the Raiders moved 53 yards in eight plays. Allen scored the third of his four touchdowns with 8:20 left to make it 30-26. It stayed that way when holder Marc Wilson fumbled the snap from center on the conversion attempt.

The Chargers, who dropped to 2-2, held the ball for nearly five minutes, but eventually were forced to punt, giving the Raiders possession at their own 24-yard line with 3:33 left.

The big plays of the final drive were Plunkett's passes of 16 and 11 yards to tight end Todd Christensen, and 15 yards each to Frank Hawkins and Malcolm Barnwell.

Plunkett finished the game with 24 completions in 33 attempts for 363 yards, clearly his finest performance so far this year. But it almost wasn't enough.

"They've got a hell of an offense," said Los Angeles defensive end Lyle Alzado when asked about the 30 points scored by the Chargers. "Any time you have quarterback Dan Fouts back there, you're going to score a lot of points."

"The Los Angeles offense always seems to play as well as necessary, they always find a way to get the job done. It's amazing."

Said Plunkett: "It's nice for us when the defense doesn't play well that the offense does. That's how you get to the Super Bowl."

Only a week earlier, the offense got the job done in similar fashion. The Raiders drove 73 yards against Kansas City 1-yard line before Chris Bahr kicked a 19-yard field goal with one minute left to give Los Angeles a 22-20 win.

A 42-yard field goal by Bahr gave the Raiders a 3-0 lead over the Chargers early in the opening period, but San Diego then drove 75 yards on 10 plays to go ahead 7-3. Fouts, who hit on 19 of 37 passes for 227 yards, fired an 11-yard strike to Kellen Winslow for the touchdown.

Bahr booted a 39-yarder later in the first period to make it 7-6, but Rolf Benirschke's 51-yarder midway through the second quarter restored San Diego's four-point lead.

A 1-yard run by Allen with six seconds remaining before halftime capped a 78-yard, 15-play Los Angeles drive that put the Raiders ahead 13-10.

The Raiders made it 20-10 on a 30-yard TD pass from Plunkett to Allen early in the third quarter, but the Chargers rebounded, getting a 33-yard field goal from Benirschke midway through the period and a 1-yard scoring run from Earnest Jackson early in the fourth quarter to make it 20-20.

A 48-yard field goal by Benirschke with 11:02 remaining put the Chargers ahead, and Lowe's touchdown came 41 seconds later. But the Raiders still had more than enough time to win, although not by much.

"I'm proud of the players," said San Diego Coach Don Coryell. "I think they played hard. Obviously, we played against a very fine football team in the Raiders. We just didn't win it."

"Jackson played very well. The whole team played well. It was one of those games where one play here and one play there made the difference. I felt that when the Raiders got the ball the last time that we would stop them. I thought we'd hold them."

Jackson, a second-year running back who replaced the troubled Chuck Muncie and the traded Pete Johnson, gained 155 yards on 29 carries. Winslow had nine receptions for 119 yards while Christensen was Plunkett's favorite target with eight catches for 120 yards.

"San Diego is a great team," Allen said. "They throw everything at you. They throw the house, the kids, the car, the wife, everything. We just had to keep playing."

Scott, Mattes Named Top ACC Defenders

GREENSBORO (AP) — Wake Forest linebacker Tony Scott and Virginia defensive tackle Ron Mattes have been selected as the Atlantic Coast Conference football defensive back and defensive lineman of the week.

Scott finished with seven primary tackles and eight assists in the Demon Deacons 24-15 victory over North Carolina State, despite a broken hand. The 6-foot-7, 286-pound native of Ringtown, Pa., also had a quarterback sack, a tackle for loss and a fumble recovery.

Earlier, Wake Forest tailback Michael Ramsey and Maryland center Kevin Glover were named the ACC offensive back and offensive lineman of the week.

Ramsey, a junior, scored two touchdowns against N.C. State. The Landis native carried 35 times for 149 yards and caught four passes for an additional 35 yards.

Glover, a senior, from Upper Marlboro, Md., received a coaches' grade of 87 percent for his efforts in the Terps' 20-17 victory over West Virginia.

The weekly selections are made by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association.

Lady Vikes Take First

NEW BERN — D.H. Conley's girls' cross-country team powered past three others yesterday, running their record to 6-1 on the season.

Conley finished the meet with 43 points, while Eastern Wayne was a close second with 46. Goldsboro was third with 54, followed by New Bern with 67.

Goldsboro's Shirlena Wiley finished first with a time of 23:50, followed by Conley's Vanessa Marrow in 23:54. Eastern Wayne's Karen Moose was third in 25:01.

Tonya Coley of Goldsboro took third place in 25:35, followed by New Bern's Lainey Tant in 26:33. Cori Acasio was fifth in 26:38.

Regina Casey of Eastern Wayne led the second five in 28:24, followed by Conley's Priscilla Barnhill in 29:54 and Angela Hicks in 29:58. Eastern Wayne's Tracy Bobo was next in 30:30.

Other Conley finishers included Cynthia Brown, 11th in 31:03 and Leslie Stevens, 13th in 31:30.

Conley's girls return to action Thursday, hosting White Oak.

Body Of Tar Heel Seaman Returns To U.S.

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — A 38-foot American flag hung from the ceiling. A 14-man honor guard stood at attention. A five-man color guard was in place. There was a podium. There were two flag-draped coffins.

The ceremony here Monday for the latest military casualties in Lebanon was strikingly similar to more than a dozen ceremonies held in the same hangar nearly a year ago when 241 Marines were killed by a terrorist bombing of the Marines' headquarters in Beirut.

Many of the more than 200 military and base personnel who attended the ceremony Monday were the same ones who honored the Marines last year.

The victims and families were different, but the sorrow was the same.

The bodies of U.S. Army Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth V. Welch, 33, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and U.S. Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Michael Ray Wagner, 30, of Zebulon, N.C., were returned to the base Saturday from Germany.

They were among at least nine people killed last Thursday when terrorists bombed the U.S. Embassy annex near Beirut.

U.S. Air Force Lt. Gen. John T. Chain said their deaths "remind us of the burden of responsibility that we as a nation must bear."

"We cannot turn and flee from the war-ravaged city of Beirut. The threats, the car bombs, the kidnappings, the assassinations, would only follow us wherever else democracy is threatened," Chain said.

"The answer is not to flee, but to stand, and with the help of God to find the will and the way to assist the free countries of this world to defeat terrorism and the dark forces of evil it represents," he said.

Navy Rear Adm. Don H. McDowell spoke highly of Wagner, saying he "may have been small of stature, but he was large of heart. He was a leader in every sense of the word...a professional in everything he did."

"We as shipmates share a deep sense of loss and sadness with the family. We are proud to have served with such brave and courageous men. A grateful nation and the services will long remember the patriotism and dedication of these fine young Americans," McDowell said.

Army Maj. Gen. Julius Parker said he didn't know Welch personally, but had talked to people who knew him.

He called Welch a "superb professional soldier" and noted Welch had received several awards and decorations throughout his military service.

Parker called Welch "a person of tremendous drive, an energizer, an achiever, a doer. One who always got results. He was a fine leader, loyal to his subordinates, his peers, and his superiors and a superb administrator."

Following the ceremony, Welch's brother, Michael, said, "We believe in what he did and we believe that everybody else should believe as Americans. He didn't die in vain."

Wagner's father, the Rev. Donald Wagner, thanked the Navy for its support for the family.

"We're very grateful for the comfort and strength that comes to us through God's son, Jesus Christ," he said.

Asked whether he thought there was ample security at the embassy, Wagner replied, "I do not want to get into political and other kinds of discussions. That's for someone else to decide."

A funeral service is scheduled for Wagner at 4 p.m. today at Rocky Hock Baptist Church near Edenton. Burial will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington, D.C.

The bodies of military personnel who die in the Azores, Europe, Iceland, Greenland and the Middle East are brought to Dover Air Force Base, which has the largest mortuary on the East Coast.

The base mortuary handled the bodies of servicemen killed in Vietnam and about 900 bodies flown in from Jonestown, Guyana, after the November 1978 mass suicide of the Peoples Temple religious cult.

IN THE STATE

Warning Compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise agreement on new health warnings on cigarette packages appears satisfactory to all aspects of the tobacco industry as well as to health groups, Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., said.

Ford said Monday the compromise on legislation to replace the general health warning on cigarettes with four alternating specific warnings appears satisfactory to growers, distributors, retailers and manufacturers in the cigarette industry.

"I think we've arrived at something where we all can say we have legislation we can pass," Ford told reporters.

The House has passed legislation that would replace the 13-year-old health warning on cigarette packages and advertising with four alternating warnings about the specific dangers cigarettes pose to smokers and their future children.

Under the agreement, Ford said, a section of the bill listing findings by the U.S. surgeon general would be taken out, although they would appear in the report accompanying the bill.

The findings state, among other things, that "cigarette smoking is the largest preventable cause of illness and premature death in the United States, and is associated with the unnecessary deaths of over 300,000 Americans annually."

Hearing To Reopen

RALEIGH (AP) — The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board has agreed to reopen hearings on Duke Power Co.'s license to operate its Catawba Nuclear Station so the board can consider an employee's charges that foremen pressured workers to cut corners to meet production schedules at the plant.

Duke Power has obtained a license from the staff of the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission to load nuclear fuel at the Rock Hill, S.C., plant and performance mechanical and electrical tests. An application is pending to put the plant into commercial operation.

Miller Acquitted

RALEIGH (AP) — Glenn Miller Jr., leader of the Carolina Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, has been acquitted of drunken driving charges in Wake District Court. Testimony showed that Miller, 43, of Angier, was arrested July 15 when Raleigh Police Officer M.E. Matthews saw him driving the wrong way on a one-way street near downtown Raleigh. Matthews testified that Miller had a "moderate" odor of alcohol on his breath when he was stopped.

Miller was taken to the Wake magistrate's office but refused to take a breath analysis test, Matthews said. Miller performed physical tests such as touching his finger to his nose but refused to close his eyes as instructed, Matthews said.

Miller pleaded guilty to two lesser charges of driving the wrong way on a one-way street and running a red stoplight. He was ordered to pay a $25 fine plus court costs.

Water Quality

RALEIGH (AP) — Public officials and candidates for public office need to be more aware of the issues affecting water quality, 14 North Carolina civic and conservation groups said in news conferences Monday.

"The threat to clean water is the sleeper issue of 1985," said Don Besse, president of the Conservation Council of North Carolina in a statement released at conferences in five cities. "And the sleeper is about to wake up."

The groups handed out questions on clean water issues ranging from apandoned toxic waste dumps and leaking underground storage tanks to coastal wetlands and the fishing industry, with one set of questions geared to North Carolina problems and another addressing those to come before Congress.

Teen-Ager Killed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Kernersville teen-ager who was hiking up Sauratown Mountain with three friend slipped and fell to his death, Stokes County sheriff's officials say.

Talbort Adam Day, 18, had been hiking on the mountain's established trails for about an hour Sunday when he and three friends detoured to find a quicker route up, said Detective Lewis Ammons of the Stokes County Sheriff's Department.

Day, who was climbing about 300 feet from the top of the mountain, fell about 100 feet.

He died immediately, at about 8:30 p.m., of massive head injuries, authorities said.

Textile Representative

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed Al Calloway of Raleigh as a special representative for textiles in the state Department of Commerce.

Calloway, 56, will work specifically with the textile industry in the new position and will be the industry's personal contact in state government.

Calloway previously was assistant director of the Business Assistance Division of the state Department of Commerce.

Ditch Caves In

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Danville, Va., man was in critical condition Monday after a 15-foot dirt wall in a ditch caved in on him and two co-workers at a home construction site.

William Douglas Poole, 25, of Route 4, Danville, was injured while he was trying to free a co-worker from the dirt bank which first collapsed about noon.

A hospital spokeswoman would not give any details about the nature of Poole's injuries.

Wayne Sheppard Jr. and Richard Brooks, 20, both of Danville, were treated at Wesley Long and released, the spokeswoman said.

Disaster Centers Open

RALEIGH (AP) — Federal and state disaster assistance centers will open Wednesday in New Hanover and Brunswick counties and Thursday only in Pender County, state officials said Monday.

The centers will allow people who suffered losses from Hurricane Diana to apply for federal and state aid programs. Applications will be available for a variety of programs to help individuals get special loans and other aid.

In New Hanover County, the center will be at the National Guard Armory on Carolina Beach Road in Wilmington; in Brunswick at the governmental complex outside Bolivia; and at Burgaw United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall in Pender County.

State Will Seek The Death Penalty For Bladen County Triple Murders

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — The state says it will seek the death penalty against Elton Ozell McLaughlin, who has been found guilty of three counts of first-degree murder in the slayings of a Bladen County man, his wife and stepdaughter.

More evidence will be presented today by state prosecutors and defense attorneys Mike Willis and Craig Wright of Whiteville as the sentencing phase of the trial begins. McLaughlin could receive the death penalty or life imprisonment.

The 10-woman, two-man jury deliberated about 45 minutes before returning the verdicts Monday.

McLaughlin and Eddie Carson Robinson, 36, were charged May 9 in the March 26 shooting of James Worley, 50; the April 29 drowning of his wife, Shelia Denise Worley, 21; and the bludgeoning death of her daughter, 5-year-old Psoma Baggett.

Robinson is scheduled to go on trial for the same offenses Oct. 15.

As the jury foreman read the verdicts, McLaughlin, 33, sat much as he had during most of the weeklong trial — expressionless, leaning back in his chair with his legs outstretched and his hands folded in his lap.

Before deliberations Monday, Judge Hamilton H. Hobgood of Louisburg told the jury that the verdict of first-degree murder requires each member to find that the murder in question was premeditated and committed with deliberation, or a "cool state of mind" as opposed to a sudden act of violence.

The defense argued last week that the shooting of Worley arose from last-minute fear and that Robinson instigated the slaying of his Worley's wife and stepdaughter.

While testifying in his own defense Thursday, McLaughlin admitted walking into Worley's house early on the morning of March 26 and shooting Worley twice through the chest with a single-shot .22-caliber rifle.

But McLaughlin also testified that he was enticed to meet Mrs. Worley that morning by "love talk" the night before and had brought the gun along to fend off dogs at Worley's house.

He testified that he had not planned to shoot Worley, but did so because he saw him in the bedroom and was scared that Worley might shoot him.

A written summary of a May 10 interview with Bladen County Detective Phillip Little said, however, that McLaughlin confessed to an agreement with Mrs. Worley to get $3,000 of the insurance money in exchange for killing Worley.

The confession does not mention

Mrs. Worley being drowned in a bathtub at McLaughlin's house on April 29.

Robinson testified that he hid in the bathroom and waited until the lights were out, then beat Mrs. Worley over the head with a pipe while McLaughlin was kissing her on the neck. After she was knocked down, Robinson testified that McLaughlin dragged her into the bathroom and held her head underwater in the bathtub until she stopped struggling.

Wake Men Held

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The search for suspects in the rape and slaying of a University of South Carolina coed led state and federal authorities to North Carolina, where two men were arrested and are awaiting extradition.

Willie Earl Nesmith, 26, of Raleigh, N.C., and Benjamin Anthony Joyner, 24, of Garner, N.C., were arrested Monday in Raleigh and were being held there in the Wake County Jail, according to the sheriff's department and the FBI.

Richland County murder warrants had been issued for both in the shooting death of 20-year-old Barbara Lynn "Bobbi" Rossi, who disappeared Sept. 17 from the "Hampton Hill area of Columbia," authorities said.

Meanwhile, Richland County authorities continued to question an Eastover man who was taken into custody Friday but not charged in the Rossi case, The State newspaper reported today.

Nesmith was arrested on a fugitive warrant about 9:30 a.m. and was being held without bond pending extradition proceedings, Wake County Sheriff's Major D.T. Bellamy said.

Joyner was picked up on a similar warrant about 6:30 p.m. and was scheduled to make an initial court appearance today, said FBI spokesman Robert Pence in Charlotte.

An estimated four dozen searchers found Miss Rossi's body early Thursday evening — three days after she was last seen — in woods near Gadsden in lower Richland County. An autopsy revealed that she had been raped and then shot in the chest, abdomen and back.

Richland County Sheriff Frank Powell said at a brief news conference Friday that he believed there would be several arrests in the case, and he was "optimistic" authorities would soon clear the case and go public with the information.

Miss Rossi, who lived in the Columbia suburb of Forest Acres, was reported missing early Tuesday afternoon when state wildlife officials received word that her car had been spotted the night before in a soybean field near Gadsden.

When wildlife agents went to investigate, the car was gone. Powell said Monday that Miss Rossi's car was located in Johnston County, N.C.

Helfrich said. "I know many will want to put up barriers, and I know how suspicious they will want to become. But I know if we fall into that attitude, this will end in tragedy."

Former UNC-G Head James Ferguson Dies

GREENSBORO (AP) — James Sharbrough Ferguson, former chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and a distinguished history scholar, died Monday after a lengthy illness. He was 67.

During nearly 12 years as chancellor and two previous years as acting chancellor at UNC-G, Ferguson presided over the most expansive period in the institution's history.

Between 1964, when he became acting chancellor, and 1979, when he retired to return to full-time teaching, enrollment more than doubled to 9,855 students, the faculty grew at a similar rate and 17 new buildings worth a total of $30 million were begun or completed on the campus.

Ferguson was honored in 1979 with the American Association of State Colleges and Universities' distinguished service award and in 1980 with the National Brotherhood Citation of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. An endowed scholarship at UNC-G is named after him and his first wife, Fran, who died of cancer in 1978.

He retired from teaching in December 1983 with plans to rest, write and travel.

A memorial service will be 1 p.m. Wednesday at West Market Street United Methodist Church in Greensboro.

Memorials may be made to James S. Ferguson Scholarship Fund in care of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Cherokees Back Doctor

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians proposed during a public meeting to ask the Tribal Council to fight to have a black doctor reinstated at Cherokee Hospital.

Dr. Edward L. Woods, a black who came to Cherokee July 9, was suspended from his duties Sept. 18 by the Cherokee Hospital Governing Board, which is reviewing allegations that Woods has been uncooperative with associates at the Public Health Service-administered facility.

Big Cove Councilman Wilbur Sequoyah, who chaired the meeting, encouraged the group to see that Woods remains in Cherokee because "it appears that he is the first caring doctor we've ever had."

Woods, 44, an internist who earned his medical degree from the University of North Carolina, worked two years at Walter Reed Institute Research Center in Washington, D.C., and has practiced on other Indian reservations.

A memorandum signed by Governing Board Chairman James C. Meredith, who is based with the Public Health Service in Nashville, Tenn., said the paid suspension was for "some 25 instances of less-than-adequate medical practice and exchanges between you (Woods) and various staff members that were very strained, at best, and outright outbursts on your part at worst."

Hunt Service Time Challenged

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

An aide to Gov. Jim Hunt dismissed as a "cheap political shot" accusations by GOP Chairman David Flaherty that Gov. Jim Hunt lied about his military record and use of state property during his most recent debate with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Meanwhile, Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten pressed his attack on his Republican gubernatorial opponent, Rep. Jim Martin, as a handmaiden of big business. Martin called a news conference to complain that Edmisten was distorting his record.

One of the most heated exchanges between Helms and Hunt during their televised debate Sunday came when Hunt criticized the incumbent for voting against veterans' benefits. Helms said he had the support of veterans' groups and asked, "Which war did you serve in?"

Hunt angrily replied, "I don't like you questioning my patriotism," and said he had been in college during the Korean War and was "too old with two children when Vietnam came along."

Flaherty, in a news conference, said Hunt was born in 1937 and thus was 13 when the Korean War began and 16 when it ended. He entered college two years later.

"Mr. Hunt's blatant misstatement about this simple fact calls into question the rest of his so-called military record, or lack of one," said Flaherty, adding that neither he nor Helms was challenging Hunt's patriotism.

In an interview, Flaherty said he wasn't criticizing Hunt for not serving in the armed forces.

"The issue... is that the man has a serious credibility problem," said Flaherty. "The point is, why did he lie?"

Will Marshall, Hunt's campaign spokesman, said, "It's bad enough that Jesse Helms would take a cheap political shot like that. Now he's got Dave Flaherty out trying to continue this slur."

Marshall acknowledged that Hunt erred in saying he was in college during the Korean War, but attributed the mistake to the governor's agitation over Helms' question.

"Anytime someone impugns your patriotism, it would tend to make you angry," said Marshall.

Hunt's camp released a statement by Steve Carver of Dunn, chairman of Veterans for Hunt, saying Helms had voted against funds for veterans' pensions and health care "for nine straight years."

"North Carolina's veterans will not be fooled by Jesse Helms' efforts to conceal his record, nor will we be swayed by his vicious, personal attacks on... Hunt," said Carver.

Helms said during the debate that veterans cared more about responsible government than benefit programs.

Flaherty also called "incredible" Hunt's statement during the debate that he had not misused state property. Last Friday, Hunt repaid the state over $185,000 for his use of government vehicles for political purposes after his aides acknowledged that they had underbilled the campaign. Flaherty said Hunt owed much more, but Marshall said he paid $80,000 more than he was obligated to give.

Meanwhile, a group of sportsmen praising Hunt as "a staunch supporter" of gun ownership endorsed him and criticized Helms as a foe of congressional efforts to conserve "the natural resources vital to the survival of our fish and game."

J. Robert Gordon, spokesman for the Sportsmen Coalition for Hunt, said Hunt "deserves credit for reviving the Wildlife Resources Commission" and for promoting the Wildlife Advisory Committee.

Edmisten released a statement saying Martin has an "abominable record of anti-consumer votes," and had supported telephone access charges for long distance service and allowing utilities to charge consumers for unfinished construction projects.

In contrast, Edmisten said, as attorney general he had fought unfair utility rate increases and access charges.

Earlier, Martin said in a news conference that Edmisten was criticizing out of context a few of the thousands of votes Martin has cast in his 12 years in Congress.

"As the polls continue to show my support increasing and his decreasing, I guess we can expect a lot more of the same because (Edmisten) and his allies are going to get more panicky," said Martin.

A recent Gallup Poll showed Edmisten leading Martin 50.5 percent to 39.5 percent. In June, Edmisten's lead was 63 percent to 27 percent.

Edmisten announced that he had received endorsements from 79 of the state's 100 sheriffs, which he said reflected the success of his crime-fighting efforts and his good relationship with the state's law enforcement community.

Martin acknowledged in an interview that Edmisten had strong support among sheriffs. But he said that during his travels around the state, a number of Democratic sheriffs had privately encouraged him and asked their deputies to help him.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green will be the emcee when 5,000 Democrats gather at the beach Saturday for Marvin Speight's annual fish fry. Speight is a major backer of Edmisten, and his fish fry at Emerald Isle is expected to be a pro rally for Edmisten.

Edmisten and Green have been considered political enemies since a meeting last year during which Green asked Edmisten why the SBI was looking into his telephone records. The meeting came before Green was indicted on bribery charges stemming from a federal investigation of public corruption.

Green was acquitted after a trial in Wake Superior Court.

Green was one of nine Democrats Edmisten defeated to win the party nomination for governor.

Candidates Leave Challenges Alone

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic opponent Gov. Jim Hunt have not responded to challenges made in their most recent debate to open campaign records or appoint prosecutors to study alleged campaign violations.

The challenges were issued during the Senate candidates' third statewide televised debate Sunday night.

Palmer Sugg of the Helms for Senate campaign discounted the challenge Monday, charging that Hunt did not make a "good faith commitment."

Will Marshall of the Hunt campaign accused Helms of using a "silly political ruse" and charged that the two-term senator had no intentions of keeping his half of the bargain.

Helms called on Hunt during the debate to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate his use of state airplanes, helicopters, automobiles and state employees for political purposes.

Hunt, who repaid the state $185,938 last week for using the state aircraft and cars, said he had not misused any state property. He challenged Helms to open his books to clear up "legal questions... whether Jefferson Marketing has been used to disguise violations of campaign spending laws and to provide cut-rate advertising costs in your campaign."

State Democratic Party Chairman David Price has filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission charging that Helms' reelection campaign is being illegally financed by the National Congressional Club, a political action committee, and Jefferson Marketing Inc., a political advertising firm.

Helms then asked if Hunt would make available in Wake Superior Court all his records "relating to your having used tax funds in your political campaign."

Hunt paid the state last week for use of "state aircraft and cars since Aug. 9, 1983. State Republican Party Chairman Dave Flaherty filed suit in Wake Superior Court to force Hunt to repay the money. He contends the $185,939 is not enough.

Helms pressed the subject again, later in the debate.

"I want to say to the governor that if you will agree to the special prosecutor... I will agree to request my people to go and provide all the information," Helms said.

After the debate, Helms said he had no plans to ask for a prosecutor to assist the FEC investigation of Jefferson Marketing but said, "I'm willing for there to be one."

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have so much charm and magnetism that everyone around him or her will want to shower favors on your progeny, but early teach that whatever is earned by own efforts is most appreciated in life, otherwise he or she may become a parasite and disillusioned.

Son Accused In Writer's Death

NEW YORK (AP) — When Paul Rogers finally got his novel published, he dedicated it to his adopted son, "with my love and devotion, now and forever."

But on Monday, in a tale as squalid as any in Rogers' prize-winning novel of the seedy Times Square underworld, 19-year-old Chris Rogers and another man were accused of beating his reclusive foster father to death and stealing his wallet.

The younger Rogers and Nicholas Ondrizek, 27, were charged with homicide in the death of Rogers, 48, a "very, very sick man" who was dying of cancer. They also were charged with robbery and conspiracy for allegedly taking Rogers' wallet and automatic teller card.

A former school teacher and social worker about whom little is known, Rogers adopted Chris three years ago and dedicated his novel, "Saul's Book," to him. It won the 1981 Editors' Book Award, which is presented annually for an outstanding manuscript overlooked by major commercial publishers.

Police said the writer appeared to have been dead for more than a week when his decomposed body was found Saturday in a closet of his Queens apartment building by the building superintendent.

According to Detective Lt. James Campbell, Rogers was beaten to death with a plank which his son and Ondrizek later burned in an incinerator. Police said they did not file murder charges until an autopsy indicated Rogers was killed by a blow to the head.

The son was at the apartment when police arrived and Ondrizek, whom Campbell characterized as "a drifter," was arrested in a park near Rogers' apartment, the detective said.

Rogers had cancer, according to his publisher, William Henderson, whose Puschart Press published "Saul's Book" in 1982.

"He was a very, very sick man. I expected he'd be dead by now," said Henderson, who said he last spoke with Rogers earlier this year. "I think he did, too."

Mercy killing had been ruled out as a motive in the slaying and detectives were trying to obtain Rogers' bank records to learn if money had been withdrawn from his account with the bank card in his wallet, Campbell said.

The book, in its second paperback printing, has sold about 10,000 copies. It has appeared on the Village Voice's best seller list, based on sales in selected New York bookstores.

"Saul's Book" tells the story of Sinbad, a Times Square hustler, and his lover Saul, a middle-aged intellectual ex-convict.

"He was a writer of genius," said Henderson.

"This book offers scenes of degradation so devastating that to read them makes you tremble," The New York Times said. "To have written them must have been excruciating and to have lived them nearly unspeakable."

A preface to the paperback edition of "Saul's Book" says the author "knows first hand the people and places found in his book."

Asked how Rogers gained that knowledge, Henderson said, "In his own life, I think. But he was very secretive about that life. He depicted a world few of us ever get a chance to see."

Disney Workers OK Strike

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Union leaders discussed how to put in motion a strike authorization voted by Disneyland workers when the company's latest and improved contract offer was overwhelmingly rejected.

Union workers representing a third of the amusement park's employees turned down the modified offer Monday, a week after voting down a pay-freeze contract the company proposed, said United Food and Commercial Workers spokesman Michael O'Rourke.

The revised offer included a reduced pay-freeze demand — two years instead of three years — and a "grandfathering" provision. Under the offer, certain health and welfare benefits, seniority and job security provisions would be maintained for current employees, but not for new workers, said Bob Bleiweiss, a union spokesman.

Neither Disney nor union spokesmen would elaborate on the benefits. The 69.25 percent rejection of the contract Monday automatically authorized a strike against the Magic Kingdom under union rules, O'Rourke said.

"Now the rank-and-file committee and the union leaders are meeting to decide when and where and how any economic action might be taken against the employer," he said.

He said he saw a "slim chance" Disneyland would offer to go back to the negotiating table, but added that seemed unlikely.

Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth said park officials were waiting for an official word from the unions or the federal mediator on what would happen next. The company has said it would get non-union workers to fill in if a strike occurred.

Roth said it had been "very difficult to call" whether the unions would accept or reject the contract.

"We're disappointed," he said. "I wouldn't say it's a shock."

O'Rourke said 1,400 of the 1,844 union members whose contracts are being negotiated voted Monday.

The negative vote followed a recommendation by union leaders, who said that although the Disneyland offer contained improvements over the package a week ago, it still called for concessions.

Michener Says Repaid College

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener says a $2 million donation to Swarthmore College is repayment for a $2,000 scholarship he received in 1925, "with $1,998,000 interest."

Michener, a Doylestown native who has written 29 books that have been translated into 25 languages, graduated from Swarthmore in 1929.

The 77-year-old author said Monday his education at the highly ranked liberal arts college "was crucial in my life. It unlocked opportunities in life in a way that nothing else could have."

In a statement to the press about the donation, Michener said the interest was "1,000-to-1, just about the financial value of a good liberal arts education. Of course, the spiritual value is a lot higher."

The education "enlarged my perceptions by about a factor of 50," Michener told the Philadelphia Inquirer from his home in Austin, Texas. "I came in one person and came out another."

River Park North is open from 6 a.m. until 8 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday. For information on park activities, call 752-4137.

VOLCANIC AVALANCHE — An avalanche of mud and rocks from erupting Mayon Volcano (background) struck the outskirts of Santo Domingo in the Philippines Monday. The town, 200 miles southeast of Manila, has been cut off from most of the surrounding territory. The flow of mud created the gully shown above. Thousands of villagers have fled their homes this week as the flow continues. (AP Laserphoto)

Flowing Volcanic Debris Cuts Off Several Villages

LEGASPI, Philippines (AP) — Volcanic ash filled the air for 50 miles around flaming Mount Mayon and several towns were cut off by flowing mud today as authorities struggled to handle nearly 60,000 evacuees who have fled their homes.

The governor of Albay province, Felix Imperial, said some of the 30 evacuation centers around the pyramid-shaped mountain were cut off this morning by rolling boulders and mud oozing down the sides of the volcano, which began erupting Sept. 9.

Loreto Aguilu, a Manila volcanologist, said scientists were having difficulty monitoring the 8,100-foot mountain because "she is not very cooperative."

A geological station midway up the slope had to be moved after the biggest explosion of the month spewed smoke and ash nine miles into the air Sunday, following a weeklong lull.

The station was moved into a school in Legaspi, nine miles from the crater. But Aguilu said even that city of 100,000 is considered to be in the volcano's base area, and in danger.

He said seismic data indicates the eruption is waning, but it could continue for months and may yet give off another major blast. "The big blow up could still happen. The possibility always exists," Aguilu said.

"This is part of our lives," said Imperial, as Mayon billowed smoke and ash within sight of his office. "The resiliency of the Filipino is put to the test in disasters like these. Like the bamboo, we bend but we do not break."

But even bamboo was buried, along with rice fields, thick jungle, dozens of huts and some modern houses, in the thick muck oozing down all sides of the mountain.

Only one death has been directly attributed to the latest eruption. A farmer was buried in hot mud when he stayed behind in an evacuated area. At least three children have died in evacuation centers from illness.

Imperial said a bridge leading to the town of Tabaco, where several evacuation centers have been set up, was covered with mud and boulders. As bulldozers worked to open the road, the only access to the town for relief supplies was by boat or helicopter, the governor said.

Imperial declined to estimate total damage from the volcano. He said the mudflows, which are made up of dirt, rocks and debris loosened by lava and washed down by rainfall, pose the greatest danger.

Mayon's last eruption in 1978 left no fatalities, but a mudflow loosened by heavy rain in 1981 killed more than 40 people.

In the village of Lidong, a car repair shop was buried to a few feet below the roof, and only the top of a jeep could be seen above the mud.

Residents returning to view the destruction in the village of Padang in the outskirts of Legaspi, were able to step from the hardened mud onto the roofs of their houses.

About 2,000 residents of some villages were returning to their homes last week, reducing the number of evacuees to 26,000. But by today, as Mayon continued to rumble, an estimated 32,000 more refugees had arrived at shelters, Imperial said.

Mayon has had 44 eruptions since the first was recorded by a Spanish friar in 1616. It smokes year-round and erupts an average of once every seven and a half years. Some eruptions have lasted nearly a year, others only a few weeks.

The worst losses came in 1814, when the town of Cagsawa was buried and 1,200 people were killed.

Salvadoran Guardsmen Seek Reduction In Prison Sentences

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Five former national guardsmen convicted of murdering four American churchwomen have asked for a reduction of their 30-year sentences and a judge is considering their appeal, a court official says.

In another development, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said he is not convinced of Nicaragua's good faith in negotiating a peace treaty for Central America.

Duarte, at a news conference Monday, said a declaration last week by Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government that it is ready to sign the Contadora group's peace proposal may have been a result of international pressure rather than commitment to the proposed peace process.

In Nicaragua, the Defense Ministry said anti-Sandinista rebels ambushed a military truck en route to a training school in northern Nicaragua, killing eight people — including five civilians — and wounding 19.

Luis Zapata, secretary in the Third Appeals Court in San Vicente, 37 miles east of San Salvador, said Monday the guardsmen's appeal arrived late last week and is being considered by Judge Luis Melara.

"If the court considers the appeal well-founded, the sentence could drop to, say 20 years," Zapata said.

He said the appeal sought a reduced sentence but failed to provide justification for the request.

A jury in Zacatecoluca, 10 miles south of San Salvador, found the men guilty May 24 and they were given the maximum sentence under Salvadoran law.

They were convicted of killing Maryknoll nuns Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 49, both of New York; Ursuline nun Dorothy Kazel, 41, and layworker Jean Donovan, 27, both of Cleveland. They were shot to death Dec. 2, 1980, and buried in a shallow grave 35 miles southeast of San Salvador.

At his news conference, Duarte said of Nicaragua. "They have created all kinds of obstacles in order not to accept certain points of the Contadora process..."

Harry Shlaudeman, President Reagan's Central American envoy, arrived Monday to talk with Duarte about the Contadora negotiations and recent talks with the Nicaraguans.

Shlaudeman was to meet today with Nicaraguan officials for the fifth time in Manzanillo, Mexico.

The 21-point Contadora plan — which advocates democratic elections, mutual arms reductions and removal of foreign military advisers — was drawn up by the Contadora-group nations of Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia, and the Central American nations of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

All five Central American nations have said they will sign the document, but none has so far.

On another matter, Duarte said he was convinced the alleged massacres of civilians by government troops in Cabanas and Chalatenango provinces since late July were matters of the victims being caught in combat between the troops and guerrillas.

"A massacre is when someone assassinates others who are not armed and who are defenseless," Duarte said.

The president recently issued guidelines aimed at reducing civilian casualties during government ground attacks and air raids. The war between the U.S.-supported government and leftist guerrillas is nearly five years old.

Origin Of Mine Elusive

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Investigators have not yet firmly established the origin of a mysterious mine found nearly two weeks ago as part of the investigation of recent explosions in the Red Sea, a British Embassy official said today.

Discrimination

TOKYO (AP) — More than three-quarters of Japanese women say they face discrimination, according to a Prime Minister's Office survey.

The number of women who said they were not being treated equally rose by 18 percentage points to 77.5 percent from the previous survey taken five years ago, while those who believe sexual equality exists fell 8 points to 13 percent.

Asked where they faced discrimination, 65 percent of the women said they encountered it in society in general. The work place was specifically cited by 60 percent and the home by 23 percent.

tion of recent explosions in the Red Sea, a British Embassy official said today.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said British and Egyptian experts were examining the instruments which were taken from the undersea mine earlier this week.

A series of explosions in the Red Sea, including the Gulf of Suez, began July 9 and damaged 19 ships.

British and Egyptian officials say the cylindrical mine — nearly 10 feet long and about 1 1/2 feet thick — is unlike any known to be in the arsenals of Western, Communist, Arab or other navies.

The mine was found by British mine-hunters in the Gulf of Suez about 15 miles south of the southern entrance to the Suez Canal in about 125 to 165 feet of water along the southbound shipping channel. It towed to shallow water on the western shore of the gulf and the section containing the explosives was left in the water, officials said.

Asked if the device might be of Soviet manufacture, a British source said only, "We all have theories" but would not elaborate.

Suits Filed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Richard Dreyfuss, Mike Farrell, Susan Sarandon and 15 other people have sued the city, the Police Commission and senior police officers to try to force them to return funds that allegedly were misspent on police spying operations.

Similar complaints by 131 individuals and organizations represented by the American Civil Liberties Union were settled last February, when the city agreed to pay $1.8 million in attorneys' fees and damages and revamp police surveillance procedures.

Granada Party Announces Slate

GRENVILLE. Grenada (AP) — Grenada's new coalition party has introduced its slate of candidates, ranging from a one-time law partner of slain Prime Minister Maurice Bishop to a political veteran who was premier two decades ago.

The New National Party, formed earlier this month, introduced its 15 candidates for the Dec. 3 parliamentary elections at a rally in this northeastern city. Governor General Sir Paul Scoon last week went on national radio to set the date for the island's first elections since 1976.

The new party was formed from three groups and hasn't yet detailed its platform, although it calls itself "moderate." Its government would likely be strongly pro-West and would concentrate on reviving Grenada's private sector after 4½ years of rule by Bishop's leftist New Jewel Movement.

Herbert Blaize, a 65-year-old attorney who headed Grenada's government in 1962-67, leads the party.

Other candidates include Francis Alexis, a university law lecturer who had headed an exile group that included some former members of the Bishop government, and Tillman Thomas, an attorney who was a law partner with Bishop but was jailed for more than two years after he helped publish a newspaper in defiance of Bishop's regime.

The coalition grew out of an August meeting in the neighboring nation of St. Vincent and the Grenadines involving the coalition leaders and the prime ministers of the host nation, Barbados and St. Lucia. Those three nations were among seven Caribbean countries who participated in the U.S.-led October 1983 invasion that toppled radical members of the Bishop regime after they seized power in a takeover during which Bishop was killed.

Gairy's Grenada United Labor Party, which won nine of 15 seats in 1976, hasn't yet announced its full slate.

Gairy, 62, has claimed he won't run in the elections, but will provide guidance to the party. His governments were marked by repression, corruption and his calls for international study of unidentified flying objects. He was overthrown by Bishop in March 1979.

Blaize and other members of his party have said they see no need for a permanent military presence but also say there should be no rush to remove some 400 remaining U.S. and Caribbean peacekeeping personnel.

The troops invaded six days after Bishop was killed in the intra-party struggle.

Grenada's economy is currently dependent on foreign aid, chiefly a two-year, nearly $60 million emergency aid program instituted after the invasion. The United States is helping complete a new international airport largely constructed by the past government's Cuban allies.

The airport is being counted on to boost the island's agricultural exports and underdeveloped tourism industry. Inaugural commercial flights are planned soon after the Oct. 25 invasion anniversary.

Some 30 percent of the labor force in Grenada, an island of more than 100,000 people, is unemployed.

Bishop loyalists, who formed the Maurice Bishop Patriotic Movement, haven't indicated whether they will field candidates.

South Korea Says Agents Infiltrating

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police in the capital area put on special alert today against possible attacks by North Korean agents, one day after a shooting spree in the city of Taegu was blamed on a Communist infiltrator, a police spokesman said.

The emergency order from Seoul police headquarters warned officers to be on special guard against possible assassination attempts during dedication ceremonies for Olympic Games facilities on Saturday, and on the Armed Forces Day national holiday Monday.

The order said several armed North Korean agents were believed to be in hiding in South Korea, and it called for stepped-up checks and vigilance at railway stations, bus terminals, entertainment places and other public facilities.

Officials of the International Olympic Committee and other athletic organizations were scheduled to be in Seoul this weekend for the dedication of the main stadium for the 1988 Olympics. Foreign athletes also have been invited to attend competitive events on Sunday.

In the midst of the alert, however, the government is allowing a convoy of North Korean trucks to deliver flood relief supplies to South Korean cities this weekend under the auspices of the International Red Cross.

Severe flooding at the beginning of September left nearly 200 people dead or missing and cost millions of dollars in material losses. North Korea offered to send rice, cement, fabrics and medicine to the South.

The Seoul government said it had taken care of flood victims and rehabilitation work on its own, but accepted the offer from the North as a possible step toward opening a dialogue with the Pyongyang regime. The Korean Peninsula was divided in 1945 at the end of World War II.
