Reagan Promises Gromyko 'Fair Deal'

Soviet Official Makes No Commitment

TALKS CONCLUDE — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko gestures as he leaves the State Department in Washington Saturday after meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday he assured Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that the Soviet Union could get "a fair deal" in negotiations with Washington, but Gromyko left a meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz giving no public hint whether Moscow was interested.

"Nothing more," were Gromyko's only words when asked if anything had been achieved during the session at the State Department. It wasn't clear whether he was referring to a lack of results or to a desire not to answer any questions.

But a senior State Department official said there had been an extensive discussion of arms control issues with Gromyko — suggesting it was a turning point because Moscow had been unwilling to discuss the subject following the Soviet walkout from the Geneva negotiations last year.

"I think it was very healthy, after a period in which the Soviet Union appeared unwilling to address nuclear weapons issues, that there was a good give and take on this subject with the president and the secretary of state," said the official, who briefed reporters on the meetings under conditions requiring anonymity.

Another administration official, arms control chief Kenneth Adelman, also said in a television interview that the meetings had moved both sides closer to a resumption of weapons talks. But he cautioned, "This is not something that happens quickly."

Shultz would only say after the two-hour, 15-minute meeting that they held "substantive discussions" and had agreed only to "keep in touch ... through diplomatic channels." He also had met with Gromyko for three hours in New York on Wednesday.

Reagan, in his first public report on his 3½ hours of talks with Gromyko on Friday, said in his weekly radio address that those discussions were "useful" and there was no effort to "paper over" differences. He said he was frank in the possibilities for improved superpower relations.

"Now the Soviets will return home to ponder our exchanges," Reagan said. "And while they know they will not secure any advantages from inflexibility, they will get a fair deal if they seek the path of negotiations and peace."

The senior State Department briefer said Reagan's proposals — spelled out in his U.N. address last week — for regular high-level contacts were discussed with Gromyko, but not yet accepted. "We hope the Soviet Union will respond," he said.

Following his meeting with Reagan on Friday, Gromyko issued a statement that indicated he was not impressed with what he heard. He said it was apparent that Washington was not willing "to take a realistic stand on the substance of the acute problems of war and peace."

Despite his conversations with Reagan, Gromyko said he could not "draw a conclusion about practical positive changes in the foreign-policy course of the U.S. administration." He called again for actions, not words.

Without a change in U.S. policy, Gromyko asserted, "a turn for the better is impossible either in Soviet-U.S. relations or in the international situation."

After seeing Gromyko off at the diplomatic entrance to the State Department, Shultz appeared briefly before reporters to say they had "had substantive discussions ...."

"Among other things," he said, he and Gromyko had "agreed, as the president said yesterday, to keep in touch."

"We will do so, not casually, but carefully, through diplomatic channels," Shultz said.

Shultz' reference to contacts through diplomatic channels may indicate that Moscow had not agreed, for the moment at least, to Reagan's suggestion that the two countries hold regular Cabinet-level contacts.

Deputy White House press secretary Robert Sims said Shultz telephoned Reagan at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., to report on his meeting with Gromyko, who was flying back to Moscow late Saturday.

"The secretary told the president both sides have a far better understanding of each other's purposes," Sims said. "We will await Soviet reflection on what they have been given with the hope that a more regular discourse will be established."

In his paid political radio broadcast, Reagan said he told Gromyko in their talks on Friday "that it's vital for us to exchange views and help find lasting solutions" to regional disputes in the world's trouble spots.

"We didn't seek to gloss over the hard issues that divide our two countries," the president reported. "We were not looking to paper over

1st District House Race Should Heat Up

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Activity for candidates in the race for the 1st Congressional District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives is expected to increase as the time for the Nov. 6 general election draws closer.

Incumbent Democrat Walter Jones of Farmville, faces opposition from Republican Herbert Lee of Greenville, in his bid for re-election to the post he has held since 1966.

Jones said last week that his campaigning has been limited so far because of his "involvement in Washington in the closing days of the Congress." But he said his campaign activities will pick up after Congress adjourns early in October.

"We'll have newspaper, radio advertising ... television," and several engagements in various parts of the district during October have been scheduled, he said. "We'll be in every county in the district during October."

Jones, pointing out that the 21-county first district "is one of the largest districts geographically in the United States," said "I don't run against anybody. I run for the office.

"My main thrust will be my seniority in Congress ... my voting record and my record of personal service to the people of the district during nine terms in the House."

Jones continued, "I'm proud of the fact that I am chairman of one of the major committees," the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, as well as a ranking member of the Agriculture Committee.

"Seniority stands me in good stead," Jones said, and gives him the "ability to help my constituents.

"You can't buy seniority. It has to be earned, which I have done. It helps get things done you couldn't do unless you are in a position of leadership."

"I'm running on the basis that Walter is not supporting the great majority of the people of District 1 in a number of ways."

Lee said Jones has "voted for increasing taxes ... against the president's tax reduction program in '81, and voted against every effort to cut federal spending. The taxpayers are not benefitting from Walter Jones' attitude."

According to Lee, other than agriculture, the first district is composed of small businessmen. He said a national association of small businessmen "rating Jones, gave Jones a rating of zero. That certainly does not speak well for supporting the people of the district," Lee suggested.

"Here we are, consistantly trying to attract new industry and manufacturing so the number of jobs will increase. You would think, therefore that Congressman Jones would be supporting legislation that would benefit manufacturers. Instead, when they rate him, they give him a rating of eight on a scale of 1 to 100. That certainly does not speak well for his support of manufacturers."

Lee continued, "There has been so much discussion on the tobacco program. The trouble the tobacco program has had has not been in the Senate, but in the Congress, where Congressman Jones is."

Lee also cited Jones' stance on "a unilateral nuclear freeze last year ... agreeing to cease production on all nuclear weapons at a point when the Soviet Union has surpassed us in production of all nuclear armamants" as "one of the primary reasons I'm running."

Lee said Jones' "vote for a freeze at such a time would be tying our military into a position of permanant inferiority ... a sell-out."

Lee also Jones "voted against aid to Central America. I consider foreign relations and defense of this nation the primary responsibility of the president. So I would have to support the president.

While his campaign is going well, Lee said, "The only thing is the lack of money. But, he added, as he gets the message to the people, the money picks up.

"People are not aware this is the case. For the past four years he (Jones) has voted the straight liberal Democrat. Since becoming chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, he (Jones) has become quite liberal."

Weather Forces Speight's Democratic Rally Inside

By Mary Anne Rhyne
Associated Press Writer

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — More than 2,000 Democrats endured the rain Saturday to rally for the November election which many said is bringing rough contests for the party.

Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten were among the candidates who attended the annual fish fry and barbeque held by Marvin Speight, chairman of the state Alcohol Beverage Control Commission.

The rain forced modification to the event this year. For the first time in nine years, the rally was forced indoors in the Islander Motel. Speight also was forced to set aside 1,200 fish fillets and 500 quarter chickens which he had planned to use for an outside gathering.

The event attracted candidates from a wide variety of offices as well as members of the state Utilities Commission, Board of Education, Board of Transportation, General Assembly, and lobbyists.

The weather did not dampen the spirits of the Democrats who ate barbeque and listened to country music and political speeches. Jim Long, candidate for Insurance Commissioner, billed the event as a "farewell to Jesse Helms," the Republican incumbent facing re-election challenge from Hunt.

Party leaders urged the crowd not to be "fair-weather Democrats" and to work for the ticket on the local level up.

"I'm a Democrat from my head to my toes," said state Auditor Ed Renfrow. "I'm not a fair-weather Democrat. This year we need to stick with the party and get the job done in November. We can't afford to be complacent."

Democrats say they are well aware of President Reagan's popularity in the state since a recent Gallup Poll showed him with an almost 2-1 lead over Democratic contender Walter Mondale.

"Vote for us ... by pulling the big Democratic lever at the top of the ticket," said state Supreme Court Justice Burley Mitchell.

In an interview, Mitchell said Reagan's support will affect all Democratic candidates, but said he was not as worried about the party's fate this year as he was in 1972.

"People are not as angry now. Reagan has committed support, but people are not strongly anti-Mondale as they were anti-(George) McGovern," Mitchell said.

Edmisten, the party nominee for governor, sought support from Democrats who worked for his opponent in the main primary. One of those opponents, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, emceed the rally. In an interview however, Green said his appearance meant only that he had been invited to the rally and refused to comment further about whether he endorsed Edmisten.

Green supporters had blamed Edmisten for the lieutenant governor's indictment last year on bribery charges. Green was acquitted after a trial in Wake Superior Court.

While speakers talked mostly about Democratic candidates, they also made jabs at Republican opponents.

"I'm in a tough race for the U.S. Senate, but it is high time that this state had a U.S. senator who responds to the people, not big special interests," Hunt said. "That crowd (special interests and oil company) had been putting money up and they have been getting their money's worth."

Hunt said, "The odds are running against us as well as the special interests" and he pleaded for extra help from the audience.

Hunt said in an interview that he believes voters are beginning to think more about the issues in the last month of the campaign and he predicted that will work to his advantage.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey agreed with Hunt that issues can make the difference in the race.

"Democrats are going to win because we've got the best candidates, and the best sides on the issues," Ramsey said.

State Sen. Rachel Gray of Guilford County, said the Senate race is not the only difficult contest the Democrats face.

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Tropical Storm Isidore raced toward a watery grave in the chilly Atlantic Saturday, grazing South Carolina with brisk winds and heavy rains as the parting shot of its journey northward from Florida.

"We hope we're through with it. Indications are it will continue away from the coast," said Paul Hebert of the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

The eye of the massive storm, which had meandered across Florida for two days, moved back over open water northeast of Jacksonville Friday night.

Forecasters had predicted it could pick up strength and would closely parallel the Georgia and South Carolina coasts on a northeasterly track -bringing 5-inch rains and causing extensive beach erosion.

But early Saturday, the storm turned more toward the east and picked up speed. By 9 p.m. its eye was located near latitude 34.5 north these differences. I made plain to Mr. Gromyko what it is about Soviet behavior that worries us and our allies."

But he added the talks were "useful" and that he "made it clear that we Americans have no hostile intentions toward his country and that we're not seeking military superiority over the U.S.S.R."

"I told him," Reagan said, "'If your government wants peace, then there will be peace.'

"I said the United States is committed to move forward with the Soviet Union toward genuine progress in resolving outstanding issues."

In an appearance on Cable News Network's "Evans & Novak" show, arms control chief Adelman said he sees a softening in Soviet opposition to on-site inspections, one of the administration's demands for any arms control agreement.

"There has been a shift ... I don't want to over-emphasize it," said Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. "For example, the Soviets have said on chemical weapons that they would take on-site inspection of destruction capabilities.

"Now, that's not production ... and it's not storage capabilities. But it's an indication that they could move along in that area."

Purchase

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The Hearst Corp. newspaper chain has reached an agreement to buy the Clearwater Sun, putting its owners out of the newspaper business, officials at both companies announced.

The Sun, with a daily circulation of about 40,000 in north Pinellas County, is owned by the Jefferson-Pilot Corp., an insurance conglomerate with headquarters in Greensboro, N.C.

Officials at Hearst Corp. headquarters in New York and at Jefferson-Pilot issued statements Friday saying a sale agreement had been reached. The price was not disclosed.

"This both strengthens our company as a whole and reaffirms our strategy of increasing the newspaper component of our business," said Hearst President Frank A. Bennack Jr.

The Clearwater Sun would be the third Jefferson-Pilot newspaper purchased by Hearst, bringing the total number of Hearst daily newspapers to 16. The Clearwater Sun is the last newspaper owned by Jefferson-Pilot. The insurance conglomerate sold six other newspapers in the past six months.

The Hearst chain, founded by publisher William Randolph Hearst, includes several large dailies, among them the San Francisco Examiner and the Baltimore News-American. The company also owns weekly newspapers, radio and television stations and magazines.

Weekend Wrecks

Ray Sinatra Sharpe of 200 Golden Road was charged with a safe movement violation and cited for not having an operator's license Saturday following a wreck involving the car he was driving and a vehicle operated by Teresa Lynn Swindell of Lt. 18, Shady Acres Trailer Park. Police said the cars collided on Farmville Boulevard. Damages were estimated at $450 to the Sharpe car and $4,500 to the Swindell car.

Also charged Saturday was Stepehn B. Deal of 600 E-4 Verdant St. who was given a safe movement citation following an accident involving the car he was driving and a car driven by Mark Allen Backhout of 800 Heath Drive, Apt. 32. Damages in the Greenville Boulevard accident were estimated at $500 to each car.

Charles Everette Bland of 506 Bremerton Drive was charged with a traffic light violation Saturday following an accident on Reade Circle involving the car he was driving and a vehicle operated by James Nichols Thompson of 136 Cypress Gardens. Damages to the Bland car were estimated at $500 and $900 to the Thompson car.

Police charged Richard Griffis Edmundson of 2911 Rose St. with following too closely Friday following an accident on Greenville Boulevard involving the car he was driving and a vehicle operated by Catherine E. Bray of Palmerton. Damages were estimated at $600 to the Edmundson car and $200 to the Bray vehicle.

Police said some children who were apparently left in a car parked in an Arlington Boulevard lot Friday released the brake, allowing the vehicle to roll backwards and damage two other cars. Damaged in the accident were a parked car ($200) and a car operated by Jacqueline Matthews Nobles of 807 W. Fourth St. ($150). The car the children were in received $300 worth of damages.

Storm ...

and longitude 75.0 west — about 60 miles south-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C. - moving northeast away from the coast at 20 to 25 mph.

Hebert said Isidore presented only a slight risk to coastal areas of North Carolina and, if it remained on course, would weaken in the chilly Atlantic.

The storm never did gain hurricane strength as some feared it might following its return to open water. The 50 mph maximum winds it packed Saturday were the same that buffeted Florida two days earlier.

Hebert said that "the reason is it's getting late into the season and they had a lot of cool air up there in the Carolinas." He added that strong winds in the upper atmosphere kept the storm from developing vertically.

"It never did have a good environment to develop," he said. "The only way it was able to maintain strength over Florida was because it drew from both the Atlantic and the Gulf."

Gale warnings were in effect from Little River Inlet north to Oregon Inlet, N.C. at 9 p.m. Saturday, according to the National Hurricane Center. Gale warnings were to be discontinued at midnight south of Cape Lookout, N.C., to Little River Inlet.

The heaviest rainfall in the state was 2.78 inches recorded in both Beaufort and Myrtle Beach in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Saturday. The highest winds during the storm was a 43 mph gust recorded at the Charleston Customs House at 4 a.m. Saturday.

In Myrtle Beach, where beach erosion is a nagging problem, City Manager Richard Melvin said he didn't think the coastline had been hit too badly.

"I know we've lost some sand. But we've still had it worse with northeasters in the winter than we've had at this point," he said.

By midday, the rain had stopped and skies had brightened in Charleston. Joggers were running along the historic Battery while tourists wandered through the popular Market area.

Meanwhile, 16 transport planes from the Charleston Air Force Base which had been flown to other bases Friday to ride out the storm were returning to Charleston, a base official said.

Bob Clihtero of the state Emergency Preparedness Division in Columbia said some people weren't happy to see the storm go.

"We have an ambiguity here because the farmers wanted it to stay around and get some more rain," he said. Upstate South Carolina is experiencing a drought and the storm brought little relief.

Only .09 inches of rain fell in Columbia during the storm, the Weather Service said.

"I think we missed another one," Clihtero said of the second storm to threaten the South Carolina coast in two weeks. Hurricane Diana brushed the state earlier this month.

"You'd have to go a long way back to see two threats to South Carolina so close together," Hebert said.

While its getting late in the hurricane season, Herbert hasn't ruled out the possibility of another storm.

"Hurricane Hazel came through the Carolinas like a freight train in October of 1954."

The most severe damage Isidore inflicted in northeast Florida was in St. Johns County. The St. Augustine pier, destroyed by Hurricane David in 1979 and only reopened three weeks ago, was heavily damaged by the strong surf and high winds.

Severe beach erosion was reported at Jacksonville Beach, but in Nassau County, Florida's most northern county, officials reported little beach erosion and no major problems from the storm.

In northern coastal Georgia, wind-whipped waves threatened to break the sea wall at Tybee Island, but no major damage or flooding was reported from the storm. Officials on the island near Savannah had kept watch on the sea wall all week, fearing it might collapse as more and more beach washed away.

Debris Falls From Plane

MILTON, Wash. (AP) — Chunks of debris up to eight feet long fell from a Boeing 747 jumbo jet shortly after takeoff Saturday afternoon on a flight from Seattle to Seoul, Korea, officials said.

Northwest Orient Flight 19 returned safely to Seattle-Tacoma International Airport after the incident and all 350 people aboard were reported unharmed, according to the Federal Aviation Administration and a company spokesman.

The debris apparently struck one car and that pieces of the aircraft were found on house roofs, said Richard Ferguson, an FAA duty officer in Seattle. He said no injuries were reported.

Jim Reed, a KIRO radio reporter on the scene about 25 miles south of Seattle, said one cylindrical piece of debris was up to eight feet long, and looked like "two 50-gallon oil drums hollowed out."

Reed said that piece landed near some cattle, while another small piece broke the rear window of a car.

Sunday Opinion

Redistricting Has Given Pitt Stronger Voice

If every cloud has a silver lining, redistricting of North Carolina House and Senate districts may be one for Pitt County.

A court-ordered redistricting sent the election process in turmoil for eastern North Carolina this year. The Legislature was required to redraw district lines, carving up counties in the process and causing special primaries to choose the candidates for November's general election. For Pitt County the result was a severely divided county as the Legislature sought to meet the court requirements.

Bethel and Carolina townships are in the 6th House district. Bethel, Farmville, Arthur, Belvoir, Falkland, and Fountain townships are now in a new 6th Senate district with townships of Wilson, Edgecombe and Martin Counties. The remainder of the county is in the 9th Senate district. The 9th House district includes Pitt County excepting Bethel and Carolina townships.

It is a confusing situation for voters and candidates alike. However, some leaders see Pitt County as being in a stronger position in the Legislature because a number of senators and representatives will have a part of the county in their respective districts.

House member Ed Warren of Greenville said he felt Pitt will be stronger by having more legislators involved. "The more votes you have the better off you are," he noted.

Bob Martin, current County Commissioners chairman and the Democratic nominee for the 6th Senate District, sees the changes as giving Pitt additional legislative strength. However, he is concerned that the splitting up of counties has created voter apathy as voters become alienated from traditional political boundaries. Renewed interest may come but it was not there this summer.

We will just have to wait and see. It was certainly a confusing year for our area. Pitt County has wound up with more voices and votes it can call on in the Legislature, but also the new districts have different needs and interests. It will take awhile for all of us to digest the new situation.

School Reserve Is Good Start

The Pitt County Commissioners recently formally established a capital reserve fund for construction of new school facilities.

The fund will include the $3 million appropriated in the 1984-85 fiscal year budget. The commissioners also expressed an intent to add to the fund as much as $3 million, including interest, each year for the next five years, or until a list of projects agreed on by the commissioners and the boards of education is completed.

The establishment of the fund is a part of the developing plan to merge the city and county school systems and at the same time provide for the additional facilities the county's schools need to provide quality education.

It is a significant and exciting time for education in Pitt County. Funding is at last in sight to construct classrooms which will eliminate many of the mobile classrooms currently in use. Outmoded facilities can be replaced and in some instances entirely new schools could be built.

This is a time when more emphasis is being placed on public education and we can expect a national committment to better education. In Pitt County we can be well ahead in providing the physical facilities which will be a part of developing a better educational system that so many see ahead.

Sunday Morning Notes

The Shrine Club chicken dinner was Friday and one of the champion ticket vendors visited the Daily Reflector office last week. Dr. E.L. Henderson, who has been retired for many years from the East Carolina University history faculty, has sold his share of dinner tickets.

We called his home after the visit and we were told he had sold 120 tickets this year. That's a pretty good record for anyone, but particularly good for Dr. Henderson, who will be 100 years old on Dec. 12.

Unfortunately the day after his visit to the newspaper office, Dr. Henderson fell while selling tickets and fractured a hip. We were told he had surgery Wednesday and was doing well. No doubt Dr. Henderson would have gone for 200 tickets if the accident hadn't intervened. But we expect to see him out next year selling those tickets.

Double plays are unusual in baseball and an unassisted double play is most unusual. Triple plays are something to get excited about, but an unassisted triple play? Now that is something to remember.

D.J. Whichard, long-time publisher of this newspaper, recalls one.

It was many years ago when Jim Turner, a student at Wake Forest University, was playing baseball locally. Turner was playing third base when a line drive came directly at him. He caught the ball which put out the batter. He then raced to the bag to beat out the man who was on third and had headed for home plate. Then he turned and tagged a man who was coming from second base to third. It might not be in any record books but it occurred in the area.

Turner, by the way, became an ordained Baptist minister and was pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church in Greenville for a time.

The Attic night club burned in downtown Greenville recently. Clubs have their loyal clients and when one burns it takes with it many fond memories for a lot of people.

There are memories which go back even before the Attic, however. The building was constructed for Colonial supermarket, now the Big Star chain.

Later it housed a Harris supermarket. And who remembers what went there after that? Why the first nightclub in the building was called the Ruins, because it was decorated in the nature of Greek ruins.

And who remembers what was there even before the supermarkets? It was the site of a livery stable which was demolished to make way for the modern new way of grocery shopping.

Debates Can Be Risky

WASHINGTON — Ambassadors from the Republican and Democratic camps now have concluded their negotiations. The nation is to be treated, so to speak, to three debates. Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale will meet in mortal combat on Oct. 7 and again on Oct. 21. George Bush and Geraldine Ferraro will duel on Oct. 11.

The Bush-Ferraro engagement may be useful, for the people have scarcely met Rep. Ferraro, but the Reagan-Mondale debates are a mistake. They ought not to be held at all.

Juvenal once remarked that in the generations of their decline, the Roman people were interested in only two things, "panem at circenses," bread and circuses. Presidential debates give us very little bread. What we get is a kind of gladitorial combat, staged for a television audience that hungers not for information but for blood.

This simply is no way to run a campaign for the most powerful public office in the world. The rationale for presidential debates, to borrow from a rah-rah editorial in The Washington Post, is that such forensic matches "give voters what is often their only sustained experience of watching the candidates under pressure and seeing whether they have that command over the facts and over their peers that Americans want in a president."

Well, baloney. American voters have had almost four years to observe how Ronald Reagan performs under the incessant pressures of the Oval Office. A hypercritical press time after time has complained of the president's "command over the facts," but to judge from the polls, the people pay more attention to their own judgment than they pay to the sniping of the press. If the people do not have a fair appraisal of the president, pro or con, two 90-minute debates will not alter the situation.

Debates have a useful place during the primary season, when candidates are not so well known. The exchanges among Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson gave the viewing public some insights at might not have been gained otherwise. The candidates' repeated joint appearances, spread over a period of several months, provided good opportunities to form rational judgments.

To pit a sitting president against a challenger reduces the serious business of electing a national leader to the level of cockfighting, bullbaiting and Saturday night wrestling in Madison Square Garden. Who will draw the first blood? Who will make a mistake that will dominate the morning headlines? Get your popcorn in the outer lobby.

We of the press lead the colosseum howling. Remember Richard Nixon's makeup? Remember Jerry Ford and the Russian domination of Poland? Remember Jimmy Carter and his nuclear expert? Remember Ronald Reagan and "there you go again"? Lions 10, Christians 2! We proclaim winners and losers, victories and defeats, and we give a wildly distorted importance to a few seconds of banality or wit.

What will we learn from the Mondale-Reagan debates? Not one single substantive thing we do not already know. Go back to the transcript of the Carter-Reagan debate of Oct. 28, 1980. The candidates plowed precisely the same ground they had been plowing for months, on such issues as defense, taxation, inflation, unemployment, the minimum wage and the Equal Rights Amendment. On the matter of the hostages in Iran, Reagan gave "the same answer that I've made at least 50 times during this campaign to the press."

That 1980 debate between Carter and Reagan was fine TV entertainment. We saw Reagan at his disarming best: "I sometimes think (Carter) is like the witch doctor that gets mad when a good doctor comes along with a cure that'll work." He remarked to Barbara Walters that she had asked one question twice: "I think you ought to have at least one answer to it." Reagan scemed relaxed, self-confident, sure of himself; and Carter, as everyone recalls, drew national snickers when he said that he had asked daughter Amy to identify the most important issue, "and she said she thought nuclear weaponry." From our box seats above the arena we pronounced it a splendid circus.

Reagan "won" in 1980, and assuming he has a couple of good nights in October, probably he will win again. It would take a forensic triumph for Mondale to turn things around. All the same, it's pretty stupid for either candidate to risk his election on the turn of a phrase. This isn't an intelligent appeal to the electorate. This is shooting craps.

Seniors' Ballot Counts, Too

RALEIGH — With North Carolina developing as one of the leading retirement states, the senior citizen vote is becoming increasingly important with each election. The two major party candidates for governor, realizing that senior citizens not only make up a sizable portion of the population, but an even larger share of the electorate, have made significant efforts to win the senior citizen vote.

Democratic candidate Attorney General Rufus Edmisten put his Republican opponent U.S. Rep. Jim Martin on the defensive recently by releasing a scorecard of 50 votes on senior citizens issues which Martin cast in Congress. The scorecard, researched by the Washington-based National Council of Senior Citizens, said Martin had voted "wrong" 46 times. He'd voted "right" twice and had been absent twice, the report card said.

Martin was quick to strike back. He said the council is tied to organized labor and to Democratic politicians. When his record on senior citizens was interpreted by the National Alliance for Senior Citizens — a group that considers Republican policies as better designed to help the elderly — then his scores are much, much better.

Using Martin's record, Edmisten supporters blasted the Repulican during a luncheon held in Raleigh recently. Before Edmisten spoke, these supporters noted that Martin had voted to raise the retirement age from 65 to 67. They also criticized his opposition to appropriations bills for the Meals on Wheels program and Medicare.

In a press conference two days later, Martin said there's more to those votes than Edmisten is telling. For example, raising the retirement age was part of the bi-partisan Social Security bailout package and it won't become effective until the next century.

Obsessions Of The Past Give Way To The New

WASHINGTON — Reunions with old acquaintances these days often hamper one's nostalgia. Even Vietnam-era protesters seem to be embracing Ronald Reagan.

As the Baby Boom generation grays, it becomes stodgier. Its core members are jogging their way to 40. Most have committed themselves to a career, and bought one or more homes. Michael J. Doonesbury will even have joined a Manhattan advertising agency when the generation's best chronicler, Garry Trudeau, returns to the comic pages in a few weeks.

Time magazine chooses to say America's back. But is it really?

Sadly enough, many of our college friends have foresaken the cheery promises and fervid hopes they once upheld for themselves and for country. Vietnam, Watergate, political assassinations, CIA/FBI domestic spying — all benchmarks of this generation's political learning curve — have become chapters in someone else's college history book. The closest they get to social consciousness is making out a check to Friends Of the Earth.

New (and some old) obsessions have taken over. Where many of us were once engrossed in other people's lives (whether they were Cambodians or poor Chicanos), we're now infatuated with ourselves. This isn't to say we lack compassion, but to suggest that, these days, compassion plays second fiddle to new videocassette recorders and Club Med vacations.

Economics is one explanation for this retreat. Burn-out may be another.

That would suggest a return to the days when men were men. But the "men" whose passions rise while watching "Red Dawn" and "Tightrope" are hardly the brand Ernest Hemingway would want to drink with.

Instead, a persistent narcissism guides their decisions on appearance and lifestyles. Why else would the men's grooming business produce $1.7 billion in revenues last year, with skin care products accounting for about 12 percent of the total?

"A few years ago, you might have seen one or two men in a month come up to the cosmetics counter and ask about skin care products," a departmment store buyer told Madison Avenue magazine last month. "Now you see them all the time. They all want to know how they can get rid of their wrinkles, how they can look young. It's amazing."

Braces are another sign. Ashur Chavoor, president of the American Association of Orthodontistry, estimates that orthodontists are treating as many as 850,000 adults, a quarter of all the specialty's patients. "I get a lot of young lawyers in my practice in Washington," Chavoor told an association meeting in Little Rock recently. "It's the type of job where people have to present themselves."

All of this doesn't surprise the likes of novelist Gore Vidal. "When you suddenly feel there's no need for you, no need for the traditional skills of the macho male," he said recently, "you say, 'All right, I'll go wear a dress.'"

But it raises questions about all the current talk that American men and women have regained their confidence. Some people say that confidence parallels a return to traditional American values like faith and family.

Yet smugness, introversion and intolerance are among the less becoming values we see. Too preoccupied to even notice their drift, many of our peers have embraced one message from Ronald Reagan: Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for yourselves.

Of course, self-help is a wise and rational path. But when it becomes the only message a generation hears, generosity of time and spirit ends up as lost phrases in the American lexicon. Unfortunately, that may turn out to be the legacy of our generation.

Skepticism And Politics

NEW YORK (AP) — As a Methodist minister's son, Walter Mondale says he was told to be skeptical of "deathbed conversions."

Surely he is not the only one who suspects presidential politics had at least a little to do with Ronald Reagan's conciliatory overtures to the Soviet Union.

The men in the Kremlin are not inclined to believe he is a changed man, either. They are suspicious of a president who condemned their government as "an evil empire" and suggested they could not be trusted to honor treaties.

Mondale plans to keep taking the fight to Reagan on foreign policy. He hopes to beat him on the issues, using the debates to test whether there is substance behind the president's sweet words.

The goal is to persuade the voters that "Mr. Reagan is trying to tell us he is somebody he isn't."

Polls show foreign policy is not one of Reagan's strong points with voters. Nor are some voters relaxed about what some critics refer to as his "cowboy diplomacy."

So it stood to reason that the president would try to overcome his liabilities in the six weeks remaining until Election Day.

His meeting today with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko tops off a week in which he sought to transform weaknesses into strengths.

With the world as his forum, Reagan told the United Nations on Monday that "there is no sane alternative to negotiations on arms control." He preached the virtues of easing tensions, invited the Soviets to cooperate in the effort, and exuded good will in all directions.

His handshake with Gromyko at a U.N. reception, a handful of meetings with foreign leaders, all duly recorded by the cameras, embellished the presidential image.

On Tuesday, he was back in Washington, telling banking ministers from 148 countries they should support a new round of trade liberalization to "strengthen the global trading system and assure its benefits spread to people everywhere."

And then there was the high-profile meeting with Gromyko — at Reagan's invitation even though the Soviets had given no evidence they were ready to resume negotiations or to ease up on political prisoners and dissidents.

Using the levers of the presidency, he was able to call attention to himself as a world leader at events that are relatively risk-free.

The Kremlin is unlikely to decide until after the election whether to take up his proposal to renew arms control talks and to work out a "road map" to guide U.S.-Soviet relations for the next 20 years.

Whatever Gromyko had to tell the president today, the decision-making process in Moscow is so sluggish Reagan can sprint to Nov. 6 as a peacemaker without having his call for a "new beginning" put to the test.

It might be no more effective in pushing the Soviets toward an arms-reduction agreement than the deployment of U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe. But he can reap any political benefits in the meantime.

Similarly, new opportunities for Reagan to take on a peacemaker role have opened in the Middle East and Central America.

The Israeli government, evidently weary of the human and economic toll, appears willing to withdraw from southern Lebanon without a matching Syrian pullback. It is looking to the United States to help work out security guarantees.

Nicaragua, meanwhile, has announced it would accept a draft peace treaty for Central America proposed by the four nations known as the Contadora group. While obstacles to a settlement remain, one could be taking shape, ending a conflict in which Reagan endorsed the mining of Nicarguan harbors and the United States sought to avoid the judgment of the World Court.

Split Along Racial Lines

JACKSON, Miss. — Even Walter F. Mondale's closest supporters privately concede that this presumed battleground state is irretrievably lost to a Ronald Reagan denied black voters — a signal of long-feared party realignment in the Deep South along racial lines.

Frequent visits by both members of the Mondale-Ferraro ticket to what Mondale calls his "lucky" state (because it clinched the 1975 presidential election) evoke bemused curiosity here. On his most recent trip, he was informed separately by both black and white backers that prospects were bleak.

The reason can be found in 1984 demographics of a state whose politics always has been obsessed by race. The statewide black vote, comprising 30 percent of the total, may be 97 percent for Mondale. But he is getting only one out of four white Mississippians, whereas he needs at least one in three. More than any election since Southern blacks won the franchise, 1984 points to a white Republican Party and black Democratic Party in the Deep South.

William Winter, the former Democratic governor running against Republican Sen. Thad Cochran, is doing scarcely better than Mondale. One poll shows only 3 percent of Reagan's white phalanx support Winter. In the black majority 2nd Congressional District, which was gerrymandered by federal court order to assure a black congressman this time, Republican Rep. Webb Franklin is spread-eagling the white vote. He is expected to combine a high white turnout with a with a handful of black votes to beat a black Democrat, State Rep. Robert Clark, for the second time.

Clark, the first black elected to the Mississippi legislature in modern times, is a responsible gentleman who assumed a conservative posture in barely losing two years ago. But he is now harnessed to the political movement created here the past two years by Jesse Jackson.

Addressing an all-black audience at the Valley Queen Church in Marks, he complained about those few "black folk" opposing him: "We have been stolen and bought and sold ever since we came to this country." Openly appealing for a racial vote, he declared: "The time has come to send somebody to Washington that is going to look out for us."

The next morning in Bentonia, Franklin made no such racial appeal to white farmers and storekeepers. It wasn't necessary. While complaining about the price deflation that has ravaged rural Mississippi, these good ol' boys in khaki trousers and camouflage caps uttered not one critical word about the president's policies. To a man, they were voting straight Republican: Reagan, Cochran, Franklin.

While these rural whites still call themselves Democrats, the last vestige of their ancestral political loyalty is under assault by Jesse Jackson's lieutenants. Blacks have taken over the party machinery in the black majority counties of the Mississippi Delta and soon will zero in on conservative white Democratic legislators. "It's a matter of time until they decide to get me," one such state representative (who is voting a straight Reagan-Cochran-Franklin ticket) told us.

The immensely powerful House Speaker Buddy Newman, in the Legislature for nearly a half-century, still plays the old Dixiecrat game of shunning national politics. Newer political figures such as the adroit Lt. Gov. Brad Dye, a stalwart young segregationist 16 years ago who is out front backing Mondale, have become national Democrats. But Jackson-style blacks vow they will drive out both the Newmans and the Dyes.

Whereas moderates talk of the 2nd Congressional District as another test of whether white Democrats will vote for a black, the new black leaders — such as Victor McTeer, the state's hottest civil rights lawyer — say that test has been failed. McTeer envisages a black-driven, frankly liberal Democratic Party.

While that would mean a dominant white Republican Party for the foreseeable future, racial realignment is distressing to thoughtful Republicans who shudder at needing to win more than 70 percent of the white vote to elect anybody statewide.

Poll

Walter Mondale is trailing Ronald Reagan by 15 percentage points in the latest Gallup Poll and by about the same margin in other polls, but a bigger problem for Mondale is that the climate of opinion is running against him by a much larger margin than 15 points. Since the outset of Reagan's administration, the press and the public as well attribute a political strength to the president that surpasses his demonstrated level of public support. So it is in this election campaign. Reagan has a solid lead and Mondale's electioneering efforts so far have been ineffective. Yet Mondale must run only against the 15-point lead but against the image of Reagan's invincibility.

Voters see Reagan winning this election by a much larger margin than they support the president. The September ABC/Washington Post poll which had Reagan leading Mondale (56 percent to 40 percent) asked its respondents "who do you think will win, Reagan or Mondale?" Fully 79 percent picked the president as the winner while 18 percent chose Mondale. In July when the ABC/Washington Post poll was only showing an 8 percentage point Reagan margin, its respondents were picking the president as the winner 66 percent to 28 percent.

Reagan's current lead over Mondale is a consequence of a very good leadership image, a strong economy and an opponent whose own leadership image is extremely weak. But he owes his political fortunes more to an improving economy than to any other single factor. The president's political recovery from recession began just about a year ago. Prior to that his approval ratings were in the 40s, and he trailed or at best tied most Democratic challengers in test elections throughout 1983. While Reagan has held a lead over Mondale for much of 1984, it was subject to much volatility until recently.

The same polls that today give the president a big lead also continue to show the president as potentially vulnerable on foreign policy issues, compassion, fairness and a number of other dimensions. The most recent New York Times/CBS poll found that "on many issues ranging from arms control to abortion, the public is closer to the Democrats' stand than to Reagan's. Yet in addition to his strong leadership image, Reagan has an intangible which Mondale is finding it difficult to run against. He is defined as a winner even by those who do not support him."

The press often talks about Reagan's magic and describes the president's personal appeal as far exceeding public evaluations of his policies and programs. Polling data do not support the notion of a president with exceptional personal appeal. Reagan's appeal is not his personal charm but his image as a competent, forceful leader who has succeeded.

Gallup's "personality" ratings of the president show him to be a popular man, but all presidents are popular. Personal popularity is a requirement of electability. At this point Reagan's personal appeal ratings do not surpass those of other elected incumbent presidents running for a second term (except Carter). Gallup analysis at Reagan's midterm also indicated that the president's personality ratings topped his job approval ratings by only the same margin as was found for other presidents.

An exaggerated view of Reagan's personal appeal stems from a press which is more liberal than the president and largely did not vote for him in 1980. The media see the president as not only winning the election but also winning the traditional adversarial contest between the president and the press. In April the Gallup Press Agenda found 96 percent of the 230 senior editors, writers and publishers polled rating Reagan's chance for re-election as excellent or good. The same survey also showed 60 percent of media respondents feeling that the president had the advantage in the contest between the president and the national press. Curiously, the survey also showed that the elements of the press which are most critical of him — those who write for national media and senior editors — were most apt to feel that the president had the upper hand in their adversarial relationship.

The net effect of this is that Reagan's lead in the polls — which is substantial — may be looming even larger than it should on its own merit. The landslide leads of Nixon in '72 and LBJ in '64 were larger than Reagan's today. While some commentators may be speaking landslide, Reagan's lead in the polls, as of this time, does not justify it. Of the national polls, only NBC News suggests a landslide (plus 32 points). Except for the NBC poll, all other polls in early September reported about the same margin between Mondale and Reagan — Gallup (15 points), Newsweek Gallup (18 points), New York Times/CBS (21 points), ABC/Washington Post (16 points) and Harris (13 points). These leads may well stretch with the next round of polling. In order to overcome Reagan's actual lead in the polls, Mondale will have to register positively with voters and also overcome the perception of Reagan's larger-than-life political appeal.

Religious Issue Isn't New

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Religion has been a factor in a number of presidential campaigns, but never more dramatically than 100 years ago when it may have cost James G. Blaine the presidency.

Blaine, the Republican candidate, received a group of ministers just before the election and one of them, a Rev. Burchard, referred to the Democrats as the party of "rum, Romanism and rebellion."

Blaine let the statement pass without comment. When the election returns came in, he had lost heavily Catholic New York by fewer than 1,200 votes out of 1.1 million cast. New York's electoral votes threw the election to Democrat Grover Cleveland.

Presidential candidates, with the notable exception of Jimmy Carter, usually soft-pedal religion with broad references to Judeo-Christian values calculated to offend no one. All warmly endorse tolerance, and go about shaking hands with every minister, priest and rabbi they can find.

It is rare for specific religious issues to be openly debated in a presidential campaign. The rule of thumb is that you can't take sides in any dispute with religious overtones without risking offending as many voters as you please.

But President Reagan has rejected that conventional wisdom and propelled himself into several areas where, like it or not, religious involvement cannot be avoided.

His position against abortion allies him with the Roman Catholic hierarchy as well as others opposed to the practice. His support for state-sponsored prayers in public schools puts him alongside, among others, evangelical Protestants such as the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Pollster Lou Harris recently looked into this facet of the 1984 campaign and came up with some results that may indicate Reagan, on balance, is not helping himself by getting involved in religious controversy.

Harris found that 78 percent of "white Moral Majority voters" — churchgoers who say they follow radio or television evangelists — support Reagan. But he said 41 percent of that group is in Southern states where Reagan is so far ahead that Mondale ought to "write it off."

On the other hand, Harris found in an early September survey that white Catholic voters supported Reagan over Mondale by only 51 percent to 46 percent, which is less than half of the lead the president had among all voters. He noted that 57 percent of those voters live in eight populous Northern states with 204 electoral votes — just 64 short of the total needed for election.

Harris also found some attitudes among the two groups that might suprise the politicians.

On the question of a constitutional amendment to outlaw abortions, white Catholics were opposed, 56 percent to 36 percent and white Moral Majority voters were tied at 46 percent for and against.

And on the question of a constitutional amendment "to require daily prayer" in public schools, the Catholics were opposed 59 percent to 36 percent, and the Moral Majority group was opposed 52 percent to 43 percent.

Finally, Harris found both groups strongly opposed — Catholics by 74-25 and Moral Majority by 64-34 — to churches and clergymen urging members to vote for specific candidates on the basis of such issues as abortion and school prayer.

Will religion do to Ronald Reagan what it did to James Blaine? Harris doesn't say it will, but he does feel certain of one thing: The religious issue in 1984 is important and it isn't going to disappear.

Publisher Made His Mark In N.C. Prison

They called Luke Lea the most prominent person ever to serve time in a North Carolina prison. And when Lea, a Tennessee newspaper publisher, World War I hero and former U.S. senator, walked out of Central Prison on April 2, 1936, his first stop was at the office of Gov. J.C.B. Ehringhaus to thank the governor for granting him a parole.

"I want to express my very deep appreciation for your action and express the hope that neither your action nor my future life will cause you any criticism for it," Lea told the governor.

"This is very kind of you, but the action is not deserving of any thanks," replied the governor in a quiet voice that was barely audible to his listeners. "I have done exactly what I tried to do according to the dictates of my conscience. The book is closed as far as North Carolina is concerned and I hope that you will in the future be able to compensate yourself in some measure in your conduct in later life."

When J.M. Broughton, Lea's attorney who later became governor and U.S. senator, interrupted to thank the governor for his "conscientious consideration" of Lea's case, Ehringhaus replied he had tried to consider it like any other case and deserved no thanks.

"I wish you well," Ehringhaus replied when Lea thanked him again on leaving.

However, Ehringhaus refused vehemently a short while later when newsmen asked him to pose for a picture with the released prisoner.

"I refuse to allow this to be made into a spectacle," the governor asserted. "It is a routine matter and I resent your attitude about it."

Although the governor's refusal to pose for a picture with Lea was eminently proper, his description of the occasion as "a routine matter" was inaccurate. Nothing about the Luke Lea case was routine, as was demonstrated the following day on Lea's return to Nashville, Tenn., where he was known as the "Maker of Governors." His friends there arranged to drive in a cavalcade of automobiles to Lebanon, Tenn., 30 miles from Nashville, to greet him and to hold a banquet that night in his honor.

Lea, the scion of two of Tennessee's oldest and wealthiest families, won his title as "Maker of Governors" after his supporters seized control of the Democratic State Convention and won the gubernatorial nomination for M.R. Patterson who subsequently was elected governor. Three years later, Lea — then 31 years old — was elected to the U.S. Senate.

Klan Members Watched By Police At S.C. Rally

A gathering of about 80 members of the Carolina Knights of the Ku Klux Klan attracted about 100 spectators and an equal number of state and local police to a privately owned lot near the Columbia Metropolitan Airport.

Three klansmen were charged with violating the court order during the rally, and two more were arrested for carrying unlawful weapons before the rally began.

Police said the arrests were made without incident and reported no violence at the rally.

Klan spokesman Glenn Miller, who predicted a larger turnout, said "there would have been literally hundreds of people meeting here if not for the huge police-state presence."

Circuit Judge Dan Laney issued the injunction Friday at the request of Lexington County Sheriff James R. Metts, who said he feared the rally could pose a public threat.

Miller and other speakers addressed the gathering amid a backdrop of about a dozen white-robed klansman carrying Confederate flags. The klansmen concluded the rally by burning a 15-foot cross.

"They tell us it isn't fair that we want to keep our bloodlines pure," klansman Cecil Cox said, exhorting the crowd to join the klan to work for "white unity and white mastery."

Miller referred to the recent slaying of University of South Carolina nursing student Barbara "Bobbi" Rossi in calling for whites to join the klan. Three black men have been charged with murder, criminal sexual assault and kidnapping in the case.

Miller said he longed for the days when sheriffs, judges and other local officials were klan members who could carry out the organization's goals.

"I wish them days was back, but they ain't going to come back until we bring them back," Miller said.

About 95 percent of he klansmen attending the rally were "from the great rebel state of North Carolina" who were "trying to assist their white brothers from South Carolina to get the klan going again," Miller said.

Police said Robbi Jumper, 20, of Gaston, David Perryamick, 20, of Gilbert and Tommy T. Boozer, 31, of West Columbia were each charged with violation of the court order for carrying locked-blade knives at the rally.

"The name brought me in, but the service brought me back."

Employees Laid Off

HAMILTON — Approximately 60 employees of the Hamilton plant of West Point Pepperell firm have been placed on an indefinite layoff. Hamilton is located in northwest Martin County.

Reasons given for the action were business conditions, particularly a softening in the market for apparel goods.

An unidentified company spokesman commented that the softening, or lighter demands of apparel goods, is due to the problem of exports.

The Hamilton plant is part of the Apparel Fabrics Division, one of five operating divisions of West Point Pepperell within North Carolina. Other plants are located in Clinton, Elizabethtown, Fairmont and Lumberton.

The spokesman indicated that the company has a policy of honoring seniority on occasions when employees must be laid off.

Tomato Wars

TWIN LAKES, Colo. (UPI) — It was Texans vs. Coloradans in the Third Annual Twin Lakes Tomato Wars Saturday, which commenced at noon with a blast from a home-made cannon.

At the signal, hundreds of beer-drinking "soldiers" began heaving tomatoes at each other in a muddy, marshy plain north of town.

The annual skirmish was started in 1982 by owners of the nearby Inn of the Black Wolf as a way to celebrate the end of the summer tourist season. It has grown more elaborate every year.

A contingent of Texans arrived Friday in jeeps decked out in papier mache facades to resemble tanks. They hinted of a secret "air force" of Learjets based in Garland, Texas. Last year, a Cessna 172 flew over the battleground and dropped tomatoes on the infantry.

A total of 7,500 pounds of overripe tomatoes were ordered for Saturday's battle.

Maybe you should consider where you'll be in 150 years.

The thought of it isn't pleasant. But your own bodily mortality is some thing somebody's going to have to deal with sooner or later.

So, instead of putting on blinders, why don't you consider the options? Find out a little about what happens after you pass away. The laws and the facts that govern the cemetery business. When you do, we're certain you'll see the advantages that Pinewood Memorial Park, managed by S.G. Wilkerson and Sons, offers over new, private ventures.

Just what is 'Perpetual Care'?

The State of North Carolina requires privately-owned cemeteries to meet certain requirements in order to call themselves 'Perpetual Care' cemeteries.

The law requires that a certain amount from the sale of each grave be set aside in a fund. Interest earned from the dollars in that fund is required to be used for upkeep in the cemetery.

However, S.G. Wilkerson and Sons, has never considered the required amount to be sufficient. Therefore, over the years, the contributions to the fund have been much larger than the amount required.

The results are obvious. With a 25-year growth of mature centipede sod, the cemetery grounds are now beautiful. The infrequent maintenance problems are quickly attended to. Plot buyers in Pinewood select from the grounds themselves, not from a notebook of what cemetery owners hope the grounds will look like years from now. Fact is, it takes years of careful maintenance for a cemetery to really look groomed and cared for.

And all Pinewood graves have the low profile and dignity of a flat bronze marker—better for everyone. What may surprise you the most is the fact that the total Pinewood Memorial Park costs are less, not more, than "package deals".

Let us tell you more. We'd like to explain more. Because we'd like you to make an informed decision about this matter which you and your family should take seriously.

The Wilkerson family has been in this business for many years. So talk to us before you buy anything. We'll respect your decision. But we want you to be sure you know what you're doing.

Withdrawal Plan Ok'd Before Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The government Saturday announced a U.S.-mediated plan for an Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon only hours before the Lebanese army clashed with Moslem militiamen in the worst fighting in Beirut in more than a month.

Under the plan mediated by U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, Prime Minister Rashid Karami will ask the United Nations to expand its 5,000-strong Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) to act as a buffer in the south, Cabinet minister Nabih Berri said before leaving for New York.

The two Lebanese officials will seek U.S. and U.N. support for an end to the 2-year-old Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon. Karami is scheduled to address the U.N. General Assembly on Oct. 5.

Karami told Murphy Friday the Lebanese Army was ready to take over abandoned Israeli positions alongside UNIFIL troops, apparently to ease fears of fresh fighting between rival Lebanese factions after an Israeli pullout.

In Damascus, Lebanese Education Minister, Selim Hoss, who acts as prime minister in Karami's absence, met Syrian President Hafez Assad for three hours and discussed the withdrawal, Beirut television said.

State-run Syrian television quoted sources accompanying Hoss as saying Syria, which has an estimated 30,000 troops in northern and eastern Lebanon, indicated it was willing to cooperate with the U.S.-mediated plan approved by the Lebanese government.

But Syria insisted the plan should "simultaneously guarantee Lebanese sovereignty and Syrian security," the report said.

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres indicated after talks with Murphy last week that Israel had dropped its demand that Syrian forces withdraw simultaneously with the Israeli troops.

As U.S. intelligence agents continued their inquiries into the Sept. 20 bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in east Beirut, the private Central News Agency and Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said police had issued warrants for the arrest of four people in connection with the April 1983 bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

The news agency said an Egyptian and a Palestinian were among the four. The 1983 embassy bombing, like the annex attack, was claimed by the Moslem fundamentalist group Islamic Jihad ("Holy War"). It was not immediately known whether the four wanted persons were members of the organization.

In three hours of fighting across Beirut's "green line," which divides the capital into the Christian east and mostly Moslem west, soldiers and Moslem militias fought with heavy machine guns and automatic weapons, witnesses said.

Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said at least two people were killed and four others wounded in the shooting. Two dead and two wounded from the gun battles were taken to the American University Hospital in west Beirut, a spokesman said.

Newspaper Reports Red Sea Mine Made By Soviet Union

LONDON (AP) — A mine found Sept. 12 by a British minesweeper in the Red Sea was Soviet-made, the Sunday Times said, attributing its report to an unidentified government source.

It said, however, that British officials did not believe the Soviets laid the mine or even knew it had been planted in the Red Sea.

The newspaper noted Egyptian officials had said they believed that mines, which have damaged at least 19 ships since July 9, had been sold by the Soviets to Libya and dropped in the Red Sea by a Libyan vessel, the Ghat, between July 6 and July 22.

The mine was detected by the minesweeper Gavington that is taking part in an international search in the Suez Gulf and the Red Sea that was requested by Egypt.

According to the Sunday Times, British naval experts identified the cylindrical mine as Soviet-made from the coding on its case. It said the information was not made public because government officials did not want to chill last week's talks between U.S. leaders, including President Reagan, and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

A Defense Ministry spokesman, asked to comment on the report, said the mine was still being examined and added, "We are not making any pronouncements on its origin.

"It would be a matter for the Egyptian government to make an announcement anyway as its their operation in which we are helping."

Computer Potential Seen For Timber Market System

By LESLIE TODD
ECU News Bureau

Timber buyers and sellers across eastern North Carolina may be getting together via computer next spring when an East Carolina University professor begins testing a computerized timber market information system.

The professor, Dr. Louis Eckstein of the ECU School of Business, says what he has in mind is "an electronic marketing information system similar to the listing services used by real estate agents."

"Detailed information on tracts of timber available for sale would be stored in our computer at the ECU School of Business and could be obtained by interested buyers over the telephone."

At present, there is no formal network linking timber buyers and sellers, and according to Eckstein: "Bringing the two together is often a hit or miss proposition that can be expensive and time consuming for either party."

The idea for a computerized network was hatched several years ago when Eckstein did a study showing that timber buyers would welcome some type of information system. Eighty percent of the buyers contacted in the 1981 survey said that they had difficulty finding timber sellers and expressed a desire for an information system. Such a system would help buyers locate certain types of timber, learn of areas where local phenomena (such as timber downed by a storm) might have created a sudden glut of timber for sale or contact sellers from outside their customary area of operation. The system will offer advantages to private landowners and will make it possible for landowners to reduce market costs and increase contacts with timber buyers, Eckstein said.

Generally, he added, a seller fares better if he obains several competitive bids. Since searching for buyers can be a difficult and expensive process, costs may limit some sellers to contacting only one or two buyers before making decisions on timber sales. By listing timber with the marketing system, the seller can contact interested buyers and perhaps receive several bids.

Beginning in the spring of 1985, ECU students will be collecting detailed information on tracts of timberland for sale. Information will be gathered through forestry personnel, county agriculture agents and other government officials as well as through the landowners themselves. Prospective sellers will be encouraged to call or write researchers and list their timberland.

"We'll be doing some advertising and we'll be working with local officials to get the word out on this thing," Eckstein commented. "One of our biggest concerns is getting a high level of participation from timber sellers. We'll be trying to make it as convenient as possible for sellers to get in touch with us and list their property."

Once information is processed and stored in the pilot study's computer, timber buyers can have the information fed directly into their business computers using a telephone connection. Eckstein said he hopes that those without computers will be able to obtain current computer printouts through their county agriculture agent or other local officials.

"This is a brand new concept in timber marketing for eastern North Carolina. It's something that could really work to everyone's advantage if participation is strong," he said.

Funding for the two-year pilot project is being provided by the USDA Forest Service through the Southeastern Center for Forest Economic Research in Research Triangle Park and the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station in Asheville.

Senate Approves Stopgap Measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate sawed its way through a parliamentary logjam Saturday, voting overwhelmingly to limit debate on a civil rights measure that may halt government operations next week and prevent the adjournment of Congress.

Technically, many government agencies run out of money at midnight Sunday, the end of the 1984 fiscal year.

However, Senate leaders had waiting in the wings a two-day stopgap spending bill to give them some breathing room while working on a "continuing resolution" that would allow government agencies to continue spending money at their current levels until Congress approves new appropriations for fiscal 1985.

The senators put together the stopgap measure because some colleagues want to attach a civil rights proposal to the "continuing resolution."

By a 92-4 vote, the Senate limited discussion on the civil rights measure, proposed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Kennedy's proposal would overturn a Feb. 28 Supreme Court ruling that Title Nine — a federal law that mandates equal treatment and facilities for men and women at high schools and colleges receiving federal funds — does not apply to all programs at an institution, but only to the particular program getting the federal money.

The House in June voted 375-32 to overturn the court decision but the Senate has failed to act on it.

Because of the potential for hundreds of amendments to the civil rights measure, the Senate recessed briefly after the vote to limit debate while leaders decided how to proceed during the day.

Candidates Seek Votes Of Veterans

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms and Gov. Jim Hunt are battling for the votes of some 658,000 North Carolina veterans in the upcoming U.S. Senate election and the fighting became more intense last week.

The pair declared war last Sunday, when Hunt challenged Helms on his votes against funds for veterans pensions and medical care, saying the incumbent senator had voted against veterans.

But Helms said he had not cast votes against veterans, and added that veterans aren't looking for handouts, but for a "strong, reliable government that operates responsibly."

The Veteran's Administration spent $701.3 million in North Carolina during fiscal 1983, according to VA spokesman Mike Hampton. That includes $433 million for disability benefits and other compensation, $172 million to operate four hospitals and $65 million for education and job training. The VA hospitals in Durham, Fayetteville, Salisbury and Asheville have 2,210 beds and treated 29,600 in-patients last year.

Congress votes on the VA's budget for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and several other agencies. Helms has voted against the HUD-VA appropriations for the past nine years, according to the Congressional Quarterly.

Steve Carver, chairman of Veterans for Hunt, followed the Sunday night skirmish with a statement Monday which said Helms was "more concerned about military hardware and weapons than the people who operate them."

And Hunt, campaigning in Fayetteville Wednesday, also criticized Helms for trying to "question my patriotism."

Helms, who served in the Navy at North Carolina installations during World War II asked Hunt during Sunday's debate which war the governor had served in.

"I don't like you challenging my patriotism," said Hunt, who went on to say he had been in college during the Korean War and was too old to serve in the Vietnam War. Hunt, 47, was 13-year-old when the Korean War began, but aides attributed the inaccuracy to momentary anger.

But state Republican chairman David Flaherty, called a press conference Tuesday to attack Hunt's miscue and demand an explanation of his lack of military service.

By the end of the week, both candidates had marched out troops of veterans who argued for veterans' support of their candidate.

Retired Brig. Gen. Ted Mataxis of Southern Pines, chairman of Veterans for Helms, called a press conference to read the Veterans of Foreign Wars' endorsement of Helms. He called Helms' votes against veterans programs "isolated incidents" selected by the Hunt campaign to tarnish Helms.

The VFW endorsement comes from its political action committee, which endorsed any incumbent who voted the VFW's position 60 percent of the time on 14 key votes, according to Fren Von Rembow, the VFW-PAC director.

Officials Point To Tobacco's Power

By The Associated Press

In Raleigh, tobacco is the anointed monarch whose unquestioned rule has been handed down for generations by a constituency of tobacco farmers, allotment holders and cigarette plant workers, some tobacco officials say.

Collectively, they are the tobacco family and if they haven't been "the power on the throne, they have certainly been the major power behind it," said John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

"Tobacco is the controlling influence in North Carolina politics," Cyrus told the Greensboro Daily News & Record in an interview published Sunday.

But tobacco's power extends beyond Raleigh. In Washington, leaf diplomats barter on behalf of tobacco, and what they have to trade is political loyalty.

"What you had to do was form a coalition, usually with the northern congressmen, particularly from the Northwest," said former U.S. Rep. L. Richardson Preyer Jr., of Greensboro. "There was a quid-pro-quo arrangement — you'd support food stamps, if the liberal northeast congressmen would support tobacco. Otherwise, tobacco states being in the minority, would have been snowed. So you saw strange bedfellows."

The message for North Carolina congressmen was clear, Preyer said.

"If you're a congressmen from North Carolina and you're not willing to fight for tobacco and textiles, you ought to think about getting into some other line of work."

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose also knows how the barter system works.

"For instance, here's Congressman X from State Y," Rose said. "I need to know what he's interested in. Is it a dam or what? There were a couple of congressmen from Los Angeles who wanted money for a subway program. We simply told them we hoped they would listen to us on the tobacco program."

State legislators like Rep. Parks Helms, a Democrat from Mecklenburg County and Sen. Rachel Gray, a Democrat from Guilford County, say tobacco is a sacred cow.

In 1981, Ms. Gray had barely introduced a bill that would have placed a 2 cents-per-pack tax on cigarettes at the manufacturers' level when "the lobbyists came out of the woodwork," accusing her of trying to hurt tobacco farmers. Ms. Gray says she is worried about an ostrich mentality that says there is only one road to travel — Tobacco Road.

"Tobacco is like the Bible and motherhood," said Chester Don Worthington of Pitt County, one of the largest tobacco farmers in the state. "You don't question the way things are done. It's a sin if you say anything critical about the tobacco program. The king doesn't want to be told he has no clothes."

The tobacco program has become an issue in the tight U.S. Senate race between incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms and his Democratic challenger, Gov. Jim Hunt.

Because of his chairmanship of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Helms argues that if he is not re-elected, "you can kiss the tobacco program goodbye." Hunt counters that Helms has made so many enemies in his conservative quests that his re-election will only fuel the fires of tobacco antagonists.

Helms says that despite the headaches tobacco causes him, he enjoys being chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. "I know the railroad," he said.

"The tobacco program has been saved by Republican Party votes in the Senate," Helms said. "Not because Republicans love the tobacco program ... but because Republicans (from farm states) need things out of the Agriculture Committee from time to time."

Edmisten, Martin Will Square Off

By The Associated Press

Gubernatorial candidates Rufus Edmisten and Jim Martin will meet in the first and apparently only face-to-face debate Sunday.

The debate, which will be held at the WRAL-TV studios in Raleigh, will be broadcast on statewide television. Nelson Benton, a former CBS newsman and now an anchorman with the Baltimore CBS affiliate, will moderate the debate. Questions will be submitted by members of the state broadcast media.

Martin, a Republican who is giving up his 9th Congressional district seat to run for governor, wanted several debates, according to his campaign manager Jack Hawke.

But Edmisten, the state's Democratic Attorney General, agreed to only one debate because his campaign schedule did not allow time for any more. Edmisten's campaign manager Dick Carlton said last month.

The gubernatorial candidates' views were expressed on a television broadcast earlier this month, when the candidates were interviewed separately and their taped remarks aired by the University of North Carolina for Public Broadcasting.

In those interviews, the candidates differed sharply on state-funded abortions, a statewide ban on phosphate detergents, utilities and repeal of inventory and intangibles taxes.

Edmisten said in those interviews that he supported state funding for abortions for poor women, but Martin said he favored state-funded abortions only in cases of incest or where the mother's life was in danger.

Edmisten also said a statewide ban on phosphates was needed to protect the environment and that there could be a gradual repeal of the state's intangibles tax only if alternate revenue sources could be found. He said he opposed the construction-work-in-progress law for utilities.

Martin said the state would best be served by building treatment plants that would filter out phosphates. He said he favored repealing the state's intangibles tax, which he said had hurt industrial recruiting.

IN THE STATE

Worldwide Interest

By The Associated Press

The scheduled Nov. 2 execution of Velma Margie Barfield has attracted worldwide interest from newspapers, magazines and television stations which have sent reporters to interview the woman some have depicted as "Death Row Granny."

Much of the interest is fueled by the fact that Mrs. Barfield would be the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years if her execution is carried out as scheduled. But the articles have also described a woman who has admitted to poisoning four people, including her mother, and then claimed a religious conversion in prison.

Youth Faces Assault Count

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy accused in the Aug. 6 shooting of a Pamlico County basketball player will be tried as a juvenile rather than as an adult, according to court officials.

The Pamlico County teen-ager faces a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the incident in which Everett Eric Miller was shot in the head. Miller remains at Craven County Hospital in New Bern in stable but guarded condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Did you know that in some countries you're required by law to register to vote? If you lived in Australia or New Zealand, for example, you'd be fined or subject to other penalties if you failed to register to vote.

In certain other countries, the government does it for you. As soon as you're old enough to vote, you're automatically registered-whether you want to be or not.

Here in America, you have the freedom not to register to vote. Unfortunately, an estimated 55 million Americans of voting age take advantage of that freedom.

Democrats Aim New Attacks At Reagan

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

In new Democratic attacks against President Reagan on Saturday, Walter Mondale bemoaned a "failure" in arms control, Jesse Jackson asked blacks to vote Reagan out of office as "an oppressor" and Geraldine Ferraro accused him of ducking blame for "outrageous mistakes" in the embassy bombing in East Beirut.

Reagan did broadcast his regular weekly radio remarks, a paid political talk in which he commented on his Friday meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

"I told him, if your government wants peace, then there will be peace," Reagan said. And he pronounced the talks "useful."

However, Mondale, campaigning in Georgia, said, "In arms control, all we have seen are photos and no progress.

"Thus we have completed four years of this administration with no progress whatsoever, the first administration since the bomb went off to fail to make any progress," he said.

Mondale said such a record, coupled with the handling of the recent bombing of the American Embassy annex showed "growing evidence of a failure of foreign policy and foreign policy leadership by the administration."

The Democratic presidential candidate campaigned during the day at events in Georgia, with former President Jimmy Carter at his side.

Carter accused Reagan of sending out "a steady stream of false allegations" about the Carter-Mondale term that preceded his own. He added, "I had a Harry Truman sign on my desk saying 'the buck stops here,' and I think that President Reagan lives on just the opposite philosophy: The buck stops everywhere else except at the Oval Office."

Another main political focus of the day was the annual gathering in the nation's capital of supporters of the Congressional Black Caucus, with a series of fund-raising events on the schedule.

Jackson, who battled Mondale for the presidential nomination last summer, used one of those events, a prayer breakfast, to renew his criticism of Reagan.

He said black leaders must encourage "confused" blacks who might see no good reason to vote in the Nov. 6 election.

"We cannot elect an oppressor by default by confusing personality with politics," he said. "You measure leadership by character. Reagan has failed the character test."

Addressing another election topic at the prayer breakfast — the issue of mixing politics and religion — he said such mixing was nothing new for blacks.

"We separate church from state but not religion from leadership," he said. "Our religion makes us political. It obligates us to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to pursue peace and to study war no more. ..."

Up the East Coast, in Pittsburgh, Ms. Ferraro, the Democrats' vice presidential nominee, joined the past two days' outcry over remarks Reagan made in the aftermath of the Sept. 20 bombing that killed 14 people including two Americans at the embassy annex in East Beirut.

The Reagan administration, she said, made "outrageous mistakes" in moving Americans to the building and then not installing better protective devices.

"But instead of taking responsibility, Ronald Reagan is now making excuses," she said.

She pointed to Reagan's statement last Wednesday that at least part of the security problem was due to "the effects today of the near destruction of our intelligence capability in recent years before we came here."

"In this charge, Mr. Reagan has gone too far," she said. "He is casting blame, not accepting responsibility. He is running from his mistakes, not learning from them."

She commented in a speech to supporters at a Pittsburgh hotel and in a news conference afterward.

Ms. Ferraro said failure to install a protective gate at the embassy building was "a disgrace."

Wallace Treated For Infection

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George Wallace, fighting a fluctuating fever, was treated with antibiotics Saturday at University Hospital in an effort to knock out a stubborn urinary tract infection.

Wallace, 65, was hospitalized Thursday afternoon for the fourth time since beginning his fourth term. His press secretary, Billy Joe Camp, said Wallace had "a fairly restful night."

"He did have, again, some intermittent temperature elevation, which was controlled with Tylenol. He continues to be in satisfactory condition, continues to receive antibiotics for urinary tract infect," Camp said.

Wallace was "feeling rough" when his temperature went up to 102 degrees, Camp said, and his physicians decided — with Wallace's approval — to send him to Birmingham's University Hospital, 90 miles from Montgomery.

He said Wallace had blood tests, urinalysis and X-rays after he was admitted to the hospital.

Dr. Alan M. Stamm, a physician on the hospital staff, said a decision probably will be made Monday on when the governor will be released.

Camp said the governor's temperature, which doctors said was caused by a urinary infection, had been hovering around 101 and 102 when he was admitted.

After he was admitted, Wallace's cigar set off hospital smoke detectors.

"He hasn't done that again," said Camp, "yet."

Wallace, paralyzed from the waist down since a 1972 assassination attempt in Laurel, Md., while he was making the third of his four runs for president, was hospitalized three times in 1983 for various medical problems.

On one stay at University Hospital, Wallace suffered from "phantom" pains. Doctors said that was a complaint not uncommon in paraplegics.

He spent more than a third of the first 75 days of his administration in hospitals.

Wallace went on a 16-day industry-hunting mission to Europe this summer, and a physician who accompanied him said he withstood the trip well.

Mr. T Is Sued

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men who claim they started Mr. T on the road to fame have filed a $4 million lawsuit against the celebrity, claiming he promised to make them his agents for life and pay him 20 percent of his earnings.

Calvin Hollins and John Bitoy, both of Oak Park, claim they got the star of TV's "A Team" — formerly Lawrence Tero — a job as a discotheque bouncer, arranged his entry in a "World's Toughest Bouncer Contest" and made it possible for him to get a screen test for his role in "Rocky III," said their attorney, Jeffrey M. Goldberg.

Mr. T made some payments in accordance with an oral contract, but has refused to pay since August 1982, Goldberg said Friday after the suit was filed in Cook County Circuit Court.

Liz Says No To Penthouse

NEW YORK (UPI) — Penthouse magazine, which published nude photos of former Miss America Vanessa Williams, offered Elizabeth Taylor $1 million to pose naked but the movie queen said no, her spokeswoman said Saturday.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione made the offer through Taylor's representative, Chen Sam, but the raven-haired, violet-eyed actress firmly refused the offer.

Explanations of how the deal was proposed and how it fell through apparently differed widely.

She said she was told that Guccione wanted to give a new look to his monthly magazine, which features nude photos and articles.

Under the offer she was to wear chic new clothing designed by Nolan Miller, Sam said.

"They were to have been very romantic and I was to receive $1 million," Taylor said in an interview with the New York Daily News.

But when Taylor met personally with Guccione he changed the offer, insisting that she appear semi-nude, Sam said.

"I was shocked. I quickly ended the conversation, said that it was nice meeting him and showed him the door. That was it," Taylor told the News.

"I am not considering posing in the nude, or even semi-nude. I suspect Guccione never ever intended to change the format of his magazine," she said.

The spokesman said Taylor "kind of put a damper" on the offer to pose semi-nude.

4 Indicted In Cadet's Hazing Death

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Four Texas A&M students indicted in the hazing death of a fellow Corps of Cadets member are expected to turn themselves in as early as this week, but their trials might not start until November, a prosecutor said.

A Brazos County grand jury on Friday indicted three of the cadets, all juniors, on misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide and statutory hazing in the Aug. 30 death of 20-year-old cadet Bruce Goodrich, a sophomore. A fourth cadet, a senior, was charged with statutory hazing and evidence tampering.

Their trials could be up to six weeks away, said county District Attorney Bill Turner.

"About the only comment I can make ... is that I feel sorry for the boys that they have to go through this, that they will have to face these charges and that they will follow them through their careers," Ward Goodrich, the father of the dead cadet, said from his Webster, N.Y., home. "I'm just very sorry."

Goodrich said he had not spoken to the students or the district attorney.

The juniors — Jason Miles and Anthony D'Allesandro, both 21 and from Houston, and Louis Fancher III, 20, of San Antonio — were present the night Goodrich was rousted from bed and forced to perform exercises, including running, situps and pushups. Goodrich, a sophomore trnsfer student who that week had joined their unit, collapsed and later died at a Bryan hospital.

Gabriel Cuadra, the former senior personnel officer of the unit, is accused of destroying an exercise schedule the day after Goodrich died, Turner said. Cuadra has resigned from corps.

If convicted of negligent homicide, the three juniors could be sentenced to a maximum of a $2,000 fine and a year in jail. The tampering charges carries an identical maximum penalty.

Convictions of violating the state's law against hazing could bring fines of $25 to $250 and jail sentences of 10 days to three months.

A preliminary autopsy showed Goodrich died of heat stroke. Officials said a final autopsy report would probably be released Monday.

In a statement prepared before the indictments were returned, President Frank Vandiver said he found it "prudent that I refrain from commenting about the outcome of the grand jury deliberations," partly because of university disciplinary proceedings in the case

FBI Report Cites Fewer Police Officer Deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-five law enforcement officers were slain in the line of duty in the United States during the first half of 1984, 10 fewer than in the comparable period of 1983, the FBI said Saturday.

FBI Director William H. Webster said preliminary Uniform Crime Reports from around the nation showed the decrease from the 45 deaths during the first six months of last year.

Firearms were used to kill 30 officers this year, including handguns in 23 murders, rifles in three and shotguns in four. Of the others, two were stabbed or cut, two were killed by blows from hands, fists or feet and one was run down by a vehicle.

Four were killed in ambush situations, four while enforcing traffic laws and four while answering disturbance calls. Three of the victims were trying to thwart robberies or were chasing robbery suspects, two were responding to burglaries, two were involved in drug investigations and 11 were attempting arrests for other crimes.

Three officers were killed while investigating suspicious persons or circumstances and two while handling prisoners.

Law enforcement agencies developed enough information to bring charges in 30 of the 35 cases, the FBI said.

Religious Issues Facing Court As New Term Opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The separation of church and state, an issue that has played a major role in the presidential campaign, promises to dominate the Supreme Court agenda as its new term begins Monday.

Three significant church-state cases — school prayer, state aid to private schools and freedom to practice religion — face the nine justices during their upcoming 1984-85 term.

Although none of the three will be decided by the November election, the combination of campaign rhetoric and political sensitivity to the issues has focused unusual public attention on the cases.

"A climate has been created where church and state are very much on people's minds," said A.E. Dick Howard, University of Virginia Law School professor and Supreme Court scholar.

The Justice Department, following the president's lead, has strongly urged the high court to approve voluntary school prayer and lend public school employees to teach in private and parochial schools.

Major cracks in the wall of separation between church and state, a separation provided for in the Constitution, are predicted this term also because of the presence of Sandra Day O'Connor.

"She has cast the pivotal votes ... and is helping to take the court in a marked and unswerving (conservative) direction," said Bruce Fein, a lawyer who specializes in studying the Supreme Court.

O'Connor, 54, in her third term on the court, consistently has provided key votes for the conservative political positions espoused by Reagan, who appointed her to the bench.

This has meant a solid voting block generally favorable to Reagan's philosophy of less interference by big government in local matters. In the last two terms that shift has produced several cases that favored state "accommodation" of religious practices.

For example, the high court ruled in favor of the display of Nativity scenes as part of a city's Christmas celebration and for Minnesota's tuition tax deductions for parents of parochial school children.

These rulings and the philosophical shift within the court have combined to make it likely the tribunal will approve items that are rallying points for the increasingly influential conservative religious groups, which wholeheartedly support Reagan.

The major item is silent school prayer. A Mobile, Ala., lawyer, Ishmael Jaffree, challenged the state's law allowing a "moment of silence" in public school classrooms. Alabama is appealing a federal apeals court ruling that struck down the law as unconstitutional.

The Justice Department urged the high court to approve daily time for quiet prayer or meditation, whether students use the time to pray or to "think about yesterday's football game or tonight's date."

A favorable ruling would mark a major break from two decades of high court refusal to allow state-sponsored prayer in schools. In a 1962 ruling, the court banned public school teachers from leading students in recitations of prayer.

Bond Bridge Scene Approved

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Roger Moore, or at least a stuntman doubling as secret agent James Bond, will be hanging around one tower of the Golden Gate Bridge after the bridge board approved filming a spectacular fight scene.

Filming of the half-hour stunt fight for the movie "A View to Kill" should take place sometime this weekend or next, Eon Productions location manager Steph Beneseman said Friday after the board gave its approval.

Producers wanted the loser of the fight on the bridge's north tower to fall from the bridge's suspension cables, but the bridge board killed that idea.

"With all the problems we have here with suicides on this bridge, I think this is a bum idea," said board director Quentin Kopp.

84-Year-Old Publisher Is Going Strong

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Magdalene Critcher rises to greet visitors and makes her sure-footed way from the bookkeeping desk to her corner office.

"I'm slow, but I get there," she says.

People at Oxford's Public Ledger know: Mrs. Critcher always gets there. Carefully walking around the worrisome arthritis, trudging past the broken bones, diligently outdistancing her 84 years, the boss has been getting there for a couple of generations, a fixture on the corner of Spring and Wall streets.

Yes, she supposes she is the newspaper's publisher, she says. The title was passed to her from her husband, Atlas N. Critcher, when he died in 1965. But despite 65 years in the news business, she thinks she could still fit into the Granville County farm life she left years ago.

"I'm just an old-timey country girl," she says, which probably explains why, at 84, she's still in the office every morning at 8 a.m. On the farm, she says, you saw the work and did it. Same with her newspaper.

Why shouldn't the pubisher help with the bookkeeping, she asks. Why shouldn't she answer the telephone?

"I like to tend to all of it," Mrs. Critcher says. "I'm sitting there. Why not answer the phone? Besides, that's the best way to do. That way you keep up with everything that's going on."

There is much to keep up with. Small towns are rife with joys and sorrows, triumphs and peccadilloes.

"I think I'd be lost if I quit," she says. "You know everybody; you know everything they're doing — nearly, I mean. I mean everything printable."

Her high-pitched laugh dissolves into breathlessness, returns for a moment and fades. No one should be surprised she spends so much time at work; she's having a great time.

"I even eat in here," she says, motioning to the empty packets of soup mix, the crumpled bits of foil, the hot plate. "I get here and just stay all day."

It's a habit she developed early in her newspaper experience, when she followed her husband, a printer, to North Wilkesboro, where they bought and published the Wilkes Patriot.

Mrs. Critcher helped her husband tend a hand-fed press, even after the babies camme along.

"I carried those little rats along with me," she remembers. "I was with my husband (at the press) any number of times till 2 a.m., and I'd let them go to sleep on the newsprint."

Soon enough the couple and the "rats" — today known as Miriam Brown of Raleigh and Mariana Hudgins and Royster Critcher of Oxford — were back in Granville County, the new bosses of the twice-a-week Public Ledger. The year was 1932.

"I was glad (the previous publisher) wanted to sell," she says. "I was happy to be back home."

Mrs. Critcher never did much writing, she says, usually a column she characterized as "a bunch of foolishness."

"When you went to church and the woman with the big hat was siting in front of you, or somebody was riding horses up and down the street — don't think it hasn't been mentioned in the Ledger," she said.

A couple of times in the last several years, though, Mrs. Critcher has been making some news of her own. There was the time she fell out of bed and broke her back, and the time a another fall broke her hip. She weathered both experiences and was back at the newspaper almost at the moment she stepped out of Granville Hospital — to no one's surprise.

"She's determined to work, which is good," says Una Johnson, whose late husband, Tom, was editor of the Ledger for 43 years. "It's her whole life."

"She'd rather work for a dollar than just sit and twiddle her fingers," said Floyd Parker, a friend for 50 years. "She's very energetic and, of course, very economical. She looks after her dollar."

Such attention to finances made it possible for Mrs. Critcher and the Ledger to contribute to the construction of Oxford's Men's Garden Club Memorial Park and to Richard H. Thornton Library.

'Wrong Man' Cleared

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — A 13-month ordeal has ended for professional bowler Raymond Desrochers, acquitted for the eighth time in two states on charges he was the "wedding bandit" who stole gifts from wedding receptions.

Richard N. LaSalle, lawyer for the man whose latest acquittal came Friday, called it a "classic case of mistaken identity." The juries agreed.

Desrochers, 32, of Somerset, Mass., said seven Massachusetts and one Rhode Island case brought against him since August 1983 were based on a 7-year-old photograph. He said no police officer ever approached him directly during the investigations to hear his side of the story.

After the first mistaken arrest was made in Northboro, Mass., Desrochers said other police departments who were looking for the "wedding bandit" just followed suit.

"I was arrested for one crime, so I was the wedding bandit and I was thrown all over the place," Desrochers said.

During two of the Massachusetts wedding receptions at which thefts occurred, Desrochers was out-of-state bowling in a tournament.

On Friday, a Superior Court jury found him innocent of stealing more than $500 worth of gifts from a June 4, 1983, wedding reception in nearby Tiverton, R.I.

Jurors heard four witnesses testify they were at a wedding reception at The Coachmen restaurant and saw Desrochers there. One said she saw him leave with the gifts. They identified Desrochers using a 7-year-old police photograph.

All four witnesses testified the bandit had reddish hair and a full beard. One said he was 5-feet-10.

Desrochers has blond hair and is 5-feet-6.

Karpov Leads

MOSCOW (AP) — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov took a 3-0 lead Saturday after his fellow Soviet, challenger Garri Kasparov, resigned during the seventh game of their title match.

The game had been adjourned Friday night on the 42nd move, and Kasparov resigned without making any new moves. The match will be won by the first person to score six points. Action resumes Monday.

Karpov, playing white, opened the game with the Tarrasch variation of the queen's gambit, deviating for the first time from his practice of starting each game with the advance of his king's pawn.

Kasparov quickly got into serious time trouble while Karpov managed to dominate the center of the board throughout the game.

Pack Blocks Pirate Rally

RALEIGH — Vince Evans rushed for 201 yards scoring once and Mike Cofer kicked three field goals as N.C. State snapped a two-game losing skid and topped East Carolina 31-22 at Carter-Finley Stadium Saturday.

The Pirates, trailing 20-7, fought back to within six and had the ball in good field position before State turned a fumble into a freaky touchdown drive to sew up the contest.

Evans scored on State's first drive going in from a yard out. Quarterback Stan Esposito passed to Jeff Brown for a second score of four yards, while Cofer booted two field goals to stake State to its first 20 points.

East Carolina also scored on its first drive, as Darrell Speed scampered 24 yards on a keeper, then pulled within striking distance on a one-yard plunge by Reggie Branch late in the third period.

But Joe Greene broke a tackle and ran for 36 yards after he was seemingly stopped for a loss. Cofer later added his thrid field goal for a 31-14 lead.

East Caroilna rallied back on a six-yard pass form Speed to Jimmy Walden, but time was too short for a true rally.

"I thought we'd have to score four or five times to win it, and we didn't," ECU Coach Ed Emory siad. "Greene, Evans and Esposito did a great job of moving the ball for State."

Emory said he thought the Pirates could pull it out in the seocnd half as they had done last year against the Wolfpack. "But four times we took ourselves out of field goal position, and that could have meant the difference in the game."

Emory wasn't happy with the defensive effort either. "We did some things well but not many."

State rushed for 335 yards and passed for 144. In contrast, ECU collected 251 on the ground and 111 passing.

"But I'm not about to give up, and our kids aren't either. I was proud of the wya they fought back to the end. I just don't know why the ball bounces this way. We would make things happen, and have a third down that would take us out of it," Emory said in reference to several fumbles and sacks which took the Pirates out of field goal range.

The Pirate coach said State did nothing unexpected. "They just did a better job blocking, and they have great backs and good people up front on defense."

Several times in the contest, particularly in the second period, Emory fumed at officials from the sidelines. But when asked to comment he said, "You can make your own conclusions, but we come up heere every year and play with their ball on their field with their (Atlantic Coast Conference) officials. The least we could do is have a split crew."

While Evans was rushing for his yards — the fourth-highest rushing total for a State player in a game — Esposito was hitting 12 of 18 against a porous Pirate defense. Greene added 119 yards on the ground.

ECU's Tony Baker ran for 120 while Branch added 104 yards, as both had outstanding nights. Speed hit on 10 of 24 passes but had several dropped.

Anthony Boosts Heels To First 1984 Victory

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

CHAPEL HILL — Kevin Anthony says North Carolina can definitely get better, and the sophomore quarterback helped the team stride toward that goal Saturday in a 23-17 victory over Kansas.

Anthony ran and passed for the first touchdowns of his collegiate career, while Ken Miller kicked two field goals and Rob Rogers added a third.

"We were looking for a big one and we got it," Anthony said of the triumph, which came after losses to Navy and Boston College.

"We went out and I think we got a good performance out of the team," Anthony said. "There's definitely room for improvement."

North Carolina coach Dick Crum might have been happy with the victory, but he was not pleased with 11 penalties for 110 yards assessed against the Tar Heels.

"I can stand on the sideline and see the calls," Crum said. "I'm disappointed that the game was influenced that way."

Kansas kept the game from becoming a rout by picking on North Carolina's pass defense in the second half.

"When we went in at halftime, we talked to the kids about playing loose," Kansas coach Mike Gottfried said. "We played better in the second half and I am encouraged."

Anthony had a 6-yard scoring run late in the first quarter.

The Jayhawks were victimized by a Tar Heel pass rush that recorded two sacks and forced two fumbles in the first half. North Carolina converted one of those turnovers into Anthony's scoring toss, a 37-yarder to Eric Streater in the second quarter.

Another Anthony-to-Streater scoring pass in the third quarter was nullified by a holding penalty. Anthony finished with 15 completions in 26 attempts for 180 yards. Anthony's only interception, by defensive back Milt Garner in the third period, led to Dodge Schwartzburg's 41-yard field goal with 5:55 left in the third period.

Robert Mimbs scored on a 1-yard run with 5:32 left to cap a 99-yard drive, and Schwartzburg's conversion pulled Kansas to within 23-10. Operating against North Carolina's prevent defense, Mike Norseth hit Skip Peete with a 10-yard touchdown pass with nine seconds left to play. Schwartzburg's kick set the final margin and sent the Jayhawks down to their third straight loss after an opening-day victory over Wichita State.

North Carolina's defense recorded eight sacks against Norseth and Mike Orth for 63 yards. Norseth, playing most of the second half, was 14 of 19 for 130 yards.

Maryland Stops Deacon Offense

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — After Maryland blew a 17-3 lead in the final four minutes of the first half, Coach Bobby Ross did a little chewing out.

The Terps responded by holding Wake Forest to 123 net yards in the second half, and created three turnovers as Maryland whipped the Demon Deacons 38-17 Saturday.

Maryland quarterback Frank Reich tossed two touchdown passes in the first half before being injured, and Rick Badanjek scored twice on second half runs in the Atlantic Coast contest.

Ross said he was pleased with Maryland's offense in the 17-17 first half, "but we got on the defense a little at halftime."

"In the second half, we played extremely well, both offensively and defensively," Ross said. "I was pleased with the turnovers our defense forced. We finally got a couple of interceptions."

Wake Forest Coach Al Groh said he thought the Deacons came into the game expecting to win against a team they've had trouble with for more than a decade.

"But we have to remember that we were playing the Atlantic Coast Conference champions," Groh said, "and to beat them, we had to play like champions. We had opportunities to make some big plays throughout the game, but did not."

Reich, who suffered a shoulder separation in the third quarter, completed 14 of 19 passes for 193 yards.

The graduate student completed a 53-yard scoring pass to Alvin Blout in the second quarter and upped Maryland's lead to 17-3 just 53 seconds later on a four-yarder to freshman Ferrell Edmunds following a Wake Forest fumble.

But Foy White, making his first start this season for Wake Forest, completed TD passes of 31 yards to James Brim and 18 yards to Tommy Gregg, forging a 17-17 haltime tie.

Doug Illing booted a 47-yard field goal for Wake Forest and Jess Atkinson a 34-yarder for Maryland before the aerial battle started.

Maryland drove 80 yards with the second half kickoff, with Badanjek, who rushed for 101 yards, backing over the goal on a eight-yard run. He scored again from the one with 10:59 left, and Tommy Neal scored later on a two-yard run.

It was the first ACC game for the Terps, while Wake Forest is 1-1. Both teams are 2-2 overall.

Black Makes Up For Early Fumble

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — As far as Army Coach Jim Young is concerned, it's perfectly all right if fullback Doug Black fumbles once in a while. Black, says Young, always seems to make up for it in a big way.

Against Duke Saturday, Black, a 6-foot, 205-pound junior, rushed for 132 yards to lift Army to a 13-9 victory over the Blue Devils.

With Army nursing a 10-9 lead in the third period, Black's fumble ended a drive that started on its own 20-yard line and moved to the Duke 13.

"We're going to have fumbles with our triple option wishbone," said Young. "As long as we keep them to a minimum, we'll do all right. And besides," added Young, "this is Black's first year in college football."

Black, who played intramural football at West Point the last two seasons, came out for practice this spring and made the team.

"He's very tough and runs low to the ground," said Young. "And he never gets hurt."

Black carried the ball 30 times and gained more than 100 yards for the third straight game this season. Although the Black Knights only threw the ball three times, completing one for a 25-yard gain, they now are off to their best start in 18 years.

"I saw the change this spring," said kicker Craig Stopa, who booted two field goals. "We really started coming together as a team. We believe in each other."

For Army, 2-0-1, it was the first time since 1966 they have not lost in their first three games. Duke dropped to 1-2.

After Army's Jarvis Hollingsworth fumbled the opening kickoff, Ken Harper kicked the first of his three field goals, a 20-yarder, to give Duke a 3-0 led.

At the start of the second period, Duke picked up a first down on the Army 2, but quarterback Ron Sally was sacked for losses of 6 and 8 yards. The Blue Devils had to settle for a 34-yard field goal by Harper.

Army cut the lead to 6-3 on a 36-yard field goal by Stopa, and then two series later drove 38 yards in seven plays with Black scoring on a 1-yard run to take the lead for good. Stopa's kicked the extra point, his 38th straight.

In the third period, Duke marched 52 yards to make it 10-9 on Harper's 32-yard field goal.

Fumbles halted third-period drives by both teams. Duke fullback Scott Sime fumbled on the Army 8. The Cadets recovered and closed out the scoring in the fourth period on a 22-yard field goal by Stopa.

Ga. Tech Upsets Clemson

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech played a near perfect first half Saturday but it nearly turned into a nightmare for Coach Bill Curry's 18th-ranked Yellow Jackets, who had to come back in the closing seconds to upset No. 13 Clemson 28-21 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Tech, 3-0, and off to its best start since 1970, dominated the first half behind the running and passing of quarterback John Dewberry and led 21-0 before the Tigers, 2-2, erupted in the final half to tie it at 21-21 when Mike Eppley passed 13 yards to Terrance Roulac with 10:36 to play.

Substitute fullback Chuck Easley, however, capped a 54-yard winning drive by scoring on a one-yard plunge with 33 seconds remaining to give Tech its triumph.

"I've preached to the team that we need to finish the job and finish people off when we have the chance," Curry said. "That wasn't exactly what I had in mind today. It made it awfully thrilling for everybody, but we went to sleep in the third quarter."

Clemson actually only scored once in the third quarter, but the Tigers added two touchdowns less than four minutes apart early in the final period to gain the tie.

"It's exactly the kind of horror story that you dread when you have a great team down," said Curry. "Obviously, we sucked it up. We stopped them. Forced them to kick the ball and then knocked it in the end zone."

Despite the scare, Curry said, "I think it's clear, however, we are a little different than we have been in the past."

Clemson Coach Danny Ford said he was proud of the way his club came back from behind when they trailed 21-0.

"We could have just laid down, but that shows our players can come back and play," Ford said. "We're a .500 football team right now ... not where we want to be ... but we're just back among average people."

Ford said he told his players Tech was a much better team this year but, "Maybe it didn't soak in too good," he said.

Easley, playing in place of starter Keith Glanton who suffered a sprained shoulder in the third period, alternated with tailback Robert Lavette in the Yellow Jackets' winning drive. Easley had five carries in the march, including runs of 13 and 11 yards.

Lavette, who finished with only 56 yards on 22 attempts, ran four times in the winning drive, including key runs of eight and 13 yards, the last to the one-yard line.

David Bell booted field goals of 25 and 31 yards for Tech in the opening period. Glanton scored on a 1-yard run and Dewberry passed to Gary Wilkins for a 1-yard touchdown to round out Tech's scoring in the opening half.

Clemson, however, came back behind the passing of Eppley, who connected on a 25-yard scoring strike to Richard Butler on the Tigers' first possession of the second half. Clemson pulled to within 21-14 when Steve Griffin raced 20 yards for another score only 48 seconds into the final period.

Clemson, which had been gunning for an ACC record-tying winning streak against league opponents, had the string snapped at 20. The game, however, does not count in league standings since the Tigers are on NCAA probation and ineligible for the conference title.

Clemson, a 26-23 loser to Georgia in the closing seconds a week ago, managed only one drive in the first half, moving 66 yards in 13 plays before tailback Tracey Driver fumbled on the Tech five-yard line. The Tigers managed only 136 yards and nine first downs in the first 30 minutes.

The second half, however, was all Clemson until Tech's winning drive in the last five minutes.

The Tigers took the kickoff to open the second half and marched 74 yards in 10 plays behind the passing of Eppley, who hit on four of four attempts for 49 yards, including the 25-yard scoring pass to Butler.

Driver, who gained 131 yards on 26 carries, was the workhorse in Clemson's drive that tied the score at 21-21.

Majkowski, Ford Connect For Cavs' Winning Score

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Don Majkowski and flanker John Ford teamed for two touchdowns, including the game-winner with 5:07 remaining, as the Virginia Cavaliers posted a 26-23 football victory over Virginia Tech's Hokies Saturday.

Majkowski, who relieved starter Kevin Ferguson late in the second quarter, hit Ford with a 14-yard scoring strike on fourth down for the final score of the game. The pair also connected for a 18-yard touchdown pass with a minute left in the first half to give the Cavaliers, 3-1, a 10-3 lead.

Virginia's Kenny Stadlin, who kicked a 19-yard field goal early in the second quarter, booted a 56-yarder seconds before the half to put the Cavaliers up 13-6. Stadlin's boot was a school record for Virginia and the longest field goal ever in Tech's Lane Stadium.

The Hokies' only scores in the first half came on field goals of 29 and 27 yards by Don Wade.

Tech, 2-2, came back in the third quarter when strong safety Bob Thomas intercepted a pass by Ferguson, who started the second half before being relieved by Majkowski again, and returned it 17 yards for a touchdown to tie the score. A field goal by Wade with 43 seconds left in the third quarter put Tech up 16-13.

The Hokies increased their lead to 23-13 with 13:24 left in the game on a 17-yard run by tailback Eddie Hunter 23-13.

Majkowski passed to Ford for 33 yards in the fourth quarter to put the Cavaliers on the Tech 1-yard line, and Virginia cut the deficit to 23-19 on the next play on Howard Petty's run. The Cavaliers' attempt for a two-point conversion failed.

Wade attempted a 51-yard field goal with 3 minutes remaining but the ball sailed wide to the left.

Wolfpack Downs ECU...

big play — and to turn the busted play into big gainers — that made the difference.

Early on, it looked like the fans might need a calculator to keep track of the score as both the Wolfpack and Pirates drove for touchdowns on their first possessions.

But things began to settle down a little after that, as the Pack got key breaks that allowed them to forge into a 20-7 halftime advantage.

Led by the rushing of Evans, the Wolfpack drove 73 yards on its first possession, with Evans accounting for 57 of it. He finally cracked over from a yard out with 10:46 to go, and Cofer's kick made it 7-0.

Branch and Baker led the Pirates back down the field on a 66-yard march on just nine plays. But it was a dazzling run by Speed that put the Pirates on the board. Taking the ball to the right side after faking the handoff to Branch, Speed cut back to his left and danced past the State corner and ran untouched into the end zone from 24 yards away. Jeff Heath's boot knotted it at 7-7 with 7:39 left.

After driving from its own 20 to the ECU 8, State saw a 30-yard field goal attempt by Cofer go wide. But four plays later, John McRorie intercepted Speed and returned it 30 yards to the 17, setting up State's second score. Evans hit for 11 yards on three plays before Esposito hit Brown from the four and a 14-7 lead with 1:54 left in the period.

Early in the second period, ECU drove to the State 30 before a bad pitch by Speed on third down forced a punt. State moved from the 20 to the ECU 35, helped along by a personal foul against the Pirates, and with thewind at his back, Cofer booted the ball over the crossbar from 52 yards away, staking the Wolfpack to a 17-7 edge at the 8:03 mark.

ECU was charged with an unsportsmanlike conduct pentalty that had Emory fuming. And he had even more cause just a few plays later. After moving to the State 35, Speed broke away for a 23 yard gain to the 13, only to have it called back for a delay of the game penalty. On the next play, Speed appeared to hit Ricky Nichols for a first down at the 20, but the official ruled Nichols had not held onto the ball long enough after he was knocked loose from it on the tackle. That forced the Pirates to punt.

State took over with 3:30 left and after reaching midfield appeared stopped, but a pass from Esposito to Ricky Wall was batted back and into the hands of Greene, who pulled the 'immaculate reception' in at the 31. After getting the clock stopped on an incomplete pass, Cofer booted a 48-yarder with just two seconds left to give the Wolfpack a 20-7 edge at halftime.

Both teams missed early second half opportunities. ECU drove to the State 35 before a sack ended their drive. State pushed it to the 18 before a 40-yard Cofer field goal attempt went wide. State had another chance ghen Speed was intercepted at the ECU 40, but Vernard Wynn took it right back intercepting in the end zone.

Helped along by the first flag against State, a 15-yard personal foul, ECU moved from the 20 ot the 40. Speed later hit Ricky Nicols for 33 yards to the State 24. Branch added 12 more and finally cracked over from the one to pull it to 20-14 with 1:50 left in the third.

The Pirates appeared to get good field position at the State 44 after a short punt, but at the 39, Speed fumbled it away and Lady Luck again smiled on State. Looking at second and all, Green picked up 23 yards on a busted play. Then, on the next play, from the ECU 36, Green appeared trapped for a loss, but broke away from Steve Jacobs, raced to the right sidelines and broke it all the way, putting the game out of reach. To make sure, Esposito hit Isom on a two-point conversion, giving the Wolpack a 28-14 lead with 9:40 to go.

The Pirates then rallied behind Speed's passing to score with 54 seconds left, but failed to recover the on-side kick. Walden climaxed teh scoring drive with a reception of a six-yard Speed pass, and Speed hit Branch on a tipped pass for the conversion to close out the scoring.

State goes to 2-2 with the win and returns to ACC action against unbeaten and surprising Georgia Tech on Saturday. East Carolina, falling to 1-4, travels to meet the equally surprising Pittsburgh Panthers, winless in their first four starts.

Syracuse Stuns Top-Ranked Huskers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse, still smarting from last week's 19-0 loss to Rutgers, punished Nebraska defensively Saturday and rode Todd Norley's passing to a 17-9 upset of the No. 1 ranked team in the nation.

Both teams, playing before 47,280 in the Carrier Dome, emerged from the game with 3-1 records.

"Their defense probably played as good a game as we've had played against us in the last 3 or 4 years," said Nebraska coach Tom Osborne. "They were just more physical than we were and they outplayed us. We really got banged around today."

Norley's 40-yard touchdown pass to Mike Siano midway through the third quarter gave the Orangemen their first lead at 10-7.

Siano, one of four receivers Norley used in a nine-of-18 passing day for 106 yards, said he was still thinking about the pain of the Rutgers loss which resulted from seven Syracuse turnovers.

"We know we played a bad game last week, and I think it was on the back of our minds even as we took the field today for that first series. But we didn't make mistakes today, and that was the difference," said Siano.

The Syracuse victory snapped Nebraska's 23-game regular season win streak and the Orangemen held the Cornhuskers to their lowest point total since their 1981 season opener.

Norley directed the team to a 224-214 edge in total offense, despite a 13-yard loss when punter Jim Fox ran out of the end zone on the final play of the game.

"We never questioned our ability to move the ball even after last week," Norley said. "We just knew we had to execute and today we did what we're capable of."

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson, who saw his Orangemen struggle through two losing seasons before a 6-5 campaign in 1983, which was marred by a 63-7 drubbing by Nebraska, relaxed for the first time in a week.

"This is great, really great," a jubiliant MacPherson said.

"After last week, I hope the fans really enjoyed this one. They deserved it," he said. "We have waited a long time for a win like this."

The Cornhuskers had led from halfway through the first period on the strength of a 25-yard toss from quarterback Craig Sundberg to tight Todd Frain, but Syracuse closed the gap to 7-3 before halftime when Don McAulay booted a 24-yard field goal.

The Orangemen put the lid on one of their most stirring upsets with 1:29 remaining in the game as fullback Harold Gayden knifed into the end zone from 1 yard out. The last time Syracuse defeated a highly ranked team was 1967 when it upset fourth-ranked UCLA 32-14.

The Orangemen put the lid on one of their most stirring upsets with 1:29 remaining in the game as fullback Harold Gayden knifed into the end zone from 1 yard out.

Syracuse punter Jim Fox ran out of his own end zone as time ran out to account for Nebraska's final points.

Syracuse, anxious to redeem itself after a 19-0 loss to Rutgers last week ending its five game, two-year winning streak, came up with one important defensive play after another to hold Nebraska to its lowest point total since its 1981 opening game.

Safety Ron Hobby, who intercepted a pass which killed one Nebraska drive in the second quarter, recovered a fumble in the fourth quarter to end another Nebraska drive. Tackle Tim Green crushed Sundberg twice for sacks which terminated Nebraska possessions in the second half.

Syracuse avvenged a 63-7 loss to Nebraska in Lincoln last year, the first time the two teams met since 1961.

The Cornhuskers, who had outscored three opponents 122-17 and were averaging 532 yards total offense per game, played the game without starting tailback Jeff Smith, who sprained his ankle last week in a 42-3 rout of UCLA.

Nebraska, which was held to 214 yards on offense against the Orangemen, also lost starting fullback Tom Rathman for the first half when he was knocked unconscious on the opening kickoff.

The much-maligned Syracuse offense, averaging just over 12 points per game, showed the first signs of the stunning triumph in the making when it chewed up 77 yards in 17 plays midway through the second quarter.

The drive began after Nebraska's Danny Noonan sacked Norley for a 3-yard loss. On the next play, Norley got the team a crucial first down with a 13-yard aerial to tight end Jim Tait at Syracuse's 38-yard line. Fullback Gayden, whose three fumbles last week proved disastrous, kept things going with a 13-yard run into Nebraska territory.

Texas (2).....28
Penn State (4).....3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Despite second-ranked Texas' 28-3 whipping of No. 4 Penn State, coupled with top-rated Nebraska's stunning 17-9 upset at the hands of Syracuse, Coach Fred Akers isn't ready to claim that his Longhorns should be No. 1.

"I know this sounds kind of crazy maybe, but it's the truth — this is still a rebuilding year," Akers insisted Saturday after Texas added an impressive pounding of Penn State to a 35-27 victory over nationally ranked Auburn two weeks earlier.

"With that many new people (Texas lost 26 seniors, most of them starters, from last year's 11-1 team) we're still growing. We still make mistakes out there in some areas."

Texas made a bunch of them Saturday but survived four first-half turnovers. Terry Orr bolted 51 yards for a first-quarter touchdown and Todd Dodge hit William Harris with an 84-yard scoring pass, third longest aerial in Texas history, one period later while a swift, hard-hitting defense kept Penn State under wraps most of the way.

While Texas was boosting its record to 2-0 and perhaps getting ready to supplant Nebraska at the top of The Associated Press ratings, Penn State lost for the first time after winning its first three games.

Washington (6).....53
Miami-O.....7

SEATTLE (AP) — Tailbacks Jacque Robinson and David Toy each ran for two touchdowns Saturday as sixth-ranked Washington blasted winless Miami of Ohio 53-7.

In a final non-conference tuneup for their Pacific-10 Conference football opener at Oregon State next weekend, the Huskies, 4-0, rushed for six touchdowns on a day when top-ranked Nebraska and fourth-rated Penn State were beaten.

It was the most points scored against the Mid-American Conference Redskins, 0-4, since Dartmouth beat Miami of Ohio 58-7 in 1942.

Robinson, a senior making his first start of the season, scored on runs of 1 and 11 yards in the first quarter.

Toy, a freshman, wrapped up the Huskies' most productive performance of the season with scoring runs of 18 and 15 yards in the final period.

Quarterback Hugh Millen scored on a 1-yard run and fullback Rick Fenney ran 8 yards for a touchdown for Washington in the third quarter.

Kansas St.....6

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Halfback Steve Sewell combined for 295 yards rushing and receiving, including a 79-yard touchdown pass reception, to lead the seventh-ranked Oklahoma Sooners to a 24-6 victory over Kansas State Saturday.

The error-plagued Sooners, now 4-0 overall and 1-0 in the Big Eight Conference, accumulated 464 yards in total offense, including 268 yards rushing, but lost three fumbles and had two passes intercepted.

Sewell, a senior who, because of injuries in the Sooner backfield, was the only player starting Saturday listed in Oklahoma's preseason two-deep depth chart. He had 141 yards rushing at halftime on 16 carries — already more than his previous high of 107 yards gained against Kansas in 1981. He finished with 153 yards on 24 carries, and six receptions for 142 yards.

Oklahoma quarterback Danny Bradley hit on nine of 15 passes for 189 yards. He also scored on a 22-yard run late in the fourth quarter.

Kansas State's Steve Willis hit on field goals of 48 and 37 yards. Each of the scores by the Wildcats, 1-3 overall and 0-1 in league play, followed fumbles by Oklahoma freshman running back Lydell Carr.

But Oklahoma's defense shut down Kansas State, holding the Wildcats to 19 yards rushing and 101 yards passing.

Michigan (14).....14
Indiana.....6

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A 4-yard touchdown pass from Jim Harbaugh to Eddie Garrett, capping a 10-minute drive that was kept alive by an official's inadvertent whistle, clinched Michigan's 14-6 Big Ten Conference football victory Saturday over Indiana.

The Hoosiers, trailing 7-0 late in the third quarter, apparently had stopped the Wolverines at the 4-yard line when a pass by Harbaugh was broken up in the end zone. But the play was nullified by the accidental early whistle and Harbaugh hit Garrett for the touchdown on the next play.

A pass interception by Mike Mallory, one of two sons of Indiana Coach Bill Mallory playing for Michigan, had started the 14th-ranked Wolverines' final touchdown drive from their own 20-yard line early in the period.

Harbaugh completed all four of his pass attempts on that series, scrambled once for an 8-yard gain and recovered his own fumble at the Indiana 16 to keep the drive going.

The Hoosiers, losing for the 13th straight time to Michigan and falling to 0-4 this season, got their only touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Three passes by Steve Bradley helped Indiana to the Michigan 7 and Bradley eventually scored on a 1-yard sneak.

Indiana had a chance to score again when Michigan's Jamie Morris fumbled at the Wolverines' 34 midway through the final quarter. The Hoosiers reached the 22, but an offensive pass interference penalty put them back to the 35 and Mark Rogers missed a fourth-down field goal attempt.

Michigan, now 3-1 for the season and 2-0 in the Big Ten, got its first touchdown on a 1-yard dive by Bob Perryman on its first possession of the game.

The Hoosiers, falling to 0-2 in the conference, suffered their ninth straight loss over two seasons.

Louisiana St.....23
Southern Cal (15).....3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dalton Hilliard scored on a pair of 2-yard runs and the Louisiana State defense shut down Southern Cal as the Tigers downed the 15th-ranked Trojans 23-3 Saturday in a non-conference football game.

Hilliard, a bullish 5-foot-8, 187-pound junior, put the Tigers on top to stay with his first touchdown run with 4:45 remaining in the first quarter.

He tallied again midway through the second period to give LSU a 14-3 advantage. Both his touchdowns capped LSU drives that began with the recovery of Trojan fumbles.

The victory gave LSU a 3-0-1 record, and the Trojans are now 2-1.

The Tigers' defense, spearheaded by nose guard Henry Thomas and linebacker Shawn Burks, victimized Southern Cal freshman quarterback Kevin McLean for two interceptions and a fumble recovery.

McLean, making his first college start, completed just nine of 20 throws for 64 yards. He became the Trojans' No.1 quarterback last week when Sean Salisbury went down with a knee injury in Southern Cal's 6-3 victory over Arizona State.

LSU quarterback Jeff Wickersham, a junior who now ranks as the school's second-leading career passer, completed 14 of 27 throws for 171 yards against Southern Cal, including a 35-yard touchdown toss to Glenn Holt late in the third period.

The Tigers' other points came on Juan Betanzos' 46-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Southern Cal's only score was a 22-yard field goal by Frank Jordan that gave the Trojans a short-lived lead 3:23 into the contest.

UCLA (17).....33
Colorado.....16

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Unerring place-kicker John Lee kicked four field goals and freshman Gaston Green rushed for two touchdowns to spark 17th-ranked UCLA to a 33-16 victory over Colorado in college football Saturday.

The Bruins, rebounding from a 42-3 loss to Nebraska last week, raised their record to 3-1 despite having seven starters out of the lineup with injuries. Colorado, moving the ball effectively but unable to reach the end zone until the final quarter, fell to 0-4.

Lee, a junior, was successful on all four of his field-goal tries — from 51, 49, 39 and 36 yards. He now is a perfect 14-for-14 this season. He also kicked three extra points, and his 15 points enabled him to set a UCLA career scoring record of 215, eclipsing Gary Beban's standard of 214 set in the 1960s.

Green, who had carried only seven times in UCLA's first three games, capped an 80-yard drive with a 4-yard TD run in the opening quarter. He finished off a 75-yard drive in the third quarter, racing 5 yards around the right side.

Notre Dame (19).....16
Missouri.....14

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — John Carney booted three field goals and Steve Beuerlein and Reggie Ward teamed up on a 74-yard touchdown play Saturday, lifting 19th-ranked Notre Dame to a hard-fought 16-14 victory over Missouri.

The Tigers drove to the Irish 22 in the final seconds, but Brad Burditt's 39-yard field goal attempt fell short.

Carney's 25-yarder gave Notre Dame a 3-2 lead in the first quarter as the Irish posted their third straight victory following a season-opening loss to Purdue. Missouri misfired twice on two-point conversion attempts in the final period and dropped to 1-3.

Carney, a sophomore, added a career-long 44-yarder in the third period and tacked on a 37-yard field goal in the fourth.

Missouri got a safety on Notre Dame's second possession and the Irish were clinging to a 3-2 lead when Beuerlein hit Ward over the middle for a 74-yard touchdown early in the second period.

Marlon Adler's 15-yard scoring pass to Andy Hill closed the deficit to 13-8 with 9:10 left in the third period.

Vandy Upsets Tide Homecoming

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — George MacIntyre didn't suffer through all those years of frustration Vanderbilt endured at Alabama's hands, but the Commodore football coach had enough of them.

"It's really sweet to come in here and win the ballgame," he said after Vanderbilt upset Alabama 30-21 in a Southeastern Conference opener Saturday to give the Crimson Tide its first homecoming loss since 1957.

It was 4-0 Vandy's first victory over 1-3 Alabama after 14 straight losses dating back to 1969.

"Alabama is an obstacle we have been trying to hurdle since I've been here," said MacIntyre, now in his sixth season as the Vandy coach.

The victory, paced by Kurt Page's two touchdown tosses, "was a tremendous effort by our team," MacIntyre said. "We came in the game very, very sure that we could win.

"This is the most experienced team we have had and they played like it."

Coach Ray Perkins had little trouble diagnosing his team.

"The biggest problem we've got — and it doesn't take a Phi Beta Kappa to figure it out — is that our offense has not complemented our defense," he said.

"Until it does, we won't have a chance to be a good team."

"Now," he said his players have "got to be so hard-headed and arrogant that we'll roll our sleeves up, or take our shirts off, and go to work for Georgia," Alabama's next opponent.

With Alabama holding the lead in the second half Page hit Chuck Scott in the end zone from the 18 to put Vanderbilt ahead and later connected with Joe Kelly on a 1-yard scoring pass.

The other Commodore points came on three field goals by Ricky Anderson and a 30-yard run late in the game by Carl Woods, the game's leading runner with 115 yard on 25 carries.

Anderson's 12 points on the field goals and three conversion gives him a Vandy record of 160 points. Runner Dean Davidson scored 156 in 1947-50.

The big gainers in Vandy's go-ahead drive were a 26-yard pass to Louie Stephenson and a 25-yard run by Everett Crawford.

Thanh Anderson, with his second interception of the day, picked off a Mike Shula pass and returned it 23 yards to the Alabama 16 to set up Vandy's clinching touchdown.

Page, who now has seven scoring passes this season, hit on 19 of 32 for 218 yards against Alabama, with no interceptions.

Anderson's first interception at the Vandy 20 touched off a late second quarter drive that ended in Ricky Anderson's third field goal to make it Alabama 10-9 at the half.

Miss. St.....12

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lorenzo Hampton ran 44 yards for a touchdown and Kerwin Bell flipped a pair of 14-yard scoring passes to John L. Williams and Neal Anderson Saturday to lead Florida to a 27-12 Southeastern Conference football victory over Mississippi State.

The triumph in Galen Hall's debut as interim head coach boosted the Gators record to 2-1-1 and was their 10th straight over the 2-2 Bulldogs at Florida Field, where Mississippi State hasn't won since 1965.

Hampton, a 210-pound senior tailback, gave Florida a 7-3 lead with 2:54 left in the opening quarter, and Bell's pass to Williams with 5:40 to go in the third period enabled the Gators to erase a 12-7 halftime deficit.

The flip to Williams, who rushed for 104 yards and two TD's in Florida's 35-12 victory over Mississippi State in 1983, completed a 14-play, 71-yard drive that consumed more than six minutes of the clock.

The Gators, 1-0-1 in the SEC, carried a 13-12 lead into the final quarter — the same as a year ago — and pulled away when Bell found Anderson alone at the Bulldogs 5 on a 14-yard scoring play for a 20-12 advantage.

Florida broke the game open before a crowd of 68,186 when Ricky Nattiel returned a Brian Hutson punt 67 yards for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter.

Mississippi State, 0-1 in conference play, used a pair of Florida turnovers to set up nine first-half points and built their 12-7 lead on the strength of Artie Cosby field goals of 23 and 33 yards and quarterback Don Smith's 1-yard sneak.

Hall, an assistant at Oklahoma for 18 years before coming to Florida as offensive coordinator this season, replaced Charley Pell Sept. 16 in the SEC's first mid-season coaching change since 1973.

Pell, who had resigned effective at the end of the season, was fired in the wake of developments in a 21-month NCAA probe of the Gators program.

Mississippi.....19
Tulane.....14

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Kent Austin threw a pair of second-half scoring passes, and the University of Mississippi defense set up two scores Saturday as the Rebels toppled winless Tulane 19-14 in a non-conference football game.

Ole Miss was trailing 7-6 at halftime but Austin led the Rebels on a 63-yard drive to open the second half and capped it with a 21-yard swing pass over the middle to tailback Nathan Wonsley.

After freshman linebacker Jeff Herrod picked off a Tulane pass at the Green Wave 34-yard line and Arthur Humphrey rambled 32 yards, Austin lofted a 2-yard TD pass to tight end Steve Joyner to give Ole Miss a 19-7 lead with 7:12 to play.

The victory moved Ole Miss to 3-0-1 and gave it a nine-game unbeaten streak in regular season games over the last two seasons.

Tulane fell to 0-4.

Tulane took a 7-3 lead with 3:22 to play in the second quarter when reserve quarterback David McLaughlin flipped a 2-yard touchdown pass to tight end Larry Route.

Tulane threatened to rally in the final minutes and pulled to 19-14 with 1:17 to play when Ken Karcher connected on a 28-yard scoring pass to Marc Zeno. The Wave got the ball back once more and on the final play of the game got a first down at the Ole Miss 15, but the clock ran out.

West Virginia.....28
Pittsburgh.....10

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Drewrey caught a 31-yard scoring pass, then raced 74 yards on a punt return for a game-breaking touchdown as West Virginia routed rival Pittsburgh 28-10 Saturday to hand the reeling Panthers their fourth consecutive loss.

The victory was the first by the Mountaineers, 4-1, in Pittsburgh since 1972 and gave West Virginia its second decision in a row over Pitt following seven straight Panthers' victories.

The 0-4 start is the formerly third-ranked Panthers' worst since they lost six in row to begin a 1-10 record 1972 season.

With the score tied 7-7 late in the first half, West Virginia linebacker Derek Christian intercepted a John Congemi pass and returned it 11 yards to the Panthers' 31. Three plays later, Drewrey beat Pitt cornerback John "Ducky" Lewis for his touchdown catch as the Mountaineers, who once trailed 7-0, bolted into a 14-7 lead with 1:28 remaining in the half.

Lewis tried for the interception and missed as Drewrey caught the ball near the Pitt 15 yard line raced into the end zone untouched.

Drewrey, who had 206 yards in all-purpose yardage while touching the ball 11 times, raised the Mountaineers' lead to 21-10 when he sailed down the sidelines with a Chris Jelic punt with 11:27 left in the game.

Michigan St.....10

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Purdue kicker Mike Rendina booted a 30-yard field goal in the fourth quarter, his second of the game, to boost the Boilermakers to a 13-10 Big Ten victory over Michigan State in an error-filled game Saturday.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Rendina barely missed a 40-yard field goial attempt. But Purdue intercepted a long throw from Michigan State's Dave Yarema on the next series.

The Boilermakers then marched 47 yards from their own 40, mixing a passing and running attack.

The victory boosted Purdue's overall record to 3-1, 2-0 in the conference. Michigan State fell to 1-3 and 0-2 in the conference.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Halfback Jody Simmons scored on runs of 29 and 41 yards, and quarterback Bart Weiss tallied on a four-yard scamper and tossed a 22-yard TD pass as opportunistic Air Force pounded turnover-plagued Colorado State 52-10 in Western Athletic Conference football action Saturday.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Falcons and upped their record to 3-2 overall and 1-2 in the WAC. The Rams fell to 1-3 and 1-1.

Colorado State committed seven turnovers and the Falcons converted four of them into points, with three Rams' miscues helping Air Force take a 24-0 halftime advantage.

Auburn (20).....29
Tennessee.....10

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Kyle Collins scored three touchdowns and 20th-ranked Auburn overcame five turnovers to down Tennessee 29-10 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Collins, who had 77 yards on 10 carries, scored on runs of 2, 19 and 8 yards as the defending SEC champions evened their overall record at 2-2 in the league opener for both teams.

Two of Auburn's turnovers set up Tennessee scores and another stopped a 64-yard Tiger drive at the Vols three.

Tennessee, 2-1-1, had a chance to cut into a 16-3 halftime deficit on Reggie McKenzie's pass interception at the Auburn 30, but Tony Robinson was thrown for a three-yard loss at the Tiger four on the final play of the half.

Collins' two-yard run capped a 39-yard drive in the first quarter and his 19-yarder came at the end of a 56-yard drive with 1:51 left in the third. He got his third score of the day with 6:59 remaining after Alvin Briggs had intercepted a pass at the Tennessee 23.

Auburn's other touchdown came in the second quarter on Reggie Ware's one-yard run and the Tigers got a safety in the same quarter when end Gerald Robinson caused Tennessee's Robinson to fumble out of the end zone for a 13-yard loss.

Fuad Reveiz kicked a 40-yard field goal for the Vols in the second quarter and Robinson hurled a 14-yard touchdown pass to Joey Clinkscales in the third, cutting the Tiger lead to 16-10.

Cooney Begins Comeback With 4th-Round Knockout

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Gerry Cooney, saying "Larry Holmes does not really matter," began his long-awaited and often-doubted comeback Saturday with a smashing fourth-round knockout of Phil Brown.

Brown was knocked down three times in the fourth and the fight was stopped at 2:37 of a scheduled 10-rounder. A jubilant Cooney shouted, "Let the fans all over the world know I'm back."

When would he fight again?

"As soon as possible," he said.

"Of course, we have to see if he's OK first," said co-manager Mike Jones of the injury-plagued Cooney, "but we want another fight as soon as possible." Early November was the time mentioned by Jones.

It was Cooney's first fight since he was stopped in the 13th round by Holmes on June 11, 1982 in a bid for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title.

"Hey, that's in the past," Cooney said of his only loss. "I dodn't live in the past any more. I don't need Larry Holmes."

But most boxing observers feel the most attractive and biggest money match in the lethargic heavyweight division would be a rematch between the 28-year-old Cooney and unbeaten Holmes, who will be 35 on Nov. 3.

Cooney put the pressure on at the opening bell and kept it on, scoring well with left hooks to the head and with both hands to the body of Brown, his sparring parnter whose opposition was negligible.

"Coming into the fight I didn't know what rust was," said Cooney, "and now I do." But if his long layoff affected the 6-foot-7 power puncher's timing, Brown did little to upset it.

Cooney hurt Brown about midway through the fourth round with a tremendous left hook to the head and dropped him with a right to the side of the jaw. Brown got up in five and took a standing eight count from referee Bill McConkey.

Cooney came back with a hook, a right hand and another hook that dropped Brown in a sitting position on the ropes in his corner. McConkey began to count and Brown got up.

Then as Cooney moved in again, Brown landed a hard right to the jaw. But Cooney fired back with a right that dropped Brown to one knee. Brown jumped up but the fight was over.

Cooney who weighed 230, 4½ pounds more than he weighed in his 13-round loss to Holmes, kept the pressure on from the opening bell.

It was his first win since he knocked out Ken Norton in 54 seconds on May 11, 1981.

Cooney scored with a good jabs in the first round, while Brown got a good countering right to the head. Then in the second and third rounds, Cooney pounded the 6-3 Brown to the head and body with both hands.

At another point, Davis grumbled, "You'll never be nothing but a sparring partner if you keep this up."

Brown, of New Orleans, who was knocked down by Cooney when he sparred with him before the Norton fight three years ago is 22-1-2.

Cooney got $300,000 for his comeback fight against Brown, which had been postponed three times because of injuries to Cooney. Brown took home $100,000.

Tigers Set Club Mark, Top Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — The Detroit Tigers set a club record with their 104th victory Saturday sparked by Lance Parrish's two-run homer capping a five-run sixth inning in a 11-3 triumph over the New York Yankees.

The Detroit record for victories in a season was set by the 1968 World Champions, who posted a 103-59 mark.

Juan Berenguer allowed one run on two hits over six innings, walking six and striking out one, in raising his record to 11-10. Roger Mason earned his first save in relief.

New York's Dave Winfield increased his lead over teammate Don Mattingly in the American League batting race by going 1-for-4 and a walk for a .341 average. Mattingly dropped to .339 after going 0-for-3 with a walk and a sacrifice fly.

With the score tied 1-1, Marty Castillo opened Detroit's sixth inning by singling off Ron Guidry, 10-11. After Scott Earl sacrificed and Doug Baker struck out, Rusty Kuntz doubled in Castillo and scored on Barbaro Garbey's single, Garbey taking second on the throw.

Larry Herndon, who had belted a solo homer in the fifth inning for his seventh homer this season, drilled an RBI single before Parrish unloaded his 33rd home run of the year into the left field seats.

New York scored its run in the third inning when Scott Bradley singled, Winfield walked, Don Baylor was hit by a pitch and Mike Pagliarulo walked to force in Bradley. It was the 23rd time Baylor was hit this season, leaving him one short of the major league record.

Howard Johnson stroked a pinch-double scoring three runs and Dwight Lowry belted a two-run homer as the Tigers added five runs in the ninth.

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Boddicker scattered 12 hits and became the American League's first 20-game winner Saturday as the Baltimore Orioles snapped a four game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Boddicker struck out one and didn't walk a batter in struggling to the victory. The right-hander has lost 11 games.

The Orioles combined six hits and five walks for three runs off Boston starter Bruce Hurst, 12-12, in the first five innings. They added two more runs off reliever John Henry Johnson.

Ron Jackson led Baltimore's 13-hit attack with two doubles and a single and two RBI. Mike Young and John Shelby had two hits a piece.

Boston's Wade Boggs had two singles for his 200 and 201st hits of the season and became only the third Red Sox to reach 200 hits in two or more seasons. He had 210 in 1983.

Cal Ripken doubled home a run after Young was hit by a pitch in the first inning. The Orioles made it 2-0 in the second on an RBI double by Shelby but Boston tied the score on Marty Barrett's RBI single and Mike Easler's run-scoring single in the third.

Jackson doubled off the left field wall putting Baltimore ahead to stay. Jackson and Benny Ayala each singled across a run in the seventh. After the Red Sox scored a run in the seventh on Dwight Evans' sacrifice fly, the Orioles added an insurance run on Jim Dwyer's bases loaded ground out off Charlie Mitchell.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fred Manrique singled home the tie-breaking run in the top of the ninth inning as the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 Saturday.

With one out and the Blue Jays trailing 4-3 in the ninth, Cliff Johnson doubled, his fourth hit of the game, and Jamie Cocanower, 8-16, came in for reliever Rick Waits. After walking pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks, Willie Upshaw grounded into a fielder's choice to send pinch-runner Mitch Webster to third and pinch-hitter Ernie Whitt singled to left to score Webster.

Cocanower walked pinch-hitter Rick Leach and Manrique followed with a single off the glove of thrid baseman Willie Lozado to score Upshaw with the go-ahead run.

Dave Stieb, 16-8, picked up his 11th complete game of the season.

Robin Yount's 16th homer of the season and fourth hit of the day gave the Brewers a 4-3 lead.

The Blue Jays had taken a 3-0 lead in the fourth inning off Bob McClure. Johnson opened with his 16th homer of the season, a towering drive to left off McClure.

Jesse Barfield then walk and went to second on Upshaw's sacrifice bunt. After Buck Martinez flied out, Garth Iorg doubled to score Barfield and Alfredo Griffin followed with a run-scoring single to center.

The Brewers scored one run their half of the fourth when Yount scored from third on Bobby Clark's ground out down the first-base line.

Milwaukee tied the game 3-3 in the sixth on Roy Howell's two-run triple to the right field corner.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Chris Codiroli pitched a seven-hitter and Carney Lansford hit two doubles to lead the Oakland A's past the Kansas City Royals 6-2 Saturday.

Steve Balboni hit his 28th homer of the year to lead off the fifth, the second highest total in Royals' history. Codiroli, 6-4, walked none and struck out three.

Lansford drove in the A's first run off Brett Saberhagen, 10-11, with a first-inning sacrifice fly after Rickey Henderson led off with a walk and stole second and third. Mickey Tettleton tripled and scored on Donnie Hill's single to give Oakland a 2-0 lead in the second.

Henderson drew a one-out walk, advanced to third on Lansford's second double of the game, and scored on Dwayne Murphy's sacrifice fly for a 3-1 A's lead in the bottom of the fifth.

Tony Phillips' two-run double with two out in the sixth capped the A's scoring.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pinch-hitter Carmen Castillo drew a bases loaded walk to snap a seventh-inning tie and pinch-hitter Chris Bando followed with a two-run single as the Cleveland Indians gained their fifth consecutive victory, a 6-4 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

Minnesota, losers of their last five games, were eliminated from the American League West division pennant race Friday night.

Julio Franco blooped a one out single with one out in the Indians' seventh against John Butcher, 13-7. Joe Carter singled Franco to third and took second on the throw to third. Reliever Pete Filson came on to intentionally walk Andre Thornton before walking Castillo on a 3-2 count and yielding Bando's two run ground single.

Neal Heaton, 12-15, picked up the victory. The left-hander yielded three runs in the first inning, all unearned, and three hits over seven innings before Earnie Camacho finished to record a Cleveland record 22nd save.

Fischlin drove in Cleveland's first run with a ground out and Franco followed two batters later with an RBI single, before the Indians tied the game 3-3 in the fourth on Pat Tabler's RBI double.

Davis, Sandberg Lift Cubs By St. Louis

CHICAGO (AP) — Jody Davis drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Ryne Sandberg collected four hits to give him 200 on the season Saturday, leading the National League East champion Chicago Cubs to a 9-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dennis Eckersley, 10-8, allowed five hits and one run in the five innings. Davis drove in two runs to cap a four-run first inning off Danny Cox, 9-11, and he also singled in a run in the sixth.

Sandberg had three singles and a double for the Cubs. He still needs one home run and a triple to reach 200 hits and 20 or more doubles, triples, homers and stolen bases in one season.

Willie McGee had three hits for the Cardinals. McGee singled and scored in the first and also singled and drove in two runs in a three-run seventh at the expense of reliever Reggie Patterson.

The Cubs added a pair in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Thad Bosley and Dan Rohn and two in the eighth on Bosley's run-scoring triple and an RBI single by Sandberg.

Gamble Fails, Rose Falls To Nash

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RED OAK — Coach Chip Williams weighed the odds, rolled the dice and came up short last night in a winner-take-all gamble with 38 seconds left last night, as he and his Rose High School Rampants tempted Lady Luck just one time too many.

Rose, after scoring its only touchdown of the game with 38 seconds remaining to pull within 7-6, went for two points and an outright victory — and lost when Battle Emory's pass to fullback Monty Jackson was batted away.

Under North Carolina High School Athletic Association rules, Williams could have elected to go for the tie, with a Brian Bridges kick, and then hope to pull out a victory in overtime if the kick were successful.

But, the first-year Rampant coach felt that the odds were stacked against the Rampants in an overtime situation.

"(Northern Nash was) unorganized (on the play)," Williams said afterwards. "They had a better rushing game and I felt that the advantages would be theirs in the overtime. We just hadn't run the ball well."

In an overtime situation, the ball is placed on the ten yard line, first and goal, and each team is given the opportunity to score within those four downs. If, after both complete their series the score is still tied, play continues until one prevails after both have equal opportunity.

"I guess if I had to do it again, I would kick it. But I still think that it was the thing to do," Williams said. "Things were going our way then, and I have to say that I'm proud of my kids. We're not through yet."

The Rampants, battling against adversity both on and off the field, could have easily been run out of the stadium Friday night. With both their top two running backs, Anthony Cobb and Tom Moore, sidelined with injuries, Rose had to put together a make-shift backfield during the week. And then, Ervin Best, who had been slated to start in Cobb's place at backfield, was benched for disciplinary reasons by Williams.

Then, in the third period, William Ward, who doubles at fullback and linebacker, suffered a knee injury and was also out of action.

It was a time when the Rampants could have folded up, but they didn't, fighting back all night.

Terrible field position made the first quarter plus all Northern Nash's. Twice the Rampant defense hurled them back on scoring opportunities, finally yielding on the third Knight penetration. To the defense's credit, it was on the field for all but four plays in the first quarter, but still made those final yards to the end zone expensive.

Northern took the opening kickoff and drove steadily down the field. Quarterback Sam Vines made the biggest gain along the way, ripping off 15 yards on a keeper for a first and goal at the four. But after one play netted nothing, Anthony Marshman slipped down for a three-yard loss on second down. Vines threw incomplete on third and a 24-yard field goal by Marshman was well wide and short.

Rose, unable to move, found itself in trouble when Emory saw the snap sail over his head as he waited to punt. Emory chased it down and kicked out of the end zone, but the ball went only to the 24, where Northern took over.

A series of penalties against both clubs finally pushed it all the way back to the 44, from where Northern faced first and 30. Vines then connected with Gerald Sumler who pulled in a 33-yard pass at the eight lying flat on his back after Tyrone Jones had batted the ball in an attempt to break up the pass.

But again the defense held, throwing Northern for three straight losses of four, one and 14 yards, the last a sack of Vines by Churchill Thomas.

Another short punt, however, gave Northern the ball back at the Rose 38 early in the second period. Reggie Ricks ripped off ten yards on first down, then gained 18 on third and six, putting the ball on the six. Three plays later, he bulled into the end zone from a yard away and Marshman's kick made it 7-0 with 7:56 to play in the half.

Rose made its only threat of the half after that, driving from its own 26 to the Northern 21, helped along by two 15 yard and two five yard penalties against the Knights. But on third and five at the 16, Ward fumbled and Northern recovered to end the drive.

Rose got it back after Tyrone Smith recovered a fumble at the Northern 41, but a interception ended that drive with 30 seconds left in the half after Rose reached the 24.

The Rampants got good field position when Northern's kicker nearly missed the ball on the second half kickoff and booted it only to his own 47. But the Rampants got no first down and kicked away. They got it back on a punt at the Nash 44, but again failed to gain a first down.

Darryl Perkins gave Rose good field position again at the 38, recovering a Nash rumble, but Emory was intercepted by Anthony Murray who retured it 14 yards to the Knight 43.

Late in the quarter, Rose got it on its own 25 and drove downfield for a first down at the Nash 49, but again failed to move it further.

With 5:21 left in the contest, Rose took over on its own 20 after a Nash punt, and finally got off a sustained drive that led to the score.

Rose got a first down at its own 46 after a pass interference call, then faced fourth and four at the Nash 48, from there Jackson tossed a flea-flicker pass to Emory that went for 21 yards to the Nash 27.

Then, from the 27 on fourth and ten, Emory hit Dwight Smith for 18 and a first down at the nine.

Again, it came down to fourth and goal from the seven, and Smith again got the call, pulling in Emory's pass for the touchdown in the corner of the end zone with 38 seconds left.

That set up the abortive PAT try and Northern was able to run out the clock then Rose just failed to recover the on-side kick attempt.

Rose's lack of offensive punch was evident in that the Rampants collected only 67 yards on 27 rushes and hit on nine of 24 passes for 90 yards. Northern, effective at times, rushed 43 times for 144 yards, and hit on three of seven passes for 53 yards.

For Rose, it was the first loss of the season, and leaves them at 2-1-1 overall and 0-1 in the league. Northern climbs to 3-1 overall and 1-0 in league play.

"There's still a lot of football to play and we're not dead yet," Williams said. "We've got a long way to go."

Greene Central Crushes Panthers

SNOW HILL — Jerome Flowers rushed for 79 yards with a pair of touchdowns and blocked two punts to lead Greene Central to a 48-0 thrashing of North Pitt Friday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school football action.

Charles Artis added 76 yards rushing and caught a 32-yard touchdown pass from Steve Harrison.

But it was the defense which aided the Rams, as Greene Central blocked four North Pitt punts. Terrell Strong led the Ram defense with nine tackles and four assists, while Flowers added eight tackles and Steve Ward seven.

Kenneth Grantham blocked a punt in the opening period to set up the Rams' first touchdown. Quarterback Kenneth Warren ran the final yard to give Greene Central the only points it needed.

Strong's first punt block opened a 41-yard drive, as Flowers sprinted 21 yards for the touchdown and a 12-0 Greene Central advantage.

The third blocked punt gave the Rams the ball on the 19, and Warren rushed 14 yards to the end zone for the TD. Warren passed to Patrick Moye for the point after conversion putting the Rams ahead 20-0.

Moye later caught a seven-yard pass from Warren to set the halftime margin at 26-0.

Flowers added a 45-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, and Andre Quinerly kicked the extra point.

Reserve quarterback Steve Harrison connected with Artis for a 32-yard touchdown for a 40-0 edge, then threw to Steve Wells for the final Greene Central touchdown.

The Rams picked up two more points when the North Pitt punter ran out of the end zone for a safety.

Greene Central, now 2-3 overall and 1-0 in the conference, hosts C.B. Aycock next Friday. North Pitt, 0-4 overall and 0-1 in the league, entertains Southern Nash Friday.

Firebirds Shock Chargers, 14-7

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Mike Jones rushed for 110 yards and two touchdowns to lead Southern Nash to a 14-7 victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday in the Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference football opener for both schools.

Jones had a pair of three-yard runs, one in the second quarter and another in the fourth, to lead the Firebirds to their second victory of the season — the other win was over 2-A Bunn. The Chargers slipped to 3-1 with the loss.

Eric Mitchell, a junior flanker, had ran six times for 72 yards as the Firebirds rolled up 205 yards rushing. Quarterback Jeff Morgan completed just two out of 10 attempts but netted 71 yards with those.

The Charger defense spent most of the night on the field, as the Ayden-Grifton offense managed just 53 yards rushing and 59 passing despite quarterback Danny West's six completions on 12 attempts.

"We really didn't play bad overall," Ayden-Grifton Coach Dwight Tart said. "Our offense didn't get a chance with the football. We expected them to show a 50 front, and they stayed in a 60 most of the night.

"Our defense played a respectable football game to have played four quarters on the field.

"I think the (wet) field aided them because we couldn't use our speed. We don't have a lot of size, and we couldn't hold our blocks long. We can't expect to fight it out in the trenches."

The Charger defense shut down Southern Nash on its first possession, then the Ayden-Grifton offense utilized a pair of Firebird penalties to take an early lead.

Ayden-Grifton punted on fourth and three at the Southern Nash 43, but a 15-yard penalty gave the Chargers a first down at the 29. After an eight-yard pass to Mike Burnham, the Chargers again passed on fourth and one at the 20 with a pass interference penalty moving the ball to the Southern Nash 10.

The Firebirds recovered a fumble by Harris on the Charger 30, then drove to the five yard line before Ayden-Grifton's defense held off Southern Nash to force the turnover on downs.

But after three plays on offense, Gene Johnson's punt was blocked out of the end zone with 4:15 till halftime to trim the margin to 7-2.

Jones returned Johnson's free kick to the Charger 45, but the Ayden-Grifton defense again held the Firebirds to fourth and six. Southern Nash lined up in punt formation but snapped the ball to Greg Jones, who pitched it back to Morgan for a seven-yard gain to the Charger 34. A reverse by Mitchell for 13 yards along with 11 yards rushing by Jones moved the ball to the A-G three, and Jones bolted the final distance with three seconds left in the half for an 8-7 Southern Nash edge.

The Firebirds drove to the Charger 30 yard line on their first possession of the third quarter before turning the ball over on downs. But on first down, West lofted a pass over the middle into the hands of Morgan at the 41 yard line.

The Charger defense managed to hold the Firebirds out of the end zone on that series, but a second-down fumble by Burnham at quarterback with 8:46 left in the game gave Southern Nash the ball on the Ayden-Grifton 39.

Ayden-Grifton didn't give up, as the Chargers drove to the Southern Nash 10 before Milton Battle intercepted a pass over the middle to thwart the rally with 35 seconds remaining.

"We took the kickoff and marched all the way down," Tart said. "Kelvin had the corner and slipped on one play; we just had a lot of things go wrong.

"I felt we had to throw in that situation (third and 10 at the Firebird 10), and we had the play. Danny just threw it a little short, and that was it.

"I think (Southern Nash) was hungry for a victory; I know I'd be pumping them up if I was the coach. We scored early, but it was because they let us score."

Bertie Eases Past Williamston

WINDSOR — Williamston High School put up a tough defense, but could generate no offense as hosting Bertie Senior gained a 12-0 Northeastern Conference football win Friday night.

The Falcons held Williamston to minus 19 yards rushing and 45 passing for a net of just 26 yards in total offense, while collecting 228 yards of their own. But the Tigers played good defense, keeping the Falcons scoreless throughout the first half and having a chance to win right up until the final two minutes of the contest.

Andrew Ryan finally put Bertie on the scoreboard in the third quarter, scoring on a seven yard run with 8:57 left in the period for a 6-0 lead. Ryan also scored the other Bertie talley, a three-yarder with just 1:46 left to play.

Williamston foiled a third quarter field goal attempt when Mike Leggett broke through the line to block the kick. Williamston also had a chance to get back in the game when it reached the seven of the Falcons. But a bad pitch on a sweep saw the ball tumble back to the 34 yard line before it was finally recovered, killing the drive.

Kelvin Hayes threw for 105 yards for Bertie, hitting Jeff Veale five times for 81 of those. Veale also had 11 carries for 61 yards.

The loss drops Williamston to 0-5 overall and 0-3 in the league.

By DOUG JOHNSON
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — The West Craven Eagles extended their winning streak to five straight as they defeated the Farmville Central Jaguars, 28-16, Friday night.

Farmville, coming off a 16-0 win over D.H. Conley last week, was looking for its third win in four starts, but it was not to be.

From the outset, both teams played well. Farmville took the opening kickoff and drove down to the Eagles' 18 yard line before being stopped on a fourth and four attempt.

The Eagles promptly answered with a 77-yard hookup from Randy Elks to running back Jessie Campbell on the Eagle's first play from scrimmage, resulting in the first score of the night. The duo proved to be the Jaguar secondary's worst nightmare, connecting three times for 147 yards — two of those on crucial third and long situations.

With both the ground game and the passing game on track, it was surprising that the Jaguars could not find their way into the endzone. Their first score came on a fluke defensive play when Jackie Hardy stripped the ball from an Eagle back and returned it to the 13 yard line, setting up the Jaguars' first touchdown. Jeff Vail got the score later on a one-yard plunge.

But it was not enough to worry the high flying Eagles, who leaped to a three touchdown lead on one and seven yard runs by Paul Moore and Mickey Rasberry, respectively.

They soon added another on a two-yard sprint by Campbell to take a 28-8 lead with 3:49 remaining in the game.

Edward Davis added another touchdown for Farmville with a minute remaining, but it was incidental at that point. The Eagles took home the win, while Farmville dropped to 2-2.

Perhaps more serious to the Jaguars than the non-conference defeat was an injury to linebacker and defensive leader Bill Blount, however, Saturday morning reports were that the injury was not serious, though.

Farmville head coach Dixon Sauls said his secondary as the main weakness. "Our pass defense was poor tonight," he said. "We gave up the big play several times, and that gave them a lot of momentum. But I think the team showed a lot of character by not giving up when we were down. They were mentally and physically worn down at the end, but they never quit."

Even in the loss, there were a few bright spots. Vail ran for 92 yards and Jerome Daniels finished the game with 13 tackles.

The Jaguars travel to SouthWest Edgecombe to battle the unbeaten Cougars next Friday night.

Friendship took a 3-0 lead in the first half of the contest. Doug Creech started the scoring at the 4:13 mark, assisted by Peterson. Peterson then added the next three goals, at 9:15 and 12:17 in the half, and again at the 18:00 mark in the second half.

Marshall Cain added the fifth goal on an assist by Scarborough at 24:00, and scored an unassisted goal with 27:00 to go. Scarborough then closed out the scoring with goals at 33, 37 and 38 minutes.

"We played an average game, but they're better than an average team," Knight coach Dale Thatcher said. "When you play then you've got to be at the top of your game."

Johnson Helps Wake Defense

Special To The Reflector

WINSTON-SALEM — Three years ago, Donald Johnson was almost ready to follow the uncertain path of a walk-on athlete at North Carolina State, where he hoped simply to make the football team.

Now, the former Rose High standout finds himself as a key member of the squad at Wake Forest, playing strong safety for a Deacon defensive unit that is ranked third in the nation in pass defense and fifth nationally overall going into Saturday's games.

Donald Johnson

The 6-1, 179-pound Johnson is in his second year as a starter at Wake Forest, the lone ACC school that decided to take a chance on him in the summer of 1981.

"I has always wanted to try and play football in the ACC," Johnson says. "If I hadn't received a scholarship to Wake, I probably would have tried to make the team at State or somewhere else.

"East Carolina had made me an offer, but I felt like I needed to get away from home, so when I had the opportunity to go to Wake Forest, I jumped at it."

Johnson actually earned his scholarship in the eyes of the Demon Deacon coaches at that summer's East-West All-Star Game in Greensboro, where he started both at split end and outside linebacker.

He entered Wake as part of the first freshman class under current head coach Al Groh, who had taken over the Deacon program that march — too late to mount a full-force recruiting effort that year. A scholarship was thus available during the summer, a rare occurrence in most years, and now Groh is happy he had a spot for the ambitious Johnson.

"Donald worked hard during his first two years in our program without much playing time," Groh says. "The past two seasons, he has progressed greatly and is now playing some outstanding football."

In three games in the 1984 campaign, Johnson ranks second on the Deacon club in tackles with 30 (20 unassisted). He has also made two stops behind the line of scrimmage in his role as the Wake Forest "rover" back.

Last year, he accumulated 73 tackles and recovered three fumbles as a fulltime regular — his first year at the strong safety slot.

"Moving from cornerback to rover was a definite turning point in my career," Johnson says. "I was very happy to make the switch because it allowed me to play closer to the line of scrimmage and be involved in more plays.

"I had played an outside linebacker in high school and felt I had the ability to play the new position. I just had to get a lot stronger and gain some more weight (about ten pounds). It's a more physical position, but I enjoy that more."

Johnson's development is in some ways an individual example that typifies the construction of a Wake Forest defense which has shown remarkable improvement under Groh.

The Deacons have allowed fewer than 300 yards in total offense to each of their first three opponents this fall, a feat they could accomplish only once all of last season, and are two points away from a perfect start on the 1984 schecule (a 21-20 loss to Virginia Tech the only blemish).

"Our defense has built up a lot of confidence and pride this season," Johnson said. "Our defensive line has improved a lot, but everyone is more experienced, and we have more talent all the way around.

"Of course, I'm particularly happy to be a part of this secondary at Wake. We are striving to be the best in the ACC, which is something I feel we can be this year."

Oden Paces Pack To 16-7 Victory

EDENTON — Washington's Steve Oden scored a touchdown and kicked a field goal to help lift the Pam Pack to a 16-7 Northeastern Conference football victory over Edenton Friday night.

Edenton rallied in the second quarter, scoring on a 42-yard pass from John Downum to Patrick Becker. Tulley Ryan booted the PAT to give the Aces a temporary 7-6 lead.

But the Pack came back and Oden booted a 24 yard field goal with 35 seconds left in the half to make it 9-7.

Washington added one more score in the final quarter as George Mizelle scored from five yards out to complete the score. Oden added the PAT for the final margin.

Neither team threatened again during the night.

Plymouth Rallies To Nip Roanoke

PLYMOUTH — Hosting Plymouth High School rallied after seeing Roanoke take the lead midway through the final period to score the winning touchdown on the next series for a 13-12 Northeastern Conference football win.

The loss drops the Redskins to 1-4 overall and 0-3 in Northeastern play.

Roanoke came back several series later to score on a one-yard plunge by Corey Baker, but the two-point try failed, leaving Plymouth up, 7-6, at intermission.

In the third period, Roanoke blew an outstanding chance to score after recovering a fumble at the Plymouth nine. But the Viking defense held them out on that try.

In the final quarter, Roanoke finally scored on a five-yard run by Baker to take the lead, 12-7. But Plymouth rallied on the series following the kickoff, driving in with Cecil Gibbs getting the score with about six minutes left.

Neither team offered another threat in the contest.

Kansas City Takes Title

By The Associated Press

When they were biting the dust back at the All-Star break, not many of the Kansas City Royals believed they would be drinking champagne in September.

"When you're 11 games under .500 at the All-Star break, you don't have faith in much of anything," second baseman Frank White said after Friday night's division-winning 6-5 victory over Oakland.

"We've only been in the pennant race for three weeks, and every game was a big one. Before that, we were winning but we didn't realize how much."

The Royals' ascension to their fifth American League West title in nine years was made possible when second-place Minnesota blew a 10-run lead and lost 11-10 to Cleveland.

In the AL's other games, it was Detroit 4, New York 2 in 12 innings; Boston 5, Baltimore 4; Texas 4, California 1; Milwaukee 4, Toronto 3 in 11 innings and Seattle 7, Chicago 1.

Steve Balboni, the hottest hitter in Kansas City's September title drive, sent the Royals ahead with a fourth-inning single. It was his sixth game-winning RBI this month and his third this week.

Dan Quisenberry survived two home runs in the final three innings to earn his 44th save, one short of the major league record he established last season and which was tied this year by Bruce Sutter of St. Louis. He relieved Charlie Leibrandt, 11-7, who allowed five hits and two runs over the first six innings.

The Royals, who were deep in the division standings at midseason, won for the 10th time in their last 13 games and made their record 44-25 since July 18.

"We're not a great club, but we're a good, solid club, and we've proved we can win," Manager Dick Howser said. "The Detroit Tigers respect us. They know we've been a good club the last two and a half months."

Indians 11, Twins 10

Joe Carter hit two home runs and knocked in three runs and Brett Butler hit a bases-loaded single with one out in the ninth inning as Cleveland overcame an early 10-0 deficit to beat Minnesota.

"Life goes on," said Twins starter Frank Viola, who carried a three-hitter into the sixth inning before Cleveland erupted for seven runs to pull within 10-9. "This is a frustrating time in the season to do this, but what's done is done. I hope in the pennant race next year, I'll be able to win one and not blow one."

The loss was the fourth straight for the Twins.

"I'm not an emotional guy," said Twins Manager Billy Gardner. "I've been in the game 39 years. These things happen. There won't be as much pressure next year, because they've been here."

Tigers 4, Yankees 2

Lou Whitaker's two-run homer in the 12th inning propelled Detroit over New York as the Tigers matched their club record for victories in a season with 103.

Whitaker's 13th homer this season followed a one-out walk to John Grubb and came on a 2-2 pitch from loser Joe Cowley, 9-2.

Reliever Doug Bair, 5-3, hurled four hitless innings for the victory as the Tigers raised their record to 103-57, matching the victory total of the 1968 World Series championship club that went 103-59.

Red Sox 5, Orioles 4

Rich Gedman's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning scored Mike Easler with the tie-breaking run as Boston clinched fourth place in the East.

Bob Stanley, 9-10, replaced starter Rich Gale with one out in the seventh for the victory. Reliever Nate Snell, 1-1, was the loser.

With one out in the eighth, Easler singled and raced to third on a single by Bill Buckner before coming home on Gedman's sacrifice fly. The Orioles had tied the score in the seventh a single by Jim Traber and Larry Sheet's first major league homer.

Rangers 4, Angels 1

Larry Parrish cracked a tie-breaking, two-run double in the seventh inning to lead Texas over California. Dave Stewart, 7-14, struck out five and walked four for the victory.

Texas snapped a 1-1 tie with three runs in the seventh off Jim Slaton, 7-10. With one out, Mickey Rivers doubled, and one out later Buddy Bell was walked intentionally. Parrish followed with his double, giving him 101 RBI for the season. It marked the first time that Parrish, who later scored on Pete O'Brien's single, has driven in 100 runs in his 10-year major-league career.

Brewers 4, Blue Jays 3

Ed Romero raced home on third baseman Kelly Gruber's throwing error in the 11th to lift Milwaukee over Toronto.

Romero opened the inning with a single off Ron Musselman, 0-2, and went to second on Willie Lozado's sacrifice bunt. Robin Yount then singled to third and Gruber's throw to first was wide to the right of first baseman Willie Upshaw, allowing Romero to score.

Ray Searage, 2-1, worked three innings for the victory.

Mariners 7, White Sox 1

Barry Bonnell and Dave Henderson each drove in three runs to lead Seattle past Chicago.

Bonnell's third-inning single gave Seattle a 1-0 lead and he added a two-run homer in the fifth. Henderson stroked a two-run single in the third and an RBI single in the seventh.

Mike Moore, 7-17, pitched into the sixth inning to pick up the victory. He struck out seven and walked five, allowing just four hits.

Friendship Tops GCA Volleyball

Frienship won the first game, 15-2 and followed that with a 15-11 win.

The Lady Knights drop to 1-6 with the loss, while Friendship is now 4-0.

Brewers Won't Rehire Coaches

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers pitching coach Pat Dobson said he was not suprised to be dismissed a day after the team fired Manager Rene Lachemann.

Brewers General Manager Harry Dalton announced Friday that the contracts of pitching coach Pat Dobson and first base coach Tom Trebelhorn would not be renewed for next season.

"Nothing really surprises me. It's baseball. They'll be making wholesale changes. Nobody is excluded really," Dobson said. "I'm thankful he (Dalton) told me now. It will give me a chance to put my name in the pot for another job."

Decisions on the remaining three Brewer coaches — third base coach Dave Garcia, bullpen coach Larry Haney and batting coach Frank Robinson — will be made somctime after the season ends Sunday, Dalton said.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, quoting anonymous sources, reported today that Haney would likely be retained for his ninth season and Robinson, hired Aug. 10, may also return. The newspaper said Garcia would serve as a scout next season.

Dobson, 42, joined the Brewers as a minor league pitching instructor in October 1981 and became a member of the regular coaching staff in 1982 when Cal McLish was sidelined with physical problems.

The pitching coach, who said he would seek another job in baseball, was called into Dalton's office about four hours before Friday's game with the Toronto Blue Jays.

"He (Dalton) said they were just making a change. Bamberger is his own pitching coach," Dobson said. "I'm sure they'll have a pitching coach, though."

Sutter, Andujar Add To Cards' Stats

By The Associated Press

With both division titles decided, there is little to do in the National League besides watch for individual achievements and wait for the playoffs.

Bruce Sutter and Joaquin Andujar both padded their impressive stats for St. Louis Friday as the Cardinals defeated the East Division champion Chicago Cubs 4-1 in 10 innings.

Sutter pitched the final inning of the 10-inning game, giving up one hit, to pick up his 45th save of the season, tying the major-league record set by Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City last season.

Andujar pitched the first nine innings, allowing two hits and one run, to become the first 20-game winner in the National League, raising his record to 20-14. Rick Sutcliffe is the only other 20-game winner in the major leagues, splitting his season with 16 victories for the Cubs and four for Cleveland in the American League.

"I'm real happy and proud of myself," said Andujar, who lost three other starts since winning his 19th game.

Elsewhere in the NL Friday, Montreal blanked New York 7-0, Houston tripped Cincinnati 6-3 in 10 innings, West champion San Diego beat Atlanta 4-2 and Los Angeles edged San Francisco 4-3. Pittsburgh at Philadelphia was rained out.

For Andujar, it was also the first 20-win season of his nine-year major league career, making him the second pitcher from the Dominican Republic to accomplish the feat. Juan Marichal is the other.

"I'm sure happy he got it," said Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog. "He hadn't won since Sept. 8."

"For (Andujar) to go out there and pitch that many innings (261.1) and get 20 wins is an outstanding achievement for a starting pitcher," said Sutter, who has succeeded on 45 of 52 save opportunities.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Leon Durham's homer, but St. Louis tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Art Howe's RBI single.

In the top of the 10th, Rich Bordi, 5-2, who earlier in the day was cut from Chicago's postseason roster by Manager Jim Frey, gave up a single to pinch-hitter Darrell Porter. Porter took second on a steal and moved to third when the throw from catcher Steve Lake went into center field because nobody covered the base.

Pinch-hitter Steve Braun, who leads the majors in career pinch hits among active players with 101, doubled Porter home for the game-winning run. Willie McGee doubled in Braun and scored on Ozzie Smith's single for the final St. Louis runs.

"It's an all-around bad day," Bordi said. "I just should have called in sick."

"Winning was not the priority," said Frey, who will send the Cubs against San Diego in the playoffs beginning Tuesday. "We wanted some guys to get in and do some things for us. We got Lake, (Tom) Veryzer and, most of all, got the bullpen in the game."

Padres 4, Braves 2

San Diego, with Manager Dick Williams in Chicago to scout the Cubs, prepped for the playoffs by using four pitchers in the victory over Atlanta.

The game was scorless until the sixth, when Tony Gwynn singled in a run for the Padres, and they added three more runs in the seventh on an RBI hit by Garry Templeton and a two-run single by Champ Summers.

Expos 7, Mets 0

Driessen gave the Expos the lead with his 15th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the second inning off Mets starter Calvin Schiraldi, 0-2.

Astros 6, Reds 3

Houston's Bill Dawley lost a one-run lead in the ninth on Duane Walker's game-tying homer, then got the victory in the 10th with the help of a Cincinnati error and Alan Ashby's two-run homer.

Terry Puhl scored the go-ahead run on catcher Brad Gulden's fielding error in the top of the 10th before Ashby connected for his third homer of the season.

Dodgers 4, Giants 3

Pedro Guerrero singled in two runs with two singles and also scored twice, including the game-winner, as Los Angeles rallied for two runs in the eighth inning to beat San Francisco.

R.J. Reynolds' pinch-single with two outs in the eighth scored Guerrero, who had tied the game with a single earlier in the inning. The rally made a winner of Bob Welch, 13-13.

Haywood's 118 Lifts Indians To Victory

CHOCOWINITY — William Haywood ran for 118 yards and two touchdowns despite missing the second half with an injury to lead Chocowinity to a 32-8 victory over Columbia Friday in Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference football.

Haywood dashed 40 yards with 5:19 left in the first quarter to put the Indians ahead 6-0, then added a 17-yard run with 10:20 left in the second quarter. Curtis Myers passed to Kevin Vick for the point-after conversion to put the Tribe ahead 14-0.

Ange TD Passes Lead Jamesville

JAMESVILLE — Richie Ange threw three touchdown passes, two of them to David Biggs, as Jamesville romped to a 32-0 Tobacco Belt Conference football victory over Creswell last night.

The Bullets, favored to win the title, humbled the defending champs, holding them to only 82 yards in total offense. "Our defense played exceptionally well," Coach Jerry Godley said. "We had good field position all night and were able to do some things we wanted to do because we were so wide open."

Ange hooked up with Biggs for the first touchdown of the game, in the opening quarter, from 11 yards out. Tracy Peele ran over the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead that was all the Bullets really needed.

Robbie Harris led a three-touchdown second period, scoring the first from 14 yards out. Peele added a two-yard scoring dive and Ange hit Terry Perry on a 46-yard touchdown aerial to wind up the first half at 26-0.

The final touchdown came in the third period as Biggs again was on the receiving end of an Ange pass, this one of two yards.

The victory boosts the Bullet record to 4-0 overall and 1-0 in league play. Jamesville travels to Bath on Friday for its next outing.

Westover Downs Fayetteville Byrd

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Running back Brian Bowden's 3-yard run with under four minutes left lifted unranked Fayetteville Westover to a 25-21 victory over No. 3 Fayetteville Byrd in high school football Friday night.

Meanwhile, tailback Tim Oakley gained 281 yards to surpass the 1,000-yard mark to key No. 6 Oxford Webb to a 60-0 victory by Harnett Central. Oakley, a 6-foot-3, 193-pound senior, has now rushed for 1,027 yards on 117 carries — an 8.8-yard average — in his first season at tailback.

Oakley scored on runs of 42, 14, 4 and 27 yards as Vance ran its record to 5-0.

Western Harnett has now been outscored 202-0 this season.

Byrd, 3-1, was one of five teams ranked in the 4-A division to lose Friday night. Shelby, ranked fourth in the 3-A class, was the only other ranked squad to lose, falling to No. 10 South Point 21-8.

Westover, 3-1, trailed 21-10 going into the final quarter, but quarterback Pat Grayson scored on a 3-yard run and Bowden ran for the two-point conversion to cut the lead to 21-18 with 8:22 left.

Defensive back Leo Barney then recovered a fumble by Pete Holloway, and it took only six plays for Westover to take the lead on Bowden's TD run with 3:41 left.

Westover, which had scored just 17 points in its first three games, is 3-1 after handing Byrd its first record season loss since 1982.

Byrd tailback Donnell Woolford, who had gained 541 yards in three outings, injured his thigh in the opening period and did not return.

In other games, fourth-ranked Morganton Freedom dropped a 13-8 decision to McDowell, No. 4 East Burke lost to Asheville 33-14, No. 7 West Mecklenburg was beaten by West Charlotte 28-7 and No. 9 Smithfield-Selma suffered a 17-15 loss at the hands of Raleigh Millbrook.

The state's three top-ranked teams all won. Greensboro Page, No. 1 in the 4-A class, blanked High Point Andrews 24-0, as quarterback Todd Ellis passed for 263 yards and two touchdowns while completing 18 of 26 passes.

Kannapolis, ranked No. 1 in the 3-A class, routed Sun Valley 56-6, while Southwest Guilford, tops in the combined 2-A and 1-A division, rolled by East Davidson 35-6.

Boyce Norris rushed for 139 yards to lift Asheville, 2-1-1, by East Burke, 3-1. With the score tied 14-14 in the second quarter, quarterback Tery Gahagan tossed a 29-yard touchdown pass to Vernon Charles with 38 seconds left in the half to give Asheville a 20-14 lead.

Asheville added two more scores in the final two minutes. Gahaghan threw a 24-yard TD pass to Reggie Robinson and Julian Smith added a 5-yard run with 57 seconds to go as Asheville gave Coach Gene Hammonds a victory in his coaching debut.

DH Among Ueberroth's Priorities

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baseball's incoming commissioner says he wants to ask the fans what they think about the designated hitter and other aspects of the sport, but will stay out of upcoming contract negotiations with the players' union.

Peter V. Ueberroth, who takes over as commissioner Monday, says other problems he will face include financial instability of some clubs, drug use by players, and encroachment of satellite-carried "superstations" into home-team telecasting areas.

After producing spectacularly successful Olympic Games for most of the globe, Ueberroth concedes that he inherits a national pastime that is somewhat troubled.

"I'm not taking over at a particularly good time," Ueberroth said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ueberroth, who as Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee president was credited with most of the popular and financial success of this summer's Games, takes over as commissioner from Bowie Kuhn, who backed Ueberroth as his successor after being voted out of office by major league owners.

One of his prime goals as commissioner, Ueberroth said, would be "the continuation and the growth of good feelings about baseball as a part of the fabric of our society."

Questions from the AP and answers from Ueberroth:

Q: Have you been taking a baseball crash course since you've had only a month and a half since the Olympics ended?

A: Before the Games, it was 16, 20 hours a day, so I didn't have time to think much about baseball. But since the Games, I've been working on it, mainly reading and talking to people — the owners, ballplayers, ex-ballplayers, managers, those that have time and I could catch.

Q: Do you feel prepared and eager to get started?

A: Two different questions. I'm eager to get started, I do not feel prepared.

Q: Baseball is facing some serious problems — the financial instability of many of its clubs, the upcoming player contract negotiations, the use of drugs, some outbreaks of on-the-field violence by players. What steps do you think are necessary to deal with each, and what will your role be in each instance?

A: I don't think baseball has the responsibility to make profits, but if it loses substantial amounts of money over a long-term period of time, it will hurt the game. So that has to stop. It can lose for a few years, but not beyond that. I hope to help, in an advisory role.

Labor negotiations will be handled by Lee MacPhail for the owners, the players' association for the players. I'm not going to get involved in that, basically, period. The reason is that both parties may put something on the table which is not in the best interest of baseball. If I'm an advocate for either one, I would not be in my proper position.

It's also possible that they both could agree to something that's not in the best interest of baseball, so that makes it difficult for the commissioner ... If they were both agreeing to something that was not in the best interest of baseball, I would talk to both.

Drug use is a growing problem in society and one that this whole nation, in fact the world, has to work together to try to put an end to drugs. As far as baseball is concerned, I think we have a responsibility to attack drugs, not attack baseball players. I don't think baseball's problem is as severe as some other sports, but it must rid itself of drugs completely. It's a difficult and ongoing task, but it's one that will be accomplished.

On-the-field violence will be curtailed; it can't be completely wiped out.

Q: Are there any other major problem areas that need immediate attention?

A: There are many problems which are day-to-day, like the problem of the starting times of (postseason) baseball games at Wrigley Field where the (Chicago) Cubs play. A substantial amount of ongoing problems.

Q: Baseball has an almost mythical tradition in America. Do you think the harsh realities of the strike, drugs and other negatives have seriously eroded that tradition?

A: No, but I think that's something as commissioner I'm going to care about, the continuation and the growth of good feelings about baseball as a part of the fabric of our society ... It is our national pastime.

Q: You've said you intend to give baseball fans more say in the game; in what specific ways?

A: Any decision that affects the playing of the game. Obviously the commissioner will get a lot of information from players, owners, managers, but I can't find any information in the offices as to what the fan thinks. So we're going to do some survey work with baseball fans. Polls can come within a few percentage points of guaranteeing accuracy. What does the fan think about the designated hitter?

If baseball fans thought 90 percent one way or the other, it would be interesting ... It would tell us something.

Q: Did the changes in the office the owners agreed to prior to your accepting the job greatly enhance the commissioner's strength?

Q: Would it not make it easier for you to make a decision unpopular with some of the owners?

A: No, because I'd make that anyway. I won't back away from a hard decision. It might help some future commissioner.

Q: Was Kuhn helpful to you when you were deciding whether to take the job?

A: Yes, he was very helpful. I've said it, and I believe it's true, that he wanted me to take the position. I think we have a close personal relationship growing out of the transition, out of our contact. I have great respect for him.

Q: Might you consult him?

A: Absolutely.

Q: Do you believe you will be more of a "players' commissioner" than others who have held the post?

A: I don't think the commissioner should have a label. He should act in the best interest of baseball. I think there will be people who report that I care very much about the people on the field playing, and some will report that I take an extra special interest in the fans. Both will be true. But I also don't want the owners to continue to lose money like they are now, and in a few cases, be fiscally irresponsible.

Q: You've said you intend to be less visible than Kuhn was ...

A: I would hope I can. Circumstances will dictate that, but I will try. The problem of the changeover kept the commissioner's role thrust into the public eye for a long time. It could not be avoided.

Q: Will the crest of success you're riding from the Olympics help you going into the new job?

A: I don't think so. It's unrelated. The Olympic Games were successful because of a lot of people making extraordinary efforts, and the country will enjoy that glow for a decade to come ... But baseball is a new role and I will have my successes and my failures in baseball. It's a different arena.

Q: Looking ahead, what about expansion, and what do you foresee as the television future of baseball?

A: I want to study baseball and television a lot more before I make any comments. Regarding expansion, I think there will be expansion. I would think it will be addressed in the next few years.

Q: Kuhn is a lawyer and you have a business background, and a lot of the owners are self-made businessmen. Do you think your background will be helpful in dealing with them?

A: A lot are lawyers, too. I noticed in the executive council meeting, Jerry Reinsdorf (Chicago White Sox), Ed Williams (Baltimore Orioles), Roy Eisenhardt (Oakland A's), are lawyers. Most of the lawyers in baseball are good businessmen, too. You'd have to go a long way to find three brighter people than those three I mentioned — bright in law, bright in business and successful with their teams.

Q: The commissioner's job would appear to be less kinetic than your post with the Olympic organizing committee, where you were making decisions non-stop. Will that be an adjustment for you?

A: It will be an adjustment, because I tend to be impatient. If something's not right, I want to fix it right now. In baseball, I might not be able to do that. On the other hand, I think there are a good number of problems that have not been addressed, knowing there's going to be a changeover. The desk will be stacked high with paper when I arrive.

Q: You've emphasized repeatedly that politics do not figure in your future. Why did you rule out politics?

A: I've never served politically. I've really done just three things in my life — built a business, the Olympics, baseball commissioner, and it's hard to focus on some other type of activity.

Q: Any thoughts you'd like to add?

A: I'd add to the problems you asked me about, the (television) superstations encroaching on the other team's market. I think that's a very serious problem. You can sit in a house here and watch the Cubs play or the Braves play and not watch the Dodgers or the Angels.

I'd also like to add that Bowie Kuhn served baseball very well for almost 16 years and he has shown great integrity. I'm glad the people have now recognized that.

The other thing I would say is that this year attendance dropped off more than a million, contract negotiations loom ahead ... I'm not taking over at a particularly good time.

Ram Thrower Tired Of Jokes

By The Associated Press

Jeff Kemp has heard all the jokes — about how the Los Angeles Rams have gone to a more conservative offense with a right wing formation.

Kemp, you see, in addition to being quarterback of the Rams since an injury to Vince Ferragamo, is the son of U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, a conservative Republican who already is being touted as a presidential candidate in 1988. The elder Kemp also had a moderately successful career as a National Football League and American Football League quarterback before turning to politics.

"When my father and I get together, he wants to talk football and I want to talk politics," Jeff Kemp said this week while preparing for Sunday's NFL game with the New York Giants. "But we generally agree on both subjects."

The two Kemps are only the second father-son quarterback combo in NFL history, following Jess and Jesse Freitas.

The younger Kemp, a former Dartmouth quarterback, made his first pro start a week ago when the Rams beat Cincinnati 24-14. He completed 13 of 23 passes for 205 yards, including a 52-yard touchdown to Olympic gold medalist Ron Brown.

"He played an absolutely great game," Rams Coach John Robinson said. "He was highly efficient and he loved playing. I don't know of any mistakes he made. I don't think anyone, outside of our group, thought he could come in and respond with that kind of performance."

Cincinnati visits Pittsburgh Monday night.

The only 4-0 teams are San Francisco, Miami and the Raiders.

Ferragamo, who is sidelined with a broken bone in his right hand, is expected back in about a month. But Kemp said he isn't thinking about the "quarterback controversy" that might occur if he keeps playing well.

"I'd have to say it's possible I could remain the starter after Vince comes back, but I'm not bothering to look four weeks down the road," Kemp said. "I'm just taking one game at a time and trying to do my best."

St. Louis will try to stop Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who is the league's top-rated passer and leads the NFL in touchdowns with 12. The Dolphins lead the league in scoring with the Marino-Mark Duper passing combination showing the way. The Cardinals rank No. 1 in the National Conference in total offense, but running back Ottis Anderson is questionable with an injury.

Both San Francisco and Atlanta have been piling up points this season — averaging 30.5 and 29.5 per game, respectively. The Falcons have won two straight with quarterback Steve Bartkowski and running back Gerald Riggs leading the attack.

National Trapshooting Day — The Fifth Annual National Trapshooting Day will be held Sunday, Oct. 7 at the Pitt County Wildlife Club. This exciting day at the trap club is sponsored by the 90,000-member Amateur Trapshooting Association and the Pitt County Wildlife Club. The Pitt County Wildlife Club is located eight miles west of Greenville off U.S. 43 near Falkland.

The club and the ATA are inviting the public to come out and try the friendly competition and the fellowship of trapshooting. People of all ages enjoy this safe, fun and challenging sport. There will also be other special events planned for members and guests.

The National Trapshooting Day program is designed t make the public more aware of the shooting facility close to home. Every participating club will have special National Trapshooting Day attendence pins available. The handicap champion will receive a grand American style trophy and an invitation to compete against all other National Trapshooting Day Champions at the Grand American to be held in Vandalia, Ohio in August 1985.

Deer Case A Surprise — Sometimes you get more than you bargained for. Two Brunswick County men learned this much to their chagrin recently when they were arrested by wildlife enforcement officers Milton McLean and Charles Haynesfor firelighting two doe deer.

When master officer McLean skinned and gutted the deer looking for projectiles, he found three fetuses in the does. He preserved them in formaldehyde and presented them as evidence in court. In addition to being found guilty of all charges, the men were assessed wildlife replacement costs for five deer — two adults and the three unborn fetuses. Total cost of replacement alone was $1,400 — or $280 per animal.

"This is the first time that wildlife replacement costs have been assessed for pregnant animals," said Colonel Winfield Rhyne, chief of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Enforcement. "When you add replacement costs to fines and confiscation of equipment, poachers can pay a stiff price for their fines. We're glad to see that the courts are treating wildlife violations seriously."

Early Duck Season — Thursday Oct. 4 marks the openig of the three-day early duck season in North Carolina. The season is open through sunset Oct. 6. Bag limit is five per day with the exception of a bonus on green-wing and blue-wing teal, where two additional teal are allowed during this season. Also, five woodducks may be taken during this season. The season on black ducks is closed until Dec. 27.

Fishing Report — The saying that fishing improves after a storm continues to be true on the coast. Spot, grey trout, bluefish and flounder have been biting on the piers from Bogue Inlet to Nags Head. King mackeral seem to be everywhere.

Kenny Heverly of the Island Harbor Marina at Emerald Isle called Thursday morning and said kings were being caught right on the beach. Trolling live menhaden seemed to be the favored method. Catches of 100-150 pounds per boat were common. King mackeral were also being caught around Cape Lookout.

Inland fishing had also improved and will continue to improve with the cool weather. Big white perch are biting in the Pamlico River using freshwater shrimp for bait. A few striped bass have also been caught using half ounce white butterbeans.

Largemouth bass have started biting in the tributaries of the Pamlico. Try a white or yellow beetlespin. If they don't hit those two colors, switch to a #2 Mepp's Minnow. If they refuse that offering, then call it a day.

Local Notes — Bobby Main of Greenville had a big surprise while fishing for king mackeral recently. Floatfishing off the Emerald Isle Fishing Pier, Main hooked and landed a 701-pound tarpon after a tough 35 minute battle. The tarpon jumped numerous times and darted among the pilings before finally coming to the gaff. Main received a North Carolina Saltwater Tournament Citation for his catch.

Gastineau Faces Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Jets All-Pro Mark Gastineau and teammate Ken O'Brien, their criminal trial for an alleged assault in the Studio 54 disco completed, now face a $500,000 suit filed by a New Jersey man stemming from the same incident.

Charles McGinley, 29, of Union City, charged in his state Supreme Court suit Friday that the two football players "violently, dangerously and maliciously" punched and kicked him all over his body in the Manhattan nightspot early Sept. 30, 1983.

O'Brien, 23, a reserve quarterback, was acquitted of several misdemeanor counts stemming from the brawl. Gastineau, 27, a defensive end who leads the American Football Conference in sacks, was convicted of third-degree assault on John Benton, 22, a Studio 54 employee who lives in Union City.

Gastineau was not convicted of striking McGinley. He will be sentenced by Judge Alan Marrus on the assault conviction on Nov. 20.

The 5-foot-6, 160-pound McGinley charged he was at a crowded bar trying to get a drink around 2:15 a.m. when the 6-foot-5, 275-pound Gastineau and his 6-foot-4, 210-pound teammate attacked him.

McGinley charged in court papers that he suffered "serious bodily harm requiring medical treatment" and grievous mental anguish requiring psychiatric treatment."

Racquetball Tourney Set

The Greenville Athletic Club will hold the Down East Fall Racquetball Classic on October 12-14 at the club.

A number of top amateur racquetball players from the Southeast, as well as top local players are expected to participate. Tournament play begins on Friday, October 12, at 4 p.m. and will continue through Saturday with the finals on Sunday afternoon.

Deficit Problem Still Unsolved

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the government begins a new fiscal year on Monday, huge deficits continue to loom as an unsolved problem.

One thing already is sure about the next 12 months, however. By this time in 1985, the government will have spent more than it took in for a 16th consecutive year.

The problem has not disappeared, even with agreement that sustained doses of big deficits are bad. The elusive factor has been reaching an accord on how to mop up the red ink.

This past week, the National Association of Business Economists said large federal deficits and high interest rates could bring on another recession either in late 1985 or early 1986. But the group was divided on whether taxes should be raised.

Warnings about the ills associated with deficits also came from allies.

Financial officials attending a meeting of the International Monetary Fund warned this past week that unless U.S. budget deficits are reduced, a worldwide economic recovery will stall.

Meanwhile, a spending plan for the new fiscal year, that was supposed to be in place in May, was still pending in Congress as the old fiscal year wound down. The $932 billion budget blueprint still awaiting House approval projects a deficit of $181 billion in the next 12 months.

There is even lack of agreement on estimating the deficit.

The Reagan administration says it expects the deficit for the new fiscal year will be $167 billion, while the Congressional Budget Office puts it at $178 billion. Looking forward five years, the differences are even greater, with the administration projecting a shortfall of $124 billion in fiscal year 1989 and the CBO projecting a deficit of $263 billion.

Congress also is still trying to piece together a $149 billion deficit-reducing "down payment" for the next three years, a combination of tax increases and spending reductions.

Dealing with the deficit also is an issue in the presidential campaign.

Democratic challenger Walter Mondale says cutting the deficit cannot be accomplished without raising taxes, and he has offered a plan to reduce the shortfall by two-thirds over four years.

Brisk Trading On Commodity Exchange

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Cocoa futures prices plummeted Friday in heavy trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

While analysts said they were uncertain what developments may have precipitated such a decline, they noted a lack of buying from manufacturers who process cocoa beans, indicating that the new crop may be sufficient to meet demand.

Contributing to the decline was the value of the U.S. dollar against the British pound, which prompted traders to sell cocoa in New York and buy it in London to take advantage of the disparity in the value of the currencies.

Technical signals such as trends on price charts also prompted selling, said Pamela Rockley, a cocoa analyst in New York with Pershing Futures.

Cocoa has been particularly volatile in the past two months. The December contract had been recovering since it bottomed at $1,972 a metric ton on Aug. 1. Considerable damage was done last year by bush fires and severe dry winds, but analysts are uncertain how the new crop will fare.

But they said it appeared that major trade houses weren't interested in buying at current prices.

Cocoa settled $88 to $163 lower with the contract for delivery in December at $2,174 a metric ton, which is 2,204.6 pounds.

Prices were under pressure from several factors, said Richard Loewy, chief grain and oilseed analyst in New York with Prudential Bache Securities.

Loewy noted that soybean oil prices led a rally in the soybean complex Thursday amid rumors of buying by several foreign nations. But the reports were largely unfounded and prices retreated Friday.

The U.S. Census Department also reported its August export figures, which disclosed sharp declines from year ago levels for exports of soybeans, soybean oil and soybean meal, Loewy said, further depressing prices.

A report that the Chinese would curtail wheat purchases from the United States because of the disagreement over the U.S. textile import restrictions was unsettling in the wheat pit, even though the report was unsubstantiated, Loewy said.

The weakness of foreign currencies in trading against the U.S. dollar, along with the forecast for excellent harvesting whether gave further encouragement to sellers.

Wheat settled 1 cent lower to ½ cent higher with the contract for delivery in December at $3.47 a bushel; corn was unchanged to 2½ cents.

Bad Sign: Too Many Bullish Advisers

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ask a bearish Wall Streeter why the outlook for stocks is poor and the response is likely to be this: Too many people think the market is going up.

This example of Wall Street's perverse logic might cause a double-take among casual investors. But many professionals who are negative on the market take it very seriously as a technical indicator.

Their stance is based in large part on a "sentiment" index compiled by Investors Intelligence, a newsletter based in Larchmont, N.Y. The newsletter compiles its index by evaluating the positions of 130 other newsletters issued by investment advisory services.

Started in 1961, Investors Intelligence each week reports how many of those advisers are bullish or bearish about the outlook for stock prices, and how many forecast a "correction," or temporary pullback.

What it has found over the past few years, according to editor Michael Burke, is that the index serves as a "contrary opinion indicator" — meaning it often foretells a market turn toward the opposite course that most advisers are pointing.

For example, just before the market began its historic rally in August 1982, the index showed that 54 percent of the advisers it studied were bearish on the market, and only 28 percent were bullish.

Conversely, whenever the bulls account for 50 percent or more of the advisers, many professional investors start worrying about the market's prospects.

Such is the situation today.

When the market rallied vigorously in record volume this past August, only about a third of the advisers were bullish on stocks, and 42 percent were negative, Investors Intelligence found.

The relatively low number of bulls — at least to those who give credence to this technical indicator — seemed in line with the market's subsequent upswing.

But in the two months since, the number of bulls has surged well above half those studied.

In the week ended Aug. 31, the bulls totaled 54.7 percent, the highest percentage this year. They later totaled 48.3 percent in the week ended Sept. 14, climbed back to 53 percent the next week and, this past week, totaled 47.4 percent — still too high to comfort many analysts.

To those worried observers, it seems that the sudden rally two months ago prompted too many advisers to get too bullish too quick and that now the market is in trouble because of it.

Burke said that after the market decidedly turned up in August 1982, the percentage of bulls did not reach 50 percent until the following February.

Yet after the early August rally this year, the 50 percent level was reached in less than a month.

"More than anything else, the most significant aspect about the sentiment index of investment advisory services is how quickly the bull percentage went up and the bearish percentage went down during the August advance," Jonathan C. Dodd, market analyst for E.F. Hutton & Co., wrote this past week.

"It means that many believe in the uptrend, something that usually only happens after there has been a medium-term move up," he said. "This indicator can have long lead times, but nevertheless the rapid shift in sentiment is a negative technical development."

Burke noted his own index as well and said: "We would be very careful."

It appeared the stock market took that advice, moving cautiously ahead through most of this past week and then nearly giving everything back on Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials managed a 4.97-point gain to 1,206.71 after sliding 35.78 points the previous week.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index edged up 0.10 to 95.77, but at the American Stock Exchange the market value index slipped 0.20 to 215.45.

Given the rapid increase in Investors Intelligence's list of bulls, it might not be surprising that many people would view the surge of two months ago as starting the second leg of the bull rally that began in August 1982.

Yet the sentiment index itself argues against that, Alan R. Shaw, technical analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., wrote this past week.

Although the Investor Intelligence numbers "do not pick absolute tops and bottoms (to market cycles), they give indication of the development of same, and can express the maturity of a move," Shaw said.

"The long-time thresholds of less than 20 percent (bears) near tops and in excess of 50 percent near bottoms have generally held through the years. Therefore, the curent advisory-service data are telling us we may be closer to the end of a bull market trend than the beginning."

Kids Enjoy Classes Outside

After every third grader in Greenville had tromped around outside at River Park North last week, one Elmhurst School teacher felt her students had "learned more about science in one day than they did sitting in a classroom all year."

Outdoor science classes for third graders, a program begun last year by the city schools' Triad Enrichment Program, is becoming common in Greenville, especially at River Park North, a 359-acre park located on Mumford Road. .

Similar classes were held for the first time in the spring of this year, but according to Mary Ruth Spagnolo of the TEP program, these latest classes were "much better and more educational" because of help from East Carolina University.

She said the latest program is an improvement over the first program because students were learning from students. Each phase of the program was conducted and coordinated by students in one of Dr. Bob Wendling's parks, recreation and conservation classes at ECU. Earlier this year, they were taught by Ms. Spagnolo, Mary Holt Kitchin and parent volunteers, with the cooperation of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Each member of Dr. Wendling's environmental interpretation class was assigned a specific area to coordinate: either plants, pond community, food webs, water cycles or River Park North habitats. Dr. Wendling said he discussed in class techniques that work and do not work, as well as other aspects of successful outdoor programs.

The students designed their particular program's content, chose the site within the park, provided most of the materials and dedicated their spare time to making the classes successful.

"The students met out here to practice the programs they had designed before the third graders actually came. They put a lot of work into their programs and it shows," Ms. Spagnolo commented.

Each day a different set of third graders visited the park, where they rotated from station to station from 8:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. with one break to eat lunch at the park's pinic shelter. At each station, they were given the opportunity to experience science in hand-on activities.

Rather than read about ecosystems, they made terrariums. Instead of seeing pictures of snakes, they felt them.

"The kids actually had to use their senses for taking in data. We trained them to observe the environment through all of their senses instead of only reading about it. This has a much greater impact than classes taught in a school room," said Ms. Spagnolo.

The third graders' science lessons for the remainder of the school year will tie in directly to what was learned at River Park North. The last program, Ms. Spagnolo said, was a culmination of their in-class science lessons, but this one was used as a kick-off.

According to Ms. Spagnolo, another beneficial feature of the classes is "a lot of Dr. Wendling's students are men and they make good role models for the children, which is important. They're not scared of snakes or go 'oooh' when they see a toad."

The cost of the program, something educators as well as parents may be concerned about, is minimal.

"The total cost to the school system was $12 per school, which was for terrarium materials and bus transportation," Ms. Spagnolo said.

Miss Roebuck, Dr. Burress Speak Vows On Saturday

The First Christian Church in Washington was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday at 4 p.m. of Deborah Roebuck and Dr. Robert Spencer Burress. The Rev. Glenn S. Weaver conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Judson Max Roebuck of Washington and the late Mr. Roebuck. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Spencer Burress of Tallahassee, Fla., are parents of the bridegroom.

For the ceremony, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of candlelight bridal satin styled with a full skirt of folds, front and back, which extended into a train. The fitted bodice had a round neckline of imported chantilly lace edged with illusion and long fitted sleeves. Her chapel length veil of French illusion, trimmed with schiffli lace, was attached with orange blossoms to a bonnet of satin covered with matching lace and edged with seed pearls. It was a modified design of her mother's veil and was made by the mother of the bride. She wore a single strand of pearls, a wedding gift to her mother from her father. She carried a bouquet of wedding herbs and sweetheart roses reminiscent of the English tussy-mussy. She was given in marriage by brother, William Kenneth Roebuck in memory of her father.

MRS. BURRESS

The best man was Dr. Richard William Croskey of Greenville. Ushers were William Kenneth Roebuck of Charleston, S.C., brother of the bride, Dr. Croskey, Thomas Edward Gerberding of Lutz, Fla., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Dr. Rodney B. Young of Charleston, S.C.

The father of the bridegroom read selections chosen from The Prophet.

The maid of honor wore a tea length dress of chiffon burgundy faille taffeta fashioned with an open nekcline and elbow length pouf sleeves that featured pleated taffeta ruffles in an off-shoulder effect. The fitted bodice was embroidered in a floral motif in matching burgundy. A tie sash enhanced the modified natural waistline of the full, gathered skirt. She carried a nosegay of mixed fall flowers and herbs with satin streamers attached. In her hair, she wore a spray of gypsophilia.

The mother of the bride wore a day length dress of pale lavender and the mother of the bridegroom wore a day length dress of blue. Each were given nosegays similar to the bride's bouquet.

After the ceremony an outdoor reception was held at the home of the bride where guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. E.W. Larkin Jr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Gene Alligood.

Assisting at the table were Mrs. Paul Andrews and Betsy Roebuck. Punch was poured by Mrs. Ross Boyer and Mrs. Larry Taylor and cake was served by Mrs. Leon Roebuck and champagne was served by Ross Boyer, Clifton Cutler, E.W. Larkin III, Leon Roebuck, Larry Taylor and Chuck Wright.

Entertainment was provided by the Rutabaga Brothers and the Lemon Sisters.

The couple will be living in Albuquerque, N.M.

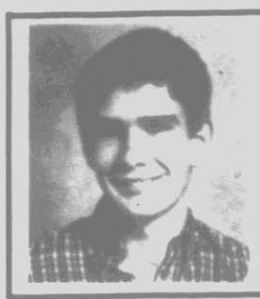
The bride was a former employee of the East Carolina University department of surgery. The bridegroom is now a practicing internist at Kirkland AFB. She graduated from Meredith College and did graduate work at ECU. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of South Florida Medical School.

A wedding breakfast was given for families of the bridal couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Leon Roebuck. A rehearsal dinner was given Friday night by parents of the bridegroom at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E.W. Larkin Jr.

Several showers were given by friends in Greenville and Washington prior to the ceremony.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Philithia M. Lindsey announces the engagement of her daughter, Anne Lindsey Driver of Zebulon, to Edward Langston Savage of Wendell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman D. Savage of Raleigh. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Herman M. Lindsey. The wedding is planned for Nov. 17.



On The Young Side

By CLAY DEANHARDT

They practice as hard as any sports team but they don't get the same recognition. They're out there every Friday night, but you never see their names in the paper. The 1984-85 varsity cheerleaders are spirited girls and are some of the best Rose has ever seen.

This year's head cheerleader is Leigh Lanier and the co-head is Ginger Galloway with Marty Welch serving as secretary/treasurer. Others members are Nicole Adams, Polly Baker, Anissa Boyer, Shonda Brown, Sherri Buie, Kossanya Daniels, Kim Edwards, Lisa Holloman, Amanada Johnson, Nancy Midgette, Alicia Speight, Karen Wainright and Eleanor White.

On the junior varsity level our spirit leaders are Kim Mallard, head, Jennifer Newton, co-head, Cate Shappley, secretary/treasurer. The remainder of the squad includes Kimberly Davis, Angie Hall, Evette Griffin, Martha Taft, Traci Irwin, Ann Lyons, Betsy Barnhill, Stepahanie Swarez, Cari Smith, Angela Robbins, Judy Wilem, Lisa Creech and Allison White.

This is going to be testing week here at Rose. On Tuesday the juniors will be taking the important competency test. At the same time, seniors will be taking the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery (ASVAB) and the sophomores will be taking the written part of the competency test. This written section is on a trial basis this year and will become a standard part next year. Every student must pass this exam to graduate, so it is one of the most important tests of anyone's life. All students are advised by the guidance department to get a good night's sleep before the test.

While on the subject of tests, the late registration for the Nov. 3 SAT is Oct. 10. After that, the next date for testing is Dec. 1 and the registration date is Oct. 26. For all testing information and any scholarship information, see the guidance department staff and while there, visit the career center in the back of the office. It contains information about jobs, schools and other opportunities for after high school.

Our new teacher for this week is Vilma Acosta. She is the new Spanish teacher. Her past teaching assignments include being in Brazil for four years, Venezuela for three years and a year in South Carolina. She has two children and has commented on how nice the people of Greenville and the school are.

Sorority Yearly Theme Announced

The current year's theme "Today's Realities are Yesterday's Dreams" was announced at the meeting of the Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma held at the home of Nellie Taylor.

Linda Peele, education chairman, announced the theme. She gave a program on the growth of ESA and the birth of the local chapter.

Members named to state positions are Betty Williams to the N.C. State Council general board as a member of the awards committee and scholarship board and educational chairman. Barbara Zicherman was selected as men of ESA coordinator. Mrs. Peele was named chairman of the Association of Arts and Cheryl Adams as a member of the scholarship board.

The meeting next month will be held at the home of Mrs. Zicherman.

Couple Marries Saturday In Philippi Church Of Christ

The wedding ceremony of Phyllis Brown and Hubert White Jr. took place Saturday afternoon at 4 p.m. in Philippi Church of Christ in Greenville. Performing the ceremony was the Rev. Kenneth R. Hammond of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fornie Brown Jr. of Greenville. Mattie L. White of Greenville and the late Hubert White are parents of the bridegroom.

Johnnie Wooten played the organ and Debra Leathers and Tremaine Waddell both of Greenville were soloists.

Verlinda Dunton of Fort Washington, Md., sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Carolyn Tillery and Portia O'Pharrow of Winston-Salem and Angela Dupree of Greenville, all sisters of the bride. Annette Davis and Veronica MacBeth, both of Winston-Salem, and Peggy White of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom.

Kimberly O'Pharrow and Candace Crawford, nieces of the bride of Winston-Salem, were flower girls. Shawan Dunton of Fort Washington, Md., and Marsha Dupree of Greenville, nieces of the bride, were junior bridesmaids.

The best man was Luke B. Joyner of Greenville. Groomsmen included Laniel Crawford, Richard O'Pharrow, brother-in-law of the bride, and Mitchell MacBeth, all of Winston-Salem.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a white gown over taffeta with a Queen Anne neckline, long full sleeves accented in chantilly lace and bridal pearls. The A-line skirt front was trimmed in chantilly lace and extended into a semi-cathedral train. She wore a veil of silk illusion trimmed in silk Venise motif lace with a double blusher that fell from a Camelot headpiece of silk Venise lace and bridal pearls. Her colonial nosegay consisted of white carnations, pink roses, baby's breath and white streamers.

The honor attendant wore a short sleeve double ruffled daphne rose gown of chiffon that featured a Queen Anne neckline with netting extending from the neckline. The embroidered leaf design bodice formed a V-bodice with a train extending from the front waist. She carried a colonial nosegay of pink carnations, baby's breath and matching streamers.

The junior attendants were dressed similar to the bridesmaids and carried a long-stemmed pink carnation with matching streamers. The flower girls wore white dotted swiss dresses with a taffeta underlay and pouf sleeves and baby's breath adorned their hair. Each carried a white wicker basket filled with flower petals.

A reception was held in the church dining hall after the ceremony. Wedding cake was served by the bride's cousin, Rosalyn Highsmith of Greensboro and punch was poured by Suzanne Robinson.

The bridal couple was entertained at a wedding party at the Unlimited Touch given by Shirley Williams, who directed the wedding, and the Duchess Social Club.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by family and friends of the bridal couple.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Greensboro.

The bride received her B.S. in business administration from Howard University in Washington and the bridegroom received his degree in mechanical drafting from Pitt Community College.

MRS. WHITE

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

In my heart I always suspected there was no tooth fairy who had a checking account at the same bank as my parents and forged my dad's name.

There were always doubts about Santa Claus scarfing down a plateful of brownies on Christmas Eve when my mother had chocolate breath on Christmas morning.

And there was some skepticism about my dad being able to blow on traffic lights and make them change color. (Especially when, if he had that kind of talent, why did he yell at us every day of our lives to turn the lights off?)

But I always believed in T-shirts. I believed every message on every chest I ever read.

When it said, "I survived Mt. Saint Helen's," I believed they did. When I read, "I made a pig out of myself at Farrell's," I believed they had. When I saw a runner wearing an Olympic symbol on his T-shirt, I put my hand over my heart and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

When a woman appeared in aerobics class wearing a "CATS!" T-shirt, there was no doubt in my mind she had done a stint on Broadway.

Then one day my faith began to waver. I saw a woman about 70 years old wearing a T-shirt with an arrow pointing to her stomach that read, "BABY." I reasoned, why would she advertise it if it weren't true?

Later, I saw a guy in a bar with two stomachs (one hanging down to his knees) puffing on a cigarette. His T-shirt read, "Boston Marathon, 1983." It made me very skeptical.

Last week I saw a toddler with an oversized T-shirt that read, "FOR BRAKE ALIGNMENTS, I GO TO CHARLIE FOX." The kid couldn't even go to the bathroom by himself.

What is happening? Is there no integrity anymore? I mean, if you can't trust a chest who (or what) can you trust? Billboard clothing is flourishing. We all know that, but is there anyone who can't be bought for the price of a T-shirt? There is even a price tag on status. People are walking around in "Hill Street Blues" jackets which they bought from a retail shop at NBC. T-shirts are making promises their owners will never keep, focusing attention on causes they never support, advertising products they've never used and companies they've never heard of.

T-shirts are supposed to reflect some kind of honesty by the wearer. For several months, I've had a T-shirt in the back of my drawer that I knew would be controversial and un-American. But it says what I believe. Yesterday, I figured out it was time to bring it out. It reads: "Auntie Em: I hate you. I hate Kansas. I'm taking the dog. Signed Dorothy."

Key To Entertaining Is Being Yourself Says Author

By The Associated Press

Some say that party-givers are born, not made. Marjorie Reed disagrees.

Mrs. Reed, author of several books on entertaining, is a party-giver of some distinction in New York. Her new book, "Entertaining All Year Round," was written to ensure a successful party regardless of the occasion, menu and number of guests.

She says that the key to easy entertaining is to be yourself: "We all have natural style; allowing that style to shine through makes for a good party."

Her party rules simplify the three basic areas of concern in all parties: hosting techniques, the way the house looks and the food selected and served.

Organization is the key to easy entertaining.

Plan your guest list so it includes a variety of people; send out invitations or telephone at least two weeks in advance. Plan the party's theme and gather supplies well ahead of time. Make lists of decorations needed, food and cooking requirements so all is spelled out and nothing left to chance.

When planning your last-minute schedule, allow some time to relax before the guests arrive.

Wear comfortable and attractive clothing and concentrate on feeling calm and peaceful so you communicate these feelings to the first guests.

Perfect your party manners.

Besides providing food and drink, your job is also to see that everyone has a good time. Always introduce every guest to the others as each enters. Move from group to group throughout the party. Develop a "third eye" that notices overflowing ashtrays and empty glasses. If "disasters" happen, keep them to yourself and attend to them quickly without involving your guests.

Set a party mood by rearranging furniture, if necessary.

Space expands when used creatively, so don't allow a small apartment or home to deter you from entertaining. If your quarters are tiny, rearrange or remove some of the furniture. Press every room into service. Turn the kitchen into a serving area, an extra bathroom into a bar.

Plan your menu to work with your available space. If you've no dining room or dining table, give a picnic and seat guests on the floor on cushions or blankets. Another idea is to throw a cocktail party with guests invited at staggered hours if you must accommodate a large crowd in a small space.

Make your home festive with props.

Spread the party mood with candlelight and lamps draped with colored scarves. Put away everyday items such as toiletries and mail. In their place, have flowers, plants or candles. Make sure there is a festive touch in the entrance hall or by the front door to make guests feel joyous upon arrival.

Food is important, but you don't have to be a great cook to give a great party.

Rely on takeout or catered food. Allow the local pizzeria or fried chicken place to supply the main course. Plan your menu and organize all cooking ahead of time.

Always create an element of surprise.

Increase the anticipation with an unusual decorative touch, a special food or a surprise guest. People will begin to look forward to your parties and soon you'll have the reputation as the best party-giver around.

Watson-Davis Wedding Vows Said Saturday

Kim Annette Davis, daughter of Jeanette Davis White of Merry Hill and Richard Lee Davis of Ahoskie, became the bride of Robert William Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lester Watson of Wilson, in the Earlys Baptist Church in Ahoskie.

Performing the double ring ceremony Saturday at 4 p.m. was Dr. W. Desmond Morris. William R. Raynor of Ahoskie was organist. Gretchen Watson Saunders of Wilson, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the bride's register.

Sharon Renee Bright of Raleigh was maid of honor and the father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Richard Allen Davis, brother of the bride of Yorktown, Va., and Thomas Lester Watson III of Virginia Beach, Va., brother of the bridegroom.

The bride is a counselor at Nash Technical College in Rocky Mount. She graduated from East Carolina University and also received her master's from there. The bridegroom is vice president of Welcon Management Co. headquartered in Wilson. He attended Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla., ECU in Greenville and Raleigh School of Data Processing. He is certified in electronics by the National Radio Institute of Washington, D.C.

MRS. WATSON

The couple will live in Wilson after a wedding trip to Barbados.

The bride wore a formal gown by Eve of Milady of white silkened organza, English net, French chantilly lace and schiffli lace over peau de soie. Schiffli lace and English net fashioned the waist and high neck bodice which also featured chantilly lace and buttons on the gown front. Organza bishop sleeves, designed with an overlayh of French chantilly and schifli lace, closed with lace cuff and ruffle. Chantilly lace accented the gown along the edge of a flounce encircling the skirt and chapel length train. She carried as cascade of white sweetheart roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The honor attendant selected a wine colored dress of organza with a matching full length tulle overlay. A Laura Ashley design, the high waisted formal gown was fashioned with long, puffed sleeves and high neck bodice. She carried a cascade of white snow crystal roses, wine alstromeria lilies and pink sweetheart roses.

A reception was held at the Ramada Inn's poolside Garden Room after the ceremony and was given by the mother of the bride. Organ music was presented by William R. Raynor.

The room was decorated with greenery, pink roses and carnations, white fuji mums, gladioli and poms. Jean Parker of Ashoskie, aunt of the bride, served wedding cake and Donna Bowen Howell, also of Ahoskie; presided at the gift table.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Jenkins House in Ashoskie and was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Donor's Family Is Never Charged for Organ Removal

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you encouraged your readers to donate their organs after death. I thought it was a fine idea, so I wrote to the Living Bank in Houston and signed up, and I was sent a donor card, which I have carried in my wallet ever since.

My 17-year-old son just had a serious motorcycle accident, and I was told his chances for surviving were slim, so I informed the woman in authority at the hospital that if he died, the hospital could take his eyes, kidneys and other organs for transplants.

She said, "Fine, but did you know that it will cost you several thousand dollars to remove the organs?" I told her I was sorry—that we were poor people and didn't have that kind of money.

Abby, I was never told that the donor's family is expected to pay out anything. If this is true, please tell me, and I will tear up my card.

I also think you should let others know the truth about this.

EX-ORGAN DONOR

DEAR EX-DONOR: Don't tear up your card; you are still an organ donor. Inform the person "in authority" at the hospital immediately that she is mistaken—not one penny is charged to the donor or donor's family for removing organs for transplants.

I've carried an organ card for 15 years and feel that nothing I could leave after my death would be of greater value.

Interested parties may write to: The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265.

This is a non-profit organization, so please include a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Very soon I will have been married for 50 years. I feel that I am entitled to celebrate a golden wedding. My wife refuses.

Here is the problem: I have had three marriages. I was married to Wife No. 1 for 23 years. She died. Wife No. 2 and I were married for 22 years. Wife No. 3 has been my wife for four years. This makes a total of 49 years of marriage for me, right?

My wife says if I want to celebrate a golden wedding anniversary to go ahead, but she refuses to celebrate 45 years of marriage that she had nothing to do with. Furthermore, she thinks I am unfair to expect her to go along with it.

Whose side are you on, Abby?

PUSHING FOR THE GOLD

DEAR PUSHING: I'm on your wife's side. Quit pushing for the gold—a fifth anniversary is all you're entitled to. It's wood. Use your head.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Regarding bedroom eyes: I haven't heard that expression for a long time, but when I was young, that was my problem. It must be an inherited trait, because my daughter had the same problem.

I used to enjoy a little innocent flirtation, but if I looked at a man a little too long, he took it wrong and I had to practically fight for my honor.

I never seriously considered having an affair in my life, but my bedroom eyes gave a lot of men the wrong impression.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

New cassettes recently added to the library's collection include educational, sports, business, health and family topics.

In "Talking Tennis" Roy Emerson presents his ideas about the critical elements involved in the basic strokes of tennis and discusses the attitudes which helped him enjoy tennis while competing against the world's best players.

Dennis Van der Meer, recognized as one of the best tennis teachers in the world, offers basic instruction in tennis basics. In "Make Your Good Tennis Better," he answers numerous questions to help you improve your game.

Dave Marr, golfer, teacher, analyst, talks to all golfers in "His Game's Golf." He wants all golfers to share his passion for the game and he gives tips about involved viewing to help increase your appreciation of the pros' play and give comments to help you improve your game.

Roy Foyd's "Golf" offers ideas about golf based on experience, not theory. He tells his own story and gives hints for hitting woods, chipping and putting that will fascinate you and affect your game.

In "Avoid Premature Aging," Dr. Ronald Taylor contends that age is more a matter of attitude and fitness than it is of years. He offers the "Health Triangle" of thoughts, exercise and nutrition to feel, act and look young.

In "Ten-Minute Stress Manager," Dr. Emmet E. Miller helps you face the rest of the day or night relaxed, centered, ready to perform at your peak with ten-minute exercises at your home or office to let go of built-up tension while you self-program success.

"Could I Become An Alcoholic?" by Dr. Bernard Swerdlow presents symptons and treatment and gives you a measuring device for assessing your own behavior. It will guide you in avoiding future trouble and if you realize a problem already exists, suggestions are made for finding the type of treatment that will help you find your way back to health and success.

James R. Sherman's "Stop Procrastinating: Do It!" will help you say goodbye to your old habits and remove the stumbling block to your success, both professionally and personally.

In "22 Biggest Mistakes Managers Make and How to Correct Them," James K. Van Fleet tells what you can do to learn from the mistakes of others and to keep your career moving quickly forward toward your ultimate goals.

"Optimal Performance" by Dr. Emmet E. Miller offers guided imagery and relaxation techniques for mentally rehearsing success and eliminating negative patterns of thought and behavior.

Charles Garfield's "High Performance Potential" offers an explanation of proven techniques for achieving peak performance at work or play.

Educational cassettes are "Better Grades Through Memory" by William Hersey and "Preparing for the SAT Exam" by Audrey Troy.

Family life enrichment cassettes include: "How to Fight With Your Kids and Win;" "Long Term Marriage;" "A Search for the Ingredients of a Lifetime Partnership;" "Raising a Responsible Child;" "Practical Steps to Successful Family Relationships;" and "Transitions."

Inmate Wins Poetry Prize

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (AP) — Convict Samuel Wellman calls his poems "gray portraits of prison life," but though they are good enough to have won him a World Prison Poetry Center prize, there's hope they won't always be drab.

The contest prize was $20, far from the "fast buck" Wellman acknowledges he tried to make as an armed robber. But Wellman says it marks the start of a new career for him.

Wellman, 45, has spent more than 30 years in prison, the last five at Chillicothe Correctional Institute. First jailed as a runaway at age 13, Wellman says he has been outside bars only twice in his adult life, both as an escapee.

Earlier this year he went before a different set of judges — from the World Prison Poetry Center of New Haven, Conn., which sponsors a bi-monthly contest judged by an independent panel of poets from Yale University and the literary world.

Wellman says winning the prize marks the start of a new career for him. He is to be paroled before Christmas and hopes then to support himself as a computer technician until he becomes established as a writer. He is also working on an associate degree in computer science through a program offered at the Chillicothe institute.

Wellman's first encounter with poetry came by accident when a cellmate asked for help with writing assignments for a poetry correspondence course through Ohio University in Athens. The cellmate dropped out of the course, but Wellman became more interested and enrolled in it himself.

He says fellow prisoners don't understand his poetry and so leave him alone when he is writing. Recently his production has been a poem a day.

He calls most of his work "gray portraits of prison life" because "it is the only life I've ever known."

"Poetry is a way to express my surroundings, and share them with other people in hopes that they will see things differently," Wellman said. Some recent poems indicate he is anticipating freedom, because of references to "woods-filled paths," and "mirrored ponds."

Wellman said his interest in poetry had begun as another form of escape but success with it has now become a goal of his.

"I don't think I would have been a poet if I hadn't been here," he said. "Not being satisfied with what you are produces creativity. Before, I loved other people's words, and now I'm beginning to love my own.

"You have to be without freedom before you know what it is. I have direction in my life now.

Performance Date Change

The East Carolina Youth Playhouse has announced a change in one production date for its upcoming children's show, "Ozma of Oz: A Tale of Time."

One performance, originally scheduled for a 9:15 a.m. performance on Monday, Nov. 12, "Ozma of Oz" is now changed to a performance at 9:15 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13. The change is necessitated since Nov. 12 is a teacher work day for public schools.

All other performances will be as originally scheduled — at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13 and at 9:15 a.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 14 and 15.

All performances will take place in McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus.

Archives Office Lists Events

Three activities for the month of October — the resumption of twice-monthly guided tours and two evening lectures, have been announced for the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History, located in the Humber House at 517 West Fifth Street, downtown Greenville.

On Wednesday, Oct. 3, the first in a new series of twice monthly free public tours of the Robert Lee Humber House will get underway. The tours will be offered beginning at 3:30 p.m. each first and third Wednesday of the month, and will be guided by Miss Elizabeth Copeland, retired librarian of the city library system.

The exhibition, "Running the Blockade Into North Carolina, 1861-1865," which includes artifacts and explanatory texts, will continue on view through October.

On Tuesday, Oct. 9, at 8 p.m., Dr. John Tilley of the ECU Public History Program will give a brief talk on "The Blockade Runner 'Rosine': The Restoration of a 19th Century Ship Model." A special guest at this event will be Charles Peery, MD, a collector of blockade running memorabilia and owner of the "Rosine" model being restored by Dr. Tillery. The model will be displayed at the lecture.

At 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16, Chris Fonvielle, a graduate student in the ECU History Department, and Gordon Watts, director of Maritime History and Underwarter Research at ECU will present lectures accompanied by color slides. Fonvielle's topic is "An Overview of the Blockade Running Period in North Carolina." Watts will speak on "Active Archaeological Sites Associated with the Blockade Running Era in North Carolina."

All three events are free and open to the public.

The Eastern Office staff is available to present its color slide program to civic clubs, school groups, historical societies and others. Groups wishing to meet for a combined tour and slide program are to call Diane Hankins at 752-7778.

Arts Council Seeks N.C. Indian Talent

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Arts Council is looking for Native American (Indian) individual performing artists or groups for its 1985-86 touring program.

The program's goals are to increase sponsorship of North Carolina performing artists within the state and to offer these artists more touring opportunities.

Performing artists in the fields of music, dance and theater, as well as storytellers and folk artists are selected annually to take part in the program.

Since North Carolina has the largest native Indian population east of the Mississippi, the N. C. Arts Council is particularly eager to have Indian talent lined up to be part of the 1986 celebrations focusing on the Year of the Native American during America's 400th celebration.

Presenters who are non-profit, tax-exempt organizations and who contract with the artists in the program may receive a subsidy of up to 30 percent of the artists' fees from the N. C. Arts Council.

Native American performing individual artists or groups who wish more information are to contact: Bill Bates, Director, Touring/Presenting Section, N. C. Arts Council, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, telephone 733-2821.

Rancho Shown On Postal Card

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The Dominguez Adobe at the Rancho San Pedro in Compton, Calif., is featured on a new 13-cent postal card. The new card is part of the U.S. Postal Services ongoing Historic Preservation Series of postal cards. Postal cards in this series commemorate notable examples of historic American architecture. Previous issues include the Salt Lake Temple, the Iolani Palace in Honolulu and the Old Post Office in Washington, D.C.

The "ranchos" hold a unique and enduring place in the rich heritage of Southern California, having nurtured the growth of agriculture, cattle ranching, industry and family life.

Rancho San Pedro, one of the oldest of the ranchos, is celebrating its 200th anniversary this year. Today the site of the original 75,000-acre property is home to millions of people in Los Angeles, Carson, Long Beach, Compton and several other cities.

Depicted on the card is a front view of the rancho home. A double line of black type at the upper left corner reads; "Dominguez Adobe-Rancho San Pedro" and the "California Ranchos 1784-1984" in the upper right corner. At the bottom of the card is "Historic Preservation USA 13." The letter "C" does not appear after the numeral "13" identifying the denomination. All future stamps and stationery items not currently in production will be produced without the letter to make the denomination more prominent.

Looking ahead to future stamp issuances, the USPS says it will release a commemorative stamp in 1985 to honor the 75th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. In 1986 there will be a stamp marking the sesquicentennial of Arkansas statehood. Arkansas, nicknamed the "Land of Opportunity," was admitted to the Union on June 15, 1836.

A commemorative stamp will be issued in 1988 in recognition of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent Swedish and Finnish settlement in America. The colony, which was sponsored by the New Sweden Company, was established at Fort Cristina, in what is now Wilmington, Del.

The Junior Philatelists of America, founded in 1963, is an organization for stamp collectors age 21 and under. The JPA brings together collectors from every state and many foreign countries. Each member receives the award-winning bi-monthly newsletter, the Philatelic Observer.

JPA activities include a stamp exchange department; auctions where members may buy, sell and trade through the newsletter; a worldwide pen pal and translation department; a First Day Cover service; a division for junior stamp clubs to join as chapters; special study groups; an awards program for junior stamp exhibitors; contests, and much more.

Today's 'New Music' Reflects A Return to Harmonic Principles

BY CARLYN EBERT

Slap a label on any musical style and you've got a problem. Labels, by their nature, are time bombs; they activate only after enough time — a century perhaps — has passed to let a style of music grow, change and get established.

And that's the dilemma facing young modern composers today writing what's called "New Music." The music-loving public doesn't know what to expect. New wave? A synthesized cross of reggae and Beethoven? Avant-garde wailings mixed wiht electronic static? Or what?

Pianist Donna Coleman, ECU assistant professor and professed new music fan, is hard put to define what makes up new music. But she hopes the public will sample works by two young composers — Edmund Cionek and John Anthony Lennon — Thursday at the ECU School of Music's "Festival of New Music" — and discover for themselves the directions serious new art music is taking in the '80s.

"I'm talking about music written sometime since the early '70s, music that's being written right now," says Coleman. "Look at theater. People go out to see new plays all the time. New York is just teeming with new theatrical and dance productions. It's gotta be new. But there's this stigma about new music. I think the public wants to hear the music that they've always heard. They feel comfortable with Beethoven and Bach and Brahms because they know what to expect."

Referring to experimental, dissonant or bizarre works of the '60s, Coleman feels that audiences have good reason to be skeptical of anything called "new."

"They might be just a little bit afraid of what they're likely to experience because they think they're not equipped to understand it," she explains. "And the whole point of going to a concert is to enjoy it. It's not to make it into a big intellectual study."

And so in 1979 Coleman formed The INSTEAD Players, recruiting music students, graduates and faculty members to fill out the ranks. Her interest in a new music ensemble sprang in part from her mid-'70s days at the University of Michigan. Dissatisfied with the standard recitals offered master's music students, she banded with other young composers in a group called the Electric Candlelight Consort.

This was an attempt at reviving a Michigan group from the '60s called The Once Group, a product of what Coleman calls "the real heyday of experimental music in this country. Organizations like the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations were interested in spending lots of money to promote avant-garde music. And it kind of lingered into the 1970s. We were sort of the last gasping breaths of that whole trend."

The Electric Candlelight Consort included composrs Lennon and Cionek, whose works make up the program for the Thursday concert at ECU. While Coleman recalls having to step over listeners crowding the aisles for a Concert performance of a John Cage piece, she also realizes that in the '60s and '70s new music composers started losing their audience.

They became enthralled with writing spare, dissonant music based on a post-World War II technique called serialism, which rejected the traditionally tonal seven note scale in favor of a 12-tone scale. Composers began developing works using rigorous mathematical processes and computers. The music, as Coleman say, "became very intellectually oriented." Outside elite music circles, few could understand the new music — and audiences turned away.

At that point, Coleman says, some composers went on writing serial music, but others began looking for something else. "I think what's been happening in the late '70s and '80s is that composers have started realizing that they want an audience again," she comments. "There's a recession, and money plays a big part. There was so much money available in the 1960s that composers really didn't need an audience. They could buy one if they had to. Now they find they need to rely more and more on the audience's support for them to find any success, whether critical or financial."

"Young composers in particular are writing music more with the audience in mind," says Lennon. So he, Cionek and others have responded to the "new Romanticism" in music, which welcomes back tonality and traditional harmonic principles.

"Composers are writing long, beautiful, singable lines again," says Coleman. "I think this is something everybody was relieved to hear again."

Thursday's festival offers a real sampling of new works, from a lush guitar solo to a marimba piece to a work adapted from chamber orchestra for a soprano and piano. "That's one nice thing about new music," says Cionek. "There's something for everybody, and there's that element of surprise."

MARIMBIST . . . William Congdon, ECU student, is shown practicing for his solo performance in Edmund Cionek's 1983 composition, "A Tide of Voices." This work is among pieces by Cionek and John Anthony Lennon to be heard in ECU's New Music Festival concert at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The concert is free and open to the public.

"It works from a very strong tonal center," says Coleman, who is thoroughly familiar with Lennon's duet for alto sax and piano, having performed it many times. "'Distances' tends to be a bit ethereal. As impressionistic music, it sets up very beautiful sound colors." She compares Lennon's textures to Debussy's.

Cionek's compositons, Coleman remarks, "are more consciously contrapuntal, with much stronger rhythmic elements. The thing in Ed's music that really stands out is his sense of humor. I'm not saying his music is funny, but Ed is very attracted to jazz, and we can hear some of these funky, jazzy elements popping into his music, particularly in the trio."

Following "The Composer Without Scotch," the final variation of "Rumble" adds a taped drum machine track to tuba, double bass and percussion. "I like to mix pop influences into my staff," Cionek explains.

Coleman gets special pleasure form performing works by her former classmates. "It means a great deal to me," she says. "Not only because they're friends of mine, but I feel I can bring a special kind of comprehension to this new music since I know the composers."

Finding performers poses a problem for new music composers, she feels. "Composers are sad people in a lot of respects, because they work very much in isolation to produce their art and yet it's only half finished once it's on the page. It needs performers to come along and finish the job."

"It's tough," says Cionek. "There's a lot more composers than there used to be." But he is optimistic about the fate of new music. "There's more and more groups playing new music, and more opportuntieis for composers to be recorded. Now more groups are wanting a premiere on their program.

"There's an enthusiasm at universities that you don't find anywhere else," he added. "It's infectious. It seeps into you."

Perhaps Cionek has hit on a more definitive description of what to expect on Thursday: likeable, infectious yet serious music. Music, as Donna Coleman says, that "springs from the heart and the soul, and not so decidedly from the mind."

And whatever — decidedly "new."

Four Days Of Jazz Set For Kinston Library

KINSTON — The Kinston-Lenoir Public Library will be the site of two, two-day programs of live jazz music in October. The event, known as "Jazz, the Song of the South," will take part on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 3 and 4 and on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 10 and 11. All programs will be held beginning at 7:30 p.m.in the Schecter Auditorium of the library, and all are open to the public without charge.

The four-day program is designed to trace changes in jazz from its beginning in New Orleans to the preent day.

The Oct. 3 opening program will feature participants Dr. George Broussard, trombonist and director of the Jazz Ensemble at East Carolina University, and Dr. Mary Jo Bratton, official historian for ECU. Through live music performance and narration the two will discuss the intellectual, visual and musical experience of the beginning of jazz.

The focus of the Oct. 4 program will be "Jazz Goes up the River and All Around the Town." In this program, Broussard and Bratton, along with ECU music performers, will examine the growth and development of jazz as it reached other parts of the country, with an explanation of how jazz moved from New Orleans to Chicago, and what led to the birth of boogie-woogie.

The Wednesday night performance on Oct. 10 is scheduled to cover "Swing and the Big Band Era: The Depression and the War Years." Interviews, rare records and tapes will be used by James Kelso of Lenoir Community College to examine the Kansas City legacy and to provide a "Who's Who of Swing." Focus will also be on the World War II years and the demise of the big bands following the war.

The final program of the series, on Oct. 11, is about "Be Bop and Cool: Jazz Takes New Directions." Drs. Broussard and Bratton will be on hand to review new directions in jazz in recent years. They will receive assistance from live performers.

Musicians taking part in the program are David Garza, percussion major at ECU; Carolyn Ipock, faculty member at D. H. Conley High School; Cecil Johnson, alumnus of the U.S. Air Force Band and member of the the N. C. Jazz Quintet; Val Parker, church music/organ major at ECU; Kim Summers, percussion major at ECU; and Ed Thigpen, computer science major at ECU and a featured soloist.

No No To Male Malo

By SUSAN MANUEL
Star-Bulletin

HONOLULU (AP) — You won't see the "malo," the traditional wrap worn around the loins of Hawaiian men, at the Polynesian Cultural Center here any more.

The musicians who host visitors to the center's Hawaiian Village have been told to take off their loin cloths and put on either midi-length skirts or a shorter, paneled skirt that covers everything above the knee.

The malo was comfortable, everyday garb for traditional men of Hawaii. It was about a foot wide and three to four yards long, made of kapa cloth dyed red or yellow.

The cultural center policy had been a long time coming and stemmed from the opposition of the Mormon Church, which operates the center, to exposure of the human body.

"We run an organization that would not offend anybody," explained Rodgers. "Some people would not wear the malos properly. We're not doing a missionary thing. But if there's something in history that's more modest, we'll use it."

Rodgers said he'd received no complaints from visitors, "just complaints from some of us around the grounds."

"We've always meant to take them out of the malos," said Hawaiian Village operations manager Haunani Kaanaana.

Two graduate assistants, Dale Hair and Kerr Strong will discuss the process involved in putting together a show of this nature.

Other entertainments will be performances by the ECU Marching Pirates, Golden Girls, and Color Guard, which will encompass a non-stop Pre-Game Show including the ECU Alma Mater and the national anthem.

Frank Langella Delighted With Roles In Two Current Plays

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Langella of the gracefully furled cape and smoldering glance as the late 1970s' Dracula currently is a happy mortal.

The star of Broadway, film and "I Love New York" TV commercials says, "An actor can go along quite a time without anything he really loves and then two plays he does love will come, back to back."

The two plays Langella loves, turning up one after the other lately, are "Design for Living," which opened June 20 at Broadway's Circle in the Square, and "After the Fall," which will open at off-Broadway's Playhouse 91 on Oct. 4. He had to leave the one after two months to start rehearsals in the other.

The plays certainly aren't alike. When "After the Fall," which Langella describes as "about profound themes," opened in 1964, many theater-goers thought Jason Robards' Quentin and Barbara Loden's Maggie represented its writer, Arthur Miller, and Marilyn Monroe.

Langella says, "Now, hopefully, people will tell each other that this is a play to go see that will enrich you; it's important, moving and profound."

George C. Scott directed Noel Coward's 1932 comedy, "Design for Living." Jill Clayburgh, Raul Julia and Langella, each in love with the other two and all pals, romp through pairing up three ways until the happy ending when they become the trio that nature and Coward designed them to be.

What both plays do have in common, Langella says, is being "three-act, well-made plays."

"I think plays are getting shorter and far less meaty," he says. "They're saying less and charging more and that's a great shame."

The tall, slender actor, elegant even with wet shoes in a favorite old-fashioned coffee shop on a rainy morning, says, "The older I get, I really choose characters that are battling things I'm battling with. I wanted to explore those things that are in Quentin that are in me and those things in me that are in Quentin.

"A little over two years ago somebody suggested to me I should do the play. I read it. It's brilliant.

"I called Arthur, whom I'd met but didn't know well, and told him I had ideas about how it should be done, ungrand, a small production, intimate, sticking to the point of the psychological problem of the man. He listened half an hour. I didn't have to convince him very long, I'm pleased to say, and here we are, in previews."

Dianne Wiest plays Maggie. John Tillinger directs.

Langella, now 44, saw "After the Fall" 20 years ago. "I remember being impressed with the play, but you're not much concerned with the problems of a 45-year-old man in your early 20s."

Langella acted in "The Twelve Chairs" and "Diary of a Mad Housewife" in 1970, in "Dracula" in 1979, and several other movies in between. He has worked a lot in regional theater. But now, married since 1977 and with children 1 and 3, he wants to work in New York theater at least until the children are in school.

Langella formed a production company two years ago. "After the Fall" is its first play. He isn't the producer but he told Roger Berlind and Ray Larsen, who are, that he thought "After the Fall" should be done off-Broadway.

"All of us are working for $300 a week. If it should be successful, we'll move it to Broadway and they'll get their money back or we might just have a decent run off-Broadway. If it's not successful, it will be sad but they'll have lost less money."

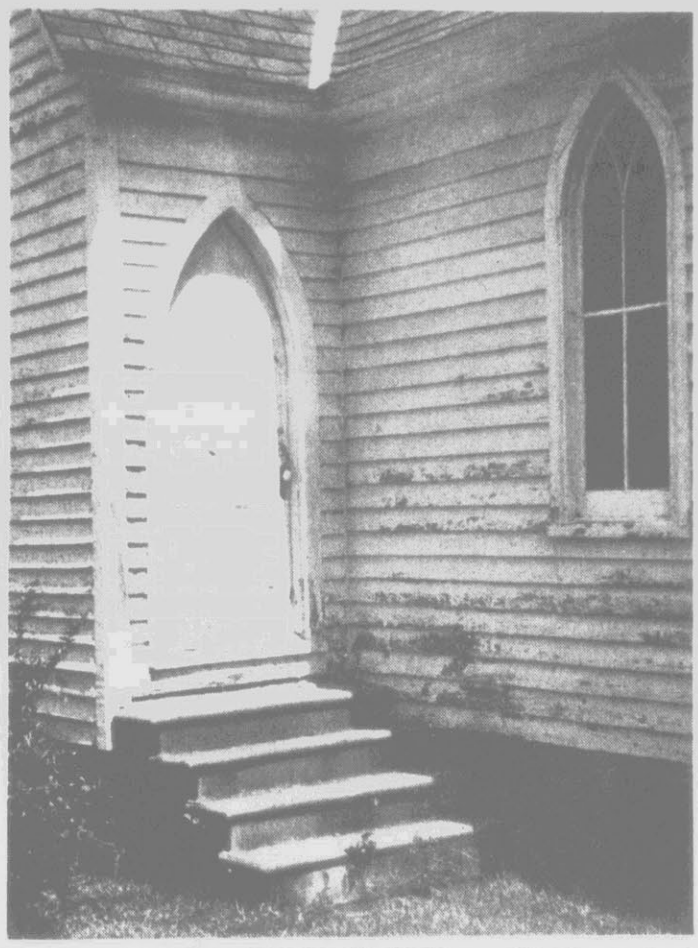
Former Church Now A Winterville Museum



PROMINENT ARCHITECTURAL FEATURES . . . of the former church building, pointed-arch doors and windows, will be preserved in any improvements made on the structure for its role as a museum.

THE MUSEM BUILDING . . . of the Winterville Historical Society is a former Episcopal Church constructed in 1903. The Winterville Ruritan Club, owners of the building, has leased it to the society for use as a town museum. On July 31, State Senator Vernon White presented a check for $10,000 to the society, money provided by the N.C. General Assembly. The state funds are being used to make needed improvements in the building, including heating, air conditioning, and siding for the exterior.

"You sent it up there. So we'll bring it back home," said State Senator Vernon White, as he presented a check for $10,000 to the Winterville Historical and Arts Society.

"Always (in the General Assembly) there's been money set aside for local projects," he added. "and to give some of it to the Historical Society is better than leaving it in Raleigh."

Agreement of this sentiment echoed among the faithful individuals who attended the presentation on a rainy Tuesday evening, the night of July 31.

This small organization, with its modest treasury, has struggled in its attempt to preserve the history of the Winterville community.

Beginnings In 1977

It had its beginning on the evening of July 25, 1977 when a group of interested citizens met in the fellowship hall of the Winterville Christian Church. The next month, 47 charter members elected Abbott Hunsucker as their president, and he served two terms. Leah McGlohon has served as treasurer since the society evolved. Others who have been active in the capacity of president are Joan A. Hooks, W.A. Forbes, Mark McGlohon, and Paul Hunsucker, the current president.

A basic reason for the organization's existence is to preserve the history of the community. Because of this, one of the key needs facing the Winterville Historical Society was a premanent location in which to display what it preserves. After having met in a temporary site, the Christian Church in Winterville, for four years, the Society moved into its present site, the Winterville Historical and Arts Society Museum housed in what was formerly a church building.

Museum In Former Church

The church now occupied by the museum was built in 1903, principally through the efforts of Mrs. Mary Nelson Smith. She was a teacher as well as a pioneer in community projects. Her son-in-law, Dr. B.T. Cox, had given much time and money toward construction of the turn-of-the-century church. Because he was a physician, the church was named St. Luke's. It was an Episcopal church, and served as a house of worship for fifty years.

By 1951, all but three of its members had died, and the church became inactive. In 1960, it was deconsectrated. It's altar and sacred objects were taken to St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville and placed in a special room named St. Luke's Chapel. This left an empty building on Church Street in Winterville — a building available for other uses.

In 1981, the Winterville Ruritan Club bought the structure and leased it to the Winterville Historical and Arts Society. Its members view the use of this old church as a fitting arrangement — a historical society in a historical building with architectural features they aim to protect.

Architectural Components

The windows themselves are one of these components. They are seven feet high by two feet wide and have pointed arches. The louver in the upper gable features the same pointed arch as does the door to what was the sacristy. Each window is the triptych-type, with the panes of glass in three divisions — the pane in the center is barely visibile at the top as the other two panes give the illusion of folding over the center one. The horizontal piece across the middle of the window is merely the hinged portion on which the window is suspended when pushed open. The door to the sacristy also shows the triptych-effect — all of which the society plans to preserve.

This desire to adhere to the historical decor was recently in evidence when the society replaced the old steps and installed a wooden railing rather than one of wrought iron.

Since the society holds its meetings in this building, society president Hunsucker has indicated that the $10,000 grant would pay for the installation of heat and air conditioning needed for the building, as well as siding for the exterior.

Accomplishments

Although the Winterville Historical Society has been in existence for only seven years, it has an outstanding record of accomplishment. It was instrumental in the preservation of the Winterville depot, which the railroad said would have to be moved. The Winterville Kiwanis Club offered to let the depot sit permanently on its Cooper Street property if the society would arrange to transfer it. However, due to a lack of funds, the society was unable to move the depot. Instead, it agreed to its becoming a part of the Connor Eagles Homestead and Museum at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

The society has also prepared a set of slides depiciting prominent residents of Winterville, recording those interviewed on tape.

In 1979, it conducted a successful Sidewalk Arts and Crafts show together with a Student Art Show.

"I wish we could do more to reflect the prominent role Winterville once played in the economy of the county," said Mark McGlohon. "We were the hub of manufacturing at the turn of the century due to the production by the A.G. Cox manufacturing Co. They made cotton planters and shipped them out all over the south. We've got one of those planters. I wish we could get one of everything the company made to put in our museum."

Will Seek More Items

Mark does the repair work on the museum, builds display counters or booths and does the labeling of items. Already, the museum houses 150 items, which 30 different people have donated or loaned. Some of these are farming implements, tools, and household items. Thad Cox Gaylord recently loaned the instruments which his grandfather, Dr. B.T. Cox, used in his practice of medicine.

"We would like some irons," continued Mark. "A sad iron, better known as flat iron, and a gas iron and an electric iron. I also wish we had some razors. A straight razor, also a safety razor, and then the electric razor. We could buy some of these items, but we are low in funds. We also need some old photographs, both of buildings and people."

"It's been difficult to ask Winterville citizens for support," said Paul Hunsucker, the current president. "We have felt that the society hadn't accomplished enough. But the General Assembly has now made us a gift of $10,000, so now we can make the improvements and have an official opening. Then we want to make an appeal for assistance — both through membership and financial support."

Several citizens have already given financial support. Laurie Ellis paid for the brick and railings for the new steps and entrance.

"Several people have come by," continued Mark McGlohon. "They come in, see what we are doing, and then make a donation."

Maybe Harvey Branch has made the most apt observation. "I want to give toward this project, because what you're doing," he said, "is going to be important to my grandchildren."

Pitt County Couple Has Marked Up 70 Happy Years of Marriage

Text By LaRona Murray

Kenneth and Mary Price remember well what it was like — falling in love 75 years ago, when he was 18 and she was 13.

The two met in the Pitt ,County community of St. John's, a few miles east of Grifton when Kenneth's family moved there from Lenoir County "about 1909 or 1910," Kenneth recalled. Both have lived in St. John's since those early years of the 20th century.

"I wasn't sure at that first meeting if it was love," Kenneth says, "but I had a feeling that I had never experienced before, so I decided that it had to be something special."

Kenneth, now 94, and Mary, (the former Mary Fleming), 89 — courted for five years. On April 1, 1914, they embarked on a marriage that has spanned, Mary points out, "70 years and some months," and has produced four children, six grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, "and one great-great grandchild," Kenneth proudly noted.

Their four children all live in Pitt County. The one daughter, Kathryn McLawhorn, lives in Grifton. One son, Melvin Glen Price, lives in Farmville, and the two other sons, Eugene and Joseph Price, live on rural routes near Grifton.

Lifestyles Different

The couple began their married life living a few years with their parents, which they say very few newly marrieds do today.

Lifestyles in the years of the early 1900's, the Prices avow, was different in those days, especially in the realm of social activities.

"There was little entertainment. No television of course. No radios and very few movies available, especially to us farm folks," Kenneth said.

"We played the piano in the parlor, sang a lot and on weekends visited relatives and neighbors," Mary recalled. "We went to town about twice a year, usually in the spring and fall, to buy clothes and other necessary household items."

Family Rapport

But this lack of entertainment, of commercial diversion, created a close atmosphere of family rapport. "We just worked hard, focused our love and attention on each other, and things worked out very well even with the family arrangements of living in someone else's household," Kenneth commented.

He says despite the many fond memories he harbors, "there are some things I'd like to close my eyes to, to blot out the memory of the economic depression that gripped the nation in the earlier years of our marriage."

"So many people," Mary added, "were deprived even of the necessities of life. It was sad."

"And yet," Kenneth stated, "conditions now have reversed to the other extreme of too many material possessions. Sometimes we lose our sense of values under better circumstances. I worry about the future, especially that of our children and our grandchildren, who are accustomed to so much gained for so little."

In 1932, Kenneth fell from a tobacco packhouse. The accident has left him relying on crutches for more than half a century. Despite this and the economic hardship of the depression years, "we managed," he said, "through careful management, to purchase a 360 acre farm during the early forties.

"We paid $20 an acre when we bought it. Along about 1979 the farm was valued at $300 an acre."

Success Based On Trust

The two attribute the success of their marriage to a strong commitment of trust, love, and loyalty to each other.

"We have shared goals, hopes, the good times and the bad times," Kenneth commented.

He agreed to Mary's statement that "we have always made allowances for each other's shortcomings."

"I can honestly say that we have never had a real serious argument," Kenneth added. "If we see that the conversation is getting a little out of hand, one of us just simply walks away."

Mary Price finds it difficult to understand today's permissive society. "Nowadays, married coules separate over what seems to be very small things," she said. "I've always felt very secure and it has never even once crossed my mind to leave Kenneth."

Reminiscing

Much of their time today is spent in reminiscing with family, friends and neighbors "who visit us on a regular basis," according to Mary.

Talking about the past is a favorite pasttime for Kenneth. "I remember the days of the horse and buggy, of riding trains from New Bern to Vanceboro. I recall how we used to walk for three and a half hours from home to visit some place.

"I bought my first car in 1920. It was a brand new Model-T Ford. I bought it for $700."

Referring back to even earlier years, to the time of his boyhood, Kenneth told about "seeing my mother wash clothes in a barrel by thrusting them clean with a pestle, a piece of club-like wood with holes in it."

Mary Price recalled "the birthing of three of my four children at home, assisted by a doctor. I had to spend nine days in bed after each birth. I didn't have access to pampers or canned baby food. We didn't have strollers or those nice little wind-up swings mothers have today."

Confessions

"I want to tell you something," Kenneth admitted somewhat shyly, "something I've never told anyone before, not even Mary. I've never kissed another woman in all my life."

The genuine happiness and satisfaction that Kenneth and Mary Price have experienced together in their long marrige is reflected in another confession, one that brought a smile and a twinkle to the Mary's eyes. "I love her just as much today as I ever did," he said firmly. She smiled again when he reached and took her hand in his.

A LONG AND HAPPY MARRIAGE . . . Mary and Kenneth Price of the Pitt County community of St. John's near Grifton on April 1 marked up 70 years of what the two call a "successful marriage." Kenneth, 94,, and Mary, 89, first fell in love 75 years ago, when he was 18 and she was 13. Here, they give their attention to a visitor out of camera range. (Reflector Staff Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Jeremy Irons — New Matinee Idol?

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He has the lyrical leanness of a young Henry Fonda or Leslie Howard and eyes that smile and tease.

And with his quiet, British voice and electric presence, there's no doubt about it — Jeremy Irons is the matinee idol of the '80s.

Based on Marcel Proust's haunting novel, "Swann's Way" — the first book of the French author's monumental "In Search of Time Lost" — "Swann in Love" is the tale of obsessive love and Parisian class distinctions.

Irons portrays Charles Swann, the tragic lover who abandons all for the love of the beautiful courtesan, Odette de Crecy. And in the role, he has swapped his very proper British tongue for the more romantic French — a language he learned for the film.

He had read Proust and liked the character. "I choose my characters," he said. "If a character makes my spirit tingle, if I care about him, commune with him, if I know about him — I want to play him," Irons said.

"I want to have a good time. I'm terribly aware that we're only here for a very short time and we owe it to ourselves not to be bored."

Whether playing the sophisticated Charles Ryder in TV's highly acclaimed "Brideshead Revisited," or the tortured lover with Meryl Streep in "The French Lieutenant's Woman," the 35-year-old Irons tries to challenge himself with each new role and not play all his characters the same way.

"Parts of them are me anyway," he said, grinning broadly.

"My style of acting — I want to make the audience feel rather than see," he said. "I don't want them to see what I'm doing. My type of acting is rather subliminal."

But film and stage audiences are different entities. "The Broadway audience likes to see you doing it," he said. "They want blood, sweat and tears. ... There's a constant battle to decide how on the nose to play it. There are some in the audience who are not used to theater and not used to a British accent.

But in film, the actor said, "you're making raw material for the director and editor. Your job is to find the truth of each moment in interesting and watchable ways."

Jeremy Irons was born on the Isle of Wight, the son of an accountant. His parents separated when he was 13, and Irons was shipped off to private school. He had plans to become a veterinarian, but school bored him.

"Academically, I didn't shine," he confided with a wink. "I was never interested in learning. I didn't see the point to that, and I wasn't blessed with teachers who would inspire."

Still, Irons' one regret is that he didn't continue his education. "I would loved to have gone to university," he said wistfully. "I'd like my mind to be better trained than it is — to hold arguments, to hold facts, to have a better memory, to have a slightly more intellectual mind."

After dropping out of school, he enrolled in Bristol's Old Vic School, and eventually played John the Baptist in "Godspell." During that run, he met and married his current wife, actress Sinead Cusack. Their son, Samuel, is 5.

Later, he joined the Royal Shakespeare Company. He was cast in Simon Gray's "The Rear Column," directed by Harold Pinter. He won London's big theater prize, the Clarence Derwent Award, as best actor in 1978 for that performance.

Studies Indian Relics

CINCINNATI (AP) — "Imagine what you do every day," says anthropologist C. Wesley Cowan. "You have a varied schedule, but with a certain amount of regularity you do the same thing every day."

If the same was true for Indians in Ohio a thousand years ago, Cowan expects to have a good idea what their schedules were like, when he finishes his work at the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History.

In an upstairs room at the museum, a wall of beer cartons holds relics of the lives of some Indians of the Ohio River Valley. Crammed in the cartons, in paper bags the size that hold peanuts at ball games, are bone tools, stone tools and pottery fragments.

The artifacts were left by Indians who lived on the banks of the Little Miami River north of Cincinnati between A.D. 450 and A.D. 1400. They were found in a plowed field some 40 years ago, but their full story has never been told.

Scientist Charles Oehler supervised that dig, but was too busy to do a thorough evaluation of the artifacts. Since then, scientists and students have analyzed parts of the collection. But no one has analyzed the whole.

So, this summer, with a $26,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the museum hired Cowan, 32, of Louisville, Ky., to find out what the artifacts say about the people who once lived here.

Pulling bags from the cartons and inspecting the contents, Cowan said, is like Christmas without the elves.

With researchers from the University of Cincinnati and the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Cowan will look for patterns among the finds.

"If we assume people thousands of year ago ... also had repetitive patterns of behavior, we, as archeologists, should be able to discover evidence of those repetitive patterns in the archeological record."

Honors, No Pay

Louisiana's poet laureate gets no pay and has to buy his own drinks.

All he gets is a certain satisfaction and his name in the Roster of Louisiana Officials.

You find it at the top of page 360, sandwiched between Plumbing Board, State, and the Pointe Coupee-West Feliciana Bridge, Ferry and Tunnel Authority. There it is: Poet Laureate, State, Henry Thomas Voltz.

When he isn't whipping up a sonnet, Voltz is a 63-year-old elementary school teacher, survivor of triple bypass surgery and a diabetic condition.

Official duties are not demanding. He rarely is called upon to celebrate an important public event in Louisiana with a burst of handsomely joined words.

"I will judge poetry contests when asked to," said Voltz, who estimated he has writen 40 to 50 poems since August of 1977, when he was "crowned with laurel" by Gov. Edwards.

Not all states are sufficiently up to date to even have a poet laureate. Voltz said he is one of about 25. He is the fourth one for Louisiana.

He came upon his position through his predecessor, a New Orleans physician, Dr. George Cooper.

"Cooper was one of these decisive, sort of dictatorial-type people, who knew what he was doing. He said he wanted me to have it," said Voltz. "And, by God, I got it."

Voltz was born of German-French parentage in the town of Washington, where 1,266 souls live beside Bayou Courtableau, five miles north of Opelousas.

Washington's only other claim to fame is that another former resident, William Knowles Woodruff, obtained the first patent on that bane of the city driver, the parking meter.

Voltz is entering his 22nd year at Sherwood Forest Elementary, where he teaches English, reading, social studies, science and mathematics.

He first began writing poetry in grade school.

"I wrote something for English and got a good grade on it," he recalled. "I've always regarded poetry as a serious hobby."

Over the years he has not picked up much speed in writing verse, and inspiration does not come easily. He tears up a lot of pages.

"I've worked on some poems for five years, on and off," he said. "Sometimes I will go for two or three weeks in the mood, and then I'll just cut myself completely off and won't write anything for two or three months."

If you've always wanted to own a Peugeot...

We have the car whose ride is so smooth it has been called "eerie".

The four-wheel independent suspension of the Peugeot 505 is awesomely competent. Cut open a Peugeot shock absorber and you will find it contains four times as many valves as normal shock absorbers, giving the Peugeot perhaps the most unruffled ride of any car today.

Spider Tales Keep Oral Culture Alive

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — It is said in Ghana that if Ananse the folkloric spider is allowed to die, the community will die with it.

Ananse, the word for spider in the Akan group of languages spoken in much of Ghana, Ivory Coast and Togo, is the culprit in thousands of centuries-old folktales and morality plays.

The oral tradition of the spider stories, their transmission by word of mouth from generation to generation, is what keeps this West African country's cultural heritage alive, said dramatist Efua Sutherland.

The stories, in which "Ananse gets what he deserves but is never killed or destroyed," teach people right from wrong, added Ben Abdallah, culture secretary in the military government of Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings.

Abdallah said in an interview that Ananse, a folklore figure from the misty past, is meant to embody the follies and foibles of "everyman" in Ghanaian society. Ananse's behavior demonstrates what harm can come of greed, lies and stupidity, the culture secretary said.

"The stories are always changing," said Mrs. Sutherland. "Now they include radios, televisions and other modern things, even political things — but they retain a sense of where they are."

Told in villages by firelight, and lately brought to the stage in Accra, the capital, the distinction between players and audience is frequently blurred.

The actors and listeners gather in the shape of a horseshoe, the narrator sitting in the middle. The narrator is usually the person "with the most stories in his bag and therefore the director," said Willie Addo of the University of Accra's Institute of African Studies.

In one recent enactment at the Ghana Arts Center, several players represented Ananse and his family. The tale begins with their receiving word that Ananse's father-in-law, a paramount chief, had died.

He draws his children around him and explains that although there will be a great feast at the chief's wake, which will last several weeks, relatives must not eat.

"You must not disgrace me," he says, admonishing the children to observe the fast.

Ananse himself has no intention of fasting. Each night he steals into the kitchen to gorge himself. And every morning, the children are accused of breaking the fast and disgracing their father, Ananse.

"When they can stand the abuse no longer," the narrator says, "they set a trap for the thief."

The children hide in the kitchen "and catch a man chopping (eating) in the dark. They begin hitting him, not realizing he is their father," the narrator says, as the players slap the thief.

Then grandmother arrives with a lamp and the thief is exposed. The children wag their fingers at the father, reminding him: "You told us not to disgrace you by eating!"

"Yes," Ananse retorts, "but you never told me not to disgrace you."

The moral, Asifo said: "When the elderly advise the young, the young should offer guidance in return."

Mrs. Sutherland, chairman of the Ghana National Commission for Children as well as a playwright, said time is set aside in schools for children to tell Ananse stories "because they concern everything that is important to us."

She wrote "The Marriage of Anansewa" for the stage. It tells of how the greedy Ananse promised his daughter, Anansewa, to four chiefs and each paid for her.

To Ananse's horror, three of the chiefs showed up at the same time, demanding the bride. Ananse orders his daughter to play dead. Then, when the fourth, and richest, chief arrives, Ananse fakes a trance and performs a ritual to bring her back to life.

"The reaction to this play here in Accra, where the neglect syndrome has taken over so much of our culture, was ecstatic," Mrs.Sutherland said. "The people were so glad we had given their culture back to them."

But in the villages, Addo said, the Ananse stories remain very much alive, with people going from house to house to hear them. Most towns have no electricity so Ananse is a prime entertainment.

The spider is the choice for the foil because he can escape into a web or hide there to think — a device employed in many stories.

Abdallah said the important thing is that "every story has a lesson at the end. This teaches people their heritage and serves as a deterrent against evil-doing."

BOOKS ON CASSETTES

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — There's a new way for busy people who can't find enough reading time to enjoy the latest books.

Books on audio cassettes are available for commuters, joggers and children, according to Waldenbooks. The book retailing chain says cassettes are not a substitute for books, but rather improve reading comprehension. Shakespeare, it says, is more easily understood when heard than when read.

Currently children's books, classics, various best-selling books, and self-help and motivational topics are available on cassettes.

ROCKEFELLER AWARDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Grants of nearly one-half million dollars have been awarded by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund to the Center for U.S.-China Arts Exchange at Columbia University and Harvard University's Project Zero.

The funds are for a joint program to study arts education in the United States and China. During the next three years, three American teams will go to China and three Chinese teams will come to the United States to learn about methods and philosophies of education in the performing and visual arts.

Ordination

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A convention of Roman Catholic priests of the Portland archdiocese has recommended the ordination of married men and wider use of laymen in administering church sacraments.

Campus Era Of 'Free Speech' Turns 20

EDITOR'S NOTE — The "Free Speech Movement" erupted at the University of California 20 years ago. It's all but forgotten now, but that quarrel, small at first, blew up into the student rebellion that engulfed many campuses in America. Here's a look back at this strange, turbulent era, its genesis and its foreordained end.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — As certain as the harvest moon that fall of 1964, the young and the bright-eyed came back to college.

They brought with them, with the freshly ironed laundry and the new shoes, the hopes of the parents who nurtured them, their own hopes as well. But packed away in their psyches, they brought something else.

When they returned to this woodsy, lovely campus, where the sacred halls of ivy march up a long green hill, they had to step across a 26-foot stretch of sidewalk, guarded by two copper plaques that read: "Property of The Regents, University of California. Permission to enter or pass over is revocable at any time."

The state's territorial imperative had never been seriously questioned before, nor consistently enforced. This fall, it would be different. This brief passageway to a campus where student groups set up bulletin boards and card tables to recruit, offer messages, and solicit funds would become the focus of a small quarrel that grew slowly, then exploded on Oct. 2 and eventually engulfed many campuses of the nation.

Before school began, a few students had picketed local businesses to protest racial discrimination. Some businessmen in town demanded that the university restrict such activity. The university responded that what students did off-campus was their business, but it did decree a ban on political activity on campus, including the 26 feet of sidewalk between the copper plaques.

This was the stage for something at first dubbed "The Free Speech Movement." As one former student said, "I remember feeling we had the Constitution on our side." But it grew to embrace civil rights, sexual discrimination and finally the sentiment against the war in Vietnam.

Before it was over, thousands of bright, young, middle-class students had shaken the establishment and intoned the first phrases of a litany that echoed campus to campus over the decade until a generation was transformed. A new radicalism, a new left, was born in America.

Still, it all began here 20 years ago as a relatively small quarrel, one that could easily have been stifled by compromise. It wasn't.

It peaked on Oct. 2, when a former student in a protest rally was confronted by campus police. He was dragged to a police car and locked in. The students, drawn by the rally, imprisoned the police car with their bodies, sitting and lying down all around it. The crowd swelled to 10,000, the police force to 500. A siege within a siege within a siege.

Captured by television, it appeared as a stark scene of the armed establishment against the seemingly passive students whose bodies became their weapons. Many had served their apprenticeship in the South as members of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee and the Congress of Racial Equality.

The police car roof became a ministage from which student leaders exhorted, faculty members pleaded and administrators laid down the law. In the give and take, a philosophy student named Mario Savio emerged as a spokesman for the informal coalition of radical and conservative campus groups. He said, "We were going to hold a rally. We didn't know how to get the people. But, we've got them now, thanks to the university."

A temporary compromise reached between students and University President Clark Kerr wavered, broke, was renegotiated, failed, was revived. But it drew national attention to attract supporters like Joan Baez who led rallies in "We Shall Overcome."

Philosophy professor John Searle, who sympathized with the students' motivation if not their tactics, saw in them "an almost religious hunger for some sort of meaningful behavior."

Writing now, Diane Ravitch, a noted historian of education, says in her study "The Troubled Crusade":

"In a time of unclouded optimism, no one could have predicted that many of America's campuses would come under siege in the late 1960s; that they would become scapegoats for an unpopular war and black grievances; that their openness and tolerance would make them convenient targets for youthful revolutionaries who ironically tried to destroy the one institution in America that provided sanctuary for their views."

Some of those revolutionaries had undoubtedly been sensitized by the events of their teen-age years. They had watched on television the Freedom Riders poking at segregation of lavatories and lunch counters. They had heard of Rosa Parks refusing to give up her bus seat to a white man, watched as 11,000 troops stood by while nine black children integrated Little Rock High. There were names like Martin Luther King Jr., James Meredith and a man named Medgar Evers who was murdered on the doorstep of his Jackson, Miss., home, and four black girls who were killed donning their choir robes when a bomb burst in Birmingham's 16th Street Baptist Church.

All of this was happening in an America that had given them a plentiful life, a life they now discovered was also a sheltered one.

For some years as they entered college, the more daring among them were riding buses into the South, learning non-violent civil rights techniques, and returning to campus to talk about it.

The confrontation at Berkeley, Searle has written, produced a profound shock "as they became aware that they no longer believed in official beliefs they had thought they believed in; and most surprisingly they found that thousands of others shared their new beliefs. People suddenly discovered they no longer had to go on repeating the same old social lie..."

As in any movement, there were far more believers than activists. Polls showed widespread support for the Free Speech Movement, yet never did a rally attract more than 10,000 of the 25,000 student body, and usually far fewer.

It produced a schizoid campus. "There could be a lot of action down on the plaza," says Chancellor Michael Heyman, who was a law professor at the time. "If you were up there in the law school or over in engineering, or natural resources, you had no idea anything was going on. I often thought that 90 percent of the students were just doing their usual thing."

In fact, most faculty members are still proud that they were able to teach and research through it all, without allowing their classes to be politicized.

The Free Speech Movement had barely cooled when the Vietnam war intensified, supplying fresh fuel to student unrest and another symbol for the ills of society. Teach-ins protesting the war spread from the universities of Michigan and Wisconsin to other campuses. Violence, too.

In his quiet, bookish office today, Heyman remembers the constant threat of violence on campus. "So much was going on elsewhere that this looked like a much greater social movement...Stanford was taking it on the chin. Columbia was taking it on the chin; Wisconsin, Michigan and Washington, all over the place.

"There was a sense of not knowing what the outcome would be."

The momentum was awesome, and perhaps self-defeating. John Searle reflects, "By that time, you see, all kinds of commitments had been undertaken. The feelings were so intense. There was a kind of dynamic to a demonstration, so that each demonstration had to be bigger than the last one to maintain the momentum and the enthusiasm."

What bound the young people of 1965 together was predestined to unravel.

"What happened after 1965 was that two subcultures developed," Searle says. "One which you might call the hippie subculture, and one which you might call the radical subculture. People often talked as if they were the same. They were not...

"I think they were both attempts to change the culture — in different directions."

Indeed, there was a new kind of folk music in the land. Bob Dylan, Pete Seeger, Joan Baez and others sang songs that echoed a vague discontent. Although he died in the 1950s, James Dean and "Rebel Without A Cause" were not forgotten. The year before Berkeley broke out, Timothy Leary left Harvard and became a rallying point for a budding drug culture. The slaying of President John F. Kennedy, and then of his killer, lent a notion of justice left hanging.

Godfrey Hodgson in his book, "America In Our Time," summed it up this way: "The schism between political radicals and cultural rebels opened very gradually. As early as 1965 the underground papers were already showing signs of boredom with political issues. In the same year (Bob) Dylan, admittedly always a pathfinder, turned from his political ballads to the smoke rings of his mind. Increasingly, those who were serious about political change became exasperated by the dreamy narcissism of those who sought a personal salvation..."

Searle, who found much to admire in the non-violent beginnings of the Free Speech Movement, says, "That gradually degenerated...the movement got much more violent, irrational as time went on."

On the Berkeley campus, the Free Speech Movement decayed into the Dirty Speech Movement, and protest became contrived parody. Students and others tried to take over an off-campus block of university property in the spring of 1969 and make it a "People's Park."

This time there was violence, radicals versus police and National Guards-men. Hodgson called it a "manipulative disingenuousness worthy of the slickest corporation lawyer: Telegraph Avenue, Son of Madison Avenue."

The event, he says, signified that the schism was complete: "Two societies, two cultures, two myths glared at each other in total hostility, utter incomprehension. And yet they were as alike as father and son."

John Searle, in his book, "The Campus War," saw the young middle class, brought up in a "warm, permissive, forgiving, child-centered style of home life," being tossed into a world for which it was not prepared.

"The characteristic organization of our society is not the cozy suburban household, it is the large bureaucracy," Searle wrote of the environment the students confronted.

"Take a close look, for example, at Form 1040 of the Internal Revenue Service: it is not a warm, loving, permissive or forgiving document." But he says:

"There was during that period a kind of general questioning of American values and aspirations and traditional American lifestyles. All of that was useful in a way. It forced a reexamination of a whole lot of assumptions, just to mention two: it is not an exaggeration to say that the women's lib movement grew out of those events, or that it did make a lot of difference to the rights of black people and minorities. In that respect, it was all for the good."

Nathan Glazer was professor of sociology at Berkeley through the turbulent 1960s until he went to Harvard. In "Humanities," published by the National Endowment for the Humanities, he writes:

"Commonly the president who had the misfortune to be at the head when the campus blew up was fired; less commonly there were some actual changes in the governing pattern of the college or university."

Black studies programs were established all over, although few survive. Glazer says there were not enough competent instructors, nor enough interested students.

" ...the black studies movement has been overwhelmed — in number of programs, in student interest, and in the level and quantity of research — by the women's studies movement, a development that could not have been foreseen as emerging from the turmoil of student revolt and that gained its great strength after the movement had peaked," Glazer says.

As for student involvement in the governance of the educational institution, the revolt against what University of California President Clark Kerr called the mega-university, Glazer says student interest fell away in the 1970s.

Even when it came to the courses and classes that the 1960s' students called impersonal. Today, says Glazer, the tide runs to "more requirements, more organized programs of study, less freedom."

And where have the students gone?

Mario Savio has long been virtually incommunicado, according to friends. Jack Weinberg, the prisoner in the police car who coined the '60s slogan "Don't trust anyone over 30," is 44, an unemployed steelworker who lives what he says is a pleasant life on the shores of Lake Michigan. Jackie Goldberg, another student leader, is on the Los Angeles School Board.

Of the rank and file, Heyman says that he knows, anecdotally at least, "We lost a lot of kids in that era...just counting the children of my friends that didn't come back. They're way the hell out of the mainstream."

He wonders whether the turmoil of the '60s accounts for the "atrociously low turnout for votes these days. He worries "about the lack of cohesiveness in this society...the loss of something I might call binding forces." He sees a new "material selfishness" and wonders whence it came.

It is, he says, a hypothesis worthy of some social scientist's attention. "What the '60s did was to reject a set of conventional binding philosophies and feelings and ended up not replacing it with anything."

Sandra Blakeslee, a writer, was a participant-observer of those turbulent times on the Berkeley campus where she went to school. "I was part of the mob, as it were."

Today she is the mother of two, living in an unconventional and intellectual community, Topanga, between the valley and the shore in the mountains north of Los Angeles. She and her husband, Ken, are both Berkeley and Peace Corps alumni.

Most of their friends have divorced, at least once. They rarely talk of politics, marijuana is still a recreational drug. She is open with her young children on subjects like sex which she feels were avoided in her parents' generation.

"I still challenge authority," she says, "even though there is the nagging feeling that we are the authority."

She feels her generation was socialized, rather than radicalized. "Most of us rejoined the middle class and had kids and now we're in our 40s and they're in junior high school. Twenty years later the issues of the Free Speech Movement are forgotten, she says. "I only remember we thought we were morally right."

The "Do not fold, spindle or mutilate" generation remains largely unfolded, unspindled and unmutilated.

Prof. Neil Smelser says, "I saw a kind of double effect. For some, it was the occasion for increased self-realization, putting something together they might not have been able to do if they continued in lock-step."

For others, "Those who were really involved in the movement, they were possibly damaged by the heat, the enthusiasm and the limitlessness of the mentality generated by it."

Citizenship Can Snag Hunt For Children

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Deborah Steiner von Rooyen considers herself one of the lucky ones. After eight weeks, 10,000 miles and $20,000, she tracked her estranged husband and abducted daughter to a suburban bungalow in Pretoria, South Africa, where police recovered the child.

Primavera Garrido was less fortunate. She found her 3-year-old daughter in Roquetas, a tiny seaside village near Barcelona, Spain. But when she tried to take the child, Nelly, her in-laws attacked her. While she waited for the local courts to act, her husband and child vanished a second time.

Ms. Garrido is still searching, haunted by the memory of her missing daughter.

"Your whole world just seems to fall apart," she says. "I'll wake up in the middle of the night and think, 'Nelly's not here.'"

The two women are among the growing ranks of parents whose children have been taken overseas, kidnapped by their foreign parent.

Their stories are strikingly similar. A quick romance and marriage to a foreign national; a child, an acrimonious divorce. Then one day, the estranged parent snatches the child away to the sanctuary of his or her native land, protected by conflicting laws and red tape.

"It's much harder when the children are taken overseas," says Richard Stenzel, the head of a California detective agency that specializes in recovering "parent-napped" children.

"You've got citizenship priorities. That country may feel it owes some allegiance to that person."

The State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs is investigating 1,429 cases of international child abduction. An estimated 691 American children are believed in Europe, 249 were taken to the Mideast, 50 to Africa, 86 to Asia and 353 are believed in Latin America.

The incidents appear to be increasing.

"We started counting cases in 1980 and each year the number of cases doubles," says a State Department official who asked not to be named. "We don't know if it's a new problem or if people are just finding out they can contact us."

Ms. van Rooyen thinks the numbers may be higher. "Many people don't know who to call," she says. As a result, she formed the International Child Abduction Information and Search Agency, an organization she thinks can help parents find their missing children.

The struggling agency was formed in May and already has received more than 100 calls.

"We're trying to establish a major network of police, lawyers and reputable detectives," she says. "With what took me two months and 300 names, I can give someone help in a few hours."

A 33-year-old photographer and graphic artist, Ms. van Rooyen met her husband while on assignment in South Africa. They married, moved to the Boston area and had a child, Kierie. The couple divorced two years later.

A month after the divorce, her husband failed to return from a weekend with their daughter. He left a note that read, "I've taken Kierie and gone to South Africa. If you try to find me I will travel further."

Local police hesitated, reluctant to get involved in a domestic problem. They told Ms. van Rooyen her husband would be back. She tried the FBI; they couldn't act until local police brought kidnapping charges. By that time her child was in South Africa.

Ms. van Rooyen ran up a $1,000 phone bill "calling everyone I could think of in South Africa." In desperation, she called the South African national police and found a sympathetic ear. A week later she flew to Cape Town to continue the search with money borrowed from friends.

In the weeks that followed, as police investigated deadend leads, she received custody of the child from the South African courts and told her story in the South African newspapers. The coverage prompted a phone call from her husband.

His call was the key. Authorities traced him to Pretoria, and then — with the help of a detective and local police — to a friend's home.

The experience convinced her that parents in such a situation must travel overseas to recover their child.

"People told me to wait for the authorities. There are no authorities," she says. "No one will look for a child unless you show up on their doorstep with tears in your eyes and find a big-hearted policeman."

Primavera Garrido's story mirrors Ms. van Rooyen's. A Wellesley student, she met her Spanish husband in France. The two married and had two children. Then came the divorce. On April 1, her husband vanished with her daughter.

Ms. Garrido flew to Spain and found her daughter at her sister-in-law's home. She didn't recognize her own child at first.

"Her long hair was cut and she had lost 10 pounds," she recalls. She finally identified her own child by a mole on her thigh

In an angry confrontation that followed, Ms. Garrido was attacked by her brother-in-law and threatened with death. Police offered little help. In Spain, the husband nearly always wins custody of the children.

But the situation was enough to panic her husband. Within days he went underground with the child. Ms. Garrido goes back to Spain this fall to continue her search.

There is little authorities can do once the child is out of the country. U.S. officials can put a stop on a child's passport; embassy staff members will try to locate a child in a foreign country. But they have no authority to recover the child.

"Essentially, if there is a custody decree, it has no validity in that foreign country," says the State Department official.

That is where men like Richard Stenzel come in. The California-based private investigator has worked on the fringes of the law to return nearly 100 children.

His tactics include subtle pressure, gentle persuasion — and sometimes bribery. But Stenzel says children are never "re-abducted."

"There are ways to go about it that seem to simplify matters," he says. "But we always take the attitude that we're in the right — that we're representing the court-recognized parent."

In one case in Ecuador, Stenzel had several posters printed of the father, offering a $500 reward — the equivalent of the average annual income in that country — for the man's capture.

He had the overbearing personality of one who had been given power before he was quite ready for it. He was surrounded by a small group of sycophants who hung on his every word.

"The days are long gone when I was prepared to get into a game with anyone," sniffed the Jack of Spades. "Now, unless I know that the game is going to be of a certain quality, I'd sooner stay home. Just the other day I was invited to this expert game. Oh, the difference . . . it's like night and day. Take this hand, as an example of what I mean.

"In third seat, I must say that I agree with our opponent's decision to open four hearts. He had the worst possible distribution and, opposite a partner who had passed, there was no chance of slam.

"The expert who held me made his natural lead of the queen of diamonds. Our partner rose with the ace and, since the lead marked declarer with the king of diamonds and the club suit offered no prospect of a trick, he made his natural switch to a low spade.

"Now, if I had been playing with the penny-pinching crowd that you are used to playing with, the contract would have been made. Had one of them been in the West chair, he would have used me to win the second trick, cashed the ace and then searched around frantically for the setting trick. Declarer easily would have made the rest of the tricks.

"Watching my expert at work was a thing of beauty. He won the second trick with the ace of spades, then cast me to the dogs. His partner captured me with the king and led a third spade, and that was that.

"If declarer ruffed low, he would be overruffed by my cousin, the Knave of Hearts. If he ruffed high, my cousin would score a trick by force. Either way, the contract was doomed.

"I hope this dissertation will be of use to you in the future."

Waterbed Selection Can Be Easy Task

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once a countercultural fad but now a $2.5 billion industry, waterbeds accounted for 20 percent of all beds sold in 1983. Last year, according to industry figures, more than 215 million waterbeds were purchased at prices ranging from $250 to $2,500.

With such a large price difference and such a new product (the industry dates back only to the 1960s), selecting a waterbed might seem like an exercise in pure guesswork.

Recently, however, the Waterbed Manufacturers Association offered some general guidelines in the selection and use of waterbeds.

The association pointed out that a consumer protection law enacted in California in 1974 established industry standards. The law (to which virtually all American manufacturers adhere) says that a waterbed consists of four components: mattress, frame, heater and liner.

The California law defines a water mattress as "a container which is filled with any liquid substance and which can be used for sleeping or reclining." The frame is "a supporting structure intended to contain the water mattress." The heater is "any heating system capable of increasing the temperature of the liquid contained in the mattress" and the waterbed liner is provided "to capture and contain the liquid in the waterbed frame should rupture occur to the water mattress.

It's important to make good quality the first priority in selecting the mattress and heater, especially. The other two components — the frame and liner — are less crucial not because they don't perform important functions, but because the satisfactory performance of those functions is less affected by the price.

For example, any well-constructed and properly assembled solid wood waterbed frame will evenly distribute the weight of the waterbed over the floor. Frames vary widely in price depending on whether you're buying a plain, or elaborate waterbed. Frames account for the wide variation in the price of a waterbed. It is here that the consumer can best adjust to demands of taste and pocketbook.

Liners are inexpensive, varying in price from about $10 to $30. Most liners are fabricated from eight mil vinyl (the minimum specified by the California law) and made with a butt seam. A butt seam is created by placing one piece of vinyl on top of another and sandwiching the edges of the two pieces between the two halves of the welding bar, one on top of the other. The other kind of seam used in waterbed liners is a lap seam, created when the edges of two pieces of vinyl are lapped one over another and sealed with a welding bar, half on one side and half on the other side. This produces a better seam.

The customer will also have to decide between a number of different systems for attaching the liner to the frame. These include tacks and screws, neither of which is highly recommended because they may work loose from the frame and could possibly puncture the water mattress. "Stand-up" liners have also been known to cause problems because they don't come up close enough to the top of the frame. A system that tucks the liner into a plastic retention device attached to the frame is preferred. It costs between $10 and $20.

Mattress prices vary from about $40 to $200, but this is one component on which the consumer should not economize. Price is usually an indication of quality. Quality of the water mattress is determined by three things: the seam configuration, the wave-reduction system, if any, and the thickness of the vinyl.

Water mattresses made with an L-corner seam structure are reported to be the most stress-free. Seam structures using a T-configuration are the next most reliable, followed by water mattresses with radial lap seams.

On the earliest water mattresses, any movement on the bed created a wave motion lasting for several seconds. Although some waterbed enthusiasts find this motion soothing, others find it disturbing. Consequently, many new water mattresses are made with internal baffles or fiberfill that greatly reduce the movement of water within the mattress.

Consumer should choose the best water mattress their budget allows. Different wave reduction systems can be tried out in the store. Compare warranties and ask if the mattress meets minimum thickness requirements specified in the California consumer protection law.

Heaters are probably the most sophisticated part of the waterbed. The heater rests beneath the mattress and liner. It is similar in design to a heating pad, but it is placed beneath the water mattress and turned on only when the mattress is full. A dangerous situation can be created if the mattress is drained and the heater has not been turned off. However, when used correctly, it is reliable.

Before buying, the consumer should check for an underwriter's laboratory label, indicating that the heater has been thoroughly tested.

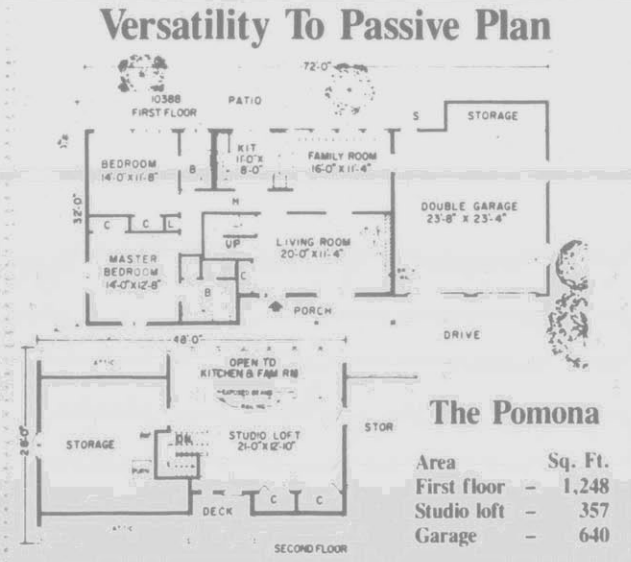
Studio Loft Offers Versatility To Passive Plan



The Pomona

Area	Sq. Ft.
First floor –	1,248
Studio loft –	357
Garage –	640

By Jerry Bishop

Sun wall water tubes and clay tile floors, in the Pomona, gather and store solar heat generated during the day through many southern glass doors, windows and skylights. Located on the lower level are a more formal living room with wood stove, kitchen area which extends through an eating bar to the family room, two bedrooms and two full baths. Laundry facilities are tucked into the master bedroom bath area. The second unfolds into a large storage area which also houses the hot water heater and furnace, and studio loft with its own private deck. Closet space is ample here. Northern skylights add their illumination. The loft overlooks the family room from a balcony. This openness of design allows for maximum air circulation. A double garage, plentious in storage, concludes the plan.

Pillows Are A Must

By The Associated Press

Plenty of pillows are a must for the well-dressed bed. Double, queen and king-size beds today are likely to be stacked with at least six pillows in assorted sizes and shapes.

To be in fashion, stack a pair of European squares behind the sleeping pillows. These are for sitting up in bed — perhaps to breakfast or read — and should be full and firm.

In front of the sleeping pillows, add a pair of boudoir pillows in a square or oblong shape. You can build on these basics with a small neck roll for serious pampering.

These are the basic pillows for the well-dressed bed and all should be covered in matching shams and cases. The pillow covering, of course, must coordinate with sheets and comforter.

Besides the specialized pillows, there are other sizes and shapes that can be added. A jumbo box has squared sides to fill up your shams. Substitute it for the European square for a more luxuriously full appearance.

Sleeping with head elevated or need extra support for your back? Try a wedge-shaped pillow with extra firmness. You can also put it at the foot of the bed to elevate feet and legs.

The neck pillow is shaped to support the neck while you read or watch television. Heart-shaped pillows are just for fun.

New pillows can be one of life's more affordable luxuries. If your old pillows are flat or lumpy, throw them out and begin anew with fresh ones. Many of today's models are machine-washable and dryable.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — A relative of mine recently offered to sand the wooden floor in our dining room and then finish it with varnish. It not only didn't come out the way we wanted it; it produced a somewhat rough finish. We haven't complained to him about it, but now we would like to take a crack at it ourselves. It didn't look too difficult if you have the correct equipment. He rented his. Do you think we can handle it and will we be able to get a smoother finish?

A. — There is no way to tell your capability. Sanding a floor preparatory to putting varnish on it can be done by anyone with reasonable patience and a knowledge of the fundamentals of sanding. When you rent the sander — and an edger — ask the dealer to show you exactly how it works. Perhaps the most important part of the job is never to let the motor run while the sander drum is resting on the floor. When the machine is in operation, it must be moving. Sanding a floor produces a mess, as you must have seen if you watched your relative at work. Take all the precautions necessary to keep the grit from getting on everything in the room and outside it.

Q. — I have an old piece of furniture that was originally finished with shellac, probably about 20 years ago. Now, I would like to refinish it with varnish without taking off the shellac, which is still in fairly good condition. I seem to remember reading somewhere that this cannot be done. Is my recollection correct?

A. — Not exactly. Years ago, varnish was often used over shellac. It was only with the introduction of synthetics that certain care had to be exercised. Some synthetic manufacturers say their product should not be used over shellac. Usually, the label on the container will give you this information. If not, ask the dealer.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. Does there have to be frost before persimmons ar ripe enough to eat? (F.H., Rockwell)

A. The time persimmons ripen varies. Generally those ripening before frost are considered to have the best flavor. Frost can injure the fruit quality, but the fruit of late cultivars continues to ripen on warm days through the fall and into early winter. Persimmons are astingent when green, but the astingency disappears as the fruit ripens and softens.

Q. What soil is best for bunch grapes? (T.R., Cleveland County)

A. Grapes are not as particular to soils as other fruit crops, as long as the soil is neither waterlogged nor shallow (at least three feet deep). A soil of average fertility is best since rich soils stimulate excessive vine growth at the expense of fruit quality. Grapes require a soil pH of 5.5 to 7.0. Grapevines should be planted in late winter or early spring. Don't plant in frost pockets; good air circulation is best if the location has a gentle slope. Plant the vines away from trees so they will receive full sunshine.

Q. I recently moved into a new house. Do I have to wait until spring to plant trees? (N.F., Charlotte)

A. Trees, shrubs, bulbs and lawns can be planted anytime in the fall until the ground freezes in winter. In fact, there are advantages to planting in the fall rather than the spring. Trees planted in the fall are in their dormant condition and therefore less disturbed by the move. Winter rains and snows help settle soil around the roots before growth begins in the spring so that trees planted in the fall do not require as vigilant a watering program during the critical first summer as their spring-planted counterparts. Spring-planted trees are under stress from moving and having to bloom and put out leaves. One reason gardeners plant trees and shrubs in the spring is because it is often the time the plant is in bloom and he can see exactly what color he is buying. Go ahead and plant in the fall when the soil is workable (not too wet or hard and dry from lack of water) and mulch your newly planted trees with three to four inches of bark mulch.

Q. How deep should I plant snowdrops? (K.J., Canton)

A. Snowdrops (Galanthus) should be planted four to eight inches deep. Keep the bulbs in a cool place until you plant them.

Phone Book Covers Get Facelift

NEW YORK (AP) — The breakup of the Bell System has, unsurprisingly, brought many changes in the way phone companies do business.

But, perhaps unexpectedly, for some people it also has meant the death of the telephone book cover with the bucolic or homey local scene.

Two of the seven regional companies resulting from the breakup have decided to adopt a uniform look for their books — as a way to strengthen their corporate identity.

Nynex, the operating company that covers New York and New England, has embraced the logo look. No photographs, no scenic illustrations, just a high-tech grid of blue and white with a fuzzy yellow-greenish comet trail across it.

The design already is appearing on some phone books, and the company says it will used throughout its region by next July. It also is being used on yellow pages books.

Mary T. Magner, spokeswoman for the Nynex publishing arm, said the company took the radical step after assessing all of Nynex's 260 different phone books and deciding, "It didn't look like the same company."

Susan Barnum, also of Nynex Information Resources, added: "They are going to know it is a Nynex Information product when they see that grid pattern."

Also parting with the past is Southwestern Bell, serving Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. The company said it will put a graphic, which includes the copyrighted bell logo, on many of the 464 editions of its white page and yellow page phone books.

"We wanted the consumer to know that cover was being published by Bell for Bell and nobody can use that cover but us," said Ron Jennings, vice president and general manager of Southwestern Bell Media.

As for its use on the white pages, "We kind of wanted to come out as a new company," said Larry Marullo, Southwestern's director of advertising. He said the simple generic design also would bring some cost savings.

"In the past our covers had asthetic appeal," he said. "The importance of that is something we will have to judge."

For now, at least, the other regional operating companies are being more reverent toward the memory of Ma Bell.

Pacific Telesis, the operating company for California and Nevada, says it sees good customer relations in maintaining ties to "the old relationship" of the American Telephone & Telegraph family.

Customers can be reminded who owns their company much more subtly than using a uniform, companwide look, said Greg Silveria, a project director with the consulting firm that designed Pacific Telesis' phone book covers.

The logo look misses the point on the white pages, he said. "You lose that personal touch."

That "human element" is important, said Lon Argabright at Pacific Telesis' Pacific Bell division. "We want to stress that we are a personal kind of utility."

Pacific Telesis solved its identity problem by standardizing cover graphics throughout the two states, but leaving room for a localized photograph or illustration in the center.

Neal Clay, a spokesman for BellSouth, which operates in much of the Old South, said his company will continue to present rural scenes under the company's standardized format.

Convy Will Be Doing The Craziest Things

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Bert Convy has had major roles in no less than 11 Broadway shows and a string of movies for the big and little screens. But he is cheerfully resigned to the fact that his audience perceives him as a game-show host who sometimes acts.

Cheerful is a key word in Convy's vocabulary. Away from the camera, he is a compulsive chatterbox who takes an infectious delight in seeing the funny side of just about everything.

As the new prime-time season gets under way, Convy reverts to the host persona he perfected in the daytime hit, "Tattletales," to helm "People Do the Craziest Things," an new ABC half-hour series which seems to combine "Candid Camera" with "That's Incredible!"

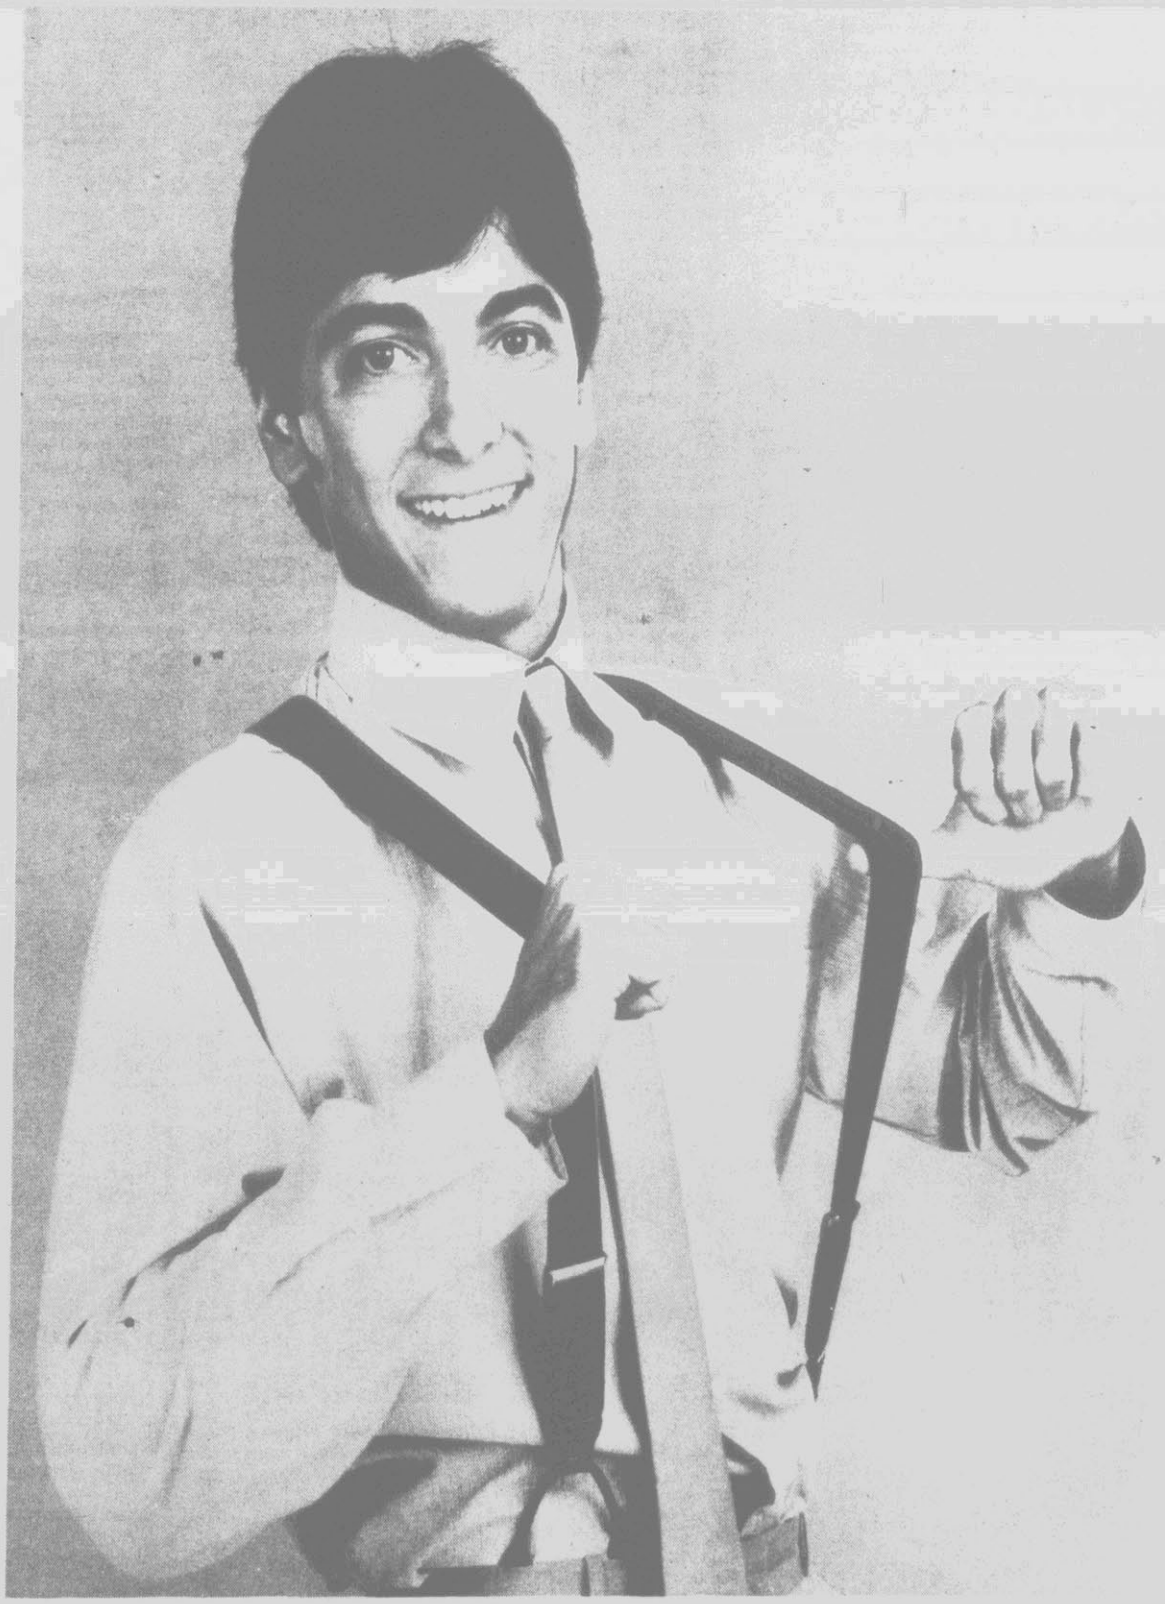
Convy has had two stabs at TV series success as an actor — in last year's doomed sitcom "It's Not Easy" and in "The Snoop Sisters" a decade ago — and he says he'll try again as soon as the rightpart comes along. But in the meantime, he's content to pocket a weekly paycheck mostly just being himself, occasionally exercising his acting talents to don disguises and trap people into making idiots of themselves.

If his thespian pals are inclined to accuse him of selling out, he can point to the fact that in the coming few days, he'll be featured in three other major prime-time shows.

"I didn't plan it, obviously, but the way things have worked out, I'm playing a 'Love Boat' in drag with Arte Johnson, I'm in the first episode of 'Murder, She Wrote' on CBS, and I have a role in the season premiere of 'Hotel,' all in a matter of days.

"The 'Hotel' thing is the most villainous role I have played in years, a real scenery-chewer," says Convy. "He's a wife-beater, smooth as silk but sick... there's not a single redeeming thing about him.

"I get to do 'The Love Boat' in drag because Arte and I play a couple of guys who decide to join their wives on a girls-only cruise, and that's the only way they can get on board. I got to wear 10 outfits, including two evening gowns. It was wonderful!"



Scott Baio finds his days are happy ones when he stars as Charles, a college student who doubles as a live-in family helper to three children, on the new series "Charles in Charge." The comedy airs Wednesdays on CBS.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: What can you tell us about the seemingly reclusive Jan-Michael Vincent? Other than on his hit series "Airwolf," we never see or hear anything about him in the press. How about a rundown on his age, marital status, children, etc? -- McGinnis Bandi

To McGinnis: You must have been on vacation when news of Vincent's summer brawl hit the media. The 40-year-old actor was reportedly involved in a Malibu eatery fracas that landed a fellow patron in the hospital. The patron was quick to file suit against the actor. Police reports indicate that Vincent surrendered himself on a misdemeanor arrest warrant. He was scheduled to appear in court in mid-August, but as of this writing the outcome of the case is still undecided. Vincent's series, "Airwolf," has put a dent in his "have surfboard will travel" way of life. Acting is his trade, surfing his obsession. "When I'm not working I just tend to travel, usually to meet the surf somewhere around the world," he says. Divorced and the father of a daughter, Amber, Vincent resides in Malibu in a house he built with the help of some surfing pals.

DEAR MICHELE: What is Michael Jackson's middle name? -- Holly Geddie

DEAR MICHELE: Is Boy George Joan Collins' son? -- Helen Moore

To Helen: Not by any stretch of the imagination.

DEAR MICHELE: Let's settle an ongoing argument I'm having with my sister. I think Dick Butkus plays George Papadopolis on "Webster," and she thinks it's some other football player. Who's right? --David Gonzales

To David: You must be a soccer fan; it's evident Sis knows more about football. Alex Karras stars as George Papadopolis on "Webster." By the way, Karras once played for the Detroit Lions, while Butkus wore a Chicago Bears uniform.

DEAR MICHELE: How old is actress Myrna Loy? Has she ever won an Oscar? -- Greg Glenn

To Gregg: Myrna Loy, 79, has never copped an Oscar.

Soaps Talent Pool For Nighttime TV

By Connie Passalacqua

It used to be that soap stardom was the ticket to future career oblivion. Good actors, who had practiced and honed their craft before millions of viewers daily could not get nighttime TV or film roles, because they were considered (wrongly!) a lower class of actor by both casting agents and the public. But about five years ago, when nighttime soaps became popular, the onus of being a daytime actor was lifted a bit. A few ex-daytime performers were lucky enough to be cast in nighttime roles and proved that a skill is a skill no matter where it's practiced.

In fact, there have been so many successful transitions that casting agents have done a complete reversal and now look at soap opera actors as a vast talent pool. Some say soaps serve the same purpose theater repertory companies used to — providing fledgling actors with a showcase to perfect their craft while working in a paying job.

Among the more recent examples of actors leaving daytime are Lori Loughlin, who played Jody on "Edge of Night," and Kim Delaney, who played Jenny on "All My Children." Both are working on their first movies. But the new trend has created a backlash. The chance of nighttime stardom is so enticing that many novice actors and actresses quit as soon as their contract runs out. Often, their characters are left dangling in mid-story line, and the soap producers are faced with recasting. This is not always attractive to audiences, who are used to seeing their favorite actors and actress day after day. This summer alone "AMC" lost its three young leading ladies when, in addition to the departure of Miss Delaney, Taylor Miller left the role of Nina Warner, and Marcy Walker left her role of Liza Colby.

To please the audience and to keep continuity, the shows have been recasting these vacated roles with look-alikes of the original actresses.

Did you fall in love with the stars of the U.S. Summer Olympic team? Would you like to see more of your favorites? Take heart: Many of our Olympic athletes will be appearing this fall on network television.

Julianne McNamara, who won three medals as a member of the women's gymnastic team, will make her acting debut in CBS's "Charles in Charge," which stars Scott Baio. Handsome gymnast Bart Conner, winner of two gold medals, has been cast in Michael Landon's new series "Highway to Heaven." The episode, "One Fresh Batch of Lemonade," will air in October. Conner has also signed on as an NBC sportscaster. Gymnast Mitch Gaylord, who not only won a gold medal, but also won the door prize at a Hollywood post-Olympic party — round-trip tickets for two to Japan — has filmed a guest appearance on the upcoming ABC comedy special "Getting the Last Laugh." Diver Greg Louganis, laden with gold, signed a contract with ABC-TV. Plans are underway to surround him with beautiful "Paper Dolls."

America's new sweetheart, Mary Lou Retton, was signed to a lucrative contract by Vidal Sassoon. Olympic swimmer Steve Lundquist will also make waves with Sassoon.

Commercials are what make the rich and beautiful people of television more rich and famous. To wit: Susan Anton is paid $100,000 a year to implore viewers to buy her kind of gum. J.C. Penney, anxious to have us use Sophia Loren's beauty products, is paying her $100,000 to tell us about it. Ricardo Montalban continues to extol the virtues of owning a Chrysler automobile for a fantastic half-million dollars. Larry Hagman (J.R. Ewing) doesn't need another oil well, as long as he keeps advertising his B.V.D.s. Isabella Rossellini, Ingrid Bergman's daughter, recently renewed her contract with Lancome cosmetics. She will be paid $2 million for working seven days a year during the next five-year period.

"It's the first time in my career anyone said, 'We just want you to be Angela,' " says Angela Lansbury discussing her new series "Murder, She Wrote." Miss Lansbury plays a lively mystery writer who gets involved in crime solving. She will be aided and abetted by a cast of well-known guests stars.

Record Book Should Become Payton Place

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

In 1975, the Chicago Bears chose as their No. 1 draft choice a running back from Jackson State University. That summer, the rookie quietly boasted that one of his career goals was to break Jim Brown's all-time career rushing record of 12,312 yards. The rookie's name was Walter Payton.

Now, as he enters his 10th season as a Bear, Walter Payton will break that record. He began the season 688 yards shy of Brown. He has done it the only way he knows how, the way actor John Houseman would call "the old-fashioned way — he's earned it."

Walter Payton is tough, loves his sport of football for its power hitting as much as for its graceful and almost poetic movements. His love for hitting (and some say, for being hit) came early in life. At the age of 7, he banged away on a set of drums given him by his parents. At the age of 14, he showed his mother his right arm, scraped and bruised. He had been thrown 30 feet by a moving motorcycle. That didn't stop him. Neither did Jim Brown's shadow.

"It's ironic that people put so much emphasis on the record," he said recently. "It doesn't mean as much to me as people think. Jim Brown still will be special. Very special."

Brown feels less animosity toward Payton than he does for Franco Harris, the Seattle Seahawk running back, who should also break the rushing record this season. Harris's style of running (throwing himself out of bounds rather than be hit) did not please Brown, the football legend turned mediocre actor. At one point, the 48-year-old Brown threatened to come out of retirement and sign with the Los Angeles Raiders in order to prevent Harris from smashing his record.

Payton has not had the luxury of having spent his career, as Harris did, with a contending ballclub. Nor did he have the extra advantage of an outstanding offensive line. All he has, all he has used, are the basic skills he was born with. Until now, they have been more than enough.

Certainly, Payton lacks the color of Tony Dorsett of Dallas, the power rush of Billy Sims of Detroit, or the bull-like tendencies of Houston's Earl Campbell. But, they don't have the record and comethis Sunday, or next Sunday, or the Sunday after, Walter Payton will.

There will be others (most notably Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams) who will one day eclipse Payton and Brown.

A star is born

Twister Sister Still Playing Rockin' Rebels

By Ethlie Ann Vare

The next Twisted Sister video, according to lead singer Dee Snider, will be a continuation of the rebellious theme established in "We're Not Gonna Take It." For "I Wanna Rock," the authority figure becomes a nasty schoolteacher, played by the same actor who was the heavy-handed father in "We're Not Gonna Take It."

The video was taped at a high school outside Los Angeles, with hundreds of local kids acting as volunteer extras. Snider says that, again the clip plays on "Road Runner cartoon violence," with thebad guy being flung through basketball hoops and blowing himself up in a swimming pool. And here's an unusual twist in heavy metal video: No women will have their clothing torn off or walk around with jungle animals on leashes.

A fiery Coleman

Filming has been completed on the NBC-TV movie "Playing with Fire," which stars Gary Coleman in his first dramatic role. The drama explores the problem of one of the fastest growing crimes in America: arson committed by juveniles.

Physicians Mutual guarantees your acceptance for the all-new Protection Plus Hospital Plan

Why you need the Protection Plus Hospital Plan

It's a well-known fact that the cost of hospital care continues to climb at an alarming rate.

That's why most of us carry some form of health insurance—whether it be a group policy, major medical coverage or even Medicare—to share in the cost of a hospital stay.

But have you stopped to consider that as hospital charges go up, so does your share of the bill?

That's because most health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill—and many times only after you have paid a sizeable deductible out of your own pocket.

In years past, that 80% may have been enough. But today, with the average cost of a trip to the hospital reaching over $2,100.00*, your share could be difficult to handle.

If you were just returning home from the hospital, would you be able to write a check for your share of the bill? If not, would you have to take money out of your savings? Or worse yet, would you have to ask someone for help?

These questions point out just how important it is to have the Protection Plus Hospital Plan. The cash benefits you collect could mean the difference between getting through a financial crisis and having to look to your savings or someone for help.

That's why we say:

*American Hospital Association

Pays you $50.00 a day, $1,500.00 a month cash!

You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident. In fact, you'll collect when your doctor places you in the hospital for any reason—even a simple checkup.

Pays you $75.00 a day, $2,250.00 a month for Cancer or Heart Attack

Your daily benefits increase 50% if you or any covered family member is hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

Pays you and your spouse double benefits of $200.00 a day, $6,000.00 a month

Under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plans, you'll collect double your regular benefits during the time you and your spouse are both in the hospital—due to the same or different accidents.

Pays maternity benefits

You're covered for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And there's no added cost for this coverage!

Pays full benefits for all ages

Now you can protect yourself, your spouse, even your entire family with $50.00-a-day benefits for all, regardless of age.

You'll find that even though hospitals may charge the same rates for people of all ages, other plans you might see have reduced benefits for children or people age 65 and over.

Enroll today! No salesman will call

Simply fill out the brief application and mail it back to Physicians Mutual along with $1.00 for your first month's coverage. There is no medical exam required, and there are no health questions to answer.

As soon as we receive your completed application form, we will issue your policy (P510 Series) and put it in force. Your coverage begins immediately, even before your policy arrives.

There are no salesmen or "middlemen" involved at any time. That means fast, private and direct service.

So don't hesitate—mail the attached application form and $1.00 today!

Answers to questions you may have about the all-new Protection Plus Hospital Plan

When do I start collecting benefits?
You'll collect cash benefits from the very first day and every day you're in the hospital for any covered stay.

That's important when you consider that most group or major medical plans have you pay at least a $100.00 deductible before they pay anything at all.

You're covered in every hospital in the world, including federal and VA hospitals. However, nursing homes and convalescent, extended-care or self-care units of hospitals do not qualify.

Is there a limit to the number of days I can collect?
Absolutely not! You're never limited to the number of days or any dollar amount you can collect.

That means you'll be protected with full cash benefits even if you'd be hospitalized for the rest of your life!

Can I have the money sent to me?
Certainly! We send the check straight to you to spend as you see fit.

You can pay the doctor, the hospital or even use it for your household expenses. Of course, if you prefer, you can tell us to send the benefits to your doctor or hospital.

In addition, any benefits you collect are not subject to state or federal income tax.

Will you reduce my benefits if I collect from other insurance?
Not at all! We pay full cash benefits over and above any other benefits you may collect, including group insurance, major medical coverage and workers' compensation.

If I'm over 65, do you reduce my benefits because of Medicare?
Absolutely not! Because Medicare leaves a certain amount for you to pay, full benefits for people 65 and over can be even more important. Many so-called "low-cost" policies do not pay you full benefits—but this plan always will!

If I should go to the hospital often, can you cancel my policy or raise my rates?
You are the only one who can cancel your coverage. We cannot cancel or refuse to renew your Protection Plus Hospital Plan, no matter how many claims you may have.

What's more, you cannot be singled out for a rate increase. The only way we can raise your rates is if we do so for all policies like yours in your entire state. And your rate will NOT change when you move from one age group to another.

Are pre-existing conditions covered?
Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, these pre-existing conditions are covered!

If you are 65 or over, you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

Do you pay benefits for mental illness?
Yes! You can collect half-benefits for up to 30 days' confinement due to mental illness.

Can I be turned down?
No! We guarantee to accept you for this plan, regardless of your age, health or family size.

Just complete the attached application, mail it to us with $1.00, and we'll send your policy.

Of course, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis. If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available, please write or call toll-free for details.

The "Plus" in your hospital plan is Service you can depend on

The service your insurance company provides is often as important as the plan itself. Because when you need help in paying your hospital bill, you want to know that your company will come through.

So Physicians Mutual combines protection plus service to give you the help you need—with the individual attention and courtesy you deserve.

To us, service is, above all, paying your claim quickly. But it's also being here to give you immediate answers to any questions you might have about your coverage.

That's why we have teams of professionals who will handle your claim quickly and efficiently and a specially-trained Customer Service staff you can call by toll-free telephone.

You'll be glad to know that every claim and every question will be handled directly between you and the Home Office—not through a salesman. So you can count on immediate attention and straight answers right when you need them!

We're here when you need us.

I wish to thank the Physicians Mutual Insurance Company for their promptness in paying my claim for my hospitalization. It is such a pleasure to do business with someone who really cares.

I am a senior citizen, live alone and live on Social Security and a small pension of my deceased husband, so your check was a godsend. I am so happy I have Physicians Mutual to help me and also to know that you are there.

The "Trouble" With Gifted Children

HEADLINERS

If Albert Finney wins an Oscar for his performance in Under the Volcano, the first person he may have to thank is the late Richard Burton, who never took home the statuette despite seven bids. Why? Burton was the odds-on favorite to play the alcoholic ex-British consul living in Mexico. After all, he'd starred in Night of the Iguana for Volcano director John Huston 20 years ago. But Burton and Huston then went their own separate ways, and when financing finally surfaced for Volcano, Huston focused on Finney, who'd been his Daddy Warbucks in the 1981 musical Annie.

FINNEY: TIP OF THE VOLCANO.

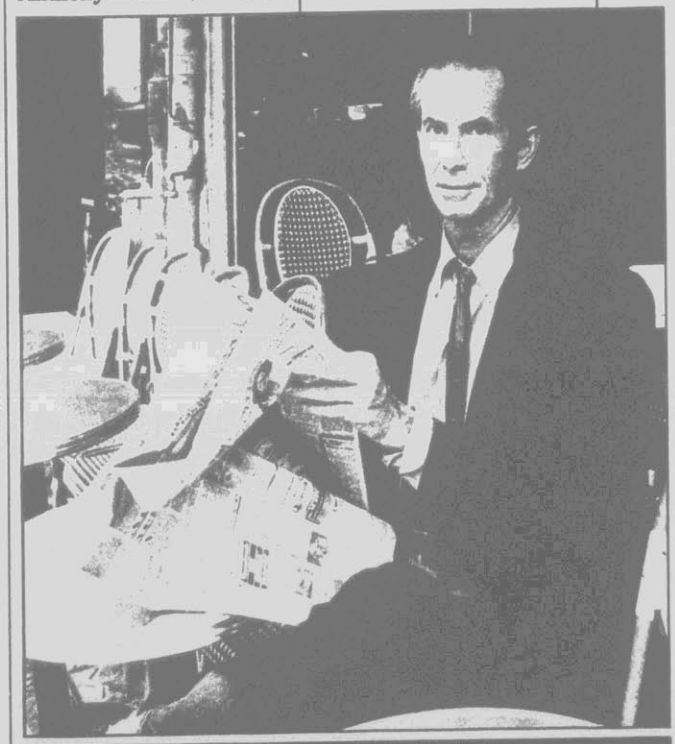
"What advice has given you the most mileage through your acting career?" A.L. of Santa Monica, Calif., writes in to ask Anthony Perkins, star of the upcoming film Crimes of Passion. "Gary Cooper told me to learn my lines for the whole movie, not just those in a particular scene — and to learn them before shooting even begins," recalls Perkins. "One never knows what's going to happen on the set. If it rains, we're told, 'We'll have to go into page 75.' Actors who'd studied the whole script wouldn't gasp, 'Page 75?' I didn't even look at it.'"



PERKINS: READING BETWEEN THE LINES.

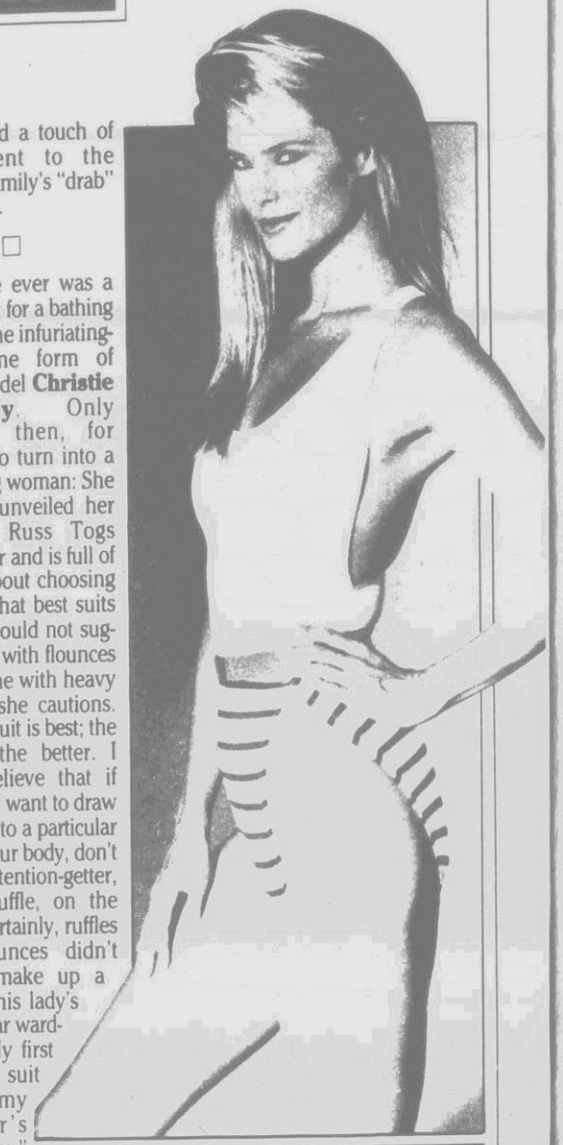
Connie Selleca, the doe-eyed regular with the Rapunzel hair on ABC's series Hotel, is a past victim of the Superwoman Syndrome: "I thought I should be the perfect wife, mother and career woman. I finally realized that I'd never be perfect at any of them, so I relaxed a little. Selleca and her husband, Gil (Buck Rogers) Gerard, were introduced by a mutual friend on a plane flight four years ago, during which "I spilled Amaretto on him and he laughed it off. I liked that." Two months later the pair was secretly wed in Reno. "It was infatuation," says Selleca. "We had to learn to love each other; we did our courting after marriage. I discovered he wasn't Prince Charming, and he discovered I wasn't Cinderella. If we hadn't been married, the relationship probably would have ended. We've learned how to talk in our four years together." Their 2½-year-old son, Gib, has also learned to talk — and fast. "Gib is verbally advanced," says his proud mama. To prove her point, Selleca turns to her son and asks, "What do we say at work, Gib, honey?" Gib's eager response: "Background; roll 'em; quiet, please; speed; action!"

□

A tour of their spacious Manhattan co-op would yield no clue about the professions of Sandy and John Gabriel. She may be the star of the ABC soap All My Children and he the leading man on ABC's Ryan's Hope, but give them the simple life. "Welcome to Squaresville," greets John. "We're home six nights out of seven, rarely go to the theater, and for fun we watch movies with the kids on the VCR." Adds Sandy, "I guess we're dull." Recreation for Sandy seems to consist of buying and returning furniture "because I can't trust my own judgment," she says. "Were it not for John — he's always right — this house would be a blaze of glaring, mismatched colors." Then again, such inferior decoration might add a touch of excitement to the Gabriel family's "drab" existence.

□

If there ever was a body built for a bathing suit, it's the infuriatingly lissome form of super model Christie Brinkley. Only natural, then, for Christie to turn into a designing woman: She recently unveiled her line of Russ Togs swimwear and is full of advice about choosing the suit that best suits you. "I would not suggest suits with flounces for anyone with heavy thighs," she cautions. "A dark suit is best; the simpler the better. I really believe that if you don't want to draw attention to a particular part of your body, don't put an attention-getter, like a ruffle, on the spot." Certainly, ruffles and flounces didn't always make up a part of this lady's waterwear wardrobe. "My first bathing suit was my brother's underwear," recalls Brinkley. "I can still remember how comfortable it felt." Will the Uptown Girl turn her hand to bridal wear next? She and longtime love Billy Joel have finally decided to make things official — with a very large diamond to seal the deal — but at this writing haven't made public the wedding date.



BRINKLEY: DECIDEDLY WELL-SUITED.

The 'Trouble' With Gifted Children

Does Talent Have to Mean Terror?

By Christopher Porterfield

It is a moment that many a chagrined parent has suffered through. A young man has abruptly quit a secure, if mundane, job and has gallivanted off to seek his fortune in his own way. His employer denounces him as a "spoiled, unprincipled, conceited brat."

The youth's father hangs his head in agreement. "The fault is mine. I've been too indulgent with him."

The scene takes place in director Milos Forman's superb new film, Amadeus. The outraged employer is the Archbishop of Salzburg. The unhappy parent is Leopold Mozart, journeyman composer and violin teacher.

Strikingly, this vignette has poignant relevance for all of those today who are concerned about nurturing and placing a proper value on our children's creativity — all the more so since the handling of gifted youngsters has become a widely debated educational and social issue.

Was Leopold Mozart right to accept the blame for spoiling his son? Was he, like so many parents of prodigies, a classic "stage father" who ruthlessly exploited Mozart's gifts but left him ill-equipped to deal with practicalities?

Yes and no. Certainly Leopold dropped everything to hover over every detail of little Wolfgang's musical development. By the time the boy was 6, Papa was trundling him around the courts of Europe, seeking favor by showing off his son's prowess as a composer, violinist and harpsichordist. On the other hand, Leopold broadened Wolfgang's education by teaching him reading, languages and arithmetic, and as the boy grew older, he strove to show him how to exercise diplomacy and advance himself in the world.

Few parents have a young Mozart to raise. But even those with much more modestly gifted children face similar challenges: how to do justice to the child's gift, neither forcing nor neglecting it; how to help the child come to terms with his or her specialness without succumbing to arrogance or alienation; how to help the child chart a balanced course between ambition and down-to-earth, human concerns.

We like to think we have become more enlightened about such matters since the 18th century, but the solutions still aren't easy. In Cradles of Eminence, a study of the childhoods of 20th-century high achievers, Victor Goertzel and Mildred George Goertzel recount one mother's dismay at the loneliness she and her husband felt in their struggle to do right by their brilliant child: "God sent us a gifted one, but He forgot to enclose a book of instructions."

One of the first difficulties may lie in simply recognizing the gift. A flair for music is the easiest to spot, partly because it almost always shows up early. If 4-year-old Jenny can identify the horn on the family car as an F-sharp, and after eavesdropping on her big brother's piano lessons can repeat his exercises by ear, Mom and Dad can be pretty sure they have a genuine talent on their hands.

Spoiled or special? Thomas Hulce as the young Mozart in Amadeus.

Other gifts emerge more gradually. Einstein is the favorite example; he did not speak until he was 4 and did not read until he was 7. And Thomas Edison's parents were convinced at first that he was retarded.

The usual early signs of special ability, if they appear, include great curiosity, independence, a large vocabulary, an ability to reflect on observations, and a fondness for making up games and songs. But many gifted children may combine these traits with—or disguise them behind —a sort of "Amadeus syndrome" that expresses itself in various forms of brattiness.

"Gifted children don't act like other kids by definition," says James T. Webb, a clinical psychologist at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, and a co-author of the book Guiding the Gifted Child. "They are more inquisitive, quite active, they often need less sleep, they get into things, often they are seen as hyperactive, obnoxious, unruly, strong-willed, mischievous, unmanageable and rebellious."

The more imaginative and creative the child is, the more likely this is to be true. Those whose strong suit is sheer braininess (an IQ of 130 or higher is considered to be in the gifted range) may occasionally be a parent's dream. Future lawyers or economists, for example, can be organized, oriented toward mastery of assigned tasks, eager to please.

But in general, gifted children, especially the creative ones— the future artists or inventors (who may also have stratospheric IQs)—are likely to be trouble for their parents. The reason is perfectly natural. They themselves often feel troubled. They know they are different; they feel the envy of their playmates; and they are burdened by high expectations, including their own.

At least one expert, the noted psychologist and author Bruno Bettelheim, believes those children can work things out on their own. "I feel that the gifted child, despite the concern of many parents, is well able to take care of himself," says Bettelheim. "If he isn't, then he isn't gifted."

Others caution that without special guidance, sensitive, stress-ridden, gifted children may be prone to depression, drug abuse, underachievement or dropping out of society altogether. Pianist Lorin Hollander maintains from personal experience that "the creative child often feels he's damaged because early in childhood he saw things his peers didn't, and those things torment him until he learns to use them."

Webb and his co-authors, Elizabeth A. Meckstroth and Stephanie S. Tolan, suggest that parents try to instill a sense of humor, especially the kind of gentle self-mockery that can release tensions. In addition, they recommend that children be encouraged to share their stress by thinking aloud about it, and to practice "positive ignoring" — deliberately switching to less perplexing thoughts or activities.

Ruth Duskin Feldman, a former darling of the Quiz Kids radio show of the '40s, looked up 85 fellow alumni of the show and combined their reflections in a book called Whatever Happened to the Quiz Kids? Perils and Profits of Growing Up Gifted. Among her no-nonsense prescriptions: "Give praise and encouragement, but don't push too hard. And maintain discipline. Even a gifted child can take out the garbage."

Nearly everyone seems to agree nowadays that it is dangerous to subject gifted children to the glare of publicity and the pressures of public performing. Fiendishly accomplished tykes have largely disappeared from our musical platforms, and "prodigy" has turned into something of a dirty word within the past couple of decades.

This is partly because ex-prodigies have been so vocal about the traumas of the experience. Conductor Lorin Maazel, who caused a sensation in the '30s by leading symphony orchestras before he was out of short pants, recalls with bitterness that "I was dropped flat as soon as I lost my market value as a monstrosity."

Consider, by contrast, the way violinist Isaac Stern took charge of his protégé Pinchas Zukerman in the '60s. After bringing Zukerman to the United States from Israel, where the 11-year-old had already performed widely, Stern arranged for him to study music at the Julliard School in New York and then cancelled all his engagements. "You need time to absorb and time to live," Stern told him. Zukerman resurfaced in concert halls a few years later and has enjoyed a resoundingly successful career ever since, both as a string virtuoso and a conductor.

One mother's lament: "God sent us a gifted one, but He forgot to enclose a book of instructions."

Yet it is possible to miss the real moral of the Zukerman story. His mentor may have removed Zukerman from the pressures of performing, but at the same time he ensured that the boy would go full steam ahead with intensive training. In other words, Stern did nothing to play down Zukerman's gift, but may even have nourished it more fully.

Such nourishment is possible in conservatories and other special institutions, but it is much harder to come by in the school systems. Parents of gifted children may face their toughest challenge at the schoolroom door.

A number of special programs have been developed in recent years for students of outstanding ability. In most states there are support groups to help parents make the best use of the school's resources. Increasingly, colleges and universities offer special guidance and opportunities. But overall, educators have not been very imaginative in meeting the needs of the gifted.

By their nature, public school systems are geared to norms. They want students to do well but are flummoxed by those who do too well, or by those whose strengths lie so far outside the curriculum that they become bored or obstreperous within it.

And in fact, our schools mirror our society. For all our talk of individualism, Americans tend to be suspicious of exceptional cases, of brilliant oddities. We like folks to be well-adjusted and well-rounded. Anything that smacks of elitism or favoritism ruffles our democratic pieties.

But those pieties begin to sound hollow when tested against the accomplishments of some of the highbrows, troublemakers and oddballs who have enriched our national life — the Nobel scientists, the poets, the bridge builders, the philosophers. Just imagine what might happen if a latter-day Leopold Mozart ran head-on into the Creed of the Common Denominator in a conference with a school counselor.

"What's the problem?"

"He doesn't relate to his peers. Acts bored, or makes up games and riddles they don't understand, some of them quite—well, unsuitable. He's clever, but he lords it over the others."

"I see."

"But music is his passion."

"All well and good in its place, but he's a bit, er, obsessive about it. Our task is to educate the whole child."

"What do you suggest?"

"Perhaps he should get away from his eternal keyboard and spend more time out of doors. And frankly, I think he'd do well to broaden his interests along more practical lines, so that someday if music doesn't work out, he'll have something to fall back on."

This is highly exaggerated, of course, but as long as there is a grain of truth in it, parents have cause for concern. Yes, a gifted child needs to be well-adjusted—to his own extraordinariness. He needs to be well-rounded, too—in the realization of his unique potential. When both these needs are satisfied, the long-range results may be practical even by society's standards.

As the Goertzels observe, "The child who is both intelligent and creative remains society's most valuable resource. When we learn to work with him instead of against him, his talents may reward us in ways beyond our ability to imagine."

So let's hear it for poor old Leopold. Despite his mistakes, his efforts can ultimately be counted a success. After all, he gave us Mozart. His guiding principle turns out to be one that, allowing for altered circumstances, still applies for parents today: Go with the gift. FW

DRUGS AND THE ELDERLY: KNOW THE RISKS

By Howard L. Rosenberg

At the admitting desk of a hospital in the Baltimore area, 80-year-old Matilda turned over the handful of prescription bottles she kept in her purse. During the next few days, the doctors treating her for heart problems prescribed new medications. On her way out of the hospital she picked up the drugs she had surrendered earlier.

Upon returning home, Matilda dutifully gulped down her usual clutch of pills and then swallowed the new capsules ordered by the hospital doctors. Within hours she was lethargic, confused and reeling with nausea. Frantic, her relatives called their family physician. He prescribed yet another medication.

Finally, one of Matilda's children thought to tell the doctor about all the drugs she was taking. The doctor quickly realized she was suffering the symptoms of "polymedicine" — a syndrome in which several drugs interact to produce an adverse reaction — and ordered her to stop taking all the medications. She recovered almost immediately. Later, her doctor slowly re-introduced necessary drugs, carefully monitoring her body's response.

Millions of elderly Americans aren't as lucky. A recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association estimated 31 percent of the elderly make clinically serious, sometimes life-threatening errors in the use of prescription drugs. Recent studies conclude conservatively that in the United States, 12 to 17 percent of elderly patients admitted to hospitals are suffering from drug-induced problems.

Al Gold

A major difficulty in dealing with the problem of prescription drugs and the elderly, says Professor Peter Lamy, chairman of the Department of Pharmacy Practice at the University of Maryland in Baltimore and a leading expert in the field of drugs and the aged, "is that many of the symptoms people associate with the aging process are identical to those indicating an adverse drug reaction. Confusion, for example, may be age-related, it may be disease-related or it may be drug-related. So if the patient is confused, you really have to trace carefully what's causing it."

As people age, they become more sensitive to drugs and are more likely to have a reaction. The more drugs a person takes, the better chance there is of some sort of chemical conflict. Nothing — not even a vitamin — is innocuous. Almost any sort of chemical introduced into the body has the potential to conflict with something else. And the longer a person takes a particular drug, the more likely an adverse reaction becomes.

Another factor complicating the problem is the trend to switch prescription drugs to over-the-counter (OTC) status. Ibuprofen, a pain-reliever used by arthritis patients for years, recently became available as an OTC analgesic. Research indicates that as many as two-thirds of the elderly may purchase non-prescription drugs routinely, many of

"When I looked through the small window, I almost dropped my key..."

Hello... My name is Bud Weckesser.

A number of years ago I was a speech teacher in Kent, Ohio.

One night my wife and I were playing cards with some friends. Mary mentioned casually that—on our budget—she was sure she knew 101 ways to fix hamburger.

That hurt. So I challenged her.

"If you'll type up the recipes," I said, "I'll take out a small ad in a magazine and we'll see if anyone will pay $3.98 for your collection of recipes."

I rented a P.O. Box in Kent and placed the ad. It cost $53.00.

Several weeks later I stopped by the post office. I walked over to my box. When I looked through the little glass window on the door, I almost dropped my key. The box was stuffed—jammed—full of letters. All of them contained checks for $3.98.

The next few days were hectic, to say the least. My wife typed the recipes. I had them duplicated, stapled them together and our crude little book was born.

Several months later we decided to try marketing another booklet. This time, I typed some of my own home beermaking and wine-making recipes. I placed a small ad in Popular Mechanics. Again, we received thousands of orders for $3.98 each. And, most of it was clear profit because the booklet cost us less than 12¢ per copy.

$3,000.00 IN 90 DAYS!

In the months that followed, I corresponded with other advertisers:

- In Akron, Ohio, a 71 year old retiree marketed a booklet she had printed for 6¢ a copy. She placed her small ad (which I prepared for her) in several magazines. When things finally settled down, she discovered that she had made over $3,000 in the first 90 days!
- A friend of mine in Vancouver, Washington wrote to tell me he'd made over $14,000 selling a tiny 4-page booklet about getting rid of moles and gophers in your yard.
- A New Jersey man I spoke with published some of his grandmother's Polish recipes. Using a small ad in various newspapers he sold over 40,000 copies at $4.95 each. Almost $200,000 in gross profits!
- A Maryland man put together an 8½ × 11 booklet of business advice. So far it's brought him over $166,000... all by mail.

Let me give you some more amazing facts about this unique little business.

- You can start at home... in your spare time... quietly... it won't interfere with your present job.
- You can take out a test ad for as little as $15.00 in a variety of well-known national magazines.
- You don't even have to write a booklet yourself. I'll show you how to obtain "how-to" booklets at wholesale prices or below. They're already written, already printed and ready to sell.
- You can set your own hours. All you need is a post office nearby.
- You can deduct up to 33% of the expenses on your home if you set up your office at home.

If you're wondering why I'd share such a profitable business with you, the reason is simple: I won't be competing with you—nor you with me. There are thousands of profitable topics to choose from. I have a whole drawer full of ideas I haven't even tried yet. There's plenty of room for everyone.

PROFIT TEST

If you're skeptical about the enormous profit potential of these small ads, here's a simple way you can verify everything I've been saying:

First, obtain a copy of Popular Mechanics, Field and Stream, Mechanix Illustrated or any popular magazine. Turn to the classified ads (the section supposedly... "no one reads"). Now, count the number of ads for "how-to" booklets on just one page. Multiply this by the number of pages of ads... and then by the vast number of publications that have classified ads.

Now, go one step further, please. Check some issues of the same magazine that are 12 months old. Notice how many of those same ads are still running.

This is an absolute profit test. It has to be. People don't continue running ads for over a year unless they are making a substantial profit!

START IN JUST TWO WEEKS

I've put all my instructions and materials—every detail—in a simple Starter Program. You'll receive step-by-step instructions on audio cassette, as well as over 90 pages of written material. You'll discover:

- How to set up your office at home.
- How to keep records and tabulate results.
- How to save 15% to 17% on every ad you place.
- How to obtain FREE ads in magazines.
- Where to have booklets printed at 75% SAVINGS over local printers.
- How to choose a name for your business.
- Where to get hundreds of different booklets ALREADY WRITTEN AND PRINTED.

You'll also receive:

- A complete list of most profitable mail order magazines.
- All the forms you'll need to insert your ads in magazines or newspapers.
- Sample ads. Lots of them. These are actual ads that you can use and modify to your own needs.
- A list of national magazines that charge only $15.00 per ad.

Order the complete program. When you do, post date your check 30 days. That way it's not even money because it's not negotiable. I'll send you everything at once. If you're not satisfied, just return the package and I'll send you back your ORIGINAL UNCASHED CHECK.

OR... keep my materials for A FULL YEAR. Try a test ad or two yourself. If you're not delighted with the results, simply return my materials. I'll refund your purchase price of $29.95 a year from now.

Early detection can save 3 out of 4 lives.

Colorectal cancer is a serious disease that strikes the colon or rectum. Next to lung cancer, it's the leading cause of cancer-related deaths in this country. 130,000 new cases will be diagnosed this year, and nearly half of them (59,000) will prove fatal. It doesn't have to be that way. If detected early, the chances of surviving colorectal cancer are greatly improved.

Why Should I Worry? I've Never Been Sick a Day in My Life.

Wonderful, but unfortunately it's no guarantee that you won't get cancer of the colon or rectum. Colorectal cancer strikes men and women with equal frequency.

Age, however, is a factor, since the risk increases dramatically if you're over 40. If you're past that age, or if there is a history of cancer (especially colorectal cancer) in your family, you should know about the Hemoccult® HomeTest, an easy examination for a sign of colorectal cancer that you can give yourself, in the privacy of your own home.

Detecting Hidden Warnings.

The name Hemoccult comes from hemo, meaning "blood," and occult, meaning "hidden." The test materials have been chemically treated to detect otherwise unnoticeable traces of blood in a person's stool—hidden blood that could be an early tip-off to the presence of cancer or other colorectal diseases.

Using the test is simple. Everything has been provided to make it fast, easy and painless (read and follow package directions carefully.) Within 60 seconds the results will be evident. If they reveal the presence of blood, see your doctor promptly.

Early Detection Could Save 3 out of 4 People.

In most cases, the Hemoccult Home Test results will simply bring you the relief and satisfaction of learning that blood, which may be a sign of cancer, is not evident. But even if hidden blood is detected, there is still no reason to panic. The presence of blood in the stool can be an indication of other conditions far less serious than colorectal cancer. And even if cancer is diagnosed, with early detection the survival rate is approximately 75%.

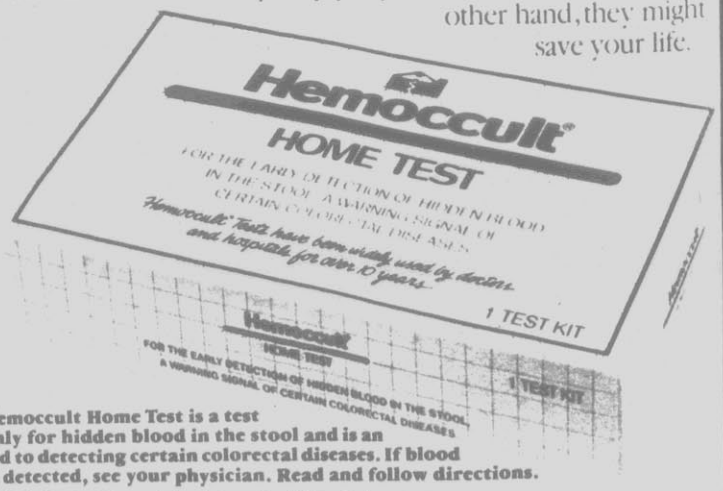
What Can Be Done to Reduce the Risk of Colorectal Cancer in the First Place?

Obviously there are no guarantees, but evidence suggests that a proper diet may offer the best defense. The basic rule of thumb is to increase the fiber in your diet and reduce fat. And of course, the need for a periodic doctor's examination cannot be overstressed.

Over a Decade of Use in Hospitals

Hemoccult has been used by millions of patients in hospitals and doctors' offices for years. Now the Hemoccult Home Test is available wherever drugs are sold. Of course, the Hemoccult Home Test is no substitute for your doctor's regular physical examination, but between checkups it provides an added means of early detection.

Remember, the odds of your having colorectal cancer are small, but not small enough to ignore. The few minutes you take for the test will most likely help put your mind at ease. On the other hand, they might save your life.



Hemoccult Home Test is a test only for hidden blood in the stool and is an aid to detecting certain colorectal diseases. If blood is detected, see your physician. Read and follow directions.

Moreover, pharmaceutical manufacturers don't often test drugs on older patients, preferring to use young, healthy volunteers. One reason is a fear of putting the aged at risk. Most elderly must be excluded as experimental subjects anyway because of a history of some disease, or because they regularly take some other drug that might skew test results.

For its part, the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has never issued appropriate guidelines governing drug testing in elderly populations. The FDA's Dr. Robert Temple has drafted a working set of directions for the drug industry, and the government hopes to issue guidelines within the next year.

Washington is also backing several drug education campaigns aimed at the elderly. Last year the FDA sent out messages to 36 million Social Security recipients along with their benefit checks, urging them to consult doctors and pharmacists about their prescription medications. Millions of similar FDA brochures are distributed through supermarkets and drugstores free of charge.

Meanwhile Dr. Lamy advises elderly patients not to be passive about their health care and, when they suffer symptoms that could be a drug reaction, never to accept the diagnosis that "it's just old age."

Insists Lamy: "Sometimes it might be just a symptom of old age, but don't accept that. Ask questions and give your doctor information. When we interview patients who have had adverse reactions, invariably they say, 'The doctor didn't tell me.' And the doctor always says, 'They didn't ask.'"

Lamy recommends that elderly people always visit physicians with two lists. One list should catalogue everything the patient needs to tell the doctor — all drugs the patient is taking (including OTC medications and vitamins), eating and sleeping habits and general state of health.

The other list should pose a series of critical questions. Do I need this drug? What is it? What will it do? How long can I expect to take it? How will I feel? How do I take it? With food? At bedtime? What does four times a day mean?

Experts advise the elderly to ask their doctors detailed questions about all prescribed drugs.

Every six hours? Should I get up during the night to take it? Does this medication interfere or react with any other drug I'm taking? Can I expect side effects?

If medication is prescribed, patients should try to fill all their drug orders at the same pharmacy, so that the druggist can keep track of the medications the person is taking and monitor problems that might crop up. Many pharmacies keep computerized records of which drugs customers are using, and a trained pharmacist who's on the ball will spot a potential adverse reaction first.

"Pharmacists need to get involved with the patient," says pharmacist Madeline Feinberg, president-elect of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association. "They need to know when to ask questions, particularly when the patient starts a new medication or fails to refill a current prescription on time, or chooses a nonprescription item that might cause problems. The pharmacist can't just throw the prescription over the counter and say goodbye." Concludes Feinberg, "I also tell my patients to ask questions. You wouldn't buy a car or carpeting for your house without finding out everything you can about it first. You should treat medications the same way." FW

GORDON WILLIAMS' MONTHLY COLUMN

BANKING FROM YOUR LIVING ROOM

It's nearly midnight on a Sunday, and I've just "visited" my bank. I arranged to pay bills, checked my balance, and got my banker's latest thinking on the economy.

I can do all this from my home because I subscribe to Pronto — the computerized home-banking system of Chemical Bank in New York. But this system is not unique. If I lived in California, I could bank from home through HomeBanking from Bank of America. If I lived in one of certain New York City suburbs, I could soon use the HomeBase system of Citibank.

There aren't many of us yet who bank from home via computer — fewer than 30,000 in fact. But one year ago, there were no computerized home-banking systems in regular use. A year from now, there could be a dozen. Citibank will be offering its HomeBase system later this year, and systems are being tested at several other banks.

When you bank from home electronically, you can use your computer to check your account balance, and you can shift money from one account at the bank to another. You can see, displayed on your screen, all your recent banking transactions. You can exchange "electronic mail" with the bank and, in some systems, with other computer-banking customers. And you can do all of it at any hour of the day or night, when it's convenient for you.

Finally, you can pay bills electronically to the local and national merchants who join the system. You can tell the bank to schedule a payment for the next banking day, or for as far ahead as 90 days. You can even arrange a recurring payment, such as the mortgage.

My bank insists that I confirm every transaction by indicating on the screen that all my instructions are correct. I can review the instructions I give the bank, and I can make all the changes I want until 6 a.m. of the day the transaction is to be carried out. Each month I get a statement listing all transactions, so I can double-check that everything was done right.

The cost of banking at home runs high. HomeBanking's fee is $8 a month; Pronto's is $12. Yet you'll still have to visit your bank to make a deposit or to cash a check.

But there's a powerful incentive for banks to make their computerized systems irresistible to everyone. Banks want all the financial business you can give them. As they diversify, that can cover more and more ground, from stock brokerage to life insurance. The more they offer, the better customer you're likely to be.

In time, the cost of banking at home will come down. And to get more of us to sign up, banks will offer more and more services until we all become computerized banking customers. FW

TUPELO BROCCOLI QUICHE

- 4 cups chopped broccoli or other favorite vegetable such as zucchini, yellow squash or green beans
- 1 cup chopped onion
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup finely chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- ¼ teaspoon garlic salt, or to taste
- ¼ teaspoon basil leaves
- ¼ teaspoon oregano leaves
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup milk or half-and-half cream
- 2 cups Muenster or mozzarella cheese, shredded
- 1 (8-oz.) can crescent-style refrigerator dinner rolls
- 2 teaspoons mustard

1. Saute broccoli and onion in butter, stirring constantly, for 8-10 minutes. Stir in parsley, salt, pepper, garlic salt, basil and oregano. 2. In large bowl, blend eggs, milk and cheese. Stir in vegetables. 3. Separate dough into 8 flat triangles. Arrange in an ungreased 11-inch quiche pan, 13×9-inch baking dish, or 10-inch pie pan. Press dough down and together and up sides of pan to form a crust. Spread dough with mustard. Pour in the vegetable-cheese mixture. 4. Bake in preheated 375° oven for 25-30 minutes. If crust browns too quickly, cover with foil. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting to firm up the filling. Cut into wedges or strips to serve.

A delicious little coffee cake just perfect for a morning or evening coffee klatch, "Swedish Kringle" was sent in by Nancy Canady of Tyler, Texas. Nancy says that "the Swedish Kringle is a family recipe. It is a favorite at Christmastime and perfect for morning coffee. It is pretty, very crusty, and delicate, with a delightful almond flavor. I hope you will like it. We enjoy Family Weekly in the Courier-Times-Telegraph, Tyler, Texas."

SWEDISH KRINGLE

Bottom Crust

- ½ cup unsalted butter or margarine
- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon water

Top Layer

- 1 cup water
- ½ cup unsalted butter or margarine
- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- 3 eggs
- ½ teaspoon almond extract

Frosting

- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter or margarine
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- 1 tablespoon milk

1. To make bottom crust: Using pastry blender, two knives, or a mixing fork, cut ½ cup butter into flour; stir in water. Mix thoroughly until mixture holds together; use your hands if necessary. 2. On ungreased baking sheet, pat dough into desired shape — a strip or a horseshoe shape is nice — about 3-inches wide and 14-inches long. 3. To make top layer: Place 1 cup water in heavy saucepan with ½ cup butter; heat to boiling point. Remove from heat and immediately stir in flour smoothly. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating hard until well-blended. Add almond extract. 4. Using a small spatula and a spoon, spread top layer dough over the first layer, lightly sealing top layer dough to the bottom. Bake in preheated 350° oven for 55-60 minutes until golden and puffed up. Cool on rack until completely cold. Pastry will flatten somewhat on cooling. 5. To make frosting: In small bowl, blend confectioners' sugar, butter and almond extract. Add enough milk to make a spreading consistency and frost pastry with mixture. Cut crosswise into strips to serve.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

STACEY KEACH

TV'S "MIKE HAMMER" SHOOTS THE BREEZE

For years, Stacey Keach was known as an "actor's actor" — well respected in his profession but not quite a superstar. Recently, however, he has snagged major parts in TV mini-series such as The Blue and the Gray and Princess Daisy, and he has just played the leading role in CBS's Mistral's Daughter. Keach is also the star of the successful series Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer.

Keach's surging career was tinged with controversy when he was arrested last April at Heathrow Airport in London and charged with importing $7,500 worth of cocaine. He was released on a cash bail of $100,000.

When writer Digby Diehl caught up with Keach, the actor had just finished a strenuous workout. He relaxed in his sweatsuit and talked about a variety of subjects. Keach is not at liberty to discuss the charges against him, as the case is now pending in court.

Diehl: Did you read Spillane when you were growing up?

Keach: Yeah. My mother used to say: "What are you reading those filthy books for? Take those books out of your bedroom." You read them today and they are so tame considering what we've gone through in the last 20 or 30 years. But we have tried to maintain something of the spirit of the risqué, a little bit of that element, in the show. I think it's part of the genre.

Q: I guess since you're happily married, you're not out running around with lady stars.

Keach: Right. The nicest thing is that [my wife] Jill is an actress, so she understands the insanity of this business. People ask her all the time, "How do you feel about your husband kissing all these beautiful dames?" [She replies,] "As long as he looks good, stays on the air, keeps the dough coming in so we can finish the house..." She makes me very happy because she really does understand. I love to travel with her. We've been all over the world together. She's a wonderful companion.

Q: You've said that if for some reason you couldn't be an actor you'd be in football.

Keach: At one point I wanted to be a professional football player. I started freshman ball, and that was very short-lived because I was at [the University of California at] Berkeley, and I was too small, too brittle — and my grades were on the edge — so I said that's the end of that. But at one point in my life that was my dream — to be a professional football player.

Keach: I'm very lucky to be doing that. I was never motivated by being a movie star. I wanted to be a wonderful actor, be the best I could possibly be. But everybody has his own time and his own moment. FW

AT HOME

THE "LOOK" OF HOUSES COAST TO COAST

By Philip Langdon

Tell people in Houston that they could have a whirlpool bath in their next newly built house, and nearly half of them would say they'd be willing to pay extra to get it. Make the same suggestion to home buyers in Detroit, and all they're likely to conjure up are visions of unnecessary extravagance.

Ask a Bostonian if he'd like to have a three-car garage, and he's apt to think you've lost contact with reality. But ask the same question in Southern California, and more than one person in four will say — with considerable attention to reality — that he expects to have a three-car garage in his next new house.

In the suburbs of Washington, D.C., aluminum siding is the most commonly used material for the exteriors of new houses. In Denver, hardly anyone accepts aluminum siding. Coloradans want walls of a natural material — if not wood straight from the sawmill, then siding made of pressed wood fibers that manages to retain wood's appearance, sound and texture. Southern Californians choose stucco, and home buyers in St. Louis select brick.

For the roof, Southern Californians prefer tile, Oregonians want to see wood shingles, and Bostonians, like most Eastern and Midwestern home buyers, expect shingles made of asphalt.

These variations in materials — and ultimately in styles — are partly the result of differing climates and regional architectural traditions, two factors that also influence the way the house opens up to its surroundings.

A patio or balcony attached to the master bedroom is a popular feature in Southern California, where outdoor privacy is provided by 6-foot-high walls that enclose the yard — the modern equivalent of the walled gardens and patios enjoyed two centuries ago by the Southwest's Spanish colonizers.

By contrast, master bedroom patios and balconies are far less prevalent in the St. Louis and Washington, D.C., areas, where tall privacy fences are considered unneighborly, and the weather more often forces people indoors.

Even within a single state, there are sometimes markedly different opinions on the most appropriate setting for a home. Rik Alex of U.S. Home Corp. in Arizona notes that Phoenix residents use water from the Salt River to maintain extensive green lawns, while Tucson residents, dependent on water from underground wells, cover their yards with a red gravel interspersed with rocks and desert plants.

Features inside the house also vary widely from one region to another. Hardwood floors are demanded twice as often in the suburbs of the nation's capital as they are in Texas and Southern California.

Texans and Floridians, according to a survey by the trade journal Multi-Housing News, are bigger on buying trash compactors than are people in the Northeastern and North Central states. Californians want fireplaces despite plentiful warm weather; many Floridians don't.

People in the North Central states are more willing than people anywhere else to pay for ceramic tile walls and floors in the master bathroom. They, along with Californians, are also most easily sold on ceramic tile countertops in the kitchen.

Plush bathrooms with such features as bidets, double-sink vanities, oversized tubs, and separate shower compartments are being promoted throughout much of the nation. Sid Stephenson, who oversees U.S. Home's developments in much of the East and Midwest, finds that people in many Northern metropolitan areas with stagnant or declining economies are eager to visit model homes to inspect the luxurious new features, but rarely will they buy them.

"Every little twinge in the economy causes them to think that they may be able to afford it now, but if the economy declines, they may lose their jobs," says Stephenson. "A big bathtub with a Jacuzzi means 'let the good times roll.' It's incongruous. These buyers are looking for utility." If they do decide to invest additional money in a home, usually it's for something more practical and traditional, like a first-class kitchen.

Home buyers in economically unsteady areas are so wary that they will often distrust a house containing a mirrored wall. Marketing in such areas has to be conducted in a different spirit than it is elsewhere. In a booming, euphoric Sunbelt city, a house exterior possessing unusual flair can stimulate home sales, but in more sober sections of the North, the same design can turn potential home buyers away.

After the Arab oil embargo of 1973 jolted energy prices upward, many Northern houses were built with ceiling heights of 7½ feet instead of the standard 8 feet, notes Bill Devereaux, division manager of Berkus Group Architects for the Eastern United States. Cathedral ceilings — then slowly being adapted from designs popular in California — quickly lost favor.

Mena Dolobowsky

Now, because many new houses have less square footage than their predecessors of a few years ago, there's a tendency to go back to 8-foot ceilings for a sense of spaciousness. Nonetheless, the "volume ceilings" so popular in the Sunbelt — sloping upward for dramatic effect — are used more sparingly in much of the North.

There's little reason to think that regional differences in housing will disappear. The strikingly different economic prospects of various parts of the country have helped produce a contrast in attitudes — cautious and basically utilitarian in the North (with some exceptions, such as New England), experimental and more leisure-minded in prosperous sections of the Sunbelt.

And now that energy from fossil fuels is too expensive to be squandered, climate is doing more to distinguish the houses of one region from those of another than at any time in the past 50 years. The idea of finding a single best solution to America's housing needs has been largely discarded.

The most thoughtful architects today see diversity as a virtue; houses that differ according to their locale can respond better to climate and to people's needs, and they can reinforce each region's distinctiveness. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

THE ART OF HEALING

Has it ever struck you that it's not only the instruments in hospitals that are sterile? The surroundings can be pretty antiseptic, too. John Feight, a former ad man, had the same thoughts while working as a volunteer at an Atlanta hospital.

The artist in him objected to the blandness of the surroundings, so he asked for and received permission to paint the walls. And Feight didn't simply settle for a brighter color. "I decided to paint whatever was on the other side of the wall," Feight says, "which was probably what the patients wished they could see."

Since that day nine years ago, Feight has painted over 1,700 murals in 62 hospitals. He is willing to travel to any hospital, anywhere. Once there, he enlists the help of the patients and staff. The hospital pays for supplies, travel, and whatever honorarium it can afford. But Feight has occasionally worked for free when the hospital could not afford to pay.

Feight told us that he was inspired by his grandfather, a country doctor who donated his services to destitute patients. Though Feight has painted and will continue to paint hospitals all around the world, he keeps his work in perspective. "Artists talk about the healing power of art," he says. "Art can't heal anybody — but it can divert them. If a patient passes by one of my paintings and likes it, maybe that's a minute in which he thought about the painting and not about his pain." Feight can be contacted at the Foundation of Hospital Art in Atlanta, Ga.; (404) 393-2931.

STRESS TABS

Some sage said that good things come in small packages. It seems, however, that it may be the little things in life that raise our blood pressure and set us on edge.

Richard S. Lazarus, of the University of California at Berkeley, has found that it is minor worries and the daily hassles, not major disappointments and disasters, that lead to poor mental and physical health. Further, after a year of studying life's stresses and how we react to them, he found that the little bits of good news, the "uplifts" that come along, do little to buffer the impact of negative events.

Lazarus found that the things that irritate people vary with profession and lifestyle, but that three anxiety-causers were common to everyone. They are: misplacing or losing objects, concern over physical appearance, and having too many things to do. (So relax. You look fine. Your pen and pencil set is under the couch. And you can take today off.)

SPEND THE NIGHT AT MICHAEL JACKSON'S

You can stay at Michael Jackson's. Just call ahead — for a reservation. Michael visits Walt Disney World in Florida so often that the Hotel Royal Plaza there has set aside a suite in his honor.

Michael has had the two bedrooms and the living room decorated in a dramatic combination of black and white and grey, with a laserdisc entertainment center, an art deco sofa, and Michael's signature on a gold plaque on the door. He has also added a few homey touches by tacking up his 37 gold and platinum records, his seven American Music Awards, and his eight Grammys.

All this ambience can be yours. And for a mere $420 a night, you can't beat it. Well, even if you can, a night there would be a guaranteed thriller.

MAMMOTH MISTAKE

We feel duty bound to inform our readers that the item "Mammoth Undertaking," which appeared in the June 24 edition of this column, contained some erroneous information. The item was based on a report in the prestigious Technology Review, published at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It turns out, however, that the scientific minds at the Review had entered a more irregular orbit than usual this past April: Their report on cloning a Woolly Mammoth was an April Fool's Day joke on their readers. In being taken in by the review's mammoth hoax, "What in the World" was in distinguished company—others who spread the Review's shaggy-mammoth story included The Chicago Tribune News Service, The Fort Worth Star-Telegram and The Cincinnati Enquirer. We apologize for the error.

BOOKMARKS

Casey Kasem, host of American Top 40.

"I recently finished Jerry Lewis's autobiography, In Person. An entertainer can only achieve something worthwhile for others through his popularity — Lewis is one person who has been able to do this. The book shows you why he's accomplished so much: He is unique, and has never been afraid to take chances."

John Dahl, Program Director, KWEB, Rochester, Minn.

"I've been reading in Tolkien's Lord of the Rings since about 1970, but this time I read from top to bottom. I'm in a different world for as long as I'm in one of his books. I also recently went to Las Vegas, so I read Fools Die by Mario Puzo. It's the best Vegas literature I've read — the most realistic about the power behind the casinos."

Second-Hand Smoke: The Myth and The Reality.

Many non-smokers are annoyed by cigarette smoke. This is a reality that's been with us for a long time.

Lately, however, many non-smokers have come to believe that cigarette smoke in the air can actually cause disease.

But, in fact, there is little evidence—and certainly nothing which proves scientifically—that cigarette smoke causes disease in non-smokers.

We know this statement may seem biased. But it is supported by findings and views of independent scientists—including some of the tobacco industry's biggest critics.

Lawrence Garfinkel of the American Cancer Society, for example. Mr. Garfinkel, who is the Society's chief statistician, published a study in 1981 covering over 175,000 people, and reported that "passive smoking" had "very little, if any" effect on lung cancer rates among non-smokers.

You may have seen reports stating that in the course of an evening, a non-smoker could breathe in an amount of smoke equivalent to several cigarettes or more.

But a scientific study by the Harvard School of Public Health, conducted in various public places, found that non-smokers might inhale anywhere from 1/1000th to 1/100th of one filter cigarette per hour. At that rate, it would take you at least 4 days to inhale the equivalent of a single cigarette.

Often our own concerns about our health can take an unproven claim and magnify it out of all proportion; so, what begins as a misconception turns into a frightening myth.

Is "second-hand smoke" one of these myths? We hope the information we've offered will help you sort out some of the realities.

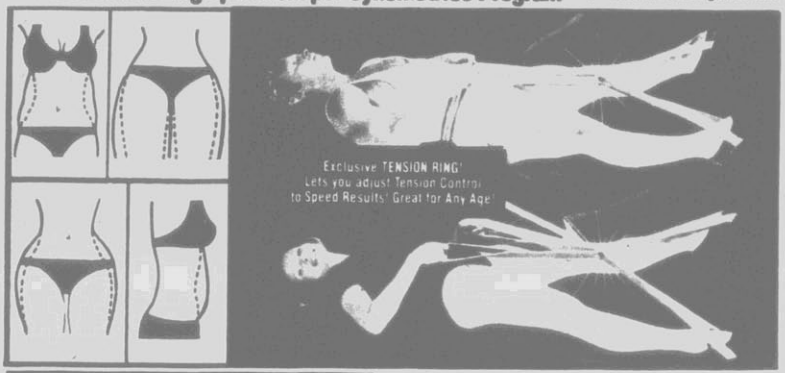
Lose Belly Fat Develop a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

with the amazing Speed Shaper Synometrics Program

Introducing IKE BERGER Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes



IN JUST 7 SHORT MINUTES A DAY with the "miracle-" we call SYNOMETRICS (scientific concept of ISOMETRIC + ISOTONIC)...the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim handsome body!

In addition to reshaping and toning your body, a FREE accompanying easy to follow diet plan will help speed up weight loss, if weight loss is one of your objectives, to speed away ugly, embarrassing fat & flab.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS "...the new EASY speed method for figure beauty What is SYNOMETRICS? You've probably heard about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics for years. Each method has its own believers and supporters. I used BOTH methods in my daily training. Finally, I developed a special exercise unit that employed BOTH methods AT THE SAME TIME in one device. The effect was simply amazing. I was able to keep in trim, slim shape in only a fraction of the time I previously needed!

The Science of SYNOMETRICS I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is...a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now...build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

HE TURNS ANGRILY AT THE INTRUSION. "GO AWAY," ARTHUR COMMANDS. "I WILL BURN WITH ALL THAT I HAVE BUILT."

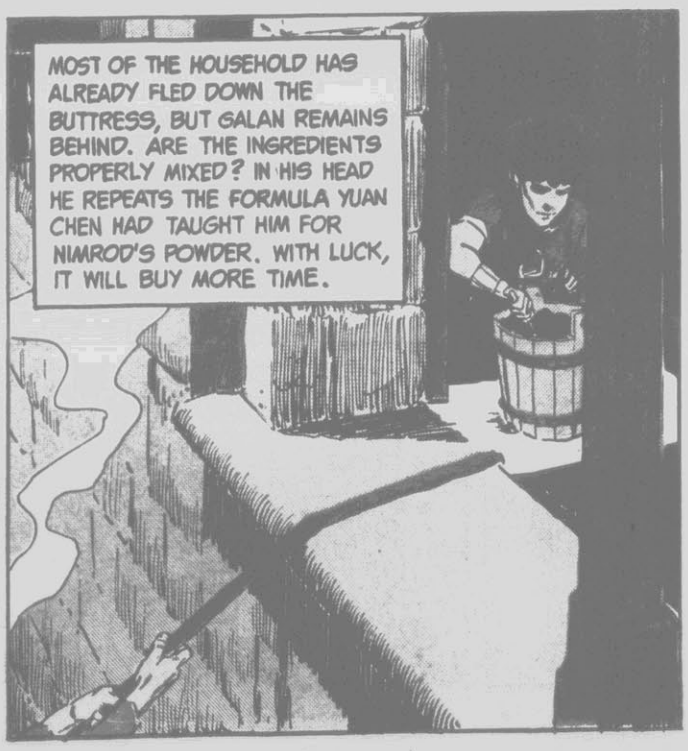
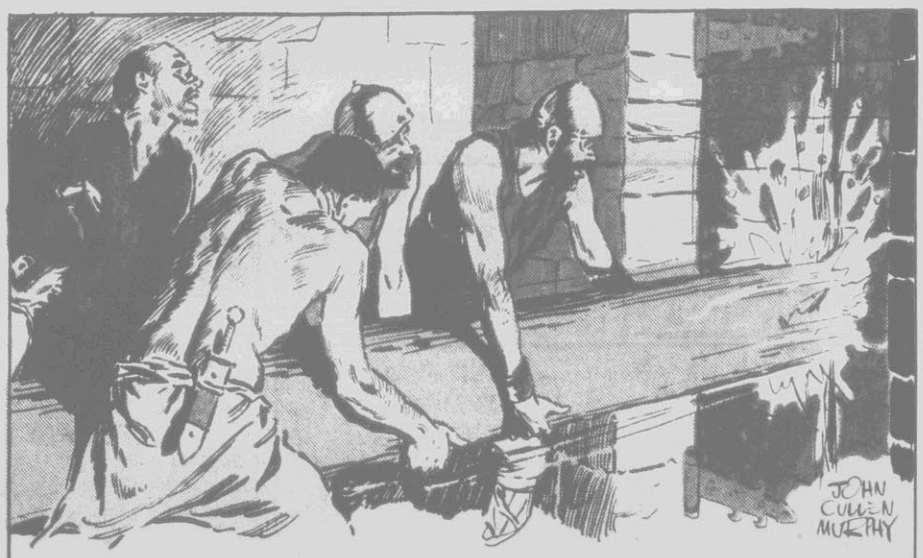
VAL HAS NO TIME FOR SELF-PITY. HE DOES HIS MONARCH A SERVICE WHOSE PRICE WILL BE A NASTY BRUISE, THEN HOISTS THE OLD MAN UPON HIS SHOULDERS. HOW LIGHT THE KING SEEMS WITHOUT HIS RESPONSIBILITIES.



MOST OF THE HOUSEHOLD HAS ALREADY FLED DOWN THE BUTTRESS, BUT GALAN REMAINS BEHIND. ARE THE INGREDIENTS PROPERLY MIXED? IN HIS HEAD HE REPEATS THE FORMULA YUAN CHEN HAD TAUGHT HIM FOR NIMROD'S POWDER. WITH LUCK, IT WILL BUY MORE TIME.



THE BATTERING RAM'S TOIL IS NEARLY DONE. MORDRED'S MEN WILL SOON COME CRASHING THROUGH. BEHIND VAL AND ARTHUR, YOUNG GALAN IS THE LAST TO LEAVE. SOON THEY WILL JOIN THE OTHERS IN THE HEART OF 'MUCKEN MIRE,' SAFE UNTIL MORDRED TRACKS THEM DOWN. AND THEN?
