Shuttle Off On New Trip

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Challenger soared spectacularly into orbit today with a record crew of seven on an Earth-surveying mission that includes the first space walk by an American woman.

The spacecraft thundered away from its launch pad on time at 7:03 a.m. EDT, 14 minutes before dawn — its smoketrail brilliantly illuminated by the rising sun — and sped into the sky on a northeast path up the East Coast of the United States.

Challenger's ascent was traced by a bright flare arching through the sky seen 160 miles to the south in Miami.

As Challenger settled into orbit, mission commander Robert Crippen said, "That launch team did a really nice job. This is really a nice vehicle."

Astronaut Sally Ride, making her second space trip, added, "The consensus of the rookies on board is that the ride was worth three 'E' tickets." The reference was to the way Disneyland once charged for its rides, with an "E" ticket being the most valuable. On her first flight, Ms. Ride said that the launch was worth one "E" ticket.

Slightly more than two minutes into the flight, the ship's two solid fuel rocket boosters peeled away and parachuted toward the Atlantic Ocean, where recovery ships waited. The boosters will be refurbished for use on a later flight.

Nine minutes later, Mission Control in Houston reported the liftoff was flawless and Challenger was in orbit more than 200 miles high, streaking through a weightless world at 17,400 mph.

During the eight-day flight, the crew of five men and two women will use radar, sensors and cameras to study the Earth's atmosphere and oceans and search for ancient lost cities. The space walk by astronauts Kathy Sullivan and David Leestma will allow them to practice refueling a satellite in orbit for the first time.

Liftoff came exactly one month after sister ship Discovery returned from its inaugural flight. That's the quickest turnaround yet between shuttle launches and is good news to NASA, which plans to send the space planes into orbit at a one-a-month rate for the next 14 months, accelerating that to 16 flights in 1986.

The launching, as usual, thrilled tens of thousands gathered to view the fiery departure. Many will be back here on Oct. 13 when Challenger is to return to a landing on a runway just three miles from the launch pad. It will be only the second shuttle touchdown here.

On two occasions, bad weather forced the shuttle to divert its landing from Cape Canaveral to Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. The commander both times was Crippen, and he vows, "We'll make it this time."

The seven crew members equal in number America's original astronaut corps, the men who blazed the trail into space in tiny one-man Mercury capsules two decades ago.

Jobs Rate Declines To 7.4

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment edged down to 7.4 percent last month, the lowest since June, as the labor market resumed its improvement after two months of rising or standstill joblessness, the government said today.

The 0.1 percentage point drop from August's 7.5 percent — made possible by the creation of more than 270,000 jobs — seemed to bear out predictions by private economists that July's rise in unemployment was a temporary phenomenon.

The overall rate has fallen 1.8 percentage points since September 1983, from 9.2 percent to 7.4 percent. In June, however, the rate stood at 7.1 percent. Unemployment was 7.5

Local Workers Get Time Off

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"All our people are back at work today, but we don't know at this time what the situation will be on Tuesday morning, our next full working day," commented Fred Lilley, manager of the Greenville Office of the Social Security Administration.

As a result of the federal government running out of funds to pay employees, the Greenville Social Security office was among thousands of federal offices nationwide that were directed Thursday to take immediate steps to "furlough all but essential workers," Lilley explained.

"Furlough is the official term the government uses to cover sending home employees on a temporary basis anytime funds for paying employees run out," Lilley said.

"Since we have direct communications with Washington through computer and Teletype services," Lilley explained, "we are able to receive instructions rapidly. At a little after one yesterday afternoon, we received a directive to immediately place all our employees on furlough, except those identified as absolutely essential to close out whatever work was under way at the time."

As a result of the directive, Lilley sent 17 of the office's 23 employees home on "furlough within a short time. They were told to keep in close touch with developments.

"With the government's passage of a stop gap fund measure, we were authorized to have all employees return to work this morning. However, the stop gap measure covers work only through 6 p.m. today."

Since the Social Security office is not open on weekends, and Monday, Oct. 9, is a federal holiday — Columbus Day — employees are not due to return to work until Tuesday "provided, of course," Lilley added, "that the government approves another stopgap fund measure which will authorize our people to return to work at that time."

Lilley acknowledged that the situation "is frustrating, both to our people and even more so for the public. The six people we kept on duty as essential workers were able to finish up work with people already that was under way at the time we sent the 17 home, but we had to tell others coming in about the situation, and tell them we couldn't help them at the moment.

Jordan Seeks Uncommitted Voters

JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Bob Jordan, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, says he and his campaign staff are "working hard to be sure we get our fair share" of the votes that polls indicate are not committed for the November election.

Jordan, who was in Greenville Thursday for a reception, said the polls show that approximately one third of the voters are undecided at this point.

Jordan, native of Mount Gilead in Montgomery County, has served in the N.C. Senate since 1977. He and his wife, Sarah, are the parents of three children, a son, Robert, and two daughters, Janie and Betsy. The candidate has served on a number of county and state boards and commissions, and spent a three-year tour in the Army from 1955-57.

At Thursday's reception, Jordan touched briefly on a trio of Tar Heel livelihood topics — North Carolina's struggling textile industry, the hard pressed lumber industry, and changes faced by farmers.

"There is decidedly a pressing need for North Carolina to do everything that can be done to bring new life to the textile industry," Jordan stated. "Somehow we must convince the federal government to restrict textile imports, maybe not by imposing tariffs, but restricting levels of imports.

"Textiles have long been the backbone of North Carolina's industry, and it still can be. We can't ignore the critical problems facing textiles in our state now. We must pressure for legislation to cope with the problems we have."

Referring to "the critical situation in the lumber industry," Jordan pointed out that "Canadian lumber now accounts for about 50 percent of our lumber needs. I know that the strong dollar has something to do with this situation, but here too we must somehow hold these lumber imports to at least a certain designated level."

On measures to help the North Carolina farmer, Jordan feels "one of the most promising, most challenging possibilities for North Carolina farmers is to explore new potential in markets, especially in food crops, within our own state. Farmers near our metropolitan areas have a real opportunity to turn to growing food crops for local markets. I think you will see more of this type of development in the near future.

"I'm also a strong believer in targeting agriculture and forestry as fields where we can use technology to develop genetically stronger plants that are more disease resistant."

With campaign days now on the homestretch, Jordan acknowledged he'll be going full speed on the trail in an effort to be in touch with as many voters as possible. A return trip to Greenville later in the month, and "a debate with my Republican opponent (Raleigh businessman John Carrington) over PBS television on Oct. 26," are among future appearances in the offing for Jordan.

"I look forward to the opportunity the debate offers," Jordan said. "This is the type of thing that gives the public a chance to see both candidates together. I am confident that viewers will see that in contrast to my opponent, I am a man with considerable public experience and service in North Carolina."

Jordan said, "My campaign is going good now."

In The Area

Break-Ins Reported

Greenville police are investigating four break-ins that were reported Thursday in which a total of $1,340 in merchandise was stolen.

Approximately $300 worth of stereo equipment was taken from the 606 Hooker Road home of Brenda Brown, including a turntable, receiver and speakers. Police said the stereo system was recovered behind Ms. Brown's apartment complex.

Police said that John Brookshire of 1424 Greenville Boulevard reported Thursday that someone entered his residence while he was away on vacation and removed a color television, a 35mm camera and a push-button telephone, collectively valued at $950. Officers said entry was gained by removing glass panels on a side entrance.

Investigating officers said $70 in change was reported taken from Riverside Oyster Bar in a break-in, and a wallet containing $20 and five credit cards was taken from room 438 of the Heritage Inn.

Drivers Charged

Two area residents were charged with safe movement violations Thursday following traffic accidents investigated by Greenville police.

Officers said Anna E. Tedjadinata of Apt. 113, King's Arms, was charged following an accident at the College Hill intersection of 10th Street involving the car she was driving and a vehicle operated by Amy Y. Mustian of Apt A-3, Oakmont Square. Damage to each car was estimated at $500.

Connie Manning Strickland of 113 Willow St. was charged following a Clifton Street accident involving the car she was driving and a vehicle operated by Andrew Wade Trask of 106 Graham St. Damages were estimated at $975 to the Trask car and $750 to the Strickland vehicle.

Bridge Maintenance

The Greene Street bridge will be closed Monday through Wednesday for maintenance repairs, according to city officials who said traffic will be detoured along Airport Road, Memorial Drive and Fifth Street.

The city, which was notified by the state Department of Transportation of the need for maintenance repairs, said the bridge may also be closed through Thursday if the work is not completed by Wednesday.

Chicken Fry

The Grifton Shrine Club will have a chicken fry Wednesday to benefit the Shriner's Crippled and Burned Children's Hospitals. Plates, at $3, will consist of fried chicken, potatoes, beans and hushpuppies and will be served from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Advance tickets can be purchased from any Shriner.

In Grifton, plates may be picked up on the town lot by the downtown water tower. The site in Ayden is on the railroad lot across from the town hall.

College Visitor

Jane Kornegay, admissions counselor at Mary Baldwin College, will visit Calvary Christian Academy, J.H. Rose High School, D.H. Conley and Greenville Christian Academy on Tuesday. She will talk to students about the college, a private four-year liberal arts school in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

- Home Lighting Basics
Will show how various types of lighting affects color, help sort out new options in home lighting and guide in choosing appropriate light sources for a specific space or a particular need.
- Furniture Selection
Hidden values to consider when selecting furniture (wearability, construction, finishes, types of wood, soil and stain resistant finishes) to meet the consumers needs, tastes and interest.

Furniture Arrangement
Arrangement of furniture for maximum space efficiency and comfort. Making the most of your small spaces and adding warmth and coziness to large spaces.

Window Dressing
A pictorial discussion of different types of windows, problems and solutions. Plus a display of window treatments including Roman shades, cornice, covered rod, folding screens, etc.

Accent on Accessories
A few well-chosen, useful and distinctive accessories make your room comfortable and liveable as well as express family interests. Special emphasis on hanging wall accessories.

Those attending the showcase may also preregister for guided tours Oct. 30 of the following businesses: Singer Furniture in Chocowinity; Larry's Carpetland, Kitchen and Baths and Taft Furniture Co., all of Greenville. Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension housing specialist, will be discussing house furnishings trends during the tour at Taft Furniture.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
A recent soft cover cookbook, "Recipes for An Arabian Night" by David Scott, includes "traditional cooking from North Africa and the Middle East" and has a good deal to offer. I found information and recipes in it I had not come across — or had inadvertently passed by — in other cookbooks covering Scott's territory.

For example, recipes for the sophisticated Armenian yeast rolls, Choereg, call for "mahlab," used in ground form to flavor the dough. I have found mahlab in specialty food shops, but no one could ever tell me exactly what the spice was. Although Scott does not include a Choereg recipe, his book's glossary describes mahlab as a "Syrian spice prepared from the stone of the black cherry." Enlightenment at last.

Another short chapter in the book gives basic ingredients and methods. Then come chapters on Mezze (Hors D'Oeuvre); Soups; Breads; Pies and Savory Pastries; Salads; Fish; Meat and Poultry Dishes; Grains, Beans and Lentils; Stuffed Vegetables; Desserts and Sweet Pastries; and Drinks.

One of the fish recipes is for an unusual dish made with fillets and chick peas. Here is an adaptation of that recipe.

LEBANESE FISH WITH CHICK PEAS

- 19-ounce can chick peas
- 1 1/4 pounds fish fillets (1/2-inch thick)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 garlic clove, crushed
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon caraway seed
- 1/4 teaspoon ground coriander
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice

Drain and reserve liquid from chick peas; reserve chick peas separately.

Place fish in a single layer in an oiled shallow baking pan.

In a medium skillet heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add onion and garlic.

Cook gently until onion is transparent. Push to side of skillet. Add and heat remaining 1 tablespoon oil. Add paprika, caraway and coriander. Stir over medium heat for about 10 seconds. Add reserved chick peas.

Stir well and cook for about 1 minute. Spoon over fish.

Add lemon juice and reserved chick pea liquid to skillet. Stir over medium heat, scraping drippings from bottom of pan for about a minute. Pour over fish. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 400-degree oven until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork — 15 to 20 minutes. Pass a pepper mill.
Makes 4 servings.

Adapted from "Recipes for an Arabian Night" by David Scott (Pantheon).

Tell Father That You Feel Uncomfortable

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced about a year ago. My father is very bitter, and asks me all sorts of questions about my mother's social life. (Who is she dating? What do they look like? What do they do?) I have met many of her dates, but I feel very uncomfortable telling my father about them.
What should I do?

K. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR K.: Be honest. Tell him you feel very uncomfortable answering questions about your mother's social life, and you'd appreciate it if he didn't ask. And if he persists, repeat the above.

DEAR ABBY: How do you think a girl would feel receiving an engagement ring that had been the engagement ring of her fiancé's grandmother?

The grandmother is no longer living, and the girl never knew her. Except for sentimental value, the

Fashion Show Given For Club

The program for the Tuesday night meeting of the Cherry Oaks Garden Club was a fashion show given by Virginia Crabtree. The theme was "Fashions for Fall" and it was narrated by Susan Roberts.

The yard of the month went to Don and Becky Taylor.

A yard sale will be held Oct. 13 at the club house. The November program will be given by Dr. Eddie West, who will speak on the proposed school merger.

Meeting hostesses were Joan Thompson, Laurie Charlton, Becky Miller, Marie Miller and Susie Bredderman.

DIVERSION SOLVES THIS PROBLEM

WOODS CROSS, Utah (AP) — How do you relocate a creek? That was the problem this community faced because of annual spring flooding caused by the heavy runoff of mountain snow in Mill Creek. With land donated by Phillips Petroleum, which has a refinery here, the town was able to divert the creek and provide larger drainage capability to reduce potential flooding of the downtown area.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Her grandmother could have told her that marriage is the price a man pays for sex, and sex is the price a woman pays for marriage.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: "Mismatched" was not speaking for all women—only for herself. She didn't "know" that men are every-nighters and women are once-a-weekers because it's not a fact—it's hogwash that's been handed down from mother to daughter along with, "No decent woman really enjoys sex; it's just something she has to put up with." Also, "Men need sex more often than women do."

Grandma, sexual appetites vary. Not all men are once-a-nighters; some are once-a-weekers, once-a-monthers, and some not-at-allers. Nor are all women once-a-weekers. Women range from once-a-nighters and once-a-weekers, to once-in-a-blue-mooners.

Furthermore, the person who says that marriage is the price a man pays for sex must have been unconscious for the last 25 years. It is not necessary for men to marry to obtain sex. And to say that sex is the price women pay for marriage labels all women as prostitutes.

Today's woman marries because she wants to—not because she needs a meal ticket. And women no longer submit to sex—they are equal partners.

Lilley Sees Little Chance Of Tax Cut

Example

The Edmisten-Martin debate must have been a joy to television viewers who have endured the Hunt-Helms series which has proven repetitive and increasingly bitter.

Even so, there is satisfaction to be found in that Rufus Edmisten and Jim Martin would be facing each other but that one time in their race for governor.

Last weekend's confrontation was a reasoned airing of differences as well as similarities in viewpoints and approaches to North Carolina issues. Any other face-offs probably would be duplicative and nauseous and sink into acrimony.

Taxes, utilities, education, tobacco, industry and highways ... all major topics of political discussion in North Carolina ... were argued by the rivals, both of whom gave articulate viewpoints.

The debate's format was based on questions prepared and submitted by members of the N.C. Radio and Television News Directors Association. The system kept the candidates well within bounds of civil exchange.

Neither Martin nor Edmisten claimed "victory" after the debate: both were right. It is unlikely any partisan members of the audience were swayed to shift their support, and we suspect uncommitted listeners were stirred to little more than contemplation of differences in approach to solutions.

The example set in the gubernatorial candidates' debate inspired regrets on our part that similar rules of procedure were not stipulated in the senatorial confrontations and thus avoid the angry exchanges. Is a fifth meeting between Gov. Hunt and Sen. Helms necessary?

They really have little new to possibly offer.

RALEIGH — Major tax cut legislation will never get through the General Assembly so long as legislators give the passage of a budget first priority.

That is the opinion of the man who sponsors most of the tax cuts that get through the assembly. Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, chairman of the Revenue Laws Study Commission, says passage of any major tax cut bill would require a revamping of the schedule under which the legislature operates.

Lilley has sponsored dozens of small tax cuts over the years which have been filed early in a session, funnelled through the finance committees, and then passed on the floors of the House and Senate. But, the same process is not followed for major tax cut bills.

Instead of getting rapid consideration, major tax cuts are put aside until a budget is prepared and that is always late in a legislative session. (There's good reason for passing the budget late in the session. By waiting until the latest possible day, the budget committees give state economists a better chance to accurately project how much growth there'll be in the coming year.)

But, once a budget is set, cutting taxes becomes almost impossible. "You simply cannot go back and remove $50 to $75 million from a budget," at that late hour, says Lilley.

"In my opinion, a bill ought to rest or fall on its own merits," Lilley said during a recent commission meeting. A tax cut bill ought to be considered early in a session, he says, before the budget is prepared. Then, the budget could be adjusted to reflect the tax cut. "I would encourage the legislature to go ahead and pass on major tax legislation in time to give the appropriations committees time to take the effects of the cut into account."

Lilley is asking for a basic change, therefore, in the cart and horse theory that runs the budgeting process now. As enunciated by current budget leaders, the assembly first decides how much it will spend and then tells the finance committees how much it needs. Lilley's proposal would have the assembly deciding how much it will raise and then adjust spending to meet that.

One interesting tax proposal got a brief airing before the Study Commission on Aging in September. Legislative staff told the committee that 17 states now have some kind of property tax deferral system, most of them limiting participation to senior citizens.

Under a deferral system, property owners can delay payment of their property taxes until after their deaths, or until they sell their property.

Most states limit the program to senior citizens with incomes below a certain level or with property appraised below a certain level. In all states, the deferred property tax bill builds up and interest is added. The interest varies among the different states, some charging a fixed rate, others charging a rate which varies with market conditions.

The idea is simple. A senior citizen or handicapped person who owns a home may not have enough income to pay the taxes. Rather than force them to sell off that property, the deferral lets them continue to live in it and the government gets its money eventually.

A staff member who has studied the 17 other states said participation is generally very low. Oregon, which limits the program to senior citizens with less than $17,500 in yearly income, has the highest participation rate at six percent. Apparently deferrals are not extremely popular because people don't want to leave their children with their tax bills to settle.

Sad Day

The occasion of a Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent being arrested for allegedly selling United States secrets to a Soviet agent has the proud agency hanging its head in shame.

It has never before happened that an FBI agent has been charged with selling information to a foreign power.

FBI Director William Webster said it was a very sad day for the agency at a ceremony honoring 26 FBI agents who have been slain. Indeed it was. The possibility exists that one of its agents delivered the secrets he was sworn to protect to a foreign agent.

The people accused in this matter certainly have the right to fair trial. However, the fact that charges have been brought must cause the FBI to take a close look at its internal operations.

Does A Little Heckling Really Hurt?

Heckling has become a major campaign issue. Walter Mondale and Gerald Ferraro have both been victims of heckling by Reagan supporters in the crowds.

The big question is does heckling help or hurt a political ticket?

Lawrence Deethroat, who runs the Political School of Heckling at the University of Southern California, believes that hecklers enhance a politician's campaign.

He told me, "As much as Mondale fumes against hecklers, they've done more than anything to liven up his rallies."

"In what respect?"

"Well, everyone knows when the candidate is out on the campaign trail — the only reason he is giving a speech is to get on the evening news. A surefire way of doing this is to have a bunch of hecklers try to prevent the candidate from speaking. It not only makes great TV pictures, but it also gives him or her an opportunity to respond to the hecklers. It's the best way to win the sympathy vote."

"Are you trying to tell me that Mondale is putting on an act when he accuses the Republicans of sending out kids to heckle him?"

"No, it is quite possible that he really objects to them. But his staff is rather pleased with the heckling. First, because Mondale gets mad when he's being heckled and shows some emotion. Secondly, they can accuse the Republicans of resorting to dirty tricks, hoping to bring back memories of Nixon supporters' tactics in 1972. It is my personal belief that heckling has fired up the Democrats, and the Mondale-

Ferraro ticket has gained more by being heckled than they have lost."

"The Republicans must know this," I said. "Why are they sending out hecklers if it can only help the opposition?"

"I don't think they are. In fact, the smart GOP polls would just as soon stop the heckling as they know it's counterproductive. But they're not in control of the far-out pro-Reagan factions. In Mondale's case the college kids are doing the heckling. Ferraro's hecklers come mostly from the Right to Life groups."

"Why are the college kids so intent on heckling?"

"For two reasons. One, it's a lot of fun, and since they're not informed on the issues, heckling is the only thing they know how to do. Secondly, they also hope to get on the evening news or in the papers the next day."

"Why don't they heckle President Reagan as well?"

"For one thing, Reagan's campaign staffers are much more selective as to the type of audiences the president addresses. They keep tight control of the tickets to make sure the audience is made up of only Reagan supporters. The police and Secret Service see to it that Reagan hecklers are kept at least one block away from where he's speaking."

"Wouldn't hecklers help Reagan as much as they're helping Mondale?"

"At the moment the Reagan camp doesn't need them because the polls are so much in the president's favor. I haven't seen their game plan, but they might be waiting for the last weeks of the campaign before they allow Reagan to be heckled."

"And the president doesn't mind being heckled?"

"He loves it. He has a list of great one-liners against hecklers that can guarantee him a standing ovation."

"Then it is your opinion that heckling a presidential candidate is not such a bad thing, and Mondale shouldn't make a big deal of it."

"He has to make a big deal of it. Otherwise the heckling might die down and he'll have to go back to discussing his economic reforms. What TV news executive in his right mind would put that on the air?"

Years Bring Changes In Views

WASHINGTON — In two broadcasts over Radio Hanoi almost 14 years ago, a 21-year-old college student from Syracuse University denounced U.S. involvement in Vietnam. He urged his listeners to "strengthen the anti-war movement" among American troops and Vietnamese citizens.

On Sept. 21, 1984, that student, David Ifshin, counsel to the Mondale-Ferraro campaign, termed his broadcast "a mistake of youth. I was not mature enough to see the broad picture at the time," Ifshin said, calling his action "sophomoric" and adding, "I'm appalled by it now."

Ifshin, 35, renounced his statements in response to what he called a "partisan political attack" by conservatives seeking to saddle the Democratic presidential ticket with his past. He contended that his detractors had overlooked legal work he'd done on behalf of the Republican National Committee in 1979.

But Ifshin's misgivings seem almost typically deep-seated.

Whether they led marches or followed them, many of his contemporaries from the anti-war days look upon their involvement with disdain or amusement. It's as if, having become attorneys or account executives, they fear being soiled by past flurries of conscience.

People do undergo changes in political outlook. But to dismiss those flurries as immature and emotional, as Ifshin characterized his broadcasts, trivializes the cause with which they were associated.

When Ifshin says he failed "to see the broader picture at the time," he's suggesting that the Vietnam War was right after all.

Fortunately, some people have no regrets.

The percentage of men ages 25 to 29 with at least one year of college dropped in the five years after the final withdrawal of U.S. personnel from Vietnam in 1975. In 1976, 50.1 percent of American men had completed a year of college; by 1981, the share had fallen to 45.7 percent. The Census Bureau, which compiled the figures, attributed the decline to the end of military conscription.

The international trade in military weapons and supplies knows no geopolitical limits. One recent example is Britain's decision to provide Iran with Rolls-Royce engines for four frigates and to overhaul two BH7 hovercraft. The BH7, which is British-built, can carry 170 troops or medium-size surface-to-air missiles.

The British government denies that its deals with the Ayatollah Khomeini contradict an official policy of not selling lethal equipment to either side in the Persian Gulf conflict.

Students at the University of Akron (Ohio) are up in arms over their school administration's decision to name a new athletic complex after former Gov. James Rhodes. More than 1,700 students, faculty members and local residents have signed a petition opposing the decision; demonstrators have picketed in front of the complex and at football games.

Rhodes is the ex-governor who sent the Ohio National Guard to Kent State University in May of 1970. Four Kent State students died from gunshots fired by the guardsmen.

Democratic dreams for the White House would seem to include general election victories in Florida and Texas. Yet, according to Advertising Age, with less than six weeks to go before Election Day, the Mondale-Ferraro campaign hasn't purchased any local TV time in either state.

Rajiv Gandhi, an airplane-pilot-turned-heir-apparent to the leadership of his mother's Congress Party in India, has hired a major U.S.-based public relations firm to polish up the family image. According to The Observer (London), the firm, Hill and Knowlton, acknowledged the arrangement but declined to reveal its cost.

A little reverse sexism? Commodore International Ltd., the Norristown (Pa.)-based computer marketing firm, has decided to appeal to West German women by placing a fully naked man in its ads. Purchase a Commodore, the ads say, and the man who uses it will be "useful in many other ways ... and he will give you more time to let yourself be weak."

Strength For Today

We sometimes hear the expression that a man is his own best friend. This means that the person in the form of our inner self which we live with day by day is the one who makes us either happy or miserable.

To have this inner person satisfied with the quality of our lives is a great blessing. In the last analysis, we will have to satisfy only two persons — God and ourselves.

Abraham Lincoln, during a particularly difficult period in his presidency, said on one occasion, "I desire so to conduct the affairs of this nation that if I lose every friend on earth I shall have at least one friend left, and that one will be the one down inside me."

Keep on the good side of your neighbors and acquaintances, but above all keep on the good side of yourself. The man down inside your heart can bless you greatly if he is your friend, and plague you miserably if he is your enemy.

U.S. Approves Purchase Of Arco Aluminum Firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department today approved a Canadian company's purchase of Atlantic Richfield Co.'s aluminum assets after forcing them to restructure the deal so that Atlantic Richfield will still begin the production of aluminum for beverage cans.

The agreement between the department's antitrust division and the two companies marked the first time the government has ever turned to a joint venture between two competitors as a solution for potential competitive problems in a proposal by one simply to acquire the other.

Under the revised deal, Alcan Aluminum Ltd. of Montreal will acquire most of the aluminum assets of Arco, based in Los Angeles, but the two companies will form a joint venture to run Arco's just completed rolling mill in Logan County, Ky. This mill was designed to produce aluminum can body stock, a sheet product used to make beverage cans and was to be Arco's means of moving into that business.

The original deal for cash and securities was valued at between $600 million and $1 billion. There was no immediate word on how the agreement affected that figure.

The case also is one of the first in recent years based on allegations that section 7 of the Clayton Act would be violated by a deal that reduced potential rather than actual competition. The section prohibits mergers or acquisition that tend to substantially lessen competition.

The department said the agreement will be embodied in a proposed consent decree to settle a civil antitrust suit to block the deal. The suit and the decree were to be filed simultaneously later today in U.S. District Court in Louisville, Ky.

After a 60-day period for public comment, the decree will become final if approved by the court.

The agreement would require for 10 years that Arco or any successor company, other than Alcan, retain a 60 percent interest in the Logan County rolling mill while Alcan holds a 40 percent interest in the facility.

A separate management company will be created to run the plant with its products and costs being divided according to the ownership shares.

Arco and Alcan would each market its share of the plant's production independently and would be barred from even discussing price or marketing information.

Each company would be allowed to independently expand its share of the capacity of the facility, the only aluminum rolling mill built in this country for more than a decade.

"The use of a production joint venture as a means of settling a section 7 case is an innovation," said Assistant Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, head of the department's antitrust division. Earlier this year, he had indicated an interest in such ideas when he began analyzing two controversial steel mergers, but those cases were resolved in other ways.

McGrath added that this "is the first potential competition case brought by the Department of Justice in recent years." He said the settlement "preserves Arco or its successor as an independent and meaningful new participant in the can body stock market."

McGrath noted that if Arco devoted all its Logan County production to that product it would become the fifth largest producer, surpassing three companies already in the market.

ON THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL ... Bob Jordan, Democratic candidate for North Carolina lieutenant governor, right, was in Greenville late Thursday afternoon for a reception held at the Sheraton Hotel. With him are Carl Darden, his Pitt County campaign manager, and Betty Spier, vice chairman of the Democratic Party of North Carolina.

Convicted Officer Retires

WADESBORO, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year police officer convicted of voluntary manslaughter last month has retired from the Wadesboro Police Department.

Sgt. Kenneth Hamilton, 56, of Wadesboro is free under $65,000 bond pending his appeal of a four-year prison term.

Hamilton was convicted Sept. 14 of shooting Roswell Smith, 52, during a struggle over the off-duty police officer's gun. Witnesses said the shooting occurred after Hamilton drove his truck to an abandoned building after Smith yelled at him. Witnesses said the two struggled in Hamilton's truck for more than 20 minutes.

Hamilton was suspended without pay immediately after the May 4 shooting. He had worked for the Anson County Sheriff's Department for four years before joining the Wadesboro police department.

Fireman Seeks Damages

GREENSBORO (AP) — A $6 million lawsuit against a South Carolina trucking company has been filed by a Richmond County man who was injured in a train-truck collision July 11 in McBee, S.C.

Robert Wayne Turnage, a fireman on an Amtrak train, suffered amnesia, broken bones and burns to his face and body when the train struck a tanker truck, carrying fuel oil, the suit said. Turnage jumped or was thrown from the train during an explosion, the suit said.

John Coker, the driver of the truck owned by Rainwater Transportation Co. of Florence, S.C., was killed in the crash.

The suit said Coker disregarded crossing bars and warning signals and failed to stop.

Robert Rainwater, president of Rainwater Transportation said there were no warning signals at the crossing. He said that a witness said Coker stopped before crossing.

Jobs ...

percent when President Reagan took office in January 1981.

The total number of Americans with jobs in September climbed to 105.2 million, but that was well short of the record 105.7 million in June, according to Labor Department.

September's minuscule decline in the civilian rate, when adjusted for seasonal variations, translated into a decline in the number of Americans officially categorized as unemployed from 8,526,000 to 8,460,000 — a drop of 66,000.

An alternate unemployment rate, which groups the 113.7-million-member civilian labor force with the more than 1.7 million armed forces personnel stationed in the United States, dropped from 7.4 to 7.3 percent last month, the report said.

The politically sensitive unemployment figures, coming just over a month before the presidential election, also showed that the number of Americans on business payrolls rose by 139,000 last month, and that the labor force figures were not meaningfully affected by a United Auto Workers' strike against General Motors Corp. or a hospital workers' walkout in New York City.

The only significant rise in joblessness among the various population groups was for teenagers. That rate jumped from 18.4 percent to 19.3 percent — an increase that is not unusual at the beginning of the school year.

Since the trough of the 1981-82 recession, when civilian joblessness peaked at 10.7 percent, roughly 6 million Americans have gone to work, according to both the household survey and a separate compilation of business establishments by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In advance of today's report, several private analysts said the civilian rate will likely hold steady in the coming months as new hiring slows with the slackening in the overall recovery.

The bureau also reported that the number of "discouraged workers" — people not counted as unemployed because they have stopped looking for work — fell by 100,000 in the July-September quarter to 1.2 million and was down by about 600,000 since the pit of the recession at late 1982.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, bureau Director Janet L. Norwood noted, however, that "women and blacks continue to be disproportionately represented among the discouraged."

Ms. Norwood, sizing up general labor market conditions, said, "The unemployment rate has been on a plateau for several months. The overall employment figures, which had shown a moderation in the pace of labor market improvement in recent months, were little changed in September."

Among the various population groups, the monthly changes in the unemployment rates were:

—Adult men, 6.5 percent, up from 6.4 percent.

—Adult women, 6.7, down from 7.1.

—Whites, 6.4, unchanged.

—Blacks, 15.1, down from 16.0.

—Hispanics, 10.7, unchanged.

Before today's announcement, private analysts said the surprising and impressive job gains of the year's first half cannot be repeated because a host of other indicators of business health demonstrate that the recovery has slowed significantly.

Said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential Bache Securities Inc. in New York: "Most of the employment indicators ... suggest that employment growth has slowed down somewhat."

"With businesses still focusing on trying to improve their efficiency, we're not going to see a lot more (employment) growth," he said.

Furlough ...

"Nearly everyone understood the situation and took it in stride," Lilley said. "However, it's understandable that people calling in, for instance, about not receiving their check on the due date of the third (Oct. 3) were really concerned, and rightly so."

Lilley indicated that he and his staff are hopeful that when Tuesday comes they will be able to return to work, to catch up with unfinished business. "Usually, this type of thing is resolved quickly," he noted. "However, there's always the nagging uncertainty that a furlough period may continue for longer than a brief period. We certainly hope this will not be the case this time."

King's Daughters Convention Opens

The 94th annual convention of the N.C. Branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held today and Saturday in Durham.

The Sara Barker Circle is hosting the convention at the Sheraton University Center. The convention topic is "True Faith and Ready Hands."

Dr. Arthur Kole, professor emeritus of Duke University, will be a keynote speaker.

The Patient Circle of Greenville will be represented by Polly Dail, Clara Moye Shackell and Dr. Mary Lois Staton.

Body Of Iron Age Man Found Preserved In Peat Bog

LONDON (AP) — Part of the body of a red-bearded Iron Age man, preserved in a peat bog for 2,500 years, was displayed at the British Museum, revealing for the first time the face of a prehistoric Briton.

The corpse, found in a peat bog in central Britain in August, was briefly shown to reporters Thursday.

The skin, red-trimmed moustache and manicured fingernails are still intact. The corpse, nicknamed "Bogman" by scientists, was 5 feet, 6 inches tall and 20 to 30 years old when he died.

"We have a face of prehistoric man in Britain," said an exuberant Ian Stead of the British Museum.

A string of animal sinew was tied around the ancient man's neck, and several of his neck vertebrae were broken, indicating he died an unnatural death.

The man appeared to have mousy-colored hair, slightly balding on top, a prominent forehead, full red beard, moustache and sideburns. His fingernails appeared to have been manicured, suggesting that he was not a manual laborer.

Many of the facial features were distorted over the centuries, while the corpse lay suspended, slowly sinking in the mushy grave near Wilmslow, 10 miles south of Manchester.

"It's squashed, but the side of the nose and left cheek are visible. His ear is bent forward ... It's a face rather like mine or anyone's here," said Stead. He said the man probably died around 500 B.C.

"He doesn't look like a working man," Stead said. "He comes from a time before there were written documents, so it's difficult to tell what his lifestyle was."

Historians do know that mass migrations of Celtic people in the 5th Century B.C. brought the use of iron into Western Europe and the British Isles. In this era, called La Tene, villages were fortified, warfare was conducted on horseback, ox-drawn plows and wheeled vehicles became widespread in agriculture.

"We've never before had sight of an individual from the Iron Age ... This is a very important find," said Stead.

Peat is well known as a preservative, and human bodies thousands of years old with recognizable facial features have been discovered in bogs in Denmark. The chemicals in the peat bog, plus the lack of oxygen, prevents the growth of bacteria and decomposition of the flesh. Also, a body buried in peat sinks slowly over the years, but otherwise lies completely undisturbed.

The body of "Bogman" was sliced in half by a peat-cutting machine. The upper half, lying in a fetal crouch with the head twisted onto the shoulder, and a severed leg were all that was recovered. The hands and arms were poorly preserved.

Tests already performed have convinced scientists that the "Bogman" is from the Iron Age. An internal examination, expected to last up to two years, will determine what he ate for his last meal. The body will then go on public display in the British Museum.

The remains are being stored in a specially built refrigerator in temperatures between 39-45 degrees Fahrenheit.

New York City To Fingerprint Workers At Day Care Centers

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocked by allegations of child molestation at day-care centers, New York City will begin fingerprinting an estimated 60,000 workers to screen them for possible records of past criminal or sexually deviant activity.

"We've hired the people and trained them and we're set to begin the fingerprinting a week from Monday," said Rachael Gordon, deputy commissioner of the city Department of Investigation.

On Wednesday, the City Council's Finance Committee approved a $1.1 million request from the Department of Investigation to begin the fingerprint checks. The department is now equipped to fingerprint 400 people a day, Ms. Gordon said.

The program, which still must be approved by the City Council, grew out of charges this summer that children had been abused at several city-financed day care centers. Miss Gordon said council members are expected to pass a bill soon requiring fingerprint checks on employees of private agencies that receive city financing.

Fingerprints would be taken from all workers employed by agencies under contract to the city who come in contact with children, from day-care workers to mental-health counselors, Miss Gordon told The New York Times in a story published in today's editions. The prints would then be checked against criminal records.

About 8,200 workers in city-financed day-care centers would be among those affected, Miss Gordon estimated, along with 1,200 workers in federally financed Head Start programs, 2,000 day-care operators who keep children in their own home, 4,000 family members who live in those homes, and some of the 40,000 homemakers who go into homes to help the disabled, the elderly and families.

Prints would also be required from such part-time and seasonal employees as parks and summer youth workers, she said.

After consultation, the city Human Resources Administration amended all contracts with child-care agencies in August to require them to make extensive background checks of their employees.

City lawyer Hadley W. Gold said state law prohibits fingerprinting as a condition of employment "except as provided by law." A measure passed by the City Council, he said, "will be sufficient to permit the fingerprinting of child-care workers."

Drowned Caribou Threaten Rivers

KUUIJUAQ, Quebec (AP) — Inuit natives chopped antlers off thousands of drowned caribou and bundled them together for helicopter airlifts that were to begin today in an effort to clear two northern rivers of carcasses before freezing sets in.

Officials said 9,600 migrating caribou are known to have drowned in the swollen Caniapiscau and Kaksoak Rivers last weekend when they tried to cross a treacherous stretch of rapids and waterfalls.

Local natives and Quebec provincial officials want to get the dead animals away from the riverbanks before ice formations freeze them in and the decaying bodies pollute the water.

Freezing temperatures have kept the carcasses from decomposing rapidly and smelling foul, Quebec government wildlife specialist Didier LeHenaff said Thursday.

He said about 50 Inuit workers were eating the tongues of the caribou as they bound them with cables for the airlift to higher ground.

"They feel the meat is still good enough that they were eating tongue from the animals," Didier said. Caribou is a staple in the far north, and tongue is considered the best portion.

Some Inuit have blamed Hydro-

Quebec utility for causing the caribou slaughter by releasing too much water last month from the Caniapiscau Reservoir, part of its massive James Bay power development.

Hydro-Quebec officials deny that the water release increased the level and velocity of the rivers, blaming it on unusually heavy rains. Environment Canada, the weather bureau, has reported that the northern Quebec interior received almost double the normal monthly rainfall in September, swelling the region's vast river system.

Waters have since receded, easing the fears that another approaching herd, making the annual trek from Labrador to Hudson's Bay, might meet the same fate when they reach the rivers.

But officials said Thursday that a mile-long fence was being constructed to divert the herd from the most dangerous crossing point.

Renaud Francoeur, an official of the Quebec Environment Department, confirmed Thursday that 9,604 caribou died last weekend when they tried to ford the swelling Caniapiscau River and were swept over the waterfall.

There had been estimates that up to 20,000 caribou had died during the weekend.

Banker Facing Life In Prison

NEW YORK (AP) — An investment banker faces a maximum penalty of life in prison on his conviction of murdering a passenger in an old Chevrolet that scraped his leased Ferrari.

A jury deliberated over two days before finding Frank Magliato, 32, guilty Thursday of murder in the September 1983 shooting death of Anthony Gianni, 24, of Jersey City, N.J.

Magliato, whose $10,000 bond was revoked after closing arguments in the trial, faces an Oct. 25 sentencing date. The conviction carries a 15-year-to-life prison term.

Edwin Klaris, 18, a passenger in the Ferrari, testified that Magliato pursued the Chevrolet after it fled the scene of the accident with its two occupants laughing.

Liftoff

The space shuttle Challenger lifts off the launch pad in a blaze of smoke and steam early today at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The shuttle is carrying a crew of seven and is scheduled to be in space for eight days, conducting a series of experiments. (AP Laserphoto)

Space Shuttle ...

The astronauts were awakened at 2:43 a.m. and after breakfast and a brief medical exam were driven the seven miles from their crew quarters to the launch pad. They boarded the spaceship two hours before liftoff.

In addition to carrying the largest crew and featuring the first space walk by an American woman, the 13th shuttle flight — the sixth for Challenger — features several other "firsts."

—Two women in a spacecraft for the first time, Ms. Ride and Ms. Sullivan.

—The first American woman to make a second trip into space, Ms. Ride.

—The first astronaut to make four shuttle flights, Crippen.

—The first flight of a Canadian astronaut, physicist Marc Garneau.

The other crew members are pilot Jon McBride and payload specialist Paul Scully-Power, an Australian-born oceanographer who is now an American citizen working for the Navy.

"It's going to be crowded," Crippen said of the large crew.

The mission plan calls for Ms. Ride to use Challenger's 50-foot mechanical arm about 8½ hours after launch to drop overboard a satellite named ERBS, for Earth Radiation Budget Satellite. ERBS will measure how much energy our planet receives from the sun and the amount it radiates back to space each day. The knowledge could be used to better understand and predict climate and weather.

The astronauts also will operate a mapping camera to chart the globe, sensors to measure pollutants in the atmosphere, and a radar to obtain high-resolution imagery of terrain around the world.

A similar radar carried on an earlier shuttle flight discovered ancient, dry riverbeds buried beneath the sands of the eastern Sahara Desert in Egypt and Sudan.

Researchers hope the radar on this flight will find evidence of lost cities in the foothills of the Peruvian Andes, Nordic ruins on Oland Island in the Baltic Sea and traces of the 2,000-year-old lost city of Ubar in Oman.

It also will be used to locate icebergs, oil spills and forests damaged by acid rain.

Garneau, whose presence on the flight attracted more than 100 Canadian journalists to view the launch, will operate 10 Canadian technology, science and life sciences experiments.

Scully-Power will concentrate on the oceans, particularly "on the understanding and the measurement and the dynamics of ocean eddies — large circular currents about 100 miles across.

"It's recently been discovered that the key to understanding the total ocean dynamic is tied up with understanding the ocean eddies," he said.

On the fifth day, Ms. Sullivan and Leestma will step outside, into Challenger's empty cargo bay, to test techniques for refueling orbiting satellites. Perfection of this procedure could lead to a shuttle servicing system that could extend the lives of satellites that have run out of fuel.

Challenger is to return to Earth Oct. 13, landing on a three-mile runway just three miles from the launch pad.

With the launch schedule now set at one-a-month, NASA wants to routinely land here to speed up the turnaround time between flights, eliminating the six days that are lost in bringing the craft back from a California touchdown.

Steve Martin Has Collection Of Art

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Martin is best known for his zany standup comedy routines, but the silver-haired star of such films as "The Jerk" and the current box office hit "All of Me" is also an avid collector of modern art.

Martin, whose collection reportedly includes works by such early 20th century modernists as Arthur Dove and Georgia O'Keeffe and contemporary artists Franz Kline, Willem de Kooning, Cy Twombly, David Hockney and Helen Frankenthaler, was elected Thursday to the board of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, museum officials said.

Bangladesh Riot Leaves Ten Killed

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — At least 10 people were killed, hundreds injured and thousands left homeless when rioters attacked Bihari relief camps, witnesses said today.

Police and government officials, however, said 11 people were hospitalized for injuries and no one was killed.

The violence broke out Thursday after about 30 Biharis — Urdu-speaking Moslems who seek Pakistani citizenship — staged a religious procession in the Mirpur section on the outskirts of Dhaka, police and witnesses said.

A young boy belonging to the majority Bengali-speaking Moslem community was hurt in a scuffle with the marchers. The news of his injury spread quickly, and hundreds of people armed with sticks and knives attacked the procession, witnesses said.

The marchers were carrying swords and chains that are part of their traditional dress for Muharram, a holiday marking the death of the prophet Mohammed's grandson. The fighting groups dispersed after street battles, but thousands of Bengalis stormed the Bihari camps later Thursday night and burned hundreds of bamboo huts, witnesses said.

Police armed with rifles stood guard today amid the smoldering ruins of the poverty-stricken camps, where about 55,000 Biharis live in tiny shacks.

"It was like a battlefield," said Ahmed Ali, a leader of the Biharis general repatriation committee. "There was arson, looting and stabbing. Women were abducted."

Ali said between 15 and 20 people were beaten or stabbed to death and 21 were missing. More than 200 were injured, he said. About 500 dwellings were destroyed, leaving as many as 4,000 people without shelter, he said.

A leader of a relief committee, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said between 10 and 20 people were killed. Several were abducted and still missing, he said.

Kamal Anwar, a television cameraman for CBS News, said he filmed several hours of the fighting and believed that at least 16 Biharis were killed and 200 injured.

He said 38 police and firefighters were hospitalized, and "two of them died in front of me." Four fire trucks were damaged, he said.

The police control room, which is under the direction of the martial law government, said 11 people, including one policeman, were hospitalized and no one had died.

Home Minister Maj. Gen. Abdul Mannan Siddiqui said he had heard the same report.

"There was a lot of commotion in the Mirpur area last night and one of the relief camps has been totally burned," he said.

Highway Funding Readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing an adjournment deadline that could leave billions of dollars in highway aid locked in the federal treasury, congressional negotiators prepared today to resolve differences in the House and Senate road bills.

Held hostage to the negotiations is $7.2 billion to be divided among the states for routine extension of the interstate highway system and repairs on existing roads.

Some states have already run out of federal highway aid funds and others will soon, according to Sen. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, chairman of the transportation subcommittee of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

If the House and Senate cannot resolve differences in highway bills before Congress adjourns, the money will remain in the Highway Trust Fund until something can be worked out next year.

The version of the bill that passed the Senate Thursday night will allow future allocations of the money collected in federal gasoline taxes to be handled by the Department of Transportation, without specific Congressional action.

"If the House really wants to," the differences can be bridged, according to Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., chairman of the full committee. "The president isn't going to tolerate big add-ons," Stafford said in an interview.

The House bill calls for $600 million for "demonstration projects," and stipulates that $2.5 billion worth of tunnel and road projects in Boston will be considered part of the interstate highway system and therefore eligible for 90 percent federal financing.

The measure is strongly supported by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., D-Mass.

The Senate version says the federal share on special projects cannot exceed 50 percent of the total cost of the project or $12.5 million, whichever is less.

Symms said he would like to see a compromise under which the House would list its list of hometown projects under the Senate cost-sharing formula.

If Congress adjourns, the bill dies and new legislation is introduced after a new Congress is sworn in.

The legislation approved on voice vote by the Senate also:

- Limits to 30-day the period during which the federal government will pay 100 percent of the cost of emergency road repairs after a disaster.

- Removes a section of the law that required federal approval before some bridge operators could raise their tolls.

- Requires that one-quarter of one percent of federal highway landscaping funds be used to plant wildflowers.

- Requires that each state get back as highway aid 85 percent of the money it sends to Washington in gasoline taxes.

Caffeine Is Natural Pesticide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Caffeine and related compounds are natural insecticides that help coffee, tea and cocoa plants ward off damaging pests, and someday could be used to safely protect food crops, a Harvard scientist says.

Dr. James A. Nathanson, a neurologist at Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital said in a report that the natural function of caffeine in plants has been a mystery, even though it has been used for centuries as a stimulant by millions of people.

"Despite all of the research that has been done on caffeine in mammals, no one to my knowledge has ever determined why it is present in plants," he said in the report, to be published today in the journal Science.

"Over time, plants have developed certain defenses to protect themselves against insects, and we suspected that caffeine might have been present for that purpose — as a natural insecticide," he said.

Tests with powdered tea and coffee, as well as with pure caffeine and related compounds, found that they disturbed the behavior and growth of numerous insects and their larvae.

The mosquito larvae, for instance, became so uncoordinated with exposure to these compounds that they could not swim to the water's surface for air and drowned.

At concentrated doses, the test substances killed the insects within hours or a few days, the report said.

The scientist also found that when caffeine compounds were mixed with certain other natural insecticides, the result caused an increase in their killing power.

Nathanson cautioned that it may take at least five years for large-scale testing to determine if caffeine compounds are practical pesticides.

"The problem with many insecticides is that they are toxic to humans as well as to many other animals important to the food chain," Nathanson said.

"But caffeine and caffeine-like compounds are substances about which we already know a great deal, certainly more than most available insecticides," he added.

"The side effects of caffeine-like compounds appear to be relatively minor in humans and animals."

Nathanson said caffeine appears to work against insects by inhibiting a particular enzyme in their nervous system. Nerve cells make a substance called cyclic AMP to pass along internal messages and, when it has done its job, use an enzyme called phosphodiesterase to break it down.

Farmers To Get Data From Space

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aboard the latest voyage of the space shuttle Challenger is an experiment that may eventually enable satellites to gather and transmit sophisticated information to help farmers plant and market their crops.

In Challenger's cargo bay for today's scheduled liftoff is a radar camera that bounces microwaves off the Earth's surface, then measures the reflection to determine the characteristics of the land below.

Agriculture Department scientists hope they can use the radar, in tests from 140 miles above several farm fields near Fresno, Calif., to measure the amount of moisture in the top six inches of topsoil — an element critical to plant growth.

"In general, the technique has been proven pretty well using trucks and aircraft," said Albert Rango, a hydrologist with the department's research service in Beltsville, Md.

But that experience has been with measuring the passive microwave emissions naturally given off by the Earth, he said. From outer space a stronger signal is needed to get a clear picture — thus the use of microwave-emitting radar.

Scientists on the ground will gather soil samples on the ground at the same time the shuttle is passing overhead. Moisture readings will be compared with Challenger's radar maps to see if scientists can learn to read the microwave language and recognize signs of varying soil moisture levels. Some of the test fields will be dry and others will have been irrigated for as much as a week before the test.

energy is bounced back to the shuttle's 35-by-7-foot antenna, said Rango.

"We probably can't tell differences as small as 1 or 2 percent" in soil moisture, he said. But scientists do expect to be able to distinguish about five general moisture levels ranging from dry to saturated and use them to create a moisture map.

The radar can read moisture in areas as small as a large garden plot, scientists believe.

The technology to make the readings is available now. But it may be a decade before moisture information is provided by satellites similar to those that transmit pictures of the Earth's cloud and weather patterns.

One day, scientists speculate, farmers will be able to call up the data on their home computers to help them make planting decisions.

The data could have many uses, said Edwin T. Engman, another USDA hydrologist who is in Fresno to help conduct the experiments. In areas where rainfall is limited and farming depends on irrigation, frequent soil moisture readings could allow producers to save water and energy by tailoring watering to a field's precise needs, he said.

Study Disputes Effect Of Change In Older Years

BOSTON (AP) — Eating and sleeping properly may help younger people live longer, but by the time someone reaches 65, it's too late to live right, a study concludes.

The research contradicts a widely held view that old people can increase their chance of living longer if they stick to good habits.

"Once you've survived to 65, healthful practices, at least in our data, did not suggest a longer lifespan," said Dr. Laurence G. Branch of Harvard Medical School. Results of his study of 1,235 Massachusetts residents appear in the October edition of the American Journal of Public Health.

Earlier studies showed that healthy living habits are associated with increased life expectancy for young and middle aged people. Experts assumed the same would be true for people in their 60s and 70s.

Instead, said Branch, "The excess mortality associated with unhealthy practices takes its toll during the young and middle-age period" and not when people are older.

However, a preliminary, still-unpublished analysis of the results shows that at least some of the health habits may improve old people's physical well-being, even if they don't make them live longer.

The study at the University of California in Los Angeles showed that young and middle-aged people lived longer if they never smoked cigarettes, drank little alcohol, kept physically active, maintained proper weight and slept seven or eight hours a night.

Branch said he and another researcher, Dr. Alan M. Jette, decided to see what impact such habits had on people who had already made it to their seventh decade or beyond. They questioned the old people about their physical activity, smoking, sleeping, drinking and eating. Then they went back five years later to see if there was any link between lifestyle and survival.

Never having smoked cigarettes was the only factor among the elderly women that was significantly associated with staying alive, and not even this seemed to make a difference for the men.

"I was as surprised as anyone by the findings," Branch said.

"If they haven't produced the diseases and conditions that are going to lead to premature death during young and middle age, and if one survives to 65 or over, then the toll of the unhealthy practices will not be seen as an increased mortality at a population level," he said.

But Branch said it appears that people who stayed active and didn't smoke had a better chance of being able to take care of themselves independently of others.

"Perhaps the healthful life factors are going to be associated with increased physical function during those later years," he said.

Branch cautioned that his research did not look at the health effects of regular physical fitness programs or specific diets.

Pepper Honored At Party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope looked over his shoulder at 14 of the octogenarians gathered to honor one of their own, Claude Pepper, and quipped, "There's very little break-dancing back there — but they're here."

The black-tie audience, whose members paid $1,000 to a university gerontology professorship in honor of the legendary 84-year-old Miami congressman, laughed heartily.

Thursday night's affair was held as a celebration of America's senior citizens and Pepper, who has championed their cause in a political career that spans six decades.

"Age doesn't mean a damn thing," said Hope, the comedian who turned 81 in May. "It's attitude — that's the whole bit. I feel myself if you get a couple of laughs and a little love every day, you're way ahead in this world."

The dinner's organizers said they expected to raise $600,000, which, with $400,000 in state funds, will endow the new Mildred and Claude Pepper Eminent Scholars Chair at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

Pepper said he hopes that academic post "will make life richer and better for (senior citizens) as they trudge along down the last part of the long journey of life."

Florida Gov. Bob Graham said Pepper "belongs on Mount Rushmore." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill called him "a national treasure." Actor Anthony Quinn also joined in the tributes.

Guests of honor included 82-year-old insurance magnate W. Clement Stone; and Helen Cronkite, the 92-year-old mother of retired CBS News anchorman Walter Cronkite.

"We want people to understand that you can still do great things after you're past 80," Pepper said in an interview.

"I wanted the people to see how many people there are over 80 that are still active, interested and dynamic people making a contribution and not being a drag on the rest of the people," said Pepper, wearing over his tuxedo a red Hawaiian lei brought by one of his Harvard classmates.

Pepper, the oldest member of Congress and a frequent critic of the Reagan administration, said it was a bipartisan, non-political occasion.

Hope joked that he had looked up "gerontology" in a dictionary "and all it showed was a word and a picture of Claude."

Pepper expressed hope the gerontology chair will provide "wise counsel as to how business and the people generally shall react to this problem of a growing seniority in our citizenship."

"We've got a growing problem on our hands. When I was born in 1900, only five percent of the people were over 65 years of age. Now, 11 percent of our people are in that age group, and in less than 50 years, almost 20 percent of the people will be over 65 years of age."

"Not only that, but the fastest growing segment of the citizenship over 65 are the people over 85," he said.

He joked at the dinner, "If I can make it one more year, I'll get on that 85 toboggan slide and maybe I'll be all right for a good many years to come."

Pepper said he was happy that age has not emerged as an issue in the current presidential race.

"Nobody is making a point about the president being 73. Why, we're just proud that he can do it," said Pepper. "I may get to be president yet at 80 or 90 or something, you can't tell."

"I enjoy life and I keep busy," said Pepper. "I think those are two of about the best recipes I know of. I keep so busy I don't have time to get old."

Minister Fired

LONDON (AP) — Iraq's minister of state for foreign affairs has been fired for failing to keep regular office hours and for dereliction of duty, Baghdad radio reports.

The radio, in a dispatch monitored in London, said a presidential decree was issued dismissing Hamid Alwan from his post.

Nestle Meets Infant Code, Seven-Year Boycott Ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — An international committee is ending its seven-year boycott of Nestle products because the Swiss-based company has complied with the United Nations marketing code for infant formula.

The announcement that the 10-nation boycott would be formally ended was made Thursday by the International Nestle Boycott Committee and Nestle officials.

Nestle also has told the boycott committee that it will implement the marketing code in Europe as well as the Third World.

"Recognizing the substantial progress Nestle has made in implementing the WHO (World Health Organization) international code, the International Nestle Boycott Committee has voted to recommend full termination of the international boycott of the company," the organization said in a statement issued jointly with Nestle.

The boycott was staged to protest sales practices used by multinational corporations to promote infant formula as preferable to breast milk among women in developing countries. Organizers said illiteracy, poor sanitation and the shortage of pure water frequently prevented the formula's proper and safe use.

Neither side would estimate the human toll taken by misused infant formula. But Douglas Johnson, the coalition's chairman, pointed out that the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund estimates that full implementation of the marketing code would save about one million lives a year.

Carl Angst, an executive vice president of Nestle, said the only discernible effect of the boycott had been in college towns where student activists had kept the issue alive.

Johnson disagreed, saying the committee knew of thousands of individuals who refrained from buying Nestle products.

Nestle makes about half of the world's infant formula but does not sell it in the United States.

The boycott began July 4, 1977. It was suspended January 26, 1984, when its organizers evaluated Nestle's progress toward what they viewed was full compliance with the World Health Organization's infant formula marketing code.

The boycott was staged in the United States, Canada, Sweden, West Germany, the United Kingdom, Norway, Finland, Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

Former Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, who headed a Nestle-financed commission which looked at the corporation's compliance with the code, said the commission found that Nestle had improved its sales practices.

Suspended Students Returning back in class, said O'Hare.

He said parents of three students indicated "they're pulling their kids out of the school."

About 35 percent of the school's 1,320 pupils are not Catholic. The suspensions applied to children of parents who are both Catholic and non-Catholic.

CHICAGO (AP) — Three students are transferring to other schools, but the remainder of 220 children suspended from a Roman Catholic school because their parents missed Mass Sunday have returned to class, school officials say.

The Rev. George Clements, who suspended the children from Holy Angels Elementary school beginning Tuesday, readmitted 217 children after meeting with parents Wednesday, and the children were back in school Thursday, said George O'Hare, the priest's spokesman.

Clements said parents of the suspended children had not lived up to an agreement they signed to attend Mass each Sunday.

"If parents don't attend Mass, their children cannot stay in this school," he said Wednesday.

The parents had to give Clements a reason for missing Mass before he would sign a letter allowing children

Clements, discussing the suspensions, said he wanted parents to know that attending Mass was an important part of education.

"I am very proud of what we are doing here," he said.

Clements drew attention in 1981 by becoming the first priest to adopt a child.

Thoughtful dignity is priceless, but it costs no more.

The truth is, it's smarter and easier to deal with buying a grave site long before the need arises than during the time of grief.

Think a little, find out something about what's involved — whatever you think about the subject. It's the only way that you can be sure that you make an informed decision whenever you decide what you're going to do.

What's in a picture? Privately-owned cemeteries are governed by state law. In order for a cemetery to be called a 'Perpetual Care' cemetery, it is required that the maintenance for it be paid for by interest earned on a "locked-in" fund, contributions to which are predetermined.

Historically, Pinewood Memorial Park has been maintained by funding much larger than that required by state law. The reason? S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, founders and owners of Pinewood, didn't think the requirement was adequate.

The result? See for yourself. Visit Pinewood and look at the beautiful 25-year growth of centipede sod, attentively maintained almost every day.

So don't be fooled by pretty pictures of what a site is supposed to look like years from now. And be sure you add up all the costs before you buy. You'll see that Pinewood costs less, not more, than unknown quantities.

Professional for 26 years. And years to come. We'd like to explain more. Because as cemetarians for 26 years, we think it's important for every family to make an informed decision about these things.

So before you buy from a salesman with pretty pictures and long promises, talk to us, even drive through our grounds. We're not going to pressure you for anything. And, we'll respect your decision.

But we want you to know what you're doing.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE TRAGEDY OF AHIMELECH

FROM THE FIRST, IT WAS JUDGED THAT THE KING'S WORD, IN BIBLICAL TIMES, WAS ABSOLUTE LAW. HIS SLIGHTEST NOD HAD THE POWER OF LIFE OR DEATH OVER ANY OF HIS SUBJECTS. ONE WOULD THINK THAT A HIGH PRIEST WOULD HAVE BEEN EXEMPT FROM THIS RULE BUT SUCH WAS NOT THE CASE! AHIMELECH, THE CHIEF PRIEST OF THE TEMPLE AT NOD, CAME UNDER KING SAUL'S WRATH (I SAM. 22:16) BECAUSE HE INADVERTENTLY HELPED DAVID WHEN DAVID WAS ESCAPING FROM SAUL. AHIMELECH DID NOT KNOW, AT THE TIME, THAT DAVID WAS OUTLAWED BY KING SAUL AND GAVE HIM THE HOLY BREAD FROM THE TEMPLE TO FEED HIM AND HIS FOLLOWERS. SO OUTRAGED WAS SAUL AT THIS TREACHEROUS DISOBEDIENCE THAT NOT ONLY WAS AHIMELECH SLAIN BUT ALL THE OTHER PRIESTS IN HIS FAMILY WERE SUBSEQUENTLY SLAUGHTERED ALSO--ALL EIGHTY FIVE OF THEM!

Church 'Roundup' Turns Tiny Town Into Metropolis

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer
PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) - For 362 days a year, Bellview Junction looks like an old Western ghost town somehow transported to a pecan grove in the Florida Panhandle. The only thing missing is tumbleweed.

But for the other three days Bellview Junction and its 80-odd buildings, including Sweatfager's Hotel, Scalp's Barber Shop and a haunted house, are filled with people, food, ecumenical spirit and entertainment.

The celebration, known as St. Anne's Round-up, was started by a small Roman Catholic church to beef up its life and attendance and now attracts up to 150,000 visitors during its three-day annual run.

Proceeds aid charitable work among the needy at home and abroad.

Marking its 21st installment this weekend, the frontier-styled affair is the creation of the Rev. John Licari, pastor of St. Anne's Church in the Pensacola suburb of Bellview.

"As a kid I always liked westerns," he said.

The 60-year-old priest says he began the event with a simple chicken dinner as an act of desperation to enliven his slumping parish. He had come to it with orders to expand its 40-family membership and build a new church.

His first Mass left him dejected. "The collection was $39 so I knew I had to do something," he says. "I was told to build a parish. You might as well tell me to go to the moon in a Piper Cub."

But Licari's brainchild caught on with an assist in 1968 from an acquaintance: retired heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano. "He came down gratis and we jumped from an attendance of 3,000 or 4,000 to about 30,000," Licari says.

Licari became convinced that celebrities were the only way to go.

Paid appearances since have been made by such actors as Martin Milner, Barry Newman, Robert Conrad, Jenilee Harrison, John Schneider and Patrick Duffy; television announcer Ed McMahon, and the late fried chicken magnate Col. Harlan Sanders. This year's guest is

John James of the television show "Dynasty."

Licari knew the Round-up had arrived when a news reporter from Orlando called in 1971. He asked for verification that the Round-up, with a three-day attendance of 50,000 that year, had outdrawn the 10,000 opening-day visitors at Walt Disney World on the same weekend.

The Round-up now attracts visitors and 1,200 volunteers of nearly all faiths. Profits are shared with non-denominational charities.

"It's really a Round-up of a lot of talent and goodwill," Licari said.

The only dark cloud has been what Licari calls a "fringe group" that has distributed anti-Catholic literature just outside the grounds and once dropped leaflets from an airplane.

Licari said no effort is made to evangelize at the Round-up. Pensacola Mayor Vince Whibbs has characterized it as the greatest ecumenical effort in the Southeast.

The centerpiece of Bellview Junction is Sweatfager's Hotel. It is named for Raymond Sweatfager, a classmate of Licari's who he hasn't seen or heard from since their high school days on Staten Island.

"I was always fascinated with his name and I wanted to immortalize it," Licari said with a smile. "If he ever came to Pensacola, I'm afraid I'd have to run the other way."

After six months of preparation, Licari said he walks around "like a zombie" during the Round-up, thinking of things that possibly could go wrong.

Rain is a major enemy, but it also gave the event its biggest publicity boost. When Ed McMahon was to appear, rain caused a one-week postponement which he announced to a national television audience on the "Tonight Show."

"It put the Round-up on the map," Licari said.

The western theme has been compromised just enough to permit a diversity of ethnic food, ranging from Polish to Filipino. Whiskey beer and other alcoholic beverages are banned, even at Miss Kitty's Saloon.

Admission is free, but proceeds from food and games have aided orphans in India and Guatemala, a leper colony and numerous local charities.

The Round-up also has done what it was created to do. The parish has grown to 250 families and a new church was built debt-free in 1978.

"Had it not been for the Round-up, we still would be struggling to make ends meet," Licari said.

HOGS: Trend is steady to 50 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kingston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 45.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson closed, reopen Monday; Wilson 45.75; Rowland 44.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 41.00; Fayetteville 40.00; Whiteville unreported; Wallace 42.00; Spivey's Corner 42.00, Rowland 42.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The final weighted average is 46.86 cents f.o.b dock or equivalent. The market is generally steady and the live supply is adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable to occasionally heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,768,000, compared to 2,063,000 last Friday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady at mostly 2.72-2.84 in East and mostly 2.90-2.97 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans higher at mostly 5.83-6.03 in the east and mostly 5.88-5.92 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.24-3.31; (new crop soybeans 5.52-5.88; wheat 2.89-3.19).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today amid encouragement over the latest economic and monetary news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.44 to 1,188.83 in the first hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Thursday the Federal Reserve reported a larger-than-expected $2.4 billion drop in the money supply.

Analysts said traders viewed that news as increasing the chances that the Fed might consider adopting a less restrictive monetary policy.

This morning the Labor Department said the civilian unemployment rate declined to 7.4 percent in September, from 7.5 percent in the two previous months.

Among today's early volume leaders, Atlantic Richfield rose 1/8 to 51 1/2; Deere & Co. added 1/8 to 29 3/8; Upjohn gained 1/4 to 53, and Exxon was unchanged at 44 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.53 to 1,187.39.

Advances outpaced declines by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 76.70 million shares, against 92.40 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained 21 to 93.95. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .09 at 211.43.

Sweet Hope FWB

A youth service will be held at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. James Nobles and music will be provided by the Sweet Hope youth choir.

The pastor and officers of Sweet Hope will hold their regular monthly meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

First Reading

Dr. John Moskop of East Carolina University will deliver the first of a series of four liturgical readings on the nuclear war issue this weekend at St. Gabriels' Catholic Church.

He will read the first part of a pastoral letter written by American Bishops, titled "The Challenge of Peace: God's and Our Response," which discusses the moral implications and physical dangers of the nuclear age.

Moskop will read at 6 p.m. Saturday and at 9 and 11 a.m. Sunday at the 1120 W. Fifth St. church.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Jim Bridges, known widely for his portrayal of Mark Twain, will make his second appearance on WITN-TV's "Hospitality House" on Saturday.

The weekly show, hosted by Kay Currie, will be aired from 3:30 to 4 p.m. this week. Bridges will discuss the way things were in Twain's day and how he might accept living in today's world.

A professor of English at the College of the Albemarle, Elizabeth City, Bridges has been impersonating Twain for 11 years, from Massachusetts to South Carolina. A second guest on Saturday's show will be Mrs. Bill Page, co-chairman of the Colonial Bath Ball to be held Oct. 13 at Beaufort Community College, Washington. This ball will be part of the America's 400th Anniversary celebration.

Obituary Column

Briley
Funeral services for Mr. James (Boy Daniels) Briley will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at Sycamore Chapel Baptist Church by the Rev. David Hammond. Burial will be in the Jones Cemetery.

Mr. Briley was born in Pitt County and attended the Pitt County schools. He was a member of Sycamore Chapel Baptist Church, which he served on the usher board.

Frustrated Pirates, Panthers Vie

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"Nothing Could Be Finer Than a Victory Over East Carolina."

It might not quite fit the music, but that's the tune that the Pittsburgh Panthers are hoping to be humming late Saturday afternoon.

East Carolina and Pittsburgh meet Saturday at 12:20 p.m. at Pitt Stadium, where a relatively sparse crowd of 28,000 is expected. For both teams, it can be something of a turnaround.

Pittsburgh, picked pre-season to be among the top five teams in the country, has been perhaps the most overrated team around, according to The Sporting News. But, too, the Panthers have lost to some good clubs too, three of them ranked. They lost their opener to Brigham Young, 20-14, on a late rally on national television, then fell to Oklahoma, 42-10. Temple, a 17-0 victor over East Carolina, then stunned the Panthers, 13-12, and West Virginia topped them last week, 28-10.

Anyone betting Pitt would be 0-4 at this point of the season could have made a million bucks.

But at the same time, the Pirates have been frustrated too. They lost their opener to ranked Florida State, 48-17, then lost their home opener to the Owls. A 17-12 loss to Central Michigan, unbeaten so far this year, followed before the Pirates topped Georgia Southern, 34-27. The Eagles are unbeaten in Division I-AA play. N.C. State held off the Pirates last week, 31-22.

The Saturday contest will be telecast regionally over the Katz Network, and will be seen locally over WITN-TV, Channel 7, with air time at noon.

And while the Panthers are struggling to get their offense on track, East Carolina is trying to put together a defense that can stop someone.

To help that effort, Coach Ed Emory moved split end Stefan Adams to free safety this week, and Adams responded by picking off a pass in his first scrimmage action Monday afternoon. Keith Ford has been switched from free safety to cornerback, and the Pirates are also looking for help in a couple of other areas because of injuries. Kevin Walker has a stress fracture in his ankle and may miss the game, while Rich Autry will be sidelined with a foot injury. "We've moved George Franklin to free safety and Terry Paige to cornerback and we're looking at (freshman) John Britt at linebacker. We may be moving some other people too," Emory said.

Despite the fact that Pittsburgh is 0-4, Emory feels they are a very strong team. "This is a great challenge for us. They may have the best personnel that we see this year. They lost to great teams and they may take out all their frustrations on us. Then, again, we could take out some of our frustrations, too."

Key among those "best personnel" is right tackle Bill Fralic, a 6-5, 285-pound senior. Fralic is being touted as a true candidate for the Heisman Trophy, and should he win, would be the first interior lineman ever to do so. He's seen as an outstanding bet to win the Outland Trophy, presented to the top lineman in the country.

And Pitt likes to run behind him. Five times against West Virginia, he flattened his opposing defender, and generated 60 of the 78 yards of Pitt's first touchdown drive against the Mountaineers. Pitt rushed for 118 yards against West Virginia, 77 of them behind Fralic. On the year, 275 of 515 yards rushing has come behind Fralic. No one has come over him for a sack this year, but he has been penalized three times for 15 yards.

A big question mark for the Panthers will be the health of quarterback John Congemi, a 6-1, 185-pound junior. Congemi missed was injured earlier this year, and was reinjured in the West Virginia game. He is, however, expected to be ready to play against the Pirates.

Congemi has hit on 36 of 75 pass attempts for 403 yards and one touchdown. His backup, John Cummings has hit on 19 of 32 for 151 yards and one score. However, he is listed as only fourth team this week, with Chris Jelic (9 of 18, 92 yards, and Dante Wiley (0 of 1), ahead of him.

Offense has been the big problem for the Panthers — just as defense has been the question mark for the Pirates. Pitt is only rushing for 128.7 yards a game, led by halfback Charles Gladman (5-11, 200, Fr.). Gladman has carried 60 times for 240 yards with one touchdown. He is the only Panther to rush for more than 100 yards.

Pitt has passed for 161.5 yards a game, with split end Bill Wallace (6-2, 195, Sr.) the top receiver. He's caught 21 of the 57 completions for 292 yards and two touchdowns. Flanker Jeff Casper (6-3, 205, Sr.) has eight catches for 159 yards, second best on the team.

The leading scorer for the Panthers is placekicker Mark Brasco, with 16 points, hitting four PATs and four of seven field goals. He kicked a school record tying 52-yarder last week against West Virginia.

Defensively, the Panthers are led by middle linebacker Troy Benson (6-2, 230, Sr.) with 60 tackles, including six for losses. The other linebacker, Caesar Aldisert (6-4, 220, Sr.) is next with 48 grabs, also having six for losses.

The Panthers have held their opponents to 126.5 yards a game on the ground and 212.8 through the air. The Panthers have picked up off but three of 108 pass attempts by their foes, two of them by free safety Bill Callahan (6-0, 195, Jr.).

Pitt Coach Foge Fazio has said that the rough start has made it difficult for the young Panther players to gain momentum and confidence. "They're going to take their licks now," he said, "but somebody is going to pay for that down the road."

East Carolina is hoping that "down the road" doesn't come Saturday.

The Pirates travel to Tulsa next Saturday night, while Pittsburgh visits an upcoming ECU foe, South Carolina.

Alston Is Laid To Rest

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Baseball celebrities gathered for a final tribute to Walter "Smookey" Alston, a small-town boy who gained fame as manager of the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers for 23 years.

Alston, 72, died Monday after being in poor health for a year and a half. He never completely recovered from a heart attack suffered in April 1983.

Alston guided the Dodgers to seven National League pennants and four world championships. He was voted into baseball's Hall of Fame last year.

Despite his fame as a baseball manager, Alston maintained his roots in his southwest Ohio home of Darrtown, where he was to be buried today. He spent his life in the small farming community of about 200 people, attending Miami University in nearby Oxford in the 1930s.

Until he became a big-league manager, Alston also taught school and coached basketball in Darrtown in the off-season.

In fact, reporters once were surprised to find him digging up potatoes after he'd returned from winning a minor league "Little World Series," recalled Jerry Nardiello, sports editor of the nearby Middletown Journal.

Following his retirement, Alston was often seen riding the country lanes on a motorcycle, offering rides to his neighbors. Alston also was the main celebrity at the Hitching Post Bar, one of the few business places in Darrtown.

Alston was to be buried in the family plot at the Darrtown Cemetery.

ECU, Pittsburgh Game On WITN

East Carolina's game with the University of Pittsburgh will be telecast locally over WITN-TV, Channel 7, live from Pitt Stadium at 12 noon Saturday.

The first-ever meeting between the two schools will be the second game telecast by WITN-TV this fall. Earlier the Florida State-ECU game was delay telecast by the station.

This week's game is being featured by the Katz Network as its "Eastern Game of the Week," and is being picked up locally through satellite feed.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Maybe changing from road uniforms to the home whites did it. The Padres suddenly played like the Cubs had, and for that matter, Chicago now was troubled by the same shortcomings which tripped San Diego when it was the visiting team.

San Diego's 7-1 victory Thursday over Chicago in Game Three of the National League Championship Series was a reversal of the Cubs' victories in Games 1 and 2 in just about every way.

—Alan Wiggins and Tony Gwynn, the Padres' one-two hitters, were 2 for 16 in the Padres' 13-0 and 4-2 losses at Wrigley Field. They were five for eight Thursday, with Gwynn collecting three hits and scoring a run and Wiggins knocking one in.

—Bob Dernier and Ryne Sandberg, the Cubs' first two batters, had one hit, a walk and a fielder's choice to show for their eight trips to the plate. In their first two games, they had combined for seven hits and seven runs.

—San Diego, hitting .183 after two games, raked Chicago pitchers for 11 hits. The Cubs, 24 of 67 (.358) in the first two outings, were checked on five hits by Ed Whitson and, in the ninth inning, Rich Gossage, who was called upon for the first time in the playoffs.

—In the first two games, no San Diego pitcher lasted more than four innings. Whitson went eight, walking only two and striking out six. His counterpart, Dennis Eckersley, was chased after five and a third innings, nine hits and five runs.

As a result, there is new life in San Diego, where the Padres were left for dead and face the herculean task of trying to win a championship after losing the first two games.

"I can't explain it," said Graig Nettles, who contributed an RBI single to the Padres' four-run sixth inning, tying a championship series career record of 18 RBI shared with Reggie Jackson. "It's a psychological game in some respects, and it may get to them. I hope it does."

"We knew it wouldn't be easy," Cubs' shortstop Larry Bowa said. "We know we have to come out Saturday and play well."

The Cubs still are in the enviable position of being one game away from a championship with a maximum of two left to play. Only one team in playoff history — the 1982 Milwaukee Brewers — has come back from a two-games-to-none disadvantage to win a best-of-five league championship.

"We're going to start over tomorrow," said Chicago Manager Jim Frey. "If the score is 2-1 or 13-1, I don't think it has any effect at all. We beat them pretty good in Chicago, but it didn't seem to have any effect on them tonight, so I don't think this will have any effect on us Saturday."

The Padres did everything in Game 3 that the Cubs had done in the first two outings, getting key hits, Whitson's solid pitching and an errorless defensive effort.

The Cubs rapped out three hits in the second inning, but got home only one run. Keith Moreland led off with a double, and Ron Cey and Jody Davis followed with singles, but Whitson got Bowa and Eckersley to pop up and Dernier to line out to Garry Templeton, who made a diving stab that saved at least one run. Whitson then settled down, using an effective palm ball to help set down 17 of the last 20 batters he faced.

"I think we have a little momentum going for us now," said Whitson, 14-8 during the regular season. "It's a chain reaction. You can see what happens."

His teammates, bats silenced by Chicago pitchers for 22 innings, blasted Eckersley in the fourth. Terry Kennedy and Kevin McReynolds led off with singles — the first hits of the playoff for each — and Templeton brought them home with a one-out double to left-center.

After Whitson popped up, Wiggins lifted a single to center, scoring Templeton to make it 3-1.

With Eckersley, 10-8 during the regular season, tiring in the sixth, the Padres broke it open. Gwynn led off with a single, took second on a groundout by Garvey and scored on Nettles' single, which prompted Frey to replace Eckersley with George Frazier.

The plan backfired. Frazier yielded a single to Kennedy, and Kevin McReynolds followed with a three-run homer that barely cleared the wall in left field — his first in more than a month.

"In Chicago, that probably would have been an out," said McReynolds, who had 20 regular-season homers. "Everybody needs a little bit of luck in this game, and I'm just hoping ours carries over to Saturday."

Rose Nips Hunt In Soccer Match

Jody Smith scored the game's only goal as Rose High School handed Wilson Hunt a 1-0 defeat yesterday, taking firm hold on first place in the Big East Conference soccer race.

Hunt, which has dominated the Big East for two straight years with a 25-1 record and two championships during that period, was unable to get the ball into the goal, thanks to what Coach Will Wiberg termed "outstanding play" by goalie Gregg Ward, who recorded 15 saves.

Smith's goal, his ninth of the year and fourth game-winner, came only 6:43 into the contest. Tad Castellow got an assist on the score. Both teams had chances after that, but the defense came to the front from there on out.

"The entire team, especially our seniors, wanted this game badly," Wiberg said. "The win means a lot, since all of the other teams in the conference have lost at least twice now. I really can't cite any one player, since this was an entire team effort."

Rose is now 8-1 overall and 5-0 in the conference, having won their last seven in a row. The Rampants entertain Northeastern on Tuesday.

Watching It Fly

San Diego Padre Kevin McReynolds watches his fifth inning three-run homer sail over the wall as he heads for first base Thursday night in San Diego. The homer helped the Padres to a 7-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the third game of the National League playoffs. Chicago still leads, 2-1. (AP Laserphoto)

KINSTON, GREENVILLE, HAVELOCK
GOLDSBORO, NEW BERN

Woody Peele

After another week that makes one begin to wonder just what's happened in college football, Tom Baines continues to pull away from the rest of us.

After last week's contests, Baines moved out into the lead with a 37-22 record. Jimmy DuPree, who led for the first couple of weeks, held onto second place at 34-25, while last year's winner, Vickie Spivey, made a move upward to 33-26.

Our guests hold down fourth place at 31-28, followed by this writer at 30-29, and Joe Jenkins at 27-32.

Our guest of last week, Ayden-Grifton's new head football coach Dwight Tart, turned in a 6-6 record, tying Conley's Donnie Bunn. But ECU assistant sports information director Rob Wilson continues to be the guest leader with an 8-5 mark.

This week's guest is another "new" coach, Farmville Central's Dixon Sauls. That will leave only North Pitt's Larry Bolger to be heard from later this season among the five new coaches in the county.

Last week, we were only 5-3 in our high school picks, missing two of the three in-county games. That brings our record to 32-13 on the year with another tough week ahead.

In the top area game, Ayden-Grifton visits D.H. Conley. The Vikings had the week off last Friday after losing their first game of the year the week before, and that should help them. The Chargers, meanwhile, suffered their first defeat of the year at the hands of Southern Nash. Both teams will be out to get a new winning streak going, but we're leaning to the Chargers, 24-7.

Farmville Central, meanwhile, visits SouthWest Edgecombe, by far the best team in the Eastern Carolina Conference. This bodes no good fortune to the Jaguars, but it should give us a chance to rate one of the best teams in the Coastal to the best in the ECC. Our nod is to SouthWest, 35-7.

North Pitt, still seeking its first win, entertains Southern Nash. The Firebirds found new life in their win over Ayden-Grifton, and will be fired up for this one. The Panthers need a victory, but we don't look for it this week. Southern to win, 21-6.

In other area games, we like Chocowinity over Creswell, Jamesville over Bath, Washington over Plymouth, Tarboro over Williamston, Greene Central over C.B. Aycock and Ahoskie over Roanoke.

Rose High School's Rampants, after suffering their first loss of the year last week, need a win to get back into the Big East race. The Rampants, however, are still without the services of their top two running backs and that spells trouble for Rose. Rocky Mount has too much offense that can't be countered as far as we're concerned. We like Rocky Mount, 19-7. The panel goes with the Gryphons, too, by a total of 5-1.

East Carolina is another team in desperate need of a victory. The same goes for this week's foe, Pittsburgh. The surprising Panthers are winless at 0-4, but have played a very tough schedule. Our own feeling is that the Panthers will relieve their frustrations, 28-21. And the panel goes with Pitt also, 6-0.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over North Carolina; Georgia Tech over N.C. State; Wake Forest over Richmond; Minnesota over Indiana; Southern Cal and Washington State, a toss-up; Duke and Virginia, a toss-up; Penn State over Maryland; Georgia and Alabama, a toss-up; Kentucky over Rutgers; and Mississippi State over Southern Miss.

Six Birdies Help Streck Tie For Texas Golf Lead

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Ron Streck took in stride a string of six consecutive birdies — including a bunker shot that found the cup — that propelled him into a four-way tie for the first round lead in the $350,000 Texas Open golf tournament.

"I got hot," Streck said Thursday, then added:

"I've been hot here before." It's something of an understatement. Streck set an all-time PGA Tour record when he played the final two rounds of the 1978 Texas Open in 125, scoring his first professional victory.

"It's a good feeling to come back here. I know I can win here," said Streck, who shared the first round lead with defending champion Jim Colbert, Mark Wiebe and longshot Kurt Cox, all tied at 65, 5-under-par on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

Cox, 36, was less than overwhelmed by his no-bogey effort, only his fifth round of PGA Tour competition this year.

"I haven't played but maybe a half-dozen rounds since the Buick Open in early August," said the San Antonio native. "I guess I've just got a lot of natural talent and it came out today."

"I didn't get gung-ho or excited about it. You can't play golf that way. It's no big deal to be leading the first round," he said.

Cox tied for 50th — the last qualifying spot — in the last PGA Tour school and has played in only one event this year, a tie for 62nd (worth $840) in the Buick Open.

Cox, who runs a golf school and club repair shop in Longview, Texas, said he didn't know how many times he'd attempted to gain his approved playing rights on the Tour — "but it's been pretty steady. I think I've tried every year since 1977," he said.

Unable to qualify for the American circuit, he has played several seasons on the European and Asian tours and has collected three Asian titles, in the Singapore, India and Hong Kong opens.

A lanky shot off the pace at 66 were Lanny Wadkins, George Cadle and Jim Kane.

Calvin Peete, attempting to gain the Vardon Trophy that goes to the man with the low stroke average on the American Tour, and Mark O'Meara, whose sights are set on the leading money-winning spot, topped the group at 67. Also at that figure were Mark Calcavecchia, Bruce Lietzke and Howard Twitty.

Early Scores Top Rose JV's

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount used the big play to gain a 24-15 junior varsity football victory over Rose High School yesterday.

Rocky Mount recovered a fumble inside the Rose five to set up their first touchdown, then scored on an 87 yard run later in the first half for a 12-0 lead at intermission.

Early in the third quarter, Rocky Mount scored again on a 62-yard run for an 18-0 lead.

But Rose fought back, scoring on a 45-yard punt return by William Smith, with Robbie McDonald kicking the PAT. Then, later, Eric Jarman caused a Baby Gryphon fumble in the end zone, recovered by Andre Love for the score. John Lyles ran over the PAT to cut the lead to 18-15.

But after picking up a first and goal, Rocky Mount was pushed back to a fourth and 25 situation, and came up with another big play — a touchdown pass — to put the game away.

"We played well in the second half except for giving up the two big plays," Coach James Rankins said. "I thought McDonald did a good job kicking for us. That was about the only bright spot."

Rose is now 2-3 overall and 1-1 in Big East play. The Rampant Cubs host Beddingfield next Thursday.

Ayden-Grifton..... 18
D.H. Conley..... 10

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton's junior varsity football team gained an 18-10 victory over D.H. Conley last night.

Desi Carmon scored in the second period for Ayden-Grifton on a one-yard run for a 6-0 lead. Conley came back to score from the one after Bronswell Patrick returned an interception to that point in the second quarter. The Baby Vikes made the PAT for an 8-6 lead at halftime.

Ayden-Grifton scored twice in the fourth period as Carmon scored from a yard out and Andre Grant ran over from 18 yards away. Late in the quarter, Conley drove to the two before giving the ball up on downs and Ayden-Grifton gave up a safety after that to round out the scoring.

Ayden-Grifton is now 3-1 on the year.

Earnhardt Leads Second Day Of Qualifying Runs

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dale Earnhardt outran Cale Yarborough Thursday to lead second-day qualifying for the Miller High Life 500 Grand National stock car race.

Earnhardt, driving the Wrangler-sponsored Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS fielded by Richard Childress, posted a four-lap qualifying average of 165.011 mph on the high-banked, 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway oval.

That average, good for the 16th spot in the race day lineup, was considerably faster than the 163.243 he ran Wednesday. In fact, had he run that well in pole qualifying, Earnhardt, the 1980 Winston Cup champion, would have been fifth.

"We made the wrong decision on tires (Wednesday)," Earnhardt explained. "We put on the wrong tires and the stagger (offset) was wrong. That slowed us down. But, today, we worked on it and got it right."

Yarborough also improved considerably, moving up from 163.806 to 164.614, but losing a place in the process. The three-time Winston Cup champion was the 16th fastest Wednesday, when only the top 15 spots were locked in, but now his Chevrolet will start 17th in the race.

"I'm glad I got in," Yarborough noted. "Now we can go to work. I think we'll be in good shape Sunday."

Yarborough, who came into the time trials as one of the favorites for the pole, blew his qualifying engine Wednesday morning and was forced to qualify with his race engine.

"It just doesn't produce the same power," he explained. "And you don't want to take any chance of blowing that one, too."

Defending champion Richard Petty also made it into the race field Thursday, hitting 163.177 in a Pontiac Grand Prix to take the 23rd position.

The slowest of the 15 drivers qualifying Thursday was Phil Parsons, the younger brother of record-setting pole winner Benny Parsons. Phil's Chevy was clocked at 162.055.

The 10 remaining positions will be filled in concluding time trials Friday.

The partial lineup for Sunday's Miller High Life 500, with type of car and four-lap qualifying average in mph:

1. Benny Parsons, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 165.579 (breaks 4-lap track qualifying record of 163.184 by Cale Yarborough in May 1980).

Kansas City Down To Its Last Hope Against Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — The last hope for the Kansas City Royals rests with someone they did not want before the season started.

Charlie Leibrandt, who began the year in the minor leagues, will be the Royals' starter tonight when they try to derail the Detroit Tiger express that has rolled to a two games-to-none lead in the best-of-five American League Championship Series.

Very few people thought Leibrandt would figure in Kansas City's plans this season. Now, very few people figure the Royals have a chance as they go against Detroit's Milt Wilcox, 17-8.

"In this situation, we can't lose," Leibrandt said.

But, one more loss and the Royals are gone and the AL East-champion Tigers will be in the World Series for the first time since 1968.

Only one team, the 1982 Milwaukee Brewers, has ever overcome a 2-0 deficit in a league championship series.

Tiger Stadium will be jammed with 50,000-plus roaring fans, anxious for their team to make the kill.

"I can't even imagine what it will be like," said John Grubb, the hero of Game 2. His two-run double in the 11th inning off Dan Quisenberry lifted Detroit to a 5-3 triumph.

"It's going to be electrifying," said Alan Trammell, the star of an 8-1 rout in the series opener. He went

3-for-3 and drove home three runs as the aggressive Tigers ran the Royals out of their own ballpark.

Kansas City has won five of six games against the Tigers in Detroit this season, although the Royals are not overly enthusiastic about their chances.

"Nobody's saying, 'Hey, great, we've done well in Detroit,'" Quisenberry said.

Partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 50s were forecast for the 8:35 p.m. EDT matchup.

Win or lose, this season has been a success for Leibrandt, who turned 28 on Thursday. The left-hander racked up an 11-7 record with a 3.63 earned run average.

In March, it looked like he might not even be with the team.

Leibrandt, 16-17 in four years with the Cincinnati Reds before spending the entire 1983 season in the minors, came to spring training as a veteran trying to find his way back to the major leagues.

He was immediately disappointed.

"I could see the handwriting on the wall," he said. "They didn't need me. I deserved better."

He pitched just one inning of exhibition ball for the Royals. And Kansas City Manager Dick Howser wasn't sure Leibrandt deserved much more than that.

"I'll tell you how he looked in the spring," he said. "He looked like Omaha. He looked like down the road."

Leibrandt was given a one-way ticket to the Royals' Triple-A team in Omaha, a place where "they have a really nice park to play in but you wouldn't want to spend your entire life there."

Rather than stay frustrated — a thought that occurred to him — he channeled his energy into pitching well.

One by one, the victories came.

By early May, he was throwing as well "as I ever had in my career."

"I kept thinking that something had to happen," he said. "I knew I was putting pressure on them. About a month later, something did happen."

The Royals, at the time, were struggling and needed help.

"Give him credit," Howser said. "He forced us to recall him."

He was 7-1 with a 2.24 ERA when he was brought up May 30, and Howser quickly put him into the starting rotation.

"When you're trying to make a living in this business, and you're hurting for pitching, you give 'em a chance if you think they can do it," Howser said. "He'd had some success in the big leagues and I think that helped make it easier for him to step right in."

Said Leibrandt: "It means a great deal to a young guy to know he's going to get to pitch and not worry about getting into the doghouse."

Leibrandt felt he had been in exile during the last year he spent with the Cincinnati organization, and hoped things would work out once he was traded in June 1983 to the Royals, who assigned him to Omaha.

Prospects for progress did not look any brighter when he began this year again in the minors.

Despite this season's success, which included getting the victory in the Royals' AL West-clinching triumph and a 1-1 record against Detroit, he prefers to let others get most of the attention.

"The guys who should get the credit are the guys who hit the ball, score the runs and save the games," said the pitcher who made 23 starts but did not record a complete game.

"Besides, I'm never around to finish the ones I start."

Rose Tops Hunt; Conley One Away From Title

Rose High School's volleyball team swept a pair of Big East Conference matches from Hunt High yesterday.

Rose won the opening match, 15-6, 15-6, then came back to take a 15-3, 15-8 win in the second contest.

"Everyone played well," Coach Kim Gruber said. "It was a much-needed win, but we still need to polish some rough edges before we take on Fike and Northern Nash again."

Karla Turner was the leading server for Rose with a string of seven, while Cheryl Clark had two spikes.

Rose, now 11-3, travels to Beddingfield on Tuesday.

either of the two matches will clinch the title for the Valkyries.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School split a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball matches with SouthWest Edgecombe and Ayden-Grifton yesterday.

SouthWest topped Greene Central, 15-3, 15-8, in the opening match of the afternoon. Sharon Croom had three spikes and Cyndi Hicks had two to highlight the Lady Ram offense.

In the second match, Greene Central topped Ayden-Grifton, 15-3, 15-5. Croom had two spikes while Antonette Wilkes had three along with nine service points.

SouthWest also defeated Ayden-Grifton, but the scores were unavailable.

Greene Central is now 10-2 overall and 3-1 in Eastern Carolina Conference play. The Lady Rams travel to Farmville Central on Tuesday, while Ayden-Grifton hosts SouthWest and North Pitt.

Nash, 15-5, 15-13, in the opening match of the day. Penny Corey had nine service points while Clemmie Harris had eight, including five straight in the second game, rallying North Pitt from a 13-10 deficit to the win.

Harris added nine hits while Myra Moore had five.

In the second match, North Pitt downed Farmville Central, 15-7, 15-7. Regenia Moore had 10 service points while Corey added seven. Harris and Myra Moore each had four hits, while Melody Harrington added six assists.

Southern Nash downed Farmville, 15-3, 15-7, in the other match.

Farmville is now 4-7 while North Pitt is 3-1 in conference play. North Pitt travels to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday, while Farmville entertains Southern Nash and Greene Central.

MOREHEAD CITY — D.H. Conley moved within one victory of the Coastal Conference volleyball championship yesterday with a pair of wins over White Oak and hosting West Carteret.

The Valkyries lost the first game of the White Oak match, 15-11, but fought back to take 15-8 and 15-0 wins in the next two games to take the match. Trellany Boyd had eight straight service points in the third game to spark the victory.

Lisa Mills had eight hits, while Debbie Patrick had seven and Michelle Waters, six, in the match.

Conley then downed West Carteret, 15-6, 15-6, to sweep the day. Darby Fulford served up ten straight points in the second game of the match, while Mills had eight hits over the two games.

Conley climbs to 18-0 overall and 8-0 against Coastal competition. The Valkyries close out the regular season on Tuesday, hosting West Craven in a dual match. A victory in

TV Producer Wants Clear Distinction Between Sexes

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

Actually, the crusade is the handwork of executive producer Jay Bernstein, who earlier fought to bring the macho hero back to the home screen.

"I'm fighting against a new trend growing in America — androgenous men and women," said Bernstein.

"Pick up Vogue magazine and there are a hundred pages of women dressed as men. I am going to war with designers who have decided to make the world unisex."

Bernstein, a dapper man who always carries a walking stick, said he is going to use "Mike Hammer," CBS' Saturday night detective series, to fight fire with fire.

"On 'Mike Hammer' I'm going to make sure that the men always look like men and the women always look like women," he said. "I believe in exercise for health, but I don't believe in exercise for fashion. I see women with arms bigger than mine. They've been pumping iron."

While designers hide flesh, there'll be more cleavage on "Mike Hammer," he said.

"The advertisers have convinced the ad agencies and the networks that the biggest audience for television is 18-49," he said. "It's gotten to where after 'Monday Night Football' and '60 Minutes' there aren't any shows for men. 'Mike Hammer' is designed to appeal to men."

But, without female viewers, the show could never be a ratings hit. So he and star Stacy Keach sat down to work out a strategy to win over the ladies. When "Mistral's Daughter" came along Keach quickly accepted the lead role in the romantic miniseries.

Another ploy is that in every third or fourth episode the female guest star will be "a strong lady and someone Mike Hammer will have to woo to win," Bernstein said. That's instead of the usual glamour girls who fall for Hammer at first sight.

Another bow to the women is that Hammer's tough hide will crack often enough to show that he really does have emotions.

"We're up against 'The Love Boat' so we're going to include some 'Love Boat'-type casting," said Bernstein. "A criminal dies and leaves $8 million to his wife, ex-wife and girlfriend. Each woman wants the entire $8 million and each wants Mike Hammer."

"What Mike Hammer wants is to first find out which of these three women killed his friend. So, to cast it, I got Rebecca Holden, Barbie Benton and Anne Turkel. And Lou Ferrigno to play a guest role."

Bernstein said his earlier campaign for more heroes has paid off. "Now the heroes are taking over," he said. "Every night you've got heroes and heroines."

"And these shows are getting harder as we are getting more victimized, robbed and murdered."

"Miami Vice" is a far cry from "The Rockford Files." The times are like the Far West after the Civil War. So, we're looking for tough, rough heroes to take over."

A Little Help

Squirrels may be surefooted but, like most animals, they will still take advantage of help when it's available. This squirrel did just that, using a trellis that had been conveniently tied to the water fountain to make it easier for the animal to get a drink. (AP Laserphoto)

Candidate Takes Cue From George

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wayne Townsend responded to his challenger's rock 'n' roll political video by sending a Boy George lookalike to deliver a sequined glove and a note to Gov. Robert D. Orr.

The Boy George imposter also dropped off an outfit for Orr to wear in his next video. Included were a gold silk jacket, camouflage-patterned walking shorts, silver glitter socks, a pair of black-and-white checked sunglasses and a T-shirt proclaiming the rock group "Peter and the Test Tube Babies."

The response from Orr's office was puzzlement.

"I don't know whether those clothes will fit or not. They look a little short," said Orr's deputy press secretary, Nancy DiLaura.

Orr unveiled his rock video, "Stay With Me," Wednesday night at The Vogue, an Indianapolis nightclub. Aides say it is the nation's "first political music video."

"Stay With Me" was designed so that Orr, who at 66 is the nation's oldest governor, could lure the nation's youngest voters — those in the 18-24 age group.

ABC Shakes Up Fall TV Schedule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC television has dropped three shows and re-arranged its primetime schedule only two weeks after the official beginning of the fall viewing season.

The network, which finished third in the current Nielsen ratings week, pulled its new show, "Glitter," and "People Do the Craziest Things" from its Thursday lineup and "Foul-Ups, Bleeps & Blunders" from Tuesday nights.

ABC Entertainment President Lew Erlich said the network was adding a new night of theatrical and original movies on Thursday.

"Glitter" will continue in production until a new time slot can be found for it, Erlich said.

The future of "Foul-Ups, Bleeps & Blunders" was being evaluated, and "People Do the Craziest Things" will go out of production.

In the past ratings week, NBC succeeded in breaking CBS' hold on Thursday night. The breakthrough program was "The Cosby Show," which finished third of all shows for the week.

Erlich said "The ABC Thursday Movie" would make its debut Oct. 18 at 8-10 p.m. It will be followed by "2020."

On Oct. 23, the new comedy, "Who's the Boss?" will be moved from Thursday to Tuesday, to replace "Foul-Ups," which will have its final broadcast Oct. 18.

The new Tuesday lineup will feature "Three's a Crowd," the revamped version of "Three's Company," followed by "Who's the Boss?" "Paper Dolls" and "Jessie."

ABC's Thursday lineup is scheduled to be preempted this week by the Major League Baseball playoffs and again on Oct. 11 by the presidential debates.

Doctor Disputes Singer's Claim

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The ears, nose and throat of rock singer Wendy O. Williams are "perfectly normal," despite her claim in a $6 million lawsuit that she suffered permanent injuries in a police beating, a doctor testified.

S. Frederick Horwitz, a specialist who examined the self-proclaimed high priestess of heavy metal, said Thursday in Circuit Court her ears were normal and her throat was in excellent condition.

Ms. Williams and members of her group, the now defunct Plasmatics, are suing six Milwaukee police officers for damages they claim to have sustained in their 1981 arrests.

Charges against the group of presenting what police termed an obscene performance were later dismissed. The suit asks for nearly $6 million.

Ms. Williams said that as a result of a police beating during the arrest, she has difficulty hearing, often can not sing for longer than an hour and is bothered by her ears during air travel.

Horwitz said Ms. Williams suffers from a treatable sinus condition, but that it was not clear that the condition was a result of a beating.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A senior police official says Colombo has become a major drug trafficking center and more than 75 percent of the Asians arrested in Europe last year for drug smuggling and related offenses were Sri Lankans.

Hema Weerasinghe, who heads the National Drug Control Board, told a news conference that Sri Lanka was both a consumer area and a transit point supplying heroin to Western Europe.

State Board Approves Basic School Plan

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The fate of a basic curriculum plan, which calls for more than five hours of instruction a day for all North Carolina public school children, is now in the hands of the General Assembly, which requested the plan.

The state Board of Education approved Thursday the final blueprint of the curriculum plan, which legislators had ordered the board to develop by Oct. 15.

Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, stressed that the board will be making regular changes to the plan in the future.

"It is not a single, final concrete document," he told the board.

Five-Step Program For Educators OK'd

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Education has approved a five-step career development plan for principals, superintendents, supervisors and other school administrators similar to a plan approved for teachers last month.

The plan, approved Thursday, would require that administrators work for two years under a nonrenewable certificate at base salaries ranging from $21,564 for vice principals to $37,716 for superintendents of school districts with more than 30,000 students. Salaries are supplemented by school systems.

After two years and a successful review, administrators may move into a two-year provisional status. Following each subsequent two-year period, administrators would be eligible to advance to the next level and a 10 percent pay increase. Those remaining in a level could receive a 5 percent raise for every two years of satisfactory performance.

An additional 10 percent would be added to the salary every two years for principals of secondary schools and 5 percent for principals of middle schools. Superintendents would receive additional salary increments ranging from 5 percent to 20 percent based on the size of their school systems.

The plans would also establish a peer review panel appointed by the superintendent of a school system to make recommendations for advancement. Superintendents would be reviewed by local school boards.

Raymond L. Sarbough, executive director of the North Carolina Association of School Administrators, questioned a provision requiring administrators who are promoted to begin new jobs at the initial level, although it would not mean a reduction in pay. He also said he was concerned about the lack of incentives for administrators to seek advanced degrees, although the plan stipulates that four continuing education credits must be accumulated every two years for an administrator to continue advancing.

Sarbough also said the review panel would be "complex and cumbersome, as it is with the teachers plan."

Andy Reese, director of the division of principals and administrators in the North Carolina Association of Educators, said the state board should be willing to alter the plan if pilot studies uncover problems.

If the General Assembly approves funds for the plan, it will be tested in 16 school systems in 1985-86 and will be expanded to all 142 systems in 1986-87. The pilot school systems will be chosen by the board in November.

The initial $7.2 million for the pilot project is included in a $206 million expansion budget request approved by the board last month. Another $110 million for the program was included in the board's $563 million expansion budget request for 1986-87.

New Group Wants Reagan To Retire

RALEIGH (AP) — The head of a new group that wants President Reagan to retire because it thinks he's too old says she'd feel the same way if Walter Mondale were 73. But a spokesman for the Reagan-Bush campaign says the group appears to be a front for a Democratic organization.

Jean Komaiko, a Durham woman who heads the newly formed Committee to Retire the President, says a few weeks ago she and a friend began organizing a group of women whose husbands are 73 or older.

"I have extremely strong feelings about the question of age," Mrs. Komaiko, 62, said in a recent telephone interview. "I don't think we've addressed it at all."

The committee includes two members in Chapel Hill, one in Asheville and others in Virginia, Maryland, Connecticut, Alabama, Colorado, Maine, Utah and Illinois, Mrs. Komaiko said.

Mrs. Komaiko said if Reagan is re-elected next month, he'll be 77 by the time he's finished his term and "will be the oldest president we've ever had."

Acknowledging that she and co-sponsor Eleanor Smith of Tucson, Ariz., are Democrats, Mrs. Komaiko said she would feel the same way if Mondale were Reagan's age.

"I have a husband who ran for office (40 years ago) in Illinois," she said. "It is still an absolutely taxing job. Since my husband is the same age ... we thought it was a dramatic way to call attention to this."

Mrs. Komaiko said she thinks some of the bloopers the president has made, including his remark about bombing the Soviet Union, are due to his age.

"I think somebody this age, you know the buck ends with him," she said. "He is facing fantastic problems which might have to have instantaneous decisions made. Men, if this age, no matter how healthy they are, their reactions, their emotions are not equipped for this kind of responsibility."

But Karen Johnston, spokeswoman for the North Carolina Reagan-Bush campaign in Greensboro, disagreed.

Maniloff says a section in the plan encouraging foreign language study as early as kindergarten, calls the study a "second language" rather than "foreign language."

"We want to emphasize there are generic skills involved in learning a second language," he said.

The plan also was modified to require local school systems to identify "risk" students in early grades and to recommend that students who must be held back receive a comprehensive assessment.

Maniloff told the board he began work this week to implement the plan's student-teacher ratio recommendations in several school systems.

The proposal recommends one teacher for each 23 students in the first three grades and one for every 26 students in higher grades.

Gov. Jim Hunt applauded the board for its work on the education plan and encouraged members to continue their efforts at improving public education.

"We're on the verge of something that's going to change America," he said. "I'm very, very proud of you. I will continue to watch you with interest ... and I will help you in any way I can."

No cost estimate of the plan has been made, but Maniloff has said it could take years to implement its recommendations.

Divided by grade levels — kindergarten-grade 3, grades 4-6, grades 7-8 and grades 9-12 — the plan discusses subject areas for study at each level. It also addresses needs of exceptional children, including the handicapped and the academically talented.

Students would receive at least five hours and 30 minutes of instruction each school day, not including recess or lunchtime. They also would have to score at or above the 25th percentile in the Annual Testing Program and meet local promotion standards to move into the next grade.

Tokyo Executive Says State Ideal

RALEIGH (AP) — Mitsubishi Electric Corp. searched throughout the United States for the best place to locate its new subsidiary, Mitsubishi Semiconductor America, before deciding on North Carolina, the president of the Japanese company said.

"We found North Carolina a most appropriate, ideal place," said Nihachiro Katayama, president of the Tokyo firm, during a visit Thursday to check on the progress of a $29 million semiconductor firm now under construction in Durham County. The firm is Mitsubishi Electric's largest foreign investment.

Katayama, in an interview after a breakfast meeting with Gov. Jim Hunt at the Executive Mansion, said North Carolina's business climate and the absence of a unitary tax make it "ideal" for microelectronics companies.

North Carolina has "wonderful educational facilities," a good climate and cooperative leaders, Katayama said. "It is very, very attractive."

Also at the meeting were William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system; Bruce Poulton, chancellor of North Carolina State University; and Duke University president Terry Sanford.

Katayama, speaking through an interpreter, sidestepped a question about whether North Carolina would be more attractive to new industry if it abolished its intangibles and inventory taxes.

U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, the Republican candidate for governor, has made getting rid of the taxes a major plank in his platform. He says the taxes encourage businesses to locate in neighboring states that don't levy them.

Martin's Democratic opponent, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, says the taxes should be eliminated only if the state can reimburse local governments.

Katayama said nothing about the intangibles or inventory tax, but said the absence of a unitary tax — a levy on a corporation's worldwide assets — gave North Carolina an advantage over California, Florida and other states competing heavily for microelectronics firms.

Kazuo Watanabe, president of Mitsubishi Semiconductor America, said construction of the new company should be finished this fall. It will employ 40 people by the end of the year and ultimately will have 250 workers, he said.

Most of the employees will be North Carolinians, and 26 already have been sent to Japan for training, Watanabe said.

Railroad Sued For $14 Million

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro man has sued Norfolk Southern Railway Co. and Southern Railway Co. for $14 million because of injuries he received when he was struck by a train Aug. 12, 1983.

David E. LeGrand's left arm and leg were severed in the accident. The lawsuit said LeGrand, 34, was sitting on the tracks when he collapsed in a seizure. LeGrand's attorney, Lee D. Andrews of Greensboro, said his client suffers from an epileptic condition.

The suit said the train failed to reduce speed and lacked a proper lookout. A spokesman for Norfolk Southern Railway, parent company for Southern Railway, said the company would not comment on the case.

The train was traveling east at 12 mph at the time of the accident, according to police reports. The engineer told police he saw a man sitting on the tracks and blew the train whistle eight times.

LeGrand is suing for $46,500 in medical bills, $315,000 in lost wages and $12 million for pain, suffering, mental anguish and permanent disfigurement.

Pair Charged With Assault

WILSON — Two men have been charged with assault following a shooting spree Wednesday in which a Wilson police officer was slightly wounded, police say.

Det. C.W. Turnage was injured when a shotgun pellet apparently hit him in the forehead. He was treated and released Wednesday from Wilson Memorial Hospital Wednesday.

James Walter Taylor, 29, was charged with assault on a law officer, and with assault on Thelma Kennon and Amos Turner III, according to Wilson Police Capt. Harvey Page.

Nathan Audy Taylor, 28, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, and assault on a law officer. He is also accused of assaulting Turner.

Police said the shooting was believed to have occurred about 8 a.m. at Taylor's home, and may have stemmed from an argument between the Taylors and the Turner family.

Mother Cited For Neglect

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Mecklenburg juvenile court judge has ruled that a woman who refused to give her diabetic daughter insulin because she said God had healed her condition had neglected her child.

Tammy Forbis, 13, was twice "healed" and six times hospitalized for her illness. She was removed by court order from her family last month, and the seventh grader will remain in foster care until a Nov. 7 hearing on what should happen next.

"I feel like I can't give her that shot and believe she is healed," said Tammy's mother, 29-year-old Linda Forbis.

Tammy was diagnosed as diabetic in April 1982, and needs insulin twice daily to reduce her high blood sugar. She telephoned her mother from the beach to say she had been healed during a weekend revival service.

But Tammy was hospitalized two days later in the intensive care unit of Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Forbis said her daughter's faith in the healing was not as strong as her own.

Claim Is Settled

RALEIGH (AP) — Duracell International Inc. has agreed to settle the claim of a Lexington woman who has said that she suffered mercury poisoning while working in the company's battery plant, a state official said Wednesday.

William H. Stephenson, the chairman of the state Industrial Commission, said the company would pay an undisclosed amount to Ruth Hale, 52, for injuries she received at the company's Battery Technology plant in Lexington.

Duracell had appealed the commission's decision in January to award Mrs. Hale more than $25,500 in back pay, plus medical expenses and $135.74 a week for as long as she remained disabled.

The ruling was one of the largest awards from worker's compensation of its kind, state officials said.

Mrs. Hale filed a claim against Duracell in 1980, stating that she suffered from nausea, dizziness, nervous disorders and memory loss as a result of working on the battery assembly line and depolarization room from 1972 to 1980.

Hospital Faces Crisis

GREENSBORO (AP) — L. Richardson Hospital in Greensboro is in a financial crisis, having difficulty meeting its payroll and paying its bills, hospital Executive Director Wilbur Smith confirmed Thursday.

Smith said he plans to meet by Monday with civic, religious and professional leaders in Greensboro to ask for their assistance. He said that the hospital's problems stem from drastically reduced utilization of its 130 beds.

He said some suppliers are shipping to the hospital on a cash-on-delivery basis only, and that the hospital has written letters to all vendors suggesting "a schedule of payment" on the hospital's bills.

The hospital was 12 hours late meeting its payroll last Thursday and is struggling to meet its payroll next week. About 25 employees have been laid off to cut the payroll.

Electric Rates Cut

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Duke Power Co. is offering half-price electricity for water heating to customers who agree to have their water heaters activated during off-peak hours.

Duke will guarantee a minimum of six hours of water heater charging during each 24-hour period, with the heating period expected to last from midnight to 6 a.m., said Donald H. Denton Jr., senior vice president for marketing and rates.

Denton said most customers will need more than a 40-gallon tank so they will have enough capacity to store heated water for use throughout the day. The company will advise customers on properly sizing additional water heaters.

4-H Leader Announced

RALEIGH (AP) — Dr. Dalton R. Proctor has been selected as North Carolina's new state 4-H leader.

Proctor, 50, is a native of Wilson County who has served for nine years as associate state 4-H leader. He succeeds Dr. Donald Stormer, who has been named the national 4-H leader.

The 4-H program, which involves about 100,000 young people, is conducted by the North Carolina State University Agricultural Extension Service with the aid of about 17,000 volunteers.

Deer Attacks Employee

DURHAM (AP) — A train engineer at the North Carolina Museum of Life and Science was attacked and injured by a male deer on the museum grounds, museum officials say.

Dexter Parrish, 78, was admitted to Durham County General Hospital and was reported in stable condition. He was gored in the abdomen by the deer's antlers, and also suffered cuts on his head and face.

Jimmy Barnwell suffered injuries to his knee when the deer attacked him as he went to help Parrish.

Lynn Moredock, animal curator for the museum, said the deer was in a mating condition and had escaped from its pen. It had no previous record of attack.

The deer will be killed later by a painless method, Ms. Moredock said.

Judge Says FEC Must Rule Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A ruling by a federal judge could force a resolution in a case involving organizations associated with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., before the Nov. 6 election.

U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer ordered the Federal Election Commission Thursday to make a decision by Oct. 19 in a case involving the National Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing Inc.

The club is Helms' political organization and Jefferson Marketing is the club's advertising arm. Both are based in Raleigh.

Oberdorfer issued the order Thursday afternoon after a two-hour hearing, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported. Oberdorfer found that the commission had failed to act on a complaint filed by Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., within the time prescribed by law and that the federal agency threatens to not act before the election.

The judge ordered the commission to decide by Oct. 19 whether "probable cause" existed to conclude that elections laws had been violated or to show the judge why it had failed to act.

If the commission finds probable cause, it has from 15 to 90 days to attempt to reach a conciliation agreement with the parties setting out the violations, fines and other remedies. If no conciliation is reached, the commission can take its allegations to federal court in a civil lawsuit.

William C. Oldaker, the attorney for Rose, said Rose would ask the judge to limit the time to reach a conciliation agreement to the minimum of 15 days.

In his complaint filed almost two years ago, Rose accused Jefferson Marketing of making corporate contributions to his 1982 Democratic and Republican opponents through cut-rate advertising services.

Rose also charged that Jefferson Marketing is not an independent company, but an extension of the club that allows candidates backed by the club to get around the limits on contributions.

Because of federal law that says FEC investigations must be confidential, there was no public discussion of the status of the case.

Thursday's hearing stemmed from a lawsuit filed by Rose to force the FEC to act.

Although not an official party to the case, an attorney for Jefferson Marketing was allowed to argue against any public release of information in the investigation.

Bryce M. Claggett said Rose's complaint should not be considered a factor in the 1984 election because Rose does not have the same opponent, nor is there a direct connection to Jefferson Marketing this year. Claggett said the only purpose of resolving Rose's complaint before the 1984 election would be to "taint" the issues in campaigns not involving Rose.

The FEC decided in May 1983 that there were "reasons to believe" the Helms organizations had violated election laws, launching a full-blown investigation.

FEC Balks At Hunt's Cost Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission balked Thursday at approving the entire draft advisory opinion on Gov. Jim Hunt's reimbursement rates for use of state aircraft.

The commission approved most of the opinion prepared by the FEC staff, but questioned Hunt's method of allocating costs for state security agents that travel with him.

The commission voted 5-0 to have its staff redraft the opinion to take into account its concerns about reimbursement for security agents, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

reported.

An objection to the Hunt plan was raised by a lawyer for the state Republican Party, which has filed a complaint with the FEC against Hunt for using state aircraft in his campaign against Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

In April, state GOP chairman David T. Flaherty filed a complaint with the FEC alleging that Hunt was not fairly reimbursing the state for use of state airplanes and helicopters on political trips. That complaint is pending.

In June, Hunt adopted new procedures to raise the reimbursement rates, and in mid-September he repaid the state more than $185,000 for trips dating to August 1983.

At issue in the advisory opinion is whether the FEC agrees with Hunt's new reimbursement guidelines.

Mugabe Receives Honorary Degree During Speech At St. Augustine's

RALEIGH (AP) — Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert G. Mugabe said his socialist country might adopt a one-party system as he called on the United States and its allies to pressure the government of South Africa to end racial oppression.

In a speech Thursday at St. Augustine's College, where he received an honorary doctorate of civil laws, Mugabe said a proposal that Zimbabwe ban opposition parties will go before the nation's voters during their 1985 general election, he said.

"If the majority really (wants) a one-party state, then we will expect all ... of society to respect the will of the majority," he said.

But Mugabe vowed that human rights such as freedom of speech would not be infringed.

"When Zimbabwe was formed, there were all sorts of racist-inspired predictions that because of the bitter struggle we had gone through, our white citizens would be harmed, they would be raped by the barbarian blacks ... and that the blacks would fight among themselves and thereby plunge the country into bloody civil war," said Mugabe.

"But now, four and a half years later, you will be happy to know that these prophets of doom ... have been proven wrong."

Mugabe said the United States and its Western allies were wrong to insist that Cuban troops withdraw from Angola before South Africa ends its occupation of Namibia and condemned South Africa's "morally obnoxious" apartheid regime.

"The people of Namibia have a right to be free," Mugabe told the audience of about 1,100 in a packed gymnasium. "South Africa's continuing illegal occupation and exploitation of the country is an affront to the liberty, not only of the people of Africa, but of the whole civilized world."

He said South Africa, "aided and abetted by several of its Western allies," had prevented implementation of a United Nations resolution on Namibia by "shameful maneuvering" and by raising the "irrelevant and extraneous" issue of Cuban troops in Angola.

"Why should the people of Namibia, we have asked and asked and asked again ... be denied their independence simply because another country asked the Cubans to assist it to ward off ... South Africa?" asked Mugabe. "We find this situation to be logically and morally unacceptable."

Mugabe said that recent constitutional reforms in South Africa designed to grant people of mixed race — but not blacks — more political freedom were "no more than a public relations ploy" designed to "deceive the world into believing that genuine political change is on the way when in fact all that is happening is the entrenchment of racial bigotry and oppression of the majority by the minority."

Mugabe, 60, an avowed socialist, was elected prime minister in April 1980 after engineering the overthrow of the white-minority government of the southeastern Africa nation formerly called Rhodesia.

The former political prisoner and Marxist guerilla leader has encouraged some private land and capital ownership, and has refused formal alliances with both the United States and the Soviet Union.

In his speech, Mugabe portrayed Zimbabwe — which has dozens of tribes — as a united nation slowly recovering from war, but in constant danger of invasion or "harassment" by "bandits" from South Africa,

"our aggressive neighbor."

"It is clear that our survival depends above all else, on our unity as a nation and as one family," he said.

Prezell Robinson, president of St. Augustine's College, praised Mugabe as a "role model" for young blacks who had "put his life on the line many times."

State Labor Commissioner John Brooks, who attended the address, pointed out that tobacco was the leading crop of Zimbabwe and North Carolina, and gave Mugabe a series of news articles on tobacco's history.

Mugabe was nearly an hour late in arriving after his plane developed engine trouble on the way from Pittsburgh. Emergency crews were called out, but were sent home when the plane landed safely at Raleigh-Durham airport.

The King of Hobbies

"The king of hobbies and the hobby of kings," stamp collecting has engrossed millions of enthusiasts, including President Franklin Roosevelt and King George V of England. In May, 1840, Great Britain led the way in adhesive postage stamps, issuing about 68 million "Penny Blacks." Rarer stamps are often very valuable. For instance, in 1981 a rare 1-cent stamp from British Guiana, postmarked in 1856, was sold for $850,000 — the highest price ever paid for a stamp at auction.

Debate Set For No. 2

RALEIGH (AP) — The two candidates for lieutenant governor will meet face-to-face this month in a half-hour debate that both sides say could bring life to what has been a lackluster race.

The debate between Sen. Bob Jordan and Republican John Carrington will be broadcast Oct. 26 from Raleigh by the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television.

Jordan, who said his polls show him with a sizable lead over Carrington, acknowledged that his campaign had been overshadowed by the races for president, U.S. Senate and governor.

"We're looking forward to (the debate)," said Jordan in a telephone interview Thursday. "Normally, with a lead as big as I have, you'd tend to stay away from something like this. But we have reason to believe that (our campaign) would benefit from the public seeing the two of us together."

He said he hadn't planned debate strategy in detail, but would focus on his 27 years of public service and his opponent's inexperience. Carrington, a Raleigh businessman, has not sought public office before.

FORECAST FOR SAT., OCTOBER 6, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is good for getting at all of those chores of a Saturday nature awaiting your attention, for shortly after, you will find some unusual situation arising.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Early handle personal affairs since later one from a distance can propose new interest for you to get into.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Early make appointments with friends, though later some delays could arise, but take them in your stride.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early take care of any outside or civic tasks important to your welfare and then you can gad about town in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Make sure you keep any promises you made to a new contact and later you can gain backing you want.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Study your books of account and get busy making collections and paying bills, and they will soon be behind you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Discuss moot points with another and come to a fine understanding at long last. Don't neglect to get your shopping done early.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study those duties you have neglected to do of late and polish them off very quickly and efficiently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You need recreation today so plan it early and you can have a fine time, especially in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use your energy to get your home in tip-top condition now so that the future can be brighter there.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make those visits quickly in the morning and use good judgment; then take it easy in the afternoon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Important that you are very practical where finances are concerned today. Study your home and see what repairs you can make.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get at those personal affairs in the morning, when you are thinking clearly and are energetic. Enjoy friends in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will comprehend how best to turn imaginative thoughts into working realities, therefore it is important that your progeny have as fine an academic education as possible in order to make the most of the natural ability here. Don't push too hard at studies or there could be a martyr complex developed.

Rubber bridge and duplicate are not just two different forms of the same game. In some respects, they are two different games.

This is a perfectly normal deal. At rubber bridge, a good player should always make the contract. At duplicate pairs, an expert should go down!

The only point of interest in the auction is North's raise to four diamonds with a low doubleton. A jump shift response either denotes a fit for opener's suit or a self-sufficient suit of one's own. After South's rebid had clarified which hand he held, a doubleton was more than adequate support.

Since declarer's spade loser can go away on the ace of clubs, the only problem is to hold your trump losers to one. That is a threat only if trumps break 4-0. If West has all four missing trump, nothing can be done about it. But the hand can be virtually assured if East has all the trumps.

At rubber bridge, you win the ace of spades and lay down the ace of trumps. When West shows out, you enter dummy with a heart and lead a trump toward your hand, winning as cheaply as possible. East will be held to only one trump trick.

The chances of East holding all four trumps are under 5 percent. However, there is a much better chance that East has either K-x or K-x-x in trumps. Therefore, the trump safety play at duplicate is a losing tactic. Correct pairs technique is to win the opening lead, cross to dummy with a heart, discard a spade on the ace of clubs and lead a trump to the queen. When West shows out on this trick, you cannot recover — East's singleton heart will prevent you from getting back to the board to repeat the finesse. You lose two trump tricks and go down one. But that shouldn't affect you much. You can expect similar results at most tables for an average score. You would get a bottom if you took the safety play, then discovered that East's king could have been captured.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy send $1.75 to "Goren Four-Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check payable to Newspaper-books.

Alert Issued

GREENSBORO (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has issued an alert for a man described as armed and dangerous who is known to travel along Interstate 85 between Charlotte and southern Virginia extorting money from victims.

The suspect, Gary Lemuel Clayton, is wanted for questioning in connection with bank robberies, arsons, breaking and entering, larcenies, forgeries and extortions in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Clayton, 34, is described as white, 5 feet 10 inches, 160 to 170 pounds, slender, clean cut and clean shaven, with brown hair and brown eyes. "He's a very mobile individual," said SBI agent Dan Gilbert of Raleigh. "He's constantly on the move. He's been in the Greensboro area on numerous occasions. He's a high survivor. He can live in the woods or in a car for an extended period of time. No place is his home."

Proposed Fish Plant Causes Concern In Carteret

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Japanese company's proposal to build a fish-processing plant in Carteret County has prompted concern from state fishery agencies and a debate about possible harm to commercial fishing.

Nichiry Inc. has taken an option on land for a $4 million to $6 million plant that would process fish into surimi, an inexpensive mixture of fish products that can be made to resemble more expensive seafoods in taste and texture.

Supporters say the plant will give commercial fishermen a better market for their harvest, but officials of the state Marine Fisheries Commission and the state Fisheries Association are concerned the plant could encourage overfishing.

Candidates Told To Refund Donations

By The Associated Press

The State Board of Elections has ordered two candidates in the Democratic gubernatorial primary to give the state a total of $14,000 their campaigns received in the names of two Wilson children.

The board also determined Thursday that it had no jurisdiction over a complaint filed by state GOP Chairman David Flaherty last month about the use of state aircraft by the U.S. Senate campaign of Gov. Jim Hunt.

The board asked Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's gubernatorial campaign Thursday to give the state $6,000. It also asked unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate John Ingram to give the state $8,000 he received in the names of the children, ages 3 and 11.

The board gave the Edmisten and Ingram campaign treasurers until Oct. 15 to submit affidavits saying whether they received the contributions with the knowledge that they were made by one person in the names of others, state Elections Director Alex Brock said.

The possibility of further action hinges on whether the campaigns knew the contributions were improper when they were accepted, Brock said.

He said the board determined the money was a contribution from the children's father "in the name of others." He said state law prohibits political candidates from knowingly accepting contributions made by one person in the name of another.

The law orders that such contributions be turned over to the state.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin's staff had asked the board to look into contributions by John C. Bolt Jr. Martin campaign manager Jack Hawke praised the board's action.

"I am delighted that the Board of Elections ... made its decision based on what's right instead of partisan politics," Hawke said. "But I think it's a shame that an innocent bystander, the person who keeps the books for the campaign, (is) required to fill out an affidavit and turn it over to the Board of Elections."

Hawke charged that Edmisten personally knew of the contributions and should have voluntarily turned the money over to the state.

Edmisten spokesman Dan Hoover said the Democrat had no knowledge of the children's ages.

"The checks came in here to the campaign," Hoover said. "The candidate himself sees relatively few checks."

Hoover said Edmisten did ask the board for a clarification of the law after complaints were raised because there was no precedent for handling the matter.

Allen Thomas, Bolt's attorney, wrote the board that 11-year-old Melissa Bolt and 3-year-old Herbert Cary Bolt each contributed $3,000 to Edmisten's campaign and $4,000 to Ingram's campaign.

Thomas said Bolt's wife, Susie, contributed $4,000 to the Edmisten campaign and $4,000 to the Ingram campaign while Bolt gave Ingram $4,000 and Edmisten $1,000.

The maximum amount an individual may give per election is $4,000.

On the issue of Hunt's use of state aircraft, the elections board, in a conference call, agreed that the Federal Election Commission should hear Flaherty's complaint because Hunt was running for federal office.

Flaherty said he was disappointed with the board's decision. But he noted he had filed a similar complaint with the FEC, as well as a lawsuit in Wake Superior Court. He said he hoped the issue would be resolved in one of those arenas.

Flaherty's suit, filed last month, asked that Hunt be barred from using state aircraft for campaign purposes and that he reimburse the state for the campaign's use of the aircraft.

Before the suit was filed, Hunt announced that he would no longer use state aircraft for campaign purposes, and his campaign reimbursed the state $185,939 to cover what Hunt said was the full cost of previous flights. Flaherty says Hunt should pay more.

The Hunt campaign alleged in papers filed Wednesday in Wake Superior Court that Flaherty had used state aircraft without properly reimbursing the state while he was state secretary of human resources and an unannounced candidate for the GOP nomination for governor in 1975.

Flaherty said Thursday he never used state aircraft for political purposes.

Meanwhile, Martin's campaign said it had gained the support of Carroll Pledger, who was coordinator of Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's Durham County campaign through the Democratic primary and runoff.

Hunt said he has been forced to respond in kind to negative attacks by Sen. Jesse Helms, whom Hunt said has begun a "silent conspiracy" to force a far-right agenda on the nation.

Hunt, in speech at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, said his campaign to unseat Helms was like many of the basketball games he had played as a youth.

"When they started to rough you up, you had to give it back," Hunt said. "For 18 months ... my opponent and his right-wing network have pounded into people's heads a series of distortions and outright lies about my record as governor."

Bob Rosser, spokesman for the Helms for Senate Committee, said Hunt had "run the most negative ad in this campaign when he graphically featured dead bodies and women and children ... earlier this year."

That commiseration, showing victims of death squads in El Salvador, attempted to tie Helms to Roberto d'Aubuisson, a rightist leader whom a former ambassador to El Salvador has accused of involvement with the squads.

Hunt's reference to the right-wing network came the same day that his special legal counsel, J. Phil Carlton, opened the campaign's new offensive aimed at portraying Helms as an extremist.

Carlton, in a Chapel Hill speech, said a "right-wing combine" directed by Helms and including the religious right and wealthy conservatives was quietly trying to remake the country in its image.

Meanwhile, Hunt spokesman Will Marshall said the campaign will make Helms' alignment with "the radical right" a major theme in the final month of the campaign. He said the campaign has so far not prepared new commercials dealing with that link, but says "it's possible that we will."

Hunt called a news conference Thursday to accuse Helms of dodging a question in their last debate about Medicare. Hunt said Helms wouldn't say what he'd do to keep Medicare from going bankrupt.

"Senator Helms offered no ideas ... because he doesn't have any,"

said Hunt, who proposed that hospitals be put on a budget requiring efficiency to keep health care costs down.

Rosser said Helms had "worked with President Reagan to strengthen the Medicare program," on which spending has increased "36 percent in the last four years."

Flaherty said Thursday that Hunt's campaign was using the mailing list of a Department of Natural Resources and Community Development publication — "Wildlife in North Carolina" — to send out campaign literature.

"This is wrong, not to mention illegal," said Flaherty, adding that he would ask the Federal Election Commission to "investigate this abuse."

Marshall, Hunt's spokesman, responded: "Even by David Flaherty's standards this is pretty silly ... We bought the mailing list. We paid nearly $800. I presume that Jesse Helms and Dave Flaherty can buy it, too."

Meanwhile, the state Board of Elections

State Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, said Thursday he had agreed to debate Republican candidate John Carrington on Oct. 26.

The half-hour debate will be broadcast statewide by the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television.

Wallace Reported Improving

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace has been taken off intravenous medication, but still awaits word on when he will be released.

Wallace, who began his second week at University Hospitals Thursday, is being treated for a urinary tract infection.

The 65-year-old governor began the intravenous treatment last Friday, but switched to oral antibiotics Thursday after a nagging fever, associated with the "serious" urinary infection, disappeared.

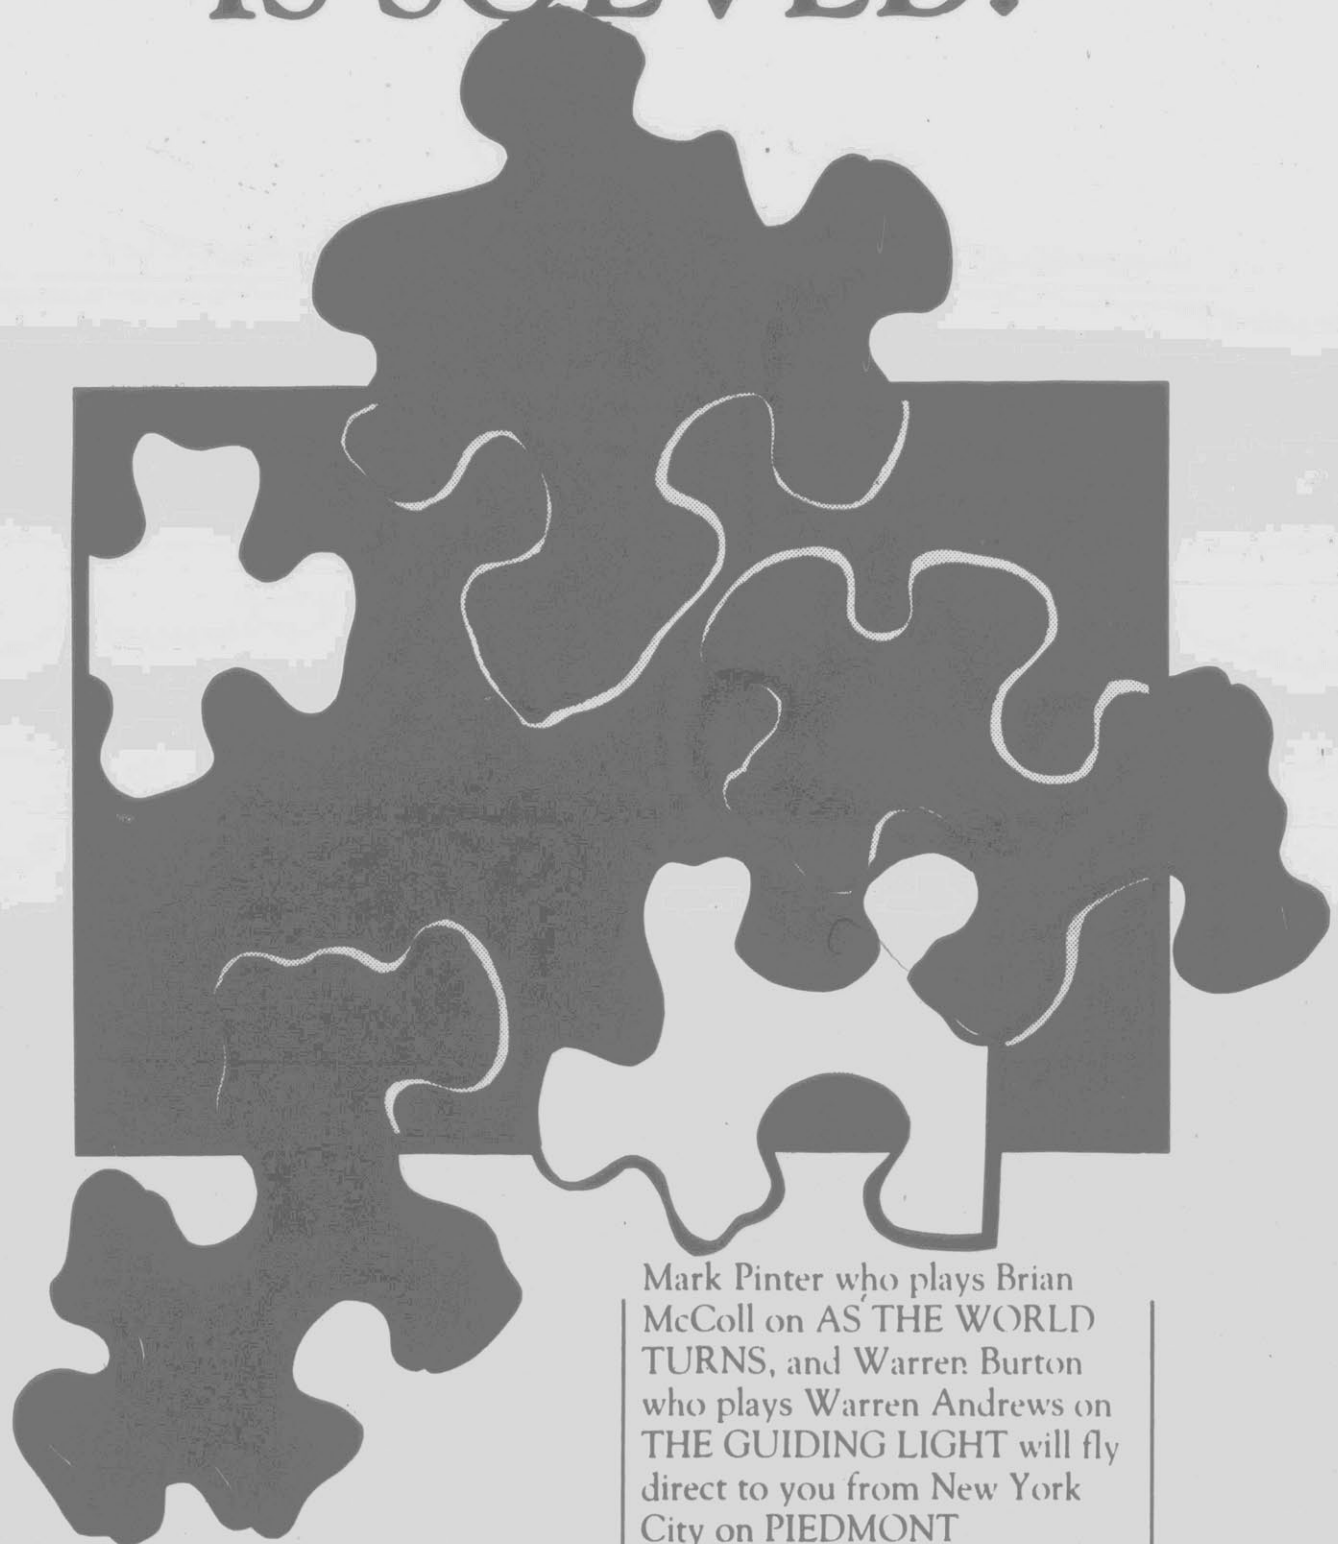

Press Secretary Billy Joe Camp said Thursday the switch in treatment was a sign the governor was "making good progress" against the infection. Camp said Wallace had enjoyed a normal body temperature for two days.

The governor's primary physician, Dr. Alan Stamm, said the governor was getting better. "I see no reason why he should not continue to," Stamm said.

Wallace was in "good spirits, reading and resting well," Camp said, and was conducting official business "as necessary."

CDC Says High Blood Levels Cut

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal researchers, reporting on high blood pressure in South Carolina, say positive changes have occurred in the last six years as more people have become aware of and controlled their hypertension.

South Carolina, one of seven states in the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute's high blood pressure control project, conducted surveys in 1979 and 1982 to determine the prevalence of high blood pressure and levels of awareness, treatment and control.

Between 1979 and 1983, the percentage of hypertensive people categorized as unaware of their condition decreased from 45 percent to 35 percent, according to Dennis Shepard, an Aiken-based researcher with the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control.

Meanwhile, the percentage of hypertensives who were aware of their condition, treated it and had it under control rose from 15 percent to 23 percent.

"It appears that some positive changes have occurred in the control of high blood pressure in South Carolina since 1978," the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

"We're real proud of what went on," Shepard said, adding that some people were prompted to seek medical attention after they were questioned for the survey.

"There's still room for improvement," said Dr. Jeff Newman, a CDC researcher. "We'd like for everybody (with high blood pressure) to be aware, on treatment ... and finally under control."
