CHARLOTTE (AP) — President Reagan brought his campaign to North Carolina and told supporters that leadership — not partisan politics — is the issue this year as he won the endorsement of Democrat Eddie Knox.

"This election is not a contest between Republicans and Democrats, between left and right," Reagan told more than 30,000 people at a noon rally Monday. "It's a contest between the future and the past and it's being waged for the soul of our country and the will of its people."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., announced at the rally that Knox, a former Charlotte mayor, will become national co-chairman of the Democrats for Reagan-Bush Committee.

Knox lost a bitter gubernatorial runoff primary battle in June to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. Since that time Knox's wife, Frances, and brother, Charles, have endorsed Republican Jim Martin over Edmisten and Helms over Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in the U.S. Senate race.

Knox told Reagan that North Carolina "has prospered since you took office and we don't want to turn back... There are those who ask us to forgive the double-digit inflation four years ago ... but we cannot forget nor will we turn back."

"This state must not see partisan politics put down good leadership," Knox said.

Democratic support is important to Reagan in North Carolina, where Republicans are outnumbered by an almost 3-to-1 margin. A poll by The Charlotte Observer released the day of Reagan's visit showed the Republican incumbent ahead of Democratic challenger Walter Mondale by 20 percentage points.

More than 30,000 people gathered in a parking lot adjoining a Charlotte office complex and the Park Hotel for the rally. A banner saying "Nothing Could Be Finer than Reagan for Carolina" and a giant American flag hung from the buildings.

School children helped pass around bunches of American flags and buttons. At least three local school bands played for the capacity crowd that gathered almost two hours before Reagan arrived. A jazz band and skydivers also entertained the crowd.

Approximately 25 anti-nuclear demonstrators stood silently along an adjoining road. They carried signs saying, "Children need dreams not nuclear nightmares."

Reagan's daughter, Maureen, and stock car driver Bobby Allison joined most of the state's top Republican candidates to greet the president. They included congressional candidates from all 11 of the state's districts, secretary of state candidate Patric Dorsey and labor commissioner candidate Margaret Plemmons.

Martin compared Reagan's visit to Mondale's stop earlier this year in Asheville. Neither Hunt nor Edmisten accompanied Mondale.

"They had a unity rally and nobody came," Martin said.

Karen Johnston of Greensboro, a spokesman for the Reagan campaign in North Carolina, predicted the presidential visit will "be a big plus for (Republicans in) the whole state."

"I think we will have a major sweep, one of the biggest ones this century," she said. "His coming here is affirmation of that."

Mrs. Johnston and state Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said they've seen Democrats switching their registration and said many young people are registering for the first time as Republicans.

"Reagan's coming is going to help all of us," Redman said.

The crowd seemed to agree with Maureen Reagan's comment that, "It does not rain on Republicans this year."

Reagan mentioned as many of the candidates by name as possible and told the crowd that, "North Carolina couldn't have a more valuable export this year than Jesse Helms in Washington."

During most of his speech, Reagan compared his vision of "compassion" with that of his opponents. He was interrupted several times by chants of "Four More Years."

"We don't want to keep people on welfare, keep them in bondage, keep them as wards of the state," Reagan said. "We know that people want to work, want to contribute, want to be a part of society..."

"They (our opponents) favor busting that takes innocent children out of the neighborhood school and makes them pawns in a social experiment that nobody wants. I don't call that compassion," he said.

Reagan said that during the past four years there has been a national renewal of prosperity, peace and traditional values.

"A new understanding of the word freedom has swept this continent. Freedom from heavy taxation and freedom from the big brother mentality that says, 'I know best, you're not bright enough to run your own lives,'" he said.

Bridge Work Cutting Business For Greene Street Restaurant

Maintenance work being done on the Greene Street Bridge by the North Carolina Department of Transportation has already cost Abram's Riverside Oyster Bar owner Jim Terrell $1,000 in lost sales.

"The bridge work has been bad news for us," Terrell said. "We only did about half our usual business Monday," he explained, "but we are hoping that they'll be through by Thursday so we won't lose too much more."

Manager Tim Martin of the Greene Street Harris Supermarket said his business also has been affected. "But only a small amount and not as much as some of the other businesses located in this area," Martin qualified. "That's because we're located pretty close to the Airport Road intersection and our customers aren't having too much trouble getting to us."

J.D. Gargis, DOT bridge crew supervisor, said he hopes to give motorists and area business relief by Thursday. "I'm not sure," he said, "but I feel we'll be open by Thursday."

Gargis said workers are installing five new pilings and are replacing the cap that sits on top of the pilings and supports the girders to make the bridge stronger. "We're just souping the bridge up, making it stronger, doing preventative maintenance," he explained.

Until the bridge is finished, motorists may use either Airport Road, Memorial Drive or Fifth Street, while avoiding the Town Common area of Greene Street.

HORNETS, YELLOW JACKETS NEEDED

Hornets and yellow jackets are needed by Dr. Donald Hoffman of the East Carolina University School of Medicine for study of human hypersensitivity to insect stings. Collection will be carried out by the scientists conducting the study. The insects needed can best be identified by their dwellings. White-faced hornets, which are black with white markings, make their nests in large gray bag-like structures often found suspended from the eaves of buildings and from tree limbs. Yellow jackets are almost always found living in holes in the ground and are sometimes called "ground bees." The researchers are also seeking another species of hornet sometimes called the European or Japanese hornet. Up to an inch long, these insects resemble yellow jackets but are much larger.

According to Dr. Robert Jacobson, an entomologist working with Dr. Hoffman, the insects used in the study should be alive and uncontaminated by insect spray or gasoline. Anyone knowing of dwellings of hornets or yellow jackets is asked to call Jacobson at 757-2816.

Board Wants Speed Limits Set

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Ayden town Commissioners requested Monday night that Police Chief Tommy Burney study the possibility of lowering the 35 mile per hour speed limit on Third Street to 25 mph.

The speed limit on Third Street in Ayden now varies from 20 to 35 mph.

Commissioner Marvin Baldree said the speed limit needs to be consistent.

Chief Burney said the streets owned by the city are posted at 25 mph, while the state-maintained streets have a speed limit of 35, unless otherwise posted. He agreed that because of the volume of traffic, Third Street should have a 25 mph speed limit, but he said he should study the pedestrian traffic on the street before he can give a recommendation.

In order for the speed limit to be changed on Third Street, the town would have to request the change from the state, which owns that part of the street. The speed limit in the business district would remain at 20 mph. The commissioners accepted the $2,100 bid of Jesse Guion of Arrow Construction and Renovation, Ayden, for the demolition of two buildings, one on Joyner Street and one on High Street.

Marcus McClanahan was appointed.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Add a winter wonderland look to your Christmas tree with these crocheted golden bells, silvery angels and frosty white snowflakes, all designed to be made from cotton crochet threads.

Long-time readers will recognize that this particular column has become a tradition. Year in and year out, readers start writing in mid-summer requesting that this crocheted ornament leaflet be offered again.

To obtain directions for making the crocheted ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-1079 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29587.

Or you may order Kit No. C-1079 by sending a check or money order for $13.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and sufficient crochet thread in white, gold and silver to make three or four dozen ornaments.

Your crochet hooks can be a big help in winning the battle with inflation. Christmas gifts and decorations can often be made from leftover yarn. Even if you are a busy mother or hold a full-time job, you might be surprised at how much you can accomplish with a couple of hours each evening and some weekend afternoons.

Crocheted five-pointed stars are enchanting on a Christmas tree or as decorations on packages. You can make them from fine baby yarns or cotton crochet thread using a steel crochet hook in size 5 or 6.

To begin, chain 65 stitches and join with a slip stitch to form a ring. Next chain 2 and work 14 half-double crochets in the ring, joining with a slip stitch in the top of the chain made at the beginning of this round.

For the next round, work as follows: (Chain 7, slip stitch in the second chain from the hook, work a single crochet in the next chain, a half-double crochet in the following chain, a double crochet in each of the next 2 chains and a treble crochet in the last chain; skip 2 half-double crochets of the previous round and slip stitch in the next half-double crochet.) Repeat the steps between Parentheses four times more and you will have a five-pointed star.

For those of you who only know how to work single and double crochet, here are instructions for working the other two stitches used in this pattern.

To make a half-double crochet, wrap the yarn once around the hook (thus working a yarnover), draw up a loop through the stitch, yarnover and draw the hook through all three loops at one time.

To make a treble crochet, wrap the yarn twice around the hook before inserting it into the next stitch. Yarnover and draw the yarn through the stitch, giving you four loops on the hook. Yarnover and draw through two loops. Repeat this last step twice more and the treble crochet is completed.

While snowy white stars are exquisite on a green tree, you can make them in any color or try some metallic yarn for a special touch of glitter.

If you make them from crochet cotton, you may want to starch them. You can use a spray starch, but they will have more body if you use a heavy solution of boiled starch. Or ask at your favorite craft shop about the fabric stiffeners now on the market. One that I have tried and liked is Aleene's 2-in-1 Fabric Stiffener and Fabric Draping Liquid.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Daughter Writes Open Letter To All Parents

DEAR ABBY: I am sitting here brokenhearted over a problem that could have been resolved years ago. My father died last week; my mother died a year ago. Although we were very close when I was younger, they stopped speaking to me six years ago when I decided to live with my boyfriend, whom I have since married.

When I first told my parents I was moving in with my boyfriend, they called me "slut, tramp" and a few other names you can't print.

I was over 21 and wasn't hurting myself or anybody else, but after this move, they wanted nothing more to do with me. When I invited them to my wedding, they didn't even respond.

Now that they are gone, I feel angry and bitter that they could let this one difference come between us forever. They missed the opportunity of sharing their lives with me, my husband and our son.

Why am I writing? Because I hope you will print this as a plea to other parents who feel the way mine did about living together. Please, parents, don't lock your children out of your lives because their ideas differ from yours.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Here's your letter. I'm sure many parents will identify with it. My mail tells me that although most parents disapprove of "living together," they accept it rather than lose their children.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you printed a letter from a 14-year-old adoptee, asking how to contact one's birth parents. You advised him to register with International Soundex Reunion Registry in Carson City, Nev.

Until I read it in your column, I never knew such a service existed. I have often had a desire to contact the daughter I placed for adoption 21 years ago.

I filed my application, and within days, a match was made! (My daughter had filed with Soundex Registry, too.) I have spoken with her on the phone, and we made plans to meet in the near future. I am still recovering from the incredible experience. Thank you for making it possible!

KATHERINE C. IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR KATHERINE: I share your joy. I want to repeat, however, that minors may register with Soundex, but until they are 18, they may not be matched with their birth parents. And only if their parents have also registered with Soundex can a match be made. I am in full agreement that birth parents and adoptees should be able to meet, but only when it is mutually agreeable.

DEAR ABBY: Poems fascinate me, so I clip and keep them. I just came across this one from your column. It's at least six or seven years old. If you agree that it's still appropriate, I hope you'll run it. Thanks, Abby.

ADA M. WHITMARSH, BINGHAMPTON, N.Y.

DEAR ADA: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My name is Steve Zondlak and I am 12. I wrote a poem. If you like it, you may keep it.

GOD'S SHELTER

Let's make a bomb of love and prayer,
For takeoff fuel, let's use God's air.

Let's send it out for all to share
Our plea against nuclear despair.
Let's ask the leaders from all lands

For peace. And then
Let's all shake hands!

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

It's funny that the two things we go through life doing the most are the two things that are never taught and rarely discussed.

Winning and losing. Whether it's a divorce, an Academy Award, a diet, a lottery, or a baseball game, someone wins, someone loses.

Everyone does one or the other every day of their lives (sometimes both) regardless of sex, age, political, economic or religious background. Yet, no one talks about it, suggests guideline or offers any rules. You're out there on your own. Here's a stab at it.

Winning is not the team sport that losing is. It's possibly the most exclusive club in existence in the United States today. Admittance is gained by doing something first, the fastest or the best. No one likes a winner who acts like he deserves or is expected to win. You always think you're going to feel better when you win than you actually do.

Winners are always quoting the late Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers who said, "Winning isn't everything. It's the ONLY thing, and former president Richard M. Nixon who said in a speech from the White House, "winning is .. better than losing."

Losing is lonely. I'm always amazed at the inane question posed to losers that has become a staple among reporters (print and electronic), "How do you feel about losing?" The question deserves a cliché as an answer: "Just rotten."

Losing gets into your bloodstream and not only consumes you, but blacks out all the things you've done right in the past.

No matter how many times you lose or people say they know how you feel, it is the FIRST time losing has ever been done on such a grand scale and you have done it. The record will never be broken.

A few years ago, I attended a seminar for young people to which 50 or so of the top people in their professions had been invited. The purpose was to have young people see Pulitzer Prize winners, Nobel Prize winners, Heisman Trophy winners and astronauts who had the right stuff ... face-to-face.

As each one spoke, they kept returning, not to their successes, but to their failures. It seemed they had learned from them ... gotten stronger from them ... overcame them ... and took enormous pride in them. Losing — not winning — had

It Wasn't Enough

President Reagan was well prepared for questions dealing with the economy, education, aspects on the American quality of life and the record of national recovery over the past four years. He had answers on abortion and Social Security and welfare.

It wasn't enough.

Walter Mondale "took charge" early in the debate with unexpected jabs and a projection of being at ease ... with a shade of aggressiveness and personal charm not displayed during the campaign process.

Perhaps the most unexpected and unprepared-for point of attack came from one of the panelists who asked the rivals to explain their religious convictions (in a minute and a half?).

The minister's son found that no great hurdle, but it was an awkward moment for Mr. Reagan. It was so totally personal and private a topic that even its linkage to the previously discussed point of religion-in-government seemed remote.

(The answer for most people requires a certain amount of introspection and adaptation that is foreign to many.)

The feeling persists that the President never fully recovered from the resulting shock to his chain of prepared thought. He tried to recoup; and was almost at ease in dealing with subsequent questions and points but the faintest tinges of hesitancy in his presentations remained as though lurking uncertainties over how he had responded to the unexpected query were in the back of his mind.

Meanwhile, his rival maintained aggressive pressure mixed with serious mien and rare touches of good humor.

The closing statements by both contenders were prepared and well delivered.

In the wake of Sunday night's confrontation the impression remains that Mr. Mondale enjoyed some small advantage, but most of all he displayed to a national audience that side of himself his admirers have long felt was hidden during the primaries and subsequent weeks of campaigning.

It was a good show. Those who missed it, also missed thought-provoking words and opinions. They'll meet again. Listen.

Change Needed

Perhaps only in America could a vice president be billed by the Internal Revenue Service for $198,000 in additional taxes and interest.

The matter came about when the IRS disallowed Vice President George Bush's claim that his seashore home in Maine was his chief place of residence.

The IRS disallowed a tax deferral Bush claimed in 1981 on profits from the sale of his home in Houston.

The vice president reacted like any other taxpayer. "They socked it to me," he complained. He indicated that he would take the matter to court.

Perhaps the vice president's situation represents the concern of most taxpayers — that of taking a tax deduction in good faith only to have to pay it later with interest and possibly penalties.

It is a point for simplified tax laws with fewer deductions but lower overall taxes, with the consequent reduction in deductions which can be questioned.

Public Says No To Stranglehold

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has been getting uniformly good news from the public opinion polls recently, but one item in a recent national survey by Louis Harris definitely is not in that category.

Harris, whose polling showed Reagan ahead of Walter Mondale by 13 percentage points at the end of September, asked the voters if they thought it would be good to give the president a cap on Congress — one that would do away with the veto in dealing with legislation. The answer was a rather resounding "no."

The actual question was framed as follows: "President Reagan has said that he hasn't been able to get some of his military aid programs, cuts in domestic social programs and legislation requiring school prayer and a ban on abortion because Democrats control the House of Representatives. Do you think the country would be better off or worse off if the voters gave him a Republican-controlled Congress that would pass nearly everything he wants?"

The same people who told Harris they favored Reagan over Mondale, 55 per cent to 42 per cent, responded negatively to the question about a Congress that would follow the president. The figures were 60 per cent "worse off," 31 per cent "better off" and 9 per cent "neither" or "not sure."

A demographic breakdown of the answers showed that the idea of a White House-dominated Congress was rejected by every group except

'Mule Days' With No Mules

The Republican Party appears to be gaining popularity in the east that Republicans hope will translate into broad Republican support at the ballot box this fall. Now, Republican votes for federal candidates would be nothing new in these counties. Sen. Jesse Helms has always run well here as have Ronald Reagan and Richard Nixon. Republicans are hoping that the rest of their ticket will do well here also.

Lifelong Republicans who've weathered days when, in one man's words, "it wasn't even respectable to be a Republican," tell you that the party has new found popularity in the east. "Being a Republican is by far more prominent and popular in eastern North Carolina today than it has ever been," said Rudolph Jones of Benson, a key supporter of GOP gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin. "Republican is not a bad word anymore," says Charles Ennis of Coats, another lifelong party member.

As Martin campaigned in Johnston and Harnett counties, the east's changing attitude towards Republicans was evident.

Each party sponsored a float in the Mule Days parade. The Democratic float headed by Gov. Jim Hunt got little more than a few waves from the crowd. The Republican float, which was headed by Martin, got a loud round of applause.

When Martin jumped into the crowd to shake hands, parade watchers enthusiastically greeted him.

At Jones' home on the morning of the parade, Republicans sponsored a breakfast for Martin. The event drew 125 people. At the same time, across town, Hunt and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten were having breakfast meetings of their own. Each drew, according to news reports, about 125 people. When Martin moved to Harnett County for a Dunn luncheon, he pulled in another 150 supporters. Reporters who've travelled to other parts of the east with Martin say he's drawn as many as 600 people to his rallies.

Gary Ragland, a GOP candidate for district court judge from Clayton, says increased Republican popularity may carry down even further than governor and lieutenant governor. He thinks a Republican judge might even be elected. "Four years ago, no one would have given me a ghost of a chance of winning."

Republicans gathered for Martin's campaign events gave several reasons for their party's upswing.

They say Ronald Reagan's popularity in the east has made it "OK" to be a Republican and that the increasingly clear ideological distinction between two national parties has led conservative easterners to the GOP.

It's still a safe bet that Martin will trail Edmisten in eastern voting. The big question is by how much. The Democrats are counting on a big Edmisten plurality in the east. From the looks of that Mule Days celebration, it appears Martin might have a big surprise planned for election day.

Ferraro Sees Race As A Symbol

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Geraldine A. Ferraro says the importance of her race for the vice presidency can be summed up in a recent brief encounter at a day care center in Cleveland.

"I met a little girl who was about three years old ... a little black girl," Ms. Ferraro told a crowd here recently. "I walked up to her and said 'Guess what? Now you can be president of the United States.'"

"And you know something? Now she can."

Whether or not that youngster ever wants to even try politics, the symbolic — and practical — importance of the first woman to be a major party's candidate for president or vice president is evident almost every day of the Democratic politician's travels.

Big crowds turn out to see her and many of them are women.

In those crowds, there are many of the simply curious, on hand for a look at a history-maker, not to express support for the Democratic ticket. As a rally drones on, these are the ones who drift away, as some did Wednesday at a Memphis rally.

But there is an excitement at Ferraro rallies as well, like the energy at a rally that drew more than 5,000 people to the downtown mall in Raleigh.

"The enthusiasm that you saw this afternoon is enthusiasm we see throughout the country," she said at a fund-raiser that night.

Before the fund-raiser crowd made up mostly of women, the New York congresswoman began to talk about the joys and the pressures of being a first — talking with a feeling heard mostly when she is with groups of women.

"You can't help but look out, to the women especially, and you can't help but — look at the faces of the women now," she said and then stopped.

"Everybody is projecting themselves up here. What I am — I guess — I am standing in for every one of you."

And the crowd rose to its feet with an ovation.

Then she described how women of various ages respond to her, talking of a "bond that exists among women because of this candidacy."

Young women the ages of her daughters — 18 and 22 — are "coming up to me and going 'Yahoo!'" she said.

"And then there are women 80 years old, 85 years old, saying 'I never thought I would live to see this day.'"

"It's a little heady, a little heady," she said. "But it is very exciting because they are all caught up in what this election means. It means more than symbolism."

She said Walter F. Mondale's choice of her as his running mate "has broken down walls of prejudice and that is so important."

"This whole 1984 election has seen that happen. We had a black man running for president" — a reference to defeated Democratic candidate Jesse Jackson — "and a white woman running for vice president."

That was the reason she talked of such high hopes to the little girl in Cleveland.

Strength For Today

In the Book of Daniel (10:8) we read these words: "I was left alone, and I saw this great vision."

There were men standing with Daniel, but they did not see the vision. "A great quaking fell upon them so that they fled to hide themselves." Then Daniel saw a vision and heard "a voice of many words," and felt the divine hand reach down and touch him.

We live in an age which often rebels against what we might call "quiet times." Wise men in the past considered meditation a necessary employment for some period of every day. But we do not meditate. No generation has confronted such problems as we do. Maybe these problems crept up upon us because we never took time to regard life in its entirety.

"Orientation" is a popular word today. Meditation is one of the best ways of achieving this — of getting one's bearings.

Do You Like Your Lawyer?

You will understand that I am not speaking of the body of law that deals with "malum in se," with evil in itself. Society plainly likes laws that punish murder, rape, robbery and fraud. I am thinking rather of that mile-wide web of rules, regulations and statutes that deal with "malum prohibitum." We do not obey these out of fear of doing wrong; we obey them out of fear of getting caught. This is why we file our tax forms, observe the no-smoking signs and drive at 55 mph.

Fear. That is the operative word. We are afraid of being arrested; we are afraid of suing and more afraid of being sued. We are afraid of the pitfalls that go with divorce and child custody. We are leery of insurance forms and property leases. We are afraid of foreclosure, afraid of eviction, afraid of the housing inspector and the bill collector. In all these areas, and in a hundred more besides, it is the lawyer who lies at the root of our apprehension. Lawyers write the laws; lawyers enforce and interpret the laws; statutes and opinions pile up like mountains of grain, and the mill never stops.

It is a curious thing. It is a bonding of love and hate. For a country that prides itself on freedom, we are in thrall to the law. Two-thirds of all the lawyers in the world are practicing in the United States. Japan has about 10,000 lawyers for the whole country; we have upward of 600,000. Our 200 law schools turn out another 30,000 lawyers every spring. There is no way this army of lawyers can exist without creating new laws, new rules, new regulations that must be interpreted and applied. Lawyers feed on litigation as whales feed on plankton. At any given moment, 8 million lawsuits are pending in our state and federal courts. Many of these cases have been pending for years, waiting upon trial dates or out-of-court settlements.

Law is not like medicine. Given a pain in the belly, we willingly acknowledge our ignorance of anatomy and trust the surgeon's judgment. It's your appendix, he says to the patient, and out the little critter comes on Tuesday. The problem is over and done with. But the client hasn't been born who doesn't believe that he knows as much about the law — or almost as much — as his lawyer. A patient wouldn't dream of suggesting that his surgeon cut to the left or the right of the navel, but clients are full of advice on how to handle a lawsuit. If the lawsuit is lost, after months or years of suspense, it's all the lawyer's fault.

People do not like criminal law any better than they like civil law. The people are fed up with a system that admits manifestly dangerous criminals to bail. The people do not understand the exclusionary rule — judges and cops do not understand it either — but the people see that the rule can be twisted so as to make a travesty of justice. Only a tiny fraction of our people ever serve on juries, but jurors talk, and too often they talk of ill-prepared lawyers and indifferent judges.

Too many laws, too many lawyers, too many lawsuits! The people feel helpless in a mire of invisible ooze, and they do not see the typical attorney as a friend who will pull them out. They figure it was attorneys who threw them into the muck in the first place. And the melancholy truth — a truth that no public relations campaign will overcome — is that in this conviction the people are generally right.

Development Authority Keys Effort To Fund State's Small Businesses

By The Associated Press

An increasing number of groups throughout North Carolina are seeking public and private funds to help nurture small businesses, and the N.C. Technological Development Authority is keying that effort for the state.

"What we're trying to do is help communities create an environment for the start-up and growth of new small businesses," said Kirsten A. Nyrop, the development authority's executive director. "Somebody might be good from a technical standpoint. They know their product. But they need help setting their business."

The authority was established by the 1983 General Assembly, which appropriated $400,000 for the authority — half for 1983-84 and half for 1984-85. This year, the Legislature appropriated an additional $400,000 for 1984-85.

The development authority provides grants for research and development by new businesses. It also provides grants to establish incubator facilities that provide low-rent quarters and clerical and other support for small-business tenants.

In 1983-84, the development authority received six applications for incubator grants that may not exceed $200,000 each. Applicants have until Dec. 3 to submit proposals for the 1984-85 round of funding.

In addition to low-rent space and clerical support, recipients must provide technical assistance for tenants from local institutions such as universities, community colleges and technical institutes.

Leases cannot exceed two years because the goal is to get entrepreneurs started and then set them out on their own, Ms. Nyrop said.

The winning applicant in the first round of funding was from the Smoky Mountain Development Corp. in Cullowhee, which received $200,000.

The non-profit Smoky Mountain group, which represents 17 North Carolina counties in Western North Carolina, will build a 17,000-square-foot industrial building about 2 miles east of Waynesville. The building, to be completed by March, will house eight to 10 tenants, probably manufacturers.

"What the corporation will be looking at (in selecting tenants) is the ability to get into business and with a high propensity to stay in business and to create jobs," said James R. Cooper, associate director in the economic development division of the Center for Improving Mountain Living at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee. The center assists the development corporation.

Small businesses and others who support the concept of incubator facilities are an important component of local economies, Cooper said.

"I think that smokestack chasing, or trying to attract industry, is good," Cooper said. "But the rewards of it are few and far between. There's a very small percentage of industrial movement in this country."

He added that Western North Carolina possessed special barriers to development, such as a lack of water and sewer lines, because of its remoteness. Even those counties with plans for industrial growth had failed to attract development, he said.

"You find a lot of communities like Macon and Haywood counties that have fully developed industrial parks, and they're just sitting there," he said.

Socialist Candidate Ends Tour

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Socialist Workers Party candidate for U.S. vice president completed a three-day visit to Greensboro Monday, criticizing the major party candidates while outlining her radical platform for the country.

Andrea Gonzalez, 33, passed out campaign literature at Cone Mills' White Oak textile plant early Monday and met with supporters later in the day during her first campaign swing through North Carolina.

She said during a press conference that the debate between President Reagan and Walter Mondale illustrated her dissatisfaction with both Democrats and Republicans.

"I was mesmerized by the fairy tales each side told," she said. "I thought we lost — the working class."

Although she agreed that her chances of electoral victory were slim, Ms. Gonzalez said she is traveling across the country to stimulate a discussion of issues.

"Working people have no party," she said. "The Democratic Party has the same exact politics as the Republican Party. Working people must form their own party — a labor party, a party that could lead to a massive social upheaval."

State's Ports Showing Profit

By The Associated Press

The ports in Wilmington and Morehead City, along with other related facilities, set new revenue and tonnage records in the fiscal year ended June 30, pushing up profits, port officials said.

Port revenues totaled a record $125.1 million for the year, up 4 percent from the previous fiscal year. Profits for the period totaled $1.8 million, $73,000 ahead of the previous year, but short of the record $2.2 million set in 1981-82.

The ports handled 6.5 million tons of cargo, breaking the previous record of 4.96 million tons set in 1980-81.

Commerce Secretary C.C. Hope, who just returned from a three-week recruiting effort in Europe and the Middle East, said North Carolina has to sell its location and cost advantages.

"We have a cost advantage, but we had to get out and sell our strategic location," Hope said. "It isn't enough to just have advantages. You have to attract shipping lines here. And it's a major feat to get a line to change a route."

Train Fare Set At $30 Round-Trip

RALEIGH (AP) — Passengers using Amtrak's new Carolinian passenger train from Raleigh to Charlotte will pay $20 for a one-way ticket and $30 for a round-trip fare, state officials say.

"It's a heck of a deal," said David D. King, director of public transportation for the state Department of Transportation, said Monday.

"That's got to help. People's decision-making about a mode of transportation is at least partially influenced by fare."

The 173-mile trip will take four hours and five minutes. The same trip by air takes about 45 minutes, but costs about $55 one way. By car, the trip would take about three hours and cost about $28.60 one way, estimated at a cost of 20 cents a mile.

Parents Seeking Help From Psychic

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The parents of a 3½-year-old Hickory boy missing since Friday have contacted a Charlotte psychic to help find him while police issued a nationwide missing person report.

"This is almost our last chance," said Anita Purdue, Keith Purdue's mother. "There are no clues ... We'll try just anybody now."

Hickory police said Monday foul play has not been ruled out.

Mrs. Purdue and her husband, Keith, told police they think their son wandered off in search of a dog they gave away last week.

There is a "strong possibility" the child was abducted, said Sgt. Steve Wright, a member of a five-person investigation team.

Family members agreed.

"We don't believe he's lost unless he's in shock or something," Mrs. Purdue said.

The family has contacted the Rev. Don Hudson, an ordained minister in the Church of Alliance of Divine Love, a Macon, Ga.-based sect that emphasizes belief in psychic power.

In August 1975 Hudson, who began psychic consultations in 1973, said he identified the located of a murdered 22-year-old woman in LaGrange, Ga.

But police have said they found the body after a suspect confessed.

Hickory police at dusk Sunday called off a search of the area surrounding the Purdue's home after two teams of about 70 Civil Air Patrol and N.C. Correction Department members combed the area.

The Purdues said they won't press charges if their son is returned safely.

"We just want them to bring him back," said Mrs. Purdue.

Law Professor Dies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Frank William Hanft, who taught at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Law for more than 40 years, died after an extended illness. He was 84.

Hanft, who died Sunday at his home, was a Graham Kenan professor emeritus of law. He taught at the school from 1931 until 1972.

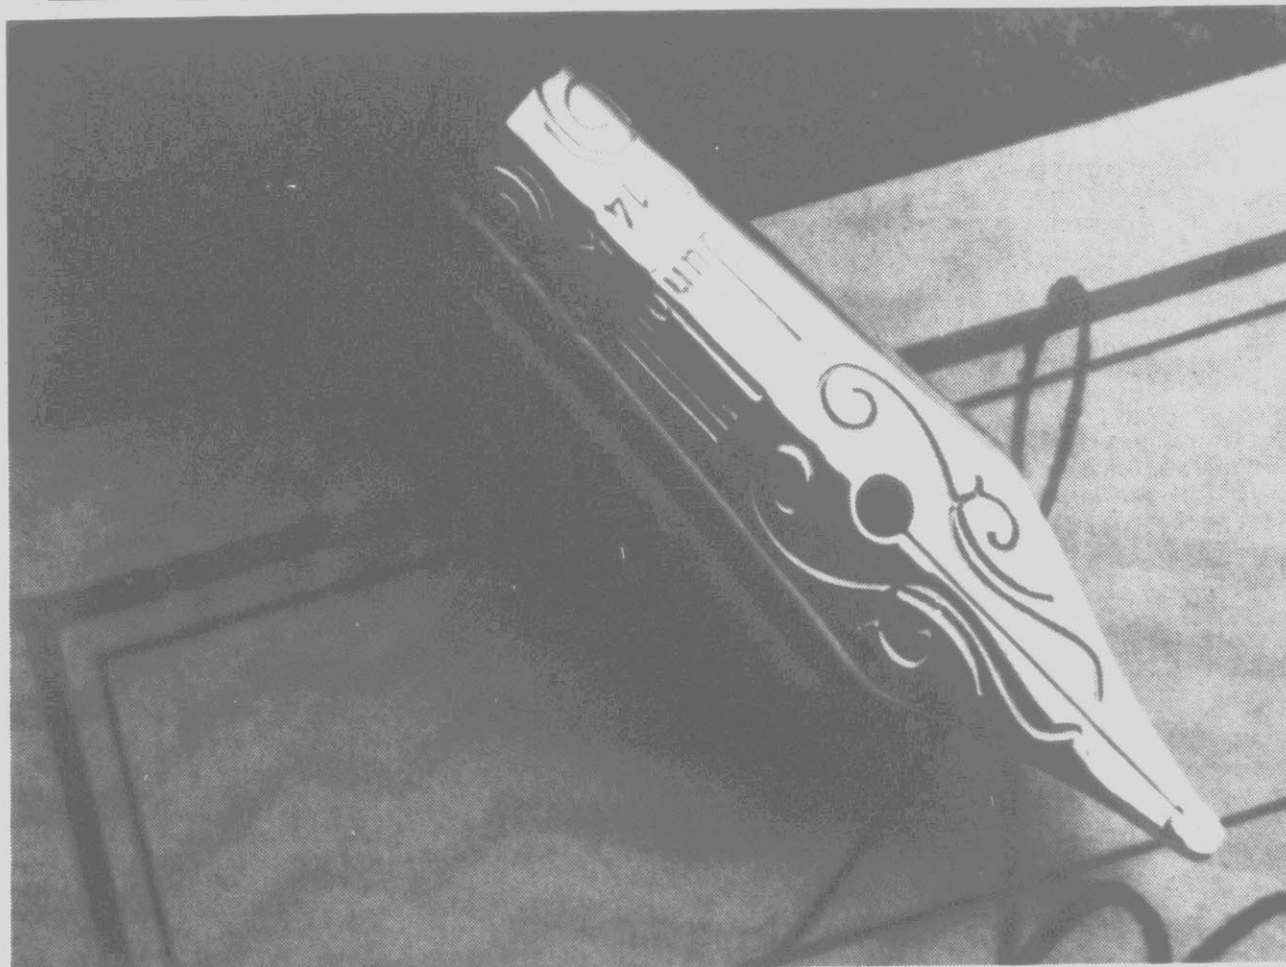

"Frank Hanft was one of the greatest teachers of law in the university who helped build an outstanding law school here," said

UNC President William Friday. "In addition, he was a devoted churchman who taught courses in religion and faith that were powerful and persuasive."

A native of Brainard, Minn., Hanft was the first law professor to serve as chairman of the North Carolina General Statutes Commission.

A funeral service and burial were scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday at University Methodist Church in Chapel Hill.

Democrats Brush Aside Knox Defection

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The endorsement of President Reagan by unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox probably won't sway North Carolina voters, the chairman of the state Democratic Party said.

Knox, the former mayor of Charlotte, was named national co-chairman of Democrats for Reagan during the president's campaign stop in Charlotte Monday.

David Price, chairman of the state Democratic Party, said he was surprised by Knox's move but said it probably wouldn't affect the race.

"There was a certain shock and surprise in the earlier defections of him and his family, but I think it's now lost its shock value and people just aren't going to be swayed one way or another," Price said.

Knox, who held a narrow lead in most opinion polls in the crowded Democratic gubernatorial field throughout the spring campaign, finished second to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten in the May 8 primary.

After a bitter, month-long runoff campaign, Edmisten defeated Knox 51.9 percent to 48.1 percent.

On July 2, Knox's wife Frances and brother Charles sent shock waves through state political circles by endorsing Helms' re-election and repudiating his challenger, Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, Knox's former college friend.

Knox himself said he supported the Democratic ticket but refused to endorse Hunt, Edmisten or other Democrats. He blamed Hunt, in part, for his defeat, saying he always had supported the governor but that Hunt had refused to let leading members of his administration work for Knox.

In August, Mrs. Knox and four of Eddie Knox's brothers endorsed U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, the GOP gubernatorial candidate, over Edmisten.

Knox and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., introduced Reagan to the crowd estimated by the Secret Service at 35,000 in front of the Park Hotel. Knox said North Carolina and its largest city were "proud witnesses" of the economic recovery and had "prospered since you took office."

"And we don't want to turn back, do we, ladies and gentlemen?" said Knox. "We can look at the successes we have had under Ronald Reagan's leadership and imagine what we could accomplish in the next four years."

Turning to Reagan, Knox said, "You have made us proud to be Americans, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart for that. ... Once again we believe in America. Never before has a leader brought us any more than Ronald Reagan."

Knox said North Carolina, where Democrats outnumber Republicans 3-to-1, wouldn't let "partisan politics" deter its support of "proven leadership."

Reagan told Knox, "I am more proud than I could say of what you have committed to this morning."

Some Democrats who worked for Knox in the primary election expressed surprise and disappointment at the news of Knox's appointment.

"It seems to me to be another big publicity stunt," said David Huskins of Mitchell County. "It's amazing to me that the president would appoint Eddie Knox to do that when Eddie is not nationally known in the Democratic Party. I think this whole Knox affair has been disgusting."

James W. Daniels, a Hunt appointee to the state Board of Transportation and Hunt's Buncombe County campaign chairman, said Knox "has already done most of the damage he can do to the Democratic Party."

"I think he's shown his true colors," Daniels said. "I'm flabbergasted and aghast, and wonder how Mr. Knox did as well as he did for as long as he did. I don't know that Mr. Knox has any support left from either Republicans or Democrats when he seems to find it very difficult to make up his mind which party he belongs to."

Knox said in an interview he was "still a Democrat" and declined to say whether he was supporting Helms.

Asked whether he joined Reagan out of bitterness, Knox replied: "I was invited to do it. I waited. I didn't call anybody."

Asked whether he had been promised political favors, Knox said: "I don't know what future I have. I'm just taking one day at a time. ... It's unusual for me to be back in the political arena so quickly."

Knox said he was invited to work for Reagan last week and that he didn't know what his duties would be.

GOP Expecting Legislative Gains

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The Nov. 6 election offers Republicans their best opportunity since 1972 to gain clout in the General Assembly, their state chairman says. But his Democratic counterpart vows it won't happen.

A dozen years ago, Republicans were poised to challenge the Democrats' longstanding dominance of the Legislature. They gained eight Senate seats and 11 House seats in the election that produced a sweep at the top of the ticket, with Richard Nixon carrying the state en route to landslide re-election as president, Jesse Helms winning his first term as senator and Jim Holshouser becoming the first GOP governor of North Carolina this century.

Then came Watergate, and the Republican momentum faded. Currently, the GOP is represented by only six of the 50 senators and 18 of 120 House members after occupying 15 Senate seats and 35 House seats in 1973.

But this year, state Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty says prospects are even brighter than in 1972. With President Reagan and Helms seeking re-election and U.S. Rep. Jim Martin running for governor, Flaherty says the GOP should equal or top its 1972 performance by winning at least 50 seats in the Legislature.

"Obviously we're very optimistic overall," said Flaherty. "We have the strongest ticket ever for local races. When Martin got involved it excited a lot of people. A lot of the Republicans, the (moderate) Holshouser Republicans, were turned off, didn't have anybody to identify with. Now they're working like never before, and the (more conservative) Helms Republicans are working just as hard."

David Price, state Democratic Party chairman, says Flaherty's rosy prediction is based on two mistaken assumptions: that people will let the top races influence their other choices, and that the Reagan-Helms-Martin ticket is significantly more popular than the Democratic alternative led by Walter Mondale, Senate candidate Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the gubernatorial nominee.

"The prediction that the coattail effect will result in massive gains for the Republicans is simply off the mark," said Price. "State politics in North Carolina hasn't worked that way for a long time. ... I also think that voting at the top of the ticket will be more favorable for the Democrats than Mr. Flaherty thinks."

Republicans have fielded candidates for 66 House seats and 29 Senate seats, while Democrats are running in every race.

Among the Democrats facing no opposition are powerful House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, and Reps. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne; Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett; Dan Blue, D-Wake; Billy Watkins, D-Granville; Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir; Frank Ballance, D-Warren; Richard Wright, D-Columbus; Charles Evans, D-Dare; and Joe Hackney, D-Orange.

Senate Democrats with no opposition include Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir; Henson Barnes, D-Wayne; Kenneth Royall, D-Durham; R.C. Soles, D-Columbus; Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston; Bill Martin, D-Guilford; and J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie. Also without opposition is Ralph Hunt, a black Durham city councilman who unseated Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, in the Democratic primary.

Other legislative stalwarts won't be able to relax during the campaign season, and some may have to scramble to keep their jobs.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, is being challenged by James D. McDuffie in the 34th Senate District, which was created during redistricting this year. Republican Sen. Chip Wright of Wilmington encounters a tough opponent in Claud "Buck" O'Shields, a Democrat, former chairman of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners and chairman of the Governor's Waste Management Board.

All three senators from the 14th District have Republican opposition. Joe Johnson and Wilma Woodward, both D-Wake, and Bill Staton, D-Lee, are running against Alan Schwartz of Harnett County and Paul Smith and Paul Stam, both of Wake County.

Republican Bob Griffith of Dunn hopes to unseat Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, while Bob Shaw of Greensboro is challenging Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, and Wendell Sawyer of Greensboro is challenging Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford. Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, faces Jim Johnson of Concord.

Republicans generally have fared best in Piedmont and mountain counties, and it's there that some of the closest races are likely to be.

Senate Minority Leader Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, and Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, are running against Democrats Oma Hester of Hickory and Leon Thomasson of Hamptonville in the 26th District. Next door in the 27th District, Sens. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, and Jim Edwards, D-Caldwell, seek re-election while Democrat James Cates and Republican Daniel Simpson, both of Morganton, are running for the seats.

Republicans also are challenging Sens. Bob Swain and Dennis Winner, both D-Buncombe; Charles Hipps, D-Haywood; and R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson.

CP&L Seeks Bigger Rate Hike

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power and Light Co. has asked the North Carolina Utilities Commission to raise a proposed rate increase, while the attorney general's office and other groups have asked that the increase be reduced.

The groups filed exceptions Monday to a proposed $64.4 million rate increase. CP&L in February applied for a $151 million rate increase. But a commission panel recommended Sept. 21 that the company be granted a $64.4 million increase, including $39 million for construction work in progress.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten asked the commission to deny the recommendations for CWIP costs — 61 percent of CP&L's proposed rate increase that was recommended 2-1 by the commission panel.

CP&L filed an exception Monday asking that the original $151 million rate increase be approved.

Robert Gruber, executive director of the Utilities Commission's Public Staff, which represents consumers in utility cases, said his office also filed an exception Monday asking that the money for CWIP not be approved.

"Our position in the case was that CP&L did not need additional CWIP," Gruber said. "We are in concurrence with the attorney general's office."

Voter Lists Expanded

By The Associated Press

North Carolinians lined up at registration desks in libraries, elections offices and driver's license examining stations to register to vote on the last day to sign up for the Nov. 6 election.

State Elections Director Alex Brock held to his earlier prediction that 75 percent of all eligible North Carolinians would be registered to vote for the Nov. 6 election.

"I don't really have much doubt at all we'll make 75 percent," he said. "We hit about 70 in April."

Seventy-five percent would be a "phenomenal percentage" because North Carolina has had a clean registration record, he said.

"We don't have people who don't exist registering from households that aren't there," he said.

Brock and other elections officials agreed that Monday's jam was nothing special considering that there's a presidential race this year.

"We're absolutely swamped," said Lynda F. Midgett, Dare County's supervisor of elections, on Monday.

Voters had until 5:15 p.m. Monday to register to vote for the Nov. 6 election.

Mondale Laid Base For Swing Voters

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first debate between Walter F. Mondale and Ronald Reagan laid the groundwork with swing voters that could allow Mondale to pick up strength in the days to come, polls say, even though the 100-minute confrontation did not produce big, instant changes in the national numbers.

"It can act as a catalyst for voters with reservations about Mondale," said Andrew Kohut, president of the Gallup Organization, of the Sunday night debate between the two presidential candidates. "This performance firmed up his support, particularly the very soft, wavering ones."

"I don't know if it changes votes overnight," added William Hamilton, a pollster who works for Democratic candidates. "But if the vice presidential debate goes well on Thursday ... and if Mondale does well in the second debate, we can have a close race. ... It's called momentum."

"He had to shore up his Democratic base," said V. Lance Tarrance, a Texas-based pollster who works for Republicans. "Those people will come out, they will stop hiding after this debate."

Thus, the impact of the first 1984 debate has the potential to echo that of the most recent general election confrontations, where then-challengers Jimmy Carter in 1976 and Reagan in 1980 used the debate format to calm doubts about their personalities and their policies.

"Those who had doubts about Mondale had them assuaged," Hamilton said. "And now the other alternative doesn't look as good."

"The debates have to work together to give the Democrats the push they need," Tarrance said. "(Ms. Ferraro) has to do very well on Thursday for that to happen."

Mondale had a long way to go before the first debate, just over a month before the election on Nov. 6.

Before the debate, Reagan held a big lead over Mondale in most national polls. The latest CBS-New York Times poll, for example, put Reagan's lead at 54 percent to 31 percent for Mondale.

And the instant polls taken after Sunday night's debate did not show major shifts.

For example, an ABC News poll said the viewers favored Reagan 61-36 before the debate and 59-39 after the confrontation. Given the sampling error margins, those changes are not statistically significant.

"I don't think that the debate changed Reagan's support to any 'politically significant degree,'" said Tarrance.

Richard Wirthlin, Reagan's pollster, had said even before the debate that any impact would take a few days.

"In the past, the debates have had some impact, but it's generally taken three or four days for that impact to really register," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

To have any chance to win, Mondale not only has to firm up his own support, but win back large numbers of people — including many traditional Democrats — who now say they will vote for Reagan.

A Gallup poll taken for Newsweek magazine just after the Sunday debate said a majority of the 379 viewers interviewed by telephone judged Mondale did better than Reagan. On that question, Mondale got the nod by 54 percent, to 35 percent who named Reagan.

Other surveys — asking flat-out "Who won?" — generally found a smaller split. The ABC poll, for example, gave Mondale 39 percent and Reagan 38 percent. A CBS-New York Times survey of 476 people found 43 percent said Mondale won and 34 percent said Reagan won.

As has been the case in past debates, the majority of viewers thought the man they supported for president won the debate.

But Kohut said an analysis of the swing voters in the Gallup poll — those who said their commitment to their candidate is only "moderate" or who didn't have a choice — showed big possibilities for Mondale.

The numbers of interviews in the poll and among the swing voters were relatively small — just over 100 — making hard and fast conclusions dangerous to draw. But the patterns are instructive.

About a third of all the viewers were classified as swing voters, with about half in the Mondale camp and half in Reagan's column before the debate.

After the debate, 89 percent of those from the Mondale camp said they were more likely to vote for the Democrat as a result of the confrontation.

In contrast, only 61 percent of the Reagan swing voters said the debate made it more likely they would stick with Reagan. Fully a third said the debate made it more likely they would switch and vote for Mondale.

Likewise, among all the swing voters Mondale was judged more confident and self-assured than Reagan by a 70-20 margin. He was rated more thoughtful and well-informed by a 57-23 edge.

Even on the question of who is best able to handle the nation's problems, Mondale split 49-42 with Reagan among the swing voters.

In contrast, among all the viewers, Reagan had the edge on that question.

The ABC News poll also said the viewing audience was a bit more Republican and more pro-Reagan than registered voters as a whole — again that has been typical of past debates.

To demonstrate that difference, the viewers' preference for Reagan over Mondale before the debate was 61-36. An ABC-Washington Post survey completed only last week put the gap at 55-37.

"This was a tough audience for Mondale," said ABC pollster Jeffrey Alderman. "They conceded him the debate, even if they didn't give him their votes."

Mondale Buoyed By Debate News

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Buoyed by good reviews of his debate performance, Walter F. Mondale is hoping the biggest, most frenetic crowds he has seen in months signal an upturn in his political fortunes.

"This is a brand new race," the Democratic challenger told audiences on Monday, the day after the first of two nationally televised debates with President Reagan. "From now on, everything is wide open."

Everywhere he went on an intensive, 16-hour campaign day through New York, Philadelphia and Ohio, Mondale ignited an electric, spontaneous response less than 24 hours after the 90-minute debate in Louisville with Reagan.

Mondale was looking for more crowds today as he was campaigning in Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

About 200,000 people lined Fifth Avenue in New York on Monday, and many shouted friendly greetings to Mondale as he walked by with his vice presidential running mate Geraldine A. Ferraro at his side.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said it was not only the largest crowd in the history of the parade, but the most enthusiastic.

"You can get a crowd out like this, but you can't make it behave like this," the governor said.

While many came out on a brilliant, warm fall day just for the parade, most appeared to be Mondale supporters.

The crowd was six deep on the sidewalk and there were printed and hand-lettered Mondale signs everywhere.

Mondale described as "the most fantastic parade I have ever been in my life."

Several hundred yards ahead of Mondale in the line of march was Vice President Bush, who disappeared from the parade by the time Mondale arrived at the reviewing stand, although Bush was an honorary grand marshal.

There was irony in Mondale's success Monday. Just over a month ago on Sept. 3, he marched in a Labor Day parade down Fifth Avenue in an appearance that became a major political embarrassment.

Only a handful of New Yorkers turned out for the early morning march with Ms. Ferraro and Cuomo. Viewers of the network news shows were treated to images of Mondale waving at empty sidewalks on a day that was supposed to mark the kickoff of the fall campaign for the former vice president.

But Monday was a different day for the Democratic challenger. In Philadelphia, Mondale was greeted by a handmade sign covering half the wall of the gymnasium in South Philadelphia High School.

Reagan Refuses To Rate Showing

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing another debate with Walter F. Mondale in less than two weeks, is steadfastly refusing to grade his performance in Sunday's face-off with the Democratic challenger.

But on the campaign trail Monday, Reagan dropped hints that he was not very confident about the 100-minute clash, although the president's top spokesman said no changes were contemplated for the Oct. 21 debate in Kansas City.

Only hours after Reagan told a crowd of enthusiastic supporters he wasn't sure he'd gotten his message across in Louisville, the president told supporters in Charlotte, N.C. "We had a little sparring in the political arena. Whether I won them or not, I know now that I have won the fruits of victory because I get to be with all of you."

At virtually every campaign stop, Reagan was accosted by reporters who wanted to know whether the president thought he had won or lost the Sunday night debate.

As he prepared to board Air Force One for a flight from Louisville to Charlotte, Reagan winced, paused and then shouted to reporters. "You're supposed to make that decision. ... I'm smiling."

When he arrived in Charlotte and was getting into his limousine, the president was asked again to rate his performance.

"It was 90 minutes long, and everybody went home," Reagan replied. When pressed further, the president shrugged his shoulders, raised his arms as if to say he didn't know, and got into the car.

Reagan is in Washington today, meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. He spends Wednesday campaigning in Michigan.

Aboard Air Force One, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes was asked whether Reagan or his campaign managers would seek any changes in the preparation for the coming debate or the rules governing it.

Speakes replied that he saw no change in the format, the approach "or the way Reagan is campaigning."

White House aides seemed immersed Monday in a damage-control mission, telling reporters that Reagan had done all right, and that Mondale needed a startling performance or a knockout blow to erode Reagan's 15- to 20-point lead in public opinion polls.

Speakes said, "I think in the final analysis we'll maintain our lead. It will narrow. It always does."

"We don't think he lost the debate," White House chief of staff James A. Baker III told reporters at a breakfast.

Barbara Bush Issues An Apology

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush apologized to Geraldine Ferraro and was described as feeling "awful" and "lousy" for saying that she and her husband, Vice President George Bush, enjoy their lifestyle and don't pretend to be poor "like that $4 million — I can't say it, but it rhymes with rich."

Mrs. Bush made the remark Monday while joking with two reporters aboard Air Force Two before a flight to New York. After the conversation was revealed by news services, Mrs. Bush called Ms. Ferraro to apologize.

Bush's press secretary, Peter Teeley, said the vice president's wife "feels awful about her remark and conveyed that to Ms. Ferraro ... I don't think I can express to you the depth of feeling Mrs. Bush has on this," Teeley said.

"She felt lousy about it," he added. Teeley said Ms. Ferraro

"could not have been nicer."

The vice president was told of the incident and was "understanding," Teeley said.

Ms. Ferraro, in New York, said, "Mrs. Bush called and apologized and was very, very gracious and very nice."

She added, "She said she did not intend to call me any names and did not call me any names."

Mrs. Bush's remark provided campaign fuel for Walter Mondale, the Democratic presidential candidate. "The Republicans have always had trouble responding to Ms. Ferraro's candidacy," said Mondale's press secretary, Maxine Isaacs. "I assume this was Mrs. Bush's attempt to make a joke, but I don't think it was funny. It was in poor taste."

Mrs. Bush made the remark as she accompanied her husband to New York to march 25 blocks

Monday in the Columbus Day parade. While the vice president's plane was still on the ground in Washington, Mrs. Bush complained to news service reporters that her husband was being criticized unfairly for paying only 12.8 percent in federal income taxes last year.

She said that when state and other taxes are figured in, the Bushes paid 32 percent of their gross income in taxes. With a smile on her face, Mrs. Bush said she and her husband enjoy their comfortable style of living and don't pretend to be poor "like that $4 million — I can't say it, but it rhymes with rich."

At that point, the plane began taxiing and Mrs. Bush left to take her seat in the vice president's cabin.

Later, the two reporters asked to speak with Mrs. Bush again about her remark, but she was not available. Later interviewed by television reporters, Mrs. Bush said, "I called Mrs. Ferraro and told her I would never call her a witch for anything."

Teeley said he talked with Mrs. Bush and "she said she was guilty (of making the remark) as a result of a humorous encounter with the press which she thought was off the record."

The American Humane Association, founded on this day in 1877, grew out of earlier, local groups organized to prevent cruelty to children and animals. Even today, people who observe such mistreatment can notify their local humane society, which then takes legal action against the offender. Often, the primary function of local humane societies, such as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has become housing the thousands of animals who stray from their owners.

Challenger Gets Cool Air

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts aimed their radar camera at the Mideast and other targets on Earth today as a welcomed blast of air conditioning cooled their spaceship, which the commander said had been as hot as a Texas summer.

"Cooler air is circulating in the mid-deck," Mission Control spokesman John Lawrence reported after Commander Robert Crippen repaired the air-conditioning system, which had not worked well since an ice ball clogged plumbing on Sunday.

With cooler air, the five men and two women astronauts would feel more comfortable during an international news conference planned for later today, halfway through their eight-day mission.

They were to discuss their successes and problems with reporters in Sydney, Australia, Jakarta, Indonesia, Bangkok, Thailand, and with Canadian and American journalists at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The cabin temperature, which soared to 90 on Monday, should be down to a normal 75 by this afternoon, Lawrence said, adding, "The crew is probably feeling a lot cooler than it has in some time."

The heat had solicited this comment from Crippen: "It feels like it's about late August in Houston."

Mission Control worked out air-conditioning repair procedures overnight and radioed them to the spaceship. They worked perfectly.

The crew continued this morning gathering data with a radar camera powerful enough to see below dry, windblown soil. "We just had a good pass over Egypt and the Gulf of Hormuz," astronaut Kathy Sullivan reported after one run.

In that part of the world, the camera is seeking information on buried river beds, sand migration and geologic structures.

Officials also were watching tropical storm Josephine as it churned about 550 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral, hoping it would not interfere with the shuttle's planned landing at the Cape on Saturday. Weather forecasters said it should be long gone by then, but noted that such storms are unpredictable.

The news conference was possible because specialists on the ground restored the computer memory of the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite orbiting 22,000 miles overhead.

The satellite, which relays voice and digital communications from the shuttle to the ground, was knocked out of service for 14 hours Monday when "a heavy cosmic burst of radiation" generated by sunspots wiped out its memory.

Uncle Sam's Poll Takers Confirm It: 'The Very Rich Are Different'

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam is conducting one of the most extensive surveys ever of wealth in America and the poll takers are finding that it is indeed true — "the very rich are different from you and me."

For one thing, they control a lot more of America's wealth than average folk. The top 2 percent of families — those earning $100,000 or more a year — controlled 30 percent of all financial assets.

It said that group also owns 50 percent of all stocks in private hands, 71 percent of all tax-free bonds and 20 percent of all real estate.

The report termed this concentration of wealth "striking."

These are some of the initial findings of a new survey being conducted by the Federal Reserve Board and six other federal agencies into how wealth is distributed in America.

The study is looking at all income groups, but is making a special effort to break through the secrecy behind which the wealthy in America have traditionally conducted their financial affairs.

"The wealthy are a very elusive group and we really don't know very much about them," Robert B. Avery, a researcher at the Federal Reserve, said Monday. "It is harder to interview wealthy people. They are usually unwilling to participate in surveys."

To overcome the obstacles, government researchers used data from federal income tax returns to get a representative sample of 500 wealthy Americans who volunteered to be interviewed at length about their holdings.

Avery said the results of this detailed survey are still being compiled and will be released in the next two months. However, a broader survey which included the wealthy among all income ranges has revealed some initial findings that are likely to be confirmed by the detailed analysis.

The broader study revealed a concentration of wealth in the hands of "a small number of families with very high incomes."

In addition to the amount of stocks and tax-free bonds held by the wealthy, the survey found that the richest 2 percent of Americans controlled 39 percent of taxable bonds, 23 percent of money deposited by individuals in checking accounts, 8 percent of the money in savings accounts and 15 percent of the funds in money market accounts and certificates of deposit.

In a profile of who owns the nation's wealth, the study found that, as a group, self-employed managers had the biggest financial portfolio — an average of $125,983. They were followed by managers at $47,713; farmers, $42,118; and professionals such as doctors, lawyers and engineers, who had an average of $32,226 in financial assets.

The top 10 percent of American families — those earning more than $50,000 annually — reported average financial holdings of $125,131 in 1983. This compared with an average of $18,539 in holdings for families earning between $25,000 and $30,000.

States Cut Health Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Medicaid rapidly becoming a bigger budget item, 25 states require beneficiaries to pay a deductible or a small share of some medical and dental bills, according to a new study.

The $32 billion federal-state program that serves the poor is the fastest growing portion of state budgets. The number of Medicaid recipients nearly doubled from 12.1 million in 1969 to 22.7 million in 1984, according to the study of health cost-cutting measures prepared by the National Conference of State Legislatures.

States paid more than $15 billion of the Medicaid bill in 1983 while the federal share was about $17 billion, the study said.

To cut costs, 25 states are now requiring Medicaid recipients to pay a deductible or a small share called a copayment for eyeglasses, prescription drugs or dental care. Copayments or deductibles are charged for such items as physical therapy, prosthetic devices, podiatry and doctor visits.

Mississippi and Virginia require contributions from the relatives of Medicaid recipients in nursing homes.

Many of these cost saving measures were adopted in the last few years. The study did not provide figures on the size of the copayments or deductibles.

"The methods often vary from state to state due to considerations such as population density, state history, political and professional attitudes and employment patterns," the report said. "The common thread tying together these state efforts is the goal of bringing health care costs under control."

In all, about 800 cost-cutting measures are being used in the 50 states to reduce the rate of growth in state expenditures for health costs, the survey showed.

In 17 states, doctors' fees have been frozen for the 1985 fiscal year at the rates paid in the 1984 fiscal year. In four states — Hawaii, Massachusetts, Nebraska and Nevada — hospital reimbursement rates are frozen in fiscal 1985 at fiscal 1984 rates.

Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah and Washington state pay a flat fee for treatment of a specific illness, no matter how long the patient is hospitalized.

Red Cross Recalls Clotting Agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Red Cross has recalled 1,931 bottles of a blood-clotting substance used by hemophiliacs because a donor whose blood was used in the preparation has AIDS, the disease that destroys the body's immune system.

It is not known if the recalled material is capable of transmitting AIDS, but the Red Cross said on Monday it was withdrawing two lots of Antihemophilic Factor (AHF) as a precautionary measure.

The 1,931 bottles, distributed in 12 of the Red Cross' 59 blood regions in the U.S. and Puerto Rico, have lot numbers 0577A004AA and 0577A004BA on the labels.

The blood of 20,000 donors was used to make the batch of AHF, sometimes called Factor VIII, that went into these lots.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly ahead today after drifting lower in the previous session. Auto, computer and airline issues paced the early gainers. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.97 to 1,182.86 in the opening half-hour, offsetting its 4.64-point loss on Monday. Advances jumped out to a 3-2 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange. Monday's loss came in the quietest trading in nearly two years as many banks and other businesses were closed in observance of Columbus Day.

With business back to normal today, Wall Street's attention continues to be focused on the economy's expansion and interest rates.

There have been suggestions that the Federal Reserve is leaning toward a less-restrictive credit policy, some analysts said. But they still expressed doubts about the chances for a significant drop in interest rates in view of a heavy schedule of new debt offerings by the government in the next few weeks.

On the NYSE's active list today, K mart climbed 1/4 to 34. International Business Machines rose 3/8 to 121 3/4. Ford Motor gained 1/2 to 44 1/2, and RCA was up 1/2 to 36 1/8.

Big Board volume came to 46.36 million shares, down from 82.95 million in the previous session and the lightest total since a 42.11 million-share day on Dec. 31, 1982.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 1.09 to 210.31.

Small Tremor Shakes Georgia

DALTON, Ga. (AP) — A light earthquake shook mobile homes and broke dishes in northwest Georgia and south-central Tennessee today before dying out after about four minutes, officials said.

The tremor, which was centered in northwest Georgia about five miles south of Chattanooga, Tenn., registered 4.0 on the Richter scale, according to the U.S. Geological Survey at Golden, Colo.

The quake, which occurred around 7:53 a.m. EDT, "was probably felt by a lot of people," said Russell Prokes, a graduate researcher in the geophysics department at Georgia Tech in Atlanta. "It's one of the larger ones we've had in a while."

The earthquake was reported first by residents of the Summerville area, where one person reported broken dishes and several others said their houses shook, the National Weather Service said.

Police in LaFayette said they received one call from a resident of a mobile home who reported several items broken.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

An earthquake of 4 on the Richter scale can cause moderate damage in the local area.

Prokes said the last earthquake that reached 4.0 on the Richter scale in Georgia occurred in Macon two years ago.

Mubarak Visits Jordanian King

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak arrived here today to an embrace from King Hussein, who two weeks ago defied Arab hardliners by restoring diplomatic ties with Egypt.

The trip to Jordan is the first by an Egyptian president since Egypt signed its 1979 peace treaty with Israel, an act that prompted 17 Arab countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization to break diplomatic relations with Cairo.

It also is Mubarak's first official state visit to any Arab country since he became president in 1981. He visited Saudi Arabia in 1982 to offer condolences to the royal family on the death of King Khaled, but this was not regarded as a state visit.

Jordan, which borders Israel and lost a large chunk of its territory in wars with the Jewish state, announced Sept. 25 that it would be the first of the 17 Arab states to restore full ties with Egypt. Hussein, whose action was assailed by Syria and Libya, praised Egypt's recent support for Arab causes and cited a need for unity in dealing with Israel.

Hussein and his American-born wife, Queen Noor, greeted Mubarak at Amman's airport today. The two leaders embraced, then reviewed Jordanian troops while military bagpipers played and French-built Mirage F-1 jets roared low over the runway in salute.

The two leaders left the airport in a motorcade along route lined with Egyptian and Jordanian flags. There was heavy security throughout Amman, with troops carrying submachine guns patrolling the streets.

Mubarak was accompanied by his wife and a delegation including Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid and other Cabinet ministers.

Mubarak was to confer with Hussein this afternoon and be guest of honor at a state banquet tonight. He is scheduled to return to Egypt on Thursday.

Israel has insisted that all peace moves be in the framework of Camp David.

Manager Don Russell recommended that a ramp be built at the Community Building. "This is not required because no federal aid money was spent in construction of the community building, but the ramp would give better access to the building," he said.

The board adopted a policy on the installation of tile in drainage ditches. The city will install tile in new driveways; the state will work with the city on the installation of tile along East Avenue.

A power agency document was accepted by the board. This document redefines the initial and supplemental power sale agreements in accordance with N.C. Statutes and Power Agency Regulations. Mayor Ross Persinger said the

Australian Climbers Die In Falls

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Two Australians on an expedition led by the son of Mount Everest's first conqueror died in separate falls today while trying to scale the world's highest mountain via its steep west ridge, Nepal's Tourism Ministry said.

The two were members of a six-man expedition led by Peter Hillary, 29, of Auckland, New Zealand. His father, Sir Edmund Hillary, made the first conquest of Everest in 1953.

The ministry said Craig Nottle, 23, a medical student from Melbourne, fell to his death at 7:30 a.m. while climbing toward the 29,028-foot summit from a bivouac camp at 26,000 feet.

Fellow climber Fred From, a physicist from Brisbane, went to look for Nottle and also fell to his death, the ministry said.

Before the fatal accidents, all six team members were heading for the summit. They had spent Monday night in bivouac in the open in preparation for the final assault on the peak.

The four surviving members — two New Zealanders and two Australians — were descending to the base camp after abandoning the climb, the ministry said.

They reported that they could see Nottle's body from a distance, but there was no sign of From's body.

The team planned to leave the base camp within about five days for Katmandu en route home.

The expedition was separate from an expedition in which Australian climbers successfully scaled the world's highest mountain for the first time last week.

Local Program On Day Care Set

A two-day program on the role of community and health professionals in the provision of day care services will be held Oct. 25-26 at the Sheraton Inn in Greenville.

The program is designed for social workers, nurses, sanitarians, health educators, day care licensers and other community and health professionals who work with day care providers and who are concerned with the needs of families seeking quality child care services in North Carolina.

The 22 faculty members who will speak during the program include Dr. Louise Bates Ames, a national authority on child development. Dr. Ames, associate director of the Gesell Institute of Human Development in New Haven, Conn., will deliver the program's keynote address,

Series Is Matchup Of Contrasts

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is a matchup both of contrasts — tradition vs. expansion — and common threads binding the San Diego Padres and Detroit Tigers.

And it wasn't even supposed to start here. Chicago was all charged up for its first World Series in 25 years, perhaps the Cubs' first world championship in 76.

But in a most improbable of comebacks, the Padres, only 15 years old, won the final three games in the National League's best-of-five playoffs and now find themselves hosting tonight's opening game of their first World Series.

In Chicago, where waiting for next year has become a family tradition, handed down from generation to generation, a psychiatrist and Cubs fan, Helene Starr, was quoted as saying of the Padres: "I don't want you to think I'm bitter, but let me say this . . . I hope the Tigers squash them, eat them up and spit them out. I hate the Padres! I hate the name Padres! Their colors stink, too!"

Their colors are those of autumn, brown and gold, but in Southern California, autumn is only a word, not a season. It is forever sunny, warm and green. Not a bit like Detroit, the very essence of fall — cool, crisp and rich in World Series tradition.

Eight times previously, the Tigers have participated in this fall classic, winning three of them, most recently in 1968. The names, too, ring of tradition — Ty Cobb, Charlie Gehringer, Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, Al Kaline . . .

And in San Diego, major league baseball tradition is, well, nonexistent. In fact, for a while a decade ago, major league baseball here almost was nonexistent. C. Arnholt Smith, then the owner of the Padres, was on the verge of selling the franchise, which was to be moved to Washington, D.C.

Instead, he sold it to the late Ray Kroc, the hamburger king, founder of McDonald's, a pioneer in fast-food franchising.

This, incidentally, is being called the fast-food series matching McDonald's against Domino's Pizza, a nationwide chain owned by Tom Monaghan, who bought the Tigers after the 1983 season.

Kroc, who in his early years as the team's owner was perhaps best known for grabbing a stadium microphone, apologizing to the fans for the club's performance and berating his players, went about the business the past few years of finding the right parts to the puzzle.

The pivotal one was Dick Williams, a manager with winning credentials in Boston, Oakland and Montreal.

And Jack McKeon, vice president for baseball operations, went about spending Kroc's money for the rest of the pieces:

•First baseman Steve Garvey, for years the All-American boy up the coast with the Los Angeles Dodgers who led the team with 86 runs batted in. He was the Padres' Most Valuable Player in the NL Championship Series against the Cubs, who nearly outbid San Diego for his services in the free-agent market before the 1983 season.

•Third baseman Graig Nettles, the still-slick fielder with the occasional lightning in his bat (seven home runs in six consecutive games in August) was acquired in trade from the New York Yankees.

•Relief pitcher Rich "Goose" Gossage, the stopper out of the bullpen (25 saves) the Padres had so sorely missed, was signed out of free agency when he tired of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's meddling.

The Padres also developed some native talent — major league batting champion Tony Gwynn (.351), their right fielder; centerfielder Kevin McReynolds (who matched Nettles' club-high 20 home runs but will miss the Series with a broken hand), second baseman (and converted outfielder) Alan Wiggins and pitcher Eric Show, who led the Padres with 15 wins.

And the team which had had only one winning season, which had never finished higher than fourth in the NL West, was never lower than fourth this year (and that low for only five days in May), took the division lead for good June 9 and won it Sept. 20. The final margin was 12 games.

Less traveled than Williams but equally successful is Detroit's manager, Sparky Anderson. He directed the Cincinnati Reds, the Big Red Machine, to world championships in 1975 and 1976, then was stunned by his dismissal after the 1978 season. He was hired by the Tigers midway in 1979.

Like Williams, Anderson also shopped around to pick up the few

Falls Road Tops GCA

Falls Road Christian Academy outscored Greenville Christian, 2-0 in an overtime shootout to gain a 4-2 soccer victory over the Knights yesterday.

Derek Leupen scored the game's first goal, giving GCA the lead 1-0, after 6:18 of play. Maury Harris assisted on the goal.

But Falls Road came back to score twice in the remaining part of the period. Dan Griffin tied it at 12:53 and Sammy Cherry gave Falls Road the lead, 2-1, with a goal at 29:02.

The only goal of the second half was one by Leupen that again tied it at 14:11, making it 2-2.

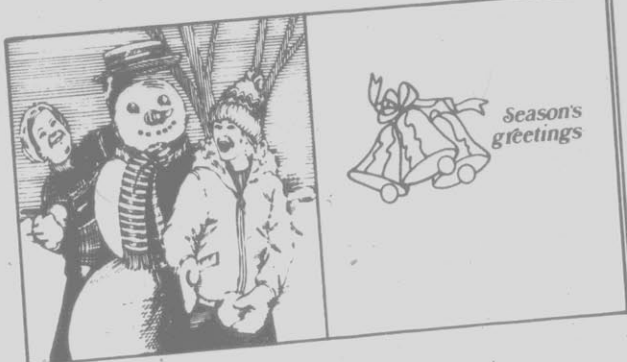

In the shootout, John Denson and Cherry both scored for Falls Road to give them the victory.

"I felt we outplayed them, we just couldn't get the ball into the nets," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We outshot them and controlled the game, but couldn't pull it out."

GCA is now 3-6 on the year and travels to Wilmington Christian on Friday.

missing cogs for his new machine:

•Relief pitcher Willie Hernandez was obtained from Philadelphia, last year's NL champs. He was successful in all but one of his 33 save opportunities.

•First baseman Dave Bergman was acquired in the same trade with the Phillies, but was slowed by a hamstring pull suffered during the American League playoffs against Kansas City.

•Third baseman Darrell Evans, the San Francisco Giants' MVP in 1983, who hit 16 home runs and drove in 63 runs in 1984, was signed from the re-entry draft.

•Centerfielder Chet Lemon, who had 20 homers and 76 RBI despite a slow second half of the season, was acquired from the Chicago White Sox before the 1982 season.

The Tigers also nurtured their own talent — right fielder Kirk Gibson, the first Detroit player to hit more than 20 homers (27) and steal 20 bases (29) in the same season; shortstop Alan Trammell, who hit .314, drove in 69 runs, and missed the All-Star Game because he was sidelined in midseason with a shoulder injury that still hampers his throwing; pitchers Jack Morris (19-11) and Dan Petry (18-8).

The Tigers became the first team since the 1927 Yankees, the men of

Harris Wins Grid Picks

Last week's Daily Reflector football contest turned into a family affair as both winners come from the same household.

Ruby S. Harris of Rt. 3, Box 340, Plymouth, captured first place in the weekly contest, picking the winners in 24 of the 32 games listed on last week's contest pages.

Second place went to Dillon S. Harris of the same address. He picked the winners in 23 of the 32 contests.

The tie between Florida State and Memphis State was counted wrong, since entrants may, within the rules of the contest, pick a tie.

The next contest in the ten-week series, appears on the following pages of today's edition.

Murderer's Row, to occupy first place from Opening Day to the end of the season. They clinched the AL East on Sept. 18 and finished 15 games ahead of Toronto.

Morris, who pitched a no-hitter in Chicago on national television April 7 to highlight the Tigers' extraordinary 35-5 start, will open the World Series for them against Mark Thurmond, who was 14-8 during the season for the Padres.

"After we went 35-5 from the start, people said we weren't really that good of a team, and maybe we weren't," Morris said. "But we didn't fold after that and we didn't fold under the pressure all season long."

"Maybe I do feel a little pressure at being the starting pitcher, but I can't wait to get out there and get started."

Thurmond called the World Series "icing on the cake for us. After the last few days, I can tell you that the pressure is certainly to get to the Series. This will be fun for us. I'm just going to go out there and try to have a good time."

INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Coach Erk Russell is a bit irritated that his fledgling Georgia Southern Eagles have been ranked 17th in Division IAA by the NCAA football selection committee.

"It's very premature," Russell said. "I can't see it doing anything but providing our next opponent, Tennessee-Chattanooga, more incentive to win the game, because apparently we're ranked ahead of them, which in itself is rather ridiculous."

"Here's Tennessee-Chattanooga, obviously a very good football team, beat the top (Division IAA) team in the country two weeks ago. They've been playing football 100 years and we've been playing 2 1/2. That's why I think it's ridiculous."

Tennessee-Chattanooga is ranked 20th.

The 5-1 Eagles also must play East Tennessee and Middle Tennessee, both ranked in Division IAA this season.

"I feel like our real schedule is up ahead of us. I don't see any way in the world our kids can profit by a No. 17 ranking," in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's second-toughest division.

"As it has been, we've been kind of anonymous, and that's probably helped us some with our opponents," Russell said in a telephone interview Monday night from his home in Statesboro.

Russell probably is better known than his team. "The Bald Eagle" spent 17 seasons as defensive coordinator with the University of Georgia, often banging his bald head against his player's helmets during sideline warmups.

Lured to Georgia Southern's campus in Statesboro in 1981 to build a football program — the old one had died quietly in 1940 — Russell moved into a tiny office with plans, but no players, no stadium and little operating capital.

He put a club football team on the field in 1982, playing junior varsity squads, military teams and similar units.

Last year, the Eagles played four-year schools, primarily National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics teams.

This year they graduated to Division IAA. They have beaten division rivals Florida A&M and Bethune-Cookman as well as Presbyterian, Central Florida and Liberty Baptist.

The Eagles only loss is to East Carolina, a Division IA school.

They played their first game Sept. 29 in Allen E. Paulson Stadium, a $4.8-million facility built with donated money, which seats 17,000 and can be expanded to seat 50,000.

"It's great to have a place to play and I think our guys have taken a special point of pride in that," said Russell, whose teams had played all their games on the road or at high school fields.

Russell said the key to his offense is toughness.

"We've got the same group of people that have been playing together two years on offense. Almost to the man, our offensive group is intact. We have an outstanding quarterback (Tracy Ham) and some quality skill people in the form of running backs. Our receivers are small but adequate."

"Our defense is having a hard time. We face real good passing teams and passing teams spread us out and match up skill with our lack of it. As compared with our offense, it's a mixture of people, first, second and third years."

Unable to seriously recruit, or even offer scholarship money his first year, Russell offered a Division I program for athletes not recruited by Georgia or Georgia Tech.

Southern offered "an opportunity to start playing football in a brand new program. The majority came here because they wanted to play, not because we recruited them," he said. "They came together and have stuck together."

The first step toward the future, he said, is proving the Eagles belong where they are.

He said he's got to start serious recruiting "as soon as we get some money. We've got to do that in order to survive."

"We've got to get the people who have been going to the other IAA schools, Tennessee-Chattanooga, The Citadel, that caliber of people, and we can do it. We haven't so far, but we can."

As a Division IAA school, he can offer 70 scholarships, but he hasn't got the cash to pay the cost of recruiting, which he guessed at about $100,000 a year.

"That seems like a pretty good, round figure to keep coaches on the road, recruit like we probably will have to. We're considerably away from that figure."

He told his team about the ranking during practice, and "there was no obvious impression, one way or the other."

"I think our guys feel like I do," he said. "They'd just as soon be old Georgia Southern, in plain white pants, Navy blue shirts without any trimming and just play football."

The oldest major-league player to hit a grand-slam home run was Honus Wagner of the Pittsburgh Pirates who did it at age 41 in 1915.

Texas Holds To No. One Rank

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Texas held onto its No. 1 ranking today in The Associated Press college football poll, while Oklahoma, the Longhorns' opponent next Saturday, climbed from fifth place to third.

Washington took advantage of Ohio State's 28-23 loss to Purdue and replaced the Buckeyes as No. 2, while Purdue, South Carolina and Kentucky made the Top Twenty after absences of several years.

Texas, a 38-13 winner over Rice, received 55 of 59 first-place votes and 1,170 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

While Ohio State dropped from second to eighth, Washington, No. 3 a week ago, moved up one spot with one first-place ballot and 1,049 points following a 19-7 triumph over Oregon State.

Oklahoma was idle last weekend but jumped from fifth to third with one first-place vote and 1,038 points. The other two first-place ballots went to Boston College, which was idle for the second week in a row and received 1,026 points to remain No. 4. The Eagles return to action this weekend against Temple.

Brigham Young moved up from seventh to fifth with 932 points for a 52-6 rout of Colorado State and Nebraska, a 17-3 winner over Oklahoma State, rose from eighth to sixth with 869 points while the Cowboys fell from ninth to 13th.

Southern Methodist also was off last weekend and the Mustangs received 807 points while going from 10th place to seventh. Eighth-place Ohio State received 690 points, while Florida State dropped from sixth to ninth with 646 points after a 17-17 tie with Memphis State. Miami rounded out the Top Ten, vaulting from 14th to 10th with 605 points by defeating Notre Dame 31-13 and knocking the Irish out of the rankings.

The Second Ten consists of Penn State, LSU, Oklahoma State, Purdue, Georgia, Auburn, South Carolina, Florida, Kentucky and Georgia Tech.

Last week, it was Penn State, Georgia Tech, Michigan, Miami, LSU, Notre Dame, UCLA, Auburn, Vanderbilt and Georgia.

Purdue, 4-1, last appeared in the Top Twenty in 1980, finishing the season as the No. 17 team.

South Carolina, which trounced Kansas State 49-17 to go 4-0, also made the rankings for the first time since the 1980 season. That year, the Gamecocks were in the Top Twenty 12 times, rising as high as No. 14. They were 18th in the last regular-season poll, but did not make the final Top Twenty.

Kentucky, also 4-0 following a 27-14 victory over Rutgers, had not been in the Top Twenty since the first regular-season poll of 1978 when the Wildcats were No. 17. And Florida, No. 17 in the 1984 preseason poll, returned for the first time since then by blanking Syracuse 16-0.

Michigan dropped out by losing to Michigan State 19-7, UCLA disappeared after a 23-21 loss to Stanford and Vanderbilt, which made the rankings last week for the first time since 1958, fell out after bowing to Tulane 27-23.

Alabama Again Is Entertainer Of Year

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama's bouncy fiddle music and soft love songs won the group a record third entertainer of the year award, and guitarist Chet Atkins won top instrumentalist for the seventh time at the 18th Country Music Association ceremonies. The award pushed Alabama past Barbara Mandrell for most awards as top entertainer. Miss Mandrell, who missed Monday night's ceremonies because of injuries sustained in a car accident but was shown at home via remote camera, won entertainer of the year in 1980 and 1981. "We don't take entertainer of the year lightly," said Alabama lead singer Randy Owen. "We are going to make plans tomorrow to make you proud you voted for us."

Miss Mandrell, Lee Greenwood, Ronnie Milsap and the Oak Ridge Boys were finalists for the top honor. The award presented at the Grand Ole Opry house is based on excellence in all phases of country music.

Alabama was bolstered by the album "Roll On," which contains the hit singles "Roll On," "When We Make Love" and "If You're Gonna Play in Texas (You Gotta Have a Fiddle in the Band)."

Alabama guitarist Teddy Gentry was thankful that country music had provided him with a good job. "I don't want to have to go back to laying carpet for a living," Gentry said at a news conference.

Monday night's winners were chosen by the 8,000 singers, musicians, songwriters and other country music professionals who belong to the CMA — the industry's trade association.

Greenwood, a former casino dealer who scored this year with the hit "God Bless the USA," was voted top male vocalist for the second straight year and told the crowd of 4,400 it was the birthday of his mother Bliss.

"I know the true meaning of bliss," he said, adding later that his mother was in California watching the show.

A tearful Reba McEntire, who sings hard-core country music, received a standing ovation when she was chosen top female vocalist.

"This is for me and mama," she said, adding that her career was the dream of her mother, who was in the audience.

The only double winner was Anne Murray, who won single of the year and album of the year for "A Little Good News." They were her first CMA awards after 14 years of trying.

"I'd have been more than happy and satisfied with just one; this is just wonderful," she said.

Instrumentalist-songwriter Floyd Tillman, 69, best known for his 1949 song "Slippin' Around," and the late country music publisher Ralph S. Peer were voted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"I love you so much it hurts," said Tillman.

Peer, who founded the Southern Music Publishing Co. and Peer International Corp., died in 1960 at age 67.

Atkins was voted top instrumentalist for the fourth year in a row and the seventh time overall. "I've got to be the luckiest guy in the world, I guess," he said.

Willie Nelson and Julio Iglesias were voted vocal duo of the year.

The Statlers won vocal group of the year for the ninth time, ending Alabama's three-year hold on the award, and the Ricky Skaggs Band was voted instrumental group of the year for the second consecutive year.

Mr. T's Family Sues, Balks At His Account Of Homelife

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Filming an "A-Team" segment from behind an artillery bunker, Mr. T was in an appropriate spot to talk about the charges being hurled at him.

"Everybody wants to sue Mr. T," he said. "What they don't realize is that after being sued by your brother, everything else is easy."

He paused, then added, "I can't tell you why my family is suing me. They're suing me because I've got money. They didn't sue me when I didn't have any money."

Mr. T, who was shooting a scene for the hit NBC adventure-comedy "The A-Team" on a cliff in San Pedro, is being sued for $70,000 by his brother Gus Tero of Chicago for breach of an employment contract.

Gus and another brother, Nate, had worked for Mr. T as bodyguards until last spring. Nate quit and Gus was fired, which is the basis of his suit.

Mr. T has just published his autobiography, "Mr. T: The Man With the Gold," but Nate and Gus and three of his sisters told People magazine the legend of "Mr. T" is hokum.

They said his autobiography was more fiction than fact, that he wasn't the do-gooder he claimed to be. Nate Tero said, "He don't just take the truth and stretch it. He turns it inside out."

His sister, Angie Tero, reached by telephone in Chicago, told The Associated Press, "We look on the book as being a complete lie. Statements made about the family are just not true." She said tales of his taking vengeance on neighborhood criminals who robbed his mother and stealing food for the family did not happen.

She said the book and earlier statements by Mr. T had caused dissension in the family. "When I tried to call him on the phone he wouldn't accept my calls," she said.

Mr. T, his thick neck almost hidden by dozens of gold chains, declined to reply to any of the allegations. He said his next book, to be called "My Brother's Keeper, the Untold Story," would give the details.

"I will not give the press and the public the satisfaction of me cutting down my brothers," he said. "There's nothing in the world that will make me stoop low and say something bad about my brothers. And sisters. I cannot tell the world that I love a God I've never seen and hate and despise brothers and sisters that I see every day."

"So, I'll be like Jesus. If people say bad things about me, I'll say nothing. My family says I'm lying. I say that's what they say. I don't defend. I notice one thing. When I gave $25,000 to Jerry Lewis (for muscular dystrophy) it wasn't in the papers. You didn't print it when I gave $17,000 to the Marva Collins Westside School, so 60 poor black kids could go to school."

Mr. T went on to describe charitable contributions totaling $87,000, plus support of the Mr. T Children's Research Foundation in Cleveland.

Sitting in his dressing room, he said, "When they talk about how I treat my mother, I laugh. The Bible tells us to honor thy mother and father."

People quoted Nate Tero as saying Mr. T had given $29,000 toward a new home for his mother, then took it back without explanation. He said he had also imposed the condition that his parents live together. His mother and father, the Rev. Nathaniel Tureaud Sr., were divorced more than 20 years ago.

Mr. T. zoomed from virtual obscurity to one of television's most popular personalities with his role as B.A. Baracus on "The A-Team."

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

In a recent issue of the "Goren Bridge Letter," we bemoaned the fact that many inexperienced players are in a rush to adopt any new bidding convention that becomes popular, regardless of its merit or whether it fits in with the rest of their methods. Unfortunately, all too often this is at the cost of many bridge fundamentals.

For example, the success or failure of South's three no trump contract hinges on a basic defensive play. Yet many players have muddled through a bridge career without ever bothering to understand this simple technique.

North-South arrive at a fairly normal three no trump contract.

West makes the standard opening lead of the fourth-best of his longest and strongest suit — spades. East wins the king of spades and returns the eight, which declarer covers with the 10. How should West defend?

Basic defensive carding is for a defender to return his highest remaining card if he started with three cards in partner's suit, and his lowest from an original holding of four. Obviously, East cannot have two cards higher than the eight. Therefore, he must have started with three spades and declarer with four.

If West captures the 10 with the jack, declarer will get home regardless of whether West continues spades or not — declarer will always have a stopper in the suit and West has no side entry. But see what happens if West allows the 10 to win!

Declarer cannot come to nine tricks without diamond tricks. When the diamond finesse loses, East still has a spade to return and now West can cash three more spades to defeat the contract one trick.

Stapled Stomach Helps Youth Lose

NEPTUNE, N.J. (AP) — William "Richie" Richardson, who came into the world 14 years ago weighing 6 pounds, 7 ounces, ate so much that by age 6 he was wearing a "Please do not feed" tag and by age 13, he had topped 300 pounds.

But now he has learned to control his appetite following a life-saving operation by doctors who stapled his stomach and helped him lose more than 100 pounds.

He keeps the size 54 pants he wore before the July 19, 1983, surgery in his mother's room.

"Everytime I start to eat something I'm not supposed to, I look at my old pants," said Richardson, who now weighs 204 pounds and has a 42-inch waist.

"I run faster playing football. I don't fall asleep too much," he said Monday.

"I have confidence in myself and I don't eat. By this time next year, I hope to be down to 150 pounds."

"He's doing just fine," said Dr. Aristotle Lekacos, a general surgeon at Jersey Shore Medical Center, where the operation was performed.

Doctors had told Richardson, who then weighed 318 pounds, and his parents that respiratory arrest or another ailment exacerbated by his obesity could claim his life within five to 10 years.

His mother, Pearl, said things have changed from the days when, at age 6, Richardson's 100-pound weight prompted doctors to put a "Please do not feed" tag around his neck.

She said her son used to come home from school and go "right to sleep."

"We'd go to church and he'd go to sleep during the church service," she said. "Now he's on the go so much it's hard for me to catch up with him."

During the operation, Lekacos partitioned Richardson's stomach with two rows of stainless steel staples so that most food he eats passes through his system without being absorbed.

Fiery Crash Kills All Aboard Private Jet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Authorities investigating the crash of a private jet said the plane's tail apparently hit the runway on take-off, sparking an explosion that killed at least two and possibly as many as five people and hurled blazing debris for a half-mile.

There were no survivors, and none of the victims was immediately identified, Wilson said.

The crash happened in the southwest part of the airport. Weather conditions at the time were broken clouds at 800 feet, Wilson said.

Royal Visit Leaves Tall Tales Behind

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Security head-aches and telephone calls aside, it can be "great fun" — and certainly memorable — to have a member of the royal family as a house guest, according to Kentuckians who have hosted Queen Elizabeth II's relatives.

While former hosts say the queen and her family tend to be perfect guests and easy to please, their stays do provide some colorful anecdotes.

There was Capt. Mark Phillips, the queen's son-in-law, who tossed another guest's hat inside a tent during a fancy party last spring and then shinned up a tent post to retrieve it.

And Princess Margaret, whose trip to the Kentucky Derby prompted vague threats and an army of more than 100 extra security people.

And Prince Philip, who once shunned an equine competition for a televised Muhammad Ali boxing match and a cold beer.

The latest royal visit has turned things topsy-turvy for William S. Farish III and his wife Sarah, who put up with Secret Service searches for weeks before the queen arrived Sunday for a horsewoman's holiday in the bluegrass country.

So did the folks at Keeneland Race Course, Blue Grass Airport and nearly a dozen other thoroughbred farms on the queen's itinerary. An expert owner who has loved horses since she was a toddler, Elizabeth is sizing up 50 to 60 stallions as possible mates for her 23 broodmares.

"We aren't supposed to talk about it," a receptionist at Walmac Farm, which the queen toured Monday, said of the elaborate security preparations. She also refused to give her name.

When the Farishes began receiving dozens of phone calls from an inquisitive press, they hired a public relations firm. Instead of answering the calls, they issued a press release.

Since most aspects of a royal visit are casual and somewhat routine, the lighter moments stand out long after the regal entourage has departed.

Marylou Whitney, wife of eminent horseman Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, found that Phillips, husband of Princess Anne, wasn't all pomp and ceremony last May.

During a party held in conjunction with the Rolex International Three-Day Event, Phillips tossed a guest's hat around. When it became lodged in the eaves of the party tent, he shinned up a pole and knocked it loose with a woman's parasol.

"You go to some good ones and some bad ones," Phillips said of the evening.

Mrs. Whitney said her guest "required little in service" and especially enjoyed the picnic lunches prepared by the Whitneys' kitchen staff. "When Mark comes, it's like having our children back," she said. "He's the most marvelous house guest in the world."

Then there was the 1974 visit of Princess Margaret, who, with the Earl of Snowdon, then her husband, stayed with the Whitneys for the 100th Kentucky Derby.

Mrs. Whitney, who had added a few staff members, was suddenly confronted by legions of police officers and security guards when there was a vague telephone threat against Elizabeth's sister.

The wealthy horsewoman found herself operating a 24-hour kitchen and setting up dormitories and outdoor coffee stations.

Despite the hubbub, she said, the princess was a cozy person and they had "great fun." The two women sat on the sun porch, took off their shoes and chatted "like two children who had grown up together, or like a class reunion," Mrs. Whitney said.

Prince Philip stayed with Charles Payson and his wife Joan, whose offer of the master bedroom was turned down by security people. The Paysons live in a guest cottage on the grounds of Payson Stud.

When the prince walked through the house and saw the rooms, "he put his hands behind his back in his typical fashion and said, 'Ummm, wonder why they put me in this room?' Then he said, 'Ummm, again,'" Mrs. Payson said.

He walked into the assigned bedroom, took the queen's picture off the nightstand where his valet had put it and carried it to the master bedroom.

One night the prince left an equine competition so he could watch Muhammad Ali box on television. He came home, took off his tie and took a beer from the refrigerator, Mrs. Payson said.

"He could not have been more casual and gracious," Mrs. Payson said.

Queen Takes Quick Look At Stallions

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II got right down to business on her horsewoman's holiday in the Kentucky bluegrass, appraising a parade of stallions at one of the dozens of thoroughbred breeding farms that dot the region.

And though her visits to gently rolling, neatly fenced stud farms this week are private, the queen scheduled a 10-minute photo session today during an inspection of mares at Lane's End Farm, the 1,400-acre spread of her hosts, William S. Farish III and his wife, Sarah.

The queen was to watch the mares in a walking ring, said Charles V. Anson, a British Embassy spokesman. "The mares will be led from the yearling barn around the ring and back again," he said Monday.

The queen has three horse farms in Britain, owns 23 broodmares and has 25 horses in training and racing under the royal silks. She planned to spend most of her first visit to Kentucky, 5 1/2 days that began Sunday afternoon, examining stallions for possible breeding to her broodmares, according to Lord Henry Porchester, her racing manager.

"She is very much enjoying her time here," her press secretary, Michael Shea, said Monday. "I don't think she can help but be impressed by the scenery she saw."

On Monday, she toured Farish's farm, partly on foot, Shea said. "She prefers to walk everywhere. She is, as is very well known, a great walker."
