Congress Paves Final Way To Adjournment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers were ready to adjourn the 98th Congress today, confident President Reagan would sign a catch-all money bill that was drained of every single water project to prevent a veto.

Following House approval by a 252-60 vote Wednesday night, only today's scheduled Senate vote was needed to send the bill to the White House. But before Congress could leave, senators also had to vote to extend the government's borrowing authority.

The spending measure, which will keep most government agencies operating in the 1965 fiscal year, imposes a moratorium on aid to Nicaraguan rebels and makes it unlikely that the assistance will be reinstated next year. The administration opposes the language.

But without the bill, the government faced another partial shutdown Friday like the half-day furlough for 500,000 federal workers last week. The fourth in a series of temporary spending bills that kept the government running since Oct. 1 expires at midnight tonight.

House and Senate conferees finally reached agreement on the omnibus spending bill Wednesday after a week of gridlock that kept Congress in session an extra week and forced postponement of numerous re-election campaigns.

Negotiators saved the toughest part for last, giving up cherished programs for ports, municipal water supplies, barge locks and dams.

"They really bit the bullet," said Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., senior Republican on the House Appropriations Committee.

But in fact they had little choice, with President Reagan insisting he would veto a bill containing the water projects. When the projects evaporated, the threat apparently dried up too.

"There's no way he can veto it. He'd be murdered. There'd be a revolution up here," Conte said.

Added deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, "It sounds like a promising bill. It sounds like the kind of bill the president would ask for. But we'll take a final look (today)."

Dorothy Brannan Teacher Of Year

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dorothy M. Brannan, a veteran educator now in her 35th year of teaching in public schools, has been chosen Greenville's "Teacher of the Year" for the 1984-85 school year.

"I was very surprised, and naturally very pleased, especially since the choice comes from my fellow teachers," Mrs. Brannan said.

"This is my 22nd year teaching at Rose High," Mrs. Brannon commented. "I teach social studies, world studies and government." She said the names of subjects had changed somewhat since her early days of teaching, "but now teaching is easier for us. We have less students and more assistance in many ways.

"When I first began teaching in the Windsor schools, where I taught for 12 years before coming to Greenville, I had 40 to 50 students with no aides, and was teaching all kinds of subjects, math, history, science."

Today, she indicated, teaching is much more specialized. "In my courses in government, for example, I teach the subject at four levels, an honors course, a college preparation course, a basic course and a special course."

A native of Cape Hatteras, Mrs. Brannan is married to Oscar W. Brannan, a math teacher at East Carolina University. "He has never spoiled me by helping me grade papers or anything of that nature," she smiled. "We both work on our teaching duties at home, but we keep our work separated."

She is a member of the North Carolina Association of Educators and the National Educators Association, as well as of Delta Kappa Gamma, a national honorary society "and a national education society.

"I am a Methodist," she said, "and still have my membership at the church I joined years ago at Cape Hatteras. However, I attend a local church much more often than going back home to attend church."

Reading, Mrs. Brannan explained, "is my favorite pasttime, especially historical fiction, traditional or contemporary."

She is a graduate of East Carolina University, where she earned both bachelor and master's degrees.

As teacher of the year for the Greenville schools, Mrs. Brannan will compete with other teachers in a 17-county northeastern District Teacher of the Year competition. If selected for that honor, she will subsequently compete in the annual competition for the North Carolina Teacher of the Year.

Local Barbecue Honors Perry

By SUE HINSON

Baseball, friendship, politics and the status of eastern North Carolina highway construction were topics of discussion at a barbecue held in honor of retired pitcher Gaylord Perry in the front yard of Mr. and Mrs. W.M. (Booger) Scales' Pinecrest Drive home Wednesday.

Among state and local officials attending the luncheon for Perry was gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten who, in a brief speech from the host's front porch, promised "that your good buddy won't forget you when he gets in office."

In a later interview held before the party broke up, Edmisten commented on accusations leveled by Republican opponent Jim Martin that if elected he (Edmisten) would favor highway construction in the western part of the state. The Martin accusation appeared in a recent Daily Reflector advertisment featuring a segment of an article published in the Sept. 19, 1983, edition of the Hickory Daily Record which quoted Edmisten as saying: "A high priority would be road building and maintenance in western N.C. The eastern portion of the state in the past has been favored financially because it is more populous ... If elected governor, I will favor my local area ... So we get our fair share and more."

Calling the allegation "bull," Edmisten said he was "accustomed to junk like that."

"I know there will be slander and distortions of the truth, but I don't think you build up your chances by tearing someone else down. I learned a long time ago under a great man ... Sam Ervin, that if you have to tear someone down to get where you're going, then it's not worth it."

Edmisten said he recognized the need for and priority of improvement of highway systems in both the east and west. When questioned about possibilities of funding for the remaining Farmville gap in the Wilson-to-Greenville 264 project, Edmisten said, "It should be obvious that I cannot make a pledge. I said long ago that I would not put all my road eggs in one basket. However, the need has been there for years

Edmisten Says Charges Untrue

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten, attending a North Tar River Fellowship gathering near Greenville late Wednesday afternoon, responded to charges made earlier Wednesday by a spokesman for Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin.

Jack Hawke, campaign chief for Martin, said that "Edmisten used his office in an attempt to aid a Wilson man involved in a suit ... a man who had given campaign contributions to Edmisten, including $6,000 in the names of his minor children."

"This charge again shows their desperation by making up something that never existed as they report it," Edmisten commented. "I'm glad the Republicans have brought this up so that it can once more be aired and cleared. The charges absolutely are not true. It's scandalous for anyone to say these charges are correct."

The Republican charges center around John Bolt Jr., a Wilson businessman who gave a total of $10,000 to Edmisten's campaign. Bolt, according to Hawke, prior to making contributions to Edmisten's campaign, was the subject of a suit against Michelin Tire Corp. The suit was on appeal until a brief on behalf of Bolt's company was filed in the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Edmisten's request, according to Hawke's statement. The appeals court subsequently reversed the low-court ruling.

Asheboro attorney Alan Pugh was quoted in the Republican charges as saying, "There was no reason for North Carolina taxpayers to pay Edmisten and his staff to represent a large corporation that can afford its own counsel."

"Our office (the Attorney General's Office) has joined in hundreds of cases like this when North Carolina businesses were threatened by outside sources," Edmisten said. "Our office has done the same kind of things for firms such as the Hanes Company, a Raleigh drug firm and many others, large and small."

Referring to the matter of the $6,000 contribution on behalf of Bolt's minor children, Edmisten said, "It's well known publicly that as soon as I was informed of this situation, I immediately took the matter before the State Board of Election, sought their advice. At their direction, the $6,000 was turned over to the North Carolina General Fund.

"I personally had no idea at all the donation was from minors. After all, the ages of contributors are not listed on checks."

Former U.S. senator and former N. C. Attorney General Robert Morgan, one of those attending the Wednesday fellowship meeting, commented briefly on the Mondale campaign, which he heads in North Carolina. "I feel real good about the Mondale campaign at this point, because the Mondale I've known for years is the man the public saw in the debate with Reagan last Saturday night.

"I think we will see a real change in the direction of the campaign now that people know, understand the issues and how Mondale stands on them."

The Mondale-Reagan debate, Morgan feels, "was a pivotal point, the first time that Mondale had a chance to fully show his ability, his depth, and at the same time, what Reagan is up to.

"Democrats in North Carolina have good reason to support Mondale. One important thing is that he is a man who has long supported American farm programs."

Another of the guests at the fellowship gathering, Democratic state House Speaker Liston Ramsey said that, "We naturally hope to gain more Democrats in this election. The fact is that things being what they are, we may very well lose a

Misunderstanding Can Sour Second Marriage

DEAR ABBY: I have a sticky situation I could use some help with. I'm divorced with three kids—18, 17 and 11. I've raised them with no child support for the last eight years.

I want to marry a nice guy I'll call Sam. He also married before and has two kids, now 11 and 12, by Doris, his ex-wife. Doris is married again and has a 3-year-old daughter (Suzy) by her present husband. She's expecting another baby any minute.

In the past, Sam has been taking his kids every other weekend. Ever since Suzy has been old enough to walk, Doris has been sending her along to Sam's with his two kids. He has had to stop and pick up Pampers and milk for Suzy, who isn't even his! Sam feels that he should continue to pick up Suzy after we're married. I feel Doris would just be using me, and if she could get away with sending Suzy to me, she would probably send the next kid, too.

I'm 36, have a good job and I like my peace and quiet. I love Sam, and don't have any trouble welcoming his 11- and 12-year-old kids, but I'll be darned if I'm going to baby-sit his ex-wife's kids by her second husband so she can have a free weekend. By the way, Doris doesn't work.

Do you think I'm being selfish and unreasonable?

HATES TO BE USED

DEAR HATES: Absolutely not. You have no obligation to Doris' children by her second husband, and neither has Sam. I urge you to settle this with Sam before you marry him. It's just this type of "misunderstanding" that can sour a second marriage.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm a sophomore in high school. I tried out for cheerleading and I didn't mess up even once. Everybody who saw me try out said I was really good—much better than the girls who were picked—so I really feel that it wasn't fair.

I know I should be a good sport and pretend I don't care, but, Abby, this was the most important thing in my life and I do care. Please help me.

POOR LOSER

DEAR POOR LOSER: You tried and lost, which is nothing to be ashamed of. There are no good losers—just good actors. Keep practicing and try again. Maybe next year you'll get the jump on the competition.

* * *

DEAR READERS: Here are some statistics that will blow you away. In 1980, handguns killed:

— 77 people in Japan,
— 8 in Great Britain,
— 24 in Switzerland,
— 8 in Canada,
— 23 in Israel,
— 18 in Sweden,
— 4 in Australia,
— 11,522 in the United States.

We must be doing something wrong.

If you want to help keep handguns out of the wrong hands, and stop handgun crime before it stops you, send a few bucks to: Handgun Control Inc., 1400 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 10005.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns my 13-month-old grandson. My son-in-law plays with him like this: He holds him by his ankles, head down, then swings him around pretending he's an airplane. The child is so dizzy after this, he can't stand up or walk right away. The poor little fellow gasps for air and sometimes laughs and cries hysterically. I'm so afraid he'll be hurt. I can't stop thinking about this.

My daughter doesn't say anything because her husband doesn't accept criticism very well.

I'm sure my son-in-law loves his son—he just doesn't know how to play with him. Print this. He reads your column and it might help.

CONCERNED GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Please don't leave so serious a matter to chance. Tell your daughter that she absolutely must inform her husband that his kind of "play" could seriously damage the child, and he must stop it! If she's afraid to tell him, then you tell him. And if he gives you an argument, insist that he call the pediatrician for verification of your statement. If he refuses, then you call your local child abuse authorities and report him.

BEER MUFFINS

1 cup buttermilk biscuit mix
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
¼ cup room-temperature flat beer
12 one-quarter-inch cubes cheddar cheese

In a medium bowl, with a fork, stir together biscuit mix, oil and beer until mix is moistened. Using a level tablespoon for each, spoon into buttered muffin-pan cups (each 1¾ inches across top and ¾-inch deep). Press a cheese cube into center of each so cheese shows. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake on rack below center in a preheated 450-degree oven until a cake tester inserted off center comes out clean — 8 minutes. Serve at once to preserve the interesting malt flavor. Makes 12. Wall Systems Can Help Solve Space Problem

By The Associated Press

The average home is adequate for most possessions and activities without too many compromises or contortions.

Sometimes, however, the objects to be stored are simply too multifarious for the available space. That's when custom wall systems may be the only answer.

Despite their expense, such systems are ideal when space is minimal and needs are maximal.

In Europe, where they have been short of space for centuries, such systems are in common use, says Werner Meier, who imports from West Germany. Meier is convinced that many Americans — especially city dwellers — will eventually live with such furnishings.

The secret to their excellent function is specialized storage components and the use of modular sections that can turn corners, go up to the ceiling, cross in front of a window, bridge a door or change height and depth as needed.

Among storage options that fit the components for use in virtually any room are open and closed shelving, drawers, cabinets to store television and home audio components, record and tape organizers, drop-lid bars and desks, drawers for silverware, lighted glass display shelves and pull-out storage bins.

Often, units contain a safe with a combination look, clothing wardrobes of various dimensions fitted with hanging bars, shelves, shoe-storage compartments and other specialized storage devices. Fold-out beds and tables, file cabinets, computer cabinets, speaker cabinets, paned-glass doors and secretarial units are also among options offered by at least one such system.

Since the ready-made systems are not dependent on walls for support, they can go virtually anywhere. Obstructions such as windows, doorways, heating ducts and radiators, electrical outlets and light switches can be incorporated into a completed wall simply by building around them.

Special moldings, panels, door and window bridges and trim are available for this purpose.

With so many options, one of the most difficult aspects to using the systems (aside from paying for them) is working out exactly what you want and need.

As a general rule, Jane Meier, who helps customers plan systems for their special needs, feels that an individual unaccustomed to working with a wall system should seek the services of an experienced planner.

An interior designer or retailer specializing in wall storage systems is often the proper person to see.

It helps if you have measured the available space first and determined a budget. (As a general guideline, Meier's "Planum" system might cost about $6,000 to $7,000 installed for a 12-foot wall. Outfitting an entire room with oceans of storage and including a fold-down table and bed could run as high as $20,000.)

You should have clearly in mind what you need to store and know approximately how much of it you have. For example, if books are to be stored, measure the number of running feet of shelving you will need and allow some space for additions.

You should count the glasses, silver or china you plan to store, enumerate the pairs of shoes, hats and suits, says Jane Meier.

"I can't stress too much that it is important not to make a quick decision. There is lots to consider and you should make detailed lists," she says.

"Some people feel foolish counting all their possessions, but the more planning you do the better it works out. The best systems are usually a collaboration between client and planner. It can take several sessions over a few days to plan the right system," she adds.

Once you've done your work, the system should last a lifetime. When you move, it can be dismantled and reassembled perhaps in a different configuration somewhere else, she says.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

If there's one thing I can't stand, it's being accused of being sexist . . . especially when the accuser has a point.

A few columns back, I pointed out the need for a greeting card inviting dawdling husbands to dinner. I think I said there is something Pavlovian about the words, "DIIINAAAAAAH!" that sends men scurrying to clean out the medicine chest, trim their toenails and set the garbage cans out at the curb.

It has now been pointed out that a specialized greeting card should also be sent by men who are in a hot/cold car with all the kids waiting for the woman of the house who is inside doing God knows what.

Okay, okay! But you have to understand the way a woman's mind works. A woman is the last one out of the house because when she leaves it, it is always with the possibility it will be the last time she will ever see it. The next one to view it could be strangers.

That's why the faucets have to be turned off, all the toys picked up off the floor, the garbage from the sink wrapped and put in a bag, water from the floor mopped up and 15 lights extinguished. (There are more at night.)

The beds that someone sat on to answer the phone have to be smoothed out, the towels hung up from the floor, the soap retrieved from the shower drain, the top put on the shampoo tube, water for the dog set out, the sliding doors locked, the water spigots turned off for the washer, magazines stacked neatly on the coffee table, and a note written for the cleaner in case you get home late.

The thermostat has to be adjusted, the draft in the fireplace closed, the garden hose coiled neatly so no one will trip over it, and the iron unplugged.

Extra nose tissue has to be packed and any medication, tickets, picnic supplies, sunglasses, eyeglasses or anything else that's forgotten. Extra car keys are packed and maybe rain gear in case it looks cloudy.

The hall carpet has to be smoothed out, the pictures straightened, dead leaves removed from all the plants, the kitchen chairs shoved under the table and a last-minute check to see if the hamster cage is secure.

The second to the last thing she must do is FLUSH!

As a husband sits in the car, honking on the horn, racing the motor and shouting, "What are you doing in there?" a woman performs her last ritual — calling whoever they are going to visit and telling them they're going to be late.

Bail Out

There was a time when candidates who lost for governor in the Democratic primary immediately announced their loyalty to the party and pledged their full suppport in the November elections.

Some still do. Apparently, however, Eddie Knox, who lost the Democratic gubernatorial nomination to Rufus Edmisten, does not give two hoots for the party which gave him so many opportunities.

Knox was quite unhappy following his loss to Edmisten. Now he has put further distance between the Democratic Party and himself by endorsing Republican Ronald Reagan for re-election as president.

Knox told Reagan, who visited Charlotte recently, "This state must not put down good leadership." At the rally Sen. Jesse Helms announced that Knox would become national co-chairman of the Democrats for Reagan-Bush Committee.

It is Eddie Knox' privilege to support the Republican national ticket, we suppose. However, the Democratic party was good enough for him when he was in the Legislature and certainly the party was acceptable when he chose to run for the Democratic nomination for governor. Perhaps as he assesses his political future Knox should be considering the good things that the Democratic Party has done for North Carolina. We all do not bail out when things do not go exactly our way.

History

The logic of observing certain holidays in conjunction with a weekend is sound; but somewhere a line has to be drawn.

Marking Columbus Day, for instance, on Monday (Oct. 8) was confusing to many people ... turning ahead their mental calendar to Oct. 12 and upsetting their whole week.

(Thank Goodness the Fourth of July will always fall on July 4!)

History records absolutely nothing of earth-shaking importance happening on Oct. 8, 1492 ... a day like many other days; yet it was "Columbus Day" for this year.

On that very ordinary day the admiral was arguing with his crews about turning back to Spain. No, the sailors were not much concerned about "falling off the edge of a flat world." They were concerned about prevailing winds which were from east to west, a terrible handicap on a return voyage.

Eventually, on Oct. 10, Columbus and his men agreed to continue three more days and if there was no sight of land they would turn back.

As all the world has long since known, at 2 a.m. on Oct. 12 a lookout shouted land had been sighted.

It forever changed the known geography of the world. It changed history.

As for Oct. 8, 1492, it was a day to be forgotten. In our book, Oct. 12 is still Columbus Day.

Seeing The Problems Of The Old

WASHINGTON — They sat patiently in the ornate committee room, waiting their turn to testify: Ruth Clark, 97, of Warwick, R.I., and Rosina Tucker, 103, of Washington, D.C. Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa had invited them to appear before his subcommittee on aging in the hope that appearances by two spunky old women might make the evening news.

As it turned out, other stories of more immediate interest dominated the news at night, but Grassley and his colleagues are on the right track. They are trying to promote public understanding of a social problem that is developing more rapidly than most persons are aware. It is the problem of the "old" folks, meaning those over 65 years of age, and more critically it is the problem of the "old old" — those over 75.

There are more than 25 million oldsters. They make up 11 percent of our population, and they constitute the fastest-growing segment of American society. Their numbers will grow fairly modestly for the next 25 years, to about 32 million in 2000 and 35 million in 2010. Then the baby boom that followed World War II will explode. By 2020, which is not so very far away, the old folks' ranks will reach 45 million. The question the Senate subcommittee is trying to frame can be simply put: What kind of life will these old folks lead?

If all of them were possessed of the vitality and grit of the two witnesses last week, perhaps there would be no problem. Ruth Clark, the younger of the two, attributed her long life to her wide-ranging interests. Through the years she had delved into music, drawing, wildlife and various fields of science. At 67 she bought a Ford coupe and drove to California. At 81 she took a trip to Spain. At 82 she enrolled in a night course in oceanography. Now, at 97, she reads The New Republic, supports the American Civil Liberties Union, roots for the Boston Red Sox and delights in bird watching.

Rosina Tucker's father was born a slave; he took up the trade of shoemaking; at a time when few blacks had access to formal education, somehow he taught his children to read and write. She learned to play the piano and organ. As a young woman she was part of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from its formation.

Her husband was a Pullman porter, and she became active in the work of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. She has written her memoirs. Some of us youngsters at the press tables were saying a prayer that if we make it to 103, we will have a voice as steady and a hand as firm.

Not all the elderly are so fortunate. Be J. Soldo, professor of gerontology at Georgetown University, estimates that roughly one-fourth of the old and the "old old" are at or below the poverty line. One-third of them are poorly housed. Beyond the age of 75 their problems of health care grow steadily more serious, and more expensive.

It is not as if there were no governmental assistance for the aged. By one count, nearly 200 federal programs benefit them in some way.

There appear to be 31 separately funded programs of transportation, administered by eight of the 12 executive departments. On the day of Grassley's hearings, the Senate was giving final approval to a bill that will greatly expand the aid provided under the basic Older Americans Act of 1965.

The principal benefit program, of course, is Social Security. The towering legislative question goes to the financing of benefits when millions of persons will live 20 or 30 years past the retirement age of 65. The burden of Social Security taxes, now at 13.7 percent of payroll, already arouses resentment among the labor force.

Our country has known some bitter conflicts, between North and South, farm and city, labor and management. The approaching conflict between young and old could be the most brutal of them all.

For the moment, perhaps nothing specific needs to be done about the social problems of 2000. Steps already have been taken gradually to extend the age of normal retirement from 65 to 67. The Medicare trust fund, which now pays out some $55 billion annually, is thought to be in good shape until 1994. The conflict today is like the cloud no bigger than a man's hand. But clouds and years have a way of moving with deceptive speed, and some hard thinking needs to be done before the storm hits.

Changes Urged In Education

To the editor:

The present political trend illustrates that we are evaluating the performance of our children in school based upon teachers' training, motivation and salary. Teachers' pay increased (deservedly) and there are noises about testing their competence and extending the school year (with another raise, hopefully).

What, exactly, is academic performance? I believe it to be the ability to demonstrate, through language, that we understand our environment and can solve problems. Consider the child whose parents have good language skills, enough money to provide a wide range of experiences, and see the importance of interpreting those experiences. This child will likely have traveled, have pictures on bedroom walls, and have parents willing to spend time reading and explaining things. Their parents probably did the same for them.

Now consider the child whose parents have little money, see little opportunity for themselves or their children, have weak language skills, and believe education to be the teachers' job. They may feel unable to help their children learn and avoid the embarrassment of parent-teacher conferences. Although this child will be encouraged to go to school, she/he will likely not have traveled far, bedroom walls will be bare, and being read to is a rare occurrence. Which of these children will do better on a standardized test?

There is no "quick political fix" for our schools. We need to focus attention on where children come from and return to each dav. Do not force our teachers into teaching test answers to demonstrate their worth at the expense of the education of our children. The "problem with education" is much deeper than politically convenient solutions centered upon teachers or schools. It's time to consider differences in background, encouragement and preparation childen bring from home.

To the editor:

Abortion is the most important issue in this election. For what is more important than life? Thousands of unborn children are being slaughtered every day, yet the news media is strangely silent about their plight. We may hear about the bludgeoning of baby seals, or the execution of a condemned criminal, yet there is no mention of our helpless unborn who are being so casually and violently exterminated.

And we have been so misinformed by the media! We are told that abortion counts before legalization were the same as they are today and that 10,000 women are dying each year from illegal abortions. Yet, according to Dr. Bernard Nathanson, a prominent ex-abortionist, these figures were fabricated in 1968 by the pro-abortion lobby he headed and then broadcast by the media (the principle of the Big Lie). In actuality, he states, only 100,000 abortions were taking place annually prior to legalization (compared to 1.5 million per year now) with 250 deaths per year from illegal abortions. Nathanson concludes that the 15-fold increase in abortions is now being used as a primary form of birth control because of legalization.

If children were killed out in plain view, we would be so outraged that nothing could stop us from action. Yet this hideous monster called abortion has destroyed the lives of 16 million unborn children since 1973 and we're so apathetic since it is done in secret. Worse still, 20 percent of the 31,000 abortions occurring annually in North Carolina are financed by our tax dollars (a fund of $1,374,500 to abort babies).

Find out where each candidate stands on abortion. Pro-choice equals pro-abortion. Our society has made a terrible and tragic mistake. We must correct it. Vote pro-life.

To the editor:

1984 is a strange year. In the past several weeks American soldiers have been killed in Lebanon, a cabinet member has been indicted on felony charges, and the president of the United States has made jokes about nuclear war. Despite these and other chilling events, Mr. Reagan remains popular and pollsters are predicting landslides.

In the book "1984," George Orwell described a totalitarian society in which history was rewritten and personality was the only requirement for leadership. Big Brother's smiling face was all that was needed to whip people into a frenzy of militant nationalism. This year we have a president who smiles kindly and wraps himself in God, the flag and motherhood while planning to put weapons in space and "morally correct" judges on the Supreme Court.

Although Mr. Reagan is a well-practiced actor, style may not triumph over substance. Most Americans have responded to questions of political preference by stating that Mr. Mondale's stand on key issues is closer to their own than Mr. Reagan's. Despite the nostalgic images appearing on television, many Americans will wake up and vote for ideas rather than images.

Voters Like Reagan And A Foe

LANSING, Mich. — Lower-middle-income voters of a weathervane precinct here like Ronald Reagan and his economic policies, but they support in even greater numbers the anti-Reagan Democrat who represents their swing district in Congress.

With Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, we interviewed in Lansing's Precinct 13 — an election barometer for both Michigan and the 6th Congressional District. We found massive support for President Reagan and Rep. Bob Carr, a militant liberal targeted nationally by Republicans.

A 23-year-old waitress supporting Reagan gave the two reasons most frequently cited for backing his re-election: "The economy has picked up and to be effective, you have to give someone more than four years to do it." Similarly characteristic of our interviews, she had trouble articulating her support for Carr: "I like the way he is doing what he is doing." Any other reasons? "No."

Although businessman Tom Ritter is viewed by Republican managers as an outstanding opponent for Carr, we found almost no awareness of him. That suggests Reagan's coattails are not nearly wide enough unless he were to come here and publicly associate himself with Ritter. But judging from answers to Caddell's questionnaires, even that might be too late.

Out of 62 registered and likely voters interviewed in their homes, Reagan was favored over Mondale 32 to 21 (with 9 votes undecided or favoring somebody else). But for Congress, Carr was favored by 40, with 10 for Ritter and 12 undecided.

Some political realignment seems underway in this neighborhood of senior citizens, young singles and growing families where the breadwinner works at the Oldsmobile plant. Despite heavy union membership in Precinct 13, only 24 voters interviewed professed Democratic loyalties (compared to 22 Republicans).

Of those 24 Democrats, a mere three voters preferred Reagan. The other Democrats echoed Fritz Mondale's latest speeches. "I think Mondale would do more for the poor and elderly," a 62-year-old janitor told us. "Reagan is a rich man's president." These Democratic voters asserted the country is on the wrong track and predicted economic recovery will be short-lived.

But there are no longer enough true-believing Democrats. Other voters, both independents and Republicans, were rosy in their outlook on the present and future. The 1970s assessment of voters that the presidency is too big for any one man to handle has disappeared. Reagan's economic policies were widely praised by these voters, and the war-and-peace issue does not hurt him. Although the nuclear arms race led all other issues as the country's biggest problem, that view was held by nearly as many Reagan supporters (7) as Mondale voters (8).

Apart from the issues, voter after voter volunteered personal disdain for Mondale. "I don't feel he's man enough for the job," said one of the Democratic defectors, the 60-year-old wife of an Oldsmobile worker. Indeed, a half-dozen voters said they were supporting Mondale because of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's presence on the ticket (though she was cited by a like number as a reason to back Reagan).

The worst news for Mondale may be that only six voters listed the deficit as the most important problem, and three of those back Reagan (compared to two for Mondale and one undecided). Reagan backers praised the president's tax cuts; Mondale's proposal for higher taxes scarcely helps him in Precinct 13. The substance of the pending Michagin "Voters Choice" tax-reduction proposal is favored 4-to-1.

Precisely this political climate is counted on by Republican strategists to do in Bob Carr, no friend of Reagan tax cuts. Only one voter (a Republican low-level business executive complaining about Carr's "100 percent union record") mentioned his background. A remarkable number of voters say they have met Carr, while none could fix any identity on Ritter.

The 38-year-old wife of another Oldsmobile worker, a Republican and Reagan backer, supports Carr "because I never heard anything about Ritter." A 75-year-old widow, calling herself a strong Democrat, voted for Jimmy Carter in 1980 but backs Reagan this time mainly because of Geraldine Ferraro and the abortion issue ("If she's a Catholic, why doesn't she act like one?"). But that does not rub off on Carr, pro-choice though he is on abortion. "He's not bad," the widow said of her congressman.

Strength For Today

According to the old proverb, opportunity is supposed to knock only once. But for most people, opportunity knocks often, in many forms, at many times, if we are only alert enough to recognize it and do something about it. The fault lies not in the chances we have, but in our failure to take advantage of them.

For the neglect of the opportunities which so often come our way arises not so much from our failure to recognize them as opportunities as from our failure to act upon them. Opportunities usually come not as a gift but as a challenge. We are given a chance to accomplish something, but the chance is all we are given. Opportunity often means sacrifice if we are to take advantage of it. The effort and ability we must provide ourselves. And here is where we so often fail.

Opportunities are many: people who seize them are few.

In The Area

Investigation

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today that he has asked the State Bureau of Investigation to help his department look into a Sept. 30 incident in Winterville in which special registration commissioners complained that they were kept from registering prospective voters.

Tyson's office initially investigated the complaint that the registration workers had been prohibited by the owners of Pinewood Village apartments from registering residents of the complex.

The sheriff said the owners of the development later agreed to allow the registration personnel to conduct their activities at Pinewood Village.

A local SBI spokesman confirmed today that his office is working with an assigned deputy sheriff in the matter, which stemmed from a complaint of intimidation of a registrar. The spokesman said findings of the investigation will be turned over to the district attorney's office.

Perry Receives Sentence

Former WITN television news director Bob Perry pleaded no contest in Pitt County Superior Court Wednesday to sex charges involved minors.

Charges of one count of dissemination (of pornographic material) to a minor and two counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor were consolidated for judgment. Judge David Reid gave Perry a three-year prison sentence suspended to 90 days active and five years special probation.

Reid instructed Perry to report to a mental health center or other psychiatric caregiver within 72 hours after he is released from prison. He was instructed not to be in the presence of anyone under 18 years old unless the child is accompanied by a responsible adult during the five-year period. He also was held responsible by the court to pay for any reasonable counseling for the minor children involved in the offenses for which he was tried.

Perry is now confined in the Pitt County Jail awaiting transfer to a state prison. A spokesman for WITN in Washington, N.C., said Perry was relieved Wednesday of his duties as news director.

Recreation Panel Considers Optional Employee Program

One report was presented, and two matters discussed at length at the October meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night.

In a report to commissioners, department executive director Boyd Lee explained that department employees have an option to volunteer for an Employee Wellness Program/Human Performance Lab being offered without charge by the city of Greenville. The basic concept of the program is designed to provide physical examinations to determine an individual's physical fitness. The program is under the auspices of the Human Performance Lab at East Carolina University.

The first discussion period was devoted to consideration of options open to commissioners on property consisting of land and a house donated earlier to the department. Three options are open: to lease the house and land; to move the house and use the land for recreational or park purposes; or to sell both the house and the land.

Commissioners will study the options and make a decision at a later meeting on which option to take.

Based on a request made by commissioners two years ago, an overview slide presentation of park and recreation facilities in Greenville has been prepared with the assistance of the Regional Development Institute.

The slide presentation was presented by Pat Keough, who has worked on combining slides and narrative into a total package. Commission members were asked to consider input in the form of suggestions for any changes or additions they feel will be helpful. The slide show at this point is considered in its final draft stage prior to adoption.

BILLY THE KID

A common misconception is that the "Kid's" real name is William Bonney. But, in fact, his given name is Henry McCarty. Sensationalized by press and ballads, the real Billy has eluded us for years.

His outlawry began during the range wars out of a fierce loyalty and vengeance for John H. Tunstall, who was like a father to Billy. Tunstall was murdered in cold blood by two posses working for James Dolan, who was attempting to monopolize a large percentage of the range.

Pat Garrett, a local sheriff, was once Billy's good friend. They were seen so much together that Garrett was called "Big Casino" and Billy "Little Casino." Billy was captured once by Garrett, but managed to escape. Garrett, believing that his reputation was tarnished, tracked the Kid to a brothel in Fort Sumner, New Mexico.

Garrett's first bullet struck just above the unsuspecting Kid's heart.

Name: William Henry McCarty
Alias: Billy Antrim, Kid Antrim, William H. Bonney, Billy Bonney, Billy "The Kid"
Height: Approx. 5 feet 10 inches

Martin Says Popularity Increasing

By The Associated Press

U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., says a poll commissioned by his campaign shows him trailing Attorney General Rufus Edmisten by five points, while Edmisten says charges made by Martin about campaign contributions shows his opponent's "desperation."

While campaigning in Greensboro Wednesday, Martin challenged a recent newspaper poll that showed him trailing by 13 percentage points in his quest to become North Carolina's second Republican governor this century.

During questioning at a Greensboro Rotary Club luncheon, he said a poll his campaign recently commissioned had him closing the gap on Edmisten, the Democratic nominee. It indicated he was behind by only five points.

A poll taken by The Charlotte Observer after the televised Sept. 30 gubernatorial debate, though, indicated he was trailing Edmisten 50 percent to 37 percent.

"That startled us," Martin said.

Previous polls had shown his popularity steadily rising while Edmisten's had declined just as steadily. In mid-September, a Gallup Poll commissioned by several state news organizations showed that Martin had trimmed that lead to 51 to 39.

The latest Charlotte Observer poll, though, had turned up an unexpected crimp in that progress, Martin said.

His organization commissioned a poll of its own to see "if they had found something we hadn't."

TASK FORCE — Members of the Women's Voter Task Force were urged Wednesday to vote Democratic in November. Left to right are Winnie Wood of Camden County, chairman of the N.C. Farm-City Week celebration; Lueta Sellers, chair of the Chowan County Democratic Party; Betty Speir, vice chairman of the N.C. Democratic Party and a member of the Democratic National Committee; Betty McCain of Wilson, co-chair of the Jim Hunt Committee and a member of the Democratic National Committee, and Grace Bonner, mayor of Aurora.

Women's Task Force Asks Voters To Go Democratic

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Women's Voter Task Force of 1984 held a news conference Wednesday to say that, in their opinion, "a Democratic vote in November is a vote for women and their families."

Task Force member Betty Speir, vice chairman of the N.C. Democratic Party, said this state has, in the past eight years, under a Democratic governor and a Democratic Legislature, seen $13.1 billion in industrial development — more than 200,000 new industrial jobs. Travel and tourism has also provided $3 billion to the state, she said. All of this translates into jobs, ability to pay for homes, and the like.

On the national scene she said Ronald Reagan and "his Republican allies, Jesse Helms and Jim Martin, have brought about the single largest obstacle to economic development in the history of this country: a soaring federal deficit that now tops $1.6 trillion."

She said Republican administration tax cuts have been designed to help the well-off, not the average and low-income taxpayer. "It is easy to see why, under the Republican administration, the incidence of poverty among households headed by women has risen to an alarming 40 percent," she said.

She said she fears some economists' predictions that the U.S. will undergo another recession next year or in early 1986, the result of the Republican administration's unfair tax and ecoomic policies.

She said women's educational and employment opportunities are good in North Carolina, but "our future will dim if we return Republicans to office in November."

Winnie Wood of Camden County, chair of the N.C. Farm-City Week celebration for the state, said the Republican administration has caused farm foreclosures to triple, farm equity to have fallen for the first time in 27 years, the average value of farmland to have fallen three years in a row.

She said state-level efforts at industrial and business development have improved the North Carolina farmer's lot.

Judge Lectures Jurors Who Will Hear Westmoreland Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge today lectured jurors hearing retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS, explaining that they must consider both the truth of the network's reporting and its state of mind at the time.

U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval told the jury that some of the evidence presented in the trial will deal with whether what CBS said is true, while some will deal with the network's state of mind when preparing to broadcast a documentary entitled "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception."

Leval used a chart to make his points, pointing with a cane he uses because of a leg injury. "I feel like I'm a law professor," he said.

Leval's lecture came before opening arguments, with Westmoreland's attorney, Dan N. Burt, scheduled first.

In the 992 days since CBS broadcast the program, Westmoreland has steadfastly denied its charge that he headed a "conspiracy" to present a false picture of the war.

The general, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, contends the network falsely and maliciously accused him of misleading President Lyndon Johnson and the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1967 on the strength of the communist opposition forces.

Those estimates of enemy strength, CBS reported, were passed on to Congress and the American public and helped the communists surprise the allied forces with the size of their Tet Offensive in 1968.

The other defendants in the suit are CBS News correspondent Mike Wallace, who narrated the documentary; George Crile, who produced it; and Sam Adams, a former CIA analyst who became a paid consultant to CBS.

Westmoreland is expected to call several high-ranking veterans of the Johnson Administration, including former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, ex-Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and former national security adviser Walt Rostow, to testify.

They will support Westmoreland's claim that Johnson was well aware of the dispute between military analysts, who placed enemy strength at about 300,000, and some CIA experts who believed it was twice as large, his attorney said.

CBS, too, will call many former military and civilian officials in an effort to prove the truth of the program's charges, the networks lawyers have said.

It took nearly two days for U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval to select the 12 regular and six alternate jurors who will hear the case. They will not be sequestered, but Leval warned them Wednesday not to read, watch or listen to anything about the case.

The suit has attracted intense coverage. Some 80 seats in the courtroom have been reserved for reporters, another 10 for sketch artists. A temporary press room has been opened at the U.S. Court House on Manhattan's Foley Square.

The network maintains no high U.S. official has ever been allowed to collect libel damages for reporting that dealt with with his official conduct, and that if Westmoreland wins it could have "chilling effects" on future journalistic efforts.

Westmoreland's lawyers contend the CBS program was a premeditated, personal attack on the general's reputation, not a valid critique of his professional work.

Congress Drops Water Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of its deal to get out of town, Congress has ditched consideration of 300 water projects that ultimately would cost up to $18 billion.

The action Wednesday further pushed back a growing list of proposed projects stymied for a decade by disagreements between Congress and the executive branch. And it led some on Capitol Hill to warn that national water resources — from city water supplies to coastal ports — are being threatened with obsolescence.

The projects, the kind of locally targeted spending often criticized as pork barrel, were killed for the year when the House dropped them from an emergency spending bill in the face of a threatened veto by President Reagan. The White House believes local governments and those who benefit from the projects should have to bear a greater share of their costs.

It was one of the rare occasions when the Reagan administration was supported by environmental groups, who see cost-sharing as a tool for weeding out environmentally damaging, fiscally unsound projects that would be built if federal largesse covered the full cost.

"Many of these projects would not survive" if local governments had to pay part of the cost, said David Conrad, a lobbyist for Friends of the Earth.

Worthwhile projects may be built under the present system, Conrad said, but priority goes to projects with powerful supporters in Congress whether the projects are worthy or not.

"We used to build post offices like this, but finally people got tired of it," he said. "What we're seeing is politics with a very small 'p,' water policy on the basis of congressional seniority and fealty to the Appropriations Committee leadership."

The dispute with the administration was not a new development.

Before President Reagan took office Congress quarreled with President Carter, who wanted the executive branch to review and set priorities for water project construction; Congress insisted that was its job, and their deadlock stopped any action.

Whatever the origin, the disputes have left the nation's water resources program in shambles for a decade. The last water project authorization bill was enacted in 1976; the last major nationwide construction authorization bill was passed in 1970.

As the disputes have dragged on, existing facilities have deteriorated or become outdated, with no replacements in sight.

On the 25,000-mile inland waterway system, the average age of the 194 existing barge locks is 40 years.

Josephine Drifts Northerly At Sea

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Josephine, packing 85 mph winds, continued its northward drift over the Atlantic Ocean today but posed no immediate threat to land, forecasters said.

"There are some small-craft warnings along the southeast U.S. coast, but it's no big deal," Miles Lawrence of the National Hurricane Center said early today. "The only marine interests that are presently being affected by the storm are the ships at sea that would get near the storm."

Josephine, the 1984 Atlantic season's third hurricane, was near latitude 29.4 north and longitude 72.5 west, or some 450 miles south-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., said a 6 a.m. EDT statement from the weather service.

"The hurricane is drifting toward the north at 5 mph and this motion is expected to continue today," the statement said.

Gales extended 250 miles from the hurricane's center.

"We feel as though it will continue to drift slowly in a general northerly direction for 24 to 48 hours," forecaster Bob Case said Wednesday night. "If anything, it may even stall out or become stationary because of a large high pressure system to the north."

Some slow strengthening was possible through Friday, forecasters said.

A hurricane watch for Eleuthera and Abaco islands was discontinued Wednesday evening.

Earlier Wednesday, Josephine prompted the Bahamian government to issue the watch for the north-central part of the island chain of 185,000 people.

After reviewing storm data Wednesday morning, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided to go ahead with Saturday's planned space shuttle landing at Cape Canaveral.

But space agency officials said if winds at the edge of the storm plagued Cape Canaveral on Saturday, the landing might be delayed another day.

High winds and rough seas caused by Josephine also disabled a sailboat, whose crew of six were rescued by a passing tanker, said Coast Guard spokesman Joe Gibson.

The 41-foot sailboat Covenant was on its way from Morehead City, N.C., to St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands on Tuesday when gale winds tore away its sails and 15-foot waves broke the centerboard, Gibson said.

The tanker Esso Melbourne was alerted by the Coast Guard and left its route to rescue the stranded crew. They will be dropped off at the tanker's next port of call, the Dutch island territory of Aruba off the Colombian coast, said Gibson.

Josephine was upgraded from tropical storm status Tuesday afternoon. Storms are reclassified as hurricanes when winds reach a sustained strength of 74 mph.

'At Least Slow Down,' Says Sign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Given pause by a dispute over whether a stop sign was needed at an intersection in their quiet suburb, officials of Garrett Park have reached a rather arresting compromise.

Two new signs placed at the corner of Argyle and Kenilworth avenues read: "At Least Slow Down (Formerly STOP)."

The town of about 1,200 residents, just north of Washington in suburban Maryland, is used to innovation: It was among the first towns in the country to mark its boundaries with signs saying "Nuclear Free Zone."

But when stop signs were proposed for Kenilworth and Argyle George Payne, one of five members of the Town Council, thought it unnecessary. He lost that battle on a 3-to-2 vote in January.

Stop signs were erected, but were stolen within 24 hours.

Then Payne came across a cartoon in the New Yorker by Donald Reilly that featured the novel wording, and suggested it as a compromise. The offer was accepted, and new diamond-shaped signs were installed.

Those signs, too, were stolen, but the latest ones, installed about a week ago, are anchored in concrete.

Mayor Peggy Pratt, who had opposed them saying traffic control is not a joking matter, says the signs seem to be working. "People have to stop to laugh," she said.

Premier Leaving

TORONTO, Ontario (AP) — Premier William Davis says he will leave office and step down as leader of the long-ruling Ontario Progressive Conservatives after a convention that will probably be held in January.

Davis, 55, did not say what he intends to do once he leaves politics, but indicated he would like to continue serving the public in some capacity.

There has been speculation that Prime Minister Brian Mulroney will offer Davis a prestigious post — possibly ambassador to the United States or Britain — in recognition of the premier's strong support during the recent federal election campaign.

Bush And Ferraro Set To Debate Tonight

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

With President Reagan put on the defensive over his age and Walter F. Mondale registering improved poll ratings, their seconds are poised to meet tonight for a nationally televised debate.

Vice President George Bush and Democratic challenger Geraldine Ferraro will face questions for 90 minutes in the second bout of a three-round match between the Republican and Democratic tickets. The debate at Philadelphia's Civic Center begins at 9 p.m. EDT.

Both have been immersed in serious study in preparation for their only confrontation, though Bush was taking time out to join Reagan today for lunch at the White House.

Fallout from last Sunday's Mondale-Reagan debate was still registering on the eve of the vice presidential debate. Mondale and Reagan exchanged barbs over their TV appearance and the White House scrambled to quell growing questions over the president's age and stamina.

Asked by reporters about statements that he appeared tired during the debate, Reagan showed irritation as he said, "No, I wasn't tired."

"And with regard to the age issue and everything," the president added, "if I had as much makeup on as he (Mondale) did, I'd have looked younger, too."

The 73-year-old former movie actor said he didn't wear makeup — "I didn't wear it when I was in pictures."

In Pittsburgh, Mondale, 56, returned the fire.

"This morning the president said the problem in the debate was makeup. That's the same answer Nixon gave," he said, referring to the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon debates.

"Mr. President, the problem isn't makeup on the face — it's the makeup on those answers that gave you problems," Mondale added.

Reagan was remaining in the White House today after his trip Wednesday to Michigan and appearance at schools outside Detroit. Mondale was heading today to Columbus, Ohio, and on to Miami.

Responding to the growing attention being focused on Reagan's age as a result of his halting performance Sunday, the White House released a report on Reagan's physical examination five months ago. Spokesman Peter Roussel declared it showed the president "in A-1 health."

Aides conceded there was nothing new in the health report, which repeated an earlier disclosure that the president has a small polyp in the colon and has suffered some hearing loss in one ear. The report said "no further treatment" was needed for the polyp.

The physician who supervised the tests at Bethesda Naval Medical Center, Capt. W.W. Karney, said it showed Reagan to be "mentally alert, robust," and appearing younger than his years.

Emboldened by his debate reviews and appearing fiestier with every appearance, Mondale declared in New York that Reagan has begun "sounding frantic" this week.

"It's just sort of machine-gun scattershot comments that really don't go to the issues," he said.

Mondale enjoyed another day of big crowds, appearing before an estimated 15,000 people at a lunchtime rally in Pittsburgh before going to New York, where he met with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Public opinion polls released on the eve of the vice presidential debates gave Mondale cause for hope — though Reagan still maintains a huge double-digit lead.

A CBS News-New York Times poll of 515 voters showed Mondale trimming 6 points off Reagan's margin in the last week, though Reagan still leads by 20 percentage points, 58-38, according to the survey.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll put Reagan's edge at 15 points, down 3 points from a week ago at 56-41.

In the CBS-Times poll, Mondale was called a winner of last Sunday's debate by a margin of 66 percent to 17 percent. Still another poll, done by Louis Harris for Business Week magazine, showed Mondale the winner by a 62-27 score.

A poll by the Los Angeles Times found viewers made Mondale a 56-16 winner and narrowed Reagan's edge in voting preference to 55-40 — a three-point change from the 57-39 pre-debate margin.

But most importantly for Mondale, the polls showed an improvement in his favorable ratings with voters — considered a necessity if he is to begin gaining ground in any real way.

The ABC poll said 54 percent now have a favorable rating of Mondale, with 43 percent unfavorable. A week ago, Mondale had a 41 percent favorable rating and 49 percent unfavorable. Reagan's 61-36 favorable rating is essentially unchanged.

Mondale used the Peres visit to criticize Reagan's Middle East policies as "vacillating, inconsistent ... and unwise."

He called on Reagan to personally intervene to achieve the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Reagan also put the heat on, saying Mondale had a plan to "raise taxes and raise 'em again," and accusing him of making his "career out of weakening America's armed forces."

Spouses Say Capital Hill Helps Life

NEW YORK (AP) — Most congressional spouses say political life has enhanced their relationship by making them work harder to have quality time together, but 70 percent responding to a Family Weekly magazine survey say they don't want their mate to become president.

The magazine sent questionnaires to the spouses of the 421 members of Congress, and received 92 responses. More than half of those responses were signed, the magazine said.

"The group portrait that emerged from their answers is one of strong, self-assured people, sharing in their spouses' careers," the article said. Most spouses said their mate's political career enhanced their marriages.

Many of the spouses said they were enticed by the opportunities to travel and to meet heads of state and other "interesting" people. Many also said their spouses' happiness to be doing what they wanted helped strengthen their marriages.

One anonymous writer said, "So many Americans think that we wives, as a whole, are either spoiled prima donnas or are inferior-feeling, overlooked weaklings. We are not. We are normal, well-educated citizens who take quite seriously the trust and faith that has been put in our husbands."

But some of the respondents who did not sign their answers sounded unhappy.

One woman complained that her life was "lonely, demanding and public."

"I particularly resent the time my husband spends with his staff outside of working hours. His staff controls his life completely, including his personal life," wrote one anonymous respondent.

"Immediately after the election, after the wife has campaigned with and for her husband, going door to door, typing, stuffing envelopes, she is pushed into the background. The staff and the constituents come first," she complained.

"I get very tired of female staff being praised," the respondent wrote. "I can do the same work at no pay and not even get a smile or thank you, but let a female staff worker do the same and she is treated like a queen. The job builds up a man's ego. Women fawn over them like fools, and they think they don't need a wife anymore."

Another wrote: "My husband is deprived of any private life and consequently seems unable to relate to things other than the political arena."

Suicide Pact Investigated

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities are investigating rumors of a death pact said to involve up to 30 people following the suicides of five teenagers in a comfortable suburban community. One clergyman fears the incidents will have a "domino effect."

The rash of deaths in the Houston suburb of Clear Lake, which includes the Johnson Space Center, has prompted school officials to call in a suicide prevention group for counseling sessions at Clear Lake High School.

"When one person does it, it serves as a role model for others who have been contemplating it," said Nora Barrera, coordinator of Crisis Intervention of Houston, which will send a three-member team to the school next week. "It confirms that the action is an OK action to do."

She said as each of the suicides became known in the community, it's possible a ripple effect made it easier for potential suicide victims to go through with the act.

"It certainly sounds like the Plano situation all over again," Ms. Barrera said.

Eleven students have committed suicide in the North Texas city of Plano since January 1983, authorities said.

Harris County Medical Examiner's Office records indicated Wednesday that five suicides have occurred in the Clear Creek School District area since Aug. 9. The latest victim killed himself on Tuesday.

Deputy Superintendent of schools Jimmy Larrabee said rumors persist that there is a pact in which 20 to 30 people swear to take their lives within six weeks.

"We're trying to run down the pact rumor but we can't substantiate it at this time.

Two Astronauts Schedule Walk In Space

HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Kathy Sullivan was set to make space history today as the first American woman to walk in space, stepping out of Challenger's cabin with a male colleague to test a refueling technique for restoring spent satellites to useful life.

She and astronaut David Leestma planned to spend 3½ hours in the shuttle's open cargo bay, attached to 50-foot safety lines and bundled in $2.1 million spacesuits that provide protection from radiation, micrometeorites and the extremes of heat and cold.

"Dave and Kathy are chomping to go," commander Robert Crippen said after the crew was wakened by Mission Control early today.

With the other five crew members monitoring from Challenger's cabin, the spacewalkers were to work their way to the rear of the 60-foot-long bay where two fuel tanks are mounted. Both contain more than 70 pounds of volatile hydrazine fuel.

Leestma, assisted by Ms. Sullivan, was to install a ball valve on one tank and run a fuel line to the second tank. Back inside the cabin, they will test the new plumbing by transferring fuel between the two tanks.

This hardware is being developed to service satellites that have run out of maneuvering fuel, and should extend their lifetimes indefinitely.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration would like, for example, to send a shuttle crew to refuel one of its Landsat Earth survey satellites that is running out of gas.

Hydrazine is the fuel used for the shuttle's steering jets and for the control jets that maintain the stability of most unmanned satellites.

"It's a toxic fuel, and if it's heated up or gets too high a temperature or impurities or sudden pressure spikes, it could decompose," Leestma said before the flight. "If it did, it would cause the tanks to rupture.

"But we have taken all the safeguards to make sure that does not happen. We'll be watching the temperatures and pressures very closely."

Initially, the space walk was to have been devoted to the installation of the refueling mechanism. But a problem with an antenna added an additional task.

Before returning to the cabin, the spacewalkers were to move the antenna, disconnected earlier in the flight, to line up two holes so that an astronaut inside the shuttle can throw a switch to drive locking pins through them. This is to secure the antenna for the return to Earth on Saturday.

A Soviet cosmonaut, Svetlana Savitskaya, was the first woman to take a space walk. Last July 25 she spent 3 hours outside the Salyut space station, testing tools for welding and soldering.

Until now, there have been 38 space walks in the U.S. space program, all of them taken by men.

The space walk is the last major task of the eight-day mission. The astronauts will devote Friday to shutting down science experiments, stowing gear and testing flight control systems in preparation for coming home on Saturday.

Challenger is scheduled to land at Cape Canaveral at 12:24 p.m. EDT Saturday on a three-mile runway near the launch pad from which the shuttle vaulted into space last Friday.

Approval Expected By UAW

DETROIT (AP) — With the approval margin growing in their favor, United Auto Workers officials are looking toward Michigan for the votes needed to ratify the union's tentative contract with General Motors Corp.

More than 60,000 ballots could be cast in Michigan today and Friday, the biggest single bloc of outstanding votes.

Unofficial tabulations by The Associated Press show that it would take a dismal showing in Michigan for the proposed contract to fail.

By early today, "yes" votes were leading "no" votes nationwide by 58,666 to 44,234 with 69 of 149 locals reporting.

The margin was 57 percent to 43 percent, with 49 locals approving and 20 rejecting.

That margin was slightly narrowed early today, when Local 595, representing workers at the Linden, N.J., assembly plant voted 2,900 to 948 to reject the pact. On Wednesday, the contract got a boost from Oklahoma City, where Local 199 workers at the giant GM car assembly plant approved the pact 3,170 to 1,628.

About 350,000 workers and 30,000 laid-off union members are eligible to vote, with a turnout of more than 200,000 expected by the Sunday deadline.

UAW President Owen Bieber has warned the rank and file that they must strike if they fail to ratify the agreement.

Bieber on Wednesday took part in contract negotiations at Ford Motor Co. The UAW and Ford have agreed to try to reach a tentative contract by Friday.

The union hasn't set a strike deadline against Ford, an indication that progress is being made.

Nation's Health Bills Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The inflation of health care costs slowed last year, but the nation's $355 billion medical bill was a record 10.8 percent of the gross national product, the government says.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler attributed the drop in health care inflation from 12.5 percent in 1982 to 10.3 percent last year to efficiency measures undertaken by providers and businesses as well as program changes approved by Congress and the administration.

A prospective payment system for hospitals particpating in Medicare is the greatest change. It is based on more than 400 illness categories known as diagnosis related groups. Instead of the traditional fee-for-service system, most hospitals now know exactly what Medicare will pay them for treating a patient with a specific complaint.

The figures released Wednesday showed that Medicare remained the largest federal health program at a cost of $57.4 billion. The federal share of Medicaid was $18.1 billion while states and localities spent $15.8 billion.

Health care inflation reached a record level in 1980 when spending rose 15.3 percent. Health spending was 10.5 percent of the GNP in 1982 and 9.7 percent in 1981.

Recruiters Turning To Videotapes For Interviews

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Students at the Stevens Institute of Technology and 13 other colleges nationwide may have literally seen their futures flash before them thanks to the growing popularity of videotapes.

In a new approach to college recruiting, the students watched a live, televised discussion Wednesday by representatives of three corporations and three government agencies.

The idea is to give the recruiters the opportunity to outline the type of work and future they offer to employees. The students have the chance to begin thinking about what they want to do after they graduate.

"This gives them a real good overview" of jobs offered by a range of companies, said Peter B. Schmidt, director of placement at Stevens.

Schmidt and Business People Inc., a Minneapolis-based marketing firm that arranged the video program shown at 16 other schools on Tuesday, believe it to be the first in the nation.

Shultz Is Seeking Major Changes In Proposed Central America Pact

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in Panama for the inauguration of its president today, is pressing for substantial changes in a proposed Central American peace treaty backed by Nicaragua's leftist government.

Shultz believes the proposed pact gives Nicaragua an edge over Central American nations more friendly with the United States.

Among the regional leaders who conferred with Shultz on Wednesday was Nicolas Ardito Barletta, who today becomes the first directly elected civilian president in Panama after 16 years of direct or indirect military rule.

The new president faces a $3.5 million foreign debt, 14 percent unemployment and the threat of growing political unrest. Riot police clashed with about 1,000 demonstrators Wednesday during a protest over alleged vote fraud in the May 6 election, in which Ardito Barletta was supported by the military.

Shultz came to Panama from El Salvador, where he met Wednesday with President Jose Napoleon Duarte and praised him for offering to hold peace talks with leftist rebels who have been fighting the Salvadoran government for five years.

Rebel leaders agreed to meet with Duarte on Monday in La Palma, a Salvadoran mountain town in a guerrilla stronghold near the Honduran border.

Shultz said Duarte's initiative had the Reagan administration's "unqualified support.' Shultz also said Duarte "is trying to do something that the Contadora process envisages — to bring about reconciliation within a framework of democratic institutions."

The Contadora group — Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela — has been trying to arrange a negotiated settlement to the various Central American conflicts.

The Reagan administration contends that Nicaragua's close ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union endanger the security of pro-U.S. countries in Central America. The United States has supported the rebels, who are based in Honduras and Costa Rica, with money, weapons and training.

The Sandinista government agreed three weeks ago to accept the latest draft by the Contadora team. The treaty calls for democratic elections, an end to foreign military intervention and negotiations among Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras on achieving military parity.

U.S. officials contend there is no assurance such negotiations would be held or that military might would ever be reduced.

Shultz believes the treaty, as presently drafted, could permit what he says would be a continuation of Nicaraguan military superiority in Central America.

The mediators have set Oct. 15 as the deadline for comments on the draft.

Shultz was scheduled to go to Mexico tonight to discuss the U.S. reservations on the draft treaty. The secretary of state discussed the same issue on Wednesday night with Guatemala's leader, Oscar Mejia Victores.

In El Salvador, a U.S. Embassy official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Ambassador Thomas Pickering has been the target of recent death threats. The official refused to elaborate.

Radio Venceremos, the Salvadoran rebel broadcast outlet, said Wednesday that Duarte's offer for talks was positive but that the guerrilla leaders have little hope of achieving favorable results.

A Salvadoran rebel leader, Eduardo Calles, was quoted by a newspaper in Nicaragua as saying that the guerrillas' acceptance of Duarte's invitation was "not a sign of weakness but a response to the need to find an alternative to peace that will stem the flow of our people's blood."

Neither side in the civil war has been able to overwhelm the other militarily, and the conflict has taken some 59,000 lives, most of them civilians.

Reagan Report Says Soviets Broke Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has sent Congress a report accusing the Soviet Union of widespread "material breaches" of arms control agreements over nearly a quarter-century.

The accusations ranged from illegal missile tests and forbidden radar deployments to polluting the atmosphere with radioactive debris from underground nuclear weapons explosions.

According to a presidential panel, the Soviets have violated about half the agreements they entered, including the controversial 1972 and 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties (SALT I and II) with the United States.

The panel, formally called the General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, studied Soviet practices for a year. It said its inquiry was unprecedented in scope.

Reagan informed House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. in a cover letter that he was pursuing Moscow for an explanation and "corrective actions."

However, the report suggested it might be futile.

"The Soviets readily could have shown that the allegations were false — if they had been false," the report said. "This the Soviets have repeatedly failed to do, even though diplomatic and other channels have been used by the U.S. in seeking to clarify possible misconceptions."

The presidential advisers offered no specific recommendations, although they suggested "development of means to safeguard the U.S. against Soviet non-compliance is essential if the arms control process is to avoid being further undermined."

The report is likely to add fuel to the already heated debate over the merits of negotiating agreements with the Soviet Union in an effort to reverse the nuclear arms race. It also could deepen strains in relations with Moscow.

Perhaps anticipating the accusations, the Soviets earlier this week accused the United States of a number of violations of arms control accords.

Reagan is committed to trying to revive stalemated U.S.-Soviet negotiations and to honoring the agreements already reached, although he had condemned many of them before taking office.

His Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, is an ardent supporter of arms control and has repeatedly accused Reagan of not trying hard enough to reach new agreements with the Soviets.

Depending on how they are counted, the allegations range from 11 to 17, and begin with a 1961 pledge not to pollute the atmosphere with nuclear debris.

They include shipping offensive weapons to Cuba in 1962, deploying nuclear submarines in Cuban waters from 1970 to 1974, deliberately concealing missile tests prohibited by the SALT treaties and deploying fixed radar devices on the Kamatchka Peninsula and early warning radar near Krasnoyarsk in violation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

The report itself is classified. A 15-page summary was made public.

Reagan wrote O'Neill that the administration "continues to be seriously concerned about Soviet behavior with regard to arms control obligations and commitments.

"We are actively pursuing several such issues in confidential discussions with the Soviet Union and are seeking explanations, clarifications and corrective actions," he said.

The Soviets, the summary said, may be "indifferent" to U.S. objections, may be trying "to weigh the effectiveness of U.S. verification capabilities," or may be testing "U.S. and international resolve and responses to their arms control behavior.

"These activities as well as the other concealment activities, may be intended to raise the level of U.S. confusion in order to hide more serious covert activities, such as development and deployment of a ballistic missile defense system," the summary said.

The summary also said that "deliberate Soviet efforts" to counter U.S. verification techniques "strongly indicate a Soviet intention to perservere in circumventing and violating agreements.

"U.S. verification capabilities have not deterred the Soviets from violating arms control commitments," the summary said.

"Furthermore," it said, "the near total reliance on secret diplomacy in seeking to restore Soviet compliance has been largely ineffective," it said.

The report was completed last December. Since then, several conservative Republican members of Congress have pressed for release of the findings. Last month, at the behest of the State Department, the report was delayed again in order not to mar Reagan's meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

With the conservatives growing more impatient, Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security assistant, last week assured one of them, Sen. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho, that the report would be submitted by Tuesday night.

When the deadline passed, Symms tried to force it from the White House. But the move — an amendment to an international genocide treaty — was sidetracked Wednesday at the suggestion of Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. A few hours later, the summary was released.

Security Officers Linked To Terror

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee says some Salvadoran security officers were "part of a rightist terrorist underground" directing death squad activity, but that U.S. officials did not support or encourage human rights abuses.

In a 36-page report released Wednesday night, the Republican-controlled committee said the U.S. government has evidence corroborating claims that "death squad activities ... have originated in the Salvadoran security services."

Church and independent human rights groups have long accused rightist death squads linked to the government of killing tens of thousands of Salvadoran civilians who have perished in the country's 5-year-old civil war.

The committee's report, however, is the clearest statement by an arm of the U.S. government confirming that rightist Salvadoran security officials were deeply involved in the killings. Regular reports by the Reagan administration have stated that it is unclear who is behind the vast majority of the slayings.

While stating that U.S. officials in El Salvador "have consistently stressed the importance of human rights compliance" to their Salvadoran counterparts, the reports states:

"It is undeniable ... that significant political violence — including death squad activities — has been associated with elements of the Salvadoran security establishment, especially the security services.

"The U.S. government has information which corroborates public claims that death squad activities, as well as other abuses provoked by extreme right wing officers or their associates, have originated in the Salvadoran security services, including the National Police, National Guard and Treasury police.

"The officers involved in these abuses appear to be have been part of a rightist terrorist underground in El Salvador that has also included non-governmental elements."

The report adds, however, that the government's human rights record has improved in the past two years, particularly under the new presidency of moderate Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte.

The report also accused leftist guerrillas of using kidnapping and assassination in its attacks on the government.

It also states that the committee uncovered no evidence in its five-month investigation "to support the allegation that elements of the U.S. government have deliberately supported, encouraged or acquiesced in acts of political violence in El Salvador."

The report added that U.S. policy has been consistently to oppose such extra-legal violence. "The degree to which executive branch agencies acted directly with Salvadoran authorities to combat political violence generally reflected their judgments about what was achievable in the Salvadoran political context," it said.

The committee concluded that the Salvadoran case was typical of situations in which U.S. intelligence agents must deal with governments or groups that are involved in illegal behavior.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, following through on Wednesday's late rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.87 to 1,180.10 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 2 to 1 in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market began to attract buyers late Wednesday looking for "bargains" with prices of many issues at their lowest levels since mid-summer.

International Business Machines stock, often described as a market bellwether, took a leading role in the upswing.

This morning IBM reported third-quarter earnings of $2.60 a share, up from $2.14 in the comparable period last year. The latest figure was toward the high end of advance estimates on Wall Street.

Nobel Prize In Literature Awarded To Czech Poet

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Jaroslav Seifert, a Czechoslovak poet and longtime opponent of censorship in his Communist homeland, became at age 83 his country's first winner of the Nobel Prize in literature today.

The 18-member Swedish Academy of Letters cited Seifert, who is not widely known outside his country and Central Europe, "for his poetry which, endowed with freshness, sensuality and rich inventiveness, provides a liberating image of the indomitable spirit and versatility of man."

Academy Secretary Dr. Lars Gyllensten said Seifert was honored for the poetry he wrote over the past six decades rather than for any single work.

"He can look back upon a career of more than 60 years which shows many signs of being likely to continue," an academy statement said of Seifert.

"With almost 30 volumes of collected poems behind him and a few excursions into the realm of prose — above all his recently published memoirs — he stands out today as the leading poet of his country," the statement said. "He is read and loved by his countrymen, a national poet."

Jana Seifertova, Seifert's daughter, told The Associated Press today that her father was hospitalized with "a heart ailment," and that the Swedish ambassador in Prague informed him of the award at his bedside.

She said she had not yet spoken to Seifert today and could not say how he reacted.

Gyllensten, who chaired the five-member selection committee that considered what he called a "short list" of a half-dozen candidates since late summer, disclaimed any political significance in the choice.

"Of course there might be a political aspect found whoever gets the prize. We cannot avoid that," he said. "Every human activity may be regarded from a political point of view, but our chief concern is literary."

Born in a workers' district in Prague in 1901, Seifert published his first collection of poems, "City in Tears," in 1920. In the following decade, he helped found a literary avant garde group called Devetsil.

He worked as a journalist for various Prague publications until 1950, and later did free-lance writing and translated books. He was known for his interest in botany and support for the preservation of the ecology.

Most of his works were written in his native language, but his collections of poems have been published in German, French and English.

Seifert joined the Communist Party in Czechoslovakia in 1921, but became critical of the movement in the years that followed. A trip to the Soviet Union in 1925 solidified his views, and he broke with the party in 1929.

During the Nazi occupation of his homeland in World War II, Seifert emerged as a spokesman for the oppressed Czechoslovak nation.

As the last elected chairman of the Czechoslovak Writers Union in 1968, he sharply criticized the Soviet-led invasion that year that crushed the "Prague Spring" movement of political and economic liberalization in the country. The writers union later was disbanded and reformed.

In the 1970s, Seifert was among the first signatories of the intellectual dissident manifesto, Charter 77. However, some Czechoslovak dissidents do not consider Seifert a political person.

"He always supports those in the right,'' one well-informed Czechoslovak dissident source said in Vienna, Austria. "He has had close contacts with Charter 77."

State Transportation Secretary Bill Roberson, who was representing Gov. Jim Hunt at the barbecue, elaborated on current and future plans for improvement of eastern highways. He said that $35 million has been authorized for a new 264 between Wilson and Greenville and that work on N.C. 11 between Bethel and Greenville is now under way. He added that bids will be received on widening and improvement of U.S. 64 between Williamston and Plymouth in November as will bids on a contract for the four-laning of half of U.S. 264 between Washington and Greenville.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford, outgoing Sen. Vernon White, Chancellor and Mrs. John M. Howell, East Carolina University head football Coach Ed Emory, ECU Chancellor emeritus Leo W. Jenkins and his wife, Nancy, and state Alcoholic Beverage Control board chairman Marvin Speight also attended the lunch.

The ninth annual lunch recognizing the Williamston baseball player was sponsored by Reynolds May, First State Bank, Pepsi Cola, Integon-Scales Agency and The Daily Reflector, who joined this year with other contributors in the tradition of past years to present Perry with a 12-foot satellite dish.

few seats in this election. However, I don't think the Republicans will make a substantial gain this year, either in the House or Senate, nothing like the surge in 1972 when Nixon's campaign resulted in 35 Republicans elected to the house, and 15 to the senate."

The informal political gathering, now a traditional annual event, was held on the Blount Ranch about 10 miles from Greenville. Marvin Blount Sr., the 94-year old owner of the ranch and a long-time Democratic supporter, was on hand for the occasion. "I expect to be around for the next five or six years," Blount commented. "This is something I look forward to every year."

About 500 persons, politicians and supporters from all across the state, were on hand to talk and eat barbecue.

Bill Hodges, president of the Fellowship Club, presided over the meeting. State Rep. Ed Warren introduced speakers and recognized guests. Among those in attendance were Secretary of Transportation Bill Roberson; state Treasurer Harlan Boyles; Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips; Secretary of Agriculture Jim Graham; state Sen. Vernon White and State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr.

Bevacqua Sparks Padre Comeback

SAN DIEGO (AP) — When Kurt Bevacqua reached first base, he nearly missed it.

When he passed second base, he didn't stumble leaving it.

When he arrived at third base, he didn't have to slide into it.

And when he reached home plate again, he completed one of the great comebacks of this World Series.

But then comebacks have become a trademark of the San Diego Padres, ever since they began playing for championships.

Against the Chicago Cubs in the National League playoffs, they were down two games to none, then came back to sweep the next three — and in each of those three they were down on the scoreboard before winning.

Against the Detroit Tigers these past two games, the Padres' starting pitching has been down, very down. But they've come back with exceptional relief pitching that carried them into and through the playoffs.

Against the Tigers on Wednesday night, the Padres were down on the scoreboard and, it appeared, not far from being down for the count.

But Bevacqua, who has had far more downs than ups in his 15-year major-league career and was at least a little down after a base-running gaffe Tuesday night, brought them back.

His a three-run homer in the bottom of the fifth inning catapulted the Padres to a 5-3 victory and a split of the Series' first two games heading into the weekend in Detroit.

The middle relievers have been the Padres' postseason stars. They haven't given up a run in 21 innings going back to the fourth game against the Cubs.

On Wednesday night, Andy Hawkins, a converted starter, was particularly brilliant. He pitched 5 1-3 innings of one-hit ball from the first inning on after the Tigers had routed starter Ed Whitson and staked Dan Petry to a three-run lead.

But pitching alone wouldn't win it. The Padres needed runs. They got one in the bottom of the first on Graig Nettles' sacrifice fly and one in the fourth on Bobby Brown's grounder — and then three on Bevacqua's blast.

"Steve Garvey mentioned something the other day when he hit that home run that beat the Cubs in the playoffs," Bevacqua recalled. "He said everything froze.

"When I saw that ball go over the fence tonight, I didn't hear a sound in the stadium. It was really weird. Then, as I rounded first, everything started getting louder and louder, and then all hell broke loose."

It wasn't a mammoth shot, a light-tower job. But neither did it graze the fence on the way out. It was just a nice, solid, major-league homer by a perennial bench-riding utilityman with 24 of them in those 15 seasons.

Someone asked him whether he felt it was out when he hit it. "I only hit one home run this year," he shot back with a smile. "How the hell can I know what it's supposed to feel like?"

But by the time it left the playing field, Bevacqua knew. He was leaping up and down as he passed first base — barely touching the bag. It would have been the ultimate irony, being called out for missing one base, the night after failing to reach another, doubling but stumbling while rounding second and getting tagged out at third.

"The way my luck's been going, I was surprised I didn't miss first," he said. "I was going to make sure I touched all the bases. And I knew I wasn't going to get thrown out at third on that ball."

The homer was one of his three hits Wenesday night. After the first one, a fourth-inning single, he raced to third on Garry Templeton's single to right, sliding head-first and pulling a hamstring slightly along the way. "At least I showed I wasn't scared to go to third," he said.

Moments later, Bevacqua scored on Brown's grounder, cutting Detroit's lead to 3-2.

The next inning, he wiped it out.

Nettles drew a one-out walk from Petry and Terry Kennedy, who had stranded three runners in his two previous inning-ending at-bats, ripped a vicious one-hopper off the left shoulder of second baseman Lou Whitaker.

That brought up Bevacqua, who unloaded on Petry's 0-1 pitch — his last pitch of the game. It was the second World Series homer by a National League designated hitter, matching Dan Driessen's for Sparky Anderson's 1976 Cincinnati Reds. He also was their manager in 1971, when a kid named Bevacqua failed to make the major-league roster.

Anderson is the manager of the Tigers now.

Asked whether he felt he had stayed one batter too long with Petry, the way Padres Manager Dick Williams had on Tuesday night when Larry Herndon hit a game-winning homer, Anderson replied, "No, I think it was Bevacqua paying me back for sending him out at Cincinnati. I think when he was running around the bases he was saying to me, 'That'll teach you.'"

Not at all, said Bevacqua, when asked when he had first come to Anderson's attention. "He's a great manager and I've never had any ill feeling toward him. I'm not sure I ever came to Sparky's attention — up until tonight.

"I was the last man cut in '71. And as bold as I was at that time, a rookie with no major-league experience, I went in and asked him to trade me. Two weeks later I got a ticket to Cleveland."

That began an odyssey that took him to 13 major-league and minor league cities in the ensuing 15 years, some of them (including San Diego) more than once.

He's now barely three months shy of his 38th birthday. And as a lifelong hanger-on in the majors with a one-year contract that expires in a week, someone suggested he might pursue a designated-hitter job in the American League next year.

Not at all, he said. "I'm satisfied with the role I have here. I'd like to do the job I've been doing for the San Diego Padres for another three or four years, until I'm about 32."

He'll be doing the job at least for the next game. He was elevated in the batting order, from ninth to sixth "to get in more action, which he certainly did," Williams said. And the San Diego manager said Bevacqua could find himself in the outfield Friday night. "Tony Gwynn (the Padres' right fielder) could be in center and Bevacqua in right . . . The only thing I know is Bevacqua's bat will be in the lineup somewhere in Detroit."

Not bad for a guy who said that, before the Series, "I was expecting to find my tail on the bench . . . I've had a lot of valleys in my career. I've probably reached the pinnacle, the top of my career, tonight. Hopefully, I can get the mountain a little higher in the next few games."

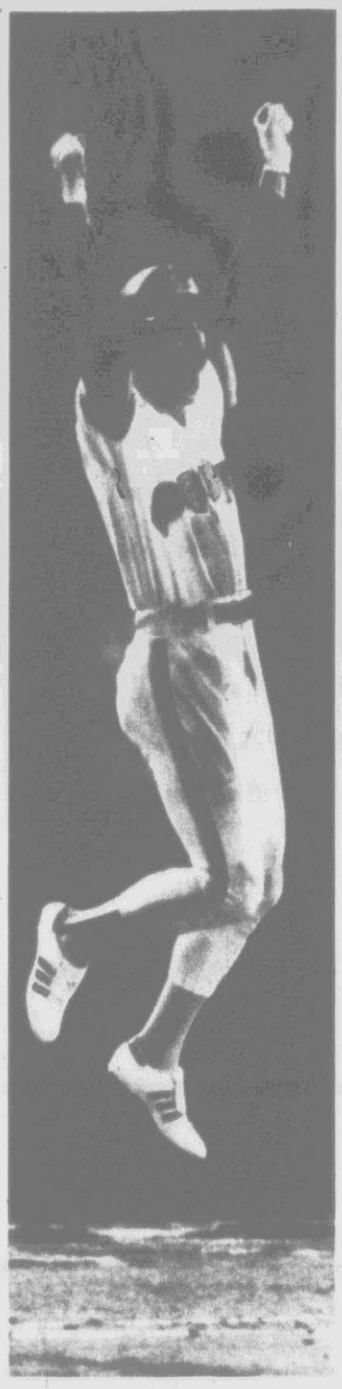
The Tigers were all over Whitson in the first inning. First-pitch singles by the first three batters — Whitaker, Alan Trammell and Kirk Gibson — made it 1-0, Lance Parrish's sacrifice fly scored Trammell and Darrell Evans singled Gibson home.

"I was trying to throw strikes, to stay ahead," Whitson said. "They just wouldn't let me get ahead. They swung at everything and hit it, too. the Tigers were ready for me."

But not for the guys who followed him to the mound. And so, the Padres don't have to try and become the first team in World Series history to lose their first two games at home and come back.

Still, the Tigers gained a split on the road. That's what most visiting teams are satisfied with at the start of the World Series.

Not Sparky's. "I'm disappointed every game we lose," he said. "If we play 3,-000, we should win 3,000. When we go out there, we feel we can win every night."



Hot Dog!

That's Where He Scored

Rose Seeks Win Against Bruins

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Chip Williams is keeping his fingers crossed that his Rose High School Rampants might be able to generate a little more offense this week as they play at Wilson Beddingfield.

The reason for this is that fullback Tom Moore, who suffered a broken leg in the second quarter of the season opener against Jacksonville, is back.

But to say he's back may need a qualifier. He's back, but that doesn't mean he's ready to take up where he left off.

"Right now, he's back, but I expect him to see only limited action. We're going to see what he can do, but I don't expect him to be where he was when he left," Williams said.

After winning the first three games against non-conference foes, the Rampants were left with a crippled offense when Moore was joined on the sidelines by sophomore tailback Anthony Cobb, who has rushed for 252 yards in his last game. Cobb suffered a stretched ligament against Eastern Wayne and has not returned to active duty since then.

"He's got the cast off now, and he's attending practice but he's not participating," Williams said. "Hopefully, we'll have him back in a few more weeks."

William Ward, who suffered a similar injury in the Northern Nash game, will be lost for the season, Williams added.

"I think it's a credit for Tom to be back this early after suffering the injury he did. He really wants to play."

Whether his presence on the field is enough to get the Rampants moving is a question, however. Williams says that the problem seems to be that the line is not sustaining the blocks long enough for the Rampants running backs — Moore and Cobb the exception with their quickness — to get through the holes. And, he added, the backs are not always hitting the holes.

"Rocky Mount was aware of this — as is everyone we play," Williams said.

Defensively, however, the Rampants gave up the big play — two long passes and a kickoff return — allowing Rocky Mount to claim its 21-0 win over Rose last weekend. The shutout was the first ever for Williams as a coach.

Overall, Williams said he felt that the Rampants had a good defensive effort. "On the first touchdown, our safety was taken in by the fake draw and that left the corner to cover the man going deep. It looked like he was the one beaten, but he was just trying to cover for the safety. On the kickoff return, their wedge did the job and then he hit a crease and was gone."

Williams said that neither the offense or defense graded out highly in the films of the game. "We knew what we had to do, but the offense didn't accomplish their goals. I think the intensity was there (Williams said that lack of intensity was one of the problems in his post-game statements), but when we got down 21-0 late in the game, we lost it. It's hard for any team to keep up the intensity in that situation."

This week, against Beddingfield, the Rampants face a team that has come on strong in recent weeks. The Bruins opened the year with a 42-0 romp over Greene Central, but were soundly thrashed by SouthWest Edgecombe, 42-13, the following week.

They then upset Southern Wayne, 33-12 before losing their league opener to Rocky Mount, 31-27, after holding a big lead in that game. Last week they downed Northern Nash, 17-13.

"They have a lot of what we don't have now — quickness in the backfield," Williams said. "They have an excellent quarterback in Darren Bynum and a fine running back in Sam Wells. He didn't play in the SouthWest game and that's probably why they got beat so bad.

"They've got an all-conference receiver back in Eric Batts, and he's very quick. They like to get the ball to him. Randy Davis is an excellent defensive lineman who plays both ways. They flip-flop their line to the strong side of our field on defense, running a 4-4. Wells also plays both ways (inside linebacker) and does a good job. Their other defensive tackle, Stanley Jones, is a good one too."

With a balanced attack, the Bruins are hard to stop, and the Rampants will have to be on their toes to have a chance to snap their two-game losing skid.

Now 2-2-1 and 0-2 in the league, a loss would almost certainly end any post-season hopes the Rampants have, but Williams says that — if it happens — he's ready to pack it in for this year.

"We're still going to give it all we've got to win every game," he said. "And the juniors and seniors who are doing the job will be the ones who get to play. If we have a senior who is doing the job, he'll still play. We won't just be getting ready for next year."

The road test is the first of two straight for the Rampants, who travel to Kinston the following week. Kickoff at Beddingfield Friday night is set for 8 p.m.

Hawkins Shuts Door On Tigers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Enter Andy Hawkins. Exit the Detroit Tigers' offense.

The 24-year-old San Diego relief pitcher allowed only one hit through 5 1-3 innings, struck out three and fell behind only one batter, as the Padres rallied for a 6-3 victory in Game Two of the World Series Wednesday night.

Detroit took a quick 3-0 lead off starter Ed Whitson in the first inning, but Padres Manager Dick Williams never lost faith.

"I told Hawk, 'You just hold them and we'll see what we can do. We haven't even got to bat yet,'" Williams said. "And that's exactly what he did."

Hawkins needed only 55 pitches and did not walk a batter.

"Sometimes you just have a feeling things are going to go well," said Hawkins, who also threw 2 2-3 scoreless innings in relief on Tuesday, as well as 3 2-3 shutout innings in the playoffs. "I've had that feeling for about three or four weeks now."

Maybe Williams should skip his starting pitchers and go straight to the middle relievers.

The superlative performances by right-hander Hawkins and southpaw Craig Lefferts, who finished with three innings of one-hit relief, overshadowed the fact that San Diego's starting pitchers have been horrendous thus far in the series, which is tied at one game apiece.

In Game One, Williams and pitching coach Norm Sherry sent Mark Thurmond out for a fifth inning, even though Thurmond had thrown nearly twice as many pitches as usual through the first four. Thurmond surrendered a two-run, fifth-inning homer to Larry Herndon, and the Padres lost, 3-2.

Wednesday, Whitson, who had given up only one run in eight innings of playoff work, was tagged for five Tiger hits and three runs in the first two-thirds of an inning. He lasted only 17 pitches — 100 fewer than Thurmond the evening before.

Hawkins' arrival is a welcome one for the Padres. He struggled to an 8-9 record and 4.68 earned run average during the regular season, partly because he was despondent over having lost a No. 2 spot in the starting rotation that he had earned in spring training.

"For a while, I looked at it as a demotion," he said. "But then I got out in the bullpen and settled down and worked on pitching, and a few weeks ago I made an adjustment in my motion, and now things just seem to be falling into place."

"He's been very aggressive lately, and he's building confidence with every pitch," said Dave Dravecky, another member of a bullpen long relief staff that has dubbed itself The Committee. "Like the rest of us out there, Andy is realizing his role on the team and adapting to it."

"The Committee is growing stronger," said Lefferts, who posted a team-low 2.13 ERA in 105 2-3 regular season innings, threw four shutout innings and recorded two victories in the National League Championship Series.

The winning runs came on a three-hun homer by designated hitter Kurt Bevacqua, who killed a budding rally in Tuesday night's Game One when he stumbled trying to stretch a leadoff double into a trouble.

"I knew I wasn't going to get thrown out at third on that ball," Bevacqua said of his home run.

Playing Chicken?

Numbers Game Failed To Work

SAN DIEGO (AP) — With three runs in, two men on and the game only two outs old, the Detroit Tigers started playing numbers games early in the second game of the World Series. It turned out to be too early.

The Tigers, with the first game already in hand, were looking for a quick finish as they burst to a 3-0 lead Wednesday night. But the San Diego Padres stormed back for a 5-3 victory, sending Detroit home with only a split of the first two Series games.

"After scoring three runs in the first inning, we were naturaly thinking sweep," infielder Darrell Evans said. "You can't take anything away from the Padres, though. They came back and won it with some of the best relief pitching I've ever seen."

It was some of their own medicine — air-tight relief pitching and a three-run homer — that made the Tigers rearrange their arithmetic.

Andy Hawkins relieved starter Ed Whitson with two outs in the first and faced only the minimum 16 batters over the next 5 1-3 innings. Then Craig Lefferts came on to shut the Tigers down on only one hit over the final three innings.

"Eight innings pitched and two hits, that's some pitching," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "Hawkins put a complete stop on us."

Anderson said he was disappointed at splitting the two games in frenzied Jack Murphy Stadium.

"We certainly didn't accomplish what we wanted," he said. "When we go out there, we feel we can win every night. We're disappointed that we didn't win tonight."

It was the Tiger's first defeat in five post-season games. The club has a history of streaking, having won their first nine during the regular season enroute to a record 35-5 start in the American League East.

"We didn't expect it to be a cakewalk. A lot of people were hoping it would be, I know — including me," right fielder Kirk Gibson said. "I think it says a lot about their ballclub. They showed a lot of character."

Detroit starter Dan Petry, who lasted only 4 1-3 innings, walked Graig Nettles to open the Padres' fifth and Terry Kennedy singled off Lou Whitaker's glove to set the table for Kurt Bevacqua's game-winning three-run homer that wiped out a 3-2 Detroit lead.

"The ball had a lot of top-spin," Whitaker said of Kennedy's hit. "It was just a bad break. I was lucky not to have pieces of bone sticking out of my head. The ball went 10 feet in the air, that's how hard it was hit.

"This is a good hitting park, but I think this is a terrible field. I wouldn't want to play defense here."

Petry, who was in trouble in every inning, seemed frustrated at having blown the first-inning lead.

"You're supposed to hold a lead like that and I just couldn't do it," he said. "All season long I didn't walk many. This was just so uncharacteristic of me."

Heading back to Detroit, catcher Lance Parrish said the Tigers would prevail.

"It might go seven games, it might go five. Who cares? I'm not going to worry about it. I still think we've got a pretty good ballclub. We'll be OK."

Pirates Top Va. Wesleyan

The East Carolina University soccer team used a goal midway through the first period and an insurance goal late in the game to blank Virginia Wesleyan, 2-0, in action Wednesday afternoon.

At the 31:45 mark in the first half, Brian Colgan took an assist from Larry Bennett and Jeffrey Kime in for a score to give the Pirates a 1-0 halftime lead.

Pirate goalie Jesse Daughtery had two saves in the shutout while Virginia Wesleyan Floyd Westbrook had four saves. John Parkman replaced Westbrook late in the game to record two saves.

Jamie Reivel scored ECU's insurance goal at the 86:35 mark after receiving a pass from David Skeffington.

ECU moves to 2-8-1 on the year and will take on N.C. Wesleyan at home on Tuesday.

Hard Grounder By Nettles Changes Pace Of Game

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dan Petry had been struggling all night, and by the bottom of the fifth inning of Game Two of the World Series, the Detroit starter was wobbling.

But it took the hard, hard ground to finally knock him and the Tigers down.

With one out, Graig Nettles walked. Up stepped Terry Kennedy, a left-hander who had hit several balls hard in the post-season that were caught.

The Padres were looking for a big hit. The Tigers were looking for a double play. The pulsating crowd of 57,911 was looking for action.

On a 2-1 pitch, Kennedy lashed a wicked one-hopper toward Gold Glove second baseman Lou Whitaker.

"I thought it was a double play right off the bat," Petry said. "I thought I was out of the inning."

But the ball took a vicious bounce, hit Whitaker in the chest and caromed crazily into right field for a single that sent Nettles to second.

"This is a scary infield. It is so hard," said Whitaker, echoing a comment several fielders have made. "When Nettles got to second, he kind of pointed at the ground, like he was saying, 'What could you do?'

"The ball had a lot of top-spin. It was just a bad break. I was lucky not to have pieces of bone sticking out of my head. The ball went 10 feet in the air, that's how hard it was hit."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson called it "the turning point."

"I said the first day this is the worst field I have ever seen," Anderson said.

Things quickly went from bad from worse for the Tigers.

Bevacqua, the next batter, blasted Petry's second pitch into the left-field seats for a home run and the eventual final score of 5-3 that tied the Series at one game apiece.

As he ran to first base on his hit, Kennedy said, "I thought it might be a double play. I hit it hard, so hard that he couldn't charge it and he couldn't back up.

"It came up higher than he thought. I'm just glad it was a hit. If they had called that an error, I don't know what I would've done."

The ball resembled the one that San Diego's Tony Gwynn had rocketed past Gold Glove second baseman Ryne Sandberg for the pivotal two runs in the Padres' victory over the Chicago Cubs in the deciding game of the National League playoffs.

"Yeah, I saw that play on television," Whitaker said. "The ball skipped by him and he didn't have a chance."

This time, the ball attacked Whitaker.

Exactly where did it hit him?

"Right in the heart," he said, rubbing that spot. "That ball broke my heart."

McNamara Top Boston Choice

BOSTON (AP) — John McNamara, who declined an offer to continue as manager of the California Angels, remains the leading and perhaps the all-but-signed candidate, to manage the Boston Red Sox next season.

While Haywood Sullivan, co-owner of the Red Sox, and Lou Gorman, general manager of the American League team, have talked with others about the job, both Boston newspapers have called that a simple formality.

The Boston Globe today says McNamara and Sullivan virtually reached agreement Tuesday night, and all that's left is the signing of a contract.

"No question, he's the leading candidate," Gorman told The Boston Herald of McNamara. "He's a solid baseball man and has all the qualifications we're looking for."

It appears, however, that the announcement of a new manager will wait until after the World Series. Sullivan and Gorman have been in San Diego for the fall classic, and Sullivan thought he would make the announcement there or in Detroit where the series moves for the weekend.

"But after talking with our people, we felt it would be much better to do it at home, have the manager there and gather all the media at one time," Sullivan said.

"The contract isn't a problem," The Globe quotes McNamara as saying. "It never has been with me, but especially not with Sully. All I can say right now is that I'm thrilled and excited. Really excited. I feel extremely fortunate."

Cavs Out To Protect ACC Lead

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With its quarterback situation unsettled, Virginia tries to protect its early Atlantic Coast Conference lead this weekend against a Georgia Tech team trying to get its own share of the top spot.

The Cavaliers claimed their first ACC victory and climbed to 4-1 last Saturday with a 38-10 romp over injury-plagued Duke. Georgia Tech was a two-touchdown favorite over North Carolina State but took a 27-22 loss and moved down to 20th in the Associated Press college football poll — and to the bottom of the league standings at 0-1 and 3-1 overall.

N.C. State is at Maryland and North Carolina goes to Wake Forest in conference action. Duke tries to snap a three-game losing streak at Virginia Tech. Clemson gets another weekend off after last Saturday's victory over the Tar Heels.

Coach George Welsh has started sophomore Kevin Ferguson in each of the four Cavalier games. Don Majkowski, also a sophomore, has replaced Ferguson in each of the games. In the last two contests, victories over the Hokies and the Blue Devils, Majkowski tossed a pair of touchdown passes.

Welsh said he might wait until Friday before naming his favorite, but Majkowski has some ideas of his own.

"Obviously, I'd rather be starting, but I've accepted the role of coming off the bench," Majkowski said. "I have to be ready in case something happens to Kevin."

Georgia Tech's loss to the Wolfpack should have taught the team a lesson, Coach Bill Curry said.

"We certainly learned a painful lesson about where we are as a team and how people play against you as the underdog," Curry said.

Wolfpack coach Tom Reed expects trouble from a Maryland team that had two chances to down Penn State.

"Overall, they might not be quite as experienced as a year ago, but you've got to be impressed with how hard their backs run," Reed said. "Hopefully, our win over Georgia Tech will give us the momentum to go into what we know will be a very tough situation at Maryland."

Maryland Coach Bobby Ross is still trying to answer the critics who saw the Terrapins miss a two-point conversion that could have beaten the Nittany Lions, then fail to stop the clock to get a last-second field goal.

"What am I supposed to do? Jump all over them and berate them," Ross said in response to the closing seconds when the field goal team rushed onto the field before the offense could stop the clock.

North Carolina's defense couldn't prevent the loss at Death Valley, but it did prevent the blowout that some had expected. The Tar Heels are 1-3.

"We've improved considerably with our defense," Coach Dick Crum said. "Certainly after the game, the kids were disappointed, but they are not moping around or down in the dumps. Of course, they can't afford to be because with Wake Forest coming at us, we know we're going to get their best effort."

The game isn't the season-maker for the Demon Deacons, 3-2 and 1-1, but Coach Al Groh suggests it will be crucial in Wake Forest's bid to climb out of the cellar.

"... We're more interested in having a big season than just a big game, which puts this game in a little clearer perspective for us," Groh said. "I picked four pivotal games in pre-season in terms of a successful season and we've already played two."

Virginia Tech has already faced two ACC opponents and come up with a split — beating Wake Forest in the season opener and losing to the Cavaliers. In Duke, the Hokies meet a team decimated by injuries and forced to use underclassmen.

"We made a lot of errors in the Virginia game and we had a lot of people out due to injuries," Duke coach Steve Sloan said. "However, our players are trying hard and improving with each game."

Sloan said his offense will continue to struggle until tailback Julius Grantham, quarterback Ron Sally and a host of other performers get back into action. Overall, Sloan expects problems because of Virginia Tech's size and change in offensive strategy.

"Tech has been passing more this year than in the past," Sloan said. "They still run fairly simple patterns when they pass."

Stations Happy With Telecasts

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Program managers at several television stations in the Atlantic Coast Conference region say they're generally satisfied with the first year of ACC football under the regional network arrangement.

The conference's football games are available following the breakup of the NCAA's arrangements with two major networks and Superstation WTBS in Atlanta.

Seventeen stations from Baltimore to Atlanta and west to Nashville carry the 13-game package. Many of them are network affiliates and have mentioned a conflict between the ACC games and the nationally-televised games presented by ABC and CBS. The conflict will continue, but the program directors say the networks will have to tolerate the situation.

"Obviously, we had a couple of things that were good for us," said A.R. Van Canfort of WSB-TV in Atlanta. "Georgia Tech is winning. There is a renewed interest in Tech, and as a result, a renewed interest in college football."

Van Canfort and other program directors said they haven't received any report on ratings and won't get any until mid-November.

Competing for the advertising dollar is also a challenge, Van Canfort said, because of volume of games.

"You have to put it in the entire perspective that there's a lot of college football on television. On noon last Saturday in Atlanta, there was a pick of six games," Van Canfort said. "There is a lot of college inventory in the market place."

In Baltimore, Lynn McIntyre of WBAL said the package has been well received.

"It's been positive. People have been calling in to find out what game is on," Ms. McIntyre said.

WBAL has chosen to show the ACC games in lieu of the network games, which often are shown at 12 noon in direct conflict with the ACC package. Also, CBS shows games involving teams from the Pac 10 and Big 10, teams unfamiliar to ACC followers.

"Sometimes they have a doubleheader and we carry the second game," Ms. McIntyre said. "Obviously, CBS isn't thrilled about the whole thing but they understand."

Greensboro's WFMY-TV is also a CBS affiliate. In addition to the ACC games and the CBS broadcasts, the station also shows National Football League games on Sunday. Program director Jack Forehand said there has to be some moderation.

"We're carrying the games that fit into the schedule the best," Forehand said. "If we carried ACC, CBS and the NFL doubleheader, we'll have wall-to-wall football."

Forehand is also awaiting the November ratings report, but feels the ACC games have been received well.

"We're very happy with what's going on. We didn't expect it to be gangbusters right out of the chute the first year," Forehand said. "If we get numbers that match basketball, we'll be alright."

Van Canfort was quite happy with last weekend's schedule. After the North Carolina State-Georgia Tech game, he switched to ABC's coverage of Georgia-Alabama. While it was quite a coup, he said the day will come when the saturation of the air waves will be reduced.

"I would guess that next year, there will be a shakedown," Van Cantfort said. "There will be some kind of accommodation."

Texas Seen As Sooner Victim

By The Associated Press

"I've been involved in these for 19 years now and it really and truly is what a football classic is all about," says Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer.

What Switzer is talking about is the annual college football border war between Texas and Oklahoma — the universities, not the states, although sometimes on Friday night in Dallas it seems the latter is the case.

The Longhorns and Sooners go into Saturday's clash as the nation's No. 1 and 3 teams, respectively. Offensively, they are even closer than that. Oklahoma is averaging 378.8 yards a game, Texas 371.3; Texas has averaged 33.7 points, Oklahoma 29.7.

But where last year Texas was the nation's top defensive club, this time the Longhorns are only 43rd, yielding 326.7 yards a game, while Oklahoma ranks second at 229.7. The Sooners also are second in rushing defense at 64.0, Texas 38th at 138.3.

And although Texas Coach Fred Akers says that "more times than not, this kind of football game is a tossup," the Longhorns are 3½-point favorites. But with quarterback Todd Dodge a question mark and operating under the theory that it's not healthy for a team to be No. 1 week after week, the pick is . . . Oklahoma 17-14.

Last week's score was 33 right, 16 wrong and one tie for a percentage of .673, dropping the season record to 203-72-5—.738, although two of the three Upset Specials — North Carolina State over Georgia Tech and Houston over Baylor — came through. Against the spread, the count was 13-19—.406; for the year, 74-75-1—.497.

No. 2 Washington (favored by 8½) at Stanford: Upset Special of the Week, Stanford 24-20.

Hunt Says Helms Built Political Empire

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer

Gov. Jim Hunt charged Sen. Jesse Helms with spending 12 years in Washington building "his own personal political empire," but a Helms spokesman called the allegations "absurd."

Meanwhile, Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin said Wednesday he would welcome an endorsement from defeated gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox but would not want to put the Democrat "on the spot."

Hunt said the the Helms empire lies at the center of a network of "ultra-right groups," including the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority, followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum, and wealthy contributors such as Texas oil magnate Nelson Bunker Hunt and Colorado beer baron Joseph Coors.

"Instead of working for the people of North Carolina, Jesse Helms has spent the last 12 years building his own personal political empire," Hunt said at a news conference Wednesday at state Democratic Party headquarters.

But Helms campaign spokesman Claude Allen said the Republican senator, as head of the Senate Agriculture Committee, was in Washington working for North Carolina voters.

"Sen. Helms has worked for their (North Carolina farmers') programs, worked for this state, and for Gov. Hunt to say anything differently is absurd," he said.

Meanwhile, a Southern Pines woman says she compiled "See Jim Run," a 49-page booklet that attacks Hunt.

The booklet became an issue in the U.S. Senate campaign last week after five Hunt backers filed a complaint with the state elections board. They called for an investigation into whether the booklet violated state law forbidding anyone from circulating anonymous attacks or attacks that are known to be false.

Elizabeth King said Wednesday she made up the booklet on her own, without help from the campaign of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, Hunt's opponent, or the National Congressional Club.

Hunt spokesman Will Marshall said he was uncertain what effect Mrs. King's statement would have on the complaint, which is pending before the elections board.

Earlier this week, Knox surprised Tar Heel Democrats when he endorsed President Reagan during a campaign stop in Charlotte Monday.

Knox's wife and brothers have endorsed Helms over Hunt and Martin over Democratic gubernatorial nominee Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

"I've talked with Eddie about a lot of things since the primary was over, and I don't think it would be fair to him to try to get him to spread out everything," Martin said.

Martin's campaign chief Jack Hawke held a news conference Wednesday to announce that he has called for a probe into Edmisten's actions as attorney general.

Hawke said after Edmisten intervened in a lawsuit filed against Michelin Tire Co. by John Bolt Jr. of Wilson, Bolt donated $10,000 to Edmisten's campaign. The state Elections Board has ordered Edmisten to forfeit $6,000 of the donations.

But Edmisten's campaign director Dick Carlton disputed the allegations, as did Edmisten when he attended a pig-picking in Greenville Wednesday night.

Elsewhere, the political action committee of the North Carolina chapter of the National Organization for Women endorsed Edmisten for governor and Sen. Robert Jordan for lieutenant governor.

"We feel that these two races are critical for the future of women in North Carolina," said North Carolina NOW committee chairwoman Johanna Ettin of Winston-Salem.

Ms. Ettin said Martin and GOP lieutenant governor hopeful John Carrington have shown a lack of interest in their female constituents and have opposed the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion.

Former North Carolina Congressman Earl B. Ruth was named honorary chairman of Harris Blake's campaign to unseat Democratic 8th District Rep. Bill Hefner.

Actor Charleton Heston will appear with 6th District GOP congressional candidate Howard Coble today at a $100-per-person Reagan-Bush fund-raising luncheon in Greensboro.

Tobacco Discount Plan Falls Short

RALEIGH (AP) — New strategies to save the tobacco program may have to be developed now that a discount sales plan that might have reduced huge government surpluses will not be triggered, tobacco officials say.

"It is a mathematical impossibility at this point," said T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, of the discount program.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., which acquires tobacco that fails to win a bid above the government support price at auction, had announced in July a discount program to help stimulate sales of its burgeoning surplus stocks.

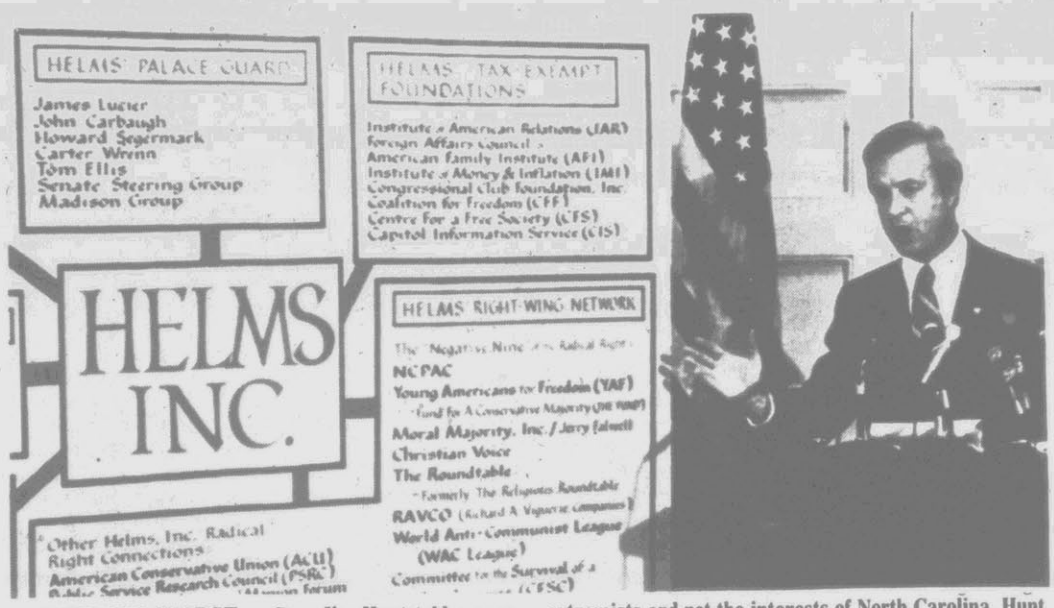
To keep the discounts from disrupting sales of the 1984 crop, however, tobacco companies were required to buy at least 720 million pounds of the current crop before they would be eligible for the reduced prices.

"It's obvious that we are not going to reach the trigger at this point," said Fred Bond, executive director of the stabilization corporation. "Certainly we are disappointed in that there was a strong feeling in July and even August that the 720 (million pound) level would be reached."

According to the Federal-State Market News Service, net sales of tobacco through Oct. 4 amounted to 587.8 million pounds, or 132.4 million pounds short of triggering the discount program.

Tobacco officials estimated that less than 130 million pounds of tobacco remain to be sold on the 1984 market. Even if tobacco companies were to buy all of that, they would not reach the goal.

"Had the purchasers' incentive plan gone into effect, we would have seen some immediate relief," Blalock said. "It would have given us some breathing room and renewed optimism. Not reaching the target level has raised concern on our part that we face the possibility of losing the (tobacco) program."



CAMPAIGN CHARGE — Gov. Jim Hunt told a news conference in Raleigh Wednesday that Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is serving the interests of "right-wing" extremists and not the interests of North Carolina. Hunt accused Helms of spending 12 years in the Senate to build a political empire. (AP Laserphoto)

Baptist Budget Shows Shortfall

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board has approved a $144.2 million budget for 1985.

The budget, approved Wednesday, reflects a 5½ percent increase from the 1984 fiscal plan but a $6 million shortfall from projections in the Southern Baptist Convention's Cooperative Program budget, of which the mission agency gets about half.

The mission agency's percentage increase is the lowest in recent years. The 1984 budget is 8.49 percent higher than the previous year. The 1983 and 1982 budgets saw increases of 20.15 percent and 15.9 percent, respectively.

This year's annual Lottie Moon Christmas offering, a major source of the agency's income, also came in $2 million below projections.

In part to make up for the shortfall, the board president, Dr. R. Keith Parks asked for a 13.74 percent increase in the Lottie Moon offering this Christmas, to $66 million.

A mission board official said this year's shortfalls probably reflect a strain on individual giving.

Clergy Ask Halt To Briley Death

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A group of black clergymen have asked Gov. Charles S. Robb to stop the scheduled Friday execution of Linwood Briley, the convicted killer who helped lead the largest death row breakout in U.S. history earlier this year.

The clergymen met for 45 minutes Wednesday with Robb's executive assistant, David K. McCloud, to ask that the governor commute Briley's death sentence.

But McCloud said Robb, although continuing to review the case, has seen nothing so far that would warrant his intrusion into the judicial process.

Meanwhile, Briley's attorneys have asked the U.S. Supreme Court for a stay of execution so they can appeal Tuesday's ruling by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which upheld Briley's capital murder conviction.

That appeal appears to be Briley's last option in the courts. The Supreme Court already has refused three times to review Briley's case — the latest refusal coming Tuesday on a 7-2 vote.

If the appeal fails, and if Robb refuses to intervene, Briley will die in the state's electric chair shortly after 11 p.m. Friday. He would be the second person executed in Virginia since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstituted the death penalty in 1976.

"Linwood has some hope, and we must all have some hope," said defense attorney Deborah Wyatt of Charlottesville. "But it's not looking its best."

Briley, who was convicted of the 1979 murder of Richmond disc jockey John Gallaher, has taken his appeals through state and federal courts four times.

His conviction and sentence has been affirmed three times by the Virginia Supreme Court, twice by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and three times by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Dr. Darrel Rollins, president of the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Richmond and Vicinity, was among the clergymen who met with McCloud on Wednesday to plead on Briley's behalf.

"The basis for requesting your use of this extraordinary power is simply that of mercy," Rollins said in a letter to the governor.

Letters asking Robb for mercy for Briley and expressing opposition to the death penalty also were delivered by the Richmond Committee of Black Clergy and the Tidewater Metro Baptist Ministers Conference.

Those groups represent about 300 black churches in the state.

Psychics Aid In Search For Child

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The six-member investigations division of the Hickory Police Department has been assigned to check out leads in the case of a 3½-year-old boy missing since Friday but is no longer coordinating search parties.

Meanwhile, the boy's parents have contacted two psychics to help in finding their son, whose disappearance has drawn more than 400 searchers from throughout the state.

The parents of Keith Purdue consulted Tuesday with the Rev. Don Hudson of Charlotte, a psychic and an ordained minister in the Church of Alliance of Divine Love. The Georgia-based sect believes in psychic power.

He suggested searchers look in the vicinity of a church about 2½ miles west of the child's home. But there is no church in that location and no clues were found, said Hickory police investigator Rick Jordan.

Anita and Keith Purdue then contracted the services of another Charlotte psychic, said Jordan, but he did not know the psychic's name.

"The family is working with the psychics on their own and bringing the information to us," Jordan said. "A lot of people who have missing family members contact psychics."

Hickory's Police Department, although no longer coordinating search parties, has assigned all of its six-member investigations division to check out leads.

The Purdues both work the third shift at Shuford Mills, a textile company in Hickory, and they take turns sleeping during the day. Apparently on Friday, they both accidentally fell asleep at the same time, Jordan said.

When they awoke, Keith was gone. He may have climbed through a window, leaving his 1½-year-old brother behind, Jordan said.

"They had given away a pet dog of his, and he was pretty upset about it," Jordan said. "The theory is he slipped away to find his pet dog. He's very closely attached to dogs. His father mentioned he's been known to crawl into dog houses."

Police have not ruled out the possibility of foul play, and a State Bureau of Investigation agent has been assigned to the case, Jordan said. A member of the National Bureau of Missing Children in Washington also has been assigned to monitor progress in the hunt.

Police still are calling it a lost child case, Jordan said.

"We're real hesitant to call it anything else because we don't have anything to go on," he said.

McGovern Says Mondale Can Avoid His Mistakes

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM (AP) — Former Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern says Walter Mondale's battle to unseat President Reagan reminds him of his 1972 challenge to Richard Nixon's re-election.

But McGovern, who is teaching a course on political leadership at Duke University, thinks Mondale can avoid repeating his loss to Nixon.

McGovern captured 38 percent of the vote in 1972 compared to 61 percent for Nixon. That gave Nixon one of the largest margins of victory in history. Reagan held a comparable lead over Mondale in a September Gallup Poll in North Carolina.

"Right now Reagan is well ahead but I haven't convinced myself it's over," said McGovern in an interview after he taught a two-hour class at Duke.

McGovern, who dropped out of the 1984 presidential race in March, compared inquiries about finances of vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro's husband to questions raised in 1972 about running mate Thomas Eagleton's psychiatric treatment.

Eagleton, a Missouri senator, made room for Sargent Shriver to run on the ticket with McGovern in light of the questions.

"They (the inquiries) came immediately after the convention and killed the momentum you usually have after a convention," McGovern said.

McGovern said he and Mondale also faced popular incumbents and he urged Mondale to try to control this year's campaign debates. He said he tried to do that with 15-minute "fireside chats" but said they came too late in the campaign to swing enough votes.

"In retrospect I doubt if anyone could have defeated Nixon," he said.

McGovern said he's finding students at the Durham university who doubt that politicians can solve the nation's problems and said many are receptive to Reagan's philosophy of individualism.

"It is not correct to say they are uninterested in issues but perhaps they are more skeptcial about political solutions," McGovern said. "They are more inclined to be involved in careers or preparing for their careers.

"I don't think there is any issue that traumatizes or arouses the students compared to the 1960s and Vietnam," he said. "They have watched people get involved in (political) movements, seen their hopes raised and then failure to find change. They're convinced you shouldn't count too heavily on political solutions."

He speculated that Reagan would have been seen as a "ridiculous figure" on campus in the 1960s but the new attitude generates a great deal of support for the Republican.

Panelist Cites Black Migration

DURHAM (AP) — A migration of black students to predominantly white schools that began in the 1960s took talent that normally would have gone to black institutions, a professor of sociology at Tennessee State University in Nashville said.

"But that talent's not being retained (on the white campuses)," Andrew Jackson. While 80 percent of blacks in postsecondary education are in predominantly white schools, more blacks graduate from historically black schools, he said at a national desegregation conference Wednesday.

"There is no serious commitment to retention (on the white campuses)," he said. "They want to meet affirmative action guidelines. Once they meet those guidelines, they are not interested in graduating those students."

Jackson's remarks came during a panel discussion at the National Conference on Desegregation in Postsecondary Education, which is sponsored by the Institute on Desegregation at North Carolina Central University.

Meanwhile, a University of Chicago educator said the nation's traditionally black colleges will survive, despite stepped-up desegregation efforts in higher education, because of their unique importance to blacks.

"On the one hand, we have fought long and hard to establish as legal principle the general rule that access to higher education cannot be denied on the basis of race," Edgar G. Epps, the Marshall Field IV Professor at the University of Chicago said Wednesday.

"On the other hand, blacks are proud of the black institutions that have served a vital role in the long struggle for equal education," he said.

During the panel discussion, William B. Harvey, an associate professor at N.C. State University, said colleges are paying lip service to putting more blacks on faculties, but not delivering results.

"The notion of substanial progress is just a rumor," Harvey said. "Institutions pay lip service to affirmative action."

The white academic community must come up with methods for seeing that black students are retained, said Clarence Williams, special assistant to president at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass.

"The attrition rate for black students remains higher than for majority students," Williams said.

Harvey cited one study that found that 72 of every 100 blacks will finish high school. Twenty-nine of the graduates will go to college, with 12 receiving degrees. Eight of those students go on to graduate schools, he said, with four receiving graduate degrees.

Williams said black administrators at white institutions often must serve as a role model for black students while also satisfying a white administrative hierarchy.

"We are serving two masters," he said. "Black administrators are for the most part without power and authority."

Medication Has Impact On Hair Growth

RALEIGH (AP) — A blood pressure medication had a pronounced impact in growing hair when bald men rubbed it on their scalps, a preliminary study at Duke University Medical Center indicates.

Men receiving the drug, which goes by the generic name minoxidil, averaged a doubling of dark, pigmented hairs within small tests areas of their scalps where each hair was counted.

About 60 percent of those men "felt they had at least a moderate response," said Elise A. Olsen, a dermatologist who led the yearlong Duke investigation as part of a study sponsored by Upjohn Co., a pharmaceutical firm.

The drug firm is supporting research to evaluate whether rubbing on the drug could be used to treat baldness.

FOCUS

It's Mrs. Roosevelt

Eleanor Roosevelt, born 100 years ago today, established the modern tradition of the "activist" First Lady. During President Franklin Roosevelt's 12 years in office, Americans became used to seeing Eleanor at prisons, on battleships, and at other exotic locations, gathering information for her husband. In one popular 1930s cartoon, a coal miner peers intently at a bright light in the tunnel, then proclaims to his fellow workers, "What did I tell you?? It IS Mrs. Roosevelt!"

DO YOU KNOW — Which American President was Eleanor Roosevelt's uncle?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Pieter W. Botha is the Prime Minister of South Africa.

Church Group Promoting Tolerance In Blending Politics And Religion

GREENSBORO (AP) — The national chairman of People For the American Way has come to North Carolina to push a new advertising campaign calling for greater tolerance in blending religion and politics.

The Rev. John Buchanan, a former Republican congressman from Alabama, said he was disturbed by the influence of right-wing fundamentalists in both the Republican Party and the Southern Baptist Convention.

"I have no problem with ministers raising questions about morality and faith," Buchanan said. "I just don't agree with their political agenda or the mindset that says, 'My way is God's way, and my politics is God's.'"

People For the American Way is a national watchdog group founded by television producer Norman Lear. Its headquarters are in Washington and it has a regional office in Winston-Salem.

Buchanan made a brief stop in Greensboro Wednesday, then went to Chapel Hill for a reception with state religious leaders.

In an interview, he compared the outlook of right-wing religious leaders to a "new kind of McCarthyism," a reference to the communist investigations of U.S. Sen. Joe McCarthy, R-Wis., in the 1950s.

Buchanan said what is happening in the Republican Party also is occurring in the Southern Baptist Convention.

In the past, both Southern Baptist and Republican extremists were considered to be on the fringe of both groups, he said.

Among Republicans, that fringe now is a "driving force" alienating young professionals and other potential constituencies by opposing such things as civil rights, he said.

Buchanan said he is a mainstream Republican and a mainstream Southern Baptist even though he disagrees with leaders in both groups. On Nov. 6, he will follow a lifelong pattern and vote Republican.

If Reagan is re-elected and does not distance himself from right-wing religion, both the GOP and the federal government may suffer, Buchanan said.

Buchanan, 56, was a Southern Baptist pastor for 10 years before resigning to run for Congress. From 1965 to 1980, he was in the U.S. House, where he gained a reputation for his support of education and human rights.

He said the religious right proved its power in 1980 when it helped unseat 32 out of 37 congressman, including him.

Buchanan was scheduled to speak at 9:30 a.m. today at the Radisson Hotel in Raleigh when People For the American Way formally announces its ad campaign. The campaign will have two 60-second ads, one two-minute ad and one five-minute ad. The last two will be narrated by actor Martin Sheen. Newspaper ads also are planned. The ads' basic message is that people can hold different viewpoints and still be as patriotic as right-wing leaders, Buchanan said.

The first television ad was to air today in the Raleigh area, said Barry Hager, the organization's state director. He said $30,000 will be spent on television ads in North Carolina.

Randleman Dam Cut By Congress

By The Associated Press

The proposed $132 million Randleman Dam was among several water projects deleted Wednesday by congressional budget conferees working on a $370 billion spending proposal, making it unlikely the dam will be approved this session.

"I guess that's it," said Lindsay Cox, executive director of the Piedmont Triad Council of Governments. "But it's not the total kiss of death."

The dam, discussed by local governments for more than three decades, primarily was designed to meet the long-term water needs of Greensboro and Guilford County.

Researcher Files Suit For $3.5 Million

DURHAM (AP) — A Duke University cancer researcher is suing the university and three of its radiologists for more than $3.5 million, alleging that the defendants undermined his reputation and interfered with his work.

The suit filed in Durham County Superior Court concerns an experimental cancer therapy known as hyperthermia and a machine called a Thermotron, said to be the only one of its kind in the United States. The therapy uses hot, humid air to produce an artificial fever for therapeutic results.

Raymond U, who has worked at Duke since 1967, is seeking more than $1 million in compensatory damages, more than $2 million in punitive damages from Duke and more than $500,000 in punitive damages from Leonard Prosnitz, director of the school's division of radiation oncology.

Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Here's an opportunity for you to display your play technique. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play six no trump after the lead of the queen of clubs.

The interesting point in the auction is South's simple two diamond response at his first turn. Despite his strength, he had no idea where the hand should be played, so his hand does not qualify for a jump shift. After both players bid out their shape, South opted for six no trump to protect against possible bad breaks in the red suits.

If you elected to win the club in hand, cash the queen of hearts and then cross to the board to cash the ace-king of hearts in the hope of a 3-3 split, you will go down unless you peeked and make the anti-percentage play of the ace of diamonds.

To protect against the normal 4-2 heart break, let's assume you win the club in hand, cash the queen of hearts, cross to the queen of spades and run the nine of diamonds. West wins the queen and continues with the jack of clubs. You win the king, but what do you pitch from the table?

If the hearts do break, you don't need to risk a second diamond finesse, so you can't let go a heart. But you cannot afford to sluff a diamond, either. If hearts are 4-2 and diamonds 4-1, you will need two more diamond finesses to bring in the suit. So the correct discard is dummy's low spade.

Cross back to the ace of spades and cash the high hearts, discarding clubs from your hand. When the suit doesn't break, run the jack of diamonds. When West shows out on this trick, you can repeat the finesse thanks to your clever play a few tricks earlier, and the contract is safe.

Laotion Charge

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Laos accused Thailand of lying, military expansionism and aggression, claiming in the Security Council that Thai troops occupied three Laotian border villages June 6 and mistreated the residents.

Thailand said the villages are in an area where the border is not marked and troops were sent in only after Laotian troops harrassed a roadbuilding crew on the Thai side of the border.

Tornado Reported

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — At least 10 people were killed and hundreds injured when a tornado tore through a southern Brazilian town, police reported.

"There wasn't a building left intact. We have found 10 bodies in the rubble so far, and there are indications we'll find more," state police Capt. Ivo Meier said.

Marine's Body Is Found

NEWPORT, N.C. (AP) — A Cherry Point Marine, whose body was found by a state worker Tuesday while cutting grass along a road, has been identified as Lance Cpl. Joel Dexter Long, 23, of Pender Park in Carteret County, said Carteret Sheriff's Det. Frank Galazia.

Galazia said a Department of Transportation worker, who was working along a road about four miles from U.S. 70 outside of Newport, found the body in a ditch about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Galazia said the cause of death had not been determined. He said further tests were scheduled by the regional medical examiner in Jacksonville.

Long was reported missing Monday by his wife, Galazia said.

Long apparently locked up the Jim Dandy store in Havelock where he worked about 11 p.m. Sunday. Long's wife found the couples' car Tuesday morning at the Sherwood Motel in Havelock, Galazia said. Long was never registered at the motel.

PBS Launches 'Mystery' Series With A Version Of 'Rumpole'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — John Mortimer's "Rumpole of the Bailey," back tonight as the first show of the season in public television's "Mystery!" series, is a trumped-up version of itself, making us wish for the real thing.

This is what happens when "Rumpole" tries to do TV the conventional network way with a two-hour premiere; "Rumpole's Return" is slack and contrived and not particularly good.

Rumpole retires to Miami but is summoned back to London's Old Bailey to handle a murder case that has — you guessed it — a Florida connection.

But the half-dozen succeeding installments, each an hour long, are, in contrast, classic "Rumpole of the Bailey" — compact and marvelously witty and rather savory to the senses.

Horace Rumpole, paunchy and irreverent, is the concoction of author John Mortimer, a practicing barrister before he turned to writing full time. He also wrote the script for Evelyn Waugh's "Brideshead Revisited" and won widespread acclaim for his reminiscent "Voyage Round My Father."

Leo McKern plays Rumpole, as he has in 10 episodes over two previous seasons, and it is difficult to imagine another actor in the curmudgeonly barrister's ash-dusted waistcoat.

"Yet the man is nothing like me," McKern insisted in his recently published autobiography, "Just Resting." "I would have walked out of that awful '30s flat (on Gloucester Road) and left 'She Who Must Be Obeyed' (as Rumpole refers to his wife, Hilda, played admirably by Peggy Thorpe-Bates) years ago.

"I probably would have succumbed to the temptation of abandoning principles and beliefs," he continued, "faced with the prospect of a succession of tomorrows that promised nothing but repetitions of today."

But the ability to cope with that sort of existence contributes mightily to the Rumpole charm. And McKern seems to understand that, remarking presently on the barrister's "balanced irony, his patience, his loyalty (and) his deeply buried convictions and faiths."

The stories themselves, beginning Oct. 18 with "Rumpole and the Golden Thread," are unexceptional, but the beauty here is in the telling, not in what is told. For instance ...

"And when London is but a memory and the Old Bailey has sunk back into the primeval mud," Rumpole declares at one point in the aforementioned "Golden Thread" episode, "my country will be remembered for three things: the British Breakfast, 'The Oxford Book of English Verse' and the Presumption of Innocence."

The capitalization is Mortimer's, from "Rumpole and The Golden Thread," a Penguin paperback, but it's a wonderful perspective on law and society offered by the lawyer in a particularly ludicrous setting: the Nova Lombaro High Court in the Central African nation of Narenga.

British Critics Praise Burton

LONDON (AP) — British critics today praised the late Richard Burton for his last major acting role, in the movie "Ninteen Eighty-Four," and one reported predictions that it could bring him a posthumous Oscar.

Burton, who died Aug. 5 at the age of 58, plays the interrogator named O'Brien in Michael Radford's movie version of George Orwell's famous book, which makes its London debut on Friday.

After seeing a preview screening, movie critic Mary Kenney wrote in today's Daily Mail: "The obituaries of Richard Burton were agreed on one regrettable point: he made too may bad movies, squandering his acting talents on worthless Hollywood bilge. Burton's final film, completed just before he died, should do something to reverse that harsh verdict.

"It is a highly serious movie. ... and it is already being predicted that it will bring the dead Burton an Oscar, a prize he failed to win in life."

Derek Malcolm wrote in the Guardian: "Richard Burton's O'Brien, though not the full man of the book, is all the better for eschewing the sonorous tones we know he can easily accommodate.

His last performance seems less like a performance than any he has given us for years."

"There is a strength and an anger and immediacy about it that is as commendable as the quality of its technique and its cast."

First Lady Kicks Off New Drug Awareness Program

SMYRNA, Ga. (AP) — It took a slip of the tongue to shift the focus from politics to drug abuse when first lady Nancy Reagan launched a new drug awareness program for McDonald's Corp.

Mrs. Reagan appeared at a McDonald's restaurant in a suburban Atlanta shopping mall Wednesday to kick off "Get It Straight," a public service program featuring radio spots to be aired nationwide and various local activities.

Upon entering the restaurant, however, she was besieged with questions from reporters about the presidential campaign.

She drew laughter — and managed to turn the questions toward the drug program — when she said: "I didn't mean it (her appearance) to take a political tone. I'm here for drugs."

Realizing how her words sounded, Mrs. Reagan quickly added, "You know what I mean."

Mrs. Reagan's Georgia visit followed appearances earlier in the day at a drug prevention class in Columbia, S.C., and a residential drug treatment program in Chattanooga, Tenn. She is scheduled to participate today in a student question and answer forum at Northside High School in Atlanta.

At the McDonald's news conference, Mrs. Reagan defended her husband's performance in Sunday's debate, which many political observers scored in favor of Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale.

President Reagan "answered every question well and to the point. I thought he was quick," she said.

She dismissed attempts to make the president's age — he is 73 — a campaign issue, saying: "That question has been raised ever since he ran for public office."

The McDonald's program is aimed at preventing drug use among teen-agers by providing "relevant information about the dangers of drug use and the benefits of a drug-free lifestyle," company officials said.

It includes a series of radio announcements featuring entertainers Michelle Lee and Tim Reid. McDonald's also will be working with selected local community drug education and prevention programs.

Dick Starmann, vice president in charge of communications for the fast food giant, said the company will spend "hundreds of thousands of dollars" on the program, which was developed after Mrs. Reagan asked McDonald's for help in anti-drug abuse efforts.

The restaurant was closed during Mrs. Reagan's appearance, though a large crowd of shoppers watched through the windows and applauded her arrival.

Mrs. Reagan, upon entering the restaurant, ordered a Big Mac and an orange drink, which was "on the house," said shift manager Barbara Kramb, who served her.

Senate Ready To Shelve Treaty Banning Genocide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is ready to shelve until next year a 35-year-old treaty outlawing genocide, while at the same time expressing support of the treaty's principles — a compromise one senator called a "cop-out."

Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said the Senate would vote today on a compromise substitute for the genocide treaty, which he said avoided an "almost certain" filibuster that would have tied the lawmakers up as they struggled to complete action on vital debt and spending bills so they can adjourn.

The treaty calls for legislation outlawing acts aimed at partly or completely destroying a religious, ethnic or national group. Ninety-six nations have signed it. President Truman signed for the United States in 1949, but the Senate has never ratified it.

President Reagan and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have endorsed the treaty, but it is opposed by some conservatives who say it could override the Constitution and submit American citizens to the whims of an alien court.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who speaks almost daily in the Senate on the treaty's behalf, has been pushing for action this year. But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and other conservatives threatened a time-consuming battle to add qualifying language to the agreement.

To solve the impasse, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., after consulting with both opponents and supporters of the treaty, came up with a resolution expressing "support for the principles embodied" in the pact and declaring an "intention to act expeditiously" next year.

Baker said this was "infinitely preferable to letting this important measure degenerate into a filibuster, which was almost certainly where we were headed."

But Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said, "I have grave regrets about this course of action and grave doubts that the treaty will not run into further roadblocks in the next session."

"I regret that those who really have not supported the treaty and have blocked it will now, in effect, get off the hook and it will not be clear where they stand," Cranston said.

Helms obtained an assurance from Baker that the resolution did not preclude what Helms called "full Senate consideration," including hearings, in the next Congress.

Under questioning from Sen. John East, R-N.C., an ally of Helms, Baker said passage of the resolution would not preclude anyone from offering amendments or reservations to the treaty next year, but would place the Senate clearly on record as favoring the principles now embodied in the treaty.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., said the resolution originally struck him as "a mealy-mouthed cop-out unworthy of the U.S. Senate" but that Baker's explanation "may be a crumb of comfort" for those voting for it to break the impasse.

East said he might vote against the resolution because it sounded to him like "a subtle way of saying we do support the treaty as it is written."

"I am not supporting genocide," East said. "But the treaty, as it is today, I find unacceptable."

East said the treaty would give too much authority to the International Court of Justice, which he said "is hostile to Western values and Western culture and is loaded with anti-Western, anti-American Third World countries."

Propst Reportedly To Be Chancellor

ATLANTA (AP) — The chairman of the state Board of Regents says it's still up in the air, but a newspaper reported H. Dean Propst was the choice of a regents committee searching for a new University System chancellor.

The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution, in Wednesday and today's editions, quoted souces close to the committee as saying the panel voted 4-1 with one abstaining Tuesday to recommend that Propst, executive vice chancellor of the University System of Georgia, be named chancellor.

But board chairman Sidney Smith told The Associated Press, "There were no votes, no recommendations made. We interviewed three people and no decision was made."

Smith said the committee will interview more candidates for the job.

The Constitution reported that several members of the committee denied there had been any formal balloting, but also quoted sources as saying Propst received expressions of support from all but one of the members present.

Seven regents attended at least part of the meeting, where Propst, University of Georgia President Fred Davison and University of Alabama President Joab Thomas were interviewed.

The Constitution also quoted an unnamed source as saying that despite the committee's show of support for Propst, Davison is not out of the running.

Six regents sit on the search committee. Regent John Henry Anderson of Hawkinsville, who is not a committee member, also attended the meeting Tuesday.

The search committee will recommend a candidate for chancellor to the full 15-member Board of Regents, which will choose one by the end of the year. The board is not bound by the committee recommendation.

Thomas had said he is not a candidate for the job and that he agreed to meet with the regents only as a consultant. But Smith has said he hoped Thomas would become a candidate.

Last spring, Vernon Crawford announced he would step down from the post next summer. Crawford has been the top administrator of Georgia's 33-college public University System since 1980.

New Ambassador

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Igor Andropov, son of the late Soviet President Yuri Andropov, has arrived to take up his new position as Soviet ambassador to Greece.

Andropov, accompanied by his wife, Tatiana, and their 6-year-old son, Kostya, was greeted at Athens airport by two officials from the Greek Foreign Ministry. He made no statement to reporters.

The 43-year-old career diplomat replaces Vladimir Kaboshkin, who retired after serving five years as Soviet envoy in Greece.

The 1985 Peugeot

If you've always wanted to own a Peugeot...

We have the car whose ride is so smooth it has been called "eerie".

The four-wheel independent suspension of the Peugeot 505 is awesomely competent. Cut open a Peugeot shock absorber and you will find it contains four times as many valves as normal shock absorbers, giving the Peugeot perhaps the most unruffled ride of any car today.
