Vice President George Bush

But Bush Gets Early Edge

Debate For No. 2 Hinges On Who Wanted What

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Bush contended he'd "turned it around" for the Republican ticket, while Geraldine Ferraro claimed "Two out of two ain't bad" after the vice presidential candidates engaged in a sharp duel for campaign momentum that drew favorable reviews from the tops of their tickets.

The vice presidential debate covered both domestic and foreign policy, and the two candidates sparred over issues ranging from taxes and abortion to terrorism and the depth of their experience. It was their only debate of the campaign.

An Associated Press panel of seven debate judges scored Bush the winner. Four of the debate experts called him the winner outright, one called it a close victory for Ms. Ferraro, and two scored it a tie. The same panel called Walter F. Mondale a clear winner over President Reagan in their debate last Sunday.

The first hint of public reaction to their 90-minute debate at the Philadelphia Civic Center came from an ABC News poll that said Bush was named the winner by 42 percent and Ms. Ferraro by 33 percent, while 25 percent called it a tie. A total of 681 people were contacted in the hour after the debate, and the poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 points.

Another poll, commissioned by USA Today, also showed a plurality of those surveyed thought Bush had bested Ms. Ferraro.

Bush and Ms. Ferraro each stepped on the stage with a clear mission as they debated four days after Mondale's strong showing against Reagan in the first of two debates. Reagan and Mondale will debate again Oct. 21.

Bush, seeking to reverse the momentum gained by Mondale, took an aggressive stance, often aiming his attacks at the presidential nominee rather than Ms. Ferraro.

In the aftermath of the Mondale-Reagan debate, the Democratic ticket had gained a few points in polls and Mondale's leadership ratings in surveys rose dramatically.

Using a more subdued style, the New York congresswoman sought to demonstrate she was qualified for the nation's second highest office and could assume the presidency if necessary.

"I will be a leader," she said when asked whether she thought the Soviets might try to take advantage of the fact she is a woman. "If the Soviet were to ever believe

Wholesale Costs Keep Declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, down two months running, fell 0.2 percent in September, the government said today. The drop was the sharpest since January 1983 and marked the first time in eight years that prices fell for two straight months.

Today's good news meant that, for the first nine months of the year, prices at the wholesale level rose a minuscule 1.9 percent, surprising economists who had forecast an inflation rate approaching 5 percent for all of 1984.

Much of the credit for last month's performance went to lower food and gasoline prices.

Food prices fell 0.4 percent, the fifth time in the last six months that those prices have dropped. Prices for pork and eggs continued their sharp declines while the costs of fresh vegetables and fish were also off.

Gasoline prices declined for the fourth month running, although the 0.5 percent decline was off sharply from the previous month's 4.2 percent drop.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes noted a separate report today that said retail sales rose in September after two monthly declines and called the two reports "a winning team."

The good news on inflation, he added, "provides a new foundation for consumers to be confident that their salaries won't be eaten up by inflation."

Today's inflation report took many analysts by surprise. While most are forecasting only moderate price increases for the balance of the year, none had foreseen the decline, which doubled August's 0.1 percent drop in the wholesale inflation rate.

The persistently docile inflation is much the product of the overall economic slowdown. Also aiding in the fight is the strength of the dollar, which keeps pressure on domestic producers to hold down prices in the face of cheaper foreign goods.

"Higher inflation is still nowhere on the horizon," private economist Michael Evans said in advance of today's report. "It is just the wrong time to raise prices. Firms would be wiped out by imports."

Today's energy price calculations were actually for August. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

Indeed, since Labor Day, there have been indications that gasoline prices are on the way up following apparently successful efforts by Arab oil producers to cut back on production.

Prices rose only 0.6 percent last year, the smallest gain in two decades, after climbing 3.7 percent in 1982.

Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, its ranks thinned by the early departure of senators expecting a congressional adjournment, rejected vital legislation to raise the national debt limit early today, prompting a new government financial squeeze and further delaying the end of the 98th Congress.

Military aircraft were dispatched at the request of Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. to bring back the missing senators for another vote on the debt limit today.

The Senate rejected the measure 46-14.

High absenteeism, combined with a Democratic gesture of political defiance to protest spiraling federal deficits under the Reagan administration, provided the margin of negative votes that torpedoed the bill.

The bill would raise federal borrowing authority by $251 billion, to $1.824 trillion.

Soon after the vote, Baker abruptly recessed the Senate.

Council Halts Medical District Rezoning Effort

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

In regular session Thursday night, the Greenville City Council passed a resolution halting rezoning activity in the medical arts district until updated recommendations for future development of land surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital can be approved.

Those recommendations will be developed by a committee not yet in existence. Composition of the proposed committee will be discussed by the council in its workshop session Oct. 22. City officials are predicting that the whole project — committee selection, study, recommendation, review and approval — will take six months.

Pat Daugherty, representing the local chapter of the League of Women Voters, urged the council to appoint persons to the committee "who have no actual or apparent conflicts of interest and ... hold broad public interest perspectives as well as private interest perspectives."

Dr. Daugherty also said the league suggests (1) the council avoid appointing its own members to the committee and (2) consider making the appointments in a regularly scheduled meeting rather than in a workshop. She added that "this committee seems to be too important to be appointed in a workshop session." Councilman M.W.

Bridge Reopens

The Greene Street bridge across Tar River has been reopened to traffic after being closed for three days for routine repairs.

Rick Shirley, division engineer for the 2nd Highway Division headquartered in Greenville, said repairs to remedy "a bearing plate problem" were ordered following a routine periodic inspection. "This resulted in cutting holes in the bridge in one section, installing new pilings, and a new bridge cap," he said.

The work completed late Wednesday, Shirley said, "puts the structure in a condition to indefinitely handle the flow of traffic over the bridge."

GOP Nominee For Secretary Of State Planning Changes

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Republican candidate for North Carolina secretary of state, Patric Dorsey of New Bern, said Thursday she will modernize the office if elected Nov. 6.

Mrs. Dorsey said, "For nearly five decades, the office of secretary of state has been allowed to stagnate. What was once vital has become ceremonial, what was once responsive has become dormant. I would modernize this office, update it, to transform it into a more active role in state government."

In an interview Mrs. Dorsey said the department's records should be put on computer to facilitate the office's function of "informing the public and providing information to the legislators."

She also suggested moving the office of the secretary of state to the State Legislative Office Building "where the other offices of the secretary of state are located."

"I would have an open-door policy so the legislators will have more access to the office," the candidate said.

Dorsey ...

Mrs. Dorsey, the wife of a retired Navy commander, is the mother of three adult sons. She has a 9-year-old granddaughter. A native of Memphis, Tenn., she and her husband came to New Bern on his retirement from the Navy in 1963.

"In the climate of North Carolina, people have the opportunity to do and become involved in any way they want," she said.

Mrs. Dorsey began her political involvement as the Craven County chairman for Citizens for Reagan in 1976, when she was an alternate delegate to the Kansas City Republican Convention. In 1978, she was Craven County chairman of the Helms for Senate committee.

She served on the Platform Committee with Sen. Jesse Helms at the 1980 National Republican Convention in Detroit. "It was that platform that carried President Reagan to victory over Jimmy Carter," she observed.

Mrs. Dorsey has been a member of the Craven County Industrial Development Commission since its inception in 1975. She serves as chairman today. She was appointed by President Ronald Reagan as a member of the National Advisory Council on Adult Education and is currently chairman of the Governmental Regulations and Legislation Committee. She also serves as Republican chairman in the 1st Congressional District, which covers 21 counties.

Mrs. Dorsey said she thinks a woman can do an exceptional job as North Carolina secretary of state.

"Women in the Republican Party have a long history of involvement and a women candidate as secretary of state is not without precedent," she said.

they could challenge the United States with any sort of nuclear forces, or otherwise, if I were in a position of leadership in this country they would be assured that they would be met with swift, concise and certain retaliation."

Bush said the Democrats were offering only "weakness, despair, disrespect" while Reagan had "brought America back" and created "a new enthusiasm" across the country.

After the debate, Reagan telephoned his vice president and a White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said of the president, "I'm sure he's delighted with the vice president's performance."

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro also talked by phone. The Democratic presidential nominee said his running mate was "strong, intelligent, dignified and powerful."

The vice presidential candidates got enthusiastic receptions at post-debate rallies.

(Henry) Aldridge said he would like to see all sides represented on the committee: "If you've got people from both extremes ... and those in the middle ... it helps you (to) get all the cards on the table."

"We do, however," Dr. Aldridge added, "want the committee to be as fair and as impartial as possible."

In related business, Judy Kornegay withdrew her client's request to rezone 4.1 acres located on the south side of secondary road 1200 just east of PCMH and adjacent to ABC Moving and Storage from medical arts to shopping center. Ms. Kornegay said her client, Guy Mayo, would wait until the medical arts study was complete to resubmit his request.

In the only dissenting vote that occurred during the council session, Mayor Pro-tem Ed Carter raised his hand in favor of reducing the speed limit on Farmville Boulevard from 25 mph and to allow on-street parking from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Monday through Friday and over the weekends. The rest of the council voted against the request.

After hearing supporting and opposing arguments, the council unanimously voted to retain the current family and rooming-board house definitions, leaving the limit on non-related family members allowed to live in a single dwelling at three.

Speaking in favor of the change was local attorney Steve Horne who said the definition created problems for developers of private student housing. Horne urged the council toward consideration of alternative measures to govern neighborhoods and areas where housing allowing more than three persons would be acceptable.

Far River Neighborhood Association President Inez Fridley, speaking in opposition to the request, asked the council to refrain from changing the definition, saying: "The current definition is definitely in line with long-range planning of Greenville."

The following rezoning requests, recommended to the council by the Planning and Zoning Commission as excellent transition decisions and as being compatible with city development plans, were unanimously approved.

• A request by B.C. Branch to rezone approximately 8 acres located on the east side of N.C. 11, approximately 725 feet south of Airport Road from highway commercial to office and institutional.

• A request by Johnny F. Wheeler to rezone approximately .34 acres located on the north side of Langley Street (formerly Clark Street) from R-6 (residential) to unoffensive industry.

• A request by Joseph M. Taft Jr. (for Walter R. Perkins Jr. and wife) to rezone approximately .23 acres located on the northeast corner of 12th Street and Seaboard Coastline Railroad from R-6 to unoffensive industry.

Council members also elected to annex 10 non-contiguous acres located on the north side of N.C. 43 west, known as Senior Village West, and to bring 49 acres located on the south side of secondary road 1708 adjacent to the N.C. Forestry Service Tower and Evans Mobile Home Park into the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction. The extension of extraterritorial jurisdiction, brought by Tommie L. Little, also carried with it zoning requests to designate 3.5 of the 49 acres R-9 (residential) and 45 acres R6-MH. (residential-mobile home). The council approved those requests as well.

Consent agenda items granted in blanket approval included the following:

• An ordinance amending school zone time schedules and extending the school zone on Elm Street from North Overlook Drive to 10th Street.

• A resolution and municipal agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation for performance on thoroughfare planning studies.

• An ordinance amending the Recreation Capital Project Fund to allow for purchase of park land in the Club Pines area.

• An agreement with the Greenville Jaycees for use of dwelling located on city property.

• A resolution declaring certain vehicles and equipment surplus to the city's needs and authorizing sale at public auction.

Helms And Hunt Debate Saturday

By The Associated Press

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt square off Saturday in the last of the televised Senate debates that have heightened their campaign's bitterness and tension.

The hour-long debate will begin at 7 p.m. and will be the only one of four to have a live audience. About 95 members of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters and the N.C. Radio and Television News Directors Association will attend it.

The previous three debates — one in late July and the other two in September — have seen Hunt attack Helms as a right-wing extremist and Helms blast Hunt as a liberal affiliated with Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale.

Their final meeting in formal debate surroundings will begin at 7 p.m. at the Adams Mark Hotel in Charlotte.

Helms' strategists haven't commented on their strategy, but a Hunt spokesman said the governor will persist in tying Helms to the far right.

Helms, who struck a low-key, gentlemanly image in the first debate, became more aggressive thereafter. In the third debate, which some experts said was his best performance, Helms sharply blast Hunt as a liberal.

Branch Of French Gourmet Restaurant Opens In Tokyo

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent
TOKYO (AP) — A dream came true for a sumo wrestler's son when the Tour d'Argent, one of France's greatest restaurants, opened its first and only branch overseas here.

He is Yoneichi Otani, 68, president of the New Otani Hotel, where the 400-year-old restaurant recently began serving Japanese gourmets attracted by its reputation as one of the few to consistently get top, three-star rating from the authoritative Guide Michelin.

Equally impressive, to many Japanese, is the fact that Emperor Hirohito has twice dined on the Tour's specialty, pressed duckling, on his first European tour as crown prince in 1921 and more recently in 1971.

Otani spent more than $4 million to reproduce the picture windows, paneling, chandeliers, paintings, carpeting and Louis Seize furniture of the Paris original.

The opening celebrated the 20th anniversary of the hotel, begun by Yoneichi's father, a veteran of the traditional sumo wrestling ring which features men grown to enormous size through enthusiastic eating and drinking, much in the way Peking ducks are force fed for the Chinese table.

Normally, when sumo wrestlers retire, they head stables of younger wrestlers. Yoneichi's father, happily for Japanese lovers of French food and wine, didn't make the grade.

"He wasn't good enough to head a wrestling stable," said Yoneichi over a companionable glass of Pomeroy brut royal, "so he went into the hotel business."

He died three years after the hotel opened and Yoneichi has run the show since, opening a new 42-story tower and enlarging its capacity to 2,100 rooms, which he says makes it the biggest hotel in Asia.

He got the idea of bringing the Tour d'Argent to Tokyo after dining there himself and then meeting one of its executives on a flight to Tokyo.

French restaurants are not new to Tokyo. The craze for French cuisine erupted a decade ago and since then at least 200 big and little restaurants, their chefs trained in Paris, have been established. Maxim's was the first to open a branch here.

Intricate and exhaustive negotiations took place before the Tour's president, Claude Terrail, consented.

"I was against it," he said at a press preview luncheon. "There were too many problems."

One of them was the availability of fresh fruit, vegetables, meat, fish and fowl. He sent his Grand Chef, 32-year-old Dominique Bouchet, here to check out the markets. He discovered what most Japanese already know, that few countries excel Japan in those departments. Special items, like truffles and ducklings from Nantes, will be flown in daily.

Otani wanted the restaurant so badly he didn't carry out the usual market survey to find out whether it will be profitable.

"Actually, I don't expect it to make a profit," he said. "It will more than pay for itself by adding to the hotel's prestige."

He even discounted the popularity among his Japanese clients of the pressed duck.

"It has a sauce made from the duck's blood," he said. "Most Japanese believe in Buddhism, which frowns on blood dishes."

The Emperor, who appears to have had none of these qualms, in 1921 got the 53,211th pressed duckling in the Tour's history and, like all patrons, received a souvenir commemorating this fact. By the time he got around to his second visit, 50 years later, the consumption of pressed duckling had risen remarkably. His number was 423,900.

The first pressed duckling served in Tokyo bears the number 53,212. Why not 423,901? Presumably because one follows an emperor's first act.

The grand chef of the Tokyo branch is Bernard Noel, 26. He joined the Paris restaurant less than two years ago after a distinguished career and in six months had risen to sous chef.

The Tokyo version may well acquire a reputation as the world's most expensive restaurant, though Otani insists one could get a decent meal for a modest 12,000 yen, or about $50 dollars.

Officers Recognized At Chapter Meet

The Beta Alpha Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma held its fall meeting recently at the Ramada Inn. Emphasizing the program theme for the year, "Express," Joyce Pettis presented two Beta Alpha members, Mildred Southwick and Jo Ann Leigh, for "autobiographical roastings."

Irma Worthington, Sally Mann and Anne Briley depicted Dr. Southwick and Jessie McDonald, Terry Shank and Frances Gwynn roasted Mrs. Leith.

Rosalie Hariton, newly-elected president of the chapter, presided and recognized the other officers: Jessie McDonald, first vice president; Frances Daniels, second vice president; Jean Averette, recording secretary; Elizabeth Sparrow, corresponding secretary; Jo Ann Leigh, treasurer; Anne Briley, parliamentarian; Mildred Southwick, historian; and Irma Worthington, coordinating council representative.

New handbooks prepared by Jessie McDonald and Frances Daniels were distributed.

Katherine Hodgkin, finance chairman, submitted a proposed budget to the members.

Four new members were inducted into the chapter. Elizabeth H. Copeland was welcomed as a honorary member, and Nancy Evans, Jean R. Holley and Deborah S. Stewart as active members.

PLANNING NEEDED FOR SAFE HALLOWEEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Halloween, a centuries-old custom of carefree fun and fantasy, has become an observance that stresses caution, notes Alexandra Eames, representative of a firm that produces Halloween makeup kits.

"There are six basic precautions to take to make sure we have a happy Halloween," says Ms. Eames, spokeswoman for PAAS:

—An adult should accompany children going trick-or-treating and they should go only to homes of people that you know.

—Wear hypoallergenic makeup instead of masks, which can obstruct vision.

—Put reflecting tape on costumes, and carry a flashlight.

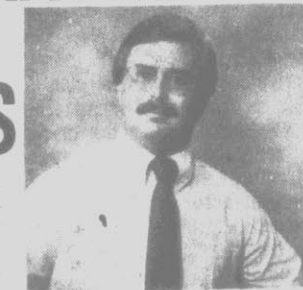

—Make sure the costumes and goody bags won't trip trick-or-treaters.

—Give and accept only store-wrapped goods as treats.

—Leave and return home from trick-or-treating before dark, if at all possible.

Know Where To Shop For Your Modest Swimwear

DEAR READERS: "Mad in Madison" wrote: "If you know where a woman can buy a modest one-piece bathing suit, please let me know. I am a senior citizen whose doctor has recommended swimming as a healthful exercise, but I am no Venus in a bathing suit," etc.

I told "Mad" I would have to search far. Hundreds of readers sent pages from the catalogs of Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, J.C. Penney and National, all featuring beautifully styled, modest bathing suits such as I have not seen in many years. There were one-piece (some skirted), not-too-revealing swimsuits, available in all sizes for women of all ages. And the prices were right, too.

Another surprise: The Lane Bryant stores, known for dressing the larger woman, carry stylish, conservative bathing suits from size 14 and up.

Many readers suggested shopping at medical supply shops. They said the bathing suits designed especially for women who have had mastectomies are good-looking, have built-in bras, and were purchased by many women who have not had mastectomies. (Look under "Prosthetic Appliances" in the Yellow Pages of your telephone directory.)

All maternity shops feature modest, non-revealing swimwear, some with matching cover-up jackets, suitable for non-pregnant women.

Another idea: Leotards, now popular for exercise and dancing classes, can double for swimwear. They're comfortable, good-looking, modest and reasonably priced.

And last but not least, make your own. Stretch-and-sew fabrics and patterns are available in shops and department stores.

So, women, we need not be slaves to fashion. The abbreviated bikini is only for the lean, the young, the hairless and the brave. But fortunately, we do have some choices—when we know where to look.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were going to take our grandchildren, ages 8 and 10, to the movies last Saturday, and we ended up having ice cream and going home without seeing a movie.

Do you know why? I will tell you why. There were nine movies playing, and not one was a family movie. They were all rated PG, PG-13 and R.

Abby, the movies used to be a family pleasure. Why doesn't the movie industry make family entertainment anymore? We have to see reruns of "Snow White" and "Bambi" until we have them memorized.

We need some good, funny, clean, old-fashioned movies. Abby, what ever happened to Laurel and Hardy?

GRANDPA IN APPLE VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR GRANDPA: The same thing that happened to Abbott and Costello. (They died.)

Movie moguls, are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I want to start a family. Twelve years ago, when I was 17, I had an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy. There were no complications.

I do not want it on my medical record. My husband does not know about it, and if he were to find out, the consequences could be devastating.

Can my gynecologist tell if I've had an abortion?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: No. If yours was a routine, complete abortion with no complications, there is no way a gynecologist can detect it.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Blessing

It looks as though bad news for peanut growers in other producing states is being born in Georgia with a bumper crop that is so big it's hard to handle. The potential for trouble is worrisome.

For varied reasons, Georgia farmers planted 13 percent more acres which saw unexpectedly favorable growing conditions and the state has peanuts running out of its ears.

The harvest is not yet complete, but storage and processing facilities are overburdened. Warehouses are filled and peanuts are being stored in tobacco and cotton warehouses; some are even being shipped to Alabama for storage.

Agricultural spokesmen are predicting adverse effects on prices and the peanut support program.

The potential for superabundance always seems to hang over this country's agricultural scene.

Even the hope for exports to enlarge the market for our produce is sorely affected by the high value of the U.S. dollar in relation to foreign currencies.

Our farmers can, and sometimes do, produce too much of everything. It hurts.

On the other hand, it could be worse.

For a moment, think the unthinkable. Suppose — just suppose — the American farmers were under siege for year after year by drought or crop disease, or some other long-enduring disaster that strikes other parts of the world, and they could not feed our people.

Food shortages or famine would be infinitely worse than our superabundance. We can think of no other country who might be able to fulfill the help we might require.

The thought makes our plight appear more of a blessing than a curse.

Colors

Though the days have been warm this week, the chill in the air at night tells us fall is at hand.

A closely watched annual event is the turning of the leaves in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. The brilliant fall colors will be at their best between Oct. 15 and Oct. 25, according to Park Superintendent John Cook.

The great show has already begun at elevations above 4,000 feet. The fall colors bring large numbers of visitors to the North Carolina mountains and Cook suggested weekday visits and alternate routes to avoid the crowds.

Another alternative for those of us in eastern North Carolina is to stay put. Inexorably the colors of fall will march across our state. Soon the woods of eastern North Carolina will be putting on a show of their own. Because our forests are on flat land the show might not be quite the same as the one in the mountains, but it will be spectacular. It will be an ideal time for a drive in the country or a walk in the woods.

Time For Private Prisons?

RALEIGH — Here's an idea for legislators tired of looking for money to keep the prisons running. Let private industry build and run the prisons.

Sound silly? Some states don't think so. Private, for-profit prisons are actually popping up in this country and a recent report for the National Conference of State Legislatures says it's an idea whose time may be coming.

NCSL's magazine, "State Legislatures," reported recently that there are a dozen private institutions either now operating or about to open which hold prisoners for governmental bodies. The institutions have contracts with local governments, the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Two states, Florida and Pennsylvania, have juvenile prisons operated by private companies.

Prison officials in North Carolina and around the country are looking for ways to cut the horrendous costs of incarceration. North Carolina General Assembly figures show that it costs the state about $11,000 a year to maintain an inmate. With the state's prison population rising after dropping last year, there are fears that the state might soon need to begin a prison building program. Each new cell in a medium security prison now costs about $30,000 to construct.

The driving force behind private prisons is cost-saving. NCSL's report quotes several former state and federal prison officials who have gone into the private prison business. They say that private companies can house a prisoner for less than can the state. By contracting with the state to hold prisoners, they can cut state costs and make some profit for themselves.

WASHINGTON — Federal researchers have discovered that a chemical solvent found in many household products — and recently judged innocuous by an Environmental Protection Agency panel — causes an extremely high incidence of cancer in mice.

According to an as-yet-unpublished study by scientists at the National Institutes of Health, inhalation of the solvent methylene chloride resulted in liver and lung tumors in 70 to 80 percent of the mice tested. Researchers subjected the test animals to doses of 2,000 to 4,000 parts per million.

On the average, methylene chloride makes up from 10 percent to 20 percent of aerosol products such as hair sprays and anti-perspirants; the solvent's share of some aerosol paint products can run as high as 55 percent. The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) says that the levels of methylene chloride in the air during paint stripping range between 250 parts per million and 2,000 parts per million.

The NIH's National Toxicology Program notified the CPSC of its test results, which an NIH scientist called "preliminary," in July. Ironically, the EPA had frequently turned down requests from the CPSC to study the potential cancer effects of methylene chloride. In August, the EPA's Science Advisory Board and its air pollution division still believed that the agency possessed "insufficient evidence of (methylene chloride's alleged) carcinogenicity."

EPA has apparently revised its internal assessment and included methylene chloride among a list of solvents to be studied by an agency task force, according to a Washington-based newsletter, Inside EPA.

But the EPA's latest response suggests that safety precautions could come many months from now. "A lot of chemicals that common sense government would regard as cancer-causing agents are, in this country, considered innocent until proven guilty," says former EPA assistant administrator David Hawkins. Indeed, American consumers may need immediate protections against — not more studies of — this everyday chemical's potential hazards.

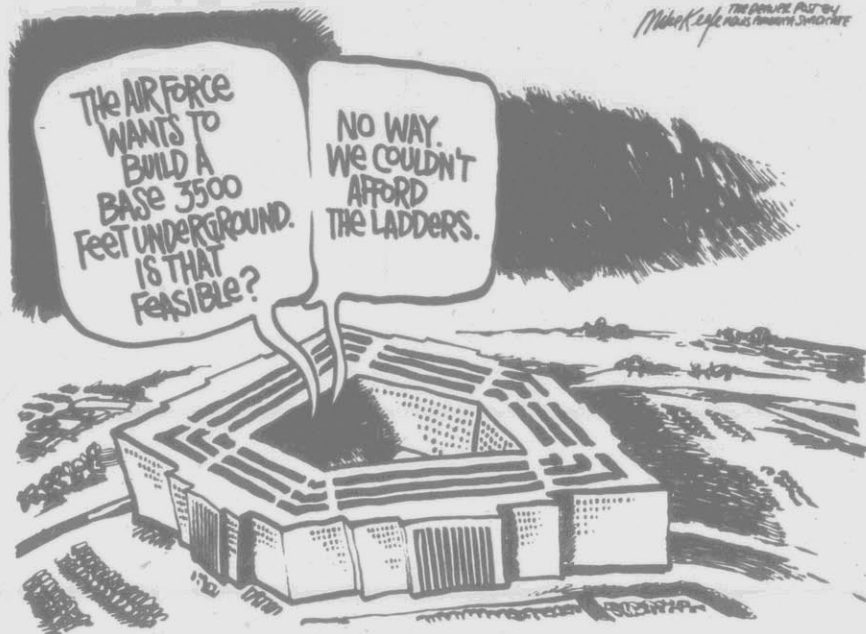

Nearly 75 percent of all Kentuckians are concerned about acid rain, according to a poll recently conducted by the Kentucky Energy Cabinet. But when asked what should be done about the problem, 63 percent of those surveyed said that it required more research. Four percent, meanwhile, said that no action was necessary and only 86 percent advocated tighter environmental controls. Kentucky, not surprisingly, is a major "soft" coal state; coal-burning power plants emit much of the sulphur dioxide on which the Northeast's acid rain is blamed.

Democratic Reps. Glenn English of Oklahoma and Dan Daniel of Virginia have blocked a Treasury Department request for Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) surveillance aircraft. Treasury, which oversees the U.S. Customs Service, wanted the AWACS to locate the ships and private planes of drug dealers en route to America. English and Daniels, however, contended that the diversion would undermine military readiness. Under a compromise agreement with the Defense Department, Treasury will instead receive six Navy aircraft equipped with sophisticated radar devices.

Miffed by the breakdown in House-Senate negotiations over landmark immigration control legislation, proponents of the measure plan to employ new tactics when Congress returns next year. According to Roger Conner, executive director of the Washington-based Federation for Immigration Reform, pro-control forces are likely to seek passage of the comprehensive reform package on a piecemeal basis. "This experience has taught us that if you try comprehensive reform, you enrage every special interest in Washington," Conner says. "We're going to have to pick our targets and hit (the opposition) hard."

Where Did the Bumper Stickers Go?

There is something wrong with this presidential election year, and up until recently I couldn't put my finger on it. Then it occurred to me that I hadn't seen a bumper sticker for either candidate since the race got under way.

People are no longer declaring themselves on their cars as they did in other presidential campaigns.

I asked an astute political observer what he made of the phenomenon.

He said, "Why would you want to mess up the bumper of your car with the choice of candidates we have this year?"

"It just seems the election would be more exciting if you knew who the guy you were driving behind was voting for," I said.

"Well, if the person is driving a Mercedes-Benz or a Jaguar, you can assume he's voting for Reagan."

"And if he's driving an old jalopy he's voting for Mondale?"

"Not necessarily. The guy driving the old jalopy may think that if he votes for Reagan he'll be able to buy a new car with all the tax cuts the president has promised him."

"What kind of car would you have to own to be a Mondale supporter?"

"One that the bank just repossessed because you couldn't keep up the payments on it. You don't see too many of those cars on the road because the banks have turned them over to used car salesman."

"You would think that Reagan supporters would love to advertise the fact they're supporting the Reagan Bush ticket."

"People are very nervous about putting a political bumper sticker on their car. They're afraid that a Mondale supporter might smash into them just for spite."

"But you said there aren't that many Mondale supporters on the road."

"There aren't many, but they are pretty mad about how badly Fritz is doing, and they figure they have nothing to lose by totaling a Reagan voter's brand-new Cadillac."

"You mean they would total a car just because their boy is behind in the polls?"

"What other choice do they have if they want to make a political statement?"

"Why don't they just put Mondale-Ferraro stickers on their bumpers?"

"They're afraid other drivers will laugh at them and make obscene gestures when they have children in the car."

"There is something sad about people refusing to declare themselves publicly on the road," I said.

"Bumper stickers don't make you vote for somebody: they make you vote against him. If someone steals a parking spot from you and he or she has a bumper sticker on the car, it could make you mad enough to vote for the other guy. During Nixon's dirty tricks campaign, his campaign people drove around with McGovern-Shriver bumper stickers and kept cutting off other cars. Some people still believe that this cost McGovern the election."

"Who thinks that?"

"McGovern for one."

"So it is your theory bumper stickers are passe?"

"They are for presidential elections. But they still are very helpful for local ones. For example, if you put one on your car for the incumbent sheriff, you have much less of a chance of getting a traffic ticket than if you plastered one on for his opponent. And it never hurts to have one on your car for a judge that is running for reelection, just in case one of your kids gets into trouble. Everyone has only two bumpers and there is no sense wasting the space on who you think the next president of the United States should be."

Aides Launch 'Spin Patrol'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate between President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale still had 15 minutes to go when the "spin patrol" spun into action.

Mindful that the first deadlines of morning newspapers were fast approaching, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes provided initial White House reaction to the debate to four reporters who had accompanied Reagan to the debate site and were watching the event in a room backstage.

"The president was clearly in command of the facts ... He's still the champ," the deputy press secretary said in a statement relayed by an aide as the debate was continuing.

Elsewhere in the Kentucky Center for the Arts, site of Sunday's debate, other White House aides were preparing to go on television immediately after the debate concluded to present their rosy, admittedly partisan, view.

Speakes' statement was the first in what sometimes seemed a relentless series of positive statements — most of them worded very similarly — issued throughout Sunday night and all day Monday by White House and Reagan campaign aides in an effort to influence reporters' perceptions of who won and lost.

Across town at the Mondale campaign's headquarters, meanwhile, his aides were ecstatic at the Democratic nominee's performance, but the campaign issued no statement. Mondale had little to say about whether he had won, telling reporters an hour after the debate only that he thought he had done well.

The White House's orchestrated effort was dubbed the "spin patrol," because the aides were seeking out reporters to put the White House "spin" on the event.

While it looked to most people as if Mondale had performed considerably better than Reagan, the main mission of the "spin patrol" was to spread the view that Mondale had not scored the "knock-out punch" he needed to give new life to his underdog campaign.

It was basically an attempt to minimize any damage the event could cause to the president's political standing.

And so it happened that the large banquet room in the Hyatt Regency Hotel that served as the temporary headquarters of the White House press corps became inundated with Reagan officials eager to provide their view of the debate.

It was a remarkable scene. Not only because many of these officials are difficult to reach on other occasions, but also because when they are reached, most insist on speaking on background, which means their words can be quoted but their names may not be used.

On Sunday night, everyone was on the record.

In one corner, a crowd was gathered around Edward J. Rollins, director of Reagan-Bush '84, who said he didn't believe Reagan's standing would drop in the polls as a result of the debate.

Off to the side was Richard G. Darman, an influential assistant to the president, who repeated many times throughout the night that even if Mondale won the debate — which he did not acknowledge — it was ultimately irrelevant because he did not say anything that would attract Reagan supporters to his side.

Lee Atwater, the political director of the Reagan campaign, was handing out results of an early telephone poll conducted by the campaign showing — not surprisingly — that Reagan had won.

Speechwriter Ken Khachigian said the event showed that when you get Reagan away from the cards he normally uses, "the guy is sitting there with full command of the facts."

The only person reporters weren't able to get a direct comment from was the president, who attended a post-debate rally in the hotel lobby and promptly went upstairs to his suite — presumably to bed.

Shuttle Shows Off Refueling Ease In Space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts Kathy Sullivan and David Leestma demonstrated today that satellites can be refueled in space by flowing fuel through a valve and hose they installed on two tanks during a space walk.

Working at a remote station inside the cabin, they transferred 134 pounds of toxic hydrazine between the tanks in 52 minutes, very close to the projected 133 pounds in 53 minutes. "Excellent," commented Mission Control.

In installing the plumbing fittings during their space walk Thursday, Ms. Sullivan and Leestma tested tools and techniques astronauts will use in the future to refuel orbiting satellites, extending their lifetimes indefinitely.

The fuel transfer was the last major task of the mission. The five men and two women aboard Challenger snapped some final radar pictures of Earth and packed up to come home, hoping Florida's changeable weather will permit a landing on Saturday near their launch site.

Commander Robert Crippen and pilot Jon McBride are to guide the shuttle to a touchdown at this spaceport at 12:25 p.m. EDT Saturday.

NASA weathermen said conditions at that time should be acceptable, with clear skies and 6-8-mph winds. "We're looking pretty good," said flight director John Cox.

But observers know weather at the Cape can be fickle, Crippen knows it too. Twice he has been scheduled to land a shuttle here, and both times he was waved off to California because clouds and rain moved into the area.

He vowed before this flight: "We'll make it this time." Only one of 12 shuttle missions has landed here. Ten have returned to Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., which has a large margin for error because of its large lakebed, and one has landed at White Sands, N.M.

Now that the space plane is operational, NASA wants to land shuttles routinely at the Cape launch site because this saves about a week in getting a ship ready for its next flight. This is especially important now that the launch rate has accelerated to one flight a month.

Ms. Sullivan and Leestma will remember for a long time their effervescent space walk — the first ever taken by an American woman.

During 3 hours 27 minutes in Challenger's open cargo bay, they easily accomplished the complex task of installing a valve on a fuel tank and running a hose from it to another tank.

Later, dangling over the side at a 90-degree angle to the spaceship, Ms. Sullivan helped Leestma align a loose antenna, so that pins could be driven into two holes electrically from inside the cabin. The fix made it possible to obtain additional radar pictures of the globe, because the antenna relays the camera data to the ground through an orbiting satellite.

Almost Stop

A new sign at the corner of Argyle and Kenilworth avenues in Garrett Park, Md., represents a compromise by city officials. A stop sign originally was erected at the corner, but many residents and some city officials said it was unnecessary. So, after much debate, the sign at left was authorized. (AP Laserphoto)

Weinberger Says Soviets Installed More Missiles

STRESA, Italy (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says the Soviet Union has installed "substantial numbers" of additional SS-20 nuclear missiles capable of striking Western Europe.

Weinberger told reporters that he briefed his NATO counterparts on the Soviet missile buildup during a nuclear strategy meeting Thursday in this resort village in the Italian Alps.

Weinberger said he had seen intelligence data showing that the number of SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles trained on Western Europe had increased beyond the 378 counted by NATO last December.

Duarte Rejects Rebel Proposal For Meeting

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte, preparing to meet a team of leftist rebels that includes a former running mate of his, has rejected their choice of a go-between and their demand that the military command attend the meeting.

The guerrillas had requested that the president of Colombia, Belisario Betancur, act as an intermediary in arranging the meeting Monday. They also demanded that the entire Salvadoran military high command accompany Duarte to the mountain town of La Palma.

Duarte said Thursday he might bring some military leaders but not the entire command. He also said he wanted a Salvadoran bishop to act as intermediary.

In Mexico City, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Thursday there is widespread agreement among Central American countries that a proposed regional peace treaty supported by Nicaragua will not end the turmoil in the area.

Shultz flew to Mexico from Panama, where he attended the inauguration of President Nicolas Ardito Barletta. The new president, in his speech, pledged to "scrupulously" respect the Panama Canal treaties with the United States.

New Soybean Seed Developed

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — A new soybean variety developed by the University of Georgia over the past eight years is highly resistant to nematodes and provides high yields, agriculture officials said.

The seed will be available in limited quantities to farmers next year.

Other soybean varieties that provided resistance to nematodes have done so at the expense of high yields, said Roger Boerma, a UGA research agronomist who developed the new variety with plant disease researcher Richard S. Hussey.

But with the new variety — named after former Georgia governor, senator and Confederate Gen. John Brown Gordon — "this does not appear to be the case," Boerma said.

The Gordon soybean resists four types of nematodes, worm-like parasites that live in the soil, he said. It also stands up well to stem canker, a disease capable of destroying entire fields that was first spotted in Georgia in 1982.

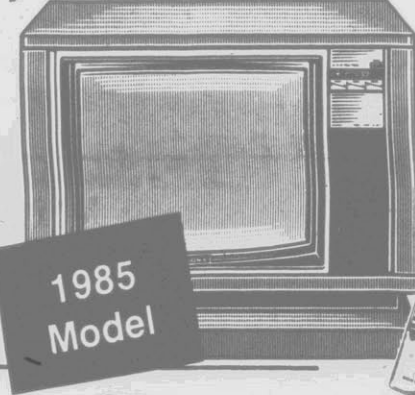

"Where these nematodes were present, Gordon had yields 30 to 60 percent higher than varieties susceptible to the nematodes," Boerma said. "In the absence of these nematodes, Gordon yields were equal to the best yielding varieties."

Boerma said a 1 cent per bushel assessment paid by farmers for promotion and research helped speed development of the variety. He said it normally would take about 12 years for such development.

The Gordon soybean was introduced to farmers Wednesday at a field day at the university's Southwest branch Experiment Station near Plains. University officials said the response was enthusiastic.

SEPTEMBER SILVER — Clusters of downy, silver thistle-fruit of a wildflower now adorn many roadsides in eastern North Carolina. Carnegie Fund Honors Heroes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A coal miner who drowned saving a 3-year-old boy and a mechanic who lost his life saving his boss from an attacking gang were among 15 people honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for acts of bravery.

"It shows that someone out there thinks about him," said Rita Francoeur, 32, whose husband, Roger J. Francoeur, drowned April 25, 1982, after delivering Luc R. Scalabrini to a shallow area in the cold, swift Mattagami River in Ontario, Canada.

Luc, his father and brother were struggling to reach shore after their truck landed in the river. Francoeur, 36, had arrived at the river to fish when he heard their calls for help.

"He was taking his fishing rods and all that out of the car and he heard them and he went right away," Mrs. Francoeur said in a telephone interview Tuesday from her home in Timmins, Ontario.

Francoeur drowned after handing the boy over to others in the shallow water. Luc's father and brother reached land safely.

"It makes me feel a little lighter in my heart," Joann Dougherty of Colwyn, Pa., said about the commission's recognition of her late husband, Thomas F. Dougherty.

The 24-year-old mechanic died Feb. 10.

"Believe it or not, the fight had something to do with a truck clutch. Tom went to help. He would do anything for anybody," said Mrs. Dougherty, who was 4½ months pregnant when Dougherty was killed.

Dougherty's boss at Brind Trucking Co., Paul M. Gula, 33, escaped while Dougherty struggled with two members of the gang. Gula recovered from severe head and internal injuries.

The 15 people named by the commission last Friday or their survivors shared awards totaling $37,500. Since being founded 80 years ago by industrialist and philanthropist Andrew Carnegie, the commission has distributed more than $15.3 million in one-time grants and continuing support in 6,856 cases of heroism in the United States and Canada.

The other 13 recipients survived.

Glen P. Angus, 30, a service station manager from Hatboro, Pa., saved two children, ages 7 and 5, who had fallen through thin ice.

Arturo Aragon, 58, a porter from New York City, responded to screams and rushed into an apartment lobby to help a woman being threatened by a man with a knife.

R. Stephen Collins, 33, a salesman from Toronto, Canada, jumped into Lake Ontario and pulled a woman 300 feet to shore after the woman had been thrown off a moving motorboat during a fight with a man.

Paul Wayne DuPerre, 30, a meter reader from Portland, Maine, saved a 5-year-old boy who fell into the Presumpscot River.

Robert George Lawton, 25, a dance instructor from North Smithfield, R.I., used his fist to break a window in a burning car to rescue a dazed man after an accident.

James A. McKinnon, 28, a municipal employee in Manitoba, Canada, dived into the Souris River and hauled to safety a man whose truck had skidded into the river.

In a dual rescue, Michael Martin Meserve, 16, a high school student from Sherwood, Ore., and Porter H. Watson III, 38, a carpenter from Friday Harbor, Wash., pulled two young boys from the Pacific Ocean.

Arthur J. Palestini, 39, of Vineland, N.J., was delivering newspapers in Philadelphia when he heard gunshots at a grocery, rushed in, struck the gunman and subdued him until police arrived.

Brian T. Szyndlar, 24, a logger, was fishing at Buzzards Bay near Fairhaven, Mass., when he saw a man struggling near his capsized fishing boat and swam with his fishing pole past the overturned boat and used the pole to tow the man to shore.

In the same incident, Mark Arnold Brito, 20, a college student from Fairhaven, swam to the overturned boat and supported a 66-year-old man until help arrived.

Mark Augustus Tobin, 33, of Nova Scotia, Canada, who is nearly blind, entered the Sydney River when he heard a man apparently intent on suicide splashing in the water. Tobin was submerged when water filled his rubber waders. He removed them under water, swam to the man and pulled him 100 feet to shore.

Francis H. Williams, 35, a painter from Mays Landing, N.J., jumped into Great Egg Harbor River to save a 5-year-old boy.

Natural Painkiller

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Childbirth and sex may trigger the release of a natural pain reliever in women's bodies, two new studies suggest, and researchers say the discovery could lead to development of pain-blocking drugs.

"A mechanism that may be triggered under natural conditions, such as intercourse or childbirth, causes pain reduction," said Barry R. Komisaruk, a behavioral neuroscientist at Rutgers University's Institute of Animal Behavior in New ark, N.J.

"It is a mechanism that may lead to the development of new drugs that could mimic the naturally occurring pain-blocking effect," he said.

Komisaruk and Beverly Whipple conducted the two studies, which each involved 10 women.

The natural painkiller, if identified, might be produced as a drug to further reduce the pain of childbirth and to help people who suffer chronic pain from cancer, arthritis or other ailments, Komisaruk said.

Josephine Expected To Stay At Sea

Storm's Winds Lash Coast

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Josephine churned through the Atlantic Ocean with 95-mph winds today and combined with high pressure over the mainland to lash the North Carolina coast with winds topping 40 mph, forecasters said.

Gale warnings were posted from Cape Lookout, N.C., nearly to the Virginia border.

"The strongest report that I've seen is 41 mph sustained winds at Diamond Shoals on the Outer Banks of North Carolina," National Hurricane Center forecaster Miles Lawrence said.

The coastal winds were generated by a steep difference between the hurricane's low air pressure and a high pressure system over the mainland, said Bob Case, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

"It wouldn't be there if there were just the hurricane or if high pressure were the only thing involved," said Case. "It's a strong pressure gradient, strong enough to produce gale-force winds. It put the Carolinas coast right between the two."

Early today the 1984 Atlantic season's third hurricane was about 300 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., near latitude 32.6 north and longitude 71.4 west, the center said in a statement.

Josephine's top sustained winds were clocked at 95 mph, with gusts extending up to 300 miles from the hurricane's center, the statement said. The hurricane was moving north at 10 mph.

The storm was expected to move north to northeast today at 5 to 10 mph with little change in strength, the statement said.

"We're not exactly sure where it's going," Case said. "The steering currents guiding it are very weak. But I think one of the least likely options are that it will turn west. I don't think that Josephine is going to be a problem for the United States."

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials decided Wednesday that Josephine was no threat and cleared the way for Saturday's scheduled shuttle landing at Cape Canaveral.

Josephine was upgraded from a tropical storm Tuesday. Storms are reclassified as hurricanes when winds reach a sustained strength of 74 mph.

Houston Suburb Rocked By Sixth Teen-Age Suicide Since August

HOUSTON (AP) — Even as psychologists counseled high school students about a wave of suicides, a 14-year-old boy became the sixth teen-ager to kill himself in a quiet middle-class suburb of Houston since August — and the fourth in a week.

Darren Thibodeaux stuffed towels under a garage door on Thursday and turned on the car engine, police said. School officials and authorities, meanwhile, were still investigating an unsubstantiated rumor of a suicide pact said to involve up to 30 young people.

Psychologists and school officials were to meet with reporters today to discuss the deaths in Clear Lake, an area south of Houston that includes the Johnson Space Center.

Jimmy Larrabee, deputy superintendent of the Clear Creek Independent School District, said that psychologists met with students in groups of 800 to 900 Thursday.

Dr. Rion Hart told Clear Lake students it was "OK to cry, OK to feel badly, OK to feel guilty if they knew the person who had committed suicide and felt they didn't do enough to help."

Larrabee said he was thinking shortly before Thibodeaux's death that "a suicide at Clear Creek (High School) would be about the worst thing that could happen right now."

The latest suicide victim was found when Thibodeaux's 17-year-old sister discovered the body lying by the rear of the car, police said. The car had stalled, but its ignition was on, and said officers believe the boy died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Police said the boy had stuffed towels under the garage door.

"As far as we know at this time, it is a suicide," said police Lt. Russell Williams.

Thibodeaux was a ninth-grader at Clear Creek High School, in the same school district as Clear Lake High School, where three other teens have killed themselves in the last week. Two other former students have killed themselves since August.

Thibodeaux's body was found about an hour before 150 mourners attended the funeral of 16-year-old

Gary Shivers, a Clear Lake High School student found hanged Tuesday.

"We gave him a ride home the night he did it," said Richard Baker, a Clear Lake sophomore. "He said he didn't know the others but wouldn't have done what they did."

The center had logged about 250 calls in a 24-hour period, Ms.

Berrera said Thursday morning, up from the normal 160. But Ms. Berrera said she did not know how many of the calls were suicide-related.

Senate OKs Social Security Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation assuring 36 million Social Security recipients a benefit increase in January is awaiting President Reagan's expected signature.

By voice vote, the Senate gave final congressional approval Thursday to a measure already passed by the House. It would waive for one year the 3 percent trigger in the inflation rate on which Social Security cost-of-living increases are based.

The Senate previously had approved similar legislation, but there were technical differences between the two chambers' versions.

Reagan sought the waiver in July, when it looked as though the 3 percent trigger would not be met.

However, the latest Consumer Price Index figures indicate that if present trends continue, there will be a cost-of-living increase ranging between 3.3 percent and 3.6 percent even without the legislation, according to the House Ways and Means Committee.

At present, the average monthly benefit for an individual is $430. It would go up by about $12 a month if the inflation increase is 3 percent. For a couple, the average of $740 would go up about $21.

IN THE STATE

State Vote Lines May Be Longer

RALEIGH (AP) — Some officials are warning there could be lines at the polling booths if voter turnout reflects registration, which state Elections Director Alex Brock says has reached a "phenomenal" 75 percent of the state's eligible voters.

Brock, however, said most voters shouldn't have to wait long. People "stand in line to pay their taxes, they stand in line to get their license tags, they stand in line to watch a sorry movie," said Brock. "What we're doing here is the last free thing in this country — voting. It doesn't cost a cent. I don't think they'll mind waiting in line."

Precise figures won't be available until next week, when local boards are required to report registration through last Monday's deadline. But Brock said he was "confident" about his estimate, which would be the highest percentage ever and is based partially on the 224,000 voters added to the books from November 1983 through April.

"If we do get the 75 percent, it would be so phenomenal that we ought to just cancel the election and celebrate," Brock said jokingly. "This is unquestionably the highest registration both in total numbers and in percentage of eligible voters in the history of this state."

Brock said the surge dates from 1982, when the state launched a registration drive in connection with Citizen Awareness Year. As the 1984 campaign heated up, the Democratic and Republican parties sponsored drives, as did a number of special-interest groups.

Additionally, two politically-active ministers on opposite ends of the ideological scale — the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority — visited the state and promoted registration from the pulpit.

"Hardly anyone living and in good health could help but run into someone registering voters," Brock said.

FEC OKs Hunt's Travel Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission voted unanimously against a move by lawyers for the North Carolina Republican Party not to issue an opinion and approved travel reimbursement guidelines for N.C. Gov. Jim Hunt.

The FEC on Thursday approved guidelines for Hunt to follow for reimbursing the state for using official state aircraft in his Senate campaign against Sen. Jesse Helms.

But the FEC declined to say whether Hunt has adequately repaid the state for his travels. It emphasized it was expressing "no opinion concerning prior reporting and allocation of expenses for campaign-related travel in government conveyances by the Jim Hunt Committee."

A lawyer representing Helms' re-election committee urged the FEC in a letter not to issue a formal advisory opinion on Hunt's guidelines. The lawyer, John R. Patton, argued the issue was now moot.

But the commission pressed ahead with one of its lawyers, N. Bradley McField, said the FEC's advice

Neuse Basin Classification Change Sought

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The entire Neuse River Basin should be considered for classification as a nutrient-sensitive watershed because of increases in phosphorous pollution and nuisance algae, the state Environmental Management Commission staff has recommended.

"The scientific data has already indicated to the staff the excessive nutrient conditions exist in the river today," W. Lee Fleming, who heads the state Division of Environmental Management's Water Quality Section, said Thursday.

The division's staff, which advises the commission, strongly recommended the reclassification be considered, Fleming said.

The commission told the staff to study such a designation in June because of algae problems in the Lower Neuse.

When such a designation is made, the commission enacts protective measures such as guidelines for sewage discharge.

A report handed out at the meeting identified municipal sewage treatment plants as the Neuse's largest contributors of phosphorus, a nutrient that feeds algae growth.

Briley Execution Tonight

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A "quiet and subdued" Linwood Briley, convicted of seven murders and condemned for one, faced execution tonight barring a legal miracle.

For the second time in two days, the U.S. Supreme Court on Thursday refused to stop the execution. It was the fourth time in three years Briley's case had gone in some form to the high court.

Briley, who led the largest escape of death row inmates in U.S. history, was scheduled to die in the electric chair in the State Penitentiary at 11 p.m. for the 1979 robbery and murder of a Richmond disc jockey.

He has never stopped claiming his innocence of that murder and the other six for which he was convicted.

Shortly before a federal appeals court stayed his earlier execution date of Aug. 17, Briley was baptized in an immersion ceremony that symbolized the washing away of sin.

Pilots Die As Private Planes Collide Over Football Field In Morganton

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Two pilots were killed when their single-engine planes collided above a field filled with boys playing football, but Morganton parks athletic director Gary Leonhardt says it could have been much worse.

"We were lucky," said Leonhardt, who was officiating at a football game for boys 10 and under when the crash occurred about 6 p.m. Thursday. "It happened at a time when 30 or 45 minutes later, we would have had about 300 more people in here for the softball games."

As it was, some 200 football players, parents, spectators and a few softball and soccer players were at Shuey Park when the two-seat Piper Tomahawk piloted by Richard Williams of Granite Falls and the four-seat Piper Warrior piloted by Jim Casey of Morganton collided a few hundred feet above their heads.

Morganton Director of Public Safety Bill Hamrick, who identified the victims, said Casey was in his mid-50s. He said Williams, about 20, was a student pilot who was practicing take-offs and landings from the Silver Creek airfield when the accident occurred.

"I heard a pop — I thought it was a backfire," Leonhardt said. "It was a very slight noise — like something clipping. It happened so quick it was all over like that."

Tom Oakley, 42, another referee, said he "heard this motor cut off and I looked up and just then I seen them hit. I just sort of stood there in shock. This plane started right straight at you with all this debris and smoke."

"It was headed right for the middle of the field and I hollered 'Run.' Right before it hit the ground, it flips over and does this nose dive," Oakley said. "I think that's the only thing that kept it off people in the field."

"Everyone ran everywhere. People were screaming, they thought their kids were in there," Oakley said. "We tried to keep the kids away and we got some duffle bags to cover up the parts of the man that was laying there. Then we just got back because there was fuel all over the place. We thought it was going to explode."

Casey's plane was a pile of crumpled sheet metal about 100 feet behind the bleachers. Williams' plane cut a 10-foot-wide swath filled with pieces of propeller and engine through bushes on the banks of Silver Creek behind a shopping center about a quarter mile away.

A five-foot section of one plane's wing landed in a parking lot across the street from the playing field.

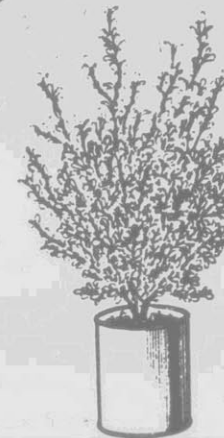

"We were fortunate," Hamrick said. "You don't want to say you're fortunate when two people got killed, but we were fortunate. That restaurant (about 50 feet from Williams' plane) was full of people."

PILOTS DIE — Police and rescue personnel look through the wreckage of a small aircraft that collided with another plane late Thursday in Morganton. Police said both pilots were killed. One of the planes fell between two restaurants, above, and the other crashed onto a recreation field where a youth football game was in progress. No injuries were reported to those on the ground. (AP Laserphoto)

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

KING JEROBOAM--THE IDOLATOR!

THE WORSHIP OF IDOLS IN ISRAEL WAS NOT UNCOMMON. STARTING WITH AARON, WHO FASHIONED A GOLDEN CALF IN THE WILDERNESS, IT REARED ITS HEAD EVERY SO OFTEN THROUGH VARIOUS INDIVIDUALS AND AT INTERMITTENT TIMES, BUT THE MAN TO WHOM, HISTORICALLY, GOES THE FULL BLAME IS KING JEROBOAM, THE FIRST KING OF THE DIVIDED KINGDOM OF ISRAEL (THE TEN TRIBES). BY HIS DECREE, A GOLDEN CALF WAS SET UP IN TWO PLACES IN HIS KINGDOM (I KINGS 12:26-30; II CHRON. 13:8). ONE IN BETHEL AND THE OTHER IN DAN. FROM THAT MOMENT ON, HE WAS KNOWN AS THE KING WHO MADE ISRAEL SIN! JEROBOAM FELT THAT HIS NEW KINGDOM WOULDN'T LAST VERY LONG IF THE PEOPLE HAD TO TRAVEL TO JERUSALEM (IN THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH) TO WORSHIP AT THE TEMPLE. SO, HE SET UP THESE PLACES OF WORSHIP AND FURTHERMORE MADE PRIESTS OF PEOPLE WHO WERE NOT OF THE TRIBE OF LEVI, THUS COMPOUNDING HIS SINFUL WAYS TO A GREATER DEGREE. IN HIS REIGN OF TWENTY TWO YEARS (I KINGS 14-20) THOUGH HE DID MANY GOOD WORKS THEY WERE...

...NULLIFIED BECAUSE OF HIS SINFUL DISOBEDIENCE TO THE LORD GOD!

Research Panel Says TV-Film Violence Abets Aggressiveness

NEW YORK (AP) — Film and TV violence leads to aggressiveness, callousness toward women and a grim world view, and reinforces "macho" domination of the weak, researchers said at a National Council of Churches committee hearing.

But a network television official insisted studies often are skewed, based on scenes taken out of context, and don't generally show that television viewing increases violent conduct.

The recent day-long hearing by a special committee of the council's communication commission was the first in a series. Others will be held in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C.

It is "the first religious national study to seriously examine problems presented by sex and violence in media," said the Rev. James M. Wall, editor of the Chicago-based Christian Century and chairman of the committee.

The inquiry comes amid swelling demands for some kind of remedial action.

George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, said "violence profile" studies show that people who watch a lot of television are more likely to feel they are living in a "mean world" than those who watch less.

"We have been immersed in a tide of violent representations that is historically unprecedented and shows no real sign of receding," Gerbner said.

TV portrayals of violence tend to "cultivate a pattern of inequality and domination," with the likeliest victims being women, the young and old, he said.

"The more television viewers watch, the more sexist their orientation," he said. "Most nudity and other forms of explicit vulnerability depicted on television is female; most assertion of power is male."

In the last two seasons, prime-time violence fell slightly below the 17-year average of five violent episodes per hour, the data showed. But violence in children's weekend shows rose far above the average of hour" — from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m., when children usually are in the audience and which had relatively lower violence in the 1970s — became more violent in the '80s, Gerber reported.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened broadly higher today, extending Thursday's gains, amid signs of renewed economic strength and continued moderation in inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.20 points to 1,187.28 in the first half hour of trading today.

About eight stocks increased in price for every five that fell in the early going on the New York stock exchange.

The stock market recorded its first clear-cut gain of the week on Thursday, as interest rates fell, with yields on three-month Treasury bills dropping below 10 percent for the first time in three months. Yields edged even lower as trading began today.

Contributing to today's decline in open-market interest rates was a government report that wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in September, the second straight monthly decline.

Pirates Test Hurricane Winds

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last month, Eastern Carolina survived Hurricane Diana without much trouble. Saturday night, East Carolina is hoping to do more than survive Hurricane Tulsa.

The Pirates will be in Oklahoma Saturday for an 8:30 p.m. (EDT) meeting with the Golden Hurricane of Tulsa, and Coach Ed Emory and his charges would like nothing more than to snap their two-game losing streak and, in the process, win their first game of the year on the road.

But it won't be easy. Tulsa, despite a 2-3 record, has — like East Carolina — played an outstanding schedule. The Hurricane beat Southern Illinois, the defending Division I-AA champ, 23-10, then fell to Brigham Young, 38-15, Arkansas, 18-9 and Oklahoma State, 31-7, before winning last week against West Texas State, 35-7.

"They are one hell of a football team," Emory said. "They've been playing great teams, mostly on the road. All three of their losses were to fine teams, and Brigham Young told us they were better than Pitt."

Pitt beat the Pirates, 17-10, last weekend to win their first game in five starts.

"They're the biggest and best defensive team we've played," Emory said. "They also have a great kicking game."

And several of the Tulsa players have connections with this part of the country. Nose guard Robert Pike (6-7, 290) was recruited by ECU before opting for North Carolina. He then transferred from there to Tulsa. Byron Jones, a 6-4, 280-pound defensive end, went to Ferrum Junior College, and was also recruited by ECU before going to Texas Christian, and on from there to Tulsa. Gordon Brown, another transfer from junior college, was another who was looked at by the Pirates, but was unable at the time to enter ECU. Brown, a 5-11, 205-pounder is the leading rusher for the Hurricane.

Perhaps the biggest problem the Hurricane has to overcome is the loss of quarterback Steve Gage, who suffered a broken jaw against Oklahoma State. However, Richie Stephenson, a 5-11, 191-pound sophomore, filled in last week and did a fine job. With Gage still sidelined, Stephenson will again get the call. Thus far, he's hit on 16 out of 38 passes for 236 yards — but last week he was 7 of 13 for 108 yards. He has yet to pass for a touchdown.

Brown, the leading rusher, has picked up 476 yards so far this year. Johnny Horton (5-10, 190) has picked up 135 at fullback, while Bobby Booker (5-9, 180) has run for 189 as second string tailback and Rodney Young (6-0, 220) has 183 at fullback and will start this week there.

The leading receiver for the Hurricane is flanker Ronnie Kelley (6-0, 188), picking up 290 yards on 13 catches. He's scored two touchdowns, both thrown by Gage, however. Brown is also a good receiver, pulling in eight for 39 yards.

"They're probably the second best team we've played, behind Florida State," Emory said.

Defensively, the Hurricane is led by inside linebacker Xavier Warren (6-0, 230), with 44 tackles. However, he made only one tackle in last week's game. He has three sacks and eight tackles for losses.

The leading scorer for the team is placekicker Jason Staurovsky. He's booted 10 of 12 field goals and five PATs for 35 points.

Overall, the Hurricane has rushed for 219.2 yards a game, while allowing 149.0. They've passed for 116.6 and allowed 178.2. They've attempted only 94 passes in five games.

Another factor could be holding onto the ball. In five games, Tulsa has fumbled 14 times, losing eight of them.

East Carolina will be out to avoid a losing season — as it will in each game after this should the Pirates win — and keep winning. Now 1-5, they are on the horns of a losing year, their first in three seasons.

The 1-5 start is the worst since 1971 when Sonny Randle's first Pirate team went 4-6.

And while Emory isn't ready to start looking to 1985 yet, he is making plans to play quarterback Ron Jones more as the season winds down. He plans to get the redshirt freshman into the game several times on Saturday and continue to do so.

However, Darrell Speed, who appears to improve each week, will continue as the starter. Speed has hit on 39 of 76 attempts for 483 yards and three touchdowns. His favorite target has been Stefan Adams, with 13 for 193 yards — but Adams is now playing on the defensive unit. Adams was moved over to free safety last week and was the Defensive Player of the Week for the team.

Ricky Nichols, meanwhile, has 12 for 220 yards, while tight end Damon Pope has caught nine for 96 yards.

Reggie Branch has rushed for 338 yards at fullback, while Tony Baker has added 281 at tailback. Jimmy Walden, who also plays tailback, has 213 yards.

Late yesterday, Emory announced that linebacker P.J. Jordan had been suspended for failure to attend a weight session, and would not make the trip to Tulsa. Steve Jacobs will move up to replace Jordan, with Donald Reid as the backup.

Next week, the Pirates return home to face nationally ranked Division I-AA member East Tennessee State at Homecoming.

Padres Where Tigers Want Them

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers say they have the San Diego Padres right where they want them — and the Padres would like the chance to drag the Tigers back to San Diego.

"We'll go back and get 'em in our ballpark," Detroit right fielder Kirk Gibson said, looking forward to the next three games in Tiger Stadium, starting tonight.

"It might go seven games; it might go five," added Tigers catcher Lance Parrish. "Who cares? We're going back to our park now and we've got a good ballclub. I still like our chances."

"Obviously they're tough when they're at home," chipped in John Grubb, a former Padre. "Now we'll see how they play at our ballpark."

For a while, at least one of the Tigers was beginning to believe it might go only the minimum four. Detroit won the opener 3-2 and before the Padres even came to bat in the second game, the Tigers led 3-0.

"We were naturally thinking 'sweep,' said Darrell Evans, Detroit's cornerman (first base on Tuesday night, third base on Wednesday night). The Padres rallied on Kurt Bevacqua's three-run homer in the fifth inning to win 5-3 and tie the Series at one victory apiece.

"They came back and won it with some of the best relief pitching I've ever seen," Evans said.

Andy Hawkins, a converted starter, has been the star reliever so far with 2 2-3 shutout innings Tuesday night and 5 1-3 more the next night, allowing only one hit each time. "In all my years in baseball, I've never seen a relief pitcher come in and dominate a game the way Andy did," said Ed Whitson, the second-game starter who lasted just two-thirds of an inning before Hawkins rescued him.

game of the series with a three-run homer to even the series. The Padres are from right, Ed Whitson, Bobby Brown, Steve Garvey, and Tim Lincecum. (AP Laserphoto)

ECU Pentathlon

Bruck Brockschmidt and Chris Holman led the East Carolina University swimming team through its annual pentathlon meet Thursday.

"We were really tired and sore going into the meet, but the team overcame these troubles and performed admirably," Coach Rick Kobe said. "The effort put forward today showed me that East Carolina is gonna have another tough bunch of kids this year."

Brockschmidt finished first in the overall point standings with a 2,735 total. That was well ahead of Chris Pittelli's second place finish with 1,874. Straton Smith was third in 1,755, followed by Kevin Hidalgo with 1,569 and Keith Kaut with 1,588. Holman led the women with 2,607

Tom Baines continues to lead our panel of experts, but with the game of football going like it is this year, there are no experts.

Picking the winners is no easy task anymore as parity continues to make it more and more difficult to tell who is going to win anymore. Pittsburgh, 1-4, Alabama, 1-4: who woulda ever thought it.

Baines dropped back some last week and only holds a one-game lead over second place Jimmy DuPree this week. Baines is at 45-26 while DuPree is 44-27.

Vickie Spivey holds down third place with a 41-30 record, followed by this writer at 40-31. Our guests are 39-32, with Joe Jenkins still at the rear — and getting further behind, at 33-38.

Last week's guest, new Farmville Central football coach Dixon Sauls, turned in the best mark among the coaches, 8-4, but is challenged this week by North Pitt's new coach, Larry Bolger. Sauls and Rob Wilson of the ECU sports information staff, are tied for the guests' lead at 8-4.

East Carolina Athletics Climb Out Of The Red Ink

East Carolina University's athletic program is out of the red, according to university officials, thanks mainly to the success the Pirates enjoyed on the football field last season.

The combination of increased ticket sales, guarantees from road games and a television payoff from the N.C. State-ECU game have helped to erase a deficit that had accumulated since the Pat Dye era on the athletic budget.

A year ago, the Pirates had a $615,372 deficit, but a year later, recorded a surplus of $184,072 in the athletic budget.

That gave the department an excess of $799,976 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1984, with more than $500,000 of that coming after the redemption of bonds from Minges Coliseum. The Pirates also earned $824,241 in guarantees in football last year, more than $250,000 above the '83 figure, with increased ticket sales of more than $188,000.

East Carolina's TV and radio sales were also up by almost $239,000, most of which came from the television broadcast of the ECU-NCSU game over WTBS of Atlanta.

Increased revenues from the Pirate Club were also a factor, as were increased student fees and a reduction in the number of sports offered. Wrestling, along with women's field hockey and gymnastics, were dropped by the school which still supports 13 other sports aside from football.

The retirement of the Minges bonds — plus the fact that the student body increased nearly three times during the period — created a $500,000 surplus in the fund and that was rechanneled by the board of trustees to pay off the debt owed the university's Current Unrestricted Fund, from which moneys had been drawn to keep the department running.

University officials are firm in their feeling that the department must continue to run in the black. Those funds must come from increased gate receipts and Pirate Club donations, not from student fees.

Rampants, Fike Split

Rose High School split a pair of volleyball matches with Wilson Fike yesterday.

The Rampettes won the opening match, 12-15, 15-3, 15-5. Fike, however, came back to take a 16-14 win in the first game of the second match, then added a 15-9 win to earn the split.

Chris Holec served up five straight points in the second game of the first match, while Lisa Trevathan added eight in the third game.

"We played well, but we just couldn't hold them off in the second match," Coach Kim Gruber said. "Amy Gavigan played an outstanding match for us. She was everywhere and made a number of major saves."

Rose is now 14-4 in the Big East Conference and plays host to Northern Nash on Tuesday.

NP-AG-FC

LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt swept a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball matches yesterday, downing Farmville Central and hosting Ayden-Grifton. The Lady Chargers also came away with a win in their match with Farmville.

In the opener, Ayden-Grifton fell to North Pitt in three games. The Pant-HERS won the opening match, 15-11, but the Chargers bounced back with a 15-1 win in the second. North Pitt then won the clincher, 15-13.

Yolanda Rice and Doris Moore each had four points for the Chargers in game one while Rochelle Keys had 11 in the second and added four in the third. Clemmie Harris had six and Myra Moore had four in the first game for North Pitt.

The Chargers then topped Farmville Central, 15-10, 15-10, in the second match to earn a split. Juanita Murphy served up nine for the Chargers in the first game, while adding four in the second. Regina Mooring had five to pace Farmville in the first game.

North Pitt finished up the day with a three-game win over Farmville. The Pant-HERS dropped the first, 12-15, then took the next two, 15-13, 15-10.

Regenia Moore led the first game's service with five, while Harris had nine in the second. Jackie Ross had six and Moore, five, in the final game. Farmville was led by Joy Peaden with five points in the first game and four in the second.

North Pitt is now 6-2, Ayden-Grifton, 2-6, and Farmville, 0-8. Ayden-Grifton goes to Southern Nash on Tuesday, while North Pitt is at Greene Central and Farmville at SouthWest Edgecombe.

Aycock Captures Third Victory

STANTONSBURG — E.B. Aycock Junior High School rolled up a 20-0 victory over Beddingfield yesterday for its third straight football win.

Earl Wooten pulled in a 21 yard pass from Tom Moye in the first period of the game, with John Barker adding the PAT kick. Later in the quarter, Tim Moore intercepted a pass and returned it 18 yards for a second score, and Aycock took a 14-0 lead into the second period.

The other score came in the final quarter on a 17-yard run by Axel Smith.

Aycock rushed for 335 yards in the game.

Coach Wilson McDowell cited the defensive play of Jeff Ward, Barry Murray, Tim Hines, Huggee Mayfield, Shelton Northern, Steve Ward, Rexter Williams and Moore. He singled out Tim Hines, Jay Mattocks, Tom Baker, Ray Gaynor, Nelson Galloway, Mike Penlan, Moye, Smith, Adrian Barnhill, David Daniels, Wooten and Stacy Best on offense.

Now 3-0, Aycock travels to Kinston next Thursday.

plays host to White Oak. The Vikings (White Oak variety) were picked to win the league title, but haven't performed up to that level as yet. The Vikings (Conley style) have been a surprise, but have lost their last two. We could safely pick the Vikes and let it go at that, but we'll go with White Oak, 14-6.

In other area games, it's Bertie over Roanoke, Washington over Ahoskie, and Jamesville over Chocowinity.

Rose High School, with one of their two lost running backs returning this week, travels to Wilson Beddingfield, trying to snap a two-game losing skid. The Bruins have been getting stronger as the Rampants attempt to put things back together. But until we see signs of an offensive effort, we'll have to go the other way: Beddingfield, 21-7. The panel picks the Bruins, too, 6-0.

East Carolina travels to Tulsa this week, hoping to calm the Golden Hurricane. The Pirates, in contrast to Rose, haven't shown they could stop opponents enough for a victory. And this week looks no different. We'll pick Tulsa, 20-15. The panel also goes with Tulsa, 4-2.

Our other consensus picks: Virginia Tech over Duke; Maryland over N.C. State, Syracuse over West Virginia, Oregon State and California, a toss-up; Florida State over Auburn, Georgia Tech over Virginia, North Carolina over Wake Forest, Purdue over Iowa, Texas over Oklahoma, and Penn State over Alabama.

Rose Downs Knights

Rose High School's girls' tennis team roared through the singles matches with little effort and gained a 7-2 victory over Northern Nash yesterday.

The Rampettes continued unbeaten in Big East play, now 10-0 on the year. They are 10-1 overall.

HBO Fare Sunday Falls Short Of Goal In 'Amateurish' Handling Of Nuke Threat

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Right after the anchorman has reported the world is on the brink of nuclear war, the fictitious CVN newscast journeys electronically for some commentary from Eric Sevareid. It looks like he's just been woken up.

Will the Soviets attack Europe? "Who knows?" he says.

Several days later, Sevareid sheds more light on the worsening situation. "It's serious, very serious," he says before imparting some more jibberish.

If this were a parody, it would be pretty campy stuff. But it's supposed to be serious, and that's why HBO's amateurish, pretentious and irresponsible "Countdown to Looking Glass" is a monumental disservice to real broadcast journalism and an embarrassment to everyone connected with the project.

The 90-minute drama, labeled speculative fiction by HBO, will be on Sunday night and then mercilessly repeated three times this month.

The program tries to depict a developing disaster in the Middle East and its consequent superpower nuclear ramifications through the perspective of nine days in the life of the moribund CVN network news organization.

CVN's anchor, Don Tobin (Canadian newsman Patrick Watson), reads the news with the urgency of Mr. Rogers. To inject some humanity into the drama, the anchorman is seen in a quiet moment chatting on the phone. Bad news, he tells his wife, their romantic weekend in the country is out.

CVN's White House reporter Dorian Waldorf (Helen Shaver, who once played a TV journalist in the quickly canceled "Jessica Novak") gets her inside information by sleeping with a presidential functionary, played by Michael Murphy.

CVN's intrepid Middle East correspondent Michael Boyle (Scott Glenn of "The Right Stuff"), reporting live from the deck of a U.S. aircraft carrier, says the flash of light in the background may have been a low-yield nuclear explosion. Ducking, he says, "I'm going to see what that was."

CVN's news-gathering style is to gather talking heads. There are on-air sessions with former presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy and Lincoln Bloomfield, the MIT professor and one-time National Security Council analyst whose scenario is the basis for "Looking Glass."

In one newscast, Tobin, interviewing Bloomfield in the style of a Merv Griffin coffee-table chat, calls him "Linc." Can you imagine Ted Koppel addressing Henry Kissinger as "Hank"?

In a transparent move to inject "reality," the program includes cameo appearances from Sevareid, the former CBS commentator, and Nancy Dickerson, formerly of NBC News.

Producer David Loxton and director Fred Barzyk have no experience in TV news or live TV, and it shows. In contrast, the Emmy-award winning "Special Bulletin," which focused on another fictitious network in a nuclear blackmail situation, was produced by Don Ohlmeyer, whose live TV background brought authenticity and drama to the project.

"Looking Glass," the name of the president's airborne command center, is also too unreal and wooden to elicit any credible tension. If HBO is going to alarm us by ending the world, it at least should do it well.

the sometimes anonymous, always superficial connections in the drink-and-dance scene.

Motivations for being there range from the shy schoolteacher (Christine Lahti of "Swing Shift") who is turning 35 and tiring of being alone, to the cocky but benign womanizer (Tony Danza), to the man-sampling young women in tight jeans (Mare Winningham and Kathleen Wilhoite) to the jilted lover (Shelly Hack) who wants to prove something to herself and her boyfriend (Paul Michael Glaser).

The acting also ranges from the more limited Miss Hack to the special Miss Lahti, who easily takes viewers through her emotional high and lows, her self-consciousness and eventual self-awareness and acceptance.

Although too much time is spent with the less interesting but more glamorous relationship between Miss Hack's and Glaser's characters, and while some characterizations are too sketchy, the screenplay by Michael Bortman is sensitive and smart.

For one night, you can safely take a chance on "Single Bars, Single Women."

New General

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Defense Minister Florian Siwicki has become Poland's second four-star general, joining Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski, the official Polish news agency PAP reports.

Siwicki, 59, received his new rank Wednesday, two days before scheduled Army Day celebrations to mark the 41st anniversary of the founding of the Polish People's Army, which was formed under Communist auspices in the Soviet Union during World War II.

Here's a lesson. You can't always judge a TV movie by its sleaze potential. It turns out that ABC's "Single Bars, Single Women" is not tawdry, but a fairly enticing look at the different personalities who seek comfort, companionship and kicks from singles bars.

The Sunday night movie was inspired by the Dolly Parton song, which was composed by former "Saturday Night Live" writer Michael O'Donoghue.

More a series of character sketches than straight drama, "Single Bars, Single Women" is a study of

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be born serious and can do very well in life, so give a good practical education, and then your progeny can become a pillar of the community who will also get into civic affairs and do well with them. A fine sales persons here. Give good ethical and moral training.

Fetal Nervous System Develops Early

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Some parts of the nervous systems of humans, rats, cats and sheep are more mature before birth than previously believed, say scientists who are using new methods to probe the development of the unborn.

Stanford University neurobiologist Carla J. Shatz and Yale University researchers Dr. Gordon M. Shepherd and Patricia E. Pedersen discussed the studies Thursday at the Society for Neuroscience annual meeting.

The new studies found evidence in fetuses of early electrical "connections" or "wiring" in parts of the nervous system that eventually help build the ability to move in humans and the senses of taste in sheep, smell in rats and vision in cats.

The summary said the findings demonstrate "a considerable degree" of the mammal nervous system develops while the fetus is in the uterus, "and therefore that some aspects of the mammalian central nervous system are more mature at birth than heretofore supposed."

The researchers insisted that it is invalid to apply the findings on the maturity of the nervous system to the controversial abortion issue.

Shepherd said findings that a few parts of the nervous system are hooked up or can transmit impulses earlier than believed "does not mean this is a demonstration of human qualities," because those connections often are temporary ones found only in the fetus, not the mature animal.

Ultrasound "pictures" of human fetuses "show that a wide range of independent motor (movement) patterns is present by 20 weeks of gestation," including eye movements and reactions to sound and light, according to a summary paper by Shepherd and Ms. Shatz that outlined the studies.

Shepherd said the studies show that researchers now are able to use new techniques — such as studying animal fetus brain cells in a test tube to learn if nerve connections work — to "get direct evidence" of the complex steps in nervous system development.

In that way, scientists can learn which steps are responsible for movement and other behavior in the mammal fetus.

Ms. Shatz compared the development of the fetal nervous system with the idea of constructing a stack of building blocks by gradually adding some blocks while subtracting others — not by just constantly adding.

So finding that some electrical connections work in a fetal rat's taste-related nerve cells says nothing about "whether the fetus is aware of taste," she said.

"We're looking only at parts of the nervous system, so there's no way to know how all of the parts fit together to make a whole organism," Ms. Shatz said.

When the abortion question was raised by a reporter, Shepherd replied: "Our analysis of (nervous system) subcomponents doesn't address that issue. Period.... We are not addressing the function of the whole organism and to what extent it is rat-like, hamster-like, monkey-like or human-like."

"... The ability to judge to what extent an embryo is human-like is completely beyond our ability to measure scientifically," he said.

George Peate, education director for the anti-abortion Right to Life League of Southern California, said he thought the new studies bolster the position of abortion opponents.

"We've maintained all along that you're dealing with a very sophisticated human life (the fetus)."

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♥.

Obviously, you stand a better chance of being right if you play a defender for one of two cards rather than one specific card. That was the sad lesson South learned on this deal.

North's bidding gets no plaudits from this department. With a ruffing value in clubs, he should have checked on the possibility of a 4-4 spade fit. The spade game would have presented few problems.

Against three no trump West led the jack of hearts. Declarer won in hand, crossed to the king of spades and finessed the jack. West won the queen and made a fine defensive play — a low heart.

Declarer had to decide whether West was leading from the A-J-10 of hearts or whether his suit was headed by the jack. After much agonizing, he chose to play East for the ace and ducked in dummy in an effort to block the suit — down one.

We can't fault declarer for going wrong in hearts — we, too, have gone wrong on occasion. His mistake was in the way he managed the spade suit.

Had declarer needed four tricks from the suit, his line of play would have been above criticism; but three were sufficient for the contract. Declarer could afford to lose a spade trick to East, since then the queen of hearts would have been safe from attack. As long as East held one of the missing honors, that could be accomplished.

At trick two declarer should cash the ace of spades, then lead toward the king and simply cover any card West plays. Unless West has both missing spade honors, the contract is a certainty.

Incidentally, note that declarer has a problem in the heart suit only because the opponents were using standard leads. Had the defenders been playing that the lead of the jack denies a higher honor and that the 10 promises none or two higher, the position would have been crystal clear.

Criticism

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi criticized the United States for providing military aid to Pakistan, which she said could well be developing nuclear weapons.

"The U.S. administration, which is ostensibly so concerned over the proliferation of nuclear weapons, has, in spite of the evidence compiled by Americans themselves, continued military aid to Pakistan," Mrs. Gandhi said told Indian army commanders.

Pakistan has denied it is building nuclear weapons.

Pakistan is scheduled to receive 40 U.S.-made F-16 jets by 1986 and a $3.2 billion aid package from the United States.

Tomorrow, newspapers around the world honor some of their hardest workers — their newspaper carriers. Last year thousands of "paper boys" and "paper girls" had to get up early to deliver the 446 morning newspapers published in the United States. Morning newspapers now account for 54 percent of total daily circulation in the United States. In September, 1983, all 1,701 American daily newspapers had a combined circulation of 62.6 million.

DO YOU KNOW — Which daily newspaper had the largest circulation in the U.S. in 1983?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — President Theodore Roosevelt was Eleanor Roosevelt's uncle.

TWO NATURE STUDIES ... a soft-spun cluster of dog fennel at left, are highlighted against a block of afternoon shadow enclosed beneath a storage shelter; and at right, a lyrical twist of grapevine stems and tendrils reflect the clear light of October sun when viewed in a forest opening.

The Fullness of Nature In Autumn, The Special Quality Of October Light, Create Ideal Outdoor Photography Opportunities

Each season of the year has its own distinctive quality of light that brings forth special conditions to take into consideration when photographing outdoor scenes, whether general landscapes or close-up details.

In the weeks of spring, there's a quality of light that can be described as tender, young, warm light, soft and diffused, ideal for poetic camera approaches to nature.

Summer months usher in an explosive quality of light, full, often heavy with the shimmer of rippling heat waves.

In winter, the crispness of the air gives a quality to outdoors light best suited for photographs designed to effectively capture the drama of dormant nature in its starkly stripped-down ambience.

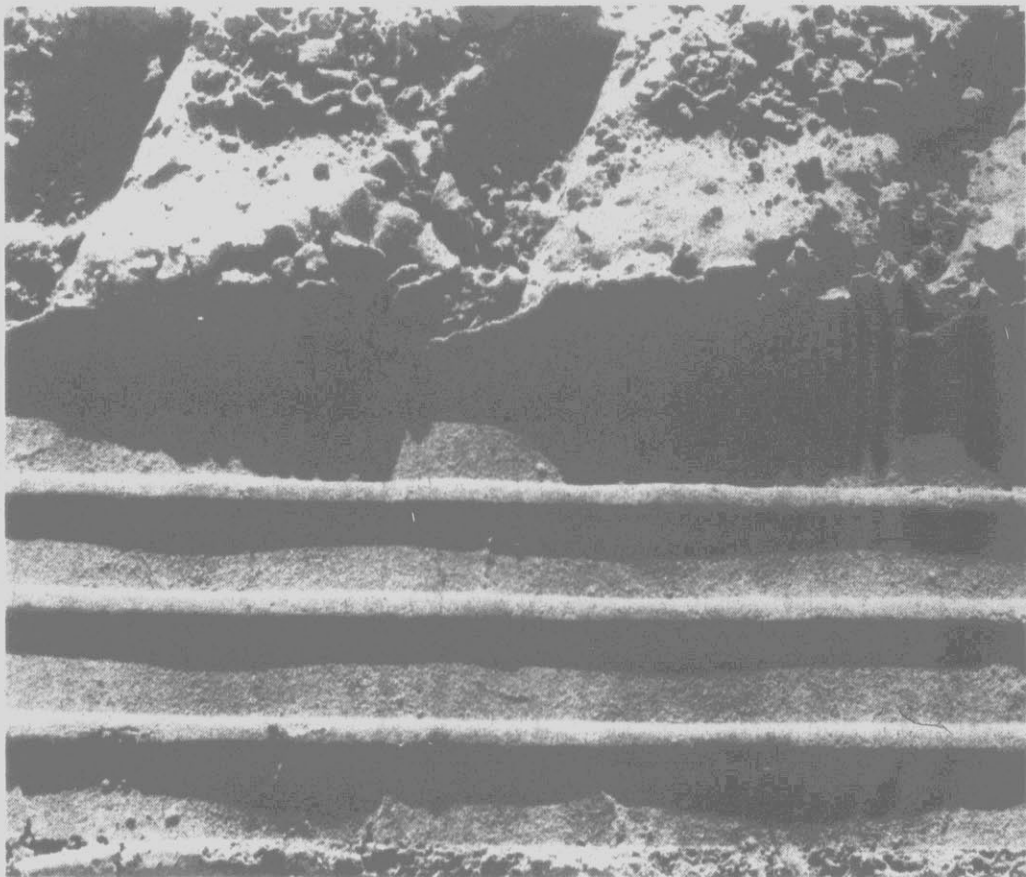

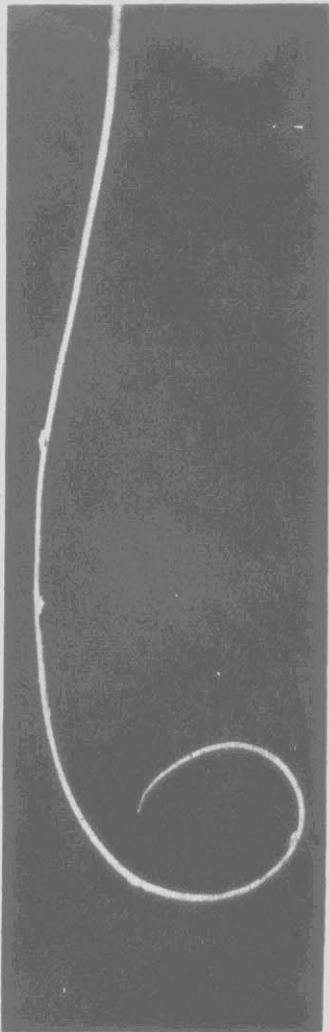

It is in autumn, and particularly during the golden days of October, that nature's light is most ideally suited to portray in photographs the clarity, the brilliance of subjects, either in encompassing compositions or in details isolated from general scenes and landscapes.

This transition period of the year, from summer's fullness to the onset of the annual cycle of leaf loss and the beginning of nature's decay, is coupled with the autumn position of the sun whose light explores in full, clear shadow the fascinating miniature subjects that abound in the world around us.

Each season has its quota of exciting photographic challenges, but the days of October are particularly rich in outdoors photographic possibilities, both in color and in black and white.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

REPRESENTATIVE ... of the wide variety of outdoor subjects typically to be discovered in October are: the play of sun which sprinkles with silver fire the ripe heads of roadside grasses; in a coastal area, a cluster of delicate barnacles on a bottle; the curved, leafless tip of a wisteria vine; a strange, other-worldly white fungus growth; and the pattern of a tractor wheel in the soft, cream-colored sand of a rural dirt road.
