Soviets Deploy New Cruise Missiles

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union announced Saturday it has begun arming its submarines and strategic bombers with new long-range cruise missiles to guard against a "growing threat" from the United States.

An announcement from the Soviet Defense Ministry carried by the official news agency Tass said the recently tested Soviet cruise missiles were being deployed specifically to counter the Reagan administration's "massive deployment of long-range missiles of all basing modes."

"At present, the armed forces of the U.S.S.R. have begun to deploy long-range cruise missiles on strategic bombers and submarines," the Defense Ministry said.

"By their scale, these measures correspond to the growing threat to the security of the U.S.S.R. and other countries of the socialist community from the United States," the announcement said.

There was no immediate response from Washington.

The Kremlin announced last August it was testing long-range cruise missiles in response to the deployment of 572 U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe and the siting of similar missiles on U.S. submarines and bombers.

The commitment to deploy U.S.-made intermediate-range missiles in five European countries was made by NATO in 1979 to counter a 1978 build-up of Soviet triple-warhead SS-20 missiles targeted on Western Europe.

Deployment of the missiles has begun in Britain, Italy and West Germany. Belgium and Holland are also expected to receive U.S. missiles as part of the NATO plan.

The Soviet Defense Ministry's announcement accused the United States of "mounting long-range missiles on strategic bombers.

Survey Indicates Reagan Holding Landslide Lead

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan maintains a landslide-sized lead over Walter F. Mondale three weeks before Election Day, according to a nationwide Associated Press survey, but the Democratic challenger has "come alive" in many states after his strong showing in campaign debate.

"The spread has narrowed considerably," said Pennsylvania Democratic chairman Edward Mezvinsky. The debate "really puts us in the ballgame," he added, in a state where a GOP poll found Reagan with a double-digit lead before the first presidential debate a week ago.

"The campaign has come alive since Sunday," echoed California Democatic chairman Peter Kelly. "The debate has made it a much closer race" in the nation's largest state.

Mondale "demonstrated a good grasp of the facts in contrast to Reagan, who fumbled from time to time," said Kate Litvack, a top official in the New Jersey Democratic party. "And most importantly, he began to dispel what has been referred to as the wimp factor" — the perception that he is not a strong leader.

Republicans in many states conceded that Mondale breathed new life into his campaign in last Sunday's debate but insist it means only a modest boost. They said Reagan can easily recover his losses in a follow-up debate on foreign policy on Oct. 21.

"Reagan has to prove next time that it was just an off-night," said GOP chairman Allan Levey of Maryland, a traditionally Democratic state where early polls have given the president a double-digit edge over Mondale.

Added Ed Reinecke, state GOP chairman of California, "The debate may have shortened Reagan's lead

GOV. JIM HUNT

Debate Low-Key Ending

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., extolled President Reagan's programs and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt portrayed Helms as a right-wing radical Saturday in the last of four televised debates in their campaign for U.S. Senate.

Helms, a two-term incumbent, and Hunt, the first North Carolina governor to serve two consecutive terms, were more low-key than in the previous debates and avoided personal attacks. But they argued sharply about their records and issues ranging from taxes and spending to acid rain to campaign commercials.

It was the only one of the four debates before a live audience — 26 reporters and 95 members of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters and the Radio-Television News Directors Association of the Carolinas. Also on hand were Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., both of whom proclaimed Helms the winner.

"There were strengths in his presentation and force in his facts," said Baker. Helms said, "We did all

Challenger Glides Back Home Safely

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Heralded by twin sonic booms that snapped across beaches and orange groves, shuttle Challenger swooped out of a cloudless sky Saturday and came home to its launch site after a 3.5-million-mile survey of Earth.

Commander Robert L. Crippen guided the 101-ton spacecraft through a 13,000-mile glide across Alaska, the heart of Canada and the U.S. Midwest and Southeast to a precise centerline landing on the Kennedy Space Center runway.

Only a few hundred people were on hand when Challenger touched down, in vivid contrast to the huge crowds that have greeted shuttle arrivals at Edwards Air Force Base in California. The crowd applauded and cheered.

"The largest crew in the history of space flight is home," said Mission Control. The flight, ending at 12:27 p.m. EDT, had lasted eight days, five hours and 24 minutes.

After a shower, medical exams and reunions with their families, the astronauts boarded planes to return to their training base in Houston.

Before leaving, Crippen told reporters the flight was "fantastic" and "proved people have a place in orbit."

ECU Homecoming Set Next Weekend

Beginning with a meeting of the institution's board of trustees and climaxed with a traditional parade and home football game, East Carolina University will celebrate its annual homecoming next weekend.

Awards to outstanding alumni are to be presented at a luncheon at Minges Coliseum at noon Saturday prior to the football game between ECU's Pirates and East Tennessee State University at Ficklen Stadium.

Three alumni chosen from nominations submitted by ECU's more than 50,000 alumni will be honored.

Meetings of the ECU trustees and trustee committees are scheduled Friday.

The annual homecoming parade on Fifth Street is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday with floats and exhibits depicting the theme, "ECU '84 — A Part of Your Life."

Other events scheduled include an alumni coffee hour and open house at the Taylor/Slaughter Alumni Center at 9 a.m. Saturday and an ECTC Club banquet Saturday night.

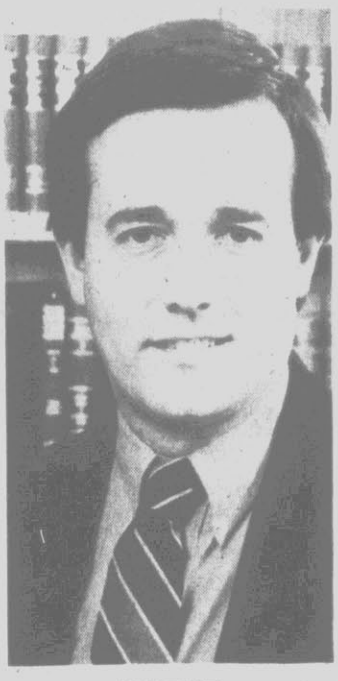
Registration In Pitt Up Since May

The Pitt County Board of Elections is anticipating a record turn out at the polls Nov. 6, according to Supervisor Margaret Hardee. The prediction, she said, is based on new registration and the number of elections held this year — the Nov. 6 election will be the sixth held in 1984.

"The interest in voter registration has been stimulated by the number of elections already conducted this year and by a group of hard working, patriotic special registration commissioners," who, Mrs. Hardee said, are nominated by their political parties and appointed by the board of elections to two-year terms.

At the Oct. 8 close of registration for the November election, 45,506 people had registered to vote in Pitt County. On April 9 when registration books were closed for the May 8 primary, Pitt County had 40,254 registered voters. Of the 45,506 registered for the upcoming election, 35,983 are Democrats, 7,961 are Republicans, 33,093 are white, 12,287 are black, 14 are Indian and 112 are classified as other. Mrs. Hardee said 10 Libertarian, two Socialist Worker Party and 1,550 unaffiliated voters are also registered.

Even though a record turn out is expected, Mrs. Hardee said the additional voters will not pose a problem, largely because Pitt County will be using electronic vote tabulators in all of its 24 precincts. "Paper ballots will still be used, but (the votes) will be counted electronically," she said.



TOM TAFT

Senate Hopefuls See Victories

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Both candidates for the North Carolina Senate from the senatorial district composed of Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties see themselves as winning and both feel they're carrying the banner held high 18 years by Sen. Vernon White.

Tom Taft of Pitt County is representing the Democratic Party, the same party to which Vernon White belongs. However, Maynard Waters of Beaufort County says he feels that Vernon White is a conservative Democrat and he is closer in political stance to him than is Taft.

Taft said he feels that his positions on agriculture and on education are very much like those of White. He said White did an especially good job in fighting for educational advances for this state and he plans to continue his work. He pointed out that his candidacy has been endorsed by the North Carolina Association of Educators and the N.C. Nursing Association.

Taft said he is now spending about three-fourths of his time campaigning in the three counties he wishes to represent and will be doing full-time work on the campaign later this month. He said his wife, Kathy, and family and friends have joined him in much of the effort. He said he is spending a good bit of his own money on the campaign. Waters said he is campaigning most of the time, too, though he continues cattle-farming and his Christian ministry through the C.V.M. Christian Center on Route 4, Washington. He said his church members have been supportive of his campaign, as have his family. His wife, Kay, has made public appearance with him, as has his oldest son, David. His daughter, Pam Carson, gave a tea for him recently in Bath.

Waters said he has run an inexpensive campaign, spending only $2,000 by the end of July when Taft reported having spent $41,000.

Waters said he has perceived "a favorableness toward Republicans I've never seen before." He said he expects many registered Democrats to vote for him, as well as for President Reagan and other Republican candidates.

Taft calls his opponent "a one-issue candidate," saying he feels that Waters has placed most of his emphasis on abortion. "I'm not a Johnny-one-note," Waters commented on Taft's characterization of him, but he said he does speak out strongly against abortion and the state-funding of abortion which he feels are wrong. He said he would work to outlaw abortion and end its state funding if he is elected.

Both candidates say they have strong ideas on how the people of eastern North Carolina can be benefitted economically through legislation. Both said they favor the courting of environmentally sound and otherwise acceptable industry for eastern North Carolina.

Taft said he has more experience than his opponent in state government and even in the state Senate. He served as legal counsel to the lieutenant governor, who is president of the Senate, in 1973-75 and is chairman of the State Ports Authority, a position he will resign if elected senator.

Both candidates say they are committed to fiscally sound state budgets with no deficits.

N.C. Democrats Say Gap May Close

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats and political analysts agree that President Reagan maintains a wide lead over challenger Walter Mondale in North Carolina but they say the debate plowed fertile ground for Democratic gains.

"I think Mondale made a really good start toward making it a race," said Merle Black, a political science professor at the University of North Carolina. "Mondale has enthused his followers. Democrats are now more visible than they were."

The Charlotte Observer poll of 804 registered voters Oct. 1-4 showed Reagan with 55 percent, Mondale 35 percent and 9 percent undecided. The poll's margin of error was plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

Reagan held an almost identical lead in an Observer poll conducted Sept. 5-11.

State Republican Party Chairman Dave Flaherty agreed that Mondale gained credibilty in the debate but said, "There is no way people can overlook the success of the administration."

State Democratic Party Chairman David Price said he's not expecting dramatic changes but the debate and the Oct. 1 visits to Raleigh and Greensboro by Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro have the party excited.

"I don't expect it to turn around overnight but Democrats have had a lot of breaks lately," Price said. "While Reagan personally is very popular, public opinion ... is very much more in line with Mondale's position and with the Democratic position and I think people will be more receptive to that message."

Donald Schroeder, a government professor at Campbell University, said Reagan's performance "probably shocked a lot of people."

"I can see Mondale picking up a sizeable proportion of undecided voters as a result of Sunday's performance," Schroeder said.

Political analysts said the biggest impact of renewed Democratic support could be on statewide races for the U.S. Senate, governor and Congress. They agree that unless Reagan gets more than 60 percent of the vote his coattails will be too short to help re-elect Jesse Helms to the Senate or put Jim Martin in the governor's mansion.

"A lot of Republican gains depend on Reagan," Black said.

Flaherty believes North Carolina Republicans got a big boost from Reagan's visit Monday to Charlotte and the announcement that same day that former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, also an unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate, would help lead Democrats for Reagan-Bush.

"I think Eddie Knox's involvement certainly gave credibility to the fact there is an erosion for Democrats, moderate Democrats, from Mondale to Reagan," he said. "Eddie has gained stature in that he has shown he puts principle above everything else."

Price acknowledged that the Reagan visit will help the GOP but said the Knox endorsement "created hardly a ripple" because Knox no longer is seen as believeable.

"I think the public admires someone who doesn't let personal disappointments and bitterness interfere with their principals," Price said.

One unknown factor is the surge in voter registration. Monday was the deadline to register to vote Nov. 6 and lines to sign up in many cities were long.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said as many as 75 percent of the state's potential voters may now be registered, a 19 percentage point increase. He said it appears that registration increased in all groups but statistics won't be available until next week.

right."

Hunt, however, said he was pleased with his performance. "We did a better job of establishing how far right (Helms) is ... how out of touch with the needs of the people of North Carolina he is," said Hunt.

As he has done repeatedly, Helms called Hunt a "Mondale liberal" who, like the Democratic presidential nominee, favors higher taxes and government spending.

"It's been a long time since we've seen such an upbeat attitude in America," said Helms. He said Reagan, with the support of Helms and other Republicans, had brought about "the most remarkable economic recovery in 30 years."

Hunt, saying he "wouldn't go to Washington to toe anybody's line," said he agreed with some of Walter Mondale's positions but opposed the Democratic presidential nominee's proposal to raise income taxes. He said that Helms wasn't as big a Reagan supporter as he claimed and had fought a number of the president's proposals.

In keeping with his new emphasis on Helms' "right-wing" connections, Hunt asked Helms whether he agreed with a remark allegedly made by the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority that church schools should replace public schools.

"Of course not," said Helms, adding that Hunt's definition of "radical" appeared to be "anything that's not liberal."

But Hunt said Helms and anyone disagreeing with Falwell's statement should have strongly condemned it. "I'm running for U.S. Senate because I want to represent the very best of North Carolina, not the right-wingers or the left-wingers. ...," said Hunt.

Both candidates spoke in favor of a balanced federal budget. Hunt, however, said deficits should be reduced by closing loopholes and forcing oil companies and other large corporations to pay more taxes.

"To do away with corporate taxes would mean working people would have to pay more," said Hunt.

Helms, who supports a 10 percent across-the-board cut in all government spending except for Social Security, defense and interest on the national debt, said such reductions would not cripple any program. He said Hunt always spoke of closing loopholes but wouldn't say which ones.

Hunt said Helms' plan would remove teachers from classrooms and hurt veterans, the poor and others who couldn't stand any further cuts. "My approach is to make those special interests pay their fair share," said Hunt.

"If you don't believe there is fat all the way across the board, you will find out some day — if you end up in the U.S. Senate," retorted Helms.

Helms defended his support of cuts in government loans to college students, saying there were plenty of private grants and loans available.

"I envision the day when the private sector will be what it used to be," said Helms.

Shuttle ...

Canada's first astronaut, called it "a voyage of a lifetime, an incredible odyssey. All eight days were jammed with exciting experiences."

Paul Scully-Power, a Navy oceanographer, said the experience was hard to describe, "but give me a few hours and a few beers, and I'll probably be able to describe it."

Crippen, who has flown on four shuttle flights, was singled out for praise by the other crew members. Sally Ride, who also rode with him last year when she became America's first space woman, called him "the greatest commander in the world." Kathy Sullivan said he was the "cornerstone" of the flight, "keeping us on top of and ahead of things."

"It's a good day for NASA and the space shuttle program," said shuttle director Jesse Moore. "We are able to get our orbiter back into Kennedy Space Center so we can begin almost immediately on processing the bird, getting it ready for the next flight."

Moore praised the work of Ms. Sullivan, who became the first American woman to take a space walk, and of Ms. Ride, who operated the shuttle's robot arm.

"It's obvious women have an important role in space flight," Moore said. And he praised Marc Garneau, the first Canadian astronaut, saying, "From all reports, he did an outstanding job."

Challenger came back slightly scarred. There was some damage to protective tiles on the leading edge of one of the wings and some loose insulation over its orbiting engine. Moore said the damage had not been assessed and he said it was too early to tell whether the shuttle collided with a bird as it came in.

After a day of worry about winds, the air was so calm at touchdown that a machine, basically a huge propeller, had to be used to blow away any dangerous gases that might vent from the space plane.

The five men and two women spent more than eight days aboard Challenger, surveying the atmosphere, the oceans and Earth itself. The flight was the 13th for a shuttle.

The landing ended a personal frustration for Crippen. He had been scheduled twice before to put Challenger down at Kennedy Space Center, only to be waved off because of weather and forced to land at the alternate site, Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Mission Control greeted him with an updated version of a long-running joke. On his first wave-off, Crippen was greeted with the words: "The good news is that you've landed at Edwards; the bad news is that the beer's at KSC."

On Saturday, Mission Control said: "You outfoxed us again. You landed at KSC, but the beer's at Edwards."

Crippen assured the controllers that he had had beer stashed in both places during the flight.

Only once before had a shuttle landed on the three-mile runway flanked by a canal that is home to alligators and wild pigs.

Survey ...

in California a point or two, but outside of that I don't see any change at all."

Mondale's aides insist the debate will be seen as a turning point in his uphill challenge for the White House, and the AP survey indicated it created some additional interest in the Democrat's campaign in many states.

AP correspondents in all 50 states assessed avaliable poll data and talked with political experts to evaluate the campaign. Presidential elections are decided not by the nationwide vote totals, but in separate elections in the states and the District of Columbia, the results of which determine the winner in the Electoral College.

Reagan and Vice President George Bush are ahead in 43 states with 450 electoral votes, far more than the 270 needed to win a second term, the latest survey indicated.

Mondale and running mate Geraldine Ferraro are clearly ahead only in the District of Columbia, with three electoral votes.

Seven states with 85 electoral votes were rated as toss-ups — Hawaii; Maryland; Massachusetts; New York; Oregon; Rhode Island; Wisconsin.

But elsewhere — in Pennsylvania, Illinois, New Jersey and Iowa, for example — political leaders and some polls indicate Mondale has made inroads into Reagan's lead.

Even so, an Eagleton Institute poll taken in New Jersey after the debate said showed how far behind Mondale has been. The president held a lead of 52 percent to 36 percent in the poll results released on Friday, and that represented a seven-point gain for Mondale.

The result of Mondale's strong debate performance has been not only to create the perception that the presidential race is tightening, but also to boost Democratic congressional candidates whose fortunes sagged earlier in the fall when Mondale was further behind.

A fresh poll in Massachusetts, for example, indicates Reagan and Mondale in a virtual dead heat, and Democratic campaign consultant Michael Goldman said that has hurt Republican senatorial candidate Raymond Shamie, as well, in his race against Lt. Gov. John Kerry. "He's been riding Reagan's coattails," Goldman said of Shamie.

Despite the momentum Mondale has gained from the debate, Reagan holds commanding leads in many of the states in the Midwest, South and Rocky Mountains.

Mondale made his first campaign trip of the fall to Florida this week, for example, an indication he has little expectation of winning there. And in Virginia, state GOP chairman Donald Huffman said the "prospects for an overwhelming Reagan victory ... remain so good we have to pinch ourselves."

Is this YOUR problem?

Greenville-A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you come by our office for your sample. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped.

White Retires

H.A. (Alex) White, veteran comptroller and budget officer at East Carolina University, will retire Dec. 31 after more than 35 years of service at ECU.

White, a native of Edenton, joined the accounting staff at East Carolina in 1949 following completion of degree work at the University of North Carolina. He received a bachelor's degree in commerce with a major in accounting.

In 1970, White was named director of accounting and budget officer for the university and in 1973 was appointed comptroller to reflect the broader scope of his duties and responsibilities.

White served in the 437th Troop Carrier Group of the 9th Air Force in England and France during World War II. He was discharged with the rank of sergeant.

In 1947, he married the former Helen Elizabeth Dawson of Eureka, and they have three daughters.

Workshop

A one-day workshop to help North Carolina small businesses compete for public funds for research and development will be held in Williamston Oct. 31.

The workshop is sponsored by the N.C. Board of Science and Technology, the Technological Development Authority and the N.C. Science and Technology Research Center. For additional information, contact Charlotte Graham at 549-0671, Paul Waugaman or Kirsten Nyrop at 733-6500.

Board Meeting

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall. City Hall is located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Groundbreaking

The Pitt County Shrine Club will hold groundbreaking ceremonies for a new Shriners building Thursday at 5 p.m. The new facility will be located on Tar Road just south of Sunshine Garden Center.

Jobs Survey

The U.S. Bureau of the Census will conduct its regular survey on employment in the Greenville area during the week of Oct. 15-20, according to Joseph S. Harris, director of the bureau's regional office in Charlotte.

Additional survey questions this month will provide information on school enrollment and computer usage for both children and adults.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Lecture Series

"The Value of Life" will be the next lecture subject in the ECU School of Medicine's Perspectives series Monday.

Michael Bayles, a philosopher spending the 1984-85 academic year at the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, will present the hour-long lecture at 12:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room of Pitt County Memorial Hospital cafeteria.

Bayles, who will join the faculty of the University of Florida in September, will discuss how the way we value life — in monetary, philosophical or other terms — can influence medical decision-making. The ethics of treating defective newborns will be among issues considered.

Perspectives is a public lecture series sponsored by the Humanities Program of the ECU School of Medicine. For more information, call 757-2618.

The Winterville Jaycees have announced plans for operation of the chapter's eighth annual Haunted House during Halloween.

Project chairman Butch Lewis said the house, located a mile and a half east of Winterville on state road 1709, will be open Oct. 26-31. Hours of operation will be from sundown until 11:30 p.m. during the week and until midnight on the weekend.

Lewis said six rooms, staffed by various members of the chapter, will be featured this year and tour guides are needed to assist the Jaycees. He said the project is one of the chapter's main fund-raising events each year, with proceeds channeled to the general project fund for community service.

Candidates Forum

A candidates' forum will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the Willis Building, Reade and First streets, Greenville.

Featured will be Tom Taft and Maynard Waters, candidates for the N.C. State Senate, District 9. The district covers part of Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties.

The forum is sponsored by the State Concerns Committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. Refreshments will be served.

Canoe Trip

The Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, a non-profit research organization, will sponsor a Tar River canoe trip Saturday as part of its outings and stream watch program.

The trip will begin at the N.C. 42 bridge near Old Sparta between Greenville and Tarboro at 10 a.m., and continue downriver to the wildlife access ramp at the N.C. 222 bridge near Falkland, about eight miles.

A few canoes will be provided on a first-come basis. Light refreshments will be available, but participants should pack a lunch if desired.

Anyone interested in participating should contact Tom Howard at 946-1840, or John Guyette at 758-0579.

Tax Assistance

The Internal Revenue Service has announced that free walk-in assistance in handling federal taxes can be obtained year-round at 101 W. First St., Greenville, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 10 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Parade Route

The East Carolina University Homecoming Parade will be held Saturday at 10 a.m.

The parade will form on South Elm Street between East 14th Street and East 10th Street. The parade will travel northwardly along South Elm Street, turning left onto East Fifth Street. The route will continue westwardly along Fifth Street, turning right onto Washington Street, and then turning right onto Second Street. The parade will continue eastwardly to Reade Street, and will disband on First Street.

EMT Class

An Emergency Medical Technician class will be held at the Rotary Club building in Bethel beginning Monday and continuing each Monday and Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. Annette Roebuck will be the teacher. The course is sponsored by Pitt Community College.

NAACP Meeting

The General Membership of the Pitt County branch of NAACP will meet Sunday at 7 p.m. at Holy Trinity Church, Greenville, to elect a nominating committee.

Thoughtful dignity is priceless, but it costs no more.

The truth is, it's smarter and easier to deal with buying a grave site long before the need arises than during the time of grief.

Think a little, find out something about what's involved — whatever you think about the subject. It's the only way that you can be sure that you make an informed decision whenever you decide what you're going to do.

What's in a picture? Privately-owned cemeteries are governed by state law. In order for a cemetery to be called a 'Perpetual Care' cemetery, it is required that the maintenance for it be paid for by interest earned on a "locked-in" fund, contributions to which are predetermined.

Historically, Pinewood Memorial Park has been maintained by funding much larger than that required by state law. The reason? S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, founders and owners of Pinewood, didn't think the requirement was adequate.

The result? See for yourself. Visit Pinewood and look at the beautiful 25-year growth of centipede sod, attentively maintained almost every day.

So don't be fooled by pretty pictures of what a site is supposed to look like years from now. And be sure you add up all the costs before you buy. You'll see that Pinewood costs less, not more, than unknown quantities.

Professional for 26 years. And years to come. We'd like to explain more. Because as cemeterians for 26 years, we think it's important for every family to make an informed decision about these things.

So before you buy from a salesman with pretty pictures and long promises, talk to us, even drive through our grounds. We're not going to pressure you for anything. And, we'll respect your decision.

But we want you to know what you're doing.

Sunday Opinion

Reagan's Stumble Prompts Question About His Age

It was hardly touched in the analyses following the presidential debate between President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale last Sunday night.

Even the next day the writers for prestigious publications carefully skirted the issue. Tuesday morning, however, The Wall Street Journal, hardly to be considered a part of the liberal media, approached the question of whether age was at last showing on President Reagan. At times during the debate he hesitated and faltered. Certainly he recovered and went on to appear his old confident self, but the doubts were raised, and from that point on the president's age (73) was very much a part of the presidential campaign.

Following The Wall Street Journal article, major television networks approached the matter with CBS rerunning the presidential stumbling on the 6 o'clock news. Columnists began boldly approaching the question of age. Was President Reagan just a little less alert than he was four years ago? And what would the situation be after four more years?

There is little doubt that the president appeared unsure of himself at times in the debate and that raised questions of why his strategists ever agreed to a debate in the first place.

Anyone can have a bad day, of course, and the president went on campaigning in the best of spirits. There is, however, another debate ahead and next time political observers will be closely grading the president on alertness. There can be no question now that the president's age is very much an issue in this campaign.

Utility Increases Flowing Through

Officials said that an average residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt-hours per month would see an increase of $6.29 in his bill in the summer, sending it from $71.50 to $77.79. In winter months the bill would go from $67.86 to $74.93, an increase of $7.07.

Increased wholesale rates were cited as the reason for higher retail rates. There was a 5.2 percent increase on Oct. 1 and an additional 2.7 percent increase effective Jan. 1, 1985.

A public information meeting will be held Oct. 25 at 7:30 in the Greenville Utilities building.

Rate increases are a frustrating matter for Greenville Utilities and the public. The local utility purchases its power and has no control over the cost. Since purchase of power is its largest cost, GUC has no choice but to pass on increases to customers.

All we can do is what we can to see that cost of generating electricity is held down. In this time of stable oil product costs it would seem that electric rates would not be on the rise. Yet the increases still come.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Pitt County through the years has been out of the way. Major highways running through North Carolina passed west of here and in the days when trains were the way to travel the main lines were not built through our county. Major air service passed us by when flight became a way to travel.

Nevertheless some famous people have found us on occasions.

Not many presidents have visited, although there was the famous Southern tour by George Washington which brought him to Pitt County. Even the candidates passed us by in the days when the Southern vote was considered solid for the Democrats.

That changed in 1960 when John F. Kennedy, then a young senator for Massachusetts, decided to seek the Democratic presidential nominations. He flew into to the Pitt-Greenville Airport, visited a tobacco auction at Farmer's Warehouse and spoke at the old College Stadium on 10th Street.

Of course, this year Walter Mondale chose to visit Pitt County as a candidate for the Democratic nomination and held a press conference at the entrance to the Pitt FCX.

There have been other famous people here. Franklin Roosevelt was busy with a Depression and threat of war but First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt visited the ECU campus in the 1940s. She was an activist first lady who had her own newspaper column. At that time it was necessary for any politician to present an image of an idyllic marriage, but subsequent publications have shown the Roosevelt marriage to be strained. Nevertheless, Mrs. Roosevelt then played the role of a dutiful wife. Hence her visit here was as the representative of her president husband.

The nation's greatest entertainer philospher might have been Will Rogers. He came here, too. Later he was killed in a plane crash.

Of course George Wallace was here during his last campaign for the presidency. His plane landed at the Pitt-Greenville Airport where he was met by well wishers and the press. A short time later he was shot in Maryland.

Edward R. Murrow was one of the great news personalities of early television. Later he became director of the U.S. Information Agency. He was invited to speak at an ECU commencement and, no doubt because of the Voice of America facilities here, he did so. He delivered his famous "wall" speech concerning the wall separating East and West Berlin here.

All Is At Stake

Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has another round to go with Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale, who has been proclaimed the victor of their first debate by pundits and pollsters.

But his top aides say they are going to "stay on course" with no changes in strategy or style when Reagan faces Mondale on Oct. 21 in Kansas City, Mo.

They do not see the Louisville, Ky., face off as a debacle. Rather, they view it as a setback but believe that while the president's wide margin in the polls may slip some, they say that Reagan's support is still strong and solid.

Another triumph by Mondale could, however, cut into the president's bid for the vote of the independents and Democrats who were not buying Mondale.

Democrats who have been on the fence, or disenchanted with Mondale as a result of the bruising primary battles, may be taking a second look as a result of the first debate between the two candidates.

White House strategists say it is late in the game for Mondale to be "born again" and Reagan still maintains wide popularity in the country with the traditional Republicans, the conservatives and the so-called yuppies.

The president himself has neither conceded defeat nor claimed victory. Basically he has been saying he did not know whether he won or lost but he was clearly on the defensive when pitted against Mondale rather than on the attack as he has been on the campaign trail.

The next debate will deal with foreign policy. Reagan has few successes to boast about in the international picture but is expected to stress his strong conviction that the buildup of U.S. military prowess has made the nation No. 1 in the world.

Except for the invasion of Grenada, which apparently was popular, the president will have to speak of hopes rather than real achievements in the field of promoting peace in the Middle East and arms control agreements with the Soviet Union.

Since he pulled the troops out of Beirut earlier this year, the United States has taken a back seat in seeking to mediate the powder keg problems in the Middle East.

After he deployed Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe, the Kremlin broke off all arms negotiations. Reagan more recently has met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in a first step to try to restore some balance in the superpower relationship, but it will be slow going, at least until after the election.

In Central America, the Nicaraguans are charging that the United States has aggressive plans against them. But the president's strong support of the central government in El Salvador against the extremist right and left seems to be paying off.

War and peace will be the key issue in the foreign policy debate, and it also may be one of the most influential factors in the election.

Seeking A Taste Of Balance

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Against such towering issues as arms control and deficit reduction, questions of conservation of natural resources play a small part in the current campaign. The questions are worth discussion, however, if only to examine the proposition that Ronald Reagan is a kind of rapacious monster, bent upon turning America the Beautiful into the America the Ugly

That is the impression that deliverately has been spread by some self-proclaimed "conservationist" organizations. Such outfits as the Sierra Club, which used to be a responsible group but now has gone political and endorsed Walter Mondale, have done an impressive job of publicizing their side of the story. The Reagan administration has done a poor job of defending its record. Suppose we seek a bit of balance.

On the matter of the national parks, the charge is that the Reagan administration has failed to seek additional land and thus to provide for the future. It is true that land acquisition has slowed, but for good reason. The administration felt it more important to halt the deterioration of existing facilities than to spend available funds on sheer acquisition. Thus Reagan asked for a billion-dollar program of restoration and improvement, spread over five fiscal years, to put roads and buildings and water systems back in proper shape. The program is a year ahead of schedule. Meanwhile, through a combination of purchase and donation, additional parkland is in fact being acquired.

A second widely publicized charge has to do with the leasing of potential oil and gas sites in the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS). To listen to the shrill invective from professional conservationists, you might suppose that the president really hungers to see the entire Pacific Coast destroyed by leaks from offshore oil rigs. This is hokum.

It wasn't some imperial decree from the Reagan administration, it was an act of Congress under the Carter administration in 1978 that mandated "expedited exploration and development of" the OCS. The object was to reduce dependency upon imported oil and to contribute generally to our national security. Surely these are desirable aims. The Department of the Interior has a duty to pursue them. Under Reagan, it has succeeded in leasing not quite 12 million acres out of a potential 1 billion acres.

Do these leases threaten the destruotion of fish, wildlife and property values on the coast? Nothing in the record supports that hysterical proposition. Secretary William Clark points out that roughly 30,000 wells have been drilled in U.S. coastal waters. Only one such well ever has blown out; that accident occurred 16 years ago off Santa Barbara, and a year later the aftereffects had disappeared. Since 1970, according to Interior's data, only 791 out of 4 billion barrels of offshore oil have entered the oceans owing to blowouts. Meanwhile, the leasing program is producing both needed revenues and needed oil.

Another charge has to do with alleged neglect of the endangered species program. I recently looked into this in connection with the administration's proposal to protect three subspecies of beach mice. Because this is one program that is especially dear to my heart, I looked hard at the record. It's a good record. The key figures in this area do not involve mere "listing" of species; what matters is the development of recovery plans, and here the picture is quite encouraging.

Yet another accusation is that the administration is selling millions of acres of federally owned land in order to reduce the deficit. Back in 1981 there was talk — but only talk — of such a plan. Nothing came of it. The federal government still owns 700 million acres, nearly one-third of all the land in the United States. Over the past four years the administration has offered about 100,000 acres of unneeded land for sale; only 33,500 acres, more or less, actually have been sold.

It is hard to understand the hostility of the conservationist groups to the Reagan record. Jim Watt's abrasive personality rubbed them raw; no one who sincerely loves the wilderness likes to be ridiculed as a petal-picker in Gucci boots. But neither Watt's offensiveness nor the political partisanship of such liberal Democrats as Gaylord Nelson, head of the Wilderness Society, fully explains the situation. The past four years have seen sound if unspectacular conservation. For all non-political purposes that should suffice.

Parks

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — When it comes to spending money on state parks, North Carolina is dead last among the 50 states, an incredible 20 percent behind the state that is 49th when measured on a per capita basis.

North Carolina spends an average of 84 cents per citizen each year on state parks. Rhode Island, a state little bigger than a good-sized park, spends $1.05 per citizen and ranks 49th. Hawaii, speding an average of $19.37 per citizen, ranks first. Those figures come from a legislative study committee.

"The Legislature's record in appropriating funds for state parks in recent years has been dismal," says Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, co-chairman of the legislature's State Parks Study Committee. "Land acquisition and capital improvements have just been terrible. They've been nothing."

Over the past several years, Barnes said, the main budget bill has failed to include any spending for anything other than the operation of existing state parks. The money which has been spent on land acquisition or other improvements has come from special bills — better known as pork barrel appropriations — which every Democratic legislator gets for his home district.

"In fact, if it had not been for the special bills, we wouldn't have been able to make our federal match," Barnes said of special federal programs which will not be funded unless a state government spends a certain amount of its own money each year on parks.

North Carolina has never spent a lot of money on parks. But even the low spending levels of the past have dropped drastically in recent years. In fiscal year 1973-74, the assembly appropriated an extraordinarily high $11.5 million. The following year the appropriation dropped to $5.5 million. At no time since has the assembly spent more than $500,000 in a single year and in four years there were no land acquisition appropriations for state parks. Federal spending for state parks in North Carolina has averaged $800,000 a year since 1973-74.

Barnes says the state's goal is to have a park or recreational area within 50 miles of every citizen's home. The state's 29 parks and 12 protected natural areas don't meet that goal by a longshot. In all, 57 counties do not have any state parks or recreational areas within their boundaries. (Some do have federal or local parks, however.)

The state has relied heavily, in the past, on private land donations. At one point, half of the state's parkland had come from donations. But the gifts are becoming scarce, legislative staff informed the committee. Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Buncombe, committee co-chairman, said the assembly will have to recognnize the need to spend some money if the goals of providing recreation areas and preserving the state's natural beauty are to be met.

To the editor:

I would like to address this letter to everyone who heard President Reagan's joke about outlawing and then bombing Russia and to all of those who remember Mr. Haig's 1982 remark about winning a limited nuclear war.

I am writing to all politicians, both in office and those running, because as a human being and a voter, I am deeply concerned about actions in the Legislature that can affect the continuation of human life.

The technology of destruction has increased its effectiveness to the point where today an armed conflict can exterminate the human species as combatant forces result to nuclear bombs under the pressure of war. The Falkland conflict is but one example. Even 1 percent of the bombs today can produce radioactivity and a dust cloud blocking the sun for months to years, resulting in the elimination of plant growth with subzero temperatures all over the world, killing more by starvation and cold than by direct hits. Reputable scientists worldwide, including the Soviet Union, agree on the outcome.

This information frightens me, as I know it does others. I can't help but wonder if we haven't gotten so caught up in the Soviet threat that we don't think about the consequences of a nuclear war, limited or not. No matter who's stronger, everyone will suffer the effects of a nuclear explosion as the wind carries the radioactive fallout and the lands become unfarmable, the water undrinkable. Can any of us really imagine a world unsuitable for life?

There can be no winner in this nuclear game, only losers. The next time any of us sees a child, we should think of what kind of world we are leaving for her or him and how we can better the odds.

To the editor:

I am in what are euphemistically called The Golden Years, and I am downright transmogrified at the affection Sen. (Jesse) Helms has suddenly developed for the elderly.

Will Sen. Helms love us in May as he does in November? In May 1982, he voted against a bill that would protect senior citizens from having to dig deeper into their pockets for Medicare costs.

And on a day in June of 1981 he voted against giving back to the elderly the minimum benefit paid by Social Security.

And in other months he voted, on bills too numerous to mention the space your newspaper allots to letters, against the best interests of people on Social Security.

Somebody named George Hess sent me a form letter telling me what a great friend Helms was to people on Social Security. Mr. Hess enclosed a letter to himself from Senator Helms which began, "It's always easy to tell when election year has rolled around again."

Amen.

Tell me, who wants to be loved in November and despised for the rest of the year? And for six more years?

To the editor:

I almost totally disagree with your Oct. 7 editorial. Your apparent choice for the next senator from North Carolina will result that the interest of a very few will be addressed rather than the affairs of the general public. No earthly person knows how the senator would have voted during the 1930s. On the same matter, how would your non-named choice have voted?

The voting of a straight party line fails to serve the interest of the most in the majority of the situations. To suggest lack of support for the president or that the senator is not capable of an independent vote is an ill remark.

Tell me how the governor of North Carolina has benefitted the state in such a great or unusual way. Economic develoment, quality of life and the other nice and good events are not the results of his labors alone. I suggest that persons of different political persuasions were directly involved.

Please tell me about economic development. This was started several years ago by another governor in the manner that continues today. Tell me about quality of life. How long did PCB lie beside several miles of N.C. highways while indecision prevailed?

The greatest criticism hurled at Sen. Helms is his being friendly with Rev. Jerry Falwell. Yes, I could accept a Supreme Court justice selected by Mr. Falwell and I believe you also could.

The acts of Mr. Hunt have the appearance of showmanship. It appears that, without benefit to Mr. Hunt, there will be little or no action.

You might consider the Hunt family member using a Political Action Committee automobile and the illegal use of state property. Paying after the fact makes the violation no less than breaking a trust to the people.

Considering the facts available, the senator is my candidate.

Please continue to print a quality newspaper. We agree on the right of free speech and freedom of the press, any bias notwithstanding.

To the editor:

Following his failure to make inroads in his debate with Rufus Edmisten, Republican candidate Jim Martin now seeks to make political hay by scaring state employees about their job security. The day following the debate news reports quoted Martin as saying that Rufus promoted his political allies in the SBI and that state employees were uneasy about their job security if Rufus is our next governor.

Does Jim Martin think state employees are stupid? Does he believe they have no memory? This is the same Jim Martin who, in the debate with Rufus, repeatedly praised Jim Holshouser and, in a recent interview with Bill Friday on public TV, stated that Jim Holshouser is the governor he most wants to emulate if he is elected.

Clearly, Jim Martin doesn't want the people, and particularly state employees, to remember what a Holshouser henchman did in 1973 a few months after Holshouser was inaugurated as the first (and hopefully last) Republican governor of this century. The henchman was dispatched by helicopter all across this state firing and transferring state employees left and right. The only thing those unfortunate state employees were guilty of was being Democrats. Greenville's own E.R. (Pete) Carraway was one of the victims.

Can the memory of North Carolinians, and particularly state employees, be so short that they forget the legacy of four years under Holshouser?

Jim Martin can't claim ignorance of Jim Holshouser's misdeeds of 1973 because by that time Martin had moved to North Carolina from his native Georgia. We have had fair warning from Jim Martin's own mouth as to what kind of governor we'll have if we should make the mistake of electing him.

Candidates Fulfill Their Roles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geraldine A. Ferraro and George Bush stood by their men. That is, after all, the role of vice presidents.

Bush told of his joy in serving as vice president to Ronald Reagan, "a president who does not apologize for the United States of America."

Ms. Ferraro said Walter F. Mondale chooses his causes because they are right.

"I wouldn't be standing here if Fritz Mondale didn't have the courage and my party didn't stand for the values that it does, the values of fairness, and equal opportunity," the congresswoman said.

"This battle is not over," she said. "For our country, for our future, for the principles we believe in, Walter F. Mondale and I have just begun to fight."

So much for the vice presidential campaign debate in Philadelphia. Now Reagan and Mondale meet again, next Sunday night in Kansas City, to debate foreign policy. That's the one that counts.

Reagan needs a comeback as a debater after his faltering performance against Mondale last Sunday. Mondale still needs a comeback as a candidate. Debate points notwithstanding, he remains a landslide behind in the public opinion polls.

In the interim meeting of understudy candidates Thursday night, Bush and Ms. Ferraro had different missions. His was to take the offense in Reagan's behalf, to reclaim whatever momentum the Republicans lost after the first presidential debate. Hers was to prove that a three-term congresswoman belonged in the vice presidency.

Both debaters pronounced their missions accomplished.

Bush, whose experience as a debater has not always been happy, came on strong, extolling Reagan almost every time he got his turn. He spent more of his time slapping the absent Mondale than criticizing the Democratic vice presidential nominee he faced.

Running agai:st Reagan for the Republican nomination four years ago, Bush was the victim in one of the more memorable moments in campaign debate. That was the night in Nashua, N.H., when Reagan announced that he'd paid for the microphone and he was going to talk on it. Bush sputtered, but never found a comeback line.

This time, debating in behalf of the Reagan ticket, he was animated, enthusiastic, an effective cheerleader. Reminded at the outset of his sometime differences with Reagan, Bush said there were no great differences between their ideas.

"I've been with him every step of the way," Bush said, adding that if he ever succeeded to the presidency he would continue Reagan programs.

He said he'd never do what Mondale did after serving as vice president to Jimmy Carter — "jump away from him."

At one point, Bush theatrically waved his arms at the very thought of Mondale and the things the Democrat is saying about the president. "I'd better be careful," he said, as if to curb his exasperation. "Contrary to Mr. Mondale just saying everything's bad.

"I mean somebody says there's a silver lining, he sees a black cloud out there. Whine on, harvest moon."

Ms. Ferraro, in contrast, seemed intent on underplaying her role as the first woman ever to engage in vice presidential debate. That is not one of the bigger firsts, since there's only been one vice presidential debate before, between Mondale and Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas in 1976.

She slowed her staccato speaking style, made her points carefully, without wisecracks or one-liners. When questions were raised about experience, credentials, the ability of a woman to deal with the Kremlin, she peered over her glasses and spoke firmly, sometimes sternly.

"I can make the hard decisions," she said. "... I wasn't born at the age of 43, when I entered Congress."

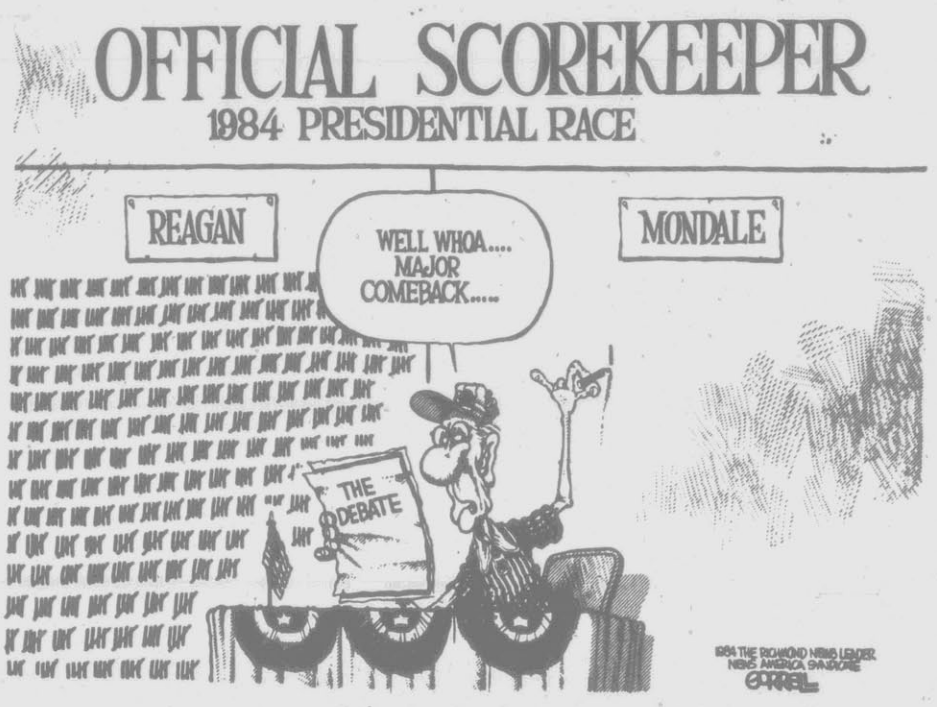
She said if she ever became president, the Soviet Union wouldn't push her around because she's a woman. Were they to threaten the United States, she said, "they would be assured that they would be met with swift, precise and certain retaliation."

Nor was she about to be pushed around by Bush in debate.

At one point, in a discussion of terrorism, Bush said, "Let me help you with the difference, Mrs. Ferraro, between Iran and the embassy in Lebanon."

"I almost resent, Vice President Bush, your patronizing attitude that you have to teach me about foreign policy. ...," she snapped.

"Secondly, please don't categorize my answers either. Leave the interpretation of my answers to the American people who are watching this debate."



Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Transforming An Advantage

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The most one-sided presidential debate since they began in 1960 was produced partly by a late backstage change in Walter F. Mondale's tactics but mainly by super-cautious tactics from Ronald Reagan's campaign managers.

Intensive debate rehearsals brought to Louisville a president confused by notebooks full of statistics and short of any vision. But long before that, the antiseptic strategy of relying wholly on Reagan's first-term record and ignoring the future had set the stage for his debacle here.

Thoughtful Republicans have brooded for months on the nightmarish prospect of a 73-year-old candidate running without articulating a vision of the future. Nightmare became reality last Sunday when Mondale, following outside advice that penetrated his cocoon, emerged from the gloom.

That hardly seemed the likely outcome as the political world gathered in Louisville last Sunday afternoon. While hordes of Republicans prepared the Hyatt Hotel for a monster rally to follow the debate, dour Democrats down the street stalked the Seelbach lobby, expressing fear that Fritz Mondale had given up. In both hotels, talk of a realigment election was in the air.

It had vanished less than 12 hours later. Democratic euphoria over improved prospects for fund-raising and congressional races and a dramatically tightened presidential contest was genuine. While presidential staffers insisted that the debate was a wash, other Republicans mourned diminished prospects for realignment in 1984.

Accordingly, Mondale managers thank their lucky stars for what they never really thought would happen: agreement to debates by James A. Baker III, acting for the president. "Jim Baker may be a terrific White House chief of staff," one Mondale adviser told us, "but he's a lousy politician."

However, the damaging advice to Reagan from Baker was not accepting the debate challenge but refusing to discuss his agenda for 1985. He consequently could not embrace politically attractive elements of the 1984 Republican platform — a flat tax and a doubled personal tax exemption. When a congressman in September told a senior Reagan adviser that the president should start talking impromptu about his vision of America, the reply was that they never could trust Reagan to depart from the sanitized script.

It was such a lack of confidence in Reagan that led to the debate debacle. The president's performance was tipped by campaign aides a week earlier when they predicted Reagan would not be stumped on the facts. At rehearsals, Reagan was crammed with statistics and informed he would not be in trouble if he simply made no mistakes.

The result was a Ronald Reagan pathetically searching for the right numbers. His frequent hints of the future in speeches — tax rates and a new-opportunity society — were forgotten on the stage in Louisville.

The only mention of his enterprise zones proposal came from Mondale. Instead, the president was lured into a politically self-defeating squabble about Social Security — the subject most poisonous for Republicans.

Expecting a vicious frontal assault from Fighting Fritz, Reagan encountered a gracious antagonist who shed much of the leaden image of the past two years. Mondale campaign manager Bob Beckel, in private conversation with associates of the debate, credited the strategy to an unlikely source: political consultant Pat Caddell, who had launched successive maneuvers to block Mondale's nomination.

After dry-run debate sessions less than a week before the debate proved unsatisfactory, Mondale read one of Caddell's famous memos on debate strategy prepared for him and then asked to see his former antagonist. What followed were two long walks in which Caddell spelled out his game plan.

Beckel and Caddell were less successful in trying to tone down the emphasis on the deficit, insisted on by chief media adviser Richard Leone. Although it only reinforced the Democratic notoriety for increasing taxes, Mondale stubbornly pressed deficits at the beginning of the debate. He survived when a Reagan seemingly benumbed by seeking to remember all those numbers did not stigmatize Mondale as Mr. Super-Taxer.

Panicky Republican politicians are pouring advice into the Oval Office that Reagan get off the defensive for the foreign policy debate Oct. 21. Not even the White House would seem capable of blowing so massive a lead, but the texture of the 1984 campaign has been transformed by Louisville.

Learning A Lesson

WASHINGTON — Over the years, the homage colleges have paid to near-illiterate football players has been a source of embarrassment to many professors and administrators. Yet, when pressed to explain the imperial status accorded their beefy stars, academics have always been able to defend their generosity with cost/benefit analysis. The hefty financial return the bruisers brought their schools from nationally televised football games was worth, perhaps, a "C" in U.S. History.

Reducing the importance of college football jocks is hardly what the Supreme Court intended last June when it freed NCAA member schools to negotiate their own football television contracts. The high court's decision, however, could well change the nature of college athletics.

The chain of events that even the most successful football schools may come to regret began in 1982, when the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia sued the NCAA because of its monopolistic power over football television contracts. Hungry for more profits, Georgia and Oklahoma wanted to appear on national television more than the allotted six times every two years.

The Supreme Court ruled in favor of Georgia and Oklahoma, saying that the NCAA's exclusive control over college football TV contracts violated federal anti-trust laws.

Football fans have benefitted. The Big 10 and Pacific 10 conference have agreed to a deal with Metrosports, a Rockville, Md., cable television company, to televise games not covered by their contract with CBS. Ivy League games are being televised by Trans World Internatonal, a New York TV syndicator, on the Eastern Educational Network, a group of 48 Public Broadcasting Service stations in the Northeast. Among the other deals is the Atlantic Coast Conference's 12-game agreement with Jefferson Pilot Teleproductions of Charlotte, N.C.

In most American cities, viewers can now choose from among eight or 10 football games on a Saturday, running from noon to the early hours of Sunday morning.

A plethora of televised contests, however, hasn't encouraged Americans to spend more time watching big men in pads fall down and get up. According to Nielsen ratings, only 6.1 million people on the average watched mid-afternoon games that were nationally televised in September. That's about a million fewer viewers than last year.

When the Supreme Court decision was announced last summer, the College Football Association, a federation of 63 big-name schools, predicted that its members would receive $250,000 each in television revenues. Instead, its members now expect payments of about $84,500 each.

"We're going to receive the same amount of money this year for eight televised appearances that we received two years ago for four appearances under the old NCAA rights fee plan," said Virgil Luberden, assistant director of athletics and the University of Southern California. "We're working twice as hard for the same amount of money."

Who's The Best Pool Player?

Folks used to ask Luther Lassiter who he considered the best pool player in the world. Lassiter, who got the nickname "Wimpy" back in high school at Elizabeth City, had some claim to the title himself. He had won the world championship seven times, and he had played all the big names — Willie Mosconi, Minnesota Fats, Babyface Whitlow, Weenie-Beenie Staton, Lefty Louis.

"Well, it wasn't Fats," he replied. "I've known him over 40 years and I know he's a phony. There are probably hundreds of straight pool players that can beat him. I beat him easy."

Lassiter's disdain for the legendary Minnesota Fats may have been in part the outgrowth of what Fats had written about Wimpy in his book, "The Bank Shot and Other Great Robberies."

Minnesota Fats, whose real name was Rudolph Wanderone Jr., said that when Lassiter was a youngster "he used to get into wrestling matches over who was going to carry my cue case."

"Wimpy idolized me," wrote Fats, whose exploits were first told in the novel and movie "The Hustler." "I took him under my wing as a protege. In fact, we traveled on the road together, and when I got through with Luther he was a tremendous cash player."

Minnesota Fats went on to tell about an all-night encounter he had with Lassiter once in Washington. He said Lassiter was shooting so well that at one time another old-timer had told him, "'Fatty, there is no way you can beat the kid.'

"Now it's like 9 o'clock the next morning and exactly all the cash is up for grabs when Wimpy plays a safe which happened to hem me in pretty good. I need the deuce in the corner pocket, only there's a zillion balls between the cue ball and the deuce so the only way out was for me to go to the masse, which is a very difficult shot to pull off. I put a zillion dollars worth of English on the ball and it hurdled right over the other balls like a rocket and whacked that deuce in the corner pocket for all the gelt. I had busted Mr. Lassiter again."

A few years after that was written, a group of Lassiter's friends put up $20,000 as a wager to challenge all comers for a nine-ball match during a Los Vegas pool tournament. Although the world's best players were there, no one took the bet.

One of them was the fabled Willie Mosconi. "Tried all my life to get Mosconi to play me for money," said Lassiter. "Oh, man, he'd faint. He plays a wonderful exhibition game, but he's no money plater."

When some one mentioned Minnesota Fats, Lassiter hooted.

"The Fat Man play me? Hah. I couldn't catch him with a pair of ice tongs."

"I don't have to say I'm the best player in the world," Lassiter said. Then he pointed to his front porch. "Nobody's waiting outside to play me. They all know where I live."

Lassiter started playing pool when he was 13, learning the game on a four-pocket table in the backyard of an Elizabeth City doctor. He graduated to the six-pocket table at the Elizabeth City YMCA and later began playing at the local poolroom where, over the years, he perfected his skills. In the late 1930s, from age 17 to 20, Lassiter barnstormed and beat the best players America's cities could offer.

Lassiter claimed he once hustled $15,200 in one week, $11,000 in a single night and $5,000 in once game.

"I'd find the best player in town and beat him and get it over with," he said. "I was never what you would call a hustler, but I didn't always let out fully because you need to string them along. You can beat a man once, maybe twice, and then he won't play you any more."

"Times were pretty tough then," Lassiter recalled. "You really couldn't make that much money hustling, so you had to get it in tournaments."

So, Lassiter, a big, stocky man with short, pudgy fingers, hit the tournament trail in 1953, winning "probably 16 or 17 pretty important tournaments" on the way to becoming the world's champion pool playuer seven times.

His style became classic. He'd sit statue-like beside the pool table, resplendent in a black tuxedo, appearing to doze as his opponent rattled off ball after ball. But Wimpy, who got his colorful nickname after he polished off "about 12 hot dogs and 11 or 12 cokes" back in high school in Elizabeth City, was not sleeping. When his opponent missed, he'd rise and score on ball after ball himself.

But why the tux? he was asked. "Oh, you know," he said. "I was just trying to add a little class to the game. Sure, sometimes, the tux hurts your game. It can get pretty hot."

In time, the tournament trail began to heat up, too, as the youngsters began to take over.

Local Graduates

Local students receiving degrees during the summer included:

Library Conference

East Carolin University Deparment of Library Science staff members attended the biennial work conference of the North Carolina Association of School Librarians in Raleigh recently.

Local participants in the conference were faculty members Emily S. Boyce, Dianne Catlett, Donald Collins, Gene D. Lanier and Constance Mellon. Students Angela Jones and Sharon Jones served as pages.

Ms. Boyce made a media presentation on "Strategies for Working with Media Personnel" and conducted four sessions on the topic "The Challenge of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools." Lanier conducted two sessions on "Intellectual Freedom Update — Election Year '84" and chaired a meeting of the N.C. Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Committee, participated as a member of the Research Grants Committee and served as parliamentarian for the conference.

Council Session

The Parents' Advisory Council for Exceptional Children will meet Tuesday starting at 8 p.m. at the Greenville schools' Administrative Office. Anne Harrison will explain legislative changes in identification of exceptional children and of changes on special programs.

For further information call Pat Allegood, parent-chairperson, at 756-3168, or Mrs. Harrison, director of exceptional children's programs, at 758-4198.

Kirby Named

Edgar W. Kirby III has been named vice president of organization and membership for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce for 1985.

Kirby is vice president and Greenville city executive for North Carolina National Bank. He recently served as the chamber's Small Business Week chairman and is finance chairman for the current Junior Achievement program.

The Organization and Membership Division offers such membership services as Pepsi Breaks, business after hours, ambassador, leadership institutes, annual meetings, and out-of-town planning conferences.

PCMH Bed Census Rising

By BETH NELSON
PCMH Office of Information and Publications

While hospital officials nationwide bemoan continuing slumps in their inpatient census, administrators at Pitt County Memorial Hospital are riding the crest of an unanticipated surge in activity.

The PCMH census has reached record levels on various days in the past two months and the average monthly occupancy rate has run significantly higher than comparable months a year ago.

According to administration statistics, the census for the 531-bed hospital topped the 500 mark on a number of occasions in August and September, hitting 508 on Aug. 15, 503 on Aug. 16 and 507 on Aug. 17. During September the census dipped around the Labor Day holiday, but reached highs of 509 on Sept. 11 and 506 on Sept. 12.

The average number of patients per day was 399 for June, compared with 391.6 a year ago. July's mark was 423.6, significantly higher than the 409.8 posted the year before. For August the average was 431.9, compared with 423.9 in August 1983. September figures have not yet been compiled.

The increasing percentage of occupancy has continued to build during June, July and August, figures show, rising from 75.1 percent in June to 79.8 percent in July and 84.4 percent last month. The occupancy levels in July and August were higher than the same months last year, although June did show a slight decline.

"It's too early to call it a trend that will last through the year," said Fred T. Brown Jr., executive vice president at Pitt Memorial. "But if it does, we could expect to have virtually every bed full in January, February and March, historically our busiest months. That would translate into a 93-94 percent occupany rate," he said.

Pitt Memorial seems to be unique in its phenomenon of high activity during the summer, Brown said, and especially this particular summer. A new federal reimbursement formula went into effect less than a year ago, sending shock waves throughout much of the hospital industry nationwide. In its wake, many hospitals have experienced drastically lower patient loads. So low, in fact, some have been forced to close.

Jack Richardson, Pitt Memorial president, said that, at a recent American Hospital Association conference, he could find no hospital administrators whose facilities were reporting such a significant upturn in utilization.

Some small hospitals in eastern North Carolina have seen occupancy drop below 50 percent under prospective reimbursement. Several have had to close a portion of their facilities or lay off employees, but all are still in operation.

Brown believes Pitt Memorial has fared well under prospective reimbursement because it was operating efficiently under the old system. Pitt has had a short length-of-stay and low number of admissions per 1,000 people — two indicators that the medical staff is not admitting patients needlessly and is not allowing them to remain in the hospital longer than necessary. "Under prospective payment, we have found little need to change our patterns because they were already exemplary," Brown said.

It is difficult to determine what is causing Pitt Memorial's increase in census. Brown speculates it may be caused by a combination of factors. For one thing, he said, the number of East Carolina University School of Medicine faculty members and private community physicians practicing at the hospital is growing. He noted that 21 new physicians joined the medical staff in July and each is admitting patients.

He said the cardiac surgery program has had unusually fast growth in its first three months of existence and is drawing patients.

Referral patterns in eastern North Carolina also appear to be solidifying, thus bringing a large number of patients from outside Greenville to PCMH for a variety of services. This is especially true in the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit, where utilization is dramatically higher than ever before, he said.

City Seeking Participants For Medical District Study

City officials are seeking citizens who would like to serve on a land use study committee concerning future development of the medical district surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Members of the City Council will begin reviewing names of those who would like to participate during a 5:30 p.m. workshop meeting Oct. 22 in the first floor conference room of City Hall following discussion of a charter outlining the purpose, composition of, and tasks to be performed by the land use study committee. Work on the study will begin upon completion of committee selection and is expected to take approximately six months.

Citizens interested in the committee should contact the city manager's office.

Results of the study and recommendations of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission concerning future medical land use, as indicated in a resolution adopted by the council Thursday, will be examined by the council before consideration of any additions, deletions or changes in the present medical district plan are undertaken. The area to be studied involves property in the area of PCMH, the East Carolina University School of Medicine and related health service acreage within the city limits and extraterritorial jusrisdiction of the city.

According to City Manger Gail Meeks, the medical district study is one of five growth-related priorities the city has been discussing since June. The remaining four items the council and city agencies will be working on in coming months include an in-depth study of land use plans for acreage surrounding the Pitt-Greenville Airport, an update of city zoning ordinances, an update on annexation feasibilities and an update of the comprehensive master plan for specific growth patterns of the city.

British Say Bomb Planted Well In Advance

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — IRA guerrillas bent on assassinating Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher may have planted the bomb in her hotel weeks ago, wrapping it in cellophane and hiding it under floorboards to fool police dogs, Scotland Yard said Saturday.

Mrs. Thatcher was in her room at the Grand Hotel, polishing a keynote address to her Conservative Party's annual conference, when the bomb detonated at 2:54 a.m. Friday, killing four people and injuring 32.

Police reported a man was taken into custody Saturday afternoon at Liverpool airport in northwestern England and brought to Brighton under heavy police escort.Sussex police inspector Allan Anslow did not identify the man and said only that he was being questioned about the bombing.

Firemen on Saturday recovered the body of Jeanne Shattock, wife of the party's west England area chairman, Gordon Shattock. A crane tore of chunks of the devastated hotel's whitewashed facade to reveal the body trapped in a wrecked upper story.

Also killed were member of Parliament Sir Anthony Berry, a former Tory whip whose first wife is Princess Diana's aunt; Eric Taylor, chairman of the party's northwest England chapter, and Roberta Wakeham, wife of chief House of Commons whip John Wakeham. Their bodies were recovered earlier.

Police pressed their search for the bombers as Britain debated how better to protect its leaders without sealing them off from the public.

"If ministers cower behind the castle walls ... (the) battle within will have been lost," said The Times of London in an editorial.

But The Daily Mirror denounced "criminally complacent" security that it said nearly cost the lives of the prime minister and her Cabinet and called for stringent new measures.

"The carefree days before terrorism have long gone," it declared.

London's Sunday Times claimed in a front-page story that police ignored intelligence warnings last Wednesday that an Irish Republican Army bomb attack "somewhere in Britain" was likely.

It said the armed forces were put on alert and the warning was sent to police stations nationwide, including Brighton. Police here refused comment on the report.

The mostly Roman Catholic IRA, fighting to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland, claimed responsibility for the unprecedented attack, saying it was aimed at "Tory warmongers."

Danny Morrison, a spokesman for Sinn Feinn, the IRA's legal political wing, was quoted as saying that if the bomb had killed the Cabinet ministers, Britain would have left its Northern Ireland province quickly.

"The moral position is irrelevant," The Observer newspaper quoted Morrison as saying. "The IRA would say their tactic is working ... as far as the IRA is concerned, they can move her (Mrs. Thatcher)."

Wakeham was rescued after six hours under rubble and Mrs. Thatcher's trade secretary, Norman Tebbit, was buried for four hours. They were among 10 victims still hospitalized Saturday.

Tebbit's wife, Margaret, was paralyzed from the neck down. It was not known if she would recover movement, Royal Sussex Hospital physician Dr. Tony Trafford said.

Mrs. Thatcher, marking her 59th birthday, spent Saturday at Chequers, her country residence northwest of London.

Pope John Paul II sent condolences for "an act of futile hatred" and prayed "that God will convert the hearts of all those who try to use violence to obtain their aims."

Cmdr. William Hucklesby, chief of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch, told a news conference that the 20-pound bomb was planted in a seventh-floor room.

He said it almost certainly was a time bomb, and, given the increasing sophistication of recent IRA attacks, may have been planted long before the Tory meeting.

"It could have been possible to place the bomb and time it to three weeks, two hours, 30 seconds," he said. Placing it under the floorboards would have hidden it from police and a tight cellophane wrapping would have deceived police dogs, he added.

"It must be one of the most discerning bombs planted by the IRA because of the different dimension in timing of the device," Hucklesby said.

Death Squad Says Duarte 'Target'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A rightist death squad Saturday declared President Jose Napoleon Duarte a "target" and accused him of "high treason" for arranging Monday's scheduled peace summit with leftist guerrillas.

The Secret Anti-Communist Army, in a communique delivered to San Salvador media offices, said Duarte's proposal for peace talks was "a betrayal of the Salvadoran people."

"It is a dangerous political maneuver and for that reason, Duarte and all the political parties and organizations that support it are committing an act of high treason against El Salvador, its institutions and its people," the statement said.

"Those that the National Liberation Party and its armed branch, the Secret Anti-Communist Army declare enemies of the nation will be targets of our military action."

The two-page communique, which bore the ESA symbol of a hand holding a torch and a machine pistol, said Duarte's plan to meet guerrilla leaders "only fulfills the plan to surrender to communist interests."

Rightist death squads in El Salvador have been blamed for as many as 40,000 political killings in recent years.

Only hours before the threat, a top Salvadoran churchman flew to Panama to arrange details for the peace talks scheduled Monday in the mountain village of La Palma, 43 miles north of San Salvador.

The latest maneuverings came a day after some 800 army troops briefly occupied La Palma, a move that appeared to undermine the military's determination to negotiate with the rebels they have battled for five years.

Lt. Col. Sigifredo Ochoa told reporters he received "orders from the high command" to occupy the mountain village of La Palma for six hours Friday to whitewash walls covered with revolutionary slogans.

But it was unclear whether Duarte ordered the occupation. The president said Wednesday he had ordered Ochoa to keep his men in their barracks "during these days" preceding the peace talks.

Ochoa last month took command of the 4th Brigade in largely rebel-controlled Chalatenango province after spending 20 months in Washington, where he was ordered after leading a 10-day mutiny against the defense minister in January 1983.

China To Allow Change In Prices

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party is about to proclaim urban reforms that diplomatic sources say will raise prices kept low for decades by state controls, in what senior leader Deng Xiaoping has called a "kind of revolution."

The party's Central Committee, meeting in a full session, is expected to release a document on the restructuring, which carry the risk of sharp inflation in the cities.

China's city dwellers have paid the same artificially low prices since the 1950s on everything from rice to coal..

The overhaul also could arouse opposition from party members who might interpret it as an unpardonable shift toward a capitalist economy. But the party-run press says the reforms are necessary and will be welcomed.

Western diplomats, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said they believed prices on many goods such as food, cloth and fuel will be allowed to "float," or adjust to new levels based on the true cost of production.

This means prices of many items will rise sharply, competition will increase and inefficient firms could be forced out of business.

"Deng has decided to bite the bullet this time. He's going for a major price reform," said one diplomat.

Prison Clash Leaves One Dead, Seven Hurt

TENNESSEE COLONY, Texas (AP) — Mexican-American inmates clashed with black prisoners Saturday in violence that left one man dead and seven others injured at the Texas Department of Corrections' Coffield Unit, a spokesman said.

The killing was the 19th this year among inmates of the Texas prison system.

The dead and injured inmates, all of whom were black, were stabbed by six Mexican-American inmates about 9:30 a.m. Saturday in what prison officials believe was a racially motivated attack, said corrections spokesman Charles Brown.

The attack occurred in a dining room, Brown said. "All the participants were kitchen workers. The suspects pulled homemade weapons and stabbed the eight victims," he said.

Five of the injured inmates were taken to Anderson County Memorial Hospital, where one of them, 22-year-old Michael Davis, died, Brown said. Davis was serving a 12-year sentence for robbery and aggravated assault on a police officer.

Two other inmates were transferred to the hospital at the nearby Beto II Unit, and another was treated at the Coffield Unit infimary, Brown said. Reports on the victims' conditions were not immediately available.

Six homemade weapons were found in the dining area, Brown said.

The six inmates suspected in the attack were questioned and placed in pre-hearing detention, the spokesman said.

The names of the injured inmates were not available pending notification of relatives, Brown said. He said they were serving time for such offenses as robbery, aggravated assault, rape and murder.

Prison officials locked down the area where the attack occurred, and Brown said unit officials do not expect the attack to lead to any further outbreaks of violence.

"This comes as a surprise because we've been doing so well lately as far as violent incidents are concerned," Brown said. "I don't know what prompted this. I don't know what our next move will be."

The attack raises to 309 the number of inmates stabbed in prison violence in 1984 in the Texas prison system, the nation's second largest.

TV Actor Wounded By Blank

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jon-Erik Hexum was in critical condition Saturday after he accidentally shot himself in the head with a blank-loaded pistol on the set of the CBS series "Cover Up," a studio spokesman said.

Hexum, 26, was transferred to the intensive care unit at the Beverly Hills Medical Center on Saturday morning and will be kept sedated until the swelling in his head subsides, said Vince Panettiere, a publicist for 20th Century-Fox studios.

He underwent five hours of surgery Friday night, performed by a neurosurgical team headed by Dr. David Ditsworth. Panettiere quoted Ditsworth as saying Hexum was struck in the right temple. The force of the blank charge fired at close range fractured the bone, but there was no penetration.

Collision

According to Greenville Police, approximately $4,600 in property damages resulted from a three-car collision on U.S. 13 Friday.

Involved in the incident were cars driven by Eula Pratt Younger of 103 Wedgewood Drive, Howard Lockhart Wilkerson of Lewiston and Kay Foreman White of C-11 Glendale Court. Damages to the Younger car were estimated at $1,800 and $2,800 to the Wilkerson car. The White vehicle was not damaged.

Police reports indicated that the three north-bound cars collided when trying to avoid a vehicle that pulled into the on-coming traffic lane.

No charges were filed.

Four Die As Car Flips Bus

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — A sports car ran underneath a high school band bus, shearing the top off the car and overturning the bus, authorities said Saturday. All four people in the car were killed and 39 bus passengers were injured.

The car, a Chevrolet Corvette with New York license plates, apparently ran a stop sign at an intersection near the Auburn University campus about 11:30 p.m. Friday, said police Detective Murray Straight.

The bus was carrying the Tuskegee Institute High School band home after a football game at Beauregard High School about 15 miles away, Straight said.

"We had just come from McDonald's (restaurant)," said band member Donald Harris. "I had just started to nap when I felt the impact. The bus turned over, and everybody was falling on top of one another."

Lee County Coroner Jon Williams identified three of the victims as Andrea Smith of Covington, Ga.; Shannan Lynn Davis of Montgomery, Ala.; and Willis Jones Bradford III of Prattville, Ala.

The fourth victim was enlisted in the U.S. Army and identification was withheld pending notification of relatives, Williams said.

Thirty-seven of the injured bus passengers were treated at East Alabama Medical Center in Opelika and released, said nursing supervisor Frances Cheek. One person was admitted and in fair condition Saturday, and another was under observaton, Ms. Cheek said.

Break-In

Greenville Police are continuing an investigation of the Friday break-in of a 100-C Brookwood Drive residence.

According to Officer D.R. Wyrick, entry to the residence was gained through a sliding glass door. Approximately $25 of property was taken in the 12:35 p.m. break-in.

Business Slowdown Forecast

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The U.S. economy, now enjoying its strongest expansion in 33 years, will see a "welcome letup" next year that will leave growth at about half the current pace and help curb upward pressures on inflation and unemployment, the nation's top business leaders said Saturday.

But they warned of a possible recession in 1986 if the massive federal budget and trade deficits go unchecked.

The forecast was made at the fall meeting of the Business Council, which includes the top officers of many of America's largest corporations.

Their outlook was prepared by 20 corporate economists, whose growth projection for next year falls short of that expected by the Reagan administration but exceeds the forecast of the Congressional Budget Office.

While some executives here disagreed with certain points in the council forecast, most are in consensus with its findings, said John R. Opel, chairman of International Business Machines Corp. and a council vice chairman.

Some executives said privately that they agreed the deficits posed a serious threat, but that it was too early to tell whether the red ink itself would lead to a recession in 1986.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, after meeting with the council at this resort, said Reagan policies call "for this recovery and expansion to continue," which itself will help narrow the deficit.

Regan, echoing President Reagan, ruled out an overall tax increase to solve the deficit problem.

Regan and council member Walter Wriston, retiring chairman of Citicorp, also disagreed with the council's forecast of higher interest rates over the next few months, saying instead that rates would drift lower.

The council's report noted that 1984 economic growth will reach 7.2 percent, the strongest performance since 1951. Like many other forecasters, the council's advisers initially underestimated the economy's strength, saying it would expand by only about 4 percent this year.

The council said the growth rate would slow to about 3.5 percent in 1985. The Reagan administration is calling for 4 percent growth, but the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office predicts only 2.8 percent growth.

The Commerce Department has said its initial estimate of growth in the just-ended third quarter fell to 3.6 percent from 7.1 percent in the second quarter and a sizzling 10.1 percent in the January-March period.

Regan told reporters that the administration is seeking an average 4 percent inflation-adjusted growth annually through 1989.

If that growth is reached, together with continued low levels of inflation and federal spending growth of no more than 5 percent annually, then the budget deficit can be closed by the end of the decade, he said.

But the Business Council expressed doubt that the economy could smoothly move from rapid expansion to slow, sustained growth and continued low inflation "in the face of those huge deficits in our foreign trade and in the budget."

The council sees inflation — as measured by the Consumer Price Index — reaching only 4.3 percent for all of 1984 and 5 percent next year. Through the first eight months of this year, retail inflation was 4.2 percent.

Unemployment, which stood at 7.4 percent of the civilian work force in September, could drop as low as 7 percent a year from now, the report said.

But most of the council's economists also expect the prime lending rate — the rate banks use in calculating lending charges — will climb to 13 percent by year's end from its current level of 12.75 percent, and to 14.5 percent by the end of 1985.

The council also said consumer spending would slow from a current annual rate of about 6 percent to 3 percent for the rest of 1984 and 2.5 percent between the fourth quarters of 1984 and next year.

The council also heard that U.S. exporters are still hurting.

Paula Stern, head of the International Trade Commission, said the U.S. trade deficit — expected to reach a record $100 billion this year — was spawned by restrictive monetary policies by the Federal Reserve. She said these policies raised interest rates to the point where they have propelled the dollar to record highs, damaging exporters' sales abroad while increasing U.S. purchasing power of foreign goods.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

Reagan Signs Debt Extension Bill

98th Congress Adjourns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 98th Congress that convened Jan. 3, 1983, spent two years stumbling from one partisan pitfall to another, delaying decisions and doing little more than necessary to keep the government running.

After a characteristic final round of trying to score political points, it faded into history Friday after the Senate, on its second try, passed emergency legislation extending the government's authority to borrow money.

President Reagan on Saturday put his signature to the bill, which boosts the federal debt limit by $251 billion, to $1.824 trillion.

"It has been not the most productive session of Congress that I have participated in," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

"There are periods of great creativity and bursts of creative energy," Wright said, "then there are periods of retrenching."

In practice, that has meant Congress has spent two years biding its time and waiting to see what next month's presidential and congressional elections produce. Will President Reagan win a new mandate? Will Democrats or Republicans gain a clear advantage in the House and Senate?

"We've been in a period in which we haven't been trying to create a lot of new programs," Wright said.

The Congress began last year with a stronger Democratic majority in the House, allowing Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to reassert control over a chamber in which a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats pushed through Reagan's economic program in the previous two years.

While that situation produced stalemate on a range of issues, it also forced compromises on various politically delicate subjects.

By the time Congress recessed for its Easter break in March 1983, it had agreed on landmark legislation changing benefits, coverage and taxes to assue the continued solvency of the Social Security returement system. Also passed was a $4.6 billion anti-recession jobs program.

Legislators patted themselves on the back.

"We have redefined bipartisanship," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

But the spirit of cooperation virtually ended with those bills and the House and Senate bogged down in a confusing series of inconclusive arguments over foreign policy, defense and what actions were needed to shrink bulging budget deficits.

In addition, restlessness by junior members of both parties in each chamber complicated efforts to settle sensitive issues.

Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., observed: "The House knows that a lot of what it passes won't pass the Senate. The Senate knows a lot of what it does won't be signed by the president. And the president is just appointing commissions."

On the domestic front in 1983, Congress ignored its own edict and failed to live up to a three-year deficit-reduction plan that called for $73 billion in new taxes and making $12.3 billion in spending cuts.

Reagan's refusal to endorse tax increases and the usual reluctance of legislators to raise taxes as an election approaches outweighed almost $200 billion deficits.

"We make speeches on the floor of the Senate, and we make speeches back home to our constituents about what a terrible thing the deficit is, and yet ... when it comes to taking concrete steps to deal with the deficit, we are reduced to a catatonic state. We are immobile. We are unable to act," Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., lamented to his colleagues.

As for international affairs, Congress was rocked during the last third of 1983 by a stunning series of world events: On Sept. 1 the Soviet Union shot down a Korean airliner killing all 269 people aboard, including Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.; on Oct. 23, the Marine barracks in Beirut, Lebanon was bombed by terrorists with the loss of 241 servicemen; on Oct 25, U.S. troops invaded the tiny Caribbean island of Grenada.

In general, Congress lined up behind Reagan, including acceptance of a compromise measure allowing him to keep U.S. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon for up to 18 months.

Also in 1983, Congress gave Reagan a green light for production of the MX missile and rejected a proposal calling for a freeze on nuclear weapons.

Left for 1984 were measures to reform immigration laws, decontrol natural gas, make changes in the criminal code and revise the Clean Air and Clean Water acts.

Of those, only a crime package was approved this year.

NEW PURSUITS — Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., who ended his Senate career Friday, is shown during an interview in his office last week. Baker says he now will have the time to pursue other interests, including a possible presidential bid. (AP Laserphoto)

Baker Says Time For New Passions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that Congress has finally adjourned, Howard H. Baker Jr. says he's ready to spend the next four years pursuing some other, possibly less chaotic, passions — photography, law and the presidency.

But not necessarily in that order.

Baker, who presided over the first Republican majority in the Senate in more than a quarter-century, on Friday concluded an 18-year Senate career when the 98th Congress went home.

And he said he thought the moment would never come. Three times last week, Congress came close to adjournment — only to run into an uexpected delay.

"Three times this week, I've walked down the hall from the Senate chamber to my office thinking it was the last time I'd make that walk," Baker said.

But the final adjournment of the 98th Congress freed him from what he calls "the tether of current issues" to begin testing the waters for another presidential run.

"I would like to run for president, that is my commitment," said the 58-year-old Tennesee Republican, who did not seek re-election after serving as majority leader for the past four years.

But Baker suggested he'd be testing those waters slowly, one toe at a time.

After all, the 1984 presidential election still hasn't taken place and "I've got a lot, a lot of time" to think about seeking the GOP nomination in 1988, Baker told several reporters in an end-of-session interview in his Senate office.

Baker said he'll make a final decision after the midterm 1986 congressional elections.

In the meantime, he'll be busy working as a lawyer, both in Washington and Tennessee, with lots of time out for political engagements around the country.

Slumped in an easy chair in his Senate office, his feet up on a coffee table, Baker declared: "I have had not one single twinge of regret" about his decision to leave.

In addition to rejoining his old firm in Tennessee, Baker will serve as senior Washington partner for the Houston-based law firm of Vinson and Elkins, reportedly at an annual salary in the vicinity of $700,000.

"They understand that I'm not going to relinquish my interest in politics, that I require adequate time to travel and speak. I intend to be a full-fledged lawyer, however. I'm not simply hanging out a shingle. I intend to practice law," Baker said.

POSTAL EXAM WORKSHOP
Clerk - Carrier
The Greenville Area Post Offices (Williamston, Plymouth, Windsor, etc.) plan to accept applications for the Clerk - Carrier exam within the next 2 weeks.
The dates for taking applications have not been set at this time, but those dates should appear in the near future on Post Office bulletin boards and in local newspapers. The Clerk - Carrier position currently pays $10.62 per hour plus excellent benefits. People are hired for these positions based on their exam score, i.e. the people with the highest scores are hired.
WORKSHOP BY POSTAL EXAM PREPARATION CENTER
Many cities often take applications and begin testing the very next week. This system does not allow adequate time for proper preparation. In order to make sure that you have enough time to properly prepare, this workshop is being offered before application dates have been set. This workshop was designed by the foremost authority in America on gaining postal employment. Stephen McNally is a former postal employee and a Ph.D. candidate in Education. He has averaged 100% on 5 out of 5 Clerk-Carrier exams. One of Mr. McNally's students recently made this statement, "This workshop was well worth my time and money. Using Mr. McNally's techniques allowed me to score 100% on my first 3 Clerk-Carrier exams!" K.A. Summerfield, IL.
SCORE 95-100 OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED
*The Exclusive P.E.P.C. Double Guarantee: 1. At the end of the workshop, if you do not think these methods will significantly increase your score, your money will be refunded. 2. You will enter a written contract guaranteeing you a score of 95% or higher or your money will be refunded in full.
*After attending this workshop you will be personally notified of the application dates.

Shultz Says State Department Uses Daily Review Of U.S. Security Risks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, prompted by last month's terrorist attack at the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut, is conducting daily high-level meetings to review potential security problems at U.S. diplomatic installations, Secretary of State George Shultz says.

On his way back from a three-day trip to the Caribbean on Friday, Shultz told reporters that he expects the meetings to be part of his daily routine whenever he isn't traveling.

Other officials, who asked to remain anonymous, said discussions at the meetings involve reported death threats against diplomats, potential terrorist attacks, and progress in the State Department's security improvements at overseas posts.

Shultz said he attends the meetings with Assistant Secretary for Administration Robert Lamb; the top security expert in that bureau, David Fields; Undersecretary for Management Ronald Spiers; and the director of the Office for Counter-Terrorism and Emergency Planning, Robert Oakley.

The meetings, which began Oct. 6, are part of a series of activities that were set in motion following the Sept. 20 attack on the Beirut embassy annex, the third such assault on a U.S. facility in the Lebanese capital in 18 months.

The administration has asked Congress for $110 million for short-term improvements in embassy security and will seek additional money early next year.

There also are plans — some pre-dating the most recent incident in Beirut — to hire more Marine security guards, to buy additional armored limousines, and to relocate the most vulnerable embassies to less populous areas.

Shultz said that a decade ago, when security was less of a problem, embassies were often placed in areas that offered the best opportunity for contact with local people.

Since the Sept. 20 attack, embassy security has become an issue in the presidential campaign, with Democratic nominee Walter Mondale and running mate Geraldine Ferraro accusing President Reagan of being inattentive to the problem.

In addition, the House Intelligence Committee issued a report asserting that the State Department ignored a number of "unambiguous" warnings that the embassy annex would become a terrorist target.

It said there was "no logical explanation" for what it described as a major security failure.

Concern over embassy security is not limited to diplomatic missions in the Middle East. U.S. officials said there has been a renewal of death threats against the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Thomas Pickering. Some embassy officials frequently have their cars repainted to avoid easy identification.

FBI Thwarted Terror Incidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI last year prevented six terrorist acts by a Puerto Rican independence group on the mainland, including an escape from Leavenworth Penitentiary, the murder of a Chicago transit worker and two bombings, Attorney General William French Smith said Saturday.

Smith, who said the incidents were foiled through surveillance work and the use of court-approved wiretaps, made the disclosure in a speech prepared for an awards dinner of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in Los Angeles. His text was released here.

This year, Smith said, "the FBI intercepted in Philadelphia two Libyans before they could carry out their acts of terror. One Libyan bought two bulletproof vests and ordered four .45-caliber handguns equipped with silencers from an FBI undercover agent posing as an illegal arms dealer. Immediately after delivery of three of the weapons to the Libyans, the pair was arrested."

Smith cited the incidents as examples of the federal government's ability to counter terrorism.

In the 1983 incidents, he said, a left-wing Puerto Rican group known as the FALN planned "to free one of its members from Leavenworth Penitentiary, to rob and murder a Chicago Transit fare collector and to bomb both Marine and Army Reserve training centers in Chicago."

Smith gave no further details and did not say whether he meant that list to include all six incidents.

FBI Director William H. Webster has said he believes the bureau foiled an Iranian terrorist plan in 1983 to bomb a Seattle theater where an Iranian group was to perform, but Seattle officials have suggested the "plan" may have been no more than a rumor.

Smith noted that terrorist incidents inside the United States have been declining from 51 in 1982 to 31 in 1983 and eight so far this year.

Briley Dies In Electric Chair

RICHMOND (AP) — Linwood Briley, described alternately as "calm" and "unsteady" and professing his innocence to the end, has died in Virginia's electric chair for murdering a Richmond disc jockey five years ago.

"He was very unsteady on his feet and he was not the brave sort of fellow that you expect him to be or I would expect him to be," said B. Randolph Wellford, a Richmond lawyer who volunteered to witness Briley's execution Friday night.

But Richmond Mayor Roy A. West, another of the eight volunteer execution witnesses, said Briley was "very calm, very resolute" when he was led into the death chamber. "He had his eyes closed but he was very, very calm. He sat, and they strapped him in...."

"We asked him could he walk by himself," said the Rev. Odie D. Brown, one of two prison chaplains who accompanied Briley. "He said, 'Sure, I've got to.' ...He was not trembling or shaking or crying."

V. Stuart Cook, a Richmond police major, called the execution "quick and uneventful... It was a very humane way to kill."

Deborah Wyatt, Briley's defense lawyer who also witnessed the event at the State Penitentiary here as "a lawyer's obligation," said her client "made it a little easier for everybody by being so brave."

In his last words, Briley "said he was innocent, he was not guilty," Corrections Director Robert Landon said just minutes after Briley was pronounced dead at 11:05 p.m.

The 30-year-old Briley was put to death for the murder of John "Johnny G." Gallaher, a country music disc jockey abducted from a tavern, robbed and shot in the back in 1979. He also was serving life-plus sentences involving six other murders that year.

On May 31, Briley had led five other death row inmates at Virginia's Mecklenburg Correctional Center — among them his brother James — on a daring late-night escape. The Briley brothers were the last of the six to be recaptured when they were picked up in Philadelphia June 19.

After his recapture, Briley spent his remaining days at the State Penitentiary here. His last day was spent in visits with his lawyer and relatives — including a 10-year-old son, his mother Bertha, his brother Edward from North Carolina, and his grandfather.

At Briley's mother's request, she was allowed to hug her son, but Briley's son was not allowed to touch his father. Briley also spoke on the phone with brothers James and Anthony, both imprisoned on murder convictions.

Briley turned down an offer of a special meal late in the afternoon but was served a specially-prepared dinner anyway of grilled tenderloin steak, baked potatoes, green peas, salad, peaches and cake, said Corrections Department spokesman Wayne Farrar.

Farrar said there was no change in procedure for the rest of the prisoners, most of whom spent the evening watching the World Series. A scattered few sported black armbands, and eight death row inmates at Mecklenburg fasted in protest, according to acting Warden Sherman Townley.

Outside the Penitentiary, proponents and opponents of capital punishment gathered in separate crowds of about 200 each across a street from one another as the execution hour approached.

Opponents held lighted candles, cited the Lord's Prayer and sang "Amazing Grace." Supporters of the death penalty cheered when the execution was announced, and a few firecrackers were set off.

Earlier Friday night, the opponents attended an interfaith prayer service at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart less than a mile from the prison. Bishop Walter F. Sullivan of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond said he was thankful to Briley for bringing the city's religious community together to protest the execution.

Party Dispute Leaves 5 Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An argument outside a house party erupted into a gang-related shooting that left five youths dead and five others wounded on a bloodied front lawn, authorities said.

Party-goers in the front yard of the house in a low-income area of south-central Los Angeles were confronted Friday night by several people who drove up, got into an argument and then opened fire with a shotgun and a pistol, said Officer Alejandro Valadez. Police said the shooting was gang-related.

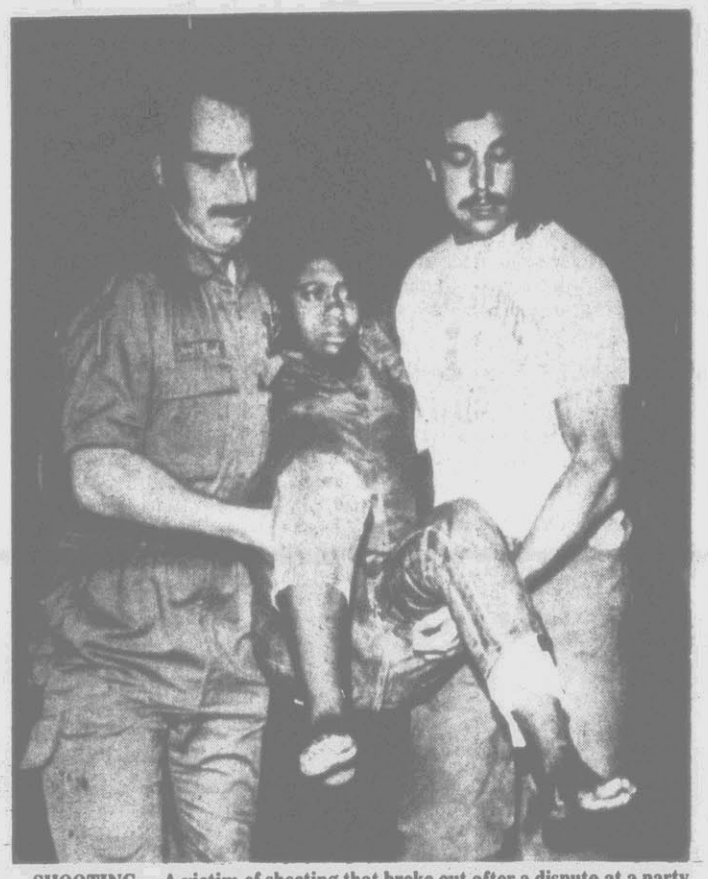
A neighbor, who did not give her name, said she saw "kids scattering and screaming and crying...."

After the shooting, the bodies of four dead youths lay under white sheets on the sidewalk amid scattered shotgun shells; the fifth victim died later in a hospital.

Neighbor Esperanza Trejo, 34, said the neighborhood had a "real drug problem" and was a frequent site of rowdy parties.

"We all see it, but we just stay in our houses and not bother with it," Ms. Trejo said.

Residents of south-central Los Angeles have complained since the end of the Summer Olympics that they do not have enough police protection. Violent crimes dropped during the Games because extra patrols were assigned to the area, site of the USC Olympic Village, Memorial Coliseum and other competition sites, but resumed after the Games ended.



SHOOTING — A victim of shooting that broke out after a dispute at a party in Los Angeles is helped by paramedics. Police said the shooting left five dead and five others wounded. Assailants opened up with shotguns as they drove past the partygoers. (AP Laserphoto)

Famed Route 66 Goes Into History

WILLIAMS, Ariz. (AP) — Route 66, the highway made famous in song, story and television, passed into history on Saturday, with a parade of antique cars following along the same route traveled by pioneers and prospectors.

The parade opened elaborate ceremonies marking the opening of an Interstate 40 bypass to replace the last two-lane segment of U.S. 66, which once crossed eight states and three time zones from Chicago to Santa Monica, Calif. The bypass carries six miles of Interstate 40 around the north side of this northern Arizona town.

The festivities included the parade, complete with floats and antique autos, as well as a street dance and a sky-diving demonstration.

In its better days, the road was the setting for John Steinbeck's 1939 novel "The Grapes of Wrath" and a 1960s television series, "Route 66."

Bobby Troupe urged people to "Get your kicks on Route 66" in the song "Route 66," which he wrote in the mid-1940s.

UNC System Eyes First Billion-Dollar Budget

CHAPEL HILL N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina budget and finance committee will recommend a budget of $1.17 billion for 1985-86, the first billion-dollar budget in the university system's history.

The budget, a proposed increase of $425 million over that of 1984-85, includes a 7 percent pay raise for college instructors, a $4.1 million arts center for UNC-Greensboro and a $15.7 million library for N.C. A&T State University.

The budget and finance panel also recommended Friday a 1986-87 budget of $901,756,225.

If approved by the UNC Board of Governors, the budget will go to the General Assembly, which convenes in February.

The budget primarily is a compilation of the spending plans of the 16 public universities, N.C. Memorial Hospital, the Agricultural Extension and Research services and the N.C. Science and Math School in Durham.

The science and math school, with a $4.1 million budget, accounts for part of the proposed budget increase, since the General Assembly placed the school under the auspices of the Board of Governors last session. Previously, the school trustees reported directly to the governor.

The system's total enrollment is expected to rise by more than 1,000 students — to 105,685 in 1985-86 at a cost of $5.2 million — and by another 1,000 the following year at a cost of about $8.8 million.

The biggest part of the increase is the $301 million capital investments budget for 1985-87, up from the 1983-85 budget of $83.7 million.

The salary increase for teachers will cost $28.1 million in 1985-86 and $56.7 million in 1986-87.

"This will be more than catching up and matching inflation," Felix Joyner, UNC vice president of finance, told the committee. "It will restore our competitive position with other universities ... and it probably will be less than what state employees and public school teachers will be asking for."

College professors got a 5 percent increase in 1983-84 and a 10 percent raise in 1984-85.

Despite these increases, salaries "have not kept pace over the last decade with increasses in personal income generally," according to a statement in the budget proposal.

"This gap is indicative of the deterioration that has generally occurred in the overall competitive standing of academic salaries, and the long-term implication of this trend are especially serious," the statement said.

The salary was one of three major parts of the budget for the 16 campuses. The proposal says $644 million will be needed to operate the campuses next year and $653 million the year after.

The plan also asks for $301 million for new buildings, additions, remodeling, additional land, and other construction projects.

Reagan Signs Law Requiring Stern Labels On Cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday signed legislation requiring cigarette packages and advertising to carry stern new warnings about the health hazards of smoking.

The four different warnings from the surgeon general are required to be conspicuous and prominent and to be rotated on a quarterly basis.

The new admonitions replace the current one in effect since 1970, which says: "WARNING: The surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

The new warnings state:

—"Smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema, and may complicate pregnancy."

—"Quitting smoking now greatly reduces serious risks to your health."

—"Smoking by pregnant women may result in fetal injury, premature birth, and low birth weight."

—"Cigarette smoke contains carbon monoxide."

The legislation will require each manufacturer and importer of cigarettes to submit a compliance plan to the Federal Trade Commission. The Justice Department will be responsible for enforcing the new labeling requirements, which take effect within a year.

A White House statement noted that the surgeon general, Dr. C. Everett Koop, has characterized smoking as "the chief single avoidable cause of the death in our society and the most important public issue of our time."

In commenting on the economic implications of the bill, the president's Council of Economic Advisers noted that in 1972, the total direct health care costs and indirect costs of smoking were $50.4 billion in 1984 dollars.

The legislation also requires cigarette manufacturers to submit to the government an annual list of chemical ingredients added to tobacco, and it establishes a smoking research, education and information program.

Information furnished by manufacturers would be treated as a trade secret, but the Department of Health and Human Services would be required to report to Congress on research activities on the health effects of the additives.

Boy's Body Discovered In Tool Box

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The body of a child was found Saturday in the home of a Hickory couple who reported their son missing eight days ago, police said.

A police dispatcher, who refused to be identified, said Hickory police chief Floyd Lucas Jr. had confirmed the body was that of Keith Dudley Purdue. Lucas said the child had been dead for some time.

But in a statement issued later Saturday afternoon, police said the body had not been positively identified and would be sent to Chapel Hill for an autopsy Sunday.

The statement also said that the body was found by Keith Purdue, the missing child's father. It said Purdue, his wife Joy Anita, and Mrs. Purdue's brother were present when police came to their southeast Hickory home about 12:48 p.m. Police did not say where in the house the body was found.

The child had been missing since Oct. 5 when his parents said he wandered away from the house. They speculated he might have gone in search of a dog which had been given away the day before.

The parents brought a psychic into the search Tuesday. The Rev. Don Hudson of Charlotte, an ordained minister in the Church of Alliance of Divine Love, suggested that searchers look in the vacinity of a church about 2½ miles from the child's home, but there was no church in that location and no clues were found, police said.

A six-member investigations division of the Hickory Police Department had been assigned to the case, and a State Bureau of Investigations agent was also called into the search.

The investigation is continuing with the police, the district attorney, the SBI and the FBI, the police statement said.

Civil Rights Center Will Aid Barfield

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Civil rights lawyer William Kunstler said Saturday his Center for Constitutional Rights will send an attorney to North Carolina to search for ways to stop Margie Velma Barfield's execution.

Barfield, 51, is scheduled to die Nov. 2 for poisoning her finance. After Gov. James Hunt denied her clemency Sept. 27, she said she would no longer fight for her life unless lawyers find grounds for a new appeal that might win.

Lawyers from the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York will review Barfield's case next week — even though her attorneys believe her appeals have been exhausted, said Kunstler, who founded the center.

"Fresh eyes sometimes see things differently," Kunstler said.

Kunstler said he fears the nation's first execution of a woman in 22 years would lead to more frequent executions in the United States.

"It dulls the sensibilities of people to have these executions take place with frequency and with both sexes," said Kunstler, a death penalty opponent who has represented black militants and civil rights activists in highly publicized cases since the 1960s.

Barfield's children have urged anti-death penalty groups to honor her wish to "die with dignity" and her lawyer, James Little, has said he expects her to be executed Nov. 2.

"We've exhausted everything in the courts," Little said after Hunt denied clemency.

Kunstler said Barfield's lawyers have agreed to cooperate with attorney Ron Kuby, who will review the case and report to the Center for Constitutional Rights and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Kunstler and other lawyers overturned New York's capital punishment law this year in that state's highest court in the case of a convict sentenced to death for murdering a prison guard. The state of New York is appealing.

Kunstler said hi will look for issues that stand a good chance of overturning Barfield's death sentence or conviction.

Barfield was convicted of killing her fiance, Stuart Taylor, in 1978 by lacing his beer and iced tea with rat and ant poison. After her arrest, she also confessed to poisoning her 74-year-old mother and two elderly Lumberton residents — John Henry Lee, 80, and Dolly Edwards, 85.

Barfield worked for the Lumberton residents as a private nurse when she slipped arsenic into their food.

Helms To Speak At Livingstone College

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Sen. Jesse Helms will speak at Livingstone College in Salisbury this week, his first address on a predominantly black campus, an aide to the two-term Republican said Saturday.

Helms' speech will be Wednesday at Livingstone, a private, coeducational liberal arts school supported by the AME Zion Church, re-election campaign spokesman Claude Allen said.

Helms will be accompanied by former professional football player Roosevelt Grier, who starred at defensive tackle with the New York Giants and the Los Angeles Rams.

Grier, now an actor and entertainer, was Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's bodyguard at the time of the Democratic presidential candidate's assassination in 1968.

Helms and his Democratic opponent, Gov. Jim Hunt, were to square off in their final televised debate Saturday night.

In another Senate race development, attorneys for the National Congressional Club and political advertising firm Jefferson Marketing Inc. asked a federal appeals court Friday to block a lower court order that the Federal Elections Commission complete an investigation of alleged election law violations by the two organizations.

District Court Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer had ordered the FEC to complete its investigation by Oct. 19. Both organizations support Helms.

Court Rejects House Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal three-judge panel turned down a state plan for the 8th House District covering Wilson, Nash and Edgecombe counties, saying the state must come up with a plan with only single-member districts.

The state had proposed dividing the three counties into two House districts, with a single member elected from a predominantly black district and three state representatives elected at-large from a predominantly white district.

The panel ruled that the state and black residents who sued to change district lines must come up with a plan for single-member districts by Oct. 22, said Jim Wallace of the state Attorney General's Office.

Wallace said a schedule for elections must also be developed by Jan. 31, 1985.

The 8th District is the last of several House and Senate districts across the state ordered redrawn when the three judges found that district lines weakened black voter strength.

Changes in other districts have already won approval by the U.S. Justice Department and the courts.

Earlier this month the Justice Department rejected the redistricting plan for the three counties.

Wallace said extending the time for elections until Jan. 31 will give the state some relief in planning for a primary, a possible run-off primary and a general election for the House seats.

Storm May Lose Hurricane Force

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Josephine ambled northward Saturday as forecasters predicted the storm's strength might be sapped as it edges toward colder water.

"It's going to continue moving toward the north very slowly. The strongest winds will slowly die down, and as it moves on the northeast coast, it should not get any closer to land," said Bob Sheets, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center.

As the storm moved parallel to the coast at 8 mph, hurricane experts expected that a northeast turn would put Josephine over cooler water by Sunday, Sheets said.

At 6 p.m. EDT Saturday, Josephine's center was estimated near latitude 36.3 north and longitude 71.8 west, or about 350 miles south of Nantucket Island, Mass.

Josephine moved up from tropical storm status to a hurricane on Tuesday when sustained winds reached 74 mph. By Saturday, it was blowing at 85 mph and gale warnings were in effect from Cape Lookout, N.C., through Nantucket, Mass.

The chief threat to land came from gale-force winds along the coasts of the Carolinas and Virginia, fueled by the difference between the high pressure over the Northeast and the hurricane's low pressure, forecasters said.

Gales reached 300 miles from the center of the hurricane, and some squalls extended as far north as as the southern New England states, the advisory said.

Tulsa Passes Pirates By 31-20

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

TULSA, Okl. — East Carolina head football Coach Ed Emory didn't have to call home to tell his mother there was bad news and worse news after his Pirates played the Tulsa Hurricane Saturday night — she was one of the sparse 16,674 in attendence at Skelly Stadium.

First the bad news: Tulsa pounded the Pirates 31-20 as quarterback Richie Stephenson passed for 273 yards including three first-half touchdowns.

Now for worse news: the loss dropped East Carolina to 1-6 on the seoson insuring the first losing season by the Pirates since 1981. It's just the fourth losing season for ECU since 1970, with three of those under Emory.

"Both teams needed a win and they got it," Emory said. "Their quarterback (Stephenson) did a super job. You can't play a John Cooper team and give up the big plays.

"It's too bad we can't have a winning season at East Carolina; I hope we can turn it around next week. It's more important how you finish."

Rodney Young carried the ball 20 times for 114 yards to lead the Tulsa ground attack, while Gordon Brown tallied 72 on 16 attempts.

But the bulk of the Hurricane's 487 yards total offense came through the air, as Kelley caught two passes for 106 yards and two touchdowns. Tony Johnson had three receptions for 56, while Eric Borders added a 39-yard touchdown reception.

Darrell Speed led the Pirates with 77 yards rushing while completing three of seven passes for 34 yards. But Emory inserted red-shirted freshman Ron Jones at the start of the second quarter with the Pirates facing second and three at the Tulsa 39.

The ECU offense appeared confused by the transition, as fullback Reggie Branch picked up just one yard on second down and Jones was dropped for no gain on the third play.

East Carolina was forced to punt and struggled on offense through the end of the half.

Tulsa wasted no time getting on the board, as Brown rushed for 19 yards on three carries to help the Hurricane move to its 37. Stephenson found Ronnie Kelley open over the middle at the ECU 42, and Kelley outran the Pirate defense to the end zone with 13:41.

But the Pirates responded with a 62-yard scoring drive capped by a 17-yard pass from Speed to Jimmy Walden with 9:51 left in the opening quarter. Branch broke a pair of tackles up the middle for 13 yards on the first play, and Speed ran 14 yards on an option before passing to Henry Williams for 14 to the Tulsa 21. A four-yard run by Baker set up the Pirates' first touchdown.

While the Pirate offense stuttered through the second quarter, the Hurricane rolled up 183 yards as Stephenson connected on 8 of 15

Tigers Lead, Three Games To One

Detroit Tops Padres, 4-2

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker proved double-trouble Saturday for the San Diego Padres, and Jack Morris pulled off a World Series double of his own.

Trammell and Whitaker, renowned as a double-play combination, accounted for all four of Detroit's runs — Trammell with two homers and four RBI with Whitaker on base — as the Tigers moved within one game of winning their fourth World Series title.

The Tigers defeated the Padres 4-2 in Game Four, and that gave Detroit a 3-1 advantage in games in the best-of-seven Series. Game Five is set for Sunday, with opening-game starter Mark Thurmond going for San Diego against Detroit's Dan Petry.

"I'm not a home run hitter. Those were just coincidence," said Trammell, the Tigers' shortstop. "When Lou Whitaker gets on base, I'm a much better hitter. When a guy gets on base, I want to do my best. It's kind of contagious."

Morris, the Tigers' right-hander, pitched a five-hitter for his second complete-game victory in the Series, the first pitcher to accomplish that feat since Mike Torrez in 1977. Morris won Game One 3-2 with an eight-hitter, the first time a Sparky Anderson-managed pitcher had gone the distance in postseason.

Trammell homered for the first time after Whitaker reached on an error in the first inning, and he homered again in the third after Whitaker singled and took second on another San Diego error. During the season, Trammell and Whitaker combined on 162 double plays, but this offensive double-punch might have been their biggest play of the season.

"I was just in a daze," Trammell said of his second trip around the bases. "I knew I had hit that one well. It's just an emotional time. The best feeling is coming back to the dugout and having your teammates congratulate you."

Trammell became only the fourth player to knock in all of his team's runs in a Series game.

"If Trammell isn't the best shortstop in all of baseball, then after he plays another 10 years, you be the judge," Anderson said. "But I think he's the best.

"Any time you don't stop Whitaker and Trammell, you won't beat us. You have to stop one. That's why I say they're the best two in baseball. Some guys can play offense or defense, but these guys are both."

Only five times in World Series history has a team come back to win after falling behind 3-1. The Tigers did it themselves in 1968 against St. Louis, and Pittsburgh was the last team to do it, in 1979 against Baltimore. If the Padres were to extend the Series past Game Five, Games Six and Seven would be played in San Diego on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

The Padres at least are used to being behind. They lost the first two games in Chicago before winning three in a row at home to beat the Cubs in the National League playoffs.

"I don't have to say a word to my ballclub," Padres Manager Dick Williams said. "They know what they have to do. We've done it once — won three in a row. Maybe we can do it again."

Morris struck out four and walked none. He gave up a run in the second inning on Terry Kennedy's homer and another in the ninth when Steve Garvey scored on a wild pitch.

"The big thing is we got the big hits from Mr. Trammell when we needed it," said Morris, who pitched on three days' rest.

Anderson called Morris "the best pitcher I've ever managed," and that list includes Tom Seaver, who played for Sparky in Cinncinati. "With Morris, the way he was throwing, I didn't think we would need too many runs."

The Padres, meanwhile, remained bereft of starting pitching. Eric Show lasted only 2 2-3 innings, giving up both of Trammell's homers — the sixth and seventh he has allowed in postseason play.

San Diego's starters now have worked a total of 10 innings in these four games, giving up 13 earned runs for a collective earned run average of 11.70. Detroit won Game One 3-2, lost Game Two 5-3 and won Friday night, 5-2.

It was the third time in four Series games that the Padres' bullpen did not allow a run.

For Trammell, the three hits gave him nine in 16 Series at-bats — a .561 average — and the twin two-run homers gave him six runs batted in for the Series.

"I couldn't be happier," said Trammell, who cheered for the Padres while he was growing up in San Diego. "I know I'm not a home run hitter. The World Series brings out the best in you. I'm playing against the hometown team and so far everything has gone well for me."

After his second straight shaky start, Morris settled down. After giving up a double to Kurt Bevacqua following Kennedy's homer, Morris retired four in a row before Tony Gwynn singled to right with two out in the third. Gwynn was erased in an inning-ending forceout, and Morris retired 13 more in a row before pinch-hitter Tim Flannery led off the eighth with a single to center.

Morris threw 98 pitches, 72 of them strikes, and did not throw more than 14 pitches in any inning. In the eighth, he threw 12 pitches — all of them strikes.

"I didn't have my rhythm or my good fastball. But my control was better today." Morris said. "I felt good today ... I think we're in good shape."

The Tigers are appearing in their ninth World Series, while this is the Padres' first. The last Detroit World Series appearance came in 1968, when the Tigers beat St. Louis in seven — rallying from a 3-1 deficit in games to do it. Detroit also won the Series in 1935 and '45, both times against the Chicago Cubs.

The Tigers won 35 of their first 40 games en route to a club-record 104 victories this season and the AL East title. They defeated the Kansas City Royals in three straight to win the pennant, while the National League West-champion Padres went to five games before beating the Chicago Cubs in the NL playoffs.

Wake Forest Tops Carolina, 14-3

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — For years, Wake Forest football teams believed they had a chance at beating North Carolina. This year, they felt they could win and for the first time in seven home games, the Demon Deacons pulled it off with a 14-3 triumph.

Foy White tossed a 1-yard touchdown pass to David Chambers and Stuart Stogner recovered a botched punt return moments later to lead the Demon Deacon triumph.

Three times in the first half, Wake Forest had scoring chances. Each time they came up dry.

"I think we helped our confidence by being able to move the ball up and down the field on them. But when we got down to the red zone, we just didn't come up with anything," White said. "We came in at halftime a little discouraged, but with a confident feeling and a positive feeling that we could move the ball on them."

Wake Forest managed 343 net offensive yards against a Tar Heel defense which was thought to have made progress after last week's narrow loss to Clemson.

"We backed up a step today. It makes you sick to look at something like that," North Carolina coach Dick Crum said. "We just didn't play very well."

Crum also credited Wake Forest with causing much of his discomfort.

"They did a good job on the touchdown drive," Crum said. "It's hard to say if this is the best Wake team I've ever seen, but it's the quickest."

The Demon Deacons, who hadn't beaten North Carolina in Winston-Salem since 1970, went from their own 21 to the North Carolina 3. After Topper Clemons rushed twice to the 1 and a pass to Michael Ramseur was dropped, White found Chambers on the left side for the score with 12:43 left to play. Danny Nolan added the conversion.

Quarterback Kevin Anthony's pass for Earl Winfield was picked off by Rory Holt at midfield, but the Demon Deacons couldn't take advantage.

Walter Bailey lined up to field Harry Newsome's punt, but the ball touched Ed Brown and bounced into the end zone, where Stogner recovered with 9:18 left. Nolan's conversion helped raise Wake Forest to 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the ACC.

Wake Forest rolled up 224 yards of total offense in the first half to no avail. Twice, Topper Clemons fumbled the ball away to thwart Demon Deacon drives with one of those fumbles at the North Carolina 1 in the first period.

The Tar Heel score came on Ken Miller's 31-yard field goal 1:17 before halftime. North Carolina opened the second half with a march down to the Wake Forest 2, but tailback Ethan Horton was stripped of the ball by Kenny Grantham and linebacker Tony Scott recovered.

Horton, the conference's second leading rusher and the nation's eighth best all-purpose runner, gained 141 yards on 25 carries.

North Carolina lost its second straight game, falling to 1-4 in its official conference opener.

Ramseur rushed eight times for 54 yards to become Wake Forest's second all-time rusher with 2,256 yards. James McDougald is the leader with 3,910 yards.

Wake Forest moved quickly after Tommy Barnhart's 55-yard punt from its own 44 to the North Carolina 2. Darryl McGill, starting in place of Ramseur, picked up 21 yards on four carries in the drive and Clemons added 24 on a second-and-4 from the Tar Heel 35.

White passed to James Brim to get Wake Forest to the 2, but Clemons fumbled on third-and-1 and Bailey recovered for the Tar Heels at the 1.

On its next possession, Wake Forest reached the North Carolina 13, but Doug Illing's 30-yard field goal was wide right with 25 seconds left in the period.

Clemons lost his second fumble at the North Carolina 16, where Darryl Johnson fell on it for the Tar Heels.

North Carolina moved to its 3-0 lead after marching from its own 34 to the Wake Forest 15 in nine plays. Miller's field goal made him five-for-five.

The Tar Heels had one more shot when White fumbled a snap out of the shotgun formation and Troy Simmons recovered. The threat ended when Anthony fumbled for an 18-yard loss back into his own territory.

It's Roundball Time At ECU

Men's Drills Open Monday

By WOODY PEELE

There's plenty of experience around as East Carolina basketball coach Charlie Harrison opens practice for the 1984-85 season Monday — but Harrison is wondering if it's the right kind of experience.

Of the 11 players listed on the roster for this year, only three of them are newcomers. The rest — seven six sophomores, one junior and one senior — all saw action last year in varying amounts, but it was mainly the junior — Curt Vanderhorst and the sophomores who played the most. Their playing time ranged from 826 minutes down to 406 last season.

"It was tough last year," Harrison said. "When you have to put a freshman team out there, you don't know what to expect. We were counting on some of our older players to carry us and they didn't."

As a result — after Barry Wright quit the team and Bruce Peartree never got into physical shape to play much — the load shifted to the freshman and Vanderhorst, and the result was a 4-24 season.

"We're have more confidence in our personnel this year," Harrison said. "We know their strengths and their limitations. Age-wise they are still young, and experience-wise, you might call it good.

"But the experience itself wasn't good. There wasn't a lot of positive feedback from the season. Still, they didn't quit, they played their butts off and went after William & Mary in the tournament right to the end."

Harrison said that some things will be changed. "But not our principles," he added. "We're just trying to simplify things."

Harrison thinks that the three newcomers will be a definite help to the Pirate cause. They include one junior college transfer, point guard Scott Hardy, a 5-9, 170-pound junior; Peter Dam, a 7-0, 235-pound sophomore center from The Netherlands, and Herb Dixon, a 6-3, 188-pound freshman point guard from Michigan — and the brother of Old Dominion all-American candidate Medina Dixon.

"Hardy is an excellent player; just what we wanted. He's a solid, smart player. Dixon is awfully talented and Dam in a neophyte who gets better every time he picks up the ball. He's making (Leon) Bass a better player."

Harrison noted that people tended to forget Bass, a 6-10 center, because he was so skinny last year.

But Bass, as the rest of the team has, has worked hard in the off-season on the weight program set up by ECU strength coach Mike Gentry, and is up to 210 pounds this year. And is much, much stronger. "Everyone has worked hard to build their upper body strength and they've been successful. Gentry did an excellent job for us. Not only do the players look better, they feel better about themselves.

"Right now what they need most of all is some success."

In additon to Bass, and Van-

New Coach For Lady Pirates

By WOODY PEELE

East Carolina's new women's basketball coach, Emily Manwaring made it just in time.

Manwaring came to East Carolina in the wake of the resignation of former coach Cathy Andruzzi after recruiting had been completed. And because of this, she came in with little knowledge of what was here and what was coming in.

Fortunately for her, this is the final year of an NCAA rule which, following the change over from the AIAW to the NCAA for women's basketball, allowed the early start of practice. Next year, like the men, the women may start on October 15.

Because of this, Manwaring has been able to take a longer look at what she has to work with this year, and except for a few problems — such as the lack of height — she's pretty well pleased with what she's seen so far.

"I've really been impressed with the way the girls are learning and making the adjustment to me," she said. "It could be a difficult situation with a new coach, but it hasn't been. I've had to learn 13 new players, however."

Manwaring said that the group of players is a more talented group than she is used to working with. "I just hope that as the season progresses, they will have confidence in me."

Six players return off last year's 13-16 team — the only losing team Andruzzi had. They include 5-9 junior Sylvia Bragg, who averaged 13.4 points, 5-10 junior Lisa Squirewell (9.1); 6-0 senior Anita Anderson (6.6), 5-10 senior Annette Phillips (6.6), 5-9 sophomore Jody Rodriguez (5.3), and 5-7 sophomore Crystal Grier.

Also back from last year's squad is 5-5 junior Therese Durkin, who sat out the year with an injury.

Gone from the team are two players, walkon Jan Bethea and starting point guard Delphine Mabry, who averaged 10.4 points a game. "Del had to drop out of school for personal reasons," Manwaring said, "but we expect her back next year."

Another player returning is Loraine Foster, a 5-7 junior guard who chose not to play last season. "She's a little overweight right now, but that's coming down," Manwaring said.

O'Conner, however, suffered a knee injury just prior to the start of school and underwent surgery and will not play this year.

Fout was at Virginia Commonwealth last year, but transfered in and is eligible to play under a new NCAA rule which allows transfers to play in all but football and men's basketball.

"If we have a weakness, it's height," Manwaring said. "We work on rebounding every day.

Detroit Tops Padres, 4-2...

now have won two in a row at home before crowds of 51,970 and 52,130 at Tiger Stadium, a turn-of-the-century relic on whose site baseball has been played since 1900.

For the third time in four World Series games — and the fifth time in seven postseason contests — the Tigers were on the board in the first inning.

Whitaker led off the inning with a grounder up the middle and was safe when second baseman Alan Wiggins' throw was wide for an error. Show then yielded a homer to left field on a 2-0 pitch to Trammell, and the Tigers led 2-0.

Morris, who threw a no-hitter on April 7 but gave up 20 homers during the season, gave up his first of the postseason, with one out in the second inning.

Morris, 19-11 this season, got Graig Nettles on a grounder to second before Kennedy came to bat. Morris threw one strike to Kennedy, and Kennedy hit the next pitch into the upper deck in right field for his first postseason homer. He had 14 in a subpar season during which he hit only .240.

Bevacqua, who homered to help San Diego win Game Two, then doubled, but he was stranded as Carmelo Martinez, 1-for-11 coming in, struck out looking and Garry Templeton grounded to second.

But the Padres had cut the lead in half, to 2-1.

It was with one out in the third inning that Whitaker and Trammell struck again, putting the game out of reach.

Whitaker singled on a line in front of right-fielder Gwynn, who slipped and bobbled the ball for an error, alowing Whitaker to move to second. The count was 1-1 on Trammell this time before he lined a Show delivery into the first row of the upper deck in left field, making it 4-1, and left-hander Dave Dravecky was throwing in the Padres bullpen.

Trammell had 14 homers during the season, while hitting .314, and he homered once in the AL playoffs against Kansas City. Trammell was the 26th player to hit two homers in a World Series game. The last was Eddie Murray of Baltimore in Game Five of the 1983 Series against Philadelphia.

After Trammell's homer, Kirk Gibson singled up the middle for only his third hit of the Series. Lance Parrish popped to first, but Show then walked Darrell Evans, bringing on the left-hander Dravecky. Dravecky got out of the fix when Barbaro Garbey, pinch-hitting for designated hitter John Grubb, grounded into a forceout.

In two playoff starts, totalling only 5 1-3 innings, Show had given up five home runs. The two Saturday brought the total to seven homers in eight innings.

Trammell had a chance to team with Whitaker for another RBI in the fifth off Dravecky, but it did not come to pass because of a little faint-hearted baserunning.

Whitaker led off the fifth with a double, and Trammell followed with a single into left field. Whitaker held at third as Carmelo Martinez cocked to throw, but it appeared he could have scored.

Dravecky got out of the inning on a strikeout by Gibson, a fielder's choice to third that cut down Whitaker at home and a strikeout by Evans.

And we're going to run. We've got to score before the rest of the trees get down there, but without Delphine, we don't have the same quickness."

Anderson, too, is handicapped by back problems — she was advised (not ordered) not to play — but chose to stay with the team. She's working out lightly each day, however. Squirewell, hampered by knee problems at the end of the year last season, continues to have those. Bragg also has been hampered by a hip injury and also was struck in the mouth during the summer in a game and has to wear a mouth guard now.

"We have some talent if we can get together as a team," the coach said. "The players want to win and are willing to work. They listen and I don't see any limitations as to what they can do.

"We'll try to run as we best can. We'll press with our 'Destory D' defense. This year, too, we'll try to take advantage of the new rule on the center court line."

In the past, with the 30-second clock, players could cross back over the center line. This year, they cannot. "They still don't have the ten second rule, but I'd like to see that and a 45-second clock."

Another new rule concerns a smaller, lighter ball. Most fans won't be able to tell the two apart unless they see them side-by-side.

"What I'd also like to see is to lower the baskets to nine feet. Can you imagine the excitement you could generate if each team had two or three who could dunk it?

"Heck, we're physically not the same as men, I don't care what anybody says. There should be some allowances to help make it a more exciting game."

The Lady Pirates open their season in the Dogwood Classic against N.C. State in Fayetteville on November 23, playing North Carolina the next night. Their first home game is November 28 against Fayetteville State.

derhorst, a 6-1, 185-pound junior guard, the Pirates return Derrick Battle, a 6-6, 190-pound sophomore forward; William Grady, a 6-2, 185-pound sophomore guard; David Reicheneker, a 6-10, 230-pound senior center; Keith Sledge, a 6-3, 190-pound swingman; Roy Smith, a 6-8, 220-pound sophomore forward/center; and Jack Turnbill, a 6-9, 200-pound sophomore forward.

Again, referring to the strength of the Pirates, Harrison noted that Smith has increased his bench press from 135 pounds when he entered ECU to 245 pounds now.

It's also served — with the season last year — to make the players much closer. "These kids have been through some tough times. They've worked hard — gawd-awful hard, to make themselves better.

"And we're still trying to build a program — not just a team. These people are the foundation. And we're meeting good people as we recruit and having good response, too."

With eight players back, Harrison points out that's the most in over six years. "And academically, they're in good shape too. Some of them really have to work for it, but we're all over 2.0 right now. We want them to graduate, and they want to graduate. None of them had to go to summer school, but most went anyway."

Harrison's aim for the early weeks will be defense mainly. "There are three areas we want to improve on. We have to do better in them. One is our inside scoring, and I think we're already improved in that. We want better rebounding from our forwards and centers. Our shot selection has to be better for this. And we want — we've got to have — better free throw shooting.

"We need to improve in the mental aspect of the game, make better decisions," Harrison said.

The schedule this year remains a tough one, with all of the ECAC-South teams, both home and away. "One good thing is that we don't have a long trip like the Illinois trip last year in the middle of our conference schedule. But we do need early success and we play some tough teams early."

The Pirates open their play on November 19 against the Irish National Team, then play their first official game on November 27 against Central Connecticut State.

Other home games include Virginia Commonwealth, Boston University, Christopher Newport, Winthrop and Campbell outside the conference. The Pirates visit Drexel, Campbell, Wake Forest, Duke, Howard, and play in the Tulsa Classic on the road.

passes for 219 yards in the half.

After Jeff Bolch's punt rolled to the end zone, the Hurricane drove down the field with Stephenson passing for 52 yards including a 39-yard touchdown strike to Eric Borders. The point-after kick by Jason Staurovsky put Tulsa ahead 14-7 with 9:47 left till intermission.

Baker bolted around the left end for 41 yards to the Tulsa 30, but the Pirate offense stalled again at the Hurricane 24. Jeff Heath's 42-yard field goal at the 7:56 mark trimmed the margin to 14-10.

Nate Harris returned a 48-yard punt by Bolch to the ECU 48, and Kelley outran Calvin Adams for his second touchdown catch from Stephenson with 1:58 left in the first half.

Tulsa drove to the Pirate 33 yard line before Staurovsky missed a field goal attempt from 50 yards out — the first of three he missed in the half — with 6:38 remaining in the first period. Staurovsky's 39 yard attempt with 3:41 left in the second quarter sailed wide right, while a 56-yard effort fell short at the buzzer.

Heath answered with a 44-yard field goal with 12:42 left in the game to trim the margin to 24-13, capping a drive that started on the Pirate 42.

With the Pirates facing second and 14 from their 21 yard line, Speed's pass was intercepted by Nate Harris at the ECU 39. Young sprinted through the East Carolina defense for a 13-yard touchdown for the final Hurricane total with 9:29 left in the contest.

Bubba Bunn's one-yard plunge capped a 77-yard drive, and Heath's PAT set the final margin.

The Pirates attempted the "Bam-Bam" on-side kick, but the Hurricane line was offside. After the five-yard penalty, Heath attempted to bloop the ball to the vacant side of the field, but Tulsa recovered to end the Pirates' hopes of a rally.

Georgia Tech.....20
Virginia.....20

Bell's game-tying 3-pointer came just under 10 minutes after the Cavaliers had taken a 20-17 lead on a 74-yard bomb from sophomore quarterback Don Majkowski to freshman flanker John Ford.

The Cavaliers, now 4-1-1 and 1-0-1 in the ACC after seeing a 4-game winning streak snapped, had a chance to ice the game when a Georgia Tech punt took a backward bounce and went only 17 yards to the Yellow Jackets' 37.

Virginia got to the 14 on an 18-yard run by Howard Petty, but a Majkowski pass was intercepted two plays later on the 5-yard line by linebacker Ralph Malone, who returned it to the 12. From there, the Yellow Jackets used 14 plays to set up Bell's field goal.

Georgia Tech, 3-1-1 and 0-1-1, led 10-3 at intermission, but Virginia went 68 yards in 10 plays with the second half kickoff, Majkowski scoring from 9 yards out.

The Cavaliers took a 13-10 lead less than three minutes later on a 24-yard field goal by Kenny Stadlin, set up by Ray Daly's pass interception which he returned 17 yards to the Georgia Tech 15.

Lavette set the Yellow Jackets in front 17-13 with a 1-yard scoring run just 57 seconds into the fourth quarter that capped a 48-yard, 14-play drive.

Terps Bomb Pack, 44-21

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Three turnovers which produced 13 of Maryland's 23 second-quarter points only compounded the postgame woes for Coach Tom Reed of North Carolina State.

"It's one thing to lose, but to lose like we did today makes it doubly worse," Reed said after the Terps whipped the Wolfpack 44-21 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday.

Rick Badanjek scored three short-yard touchdowns in the opening 21 minutes and Jess Atkinson booted three field goals to give Maryland a 30-7 halftime lead.

"When we take the ball and give it back to their offense like we did with our turnovers," Reed said, "we are committing suicide."

Coach Bobby Ross of Maryland conceded that the costly turnovers "probably gave us momentum and took a little wind out of their sails."

"Offensively, we were almost flawless in the first half," Ross said. "I don't think we could have played any better. When we had to play tough defensively, we played very well."

A 17-yard scoring pass from State's Tim Esposito to Ricky Wall matched Badanjek's 3-yard TD in the first quarter before the Wolfpack collapsed.

Badanjek, who had 95 of Maryland's 333 rushing yards, scored from the two early in the second period. Atkinson kicked a 21-yard field goal following an interception and Badanjek's 2-yard TD came after a fumble recovery to make it 24-7.

Atkinson, who has kicked 93 consecutive extra points, converted field goals of 35 and 43 yards, the last following another pass interception.

Maryland, 2-0 in the ACC and 3-3 overall, scored in the last period on quarterback Stan Gelbaugh's 2-yard keeper and Doug Burmeister's 17-yard run.

After botching two second-half chances, State scored on a 10-yard run by Joe McIntosh with 4:12 remaining and a 30-yard deflected pass to Phil Brothers with 1 second left.

The Wolfpack is 3-3 overall and 1-2 in the ACC.

State was unable to gain two yards on three ties for a first down at the Maryland 32 when the score was 7-7, and was limited to 26 yards during its disastrous second quarter.

Joe Greene was stopped three times from the Maryland 1 in the third period and Esposito tossed four incompletions at the 12 after Frank Bush ran 61 yards with a pass interception in the fourth period.

After Maryland took a 14-7 lead, linebacker Chuck Faucette intercepted an Esposito pass and returned it to the State 6.

The Terps had to settle for a field goal, but McIntosh fumbled on State's next play from scrimmage and Keeta Covington recovered at the 30 to set up another Badanjek TD.

Covington's brother, Al, picked off another Esposito pass with 50 seconds left in the half and Atkinson connected as time expired.

McIntosh, who rushed for a 138 yards in last week's upset of Georgia Tech, was held to 64 yards on 12 carries.

Brothers, surrounded by Terps, grabbed a deflection on the final pass from Esposito, who finished with 14 completions in 26 attempts for 224 yards.

It was Maryland's fifth straight victory over State, and the 15th consecutive homecoming triumph for the Terps.

Virginia Tech Gobbles Up 27-0 Victory Over Duke

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — As Virginia Tech hammered Duke 27-0 Saturday, Tech Coach Bill Dooley said his defense was "excellent," especially the play of tackle Bruce Smith.

"Bruce Smith just played a magnificent game. We put great pressure on the Duke passers, and that was one of the keys to the victory," Dooley said.

Tech quarterback Mark Cox passed for two of three Hokie touchdowns, including a 65-yard bomb to split end Donald Wayne Snell on Tech's second offensive play of the game. But the Blue Devils forced Tech to attempt five field goals, and three of them were off target.

"I would say that our defense played about as well as it can possibly play," Duke Coach Steve Sloan said. "The type of defensive courage and effort we displayed is something to be encouraged about."

Duke's offense was a different matter, with Tech holding the Blue Devils to minus four yards rushing and total yardage of 68 — the least number of yards allowed by Tech since 1950. Smith had seven sacks.

"It is fairly obvious that we don't have any offense at this point in time," Sloan said. "Obviously we couldn't block No. 78 (Smith), and we couldn't block any of the rest of them. We just got whipped up there in the offensive line."

The victory raised Tech's record to 4-2; Duke dropped to 1-4.

Following Cox's 65-yard touchdown pass to Snell, the Hokies scored on a 43-yard field goal by Don Wade early in the second quarter. Then Cox hit fullback Nigel Bowe with a 9-yard scoring pass with 5:51 left in the half.

Wade added his second field goal, a 26-yarder, with 45 seconds left in the half. Backup quarterback Todd Greenwood connected with tight end Steve Johnson for Tech's final touchdown with 4:50 remaining in the third quarter. The score came four plays after Tech linebacker Paul Nelson intercepted a pass by backup Duke quarterback Stephen Slayden.

"The long touchdown pass at the start gave us a big boost," said Dooley. "Donald Wayne Snell was very alert and made a great catch for the touchdown."

Tech had 409 total yards and 19 first downs.

The Blue Devils reached Tech territory just four times during 15 possessions and only got within 34 yards of the goal line. That happened during the first drive of the second half, when Duke linebacker Nick Buoniconti intercepted a Cox pass. From there, the Blue Devils were pushed back into their own territory and forced to punt.

In the second quarter, Duke ran 11 plays for minus 17 yards.

But the Duke defense stopped the Hokies short of a touchdown several times. Duke defensive back Jim Bowker prevented a 27-yard Tech field goal with 5:58 left in the third quarter by blocking Wade's kick. Another of Wade's failed attempts was wide, and a third was no good because of a fumbled snap.

Texas Rally Ties Sooners

DALLAS (AP) — Texas placekicker Jeff Ward drilled a 32-yard field goal at the final gun Saturday and the top-ranked Longhorns managed a 15-15 tie with the No. 3-rated Oklahoma Sooners in a wild, rain-soaked clash of two previously unblemished teams.

The Sooners apparently had knocked down the Longhorns after a brilliant goal-line stand at the Sooner 1 late in the game.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer decided to take an intentional safety to make the score 15-12 and Oklahoma punted with 2:04 left in the game and Texas out of time outs..

A pass interference call and an offsides helped the Longhorns and quarterback Todd Dodge completed a 15-yard pass and an 11-yard pass to the Oklahoma 10-yard line.

Dodge threw one more pass into the end zone, which Oklahoma thought Keith Stanberry had intercepted but the officials said he had both feet out of bounds.

Then on the next play, with only five seconds to go, Ward kicked his field goal and both teams left the Cotton Bowl with their fans shouting, "We're number 1. We're number 1."

Oklahoma's Steve Sewell scored on runs of 5 and 11 yards in the third quarter as the Sooners overcame a 10-0 halftime deficit.

The 'Horns, now 3-0-1, had scored only after Oklahoma mistakes with a slippery ball that at times was like holding a wet bar of soap.

Oklahoma also got a safety when Texas center Terry Steelhammer snapped the ball out of the end zone.

With Oklahoma leading 15-10, Andre Johnson caught Texas' Kevin Nelson from behind after a 58-yard run to the Sooner 2-yard line. On fourth down at the Sooner 1, Johnson forced Nelson to slip down while trying to circle in at the Oklahoma 3 to set up Switzer's decision to take a safety.

Oklahoma is now 4-0-1. This was only the fourth tie in 79 games of the series between the two bitter rivals.

Washington (2).....37
Stanford.....15

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Hugh Millen threw two touchdown passes and Joe Kelly ran back one of No. 2-ranked Washington's five interceptions for another TD as the Huskies routed Stanford 37-15 Saturday in Pacific 10 football.

Millen, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 176 yards, and running back Jacques Robinson, who had 68 yards on the ground, didn't have an easy time against Stanford's defense, but they had plenty of chances.

In addition to the five interceptions against quarterback Fred Buckley —two by Kelly — Stanford lost one of its four fumbles, missed a 27-yard field goal and a pair of two-point conversion.

Stanford's mistakes wasted a superb 25-carry, 146-yard running show by sophomore Brad Muster.

Washington, 6-0 overall and 2-0 in the league, was slow getting started but then jumped all over Buckley, who was starting only his second game in place of injured John Paye.

Buckley uncorked two TD passes in the fourth quarter, including a 61-yard TD fling to Emile Harry, who earlier caught a 55-yard pass. But by then the Huskies were already out of reach.

Stanford, 3-3 overall and 1-2 in the Pac-10, suffered its most lopsided loss of the year just a week after upsetting Rose Bowl champion UCLA and a month after whipping Big 10 champion Illinois.

Nebraska (6).....33
Missouri.....23

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Doug DuBose rushed for 162 yards and one touchdown and Marc Munford ran 57 yards with a pass interception for another score, sparking sixth-ranked Nebraska to a 33-23 Big Eight Conference football victory over Missouri Saturday.

Munford, a sophomore linebacker, picked off a Warren Seitz pass and scored with 11:41 to play in the third quarter, giving the 5-1 Cornhuskers a 23-10 lead against the 2-4 Tigers.

Nebraska scored its first rushing touchdown in nine quarters when I-back Jeff Smith ran 21 yards in the first quarter.

That touchdown matched a 15-yard scoring run by Missouri's Eric Drain, following a Tigers' fumble recovery by Wallace Snowden at the Nebraska 31.

Nose guard Ken Graeber tackled Missouri quarterback Marlon Adler in the end zone for a safety with 6:11 to play in the second quarter.

Just 13 seconds later, DuBose raced 48 yards for a TD, putting Nebraska ahead 16-7.

Missouri got three more points after another Nebraska fumble. Brad Burditt booted a 31-yard field goal with 37 seconds left in the half after Cory Cathcart covered a fumbled punt at the Huskers' 30.

Drain had a 3-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter before the Huskers clinched the victory with an 11-yard scoring run by quarterback Craig Sundberg.

Seitz ran 8 yards for a touchdown with 1:09 to play and recovered an onside kick at the Huskers' 47. But Munford intercepted his second pass and returned it four yards to the 33 with 1:04 to play. Nebraska then ran out the clock for its 23rd straight Big Eight triumph.

S. Methodist (7).....24
Baylor.....20

WACO, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Don King ran for one touchdown and passed for another in the final threee minutes Saturday as seventh-ranked Southern Methodist rallied to beat Baylor 24-20 in a Southwest Conference football game.

The victory raised SMU's overall record to 4-0, including 2-0 in the league. Baylor, off to its worst start since 1978 when it lost its first five games, is 1-4 overall and 1-2 in the SWC.

Baylor led 20-10 when SMU got the ball at its 16-yard line with 4:49 left in the game.

King drove the Mustangs to the Baylor 3-yard line and ran over right tackle for the score with 3:01 remaining.

Baylor was unable to move the ball in the rain, and Buzzy Sawyer punted to the SMU 20.

King connected on a 29-yard pass to Marquis Pleasant to get SMU deep into Baylor territory, then threw a short pass over the middle, which Ron Morris caught. Harris raced into the end zone, completing a 27-yard scoring play with 49 seconds left.

Ohio State (8).....45
Illinois.....38

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tailback Keith Byars' fifth touchdown of the game, a 3-yard sweep with 36 seconds left Saturday night, gave eighth-ranked Ohio State a 45-38 victory over Illinois, a Big Ten game in which the Buckeyes trailed by 24 points.

Byars, scoring at least two touchdowns in his 12th straight game, broke two-time Hesiman Trophy winner Archie Griffin's school record with 274 rushing yards. Griffin had run for 246 yards against Iowa in 1973.

Byars now has 464 yards rushing in his last two games and 1,076 for the season.

Byars, who has scored 16 touchdowns in Ohio State's 5-1 season, matched another school mark with his 30 points. Pete Johnson first scored that total against North Carolina in 1975.

The victory moved Ohio State into a share of the Big Ten lead at 3-1 with Michigan and Iowa. Illinois fell to 4-3 over-all and 3-2 in the conference.

Illinois stunned an Ohio Stadium sellout of 89,937 with three touchdown passes by quarterback Jack Trudeau in the first 16 minutes and built a 24-0 lead.

Two of the Illini scores were set up on an interception of Tomczak and Byars' fumble, both at the Illinois 21-yard line.

Trudeau threw 3 yards to wide receiver Randy Grant, 10 yards to split end David Wiliams, the nation's leading receiver, and 8 yards to tight end Cap Boso for touchdowns.

Chris White, son of the Illinois coach, also kicked a 26-yard field goal in the first quarter.

Quarterback Mike Tomczak led Ohio State to three touchdowns in the last 4:13 of the opening half. He pitched 16 yards to split end Cris Carter in between scoring runs of 16 and 4 yards by Byars, the nation's leading rusher and all-purpose runner coming into the contest.

Byars' third touchdown, a 4-yard run, put Ohio State ahead for th3e first time 28-24 early in the third quarter. After White's 46-yard field goal, Byars romped 67 yards for a 35-27 OIhio State lead.

Trudeau tied it 35-35 for the Illini, throwing 9 yards to runningback Ray Wilson and running for the two extra points with 1:09 left in the third quarer.

Rich Spangler booted a 46-yard field goal for Ohio State and a 38-35 lead with 10:21 remaining. White tied it with his third field from 16 yards with 3:18 to play, setting the stage for the Buckeyes' winning 80-yard touchdown march.

West Virginia.....20
Syracuse.....10

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Willie Drewrey returned a kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown and tailback Tommy Gray scored on a 57-yard pass in the fourth quarter to lead West Virginia to a 20-10 victory over Syracuse on Saturday.

Paul Woodside added two field goals for West Virginia, 5-1, and the Mountaineer defense took over in the second half and limited the Orangemen, 3-3, to just three points on a third-quarter field goal.

Syracuse starting quarterback Todd Norley, who did not enter the game until the second quarter, hit Scott Schwedes with a 16-yard touchdown pass with 1:34 remaining in the second quarter to give the Orange a 7-3 lead.

But Drewrey then took the ensuing kickoff the distance, stiff-arming a final defender at the Syracuse 40-yard line and outrunning him to the end zone.

Two plays later, linebacker Matt Smith recovered a fumble by Syracuse fullback Harold Gayden at the Orangemen 24, and West Virginia added three more points on the final play of the half as Woodside booted a 21-yard field goal for a 13-7 lead. Woodside also kicked a 53-yard field goal in the first quarter.

BYU Rallies To Edge Wyoming

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Robbie Bosco threw for five touchdowns, including the game winner with 4:16 remaining, as the fifth-ranked Cougars barely survived to edge league rival Wyoming 41-38.

The homecoming victory kept alive BYU's nation-leading winning streak of 17 games and and boosted the Cougars to a 6-0 mark, 3-0 in the Western Athletic Conference. Wyoming, which traded the lead with BYU throughout the second half, fell to 3-4 and 2-2.

Trailing 38-33 late in the game, Bosco led BYU on an 80-yard, 11-play drive, at one point completing a nine-yard pass on fourth down at the Wyoming 18.

The junior quarterback found tight end David Mills in the end zone for a 14-yard touchdown, followed by a two-point conversion pass from Bosco to Kelly Smith.

The loss marred exeptional performances by Wyoming freshman quarterback Scott Runyan, who threw for a 37-yard score and set up numerous others with runs and passes, and that of running back Kevin Lowe, who threw a 64-yard touchdown pass and ran 61 yards for another. Runyan completed 10 of 13 passes for 179 yards.

The Cowboys, who fell behind 14-0 in the first quarter, battled back to trail by only 21-20 at the half, setting the stage for a seesaw second half.

The BYU defense, which had allowed no more than 15 points to any opponent this season, appeared beleagured all afternoon until Wyoming's final possession in the waning moments.

Linebacker Marv Allen swatted a pitchout far into the backfield, and although Wyoming recovered, a third-down pass by Runyan was incomplete and the Cowboys had to give up the football deep in their own territory.

Bosco, in all, completed 29 of 44 passes for 384 yards, while Mills had seven catches, three for touchdowns.

Alabama.....6
Penn State (11).....0

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Van Tiffin kicked two fourth-quarter field goals, including a school record 53-yarder, as Alabama upset 11th-ranked Penn State 6-0 in college football Saturday, the first shutout of the Nittany Lions in 18 years.

The loss dropped Penn State's record to 4-2. Alabama is 2-4.

The last team to blank Penn State was Georgia Tech 21-0 in 1966.

Penn State's Nick Gancitano missed two field goal tries, including a 42-yarder that hit the left upright on the final play of the first half.

Alabama, backed up to its 7-yard line by a John Bruno punt, moved to the Penn State 36 for Tiffin's first field goal, which broke his and the school's record by 2 yards. Two penalties on one play, totaling 20 yards, helped the drive.

On Alabama's next possession, the Crimson Tide moved from its 43, with a 25-yard run by Paul Ott Carruth the big gainer, to the Penn State 6 for Tiffin's other kick, a 23-yarder.

With Penn State's starting quarterback Doug Strang injured on a run early in the third period, John Shaffer tried to rally the Nittany Lions. But Alabama's defense forced one punt, then Tide safety Britton Cooper intercepted a Shaffer pass at the Penn State 49 on the Lions' final possession.

Iowa.....40
Purdue (14).....3

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Iowa quarterback Chuck Long bombarded 14th-ranked Purdue for 369 passing yards and four touchdowns Saturday, including first-half scoring passes of 51 yards to Robert Smith and 56 yards to Scott Helverson, leading the Hawkeyes to an easy 40-3 Big Ten Conference football victory.

Smith, who had caught only one touchdown pass going into the game, got two more in the third quarter on scoring receptions of 31 and 38 yards.

Iowa's victory knocked Purdue out of sole possession of first place in the conference and left both teams at 3-1 in the Big Ten and 4-2 overall.

Long, who had averaged just over 200 passing yards a game this season, had 221 in the first half alone and added 76 on an 80-yard scoring drive that broke the game open midway through the third quarter.

After Smith's second and third touchdown catches, Iowa got the ball back on a pass interception by Nate Creer. Two pass completions followed before Ronnie Harmon ran in from the 3.

Georgia (14).....18
Mississippi.....12

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Freshman Cleveland Gary scored on a 6-yard run in the fourth quarter as 15th-ranked Georgia overcame four turnovers to trim stubborn Mississippi 18-12 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Gary, who had kept the game-winning 62-yard drive alive by converting a fourth-and-one at the Ole Miss 35, scored on the 6-yard run to erase a 12-10 deficit with 8:45 left in the game.

David Dukes, a redshirt freshman pressed into service when starting quarterback Todd Williams left with a shoulder injury in the second quarter, then ran for the two-point coversion to complete an outstanding backup performance.

Earlier in the second half, Dukes rifled a 28-yard touchdown pass to Cassius Osborn and he also had a 37-yard run from his own 8 to get Georgia out of trouble late in the third quarter.

Georgia, 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the SEC, also scored on a 23-yard field goal by Kevin Butler.

Ole Miss, 3-2-1 and 0-2, struggled offensively for most of the game and cashed in on Georgia mistakes for all its points, including two field goals by Jon Howard within a five-second period near the end of the first half.

Howard kicked a 23-yarder with 12 seconds to play and, after Georgia's Andre Smith lost a fumble at his 1 on the ensuing kickoff, Howard immediately kicked an 18-yard field goal to give Ole Miss a 6-3 lead with seven seconds left in the half.

The Rebels' only touchdown came on a 3-yard pass from Kent Austin to Steve Joiner in the third quarter following a fumble recovery at the Georgia 12.

S. Carolina (17).....45
Pittsburgh.....21

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Gamecock quarterbacks Allen Mitchell and Mike Hold teamed up for four touchdown passes Saturday as 17th-ranked South Carolina crushed the Pittsburgh Panthers, 45-21, in non-conference college football play.

Mitchell, the junior starter, provided the consistency and Hold, a junior college transfer, provided the spark as the South Carolina offense ran roughshod over the once-mighty Panthers at Williams-Brice Stadium.

The Gamecocks, now 5-0, ran up a total offense of 443 yards en route to the lopsided win. South Carolina's "fire ant" defense held Pitt, now 1-5, to a total offense of 285 yards.

Hold came in during the second quarter and electrified the Gamecocks' offense and a crowd of 73,100 after Mitchell faltered on several passing plays.

Mitchell threw a 5-yard, first quarter touchdown pass after a Panther fumble deep in Pitt territory, and he later led the Gamecocks on a 71-yard drive and a 14-0 lead. But he threw two interceptions and misfired on several other passes as Pitt fought back to tie the game at 14 in the second quarter, led by reserve quarterback Chris Jelic.

Jelic finished with 10 completions on 26 attempts and an interception, but it wasn't enough.

Hold came in with just over seven minutes remaining in the half. With about two minutes remaining in the half, Hold spun away from a furious Panther rush and threw a perfect strike to split end Chris Wade 31 yards away in the end zone.

Hold hit Wade with a 33-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to push the lead to 28-14, all the Gamecocks would need to equal their best start ever.

Florida (18).....43
Tennessee.....30

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Running backs John L. Williams and Neal Anderson combined for 278 yards and a pair of touchdowns as Florida outgunned Tennessee 43-30 Saturday in a Southeastern Conference college football game that saw 1,060 yards in total offense.

Florida gained 509 yards as the Gators raised their overall record to 4-1-1, 2-0-1 in the SEC. Tennessee, which amassed 551 yards in a losing effort, fell to 2-2-1, 0-2 in the conference.

Anderson rambled 80 yards off tackle in the first half to answer Tennessee kicker Fuad Reveiz's 26-yard field goal and give Florida a 13-10 lead it never lost.

Anderson gained 178 yards in the game, but it was Williams' 47-yard fourth-quarter score that ended Tennessee's hopes for an upset. Williams finished with 100 yards rushing.

Vol quarterback Tony Robinson connected on 29 of 43 passes for 371 yards and two touchdowns, including a 52-yard bomb to Tim McGee that started the high-scoring contest.

Friendship Downs GCA

Friendship took the lead for good in the first half, scoring twice. Chris Gross hit at the 11:42 mark with an assist by Rick Godwin. Donald Scarborough added the second goal at the 20:19 mark.

Greenville came back with the first score of the second half on a goal by Paul Hollingsworth assisted by Derrick Leupen at 19:08. But Scarborough hit with 23:00 gone and Gross also got a second goal at 29:15. Marshall Cain closed out the scoring for Friendship at 36:11.

"We've seen a little improvement in our intensity and if we can carry this through the end of the season it will help a lot," Coach Dale Thatcher said.

Greenville falls to 3-8 with the loss, while Friendship is now 10-0-1.

Both the soccer and volleyball teams travel to Goldsboro on Tuesday.

Green Ups His Lead To Three

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Hubert Green, seeking his first triumph in three years, banged out a 3-under-par 67 Saturday to increase his lead to three shots after the third round of the $300,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament.

Green, a winner of 17 tour events, including the 1977 U.S. Open, but a non-winner since the 1981 Hartford Open, had a 54-hole total of a 198, 12-under-par over the hilly, narrow 6,791-yard, par-70 Green Island Country Club course.

Scott Hoch was alone in second at 201 in the battle for the first prize of $54,000. He had a 68 Saturday while defending champion Ronnie Black ripped out a 66 for a 202, good for third place.

Rookies Willie Wood and Corey Pavin were at 203. Wood, the first-round leader, had a 69 Saturday and Pavin a 68.

At 204 were Gary Hallberg and Andy Bean. Hallberg faltered with a 72 after trailing Green by only a stroke entering Saturday's play. Bean, meanwhile, had a 65 to get into contention, five shots off the pace.

Tim Simpson and Mike Sullivan were another shot back at 205 along with Peter Oosterhuis and Rex Caldwell. On Saturday, Simpson had a 66, Oosterhuis a 68, Caldwell a 69 and Sullivan had a 72.

Jack Nicklaus, making his first appearance ever in this tournament, was at 208 after a third-round 70.

Green, who held a one-shot lead over Hallberg entering play Saturday, bogeyed the second hole to briefly lose the lead to Hoch.

He got back on the track with a 10-foot birdie on No. 4 and then took the lead for good with birdies on Nos. 10 and 11 on putts of 12 and 25 feet before finishing with another on No. 17 from 12 feet.

"I'm going to try to shoot a 63 tomorrow and let the other guys shoot for second place," said Green who has earned $1.7 million in his career but fell to 145th on the money list last year.

"But I haven't won in three years and could fall flat on my face," said Green, who is playing his best golf of the year, finishing fifth two weeks ago at the LaJet Tournament and his earnings are just over $81,000 for the year.

Asked if he were confident going into the final round, Green replied:

"I've got to be feeling a lot better than some other folks. I'd like to have gotten more today so they would be thinking about second place but I'm not there yet."

Hoch's three consecutive birdies beginning at No. 2 had given him the lead briefly but he bogeyed No. 4 before parring the rest of his holes.

Kentucky (19).....17
Miss. State.....13

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Sparked by a 24-yard run on a fake punt, 19th-ranked Kentucky drove 83 yards in the fourth quarter and George Adams scored on a 1-yard run Saturday afternoon to give the Wildcats a 17-13 Southeastern Conference football victory over Mississippi State.

The victory pushed Kentucky to 5-0 on the season — its best start since the 1950 team under Paul "Bear" Bryant won its first 10 games en route to a 11-1 season, an SEC championship and a Sugar Bowl victory.

Trailing 13-10, Kentucky was stopped on a third down and won the play at its own 26, but punter Paul Calhoun romped for a first down at the 50-yard line when Mississippi State didn't rush.

Seven plays later, Adams vaulted into the end zone from the one to cap the 11-play march.

Mississippi State, 3-3, mounted a desperation drive in the final minute and got to the Kentucky 39 before time ran out.

Kentucky moved to 1-0 in the SEC, while Mississippi State fell to 0-2.

After trading field goals in the first half and long touchdown scoring passes in the third quarter, Mississippi State took a 13-10 lead with 12:13 to play when Artie Cosby kicked a 37-yard field goal.

Kentucky's other touchdown came on a 57-yard Bill Ransdell to Cisco Bryant pass with 4:36 left in the third quarter. State's only touchdown was a 56-yard Don Smith to Louis Clark pass five minutes into the third quarter.

Ga. Southern.....24
UT-Chattanooga.....17

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Tracy Ham ran for one touchdown and caught a pass for another as Georgia Southern downed the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga 24-17 in college football Saturday.

Ham caught a 19 yard touchdown pass from Monty Sharpe in the first quarter and went on to compile 222 yards in the air for Georgia Southern, 6-1. Ham ran 9 yards for another score in the third quarter, followed less than one minute later by Ricky Harris' 18 yard touchdown run for the Eagles.

Tim Foley kicked a 32-yard field goal for Georgia Southern and added three extra points.

Beddingfield Rally Tops Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

STANTONSBURG — Sam Wells scored three touchdowns to lead Wilson Beddingfield back from a 20-7 deficit to a 26-20 Big East football victory over Rose High School Friday night.

The Rampants, up by 13 points with 6:52 left in the third period, saw their lead vanish in less than five minutes as Wells led the Bruins back into a tie, then scored the winning touchdown early in the final period after a controversial play and a penalty against the Rampants.

Rose took the initial lead on an 82-yard fumble return by Tyrone Smith, but the Bruins tied it up on a 55-yard pass from Darren Bynum to Ronnie Barnes. Rose kicker Brian Bridges put Rose back on top with a 27-yard field goal late in the half and the Rampants held a 10-7 lead at intermission.

The Rampants extended that on a 29-yard pass from Battle Emory to Tyrone Jones in the third period and Bridges added another field goal, of 26 yards to give Rose the 20-7 edge.

But Wells returned the kickoff after the field goal 81 yards for a score, and went in again from a yard out after Rose turned it over on a fumble to knot the score at 20-20.

What might have been the biggest play of the game came early in the final period after the Bruins had recovered another Rampant fumble. After driving from their own 42, they reached the Rose 12, picking up a first down there. On second down from the ten, Bynum pitched out to John Smith, who couldn't find the handle. Rose's Todd Morris came up with the ball on the run and returned it all the way to the Beddingfield 45 before he was pulled down.

Meanwhile, back at the 18, flags flew. The ball was brought back, a penalty walked off to the nine (half the distance) and the ball returned to Beddingfield.

Rose Coach Chip Williams couldn't understand it, called time out and went to the field for an explaination.

"They (the officials) said that we hit their quarterback after he pitched it out. But there was no way he was back on the 18 yard line when it happened, if it happened. I'm going to be anxious to see the films to see what really did happen."

The officials, questioned after the game, said that the foul did occur at the 18 yard line. However, usual proceedure for a defensive foul committed behind the line of scrimmage on a live ball is to mark it off from the line of scrimmage, not the spot of the foul.

At any rate, with new life, Beddingfield scored in three plays with Wells scoring on fourth down from the three to give the Bruins the victory.

"There were two plays that beat us," Williams said. "One of them was the kickoff. We should never have let him return it against us. That's our fault for sure. The other was the call down there on the call that gave them the ball back."

Williams said he felt the Rampants made a better effort in the game. "We made better use of the talent that we have," he said. "We tried to get outside with the pass and take advantage of it and it worked. But we're still having too many misreads and that's costing us. We could have scored both of the times we went for field goals but for misreads.

"Still, I'm proud of the kids and I can't wait for Kinston. I know they're hurting, especially those who were on the team last year. With that and this year, even the best kids have got to get a little mental."

For the first period of the game, it was all Beddingfield. The Bruins took the opening kickoff from their own 32 to the Rose 15 before a 32-yard field goal attempt by Kenny Byrd was short.

The next series, they moved it from the 33 to the Rose 24 before a penalty cost them field position and forced a punt.

The second period opened with the Bruins taking over on their own 31 after a punt and on the first play, Bynum hit Jeff Speight for a 54-yard gain, down to the Rose 15. But three plays netted nothing and the Bruins lined up again for a field goal attempt.

But it was a fake, and holder Ken Lucas took off with the ball, fumbled it and Smith picked it up and outraced the Bruins down the far sideline, dashing 82 yards for the score. Bridges kick made it 7-0 with 10:40 left in the half.

Beddingfield came immediately back to score and tie it up, marching 98 yards to do it. Back to receive the kickoff, Smith grounded it at the two. After two plays netted a first down, Wells broke away for an 18 yards game. Bynum later added 12 yards, moving the ball finally to the Bruin 45.

From there, Bynum hit Barnes, cutting across the middle of the field with a 55-yard bomb and Byrd's kick tied it at 7-7 with 6:58 left in the half.

Rose marched from its 36 to score the go-ahead field goal on the next series. Emory hit Dwight Smith for 14 yards on first down, and later went to Ervin Best for 10 and Tyrone Smith for 11. But the drive ran out of steam after reaching the nine and Bridged booted the 27-yarder with 42 seconds left to let Rose take a 10-7 advantage into intermission.

The Rampants quickly added to that in the second half. Taking the opening possession from their 42, the

Rams Surprise Jags In Overtime

FARMVILLE — Greene Central's Kenneth Radford kicked a 19-yard field goal in overtime to allow the Rams to upset Farmville Central, 11-8, Friday night in Eastern Carolina Conference football action.

The contest turned into a defensive struggle as the two teams battled back and forth around the middle of the field most of the evening. Neither had a scoring opportunity until the fourth period when both pushed the ball into the end zone for an 8-8 deadlock as regulation time expired.

Farmville, taking over at midfield after a punt, drove in for the go-ahead score early in the final quarter. Dennis Tripp scored on a 16-yard pass from Jeff Vail to put the Jaguars into the lead. Vail also ran over the PAT for an 8-0 edge.

But Greene Central responded, driving 71 yards after the kickoff. Seemingly stalled on fourth and three at the GC 46, the Rams got new life on a penalty against the Jaguars and kept the drive alive. The Jaguars were penalized for having too many men on the field on the play.

Kenneth Warren then broke away on a 27-yard gallop that brought the Rams within two. Jerome Flowers ran over the PAT and it was tied at 8-8, staying that way the rest of the game.

In the overtime, the Rams won the toss and elected to let Farmville try first, and held the Jaguars from the end zone on their four plays. After failing to score on three plays, Greene let Radford boot his 19-yarder that gave the Rams the win.

Radford had missed a 47 yarder with one second left on the game before kicking the game winner.

Jerome Daniels led the Farmville defensive effort with 16 tackles, five of them solo. Tripp added nine tackles, two solo.

Farmville drops to 2-4 overall, 0-2 in league play as the Jaguars dropped their third straight. They play at C.B. Aycock on Friday.

Greene Central goes to 4-3 with the win, 3-0 in conference action, having won their third in a row. The Rams travel to Ayden-Grifton on Friday.

White Oak Slips By Conley, 28-15

HOLLYWOOD — Bobby Wray scored three times in leading White Oak to a 28-15 Coastal Conference football victory over D.H. Conley Friday night.

Wray, who rushed 28 times for 160 yards for the White Oak Vikings, knotted the game on a 46-yard scramble after Conley had scored first to take a 7-0 lead.

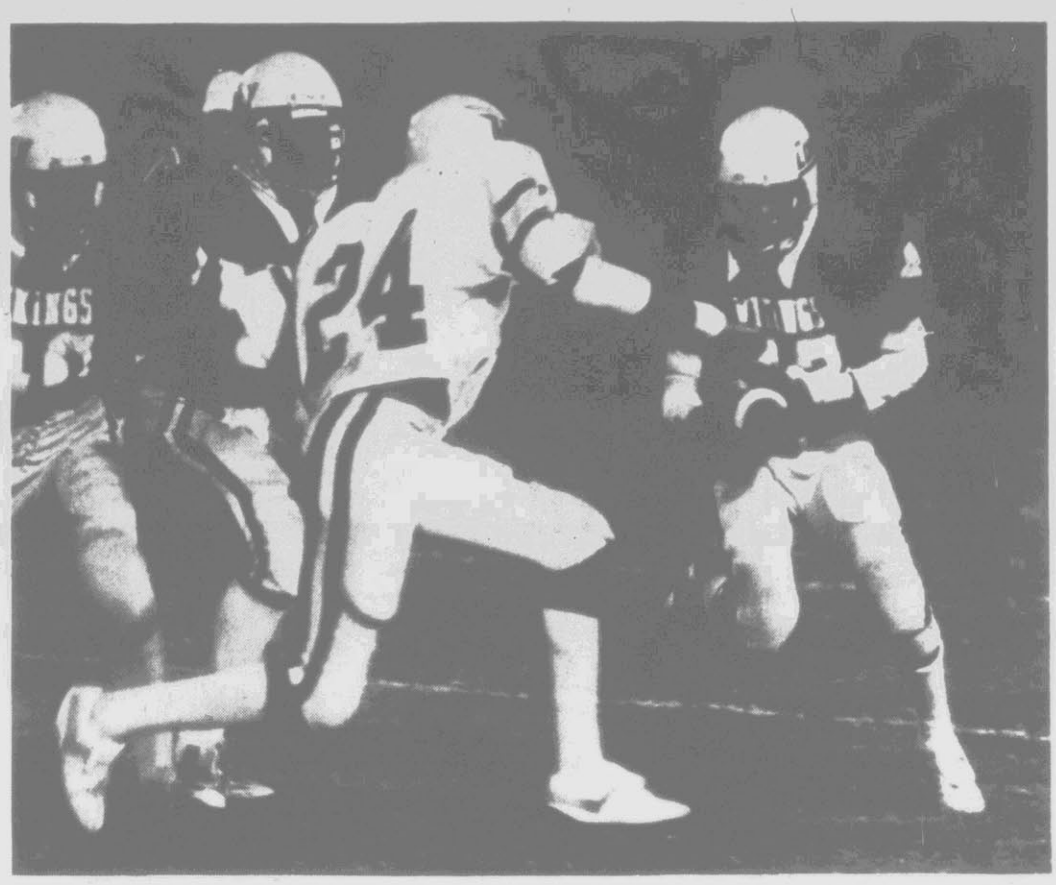
The Conley Vikings took the lead after recovering a fumbled punt at the White Oak 25 yard line. Joel Cox finally sneaked over from the one-yard line for the score and Steve Mills added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

But it didn't take long for White Oak to get back into the game. Wray finished off a 70-yard drive with his 46-yarder and Chris Crist added the kick to knot it at 7-7 after one period.

It stayed that way the rest of the half.

In the third period, however, Wray scored again to push White Oak again for good. Conley back to punt, got a bad snap and was forced to run, failing to make first down at the 41. Wray finished off the drive with a ten-yard scamper and Crist again kicked for a 14-7 lead that carried into the final period.

Wray climaxed a 54 yard drive in the final quarter with a six-yard run to end his scoring for the night. Chris Lister raced 22 yards with the final score after White Oak had intercepted the ball at the Conley 47.



Looking For Room

Conley then drove 80 yards after the kickoff to finish off the scoring. Cox hit Mills with a ten-yard pass for the touchdown and Derrick Parker ran over the PAT to trim the margin to 13.

Cox passed for 153 yards for Conley, leading their offense.

Conley, after opening with three wins, is now 3-3 and 0-1 in league play. The game was also the first non-shutout the Vikings have been involved in this year. White Oak, preseason favorite to win the league title, is now 4-2 overall and 1-0 in the conference.

Conley travels to West Carteret next Friday.

Trinity Rallies To Beat Calvary

Trinity Christian School romped to a 44-25 victory over Calvary Christian Friday in flag football, but it took three straight touchdowns in the final period to pull it out.

Calvary scored first on a 20-yard pass from Louis Wallace to Mitchell Garris, but Jimmy Powers ran over from a yard out to tie it for Trinity. Calvary, however, came back on an eight-yard pass from Wallace to Gary Strickland to score again. Wallace then hit Garris for the PAT and a 13-6 lead at the end of the first period.

Edward Everett got the only score of the second quarter from ten yards out, cutting the Calvary lead to 13-12 at intermission.

In the third period, Calvary struck again on a 38-yard pass from Wallace to Strickland, but a five-yard run by Tim Moseley matched that, and Trinity trailed, 19-18, going into the final period.

Trinity then scored three straight times to put the game away. Powers scored from a yard away to put Trinity ahead for the first time, 24-19, and Mike Reynolds ran in from 27 yards away for the next. Powers hit Tyler Welch on the PAT pass for a 31-19 lead. Powers then hit Reynolds on a ten-yard scoring pass and went to Rodney Brown for the PAT and a 38-19 lead.

After Calvary scored again on a two-yard run by Strickland, Trinity closed out the scoring with a 25-yard run by Moseley.

Reynolds led the Trinity offense with 171 yards on 23 carries.

Now 3-0, Trinity is scheduled to play Wanchese on October 26.

Knights Bow To Wilmington

WILMINGTON — John Long scored four goals in leading Wilmington Christian Academy to an 8-1 soccer victory over Greenville Christian Academy Friday.

Long's first goal came 5:36 into the contest with an assist by Jamie Dover. Dover then scored at the 9:18 mark with an assist by Mike Stutz.

Long scored unassisted at 12:50 and again at 22:11 for a 4-0 lead.

Greenville's Derek Leupen then hit at the 31:17 mark, assisted by Robin House for the lone Knight goal.

Dover opened the second half scoring at 10:31, with an assist by Sam Edens. Edens scored on his own at 15:22 and Long got his fourth at 19:45. Stutz closed out the scoring with an assist by Long at 28:27.

"Wilmington is tremendously improved since the last time we played them," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "Our guys just lacked the intensity they need to put goals on the board and play well."

The loss dropped GCA to 3-7 and they were to play Friendship on Saturday.

Beddingfield...

Rampants scored in just seven plays. After moving to the 29, Emory tossed a pass toward the sidelines to Jones, who then dashed straight down the field untouched for the score. Bridges again kicked and with 6:55 left, Rose led 17-7.

On the kickoff, Beddingfield fumbled and Dwight Smith recovered for Rose at the Bruin 43. Emory hit Smith for 32 yards on the first play, giving the Rampants the ball at the 11. But they were unable to move and Bridges booted a 26-yard field goal, running it to 20-7 with 6:52 left.

It took the Bruins only 12 seconds, however, to get back in the game. Wells pulled in Bridges' floating kick at the 19 and raced straight up the middle, then cut to the left, going 81 yards for the score. Byrd's boot was good, and the Bruins had cut it to 20-14 with 6:40 remaining.

Two plays after the kickoff, Emory fumbled and Leon Hobbs recovered for the Bruins at the Rose 31. Wells set things up with a 12-yard carry to the four, then went over from the one on third and goal with 1:55 left. Rose blocked the PAT try, however, leaving it knotted at 20-20.

Another Rampant fumble three plays after the kickoff again game the Bruins excellent field position at the Rose 42. A sack on Bynum and a clipping penalty, however, moved it back to the Bruin 47 where they faced second and 21. But Wells went over right tackle from there on a 41-yard burst down to the Rose 12.

Two plays later came the "fumble-penalty" play that raised such a furor, and the Bruins scored three plays later.

Rose twice got the ball back into Bruin territory, getting intercepted at the 31 and then losing the ball on downs at the 34 before time finally ran out.

The loss dropped Rose to 0-3 in Big East play, 2-3-1 overall. Beddingfield climbs to 2-1 in league play, 4-2 overall.

The Rampants travel to Kinston next Friday.

Person Upsets #4 Vance, 21-7

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Senior tailback Troy Russell rushed for 119 yards and two fourth-quarter scores to key unranked Roxboro Person to a 21-7 victory over No. 4 Henderson Vance in high school football Friday night.

Vance was one of six teams ranked in the latest Associated Press poll to lose, while all three top-ranked teams won.

Russell scored on TD runs of 2 and 14 yards as Person, 3-3, erased a 7-7 halftime tie and hand Vance its first loss in six games.

Meanwhile, in one of the best individual performances of the season, Tim Worley rushed for 399 yards and five touchdowns to key unranked Lumberton by West Robeson 34-16.

Worley scored on runs of 99, 18, 61, 41 and 12 yards, and has now rushed for 912 yards this season.

Three ranked 4-A teams, including Vance, lost Friday to unranked squads. Fayetteville Sanford handed No. 6 Pinecrest its first defeat in six outings, 35-14, while Gastonia Huss downed No. 7 Morganton Freedom, 20-10.

Ray Campbell rushed for 180 yards and three touchdowns and Trey Edge hit nine of 15 passes for 183 yards and two scores as Fayetteville Sanford evened its record at 3-3.

Sanford held Pinecrest to 12 yards rushing — well below its 205-yard per game average — and limited Garry Melton, who was averaging 132.6 yards a game, to 21 yards on 10 carries.

Eric Graham rushed ror 154 yards and scored one TD — on a 30-yard run — as Huss grabbed a 20-2 halftime lead en route to running its record to 4-2.

Only one ranked 3-A team lost, while two teams ranked in the 2-A and 1-A combined class were beaten.

Previously unbeaten Eden Morehead, the seventh-ranked 3-A squad, lost to Southeast Guilford 14-7, while Bessemer City handed No. 3 Maiden its initial loss in six games, 16-13, and eight-ranked North Stanly fell to 6-1 after its 29-0 loss to No. 10 Forest City.

Todd Landers' 26-yard field goal with 3:15 left to spark Bessemer City, which rallied from a 13-0 first-half deficit, to its first victory in six outings.

Quarterback Derrick Leak scored three touchdowns — on runs of 1, 27 and 2 yards — as Forest City won its fifth game in six outings.

Greensboro Page, No. 1 among 4-A teams, downed East Forsyth 32-7 behind quarterback Todd Ellis, who passed for 184 yards and four touchdowns. Ellis, who completed 14 of 24 passes with one interception, three scoring passes of 36, 1, 26 and 17 yards as Page ran its record to 6-0.

Meanwhile, Kannapolis, the top-ranked 3-A team, whipped Central Cabarrus 37-0 and Jordan-Matthews, which moved into the No. 1 spot in the 2-A and 1-A division, downed North Moore 20-0 as running back Robert Siler gained 218 on the ground and scored three touchdowns.

In other games:

— Wilson Fike, the third-ranked 4-A team, downed Wilson Hunt 21-14 behind quarterback John Caldwell, who threw for 272 yards. Caldwell, a junior, hit 15 of 25 passes.

Ange Paces Jamesville To 55-0 Win Over Tribe

JAMESVILLE — Richie Ange scored once and passed for three other touchdowns in guiding unbeaten Jamesville to a 55-0 romp over Chocowinity Friday night in a Tobacco Belt football game.

The Bullets, ranked ninth in the state in the 2-A/1-A poll, and second in the 1-A by the Reflector, had little trouble with the Indians, but went after the shutout by returning the starters to the game when the Tribe offered a threat.

Ange scored the first touchdown in the opening period, moving in from two yards out. Tracy Peele ran over the PAT for an 8-0 lead.

In the second quarter, Jamesville scored three times. Ange hit Terry Perry on a 17-yard pass for the first with Robbie Harris getting the two-point PAT. Ange then went to Greg Hardison for 39 yards for the second score of the period. Harris ran 16 yards with the final score and Ange kicked the PAT to give the Bullets a 29-0 lead at intermission.

Jamesville scored twice in the third quarter. Ange hit David Biggs with a 35-yard pass and then Maurice Moore ran five yards for the second.

In the final period, Greg Bell returned a fumble 16 yards for the score and Moore ran from a yard out to close out the touchdown parade.

"We played well defensively, even our freshmen," Coach Jerry Godley said.

Peele ran 16 times for 170 yards to lead the offense, while Moore had 11 carries for 62 yards.

Jamesville is now 6-0 overall and 3-0 in conference play. The Bullets travel to Aurora on Friday.

Chocowinity falls to 2-4, 1-2 in the league. The Indians play host to Belhaven on Friday.

Bertie Rumbles Past Roanoke

WINDSOR — Terrance Cherry scored two touchdowns and led Bertie Senior High School to a 34-0 victory over Roanoke in a Northeastern Conference football game Friday night.

Roanoke, hampered by losing three of eight fumbles, helped to set up the first two Falcon scores with their misplays.

After recovering the first Roanoke fumble on the Redskins' first series, Bertie pushed it in with Cherry scoring from two yards away. Allan Castellow kicked the first of four PAT's to give Bertie a 7-0 advantage.

Just a few plays after the kickoff, Roanoke again turned the ball over and Bertie also took that one in for a 14-0 lead. Kelvin Hayes got the score on a one-yard plunge.

Terry Gillam added a third Bertie score in the second quarter, scoring from a yard away.

In the third quarter, the Falcons got a second score from Cherry, who raced 26 yards with the ball for the touchdown, running the lead to 27-0.

Clinton Hill bulled over from a yard outside the end zone in the final quarter to close out the scoring.

Roanoke never offered a threat in the game.

Bertie climbs to 4-2 with the win and is 2-2 in league play. Roanoke is now 1-6 overall and 0-5 in the conference.

The Redskins play host to Tarboro next Friday night.

Padres Question Pitching Move

DETROIT (AP) — Dave Dravecky is perfectly healthy and pitching well. Why he didn't throw in relief for the San Diego Padres in Game 3 of the World Series is anybody's guess.

"I'll say this: I'm very, very disappointed that we lost, and beyond that, I've got no comment," Dravecky said in a hushed locker room Friday night after the Padres were beaten by Detroit, 5-2. "I've got nothing else to say about that."

Others did. The most pressing question in the aftermath of an embarrassing 11-walk performance by San Diego pitchers was why Dravecky, one of the most consistent long relievers in the bullpen, was not called upon when starter Tim Lollar ran into early danger.

Lollar, who walked a team-high 105 batters in 195 2-3 innings this season, was in trouble from the outset. He walked two batters in the first inning, and gave up a two-out, two-run homer to Marty Castillo on a 1-2 pitch.

Still, pitching coach Norm Sherry made no move to the bullpen, where Dravecky — who has thrown 7 1-3 scoreless innings in postseason play — was waiting. He hadn't worked since a 1 1-3 inning stint in Game 1 on Tuesday.

When Lollar walked two more batters and gave up a double and a single, leaving the bases loaded with the score 3-0, Manager Dick Williams called to the bullpen — but for 24-year-old Greg Booker, who had thrown only two postseason innings in his short career.

Booker proceeded to walk home a fourth run before getting out of the inning. In the third, he walked the bases loaded and was pulled, the Padres opting this time for Greg Harris. Harris hit Kirk Gibson on the foot to force home Darrell Evans, then checked the Tigers on three hits the rest of the way, walking three and striking out five.

While Dravecky refused to comment on the move, Sherry said he never thought about going with the left-hander, who had a 2.93 earned run average as both a starter and reliever this season.

"What is he going to do, pitch eight or nine innings?" Sherry said. "If we do that, we can't use him the rest of the way. This way, we've got him for Saturday or Sunday."

If Dravecky had been used, the Padres still would have two long relivers in the bullpen — Andy Hawkins, who has thrown eight scoreless innings in the series, and Craig Lefferts, who threw three shutout innings in the Padres' 5-3 victory in Game 2.

"I guess Norm just didn't want to risk losing Dave for the rest of the playoffs," said Eric Show. "He's been doing such a great job for us."

Neither Lollar nor Booker could explain their sub-par performances, part of an 11-walk evening that tied a team World Series record.

"It's hard to say. I really just didn't have command of my pitches," Lollar said. "I felt good. It was just one of those nights.

"I was behind the hitters almost all night, and when I did come in with pitches, they hit them. I just wanted to go out and keep our team in the ball game for seven or eight innings — that's my goal — but it didn't work out that way."

Said Booker, who threw two scoreless innings in the National League Championship Series: "I was just wild. It was nobody's fault. I was throwing hard, but the ball was just getting away from me.

"Then I tried harder and harder and I overcompensated, and it was all downhill from there."

In the Padres' first three Series games, their starting pitchers gave up 16 hits, seven walks and 10 runs in 7 1-3 innings.

DESPERATE MEASURES

BERKELEY, Calif (AP) — In the 1983-84 basketball season, the University of California had the shortest team in the Pac-10 Conference.

Coach Dick Kuchen admitted that it sometimes made for difficulties in matching up guarding assignemnts when up against a much taller team.

"Because of that," he said, "we had to do different things in every game — dramatically different things. I'm not talking about Band Aids. I'm talking triple bypass."

Tigers Walk Way To 5-2 Victory

DETROIT (AP) — After the way his players walked around Tiger Stadium all evening, Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson figured they will have to fly back to San Diego.

The Tigers got only seven hits Friday night, but one of them was Marty Castillo's two-run homer in a four-run second inning.

They also got a record-tying 11 walks from the Padres' erratic pitchers. That, coupled with an acrobatic catch in center field by Chet Lemon — Anderson said it wasn't all that special — gave the Tigers a 5-2 victory and a two games to one lead in the World Series.

The Tigers, who split the first two games in San Diego last Tuesday and Wednesday nights, can win the championship with victories today — when first-game winner Jack Morris faces the Padres' Eric Show — and Sunday night.

Despite owning the lead and being at home for the next two games, Anderson sounds as though he hasn't even bothered to unpack.

"It means for sure we at least are going to get to go back to San Diego," he said. "It ain't going to end here. I look at it this way: it was a seven-game series when it started out and that's the way I think it's going to go. I really believe it's going to be a long, drawn-out, tough Series."

"I'm glad to hear Sparky say we're going to go back to San Diego," Padres Manager Dick Williams said. "I know we're going back, but I'd like for them to go back with us."

He characterized the Padres' starting pitching as "very, very poor. As you noticed, we had 11 walks ... We didn't set a new record but we tied one. Eleven walks isn't anything that's too pretty."

Norm Sherry, the San Diego pitching coach, was a bit more graphic in his description. "They drove me crazy on the bench," he said. "It was like a bad dream. You expect 11 walks in the rookie league, not in the majors ... It was like I was in another world on the bench."

Anderson, who finds few good things to say even in the best of times, found plenty to complain about.

"We're just not hitting," he said after the Tigers raised their three-game total to 22. "Tonight their pitching was just very wild, but their bullpen has shut us down every time they come in."

That bullpen had gone 13 1-3 innings before allowing a Detroit run when Greg Harris hit Kirk Gibson with a bases-loaded pitch in the fourth inning.

But that was only the fifth run. And even though Harris went the rest of the way, allowing just three hits in 5 1-3 shutout innings, the game was, as it turned out, virtually over.

Virtually. But not quite.

In the seventh inning, Tony Gwynn singled, Steve Garvey doubled and Graig Nettles hit a sacrifice fly off Bill Scherrer, who had replaced starter and winner Milt Wilcox.

Anderson waved Willie Hernandez, the Tigers' "stopper," in from the bullpen. And he served up a heart-stopper.

Terry Kennedy bashed the ball to straightaway center field. Lemon, who plays a routinely shallow position, wheeled and took off, his back to the ball.

He glanced over his shoulder. He had turned the wrong way. He pirouetted and, racing backward toward the 440-foot sign, reached up and caught the drive.

"I said 'Oh, my goodness,'" Lemon recalled. "As I ran backward, I looked over my right shoulder and the ball was on my left ... If I can reach it, I'll catch it."

"He's done it so many times for us in the years I've been with him, three years," Anderson said with a shrug. "I didn't think it was anything different. I've seen him do quite a bit ... I thought Chester made a good catch but I've seen it so many times, it didn't excite me."

Tim Lollar started for the Padres. In the postseason, San Diego starters have lasted an average of 3.6 innings. Lollar didn't last that long.

He made it through the first inning despite allowing two walks.

In the second, Lemon singled.He raced to second on a wild pitch.He raced to third on Darrell Evans' fly ball to center field.

Staton's Two Touchdows Nip Ayden-Grifton, 14-8

PINETOPS — Jerome Staton broke away for two big runs and led SouthWest Edgecombe to a hard-fought 14-8 Eastern Carolina Conference football victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday night.

The win enabled the second-ranked Cougars to stay unbeaten on the season and tied with Greene Central for the league lead.

Staton, who finished the game with 160 yards on 17 carries, got 97 of those on two lugs for touchdowns.

He scored the first in the second period, dashing 47 yards for a 7-0 lead. The other came in the final quarter when he sprang loose for 50 yards. Otherwise the Chargers held him in fairly good check.

Ayden-Grifton, which actually dominated play — 282 total yards to 198 for the Cougars — couldn't push it into the end zone however until after SouthWest had a 14-0 lead. Danny West finally hit paydirt with a 26-yard pass to Gene Johnson.

While Staton led SouthWest, Kelvin Harris had 29 carries for 117 yards for the Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton slips to 4-2 with the loss, 0-2 in league play. SouthWest is now 7-0, 3-0 in the conference.

Aycock Holds Off Panthers To Take 21-15 ECC Victory

PIKEVILLE — It was the battle for the Eastern Carolina Conference celler — or so it would appear — and Charles B. Aycock came away with a 21-15 victory over North Pitt Friday night.

Both teams came into the game winless, and Aycock had scored only three points in six previous contests — but they got their offense on track against the Panthers, then held off a North Pitt rally to gain the win.

Aycock took the lead in the first period on a one-yard run by Kenneth Leach. John Thomas added the first of three extra points afterwards.

In the second period, Tommy Dunn also cracked over from a yard away, boosting the Aycock lead to 14-0 at intermission.

The Falcons pushed it to 21-0 with another score in the third quarter. Thomas did the honors on this one, racing 50 yards with the ball.

North Pitt finally got on the board after Ronald Burney recovered the ball on the Panther 38 yard line on a Falcon fumble. On the first play after the turnover, Calvin Hunter hit Darrick Mullins with a 62-yard bomb. Maurice Jones took a pass from Hunter for the PAT, cutting the lead to 21-8 with five seconds left in the third period.

The Panthers drove again in the fourth quarter, and Chauncey Staton recovered a Mullins fumble in the end zone for the second score. Ray Ebron kicked the PAT to pull the Panthers within striking distance, but they were unable to mount another drive.

Tim Alston led the Aycock offense with 98 yards on 11 carries.

The win leaves Aycock at 1-6, 1-2 in Eastern Carolina play. North Pitt slumps to 0-6 overall and 0-3 in the league.

Ahoskie Rallies To Top Pam Pack

AHOSKIE — Danny Whitaker scored two touchdowns as Ahoskie dominated play and gained a 17-6 Northeastern Conference football game Friday.

Ahoskie took control of the game early and didn't give Washington much of a chance to move the ball. Although Washington had three chances to score in the second quarter, Ahoskie broke only once, as Ronnie Godley scored on a three-yard run to give the Pam Pack a 6-3 lead to carry into the second half.

Ahoskie's so dominated play, however, that they held over an eight-minute advantage in time of possession, controlling the ball 27:42. Washington had it only 19:18.

An example of that came in the first scoring drive of the Cougars. They took over the ball with 9:04 left in the first quarter and kept it the rest of the period. William Leary booted a 21 yard field goal on the first play of the second period to finally end that drive, giving Ahoskie a temporary 3-0 lead.

In the third quarter, Ahoskie regained the lead on Whitaker's first touchdown, a six yard run. Leary added the PAT for a 10-6 edge. Whitaker's other TD came after the Cougars recovered a fumbled punt at the 25 late in the game. He scored with 37 seconds left on a 14-yard run.

Whitaker ended the game with 136 yards on 26 carries.

Washington, in its second straight loss, falls to 2-2 in the league and 3-3 overall. Ahoskie climbs to 4-2 overall and 3-2 in the conference.

Washington entertains Bertie on Friday.

Hernandez Helps Contract Talks

DETROIT (AP) — A guy like Willie Hernandez could give a sports agent the willies.

Hernandez, the relief ace of the Detroit Tigers, gave a textbook demonstration of how to negotiate your own contract Friday night while notching his first World Series save in the Detroit Tigers' 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Before the game, Hernandez held court on the sidelines, telling anyone who would listen that the Tigers had better be prepared to part with some big money if they want his services next year.Hernandez, who will become a free agent at the end of the season, is believed to be asking the notoriously frugal Tigers for about $1 million per year.

"I don't know right now," Hernandez said, dangling the carrot. "I'm just hoping to do it right. I think if we don't get to the point soon, I would say the percent is 50-50 I won't be back.

"People give me lots of credit for being one of the keys this year, but people don't want to cross the line and talk about money."

After giving the Tigers a verbal pitch, which he knew would appear in print today, Hernandez then went out and showed them the goods — as if they needed a reminder of his awesome skills.

"This has been our pattern all season," Hernandez noted afterward. "Milt (Wilcox) won 17 games and I was part of 13 of them. I think we're a good team together and I hope we can stay together."

Hernandez came on in the Padres' seventh with two out and Steve Garvey on third. Terry Kennedy drilled a Hernandez fastball to deep center field, but Chet Lemon — turning twice — chased it down at the warning track with a spectacular catch.

"When he hit the ball, I knew we were in trouble," Lemon recalled. "I said, 'Oh, my goodness!' as I ran backward. I looked over my right shoulder and the ball was on my left. If I can reach it, I'll catch it. I work hard on my fielding."

The Tigers got some unexpected offensive punch from third baseman Marty Castillo, the ninth batter in the lineup.

Castillo, a utility player who hit only four homers all season, blasted a two-run homer off Padres' starter Tim Lollar in the Detroit second with Lemon on board to launch Detroit on a four-run inning.

"I have some power, but most of my home runs have come in the minor leagues," Castillo said. "When a pitcher makes a mistake, you should hit it out."

Wilcox, the Tigers most effective pitcher in the stretch drive to the American League pennant, wasn't especially sharp, but allowed only seven hits and one run over the six innings he worked.

Wilcox said he was bothered by a sore toe. He also said his shoulder stiffened during the Tigers lengthy second inning, during which they sent 10 men to the plate.

"I didn't pitch as well as I have my last few outings," Wilcox said. "Chet and the defense ran down some mistakes and everything worked out OK."

Talk Helps Castillo's Bat

DETROIT (AP) — Late in the season, Marty Castillo sat down for a little heart to heart talk with Gates Brown, batting coach of the Detroit Tigers. The subject was hitting philosophy.

"He asked me what I think about when I'm up at bat," Castillo said. "I told him if I'm hitting .179 I get tense, thinking I've got to get a hit or else I'm hitting .173."

That, advised Brown, is no way to approach this difficult business of using a round bat to hit a round ball squarely.

"He said you can't do that. You've got to think of hitting the baseball. You've got maybe three-tenths of a second from the time the pitcher releases the ball to do that. If you hit .150, then you hit .150. Just swing the bat, be aggressive. Don't take so many pitches."

So Castillo, one of the Tigers' most carefree players in the clubhouse, loosened up at the plate, too. It paid off with a clutch two-run homer that triggered Detroit's 5-2 victory in Game 3 of the World Series Friday night.

"I'm not really surprised I hit it out," Castillo said, with all the aplomb of a man who has six career homers in the majors. "I know I have power. When you get a mistake pitch, you should hit it out of the ballpark, or at least hit it hard somewhere."

Castillo has been a Tiger handyman. He signed as an infielder, but also serves as the team's backup catcher behind Lance Parrish. He's been at third base against left-handers in the postseason. There was a time last summer when the club even toyed with turning him into a pitcher.

"I've got the best split fingered fastball on the team," he boasted. "We worked on it from July until September last year and then they pulled the plug on it. I had pitched before. Catching scared the heck out of me. But pitching every fourth day — that would be like stealing a living."

Castillo's home run came on the day his wife, Julie, was due to give birth to their first child. She was at the game.

There is a lot of little kid in the father-to-be, who is the class clown in the Tiger dressing room. One of his more memorable pranks involved a pair of handcuffs and infielder Howard Johnson. The best part, he says, came when he threatened to throw the key away.

"I'm a little off the wall," he said. "I do whatever comes to mind. It's just good-natured fun."

Catch Was No Surprise Move

DETROIT (AP) — Center fielder Chet Lemon has been making great running catches all season for Detroit, so when he did it again at a critical moment in Friday night's third game of the World Series, Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson took it in stride.

With two outs in the seventh inning, the Padres had already scored once to cut the lead to 5-2 and had another runner perched at third. Terry Kennedy lined a shot to deep center that Lemon ran down about 420 feet from home plate.

"When he hit the ball, I knew we were in trouble," Lemon, regarded as one of baseball's best center fielders, said. "I put my head down and ran back as fast as I could. When I looked up, the ball was there."

Lemon turned his back to the infield while racing toward the 440-foot mark, looked over his left shoulder and then turned around to catch the ball with an outstretched glove.

"I thought Chester made a good catch, but I've seen so much of it from him, it doesn't excite me," Anderson said.

Kennedy was the first batter to face Tigers reliever Willie Hernandez, who preserved the 5-2 Detroit victory.

Lemon Felt He Couldn't Make It

DETROIT (AP) — Chet Lemon, one of baseball's fastest and best center fielders, knew he was in trouble.

"As soon he hit the baseball, I said, 'Oh, my goodness,'" Lemon recounted.

The Detroit Tigers had a 5-1 lead entering the seventh inning of Game 3 of the World Series Friday night against the San Diego Padres, but it didn't hold.A one-out single by Tony Gwynn, a double by Steve Garvey and a sacrifice fly by Graig Nettles made it 5-2 and put a runner on third.

Lefty Willie Hernandez, the ace of the Detroit bullpen, was summoned to face the left-handed Terry Kennedy.A scratch single would have brought the tying run to the plate.

Kennedy went for more. He lined a ball deep into the caverns of center field.

"When he hit it, I knew we were in trouble," Lemon said.

Lemon took off at the crack of the bat, turned his back on the infield and streaked toward the 440-foot mark in center.

"I started to look over my right shoulder but it was over my left shoulder," he said. "When I looked up, the ball was there."

Lemon turned around at the last second and managed to catch the ball while facing the plate, about 415 feet away.

"It was just a fly ball once I got there," he said, smiling.

Kennedy, one of the slower Padres, was rounding first base when the ball settled into Lemon's mitt.

"I didn't see it," Kennedy said, visibly frustrated. "When I hit a ball good, someone catches it."

Hernandez finished up to preserve the 5-2 victory that gave Detroit a two games to one lead in the Series.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson and Milt Wilcox, who had started on the mound for the Tigers, said Lemon had been making those kind of plays all season.

"I thought Chester made a good catch, but I've seen so much of it from him, it doesn't excite me," Anderson said.

Wilcox said he's seen better — from Lemon.

"He's been doing it all year," Wilcox said. "Chet made two of them this year that were a lot better than that."

We couldn't make them tougher. So we made them lighter.

Deer Season — Tomorrow moring at sunrise marks the opening of the deer season (gun season in eastern North Carolina).

The outlook is for a gook season this year with a lot of bucks in the eastern herd. The season will be open from October 15 through January 1. Bag limit is two daily; possession of two and a seasonal limit of four. A special doe season will be held in all of Pitt County this year on November 28 and 29.

Fox Season — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission adopted fox seasons in two counties at a meeting in Raleigh on Sept. 24.

Fox seasons were adopted in Camden and Johnston counties, and the seasons will run from Jan. 5-26. Foxes may be harvested by permit only and must be properly tagged. A limited number of fox tags — based on studies of local fox populations conducted by wildlife commission biologists — will be issued in each county.

Application for fox permits may be obtained from license agents in these two counties and should be returned before Nov. 1 to the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, Fox Harvest Permits, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. A random drawing will then be held to award permits.

Turkey Shoot Sweepstakes — President Reagan commended Eugene A. Bay Jr., publisher of Field and Stream magazine for its role in helping thousands of volunteer fire departments raise funds.

Field and Stream has teammed with the National Volunteer Fire Council in a special promotion called the 1984 Turkey Shoot Sweepstakes. One is being held right now in our area. Each winner in the turkey shoot will have a chance to win a fabulous free trip to Cabo San Lucas in Mexico for three days of deep sea fishing and a number of great prizes.

The promotion is being funded by Field and Stream and these corporate sponsors: Ford Division, Casio, Arrow Fastener Co., Black and Decker, Goodyear, Winchester, DeKuyper, Shimano, Stroh Brewery, Schrade, Anderson Designs, U.S. Repeating Arms, Ford Motor Company and Purina. In addition, Casio has donated thousands of their new Watersport Watches and Shimano has donated GT Fightin' Rods to be raffled. All funds go to volunteer fire companies for use in their local communities.

In this area the following fire departments will participate: Simpson Rural Fire Department Sept. 19 through Nov. 25; Falkland Volunteer Fire Department Oct. 26; Belvoir Volunteer Fire Department Oct. 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16 and 21.

Fishing Report — As this is being written, Hurricane Josephine is skirting the North Carolina coastal area controlling most of the offshore fishing. If she maintains her current track, fishing right on the beach and inland should continue to be good. Large spot and average size flounder are biting in Bogue Inlet and Bogue Sound. Fresh shrimp and stingray grubs are the baits to use. Bluefish and puppy drum have been abundant from Portsmouth Island north to Hatteras. Inland, grey trout are biting in the Pamlico River in and around Sparrow's Point. White Perch continue to hit fresh water shrimp well near Washington.

The Tar River is just right for fishing. Good catches of crappie and river robin have been reported. Use minnows for the crappie and crickets for the robin.

If the weather holds, there should be great fishing ahead!

Steelers Have No Easy Days

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

From the Miami Dolphins one Sunday to the San Francisco 49ers the next, things haven't been easy for the Pittsburgh Steelers these days.

"I don't think I've seen a better team on film," Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll said as he prepared his Steelers for the undefeated 49ers in Sunday's National Football League game. "I haven't seen a team play with the intensity that they've played with. They're relentless."

The 49ers will be trying to improve their record to 7-0 when they play the Steelers, 3-3, at Candlestick Park in a matchup of division leaders. The 49ers lead the National Football Conference West while the Steelers are atop the AFC Central.

The Dolphins, the only other unbeaten team in the NFL, went to 6-0 by burying Pittsburgh 31-7 last Sunday on the Steelers' home field.

"It was their show all the way," Noll said after the Dolphins' victory. But he sized up the 49ers at mid-week by saying, "From what I've seen on film, I think the 49ers are a much better football team (than Miami) in all areas."

The 49ers are coming off their most convincing victory of the season, a 31-10 Monday night triumph over the New York Giants.

The Redskins-Cowboys game may feature a personal milestone for Washington's John Riggins, who needs only 24 yards to become the fifth back in NFL history to rush for 10,000 yards in his career. But both teams are more interested in the game.

The Cowboys were 31-20 losers at home to St. Louis last week and Gary Hogeboom was lifted in the third quarter and replaced at quarterback by Danny White, the man Hogeboom displaced at the start of the season. Hogeboom will be back as the starter against the Redskins, who trounced Indianapolis 35-7 last week as quarterback Joe Theismann doubled his total for the season with four touchdown passes.

The Bears get back to business following Walter Payton's historic afternoon last Sunday against New Orleans when he broke Jim Brown's career rushing record. Featured in the meeting of old rivals will be a matchup between the Cardinals' offense, ranked No. 2 in the NFL, and the Bears' defense, which stands No. 1.

"They get after you, they blitz you, they are reckless," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said. "They've got some people that will flat-out hit you. Chicago is so complex. They're coming from all sides."

The Oilers play their first game following the trade of star running back Earl Campbell.The trade, which earned the Oilers a 1985 first-round draft choice, robbed Coach Hugh Campbell of much of his offense.

"We will not de-emphasize the running game," Campbell said. "This just means Larry Moriarity will have to take a little heavier burden."

Moriarity, in his second year in the NFL, sat out last week's 13-3 loss to the previously winless Cincinnati Bengals with sore ribs. He has gained only 93 yards rushing this season, while Campbell had amassed 278.

The trade placed more pressure on Oilers' quarterback Warren Moon, who came to Houston from the Canadian Football League amid much fanfare during the off-season. Moon has hit 81 of 172 passes for 1,203 yards, but thrown only four touchdowns strikes in six games.

The Raiders almost certainly will be without starting quarterback Jim Plunkett, who suffered a pulled stomach muscle during the first quarter of last Sunday's game against Seattle.

But that didn't hurt the Raiders.

Marc Wilson filled in for Plunkett and completed 12 of 19 passes for 309 yards and two touchdowns as the Raiders won 28-14. Wilson will start against the Vikings, who dropped a wild 35-31 decision at Tampa Bay last weekend.

The Vikings lost to the Bucs despite the fact that they led 14-0 at one stage and rolled up 543 yards in total offense to 314 for Tampa Bay.

Raiders Coach Tom Flores doesn't expect an easy time against the Vikings, even though his team is favored by 10 points.

"They're a pretty good football team, all you have to do is look at the film to find that out," Flores said. "They move the ball, they're averaging a ton of yards and they're getting healthier on defense. They're going to play us hard. They're a very scrappy team that plays with a lot of emotion.

"The last four weeks have been a very tough part of our schedule. I don't see it changing. Everyone plays us tough."

Byers Calls For Stronger NCAA Policing Measures

NEW YORK (AP) — Acknowledging that the National Collegiate Athletic Association is losing ground in its battle against athletic abuses, executive director Walter Byers has called for stronger policing measures.

"We're not keeping up with the chase," Byers said in an interview in today's New York Times. "I've talked with our representatives and people I respect and the problem is much worse than I thought."

For the first time acknowledging the size of payments to athletes — which he estimates to be up to $20,000 or more a year — Byers said illegal payments and other improprieties are so widspread that a convention of university presidents is needed to explore the possibility of a stronger violations code.

Byers would not identify schools or athletes involved in receiving payments, but did reveal that the violators are using "sophisticated techniques" to get the payments to the athletes. He also said that most violations occur in football and basketball.

Among the penalties Byers said he would like to see for the most serious cases are more routine curtailment of scholarships, dismissals of coaching staffs and suspensions of team schedules for one year or more.

Byers, interviewed at the NCAA offices at Shawnee Mission, Kan., said: "I have the belief that an overwhelming number of people — the presidents, athletic directors, faculty and coaches — want a better world in intercollegiate athletics. I think they will embrace a new order."

Dr. John Ryan, the president of Indiana University and chairman of the Presidents Commission, which was formed to look into problems facing intercollegiate athletics, said Friday the commission is agreeable to holding a convention.

Three Among Golfing Winners

ROCKY MOUNT — Several Brook Valley women were among the winners at this week's Ladies Eastern League Association at Benvenue Country Club.

Business Notes

Agent Recognized

Robert E. Moseley Sr., local representative of Southern Life Insurance Co., has been named to the Greensboro headquarter company's $2 million insurance in force roster, the firm announced.

Southern Life said Moseley qualified for the honor as a result of his sales and service record for policyowners in Greenville and surrounding areas.

CFC Designation

William H. Fleming of Greenville has received the Chartered Financial Consultant designation which enables him to offer financial planning services to his clients.

Fleming is associated with Arthur DeBerry & Associates Inc. of Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. He is a district agent with offices at 114 E. Third St. in Greenville.

APIS Meeting

The American Production and Inventory Society will meet Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Hatteras Yachts in New Bern for a plant tour and cruise on the Neuse River. Dinner will be at 6:30 p.m. at Clancy O'Hara's Restaurant.

Reservations for the dinner and tour should be made by calling 757-6836 by Monday.

Project In Germany

Eastern Omni Constructors Inc., an industrial contractor based in Greenville, was recently awarded an industrial construction contract for a project to be built in West Germany, according to Harry Sloan, company president.

Sloan said the project, to be completed before the end of next year, is being performed for Procter & Gamble in Euskirchen, West Germany, approximately 20 miles from the capital city of Bonn.

He said all of the workforce for the project will be supplied from Eastern Omni's North Carolina staff, including management and craftpersons.

New TRC Office

TRC Temporary Services Inc., an Atlanta based corporation, has announced that Judy Harrington will be the owner/operator of the company's new Greenville office at 219-A Commerce St.

JUDY HARRINGTON

The company said the new owner and her staff will offer companies in Greenville and surrounding areas both clerical and industrial temporary personnel.

Sales Increased

Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. has announced that it recorded a 5.1 percent increase in sales during the first quarter of fiscal 1985.

A. Dano Davis, president, said overall sales during the 12 weeks ended Sept. 19 amounted to $1,732,010,000 compared with $1,647,976,000 during the same period last year, a gain of $84,034,000. He said total earnings increased to $19,463,000 from $19,399,000 during the comparable period of 1983.

The company reported the opening of 18 new stores and the closing of 11 units since June 27, resulting in 1,238 units in operation on Sept. 19.

Financial Conference

Leon Smith Jr., Hugh Thompson and Jim Bengala, local registered representatives of IDS/American Express, attended a conference presented in Raleigh recently by Dick Weller, senior vice president.

The session was on "Progressive Corporate Strategies for the Personal Financial Planner."

IDS/American Express, which reported more than $18 billion under management, serves the personal and business markets.

Senior VP Named

William D. Reagan Jr., president of North State Financial Corp. of Greenville, has announced that Janice C. Boone has been promoted to senior vice president.

Ms. Boone, who joined North State in July as manager of central loan servicing, is responsible for all areas of residential and commercial loan servicing. Prior to joining the firm, she worked with Suburban Savings & Loan in Annadale, Va., as assistant vice president and loan administration manager.

North State Financial Corp. has assets in excess of $300 million and operates 20 offices in North Carolina and Virginia.

CLA Committee Post

William C. (Bill) Bowen, who operates the Wash House coin launderies and the Clothes Hanger dry cleaners in Greenville, was elected to serve on the executive committee of the national Coin Laundry Association recently in New York. He was elected to the CLA board last January.

Bowen is past president of the state Coin Laundry Association and serves on the board of directors of the N.C. Dry Cleaners Association. He is married to the former Trudy Williford of Windsor and they have two children.

The national association represents manufacturers, distributors and coin store operators in the United States and Canada.

London Convention

J.D. Wilson Jr., Greenville agent for Volunteer State Life Insurance Co., a Chubb LifeAmerica Co., returned recently from London where he attended the company's 1984 convention.

Qualification for the session was based on sales and service records during the 18-month qualification period which preceded the convention. The company said Wilson received recognition in the Hall of Honor, Volunteer's highest group.

UC Retirement

Union Carbide Corp. has announced the retirement of Mary F. Alvan from the Greenville plant after 10 years of service as plant nurse.

Mrs. Alvan was honored by the company and local employees with a retirement party. J. Mick Maxon, plant manager, presented Mrs. Alvan a 10-year certificate.

Accountants Meet

Short term investments and borrowing will be discussed at Wednesday's meeting of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants at Greenville Country Club. A social hour begins at 6:15 p.m.

Steven A. Savia of Manager Advisory Services, Deloitte, Haskins and Sells of Charlotte, will talk on investing and borrowing over the short run.

For more information contact Diane Hurley at 752-4126.

Employees Cited

Lillie Norfleet and James P. Matthews, operator and key equipment installer repairer, respectively, were recognized by Carolina Telephone in Greenville recently for having completed 15 years of service.

A native of Pitt County, Ms. Norfleet resides in Greenville with her husband. They attend Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church.

Asset Growth

North State Financial Corp., parent company of North State Savings & Loan Corp. and North State Savings & Loan Corp. of Southern Pines, experienced an asset growth of over 240 percent for the nine-month period ended Dec. 31, according to the firm's annual report.

North State said it now has 20 offices including 18 branch locations and over $295 million in assets.

The growth was highlighted by mergers with Wilson Savings & Loan (May 1983 - $24 million in assets) and New Bern Savings & Loan (November 1983 - $58 million in assets), and the acquisition of First Colony Savings and Loan (August 1983 - $101 million in assets).

North State began the year as a local savings institution with six offices and $86 million in assets.

Name Change

The North Carolina Oil Jobbers Association has announced that after 57 years, it is changing its name to North Carolina Petroleum Marketers Association at the end of October.

The statewide non-governmental trade group will retain is present Raleigh headquarters.

N.C. Merchandise

Sears, Roebuck and Co. has announced that it bought $1.3 billion in merchandise from 372 suppliers in North Carolina in 1983.

Edward R. Telling, chairman and chief executive officer, said Sears' five business groups employed 8,383 North Carolina residents, paid $34,108,919 in state and local taxes and operated 159 stores, offices and other facilities in North Carolina in 1983.

Worldwide, Sears has 450,000 employees, including 312,000 in the merchandise group in the United States. North Carolina is home to 12,430 Sears shareholders, who owned 3,735,015 shares of stock at the end of 1983.

Sales Rose

Onions May Soon Show Up In Pantyhose

VIDALIA, Ga. (AP) — You're likely to see onions in pantyhose, as well as in salad, particularly if the onions come from Vidalia and you follow the advice of Dick Walden of the Vidalia Chamber of Commerce.

"Vidalia onions, grown only in Georgia, are popular all over the United States, due to their unusually sweet taste and juiciness," says Walden. "They're so mild, in fact, that some onion lovers eat these large, sweet onions all by themselves."

But these gentle giants present an unusual storage problem. They tend to spoil if the skins touch one another.

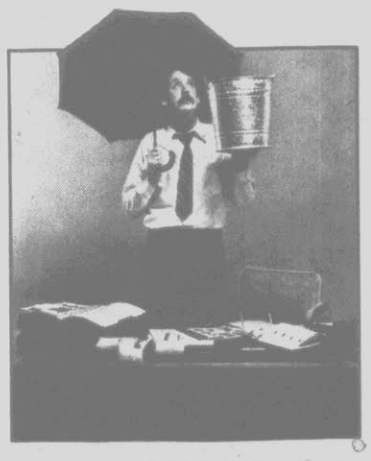
Nylon pantyhose offer the solution, according to the Fiber Information Center, a service of the Man-Made Fiber Producers Association.

The elasticity and breathability of the man-made fiber makes pantyhose the perfect container to keep your Vidalias tasty and fresh, the center says.

Simply place an onion in the foot of the stocking and tie a knot. Repeat with a second onion. Continue to knot the stocking until all your onions are secured.

Knotting your onions up in pantyhose separates them and provides adequate ventilation to retard spoilage. Then place your onion chain link on a nail in a cool, dark place, such as a basement or garage.

Stop your leaky roof from draining profits.



If your company's building has an old roof, you spend a lot of money keeping it weathertight.

Money that's coming out of your bottom line.

We can plug that drain on profits by covering your old roof with a new MR-24® standing seam roof by Butler. It can be installed without interrupting business below. It'll cut your energy bills.

And it can cost less to maintain over the years than an ordinary roof.

Orange Juice Futures Fall

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Orange juice futures prices plunged Friday on the Cotton Exchange in New York in re-sponse to a report of better pro-duction in Florida than had been expected.

The Agriculture Department on Thursday forecast this year's production in Florida, the major orange growing state, at 119 million 90-pound boxes, sharply higher than most analysts had expected, and projected the yield at 1.46 pounds of concentrate per box, sharply higher than last year's.

As a result, orange juice fu-tures prices fell 5 cents a pound, the daily limit, as soon as trading opened Friday. Some analysts felt the price would continue to fall Monday as well.

Judy Weissman, an orange juice analyst in New York with Shearson Lehman-American Express, noted that many spec-ulators had bought contracts in previous weeks as reports of a bacterial infection in Florida tree nurseries caused concern about damage to the crop.

But so far, the infection, cit-rus canker, has been found only in nurseries, and some of those were freed from a government-imposed quarantine Friday. As a result, many speculators have been caught holding contracts while prices have been falling and their attempts to sell contributed to the price slide, Ms. Weissman said.

Paul Redstone, an analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities, noted that a recent report released by the Florida Department of Citrus also anticipated a sharp pro-duction increase in Brazil, which supplies the United States with juice when domes-tic production falls short.

But Pamela Rockley, an analyst in New York with Per-shing Futures, said the current slide could prompt buying by speculators, as the freeze sea-son in Florida is approaching, a time when prices generally ral-ly at the mere hint of tree-dam-aging frost.

Orange juice fell 5 cents in all delivery months with the contract for delivery in Novem-ber at 170.95 cents a pound.

Corn and soybean futures prices were higher and wheat was lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices rallied primarily in re-sponse to Thursday's harvest forecast released by the Agri-culture Department, which low-ered its estimates for the corn and soybean harvests.

Walter Spilka, a grain analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said professional specula-tors dominated the buy-ing, while commercial concerns that process and export grains were among the sellers.

The forecast for rainfall over the weekend also discouraged selling that would have been done by grain merchandisers in anticipation of harvest progress over the weekend, Spilka said.

Wheat settled ¼ cent to 2 cents lower with the contract for delivery in December at $3.47¾ a bushel; corn was 3¼ cents to 5½ cents higher with December at $2.83 a bushel; oats were ¾ cent to 2 cents higher with December at $1.79¾ a bushel; and soybeans were 11¾ cents to 13½ cents higher with November at $6.25 a bushel.

Cattle and frozen pork belly prices were lower and live hogs were mostly higher in light, featureless trading on the Chi-cago Mercantile Exchange.

Hog prices were higher de-spite anticipation of lower cash prices on wholesale markets Monday, said Phil Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc. Much of the buying was said to be coming from speculators.

Much of the selling in the cattle pit appeared to come from traders who were closing out positions to take profits after a generally buoyant performance all week, Stanley said.

Live cattle settled .23 cent to .50 cent lower with October at 62.62 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .20 cent to .50 cent lower with October at 65.72 cents a pound; live hogs were unchanged to .18 cent higher with October at 45.20 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .20 cent to .45 cent lower with February at 66.12 cents a pound.

Gold and silver prices rallied on the Commodity Exchange in New York, despite a decline in the Producer Price Index, a measure of wholesale prices.

Marty McNeill, a metals analyst in New York at Dominick and Dominick, said traders had anticipated a price decline in response to the report, but when metals remained steady, those who had sold contracts rushed to buy them back and that prompted the rally.

Gold settled $5 higher in all delivery months with the contract for delivery in October at $341.70 a troy ounce; silver settled 23.5 cents to 25.4 cents higher with October at $7.332 a troy ounce.

UAW Bargainers Meet With Ford

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Negotiators for Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers returned to the bargaining table Saturday after making some progress in long hours of work on a contract for 115,000 U.S. autoworkers.

Meanwhile, UAW members at General Motors Corp. moved to within several thousand votes of ratifying their tentative agreement with the No. 1 U.S. carmaker. The final tally was to be announced Sunday night.

The Ford talks reconvened at the company's world headquarters the day after negotiators bargained past their informal deadline of noon Friday.

"Progress was being made," chief Ford negotiator Peter Pestillo said in a statement.

The union gave no official indication of the status of the talks. Earlier, UAW President Owen Bieber also said progress was being made, and the union never set a strike deadline, another indication of progress.

The bargainers met Saturday at the sub-committee level, discussing wages, benefits and seniority, said Ford spokesman Tony Fredo.

Unlike some other unions, the UAW initials all parts of its contracts at once, instead of a part at a time. For that reason, neither side announces that agreement has been reached on an issue until all are completed.

The GM accord, covering 350,000 workers, was reached Sept. 21. It includes a wage hike averaging about 2.25 percent each year for three years, plus a $1 billion program to compensate and retrain workers displaced by productivity gains and shifting of work to non-union and foreign facilities.

By Saturday, voting by the GM rank and file was 117,952 in favor of ratification to 82,977 against, a margin of 58.7 percent to 41.3 percent, according to unofficial returns compiled by The Associated Press.

Of 149 locals, the results of nine, representing about 19,170 workers, have not been reported. Another 10 would not disclose their vote totals, but six of those accepted the pact and four rejected it.

Like their GM counterparts, the Ford workers must ratify any agreement, and a simple majority vote is needed for passage.

The joint subcommittees working on separate contract sections at Ford met into the night Friday. Bieber took the evening off to attend the third game of the World Series between the Detroit Tigers and San Diego Padres.

Bargainers, however, did not recess to drive into downtown Detroit for Saturday afternoon's game.

Japanese Robots Become Hot Toy Item

TOKYO (AP) — Tens of millions of Japanese robots are trooping off to the United States, an invasion that is turning into one of the year's hottest toy hits.

No ordinary fighting robots, these creations are intricately crafted to fold up — through a series of complex maneuvers reminiscent of a Rubik's cube — into shapes ranging from jetfighters and racing cars to cameras and stereo cassette recorders.

Their names are as imaginative as the twists and turns it takes to transform them. There are "Tequila Gunner," "Idelian Cangrid Harbla" and "Insect Armored Corps Variable Beet Gadoll Beetrass."

Tonka Toys and Hasbro Industries of the United States have put in orders of $100 million to Bandai and Takara, Japan's No. 1 and No. 3 toymakers, respectively, to import legions of the little mechanical men in time for Christmas.

"We will ship $75-80 million wholesale this year," Dan Owens, Hasbro's vice president for marketing, said on a recent trip to Japan. "That's more than 10 million units and over three times the number of units shipped last year in Cabbage Patch dolls."

Seiichi Haga, design chief at Bandai, maker of such robots as the "MS-14C Mobile Suit Variation Gelgoog Cannon" and "ARV-C Astrogator Round Vernian Buzam," said, "Japanese children have always liked mechanical systems as well as all kinds of vehicles, so that gave us the idea to combine them."

Owens calls them "the ultimate fantasy toy."

They became popular in Japan about 10 years ago with Bandai toy versions of Biomen, five television superheros who drive block-like trucks and rockets that, when joined together, form a giant metallic warrior.

"Our most popular robots are those from television," Haga said.

Bandai, whose 1983 sales were the equivalent $260 million, and which today commands 60 percent of Japan's robot toy market, came out in 1982 with its "Machine Robot" line — miniature robots that cleverly convert into nearly every imaginable conveyance, including submarines, bulldozers, dune buggies and the American space shuttle.

Haga said he used to have about 100 stalking about his apartment, "but the neighborhood kids came and took them all away."

Twenty-four of the 40 models of machine robots are on order for the U.S. market, where they are called "Gobots."

Hasbro is going much further in marketing 27 robots it has dubbed "Transformers." Hasbro's idea department composed a 4 million-year history of the good Transformers and the bad — the "Heroic Autobots" and the "Evil Decepticons."

The Transformers are produced by Takara, which did $109 million worth of business last year. They have robotic names like "Starscream," "Optimus" and "Megatron."

"We have our own group for picking names," Owens said. "We keep them locked up in the back and feed them raw meat."

But the Americans are nowhere near to rivaling the Japanese for creativity in picking names like "HWR-10 Destroid Monster," "Bonaparte Variable Tank 61-LC Tulcas" or "WM Walker Galliar Xabungle."

"We invent names that sound strong and futuristic," said Haga, a mechanical engineer by training and the man behind the names for Bandai's "Devil Invaders" — "Zarios," "Falgos" and "Casmodon."

Takara engineers spend their time designing prototypes of new robots that convert into everyday objects, most recently microscopes, binoculars and radios, said Shusuke Kubota, head of Takara's planning department.

"They're always thinking of more unique, more fantastic ideas," Kubota said. "Half the time they're not normal."

Like any toy, though, robots represent a certain risk. Takatoku, another die-cast robot toymaker, went bankrupt in July despite smashing success with its "Macross Battroid Valkyrie VF-1S."

"They went under because of this," said toy wholesaler Yukio Munakata, holding up the 15-inch-long "Orguss Nikick Gerwalk" robot. "Kids just wouldn't buy it."

The Valkyrie folded up into a sleek F-15 Eagle jetfighter, but the Orguss series turned into heavy, ponderous spacecraft with too many rounded corners.

"It's incredibly expensive to get a robot like this on the market," Munakata said.

The designing, making of the mold and packaging of a single model can cost $40,000, he said, so "with kids' tastes, it's quite risky."

Cellular Phone Units To Be Constructed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — United TeleSpectrum Inc., a national mobile communications firm, will begin construction early next year of cellular mobile telephone systems in North Carolina and South Carolina.

United TeleSpectrum, the subsidiary of Westwood, Kan.-based United Telecommunications Inc., received approval from the Federal Communications Commission to construct the systems in the Research Triangle in North Carolina and in Charleston, S.C.

Construction of the systems will begin in early 1985, with service expected to begin in late 1985 or 1986, the company said.

Cost of the construction project in North Carolina is estimated at $5.5 million, United TeleSpectrum said. When completed, it will offer approximately 2,600 square miles of coverage in the Raleigh-Durham area. Ten "cells" will initially be constructed.

The project in South Carolina is expected to cost $3.1 million. It will offer about 1,300 square miles of coverage in the Charleston area, with five "cells" to be initially constructed.

Unlike a standard mobile telephone operation which has few channels and covers a narrow range, a cellular telephone system offers re-use of channels, so the sytsem covers a wider range and allows many more users access to mobile telephones, the company said. Cellular phones also offer increased privacy, higher quality transmission and truly portable service, to allow the user to take the telephone out of the car.

Cellular systems operate under an FCC master plan which provides for two competing systems in most major cities. The first cellular system began commercial operation last October in Chicago. Systems in other major markets are expected to come on line thoroughout 1984-85 and in subsequent years, United TeleSpectrum said.

United TeleSpectrum, based in Kansas City, is the operating majority partner in the RaleighDurham MSA Limited Partnership. The other partners are Bell South Mobility Inc., GTE Mobilnet Inc., and Carolina Cellular Radio Telephone System Inc.

United TeleSpectrum also is the operating majority partner in the Charleston-North Charleston MSA Limited Partnership. Its other partners are Home Telephone Co., Inc., GTE Mobilnet Inc., and Telephone and Data Systems Inc.

Court Divides George's Bank Fishing Area

BOSTON (AP) — A World Court decision giving Canada a section of the Georges Bank fishing ground could hurt New England's fishing industry, cut this country's seafood harvest and drive up consumer prices, industry and government officials say.

"On balance, the United States came out much worse," said James Warren, a member of the New England Fisheries Management Council and head of the Maine Sardine Council. "The fishermen have lost areas they have been fishing in for 300 years."

The World Court in The Hague, Netherlands, on Friday ended an eight-year boundary dispute between Canada and the United States by drawing an ocean boundary between New England and Nova Scotia. It left part of the fishing area under Canadian jurisdiction.

Canadian Foreign Secretary Joe Clark said the decision assures the livelihood of that country's fishermen. But in Nova Scotia, Jess Frontain, chairman of the Fisheries Council of Canada, said the ruling would force "a reduction in the job force for sure, so it is very disappointing to us."

The dispute dates back to 1976 when the United States and Canada extended their eastern coastal boundaries. The main focus of the conflict has been fishing rights in the area, but both countries are also interested potential offshore reserves of oil and natural gas.

Dick Schaefer, regional director of the National Marine Fisheries Service, said the ruling will deny U.S. fishermen access to a 6,500- to 9,000-square-mile area in the northeast "peak" of the fishing grounds — a bountiful area for scallop, haddock and cod.

But based on National Marine Fisheries figures, the boundary change could deny fishermen access to 50 percent of the haddock caught in the Georges Bank area, reducing the total U.S. haddock catch by 30 percent.

The federal agency's statistics indicate that 55 percent of the pollack, 25 percent of the cod and 35 percent of the yellowtail flounder and scallops harvested in the Georges Bank come from the area that will go to Canada.

The impact could reduce the total U.S. harvest of haddock by 30 percent, reduce the pollack catch by 25 percent and cut the harvest of redfish, scallops and yellowtail flounder by 20 percent nationally.

"The impact will depend on where the vessels that have fished the northeast peak will go," said Schaefer. "It's going to crowd more vessels into a smaller area."

The drop in supply would also be felt by the consumer, according to fish processors.

"This is an industry that responds quickly to the market," said Tom Morris, sales manager of Empire Fish Co. in Gloucester. "Demand is there so you know what will happen to price. Fish will get very expensive."

And fishing industry officials say the changes could force some fishermen out of business.

"It's not too good for U.S. fishermen," said James Costakes, general manager of the New Bedford Seafood Producers' Association. "It's clearly an area that we've been fishing for years and now we're going to be denied it."

"We're going to see ports like Gloucester and north extremely hurt by this," said Morris.

While Costakes said it was too early to predict the decision's impact, he warned the new boundary lines could cost jobs in New Bedford, the region's largest fishing port.

James A. Wilson, a University of Maine economist who testified before the World Court on behalf of the United States, said U.S. and Canadian fishermen both lost important fisheries.

"I guess what it does more than anything is set up a whole new set of problems. Certainly, it's not a clear win," Wilson said. "I guess we could have flipped a coin and done the same thing."

Machinists End Walkout

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A nearly 2-week-old walkout by the International Association of Machinists has ended with members voting to accept a three-year contract with the National Steel and Shipbuilding Co.

Friday's vote by slightly more than 800 machinists followed the lead of six other shipyard unions. In exchange for work rule changes that will allow members of one union to perform another union's work, the company agreed to a 36-cent-an-hour raise this year and 25 cents more in each of the last two years of the contract.

Joseph P. Flynn, a company vice president, said work begins in January on two supertankers ordered by Exxon Corp. The $250 million project involves the first commercial tankers to be built in the United States in three years.

Elizabeth Hunsucker Marries Lt. Burtnett

MRS. BURTNETT

Elizabeth Graves Hunsucker and lst Lt. Howard Lee Burtnett were united in marriage at the Winterville Baptist Church at the Winterville Baptist Church Saturday at 4 p.m.

The Rev. Bill Leary officiated at the double ring ceremony which included lighting the unity candles by the couple and their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Hunsucker of Winterville are parents of the bride and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. B. Joe Burtnett of Memphis, Tenn., and the late Howard Burtnett.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Elizabeth Braxton and Gary Rivenbark accompanied some selections with chimes. Madge Dews Thompson sang "He Has Chosen You For Me." Mrs. Thompson, Elizabeth Davis Smart, Tony Lynn Smart and Mrs. Peter C. Eure sang a selection.

The bride wore a formal gown designed by Sassoon featuring imported ivory schiffli embroidered English net over taffeta. The slip styled gown was enhanced at the waistline with a belt of ivory satin and was complemented by a bolero length jacket in the sheer lace fashioned with a circular neckline and long bishop sleeves. She wore a circlet of ivory silk flowers with ivory satin ribbon streamers. She carried a cascade of white bridal roses, rubrum lilies with stephanotis and lily of the valley. It was accented with miniature ivy, antique lace and ribbon.

Paula Eloise Hunsucker, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of ming faille taffeta designed with an open V-neckline outlined in a band of self-fabric edged in ruffled taffeta. The gown also featured three-quarter length pouf sleeves. The modified natural waistline was enhanced by a sash of ming taffeta. She wore a matching circlet of silk flowers with satin ribbon trim.

Bridesmaids were Lisa Burtnett Horton, sister of the bridegroom of Middletown, N.J., and Katherine Jo Ann Haislip of Greenville. Their gowns were styled like that of the honor attendant. Each carried a nosegay of pink roses, rubrum lilies, tinted daisies, miniature ivy, baby's breath and matching ribbon.

Charles Raisor of Jasper, Ga., was best man and groomsmen were Jeffery Horton, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Middletown, N.J., and Merle Dennis of Greenville.

Mamie Dews directed the wedding and Lynn Hunsucker presided at the guest register.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of ashes of roses with matching accessories. The mother of the bridegroom wore a street length dress of jewel green with matching accessories. Both were remembered with white orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Assisting in serving were Helen Lawrence, Elizabeth Smart, Carol Sumrell and Beverly White. Bags of bird seed were distributed to guests.

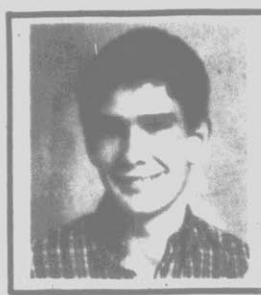
The couple entertained the wedding party at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Colonial Inn in Farmville and a wedding luncheon was given by the mother of the bridegroom at the Three Steers.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mamie News and Madge Thompson at the Greenville Country Club Friday. Other parties included a tea and a dinner.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College and the East Carolina University School of Nursing. She was employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and was an instructor at PCC.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and ECU School of Nursing. He is presently assigned at Reynolds Army Hospital, Fort Sill, Okla.

Following a wedding trip to Kiawah Island, S.C., the couple will live in Lawton, Okla.



On The Young Side

By CLAY DEANHARDT

Congratulations are definitely in order for Mrs. Dorothy Brannan, a government and world studies teacher here at Rose High. After many dedicated years of teaching young students, Mrs. Brannan has been recognized by the school and the Greenville City Schools as the teacher of the year. From here she will participate in several levels of competition leading eventually to the state level. We wish her the best of luck!

Each year the Quill and Scroll National Honor Society inducts several new members into its ranks based on grades, outside activities, and "journalistic excellence." This year's inductees, and returning members from last year, are Clay Deanhardt, Kim Edwards, Leah Harris, Grace Jendrasiak, Nancy Johnson, Renee Kirven, Destardi Moye, Ginny Robbins, Sara Scott, Christa Welborn, Tim Wood and John Whichard.

The new uniforms for the Rose High Marching Band finally arrived last week, and just in time to be previewed at the football game last Friday night. Then the band showed their stuff at the Edenton Peanut Festival Band Competition, where they were given a rating of "excellent." This year's drum majors, Kelly Jones and Michael Wooten, were ranked third overall.

Persons wishing to participate in a week-long session of the Presidential Classroom need to bring $50 to Mrs. Creech as soon as possible. The guidance office would also like to remind juniors and sophomores interested in taking the PSAT to register as soon as possible for the Oct. 20 testing date. Registration has been extended, and this is the only time the test will be given at Rose this year.

Also from the guidance office: Nov. 20 is the registration date for the Sally Southall Cotton Scholarship, which is provided by the Junior Woman's Club, with top consideration being given to Juniorettes.

There will be a paper career day at Weyerhauses on Nov. 8 with information being given on careers in the paper industry and on related scholarships. Anyone interested should see Mrs. Creech to get a needed a reservation.

The current events quiz for the Century III leadership program will be given Oct. 22 in room 107 at 2:35 p.m. Interested people should see Mrs. Creech.

Duke University will hold an open house at the Sheraton in Greenville Oct. 24 from 7-9 p.m. for interested persons. A representative from Salem College will be at Rose during lunch on Oct. 31.

Our new teacher for this week is Will Wiberg, who has been the soccer coach at Rose for three years while teaching at St. Peter's. Now he is teaching government here. A graduate of East Carolina University, Wiberg believes that the atmosphere at Rose is positive and that the school spirit of the staff and students is good. The school is also very proud of his soccer team, which, in only its third year of existence, is undefeated in conference play and is the top team in the conference. Recently the team defeated Wilson Hunt, breaking that school's domination over the Big East conference and giving Rose sole possession of first place! Congratulations to Coach Wiberg and his team for a job well done!

SAUCE DESSERT

1 tablespoon cornstarch
6 tablespoons cocoa
¾ cup sugar
1 cup hot water
1 tablespoon light or dark corn syrup
½ tablespoon butter
¾ teaspoon vanilla
Chocolate cake squares and vanilla ice cream

In a 1-quart saucepan thoroughly stir together cornstarch, cocoa and sugar. Gradually stir in water, keeping smooth; add corn syprup. Over moderate heat stir constantly until boiling and as thick as half-and-half. Off heat stir in butter and vanilla. Makes about 1 cup. Top squares of chocolate cake with scoops of vanilla ice cream and chocolate sauce.

ELLEN'S CHICKEN

3½- to 4-pound chicken, quartered
1-3rd cup cracker meal
2 teaspoons crushed dried tarragon
2 teaspoons paprika
1 teaspoon curry powder
Salt to taste
4 tablespoons vegetable oil

Wash chicken and dry with paper towels. On wax paper stir together cracker meal, tarragon, paprika, curry powder and salt. Dip chicken in oil to coat each quarter well; dip in cracker mixture so quarters are covered. Place skin side down in a shallow baking dish (about 12 by 9 by 2 inches). Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 25 minutes; turn chicken skin side up and continue baking until tender and golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes longer. Makes 4 servings.

Couple Speaks Vows In Ceremony

Patricia Grace Embler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Embler of Alexander, and James Taylor Wagstaff Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor Wagstaff Sr. of Ayden, were united in marriage Saturday.

The Rev. Gilbert Mister performed the double ring ceremony at 8 p.m. in the First Baptist Church in Ayden. John Wooten played the organ and vocalists were Marilyn Moore and Lynward Dudley.

Sandra Embler of Augusta, Ga., sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the matron of honor was Rhesa Hufford of Winterville, sister of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids included Sandra Liverman of Plymouth, sister of the bridegroom, Kimberly and Regina Cabe of Alexander.

Nicole Kerlee of Alexander, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. Joshua Hufford of Winterville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Jeff Wagstaff of Fayetteville, brother of the bridegroom, was head usher. Other ushers were Forrest Dwyer of Charleston, S.C., Charles Dunn and Charles Westbrook of Ayden. Junior ushers included Brad Hufford of Winterville and Scott Liverman of Plymouth, nephews of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown with a candlelight satin bodice with a wedding band neckline covered with Bavarian netting and lace accented by seed pearls and sequins. The satin circular skirt was accented with scalloped silk alencon lace. Her hat was accented by matching alencon lace with seed pearls with a fingertip length veil and she carried a bouquet of cream silk roses accented by mauve, pink and blue ruffled baby's breath backed with hand-crocheted lace.

Each of the attendants wore a rose colored satin taffeta dress with a Victorian sweetherart neckline and a bustle dropped waistline. Their flowers were similar to the bride's bouquet in colors of mauve, pink, blue and cream in a colonial shape with cascading pink and cream ribbons.

The flower girl wore a satin candlelight dress with an overlay of alencon lace and seed pearls. The waistline was accented by a rose colored cummerbund. She carried a cream hand-crocheted basket with silk sweetheart roses with accents of pink, blue, mauve ruffled baby's breath.

A reception was held at the Ramada Inn. Cake was served by Rhonda Geutis of Farmville and punch was poured by Meth Moulton of Greenville. Greeting guests and saying goodbyes were Bobbie Brandon, aunt of the bridegroom of Bethesda, Md.

The couple will live in Charleston, S.C., after a cruise to the Carribean.

The bridegroom is a paramedic with the Charleston County Emergency Mewdical Services. She will work at Medical University of South Carolina as a registered nurse. She graduated from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and was attending East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and Western Carolina University.

A rehearsal dinner pig picking was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday night. Several bridal showers were held prior to the ceremony.

MRS. WAGSTAFF

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The private bastions for men and women are crumbling.

There isn't a day goes by that another volley does not blast a hole in the "FOR MEN ONLY" sanctuary or an invasion of men isn't noted in an area that used to be exclusive for women.

It began with the unisex bar stool and progressed to locker rooms, beauty shops, home ec classes, health spas, altars, delivery rooms and service clubs. The sex barriers came tumbling down one by one.

Someone observed there is no place left anymore where a man can go to be alone or a woman can find solace away from men.

Au contraire. I don't know where men go for privacy, but I can name a lot of places where women can find more peace and solitude than anyone has a right to have.

One of them is in the kitchen after a big meal when all the food has been eaten and a favorite television show is about to begin. You can hear a pin drop as you go about preparing to wash all those dirty dishes and the only way you'll know anyone else is in the house is when you hear, "Give us a break! Wait until the commercial to run that garbage disposal, will you?"

And how about the living room when it has just been painted and the drop cloths are all around and the paint cans are open and your husband says, "Well, that does it. Don't forget to use masking tape on the windows when you do the panes and on the floor when you do the woodwork. And watch that ladder when you put it away; it's a little rickety."

You don't know isolation until your husband returns from a fishing trip and dumps 20 pounds of slime in the sink uncleaned and unscaled while he goes to shower.

And no matter how hectic holidays are, I know that the family is going to give me that quiet time alone where not only men, but children wouldn't dream of entering . . . right after Christmas when there is nothing left but a Christmas tree to undecorate and the only gifts left under the tree are the ones to be returned without sales slips.

A lot of people fear an egalitarian eociety. They say if women can infiltrate a Junior Chamber of Commerce meeting, or a man can have a manicure next to a woman under a hair dryer, we will sacrifice that great "difference" that has typified the sexes throughout the years.

Not to worry. I would venture a guess that even with unisex bathrooms, only women will be admitted into that exclusive club of all times: the bathroom scrubbers of America who must have the skill to change a toilet tissue spindle, flush, scour, pick up towels and wax without fear of male invasion.

Heaven knows, we've paid our dues.

FADING PICTURES

NEW YORK (AP) — Each time people show their favorite color photographs, they are adding a tiny bit to their eventual destruction, say photo preservation experts.

That's because the average color print contains many unstable dyes that gradually break down into colorless fragments when exposed to light. These dyes also react with water vapor, oxygen or contaminants in the air and break down even when the photographs are stored in darkness.

Lewis-Kondracki Wedding Vows Are Solemnized

Christine Kondracki and Robert William Lewis Jr. were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Cashwell E. Shaw Jr. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Evans III of Washington, sister of the bride.

For the single ring ceremony, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She chose a white floor length gown with a chapel train of taffeta and alencon lace. The fitted torso alencon lace bodice, beaded with seed pearls, featured a sculptured off-shoulder neckline. Layered taffeta bows accented the shoulders. The flared taffeta skirt extended into a chapel train. Scalloped alencon lace garlands bordered the hemline of the gown. She wore a two tiered bridal veil of illusion edged with scalloped schiffli embroidery flowing from a floral bridal wreath of silk rosettes and palettes tipped with pearls. Scalloped dangling pearls encircled the wreath. She carried a cascade of white bridal roses and baby's breath.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Jospeh Kondracki of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Little Cannon Sr. of Atlantic Beach.

Joan K. Evans of Washington and Maria K. Evans of Greenville were honor attendants for their sister.

Catherine Nicole Evans, niece of the bride, and Michael Shawn Evans, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. Both are from Washington.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and the junior usher was Charles Andrew Evans of Greenville, nephew of the bride. James Frank Mallory and James W. Clark III, both of Greenville, were ushers.

The attendants wore formal gowns in mauve rose and candy matte taffeta. The sleeveless gowns featured fitted bodices with rolled fabric straps. A corded tie belt enhanced the natural waistline. The gowns were complimented by bolero length jackets in matching taffeta fashioned with short, French pouf sleeves tucked at the elbows. The jackets also featured a ruffled regal collar. Each wore a garland of silk flowers in mauve rose and candy to match their gowns. They carried nosegays of white and pink carnations.

The flower girl wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace and ice pink taffeta. The Victorian inspired gown featured a high neckline encircled with ruffles of lace and cap sleeves. Pink satin ribbon encircled the waistline. She wore a garland of pink silk flowers to match her gown and carried a white wicker basket of pink rose petals.

A reception followed the ceremony. Assisting in serving were Mrs. T.H. Evans II, Cynthia S. Adams and Charlene Stox.

The bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. She is employed at North State Savings and Loan Corp. in Greenville and he is employed at the Peppertree Resorts in Atlantic Beach.

An after-rehearsal party was held at the home of the bride's sister Friday night and was given by the bridegroom's parents. The couple was honored at a miscellaneous shower prior to the wedding ceremony.

Having Colors Done Is Big Business For Analysis

By SUE CROSS
Associated Press Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The art of matching sweaters and scarves to the blue in an eye or the pink in a cheek is putting green in a lot of pockets as personal color analyses evolve from hobby to a serious part of the fashion industry.

The practice of "having colors done" — matching skin, eye and hair tones to textile colors that flatter a person — is good for Deanna Radeloff. The 43-year-old home economics professor at Bowling Green State University is putting nearly 20 years of study in color and psychology to use in a sideline business of training color analysts, who then go into business for themselves, telling others what color clothes they should wear.

"I don't know why people are getting so much into color now, because we've known about it for ages, but everybody is," says Ms. Radeloff, who began training analysts to use her system in 1982.

Dolores Ware, managing director of the Color Association of the United States, said the system would probably have been only a party game a decade ago. The New York-based organization sets standards for colors used in the textile industry and monitors color trends in many industries.

Now, she said, color analysis is influencing the textile industry and how stores market clothes.

Jennifer Emery, women's fashion manager and buyer for the Damschroder department stores in Toledo, agrees. Store workers studied under Ms. Radeloff and now train all sales people in coloring because they need to know what customers are talking about when they shop with color swatches to be matched, Ms. Emery said.

Ms. Radeloff's system considers tones in a person's eyes, the way skin reflects and absorbs light, and other factors, to choose colors in four basic categories — usually linked to the seasons. She said her system was based on scientific studies, but said it and other systems often got only scorn from scientists.

"Anybody that's very pragmatic, who has a very quantitative mind, is going to look at this and say, 'Yeah, right.' But any artist or creative person who works with color will recognize color's effect," she said.

"The big topic (among) professionals now is, is this subject really credible? One thing, it is a subjective process ... and while there is a science to color, we haven't made this profession scientific," Ms. Radeloff said.

Ms. Radeloff decries color analysts who consider colors psychic or mystically linked to a personality. But no matter how frivolous some believe color analysis is, the money involved is very serious.

Prospective analysts pay Ms. Radeloff $2,000 for 40 hours of training, certification to use her system, and standard supplies including lights, drapings of various colored fabrics, mirrors, color wheels and swatches of fabric for clients to use when choosing clothing.

In turn, Ms. Radeloff said, certified analysts can charge about $50 in Ohio for a personal color analysis. Nationwide, the cost of an analysis probably averages $75 to $100, Ms. Ware said, offering a chance for profit that could ruin whatever professional stature the field has earned. She said people could go to three color analysts and be told they should wear three totally different groups of colors.

"That just proves that either the theory is just not as valid as we are being led to believe, or we have a lot of amateurs out there who are posing as professionals," Ms. Ware said.

Ms. Ware and Ms. Radeloff agree that consumers need to carefully question the training and experience of any color analyst. But even if coloring isn't considered a science, it will remain popular.

"It is one of the No. 1 questions in the consumer's mind these days, having their colors done," Ms. Ware said. "It is very much like the horoscope syndrome we have gone through for a decade. It's saying, 'You look wonderful in such and such.' And people like this."

Brooks-Pugh Wedding Vows Exchanged

Bettie Fay Pugh and Willie R. Brooks were united in marriage Saturday evening at seven o'clock. Performing the double ring ceremony at the Cherry Court Clubhouse was the Rev. Maurice Davenport.

Michael Bunch of Windsor and Jackqueline Hendrick of Henderson presented a program of wedding music.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Pugh of Grifton, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of the late Joe H. Brooks and Annie Simpson of Plymouth.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with chantilly lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke of illusion accented with seed pearls outlined in a pinafore of chantilly lace with matching lace encircling the empire waistline and long lace sleeves. The full circular skirt extended into a cathedral train and was accented by an overlay skirt of chantilly lace and tiers of organza and matching lace. She wore an embroidered cape with seed pearls and drap with sheer peau de soie veil. The bride carried a cream colored nosegay of silk roses and stephanotis centered with a miniature burgundy orchid, baby's breath, greenery and lace.

The best man was Ronald A. Jones of Greenville. Ushers included Clinton R. Pugh of Grifton, brother of the bride, and Christopher Toole of Plymouth, uncle of the bridegroom.

MRS. BROOKS

Pamala Pittman of Plymouth, sister of the bridegroom, was hostess and Kimberly Alexander of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was receptionist.

The honor attendant wore a full length burgundy gown of satin styled with a bow neckline and full three-quarter length sleeves. It had a full skirt and the waistline was accented by a cream colored sash. She carried a silk bouquet of burgundy roses, baby's breath, fern and streamers.

The flower girl wore a long gown of satin and carried a white basket of roses with burgundy ribbon.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Norfolk, Va.

The bride is employed at Pitt Memorial Hospital as a nurse. The bridegroom is employed by Procter and Gamble.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

Cindy Magette, daughter of John Edward Magette of Colerain and the late Elizabeth P. Magette, and Peter Francis Daniel Damato, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Joseph Damato, exchanged wedding vows Saturday.

The Rev. Dan Earnhardt and the Rev. Jerry Sherba performed the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m. at the Tar River Estates Clubhouse.

Mike Wells sang several folk love songs for the ceremony.

Marsha M. Hoffman of Virginia Beach, Va., sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Donna M. White and Norma R. Anderson of Greenville, Rosa D. Watson of Durham and Frances C. Parrott of Bethel were bridesmaids.

The best man was Dennis Fiorino of Westfield, N.J. John Paul Damato of Washington, D.C., brother of the bridegroom, Leonard Parrott of Bethel, Scott Raney and Donald Brader of Westfield, N.J., were ushers.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a Mori Lee original formal gown which featured an empire waist of sataglo and Venise lace. It was styled with a horseshoe neckline bordered with Venise lace accented with seed pearls which were repeated on the bodice and skirt. The full bishop sleeves had ruffle bordered cuffs. Appliques of lace were scattered on the A-line skirt and the lace bordered skirt flowed into a full chapel train. The bride wore a Juliet capulet of matching floral Venise lace from which flowed a full chapel veil of nylon illusion, bordered with matching lace trim. She carried a cascade of silk dusty rose roses intertwined with baby's breath and ivy tied with a dusty rose and white lace bow and streamers.

The matron of honor wore a formal gown of cranberry organza over taffeta styled with an off-shoulder double ruffle and a natural waistline accented with a satin bow. The gown featured a flounce ruffle bustle back. She carried an arm silk bouquet with four dusty rose roses, baby's breath and greenery tied with matching ribbon and streamers.

The bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant with the A-line skirts enhanced by a flounce ruffle at the hem. They carried similar flowers.

The bridegroom's mother was given a corsage of white roses.

The bride's father and sister and Dave Brown entertained at a reception following the ceremony.

The reception table was decorated with an arrangement of pink carnations, white daisies and dusty rose mauve flanked by silver candelabra. Wedding cake was served by Josephone Pierce, aunt of the bride, and Debbie Magette, sister-in-law of the bride. Gladys White and Phyllis Kaylor poured punch. Registering guests were Rhonda Miller and Sid Ashby.

MRS. DAMATO

The couple will live in Greenville after a cruise to Key West and Mexico.

The bride works for U.S. Steel Corp, Agri-Chemical Division in Ayden. The bridegroom works for Pitt County Respite Care as a community health assistant. She attended East Carolina University and Pitt Community College. The bridegroom graduated from PCC and is continuing his education.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the King and Queen North. A shower was given for the couple prior to the ceremony.

Lawn Bowling Is Popular Sport

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
Associated Press Writer

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — There's a point after retirement, William S. Nicoll believes, when football is a thing of the past, when tennis is too much of an exertion, and when even golf proves a little too strenuous.

That doesn't stop Nicoll from venturing out to the Fernleigh Club several times each week to "bowl on the green" with his cronies, even though he says his "ticker is acting up."

Lawn bowling, he says, "is the best thing that ever happened to me in 10 years. It's better than sitting at home feeling sorry for myself. It gets me out of the house and into the air."

Fernleigh Club sits mostly unnoticed on an unusual plot in this wealthy Hartford suburb. Surrounded by suburban homes and a restaurant, the club's few spectators are restaurant-goers who happen to park near the playing green and — curious about the older men dressed in white — wander over.

On summer weekdays, youngsters racing their bicycles in the empty parking lot will occasionally stop to peer over the fence surrounding the whitewashed clubhouse.

Do they ever ask to play? Nicoll, the 85-year-old club president, laughs in response.

"The vast majority of players are old codgers like myself," he said, adding that the youngest club member is about 35.

In other parts of the country, lawn bowling appeals to all ages. For instance, a Massachusetts bowls club boasts about 14 teen-age members, according to a recent issue of Bowls, the quarterly publication of the American Lawn Bowls Association.

Lawn bowling is an ancient activity: Archaeologists have uncovered biased stone balls from 5,000 B.C.

When Caesar ruled Rome, the game was known as "bocce"; the game eventually became so popular in England and France that it was outlawed because archery, needed for the national defense, was being neglected. The game survived, however, in Scotland, where lawn bowling grew in popularity.

In the United States, most bowls clubs are located in California and Florida, Nicoll said.

The game is played with four balls weighted unevenly on each side. The object is to throw the balls so they end up as close as possible to the "jack," a small white ball thrown out at the start of the game.

Getting accustomed to the uneven roll of the playing balls is tricky.

"It's the damndest thing," Nicoll said. "Sometimes you bowl like a champion, and sometimes you bowl like a chump."

The four playing balls, averaging about $125 a set, vary in size from 3¾ inches to 5 inches across and weigh about three pounds each, he said.

Each set of balls has a small design to distinguish it from the other balls on the field, Nicoll said. In earlier days, the balls were made of wood; now they are made of a composition material colored brown or black, he said.

"The idea is to buy a set of balls that adjust to your hand size," Nicoll said.

The smooth-cut playing green is maintained almost fanatically. Nicoll emphasizes that no one is allowed on the field without flat, rubber-soled shoes. Mats are placed over the playing areas during non-competition play.

Each team of three is headed by a skip, who sends advice on where to throw the ball to the vice skip and the lead — the first man to throw the ball.

Some Parents Fix Up Basements For Kids

DEAR ABBY: What's the big hassle about whether teen-agers should be allowed to entertain their friends in their bedrooms?

Of course they shouldn't!

When we were teen-agers, our folks fixed up the basement, and that's where we entertained our friends. (We called it the rumpus room.)

We had a couple of couches, some chairs, a Ping-Pong table and a record player. Also, an old piano.

Our parents didn't have to worry about what we kids did down there because they took the door off at the top of the stairway.

BUDDY AND JENNIE LEE

DEAR ABBY: I am in need of some advice. I am still in high school. I have this very special teacher I like a lot. She is nice to me at school, but I would like to have a better relationship with her outside of school. Am I asking too much? If not, how do I approach her with my feelings toward her? I am a 15-year-old girl.

TEACHER'S PET

DEAR PET: Don't approach her. You will only set yourself up for a disappointment, and make her uncomfortable.

DEAR ABBY: I am a male college professor. Thank you for taking the position that women who receive unwanted sexual attention should report it to the proper authorities.

A few years ago, a young female student came to me and told me that another professor was exchanging high grades for sexual favors. She said he seduced her in his office when she went there to make up an exam.

I met with the professor, told him what I had heard and let him know in no uncertain terms that I thought his behavior was inexcusable.

During the next two years, the amorous professor did everything in his power to get me fired, and he nearly succeeded.

The young lady? When I urged her to report the offending professor to the proper authorities, she refused, saying she didn't want to cause any trouble. She wouldn't even confirm the fact that she had reported his unethical conduct to me.

The professor? He's doing fine. As far as I know, he's probably still exchanging grades for sexual favors.

Me? I learned a lesson. I no longer permit female students to speak to me confidentially about anything.

My advice to females: If you are raped or sexually assaulted, report it promptly to the proper authorities, and don't burden anyone else with your problems.

PROFESSOR FROM MONTANA

DEAR PROFESSOR: Women who have been raped and sexually assaulted are usually so traumatized, guilt-ridden and intimidated they're not strong enough for a confrontation. They desperately need professional counseling to assure them that they are victims.

Meanwhile, scoundrels like your colleague get off scot-free while their victims carry the scars of guilt and shame forever.

COFFEE RUM CREAM

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup water
¾ cup milk
2 teaspoons instant coffee
1 cup 34-proof rum cream liqueur

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over water to let soften for about 5 minutes. In a small saucepan heat milk until it is very hot and bubbles begin to appear around the edge. Sprinkle gelatin with instant coffee; add the very hot milk and stir until gelatin and coffee are dissolved. Stir in rum cream. Ladle into sherbet cups or individual dessert dishes (preferably glass). Chill to set. Garnish as desired. Makes four ½-cup servings.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Vows Said In Raleigh Church Saturday

Suzanne Kirk Peters and Brian Louis Pecheles were married Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in Hayes Barton United Methodist Church in Raleigh. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Kermit Braswell.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Elbert L. Peters Jr. of Raleigh. She was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pecheles of Greenville and his father was best man.

Betsy Peters of Greenville and Kathy Peters of Morganton were maids of honor. Bridesmaids included Cissy Davis and Tracey Moore, both of Charlotte, Debbie Baker and Patti Whitley, both of Raleigh.

Ushers were David J. Middleton, James E. Clement Jr., John S. Whitley and Dana Pecheles, all of Raleigh, David V. Janeway of Chapel Hill, Derrick Surratt of New York and Glenn H. Love of Greensboro.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown and veil of candlelight antique satin.

Each of the attendants wore a rosewood moire taffeta skirt with an ivory blouse. Each was accented by a blue cummerbund.

A reception was held at the Woman's Club of Raleigh. The wedding breakfast was held at the Ramada Inn-Crabtree and a rehearsal dinner was held at the Angus Barn.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to San Francisco and San Diego, Calif.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a loan officer at the State Employ[illegible] Credit Union and he is gen[illegible] manager of Joe Peche[illegible] Volkswagon.

Spanish Civil War Memorial Opposed

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

BELCHITE, Spain (AP) — Late on an afternoon, after the heat has surrendered to a cooling breeze and the cicadas have quit droning in the poplar trees, Modesta Lopez shuffles through the rubble and refuse to the house where she was born.

Stopping at a crumbling brick wall, she points to a jagged stick that was once part of a door lintel.

"Here it is, number 13 Sagasta St., the house where I was born. I come here to remember — how my sisters died, how they shot my brother and how my mother went crazy."

Only there isn't any house, just a decaying facade. The Belchite into which Modesta Lopez was born 81 years ago is a mass of bombed-out buildings, jagged church spires, bleached sheep bones, rotting shoes and polemical ghosts.

Domingo Serrano also was born in Belchite, but in 1946, in the cold, hungry years following the 1936-39 Spanish Civil War that turned his and Modesta Lopez' birthplace first into a battleground and later into a controversial symbol.

If Serrano — now mayor of a new Belchite located a mile to the west of the old town — succeeds in his struggle with Spanish bureaucracy, Modesta Lopez will be doing her remembering in a memorial park, not in a maze of hazardous ruins of the 14th century town.

Until August 1937, Belchite was a prosperous market town of 3,800 people located on a bluff south of the main Zaragoza-to-Barcelona road in the heart of the former kingdom of Aragon.

On Aug. 24, hoping to draw away the nationalist forces of Francisco Franco from northern Spain, about 80,000 republican troops, including British, Irish and American volunteers in the 15th International Brigade, attacked eight points along the so-called Aragon front.

Well-fortified, tenacious and mostly nationalist, Belchite held on for days as the main republican offensive advanced. But after a 13-day siege that included heavy aerial bombardment, Belchite surrendered in ruins. No one knows the exact figures, but it is estimated that thousands died.

Modesta Lopez' two sisters were killed in the bombings. She says she remembers hiding for days in the cellar as house-to-house fighting went on over her head.

Later, when the nationalists swept through to consolidate their final victory in 1939, her brother was shot as a republican sympathizer and her mother slowly went mad. Her husband, who had fled with other republican refugees across the border into France, was later sent to a forced labor camp in Germany where he died during World War II, she says.

Because they saw Belchite as a symbol of nationalist valor, Franco and his advisers decided to leave the ruins untouched, declaring them a national monument once the civil war was won.

The new regime offered to assist the remaining inhabitants to set up another town nearby. The transfer was completed in 1960.

Belchite was not the only Spanish town in ruins at the end of the war. Guernica in the northern Basque country was destroyed by German planes in April 1937. Guadalajara, 30 miles northeast of Madrid, also was also seriously damaged by heavy fighting in March 1937.

But both Guernica and Guadalajara were republican ruins which Franco had no desire to preserve and have since been completely rebuilt.

"Thirty years ago, they could have done something with the old town — made it into a monument or whatever," Serrano says.

"But townspeople and tourists have been carrying bits and pieces away, farmers are dumping their animal carcases and refuse there. It's now a real hazard for everyone walking around, and in five years there won't be anything left."

Serrano and his eight-man city council — seven conservatives, including the mayor, and two socialists in office since May 1983 — have been trying to revive an effort initiated by the national Ministry of Culture in 1981 to turn the ruins into a bipartisan memorial park.

The mouthpiece of Spain's extreme right wing — the Madrid Daily "El Alcazar" — has blasted the idea through articles by military officers who say not a stone must be touched.

And not a stone can be touched officially because of bureaucracy and problems peculiar to post-Franco Spain — not pressure from the extreme right, Serrano says.

In the meantime, herds of sheep and goats, their bells clanging, scamper through the ruins of what were once homes of prosperous olive oil merchants and wheat farmers.

Families, usually accompanied by one or two old women dressed in black, poke through the debris, talking among themselves about who used to live where.

Swallows dart through the gaping shell holes in the belfry of the main church at the head of the main street, pigs grunt and the smell of manure floats over everything.

In 1982, the Belchite proposal was transferred to the jurisdiction of the new regional government of Aragon, one of 17 autonomous regions set up in Spain under the 1978 constitution, which was approved three years after Franco's death.

The project to bulldoze the greater part of the ruins and conserve the most striking features of the town has been passed to the new autonomous government's Department of Culture in Zaragoza where Serrano says he fears it will languish for at least another year.

Sir Walter Raleigh was executed in 1618 on charges of treason against King James I. The execution took place in London.

Savannah Considers Adding Four Islands

By PAMELA HASTEROK
Savannah News-Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A hush of serenity hangs over Wilmington Island and its three neighboring isles east of Savannah. But the six-year-old debate over whether the four islands should be incorporated into a city has been anything but serene.

Residents of Wilmington, Talahi, Whitemarsh and Oatland islands voted 4-1 in favor of the idea in an Aug. 14 referendum, and state Rep. Bobby Phillips, who represents the district that includes the four islands, has drawn up a proposed charter for the city.

But the plan has encountered opposition from some Savannah and Chatham County officials who complain that incorporation of the islands could hinder a move to consolidate the county into one large city. And the charter so far has not won the support of the local legislative delegation, which would be essential to gaining approval in the General Assembly.

The clamor for incorporation began in 1978, when Savannah and Chatham County voters were asked to vote on the consolidation question. City residents approved, but those in the county — including the islanders — rejected the idea.

Fearing that Savannah would try to annex the islands after the failure of consolidation, island residents conducted a straw vote on incorporation in 1980. The measure passed, but legislation allowing the incorporation never passed the Legislature.

The issue faded for a few years but flared again several months ago when citizens became worried about an increasing number of multi-family residential developments planned for the islands area. Residents formed the Islands Preservation Association, which has worked with the Chatham Islands Association in leading the effort to form a new city.

Jack Kingston, a Republican who is opposing Phillips in the 125th House District race this fall, said he favors incorporation but wants the residents to draft their own charter rather than using the one drawn up by Phillips.

"Big government is inefficient," he said. "This is home rule. What could be more American than self-government?"

County Commissioner Robert McCorkle, whose district includes the islands, said he supports incorporation because he believes the commission has ignored islanders' grievances.

"I'm at the point where I don't blame them," he said. "As far as one man is concerned, I've done all I can and it's fallen on deaf ears. It's gotten to the point where they should push for incorporation as hard as they can because the county won't listen to them any other way.

"They have to control the growth," he added. "It used to be such a beautiful place. I've tried everything I know of not to let it become overpopulated, and it hasn't worked."

But Savannah Mayor John Rousakis and Howard Bellinger, director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission, contend that incorporation will not stop the proliferation of multi-family housing developments on the islands.

Bellinger said the building projects under way on the islands now were planned and approved a decade ago, and he predicted it will take another 10 to 15 years to complete all currently approved projects. He also pointed out that Georgia law gives landowners the right to determine the highest and best use for their property.

Bellinger, himself a resident of Wilmington Island, said he doubts that developers are speeding up their work in anticipation of incorporation.

"The development being initiated now is not new and it has nothing to do with incorporation," he said.

Rousakis contends incorporation would "put the nail in the coffin to bury" any plans of consolidation of Savannah and the unincorporated areas of Chatham County.

The mayor said he was not speaking against island incorporation but for consolidation. "We need to put together the best of our resources, talent and dollars to place the community in a better position," he said.

If the incorporation effort is successful, the new city will have a population of between 10,000 and 25,000, said Kamalakar Raut, president of the Chatham Islands Association. That would make it the second largest city in the county behind Savannah.

Language Ordinance Provokes Reactions

By DORA-LISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Four years after Dade County passed an ordinance aimed at preventing the use of any language other than English on official business, the matter still evokes strong emotions among supporters and opponents.

"It's ridiculous, it's petty and it's senseless," says Manny Diaz, a Cuban-born and Miami-bred attorney who is chairman of the Spanish American League Against Discrimination, or SALAD, one of the area organizations that opposed the ordinance.

The anti-bilingual ordinance, passed at a referendum Nov. 4, 1980, also prohibited the use of county funds "for promoting any culture other than that of the United States." The ordinance was backed by nearly 60 percent of the county's eligible voters in one of the largest voter turnouts in Dade County history.

"I don't feel that all the citizens of Dade County should supply tax dollars to fund a separate bilingual government. It's as simple as that," says Mark R. Benson, vice president of Citizens of Dade United, the group that spearheaded the drive to pass the ordinance.

The ordinance is superseded by state and federal law. There are still multilingual ballots, court interpreters and information about food stamps in languages other than English — most commonly in Spanish and some in Creole.

Besieged by inquiries from county departments about how to adhere to the ordinance while still providing basic services to the estimated 42 percent of county residents who speak Spanish, Dade County Attorney Robert A. Ginsburg was forced to write an opinion spelling out other exceptions to the ordinance.

"If lives are at risk, then it's proper to inform the citizens in the best and most efficient way possible," Ginsburg says.

Such information includes safety measures in the event of a hurricane, medical advice at the county's Jackson Memorial Hospital and warnings on electrical lines at the new Metrorail rapid transit system.

But at Miami International Airport, the only non-English signs that survive are those in place before the ordinance went into effect.

"Those the county is under no obligation to remove," said Ginsburg.

The airport is a hub for international travelers. In 1983, nearly 1.5 million foreign visitors were from the Caribbean, Central and South America, said Orlando Cruz, chief of economic analysis at the airport.

"The county depends on tourism for its growth and it's poor policy not to show a wlcoming sign (in Spanish) to the people who come to spend their money here," Cruz says.

Employees at other county departments agree with Cruz that the ordinance interfered with their ability to provide information to residents who don't speak English.

"We were putting up Spanish signs at each of the animal exhibits, then we get hit with this county ordinance," says Janet Ross, a spokeswoman at Metrozoo. "It not only shuts out a section of our community, but it also affects us because we are a tourist attraction

New Chapter In Mad Max Warrior Film

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A new chapter in the saga of the futuristic warrior Mad Max is being filmed in the dusty Australian outback behind a veil of total secrecy to discourage any would-be imitators.

Filmmaker George Miller will say little about the third and latest film in the Mad Max series beyond confirming that production started in September and American actor Mel Gibson again plays the lead.

"At this stage there's not a lot we can tell you," said Jenny Wilson, a spokeswoman for Miller's production company.

Despite the lack of details, the news of a new Mad Max movie is likely to delight millions of fans around the world who have made the mythical hero a cult figure. The film will also be the most lavish yet in the series.

"The script is being kept so close to the producers' chests that many people, including some of the crew, have been under the impression that no script exists," the Australian film magazine, Encore, reported.

There have been several low budget copies of the Mad Max movies, including one version called "Exterminators of the Year 3000" which mirrored the story and costumes of the originals and even had an actor who resembled Gibson.

Miller, who directed the first two films — "Mad Max" and "The Road Warrior" — is making "Mad Max III" alone after the death of Byron Kennedy, his partner on the earlier productions. Kennedy was killed last year when the helicopter in which he was flying crashed.

Among the few details released about "Mad Max III" is that it will have a cast of "hundreds" and is being shot at various locations in the outback, Ms. Wilson said.

Pop and rhythm and blues singer Tina Turner will play the leader of a group of wild "feral" children.

The movie has a budget of about $11 million, making it a lavish production by Australian standards. It is scheduled to be completed late this year and released sometime in 1985.

The character, Mad Max, originated in 1979 in the bloody and violent film about a society collapsing in the wake of a nuclear war. Gangs of thugs terrorized the roads and the sole defense was a force of heavily armed police.

Gibson, clad in black leather with a sawed-off shotgun strapped to his thigh and a car that doubled as a tank, seized the imaginations of film watchers with his portrayal of a man fighting back.

In "Road Warrior," Mad Max joined forces with a group of people trying to maintain some hope of a civilized life in a land ravaged by motorized barbarians.

Miller has encouraged other filmmakers to use the Australian outback with its barren deserts and mountains as a setting for futuristic or science fiction films.

Whittling Whistles A Successful Hobby

By DAVID FOX
Associated Press Writer

BENTON, Ill. (AP) — Some holes here, some grooves there, and the big pieces of wood Arnold Moore turns into little pieces of wood sound just like a steam locomotive's whistle.

"They don't look very pretty, I suppose," Moore said. "But really, I'm proud of what we've done."

Moore's creations started out as a hobby, growing until demand for his whistles was so great he launched a business.

"I wasn't looking for something to make a living at when I came up with this," the former Southern Illinois coal miner said recently.

"I've made trains and toys all my life," said Moore, 46. "But this was a new item — something that caught on and kept growing until it outgrew everything else."

In five years, Moore has gone from whittling one whistle a night for friends to machine-producing 1,000 a week for sale at gift shops throughout the country.

Moore developed the whistle, which he patented in 1980, during spare moments while working as a coal hauler in a mine near Benton.

"To try to keep from going to sleep, I'd do whittling," he recalled. "I got to making whistles, and somebody would want one, so I'd make another one and then another."

After a co-worker suggested he try to sell them, Moore took two dozen to a gift shop in the Ozarks. The storekeeper bought them on the spot and ordered a hundred more.

The orders never stopped.

"I'd get up at 5:30 in the morning to go to work, come home, eat supper and work out here making whistles until midnight every night," Moore said. "Finally, I had to quit the coal mine to keep up with the whistles.

"I had to quit one or the other; I couldn't do both ... and whistlin' was a lot more lucrative."

That was a year ago, and Moore says he has no regrets.

"I made pretty good money, but it got to where it wasn't fun any more," he said. "Now, I can work the hours I want to work and make a lot more money ...

"This past year has been what everybody dreams of — work a little bit and play a little bit. What more could you want?"

Moore claims customers in 35 states, Germany, Switzerland and Sweden. Among them have been a life insurance company, the United States Football League's Memphis Showboats and a Las Vegas, Nev., casino with a railroad motif.

"I really haven't hunted customers," he said. "If we did, I couldn't keep up with it."

His company, Moore's Crafts, sells whistles in quanities of 24 or more, and he said customers generally retailed them for about $5.

"Really, I'm proud of what we've done," he said. "It's not very much — just a nine-inch piece of two-by-two.

"But it was an idea that I had; I designed my machinery to build it; I got out there and merchandised it. It's a family thing, from the thought to the selling."

Moore holds patents on two types of train whistles and has further product plans, but said he was reluctant to expand too quickly.

For now, he said, he is content to maintain a family operation with his wife, Daisy Mae, and daughter, Teresa.

Savannah Considers Adding Four Islands

By PAMELA HASTEROK
Savannah News-Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A hush of serenity hangs over Wilmington Island and its three neighboring isles east of Savannah. But the six-year-old debate over whether the four islands should be incorporated into a city has been anything but serene.

Residents of Wilmington, Talahi, Whitemarsh and Oatland islands voted 4-1 in favor of the idea in an Aug. 14 referendum, and state Rep. Bobby Phillips, who represents the district that includes the four islands, has drawn up a proposed charter for the city.

But the plan has encountered opposition from some Savannah and Chatham County officials who complain that incorporation of the islands could hinder a move to consolidate the county into one large city. And the charter so far has not won the support of the local legislative delegation, which would be essential to gaining approval in the General Assembly.

The clamor for incorporation began in 1978, when Savannah and Chatham County voters were asked to vote on the consolidation question. City residents approved, but those in the county — including the islanders — rejected the idea.

Fearing that Savannah would try to annex the islands after the failure of consolidation, island residents conducted a straw vote on incorporation in 1980. The measure passed, but legislation allowing the incorporation never passed the Legislature.

The issue faded for a few years but flared again several months ago when citizens became worried about an increasing number of multi-family residential developments planned for the islands area. Residents formed the Islands Preservation Association, which has worked with the Chatham Islands Association in leading the effort to form a new city.

Jack Kingston, a Republican who is opposing Phillips in the 125th House District race this fall, said he favors incorporation but wants the residents to draft their own charter rather than using the one drawn up by Phillips.

"Big government is inefficient," he said. "This is home rule. What could be more American than self-government?"

County Commissioner Robert McCorkle, whose district includes the islands, said he supports incorporation because he believes the commission has ignored islanders' grievances.

"I'm at the point where I don't blame them," he said. "As far as one man is concerned, I've done all I can and it's fallen on deaf ears. It's gotten to the point where they should push for incorporation as hard as they can because the county won't listen to them any other way.

"They have to control the growth," he added. "It used to be such a beautiful place. I've tried everything I know of not to let it become overpopulated, and it hasn't worked."

But Savannah Mayor John Rousakis and Howard Bellinger, director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission, contend that incorporation will not stop the proliferation of multi-family housing developments on the islands.

Bellinger said the building projects under way on the islands now were planned and approved a decade ago, and he predicted it will take another 10 to 15 years to complete all currently approved projects. He also pointed out that Georgia law gives landowners the right to determine the highest and best use for their property.

Bellinger, himself a resident of Wilmington Island, said he doubts that developers are speeding up their work in anticipation of incorporation.

"The development being initiated now is not new and it has nothing to do with incorporation," he said.

Rousakis contends incorporation would "put the nail in the coffin to bury" any plans of consolidation of Savannah and the unincorporated areas of Chatham County.

The mayor said he was not speaking against island incorporation but for consolidation. "We need to put together the best of our resources, talent and dollars to place the community in a better position," he said.

If the incorporation effort is successful, the new city will have a population of between 10,000 and 25,000, said Kamalakar Raut, president of the Chatham Islands Association. That would make it the second largest city in the county behind Savannah.

Language Ordinance Provokes Reactions

By DORA-LISA PILARTE

MIAMI (AP) — Four years after Dade County passed an ordinance aimed at preventing the use of any language other than English on official business, the matter still evokes strong emotions among supporters and opponents.

"It's ridiculous, it's petty and it's senseless," says Manny Diaz, a Cuban-born and Miami-bred attorney who is chairman of the Spanish American League Against Discrimination, or SALAD, one of the area organizations that opposed the ordinance.

Whittling Whistles A Successful Hobby

By DAVID FOX
Associated Press Writer

BENTON, Ill. (AP) — Some holes here, some grooves there, and the big pieces of wood Arnold Moore turns into little pieces of wood sound just like a steam locomotive's whistle.

"They don't look very pretty, I suppose," Moore said. "But really, I'm proud of what we've done."

Moore's creations started out as a hobby, growing until demand for his whistles was so great he launched a business.

"I wasn't looking for something to make a living at when I came up with this," the former Southern Illinois coal miner said recently.

"I've made trains and toys all my life," said Moore, 46. "But this was a new item — something that caught on and kept growing until it outgrew everything else."

In five years, Moore has gone from whittling one whistle a night for friends to machine-producing 1,000 a week for sale at gift shops throughout the country.

Moore developed the whistle, which he patented in 1980, during spare moments while working as a coal hauler in a mine near Benton.

"To try to keep from going to sleep, I'd do whittling," he recalled. "I got to making whistles, and somebody would want one, so I'd make another one and then another."

After a co-worker suggested he try to sell them, Moore took two dozen to a gift shop in the Ozarks. The storekeeper bought them on the spot and ordered a hundred more.

The orders never stopped.

"I'd get up at 5:30 in the morning to go to work, come home, eat supper and work out here making whistles until midnight every night," Moore said. "Finally, I had to quit the coal mine to keep up with the whistles.

"I had to quit one or the other; I couldn't do both ... and whistlin' was a lot more lucrative."

That was a year ago, and Moore says he has no regrets.

"I made pretty good money, but it got to where it wasn't fun any more," he said. "Now, I can work the hours I want to work and make a lot more money ...

"This past year has been what everybody dreams of — work a little bit and play a little bit. What more could you want?"

Moore claims customers in 35 states, Germany, Switzerland and Sweden. Among them have been a life insurance company, the United States Football League's Memphis Showboats and a Las Vegas, Nev., casino with a railroad motif.

"I really haven't hunted customers," he said. "If we did, I couldn't keep up with it."

His company, Moore's Crafts, sells whistles in quanities of 24 or more, and he said customers generally retailed them for about $5.

"Really, I'm proud of what we've done," he said. "It's not very much — just a nine-inch piece of two-by-two.

"But it was an idea that I had; I designed my machinery to build it; I got out there and merchandised it. It's a family thing, from the thought to the selling."

Moore holds patents on two types of train whistles and has further product plans, but said he was reluctant to expand too quickly.

For now, he said, he is content to maintain a family operation with his wife, Daisy Mae, and daughter, Teresa.

Capital Of Siberia Now A Cold Weather Metropolis

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

NOVOSIBIRSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Once a log-cabin wayside, Novosibirsk is today Siberia's economic and cultural capital — the Soviet Union's seventh largest city in population and its fourth in area; its old mingling with its new, which soon will include a subway.

Wooden cottages and log cabins built in the old days still stand, but in the shadow of new apartment complexes.

Elderly women whose families settled here nearly a century ago, when the place was selected for the Trans-Siberian Railway crossing of the Ob River, trundle along the sidewalks with the thousands of young families lured to the region by challenging work and better salaries.

The city's old village character survives despite its rapid growth into a metropolis of 1.5 million people.

While high-rise concrete apartment buildings and new offices and factories are under construction everywhere, hundreds of log structures that were once family homes have been converted to schools and shops, and smaller wooden cottages are still inhabited by many city residents.

Novosibirsk is also home to theater and opera companies. The city center is dominated by the architecturally ornate state theater of opera and ballet.

Despite its size, Novosibirsk is gridded mostly with narrow two-lane streets and traffic is light.

With severe winters posing driving hazards outside the city center, many residents depend on public transportation instead of personal cars. They boast that their remote metropolis will have its own subway system by 1986.

But in a throw-back to the old, a middle-aged woman stopped a Western photographer and reporter to complain that despite constant construction around the city, her small wooden home was still without hot water and badly in need of repair.

"Take some pictures of it," she said, "and maybe then the officials will do something about these conditions."

Younger couples living in the newer buildings show signs of the benefits available to skilled workers willing to endure Siberia's climatic hardships. They are better dressed than many residents of Moscow, about 1,700 miles away, and families strolling in the early evening seem relaxed in comparison with the harried bustle of the Soviet capital.

The workers are drawn here by salaries that are often double or triple those of workers with the same skills in the more populated western Soviet cities, where the average factory worker makes about 184 rubles ($217) a month.

Signs advertising Soviet and foreign films and local theater offerings break up the billboards hosting patriotic slogans. One poster promoted the American film "Frances," dubbed in Russian.

Food stores seem better stocked than those in Moscow, and the lines appear shorter.

Novosibirsk, which means "new Siberia," was founded as the village of Nikolayevsk in 1893 on the spot where the Ob meets the Kamenka River. It began its climb toward Siberian prominence when it was decided in the 1890s that the Trans-Siberian Railway would cross the Ob there.

The village in the heart of Siberia, a vast and varied region which makes up about 50 percent of the Soviet Union's land mass, grew into a city as workers moved in to help transport the area's rich supplies of oil, gas, minerals and timber to the industrialized western cities.

Novosibirsk's most rapid growth has been over the past quarter-century, since the establishment in the late 1950s of Siberian branches of the nation's major educational institutions. The population has nearly doubled in the past 20 years, and the 80,000 students in the city constitute more than the entire population at the time of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

Economic planning in the 1950s and 1960s changed the focus of resource exploitation in Siberia. Instead of shipping raw materials thousands of miles to the west, factories and schools to train workers were established in Novosibirsk to use much of the materials closer to their source.

Today, the factories and institutes draw thousands more each year, mostly from less developed areas of Siberia. Plants turn out much of the nation's machinery, farm equipment and chemicals, as well as fuels for use in the western Soviet Union.

Akademgorodok (Little Academic City) is the huge educational satellite of Novosibirsk. Its graduates are dispersed throughout the region to lend their technical skills to the task of unearthing Siberia's fuel and mineral wealth and to upgrade the productivity of Soviet collective and state farms throughout the nation.

Agreement On Ivory Imports

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — An American conservationist believes he has made strides toward preserving elephant herds in Africa and Asia by getting an agreement from Japanese carvers, major users of ivory, to severely restrict imports of elephant tusks.

But other wildlife specialists maintained that the agreement, though a positive step, is of dubious value because it is voluntary and because ivory consignments can easily be obtained with false documentation to make them appear legal.

The Japanese have been buying an estimated 300 metric tons of ivory tusks a year.

The American, Esmond Bradley Martin, a geographer and ivory-trade specialist living in Nairobi, said in an interview he got the agreement in Tokyo in August during talks with the Tokyo Ivory Arts and Crafts Association, which represents 48 firms and is the biggest group of ivory traders and carvers in Japan.

Subsequently, Sumio Ishida, president of the Tokyo Ivory Arts and Crafts Association, reported that a total of 75 Japanese ivory firms discussed Martin's proposals at a meeting Sept. 20 and agreed to adhere to them.

Martin said he considered the cooperation of the carvers important to elephant conservation because the Japanese government has taken no official steps to impose any restrictions on ivory imports.

He added that the retail trade in carved ivory is worth about $500 million a year and thatthe price of ivory has jumped from $37 a kilogram (2.2 pounds) in 1979 to about $75 now.

He described the agreement as a "breakthrough" in efforts to conserve African and Asian elephant populations.

Martin said he negotiated the voluntary restrictions on behalf of the African Elephant and Rhino Specialist Group, a subsidiary in Nairobi of the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

Under the agreement, the traders promise not to import ivory from any country in Asia, where the elephant is particularly endangered and the total population is down to around 35,000, or from the African countries of Burundi, Zaire, Tanzania and Sudan. Burundi and Zaire are major reshipment points for poached and smuggled ivory; poaching is heavy in Tanzania and Sudan.

Banning imports from Zaire "was an extremely difficult decision for the Japanese traders to make," Martin said, because that central African nation is the major source of high-quality hard ivory from forest elephants.

Zaire's Ministry of Environment and Nature, blaming mainly poaching, reported in June that the country's elephant population had fallen from 371,000 five years ago to 150,000 now.

The total population of African elephants, Martin said, is 1 million to 2 million. Conservationists disagree on how endangered Africa's elephants are, but there seemed to be little dispute that Asian elephants could face extinction.

KOREAN FOLK ART

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Auspicious Spirits: Korean Folk Paintings and Related Objects" will be on view at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art Nov. 8, 1984-Jan. 6, 1985.

The exhibition consists of some 50 works of Korean folk art from the Yi Dynasty (1392-1910).

Presented for the first time in the United States will be paintings, screens, scrolls, sculpture, ceramics, furniture, and handmade items of daily use.

Emphasizing primarily painting, "Auspicious Spirits" will focus on Korean folk art as the native art of the Korean people.

Special dashboard permits and license plates for handicapped parking can be purchased at the State License Agency, 718 Dickinson Avenue, or call 758-1193 for information.

Long Trek To Attend School

By FRANCISCO CONDE
Associated Press Writer

MURAS, Spain (AP) — Victor and Marina Castro's daily trip to their one-room schoolhouse begins with a ride on their father's shoulders across the Eume River. Then it's a climb up a steep hill, a wade through a small creek and a walk of nearly two miles.

But officials in the autonomous region of Galicia say the distances from homes to schools is just one of the enormous problems confronting pupils, educators and parents in this largely rural, mountainous and impoverished area in northwestern Spain, where the school dropout rate reaches 50 percent.

Adolfo Castro Cao, a 42-year-old farmer, says he is determined Victor, 9, and Marina, 16, will get to school every day because he never had a chance himself as a child.

On the days when the Eume River is too high for Castro to ford with his hip boots and sturdy staff, Victor and Marina have to walk half an hour to the nearest bridge.

Educators say that at least 50 percent of the schoolchildren in Galicia have to spend three hours on buses going to school and another three to get home, a period longer than the school day itself.

Unlike the rest of Spain where peasants traditionally lived in villages and went out to farm the land, the ruggedly individualistic farmers of Galicia live in isolation on their plots.

Esther Baamonde, the mayor of Muras and the teacher of both Victor and Marina in the tiny one-room school in the hamlet of Carelle, says a teacher shortage, lack of equipment and old school buildings pose problems even more serious than those of transportation.

Of the 62,000 school buildings in Spain, 32,000 are in Galicia, many of them no more than one-room sheds in hard-to-reach valleys and mountain basins, Mrs. Baamonde added in an interview.

She said some of the school buildings the 11 hamlets under the jurisdiction of Muras, a town of 2,500 about 75 miles northeast of the port of La Coruna, are built next to animal pens and the stench makes teaching and learning nearly impossible.

Teachers in Spain are obliged to accept assignments in out-of-the-way rural areas in order to receive their government education certificates, but most stay no longer than necessary, usually a year, Mrs. Baamonde said.

Ten years ago the World Bank provided funding for a Stanford University study of the Galician educational system.

The 1974 study by the California-based university recommended that Galicia set up a series of centrally located consolidated schools, following a rural education program adopted for the State of California.

But although the regional government has spent more than $24 million on vehicles and has built a number of new elementary and secondary school, a spokesman for the Parent-Teacher Association in La Coruna said many are not satisfied.

Fernando Garrido Suarez said the new system has destroyed many of the positive values of small community schools, such as the close parent-teacher-pupil relationship.

Teachers now commute to consolidated schools from larger cities in the region, thereby losing contact with the rural environment from which their students come, he added

Mrs. Baamonde said many rural parents, often with little or no education themselves, keep their children home after the first few years of elementary school because they don't like the long hours of transportation.

Children in Spain are required by law to remain in school until they are 14 years old, but as many as a third of the school-age children in the country leave before then, according to national Education Ministry statistics.

The statistics also indicate that at least half the rural students all over Spain fail to complete the eight-year Basic General Education Program.

Garrido said he sees little way to improve the basic rural educational system in Galicia.

"It would certainly help if there were some way to correct the historical situation of people living so far apart from each other in Galicia's rural areas," he said. "But I see no trend in that direction."

MEXICAN HONORED

Takamura, who died in 1956, was one of Japan's leading sculptors.

Once Plentiful In Maine, The Puffin Is Now A Rare Bird

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

COAST O' MAINE (AP) — It was, just as the weatherman had predicted, "a fine day for drying hay around Millinocket."

Along the coast the fog had left to go get some more. You could see clear to Ireland. It was a day to be bottled in memory, a day finally to find that beguiling bird with the beguiling name, the puffin. Locating puffins, however, is achieved by indirection. It involves scouting, listening.

Puffins, like eccentric Boston dowagers, used to frequent the offshore islands along the coast of Maine. You can still spot the dowagers, leisurely side-stroking in sensible bathing suits in 55-degree water fit only for children and harbor seals.

But the puffins have become rarities. Too many predators. Too many people.

Puffins look like a cross between a tuxedoed penguin, a flying turtle and a parrot with a triangular red and yellow bill usually clamped on a mouthful of tiny herring. They'll stand motionless for hours, like English butlers. They growl.

As with salmon, puffins will put to sea for several years, then return to the rock of their births to breed. Trouble is, they haven't been breeding much in Maine.

That's hard to figure. Mainers can live with most anything. Take the fog. It's not a preoccupation. Mainers regard it about the way Parisians do hemlines. If it lifts, fine. If not, it will some day.

There's a lady Down East a ways who was cooking up a lunch for a visit from the local garden club. She glanced out the kitchen window and saw her almost daughter-in-law up on the roof helping with shingling. It being warm, the girl had taken her tops off. The woman of the house was going to say something, thought better of it and went back to making watercress sandwiches and lady fingers.

That same summer down toward Machias the Coast Guard suspected that an inbound yacht was a drug runner up from the Caribbean, a not unreasonable inference these days. As a cutter approached, the yacht's crew dumped an estimated 10 tons of hashish overboard, then scuttled the boat. The hash came to rest, as fate would have it, on a favorite scalloping ground.

As time passed, scallopers began showing up with new radars, even new boats. Finally somebody got nabbed with enough hashish to make him a continuing attraction in New York on the nightly news. But this was Maine. Local justice, figuring divine intervention and not man's design had enriched the scalloping bed and you couldn't send the whole fleet to jail anyhow, fined the offender $50.

Well, this puffin-hunting boat was up from Maryland crusing around with one ear listening for easygoing folkore and the other for whistle buoys in the fog. If you miss the buoy, pretty soon you'll hear gulls spooked off their rock by your approach. Then you'll hear waves hitting the rock. At that point, best turn around and try something else.

No, he didn't know much about the puffins, said Ken Eaton who sells lobsters out of an old soda pop cooler from his boat yard in Castine. He could make a fortune selling old marine tools if he ever went into the antique business.

"Why d'you think you have to hurry?" he asked when the puffin hunters said they were going to tie up an extra hour to go uptown and eat blueberry pancakes. It's that kind of boat yard.

In spite of their formal attire, puffins don't hang out around Northeast Harbor on Mt. Desert Island. Rockefellers and Fords do, and Bostonians unto the fifth generation. Summer people even wear shoes to their cocktail parties. That kind of place.

But it's only a handful of miles to this summer's Ellsworth Chainsaw "Massacre" over on the mainland. Two lumberjacks were in town to do some trimming and got in a row at the Dugout Bar when they tried to cut in on some local women. The visitors were skulled with so many beer bottles they went out to their pickup and started up a couple of five-foot chain saws. The patrons slammed shut the sheet steel door of the tavern and threw the riot bar. The saws went through them like green corn through a summer tourist.

George Kesaris, a young lawyer in Bar Harbor, was assigned to defend the lumberjacks. His first thought was to employ the defense that "boys will be boys." But there were too many witnesses like the one who said the saws came so close to him he could smell the hot oil, the closest anyone came to becoming a statistic. So he trusted in Maine's sense of proportion as demonstrated in the scalloping case. His clients got three weeks.

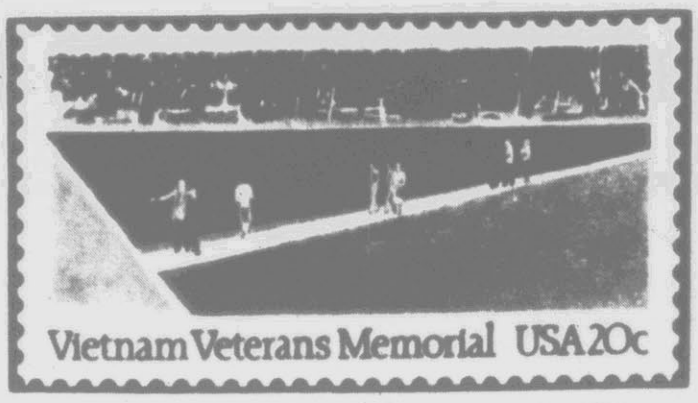
The puffin trail heated up over in Rockport where the boat had gone because two friends wanted to get married under sail. The ceremony was held on starboard tack so's the floating church would have right of way over any boat that saw all the flags and wildflowers tied to the lifelines and champagne and hugging and kissing and still couldn't figure out that what was going on was holy matrimony.

Teedee Clossey, a sailmaker in Camden, was at the reception. Teedee had been a lighthouse keeper in the Coast Guard on Matinicus Rock. Plenty of puffins there, he said, but wear a hat because the terns will divebomb you like Hitchcock's "Birds" if you get near their nests.

Matinicus Rock, however, gathers other rocks around it like QE2 does ladies in waiting at Buckingham Palace. No sense wrecking the church just for a puffin.

It's a rare day when the Maine National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weatherman can please all his constituents. Potato farmers up in Aroostook County may want rain, dairymen around Millinocket want dry hay, photographers want foggy mood shots and lobstermen want to see where they're going.

Finally a day came that was letter perfect for haying, lobstering and puffinry. The boat from Maryland set out from Vinalhaven for Matinicus Rock, 15 miles to sea. Four were aboard including Paul Doering who had led the same four on a puffin hunt the year before through the lava fields of Iceland which lasted all day and turned up nothing.



VIETNAM VETERANS STAMP — The U.S. Postal Service will issue a 20-cent Vietnam Veterans Memorial Stamp Nov. 10 in Washington, D.C. The memorial was designed by Maya Ying Lin and is composed of two black granite walls, each nearly 250 feet long, set into a grassy slope between the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial. (AP Laserphoto)

Paul can take any bird or leave it except, inexplicably, the puffin. They eat puffins in Iceland, but Paul wouldn't hear of it. His wife had to eat a guillemot, another Arctic sea bird, instead. Gamy and chewy, but good.

The boat was tied to a mooring buoy and a landing party sent ashore. The day before the Audubon Society had taken over jurisdiction of the island from the Coast Guard, the light now being automated. The island was off limits, an Audubon man said, because petrels were still nesting in burrows among the rocks. He said there had been 500 puffins on Matinicus 10 days ago. Then the fog came in. When it lifted, the puffins were gone for whatever puffin reasons. But that morning's count by spotters had seen a solitary bird. Maybe he could be spotted from the sea.

The boat began stalking the island like a mongoose around a cobra. Matinicus had almost been circumnavigated when Paul gave a whispered shout, like the Passamaquoddy fog horn strangling on kelp.

"There she puffins!"

The boat moved up to the edge of the colorful lobster pots. (In Maine, when you can't see pot floats in the fog any more, you're either in very deep water or very shallow, take your pick).

The puffin didn't flinch or even growl. Was it a decoy? No, the Audubon Society wouldn't pull a sleazy trick like that. Besides, the breeding season was over.

By a vote of 4-0 it was deemed to be a live, real puffin.

At that, the Laurie Lee, a lobster boat out of Matinicus Island, gunned to a stop alongside. The fisherman tossed a 3-pounder on deck.

"Here's suppah," he said and sped off.

NEW YORK (AP) — Little Richard, who rocked and shocked the '50s and '60s with his mile-high pompadour, sequined suits and pancake makeup, may be a full-time evangelist, but he'd like to reclaim his throne as king of rock 'n' roll.

Though he swears he'll never again get up on stage and screech his calling-card, "Ooh, my soul," Little Richard is nevertheless anxious for the world to remember him as the man who broke the racial barrier in radio music, and who stunned audiences by performing in drag.

"That's over. I won't do that again," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Riverside, Calif. "It's not that there's something bad about rock 'n' roll. The reason I don't want to sing is I'm 51 years old now and I just want to dedicate my years to the service of God."

In his new biography, "The Life and Times of Little Richard: The Quasar of Rock" (Harmony Books, $15.95), he talks about his beginnings in Macon, Ga.

He was born Richard Penniman, and left home at 14 to sell "snake oil" with Dr. Hudson's Medicine Show. He soon became involved with various road bands in the South and toured with them until he formed his own group, Little Richard and the Upsetters. He landed his first record contact in 1951.

Little Richard shattered the white airwaves with "Tutti Frutti" — radio was segregated at that time with stations that played only so-called black music and stations that only played so-called white music — until 1977, the year he quit performing.

Entertainers including Elvis Presley, Elton John, Otis Redding, the Everly Brothers, Paul McCartney, David Bowie, Peter Allen and Mick Jagger have credited Little Richard with influencing what they sing and how they perform it.

"When I came on the scene, it was 'swing and sway with Sammy Kaye,'" Richard recalled. "I couldn't swing, I couldn't sway, so I rocked."

But Richard, who says he was once paid $10,000 for an hour's work, is now anxious for the music industry to pay him the royalties he says he is owed for such hits as "Tutti Frutti," "Long Tall Sally," Slippin' And Slidin'," "Lucille," "Good Golly Miss Molly" and "Ooh, My Soul."

"My name should have been written in the stars of Hollywood's sidewalk, and it never has been," Richard said. "I believe that the public gave me the recognition, but I didn't receive it from the industry, like I should have."

Richard filed a $112 million lawsuit in June against Specialty Records, Inc., ATV Music Corp. and Venice Music. He also testified at a special congressional hearing in September about how the music industry exploited him and other musicians.

"I've haven't been paid for my music in 25 years," he said. "Only BMI (Broadcast Music International), they pay me."

The singer-turned-evangelist said he sold "Tutti Frutti" to Specialty in 1955 for $50, and got a half-cent for every record sold.

"I've seen my music being done over and over again," he said. "I made my contribution. In fact, it's almost like the whole industry came from me."

When Little Richard walked onstage and tore into the pounding, opening riff of "Tutti Frutti" — A-womp-bomp-a-loo-mop, alop-bam-boom! — crowds would go insane. Women would throw their underwear on stage and he would toss back anything he could tear off his body without becoming legally indecent.

His post-performance back room orgies were legend, filled with drugs and band members and hangers-on of both sexes, Richard said in his book.

Though he's traded rock 'n' roll for the rock of ages, Richard makes no apologies for his earlier behavior.

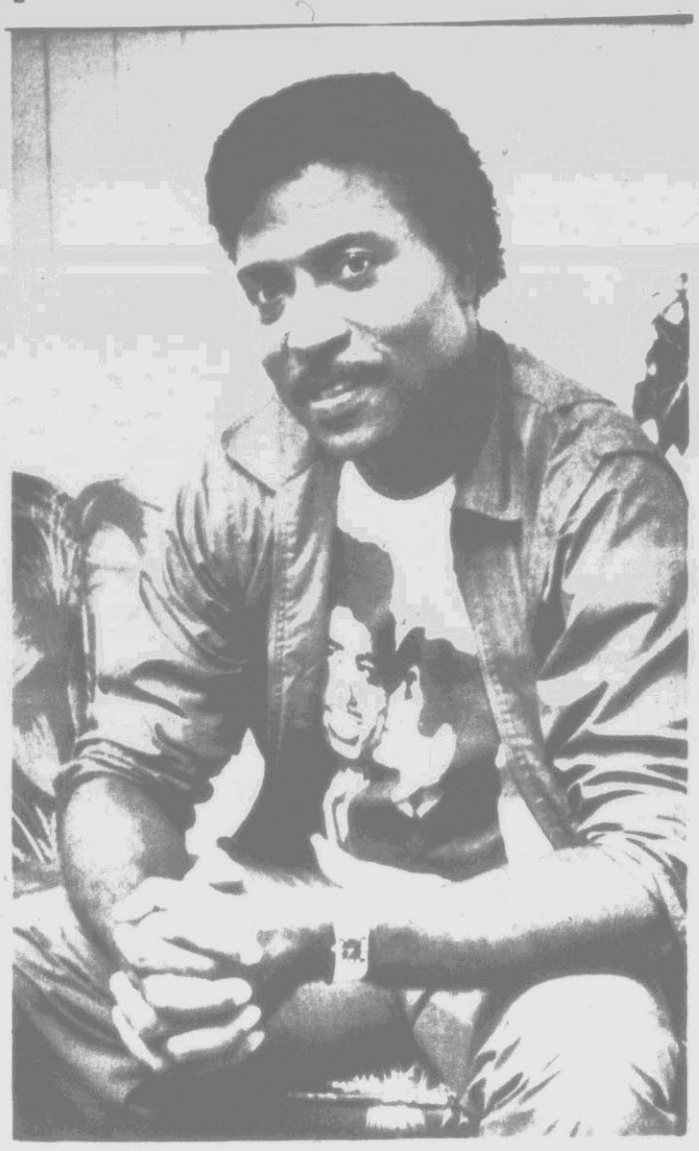
"I had a great time," he said. "I would do it again the same way, and I would be a minister the same way, I'm sure. It was an education that I needed, and there was a graduation that was waiting, so I graduated."

Little Richard stopped performing in 1977 with a $1,000-a-day drug habit, he said. He started selling bibles and going to revivals. Now he spends most of his time on the road, preaching the message of the Remnant Church of God, which teaches the Ten Commandments.

But he said he hasn't lost touch with the music business. He said his friends include Michael Jackson and Paul McCartney, and performers sometimes seek his advice.

"Prince and Michael Jackson are me in this generation — and Boy George and David Bowie. And if anybody ever saw me, they know that," he said.

Though he said these performers have talent, he thought they used more gimmickry than he did. "I wanted mine to be pure and real," he said.



ROCK TO RELIGION TO ROCK . . . Little Richard, the rock-n-roll star of the '50s and '60s who was known for his mile-high pompadour, sequined suits and pancake makeup, has in recent years become a full-time evangelist, but now he'd like to reclaim his throne as king of rock-n-roll. Buckingham Pleased With New Album

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Lindsey Buckingham has several reasons to be pleased with his solo album, "Go Insane."

The Washington Post called it one of the year's best albums and added, "Buckingham asserts himself as more than just a pop craftsman — as one of the most original forces in rock 'n' roll today."

He had a two-album deal. "Law and Order" was on Asylum Records in 1981. "Go Insane" is on Elektra. As soon as the company heard "Go Insane," before anybody knew how it would sell, Buckingham was offered another two-record deal.

The LP is popular, going to No. 39 on the best-selling chart of Sept. 29. The "Go Insane" single went to No. 24 on that date.

Also, Buckingham, a member of Fleetwood Mac for 10 years, was pleased with an album he made alone — he wrote words and music, sang everything and played all instruments. "It was great to jump out of the Fleetwood Mac microcosm a little bit," he says.

"It was reaffirming. When you work with someone that long, it becomes difficult to tell where your talent starts and stops and someone else's begins. I came away feeling very strong and confident by the end of this album. The effectiveness I suspected for a long time I had was actually there. It wasn't just the combination of people."

Buckingham had intended to use Fleetwood Mac's record producer, Richard Dashut. "I waited for him three or four months, with some of the tracks that are on this record in a mid-state of development. I didn't want to take them too far. He was working on Mick Fleetwood's album, which was taking longer and longer. I think it took over a year.

"I understood but it was a minicrisis. My manager and I talked about it and approached Roy Thomas Baker. He is not producing any more. He got me together with Gordon Fordyce. We'd never met. He has a totally different way of looking at things than I do, which was good.

"I went to England and played my songs for Roy. He chucked out about three-fourths of them."

"Go Insane" is coproduced by Buckingham and Fordyce, with Baker as executive producer. Buckingham says, "Roy claims he hadn't been in a studio this much since the days he produced Queen, which was quite a while ago. He was in and out of the studio, overseeing. I was very flattered he was willing to spend so much time.

"He encouraged me to do things that represented more of a departure from Fleetwood Mac, which was good and something that probably Richard would not have done. The ones he picked of the ones I had tended to be fairly much a departure anyway.

"Gordon flew to Los Angeles and took an apartment. I have a 24-track studio in my garage. We did about two-thirds of the album there. My house in Bel Aire isn't huge but it is secluded. We can crank up in the garage and not bother the neighbors, which we did for about four months. Then we went into a studio in Hollywood for two months and that was it."

Asked about the title song, Buckingham says, "One thing the album addresses is that it is okay to go a little bit insane from time to time. It can be quite cathartic as long as you understand the context. And as long as it doesn't go too far; as long as you reel yourself back in.

"I was going with a girl for six years. She was behaving in a manner that was causing a lot of problems. She wasn't going insane. She was doing a lot of things that were causing problems for both of us.

"By her going, in a sense, a little mad, I was experiencing that with her secondhand. I was still committed to the thing and waiting for her to work it out. It is difficult in those transitional days to know what reality is. At some point I had to cut the bonds and get back to some sort of foundation, which I have done.

"Some of the songs in the album are directly about that. If there is any one subject being explored, I think that is it."

The way he reels himself back in, Buckingham says, is through creating music. "It's a lot more fun and cheaper than seeing a shrink. I may go through a three-day period when I feel suicidal. Nothing seems real or purposeful or connected."

Talking about the album in more general terms, Buckingham says, "I see this as a high-tech folk album.

"There's high touch vs. high tech. For every little bit of technology introduced into people's lives, they need a sense of human contact to balance that out. I think this album does that pretty well. The tools that were used were high tech, like the keyboard computer where you put in a disk and it'll play back digitally recorded samples.

"The subject matter and vocal performances are really high touch. It is music for people.

"I think most of present-day, avant-garde pop does not seem willing or able to strike that kind of balance. More of it seems to be on the tech side."

Words come last when he's writing a song, Buckingham says. "A lot of times, in the process of creating, you have to pretty much let go of ego and lay yourself bare to a process. In a sense it's like painting, at least when I do it.

"You're starting with a blank canvas. You may have a vision of what you may want something to be.

Focus On Rock 'n Roll Music And The Finding Of A Faulkner Script

Unpublished Faulkner Work Discovered In An Old Desk

By JANE E. ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Louis Daniel Brodsky opened a hidden desk compartment in a California house last year and stumbled on 400 pages of original movie manuscripts by William Faulkner.

"I recognized instantly Faulkner's own minute idiosyncratic printing in the inclusions and deletions, arrows and strikeovers and shiftings and page numberings," said Brodsky, a poet, Faulkner scholar and owner of a private collection of the famed author's works.

"I pulled back the wad of loose sheets, letting air and light fall around a script entitled, 'The De Gaulle Story' by William Faulkner. Below this script was a second one with the identical title, and below it, a third in brown wrappers entitled 'Battle Cry' by William Faulkner," he recently told Faulkner scholars meeting at the University of Mississippi.

This December, the University Press of Mississippi, in cooperation with the Center for the Study of Southern Culture, will release "The De Gaulle Story." The publication comes 40 years after Gen. Charles De Gaulle returned to help liberate his country from Vichy French and Nazi occupying troops.

The scripts, written in 1942 while Faulkner was under contract to Warner Bros. Pictures, will be published as Volume III of a seven-part series, "Faulkner: A Comprehensive Guide to the Brodsky Collection."

Though "The De Gaulle Story" never was filmed, the early drafts and accompanying documents reveal where Oxford's Nobel laureate directed his energies from 1942-45.

Though best known for such novels as "Absalom, Absalom," "The Sound and the Fury" and "As I Lay Dying," the 1950 Nobel Prize winner also was a screenwriter. Faulkner wrote such war movies of the '30s as "Today We Live" and "The Road to Glory."

During World War II, the writer expressed his patriotism by joining the battery of Hollywood war epic writers. At Warner Bros., Faulkner shared credit for "The Life and Death of a Bomber," "Battle Cry" and "To Have and Have Not."

According to Robert Buckner, the producer of the De Gaulle project, President Franklin D. Roosevelt suggested the movie idea to studio head Jack Warner as a way to enhance the public image of De Gaulle, a prospective ally against Adolf Hitler.

On July 27, 1942, Warner Bros. hired Faulkner to write a screenplay based on De Gaulle's life.

In many ways, it was a labor of love for the Southerner. Faulkner adored France. He read French poetry and visited the country in 1925.

In his own abstract of the script, Faulkner wrote: "This is the story of Free France, told in the simple terms of a Breton village: the collapse of France and the hopes and struggle for rejuvenation as seen through the eyes of villagers, told by means of village characters who are themselves the common denominator of France.

"It is a thesis that lust and greed and force can never conquer the human spirit."

Robert W. Hamblin, a professor at Southwest Missouri State University and co-editor of the Brodsky series, said Faulkner's admiration of the courageous Free French fight against the Nazis "contributed significantly to Faulkner's faith in man's capacity to endure and prevail."

Hamblin said the manuscript "provides an important, previously missing link between the work of Faulkner's middle and later years."

Brodsky contends that Faulkner's scripts will "dispel the myth he was a crappy screenwriter," and was creatively fallow while living in California.

"The De Gaulle Story is very special because it appears to be the only original full-length script which Faulkner wrote without compositional collaboration," Hamblin said.

In their book, Hamblin and Brodsky tried to determine why the film was never produced. They said the disenchantment of Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill with De Gaulle was one hindrance, along with the difficulty of finding an actor to portray the French leader.

The studio turned its back on Faulkner's script, which resurfaced more than 35 years later in the rare book market.

Brodsky first acquired more than 2,500 pages of Faulkner materials that escaped a 1977 purge of Warner Bros. archives. The Missouri collector paid a California dealer about $120,000 in 1983 for the lot, which included a full-length typed filmscript of "The De Gaulle Story."

Soon after his purchase, Brodsky received a telephone call from a Hollywood scriptwriter, Albert I. Bezzerides, who had provided Faulkner with a place to live in 1944-45 when both were under contract to Warner Bros.

During a visit to Bezzerides' home in Woodland Hills, Calif., Brodsky found the hand-corrected manuscripts, as well as background materials that had spent years in mildewed boxes "stacked from floor to ceiling."

"All at once, Brodsky recalled, "I realized the monumentality of what I was holding."

Resource Centers Offer Parents Help In Filling Family's Needs

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Parenting used to be considered a skill you learned on the job. But in a mobile, changing society without the traditions of the extended family, many people feel the need for a little help. In response, parent resource centers have mushroomed throughout the nation, mutual support groups where parents bring their toddlers, swap experiences and get professional advice.

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Pam Aulson is a 37-year-old author of an annual how-to book on crafts. She has written countless articles for ladies magazines and served in editorial capacities for several publications in Manhattan.

Parenting should be a snap for such a woman, a Yuppie if ever there was one. Well ... yes and no.

Ms. Aulson, the mother of three sons, says she was absolutely thrown a few years ago when her second boy had to go back on the bottle because he was not getting enough nourishment from solid foods.

The oldest child then also demanded a bottle. A classic sibling rivalry. The pediatrician said not to give the older child the bottle.

The pediatrician, however, did not have to watch the screaming and the tantrums at bottle time.

"I just didn't know what to do," Ms. Aulson says.

What she did was take the problem to the Parent Resource Center in Port Washington and toss it out to other mothers in the parenting group she joined.

"We just went around the table and talked about it. Other mothers had dealt with the same thing. They said 'just give him the bottle and he'll tire of it immediately.' That's what I did and they were absolutely right."

Parent resource centers such as this one are springing up across the country. Some parents say they join because they are new to a neighborhood and it is a good way to meet people with similar interests. Others get involved initially because they see a specific course they would like to take.

It also gives a young child a chance to meet other kids while mom gets a chance to read a book or just chat with other mothers.

The Family Resource Coalition, a national clearing house for such organizations, has about 1,500 members — parenting centers of some kind. But Linda Lipton, the director, says that is probably just the tip of the iceberg.

"We have heard estimates that there are 10,000 to 50,000 of these kinds of centers," she says. "Some of them operate out of people's homes so they're just not in the phone book. Others are part of church programs or existing social agencies and we don't know about them."

Ms. Lipton feels there are three reasons why such centers are expanding.

"The extended family is no longer there, or not to the degree that it was," says Ms. Lipton. "There are stresses now on every member of the family and there is not the old support system for the young mother with several children.

"The second reason is the incredible mobility of the society. The networks of neighbors are not there or do not stay there. This creates an isolation for people whether they live in the suburbs or a high-rise ghetto. The hope and the expectation of many of these centers is that people will use them to meet people and form their own networks.

"The third reason is the tremendous explosion of knowledge about child development issues," she says. "The professionals of today have a great desire to share this with those who have the greatest impact on future generations — the parents themselves."

The program in this New York bedroom community of 20,000 is entering its fifth year and counts 350 members. The basic membership is $20 a year, which enables a mother to bring her youngster three times a week to the drop-in program, where the youngster mixes with others while mom supervises. But she can read a book or chat with another mother, if things are running smoothly.

"At first, I thought I would never talk with the others. I thought the women probably just sat around and discussed what were the best kind of diapers," says Barbara Habermann, 37, a career woman who had worked in advertising and sold computer programs before she got married and had her first baby when she was almost 35.

"But I went anyway because I felt so isolated. I was always on the go before and then I suddenly wasn't. I found it was very hard."

Lynn Najman, a mid-30s mother with her 13-month-old daughter, Elizabeth, walked into the center this fall at the open house just to check it out.

Elizabeth quickly headed for the wonderful new toys she saw, and best yet, toddlers her age. Her mother says she had heard about the center from some friends and decided to drop by.

She was glad she did. "I never realized how isolated the suburbs can be until I had a child."

The center also offers courses run by a neighborhood professional — a social worker, child psychologist or nurse. Where no special expertise is needed, a member of the center is the leader.

One such program, called "PlaygroupLunch," is for children 13 to 20 months old. They learn to play together, using the center's toys, and then to try and sit down and eat with each other.

"I guess you can really call it lunch," says Mary Geiger, another mother attending the center, "because they do manage to eat something. But they're learning social skills."

Human Hormone Creates Ethical, Medical Dilemma

Human growth hormone to compensate for natural deficiencies has been so rare it was reserved for youngsters whose own bodies lacked it. Now, through genetic engineering, the substance may soon be available in unlimited quantities. Doctors expect enormous demand from otherwise healthy people who want to be taller and stronger. But thereby hangs a serious dilemma. Should it be freely prescribed for all comers?

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The calls come into Dr. Selna Kaplan's office nearly every day, from anxious parents, from athletes, from people who want to be taller or stronger.

The callers are seeking human growth hormone. Ms. Kaplan, a pediatrician at the University of California in San Francisco, explains that the drug is scarce and must be reserved for children whose own growth hormone is lacking.

Early next year, however, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is expected to approve the use of genetically engineered human growth hormone. The supply will then become limitless.

When that happens, doctors will face a difficult ethical and medical dilemma: Should growth hormone be freely prescribed to normal, healthy children who are short?

"The pressure to treat will be enormous," says Dr. Jennifer Bell, a pediatrician and growth hormone specialist at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York. "The criteria of our society are that a kid should be 5 foot 9, and if he's 6 foot 4, all the better."

Like many of her colleagues, she is concerned that doctors will too easily give in to that pressure.

"I've been burying my head in the sand, saying I want to know if it's safe before I make that decision," she said. "If it's found to be safe, I hope I would have the strength to limit it. How can you say that a child will be happier shorter or taller?"

Dr. Paul Saenger, who treats growth hormone-deficient children at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, noted that safety is not the only question. Much remains to be learned about whether the hormone will do anything in normal children who are short.

"There is no evidence that growth hormone treatment will indeed affect the final height of these children who are making a normal amount of growth hormone but are short," Saenger says.

"Until this information is in, widespread use should be curtailed, because it may be potentially dangerous," he said. High blood pressure, diabetes and heart disease are all possible side effects, Saenger says.

Official concern about the possible abuse of the hormone has been growing. In December, the American Academy of Pediatrics took an official position, concluding that the hormone "should not be used indiscriminately" because its safety in normal children "has not been established."

That kind of caution may be lost on aggressive, affluent parents "who think height is something you can buy," says Saenger, one of the authors of an article on growth hormone that appeared recently in The Hastings Center Report, published by the Hastings Center, a bioethics think tank in Hastings-upon-Hudson, N.Y.

And growth hormone treatment will be expensive. The availability of a genetically engineered hormone manufactured by Genentech of South San Francisco, Calif., is expected to do little to lower the annual treatment cost of $5,000 to $20,000.

Whatever the cost, the fears of some parents that their children will be hampered by short stature are largely supported by scientific studies.

Martin Benjamin, a Michigan State University philosophy professor and one of Saenger's co-authors on the article in The Hastings Center Report cites a variety of studies showing how important height is.

In one such study, 72 percent of employment recruiters preferred a hypothetical 6-foot-1 candidate over an equally qualified 5-foot-5 candidate.

In other studies, taller library science graduates were found to earn more than shorter graduates. Men between 5 feet 6 inches and 5 feet 7 inches tall had salaries $2,500 lower than comparably trained colleagues who were 6 feet or 6 feet 1 inch tall.

Some 2,500 U.S. children are currently receiving human growth hormone, now obtained exclusively from cadavers. The lion's share of the hormone is controlled by the federal government's National Hormone and Pituitary Program, which provides the drug without charge to children who are clearly deficient in growth hormone and who are participating in research studies.

Human growth hormone is also available from two commercial sources in the United States.

After 25 years of experience using injections of human growth hormone to boost the height of children who lack it, the American Academy of Pediatrics is convinced of its effectiveness and safety in children with growth hormone deficiencies.

Nevertheless, the academy said the drug had some side effects that might be more pronounced in children who were short but not deficient in growth hormone.

The children may form antibodies to the hormone, rejecting it as if it were an invading organism. It is also possible that the drug will damage their thyroid glands, cause high blood pressure or disrupt their body's ability to handle sugar, creating a form of diabetes, the academy said.

Little can be done to control the misuse of growth hormone, except to educate doctors and parents about the hormone's potential dangers, says Ms. Kaplan.

"We are trying to reach physicians and parents," she said. "We've had some success with the drug companies keeping an eye on any physician who orders an inordinate amount of it. Right now, we have control, because it's available in limited amounts.

"But in the future, when it's freely available, I don't know what's going to happen."

Volunteers Offer Study Of Time Lag

By SCIENCE DIGEST
A Hearst magazine

Visitors entering Tom Stunkard's windowless, soundproof room never say "good morning" or "good evening," and they scrupulously leave their wristwatches outside. Stunkard (not his real name) has no clock, no radio, no TV — nothing to give him time clues.

Friendly people bring him meals or come by to chat. All of them know exactly what time it is. But they won't tell.

Stunkard is one of about 50 male volunteers, 35 to 60 years old, who will be paid to live in isolation for 15 days at the Institute of Chronobiology, part of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in White Plains. They are taking part in a meticulous study of jet lag, the discombobulations of the human "body clock" caused by swift crossing of time zones, according to an article in Science Digest's October issue.

Our body clock — our customary patterns of eating and sleeping, for example — runs on a circadian rhythm, about a 24-hour cycle. But rapid transfer to a new daily rhythm throws the clock off kilter.

The jet lag study, headed by research psychologist Timothy Monk, is part of a larger investigation by Curtis Graeber, a physiological psychologist at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif. Graeber, associate Philippa Gander and their coworkers hope to learn exactly how the body clock is affected and how long it takes to recover.

Timothy Monk sends his volunteers to other time zones artificially. For about a week, their temperature is taken every 60 seconds, their mental acuity and motor skills are tested, and their sleep and dream patterns are recorded. At various intervals, their mood is assessed. Then suddenly, their entire routine — meals, lights-out and so on — is advanced by five to eight hours, as though they had flown to Europe, and they are monitored for another week.

"We want to know how long it takes for the circadian rhythm to synchronize with the new routine," Monk explains. "Mood is affected; subjects become uptight and tend to lose motivation. Our early data indicate that the effect can last up to a week, as can the physiological changes, such as an altered temperature cycle." (Our temperature naturally rises and falls at certain times of day.)

Monk is now testing various antidotes to jet lag.

A Year Later, Grenadians Sorting Things Out

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — A year after they stormed ashore, U.S. military men are still greeted with wide, warm smiles and friendly salutes by Grenadians, but some "Yankee Go Home" graffiti is beginning to show up.

"We're still appreciated, but we're in the process of wearing out our welcome," said Jay Guild, a member of the Army 57th Medical Unit on his fourth tour of duty since the invasion Oct. 25, 1983.

Two GIs have married Grenadian women. But there have been at least two fights between Americans and Grenadians, and a 13-year-old Grenadian was accidentally killed in August by a soldier cleaning his gun.

The True Blue area dormitories from where the first American medical students were evacuated during the invasion have been torn down, making way for Grenada's new airport. Some 430 students, down from the 631 here during the invasion, live in crowded quarters on the Grand Anse campus, next door to the government-owned Grenada Beach Hotel, now the headquarters for the remaining 270 U.S. military personnel.

A U.S. grant is being used to convert one of the battle sites, Fort Frederick, into a tourist attraction. Some Florida businessmen are interested in building a hotel at Butler House, the burned, bombed-out former residence of leftist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, whose execution Oct. 19 by radical soldiers in his own army triggered the invasion six days later.

The long-awaited — and at one time highly controversial — international airport, mostly built by Cuba and completed by the United States, will open soon. Grenadians hope it will boost the island's tourism industry, one of the least-developed in the Caribbean, by allowing direct connections from the U.S. mainland, Canada and Western Europe.

At least 120 cruise-ship calls have been scheduled, double last year's total, and yachters are seeking out the lush green island.

Dozens of American investors — attracted by tax holidays of up to 15 years plus Washington-offered incentives ranging from duty-free entry to insurance against civil unrest and expropriation by future governments — are putting together projects ranging from clothing factories to new beachfront hotels.

But for many Grenadians, such signs for hope are offset by bitter memories of the island's troubled past, and a fear that history could repeat itself.

Elections set for Dec. 3 will pit as many as seven political parties, and the strongest one may be that of Sir Eric Gairy, whose excesses provoked the 1979 leftist coup that grew into last year's bloody takeover by more-radical elements.

"We've been cursed. The Grenadian people have been wounded many times. We have to heal the wounds. The month of December will be make or break for this country," George Brizan told residents as he campaigned door-to-door recently.

"We have two roads to choose. One is the path to confrontation, victimization and vengeance. Tourism would disappear overnight. Investors would leave."

Brizan, a 41-year-old educator, is campaigning for the New National Party, a moderate coalition counted upon by the United States and its Caribbean allies in the elections.

The latter years of rule by Gairy, the island's leader for most of three decades, were marked by corruption, calls for United Nations study of Unidentified Flying Objects, a high living style ("the quintessence of excellence," he said), close ties with Chile's rightist military government dictatorship, and use of thugs to crack down on his leftist foes.

Gairy, who won seven of eight elections held here, ended his five-year exile in January and immediately began reorganizing his Grenada United Labor Party (GULP).

Gairy rarely ventures from a friend's large pink house here since being heckled in two earlier appearances. His followers come to him, to hear him speak and pray.

"He's not a god. He doesn't drug them. He's not obeah (witchcraft). But they sit down and study it and know they can survive better with him than anyone else," said Peter Lashley, 36, a union organizer who spent 3½ years in jail during Bishop's tenure. "They know he is the one who woke us up and led us."

Gairy claims that criticism of his person and his positions stems mostly from "communist propaganda." He says, however, that he has learned from the past and will be more tolerant and forgiving.

Some Grenadians are skeptical.

"Gairy has revenge vibes," said Rudolph Augustine, 28, a taxi driver.

Business leaders warn that Gairy's return to power would curtail tourism, investment and the generous foreign aid. U.S. officials here say many would-be investors have stopped short of actually beginning their projects, preferring to await the election outcome.

"I don't believe he can change so fundamentally as he says he has," said businessman Geoffrey Thompson. "I believe he would behave exactly as he did in the past, probably more Draconian. It would create a fertile ground for the left to come back a second time."

A former Bishop Cabinet minister, Kendrick Radix, predicted: "In a few weeks, there would be another revolution."

Gairy's support is generally estimated at about one-fourth of the 48,000-strong electorate. It is a dedicated following that reveres Gairy for bringing organized labor, land reforms, and independence from Britain.

A split of the remaining vote could return him as prime minister.

In hopes of avoiding that, the prime ministers of neighboring St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Barbados and St. Lucia in August huddled with moderate leaders. The result was the New National Party coalition formed from the Grenada National Party, headed by 66-year-old Herbert Blaize who defeated Gairy in 1962; the youth-oriented National Democratic Party of George Brizan, and the Grenada Democratic Movement, that was organized in exile last year.

The new coalition party has the backing of Grenada's middle class and business community, but it must lure some of the 40 percent of voters under age 30. Many supported Bishop, and appear disillusioned now.

Merle James, 27, giggled as Brizan described his plans. "That's politicians' talk," she said. "What they say and what they do always different."

Also competing is the Maurice Bishop Patriotic Movement, led by Radix and former Agriculture Minister George Louison.

It asks young Grenadians to keep Bishop's ideals alive, while blaming past problems on the more-radical faction led by Bernard Coard, awaiting trial here with 18 others on charges of murder and conspiracy in Bishop's execution.

Most Grenadians, according to surveys, and many political and business leaders wanted elections delayed to allow more time to recover from the events of last October. But restoring democracy was a U.S. reason given for last year's invasion, and the eight-man interim council appointed in its aftermath is comprised of bureaucrats from regional and international institutions who are anxious to return to their regular jobs.

The council has said it doesn't have a mandate to make major policy decisions. It has moved to spur the private sector after 4½ years of socialistic rule, but unemployment remains at one-third of the work force.

The council will leave for its successors such decisions as when to let Cuba claim a damaged airliner left behind and whether to repay some $1.5 million in loans from no-longer-friendly countries such as Libya and East Germany.

Meanwhile, British experts are building a 500-member police force, while 22 U.S. Army experts are training an 80-man counter-insurgency unit.

U.S. officials want to get Grenada on firm financial and political footing, then return to a multilateral policy approach for the English-speaking Caribbean region. About $45 million in U.S. funds will have been spent here by the end of this year, but it went quickly.

FORT MILL, S.C. — A South Carolina professional artist, Edward Rice of North Augusta, has won the $2,500 best-of-show purchase award in the 26th annual Springs Industries Art show which is currently on view at the Lancaster, S.C., National Guard Armory.

More than 700 art works are on display through Oct. 21. Juror for the show was Nicolai Cikovsky, curator of American Art at the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. The annual competition is open to artists from the two Carolinas.

The five $500 category merit award winners selected by Cikovsky are:

- Jean McWhorter, Columbia, S.C., mixed media.
- Bob Doster, Lancaster, S.C., sculpture.
- Steven Miller, Rock Hill, S.C., paintings/drawings on paper.
- Robert Graham, Greensboro, N.C., easel paintings.
- Richard Mayberry, Charlotte, N.C., graphics.

In addition to the top six award winners, another 45 works were chosen to make up the 1984-85 annual Spring Traveling Art Show, which will be on tour in a number of Carolina cities during the next 12 months.

Among the artists whose work was chosen for the traveling show are two from Greenville — William Leidenthal and Bob Ray.

Sculptures By Keller In Several Exhibits

Sculptures by East Carolina University faculty artist and Greenville sculptor Norman Keller are currently on public exhibition in several lcoations around North Carolina.

Three works, "Beaufort Barricade," "Albemarle Icon," and "Western Direction," are included in the "Paris Salon Invitational Exhibition" at St. John's Museum of Art, Wilmington. The exhibit, which opened with a reception on Saturday, Oct. 6, will remain on view through Nov. 23.

"Rain Tower" is on view at Queens College in Charlotte as part of a 30-piece exhibition of outdoor work by Tri-State sculptors. This exhibit, on the grounds of the college, opened Sept. 30 and will be exhibited through October. The show is jointly sponsored by The Mint Museum of Art, Queens College, and The Friends of Art at Queens College.

Other public exhibitions in which Keller's works are scheduled are the 4th Annual North Carolina Sculpture Exhibition sponsored by Northern Telecom and located in the corporate headquarters in the Research Triangle, opening Oct. 25, and the Tri-State Member's Exhibition at the Gaston County Museum, Gastonia, to open during the month of November.

Keller currently serves as president of Tri-State Sculptors Educational Association, an organization of more than 150 sculptors from the two Carolinas and Virginia. He is also the organizer and coordinator of the Tri-State Traveling Exhibition, a 41-piece show by 30 sculptors, which began its exhibition schedule in August at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, and will travel the eastern United States through Feb. 1986.

Gordleys Have New Bern Show

NEW BERN — A joint exhibition of paintings and drawings by husband and wife artists Tran and Marilyn Gordley is currently on view at the Art Bank, 317 Middle Street, New Bern. Art Bank is the exhibition gallery for the Craven Arts Council. The show will be on view through October.

Admission is free and the show is open to the public. Art Bank hours are 10-4 weekdays, 10-1 on Saturday, and closed Sunday.

The Gordleys are both on the faculty of the School of Art, East Carolina University. Both have exhibited extensively and have work in several collections.

Catawba Indian Village Opens Oct. 21

GASTONIA — The blowing of a conch horn signaled 17th century Catawba Indian warriors to come to their village council house for a meeting.

Now, in Gastonia, the Schiele Museum of Natural History Gastonia has reconstructed a Catawba Indian village spanning 400 years. The opening of the village to the public on Sunday, October 21, is a joint project of the museum and the Gaston County 400th Anniversary Committee.

The village was designed to convey aspects of Catawba Indian life from the 1500s to the 1800s, and to show the influence of other Indian tribes and Europeans.

It contains four dwellings, each from a different time period.

Dr. James Merrell, a professor of history at Vassar College, and Dr. Charles Hudson, head of the anthropology department at the University of Georgia at Athens, served as consultants. The actual building process took two years, and was funded locally.

The village will be used for education and research, and specifically for the cultural study of all Southeastern Indian tribes, to whom the village is dedicated.

Catawba Indians inhabited the Gaston County area and the Piedmont of North Carolina from 10,000 years ago to the 18th century A.D. The tribe is reportedly one of the least researched east of the Mississippi. For those reasons and others, the Schiele Museum staff and its board began planning a Catawba Indian village exhibit in the late 1970s. When the state announced plans for the 400th Anniversary, museum officials went ahead with the village project, which was sanctioned by America's 400th Anniversary Committee.

All events that day will be free and open to the public. Docents will give tours of the village every half hour from 1 to 5:30 p.m. The calendar of events for the afternoon's opening ceremony is:

- 1:15 p.m. — At the North Carolina Hall in the museum a documentary film on Catawba pottery, produced by the museum staff, will be shown.
- 2-4 p.m. — A series of lectures will be given at the Gaston County Public Library, on Garrison Boulevard across the street from the museum.
- 2 p.m. — Dr. Charles Hudson will speak on "The Catawbas and the Spanish Contacts: The Journeys of Juan Pardo."
- 3 p.m. — Dr. James Merrell will give a talk entitled, "Natives in the New World: The Catawba Indian Nation of the Carolinas, 1650-1800."
- 4 p.m. — Dr. Thomas J. Blumer of the U.S. Library of Congress will speak on the subject, "Pre-Columbian Design Motifs Use in Catawba Pottery Decoration."
- 5 p.m. — A stage production, "Legend Into History," will be performed at the Schiele Museum. Produced by Red Dawn, a Santee Sioux anthropologist, the presentation will include native American legends, dance, folklore, arts and crafts.

From 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, October 21, Catawba potters will display their works at the Pioneer Site of the museum. There will additionally be pottery making demonstrations.

Following the day of opening ceremonies, the Catawba village will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. on the last Sunday of every month, and by appointment for school tours Tuesday through Friday of every week.

The Schiele Museum of Natural History, located at 1500 East Garrison Boulevard in Gastonia, is open 9-5 Tuesdays through Fridays, and 2-5 on Saturdays and Sundays. The museum is closed Mondays, on Thanksgiving Day, and for the week of Christmas. Admission is free to the general public and local groups. Organized out-of-country educational groups are charged a small fee. Groups wishing for special programs must call for an appointment (733-4788).

Poetry Forum To Meet Thursday

The second meeting in October of the East Carolina University Poetry Forum will take place at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 18 in room 248, Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus.

The forum, headed by Dr. Peter Makuck of the ECU English Department, is open to poets and poetry lovers in the area. There is no admission fee involved in attending.

Those bringing poems to be read and critiqued are asked to bring at least eight to ten copies in order to permit adequate distribution.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

Two highly acclaimed novels are among new books at the library. "Crescent City," a novel written by Belva Plain, captures the world that was New Orleans in the mid-19th century. Demonstrating her ability to paint a canvas of great scope through one riveting personal story, this book portrays a Jewish woman's struggle in the midst of the Civil War — to reconcile her duties as a Southern wife and mother with her passion for a forbidden man — and a forbidden cause.

Miriam Raphel is intelligent, loving to the core, a woman very much of her time and ahead of her time. Brought by her doting father from their ghetto in Germany to New Orleans, "a jewel in the river's cresent," she has been raised in the lap of luxury, surrounded by a household filled with Europe's finest treasures. Her marriage to Eugene Mendes — one of the city's rising stars, seems the perfect end to a charmed girlhood.

Miriam's brother, David, banished from the family home for his outspoken sympathies with the North, and their childhood friend, Gabriel, who has adored Miriam since she was a little girl, both sense that all is not right in the Mendes household. Their suspicions are correct. Miriam, proper matron and mother of twins, cannot bear her husband's slightest touch or admit that she has worldly opinions and ambitions of her own.

Nothing has prepared her to cope with the terrors of her present situation. Only the devotion of both David and Gabriel enable her to find strength as she becomes engulfed in the tragic wave of war.

"Superior Women" by Alice Adams takes us into the lives of five young women at college and beyond, through four decades. The lives of these girls are variously intertwined, although at first they have nothing in common except their freshmen status. Lavinia, the debutante, is self possessed and clever about people. Peg is the protector, the comforter — and yet the most unformed and vulnerable of the five. Cathy is a private person, the quiet, child of a Catholic Philadelphia family, caught between self-denial and hunger for life. Janet is small and pretty and feisty, torn between the promise of a demanding career and infatuation with the brilliant, unmanageable Adam.

At the heart of the book is Megan who is the most aware of the others, the one who doesn't believe she truly belongs. We see these women at Radcliffe through shifting relationships with each other. We recognize in them our friends, ourselves, our youth as Alice Adams anatomizes the generation taht entered college during the Second World War.

Exotic Indonesian Wildlife Dwindling

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Although protected by law, exotic species of wildlife are dwindling in number across Indonesia, victims of poachers and illegal hunters. But Komodo dragons, although there are only about 2,500 of them, appear to have a brighter future, partly because they're cantankerous.

Komodo dragons — to Indonesia what the panda is to China and the koala bear to Australia — actually are giant lizards found only on Komodo Island between the Sumbawa and Flores island groups 1,120 miles southeast of Jakarta. They grow almost 10 feet long, can run as fast as a dog and are cranky as a crocodile.

Not so lucky are such species as sea cows, Bali starlings, green turtles, elephants, rhinoceros and rusa deer. Some experts think the Bali tiger is now extinct.

Discovered in 1912, the Komodo dragon created a sensation when the first specimens were sent to the United States and Europe. Since they are totally fearless and active by day, they are sought by zookeepers as ideal exhibits. The Indonesian government makes gifts of them to distinguished visitors as a special expression of friendship.

Pigs and deer provide most of their meals, although there are verified accounts of attacks on humans by these descendants of a prehistoric family of reptiles.

The remoteness of Komodo Island helps in their preservation as a species but so does their aggressive nature, which intimidates would-be poachers.

The Komodo dragon has been protected by law since 1931, a status enjoyed by other rare wildlife in Indonesia that doesn't seem to slow their slide toward extinction.

Sea cows, called dugongs, are being killed at a rate of 1,000 a year despite a government decree protecting them, according to a 1983 survey by Alain Compost of the Green Indonesian Foundation.

Dugongs are thought to have inspired early accounts of the mythical mermaid. They are hunted for meat and for their "tusks" or incisors which can grow to about eight inches. The teeth are cut, polished and turned into cigarette holders.

Compost found that young dugongs, easily taken alive after their mothers are harpooned, are kept for their tears which are collected drop by drop and sold in small bottles to those who believe the liquid will bring good luck, prosperity and sexual success.

Wildlife has been under heavy pressure on the resort island of Bali. The official Antara News Agency has quoted expert opinion as saying the royal Bali tiger (Panthera tigris balica) is now totally extinct.

Only about 200 Bali starlings, the only bird native to the island, are left. Conservationists said these and the rusa deer, wild pigs and 65 other species of birds are protected by law but the protection may have come too late.

Still not fully protected by law is the green turtle (Chelonia mydas), one of five species of turtle in Indonesia and — with the Komodo dragon — one of the archipelago's two indigenous reptiles.

Green turtle is a special dish at religious and festive occasions on Bali and expensive fare in tourist hotel dining rooms. More than 20,000 green turtles have been killed around Bali in each of the last four years, according to local records.

The turtles not only serve as food but their hard shell is used for decorative purposes.

Exporting green turtle meat is prohibited but officials estimate that 11 tons were smuggled out of the country in the first three months of 1984. The meat reappears as a delicacy in restaurants in Hong Kong, Singapore and Bangkok, Thailand, as do green turtle eggs snatched from the beaches on which they were laid.

Encroaching civilization has shrunk the living space for rhinoceros. The Green Indonesia Foundation reports that hunters who track the animal for its horn have killed off many. The horn fetches high prices from those who believe it is an effective remedy for various diseases and serves as an aphrodisiac.

Fewer than 60 Java rhinos are left, according to supervisors of the Ujong Kulon forest on Java, who say hunters are still active.

Elephants are protected but officials often have trouble reconciling the needs of man and beast. Reports of pachyderms rampaging through cropland are common.

The Ministry of Forests decided earlier this year that Indonesia's 2,000 elephants, all of them on Sumatra, are too many in the face of expanded human settlement. It has suggested finding an export market for them.

Other animals have other problems:

—Baby luteng monkeys, a protected variety noted for its extra long tail, are sold openly in East Java.

—Smugglers reap profits overseas with such exotic birds as the cendrawasih or "bird of paradise."

—Orangutans in East Kalimantan's Kutai National Park had an enforced diet change from fruit and nuts to bark and twigs after a forest fire razed half the park's 494,190 acres last year.

WILDLIFE SURVIVOR . . . This recently taken photo shows a Komodo dragon, a giant lizard at a Jakarta, Indonesia Zoo. The dragon was discovered in 1912 on Komodo Island between the Sumbawa and Flores Island groups, 1,800 kilometers (1,120 miles) southeast of Jakarta. They grow three meters (9.8 feet) long, and despite their sluggish appearance, can run as fast as a dog and are as cranky as a crocodile. (AP Laserphoto)

Powell To Speak To Library Group

William S. Powell, distinguished historian of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will be the featured guest speaker at the Seventh Annual Friends of the East Carolina University Library banquet on Thursday, Oct. 18.

Powell, widely known for his work in North Carolina and in colonial American history, will sepak on the topic, "16th and 17th Century Printed Sources on the Roanoke Colonies."

A former Guggenheim Fellow, he has researched extensively on the Roanoke Colonies and is credited with having written or edited some 200 articles, pamphlets and books. Among his best known works are "The North Carolina Gazetteer," the "Dictionary of North Carolina Biography," "Colonial North Carolina: A History," and "The First State University."

The Friends of the Library is a public support organization for ECU's Joyner Library. According to the president, Mrs. Jane A. Maier, the group has sponsored lectures, receptions, construction projects, publications, book sales, and a variety of other activities designed to enhance the library's ability to serve the eastern region of the state.

The banquet will be held at the Greenville Country Club, beginning with a 6 p.m. reception and a dinner at 7 p.m. John S. Barker of Farmville will be inducted as the new president.

Anyone interested in attending are to call 757-6671 no later than Monday afternoon, Oct. 15 for additional information and reservations.

Roger Brown Show On View

"Roger Brown: Selected Paintings 1973-1983," an exhibition of works by the Chicago artist, is currently on view (through Dec. 1) at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Brown, a native of Alabama who has been identified since the late 1960s with art in Chicago, has been active in the resurgence of figurative and narrative painting during the past decade.

In his best-known work, human figures are presented as tiny, cartoon-like caricatures caught in the routines of modern life. His subjects also include actual events, such as "Jonestown," and landscape and weather paintings.

Brown is a graduate of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. His work is represented in the collections of many major American museums, including the Museum of Modern Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Smithsonian Museum.

The North Carolina Museum of Art recently acquired its first work by Brown, "American Landscape with Revolutionary Heroes," purchased with funds from the Madeleine Johnson Heidrick bequest.

The catalog accompoanying the show was written by Louise Shaw of Nexus Gallery, Atlanta, the organizer of the Brown show.

Gallery hours of the N. C. Museum of Art are 10-5 Tuesday-Saturday, and 1-5 Sunday. Admission is free. The museum if located at 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard in Raleigh.

First Library Lecture Scheduled For Tuesday

"How Successfully Does Literature Address Public Issues" is the title of the first free lecture in a four part symposium entitled "Literature and the American Public."

The lecture, to be presented by Dr. Erwin Hester, Professor of English at East Carolina University, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16 in the auditorium of East Branch Library, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Hester's lecture will cover some of the ways that literature deals with social and moral problems, how these ways are effective, and why they are sometimes misunderstood. The lecture will be followed by the reactions of two respondents and a question-answer period involving the audience. A brief refreshment program will follow the program.

The series, "Literature and the American Public" is sponsored jointly by Sheppard Memorial Library and the East Carolina University Department of English. The series is made possible by a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

Other lectures will be presented on Oct. 23 and 30, and Nov. 13. All will be held at the same location and will begin at 8 p.m. The series, designed for and open to the general public, is without charge.

Those interested in more details are to contact the library at 752-4177.

ECU Symphony Orchestra Performed In Wilmington's 'Riverfest'

WILMINGTON PERFORMANCE . . . The ECU Symphony Orchestra performed at Wilmington's "Riverfest" on Saturday, Oct. 6. A portion of the orchestra is pictured here, performing on a barge on the Cape Fear River in downtown Wilmington across from where the U.S.S. North Carolina is berthed. (Photograph by Joe Purcell)

For the second year, the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra was a major attraction in Wilmington's "Riverfest." The orchestra, conducted by Robert Hause, performed the evening of Saturday, Oct. 6 for an audience of about 2,500.

The orchestra played on a barge, tied up on the riverfront directly across the Cape Fear River from the battleship U.S.S. North Carolina.

The concert concluded with the playing of John PHilip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," while a display of fireworks was held on the opposite side of the river. Other selections on the program were Sibelius' "Finlandia;" "A Night in Mexico" by Creston; medleys of Disney songs and songs from the 1920s; Strauss's "Emperor Waltz;" and selections from "Jesus Christ Superstar."

A special part of the program was the performance of "Valse Caprice" by Guy Huchins, who also was guest conductor of his composition.

Hutchins, of Camden, S.C., is a retired musicain who has made considerable contributions to music in both the Carolinas. He was the founder of the Greenville, Spartanburg, and Florence, S.C. symphonies. His grandfather grew up on Orton Plantation near Wilmington. His family from New York met Hutchins in Wilmington for the concert and later they planned to tour Orton Plantation for the first time.

The orchestra's concert in Wilmington was sponsored jointly by the Wilmington Riverfest Committee and Drs. Angelina and William Knox of Wilmington. William Knox is an ECU alumnus who has supported ECU activities for a number of years.

ECU Wind Ensemble Concert October 21

The Symphonic Wind Ensemble of the ECU School of Music will perform in concert at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 21 in Wrfght Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus. The concert is free and open to the public.

Herbert L. Carter will conduct the ensemble, and Harold Jones will be xylophone soloist. Both Carter and Jones are faculty members of the ECU School of Music.

The Oct. 21 program will open with H. L. Blankenberg's "Ernst August," scored by J. R. Watson, to be followed by two pieces in an English setting, Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Linden Lea" and Percy Grainger's "Handel in the Strand."

Other selections are Darius Milhaud's "Suite Francaise," and Claude T. Smith's "Festival Variations.

Harold Jones will be soloist for the two final compositions in the concert, Larry Buck's "Freckles" and the Galop from Dmitri Kabalevsky's "The Comedians," in an arrangement by D. Mitchell.

Percussionist soloist Harold Jones received the M.A. degree from East Carolina University and the B.M. degree from the University of Michigan. As solo recitalist and orchestral performer, Jones has been active in a number of professional societies. He has been adjudicator and clinician in the areas of percussion instruments and bands, and currently is a member of the Percussive Arts Society's national board of directors.

Play Script Competition

DALTON, GA. — The Board of Directors of the Dalton Little Theater announce the establishment of the Dalton Little Theater/World Carpets New Play Project for 1985.

Beginning Nov. 1, the organization is soliciting original, unproduced, full-length and thematically related one-act plays for a fully staged presentation of the winning script for eight performances in June 1985.

Manuscripts will be accepted through Jan. 31, 1985.

Each script should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope for the return of the script. If the playwright wishes an acknowledgement of the receipt of the script, a self-addressed, stamped envelope or card should also accompany the script.

Scripts are to be mailed to Dalton Little Theater/World Carpets New Play Project for 1985, P. O. Box 841, Dalton, Ga., 30720.

'Stage Door' Auditions Set

Acting auditions for George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber's 1930's comedy, "Stage Door," will be held Thursday and Friday, Oct. 18 and 19, in the Messick Theater Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus. The auditions will begin each evening at 7:30 in room 206.

"Stage Door" has 30 roles (22 female and 8 male) to be cast by Cedric Winchell. Scripts are available for reading in the ECU Joyner Library Reserve Book Room. This will be the East Carolina Playhouse's second major production of the 1984-85 season. Performances are scheduled for Nov. 27-30 and Dec. 1 in McGinnis Theater.

ECU students, faculty, staff and local area residents are all invited to audition. For further information, call 757-6390.

"Stage Door," set in the theatrical world of New York City, follows the attempts of stage-struck young ladies to break into the magic of Broadway theater.

Guest Recital Set

Saxophonist George Wolfe, a faculty member at Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana, will be guest recitalist at East Carolina University on Wednesdsay, Oct. 17. He will be accompanied by pianist Vicki Berneking.

The recital will take place at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. The program is free and open to the public.

Wolfe's program will open with the Wolfe arrangement of Michel Blavet's "Sonata No. 5 (La Chauvet)," to be followed by Michael Cunningham's "Sonata, Opus 50" and Juan Orrego-Salas' "Quattro Liriche Brevi."

After an intermission, Wolfe will be heard in three compositions — "A L'Espagnole" by Pierre Max Dubois, Vincent Persichetti's "Parable," and Rudy Wiedoeft's "Valse Erica."

Wolfe holds a B.S. degree from Mansfield State University, Pa., and a M.M. from Indiana University. During his time of graduate studies, he was awarded a performer's certificate in recognition of outstanding artistry. He has performed at international meetings of the World Saxophone Congress with members of the U.S. Navy Band and with well-known artists. He was also a member of the original American Saxophone Quartet and has recorded with Coronet Records and the Educational Music Service.

The Wolfe recital has been made possible by a grant from the Yamaha Instrument Company.

Wilson Site Of Suzuki Concert

WILSON — Ten little musicians from Japan, students in the Suzuki method of learning to play stringed instruments, will perform at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16 at Atlantic Christian College. There will also be a Play-In in which Suzuki students from the eastern North Carolina area will take part.

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night, at Fike High School, a concert will be presented. For ticket information, contact The Arts Council of Wilson, 205 Gray Street, telephone 291-4329.

The program will feature works by Bah, Vivaldi, Mozart and Beethoven among other composers.

Darla Richards Recital Thursday

Darla Richards of Greenville, a student in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present her senior percussion recital at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 18 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

A student of Harold Jones, Ms. Richards will be assisted in her recital by Bill Congdon, pianist, in the performance of Anthony Cirone's "Sonata No. 1 for Timpani," and by Ms. Robin Alexander on clarinet for the performance of David Loeb's composition, "Notturno e due Scherzi for Clarinet and Percussion."

Ms. Richards will also perform two additional works — Toshimitsu Tanaka's "Two Movement for Marimba;" and David Steinquest's "Meditation and Dance."

The recital is free and open to the public.

Theater Offers Provocative Fare

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — For the past two decades, Mississippi's only professional theater has tried to offer the provocative, and this season's opener, "Taming of the Shrew," is no exception. The Shakespearean comedy is set in the Wild West of the late 1800s.

"It's absolutely different from any kind of production of Shakespeare ever done here," said John Briggs, artistic director of New Stage Theatre.

The theater had its roots in the political tumult of the mid-1960s, and some of its founders were involved in the civil rights movement active at that time.

"They didn't just want to put on middle-of-the road plays that didn't use profanity and didn't make people think," Briggs said in an interview. "There was a lot happening then in Mississippi and in the nation and they wanted a theater that would reflect that."

The first play New Stage put on was "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," Harold Pinter's tense drama about destructive marital relationships.

Since then, the theater has combined the entertaining and the unorthodox, and thrived.

Season subscribers who pay an average of $10 a ticket make up about 75 percent of the audience. The remainder of the theater's funding comes from private foundations and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Briggs attributes much of the theater's vigor to the strength of regional theater.

"People get in the habit of thinking that the only good theater is in New York or London," he said. "The fact is that there is good theater all over the world, and the theaters in New York and London are drawing from them. Very little is developed in the big city theaters. The regional theaters are where the new things in theater are happening now."

Compared to the millions invested in a Broadway show, New Stage produces most of its plays for about $25,000-$30,000, Briggs said.

"In New York, people will walk out of a play talking about the lights and the costumes," he said. "They're talking about a presentation. What we have to do here is rely more on imagination, which is not to say that this theater doesn't have some extraordinary sets."

New Stage often brings in professional actors from out of town for some parts. But the theater primarily relies on local talent.

"When we bring someone in, it allows our audiences and actors to learn," Briggs said. "But our intent is to have a resident professional company here.

"Most regional theaters make the choice to go solely professional and use the local community for volunteers in the box office or as ushers. We're not doing that."

And just as it tries to maintain a balance of out-of-town and local actors, the theater also tries to offer both classic and contemporary productions.

Later this season, New Stage will be presenting Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," and "Private Contentment," a premiere of a work by Reynolds Price, a North Carolina writer.

The play is the first in a series that will give recognition to talented, but little-known playwrights.

The series is named after Pulitzer Prize-winning author Eudora Welty, who lives about five blocks from New Stage. Proceeds from New Stage's production of her "Ponder Heart" provided seed money for the productions. Miss Welty also wrote the theater's final offering this season — "A Season of Dreams."

"I like to believe that I keep in touch with the people and what they want in a theater," Briggs said.

"Most of the people I know have to work hard for their leisure money. So we have to do things that are talking to them. We have to do things that are topical."

Royal White Stallions To Perform October 21

ECU News Bureau

The splendid white horses appearing at Minges Coliseum for one performance only at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 21, have an exciting history. The performance is sponsored by the student Union Special Events Committee.

Tickets for "The Royal Lipizzan Stallion Show" are priced at $6, either in advance or at the door. Advance tickets may be purchased from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily, Monday-Friday, or by phone, 757-6611, ext. 266.

The rare breed, created in the 16th century for Austria's royal house of Hapsburg, have been imported for this show, in which their performance is blended together in a colorful and stirring spectacle of tradition and horsemanship.

Only a few hundred Lipizzaners have been alive at any one time since their breeding was originally controlled by the monarch.

No commoner was allowed to own one, but nobles serving with the Austrian army were given Lipizzaners to ride.

The exacting balance movements and great leaps called the "Airs Above the Ground" which today are performed solely for their beauty, were originally a tactic of war, used by mounted men to inspire terror in foot soldiers. No other breed of horses can duplicate these maneuvers.

The horses are a result of centuries of cross-breeding of Spanish and Arabic-Oriental bloodlines. They were first bred by Spanish Moors from Andalusian and Arabian stock and the line remained essentially stable for the 700 years of Moorish occupation.

During the Renaissance, the art of classical horsemanship was revived and several European countries established studs to preserve the Spanish strain. Emperior Maximilian II brought the Spanish horses to Austria in 1562. His brother, Archduke Charles, established a similar stud in 1580 in Lipizza near Trieste. The Lipizzan stud flourished and was infused with additional oriental blood toward the end of the 18th century.

After 400 years of peaceful development, the stud was forced to flee on three occasions during the Napoleonic Wars, and was again evacuated in 1915.

In 1942, the Lipizzan stud was shipped for sakekeeping to Czechoslovakia. Without the mares, the breed faced extinction. Soldiers under General Patton's command rescued the stud and returned him to Austria.

Madrigal Dinners

ECU News Bureau

Those planning to attend the annual Madrigal Dinners at East Carolina University are encourged to make reservations soon — in light of early sell-out for the event in past years.

The annual seasonal celebration of Christmas in music and food is sponsored by the Department of University Unions, and will be held at 7 p.m. on four dates — Nov. 28, 29, 30 and Dec. 1, in the multi-purpose room of Mendenhall Student Center.

The dinners, termed Elizabethan Feasts, are modeled after a typical Christmas feast in a country manor house. Again this year, Jim and Franceine Rees will be in the role of host and hostess as the lord and lady presiding over the manor gathering.

Entertainment will be provided by magicians, tumblers, poets, and musicians. The Madrigal Singers, under the direction of Dr. Charles Moore of the ECU School of Music, will be featured in highlight music for the evening.

Performers will be garbed in resplendent costumes typical of the Elizabethan period. A number of traditional old English dances will also be part of the entertainment.

Dinner, consisting of roast beef with all the trimmings, plus wassail, will be served on long banquet tables by costumed waiters and waitresses.

Tickets are available from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus. Tickets are $14 per person, with $1 tax-deductible as a contribution to the School of Music Scholarship Fund.

Mail orders can be sent with check or money order to: Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, ECU, Greenville, N. C., 27834. Mail orders are to be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Paul Tardif Recital October 22

Pianist Paul Tardif, a member of the keyboard faculty of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present an all-Chopin program in a recital to be given at 8:15 p.m. Monday, Oct. 22 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

The recital is free and open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis.

For his recital program, Tardif has selected three works for the first portion of his program. These are: the "Barcarolle in F-sharp Major, Opus 60;" the "Berceuse in D-flat Major, Opus 57;" and "Ballade in F minor, Opus 52."

Following an intermission, Tardif will play the collection of preludes contained in "Twenty-Four Preludes, Opus 28."

All the works being performed were composed by Chopin in the period 1839 to 1846.

Tardif received his training at the Eastman School of music. He holds the performer's certificate and is the recipient of a First Prize in the International Piano Guild Competition. Dr. Tardif completed his doctorate in piano at Peabody, studying with American pianist Leon Fleisher. After a tour of Poland for the U.S. State Department, Tardif lived in Munich, Geramny as a recipient of a Fulbright Grant and was awarded the coveted Artist's Diploma from the Salzburg, Austria, Mozarteum.

During this month, a recording by Tardif and clarinetist David Wright, former ECU music librarian, will be released on the Digital Arts label. The record contains music by Schuman, Debussy, Babin, Laderman, Clifton, and Weiner.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q: — We will soon be in need of a new roof on our 24-year-old house. I would like to tackle the job myself, since I am fairly handy at most do-it-yourself projects. However, I have never done any roof work and do not know if I have the skill to take on a reroofing job. Can you give me some advice?

A: — Yes. From the wording of your letter, part of which had to be left out because of space reasons, it is a fairly good guess that you should not do the job yourself. If you were asking whether you should do almost any other do-it-yourself project, the answer probably would be in the affirmative as long as you were aware that the trial might cost you some time and effort if things did not work properly. But there is an added and important consideration. In this case, the factor of safety is involved. In order to do a reroofing job, you should be physically fit, able to move about on a roof easily and know which steps to take to avoid danger. All this in addition to a knowledge of how to install the shingles and the skill to perform the various necessary chores. Even if you are convinced you can handle the job, try some lesser roof project first to see what it's like before you tackle an entire reroofing task. For the moment, therefore, the advice is not to do it, but that's because there is no way of knowing from here wha your physical capabilities are.

Q. — I will be putting up a wooden fence soon. How do I make certain the fence is level? Do I just use a spirit level?

A. — Yes, but it's a case of constant checking. Always proceed as though the tops of the posts are not even or have come out of alignment since the last time you checked, even though that may have been a few moments ago. Place a board across the tops of the posts and put a level on the board. Then see that the posts are vertically OK, do whatever nailing has to be done to hold everything in place, check again, nail again, check again and so on. The same thing is true between all operations, either the concrete kind or the fastening kind.

Q. — We saw a question in your column from a fellow who dropped white paint on a brick wall. Rather than scrubbing with turpentine, an easier method would be one my husband and I used when trying to solve a problem we had when concrete was splattered against the brick front of our bungalow from the roof to the ground by vandals. We got a small can of brick-colored rust-inhibiting paint, thinned it with paint thinner to a water consistency, then painted the affected areas, being careful not to get paint on the mortar. Don't worry if the paint doesn't exactly match. It will sink into the bricks without a trace. We don't know why this happens, but it works. The paint can be lightened or darkened with a few drops of black or white paint.

A. — No such question-and-answer that we can recall. Nevertheless, your explanation is most interesting. Thanks.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. Q. What's a good way to protect tomatoes from the first frost? (S.P., Wilson)

A. You can protect tomato plants from early frosts by covering them with sheets, burlap, plastic or similar materials. The first frost often is associated with a moving weather system and the period following this frost may be as much as two weeks of mild weather. If the forecast calls for a hard freeze, don't bother to cover the vegetables. Be ready to clean the garden and begin getting it prepared for next spring.

Q. What are some ways I can use green tomatoes? I don't have room to store them and let them ripen. (D.S., Lincoln County)

A. Green tomatoes can be floured and fried like eggplant or squash. Sliced green tomato pickles, dill tomato pickles, and spiced tomato pickles, chow chow, piccalilli, and many kinds of relish can be made with green tomatoes.

Q. How should I store green tomatoes so they will ripen indoors? (D.C., Henderson)

A. Unripe tomatoes that may be saved for ripening range from red, to pink to a "mature green." A mature green tomatoe has a glossy appearance, but no red color.

Tomatoes that do not fall in one of these categories probably will not ripen. Only insect free and disease free tomatoes should be saved. Entire tomato vines can process.

Tomatoes can also be picked, wrapped in newspaper and stored in a cool basement at 50 to 60 degree fahrenheit. Many gardeners simply prefer to place the fruit in a single layer on a shelf or windowsill to allow ripening. A temperature range between 60 and 70 degrees fahrenheit is is best for ripening tomatoes.

You've had the appliance for two years and it has been nothing but trouble. It's been fixed several times under warranty, but now the warranty has expired and it's broken again.

Before replacing it or running up a big repair bill, consider another option: appealing to the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel.

MACAP is sponsored by, but independent from the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, the Gas Appliances Manufacturers Association and the National Retail Merchants Association. Its primary purpose is to review consumer complaints which have not been resolved at the retail, installer or manufacturer level and to recommend a fair resolution of the dispute. Since 1968, the volunteer panel has reviewed 35,780 consumer complaints, resolving about 80 percent of them, often in the consumer's favor.

Normally the panel meets in closed session from six to eight times a year at MACAP's Chicago headquarters. But recently the panel took its show on the road to New York, where an open session was held to acquaint county extension agents with its work.

At the open meeting, Dr. Elsie Fetterman, chairman of the panel and a consumer education specialist, and other panel members offered some general guidelines on appliance selection and use.

The panel suggested consumers should also weigh warranty information while considering other factors such as price, size and features when shopping for new appliances. Though manufacturers are not required to provide warranties, a federal law specifies that they must provid information on their warranty policies on every product that costs more than $15. Retailers are obligated to make this information available to consumers at the point of purchase.

Too much humidity in a home causes numerous problems, the most troublesome being condensation, but in at least one respect too little humidity can be even more serious.

That's because your health can be involved. When the relative humidity inside your house is low, you may be subject to a sore throat, dry skin, infected nasal passages, colds and a constant feeling that you are chilly even though the temperature is in the 70s. These ailments or feelings are seldom attributed to the lack of sufficient humidity, even though the public is more aware of the cause than it was 20 or 30 years ago.

Just as the dry atmosphere pulls the moisture out of your body, so does it takes the moisture out of your furniture and furnishings. Joints loosen, doors warp, wooden panels shrink and various other afflictions overtake the possessions in your house. A sure sign that your home is too dry is when you walk across a rug, touch the knob of a radio or television set and get static electricity shock.

Relative humidity is the expression by percentage of the amount of moisture actually in the air compared to the amount of moisture which air at that temperature could hold. If, for example, air has half as much moisture as it could hold at a certain temperature, the relative humidity is 50 percent. Change the temperature even a bit and you also change the humidity, since warm air can hold much more moisture than cold air.

When the relative humidity inside your home is from 10 to 15 percent or even lower, it's actually drier than the Sahara Desert or Death Valley!

The plants in your house also are affected by the humidity. When it is too dry, evaporation from the leaves of the plants increases until the roots cannot take up water from the soil as rapidly as it is evaporated. Under such conditions, no amount of watering will answer the problem and the plants will wilt and die.

Obviously, the way to handle a too-dry situation is to add some moisture to the home. But to do this and achieve the desired result, it is necessary that we keep adding moisture, not merely give the house a single application. This can be done by providing a means for the moisture to be introduced into the house at a single point. Humidity differs from heat in one very important aspect. Heat does not travel readily, but humidity does. If there is moisture in one part of a room, it will almost immediately travel throughout the house without any mechanical transmission. Whereas, if you build a fire in a fireplace on one side of a room, that part of the room will get warm without affecting the other side of the room and the rest of the house. But, even though humidity will move quickly to other parts of the house, it has to be replaced because of the surprising fact that the entire air in the house is replaced by outside air on an average of once or twice an hour, even in a fairly "tight" structure.

To supply moisture to the house, humidifiers are available. Those on the market generally operate on one of three methods to evaporate moisture. One is via heating. As water is heated, it can be boiled off into the air in the form of steam. A second is surface evaporation, depending on the natural tendency of dry air to pick up moisture from a wet surface. The third is via atomization. In this method, water is literally shattered into particles of vapor size mechanically and is thrown into the air where it remains in suspension.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful data in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Researchers Experiment With Giant Shrimp

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — He may be just a shrimp, but a tough Malaysian at Mississippi State University thinks he can lick any fish in the pond.

The Malaysian apparently doesn't realize he is a type of fresh water shrimp under development by experts at the university as a possible new crop in the state.

Dr. John Waldrup, co-leader of the project, said the shrimp males apparently think they are the biggest thing in the pond, and are not reluctant to take on a reasonable sized catfish.

And the experiments are producing shrimp that are almost big enough to handle a catfish.

They come three or four to the pound in the larger varieties, and Waldrup said there is documented evidence that some of them come up to one pound each in their native land.

The big shrimp are something new to Mississippi, and he said commercial growth in fresh water ponds is at least two or three years away.

For one thing, he said, they are very sensitive to cold temperatures and might not be able to survive the winters in the state. Any water temperature below 60 degrees can be lethal to the shrimp or prawns.

In the first year of experiments at Mississippi State, the prawns were started in indoor pools and were not stocked in ponds until May 10th. Also, they must be kept in brackish water until they reach the post-larval stage when they can be transferred to fresh water.

A team of scientists worked on the project including economists, nutrition experts and fish culturists.

Now that the first year's crop has been harvested, they are examining the results to design experiments for coming years.

The first crop of super shrimp was raised to full size in a pond with catfish, but Dr. Waldrup said there are doubts about how practical that would be in commercial operation.

He explained that it takes longer for catfish to mature to the proper taste, and the shrimp can be harvested only by draining the pond.

"That," he said, "is not very practical for the catfish."

Although he conceded he is not a seafood expert, he found the large shrimp enjoyable, although they were a bit tougher in texture than a smaller, salt-water shrimp.

Waldrup described the taste as somewhere between shrimp and lobster.

The Malaysian shrimp already have a big market in Europe, Korea and Puerto Rico, and the scientists are hoping they may catch up in this country.

The results still are very tentative, Dr. Waldrup emphasized, and he cautioned against counting on the shrimp as a major Mississippi crop.

Teacher Support

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — More than one-fourth of Malta's labor force staged a one-day national walkout in support of a strike by public school teachers, union officials said.

The United Workers Union, which organized the protest, called the walkout "the biggest strike in Malta over the past 20 years." The union said up to 27,000 of the island's work force of 112,000 participated.

The strike was called in support of public school teachers, who walked off the job and then were locked out two weeks ago. The teachers say they want improved working conditions.

Athlete Has Eyes Tattooed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In an operation that took an ophthalmologist 45 minutes and cost $1,000, Cindy Wilson was relieved forever of the burden of worrying about her eyeliner streaking.

She had the edges of her eyelids tattooed dark brown — "dyeliner," they called it.

"It's a series of small, separated dots that the human eye perceives as a soft line," explained Dr. Robert Fleming Azar.

Dots and lashes. A tedious operation, like needlepoint. Looking through a microscope, Azar tattooed miniscule spots of pigment between clumps of eyelashes.

Life may offer greater luxuries than this, but Azar believes there are women who will pay to have permanent eyeliner imbedded in their lids. The arthritic woman. The woman with a tremor, who can't hold a makeup brush. The farsighted woman, who can't focus on her own reflection. The businesswoman, who hasn't the time for makeup.

Or the amateur athlete such as Cindy Wilson, 23, who wants to swim and look pretty at the same time without eyeliner streaming down her face.

"It's nice to be able to do things, especially in summer, without having to worry about makeup," she said. "I think it's pretty neat."

She lives in New Orleans and works for New York Life Insurance. She is Azar's third dyeliner patient. His assistant Lynn Michel will be fourth.

Accent, as the tattoo is trademarked, is made by a California company, Dioptics, that Azar helped found and partly owns. A second California company, Coopervision, makes its own brand of "dyeliner" equipment.

"This is not lifesaving surgery," Azar said. "It's 100 percent a luxury." As a result, no medical insurance covers it.

Nor do all doctors sanction it.

"Of course there are risks," said Mark Gorney, president of the American Association of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons.

Gorney said he fears that some women will be allergic to the pigment. Such an allergy, like the tattoo, would last for years.

"Once you get pigment in your skin, it's the devil's own job to get it out," he said. "You've got to cut it out. If you put permanent pigment in the eyelid and a person is allergic to that ink, you've got yourself a bad problem — swollen eyelids for the rest of your life."

Azar uses "hypoallergenic" pigment, but that does not satisfy Gorney. No cosmetic is completely hypoallergenic, he insisted.

To decrease the allergy risk, Gorney said he recommends a patch test, a dot or two made elsewhere on the body before the real thing is done.

Azar disagrees. Only women with a serious history of allegy need patch tests, he said.

It took Azar 45 minutes to tattoo Miss Wilson. Rows of miniscule dots were barely visible on her upper and lower lids — not above the lashes, but between them, not obvious like makeup. But her eyes look more defined — "enhanced," as Azar promised.

Also visible, post-tattoo, were purple bruises rimming her eyes and a greenish cast below them. Azar promised the purple would vanish in a couple of days and the dots would bleed into each other, just a little, giving a more uniform look.

Tribunal

LONDON (AP) — A military tribunal set up by the Nigerian junta that seized power last year has convicted a former Cabinet minister of taking a $1.3 million bribe and sentenced him to 23 years in prison, according to Lagos Radio.

Victor Igwe Masi was the first Cabinet minister in the deposed civilian government to be tried on corruption charges, said the radio report, monitored in London.

The broadcast said Masi, a former finance and public works minister, was convicted on five counts of "corrupt practices and illegal enrichment" for taking the bribe from a company seeking a government guarantee of a foreign loan

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Changing viewpoints today are apt to make you want to act too swiftly in seeking new ways to do what is vital to your welfare and happiness. Take it easy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is fine for studying further into philosophical beliefs that appeal to you and plan to follow those teachings.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your mind is filled with practical thoughts though it be a Sunday, and you can come up with fine ideas for becoming prosperous.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what your personal desires are and how you can best gain them. Contact good friends who can be of assistance to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Think about your secret wishes and make plans to go after them in the evening.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Put those new ideas to work and be off to new places with good friends where much can be accomplished.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to gain your public wishes easily and gain more prestige. Go to an expert in such matters and gain advice you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Concentrate on improving your mode of living and follow your own philosphy for best results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to plan how to have more concord with your mate or close companion. More affection will do the trick.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It is important that you think of the needs and welfare of others today and less about your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try a different tack at pleasing those who have done you many favors and been loyal, and you will succeed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan the recreations you desire for the days ahead and tonight start putting them in motion.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your home is your best bet today, getting everything ship-shape there and being happy with kin.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very capable in times of emergency and in fact have a quick mind and capable hands, so slant the education along lines where such capabilities are prime requisites. Be sure to teach to complete whatever has once been started.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some differences are entering into your life which have an element of confusion connected with them, but go along with them in an intelligent manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Run hither and yon only if you have some worthwhile purpose to accomplish. Gain added data that can be most helpful to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You understand now how a few changes made in practical affairs can bring you a greater abundance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find a better method of operating now and bring forth that sense of humor you possess. Later join with those who are cheerful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan how to change some condition in your living so that you are happier and more prosperous.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You must come to a decision about a friend today, so do so, even if you have to get the relationship on a different basis.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find whatever it is you desire to make your outside duties more pleasant. Good day to see a powerful person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A talk with a new contact can reveal how to become more successful in the near future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your many responsibilities and don't get nervous, and handle them with poise and accuracy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) First sooth an irritated associate before discussing some good plan you have in mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Begin the week properly by studying the work ahead of you very carefully and then handle it conscientiously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't go off on any tangents now, and in the evening you can enjoy a couple of parties or whatever else you prefer.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may feel nervous about some home situation but be poised, otherwise you make matters worse.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will quickly understand any condition and then be very quick in handling it precisely and intelligently, so give as fine an education as you can and there can be much success during this lifetime.

THE TALE OF THE TEN OF SPADES

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

The Ten of Spades was obviously used to the better things in life. He sat by the side of the pool and sipped at a mint julep as he reminisced with some old friends.

"It was a strange hand," he mused. "We were going to make our contract if I won a trick and, as it developed, we would also make it if I did not.

"To start matters off, I found myself in the unusual position of being one of the lowest cards South held. Naturally, he opened the bidding with two clubs and received a negative response of two no trump. He introduced his second suit and, after North took a preference to clubs, he went on to game.

"West led the king of hearts and East signaled with the queen. West dutifully continued with a low heart and declarer wisely took the precaution of ruffing high. He led his low trump to the table's nine and ruffed another heart to strip that suit from dummy. Now declarer cashed a high trump.

"Had either defender failed to follow, declarer would have had to rely on something good happening in spades or a successful finesse of the diamond queen. But when both defenders followed to the second trump, the hand became a cinch.

"Declarer continued by cashing the king-queen of spades. Had the knave dropped, he would have used me to sluff a diamond from the table, conceded a diamond and ruffed a diamond for his contract. When the dastard did not appear, declarer led a low spade from the board. Had East followed low, I would have been finessed. Should I win, declarer has his diamond discard. If West captures me with his jack, he is end played. When East showed out, declarer led me and allowed West to capture me with his jack as a diamond was sluffed from dummy. West was forced either to lead a diamond into declarer's A-Q, or else yield a ruff-sluff by leading a heart. Either way the contract was safe.

"This hand occurred in a major team championship. At the other table the declarer did not appreciate the niceties of the end position. He ruffed me in dummy and led a diamond, but when East alertly inserted the eight of diamonds, declarer had to lose two diamond tricks for down one."

Send any questions for this column to Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Complete Bridge," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged to be the best submitted.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

Canal Report

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A new U.N. report says Israel's construction of a canal linking the Mediterranean and Dead seas would damage Jordan's agriculture and mineral production, and might displace as many as 3,000 people.

The report, issued by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, was prepared by a team of experts who visited Jordan in May and June of this year. Israel allowed a similar visit to areas under its control in 1982, but refused a repeat trip this year on grounds it would "serve the political purposes of elements hostile to Israel."

The report said Israel had begun preparatory work and expected to finish the canal by 1993. Israel contends the canal will generate hydroelectric power to benefit the entire area.

KES ZEFXWXOTF' ZNNRXTB XF O BSNOR FEWWNFF — FWKSNF OR-RNTYNY.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — SAID ONE KINDLY HOPSCOTCH PLAYER TO ANOTHER: "SKIP IT!"
Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Jordanians Seek New Weaponry

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Rebuffed by the United States, King Hussein is seeking weapons for Jordan's armed forces in other global arms markets, including the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

Hussein, long a close U.S. ally in the Arab world, has traditionally bought U.S. weapons.

But congressional opponents and pro-Israeli lobbyists in Washington, arguing that Jordanian arms could be turned against Israel, have forced cancellation or cutbacks in several Jordan-U.S. arms deals over the past five years.

The latest rejection came in March, when President Reagan withdrew a request to sell more than 1,600 hand-held Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan.

Following the setback, Hussein said he would "look anywhere," even to the Soviet Union, to buy weapons.

In an Oct. 1 speech to Parliament, he said that because of "the negative American stand, my government launched a search aimed at fulfilling its requirements through other countries."

He also appealed to wealthier Arab nations to help support his military, which has always depended on financial help from abroad.

The move away from reliance on the United States "does not make them (the Jordanians) a threat to Israel, but it does make the possibility of Jordan cooperating with other Arab states" far greater, according to private military analyst Anthony H. Cordesman.

Cordesman, a former U.S. Defense Department analyst and professor at Georgetown University, said in a recent telephone interview that Jordan badly needs a first-line fighter plane and improved anti-aircraft defenses to help guard against vastly larger forces in Syria and Israel.

Universal Fire Sign Is Sought

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Karl E. Busch is obsessed with trying to make the world a little safer from fire.

For more than eight years, the Jacksonville man has been working toward the design of a universal fire rescue decal that would alert firefighters to the presence of children, elderly or disabled people in a burning home.

Busch, the president and founder of non-profit Operation Lifesaver, said various civic organizations and businesses for years have issued decals that serve the same purpose.

"I would like to see it standardized and recognizable as a symbol," said the Navy veteran and former arson investigator for the Florida Forestry Service.

A standard design would allow people to recognize instantly that someone in the home might need help in a fire emergency, allowing them "to give assistance before a rescue unit or fire department could arrive."

"Children cannot be taught the symbol for fire rescue at an early age because there is no fire rescue emblem," he said.

With a national or worldwide symbol, "We could establish a neighborhood fire-watch program whereby neighbors seeing these emblems on their neighbor's homes would be constantly aware that if a fire struck, that that house needed immediate assistance," he said.

Busch, 62, who has worked on the project in his spare time, recently began devoting his full attention to it after suffering a heart attack that forced him into retirement.

"I'd like to have every fire chief in the country write me and send me examples of the decals they use," he said. "It's possible that we might choose one already in use or design a new one."

Busch says a decal distributed by a national insurance company, which has drawings of a baby carriage, rocking chair and wheelchair inside an orange circle, appeals to him.

"They've given me permission to use it and distribute it," he said.

Once a design is created or chosen, Busch said he will work to get the design accepted as a universal symbol.

He intends to take that plan all the way to the White House by sending it to the president and seeking his endorsement and working with organizations of firefighters.

Busch said he's not out to make any money on the project, adding that he's only interested in saving lives.

His Operation Lifesaver Foundation, created in 1975, helps fire victims and works toward fire prevention and fire safety.

Nature Center Nurtures Animals

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Boris, the blind owl, peeks through the branches in the aviary at the Mobile County school system's Environmental Studies Center.

"We're not sure whether he was hatched blind and was kicked out of the nest or whether he fell out of the nest and landed on his head and a concussion caused his blindness," said Donna Myers, the animal care supervisor at the center.

The center operates a home for handicapped wild animals, mainly endangered species, in addition to offering nature courses to public school students. Lloyd Scott, the center's director, said the nature trails and animal exhibits also are open to the public.

But Scott stressed the instructional role of the center.

"We don't want to open the door to receiving a lot of animals," Scott said, citing the lack of personnel to care for them.

He said the classroom building contains labs, natural history exhibits, an auditorium, a dark room, a library, and other offices.

The animals nursed back to health in most cases are released into the wild. But some, like Buckles the deer with the arthritic toe, will probably stay on as pets. Buckles has a habit of nibbling at coattails, endearing himself to visitors.

"We found him chained to the back of a truck in a motel parking lot," Ms. Myers said, bottle-feeding two fawns brought in by state conservation officials.

Since word has spread that the center takes in injured and orphaned wild animals, the population has increased over the years.

In one cage is a blackbird whose upper beak was cut off by someone. A paraplegic squirrel, injured by a car, clings to the wire screen. In another cage is a great horned owl recovering from being tangled in a barbed wire fence.

"People just keep bringing them in," said Ms. Myers. She said most of the injured owls get hit by cars.

Anne Miller, who works in Birmingham with the Wildlife Rescue Service, sometimes sends wounded owls to the center.

Miss Miller said her group is planning the Treetop Nature Trail at Oak Mountain State Park, south of Birmingham, where permanently injured birds can be fed and displayed in aviaries 15 feet off the ground.

Ms. Myers said she received an owl from Miss Miller with one eye shot out by a pellet gun shot.

"We have tried releasing one-eyed owls but they do not make it. They come back," said Ms. Myers.

Recovering in another cage is a sparrow hawk that was removed from a steel trap and brought to the center with broken legs.

Ms. Myers, who began the animal rehabilitation program in 1978, said two veterinarians donate their services to treat the injured animals.

The environmental center is located on 640 acres of school system property in west Mobile.

"I predict we'll be an oasis in a sea of concrete someday," said Ms. Myers, noting the real estate developments surrounding the center's undisturbed woodland.

A manmade 20-acre lake offers students from kindergarten through high school a look at waterfowl from an amphitheater beside the lake.

"This pelican came in two months ago tangled in fishing line. A family from Dog River brought him in. He's got nerve damage in the tip of the wing," Ms. Myers said.

Stabbing at the wire cage with a long beak is a blue-faced booby.

"The conservation people at Dauphin Island brought him in because he would just sit on the dock and wouldn't fly. We can't figure out why he won't fly.

"Watch it, he's got a beak like a razor. He's just a freeloader and we'll keep him."

Tiny Town Seeking Residents

Smyrna, population 55, is teetering right on the edge of losing its charter, says Mayor Leonard Marinelli. South Carolina law requires municipalities to maintain a population of 50.

If Smyrna loses its charter, it will also lose self administration of liquor, motor vehicle and beer and tax money, Marinelli says. It also could lose federal revenue sharing funds.

The mayor would like a population of about 70 to 75 people. That would be enough to protect the town's charter while maintaining its charm, he says.

When Smyrna was a regular train stop between York and Blacksburg, it boasted two general stores, a drug store, barbershop and doctor's office. Today, downtown consists of a single general store and service station, a volunteer fire department and a post office.

The closest doctors are in York and Blacksburg, each about 12 miles away. The only employers in town are Screen Prints Inc. and Faulkner Well Drilling Inc., as well as the Whitesides & Co. general store, Marinelli says.

Smyrna's charter has been threatened before. In fact, the town has been struggled to retain its identity since 1960.

To keep a charter, state law once required a town to have 100 residents.

Following the 1960 census, former York County senator Sam Mendenhall asked state officials to excuse Smyrna's low population, which was then 54 people. They did.

The 1970 census credited Smyrna with 85 residents. This time around, Mendenhall introduced an amendment to state law allowing a town to keep its charter until the population drops below 50.

The 1980 census showed Smyrna had a population of 47. The census said the town had 23 households, a 30.3 percent drop from its 33 households in 1970.

After 1980 census figures were released, Marinelli said he received a letter from the Secretary of State saying Smyrna's charter would be revoked. But it was discovered that census takers had overlooked several households on one side of town.

"I don't know if there is really anything important about keeping that charter," Marinelli says. "But people want to think they live in the town of Smyrna

MADE TO COORDINATE with the most popular colors for kitchens and baths is Bradbury, one of three medium-scaled designs available in Tarkett's Delightt.†

Today's flooring is designed for easy do-it-yourself installation

The do-it-yourself phenomena that has taken the country by storm is as strong as ever, and Tarkett has introduced Delightt, a new lightweight and flexible sheet vinyl product developed especially for the DIY market.

The product flexibility and easy handling features of Delightt allow even the novice do-it-yourselfer to install a sheet vinyl floor in a few hours without messy adhesives or cumbersome tools or patterns, according to Tarkett's installation technicians.

"The key to this product is the new fiberglass/vinyl backing," says Mike Miller, Tarkett's residential marketing manager. "The fiberglass backing adds resilience and flexibility and yet allows us to maintain product quality and dimensional stability."

Delightt can be rolled out in a room, cut and trimmed and with a few positioning moves, be permanently in place. The product's flexibility allows it to bend up walls and around corners for easy handling.

No adhesives or cumbersome tools are necessary. All that is needed is a sharp utility knife and a straight edge like a carpenter's square or yardstick.

Tarkett makes choosing the right pattern easy too.

"Most consumers are more worried about choosing the right look for their room than about tackling the installation of the vinyl flooring," says Bill Marley, Tarkett's director of design. "With Delightt we chose three medium-scaled designs in a palette of 13 of the most popular colors for kitchens and baths.

"And since the flooring comes in 12-foot widths, it can be put down in most rooms without the need for seaming," Marley added.

Easy-to-follow instructions are provided to take you from the first to the last step.

Positioning the Flooring

Before you begin, clear the room of all furniture and movable appliances. Carefully remove and save moldings or trim along the edge of the floor. Make sure the existing floor is free of wax, dirt and grease before laying the new flooring on top.

Unroll your new flooring into the room, pattern side up. Center it along the longest wall. Rough cut the material around the perimeter of the room leaving about three extra inches to extend against the walls on all sides.

Cut carefully in the corners. For inside corners, cut the flooring to within a foot of the corner in both directions. Then pull material away from the corner. Using a yardstick or straight edge, cut to the corner, extending the wall line in each direction. Remember to use a protective piece of wood under the folded material when cutting with a knife.

For outside corners, hold the material against the walls, then carefully cut from the top of the material to the base. Material can be then cut in both directions following normal procedure for walls.

Trimming

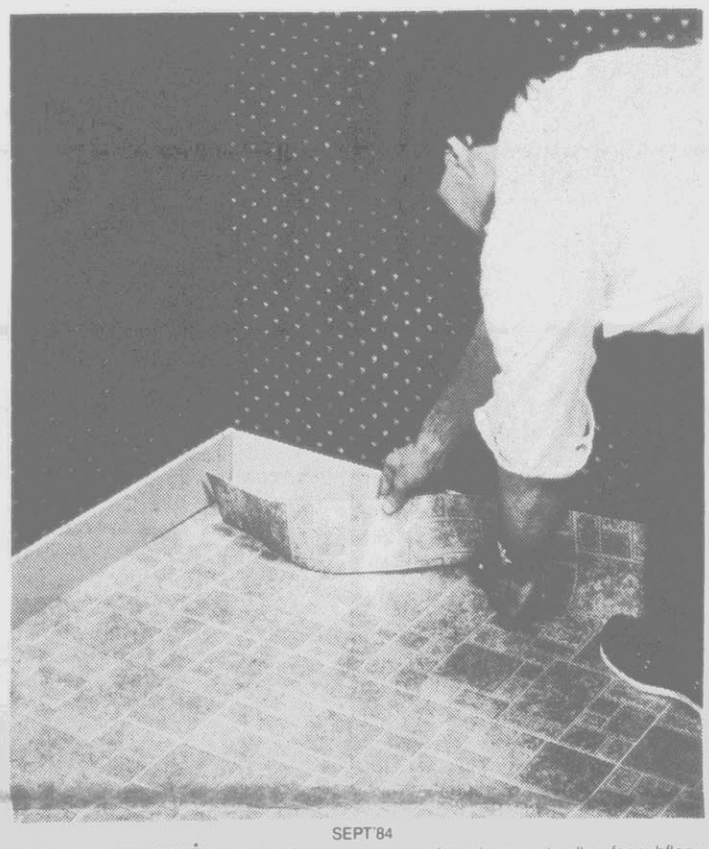
Use a utility knife to trim the flooring leaving a ¼-inch space between the flooring and the baseboard or wall. This allows for normal subfloor and wall expansion and contraction without affecting the flooring.

Final Steps

Now that your new floor is in place, a few finishing steps will complete the task. Replace molding and trim by nailing them to the wall, not to the floor.

It's advisable to allow the new flooring to settle over night before replacing appliances or heavy furniture. When you do replace them, however, glide or walk them back into position using tracks made of hardboard or Masonite. Appliance dollies, available at rental stores, may be helpful.

The easy-care features of the Delightt product should provide you with years of maintenance free enjoyment.



SEPT'84

USE A UTILITY KNIFE to trim the flooring, leaving a ¼-inch space to allow for subfloor and wall expansion and contraction.†

Art of collecting is now widespread

By The Associated Press

As editor of House & Garden magazine, Louis O. Gropp gets to see some of the most innovative and beautiful homes in America. He is also aware of the interests of his home-loving readers.

Recently, Gropp noted that "one of the biggest home decorating trends I am aware of is collecting." The individuals profied in the magazine and many of its readers have been collecting art with a capital "A" for years. But Gropp discerns a new interest in other types oc collectibles — crafts, family memorabilia, photos, old toys, even travel souvenirs.

It's considered chic today to amass a collection of objects that don't come in for much attention. That's a boon for folks of moderate income who enjoy pursuing a collecting passion but can't afford the steep prices that paintings, sculpture and rare antiques command.

Decoratively speaking, even a collection of found objects can be valuable.

AIRPLANE TIRES

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y. (AP) — In 1970, three out of every 100 new tires sold in the United States were radials. Today nearly 80 percent of all car tires are radials, according to Michelin.

The firm, which introduced radials in this country in 1948, says it now has a radial tire designed for U.S. military and commercial aircraft which could begin appearing on planes in the Unites States by 1985.

Today's roof materials add more to home's looks

A standard interview question: "Tell me without looking what color your tie is?" Most folks can't answer that one. How about "What does your roof look like?" Ask that one sometime at your next family reunion, neighborhood gathering or church picnic. If you aren't apprehended for lunacy, it should point out the fact that most people don't know much about their roofs.

Roofs today aren't just the drab, humdrum affair of 20 years ago, according to the experts at the CertainTeed Home Institute, the consumer affairs bureau of CertainTeed Corporation, a major manufacturer of building materials for residential and commercial use. Today's roofing materials form an integral part of the overall appearance of the home, especially the fiberglass-based asphalt roofing shingles that look like wood but offer a 20- to 25-year warranty and Class A UL fire protection ratings.

At the top-of-the-line there are textured, random tab shingles, like Hallmark, which offer the deep shadow lines of a wood roof. These are available in muted earthtones and are found on trendy homes of all architectural types.

There are also random-tab designs without the texturing, again giving a wood-look with the durability and dependability of a fiberglass-based product. Here, too, earthtones and muted shades predominate, to help the house blend into the landscape.

Totally new this year is a smart new shingle that looks like it has a random tab and the deep shadow lines of its more expensive cousins. Actually it's a straight three-tab shingle with creatively-developed surface coloring. This shingle should have been named Chameleon because its subtle changes in sunlight really do make you believe there's a random tab there. Actually, this product's called Horizon, and it's considerably less expensive than the country's favorite random tab design shingle. On the roof the two are virtually indistinguishable.

To see some of these roofs, visit an exclusive area where custom houses are showcases for them. Or, stop by a building materials dealer or larger home center. Most will have displays or samples to show you. Some will even have a listing of homes for you to drive by for a closer look. You can also contact the CertainTeed Home Institute at P.O. Box 860S, Valley Forge, PA 19482 or call toll-free at 800-523-7844.†

Rustic image peeled from log homes

The traditional view of log cabins as the rustic birthplaces of presidents is changing.

For many people, says the Log Homes Council, log homes have become primary residences as well as vacation homes. The most luxurious, perhaps, is Sagamore Lodge in New York's Adirondack Mountains. Built in 1893, its owner traveled to the lodge by private railroad car and private yacht or, in winter, by horsedrawn sleigh.

The choice of ceiling grid makes a difference in decorating effect

There's an old saying to the effect that nothing's ever black and white.

Everybody has an opinion on that, but one thing's for certain: It's a true statement when it comes to suspended ceilings.

Not that the ceilings themselves are black; they're mostly white or look like wood. But the grid systems — the metal structures that support the ceiling panels — are available in black, white or woodgrain. And the color you pick makes all the difference in the decorating effect you want.

A white ceiling panel in a black or woodgrain grid has a sophisticated, contemporary look. So if your home furnishings fall into the contemporary category, or if you like an eclectic look (a mixture of varying decorating styles), you'll probably opt for a black or woodgrain grid.

But perhaps you don't want the ceiling grid to be so noticeable. In that case, you'll likely choose a white grid. It blends in with the ceiling panels and practically disappears.

Regardless of the color choice, Armstrong provides a 10-year guarantee, the longest offered, with the purchase of Armstrong ceiling panels and grid together.

Although a professional can be hired to hang a suspended ceiling, it is a job that is definitely within the capabilities of do-it-yourselfers. Step-by-step instructions are provided with the ceiling purchase. But, briefly, all you do is hang the grid from the existing ceiling with wires and lay in the panels.†

Key steps to winterizing furniture

With the coming of cooler weather, many homeowners have begun their winterizing efforts. Some of that effort will be devoted to refinishing outdoor metal items such as patio and lawn furniture.

According to experts at Rust-Oleum Corporation, there are three key steps in metal refinishing required to achieve long-lasting results: proper surface preparation and application of both a high-quality primer and finish coat.

If you plan to refinish outdoor metal items this fall, the following tips will help you do the job right; your furniture will look like new next spring.

Surface Preparation: Rusted surfaces should be scraped and wire brushed to remove loose rust, rust scale and loose or deteriorated coatings. Remove any dirt, grease, oil or other contaminants from the surface by using a solvent such as paint thinner or by scrubbing with a strong detergent and rinsing with fresh water. Lightly sand hard, glossy previous paint to assure maximum adhesion. Make sure the surface is dry and clean prior to coating application.

Priming: It is important that primers be selected based on the condition of the surface after surface preparation has been completed. Heavily rusted metal, for example, should be coated with Rust-Oleum® 7769® Rusty Metal Primer while bare, lightly rusted or previously painted metal surfaces should be coated with Clean Metal Primer.

Finish Coat: After allowing the primer to dry thoroughly (Rust-Oleum 7769 Rusty Metal Primer in spray cans dries in only 5 minutes), apply the appropriate finish coat in the color of your choice.†

For homeowners,

Energy crisis may be here to stay

Some 10 years after the Arab oil embargo shocked the nation into taking drastic new measures to conserve energy, homeowners can ill afford to relax their vigil against energy waste.

Gone are the long lines at the gasoline pump and the fuel shortages that plagued the nation through much of the 70's. But apparently here to stay are rising fuel prices that again threaten to push winter heating and summer cooling bills right through the roof.

Recent studies reveal that energy usage will continue to rise sharply over the next 10 years, with electricity and natural gas setting the pace. And, as electric energy consumption continues to soar, homeowners can expect continued upward pressure on electric rates as well. In fact, one report projects the cost of electricity in 1985 at $25.78 per million Btu, compared with $9.84 for the comparable heating value of oil and $7.81 for natural gas. Electricity currently costs about $21 per million Btu.

Gas utilities have also been preparing customers nationwide for the same kind of price shock experienced previously by oil and electricity customers. The deregulation of natural gas prices has been cited by utilities as the cause of the sharp price hikes to homeowners. About 65 percent of all homes are now heated by natural gas, including a substantial number that converted from oil to gas heat during the past 10 years. Then, too, doubts about future availability of foreign oil supplies, due in part, to the continuing Persian Gulf war, have also re-shaped current attitudes toward residential energy conservation.

BAY AND BOW WINDOWS, by CertainTeed, are designed to enhance the value of a home and reduce energy costs.†

Today, before a homeowner invests $5,000 to enlarge or add a new family room, he's as likely to consider the energy cost factors as much as the aesthetic benefits, says Jack McDermott, vice president-marketing for windows at CertainTeed Corporation. Much of the homeowner's concern for energy conservation is now focused on windows since they traditionally have been the leading contributor to residential heat loss.

McDermott notes that of the 5 million homeowners who will be adding or replacing windows this year, a vast majority will be looking for an aesthetically pleasing product that is designed for maximum energy efficiency, one that will yield at least a partial return on his investment in the form of reduced energy costs.

Towards that end, CertainTeed recently introduced new solid vinyl bay and bow windows that are custom fabricated with head and seat for easy installation into almost any size opening.

Geared to both the new construction and remodeling markets, the double-glazed entries provide an exceptionally tight fit, are virtually maintenance-free, and can substantially enhance the appearance and value of any home.

The new bay window can be designed with either a 30- or 45-degree projection. The bay's center segment is available in either a picture or double-hung design, while side units feature a dead-light or double-hung system.

The bow windows offer three or more segments to preserve a home's original architectural lines or to satisfy a variety of aesthetic preferences.

All exterior portions of the bay and bow units are pre-trimmed in color-coordinated vinyl stock, eliminating the need for filler or brick moulding.

For more information on the new bay and bow windows or CertainTeed's complete line of vinyl windows, write to CertainTeed Corporation, Vinyl Product Division, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.†

Closets can become bigger by dividing

By The Associated Press

"Divide and conquer" should be the motto when it comes to the closets.

Most closets come with a single hanging bar and a long shelf above. But by dividing the closet vertically in thirds, you can easily double the available storage space.

Remove the existing shelf and hanging bar and mount a double hanging bar in the first third of the closet to accommodate jackets, shirts and skirts or trousers. Build a series of cubbies in the center third for flat storage and hang a single bar near the top in the last third for coasts, dresses and long robes.

Those who are handy can complete the closet reorganization themseleves, using materials that are available in hardware and building centers.

Others will find a large number of storage bars, shelves and other components in housewares, department, closet specialty shops and home centers.

If you would like to have an official City map, contact the Engineering and Inspections Department on the third floor of the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets. Call 752-4137 for more information.

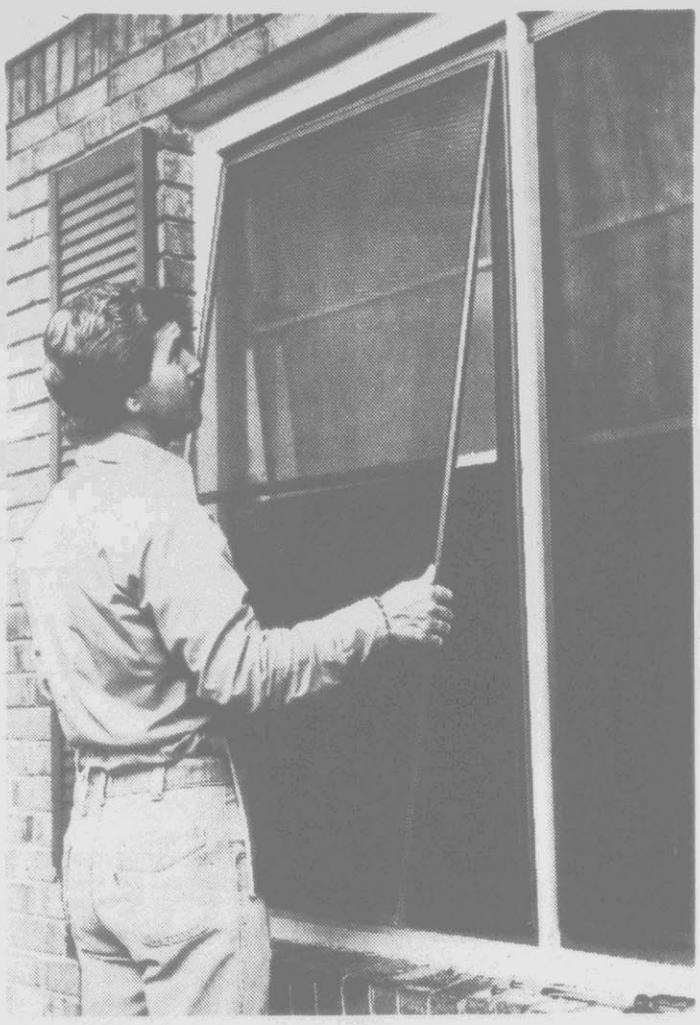
Add solar screens to storm windows to reduce energy costs year round

Thousands of homeowners install storm windows and doors each year. If you are one of those planning on investing in storm windows this season, here's a tip on how to make sure that the storm windows you buy will be year-round energy savers. Instead of conventional insect screens that usually come on most storm windows and cover only the bottom half of the window, specify that your storm windows be equipped with full screens made of SunScreen® solar screening.



SEPT'84

SOLAR SCREENS can make storm windows more energy efficient and help reduce fading and glare year-round. They can be easily installed on any type or size of window too.†

This way, you'll get a window that will help you keep the heat inside during winter months and outside during summer months. And, you'll have a storm window that will pay for itself much faster in the form of lower heating and cooling bills.

How much faster? Well, a survey done by a Houston, Texas, utility company a few years ago showed an estimated pay-back period for storm windows to be from 10 to almost 30 years, depending on whether you install them yourself or hire a contractor. The same survey showed that solar screens could pay for themselves on summer energy costs alone in two to three years, even if contractor-installed. These screens block up to 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare for "instant" comfort on a bright sunny day.

The pay-back on a storm window equipped with a full-length SunScreen solar screen should be considerably shorter than that for a conventional storm window alone. By "piggy-backing" the two products together, you'll save on installation costs and have a window that is year-round energy efficient. If full-solar radiation is desirable on some windows, for example, south-facing windows, the solar screens can be removed and stored during winter months.

Most energy auditors agree that windows are usually the least energy-efficient part of any building. In the winter, heat escapes through and around windows to the cold outside. Since heat always travels in one direction, from warm to cold, the process reverses itself in summer, with outside heat radiating toward the cooler inside. The extra layer of insulation provided by SunScreen solar screens helps to keep the heat where you want it year-round.

In addition, solar screens work year-round to help protect draperies, carpets and upholstered furniture against fading. SunScreen solar screening comes in several colors and choices so you can enhance the exterior of your home. Solar screens also provide daytime privacy . . . you can see out, but not in. And, they keep the bugs out when your windows are open. Since the solar screening is an open mesh, woven of fiberglass, gentle breezes can come in allowing healthier, natural ventilation.

If you're shopping for storm windows, ask for SunScreen solar screening as an option. It will cost a few extra dollars now, but it will save you energy dollars for years to come.

If you already have storm windows, a screen shop can install full SunScreen solar screens for you. Look in the Yellow Pages under "Screens — Door & Windows" or "Storm Windows & Doors."

For additional information on SunScreen solar screening, contact Phifer Wire Products, Inc., P.O. Box 1700, Tuscaloosa, Alabama 35403. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.†

Selecting an insulation contractor

With energy costs projected to soar unabated for at least the next 10 years, according to most experts, the wise homeowner will want to investigate how to make the family home as energy efficient as possible. Energy conservation experts at the CertainTeed Home Institute suggest that insulation is one of the homeowner's best weapons for combating high energy bills.

While some attics can be insulated by a do-it-yourselfer in an afternoon, maximum energy savings are obtained by insulating an entire house, a procedure that can't be done by the homeowner. To properly insulate inaccessible areas and side walls in addition to attics, a professional home insulation contractor should be consulted.

The contractor is specially trained to determine where to add insulation and to advise how much insulation is required to give the best return on investment in energy conservation.

The CertainTeed Home Institute recommends certain guidelines be followed in selecting a home insulation contractor.

A good place to begin is the Yellow Pages of the telephone book under "Insulation Contractors" or "Insulation Materials" or by contacting a local contractor's association or asking your friends or neighbors who've had their homes insulated.

Once the local professional insulation contractors have been identified, look for four important things any qualified professional will provide: credentials, references, written estimates and high-quality products.

To check a contractor's credentials, contact the Better Business Bureau. Local contractor associations can also be of assistance in this area.

Next, ask the contractor for references. If he's well established in the community, he should have a list of satisfied customers that he would feel confident to have you contact. Talk with some of the people on the list to get their opinions of the contractor's work and honesty.

Most importantly, obtain firm estimates in writing of the work that is to be done and the materials to be used. The easiest way to avoid disappointment and misunderstanding is to have everything spelled out clearly before the job begins.

The contractors should submit written estimates in order to determine the best one to work with. To properly compare them, make sure that the estimates are for comparable jobs — using the same materials, quality of workmanship and R-value. Thickness alone is not the best measurement of insulation value. The R-value is the measure of an insulating material's resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power.

One product that more and more professional contractors recommend is Insul-Safe® II, the fiber glass blown-in insulation from CertainTeed. Quality tested and manufactured to demanding standards, Insul-Safe® II offers superior thermal performance over many other kinds of blown-in insulation. In addition, it is noncombustible, will not absorb moisture, will not rot or decay, and it has no corrosive effect on pipes and other metal objects. Plus, it is not treated with chemicals that can cause noxious odors — like some types of insulation.

For more information about home insulation contractors, write to the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860 Valley Forge, PA 19482 for the free booklet: "How to Select an Insulation Contractor."†

Watch out for hidden costs in home buying

In the fall, after a long, hot summer, many homeowners turn their attention towards home repair. Whether it's a major home improvement project or simply cosmetic touch-ups, it seems there's always something that needs to be done around the house.

However, for some people — especially first-time homeowners or those on fixed incomes — there is no money for repairs. For them, a leaky roof or a broken furnace is a serious problem that they simply can't afford to fix.

That is why it is so important, according to the American Society of Home Inspectors (ASHI), for consumers to have a professional home inspection performed before they buy a house. By learning about the structural condition of a home and its major systems in advance, home buyers can anticipate and budget for whatever repairs may be necessary. Or, if an inspection reveals problems that are beyond a buyer's financial ability to handle, he or she has the option of not buying that house. In either case, the buyer is spared unpleasant surprises after moving in.

Home inspectors who are members of ASHI are experienced, thorough and impartial professionals who can help home buyers make the best purchase decision for them. ASHI members are listed in local Yellow Pages directories under "Building Inspection Services."†

Heat pump boosts efficiency of heating systems

If your present heating system seems to deliver high fuel and utility bills better than it does comfort, consider the heat pump. A highly efficient, year-round climate control system, the heat pump has a unique method of operation: rather than burning fuel to generate heat, it works by collecting and transferring heat from one place to another. A heat pump can replace your present furnace while adding central air conditioning or can be an "add-on" to a forced-air heating system to achieve year-round savings.

The heat pump runs on electricity, therefore not depending on a fossil fuel source — a key advantage given today's unpredictable fuel situation. Indeed, there has been a surge of interest in heat pumps in recent years as a result of the energy crisis.

Heat pumps can be adapted for any home. They're a wise choice for the all-electric home, since they can deliver up to 250 percent more heat than an electric furnace while using the same amount of electricity.

How the Heat Pump Works

Though it's easy to understand taking heat out of a house in summer (that's what the familiar air conditioner does), the notion that there is heat available outdoors on a winter day to transfer into a house can be difficult to comprehend. However, all matter has heat until it reaches what physicists call absolute zero: minus 460 degrees F. Therefore, even at sub-zero temperatures, reserves of heat are present, but it takes a specially designed refrigeration system to capture this heat. In many cases, the heat pump can provide all the heat required for a home until the outside temperature drops to freezing, or below.

Selecting a Heat Pump

Heat pumps are in use today all across the country. A heat pump can also be installed as an add-on to your present gas, electric or oil forced-air furnace, boosting its efficiency and conserving fuel. In an add-on system, the heat pump operates in milder weather when it can draw heat from the air most efficiently. When it gets colder, the furnace takes over because it operates better at lower outside temperatures. "This tandem arrangement allows you to get maximum efficiency from both units," says Bill Moore, vice president of marketing for Trane Dealer Products Group, a leading heat pump manufacturer. The heat pump can use the existing ducts and blowers, though they may need to be modified.

A unique heat pump system, Trane's Weathertron® III, also provides hot water in addition to its heating and cooling functions, adding to overall efficiency.

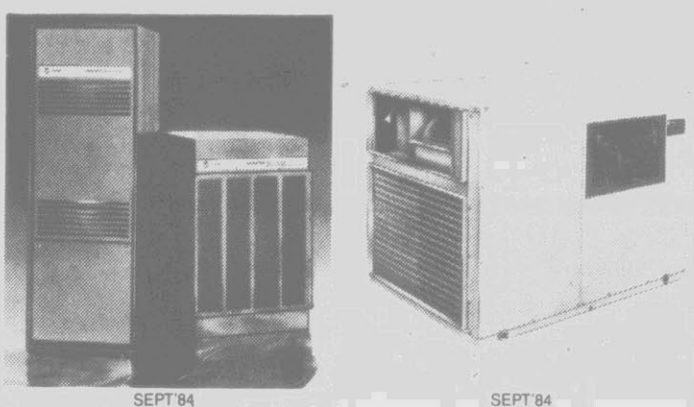
There are two basic types of heat pumps. The "split" system, the most common, consists of two boxes or assemblies, one located indoors and one outdoors. The "single package" system has all its components in one unit and is installed outside.

If you're concerned with saving energy, you'll want to compare the efficiency of different heat pumps. Efficiency is measured in several ways. The SEER, or Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio, measures a heat pump's summer cooling performance. A SEER rating of six indicates poor efficiency, while a SEER rating over eight is good.

Heat pump heating efficiency is difficult to measure, because it varies with outdoor temperature. One measure is COP, or coefficient of performance, which compares the amount of energy the heat pump delivers to your home with the amount of energy it uses.

"To determine what size and type of heat pump is best for you, a dealer should inspect your home and do a heat loss and heat gain calculation," according to Moore. For instance, Trane's dealers utilize computer programs which incorporate 10-year Weather Bureau data for your area and analyze each home's heating load to determine payback time. Regular servicing will keep a heat pump operating at top efficiency and can be handled by your dealer as well. With simple maintenance and conservation measures, you can help boost its efficiency and enjoy the returns every season of the year.

In addition, Trane has a 24-hour toll-free Comfort Line (1-800-322-1616) where personal attention is given to product data, referral to dealers, energy questions and use and care information.†



THE PLUS ONE™ add-on heat pump (left) from the Trane Dealer Products Group can be installed as an "add-on" to your present gas, electric, or oil forced-air furnace, boosting its efficiency and conserving fuel. Trane's Elite Weathertron® heat pump (right) is ideally suited to replace the many existing lower efficiency single package units which are failing every year. Available in 2, 2-½ and 3 ton sizes, the heat pump can be a money-saving alternative for those homes built with expensive resistance heat.†

Skylights: popular old idea

If Paris is the city of lights, then Rome — though it's known as the eternal city — must be the city of skylights. Long before the Gauls became French, Romans were accustomed to skylights.

History records that architects introduced Romans to skylights in 126 A.D., when they were incorporated into the architecture of the Pantheon, the Roman temple to the gods. They soon became a common element of Roman architecture.

Since then, the use of skylights has spread east into India and west into the United States, where they are currently enjoying a resurgence in popularity.

The reason isn't hard to fathom, says APC Corporation of Hawthorne, N.J., a leading manufacturer of skylights. A skylight or two gives any room new depth and dimension while expanding it visually with scenes of ever-changing skies.

Esthetic appeal, however, isn't the only reason for their popularity. Skylights not only reduce the necessity for artificial indoor lighting during daylight hours, says APC, but they can also take advantage of passive solar heat gain in winter to supplement a home's heating system.

To take advantage of this winter solar heat gain, skylights should be installed in south-facing roofs angled toward the sun, where they serve as passive solar collectors. Double-dome acrylic glazing lets the sunlight penetrate the house where the heat is trapped.

Most skylights are available in convenient sizes that fit between rafters or trusses for quick and easy installation. It's a job that a skilled handyman ought to be able to complete in a day.

Additional information is available in "A Selector Guide to Skylights." For a free copy, write APC Corporation, Box 8356-HP, Haledon, N.J. 07058.†

Bedroom captures spirit of the '80s

By The Associated Press

If rooms can be said to go in and out of style, then the 1980s may become known as the decade of the bedroom.

"The bedroom has always been the nucleus of the home. It is the one room that differs from others because it is private," according to Leslie W. Flippo, executive vice president of Hickory Furniture Co.

In recent years, it may have seemed that other rooms were stealing attention away from the bedroom. Beginning in the 1960s, Americans have variously extolled the recreation room, the den, the family room and the great room.

Wallcoverings redefine room shape

One of the frequent considerations when thinking about interior decorating is the size of the room being decorated. Often, the room is either too large or too small.

But that doesn't mean you have to go to the trouble and expense of hiring a remodeling contractor to knock down walls or build new ones. There's a much simpler and far less expensive way, says the Wallcovering Information Bureau (WIB).

Use the color and pattern of wallcoverings to create optical illusions that reshape the visual dimensions of a room. Dark colors, WIB points out, serve to enclose space. Light or neutral colors expand space. Pattern has a similar effect by making walls appear to advance or recede. In an overly large room, a bold-patterned wallcovering will make the room appear more intimate.

To stretch a room visually, WIB suggests a neutral-colored striped or string-fabric wallcovering applied horizontally. Use a strong complementary color on the ceiling to add to the illusion of width. In rooms with low ceilings, choose a striped wallcovering in a subdued shade with a delicate floral motif and apply the wallcovering vertically. This will enhance the impression of height.

Another way to create the illusion of added space in a small room is to choose mural or scenic wallcoverings. Available in single or multi-panel versions, they draw the eye into the scene and expand the view way beyond the limits of the walls. Murals and scenics range from quiet pastorals to dynamic city scapes.

Wallcoverings can be purchased in decorating stores, home centers, department stores, and paint and wallpaper stores.

For more information on the art of decorating with wallcoverings, write for a free copy of, "The Wallcovering How-To Handbook," to WIB, Dept. HP, 66 Morris Ave., Springfield, N.J. 07081.†

Ten most wanted answers to home energy and insulation questions

Despite growing interest in energy and energy savings, homeowners continue to be plagued by such questions as the amount of insulation they need and the proper material to install.

In response to these kinds of questions, the CertainTeed Home Institute has developed its own version of the "Ten Most Wanted List." From questions asked most frequently by concerned homeowners, here are the Home Institute's Ten Most Wanted Answers:

How does insulation work?

Heat naturally flows from warmer to cooler spaces. During the winter heating season, warmth is flowing from your heated living areas to adjacent unheated areas — attics, garages, basements and then directly outdoors. In the summer, warmth from outdoors flows into the rooms you are trying to keep cool. Insulation guards against this heat transfer by providing a barrier to block the flow of heat. The end result: warmer in winter, cooler in summer.

Does my house need insulation?

Because most houses were built when energy was cheap and abundant, the amount of insulation in your home is probably not adequate by today's standards. In fact, if you have already added some insulation, you may find that even this is inadequate in view of the rapid rate at which energy costs are rising. Anything less than 10 inches (R-30) of figer glass building insulation in the attic is inadequate regardless of where you live. For many parts of the country, 12 inches or more is recommended.

Why should I insulate?

As a homeowner, there are three basic reasons to add insulation: to save money, to save energy and to increase your personal comfort. Adequate amounts of insulation will enable you to use less energy to heat and cool your home so you'll be saving money year after year. (Savings vary. Find out why in the Seller's Fact Sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power.) You'll also be conserving energy, a valuable and limited resource. In addition, proper amounts of insulation help to maintain uniform temperatures throughout a house, thereby increasing personal comfort.

What is an R-value?

An R-value is the measure of an insulating material's resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power. Specific thicknesses of insulation are recommended to achieve certain R-values.

How much insulation do I need?

If your attic has six inches or less of insulation, at least the equivalent of six-inch thick R-19 fiber glass building insulation should be added, according to government recommendations. If your attic has no insulation, up to 12-inch thick R-38 fiber glass building insulation may be required. For specific amounts recommended in your geographic area, consult your local utility company, home center or a professional insulation contractor.

Where can insulation be added?

Insulation can be added to almost any house. And wherever structural framing is exposed (such as unfinished attic floors), you can install it yourself.

What kind of insulation should I use?

The most popular kind of insulation among homeowners today is fiber glass, which is available in rolls and batts for easy installation. Fiber glass is an extremely effective insulating material, because it contains millions of tiny pockets that resist the flow of heat. In addition, fiber glass insulation won't deteriorate with age and, unlike some other kinds of insulating materials, it is noncombustible.

Can I add insulation myself?

Wherever wood framing is exposed, as in the joists of an attic floor or along an unfinished garage wall, adding insulation is a job you can do yourself. Wherever the frame is concealed, however, as in finished walls, or if your home is not a frame construction, special equipment is necessary and the services of a professional insulation contractor are recommended.

To find a contractor, first look under "Insulation Contractors" or "Insulation Materials" in the Yellow Pages. Other ways to locate a contractor are by contacting a local contractor's association or asking your friends and neighbors who've had their homes insulated.

Once the local professional insulation contractors have been identified, look for four important things any qualified professional will provide: credentials, references, written estimates and high-quality products.

To check a contractor's credentials, contact the Better Business Bureau. Local contractor associations also can be of assistance in this area.

How much will I save by adding insulation?

Although the amount of energy you will save depends on where you live, the size of your home and its construction, the Department of Energy estimates that insulation can be expected to pay for itself through fuel savings in three to five years, sometimes even more quickly.

What is the energy-saving tax credit?

If your home was substantially built before April 20, 1977 and you install insulation yourself or have it installed in your attic, wall or floor, you are eligible for a tax credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 you spend for both material and labor, up to a maximum of $300. A tax credit differs from a tax deduction because it is subtracted from your final tax bill and not from your gross income.

More information on saving energy can be obtained by writing to CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482 for the free booklet: "Insulation Facts."†

Solid vinyl siding is easy care

About the only maintenance required with solid vinyl siding, says the Vinyl Siding Institute, is an occasional rinse with mild detergent and water.

Insulated doors cut energy usage

You can close the door on energy waste by replacing those exterior wood entry doors that stick or let in drafts.

It's done easily by using insulated steel entry doors designed for do-it-yourself installation. The interiors of the steel doors are filled with insulation to shut out cold and heat and save energy. And, the doors won't warp, split, shrink or swell.

A Stanley entry door is easy to install because it has a unique steel adapter frame that attaches to the existing door opening, making it unnecessary to tear out the existing wood frame. The door and frame are handled as a single unit and can be installed with ordinary hand tools in fewer than three hours. Doors are available in embossed and raised panel designs and come prime painted.

For a free home energy guide showing more than 200 ways to help save money on energy costs, write to The Stanley Works, Dept. SC, P.O. Box 1800, New Britain, CT 06050.†

REPLACE OLD, WORN DOORS with insulated ones that shut out the cold and heat that drives utility bills up.†

Cut the drafts

A cracked chimney cap will admit water to masonry surrounding a flue liner and lead to water stains inside. One simple way to correct, if there is only a small space between the cap and flue, is simply to fill with Elmer's Concrete Crack Sealer.

A home, no matter how well built, tends to develop cracks where two surfaces of different material meet. One of the most common places where cracks develop is around window and door frames. They invite moisture, dirt and insects into the house. This condition is easily corrected by removing old caulk, cleaning the surface thoroughly, and apply Elmer's Siliconized Acrylic Latex Caulk. Be certain the caulking bead reaches and overlaps both surfaces. This caulk is ready for painting in 30 minutes.†

Skylight's role depends on street where you live

The location of a skylight plays an important role in how it functions. A south-facing skylight, points out APC Corp., a leading skylight manufacturer, brings in lots of daylight. So some shading device may be necessary in summer.

A north-facing skylight lets in soft, even light.

No matter where it's placed, the amount of daylight entering through a skylight depends on where you live, the angle of the skylight and the shape of its shaft.

Patio door choice hinges on style

Patio doors are a good way to keep in touch with the outdoors. Besides easy access, they offer views and lots of natural light.

Wood framed patio doors are available either as sliding units or hinged, in which one of the panels is fixed and the other swings open.

FALL FIX-UP SYSTEM — New Professional Adjusting Ladder System (PAL) provides do-it-yourselfer Ed Conner complete climbing tool for autumn home repair chores. From a 4.4-foot storage size, this lightweight new tool unfolds into 24 different work stances including scaffold and ladders. The aluminum alloy PAL System, built around six adjusting click-lock hinge-joints, holds up to 1000 pounds and meets OSHA specifications. Flared-end legs and skid-resistant feet provide stability and help prevent slippage. PAL System comes in three sizes. For free information, write Jack Chase, PAL System, 103 Farmington Boulevard, Hampton, VA 23666.†

Aluminum siding scores high in durabilty and cost-effectiveness

The United States is dotted with homes that were sided with aluminum three decades ago. Unlike their wooden counterparts, these homes have never been slapped by a paint brush.

The only exterior maintenance most of the aluminum-sided homes have required is an occasional hosing to wash off accumulated dirt.

If you are tired of repainting your home, it is never too late to remodel with aluminum siding.

The money you save by foregoing your next house painting will start you on the way to recouping the cost of the siding.

You will also benefit through a reduction in heating costs if the aluminum siding you select is insulated. An Aluminum Association study indicated that the owner of an average-size New England home with uninsulated walls could save well over $100 a year in heating oil costs by installing polystyrene-backed aluminum siding in conjunction with a foil sheathing board.

Cost considerations aside, the quality that attracts many homeowners to aluminum is its attractiveness.

Whether you favor subtle earth tones or vibrant primary colors you will be able to find what you have in mind. You also have a choice of textures (woodgrained or smooth) and styles (horizontal, vertical or shakes).

The track record of older aluminum-sided homes proves that the good looks will hold up over the years. To provide further assurance, manufacturers guarantee their siding finish for as many as 40 years against chipping, cracking, peeling and blistering, and some offer life-time warrantees to the original homeowner.

For more information on aluminum siding, write for a free booklet, "A Homeowner's Guide to Choosing Siding," from the Aluminum Association, Department FM, 818 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006.†

Add attic insulation to reduce fuel bills

Adding mineral fiber insulation — either rock wool or fiber glass — to an attic should result in lower heating and cooling bills. In general, R-38 or R-30 insulation is recommended for attics..

Create culinary center with combination range

"Help, I need a better set-up in my kitchen!" are familiar words in many households.

No matter how experienced the cook, anxious moments often occur when preparing and serving a meal. Suddenly there aren't enough range-top burners, or the oven won't accommodate a large roast and a baked casserole at the same time. Just as exasperating are the final minutes of getting a meal on the table. Vegetables overcook while the roast is being carved... rolls either burn to a crisp or cool off while foods are put into serving dishes. There's no burner available when it's time to make gravy. Every cook has a similar list of personal frustrations, whether cooking for a family or when entertaining.

Help is on hand with a single major kitchen appliance — the combination range. This unit, such as the Tappan electric (or gas) range, has a microwave oven on top, a conventional oven below and four surface burners, all in just 30 inches of space. With this kind of over/under range, you have the ability to prepare foods in three different areas at the same time.

Another advantage that helps avoid frustration is that you can select the most practical way of cooking various foods with one convenient appliance. Cooking can be done simultaneously in each cooking area — microwave, conventional oven, range top — assuring that all foods will be finished and ready to serve at mealtime.

This complete cooking center gives you the flexibility to do complementary cooking — starting the cooking in one area and finishing it in another.

For instance, when making a two-crust apple pie (or other fruit pie), try preparing the pie using your conventional oven recipe. Start the cooking in a microwave oven. Cook with microwave on high (100 percent) until the fruit is very hot and almost tender (about 8 to 12 minutes). Then, place the pie in a preheated 425°F conventional oven and bake about 12 to 20 minutes until crust or topping is golden brown and the filling is cooked and bubbling. Be sure to use a pie plate suitable for both microwave and conventional ovens, such as a glass pie plate.

Another skillful trick is to brown meats on the top surface burner and finish cooking in the microwave oven. This frees burners, broiler or oven for other foods. Or, try baking potatoes in a microwave oven and then place in conventional hot oven for crispy skins.

A CULINARY CENTER... the over/under electric (or gas) range with microwave oven on top, conventional oven below and four surface burners offers the versatility to prepare foods in three different areas at the same time, assuring that all foods will be finished and ready to serve at mealtime.†

With the Tappan combination range, the eye-level microwave oven includes such features as touch control panel, variable power levels and temperature probe. The electric range features self-cleaning lower conventional oven, waist-high broiling, black smooth top (or regular surface elements), surface work light and preheat setting.

With a variety of cooking techniques available with an all-in-one range, you'll alleviate many nerve-racking moments in the kitchen and you'll add a culinary center that provides the best of both worlds with microwave and conventional cooking.

Menu for use with a combination range:

Country Steak, Burgundy Style (Top of the Range)

- 1½ lbs. beef round steak, cut ½ inch thick
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon all-purpose seasoning*
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- 2 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1 med. sliced onion
- 2 carrots, peeled and sliced in 1-inch pieces
- 1 cup beef broth
- ⅓ cup burgundy wine
- ⅔ cups water

* The product Season-All or a combination of ½ teaspoon dill weed and ½ teaspoon dried parsley, plus ½ teaspoon salt, may be substituted.

Method: Combine flour and seasonings. Pound into both sides of round steak.

Heat oil in 10-inch skillet. Add steak. Turn top control to medium. Brown steak on both sides. (This will take about 2 to 3 minutes).

To the steak, add sliced onion, carrots, beef broth, wine and water. Cover skillet.

With top surface unit on high, bring liquid to boil or until lid feels warm to touch. Turn control to warm or lowest setting. Cook about 1½ hours or until meat is tender.

Scalloped Potatoes (Microwave Oven)

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 3 tablespoons flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2½ cups milk
- 3½ to 4 cups thinly sliced white potatoes, (about 3 medium potatoes)
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion if desired
- Paprika

Method: Prepare white sauce as follows:

Melt butter in a 1-quart measurer or a 1-quart casserole. Add flour, salt and pepper. Mix well with melted butter. Cook with microwaves on high (100 percent) about 30 seconds or until mixture is bubbly. Gradually add milk, stirring mixture. Cook mixture with microwave about 4 minutes. Stir about every 30 seconds the last 2 minutes of cooking time. Sauce is very thin and should be smooth. Cover sauce and set aside.

Peel potatoes and slice very thin into a bowl of cold water.

Place half of the sliced potatoes into a greased 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle with chopped onion. Add half the white sauce mixture. Repeat layers, ending with white sauce. Make sure all potato slices are covered with white sauce.

Cover dish and microwave on high (100 percent) for about 10 minutes. Stir potatoes carefully from edge of dish to center. Sprinkle wiht paprika. Recover dish and cook 8 to 10 minutes longer or until potatoes test done.

Brussels Sprouts (Microwave oven)

- 2 10 oz. pkgs. frozen brussels sprouts
- 2 tablespoons water

Method: Place frozen brussels sprouts in a 2-quart casserole dish.

Add 2 tablespoons water.

Cover and cook with microwaves on high (100 percent) for 5 minutes.

Stir sprouts, replace lid and cook 5 minutes longer.

Allow to stand covered 5 minutes before serving.

Cream Puffs with Ice Cream and Chocolate Sauce (Conventional Oven and Top Surface of Range)

- 1 cup water
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 4 eggs

Method: Place water and butter in a two-quart sauce pan. Heat on top surface unit on high setting to a rolling boil. Butter should be completely melted. Reduce the surface setting to low and stir in flour. Stir mixture vigorously over low heat for about one minute or until mixture forms a smooth ball.

Remove from heat. Beat in eggs all at once. Continue beating until mixture is very smooth (a wire wisk will help).

Drop dough by level ⅓-cup onto ungreased baking dish. Place about three inches apart.

In a conventional oven, place in a preheated 400°F oven. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes.

Prick tops of puffs. Cool away from draft.

When completely cool, cut off tops, pull out any filament of soft dough.

Fill with small amount of ice cream.

Replace tops, dribble melted semi-sweet chocolate over tops.

Quick Chocolate Sauce (Microwave Oven)

- ½ cup semi-sweet real chocolate morsels

Method: In a 1-cup glass measurer, heat for about 3 minutes on high (100 percent) or until chocolate is melted. Stir halfway through heating time. When completely melted, stir and dribble over cream puffs.†

Homeowners who insulate now can save with rebate offer

Smart homeowners who know that insulating now can help reduce budget-crunching fuel costs should act quickly. For a limited time only, CertainTeed Corporation is offering a one dollar ($1) rebate on packages of CertainTeed 6¼-inch thick R-19 fiber glass insulation purchased from a CertainTeed retailer.

With the "Buck-a-Bundle" promotion, homeowners can save up to $40 on their insulation costs. For every package of qualifying insulation purchased between September 1 through October 21, CertainTeed Corporation will rebate one dollar ($1), up to a maximum of $40 per household. To claim a rebate, purchasers fill out rebate slips available at retailer displays and mail with appropriate proof of purchase. Checks will be mailed directly from CertainTeed.

"The 'Buck-a-Bundle' promotion presents homeowners with an opportunity for direct savings in more than one way," notes George Hoffmann, vice-president of marketing, CertainTeed Corporation. "Estimates on significant fuel bill increases this season suggest that homeowners will want to start reducing home energy consumption as soon as possible. And most homeowners can cut their fuel usage by adding insulation to their attics.

Another reason that homeowners might want to consider insulating is the federal energy tax credit that may be available to them, Hoffmann added. Those eligible can recoup up to $300 for energy conservation materials, such as CertainTeed fiber glass insulation, if their home was built before April 20, 1977. This is not a tax deduction, but an actual credit off the bottom line.

If you want more information about the Buck-A Bundle Rebate Program, write to CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.†

Shake roofing book available

More and more homeowners with worn out asphalt or fiberglass roofs are opting for new rustic shake shingles that look like wood, but are made of durable aluminum.

A new booklet answers the questions most frequently asked about shake shingle roofing such as "how will it stand up in high wind" and "how long will it last." For a free copy, write Dept S-2 Classic Products, Inc., P.O. Box 208, Piqua, OH 45356.†

Popular improvements are usually good investments

Remodeling can be a good investment whenever it is popular with buyers in general. Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minn., points out that adding something everyone wants, such as an updated kitchen or a second bath, is usually sound advice. Highly-personal improvements such as a tennis court or swimming pool may bring poor returns on your investment.

Work-at-home jobs are becoming popular recourse

It may be from the garage, basement or kitchen table but each year more and more Americans are finding ways to earn extra money and make a living from home. A recent study shows that one out of two small business owners are forced to start their own business because they can't find a job. But before you start to feel sorry for them a Journal survey shows the average earning for a small business owner is $107,460 a year. Many of these are stay-home operations, and many are started by women.

This trend is up 25 percent since 1982. Three factors are helping to bring this about. One is that Americans are returning to the traditional value of self-reliance. Two, America is shifting from an industrial society to an information society which can be handled from smaller facilities like the home. And three, new opportunities are arising as business people plagued with rising costs like rent, employee benefits, etc. have begun restructuring their operations and encouraging work-at-home projects with special pay arrangements for these people. As a result, a new type of work force is developing away from the factory and office and into the home.

For companies with these programs, it involves locating people in different parts of the country who can operate from home. For individuals, it means finding a company with a project they can handle.

Information on these new opportunities, along with names and addresses of companies looking for people interested in doing some of their work at home has been put together by a research service in New York that has begun to study this trend. They now have information on more than 200 companies with work-at-home operations and a referral service for anyone who is interested in working at home.

Borders highlight your wallcoverings

By The Associated Press

Wallpaper borders have traditionally served as an adjunct to wallcoverings. They've been applied at the ceiling or at chair-rail height to provide a finished look to coordinating wallpaper.

Today, however, borders are being used in new ways to bring design and color and excitement to plain painted walls. A number of wallpaper manufacturers now offer books of borders alone. And the variety of patterns and sizes of wallpaper borders has substantially increased.

The reason for the increasing availability and use of wallpaper borders by themselves and in conjunction with other types of wallcovering is their versatility.

Borders can be used to decorate toy chests, to edge bunk beds, to cover books, to trim a wastebasket, frame a window and break up the long line of the ceiling in a dormer room.

Classic look of textured wood spreads from siding to roofing

The preference of homeowners for a textured wood look on their home exteriors is spreading from siding to roofing. Remodelers can now get the classic look of wood shakes without wood's worries of splitting, rotting or peeling.

A new rustic shake shingle made of durable aluminum and warranteed to last 40 years or more makes it possible.

Wood shakes have been used for years on the most expensive homes to give them that special look of natural beauty. Now that same look is affordable to the homeowner whose asphalt, fiberglass or machine-split wood roof needs replacement. The new rustic shakes install right on top of worn out roofs, providing long-lasting, waterproof protection.

Aluminum's excellent heat-handling properties can help save energy. Scientists at MIT and Penn State found that 87.5 percent to 94.5 percent of heat rays are reflected by aluminum. In summer, the sun's rays are reflected away, keeping your house cooler, while in winter the interior heat is reflected back into the house, cutting fuel bills. The shingles can be installed with integral urethane insulation backer to save even more energy.

Rustic aluminum shake shingles stand up to the hot-cold, wet-dry cycles so common in the South that cause wood and asphalt to wear out.

The aluminum shake shingles manufactured by Classic Products, Inc. come with a 40-year prorated warrantee against splitting, cracking, rusting, peeling, blistering, flaking and chipping. The baked enamel acrylic finish has been continuously tested in the most severe conditions.

NEW DURABLE ALUMINUM rustic shake shingle roof goes on right over worn out asphalt or fiberglass old roof to provide classic beauty of wood without problems of rotting, splitting or peeling.†

Moderate hail won't damage the shingle roof because of the deep texture and high strength aluminum alloy used. And rain and hail do not cause a noise problem because the old roof and roofing felt underneath the shingles absorb the sound.

Shake shingles come in a variety of colors to blend with any home design ranging from weathered cedar to antique brown and "black-watch," a grey-green coating with built-in shadow line.

Aluminum shake shingle roofs are especially popular in regions prone to brush and other outdoor fires. They carry a Class A Underwriters Laboratory rating and are recommended by fire safety officials and insurance underwriters. Flying sparks can ignite wood shakes, but not aluminum.

Although aluminum shake shingle roofs are more expensive to install than ordinary asphalt or fiberglass roofs, they will last much longer. Most lending institutions recognize their long-term durability and make financing plans available.

For a free booklet containing answers to questions most frequently asked about Shake Shingle Roofing, write Dept S-1, Classic Products, Inc., P.O. Box 208, Piqua, OH 45356.†

Ventilating cuts cost of air conditioning

Though windows do a lot more than open and close, sometimes that's an important function.

In the spring and fall, for example, windows that are easy to operate can be opened to cool breezes, eliminating the need for costly air conditioning.

Even on hot days in summer, says the National Woodwork Manufacturers Association (NWMA), low ventilating windows on the north side of a home combined with high ventilating windows on the south side create a chimney effect. This natural convection draws cool air in from the north side and exhausts warm air out on the south side. With ventilating windows open on both sides, this chimney effect can move air through a house even when there isn't a breeze.

No matter what the season, however, the material that goes into the manufacture of windows is just as important as their operation. Wood is used in the sash and frame of well-made windows, says NWMA, because wood is a natural insulator. Many wood windows have a protective exterior cladding that all but elminates the need for periodic painting. Some have movable grilles so there is only one large pane of glass to wash instead of many small ones.

All have factory-installed weatherstripping to minimize air infiltration and are double- or triple-glazed.

Control home heating costs automatically, comfortably

You turn it up in the morning, down before work, up after work and down before bedtime. Regulating home temperatures this winter is the key to minimizing heating bills.

This continual set and reset routine, however, does have a few drawbacks. Waking up to a cold home makes the morning trip to the thermostat an unpleasantly chilly chore. And forgetting to turn down the heat altogether is a sure way to boost your heating bill substantially.

Automatic temperature control from a programmable thermostat or the latest invention — a thermostat controller — is today's answer to overcoming these inconveniences and rising home heating costs, according to the experts at Pittway Corporation, maker of the new First Alert AutoStat.

These automatic devices take the worry out of remembering to reset the thermostat. Since these units are programmable, homeowners can be greeted each morning to a warm house and avoid that cold walk to the thermostat.

The latest development in home temperature regulation is the automatic thermostat controller, like the new AutoStat, which installs easily, requires no wiring and works in tandem with the existing thermostat. They install next to the thermostat, hook on to the temperature setting arm or dial, and automatically raise and lower the setting up to eight times per day. Installing an automatic thermostat, however, may require complicated wiring and result in a costly visit from an electrician.

"Thermostat controllers afford maximum comfort and convenience," noted Robert Birenbach, vice president of marketing for First Alert.

Aluminum windows slash bills

For many people, the first chill of autumn stirs fond memories of brilliantly colored leaves, football games and fresh apple cider. But it may also be a grim reminder of upcoming heating bills.

If you've been hit hard by the high cost of keeping your home warm, consider winterizing with aluminum storm windows. They reduce cold drafts from outside, keep warm air from escaping through cracks and reduce heat transfer through the panes far better than a single layer of glass.

A little known advantage is that the pocket of air trapped between the original windows and storm windows acts as an effective insulator. This invisible layer of insulation works double duty by keeping out the cold and street noise.

The U.S. government is so convinced of the energy-saving value of storm windows that it will give you a 15 percent tax credit up to the first $300 spent on this home improvement.

Aluminum storm windows give you other benefits unrelated to energy efficiency. You never have to paint them because they do not peel, flake, blister, rot or rust. They reduce condensation on prime windows. And, they improve security by providing an extra measure of protection against forced entry.

For more information on durable, cost-effective aluminum storm windows, write to the Aluminum Association, Department FM, 818 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.†

SHAPE-UP BASEMENT CORNER... Make an exercise room. Mirrored walls give the illusion of a larger space plus are the best way to check on the toning progress. A nearby vanity tucks into a niche and conveniently stores towels and athletic gear. With the exercise regimen on cassette tape, and music a must for keeping the pace during the aerobics routine, a Gusdorf VistaRak is the answer for housing audio equipment. Hard floors are treated to carpeting which cushions sit-ups, push-ups and jumping jacks and eliminates the need for a special exercise mat or pad.†

Insulated doors cut usage

You can close the door on energy waste by replacing those exterior wood entry doors that stick or let in drafts.

It's done easily by using insulated steel entry doors designed for do-it-yourself installation. The interiors of the steel doors are filled with insulation to shut out cold and heat and save energy. And, the doors won't warp, split, shrink or swell.

A Stanley entry door is easy to install because it has a unique steel adapter frame that attaches to the existing door opening, making it unnecessary to tear out the existing wood frame. The door and frame are handled as a single unit and can be installed with ordinary hand tools in fewer than three hours. Doors are available in embossed and raised panel designs and come prime painted.

OPERATING WINDOWS CAN CONTRIBUTE to energy conservation by reducing the air conditioning load, says the National Woodwork Manufacturers Association. THE FAMILY ROOM OFFERS COMFORT AND COZINESS on chilly winter evenings. For even more warmth use Italian floor tile for natural solar heating. When the sun hits it, dark colored ceramic tile will conduct solar energy to cement base beneath the floor and when the curtains are drawn against the outside cold night air, the tiles will slowly release the stored heat. Patterned and solid Italian tiles are easy to maintain and will keep their beauty for years.†

Wallcovering achieves 'finished' look

Is your kitchen ready for a face-lift?

According to the National Association of Home Builders, most kitchens are remodelled when they're about 15 years old. By the end of this year, over 3 million of them are expected to get a new lease on life.

With new housing still out of reach for many Americans, remodelling of the most-used room in the house makes financial sense. And more and more dollar-conscious home-owners are expected to undertake do-it-yourself kitchen projects this year — affluent households included. Even the upscale audience of House Beautiful is rolling up its sleeves. According to a recent survey by the magazine, over 50 percent reported they were planning a kitchen remodelling project involving at least some of their own labor.

Kitchens these days are multiple-use rooms — for more than ever, the kitchen is where the action is. According to noted kitchen designer Florence Perchuk, CKD, "The kitchen today functions not only as an area of food preparation, but as a dining room, sitting room, private office, computer area and homework center." Perchuk, the only woman ever to become certified as a kitchen designer in New York City, added, "When I started out as a kitchen designer 18 years ago, avocado was the name of the game. But both colors and decorating, you know, follow fashion. There have been many changes since then — in clothes and design — and today we seem to be turning to a more formal and finished look. Americana is becoming more popular — and that can be Victorian, Colonial or virtually any American period style. Contemporary is also important, often interpreted with a country feeling."

For those who haven't the time, money or inclination for a major remodelling, experts like Perchuk advocate wallcovering as an effective means of changing the look of a kitchen. "And whenever possible, I use fabric-backed vinyl wallcoverings — especially when I'm designing a kitchen in an old building," notes Perchuk. "They provide wonderful camouflage for walls that are old, marked or unsightly."

Whatever look you favor, you can find the basics to bring it off in a varied wall-covering collection like the new Wall-Tex MatchMakers, hefty fabric-backed vinyl coverings that come with coordinating fabrics. For example, a country-contemporary look can be achieved with a trio of patterns in bright primary colors on white, teamed with light golden wood for warmth. The divison of the wall into three "layers" is a Victorian idea that works wonderfully with contemporary patterns. Wallcovered shutters add to the finished look. Result: a kitchen that's a delightful place to be in — whatever the action is.†

Activist Dies

LONDON (AP) — Valeri Marchenko, a 37-year-old Ukrainian human rights activist, has died of kidney failure at a Leningrad prison hospital, Britain's Keston College reports.

Marchenko had served seven months of a 10-year prison sentence for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," the college, which monitors the treatment of dissidents in the Soviet Union, said.

He had served an eight-year term from 1973 to 1981 on a similar charge during which he developed acute kidney inflammation, it said in a statement.

Heat pipe tech produces home heating breakthrough

Today's consumer is faced with a difficult decision when purchasing a furnace for the home. Utility costs demand an efficient furnace, but the typical high-efficiency furnace is too expensive to justify its purchase.

The ideal heating system would feature high efficiency at an affordable price. Borg-Warner offers this with its revolutionary Heat Pipe Furnace.

Using space-age technology, the HeatPipe Furnace achieves a seasonal energy efficiency level of up to 85 percent, significantly higher than that of conventional furnaces. Yet, the HeatPipe Furnace can be purchased and installed for literally hundreds of dollars less than most ultrahigh efficiency furnaces.

This breakthrough in home heating has been made possible due to the introduction of heat pipe technology to the heating industry.

Heat pipe technology

As with many scientific advances, the technology used in the HeatPipe Furnace was developed in the U.S. space program.

The heat pipe is a sealed tube containing a fluid. The flame from the furnace's burner heats this fluid. It vaporizes, rises and carries heat to the other end of the heat pipe. The furnace's blower transfers this heat into the air that warms your home. When the vapor cools, it condenses, returning to the lower end of the heat pipe where it is again vaporized. Thus, heat is transferred by continuously vaporizing and condensing the fluid.

The fluid used in the heat pipe allows a higher heat-transfer rate than possible in ordinary hot-air furnaces, resulting in greater heating efficiency. Plus, this higher heat-transfer rate permits the furnace to be much smaller than conventional furnaces, giving you the additional advantage of compact design.

Instant response for even comfort

Heat pipe technology, with heat transfer by vaporized liquid, provides an almost instantaneous response to a change in thermostat setting. You ask for more heat, you have it within 45 seconds.

Not only is there less lag in furnace response at start-up, there is also less energy wasted when the heating cycle stops because the blower does not run to remove excess heat.

The unique designs of the burner and ignition systems in the HeatPipe Furnace result in maximum combustion of the gas used in heating.

Since the power burner vents flue gases directly outdoors, there is no need for a chimney. The HeatPipe Furnace saves money in installation as well as operation.

The HeatPipe Furnace is ideal for those considering whole house air conditioning... now or in the future.

With it, you already own the major portion of an air conditioning system. The furnace blower and filter can be used for circulating cooled air. All that is required to complete a cooling system is an outside condensing unit and an indoor coil.

Your York dealer, an energy techniques specialist, can custom match York air conditioning to your HeatPipe Furnace for a total comfort system exactly right for your home.†

New patio door installs easily, insulates more

One way to solve the problem of an old, worn-out drafty sliding door is to replace it.

But don't settle for another version that will wind up giving you the same old headaches in a few years. Instead, choose one that is attractive, easy to operate, requires little maintenance, is designed to last and offers the utmost in energy efficiency.

Andersen Corporation has a gliding patio door that is especially designed to replace most six-foot sliding doors without major reframing or residing. For those who are handy with tools, the replacement should be completed in a day. Just follow the simple set of instructions.

The new Perma-Shield gliding patio door is as energy efficient as it is attractive; it's nothing like any patio door you've seen before. Double-pane insulating glass and a preservative-treated wood core and sash and frame sheathed in vinyl are standard.

Wood is used in the frame and sash because wood is a natural insulator. The vinyl sheathing provides an extra measure of thermal protection as well as low maintenance. And factory-applied weatherstripping that is twice as weathertight as industry standards for allowable air infiltration assures a snug fit. The patio door, like no other, will pass a Class A window water test — 50 mile per hour winds and the equivalent of eight inches of rain per hour without leaking indoors.

Double-pane insulating glass saves fuel by trimming heat loss through the glass area. Even better is Andersen's new glazing option in its Perma-Sheild gliding patio door. It is high-performance insulating glass, which performs better in winter and summer than triple glazing. A microscopically-thin coating is bonded to the airspace surface of the inside pane. Since the virtually invisible coating is bonded to the glass, there is nothing to install, operate or clean. The coating is permanent and will not roll up, crack or wrinkle.

Andersen's high-performance insulating glass saves energy by helping to keep heat indoors in winter and heat outdoors in summer. During the colder months, the coating lets most of the sunlight penetrate, producing radiant heat.

Improvement

Upgrading insulation cuts total space energy costs

It's a common fact that home heating and cooling costs have skyrocketed in recent years, and according to most energy experts, much higher costs are a predictable fact. It's also a fact that upgrading of insulation levels can help keep these costs down. To determine the amount of annual energy cost savings that could be realized by increased levels of fiber glass insulation, CertainTeed Home Institute, Valley Forge, Penn., recently conducted a research project using a computer program especially developed for this type of project. It calculates the annual cost to heat and cool a hypothetical home in one of the hottest cities in the summer and coldest in the winter — St. Louis, Missouri.

In theory, a 1,200 sq. ft. home was built in 1960 with no insulation in the walls. The attic was insulated with R-11 fiber glass insulation. (The higher the R-value, the greater the insulation power; ask your seller for the Fact Sheet on R-values.)

Projected costs (using rates obtained from local utility companies) to heat with gas and cool with electricity were combined to determine the home's total space energy cost for selected years from 1960 to 1990.

In 1960, the total space energy costs in the home were calculated to be approximately $233 annually. This figure jumped to $639 in 1980. Today, the annual energy cost to heat and cool the hypothetical home in St. Louis is $891. (By 1990, this figure is expected to reach $1,382.)

If this home is upgraded with additional insulation, such as CertainTeed's Insul-Safe® II, a superior blown-in fiber glass, to provide an R-value of R-14 in the walls and R-30 in the attic, today's annual energy cost could drop down to $658, a $233 decrease per year. As gas and electricity costs continue to rise, the savings in total space energy dollars will grow even more. By 1990's projected figure of $1,382, the savings could be as high as $377 per year.

Recommended levels of insulation have climbed higher through the years as cost savings have become more apparent. Total space energy figures were also determined for an identical 1,200 sq. ft. St. Louis home built today with fiber glass insulation with an R-value of R-19 in the walls and an R-30 in the attic. These are the recommended levels featured in The Energy Saving House at the 1984 World's Fair. This house features CertainTeed fiber glass insulation. The total space energy cost to heat and cool the home drops from $891 to $572, an energy savings of $319 per year. By 1990, the total space energy cost drops from $1,382 to $904, an energy saving of $478 per year.

"Proper insulation can help you reduce your energy bills in both summer and winter," said Joseph Kimpflen, technical director of the CertainTeed Home Institute. "Exact savings will vary," he continued, "depending upon where you live in the country and the thermal condition of your home, but additional insulation provides significant savings for the homeowner."

No-Smoking clock relays message

SEPT'84

THE NO-SMOKING CLOCK lets people know at a glance the rules of the house.†

The No-Smoking clock from New Haven makes it easy to get the message across to your guests that you don't want them to smoke in your house. It's especially a boon for the gourmet cook who doesn't want food contaminated or altered by cigarette smoke.

Smoke sensitive people also will welcome the No-Smoking clock for den or office or anywhere else smoking restrictions are desired.

The 10-inch round clock in white or black case features the well-known international no-smoking symbol in vivid red on the dial. It is equipped with a battery quartz movement for time-keeping accuracy.

How much attic insulation is enough?

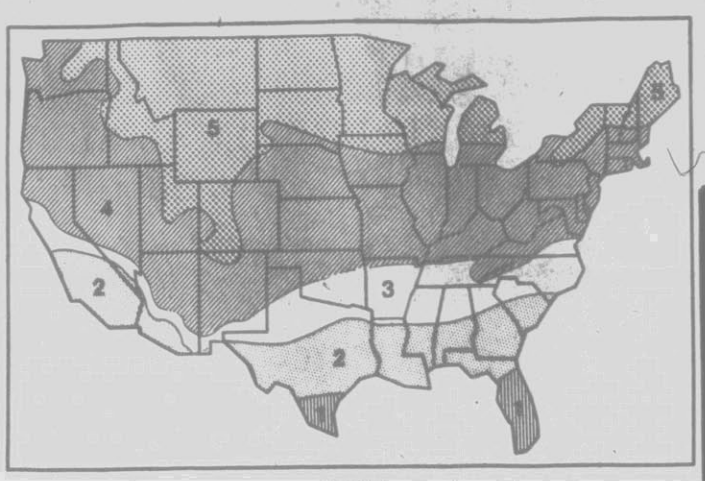
According to most energy experts, even higher energy costs are a predictable fact. It's also an undeniable fact that homeowners who add additional amounts of insulaton to their attic can reduce their energy bills appreciably.

Under-insulated attics result in major heat loss during the winter and heat gain during summer months. Installing thermally efficient insulation, such as CertainTeed's fiber glass insulation, is easy to do and is one of the most cost-effective methods by which a homeowner can combat rising utility bills.

How does a homeowner learn how much attic insulation is enough? The answer is easily determined by the climate of each region of the United States, as well as by fuel costs in each area. In some parts of the country, heating costs determine how much insulation is needed; in others, air-conditioning costs are the major influence. In many situations, both heating and air conditioning costs contribute to the optimum amount of required insulation.

To determine the recommended optimum levels of insulation for your area, locate the zone (on the map) in which you live. Then use the R-value and corresponding insulation thickness to insulate your attic. Higher R-values mean greater insulation power. Remember that savings vary.

Zone 1	R-30 (10" insulation thickness)
Zone 2	R-30 (10" insulation thickness)
Zone 3	R-30 (10" insulation thickness)
Zone 4	R-38 (12" insulation thickness)
Zone 5	R-49 (16" insulation thickness)



SEPT'84

REGIONAL R-VALUE recommendations for attic insulation are indicated in the above map.†

The recommended R-values reflect data from the U.S. Department of Energy, HUD/FHA, and state and utility recommendations.

Though millions of homeowners across the United States have taken the initiative and added insulation to their homes, many more should upgrade their insulation levels. According to George Hoffmann, vice president of marketing, CertainTeed Corporation, "While many homeowners added six inches of insulation in the past, energy experts now agree that increasing energy costs mean that more insulation is needed in many homes built years ago with little or no insulation. Therefore, the need to upgrade insulation remains a top priority for budget-conscious homeowners."

Many homeowners are apparently not aware of the ease by which they can insulate attics themselves and save significantly on energy bills. Hoffmann explains that "the average size attic can easily be insulated by a man or woman in a single afternoon." To insulate an entire home for maximum energy conservation, he advises the homeowners to contact a local insulation contractor.

Homeowners, if their home was substantially completed before April 20, 1977, may also qualify for an energy tax credit by the Federal Government, of 15 percent on the first $2,000 spent for energy conservation materials, such as CertainTeed's fiber glass insulation, and labor costs of the insulation contractor.

The maximum credit is $300. This is not a tax deduction, but an actual credit off the bottom line of your federal income tax.

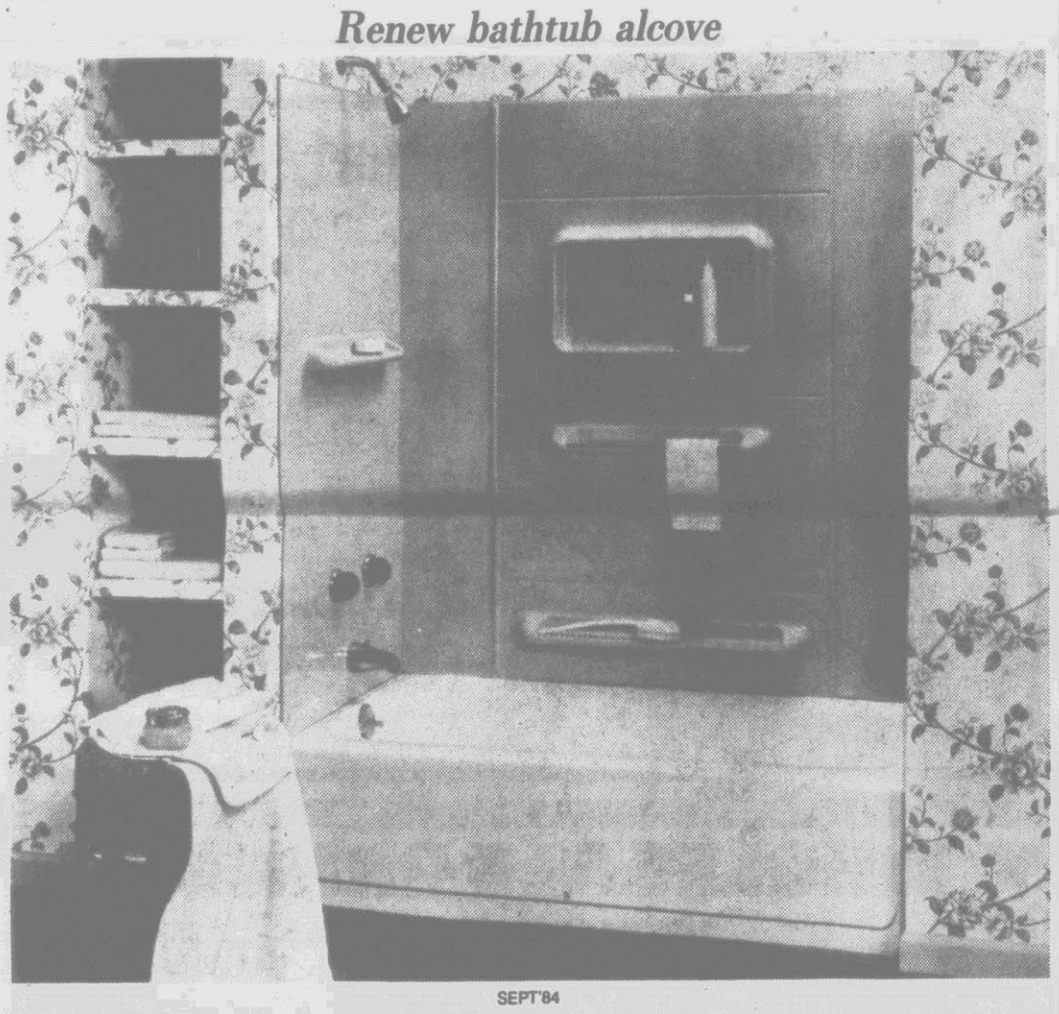
For more hints about home insulation, write for the "Insulation Fact" brochure. It's available free from CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.†

Layered look rises to the top

There's more to a new roof than the cost of the shingles that go on it.

To determine the annual cost of a new roof, divide the cost of labor and materials by the shingle's design life. Multi-layered asphalt shingles may prove more economical than standard shingles in the long run because the cost of material and labor is amortized over a longer period of time. Three-dimensional asphalt shingles are designed to last 25 years or more.

Renew bathtub alcove



SEPT'84

A BUILT-IN TOWEL BAR is one of the features of Milano, a top-of-the-line bathtub wall kit by Plaskolite, Inc. Made of high-impact, high-gloss copolymer plastic, it can be installed easily to renew an out-dated bathtub alcove. It comes in four decorator colors: white, gold, blue and almond and cleans easily with the swipe of a damp cloth. Home centers handle Milano as do building and plumbing supply dealers and retail chains. For more information, write Plaskolite, Inc., 1770 Joyce Avenue. Box 1497, Columbus, Ohio 43216.†

Multi-purpose fastener replaces hooks and clamps

A mini-mechanical hand with a 'living hinge' instead of fingers and a thumb has just been introduced to hold almost as many objects as your hand does. Fixed in place with self-adhesive backing, Super Klip will hold cups, tools, toothbrushes, wires, plants, toys and dozens of other items securely in place, then yield them to you when you pull open the hinge. Unlike ordinary fasteners, Super Klip never gets tired. It has been opened and closed over 200,000 times in tests, and is still working.

At home the clip solves bathroom clutter — hangs wet toothbrushes, separates used washcloths, keeps hair dryers, notions and cosmetics in order and within easy reach.

In the kitchen, it holds cups, utensils and tools at the ready.

In the living room, Super Klip opens and closes to train plant tendrils, guide hi-fi wires, keep lamp cords out of sight.

In autos, it will hold pens on the dashboard, extra keys hidden under the fender, tools that don't rattle, a fresh flower at the passenger seat, clothes and sporting gear hanging from the rear sides. One or two clips will hold disposable trash bags open for car neatness.

At the office, Super Klip keeps the telephone pen from disappearing, holds messages and organizes closets.

Kids use them for hanging shirts, shoes, fishing gear and slippery rain gear that falls off hangers.

'Nairobi Affair' Is A Bungle In The Jungle

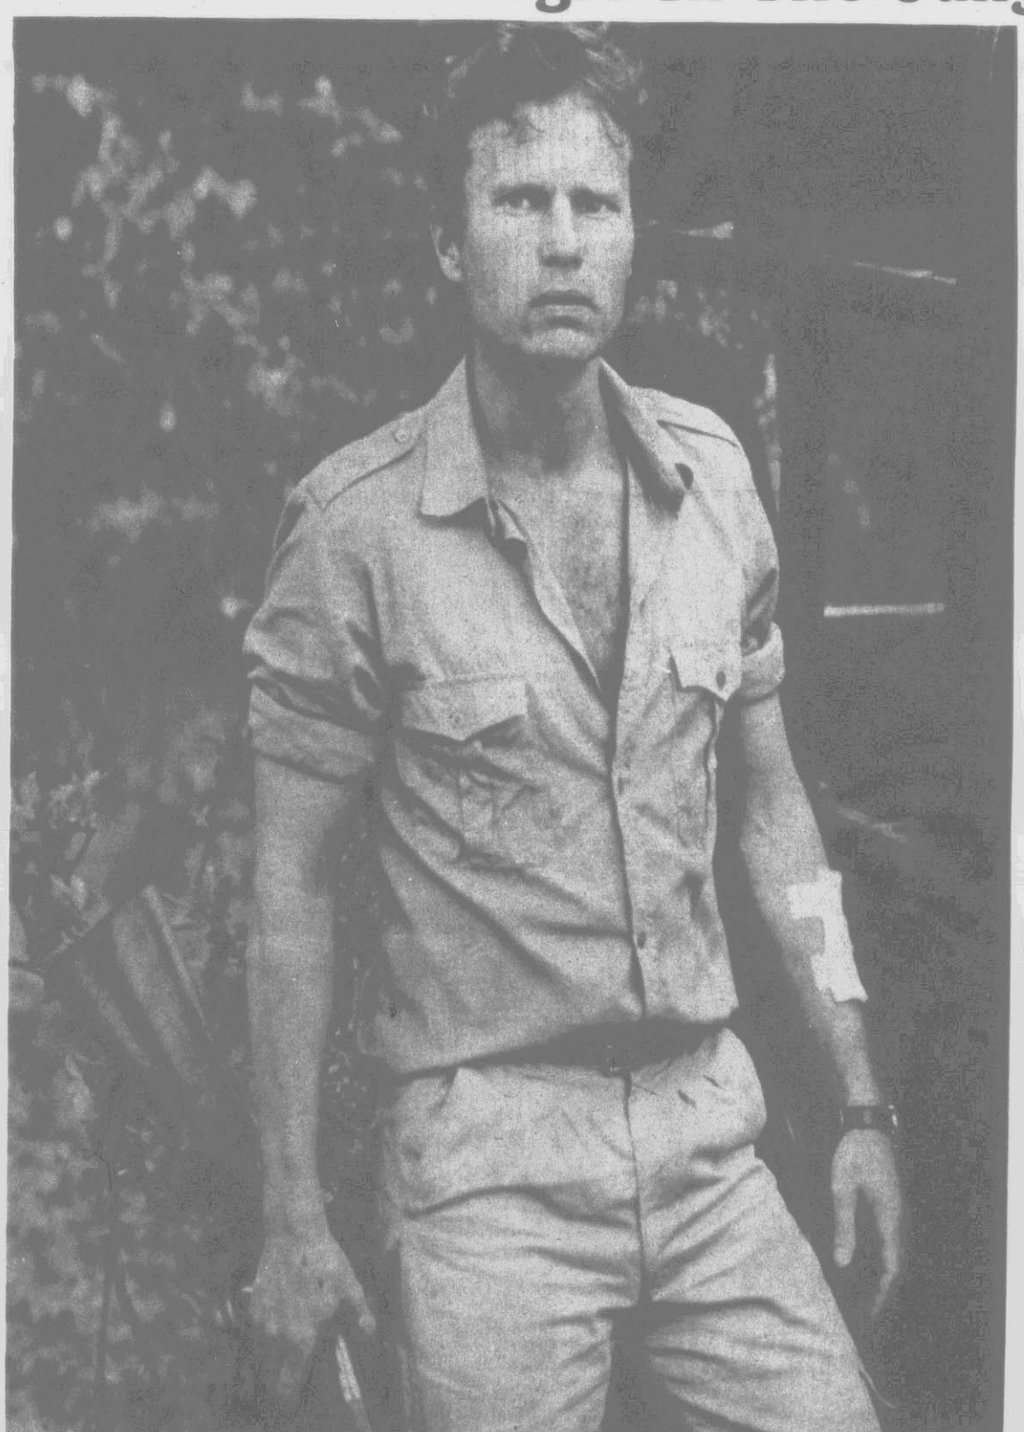
By Robert DiMatteo

Shots of rhinos, elephants, lions and giraffes in the wild — that's the lure of "Nairobi Affair" (CBS, Oct. 17), a new made-for-TV movie. This adventure drama plus romantic triangle was filmed entirely on location in Kenya, and the natural setting and its glorious animals are captured by cinematographer Ronnie Taylor. If only the human animals were as fascinating!

The drama, by David Epstein, is like warmed-over Hemingway, especially in the character of the man's man (Charlton Heston). A former hunter who has taken over a photographic safari camp, Heston long ago left a wife and son behind in his pursuit of the rugged, solitary life. The son (John Savage) turns up when he's employed by the government of Kenya to hunt down poachers. His estrangement from his father has an element of sexual competitiveness: Dad is now in love with his former wife (Maud Adams, of the beautiful cheekbones).

Good actors could make this sort of thing work, if given dialogue to speak that didn't sometimes sound as if it was written for the rhinos. Heston and Savage do what they can anyway, which means that Heston is solidly skillful, if a little stiff and colorless (that's his perennial problem). Savage is quietly intense, if a little unfocused in his moodiness (that's his problem). Miss Adams has almost no role to play, so she gives a beautiful-cheekbones performance. In the key supporting role, John Rhys-Davies is so furtive and sweaty that we know he's up to no good long before our somewhat dimwitted protagonists catch on.

"Sentimental Journey" (CBS, Oct. 16) features one of those obnoxiously cute kids that can make you long for the company of rhinos. Played by a 9-year-old newcomer named Jessica Rene Carroll, the character is a free-spirited little orphan girl (called Libby, not Annie) who wins the heart of a Broadway actor (David Dukes) but meets with some resistance from the actor's producer-wife (Jaclyn Smith). Set in the urban-fairy-tale Manhattan of Sardi's opening-night parties, normal-sized apartments and horseback riding in Central Park.



John Savage portrays a hunter who must deal with the savagery of animal poachers who threaten African wildlife in "Nairobi Affair," airing Wednesday, Oct. 17 on CBS.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: To whom is Charlene Tilton of "Dallas" married? Is it Johnny Lee or Mickey Gilley? Are they one and the same or two different people? — GERRI HUBBARD

To Gerri: Amidst a furor of rumors, and widespread reports of wife beatings, separations, counseling and reconciliations, Charlene Tilton is now officially divorced from country singer Johnny Lee. They will share joint custody of their 2-year-old daughter, Cherish, although she will reside with Charlene. Mickey Gilley, a friend of Johnny's, is a different person. He owns the world-famous country & Western bar, Gilley's, immortalized in "Urban Cowboy."

DEAR MICHELE: I recently saw the movie "Men of the Dragon," starring Jared Martin, on television. He has the star qualities of another, older actor — the same voice, gestures and walk of Charlton Heston. Could they be related? What else has Martin done? — E.L. SILVEY

To E.L.: It's no use trying to figure out a relationship here — there is none. About the only common factor between these two is Martin's name, Jared, taken from the Bible; Heston, of course, will always be remembered as Moses. Following a move to Los Angeles, Martin guest starred on "Columbo," "Switch" and "The Bold Ones." "I've really been boxed-in by playing bad guy roles," he says. "When I'm not playing a heavy, I'm playing a junkie." If you're a "Dallas" fan, you may remember Martin as Sue Ellen's ill-fated cowboy-lover Dusty Farlow, son of Clayton. A more recent outing featured him in Pia Zadora's forgettable feature "The Lonely Lady," based on the Harold Robbins best-seller. For this, he took off more than his cowboy boots.

DEAR MICHELE: Please explain something to me. I've noticed on "Simon and Simon" that they often show the boys' mother, but never their father. What's the reason? — ELLEN FISHER

To Ellen: Mother Simon is a widow.

Rivers Rolling With New 'Heidi' Biography

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Joan Rivers gets a big kick out of the fact that she was once promoted as the "highest paid monologuist in America."

"If they had paid me a third as much, I'd still have been the highest paid," she says. "I was the only one."

Love her or hate her, Joan Rivers is still one of a kind. And her paycheck, along with her stature as an entertainer, has risen considerably since the days when her act defied meaningful definition.

Her success as a stand-up comedian has skyrocketed in direct proportion to her exposure as Johnny Carson's stand-in for two months each season on "The Tonight Show," making nonsense of the ancient "beware of TV" admonition to comics.

This week, she flouts another jokesters' golden rule — "don't put your gags in print" — with publication of "The Life and Hard Times of Heidi Abromowitz," a string of one-liners calculated to make a longshoreman blush. Delacorte Press has ordered a 250,000 first-print run for the "totally unauthorized biography" of Miss Abromowitz, and is confident it will be a Christmas best-seller.

Also out this month is an update of Miss Rivers's 1973 success, "Having a Baby Can Be a Scream," a semi-serious fact book on childbirth.

TV Chatter

"Countdown to Looking Glass," an original HBO drama airing Sunday, Oct. 14, finds America on the threshold of World War III. Created by Dr. Lincoln Bloomfield, an MIT professor and former member of the State Department and National Security Council, the drama is reminiscent of H.G. Wells's "War of the Worlds" broadcast in the '30s. In this modern-day version, the action is seen and reported by a TV news team.

Six leading political and military experts appear as themselves, offering comments and opinions on the events taking place during the nine tension-filled days preceding a possible nuclear attack.

Scott Glenn, Michael Murphy, Helen Shaver and newscasters Eric Sevareid and Nancy Dickerson star. Don't miss this HBO drama for a look at the thin line we tread between peace and holocaust.

Looking back to another time and another war, PBS airs "Nisei Soldier: Standard Bearer for an Exiled People" on Wednesday, Oct. 17. The show reminds us of the contribution made by Japanese-Americans who volunteered to serve in combat battalions during World War II. These men, serving in segregated units, were among the most decorated in the war. They earned eight Presidential Unit Citations, a Congressional Medal of Honor, 52 Distinguished Service Crosses, over 2,000 Purple Hearts and 18,000 individual decorations — more than one each for every man who fought for the 442nd Japanese-American Combat Team.

Lee Majors managed to surprise guest star John Carradine with a trick and a treat during the filming of the Halloween segment of "The Fall Guy" titled "October the 31st." Carradine, a 60-year veteran of stage and screen, thought he had seen it all until — as the owner of an eerie Gothic-style mansion — he was about to dismiss his gardener, cook and caretaker when he suddenly realized the three actors before him were his own sons, Robert, Keith and David.

Mel Stewart's teenage profession gave fellow cast and crew members of "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" a touch of home while filming in West Germany this summer. Stewart, who stars as Billy Melrose, worked as a full-time professional musician as a youngster.

Winkler's Home Video Battles Child Abuse

By Tim Boxer

Henry Winkler is such a concerned father that he developed, produced and hosted a home videocassette, "Strong Kids, Safe Kids." John Ritter of "Three's a Crowd" and Mariette Hartley joined Winkler in the production, which is designed to show parents and kids how to prevent sexual child abuse and abduction.

"Child abuse has been going on for years — it's a silent crime," Winkler says. "I just want to protect my own children. That's why I did this program. I was on a radio show when a grandmother called to tell us that when she was 15, her doctor grabbed her and tried to fondle her. She told her mother but her mother didn't believe her."

Winkler has three children and is teaching them not to talk to strangers or be lured by favors. By watching this home video program, children will be able to see that they have a right to say no. "They will see," Winkler says, "all the tricks men use to lure them and they will be able to see through such advances and avoid them when they occur."

HONDA

FOUR FOR FUN
The TRX125 four-wheeler is built to take you almost anywhere for a good time. And with an ease of operation that makes it ideal for both beginners and experienced riders. Its 124cc four-stroke engine is coupled to a five-speed transmission that features a super-low 1st gear and reverse. In addition, the TRX's electric starter, automatic clutch and standard trailer hitch make it perfect for both recreation and light work.

'Backstretch' Begins Its Second Season

By Jay Carman

It's a sad comment to make but, after more than three decades of broadcasting, everybody is still surprised when CBC comes up with a hit drama series.

Happily, "Backstretch," which has its second-season premiere tonight at 8 (8:30 in Newfoundland), is one of the prime exceptions to the long-standing, albeit regrettable, rule.

Positive response was the order of the day when "Backstretch" debuted last winter as a four-part miniseries. Maclean's magazine called it "a bracing breath of frosty air in comparison to television's current preoccupation with money and glamour" and the Toronto Star stated that "For once, there are people here you can root for."

Viewers who agreed with both statements, or just enjoyed the down-to-earth story, will be glad to know that the original cast of characters will be back, this time for an eight-week stint.

Heading them up will be plucky Marge Ayleworth (Florence Paterson), the widowed owner of the rural Ontario harness racing track.

Can Diamonds Be Girls' Best Friends?

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

Like all great movements, it has started quietly. The Sun Sox, a baseball team made up entirely of women, has applied for admission to the Class A Florida State League. They hope to play the 1985 season in Daytona Beach, with no major league affiliation. They have filled a fall of cold nights and a winter of icy days with the warmth of hope. For if you think Kirk Gibson and Dale Murphy are cute, wait till you get an eyeful of the Sun Sox in action.

They were fathered by Bob Hope. Not the "I want to tell you it's great to be here" Bob Hope. He had other roads to travel. This Hope is a former vice president of the Atlanta Braves and, one would surmise, a man of vision. He sees the day when it will be common to have women fielding teams in Class A, Double A, Triple A and the majors.

But first things first. The Sun Sox must convince the Florida State League that they are willing and able to compete with other teams made up of men who may not be as open-minded as the pioneering Mr. Hope. Daytona Beach may not be ready for an all-women baseball team. The Florida State League is certainly not ready. Nor, for that matter, is any other league. The only people it seems, who are ready are the Sun Sox themselves, Bob Hope and Hank Aaron.

Aaron was among a group who recently watched the ladies practice in Atlanta. He came away impressed. "It's amazing," the all-time major league home run leader said, "A few of them can handle themselves. They're going to have to give them a chance to play."

The women proved they could throw — granted not with the rifle accuracy of a Darrell Evans, but surely well enough to get the ball from the outfield to home plate on less than six bounces. They ran the bases in a manner reminiscent of Wills — Bump not Maury. They fielded with a near-flawless effort and they hit the ball well enough to impress Aaron, something few major leaguers can boast about.

But can they do all these things over the course of a full season? The Sun Sox could signal the beginning of something exciting or they could turn into a total disaster. But for now, there is a professional women's baseball team who have made a fan of Henry Aaron. All that's left is to wait for springtime.

Then when a minor league umpire shouts "Play ball!" he may not be talking to men alone. There will be some women in the stands cheering — but there may be nine women on the field, running, hitting, throwing and catching baseballs. It's enough to make a man cry.

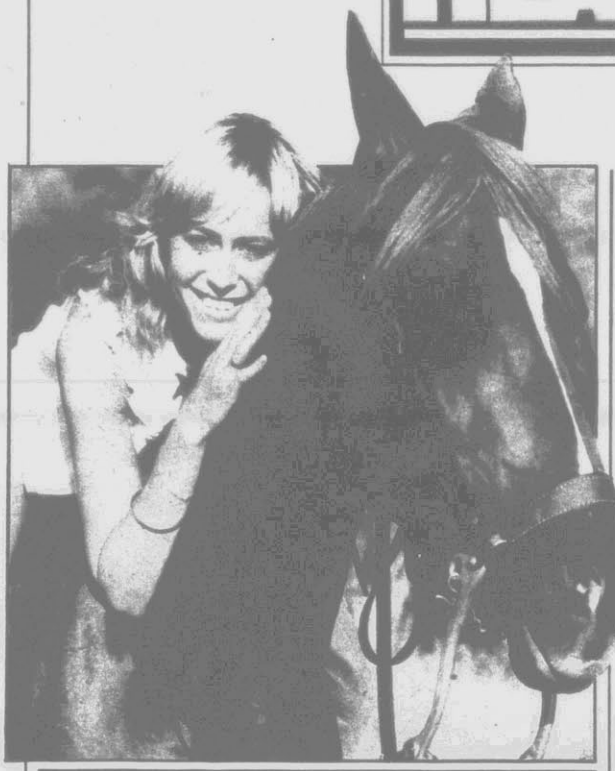
HEADLINERS



GEORGE: RIDING THE TIDES OF FORTUNE.

Susan George, who stars with Laurence Olivier and Michael Caine in the movie Jigsaw Man, has had a rather puzzling life: "My career has always been two steps up, three down; four up, one down," she explains. "I've never been on an uninterrupted climb. And I'm glad." Susan's first role came at age 12 when she was cast as one of the Von Trapp children in The Sound of Music, and she has since appeared in such films as The Sorcerers and Straw Dogs. "The bad moments and wonderful ones I've experienced on the way up and down have been breaths of fresh air. They've let me be a normal human being." George says she likes living her life day to day. "I'm not a mañana person: I don't care what I'll look like when I'm 70. So I lie out in the sun, which, everyone knows, is an express route to premature wrinkles. But if I'm run over by a bus this afternoon, I want to get hit looking brown and healthy, not frail and anemic."

Now that Bianca Jagger has decided to become "a serious actress," she will have to learn to handle the jagged digs of critics and audiences. The Nicaraguan beauty, 39, recently made her theatrical debut at the Williamstown, Mass., Theatre Festival in Daniela Frank, by the Peruvian Alonso Alegria. The play is loosely based — very loosely — on the Janet Cooke saga. Cooke, you'll recall, was the reporter at The Washington Post who won — and lost — a Pulitzer Prize for her graphic, but fictional, account of an 8-year-old heroin addict. Well, in the translation, Janet Cooke has become an illegal Peruvian immigrant in search of a green card, with a brother lost to drugs in the old country. At least one member of the audience didn't get no satisfaction. His capsule review on the way to the parking lot: "We could have had a better time if we stayed home and talked."

Clint Eastwood, who took a chance and won on his un-Clint-like hit Tightrope, admits that it's a far cry from his Dirty Harry films. "I'm not tired of Harry, but there's only so much you can do with a character," he explains. "I like to feel I've diversified over the years; I've branched out and done other kinds of things. I suppose I could play somebody meaner than Dirty Harry if the character was there, if I read a good script. An actor portrays things because they're fun to do." And fun, of course, is the thing to have — any which way you can.

EASTWOOD: COPPING A NEW ROLE.

Ginger Rogers and Cyd Charisse, who between them have probably worn out more pairs of dancing shoes than all the Rockettes combined, were working together for the first time on ABC's new series Glitter when they were delightedly surprised — wouldn't you be? — with a dozen red roses each. And from the same admirer. The accompanying cards said simply, "Love, Fred," and if you have to ask, "Fred who?" you'd better catch Silk Stockings the next time it's on the late, late show.

Stephen King has the Midas touch: He can turn horror into gold. The best-seller lists and the movie listings usually sport at least one of his works, but does he think his prose will survive the ages? Says King, with all due modesty, "I rather suspect it might. Horror and science-fiction stories have a way of surviving for a long time, whether they're good, bad or indifferent." The dean of bedevilment, however, has no idea why some of us scare more easily than others: "Actually, I think we all scare easily. But some are better at keeping it a secret. People who are fearless are dangerous. I certainly wouldn't want to drive with someone like that. People who don't know fear don't live long."

It's hard to believe that any daughter of Raquel Welch would have trouble facing a camera, but Tahnee Welch, 21, says, "I used to hate having my picture taken. I always put my hand up to my face and pushed the hair over my eyes. In fact," she explains, "I have all the pictures that I had taken when I was young. If anyone saw me hoard all those photos, they'd think I was vain. Actually, I stashed them away for just the opposite reason." With an acting career in the offing — Tahnee will make her film debut next summer in Cocoon, Ron Howard's current directing project — Raquel's daughter is certain of only one thing: "I won't be singing. I sound like an English schoolboy in a choir. If all else fails, maybe I'll be a Buddhist monk." It's a safe bet Tahnee's mom will have none of that.

CONGRESSIONAL SPOUSES SPEAK OUT IN AN EXCLUSIVE FAMILY WEEKLY SURVEY

MARRIAGE TO A POLITICIAN: IS IT WORTH IT?

BY JAN BENZEL

"My life and those of my close friends is not at all like what has been portrayed in the media," declares Marie Smith, the wife of Rep. Christopher Smith (R-N.J.). "Our lives are very much like those of women across the country who are busy caring for husbands, homes and children. In essence, we are House wives with a capital H."

Mrs. Smith was responding to a Family Weekly questionnaire sent to the spouses of the 421 married members of Congress. In this election year, with the bright lights and packs of reporters following every move each politician makes, we decided to ask the people behind those politicians what their lives were like and whether, from their point of view, the glory, grit, rewards and stress of public service were worth it.

The composite answer was a clear but qualified yes, and the reasons behind the individual answers varied as greatly as the people themselves. The spouses — mostly women (although at least 5 husbands of the 21 women in Congress also responded) — are an extremely diverse group. They range in age from people in their late 20s (at 29, Smith is the wife of the youngest married member of Congress) to their early 70s. They come from big cities, small towns, and rural communities across America. Most have left home to live in or near Washington, D.C., at least for the more than 10 months a year when Congress is in session. Some maintain two households: one in Washington, one in their district. Some have young children; some have grandchildren; some are childless. Many have careers of their own, although as one woman said, "'Spousism' is indeed a job in itself. The many who maintain other careers besides are incredible."

In a summer packed with campaigning and conventions, 22 percent of the spouses found time to respond to our questions about their own goals, their marriages, their children, and life in the political arena. One sentiment echoed frequently and fervently: "Please don't try to sensationalize the family/spouse role." We don't think we have. The voices here are the spouses' own.

We gave the respondents a chance to elaborate on their answers and the choice to remain anonymous. More than half the spouses did sign their questionnaires. Among those who gave their names were Betty Wright, wife of the House Majority Leader; Betty Bumpers, wife of the Arkansas senator; Lillian Tower, wife of the Texas senator; Elizabeth (Mrs. Daniel Patrick) Moynihan of New York; and Rita Hollings, wife of the South Carolina senator. Signed or unsigned, all the responses were candid, thoughtful and thorough.

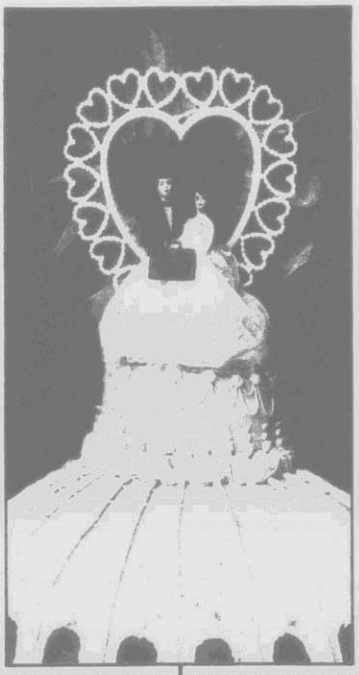
One woman who chose not to sign had this reaction: "No, thank you! I'm too smart to let you use my name. I'm a survivor!"

So, it appears, are most of the congressional spouses. The group portrait that emerged from their answers is one of strong, self-assured people, sharing in their spouses' careers. Of those who responded, 69 percent said their spouses' political careers have enhanced their marriages, even though the extreme demands of time and energy leave 10 percent of them often and 57 percent sometimes feeling lonely. We asked whether the congressmen or their spouses drank more alcohol because of the rounds of obligatory social functions, because of job pressure, or for any other reasons. The overwhelming response was no. Many said they and/or their spouses do not drink at all; some said they drank less than they would normally because "you can never let your guard down. And there is a lot of driving to some events." Almost all said the rumors of drugs being freely used on the Hill are untrue, and that the danger of political corruption is overestimated by the press. We asked them whether they thought politicians were more likely than other people to be adulterous, and to that question about the private lives of public figures came the widest variety of answers. If any agreement emerged, it was the opinion that members of Congress were no more likely to be adulterous than the people they represented.



Most agreed that a political career is all-consuming. As one spouse said, her life is "lonely, demanding and public." The women who feel the biggest burden are those with small children. The representatives and senators have to spend a great deal of time away from home: in their district if they live in Washington and in Washington if they live in the district. Congressional wives with children find themselves — much as a wife of a doctor does during his internship and residency — coping as single parents. Marie Smith addresses the problem: "Perhaps the greatest concern is how to creatively utilize time for family togetherness. Since this is the highest priority for my husband and me, our three children, ages 5, 3, and 5 months, are familiar sights around his Washington office. They picnic on the Capitol lawn and ride the Capitol subway. I and some of the other wives (mostly young) represent one type of congressional spouse. Our family responsibilities limit our social involvement in Washington."

Most of the younger wives expressed concern that their husbands were absent much of the time, or if they were living in the same place, that they left for work before the children were awake and came home after they were in bed, or were so tired or preoccupied that they were unable to devote time or attention to them.

The general response from those whose children had grown, however, was that such close exposure to the political system was a positive factor in a child's upbringing. (More than 75 percent of the spouses agreed on this point.)

As for the marriages themselves, the great majority of the respondents said having a spouse in politics has helped their relationship. A number of reasons came out, but the most prevalent was that with the pressures of raising young children behind them, the spouses could participate more fully in their mates' careers than they could in any other profession. Some of the comments:

- "We do it together. It's the only way to survive it."
- "We work as a team campaigning. Life is more interesting because we have new experiences to share," said Martha Sundquist, the wife of the Republican congressman from Tennessee.
- "[Our marriage is] enhanced by mutual attempts to improve the quality of the rare time we spend together, and hurt by tensions that build up over long periods we spend apart." This woman, who preferred anonymity, said that she does tend to drink more than she normally would, because of her loneliness.
- Carolyn Moore, wife of the Republican representative of Louisiana, said, "We both enjoy politics — we share more and work at having quality time together."
- Rita Hollings, the wife of Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-S.C.), said, "I'm able to share in politics. I could not if he were in the courtroom or a doctor."
- Phyllis Olin said, "After Jim's [D-Va.] retirement from business, his political career was an important and exciting new venture for both of us." But, she added, "I'm not sure I want my daughter to marry one." Politician, that is.

Many of the spouses were enticed by the opportunities to travel and to meet heads of state and other "interesting" people. Many also said their spouses' happiness to be doing what they wanted helped strengthen their marriages.

Barbara Ann Grassley said of her husband, Charles, the Republican senator from Iowa, "If he hadn't at least tried he would have been unhappy." Another respondent offered: "He's happy in his work. A fulfilled person is a good marriage partner."

Lillian Tower, wife of Sen. John Tower (R-Tex.), was the most voluble. In answers to questions about whether she had given up or postponed her own goals while her husband pursued his career, whether she ever felt lonely, and whether she would prefer it if her husband were in another line of work, she wrote neatly, in red felt-tipped pen: "My goal is to be wife, spouse, mate. That takes precedence over all else. My professional life is of secondary importance. I miss him always when we are apart, but believe so deeply in his work, his goals, and share the same values that I feel more privileged to share his life rather than lonely. A man is what he does. And the more creative he is, the more passionately he applies himself to his life's work, the more he is to be treasured."

A political spouse, by definition, supports and sustains his or her mate, both on the campaign trail and after an election has been won. About 21 percent of the spouses reported that they had given up or postponed professional goals of their own in order to accommodate their spouses' careers. Many of those have since launched careers of their own in fields from medicine to real estate to social work. The job of political spouse sometimes makes demands on personality as well as profession. Thirty-two percent of the respondents said that they occasionally had to suppress aspects of themselves to conform to what are considered appropriate standards of behavior for the spouse of someone in public office.

And many expressed a pronounced longing for more privacy.

- "There is a lack of time for communicating," said Carol Williams, wife of Rep. Pat Williams (D-Mont.).
- Another wife noted, "My husband is deprived of any private life and consequently seems unable to relate to things other than the political arena."
- One anonymous woman painted this dark picture: "I think the public should know what the political family has to put up with. Then perhaps they wouldn't criticize politicians so much. I particularly resent the time my husband spends with his staff outside of working hours. His staff controls his life completely, including his personal life.

"Immediately after the election," this respondent continued, "after the wife has campaigned with and for her husband, going door to door, typing, stuffing envelopes, she is pushed into the background. The staff and the constituents come first. I get very tired of female staff constantly being praised. I can do the same work at no pay and not even get a smile or thank you, but let a female staff worker do the same (at a ridiculously high salary) and she is treated like a queen. The job builds up a man's ego. Women fawn over them like fools, and they think they don't need a wife anymore."

- Another spouse agreed. In response to the question, "Do you find that politicians are likely to be unfaithful to their spouses?" her reply was: "Who knows? They say many are; there are lots of clever, ambitious and pretty women on the Hill." And another: "They [congressmen] are definitely more pursued by predatory, power-hungry females. Powerful people are pursued."

When it comes to using that power, however, an overwhelming majority — 95 percent — said it is in good hands, that the American political process does work. James Schroeder, the husband of Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.), paraphrased Winston Churchill on the subject: "Democracy is the worst political system — except any other."

Said Carolyn Moore: "If one is not responsive to the people and doesn't work hard to stay in touch, they'll be defeated. I've seen it too many times."

Kaye Smith, wife of Oregon Republican Rep. Bob Smith, voiced this concern: "The representatives shouldn't have to run every two years — there's too much continual campaigning. The congressmen should be limited to a certain number of terms. The incumbent representative should have to give up his seat to run for the Senate. There are too many members with 30-plus years seniority and too much power."

By contrast, Theodore Johnson, husband of Republican Rep. Nancy Johnson of Connecticut, defended the slowness of the system of checks and balances; he was one of the few respondents to do so. His comment: "The changes are gradual and can be evaluated before they do too much damage."

And Nancy Fuqua, wife of the Democratic representative from Florida, who says that she has come to appreciate democracy after traveling abroad, quipped: "I was once told that there were two things one should never see in the making: sausage and laws."

Two complaints most often made about the system concerned dependence on the media and the enormous expenses incurred by campaigning, commuting or maintaining two residences.

On the media: "Too many people are turned off and don't vote. That is a terrible threat to democracy and, I think, a national shame. The media in general do not portray most [politicians] with any respect, whether or not deserved, so people feel a high disregard, mostly from hear-say or -see."

On the money required: "Something must be done. Good, capable, outstanding candidates will not be able to run, simply because of the cost. It's the television time, buying ads, that takes thousands and thousands of dollars."

Another spouse added, "I wish campaigns lasted two weeks and that there were no PACs [political action committees] and no need to accept PAC contributions."

Perhaps the rigors of campaigning and the pressures imposed by the media and lobbying groups have worn down the spirits of the politicians and their families a bit. Only a third of the spouses said they would want their mate to be president or vice president of the United States. (An interesting footnote: Every husband of a woman in Congress who returned and signed the questionnaire said yes, he would like his wife to be president.) But one woman, who remained anonymous, may have spoken for all the congressional wives when she said: "So many Americans think that we wives, as a whole, are either spoiled prima donnas or are inferior-feeling, overlooked weaklings. We are not! We are normal, well-educated citizens who take quite seriously the trust and faith that has been put in our husbands. We can run a house or houses, raise a family, and adjust rather easily to last-minute changes. We can speak to groups when, at the last minute, Congress keeps the member in session.

"I believe very strongly in what my husband's work involves. He lives for every minute of working for the people of our district — and for America. He's married to his work — but I am his 'mistress' and love the life we have. I go to bed knowing that there will be a tomorrow." FW

Source: Highway Loss Data Institute. Body Styles: S.W.=Station Wagon; Spec.=Specialty. All results are stated in relative frequency of injury claims. A relative injury claim frequency of 100 is average. Relative frequencies of less than 70 are defined by HLDI as "Substantially Better than Average."

The Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI) is a non-profit public service organization associated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. As it has done for several years, HLDI has summarized and published its findings on the frequency of automotive insurance claims.

This year, HLDI finds that of the top 12 models with overall injury claim experience defined as "Substantially Better than Average," seven are General Motors cars.

We are pleased that GM cars are rated best.

But we are not surprised. In fact, GM cars have dominated these lists ever since HLDI has been summarizing them. Seven years in a row.

We believe this continued excellence reflects not only our cars—their quality, size, weight, and design—but also how and where they are driven.

The results show that our cars and our customers go well together. We trust it will continue that way. We're doing our part to see that it does.

We believe in taking the extra time, giving the extra effort, and paying attention to every detail. That's what it takes to provide the quality that leads more people to buy GM cars and trucks than any other kind. And that's why GM owners are the most loyal on the road. That's the GM commitment to excellence.

HELP YOURSELF: SELF-HELP BOOKS WON'T DO IT FOR YOU

When Jaggers, that mysterious London lawyer, tells Dickens' lad Pip that he is "a young man of great expectations," he is not lying. Pip has suddenly come into a fortune, all because he once smuggled food and drink to an escaped convict hiding in a nearby swamp.

Lucky Pip! He didn't have to make his fortune by studying self-help books or attending classes in assertiveness training.

Today we can strive to be realists. "Nobody is ever going to die and leave me a million dollars," we say. But the notion of great expectations remains firmly embedded in our culture. Indeed, it has given birth to a compulsive self-improvement industry.

In an age of diminishing expectations, dreams are all that stand between our young people and total despair. With less education than a technological society requires, it's inevitable that our upward strivers be drawn to books that promise a rich, full life — provided only that a few "simple, basic rules" be rigorously observed. Of course, you must buy the book to learn the rules.

"Fill your life with confidence and success!" exhorts the cover of The Art of Selfishness by David Seabury. Though the author has never met you, one of his chapters is confidently titled, "The Key to Your Problems." Just pay attention and the golden doors will definitely swing open.

A quick browse through a dozen self-help books (best-sellers all) suggests that the trouble with American society is simply too much altruism. Some of us may not have noticed this surfeit of goodwill and kindness, but Robert J. Ringer has. Devote yourself to doing things that will give you pleasure, he advises. Above all, "forget the moral standards others may have tried to cram down your throat." Needless to say, Ringer's book, Looking Out for No. 1, has, sold steadily since 1977.

If you long to be a leader but lack a high school diploma, don't give up the dream, writes Denis Waitley in The Seeds of Greatness. In his view, "leadership is the only true profession for which no formal training is necessary."

But you can give yourself a leg up by learning 10 new words a day. With 70 new words a week you will become "among the most learned and well-spoken individuals in the world."

Another suggestion from Waitley: Buy a set of tapes and record messages to yourself for the days when those new words aren't getting you anywhere. Listen carefully as your own voice says, "I respect and appreciate myself. I am unique and special." (Insufferable, too, a candid friend might add.)

Now, I don't mean to disparage all self-help books. Sometimes it comforts me to know that there are hundreds of strangers out there writing books to make me richer, thinner, lovelier and, of course, happier.

No doubt I should also be interested in learning how I can earn Big Money at home raising fireflies, decorating T-shirts, or selling real estate in Florida by telephone in New York. What self-help shelves are missing is an old-fashioned book full of the sensible advice that gave our grandparents confidence and hope. Advice on the order of, "Study and prepare yourself, and someday your chance will come."

The self-improvement industry raises expectations by playing on fear, loneliness, shame and discontent. Under the Puritan ethic, self-improvement meant the cultivation of one's talents through hard work. Grabbing, shoving and pushing were looked on as bad form. And success carried with it an obligation to help those less favored.

Records on the success of self-help groups are hard to come by. A psychiatrist of my acquaintance says that the only self-help group that really works is Alcoholics Anonymous. Significantly, AA charges no fees, broadcasts no testimonials from satisfied members, and never merchandises its success. To achieve the promised result — permanent sobriety — you simply live life one day at a time without drink. And you assist your fellow alcoholics over the rocky patches.

To wish to be better — i.e., richer, happier — than we are is a normal, healthy impulse. To that end we buy lottery tickets, have face-lifts, sign up for tango lessons, and keep the self-help books on the best-seller list. But somewhere there ought to be a book that tells you: "You're a nice person doing your very best. Take a long, cool look at life . . . and try to enjoy!" HW

Building, remodeling or replacing...

Window quality can make or break it.

Quality building products insure a successful project. Poor-quality products can turn a dream plan into a nightmare.

Choosing quality windows is easy.

Easy to install Andersen® windows, roof windows and gliding patio doors bring the best to any job: Beauty—through their famous slim lines. Energy efficiency—with double-pane insulating glass. Maintenance freedom—with Perma-Shield® vinyl, a thick, extremely hard exterior covering that won't need painting.*

If you're building, remodeling or replacing don't leave anything to chance. Insist on Andersen quality. See an Andersen dealer—in the Yellow Pages under Windows.

Come home to quality. Come home to Andersen.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

BILL MURRAY

EDGING TOWARD A NEW SERIOUSNESS

Attention all old Saturday Night Live fans: Bill Murray is not just a funny guy. Sure, he was in Meatballs, Stripes, Caddyshack and this summer's immensely popular Ghostbusters. Sure, he has a face that launched a thousand laughs. But Bill Murray wanted to sit at the grownups' table . . . he wanted to make a serious movie.

The Razor's Edge, opening this week, is that movie, a labor of love that Murray and director John Byrum adapted from a novel by W. Somerset Maugham about one man's quest for the meaning of life. Perhaps not so coincidentally, the movie comes at a time when Murray himself seems to have gotten serious about his life. A few years ago he married his longtime girl friend, Mickey, and they now have a 2-year-old son they call Homer. Writer Sara Nelson recently talked to Murray, 34, about the ways in which his life has changed.

Nelson: Why did you want to make The Razor's Edge?

Murray: John [Byrum] got interested in this book, and it was clear right away that this was something that I could do, that I wanted to do: an acting job. I didn't want to do a comedy. And this story is such an amazing tale that I figured, well, even if you mess up you've still got a good story.

Q: Why?

Murray: To an extent, I identified with the spiritual side. All the people who were galvanized to action in their college years now don't have any interest in all that stuff. People who wanted to change the system are now trying to beat the system.

Q: Were you like that?

Murray: The more I know about myself, the more I know I'm two people or more. I mean, I feel funny making this movie because I know I'm basically just an idiot who wants to drive down highways throwing beer bottles out of cars.

Q: Most people would probably call you a comedian. Do you consider yourself a comic actor or an actor-actor?

Murray: You've got to be able to act to be a comic actor, it's just that some people say it's harder. People are always on the edge of tears, so it's not as hard to make 'em cry as it is to make 'em laugh.

Q: Ghostbusters has really made

LIFE INSURANCE— IS A GOOD PRICE ALWAYS A GOOD DEAL?

The answer to the question is NO. But sometimes it's hard to tell what you're getting for your money, unless you shop around . . . and compare.

Of course, price is one important point of comparison, especially for people over 50. But, unfortunately, when some folks shop for life insurance, price is the only thing they compare.

Are You Getting What You Really Want?

A bargain price isn't much of a bargain unless you get the kind of life insurance you want. And features like these can be very important to you . . .

- A benefit that won't decrease as you grow older
- A premium that'll never increase over the years
- A guarantee that you can't be cancelled, as long as you pay your premium

You don't have to spend a fortune to get these features. For example, Colonial Penn's Prime Life 50 Plus insurance gives you all of them, plus GUARANTEED ACCEPTANCE, for as little as $6.95 a month.

Don't Be Fooled by Look-Alikes!

But please be careful. There are other guaranteed acceptance life insurance plans advertised to folks over 50 that may look like Prime Life . . . but there are differences!

Some of those plans actually reduce your benefit as you grow older. So you can end up paying the same premium over the years, while you get less and less coverage.

So . . . it pays to compare more than price. And when you shop carefully, you might find that the permanent protection of Prime Life 50 Plus is the wise choice for you.

After all, you can't be turned down if you're 50 to 80. And your benefit is guaranteed never to decrease, regardless of your age.

Get FREE Information! Please Act by October 31, 1984

You can't be turned down for this Insurance if you're 50 to 80!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS® is whole life insurance that can be yours for the asking. Simply call toll-free or mail the coupon below for free information. Your policy is issued without a physical exam . . . without a single health question! And the cost is just $6.95 a month!

With PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS life insurance . . .

- Everyone age 50 to 80 is guaranteed acceptance!
- No physical exam! No health questions!
- As little as $6.95 a month!
- Your policy builds cash value!
- Your benefit does not decrease as you grow older!
- Your premium will never increase!

JUDY BLORE AND "THE HOUSE THAT LOVE BUILT"

By Kathleen E. Hacker

Every day, some of the most frightened people in the world turn up on Judy Blore's doorstep. With their children in tow, they are ushered inside, into a grand Victorian manse where ceilings rise to dizzying heights, and floors stretch into exquisite mosaics of tile and parquet. Yet the opulence of the century-old house is overpowered by the emotion, ranging from courage to pure shock, that shows on their faces. There are those so distraught they are unable to say who they are or where they have come from.

Judy Blore, an amiable woman with an easy smile and a calming way, understands and welcomes them in. For the past decade, as resident manager of the nation's first Ronald McDonald House, Blore has ministered to the extraordinary needs of parents whose youngsters are afflicted with the most catastrophic of illnesses, chief among them cancer. They've come to seek treatment at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and while they wait hopefully for medicine to work its miracles, the house is theirs.

Here they pay $10 a night for a room, and the charge is lowered for those who cannot afford it. A playroom and side-yard park bulge with toys irresistible to any child. A communal kitchen and four elegantly appointed sitting areas draw strangers together. And help — be it in the form of directions to the bus stop, tickets to the zoo, or Judy Blore's sympathetic ear on a long and troubled evening — is never far away.

"We can't heal their children; that's a job outside our realm," says the 39-year-old Blore, who occupies a first-floor apartment with her husband, Wally (a nurse anesthetist), their own brood of four, and a pooch named Truffles. "What we can do for these families is support them through a very difficult time, perhaps the most difficult time of their lives, when they're in a strange city, separated from everything familiar and comforting. We can at least soften the edges of that experience."

This month Blore will be among the celebrants of the 10th anniversary of "the house that love built." There are now more than 60 Ronald McDonald Houses scattered throughout the United States and Canada, and all owe their existence to the experiment begun in Philadelphia on Oct. 15, 1974.

It was set into motion by Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Fred Hill after his 3-year-old daughter was stricken with leukemia. During her treatment, Hill met with Dr. Audrey Evans, head of pediatric oncology at Children's, to mull over ways to help other parents facing similar crises. The physician, it turned out, had a list of dreams, one of which was a temporary residence for out-of-town patients and their families.

you a superstar. How has that changed your life?
Murray: Well, personally, I don't feel that I'm different. But the way people regard you changes. And the way people in the business treat you: All of a sudden you go from being like a piece of meat to being a piece of meat they want.

Q: Didn't you want success?
Murray: You want somebody to say you're OK and that you've accomplished something. I think, though, that if you have a choice, be a writer or something like that. Write books instead of being a movie star. It's much more satisfying to have success without fame.

Q: Don't you enjoy it when people recognize you?
Murray: Sure, but to go over to someone on the street and say, "Yes, I know you screamed my name," takes an enormous amount of energy. It's easier just to act like you're Plymouth Rock. Like, people say, "Hey, there's Mount Rushmore." It's the same thing. The mountain doesn't climb down and say, "Hi, how are you."

Q: So you're comparing yourself to Mount Rushmore . . . a national treasure?
Murray: No. Charlie Callas [a Las Vegas comedian/entertainer] is a national treasure.

Q: Your wife reads all your good reviews, but she knows you as you really are. Doesn't she want to kill you sometimes?
Murray: Yes, but she always wanted to kill me sometimes.

Q: What does she do? Does she stay at home and take care of Homer?
Murray: She does whatever she pleases.

Q: Is Homer old enough to know that his father's a movie star?
Murray: He recognizes me on TV. He knows what the Ghostbusters symbol looks like.

Q: What does he think about what you do?

With Catherine Hicks in The Razor's Edge.

Murray: I guess he thinks everybody's parents are on TV.

Q: And when he grows up . . .
Murray: He'll be sent away to a military school in Switzerland. He'll be raised in another country. He'll never be allowed to see my films, and we'll visit him at Christmas, of course. . . . No. Somebody I know who was interested in spiritual life was making a movie — some sort of Western. He asked a holy man to come and see the movie. And the holy man said, "Why don't you make a movie that pleases your son, that makes your son happy?" And then he left. And the guy fell apart.

Well, I thought about it — that's what I've been thinking about the last week, trying to make a movie that would actually please him.

Q: What are you going to do next?
Murray: I think I'm due to be in a major box-office disaster. A real flop. I think it will be next time out; it doesn't matter what it is. They're going to get me.

Q: Are you content?
Murray: When I look at what I've done with my life and find that every time I get more, I still want more, I wonder, will I ever be satisfied?

Q: What do you think would satisfy you?
Murray: I'd be satisfied if I could ever be quiet. If I could ever shut up. PW

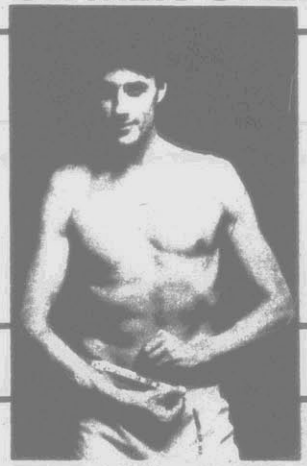
FLATTEN your STOMACH

FOR MEN ONLY



Come on guys! Get ready to flatten your stomach with the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program from the Editors of Consumer Guide®.

Yes, even if you watch what you eat. Even if you engage in some kind of sport or exercise, your stomach may still bulge and sag because your abdominal muscles are not properly toned.

That's why you need a program of exercises that work together so that all — and not just some — of the four major abdominal muscles get toned up. Some of these muscles run up and down. Others run side to side. And some crisscross the abdomen at an angle. If you only exercise one of these muscles (like most men do when they do sit-ups) your stomach may be hard. But it won't be flat.

The new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program, however, has been designed to produce balanced muscle development and shaping, while avoiding soreness and injury. It gives you seven different routines, one for each day of the week. Each routine becomes more vigorous as you move through the program. You may do the entire series in one week. Or get in shape gradually by staying on one routine for several days before you move on to the next. But either way, you'll end up with a stomach that's both hard and flat.

So take action now. Try these simple, easy-to-follow exercises and see if you don't feel more fit, energetic and self-confident in just a few short weeks. Order the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY today.

Easy To Use

This book has simple exercises with easy-to-follow directions illustrated in full-color on 64, large 8½" x 11" pages which are spiral bound to lie flat and stay open. So now what's your excuse?

The rooms at the Ronald McDonald house are homey, and the welcome visitors receive is warm.

JUDY BLORE

But who would turn it into a home? Dr. Evans immediately thought of Judy Blore, a friend and former assistant. Evans says of her choice: "Judy had a placid disposition and didn't get uptight when things went awry. She was a good mother, a home person, and a strong Christian with a feeling not of mission necessarily but responsibility for others. She cared. With her there, we knew we'd have the perfect nucleus for the family life we wanted in that house."

Though the job description was at best sketchy, Blore accepted: "My husband and I said, 'Well, here's an adventure. Let's give it a try for a year.' After we'd been here two or three months we wanted to stay. It was good."

Which is not to say it's been easy. Blore is charged with running the house, keeping its books, hiring its staff, and overseeing a small army of 20 volunteers. "I once tried 'to keep a chart of the number of hours I actually put into this place," she quips, "but I didn't have the time."

In the end, however, administration may be the least of her duties. She is also a playmate to children who she realizes may not survive. She is confidante to their parents, sharing the tension of the wait, their joy when treatment is successful, and their grief when it isn't. For others in her position at other McDonald houses, the emotional roller coaster has proven too much to bear. But Judy Blore has learned to take the high points and the low with equanimity.

"I have memories of a whole gang of kids getting well and going home," says Blore. "I also have memories of a whole parade of kids marching to heaven. It's a very real concept to me: that God is a loving God, that he's here giving the parents the strength and endurance they need on the worst days and helping the children somehow. The closer I stand to a family that's being touched by God in this way, the more I am affected by the ripples.

"One mother said she had been praying for her child's healing when she suddenly realized something: that healing, in addition to being here in this world, might also be on the other side. If I can understand that and get the big picture, then a momentary pain is not unendurable."

She smiles, though not without a trace of sadness. "Of course, it is not my child. I don't know what it would feel like if it were."

Ranging in age from 2 to 14, the Blore offspring are growing up in an atmosphere that is, to say the least, unique. Instead of scooting around the block on bicycles or roller skates, they careen down the hallways in wheelchairs, in the company of children without hair, eyelashes or eyebrows — children who know as much about the experience of chemotherapy and bone marrow transplants as they do about Saturday morning cartoons. The house, Judy Blore points out, has propelled her children to a level of maturity some adults never reach. "They're very at ease with all kinds of people," says Blore, "and especially gentle with sick kids. There is a surgeon at the hospital who does reconstruction on children born with facial deformities, and they come to the house as really strange-looking people. But my kids have learned that inside is a lovely person. They can see deeper than the surface. And that's a lesson I hope will last them a lifetime."

The past decade has taught Judy Blore herself a lesson or two. "Most of us worry so much about things in life that, on a scale of 10, probably rank about a one," she says. "All around me in this house are people who are dealing with the nines and the 10s and coping remarkably well. Compared to that, the things the rest of us consider valuable may ultimately have very little value at all." FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

GIMME AN L! GIMME AN A! GIMME A L-A-W-Y-E-R!

Ah, those were the days. Alums proudly attended their alma mater's football games in the fall. Looked forward to their class reunions. Sent large contributions to their alumni funds.

But now some graduates have begun to file lawsuits against colleges, claiming that the schools misrepresented what they had to offer.

In one case a student sued his alma mater for partial tuition reimbursement after the university failed to find him a job after graduation. And because school brochures had said that employment was guaranteed, the court ruled in the student's favor. At other places, students are refusing to repay loans on the grounds that the education they received was poor, or at least different from what they had been promised. The Chronicle of Higher Education reports that lawyers are now advising schools to exercise caution in their advertisements.

Whatever happened to "Be True to Your School"?

OUR NEXT SECRETARY OF THE LIQUOR CABINET?

What with all the windy speechifying of an election year, a person can work up a mighty big thirst.

Enter the ever-imaginative pub-tender, catering to all political tastes. Steven Austin, a bartender in Greensboro, N.C., who also works as an advice columnist for the High Point Enterprise, has come up with cocktail recipes inspired by this year's presidential candidates.

Austin's Mondale-Ferraro cocktail (which he describes as "sugar and spice and refreshingly different") is made of vanilla ice cream (for those chilly Minnesota winters), blueberries and strawberries (to complete Old Glory colors), Italian sweet vermouth and amaretto. Add ice and blend. Garnish with one U.S. flag, one Italian flag, two blueberries, and a strawberry.

For Republicans, Austin serves up the Reagan-Bush cocktail ("strong but smooth, with a touch of glitter"). It consists of tequila and triple sec (in honor of the Veep's home state), and orange juice (for California's cash crop). Shake these over ice and strain into a glass. Top with a splash of California champagne for glitter, and garnish with an orange slice and two U.S. flags.

Austin says his customers are pretty evenly divided between the two choices, and even he waffles when pressed about his potable pick. "We bartenders can't play favorites," he reminds us. "We just mix 'em up and serve 'em."

STRANGE BREW AND THE COLA ZOMBIES

There's beverage news from other corners as well. Distant corners. First Hungary: The official Hungarian news agency, MTI, reports the development of a quail-egg liqueur. (This some sort of a yolk?) And what's more, the Hungarians are claiming to have whipped up nothing less than a kind of breakthrough: This liqueur, they say, has the effects of a "love potion" and is quickly becoming extremely popular.

And from Taiwan comes the report that PepsiCo canceled its billboard ad campaign there. The reason? When one of their slogans was translated into Chinese, "Come Alive with the Pepsi Generation" could be read as "Pepsi Will Bring Your Ancestors Back from the Dead." Pretty potent!

STRAWBERRY CONES FOREVER

Is ice cream junk food? That's the question we posed to Philip G. Keeney. But before we get to the answer, let's find out a little about the man who provided it for us.

Philip G. Keeney, Ph.D., is a professor of food science at Penn State. Each January for the past 30 years he has conducted a course in "Ice Cream Basics." And to this course has flocked everyone in the ice cream business, from company presidents to sales and production staff, every one of whom actually makes ice cream while there.

Dr. Keeney describes the ideal ice cream this way: "When you bite into it, it should have a rapid-impact identifying flavor. When you swallow, there shouldn't be a lingering aroma; each new lick should be a new experience."

And now, the answer we've all been waiting for: No. Ice cream is not junk food. "An ice-cream cone contains a generous portion of milk solids and calcium, which is particularly good for women and the elderly. And it's such an enjoyable food. Anyone who goes into an ice cream store is happy. It keeps them from getting mad at people." That's good news. So, on second thought, make that fudge ripple a double, please.

BEDSIDE READING

What are people reading before they retire for the night? Here are two reports:

Michael Tilson-Thomas, principal guest conductor, Los Angeles Philharmonic

"I've been reading The Poems of Rainer Maria Rilke for illumination and simply because it is an infinitely beautiful book, and The Heretics of Dune by Frank Herbert because everyone is entitled to a few obsessions."

Jerry Yahna, director, Big Band Jazz Ensemble of Central Oregon Community College

"Mr. Jellyroll by Alan Lomax. It's the story of Jellyroll Morton, the great jazz performer and one of America's great composers. And I've also been delving into LeRoi Jones's Blues People. I teach a course in jazz and have gotten many insights from this book into the backgrounds of black jazz musicians and their culture."

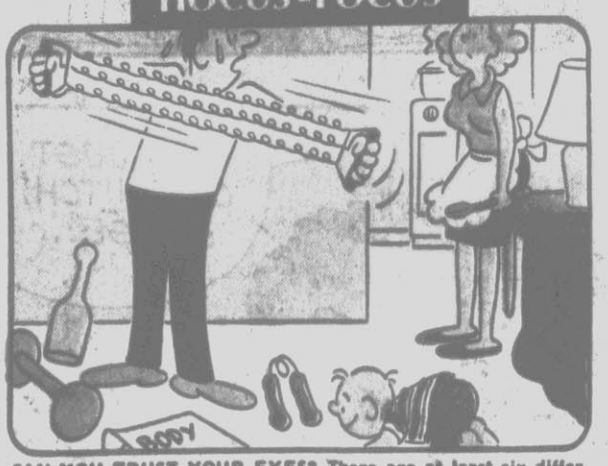
HOCUS-FOCUS



CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Indian club is shorter. 2. Shirt is tucked in. 3. Hand gripping is moved. 4. Switch is missing. 5. Utensil is changed. 6. Boy is reversed.

• TOP SECRET! Bend a toothpick in two (without breaking it) and place it over an empty soda or ketchup bottle (see right). On top, place a small coin.

Challenge: How can you cause the coin to drop into the bottle without touching it?

Give up? Simply allow a drop or two of water to fall on the bend in the toothpick. The V will spread, and the coin will drop.

• RIDDLE-ME-THIS! What amusement park ride is fit for a king? The ruler coaster. What kind of gum does a gem thief chew? Bauble gum. Who invented the first seat belt? Buckle-o-Bill.

REFLECT ON THIS VERSE-RIDDLE

A resort island in the Irish sea, home of a tailless breed of cats, is a clue to the answer of this vintage verse-riddle:

I saw a man behind
a man,
I saw a man before.
Between the two,
there were in view
Exactly half a score.
Yet I can say, and this is true —
Though strange it seems to be —
That only one, and
he alone,
Was all my eyes did
see.

In a word, how is this explained?

By the word Monkman — Man x-man.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

MEDALIST

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 30 points.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: IN FURY MORDRED LOOKS UPON THE DESTRUCTION. THE ROUND TABLE, THE THRONE ROOM, THE TREASURY -- AT THE MOMENT OF VICTORY SO MUCH OF HIS PRIZE WAS REDUCED TO RUBBLE. AND ARTHUR? PRINCE VALIANT? THE HOUSEHOLD HAD BEEN TRAPPED INSIDE, BUT ONLY MORDRED'S MEN ARE FOUND AMONG THE RUINS.

FROM A DELIRIOUS SURVIVOR MORDRED LEARNS WHAT HE MUST. "SEARCH THE MIRE," HE COMMANDS. "THEY MUST NOT ESCAPE."

MORDRED HIMSELF LEADS ONE PARTY INTO THE TRACKLESS SWAMP HE HAD EXPLORED AS A BOY. FROM TIME TO TIME ONE OF HIS MEN MISSTEPS AND MAKES THE MARSH A MEAL. MORDRED IGNORES THEIR CRIES FOR HELP AND PRESSES ON. HE WANTS ARTHUR.

WHEN MORNING SUN BURNS OFF THE MIST PRINCE VALIANT TAKES HIS BEARINGS. MANY LEAGUES TO THE SOUTH 'MUCKEN MIRE' NARROWS INTO A RIVER. FROM THERE THE SEA IS NOT FAR. VAL TURNS SOUTH WITH HIS FLOCK. A SHIP IS THEIR ONLY HOPE.

"NO PLUNDER UNTIL ARTHUR IS FOUND," MORDRED HAD TOLD HIS MEN. "I WANT HIM TO WATCH." IN CAMELOT, THE REMAINDER OF MORDRED'S FORCES WAIT IMPATIENTLY, BETTING WITH BOOTY THEY HAVE YET TO SEIZE. BUT YOUNG MARCUS HAS OTHER PLANS. HE SLIPS AWAY TO FIND HIS COMRADES IN 'MUCKEN MIRE.'

"I'VE BEEN WATCHING, WAITING. PLEASE, TAKE ME WITH YOU." THE SCRUFFY YOUTH WHO ACCOSTS HIM TURNS OUT TO BE MAEVE.
