Fire That Was Set Kills 13 In N.J. Hotel

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A fire that authorities said was started by a disgruntled employee swept through an eight-story residence hotel early today, trapping some residents and forcing others to jump from windows. At least 13 people were killed and 60 injured.

A part-time employee who Mayor Frank X. Graves Jr. said had argued with the night manager of the 60-year-old Hotel Alexander Hamilton was arrested and charged with arson and murder.

Russell William Conklin, 44, was being held without bail at the Passaic County Jail following his arraignment on one charge of aggravated arson and one of murder, the only charges initially filed.

Conklin entered no pleas during the arraignment which was held before Municipal Judge Ronald Fava hours before courts would normally be open.

"We didn't want a circus atmosphere and we didn't want to take any chances on angry relatives and friends," said Assistant Passaic County Prosecutor Martin Kayne.

Fire Capt. Domenick Cotroneo said 15 people had died in the blaze, but the mayor, police and the prosecutor's office said they could only confirm 13 deaths.

The blaze broke out about 12:15 a.m. in the 150-room downtown hotel occupied by about 300 permanent residents and transients, many of them clients of "various agencies of government," Graves said. The fire was under control at 3:40 a.m.

"There are deaths and there are injuries and there are still people in there," the mayor said. Most of the dead were elderly, and at least 55 people were taken to hospitals, he said. Hospital officials said 60 people had been injured.

Some residents jumped from windows, some climbed to safety on firefighters' ladders and others were rescued from the roof, authorities said. The injuries included smoke inhalation, broken bones and burns.

"People were screaming, trying to tie sheets and blankets together to get out the windows," said Lusylvia Rivera, 33, who fled with her three children from a first-floor room. "The ones who were more scared just went ahead and jumped."

Flames were shooting from fourth-floor windows when firefighters arrived at the scene, and smoke still billowed from the building hours later. The fire, spread from the third floor through air shafts, engulfed four or five floors, said Fire Chief William Comer.

"The fire spread so fast and the flames were so intense in combination with toxic smoke" from paint and plastics, and "it could be that some of them (residents) were so old they couldn't get out," Comer said.

"There was very poor visibility, panicky people, unconscious people lying on floors," said Battalion Chief Frank Crampton. "We took them out of all the windows and down all the staircases."

The blaze quickly escalated to three alarms, and firefighters from nearby Passaic, Clifton and Hawthorne joined Paterson's full force, said Cotroneo. "We have people trapped, we have people jumping, people with burns and smoke inhalation," Cotroneo said.

"It happened all of a sudden," said Harry Moore, who sat in a bar across the street after escaping with his wife and two babies from a second-floor apartment.

Air Force Spurs Hope That Pilot Is Still Alive

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A woman whose husband was listed as killed in Vietnam 18 years ago received a letter from the Air Force saying the man may be alive in a prison of war camp, even though intelligence agencies had determined the report was false.

CAPT. DAVID J. PHILLIPS Jr.

"After 18 years of not hearing anything, why would they do this now?" said Peggy Phillips, who received the report Saturday. "You can't believe what this has done to our family."

The report about Capt. David J. Phillips Jr., who was listed as killed in action in 1966, was based on information provided by John Reilly of a group called "Project Freedom," said Capt. Miles Wiley, an Air Force spokesman in Washington.

Wiley, who said he knew nothing further about Reilly or his organization, added that the Defense Intelligence Agency found Reilly's claims to be false.

"We questioned his source and other sources and found no substance to his statement," Wiley said.

Mrs. Phillips said the government should have explained that in its letter.

"It just about floored me," said Mrs. Phillips, who has three daughters. "Our family hasn't been the same since we got that letter."

Defense Witnesses Testify

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The defense called to the stand today the members of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department who questioned James W. Gwin about his injuries following a high speed chase through Greenville Feb. 4.

Gwin, a 15-year-old Alabama resident, has charged that he was kicked in the head by Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy James M. Evans after the chase. Gwin was a passenger in the vehicle which led officers on a chase from Beaufort County.

The testimony came during the fourth day of evidence in Pitt County Superior Court of an appeal filed by Evans, who had been convicted in a lower court of simple assault of Gwin.

Pitt Sheriff's Deputy Evalyn Williamson, who served as female jailer on the afternoon of Feb. 4, testified today that when Gwin was brought into the jail, his eye was discolored. She said that when she asked Gwin who had hurt him he had replied that he didn't know.

She testified that she asked Gwin if he had been hurt by a man wearing brown and Gwin had said, "no."

Ms. Williamson said Gwin was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for attention to his injuries.

Personal Income Goes Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose a strong 0.9 percent in September while consumer spending, after showing no gains for two months, shot up by 1.4 percent, the government Economists have cited the drop in consumer buying as one of the key reasons for the dramatic slowdown in overall economic growth since June.

Total economic output, after surging ahead at rates of 10.1 percent and 7.1 percent in the first and second quarters this year, slowed to a 3.6 percent pace from July through September, according to a preliminary estimate last month.

The government will revise that estimate on Friday and today's figures could signal that the revision will show the economy slowed less than originally thought. However, some economists have predicted that other signs of sluggish growth will translate into an even lower figure than the original 3.6 percent estimate.

The report on income and outlays showed personal income rising by 0.9 percent following gains of 0.6 percent in August and 0.7 percent in July. It was the strongest gain since a similar 0.9 percent rise in June.

The rebound in personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything but interest payments on debt, follows a 1.6 percent jump in retail sales in September.

The personal spending increase included a $4.5 billion increase for durable goods, compared with a decline of $6.6 billion in August. The report said that the August decline and the September gain were due to a fall and then a rise in auto purchases. Purchases of nondurable goods, items intended to last less than three years, increased $18.4 billion in September, compared to a decline of $3.1 billion in August.

Americans' wages and salaries were up $11.7 billion in September, compared to a $3.8 billion August gain. The big gain came in the service industries, where payrolls rose by $6.2 billion. Manufacturing payrolls declined $1.8 billion in September with about one-third of that drop attributed to the strike against General Motors Corp.

Other details of the income and spending report:

—Personal income rose $26.1 billion in September to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.07 trillion.

Disposable, or after-tax, income rose 0.8 percent in September following a 0.6 percent August increase.

—Personal savings declined to an annual rate of $161.5 billion. That left the national savings rate — savings as a percent of disposable income — at 6.1 percent, down from 6.7 percent in August.

Wedding Vows Said In Elizabeth City

The wedding ceremony of Cheryl Kaye Waters and Paul Jay Simpson, both of Elizabeth City, was solemnized Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are John C. and Anne S. Waters of Elizabeth City and Willard G. and Ann C. Simpson of Route 6, Elizabeth City.

The double ring was performed by Dr. B.E. White Jr. and the Rev. R.B. Poole.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. The maid of honor was Joan Waters of Elizabeth City, sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids included Paige Simpson, sister of the bridegroom of Elizabeth City, Lorie Saunders of Raleigh, Joan Skiles of Plymouth, Ann Frederic of Wilson and Linda Tippet of Greenville.

Honorary attendants were D.J. Bishop of Atlanta, Ga., and Billie Nelson of North Forestville, Md.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Martin and Jeffery Simpson, brothers of the bridegroom, David Parker and Terry Grant, all of Elizabeth City, and Gary Cooper of Arlington, Va.

A program of organ music was rendered by Karen Jennings, cousin of the bride, and Sylvia Parsons and Debbie Gurganus, vocalists.

The bride wore a white gown of organza over bridal taffeta designed with a modified Queen Anne neckline, fitted bodice with long full sleeves accented with re-embroidered Franch alencon motifs and sprinkled with seed pearls. The full skirt was edged in lace and extended into a cathedral train. Her hat of lettuce chiffon and streamers of illusion was covered with alencon lace which was also beaded.

The maid of honor wore a mauve taffeta gown styled with a scooped neckline, boxed pleats with a long tie sash. She carried a nosegay with flowers in shades of pink, rose and burgundy. The bridesmaids were dressed identically in rose colored gowns.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live in Elizabeth City after a wedding trip to the mountains.

The bride was previously employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a staff nurse. She graduated from Northeastern High School and Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. The bridegroom graduated from Northeastern High School, COA in Elizabeth City and Wayne Community College in Goldsboro. He is employed with Gerald Frazier Forest Consultant in Elizabeth City.

A pig picking and after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon and several showers prior to the ceremony.

SUMMER TARTS

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup finely chopped nuts
- 3 tablespoons water
- Ice cream and fruit sauce

Stir together flour, sugar and salt; cut in butter until size of small peas; work in nuts. Sprinkle water over mixture, a tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly with a fork after each addition. Shape dough into a ball. Divide into 8 equal portions and shape each into a ball. On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out each ball to a 5-inch round. Shape over back of 3 1/2 by 1 1/4-inch tart pans; prick well with fork tines. Place tart pans on a cookie sheet and bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until lightly browned - 15 to 18 minutes. Allow to cool 5 minutes; remove from pans to wire racks to cool completely. At serving time, fill with ice cream and top with fruit sauce. Makes 8 servings.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Like millions of other Americans, I have become a toll-free 800 shopper.

Catalogues are my life. They are stacked by my bed, stored under my desk, spilled out all over the coffee table, bundled and stored in the garage and still each day a truck pulls up and deposits more.

The reason I took to catalogue shopping was to save time. Imagine, no more putting on a dress with a belt, finding my car keys, cruising around looking for a parking spot and being body-searched when I emerged from a fitting room. All I had to do was pick up the phone and place my order. What could be simpler than that?

Who would have guessed that Miss Toll Free would want to know full name, address, phone where I could be reached during the day and evening, the 15 digits of my credit card, its date of expiration, the page on which my items appeared and their digit code numbers.

Also, the description; first and second choice of color, the monogram, the quantity and the price on each item. Did I want it shipped regular or express mail? Gift-wrapped? Did I know of anyone who was not receiving the catalogue and what were the four letters following my name on the address label on the front of the catalogue?

I had conversations with Miss Toll Free that lasted longer than most marriages. But after that, it was all over, right?

Wrong. Since no one was home, they delivered the package containing my salt and pepper ceramic pigs to my neighbor whom I hadn't seen in a year and a half. When I went to pick them up I was there for four hours getting caught up.

The Peruvian hat that looked sensational and mysterious on the model (possibly because she was Peruvian, wore a black cape and boots, and was standing next to a llama) made me look like I was hiding from the law under a manhole cover. It had to be returned. Unfortunately, I had discarded the box it came in. The only one who had a box that fit was Mother, who lives 45 minutes away and wanted me to price things for a garage sale while I was there.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Mother Thinks Ahead To Educating Children

DEAR ABBY: The holiday season is approaching, and with it approaches a five-year-old problem. Ever since my first child was born, I have been asking my in-laws to refrain from buying him toys for Christmas. Every year my request has been ignored. Now we have two children, so the problem has doubled.

The in-laws say, "If we didn't buy toys for our grandchildren, it would take all the fun out of Christmas for us!" (What a selfish attitude!)

Abby, these people are in their early 50s and they have had fun for a lot of years. I've suggested that they give savings bonds plus one token toy. (We could use the money for the children's education.) I gave up a lucrative career to stay home and raise our children. My husband and I get by, but we worry about our children's college education, etc.

We live in an upper flat and have no room to store so many toys. When I see the amount of money tied up in this junk, I could cry. I'm not talking peanuts here—every year each child gets a minimum of $200 worth of toys! My husband is non-committal because he doesn't want to hurt his parents' feelings.

How do I reach these people? I have told them firmly but nicely. I have pleaded with them. Nothing works. What now?

DREADING THE HOLIDAYS

DEAR DREADING: You've told your in-laws how you feel, and they have told you how they feel.

I agree, it would be more practical for them to invest in your children's education, but that decision is not yours—it's theirs, so try to be a gracious loser.

DEAR ABBY: Before I've had a chance to read the newspaper, my scissors-happy wife cuts it up for items of interest and coupons.

I'm particularly annoyed when parts of "Dear Abby" are missing. Don't tell me to talk to her; I've done that, and it's like talking to the wall.

GETTING ULCERS

DEAR GETTING: For the next gift-giving occasion, give "Scissors-Happy" a year's subscription to this newspaper. You will both benefit from it, and it's cheaper than ulcers. (P.S. I hope my column was intact today, or you'll miss this suggestion.)

DEAR ABBY: I just had to respond to all those letters disclosing that people will dry their hands on the tip of a bath towel, the shower curtain or toilet paper rather than use the pretty little guest towel laid out for that purpose.

Until I read it in your column, I did not know that those "pretty little guest towels" were put out for that purpose. I am serious. I'm 28 years old, no dummy (I'm an R.N.), but I was never taught by my parents or my grandma (who always had one lying out on the counter) that they were to be used. I always thought they were there for decoration. I assume that many others thought the same.

NOW A USER

DEAR USER: Be a "pusher," too. In your own home, use a guest towel and leave it conspicuously in view beside the unused guest towels. This will encourage others to do the same.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Budget

At first glance, a 1985-86 billion-dollar budget for the University of North Carolina system is a real stunner.

It is a landmark proposal by the system's budget and finance committee; a landmark in the sense that it is the largest ever prepared for presentation to the Board of Governors, and quite possibly designates a plateau — a new starting point — for the future.

The proposal underlines how much Tar Heels have paid in the past, and will in the future, to educate their young people.

To be sure, the Board of Governors can be expected to give the figures an excruciatingly close look and there may be appropriate cuts applied as well as deferrals on specific projects; but the overall spending is certain to represent a new high.

The board will be under great pressure to heed factors which point to larger outlays: anticipated growth in the number of students on the 16 campuses, increased academic salaries (whose levels have not kept pace with the general growth in personal income), construction needs, costs associated with a science and math school, N.C. Memorial Hospital, the Agricultural Extension and Research services, additional land, and other projects.

There's a good case to be made, too, for the enlarged budget in view of expectable state revenues. They are growing; and while a date for peaking is anybody's guess it is a favorable time for catching up on goals that in the past have had to be trimmed because the money simply was not there.

Academic salaries take the lion's share, and there are capital investments, too, which need attention.

One of the favorite brags of North Carolina is that their first concern is for their young people and the future. Well, that's what the university's record budget is all about.

It's a long way from an initial proposal to adoption by the governing board and finally by the General Assembly. Still, we are inclined to think most of the budgetary plans will be found acceptable.

Growth

Major capital improvements are under way at Pitt County Memorial Hospital — and there is likely to be more in the future.

The hospital, in filling its role as an affiliate of the ECU School of Medicine, has become regional in nature, with patients referred here for specialized treatment.

Jack Richardson, president of the hospital, told his board this week, "Capital improvements for further enlargement of the work of Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be significant over the next three or four years if we assume that PCMH is the hospital of preference in eastern North Carolina." The patterns of use in eastern North Carolina seem to be indicating that PCMH is becoming "the hospital of preference," he said.

Growth for hospitals has been spotty in recent years with some smaller hospitals finding it difficult to survive.

For Pitt County Memorial, however, some growth still appears to be ahead because it is serving much of eastern North Carolina.

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale's impressive performance in the first presidential debate has renewed internal efforts to picture him on commercial TV ads, a no-no up to now.

Richard Leone, the New Jersey politician who has handled Mondale's media efforts since the nominating convention, has insisted it would be self-defeating for the candidate himself to appear on the TV spots. Mondale's face has been seldom seen in commercials since the New York primary campaign last March, which was run by Manhattan-based media expert David Garth.

Garth, who has had no part in the Mondale campaign since the New York primary, contends his debate victory proves the folly of Leone's policy. That argument may be pressed by campaign manager Bob Beckel, who has now entered media operations and is expected to eclipse Leone.

Political insiders are blaming White House chief of staff James Baker III for allowing the Democrats to use footage from the presidential debates for their television commercials, opening the door to rich new anti-Reagan material.

In the 1976 and 1980 debates, both sides agreed not to use any debate footage for TV commercials in order to avoid unnecessary but predictable posturing. President Reagan's political managers assumed that a similar ban would be imposed this year.

They now fear Mondale's use of Reagan's worst moments in the Oct. 7 debate, particularly his, "I'm all confused now" admission before his closing statement.

A footnote: Baker is also faulted for not enlisting the support of a debating coach for Reagan, who made good use of one before his debate with Jimmy Carter four years ago.

Washington-based Republican political operatives are seriously pushing actor Charlton Heston as the party's best bet to run for the Senate from California in 1986.

Heston is famed for his motion picture portrayal of Moses, but he has been increasingly active in politics for the four years since his Hollywood friend became president. Heston is eager to run and capable of raising the vast funds needed for a statewide California race.

Although he would have a long line of competitors to get by in a Republican primary, incumbent Sen. Alan Cranston, the Senate minority whip and unsuccessful 1984 presidential candidate, is considered one of the most vulnerable Democratic senators in 1986 and may not seek a fourth term.

The Reagan Cabinet's lack of political appeal was demonstrated in Texas when Rep. Phil Gramm, fighting a tough Senate campaign, declined offers of help from all but two Cabinet members.

The two are Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole. Regan is popular with businessmen, and Dole is one Cabinet member with wide political appeal.

Gramm and other Republican candidates have rejected offers of help from Agriculture Secretary John Block, who is politically ambitious. Low farm prices make Block a vulnerability on the campaign trail.

Congressional Republican leaders are angry at President Reagan's campaign managers for deciding that even if his lead holds up, he will campaign only for GOP House challengers who are within 4 or 5 percentage points of Democratic incumbents.

Those are precisely the Republicans who do not need presidential help, in the opinion of Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, chairman of the House Republican Campaign Committee. He and other House Republicans believe Reagan's presence could close the gap in races where Democratic incumbents lead by 10 to 15 points.

House Republicans suspect the White House wants to avoid conflict with Rep. James Jones, chairman of the important House Budget Committee, who is in a tough battle for re-election from his conservative Oklahoma district. But GOP polls show his lead is only 8 percent and he could slip into the 4-to-5-point range that would permit presidential intervention under the Reagan campaign formula.

Unweaving A Pattern

WASHINGTON — Long before she became the Democrats' vice presidential nominee and long before she debated George Bush, Geraldine Ferraro was writing her own record as a member of the House of Representatives from Queens, N.Y. It is fair to ask what can be learned from the record.

The question is important. Within this century three presidents have died in office, one has resigned, one has become disabled, and one has narrowly missed death by assassination. It is more than a dramatic turn of phrase to say that if the Mondale-Ferraro ticket wins in November, she would be within a heartbeat of the Oval Office. As Mondale's running mate, she necessarily must evince a team player's loyalty to his views and to the party platform. Before the lightning struck, she was writing her own views in the yeas and nays of the House.

In earlier columns I have reviewed her record as seen by organized labor (excellent), by the business community (poor), by the American Security Council (not so hot) and by the National Taxpayers Union (big spender). How does she fare in the scorebooks of Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)? She fares very well.

Rep. Ferraro's track record in Congress covers the years 1979 through 1983. One of the interesting things about the gentlewoman is that she has grown more liberal with every passing year. During her first year in the House, the ACLU selected nine roll calls as critical; alas, she voted "wrong" on six of them. In 1983 the ACLU used eight roll calls for its scorecard; she voted "right" every time. Similarly, ADA gave her a rating in 1979 of 74 percent (five wrong, 14 right), but a better rating in 1983 of 90 percent (two wrong, 18 right).

During the five years the two organizations have tracked some of the same issues. In several instances they have used the same roll calls for their litmus tests. The picture that develops is the same.

In 1983 the American Civil Liberties Union examined three roll calls having to do with abortion. The ACLU is for it. Rep. Ferraro earned a plus on each vote. Two roll calls last year had to do with covert operations of the CIA in Nicaragua. The ACLU was against these; so was Rep. Ferraro. Two votes concerned the Commission on Civil Rights; the ACLU strongly supports it. So does Rep. Ferraro.

In 1983 ADA looked at key roll calls on defense and foreign affairs. The gentlewoman had a perfect score: She voted against development of an anti-satellite missile; against an amendment to permit manufacture of chemical weapons; against the MX missile; and against a motion to give a "reduction" in nuclear weapons a priority equal to the priority of a weapons "freeze."

On consumer issues, Rep. Ferraro voted in 1983 in favor of the domestic content bill for the automobile industry. In the area of civil rights, she voted in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution and in favor of the holiday to honor Martin Luther King. She voted in 1983 against the amendment gradually to raise the full-benefit retirement age under Social Security from 65 to 67 by the year 2000. Her cumulative five-year rating from ADA is 79, from the ACLU 74.

As I have noted before, the ratings of special interest groups have to be viewed with a mildly skeptical eye. ADA, the ACLU and the AFL-CIO tend to pick key roll calls that make Democrats look good. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the American Conservative Union tilt toward Republican virtues.

Yet when this selective bias has been discounted, it has to be said that the particular recorded votes actually have been cast. The pattern of Rep. Ferraro's yeas and nays is a pattern of emerging liberalism; it is a pattern she herself has woven. Those who count themselves liberals will love that pattern. Conservatives will find it of small appeal. Like it or dislike it, politically speaking, this is how her heart beats.

Strength For Today

A distinguished scientist recently wrote as follows:

"Because I have been for many years in the environment of the physical sciences, I have seen first-hand the rapidly unfolding results of research and engineering. Why are we being provided with the means powerful enough to destroy life on this earth, yet which might prove to be the basis, if so used, to vastly enrich our physical life and material life?"

"Under these circumstances I can be at peace with myself only by realizing that we are experiencing the unfolding of a determinative step in God's plan, measured not on our calendar of time but on his. As Christians we need to note that the spirit of God moves not in a frenzied hurry, but with deliberate calmness...."

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

RALEIGH — The differences between legislating in North Carolina and in California are probably considerable. But, when the N.C. Child Advocacy Institute wanted to lobby its members how to lobby the General Assembly, it brought in a California child's advocate. The advice she gave was universal and valuable to any citizen's group which might be planning to appear before the 1985 Legislature.

Jeannette Duncel of San Francisco, chairwoman of California's Children's Lobby, told those attending the institute's first annual conference that they must appear to have size and strength behind their efforts. A great number of people must be enlisted to contact legislators both in the home district and in the Legislative Building.

"We must convince legislators that it is in their real self interest to vote for children," she said in an obvious reference to pressure from a great many potential voters.

The first step is to present a united front. If there is bickering within an advocacy group, it gives legislators a way out. A united front, in which many issues are compromised out before the advocates begin seeing legislators, is much more likely to succeed.

When legislators are contacted, it should be in a professional and civil manner. "Advocacy doesn't have to be confrontational," she said. "It works better the other way."

For example, a bit of humor can help, or maybe a little gift, like a cookie or apple for every legislator and staff member, she said. Angry confrontations, as are often seen in the Legislative Building, don't work. They make enemies for life.

A good advocate will be prepared to help a legislator decide on an issue. Information on the proposals should be prepared in outline form and handed to the legislator. Advocates should be prepared to supply expert witnesses who can speak at committee meetings. It is essential that the information provided either on paper or in person be reliable and accurate.

Mrs. Duncel said it is important to have patience. "Have a long range strategy. Be prepared to hang in there for a long time." If a legislator picks up on an issue and is unable to get it passed the first year, he may be more successful in following years. Don't expect to have much credibility with legislators if you don't continue working for your goals, she said.

The same patience is needed in grooming friends. Politicians will usually remember the people who helped them get started. Back candidates when they're first running for office. If they ever make it to powerful committee positions, your lobby has a friend in high places.

The same can be said of legislators who befriend an advocacy group during a session. Mrs. Duncel said it is essential to come and help those legislators when they seek reelection.

Finally, she warned the children's advocates to be realistic in their expectations. "Don't ask legislators for promises on which they can't deliver," she said. Don't expect a 100 percent pay raise for teachers. Work, instead, for something the state can afford.

Ferraro Setting Stage For Weekend Debate

SEATTLE (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is using her campaign appearances the rest of the week to turn up the heat in her criticism of President Reagan's foreign policy and set the stage for Walter F. Mondale's confrontation with Reagan on Sunday.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee was making a foreign policy address today at the University of Washington. She was scheduled to deliver a speech on nuclear arms control Saturday at the University of Massachusetts.

Both speeches are aimed at appealing to young voters to back the Democratic ticket, but the emphasis is on Reagan's foreign policy, which the Democrats say has failed.

"We want to leave the week on a foreign policy note," and lead into the Sunday debate between Mondale and Reagan, said Francis O'Brien, Ms. Ferraro's press secretary.

Meanwhile, an ABC News-Washington Post poll shows Reagan's lead down to 12 points, 54-42 with 4 percent undecided, a solid gain for Mondale since their Oct. 7 debate.

An ABC-Post poll before the debate had Reagan ahead 55-37 with 8 percent undecided. The latest poll was conducted Friday through Tuesday among 1,505 registered voters, and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Both Reagan and Mondale were in Washington today studying for the debate, televised live at 8 p.m. EDT Sunday from Kansas City.

Reagan was traveling to New York this evening to attend the Al Smith dinner, a traditional political dinner sponsored by the Catholic Archdiocese of New York. Mondale wasn't attending, citing the debate preparations, and the church sponsors refused to allow Ms. Ferraro to go as a stand-in.

Vice President George Bush planned to tour a wool mill in Portland, Ore., today before setting out for a rally in Spokane, Wash., and appearances in Seattle later in the day.

All week, Ms. Ferraro has claimed that she and Mondale defeated Bush and Reagan in their initial debates over the last two weeks.

In addition, campaign strategists point to the debates, especially Mondale's, as revitalizing the sagging Democratic campaign. Now these strategists expect an additional boost from the final debate

Sunday in Kansas City between the presidential contenders.

"This is a whole new race," Ms. Ferraro has been telling campaign audiences. "It's getting hot and we're feeling the heat. It's getting close and they're getting worried."

"We don't want to sidetrack the debate in any way," O'Brien said of Ms. Ferraro hammering at a foreign policy theme for the rest of the week. He added it amounts to raising the stakes on foreign policy.

In a speech Wednesday at the California State University at Sacramento, the congresswoman ticked off major themes of the Mondale-Ferraro campaign such as personal freedoms, the elderly, preservation of the environment, equal opportunity and equal rights, jobs and economic growth.

But, she said, "Above all, we're in a fight for peace. No single issue is more important to our future than the need to control the arms race."

And that is a prime topic on which the Democrats hope they can raise doubts about Reagan's leadership.

"Fritz Mondale and I are committed to negotiate a mutual, verifiable nuclear freeze," Ms. Ferraro said.

"Ronald Reagan has opposed every arms control treaty ever negotiated.

"If John Kennedy had listened to Ronald Reagan we wouldn't have a (nuclear) test ban treaty. If Lyndon Johnson had listened to Ronald Reagan there would be no agreement on nuclear proliferation. ... If Richard Nixon had listened to Ronald Reagan we would not have an ABM (anti-ballistic missile) treaty and the Soviets would have a greater threat to our security than they do today," she said.

When she said, "In the last four years, Reagan's record has been just as bad," there were jeers from Reagan supporters sprinkled through the crowd.

"If I had a record like Ronald Reagan's, I wouldn't want anybody to hear it either," she responded to the heckling.

Reagan, she said, "is the first president since the dawn of the nuclear age not to make progress on arms control."

"In 1980, he promised immediate arms talks. Four years later not a single team is negotiating nuclear arms control."

Bush, meanwhile, was challenged repeatedly on U.S. policy in Nicaragua and drew loud boos from some people on the administration's policy about nuclear war when he spoke Wednesday night at a forum in Portland, Ore.

Denying an assertion by a woman that U.S. policy says a nuclear war could be won, Bush said, "Our policy is a nuclear war is not winnable and must not be fought." When the vice president was challenged by someone else on the same point, Bush snapped, "I just answered it, I answered it fella, don't worry about it."

Fighter Crashes, Kills 2 Crewmen

CARRIZOZO, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force F-111D fighter-bomber on a low-level training mission slammed into the side of a rocky hill and exploded, killing its two crewmen, authorities said.

"The biggest piece (of the craft) we could find was maybe a 3-foot-square piece," Lincoln County Chief Deputy Sheriff Charlie Cox said after the crash Wednesday night about 15 miles north of this south-central New Mexico town. "We didn't find any survivors."

The names of the dead crewmen were being withheld until relatives could be notified, said Sgt. Victoria Raun, a public affairs specialist at Cannon Air Force Base.

Scientist Made Deal To Give Up Citizenship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government kept secret for nearly a year its deal for a leading German rocket scientist to give up his U.S. citizenship instead of facing allegations he worked slave laborers to death building V-2 missiles for the Nazis in World War II.

The Justice Department announced Wednesday that Arthur L.H. Rudolph, who designed the Saturn V rocket that took U.S. astronauts to the moon, left the United States last March. He left on a non-stop flight from San Francisco to West Germany and is barred from ever re-entering the United States.

In accordance with an agreement he signed with the Justice Department in November 1983, Rudolph, now 78, renounced his citizenship at the U.S. consulate in Hamburg, West Germany, on May 25.

Neal M. Sher, head of the department's Office of Special Investigations, which is assigned to hunt Nazi war criminals in this country, said the U.S. government does not know where Rudolph is now. He said Rudolph signed the agreement when shown the evidence the U.S. government had gathered against him during the last several years.

Sher said word of the agreement was held until now "because we didn't want to announce it until the State Department put its final stamp of approval on the renunciation of citizenship." The paperwork on that was only completed a week to 10 days ago, Sher said.

Sher said the U.S. government gave no advance notice of its actions to the West German government because it did not know Rudolph's final destination. "But there are indications that local German officials are aware of what happened to him," Sher said.

West German government offices were closed by the time word of the Justice Department announcement reached Europe.

A close friend and co-worker of the late German rocket chief Werner von Braun since 1934, Rudolph ultimately became chief coordinator for the Saturn V and supervised its planning, design, production and testing for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

As part of "Operation Paperclip," the U.S. Army secretly had brought Rudolph and 118 other German rocket experts on Von Braun's team to the United States after World War II — at a time when they also were being sought by the Soviet Union.

Sher said that Rudolph served from September 1943 to April 1945 as chief operations director for V-2 missile production at the Mittelwerk (Central Works) underground rocket factory in central Germany and during that time participated in the persecution of forced laborers, including inmates from the Dora-Nordhausen concentration camp.

After 571 British bombers destroyed the Nazis' V-2 factory at Peenemuende on Aug. 17, 1943, Adolf Hitler ordered production resumed at the underground factories in the Harz Mountains.

Rudolph, who had designed

Peenemuende, was put in charge of the new mass production effort and was responsible for the working conditions for the laborers, Sher said. "He kept requesting more and more slave laborers," the Justice Department official said.

Sher said the government's allegations were based on interviews with witnesses around the world, material from U.S., German and other archives and books about Dora-Nordhausen.

"The conditions were utterly outrageous, gruesome, grotesque. Even (Nazi official) Albert Speer in his memoirs called them 'barbarous,'" Sher said. "He literally worked thousands of slave laborers to death."

Sher said estimates of the number of political and religious prisoners and prisoners of war who died on the project run as high as 20,000.

Sher said he had documented an instance in which some laborers suspected of sabotage were hanged "in a particularly slow fashion" from the rafters of the tunnels "and the entire inmate population was required to watch."

"Some of the workers we talked to, grown men, broke down and wept recalling the conditions in that factory; they could not understand why these German missile scientists were revered as heroes in the West," Sher said.

"Those who objected over the years to the U.S. government's decision to use the German rocket scientists focused almost entirely on the use of the V-2 against the civilian population of London, but no one considered how the V-2 was built," Sher said.

After arriving in the United States, Rudolph and others on Von Braun's team worked with the Army, eventually developing the Redstone rocket. He went to work for NASA in Huntsville, Ala., in December 1961, retired in January 1969, and had since lived in San Jose, Calif.

As part of the deal with Rudolph, the U.S. government agreed not to bring a court case against him, but Sher pointed out that the most the U.S. government could have done in court was to strip Rudolph of his citizenship and deport him.

Rudolph's wife, who left with him, did not renounce her U.S. citizenship. Their daughter continues to live in California.

CIA Book Draws Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency is under scathing attack for producing a psychological warfare manual for Nicaraguan rebels that says some leftist government officials can be "neutralized" with the "selective use of violence."

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, denounced the book Wednesday night as "repugnant" and a "document (that) should never have been produced by any element of the United States government."

The furor over the 90-page manual, titled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War," has also revived congressional calls for the ouster of CIA director William J. Casey, President Reagan's longtime friend and a chief architect of U.S. policy in Central America.

The Associated Press, quoting intelligence sources, reported Monday that the manual was produced by the CIA. The book recommends the hiring of professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs."

FBI Opens Study In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A specially assembled team of FBI investigators is scrutinizing the agency's Los Angeles office following the arrest of a former agent on charges of selling secrets to the Soviet Union.

The team "will be conducting a total evaluation of everything that went on in the case," Assistant FBI Director William Baker said Wednesday in Washington.

The probe begins amid repeated published allegations that top Los Angeles FBI officials, among them special agent in charge Richard W. Bretzing, showed preferential treatment to fellow Mormons, including former agent Richard W. Miller, the first FBI agent to be accused of espionage.

Miller, 47, a 20-year FBI veteran, was a Mormon until he was excommunicated earlier this year for reasons that church officials have declined to discuss.

The Catholic, Bernardo Perez, moved on to run the FBI's office in El Paso last March.

New Snowstorm Smothers Central Rockies

By The Associated Press

The second Western snowstorm of the week crawled across the central Rockies today, dumping up to 10 inches of snow on parts of Nevada, killing a skier in an avalanche, sending cars skidding across highways and leaving power lines tangled with trees.

Some parts of Utah's mountains were subjected to "near blizzard-like conditions," while blizzards were reported Wednesday in several canyons, the National Weather Service said. Winds gusted to 58 mph at Tooele and a foot of snow was on the ground at Park City.

A 31-year-old skier from Dillon, Colo., was killed Wednesday in an avalanche near Mount Kelso, west of Denver, authorities said.

The storm brought brief, violent lightning that started a string of power outages throughout Salt Lake County. As the lightning subsided, tree limbs weighed down by three inches of snow pulled down more power lines.

Winter storm warnings and travelers advisories were issued from as far south as northern Arizona and New Mexico to Utah and southern Idaho.

"This has some potential for heavy snows of more than 4 inches," said forecaster Stan Sigler in Cheyenne, Wyo. "Whatever happened to autumn, is what I would like to know. Autumn came on a Thursday this year. Did you miss it?"

"It's typically what you'd get in December or January," said forecaster Ed Carle in Salt Lake City.

Forecasters said the new storm stalking the Rockies was not expected to grow to blizzard intensity like its predecessor. A third, stronger storm system was expected to arrive this weekend.

The new storm caused numerous power outages and fender-bender accidents as it crossed Nevada during the night, with up to 10 inches of snow at Donner Summit in the Sierra Nevada.

Sierra Pacific Power Co. reported numerous outages throughout northwest Nevada as the heavy snow snapped and tangled power lines.

Snow fell Wednesday afternoon from northeastern Nevada to western Colorado and in the afternoon moved over Colorado's more populous Front Range, where only about 2 inches of snow was expected. The snow area also extended from northern Arizona to northwestern Montana.

"The storm is much lighter than the Monday-Tuesday storm ... It's more of a mountain storm where the last one was a plains storm," said forecaster

Brian Heckman in Denver.

On Tuesday, a blizzard left Colorado strangled with up to 3 feet of snow. Highways in eastern Colorado were still icy under a sunny sky Wednesday while the new storm spread into the opposite side of the state.

"It looks like the heaviest snow will be confined to western Colorado and the mountains and not too much will fall in the east," said weather service forecaster Steve Markkanen. "The worst of this thing will be left in the mountains."

Panel Eyes Constitution For Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution's 200th birthday is three years away, but a bipartisan group is already studying what changes might be made to improve the way government works in the future.

"We want to find out if it is possible to improve the decision-making process and the accountability of public officials," Lloyd Cutler, counsel to former President Jimmy Carter and co-chairman of the Committee on the Constitutional System, said Wednesday.

While many people blame elected officials, particularly the president, when things go wrong in government, Cutler said, "Some of us have concluded there isn't that much wrong with the people — there is something wrong with the structure."

The 250-member committee, which includes about 150 former and present members of Congress, the Cabinet and the White House, aims to have its recommendations in hand by mid-1985.

That timetable would allow for any possible action by Congress in time for the 1987 bicentennial of the Constitution's signing in Philadelphia.

Besides Cutler, the other co-chairmen are Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and C. Douglas Dillon, a former Treasury secretary. The committee's members include Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh and author James MacGregor Burns.

Cutler said there's a chance the committee will decide the Constitution is working well and doesn't need reshaping.

OPEC Calls Special Price Meeting

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said today it will hold a special oil ministers' meeting Oct. 29 in Geneva to plan a defense of the cartel's oil prices in the wake of price cuts by Norway and Britain.

OPEC spokesman Gonzalo Plaza said the "open-ended" meeting would be held to discuss the current situation and "consider ways and means that could eventually be taken to defend the present price structure."

In Lagos, Nigeria, the country's Executive Council was meeting today to consider oil prices, a source at the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. said.

Britain and Nigeria produce similar grades of oil, and Britain's lowering of its price was expected to undercut Nigeria in oil markets. Britain is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, while Nigeria is a member.

Nigeria's head of state, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, who is a former oil minister, presides over the Executive Council, which includes other top figures in the military government.

Last year a price cut by the British National Oil Corp. triggered a reduction by Nigeria.

YOU CAN'T HAVE IT BOTH WAYS MR. TAFT!

TOM TAFT...LIBERAL, CONSERVATIVE, OR MODERATE?

On May 30, 1984, my opponent, Tom Taft, speaking to the Beaufort County Democratic Women said he was a "moderate" and even admitted he was "liberal on some issues". (Washington Daily News May 31, 1984) and he is passing out literature and information saying he is conservative.

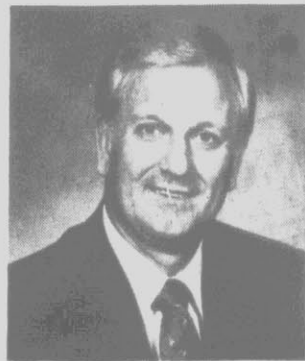

TOM TAFT...A COG IN THE HUNT MACHINE

Tom Taft has long been closely allied with Jim Hunt. Taft's political resume consists almost entirely of political plums he received as a loyal foot soldier in the Hunt organization. The connection goes back to Hunt's term as Lieutenant Governor, when Taft was employed in Hunt's office. That has long been Hunt's so-called "KEY" (Key Supporter) in Pitt County.

Jim Hunt is certainly no conservative. And Tom Taft isn't either!

MAYNARD WATERS...A MAN WHO KNOWS WHERE HE STANDS

Maynard Waters doesn't have to put his finger in the air to see which way the wind is blowing to know what his political philosophy is. He is a conservative. He has always been a conservative. He aligns himself with Ronald Reagan, Jesse Helms and Jim Martin, not Walter Mondale, Jim Hunt, and Rufus Edmisten. Let's elect a genuine conservative!

IN THE STATE

Alexander Stepping Down

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Although he's stepping down after 37 years as president of the state NAACP, Kelly Alexander Sr. says he will continue to fight for political and economic equality for blacks as chairman of the national NAACP board.

Alexander took the national position in January.

"I've made my contribution — my track record stretches from here to California," said Alexander, 69. "I was a pioneer organizer of the state branch. (Leaving his post) doesn't mean I'm quitting the NAACP. There is no doubt about me keeping the organization a viable unit of the national association."

Alexander leaves a state branch with 35,000 members and 136 local units — a statewide organization he says is one of the strongest in the nation.

About 500 NAACP members, delegates and candidates seeking statewide offices in the Nov. 6 election will participate in the 41st NAACP state convention in Charlotte which runs Thursday through Sunday. Alexander will make his 37th and final state president's convention speech Friday.

The contenders to replace Alexander include his son, Kelly Alexander Jr., president of the 1,500-member Charlotte NAACP branch, and George Frazier, president of the 500-member Durham branch.

Craven Raises Courthouse Flags

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The flags were raised at the Craven County Courthouse Wednesday after several people complained about the flags being flown at half-mast in honor of a county commissioner who, authorities said, killed his wife and then himself.

"We do not honor murders," said Sidney French of Cove City, chairman of the county commissioners.

The U.S. flag and state flag were lowered after word of the deaths Monday of Robert F. Webb and his wife, Agnes, in Dade County, Fla. County officials at the time did not know the circumstances of the deaths, French said.

Husband Charged In Beating, Fire

CEDAR FALLS, N.C. (AP) — A Randolph County man was arrested Tuesday and charged with beating his wife until she was unconscious and then setting fire to their frame house, police say.

Floyd Clay Allred, 53, was arrested Tuesday and charged with first-degree arson and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to inflict serious injury, according to Randolph County Sheriff Robert Mason.

Allred's wife, Peggy Allred, was in the intensive care unit at Randolph Hospital Tuesday. A spokesman for the hospital said Allred's family had requested that her condition not be released.

Mason said the investigation by his department indicated that Mrs. Allred had been "beaten in the head with some type of object" until conscious and that some type of flammable substance had been used to set fire to the family home in Cedar Falls, a small community about 4 miles northwest of Asheboro.

Historian Is Honored

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University historian John Hope Franklin was awarded the Jefferson medal in a ceremony in Washington this week.

The medal, named for Thomas Jefferson, honors "a college graduate who has made extraordinary contributions to American society." Previous recipients include Father Theodore Hesburgh, the president of Notre Dame, and John Gardner, the founder of Common Cause.

Franklin, a James B. Duke professor of history, is the author of a book "From Slavery to Freedom: A History of Negro Americans," which has sold more than 900,000 copies.

The Jefferson Medal is awarded by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, the international professional organization for college and university administrators in fund-raising, public relations, alumni administration and publications.

Research Projects Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — The research of several North Carolina State University scientists will be featured in Life Magazine and National Geographic and on the Public Broadcasting Service television program "Nova."

In the November issue of Life Magazine, a photo story on acid rain will include the work of Dr. Ellis B. Cowling, associate dean for research in the School of Forest Resources, and Dr. Robert I. Bruck, assistant professor of plant pathology and forestry.

On Nov. 11, the PBS program "Nova" will include film of Cowling and Bruck at research plots on Mount Mitchell. Bruck said the hour-long program will look at the acid rain issue from an international perspective and give the most current update.

Trawler Capsizes In Oregon Inlet

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — A 37-foot trawler capsized on a sandbar at Oregon Inlet Wednesday, but two people aboard were rescued, Coast Guard officials said.

Coast Guard officials said James Meekins and his son, both of Stumpy Point, held onto the boat after it capsized and were picked up by a Coast Guard lifeboat.

An airlock in the boat gave way and it sank in the inlet, officials said. The boat is almost submerged and has been marked with a buoy. Mariners are being warned the boat could float free from the sandbar.

Jordan Considered Front- Runner In Race For Lieutenant Governor

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Jimmy Green's eight-year reign as lieutenant governor is drawing to a close, and the race to succeed him pits a moderate legislative veteran against a conservative businessman and political newcomer.

State Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, is generally considered the front-runner in the campaign for the second-ranking office in North Carolina government. The Republican candidate is John Carrington of Raleigh.

As chairman of the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee, Jordan has played an integral role in setting spending priorities. He displayed political and organizational skills in defeating former House Speaker Carl Stewart for the Democratic nomination.

Carrington captured the GOP nomination in a runoff against Frank Jordan, a little-known salesman who acknowledged that voters might have confused him with Bob Jordan.

However, both nominees agree an upset is possible — largely because in addition to being a classic case of insider vs. outsider, the race presents sharply contrasting campaign styles.

Jordan is working within the Democratic organization, attending party functions and attempting to build support on the district and precinct levels. Carrington is investing heavily in television commercials portraying himself as tough on inefficiency and crime and his opponent as soft on crime and a member of the Legislature's "good ole boy" network.

Carrington's advertising worries Jordan, who remembers that in 1980 John East used television to perfection in unseating Democratic U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan.

"We know that he's made the comment to some people that if you spend enough money anything can happen," Jordan said. "He said at the Republican Convention that his campaign would be short on speeches and long on media. We know that's his focus, and it has impact."

Carrington denies saying that he wants to "buy" the election, pointing out that he spent $137,000 for the primary campaign while Jordan spent more than $800,000. He acknowledged that he hasn't made as many personal appearances as Jordan has, but says it's in keeping with his determination to be independent.

"I'm getting to the events that I feel are touching people," he said. "I really think it's unfair to say I have been inactive. I have turned down a lot of invitations to what I call self-serving, self-interest groups."

The centerpiece of Jordan's campaign strategy is to contrast his 27 years of political activity against Carrington's inexperience. He served on the Mount Gilead town council and as a Montgomery County commissioner before entering the Senate, where he's served for eight years.

Carrington, president of The Sirchie Group, a corporation that manufactures law enforcement equipment, moved to North Carolina from New Jersey 10 years ago. He hadn't registered to vote in this state until February of this year, for which Jordan has chided him. Carrington acknowledges he was remiss, but says he was immersed in his work and often overseas.

"He has no issues of his own, no experience," Jordan says of his opponent. Carrington likens himself to a graduate seeking his first job, only to be told he lacks experience. "The founding fathers ... had no intentions of making politics a profession," he said.

Furniture Market Outlook 'Bright'

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — This week's drop in the prime rate should fuel purchases of home furnishings and another decline is possible, officials of the fall Southern Furniture Market in High Point say.

The decrease in the prime from 12.75 percent to 12.5 percent among major banks "is the best news possible" for today's market opening, Robert P. Gruenberg, general manager of the Southern Furniture Market Center, said in his opening statement.

"Prospects are bright for an even further decline," Gruenberg said. "Stores across the country for the most part are enjoying a very positive year. Retail business in September was excellent and inventories are not too fat."

During the southern market, held every April and October, some 1,337 furniture manufacturers from around the world display their products in showrooms from Lenoir to Burlington. About 800 of the lines are on display at the High Point center, which has 53 acres of showroom space in five connected buildings. This fall's market lasts until Oct. 26.

outshine Carrington that he's agreed to a half-hour debate on statewide television Oct. 26. "Normally, with a lead like I have we'd tend to stay away from that," he said. "But I have reason to believe that the public would benefit from seeing us together."

Carrington says Jordan agreed to debate because he knows the audience is small and because "I'm quite nervous" in front of cameras. But he says he's becoming used to public appearances and "I would be glad to debate him on nationwide television if he wants to."

The candidates haven't staked out sharply differing views on many issues. One is abortion: Carrington opposes it and Jordan advocates state-funded abortions for poor women. Both support the death penalty.

As a lumber company executive, Jordan portrays himself as pro-business conservative on fiscal issues but "progressive" on social issues such as day care.

Attempting to blunt an issue raised by both Stewart and Carrington, Jordan acknowledges that leadership in the state Senate — over which the lieutenant governor presides — is "stagnant." He promises to spread power among more senators through committee chairmanship appointments.

Carrington says if elected he would push for more funding of vocational education to provide workers for small and medium-sized firms. He advocates "cutting the budget and utilizing our resources where we're poorest," and says state government is inefficient and should be run like a business.

No Republican has been elected lieutenant governor this century, but Carrington says North Carolinians may slowly be recognizing that the lack of a strong two-party system is hampering progress in the Legislature.

"I think the people ... are going to wake up and say, 'Hey, it's much better to have two opinions,'" he said. "Competition absolutely brings success, and it's healthy."

Educators Debate Corporal Punishment

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Does corporal punishment in schools lead to child abuse or is it the only effective tool against abusive students who tell their teachers, "You can't touch me."

A Senate subcommittee on juvenile justice heard both sides of the story Wednesday, including testimony from a young woman from North Carolina who said a paddling she received in high school in 1981 was "the worst pain I've felt in my life. I felt violated."

"The acceptance by adults that they have a right to do as they will with the bodies of children leads to the enormous problem of physical and sexual abuse of American children," said Dr. Irwin A. Hyman, professor of school psychology at Temple University and director of the National Center for the Study of Corporal Punishment and Alternatives in the Schools.

But a West Virginia school principal said he believes that, with the proper controls, corporal punishment can be an effective disciplinary tool.

Without the use of corporal punishment, said Paul V. Armstrong, president-elect of the West Virginia Association of Elementary School Principals, "I have witnessed an increase in students talking back to the teachers, making the remark, 'you can't touch me' and even, 'I don't want to, what are you going to do about it?'"

The witnesses appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on juvenile justice whose chairman, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., is holding a series of hearings on violence as it affects juveniles.

"Child abuse is merely an extension of the concept that hitting children is acceptable," said Hyman. "When educators are permitted to, or encouraged to, hit children, parents feel there is a societal sanction for this behavior. As a result, there is a misperception by many which leads to our alarming rate of child abuse. We can begin to address this issue by training teachers not to hit children and to use more rational methods."

Hyman also said "excessive use (of corporal punishment) has been found to decrease learning. It arouses aggression against others and against school property."

But Armstrong told the subcommittee, "I do not believe administering corporal punishment for fighting teaches aggression anymore than I believe receiving a speeding ticket teaches you to be a race car driver. I admit that in the past individuals may have been harmed physically or mentally by corporal punishment. However, I believe with the proper controls corporal punishment can be an effective disciplinary tool."

Shelly Sue Gaspersohn, 20, of Dunn, N.C., testified that she received six thrashes with a wooden paddle by the assistant principal of her high school in 1981 when she played hooky one day — the first time she had ever broken a school rule.

"The force was so great that massive bruises appeared on my buttocks," she said. "Throughout the next two days I hemorrhaged and had to see a doctor. Dr. John Smith examined me and reported my case to Social Services as child abuse. I was given estrogen to stop the heavy bleeding."

She said she and her parents sought to discipline the school official, Glenn Varney, through the Harnett County School Board, which investigated and found no foul play. They filed suit and, on Dec. 16, 1983, a Superior Court jury in the county found no wrongdoing on the part of Varney or the school board.

Marlene L. Gaspersohn, Shelly's mother, said an appeal of the verdict was filed Oct. 4 with the appellate court of North Carolina.

"I've never, ever been hit like that before," said the woman. "It was the worst pain I've felt in my life. I felt violated."

Mrs. Gaspersohn testified that "an alternative discipline to corporal punishment of raking leaves would have been offered to Shelly had she been a boy." Girls were not offered this alternative, she said.

Varney's office at Dunn High School, responding to a telephone call, said he was away and could not be reached for comment. The school principal also was unavailable.

Edmisten Apologizes

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten apologized for calling his Republican opponent's campaign chief a convicted felon, saying the statement was incorrect.

"He (Edmisten) has apologized and asked that I would accept his apology sincerely. I think we will just let it lay there," Jack Hawke, campaign manager for Republican candidate U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, said after Wednesday's statement by Edmisten, the state attorney general.

Hawke said he was federal co-chairman of the Coastal Plains Regional Commission when he was convicted in U.S. District Court in 1978 of conspiracy and conflict of interest.

Hawke appealed the conviction, which was vacated by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on a procedural error and returned to then U.S. Attorney Jim Blackburn. Blackburn's office dismissed the case June 20, 1980.

Hawke said the appeals court ruling wiped his slate clean.

"He (Edmisten) inaccurately stated what had happened," Hawke said. "The federal appeals court ruled that I had not received a fair trial. They vacated the order."

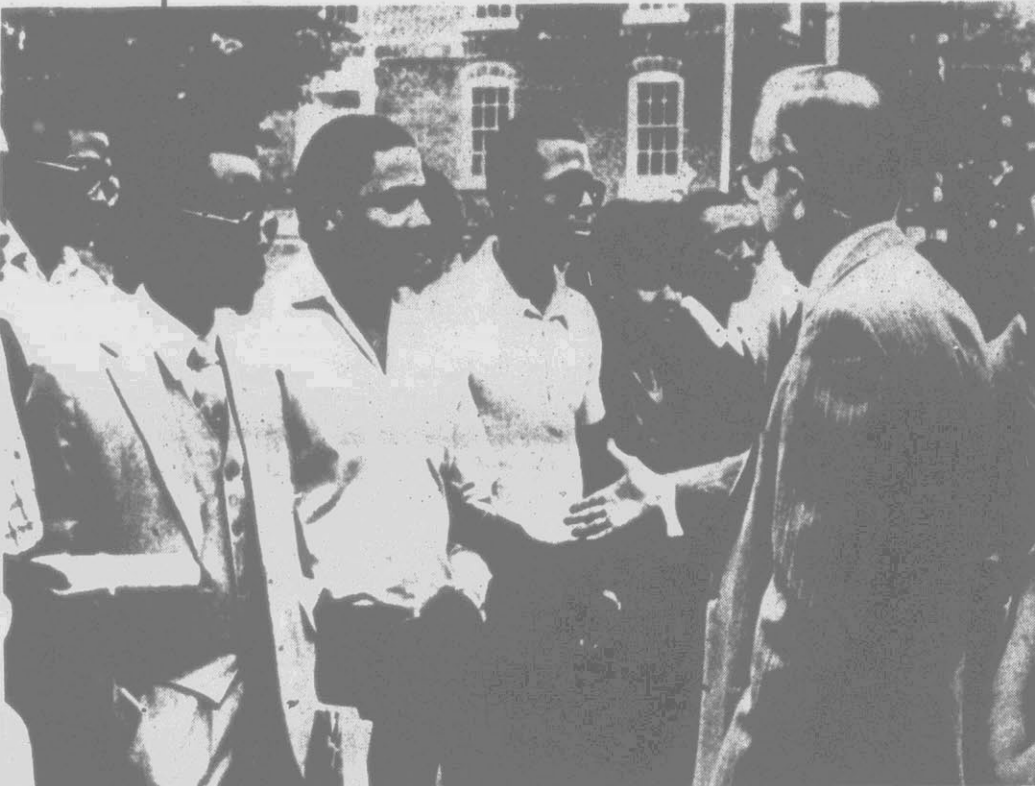

Hawke said Edmisten told him he made the remark about Hawke "in the heat" of answering questions from reporters at his own news conference earlier in the day.

Hawke said he thought Edmisten's comment stemmed from frustration at being unable to challenge Martin's integrity.

"To me, it's a little bit shocking that the leading law enforcement officer in the state didn't know the law ... It was my contention then, it is my contention now that there was no violation of the law," the campaign chief said.

Edmisten's comments came during a news conference to announce endorsements he won from the North Carolina League of Conservation Voters and 26 of the state's 31 Democratic district attorneys.

Hunt Calls For Import Bans, Helms Sees College Boycott

By The Associated Press
Gov. Jim Hunt called for restrictions on textile imports as he stopped at industries in Burlington and Greensboro, while his opponent, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, took his campaign to a predominantly black college for the first time.

Meanwhile, a conservationists voting organization endorsed Rufus Edmisten for governor, and the Edmisten organization also announced that a majority of Democratic district attorneys also support the attorney general's campaign.

Helms told a black audience of about 100 people at Livingstone College Wednesday that the Democratic Party had been "jerked you around for 35 years."

"You'd better start listening to people you think you don't agree with," the Republican senator said to scattered applause as about 200 students at the 750-student school linked arms outside in protest.

Hunt took his U.S. Senate campaign to textile territory, saying imports had gotten "completely out of hand" and criticizing what he called Helms' failure to protect the industry.

Hunt said he supported free trade, but that "our textiles have got to have some help" and called for tougher restrictions on imports, which he said had cornered 50 percent of the world apparel market and cost 35,000 jobs in the state over the past four years.

The North Carolina League of Conservation Voters announced Wednesday that it was endorsing Edmisten because of his efforts to preserve the New River and Jockeys Ridge, and for his willingness to listen to conservationists.

Edmisten's organization also said that he had received the endorsement of 26 of 31 Democratic district attorneys. A statement released by Edmisten's office Wednesday said the endorsements were made by individuals, not the N.C. Association of District Attorneys and "represent expressions of professional, rather than political support."

Edmisten also addressed a group of school principals Wednesday saying he would oppose bringing in people from outside a school to evaluate its teachers if he were elected governor.

Edmisten, in a speech to the North Carolina Principals-Associate Principals Association, said a "career ladder" plan proposed by the State Board of Education "needs a lot of cleaning up."

Meanwhile, Edmisten's Republican opponent, U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, made campaign stops in Goldsboro and Wilson, and said he expected Edmisten to criticize his congressional voting record — but he said he would use the campaign as a forum to expose the attorney general's record.

"Any time my opponent criticizes me there are going to be two quick responses," Martin said at a Democrats for Martin rally in Wilson Wednesday. "The first will be to respond to the accusations ... and then to defend my conservative voting record."

"And if I'm going to be put on the defensive to explain and account for my voting record he is going to have the same responsibility," Martin added.

In other political news, Denny Shaffer, the former president of the Sierra Club, said in Charlotte Wednesday, that Helms answers during Saturday's debate on the subject of acid rain were inadequate.

Shaffer said acid rain is a problem to North Carolina, citing studies of the rise in stream acidity in the mountains and the defoliation of red spruce trees on Mount Mitchell.

"Controlling acid rain is exactly what Jim Hunt is committed to do and what Jesse Helms has refused to consider," Shaffer said.

Meanwhile, a Hunt campaign adviser in Charlotte Wednesday blasted what he called the intolerance of the "religious right" and urged the state's mainline churches to reject its "witch-hunt mentality."

Safety Board Says Magneto Was Off On Edmisten Plane

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The accidental cutoff of an engine may have caused the plane crash that killed Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's chief political strategist on March 20, a National Transportation Safety Board report shows.

In the report, obtained by The Fayetteville Observer from NTSB's regional office in Atlanta, investigator Walter Stiner says the plane's left magneto, which sends power to the left engine of the plane, "was in the off position."

Administrative Deputy Attorney General Charlie Smith died from injuries sustained in the 10:05 p.m. crash near the Asheville Regional Airport and five others on board received minor injuries.

Piloting the twin-engine Piper Seneca aircraft was Fayetteville resident Craig Gurgew, who along with his brother operates Flight Unlimited Inc., out of Fayetteville

Municipal Airport.

The official cause of the fatal crash has not been determined by the NTSB, whose three-member board in Washington, D.C., reviews the report's findings. A spokesman with the board said it will be several months before the board reviews the report and makes a decision.

But the fact-finding report discusses at great lengths the link between the magneto switch being found in the off position and the landing light switch being found in the on position. Once a plane is airborne, the landing lights should be off while the megneto is on.

The report added that the landing light switches are located "just below the left magneto switches" and that except for the flap-type guard over the magneto switches, the switches "feel and operate identically to turn to the off and on positions."

Two pilots not involved in the accident who were contacted by The Observer confirmed that the switches could be mistaken for each other during a flight.

"Yeah, it's possible," said pilot instructor Pete Stamm of Hickory. "You have to consider such things as pilot fatigue ... but at that close proximity, it's very easy."

The report also says the aircraft was nearly 100 pounds above its limit for takeoff and the weight of the six passengers and their luggage were not properly balanced inside the craft.

Gurgew denied requests for an interview Wednesday, saying that since the safety board has not met on the accident, he is not in a position to discuss it.

The 136-page report includes interviews with Gurgew and all of the plane's passengers, affidavits from several Asheville airport air traffic controllers who saw the crash, several test results, a transcript of the dialogue between Gurgew and the controller before the crash, and several charts and photographs.

Panel Says Steps Needed To Protect Potential Targets

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bank computers, electric power grids and telephone systems should be safeguarded against terrorist sabotage intended to disrupt or cripple society, a panel of military and foreign affairs experts says.

The computerization of records makes banks and other financial institutions attractive targets for sabotage, according to a report published by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies entitled "America's Hidden Vulnerabilities."

"Imagine what would happen to the personal finances of everyone in this room if a terrorist destroyed records of bank accounts, investments, Social Security and mortgages all at once," R. James Woolsey, a former Navy undersecretary, said Tuesday at a briefing on the report.

"We've changed the nature of what 'property' signifies in this country," Woolsey said, noting that increasing numbers of records are kept only in computers, not on paper.

Computers are vulnerable to sabotage or even playful mischief such as the insertion of a random error into the system, he said.

"The 1983 movie 'War Games' was an amusing but disturbing glimpse into the world of the computer hacker and the computer and telecommunications network that has become increasingly critical to our way of life," the report says.

The film shows young computer buffs who break into a Pentagon command system and almost start a nuclear war.

"Fortunately, the military has taken precautions to see that this particular scenario could not occur. But most teleprocessing systems are not nearly as well protected," the report said.

In the financial world four vulnerable fund transfer networks exchange amounts of money equal to the federal budget — $845 billion — every two to four hours, the report says.

Woolsey suggested that central computers be better protected, that the system be operated to make tallies every few hours, so that errors can be checked, and that basic information be kept in some place other than the main computers.

After society devises security measures to thwart truck bombings, terrorists will turn to sabotaging computers, power grids and telecommunications systems to upset stability, predicted Robert H. Kupperman, co-chairman of the panel that drafted the report.

This has already occurred to some extent in Spain, Italy, West Germany and Peru, he said.

Kupperman recalled the foiled attempt by Puerto Rican terrorists to black out Madison Square Garden in New York during the Democratic Party convention of 1980.

He emphasized the danger of accident as well as terrorism to interrelated networks of electric power, telecommunications and transport.

The report details the accidents and coincidences that caused the 1977 blackout of New York: key equipment down for repairs, two lightning strikes, machinery that worked badly and was poorly maintained, a confused control room operator and a supervisor who had to read his complex diagrams by kerosene lantern. Lights went out, machinery halted; subways, railways and elevators stopped, water did not run and all sanitary systems failed.

Although the blackout lasted only 24 hours, Kupperman pointed out that if it had lasted much longer the city would also have been without any motor transport because fuel pumps are powered by electricity.

The report recommends that improvements be sought through a new joint committee of Congress, a small special staff in the White House and a council of industry to be set up by the National Academy of Engineering.

Driver Charged In Collision

Greenville Police charged Rachel T. Beasley of Farmville with having improper brakes following a North Greene Street traffic accident Wednesday.

Also involved in the incident was Robert Junior Barnhill of 609 Chestnut St. Damages to the Beasley car were estimated at $300 and $400 to the Barnhill vehicle.

Also charged Wednesday in an unrelated incident was James Arthur Anderson of 1404 Myrtle Ave. Police charged Anderson with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident following a Memorial Drive collision involving the car Anderson was driving, a vehicle operated by Eric Olander Barnes of Bethel and a third car driven by Clarence Dewey Whitehurst III of Stokes. Damages were estimated at $1,300 — $800 to the Anderson car, $450 to the Barnes vehicle and $50 to the Whitehurst car.

No charges were pressed in a Jarvis Street accident Wednesday involving cars operated by Helen Jackson Allen of 2305 E. Fifth St. and Annie William Bryant of 1013 W. Fourth St. Damages to the Allen car totaled $600. The Bryant car was not damaged.

Police reported a hit-and-run traffic accident Tuesday involving a car owned by Jarlath Mackenna of 400 Martinsboro Road. According to reports, the Mackenna car was struck by a hit and run vehicle while it was parked in a Pitt County Memorial Hospital parking lot. Damages to the Mackenna car were estimated at $1,000.

Joseph Mark Cox of Rt. 2, Ayden, was charged with following too closely following a Tuesday traffic accident involving the car Cox was driving and a vehicle operated by John Adraine Thompson of Canada. Damages in the Evans Street accident were estimated at $1,100 — $300 to the Cox car and $800 to the Thompson vehicle.

Also reported Tuesday was an accident in the Farm Fresh parking lot involving a parked car owned by Ruth Clark Miller of Rt. 2, Greenville, and a hit and run vehicle. Damages to the Miller car were estimated at $1,000.

No charges were pressed in a Tuesday accident in the Plaza parking lot involving a car driven by Freddie Louis Bryant of 2653 Oswego Ave. and a parked car owned by Barbara Warlick Stephens of Raleigh. Damages to the Stephens car were estimated at $500. The Bryant car was not damaged.

No one was injured and no charges were pressed in a Memorial Drive accident involving Judith Roebuck Dail of 2604 Cherokee Dr. and Delores Williams Evans of No. 43, Greenway Apartments, Tuesday. Damages were estimated at $600 — $300 to each car.

Special dashboard permits and license plates for handicapped parking can be purchased at the State License Agency, 718 Dickinson Avenue, or call 758-1193 for information.

Selling Program

Edward Leaders, a sales/communications specialist, will conduct a one-day program called "Telephone Selling" in several North Carolina and Virginia cities this fall. He is sponsored by East Carolina University.

North Carolina dates include: Greenville, Oct. 29; Fayetteville, Oct. 30; Greensboro, Nov. 1; and Raleigh, Nov. 2.

Virginia dates are: Arlington, Nov. 5; Richmond, Nov. 7; and Norfolk, Nov. 8.

For more information contact Dr. Karl Rodabaugh of the division of continuing education at ECU, 757-6143.

Conference Planned

"Developing Understanding: A Conference on Teaching about Japan," a program scheduled for Oct. 25-26 at East Carolina University, will feature three half-day sessions concerning Japan and Japanese people.

The conference, designed for social studies teachers, is open to the public. Topics of the main sessions are Japan and its people from three perspectives: historic-geographic, social-cultural and economic-political. Each session will begin with an address followed by five sub-session programs.

For more information contact the division of continuing education at ECU.

Drug Charges

Greenville police reported the arrest of Linwood Earl Prince of 1301 Ward St. on drug charges Wednesday.

Investigating officers said Prince, 50, was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Space Camps

East Carolina University faculty member Mindy Machanic, coordinator of environmental design in the school of art, will be among 60 participants in the first space camps program for adults at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., later this month.

The three-day camps consist of meetings with space scientists, visits to the NASA research facility, training sessions and space shuttle mission simulations.

The program will feature sessions similar to those used for training shuttle pilots and crew members.

Accepted At School

Ellis Jennings Bedsworth Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Ellis J. Bedsworth of Bethel, has been accepted to attend North Carolina Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount next spring.

Bedsworth, a graduate of North Pitt High School, attended East Carolina University. He plans to major in business administration.

Barbecue Sale

Carson Memorial Pentecostal Holiness Church members will sell barbecue Friday at lunch and dinner. The cost will be $3.

Jordan Visit

Bob Jordan, Democrat candidate for lieutenant governor, campaigned Wednesday in Greenville with a visit to East Carolina University arranged by Dr. Anthony Papalas of the history department.

Jordan, who flew to Greenville Tuesday night, was a guest at a reception at the Brewster Building where students, staff and faculty had an opportunity to meet and talk with the candidate.

Jordan, a native of Mt. Gilead, has been a member of the state Senate since 1977.

Treasure Club

The Tarheel Treasure Club will hold its monthly meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at the Greenville Community Building, Fourth and Greene streets. Lee Bowman will discuss researching techniques of potential hunt sites.

Council Appoints Agency Members

The Greenville City Council in regular session Oct. 11 appointed the following to serve on city boards and commissions:

Human Relations Commission — Rufus Huggins and Carl Tadlock were reappointed to second terms and Mrs. Wilma T. Dupree was appointed to fill the expired term of Mrs. Gladys Sanders. Student representatives appointed included Curt Hendrix and Churchill Thompson of Rose High School and Lee Lane and Kirk Shelly of East Carolina University.

Sheppard Memorial Library Board — John C. William was appointed to a second term and Mack Beale was appointed to fill the expired term of Dr. Louis H. Zincone.

Board of Adjustments — Don Brown was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Larry Whitlow and Rev. J.M. Bragg was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Martin Goldfarb. Howard J. Cummings was appointed to fill the alternate one position vacated by Brown. A replacement for Rev. Bragg's unexpired term as alternate two will be filled next month.

Environmental Advisory Commission — Tom Tysinger, city engineer, was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Lee Murphy.

Wachovia Gives Scholarships To PCC Students

Two Pitt Community College students have been awarded full scholarships by Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, according to an announcement by PCC President Dr. Charles Russell.

The scholarships recipients are Sharon Elizabeth Langley of Ayden and Donald Lee McCoy of Winterville.

Ms. Langley is a 1983 graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School, a second-year student at PCC, majoring in electronic data processing. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Durwood V. Langley of Ayden, she has a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

McCoy is a 1983 graduate of D.H. Conley High School, a second-year student at PCC, majoring in agricultural business. The son of Mrs. Ann McCoy of Winterville, he has a 3.9 grade point average.

The scholarship awards were presented by Tom Bennett, regional vice-president of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Brewster Lecture

Dr. Hans A. Schmitt of the University of Virginia, an authority on modern European history, will deliver the annual Lawrence F. Brewster Lecture in History at East Carolina University Nov. 7.

Schmitt will speak on "The First Year of the Nazi Era: A Schoolboy's Perspective." A native of Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany, he was 12 years old when Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933.

Schmitt is past chairman of the European section, Southern Historical Association, and is the author of more than 40 articles on Germany, France, Austria, Prussia, Bismarck and European problems.

The Brewster lectures in history were founded by a gift from Dr. Lawrence F. Brewster, ECU professor-emeritus. This year's lecture will be at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center at ECU.

Cadet Recognized

Cadet Capt. Dan Hester of Farmville was one of 10 cadets in East Carolina University's Army ROTC detachment receiving awards recently for outstanding performance in military science activities.

A nursing major, Hester received the Distinguished Military Student Award. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hester of 105 S. Contentnea St.

The ECU Army ROTC program is in its second year of operation.

Cable Network

Open/net, a satellite/cable network delivering unedited coverage of state government meetings, will debut Friday on Greenville Cable TV Inc., channel 30, the firm has announced.

Open/net, the Open Public Events Network, will be broadcast each Friday through Dec. 7 from 8-10 p.m. During the latter part of the program, viewers will be able to dial (919) 733-6341 and ask questions or voice opinions to state officials serving as panelists.

The schedule and proposed topics for the broadcasts include: Friday, Revenue Laws; Inventory and Intangibles Taxes; Oct. 26, State Health Coordinating Commission; Nov. 2, Children's Mental Health; Nov. 9, People with Disabilities; Nov. 16, Government Operations; Nov. 23, Hazardous Waste, and Nov. 30, Jobs. The Dec. 7 topic will be announced.

The General Alumni Association of Elizabeth City State University met recently in Elizabeth City with Dr. Ruby L. Perkins, national president of the association, as the speaker.

Dr. Perkins is an English professor at Cheyney State University in Pennsylvania.

WTI Graduate

Nelson Lee Nichols of Greenville graduated recently from Wilson Technical Institute. He received a degree in emergency medical science.

Area Chairmen

Area chairmen have been announced for the North Carolina Reagan-Bush campaign committee in the 1st Congressional District.

Andy Andrews of Greenville will head the Pitt County committee. Other chairmen include: Randy Allen Ginn of La Grange, Greene County; Freddie Griffin of Williamston, Martin County; Ruth Guthrie and Rosamond N. Minges, Lenoir County co-chairmen, and Lee Winters of Washington, Beaufort County.

Hospitality House

Hospitality House, the WITN-TV, Channel 7 magazine hosted by Kay Currie, will air this week from 1:30 to 2 p.m. Saturday.

Guests on the show are Lynn and Fred Gerhart, professional furniture finishers from Niles, Mich. The two will talk about and demonstrate easy techniques for finishing furniture.

Beatrice Aycock and Barbara Owens, both of Farmville, will give details on the forthcoming concert by the N. C. Chamber Orchestra to be held in Farmville.

Saturday's show will also feature a taped interview with NBC actress Valerie Bertinelli, who will be seen from 9-11 p.m. Oct. 29 on NBC's "Shattered Vows." Ms. Currie has just returned from Hollywood where she taped interviews with 13 NBC stars for showing on future Hospitality House shows.

Homecoming Events

Black alumni of East Carolina University will participate in several events in addition to the regularly program of ECU's 1984 Homecoming this weekend.

Black alumni events begin Friday at 5 p.m. with a "block show" featuring members of ECU's black fraternities on the patio of Mendenhall Student Center. A pig picking will follow at Cherry Court clubhouse.

Saturday activities include a Fifth Street parade at 10 a.m., a noon tailgate party, football game at 2 p.m. and alumni mixer at the Moose Lodge after the game. A dance for black alumni will be held at the Holiday Inn at 8 p.m.

On Sunday, black alumni will hold a service of "worship in songs" at 10:30 a.m., followed by a black alumni meeting.

Interested persons should purchase tickets from Jacqui Hawkins at the ECU School of Medicine (2N49 Brody Building) in advance.

Resolution Passed

The Board of Bishops and the Connectional Council of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, in a recent closing session at St. Luke AME Zion Church in Wilmington, passed a resolution condemning the United States and Great Britain for abstaining on a vote that rejected inclusion of South Africa in the United Nations.

"The United Nations' action not to include South Africa in its ranks was based upon the apartheid and racist government which is evident in its constitution that excludes black participation in the legislative process," the organization said in a statement which carried the names of Bishop Alfred G. Dunston, Dr. C. Dupont Rippey, Mary A. Love and D.D. Garrett.

Bush Campaign Takes On Odd Twist

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In a little more than a week, Vice President George Bush's campaign has become filled with charges about salty remarks, accusations about shame, demands for apologies, and now, comments about his manhood.

The strange agenda of issues has emerged in what had been a low-key campaign up until Bush's debate last Thursday with Geraldine Ferraro.

Ever since that encounter, Bush has been trading fire with White House challenger Walter Mondale and his running mate, Ms. Ferraro, about his comments both in the debate and afterwards.

Peter Teeley, press secretary to the vice president, said Wednesday he was not disturbed by the odd twist of developments.

"We are very surprised that the Mondale-Ferraro campaign would waste five days by throwing bombs at us," Teeley said.

"We are more than willing to take the heat from the Mondale campaign," Teeley added. "All it does is free up the president to take the high road. It allows the president to get his message out."

Bush, whose family nickname is "Poppy," seems to be relishing the sudden new attention he has received since offering this post-debate assessment: "We tried to kick a little ass last night."

Calling attention to the controversy, Bush opened a foreign policy address Wednesday by saying that he and his wife Barbara "have been washing our mouths out with soap ever since" he made his off-color remark and his wife called Ms. Ferraro something that rhymes with "rich."

Teeley, asked why Bush keeps referring to his off-color remark, said, "We were just trying to laugh off the issue. They're (Democrats) trying to make it a serious one."

"In terms of votes, we're just laughing all the way to the bank," Teeley said.

In the debate, Bush also said that Mondale and Ms. Ferraro had suggested that American servicemen killed in Lebanon had "died in shame." Ms. Ferraro protested immediately that they had never said that, and Mondale demanded an apology.

When Bush refused, Mondale said, "He doesn't have an answer and he doesn't have the manhood to apologize."

Asked about Mondale's charge, Bush, in a somewhat confusing answer, replied, "I'll lay my record on any forum, whatever it is, on the manhood up against his. I'll just leave it at that."

Questioned again later, Bush said: "Desperation. We're getting near the election."

Charles T. Manatt, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said earlier this week in Los Angeles, "Shame on George Bush for using sexist, downgrading language toward Geraldine Ferraro."

Yet, Bush's remark seems to have created an identity for his often-overlooked campaign.

Fans at the World Series in Detroit and at rallies in California have shouted encouragement to Bush using his language.

Similarly, campaign signs have blossomed at his appearances, offering some variation of Bush's phrase. A speaker at the University of Southern California used the remark to describe Bush as a macho kind of guy.

By the time Bush reached Portland on Wednesday, campaign buttons had been produced, describing the vice president in the same locker-room language that he used.

Bush planned to tour a wool mill in Portland today before heading to Spokane and Seattle, Wash., for campaign appearances.

Arriving in Portland on Wednesday, Bush answered questions at a citizens' forum. He was challenged repeatedly on U.S. policy in Nicaragua and drew loud boos from some people on U.S. policy about nuclear war.

Denying an assertion by a woman that U.S. policy says a nuclear war could be won, Bush said, "Our policy is a nuclear war is not winnable and must not be fought."

When the vice president was challenged by someone else on the same point, Bush snapped, "I just answered it, I answered it fella, don't worry about it."

Mondale Rating Makes Him OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional candidates have shied from identifying themselves closely with presidential nominee Walter Mondale, say politicians in both parties, but Mondale's gains in the polls are making him a more welcome campaign companion.

Republicans, on the other hand, say their candidates for House and Senate seats have been eager all along for any kind of identification with President Reagan, and his dip in the polls after the first presidential debate did not diminish the demand for his political help.

"Any time a Congress or Senate candidate can get on a podium next to the president, they are very, very happy to do so," GOP National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said in an interview.

On the other hand, Fahrenkopf said, "In the South particularly and in the West, you don't see a lot of Democratic office holders up there being seen alongside the Democratic nominee."

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said the debate, in which polls showed Reagan the loser, brought no letup in requests by GOP Senate candidates for a chance to campaign alongside him.

Most Democrats painted a brighter picture of Mondale's popularity than Fahrenkopf did but conceded that some of their candidates had been reluctant to tie their campaigns closely to his, at least before his standing in the polls began to rise.

"I think for a while, when the polls were showing him at about 33 percent, it was thought that he wasn't going to be the most attractive candidate to campaign with," said George Behan, press secretary for Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash.

Behan said Dicks, a long-time Mondale supporter, had always welcomed the former vice president's help, but "some of his colleagues have been less interested in having him (Mondale) appear with them."

"Since the debate, interest in Mondale is picking up," Behan said.

A Texas Democrat said the biggest problem Democrats in his state were having with Mondale's candidacy was his proposal for a tax increase.

"They get hit with that, and they don't like it," he said. "That's the thing they shy away from."

Luke Roth, executive director of the Iowa Republican State Central Committee, said he thought Democratic candidates in Iowa were more comfortable appearing with vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro at a recent appearance than they were with Mondale.

"I don't think there was any problem with everyone gathering about her and letting her luminescence shine on them. Mondale maybe is a different story," he said.

Scott Widmeyer, a Mondale spokesman, said interest on the part of congressional candidates had increased since Congress adjourned and the polls started going up for Mondale.

Cambridge Prof Wins Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sir Richard Stone of Cambridge University today was named winner of the 1984 Nobel prize in economics for his development of accounting systems that help governments allocate their financial resources.

Stone, 71, became the fourth Briton to win the Alfred Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics, which is sponsored by the Riksbank, Sweden's central bank.

His pioneering research, begun in the 1940s, concentrated on integrating a government's accounts for different economic sectors into a model for applying its resources, the Swedish Academy of Sciences said in a statement. The academy awarded the prize.

The academy said it honored Stone for "fundamental contributions to the development of systems of national accounts, and hence greatly improved the basis for empirical economic analysis."

"Systems for national accounts have since the 1950s had a unique international impact and are indispensable for the analysis of economic levels and structures," the academy said.

"At the same time, (they provide) a systematic backing for forecasts in the form of national budgets," it said.

Britain's previous laureates shared the economics prizes with other economists in 1972, 1974 and 1977.

The economics prize was established in 1969. Stone's award marked only the fourth time that economic theorists from the United States did not win or share the prize.

The academy statement said Stone "showed his mastery in finding routes for systematic statistical searches based on the requirements of the national accounts."

testified that he went to the hospital to see that the deputy guarding Gwin had been relieved at the end of his shift.

Parker said he asked Gwin who had injured him and that Gwin had replied, "a black state trooper wearing blue and a hat with GPD on it." Parker said that Gwin did not mention the color of the shoes the person who injured him was wearing.

Parker added that Gwin appeared to be coherent.

The state rested its case Wednesday after representatives of three local law enforcement agencies testified that they saw Sheriff's Deputy James M. Evans kick Gwin after the chase.

State's witnesses East Carolina University Police Officer Kelly L. Jackson, N.C. Highway Patrolman Ron Mills and Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Wayne Nobles each testified that they saw Evans kick Gwin.

Struggling Rampants Visit Kinston

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The return of Tom Moore to the Rose High School backfield was a help, but Coach Chip Williams said it wasn't enough to boost the Rampants to a victory last Friday over Wilson Beddingfield — despite holding a 20-7 lead at one time.

He called the return of a kickoff following the final Rampant touchdown the key to the 26-20 Beddingfield victory. "That was the most disappointing thing about the game," Williams said of the return that brought Beddingfield back into the game at 20-13. The Bruins came back after that to hold Rose in check and score twice more to pull out the win.

Tyrone Jones

Frankie Moore

One of those touchdowns came following a controversial call at the Rose 18 yard line as Beddingfield was going in for what proved to be the winning score. On the play, Beddingfield, at the Rose 10, pitched out, but the ball was fumbled and Rose came out with it. Flags were thrown at the 18-yard line and the ball was brought back and a penalty against Rose marked off from that spot and the ball returned to the Bruins.

At the time, the play made Williams very angry, and a review of the films of the game, while not showing conclusively whether possession had changed, still left a bitter taste in Williams' mouth.

"We didn't hit the quarterback any different on that play than we did on others earlier in the game. If we were wrong then, why weren't we wrong earlier. But they never warned us or said anything about the earlier hits, so I would assume they were okay. I don't see the difference."

Williams said if it was impossible to see in the films whether the fumble came before or after the hit. But it definitely showed that the hit came at some spot other than the 18 yard line. And — if the foul were against Rose before the fumble, it should have been marked off from the original line of scrimmage — the ten — instead of the 18.

"But it was the kickoff return that really makes me mad," Williams said. "We were arm-tackling. (Sam) Wells broke three arm-tackles on that run. We were up and had the momentum and let them take it back from us. It was the only way they could get back in the game and we let them do it."

Williams said that the Rampants kicked the ball from a flat position, hoping that it would curl away from Wells, but instead, it went right to him, giving him the chance to return it.

Williams said that the offensive line played better this past week, grading the highest in several weeks. "We still didn't get much rushing but getting Tom back did help. He's still not at full speed. If he had been, he might have broken a couple of runs."

Moore, who broke his leg in the second quarter of the opening game of the season, played for the first time last week. However, Anthony Cobb, who injured a knee against Eastern Wayne, continues to be sidelined, and Williams is now at the point where he doesn't expect Cobb to be productive again this season — at least not to the extent he was prior to the injury. He will be out at least until the Hunt game, the next to last contest of the year.

"Dwight Smith made a couple of key receptions for us. He adjusted well on a couple to come back and make the play and it was a great effort. Our offensive play for who we had in the game fit well, but we had to settle for two field goals when, with execution, we could have come up with touchdowns."

"But I guess that's high school

NCAA May Delay Rule

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association says an NCAA Council proposal would postpone a requirement that high school students reach minimum scores on standardized college entrance exams to be eligible for college sports.

In an interview Wednesday following a three-day closed meeting of the Council, NCAA President John Toner said the effective date of the requirement, criticized as unfair to blacks and other minorities, would be delayed from 1986 until 1988 under the Council proposal.

The proposal was sent to the President's Commission of the NCAA for review. If it is approved by the Commission, the full NCAA would vote on it at its January 1985 meeting.

The requirement has been criticized by those who say the standardized entrance exams are biased against minorities. Supporters say it would increase the likelihood that student athletes receive their degrees.

"It's quite evident from the research that there is a disparity of performance between minority students and whites (in test scores), but there is evidence that there's a catch-up in process — that scores are improving each year," Toner said.

"So in this two-year period it gives everyone a chance to test that. And if after two years it appears as if there is parity then I think there is an intent to maintain (Proposition) 48 as it is written. Now, if there isn't parity, there will be further adjustment."

ball. When you're winning, you score even if you don't execute that well," Williams added.

On defense, Williams noted, some people were playing in new roles but he was fairly pleased with the defense's performance despite giving up over 300 yards. "A lot of that came on big play passes and the draw," he said.

This week, the Rampants remain on the road for the second time in a row, playing at Kinston. The Vikings bring a 3-3 record into the contest and a 1-2 conference mark. The two teams have played two common opponents, New Bern and Jacksonville. Rose topped the Cardinals in the opener, 28-14, while Kinston fell in the third game to Jacksonville, 26-14. However, Rose tied New Bern, 7-7, a week after Kinston had beaten the Bears, 9-6.

Kinston's other non-conference game was a 29-12 win over Goldsboro.

In league play, the Vikings beat Hunt, 9-0, before falling to Wilson Fike, 40-6 and Northeastern, 26-21.

"They should have beaten Northeastern," Williams said. "They let them come back with a couple of kick returns. That makes it hard to overcome."

Williams said that from viewing films of last year's Kinston team he feels they are much improved over the 1983 season. "I understand that they have 41 people on the team and 32 of them are juniors, so they should be even better next year."

Kinston's offense is built around quarterback Junior Sims, "who does an excellent job," Williams said. "They like to mix it up, but they really like to get the ball to Sims on the sprint pass and go deep. He throws well and can hit 'em. He'll run if no one is open, but he can spot them. Our scout said that every pass he threw in the game was right on target and was either caught or dropped."

Rose, after having lost three in a row — all to conference foes — might be expected to begin having attitude problems, but Williams says no. "We've only had two kids to quit and that really didn't surprise me. Those that are here still have a good attitude. I know that it's hard for our seniors to see the light at the end of the tunnel because they won't be back next year, but the juniors can."

Ironically, the two who did quit the team were juniors.

Kickoff for the Kinston game is set for 8 p.m. at the Viking Field.

Rose returns home next Friday night to host top-ranked Wilson Fike.

Ziegler Set For Ayden Tourney

AYDEN — Pro golfer Larry Ziegler will be among six celebrities participating in the Third Annual University City Kiwanis Club Charity Golf Tournament, to be held at the Ayden Golf and Country Club on Monday, Nov. 5.

Ziegler will provide a demonstration of golf trick shots at 10 a.m. with a shotgun tee time following at 11 a.m.

In addition to Ziegler, other celebrities will include Whitey Herzog, manager of the 1982 World Champion St. Louis Cardinals baseball team; Red Schoendienst, assistant manager and coach of the Cards; Mike Shannon, former Cardinal second baseman and now "Voice of the Cardinals" as radio announcer for KOMX Radio in St. Louis; Gene Gieslmann, Cardinal trainer; and Roger Maris, former New York Yankee and home run king.

Some 144 players are expected to participate in the tournament. The entry fee is $75 per player, and anyone interested in playing should call Glenn Fisher at 758-1189.

The Kiwanis Club of Ayden-Grifton will serve a light noon meal and dinner during the tournament. The event will serve as a fund-raiser for both the University City and Ayden-Grifton Kiwanis Clubs, with net funds returned to the respective communities in the form of service projects.

USFL Sues NFL Over 'Antitrust'

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League charges in a $1.32 billion antitrust suit that the National Football League is conspiring to beat back a challenge to its "monopoly" on fall football.

The USFL, for two seasons a spring-summer "alternative" to the traditional fall football, filed the suit Wednesday in federal court. It accused the NFL of involvement in "a conspiracy" to destroy the USFL through a monopoly on players, stadium leases and television contracts.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle termed the suit "totally baseless. I think it is ridiculous to be suing on the basis of what they have done."

Last spring, Rozelle had hinted that legal action might signal the death throes of the USFL.

"You will know when they are on their last legs. They will bring a lawsuit against us," Rozelle told The Boston Globe after the NFL meetings. "This will be how they try to keep the owners from jumping ship. They will hold out their suit as a way of getting their money back if they stay around."

Donald Trump, owner of the USFL's New Jersey Generals, disagreed.

"I predict we'll be victorious on the basis that the NFL has totally placed itself in a monopoly position," Trump said. "The NFL has taken control of all three television networks, so there is little room for competition. Their draft practices, including a supplemental draft of USFL players, were designed to damage the USFL. They also have sought to damage us with other rules."

Trump, interviewed early today on ABC's "Good Morning America," said the networks suffer from a "fear of the NFL."

"Somebody here has got to break this monopoly," Trump said. "If we do, this league (the USFL) will be successful."

Attorney Roy Cohn, appearing with Trump, said the NFL has prospered by "keeping out any type of competition." He was referring to the ill-fated All-America Conference, the American Football League, the World Football League and the USFL.

"The NFL intends to destroy the USFL, making them notch number four on their belts," Cohn added.

The USFL suit asks that NFL contracts with the three major television networks be voided and that the NFL's "monopoly" on player contracts and stadiums be broken.

ABC spokesman Irv Brodsky said the network would have no comment until it receives a copy of the suit. Attempts to reach CBS and NBC officials were unsuccessful.

Rozelle and the 28 NFL teams were named as defendants in the $440 million suit. Under antitrust law, the award would be tripled in the event of a favorable ruling.

It claims "there is a conspiracy" among NFL clubs "to create a complete barrier to the entry of a competitive league into the business of major league competitive football." Since the emergence of the USFL "the efforts of the defendants and their co-conspirators have been specifically directed at the elimination of the plaintiff USFL member clubs as competitors."

The suit asks: — That the NFL be "enjoined from negotiating with or making contractual offers with players currently under USFL contracts" before their contracts expire. Last year, the USFL signed a number of NFL players, including Cris Collinsworth of the Cincinnati Bengals, who is currently playing in the NFL and will report to the Tampa Bay Bandits of the USFL after the season.

— That NFL contracts with the three major television networks be declared illegal. USFL alternatives offered in the suit call for splitting the NFL into two 14-team leagues, each with a one-network contract, or limit the current 28-team league to contracts with no more than two networks.

— An end to such NFL practices as long-term contracts for the "most desirable stadia in metropolitan areas," granting expansion franchises in major metropolitan areas "to perpetuate their monopoly and preclude entry by any competitive professional football league into those areas," and controlling the "available pool of professional football players well beyond the reasonable player needs" of NFL clubs.

The USFL was formed in 1982 as what its founders said was a summer alternative to the NFL. The USFL came into being with two-year television contracts estimated at from $18 million to $22 million.

Last season, the league expanded from 12 to 18 teams and several of the franchises were sold, leaving only six of the original owners. It also spent millions to sign college stars like Steve Young, Herschel Walker and Mike Rozier and finished last season with losses estimated at $63 million.

Then, last August, despite ABC's extension of its contract for $15 million in 1985 and a new pact with ESPN valued at about $17 million a year, the USFL voted to switch seasons. It also has decided to consolidate from 18 teams to 12-14 teams for next year. The details of the consolidation may be worked out in meetings this weekend at Amelia Island, Fla.

The suit also stated that the USFL, since its first season in 1983, has been forced to play a spring schedule "given the monopoly of the NFL member clubs" in the fall season.

The USFL claimed it was able to secure a network TV contract with ABC, which "was willing to pay much less for the television rights of a 'spring football' league than it would" for a pro or major college fall football program.

Because of that, the court papers said, the USFL received only $9 million a year in television revenue for 1983 and 1984, while the NFL garnered "approximately $2.1 billion over the five-year period 1982-1986."

McNamara Expected To Be Named BoSox Chief

BOSTON (AP) — "He's a heck of a baseball man — and a darn good person," says Haywood Sullivan.

"He has good qualifications, most of the things we're looking for in a manager," says Lou Gorman.

With that support, John McNamara was expected to be introduced today as the new manager of the Boston Red Sox.

"I'm delighted," McNamara said as he arrived Wednesday night at Logan International Airport and declined to confirm his appointment. "You don't know how pleased, how thrilled I am to come to Boston."

He said he planned to meet Sullivan in the morning and was in Boston because "I want to see Boston College play."

The fourth-ranked Eagles football team plays this weekend at West Virginia.

The official announcement at an afternoon news conference at Fenway Park appeared a mere formality.

Sullivan, a co-owner and chief operating officer of the Red Sox, and Gorman, the club's general manager, all but signed McNamara during talks at the World Series in San Diego 10 days ago.

Sullivan and Gorman admitted that McNamara was their first choice to succeed retired Ralph Houk, 65, as Boston's field boss.

McNamara, 52, a major league manager for 10 full seasons and parts of three others, cleared the way to come to Boston by rejecting a contract to continue as manager of the California Angels.

"I put a lot of priority on major league experience," Sullivan said on the West Coast. "I wouldn't eliminate good people in our organization, but in this situation I think we need someone with experience in handling two different clubs. Half our team is experienced, half is very young. There's not much in between."

"We want to blend the character of the manager into the character of the team."

"He's a solid guy," said Gorman. "He's handled veteran clubs, he's handled kids and he was a sound organizational leader in the minor leagues."

Sullivan said he talked to "about six other candidates" after Houk decided to retire on Sept. 25.

McNamara and Sullivan have been close friends since they were in the Charlie Finley-owned Kansas City A's organization in the early 1960s.

McNamara was Sullivan's top choice for the Boston managerial job after Don Zimmer was fired in 1980. However, Houk was hired when he surprised everyone by ending a two-year retirement in Florida.

After meeting with Sullivan and Gorman during the World Series last week, McNamara said:

"The contract isn't a problem. It never has been with me, but especially not with Sully. All I can say right now is that I'm thrilled an excited. I feel extremely fortunate."

The Red Sox rarely disclose terms of any contract. However, McNamara reportedly would be paid $150,000 a year, the same as Houk received.

Sullivan admitted that formal announcement of the new manager was delayed for a few days after the World Series for maximum media coverage. The Red Sox also may have decided to wait until after the Angels announced that Gene Mauch, player personnel director, will return to managing in 1985.

McNamara, a journeyman catcher in the minor leagues, began managing at the age of 26 in 1959.

He became coach of the Oakland A's in 1968, and was named to replace Hank Bauer as manager on Sept. 19, 1969.

Fired by Oakland after a second place finish in 1970, he became a coach with the San Francisco Giants for three years.

Then, in 1974, he became manager of the San Diego Padres, remaining until he got the ax on May 30, 1977.

He coached with the Angels in 1978, then signed as manager of the Cincinnati Reds in 1979. The Reds won the National League West championship in his first year, finished second in 1980 and then had the best record in the major leagues in 1981, missing the playoffs because of the strike-interrupted, split season.

Tribe Wins VB Title

AURORA — It worked out this way — for Chocowinity's Lady Indians to win the Tobacco Belt Conference volleyball title it took three things: Aurora had to upset Belhaven, and then Chocowinity had to beat both Belhaven and Aurora.

And that's just what happened yesterday in the final tri-match of the season. Aurora upset the Lady Pirates in the first match of the day, 15-8, 15-2. Chocowinity then topped Belhaven, 15-12, 15-1, and finished off Aurora, 15-8, 15-2, to win the title.

The outcome left Chocowinity with a 4-2 mark, while Belhaven is 3-3 and Aurora, 2-4.

However, because only three of the league's schools sponsor the sport, Chocowinity will not be eligible for post-season state playoff action.

Chris Machado led the Indians in the first Belhaven game, serving up seven straight points. Twanda Gerald added five in a row in the contest. Gerald had seven straight in the second game while Keshia Smith added six. Kim Green and Zina Warren each had spikes in the match.

In the Aurora game, Gerald had six straight and a spike in the first game.

The match closed out the season for the three teams.

Women Top Kinston, 7-1

KINSTON — Greenville's entry into the Ladies Downeast Tennis League took a 7-1 victory over Kinston yesterday.

Greenville swept through the singles, losing only in the number six match. Greenville then won the first two doubles matches and the two teams mutually agreed not to play the number three doubles.

Summary:
 Carlie Wille (G) d. Sara Weeks, 6-3, 6-2.
 Frances Cain (G) d. Judy Whitlock, 6-1, 6-3.
 Nancy Powell (G) d. Marvel Turik, 6-1, 6-0.
 Sharon Ricks (G) d. Sye Oettinger, 6-0, 6-2.
 Mary Angela Lee (G) d. Eleanor Cummings, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.
 Emily Hartzog (K) d. Sydney Womack, 6-2, 6-3.
 Wille-Powell (G) d. Weeks-Whitlock, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2.
 Cain-Ricks (G) d. Turik-Oettinger, 6-1, 6-0.

Juniors In Net Victory

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's junior girls tennis team defeated Kinston Recreation yesterday, 13-0.

The Greenville team is now 5-0 and will play host to Wayne Country Day of Goldsboro today.

Summary:

Gina Parrott (G) d. Ashley Westbrook, 8-1.
 Nicole Maxon (G) d. Molly DeVau, 8-2.
 J.J. Powell (G) d. Marcella Squires, 8-0.

Tops In His League

Chicago Cubs' manager Jim Frey shares a laugh with reporters at a news conference in Chicago Wednesday after the Baseball Writers Association of America named him the 1984 National League Manager of the Year. In his first season with the Cubs, Frey took the team to the National league East Division title. (AP Laserphoto)

Frey Honored As Top Manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Frey, named National League Manager of the Year after leading the Chicago Cubs to their first title in 39 years, says his only incentive is to keep his job.

Asked whether his contract — which runs through the 1985 season — contained incentive clauses that would reward him for such awards, Frey, in a joking mood, told reporters Wednesday, "I didn't have any. My incentive is to try and not get fired."

Frey, in his 35th year in baseball, took the Chicago Cubs to the National East Division title in his second job managing. He had led the Kansas City Royals to the 1980 World Series in his first year as a major league manager.

Frey was named on 23 of 24 ballots in voting by members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, receiving 16 first-place votes and seven seconds for a total of 101 points. New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson was runner-up, followed by San Diego's Dick Williams, whose Padres won three straight from the Cubs to take the NL pennant.

"I'm honored and proud that people thought I did a good job, but it was the organization that went out and spent the money to get the ballplayers," Frey, 52, said. "A lot of people deserve credit; I'm just the guy who happens to be standing here."

But, the soft-spoken Frey admitted he was less than surprised about the award.

"We won more games than anybody in the National League, and I guess that put me in contention," he said.

But Frey said the award doesn't wipe out the disappointment of the playoff loss.

"I'm not going to feel good until something comes along that puts this (disappointment over losing to the Padres) out of my mind," said Frey. "I'll be thinking about it until spring training."

Frey spent 14 years kicking around the minor leagues, but despite attending spring training with several teams and being named the Texas League's Most Valuable Player in 1957, Frey never earned the right to call himself a major leaguer.

His playing days ended in 1963. Frey briefly tried making a living selling real estate in his native Cincinnati.

"Look at this body," the 5-foot-9 Frey said in a recent interview. "This isn't the body of a pro athlete."

He returned to baseball, minor league managing, scouting and coaching for the Baltimore Orioles.

Frey joined Billy Hunter and George Bamberger on an Orioles staff headed by Manager Earl Weaver. After Hunter and Bamberger both were given shots at managing big league clubs, Frey told his wife, Joan, that he would leave baseball if his chance didn't come soon.

'Black' Year For Gamecocks

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Football fans are wearing black at South Carolina games this season but they're not in mourning. That's just the way they dress to celebrate a 5-0 season and an 11th ranking — highest ever for the Gamecocks.

Responsibility for the color selection belongs to Joe Morrison, the Gamecocks' second-year coach who says he just happened to choose an all-black wardrobe for his very first South Carolina game last year.

"There's no rhyme or reason to all that," Morrison said in an interview this week. "The first time I was asked about that it took me by surprise."

"So I said, 'It was clean and it fit and it was hanging there.' And that, basically, is the way it happened."

Like it or not, Morrison — who played 14 years with the New York Giants — has started a fashion trend at South Carolina where winning seasons haven't been in style since 1980, the year George Rogers ended his college career.

"There is nothing on the racks in black," said D.H. "Jeff" Jefcoat, manager of a large department store in Columbia. "We are sold out."

Two Drivers Regain Rides

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — NASCAR drivers Joe Ruttman and Morgan Shepherd are in and Tommy Ellis and L.D. Ottinger are out in the latest round of ride changes prior to Sunday's American 500 Grand National race.

Ruttman, of Charlotte, will replace Ellis in the Chevrolet owned by Tim Morgan and Larry McClure of Virginia while Shepherd takes the wheel from Ottinger in the Chevy owned by Dr. Ron Benfield of Washington, D.C.

Morgan said Ruttman will be his team's driver for the rest of the season.

"Basically, we simply hadn't made the progress we'd hoped to make this season with Tommy, and, everything considered, we felt that Tommy would be better off with another team," he said.

We'll know better next year."

The Gamecocks, who last season went 5-6 with a schedule that included Notre Dame, Southern Cal, Clemson and Georgia, have a chance this Saturday to better a 56-year-old school record of five consecutive victories.

Already this year South Carolina has surprised Georgia, 17-10, and thrashed Pittsburgh, 45-21. And they hope to get even this weekend at Notre Dame, which beat the Gamecocks 30-6 last year in Columbia.

Morrison, an unassuming, one-game-at-a-time coach who hardly seems the type to set fashion trends, likes to hedge his bets when talking about team expectations and goals.

"I kind of felt we had a chance to be a pretty fair football team if everything went right and everybody developed ...," said Morrison, 47. "But we didn't know we'd be 5-0."

Fans such as 54-year-old David Williams, however, see Morrison as their football savior.

"I made the prediction before the season," said Williams, decked out in a black South Carolina T-shirt and a black South Carolina cap. "I predicted they were going 12-0, including a bowl game."

"They just didn't have the right coach before," he said.

Chip Clary, the Gamecock Club's new executive director, might have written Williams' script.

"I think everybody's ecstatic and probably a little overwhelmed by it all," said Clary. "We thought this was basically a rebuilding situation."

"Of course, they (fans) realize where the success has been coming from — namely the hardworking staff of Joe Morrison and a great group of players ... I think they're setting the stage to be a football power here."

South Carolina, which can seat about 74,500 fans at Williams-Brice Stadium, has been averaging 71,300 for their first five home games, up about 200 from the year before.

Perhaps the key to the Gamecocks' success this year is balance. Offensively and defensively, South Carolina ranks high in the NCAA's national statistics.

"That's one of those things that just happened," said Morrison.

"You look back and both the offense and defense played pretty well in that first ball game (a 31-24 win against The Citadel)."

"The defense shut Duke down (21-0). Against Georgia, they both played well. And the last couple of weeks (49-17 against Kansas State and then Pittsburgh), the offense has been putting the points on the board."

South Carolina has the luxury of interchangeable quarterbacks — starter Allen Mitchell with 559 yards, five touchdowns and a 57 percent completion rate, and Mike Hold with 298 yards, three touchdowns and a 70 percent average.

Behind Mitchell and Hold in the Veer backfield can be found several speedsters including Quinton Lewis, who has a 7.3-yard average, Kent Hagood with a 6.9-yard average and Thomas Dendy with a 6.2-yard average.

Dendy and Hagood — last year's rushing leaders and, now that both are healthy again, the 1984 starters — are juniors and Lewis is a senior.

As of this week, South Carolina ranks No. 15 nationally in rushing offense, 8th in scoring offense and 12th in total offense. On defense, they're 15th against the rush, 27th against the pass, 12th in total defense and 18th in scoring defense.

Defensively, the Gamecocks get much of their leadership from senior linebackers James Seawright, who has been credited with 47 total tackles, and Paul Vogel, with 49.

The defense, known as the "Fire Ants" for its swarming style, has earned its nickname.

"We try to live up to that name," said Seawright. "A lot of people didn't expect us to be here (5-0). So we kinda feel we're the underdogs."

Interestingly, South Carolina's football fortunes have suddenly taken a turn for the better while state rival Clemson has lost twice this season and dropped out of the national picture.

"My mother told me that sometimes the best thing you can ever say is to say nothing," said Clary about that rivalry, which resumes at Clemson on Nov. 24.

Sales of Clemson regalia, meanwhile, have leveled off at Jefcoat's store.

Lady Heels In Win Over ECU

The University of North Carolina rolled to an easy three-game victory over East Carolina in a volleyball match held in Minges Coliseum last night.

The Lady Tar Heels downed the Pirates, 15-0, 15-6, 15-1, to sweep the best-of-five match in three straight.

The loss drops the Lady Pirates to 2-13 while UNC is now 7-11.

East Carolina travels to Fayetteville on Tuesday for a dual match with Pembroke and Methodist College.

Virginia, Wake Clash In Key ACC Football Contest

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

Virginia and Wake Forest, once doormats in the league, look to gain ground toward the top in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown this weekend, while North Carolina and North Carolina State try to salvage their seasons in Chapel Hill.

Duke, beset by injuries which have taken most of its first-line offensive players out of the lineup, will travel to Clemson. Georgia Tech goes out of the conference to meet Auburn, while Maryland has the weekend off.

The Cavaliers are 4-1-1 and 1-0-1 in the conference after settling for a 20-20 tie with Georgia Tech. The start has Coach George Welsh calling his team "pretty good," but he wants the team to forget the tie and prepare for a revamped Wake Forest team that relies more on the ground attack than on its passing game.

"They're a better running team and a better defensive team," Welsh said. "I think their running game helps their defense because they control the ball longer."

Welsh has decided finally that sophomore Don Majkowski will start ahead of Kevin Ferguson at quarterback against Wake Forest.

Wake Forest knocked off North Carolina for the first time since 1979 and climbed to 4-2 and 2-1 in the league.

"Last week's win puts us in an excellent position going into the second half of the season in trying to put together a successful campaign," Demon Deacon Coach Al Groh said, adding that Virginia is improved.

"Virginia has tremendous skill on both sides of the ball and they are playing very well right now," Groh continued. "They also have a very big and strong team."

North Carolina was a preseason choice to capture the ACC title, but a 1-4 start has dimmed those hopes. Coach Dick Crum thinks this year's battle will be less of a rivalry because of each team's sluggish start.

"Normally in this game, both teams will come into it with pretty good records or one team has come in with a pretty good record," Crum said. "But this time we're coming in with a poor record and they're coming in with one that's a little below .500. It puts a little different light on the game from the standpoint it doesn't mean a championship."

Panel Urges More Liberal Arts Study

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration panel is urging colleges to require two years of liberal arts study even if that forces students in business and technical fields to stay on campus longer than four years.

In a report prepared for Education Secretary T.H. Bell, the panel of college professors also proposed a variety of other changes to address what it called "warning signals" of a decline in the quality of higher education.

All undergraduates "should have at least two full years of liberal education. In most professional fields, this may require extending undergraduate programs beyond the usual four years," said the report, entitled "Involvement in Learning: Realizing the Potential of American Higher Education."

It said this might entail "a radical restructuring" of programs for students in such fields as agriculture, business, engineering, music, nursing, pharmacy and teacher education.

A copy of the report was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

Bell is scheduled to release it Monday following a discussion with college officials.

Bell and Manuel Justiz, director of his National Institute of Education, commissioned the study a year ago in an attempt to focus more attention on the problems of higher education.

The seven-member Study Group on the Conditions of Excellence in American Higher Education, chaired by Kenneth P. Mortimer of Pennsylvania State University, warned, "The strains of rapid expansion of higher education, followed by recent years of constricting resources and leveling enrollments...have taken their toll."

"Gaps have appeared between our ideal expectations for higher education and the realities of student learning, curricular coherence, the quality of facilities, faculty morale and academic standards."

It decried the popularity of majoring "in narrow specialties." The percentage of bachelor's degree in arts and sciences — as opposed to professional, pre-professional and vocational programs — fell from 49 percent in 1971 to 36 percent in 1982, the report said.

"The bachelor's degree has lost its potential to foster the shared values and knowledge that bind us together as a society," it said.

The panel lauded the movement to open up the nation's nearly 3,300 colleges and universities to more women and minorities. Sixty percent of high school graduates now enroll in college, and enrollment has surged past 12 million from 8.6 million in 1970.

But it said that 1 in 8 "high ability" high school seniors never goes on to college, and half of all students leave college without a degree.

"Increased access to higher education will mean little to millions of new students if the degrees they seek are weakened as credentials," it said.

Colleges must devote more faculty time and resources to first- and second-year students, the report said.

Freshmen "are ill-served by too many of our institutions of higher education. They are too often closed out of course selections, treated in an impersonal way and take second place to majors in academic advising."

It cautioned against deploying ill-prepared graduate students to teach freshmen courses, saying colleges "should assign as many of their finest instructors as possible to classes attracting large numbers of first-year students."

The report criticizes colleges' reliance on part-time faculty members, who comprised 23 percent of all faculty in 1966, but 41 percent in 1980.

Professors' salaries have not kept pace with inflation, losing 20 percent of their purchasing power in the past decade, it said, and it cited the "ominous statistic" that the percentage of entering freshmen who intend to become professors plummeted from 1.8 percent in 1966 to 0.2 percent in 1982.

"Many of our current faculty members feel 'stuck': they have lost the traditional mobility and vision of career that motivated so many professors to strive for excellence..." it said.

The panel said students' average scores fell between 1964 and 1982 on 10 of 14 major subject area tests of the Graduate Record Examinations, including engineering, history and English literature.

"One cannot blame these trends entirely on the decline in the preparation of entering college students," the study said. "Part of the problem is what happens to students after they matriculate in college."

The panel cautioned that colleges that "race to install as many microcomputers as possible and then use them as drill sergeants" may be "removing the passion from learning."

The panel included Professors Alexander W. Astin of the University of California-Los Angeles; J. Herman Blake of Tougaloo College; Howard R. Bowen of the Claremont, Calif., Graduate School; Zeldia F. Gamson of the University of Michigan; Barbara A. Lee of Rutgers University and Harold Hodgkinson of the Institute for Educational Leadership here.

More Coeds Than Males In Colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau says women now outnumber men at American universities, having accounted for much of the increase in college enrollment over the past 10 years.

By October 1982 women accounted for about 52 percent of all college students, according to a new Census study, with the biggest jumps among women in the 25-to-34 age bracket and those attending two-year colleges.

In a related report, the National Science Foundation disclosed that its survey of graduate schools in 1983 showed that women collected one-fourth of the doctoral degrees in science, and engineering — nearly double their rate of a decade earlier.

The Census study counted 10.9 million students aged 14 to 34 in colleges and universities in 1982, up nearly 3 million from a decade earlier. About four-fifths of that increase was accounted for by the increase female enrollment, it said.

And 44 percent of the increase came among women age 25 or older.

The bureau counted 5.5 million women and 5.4 million men aged 14 to 34 enrolled in colleges. There were 4.6 million women and 4.4 million men undergraduates, while in graduate studies men slightly outnumbered women. The small number of people over age 34 enrolled in colleges and universities is about evenly divided between men and women.

By comparison, in 1972 there were 4.8 million men aged 14 to 34 enrolled in colleges and universities and 3.5 million women.

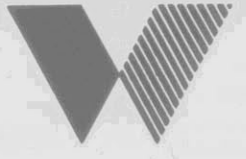

While increased desire for education among women was the prime reason for their growing share of places in college, the bureau noted that another factor was relatively low male enrollment.

And it said while the tendency of women to marry younger than men has tended to lower their college attendance in past years, many may now be returning to local community colleges to resume their education, raising the percentage of women over 25 attending college.

Earlier census studies have noted that the courses pursued differ between the sexes: women have tended to favor courses in education, the humanities and health sciences, while men have tended to prefer the physical sciences, engineering and business.

However, the National Science Foundation report found increases in women obtaining graduate degrees in science.

In 1983 women collected 25 percent of the 17,900 science doctorates issued, up sharply from the 13 percent they earned a decade earlier, it said. And beyond their one-fourth of science and engineering doctorates, women accounted for 34 percent of all doctorates.

Judge Overrules Artist's Claim

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that an artist's claim that film producer George Lucas stole his space creatures in filming "The Empire Strikes Back," is "overwhelmingly unbelievable."

U.S. District Court Judge William Orrick said on Wednesday that evidence presented by artist Lee Seiler of a copyright violation was "unbelievable, often bordering on the incredible ... and disturbingly contradictory."

Seiler had sought unspecified damages, injunctive relief, rights over the popular film in the "Star Wars" series and a cut of Lucas' revenues and profits from movie-related paraphernalia, such as costumes and books.

Seiler said most of his original artwork had been destroyed in 1979 when a house he was building at Boonville, Calif., was flooded.

USDA Demanding Grain Repayments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is cracking down on thousands of corn and sorghum farmers who owe $244.4 million paid to them two years ago when they signed up in the 1983 feed grain program.

Officials said Wednesday that when farmers signed up two years ago they got advances totaling $292.3 million for corn and $22.8 million for sorghum.

It turned out that none of the money was supposed to be advanced, and now USDA wants it all back.

Only $70.7 million had been repaid before the department began a collection campaign this month, including notices to farmers that they have 30 days to pay up or be subject to penalties and liens on future government payments.

The advances represented half of what the department expected would be due farmers under the 1983 program. So-called "deficiency payments" are made when market prices fall below a target price used in the program.

However, drought and the government acreage cutbacks pushed market prices above the target, so no deficiency payments at all were due farmers — meaning those who got it have to pay the money back.

There were no advance payments made under the 1984 program. However, advances are available to farmers who sign up in the 1985 program, beginning Oct. 1 and continuing through next March 1.

Richard W. Goldberg, deputy undersecretary of agriculture for international affairs and commodity programs, said farmers who still owe money from the advances two years ago will have the debt deducted from the advances for 1985.

Farmers who do not participate in farm programs will still have to repay the 1983 program advances, plus a penalty charge if they do not settle up as instructed.

On Oct. 1 the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service began sending notices to farmers that their 1983 program overpayments were due and that they had 30 days in which to pay. After that, a penalty equal to 13 percent a year will be assessed.

Goldberg said that corn farmers had repaid $64.8 million and sorghum producers $5.9 million. As of June 30, that left a balance owed of $227.5 million by corn producers and $16.9 million by sorghum farmers.

Only corn and sorghum were affected in the 1983 overpayment snarl, he said. Barley producers collected $27.5 million in advance payments and oats producers got $1.6 million.

Also, wheat farmers received advance payments for the 1983 program of $345.9 million; rice, $132 million, and cotton, $295 million.

Germans Rule Out Women Recruits

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The government has ruled out recruiting women to solve a personnel shortage in the army, planning instead to extend active duty for male draftees.

Defense Minister Manfred Woerner said Wednesday that the Cabinet approved his plan to extend active duty by three months from the current 15-month period in 1989 and take other steps to maintain manpower levels of Western Europe's biggest armed force. It now has 490,000 troops.

The Cabinet empowered Woerner to introduce legislation in Parliament specifying longer active duty for 18-year-old draftees and making other changes to maintain force levels.

Woerner, at a news conference, said proposals to recruit women soldiers "are not included in my concept. The voluntary service of women is not required."

A Defense Ministry proposal last spring to recruit 15,000 women volunteers for the army triggered an uproar among feminists, pacifists and the anti-NATO Greens party.

The issue of female recruits is emotional because thousands of German women were killed or captured while serving during World War II. West Germany's postwar constitution prohibits women from being drafted, but does not exclude women volunteers for non-combat jobs.

Blaming the "drastic reduction of births since the late 1960s" for the manpower shortage, Woerner said West German military strength could plunge to under 300,000 troops by the mid-1990s if active duty is not lengthened.

He said the shortage also could be eliminated by lowering fitness standards and reducing exemptions, channeling manpower to the Bundeswehr from civil defense agencies and recruiting more career soldiers.

Woerner acknowledged that the Bundeswehr's active duty strength was likely to decline in the 1990s, but said 456,000 troops was the "lowest limit" permissible to maintain a credible deterrent within NATO.

He said it was essential to keep the forces at or near the current level to prevent U.S. forces from being withdrawn from Europe.

There are 314,000 U.S. troops stationed in Western Europe, and some U.S. politicians maintain that some of them should be brought home because Western Europe isn't doing enough for its own defense.

Woerner emphasized, however, that West Germany makes a big contribution to NATO's "burden sharing" and said he would gladly compare the country's military role with any other member of the Western alliance.

The conservative-centrist coalition government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl is certain to use its 54-seat majority to pass the proposed legislation.

Candy Scare Rocks Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese parents are declaring neighborhood candy stores off limits to their children as extortionists broaden their cyanide candy scare to force a manufacturer to pay them $400,000.

Until now, the extortionists have always put clear warnings on the poisoned candy packages they surreptitiously slipped onto store shelves. However, they have stepped up their campaign against the manufacturer, Morinaga and Co., with a threat to put cyanide-laced candy on store shelves this week with no warnings on packages.

"Mothers around here have taken precautions, but we can't be 100 percent safe if the extortionists strike with unmarked cyanide candy," said Mrs. Yukiko Tsuda, 37, of Nishinomiya City, near Osaka. "We keep the TV switched on all day for news."

"We've instructed our children to buy candy only when with their parents and to be very careful," Noboru Yamashita, vice principal at Seimeigaoka, Osaka's largest elementary school, said in a telephone interview.

More than 44,000 policemen patrolled supermarkets and candy stores across the nation today, and thousands of Morinaga employees and their families have been combing stores in the Osaka area for suspicious-looking candy boxes. Thousands of stores nationwide already have removed Morinaga products from their shelves.

Morinaga became the target of the extortionists in mid-September. In the first of more than 30 typewritten threats, the group demanded 100 million yen ($400,000) from Morinaga, one of Japan's largest candymakers with annual sales of about 120 billion yen ($500 million).

The extortionists call themselves "The Man with 21 Faces" after a popular mystery series.

Police in the Osaka area have found 14 boxes of Morinaga and Co. candies containing lethal doses of cyanide.

New Hits Are Scarce in This TV Season

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — For once the critics and the public see eye-to-eye on the best new shows of the season.

NBC's "The Cosby Show" and CBS' "Murder She Wrote" were near unanimous choices among the critics as the best new comedy show and the best new drama series.

The two shows are also the only certified hits among the 22 shows that made their premiere in the fall season. They are the only ones that managed to stay in the Top 10. Other shows made their debuts in the Top 10 but then took a nose dive the next time around.

"The Cosby Show" marks Bill Cosby's return to series TV after an eight-year absence. Cosby stars as Cliff Huxtable, an obstetrician who lives in a New York City brownstone with his lawyer-wife and four children.

One rewarding thing about the show is that it doesn't sacrifice credibility for one-liners. It manages to be both funny and intelligent. Cosby's children don't spout adult wisdom, and when they say or do something foolish the parents don't let them get away with it.

"Murder She Wrote" is a leisurely paced mystery in which star Angela Lansbury bit-by-bit pieces the puzzle together and arrives at a solution. It is the antithesis of "The A-Team" and its imitations. Yet "Murder She Wrote" has succeeded and the "A-Team" clones have not.

This light-hearted drama is no imitation, although it does have some distinguished ancestors. Its closed-mystery format, in which the audience is in the dark about the murderer until the end, is in the vein of Agatha Christie, but its more immediate predecessor was the

"NBC Mystery Movie," most particularly "Columbo."

Richard Levinson and William Link were behind "Columbo," and they're co-creators of "Murder She Wrote" with Peter S. Fischer (who also worked on "Columbo"). Levinson and Link are masters at putting together mysteries as finely tuned as clocks. Up to a point. As with a clock, each clue drives the mechanism forward until the chime

MEETING — Double-Oscar winner Meryl Streep and Sting, singer for the rock group "The Police," met recently while shooting a scene from the movie "Plenty." Miss Streep plays the pivotal role of Susan

Traherne in the movie, which is from a screenplay by David Hare and is based on his award-winning play. The film will be released in 1985. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge Says Singer Was Defying IRS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis "appeared to think he was above the law" when dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, says the federal judge presiding over the singer's tax evasion trial.

U.S. District Judge Robert McRae said Wednesday that three days of testimony showed Lewis, accused in a one-count indictment of hiding his assets to avoid paying income taxes, "consistently defied the payment of his taxes."

McRae's comments came as he denied a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. The jury, which deliberated for over two hours later in the afternoon before retiring for the night, was out of the courtroom at the time.

If convicted, Lewis, 49, faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Lewis did not testify during the trial. He has refused on his lawyers' advice to discuss the case publicly, but told reporters gathered in a courthouse hallway Wednesday that he had not tried to cheat the IRS.

"I never beat the federal government out of anything," Lewis said. "I respect the laws of the land."

The IRS says Lewis amassed a tax bill, including penalties and interest, of more than $1.1 million for 1975 through 1980.

NBC Sweeps TV Weekly Ratings

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's coverage of World Series baseball helped give the network a runaway victory in the Nielsen ratings last week, but it was Farrah Fawcett and "The Burning Bed" that delivered the grand-slam homerun.

The rating for the movie, the fourth highest for a TV movie and the highest of any program for the week, was 36.2 and it had a 52 percent share of the audience.

That put it far ahead of the fifth and final game of the World Series, which took second place. The game, in which the Detroit Tigers beat the San Diego Padres for the title, had a rating of 29.7.

In all, with the movie, baseball and an assist from Bill Cosby, NBC had its biggest victory in four years. CBS, winner for the first two weeks of the fall season, sank to second place. ABC was third. NBC also moved into first place for the three-week-old season.

"The Burning Bed," was a story about a woman who kills her husband after years of abuse and is found innocent by a jury.

Like a consolation prize, third-place ABC's "Dynasty" was the top-rated regular show for the week, placing fifth.

NBC had a network average of 22.1 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey for the week ended Oct. 14. CBS was second with 15.3 and ABC was third with 15.0. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 22.1 percent of the TV homes were tuned to NBC.

It was NBC's best performance in the ratings since the week of Sept. 15, 1980, when the miniseries "Shogun" was on.

For the season to date, NBC was first with 18.0, CBS second with 17.1, and ABC third with 15.2. It was something of a reversal from a year ago, when ABC was first with 18.1, CBS second with 18.0 and NBC third with 15.3.

Here is the Top 10: "The Burning Bed," NBC, first; World Series Game No. 5 Sunday, NBC, second; Game No. 1 Tuesday, NBC, third; Game No. 2 Wednesday, NBC, fourth; "Dynasty," ABC, fifth; Sunday's Post Game, NBC, sixth; "Dallas," CBS, seventh; Game No. 3 Friday, NBC, eighth; "The Cosby Show," NBC, ninth; and "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, tenth.

The fourth game of the Series, played entirely outside of prime time on Saturday, did not make it into the ratings list.

The lowest-rated show of the week was ABC's magazine show "20-20," which was pitted against NBC's "The Cosby Show" and CBS' "Magnum, P.I." Here are the five bottom shows in descending order:

The CBS movie "Attack on Fear," ABC's "Jessie," ABC's "Ripley's Believe It or Not," CBS' National League Football prime-time runner, and ABC's "20-20."

CBS remained ahead among the evening news shows. ABC was second and NBC third. The ratings: CBS 11.5, ABC 10.1, NBC 9.2.

Top Shows

Here are the week's Top 20 shows:

1. Movie: "The Burning Bed," NBC, a rating of 36.2 or 30.7 million households.
2. World Series Game No. 5, NBC, 29.7 or 25.2 million.

rings, but there are many false clues along the way to distract your attention from the real killer.

The fall season has been busy, with baseball playoffs, the World Series and campaign debates all disrupting the schedule. Still, "The Cosby Show" and "Murder She Wrote" have not faltered.

The path hasn't been as smooth for many other new shows. The casualty rate is appalling.

NBC's "Highway to Heaven" is the only other fall series that has shown any staying power. It opened in third place, then fell to 21st place the following week and was in 18th place the next week.

Bold bidding can pay off. But you must have skill to land adventurous contracts.

North's jump to four spades over the takeout double has our wholehearted approval. His hand was useless for defense, and it was obvious four spades could not be hurt badly. And the preempt could make it difficult for the opposition to find their best spot. We admire South's imaginative leap to slam. West licked his chops in anticipation of a resounding penalty.

West led the king of hearts, ruffed in the closed hand. Declarer entered dummy with the king of trumps and ruffed another heart. Ace of diamonds and a ruff provided the entry for another heart ruff, and a diamond ruff completed the stripping of the red suits from both declarer's hand and dummy.

The only remaining problem was to hold declarer's club losers to one. Declarer led a low club from the table and, had East carelessly followed with the two, declarer would have ducked and end played West. But East saw the threat and made the excellent defensive play of inserting the nine.

Declarer was about to try the finesse when he noticed that the only low spot missing was the two. If East had that card, the contract was on ice. If West had that card, declarer had to hope that East had started with a bare nine. So declarer ducked the club!

West was forced to win, and he was faced with losing alternatives. A club would be into declarer's A-Q tenace, while a red suit would permit declarer to discard a club from the board while ruffing in his hand. Either way, the slam was secure, and West's magnificent hand had been reduced to naught.

Heart May Stop During Dreams

BOSTON (AP) — Some sudden deaths during sleep may be explained by the discovery that some people's hearts stop beating for up to nine seconds during dreams, according to a study published today.

"I don't think this is a frequent phenomenon, and I don't think one could conclude that sleeping is in any way dangerous to your health," said Dr. Anne M. Gillis, who participated in the research appearing in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers could find no reason for the pauses of up to nine seconds, and it was uncertain whether the stoppages can cause people to die in their sleep, said Ms. Gillis, a researcher at Stanford University.

But, she said, "It is possible that in a very small percentage of patients, this type of phenomenon could cause a serious cardiac event, like sudden death."

The researchers found the heart pauses in four people ranging in age from 27 to 35 who had sought medical help for vague chest symptoms, such as mild pain and palpitations.

The results of ordinary electrocardiograms were normal. But when the four were attached to heart monitors around the clock, they found their hearts stopped beating a few times a night.

Their heart beats and brain waves were compared, and it turned out that the interruptions occurred only during rapid eye movement, or REM, sleep. This is the period of dream sleep when people's eyes dart about as though they are watching a dream.

In all, the four people were monitored for a total of 11 nights. During this time, there were 42 episodes of heart stoppage lasting more than two seconds and seven longer than five seconds with the longest lasting nine seconds.

In an editorial accompanying the report, Dr. Leonard A. Cobb of Harborview Medical Center in Seattle said the four cases "appear to be medical curiosities, and it seems unlikely that these observations have immediate relevance to the huge number of persons at risk of sudden cardiac death."

However, he added that the pauses "could conceivably be implicated in at least some instances of nocturnal cardiac arrest."

The four people studied in the research directed by Dr. Christian Guilleminault were either physicians or paramedics, and Ms. Gillis said this probably had something to do with the discovery of their conditions.

"They may have had a more extensive evaluation than the average individual, just because it was thought that they would need that additional reassurance," she said.

Two of them also complained of fainting after being awakened during the night, and one had occasional lightheadedness. These three eventually were given pacemakers to keep their hearts from beating too slowly.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day will find some delays or obstacles in the path of your desires, but by patience and objectivity you will be able to get them quickly out of the way.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) First solve that problematical affair and then start that new course toward greater success.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some delay at home could prevent you from doing the important things you had planned in the morning.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You will have to complete some unfinished matter early and then you can go ahead with new plans you have in mind.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You early find you have to give more attention to some monetary affair you thought was completed.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You arise feeling as though you can't do much of anything, but soon find that this is not the case and can accomplish a great deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Even if you feel helpless in the morning, consult that good advisor and you soon know how best to proceed, and make the future brighter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A friend could be disappointing in the morning, but later you can be with others who can be most helpful to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A newcomer could criticize you in the morning, but take this in your stride and then later you get a great deal done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) There may be a delay in getting off to some new interest but later you make up for lost time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) An obligation could prove depressive in the morning, but later you can handle this well, plus other problematical affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You find it hard to convince one who is conservative to go along with your ideas in the morning, but later will do so gladly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may get a late start at your work, but if you schedule duties wisely and do important work first, you get much done.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will find it hard to get going on any ambitions that appeal to him, or her, but with the right early training will then be able to do so and accomplish a great deal during the lifetime particularly in precision work and the creative fields.

FOCUS

Seward's Folly

On October 18, 1867, the American flag was raised at Sitka, Alaska, signifying that Alaska was now an American territory. Secretary of State William Seward bought Alaska from Russia for $7.2 million — approximately two cents per acre. At the time, many Americans opposed the purchase, not knowing if Alaska was "a city, an animal, or a new kind of drink." The state's abundant resources have since proven wrong those who called the sale "Seward's Folly."

DO YOU KNOW — When did Alaska become a state? WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The word "chocolate" is derived from the Aztec word for "bitter water."

India Studying Care Available To Mentally Ill

RANCHI, India (AP) — Mental health care in India has come under deep scrutiny since hundreds of hungry patients dressed in rags broke out of a strikebound asylum here, shouting "Save us!" as they poured into the streets.

An official inquiry since the September breakout has revealed squalid conditions and neglect at the institution, the nation's largest psychiatric facility. It also has given new insight into the plight of the mentally ill throughout the country and spurred articles about psychiatric care in the news media.

About one-fourth of the 1,450 patients of the Ranchi Mental Hospital in eastern Bihar state broke open the iron gates and streamed out with shouts of, "We are hungry. Give us food."

Witnesses said many were emaciated. Employees of the hospital, a sprawling 400-acre complex about 250 miles northwest of Calcutta, went on strike Sept. 4 to protest wage cuts, leaving the inmates without food or care.

"About 300 to 400 patients fled the hospital but police soon brought many of them back," Brij Bihari Singh, deputy superintendent of the hospital, told The Associated Press. He said about 60 patients still had not returned.

Press reports following the breakout said the patients lived in dark, foul-smelling wards. Singh said 131 patients died last year and 151 people had died from January until mid-September this year — many from disease and "inadequate food and malnutrition."

"We are helpless. We do not have funds to serve them full meals," he added.

He said the hospital served only rice and vegetables and no meat because the food budget was only three rupees (30 cents) per patient daily. The medical allowance amounts to even less — about one rupee (10 cents) per patient per day, he said.

Since there is no tradition of expansive mental-health care in India, only the most severe cases reach hospitals. There are 46 hospitals which provide therapy for the mentally disturbed, and about 500 qualified psychiatrists in a country of 750 million people.

"In India one is not sent to a mental asylum unless one turns violent," said Sridhar Sharma, director of the Central Institute of Psychiatry at Ranchi and a member of the inquiry committee. "A lunatic is considered to be a stigma so no family thinks of hospital unless the patient is beyond control."
