CIA Manual Target Of Probe

Aides Said Informed Of 'Executions'

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Nicaraguan rebel leader said Saturday that it is the "practice" of his CIA-backed group to execute government officials who are deemed "criminals." A Pentagon intelligence report informed top Reagan administration officials of such assassinations more than two years ago.

"We have taken towns and our men have had to kill officials of the Sandinista government," said Edgar Chamorro, chief of propaganda for the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force. He said most of those executed were security officials who had "a very bad reputation" with the townspeople.

"In guerrilla war, if you have to exact justice immediately, sometimes you have to do it," he said. "We don't have jails. We are in the jungle."

He also charged that the Nicaraguan Sandinista government has killed captured rebels and rebel supporters.

The Democratic Force, known by its Spanish initials FDN, claims about 12,000 troops who have been fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government for the past three years. The largest of several CIA-supported rebel groups, the FDN is based in Honduras.

Chamorro, during a telephone interview with The Associated Press from Miami, also said a psychological warfare manual — produced by the CIA and recommending "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" officials — was distributed to rebel troops inside Nicaragua.

Chamorro, however, said he knew of no specific case in which material from the manual led directly to a killing. He also said two other parts of the manual — calling for hiring professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs" and creating a "martyr" for the cause — were removed before most of the books were sent out.

The existence of the 90-page manual was reported by The AP one week ago, and President Reagan ordered two administration investigations into its production on Thursday. Some leading Democrats have demanded independent probes and the firing of CIA Director William J. Casey.

In announcing the investigations, the White House declared that the administration "has not advocated or condoned political assassination," and cited a Dec. 4, 1981 executive order signed by Reagan barring U.S. involvement in assassinations.

A similar directive against assassinations was issued in the 1970s during Vice President George Bush's tenure as CIA director, said Stansfield Turner, who headed the agency under President Carter.

"He originated the idea," Turner said of Bush in an interview on Cable News Network. "I would think that George Bush doesn't want assassination.

"So I think the situation's out of control. Either the headquarters in Washington or the CIA doesn't have control of these people out in the field or the White House doesn't have control of the headquarters of the CIA," Turner said.

A secret Defense Intelligence Agency report, dated July 16, 1982, reported that during the preceding several months, Nicaraguan rebels had engaged in "the assassination of minor government officials and a Cuban adviser." The report linked one rebel group, the 15 September Legion, to several airline attacks and described the group as "terrorist."

The information was contained in a DIA Weekly Intelligence Summary that circulates among top adminstration officials. Its existence was first reported by The AP on Aug. 22, 1983, after a copy was obtained and independently verified by two U.S. government officials.

In Saturday's phone interview, Chamorro said that: "We have taken towns and our men have had to kill officials of the Sandinista government." He said such executions are by order of the local rebel commander after consultation with townspeople. In the section of the CIA manual on "selective use of violence," the manual advises calling villagers together to voice complaints against specific officials before steps are taken to "neutralize" them. In the manual, "neutralize" is not defined.

"It has been our practice to kill people who are criminals who fall into our hands," Chamorro said. He said he could not give an estimate of how many officials had been killed.

As an example, he said that in

Mistrial Declared In Deputy's Case

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A mistrial was declared Friday night by Judge Mary M. Pope in the Superior Court trial of Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy James M. Evans when the jury failed to reach a verdict after more than six hours of deliberations.

Evans, a 41-year old deputy, was charged with assaulting juvenile James W. Gwin by kicking him in the face following a high speed chase through Pitt County on Feb. 4. Gwin, a 15-year-old Alabama resident, was a passenger in the vehicle that was stopped on N.C. 11 outside of Greenville after the chase from Beaufort County.

The trial was a result of an appeal filed by Evans, who was convicted earlier in lower court of simple assault on Gwin.

Defense attorney Charles Vincent said the jury was hung because "seven jurors voted not guilty and five voted guilty." The jury of nine women and three men began their deliberations Friday at 4:20 p.m. and the mistrial was declared at 11 p.m.

Vincent declined to comment on the trial "in case it is to be retried."

District Attorney Thomas D. Haigwood said, "A mistrial was declared due to the hung jury. If the case is to be retried, the district attorney's office will make the decision." Haigwood said the decision will be reached soon.

In his statement to the jury Friday afternoon, Haigwood said, "This has been a long trial for a simple assault case. It may even be the longest simple assault case ever in Pitt County."

Evidence in the trial began Tuesday, with Gwin testifying that he recognized the man who assaulted him by the brown slacks and tan jacket he was wearing. He said he saw Evans wearing those clothes.

The state rested its case Wednesday after representatives of three local law enforcement agencies testified that they saw Evans kick Gwin after the chase.

State's witnesses East Carolina University police officer Kelly L. Jackson, N.C. Highway Patrolman Ron Mills and Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Wayne Nobles each testified that they saw Evans kick Gwin.

The defense called to the stand two sheriff's deputies who testified that Gwin told them he had been injured by "a black state trooper wearing blue and a hat with GPD on it." Evans is white.

Evans took the stand in his own defense Thursday. He denied assaulting Gwin and said he was not anywhere near the juvenile.

"I didn't never kick James Gwin. I didn't never hit James Gwin," Evans testified.

The deputy said he saw Gwin lying on the ground and that Sheriff's Deputy Walter Cobb had his foot on Gwin's head. "When Gwin tried to pick his head up, Cobb would push it back down," Evans said. "He was pushing his head down ... I call it kicking."

As a rebuttal, Haigwood called to the stand the only civilian eyewitness to testify in the trial. Tom Creel of Raleigh told the court, "The thing I remember most vividly was Mr. Gwin's body hitting the ground. I was looking through the legs of eight

Top Alumni Awards Given

Three East Carolina University alumni who have excelled in their professional fields and in contributions to public service programs were presented ECU's 1984 Outstanding Alumni Awards on Saturday in homecoming ceremonies.

The three honorees are John Jackson Beard III, news anchor and Emmy Award-winning commentator for KNBC-TV, Los Angeles; Dr. Sheron Keel Sumner, vice president of the American Home Economics Association, and Phillip Ray Dixon, Greenville attorney and leader in political and civic affairs.

They were recognized twice on homecoming day, first at the Homecoming Awards Luncheon and again at halftime of the football game with East Tennessee State University.

"These alumni have distinguished themselves through public service and achievement, bringing rewards to their communities and nation and reflecting great credit upon their alma mater," said Donald Leggett, director of alumni relations at ECU.

Beard, a native of St. Paul's and a Vietnam-era Navy veteran of the hospital corps, received a degree in drama and speech, with a minor in broadcasting at ECU. During his studies on campus he also worked full-time at WITN-TV, Washington, as a reporter and 11 p.m. news anchor. Upon graduation he joined NBC affiliate WXII-TV, Winston-Salem, leaving the station for CBS affiliate WIVB-TV in Buffalo in 1977.

In 1981 he became a nightly news anchor at NBC-owned and operated KNBC-TV, where he coordinates two hours of news daily, broadcast from 4-5 p.m. and from 6-7 p.m. During his three years at the Los Angeles station, Beard has helped KNBC to win its first top news ratings since Tom Snyder left the station 10 years ago.

Beard has also become involved in issues of public safety. Earlier this year he received an Emmy Award for hosting an hour-long special, "Emergency: Learn and Live," a

Detectors Necessary, Says Chief

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Equipping your home with a smoke or heat detector could save your life. It saved the life of two youngsters playing in an upstairs bedroom of a home near Kinston recently, according to Greenville Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen.

The youngsters, a 13-year-old girl and a friend, were playing when they heard the kitchen fire alarm go off. They did not immediately react, Allen recounted, because the 13-year-old was used to hearing the incessant buzz everytime something on the stove smoked. When the alarm did not shut off, however, the children cautiously opened the bedroom door and found a hallway full of smoke. Knowing they could not possibly escape down the stairs, the two girls knotted several sheets together, anchored them to a bed frame and shinnied to safety through the window.

If that house had not been equipped with a smoke detector, the two girls could have died from either smoke ihalation or been burned to death. That's why Allen is adamant in his assertion that everyone should install either a smoke or heat detector — possibly even a sprinkler system — in his home.

According to Allen, at least 60 percent of Greenville homes are now equipped with some type of smoke or fire detector and that is partially due, he said, to a 1975 ordinance requiring that all new constructions come wired with fire detectors.

While the majority of people now-a-days seem to have systems that are wired into their home's electrical system, Allen says a battery operated model will do the job just as well. "If it works, it's good," he explained. "Installing either type is one of most inexpensive ways to save lives that I know of."

Smoke detectors can be bought for $10 to $50, even more expensive models are available, but either way, Allen asserts that everyone should have one or more to combat natural human carelessness which has caused more fires in Greenville than any other element in the past two years. "Fires caused by smoking cigarettes, left on stoves and improper use of drop cords account for the majority of the fires we respond to," Allen said.

When buying a drop cord, Allen said to make sure the wires in the cord are as large or larger than the wires in the cord that you intend to hitch up to.

"You'll see people hooking up refrigerators with those skinny little drop cords you can buy almost anywhere. And every time the refrigerator turns on, the drop cord will get hot because it can't handle the load." Allen said the heat breaks down insulation in the cord and that eventually, when the insulation breaks totally down, the wires within the drop cord will touch, causing a short.

Placement of drop cords is also an important consideration, Allen warned. "People will often run cords under carpets and think that's O.K. But what they don't realize is that every time someone walks across that cord, that they're weakening it."

What ever the cause of the fire, if you don't have a fire detector or if the one you do have is not working properly, you run the risk of death, especially at night.

"Smoke detectors are designed more so to warn people at night than warn them in the day time. You can't smell smoke when you're asleep and before you know it, the carbon monoxide gas gets hold of you," Allen said.

The last fatality Allen said the Greenville Fire Department dealt with involved a case where a man went to sleep while smoking a cigarette. A fire was generated by the smoldering tip of the cigarette, and before the man could wake up, he died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Placement of smoke alarms is just as important as having the devices mid-December 1983, the rebels captured the town of Pantasma in northern Nicaragua and the commander executed three persons after they had been pointed out by the townspeople as "criminals."

Chamorro also said the rebels have at times executed captured Nicaraguan soldiers although adding that a military code of ethics has been adopted that encourages the release of captives after they are interrogated and if they refuse to join the rebels.

The Sandinista government has often alleged that the CIA-backed rebels have assassinated and kidnapped officials and townspeople sympathetic to the government when they attack villages.

According to a new study by the Council on Hemispheric Affairs — a liberal, Washington-based research group that is critical of U.S. policy in Central America — Nicaraguan rebel groups have murdered 876 civilians since 1980, with the heaviest toll occurring in 1983 when 605 civilians were allegedly slain.

The study was based on data from the Nicaraguan government, and it was impossible to verify the figures.

In a 1983 House Intelligence Committee report, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., cited the killing of a West German doctor, Georg Pflaum, and 12 Nicaraguan medical assistants on April 30, 1983, as proving "all too convincingly that (rebel military) activity is not being restricted to military targets."

Also, in mid-1983, Lisa Fitzgerald, an American nun and former assistant attorney general in Massachusetts, returned from Nicaragua and told the House committee that anti-Sandinista rebels often targeted religious officials, health workers, teachers and doctors for assassination.

Such reports prompted the House committee to urge the CIA to stop the rebels from attacking civilians.

In the interview, Chamorro also said the psychological warfare manual, produced last October and November, was written by an American adviser who called himself John Fitzgerald and that Fitzgerald provided money for its publication. Chamorro said he was not aware that Fitzgerald, known as "Juanito" to the rebels, was employed by the CIA.

The administration has said the manual was the work of a low-level CIA contract employee who produced the book without approval from superiors.

Chamorro said the manual was produced at about the same time as a comic book-style manual urging Nicaraguans to sabotage their government through a range of actions, from calling in sick to work and clogging toilets to destroying truck engines and hurling "Molotov cocktails."

Chamorro said the sabotage manual was produced directly by the CIA although its pictures were modified by the rebels to make it appear Nicaraguan.

Over the president's objections, Congress voted earlier this month to cut off CIA aid to the rebels, at least until Feb. 28, and then permit it only if approved by both the House and Senate.

One of the animals was thrown into the passenger area of the car, the Highway Patrol report indicated. The car then veered off the road into a pasture.

Under cross-examination, Creel testified that he did not see Evans kick anybody.

The jury deliberated for more than six hours before Judge Pope called the jury into the courtroom to see if they were making progress in reaching a verdict. The jury foreman told the judge that no progress had been made and the numerical division had not changed in four hours. The judge then declared a mistrial.

Fire ...

is to begin with, according to Allen. "I'd love to see one in every room of the house, but the kitchen is the most likely place," Allen said. "I know people get tired of them going off everytime something sends off smoke, but you just have to bear with it. It's that important." Allen said that some of the more popular and correct places to station detectors are in hallways and near bedrooms.

Another precaution families can take is to sleep with their doors closed so they will serve as barriers against potential fires. "I know a lot of people want to be able to hear their children cry at night and all, but if there is a fire, then it will swoop into a room with an open door so fast you won't believe it.

"The bottom line of all this is that if lives are going to be saved, people in the U.S and North Carolina are going to have to start having fire drills in their homes to prevent so many people from getting burnt up and dying from smoke inhalation," he said.

If your home should catch on fire, Allen said the most important thing is to get out and know how to get out.

The first thing is to slowly crack your door — bedroom, study, where ever you are — to see if there is extreme heat or smoke in the hallway. If there is, you'll have to use another door to get out or perhaps a window.

Allen warns that if you smell smoke, don't stand up. Get on the floor and crawl to your chosen escape destination. Even in rooms filled with smoke there will be relatively clear air space near the floor extending to a height of 18 inches. "Don't stand up. There's super-heated air and smoke up there and chances are pretty good that if you do stand up, that you won't get out," Allen said.

Three other items to remember are don't panic, call the fire department once you get out and have all family memebers meet at a pre-arranged location. that way, Allen said, you won't risk your life going back into a burning structure to save someone who is already out.

Out of sight, out of mind is also an adage to remember when taking precautions against fires. While smoke detectors may be out of sight, out of mind, they are there when you need them. When applied to storage and trash areas, the adage isn't such a good thing. According to Allen, many people make the mistake of using heating rooms for storage rooms. Should your water heater malfunction, those old newspapers, that oily mop and shoe polish rag will burst into flames in seconds.

Allen warned against appliances that are not kept in good working order as well. Perhaps one of the most dangerous run-down appliances is a can opener. Try yours out one day and see, he advised. Run it without a can in it and notice how little sparks are thrown off. When openers wear out, Allen explained, they will often run by themselves and create fire hazards. Equally dangerous are toaster ovens and coffee pots left on warm.

Fire alarms are like appliances; if you don't keep them in good working order and inspect them regularly, they might fail you when you need them most.

Allen suggests changing batteries at least once a year and checking existing systems to see how they work. A lot of the wired systems in this area do not have battery backups, so if the power goes out, Allen said, you'll have no warning if a fire starts.

Allen urges anyone who is concerned about possible fire hazards in their home including wiring or fire places to call the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department at 752-2554. "We'll be glad to come out Monday through Friday to look over your house and let you know what we find," he said.

Scholarship Announced

The family of Helen McLawhorn has endowed one of the new University Scholar Awards announced Friday at East Carolina University.

The award will honor Miss McLawhorn, who taught in the public schools of Eastern North Carolina for 44 years. The first recipient will be a freshman entering ECU in the fall of 1985.

As part of the University Scholars program, the $3,000 scholarship will be awarded annually for the entire four years of a recipient's undergraduate education.

Miss McLawhorn, who died in 1983, was a 1917 graduate of East Carolina Teachers College who taught fifth and seventh grade children in Bethel, Hamlet and Vanceboro. "Helen was the kind of person who made an impression on everyone she knew or met. She just always seemed to think of things to do for other people, and we felt like we wanted to do something in recognition of the service she had given," said her sister, Mrs. Mildred Lancaster.

"The McLawhorn family has truly honored the spirit of Miss Helen McLawhorn and the dedication of her life's work by fostering future educational opportunities at her alma mater," said vice chancellor for institutional advancement, James L. Lanier.

Thoughtful dignity is priceless, but it costs no more.

The truth is, it's smarter and easier to deal with buying a grave site long before the need arises than during the time of grief.

Think a little, find out something about what's involved — whatever you think about the subject. It's the only way that you can be sure that you make an informed decision whenever you decide what you're going to do.

What's in a picture? Privately-owned cemeteries are governed by state law. In order for a cemetery to be called a 'Perpetual Care' cemetery, it is required that the maintenance for it be paid for by interest earned on a "locked-in" fund, contributions to which are predetermined.

Historically, Pinewood Memorial Park has been maintained by funding much larger than that required by state law. The reason? S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, founders and owners of Pinewood, didn't think the requirement was adequate.

The result? See for yourself. Visit Pinewood and look at the beautiful 25-year growth of centipede sod, attentively maintained almost every day.

So don't be fooled by pretty pictures of what a site is supposed to look like years from now. And be sure you add up all the costs before you buy. You'll see that Pinewood costs less, not more, than unknown quantities.

Professional for 26 years. And years to come. We'd like to explain more. Because as cemeterians for 26 years, we think it's important for every family to make an informed decision about these things.

So before you buy from a salesman with pretty pictures and long promises, talk to us, even drive through our grounds. We're not going to pressure you for anything. And, we'll respect your decision.

But we want you to know what you're doing.

New Scholarship Program Major ECU Milestone

East Carolina University has grown in facilities and academics to the point where it is a university worthy of the name.

The university cannot stand still, however. It will take more bricks and mortar, distinguished faculty and, most importantly, outstanding students to make it an institution which will be respected throughout the nation.

A major step was taken Friday to meet one of these goals — that is attracting the superior students here who will challenge other students to higher scholarship.

It was announced following the board of trustees meeting that a new scholarship program will be established to bring here academically gifted students from throughout the state and nation.

University Scholars will be a part of special programs and lectures, smaller classes and closer working relationships with professors.

It is expected that at least 20 University Scholar Awards will be privately endowed. Each will be sufficient to provide a $3,000 per year scholarship for the selected recipients. A $40,000 endowment will support each scholarship.

Several such gifts were announced by officials Friday. Because of that, the program will be under way immediately with plans to select the first five University Scholars for entry at ECU in the fall of 1985.

Board Chairman C. Ralph Kinsey Jr. said that, while the university is already attracting outstanding scholars, the University Scholars program will "make our institution extremely competitive in recruiting more of this nation's very top academic achievers."

Chancellor John Howell said, "This is a good day in our life to be a part of ECU."

To say that those connected with establishing the scholarship program are excited would be an understatement. It is exciting to everyone to see the university providing the scholarship funds which can attract the most outstanding students to the local campus. This is a major milestone in the maturing process which will eventually see East Carolina University become a university commanding great national respect. And what a step. Attracting superior students is the most important part of building a university.

Rulings Threaten Major Freedoms

A favorite phrase of those who defend freedom of the press is that a deluge of litigation has a "chilling effect" on vigorous investigating of government by the news media.

It is apt and it also applies to freedom of speech since these two freedoms go hand-in-hand. Present events go further than the "chilling effect." We are close to possibly changing the meaning of freedom of the press and freedom of speech in this nation.

Trials go on in which public officials sue for damages over criticism of their actions in the public realm. It is the kind of criticism that the early leaders accepted as essential to establishing a democracy.

All criticism is not fair but it has been part and parcel of our democratic process that even unfair criticism must be accepted by public officials. Our society may not fully understand it that way, but we are re-examining this concept.

Things have changed since the Constitution was written. There was no television then and no instant communication. Some may argue that the examination needs to be made. Nevertheless we should make no mistake about it; we are considering new legal interpretations of these rock solid guarantees that our forefathers left us and others protected. If any part of our society cannot take a critical look at the record of high government officials, then the average citizen in the smallest hamlet of the United States cannot safely express his opinion about the chairman of the county commissioners.

Unfortunately when we reach that point the United States that we know is lost.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Pitt County voters will be handed a number of yellow ballots when they go to the polls on Nov. 8. There are 10 printed ballots, although not every voter will get all of them.

At any rate we will have a fistful of paper ballots on which to decide the fate of the state and nation and, depending on how we vote, it could take some time to mark them.

For those who vote a straight ticket the process will involve marking only one square. Given the intensity of the campaigning, however, there undoubtly will be considerable ticket splitting which will involve marking the square by each candidate's name on that particular ballot.

At any rate the process is nothing we haven't gone through before as voters in Pitt County — except for one thing. These ballots, though they won't look too much different from the old yellow ballots, are designed for computers. The voter will mark them and feed them into a box equipped with a reader. As the ballot passes through, the tallies will be made and at the end of voting totals will be available.

Thus all of us will know the results much sooner and ballot counters won't spend long hours at night toiling over the vote counting.

Sounds nice, huh. Well it certainly is for Pitt County. But someone told us of a rural county which actually voted down the use of vote tabulating equipment. When someone investigated it was found that election day was one night when residents could stay up late, socialize and await the voting results. They didn't want that form of socializing ruined by some machine that gave immediate results.

Did you know it has not always been where it is today?

The highway, or its predecessor, once followed Johnston Street to the present site of the Pitt County Courthouse.

Later it was moved to East Fifth Street which was built in front of what is now ECU. It followed Dickinson Avenue out of town. Still later it was moved to the newly constructed East 10th Street and finally to the present Greenville Boulevard.

Even in recent years the highway has been moved — from the Grimesland highway (now N.C. 30) to the Pactolus highway via the Eastern Bypass bridge. In a few years it may be moved again to a new western route which would cross the Tar River and follow the Eastern Bypass.

You Get What You Deserve

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — A week has passed, more or less, since the 98th Congress at last gave up and fled to the hills. In this period I have been thinking a terrible ought. It is that the people get the kind of government they deserve.

That is a terrible thought, is it not? The last, interminable, unseemly hours of the 98th were not as frenetic as the last hours of the lame-duck 97th, but they could be summed up in a single word. That word is disgraceful. What have the people done to deserve the spectacle provided on Capitol Hill?

Let me venture an assertion and defend it as fact: At the moment of adjournment, no one on earth could have given an accurate account of the legislation that had passed or failed to pass in the preceding week. The Congressional Record, like an old stock ticker, was running days behind the floor debate. On both sides of the aisle, the leadership had the look of men left numb by concussion. Members of both parties were trying to railroad pet bills to enactment.

The Congress demonstrated beyond dispute that it is incapable of getting its essential work done. Only four of 13 appropriations bills ever made it to orderly enactment. Twice the Congress had to vote emergency measures just to keep the government running for 24 to 48 hours. Half a million federal workers got a day off. What a way to run a railroad!

Plainly the Congress could get some non-essential work done. During those last few days, one house or the other took up matters relating to the Wyandotte Indian Tribe of Oklahoma, the Cocopah Indian Tribe of Arizona, and the Devil's Lake Sioux Indians of wherever Devil's Lake is. They found time to name a building in West Virginia for retiring Sen. Jennings Randolph. They named a facility on the Warrior River in Alabama the Armistead L. Selden Lock and Dam after the congressman of the same name. They granted a charter to the Daughters of American Colonists, and they "recognized" the Daughters of Union Veterans, the Navy Wives Club and the Women's Army Corps Veterans Association. They granted posthumous citizenship to William Penn. They designated Smokey Bear Week.

This was not all. At the request of Sen. Kennedy, the Senate voted for reconstruction of a lighthouse on Nantucket Island. At the request of Sen. Gorton, the Senate voted $6.2 million for the Hanford Engineering Laboratory. At the request of Sen. Thurmond, the Senate voted to study a causeway between the Isle of Palms and the mainland. At the request of members from here, there or somewhere, the two houses considered wilderness lands in Pennsylvania, Texas, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and Wyoming.

In the House the Republicans spent a couple of hours on Oct. 3 playing political fun and games. The Democrats Oct. 1 had come up with a substitute bill no one ever had seen before, having to do with a "service industries development program" within the Department of Commerce. The general idea is that a bunch of furriners are giving our good old American boys a hard time in such fields as insurance, accounting, engineering, architecture, advertising and legal services. Therefore a bill should be passed to put these fields on a par with textiles, steel and automobiles, subject to the usual protectionist maneuvers.

Under the rule, this dubious piece of legislation was to be "considered as read and shall not be subject to amendment." The Republicans wanted to offer an amendment that would propose a constitutional amendment to compel a balanced federal budget. It was pure sham. There is no way that a resolution of constitutional amendment, which demands a two-thirds vote, could be added to a bill that requires only a majority vote. Anyhow, the boys played games and time passed and the Republicans' procedural motion failed, and God and the Record clerks alone know what became of the Service Industries and Commerce Development Act of 1984.

There is just bound to be a better way of handling legislative matters. It should be possible for both houses to fix a deadline after which the petty little ornamental bills will not be considered. There must be some way of preventing the prima donnas of both parties, in both houses, from sitting on bills that ought to be voted up or down. Perhaps the mechanism of the "discharge petition" should be made more easily available. I love politics, and I love fun and games, and the years have given me a great tolerance of tomfoolery, but what happened at the end of the 98th was worse than ridiculous. The word, again, is disgraceful.

GOP Building Hope In Texas

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WACO, Texas — Oblivious to President Reagan's flop in his first debate, some 800 supporters — mostly nominal Democrats — turned out to hear Democrat-turned-Republican Rep. Phil Gramm reflect the dramatic tides in this state.

This central Texas city is notorious both for brass-collar loyalties to the Democratic Party and aversion to political fund-raising. Thus, the strength of Gramm's race for the Senate seat of retiring Republican Sen. John Tower is shown by the weeknight turnout, at $125 a couple, of a crowd estimated to be no more than one-third professed Republicans.

Such a turnout is part of the generation-long, often interrupted political realignment of formerly one-party Texas into conservative Republicans and liberal Democrats. Post-debate polling shows Reagan's 62 percent of the state vote unchanged. Nor has a wave of pointed anti-Gramm television spots yet reduced his 12- to 15-percent lead over Democratic State Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

In a state no successful Democratic presidential candidate ever has lost, Democratic politicians outside Walter Mondale's immediate campaign write off his chances. Not even frantic efforts to maximize black and Mexican-American turnout can close the gap. "There just aren't any 'anglos' for Mondale," one veteran Democratic politician who supports Mondale told us.

Such Democrats are concentrating on winning back for Doggett enough traditionally Democratic white-skinned Texans that, combined with a big minority vote, can overtake Gramm. To do that, Doggett hides unmistakably liveral credentials and paints Gramm as the quintessential heartless Republican.

There is plenty of raw material for that. Gramm, who switched parties after being disciplined by the House Democratic leadership for sponsoring the Reagan budget, loves to talk tough about cracking down on beneficiaries of federal largesse.

Thus, the best Doggett TV spot features Gramm's picture and an actor, who sounds a little like the congressman, saying in response to criticism that his budget reduced Social Security for 80-year-olds: "They're 80 years old. Most people don't have the luxury of living to be 80. It's hard for me to feel sorry for them." That's an exact quote from a 1982 Gramm interview.

To the editor:

The U.S. Senate race in North Carolina this year will be a classic confrontation of "new" conservatism versus old liberalism. Jesse Helms is a staunch conservative who believes in the republican form of limited government with more personal freedom. James Hunt, conversely, is a model example of liberalism in the style of Ted Kennedy. His beliefs reflect the movement of the U.S. for the past 60 years in which the federal government passes law after law to limit individualism in the name of democracy. The two candidates differ on every issue from raising taxes to U.S. relations with Red China.

There are countless issues and positions on these issues. However, the contest can be greatly simplified by examination of the "big picture." One candidate is going to consistently vote to increase the size and power of the federal government while the other will more than consistently vote for decreases. One candidate caters to the people through promises of federal social support; the other only seeks to do what is "right" whether selected groups of people like it or not. Lastly, one candidate will support morality, no matter who cries about violation of church and state, the other will vacillate depending on the current progressive view.

In summation, I would like to say that it is in the coming years that the socialism that we started years ago will have its most drastic effects. The symptoms are very evident already; a shrinking middle class, a more central control of power, a growing governmental control of religious organization, increasing taxes, inflation, and many others. The actions we take today will decide whether we continue down a socialistic path or revert to the free society based on individualism and morality that our forefathers gave us. Your vote will count one way or the other.

To the editor:

The Democrats accuse the Republicans of using Hitler's "big lie" technique. Let's take a closer look at some Democratic distortions this election year. The Democrats, led by Mondale, point an accusing finger at President Reagan and blame him for the huge deficits. Deficit spending was spawned during the New Deal by the Democrats. With the exception of one term under Eisenhower, Democrats controlled both Houses of Congress from FDR until 1980. Even today they are the majority party in the House of Representatives. If deficits concern them so much, why don't they say "No!"? It's the height of hypocrisy for Mondale and the Democrats to blame President Reagan for the deficit problem!

Let's look at Ms. Ferraro campaigning as a "middle class" housewife from New York City. How many middle class people can dash off a check for over $30,000 in back taxes without even blinking an eye? Someone needs to tell Gerry that the middle class doesn't stretch from $20,000 all the way to $5 million. She is middle class all right: in the middle of the rich class!

And what about Jim Hunt bragging about balancing the budget for eight years as governor. He fails to mention that state law requires the governor to submit a balanced budget. He also fails to mention the budgets that he "balanced on the backs" of the teachers and state employees. Yes, there's Governor Hunt calmly and deliberately looking at both sides of every issue (straddling the fence) while his pollsters determine the most correct response for him on the issues. Jim needs to apply for a patent: compared to him, Slick 50 is about as slick as Super Glue!

To the editor:

National politics presents us with some real puzzles. All of the candidates wear their religion as a badge of honor; however, their behavior brings their religion into question.

President Reagan criticizes Mondale for not condemning "Rev. Jesse Jackson when he went to Havana, stood with Fidel Castro and cried, "Long live Castro.'" What should a Christian have said to Castro and the people of Cuba? Drop dead? If so, it's doubtful he would have brought American prisoners home with him.

Reagan's "humorous" slip of the lip, off-camera, indicated a hostile, hateful attitude (including bombing Russia out of existence), which has no kinship with the Christian teaching to love our enemies and to pray for those who mistreat us.

Despite his shortcomings, Jackson displayed more of his religious ethics through his actions than has any other candidate on the national scene.

While I do not promote the notion that one must fit any one religious mold to qualify for national office, I believe it's inappropriate to "preach" that one's religion is a qualifier for the office, while one's actual public record and public (or private) statements reveal that the candidate lives in a private world of fear, hostility and readiness to clean up the rest of us through war or offensive legislation.

Always A Factor

Norman Sandler

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The campaign was heating up and the final countdown to Election Day under way. Ronald Reagan was angry.

"In recent weeks," he said, "my opponent has been using distortions and half-truths in an effort to try to frighten Americans into believing that I would hurt Social Security. Nothing could be farther from the truth."

The place was Miami. The time: 1980.

After almost four years as president, Ronald Reagan is again on the defensive, denouncing "distortions" of his position and suggestions of a "secret plan" that could darken the financial future for millions of Americans.

Through selective recall by the candidates and a bit of election-year innuendo, the future of the Social Security system has taken center stage in the presidential campaign. The subject is not one to be taken lightly. And no one knows that better than Reagan.

Chatting with reporters in 1968, Reagan, who four years earlier proposed the retirement system be made voluntary, was asked whether he would discuss the issue in future campaigns. "You can't run against Social Security," he replied.

The remark, delivered off the cuff, seems prophetic today.

Like a ghost from the past, Social Security re-emerged to haunt Reagan in the aftermath of his Oct. 7 debate against Walter Mondale, where his pledge to protect the benefits of current recipients appeared to leave doubts about what future retirees might expect.

The issue dogged Reagan during a whistle-stop trip through Ohio, throwing a wrinkle into what came off otherwise as a flawless exercise in political imagery. Three stops into his day-long trip on "The Heartland Special," Reagan sought to put the issue to rest by extending the umbrella of benefit sanctity to future as well as current Social Security recipients.

But the relief was not lasting. News accounts of a discussion of "private alternatives" by Social Security Administration officials in June added fuel to the fire by rekindling memories of past Reagan statements on the matter.

The Democrats, grasping for an issue that could turn the race around in its final three weeks, seized on the disclosure. "Ronald Reagan has had a lifelong itch to tamper with Social Security," said House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla. "He now appears ready to start scratching again."

Reagan wasted no time shooting back. Although he questioned the future of Social Security for more than two decades, Reagan assured college students in Alabama the retirement fund will remain solvent for more than 50 years.

One need not search far for an understanding of why Reagan, when prodded on the issue of Social Security, has displayed such sensitivity.

As far back as 1961, Reagan was sounding the Social Security alarm bells, concerned not only about its actuarial fragility but also about what he saw as a dangerous transformation from retirement supplement to welfare program.

He opposed compulsory participation. Yet, as president he considered forcing federal employees to enroll in the system to strengthen its financial footing.

In the famous "Time for Choosing" speech he delivered in 1964 on behalf of Barry Goldwater, Reagan said Social Security "is not an insurance program, but a welfare program, and Social Security dues are a tax for the general use of government."

In 1975, on the attack again, he called for an end to "the monopoly over basic retirement benefits now exercised by the Social Security Administration."

The doubts and criticisms he has dispensed over the years seem a far cry from the tune Reagan adopted in 1980, when he told the crowd in Miami that Social Security "is part of the American way of life" and "must always be that way."

Reagan now bristles at charges he would cut Social Security, but the record is clear. In 1981, he proposed a package of sharp reductions designed to lop 22 percent off long-term outlays and keep the retirement system solvent.

The reforms were consumed by a political wildfire. The administration next approached the idea of benefit reductions during the 1982 budget negotiations, only to see the issue turned against the GOP in the mid-term elections that fall. An ABC News exit poll showed 2-1 disapproval for Reagan's handling of the Social Security issue.

Reagan refuses to be blamed for past attempts to cut benefits.

PRINCETON, N.J. — Despite a 24-year downtrend in voter participation, the stage may be set for an increase in voter turnout in this year's presidential election. These key factors contribute to this possibility:

—The latest polls clearly reflect the political parties' successful efforts to register new voters. Nationally, 74 percent of eligible Americans report they are now registered, up from 70 percent at this time in 1980. Gains are recorded in almost all population groups, especially blacks.

—A higher proportion now (69 percent) than four years ago (61 percent) say not only that they plan to vote, but that they are "absolutely certain" to do so, with gains found in all major segments of the population.

—On a Gallup scale designed to determine voter interest in elections, significantly more now (60 percent) than in 1980 (55 percent) place themselves at the scale's highest point, indicating they "definitely will vote in the election this November."

—Democratic candidate Walter Mondale's upset "victory" over Ronald Reagan in last Sunday's debate may have breathed new vitality into a campaign that had become so lopsided as to cause some voters to lose interest. Many political analysts now expect the contest to become closer than the 17-point chasm separating the two tickets in the Gallup Poll's late-September assessment.

These favorable signs notwithstanding, if the 1984 presidential election produces a voter turnout higher than that of 1980, it will be the first election since 1960 to have topped its predecessor.

Participation rose from 59.3 percent in the 1956 Eisenhower reelection race to 62.8 percent in the tightly fought 1960 contest between John Kennedy and Richard Nixon. Since then, turnout has steadily deteriorated, culminating in the 1980 election, when merely 52.6 percent of eligible Americans exercised their franchise. A steep decline occurred in the 1972 election, when Republican incumbent Nixon won his bid for reelection in a landslide victory over Democrat George McGovern.

As the following table shows, gains are recorded in almost all population groups, with larger-than-average increases observed among blacks. The "bottom line," of course, is not which party registers the most potential voters, but which succeeds in getting its partisans to the polls on Nov. 6.

Here is the question asked to measure voter registration and the results based on more than 4,500 Gallup interviews conducted in each of 1980 and 1984.

"Is your name now recorded in the registration book of the precinct or election district where you now live?"

(x) The sampling error associated with the percentage for blacks is slightly larger than for other demographic sub-groups of comparable size.

The analysis is based on comparable date from six surveys conducted in 1984 and 1980. The 1984 data are based on in-person interviews with 4,685 adults, 18 and older, in three separate surveys conducted between July 27 and Sept. 10. The 1980 data are based on 4,686 in-person interviews conducted between July 11 and Aug. 18. Although the 1984 data were collected somewhat earlier in the year than the 1980 data, which might have affected registration and intent to vote, examination of the individual surveys showed that time difference had no appreciable effect on the findings.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 2 percentage points in either direction. The sampling error applicable to smaller demographic sub-groups is larger.

Projections Fall Short

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Last December, pollster Louis Harris told a gathering of governors that the environment would be a "cutting issue" for as many as 20 million voters this year. "I am willing to stake my reputation on that," he asserted.

Walter Mondale's campaign strategists believed that President Reagan's record on the envornment would win voters, particularly the younger variety, to their camp. Since then, in fact, numerous environmental organizations have supplied the Democrat with volunteers and advice. The Sierra Club, which formally endorsed him last month, decided to spend up to $70,000 promoting his candidacy among its membership.

In an election likely to involve fewer than 100 million voters, Harris' projections and the environmental community's efforts would have meant trouble for the incumbent. Yet the surveys have put Reagan ahead by margins of 15 percent and more. Pollsters find younger voters to be his most enthusiastic constituency.

Reagan's apparent lead has left its mark on the media. While Mondale may often allude on the stump to hazardous-waste dumps and other outrages, his remarks on the envirnoment take a back seat to those on, say, Social Security and Nicaragua. The press seems to be saying that the quality of our air and water isn't going to decide who gets to live in the White House.

Now that respected organizations have risked their nonpartisan reputations on an opposite hunch, they may also be big losers in the event of a Reagan victory.

Environmentalists hope to be more influential in congressional elections than in the presidential. Among the closely contested races in which environmental issues may prove decisive are those involving incumbent House Democrats Bruce Morrison of Connecticut, Gerry Studds of Massachusetts and James Clark of North Carolina.

When the 99th Congress convenes next year, four House subcommittees responsible for environmental programs will need new chairmen.

Anti-Khomeini exiles in Paris have told European journalists that Israel still sells arms to the Iranian government. Last April, the exiles report, Israel shipped spare parts for assorted aircraft — Bell helicopters and F-4 fighters, for example — and Sparrow, Sidewinder and Hawk missiles. The Israeli government refuses to comment on the reports.

The Defense Nuclear Agency estimates that as many as 200,000 U.S. veterans were present at atomic tests during the late 1940s. Another 110,000 veterans may also have been exposed to radiation during the American occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The Veterans Administration says that only 2,566 cases involving individuals exposed to radiation have been filed to date. Could we be on the brink of a new cancer crisis?

Not only has Latin America caused enormous headaches for U.S. banks. It's scaring away U.S.-based corporations, too. According to a survey conducted by the Council of the Americas, 52 multinational firms with Latin American affiliates expect their operations in the area to reach a combined $16.5 billion in sales, a 23 percent decline from last year's level.

Publicity Can Have An Effect

Noel Yancey

In the days when I was covering murder trials or other court cases, a thing that constantly amazed — and discouraged — me was the answer or so many potential jurors to the question:

"Have you read about this case in your newspaper, or heard it discussed?"

One after the other, those being questioned — many of them apparently intelligent, well-informed citizens — would disclaim any knowledge of a sensational affair that had been the constant subject of news articles in the press or on TV. It often made me feel as if all my efforts were in vain, that I was writing in a vacuum.

I am often reminded of these disclaimers when lawyers go before judges with the assertion that pretrial publicity had made it impossible for their client to receive an impartial trial.

Nevertheless, the attorneys have made the claim often enough — particularly since the advent of television — that courts in some states have banned pretrial statements by police and court officials that could be construed as potentially prejudicial to a defendant. Some folks would like to see the same gag applied to the news media.

Those arguing for such a gag recieved a boost in the case of Frank Joseph Rinaldi, a graduate student and part-time instructor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill who was convicted of murdering his pregnant wife and contenced to life imprisonment.

Rinaldi himself and the charge against him received much publicity before and after his habeas corpus hearing and his actual trial in November of 1964. The sensational headlines came after an employee of the UNC Book Exchange testified at the habeas corpus hearing that Rinaldi had contacted him while he was working as a waiter at the Zoom Zoom Room and hired him to clean his apartment, which he did. He said he returned to the apartment later at Rinaldi's invitation.

"He asked me if I could kill somebody," said Foushee. "I told him, 'No.' he said, 'Could you throw lye in somebody's face? I told him no."

D"Did he put his hands on you in any way?" asked District Attorney Thomas D. Cooper? Foushee replied that Rinaldi had made homosexual advances toward him, and "I had to force him off."

The pretrial publicity given the Rinaldi case included an article in the January 1964 issue of Startling Detective Magazine, a monthly collection of the most sensational criminal cases. Several hundred copies of the magazine were sold in North Carolina. Each of them bore a cover sticker in blue and white heralding "North Carolina's Murder of the Pregnant Bride." Unfortunately Startling Detective's account contained a startling number of errors.

At Rinaldi's trial, Foushee again testified that Rinaldi had tried to hire him to kill his wife and had made homosexual advances.

He said, "Break her neck ... even rape her," Foushee told the jury. He said that he had seen Rinaldi at a Durham shopping center on Christmas Eve 1963 and he had told him, "It's over ... I did it."

The key defense witness was John Sipp, an insurance salesman and friend of Rinaldi who testified that he and the defendant had gone shopping in Durham on Christmas Eve and had found Mrs. Rinaldi's body on their return around 2 p.m. She had been beaten around the head and strangled. Dr. Nathaniel F. Rodman Jr., a pathologist at the UNC Medical School, estimated the time of death was about 11 a.m. Sipp and a clerk at Thalheimers's Department Store in Durham gave Rinaldi an alibi. They testified he was shopping in Durham at the time Dr. Rodman said she was killed.

After the jury returned its verdict of guilty on Nov. 18, 1964, it was learned that when it was sent home for the night the evening before it stood 10-2 for acquittal. In the interim, 10 members of the jury who had believed in Rinaldi's innocence changed their minds. They chose to disbelieve the testimony of Dr. Rodman, who was a state witness, as to the time of Mrs. Rinaldi's death.

Whether the Startling Detective article had anything to do with the verdict is not known. Ten of the 12 jurors said they had never heard of the magazine report and an 11th indignantly refused to answer when asked if he had seen and read the article.

At any rate, Judge Raymond Mallard sentenced Rinaldi to life in prison, and his attorneys entered notice of an appeal to the state Supreme Court. It handed down it's opinion about eight months later, voting 5-2 to grant Rinaldi a new trial. It ruled that the testimony tending to show Rinaldi was a homosexual was prejudicial and should not have been admitted.

"Evidence tending to show that the defendent is a sexual pervert does not, standing alone, tend to establish the fact that he is a murderer," wrote Associate Justice William B. Rodman.

At a second trial in October 1965, Foushee again testified Rinaldi had attempted repeatedly to hire him to kill his wife. This time, however, his claim that Rinaldi had made homosexual advances was excluded. This time, Rinaldi, who did not testify at his first trial, took the stand and flatly denied Foushee's story. He contended he was shopping in Durham when his wife was slain and had no knowlege whatever of the crime. After deliberating for seven hours, the Orange County Superior Court jury found him "not guilty."

Rinaldi wept on hearing the verdict. He embraced his father, Paul Rinaldi, and his three attorneys.

The state's case against Frank Joseph Rinaldi was officially closed. However, the Christmas Eve slaying of his pregnant wife, Lucille Begg Rinaldi, is still a mvsterv.

Candidates Exchange Pre- Debate Charges

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

Striking early blows before their final television debate, President Reagan charged Saturday that Walter Mondale's foreign policy record is one of "exposing us to dangerous, unnecessary risks," while the Democratic challenger accused Reagan's administration of illegal war actions in Nicaragua.

The two men limited their public remarks to paid political radio talks one day before their second and last face-off of the presidential campaign — a debate Mondale is hoping will help him chip away at Reagan's big lead in opionion polls as the campaign heads into its final two weeks.

The debate in Kansas City, Mo., focusing on foreign policy issues, comes two weeks after their domestic-issues confrontation in Louisville.

Most observers, including Reagan aides, said they felt Mondale came across better in the earlier confrontation. Since then, Mondale has gained ground in some polls, with a new CBS News-New York Times survey saying the Reagan lead has been halved from 26 to 13 points and with the Louis Harris poll putting the margin at 9 points.

However, polls for NBC News and USA Today still show a huge, 25 percentage point lead for the Republican president.

Spokesmen for both camps say the final face-to-face confrontation isn't vital for their chances in the election. But in light of Reagan's big lead, whatever the margin, Mondale would seem to face a very tough effort in catching Reagan by Nov. 6 if the president bounces back from his earlier performance and emerges a clear winner Sunday night.

Mondale said he didn't doubt Reagan's good intentions in foreign policy.

RONALD REAGAN

"But good intentions are not enough — as the record makes tragically clear," he added. "Virtually every day brings new evidence that nobody's in charge."

He said it was "inexcusable" that the U.S. Embassy annex in Lebanon was not better protected against last month's terrorist attack.

And he renewed his call for Reagan to fire CIA Director William Casey in connection with revelations concerning a CIA training manual that encourages terrorism against the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

"There is an illegal war going on in Nicaragua now, and over the explicit objection of the Congress, the Reagan administration has trained guerrillas to overthrow the Nicaraguan government," Mondale said.

He then mentioned the training manual, adding, "And what has been the White House reaction? The president didn't know about it.

"I don't know which possibility is worse — a president who doesn't know what his government is doing or a president knowing of this illegal action and approving it.'

Meanwhile Saturday, Mondale's running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, told students at the University of Massachusetts that the manual "is written more in the spirit of Stalin than Jefferson. It reads more like Mao than Lincoln. It befits a dictatorship, not a freely elected government. It's an insult to the American people."

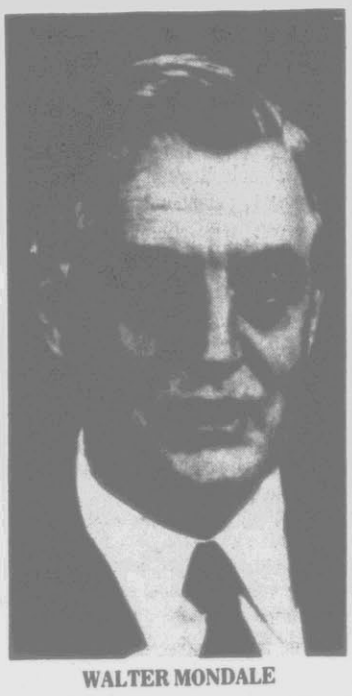
Reagan, in his broadcast, steered clear of that issue, choosing instead to attack Mondale's record as a senator and as Jimmy Carter's vice president.

He said Mondale had spent his entire political career "opposing our strength, exposing us to dangerous unnecessary risks."

Reagan contended that Mondale supports "unilateral cuts" in weapons systems. And he said his opponent had "voted time and again against American strength" while serving in the Senate.

Mondale, he said, "as a senator and later as understudy to Jimmy Carter, and still today, has seemed possessed with one simple but very wrong idea: American strength is a threat to world peace."

"What troubles me most is how little he seems to have learned about the dangers of weakness and naive thinking," the president said.



WALTER MONDALE

Taking a new tack, Mondale linked the nation's huge federal budget deficits — a main focus of his economic-policy attacks on Reagan — to foreign policy as well.

"The high interest rate caused by that debt is forcing terrible austerity on countries around the world," he said. "It makes them more prone to violence, encourages revolution and hurts human rights. But here at home, the administration that piled up this dangerous debt has failed to offer a plan to cut it."

Rescuers Find Miner's Body

By SUE MANNING
Associated Press Writer

ACTON, Calif. (AP) — Rescue workers squeezed though a narrow gold mine shaft filled with poison gas Saturday and found the body of a trapped miner who fell to the bottom after being overcome by the fumes, authorities said.

"He has been declared dead, and his body will be left where he is for the time being," Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Lee said of Roy Madsen, 42. "State and federal authorities made the decision to declare him dead based on observations by the Kern County team."

The announcement came after rescuers got to within 10 feet of Madsen's still body but were stymied on ways to lift him back to the surface, authorities said.

Two members of the Kern County Sheriff's Department Mine and Surface Rescue Team almost reached the miner during a third descent by rescuers since he fell about 175 feet Friday morning.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Sgt. Steve Finley said the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration ordered the mine sealed until the body can be removed.

"The rescue team and equipment are all out of the mine," Deputy Wes Slider said. "The mine has been sealed."

Madsen had not been heard from for more than 24 hours after he tried to struggle out of the shaft but fell back to the bottom after shouting "bad air" to two companions, Finley said earlier.

An air compressor pumped oxygen into the shaft of The Governor mine, located in the desert 30 miles north of Los Angeles while rescue efforts were underway.

The composition of the gas in the mine was not known. Poisonous gases such as methane frequently collect in old mines.

The first attempt to reach Madsen failed Friday when rescuers' air tanks ran out of oxygen, and 26 search and rescue team members from three agencies backed out of the muck-filled shaft Saturday morning because of bad air, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy Wes Slider said.

Two rescuers returned to the mine later Saturday, climbing down a 65-foot causeway leading to the shaft where Madsen was believed trapped, after more fresh air was pumped into the shaft, Slider said.

Slider said some parts of the passage about 200 feet underground are less than 21 inches across, and members of the rescue party were forced to remove their respirators, including mouthpieces, to get through.

Slider said the gas composition wasn't known, but it was less than 13 percent oxygen, and the rescue team members need at least 20 percent oxygen for temporary periods of breathing without the air packs.

Madsen and his two partners, who operated the mine, had been exploring a newly excavated artery when the accident occurred. "They've been looking for gold and other trace minerals like silver and copper," said Sgt. Ron Worley.

Madsen had lowered his oxygen pack on a rope into the shaft because it was too cumbersome to wear, and then lowered himself down on a ladder, Slider said.

"He yelled out, 'Bad air,' and started to surface," Slider said. "He was within three feet of (two) co-workers. They said they could see he was turning blue" before he was overcome by the gas.

He then tumbled down to the bottom of the shaft. His two co-workers, on a ledge 40 feet above, heard him "moan and groan," Slider said.

They threw him an air line from a compressor, but he apparently was unconscious and unable to grab it, said Deputy Mason Kinney.

The compressor malfunctioned at about 4 p.m. Friday, Kinney said, and several hours elapsed before another compressor began pumping air into the shaft, which is part of a labyrinth of passages in the old mine.

"We have had problems where the air was not good, but never unbreathable," said Allen Herron, owner of the mine. "We have spent literally hundreds of thousands of dollars to do this the safest way possible, short of building a new shaft."

He said he bought the mine two years ago, and made Madsen its superintendent one year ago. He said Madsen had 27 years of mining experience.

In the last month the mine had had four inspections by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Herron said.

Jackson Hosts Show

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson found himself in the unusual position Saturday of having a national television audience but no opportunity to take sides in presidential politics.

Jackson was scheduled to host "Saturday Night Live," and while the show was certain to contain plenty of political humor, NBC officials urged the former Democratic presidential candidate not to endorse any candidates.

The network was concerned that Republicans might demand equal time on the air if Jackson used the show to help Democratics.

Lawyers Denounce Court Ruling On Complaint Against Committee

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Lawyers for Democrats vowed Saturday to fight to make public a secret appeals court ruling in their complaint against a political action committee aligned with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

"We're going to pursue that vigorously," said attorney William Oldaker.

The Democrats charge that the National Congressional Club is illegally funneling campaign contributions to conservative candidates through its advertising arm, Jefferson Marketing.

Republicans went to court seeking to stop the Federal Election Commission from acting on the complaint until after the Nov. 6 election. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia issued a ruling in the case under seal Friday.

The ruling was shared only by the two sides in the case and they were prohibited from discussing it. Oldaker said it is "outrageous" for the court to issue a secret order.

"I think it violates the public's right to know and the people of North Carolina's right to know right before an election," he said.

Helms is seeking a third term in a close fight against Gov. James Hunt, who has charged that the Republican is trying to cover up illegal campaign contributions by the National Congressional Club.

This month in Washington, U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer ordered the FEC to act by last Friday on a complaint against the Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing by Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C.

Rose charges the organizations run by top Helms' supporters made illegal corporate contributions to his opponents in the 1982 elections.

As a private company, Jefferson Marketing is prohibited from making federal campaign contributions but it is not required to report how it raises and spends money.

Democrats charge that the Congressional Club uses Jefferson Marketing to disguise illegal contributions to favored candidates.

The appeals court stayed Oberdorfer's order last Monday at the request of lawyers for the club and the Helms' campaign.

The court ordered the FEC to respond to the Republicans' demands to delay the investigation. Friday's ruling was to have decided when the FEC could act on Rose's complaint.

Billion Dollar Proposal Gains OK

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors unanimously approved the system's first billion dollar budget proposal which includes a 7 percent faculty raise and a record construction program.

A $1.17 billion budget for 1985-86 and a $902 million budget for 1986-87 will be sent to the North Carolina General Assembly, which convenes in February. The $301 million allocated for capital improvements was included in the 1985-86 budget.

The budget appropriates money for the system's 16 campuses, N.C. Memorial Hospital, the agricultural extension and and research services and the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics in Durham.

The continuing operations budget for 1985-87 represents a 22 percent increase from the 1983-85 budget, said L. Felix Joyner, vice president of finance. The operating budget for all campuses is $644 million for 1985-86 and $653 million for 1986-87. Student enrollment is estimated to grow 2.1 percent by 1986-87 to 107,875.

"The thrust of this recommended budget is to improve markedly the quality of our educational programs," said William A. Dees Jr., chairman of the system's budget and finance committee.

The budget stresses the system's "vital role in industrial development, placing emphasis on microelectronics, biotechnology, textiles, the agricultural sector of our economy and a new program of assistance to small businesses," Dees told the board.

The 7 percent faculty pay raise will cost $28.1 million in 1985-86 and $56.7 million in 1986-87. Faculty members received 5 percent raises in 1983-84 and 10 percent raises in 1984-85.

Capital improvements include a $29 million textiles school and an $11.6 million Natural Resources Research Center at N.C. State University, in addition to completing $4.85 million in renovations to Page Hall and $2.94 million in renovations to Winston Hall, also at N.C. State University.

New facilities at UNC-Chapel Hill include a $13.94 million conference center and a $11.18 biology-biotechnology building. Also included is a $17.3 million Public Health and Environmental Sciences Centers called for in the 1981 plan.

The research center would be an 80,000-square-foot building that would provide offices for the Department of Marine, Earth and Atmospheric Sciences, School of Forest Resources and the NCSU Graphics Center.

IN THE STATE

GOP Happy With Figures

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — State Republicans rejoiced Saturday over a 24 percent jump in registered GOP voters since 1980 and political experts cited the figures as new evidence that North Carolina is becoming a two-party state.

Figures released Friday show 3.27 million people or about 77 percent of the state's voting population is registered, an 18 percent increase over the 1980 presidential election.

Republican registration has grown by 161,554 in the past four years, shoving the Democratic Party's percentage of voters below 70 percent for the first time this century.

"I just can't believe it," state Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty said. "The Republicans are the highest they've ever been. I'm sure many of those who registered Democrat will vote Republican, so the optimism we feel is on solid ground."

Some 2.3 million North Carolina voters or just under 70 percent are registered Democrats while 838,631 or 25.6 percent are registered Republicans. In 1980, the electorate was 71.2 percent Democratic and 24.4 percent Republican.

A registration drive by the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority helped the Republican's surge. In the past six months when the Moral Majority's campaign was at its peak, 134,330 voters registered Republican.

A registration drive led by the Rev. Jesse Jackson helped increase the number of black voters by 53,805 since the May primary. Since 1980, black voters have increased by 179,373 or 40.8 percent.

"When you sort it out, it's bound to benefit the Republicans more," said Thad L. Beyle, associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina.

"The margin between Democrats and Republicans is closing, slowly, due in part to the trend of younger voters to register Republican," he said. "This election depends, of course, on who does the best job of getting their voters to the polls but we are evolving into a two-party state."

J. Oliver Williams, chairman of political science and public administration at North Carolina State University, agreed.

"Other factors may affect this election more, such as the strength of the president's coattails, if you assume he will carry North Carolina," Williams said.

"Long term, we are seeing a change in the direction of voter preference by party, especially among younger voters. That would tend to favor greater Republican voting than in recent times," he said.

State Democratic Party Chairman David Price noted that his party still is winning in overall numbers. More Democrats registered than Republicans since the primary but Democrats lagged behind Republicans 3-1 in percentage increase of new voters.

"Our effort over the past four years to increase voter registration has succeeded beyond our most optimistic expectations," he said. "It's a slightly less favorable ratio but still overall a 2-1 ratio in new voters."

Infant Dies When Plane Strikes Home

By VIC KOLENC
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A twin-engine plane with ice-heavy wings crashed into a home just after takeoff Saturday, killing an infant in the house, injuring all four people aboard the airplane, cutting a major power line and temporarily closing an interstate highway, officials said.

It was the second fatal plane crash in Cheyenne in less than 24 hours.

Saturday's crash occurred soon after the Cessna 414 left Cheyenne airport at about 1:30 p.m., said Police Sgt. Eric Hefferman, who added that a passenger on board told him the wings iced up, causing the plane to lose altitude rapidly.

The plane sheered off three utility poles before crashing into the rear of the house, and setting the rear rooms on fire, Hefferman said. The aircraft then hit a giant pine tree, skidded through a second backyard and came to rest in the backyard of a third home, he said.

"The grandmother (in the first home) had just put the baby down to sleep and left the room when the accident occurred," Hefferman said. The plane's engine landed on top of the baby's crib, he said.

The baby boy died in the blaze that severely damaged the first house, said Cheyenne Fire Department Lt. Bob Engelby. "The rear of the house was destroyed," he said. "The houses next door had little damage."

"I was in the livingroom and I heard this boom," said Eileen Jiacoletta, who lives in the home next to the one hit by the plane. "I thought it was an earthquake."

She said she tried to call the fire department, but was unable to because her phone line had been cut by the crashing plane.

The grandmother, Helene Bonham, was outside crying, her hair singed by the fire, Ms. Jiacolletta said.

The names of those involved in the accident and the extent of their injuries were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The plane cut power lines across Interstate 25, the major north-south artery through Wyoming that runs along the western edge of Cheyenne.

State police had to close a five-mile stretch of the highway until the power lines were cleared.

As many as 600 residences in northwest Cheyenne were left without electricity, said Bill Pomeroy, a spokesman for the Cheyenne Light, Fuel and Power Co. He said service was not expected to be restored until late Saturday.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators were probing the crash, after completing an on-site investigation of a Friday night crash that killed John Baird, 40, of Casper, said Laramie County Sheriff Rudy Restivo.

Blake Brown, air traffic control specialist, said the plane went down about 8:25 p.m., shortly after takeoff from the Cheyenne airport. It crashed nine miles northeast of the airport and Baird was dead at the scene.

Brown said the sky was overcast and it was snowing when the plane crashed. Laramie County Coroner Roger Radomsky said he "suspected" Baird "ran into visual difficulty." He said he believed Baird was trying to land the plane "when the front wheel touched and it flipped."

Restivo said he could not speculate if weather was a factor in the crash.

Judge Studies Plea To Block La. Execution

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge worked overtime Saturday, assessing arguments to block condemned murderer Frederick Kirkpatrick's execution, now set for Tuesday in Louisiana's electric chair.

U.S. District Judge Morey Sear said he would issue a ruling on Sunday. The execution is scheduled shortly after midnight Tuesday.

Kirkpatrick, 29, of Meridian, Miss., was convicted of murdering Jerry Radoste, a 61-year-old Pearl River man whose body was found with a butcher knife sticking out of his chest in 1982.

Kirkpatrick's lawyer, Patrick L. Durusau, asked Sear to stop the execution and allow arguments on certain questions about the case, particularly matters pertaining to whether Kirkpatrick's original lawyer did a good enough job during his trial.

Kirkpatrick has avoided two previous execution dates.

If the legal argument fails in court, the defense could turn to Gov. Edwin Edwards, who has put off two scheduled executions so that the condemned man could make a personal appeal to the state Pardon Board.

In both cases, it did no good and new execution dates were set.

3-Story Jump Injures Woman

DENVER (AP) — A 31-year-old woman jumped from a third story window of a transients' hotel, striking one passerby, narrowly missing another, and inflicting multiple injuries on herself.

The woman was identified as Loretta Savage and was in serious condition Saturday, said Ellen Perry, an admissions clerk at Denver General Hospital. The passerby she hit was knocked to the sidewalk but escaped injury.

Photographers for the Denver Post, which is across the street from the Colonial Hotel, saw the woman sitting on the third-story window ledge Friday at 5:30 p.m., and called the 911 emergency number.

The woman climbed off the window, went back into the room and then back to the ledge several times before jumping about two minutes before police arrived, witnesses said.

Lane Jones, 21, of Lakewood, and Peggy Pfeffer, 21, of Littleton, were walking on the sidewalk below when Ms. Savage jumped.

"I heard somebody holler, 'Look out,' and all of a sudden I felt this thud," Jones said. "I was stunned. I didn't do anything. I didn't have time to think."

The Post photographer took pictures of the leap while yelling the warning to Jones.

Police Detective Don Gabel, in charge of the case, said he had talked with Ms. Savage, who he described as distraught. He said, however, that no motive was immediately clear.

Cooperation Sought

ROME (AP) — Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini has called for greater cooperation among West European nations on defense, reducing their dependence on the United States.

In excerpts made available Saturday of an interview with the Italian weekly news magazine Il Mondo, Spadolini advocated the strengthening of the long-inactive Western European Union, a 30-year-old treaty involving Italy, France, West Germany, Britain, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

Specifically, Spadolini called for creating a "coordination center" to promote cooperation among member nations' defense industries and to put together a common defense policy, and a more "credible" West European presence in the Atlantic Alliance to counterbalance the United States.

Long overshadowed by NATO, defense and foreign ministers from the Western European Union member nations will meet in Rome next week to consider measures to strengthen the seven-nation pact.

Women Workers

TOKYO (AP) — For the first time in history, the number of married working women surpassed the number of non-working housewives, according to a Labor Ministry survey released Saturday.

The ministry's 1984 White Paper on Female Labor said 50.3 percent of Japan's 32.4 million married women now were working, the nationwide daily Asahi Shimbun and Kyodo News Service reported.

Despite an increase in married female workers, there were few improvements in pay, compared with male workers, the survey said.

Many of the married women in the workforce are part-time employees, the survey said. The average female part-time worker makes $2.24 an hour, the report said.

Military Tour

PEKING (AP) — The first U.S. military training delegation to visit Communist China completed a tour of military units in Peking on Saturday and headed for five other Chinese cities, the U.S. Embassy reported.

The 11-member delegation under Maj. Gen. Johnny J. Johnston, director of training headquarters in the Department of the Army, was traveling to Xian, Shijiazhuang, Nanjing, Hangzhou and Shanghai over the next 10 days, the embasssy said.

The U.S. team was hosted in Peking by Shi Xia, chief of the training department of the People's Liberation Army, and by Zhang Zhen, army deputy chief of staff.

The visit returns a similar tour made by a Chinese military delegation to U.S. training facilities in April.

University Closed

MBABANE, Swaziland (AP) — The University of Swaziland has been closed until the end of the month, following a violent clash between boycotting students and riot police, the Swazi News reported Saturday.

The newspaper carried reports by students and onlookers who said they saw police make baton charges Friday into a crowd of students boycotting classes.

Students were protesting the reported deportation last week of a South African refugee student to his neighboring black homeland, it said, without elaboration.

The newspaper said an unspecified number of people were admitted to hospital after the clash, and two were reported in serious condition.

Chinese Conference

PEKING (AP) — China's ruling Communist Party announced Saturday that it will hold a major conference next September to elect additional members to the policy-making Central Committee and review the country's 1986-90 five-year plan.

A communique issued by the Central Committee after last week's full session on economic reform also said the conference will decide "other organizational matters" — indicating personnel changes.

The communique was the first official word of the impending conference, which visitors have quoted senior Communist leaders as saying would convene next year.

One thousand functionaries will attend the conference, including all 210 members of the Central Committee and 138 alternate members, Xinhua said.

Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang, in a meeting with former Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito on Wednesday, was quoted by Ito as saying the conference will change "three or four" senior leaders, but he did not elaborate.

Army, EPA Say Yes To Plan

DENVER (UPI) — The Army and the Environmental Protection Agency have agreed on a $500 million plan to detoxify the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, which some call the "most contaminated piece of ground in the free world," Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., said Saturday.

Kramer said the plan is subject to approval by Gov. Richard Lamm, who an aide said will be briefed Monday on the plan to eliminate the residue of nerve gas and pesticide production at the 42-year-old facility northeast of Denver.

The arsenal was used to manufacture nerve gas bombs during World War II and pesticides since then.

"The governor has set aside time for a 5:30 a.m. call Monday to be briefed by (Army Secretary John) Marsh and (EPA Director William) Ruckelshaus," said Lamm spokeswoman Kathy Richardson. "Until then, he said he can't comment on a plan he hasn't seen."

Kramer said some experts have called the arsenal "the most contaminated piece of ground in the free world" because of the mixture of chemicals in the "hundreds of thousands of tons" of ground contaminated by residues from nerve gas and pesticides.

The plan appears to pave the way for decontamination of the arsenal's southern tier, which Denver is seeking for expansion of Stapleton International Airport. The Army has never agreed to release control of any arsenal land.

The Army last January annouced four possilbe cleanup options, ranging from a limited cleanup with on-site disposal for $210 million, to a nearly total cleanup with wastes trucked out of state.

The plan reported by Kramer resembles the third option, which proposed decontaminating most of the arsenal and carting the waste to an unspecifided Colorado hazardous waste landfill with a price tag of $450 million.

West Germans Rally Against U.S. Missiles

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Tens of thousands of West Germans, many wearing Reagan masks and carrying banners, turned out in the cold, wind and rain Saturday to demonstrate against the deployment of U.S. nuclear missiles.

Writer Heinrich Boll, the 1972 Nobel Literature Prize winner, addressed a Bonn rally, telling the crowd, "The peace movement is not getting smaller but is growing."

The Coordinating Committee of the Peace Movement at first said 150,000 took part in the protests, half the number it predicted Friday, at least partly because the cold and rain kept some away. The committee later revised the number to 400,000.

Police did not give overall crowd estimates but said the 150,000 figure was too high.

Demonstrators, many wearing masks with the likenesses of President Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and carrying banners, held rallies in Bonn, Hamburg, West Berlin and Stuttgart, where the U.S. European Command has its headquarters.

One protester's sign said, "Learn English, Kohl, so you can tell Reagan to remove the missiles."

U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles are being deployed in West Germany and four other Western European countries as part of a 1979 NATO plan to counter a build-up of Soviet SS-20 missiles.

An attempt to form a 130-mile human chain between the Ruhr industrial city of Duisburg and a planned U.S. Army missile base at Hasselbach, about 30 miles south of Bonn, failed.

There were mile-wide gaps in many places and in others linked up by stretching red and white ribbons and scarves between themselves.

Former Chancellor Willy Brandt, the chairman of the opposition Social Democratic Party, joined the chain with his wife, Brigitte, at the couple's home town of Unkel near Bonn.

"The cost of armaments hangs around the world economy like a stone," Kohl said in a brief speech.

At the Hamburg city hall rally, 150,000 had been expected, but police said only 20,000 showed up. In Stuttgart there were only 20,000 instead of the expected 70,000 to 100,000, police reported.

About 10,000 in West Berlin formed a chain from a municipal office to the U.S. Air Force's Tempelhof Air Base, the main air lift base during the 1948-1949 Soviet blockade of Berlin.

Father Hospitalized

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — John Y. Brown Sr., the 84-year-old father of the former Kentucky governor, was hospitalized in stable condition Saturday with a broken rib, head cuts and scrapes suffered in a car accident, officials said.

He was admitted to the University of Kentucky Medical Center here on Friday night following the accident in Alton, said hospital spokeswoman Pattie McLellan.

Former Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. and his wife, broadcaster Phyllis George Brown, were at the hospital Friday, Ms. McLellan said.

The accident occurred when Brown failed to stop his car at an intersection and was struck by another car, state police said. Two people in the other vehicle were also injured and were in satisfactory condition at a Frankfort hospital, officials said.

Soldiers Dispute Crash Report

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A plane crash that killed four American CIA employees occurred on the San Salvador Volcano, just west of the capital, and not miles farther north as U.S. Embassy sources reported, soldiers said Saturday.

A Salvadoran officer, who identified himself only as Lt. Villeda, and a group of soldiers near the scene of the crash told reporters the plane went down Friday in a deep crevice on El Picacho, one of two 6,000-foot peaks that make up San Salvador Volcano, five miles from San Salvador.

U.S. Embassy sources had told reporters Friday night the plane crashed on the slopes of Guazapa Volcano, in rebel-controlled territory 20 miles north of the capital. El Picacho is the site of dozens of commercial and government radio transmission antennas, including microwave dishes.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jim Williams was asked about the soldiers' report and said, "I cannot provide any further information." He then was asked if the crash site was on San Salvador Volcano, and replied, "I cannot say."

A national guardsman, stationed along the steep road leading to the location where the soldiers said the plane crashed, barred reporters from going into the area. He said the Salvadoran air force, which was responsible for the recovery of the bodies, had ordered the zone sealed off.

About a dozen peasants interviewed in the area said the plane crashed early Friday morning, and helicopters started hovering around the site at 10 a.m. EDT that day. Villeda said ground rescue crews located the wreckage, put the bodies on litters and carried them away.

Government officials refused to give any information on the whereabouts of the wreckage or the names of the dead Americans.

The bodies of the Americans, who were said to have been on a surveillance mission against leftist rebels, arrived at a funeral home in the capital at 6 p.m. EDT Friday.

On Saturday, they were placed in a Salvadoran military truck that drove away in the direction of El Salvador Airport in Comalapa about 25 miles to the south, followed by journalists in several cars. Just before reaching at the airport before noon, the truck turned around and returned to the funeral home.

Officials gave no explanation.

Reporters had watched outside the La Auxiliadora funeral home as four coffins, said by La Auxiliadora employees to contain the bodies of the Americans, were loaded onto the truck. Soldiers in the truck refused to answer questions.

La Auxiliadora director Oscar Pineda said the bodies arrived at the funeral home Friday without any identification or other documents. "This is a very strange situation," he said.

An army ambulance driver said the bodies were first taken to the Military Hospital in San Salvador in an helicopter and he delivered them to the funeral home.But the driver, who refused to give his name for security reasons, said he did not know where the helicopter flight originated.

In a morning broadcast monitored here, the guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos implied the rebels shot down the plane. It said the aircraft had been flying observation support missions for an anti-guerrilla sweep the army is conducting in Morazan province, 100 miles east of the capital.

But that allegation was denied by State Department press officer Brian Carlson in Washington.

"Their claim that they shot it down is not true," he said. "The claim that it had three Salvadorans on board is not true. And the claim that it was directing some sort of bombing run is not true."

Similar surveillance missions had been under way for about two months, Salvadoran officials said Friday.

"The airplane was operating under a program which had been fully authorized in accordance with applicable procedures including notification to the responsible committees of the Congress," said Carlson.

Carlson said the plane carried four U.S. citizens who were civilian employees of the CIA.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told Washington reporters the purpose of the mission was to "assist the government of El Salvador by warning of insurgent offensives and identification of shipments of arms and ammunition by the government of Nicaragua to the guerrillas in El Salvador."

The U.S. government has been providing financial assistance and technical advice to the Salvadoran government in the five-year-old civil war. It has accused neighboring Nicaragua's Sandinista governnment of supplying arms to the rebels — a charge denied by Nicaraguan officials.

Drug Cache Seized

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal agents have seized a cache of cocaine and marijuana worth more than $500 million — the largest cocaine seizure in Texas history — and arrested two Colombian natives described as kingpins of a major drug smuggling operation.

Marion Hambrick of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said 1,000 pounds of cocaine and 1,200 pounds of marijuana were taken from three warehouses Friday.

The Colombians, both residents of Miami, were arrested Friday as they were about to fly out of Houston Intercontinental Airport, said Don Perry of the DEA. The arrests culminated a yearlong investigation into the operation that smuggled in up to $20 million worth of cocaine each week, he said.

Jacksons See Turnout Drop

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Jacksons performed their Victory Tour show here without eldest brother Jackie, and to less than a sellout audience, but promoters said they weren't too concerned about the drop in ticket sales.

Jackie, 33, was sidelined Friday night with a knee injury, said promoter Chuck Sullivan. The other five Jackson brothers — Tito, 31; Jermaine, 29; Marlon, 27; Michael, 26; and Randy, 23 — appeared in the flashy, 90-minute show.

Canadian Labor Leader Takes On GM

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — General Motors Corp. is up against a powerful, charismatic Canadian labor leader in a strike that could cause serious damage to the Canadian economy and to the automaker, which already has been forced to lay off 13,000 U.S. employees.

Robert White, Canadian director for the United Auto Workers for six years, has been called by management officials a "very capable negotiator" and a "media darling" for his openness with reporters as he takes the union's side to the public.

White also is a vice president of the New Democratic Party, Canada's socialist party, but says he is "not a raving socialist."Unlike, for example, Arthur Scargill, leader of a crippling miners' strike in Britain, White does not see union members as shock troops in an attack on the established order.

He describes himself as innovative, but refuses to change traditional practices if that means taking something away from the workers.

About 36,000 workers at 13 GM plants in Canada have been walking picket lines since Wednesday, when union leadership rejected an offer modeled after the contract accepted by GM's 350,000 hourly workers in the United States.

Negotiations resumed Saturday in Toronto, but with more signs of building tempers than of steps toward a settlement.

Bargainers met in subcommittees and White and Rod Andrew, the chief negotiator for General Motors Canada Ltd., met informally to explore possibilities for compromise.

White said he was willing to try "anything possible to find some common ground."

The union's full 90-member negotiating team met Saturday morning to discuss prospects of a settlement, White said."They looked like a somber, determined group," he said.

GM says 13,000 workers at U.S. plants will be laid off beginning Monday because of shortages of Canadian-made parts, and more will be vulnerable if the strike continues. Analysts say the cost to the company will escalate quickly into hundreds of millions of dollars.

The effects on Canada would be even more severe. Jan Van Vliet, senior economist at Chase Econometrics Canada, told Canadian Press his firm estimates a three-month strike could cause a drop of 2.2 percent in the annualized gross national product for the fourth quarter.

A long strike is beginning to appear likely, because GM and the Canadian UAW remain far apart on the central issues, which each side describes as matters of principle, not just money.

Chief negotiator Andrew says the union is clinging to outmoded ideas of regular annual pay raises, instead of accepting profit-sharing, bonuses and incentives.

"We've got to get out of the attitude of treating everybody the same," he told a news conference. "There's got to be some incentive."

White refuses to accept profit-sharing as a substitute for wage increases.

"Profit-sharing to me takes away a great part of the feeling of social consciousness of the labor movement," he said. "Your whole life is concerned with how the enterprise you're working for is doing. You don't really care how any other enterprise is doing."

But the 49-year-old union leader denies that he is tied to the past.

"I'm innovative, I think," he said. "I want to try some new, shorter work time ideas; the corporation doesn't want to do that. I don't want to change tradition if the workers are going to lose in it; that doesn't make any sense."

"It's quite an experience. He's a very capable negotiator," said William Fisher, personnel director of Chrysler Canada, in a telephone interview from his office in Windsor, Ontario.

White led a 38-day strike against Chrysler in 1982 — when the company was still in financial trouble — and Fisher recalls how he dominated news coverage of the event.

"I guess you could classify him as a media darling," Fisher said.

White is readily accessible to reporters even in the midst of bargaining to comment on the issues, and he encourages union officials and staff to help reporters with detailed information.

Top company officials, on the other hand, tell their side to reporters infrequently, and official spokesmen are authorized to say little more than that talks are continuing.

"What we're doing obviously has a great effect on a number of people," White said.

"If we opt out of communicating through the media, we opt out of telling our side of the story," he said. "I think we have a responsibility to discuss the issues publicly."

Candy Gang Manhunt Set

TOKYO (UPI) — Police, stymied by a canny extortion ring that has terrified the nation with cyanide-laced candy, marshaled forces Saturday to cast the largest dragnet of postwar Japan to snare "The Man with 21 Faces" gang.

Police officials briefed some of the 44,000 officers who will begin searching for the gang Monday through 3.1 million homes and offices in Osaka, 300 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Mobilizing 20 percent of the country's police force, officials admit their credibility is at stake in the hunt for the band that threatens to place 100 unmarked packets of poisoned sweets on store counters unless Morinaga Confectionary hands over $410,000.

Sixteen marked, cyanide-smeared candy packets have been recovered this month by police, all from the Morinaga firm.

But the entire candy industry has suffered a 10 percent drop in total sales and lost at least $40 million since the drama began two weeks ago.

Lawyer Offers Financial Plan

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A lawyer for entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis, who was acquitted of tax evasion, said Saturday he has a financial plan to help the singer resolve his enormous income tax debt.

During the piano-pounding singer's federal court trial, he was accused of hiding assets to avoid paying the government more than $653,000 outstanding on a $1.1 million tax bill that accumulated between 1975 and 1980.

An Internal Revenue Service spokesman said "it would take a computer" to figure how much the performer now owes. But attorney Bill Clifton said he has worked out a plan to help resolve it.

"There's a general plan he and I will get together on and present to the government," Clifton said. "It's designed to resolve all these civil tax problems."

Experts Say Machine Use, Larger Farms Keyed Losses

By United Press International

North Carolina lost 13,000 farms in the past five years — more than any other state — and agriculture experts attributed the decline to increased mechanization and larger farm operations.

"There has been a great deal of consolidation in North Carolina," said Dr. Duane Neuman, an agricultural economist at North Carolina State University. "We've seen a gradual change to a more business-oriented industry and the influence of mechanization."

The number of farms in North Carolina fell by 14 percent between 1979 and 1984 — from 92,000 to 79,000, according to a new U.S. Agriculture Department survey. Nationwide, the survey said there are now 2.3 million farms, 99,700 less than in 1979 and 37,600 less than in 1983.

The survey ranked North Carolina 11th in the nation in the number of farms, a long way from the 1930s when the state ranked second only to Texas. That state still tops the list with 187,000 farms.

The USDA survey showed Texas with no farm decline during the past five years but a spokesman said the figures are rounded and there might have been a slight decrease.

North Carolina had more than 300,000 farms in 1948 but that number has steadily declined since then.

"We are way off from the days when we had those 300,000 farms but I don't see that we are different from any other state. We're just seeing a gradual downtrend like everybody else," said James Olson, statistician with the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Neuman said the state is losing farms mainly because the bigger, more efficient operations are gobbling up smaller farms.

Neuman said mechanization has enabled fewer farmers to work the land, especially in tobacco.

Ireland Is Angered By Trawler Incident

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Ireland said Saturday it was protesting a Spanish trawler's attempt to ram an Irish navy patrol ship, which fired nearly 600 shots at the vessel during a five-hour chase over gale-swept seas.

Irish officials said the chase began late Friday off the southeast Irish coast when the Spanish trawler Sonia ignored orders to stop and tried to ram the Navy fishing protection ship Aisling.

The Aisling then fired machine-gun rounds at the Sonia and the badly leaking trawler escaped into British waters. Three of the 16 crew members were rescued by a German freighter and the rest were picked up by a Royal Air Force helicopter.

A British Coast Guard spokesman said the Sonia was believed to have sunk off the coast of Cornwall.

"A strong formal protest about the incident will be lodged with the Spanish government today," an Irish Foreign Affairs spokesman said.

There was no indication from Spanish or Irish officials as to what prompted the incident, which could prove embarrassing to the Irish government.

Dublin holds the rotating presidency of the European Economic Community and has been urging speedy negotiations to allow Spain to join the group. Rights for Spain's huge fishing fleet have been a major stumbling block in the talks.

A similar incident last year involving two Basque fishing boats caused serious friction in Franco-Spanish relations after a French shell hit one of the boats, injuring nine men.

A statement from the Irish Defense Ministry said the Aisling fired into the Sonia's bow and bridge when the trawler tried to ram it.

"These were aimed to hit the trawler and not its crew," the statement said. Government sources said about 20 rounds hit the trawler.

Texas Storm Drives Families From Homes

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Waves of thunderstorms rattled the southern Plains and Mississippi Valley with heavy rain, damaging wind and threats of tornadoes Saturday after 15 inches of rain fell in less than two hours on one Texas town, forcing more than 1,400 people from their homes.

Tornado watches were issued for northeastern Texas, northwestern Louisiana, southern and eastern Arkansas, the Missouri Bootheel, western Tennessee and northwestern Mississippi. In Texas the watch covered 42 counties.

A tornado was reported near the Arkansas town of Avant on Lake Ouachita and funnel clouds were reported at Texarkana and Arkadelphia, the National Weather Service said.

The death toll from the week's stormy weather rose to eight.

Elsewhere, the third storm to roll out of the northern Pacific in a week broke up over the Rockies after its predecessors dumped up to 3 feet of snow on parts of Utah and Colorado.

Hundreds of homes remained without electricity Saturday in Salt Lake City, the result of a record-breaking snowfall that knocked down branches and power lines. At the height of the storm Thursday, up to 100,000 customers were without power, but the more than 18 inches of snow that fell in the city was rapidly melting Saturday.

Severe storm warnings and flash-flood watches were posted Saturday for large parts of Texas as thunderstorms dumped locally heavy rain, with 3 to 5 inches accompanied by hail the size of golf balls in parts of the hill country, the National Weather Service said.

North of Dallas, wind gusting to 80 mph raked the Grayson County Airport, ripping the roof from a hangar. High wind at Krum in neighboring Denton County damaged several mobile homes, and seven people suffered minor injuries, said Janie Maulden, a sheriff's department spokeswoman.

Flash-flood watches also were issued for southeastern Missouri, southeastern Oklahoma and all of Arkansas as thunderstorms marched across the region.

Several homes and barns were damaged by high wind at the community of Roberta, Okla., and forecasters said there was a chance it might have been a tornado. No one was injured, said Bryan County Sheriff's dispatcher Delores Simpson. The LeFlore County sheriff's department said some streets in Poteau and sections of U.S. 270 were closed by high water.

At least 500 homes in the southern Texas town of Sinton, just north of Corpus Christi, were heavily damaged by flooding late Friday after 15 inches of rain fell in less than two hours, the Texas Department of Public Safety said Saturday.

In nearby Odem, at least 50 homes were flooded and an additional 900 people left their homes as a precaution, authorities said. Three units of the National Guard were activated to assist in the evacuations, said state Trooper J.D. Kaelin.

"We've got all kinds of hell over here," said San Patricio County Sheriff's Deputy Terry Simpson. "We've got floods. We've got houses torn up. You name it, we got it."

"There are still numerous cars abandoned on the road between Sinton and Odem, but we don't know if all the drivers are accounted for," Kaelin said Saturday. Up to 5 feet of water covered U.S. 77 between Sinton and Odem at the height of the downpour, he said.

At least 15 inches of rain drenched Sinton between 3:30 and 5:30 p.m. Friday, but most of the rainfall had ended by Saturday, he said.

Bluntzer and Bayside received about 17 inches of rain, and Robstown, just west of Corpus Christi, received from 15 to 20 inches.

However, the heavy rain mostly bypassed Corpus Christi and did not fall on the watershed around its main reservoir northwest of the city, which is under a mandatory water rationing plan because of an almost two-year drought.

Elsewhere, students on their way to high school football games in Mathis, Orange Grove and Odem were stranded in buses Friday. Flooding closed highways leading to those towns and several area games were canceled.

Most roads were reopened Saturday, Kaelin said.

Friday's storms also spawned five tornadoes that caused scattered damage, and lightning struck an oil rig two miles south of Odem, injuring three people, one seriously, authorities said.

The week's storm death toll climbed Friday night when an Odem man using a tractor to assist flood-stranded cars hit a washout in the pavement and was killed, Kaelin said. The man was thrown from the tractor and his neck was broken, the trooper said.

On Saturday, one person was killed in a traffic accident on a rain-slick highway in northeastern Oklahoma, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Earlier in the week, tornadoes killed a woman in Argo, Texas, and a man in Winona, Mo. Two mountain climbers died of exposure while scaling El Capitan in Yosemite National Park, Calif. One man was killed in a Colorado traffic accident during snow, and another was killed in an avalanche.

3 Cadets Suspended In Student's Death

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Three members of Texas A&M University's Corps of Cadets were suspended from school for a year and a former member was disciplined Friday in the hazing death of a transfer student who had joined the organization, according to a newspaper report.

Bill Kibler, assistant director of student affairs and A&M's disciplinary hearings officer, notified the three juniors — Anthony D'Alessandro and Jason Miles, both of Houston, and Louis Fancher III of San Antonio — that they had been suspended from the university until the 1985 fall semester, unnamed sources told the Bryan-College Station Eagle.

A fourth student, Gabriel Cuadra, a senior from Houston, was also disciplined, but the nature and extent of the action could not be determined, the paper said in Saturday's editions.

Cuadra could have been suspended or expelled from the university.

The four students were disciplined in connection with the Aug. 30 death of 20-year-old Bruce Goodrich of Webster, N.Y. According to police reports, the three juniors rousted Goodrich and another transfer student from their beds early that day and forced them to run and do "motivational exercises."

Goodrich collapsed after about an hour and died later that day of heat stroke. The other transfer student, police said, suffered no ill effects from the exercise.

All four students were indicted Sept. 28 on a charge of hazing, a misdemeanor under the Texas Education Code.

The three juniors were also indicted on a misdemeanor charge of criminally negligent homicide. The charge alleges they forced Goodrich to run and exercise after he showed signs of difficulty.

Cuadra, who resigned from the corps after Goodrich's death, was indicted on another misdemeanor charge of tampering with evidence. The indictment accuses Cuadra of destroying an exercise schedule the day after Goodrich died.

Kibler confirmed that he gave the students his decision Friday, but he refused to say what that decision was, citing a federal law that protects students' privacy.

He said, however, that the students will receive written notification of the decision early next week, and will have three days to appeal to a university panel that is the final authority in disciplinary actions.

Kibler said suspension generally means that a student may apply for readmission to A&M after a certain period. Readmission is not automatic, he said, but must be approved by the Office of Student Affairs.

The juniors' attorney, W.W. "Bill" Vance, could not be reached for comment. Cuadra's attorney, Henry "Hank" Paine Jr. of Bryan, refused all comment on the case.

Farmers Gather To Offer Foreclosure Protest

By TOM SEERY
Associated Press Writer

CORYDON, Iowa (AP) — Protesters pounded 40 wooden crosses into a courthouse lawn Friday in memory of the farmers and business owners who have been foreclosed since 1982, then marched into the courthouse to make sure David Grismore didn't become the 41st.

"We're here today to say that we're not going to suffer alone anymore. We're going to stand together," farmer Ross Blount, an organizer of the protest, told a crowd of 200 people.

Farmers and townspeople then filed into a courtroom, just as Grismore was granted a foreclosure extension by District Judge Gene Needles. The Corydon farmer now has until March to figure out how he'll pay about $700,000 he owes the Federal Land Bank of Omaha, or lose his 1,400-acre farm.

"I'm not going to tolerate it, and I want that mood spread throughout all of the people," Grismore said outside the Wayne County Courthouse after the extension was granted. "If we get enough of a show of strength, and if we get big enough or rotten enough, they're going to have to deal with us."

The peaceful protest was intended to show lenders and government officials that farmers are no longer too proud or independent to ask for their neighbors' help, Blount said.

"We have a heritage, and that heritage is that the family farm is the backbone of this nation," Blount said. "By standing together we can claim that heritage and can be faithful to it and protect and preserve it."

Blount told the farmers that few of them are immune to the situation facing Grismore.

"Next winter, when it's time to review the loans again, maybe your loan will be the one that's called up," he said.

The rally outside the courthouse was organized by the Wayne County Farm Survival Committee, formed to help farmers and Corydon businesses facing foreclosure. Several counties in Iowa have formed such committees recently, and plan to hold similar protests.

Everybody Knows Bubba

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Bubba Bunn, who made brief appearances in the East Carolina backfield three seasons ago as a freshman, had a career record of 26 carries and 116 yards coming into Saturday's East Tennesse State game.

But by the time the afternoon was over, the Goldsboro junior had ripped off 14 carries for 161 yards and two touchdowns to spark the Pirates to a 24-6 victory over the Division I-AA 19th-ranked Buccaneers.

"He reminds you a little of Earnest Byner," Coach Ed Emory said afterwards referring to the former ECU standout fullback now with the Cleveland Browns. "He's had academic and other problems the last two years, but has come back to contribute to the team. Bubba's got more open field running ability than Reggie Branch, but he's probably not as strong."

Bunn had been approached by the Pirate staff in the spring to switch from tailback to fullback, and again in the fall. "We have a philosophy that we don't change a man's position if he's not willing," Emory said.

Bunn, at the time, wasn't interested in making the switch. But after injuries to fullbacks Branch, Bobby Clair and Anthony Simpson, Bunn came to the coaches and asked if they were still interested in him as a fullback. Saturday afternoon, he proved the move was a good one.

Bunn scored the first Pirate touchdown early in the second quarter on a 29-yard sprint and closed out the scoring in the final minute-plus with a 42-yarder.

"We just wanted to run the ball out at the end of the game, but Bunn had a super effort and scored," Emory said. "There is no doubt about it that the player of the game is Bubba Bunn in my mind."

But Bunn wasn't the only unsung hero of the day. Ron Jones came in to spark both of the second period touchdown drives and launched a 46-yard pass to Ricky Nichols for the second score.

Jeff Heath added three PATs and a field goal of 33 yards to up his career scoring to 169, moving him to fourth place on the all-time ECU scoring chart.

Surpringly, however, East Tennessee dominated play throughout the game — just couldn't put the ball into the end zone. They controlled the ball for 17 minutes more than the Pirates, 38:15 to 21:45. They ran more plays, 83 to 50, and had more yardage, 314-312.

"They beat us with the big plays," ETSU Coach Buddy Sasser said. "It's been the same problems all year long. We get it close but we can't seem to stick it in. I think if we had been able to score in the first quarter, we may have been able to win the game. I think the game was a lot closer than the score indicates."

For Emory, the victory was a sweet one. "It feels ohhhh so good to win," he said. "We sure needed a victory."

Emory praised the defense of the Buccaneers, saying that the Pirates have seen better talent, but no other team had played with the character and courage of the Bucs. "We did not move the ball that well today. I

USFL Considers Changes, Express Sold

THE DAILY
SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 21, 1984

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The United States Football League wound up its fall meeting Saturday by announcing the troubled Los Angeles franchise had been sold, but said it would announce its realignment plans at a New York news conference in two weeks.

However, league sources said the USFL would likely play its 1985 season, the last it will play in the spring, with 15 teams. That would be accomplished by merging the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia francishes, which will play at the University of Maryland; the Oklahoma and Arizona franchises to play in Arizona, and Michigan and Oakland, which would play in Oakland, Calif.

There were also reports that New Orleans, which moved from Boston last year, would move to Portland, Ore., and that the Chicago franchise purchased last spring by Eddie Einhorn might play in Dallas, at least for one season until going back to Chicago in the fall. Chicago had also been reported going to Charlotte, N.C. and Honolulu and as one source put it:

"All this could change in an hour."

The Los Angeles Express was purchased by Jay Roulier, a part-owner of the Houston Gamblers, who said he had bought a new franchise but would assume the multi-million dollar contract of Steve Young and other high-cost contracts. The team had been run by the league since J. William Oldenburg, under whom the Express lost a figure estimated at more than $10 million last year, had dropped out because of financial problems.

Roulier said that he was buying "a new franchise" and had made no decisions on even such basic matters as a stadium. The Express played in the Los Angeles Coliseum its first two seasons, sometimes drawing crowds of less than 10,000 to the 90,000-seat stadium.

The meetings began in the aftermath of two major decisions taken by the two-year old league.

One was to switch from the spring to the fall starting in 1986 to take on the established National Football League head-on. The second was a $1.32 billion antitrust suit filed against the NFL in New York last Wednesday alleging among other things that the NFL had prevented the USFL from obtaining a network TV contract for the fall.

They ended on a somewhat bizarre note — with the league announcing only the Los Angeles sale and saying the rest of the changes would be announced in two weeks in New York.

League officials also then said that any participants in the meetings who divulged details would be subject to a $50,-000 fine by the league.

However, that followed a day of almost incessant leaks by owners and other club officials emerging from the meetings that detailed the shape of the 1985 USFL. The mergers were predicated in the most part by necessity and by the switch to the fall.

Oklahoma, for example, had been unable to find a suitable stadium in the state and a merger with Oakland fell through. Thus the potential merger with Arizona.

League champion Philadelphia, the USFL's most successful team on the field in its first two years, was the last holdout against the fall switch. However, the Stars could not obtain a suitable stadium for fall use and announced they would switch in 1986 to Baltimore.

Then, on Friday, owner Myles Tanenbaum said the team would almost surely play in Maryland, probably at Byrd Stadium in College Park next spring. And Saturday, according to sources, the team merged with Pittsburgh when owner Edward DeBartolo Sr. decided the market wasn't profitable.

Michigan also has stadium problems and Oakland has been looking for a team with which to merge.

"We came out strong," said John Bassett, the owner of the Tampa Bay Bandits, the outgoing chairman of the league's executive committee, which had expected to keep working through Sunday.

"We came in here with a lot of differing opinions and a lot of differing problems. But we got it done and we got it done ahead of schedule."

Commissioner Chet Simmons said the reason for the lack of any official announcment was working out details. "We have a lot of paperwork left to do," he said.

Humes Sparks Heels By Wolfpack, 28-21

AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — Sophomore tailback William Humes breathed life into North Carolina's sluggish offense Saturday and sparked the Tar Heels to a 28-21 victory over arch-rival North Carolina State.

Humes, starting in place of Ethan Horton, rushed 27 times for 156 yards and three touchdowns, including the game-winner on a 2-yard dive with 31 seconds left.

"The linemen just put their heads to it and we just said we were gonna run the ball like the days of oid," Humes said. "That's all it took — us wanting to do it."

While the numbers dazzled the crowd of 50,600 at Kenan Stadium, Humes called the afternoon "decent."

"I should have had some longer runs," said Humes, whose longest effort was a 24-yard dash very early in the third period. "I made some cuts where there were no blockers. You've got to really put me down for that."

Humes was part of a new look in the Tar Heel offense. Freshman fullback Brad Lopp started in place of senior Eddie Colson, and sore-shouldered Mark Maye started in place of Kevin Anthony.

Anthony was 5-of-8 for 82 yards and directed the game-winning drive. He also tossed a two-point conversion pass to Humes to cap the victory.

"We started Mark at quarterback to give him some game experience," North Carolina coach Dick Crum said, "and take some pressure off of Kevin, who hadn't played that well in the last two games."

N.C. State Coach Tom Reed said the Wolfpack hurt itself with turnovers. The team lost its only fumble and suffered a pass interception. Two missed field goals in the fourth quarter didn't help.

"We were inside their 20 too many times not to get any points," Reed said. "We just weren't capitalizing when we had the chance."

The Tar Heels, chosen to win the conference in a pre-season poll, are 1-1 in league play.

Humes also scored on a 5-yard dash around the left end late in the first period and added a 3-yard score at the start of the third period. The latter score followed a Tim Esposito interception and gave the Tar Heels a 20-7 edge.

The Wolfpack, 3-4 and 1-3, rallied when Derrick Donald fumbled a punt and N.C. State converted it into a score. Esposito hit Ricky Wall on a 41-yard pass play with 11:28 left in the third quarter. Mike Cofer's conversion pulled N.C. State to within 20-14.

Electing to try a fourth-and-three play instead of a field goal, Esposito hit Jeff Brown with 4-yard pass. That led to Michael Miller's 1-yard dive with 5:54 left in the period and Cofer's conversion for a 21-20 Wolfpack lead.

Cofer missed field goal attempts of 26 and 47 yards in the fourth period. North Carolina drove to the Wolfpack 15 after the first miss, but Horton, who rushed for 122 yards in 16 carries, fumbled to free safety Michael Bowser. The Wolfpack failed to parlay the turnover into points when Cofer missed his second attempt and North Carolina then started its 74-yard march for the winning score.

A desperation pass by Esposito was picked off by Donald as the Wolfpack tried to retaliate in last 20 seconds.

N.C. State outgained the Tar Heels 437-403. Senior tailback Joe McIntosh rushed 26 times for 131 yards.

Tigers Thrash Blue Devils

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The Clemson Tigers cleared the bench Saturday in their 54-21 romp past Duke, and Blue Devil coach Steve Sloan admitted his team was totally overpowered.

"We just really weren't much competition for Clemson early in the game," he said. "This is the worst halftime situation I've ever been involved with."

Sloan said he was proud of his team for coming back in the second half and scoring 21 points but admitted the game was a mismatch.

"Clemson is a very dominant team and we just couldn't play with them," he said, noting his team had problems with injuries.

The game was satisfying for coach Danny Ford, who said he wasn't trying to run up the score. "We played just about everybody we had," he said, "and you can tell that our young people need a lot of work." The Tigers' offense, led by the pass receiving of Terrance Roulhac, scored every time they touched the ball in the first half.

A Clemson Memorial Stadium crowd of 80,500 watched the Tigers, 4-2, flex the muscle of old and run up a 41-0 halftime lead over Duke, now 1-5.

The Tigers, with a 3-1 ACC record, dominated the Blue Devils' offense, forcing a punt on every first half possession. Duke is now 0-2 in the conference.

Clemson All-America middle guard William Perry set the school record for career quarterback sacks with his 19th, and for tackles causing a loss, with his 46th and 47th.

On offense, the Tigers shredded Duke's defense by land and through the air.

Clemson moved out to a big lead in the first quarter as Roulhac gathered in touchdown passes of 30 yards from tailback Stacey Driver and 26 yards from reserve quarterback Anthony Parete. Tiger kicker Donald Igwebuike added a 53-yard field goal for a 17-0 lead at the end of the first period.

In the second quarter, reserve Tiger tailback Steve Griffin sprinted 60 yards for a touchdown, Driver scored on a 2-yard run and starting Clemson quarterback Mike Eppley hit Ray Williams with a 16-yard touchdown pass to seal Duke's fate.

Kenny Flowers led the rushing attack with 119 yards on 11 carries. Roulhac finished with five receptions for 129 yards.

Clemson turned down the heat in the second half as the Tiger reserves got a chance to play.

The Blue Devils finally got on the board in the third quarter when fullback Tracy Smith ran 11 yards before fumbling into the end zone, with Devil tailback Stanley Monk pouncing on the ball for a touchdown.

Duke's offense came to life in the second half with quarterbacks Drew Walston and Steve Slayden combining for 328 passing yards in the game.

Word, Petty Lead Cavs

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Tailbacks Barry Word and Howard Petty each rushed for more than 100 yards and scored two touchdowns apiece as Virginia amassed 511 total yards, but Cavalier Coach George Welsh said defense was the key to a 28-9 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over Wake Forest Saturday.

"I thought it was a great defensive effort," Welsh said. "We put some pressure on the quarterback. We decided to blitz the shotgun and make him (Wake Forest quarterback) throw the ball fast."

The result was three interceptions for the Cavaliers.

Word ran for 140 yards on 18 carries and Petty accumulated 131 on 21 attempts as Virginia piled up 355 yards on the ground in improving its record to 5-1-1, the Cavaliers' best start since 1951. Virginia, which has not been beaten since losing its season-opener to Clemson, is now 2-0-1 in ACC play.

Wake Forest, held to a season-low point total, fell to 4-3, 2-2 in conference play.

After spotting Wake Forest a 3-0 lead on a 25-yard Danny Nolan field goal set up by a Cavalier fumble, Virginia took control fo the game with three unanswered touchdowns in the second quarter.

Starting at its own 15 with less than a minute remaining in the opening period, Virginia drove 85 yards in eight plays for its first score.

Quarterback Don Majkowski completed passes of 27 and 20 yards on the drive and Petty put the Cavaliers on the scoreboard by taking a Majkowski pitch and going the final 5 yards for the touchdown.

Less than 6 minutes later, Virginia made it 14-3 when Word broke through a hole in the left side of the Wake Forest defense and sprinted 43 yards for his first touchdown of the game.

The Cavaliers made it 21-3 less than 3 minutes before intermission by driving 59 yards in 11 plays following Wake Forest's 7th punt of the first half. Word burst up the middle for the last five yards for the score and Kenny Stadlin booted his school record 40th consecutive point after.

"We didn't play that well offensively early but whe you play defense that well soemthing is going to turn around and it did," said Welsh. "Our offense is coming around. We're utilizing our split end and flanker better. The quarterback is starting to run the ball. That's a lot of things to stop our there."

Welsh said Majkowski, a sophomore, is "getting better. He's a little erratic, but that's OK with me. He's making the big plays for us."

Virginia's defense limited Wake Forest to a single first down and 83 yards total offense in the first half. The Deacons, ranked second in the ACC in rushing offense, managed just 25 yards on 14 running plays before the half.

Following a scoreless third quarter, Virginia upped its advantage to 28-3 with a long drive following an interception by William Frazier. The Cavaliers marched 81 yards in a dozen plays with Petty scoring from 3 yards out.

Pirates Win Homecoming...

was a little disappointed with the offensive line play. We have to play much better to beat South Carolina next week."

Emory said that while the defense bent, it didn't break. For the first time in several weeks, the defense didn't give up the long gainer on the pass."

The Buccaneers drove into ECU territory its first possession, moving from their own 29 to the ECU 34 before a screen pass resulted in a seven-yard loss, forcing a punt.

Late in the first period, Darrell Speed launched a bomb to Amos Adams, the play going 84 yards for a seeming touchdown, but it was called back for illegal procedure.

The Pirates took over on their own 47 early in the second period after a punt and marched in just seven plays to the end zone. Bunn picked up one first down with a nine-yard run, and then Jones hit Nichols for 12 yards and another first down at the ETSU 28. After a yard loss, Bunn took the ball on a draw play and raced right up the middle, then zigzagged his way to the end zone 29 yards away for the first score. With 8:00 left, Heath booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

The Pirates quickly struck again on their first play after forcing a punt. Jones faded back and launched the bomb to Nichols who gathered it in to go 46 yards for the score, just 1:08 after the previous score. Heath's kick made it 14-0.

East Tennessee got on the board on the next series, moving from its own 18 to the 13 before a fumble cost the Bucs field postion and they had to settle for a 47-yard Campbell field goal. Quarterback Robbie White picked up 14 yards on one keeper, while Jerry Butler got 13 on another. But after reaching the 13, Butler lost a yard on second down, and then fumbled it back to the 30 before a teammate recovered. Campbell's kick cut it to 14-3 with 54 seconds left.

The Buccaneers came out smoking in the second half, marching from their own 29 to the ECU four before again bogging down and settling for a 21-yard field goal by Campbell. In a drive that lasted 5:12, the Bucs moved down the field with White passing to Tom Dodd for 13 and getting 10 more on a personal foul against the Pirates to the 10. A third-down pass at the four fell incomplete, and Campbell's kick cut it to 14-6 with 9:48 left.

East Tennessee drove again after recovering a Pirate fumble at the ETSU 48, and White hit Mark Neely for 14. The next play saw the Pirates hit with a face masking penalty to the 14, but White was sacked on second down to the 22, and a 39-yard field goal try by Campbell two plays later was off target.

The Bucs came back with another drive from their own 24 after a punt, but after reaching the ECU 28, a screen pass on fourth and four lost a yard and turned it over.

East Tennessee and East Carolina then exchanged turnovers, giving the Bucs a brief chance again. Henry Williams fumbled an end around, recovered by ETSU, but Stefon Adams intercepted White on the next play, returning it 20 yards from the end zone.

Several plays later, however, Bunn again fumbled after gaining 20 yards, and ETSU had it back on their own 42. After reaching the Pirate 38, however, White was injured and left the game. Walt Bowlin, in for White, hit Paul Rose for 18 to the 24, but on the next play was intercepted by P.J. Jordan at the 19.

The Pirates were forced to punt minutes later, but got the ball back when Stuart Ward grabbed the ball after it slipped through the receiver's hands at the ETSU 24.

After holding, the Pirates took over at the ETSU 49 on a punt, and Bunn gained seven yards on first down. Then, he struck up the middle and raced all the way, 42 yards for the score with 1:03 left. Heath again was good and the Pirates held a 24-6 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, ETSU was doubly penalized — five yards for being offsides on the PAT, and 15 more for a personal foul afterwards. ECU seemingly went for the "bam-bam" on-side kick from the ETSU 40, but ETSU was again off sides, and on the next try, Heath chipped it over the heads of the expectant Bucs.

Emory denied the Pirates were going for the on-side kick. "We just tried to kick it hard and see what happened. My nose has been in the ground so many times that I know better to rub in a victory," he said.

The Pirates were on top of their passing game in the contest. Speed hit on four of six for 27 yards and Jones, on three of four for 74 yards.

Butler led the ETSU rushing with 99 yards, while White, before his injury, completed 12 of 18 passes for 104 yards.

Bunn's 161 yards rushing was the most for a Pirate back since Tony Baker had 165 yards against Temple in the final game of the 1982 season.

The win snapped a three-game losing streak for the Pirates and raised their record to 2-6. East Tennessee drops to 4-3.

The Pirates take to the road again next Saturday travling to Columbia, S.C., to face the unbeaten and nationally-ranked Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina.

Houston Upsets SMU, Takes Lead

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Mike Clendenen kicked five field goals and quarterback Gerald Landry hit tight end Carl Hilton with a 68-yard scoring pass Saturday, giving the Houston Cougars a 29-20 upset of sixth-ranked Southern Methodist and the Southwest Conference leadership.

Houston, defeating a top 20 team for the first time in its last 12 tries, is now 4-3 and 3-0 in the conference.

Previously unbeaten and untied SMU is 2-1 in the league and 5-1 overall.

Houston built a 16-0 halftime lead but SMU's Reggie Dupard sprinted 71 yards for a touchdown to close the gap.

The Cougars made it 26-7 in the third period when Hilton broke free and outsprinted the Mustang secondary on a short pass from Landry.

Clendenen, who had earlier field goals of 37, 48, 23, and 25 yards, then kicked a 25-yard field goal. It tied his school record of five field goals in a game.

It was the most points scored against SMU since Bobby Collins became the coach in 1981.

Six plays later senior Clendenen kicked the longest field goal of his career, a 48-yarder for a 6-0 Houston lead.

Kevin Alexander's recovery of a King fumble set in motion a 53-yard drive capped by Raymond Tate's one-yard scoring run on fourth down.

The Cougars never had to punt in the first half when they held SMU to only 64 yards rushing.

Landry completed 12 of 17 passes for 193 yards and rushed 12 times for 44 more. Hilton caught 4 passes for 103 yards.

Arkansas.....18

AUSTIN (AP) — Quarterback Todd Dodge threw two touchdown passes and Texas defenders intercepted four Arkansas passes Saturday as the third-ranked Longhorns fought off an Arkansas comeback to win 24-18 in Southwest Conference football.

A fumble by Texas' Terry Orr at the Arkansas 1 when it appeared Texas had scored almost turned the game around, and Arkansas put on a furious rally that fell only 3 yards short of a winning score.

After the fumble, Arkansas moved 99 yards for a touchdown, which came on a 54-yard pass from quarterback Brad Taylor to James Shibest with 4:50 left in the game.

An interception by Arkansas' Nathan Jones at the Razorbacks' 39-yard line with 2:56 remaining gave the visitors a chance to pull out the victory.

Arkansas drove to the Texas 12, and after two 5-yard penalties for delaying the game, Taylor threw to Jamie Lueders, who was tackled by Tony Tillmon at the Texas 3 with no time remaining on the clock.

Dodge threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to split end Brent Duhon in the first quarter, and 5 yards to tight end William Harris for a touchdown in the third quarter. Two 21-yard completitions to Duhon set up Texas' other touchdown, a 7-yard scoring dash by Kevin Nelson in the second period.

The victory kept Texas undefeated at 4-0-1. The Longhorns are 2-0 in the SWC. Arkansas fell to 3-2-1 and 1-2 in the conference.

South Carolina (11)...36
Notre Dame.....32

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Backup quarterback Mike Hold scored two fourth quarter touchdowns, including one on a 33-yard dash, Saturday to rally undefeated and 11th-ranked South Carolina to a 36-32 victory over Notre Dame.

The triumph was the sixth straight for the Gamecocks, who never had won six in a row in one season while Notre Dame, suffering a third straight loss at home for the first time since 1956, slumped to 3-4 after holding a 26-14 lead in the third quarter.

Hold, taking over for Allen Mitchell, directed a 73-yard drive in 15 plays which ended when he sneaked over from the 1-yard line early in the fourth quarter. His 33-yard run on a third down broken pass play capped a 75-yard march to put South Carolina ahead to stay.

The Irish, capitalizing on a couple of fumble recoveries, opened the second half with a 47-yard field goal by Carney and then scored on a 6-yard pass from Allen Pinkett to quarterback Steve Beuerlein.

That's when Hold took over to direct the Gamecocks' attack while scoring two touchdowns.

With South Carolina leading 29-26, Notre Dame's Chris Smith fumbled and Rick Rabune recovered on the Irish 17-yard line. Three plays later Quinton Lewis smashed over from the 4-yard line to give the Gamecocks a 10-point lead. That offset a 1-yard touchdown run by Pinkett with 4:27 left in the game.

South Carolina took the lead in the first quarter when the Gamecocks recovered a fumbled punt on the Notre Dame 31. Five plays later Mitchell scored from the 1-yard line.

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Ken Zachary raced 87 yards for one touchdown as 12th-ranked Oklahoma State used the big play to build a 31-3 halftime lead and went on to defeat Kansas 47-10 in a Big Eight Conference game Saturday.

The Cowboys, 5-1 and 1-1 in the league and held to one field goal in a loss two weeks ago to Nebraska, scored on five of their seven possessions in the first half.

Touchdowns included a 38-yard scoring run by Charles Crawford, an 18-yard touchdown pass from Rusty Hilger to Jamie Harris and Zachary's cross-country run, in which he outran two defenders.

Crawford also had a 9-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter.

The touchdown pass came one play after Oklahoma State's Rod Brown intercepted a Mike Norseth pass for his sixth pickoff this year. It marked the 17th consecutive game the Cowboys defense had recorded an interception.

Shawn Jones also had a 4-yard scoring run to complete a 12-play drive in the first half, and Larry Roach had field goals of 35 and 48 yards.

Ronnie Williams, the Cowboys' backup quarterback who played most of the second half, scored on a 4-yard sneak in the game's final minute.

Oklahoma State's defense, ranked ninth nationally, continually throttled Kansas, holding the Jayhawks to a 29-yard first-quarter field goal by Dodge Schwartzburg and a 14-yard touchdown run by Mike Rogers.

Georgia Tech.....34

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Mike Mann, getting a rare chance to start, completed his first 10 passes and directed an Auburn offense that swamped Georgia Tech 48-34 Saturday in college football.

Thirteenth-ranked Auburn scored on seven of its first eight possessions and drove to the 1 on the other in raising its record to 5-2.

Tech now is 3-2-1,

The Tigers exploded for 41 points in the first half, with Mann passing for 42 yards for one and Jeff Burger, 18 yards for another. Tommie Agee, Tim Jessie and Collis Campbell ran for a touchdowns ad Robert McGinty kicked two field goals before intermission.

Mann, starting for injured Pat Washington, connected with Freddie Weygand on a 56-yard scoring pass in the final quarter and ended the day with 11 of 17 completions for 271 yards.

Quarterback John Dewberry rallied Tech to 34 second half points, throwing touchdown tosses of 33 yards to Gary Lee and 45 yards to Gary Wilkins, and running it in from the 9 himself.

Robert Lavette and malcolm King got the other touchdowns on short runs.

Lavette, with 60 yards, became Tech's all-time leading rusher, passing Eddie Lee Ivery, who gained 3,517 from 1975-78. Lavette, a senior, now has 3,529 yards.

So completely did Auburn dominate that the Tigers did not have to punt until less than three minutes remained in the third period. Meanwhile, Auburn held Tech to only 15 yards in the first half.

The Yellow Jackets managed their initial first down in the second period on a 10-yard run by Dewberry, but on the next play Tom Powell knocked the ball loose from Lavette and Gerald Williams recovered at the Tech 36.

With its 41-0 halftime lead, Auburn substituted freely the rest of the way.

Freshman Freddy Weygand scored twice for Auburn on pass plays of 42 and 56 yards and piled up 160 yards on five catches.

Dewberry connected on 12 of 21 passes for 260 yards.

Auburn now holds a 44-39-4 edge in the series. Georgia Tech entertains Tennessee next Saturday while Auburn, with five straight victories, travels to Mississippi State.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Defensive back Devon Mitchell picked off two passes to set up an Iowa field goal and a touchdown as the No. 18-ranked Hawkeyes handed Michigan a 26-0 Big Ten Conference college football loss Saturday.

The victory was Iowa's first against the Wolverines in Iowa City since 1962. The loss was Bo Schembechler's worst in his 16 years as Michigan's head coach.

Iowa, 5-2 overall and 4-1 in league play, took a 6-0 lead with seconds left in the first quarter on Ronnie Harmon's 3-yard touchdown run. The extra point was missed.

Mitchell, a junior redshirt, then set up Tom Nichol's second-quarter field goal by picking off a pass by Michigan quarterback Russell Rein and returning it 20 yards.

Iowa's veteran defense, ranked 17th in the nation, allowed Michigan only three first downs and 65 yards total offense before intermission.

The Hawkeyes led 9-0 at the half and then opened up the second half with a 46-yard field goal by Nichol.

Michigan then received the ball at Iowa's 36-yard line and marched downfield until Mitchell picked off a pass on the 1-yard line and returned it 75 yards.

Michigan running back Rick Rogers put the touchdown-saving tackle on Mitchell, but two minutes later Owen Gill scored on a 10-yard carry.

Quarterback Chuck Long, who had 14 completions in 20 attempts for 146 yards, punched in the final score with a 2-yard run.

Iowa's defense has not given up a touchdown in the last three games.

With the loss, Michigan's record fell to 4-3 overall and 3-2 in the league.

West Virginia Sacks Boston College

MORGANTOWN, W.Va (AP) — Tailback John Gay rammed 5 yards for a touchdown with 4:52 remaining Saturday as 20th-ranked West Virginia roared back in the second half for a stunning 21-20 upset of No. 4 Boston College.

Gay's scoring run culminated a 10-play, 80-yard drive as the 6-1 Mountaineers rallied from a 20-6 halftime deficit.

West Virginia's defense stopped a last-ditch BC drive after quarterback Doug Flutie had moved the Eagles to the Mountaineer 38-yard line in the final minutes. West Virginia linebacker Fred Smalls took the momentum from the drive by sacking Flutie for an 11-yard loss with just 2:55 left.

BC, 4-1, built its halftime cushion with two big second-quarter plays. Steve Strachan rambled 24 yards for a score with 3:11 to go in the period, and Flutie hit Kelvin Martin with a 42-yard scoring pass on the next series as the Eagles broke a 6-6 tie.

Strachan's touchdown run followed a controversial play on a fourth and two at the West Virginia 34 when Flutie's perfect fake prompted an inadvertent official's whistle. It was ruled that BC had made enough yards for the first down before the whistle, and two plays later Strachan broke loose off the right side for the touchdown to give BC a 13-6 lead.

In the fourth quarter — two series before West Virginia's game-winning drive — BC was shortchanged when officials apparently lost count of downs, and the Eagles punted after just three downs.

West Virginia fullback Ron Wolfley banged in from the 1-yard line on fourth down, on the first play of the fourth quarter, as the Mountaineers moved to 20-15 with a 68-yard scoring drive.

Washington (1).....17
Oregon ..... 10

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington's top-ranked Huskies had only three first downs and 109 total yards Saturday but used a third-quarter blocked punt by Tim Peoples for a touchdown in a 17-10 Pacific-10 Conference victory over the stubborn Oregon Ducks.

Oregon's rugged defense held Washington to 73 rushing yards on 28 carries and 36 passing yards.

Oregon lost starting quarterback Chris Miller with a mild concussion in the second quarter. They got to the Washington 20-yard line in the final minute behind backup quarterback Mike Jorgensen, only to run out of downs with 46 seconds left. The Huskies then ran out the clock.

Washington, which moved into the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press college football ratings this week, got what proved to be the winning score when Peoples blocked Mike Preacher's punt and Mike Gaffney fell on the ball in the Oregon end zone with 10:55 gone in the third quarter. That put Washington ahead 17-7.

Colorado ..... 7

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Junior walk-on Travis Turner scored on runs of 1 and 3 yards and tossed an 11-yard TD pass as No. 5 Nebraska overcame three quarters of lackluster play to beat determined Colorado 24-7 in Big Eight college football action Saturday.

The victory boosted the Cornhuskers to 6-1 overall and 3-0 in the Big Eight, while Colorado fell to 1-6 and 1-2 before a sellout crowd of 52,124 at Folsom Field.

The Huskers were lethargic for three quarters, with Coach Tom Osborne alternating between Turner and senior Craig Sundberg at quarterback. But with Nebraska trailing 7-3 late in the third period, Osborne decided to go with Turner and the slumbering Huskers finally came to life.

Turner began his resuscitation efforts late in that period by starting a 13-play, 79-yard drive that ended 39 seconds into the fourth quarter when he plunged over from a yard out to give Nebraska its first lead, 10-7.

Five minutes later, Nebraska safety Bret Clark intercepted a Steve Vogel pass and returned it 11 yards to the Colorado 29. Four plays later, the Huskers were on the Colorado 3 and Turner ran the option for another TD that made it 17-7.

On Nebraska's next possession, Turner put the game out of the reach of the emotional Buffaloes with his scoring strike to tight end Brian Hiemer. Turner's off-balance throw — which came as he was going down in the grasp of a Colorado defender — capped a 10-play, 58-yard drive.

Brigham Young (7)....30
Air Force.....25

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Junior quarterback Robbie Bosco fired four touchdown passes, three of them covering more than 50 yards, to spark seventh-ranked Brigham Young to a 30-25 victory over Air Force in Western Athletic Conference football Saturday.

The victory extended BYU's winning streak to 18 games — longest in the nation. The Cougars are now 7-0 overall and 4-0 in the WAC. Air Force, which saw its three-game winning streak snapped, fell to 5-3 overall and 2-3 in league play.

Bosco's third TD pass, a short pass that halfback Kelly Smith turned into a 56-yard play, staked the Cougars to a 21-9 lead early in the third quarter, but Air Force rallied.

As light snow dusted Falcon Stadium, the Falcons scored a touchdown and field goal to get within 21-19 with 8:12 left in the third quarter. Bart Weiss' 57-yard pass to a leaping Kevin Fleming drew AFA within 21-16, and Carlos Mateos' 46-yard field goal four minutes later cut the deficit to two.

Late in the quarter, however, Bosco, facing a third-and-21 situation from the BYU 46, connected with tight end David Mills on a fly pattern at the AFA 20 and Mills scored untouched.

Ohio St. (8).....23
Michigan St.....20

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Ohio State tailback Keith Byars rushed for 121 yards and a touchdown and Rich Spangler kicked three field goals Saturday, but only a shanked field goal attempt by Michigan State's Ralf Mojsiejenko with three seconds left gave the No. 8 Buckeyes a 23-20 Big Ten victory over the upset-minded Spartans.

Michigan State's defense forced the Buckeyes to punt and the Spartans took over the ball 39 yards from the goal line with 2:56 remaining in the game.

Spangler kicked field goals of 36, 42 and 30 yards to account for all the scoring in the first half.

Byars scored on a 1-yard run 57 seconds into the second half to stake the Buckeyes to a 16-0 lead before the Spartans began their gutty comeback.

Bobby Morse took a 2-yard pass from Dave Yarema at 5:57 of the third quarter, but Mojsiejenko missed the extra point attempt.

In the fourth quarter, Mark Ingram and Yarema hooked up on a 75-yard TD pass play at 3:20, but a two-point conversion try failed.

Pittsburgh.....7

MIAMI (AP) — Record-breaking quarterback Bernie Kosar passed for 351 yards and one touchdown and Alonzo Highsmith added two short scoring runs Saturday to boost ninth-ranked Miami to a 27-7 homecoming victory over Pittsburgh.

The spectacular sophomore passer, who last week established school records of 373 passing yards and five touchdowns against Cincinnati, hit Stanley Shakespeare for a 16-yard touchdown on the Hurricanes' first possession.

The Pitt defense stiffened, allowing only a 44-yard Greg Cox field goal in the remainder of the first half. But Kosar completed seven of 11 passes for 59 yards as the Hurricanes moved 83 and 43 yards to touchdowns on their first two possessions of the second half.

Highsmith capped the first march by jumping over the middle for a 2-yard score, and he ended the second with a 5-yard jaunt through the middle of the Pitt defense.

Louisiana St. (10).....36
Kentucky (16).....10

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Dalton Hilliard rushed for 164 yards and an LSU record-tying four touchdowns Saturday as the 10th-ranked Tigers overcame five first-half turnovers and rolled to a turnover-filled 36-10 Southeastern Conference victory over previously unbeaten No. 16 Kentucky.

The Tigers, 5-0-1 overall and 2-0-1 in SEC play, led only 9-3 at halftime as Juan Betanzos kicked field goals of 43, 20 and 38 yards to set an LSU career record of 36.

The field goals, plus a defense that held Kentucky's 15th-ranked offense to 75 yards in the first half, enabled the Tigers to withstand three lost fumbles and two interceptions in the first two periods.

But Kentucky, which got a 33-yard field goal from Joe Worley that tied the score 3-3 early in the second quarter, coughed the ball up four times itself in the first half and five more in the final two periods to set up Hilliard's last three touchdowns. Hilliard scored three times in a 2:09 span of the third period.

Hilliard, the nation's fourth leading rusher with a 123.4-yard average, carried 31 times and scored twice on 14-yard runs, once on a 1-yard plunge and finally on a 3-yard burst.

George Adams, the nation's sixth best rusher with a 118.8 average, scored Kentucky's touchdown on a 1-yard run late in the third period to cap a 90-yard drive engineered by second-string quarterback Kevin Dooley. But Adams managed only 24 yards on 13 carries in the first half, although he finished with 70 on 22 rushes.

LSU marched 79 yards in 11 plays on its first possession of the third period. It took a 15-3 lead on the first 14-yard run by Hilliard, who carried four times for 39 yards during the drive. The 187-pound junior also reeled off runs of 11 and 14 yards and Jeff Wickersham fired a 21-yard pass to Eric Martin as the Tigers drove to the Kentucky 19. After Garland Jean Batiste gained five yards, Hilliard took a pitchback, cut sharply inside and darted untouched to the end zone.

On Kentucky's first play after the ensuing kickoff, linebacker Ricky Chatman intercepted Bill Ransdell's pass and returned it 17 yards to the Wildcats' 18. Hilliard went over from the 1 three plays later to make it 22-3.

Vanderbilt.....35

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia red-shirt freshman quarterback David Dukes fired a pair of touchdown passes as the 14th-ranked Bulldogs erupted for three TDs in a three-minute span Saturday, easing to a 62-35 Southeastern Conference football victory over Vanderbilt.

Georgia, 5-1 and 3-0 in the league, raced to a 42-21 halftime lead in the wild-scoring affair, as the teams combined for 612 yards on offense in the opening 30 minutes of the game, nationally televised on cable. Georgia finished with 562 yards overall.

Georgia's 42 first-half points were a Bulldog record, topping the 35 they scored in a 56-6 victory over VMI in 1967.

The 59-point total also was the most scored under Coach Vince Dooley and the highest since a 76-0 victory over The Citadel in 1958.

Dukes, who took over the starting job last week when Todd Williams injured his shoulder, scored on a 2-yard run and threw touchdown passes of 21 and 49 yards to Herman Archie and Stanley Blalock during the three-minute blitz late in the second period.

Cincinnati.....17

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Kerwin Bell tossed a pair of touchdown passes to Ricky Nattiel and John L. Williams rushed for 111 yards and two more TDs to pace a 578-yard offensive attack that carried 17th-ranked Florida to a 41-17 college football rout of Cincinnati Saturday.

The homecoming victory was the fifth straight for the 5-1-1 Gators and fourth under interim Coach Galen Hall who took over Sept. 16 when Charley Pell was fired as an NCAA probe of the Southeastern Conference school entered its final stages.

Cincinnati, losing for the fifth straight time, fell to 1-5 under first-year Coach Dave Currey.

Bell, the SEC's passing efficiency leader, completed eight of 12 attempts for 148 yards and hiked his season TD pass total to 11, equaling the number the Gators had during the entire 1983 campaign.

Florida scored on its first four offensive possessions and led 31-2 at halftime as Bell tossed scoring passes of 14 and 45 yards to Nattiel and Williams and James Massey headed into the end zone on runs of 1 and 7 yards, respectively.

Williams, who scored on a 20-yard run in the third quarter, recorded the sixth 100-yard game of his career on 18 carries, while Neal Anderson surpassed the century mark for a school-record ninth time, gaining 105 on 16 attempts.

Massey became the third Florida runner to top the 100-yard mark late in the fourth quarter. He finished with a team high 120 yards on 18 carries.

Cincinnati got on the scoreboard with 3:49 left in the second quarter when Walter Lewis tackled Nattiel for a safety on a punt return. The Bearcats scored again early in the third period when Troy Bodine fired a 40-yard touchdown pass to Deno Foster.

McIntosh was hit by Troy Simmons and fumbled the ball to linebacker Micah Moon at the N.C. State 15. Three plays later, Humes scored and Miller added the conversion at the 1:58 mark of the first period for a 10-0 edge.

North Carolina used Horton for the first time midway through the second period and he ripped for 55 yards in four carries and moved the Tar Heels down to the Wolfpack 14 on a 31-yard sprint. Fullback Brad Lopp fumbled on the next play, linebacker Frank Bush recovered at the 12 and N.C. State turned it into a touchdown.

The 12-play drive ended on Esposito's 1-yard touchdown pass to Ralph Britt with 1:51 remaining and Cofer added the conversion to cut the Wolfpack deficit to three.

Anthony entered for the first time following the kickoff and directed the Tar Heels from the 18 to the N.C. State 11. Two passes fell incomplete, Horton was tackled after a 1-yard gain and Miller came on for his second field goal with 26 seconds left before intermission.

Vols Edge Alabama

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnnie Jones scored on a 1-yard plunge with 2:09 remaining and Tony Robinson raced in for the 2-point conversion as Tennessee overcame a 14-point deficit in the final five minutes to edge Alabama 28-27 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Robinson had cut the margin to 27-20 with 4:54 to go when he fired a 17-yard touchdown strike to Tim McGee.

Robinson also had an 8-yard touchdown pass to Joey Clinkscales in the second quarter and Fuad Reiyez had field goals of 27 and 29 yards as the Vols lifted their record to 3-2-1 overall and 1-2 in the SEC.

Alabama, which fell 2-5 and 0-3, had dominated play until Tennessee's late comeback.

Paul Ott Carruth scored on runs of 4 and 12 yards and freshman Vince Sutton connected with Greg Richardson on a 68-yard pass to account for Alabama's touchdowns. Van Tiffin added field goals of 36 and 21 yards.

It was Tennessee's third victory in a row over Alabama, cutting the Crimson Tide's series lead to 34-25-7 and drawing a throng of fans onto the field at the finish to rip down goals at both ends.

The Vols needed a fourth down conversion on their 70-yard touchdown drive that cut the Alabama lead to 7. It came when William Howard gained the needed three yards to extend the drive at the Alabama 47, and Robinson came back two plays later with a 28-yard pass to Jeff Smith at the 19 to set up the touchdown.

Alabama had several other opportunities to put the game out of reach, advancing to the Tennessee nine late in the first quarter where Don Horstead dropped the ball and Tommy Sims recovered for the Vols. Later, Ricky Moore of Alabama lost a fumble at his 12, setting up a tying field goal at the time.

The Crimson Tide also recovered a fumble at the Tennessee 24 in the waning seconds of the first half, but Tiffin was wide left on a 35-yard field goal attempt that could have stretched the lead to 10 points at intermission.

Tiffin's 36-yard field goal came midway through the first quarter after Alabama had driven 60 yards to the 19 on its first possession. Horstead then fumbled away the second scoring opportunity before Alabama cashed in an interception by Louis Dean at the Tennessee 33, setting Carruth's first touchdown early in the second quarter.

Tennessee finally scored with just under four minutes left in the half on Robinson's pass to Clinkscales, capping a 71-yard drive and triggering a wild finish. Reveiz kicked his field goal less than two minutes later to tie the game following Moore's fumble that Jim Dunkin recovered at the Crimson Tide 12.

Alabama then ran two straight plays before hitting with the bomb. Richardson got behind the Tennessee defense, caught the pass on the 25 and picked his way down the sideline to complete the 68-yard scoring play only 35 seconds before halftime.

Kansas St.....21

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Marlon Adler ran for two touchdowns and tossed a 46-yard touchdown pass to George Shorthose in the first quarter as Missouri took advantage of four Kansas State turnovers to rip the Wildcats 61-21 in a Big Eight game Saturday.

Missouri offense bowled over the Wildcats for 315 yards and a 34-7 lead by halftime before reserves came on in the second half.

Todd Elder played the first three series before Randy Williams came on for the Wildcats, 1-2 in the conference and 2-5 overall.

Adler ran 25 yards on an option play for Missouri's first score with 12:03 left in the first quarter. Gary Justis recovered a fumbled punt by Kansas State's Brad Lambert at the Wildcat 27 to set up the score.

Adler, who completed 10 of 17 passes for 184 yards and two touchdowns in one half of play, guided the Tigers on a 64-yard, seven-play drive. He finished the march with a 7-yard run that gave Missouri, 2-1 and 3-4, a 14-0 lead with 7:18 remaining in the first period.

Texas Tech.....30
Rice.....10

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Tech's Robert Lewis scored his first two touchdowns of the year and Rickey Gann kicked three field goals to lead the Raiders to a 30-10 victory over Rice Saturday.

It also evened Tech's record at 3-3 for the season and 2-2 in SWC games, while the Owls dropped to 1-5 and 0-3. Rice has not won an SWC game since beating Houston Nov. 29, 1981.

Lewis, appearing in his fourth game this season, rushed 129 yards on 27 carries to share offensive honors with Gann, who had field goals of 25, 19 and 26 yards.

The Raiders took a 17-3 halftime lead on Lewis' runs of 23 and nine yards and a 25-yard field goal by Ricky Gann on the first drive of the game.

USM Tops Ole Miss

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Scrambling quarterback Robert Ducksworth sprinted seven yards for a third-quarter touchdown and underdog Southern Mississippi held on Saturday for a 13-10 football victory over the University of Mississippi in what may have been the last meeting of the storied series.

Winning for the fifth time in the last seven years, Southern, a 10-point underdog, ended a four-game losing streak and pushed its record to 2-5.

Trailing 10-3 at intermission, Southern scored on its first two possessions of the third quarter, with its only touchdown coming after Tim Smith picked off a pass.

Smith intercepted a Kent Austin pass at the Southern 36 and returned it 31 yards. Ducksworth's 21-yard pass to Chris McGee took the ball to the 9-yard line and two plays later Ducksworth swept around right end for the decisive touchdown.

Mississippi, 3-3-1, jumped to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter when Austin connected with Tim Moffett on a 19-yard scoring pass. Southern's only points in the half came on a 42-yard field goal by Rex Banks with 51 seconds left in the first quarter.

Southern pulled within four points on its first possession of the second half, driving from its own 20 to the Ole Miss 17, from where Banks hit a 32-yard field goal with 11:46 left in the quarter.

Penn.....13

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Fullback Doug Black scored three touchdowns and quarterback Nate Sassaman rushed for a game-high 116 yards as Army rolled up its highest point total since 1977 with a 48-13 college football victory Saturday over Penn.

The point total was the highest for Army since a 48-13 decision over Holy seven seasons ago. Army completely outgunned the smaller Quakers, rushing for a total of 408 yards.

The Black Knights took the opening kickoff and marched 80 yards in 10 plays, with halback Dee Bryant scoring on a pitchout from the five. Army then went 70 yards in 15 plays with Black scoring from the 1.

After Penn connected on a 43-yard field goal by Tom Murphy, Army made it 21-3 on a 4-yard TD burst by Black.

The Quakers scored their only TD in the second quarter when Rich Comizio went in from a yard out. But the Cadets went ahead 28-10 at the half on a 6-yard TD run by Jarvis Hollingsworth.

The Cadets added a touchdown in the third quarter on a 1-yard run by Black, and added two TDs in the fourth on a 9-yard pass from Rob Haly to Rob Dickerson and a 1-yard run by Tom Perry.

The loss was Penn's first of the season, giving the Quakers a 4-1 record. Army improved its record to 4-1-1.

Princeton.....3

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy quarterback Bill Byrne connected on two touchdown passes to split end Chris Weiler and Todd Solomon kicked two field goals, one of them a school record 52 yards, to propel the Midshipmen to a 41-3 victory Saturday over Princeton.

Navy scored twice in the first period on consecutive possessions to open up a 14-0 lead before the Princeton defense stiffened and allowed the Tigers to narrow the gap to 14-3 on a 28-yard field goal by Mike Miskovsky midway through the second period.

Solomon booted his 52-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half, topping the Navy record of 50 yards set by Steve Fehr against Army in 1980. The Middies broke open the game with two more TDs and another field goal by Solomon in the third period.

The Navy defense shut down Princeton's running game, and the Tigers were unable to move the ball consistently on the passing of quarterback Doug Butler.

Vikes Nip Rose In Overtime

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — Junior Simms passed for two touchdowns, but it was his eight yard scramble in the second overtime that allowed Kinston to come away with a 29-26 Big East football victory over Rose High School Friday night.

Both teams played give-away in the final two minutes of play after Rose had struggled back from a 13-0 deficit to tie it up. Kinston then scored on a 52-yard pass from Simms to Tom Vermillion with just under two minutes left and Rose came back on a 52-yarder from Battle Emory to Dwight Smith with less than a minute to go.

In the first overtime, both Kinston and Rose settled for field goals, and Rose, after having a play at the one, was again forced to take a field goal in the second overtime.

A pass interference call gave Kinston new life at the end after they were thrown back into a hole, and Simms scrambled into the corner of the end zone on the next play to end the game with the Viking victory.

Kinston had forged its lead on a 23 yard Simms to Chris Bradshaw touchdown and a one yard plunge by Ronnie Fields. David Mitchell kicked two PATS and a 27-yard field goal.

Rose rallied on a pair of Emory passes to Tyrone Smith, of 47 and 44 yards, while Brian Bridges kicked two PATS and two 23-yard field goals.

But the loss left Coach Chip Williams quite disappointed.

"We seem to be in a syndrome that we have to break out of. We do some things correctly, but we have spells when we don't believe we can perform and feel that it won't go our way — and, as a result, it doesn't.

"We played hard tonight, and I'm proud of them."

Rose had an early theat when Joey Hallow intercepted Simms on the first series of the game, returning the ball to the Viking 34. But Rose was unable to pick up a first down and turned it back.

The Vikings marched right down the field to score on the following series. On the first play, Tim Platte broke right through the middle for 22 yards to the Rose 45. Two plays later, Platte again rambled for 18 yards to the Rose 25. Two more plays netted two yards before Simms hit Bradshaw on the one and he fell into the end zone for the score. Mitchell's kick was no good and with 6:11 left, the Vikings held a 6-0 lead.

The Vikings came right back on their next possession to march again, going 59 yards on a long, 12-play drive. Maurice Crouell ran for 13 on third and eight to put it on the Rose 33, and Platte broke away again for 11 to the Rose four. Fields banged to the one on first down, but it took two more plays before he crashed over for the TD with 10:13 left in the half. Mitchell was good this time, making it 13-0.

The Rampants got good field position again at the Kinston 40 after a punt, but after making two first downs on Emory passes to Dwight and Tyrone Smith of 10 and 11 yards respectively, ran out of gas again.

Early in the second half, the Rampants, pinned back on second and 16 from their own 18, got relief on a 43-yard pass from Emory to Dwight Smith to the Kinston 39. A double reverse cost the Rampants eight yards however, before Emory hit Tyrone Smith down the sidelines for a 47-yarder that put Rose on the scoreboard. A fumble on the PAT try cost Rose the chance to close within six, and it remained at 13-6 with 9:04 left in the period.

The Rampants again had good field postion after a punt at the Vike 42, but again failed to pick up a first down.

Early in the final period, Rose recovered a fumble at the Kinston 42 and after losing two yards on first down, used the same play down the sidelines, Emory to Tyrone Smith for a 44-yard score. Bridges' kick tied it at 13-13 with 9:58 left.

A punt late in the game gave the Vikings good field position at the Rose 46, but Simms was sacked on first down back to the Kinston 48. But from there, Simms found Vermillion wide open to the right side and he outraced the defense to the end zone to return Kinston to the lead, 20-13 with 1:54 left to go.

Rose quickly struck back. On second and 17 from the Rose 21, Clay Young threw a wingback option pass to Tyrone Smith, who made a circus catch on the end of his fingertips just before going out of bounds at the Rose 48.

Kinston, failing to pick up yardage in its first overtime opportunity settled for a Mitchell field goal of 27 yards.

Rose then had its chance and on second down, went to its "water bucket" formation, drawing Kinston off sides. That made it second and goal from the five. Twice more, Rose tired passes from the water bucket, but failed to connect on each before Bridges kicked a 23-yard for the 23-23 tie.

"I thought we could put it in," Williams said of his choice of plays. "It's a safe play and I thought it would work. We should have put it

Greene Central Overcomes Mistakes

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Why is this man smiling?

Even though his team lost four out of seven fumbles and threw an interception late in the game, Greene Central Coach Spence Grantham was thankful. Not for the turnovers, of course, but for his Rams' 16-3 victory over the Ayden-Grifton Chargers Friday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school football.

Charles Artis erased a 3-0 Charger lead in the first quarter with a 58-yard touchdown run on an option play and finished with 138 yards on 19 attempts. Artis also ran seven yards for the other Greene Central touchdown.

"Our backs were just tight at the start of the game," Grantham said of the Rams' fumbles on their first three drives. "We'd put the ball in the pocket and just couldn't handle it. At halftime I told the first-team backs that they'd be running against the first-team defense next week in practice, and they don't want to hit that line.

"Our defense really hit some folks. After giving them as many opportunities as we did in the first quarter, it felt good to see they only had three points."

After two plays from scrimmage, Ayden-Grifton's Wesley Hardee jarred the ball loose as Artis hit the line, and the Chargers recovered on the Greene Central 35. Again the Ram defense held, this time at the 31.

The Chargers finally put points on the board after Hardee recovered a first-down fumble at the Ram 26 yard line. Ayden-Grifton moved the ball to the 13 on three plays, but Greene Central forced a 32-yard field goal by Gene Johnson with 2:10 left in the first quarter.

Artis picked up four yards on the first play after the Charger kickoff, then took a pitch around the right end for a 58-yard touchdown with 1:06 remaining in the opening quarter. Kenneth Radford's extra-point kick put the Rams ahead to stay at 7-3.

"We don't have a star on this team," Grantham said. "We never get down on each other. When the offense turned the ball over three times at the start of the game, nobody was pointing fingers. The defense just went out there and shut (Ayden-Grifton) down.

"Kenneth (Warren) just hasn't been able to relax and throw the football like he can. He's had receivers open, but his wrist is tight instead of loose like it's supposed to be. He had a receiver open tonight, but he didn't get enough on the ball and threw it to the defensive back."

Despite just one completed pass, the Rams forged 216 yards rushing to record their fourth conference win in as many outings. Greene Central improved its overall mark to 6-2 after opening the season with a pair of losses.

"Our goals have been aimed at one game at a time," Grantham said. "Last week it was Farmville Central, this week Ayden-Grifton and next week we can't think of anyone but Southern Nash. It's been a must game every week.

"We've had to win to knock the other team out of the playoff picture. I just hope we can keep up the momentum we've built so far."

Ayden-Grifton quarterback Danny West lofted a pass into the hands of Ram defensive back Kenneth Warren at the Charger 40, and Greene Central took over on the eight after a 32-yard return.

Artis picked up three yards on first down but was stopped for no gain on the next play. An incomplete pass set up fourth and goal at the five, and West ran a misdirection into the heart of the Charger defense to end the scoring threat.

After an exchange of punts, Ayden-Grifton drove to the Greene Central 35 before the Rams held on third and 10. The snap to punter

Plymouth Interceptions Lead Win Over Panthers

PLYMOUTH — Plymouth High School intercepted North Pitt eight times Friday night and used four of those pickoffs to pull out a 24-8 victory over the Panthers in a non-conference football game.

Michael Jackson intercepted two of the eight, returning them for 30 yards, and his first set up the opening score by the Vikings in the first quarter. Jackson turned the ball over to the offense on the Panther 37 and a few plays later, Ceen Gibbs broke away for a 26-yard scoring jaunt giving Plymouth a 6-0 lead.

In the second quarter, another interception turned it over at the Plymouth 20, and the Vikes drove back down the field to scored on a one-yard run by Danny Fenner. That made it 12-0 at the half.

The Vikings added two more scores in the third quarter, both of them also set up by interceptions. The first put the ball on the North Pitt 28, and Gibbs scored from 19 yards out. The second interception put the ball on the Panther 38, and Fenner scored from the two winding up the Vikings' evening.

North Pitt came back with its only score in the final quarter. After recovering a fumble at the Plymouth 46, the Panthers drove down with Jarvis Massenburg scoring from the four. Calvin Hunter passed to Andre Jones for the PAT.

The loss was the seventh straight for the Panthers this year, while Plymouth upped its record to 4-3.

Jaguars Thump Aycock, 56-0

PIKEVILLE — Gary Moore, Edward Davis and Carl Harris each scored two touchdowns as Farmville Central worked out its frustrations on Charles B. Aycock High School Friday night with a 56-0 romp.

Farmville dominated the contest, limiting Aycock to only 49 yards in total offense, while grinding out 439 of its own. Farmville intercepted three Falcon passes and pulled in one of five Aycock fumbles, while having only one turnover itself.

Moore got the first Jaguar touchdown in the opening period of the game, scoring on a seven yard run, staking Farmville to a 6-0 lead.

In the second period, Farmville broke it open with three scores. Davis got his first on a two-yard run, upping it to 12-0. Bobby Evans then tossed a short pass to Andre Vines, who lateralled to Moore for a 34-yard scoring play, upping the lead to 18-0. Jeff Vail closed out the scoring for the period on an eight-yard run, with Evans passing to Dennis Tripp for the PAT and a 26-0 halftime edge.

Early in the second half, Jerome Daniels intercepted a Falcon pass and returned it 51 yards for another Jaguar score. Davis followed with a one-yard run for a second score in the quarter, and Harris scored from 12 yards away to run the lead to 48-0 as the third period closed.

Harris got the lone Jaguar score of the final period on a 15-yard run.

Vail finished the night with 20 carries for 154 yards, while Moore, a freshman, had nine carries for 78 yards and Harris had four for 52.

The win boosted the Jaguars to 3-4 on the year and 1-2 in conference play. Aycock drops to 1-7 overall and 1-3 in the league.

Bullets Blitz Aurora, 75-0

AURORA — Tracy Peele scored five touchdowns and rushed for 118 yards to lead Jamesville in a 75-0 blitz of Aurora Friday night.

The Bullets enjoyed a 422 yard to 56 advantage in total offense in the game as they completely shut down their hosts. The shutout was the fourth straight for the Bullets and their fifth in seven outings. The only unbeaten 1-A school in the state, Jamesville has allowed only one touchdown and six points by schools in their own classification.

Peele started the scoring early, pushing in from five yards out in the first of three Jamesville scores in the quarter. Richie Ange hit Robbie Harris for the PAT and an 8-0 lead. Harris added the second score of the period on a 15 yard run and Ange booted the PAT. Ange then hit Terry Perry on a 56-yard pass to run the score to 21-0 after the first quarter.

Three more Jamesville touchdowns went up on the board in the second quarter. David Biggs pulled in a ten-yard pass from Ange for the first and Ange again kicked the PAT. Peele then returned an interception 25 yards for his second score of the night. Biggs followed that with a 75-yard punt return that ran the score to 41-0 at halftime.

Peele scored twice more in the third period to account for both Jamesville touchdowns in that quarter. He went in from four yards out for the first, then returned a punt 45 yards for the second. That upped the lead to 55-0 as the final quarter got underway.

Peele closed out his scoring in the final period with a 25-yard run. Maurice Moore then scored from a yard away and Neil Lilley raced 16 yards with the final score to wind down the evening.

Peele finished the game with 118 yards on nine carries, while Harris raced for 110 on four trips.

Jamesville is now 7-0 on the year and 4-0 in conference play. Aurora is 2-5 overall and 1-3 in the league.

Bertie Slips By Washington, 6-2

WASHINGTON — Washington failed in three scoring attempts in the ball game and Bertie pulled out a 6-2 Northeastern Conference football victory Friday night.

The Pam Pack, in losing its third straight game, had several chances to get on the scoregoard, but couldn't quite get it in. Three times the Pack drove inside the 15 yard line of the Falcons. Once, they lost the ball on a fumble and another time it was intercepted by Calvin Burton after being tipped at the line. The latter came with 1:33 left in the game. Washington was on the six at the time.

The lone score for Bertie came in the second period of the contest when Terry Gilliam eased in from a yard away.

The Pack picked up its score in the final 33 seconds when Allen Castellow took an intentional safety by running out of the back of the end zone.

The loss drops the Pack to 3-4 on the year, 2-3 in conference play. Bertie climbs to 5-2, 3-2 in the conference.

Rams Topple Chargers...

Warren completed a 16-yard pass to Steve Wells at the Charger 33. Ayden-Grifton could have escaped unscathed, but defensive back Cedric Hines dropped a potential interception at the Charger 25.

A penalty against Ayden-Grifton for improper equipment and a pair of short runs moved the ball to the Charger 23, and Warren ran for 13 yards on a option play around the right end. A seven-yard run on another option play moved the ball to the three yard line, but an illegal procedure penalty against Greene Central moved it back to the seven.

Ayden-Grifton ran five plays from scrimmage before punting with 8:01 left in the third quarter, and the Chargers never got the ball again until the final period. Jerome Flowers carried for 34 yards and Artis rushed for 23 as the Rams' ground attack moved the ball to the Charger 11 before settling for a 28-yard field goal by Radford with 11:45 left in the fourth quarter.

The loss dropped the Chargers out of the playoff drive with a 0-3 Eastern Carolina record, while 4-3 overall.

"We just didn't block; we had an extremely poor game blocking," Ayden-Grifton Coach Dwight Tart said. "We didn't get (the backs) any holes. At the end they just kind of gave up; we saw our chance of the playoffs go down the drain.

"It's tough for kids this age to play two emotional games in a row. It's homecoming next week; that should get them up again if anything will."

Rose had to go on offense first in the second overtime, and quickly picked up eight yards on a sweep by Tyrone Jones. But Emory failed to sneak into the end zone on first down and a proceedure penalty on the next play pushed it back to the six, from where a pass fell incomplete. Bridges then kicked again from 23 yards away, giving Rose at 26-23 edge.

On first down, Simms lost four yards and a second down pass fell incomplete.

But on third down, Rose was flagged for pass interference and pleas from Rose coaches that Simms had crossed the line of scrimmage before throwing were to no avail.

On the next play, Simms kept the ball around the right side and just made the corner of the end zone for the game-winning score.

The victory boosts the Kinston record to 4-3 overall and 2-2 in league play. Rose falls to 2-4-1 overall and 0-4 in conference play.

Hagler Pounds Hamsho In Three

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Hagler came to the Big Apple for the first time and found it delicious.

The undisputed middleweight champion destroyed Mustafa Hamsho Friday night, knocking him down twice in the third round before the challenger's trainer jumped into the ring to end the fight. Hamsho lasted two rounds and 2:31 of the third in his second try at Hagler's title — the Syrian left-hander was stopped by cuts in the 11th round on Oct. 3, 1981.

"All the greats — LaMotta, Sugar Ray Robinson, my idol Floyd Patterson, Ali, Frazier, Emile Griffith, Jersey Joe Walcott — fought here. For me to be in the same place where it all started ... I'm glad I defended mine here.

"There's been a lot of pressure ... I've been all over the world and I guess you've seen me at my best when I came here to New York."

"It was so obvious, the public saw it," Hagler said of Hamsho's attempted butts. "You can't leave it up to the referee or the judges. There is only one way to do it — my way.

"I said to him, 'If you want to play dirty, I'll play dirty, and I'll hurt you. If you want to box, I'll box.' Once he started to get dirty, I put my punches together and tried to break his head.

"Hagler is a great champion, a great fighter," admitted Hamsho, now 38-3-2. "I twisted my right ankle after the first knockdown and, after that, I couldn't hold myself up.

"I saw the second right coming and I tried to move out of the way. But I couldn't."

Hamsho, at 159½ the same weight as Hagler, earned $300,-000 for his short night's work and said he is not thinking about retiring.

Hagler, now 60-2-2 with 50 knockouts and an unbeaten streak of 34 fights dating back to a March 9, 1976 loss to Willie Monroe, earned $1.4 million for his 10th title defense, which was televised by Home Box Office. And he's looking to the larger payday with Hearns — the only opponent on the horizon with whom Hagler can attract such a purse.

"The media is doing me a favor, keeping me lean and hungry," said Hagler. "I'll pay you if you could get Tommy Hearns in the ring with me soon.

"I don't want to keep stepping back. I put all my belts on the line to show you I'm the only true champion in the world. You know who we want, who the public wants. Hearns better come and get me before I don't want him no more."

Prior to Hagler's sensational performance, Mike McCallum was devastating as he picked apart Sean Mannion for a unanimous 15-round decision for the vacant World Boxing Association junior middleweight crown. The 26-year-old McCallum, 153¾, won at least 13 rounds on the cards of all three judges. The native of Jamaica, now living in New York, is 22-0 with 19 knockouts and succeeds Roberto Duran as champion.

Mannion, from Ireland but now living in Dorcester, Mass., is 29-6-1. He was ranked No. 2.

Roanoke Rapids Eases By Tigers In Triple Overtime

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Brian Finch kicked a pair of field goals in overtime to help Roanoke Rapids gain a 19-16 triple overtime victory over Williamston in a Northeastern Conference football game Friday night.

The game ended in a 7-7 tie, forcing the overtimes. Both teams scored touchdowns but failed on their PAT tries in the first overtime and both got field goals in the second.

But in the third, Spurgeon Ricks broke through to block a Tiger field goal attempt and then Finch nailed a 30-yarder in the Yellow Jacket portion of the overtime for the win.

Williamston scored first in the game, in the second quarter. Roanoke Rapids had attempted to run off a fake punt but failed to make the needed yardage and Williamston took over on the 37. Jesse Ward passed to Kermit Brown for 25 yards to set up a one yard run by Ronald Myrick for the score. Brown booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

The Tigers also drove down to the 15 yard line before an incomplete pass and a penalty cost them the chance to score again. Roanoke Rapids later drove to the Tiger 22 before Robert James pulled in an interception to half that drive at the five.

Late in the game, Ward was injured and a sub was sent in to punt, getting off only a 15-yarder, and that helped set up the tying touchdown by the Jackets. Robie Poythress then pushed in from three yards out and Finch's kick tied it up.

In the opening overtime period, Williamston scored on a Maurice Jones plunge from the one, but the PAT kick missed. The Tigers got new life, however, after Poythress scored from the two when Finch also missed, leaving it at 13-13.

The loss kept the Tigers winless after seven games, and 0-5 in the conference. Roanoke Rapids climbs to 6-1 overall, 5-1 overall.

Bodine To 'Sweat Out' Sunday's American 500

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Pole winner Geoff Bodine says he'll have to "sweat out" some of the other cars in order to win Sunday's demanding Warner Hodgdon American 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Bodine won the pole with a Thursday qualifying time of 144.415 mph, just edging out Bill Elliott's speed of 144.363. The fastest 20 times qualified Thursday, with the remaining 20 spots captured Friday for the 40-car, 492-lap race.

"It was really good for us because the car pushed us a little bit which I thought might hurt us, but I guess it didn't," Bodine said of Thursday's run. "I guess I'll have to go over and sweat out some of those other cars.

"It was really nice to pull off the pole position on the first day," he added. "I guess the next thing to do is just go out and win the race."

Elliott, winner of this year's Miller High Life 500, will share the front row with Bodine. Elliott says the problems he and his crew have had in the past here seemed to have eluded them this time around.

"I am tickled to death," Elliott said. "This is the best we have ever run here. In the past we seem to always have problems. This time there were only little problems. Naturally, I would have liked to have been first, but starting on the front row is really important here."

Elliott's minor problem occurred when the car was "tight" and never lossened up. "We thought it would lossen up and it didn't," he said. "We found some little problems that we though we had fixed, but didn't."

Gant placed fifth at 143.893, with Dale Earnhardt sixth at 143.176. Richard Petty, seeking his 201st victory, will start from the 12th position with a time of 142.431.

"I don't know what was happening with the car," Labonte said. "When we came off the fourth corner it wanted to go up a lot higher than I wanted it to. The car just wasn't working right. I think it will be all right for racing, but wasn't for qualifying."

"For some reason or another the car just didn't come out of the corner," Gant said of his qualifying run. "I felt like it was running real good and I really thought the lap was better than it was."

While Gant and Labonte will look to grab a victory here to put a stronghold on the points standings, Elliott has some all-out strategy planned.

Cox Leads Conley

MOREHEAD CITY — Joel Cox completed 12 out of 20 passes for 151 yards and three touchdowns to lead D.H. Conley to a 27-8 thrashing of West Carteret Friday in Coastal 3-A high school football.

Martin Anderson led the Viking ground attack with 104 yards on nine carries. Leonard Johnson had four receptions for 32 yards and a five-yard touchdown, while Derrick Parker caught two passes for 32 yards. Anderson caught one pass for 27 yards.

After Johnson's TD reception, Cox threw to Jimmy Faulkner for a 13-yard touchdown and Anderson ran 19 yards to put the Vikings ahead 21-0 at halftime.

Bruce Perrini ran eight yards to put West Carteret on the board in the third quarter, but Cox found Steve Mills for a 10-yard touchdown pass to close the scoring.

D.H. Conley, now 1-1 in Coastal Conference action and 4-3 overall, closes out its home schedule next Friday against Havelock. West Carteret dropped to 0-2 in the league and 3-4 overall.

Friendship Tops GCA

ROCKY MOUNT — Friendship Christian Academy pushed through three first half goals and went on to record a 5-0 victory over Greenville Christian Friday in the first round of the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference soccer tournament at Rocky Mount.

Peterson scored off a Marshall Cain assist 16:35 into the second half, and Cain finished up the scoring at 29:47 off a penalty kick.

"We tried to play a defensive game on them because they are a strong team," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "But we've been plagued all year long by mental mistakes and they hurt us again. We'll just have to look to next year now."

The loss closed out the GCA season with a 4-9 record. Friendship was to play today for the conference championship.

Tarboro Rolls Over Roanoke

ROBERSONVILLE — Joe Coefield scored three touchdowns and James Brown added two more as Tarboro romped to a 57-0 victory over Roanoke High School Friday night in Northeastern Conference football action.

The Redskins were able to put together very little in the game, offering only one threat. They drove to the Tarboro 35 before having to punt. The Redskins got only 120 yards in total offense as opposed to 515 by the Vikings.

Brown scored his first touchdown in the opening period on a one-yard plunge and John Poindexter kicked the PAT for a 7-0 lead. Coefield added a second score before the period ended, going over from the three for a 14-0 edge at the end of the quarter.

The Vikings scored twice more in the second period. Darren Bryant passed for both of those, one of 23 yards to Donald Frank and the other of 26 yards to Ricky Dozier. Walter Bell ran over the PAT after the first and Poindexter added a kick after the second. That gave the Vikes a 29-0 edge at intermission.

Brown got his second touchdown in the third period on a six yard run, upping the lead to 36-0. Carl Joyner opened a 21-point final period with a one-yard dive, while Coefield finished it up with 47 and 1-yard runs.

Fred Crowell finished the night with 110 yards on six lugs, while Coefield had 70 yards on five carries.

Roanoke's offense was led by Corey Baker with 14 carries for 78 yards.

The Redskins fall to 1-7 with the defeat, and are 0-6 in the conference, Tarboro is 6-1 with a 5-0 league mark.

Knicks Get Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks, foiled earlier in the week in their efforts to pry Jim Paxson from the Portland Trail Blazers, have turned to Butch Carter to solve their backcourt problems.

The 6-foot-5 Carter, who played at Indiana University, enjoyed his best season as a professional last year, averaging 13.4 points per game for the Pacers in 73 games, 54 as a starter. Carter also led Indiana in steals with 128.

He has averaged 9.1 points per game during his four-year NBA career.

The Los Angeles Lakers selected Carter in the second round of the 1980 draft. After spending his rookie season with the Lakers, Carter was dealt to the Pacers Oct. 15, 1981.

The Knicks, who had sent an offer sheet to an arbitrator for study as to whether or not signing Paxson would be in violation of the salary cap, lost any chance at the 6-6 guard when he signed a six-year deal with the Trail Blazers.

Dolphins, 'Skins Look For Road Wins

By The Associated Press

After losing their first game of the National Football League season last week, the San Francisco 49ers hope to get back on the track Sunday. The Miami Dolphins and Washington Redskins, meanwhile, will try to keep rolling.

The 49ers, beaten 20-17 by Pittsburgh last Sunday after six straight victories, would seem to have the easiest task of the three NFL powerhouses in facing the winless Houston Oilers, 0-7.

It's the 7-0 Dolphins and the 5-2 Redskins, who have won five straight games, who will have their work cut out for them. The Dolphins play the New England Patriots and the Redskins the St. Louis Cardinals, both on the road.

A victory for the Cardinals, tied for second place in the National Football Conference East at 4-3 with Dallas and the New York Giants, would put them even with the Redskins atop the division. A victory for the Patriots, 5-2, would move them within a game of the Dolphins in the American Football Conference East.

San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said he's wary of Houston, a 28-10 loser at Miami last week. The Oilers have allowed the most yardage and the most points in the NFL and have gained the least yardage and scored the fewest points, but "they've been improving and improving and seem right on the verge of breaking through. Unfortunately, we could very well be the breakthrough team, so we're going to really have to be at our best.

"But having been through the same thing that (Houston Coach) Hugh (Campbell) is going through, I just am reminded that when you finally break through those things, your team begins to really get into sync. So we're naturally concerned."

The Dolphins, who beat the Patriots 28-7 at Miami this season, lead the AFC East by two games over New England and the Jets. But as successful as they've been against the Patriots at Miami — 17 straight victories dating back to 1966 — they've been as bad at Foxboro, losing seven of their last eight there.

"I don't need to be reminded that we haven't done too well up there lately," Dolphins Coach Don Shula said. "But I'm not going to dwell on the past. If we've beaten somebody six times in a row, I wouldn't go into the game any differently."

Cardinals Coach Jim Hanifan said he wasn't "concerned about the emotional aspect" of the game with the Redskins."The big thing is to know what you're supposed to do and then go out and do it. The Redskins have done well the past couple of years. Our people know that. When you play a division team and you know them well, you really shouldn't have to motivate your people."

The Cards gave up 83 points in two losses to the Redskins last season and have had to reshuffle their secondary several times because of injuries. But they have few problems on offense — their 215 points in seven games are second to Miami in the NFL.

The Bears, 4-3, are coming off a 38-21 drubbing by the Cards. The Bucs, 3-4, lost their shot at tying the Bears for first place in the NFC Central when they lost a 13-7 overtime decision to Detroit.

"If we don't play any better than we did Sunday, we will get waxed badly," Bucs Coach John McKay said.

The Raiders-Chargers game is a rematch of a Monday night game three weeks ago that the Raiders won 33-30, coming from 10 points down in the last seven minutes on two drives engineered by quarterback Jim Plunkett. Plunkett is on injured reserve now, and Marc Wilson will take his place for the Raiders, 6-1.

Philadelphia, 3-4, is seeking its first three-game winning streak since 1981, in its game against the Giants. "This game means a lot to us," Eagles Coach Marion Campbell said. "It's a division rival and we can pull our record to 4-4."

The Giants, 4-3 and still in contention for the NFC East title, are "kind of like a roller coaster," Coach Bill Parcells said. "Some games we're consistent; some games we're not."

The Jets and Kansas City are facing each other for the second time in three weeks. But this time the Chiefs will have veteran quarterback Bill Kenney, who will be making his first start of the season after recovering from a broken right thumb.

Gupton, Cooke Lift Lee County Past Richmond County, 30-22

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Quarterback Eric Gupton threw two second-half touchdown passes and running back Willie Cooke scored twice as unranked Lee County slipped by third-ranked Richmond County 30-22 in high school football Friday night.

Richmond, losing its first game in seven outings, was one of three 4-A squads ranked in the latest Associated Press poll to lose. In all, five ranked teams lost.

Lee, 3-4, led 17-6 at the half on a pair of 2-yard touchdown runs by Cooke and a 26-yard field goal by Grady Kittrell. Gupton then tossed two TD passes in the third period to seal the victory.

Tim White rushed for 130 yards on 22 carries to lead Lee on the ground.

In other games, Fayetteville 71st, tied for No. 9 among 4-A squads, downed No. 4 Fayetteville Byrd 54-20, while sixth-ranked Greensboro Grimsley dropped a 33-13 decision to Greensboro Dudley.

The only defeated 3-A ranked team was East Wake, which lost to Oxford Webb, 30-13, while No. 10 Manteo was the only squad ranked in the combined 2-A and 1-A class, falling to Currituck 34-0.

Greensboro Page, the top-ranked 4-A team, routed Greensboro Smith 35-0 as tailback Michael Brooks scored four touchdowns. Jordan-Matthews, No. 1 in 2-A and 1-A, downed Union Pines 32-0, while Kannapolis, the top 3-A team, had an open date.

Running back Jeff Mack scored three touchdowns and 71st, 6-1, forced four turnovers in handing Byrd its second loss in seven games. Mack scored on runs of 1, 1 and 4 yards in the first half as 71st raced to a 34-6 at halftime.

Dudley picked off four Grimsley passes — including two by defensive back Antonio Smith — to raise its record to 4-3. Grimsley was hurt by the loss of quarterback Brian Gay, who returned after a first-quarter injury but left again for good in the third period.

Running back Tim Oakley scored three touchdowns — one on the ground, one through the air and one on a fumble — as unranked Oxford Webb handed East Wake its first loss in seven games.

Craig Watson returned a kickoff 81 yards to help Webb grab a 17-7 lead at the half despite being held to -8 yards on offense and not managing a first down other than by penalty.

East Wake drove to the Webb one with 32 seconds left in the half, but on fourth down Oakley picked up a Daryl Holden fumble and, after a scramble for the ball, returned it 82 yards for a TD.

In the third period, Oakley took a swing pass from Mike Barker and raced 64 yards to make it 24-13. He later scored on an 86-yard run for Webb's final TD.

Oakley rushed for 119 yards on 19 carries as Webb won its sixth straight game and ran its record to 6-1.

In other games:

— Tailback Tracey Peele scored five touchdowns as No. 7 Jamesville rolled by Aurora 75-0. Peele scored on runs of 5, 4 and 25 yards. He also returned a punt 45 yard and an interception 25 yards for scores as the 1-A Bullets upped their record to 7-0.

— Quarterback Mark Young and tailback Tonja Watson both scored two TDs and rushed for more than 100 yards as South Point, ranked fifth among 3-A teams, slipped past Kings Mountain 34-26. Young rushed for 138 yards and Watson added 107 yards as South Point ran its record to 7-0.

— Running back James Spencer scored five touchdowns to lead unranked Bath to a 49-0 victory over Mattamuskeet. Spencer scored on runs of 17, 23, 9, 27 and 24 yards and rushed for 149 yards on seven carries.

— Tony Sloan returned an interception 59 yards to help lift Statesville, the ninth-ranked 3-A team, down North Iredell 14-0. Statesville, 7-1, picked off seven passes in all.

— Running back Larry Hargrove scored four touchdowns while carrying the ball only eight times as No. 7 Henderson Vance routed Durham 81-0. Hargrove scored on runs of 50, 24, 6 and 22 yards while quarterback Victor Bullock completed 12 of 16 passes for 216 yards and one TD.

Milt Wilcox, Trammell Recuperate

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers pitcher Milt Wilcox and shortstop Alan Trammell should recover without complications following arthroscopic surgery at the Hughston Clinic in Columbus, Ga., physicians say.

Both players are expected to be recuperated by the time spring training opens in February.

Wilcox had arthroscopic surgery to correct multiple tendon damage in his right shoulder that accumulated through long-term wear and tear on his arm. He will be involved in an intensive rehabilitation program and his condition will be re-evaluated after two months.

The injury occurred last Halloween when he fell off a pair of platform shoes he was wearing as part of a Frankenstein costume.

The doctors said Trammell was expected to have a brief recuperation and complete recovery.

Waterfolw stamps may be purchased from license agents or directly from the License Section, North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. Single stamps sell for $5.50 and a numbered corner block fo four stamps sells for $22.

Sheets number 1-10 will be reserved for sale in entire sheets by a sealed bid auction witht he gighest bidder receiving sheet number one and the next nine sheets being awarded in descending order to the next highest bidders. A full sheet of 30 stamps sells for $165. Sheets number 11-160 will be reserved for sale in entire sheets only, and sheets 161-334 will be used for plate block sales. The minimum bid is $165, and all bids must be received by Dec. 31. With the exception of sheets 1-10, those purchasing sheets and plate blocks from the first 334 sheets automatically reserve the right to purchase the same numbered items the following year. Stamps remaining unsold after Dec. 31, 1985, will be destroyed by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, thus assuring lasting value for collectors' and dealers' stamps.

Endangered Species — The United States Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed the Tar River spiny mussel, Elliptio (Canthyria) steinstansana, as an endangered species. The proposal was published in the Sept. 17, 1984 Federal Register and if adopted would bring the species under the protection fo the 1973 Endangered Species Act.

Historical distribution data on the Tar River spiny mussel are limited. However, it is thought that the species once inhabited the Tar River from Pitt County near Falkland, upstream through Edgecombe County to Spring Hope and Nash County. According to a recent U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service survey of the Tar, Neuse and Roanoke Rivers in North Carolina, the known Tar River spiny mussel population, estimated at 100-500 individuals, now is restricted to about 12 miles of the Tar River in Edgecombe County.

Aside from the Tar River spiny mussel, only two other species fo freshwater spiny mussel are known to exist: one in the James River in Virginia and the other in the Altamaha River in Georgia. Each species differs in its shell size and spine length.

Due to its rarity, little is known of the Tar River spiny mussel's biology. The species has been collected on sand and mud river bottoms, and it has been suggested the mussel's spines help it maintain an upright position as it moves through the soft substrate. Like other freshwater mussels, it feeds by filtering food particles from the water. It has a complex reproductive cycle in which the mussel larvae attach to fish for a short time. The mussel's lifespan, time of spawning, fish species to which the larvae attach themselves and many other aspects of its life history are still unknown.

The Tar River spiny mussel may have always existed in low numbers. However, the apparent recent reduction in its distribution and the extremely small population size make it vulnerable to extinction from a single catastrophic event.

Comments on the biological status fo the Tar River spiny mussel and the effects of the proposa will be accepted through Nov. 16, 1984. Comments should be sent to Field Supervisor, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Asheville, N.C. 28801, or phone (704) 259-0321. Public hearing requests will be accepted through Nov. 1, 1984 at this address.

Wildlife Note — The largest bird in the world, the ostrich, is a strange bird. A male ostrich typically stands seven feet tall, weighs 260 pounds, runs up to 50 miles an hour with strides as long as 15 feet and packs a kick of up to 500 pounds per square inch. Yet the bird stops when a person waves a thorn tree branch in its face.

Indians Lose $10 Million

CLEVELAND (AP) — Owners of the Cleveland Indians suffered losses totaling about $10.7 million in the last three years, according to figures prepared for a New York lawyer who wants to buy the American League team.

The financial records were documented in a prospectus drawn up by David E. LeFevre, who has offered to take over the team for about $40 million, including the assumption of some liabilities.

Cash losses suffered by Indians ownership for 1981, 1982 and 1983 totaled $10.7 million, according to records prepared by the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney and reported in The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer today.

Figures for 1984 were not yet finalized. The projected deficit, though, is only $399,000, because the Indians are to receive more than $8 million this year as their share of baseball's new $1.1 billion network television contract that runs through 1989.

The Indians are expected to receive $8.9 million under the contract in 1985 and $9.2 million in 1986. Because of the TV projections, the Indians are expected to achieve a positive cash flow next year of $850,000, and in 1986 of $1.1 million.

LeFevre's attempt to buy the Indians from the estate of the late F.J. O'Neill, which owns a majority interest, and from minority stockholders has been delayed by legal challenges from some of the minority stockholders.

LeFevre's prospectus also indicates that he will "act as the Indians' chief executive officer for an annual salary of $172,000" for two years, The Plain Dealer said.

Tal Smith, a veteran baseball executive and Houston-based consultant, is expected to run the Indians' on-field operation, however, the newspaper said.

Pitt Firm Plans Expansion

Tom Glennon, president of Belvoir Manufacturing Co., has announced the 50,000-square-foot expansion of the company's medical products facility located seven miles northwest of Greenville.

Glennon said the expansion is expected to provide jobs for approximately 100 people.

The company is a manufacturer of surgical garments, hospital gowns, adult diapers, and other medical/health care products.

Belvoir Manufacturing also operates plants in Grimesland and Conetoe. The Belvoir plant was established in 1981 with less than 25 employees. Glennon said that once the expansion is completed the firm will employ over 200 people, making it the largest employer in northern Pitt County.

Dennis Byrd, manager of the Belvoir operations, said hiring to fill the new openings should begin in several months. He said applicants should register at the Employment Security Commission office in Greenville.

Glennon said the Pitt County Development Commission, the Employment Security Commission, Pitt Community College, and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners were instrumental in the company's expansion effort.

Loan Rate Ceiling To Be Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rate ceiling on basic home loans backed by the Veterans Administration will be trimmed to 13 percent, the government announced Friday.

The decline from 13.5 percent, which will take effect Monday, comes just two months after the VA had dropped the rate from 14 percent on Aug. 13.

In announcing the change, VA Administrator Harry Walters said, "With inflation clearly down and a growth rate that's holding well, this further reduction is clearly warranted."

The agency said the reduction would mean a savings of about $25 a month on an average VA mortgage of $64,000.

Mark Riedy, executive director of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said the VA rate reduction should "slow the recent drop in new construction and home sales" by expanding the number of people who can qualify for home loans.

Conventional mortgage rates have also been declining in recent months. Fixed-rate mortgages dropped to an average of 14.92 percent in early September, down from a high this year of 15.24 percent in July.

Cattle Futures Decline After Feed Lots Report

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Cattle futures prices plunged Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange in response to a government report that disclosed more cattle on feed lots than the market anticipated.

The report showed a larger-than-expected 6 percent in-crease in the number of cattle on feed lots in the 13 major beef producing states as of Oct. 1.

"I've never seen the trade so far off on cattle on feed reports," said Phil Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Secu-rities.

As a result, traders who had bought contracts in previous sessions rushed to sell Friday, and contracts for delivery in December and February 1985 fell by the daily limit of 1.5 cents.

Stanley said he expects further selling Monday. "It could get bloody in there next week," he said.

Weakness in the cattle pit also exerted pressure in the hog and pork belly pits, source said. Stanley noted also that hog supplies are plentiful.

Cattle settled .45 cent to 1.50 cents lower with the contract for delivery in October at 61.50 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .27 cent to 1.50 cents low-er with October at 66.50 cents a pound; live hogs were .03 cent to .02 cent lower with October at 44.57 cents a pound; and fro-zen pork bellies were .78 cent to 1.30 cents lower with February at 62.37 cents a pound.

Petroleum futures prices re-covered from recent weakness as the Organization of Petro-leum Exporting Countries began making attemps to prevent a collapse of the international cartel.

Andrew Lebow, a petroleum analyst in New York with Shearson Lehman-American Express, said that when the United Arab Emirates denied reports it was offering di-counts to major oil customers, traders were encouraged to resume oil purchases. Also helping stabilize oil markets was a report by the authoritative Middle East Economic Survey that ministers from OPEC and non-OPEC countries would meet next week to discuss ways to defend existing official prices by cutting production, Lebow said.

Lebow said some of the buying also was done by traders who were evening up their con-tract positions before the week-end and closing out profitable positions.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, crude oil settled 10 cents to 16 cents higher with the contract for delivery in De-cember at $27.70 a barrel. Heating oil settled 40 cents to 81 cents higher with November at 75.44 cents a gallon.

Grain and soybean futures prices were mostly higher in moderate trading on the Chi-cago Board of Trade.

Some of the buying that supported soybean prices was weather related, and some was a reponse to better economic signals, said Susan Hackmann, a grain analyst in Chicago with Pershing Futures.

Miss Hackmann said rain was forecast for Sunday and next week, which would prevent farmers from resuming the soybean harvest.

OPEC: Facing Unthinkable Once Again

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

OPEC, a cartel that for a decade called the shots on world oil prices, appears to have found itself at the mercy of outsiders for the second time in as many years.

The surprise turnabout omes at a time when OPEC had been expecting cooler weather to increase demand for oil, enabling it to increase production and revenue.

But an unexpected wave of price-cutting, which spread even to one of the cartel's 13 members last week, now threatens to force the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to confront again what was once an unthinkable option — cutting prices.

So far, several OPEC ministers have said the cartel is more likely to lower production than cut prices.

But analysts said consumers in the United States could benefit by savings at the pump of as much as a dime a gallon if OPEC tosses in the towel on defending its official prices at an emergency meeting set for Oct. 29. Many analysts said savings of at least 3 cents a gallon were likely.

A burst of optimism that falling oil prices would spur new economic growth without the pain of increased inflation sparked an explosive rally late last week in U.S. financial markets.

"The markets are viewing this as a time for the crashing and burning of OPEC," said Donald Marsh Jr., senior vice president for energy at Chemical Bank in New York.

But Marsh said he disagreed with that view.

He said he interpreted the price cuts announced by OPEC-member Nigeria as a signal to independent oil producers Norway and Britain, the two nations that initiated the price-cutting, that attempts to steal cartel customers by undercutting prices would be met head-on, and that "one of OPEC's members and maybe more are ready to play hardball."

The price cuts on comparable blends of crude oil from the North Sea and West Africa were described by various analysts as the "three bombs" or the "three dominoes."

Norway moved first, saying Monday it would sell substantial portions of its oil at prices pegged to the going rate on the open market, resulting in cuts of up to $1.50 a barrel from the official price of $30. Britain followed Wednesday by cutting its price by $1.35 a barrel, to $28.65.

That prompted OPEC on Thursday to summon ministers to a special meeting on Oct. 29 in Geneva, Switzerland, to "discuss ways and means to defend the present OPEC price structure."

But within hours, debt-ridden Nigeria announced unilateral cuts of $1 to $2 a barrel, lowering its chief export blend to $28.

It was a similar sequence of price cuts that forced OPEC in March 1983 to reduce prices for the first time ever, slashing its benchmark Saudi Arabian Light blend $5 a barrel to $29. In the previous 10 years, that reference grade had shot up from $2.75 a barrel to $34.

Once again, the ball is in OPEC's court.

The Middle East Economic Survey, an authoritative weekly publication that follows the oil industry, said Friday that several oil ministers from OPEC and non-OPEC countries would hold preliminary discussions this week on ways to reduce production to defend the price structure.

However, if OPEC decides to match last week's cuts in the low-sulfur grades, Saudi Arabian Light oil will fall to $27.50 a barrel, said Marion Stewart, an economics professor at Rutgers University and a consultant to the investment firm of Paine Webber Inc.

That translates to about 3 cents a gallon if the savings are passed on to consumers of petroleum products such as gasoline and heating oil.

Another option is that OPEC, feeling "betrayed" by Britain, will fight back by slashing prices to $25 a barrel, something that could push petroleum products down a dime a gallon, Stewart said.

Among the options facing OPEC, according to analysts at investment firms, academic institutions and oil companies, are:

—Lower the price of its benchmark oil and other low-sulfur "light" blends to match the cuts of last week but leave high-sulfur "heavy crude" prices unchanged. Many analysts said they viewed such a "realignment" of price differentials as a likely approach.

—Cut production and leave prices unchanged, hoping that seasonal rise in demand for oil in the late fall and winter will reduce surplus supplies and halt the slide in prices.

—Set a combination of production cutbacks and price realignments.

—Agree to do nothing and hope rising demand during the winter heating season removes pressure for further price cuts.

—Fail to reach agreement and let the oil markets set prices.

Scrapbooks Date Back To School Days

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Margaret Barnhill of Belvoir started collecting and recording during her last year of high school. Today her memories and collections fill 60 scrapbooks and albums.

"My first little book, a gift from my mother, was about my last year in high school. I was 17 years old. I attended Falkland High School through the 10th grade and went away to Wakelon High School in Zebulon to finish my 11th year," she said.

The book shows pictures of the school and dormitory, bus driver, the janitor's house. "My roommate, Wilma Parker, milked the janitor's cow each morning," she recalled.

Her next collection is about relatives. It includes marriages and letters postmarked which she received as a young girl. In the back of each book, she has kept a record of the deaths of family and friends in the community during that particular year.

Her college scrapbook, while a student at East Carolina Teachers College, shows programs from square dances, Christmas cards, pictures of old boyfriends, etc. She has preserved a scrap of material from her college graduation dress which was a gift from Dr. and Mrs. E.L. Henderson. Mrs. Barnhill was unable to take part in the 1927 graduation "due to a severe case of poison ivy which I received while walking in the woods with a small child to entertain him." Two pages are devoted to history including her copy of a health certificate allowing her to teach and her first teaching contract. "I saw a newspaper story headline, 'Stokes School Lays First Brick,' and I applied to teach there," she said.

The book also shows a picture of the Stokes teaching faculty in 1927 and a newspaper story about a Stokes club entertaining the faculty. In addition to teaching, Mrs. Barnhill said she coached the girls' basketball team on an outdoor court. Her first teaching check paid for her room and board for a month — which totaled $28.

"When dating, we didn't go out to eat, we would stop at a station and get a Milky Way candy bar and share ice cream," she added.

Mrs. Barnhill has a bill for $15 from Best Jewelers where she bought china when she was getting married. She also has the window measurements for curtains for her first house. One page is dedicated to a picture of the family doctor, Dr. Jenness Morrill, who delivered her first baby. She has pictures of her parents and also of her children, doing a wide variety of activities. "When we moved in to our present home in 1946, I tried to make a book a year. We lived for 17 years in the Sweet Gum Grove community." She shows pictures of neighbors and friends. She even has a copy of the first tobacco bill after selling tobacco during the first year in their new home. "After the tobacco season, we tried to do something each year. We have seen a lot of outdoor dramas and we went to the mountains a lot," she said. One of her pictures was taken on a trip to the mountains when she was 15. The picture was taken at Blowing Rock.

"My war book is filled with newspaper clippings about family and friends — of where they were stationed and what was going on. My brother, J.W. Dupree, was in the U.S. Navy. He sent me a Christmas menu in 1944 when he was stationed in Hawaii. Some of the boys in service I have pictures of are Claude Christopher, Roscoe Barnhill, William Nobles and Ledyard Ross," she said.

Mrs. Barnhill records marriages and engagements of couples in the community as well as college graduations and of outstanding happenings. Her collection includes many Christmas cards, Valentines, rememberance cards, shower favors and place cards which she has saved over a span of years.

"I love my scrapbooks and when looking at them, I never get lonesome. I am very sentimental, I like to keep things about people I love. My favorite three books record happenings of my 50th wedding anniversary to my husband, Clarence, Dec. 23, 1979. The three books are filled with pictures, cards and guests lists," she said.

Mrs. Barnhill has either made or is in the process of making something for her two children, Clarence Dupree Barnhill and Gail Barnhill Bostic, for her six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren — either a scrapbook or photo album from babyhood on.

Mrs. Barnhill is a member of the Sweet Gum Grove Extension Homemakers and has not missed a meeting in 39 years. She was serving as president of the group when she and her family moved to the Belvoir community. Active in the Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Mrs. Barnhill has received a Bible school certificate, whether she was teaching, attending or helping serve, for as long as she can remember. She was given special recognition in church for having served as church clerk for over 20 years.

SCRAPBOOK COLLECTION...belonging to Margaret Barnhill of Belvoir now numbers over 60. She has also filled many photograph albums.

Several scrapbooks are devoted to trips taken to various states when her son was serving in the U.S. Air Force. She has saved bus and train schedules and costs, post cards of places and of motels where they spent the night while traveling. She always includes a map showing the entire route marked in red. They went to California to see their son in November 1969 and then to Wyoming in May 1973. They returned to California again in May 1976. The couple has also traveled to Mexico two times, to Hershey, Pa., Texas and Florida while visiting their son and his family. Mrs. Barnhill has continued to save picture post cards and colored photos which she has taken. She has several books filled with just pictures, with just a few mementoes.

This past May, the Barnhills again visited their son and family in San Diego, Calif. They visited several places there including Old Town, the zoo and Sea World. They also had a surprise — a one-day visit with their grandson, Clarence Dupree Barnhill II. He is serving in the U.S. Navy and is stationed in Florida. He had traveled to California to assist in picking up the space shuttle at Edwards Air Force Base.

"If I had some type of disaster, I would try to save my Bible and scrapbooks. I can't buy things that fill my books," she said.

Other events she has recorded with pictures, picture post cards, etc., are of children's parties, attending Farm Bureau state conventions, a trip to New York City and of a trip made to Florida by her husband. She has saved Pitt County Agriculture Fair blue ribbons which she won in 1949 and 1951 for apple jelly and strawberry preserves.

"Some of the happiest times Clarence and I have had were selling tobacco on border markets and spending the night there," she recalled.

She has recorded activities in a bicentennial book, 1976, and saved the copy of a certificate which she received from Pitt Community College after taking a course in interior decorating. Mrs. Barnhill has her last teaching check in 1976 and a copy of a letter she received from the school principal, Ed Warren.

"If you put it in a book, you have the information. You can't buy all the thing I have," she concluded.

Kenya Designer Revolutionizes African Fashion

By MICHELLE FAUL
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — In Africa, where women tend to wear garishly printed acrylic frocks and shun traditional handwoven materials, a Kenyan designer is ready to revolutionize the fashion scene.

"I want to help bring a renaissance of pride in our rich African heritage that, combined with my Western training, will stimulate the senses of people all over the world — not just on this continent — not by shocking, but by surprising," said 24-year-old Namulanda Kumola Khuluchi, who designs under the name Kumola.

But Kumola has an uphill task selling her creations to women who generally believe that shoddy, imported synthetics are better than homegrown cottons, wools, leather and even bark.

"They'd rather spend 1,200 shillings (about $80) on a cheap dress made of imported acrylic, that doesn't let their skin breathe in our equatorial climate, than 400 shillings ($27) on one of my handwoven cotton skirts," Kumola said in an interview.

"It's this colonial mentality that anything the wazungus (whites) produce has to be better than a homemade product," she said.

"Women, especially in urban areas, have rejected our traditional, colorful cotton khangas (sarongs) as only good enough for peasants. They want to look what they consider Western and sophisticated. They even describe it as 'civilized.'"

A vibrant, flamboyant and enthusiastic woman, Kumola graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in fashion and textile design from the Rhode Island School of Design.

"I think her use of color is electrifying and the combination of color and shapes is unique," said Donna Klumpp, an American anthropologist who designs jewelry and beadwork based on patterns of the Masai tribe.

"It's not African, not European, but a complicated syncopation of the two that's a painting, a sculpture, a craft form all in one," Ms. Klumpp said of Kumola's work.

Most of Kumola's customers at her stuffy studio, up two flights of rusting metal stairs in downtown Nairobi, are tourists or foreigners who work here.

Ms. Klumpp, 42, a longtime resident of Kenya, said that 15 years ago handspun wool yarn was common in Kenyan shops. Today, it's almost impossible to find, but there's plenty of imported acrylic yarn.

Kumola's clients rave over one of her latest designs — a vest in subtly tie-dyed wool that's cut into strips, lined with cotton, then woven in a traditional pattern used for reed baskets and trimmed with leather.

"I combine my African culture with Western skills and create a fusion of the two," Kumola said.

"We haven't exploited a lot of our traditional materials, possibilities like barkcloth (made from tree bark) which the Masai use with beadwork to make ceremonial robes. I'm going to use that for blazers."

Ms. Klumpp noted the "rich tradition of body movement, tattoos, scars, beadwork and beaded garments in East Africa."

But it's not a productive area in art "because the people don't make statues and such, as in West Africa."

Ms. Klumpp and Kumola are friends and say they stimulate and complement each other in their respective designs. Kumola tries to use Western training to revive African cultural pride, and Ms. Klumpp modifies Masai beadwork patterns to make them more appealing to Western tastes.

"Because of their pale skin color, most Western women cannot carry off the bright explosive colors that African women look beautiful in, so I try to tone down colors but still keep them exciting," said the Chicago-born anthropologist.

Ms. Klumpp is writing her doctoral dissertation on Masai beadwork patterns for Columbia University while lecturing at the United States International University in Nairobi.

She also translates traditional items into jewelry. Bone charms the Masai hang on goats turn into necklaces. So do the heavy bronze earrings which a Western woman would probably not wear on her ears because they streteh the lobe.

The two women have their first international order from an Atlanta, Ga., African art importer, who will carry Kumola's tie-dyed pajama tops and Ms. Klumpp jewelry.

"It's small, but a start," Kumola said. "It may be that I'll have to win recognition abroad before women in Africa will accept my designs."

And her name, which means "she who crawls on water" in the language of her Luhya tribe of western Kenya, may hint of things to come.

Couple Marries In Saturday Ceremony

Martie Lou Stocks of Greenville and Ronald Edward Goodall of Grimesland were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock at Hollywood Presbyterian Church. The Rev. West Jennings performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Margaret G. Stocks of Route 3, Greenville, and the late Edward Adam Stocks. Parents of the bridegroom are Geraldine E. Goodall of Route, 3, Greenville, and the late Henry Rivers Goodall Jr.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Gary Stokcs. She wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza with scalloped chantilly lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with scalloped chantilly lace etched with seed pearls and organza bishop sleeves. Lace motifs appliqued the bodice and sleeves. The floor length skirt extended into a chapel train. Cascading tiers of chantilly lace ruffles accented the train from the waist to the hemline. The organza front panel was bordered with a lace ruffle which encircled the hemline of the gown. Her double tiered veil of silk illusion was attached to a halo of silk flowers. She carried a nosegay of sonia roses with cushion mums and miniature carnations.

Kim Baker of Elizabeth City was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Michelle Burns, niece of the bridegroom, and Gina Dixon, both of Grifton, Kim Joyner of Portertown, Tina Dixon of Grimesland and Sherry Spain of Greenville. The attendants wore formal gowns of sinapore teal faille taffeta designed with an open portrait neckline accented by a double ruffle of taffeta extending down the bodice front. Each was fashioned with elbow length pouf sleeves and gathered skirts. A self-fabric rose enhanced the modified natural waistline. Each carried a nosegay of sonia gerberas, miniature carnations, acscromerias and baby's breath tied with sonia satin.

Heather Louise Goodall of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a formal gown of sinapore teal styled similar to gowns worn by the honor attendants. She carried a white woven basket of sonia miniature flowers with rose petals tied with a matching bow.

The best man was brother of the bridegroom, Rivers Goodall. Ushers included Jim Hill of Grifton, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Edward Dean Stocks of Grimesland, brother of the bride, Clint Edwards and Jeff Edwards of Simpson and Tim Hardee of Greenville, cousins of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a jade lustreglo and chantilly lace gown with a lace over blouse. The mother of the bridegroom selected a lavender polyester knit gown with a rolled collar. Both wore white orchid corsages. Louise Hord, grandmother of the bridegroom, was a white orchid corsage.

Jean Evans directed the wedding. A program of organ music was presented by Randy Buck and Vickie Dixon was vocalist. Amanda Stokes of Greenville, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register and

MRS. GOODALL

The bride's parents entertained at a reception on the church lawn. Kay Cyrus greeted guests and presided at the guest register. Christine Glisson poured punch and Betty Jo Manning served cake.

The couple will live near Robersonville after a wedding trip to the mountains.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and Martin Community College. She is employed by Shady Knoll Beauty Shop. The bridegroom attended Roanoke High School and is engaged in farming.

A pig picking was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Robersonville Country Club Friday night. A dance followed and was given by parents of the bridal couple.

The bride was honored at a floating shower and the couple was honored at a buffet prior to the ceremony.

Miss Thomas, Dr. Baker Speak Vows On Saturday

Mary Katherine Thomas, of Route 1, Greenville, and Dr. Charles Scott Baker III, of Havelock, were united in marriage in St. Gabriel's Catholic Church Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. Jerry Sherba performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Robert F. Thomas of Hibbing, Minn., and the late Eleanor F. Thomas. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott Baker Jr. of Havelock are parents of the bridegroom.

Debra Rose Vucich of Largo, Md., was the honor attendant and Lisa Britt of Greenville was bridesmaid. The best man was Anthony Baker of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, brother of the bridegroom, Scott Thomas and Clay Britt, both of Greenville, and Patrick Baker of Havelock.

The bride wore a formal gown of imported chantilly lace over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an open portrait neckline outlined in a stand-up ruffle of crystal pleated organza. The fitted bodice and dropped basque waistline were enhanced with appliques of floral patterned silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. The short French pouf sleeves were edged in the crystal pleated organza. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with a border of scalloped chantilly lace over crystal pleated organza. She wore a bridal hat trimmed in lace to complement her gown with a veil of imported illusion. She carried a bouquet of silk cascading white, pink and burgandy roses, lily of the valley, white and burgundy flowers and English ivy.

The attendants wore formal gowns of chateau claret damask satin in burgundy. The gowns were fashioned with open necklines outlined in a double ruffle of self-fabric with fitted bodices and short pouf sleeves. A sash of matching satin accented the waistline. Each carried a nosegay of burgundy roses, white carnations, lily of the valley and English ivy.

The wedding was directed by Dawn Savage.

Pouring punch were Dorothy Burke, cousin of the bride, and Uli Gross. Serving cake were Stephanie Harold and Becky Key.

The bridegroom is employed at the Green County Health Care Center as a physician and is on staff at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and received his doctorate of medicine from Duke University School of Medicine. The bride is employed at Pitt Memorial as a nurse. She graduated from Hibbing Community College nursing program in Hibbing, Minn.

The couple will live near Greenville.

Study Rates Driving Tasks

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Talking on the new cellular mobile phones is harder than talking with other occupants of a car but easier than looking for a landmark along the road, according to a study reported in a recent issue of Cellular Business magazine.

In a study conducted by Bell Labs and MB Associates, drivers rated the difficulty of various tasks on a scale from 1 to 10, with 1 defined as "no difficulty at all" and 10 as "so difficult I would never do it while driving."

Reading a map rated an 8.75 on the scale, followed in descending order of difficulty by: lighting and smoking a cigarette (5.5); getting change from pocket or purse to pay toll (5.25); dialing the mobile telephone (4.5); tuning a car radio (3.5); looking for a landmark along the road (2.5); conversing on the mobile telephone (1.5); and conversing with other persons in the car (1.25).

Cellular telephone systems are operating now in more than a dozen cities and have recently been switched on at a rate of almost one a week, reports Tom Brooksher, publisher of Cellular Business, which began monthly publication in August in Overland Park, a suburb of Kansas City, Mo.

He predicts that by year-end cellular systems will be available in most of the nation's top 30 cities. According to some predictions, cellular telephones will be a $12 billion-a-year industry within a decade.

Combining Work, Family Seen As Complex Task

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — When she was 41 years old, Nancy Halloran Hutter went back to school to get her college degree. She was the mother of eight children. The youngest child was 9.

Today, at the age of 51, Mrs. Hutter is an assistant staff attorney in the technical planning staff of the City Council of Philadelphia. She received her law degree from Villanova Law School.

At a recent conference held here on "Work and the Family," Mrs. Hutter gave credit to the women's movement and women like Betty Friedan, the author of "The Feminine Mystique," published in 1963, for breaking down the barriers to traditionally male-dominated jobs.

But, she said, just as society in the '50s expected women to marry and produce wonderful, adoring, happy families, society in the '80s is demanding that women combine work and careers.

"In my opinion, you can't raise a family on the side. A family is not an avocation. So what is being demanded of women today is that they carry not one, but two, full-time careers simultaneously," Mrs. Hutter said.

She said women must not feel guilty or apologetic if they choose to take a few years off from their jobs to spend at home with their children, or if they decide to work part time while raising their children.

"If the freedom to make choices gained at considerable expense by women in the '60s and '70s is not to be lost in the '80s, I think we have to become aware of what direction we're going in and take steps to deal with it," she said.

Just as important, Mrs. Hutter said, working and non-working mothers should not be antagonists.

"Women leaving the work force today to raise families have just as many fears and insecurities as we who left the home to embark on careers. Working mothers are overwhelmed with responsibility. We need each other and we need each other's support. In understanding this, maybe we will be able to revive that spirit that made the women's movement so effective."

Mrs. Hutter was one of the top 10 Clairol Loving Care Scholarship Program winners honored at the conference. The program has awarded more than $500,000 to a total of 997 women during its 10-year history, the program's sponsors said. The scholarship program is designed for women 30 and older.

Also attending the conference were Betty Friedan and Sally Wendkos Olds, the author of numerous books including "The Working Parents Survival Guide."

Ms. Friedan stressed the importance of individuality in combining work and the family.

"Instead of indulging in cross arguments — feminism or the family, work or the home — we know now that all women are going to put together their lives now and in the future in complex ways. The pattern will not be the same woman to woman," she said.

Mrs. Olds told the conference that when she went out to work 20 years ago, with three children at home under the age of 7, a lot of people criticized her, but a lot of people also felt sorry for her because they knew it was hard to do both jobs.

"Recently, the difficulties in handling both career and family have seemed to have melted into the myth that it's easy to do it all, that it's easy to soar to the top of your profession and to raise wonderful children at the same time. And I think those of us here today know that either one of these goals is difficult, and when you combine them, the difficulty increases geometrically," Mrs. Olds said.

She said today's mother should not set unrealistic goals for herself, but should realize that many conflicting pressures and problems arise when a woman combines work and family.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

In a little over two weeks, a nation of voters will go to the polls to elect a vice president of the United States.

Their mandate will answer the questions once and for all: who will assume the awesome job of representing this nation as a professional mourner at funerals throughout the world? Who will support the president's hand in a victory salute at conventions? who will occupy the most coveted address in Washington — Naval Observatory?

This has been one of the most dramatic campaigns in the history of the vice presidency. And frankly, I don't know if I'm ready or not to make the all-important decision on the information I have at hand.

I know that Geraldine Ferraro can make blueberry muffins in her kitchen, but what do I know about George Bush? Can he make a birdhouse in his garage or put on snow chains or change a furnace filter?

I know all about Geraldine Ferraro's hair. I know who cuts it and how often and during a rainstorm in Portland, Ore., the curl held. The style is destined to become a classic in the tradition of Dorothy Hamill and Farrah Fawcett But I know nothing about George Bush's barber. Will his short clip make history like Sen. Bob Dole or Congressman Tip O'Neill's hairstyle?

And what do we know about the mates of these two who will accompany them on Air Force II? What is Barbara Bush's ethnic background and do I know if she has an income and if so what is it? And what did Gerry Ferraro's husband, John Zaccaro, wear at an Italian-American dinner held recently? Was it a pinstripe? Or separates?

Every voter wants to make an intelligent decision at the polls, but sometimes I feel we're only getting one side of the story. Sure, Gerry Ferraro said she's a mother and doesn't want to send her son off to war, but what did George Bush have to say about his sons as a father?

Gerry was photographed in a supermarket the day after her nomination shuffling through No. 2 cans of tomatoes, but where does George Bush hang out? Looking at mufflers or seat covers for the car?

I read where Joan Mondale engaged in a conversation with Gerry that made the wire services in which the vice presidential hopeful commented on her red dress. Joan was surprised she could think in feminine terms.

Don't tell me Nancy Reagan hasn't from time to time mentioned George's black tie and tux in "masculine terms." No one ever prints it.

It's been an interesting race. One that has nearly overshadowed Ronald Whatshisname and Walter You-know-who.

It's a part of the process, I guess, toward the day in the future when someone will say, "The Democrats/Republicans picked a candidate for the presidency," and the answer will be, "Oh, who is she?"

Wedding Vows Solemnized In Farmville Saturday

The First Christian Church in Farmville was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Darlene Tyson and Kevin Paul Coburn Saturday afternoon at 2:30. The Rev. Lee G. Parker performed the double ring ceremony.

Kelly Hobgood of Farmville was organist. Janet Williams of Rocky Mount sang "Through the Eyes of Love" and "Wedding Prayer."

Daughter of Juanita Joyner of Farmville and the late J.B. Tyson, the bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Charles Joyner. Diane Coburn of Winterville and Paul Coburn of Ohio are parents of the bridegroom.

Wendy Eakes of Ayden was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Kim Tyson of Farmville, sister-in-law of the bride, and Rhonda Moore of Bell Arthur. Jennifer Nelson of Burlington, cousin of the bridegroom, was miniature bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Joey Tyson of Farmville, brother of the bride, Mark Coburn of Winterville, brother of the bridegroom, and Bobby Riggs of Greenville. The miniature bridegroom was Jay Clark of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom.

MRS. COBURN

The bride wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie. The fitted bodice was designed with a Queen Anne neckline edged in embroidered silk Venise lace and beaded with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The Juliet sleeves of sheer chantilly lace featured a three-quarter length ruffle at the elbow and a cuff of lace at the wrist. The gathered skirt fell from a natural waistline accented with silk Venise lace and extended to a chapel length train. Tiers of lace trimmed the skirt. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace attached to a Camelot cap overlaid in chantilly lace beaded with pearls and sequins. A organza flower adorned the side of the cap. The bride carried a formal bouquet of white royal orchids, pink and white sweetheart roses and pixie carnations with tips of bridal greenery tied with pink and white narrow satin.

The honor attendant wore wore a rose colored formal gown with shoulder bows, modified melon shaped sleeves and sweetheart neckline. The raised waistline featured a cummerbund and flared skirt. She wore a wreath of baby's breath and carried a white mum with miniature pink carnations with greenery and pink and wine ribbons and bows.

Bridesmaids wore matching wine colored formal gowns styled like the honor attendant's and carried a white mum with greenery and pink and wine ribbons and bows.

The flower girls wore matching daphine rose colored formal gowns of sheer polyester lined in taffeta. The gowns had ruffled necklines and bow trim and capelet sheeves. They wore wreaths of babyy's breath and carried white baskets tied with pink and wine ribbons and bows.

The miniature bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie fashioned with a circular neckline accented with rows of val lace and white satin ribbon. Ruffled chantilly lace formed a mock yoke effect and the long sheer sleeves were trimmed with white satin ribbon bordered in matching lace. Chantilly lace fashioned the ruffled cuffs. The skirt and sweep train were edged at the hemline in a ruffled flounce of organza and chantilly lace. She also wore a wreath of baby's breath and carried a basket filled with silk flowers in pink and wine with ribbon and bows.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall and was given by the parents of the bride. Mrs. Conrad Mozingo of Farmville served cake and Mrs. Bennie Fulford of Farmville poured punch. The refreshment table was covered with white lace with pink and wine ribbons and bows. An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's mother. Two showers and a pig picking were given for the couple before their marriage.

After a wedding trip to Florida and Disney World the couple will live in Stokes.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Helen Bottel in her book, "Parents' Survival Kit," lists the following reasons why some parents have difficulty communicating with their children:

— The Big Parent Image. You must be a disciplinarian, authoritarian, the person in control, the perfect example. You're afraid that if you let down, they'll take advantage. You may never discover how much easier it is to guide a friend than someone who does your bidding only because he is afraid of you.

— Fear of your children, of yourself. When you learn to know and understand them, much of this fright evaporates, but it may take outside counseling.

— Perfection Complex. Children won't blame you if you goof occasionally: they don't harshly judge the people they love. But how will you discover this unless you learn that parenthood and friendship are compatible?

— Fatigue. You're too tired to try, or you blow up at triffles. When you're really down, tell the family, "I've had a miserable day. Let me rest a little or I may explode and it won't be your fault."

— Jealously. They're on the threshold of life. You will never be there again. You're giving them your best years and they don't appreciate it. The more you resent, the meaner they become; and the meaner they are, the more you resent.

— Disinterest, busyness, the illusion that love can be bought with creature comforts. If you recognize this remoteness in your family, get it out in the open and work on change. Admitting a problem is a giant step toward solving it.

— Too much enforced togetherness. When you insist on communication, you seldom get more than lip service. It comes under the category of "trying too hard." The antidote is to give children needed distance, privacy, growing away time and they'll come closer in the end.

For over 50 years we, at Lautares Jewelers, have operated a highly ethical jewelry business. One of our principles is to sell our jewelry at a fair price - a price that gives the customer honest value and affords us a reasonable profit. Therefore, we do not sell "discount type" merchandise, and we will not "pre-ticket". "Pre-ticketing" has become wide spread throughout the business world; and, articles that should sell for $100.00 are ticketed at $150.00, $175.00 or even more. The customer is led to believe that he is receiving a "good buy" or a terrific discount. We refuse to use this deception on our customers. We will not give discounts but we will continue to give honest value as we have been doing for over a half of a century.

Teen-Age Mothers Face Problem Of Child Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who will get up at night to feed the baby?

That's one of many problems that must be faced by an unmarried teen-age mother and her family, says Theodora Ooms, director of the Family Impact Seminar at the Catholic University of America's National Center for Family Studies.

"Since the grandparents provide most of the infant's economic support and care, there is a real dilemma," she explains. "Whose baby is it?"

Research indicates that 80 percent of unmarried teen-age mothers live with their parents, says Mrs. Ooms, whose research field is adolescent pregnancy.

"Family conflict and tension usually result when a teen-ager tells her family she is pregnant, but her mother's attitude will probably soften as the pregnancy develops and she will become protective toward her daughter and future grandchild," says Mrs. Ooms.

"Fathers typically are even more upset when their daughters first become pregnant, but they too are usually reconciled by the time the grandchild is born."

This "honeymoon" period often ends when the realities of child care arise, says Mrs. Ooms. "Research indicates a great deal of negotiation has to be made about sharing the baby's care."

In most situations grandmothers provide total care for the children so that their mothers can finish school. When grandmothers work, other child-care arrangements are necessary. Only in a few instances will the teen-ager take most of the responsibility for her baby.

Conflicts arise over the teen-age mother's social life and whether she should finish school, get a job, or stay home and care for the baby, says Mrs. Ooms. "Grandparents are often very angry at the baby's father and will not allow him access to the child."

The mother's brothers and sisters may also have strong views on the pregnancy and the new baby, explains Mrs. Ooms.

"The attention received by the unmarried mother — first negative, then positive — can make siblings feel jealous," she says. "Sisters sometimes respond by purposely becoming pregnant."

Social programs usually do not help to solve these family conflicts and may make them worse, she notes. In some programs, workers have little or no contact with the family and may work at cross purposes.

"One program may encourage a teen-age mother to find a sitter and finish school, while the teen-ager's family opposes this action. In another situation a nurse may encourage the teen-ager to breast feed the child and be unaware of the grandmother's opposition to breast feeding."

More serious family issues can develop when the unmarried teen-ager gets pregnant the second time, Mrs. Ooms points out.

"Parents apparently can accept 'one mistake,' but will withdraw support the second time. This puts the unmarried mother and her children at great risk."

There are no easy solutions to these problems, but the teen-age mother cannot be treated as an autonomous adult when she is a dependent teen-ager, says Mrs. Ooms, explaining that support programs should involve families and encourage their support.

"Traditionally, social programs and public policy have not treated the teen-ager in a family context," she says. "The assumption has been that the family is the problem's cause and is not part of the solution. That is simply not the case today.

"Perhaps the most important conclusion of a number of studies is that those teen-age mothers who have their families' support throughout pregnancy and early years of parenting fare much better, as do their children, than those who lack similar assistance."

City Girl Ponders Her Life As Country Wife

DEAR ABBY: I'm a city girl who's attending college at Ames, Iowa. I've fallen in love with a young man whose father was a farmer, and he intends to follow in his father's footsteps.

What are my chances for happiness as a farmer's wife? Do you have any statistics on this?

IN LOVE WITH WALLY

DEAR IN LOVE: No statistics, but love being what it is, statistics wouldn't help much anyway.

A reader sent a charming piece. It may not be your bale of hay, but if it is, good luck to you and Wally:

"I wanted a guy who could sit and have a cup of coffee with me at 5 a.m. when the only sounds to be heard are crickets, cows and creaking floorboards ... That's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who would crack a joke and make me laugh when I am covered with dirt and cow manure ... That's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could get out of a nice warm bed when it is 30 below, start up the tractor and plow out the driveway so the school bus can get through ... That's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could entertain four kids, a dog and a nerve-wracked wife when the power goes off, the pipes freeze and everything quits during a two-day blizzard ... That's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could put up with in-laws, outlaws and new tax laws and still be open-minded and openly loving ... That's why I married a farmer.

"I wanted a guy who could count his blessings when he's depressed, count his children when he feels poor and count on God to make it all work out ... That's why I married a farmer."

DEAR ABBY: I know you must get tons of mail from people who say, "I just need to tell someone." Well, here's another one.

I'm a happily married woman, but I've come across a man I feel I've got to have. (Not to keep—just to have.) When we met about a year and a half ago, I knew instantly the feeling between us was mutual. Although neither of us has ever come right out and said, "Let's get together," we drop hints and kid about it. I don't see him often, but when I do, I melt like a schoolgirl.

I don't know if one good romp in the sack would satisfy me or not, but I keep wondering what it would be like.

Abby, I'm 28 and have children. He is also a family man. I'd never risk losing my husband. He had a brief office affair a few years ago. I was bitter at first, but I got over it, so I don't think I'm considering having an affair to even the score. I need help in handling my feelings.

MIXED UP DOWN SOUTH

DEAR MIXED UP: You are very wise to ask for help. You need it. Forget the "one good romp in the sack"—it's habit-forming and could be hazardous to your marriage.

Have you ever heard of Marriage Encounter? It's a weekend counseling course for couples who have grown apart, lost the spark and want to reaffirm their commitment to each other. It's a spiritual and romantic shot in the arm.

Over the years I've had glowing reports about Marriage Encounter. There are Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups, but one need not belong to any church to participate. Ask any clergyman.

Age doesn't matter. Couples married 40 years and longer have benefited from it. In the words of a lovely old song, "You'll find your happiness lies right under your eyes, back in your own back yard."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have read with great interest the controversy surrounding white weddings in your column and applaud the encouragement you have given women who see their weddings as a celebration of their faith in the future, not an apology for the past (even if they have been living with their fiances).

White has been a color of joy since Roman times. Traditionally, ceremonial robes have often been richly colored, whether they were peasant costumes or gold-embroidered kimonos.

During the Middle Ages red was the favored color, and it still is the color chosen by Hindu, Islamic and Chinese brides.

The white wedding dress is a fairly recent tradition. Victorian brides from privileged backgrounds wore white to indicate that they were rich enough to wear a dress for one day only—but still the majority at that time wore their best finery.

We who now live well into our 80s (as opposed to our 50s in 1900) must also develop a more tolerant view of the needs of people who, like half of all U.S. citizens, will probably divorce and remarry in their lifetime. Their sincere efforts to begin again should be supported by the community they seek to join. In unity there is harmony, and color should not bar the way.

Wedding Vows Said In Winterville Church

Mia Payton and Robert Adderson Edwards III were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the St. Rest Holy Church in Winterville. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W.C. Elliot which included lighting the unity candles.

Johnny Wooten of Greenville presented a program of wedding music. Bernice L. Coward, cousin of the bride, sang "Heaven Sent," which the couple dedicated to each other.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adderson Edwards II of Ayden. Given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Payton of Greenville, the bride was escorted by her father.

The bride wore a formal gown of white taffeta over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a Victorian inspired neckline encircled with embroidered schiffli lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of imported English net outlined in a ruffle of chantilly lace and marabou. Appliques of lace enhanced the modified natural waistline. The Renaissance sleeves featured a double pouf of taffeta with a fitted undersleeve of chantilly lace. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were bordered at the hemline with a double ruffled flounce of ruffled chantilly lace. The overskirt of taffeta was edged in marabou with white satin bow pick-ups creating a draped effect at the hemline. She wore an illusion veil edged in lace to complement her gown. Her veil was held in place by a Juliet headpiece trimmed in lace and pearls. Her gown was designed by Michele Piccone.

Loretta Payton, sister of the bride, and Wanda Green were maids of honor. Bridesmaids included Betty Murphy and Sharon Payton, sisters of the bride, Linette Leggett, Samatha Payton, Juanita Payton, Rene Mobley and Vera McLawhorn, cousins of the bride, Tracy Moore and Denise Brown were bridesmaids.

with a cascade of stephanotis and lily of the valley, baby's breath and blue and white satin streamers. The attendants carried white mums with baby's breath and pom pons and blue and white satin streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a pastel blue gown with matching cape. Both mothers were presented a white corsage. Red roses were given to parents of the bridal couple.

The best man was William Edwards of Washington, D.C., brother of the bridegroom and the head ushers were Deon Wooten, cousin of the bride, and Calvin Peterson. Other ushers were John Brizzle and Malcolm Jackson, David Boyd, cousin of the bride, Bobby Willard and Issac House. The ring bearer was Jesse Payton, cousin of the bride.

Sizing Up A Factory-Built House

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

These days, the house that Jack built is likely to have been partially or totally manufactured at a factory, then assembled at its site.

The traditional "stick-built" house — conventionally built from lumber and other building materials cut to size, fitted and attached at the construction site — accounts for fewer than 12 percent of new one- to four-unit homes being built today.

Manufactured housing now includes four main types of design and construction:

—Mobile homes are built almost in their entirety in the factory. These days, manufacturers are trying to woo first-time home buyers with upscale mobile homes that usually consist of two or more sections and may have conventional amenities: wood siding, pitched roofs with overhangs, cathedral ceilings, fireplaces, bay windows and drywall interiors. Site-built facades and other structures can create the illusion of a conventional home.

—Modular, or sectional, homes are constructed by joining together two or more factory-built three-dimensional sections, called modules, at the site. This involves mating the electrical, heating and plumbing systems, and matching trim work.

—In a panelized home, usually only the home's outside walls are built in the factory, sometimes with wiring and insulation in place behind the finished drywall. The panels may be packaged with other factory-built components, and traditional stick-building techniques complete the construction on-site. Manufacturers may take custom orders.

—Precut kit homes, including log and dome homes, are built from a kit of framing lumber and other materials cut to size at the factory. The builder assembles the home with conventional techniques on-site using the coded pieces and accompanying instructions.

There are sound reasons to seek out industrialized housing.

The best examples of prefabricated houses offer better quality and structural integrity for no more money than comparable stick-built homes.

Superior strength is a by-product of the manufacturing process and the necessity of shipping the home, or parts thereof, to its site. You'll find only the highest-quality, kiln-dried lumber; perfectly square-cut joists and wall panels; and parts not only nailed or screwed together, but reinforced with glue. Tight construction also promotes energy efficiency.

Production time is money, so factory-built homes may cost less than their conventional counterparts, which may take six months to a year to build. A panelized home can be ready in three months, a modular in six to eight weeks, and a mobile home in three weeks. Other savings come from the volume purchase of materials, year-round production, lower assemblyline wages, and a reduction in on-site vandalism.

But, anytime a buyer deviates from the factory standard, with embellishment such as an extra bedroom or a garage, the price can mushroom.

Most industry insiders say that mobile homes have a price advantage over modulars, the shipping costs of which tend to offset much of what otherwise would be saved over stick-built. In 1983 the average price of a multisection mobile home was $30,500, excluding the cost of any land or site work.

Modulars hold out the next best hope of beating the price of a site-built home, despite shipping costs. Richard Morrison, executive director of the Home Manufacturers Council, told Changing Times that modular home prices will come down as technology improves, materials get cheaper, building codes become more uniform and interstate shipping restrictions are removed.

Some of the sharpest criticism of modular housing has been reserved for its unimaginative design. Many manufacturers work with basic module sizes — 12 to 14 feet wide by 8 feet high and anywhere from 24 to 60 feet long — and are reluctant to tinker with the rectangular shape, lest production slow.

However, home buyers increasingly are presented with a broader menu than the two-module ranch-style house. Manufacturers are also using conventional construction at the site to augment and disguise the boxiness of modules.

The modular concept also makes the expandable house practical. A young couple might buy a two-bedroom, one-bath starter home in Apopka, Fla., that sells for $37,900, including land. When their financial situation improves, they can add on a $10,000 master suite and a $9,000 family room for less than it would cost to bring in a remodeler for the job.

The largest segment of energetic and money-conscious amateur builders now favors the precut kit house. Not all precut kits are created equal, so compare what you get for your money. Bare-bones kits, many available for just $9,000, include only the wood for the outside walls of the house, with the door and window openings cut in.

The most complete kits may cost as much as $75,000 and include roofing and flooring systems, staircases, interior partitions, wall paneling, windows, doors and hardware.

A log kit can mean anything from a load of ungraded, random-length logs to ready-to-use, industry-graded lumber. The character of a log home differs from one manufacturer to the next depending on the log "profile" or method of milling and finishing the logs used, whether hand peeling or machine planing.

The construction quality of a precut home depends on how well the builder — possibly you — does the job. Look for a precut supplier who will help you with advice or will hire out a construction crew for you.

Gifted Children Can Be Hard To Recognize

By TOWN & COUNTRY
A Hearst Magazine

What to do about them poses another problem.

One figure often used to estimate the number of gifted children, according to the October issue of Town & Country, is the 1972 U.S. Office of Education figure that there are 2.5 million such children in the U.S., half of them unidentified.

That's not surprising, considering that Winston Churchill flunked sixth grade, Isaac Newton was a 14-year-old dropout and Charles Darwin quit medical school.

Bored and unchallenged, many superbrights do become dropouts, as was shown in a statewide Ohio study in the 1960s. It revealed that 3.5 percent of high school dropouts had IQs at or above 120. Other educators estimate that closer to 20 percent of dropouts may have superior ability.

"Most gifted children know that they are different by the time they are five," said Dr. Philip Powell, assistant professor of educational psychology at the University of Texas at Austin.

Powell, himself a gifted child who was reading and writing by age two, was placed in a class for retarded pupils because he showed so little interest in the classroom. Fortunately, his teacher recognized his abilities.

Back in 1972 the Office of Education defined gifted children as those "who by nature of outstanding abilities are capable of high performance."

The Office decided those abilities could be demonstrated in one or more of six categories — general intellectual ability, specific academic aptitude, leadership ability, ability in the visual or performing arts, creative thinking or psycho-motor ability.

The last category was dropped, according to Margaret Sirot, a teacher of the gifted at Wilton High School in Connecticut, when "someone figured out that meant the football team."

Archaeologists Fail To Unearth Pillar

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Archeologists burrowing under Jerusalem's old city have uncovered the main square of the Roman-era city, but they failed to find what they were looking for — the massive pillar and statue of the Emperor Hadrian that stood there for more than 1,000 years.

"The pillar should have been here, but we didn't find it," said archeologist Menahem Magen, pointing to a spot on 2,000-year-old paving stones three stories under the current street level at the walled city's Damascus Gate.

The Roman emperor ordered the column placed at the northern entrance to Jerusalem when he rebuilt the city gutted during the Jewish revolts in the first and second centuries.

Hadrian, also a known as Adian, was the Roman emperor from the year 117 until his death in 138. He traveled widely in his empire, ordering structures of various types built in his honor. These include Hadrian's Wall that runs 73½ miles across Britain from Wallsend to Bowness.

The pillar supporting a statue of Hadrian in Jerusalem was believed to be 45 feet high. Arabs still call Damascus Gate "Bab al-Amud," or Gate of the Pillar, indicating that the structure was there at the time of the Moslem conquest in the seventh century and probably through the Crusader period in the 12th century, Magen said.

The search for the Roman plaza and Hadrian's pillar capped a six-year effort to restore the Damascus Gate, the old city's most elaborate entrance, to the grandeur of earlier eras.

In 1967, when Israeli troops conquered the Arab sector of the divided city, the Damascus Gate was crowded on both sides of the 16th-century walls by buildings and trash.

Now a $2-million project is nearing completion to remove the buildings, uncover the Roman gates underneath and build a garden inside the wall built in 1537 by Suleiman the Magnificent.

The main road outside has already been moved away, exposing the walls and the gate set off by an amphitheater and floodlights at night.

Two years ago engineers dug under Suleiman's gate to reach the triple gate of the Roman era.

Clearing away 38,500 cubic feet of rubble on the inside, they were stunned to find intact a Roman guardtower that had been converted to an olive press in the Moslem period. A steep, winding staircase led up to the ramparts on the city walls.

The engineers then dug a passage through the 10-foot-thick wall to the concealed Roman plaza. Yitzhak Yaacobi, head of the East Jerusalem Development Corp. Ltd. which oversaw the work, said only one-fifth of the plaza could be cleared without endangering the buildings above.

The plaza, with its huge central pillar, was depicted in the 6th century Madaba map, a mosaic outline of Jerusalem that was discovered on the floor of a Byzantine church in Jordan. Archaeologists now accept it as an accurate map of the Roman city.

As part of the renovations, City Hall persuaded 17 shop owners inside the gate to evacuate their stalls while the city builds new shops a few feet away.

The Damascus Gate project, funded by the Israeli government and the private Jerusalem Foundation headed by Mayor Teddy Kollek, was one element in Kollek's 16-year effort to bring 20th century conditions to the city founded by King David 3,000 years ago.

About 25,000 people, mostly Palestinians, now live in the one-square-mile city which encompasses shrines of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

Kollek has replaced the century-old sewage system, buried a central television cable to remove a forest of rooftop antennas, and paved the narrow lanes with cobblestones.

The project included reconstructing the old city's Jewish Quarter, which was destroyed during 19 years of Jordanian rule and Arab-Israeli warfare, and revitalizing the Via Dolorosa, recognized as the route of Christ's walk to Calvary.

Arab states and the United Nations have charged that Israel has destroyed the Arab character of the city

Sculpture To Be Assembled

RALEIGH — "Arcanum," a monumental outdoor sculpture by Morganton artist Thomas Sayre, will soon be cast in concrete, in seven sections, on the grounds of the North Carolina Museum of Art.

In early December, the components of the sculpture, each weighing about 8 tons, will be lifted into place near the museum entrance with a 35-ton crane. The completed piece will stand 28 feet tall, 38 feet long, and 13 feet wide. It will remain on view at the museum from Dec. 15 to March 17, then be permanently installed at Perimeter Park, a new business park near the Research Triangle.

The construction and installation of "Arcanum" will involve about 50 people during the course of this project.

The scheduled dates of activities may have to be altered if weather conditions at the time so dictate.

Loincloth-Clad Buto Dancers On Tour

By KELLY KING
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Five Japanese men clad in loincloths, their heads shaved and their muscular bodies covered with rice flour, will introduce President and Mrs. Reagan to "buto," an avant-garde style of Japanese dance characterized by abnormal, distorted movement.

Sankai Juku, a buto group that represented Japan at an international festival in Los Angeles prior to the Summer Olympics, is making its second trip to the United States this month.

It has scheduled performances in New York, Boston, Pittsburgh and will make a special White House appearance at the invitation of Mrs. Reagan, according to the group's sponsors, Mitsubishi Motors Corp.

Buto developed in Japan as a reaction to the restrictive classical dances of the West and traditional dance in Japan. Though influenced before World War II by German expressionist and Spanish flamenco dance, it is generally considered a product of the postwar generation and evolved into its present state during the '60s.

Though traditional Japanese dance elements are also present, buto emphasizes emotional expression in a society that is taught to mask feelings.

Tense, almost trance-like performers distort their bodies and faces in works aimed at identifying humans with animals and nature, according to Ushio Amagatsu, founder of Sankai Juku.

Buto choreography is sometimes controversial and often unsettling. In one Sankai Juku work, performers hang from their feet on ropes. In another, a rigid dancer falls backward, his head bouncing on impact with the wooden floor.

In "Revolt of the Flesh," a 1968 work by leading buto performer Tatsumi Hijikata, birds were killed on stage.

The ascetic, austere quality of buto is obviously, but not exclusively, Japanese, according to Amagatsu. He feels other cultures can appreciate the significance of the forms and gestures in his works.

Music is used to accompany movement, and Amagatsu generally uses a collage of different music pieces in his works.

Dancers whiten their bodies to depersonalize themselves, which is also why Sankai Juku members shave their heads.

One of about 20 buto groups now active in Japan, Sankai Juku has been giving performances since 1978 under Amagatsu's guidance.

A dancer trained in Western classical and modern dance, Amagatsu has been involved in buto since the early '70s. He has created six works for Sankai Juku and given workshops on his theories about the body and dance.

Sankai Juku has visited Europe four times since 1980. Amagatsu said audiences there have reacted quite strongly to his group's performances, and he plans to give workshops in Paris and Belgium following the U.S. tour. Since 1983, Sankai Juku has been sponsored by Mitsubishi Motors.

Though there's a certain acceptance of buto in Japan, Amagatsu said audiences here react "collectively" to his works rather than individually, and chances are small that buto will catch on among the general public.

But through its international performances, buto does stand to earn a more respected position in the world of Japanese art, he said.

Micronesian Chants On Records

By HELEN ALTONN
Star-Bulletin

HONOLULU (AP) — Voices of the past singing Micronesian chants — some in a "ghost" language — have been brought to life through a Bishop Museum project.

The recordings were made on Dictaphone cylinders in 1926 during a scientific expedition to the Caroline Islands sponsored by the museum and Tohoku Imperial University of Japan.

They had been stored at the museum — unplayed and unopened — until Elizabeth Tatar began working in the Audio-Recording Collections of the Department of Anthropology in 1977. She is an ethnomusicologist, an anthropologist specializing in music.

She started opening the 44 cylinders to inspect their condition, and little rolls of paper, yellow and brittle with age, fell out of many of them. The papers had brief notes on the contents of the cylinders.

"I didn't know what they were like or if they could be played, but it kept gnawing on me," Ms. Tatar said.

She specializes in Hawaiian and Polynesian music but felt it was important to recreate the Micronesian songs and oral traditions for the Micronesian people.

Thus began what she says was "a detective story all the way" to rerecord, catalog and translate the songs.

She obtained a grant in 1981 from the Folk Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts for the first phase of the work. The NEA recently awarded another grant to produce a cassette of the songs with a booklet containing photographs, notes and song texts. Matching funds also have been provided for the Micronesian project by the museum and private donors.

The original recordings were made by Iwakichi Muranushi with a Dictaphone recorder belonging to the Bishop Museum. He was a young anthropology graduate with the Saito Ho-on Kai Museum in Sendai and was responsible for material culture and oral traditions during the 1936 expedition. Yoshio Kondo was the only Bishop Museum representative.

The notes in the cylinders said they were songs, or were sung by "natives," with no details, Ms. Tatar said. She began searching for documentation on the perfomers in their villages.

She said Kondo had provided some information and some of his expedition photographs in the museum collection related to the recordings.

Ms. Tatar saw correspondence from Muranushi saying he had field notes, but she didn't find them. She thought the material was probably in Japan, so museum anthropology chairman Yosihiko Sinoto went to Sendai in 1982 and located Muranushi's sons. They had saved all their father's notes and allowed Sinoto to make copies. He returned home with 13 manuscripts and a copy of Muranushi's diary during the expedition.

Ms. Tatar, meanwhile, had shipped the cylinders to the Belfer Audio Laboratory and Archives of Syracuse University in New York, along with the Dictaphone recorder-player used by Muranushi.

"The first time I put the tape on I was just absolutely amazed," Ms. Tatar said. She said the Micronesian recordings were in surprisingly good condition.

A total of 39 re-recordings were made, including traditional chants and more modern songs.

Ms. Tatar said Muranushi's field notes and diary had been a help in understanding the songs and where they were sung. "But he had a major problem with aboriginal terms. What he heard, he translated into Japanese characters. When translated into English, we ended up with some very strange-sounding place names."

She had to find translators "who know chant traditions and have the patience and willingness to deal with this," but on one Yapese song they had to give up, calling it a "ghost language."

She said a copy of the entire Muranushi collection had been sent to the Micronesian Area Research Center at the University of Guam.

Composer Richard Nanes Mixes Music With Business

By JENNIFER JUERGENS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Classical composer-pianist Richard Nanes has one piece of advice for anyone who would like to do what he's doing:

"Make sure you have a trust fund."

Nanes didn't have a trust fund when he decided to pursue his first love — music — so, after years of studying piano and composition, he put his music career on hold until he could make enough money to support his goals.

Nanes, who points out that it costs more than $25,000 to have a musical score transcribed for an orchestra, even started his own record company to produce his four albums. Although they are selling, Nanes admits "the outake is more than the intake."

In a move toward solvency, he took over a company his father had acquired and pointed it in a new direction, the manufacture of computer equipment. Now the Nanes Finishing and Assembling Corp. in Newark, N.J., employs more than 200 people.

Nanes says he doesn't mind being in the business world and seems as knowledgeable about business as he is about music. He is pleased that his company was cited for the quality of its products, but his music is more important, he insists. He'd rather have an award for the quality of that, he says.

Born in Philadelphia and raised in New Jersey, Nanes, a 43-year-old bachelor, began playing the piano when he was 5. Regarded as a child prodigy, he composed his first piece of music at age 7. This piece still remains his favorite.

Sometime shortly after that, he says, he started playing classical trumpet and at 14, he was named New Jersey's all-state trumpeter. But at 19, he dropped the trumpet and put all his time into studying piano. At 22, he left the country to study at the Paris Conservatory.

Nanes, who plays only his own compositions, realized then that it takes not only long hours of study and practice to become a successful artist, but also a steady cash flow. It was then that he decided to come back to the United States to create a solid financial base, using the manufacturing company as a springboard.

As the management group developed and took increasing responsibility in the business, Nanes began spending more and more time on his music. He never stopped writing, practicing.

"I've been honing my craft," he says. "You have to prove yourself, separate yourself from thousands of fine pianists."

In his Newark, N.J., office by 9:30, he's out by 4, and retires to the carriage house separate from his main house in Llewellyn Park, N.J., to practice on his concert grand piano, compose and listen to music. Mostly Bach, he adds.

His best work is done when there's a full moon, he says."One becomes very creative with the gravitational pull."

Nanes' music has been heard on a number of TV specials, including a tribute to the late Cardinal Cooke of New York City. A number of his compositions have been used as themes for radio and television programs.

Nanes will be heading to Europe at the beginning of 1985, where his work will be played by the London Symphony Orchestra at Festival Hall. He will also travel to Poland and Oslo, where his symphony will also be performed.

He'd also like to play in Carnegie Hall in 1985.

Nanes says that without the financial backing he has, he probably wouldn't be at this stage and adds, "the more successful you are, the more you spend.

"Classical musicians are coming up and making money, though," he says.

But for those classical composers and musicians who find it difficult to break into the field and don't have "trust funds or university posts," Nanes plans to create a "Richard Nanes Series" — concerts that would give other composers a chance to perform.

Final Concert

Zaire Popular Music Is Too Costly For Country's Natives

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — The average music lover can't afford the price of a record, but the reverberating, brassy beat of Zaire's music has made it this African country's most pervasive export.

Since the 1960s, pop music from the former Belgian Congo has been a mainstay of disc jockeys from as far south as Zambia and across the 4,500-mile breadth of this continent from Kenya in the east to Senegal in the west.

Zaire's two top musicians, Tabu Ley and Franco, have built up followings in Europe and in the United States. Last year, Tabu Ley had a concert tour of France and Belgium, and Franco, whose real name is Lwambo Makiadi, played to big crowds in several European countries and the United States.

Tabu Ley credits the nation's diverse culture for the Zairean music phenomenon. Zaire's population of some 30 million is divided into about 200 tribes who speak more than 70 languages.

"When they built this city, it was an explosion of our culture," Tabu Ley said of the hodgepodge of an urban sprawl which is Kinshasa, Zaire's capital of some 3 million people formerly called Leopoldville.

"Unlike the French, the Belgians maintained sharp separation of the races, and this helped us develop our own style of music," Kufwakunitu Petelo, an artist and lecturer on Zaire's music, said in an interview.

To the Western ear, the music sounds like a brassy and insistent Latin American rumba, and that's what it's called here.

"The music in Latin American countries was influenced by the slaves taken there from Africa," Tabu Ley said.

The beat is the key to Zairean music's success.

Though the Lingala-language lyrics spin earthy tales packed with the woes of human existence, the music has become very popular even in such countries as Kenya where hardly anybody understands Lingala.

Franco said in an interview after his recent U.S. tour: "An American has to make an effort to listen to our music, as Africans must make the effort to listen to American music. ... But if one begins to dance, one will begin to understand."

In Kinshasa's raucous nightclubs, the featured band doesn't start playing until after midnight. "It let's the band show how important they are," Tabu Ley said.

For those who can understand the words, the songs tell of loves won and lost, hassles with corrupt officials or the trials of keeping body and soul together in a country which has an annual per capita income of barely $200.

In the Franco hit called "Mamou," he sings about a prostitute. The lyrics say: "Prostitution isn't a disease, prostitution isn't punishment. ... I am betraying nobody. I have chosen this career to provide food for my children."

The song is about a woman betrayed by her student-lover. The young rake promised marriage upon his graduation, but instead married another woman for her money.

But in his concert improvisation, Tabu Ley said the young man wooed the women by saying he had been promised a seat in President Mobutu's central committee. This drew bursts of laughter from the crowd.

Despite his popularity, Tabu Ley has estimated that only 5 percent of the sales oF his 84 LPs have been in Zaire, where a disc costs $16, or nearly a month's pay.

Though Franco and Tabu Ley are household names in Zaire and through much of Africa, they don't have the trappings of wealth associated with Western pop stars.

And there's little money to be had in staging concerts in impoverished countries. Recent tours by Franco and Tabu Ley to Kenya and Uganda generated much public interest but flopped financially because many of their fans couldn't afford the tickets.

China Celebrates Anniversary With A Musical Extravaganza

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — To celebrate its 35th anniversary, Communist China has produced a song-and-dance extravaganza with a cast of 1,000 and a zealous style reminiscent of the days of Mao Tse-tung.

Rehearsed for 14 months under the sponsorship of the Ministry of Culture, "Song of the Chinese Revolution" is a 2½-hour pageant in which dancers, singers, orchestral and choral forces trace a propagandist's view of Chinese history since 1840.

Chairman Mao, Premier Chou En-lai, Chu Teh, Liu Shaoqi and other Communist figures of the Communist past are portrayed by look-alikes, although China's current leader, Deng Xiaoping, is glimpsed only briefly in a film clip at the end.

Soldiers dash across the stage waving red flags, the 1934-35 "Long March" and 1949 siege of Nanking are recreated, and a children's chorus sings "We are the Successors to the Communist Cause."

The biggest theatrical epic in Peking since "The East is Red" was staged in the Mao era in 1964, the spectacle also includes an anti-imperialist sequence in which "Down with the Great Powers" is sung to the tune of "Frere Jacques."

Foreign troops are portrayed burning down the emperor's summer palace in 1860 and looting Chinese treasures, causing an "unbearable humiliation, unstoppable rage."

The chorus booms "We are the Guerrilla Lads" as male dancers portray Red Army resistance to the Japanese in World War II.

An actor who closely resembles Mao proclaims the founding of the People's Republic on Oct. 1, 1949, as the stage becomes a replica of the landmark Tien An Men Gate in Peking.

"The Chinese people have now stood up," he says to a murmur of recognition from the audience. Mao died in 1976.

China's modernization under Deng features highly. A coloratura soprano sings "The Springtime of Science is Here" and "My Heart is Flying to the Mysteries of Space," to a backdrop of satellites. Another scene is set amid offshore oil pipelines.

The musical climax is an "Ode to the Motherland" in which a chorus of more than 300 rings the auditorium and a tenor earnestly bellows, "Seas of Petroleum Come Gushing Forth."

The show glosses over what now are viewed as Mao's mistakes, such as the famine-inducing 1958 "Great Leap Forward" and the convulsive 1966-76 "Cultural Revolution" from which China is still recovering.

The original synopsis called for depictions of the chaos of those 10 tumultuous years, but the producers opted for symbolism: whirling snow for tears and ballerinas in white, the Chinese color of mourning.

"It is utterly unnecessary to use bloody scenes to stimulate the audience, most of whom experienced these events," Culture Ministry official Zhao Hua told The Associated Press.

There is only a brief mention of the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing "cliques," now largely held responsible for the evils of the Cultural Revolution. Lin was a defense minister who plotted against Mao and Jiang is Mao's widow, now imprisoned in Peking.

The production owes its lineage to the iconoclastic operas Jiang once sanctioned to whip up revolutionary fervor. Among the eight works considered as models were "Taking Tiger Mountain by Stragegy," "Red Detachment of Women" and "The Red Lantern."

The same militant poses, ardent flag-waving and martial music abound in "Song of the Chinese Revolution," although the epic also has a soft edge, with ballet ensembles, Tibetan and other ethnic dances and a Mantovani-like orchestral backdrop.

The vice minister of culture, Zhou Weizhi, said on the premiere Sept. 28 that the production is a "vivid portrayal of our revolutionary tradition that will arouse strong patriotic feelings among young and old alike."

He hoped the show, involving the services of 1,400 poets, singers, dancers, technicians, designers and musicians, would "stimulate development in music and the performing arts."

The presentation comes at a delicate time for Chinese artists, frightened by last year's campaign against "spiritual pollution" just as they were emerging from the Cultural Revolution's straitjacket.

As the reins started loosening again this year, with some realistic plays and Western imports such as Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie," the government chose a full-throated propaganda platform to mark Oct. 1.

Admission is by invitation and some foreigners have been told that tickets, listing at 2 yuan (75 cents), are not available to them. Performances are due to continue through November and then a color film will be screened nationwide.

At one performance, many patrons were People's Liberation Army troops. There was little applause.

Sculptor Plans To Submerge Work In Mile-Deep Ocean Ooze

EDITOR'S NOTE — A teacher-artist in upstate New York is looking for a sort of immortality — at least a remembrance in 50 million years or so,— in the depths of the deep blue sea. His idea makes interesting reading, no matter how practical.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

HIGH FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Schuler plans to etch the very essence of his psyche into granite cubes and sink them to the primordial ooze a mile deep in the ocean, where the only light is the bioluminescence of bizarre sea creatures unknown to man.

Cosmic stuff? Well, Schuler is a cosmic kind of guy.

He is a man who has made "talking furniture" with tape players buried inside, who has pierced furniture with neon and plastic tubing, who has made epoxy bricks and asked roaming hippies to "drop them in a sewer, on a street, just leave them somewhere." As a child, he buried his toys and "got great satisfaction in being the only one who knew where they were."

Schuler, 56, bearded, bespectacled, tanned and fit, lives in a Hobbit-style den of sprayed polyurethane foam in his own 70-acre forest about 95 miles north of New York City.

The project, which Schuler figures will take the rest of his life, is called Tethys, after the primordial sea that covered Earth in its infancy.

Schuler says the granite blocks with their bizarre hieroglyphics ultimately will be sunk to the depths of the sea at 100-mile intervals around the globe.

There they will remain for the incomprehensible span of geological time, he says, unless, by some fluke, one or two are heaved to some future mountaintop as the planet's crust reshapes itself.

"When the bottom of the ocean becomes land again, in something like 50 million years, there's a chance someone could find one of these," mused Schuler, moving among the 500-pound blocks in his studio.

"My whole purpose is to leave something on earth, in as permanent a form as I can. The ocean bottom is one of the most inert environments on earth. On land, for example, even the hardest granite gravestones wear away — sulfide pollution in the air wreaks havoc.

"Also, on the surface, people can tamper with art. And after a couple of nuclear exchanges, most of Western art will be obliterated."

Schuler, a native of Milwaukee, Wisc., has college degrees in engineering, philosophy and art and had a successful career as a professor, printmaker and video artist.

Before he started the Tethys project several years ago, he sought advice from scientists.

"Geologists thought I was crazy, but they enjoyed the idea," he says. "I got advice from Walter Broeker, a chemical engineer at Columbia University, and Bruce Heezen, the famous oceanographer from Columbia. They said the blocks will survive 50-200 million years."

Schuler has 29 blocks in progress now, and plans to have 36 finished for the first ocean drop next summer along a 3,600-mile route from Jacksonville, Fla., to Morocco.

"The idea has incredible appeal. The odds of some of them surviving are quite good — there should be about 600 of them when I'm done — and if they do surface again, it would be in quite a different time."

Each block has the Tethys logo on one face — a map of the world showing the route of the project and the latitude and longitude where the particular block is dropped.

The other faces are etched with what Schuler calls "a series of personal glyphs and anecdotal images about my life and times." Some are humorous, but others are disturbing, violent, pessimistic visions of the human condition.

One block bears the title, "Young Abusers Meet Robot Missiles, Round 2." The sides have a series of images depicting a head being shot by a rocket.

Another, bearing abstract images of various subatomic particles, reads, "When the world is hopeless, what is a man to do?" Other cubes combine images of fetuses interspersed with missiles and various subatomic particles.

"I suppose they give a kind of cosmological feeling of what's going on in the world," Schuler says. "I like to play the technological themes against human images."

Other cubes bear images from nature and astronomy, and one, resembling an old-fashioned child's alphabet block with the letters on its faces spelling "BIRTH," has information about the artist's own arrival on the planet.

Schuler concedes that the blocks bear a rather dismal message about humankind.

"I don't think man's future looks that optimistic — I don't see how nuclear war can be avoided," he says. "Yet, I don't consider myself as a pessimistic person. This is my own personal mythology, and some of the images are really tongue-in-cheek. Others may see them as amusing, ironic, depressing, whatever."

Up until now, Schuler hasn't been particularly concerned about how he's going to come up with the bankroll needed to realize his dream.

"I applied for some grants, but never followed up on them," he said.

In the past, Schuler, who is separated from his wife and has a son in law school, has been employed as a professor at the State University of New York branch in nearby New Paltz and, before that, at Florida State.

He figures the first phase of the project, funded mainly by his own savings and inheritance money, should cost $60,000-100,000 — including about $15,000 spent to test-drop a few cubes in the Bahamas last summer from a rented schooner. So far, he has no boat to carry and jettison his 30,000-pound cargo, but he said he has contacted an educational group in Raleigh, N.C., which is planning to follow Sir Walter Raleigh's route around the world, in hopes of hitching a ride.

"We're talking about getting them (the cubes) exhibited in galleries before we drop them, maybe selling castings of them, doing a series of prints, maybe a book," he said.

A colleague, Steven Kolpan, is documenting the project on videotape and working on other promotional materials.

When asked if he felt bad about the fact that he will never see his painstakingly carved cubes again, once they sink into the abysmal depths, Schuler smiled and shook his head.

"No, I have reams of drawings, memorabilia documenting the work. I like the idea that they're down there, so far down that only a machine can get to them — and so tiny relative to the area they're in, that they're like grains of sand."

Show of Quilts

An exhibition of quilts, handwoven coverlets and ceramics will be on display at the annual Fall Show at Historic Cherry Hill, located on Route 58 at Inez in Warren County, Oct. 29 through Nov. 11. Admission to the exhibition will be $2.

Approximately 50 quilts, on loan from individuals and institutions in Virginia and North Carolina, will represent a wide range of quilting. Ceramics from the collection of Dr. Leonidas Betts of North Carolina State University, Raleigh, will also be on display.

FIRST TIME SHOWING — The drawing room in Calke Abbey, Ticknall, England, is virtually untouched since it was decorated in 1856. Because shutters were kept closed for most of the time, the furniture's elaborate upholstery is as vivid as new. The "time capsule house," completed in 1703, was shown to visitors recently for the first time. (UPI Photo)

Producer Claims That Plane Sleep Is Key To His Success

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Allan Carr, who has produced such hits as the film "Grease" and the Broadway musical "La Cage aux Folles," likes to reveal the key to his success.

"I know how to sleep on airplanes," he said. "That's my greatest asset."

It's a necessity because Carr, who has four residences in Beverly Hills and Malibu, Calif., Honolulu and New York, travels a lot.

He keeps a telephone at hand, barking into it intermittently while answering an interviewer's questions. "I'm a Gemini and I can do three things at once," he said.

At the moment, Carr is co-producing a New York appearance by the Royal Shakespeare Company, working on a film called "Silence" and is looking ahead to a Christmas 1985 opening for "La Cage aux folles" in London and a 1988-89 musical to be developed for opera star Placido Domingo.

He's also supervising arrangements for a national tour of "La Cage aux folles," beginning Dec. 11 in New Orleans. The Tony Award-winning musical opened at the Pantages Theater in Hollywood last month.

PLANE SLEEPER . . . Producer Allan Carr knows how to sleep on airplanes and he feels that is the key to the string of hits he has enjoyed. His repertoire of successes run from the film, "Grease," to the musical "La Cage Aux Folles." (AP Laserphoto by Steve Dykes)

Carr doesn't have much time to enjoy the amenities at his Beverly Hills home, which was built by film producer David O. Selznick for Ingrid Bergman and which Carr has equipped with a video room, game room, wine cellar and private disco.

But he does use the weight room, and has hired two exercise trainers to help him combat a weight problem. "A Gemini has to have two of everything because I could talk one of them out of it," he said.

Carr, 42, originally wanted to become a columnist. His inspiraton was Walter Winchell, whom he met when he was 11 during a family vacation in Miami Beach.

"I just started to talk to him. I knew who he was," said Carr, who found himself 20 years later occupying a penthouse apartment that had once been Winchell's.

As a teen-ager in Highland Park, Ill., Carr saved money from afterschool jobs and invested in plays. "In those days I could invest $750. The least a person could invest in 'La Cage' was $25,000," he said.

He picked hits, including "Auntie Mame" and "The Happiest Millionaire."

"Nobody could believe I had invested money in these shows and I was only a junior or senior in high school," he said.

Along the way, he's been an impresario, a promoter, a screenwriter — he co-authored "Grease" — and a personal manager for such stars as Peter Sellers and Ann-Margret.

He was named "Producer of the Year" in 1978 by the National Association of Theater Owners. His last movie project was "Where the Boys Are."

With his eye for hits, Carr bought the musical rights to the play "La Cage aux folles" before the film became an international hit. And he acquired film rights to "Grease" at a time when no one else wanted it, he said.

Carr said he picks hits by "instinct and feeling." He also attends public screenings around the country to gauge the public's taste.

"If you do just what you want, you're a dilettante," he said.

As a producer, his job includes selecting plays or books to adapt, buying the rights and obtaining financing from banks, private investors and corporations. He also has a hand in the creative development.

"A producer's the captain of the ship. He hires the people and then lets the director do his job," he said.

Carr reflected on what qualities go into making a successful producer. "Patience, endurance, a certain amount of cash," he said, "and being able to sleep on airplanes."

Hebrew Rock Band

By DAVID IVANOVICH
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Rocking and rolling in the ancient language of the Bible, a Hebrew rock band called Beehive makes audiences sing, clap and dance when they perform.

An estimated crowd of 250,000 recently jammed an outdoor amphitheater to hear Beehive demonstrate Hebrew rock music's immense popularity.

"The Israeli music scene is very much like what the (United) States was in the '60s," said Danny Sanderson, 33, Beehive guitarist and now a popular solo performer.

"With the war, the economy, no government, the country at the moment is split down the middle," Sanderson said. "When people are in agreement, there's less to argue about and the art is less poignant. As things become more polarized, it becomes more expressive."

Because of these pressures, Sanderson said, Israelis are turning more and more to music for relaxation and entertainment.

Israel's most popular rock band is a three-man group called Benzene. The group's music, while similar to current American rock, has a distinct Mediterranean flavor. Along with the familiar electric guitar, key board and drums, Benzene adds a bouzouki, said manager and lyricist Jaacov Gilad.

The group's first LP sold more than 40,000 copies, which in Israel is considered platinum, or double gold.

Yehuda Poliker, lead singer and composer for the band, knows about the lives of blue collar workers. He and the other members of the band grew up together in a working class neighborhood in Haifa, a northern port city that has a reputation like Liverpool in England for producing rock bands.

Their families are all Sephardic Jews who emigrated to Israel from Arab and Mediterranean countries.

The Sephardi standard of living is well below that of the Ashkenazi Jews, who emigrated to Israel from Europe and North America. The unrest resulting from this economic disparity is one of Israel's major social problems.

Many Sephardi performers cannot afford to pay up to $20,000 to record an album through one of the major recording studios. Instead, many Sephardi performers make their own cassette recordings, which are then sold on the streets or at bus stations. The result has been the rise of a popular subculture of Sephardi protest music.

Yair Nitzany, 26, was the keyboard player for the group T-Slam. When T-Slam announced last year that after four years together the group was going to disband, a teen-age frenzy resulted.

"We made the youth crazy. We were the first band to make the girls cry and shout," Nitzany said.

Recording in Hebrew has its limitations. "English is a very smooth language. But with Hebrew, you can't play with it. You can't drop vowels and sing 'heeeey babeeee,'" Nitzany said. Stretching out the vowel sounds in Hebrew could change the meaning of the words.

"Most Israelis compose while they're mumbling words in English," and then translate into Hebrew, Nitzany said.

Recording in Hebrew restricts the listening audience to Israel and Jewish-speaking communities and even access to Israel's state-owned radio and television is limited.

To find a bigger music market, many groups record in English to distribute their records abroad. But an Israeli invasion of the U.S. music world is not around the corner.

T-Slam's first LP, recorded in both English and Hebrew, and sold internationally, flopped in the United States.

"It was popular everywhere but America," Nitzany said, shaking his head. "But nobody else had made it out of Israel before. It was still a big success for us."

Postal Service Announces Details Of 1984 Christmas Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Each year the U.S. Postal Service issues two stamps dedicated to Christmas. One stamp usually features a design of religious or traditional significance. The other stamp depicts a contemporary design noting familiar Christmas scenes.

The 1984 Christmas stamps are ready for release and will be welcomed by collectors as well as those who use the stamps on their cards, letters and packages.

Both stamps will be available at post offices on Oct. 30. Deadline for first-day cancellations is Nov. 29. To obtain them you may purchase your stamps at the local post office and affix to your own envelope. Mail to Postmaster, Washington, DC 20066-9991 (for the traditional stamp) and-or Postmaster, Jamaica, NY 11431-9991 (for the contemporary stamp).

If you prefer to have the USPS affix the stamp, enclose a money order for 20 cents per stamp, to Traditional Christmas Stamp, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20066-9992 or Contemporary Christmas Stamp, Postmaster, Jamaica, NY 11431-9992. Remember, your requests must be postmarked no later than Nov. 29.

Dictionary Traces Roots Of African Words

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Biddies may not dance the boogie-woogie, tango or watusi, or listen to jazz, banjos or bongos, but all those words, along with gumbo and even the word mumbo-jumbo, came into English from Africa south of the Sahara.

Webster's New World Dictionary acknowledges that it does not know the derivation of "biddy," which it defines as an eccentric or gossipy old woman.

But linguist Gerard M. Dalgish, in his "A Dictionary of Africanisms" has traced biddy to "bidibidi," which means a small yellow bird in Chiluba, a West African language.

Dalgish, now an assistant professor of English at New York's Baruch College, culled material for the dictionary's 3,000 entries in a 1976-78 stint teaching at the University of Tanzania in Dar es Salaam, and from the archives of a dictionary publisher in the United States.

He included words that appeared in news and travel stories from Africa over the years, and also expresions that are commonly used by experts on Africa and native English-speakers living on the continent.

The entries include geographic, culinary and musical phrases, along with the names of African political parties and their slogans.

Countries listed range from Abyssinia, now Ethiopia, to Zimbabwe, formerly Rhodesia. Foods stretch from "aano geel," Somalian for camel's milk, to "zilzil," an Ethiopian beef dish.

Religious terms extend from "abathakathi," evil wizards among the Zulu of South Africa and Swaziland, to the more familiar walking corpses known as "zombies," from a Bantu language word for a god or fetish. Zombies populate "voodoo," Haiti's mysterious cult, which draws its name from the word for spirit in several West African languages.

Dalgish, interviewed in his Manhattan office, said the first words to creep from sub-Saharan Africa into English and other European languages might have come with explorers and traders in the 1700s, who returned from safari — an African word derived from Arabic — using the African names for such wonders as chimpanzees, bananas, giraffes, gorillas, impalas, gnus and zebras.

A new wave of African words entered English with the slaves taken from West Africa to the Western Hemisphere.

Many of these "West Africanisms," probably the African words most familiar to Westerners, are preserved in a dialect spoken by the Gullah, black people who live along the coasts of South Carolina, Georgia and part of Florida, Dalgish said.

They include foods, such as "goober," a peanut, and "gumbo," which means "okra," another West African emigrant along with the "yam."

"Boogie-woogie" music and dance comes from the Hausa word "buga," to beat drums, the "tango" comes from the Ibibo verb to dance, and the "watusi" is the name of the tribe in East Central Africa.

The "juke" box on which such music can be heard owes its name to the word for wicked in several West African languages, now used by the Gullah to describe a cheap roadside inn and its attractions.

Dalgish said that his dictionary, which has sold about 1,000 copies, mostly to university libraries and African specialists, had been criticized for over-emphasis on the East African languages that he studied in Tanzania.

Also, he said he regretted that several words Africans use to mean people are used by whites as derogatory terms for blacks.

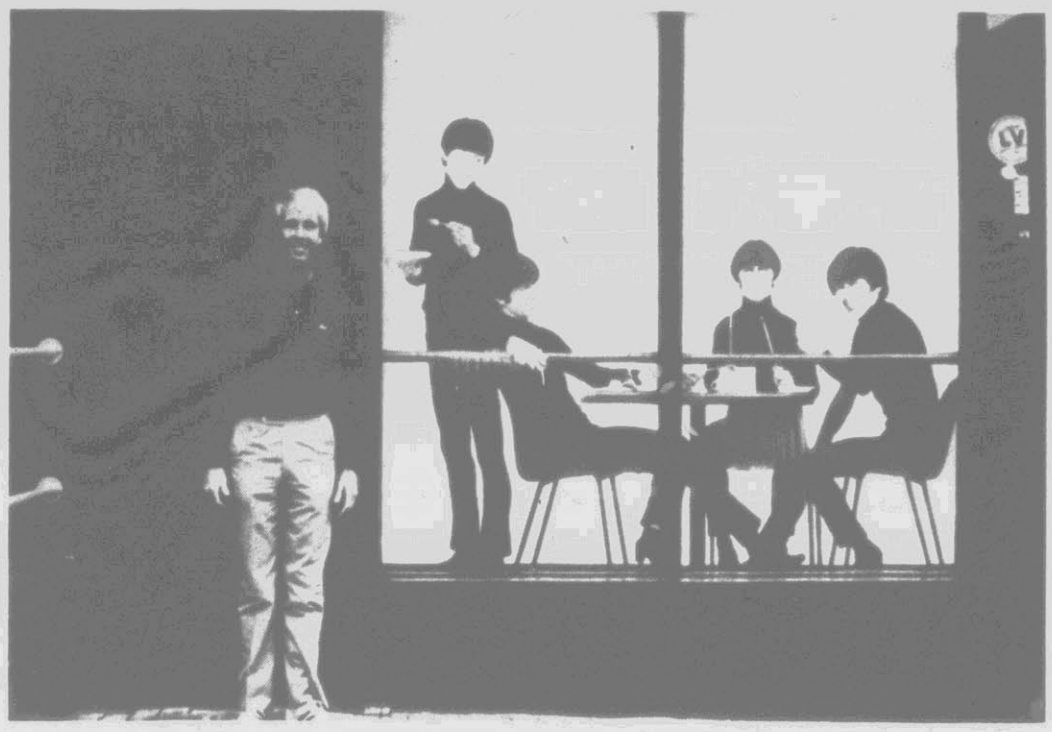
Local Couple Made A Nostalgic Trip To The Beatles Museum

. . . the Magical Mystery Tour Bus at Beatle City



. . . Author Carter stands beside a Beatles display

Text by Dr. John Marshall Carter
Photos by John and Suzon Carter

"It was 20 years ago today
(give or take a few months)
Sargeant Pepper taught the band to play
(whoever Sarge was)
(in 1984, they were definitely back in style)..."

At the completion of a research trip at the Public Record Office in Chancery Lane in London, my wife Suzon and I took the train to Liverpool, the "Beatle City." The trip was our reward to ourselves for the hard work of accomplishing what we'd set out to do in a few weeks time.

Liverpool was as I had expected: boisterous, dirty, proud, rather friendly, somewhat sprawling. I suppose what I had not expected was the tacky building Liverpudlian (all kids of my generation knew from Beatle magazines that inhabitants of Liverpool were Liverpudlians) officials had erected to house collected Beatle memoribilia.

Yellow Building

The building is a one-story, metal structure, painted yellow (Yellow Submarine, maybe?). Upon entering, we saw a rather disorganized collection of Beatle books, posters, magazines, t-shirts — all the tidbits of plastic hero-worship. This was a true Phineas T. Barnum palace, English style.

The money extracted from Suzon and me were to allow us to enter "Beatle City," a much ballyhooed memorial to the Fab Four. We hipped the turnstile and off we went down Beatle memory lane.

The first sight was a holographic window depicting Liverpool in the late 1950s, the time when John Lennon and Paul McCartney were having their worldviews shaped by the television series "Robin Hood" (you remember "Robin Hood, Robin Hood, ridin' through the glen, Robin Hood, Robin Hood, with his band of men ..."), by American television western stars, by American rock-n-roll stars such as Elvis, Little Richard and Roy Orbison (I know you've heard bits and pieces — remember the Dave Clark Five's "Bits and Pieces" — of this story a hundred times, in the media and in recent books like Peter Brown's "The Love You Make" New York: McGraw-Hill, 1983, or Philip Norman's "Shout: The Beatles in Their Generation", Warner Books, 1982. The latter is certainly the best researched, best-written book on rock stars.)

This was the stage-setter, the mood piece. The German and French tourists next to us seemed to be as unmoved as we were at this juncture.

As we eased along a rather dark, cavernous aisle toward the next "really big shew," I was having major doubts about the wisdom of the train fare from London at the end of an exhausting stay in England and France. I was beginning to feel like the title of Peggy Lee's (the Beatles thought she was "fab") song: "Is That All There Is?"

Early Contracts

Next came the collection of early contracts between the Beatles and the Liverpool and German clubs (the Kaiserkeller and Star clubs in Hamburg being the most notorious). These Beatle-ings were quite good — 'imagine' a Beatle concert for a few pence.

Beatle uniforms — the matching Edwardian-style ones, and instruments — one of John Lennon's old Rickenbackers was interesting, were quite nice. I thought immediately of the royal scepters in the Tower of Longon and of Henry VIII's suit of armor in the same repository and compared briefly the impact of the two owners, Henry and the Beatles, on their respective societies.

From the suits and guitar we slid slowly alongside glass cases containing a stunning display of Beatle photos which conjured up for us the festive social and historical context of the early- to mid-1960s.

Yet, the things that impressed us most, I believe, were the film clips of the Beatles from British television shows, such as "Top of the Pops" and "Ready, Steady, Go", which have never been shown in the United States (even the recent "documentary" "The Compleat Beatles" did not include these). There they were in their 1964 splendid innocence: choirboy haircuts and three-part harmony.

Relived Teen Joys

The years flew back — 20 years ago — and we once against relived, for a brief moment, those fleeting joys of teens on the threshold of experience.

When the monitor flashed up the lads (Why did I say "the lads"? I always thought calling the Beatles "the lads" was downright dumb, in the same category with "groovy," "fab," "trip" and "boss.") singing "This Boy," the serene, yet anxious lyrics took us back to 1963 and 1964 as all Beatle songs — and all other songs we like — carry the listener to particular people and places in time. I looked out of the corner of my eye. I saw that it had the same effect on Suzon as well. We tried not to let our emotions show.

All of a sudden, I was slow-dancing with my ninth grade girlfriend, stocking feet, in the gym of Leaksville-Spray Junior High School, my heart thumping, flushed face, spastic, hoping that my giraffe-like moves were acceptable and trying mightily not to put my 11-Ds on her 6-narrows. Suzon, I noticed, was swept away, too. She was reliving "that boy" of 1963-64, the time, the place, the feelings ...

So, what the heck, if people can well up a tear or two watching reruns of "Old Yeller," we aren't going to apologize for a little nostalgia trip to Beatle-Land.

Trip Refreshing

The remainder of the "Day Trip" to Liverpool was equally refreshing. According to the tour guide on the "Magical Mystery Tour" bus tour, our bus was the famous one from the "Magical Mystery Tour" movie which flopped.

Seeing the Beatles' childhood residences destroyed at least one Beatle myth: the four Beatles were not from a background of abject poverty as so many Beatle propagandists have lyricized. Ringo Starr's home in the section of Liverpool known as "The Dingle" comes the closest to a humble background.

While Suzon gathered souvenirs, I hailed a taxi. The driver was a veritable mine of information about Liverpool and, unlike the London drivers, offered it freely. He took me to my requested destination, the site of the famous "Cavern Club", where now stands "Cavern Walks," a small shopping mall based on a Beatle theme.

A brief spin by the Mersey (remember Gerry and the Pacemakers' "Ferry Cross the Mersey"?) was an added bonus. The riverfront was alive with people and sea gulls, the river was dotted with vessels.

On the way back to the rail station to meet Suzon, the taxi driver took me by the recently unveiled statue of "Eleanor Rigby," sculpted by British singer and showman Tommy Steele, who is currently starring in a London production of "Singing in the Rain". The impressionistic statue of a faceless female figure was interesting and was made more so because four "live" punk rockers were sitting on a bench next to Eleanor. They smiled politely as I snapped their picture. They didn't look like "lonely people" at all.

We just made the 5:25 p.m. train. We sampled the booklets, leaflets and newspapers we had purchased, which were in a bright yellow "Beatle City" bag as we munched on some currant and apple tarts which had been packaged somewhere near the end of the Middle Ages and watched the blurred fields of the English rural countryside fly by as we headed for London and 1984.

(Editor's Note: John Marshall Carter is assistant professor of medieval history at East Carolina University. He has published articles on the Norman Conquest, monasticism, and sport and crime in the Middle Ages.)

New Book Contains Six Essays On North Carolina Black History

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

New Information on black life in North Carolina and the South is presented in a new book just published by the University of North Carolina Press.

"Black Americans in North Carolina and the South" is a collection of six essays on several aspects of black North Carolinians from the colonial era to the first quarter of the 20th century.

Edited by Jeffrey J. Crow and Flora J. Hatley of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, the book is a series of lectures delivered at a recent symposium sponsored by the Cultural Resources' division of Archives and History. Essayists are leading scholars in various field of black history.

The well-illustrated book covers aspects of black history which have mostly been neglected by historians, with the authors offering new material themselves and prompting further research by others.

Raymond Gavis, associate professor of history at Duke University, in his essay entitled "A 'Sin of Omission': Black Historiography in North Carolina," integrates black experiences with the mainstream of social, political, economic and intellectural history of North Carolina.

Dr. Leland Ferguson, who is associate professor of anthropology at the University of South Carolina, examines the lifestyle of blacks during the 18th and 19th centuries via an archaeological approach in his lecture, "History from the Hands of Black Americans: A Methodological Proposal."

A comparison of North Carolina's black and white populations before the Revolution is the subject of an essay by Marvin L. Michael Kay and Lorin Lee Cary. In "A Demographic Analysis of Colonial North Carolina with Special Emphasis upon the Slave and Black Populations," they cover patterns of black population growth through slave trade and natural increase and offer other demograhic information which is published here for the first time.

Drs. Cary and Kay are professors of history at the University of Toledo, Ohio.

In her essay, "The Black Female Missionary Association Teacher in the South, 1861-1870," Linda M. Perkins describes the unequal treatment of black schoolteachers who altruistically flocked to the South to teach slaves during and just after the Civil War. Dr. Perkins is assistant vice-president of the Claremont University Center, Claremont, Calif.

Contrasts of race relations in the urban North and South in the last decades of the 19th century are the subject of Howard N. Rabinowitz's essay entitled "A Comparative Perspective on Race Relations in Southern and Northern Cities, 1860-1900, with Special Emphasis on Raleigh, N.C." Dr. Rabinowitze is currently associate professor of history at the University of New Mexico.

The simple lack of money led to the demise of the Leonard School of Medicine at Raleigh's Shaw University, according to Dr. Todd L. Savitt, associate professor of history at East Carolina University. In his essay, "The Education of Black Physicians at Shaw University, 1882-1918," Dr. Savitt outlines the high hopes of Leonard's founder and the subsequent decline of the black medical institution which operated between 1882 and 1918.

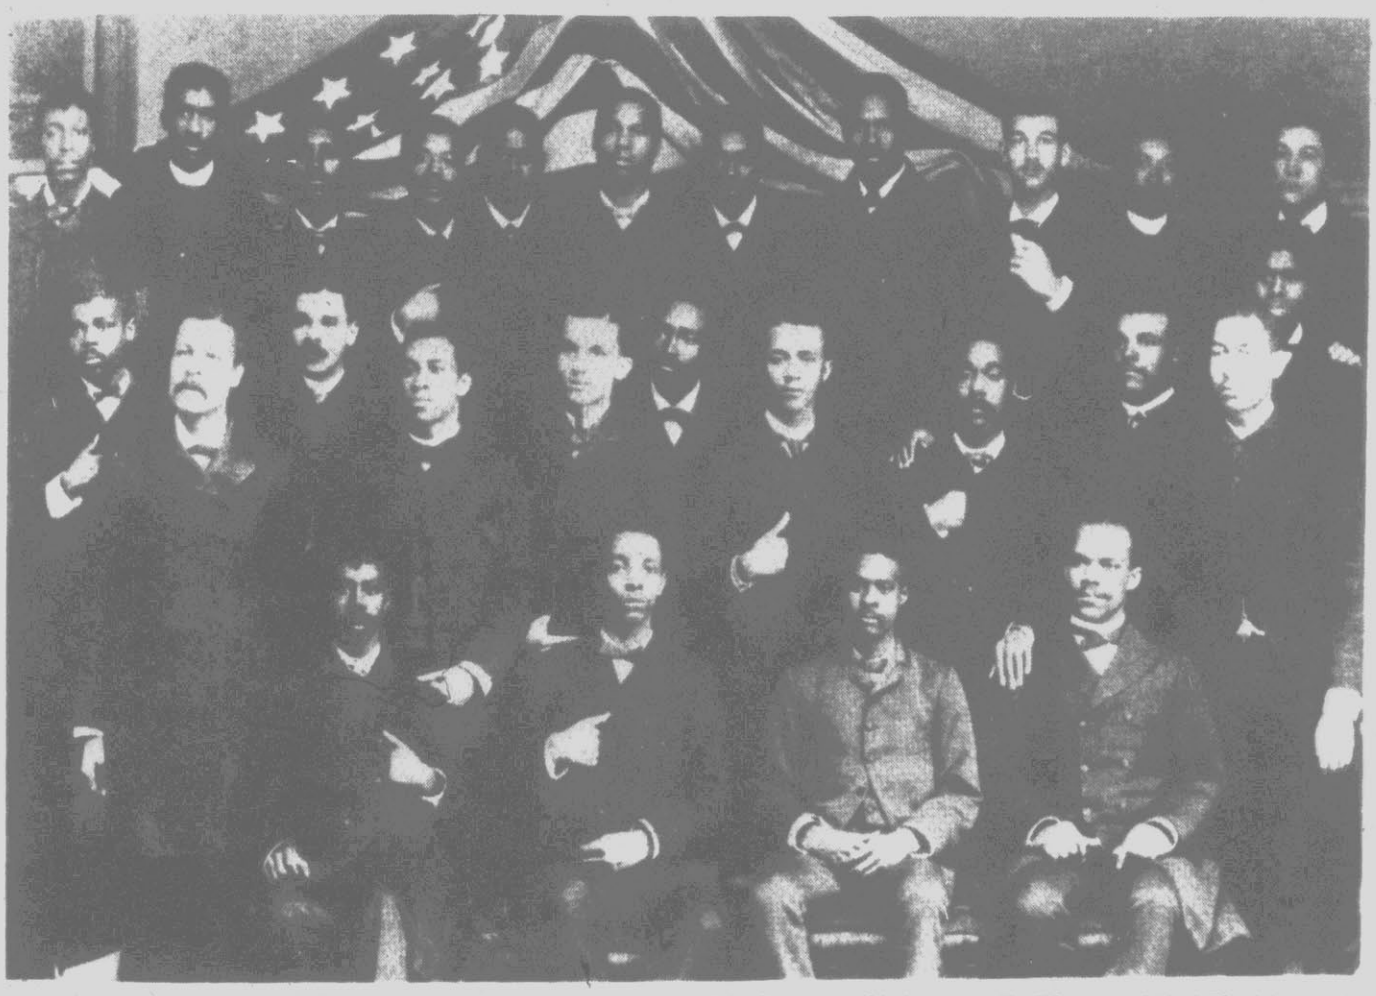
According to editors Crow and Hatley, these essays describe "the richness and variety of the Afro-American experience," and they invite "others to share in the recovery of that past." Dr. Crow is historical publications administrator and Ms. Hatley is coordinator of the black history program, both in the division of Archives and History.

"Black American in North Carolina and the South" is dedicated to John Hope Franklin and the late Frederick Douglas Alexander.

Dr. Franklin, James B. Duke Professor of History at Duke University, is described by the editors as "the preeminent dean of black history," and one of the pioneers of North Carolina black history.

The late Senator Alexander of Charlotte was instrumental in initiating legislation in the North Carolina General Assembly which established the first black history program in the divison of Archives and History as part of the continuing effort to preserve and document the history of North Carolina.

The 200-page hardbound volume is available at $19.95 a copy, directly from the University of North Carolina Press, P. O. Box 2288, Chapel Hill, N. C., 27514.



A NEW BOOK . . . "Black Americans in North Carolina and the South" is well illustrated with photographs and charts accompany each of six essays. The photograph here, of the first graduating class at Leonard Medical School, appears with the essay "The Education of Black Physicians at Shaw University, 1882-1918." The bardcover book, published by the University of North Carolina Press, is priced at $19.95.

Duck Stamps Aid Waterfowl

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

America's waterfowl hunters, about 2 million strong this fall, have spent $256 million in the last half century to provide refuges and breeding grounds through the federal duck stamp program.

Celebrating its 50th anniversary this year with a stamp depicting a pair of American wigeons on the water, the program has bought 2.5 million acres of prime waterfowl habitat.

The lands have provided homes for hundreds of species of wildlife, including ducks, fish, songbirds and marsh mammals.

Known formally as the Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp, the duck stamp helped build the National Wildlife Refuge System, a 417-unit network encompassing nearly 90 million acres of land.

The stamp's design is chosen by a panel of experts, who will decide on the design for the 1985-6 stamp next month. Some 1,500 artists have entered, with the winner expected to collect about $1 million from sales of prints made from his design.

Every adult waterfowl and migratory bird hunter must have a duck stamp on his hunting license, with his signature scrawled across it. More than 85 million of the colorful stamps have been sold since Congress authorized the program in 1934.

Using duck stamp funds, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has acquired easements on 1.19 million acres of those vital wildlife breeding lands and bought another 469,000 acres outright, at a total cost of $102.4 million.

The duck stamp program was conceived by Des Moines Register cartoonist and conservationist Jay N. "Ding" Darling, who had seen the destruction of prime waterfowl habitat in his state.

In 1929, Congress enacted the Migratory Bird Conservation Act, which authorized expansion of the National Wildlife Refuge system. But it wasn't until 1934, with the creation of the duck stamp, that a steady flow of money was created to fund the system.

The first year, about 650,000 of the stamps were sold at $1 each. That year, marshland could be bought for as little as $1 an acre.

A duck stamp now costs $7.50, and an acre of marshland costs as much as $1,000.

Southern Hospitals In Economic Crisis

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Inflation, technology and politics have teamed in recent years to weaken the economic health of Southern hospitals and the patients they seek to serve, industry officials say.

The bottom line, explains Sam Cameron of the Mississippi Hospital Association, is that patients are picking up a greater share of their own health care expenses and, because of this, they are seeking alternatives to hospitization.

For the hospitals, this means shorter hospital stays and often fewer patients — factors that cut into income and force sweeping cost-trimming.

"We are seeing hospitals that are having to shut down wings and, in some instances, decertifying beds to the state regulatory agencies," Cameron said. "It is certain that tremendous changes are going on in this industry."

However, Cameron noted that the rate of inflation for health care has dropped significantly in the last year. And he said that while medical costs are increasing, Mississippi's $275 daily average for hospital care is below the national average of $369.

Cameron and hospital administrators in different areas of the state said several factors had combined to influence the current economic problems facing hospitals, not the least of which is the movement by employers to insurance programs that shift the first dollar cost for health care to their employees.

"There was a time when I, as an insured person, didn't have to worry that much about the cost of health care because the first dollar expended was picked up by my employer through the health insurance made available," Cameron said. "But that is changing...and there's not that much first dollar coverage left."

"Now when I go to a physician or the hospital I've got to pay up front some out-of-pocket expenses," he said, " and because of this, I am going to be more interested in the type of care I receive. If I have to be admitted, then I want to know what is the quickest time I can be discharged."

Bill Ray, administrator at Methodist Hospital in Hattiesburg, said there were many other factors contributing to the continuing increase in health care costs.

"Patient demand is extremely great in America," Ray said. "We want the latest technology, private rooms and a television. But when we go to check out and we see the bill, we complainn that the hospital must think we're kin to Rockefeller."

"A while back when inflation was running 13 and 14 percent and health care was at 18 percent, nobody cared," he said. "Now inflation is running 3 and 4 percent and ours is running 7 percent and it sticks out like a sore thumb."

He said politics had played a part in forcing up health care costs because "every politician campaigns on Medicaid and Medicare, promising more and more."

Ray and other hospital officials said the problem with government-sponsored health programs were that their reimbursement provisions had failed to keep pace with costs.

"I've given an example of an individual born in 1919 who would have been age 18 in 1937 when Social Secuity came into existence," Ray said. "If that person retired Jan. 1, 1984, he would have been age 65 and, if he had paid in the maximum payments, it would be approximately $26,000.

"Now let's say this person had to have something like a total hip replacement, a knee replacement, bypass surgery or a pacemaker," he said. "That type of situation and the technology required would have taken almost all of the monies he had paid in to Social Security.

"The problem is that this would not take into account anything else Social Security is set up to handle," he said. "Social Security simply is not funded to the level of today's technology."

Cameron said that during the 1970s there was an explosion in the development of health technology, triggering the creation of expensive medical equipment and patient demand for its availability.

"Hopefully, we have now reached the point where we will not see these major increases in technology costs," he said.

Bill Sellers, administrator at Delta Medical Center in Greenville, said changes in the Medicaid program's reimbursement procedures had also had an impact on hospitals.

In the past, Sellers said, hospitals were reimbursed by Medicaid for the cost incurred by patients during their period of care. Under government cost-cutting procedures, he said, Medicaid now pays a set amount and limits hospital stay to specific health problems.

"We are seeing patients coming in who are more ill than in the past," he said. "I don't know if they are waiting longer to come in or what, but it is costing us more to take care of those patients than it did a year ago even though the length of their stay is shorter."

Sellers said that because of the economy of the Delta region, his hospital also faced a problem with "an inordinate amount of poor people seeking health care."

He said the state provided about $65 a day for the care of indigents when the average daily cost to the hospital was in the neighborhood of $300. The result, he said, was that the hospital, and ultimately its paying patients, had to absorb the additional expense.

Sellers said cost-cutting measures at his hospital had included reducing his staff through attrition, cutting back on the variety of meals offered through the hospital cafeteria and trimming back on the number of beds.

Ray said doctors were actively seeking "alternative methods of delivering high quality care to meet the needs in this changing environment."

Ray and Cameron noted that the state already had seen the establishment of so-called emergency care centers and one-day surgery centers as alternatives to hospitalization.

"I think you will see a continuation of these changes," Ray said.

Newsprint Price Hike Delayed

NEW YORK (AP) — Abitibi-Price Inc., the world's largest newsprint producer, postponed a planned 6.5 percent increase in its newsprint price from Jan. 1 until April 1, newspaper publishers reported.

Abitibi-Price sent letters to its customers disclosing the delay in the $35 increase to $570 a metric ton, the publishers said Thursday. Many newspaper companies objected strongly to the price boost when the Toronto-based company notified them early this month.

The earlier announcement had come only three months after Canadian and American newsprint producers raised the price for newsprint by 7 percent to the present level of $535 a metric ton from $500.

Abitibi-Price would not comment on the matter. A secretary who declined to give her name cited the company's policy of not discussing prices with anyone but customers.

Reed Inc., a smaller Canadian producer, had been the only other company to announce plans for a Jan. 1 price increase. Calls to Reed were referred to Nicholas Keane, vice president for sales and marketing, who was reported out of his office and unavailable for comment.

William Metzfield, president of Gannett Supply Corp., which buys newsprint for the Gannett newspaper group, said he had received a letter from Abitibi-Price announcing the postponement of the price increase.

Metzfield welcomed the delay, calling April 1 "a more reaonable date" than Jan. 1 for the increase.

"After all, they had just had a 7 percent increase in July. This would have made it 13.5 percent within six months, and that's way out of line with increases in the price of other commodities," he said.

Face Maker Often Provides Missing Link

By MOIRA BAILEY
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It takes about 40 hours for Ted Rathbun to make a face.

FACE MAKER — Debbie Jennings, a research assistant in the anthropology department at the University of South Carolina, puts the finishing touches on a facial reproduction. (AP Laserphoto)

Since 1978, Rathbun has applied his academic know-how to the world of forensic science. He works with coroners, law enforcement officials and medical examiners to establish the identity of human remains.

As an anthropologist, he builds from the bones up. There he finds clues to race, sex and age. Add a skull and Rathbun determines mouthset, the shape of a nose.

"You don't come out with a portrait. You get a resemblance," Rathbun said. "The technique is not that precise yet."

He is called in, as a paid consultant, when traditional means of identification are unavailable.

Rathbun said the most memorable case was one of his first in collaboration with local authorities.

In 1979, the decomposed remains of a black woman were discovered in the northern part of Richland County. Police investigations hadn't turned up any leads in a year.

Rathbun was called in to reconstruct the woman's face. After her "picture" appeared in the newspaper, a grocer who recognized the woman as one of his customers called authorities to say she looked familiar. The police had taken fingerprints that matched the grocer's guess.

But he is quick to point out that the reconstructions alone cannot confirm identities.

"The success or failure really depends on three things: cooperation of the media for wide exposure; an accurate analysis of the skeletal remains as to the sex, age and race; and then the scientific collection of data on the various facial features and tissue thicknesses," he said.

Another reconstruction, which has not led to positive identification, sits near the successful visage on the laboratory cabinet. The man was discovered in a creekbed near Richland Memorial Hospital last year. "We've had three or four calls," Rathbun said, but none have identified the victim.

The idea of recreating human likenesses from skulls isn't all that new, Rathbun said. The technique was developed at the turn of the century to identify fossil populations. "But there were enough unknowns that the technique wasn't all that wonderful," he said.

The practice was mostly reserved for academics until 1975, when it cropped up in connection with "some rather spectacular (criminal) cases," Rathbun said.

The success rates vary — there are so many variables — but range from 60 percent to 70 percent using the technique as a means of identification.

Rathbun handles about 10 cases a year — a number that wouldn't merit the practice as a full-time occupation. "All of us who do it would starve to death," he said.

But Debbie Jennings, a graduate assistant who takes part in piecing together the anthropological puzzles, wants to apply her skills toward a job with an agency like the FBI, or the State Law Enforcement Division.

Rathbun's first reconstruction dates back to 1967, when he reconstructed the faces dating to the Iron Age for a masters' thesis.

One of his current projects is stacked in narrow, cardboard boxes lined against the wall of the laboratory. The boxes contain the remains of a 19th century slave population, hidden until inadvertently disturbed by some developers at a construction site in Mount Pleasant.

He has a grant from the university and a National Geographic grant pending to analyze the remains and recreate the century-old likenesses.

"This will be the only chance to document what these folks looked like. They would have been lost to history," he said.

The anthropology professor is nonplussed by the images he creates, although he is surrounded by skeletons and torso-less heads.

"The only thing that ever got to me was a slide of a kid with a slit throat — but that was the fleshy part. When it's down to the bone...."

Registration Gains May Help Candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — An expert on voter registration says this year's big push to sign up new voters may wind up helping the Democrats in the North and the Republicans in the South.

But Walter Mondale will benefit from newly enrolled Democrats only if he manages to narrow his gap in the polls and the new voters thus feel their votes can make a difference, says Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

The committee is a non-partisan organization which since 1976 has been looking into the cause and cures of low and declining voter participation in U.S. elections.

No one has compiled the figures yet from what Gans calls the most elaborate and expensive campaign in history by all sides to seek out and sign up voters likely to be sympathetic to their candidates.

In his judgment, Gans said, despite the Rev. Jesse Jackson's much-publicized campaign to register blacks in the South, President Reagan may have gained even more adherents there from the registration drives.

That's because of the region's prevalence of Republican-leaning groups among the unregistered — religious fundamentals, newly moved elderly people, Cuban-Americans, military people and white and blue collar workers in non-union industries that fled the North.

"Outside the South, I think the 'non-partisan' campaigns among minorities are likely to give the Democrats a little edge, were the race to be close, but if the candidates stay 12 percent apart, it isn't going to show," Gans said in an interview.

"If the race gets close, a state like Illinois may hinge on which set of new registrants show up at the polls," Gans said.

Turnout among newly registered voters can increase a presidential candidate's vote in a state by 2 percent or 3 percent, Gans said. Often that's enough to determine who wins that state's electoral votes.

In addition, getting previously unregistered voters to the polls can have an important impact on congressional and local races.

Gans stressed that his judgments are based on observations, not on new registration figures, which are not yet available nationally.

Registration has closed for the year in all but 15 states, but totals have not been compiled yet in most states.

Gans predicted that the percentage of registered voters turning out to vote this year is likely to rise for the first time in 24 years, with the increase significantly greater if the presidential race looks close by election day.

"There are normally two things that breed high turnout," he said. "One is a sense that the stakes are important, and that's the case this year even though people have reservations about both candidates, and the other that your vote will make a difference."

Gulf Of Mexico Poses Constant Threat To The Barrier Islands Of Louisiana

GRANDE TERRE, La. (AP) — All day the sun has baked the bricks, shell walls a nd plants that have struggled through the cracks, but now an autumn storm gathers its chill blue clouds where the horizon should be, making the line at which the sea and sky meet almost indistinguishable.

Soon the rain will begin, and the wind will plow waves onto the beach and against the sagging brick walls. The battle of Fort Livingston will begin again.

No troops have ever fired a shot in anger from the walls of the fort, which was built before the Civil War, but Fort Livingston has fought a constant battle with the Gulf of Mexico, which now threatens to storm the ruins.

Like Louisiana's other barrier islands, Grande Terre is losing ground rapidly to the Gulf, and the walls of Fort Livingston have become its major defense. But the Gulf has worn away several hundred feet of beach and now laps at the base of the fort. The ruins of one brick wall jut aimlessly into the water. Whatever it was attached to has long since crumbled.

If the Gulf gets past the bricks of Fort Livingston, the erosion will increase rapidly, as the waves can eat through the sand at will. The Department of Wildlife and Fisheries' marine lab will be endangered and an island crammed with colorful history will quickly fade into the Gulf.

The island itself was once heavily farmed and apparently had a ridge of trees in the 1800s, but those have since disappeared, as has most evidence of farming, with the exception of the ruins of a sugar mill.

The western tip of Grande Terre was the base for Jean Lafitte and his buccaneers, who burned their warehouses and the village located there when they were attacked by the U.S. Navy. Some 80 of them were captured; another 400 to 500 escaped.

However, the pirates of Grande Terre were soon to earn themselves a more favorable spot in Louisiana history. Many of them are buried on nearby Grand Isle, where some of the residents proudly trace their heritage to members of Lafitte's band.

Soon after the Navy attack on Grande Terre, Lafitte and his privateers received amnesty for aiding Gen. Andrew Jackson and being instrumental in the United States' victory in the battle of New Orleans in the War of 1812.

But the British attack pointed out the need for military protection of the Louisiana coast and Livingston was one of the forts built to serve that purpose.

It was constructed of oyster and clam shells cemented together and faced with bricks from Mississippi and Florida. The shells are all that is left of some portions of the wall and researchers have found enormous oyster shells among them.

Construction of the fort went slowly, partly because of a lack of materials, and it was still incomplete when Confederate troops moved in to man it in January 1861.

Major battles in the fort's war with the Gulf came in 1893 and 1915 when hurricanes smashed into Grande Terre. The later storm did extensive damage to the fort.

Since then the beach has been eaten away to allow the Gulf's waters to wash against the base of the fort. Preservationists say they hope to convince the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to place rocks and sand around the fort to protect it.

Pair Shares Fondness For Diving

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — When Pete Pascanik was taking Navy deep sea diving training two years ago he was impressed by the mere fact Sue Hunter also was in the program.

Only a handful of women have gone through the the Navy's Diver Training Facility at Panama City.

Female participation had been minimized at the time by one requirement in particular — being able to move around while wearing 297 pounds of deep sea diving gear.

"When you see one or two females going through the school that shows that person is a high achiever," said Pascanik, 27, now a chief petty officer and safety diver at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

They were married on May 7, 1983 and have been lifting weights, diving, running, swimming and biking together ever since.

Pascanik's duty is to rescue pilot trainees who run into trouble in what is called a Helo Dunker. It simulates a helicopter crashing into the water, similar to the Dilbert Dunker made famous in the movie "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Mrs. Pascanik of Rapid City, S.D., joined the Navy in 1977. After a stint as a hospital corpsman in Jacksonville, she was a medical evacuation corpsman in Puerto Rico where she helped rescue civilian divers suffering from decompression sickness.

Since that time, however, the Navy has replaced the heavyweight diving suit with a lighter 127-pound version.

Pascanik, whose hometown is Uniontown, Pa., joined the Navy in 1975 as a machinery repairman but wanted to be a UDT — underwater demolition team — member. When he finally got to UDT school he caught pneumonia and had to drop out. His next assignment was on a submarine tender where he saw deep sea divers at work on salvage and repair jobs.

"That interested me because they were doing diving and it was constructive," he said.

In off hours both Pascaniks work toward college degrees — he in psychology and she in marine biology. They also lift weights and compete in the triathalon — biking, swimming and running. And, of course, they do recreational diving — fishing or just taking underwater pictures.

Pascanik admitted they received "a lot of negative input" when they got married about six months after finishing dive school. For one thing, Pascanik had been assigned to a unit in Italy and his bride-to-be was in Pensacola.

The Navy cooperated by transferring him to Pensacola. But there's no guarantee the Navy will be as cooperative in the future although the Pascaniks are optimistic.

"When I go home and she goes home and we start talking shop ... we can discuss it and understand it," he said.

"I don't regret it at all," Pascanik said. "I think we both made the right decision. It's nice going home at night instead of going to the ship or the barracks."

PAUL KLEE EXHIBITION

The show includes paintings, prints and drawings and is intended to represent the years Klee taught at the Bauhaus School where he began in 1920. In 1924 the school moved from Weimar to Dessau, and Klee remained with it until 1931. It was at the school that Klee summed up the basic essentials of his method in his book "Pedagogical Sketchbook."

The advent of gourmet cooking as a hobby and the smaller space available for kitchens are a few of today's lifestyle changes which have made yesterday's "dream kitchen" obsolete.

According to Ellen Cheever, a kitchen designer and consultant to kitchen cabinet and appliance manufacturers, today's more flexible lives have created a need for more flexible kitchens.

Since today's kitchen is often smaller than the kitchen of the 1950s or earlier, a priority is to make every inch of space work. In response to this need, noted the designer, who is based in Sacramento, Calif., kitchen planning has progressed so that engineering efficient small-space kitchens is less of a challenge than it used to be.

Among methods she advocates for increasing use of kitchen space are: running cabinets up to the ceiling; using corners more effectively; incorporating moveable work surfaces, such as a food preparation island on casters or pull-out shelves.

Selecting appliances that go up the wall instead of across the floor horizontally is also advisable, she said, pointing out that a one-piece stove that includes a built-in oven, four-burner cooking surface and overhead microwave is now available. This type of stove fits into 30 inches of space while a separate cooktop and wall ovens require 63 inches.

One flaw found in many kitchens built before the days of microwave ovens is that there is rarely a convenient space for it. She has found that microwaves are desirable because they offer time-savings.

"The need to reheat food when different family members eat at different times or the 'I-forgot-to-defrost-something-for-dinner' syndrome make microwaves almost mandatory," she said.

Kitchens in which the ovens can be built in are likely to be more efficient. Some possible locations include wall cabinets, underneath the countertop or on a wall near a built-in oven. If installing the microwave oven in a wall cabinet, locate the unit low enough so the person using it can look into the oven and down on the food being cooked, she said. A spot underneath the countertop is particularly useful if children will be using the microwave.

Not every family lives in a home with a very small kitchen. For some, the kitchen is a large room that serves as the center of the house. Even in large rooms, however, today's different style of living calls for different priorities in kitchen design.

Three important considerations in creating a comfortable open kitchen where many activities take place include: odor removal, noise control and flexible lighting. Yet, despite their importance, these requirements are often overlooked.

Noise control is enhanced if well-insulated appliances are selected. She noted that there is a substantial difference in the amount of noise operating appliances produce. Consumers should ask about insulation when they purchase appliances such as dishwashers and food waste disposers and, if possible, should try to observe the model which they are considering in operation.

A versatile lighting system is particularly important when the kitchen is the locale for dining, entertaining and other sociable activities. She said that needs included both general and decorative or accent lighting, as well as task lighting at countertops.

She advocated at least two sets of switches — one for task lighting and another for decorative and overhead lighting. Ideally general lighting should be controlled with a rheostat or dimmer so the level of light can be varied to meet different circumstances.

Tamale Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paramount Foods of Louisville, Ky., is voluntarily recalling 10,000 jars of beef tamales because of possible spoilage, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The company said about 42,000 of the 13.5-ounce jars were produced. Of those, about 10,000 jars are at retail outlets or have already been sold. The remaining jars were withheld by the company, officials said.

The product was said to have been marketed in southern Indiana, Kentucky, central Michigan, southern Ohio, central Tennessee and the St. Louis area.

When you discover your roof leaks or otherwise needs attention, how do you go about deciding who will fix it? Do you just hire a roofer whose name you have seen in an advertisement or a telephone book?

It's important to make the right selection. Roofing problems can be compounded when untrained or inexperienced contractors are called in to correct or repair the trouble. When you find someone who seems a likely choise, make sure he has a permanent business address, telephone number, tax identification number and, where required, a business license. You can't tell these things by looking at him. You have to ask questions and see proof. Talk to friends and neighbors who have had roofing work done recently about their experiences. Anybody who is dissatisfied will talk freely about what happened.

Be sure the contractor's guarantee for any roofing work covers both workmanship and materials. It is not enough for you to get a manufacturer's warranty. The National Roofing Contractors Association says such a warranty is not complete protection because it can be voided if the roof is improperly installed.

One of the things a roofer must decide is the number of roofs already on the house. Local building codes dictate the maximum number of layers allowed, but multiple roofs, especially more than three, but sometimes more than two, can put stress on the roof supports. This can lead to several problems, including water damage and warped or curled shingles.

Have the insulation below the roof checked at the time the roof is being inspected. Although not every roofing contractor provides this service, it's important to be sure the roof is energy-efficient. A good rule of thumb for attic insulation blown under the roof is that it should provide an "R" value of 19. Insulation effectiveness is rated by resistance or R value.

Low price is not the only factor that should be considered when making a roofing decision. The workmanship quality and the roofing contractor's reputation play far more important roles.

Roofing materials vary from locale to locale depending on climates and local building codes and regulations. While 80 percent of all American homes are constructed with asphalt shingles, alternatives such as wood shingles, shakes, slate, tile and even aluminum and fiber glss are available. A professional roofing contractor should be familiar with local fire codes, wind resistance requirements and Underwriter's Laboratories ratings.

Discuss shingle colors with the contractor so the color you choose is compatible with the color of the home and with those in the surrounding area. Keep in mind that lighter roof tones will help a small house look larger. White shingles have the added benefit of reflecting sunlight, which helps reduce the amounts of heat the roof absorbs during the summer.

To help homeowners locate qualified, professional roofing contractors in their communities, the National Roofing Contractors Association has established a toll-free hotline: 1-800-USA-ROOF.

(Andy Lang's booklet, "Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. The booklet includes an asphalt shingle color guide.)

Breezeway Links Garage, Family Room

By Jerry Bishop

Open planning predominates in the Wrencote, a two story traditional where family room and kitchen form an airy space that extends outward via the breezeway. Four bedrooms and two full baths are outlined, as well as a roomy living/dining area and expansive concrete terrace.

Shutters and small-paned windows add to the traditional warmth of the exterior, while the interior floor plan puts an up-to-date emphasis on space and zoning.

Entry is into a gracious foyer, where stairs ahead lead to the upper level. At right is the impressive living and dining room. Extending the entire width of the home, this area allots ample space for entertaining and features sliding glass doors to the terrace.

For family activities, the sizable island kitchen and family room are merged, with laundry niche, pantry, and storage closet shown. Sliding glass doors lead to the terrace, and another door opens to the breezeway.

Garden Clinic

Q. Why is fall a good time for planting? (W.O., Cabarrus County)

A. Fall is a good time to plant trees, shrubs, groundcovers, cool season grasses and spring-flowering bulbs. Generally the ground is drier than in the spring and therefore easier to work. Beds can be prepared without compacting surrounding areas. Soil temperature in the fall is favorable for root growth, enabling plants to establish themselves. Moderate air temperatures reduce water stress on the plants. Summer shoot growth has slowed dramatically or stopped completely so there is little succulent tissue which can be damaged by low temperatures. Leaves will remain active in photosynthesis for some of this period, but the demand for carbohydrates for growth is less. This creates a surplus of food supplies available for producing new root growth. Also, there is a good selection of plants at garden centers and nurseries in the fall, which is another good reason to plant at this time of year.

Q. I want to plant some hybrid cabbage. Would it be better to plant it as a spring or as a fall crop? (S.U., Henderson)

A. Almost all heads of hybrid cabbage mature at one time. This is a problem especially in the spring when the heads split if they are not cut soon enough. This is not as serious a problem in the fall because growth is slower at the point of harvest and consequently less rupturing occurs. Check the seed packets to know if the variety you intend to plant is a hybrid.

Q. What can I use pumpkins for besides jack-o-lanterns and pies? (R.S., Angier)

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

The Four of Clubs was not used to being the focus of attention. The last time he had won a trick was with a ruff, but since it was only for an overtrick at three clubs, no one had bothered to talk to him. Yet here he was at the National Championships being besieged by the bridge press.

The declarer had reached a heart slam in quick time. His jump to five hearts was an all-purpose slam try (had he wanted to know about the ace-king of trumps, he would have opened five hearts), and North felt he had enough to accept with three trumps, a ruffing value and a fair club suit.

"It was nothing, gentlemen," said the Four of Clubs — a trifle testily, he was later heard to admit. "I did not even win a trick. As a matter of fact, were it not for the unfortunate duplication in spades you wouldn't be here with me now.

"Obviously, at six hearts declarer has a diamond and a club loser to handle. Equally obvious, the only place to dispose of the diamond loser is on dummy's clubs. There's just one leeetle problem — there's no entry to the table.

"Nevertheless, declarer succeeded in making his contract, and with the help of a club finesse! And I must admit that I had a small part to play in the proceedings.

"Declarer won the opening lead and drew three rounds of trumps. Optimists would now lead ace and another club. East would hold up the king of clubs one round and declarer would end up losing a trick in each minor suit.

"My declarer put me to use brilliantly. After drawing trumps, he led me to the queen in dummy! Of course, East couldn't win the king, because then declarer would be able to discard his diamond loser on a long club. But when East held up the king, he was sacrificing his side's club trick. Declarer continued by leading the jack of clubs from dummy and running it.

"He had achieved the impossible — a finesse with no entry! He made his slam with the loss of only a diamond trick."

Volunteers Still Hope For Miracle

OCEAN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Once every hour from morning to evening, two volunteers walk into a bright bedroom of the Fagan home where a diapered 3-year-old boy lies on a bed, a mobile twirling over his head.

The volunteers slip into hospital gowns and begin putting little Terrance Fagan through a 45-minute routine. They force him to breathe into a plastic bag, put tabasco sauce on his tongue, move his arms and legs and clap wooden blocks beside his ears.

Terrance was found underwater in his grandmother's swimming pool in July 1983. Authorities estimated he had been under water 10 minutes.

The toddler has been comatose ever since. His family, along with scores of volunteers, are trying to revive him.

"I believe he's going to get well," says the boy's mother, Janice. "No matter what we have to do, it's worth it."

Janice and Dennis Fagan, an electronics engineer, now have the services of about 100 volunteers to put Terrance through the routine designed by the International Coma Recovery Institute in Garden City, N.Y.

Twelve times a day, on the hour, two volunteers arrive at the two-story home located on a half acre in a middle-class neighborhood. If Terrance gags, grimaces, cries out or curls his lips in a smile during the routine, their day has been a success.

The program is based on the principle that the brain cells that survive an accident such as a near-drowning can be trained to take over for damaged cells. Pam Stefano, executive secretary of the institute founded by Dr. Mihai D. Dimancescu, says the therapy has prompted full recovery in about 35 percent of the institute's more than 200 patients in the past seven years.

Mrs. Fagan says the progress Terrance has made after six weeks of therapy would not have been possible without the volunteers.

Infant Deaths Target Of Outreach Effort

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — After scaring off an intruder at his church, the Rev. L. Perry McNeal bounded up a flight of stairs to confront another threat that refuses to disappear as quickly.

For years, southwest Georgia has been plagued with an infant death rate that is nearly twice the national average. The death rate for black babies is three times higher than that for whites.

From his second-floor church office, the black minister directs a health outreach program aimed at reducing teen pregnancies and infant mortality. He believes the combined resources of parents, health and school officials and ministers are needed to combat the problem.

"You're having babies who are having babies," McNeal, 43, explained as he rushed into his office for an interview after confronting a suspicious person in the church, who fled.

Continuum, an Atlanta-based advocacy group on maternal and child health issues, estimates one of every 27 black teen-age girls becomes pregnant in Georgia — twice the rate for the state's white teen-agers.

About 13 percent of the black babies weigh less than 5 pounds, making them a higher risk for brain damage, learning disabilities, cerebral palsy and death, the group says.

In 1981, the last year for which complete national statistics are available, Georgia was fifth in the nation with 13.8 infant deaths for every 1,000 births. The District of Columbia was highest with 25.1.

According to officials, baby deaths tend to occur more often in areas like Georgia with large black populations. Nationwide the infant mortality rate was 11.9 in 1981, but it was 20.0 for blacks, compared to 10.5 for whites.

Health officials blame southwest Georgia's high infant death rate on teen pregnancies, repeated pregnancies and the failure of low-income women to take advantage of programs that would provide free medical care and adequate nutrition.

From 1978 to 1982, southwest Georgia had the state's highest infant mortality rate of 19.3 — 27.2 for blacks and 11.3 for whites, according to state officials.

"If we could get people to delay their first pregnancy until their bodies are biologically mature and they are ready to assume responsibility for care of the infant, I think we'd have a better outcome," said Charlotte Bedell, administrator of a federally funded nutrition program for needy infants, children and pregnant or nursing women in 14 southwest Georgia counties.

"We've had pregnancies as early as 11," she said, adding that women also should space out their pregnancies to give their bodies time to recover.

As pastor of the Greater Cutliff Grove Baptist Church, McNeal received a $40,255 state grant last year to inform minorities and low-income people of the health services available to them. But he said much of the work focuses on changing attitudes in the black community.

"Grandparents will say 'I didn't go to the health department and I had 10 of y'all,' " he noted. "We've got to unteach that. We've got to dispel the myths that have been circulating in the black community for years."

Staff and volunteers in his "Greater Cutliff Grove Health Outreach to Consumers (FHC) Faith, Hope and Charity" go door-to-door telling people about free health services. They hold "How to Say No" workshops to teach teen-agers how to postpone sexual involvement. They also work with young unmarried mothers, encouraging them to avoid additional pregnancies.

"One of the problems we've noticed with teen-age pregnancies is they have a baby this year and they have another a year later," said the Rev. W.C. Whitfield, coordinator of the program, who has challenged the black community to provide better "role models" for teen-agers.

"The only thing they see is to have a baby because the girl down the street had a baby," he said.

Whitfield hopes to reach up to 45 percent of the black teen-agers between 12 and 17 in the seven-county area served by the program. McNeal, who declined a salary for directing the program, said he believes the community has the resources to cut teen pregnancies and infant mortality, "but folks are going to have to become involved."

"Most boards of education are afraid to touch this issue," he said. "The home, the church, the school, each is going to have to accept its responsibility."

State-financed health clinics and other medical services are available to low-income women. But McNeal said people in rural areas often are unable to avail themselves of the services because they lack transportation.

Several funeral homes have offered the use of their vehicles to take pregnant women and others to medical facilities, and McNeal is encouraging churches to make their vans available.

"A lot of the elderly. A lot of the pregnant teen-agers just don't have transportation to the health department," McNeal noted. "Some of these people live out in the middle of nowhere. A lot of them don't even know where the health department is."

Despite the obstacles, McNeal predicted the outreach program, which contacts about 1,500 people a month, will have an impact on reducing black infant deaths.

"I can see a greater sense of awareness. There's a more positive attitude. People who didn't seem to care about themselves healthwise changed after they came into contact with people who cared," he said.

Sixth Award For Reynolds Building

WINSTON-SALEM — The art deco lobby of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. headquarters building in downtown Winston-Salem has won its fourth American Institute to Architects (AIA) award for design excellence.

The award was presented by AIA's South Atlantic Regional Council to architects Hammill-Walter of Winston-Salem and associate architect Croxton Collaborative of New York City for their restoration and renovation of the Reynolds Building.

The restoration project captured the AIA's 1984 Honor Award, the profession's highest award for excellence, in May; and the North Carolina and New York design awards in 1983. The regional award is the sixth honor the project has received since it was completed in 1982.

Second Lecture Tuesday

"Melodrama and the Media" is the title of the second lecture in a four-part symposium entitled "Literature and the American Public," to be presented by Dr. William Stephenson at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 23 in the auditorium of East Branch Library, 2000 Cedar Lane. # Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE NELMS

Two historical works recently added to the new book shelves of Sheppard Memorial Library will spark the interest of patrons interested in the American past.

• "First on the Land: The North Carolina Indians" tells the story of the original North Carolinians. Written by Ruth Y. Wetmore, curator of the Indian Museum of the Carolinas at Laurinburg, this book begins with the nomadic bands of 10,000 B.C. and ends with the present-day tourist business of the Cherokees.

Maps pinpoint the location of smaller tribes and brief histories tell the fate of disbursed or extinct tribes. The ceremonial life of the Indians is described, their preparation for war and peace, as well as the beliefs on which their culture rested.

Numerous photographs add to the work, which will interest readers of junior high age and up.

• Lewis Perry's "Intellectual Life in America" takes a new look at the role played by leading thinkers in American life. It is a study which shows who the leading intellectuals were in each period of the country's history, how they saw themselves, and how important they were to the rest of the public.

Perry, a professor of history at Indiana University, also considers the openness of intellectural circles to women, blacks, artisans, southerners, and other groups. In addition to surveying the results of recent scholarship, the author has contributed insights from his own original research.

Many readers will find Perry's book highly provocative, especially in the concluding pages that treat the disintergration and disullusionment in the recent period of our intellectual life. A book dealing with a weighty topic, "Intellectual Life in America" is written in a style that is readily accessible to the average reader.

GMA Offers Programs

The Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, can now offer special interest groups various activities. The three main divisions of offerings are:

• Arts and crafts workshops conducted by qualified instructors and designed to meet the needs and interests of any particular group. Workshops can be held at the museum or at the location of the group.

• Special gallery tours of the museum's collection and temporary exhibitions. Tours may be scheduled for groups of six or more, to be arranged at least two weeks in advance.

CAROLINA TODAY CELEBRANTS . . . Four old-timers and a newcomer will all be joining in the 25th anniversary celebration of Carolina Today on Friday, Oct. 26. The newcomer is Cindy Pleasants, currently co-host of the show. The long-time members of the show, left to right are: Walter Hearne, the show's producder; Slim Short, founder and 25-year host; John Spence, farm news director; and Jim Woods, newscaster, weatherman and sometimes show panel member. # Carolina Today Is 25 Years Old

Greenville's weekly morning show "Carolina Today," aired over WNCT-TV, Channel 9, will celebrate its 25th anniversary on the air on Friday, Oct. 26. Since 1959, "Carolina Today" has consistently been the number one rated morning program in the area market.

Slim Short, "Carolina Today's" co-host for twenty-five years, has contributed to the show's success with his easy going, folksy style of interviewing guests, whether the guest be VIP, farmer, politician, fisherman, or ladies fashion designer.

The format of "Carolina Today" has changed over the years. Years ago, Slim Short would pull a rooster named Cicero out of a mailbox and carry on conversations with the feathered guest who would crow on cue.

Today, Slim says his co-hosts, such as the current co-host and co-producer, Cindy Pleasants, "is much prettier than Cicero." Today, the two interveiw persons from all areas of North Carolina and behond, encompassing celebrities, athletes, home economists, medical personnel, and those engaged in writing, music, dance and art.

Another regular on the show is Jim Woods, present every morning, letting viewers know what happened overnight in the news world, and telling his listeners about the expected weather for the coming day and night. Farm director John Spence is also a long-time regular. Early in the show he gives farmers an update report on the farm scene.

Through the years, "Carolina Today" has featured a number of well-known personalities — Andy Griffith, first ladies Pat Nixon and Nancy Reagan, Lee Trevino, Art Linkletter, Zbeignieu Brezinski, along with a number of CBS television star.

Every governor of the state since the show started has been interviewed, and the station is the only TV show which has been given a guided tour of the Governor's Mansion — by first lady Mrs. James Hunt.

To gather material for "Carolina Today," members of the show have taken trips to Puerto Rico, Spain, Washington, D.C., and Cape Kennedy, as well as to areas nearer home.

The motto for "Carolina Today," according to old-timer Slim Short, is "a down-to-earth progam for down-to-earth people." Much of the show's continuing popularity, Short notes, comes from the fact that viewers "never know when they might see their best friend or neighbor on the program."

Negro Ensemble to Present 'A Soldier's Play' Friday

ECU News Bureau

The Negro Ensemble Company, the nation's foremost black theater company, will present it's production, "A Soldier's Play," at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Oct. 26 in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University.

The performance is sponsored by the Theater Arts Series as part of the attractions being given this season.

Tickets are available at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, on campus, from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. each weekday or may be purchased at the door.

"A Soldier's Play" won for playwright Charles Fuller the Pulitzer Prize for drama and the New York Critics Circle Award

The play is set at Fort Neal, La., in 1944 and is based on the solving of a mystery — who murdered T/Sgt. Vernon Waters, black career Army man?

Playing to capacity houses in New York for 14 months before the current national tour began, "A Soldier's Play" was selected as one of three American productions to appear in Los Angeles in conjunction with the 1984 summer Olypics International Arts Festival. The play was also chosen for the prestigious Edinburgh International Festival in Scotland.

The group presenting the play at ECU, The Negro Ensemble Company, has introduced numerous new American plays during the past 15 years. These have included "The River Niger," "The First Breeze of Summer," and "Home," by Sammm-Art Williams, a North Carolina born playwright.

'Anything Goes' Opens ECU Playhouse Season Wednesday

"Anything Goes," one of the top musical comedies of the 1930s, with songs by Cole Porter, will open the theatrical season at the East Carolina Playhouse on Wednesday, Oct. 24, with additional performances to be presented Oct. 25-29.

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. nightly in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus.

Blending performing talents from the ECU Theater Arts Department with the talents of a School of Music orchestra, this productin will revive a show that has the distinction of running up one of the greatest success records of any Broadway musical of the 1930s.

It is a milestone in theatrical history for several reasons. First, it established Cole Porter as America's number one writer of songs of fashion and sophistication. Next, "Anything Goes" made a star of Ethel Merman because of her performance in the role of Reno Sweeney; and finally, it introduced a number of top popular hit songs — "You're The Top," "I Get A Kick Out Of You," and "It's Delovely."

The original production opened in New York in 1934. It was a big hit, and played for 420 performances. Merman then recreated her role in the 1936 movie with Bing Crosby. It was televised in 1954, made into other movies in 1956 and in 1962, and revived off-Broadway.

After "Anything Goes," Porter went on to write a string of musical comedies that were successful, among them "Kiss Me Kate," "Can Can" and "Silk Stockings."

"Anything Goes" is the story of a young American stockbroker who sails aboard a trans-Atlantic liner on an impulse to keep the girl he loves from marrying a stuffy Englishman. His impulse forces him to "borrow" a passport, which leads from one complication to another. Also on the passenger list is a Miss Reno Sweeney, a night-club queen with a bevy of Times Square sirens bound for London and late hours.

"This show is a national treasure. It's so fresh even now," commented Edgar Loessin, who is directing the production. "The music never fails to delight not only those of us who know it all by heart, but also the younger generation who are 'discovering' it for the first time. It's truly a family show."

Keith Lewis has designed the lavish costumes, which number close to 120. Robert Alpers designed the scenery, which includes the red, white and blue upper deck of the U.S.S. American, a large structure which opens up to reveal the interior of the ship in subsequent scenes.

Reserved tickets for this show and purchase of season tickets for the entire Playhouse season are currently on sale at McGinnis Theater Box Office at the corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

TWO IN ANYTHING . . . Jancie Schreiber and Paris Peet are two of the performers in Cole Porter's song and tap dance musical, "Anything Goes," which opens Oct. 24 in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus. Performances will be at 8:15 nightly through Monday, Oct. 29. Tickets are on sale at McGinnis Box Office. (Photo by Doug Ray)

Sophia Loren In "My Three Loves"

By Alan W. Petrucelli

Gaze at Sophia Loren, and you'll find an imperfect face. Her nose is too big. Her lips are overripe. Her cheeks are too broad. Her eyes are set together too closely.

Then take a second, longer, lingering look. Suddenly, her nose is distinguised. Her lips are pouty and sensual. Her cheeks frame an exotic face. Her eyes, warm and inviting, exude sexuality. Sophia Loren, at 50, is beautiful.

Viewers will have a chance to catch the ravishing Miss Loren in a rare television appearance when she stars with "Hill Street Blues" actor Daniel J. Travanti in "Aurora," airing Monday, Oct. 22 on NBC. In the film, Miss Loren portrays Aurora, a woman trying to trick her ex-lovers into paying for an operation for Ciro, her blind son. Ciro is played by the actress's real-life son, Edoardo, 11. "My Three Loves" is his show business debut.

"This film is like movies that used to be on the screen many years ago," says Miss Loren, whose new book, "Women & Beauty" has just been published. "It does not have hate, aggression and violence in it. The film speaks of love between a mother and her son. It's as simple as that."

But Miss Loren's career has not been simple. She made her topless film debut — she was billed as Sofia Lazarro — in the silly Italian extravaganza, "Era Lui, Si, Si." The film was a bust — as were most of Miss Loren's early works. She was introduced to American audiences in 1954's "The Gold of Naples," but her reputation as a talented actress wasn't cemented until her performance in 1961's "Two Women." In the film, Miss Loren plays an Italian mother who, along with her daughter, is raped by Allied Moroccan soliders during World War II. It is a spell binding performance, and for her work, Miss Loren won an Oscar for Best Actress.

"In the beginning of my career, I was just another beautiful woman trying to make it in the movies," the actress recalls in hesitant English. "I was just a beautiful doll to those people making movies. When 'Two Women' came along, I proved I was an actress with soul. That film," she adds, "was the turning point in my life."

Sophia Loren plays a woman who tries to swindle her ex-lovers into paying for an operation for her blind son, Ciro, in "My Three Loves," airing Monday, Oct. 22 on NBC. Miss Loren's real-life son, Edoardo, plays Ciro.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Please give me some information on Lorenzo Lamas. How old is he? Is he married? Does he have any hobbies? — JENNIE BALDWIN

To Jennie: Lamas, the resident hunk on "Falcon Crest," is 26 years old. He was born in Los Angeles to actress Arlene Dahl and Fernando Lamas. At age 22, he married Victoria Hilbert, 12 years his senior. The marriage failed, but Lamas has gone to bat once again with Michele Smith, a young woman he met through the publicity firm that handles "Falcon Crest." They have a son, Alvaro (Fernando's middle name) Joshua. Lamas recently walked out of the family abode, and was considering a legal separation, but he's now back home trying to patch things up. In a departure from his role as Lance Cumson, Lorenzo has been breakdancing up a storm in his new feature film "Body Rock." Lamas is a student of the martial arts.

DEAR MICHELE: Whatever happened to Flo from the TV series "Alice"? — KIM GODSHALL

To Kim: Polly Holliday, a 47-year-old Alabama native, dropped the apron strings when her spinoff series "Flo," was canceled after one short season in 1981. Rumor has it that Dustin Hoffman used Flo as one of the role models for his characterization of Dorothy Michaels in "Tootsie." Miss Holliday recently appeared as the mean Mrs. Deagle in "Gremlins," produced by Steven Spielberg.

DEAR MICHELE: I am having a dispute with my roommate that I hope you can settle. I say Suzanne Sommer and Elke Sommers are half sisters. If this is true, could you tell me who their parents are, and where they were born? — ROBERT ELLIOTT

To Robert: They are both blond, buxom actresses, but that's about all they have in common. Elke Somer, a minister's daughter, was born Elke Schletz in Berlin in 1940. Suzanne Somers hails from San Bruno, Calif. Born Suzanne Mahoney in 1946, she is the daughter of Marion and "Ducky" Mahoney.

DEAR MICHELE: Can you tell me if another actress played the role of Nancy on the TV series "Family" before Meredith Baxter-Birney? — DONNA HORNING

Lifetime Sets Strategy To Restore Its Health

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Starting in January, Lifetime — the struggling basic cable service now geared to women's, health and lifestyle programming — will undergo a face lift in an attempt to reach a broader audience.

The service, which was created as a result of a merger between ABC-Hearst's Daytime and the Cable Health Network, has drawn poor ratings since it debuted in February 1984. The service — which had been rumored to be on the verge of folding — reaches 20 million subscribers, but has not yet turned a profit. Its average prime-time ratings has been 0.6 (based on percentage of TV households).

The new strategy — buttressed by a $25 million cash infusion by Lifetime's parent companies, ABC, Hearst and Viacom — consists of targeting more male viewers by adding shows with more "entertainment value" featuring "glitzy names" as well as extensive use of phone-in programs.

Lifetime's two most successful shows, "Regis Philbin's Health Styles" and "Good Sex with Dr. Ruth Westheimer" are prototypes of the new "Lifetime," according to Mary Alice Dwyer-Dobbin, vice president, programming. She says among the other planned shows are one that would apply the "Entertainment Tonight" approach to personal finance, and a lifestyle-information show detailing "who's hot and who's not."

The new "dual appeal" programming will air weeknights from about 4 p.m. to midnight.

TV Chatter

Edoardo Loren, 11, Sophia Loren's youngest son, makes his acting debut Oct. 21 on the NBC Sunday Night Movie "Aurora by Night." The film stars Miss Loren and Daniel J. Travanti. "It's a very simple story about a mother and her blind son," says Miss Loren. "They have a special relationship in which she will do anything in her power to help him see. It's a page of life, and it's rare to find an exceptional story like this on the screen today."

"Hollywood Wives," the five-hour ABC drama based on Jackie Collins' scorching best-seller, has finally been cast and is currently in production. The miniseries will star Angie Dickinson, Candice Bergen, Steve Forrest, Stefanie Powers, Anthony Hopkins, Joanna Cassidy, Andrew Stevens, Catherine Mary Stewart, Suzanne Somers, Rod Steiger, Robert Stack, Mary Crosby and Roddy McDowall. Quite a crew!

Miss Collins received $650,000 for film rights to her novel, which she says is based on facts. She is currently researching a sequel to be titled "Hollywood Husbands."

The popular "Battle of the Network Stars" is normally associated with the athletic prowess of network personalities. Another type of 'battle,' however, is currently being waged behind the scenes of television's popular prime-time soaps. All of the women starring on "Dynasty," "Paper Dolls," "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest" are in fierce competition with one another. Each is determined to be the season's most bejeweled and elegantly gowned.

The battle is not a trivial pursuit. Producers are spending between $50,000 to $100,000 per week to keep their ladies fashionable. ABC has announced it is initiating a series of fashion videos showcasing the trend-setting look of their new serial "Paper Dolls."

Don't be misled — there are certain female stars who will drop their fashionable attire if the price is right. Playboy will soon feature photos of "Dynasty" star Joan Collins.

"Kilgour," an upcoming NBC film based on the life story of former UCLA volleyball star Kirk Kilgour, who was paralyzed in an accident, will star Mark Harmon (Dr. Caldwell on "St. Elsewhere") in the title role. Tom Selleck, who was a real-life friend of Kilgour, will co-star.

Haid Not Blue About 'Hill Street' Role

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — The cowboy cop he plays in "Hill Street Blues" has given Charles Haid a higher public profile than any other role in his career, but he says he still doesn't think of himself as a TV star.

"Henry Winkler's a TV star — so is Robin Williams or Larry Hagman," said Haid. "But that isn't what I want to do. I want to act."

Haid has been playing Officer Andy Renko since the critically acclaimed police drama made its debut in 1981. The blowhard bigot who Haid plays on "Hill Street" has erased almost all memory of the more sympathetic characters he created in two previous series, "Kate McShane" and "Delvecchio."

"A racist cop who loves and respects his black partner and doesn't even recognize his own inconsistency is a challenge to play," says Haid. "Renko can be pretty obnoxious at times, but he's real, and that's why right now I have no interest in playing the lead in my own series.

"A TV star has a heavy load to carry," says Haid. "TV, generally, is about well-coiffed and handsome men who walk out with pretty ladies, but our show doesn't have a lot of that. People don't scream and chase me for autographs when I walk down the street.

Finest Skaters Set For 'Skate Canada'

By Mark Nolan

The popular "Skate Canada" competition returns to CTV this week, with the first telecast slated for Friday, Oct. 26, at 7:30 p.m. (ET). The annual skating spectacular is being held this year in Victoria, British Columbia.

"Skate Canada" features the finest skaters from 15 different nations. CTV's Johnny Esaw and Brian Pockar will be on hand to describe the beauty and drama of this year's contest.

The compulsory ice dances and pairs short programs are scheduled for Friday night, and on Saturday, CTV's coverage will feature the men's short programs and ice dance original set patterns. CTV's air time for Saturday's "Skate Canada" is from 4:30-6 p.m.

Apart from "Skate Canada," CTV Sports will offer two CFL contests this week. On Sunday, Oct. 21, the Toronto Argonauts travel to Montreal to take on the Concordes. The game, which will be blacked out in the Montreal area, is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. (ET).

CTV's second scheduled CFL game this week pits the Blue Bombers of Winnipeg against the British Columbia Lions from B.C. Place in Vancouver, the final regular-season game for each squad.

If both teams continue to win their games before Saturday night's contest on CTV, then this game would not only be considered the most crucial for both these teams, but perhaps the most important regular-season game of the '84 CFL season.

High-Flying Bird Will Lead Celts To NBA Top

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

Beat the Bird. That has become the rallying cry for any team hoping to dethrone the defending National Basketball Association champion, the Boston Celtics, during the 1984-85 season. Beat the Bird. Larry Bird.

The Celtics remain the NBA's power team. They have the talent (Kevin McHale, Robert Parrish, Bird) and class (Red Auerbach) to beat back the challenge of anyone, despite the fact that they play in the Eastern Division, the NBA's strongest.

The Philadelphia 76ers are an aging team. Julius Erving is a year older and Moses Malone is not as aggressive as his salary indicates he should be. The Los Angeles Lakers will again pounce on any team in the West, but then, as always, they must face the Celtics in the finals. As always, they will lose.

The 1984-85 season should bring on a batch of younger, stronger teams, which should come as no surprise to those following the NBA's life cycle. Each season a few teams exceed expectations. Last year, it was the Detroit Pistons and the New York Knicks. This year it should again be the Pistons and Knicks, to be joined by the vastly improved New Jersey Nets.

The Pistons are the NBA's street fighters. Isiah Thomas and Kelly Tripucka are the gang leaders, stomping opponents up and down the court.

That the Knicks are as good as they are is a credit to two people — coach Hubie Brown and all-world forward Bernard King. They have an erratic backcourt, a weak front line, a temperamental center and a rotating bench. But, they win. They have taken Brown's system (the best in the league), adapted it to fit King's style and managed to win games they had no business winning. This year they shouldpull more of the same and may make it to the finals.

The NBA Western Division is always given short shrift by fans and media: The West does not play defense; the West does not like to rebound; the West thinks it is uncool to block shots. That's why it's a common occurrence for a Western game to have a final score of 145-137. It's also why, except in very off years, the West always loses in the NBA finals.

And come next spring, the Celtics will still hold the winning hand. The coaching may not be the best, their bench not as strong as other teams, their backcourt unguarded at times, but none of that matters. The Celtics have memorized the words to the definition of winning. They always do and always have. This year should prove to be no exception.

Another island

Scenes airing this week on NBC's daytime drama "Another World" were taped on Majorca, one of the most romantic island locales in southern Europe. The varied topography of the island serves as a backdrop for romance and danger as well as the resurfacing of Cecile, portrayed by Nancy Frangione.

Stars get 'Break'

Comedian Milton Berle and singer Ray Parker Jr. will guest star in upcoming episodes of NBC's "Gimme a Break." Berle will play an elderly eccentric in the episode "Grandpa's Secret Life." Parker, best known for his hit "Ghostbusters," will sing with Nell Carter when he portrays himself in an episode titled "Who Dunnit?"

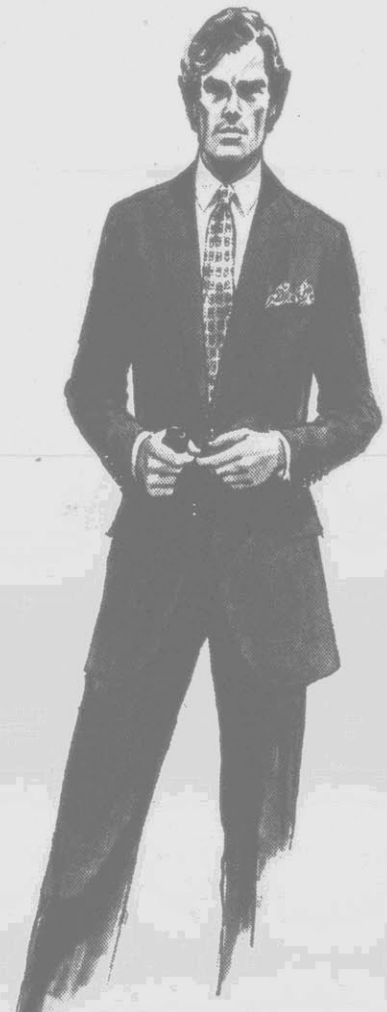
"Quality isn't something that can be promised into an article. It must be put there. If it isn't put there, the finest sales talk in the world won't act as a substitute."



At Coffman's, Quality Menswear is our game. Our strength in making a presentation to you is our market and merchandising know-how. We just don't continue to sell an item if the quality isn't there...and our experience tells us that the search for quality is never-ending. Over the years we have seen many "old friends" loose their quality definition, either because of a change in ownership, or just a drop off of personal input by management. Because of this, you often see changes in our merchandising of specific brand names. We just won't continue to buy an item where quality has become a secondary thing. Our pledge to you, our customers, is a continuing effort on your behalf to offer you the finest in quality and fashion that is available in the menswear market.

HEADLINERS

WELLES: NORTHWEST PASSAGES.

Orson Welles, who two years ago was dropped as the spokesman for Paul Masson Vineyards in favor of Sir John Gielgud, whines no more. After all, he was just tapped to tout the state of Oregon in a series of radio spots. No stranger to the airwaves, Welles, 69, raised cain with his terrifying 1938 presentation The War of the Worlds before his landmark film Citizen Kane. Orson's fee for the one-day taping session: $3,100. Hardly anything to grape, uh, gripe about.

□

Mark Harmon, the handsome plastic surgeon on NBC's St. Elsewhere, has never found it a wrench to separate his career from what is commonly known as real life. "I was a carpenter before I was an actor," explains Harmon, who spent the two years 'twixt St. Elsewhere and his previous series, Flamingo Road, acting by night in L.A. shows and working by day as a roofer. "I still do it whenever I can, it helps me to keep things in perspective." As befits the scion of a Hollywood family (father Tom was a football star and commentator, sister Kelly was once married to John DeLorean, and sister Kris was hitched to Ricky Nelson), Harmon looks to the late Gary Cooper for inspiration. He has memorialized the taciturn star of High Noon with the license plate of his 1956 pickup truck, "YUP," and the plate of his Porsche, which reads, "UH HUH." Says Harmon, "Cooper could do more with those two words than most people could do with a whole dictionary." Uh huh.

□

In the 10 years since Steve Martin strode into the spotlight with his prematurely gray hair, his ice-cream white suits, and the arrow through his ears, he's been a lot of different guys: rambling, wild and crazy, and lonely. Oh yes, he's also been a jerky guy and a guy with two brains. In his latest film, All of Me, Martin is a mixed-up guy; co-star Lily Tomlin's soul takes up uneasy residence in funnyman Martin's body. "A lot of the roles I've been doing have been kind of leading up to this," observes Martin. "For a long time people have said, 'Hey, why don't you play somebody straight?' All of Me blends the straight and the absurd." Martin is willing to give the people some of what they want, but not if what they want is stand-up comedy. "I was starting to get physically ill with all the touring," he explains. "And very cranky. The pressure out there was to be funny, and people were laughing at every thing you said, even when you were checking out of the hotel." The fear that people won't think his pictures are funny keeps Martin from getting too big for his white trousers. He worries, "I always figure I'll walk into a room and people will be whispering about how bad my last movie was."

□

The second generation takes the ball and runs with it: Tyrone Power III, 25, son of the actor described by the late David Niven as "everybody's favorite person — a man who was just as nice as he seemed to be," will be making his motion picture debut in Cocoon. The producer of the project: Richard Zanuck, whose father, Darryl, was Tyrone's boss at Fox Studios. The Cocoon co-stars: Tahnee Welch, daughter of you-know-who, and one holdover, Don Ameche, who starred with the late Power in Alexander's Ragtime Band and In Old Chicago.

MARTIN: SAYONARA STAND-UP.

SOMERS: SHE'S SHIPSHAPE.

"You can't stay hot in television," says Suzanne Somers, who generated a lot of sparks with her dumb-blonde role in Three's Company. After a nasty contract dispute that caused her to part company with series co-stars John Ritter and Joyce DeWitt, she was the victim of two CBS pilots that never took off. But Somers has kept busy — and solvent — headlining a Folies Bergere-style show at the Las Vegas Hilton for the last three years. "I feel much more in control of my new career, but it hasn't been easy," she notes. "I'm not a stand-up comic, and I don't have hit songs to fall back on. Trying to elevate my audience's mood is a big responsibility." Come February, Suzanne will be back on the air in Hollywood Wives, a mini-series based on the Jackie Collins page-turner, but she and husband-manager Alan Hamel are looking for a full-time TV slot. "I've been grooming myself for a variety show," Somers admits. "The networks insist that those programs aren't popular right now. But when variety regains its popularity, no one will be more right for it than me." Talk about blonde ambition.

□

"Since your new book The Miracle is about miracle cures, I'd like to know if you believe in them," P.H. of Anniston, Ala., writes in to ask author Irving Wallace. "While in Lourdes to get background for the book, I met a French doctor who had a seriously ill 18-year-old patient," recalls Wallace. "The mother refused treatment for her daughter and instead took her to Lourdes, where they both prayed in the hollow grotto. Overnight, the illness disappeared completely. So meeting that doctor, along with other information I gathered, convinces me there can be miracle cures if you truly and fervently believe."

BOSS PROBLEMS?

If you've got an impossible boss, you've really got a problem. Even so, there are ways to cope with almost any workplace situation.

BY BERKELEY RICE

Millions of us — from workers and secretaries to senior executives at corporate headquarters — work for difficult or seemingly impossible bosses. Some grumble about it; others endure in silence. Whatever the reaction, the stress of working for a difficult boss can damage not only your health but also your career, your marriage and your family life.

Few things in American life are as inescapable as the boss. Most of us work for one, or are closely linked by family or affection to someone who works for one. In recent years, as companies have become more aware of how troubled boss-subordinate relationships can hurt productivity, the subject has been drawing increased attention from behavioral researchers. Their work is beginning to shed light on how those relationships are formed and how their ripple effects extend beyond the workplace.

Employees who suffer under their bosses can develop a variety of stress-related ailments: headaches, indigestion, insomnia, rashes, anxiety, or even depression. Others may take out their frustrations at home, abusing their spouses and children just as they are abused in the office.

For many employees, troubles with bosses stem from their childhood relationships with their parents. According to Jerry Johnson, a specialist in organizational behavior at the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kan., "Almost everyone grows up with a number of expectations as to how authority figures should behave and what one must do to get along with them."

Years later they bring the same expectations to work and project the same parent-child roles on their relationships with their bosses. But the boss may not fit that parental model, and the behavior that worked as a child may not be appropriate in the office. For example, it won't help your career much if you respond to your supervisor's criticism as if you were a 5-year-old child being scolded by Mommy or Daddy.

A child may learn to expect warmth and praise from his parents for being "good." As an adult, that same person may feel rejected by a boss whose sense of authority precludes personal contact with subordinates. Take Harry, a young associate at a law firm whose supervisor was a well-established senior partner about his father's age. "He treated me just like a son at first," Harry recalls, "showing me the ropes and helping me get settled. As long as I continued to do all his dog work, the relationship was fine. But when I tried to get time to take on some cases on my own he suddenly grew cold and sort of 'disowned' me."

Such "distant" bosses can be particularly difficult for women raised to expect close relationships with people at work. With authoritarian bosses, this simply may not happen. Many women have been conditioned from childhood to play the passive "good little girl" when dealing with older men. This passivity puts them at a disadvantage in an office where they must compete with aggressive male colleagues.

As more and more women rise to positions of managerial authority, the men they supervise may have difficulty relating to them as superiors because of similar early experiences. Men who expect female bosses to be nurturing or motherly may be shocked to discover they're not. In fact, many women managers make a point of playing the authoritarian role they've learned from their male bosses.

Some people blame their bosses when they are at least partially at fault themselves. In her book Knowing the Score, management consultant Betty Lehan Harragan cites the example of a woman who complains that her boss's weekly meetings leave her "psychologically destroyed" when he becomes abusive after she can't answer his rapid-fire questions. "He seems to have a knack for asking me the one minor detail I can't recall," she says. "Even if I do, my mind freezes because of the humiliating atmosphere."

Harragan wonders just how "minor" the unknown details really are, and suggests that the woman may be mistaking the priorities of her job. She suggests that the woman analyze the boss's questions to learn what information he considers important. Instead of complaining about his style, says Harragan, this woman must recognize that's simply the way he is: "In his own, uncouth way, he's testing you — and you don't seem to be meeting the challenge."

Whoever's at fault, you're probably going to do the coping, since you're the one who's suffering. But coping does not mean trying to change your boss's personality — a hopeless task that will only waste your energy and annoy your boss. Coping means changing the relationship: adjusting or adapting your own behavior so that you can work peacefully and productively with your boss.

Coping often requires a bit of amateur psychology in order to diagnose your boss and plan appropriate strategies. For example, Harry Levinson, a psychologist who consults with many corporate executives, has found that abusive bosses who intimidate their subordinates may be masking their own sense of insecurity and inadequacy. This type, says Levinson, would probably not react well to threats or confrontation, but might respond to a more supportive appeal.

Since difficult bosses come in so many different styles, you may need help in placing yours in the proper category in order to cope with him effectively.

"One day, in the middle of one of his tirades, I blew up. I told him he had no right to talk to me that way, and that I wasn't going to take it anymore."

Psychologists who study relationships at work have come up with various typologies that may prove helpful, although one must realize that few people fit neatly into such general categories.

In a survey of executives conducted by Drs. Michael Lombardo and Morgan McCall, researchers at the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro, N.C., the following types of difficult bosses were most frequently cited: "snakes-in-the-grass," who can't be trusted with personal or confidential information; "little Napoleons," who strike out at anyone who questions or threatens their authority; "heel grinders," who go out of their way to humiliate subordinates; "egotists," who act as if they know everything and won't listen to the views of subordinates; and "detail drones," who take pleasure in forcing subordinates to do everything by the book.

Whatever the type, abusive bosses can establish a pattern with subordinates in which both continue to play their standard roles. For the abusee, one solution is to try to break that pattern. For example, a friend of mine in his late 40s had a department manager who frequently chewed him out in front of his colleagues. Naturally this left him feeling humiliated. "I never had the guts to do anything about it, though," he told me. "All I ever did was come home and snipe at my wife and kids. Then one day, in the middle of one of his tirades, something just snapped, and I blew up. I stopped him in mid-sentence and told him he had no right to talk to me that way, and that I wasn't going to take it anymore. Then I just walked away and left him standing there with his mouth open. I figured he'd fire me, but he didn't. He still comes around and criticizes my work now, but not in the old way. Somehow, that blow-up seems to have cleared the air between us and changed our relationship."

For those caught up in long-running battles with their bosses, a spouse can often suggest a fresh approach. This happened with Ralph, a friend of mine in advertising who used to fight with his boss so frequently that he came to accept the daily skirmishes as part of his job. But his wife worried that he was becoming increasingly tense and was drinking more and more to calm down after work.

"She suggested I try ignoring my boss when he attacked, instead of fighting back," Ralph told me. "I thought she was crazy, but I figured I had nothing to lose. So I gave it a try, and it actually worked! I guess when I stopped fighting back it was like breaking the rules of the game, and he just stopped playing because he wasn't getting his reward anymore."

As these examples illustrate, most relationships between bosses and their subordinates are governed by unconscious assumptions, expectations and misunderstandings. These unwritten "psychological contracts" are similar to those between husbands and wives or between parents and children. When the relationship isn't working well, these contracts need to be reviewed, and perhaps renegotiated, based on your mutual needs. If your boss doesn't recognize this, you'll have to take the initiative yourself. This may require a confrontation, but it need not be unfriendly or threatening to your boss, if you handle it diplomatically.

If your boss is not receptive to your appeal, then transferring or quitting may be better alternatives than merely hoping things will change in time. Simply enduring such a relationship can be emotionally painful for those who have devoted themselves — perhaps because of their boss's demands — almost completely to their work.

"The trouble with such dependence on the job," says Glenn Swogger, a Menninger Foundation psychiatrist, "is that if the job or your boss suddenly changes, the emotional satisfaction you get from your work may decrease sharply, and you're left with no other source of support." To avoid such vulnerability, Swogger recommends that people who are over-involved in their jobs and their relationships with their bosses "diversify their emotional portfolios" to include family, friends and community activities, in addition to work.

If all else fails, however, and you do quit or seek a transfer, try to choose your next boss carefully. Ask his current or former colleagues and subordinates about his personality and managerial style. During your interview with him, try to find out what sort of relationship he expects to have with those who work for him. Remember, your relationship with your boss is like a short-term marriage. A little preliminary research may make the difference between a good match and a stormy one. FW

BLEND FOOD AND GOOD NUTRITION

By Marilyn Hansen

A new cookbook has made its debut this season: You've Got It Made by Marian Burros, food critic for The New York Times and author of the cookbooks Elegant but Easy, Pure & Simple and Keep It Simple. Burros supplies up-to-date dietary guidelines and recipes that say, "Good food and good nutrition can be synonymous."

The menus are appealing and give a "game plan" to follow in preparation. Flavor and ingredient combinations are imaginative, and the recipes are low in salt and fat, and high in fiber.

The book includes three weeks of family meals that can be prepared in 30 minutes plus menus for entertaining that can be used for cooperative dinner parties, the modern version of the old-fashioned potluck dinner.

YOUR CHILDREN

HOW TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT BALLET SCHOOL

By Janet Weiner

You've just taken your youngster to see Swan Lake, and she sat absolutely still, enchanted by the music and dance. Ever since, she's been begging for a tutu, standing on tiptoe, and twirling endlessly to your classical records. Maybe it's time to enroll her (or him) in dance lessons. There are dozens of choices; how do you decide which one is best for your child?

Jeffry W. Myers/F.P.G.

Clare Duncan, principal of the Houston Ballet Academy, suggests that a school affiliated with a regional ballet company is best because professionals will be running it. If no ballet company exists in your area, get advice from someone in the dance profession or from the dance department of a university before choosing a school.

Observe a beginners' and an advanced class, to see the progress of continuing students. Advises Duncan: "Check for discipline. See that students are neatly dressed, hair done up nicely, able to work at the barre [hand railings] and in the center of the room. They should be working simply and not on a whole host of advanced steps."

Before any pointe (on the toes) work, says Edith D'Addario, executive director of the Joffrey Ballet School in New York, "a child has to have had at least four years of ballet technique training" to develop strength. Before then, the bones in the feet and ankles are too soft and the neck and stomach are not strong enough.

Boys, incidentally, do not go on pointe. In the earlier part of their training they perform the same exercises as girls, but in intermediate classes they are taught high leaps and work to strengthen the upper body.

The guidance of a competent teacher is crucial; he or she must be selected carefully. A teacher who has studied under ballet masters but who may not have performed may be preferable to one who has performed for years.

It's better for children between the ages of 4 and 7 to be involved in interpretative dance. They listen to music, do rhythmic exercises, and use their imagination to create dances based on fairy tales. They are taught how to take instruction and work in a group; they gain confidence. Technical training in ballet should not begin before the child is 8; younger children are not ready physically or psychologically.

At ages 8 and 9 the teacher gradually expands their concentration, corrects their posture, and strengthens the postural muscles. At advanced levels (ages 10 and older), depending on the child's readiness, the teacher introduces pointe work, exercises at the barre, folk and modern dance. "Advanced students are auditioned and carefully watched to find their proper level of training," says D'Addario.

A good teacher will demonstrate an exercise or routine slowly at least twice, then have the students try it. Judicious correction and criticism are integral to instruction.

Avoid the teacher who instructs in all forms of dance — ballet, tap, jazz, etc. — and offers acrobatics and baton twirling. This type of teacher is probably not too skillful in any of these.

The ballet studio should be large, well-lighted and well-ventilated, with full mirrors on one wall or more. A wooden floor that gives under the child's weight is essential. A concrete floor is not acceptable because it could injure a child's tendons during jumps. A piano is ideal musical accompaniment, but recorded music is also satisfactory. There should be standard dress: leotards and tights for girls, T-shirts and shorts or tights for boys. Ballet shoes should be demi-pointe (flat) and pointe (toe slippers).

Mastering the art of ballet demands hard work and dedication of both student and teacher. The student must have an unfailing desire to dance.

Many children quit in their early teens, when they discover they're losing out on school activities and social life or that their bodies are not suited for professional dance. If your child has decided to reassess his or her purpose in life, nothing has been lost. Your child has gained beauty, self-confidence and self-reliance. "It's important," says Duncan, "to make young people feel that whatever their decision, they're not a failure because they didn't make it in ballet." FW

DON SHARP'S MONTHLY CAR CARE COLUMN

HOT TIPS FOR ICY WEATHER

People remember to buy new wool socks but forget that the car must get through winter, too. Even where winters are not unduly cold they tend to be rainy, and the car needs preparation.

Since a frozen radiator never killed anybody, the first item is not the antifreeze in the radiator but the windshield washer. No one knows how many accidents happen because a lowering sun or oncoming headlights turn a dirty windshield into a translucent screen, but the number must be considerable. Obviously the hazard is greatest when the windshield constantly collects spray or a film of ice.

No one knows how many accidents happen because of a dirty windshield, but the number must be considerable.

Windshield washers mostly fail from neglect. Come fall, replace the pump if it has seized up from disuse, the reservoir if it's cracked, and the hoses if they're broken.

A straight pin is usually too big to clear clogged nozzles, so disconnect the hose from the reservoir and use a bicycle pump to blow back the nozzle. The operation requires some jiggery-pokery with a piece of small hose to connect the pump to the nozzle, but it is much better than blowing from the reservoir end, which just packs the clogging tighter.

Don't put water, soapy or otherwise, in the washer; it will leave mineral deposits in the pump and nozzles. Use the dilute alcohol sold as windshield washer fluid and keep the jug in the trunk. You'll easily use a gallon on a long trip in slushy weather.

Although the washer fluid will clear soft frost off a windshield and will soften thin ice, it is vastly overrated as a deicer. At around 15 degrees Fahrenheit, the fluid freezes the instant it hits a cold windshield. In extremely low temperatures, experiment, find the limits, and don't use the washers until the defrosters warm the windshield.

The radiator comes next and should have a 50-50 mix of ethylene glycol antifreeze and water. Such a mixture stays liquid down to minus 35 F. In colder climates use 70 percent antifreeze for a mixture that stays liquid to minus 90 F.

To use more than 70 percent antifreeze gains nothing, but to use less than 50 percent can cost much. Suppose temperatures in your area rarely go below 20 F, so you use only a 25 percent antifreeze mixture with a freezing point of 10 F. This works if the car is sheltered, but when you park it facing a 25 mph wind in 20 F weather, the "chill factor" right at the radiator can go below zero. The marginal antifreeze and water mixture separates. The antifreeze rises and the water goes to the bottom of the radiator, where it freezes and blocks circulation of what liquid remains.

The results of such blockage can include a steaming radiator that may split from the pressure, burst hoses and, worse yet, the possibility of a damaged engine.

The low freezing point of the proper 50-50 mixture, though, can be seriously compromised by rust and corrosion products. A newer car rarely has rust problems, but an older car should be thoroughly "back flushed." To do the job at home, get a back flush kit from an auto parts store or a mass merchandiser. Once antifreeze has been in a car for two years, flush the car and replace the antifreeze.

Cars in lower latitudes won't freeze, but they still need that 50-50 mixture to inhibit rust and corrosion. That's why cars have the mixture when they leave the factory.

An old thermostat may stick shut on the first below-zero day, so replace it every two or three years, especially on a used car of unknown history. For winter, use a 190+ F thermostat.

Last, add a pint of "gas line antifreeze" to the fuel tank every month. This is simply dilute alcohol that absorbs any water in the fuel tank so that it doesn't freeze up in the fuel line. When available, a tankful of gasohol will do the same.

These procedures, while primary, are hardly total; batteries must be healthy and their cables in good order; disc brake pistons may need cleaning to prevent salt-induced rust; heater and defroster controls must be freed up after summertime disuse. The list could go on, but if you can do nothing else, make sure that you see where you're going in all conditions, and that saving the cost of a gallon of antifreeze doesn't cost you an engine. FW

"Kills Every Roach Or Double Your Money Back"

An Interview With Frank K. Wood, President, FC&A

FC&A, a nearby Peachtree City company, just released a new $5.99 product, Roach Kill, with a double-your-money-back guarantee. Read this interview with Frank K. Wood, president of FC&A.

In contrast, eight well known brands of spray insecticides flunked the same scientific tests. They failed to kill a high number of roaches in heavily infested areas. One of these smelly sprays actually failed to kill any roaches at all!

(1) The American people are basically honest.

(2) Roach Kill is as good as we say it is.

Question: What is Roach Kill?

Answer: it's an odorless white powder. Roach Kill is applied in seconds from a squeeze bottle behind appliances and in other out-of-the-way areas.

Question: Why are roaches dangerous?

Answer: They carry all sorts of diseases like food poisoning and fevers. They leave filthy droppings and bad odors behind them.

Question: Frank, how does Roach Kill work?

Answer: The secret is in the fact that it's odorless. Roaches can't smell it, so they don't avoid it like they avoid smelly spray insecticides. Instead, they walk right over it. They pick up a little bit on their legs and carry it back to their hidden nests in the walls. There, Roach Kill wipes out the whole colony that breeds new roaches.

Question: How long does it last?

Answer: Roach Kill is so incredibly effective that it has a double-your-money-back guarantee. (Special $5.99 economy size price for check, money order, or credit card orders.)

Roach Kill is guaranteed to wipe out every roach in the house or apartment with one treatment or I'll send the customer double his money back.

All a customer has to do is return the empty bottle with a note that he saw even one single roach after trying it according to the simple directions.

Question: How can readers order Roach Kill?

Answer: Roach Kill isn't sold in stores; so cut out and mail the coupon to order now. I'll ship your order fast so you can prove to yourself that it really works. Double and triple orders are shipped by extra fast UPS. Single orders are shipped by third-class mail. Order extra bottles for garages and basements.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

PASTOR, CAN YOU SPARE A DIME?

A church in Oregon has figured out a nifty way to reach out and touch someone. When rising phone bills forced many hard-pressed families in the neighborhood of the Mallory Avenue Christian Church in Portland to cancel phone service, the church installed a free phone for the poor in the community.

Where did this sweet charity come from? The Rev. Douglas Wirt, co-pastor of the small 125-member church, recalls that "the neighborhood made it clear there was a need. They made it clear by coming around to use the phone all the time. But people are not using it to make social calls or for frivolous reasons. For instance, we have a lot of single parents looking for jobs, and others who need to call their doctors."

While the first bill was a biggie, there were very few unauthorized long-distance calls, says Wirt. And people have been very good about limiting the length of their conversations. Community spirit, we'd say.

HERE'S WHAT'S HAPPENING TO THE AMERICAN DREAM

Psychiatrist Milton Kramer, director of the Sleep Disorder Center at Bethesda Hospital in Cincinnati, recently compared his studies of the dreams of male and female students with similar surveys done during the Eisenhower era. His surprising findings: Where women's dreams of the past were largely passive, women are now as likely to have aggressive dreams as are men.

In addition, women students spent a greater part of their dream time solving problems than men did. And the men Kramer questioned dreamed about men more often than the women dreamed about men.

What conclusions does Kramer draw from this? He suggests that some of the psychological differences between men and women, once thought to be resistant to change, now appear to respond readily to altered social circumstances. What conclusions do we draw from all this? Let us sleep on it.

SOMETHING TO BRAY ABOUT: A BABY MULE?

Mules can't have little mules. Or so the wisdom went until recently. If you look up "mule" in the dictionary, you'll find that it's the sterile offspring of a donkey and a horse. For that reason, mule breeding has never been a thriving business.

But a mule in Nebraska by the name of Krause (huh?) recently gave birth to a son, Blue Moon. This was the first birth by a mule ever to be scientifically verified.

Nothing to kick about, you say? Not unless you consider that the odds of a mule team producing a fertile egg are about one in a billion. The birth was a very happy occasion — but no dawning of the age of mule ranching.

HELP WANTED: EXECUTIVE BRANCH, GOOD PERKS, HOUSE PROVIDED

One of the foundations of this country is embodied in the notion that any child has the potential to grow up to be president of the United States. But has anyone ever asked if the youngsters want the job?

Weekly Reader has. The publication, read by about 7 million elementary school students, quizzed children on their thoughts about government. One of the questions asked if they were interested in becoming president. Surprisingly, few wanted the job. Among second and third graders, only 33 percent of the boys and 22 percent of the girls were "very interested." And the children in junior high school were even less enthralled.

Despite these negative responses, insists Lynell Johnson, the director of Weekly Reader, "students [overall] have a positive and realistic view of government." And Johnson foresees a more enthusiastic response from girls when Weekly Reader conducts its next poll in 1988 (due to a "new political role model": Geraldine Ferraro).

Let's hope the kids start to show some interest. What if they gave a presidential election and nobody ran?

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Trash can is missing. 2. Cap is changed to hat. 3. Pipe is missing. 4. Toolbag is missing. 5. Poster is missing. 6. Button strip is shorter.

● STEP-WORDS! Can you think in steps? Let's see. The words Warm and Cold may be interchanged in four steps (see right), substituting one letter in the word formed in each step to make a new word. Example: Boy to Man — Boy, bay, ban, Man.

| WARM |
| --- |
| |
| |
| COLD |

● RIDDLE-ME-THIS! Why did the glowworm do well in school? It was very bright. What dish is served at mineral springs? Spaghetti. Where are feminist artifacts kept? At the Museum of Natural Her-story.

SPAN-ISH STEPS!

Challenge someone to stretch the string as far as possible on the floor, holding it down with a thumb on each end, and to step over it without touching it or lifting thumbs.

In trying this, it will probably be discovered that shortening up on the span will make the task easier to accomplish.

In a kind of upside down limbo contest, challenge participants to see who can traverse the widest span.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

ORDNANCE

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: MAEVE PLEADS WITH MARCUS: "I DID NOT BETRAY YOU. MY FATHER TRICKED US ALL. NOW HELP ME, PLEASE, HELP ME FIND PRINCE ARN." MARCUS PUTS HIMSELF IN PRINCE VALIANT'S SHOES. WHERE WOULD HE LEAD THE ROYAL HOUSEHOLD? HOW WOULD HE MAKE HIS ESCAPE? "COME," HE SAYS AT LAST, "I KNOW A SHORTCUT."

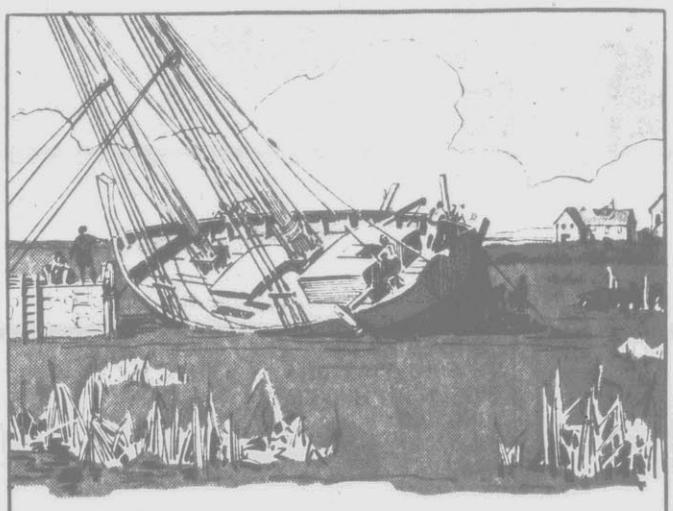
IN THE TENT WHERE MAEVE HAD BEEN HELD, HER CAPTORS LIE DRUGGED. THE LOYAL HOUNDS PINE FOR THEIR DEPARTED MISTRESS.



A DAY PASSES BEFORE 'MUCKEN MIRE' GIVES WAY TO A BROAD RIVER. A DESERTED VILLAGE YIELDS A SHIP, ONE THAT HAD SEEN HAPPIER DAYS. THE MEN GET TO WORK, MAKING NEW STRAKES AND LASHING THEM TO THE FRAME WITH ROOTS OF SPRUCE. THERE IS NO TIME TO TAR OR CAULK.

ROUNDING A BEND, MORDRED SEES HIS QUARRY. "TAKE THEM," HE SCREAMS. "AND A BOUNTY ON VALIANT'S HEAD." IT WILL BE CLOSE, FOR ALREADY A SAIL UNFURLS. FROM ANOTHER PART OF THE MIRE, MEANWHILE, TWO FIGURES NOW EMERGE. MORDRED PAYS NO HEED...
