Greenville Gets Powell Bill Share

Checks totaling over $45.4 million have been mailed to 465 North Carolina municipalities for local street construction and maintenance. The monies make up the 1984 allocation of state street aid (Powell Bill) funds.

Area cities receiving allocations include the following:

PITT COUNTY — Greenville, $606,009.09; Ayden, $86,131.65; Falkland, $1,657.48; Winterville, $36,860.64; Simpson, $7,372.69; Grifton (Pitt-Lenoir counties), $41,377.19; Grimesland, $8,742.69; Fountain, $9,069.44; Bethel, $35,747.65.

GREENE COUNTY — Walstonburg, $3,926.07; Snow Hill, $24,846.12; Hookerton, $8,043.89.

MARTIN COUNTY — Robersonville, $40,475.75; Williamston, $107,034.72; Parmele, $8,487.29; Oak City, $9,796.45; Jamesville, $11,584.12; Hassell, $2,799.51; Hamilton, $11,647.75; Everetts, $4,154.76; Bear Grass, $1,834.84.

Last year under Powell Bill provisions, active and qualifying North Carolina communities received $43.2 million. The sum this year and last year equals the amount produced by one-and-three-eighths cents of the state's motor fuel taxes during the preceding fiscal year.

Prior to 1982, Powell Bill funds were based on the amount produced by one cent of the state's gas tax revenues. The three-eighths-of-a-cent increase was a portion of the three-cent gas tax increase approved under Gov. Jim Hunt's "Good Roads" program passed by the state's 1981 General Assembly.

Powell Bill funds are distributed according to a legislative formula based 75 percent on population and 25 percent on local street mileage which is not state maintained.

From this year's Powell Bill funds, the largest single check went to Charlotte. Charlotte's allocation of $5,427,356.31 was based on a population figure of 334,782 and a local street mileage figure of 1,297.36.

The smallest check disbursed under the act went to the municipality of Falkland, which received a check for $1,657.48. Falkland's share was based on a population figure of 117 and local street mileage of .18 miles.

TRICK OR TREATERS...for UNICEF (the United National International Children's Emergency Fund) will call on Greenville area residents Sunday afternoon to ask for gifts to be used for life-sustaining services to children in developing countries of the world. Many area churches, organizations and individuals are taking part, according to Marcia Tingelstad, chairman. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

UNC Board Approved $19 Million Package For East Carolina

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Capital improvement requests for East Carolina University totaling more than $19,000,000 are among items considered and approved by the University of North Carolina System's board of governors at the board's meeting in Chapel Hill Friday.

For the first time, the proposed budget for operation and capital improvements in the University of North Carolina System has exceeded the $1 billion mark. Of that total, $301 million has been requested by the 16-members of the system for capital improvement, both new construction and renovation projects. The budget also includes a proposed seven percent salary increase for faculty members.

The budget requests are now in the hands of the Advisory Budget Commission which will make recommendations to present to the General Assembly when it convenes in February, 1985.

Two of the proposed facilities, according to ECU Chancellor Dr. John Howell, "are to be constructed with funds available from the medical family practice plan. These are non-state funds."

The two medical family practice plan facilities requested for ECU are the biotechnology lab, with a projected cost of $1,877,000 and a building to house the nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) machine, with an estimated cost of a little over $1 million. Two of the NMR machines, at a cost of $1.8 million each, were previously approved for installation, one in Greenville, one in Chapel Hill.

"The building to house the NMR has a number of special construction requirements," Howell pointed out. "It will need things like special protective shields built into the walls."

Dr. Howell expressed enthusiasm about plans for the major capital improvement item requested by ECU, a Sports Medical Physical Education Facility with a projected cost of $7,981,000.

"The sports medical facility will take care of many different things, and will take the pressure off other facilities," he commented. "We have not had a major expansion at Minges Coliseum for about 17 years."

"We expect to have a flourishing sports medical program in the future. Ours is an ideal situation to develop a fine program in this field, because we have the medical school and other support facilities," Dr. Howell noted as an example of the type of service the facility can offer is that "in the future, high school sports program are going to be required to have trained trainers, and the sports medical program will make training such people possible."

Another new facility request from ECU contained in the 1985-87 budget is for a $1,248,000 free standing birthing center at the medical school. "The birthing center is crowded now," Howell said. "And we definitely need more space."

The chancellor said, "I'm fairly optimistic about chances of approval for these capital improvement facilities. We got a big building budget from the last legislative session in capital improvements, and now we're starting a new cycle, so I feel we have a good chance of getting these new things as they're ones we basically need."

Requests from East Carolina also cover capital improvements for four major renovations projects, in addition to a number of renovations previously approved.

The major renovations requested in the 1985-87 capital improvements funds are:

- Memorial gymnasium, $3,771,000.
- Graham Building, $1,334,000.
- North Tower (med school) Biology facility, $1,245,000.
- Old cafeteria, $595,000.

"We already have on hand funds for renovation for Wright Building at $1,610,000, roof replacements for $620,500, and new electrical installation at $289,000," Howell said.

Noting the 7 percent faculty salary approved by the Board of Governors, Howell commented "what the University System hopes to do is to have a salary increase large enough to redress the imbalance that took place last year when the legislature gave public school teachers 5 percent more than everybody else."

7 Accused In Aquino Assassination

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The chairwoman of an investigatory board accused an air force general and six soldiers today of plotting the assassination of opposition leader

Benigno Aquino, and President Ferdinand E. Marcos ordered their immediate prosecution.

Chairwoman Corazon Agrava's 121-page report did not implicate Marcos or his chief of staff, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, 64, in the alleged conspiracy to kill Aquino. Ver, who commands the 200,000-strong armed forces, is a relative and close ally of the 67-year-old Marcos.

Another report expected to name higher officers and more soldiers was to be released Wednesday by the majority of the five-member panel. The chairwoman said she split with the other board members because they concluded Ver was one of the plotters.

But Marcos, who appointed the board, accepted the chairwoman's report during a televised ceremony as if it were that of the whole panel. He ordered immediate prosecution of Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, head of the Aviation Security Command assigned to protect Aquino, and six soldiers in a special civilian court on charges of plotting to kill Aquino.

"God knows my men and I are without guilt in this crime," said Custodio. Marcos ordered Custodio and the other six soldiers confined to quarters.

The Aug. 21, 1983, assassination of Aquino, 50, was at first blamed by Marcos and the military on alleged Communist agent Rolando Galman. It has been a rallying point for Aquino's family and opposition groups, who during a 14-month protest campaign have blamed the government and the armed forces.

In a nationwide television address, Marcos said: "Our government makes manifest to all its desire and its determination to push this case through to the final resolution."

Referring to the protests, he urged Aquino's followers to end "the campaign of intimidation and pressure that has heightened tensions, endangered so many lives and besmirched the very reputation of our republic."

Marcos said the case would be prosecuted by an ombudsman in a special court set up for trying graft and corruption charges against government employees and officials. He asked the investigatory board to assist in the prosecution, although it cannot actually bring charges.

Aquino's widow, Corazon, declined comment after listening to a radio news broadcast about the chairwoman's report and Marcos' response.

Sources said the report by the other board members would name Ver as part of the plot and detail an attempt to cover up the alleged conspiracy.

Mrs. Agrava's report concludes there was a criminal plot to assassinate Marcos' most popular rival and that one of Aquino's military escorts at the Manila airport shot him in the back of the head.

But it adds: "To pinpoint the actual assassin might not be provable beyond reasonable doubt with the available evidence."

"It should not be difficult to

Board Decides Appointment Procedures

Procedure for choosing members of the community at large to serve on a medical district study committee were agreed on by the Greenville City Council Monday. Once appointed, the committee will research the medical area, discuss its findings with the city's Planning and Zoning Commission, and finally submit recommendations as to the future of the area surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital to the City Council for consideration.

Each Council member agreed to submit three names of Greenville residents to the City Manager's office, which will check with nominees to see if they will consider serving if elected to the committee. Nominations, submitted by all six council members and the mayor, then will be compiled into a list from which nine names will be selected.

In other business, the council instructed City Manager Gail Meeks to send a prioritized list of small urban projects to the N.C. Department of Transportation for consideration should small urban funds be appropriated in 1985.

The projects, recommended by city staff members and the Citizens Transportation Committee, are as follows:

- 2) Widening of Evans Street from 10th Street to 14th Street.
- 3) Widening of Evans Street from Arlington Boulevard to Greenville Boulevard (U.S. 264 Bypass).

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I watch a lot of animal documentaries on television.

I don't relate to them at all. I can watch a turtle lay her eggs with tears streaming down her face and feel nothing. I can watch a snake devour something furry and not even wince. When a lion has sex every ten minutes, I don't even stop eating my nacho chips.

But I am intrigued by the animals who "stake out territories." The cats who do it by scent, the birds by song, and the seals by pure force.

That I can relate to. Man is probably the most territorial animal who ever walked the face of this earth.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

earth. We all do it. It's a habit we set early in our life. We sit on the same seat on the school bus every day, eat lunch at the same table and have the same seat each week in the bleachers. We park in the same spot every day at work, use the same stall in the restroom, take the same route to and from work every day, and stake out our pew in church.

I've written before about the territorial ritual of an aerobics class. I entered a class for the first time a few years ago and was told I was standing in someone's "spot." I moved. I was standing in another woman's "spot." I moved. "After five different spots, I finally ended up where no one wanted... in the front row next to the mirror. It was three years before I could work my way to the back row.

At our house, we all have "our chair" at the dinner table. Mine is the one closest to the stove and heaven help anyone who sits in it and expects me to take four more steps to get where I'm going.

My husband also suffers from the Archie Bunker disease. His living room chair, through years of use, has his anatomy set in cement. No one has gotten beyond the position of hovering over and saying, "Is this your chair?" He'll tell you.

All of these territorial conquests pale to the one we built our house on a few years ago. Unknown to us, we infringed on the permanent homes of scorpions, spiders, crickets, lizards, snakes and foxes.

They get our attention in a million little ways. They appear on our patio uninvited, crawl up our walls, hide out in our shower and shoes and when we open the mailbox yell, "Gotcha!"

The way it is explained to us, they were there first — about a billion years ago — and old habits die hard. That's why they bite you and try to get rid of you.

A woman tried to take my aerobics "spot" last week. It works.

Price Of Friendship Surprising To Usher

DEAR ABBY: Please print this so parents will think twice before planning a "sky's the limit" wedding for their son or daughter.

Our son was recently "honored" when a college fraternity brother asked him to be an usher at his wedding.

Although this meant a long trip either by plane or automobile, as well as time off from work, our son agreed. What he did not realize (nor was there any mention of this until the day before the wedding), he was expected to pick up a tab of $70 for his tux rental! We were floored when we were informed at the tux rental shop that the wedding had become too expensive for the groom's family, so everybody had to pay for his own.

Since our son is not financially well-off, we are paying for his tux rental.

Weddings with the attendants all dressed alike make a pretty picture, but in my opinion, unless the bride and groom or their parents are prepared to foot the bill, the wedding should be kept on a more conservative scale.

DISILLUSIONED BY FANCY WEDDINGS

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: When the bride and groom select their attendants, they should state whether they will pick up the tab for tux rental and attendants' gowns. Unless the bride and groom are extraordinarily well-to-do, the attendants are expected to provide for their own gowns and tuxes, but this should be clearly understood when the attendants are invited to serve.

DEAR ABBY: While shopping in a card shop recently, I remarked to an elderly lady standing near me that it was difficult to find just the right "get well" card.

She replied, "Yes, especially when you know that the person is not going to get well."

The lady was right. As I looked at card after card in the "get well" section, they all bore the same message: "Please, get well soon!"

Abby, the reality of life is that many sick people do not get well, so to send such a card to a terminally ill person who is aware of his condition is to deny reality.

I am not suggesting that we send a card saying, "I know you're dying and I hope it will be as easy as possible," but, Abby, surely there must be some way to say, "I hope you're comfortable."

Thanks for listening.
THE REV. DOROTHY LAIRMORE, PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR MS. LAIRMORE: Your point is well-taken. Next time, look in the "friendship" section. You will find cards that say, "Thinking of you," or, "I value your friendship." And if you can't find an appropriate message, write one.

Poindexter, third; Mrs. Mel Wright and Elizabeth Roque, fourth; Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. George Martin, fifth; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb.

A club championship was played Saturday afternoon at the bank. Placing were Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Beulah Eagles, first; Sara Bradbury and Dr. Charles Duffy, second; tied for third were Mrs. J.W.H. The scholarship in her honor has been endowed by former students and professional friends. It will provide $500 for expenses of a full-time undergraduate student majoring in any of the four departments of the School of Home Economics.

Presentation of the scholarship will take place at the reception from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Van Landingham Room of the School of Home Economics. The Home Economics Professional Society of the ECU Alumni Association is sponsoring the reception.

Crime Stoppers Donation Made

The Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers program has been given $1,000 by the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7032.

Louis H. Tyson, commander of the VFW post presented the money to Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes and Sgt. Doug Jackson, coordinator of the crime stoppers program, to be used to pay rewards.

Crime Stoppers offers rewards of up to $1,000 for information on crimes, and according to Jackson, "callers do not have to reveal their identity."

Jackson noted that the Pitt-

Greenville Crime Stoppers has paid "a total of $3,815 for information since January of this year and $112,000 worth of drugs and stolen property have been recovered and 38 people have been arrested as a result of information received at the crime stoppers office."

The crime stoppers program is funded by donations from interested citizens and groups that wish to help law enforcement agencies reduce crime and arrest criminals, Jackson said.

The Crime Stoppers telephone number is 758-7777.

Engineer Claims Was Urged To Quit

RALEIGH (AP) — A former Carolina Power & Light Co. engineer says he refused to resign after voicing concerns about the safety of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant but then was fired and blacklisted by the company.

"They urged me to make it easier on myself by resigning and said I would have a hard time getting another nuclear industry job if I did not resign," Chan Van Vo, 45, said in an affidavit released at a news conference on Monday in Raleigh.

Van Vo, who had worked for CP&L for five years until he left in February, said he did not resign.

"They terminated my job," he said in a telephone interview from his Fayetteville home.

The 16-page affidavit was released by Robert Guild, a Charleston, S.C., lawyer who represents Van Vo. Guild told reporters that he had asked the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission to investigate Van Vo's charges.

Guild also said he had asked the U.S. Labor Department to order that Van Vo be reinstated in his job.

Thomas S. Elleman, CP&L's vice president for corporate nuclear safety and research, said the company was investigating Van Vo's charges. Elleman, who attended the news conference, declined to comment on the investigation except to say company was "interviewing the people that are involved."

Fastest Shucker

LEONARDTOWN, Md. (AP) — The shells flew in the battle between Dave "Diz" Schimke and Ola Mae Carter, but shucks, it was no contest. Schimke claimed the title of the nation's fastest oyster shucker.

The 24-year-old lefthander from Bow, Wash., shucked two dozen of the tasty bivalves in 2 minutes and 41.31 seconds Sunday to win a $500 prize and the right to represent the United States in international competition next September in Galway, Ireland.

Ms. Carter, of St. Mary's County, Md., shucked her batch in 3:38.01.

Schimke noted only that Chesapeake Bay oysters were tougher to crack than the Washington state oysters he's used to.

Kerr Drugs Will Open New Greenville Store

Kerr Drugs will formally open a new store in the Overton Building on Jarvis Street at the Third Street intersection with a 9 a.m. ribbon-cutting Wednesday.

Jack Tyler, manager of the new 7,000 square foot store, said the Jarvis Street store is the newest of 48 stores in the Kerr Drug chain.

Tyler, a pharmacist in Greenville for more than 20 years, said Banks Kerr of Raleigh, the founder of the Kerr Drugs chain, Greenville Mayor Janice Buck and other officials will participate in the ribbon cutting program.

Tyler, who said the new store will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday, will have 12 employees.

Characterizing Kerr Drugs as "an outstanding chain," Tyler said the Jarvis Street store will be "a home town, neighborhood drug store ... well stocked with a variety of merchandise" where customers "can purchase about anything they want."

According to Tyler "what matters most is you ... that's the Kerr Drugs attitude. It's a local, friendly store."

Tyler noted that one of the outstanding features the store will offer is computerized "CHIP ... the Customer Health Information Plan," which provides the pharmacist with a "patient profile and insurance profile" and lists allergies and drug incompatibility for customers.

Ford Recalls Trucks

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has recalled nearly half a million 1983 and 1984 Ranger mini-pickups for free replacement or repair of fuel hoses and clamps, fuel cap tethers and secondary hood latches.

Ford said Monday that some of the trucks may need more than one repair. The company said it had received no reports of accidents or injuries resulting from the problems.

The automaker said some 2.0- and 2.3-liter engines have fuel hoses that can separate from the fuel pump.

"This is believed to occur primarily after improper tightening of the fuel filter or fuel-line jetting during maintenance," Ford said.

The tethers, plastic straps that protect against loss or theft of the fuel caps, caused some caps to lift and leak when test cars were sideswiped at 30 mph, Ford said.

The secondary hood latches may have been installed incorrectly and could cause the hood "to fly up without prior warning" if the primary latch is not engaged, Ford said.

Of the 495,100 trucks recalled, 460,795 were sold in the United States, 33,917 were sold in Canada and 388 elsewhere abroad, Ford said.

Missing Children Program Sought

RALEIGH (AP) — The Governor's Task Force on Missing Children called today for a comprehensive program integrating federal, state and local resources to combat the problem of missing children in North Carolina.

Crime Control and Public Safety Secretary Heman R. Clark said the task force held five public hearings across the state and talked with many sheriffs and chiefs of police seeking views on this issue.

Task force vice chairman Charles Dunn said that while North Carolinians are concerned about missing children, there has been a problem with estranged parents taking their children out of state and thus violating court child custody orders.

Among its ideas, the task force recommended that a missing child be reported to law enforcement authorities immediately. It said there was a belief that authorities required a 24-to-72-hour wait before accepting a missing child report, when in fact no such law exists in North Carolina.

The task force also recommended that a North Carolina Missing Children's Information Center be established by executive order within an existing state agency.

It Was High Noon

It took a lot of personal courage as well as dedicated sense of mission for El Salvador's president Jose Duarte to walk unarmed into a nest of anti-government guerrillas to launch a peace process. He put his life on the line.

It was "High Noon", Latin American style.

A gesture like that demanded some kind of accomodation by his foes.

Nobody can guess the final results of his mission, but the government and rebel leadership have agreed to talk and work for a peaceful answer to their differences.

The two sides have much to discuss, and to find some grounds of agreement that will end their years of warfare will require the kind of courage and determination Duarte displayed. An awful lot of give and take is involved.

The revolutionaries had just complaints against regimes that preceded the election of President Duarte. From what we know of Central American social and economic conditions, the rebels had good reason for seeking a better life than they had known. They were dealing, face to face, with a man who professed some agreement with their hopes, who also had to remember in his dealings the values, shortcomings, strong points and needs of his country as a whole.

For both sides the memory of more than four years of civil war and bloody repression was vivid. Tens of thousands of civilians had been killed. The miseries of their long ordeal must have weighed heavily in their confrontation. So there is a glimmer of light in a beleaguered land. Should their future talks remove obstacles to peace the rest of Central America may be re-encouraged to attempt the resolving of problems that make their countries a tinderbox.

President Duarte took chances in his lonely, unguarded meeting with guerrillas; he also is taking big chances on the reaction of rightwing extremists in his country. They are very strong and ruthless.

Armed clashes resumed after the meeting, but a door is ajar. At the moment our admiration of Jose Napoleon Duarte is very high.

Peace is worth taking personal risks. We wish him and his country well.

Oil Prices Fall

The price of oil is falling. Norway and Britain have cut the price of their oil and they were followed by Nigeria. The Nigerian move was significant because it is an OPEC partner and it broke ranks to reduce the price of oil by $2 per gallon.

The news was treated positively by the stock market which boomed upon the announcement. Clearly lower oil prices will translate into lower prices for energy which should continue to hold down inflation in the United States.

The picture is not entirely rosy, however, since many of the oil producing nations are heavily indebted to U.S. and western world banks. Less profit on their oil increases the possibility that they will not be able to pay back their loans.

At any rate falling world oil prices will translate into help for the American consumer. Not only do we use oil products directly to run our cars and heat our homes, but its cost is in everything we purchase from electricity to clothing.

RALEIGH — John Carrington, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, may be a political novice but he's managed to put a campaign ad on TV that is as unjustifiably defamatory of his opponent as anything the state's veteran pols have squired in this dirtiest of political years.

In Carrington's ad, an actress playing the part of a young mother notes recent headlines about child sexual abuse and says Carrington's Democratic opponent "isn't losing any sleep over" child abuse. The basis for Carrington's outrageous attack on the character of Sen. Bob Jordan, his opponent, is one vote Jordan cast as a member of the State Senate.

Don Penven, Carrington's campaign manager, conceded that it may take a giant leap in logic to say that a single vote is reason to say that a senator doesn't care about child abuse. Those who know Bob Jordan, who know that he has constantly worked to keep the funding of children's programs in the budget, who know that he was an original founder of the children's lobby Child Watch, who know that his wife Sarah is a director of the Methodist Home for Children, know that it is a preposterous charge.

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, sponsor of the bill Jordan opposed, said, "I don't think you can reasonably say that someone is not concerned about child abuse because someone voted against one bill."

On May 27, 1983, Jordan was one of only three senators to oppose Edwards' SB 330 which was known as the Child Protection Act. SB 330 never made it into law but large parts of it were incorporated into another bill which is now law. The new law toughens penalties for child pornography and abuse.

In his ad, the actress says Carrington would support such bills as Edwards'. So let's look at the original bill and Jordan's concerns with it.

While Edwards sponsored the bill, no one seems to know who wrote it. It wasn't drafted by legislative staff or the attorney general's office, as is usually the case with bills. The bill was widely recognized as a proposal of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green who was dropping all kinds of "run on" bills in the hopper in 1983, getting his gubernatorial campaign ready for 1984. Critics questioned the constitutionality of several and that's why Jordan opposed this bill.

One section of the bill said that a judge could, without a hearing, without due process of law, send the child victim of sexual abuse to a state mental hospital for up to 60 days. Mind you, this wasn't the criminal, it was the victim who was being denied constitutional rights. The rights of the criminal were clearly stated in the bill.

The bill is so poorly drafted that one could argue that the judge could make this commitment before a court had determined that a child had in fact been abused, before a defendant was convicted.

Consider what that means. Some unnamed government agency, be it the social worker or the district attorney, could have used this bill to put a child in a mental hospital against the child's wishes, against the wishes of the parents, without a court hearing. Maybe the abuse occurred and the parents think they're best able to help their child recover. Maybe the abuse didn't occur, and a child is being sent to Dorothea Dix for no reason. And Bob Jordan is being accused of being soft on child abuse because he opposed this?

Penven asks why, if it's unconstitutional, did 10 lawyer-senators vote for it. Well maybe because in Green's Senate, senators knew better than to oppose Green's bills. Maybe because they were afraid that some future political candidate would take this vote out of context, stick it on TV for 30 seconds, and ruin their political and personal reputations.

Public Forum

Dedicated To A Sense Of Morality

To the editor:

When people speak out against some planks of the Democrat party platform and/or Walter Mondale's views such as abortion on demand, legalizing homosexuality as an alternate life style, peddling pornography, and eliminating prayer and Bible study in public schools, we hear this great uproar and howling... "religion in politics — it must be stopped," "imposing your morality on us will not be tolerated," "you can't legislate morals," and "we have a right to our own choice." In that case, why don't we simply close our police departments and send all our law enforcement officers home? Bank robbery, arson, rape, drunk driving, murder after birth...these are the most personal choices anyone can make. After all, don't all our laws impose one group's morality on another? Yes, and I'm grateful for the laws that protect me from criminal action by others.

When an effort is made to protect the life of the unborn child, we hear, "I have the right to control my own body." After conception, there's no longer one body, but two. The second life is equally important as the first. Last year N.C. spent $1,365,000 of our tax dollars to murder over 6,000 babies...with the help of Gov. Hunt's maneuvering. Surely that's one group imposing their amorality on another. Our legislative process has no right to force us (through using our tax dollars) to participate in a heinous act such as murder.

I am happy to know that the Republican party has a platform and candidates for election who are dedicated to giving this nation a sense of morality once again, who will strive to protect the traditional family as we know it, and who hold high the love of God and country. The lines are clearly drawn. The choice is yours on Nov. 6.

To the editor:

Randy Doub's Thursday letter to the editor accusing Rufus Edmisten of promising state-held employee jobs to his campaign workers is another example of the Jim Martin campaign distorting Rufus Edmisten's image.

I have been a strong supporter in the Rufus Edmisten campaign, putting signs up, getting people to vote for him, and being financially involved ever since he filed for Governor. Never once have I ever heard Rufus promise anybody a job. I, for one, am not after anything or any state job from Rufus Edmisten. I haven't strongly supported Rufus for a state job as we are accused. Mort Hurst supported Rufus Edmisten because he is a good, fair and decent man who will make us the best Governor that North Carolina has ever had.

Dangers Outweigh The Precautions

WASHINGTON — Let me put a question to readers who travel by air: Do you ever get a little whiteknuckled in landing or taking off over water? If so, read on, because we're not talking about politics today.

We're talking about safety in the air, and we're talking with a gentleman who speaks with a bell-like ring of authority.

This is Wayne S. Williams of Dania, Fla., president of the National Transportation Safety Association. He has been flying since 1944, when he learned his craft in Navy bombers. He spent 25 years training air crews in survival techniques. After his military retirement, he went to Eastern Airlines as a senior engineer responsible for emergency equipment. For the past five years he's served as head of the NTSA, a division of the Aviation Safety Institute. When this expert talks, we ought to listen. He writes me:

"Some 215 U.S. airline terminals have significant bodies of water in approach/departure areas. The vast majority — 70 percent, plus — of arrivals and departures are over such bodies of water. And in airline jet operations, accidents mostly happen during approach and departure. But, under archaic rules dating from the 1930s, the airlines are only required to have life vests (and the five variations of vests date from the 1930s, too) aboard when operating more than 50 navigable miles from a shoreline.

"Something wrong, there: We've had about 50 airline jets go into water, worldwide. The most distant from land was 35 miles. You may remember the 1982 World Airways accident at Boston. Had the airplane plunged into deeper water, farther from shore, the immediate survival of the passengers and crew would have been totally dependent upon the life vests and slide/rafts about the aircraft. Only 25 percent of the fleet has usually have a 'floatation cushion.' You'd hold onto it about three minutes in the 30-degree water they had in Boston that day, maybe 15 minutes in 50-degree water. Rescue will not reach you in time."

In an effort to get something done about the situation, the NTSA has asked Congress to require scheduled carriers to provide a modern vest at every seat. This would mean about 500,000 vests to equip the 2,500 aircraft used by the commercial airlines. The initial cost would be perhaps $15 million.

"Add a bit to cover installation, and it comes to about six cents added to every ticket you buy in the next year. Tell me, would you accept that for the sake of floating should you ever need to?"

Williams has another rhetorical question: "How in the world can the laws of this country require automobile seats to resist 20 G's forward crash loading and airline seats only nine?"

When the Air Florida jet crashed into the Potomac River in 1982, he notes, 69 of 70 passengers died of injuries to the head, neck and upper chest that were secondary to the impact. Their seats and safety belts failed. Probably the passengers would have died in the icy water anyhow, but the crash created an impact of only 12 G's. The cost of installing safer seats, he contends, is not an unreasonable cost.

"I'm not your average bleeding heart liberal," he adds. "I've just seen enough dead bodies — and as I look at the airlines today, I see a lot more coming up. I know that many of these future deaths can be avoided if we can make some very basic changes. Time sort of stopped, in passenger safety areas, about 35 years ago. It's as though someone said, 'That's enough. The DC-4 represents a high-enough level of safety.' Some 330 million passengers board U.S. scheduled carriers each year. We could achieve wonders (improved medical kits, smoke detectors, halon fire extinguishers, more crash-resistant seats) for as little as $1 a ticket."

A Big Change In Campaign Rhetoric

LIMA, Ohio — The power of fear as a political catalyst was never more evident than in President Reagan's thrust at Walter Mondale's jugular across autumnal Ohio on his Heartland Special whistle-stop tour.

Gone was the Reagan mush that dulled voters' senses in the earlier campaign forays since the staging of the Dallas convention. The president's rhetoric — and more than rhetoric, his true intent — was clearly tailored to blintz up Fritz

Mondale and bloody him badly. Crossing the Western salient of Ohio, one of the Republicans' great national strongholds, was an angry Ronald Reagan who wanted his emotion to hang out in full public view.

That suggests the raw insides of a suddenly-adrenalized presidential campaign. Fearful that he was bitten by the sharp tooth of the age issue on the night of Oct. 7, Reagan is out for revenge. With Mondale clearly ready to respond in kind, the prospect now is a Reagan-Mondale confrontation that converts a boring campaign into what may become a classic case of anything-goes politics.

The president's departure from the strategy of protecting his immense lead by ignoring his opponent and avoiding controversial second-term proposals was ordained in the White House recently. James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff and the high priest of the strategy of caution, made no effort to override the unanimous insistence of Reagan's political managers that the president take the offensive. Baker had already been subjected to criticism, strongly implied if not directly stated, by Sen. Paul Laxalt, general secretary of the Republican Party.

Laxalt and his political cohort were in agreement that Reagan's mushy campaign message had to be discarded; that Reagan must be given his head and allowed his natural political bent, which is a posture of aggressive attack.

That meant substituting Reaganesque verbalisms of favorite speechwriter Ken Kachigian for the bland pronouncements preferred by Baker. It meant activating the steely righteousness of the Ronald Reagan who decapitated George Bush in the 1980 New Hampshire debate and pulverized Jerry Ford in the 1976 North Carolina primary after Reagan's earlier humiliation. Kachigian performed well and

Fight For Voters' Loyalties Is Expensive

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt have spent $20 million and met in four statewide televised debates to draw the battle lines in a quest for voters' loyalties.

"Many of us regard the re-election of Jesse Helms as even more important than the presidential contest," conservative fundraiser Richard Viguerie has said.

More than 300,000 North Carolinians, many spurred by the Moral Majority or the Rev. Jesse Jackson, have registered to vote in the U.S. Senate race since April.

State Elections Board Chairman Robert Spearman said 77 percent of the eligible North Carolinians are registered to vote Nov. 6, an increase of 18 percent since 1981.

The race already is the most expensive in the nation's history and it's described as a turning-point for both the state and the region.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young said it will determine "whether the South is going to move forward or ... backward."

The candidates themselves seem to generate superlatives.

At a Charlotte rally, President Reagan called Helms North Carolina's most "valuable export."

Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro, in visits to Raleigh and Greensboro, said Helms is an "extremist right-wing ideologue out of step with North Carolina."

The rhetoric and millions of dollars in advertising have caused only ripples in recent polls.

Last summer, Hunt was leading Helms by as much as 19 percentage points. But the gap closed until polls showed Helms had captured a narrow lead in May. The most recent polls show another switch, with Hunt holding a slight edge.

But pollsters say that when the surveys' margin of error is calculated, the race is dead even.

There are two other candidates seeking the Senate seat but they have failed to capture much attention. They are Kate Daher of Greensboro, the Socialist Workers Party candidate, and Bobby Yates Emory of Raleigh, the Libertarian candidate.

Helms, in the series of one-hour televised debates, has tried to ride the wave of popularity for President Reagan. He was first elected in a Republican sweep led by Richard Nixon.

Polls consistently have given Reagan an almost 2-to-1 margin over Democratic challenger Walter Mondale in North Carolina although the state's voter registration is almost 3-to-1 Democratic.

Hunt has disagreed with Mondale on the need to raise taxes and has sided with Reagan on defense matters.

"The choices are clear," Helms said in the last debate. "Will we raise taxes and spending, as the governor has done here in North Carolina, or will we continue to cut taxes and spending as President Reagan and I have done?"

Hunt agreed the choice between the candidates is clear but he rejected the Helms' label of "Mondale liberal."

"You know better," Hunt told viewers. "You've elected me statewide three times. I've served as your governor for eight years... I represent a tradition ... of sound progressive government that has moved this state forward over the years."

JESSE HELMS

JIM HUNT

Hunt tried to align Helms with right-wing groups.

"I do not want North Carolina to be known as the home for radical, right-wing politicians," Hunt said. "I do not want North Carolina to be known for narrow intolerant leaders who claim that God is on their side."

Helms said he is supported by the Chamber of Commerce and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and asked if those are radical groups. He acknowledged that he has many friends who support prayer in public schools, including the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority, but said he makes up his mind independently.

Hunt, 47, has built a far-reaching political base as the state's first two-term governor and a former lieutenant governor.

He also has earned a national reputation as leader of groups including the Appalachian Regional Commission, Coastal Plains Regional Commission and chairman of the Democratic National Committee's Commission on Presidential Selection.

In perhaps one of his toughest decisions as governor, Hunt has refused to block the execution of Velma Barfield, which is scheduled for four days before the election. Mrs. Barfield would be the first woman executed in the nation in two decades.

Helms receives help from the National Congressional Club, a group he established to retire his 1972 campaign debt that has grown to one of the nation's largest political action committees. It now gives money to candidates of both parties across the nation.

Helms, 63, has been in the Senate for 12 years and is the first senator from North Carolina in 149 years to be chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

The candidates present opposing hopes for the future. Helms has proposed a private system to replace Social Security, a move Hunt said threatens the security of the elderly.

Helms wants to stop forced busing and abortion and permit voluntary prayer in public schools. Hunt supports voluntary prayer but opposes limiting abortion and has focused instead on economic issues.

UNC Sociologist Figures Minorities May Be Hurt By Assistance Programs

GREENSBORO (AP) — Public assistance programs targeted to large, older cities inadvertently may hurt rising minority populations by tying them to areas where blue-collar jobs are declining, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill sociologist says.

In these areas, programs such as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, public housing and health-care programs "are serving as a substitute for a blue-collar jobs economy," said John D. Kasarda, chairman of the sociology department at UNC-CH. "They are bonding distressed people to distressed cities."

Kasarda's research, appearing most recently in the November issue of American Demographics magazine, has shown that minority groups make up a majority of the people in 25 of the nation's larger cities.

His study of 1980 census data looks at the number of blacks, Hispanics and Asians in cities of 100,000 or more. Of the 25 cities, East Los Angeles, Calif., had the largest minority percentage of 96 percent, while Savannah, Ga., was 51 percent minority.

The new figures are difficult to compare with past counts because of differences in how people are classified.

But his research indicates that, from 1970 to 1980, New York's minority population rose from 36 to 48 percent, Chicago's from 41 to 57 percent and Detroit's from 46 to 67 percent.

That poses serious implications when blue-collar job opportunities there are declining, Kasarda said in a recent telephone interview.

At the turn of the century, the nation's northern industrializing cities were centers for blue-collar manufacturing and other entry-level jobs. In recent years, however, many of those jobs have left the cities for suburban and more rural areas, he said.

Cities are transforming from goods-producing centers to information-processing centers, offering white-collar jobs demanding substantial education and skills, Kasarda said.

Minority groups in cities "often lack the education and training necessary to take advantage of the new growth industries," Kasarda said. "There is a mismatch between the demographics and the economy of the cities."

Public assistance programs can keep the disadvantaged in areas of limited opportunity, Kasarda said. He'll be studying this hypothesis further with a grant from the National Science Foundation.

In North Carolina, Greensboro's minority population, including Hispanics, is 34 percent, according to the 1980 census. Charlotte's is 33 percent minority.

3 Counties Felt Mild Quake

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — What felt like a barrage of dynamite blasting turned out to be a mild earthquake that shook parts of Watauga, Ashe and Avery counties.

"I was on a rock, and I thought the dern ground was quivering," said Curtis Isaacs, who was hunting on Rich Mountain near the center of the earthquake Monday. "I never felt thunder shake the ground like that. I thought a stick of dynamite went off — I heard it."

No damage or injuries were reported from the quake, a jolting rumble that rattled lamps, windows and doors for about three seconds. It measured 3.2 on the Richter scale was centered about nine miles north of Boone at about 2:58 p.m., said Susan Nava of the Tennessee Earthquake Information Center at Memphis State University. It was the first earthquake recorded in that area since a magnitude 3.0 tremor rattled Boone June 3, 1981.

"It was large enough to be felt in several counties but not what you'd call a damaging earthquake. It might have rattled a few windows and shook a few doors," said Sharon Everett, graduate research assistant at the Tennessee center.

Waverly Person, the geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey's

National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said tremors are not uncommon in that part of North Carolina. He said most of the state's nearly 100 earthquakes recorded since 1735 have been in the western part of the state, with more than 30 of them occurring within 75 miles of Asheville.

"We had two calls. That was it,"

Abuse Problems Noted

RALEIGH (AP) — A year-long study on child abuse in North Carolina says the state has two "very serious problems" and says efforts aimed at combating the abuse must be improved.

G. Herbert Stout, chairman of the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth, said the first problem is that North Carolina children are being exploited through sexual abuse, pornography and prostitution. He said the second problem is that the extent of the problem is unknown.

"It is estimated that one out of every three girls and one out of every four boys will be sexually victimized as a child," Stout said.

said a spokesman for the Ashe County Sheriff's Department who asked not to be identified. "They don't know it was an earthquake. They thought it was an explosion."

"They just wanted to know what it was," according to a dispatcher for the Watauga County Sheriff's Department. "We've had numerous phone calls, but that's about all we had."

The report recommended that North Carolina's Child Protection Act of 1983 be extended to protect children from "pedophiles" who might use them in child pornography for their own sexual gratification. Another recommendation was to raise the age of children protected under the law from under 16 to under 18 because "age determination of children used in pornography and prostitution is often very difficult for law enforcement officials."

Stout's report also recommended increasing education to show children the difference between good touching and bad touching and photographing of certain parts of their bodies.

Economic Recovery Theme Of Martin's Whistlestop Tour

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin called for a continued economic recovery as he began a whistlestop campaign tour of North Carolina.

Waving a conductor's cap and speaking to a crowd of supporters in Asheville's Depot Street train yard, Martin opened a tour Monday that took him east toward Marion and Morganton, then south to Charlotte. Martin is challenging Democrat Rufus Edmisten.

Martin called for more jobs for the state, especially for the rural counties along the Tennessee and Georgia borders.

"When Ronald Reagan wins and Jim Martin wins, North Carolina wins," Martin said.

Martin once again criticized state Democratic lawmakers for failing to return a $650 million surplus this year to the taxpayers.

"We are the seventh-highest state in the nation in tax burden," Martin said. "If these taxes aren't needed, let's give it back to the people."

Two aluminum dome cars served as Martin's rolling headquarters and also carried local office seekers and Republican supporters.

"If I am elected, I will work to unite North Carolina just as we are one United States," Martin told the cheering supporters. "From the western mountains to the Piedmont to the coast, what helps strengthen one part of the state strengthens all of us."

Local GOP office-seekers who were on hand for the send-off included Bill Hendon, candidate for Congress; Keith Snyder and John E. Stewart Jr., candidates for state Senate.

Martin was introduced to the crowd of about 50 supporters by Asheville Mayor Larry McDevitt, master of ceremonies for the get-together. Martin's wife, Dottie, and son, Bill, were along for the trip. McDevitt pointed out that this is Martin's 12th visit to Asheville since announcing as a candidate for governor.

First stop on the eastern tour was Marion, where some of the office-seekers from this area were to get off to make room for others. The train was then headed for Morganton.

Other stops on Monday's leg of the trip were Hickory, Statesville and Charlotte. The train was loaded with Martin supporters and Republican faithful who made a donation toward the trip.

Edmisten Points To His Own Coattails In Martin Race

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who is running against Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin in the gubernatorial race, says voters should not elect a governor on President Reagan's coattails.

"I've got a few coattails of my own — hundreds of thousands of people who over the 10 years we've helped," he said. "Those coattails extend to the parents whose children could have been afflicted if we had not put 20,000 drug pushers in jail."

Edmisten said Monday that voters' feelings about Reagan shouldn't affect their choice between him and Martin.

"This election is not about whether Ronald Reagan has a pleasant smile," Edmisten told more than 60 people at Kenansville Elementary School. "It is about whether Rufus Edmisten has what it takes to be governor of the state of North Carolina."

Recent polls have shown Reagan leading Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale by an almost 2-to-1 margin in North Carolina.

One North Carolina problem that must be addressed, Edmisten said, involves contract farming, which is when farmers contract with processors to supply a certain quantity of a specific product at a set price.

Edmisten said oversupplies had resulted in some companies failing to honor their contracts, and farmers have suffered losses.

"This is an intolerable situation, but one that has remedies covered by state law," he said.

He said his office will help enforce those laws to prevent further losses, although the primary responsibility for enforcing the contracts lies with the state Department of Agriculture. Edmisten said if elected he would consider extending the law which now covers fruits and vegetables to also cover commodities including pork, poultry and feed grain.

In a prepared statement released by the Edmisten campaign before Monday's rally, Edmisten said his opponent has told the press he could become a lobbyist if he loses the election.

Edmisten said that he would be glad to give Martin that job, and he also attacked the congressman's record.

"Jim Martin, who tries to portray himself as a warm, caring sort of guy in his television commercials, is anything but that," Edmisten said in the prepared statement. "He's devoted his 12 years in Washington to helping the big national special interests, particularly the oil, utilities and chemical industries."

Edmisten repeated a campaign theme that he's helped average working North Carolinians.

"That's the North Carolina way, and maybe if Mr. Martin was from this state and had spent more time here, he would understand that," Edmisten said.

Martin was born in Savannah, Ga., and has lived in Washington for the 12 years he's been in Congress.

Before the rally, Edmisten attended a fund-raising reception at the Country Squire restaurant in Kenansville. More than 150 people attended the event, including U.S. Rep. Charlie Whitley, D-N.C., State Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, state Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, and former gubernatorial candidates D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, Tom Gilmore and state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Registration Totals Are Hard To Figure

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's historic voter-registration figures contain a wealth of information about the state's electorate but not an absolute statement about what voters will do once they get to the polls Nov. 6, officials say.

"It depends on who gets the voters to the polls," Robert W. Spearman, the Democrat who chairs the State Board of Elections, said of the outcome on Nov. 6. "There has been a substantial increase in all categories. (It will depend) on who is the most motivated to vote and the efforts to turn the vote out."

Totals released by the elections board Friday show that voter registration increased in North Carolina 18 percent during the last three years to 77 percent of the voting-age population — or about 3.2 million people.

This followed a massive registration drive over a three-year period that involved political parties, churches, civic groups, out-of-state parties and a change in laws by the General Assembly to make registration easier.

The Republican Party gained enough new voters — 231,650 of the 787,135 — to boost its share of the voting pool to its highest in history, 25.6 percent. "It's much more respectable to be a Republican now than it ever was before," said Merle Black, associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Although the GOP still is outnumbered by the Democratic Party almost 3 to 1 in registration, many of the new registered Republicans are college-age adults.

"The registration of young voters in the Republican Party probably means growth of the Republican Party in the state in the future," said J. Oliver Williams, head of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at N.C. State University in Raleigh.

Immediate results of the Republican gains in registration could be seen in some congressional districts like the 11th District in western North Carolina, where party competition is fierce and "from election to election it seesaws," Williams said.

Republicans gained the majority in two counties, Randolph and Henderson, for the first time in the latest registration, and increased party rolls in other counties.

In Northampton, for instance, Republican registration nearly doubled — from 144 to 266. "We have a lot of registered Democrats who will be voting Republican," said Elections Supervisor Barbara Cocke. "They register Democrat so they can vote on local offices in the primary."

In New Hanover County, the Republican party has been a chief beneficiary of an 11,000-person increase in voter rolls in the past two years.

Deportation

HOUSTON (AP) — A 33-year-old Pakistani faces deportation after being sentenced to five years' probation on his conviction of trying to export tiny vacuum tubes which can be used as triggers for nuclear weapons.

Nazir Ahmed Vaid pleaded guilty Monday to exporting munitions without a State Department license under a plea-bargain agreement calling for dismissal of conspiracy to export munitions and lying to the government.

Republican registration has increased by 36 percent since October 1982, while the number of Democrats on the voter rolls has grown by 19 percent, officials say.

The number of Democrats registered in New Hanover County in 1982 was 33,492, compared with 39,962 this month, or 6,468 new Democrats. The Republican rolls increased from 11,918 in 1982 to 16,299 this month, a net gain of 4,181.

State GOP Chairman David Flaherty said conservative groups registered both Democrats and Republicans.

"I know the Moral Majority has been doing a tremendous job. They've registered Democrats and Republicans," Flaherty said. Even the increases in Democratic rolls, therefore, "bodes well for us this fall," he said.

David Price, chairman of the N.C. Democratic Party, said that with such a push in the last few months, those who wanted to vote Republican had the opportunity to register as Republicans. Those who registered as Democrats probably will vote Democratic, he said.

"Basically, that means there is a lot of interest on both sides," Price said. "There is a lot of activity. I think it's very significant that the process has been opened up this way."

Williams agreed that how people register is "a pretty good indication of how they are going to vote."

Between the May primary and Oct. 8, the registration deadline, a higher percentage of Republicans registered than did Democrats — 16 percent to 6.6 percent.

Nonwhites, most of whom are black, increased their share of the voting pool from about 16 percent to 19 percent during the voter-registration drive. But nonwhites remain outnumbered voters by about 4 to 1.

Though Republicans made the greatest short-term gains in registration numbers, blacks got the larger four-year increase — building their numbers on the voting books more than 61 percent.

Of the 3.2 million registered voters, 69.9 percent are Democrats, 25.6 percent Republican and 4.3 percent unaffiliated. Whites make up 80 percent of registered voters; blacks, nearly 19 percent, and others, including Indians, make up less than 1 percent.

Program Head Named

Cynthia L. Perry has been named executive director of the Pitt County Family Violence Program established this year.

CYNTHIA PERRY.

A task force which has grown into the Family Violence Program was started by representatives of about 30 agencies and groups of Pitt County who have contact with or interest in family violence victims. The agencies, according to Mary Louis, board of director chairperson, saw a need to coordinate services to and follow-up of family violence victims. A needs assessment committee was formed to assess the incidence of family violence in Pitt County. From more than 50 responses, the committee ascertained that family violence victims have need of emergency shelter and other support services.

Funding has come in the form of $3,000 of Mental Health Association-obtained state "pork barrel" funds, $2,000 from the Pitt County Commissioners, and a $7,990 grant from the N.C. Council on the Status of Women's Domestic Violence Project.

Mrs. Perry has been asked to develop and implement a community education component which will inform local citizens about family violence and its impact on individuals and the community and to recruit and train volunteer advocates who will provide direct services to family violence victims.

An elementary education major who graduated from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, Mrs. Perry has served this community in several volunteer capacities and is now treasurer of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County. She and her husband, Allen R. Perry, have two children.

The Family Violence Program, a non-profit organization, has an office in the Coffman Building, 315 Evans Mall. Mrs. Perry is scheduling educational programs for interested groups. Anyone wanting a program or wishing to serve as an advocate may visit the office between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays or call 752-3811.

ECU To Host SLD Thursday

East Carolina University has been selected to host a medical student rescued from Grenada last fall on the occasion of the first annual Student Liberation Day (SLD) to be held Thursday, Oct. 25, the date of the first anniversary of the U.S. military operation in Grenada.

"Student Liberation Day is a commemoration of the courage of the students and servicemen involved in the Grenada rescue," said Jack Abramoff, chairman of the USA Foundation, national coordinating group for SLD.

"ECU was one of 89 campuses nationwide elected to host a student and a discussion of Grenada's impact on American foreign policy," Abramoff added.

The SLD events consist of a nationally broadcast documentary on Grenada on Wednesday evening, Oct. 24, a Thursday morning breakfast with campus and community leaders, and a Thursday afternoon teach-in.

Dennis Kilcoyne of Greenville, a senior political science student, has been chosen ECU's coordinator for the event, which is co-sponsored by the ECU Student Government Association.

The USA Foundation is a non-profit, non-partisan student educational foundation dedicated to free debate on American college campuses and in universities throughout the world.

Lawyer Will Request Separate Spy Trials

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors will seek separate espionage trials for a former FBI counterintelligence agent and two Soviet emigres, probably to be able to use the defendants' statements against one other, a defense lawyer says.

U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner said Monday he would seek to have Richard Miller, 47, the first FBI agent ever charged with espionage, tried separately from Svetlana Ogorodnikov and her estranged husband, Nicolay Ogorodnikov.

Miller, Ms. Ogorodnikov, 34, and Ogorodnikov, 51, pleaded innocent to charges they conspired to pass highly classified state secrets to the Soviet Union. U.S. District Judge David V. Kenyon scheduled a trial Dec. 4.

The three defendants, who were manacled together as they arrived in court, remained in custody without bail.

Bonner also said a court security officer would have to be appointed for the trial, in which secret documents are expected to be introduced as evidence, and that defense attorneys would have to submit to a background check.

He refused to say why the government would seek to split the trial, but Stanley Greenberg, an attorney for Miller, speculated that it might have to do with rules of evidence.

"They may want to use statements made by various defendants against each other, and the rules of evidence would not permit it at a joint and common trial," Greenberg said.

Miller is charged in a 13-count indictment returned Oct. 12 with conspiring with the Ogorodnikovs and a Soviet diplomat to pass secrets in return for $65,000 and a $675 trench coat. The diplomat, Soviet Vice Consul Alexander Grishin in San Francisco, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Miller is alleged to have received the trench coat, but the money apparently never changed hands. The alleged plot took from early August to Oct. 2. The defendants were all arrested Oct. 3.

Miller is alleged to have delivered to the Ogorodnikovs a secret document titled "Reporting Guidance: Foreign Intelligence Information," which detailed how the U.S. government counters foreign espionage.

Third Fire Victim Found

DUNDALK, Md. (AP) — Workers sifting "foot-by-foot" through the rubble of a furniture store today found the body of a third firefighter who died in a raging five-alarm blaze that injured seven others, authorities said.

James Kimbel, 25, had been missing since Monday, when the two-story building collapsed, killing firefighters Henry Rayner Jr., 32, and 38-year-old Walter Bawroski, whose bodies were recovered Monday night.

"It's just a pick-and-go, foot-by-foot process," said Battalion Chief Ralph Nelson.

Police said Monday the firefighters apparently were trapped when the roof of the building collapsed. But Nelson later said investigators were not sure if the roof collapsed or the floor gave way.

The blaze began about 1:30 p.m. at Shiller's Furniture and Appliance Store, apparently sparked by a work crew's cutting torches as they removed a large, metal sign from the roof, authorities said.

Deputy Fire Chief Edward Bartenfelter said the fire was contained about 2½ hours later.

The most seriously injured of the seven firefighters, Stanley Kuklinski, was admitted in fair condition to the burn unit at Francis Scott Key Medical Center in Baltimore. Three firefighters were treated in the emergency room and three had been treated for minor injuries and released. Kathy Schuerholz, the hospital's night nursing supervisor, said Monday night.

The heat from the blaze, which sent flames as high as 200 feet, melted the vinyl siding on houses 75 feet away, forced the evacuation of neighboring homes and blocked traffic for 12 blocks.

All three victims were paid career firefighters and residents of the Dundalk-North Point Village area. Bawroski had 15 years' service with the department, Rayner had four, and Kimbel, whose father once served on the department, had two.

OPEC Leaders Near Agreement On Cuts

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Key OPEC oil ministers appeared headed for initial agreement today on reducing production to defend their prices in the face of price cuts by independents Britain and Norway and OPEC member Nigeria.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' largest producer, told reporters that "there will be no price change" at next week's emergency session of the 13-member cartel.

Yamani made the comment as he emerged from informal talks Monday in which he was joined by ministers from Kuwait, Libya, Venezuela, Algeria, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates to prepare for the full OPEC meeting starting next Monday.

Two non-OPEC producers, Mexico and Egypt, also are attending the preparatory talks. Industry sources said it appeared OPEC wanted to ensure that those two countries respect its price guidelines.

Nigeria cut its chief export blend by $2 to $28 a barrel last week after Norway established a formula for its official price that takes into account lower prices on open markets. The Norwegian move reduced prices for October delivery of Ekofisk blend crude oil, one of the main Norwegian blends, to $28.75 a barrel from $30.10.

Britain cut the price of its main blend by as much as $1.35, to $28.65 a barrel, reflecting downward pressure from the "spot" or free market.

Kamel Hassan Maghur, who resigned as Libya's oil minister on Oct. 11 and now acts as adviser to his country's delegation, said that "the general trend is that we could lower our production to defend the current price."

Maghur said Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya would have to reduce output by 20 percent each to prop up the official OPEC price set at $29 a barrel early last year. OPEC then also fixed an overall production ceiling at 17.5 million barrels a day for its members, or less than 40 percent of the non-Communist world's total output.

Sources at the meeting, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said any lowering of the production ceiling would require unanimous approval of all 13 members next week.

Nigeria was reported by the Kuwaiti news agency as willing to rescind its price cuts if its OPEC-allotted production quota was boosted from 1.3 to 1.5 billion barrels a day.

Oil industry sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said that Iran, locked in a costly war with fellow OPEC member Iraq, also was unlikely to accept a cut in its quota as the country's production has been running below its ceiling during much of the past six months.

Abdel Taher Kandil, Egypt's oil minister who is attending the consultations as an observer, hinted that Egypt had no plans to cut production or pricers.

The Geneva talks marked the first time that Egypt met with OPEC members.

Study Says CIA Touted Neutron Weapons To Foreign Journalists Under Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration used a covert CIA program in 1978 to win favorable treatment of neutron weapons in European news media, a plan which included a plan to pay journalists for such coverage, according to a new Harvard study.

The study written by consultant David Whitman for Harvard's Kennedy School of Government said journalists were also to be encouraged to expose Soviet attempts to halt European deployment, including infiltration of the anti-neutron weapon movement.

By March 1978 the effort, combined with statements of European public officials in favor of the weapon, "had a marked effect on Western press coverage," according to the study.

The Washington Post reported the existence of the study today, quoting an unidentified former top CIA official as saying he did not "recall (the operation) as a major program" but that "placement of stories" had been part of an ongoing effort "to counter Soviet propaganda."

Reached by telephone, Whitman confirmed that the study says the operation contemplated "asking U.S. sympathizers and agents in the European press corps to give more favorable press coverage to the bomb either for money or for free." It remains unclear whether any money actually was paid.

Neutron weapons, mounted on missiles or artillery, became controversial in the late 1970s because they produce twice the deadly radiation of older, tactical nuclear warheads. Proponents said the purpose of the weapon would be to kill massive formations of attacking soldiers, while leaving civilian structures intact.

The study says the CIA program "was prompted by covert and semicovert Soviet infiltration of the anti-nuclear bomb movement in Europe, particularly in the Netherlands."

A protest against neutron weapons in Amsterdam in March 1978 that turned out 50,000 demonstrators was sponsored in part by the Netherlands Communist Party and received "substantial funding from the Soviet Union," the study says.

It says the covert program was to counter the effects of the rally and other Soviet propaganda moves.

In the report a former State Department official, Leslie H. Gelb, is quoted as saying planners

"thought more favorable press coverage might help show the European public that we weren't trying to upset the nuclear balance, that the neutron bomb was a legitimate modernization move, every bit as legitimate as what the Soviets had done in deploying the SS20 (missile)."

The Post quoted an unnamed official involved in the program as saying, however, that Gelb was "the only one who questioned" the use of covert tactics and that he suggested substituting open briefings by U.S. officials.

Carter in April 1978 delayed production of the weapons. Some neutron warheads and shells have been produced under the Reagan administration and are being stored in the United States because NATO nations would not accept them.

Residents Willing To Commute For Jobs

By SUZANNE SPRING
Associated Press Writer

ATHOL, Mass. (AP) — Athol, once a booming factory town, now has an unemployment rate of 8.2 percent. Framingham, 70 miles away, is growing so fast that job openings abound.

So companies in Framingham came here looking for workers for the Christmas rush, and Athol's unemployed, undaunted by the prospect of the long commute, lined up Monday for the chance to earn $4 an hour.

"I've been out of work for three years. I would take anything," said former machine operator Eugene Labor, who joined 400 others in filling out applications. "My benefits are completely exhausted now. If it wasn't for my parents, I'd be out in the streets."

The Framingham businesses, including McDonald's and Burger King, also offered free bus rides to and from work under the program created and sponsored by the state Division of Employment Security.

"The people of Athol are good, hard-working people," said Dee DiTerlizzi, a division representative.

"They want a happy holiday. They want a turkey on the table at Thanksgiving. They want presents under the tree at Christmas."

"I would love to get a job, even for two months, I don't care how far away it is," said 22-year-old Albert Bixby. "It's better than sitting around and doing nothing."

Athol, population 8,700, once produced shoes, tables and tools in its factories. Framingham, west of Boston, has become one of the state's fastest-growing urban areas, with a jobless rate of 2.3 percent and a population of 70,000.

The city's retail merchants turned to Ms. DiTerlizzi when they realized they could not find the nearly 1,000 workers they needed for November and December.

"I decided to try the program with Athol because this is a community that wants to work," she said. "This is the only opportunity for them out of a very glum future."

Framingham employers seeking workers in Athol pronounced the recruitment campaign a success.

"They really want the jobs. Some of them are desperate."

"If I am elected, I will work to unite North Carolina just as we are one United States," Martin told the cheering supporters. "From the western mountains to the Piedmont to the coast, what helps strengthen one part of the state strengthens all of us."

Local GOP office-seekers who were on hand for the send-off included Bill Hendon, candidate for Congress; Keith Snyder and John E. Stewart Jr., candidates for state Senate.

Martin was introduced to the crowd of about 50 supporters by Asheville Mayor Larry McDevitt, master of ceremonies for the get-together. Martin's wife, Dottie, and son, Bill, were along for the trip. McDevitt pointed out that this is Martin's 12th visit to Asheville since announcing as a candidate for governor.

First stop on the eastern tour was Marion, where some of the office-seekers from this area were to get off to make room for others. The train was then headed for Morganton.

Other stops on Monday's leg of the trip were Hickory, Statesville and Charlotte. The train was loaded with Martin supporters and Republican faithful who made a donation toward the trip.

Edmisten Points To His Own Coattails In Martin Race

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who is running against Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin in the gubernatorial race, says voters should not elect a governor on President Reagan's coattails.

"I've got a few coattails of my own — hundreds of thousands of people who over the 10 years we've helped," he said. "Those coattails extend to the parents whose children could have been afflicted if we had not put 20,000 drug pushers in jail."

Edmisten said Monday that voters' feelings about Reagan shouldn't affect their choice between him and Martin.

"This election is not about whether Ronald Reagan has a pleasant smile," Edmisten told more than 60 people at Kenansville Elementary School. "It is about whether Rufus Edmisten has what it takes to be governor of the state of North Carolina."

Recent polls have shown Reagan leading Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale by an almost 2-to-1 margin in North Carolina.

One North Carolina problem that must be addressed, Edmisten said, involves contract farming, which is when farmers contract with processors to supply a certain quantity of a specific product at a set price.

Edmisten said oversupplies had resulted in some companies failing to honor their contracts, and farmers have suffered losses.

"This is an intolerable situation, but one that has remedies covered by state law," he said.

He said his office will help enforce those laws to prevent further losses, although the primary responsibility for enforcing the contracts lies with the state Department of Agriculture.

Edmisten said if elected he would consider extending the law which now covers fruits and vegetables to also cover commodities including pork, poultry and feed grain.

In a prepared statement released by the Edmisten campaign before Monday's rally, Edmisten said his opponent has told the press he could become a lobbyist if he loses the election.

Edmisten said that he would be glad to give Martin that job, and he also attacked the congressman's record.

"Jim Martin, who tries to portray himself as a warm, caring sort of guy in his television commercials, is anything but that," Edmisten said in the prepared statement. "He's devoted his 12 years in Washington to helping the big national special interests, particularly the oil, utilities and chemical industries."

Edmisten repeated a campaign theme that he's helped average working North Carolinians.

"That's the North Carolina way, and maybe if Mr. Martin was from this state and had spent more time here, he would understand that," Edmisten said.

Martin was born in Savannah, Ga., and has lived in Washington for the 12 years he's been in Congress.

Before the rally, Edmisten attended a fund-raising reception at the Country Squire restaurant in Kenansville. More than 150 people attended the event, including U.S. Rep. Charlie Whitley, D-N.C., State Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, state Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, and former gubernatorial candidates D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, Tom Gilmore and state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Registration Totals Are Hard To Figure

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's historic voter-registration figures contain a wealth of information about the state's electorate but not an absolute statement about what voters will do once they get to the polls Nov. 6, officials say.

"It depends on who gets the voters to the polls," Robert W. Spearman, the Democrat who chairs the State Board of Elections, said of the outcome on Nov. 6. "There has been a substantial increase in all categories. (It will depend) on who is the most motivated to vote and the efforts to turn the vote out."

Totals released by the elections board Friday show that voter registration increased in North Carolina 18 percent during the last three years to 77 percent of the voting-age population — or about 3.2 million people.

This followed a massive registration drive over a three-year period that involved political parties, churches, civic groups, out-of-state parties and a change in laws by the General Assembly to make registration easier.

The Republican Party gained enough new voters — 231,650 of the 787,135 — to boost its share of the voting pool to its highest in history, 25.6 percent. "It's much more respectable to be a Republican now than it ever was before," said Merle Black, associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Although the GOP still is outnumbered by the Democratic Party almost 3 to 1 in registration, many of the new registered Republicans are college-age adults.

"The registration of young voters in the Republican Party probably means growth of the Republican Party in the state in the future," said J. Oliver Williams, head of the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at N.C. State University in Raleigh.

Immediate results of the Republican gains in registration could be seen in some congressional districts like the 11th District in western North Carolina, where party competition is fierce and "from election to election it seesaws," Williams said.

Republicans gained the majority in two counties, Randolph and Henderson, for the first time in the latest registration, and increased party rolls in other counties.

In Northampton, for instance, Republican registration nearly doubled — from 144 to 266. "We have a lot of registered Democrats who will be voting Republican," said Elections Supervisor Barbara Coker. "They register Democrat so they can vote on local offices in the primary."

In New Hanover County, the Republican party has been a chief beneficiary of an 11,000-person increase in voter rolls in the past two years.

Republican registration has increased by 36 percent since October 1982, while the number of Democrats on the voter rolls has grown by 19 percent, officials say.

The number of Democrats registered in New Hanover County in 1982 was 33,492, compared with 39,962 this month, or 6,468 new Democrats. The Republican rolls increased from 11,918 in 1982 to 16,299 this month, a net gain of 4,181.

State GOP Chairman David Flaherty said conservative groups registered both Democrats and Republicans.

"I know the Moral Majority has been doing a tremendous job. They've registered Democrats and Republicans," Flaherty said. Even the increases in Democratic rolls, therefore, "bodes well for us this fall," he said.

David Price, chairman of the N.C. Democratic Party, said that with such a push in the last few months, those who wanted to vote Republican had the opportunity to register as Republicans. Those who registered as Democrats probably will vote Democratic, he said.

"Basically, that means there is a lot of interest on both sides," Price said. "There is a lot of activity. I think it's very significant that the process has been opened up this way."

Williams agreed that how people register is "a pretty good indication of how they are going to vote."

Between the May primary and Oct. 8, the registration deadline, a higher percentage of Republicans registered than did Democrats — 16 percent to 6.6 percent.

Nonwhites, most of whom are black, increased their share of the voting pool from about 16 percent to 19 percent during the voter-registration drive. But nonwhites remain outnumbered voters by about 4 to 1.

Though Republicans made the greatest short-term gains in registration numbers, blacks got the larger four-year increase — building their numbers on the voting books more than 61 percent.

Of the 3.2 million registered voters, 69.9 percent are Democrats, 25.6 percent Republican and 4.3 percent unaffiliated. Whites make up 80 percent of registered voters; blacks, nearly 19 percent, and others, including Indians, make up less than 1 percent.

Program Head Named

Cynthia L. Perry has been named executive director of the Pitt County Family Violence Program established this year.

CYNTHIA PERRY

A task force which has grown into the Family Violence Program was started by representatives of about 30 agencies and groups of Pitt County who have contact with or interest in family violence victims. The agencies, according to Mary Louis, board of director chairperson, saw a need to coordinate services to and follow-up of family violence victims. A needs assessment committee was formed to assess the incidence of family violence in Pitt County. From more than 50 responses, the committee ascertained that family violence victims have need of emergency shelter and other support services.

Funding has come in the form of $3,000 of Mental Health Association-obtained state "pork barrel" funds, $2,000 from the Pitt County Commissioners, and a $7,990 grant from the N.C. Council on the Status of Women's Domestic Violence Project.

Mrs. Perry has been asked to develop and implement a community education component which will inform local citizens about family violence and its impact on individuals and the community and to recruit and train volunteer advocates who will provide direct services to family violence victims.

An elementary education major who graduated from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, Mrs. Perry has served this community in several volunteer capacities and is now treasurer of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County. She and her husband, Allen R. Perry, have two children.

The Family Violence Program, a non-profit organization, has an office in the Coffman Building, 315 Evans Mall. Mrs. Perry is scheduling educational programs for interested groups. Anyone wanting a program or wishing to serve as an advocate may visit the office between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays or call 752-3811.

ECU To Host SLD Thursday

East Carolina University has been selected to host a medical student rescued from Grenada last fall on the occasion of the first annual Student Liberation Day (SLD) to be held Thursday, Oct. 25, the date of the first anniversary of the U.S. military operation in Grenada.

"Student Liberation Day is a commemoration of the courage of the students and servicemen involved in the Grenada rescue," said Jack Abramoff, chairman of the USA Foundation, national coordinating group for SLD.

"ECU was one of 89 campuses nationwide elected to host a student and a discussion of Grenada's impact on American foreign policy," Abramoff added.

The SLD events consist of a nationally broadcast documentary on Grenada on Wednesday evening, Oct. 24, a Thursday morning breakfast with campus and community leaders, and a Thursday afternoon teach-in.

Dennis Kilcoyne of Greenville, a senior political science student, has been chosen ECU's coordinator for the event, which is co-sponsored by the ECU Student Government Association.

The USA Foundation is a non-profit, non-partisan student educational foundation dedicated to free debate on American college campuses and in universities throughout the world.

Deportation

HOUSTON (AP) — A 33-year-old Pakistani faces deportation after being sentenced to five years' probation on his conviction of trying to export tiny vacuum tubes which can be used as triggers for nuclear weapons.

Nazir Ahmed Vaid pleaded guilty Monday to exporting munitions without a State Department license under a plea-bargain agreement calling for dismissal of conspiracy to export munitions and lying to the government.

Lawyer Will Request Separate Spy Trials

By RICHARD DEATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors will seek separate espionage trials for a former FBI counterintelligence agent and two Soviet emigres, probably to be able to use the defendants' statements against one other, a defense lawyer says.

U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner said Monday he would seek to have Richard Miller, 47, the first FBI agent ever charged with espionage, tried separately from Svetlana Ogorodnikov and her estranged husband, Nicolay Ogorodnikov.

Miller, Ms. Ogorodnikov, 34, and Ogorodnikov, 51, pleaded innocent to charges they conspired to pass highly classified state secrets to the Soviet Union. U.S. District Judge David V. Kenyon scheduled a trial Dec. 4.

The three defendants, who were manacled together as they arrived in court, remained in custody without bail.

Bonner also said a court security officer would have to be appointed for the trial, in which secret documents are expected to be introduced as evidence, and that defense attorneys would have to submit to a background check.

He refused to say why the government would seek to split the trial, but Stanley Greenberg, an attorney for Miller, speculated that it might have to do with rules of evidence.

"They may want to use statements made by various defendants against each other, and the rules of evidence would not permit it at a joint and common trial," Greenberg said.

Miller is charged in a 13-count indictment returned Oct. 12 with conspiring with the Ogorodnikovs and a Soviet diplomat to pass secrets in return for $65,000 and a $675 trench coat. The diplomat, Soviet Vice Consul Alexander Grishin in San Francisco, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Miller is alleged to have received the trench coat, but the money apparently never changed hands. The alleged plot took from early August to Oct. 2. The defendants were all arrested Oct. 3.

Miller is alleged to have delivered to the Ogorodnikovs a secret document titled "Reporting Guidance: Foreign Intelligence Information," which detailed how the U.S. government counters foreign espionage.

Third Fire Victim Found

DUNDALK, Md. (AP) — Workers sifting "foot-by-foot" through the rubble of a furniture store today found the body of a third firefighter who died in a raging five-alarm blaze that injured seven others, authorities said.

James Kimbel, 25, had been missing since Monday, when the two-story building collapsed, killing firefighters Henry Rayner Jr., 32, and 38-year-old Walter Bawroski, whose bodies were recovered Monday night.

"It's just a pick-and-go, foot-by-foot process," said Battalion Chief Ralph Nelson.

Police said Monday the firefighters apparently were trapped when the roof of the building collapsed. But Nelson later said investigators were not sure if the roof collapsed or the floor gave way.

The blaze began about 1:30 p.m. at Shiller's Furniture and Appliance Store, apparently sparked by a work crew's cutting torches as they removed a large, metal sign from the roof, authorities said.

Deputy Fire Chief Edward Bartenfeller said the fire was contained about 2½ hours later.

The most seriously injured of the seven firefighters, Stanley Kuklinski, was admitted in fair condition to the burn unit at Francis Scott Key Medical Center in Baltimore. Three firefighters were treated in the emergency room and three had been treated for minor injuries and released. Kathy Schuerholz, the hospital's night nursing supervisor, said Monday night.

The heat from the blaze, which sent flames as high as 200 feet, melted the vinyl siding on houses 75 feet away, forced the evacuation of neighboring homes and blocked traffic for 12 blocks.

All three victims were paid career firefighters and residents of the Dundalk-North Point Village area. Bawroski had 15 years' service with the department, Rayner had four, and Kimbel, whose father once served on the department, had two.

OPEC Leaders Near Agreement On Cuts

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Key OPEC oil ministers appeared headed for initial agreement today on reducing production to defend their prices in the face of price cuts by independents Britain and Norway and OPEC member Nigeria.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' largest producer, told reporters that "there will be no price change" at next week's emergency session of the 13-member cartel.

Yamani made the comment as he emerged from informal talks Monday in which he was joined by ministers from Kuwait, Libya, Venezuela, Algeria, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates to prepare for the full OPEC meeting starting next Monday.

Two non-OPEC producers, Mexico and Egypt, also are attending the preparatory talks. Industry sources said it appeared OPEC wanted to ensure that those two countries respect its price guidelines.

Nigeria cut its chief export blend by $2 to $28 a barrel last week after Norway established a formula for its official price that takes into account lower prices on open markets. The Norwegian move reduced prices for October delivery of Ekofisk blend crude oil, one of the main Norwegian blends, to $28.75 a barrel from $30.10.

Britain cut the price of its main blend by as much as $1.35, to $28.65 a barrel, reflecting downward pressure from the "spot" or free market.

Kamel Hassan Maghur, who resigned as Libya's oil minister on Oct. 11 and now acts as adviser to his country's delegation, said that "the general trend is that we could lower our production to defend the current price."

Maghur said Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya would have to reduce output by 20 percent each to prop up the official OPEC price set at $29 a barrel early last year. OPEC then also fixed an overall production ceiling at 17.5 million barrels a day for its members, or less than 40 percent of the non-Communist world's total output.

Sources at the meeting, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said any lowering of the production ceiling would require unanimous approval of all 13 members next week.

Nigeria was reported by the Kuwaiti news agency as willing to rescind its price cuts if its OPEC-allotted production quota was boosted from 1.3 to 1.5 billion barrels a day.

Oil industry sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said that Iran, locked in a costly war with fellow OPEC member Iraq, also was unlikely to accept a cut in its quota as the country's production has been running below its ceiling during much of the past six months.

Abdel Taher Kandil, Egypt's oil minister who is attending the consultations as an observer, hinted that Egypt had no plans to cut production or pricers.

The Geneva talks marked the first time that Egypt met with OPEC members.

Study Says CIA Touted Neutron Weapons To Foreign Journalists Under Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Administration used a covert CIA program in 1978 to win favorable treatment of neutron weapons in European news media, a plan which included a plan to pay journalists for such coverage, according to a new Harvard study.

The study written by consultant David Whitman for Harvard's Kennedy School of Government said journalists were also to be encouraged to expose Soviet attempts to halt European deployment, including infiltration of the anti-neutron weapon movement.

By March 1978 the effort, combined with statements of European public officials in favor of the weapon, "had a marked effect on Western press coverage," according to the study.

The Washington Post reported the existence of the study today, quoting an unidentified former top CIA official as saying he did not "recall (the operation) as a major program" but that "placement of stories" had been part of an ongoing effort "to counter Soviet propaganda."

Reached by telephone, Whitman confirmed that the study says the operation contemplated "asking U.S. sympathizers and agents in the European press corps to give more favorable press coverage to the bomb either for money or for free." It remains unclear whether any money actually was paid.

Neutron weapons, mounted on missiles or artillery, became controversial in the late 1970s because they produce twice the deadly radiation of older, tactical nuclear warheads. Proponents said the purpose of the weapon would be to kill massive formations of attacking soldiers, while leaving civilian structures intact.

The study says the CIA program "was prompted by covert and semicovert Soviet infiltration of the anti-nuclear bomb movement in Europe, particularly in the Netherlands."

A protest against neutron weapons in Amsterdam in March 1978 that turned out 50,000 demonstrators was sponsored in part by the Netherlands Communist Party and received "substantial funding from the Soviet Union," the study says.

It says the covert program was to counter the effects of the rally and other Soviet propaganda moves.

In the report a former State Department official, Leslie H. Gelb, is quoted as saying planners

"thought more favorable press coverage might help show the European public that we weren't trying to upset the nuclear balance, that the neutron bomb was a legitimate modernization move, every bit as legitimate as what the Soviets had done in deploying the SS20 (missile)."

The Post quoted an unnamed official involved in the program as saying, however, that Gelb was "the only one who questioned" the use of covert tactics and that he suggested substituting open briefings by U.S. officials.

Carter in April 1978 delayed production of the weapons. Some neutron warheads and shells have been produced under the Reagan administration and are being stored in the United States because NATO nations would not accept them.

Residents Willing To Commute For Jobs

By SUZANNE SPRING
Associated Press Writer
ATHOL, Mass. (AP) — Athol, once a booming factory town, now has an unemployment rate of 8.2 percent. Framingham, 70 miles away, is growing so fast that job openings abound.

So companies in Framingham came here looking for workers for the Christmas rush, and Athol's unemployed, undaunted by the prospect of the long commute, lined up Monday for the chance to earn $4 an hour.

"I've been out of work for three years. I would take anything," said former machine operator Eugene Labor, who joined 400 others in filling out applications. "My benefits are completely exhausted now. If it wasn't for my parents, I'd be out in the streets."

The Framingham businesses, including McDonald's and Burger King, also offered free bus rides to and from work under the program created and sponsored by the state Division of Employment Security.

"The people of Athol are good, hard-working people," said Dee DiTerlizzi, a division representative.

"They want a happy holiday. They want a turkey on the table at Thanksgiving. They want presents under the tree at Christmas."

"I would love to get a job, even for two months, I don't care how far away it is," said 22-year-old Albert Bixby. "It's better than sitting around and doing nothing."

Athol, population 8,700, once produced shoes, tables and tools in its factories. Framingham, west of Boston, has become one of the state's fastest-growing urban areas, with a jobless rate of 2.3 percent and a population of 70,000.

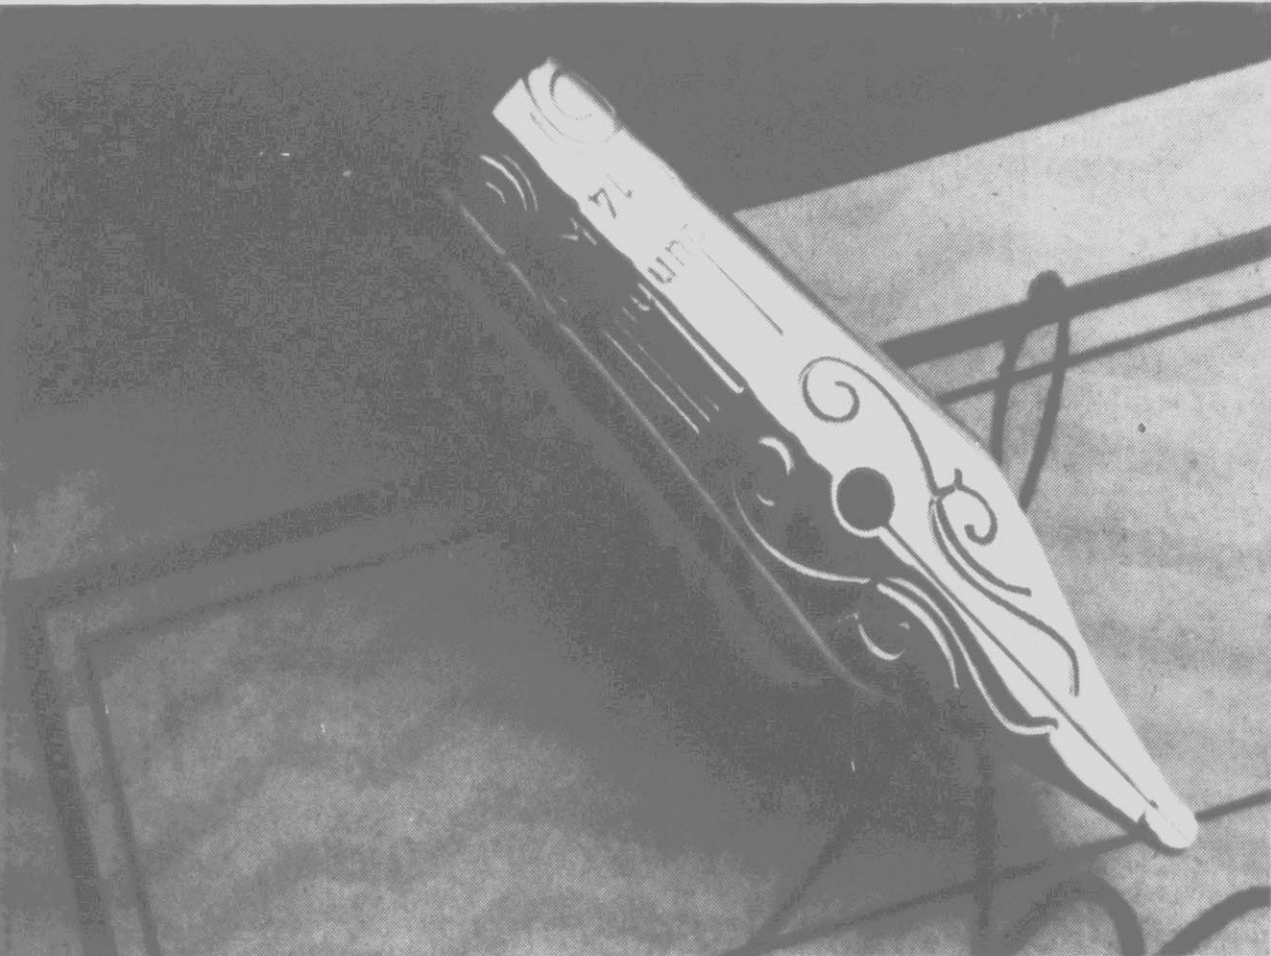

The city's retail merchants turned to Ms. DiTerlizzi when they realized they could not find the nearly 1,000 workers they needed for November and December.

"I decided to try the program with Athol because this is a community that wants to work," she said. "This is the only opportunity for them out of a very glum future."

Framingham employers seeking workers in Athol pronounced the recruitment campaign a success.

"They really want the jobs. Some of them are desperate."

Jubilance Barely Restrained In Reagan Campaign Corner

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An air of barely restrained jubilation buoys President Reagan's campaign as the front-running incumbent moves into the final phase of his carefully paced re-election drive.

Fresh from his final face-to-face confrontation with Democratic challenger Walter Mondale, Reagan said, "We're entering the home stretch of the campaign, and we've set our sights on victory."

That contagious confidence was evident aboard Air Force One, where the president's wife, Nancy Reagan, resurrected a daily ritual of the 1980 campaign, bowling an orange down the aisle of the plane on takeoff.

Then, exhibiting a cheerful openness that had become a rarity in the past four years, she stopped to chat with reporters aboard the presidential aircraft about what she pronounced was her husband's "great" performance in Kansas City.

But when asked if Reagan's showing in his second debate with Mondale had sealed the president's victory in the election still two weeks away, Mrs. Reagan said she, like her husband, is "superstitious" and would not claim a triumph prematurely.

She left the plane at its first stop of the day, Palmdale, Calif., to pursue her own schedule in the state.

But California Gov. George Deukmejian kept up the beat, introducing Reagan to a hangar full of defense contract employees as "the man who struck out the Louisville Slugger last night in Kansas City." Mondale's staff had tagged their champion with the name of the famous baseball bat after the challenger won the first debate in Louisville, Ky.

Reagan, after touring a B-1B bomber plant in Palmdale and attacking Mondale as a candidate of weakness, coasted through campaign stops in San Diego and Medford, Ore., where crowds of supporters cheered his stock lines celebrating the U.S. landing in Grenada one year ago and criticizing Mondale's tax increase proposal.

Sporting a new American flag lapel pin, Reagan continued to hit hard at Mondale, calling his opponent "more ready to be our problem than our president" and predicting a Democratic victory would bring back "torpor, timidity and taxes."

But they were lines dusted off and stitched together from old Reagan speeches, and the campaign tried out no new rhetoric as it coasted through a long but hardly frenetic day.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters the meticulously organized campaign, which has been producing texts of Reagan's speeches well in advance — always with some new rhetorical twist — would dispense with advance copies for now.

Reagan, he said, just wants to toy with his standard stump speech for a while, using the lines he has been polishing for weeks.

In contrast to Mondale's marathon run toward Election Day, Speakes predicted Reagan would be on the road only about half the time between now and Nov. 6.

But the spokesman and other aides denied they were coasting on their lead and insisted Reagan would continue to run, as the president puts it, "one vote behind."

Mondale Portrays President As 'Remote'

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Well behind in the polls, Walter F. Mondale is entering the stretch run of his presidential campaign with a harsh refrain designed to last until Election Day — that Ronald Reagan is "the most detached, most remote, most uninformed president in modern history."

"We cannot permit and will not tolerate a president who does not know what he must know to protect and serve this country," the Democratic nominee said Monday on a day that stretched from sun-up in Kansas City, Mo., to nearly midnight in Youngstown, Ohio.

In between, Mondale addressed crowds in Philadelphia and Paramus, N.J., and spoke to a Liberal Party gathering in New York, with a message that varied little.

The millions of Americans who watched Sunday's campaign debate, he said, "saw a president who cannot discuss any major issue without making a major mistake ... they saw a commander-in-chief who is not commanding and who isn't a chief."

Reagan is the "most detached, most remote, most uninformed president in modern history," Mondale said, attacking his opponent in terms harsher than he used during the televised debate itself.

Mondale's aides insisted during the day that the president's lead is not insurmountable. But if Mondale's aides seemed euphoric on the day after the first campaign debate — the Oct. 7 encounter which many polls showed the Democrat won — they were businesslike on Monday.

Mondale himself said the president performed better in some respects than in the first debate. And unlike the day after the first debate, no one in the traveling party suggested that Reagan's age was a continuing issue.

The Democratic nominee, who trails Reagan by between 9 points and 25 points in the public opinion polls, was campaigning today in Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, states in the industrial Midwest where he must do well if he is to defeat Reagan on Nov. 6.

Even Mondale's own polls show him trailing Reagan by 10 to 12 points nationwide, according to aides. They say the strategy for the final two weeks of the campaign is to hammer away at Reagan as a remote leader who has not mastered the facts he needs to know and will not accept responsibility for his own policies.

Gone is the rhetoric of September, in which Mondale flayed Reagan at every turn for causing record budget deficits and trumpeted a deficit-reduction plan that would raise taxes by $85 billion. Aides concede privately that this approach was doing little for Mondale.

Instead, they decided to attack Reagan on leadership, and say the president made enough unguarded statements during Sunday's 90-minute televised debate to give Mondale the ammunition for a two-week barrage leading to Election Day.

Mondale declared himself the winner of the televised confrontation. He charged Reagan with avoiding the responsibility for the terrorist bombings in Lebanon and for a CIA manual that surfaced suggesting assassination of officials loyal to the leftist government in Nicaragua.

Reagan said Sunday night he knew nothing of the document, but Mondale said: "Mr. President, that's your manual. You bought it and paid for it. It's your secret war, those are your terrorists, and it's your quagmire that we're headed for in that region."

On missiles, Mondale insisted, despite Reagan's heated denial, that the president once said a submarine missile could be recalled after launch.

On arms control, Mondale said, "the president does not know what he's doing."

He recalled that Reagan said he wanted to develop his Star Wars plan for space weaponry, then provide the Soviet Union a demonstration and perhaps even turn the technology over to the Soviet Union.

The Democrat ridiculed the proposal for a demonstration as a "nuclear skeet shoot."

As for sharing the technology with the Soviets, Mondale said: "I wouldn't give any of it to 'em. That's not my idea of being strong or being smart. That's not my idea of the presidency."

8-City California Swing On The Agenda For Ferraro

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is heading into President Reagan's western stronghold two weeks before Election Day in hopes of cracking his grip on the region and spurring the Democratic ticket toward an upset victory.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee was leaving her New York home today for an appearance in Little Rock, Ark., before flying on to California where she will campaign in at least eight cities through Thursday.

"I don't want anyone for one minute to think that we're not going to win this election, because we are," Ms. Ferraro told a meeting of Baptist ministers Monday in the Harlem section of New York.

However, she acknowledged that her running mate, Walter F. Mondale, still trails Reagan and that it will take a big turnout of traditional Democratic voters for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket to be successful.

"If only 50 percent of the working people in this country vote for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket, we lose. It's as simple as that," she told a gathering of about 700 union supporters in the Queens district she has represented in the House for three terms.

"This election is not an election about two personalities. It's not even an election about two parties. It's a referendum on all the things that I've just spoken to you about."

She told her audience, "If you go into that (voting) booth remember that when you pull the lever, if you're voting for the continuation of the covert war in Nicaragua, then you'll vote for Ronald Reagan. But if you want to end that war, you'll vote for Fritz Mondale."

She added that voters who care about the environment, federal budget deficits and the economy will vote for Mondale.

"If you don't care about those things, then vote for Ronald Reagan," Ms. Ferraro said.

In Harlem, Ms. Ferraro said

Reagan administration cuts in programs that affect women, children, elderly and the poor "have been an absolute disaster for black Americans."

She added, "Blacks and women and disadvantaged Americans have only themselves to blame if they stay home and let Ronald Reagan be president again."

Campaign strategists said part of Ms. Ferraro's effort in the next two weeks will be aimed at getting out the vote among Democratic constituencies such as labor and minorities.

"Certainly we're going to try to motivate our supporters to go out and vote," said John Sasso, Ms. Ferraro's campaign manager.

Last week, Ms. Ferraro was in Los Angeles and Sacramento and now she is spending all or part of at least three of the remaining 14 days before the election in California.

"We feel we can win California," Sasso said, adding, "If we can win California, Pennsylvania and New York, we can win this election."

Bush Backs Off From Earlier CIA Warfare Manual Claim

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Vice President George Bush, after making an appeal to "get the facts" before forming conclusions, is retreating from his assertion that a CIA warfare manual was "given out" by a magazine critical of the administration.

Bush, on a two-day campaign swing through farm-belt states, first asserted on Monday that the controversial manual had been released by Counterspy Magazine. But he conceded later in the day that he had "misstated" the facts.

"I don't know how it got out," Bush said.

The flap over the CIA manual dogged the vice president through a day of campaigning Monday in Missouri, Iowa and Minnesota.

Bush today planned to visit a farm on the outskirts of Minneapolis, to with business leaders in Green Bay, Wis., and to attend a rally in Kalamazoo, Mich., before returning to Washington.

In an interview with KMOX-TV of St. Louis, Bush said flatly early Monday that the CIA manual on psychological warfare was made public by the magazine, a critic of U.S. intelligence efforts.

The manual, which has become an issue in the presidential campaign, advises Nicaraguan rebels on "the selective use of violence" to "neutralize" government officials.

Bush sharply criticized the magazine and then declared: "... This has turned me off. So let's just get the facts before asking the American people to jump to conclusions" about the preparation and dissemination of the manual.

However, later in the day, in Des Moines, Iowa, Bush press secretary Peter Teeley told reporters his boss but to an earlier document prepared by the Defense Intelligence Agency.

"I was referring to a July 16, 1982, DIA document that was put out by Counterspy on September 1983 in Washington, D.C., at a briefing," Teeley, in response to press inquiries, quoted Bush as saying.

Bush himself conceded his mistake in an interview here in Bloomington with the St. Paul Pioneer Press & Dispatch.

"I misstated this morning," Bush said. "Counterspy ... released a classified DIA report, not this one."

President Reagan said Sunday night during his debate with Democratic opponent Walter F. Mondale that the psychological warfare manual was edited twice before it was to be printed, but that an unedited version "somehow ... got out down there." He said whoever was responsible for the edited material actually appearing would be fired.

A reputation founded on no hidden costs.

The Wilkerson family, owners of Pinewood Memorial Park, has always felt that there was something particularly wrong with gimmicks or hidden costs in either the funeral home or cemetery business.

But, believe it or not, everyday people all over this country are being fooled by undisclosed or unmentioned costs and "special deals" both in pre-arranged funerals and in purchasing grave sites.

And the reason is simple. Since these subjects aren't especially pleasant, people remain uninformed. So it pays to learn a little about what you're doing before you buy.

Ways costs are sometimes hidden. Even with preselected and pre-paid grave sites, cemeteries usually charge a fee to "open" and "close" a grave site when the time comes. Some charge extra for weekend and holidays. So be sure you know how much these costs will be before you buy. Or better yet, deal with Pinewood Memorial Park, where all costs are disclosed and discussed in consultation with you.

Another way costs are sometimes hidden by others is by charging for marker installation. For example, suppose you bought a double bronze marker that is stored until the need arises. Be sure you know if there will be additional costs for installation and how much they will be. Your marker may require a base—is it extra? Surprise costs in a time of grief can be tragic.

Above all, beware of "package" deals and be careful. They are not always what they seem to be.

Find out about costs from professionals. With a reputation of 26 years hinging on a low key approach and full disclosure of all costs especially for 'pre-need' purchases, S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, owners and managers of Pinewood Memorial Park would like to tell you more.

We're certain that when all is said and done and the totals are in, you'll find Pinewood costs less, not more than unknown quantities.

So let us help you become more informed. We'll respect your decision, no matter what. But let us serve your needs.

They Eye Time When Women Leaders Are Not A Novelty

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Despite having a queen and a woman prime minister, Britain's female pacesetters say there's a long way to go before women at the top are no longer a novelty.

The subject was "How to be First" when 500 leading British women — minus Queen Elizabeth II and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher — gathered Monday for the 29th annual "Women of the Year" luncheon at the Savoy Hotel.

But there was loud applause when the country's first woman union leader said she looked forward to the day when there were so many women in top jobs that there wasn't any need for a luncheon.

"The fact that we're having lunch today proves that it is still regarded as special for women to be successful," said Brenda Dean, president and general secretary-elect of the Society of Graphical and Allied Trades, Britain's largest print union.

The guest list included the first female Lord Mayor of London, Dame Mary Donaldson, eminent historian Lady Antonia Fraser, Olympic javelin gold medalist Tessa Sanderson, as well as women chief executives, scientists, stock brokers, artists and politicians.

Recounting some of the pitfalls of being a pioneer at the top, Dame Mary recalled how an elderly bishop insisted on the "ladies first" rule entering a church pew — even though the Lord Mayor always entered last. The result was a standoff.

"There have been problems, the biggest one being that whatever I did was setting a precedent for any woman who might follow me," said the first woman in more than 800 years elected to the largely ceremonial post of running the City of London financial district.

"My biggest failure has been not to persuade any (other woman) to do so."

Said Lady Antonia Fraser: "I grew up thinking that if there is a second sex — which I don't for a minute admit — it isn't women... I think it's optimism and determination that got me where I am."

Soviet cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova, the first woman in space who was a special international guest, said: "What is important is that many women in my country might have been in my place."

Recalling her 1963 flight in Vostok-6, Miss Tereshkova said: "I was lucky to be the first woman who saw our planet from space. It is imperative for all living beings on this beautiful planet to treat it kindly, not to permit the flames of war to engulf our planet."

Miss Dean, who started as a typist in the printing industry, said: "Women have got to become much more involved in decision-making in numbers. Although we're there, we don't have our roots bedded-in."

She said British girls are not told "to challenge the levels of their abilities" and that this is reflected in the job market where the average adult woman in a non-manual job earns 124.30 pounds ($147.92) against 209 pounds ($249) for the average man.

Miss Dean was strongly applauded when she suggested that every woman in the audience help promote a young woman with potential.

Among the nobility in the audience were the queen's lady-in-waiting, Lady Susan Hussey, and the Duchess of Kent, who is married to the queen's cousin.

Tennis star Virginia Wade, the only woman on the committee that runs the Wimbledon championships, said: "I think women in Britain are more liberated than in the United States, but I don't think the average woman has great expectations. I don't think they expect great success."

"I don't think there's such a strong 'macho' feeling here. I think if you're a strong, successful woman, men value your views and accept you. I think English men still have that chivalrous attitude," she said.

The annual luncheons were initiated by author and broadcaster Lady Lothian. This year's luncheon raised $27,370 for the Greater London Fund for the Blind.

Tax Deduction For Church Contribution Ruled Out

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution's guarantee of religious freedom does not include the right to a tax deduction for a contribution to a church, the U.S. Tax Court has ruled.

In the second major case in a month affecting the Church of Scientology, the court held that three members could not deduct payments to the church because they received benefits in return.

Upholding an Internal Revenue Service ruling against the members, the court said the IRS "is not precluding... (them) from engaging in constitutionally protected activities... (They) may practice their beliefs; they just will not be subsidized for them."

Katherine Jean Graham of Honolulu, Richard M. Hermann of

Los Angeles, and David Forbes Maynard of Rialto, Calif., had made payments to the Church of Scientology and, in return, received or expected to receive counseling and training in ridding the mind of irrational behavior.

When the members claimed tax deductions for their payments to the church, the IRS ruled there was no deductible charitable contribution because the payments purchased the services.

General Motors Facing Heavy Losses, Layoffs In Strike

By EDWARD MILLER
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The strike against General Motors Corp. by the auto giant's Canadian workers could cost the company $285 million by early November and push the number of layoffs in the United States past the 17,470 mark, officials say.

The 36,000 workers at General Motors Canada Ltd. walked out Wednesday rather than accept labor contract terms similar to those ratified by their U.S. counterparts. Thirteen plants, including three assembly operations, closed.

The layoffs of 17,470 U.S. autoworkers were announced Monday, although more than 13,000 workers knew by the end of last week that they wouldn't be working.

In Ypsilanti, 1,900 workers at GM's Willow Run assembly plant got the word early. Another 2,300 showed up only to be sent home when supplies ran out.

"They just didn't have the parts and were sent home before the shift ended," said GM spokesman John Mueller. "Obviously, there will be more like this. It's hard to say one day to the next where the next ones will come."

GM will have lost $30 million to $35 million by tonight because of the Canadian strike, said Gary Glaser, auto industry analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. Inc. in New York. He said the walkout could cost the automaker $80 million to $90 million next week and $150 million to $160 million the week after, for a three-week total of up to $285 million.

At the giant Buick works in Flint, spokesman William Schiffel said GM was trying to squeeze out another few days of big-car production before closing the assembly lines.

"We're OK on the Regal through Friday," Schiffel said. "We've got the LeSabre through Thursday."

Those operations also turn out the Chevrolet Caprice-Impala and the Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

The U.S. auto industry's adoption of kanban, the Japanese method of just-in-time delivery of parts to the factory floor, has quickened the impact of the strike at GM.

The General Motors contract in the United States, covering 350,000 workers, was weighted toward job security. The Canadian UAW leaders want more wages and a return to guaranteed annual raises, which the U.S. contract doesn't contain.

"We're really waiting for GM to make some kind of a move," Robert White, the head of the UAW in Canada, said in Toronto. "We're a little discouraged, but responsibility demands that we stay at it."

Paulette Charbonneau, spokeswoman for GM and chief negotiator Rod Andrew, said there was "no indication of progress. Progress is really slow."

The UAW said the U.S. contract would provide nearly $12,000 more for the average worker over three years.

However, most of that is accomplished through lump-sum payments, profit-sharing and cost of living adjustments. Wages would go up 15 cents an hour to $12.87.

The Canadians say they deserve larger base wages, since their government picks up the tab for health care and the Canadian dollar is worth one-fourth less than the U.S. dollar.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said in a news conference Monday at Detroit Metropolitan Airport that the entire American economy could be damaged if the Canadian strike is prolonged.

Civilian Ousted After Air Jump

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A Chicago man says he was ordered to leave a U.S. research base after making what he believes was the first civilian parachute jump in the Antarctic, a New Zealand news agency reports.

Tom Curran, 32, said Monday night he was ordered to leave the U.S. research facility at McMurdo base within minutes of a smooth parachute landing Saturday near the Antarctic station, according to the New Zealand Press Association.

Curran said he had arrived at McMurdo five days earlier on a six-month contract as part of an American research program run by the National Science Foundation.

U.S. Navy officials were angry at Curran for making the jump off a 900-foot ledge near the base and put him on a flight for New Zealand, he said.

"When I landed they told me I should have asked permission," he was quoted as saying.

"I don't think I was being irresponsible. I've been parachuting for 12 years and made 800 jumps. I guess it came as a kind of shock when they fired me, but I was getting tired of shoveling snow."

conclude that the administration, including General Ver, could not be held in any way responsible for the criminal plot," her report says.

Although parts of Ver's testimony to the board "can always be challenged as untrue, ... doubt as to his veracity, if any, will not justify a finding that he was among the plotters," the report said.

Ver also could not be implicated under the concept of "command responsibility" because Custodio had ultimate responsibility for the troops, the report said.

The report names only Custodio, 49, Sgts. Claro Lat, Arnulfo de Mesa, Filomeno Miranda and Armando dela Cruz, and Constables 1st Class Rogelio Moreno and Mario Lazaga as part of the plot. No motive is suggested. The six soldiers under Custodio's command who are named in the report denied responsibility for the assassination when they testified before the board.

Mrs. Agra, a 69-year-old former appeals court judge, distributed copies of the report at a public meeting where members of an audience of about 200 people booed her for issuing a report separate from fellow panel members.

The government claim that Galman shot Aquino "has to be rejected," her report says, because evidence shows Aquino was shot on the bottom steps of a stairway where Galman could not have reached him. Galman was shot to death by soldiers after Aquino's killing, government officials have said.

"One of the military group on the service stairway was the triggerman," the report says.

Aquino, a former senator, was killed as military police escorted him from the jailer that brought him back from three years of self-imposed exile in the United States.

Asked how he felt about the Agra report, Marcos said, "I have no reaction to it. I'm going to transmit it for immediate trial."

'Cheap Shots' Anger Dickerson

ATLANTA (AP) — Eric Dickerson was fuming.

"They really hacked me off. They have no class," the Los Angeles running back said of the Atlanta Falcons' defenders after helping the Rams to a 24-10 National Football League victory Monday night in a nationally televised contest.

Dickerson, who ran for 142 yards on 25 carries, including a 10-yard touchdown run, charged the Falcons with hitting late on numerous occasions and was particularly incensed at Atlanta defensive back Tom Pridemore, for an alleged tardy hit on only his second carry of the night.

"It was No. 27, I don't know his name. I think he wanted to do a head stand or a hand stand on my back after I had been down what seemed like five minutes," he said. "It was right there on the sideline and a referee was right there and said he didn't see it. I think somebody needs glasses."

He said that wasn't the only cheap shot, but "that's the way they play. I guess that's what the coaches down in Atlanta teach them."

"I'm not saying it's dirty, but I don't think it's real good football. If they want to play that way, they ought to go to Russia," said Dickerson.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pound speedster, however, didn't let it bother him in his performance, scoring the Rams' first touchdown on his 10-yard sweep after only 1:03 of the second quarter before letting Henry Ellard do the rest.

Ellard, the NFL's leading punt returner, who helped set up Dickerson's score with a 29-yard punt return, caught a 9-yard TD pass from quarterback Jeff Kemp only 1:08 later, then closed out the 21-point second period with an explosive 69-yard score on a punt return with 39 seconds left before intermission.

Mike Lansford closed out the Rams' scoring with an 18-yard field goal in the fourth period. The Falcons, who had beaten Los Angeles two weeks ago 30-28, could manage only a 39-yard field goal from Mick Luckhurst in the second quarter and scored in the closing minute on an 18-yard pass from Steve Bartkowski to Stacey Bailey.

Ellard, a second-year player from Fresno State, who suffered a bruised thigh and sat out the second half, said his punt return TD "wasn't the end of the game" for the Falcons "but, it probably was a big let-down."

In addition to the offensive performances by Dickerson and Ellard, Rams' Coach John Robinson said the key difference from the loss two weeks ago was the defense "which just played better."

"That's two weeks in a row that we've basically kept a team from scoring until the game was out of reach," said Robinson. The Rams defeated New Orleans 28-10 a week ago and now have won four of five games for a 5-3 record.

The Falcons, whose offense has been missing the last two games, losing a 19-7 decision to the New York Giants a week ago, managed only 217 yards against the Rams, 73 in the second half, and dropped to 3-5.

"We've got to start thinking about stringing some wins together," said Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who hit on 20 of 31 passes for only 144 yards. "We're not going to have many friends until we do."

Most of the crowd of 52,861 left early in the final period after booing the home team on several occasions. The Falcons managed only 11 first downs.

Team owner Rankin Smith had criticized the team after the Giants' game for its performance and Bartkowski alluded to it after the game.

"I saw a lot of effort out there, even though it wasn't reflected in the score. We need to find a way to correct the things that are breaking us down," he said.

"There may be a lack of commitment — a commitment to each other. But I don't want to elaborate on that. I've done put my foot in my mouth, so I'll just leave it at that," said Bartkowski.

Huskies Avoid Pitfall To Hold First In Wire Polls

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Washington, Oklahoma and Texas had close calls over the weekend but held on to the top three spots in The Associated Press college football poll while South Carolina cracked the Top Ten for the first time in its history.

Boston College, Southern Methodist and Kentucky all suffered their first setbacks of the season and dropped in today's rankings. BC and SMU, Nos. 4 and 6 last week, slipped to 11th and 14th, respectively, while Kentucky's 36-10 loss to LSU cost the Wildcats a Top Twenty ranking.

Washington, which became the No. 1 team last week, was hard-pressed to beat Oregon 17-10. The Huskies, who managed only 109 yards in offense, received 45 of 60 first-place votes and 1,161 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska is the only team to be ranked No. 1 for more than two weeks this season. The Cornhuskers held the top spot for three weeks.

Oklahoma, which trailed Washington 1,135-1,072 a week ago, closed the gap, although the Sooners needed a field goal and touchdown in the final period to turn back Iowa State 12-10. They received 7½ first-place votes compared to 10½ last week but totaled 1,121½ points.

Texas blew most of a 21-point lead and held on to defeat Arkansas 24-18 when time ran out with the losers on the 3-yard line. The Longhorns received 3½ first-place ballots and 1,096½ points.

Nebraska, a 24-7 winner over Colorado, moved up from fifth place to fourth with 980 points while Brigham Young jumped from seventh to fifth with three first-place votes and 926 points after downing Air Force 30-25. Ohio State rose from eighth to sixth with 842 points by defeating Michigan State 23-20.

The other first-place ballot went to LSU, which clobbered Kentucky and vaulted from 10th to seventh with 829 points. Miami climbed from ninth to eighth with 752 points by downing Pitt 27-7.

South Carolina made the Top Ten for the first time by rallying to beat Notre Dame 36-32. The Gamecocks, whose 6-0 start is their best ever and

Tyson Takes First Place

Martha Tyson of 116 Martha's Lane, Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Tyson correctly picked the winners in 28 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's Daily Reflector contest pages. Her victory, however, came on the basis of her point total guess. Her guess of 83 points was closest to the actual total of 97 scored in Georgia's 62-35 win over Vanderbilt.

Second place went to Pete Carraway of 1605 Beaumont Dr., Greenville. He also picked the winners in 28 of the 32 games, but was further off in his point total guess with a guess of 79.

The next contest in the series appears on the following pages.

Brigham Young Moves To Top In Computer Rankings

There is a new leader on the Daily Reflector Computer Rankings this week as Brigham Young moves to the top of the charts.

Miami, Fla., which had led throughout the first few weeks of the rankings has dropped to fourth place.

BYU, currently 7-0 on the season, has amassed 240 points so far this season on the computer rankings. BYU receives six points each time it wins a game, and an additional four points are awarded for each game won by a team BYU has defeated. An additional two points are awarded to BYU for each game a team beaten by a BYU victim wins to make a three-tiered point award system.

The computer rankings thus rewards a team for success against strength of schedule.

Ohio State (6-1) and AP and UPI poll leader Washington (7-0) are tied for second place close behind with a 232 total. Miami (7-2) drops to fourth place with 226 points, while Nebraska (6-1) is close behind with 224.

Louisiana State (5-0-1) is also close with 219, with Penn State (5-2) close behind with 218.

South Carolina, the opponent for East Carolina this weekend, is ranked 19th this week with 152 points. The Gamecocks are 6-0 at this point of the season.

The rankings system was programmed and is operated by Barry Adams of Greenville.

The top twenty for this week:

1. Brigham Young (7-0)	240

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Tide Ebbs Now In Fateful Fourth Quarter Of Games

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — During Bear Bryant's long reign as the Alabama football coach, his players would raise four fingers after three quarters of play, signifying that the final quarter was theirs.

It usually was.

Rarely did the Crimson Tide blow a lead as the final 15 minutes ticked off and many times Bryant's teams used that period to rally for victory.

Now, Tide opponents can hardly wait until the fourth quarter, a deadly quarter-hour for this year's 2-5 team.

Alabama had Boston College down 31-14 in the third period but blew the game. Georgia Tech jumped to a 16-0 lead and the Tide could manage only six points in the third period. Vanderbilt outscored Alabama 14-8 in the final period for its victory. And on Saturday Tennessee outscored Alabama 18-3 in the last period to overcome a 24-10 lead to win.

Alabama's only victories came against lowly Southwestern Louisiana and nationally ranked Penn State. In the Penn State game, Alabama did play well for four periods and won on two second-half field goals.

Alabama is at its lowest ebb since 1957, the year before Bryant, when it went 2-7-1.

The loss to Tennessee put the Tide, with an 0-3 Southeastern Conference mark, at the bottom of the league in which it won 13 titles in Bryant's 25 years.

The Tide still faces Mississippi State, Louisiana State, Cincinnati and Auburn and a loss to either would give it its first losing season since 1957. LSU and Auburn both are nationally ranked.

So, Alabama faces the bleak and highly likely prospect of not going to a bowl, something that has not happened in 25 seasons.

Since Ray Perkins took over from Bryant prior to the 1983 season, Alabama is 10-9 and 4-5 in SEC.

"Alabama hasn't given up," wrote Sports Editor Billy Mitchell of The Tuscaloosa News. "And it's unlikely the Tide will become unraveled by an unfavorable record."

Wrote Sports Editor Phillip Marshall of The Montgomery Advertiser: "With a 2-5 record, the time has come to build for next year and the years after. What it is not time to do is start talking about firing the coach."

"He inherited a situation at Alabama that was worse than he or anyone else realized. The slide didn't start under Perkins. It started in Bear Bryant's last season when the Tide lost four games."

A Birmingham News sportswriter, Chuck Finder, said that five losses in seven games "is a little difficult to swallow for some people 'round here. Especially for a team that's had but eight subpar seasons in its 89-year history."

Cavs Talk Bowl Bid

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — With the Virginia Cavaliers off to their best start since 1951, everyone here is talking of a possible football bowl bid — everyone, that is, except the players and the coach.

"That kind of talk is no good at this time of year, and it's certainly no good for us," coach George Welsh said Monday.

The Cavaliers are 5-1-1 overall and 2-0-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference after crushing Wake Forest 28-9 Saturday. They hold undisputed possession of first place in the ACC and have not lost a contest since dropping the season opener 55-0 to Clemson.

But Welsh and his players remember what happened a year ago, when the team dropped three of its last four games after racing out to a 5-2 start.

"I'm not going to talk about bowl games, and I don't want to hear anyone else talking about them," said Howard Petty, the Cavalier tailback who rushed for 133 yards against Wake Forest.

"That's what killed us last year. It won't be easy, but we've got to put it out of our minds," Petty said. "We said we weren't going to think about it last year, but obviously we did. This year, I think we'll be all right. I think the fact that we're a better team and a more mature team ought to help us a lot."

Virginia has the week off before traveling to Morgantown, W.Va., next week to face the nationally ranked West Virginia Mountaineers.

"Take it from me. This open date is coming at a great time," said tailback Barry Word, who gained 140 yards and scored twice against

Wake Forest. "A week away from football is exactly what we need."

"The last three or four games have taken a lot out of us," Word said. "If we had to play another game this weekend, I think we'd find it awfully tough to approach it with any kind of emotion at all."

Strange Meeting In 'An Englishman Abroad'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — What happens when you run into a notorious British spy and defector in a Moscow theater?

In the case of actress Coral Browne, who was traveling in the Soviet Union on a British cultural exchange program, and Guy Burgess, a principal player in one of the Cold War's most disturbing scandals, events took a peculiar turn.

As recounted in "An Englishman Abroad," Burgess stumbled into Miss Browne's dressing room in 1958. He was drunk, and he threw up in her lavatory. Nevertheless, he was charming and later sent a note asking her to come to his apartment and bring a tape measure.

The clothes Burgess had brought with him when he defected were threadbare, and the proper Englishman wasn't about to buy any baggy Russian suits. He wanted Miss Browne to take his measurements back to his Savile Row tailor.

Miss Browne, now married to Vincent Price, plays herself and Alan Bates plays Burgess. The program will be seen first on the Arts & Entertainment network Tuesday, Oct. 30, and on public television Friday, Nov. 2.

The play resulted from a brief chat Miss Browne had with playwright Alan Bennett. John Schlesinger directed the drama, which won nine BAFTA's, the English equivalent of the Emmy.

"I didn't wish to stick my neck out because it was dangerous," said Miss Browne. "It wouldn't do to be buying clothes for a spy. That's why I kept quiet about it for so many years."

"The clothes were paid for by the Royal Bank of Canada. Mr. Burgess was very well off. He was allowed to buy magazines, books, food and the like on the outside."

Miss Browne bought almost a complete wardrobe for Burgess, and nary an eyebrow was raised by the clerks. Except at the pajama shop, where the clerk refused outright to let a defector and spy sleep in his store's silk pajamas.

She said Burgess "sent me a check for six pounds to take my then-husband to dinner. I had no intention of trying to cash a check from Guy Burgess, even for six pounds."

"An Englishman Abroad" is a charming little play and offers an interesting insight into Burgess' vagabond existence. It's probably the kind of thing, however, that will be more appreciated by the English than Americans—if you have to ask who Guy Burgess was, the drama loses something. Still, it's a witty and diverting show, somewhat like strolling down the street and peeking into windows and overhearing snatches of conversation.

"You think of spies getting a reward," Miss Browne said. "But Guy Burgess lived in a tenement. He had been a man who lived grandly. The steps up to his apartment were crumbling. It was very poor inside his apartment."

"I think part of his deal was to have a man to live with. He was an electrician from the theater. I couldn't wait to leave. Guy Burgess' teeth didn't fit. He couldn't eat his lunch. And he couldn't leave his apartment until he got a telephone call."

Miss Browne said she found it difficult playing herself. "You know who you are," she said. "You read the words—is this really me? Do I sound like that? It was very difficult to play myself."

She said she finally stopped corresponding with Burgess. "I could see myself ordering clothes for the rest of my life," said the Australian-born actress. "I only did it because I felt sorry for him."

Miss Browne will also be seen playing Alice in Wonderland at the age of 80 in the movie "Dream Child." Muppets creator Jim Henson provides the animals and at the end of her life Alice relives the Mad Hatter's tea party.

"It took me 2 1/2 hours every day to get into the makeup to make me look 80," she said. Miss Browne at 71 has the smooth skin of a woman half her age and says that her 95-year-old mother is the same way.

Alan Bates Is Portraying Spy Roles In Film For Television And On Stage

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's ironic that actor Alan Bates is in town during a major spy scandal, the arrest of an FBI agent on allegations of providing information to the Soviet Union.

Bates, whose movie roles have ranged from the sympathetic boyfriend in "An Unmarried Woman" to the manipulative manager in "The Rose," is currently playing two real-life spies, one on stage and one in a film for television.

In John Osborne's "A Patriot for Me," at the Ahmanson Theater of the Los Angeles Music Center, he portrays Alfred Redl, a homosexual Austrian soldier who was blackmailed into becoming a double agent for the Russians.

other is a very suppressed man who is blackmailed into being a spy," said Bates.

The choice of roles was coincidental, and Bates prepared for each part separately. "You can't compare them. They're just great roles."

Throughout his career, the actor has preferred to tackle challenging characters.

"I suppose I have turned down a lot of parts, mostly because I couldn't connect in any way," he said. "I look for some kind of genuine response in myself."

"I think if you go blind into something you're much more likely to get lost. There must be one strand that you can catch."

Bates has purposely avoided stereotyping in making such films as "Women in Love," "The Go-Between," "Zorba The Greek" and "Georgy Girl."

"I've always tried to make everything different," he explained. "I've always tried to strike a new note, so I've always looked for something different from any image I've had."

Bates has worked in television several times, primarily in adaptations. "The Mayor of Casterbridge," a miniseries based on the Thomas Hardy novel, was shown on PBS.

What parts would he like to play that he already hasn't done?

"I've always wanted to do a musical," Bates admitted. "I take singing lessons because I find it gives you a real sense of your voice. I'd love to have a go."

He's also intrigued by the idea of directing, "but I love to act and I've never really wanted to stop. I'll do it someday."

A retrospective of Bates' films is screening in nearby Santa Monica during October and November.

"It's a compliment, I guess," said Bates, who confirmed that he's been acting for 30 years but added with a smile, "beginning very young, of course."

"I can't assess my work at all," he said. He does sometimes watch his films on television. "I'm intrigued objectively, whether what you thought you were doing has come across."

Party Was A Little Late

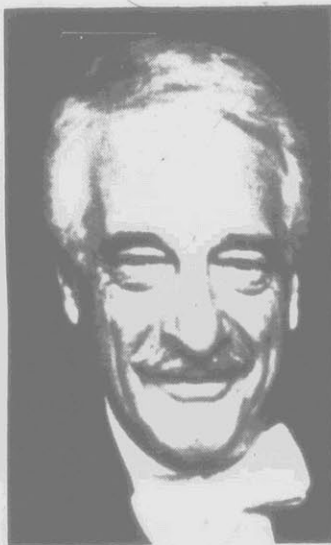

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Victor Borge turned 75 on Jan. 9, but the musician and comedian didn't miss a beat when his hometown symphony orchestra threw him a birthday party nine months later.

Borge arrived at the local high school Sunday in a Rolls Royce festooned with ribbons and balloons, accompanied by a motorcade and a drum and bugle corps.

Inside, townsfolk sang along when the orchestra played "Happy Birthday," and the Danish-born entertainer told them Greenwich seemed like "the center of the world."

Orchestra president Mary J. Radcliffe said she didn't know his birthday was in January until the summer, but went ahead with the festivities anyway.

VICTOR BORGE

Wyatt Earp In China?

PEKING (AP) — Actor Hugh O'Brien, who played the gun-slinging marshal Wyatt Earp, said Monday that China should purchase the television series to spice up its state-run programming.

"I think it would be terrific," said the 59-year-old actor, who is on a three-week tour of China. "It has some history, some informative value. Each of our shows also has a moral, a lesson."

O'Brien suggested his Wyatt Earp series, which includes more than 200 shows, would interest the Chinese because it portrays a turbulent, pioneering time in America's development.

Chinese television follows strict ideological guidelines, with little violence and no sex. But the choices are expanding slowly with the recent addition of several American programs including episodes of "60 Minutes" and some sports shows.

HHS Accused of Withholding Notifications

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health and Human Services has prevented sending notifications of potential health risks to almost 250,000 persons identified in federal studies as having been exposed to hazardous substances in the workplace, consumer activists charged Monday.

Ralph Nader and Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group, said HHS has not permitted two of its agencies to inform workers of the potential increased health risks stemming from occupational exposures.

In a letter to President Reagan, the men charged that the administration had rejected a $4 million 1985 budget request from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) to notify workers identified in 66 studies conducted by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH).

"The lame excuse offered in defense of this unethical, immoral decision is 'there is no legal responsibility for NIOSH to notify,'" they said in the letter.

However, government health officials said it is not standard practice to notify individuals in studies of disease risk of the results. The government already notifies labor unions and the companies involved, they said, and is evaluating pilot studies on the consequences of contacting individuals.

Nader and Wolfe said federal studies that looked at the medical records and lifestyles of workers have disclosed people at increased risk of cancers, and heart and lung diseases. In some cases, they said, these people can decrease the risks through early diagnosis and treatment if they know there is a potential problem.

Nader and Wolfe told a news briefing that a CDC ethics advisory committee issued a draft report last November which concluded that NIOSH had a moral obligation to notify workers of health dangers identified in its studies.

Internal NIOSH documents obtained by the Health Research Group also advocate such notification, they said, but HHS documents indicate that the government is under no legal obligation and should consider economic effects on the businesses involved.

"Both CDC and NIOSH agree that there is an ethical obligation to notify," Nader said. "Further delay is unconscionable."

"The main reason why the Reagan administration overruled two health agencies of the government is because it is trying to protect private companies from lawsuits by workers," he continued.

Wolfe said government lawyers are standing on a technicality that the government does not have a legal obligation to notify workers believed at greater health risk.

"This is technically, but not morally, correct," Wolfe said. "It is not a neutral decision not to disclose."

Dr. Edward N. Brandt, HHS'

assistant secretary for health, said in a statement that the department is trying to identify other issues that go with individual notification, including the need for medical followup that is not the responsibility of agencies doing the studies.

"A CDC-NIOSH decision, when made, involves ethical, social, economic and legal considerations," he said. "The ramifications of these actions must, and will, be anticipated and addressed."

A hot lunch is provided for any citizen 60 years old or older. The lunches are served at the Senior Citizens Center in the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets.

New Technique Anesthetizes Single Tooth

ATLANTA (AP) — A new technique in dental anesthesia — using a tiny amount of pain-killer on one tooth at a time — could mean an end to the facial numbness and mumbles of patients leaving the dentist's office, an expert said Monday.

"Patients like it and are amazed that they have no after-effects," said Dr. Alan Khedari, one of the first to use the European-developed technique in the United States.

"They feel comfortable and can go about their work" after visiting the dentist, he said in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office.

Khedari presented the technique, known as intraligamentary anesthesia, over the weekend at the convention of the American Dental Association here. The response, he said, was "great."

The technique involves using an ultra-fine needle that barely penetrates the gum line. The anesthesia, the same used traditionally by dentists, takes effect in about 15 seconds and lasts from 25 to 45 minutes, Khedari said.

Because the anesthetized area is much smaller, dentists can use about one-tenth the amount of pain-killer that normally would be needed.

The side effects — slurred speech, whole-mouth numbness and fatigue — are decreased, while the effectiveness of the drug is unchanged, Khedari said.

The result, he said, is "to make the patient more comfortable and allow the dentist to work quicker."

The technique was developed in West Germany and introduced in the United States about four years ago, Khedari said. After testing the process in clinical research, "we're now getting substantial results with no detrimental effects," he said.

While applicable in most dental procedures, the technique cannot be used on patients with gum disease, he said.

Khedari said the process is gaining in popularity as more dentists are exposed to it. He estimated that about one-third of the nation's dentists are now using the technique and said he expects dental schools to teach it on a much wider basis.

A Sad Moment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A paramedic who rushed to a fatal traffic accident in San Pedro found the victims were his daughter and her fiancée, a fire department spokesman said Monday.

The 21-year-old woman died at Harbor General Hospital Sunday night, not long after the two-car collision, while her fiancée, also 21, was pinned in the wreckage and died at the scene, said spokesman Larry Ford.

The identities of the victims and the paramedic were not released immediately.

How would you like to receive bridge lessons from 24 of the world's great players for a matter of pennies? Or, better still, for free? In 1974-76 the International Bridge Press Association, in association with the Dutch liqueur company Bols, invited 24 experts to each submit a bridge "tip." These were later collected, edited and amplified by Terence Reese in a book "Bridge Tips from the Masters." It was published in 1980 at $10, but the book is now available at $5 (plus 75 cents postage) from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025. Or, if you order two annual subscriptions from the magazine (each $22), the book is yours free.

This hand was submitted by the great Australian player, Tim Seres. Against three no trump, West elected to lead a short suit in the hope of hitting length in his partner's hand. It would seem that South has an easy path to nine tricks—four spades, one heart, two diamonds and two clubs. But something happened along the way.

Declarer won the king of diamonds and tested the spades by cashing the ace-king. On these East dropped the jack-10, plays that cost nothing but, as it turned out, stood to gain a lot. Not unnaturally, declarer supposed that spades were breaking 4-2, so he continued with a spade to his nine.

Now declarer led his king of hearts in an attempt to create an entry to the table. East held up the ace, and declarer continued with a heart to the 10 and East's jack. Declarer could come to no more than eight tricks.

Seres's advice: "When you can see that declarer is bound to succeed by normal play, look for a chance to give him a losing option." Nothing mystifying about that, is there?

Home Loan Record Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — American home buyers borrowed an all-time record $205.2 billion in 1983, more than twice as much as the year before, according to figures compiled by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Lenders in California accounted for 21.3 percent of that total, $43.8 billion, up 192 percent from 1982. California was the only state in double figures last year, when the top six states accounted for almost half of all home loans, 47.6 percent. They include Texas, Florida, Illinois, New York and Virginia.

Although different states move in and out of the top six, HUD said the top six states traditionally account for 45 to 48 percent of the mortgage loan originations. The figures do not necessarily reflect purchases of property in those states, but rather loans made by lenders located in them. Every state showed an increase in loan originations over the 1982 total, which HUD said was at the depth of "one of the most severe cyclical downturns for housing and finance industries."

Homebuyers don't "shop" for brokers

Listings work harder when you

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY REFLECTOR CLASSIFIED

When people decide to buy a home, they usually contact no more than two brokers. They don't shop around. So it's important that you reach all your prospective clients as effectively as you possibly can. Did you know that the main reason for selecting a broker is because that broker listed a particular house? That's right. Among people surveyed nationally by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, that was the main reason given for selecting a broker. A particular house. Think about that!

The best buys in real estate in Greenville and Pitt County are found right here in the newspaper. If you are trying to sell your home, be sure it is listed everyday in The Daily Reflector. Homebuyers look for homes everyday, not just once a week.
