LIBRARY ADDITION UNDER WAY — Sheppard Memorial Library Director Willie Nelms, left, and construction superintendent Sam Colie of Stackhouse look at horseshoes found when workmen began excavating earth from under the north section of the library to make way for expansion of the children's section. Colie said about 1,000 cubic yards of dirt had to be removed from the section, revealing items buried from the old Evans Street School, which burned. Some items found were fire axes, fire extinguishers and old shelving. Nelms said the new addition will give four times the present space for the children's section and an activity area in the rear. The children's section was originally built in 1969. In addition to the children's addition, structural strengthening will be given to the north walls of the building and new foundations poured. The total cost of the project was slated to be $163,665, with completion sometime in January 1985. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Execution

Last-Minute Appeal Set

RALEIGH (AP) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today denied Velma Barfield's appeal and refused to stay her 2 a.m. Friday execution for the 1978 poisoning death of her boyfriend.

The appeals court, after a one-hour hearing, upheld U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree's Wednesday night denial of the appeal.

Mrs. Barfield's attorneys took the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court less than 16 hours before her scheduled execution by lethal injection in North Carolina's death chamber.

Defense attorney James D. Little said the case couldn't be considered by the high court until the appeals court issued its written order. In announcing the decision, appeals court officials said that written order was not expected before noon.

If the U.S. Supreme Court does not stay the execution, Mrs. Barfield would become the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years and the first in North Carolina in 40 years.

Lawyers for both sides said after the hearing they had already pre-filed motions with the U.S. Supreme Court and would make their case there later today.

Lawyers for both sides had also pre-filed motions with the appeals court clerk, who processed the motions upon hearing Dupree's decision, said Don Stevens, deputy attorney general.

Dupree heard arguments from defense and prosecution attorneys in a two-hour session Wednesday afternoon and deliberated in private for nearly two hours before denying her appeal.

While her attorneys were fighting for her life in federal court, Mrs. Barfield told prison officials she had chosen to be executed in her own pink, cotton pajamas rather than prison-issued clothing.

Mrs. Barfield, 52, is scheduled to die by lethal injection at 2 a.m. Friday in North Carolina's death chamber for the murder of her boyfriend, St. Pauls farmer Stuart Taylor. She has also confessed to killing three other people, including her mother, but has not been convicted in those slayings.

In the hearing before Dupree, defense attorney Richard Burr argued that Mrs. Barfield was incompetent to stand trial in 1978 because she was withdrawing from a 10-year addiction to prescription drugs.

DR. ROY H. FORBES

Forbes Is First REI Director

Dr. Roy H. Forbes became the first full-time director of the Rural Education Institute at East Carolina University today.

Forbes, a native of Washington and a graduate of ECU, has served as chief of staff of the N.C. Commission on Education for Economic Growth as a consultant in the office of Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

REI was established three years ago as a cooperative research, program development and public service organization concerned with and designed for special needs of rural education. It was funded with support from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

As an entity of the ECU School of Education, the dean of the school has served as acting director of REI through its formative years. A funding base was established this year by the North Carolina General Assembly.

Forbes served from 1975 to 1982 as (Please turn to page 16)

Blacks Stage School March

WILLIAMSTON — The signs said the marchers were concerned about racial equality and the quality of education in Martin County and that they were unhappy about a white assistant principal replacing a beloved black one.

That was why a group of about 180 citizens from the town of Jamesville led by black leader Golden Frinks said they marched from Jamesville to the Martin County School Board office in Williamston on Wednesday for a meeting with members of the Martin County Board of Education.

The march covered a distance of approximately 12 miles.

The group, calling itself an ad hoc committee of concerned parents, marched through downtown Williamston about mid-afternoon, accompanied by Frinks.

According to Joyce Gray, a spokesman for the group, the committee on Monday requested the meeting with the board. Only committee members, guests and Board of Education members were allowed in the meeting. The committee discussed, said Ms. Gray, concerns over the (for the 1984-85 school year) hiring of a white assistant principal at Jamesville High School and allegations that the Jamesville school principal was harassing students.

The meeting, according to Eugene Rogers, superintendent of Martin County schools, "cleared up some misunderstandings" between the group and the Board of Education "about procedures and practices in hiring and firing policies."

The group's main concern, said (Please turn to page 16)

Farmers Endorse Hunt, Helms

By STUART SAVAGE and CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writers

Farmers for Hunt gathered at the county office building here this morning to hear Billy Yeargin, Gov. Jim Hunt's agriculture adviser, and several farmers voice support for Hunt's election to the U.S. Senate. Farmers for Helms met across town to show their support for Helms' re-election.

Yeargin, who presided at the Hunt session, said the meeting was designed to "try to get the word out as to what is going on," in the farming community and to "discuss a few things we have discovered in the past few days."

The meeting, Yeargin suggested, was spurred by the disclosure of a 1982 statement allegedly made by George Dunlop, staff director of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and characterized by Yeargin as the "senior adviser of the Agriculture Committee," which is chaired by Hunt's opponent, Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

India Hit By Hindu Protests

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Vengeance-seeking Hindus set fires and beat up Sikhs across northern India today, venting their fury over the assassination of Indira Gandhi by two of her Sikh guards. At least 50 people reportedly were killed and hundreds injured nationwide.

Authorities ordered a 24-hour curfew in New Delhi and 15 other cities. Police in some places were given shoot-to-kill orders against the mobs and troops were summoned to the capital from neighboring states.

The United News of India said more than 60 people were killed nationwide. Hospital sources in New Delhi told police more than 50 people were killed and 600 injured in the capital alone.

The only government casualty estimate came from Home Secretary M.M.K. Wali, who told reporters nine people had been confirmed killed throughout India.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Hosts Lured By Fishing Trip Were Out Of Line

DEAR ABBY: This is in defense of "The Eldest," who wanted to exclude the family black sheep from her parents' 50th wedding anniversary. (The black sheep was a hooker, and "The Eldest" was afraid she'd hustle men at the party.) "The Eldest" asked her minister and he said, "Invite her. 'I' stands in the middle of pride."

We have one like that in our family. There are nine of us, and No. 8 has always been the source of untold grief to our parents. They always forgave her and helped her out of jams, and in return she is absolutely ruining what should be their "golden years."

No. 8 has been arrested for prostitution, shoplifting, falsifying prescriptions, credit card theft and forgery. She's unable to support herself, so my parents remodeled their basement into a nice apartment for her. She shows her appreciation by dragging home bums and bikers she meets in taverns and letting them spend the night. We all live in terror that one of these hoodlums will go upstairs and harm our parents.

Recently when another sister was married, she asked our minister if she should exclude No. 8, and the minister said, "Leave her out; we have one of those in our family, too, so I know how you feel."

So, if "I" stands in the middle of "pride," I'd like to point out that "U" stands in the middle of "stupid." And it's just plain stupid to let one black sheep spoil everything.

DEAR ABBY: "Hurt Parents" said that every summer they travel a long distance to spend 10 days with their son and his family, and while they were there last summer, their hosts let the painters come in, which ruined the parents' vacation. I think I can top that.

Every other summer, my husband and I drive 1,500 miles to visit his parents.

Last summer, after four days, our in-laws informed us that they were leaving the next day to go fishing with friends! They said they were sure there were other places we would like to see, and they were giving us the opportunity to see them.

I was flabbergasted. Since we had no other plans, and couldn't afford to stay in motels and eat every meal out for the remaining six days, we came home.

Sharing a house with painters would have been a pleasure compared to what happened to us. Now, what do you think of that?

LAST TRIP HOME

DEAR LAST TRIP: I think you were treated shabbily. When I sided with "Hurt Parents," a surprising number of readers protested, saying, "Ten days is too long. Perhaps the son and daughter-in-law were trying to tell them that after three days, fish and houseguests begin to stink."

Watch For Our Grand Opening Of All New Store

Men's, Ladies, Children's and Infants Wear

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There are a couple of things new parents need to know about raising kids.

"Bigger" guarantees you nothing but the opportunity to pay more money to get into a movie.

Babies who can't even talk have the last word.

For every argument you win, add seven years of guilt to your life.

The art of "setting up" a parent develops early in life.

Example: The phone rings at 1:30 a.m. It's your daughter who was supposed to be home at midnight. You have it within your power to ground her until she is too old to fly. BUT WAIT. She says her boyfriend is too tired to drive home and is going to take a nap. He doesn't want to take a chance on falling asleep at the wheel and jeopardizing their safety.

Example: Your son approaches you and says he needs the car. You give him your best shot about how the only thing that is important is his grades and he can't study tooling around on weekday nights in your car. BUT WAIT. His English teacher has assigned him to see and critique a movie and if he doesn't, he'll probably flunk English which is a college prerequisite and no college will accept him and he'll become a bum. I never won.

If I told my son to make his bed and clean his room before he went to school, he'd smile like Damien, put down his books and say, "I'll be glad to. But when I am late and spoil an 11-year attendance record, let it be on your conscience."

If he walked across a newly-waxed floor, prompting a 50-minute lecture on insensitivity to his mother, he'd retaliate by saying, "Your timer was going off and I knew you didn't want your brownies to burn."

It just isn't easy trying to be wiser than your children. My favorite story is one I heard many years ago about a father who was accused by his son of never paying any attention to him or what he did. The father felt rotten, so one day he retrieved a picture from the back seat of the car that his son had scrawled in crayon. The little stick figures were simply inscribed, "The family."

The father was touched and had it mounted and framed. Finally, he took his son into his office and there among the degrees, honors and plaques for membership and achievement was the simple picture of "The family." The child was stunned into silence.

Finally, he turned to his father and said, "It's nice, but why would you want Freddie Cohen's picture of his family hanging in your office?"

Don't mess around with little people.

Stonewalling

The investigation of Benigno Aquino's assassination has been lengthy and presumably thorough. The results have been filed, but the matter is far from being settled. There should be trials and their results are always in doubt.

Aquino was an opposition leader in the Philippines, a critic and foe of President Ferdinand Marcos' strongman rule.

Doubts over the outcome, even from a distance, are rife due to oddities in presenting the investigative committee's report.

Chairwoman Corazon Agrava gave her report to Marcos who accepted it in a televised event as if the Agrava report was that of the whole panel. Her report (a minority report) differed from that of the panel.

In her view, an air force general and six soldiers were involved in the assassination. She found the government's claim Aquino was killed by an alleged Communist agent, Rolando Galman (slain by guards), in error. She also found it "impossible" to prove that Marcos' relative and chief of staff, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, was implicated in the plot.

The majority report, filed later, did implicate Gen. Ver, and stated the plans ostensibly geared to protect Aquino were actually designed to camouflage his murder. In all, the majority implicated 25 military men and one civilian.

It would be hard to find a gesture that might undermine an unfavorable committee report more than that adopted by the chairwoman. It cast a shadow over the investigation and darker suspicions as to her motives. The lady was entitled to her opinion, but the formal presentation before television cameras, and before the majority report was assembled, gave it weight which was undeserved.

The art of stonewalling has been refined in Manila; and we haven't seen the end of it yet.

Losses

Much has been made of the fact that Jesse Helms is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and how much that means to the tobacco farmer.

The senator is indeed chairman, but the tobacco program has suffered more in the past few years than it did in all the years that it has previously been in existence. If something favorable is not done by Congress to improve the tobacco program we fear there will not be a program in a few years.

Of course, all the losses suffered by the tobacco program in recent years cannot be blamed directly on Sen. Helms. Nevertheless, his being chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee has not seemed to help. The tobacco program has lost ground in Congress and allotment holders and tobacco growers will be the ones to suffer.

—James Kilpatrick—

A Cure Worse Than The Disease

WASHINGTON — Attend for a moment, if you will, to the story of Temistocles Ramirez, 53, a U.S. citizen, born in Puerto Rico. He has been badly treated by the U.S. government. But a court-fashioned remedy for the wrongs that have been done to him carries a threat of a cure that is worse than the disease.

It's a complicated story, but bear with me.

Twenty years ago Ramirez purchased 14,000 acres of raw jungle in Honduras. He put his own capital and his own hard work into clearing the land, planting grass, laying fences and erecting buildings. He transformed the land into a $13 million cattle ranch, meat-packing plant and shrimp plant. The property represents the loving labor of his lifetime.

In March 1983 the U.S. Defense

Department proposed to build a regional military training center in Honduras. Unknown to Ramirez, officials from the Pentagon chose Ramirez's cattle ranch as the site. By sheer accident, in May 1983, Ramirez got wind of the decision. He protested, but in vain. Construction of the camp got swiftly under way. By July a tent camp for housing 1,000 soldiers had been erected. The Army Corps of Engineers built a firing range and an ammunition storage building. Then 100 instructors from the U.S. Army moved in.

In a matter of weeks, according to Ramirez, prime grazing land was made unusable. Fences were bulldozed and water supplies to the meat-packing plant were disrupted. Cattle were shot by stray bullets. Ranch hands refused to work near the military operations. Today more than half the ranch's 14,000 acres and nearly 90 percent of the year-round grazing land has been seized. Ramirez's multimillion-dollar business has been destroyed and his entire operation has been shut down. He has not received one penny from the government.

Last year Ramirez filed suit in U.S. District Court here in Washington. Take note, because the point is important: He did not sue for compensation. He sued for an injunction to halt all activity at the Honduran center. And for equitable relief that would get the troops off his land. His suit was dismissed by the District Court on the ground that it presented a political question not subject to judicial relief. On Oct. 4 a bitterly divided Court of Appeals voted 6-4 to reverse that decision and to reinstate Ramirez's suit.

In his opinion for the majority, Circuit Judge Malcolm R. Wilkey insists that "the case does not raise the specter of judicial control and management of United States foreign policy," but with deference to Wilkey, who ordinarily is a fairly sound judge, such a specter is implicit in the court's action.

This military training center is a manifestation of a power that unquestionably is vested in the president — the power to conduct foreign affairs and to serve as commander in chief of the armed forces. The center exists not merely with the sufferance, but with the active approval of the participating government of Honduras. Venerable rules of jurisprudence command respect for the principle of separation of powers; and the acts of foreign states lie in an area where the writs of Malcolm Wilkey do not run.

The four dissenting judges made a powerful argument for judicial restraint. Assuming, arguendo, that everything Ramirez says is true, his

Although Shamie takes positions less rigidly conservative than Reagan's, the fact that in 1974 he briefly belonged to and attended one meeting of the John Birch Society has earned him a political Scarlet Letter.

The emphasis on this incident instead of the issues represents a triumph for Democratic campaign tactics. But it also reveals the Reagan campaign's lack of commitment to the quest for new congressional seats, much less party realignment.

The potential prize here is dramatic. Massachusetts is a unique one-party state where the dominant Democrats demand liberal ideology. Shamie's opponent for the open Senate seat, first-term Lt. Gov. John Kerry, is a former anti-Vietnam War activist whose doctrinaire opposition to new weapons systems exceeds even Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's.

Against this ideological monolith has been a shrinking, me-too liberal Republican Party. Elliot Richardson, the properly liberal holder of so many Cabinet portfolios, did not frighten Democrats as the probable Republican Senate nominee.

But Ray Shamie, surprise landslide victor over Richardson in the September primary, certainly worries them. A self-made millionaire and self-educated engineer of mixed ethnic (French and Syrian) stock, he may lose votes among dwindling Yankee Republicans. He is, however, the first Republican to take advantage of what has been happening in Massachusetts beneath superficial politics.

This state has been transformed from "Taxachusetts" to a focus of the tax revolt, with lower tax rates accompanying high growth and only 4.8 percent unemployment. The same climate that in 1978 propelled anti-tax conservative Democrat Edward King into a single term as governor gives Reagan a 10-point lead in the only state won by George McGovern in 1972. Walter F. Mondale has not set foot here.

While Shamie cannot match Reagan's appeal, he counts on Democratic support — including some old-line politicians. George Collela, the Democratic mayor of Revere, has been working with Shamie's staff on a Reagan administration urban grant for his city and turned up recently at a Shamie fund-raiser there.

When Shamie said his announcement of federal money awards "irritate" Democratic politicians, Collela yelled back: "Make another announcement, and we'll irritate them a little more." On the next morning, two prominent conservative Democratic politicians agreed over breakfast that, once inside the booth, they would vote Reagan and Shamie.

To encourage such defections, Shamie's newest television commercial tries to exploit revived patriotism by quoting Kerry's description of the U.S. in Grenada as a "bully." A new radio spot cites Kerry's pro-tax-hike stance before pulling away from Mondale's politically poisonous plan.

Kerry's response is to label Shamie an extremist, attacking him for opposing the nuclear freeze and Equal Rights Amendment (though Shamie, unlike Reagan, supports modified versions of both). The soft-voiced Shamie hardly fits his stereotype. As admitted "supply-sider," he talks more about "compassion" that fiscal integrity, more about cutting taxes than cutting the budget.

But having entered politics in 1982 at age 61 by running against Teddy Kennedy, he remains politically naive. To the consternation of aides, he still muffs his own criticism of Birchers as "conspiratorial" by lauding the "sincerity" of individual members. The media-fueled Birch furor could be fatal. Whatever damage it has done among Jews, Richardson Republicans, and some independents, its most serious effect is to keep the president from pursuing the richest realignment prize possible in 1984.

Doctor Says Air Ambulance Needed

RALEIGH — Dr. Nicholas Benson pulled the overnight shift in the emergency room of Pitt County Memorial Hospital recently and then, at 7 a.m., got in his car and drove to Raleigh to tell a legislative study committee that people are dying unnecessarily in North Carolina.

"I'm here to say that there is a clear and pressing need in this state at this time for an air ambulance service," Dr. Benson said with the stridency of someone who is low on sleep. "Every shift I work I get transfers of patients ... who have taken inordinate and unnecessary amounts of time to reach our facilities. People are dying every day unnecessary deaths due to a lack of a proper transport system."

An air ambulance system for North Carolina is being proposed by a Department of Human Resources task force. Dr. Sara Morrow, DHR secretary, appeared the same morning as Dr. Benson and released the details of the task force's recommendations.

Helicopters would be based in six locations throughout the state: Wilmington, Greenville, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Asheville and somewhere in the Triangle. Each helicopter would have a service radius of 80 miles which would leave only extreme corners of the state uncovered by the normal operating areas of at least one helicopter.

Patients who used the helicopter ambulances would be billed. But, the cost of keeping such a system operating is so high that the task force concluded that the state would have to underwrite its operation. The cost, per site, would be nearly $1.9 million the first year — during which the helicopter would be purchased — and $569,000 for the following year, according to task force calculations. The total cost for the state would be $15.9 million the first year and $4 million the second year.

The U.S. Army currently provides some air ambulance service through Fort Bragg. But witnesses appearing before the legislative committee reported that the army would like to ease out of the program and one representative of the program said the helicopters the army uses are not properly equipped.

As the task force sees the air ambulance program, it would serve primarily newborns and accident or trauma victims. Using a set of assumptions based on the army's experience in North Carolina, the task force predicts that a minimum of 750 high risk newborns and 600 trauma victims would use the service the first year. Another 335 patients who fit into different medical categories would also be expected to use the helicopters.

In other parts of the country, where air transport is being used, usage has been at a much higher rate. If North Carolinians used an air ambulance system as much as the national average, then the usage would be twice as great as the task force is predicting. That would be 3,465 patients a year.

An air ambulance operates differently from a regular ambulance. In most cases, it picks up a patient only after he has been transported to a local hospital where doctors have attempted to stabilize his condition. When those doctors determine that the patient needs care available only in a major hospital, then the idea is to get him moved as quickly as possible.

In some cases, however, an air ambulance might be used to pluck a victim from a site an overland ambulance can't reach, the most common example being a car accident on a highway during rush hour traffic.

—Elisha Douglass—

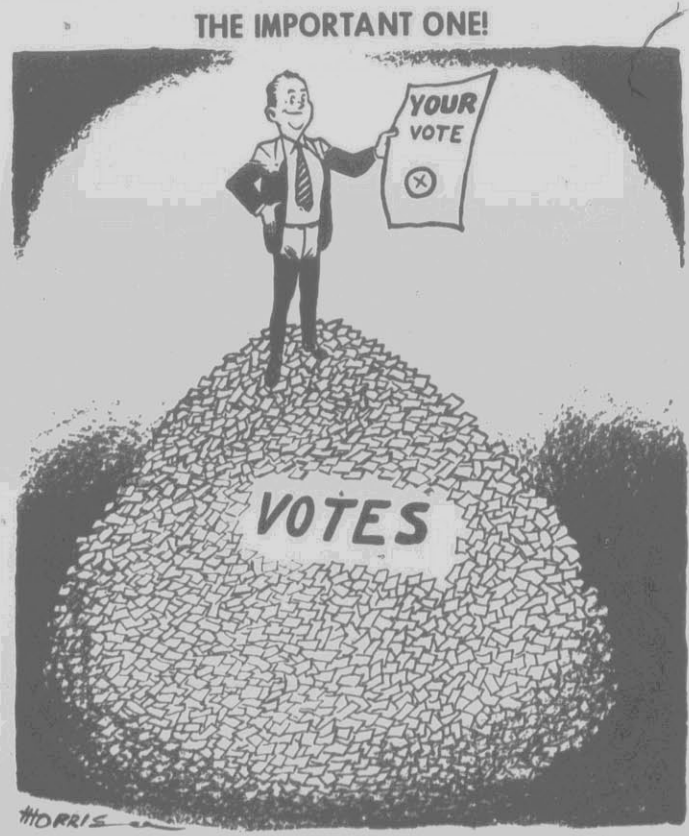

Strength For Today

Certainly our country has been a land of opportunity. James J. Hill, son of a proprietor of a small hotel, came to the United States from Canada in 1856, and before he was 40 years of age had, with several associates, bought up the defaulted bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad and had begun to build the Great Northern System. From that time until his death he was one of the outstanding figures in American finance.

Hard work and sterling character was the secret to his success. To express his ideal he coined the phrase, "the educated conscience." When at the age of 20 he left school in order not to burden his mother and went to work in a country store, probably no one suspected that this bright youngster would some day have such power in the financial world. His natural ability was great, but his hard work and character led him to develop gifts which may equally gifted men have neglected.

Man Gives $10,000 To Help Child Needing Surgery

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Giovanni Ronci had never met Sylvia Olivera. But when he learned that the 12-year-old deaf and mute girl needed heart surgery that she could not afford, he walked into a San Diego TV station and plunked down $10,000 in $100 bills to pay for the operation.

Ronci, who moved to California from his native Mexico City several years ago, said he just wanted to "give something back" for his 28 years of health and prosperity.

Ronci learned about Sylvia on Tuesday when a television news show did a report on her and after discussing it with his wife, sold a collection of Mexican gold coins to get the $10,000.

He delivered the proceeds in $100 bills to KGTV, "which had been trying to raise the money for awhile. I just felt like giving it to her."

Sylvia suffers from a birth defect called patent ductus arteriosis, in which a blood vessel between the heart and lungs does not close as it should, said Dr. David Sahn, chief of pediatric cardiology at University of California San Diego Medical Center.

The condition can be corrected through relatively simple surgery, but if it is not corrected can lead to serious lung damage, Sahn said.

Ronci's gesture surprised Diane Reighard, who began a campaign to raise $10,000 for Sylvia's surgery after meeting the girl in May at the Rancho Sordo Mudo, a special care facility and school for deaf and mute Mexican children about 27 miles north of Ensenada, Mexico.

Ms. Reighard, working as a volunteer at the ranch with other church members, said Sylvia "walked up to me and took my hand and placed it on her chest. Those big brown eyes were looking at me saying 'Please help me.' She could tell there was something wrong."

Sylvia's father lives in Ensenada, but is too poor even to visit the ranch, said Ms. Reighard, adding she took an immediate interest in Sylvia in part because her 3-year-old son, Darrel, died of complications a year after open-heart surgery. That was five years ago.

"That's kind of another reason why this tugged at my heart strings," she said. She had raised $1,500 for the surgery before Ronci's donation.

The girl also suffers from hyperthyroidism, which has stunted her growth. She is 4-feet-5 and weighs only 37 pounds.

"I had been saying a lot of prayers," Ms. Reighard said. "There's somebody up there that listens. It was like Sylvia said in a letter to (Ronci): 'There are still some people out there that have a heart and thanks for helping to fix mine.'"

Ronci, who has two children aged 3 and 5, said "there was no tax deductible reason or anything like that" for his donation.

"I always wanted to save those coins to do something good," he said. "It felt so good I didn't think twice. I've always had everything and a healthy family so I wanted to give something back."

Hospital officials have agreed to waive many of the costs of the operation, which Sahn said will be performed Friday, three days before Sylvia's 13th birthday.

More Homes May Lose Winter Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1 million Americans may be facing winter without heat as a result of recent utility shutoffs, the National Consumer Law Center says.

In a report issued Wednesday, the center said if current trends hold, over 1.8 million households using natural gas will lose their utility service, an increase of 9.7 percent over 1983 despite the economic recovery.

"When energy costs absorb up to 50 percent of a low-income family's budget, is it any surprise that shutoffs continue to grow?" asked Carol Werner of the center. "Where is the safety net when families have to choose between heating and eating?"

The report said the poor pay four times the percentage of income that average Americans spend for home energy, and that federal assistance to help pay their home heating bills is insufficient to avert widespread utility cutoffs.

"The utility shutoff problem seems to defy the economic recovery," Howard Fox of the center told a news conference. "The energy crisis for the poor has become a permanent — and growing — fixture on the American scene."

The center is a non-profit organization that says it works for equal justice for poor people in energy and consumer affairs.

The study describes how low-income households go through a cycle of high energy bills, mounting debt to utilities, shutoff notices and termination, scraping funds together for a possible reconnection only to face even higher energy bills.

Although 6.5 million households received assistance from the federal low-income home energy assistance program, the report said its benefits are inadequate to prevent disconnections of utility service.

The average $212 benefit this year is less than 60 percent of the average debt of $368 to the utility when service is terminated, it said.

From 1981 through 1983, the price of natural gas increased by nearly 40 percent, but the average annual federal benefit remained essentially the same, the report said.

More than a million people may be facing a winter without heat as a result of utility cutoffs in the past year, the center said.

In 1983, 4.7 million people in more than 1.6 million households using natural gas had utility service disconnected, it said, and the number of households is expected to rise to more than 1.8 million this year.

TANKER BURNS — An Oakland, Calif., fire boat sprays water on the burning wreckage of the 630-foot tanker "Puerto Rican" Wednesday about 10 miles outside San Francisco Bay. Three explosions ripped through the tanker early Wednesday, hurling at least two crewmen into the water. One of the 29 crewmen remains missing. The tug at the right was trying to pull the tanker out of the shipping lanes to the bay. (AP Laserphoto)

Tornadoes Kill 2 In Kansas

CARBONDALE, Kan. (AP) — An unusual late-season tornado tossed and tumbled house trailers as it ripped through a mobile home park, killing two people and injuring 10 others.

The flurry of fall tornadoes Wednesday also hit Oklahoma, where the National Weather Service said as many as three twisters touched down and damaged houses and vehicles. No injuries were reported.

The twister that struck this eastern Kansas town Wednesday night gave residents little time to react.

"It happened so quickly it would make your head swim," said Mildred Boyer, 79, owner of the Mineral Springs Trailer Court in this town about 10 miles south of Topeka. "It got still. It got dead hot. It seemed like it came right down and dropped."

The tornado killed a middle-aged man who was found buried under debris, and killed a woman whose trailer home just outside the mobile home park was demolished, said Osage County Sheriff Robert Masters. The names of the victims were being withheld until relatives could be notified.

The 10 people injured at the mobile home park were treated at the scene for minor cuts, bruises and shock, said Osage County ambulance squad director Tony Bell.

Masters said he did not know the extent of the damage to the 16-trailer court, but said at least five of the homes were extensively damaged.

The weather service reported several tornadoes near Seiling and Chester in northwest Oklahoma.

"We may be talking about only one tornado, possibly two or as many as three in the same general area," said Mike Branick, a forecaster with the weather service.

At least one home in Chester was destroyed, but its occupants escaped injury as the house collapsed around them, police said.

In Carbondale, Ray Barnes said he had been taking a shower and his friend, Tanya Pearson, had been watching television when the tornado struck.

Barnes said he ran from the bathroom to the bedroom and dived under the bed, while Ms. Pearson grabbed onto a couch.

The trailer was turned over repeatedly by the twister. Barnes ended up on top of his bed on a pile of debris, while Ms. Pearson found herself sitting in the grass next to the destroyed trailer, he said.

Victims of the tornado were told to go to a school where a relief shelter had been set up, but a dispatcher for the sheriff's department said all the displaced people had found shelter with friends and relatives.

The tornadoes are "a little bit unusual for this time of year," said Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "But the ingredients were there that are usually there during the springtime.

"You had a warm, moist unstable air mass meeting up with a cold front ... and that's usually what it takes."

Reynolds said there was a chance of thunderstorms in parts of Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma today.

Bomb Set At GOP Center

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A explosion apparently caused by Molotov cocktail ripped a hole in the front of the Reagan-Bush headquarters early today, about 10 hours before President Reagan was scheduled to visit the city, police said.

The blast broke a hole about 1 foot wide and 2 feet high in the plate glass panel next to the front door, but caused no injuries or damage to the interior of the storefront headquarters, Rochester Police Capt. Art Reynolds said.

Police were called to the scene and saw the smoldering device explode while they watched from across the street, Reynolds said.

A witness, who called police, said that a person was seen fleeing from the site of the explosion, Reynolds said.

Reynolds said from the basis of the remains and the witness report, the device appeared to be a plastic container filled with gasoline inside a paper bag with a slow-burning wick.

"It looks like someone lit a Molotov cocktail," Reynolds said. The blast was reported about 4:25 a.m.

Michael Tarr, a spokesman for the Secret Service in Washington, said the incident would have no effect on Reagan's scheduled trip.

Earthquake Recorded In Ocean

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — A major earthquake shook the ocean floor under the central Atlantic several hundred miles north of the equator, the U.S. Geological Survey said today.

Scientists measured the quake preliminarily at 7.3 on the Richter scale.

A USGS spokesman said it was centered along the Mid-Atlantic Ridge about 900 miles northeast of Belem, Brazil, which is about 100 miles south of the equator. The ridge marks the line along which earth's crust is spreading apart and new crust is being formed by material welling up from below.

The temblor, which occurred at 11 p.m. EST Wednesday, was one of the strongest to be recorded in that part of the mid-atlantic ridge, the service said.

The spokesman said the only possibility of any damage from a quake so far out at sea would be if it resulted in a tsunami, or seismic sea wave. Such waves usually do not occur in the Atlantic.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Concert Protest

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A group that held signs and Bibles aloft to protest a concert by Boy George and the Culture Club plans to picket concerts by other rock performers, including Neil Diamond and Bruce Springsteen, says the group's leader.

The protest by about 150 people Wednesday was organized by the Rev. David Diamond, who said his group was upset because a "self-professed drag queen" was being allowed to perform in the tax-supported LSU Assembly Center.

Boy George, a British pop star who often wears make-up, wore a baggy coat and pants and a sequined dress shirt for the show Wednesday night. His red hair was braided and tucked under a tasseled and sequined turban.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," Diamond shouted to a fan entering the show. "Wait until your children have to grow up in the most perverse generation ever."

Contest Hosts

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Lee and Lane Brody, who teamed up to sing this year's No. 1 country hit, "The Yellow Rose," will be hosts for the final competition in the Wild Turkey Battle of Country Bands.

Ten bands from across the country began rehearsing Wednesday for the talent contest. The winners get a year's booking contract, $5,000 and will record an album. The finals are Friday night.

Reagan Takes On Democratic Strongholds

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

The long presidential campaign is entering its final hectic days with Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale unleashing a television advertising blitz and President Reagan invading traditionally Democratic strongholds in a bid to lock up a landslide re-election.

Mondale doggedly insisted Wednesday that "we can win this thing" despite his own campaign polls that say he is 16 to 18 points behind the president with only four days until Election Day.

Campaign aides said the Mondale polling indicated no trend in his direction in the past several days.

Reagan was opening a 10-state trip in Boston today where he hoped to solidify his support in traditionally Democratic Massachusetts and also give a boost to Republican Senate candidate Raymond Shamie.

The president also was reading the polls, and he told workers at his national campaign headquarters in Washington on Wednesday:

"I go to bed at night and my last thought is: what if everybody is reading the polls and isn't going to bother to vote?"

The final days of the campaign will see both presidential candidates appearing in Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and California.

Reagan also planned stops in Arkansas, Missouri and Wisconsin. Mondale was also scheduled to visit Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Texas before returning to his Minnesota home Monday night.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning today in Cincinnati before joining Mondale in New York City, then flying West to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Los Angeles.

Vice President George Bush was campaigning in New York before traveling to Toledo.

Mondale's campaign spokesman Don Foley confirmed plans for a multi-million-dollar closing advertising buy that would include more than a dozen five-minute segments on the national networks.

One new Mondale ad already being broadcast included images of children playing, a mushroom-shaped cloud and missiles being fired.

Not all the political ads broadcast the next few days will be partisan. Actors, actresses and sports celebrities were appearing in television spots urging Americans to vote on Tuesday.

"Vote with a friend ... make it count more," is the theme of one of the 30-second public service spots.

While Reagan was bidding for Democratic voters to back his candidacy, he had harsh words for the opposition party's officials, who he said controlled "the most blighted areas of the country — places of desperation."

Mondale jumped on that remark Wednesday when he toured Baltimore's Inner Harbor development.

"I have this to say to the president: you don't know what you're talking about," said the Democratic candidate.

He went on to say that "when it comes to American cities, Mr. Reagan and his crowd give hypocrisy a bad name."

Reagan also came under fire from the Democratic ticket for suggesting that Mondale chose Geraldine Ferraro for his running mate because he was looking for a woman to run for vice president rather than on the basis of her qualifications.

"She is far better prepared for her position," Mondale retorted, "than Mr. Reagan was when he was elected President of the United States ... More than that, she's a very bright person who applies herself and learns every day."

"No one has ever accused the president of applying himself or understanding the key issues that a president must understand," Mondale added.

Ms. Ferraro responded by challenging Reagan to a debate.

"I've proved myself as a national candidate," she said.

And she added a jab at Reagan over a remark he made that the Democrats contend shows the president is uninformed about nuclear weapons: "I have not ever said that submarine-launched missiles are recallable."

In an interview published Wednesday by the Hearst News Service, Reagan said running mates should be chosen "not just purely on the sex of the candidate but ... also on the qualifications."

Bush, campaigning in Republican Suffolk County, N.Y., said Mondale and

Ms. Ferraro "have nothing to offer the American people but fear."

"Their message is being heard, loud and clear," he said. "And the American people have heard it and they've thought about it and they are saying, 'no way' to Mondale's tax increase, 'no way' to weakening the defenses of the United States of America."

Sources Say Manual Revision Minor

WASHINGTON, AP — The edition of the Nicaraguan rebel manual approved by CIA headquarters underwent only one deletion from the original version written by a CIA employee in Central America, according to intelligence officials.

The new account appears to conflict with President Reagan's statement during the Oct. 21 presidential debate that objectionable parts of the manual were removed.

Reagan said "a number of pages were excised" by the CIA employee's superior in Central America and "more pages were excised" at CIA headquarters.

But intelligence officials, who spoke only on conditions of anonymity, said mid-level officers at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., excised one paragraph, which recommended the hiring of professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs."

Other sections that urged violent acts to create propaganda gains for the rebels were left in, the officials said Wednesday.

One of those sections proposed that an anti-government demonstration be turned into "a confrontation with the authorities ... which will cause the death of one or more persons, who would become the martyrs."

Another section in the CIA-approved manual calls for "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan government officials, and a third proposes coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out assignments by implicating them in the rebellion and then threatening to turn them over to the police.

After a three-hour CIA briefing Oct. 22, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a

Senate Intelligence Committee member, said all versions of the manual "had some of what would be called questionable to some and to others offensive language relating to so-called 'neutralization.'"

From Nunn's statement, however, it was not clear that the two other sections — on "martyrs" and coercion — were also left in the edition approved and printed at CIA headquarters.

White House and CIA officials had no comment on the account that only one section was removed.

The intelligence officials said there were three versions of the manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War."

Poles Hold Mass For Slain Priest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland today marks its most solemn holy day with an All Saints' Day Mass by Cardinal Jozef Glemp at a Warsaw cemetery that was expected to draw a large crowd to honor slain pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko.

On the eve of the holiday, an estimated 10,000 worshippers packed Warsaw's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church and the surrounding streets at a Mass for Popieluszko.

The Rev. Aleksander Seniuk told the crowd, which included Popieluszko's parents, that the outspoken priest had become "Solidarity's patron."

"Today Solidarity is handcuffed, but thanks to you, her chaplain, it is free with her soul as never before," said Seniuk, his voice booming over outdoor loudspeakers.

Popieluszko's body was found Tuesday in a reservoir in northern Poland, 11 days after his alleged abduction by three officers of the Polish secret police. An Interior Ministry spokesman said Wednesday the three would likely face murder charges.

The 37-year-old priest was one of the most vocal members of Poland's Roman Catholic clergy in advocating the ideals of Solidarity, the now-outlawed independent labor federation.

All Saints' Day is a national holiday in Poland on which millions of Poles traditionally travel to cemeteries to place flowers and light candles at the graves of loved ones. The day was expected to take on an added significance this year because of Popieluszko's death.

Popieluszko is to be buried Saturday at Powazki Cemetery in Warsaw, following a Mass at St. Stanislaw Kostka, his parish church.

There were no reports of unrest following the announcement that Popieluszko's body had been found, although some former Solidarity activists said they were watching to see whether the government provides a full explanation of the priest's death.

An autopsy was being conducted on Popieluszko's body by government medical experts along with medical and legal observers from the Catholic Church, but there was no indication when the findings would be made public.

Poland's Communist authorities have hinted the killing of the priest might be part of a wider-ranging conspiracy.

Western diplomats said a shuffle in the party ranks was likely in the wake of the slaying, but added that Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's position seemed secure.

Rebels Free Americans In Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Rebels freed an American tourist couple and two other foreigners trapped in a town in northern Ethiopia when the insurgents seized it.

"We're alive and very well," Margaret Marshall, 65, of Ventura, Calif., told The Associated Press after arriving in Addis Ababa late Wednesday.

She and her husband, Edwin, 67, a retired aircraft engineer for Lockheed, were flown to the Addis Ababa, the capital, on a Red Cross plane along with British tourist Alison Gillard, and a Swiss representative of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Markus Mueller.

They were among 10 foreigners caught in the town of Lalibela in Wollo province when rebels captured it on October 19.

Three of the other six foreigners stayed in Lalibela and the others were taken on a tour of the area by the rebels, the Marshalls said.

Marshall said the four released foreigners were taken by truck from Lalibela to the town of Dese, about 80 miles to the southeast, on Wednesday and flown from there on the Red Cross plane.

Miss Gillard, about 60, works in Addis Ababa as a publications designer for the International Livestock Center for Africa.

Insurgents of the Ethiopian People's Democratic Movement and the Tigrean People's Liberation Front captured Lalibela from Ethiopian forces.

Both guerrilla groups have been fighting Ethiopia's Marxist central government for regional autonomy.

A garrison town about 280 miles north of Addis Ababa, Lalibela is renowned for 11 churches hewn from solid rock in the 11th century.

Among the foreigners still in Lalibela were three medical personnel of a West German volunteer group called the German Emergency Doctors.

A senior West German diplomat said he understood the three would continue their work in Lalibela.

Three other foreigners — identified by the insurgents as Robert John, 55, of Britain and his 30-year-old Finnish wife, Eva Marya John, and Australian Michael Fints, 29 — were with some of the guerrillas on a tour of the region, the Marshalls said.

drive Saturday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the church, 510 S. Washington St.

Donors from 17 to 65 years of age can call the church office at 752-3101 for an appointment. Walk-ins will also be accepted.

Health Careers

East Carolina University will hold its annual Health Careers observance Friday and Monday to acquaint students and graduates of ECU with job openings in health care delivery.

Personnel recruiters from hospitals, health treatment centers and government agencies will meet with interested students and alumni Friday from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. at the ECU nursing building. Meetings will be held Monday from 1:30 until 4 p.m. at the Carol Belk Allied Health building.

Request Approved

Police Capt. D.R. Bullock has announced the approval of a request by the Christian Record Braille Foundation Inc. to solicit funds through Dec. 31 to support the blind camps, records, tapes and in-home visitation by representatives.

Lecture Set

Dr. Candace Corson of Physicians for Social Responsibility will lecture at 8 p.m. Friday at Temple Israel, 1109 Vernon Ave., Kinston.

Dr. Corson, a Littleton resident, was chosen in June to represent the physicians' group in Helsinki, Finland, at the World Congress of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War. She also toured the Soviet Union.

Board Member

Sue Creech, chairman of childhood education programs at Pitt Community College, was recently elected to the board of directors of the North Carolina Association for the Education of Young Children as a member-at-large representing the eastern region.

NCAEYC is an organization composed of public and parochial, preschool and primary teachers who work to improve quality and availability of services for children from birth through age eight.

Ms. Creech was also re-elected to serve on the executive board of the North Carolina Day Care Association representing child care centers receiving government funds. The NCDCA has over 1,000 members.

Local Winner

Kevin Hewett, 17, a senior at Rose High School, has been named the school's top Century III leader. Hewett is now eligible to compete with other winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 scholarships and a trip to the Century III conference next March in Williamsburg, Va.

Winners at the conference will compete for the national winner's prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

Rose High runner-up in the competition was Charles Moore.

Friendship Force

Interviews for hosts and ambassadors for Friendship Force will be held in the education building of the United Methodist Church at 304

W. Second St., Washington, Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and Nov. 13 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Friendship Force is an exchange program between people of this area and those of a particular area in another country.

Autograph Session

North Carolina author Carole Marsh will autograph copies of her Lost Colony Collection books at the Bookfest '84 at the old Chowan County Courthouse Sunday in Eden.

Ms. Marsh lived in Rocky Mount for several years and has written a number of books based on eastern North Carolina cities. She now lives in Tryon where she heads the Gallopade Publishing Group.

In addition to her own books, she is sponsoring books by Sam Ragan, the late Thad Stem, and Mr. and Nell Wise Wechter.

Bible Study

Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church will hold Bible study tonight at 7:30 with the Rev. Elmer Jackson in charge. The Sweet Hope church family will meet Saturday at 8 a.m. at the church.

Anniversary

The Mayo Chapel senior usher board will celebrate its anniversary Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Bishop Robert Gorham, the choir, ushers and congregation of Dildy Chapel Free Will Baptist Church of Fountain will be in charge of the service.

Helms Rally

A rally honoring U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms will be held from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Cannon's Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue.

Tickets for the event, which includes a pig picking, are $5 per person, with children under 12 admitted free. Advance tickets are available at Helms for Senate headquarters, 608 E. 10th St., or can be reserved by calling 758-0361.

Music will be provided by The Main Event of Charlotte.

AMRA Post

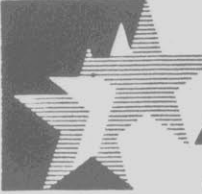

Peggy H. Wood of East Carolina University has been chosen president-elect of the American Medical Records Association. She will serve a one-year term.

In her new post, she becomes a member of AMRA's board of directors and an ex-officio member of all AMRA councils and standing committees. She will be installed as president at next year's annual meeting and exhibit.

Ms. Wood is professor and chairwoman of the department of medical record science in the School of Allied Health and Social Work at ECU and received her master's and bachelor's degrees from ECU.

FELLOW FARMERS:

Are you better off than you were four years ago?

Look at the facts:

North Carolina lost 13,000 family farms since 1979, more than any state in America. Real farm income is DOWN 50%, while interest cost, as a share of the cost of production, is UP 200%.

Tobacco farmers have lost 30% of their quota, and more cuts are coming. The doubled cigarette tax, brought to us by Senators Helms and East, costs us $93 an acre. We have to pay 7¢ per pound to keep what's left of the tobacco program, and we have 50% MORE stocks in stabilization. The support price is DOWN 21%, and sales are DOWN 6%. Exports are DOWN 19%, while imports are UP 25%.

That's just a few of the reasons we, as farmers in 25 counties, have raised the money to pay for this ad.

Farmers have got to see some changes made soon if they are to stay in farming!

But we've never heard a new idea or positive suggestion for dealing with problems in the farm economy from Senator Helms. In his Senate career he's spoken out on foreign relations twice as many times as he has on agriculture. Right-wing NCPAC, which Helms guides and advises, is working to defeat Sen. Charles Percy, R-Illinois, so Helms will be in line to chair the Foreign Relations Committee. And apparently the endorsements of 23 Foreign Ambassadors mean an awful lot to him.

Jim Hunt has new ideas for dealing with farm problems, especially tobacco: ideas for reducing stabilization stocks; legislation to end farmers' obligation to pay for the 1982-84 crops under no-net-cost; ideas to cut federal spending, cut the federal debt in half in one year, and bring down interest rates.

Jim Hunt grew up cropping tobacco and milking cows. He understands farming, and knows what it takes to make a profit.

That's why we're voting for Jim Hunt — we're voting for the future of our farms.

Sponsored by farmers in Beaufort, Bladen, Columbus, Edgecombe, Franklin, Granville, Craven, Duplin, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Johnston, Lee, Lenoir, Martin, Onslow, Pender, Person, Pitt, Nash, Robeson, Sampson, Wake, Wayne and Wilson Counties

PAPA SMURF — Blue paint and lots of creativity were used by the employees of Central Supply at Pitt County Memorial Hospital to transform a Pitt County pumpkin into a cartoon character everybody loves. Papa Smurf was judged the "most creative" entry in a

Nuns Convicted

HASSELT, Belgium (AP) — A criminal court has convicted two head nuns at a Roman Catholic hospital of forgery documents in an attempt to use hospital funds to build a new convent.

Jacqueline Vandormael and Maria Truys were given three-month jail sentences, with two months suspended, and fined 6,000 francs — the equivalent of $97 — after the prosecutor asked for light sentences.

Since they spent at least one month in detention awaiting trial, they were freed.

Conference Ends

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Communist bloc nations ended an economic conference in Havana with an agreement to increase and diversify trade with Latin America, the official Cuban news agency reported.

Prensa Latina said in dispatches received here that delegates to the three-day Council for Mutual Economic Assistance meeting also pledged to develop stronger economic ties with underdeveloped nations in other regions. The council, known as Comecon, is the Eastern bloc's common market.

Delegates from Bulgaria, Hungary, Vietnam, East Germany, Mongolia, Poland, Romania, the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia attended the meeting, as well as observers from Yugoslavia, Laos, Afghanistan, South Yemen, Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia, Mexico and Nicaragua.

Phony Doctor Makes Mistake

NEW YORK (AP) — Nurses at Lincoln Hospital's emergency room said a man walked in last weekend with a stethoscope, a white doctor's frock and an identification tag with "M.D." after his name — everything he needed to be a doctor but the training and the degree.

On Wednesday, a hospital accountant was arrested after the nurses noticed he had written "sewn them up" on patients' charts instead of the professionally preferred term, "sutured," authorities said.

The office of Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola said Kenneth Haynes, 29, of Queens, was charged with 13 counts of criminal impersonation of a physician and five counts of assault for unauthorized treatment of patients.

The 13 patients he allegedly examined or treated were called and checked by real doctors, said Susan Halpin, spokeswoman for the city's Health and Hospitals Corp., which runs Lincoln. She said the exams "turned up no problems."

"It seems he walked in off the street," said Assistant District Attorney Stuart London.

"He just came in and hung out over the weekend," said John MacLaughlin, president of the hospital's agency.

Hindus Set Off Rampage

Gandhi's son and successor, Rajiv Gandhi, the estimated crowd of 600,000 mourners filing past the flag-draped body of the slain prime minister in New Delhi became so unruly that police threw tear gas to restore order.

Mrs. Gandhi died Wednesday after being shot by two of her guards, authorities have said. The United News of India said she was shot 22 times.

Police in Punjab state arrested relatives and friends of the two Sikh guards, United News of India reported. One of the accused guards, constable Satwant Singh, was killed by other security men, and the second, sub-inspector Beant Singh, was wounded, authorities have said. A third guard, who did not fire, was arrested. He has not been identified.

Satwant Singh's father, two sisters and three brothers were detained in Gurdaspur district, 280 miles northwest of New Delhi, the news agency said. Two of his friends also were reported arrested.

Police arrested Beant Singh's father and three brothers in a village outside the northern Indian city of Chandigarh, UNI said. Police found Beant Singh's New Delhi house locked and neighbors said he had sent his family away five days before the assassination, according to the new agency.

The backlash in cities with Sikh populations was part of a surge of rioting, arson and looting by mobs of Hindus seeking revenge for the killing of the 66-year-old Mrs. Gandhi. The mobs burned Sikh-owned businesses, cars and buses, and beat Sikh men they found in the open.

The assassination was claimed by anonymous Sikh extremists as revenge for the Indian army attack on the Golden Temple in Amritsar to flush out Sikh separatists in June. Sikhs number 13 million in the predominantly Hindu nation of 730 million.

Farmers...

Yeargin said Dunlop, following a meeting by representatives of the Georgia Soybean Association with senior U.S. Department of Agriculture officials in Washington, told members of the soybean association "that farmers were bums and deadbeats who only wanted more and more handouts."

Farmers "simply don't understand what is going on," Yeargin said, suggesting that the statement allegedly made by Dunlop shows the "attitude of Helms' "senior agriculture adviser."

Since 1980, Yeargin said, there has been a 252 percent increase in tobacco imports, a 19 percent decrease in tobacco exports, and a 50 percent increase in Stabilization inventories as well as cuts in tobacco allotments and doubling of the tax on cigarettes.

"I suggest to you that Senator Helms is the problem ... not the solution," Yeargin said.

Hunt, on the other hand, according to Yeargin, is familiar with the problems farmers face and has "shown his ability to work with people," to get things accomplished.

Pender Sharp, a farmer from Sims, said that Helms has "never lifted a finger to help the people who put him in office," and suggested that Hunt could "accomplish more as a freshman senator" than Helms can as chairman of the committee on agriculture.

Greene County farmer Ossie Kearney said the cigarette tax increase which Helms voted for raises about "$8,000 per acre" in federal excise taxes. "The government is taking in $2 per pound for every pound of tobacco I sell."

Kearney said that, in 1978, he was allotted 46 acres of tobacco, while in 1984 his allotment was 31 acres. "If Mr. Helms helps me like he has ... I'll be out of the tobacco business."

Jerry West of Freemont, a Wayne County farmer, said, "How can Helms say he supports tobacco when in the past six years he has voted against farm legislation. If he's pro-tobacco, why did he vote to increase the tax on cigarettes?"

"Helms is the problem. Get him out of the Senate as soon as possible. Jim Hunt has the knowledge and ability to carry the facts and figures to Washington to represent us," West emphasized.

Jimmy Hawley of Wilson County, Hunt's son-in-law, said "there's no other politician in America that knows farming better" than Hunt. "Jim Hunt will fight for (the tobacco program) as hard or harder than anyone will."

"I feel like Hunt will do more good in one year than Helms has in the past 12 years. Jim Hunt knows our problems and can get things done."

In a meeting held at Cannon's Warehouse to complete plans for a Helms' re-election rally on Saturday, several other area farmers made statements as to why they believe Helms is a better proponent of North Carolina farming interests than is Hunt.

Gene Paramore, a Pitt County farmer who serves on an advisory committee on tobacco for a state farm organization, said Helms has been readily available to the farmers of North Carolina ever since he went to Washington — "always accessible, while the governor never is where you need him when you need him."

Farmer William H. Mills said "that windbag Charlie Rose" (Rep. Charles Rose, a Democrat representing North Carolina's 6th District) delayed the opening of the tobacco market one week in 1983 "after a bill that Helms had sent over from the Senate on time was held up by him." He said Helms does his work on behalf of farmers and other constituents promptly, thoroughly and well.

Bill Clark said Helms is appreciated, not only by North Carolina farmers who have followed his work as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, but by farmers in other states as well. A tobacco warehouseman with business interests in Kentucky as well as North Carolina, Clark said the burley tobacco farmers of Kentucky tell him "every day and every night" how much they credit Helms with saving the tobacco program.

"The program's not everything it should be right now," he said, "but at least we have a program. We've got to get the right man back in there to do what needs to be done to make it what it should be. He gives us clout and we'll be in a terrible situation if we lose it by not re-electing him."

Clark suggested that North Carolina farmers will be instrumental, not just in re-electing Helms, but in giving him "the largest plurality ever accorded a senator from North Carolina."

The farmers present said they credit Helms for making the last cigarette tax bill "not nearly as bad as it could have been ... Jesse filibustered for two days and night against that bill," one of them said, "and got the tax reduced two cents."

The Helms supporters also voiced the opinion that Yeargin's holding the Hunt meeting at the county office building was improper. "Buildings owned by all of us shouldn't be used as a springboard for Governor Hunt's further political aspirations," J.C. Galloway said. He said he suspects that some state employees working there might be intimidated by the meeting.

WHEN WE NEEDED A START ON FOUR-LANE 264, TOM TAFT WAS THE RIGHT MAN.

Eight years ago, Tom Taft became the founding president of the U.S. 264 Association. Today that project is under construction from Wilson to Greenville, and rights-of-way are being purchased from Pictolus to Washington. Tom and other key leaders persisted through eight years of meetings, hearings, lobbying and negotiations to gain support for the tens of millions of dollars the project requires. It was a tough job.

Determination, persistence and results like this make Tom Taft the right man for the state senate. We need a strong voice to gain speedy completion of U.S. 264 and the four-laning of U.S. 64 as well.

It's time for a new era of senate leadership from Pitt, Martin and Beaufort Counties that forcefully represents our agricultural, transportation, education, business and job development needs. Getting our fair share from state government is a tough job. That's why Tom Taft is the right man for the state senate.

Emory Out For Last Road Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

As if things weren't bad enough to begin with.

Back in the first game of the season, fullback Tom Moore was injured, suffering a broken leg. He returned a few games back, but has not run with the same authority he did earlier.

In the third game of the year, tailback Anthony Cobb went down with a knee injury. He has not returned and is not expected back this season. At the time, he was the leading rusher on the team — and remains so — having over half the total for Rose on the ground this year, despite having played in but three of the eight games.

A week later, Mo Matthews, moved in to sub for Moore also went down with a knee injury. He returned last week, running for the first time since the fourth game of the year.

And while that all served to humble the Rampant running game, the passing game took on the brunt of the load.

Then, last Friday night, in late play against Wilson Fike, quarterback Battle Emory, who leads the team in total offense, went down with a shoulder separation and will be lost for the remainder of the season.

All of these problems have served up first year coach Chip Williams with a 2-5-1 season so far, 0-5 against conference competition. It's not a banner beginning by any means.

"I think you could say that we started out above our expectations," Williams said, referring to Rose's 28-14 romp over Jacksonville. "But we have certainly come down toward the end well below my expectations."

With Emory sidelined, Williams will turn to junior backup Ervin

Best, who has been running at halfback since Cobb was injured. "He's been doing a good job in practice this week, and I look for a good game from him at quarterback," the coach said. "But I do think that he's going to make some mistakes as any quarterback would in his first game. And he'll feel the pressure for the first time also."

"His timing is going to be off some because he's been working with the backs and not the receivers for so long. But he has the speed and ability to run the ball as well as pass it and that can make the difference."

In a way, the injury to Emory could be a blessing in disguise, since he is a senior. Best will be returning and will get two games of on-the-job training to build on for next year.

The Rampants come into this week's game at Wilson Hunt, their final road game of the year, following a 23-7 loss to unbeaten and second ranked Wilson Fike.

The Golden Demons were held to just over 100 yards passing and less than 200 rushing, and Williams said that after the game, his initial feelings were good about the game. "I really thought we had done a pretty good job. We were still in the game in the fourth quarter and we had shown some improved rushing."

But, after seeing the film, Williams changed his mind about part of what he saw. "Offensively, we didn't play as well as I thought. Both our line and backs didn't do as well as it appeared. We're still not blocking the correct people in both areas. Granted that shouldn't be happening at this point of the season and we've had some meetings about this. I guess if we had the answers as to why it's happening, it wouldn't be happening."

Williams did say that the line has shown improved play this week, and that Todd Morris has been a stand-out in work so far. Matthews, in his second week back, has also shown improvement in his backfield work.

"I thought the defense did a good job overall. But we still have the same problem we've had from Day One, giving up the big play. Their first touchdown, we had them in third and long and they threw to the backside corner and beat our corner back. Our corner play has been the weak spot all year long."

Williams said he felt Tyrone Smith did a good job both on offense and defense. "He made some good interceptions and he intercepted two passes," the coach said. "I was pleased with his play."

Sterling Edwards also drew Williams praise for his play at the defensive guard position. "He was our leading hitter — but that's not supposed to happen. Our linebackers are supposed to be the leading hitters."

In facing Hunt, the Rampants are taking on a team that has had its ups and downs this year. The Warriors lost their opener to Garner, 37-6, but then downed Eastern Wayne, 19-0. Eastern lost the next week to Rose, 28-14.

Hunt closed out its non-conference slate with a 16-14 loss to 3-A powerhouse SouthWest Edgecombe.

The Warriors lost to Kinston, 9-0, in their first league game, then surprised Northeastern, 21-6, in the second. They followed that up with a loss to Fike, 21-14, but beat Rocky Mount, 14-7, in a double overtime, and topped Wilson Beddingfield, 13-7, this past week, to remain in contention for a Division II berth in the playoffs.

"They are a young team. Fourteen of their 22 starters are juniors," Williams pointed out. "They are starting two sophomores, a defensive tackle and a running back. Their quarterback is a junior."

Williams said that the key to Hunt's success this year has been its defense. "They are very solid on defense, while their offense has been inconsistent. Their two touchdowns last week came on a blocked punt and a bad center snap on another punt. Ironically, Beddingfield's only score came on an interception return."

Kickoff in the contest is set for 8 p.m. at Hunt High's field. The Rampants will return home next Thursday night to face Elizabeth City Northeastern in their final game of the season.

WILSON — Washington's Missy Fulmer, seeded second, and the Lady Pam Pack's doubles team of Jessica Moore and Kyle Stearns are the only area players still involved in the Northeastern Sectional Tennis Tournament, which got underway yesterday at Wilson.

Play continues today, and winners in the quarterfinal matches today automatically advance to next week's regionals in Goldsboro.

Fulmer defeated Francis Patteson of Wilson Hunt in her first match, 6-2, 6-3. She then downed Kim Langston of Greene Central, 6-0, 6-1, in the second round of play.

Moore and Stearns downed Seals and Allen of Beddingfield, 6-0, 6-0, and followed that with a win over Linda van den Berg and Stacy Joyner of Hunt, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5 to advance to the quarterfinals.

Rose High School's Susan Taylor defeated Sylvia Bond of Plymouth, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) in the first round and then beat Barden of Roanoke Rapids, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2. But she was defeated in the third round, losing to Thorne of Currituck, 6-3, 6-2. Kara Deyton bowed in first round play to Edenton's Martha Hornthall, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2.

Rose's Vickie Parrott and Susan Evans defeated Carrie Pritchette and Donna Best of Charles B. Aycock, 6-3, 6-0, and then downed Greene Central's Kathy Herring and Jennifer Gay, 6-0, 6-0. They were defeated by Strickland and Uzzell of Eastern Wayne, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6 (7-0) in the third round.

Teammates Kelly Wall and Anne Lynne Davis defeated Harris and Warren of Roanoke, 6-3, 6-1, but then lost to Dawson and Matlocks of Kinston, 6-3, 6-0.

Farmville Central's Kathi Messer defeated Northern Nash's Suzanne Bass, 6-1, 6-0, before falling to Cile Johnson of Roanoke Rapids, 6-1, 7-5.

Greene Central's Tangelia Craft fell to top seeded Kathy Tatarazo of Goldsboro, 6-0, 6-0. Herring and Gay defeated Roanoke's Marty Knox and Debbie Atkinson, 6-1, 6-2, before losing to Parrott and Evans of Rose.

Roanoke's Debbie Whitfield was beaten by Aycock's Pam Bedford, 6-0, 6-0 in the first round.

Washington's Tommie Metters and Suellen Day bowed to Stephanie Sharber and Ginger Gregory of Northeastern, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Goldsboro and Washington were tied with 18 points each after the first day's competition. Northeastern was second with 16, followed by Eastern Wayne with 15 and Roanoke Rapids with 13. Hunt had 12, while Aycock, Rocky Mount and Rose were tied with nine. Edenton had seven, Currituck, six; Rosewood and Fike, three each, and Greene Central, Tarboro and Farmville Central, one each.

Heels Stand In Terrapins' Way

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Maryland travels to North Carolina as it tries to get closer to its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference football title, while Virginia takes on 12th-ranked West Virginia one week after it knocked off Penn State.

The Terrapins whipped Duke 43-7 to raise its league mark to 3-0, while Virginia remains at 2-0-1 after its open date last weekend. North Carolina is 1-1 and must win all four of its remaining conference games to have a shot at winning the crown it was predicted to capture in preseason.

Clemson hosts Wake Forest, North Carolina State is at home to No. 5 South Carolina and Duke goes to Georgia Tech.

North Carolina is within one game of the .500 mark at 3-4 following last Saturday's 30-27 upset of Memphis State. Coach Dick Crum is looking to senior tailback Ethan Horton to guide the way — especially after his 206-yard effort against the Tigers.

"Horton has done some real nice things for us since he's been here," Crum said. "He certainly provided us with the momentum and the things we needed in order to win."

While his offense is geared up, Crum is worried about the defense, which will likely face both Stan Gelbaugh or Frank Reich. Gelbaugh threw three touchdown passes against the Blue Devils and Reich, injured for the past several weeks, added a scoring loss in the romp.

"Both of their quarterbacks have played well and they have good running backs," Crum said. "Defensively, they always seem to have fine personnel and that's certainly the case again this year."

Maryland Coach Bobby Ross said Gelbaugh will start for the Terrapins because he doesn't think Reich has achieved the "level of performance" he showed before a shoulder separation against Wake Forest on Sept. 29.

Ross also said he sees his team as similar to North Carolina in that both may have hit their peak.

"They have to win and so do we if we're going to continue to be successful in the ACC," Ross said.

The topic of conversation at Charlottesville this week digressed between the upcoming game and rumors that Coach George Welsh would be going to Notre Dame to replace Gerry Faust.

"I'm not getting into Notre Dame or other jobs or contracts until the season's over," Welsh said. "It's not fair to the team."

Welsh said he didn't think the Mountaineers have any weaknesses.

"They're very aggressive on defense and force a lot of turnovers," Welsh said. "Their defense has helped them win some ball games because they do force turnovers."

Virginia expects to have the services of running backs Howard Petty and Barry Word, both of whom were injured in the victory over Wake Forest 10 days ago.

Speed is what concerns Wake Forest Coach Al Groh. He's worried his team might not be able to keep up with the Clemson fleet of fast backs and receivers.

"They're the fastest team we will play," Groh said. "And they are also the most physical. This is a deadly combination."

The game was scheduled to be played at Winston-Salem, but was moved to Death Valley. Groh would not answer questions on the reasons behind the move.

Danny Ford, who picked up his 50th coaching victory last Saturday, wants to see the Clemson of old this weekend.

"We need to tackle people, to hit people and have them stay hit and to have a little toughness to us, not just stick out our hands and get run over," Ford said.

N.C. State has been close in losses to North Carolina and Clemson, and Coach Tom Reed says his team will have to rise above the adversity of the setbacks which have dropped his team to 3-5.

"We must understand that two weeks in someone's life does not make a lifetime," Reed said. "And the biggest mistake we could ever make would be not to come out and try hard as possible."

In September, Georgia Tech was the toast of the conference and an early candidate to dethrone Maryland. The Yellow Jackets are winless in league play and Coach Bill Curry is not happy.

"There's no question we've made progress, but we haven't made as much as I want to see and it's time for it to happen," Curry said. "And that means people making plays when they're supposed to make them."

In trying to prepare for Georgia Tech, Duke Coach Steve Sloan wasn't worried about the Yellow Jackets as much as his own personnel. So injured is the Duke team that Sloan decided to forego practice on Monday. But just as the coach thinks optimistically, so do his players.

"I don't detect anyone getting down or feeling a sense of hopelessness about the team," said split end Gary Frederick. "We still think good things can happen to us."

Offense Of '90's Doing Its Thing

ITTA BENA, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi Valley's Gunslinger has Willie and World and the Tons of Fun — the so-called Offense of the 1990s. And, it's only 1984.

Coach Archie "Gunslinger" Cooley, architect of the most devastating college football offense since the Wishbone, is within one game of delivering on his warning of five years ago: "It's time to make room at the top for Valley."

It has also become time to make room on the Delta Devils' bandwagon. With traditional local favorites Mississippi, Mississippi State and Southern Miss combining for only eight victories, Valley, 7-0, and Alcorn, 6-0, a pair of predominantly black schools, have captured the state's football lime-light. Sunday's Southwestern Athletic Conference showdown has been moved from Valley's 10,000-seat stadium to the 62,500-seat Memorial Stadium in Jackson.

A sellout is expected to watch Alcorn State try to stop, or at least attempt to slow down, Gunslinger's offensive carnival, a no-huddle, pass-on-every-down juggernaut that has averaged 64 points a game in seven outings.

Alcorn has allowed opponents 11 points a game. Valley, meanwhile, has scored at least 48 in every game.

"At one time I thought I could stop it," said Cooley. "But now it's gone beyond my knowledge of the game. We think we can score each and every time we have the ball."

Quarterback Willie Totten, who directs Gunslinger's exploding offense, agrees.

"I think we're good enough to compete against anybody," said Totten. "We know we can score against anybody. If we're patient and do what we do best, we're going to score on you — and in a big way."

Big, indeed. Totten and his favorite receiver, Jerry "All World" Rice, have hung up staggering numbers.

The 6-foot-2, 190-pound Totten has completed 254 of 389 passes for 3,530 yards and 43 touchdowns; Rice has caught 86 for 1,381 yards and 21 scores.

Totten is only 464 yards shy of the Division I-AA record for passing yards in a season, established by Portland State's Neil Lomax in 1980. Totten has thrown for 8,982 yards in his 26 college games; at that rate, he will surpass Lomax's career record of 13,220 before he's through.

Rice already owns the all-time college football records for receptions (284) and yards (4,392), and needs only six more touchdowns to crack the record of 49. National Football League scouts are saying he's a cinch first-round draft choice.

In case Alcorn has a defensive trick or two up its sleeve, it should remember what happened to Texas Southern two weeks ago.

"People were starting to drop eight people back to defend against our passing, so we took what they gave us," said Totten. Seldom-used fullback Carl Byrum, a 225-pound bruiser, smashed through those smallish defensive backs for 248 yards and two touchdowns. Valley won 55-42.

Alcorn State won't see anything special added to an offense that "basically has only five or six plays — but quite a few options off those plays," said Totten. "We're going to do what we do best, and that's throw the ball. Alcorn is our chance to show everybody just how good we are."

A formation guaranteed to drive any defense to frustration features Totten as the lone back behind an offensive line dubbed the Tons of Fun. Sometimes as many as four receivers line up one one side, with Rice on the other.

If the defense bunches up to stop the Gang of Four, Totten and Rice play pitch-and-catch against man-to-man coverage. If Rice is double-teamed, someone on the other side will be unguarded. The defense can't even huddle to decide which strategy to use.

"You don't do anything in the huddle but call a play and set the snap count," said Cooley. "Why spend all that time when you're walking to the line? Teams can't set their defenses or make adjustments. We had teams use all their timeouts in the first half this year trying to make adjustments."

Valley has never won the championship of the premier black college conference that includes such powers as Grambling, Jackson State and Southern University.

"Our goal is the championship, then the NCAA playoffs and ultimately a national championship," said Totten. "We've got to win Sunday to stay on that track. This is our chance."

NCAA Given Some TV Rights

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal judge says the NCAA can compete with other football organizations in making television packages, but the association also got a tongue-lashing from the bench in the process.

U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga's ruling says the National Collegiate Athletic Association can compete with the College Football Association and others in putting together games for broadcast.

The opinion was filed Wednesday in federal court in Oklahoma City.

But Burciaga, the judge whose ruling broke the NCAA's monopoly on bargaining for TV rights for college football, left no doubt that he didn't fully trust the association to compete fairly.

Burciaga's decision denies contentions by the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia that the NCAA should be barred from the football television market for several years.

It was those two schools whose suit led to the decision — since upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court — that the NCAA's grip on broadcast contracts violated the Sherman Antitrust Act.

He stressed in Wednesday's ruling that there should be an open and competitive market in the field. "I assume the defendant (the NCAA) is well aware of the resources available to this court to achieve its stated purpose should the defendant seek to avoid compliance with the court's injunction."

Both sides in the case said they were happy with the ruling by Burciaga, who sits in Albuquerque but took the case because local judges had too many ties to the University of Oklahoma.

"It sounds like we got most of what we requested," said George Gangwere of Kansas City, an attorney for the NCAA. He said he wanted to read the entire opinion before making a definitive statement.

"We feel good about it," said Clyde Muchmore of Oklahoma City, one of the attorneys for Oklahoma and Georgia. "If they (the NCAA) proceed in the spirit the judge suggested, we don't have the same kind of objections to them having a plan."

Wednesday's opinion modified Burciaga's original order which had voided the NCAA's television contracts with the ABC and CBS networks and barred the NCAA from making similar contracts in the future.

The NCAA appealed to the 10th Circuit Court, arguing Burciaga's order was not specific enough. The 10th Circuit upheld Burciaga's ruling that the NCAA TV plan illegally fixed prices and limited output of televised college football games, but remanded the case to Burciaga for him to consider modifying his order. The Supreme Court then upheld the 10th Circuit on most points.

The NCAA contended that Burciaga's original order might be construed as prohibiting the NCAA from barring televised games on Friday nights, when the high schools play; from imposing television sanctions on member schools for non-television related violations; from televising its own championship games, and might also be construed as barring the NCAA from any role in televised football.

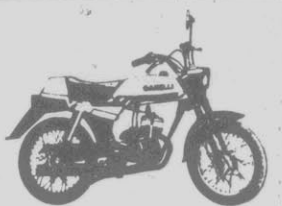

Burciaga aired his suspicions of the NCAA in Wednesday's ruling by referring to an NCAA proposal, later rejected by the schools, that would have given the association control of choice periods for televising football games.

"It also now appears . . . that efforts were undertaken which, at least at first blush, would suggest a persistence on the part of the NCAA to restrict output and stifle competition," Burciaga wrote.

"Again, I cannot recount all the subtle ways which the NCAA may pursue in attempts to restrict output of football television and otherwise seek to impose the very activity this court, as well as the appellate courts, have found to be illegal.

"I say this in order to forcefully impress upon the parties that the court found illegal conduct on the part of the NCAA; that this same or similar conduct, however veiled, will not be condoned by this court."

The Agent Problem: What Can Be Done To Curb It?

By The Associated Press

If as many as a third of premier college athletes, especially football players, sign contracts with agents before the NCAA-allowed deadline — as one prominent agent claims — the questions become "Why?" and "What can be done?"

"Nowadays, the kids don't get anything," Tennessee football Coach Johnny Majors said. "It's not fair, because some of them come from homes where the parents can't afford to send them money."

Majors is one of many coaches and athletic directors who support the idea of paying the athletes up front, giving them perhaps $50 a month or maybe $1,000 a year to cover incidental costs.

"I think that's a possibility," Don James, coach of No. 1-ranked Washington, said. "I'd like to see the players get a little bit more. They do so much for their universities."

"There are problems involved here, though. Can an athletic department afford $50 a month for all college football and basketball players? Can an athletic department afford that amount for all its athletes, both men and women? It probably can't. So the key question would be: Is it (the money) going to be just for football?"

In early 1983, Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker left Georgia a year early and signed a multimillion-dollar contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League after compromising his college eligibility by retaining an agent.

After losing Walker, Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said one of the problems was created by the NCAA itself when it changed its rules several years ago to halt schools from providing spending money and part-time jobs to athletes.

"Some of these fellows have no way of earning any money," Dooley said. "They can't have part-time jobs (during the school year), and if they need to go to school in the summer, they can't work in the summer."

In the last month, Jerry Robinson and Mike Quick of the Philadelphia Eagles and 1983 Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier have admitted violating NCAA rules by signing with agents during their senior seasons.

Leigh Steinberg, one of the leading agents, is the one who says one-third of the top collegians sign with agents before the NCAA deadline.

"The competition level among agents has grown enormously," says Steinberg, who adds that he has never signed an athlete with eligibility remaining. "The creation of the United States Football League means there are more jobs for college football players. And that has drawn new agents into the field. Now there are more agents than there are football players."

Many say Steinberg's estimate is too high.

"One-third sounds like an awfully large number," said Jack Davis of Oregon State University, who also is secretary-treasurer of the NCAA. "But that's not to infer that we believe there isn't a problem."

Temple football Coach Bruce Arians puts the number at 10 percent "at most."

George Andrews, a Chicago lawyer and sports agent, understands the player's situation.

"If a student is on scholarship, he can't have a job. If he's one of 12 children and his family is poor, there's no legitimate place where he can get funds," Andrews says. "That's why kids get into trouble — with gamblers, taking money from alumni or signing contracts with agents."

But Andrews says $50-a-month isn't enough. He suggests "$100, or $1,000 a year."

Those amounts aren't what cause the trouble, says Steve Morgan of the NCAA's enforcement department.

"Generally, the violations don't amount to things like $50 a month or so," he said. "It's usually bigger numbers than that. I don't think anybody is ready to provide big dollars, thousands of dollars."

Rozier was quoted in Sports Illustrated as saying he received $600 a month after signing with an agent.

The NCAA, at its convention in January, approved a resolution urging each school to set up a three-person faculty panel to act as an advisory board, to talk to players on what to look for in an agent, investments and contract law, among other things.

About 25 to 30 Division I schools have panels in business, and other schools are expected to establish them.

In addition, legislation was approved setting up an agent registration program. Agents are asked to fill out lengthy biographical sketches and list all the players they have represented and professional teams they have dealt with.

Agents cannot be forced to register, but, in theory, will have to explain to players why they don't want to register.

"The effect of all this is to try to help put the athlete in touch with the reputable agents," Morgan said. "The focus has not been on punishing anybody."

"One possibility down the road is to change the legislation so that an athlete can agree to be represented by an agent, with the contract going into effect after the athlete has completed his eligibility."

Baltimore Move Seen By Stars

BALTIMORE (AP) — The United States Football League champion Philadelphia Stars were expected to officially announce that they will move to Maryland next spring.

The Stars scheduled news conference today, to be attended by owner Myles Tanenbaum, General Manager Carl Peterson, Coach Jim Mora, and Stars players Chuck Fusina, Kelvin Bryant, Irv Eatman and Scott Fitzkee, as well as Paul Martha, president of the Pittsburgh Maulers.

Randy Hoffman, Maryland associate athletic director, confirmed Wednesday that the Stars and University of Maryland officials had reached an agreement under which the Stars would play in Byrd Stadium in College Park, Md., next spring.

The announcement comes on the heels of reports of negotiations between Tanenbaum and Maulers owner Edward J. DeBartolo Sr.

Last week, Martha announced that the Maulers were "ceasing operations" in Pittsburgh. He said negotiations were continuing between DeBartolo and the Stars toward an agreement that could give De-Bartolo 50 percent ownership of the Stars.

The Stars, who compiled a 35-6 record in the USFL's first two years, announced plans to move to Baltimore after USFL owners approved a switch from spring to a fall schedule in 1986. The change left the Stars in direct competition with the National Football League's Philadelphia Eagles for Veterans Stadium.

Tar Heel Hopefuls Bombard Air Waves

By MARY ANNE RHINE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — They're not peddling used cars, beer or laundry detergents. They are political candidates and they're using television and radio commercials to get your vote.

U.S. Senate candidates Jesse Helms, the Republican incumbent, and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt are the biggest advertisers. But they're being joined by gubernatorial candidates Rufus Edmisten, a Democrat, and Republican Congressman Jim Martin.

Helms and Hunt had spent about $21.8 million on their campaign by Oct. 17, a national record. Of the $21.8 million, Helms spent almost $14 million compared to $7.8 million for Hunt.

Helms outpaced Hunt on fund raising and spending by an almost

2-to-1 margin and Hunt campaign spokesman Will Marshall said he expects Helms to continue running two advertisements for each Hunt commercial.

He said the Hunt campaign has spent more than $200,000 on advertising for the last week before the election.

"We can't match his spending but we are going to have more (ads) than we have been having," Marshall said. "People who watch television will have ample opportunity to see ads by Jim Hunt and Jesse Helms... It will be pretty much a week of pure politics."

But Helms' campaign spokesman Claude Allen said Hunt is outspending the Helms' campaign on media.

"We buy time week by week," Allen said. "They made the single largest advertising buy of the campaign — $500,000 for the month of October, cash up front. We could not do that."

Allen said he did not know how much the Helms campaign has spent for advertising but estimated it amounts to 35 percent of the budget.

The amount of money that has gone for ads prompted Hunt to call this week for campaign spending limits.

"The negative television ad is the soul of Jesse Helms' campaign," Marshall said. "What creativity has gone into his campaign has gone into television commercials."

Helms argues that it would be unconstitutional to limit campaign spending. He contends that he needs to spend more than Hunt because the media is biased toward the Democrat and gives him free access.

Sandwiched in between commercials for Senate candidates will be ads for Martin and Edmisten.

Dan Hoover, spokesman for the Edmisten campaign, refused to say how much money would be spent on advertising or what the content of commercials would be. He said, however, that Edmisten will continue to point out that the governor's race is not a referendum on President Reagan.

Jack Hawke, Martin's campaign manager, said the campaign is spending about $90,000 for the week of commercials. He estimated that the Edmisten campaign is matching that amount.

Like the ads at the beginning of the campaign, the latest Martin commercials feature the congressman standing and casually talking about the race. Hawke said the final ads summarize Martin's positions and ask for the voter's support.

Marshall said the Hunt campaign is not being as selective this week about the time its commercials air because it must take whatever time is available. Allen said the key is deciding which ads to run in the time slot.

"At this point we're reinforcing," Allen said. "Most people have their minds made up. You run ads to reinforce that position."

For the Helms campaign the themes are aligning Hunt with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale and his willingness to raise taxes, questioning Hunt's credibility and showing Helms' ties to President Reagan.

"It's time to sort of sum up themes of the campaign," Marshall agreed. "You will see some more positive spots about his (Hunt's) vision of what North Carolina can be."

Themes that have been repeated recently by the Hunt campaign are Helms' ties to right-wing organizations, a Federal Election Commission investigation into the National Congressional Club and questions about Helms' credibility.

Jay Rockefeller Keeps Up High Campaign Spending

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — John D. Rockefeller used to hand out dimes on the streets of New York. His great-grandson, West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, has expanded the practice considerably with his latest big-money campaign for public office.

Rockefeller's spending in his race for the U.S. Senate topped $9.2 million by mid-October, a rate that would top the $11.6 million mark he set four years ago while running for governor. Of the $9.2 million, $6.9 million came from his personal fortune.

Rockefeller refers to his massive infusions of political money as "aggressive" campaigning. Critics accuse him of something more sinister. "It just borders on corruption," says Republican opponent John Raese, a millionaire newspaper publisher and business owner. "He's buying himself a seat in the United States Senate."

The original John D. Rockefeller handed out his shiny new coins to children along with an admonition to be thrifty. The beneficiaries of his great-grandson's largess are mainly television stations, media consultants and local political organizations that use the cash to hire an army of "election-day workers."

"The governor has tremendous amounts of personal wealth, and he's always felt like it's up to him to spend it the way he sees fit," says state Democratic Chairman Joe Bob Goodwin.

In 1980, Rockefeller saw fit to spend $11.6 million — almost entirely his own money — in a successful re-election campaign against former GOP Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr.

That race prompted a spate of bumper stickers saying, "Make him spend it all, Arch."

Moore apparently failed in that task. Rockefeller, prohibited by the state constitution from running for a third consecutive term as governor, has turned his sights — and his estimated $150 million fortune — on the Senate seat being vacated by Democrat Jennings Randolph.

Raese, who based his primary election campaign in part on the claim that he was the only candidate with the financial resources to battle the governor's green wave, now says he never meant to imply he could keep up — only that he would not "be blown out" as Moore was in 1980.

Raese, who also inherited substantial wealth, had spent only $755,000 on the Senate campaign by the mid-October financial statement filing deadline.

Rockefeller has taken the art of political advertising on television to new levels — or at least new locations.

Attention Sportsmen

Dear Voters of Pitt, Martin and Beaufort Counties:
I am Tom Taft, candidate for the N.C. State Senate. My opponent ran an ad last week suggesting that I favor gun control.

I am opposed to gun control and have always been—that's a fact, plain and simple.

I have owned guns since I was 10 years old, own them today and have a small collection. I have been a duck, goose and dove hunter since I was 9 years old. I have been a member of Ducks Unlimited since 1975, and part of my service in the U.S. Army Reserve was as a Small Arms Armourer, working on pistols, M-14's, M-16's, M-60's, rocket launchers and .50 caliber machine guns. I am also a member of NRA.

My first cousins, Joe Taft, Bill Taft, Edgar Taft, Louis Taft, Dr. Richard Taft, Dr. Charles Taft, Van and Russell Fleming and my brother, Hoover Taft, are avid hunters and fishermen, members of Ducks Unlimited and various hunting clubs in Pitt County.

I am a dedicated advocate of a strong national defense and am a member of the U.S. Air Force Association, the U.S. Naval Institute and the bipartisan Counsel for Peace Through Strength. I support the right of citizens to own and bear arms and to suggest or imply otherwise is an outright, bald-faced untruth.

I ask for your consideration and vote on November 6th and to reject politics of misrepresentation.

Sincerely yours,

Tom Taft

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you are able to see the best imaginative and idealistic plans that can advance your interests as well as be able to reduce such desirable courses of action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Either sit alone or with a good advisor and get a clear picture of what is best to do in order to advance in your career.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discuss with mutual friends how to make your mutual hobbies work far better in the coming weeks.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you want to express your talents better, bring them to the attention of bigwigs who can be of assistance to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Good day for advancement and growth, so apply yourself more energetically.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Try to understand what one in business is saying so that you will know better how to use your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Have a long conversation with that bigwig you know who can easily release the backing you need now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are now able to add precision and fine finish to whatever work you may be doing. Be more cooperative with your fellow workers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to make a special talent bring in more benefits. Then do whatever will increase your romantic happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A situation at home requires thought and study from a new angle. Later have friends in with whom you want to talk.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Adding to present security is wise so that you can have a reserve for any emergencies later on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study any repairs needed to real estate and plan to make them; then work on a plan to have greater security.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You see clearly how you can get more of the good things of life and whatever attracts you the most.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will get along very well with others because of the innate wisdom and kindness in this nature, and will make plans early and then do the necessary work in order to reach goals, so be encouraging in this. Make sure that you accord as fine an education as you can.

Nielson Adjusts Ratings, Gives NBC Top Spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's request that Nielsen prime time ratings for last week include 51 minutes of National Football League overtime kicked the network into first place in a revision protested by CBS, which had been first.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. agreed to NBC's request that it include part of Sunday's telecast of the Raiders-Broncos game that ran over into prime time on the East Coast, NBC spokesman Gene Walsh said Wednesday.

Nielson also increased CBS' rating slightly by including the post-7 p.m. audience for the New York Giants-New England Patriots game on CBS, Walsh said.

About 100 stations were carrying football Sunday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m., and the ratings for those stations were not included in audience measurements that came out Tuesday, he explained.

"Nielsen now has included those stations," he said. "The adjustment resulted in NBC winning the week."

ABC was not affected in last place.

Walsh said the original Nielsen gave NBC an 8.4 rating for the Sunday 7-8 p.m. timeslot, CBS a 24.0 and ABC a 12.2. The revised numbers for the same period gave NBC 19.3, CBS 26.8 and ABC 12.2.

That changed NBC's average rating for the week ended Oct. 28 to a 16.6, compared with CBS' 16.5 and ABC's 15.3, Walsh said. Previously, CBS had been declared the week's winner with a 16.4 rating, to NBC's 16.0 and ABC's 15.3.

Nielson says a 16.6 rating means 16.6 percent of all homes with television — or about 13.9 million households — were tuned to NBC in an average prime time minute.

"The end result is NBC wins for the first time in an awful long time without sports or special programming," Walsh noted.

NBC, on the strength of early season World Series baseball broadcasts and improved ratings for new and returning shows, still maintained a season-to-date ratings advantage of 17.3 to CBS' 16.9 and ABC's 15.3.

CBS, however, challenged the revised Nielsen's, saying that while it agreed the football games should be included, NBC was getting credit for both football and the two shows that normally run from 7-8 p.m. Sunday, "Punky Brewster" and "Silver Spoons."

CBS research vice president David Poltrack said the Raiders-Broncos game, which lasted 3 hours, 51 minutes, ended at 7:51 EST and pre-empted "Punky Brewster" and "Silver Spoons" in the Eastern and Central time zones.

But in West Coast cities such as San Francisco, the Raiders-Broncos game began at 1 p.m. and ended at 4:51 p.m. PST, and "Punky Brewster" and "Silver Spoons" were broadcast from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. as scheduled.

But in order to measure football game audiences equally, Nielsen decided to pretend the Raiders-Broncos game began at 4 p.m. EST, Poltrack said. Thus, Nielsen counted the number of West Coast viewers who watched the 51-minute overtime period, plus those West Coast viewers who watched "Punky Brewster" and "Silver Spoons" between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m., Poltrack said.

"As a result of this procedure, NBC is now getting credit for 'Punky Brewster,' 'Silver Spoons' and football. So San Francisco is getting double counted. They should only count football in those markets where 'Punky Brewster' and 'Silver Spoons' didn't run," Poltrack said.

Prodigy

A recent film about composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart has renewed interest in the 18th Century genius. Mozart's feats as a child seem incredible today, but all are fully documented. At three, he began to teach himself the harpsichord. He was composing at five. He wrote his first symphony when he was eight. Mozart wrote solo works for virtually every instrument — even mechanical clocks and musical glasses. To this day, no one knows where he is buried.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the popular name for Mozart's Symphony No. 41?

When there has been an exciting battle of wits between declarer and the defenders, you wish the contest could end in a draw. Unfortunately, the nature of the game dictates there must be a winner—and a loser.

South was too strong to open one no trump, so he opened one diamond and jumped in no trump at his next turn. North might have done better to rebid three diamonds rather than raise no trump. That would have brought a spade preference from South, and would have led to a slightly sounder contract of four spades.

West led the queen of hearts and continued the suit after declarer made a routine holdup. Declarer won the second trick and, since he obviously could not come to nine tricks without the spade suit, he entered dummy with the nine of diamonds to lead a low spade.

From East's point of view, it was obvious that his partner could not have an entry in a minor suit—the only hope was that West could gain the lead in spades. However, the heart suit would have to be cleared first, so East made the fine play of rising with the ace of spades to return a heart, won in the closed hand.

It was tempting for declarer to cross to the table with a diamond so that he could repeat the spade finesse. Fortunately, declarer

NBC's 'Cartier Affair' Sunday May Be Funniest Film Of New TV Season

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "The Cartier Affair," reminiscent of both a 1930s-style screwball comedy and a French farce, is the funniest movie of the new television season.

In fact, as the November sweeps open, NBC might find itself laughing all the way to the Nielsen ratings bank.

"The Cartier Affair" is a caper film, but it's also a hilarious spoof of Hollywood.

Joan Collins, of ABC's red-hot "Dynasty," plays a parody of herself as the star (Cartier Rand) of a nighttime soap opera. David Hasselhoff, the hunk from NBC's "Knight Rider," pretends to be gay to get past Cartier's jealous lover when he's hired as her male secretary. He's really there to set her up for a jewelry heist to pay off a debt to a "Mr. Big" he met in prison (Telly Savalas).

Naturally, Hasselhoff's Curt Taylor is doing this under duress and falls in love with Cartier. But since he's supposed to be gay he can't reveal his true feelings. Cartier's randy maid figures she can solve his "problem," while Curt's old girlfriend, who has not one social grace, turns up in time to turn a formal dinner party into a shambles.

"It's not pie-in-the-face comedy," said executive producer Leonard Hill. "A lot depends on style as more like a Preston Sturges screwball film than 'Meatballs.'"

The first showing of the movie to the network might have been a scene right out of the film. "Not one network executive laughed. They were too busy looking to see if the boss laughed first," said Hill, a former ABC vice president.

He said he wasn't sure Miss Collins would accept the role because it is a self-parody.

"I kept waiting for her to say Alexis would never approve of this," he said. "But Joan's a true iconoclast. It was also a risk for David. They got along well on the set, but when it got down to the love scenes David chickened out. We were trying for something a little spicier for foreign sales and the videocassettes. Joan was agreeable, but David said, 'I'm newly married. I can't do a nude scene with Joan Collins.'"

The project originated as "The Cartier Heist," written by Michael Devereaux. It never got off the ground, although Miss Collins was interested in it.

When Hill came into the picture, he read the script and felt it had the nucleus of a good movie. He took it to ABC and was given three weeks to come up with an acceptable script.

He hired Brad Buckner and Eugenie Ross-Lemming, who had worked on "Scarecrow & Mrs. King," to do the rewrite.

"They completely changed it," said Hill. "So the project was literally resurrected from the dead."

Hill's instinct as a programmer tells him that "The Cartier Affair" is a risk, but that it could also pay off big in the ratings.

"One thing you learn in Programming 1-A," he said, "is that you always start off a sweeps month with a blockbuster movie. It used to be a big James Bond movie or a theatrical feature starting Clint Eastwood or Burt Reynolds.

"But something happened on Sunday, Feb. 11, 1978. CBS trotted out the biggest film in its inventory, the CBS network premiere of 'Gone With the Wind.' NBC had the premiere of the Oscar-winning 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.' And at ABC we had a TV movie that I had fought hard to get made. It was called 'Elvis.'"

Eddie Murphy Signs Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — The top brass at Paramount Pictures Corp. know a good thing when they see it, and aren't about to let red-hot comedian Eddie Murphy get away.

Murphy, who has already made such box office hits as "48 Hours" and "Trading Places" for Paramount, has signed to do a concert movie and five feature films for the studio, and plans to expand his own entertainment company under a new contract.

"I need a home-base in order to do what I wish to accomplish in this business, and I feel very comfortable at Paramount," Murphy said Wednesday in a statement released by Paramount.

Paramount plans to release "Beverly Hills Cop," the 23-year-old Murphy's first solo starring effort, beginning Dec. 7, and to release next summer a movie of his upcoming nationwide concert tour.

Court Issues Sealed Order In FEC Case

By The Associated Press

A sealed order has been issued in a court suit seeking to force the Federal Elections Commission to rule before Election Day on whether two organizations associated with U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have violated campaign laws, an attorney says.

Neal A. Jackson, a Washington lawyer for the North Carolina Press Association, said he learned that U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer had issued the sealed order Wednesday, but said he didn't know its contents.

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., who brought the suit to try to force a ruling from the FEC, declined to comment Wednesday.

The FEC complaint alleges that Jefferson Marketing Inc. made illegal contributions by providing cut-rate services to Rose's Democratic and Republican opponents in 1982. It also alleges that the National Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing are the same organization.

The club is a Raleigh-based political action committee set up in 1973 to retire Helms' 1972 campaign debt. Jefferson Marketing is a political advertising and consulting agency created by club officials in 1979.

Also Wednesday, delegates to the General Baptist State Convention were told that blacks must use "the ballot and the buck" to return America to the political course set by leaders like the late Dr. Martin Luther King.

Carolyn Coleman, state field director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told members of the predominantly black General Baptist State Convention at their annual meeting in Greensboro that they should go to the polls and take their friends and vote for candidates like Hunt.

The convention represents 1,700 black churches with 400,000 members.

Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt told the group that he would follow Helms' lead and post observers at the polls. At a news conference later, Hunt said the only motive he could imagine for Helms putting observers at the polls was to intimidate black voters.

Helms, who was with volunteers in Asheville, rejected Hunt's call for limits on campaign spending and possible regulations on political advertising. Helms said the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution prohibits such laws.

SENIOR Political Action Committee announced Wednesday that it's endorsing Hunt because of his stands on Social Security and Medicare. The group is the nation's largest independent senior citizens PAC.

Socialist Workers Party candidate for the U.S. Senate, Kate Daher, said Wednesday that there is no difference between Hunt and Helms and charged that problems for workers and farmers will get worse after the election.

Ms. Daher, 33, is chairperson of the Socialist Workers Party in North Carolina.

State Democratic Party Chairman David Price charged Wednesday that Helms and other Republicans "are running afoul of state and federal election laws."

"The Helms campaign and the North Carolina Republican Party are marshalling their resources to use every trick they can think of to tie up polling places and discourage North Carolinians from exercising their right to vote," Price said in a statement he delivered at a Raleigh news conference.

In Greensboro, Sen. Bob Jordan, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, and GOP gubernatorial candidate U.S. Rep. Jim Martin addressed a joint meeting of the N.C. Community College Adult Educators Association and the N.C. Association of Developmental Studies Wednesday.

Jordan pledged to help insulate the N.C. Board of Community Colleges from legislative and political interference if he is elected.

Martin applauded the group's gains in educating high school dropouts and the functionally illiterate.

Democratic budget leaders from the General Assembly renewed attacks on Martin's proposal to repeal the inventory and intangibles taxes and the sales tax on food and over-the-counter medicine.

Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said Martin is "trying to trick the people of this state with his state budget proposal as surely as if he were a con man." Watkins said the plan won't work because it cuts state revenues and will not pay for existing programs.

"It's political rhetoric," said Chris Shields of the Martin campaign. "They can formulate numbers to show their argument just like we can ours."

Martin also was criticized by the N.C. League of Conservation Voters for failing to support the Clean Water Act and for missing votes on the Superfund and Safe Drinking Water Act.

Shields said the group's leadership was composed of Democrats and called the charges "ludicrous." He said Martin was one of the leaders in fighting for the Superfund.

The Sixth District congressional campaign for Howard Coble, a Republican state representative, has started airing television and radio commercials in which President Reagan urges voters to elect Coble.

Coble is trying to unseat Rep. Robin Britt, D-N.C.

The campaign chairman for D.G. Martin, Democratic candidate for the 9th District congressional seat, has released a letter to U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer in which he seeks an investigation of possible campaign violations.

Martin, who is facing Republican Alex McMillan, said unknown persons are sending out campaign material for him in Lincoln and Iredell counties. Martin said the letters do not indicate who paid for them and he did not authorize such mailings.

NRA Suit Dismissed

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court judge Wednesday dropped a case against the National Rifle Association stemming from the group's failure to file with the State Board of Elections.

Judge Henry Barnette dismissed the proceedings, saying North Carolina's election code does not apply to the NRA because it acted legally as a corporation and because the election law is unconstitutionally broad in its definition of a political committee.

The Washington-based organization in April mailed letters to its 38,700 North Carolina members opposing former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox for governor in the May 8 primary. Knox later lost in a runoff to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

The letters said Knox had advocated handgun control which a state senator in 1974.

In May the State Board of Elections determined that the NRA probably had violated state law by participating in a political campaign without registering as a group trying to influence an election.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said he planned to bring the ruling to the Legislature's attention. "I think it's a regrettable ruling," Brock said.

Co-Op Says Leaf Sales Increasing

RALEIGH (AP) — Buyers of flue-cured tobacco have bought or promised to buy nearly 74 million pounds of heavily discounted tobacco from the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., co-op officials said Wednesday.

"We're very pleased with these sales ... and we expect to sell a good amount of tobacco," said Arthur Jackson, manager of the co-op's accounting department. "These prices are competitive, and we think we're down where the market is."

The special program announced last week offers discounts of 50 percent to 90 percent on the base price of each pound of 1976-81 "old crops" held by the grower-owned cooperative.

To qualify for the program, buyers must purchase tobacco from the 1982-84 "new crops," which the co-op also is discounting by 10 percent.

Of the 74 million pounds sold since the new price plan was implemented, 24.5 million pounds are from the old crops and 33.6 million pounds are from the new crops, Jackson said.

Another 15.5 million pounds from the new crops has been committed for sale, but the grade of tobacco to be sold has not been chosen, he said. In addition, another half-million pounds of the 1977 crop has been sold, but not under the reduced price package.

CAMPAIGNING — Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., left, hugs Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., during a campaign stop Wednesday in Raleigh. Denton campaigned for

New Candidates Seek Council Of State Jobs

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina voters in November will elect successors to two high-profile, veteran members of the Council of State — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Both men sought the Democratic nomination for governor, won by Edmisten, attorney general for the past 10 years. Ingram, a three-term insurance commissioner, endorsed Edmisten after the first primary and is widely rumored to be in line for a Cabinet post or other top appointment should Edmisten be elected.

Seeking the attorney general's post are Lacy H. Thornburg, a Democrat and former Superior Court judge from Webster, and C. Allen Foster, a Republican attorney from Greensboro.

Jim E. Long, a former Democratic state representative and counsel to House Speaker Liston Ramsey, is running for insurance commissioner against Richard T. Morgan, a Republican from Pinehurst.

The remaining Council of State jobs are held by Democrats seeking re-election, and all but one — Treasurer Harlan Boyles — face GOP opposition.

Although the council traditionally has been a Democratic stronghold, state Republican Chairman David Flaherty says the GOP is unusually strong this year and may produce some upset winners.

"It's conceivable that we can carry the Council of State," said Flaherty. "We're hoping that the top of the ticket (President Reagan, Sen. Jesse Helms and gubernatorial nominee Rep. Jim Martin) creates such a commitment to the Republican cause that people will vote for our candidates in the other races, too."

David Price, state Democratic chairman, said the incumbents were taking their opponents seriously. "Every single one of them will campaign," he said. "I think our chances in each (race) are very good, but no one's taking anything for granted."

Thornburg, who served three terms in the state House from 1961-65, was a Superior Court judge in Jackson County for 16 years before stepping down last year to run for governor. In January, he switched to the attorney general's race.

Foster, a Duke University law instructor, has degrees from Princeton, Oxford and Harvard. He practices law in Greensboro, focusing on construction cases.

Both candidates are conservative, supporting the death penalty and programs to help crime victims. But while Thornburg focuses on a "victims' bill of rights" and promises to "keep a high profile before the Utilities Commission in behalf of consumers," Foster stresses initiating legislation and assisting local prosecutors.

Foster says the attorney general's office should be run "like the biggest law firm in the state" and accuses Thornburg of planning to pack the office with political allies who would help him prepare to seek a higher office.

"North Carolina needs an attorney general who is not a professional politician ... but, instead, is a practicing lawyer more interested in public service than in another job on the public payroll," said Foster.

Thornburg says he would work to improve the office's efficiency and would appear before agencies and appellate courts, maintain "the best possible rapport with law enforcement," and speak at law schools.

Long, 43, the candidate for insurance commissioner, says he wants to turn the department in a more consumer-oriented direction. He supports creating an emergency-response unit to handle disasters such as Hurricane Diana and the tornadoes that struck the state this year.

Morgan, a businessman who was in the administration of former Gov.

Jim Holshouser, promises to improve Insurance Department morale he says was jolted by a lengthy "sparring match" between Ingram and the General Assembly. Morgan also calls for a "citizens' committee" on insurance matters.

If history is any indication, perhaps the safest seat is held by Secretary of State Thad Eure, 84, who has been in office 48 years. The self-proclaimed "oldest rat in the Democratic barn" was hospitalized this summer with a respiratory ailment, but recovered and says he's in good health.

Eure faced his first-ever female opponent in this year's Democratic primary, in which he defeated former Wake County Commissioner Betty Ann Knudsen. His second woman challenger is the GOP nominee, Patric Dorsey of New Bern.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks overcame a stiff challenge from state Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, to win renomination. Barnes attacked the two-term incumbent as abrasive and a poor administrator who couldn't get along with the General Assembly or organized labor. Brooks touted his record and said complaints about his personality were from people who wanted him to be a "yes man."

Running against Brooks this fall is Margaret F. Plemmons, a Republican member of the Forsyth County Board of Education and vice-president of a high-technology company. She says she would recruit new industry and seek better working conditions for the state's labor force.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips is being challenged by Gene S. Baker, an elementary school principal from Pikeville in Wayne County.

Baker criticizes many of the initiatives pushed by Phillips, such as regional education centers, and a career ladder for teachers. Baker also opposes longer school days and academic years, with which the state has experimented in Polk and Halifax counties.

Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham is running for re-election against Leo Tew of Raleigh. Graham touts his record, including service in the job he's held since 1964, while Tew complains that Graham has an ineffective, "good ole boy, business-as-usual" approach and hasn't done enough to protect the small family farm. Tew says he'd emphasize research on uses and nutritional value of farm products and seek overseas markets for North Carolina farm products.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow is seeking his second term against James E. Hicks of Conover. Renfrow says he has improved the office's fiscal responsibility and proposed a 1983 "Accountability Act" for state government. He vowed to seek a clear definition of "deficit spending," saying the Legislature sometimes lacked evidence that it was adopting balanced budgets.

Hicks says he'd "protect the integrity" of the budget and use his experience as an accountant to make sure the state spends wisely.

Two N.C. Supreme Court justices, both Democrats, are seeking re-election. Burley Mitchell is being challenged by Republican Arthur Donaldson of Salisbury, and Republican Clarence C. Boyan hopes to unseat Henry Frye.

Unopposed for re-election are the following state Appeals Court judges, all Democrats: Gerald Arnold of Fuquay-Varina, Charles Becton of Durham, R.A. Hedrick of Raleigh, John Martin of Durham, Earl Vaughn of Raleigh and John Webb of Wilson.

League Will Accept Tax Repeal

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — If the state replaces the money lost by the repeal of the inventory and intangibles taxes, the North Carolina League of Municipalities says it will not oppose the proposal.

The league's vote to support repeal of the intangibles and inventory taxes reverses the stand it took during the last session of the General Assembly. Votes establishing league policy for the 1985 legislative session took place during the group's annual convention, which ended Tuesday.

"It could be replaced through a bond issue or perhaps through an additional half-cent of sales tax," Fred Baggett, the league's general counsel, said.
