Mondale Asks Blacks, Hispanics To Help

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Walter F. Mondale is urging blacks and Hispanics to give him a late-hour election surge that would confound the polls while President Reagan is winding down his campaign in California. As the candidates turned toward home, every voter survey pointed to a big win for Reagan and gave Republicans cause to dream of coattail gains in congressional races.

"Make certain everybody votes; don't despair, don't give up," Mondale told a black audience at a Baptist Church in Memphis, Tenn., on Sunday. Later in Texas he made a similar appeal to Hispanics and pledged to include someone of Spanish descent in his Cabinet.

Reagan, hoping for a 50-state sweep, made an unexpected stop in Mondale's home state of Minnesota on Sunday for an airport news conference. While there the president softened his no-tax-increase stand and said, "It would have to be proven to me there is some excuse for doing such a thing."

The day before, Reagan had said taxes would be raised "over my dead body."

Reagan campaign director Ed Rollins said the campaign was making last-minute shifts "to try to win everything," in a potential 50-state sweep in Tuesday's voting.

The president was beginning his final campaign day in Sacramento and then planning appearances in Los Angeles and San Diego before going to his ranch to wait for the results on Tuesday.

Mondale was in Los Angeles and then was scheduled to be in Mason City, Iowa, before heading for his home outside St. Paul, Minn.

Mondale's running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, was spending her last campaign day in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey before winding up in New York City.

Vice President George Bush was making two stops in Texas before going to his home in Houston.

The final polls were pointing to a Reagan landslide, with three major surveys putting the president's lead between 18 and 25 points. A survey by Louis Harris said Reagan was in front by 12 points, while a Roper Organization poll said the margin was 10 points.

The final state-by-state survey by The Associated Press said Mondale was leading only in the District of Columbia and Minnesota.

Those figures were encouraging Republicans to predict strong gains in House races with the prospect of recouping their 1982 losses and being in a position to join with conservative Democrats to exert the sort of ideological control they had during Reagan's first two years in office.

"Our goal was to get, at a minimum, the seats we lost '82, and I think that is very much in the realm of possibility," said House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois. The GOP lost 26 seats in the recession year of 1982, and Michel said bouncing back this year and "getting 30 is not unrealistic."

Rep. Tony Coelho of California, chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee, said, "We're still saying that we don't anticipate more than seven pickups or seven lost."

The Democrats have scaled back their hopes of regaining control of

"I'M YOUR NEXT GOVERNOR" ... Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten, being filmed up close by a TV cameraman, predicts victory in Tuesday's election during his speech at a rally Sunday afternoon at the King and Queen North Restaurant in Greenville. The rally was the last major campaign stop for Edmisten, who is winding up his campaign with a number of brief airport appearances today.

Edmisten Holds Final Rally

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The final big-scale campaign stop for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten at the King and Queen North Restaurant in Greenville Sunday afternoon drew a large gathering of well-wishers despite inclement weather. Edmisten also scheduled a brief appearance at the Pitt-Greenville airport today.

Long before the 3 p.m. beginning time for Sunday's rally, streams of people patiently wound their way into the building. Supporters from more than 14 eastern North Carolina counties drove to Greenville to back the Edmisten campaign. Several groups arrived on chartered buses. Eastern North Carolina sheriffs were well represented, with more than a dozen of them on hand.

The atmosphere was festive, with a country band playing non-stop until the 3:45 p.m. hour when Edmisten and his special guests mounted the stage to give brief statements to the packed house.

Because of the festive nature of this final Edmisten rally in this campaign, little mention was made of individual issues — with the exception of a reference to polls appearing in Sunday papers which predict Republican victory for major North Carolina's candidates.

Hot-dogs, cold drinks, coloring books, Edmisten posters and balloons were distributed to adults and the sizeable number of children attending the rally.

First District Congressman Walter Jones Sr. was the honored guest at the rally. "I love all the people up here on the stage, but I love you down there (the audience) even more," Jones quipped. "You're the ones who elect me, the people I love and serve."

"I don't particularly want a governor from Charlotte, South Carolina," Jones commented. "I prefer to have one, like Rufus here, who knows where Chocowinity and Bear Grass are."

"The polls don't bother me," Jones asserted, "they change by the hour anyway."

Edmisten told his listeners "we will not let the polls tell us what to do."

Fishermen From Martin Found Dead

STUMPY POINT, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of two Martin County fishermen who had been missing for two days were found Sunday following a search by Coast Guard officials, authorities said.

Rick Macias, 60, and Wilbert Long, 57, both of Robersonville, had been reported missing late Friday evening after they didn't return from a fishing trip in Pamlico Sound, according to Petty Officer Steve Jensen, a Coast Guard spokesman.

The two were found following an air and sea search that started Saturday and continued Sunday. Two helicopters and a C-130 airplane along with several boats were used in the search, he said.

Macias and Long left Stumpy Point in an 18-foot boat, owned by Long, on Friday morning and were expected to return Friday night, Jensen said.

Long's body was found by a Coast Guard boat shortly after noon and Macias' body at about 3 p.m., Jensen said. He said the boat was not found and that it was presumed sunk.

Tuesday Vote May Attract 80 Pct. Of Pitt Electorate

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Eighty percent or more of the 45,506 registered voters in Pitt County are expected to cast ballots Tuesday's general election.

The 24 precinct polling places will be open from 6:30 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. because, for the first time, all precincts in the county will be equipped with new vote tabulating machines.

Voters will receive eight different ballots to mark, including ballots for: president, U.S. Senate, member of Congress and state offices; state Senate; state House of Representatives; district and county Officers; state judicial officers; Superior Court judges and constitutional amendment and Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Supervisors.

Races with the most interest include the presidential race, where incumbent Republican Ronald Reagan faces opposition from Democrat Walter Mondale, Libertarian David Bergland and Socialist Workers Party candidate Mel Mason; the race for the U.S. Senate, where incumbent Republican Jesse Helms faces opposition from Democrat Jim Hunt, Libertarian Bobby Emory and Socialist Workers' Kate Daher, and the race for governor, where the major competition is between Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin and Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

In other races 1st District Rep. Walter Jones faces Republican Herbert Lee for the U.S. House; Democrat Robert Jordan faces Republican John Carrington for the office of lieutenant governor; incumbent Secretary of State Thad Eure faces Republican Patric Dorsey in his bid for re-election; incumbent Ed Renfrow faces a Grocery prices held steady in October, dipping less than one-tenth of 1 percent on lower meat and egg prices, the monthly AP Market-basket survey found.

The tab for 14 commonly purchased items fell 1.7 percent during September.

The latest results showed that prices increased in eight cities an average of 2 percent. They decreased in five cities an average 3.4 percent.

Beef frankfurters fell 1.5 percent and chopped chuck slipped 0.4 percent. Eggs dropped 2.7 percent.

On the upside, butter rose 0.5 percent and peanut butter gained 1.1 percent. Pork chops, which had slid 9.4 percent in September, rose a slim 0.4 percent.

"There's a little up here, a little down there, but overall things are flat and that's a pretty nice impression. Really, that's the way you like to see prices," said David A. Wyss, an economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"The marketbasket price index seems to bounce around enough that anything under 1 percent is pretty much rounding," Wyss said.

"If it keeps going in the same direction for a few months in a row then its time to get worried, or time to be happy, depending on which direction," he said.

But falling prices can cause as many problems as rising prices, he added, explaining: "One person's price is another person's income. If you have egg prices falling steadily, you have some very unhappy poultry farmers out there."

Bob Saathoff, director of commodity research at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, attributed the recent declines in egg prices to continued increases in egg production.

"You're going to be looking at higher egg production throughout 1984 and mid-1985. That should hold your egg prices lower, except for the seasonal rallies at Thanksgiving and Christmas with everyone cooking and baking," he said.

Asked about the decline in beef prices, he said wholesale beef prices have been drifting lower the past three months because there have been near-record supplies of meats available.

A seasonal slackening in demand for chuck has pressured prices, too, he said.

"Chuck is a more popular item in the wintertime," he said, adding that consumers should expect the price of chopped chuck to rise in the next few months as demand rises and farmers cut back on slaughter.

Asked about the reversal in pork chop prices, he said, "You've seen about the low on the pork loins. That's going to drift higher, too."

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey found more items fell during October than September.

The Associated Press drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list several years ago because the manufacturer discontinued the package, size used in the survey.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying, for example, a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It is used to keep track of changes in the proportion of the food dollar received by the farmer, wholesaler and retailer and does not correspond to actual family spending.

Fire Destroys Old Buildings In Venice

VENICE, Italy (AP) — A flash fire erupted today at a gymnasium-sauna in a 15th century building in the historic center of this lagoon city, spreading quickly to a nearby 16th century structure and causing a major power outage, police said.

No injuries were reported in the blaze.

Police, who said it was the worst fire in central Venice in many years, estimated damage at more than $3 million.

The blaze destroyed the gymnasium-sauna complex and 15 apartments in the two buildings on Campo della Guerra, authorities said. Both three-story structures — a 15th century Gothic building and a 16th century Renaissance building — were gutted.

The burned buildings are about 500 yards from St. Mark's Square.

The fire caused a four-hour power outage in the area around St. Mark's Square. The number of customers affected was not immediately known.

Fire officials said a preliminary inquiry indicated the fire was caused by an electrical short circuit in the gymnasium-sauna complex.

and Ernest Brown. Awards for area coordinators went to Clifford Phifer of Washington, James Wynn of New Bern, "Bing" Miller of Wilson and Freager R. Sanders Jr. of Greenville.

The address on "The Importance of Black Political Action Now" was given by Dr. Donald Ensley, ECU professor, school of allied medicine. Freager R. Sanders Jr., area district representative, presided over the program. Also included in the program were D.D. Garrett Sr., Wilson McDowell James Ebron Jr., Willie L. Morris, William Beason and N.W. U.S. Joins Ethiopian Airlift

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The first U.S. aircraft to join the airlift of food and supplies to 6 million Ethiopian famine victims arrived in Addis Ababa carrying spare parts and extra crew members.

The plane was the first of two Hercules L-382 transports chartered by the U.S. government to participate for at least two months in the 50-plane airlift. It carried none of the foodstuffs included in the nearly $60 million in emergency aid the U.S. Agency for International Development, or AID, has earmarked for Ethiopia.

Instead of the extra crew members and spare parts delivered Sunday will help keep the plane flying during the airlift organized to move donations from around the world to remote, drought-stricken areas.

M. Peter McPherson, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, or AID, also arrived in Addis Ababa from Washington on Sunday for a first-hand look at relief operations.

A rebel group meanwhile accused Ethiopia's Marxist, military government of withholding relief aid in two provinces that are strongholds for secessionist movements. The Tigre People's Liberation Front said in a statement released in Khartoum, Sudan that drought victims were being denied relief in Tigre and Wollo provinces, where opposition movements are seeking independence.

McPherson, who is to inspect relief centers in those provinces during his scheduled four-day visit to Ethiopia, arrived Sunday morning on a commercial flight just before the first U.S. transport touched down at Addis Ababa's Bole Airport. The transport cleared immigration formalities within an hour and then flew to Asmara in the north, where it will be used to ferry food and supplies.

The airlift was organized because authorities said it would take days and weeks longer to truck tons of donated food overland from harbors and airports to areas where people are starving.

A second U.S.-chartered Hercules was due to arrive today and also operate for at least two months out of Asmara, capital of Eritrea province.

TEMPORARY CROWNS

If you'll be waiting for a crown to be fitted to a tooth, chances are you'll be given a temporary crown until the permanent one is ready. The "temporary" will have cosmetic value in maintaining the appearance of your mouth. It will also serve some important functions, such as maintaining the proper space and bite relationships with adjacent and opposing teeth. Often the temporary crown will be made of acrylic material of the exact shade to match your other teeth. But it is not intended to last very long, only until the permanent crown is in place to give the tooth long-lasting protection. Sometimes a temporary crown may have to last several months. This can happen if other work has to be completed before the crown is put in place. If this is the case, a longer-lasting temporary crown will be made. This may be made of a heat-processed acrylic, which has a harder, more durable finish than the usual acrylic, or of some other wear-resistant material.

Cynthia Jean Langley Marries A.C. Wadford

The wedding ceremony of Cynthia Jean Langley and Alton Clifford Wadford took place Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Winterville Baptist Church. Performing the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Ed Taylor and the Rev. Charles Branch.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gene Langley and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Earl Wadford, all of Greenville.

Linda Weathersby of Ayden played the organ. Rick and Angie Langley, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Anita Little, all of Greenville, were soloists. Their selections included "There Is Love," "Thought The Eyes of Love," "Endless Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Kimberly Everette of Ayden and Leigh Langley of Greenville were honor attendants for their sister. Bridesmaids included Sheila Mizell, cousin of the bride, and Terry Raines, both of Ayden, Laura Fitzsimon and Juanita Zimei, both of Greenville.

Keri Braswell of Farmville was flower girl and the ring bearer was Bryan Gray of Elizabeth City.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Thomas and Steve Wadford, cousins of the bridegroom, and Ken Little, all of Greenville, Cleve Mills of Grimesland, cousin of the bridegroom, and Vince Hankins of Raleigh.

The wedding was directed by Paul and Evelyn Spangler of Greenville.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie. The Victorian inspired gown featured a high neckline encircled with ruffled lace and white satin ribbon. The fitted bodice was styled with a sheer yoke overlaid in a V-shaped ruffle accented with panels of white satin ribbon. The full bishop styled sleeves were trimmed in the ruffled chantilly lace and white satin ribbon. The full skirt and attached chapel length train featured tiers of ruffled chantilly lace interspersed with bands of white satin ribbon. She wore a chapel length veil of imported illusion held in place by a tiara headpiece trimmed in crystal pleated chantilly lace and seed pearls. The bride carried a cascade on a prayer book of white silk roses and stephanotis.

The honor attendants wore formal gowns in royal blue taffeta fashioned with sweetheart necklines and bows on the shoulders accented melon shaped sleeves. The flared skirt was accented with a cummerbund. Each carried a nosegay of ivory gardenias, lavender pom poms and royal miniature carnations with streamers in royal, lavender and eggshell.

The bridesmaids wore gowns identical to the honor attendants' and their bouquets were similar with royal and eggshell streamers. The flower girl wore a formal gown, off-shoulder with a ruffle. The silk skirt of lace overlay was gathered to a satin ribbon at the waistline. She carried a white basket with royal blue flowers with royal, lavender and eggshell streamers.

MRS. WADFORD

The mother of the bride wore a periwinkle lustreglo and chiffon gown fashioned with a V-neckline. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal gown of ice blue qiana styled with a V-neckline with lace insert. Both wore cymbidium orchids.

The grandmothers were honored with white pom pon corsages.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

The bridegroom attended J.H. Rose High School and Pitt Community College. He is employed at Doodle's Auto Parts. The bride attended D.H. Conley High School and is employed at Belk Tyler.

A reception followed the church ceremony and was held in the church fellowship hall and was coordinated by Elaine Nichols, aunt of the bride.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a pig picking after the rehearsal Saturday evening at the Winterville Community Building.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given by the bride to honor her attendants. A lingerie shower and a miscellaneous shower were held prior to the ceremony.

Dance Classes With Kids Break Teacher's Routine

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Bill Beal dressed like the other students in his break-dancing class, with a sheared T-shirt and high-top sneakers, but he still stood out.

That's what happens when a 54-year-old high school teacher enrolls in a private dance studio class devoted to knee spins, swipes, the "helicopter" and the "centipede."

The Spanish teacher encountered break dancing for the first time last fall when students asked if they could practice during lunch hour as he prepared a lesson in his classroom at Reedley High School southeast of Fresno.

"I saw them and I thought, 'Hey, this is better than having lunch with the teachers sitting around complaining about the school,'" he said.

Beal took the young dancers under his wing, supervised the formation of The Dynamic Krew and arranged shows for them at school and community functions.

"They were willing to teach me, but they had no experience," said Beal, who prefers ballroom and tap dancing. "I thought if I took a class, an adult would be teaching the class. At least, that's what I assumed."

But dance studio owner Cynthia Merrill of Fresno found "I had to get high school kids. Adults can't do it or haven't been doing it long enough to teach it."

Aside from a woman in her 20s who received the class as a birthday present, Beal was the only adult in attendance. The next oldest student was a 14-year-old girl.

Beal expected to learn strenuous moves based on what he saw in his classroom and thought he could perform them because he was acrobatic in his youth.

"Until I was 12, they didn't know which end I was going to walk on," he said. "I could walk up and down steps on my hands."

But breaking was more work than Beal had anticipated.

"I used to do everything. I used to have a lot of bad falls, but I'm not willing to do that anymore," he said. "You don't realize how the years stack up. I still think of myself doing a backward hand spring."

The key to break dancing is practice, and Beal said he didn't have much chance to work out while he was taking the class because he was driving his lunch time breakers to shows.

"I can do a few things, but I have never worked at it," he said. "I do knee spins and back spins and stuff like that."

Beal cannot do the "helicopter," but proudly exclaimed, "I can do the 'worm,' and the 'centipede.'" He explained the latter as a move in which a person undulates like a worm on the stomach, rolling and kicking forward.

"I really do admire kids who can go through that because it is so rigorous," he said. One of his students took a two-week break from breaking, practiced one move and got worn out.

"Sometimes I think I lead a dull life, but then I think of all I'm doing and it's not so dull," he said. "I guess that's sort of my philosophy, that you're never too old to start."

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A recipe for Country Captain — a lightly curried chicken dish — appeared in a cookbook published early in this country. Ever since, numerous versions of that rule have cropped up.

Here is the latest variation I have come upon, created at Hubert's, a delightful New York restaurant.

COUNTRY CAPTAIN

A LA HUBERT'S

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 3 pounds chicken parts
- 1 1/2 teaspoons curry powder
- 2 cups diced tomatoes
- 3/4 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Black pepper to taste
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped drained chutney

- 2 cups slivered (matchstick size) sweet red pepper
- 2 cups slivered (matchstick size) green pepper
- 2 tablespoons flour blended with 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 2 tablespoons currants
- 1/4 cup slivered almonds, toasted (see Note)
- 1 or 2 thinly sliced small scallions

In a large skillet, over moderate heat, heat oil; add chicken and brown on all sides. Push chicken to side of skillet.

Add curry powder to oil in skillet; stir until it darkens — about 10 seconds. Add tomatoes, water, salt, black pepper and chutney; bring to a boil. Simmer, covered, until chicken is almost tender — about 45 minutes.

Add red and green pepper; simmer, covered, until peppers are almost tender — about 3 minutes. Remove chicken to a serving platter and keep hot in a warm oven.

To skillet, add flour-wine mixture and currants; cook, stirring constantly, until thickened — about 3 minutes; pour over chicken. Serve over rice. Garnish with almonds and scallions.

Note: To toast the almonds, spread over bottom of an 11 1/2 by 7 1/2 by 1 1/2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, stirring occasionally, until toasted — 5 to 7 minutes.

LIGHT SUPPER

- Soup & Salad
- Apple Betty & Topping
- LYDIE'S TOPPING

In a 1-quart bowl with an electric beater, beat 3 ounces cream cheese until fluffy — about 30 seconds. Add 1/2 cup heavy cream and 1/4 cup sugar; beat until blended, scraping bowl as necessary. Beat in 1 tablespoon cognac. Makes about 1 cup. Serve with Apple Betty or similar puddings.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

LIFE EXPECTANCY

AT ALL-TIME HIGH
HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Americans are living longer than ever, according to a report in Family Practice News.

The medical publication says the average American born in 1981 could expect to live 74.2 years, a rise from 73.7 in 1980 and 73.9 in 1979.

The increase in life expectancy is shared equally by men and women, although total life expectancy still is longer for women by an average of 7.5 years, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

Four causes of death — heart disease, cancer, stroke and accidents — continue to account for nearly three of four deaths in the United States, while chronic pulmonary disease, suicide and blood disease increased as a cause of death between 1980 and 1981.

Ladies, Especially For You

Dear Ladies,

Tomorrow there will be 12 hours in which you will make a most important decision: who will be your next State Senator. Your decision will affect the lives of everyone in eastern North Carolina. I want to recommend a man to you who is well qualified for this job, my husband of 29 years, Maynard Waters. His experience as a father, pastor, businessman and farmer have uniquely prepared him to represent all of us. I know him to be a kind, compassionate man who really cares. He is a leader of proven character and dependability.

I want to personally invite you to join me tomorrow and vote for Maynard Waters for State Senate.

Sincerely,

Kay Waters

Firefighter Favors Use Of Smoke Detectors

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. A very big one.

For three years I was tormented by a Jewish ghost who thought I was his wife. I moved into the apartment where he and his wife once lived. They both died, but he kept coming back to the apartment to be near her.

After three years, I just couldn't take it anymore, so I moved. Well, he followed me, and now I am right back where I started.

Abby, how can I get rid of him? I am a widow, and I'm not even Jewish. I'm Catholic.

KATHLEEN IN THE BRONX

DEAR KATHLEEN: Have you told your priest about this? If not, please tell him at once. He may be able to arrange an exorcism to rid you of this "Jewish ghost."

DEAR ABBY: With regard to your column on fire prevention: Your closing sentence was, "It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it?"

While it was well-worth the three minutes, I would have gladly spent a few more minutes to find out why you felt compelled to compare Canada's comparatively low death and fire-damage figures to those of the United States.

HOT WITH CURIOSITY
IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR HOT: Cool off. It was not my intention to make comparisons. I cited Canadian statistics as well as ours because my column is also published in Canada, and I think my Canadian readers are entitled to know their statistics, too.

And apropos that column on fire prevention, read on for one of many similar complaints:

DEAR ABBY: As a firefighter I appreciate your annual column on fire prevention, but I have a complaint. You said, "If you can afford smoke detectors, install them, etc...."

Abby, everybody can afford smoke detectors! They are not that expensive. One can be purchased for as little as $15.

If there is one single thing that saves lives in a fire, it's a smoke detector. It alerts people in time to let them get out of the house. Those few seconds can make the difference between life and death. Please print this.

FIREFIGHTER
IN BABYLON, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I know this isn't your usual "Dear Abby" question, but I don't know anyone else to ask.

I moved to Harrington Park, N.J., five months ago, and started feeding the birds on my property. I had 20 or more birds every day. Some were beautiful.

Then one day they suddenly disappeared. I have several trees on my property, and not one bird in any of them! No pesticide was sprayed, and there are no cats or dogs around.

Can you please tell me what might have happened to those birds?

MRS. C.

DEAR MRS. C.: The birds probably went south for the winter. You don't say where you came from, but after one winter in New Jersey, you'll realize that those birds are not cuckoos.

Final Poll

It all comes together Tuesday. That's when you take charge.

An incredible number of millions of dollars have been spent to influence voters in behalf of people running for everything in sight — from the White House to governorships and legislative seats. It tells you something about how valuable your vote is to other people. (It is even more precious to you.)

If you are one of those complaining that pollsters have never sought your opinion (and we hear complaints, too), Tuesday is the day you can let it all hang out.

This will be the poll to end all polls ... the one that really counts, not only in the choice of office holders but in setting courses in government.

Think about it: there are a lot of people who do not want you to vote; nor do they want others who see things as you do, to vote. They are different from you. They would prefer you (and others like you) to stay home on Tuesday.

Your votes do make a difference.

Pitt County commissioners have put time and money into assuring all registered voters an opportunity to vote. They acquired machines to speed up the process, and on top of that, extended the hours for voting.

Everybody is looking for a large turnout and public interest is high.

Large turnouts mean lines at the polling places. You don't like waiting in line? State Elections Director Alex Brock has a helpful tip:

Generally, he says, the shortest lines will be found in the morning after the early morning rush that lasts from 6:30 to about 8:30 a.m. And anyone who can get free to vote before lunch, or after lunch but before the evening rush hour, will save time, says Brock.

Gandhi

Assassins rarely get to learn whether they really changed the world by their murders. Their survival rate is poor.

Did Cain improve his status? Did Cassius, Brutus et al solve Rome's problems, or raise new ones?

In later years John W. Booth might have realized that in killing Lincoln he did more harm than good to the South.

When the Kennedy brothers were killed, and when Martin L. King Jr. was killed, their causes were actually advanced by the crimes. Remember?

Now Indira Gandhi is dead. There is no reason to think her murder accomplished anything except incite more hatred, more killings, more destruction.

We grant you that Prime Minister Gandhi angered large numbers of her own people and her policies disturbed other governments, too; but she also had the near-impossible task of governing a people divided by factors of religion, race, economies, traditions, old rivalries and even lingering traces of the old caste system. Molding them into one land and one people would be frustrating for the most dedicated, most strong-willed of leaders; and she was all of that.

Our compassion is for the people of India. Their torment and grief in the wake of assassination has been known by others.

The democracy embarked upon by India's multitudes is far from dead. Our experiences tell us India too will continue to adapt and learn as we are still doing in America.

Reagan Ad Disarmed Before Showing

WASHINGTON — An unusual Reagan television commercial showing a bear symbolizing a Soviet threat was disarmed before the drawing board and the actual filming.

The original version called for the hunter in the commercial to carry a gun and aim it at the bear. But Hal Riney, the San Francisco advertising executive working on the Reagan commercials, is an environmentalist and objected strenuously to depiction of firearms.

When the owner of the bear also asserted that he wanted no weapon pointed at his animal, the commercial was changed. Reagan operatives grumbled that the punch had been removed from the campaign's most unique advertisement, but even so it attracted phenomenal attention in such wilderness states as Minnesota.

A veiled reprimand has been sent to Rep. Geraldine Ferraro by the House Ethics Committee. The reprimand contradicts her statement during her debate with Vice President George Bush that she asked the committee to expedite its probe into her financial reports to the House.

The confidential Oct. 17 letter, signed by committee chairman Rep. Louis Stokes and ranking Republican Rep. Floyd Spence, was pointed. They told the Democratic vice presidential nominee that "our staff met with your counsel" Oct. 11 and "there was no request on counsel's part to expedite committee action."

It was later on Oct. 11 in the Philadelphia debate with Bush that Mrs. Ferraro made the claim that "I have asked them — the committee — to move along." Stokes and Spence requested "clarification." Committee sources would not tell us if they got it.

Among President Reagan's advisers before the Kansas City debate was the victim of the first presidential debates 24 years earlier: Richard M. Nixon.

Talking to Reagan over the telephone, Nixon gave him a few debating tips. A more complete briefing of foreign policy was provided the president by Nixon's secretary of state, Henry Kissinger.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese, nowhere to be seen in the WASHINGTON (AP) — A president's mandate is whatever he says it is, for however long he can make it stick. Landslides help and coattails count, but the power to govern does not come with a guarantee of the power to lead effectively.

On every political form chart, President Reagan is looking at a landslide in Tuesday's election, with a 50-state shutout in reach. His coattail pulling power for Republican congressional candidates remains to be tested. It was potent in 1980. But the last Republican to win re-election in a runaway did little or nothing for the rest of the ticket.

Walter F. Mondale's only hope is in a poll-confounding turnaround that would outrank Harry S. Truman's 1948 upset for sheer surprise. Should that happen, by one vote, he would have a mandate as clear as any landslide to try and undo the Reagan revolution.

For the mandate of any election is simply the authority to govern. The man who has it determines by his deeds how strong and lasting his own power will be. Jimmy Carter squandered his on an ineffective, indecisive presidency and lost to Reagan after a term. Less than two years after his greatest of Republican landslides, Richard M. Nixon surrendered his Watergate-crippled presidency. Lyndon B. Johnson won overwhelmingly in 1964, but his Great Society administration couldn't survive the divisive, escalating war in Vietnam and he did not seek re-election.

The votes that pick a president on Tuesday will not foretell the strength of the administration ahead. Victory margins are for the record books. The man with the most votes gets a four-year lease on the White House, and few people remember how many votes he won to get there.

When Reagan's campaign press secretary, James Lake, raised the possibility that the president might carry all 50 states, he said that kind of showing would rearm the administration. "The more states you win the more likely you will have a mandate to govern," Lake said.

That has some validity in Reagan's case, simply for the fact that his people and the pollsters are talking about it. With Republican expectations as high as they are, anything short of a runaway would be a psychological setback. But it would be temporary, for fact remains that 270 electoral votes is all the mandate it takes to be president.

A shutout, incidentally, applies only to the 50 states. Not even the most optimistic Republican has suggested that Reagan can deny Mondale the 3 electoral votes of the District of Columbia.

Nixon came closer to a sweep than anyone else, losing only the District and Massachusetts to George McGovern in 1972. That made his score 520 electoral votes to 17. The numbers faded quickly into the Watergate disaster.

Nixon got 61 percent of the popular vote in 1972, but it was not transferable to other Republicans. The GOP lost two Senate seats that year and added only a dozen to its House minority.

Reagan defeated Carter by 10 percentage points in a three-way presidential race in 1980, and his Republican ticket prospered. The GOP gained 12 Senate seats to take control, and 33 in the House. Those gains in the Democratic House produced the coalition that enabled the president to win his big tax and spending cut victories during his first two years.

That conservative coalition was undone when the Republicans lost 26 House seats in 1982.

Reagan's coattail pull would tell something about his mandate for the second term he seeks. Republicans acknowledge that the Democrats may pick up a handful of seats in the Senate even if Reagan does win by landslide. The GOP has more at risk; Republicans hold 19 of the seats at stake on Tuesday, the Democrats 14.

The Democrats don't think they can wrest away control of the Senate, now Republican by a 55-45 margin. But if they can whittle that GOP majority now, they will strengthen their chances of taking charge in 1986, when off-year odds favor the party out of White House power, and when Republicans will have to defend 22 seats, Democrats only 12.

It would take a 50-seat gain to put Republicans in control of the House, and nobody expects that. But a gain half that size — and perhaps as few as 18 seats — would enable Reagan's forces to fashion a reunion of the conservative coalition in the first two years of a second term.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas acknowledged that if the Republicans gained 25 seats, "it would make it more difficult for us to have a working majority" in the next Congress.

That would be a re-elected Reagan's best season for getting what he wants on Capitol Hill. With that in mind, and with the public opinion polls rating Reagan a runaway favorite for re-election, the Republicans put on a late-campaign push for their congressional candidates.

Reagan taped television commercials for 20 GOP House candidates rated likely to take away Democratic seats. He signed mass mailing letters for 60 more promising Republican entries. Vice President George Bush concentrated his late-campaign efforts on 15 congressional districts where Republicans think they have a chance of ousting incumbent Democrats.

His message: "Don't tie one hand behind Ronald Reagan's back when you send us a congressman. Give us the support we need."

In Birmingham, Ala., he personalized the message. "We need Jabo Waggoner in the House," he cried. "We need him bad."

For Reagan's second-term purposes, a strengthened Republican minority and a reprise of conservative coalition politics would be just about right — perhaps better than the GOP majority that is out of reach anyhow. The administration would be in position to win with conservative Democratic help on the big issues. The Democratic majority and the Democratic leadership would be right there to blame when things go wrong.

The Authority To Govern

Recovery Isn't A Myth

RALEIGH — The economic recovery hasn't been a myth in North Carolina. Statistics recently released by the N.C. Department of Commerce show that the state is about to break all previous single-year records for industrial growth.

Commerce reported that, as of Sept. 30, more than $2 billion worth of new and expanding industrial investment had been announced for the state in 1984. The single year record for dollar investment is the $2.24 billion announced in 1980.

In terms of jobs, a record also appears to be on the horizon. Through Sept. 30, 36,700 jobs were announced. In 1979, the record year, 36,874 jobs were announced.

When reading these Commerce reports, keep in mind that these figures pertain only to announcements. Few, if any, of the 36,700 jobs have actually begun yet. Of the announced industrial development, most probably have not yet been spent. These figures change as industries decide to either build bigger or smaller — or maybe not at all — and to hire more or fewer people than they originally planned.

"It's almost, already, the best year ever and we've got a quarter still to go," said Steve Meehan, assistant secretary of commerce. The best news of all, he said, "is the recovery of our existing industry — $1.2 billion of the $2 billion and 25,000 of the jobs come in existing industry."

The leading industry, curiously, is textiles. Most of the news about textiles this year has been bad. Foreign imports are just killing American textiles manufacturers. American textiles exports are virtually non-existent in the face of an extremely high dollar. But, in North Carolina, beleaguered textiles companies are apparently fighting back.

"It's a necessity. They've got no choice," Meehan says. "The textiles industry is doing what the auto industry didn't do when they just sat back. The textiles industry for several years has been trying to make the transition and they know that the only way to survive is to modernize."

Of the $2 billion announced for investment, $410 million comes from textiles companies. About 5,900 new jobs, in new and expanding plants, have also been announced. Not included in these figures, however, are the thousands of textiles jobs lost over the past several years as textiles companies have either died due to foreign competition or automated.

The textiles industry announced 11 new projects, but, more impressively and maybe a reason for greater optimism among the state's textile workers, 167 expansion projects have been announced. No doubt, some of those expansion programs are modernizations aimed at reducing the amount of workers needed to produce textiles products. As Meehan said, "Modernization does the job with fewer people."

The second biggest growth industry is electrical and electronic machinery. Combined new and expansion spending of $252 million — with 5,400 new jobs — have been announced.

Third on the list of new and expanding industry is the chemical and allied products industry which has announced $173 million worth of investment this year and about 1,000 new jobs.

The Commerce Department has been criticized in the past for painting an overly rosy picture of industrial growth. In reading these figures, it must be remembered, that no adjustment is made for plants which close down.

Longtime Reagan political handyman Lyn Nofziger was rushed back to his native California in mid-October partly because of dissatisfaction with Gov. George Deukmejian's handling of the state campaign.

Nofziger's mission was to counterattack late visits to California by Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro. That followed complaints in Washington that Deukmejian was putting all his resources into a state reapportionment referendum, neglecting the Reagan campaign.

A footnote: An incorrect poll cost the Reagan campaign some $100,000 in California that it otherwise would not have sent there. The public poll, later corrected, caused turmoil in the California-oriented Reagan headquarters in Washington when it showed the president's margin in his home state had dwindled to practically nothing. The money was rushed to California before the polling mistake was corrected.

—Elisha Douglass— Strength For Today

Some years ago a well-known bishop of the Episcopal Church was discussing with his children what should be given up during the Lenten season. John, aged 10, after a great deal of pondering, decided he would give up his evening bath.

There are some people who have gone far beyond their 10th year who nevertheless resemble John in the way they would serve God. They are willing to sacrifice in his behalf only things which are of small value to themselves.

How strikingly different from the stern demands of Christ! Many times he turned away in sadness from those who in the heat of enthusiasm promised to follow him but who, he knew, would turn back when they encountered the first necessity for sacrifice. People only please God when they are willing to give their best that they may be able to get His best.

Rejected Cubans Remain In Limbo In Atlanta Prison

ATLANTA (AP) — More than four years after they fled their homeland on small boats, 1,507 Cubans remain housed in the Atlanta Penitentiary, unsure if they will ever know the freedom they sought.

The government, which has fought a long court battle to prevent their release, maintains they present "a significant danger to American society" and should be deported or held until Cuba agrees to their return.

Attorneys representing the Cubans, however, say their treatment goes "against the grain of everything America stands for" and that returning them to Cuba would mean "certain torture and prosecution."

The Cubans comprise a 75 percent majority at the 83-year-old prison, located south of Atlanta, and maintain an uneasy coexistence with 400 regular federal prisoners.

Warden Jack A. Hanberry said the two groups lived in separate areas and ate their meals on a different schedule, although they mingled in the recreation yard, classrooms and on work assignments.

Earlier this month, about 80 of the Cubans staged protests, carrying signs complaining about their continued imprisonment. There have been several hunger strikes.

The detainees were among the 125,000 refugees who crowded into a "Freedom Flotilla" of boats leaving the port of Mariel in May 1980, after Fidel Castro opened Cuba's borders to just about anyone who wanted to leave, including several thousand criminals and mental patients.

More than 98 percent of them were released to sponsors within a few months on a temporary parole ordered by President Carter. Most are now living freely in the United States and will be eligible for citizenship soon.

But as the refugees were processed at southern Florida camps, officials of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service refused to parole those who said they had criminal or mental histories or who mistakenly thought it would help if they claimed, falsely, to have been imprisoned in Cuba for their political beliefs.

More than 1,800 Cubans were being held at the penitentiary by August 1981, when U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob of Atlanta ordered the INS to release those who did not pose a threat to the public. Since then, the original detainees have dwindled to about 400.

SHY DAUGHTER — Samantha Thompson, 5, daughter of Illinois Gov. "Big Jim" Thompson, hides in her father's coattails as he said goodby to President Reagan Sunday. The present moved from Chicago to California for the last day of campaigning before Tuesday's general election. (AP Laserphoto)

Every year after harvest, soybean growers should determine which of their management practices paid off. In fact, there is no better time to determine if the input costs for such things as pest management really increased profits. In planning for 1985 it is especially important to scrutinize management costs in light of depressed market prices and drought-induced low 1984 yields.

Some of the factors to analyze are:

- Variety choice
- Seedbed preparation plus emphasis on deep tillage and soil conservation
- Pest management
- Fertilization
- Population management

Variety selection is still one of the most important decisions facing the soybean grower. Planting a susceptible variety in a cyst nematode infested field, for example, can result in severe yield losses.

Evaluate the varieties planted in 1984 to see if they performed satisfactorily. Did nematodes of disease cause damage? Did drought severely reduce yields? There may be better varieties than what you planted.

Pest management accounts for over 30 percent of the total out-of-pocket costs in producing soybeans. It is, however, the most neglected management area. Many growers simply use preventative weed and nematode control measures and spray insecticides when worms (of any kind) are observed. This kind of "shotgun" approach to pest management makes little economic sense.

Growers need to know their fields thoroughly. They should know which species of pests, weeds, diseases and nematodes are present and plan control or management systems before a seed is planted in 1985.

An average of $30 per acre is spent for fertilizer and lime for soybeans in North Carolina each year. I wonder how much of this is based on soil test results. How does a grower know how much of what to add to obtain optimum yields without a soil test?

I see growers adding a ton of lime per acre every year regardless of the soil pH. This is why we see soil pH's in the 6.5-7.0 range every year with manganese deficiencies showing up in many of these fields.

Vigilante Atmosphere Curtailed

ARLINGTON, Kan. (AP) — A growing vigilante atmosphere in this south-central Kansas town was quieted with the arrest of a teenager in the shooting deaths of twin 2-year-old boys and their babysitter, the county sheriff says.

Arnold Ruebke Jr., 18, was arrested Sunday on a warrant charging him with three counts of first-degree murder in the slayings of Tammy Mooney, 18, and James and Andrew Vogelsang. Their bodies were discovered in brush Thursday near the rural Arlington home from which they disappeared Oct. 29.

Reno County Sheriff Jim Fountain said that with the arrest, his "biggest rebel is that now a vigilante committee won't get to this individual before I did."

Several residents in Arlington, a quiet farming community of 600 people, said publicly they were looking for the murderer and believed Ruebke was the likely suspect. Such a case of vigilante hours of anxiety, Fountain said.

Fast Ends As Homeless Get New Shelter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mitch Snyder is savoring success after 51 days without food, his fast ended when the Reagan administration gave in to his demand for a model shelter for the homeless.

Snyder, 41, ended his hunger strike Sunday and was admitted to the intensive care unit at Howard University Hospital in serious condition, shortly after President Reagan agreed to renovate a 1,000-bed shelter for the homeless near Capitol Hill.

"Mitch is feeling pretty rugged," said Carol Fennelly, spokeswoman for the Community for Creative Non-Violence, of which Snyder is the unofficial leader. "He ate some Jell-O tonight, which is his favorite food. He'll be here for a few days but he's pleased with what's happened today."

Speaking of the agreement, Ms. Fennelly added: "We don't see any losers in this situation. The homeless have won, and President Reagan, who has done something both compassionate and humanitarian, has won, and Mitch has won his life."

Snyder's spirits were further lifted, Ms. Fennelly said, by a segment on CBS's "60 Minutes" which featured Snyder and his efforts over the past 15 years to assist the downtrodden in the nation's capital.

The segment included scenes of a pale, bedridden Snyder, weakened from his fast and making a request for compassion towards the homeless. "The next time you see someone out on the street, don't pass them by," he said. "Say 'hello,' ask them how they're doing, give them something hot to drink. Tell them they're a human being."

For Snyder, a onetime Madison Avenue management consultant who left his job, wife and two children 15 years ago to take up the cause of the destitute, it was the latest in a series of victories he has won with his flair for the dramatic.

Last winter, Snyder's group was instrumental in getting the federal government to donate the abandoned building for the shelter. But until Sunday, the administration had resisted a demand for the rehabilitation money, prompting Snyder and 11 other associates to begin fasting Sept. 15. All ended their protest Sunday.

Some said the action was politically motivated, coming two days before Tuesday's election and only hours before the "60 Minutes" broadcast.

"I think politics had a lot to do with it," Louis Juluke, 51, one of fasters. "But I'm glad they finally did it anyhow."

Juluke was one of dozens of center members who watched the "60 Minutes" program from the group's headquarters and communal house in northwest Washington, an aging Victorian structure filled with mismatched furniture and some 30 stray cats the group has adopted.

"I thought it was great," said Cliff Newman, another faster. "This will help build a greater understanding for those who don't usually think about the problems of the homeless."

Claire del Real, a deputy assistant secretary of Health and Human Services, said the agreement followed negotiations in which HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler had taken an active role. She said Reagan, campaigning in the Midwest, approved the agreement Sunday afternoon.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had seen stories in The Washington Post about Snyder and was aware that Snyder was being profiled on "60 Minutes."

Speakes said the president had Chief of Staff James A. Baker III direct Mrs. Heckler to "upgrade the facilities" at the shelter to make it a "model."

"The president wants to do something for the homeless," he said.

Snyder has said it would cost $5 million to get the shelter repaired, but Ms. del Real said the administration did not commit itself to provide any specific amount.

The Community for Creative Non-Violence, formed in 1970 by a Roman Catholic priest to protest the Vietnam War, now champions the causes of the poor and homeless. Members have fasted, staged demonstrations and spent time in jail, using civil disobedience to gain the attention of the authorities and news media.

With $120,000 a year in private donations, it operates a soup kitchen, a 16-bed infirmary and a store that provides free food to the poor.

Their victories include getting an initiative on the District of Columbia ballot Tuesday that, if passed, would guarantee overnight shelter to the city's residents.

Snyder, who Ms. Fennelly said lost 62 of his 180 pounds during the fast, said earlier he was preparing to die if necessary to force the administration to refurbish the shelter.

ATTENTION FELLOW DEMOCRATS AND FRIENDS!

Dear Voters Of Pitt, Martin And Beaufort Counties:

As a registered Democrat I say that it is time for us to realize that our association with those of radical left philosophies carries with it the responsibilities of their views. For us to support the Mondale-Ferraro ticket automatically does give association with all that it stands for including gun control, abortion on demand, and gay rights and other anti-family programs (such as the New Generation proposal and the Year of the Child).

To suggest that one can support such people as Mondale-Ferraro who has these liberal philosophies, and feel no personal responsibilities is like an ostrich hiding his head in the sand while the enemy comes rolling over him with a Sherman tank.

As a registered Democrat I have taken my stand with true conservatives like President Reagan, and the people he supports such as our local senatorial candidate MR. MAYNARD WATERS. As MAYNARD WATERS has repeatedly said, "Tom Taft, you can't have it both ways." I am another Democrat who thinks that President Reagan is right, and that is why I am asking all of my fellow Democrats and friends to vote for MAYNARD WATERS on November 6th as our next State Senator.

Sincerely,

Michael Karachun

Baby Fae Labeled 'Right On Target'

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Fae, in her 10th day with a baboon's heart, was "right on target" and reaching the point where she could receive full-strength formula for the first time since her historic transplant, doctors said.

"She's still doing about the same, which is fine," Loma Linda University Medical Center spokeswoman Tammy Wood said Sunday. "The doctors hope to have her on full-strength formula. Her formula's been at three-fourths strength."

Ms. Wood said the 3-week-old infant, whose condition remains listed as serious but stable, weighed 2,200 grams, or about five pounds.

"She's right on target, according to her physicians," said hospital spokesman Richard Weismeyer.

Doctors said Baby Fae shows no signs of rejecting the organ that doctors implanted in a historic attempt to save her life Oct. 26. Meanwhile, the medical community continued to debate the necessity of the daring transplant performed to remedy Baby Fae's underdeveloped heart.

Some doctors say it's too early to declare the operation a success and ethics experts have wondered whether the infant was improperly drafted into science's war to save lives.

Doctors at Loma Linda have contended that Baby Fae, whose real name has been kept secret, was hours from death when Bailey's team conducted the operation and couldn't wait. The crucial tissue-matching with the baboon had already been completed.

The baby, now the longest-lived survivor of an animal-to-human heart transplant, suffered hypoplastic left heart syndrome, a normally lethal birth defect in which the left side of the heart is severely underdeveloped.

Fugitive Captured

CLEVELAND (AP) — Authorities arrested an alleged terrorist who'd been on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List since 1977 in a string of bank robberies and bombings and continued searching for another Most Wanted fugitive they narrowly missed, the FBI said.

Authorities on Sunday apprehended Raymond Luc Levasseur and Richard Charles Williams, who was not on the Most Wanted list but had been indicted in the 1981 highway shooting of a highly decorated New Jersey state trooper.

The FBI said it had also been "very, very close to capturing Thomas W. Manning, a most-wanted fugitive indicted with Williams in the slaying of the state trooper, Philip Lamomaco, which sparked one of the most intense manhunts in New Jersey history."

Levasseur, 38, Manning and his wife, Carol Ann, have been sought since 1976 for bank robberies and the bombings of government buildings in New England for which the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit terrorist group claimed responsibility.

Levasseur's mother, Jeannette Levasseur, said in a telephone interview from her Sanford, Maine, home Sunday night that she had not seen her son for seven years, since he went on the 10 Most Wanted List.

"Every day I wonder if they're going to pick them up," she said. "He was always good to me. He never gave me a hard time."

Levasseur and his common-law wife, Patricia Gros, were arrested in rural Deerpfield as they rode in a van with their three children. FBI Director William Webster said in a prepared statement released in Washington Webster did not say how authorities located Levasseur.

About 30 minutes later, police and federal agents surrounded a house in west Cleveland and used bullhorns to coax Williams, 37, Jaan Karl Laaman, 36, and Barbara J. Curzi, 26, into surrendering, Webster said.

The five arrested were being held at the Cuyahoga County Jail for possible arraignment today in federal court, said John Dunn, a spokesman with the local FBI office.

Williams and Manning were indicted in New Jersey in the Lamomaco slaying in 1983. Manning was thought to be hiding in the Cleveland area but apparently eluded capture Sunday, authorities said.

The terrorist group Levasseur allegedly belonged to is named for Jonathan Jackson, who was killed in 1970 at a San Rafael, Calif., courthouse in an attempted escape and kidnapping, and for Sam Melville, who bombed eight New York City corporate offices in the 1960s and was killed during the Attica prison uprising.

A fistful of good reasons to vote Jim Martin, Governor

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

For 12 years Jim Martin was a teacher. Those years taught him that education is the key to all progress. The kind of education Jim Martin wants for the children of North Carolina stresses the basic subjects. He wants discipline in the schools so we can attract better teachers at better pay. Given the kind of education Jim Martin wants for all North Carolinians, everyone will do a better job for himself, family and community.

He Knows Education is the Key.

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

Did you know the state taxes money you put into savings? It's true, and because of it, older people living off savings and other retirement shy away from North Carolina.

The same is true of inventory taxes on business. The big manufacturers put their new plants just outside our borders, so they can avoid the tax. Jim Martin wants to change that, so more and better jobs will come to North Carolina as new plants move in.

He wants to help older people, too, by cutting the tax on their food and medicine. It's the least we can do for the people who nurtured and raised us.

He Wants to Cut your Taxes.

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

In the 12 years he's been in Congress, Jim Martin has been a consistent friend of agriculture.

One agriculture group cited him as having an outstanding voting record when it came to matters that mean most to farmers.

Part of that voting record has been to stand up for tobacco and other matters of special interest in North Carolina. Like the jetties at Oregon Inlet, a vote where Jim Martin worked hard and gets a lot of credit for its passage.

He's a Long Time Friend of Tobacco Farmers.

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

Rufus Edmisten says, "This is so ridiculous." He chides Jim Martin for bringing up "every bit of tacky thing."

Those tacky things are illegal contributions of thousands of dollars to Rufus' campaign. Money he's been ordered to pay to the State. Those tacky things are Rufus' intervention as Attorney General in a federal court case involving the illegal contributor.

They are tacky all right. Downright sticky when it comes to asking people to vote for you and overlook such abuses of public office. Is this the kind of man you want for Governor?

Rufus abuses his office.

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

His opposition calls him the business candidate. Martin replies, "I've broken the code," and it tells him "business means jobs."

And that means a better life for all North Carolinians.

People in North Carolina are famous for their attitude that a fair wage deserves a fair day's work. Employers know that and they're willing to locate here, but they have to get fair treatment of taxes, too.

Jim Martin wants to cut taxes that discourage businesses, so you can get a better job when new employers move in. If that's being a business candidate, it's the kind of man we need.

He Wants you to Get a Better Job.

Another Good Reason to Vote for...

Jim Martin
GOVERNOR

He believes you should not pay one cent more for utilities than is absolutely necessary.

To guarantee fair utility rates, he would require members of the State Utilities Commission to make full financial disclosure and sell any stocks they may own in utility companies.

His opponent claims that he would work to lower utility costs. But when he was the sole consumer advocate before the commission, we had the largest rate hikes in history.

Jim Martin knows that the real issue is providing utility services that are both reliable and efficient at the lowest cost possible.

He Wants to Lower your Utility Charges.

My Election Prayer

Lord I bow before you on this election day,
That this country would hear your voice today,
Lord that they would listen to the little ones that cry for someone to deliver them from those who sentence them to die.
I'm sure you see Lord the things that we have done
Like taking prayer out of school and making mockery of your son
Can't they see we need you more than ever before
We need your strength to guide us toward peace instead of war
Americans need to listen to your word instead of words of men
No matter how you say it homosexuality is still a sin
Women seek their freedom they call it ERA
They don't realize their greatest rights with this law they give away
The right to be a mother, to bear children is a gift from the Lord
Instead they march to battle to fight with a sword
Have we forgot our heritage?
Those who crossed the sea to find freedom to worship
They put their trust in Thee
They left a land of plenty to sail to a place unknown
By your hand of mercy they made America our home
You have raised up men leaders formed by your own hand
Why believe in your commandments and are not afraid to stand Against the evil that surrounds us they let the truth be known
That America is still a great country proud, brave and free
We thank our forefathers who put their trust in Thee,
But still there comes a stronger call to those who bear your name
To put our sins behind us and bring a mighty change
If we would band together in peace and one accord and remember our Creator Jesus Christ the Lord and the peace He can give America the Beautiful a wonderful place to live.

Shuttle Countdown Begins

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began today for Wednesday's launch of space shuttle Discovery on a mission in which astronauts will release two communications satellites and recover two others that were sent into errant orbits.

"It's an exciting mission," commander Rick Hauck told reporters as he and his shuttle crew arrived here Sunday to make final preparations for launch.

Pointing in the direction of the launch pad, three miles away, Hauck added: "We're looking forward to climbing into that machine in a couple days, and I guarantee you we're going to have a lot of fun. We're very excited about taking two satellites into space...and bringing back two others that have been in wayward orbits."

The other crew members are pilot David Walker and mission specialists Anna Fisher, Joe Allen and Dale Gardner. Mrs. Fisher is the fourth American woman and the first mother named to a space flight. She and her astronaut husband Bill are parents of a year-old daughter.

The countdown started at 2 a.m. EST when test conductor Jerry Crute issued the traditional "call to stations" that summoned crews to the launch pad and the control center.

Liftoff for the 14th shuttle mission, the second for Discovery, is set for 8:18 a.m. Wednesday. The ship is to return to Earth eight days later, landing on a runway at this spaceport.

On the second and third days of the flight, the astronauts will release commercial communications satellites owned by Telesat of Canada and Hughes Communications Services Inc.

The deployments will empty the cargo bay, clearing the way for the retrieval of the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 satellites. These payloads were released successfully by a shuttle crew last February, but faulty booster rockets injected them into useless orbits.

Hauck and Walker are to guide Discovery through a series of complex maneuvers to within 35 feet of each satellite — Palapa on the fifth day and Westar on the seventh.

Allen and Gardner are to capture the satellites during two space walks expected to last six hours each. Allen will use a jet-powered back pack to fly free of the shuttle and latch onto Palapa with a pole-like grasping device. Gardner will do the same for Westar.

Insurance underwriters are paying the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $5.5 million to return the satellites to Earth for refurbishment. The underwriters hope to resell the renovated satellites to recoup some of the $180 million in premiums they paid out when the payloads entered the wrong orbits.

Caller Warns Of Attacks Against U.S.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An anonymous telephone caller claiming to represent the Islamic Jihad terrorist group has threatened President Reagan and warned of imminent attack on U.S. installations in the Middle East.

The caller told a Western news agency in Beirut on Sunday that he was issuing an "official warning" to the United States on behalf of Islamic Jihad.

"The shadowy group, whose name translates as 'Islamic holy war,' has claimed responsibility for several strikes against Americans in the region, most recently the Sept. 20 suicide car-bombing at the U.S. Embassy annex in a Beirut suburb. At least 14 people, including two Americans, died in that attack.

"Many threats have been issued against U.S. personnel and installations in Lebanon, and there has been no way to confirm their authenticity.

"In a reference to the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran five years ago Sunday, the anonymous caller said: "On the fifth anniversary of the humiliation of imperialism in the Islamic republic, we tell Reagan and his clique that our young men are always ready to attack American interests and fleets wherever they might be."

The caller threatened "a painful strike... very shortly" and added: "So let it be known, you Reagan, that if we were unable to prevent your re-election we will for certain prevent you from continuing your second term in office."

The threat telephoned to the news agency followed a report earlier Sunday on the Christian-run Voice of Lebanon radio station that Islamic Jihad planned to hit U.S. interests in the Middle East within 48 hours.

The broadcast said the organization claimed, "The operation will surprise the Americans." A reporter at the station said the information came from "Lebanese sources" but would not elaborate.

The contents of the anonymous call to the news agency were described on condition the agency not be identified. A reporter at the agency said the caller was a man who spoke in Arabic, and the agency provided an English translation.

The threats came amid warnings by U.S. officials that Americans faced increasing risks in Lebanon prior to Tuesday's U.S. presidential election.

U.S. Embassy facilities have been closed to the public since the September annex bombing, and more than half the 50 diplomats assigned here have left Lebanon.

U.S. authorities recently asked the Lebanese government to reduce and closely monitor helicopter flights over U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew's residence in the suburb of Yarze for fear of an aerial attack, Western military sources here have said. They declined to be identified.

The residence is the only manned American diplomatic mission in Lebanon since the September bombing.

Islamic Jihad also has claimed responsibility for the April 18, 1983, truck bombing of the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut and the Oct. 23, 1983 bombings of U.S. and French military headquarters in Beirut. More than 300 U.S. and French servicemen died in the attacks on the military headquarters.

Turned Back

SEATTLE (AP) — The first American to reach the peak of Mount Everest via the Great Couloir says other mountaineers in his 12-member team were turned back by brutal winds and intense cold.

Phil Ershler, 33, of Bellevue, reached the 29,028-foot summit on Oct. 20, having climbed on a route beginning on the Chinese side of the mountain.

Team leader Lou Whitaker said conditions on the mountain included 100 mph winds and air so frigid it froze his right eyelid closed and partially closed his left eye.

Indian Army Told To Crush Any New Violence

DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi collected his assassinated mother's ashes and ring from her funeral pyre in the morning mist today as India slowly recovered from the four-day rampage unleashed by her death.

No new violence was reported today after the government ordered the army to crush any resurgence of the rioting, arson and looting that swept the nation after the assassination of Indira Gandhi on Wednesday. More than 1,000 people, most believed to be Sikhs, died nationwide in the violence.

The government today ordered a

Supreme Court judge to head a commission investigating the killing of Mrs. Gandhi by two men identified as Sikh members of her security guard, several national newspapers reported.

Gandhi, who replaced his mother as prime minister hours after her death, helped priests collect the slain leader's remains in a two-hour dawn ceremony at the heavily guarded park near the Yamuna River where she was cremated Saturday. Gandhi put some of the ashes in an urn which he took to his mother's childhood home.

The rest of the ashes were put into other urns which were loaded onto a truck and sent to India's 22 states for mourning ceremonies. The government said the ashes would be returned to New Delhi and then would be scattered Nov. 11 over the snow-capped Himalayas that Mrs. Gandhi loved.

Mother Teresa, the Roman Catholic nun who won the Noble Peace Prize for work among the destitute of Calcutta, toured some of the camps where at least 16,000 people have taken shelter to escape the Hindu-Sikh violence.

The United News of India said Mother Teresa, an Indian citizen, urged relief organizations to help aid those left homeless by the mob violence that followed Mrs. Gandhi's shooting death.

New Delhi, its streets nearly deserted in the first days after the assassination, was bustling today as the curfew was lifted. Shops, most of which closed during the violence that claimed 500 lives in the capital alone, were open and streets were jammed with cars.

However, in Amritsar, the center of the Sikh religion some 250 miles northwest of New Delhi, authorities today extended by four hours the overnight curfew imposed Sunday.

Sources reached by telephone in Amritsar reported no major violence today, although army troops patrolled the streets with heavy weapons. Many Sikh-owned shops in Amritsar remained closed, but those run by Hindus were open, the sources said.

Amritsar and the surrounding state of Punjab have been under official press censorship since tensions rose earlier this year between authorities and militant Sikhs demanding an independent Sikh state.

The report that an investigative commission had been named followed unsubstantiated reports in several Indian newspapers about a purported high-level military conspiracy behind the assassination. The reports have allegedly been based on comments by Satwant Singh, one of two guards accused of shooting Mrs. Gandhi outside of her home.

Hospital officials in New Delhi were quoted today as saying Singh, who was shot after the assassination, was in serious condition but that his chances of survival were improving. There have been conflicting reports as to whether he has been questioned yet.

Priest May Have Been Beaten

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Church sources say pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko may have been severely beaten before his death, and an official who attended the autopsy said the priest's body was bound around the neck, hands and feet when it was dumped in a reservoir.

Priests at Popieluszko's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church said Sunday they had been told the slain cleric's hands were badly battered, as if he had tried to shield his face from blows.

One Roman Catholic source with close ties to the church hierarchy said participants in the autopsy had reported that the cause of death was strangulation. The government has blamed three secret police officers for the killing.

The official who observed the autopsy refused to give the cause of Popieluszko's death or say if the 37-year-old Roman Catholic priest was dead before he was thrown into the water following his Oct. 19 abduction. The body was recovered last Tuesday in a reservoir 80 miles north of Warsaw.

However, the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he could confirm that Popieluszko's feet were bound with one rope and that another rope bound his hands and then ran up his back and around his neck.

COLLECTS ASHES — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, son and successor of assassinated Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, puts a garland of flowers on one of 25 copper urns in a ceremony in which priests collected the ashes of his mother's body. The urns will be displayed in each of India's 22 states. Rajiv kept one of the urns. (AP Laserphoto)

Sandinistas Claim Victory As Vote Count Continues

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Even before the polls closed in Nicaragua's general election, supporters of the leftist Sandinistas set off fireworks to celebrate their expected victory. An opposition leader called the election "a farce."

Supreme Electoral Council officials said the first returns from Sunday's voting would be made public today. But the council president, Mariano Fiallos, said final returns in the nation's first election since 1974 will not be known until at least Thursday.

"It is hard to say because we have very little experience with this," Fiallos said.

Victory for the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, faced with opposition only from five minor parties, was virtually assured. The main opposition coalition boycotted the election, complaining of harassment and restrictions.

If the Sandinistas win as expected, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega will become president; Sergio Ramirez will be vice president and the 90-member National Assembly will be controlled by Sandinistas. All offices have six-year terms.

The vote came five years after the Sandinistas ousted rightist pro-U.S. strongman Anastasio Somoza in a 1979 revolution.

Fiallos said preliminary returns indicated voter turnout was even higher than the 80 percent of those registered who Sandinista officials had predicted would vote. More than 1.56 million people registered to vote as required by law, but they were not required to cast ballots.

Few problems were reported with voting at the 3,896 polling places. Fiallos said voting at 11 polling places in the north was disrupted by violence by anti-Sandinista rebels.

"Until now, we only have to be sorry for the death of one policeman," Fiallos said, referring to a policeman killed in northern Matagalpa province in a rebel mortar attack on a vehicle carrying electoral police.

The government radio, the Voice of Nicaragua, reported Sunday afternoon that anti-Sandinista rebels tried to surround La Dalia, a village 150 miles northwest of the capital, but were driven away by Sandinista troops. There were no reports of casualties, and no independent confirmation of the attack.

There also was no confirmation of a report by the Soviet news agency Tass that 400 anti-Sandinista rebels failed in an attack across the Honduran border before the voting began.

In Costa Rica, a bomb exploded Sunday night under the car of Nicaraguan rebel leader Alfonso Robelo Callejas, police said.

Students, Police Clash In Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of student demonstrators clashed with riot police today at one of South Korea's leading universities in a violent protest against the government and school authorities.

Witnesses said there were at least five separate clashes at the gates of Yonsei University, with students hurling rocks and gasoline bombs while police replied with barrages of tear gas.

Witnesses estimated that the crowd of demonstrating students swelled to about 4,000 during the course of the afternoon. Students claimed as many as 10,000 riot police and plainclothes men were sent into the university area, but the witnesses said they could only estimate the number of police at "several thousand."

By late afternoon, there were no firm reports of casualties or arrests.

The violence broke out when students tried repeatedly to charge out the gates and demonstrate in the streets. About 2,000 students earlier had begun a rally, shouting anti-government slogans and calling for repeal of a ban that restricts the public activities of many former politicians and dissidents.

The rally was organized after an effort to gather representatives of 42 universities and colleges at Yonsei on Saturday was largely thwarted because of massive police forces at and around the school.

Students said many delegates could not get to the site, where they had been scheduled to form a nationwide student organization. There were some minor confrontations at the time.

Leaders of today's rally said its purpose was to "resolve a struggle against dictatorship through democratic alliance."

Paid For By Pitt County Citizens To Re-Elect Helms For Senate

the Senate, where Republicans hold a 55-45 majority. But the minority party still was confident of gaining two or three Senate seats with their best chances of pickups seen as in Tennessee, Iowa, Illinois and North Carolina.

There are 125 million registered voters, and the big task for both parties and their allies during the final campaign hours was getting their supporters out to vote Tuesday.

Despite the endorsement of Mondale by the AFL-CIO and most of its member unions, recent polls have said that Reagan is likely to duplicate his 1980 feat of getting better than 40 percent of the labor vote.

"We all have our Archie Bunkers," said Albert Shanker, president of the 600,000-member American Federation of Teachers. "Our people are not afraid to tell us off."

If the polls are right, it would take a massive late shift to tip the election in Mondale's favor. All of them said the president held a strong lead.

The Washington Post-ABC News poll put it at 57 percent Reagan to 39 percent Mondale, with 4 percent undecided.

A New York Times-CBS News poll said Reagan's lead was 21 points, the president receiving the support of 58 percent of respondents and Mondale 37 percent. A USA Today poll published in the paper's Monday editions said the Reagan lead was 25 points.

In a radio interview, Ms. Ferraro was asked about talk of a 50-state sweep by the president and she replied, "It's just not going to happen. I don't care what the polls say ... We're going to win it ... It is going to be a very, very tight race."

She said the national poll figures were skewed by the "devastating" lead Reagan held in some Rocky Mountain and Southern states.

Bush appeared with Reagan in Chicago and the vice president told the crowd, "Thirty-three hours more to Election Day. I can hardly believe it. It's been long and grueling."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. launched an election-eve attack on Reagan on Social Security, saying the administration's "Social Security administrators are studying plans to make the system 'voluntary,' the same kind of plan Reagan proposed in a nationally televised address for Senator (Barry) Goldwater in 1964." O'Neill made the charge in remarks prepared for a rally at a Massachusetts nursing home.

Gallop Poll Gives Reagan Big Edge

By GEORGE GALLLOP Jr.

PRINCETON, N.J. — As the 1984 presidential campaign draws to a close, the incumbent Republican ticket of Ronald Reagan and George Bush holds a wide 59 percent to 41 percent lead over Democratic challengers Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

Based on in-person interviews with likely voters conducted Friday and Saturday, the Gallop poll found this division of the vote:

Reagan-Bush.....57%
Mondale-Ferraro.....39%
Undecided/other.....4%
Total.....100%

(Note: Minor party candidates collectively received less than 1 percent of the vote)

These findings should not be considered as a projection of the national popular vote in Tuesday's balloting but rather as an indication of the candidate preference of voters with roughly three days to go.

Based on the sample of likely voters, the final survey found a much closer division of the popular vote for the U.S. House than occurred in the 1982 off-year Congressional election and the same as in the 1980 election when Ronald Reagan defeated the incumbent Jimmy Carter for the presidency.

By way of comparison here are the current survey findings on the vote for congressional candidates and the outcome of the two previous elections.

	1984	1982	1980
Dem. cand.	51%	56%	51%
GOP candidates	49%	44%	49%
Total	100%	100%	100%

Although the national vote for Congress cannot be translated directly into House seats, based on past experience the current findings suggest that GOP candidates this year will win back at least as many as the 26 seats they lost in the 1982 elections. The tendency of many voters to desert their party's presidential candidates but to remain loyal to their political roots on the state and local levels is apparent.

The latest findings: As many as 20 percent of those favoring Ronald Reagan's re-election say they will vote for the Democratic candidate for their Congressional district.

For the Gallop poll's final pre-election analysis this year, 3,456 persons were interviewed in person of whom 1,985 were considered likely voters. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected election precincts across the nation.

Edmisten ...

Polls don't vote, you know. You, the people here and all over the state are my coattails. You're the kind of coattails whose hard work will make me governor next Tuesday."

In a brief reference to his opponent, Republican Jim Martin, Edmisten said "he's really a nice enough fellow. He looks nice, has a nice smile, but it would be a pity to have a governor who only looks nice. You remember the last Republican governor we had. He was a nice fellow, too, but all he managed to do was to conduct guided tours of the governor's mansion."

In addition to Jones, other platform guests making brief comments included Kathryn Lewis, Betty Spier, the Rev. Dave Hammond, Bill Hodges, Bob Martin, N.C. Rep. Gerald Andrews, Howard Chapin, Rep. Walter Jones Jr., Rep. Ed Warren, Secretary of Transportation Will Roberson, and N.C. Senate candidate Tom Taft. Edmisten was also accompanied at by his wife.

challenge from Republican James Hicks for state auditor; Democrat Lacy Thornburg and Republican Allen Foster vie for the post of attorney general; incumbent Jim Graham and Republican Leo Tew face each other in the race for commissioner of agriculture; Democrat Jim Long faces Republican Richard Morgan in the insurance commissioner's race; incumbent Labor Commissioner John Brooks faces Republican Margaret Plemmons, and Republican Gene Baker faces incumbent Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips.

Only Democrat Harlan E. Boyles, running for his third term as state treasurer, has no opposition among the eight Council of State posts on the ballot.

For the state Senate, in the 9th District, Democrat Tom Taft faces opposition from Republican Maynard Waters, while in the 6th District, Democrat Bob Martin is running unopposed.

For the 9th House District, Democrat incumbents Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. are running unopposed, as is Democrat L.M. "Mutt" Brinkley in the 6th House District.

None of the District Court judges, the register of deeds or candidates for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners face opposition. Neither do most of the candidates for state and Superior Court judicial offices.

The constitutional amendment ballot is to find out if voters are for or against an amendment requiring the attorney general and district attorneys in North Carolina to be duly authorized to practice law prior to election or appointment.

To vote for candidates on Tuesday, voters will simply have to fill in the red box beside the candidate's name on the paper ballots. The special voting machine ballots will allow "straight ticket" or "split ticket" balloting.

To vote a straight ticket, simply fill in the box beside the party for whose candidates you wish to vote.

To vote a split ticket, voters may fill in the box beside the name of each candidate they wish to vote for. Or, you may vote a split ticket by marking the party box, then fill in the box beside the name of a candidate of a different party."

If voters vote split tickets by marking the party box, then marking the box beside a candidate of another party, only those candidates whose square you mark will receive a vote in that race. The remainder of the candidates on the ballot will receive a vote according to the party selected.

Cache Found

LONDON (AP) — Police reported discovering a cache of "terrorist artifacts," including arms and explosives, at a building site in the North Kensington district of west London.

Scotland Yard said authorities found a grenade, a semi-automatic pistol and a variety of ammunition along with explosives and detonators.

"We believe the items, found Wednesday afternoon, were in the possession of persons from the Middle East and were dumped on the building site recently," said a spokeswoman. "The items are in good condition."

Snow Hill Man Killed In Wreck

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Roy Frank Hill, 40, of Snow Hill was killed Sunday at 12:25 p.m. when the car he was driving hit another car head-on on U.S. 13 one mile north of Goldsboro, the Highway Patrol reported.

Troopers said the Hill car burst into flames after the collision.

WHEN WE NEEDED A START ON FOUR-LANE 264, TOM TAFT WAS THE RIGHT MAN.

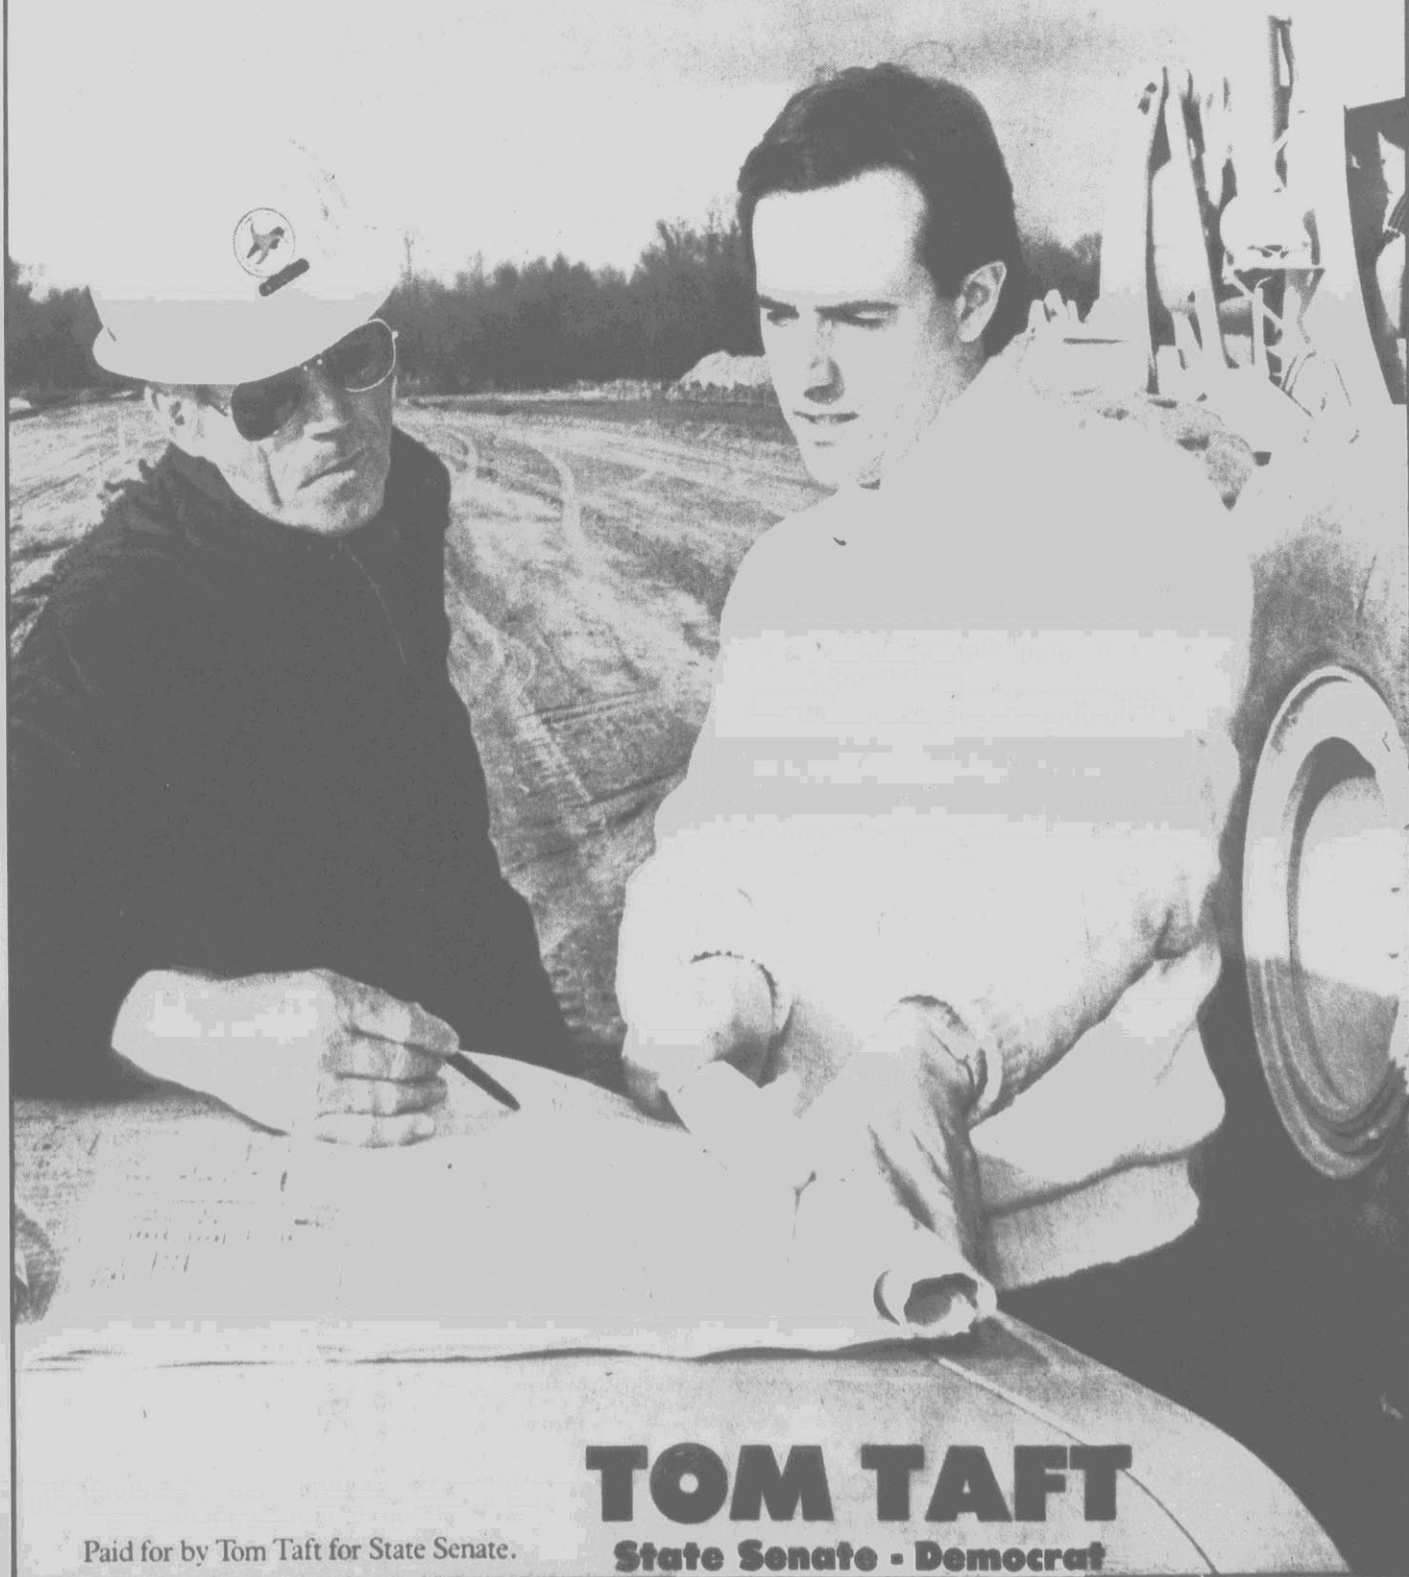

Eight years ago, Tom Taft became the founding president of the U.S. 264 Association. Today that project is under construction from Wilson to Greenville, and rights-of-way are being purchased from Pactolus to Washington. Tom and other key leaders persisted through eight years of meetings, hearings, lobbying and negotiations to gain support for the tens of millions of dollars the project requires. It was a tough job.

Determination, persistence and results like this make Tom Taft the right man for the state senate. We need a strong voice to gain speedy completion of U.S. 264 and the four-laning of U.S. 64 as well.

It's time for a new era of senate leadership from Pitt, Martin and Beaufort Counties that forcefully represents our agricultural, transportation, education, business and job development needs. Getting our fair share from state government is a tough job.

That's why Tom Taft is the right man for the state senate.

BECAUSE YOU LIVE IN AMERICA, YOU DON'T HAVE TO VOTE.

Did you know that in Australia, Belgium, Greece, Italy, and parts of Switzerland and Austria voting is mandatory? In Australia, for example, you'd be fined if you didn't vote. In Greece, you couldn't get a driver's license. In Italy, not voting could mean you wouldn't qualify for a government job.

In the Soviet Union, people aren't officially required to vote in that country's rigged and meaningless elections. But in the last election there, over 90 percent of those eligible were...encouraged to actually vote. In the equally meaningless elections in Communist Albania, usually fewer than a dozen out of two million eligible voters have the courage not to vote.

Here in America, you have the freedom not to vote. Unfortunately, in the last election about 74 million eligible Americans took advantage of that freedom. That's why the United States ranks 20th among 21 Western democracies in the percentage of those eligible who actually vote.

Because you live in America, you don't have to vote. But you should vote...because you live in America!

VOTE ON NOVEMBER 6!

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eked out a small gain today amid hopes for lower interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.22 to 1,217.87 by noon on Wall Street.

Gainers held a 7-6 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that the polls still ranked President Reagan a strong favorite to win a second term in Tuesday's election. Thus, they said, investors were not greatly preoccupied with the possibility of any political surprises.

Many Wall Streeters were looking beyond the election to this week's policy-setting meeting of the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee.

Expectations are widespread that the Fed will decide to loosen credit further, in order to cushion the recent slowdown of economic and money-supply growth.

That would presumably mean new declines in interest rates, which have already experienced a substantial drop since last summer.

A monthly survey of corporate purchasing executives found that production, new hiring and new orders all continued to slow last month.

On a more upbeat note, the National Association of Purchasing Management said the signs still pointed to a favorable inflation outlook, with few price increases for supplies and raw materials.

Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette climbed 2 1/4 to 29 1/2. The securities firm is the subject of a $30-a-share takeover plan by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .01 to 96.50. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 16 at 209.57.

Volume on the Big Board came to 33.67 million shares at noontime, against 45.24 million at the same point Friday.

Philippines Charge Military Chief, 25 Others In Murder

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Prosecutors announced today that the chief of the armed forces, Gen. Fabian Ver, and 25 other people have been accused of double murder in the assassination of Benigno Aquino and the man the military first named as his killer.

Justice Manuel Herrera, head of a three-man prosecution panel, said the 26 have been given 10 days to answer the allegations, which were leveled in a majority report of a fact-finding board. The report was turned over to the government ombudsman, who in turn appointed the three-man prosecution panel.

The panel will decide, after reviewing evidence and after receiving the replies of the 26 accused, whether there is "probable cause" to refer the case for trial, Herrera said. The panel also may dismiss the preliminary charges.

Meanwhile, in the National Assembly, 57 opposition legislators filed a resolution demanding that President Ferdinand E. Marcos resign for being "morally, legally and politically responsible" for the Aug. 21, 1983, assassination of Aquino, Marcos' chief political rival.

The resolution also asked for the immediate dismissal from military service of Ver and other military personnel implicated in the killing.

Political observers said they believed the resolution's chances were dim because Marcos' party holds a clear majority in the 184-member legislature.

The ombudsman is a constitutional office that investigates criminal complaints against government and military officials and prosecutes them before the courts. The current ombudsman is Bernabe Fernandez.

Herrera showed reporters copies of subpoenas he said the panel has prepared ordering Ver, two other generals, two colonels, 20 other military men and one civilian to answer the allegations against them.

The preliminary charges arose from the majority report of a five-member fact-finding board that held yearlong public hearings on the assassination and named the 26 as "indictable for the premeditated killing" of Aquino and Rolando Galman. Initially, the military said Galman was a communist agent and accused him of killing Aquino.

The board's chairwoman, Corazon Agrava, issued a dissenting report excluding Ver from involvement in the killing and naming only seven military men, including air force Gen. Luther Custodio, as involved.

The reports were unanimous in rejecting the military claim that Galman, killed seconds after Aquino was shot, was the assassin. They agreed Aquino was killed in a military conspiracy.

The subpoenas prepared by the panel of prosecutors named the fact-finding board as "complainant" in the case before the ombudsman's office and listed the crime as "double murder re: death of Benigno Aquino and Rolando Galman."

Aquino was shot at Manila airport immediately after returning from a self-imposed three-year exile in the United States.

Ver has said he is innocent and denied any military involvement in the assassination. Marcos has backed his military chief and expressed confidence the courts will clear him.

Ver, at his own request, went on leave from his post after the board report was released last month.

Seahawks Set Records, Giants Down Cowboys

By The Associated Press

Three Kansas City quarterbacks combined for a National Football League record-breaking performance. Unfortunately for the Chiefs, the records were racked up by the Seattle Seahawks' defense.

Six times Sunday the Seattle defenders picked off Kansas City passes, and they returned four for touchdowns — an NFL record — as the Seahawks routed the Chiefs 45-0.

Defensive backs Dave Brown, Keith Simpson and Ken Easley returned the interceptions for touchdowns as the Seahawks set another league record with 362 return yards.

Brown, one of four remaining original members of the Seahawks, who entered the league in 1976, picked off a Bill Kenney pass and streaked 95 yards for a score, then later returned a Todd Blackledge pass 58 yards for another TD. The two interception scores tied another record.

Elsewhere, Miami ran its perfect record to 10-0 with a 31-17 victory over the New York Jets, and a logjam has evolved in the NFC East with the New York Giants, St. Louis and Dallas all tied with 6-4 records.

Washington can join that crowd tonight if the Redskins defeat Atlanta.

In other games Sunday, it was Cleveland 13, Buffalo 10; Green Bay 23, New Orleans 13; Pittsburgh 35, Houston 7; Chicago 17, Los Angeles Raiders 6; Giants 19, Dallas 7; San Diego 38, Indianapolis 10; Minnesota 27, Tampa Bay 24; Denver 26, New England 19; San Francisco 23, Cincinnati 17; and Los Angeles Rams 16, St. Louis 13. Philadelphia and Detroit battled to a 23-23 deadlock.

"We played team defense," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said of his team's fourth consecutive victory and second straight shutout. "We hustled and put pressure on the quarterback. That's the way we've been playing."

"It was a great defensive performance. But I wasn't thinking about the shutout. I was just thinking about the win."

The defense scored more than enough to ensure Seattle's sixth victory in its last seven games.

"Kinney was throwing it away from me to (wide receiver Mike Marshall)," Brown said of his first interception. "But I was able to get to it and tip it."

After that, it was a race, and nobody touched the Seattle back. "As soon as you see all the green in front of you, you just relax and run as fast as you can," he said.

"My second interception was the result of a blitz. They put a lot of pressure on him (Blackledge), and he underthrew the ball. I got the ball, and after that it was just a race."

"We feel we can stop anybody in this league," said Brown. "We feel we can beat anybody in the league. The goal of our defense is to try to get better every week and I don't think we've reached our peak."

Kenney, who watched the second half of the game in his street clothes from the sidelines, said he was disoriented in the Chiefs' huddle before throwing his two interceptions in the second quarter.

"I was having problems because I wasn't sure what was going on," the Kansas City quarterback said. "I had to ask my offense what the formation was. I wasn't sure how to call the play."

Browns 13, Bills 10

Running back Earnest Byner scooped up a fumble in the fourth quarter and raced 55 yards for a touchdown, giving Cleveland a come-from-behind victory over winless Buffalo.

Browns' quarterback Paul McDonald, passing on third-and-20, hit wide receiver Willis Adams, who dropped the ball when he was tackled by three Bills. But Byner, trailing the play, picked up the ball and rambled untouched for the winning score.

Earlier, Buffalo linebacker Darryl Talley forced a McDonald fumble and Chris Keating scooped it up and trudded 34 yards for a score and a 7-3 Buffalo lead.

Broncos 26, Patriots 19

Safety Dennis Smith picked up a fumble and raced 64 yards with 1:45 remaining in the game to snap a 19-19 tie and give Denver a come-from-behind victory.

The Broncos, outplayed most of the day, had knotted the contest with 4:03 left on John Elway's third touchdown pass — a seven-yarder to Butch Johnson — and Rich Karlis' extra point. Karlis earlier had missed two extra-point attempts.

New England then drove to the Denver 37, but running back Mose Tatupu was stripped of the ball by Denver linebacker Steve Busick. Smith scooped up the fumble and raced down the sideline for the TD.

"I was tired when I picked it up, but when I did, I ran as hard as I

King Still Not Happy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Even though he had a hot hand again in San Antonio, the New York Knicks' Bernard King was not a happy man.

King had 44 points to lead all scorers Sunday night, but the San Antonio Spurs came away with a 131-130 double overtime victory, holding the 6-foot-7 forward scoreless in the 10 minutes of extra time in the National Basketball Association game.

"In the overtime, San Antonio was zoning us. They weren't playing man to man. They had a man in front of me and a man behind me and that made it tough," said King, who scored 50 points the last time the two teams met here on Jan. 31.

In the only other NBA game Sunday, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Portland 124-116.

"You just don't stop Bernard King," said Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "It was a tough loss for the Knicks but a big win for us. Two things that hurt us tonight were defensive rebounding and free-throw shooting."

In the latter category, San Antonio hit 39 of 51 attempts. But New York and King fared worse: the Knicks only made 47.8 percent of their free throws (11-23) and King made only eight of 14.

Alvin Robertson and Artis Gilmore each had four points in the second overtime and finished with 16 and 24 points, respectively. Gilmore also had 20 rebounds.

Ken Bannister was the second-leading scorer for the Knicks with 18 points.

New York's Butch Carter was scoreless in regulation, but pushed the game into its second overtime with a 3-point, 25-foot jumper with a second left to make it 121-121. Carter, who fouled out in the second overtime, finished with nine points.

"The three-point shot I hit is a play we work on all the time. Pat (Cummings) gave me a good pass and I hit the shot," Carter said. "How hard or how good we played tonight doesn't matter. We lost and that's what counts."

A free throw by Mike Mitchell, who scored 24 points for the Spurs, forced the first overtime at 108-108.

King kept hammering away at the Spurs in the fourth period by scoring 12 points. He scored 13 in the third and 15 in the second to keep San Antonio from running away with the game.

The Spurs led by as many as 15 points in the second period, but a 14-7 spurt by the Knicks closed the gap. San Antonio led 61-56 at the half.

"It could have gone either way right down to the last basket," New York Coach Hubie Brown said.

"On this road trip we had Utah beat, Los Angeles beat. We were ahead of Houston in the fourth quarter and we could have won this game," Brown said.

Lakers 124, Trail Blazers 116
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit 11 of 13 field-goal attempts and scored 11 of his 25 points in the first quarter as Los Angeles took a 33-16 lead over Portland.

Kiki Vandeweghe, who had just two points in the first half, scored 17 in the final quarter as the Trail Blazers narrowed the gap to 110-103 with 3½ minutes remaining. That was the closest Portland got after the Lakers, who had five players with 20 or more points, scored the first 11 points of the game.

Jamaal Wilkes scored 22 points for the Lakers, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson and James Worthy added 21 each and Byron Scott had 20.

With the 42-24 defeat at the hands of Southwestern Louisiana Saturday afternoon, East Carolina's Pirates finished a seven-game road year without a victory — something unheard of in modern Pirate history.

One must go back to 1948, when the Pirates turned in a winless 0-9 season to find another year when no games were won against road opponents.

Granted, this year's schedule hasn't been that easy, but somewhere along the way, a victory should have been forthcoming.

Now, the Pirates face another hurdle. They come into this Saturday's game with a 2-8 record. Their only victories have come over Division I-AA teams. And they are starting in the face the worst record in over 25 years.

Coach Mike McGee's 1970 team turned in a 3-8 record — and the Pirates can at best only match that. The previous year, the late Clarence Stasavich's final team was 2-7. But one must go back to 1957, when the late Jack Boone's team turned in a 1-8 mark to find a worst overall record should the Pirates come up on the short end of this weekend's game with Southern Mississippi.

Ironically, Ed Emory was a member of that 1957 team, playing as a sophomore.

A key factor all year long has been the pass defense of the Pirates. They seldom get to the quarterback on the rush, their linebackers have only one interception among them, and the secondary has been scorched enough to be admitted to the North Carolina Burn Center.

Southwestern, which has not been a passing team this year, suddenly connected on 14 of 21 passes (66.7 percent) for 214 yards two touchdowns. And we pointed out earlier this year, nearly everyone the Pirates have faced have improved on their yearly passing against ECU this season.

As things wind down at the end of the year, the expectation is — as is true at the end of any losing season — that there will be changes in the coaching staff.

Emory opened the year with optimism. He said that the team was probably the most talented the Pirates have ever had, albeit young. He also said the team had the best staff that it's ever had.

But it has not come together. The youth has gained a lot of experience this year, but the talent hasn't come through — at least not as a team. There would appear to be a leadership factor there.

As in any losing year, there are other problems too, which we will not go into.

Just in front of us as we write this is the 1985 schedule — less one game still to be announced. It is, without doubt, the most ambitious schedule the Pirates have ever had, including N.C. State, Penn State, Southwestern, Southern Miss, Auburn and Louisiana State on the road. Three of those are top 20 teams.

At home the Pirates will face Temple, Miami, South Carolina and Tulsa, two of which are top 20 teams also.

This year's schedule, to some extent, was an easier one than 1983, in which a fine ECU team went 8-3.

At the risk of being called "negative" by the ECU people, we must state that unless there is a big turnaround in the 280-odd days before that 1985 opener, next year's campaign could be even more of a disaster.

Flutie: 'Numbers Are Nice'

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The numbers are nice, Doug Flutie says, because they speak of a career, not simply one hot game. Still, he'd rather have become an NCAA record-holder and a winner on the same day.

"I'm proud of what I've done. I think it's a great achievement," the Boston College quarterback said without even a trace of braggadocio on Sunday, the day after Penn State upset the visiting Eagles 37-30. "But if you're not on a winning football team, numbers don't mean all that much. The fact that they came in a loss, they don't have as much impact." The big number is 10,003 yards, surpassing Jim McMahon's NCAA Division I-A mark of 9,723 total career yards — with four games remaining this year. The small number is 1,482 career yards by Flutie against Penn State, a record against one team, breaking the 1,251 by Brigham Young's McMahon against Utah.

He now is 231 yards shy of the NCAA career passing record of 9,614 by Ben Bennett of Duke.

The numbers might be considered even bigger since Flutie, at 5-foot-9, is smaller than the average quarterback. In fact, much is made of his height, considering National Football League football coaches like to see their passers standing tall in the pocket.

"Height is irrelevant to what I've done," Flutie said in an interview. "I don't think it was a factor one way or another. As far as a professional career goes, well, it might have a bearing on whether I have one. But if I do have one, I don't think how tall I am will have any bearing on how well I do."

"My big problem might be in getting the opportunity to play. I feel someone's going to give me the chance, but I think there's still a built-in doubt about the ability of a short quarterback."

In a different era, NFL teams signed undersized quarterbacks, then converted them to defensive backs or other positions. No thank you, Flutie said.

"I wouldn't be willing to do that. I'm a much better quarterback than I am a cornerback or safety — or wide receiver," he added as an afterthought. "I've been a quarterback all my life. Besides, at the pro level, I wouldn't be strong enough to play on the defense. Not with the kind of hitting they do."

Flutie, who completed 29 of 53 passes for 447 yards and a touchdown against Penn State (he also had a 520-yard day in a 52-17 loss to the Nittany Lions in 1983), took some heavy hits Saturday.

On Sunday, back home in Natick,

Mass., he was nursing a welt on his right elbow, other bumps and bruises and what he said was "a slightly separated left shoulder. It'll be OK."

Boston College's hopes of finishing the season at the top of The Associated Press poll are gone — the Eagles were ranked No. 9 before the loss dropped their record to 5-2 — but Flutie is still nursing hopes of a major bowl bid.

BC has games remaining against Army, Syracuse, Miami ("I'm looking forward to that one. It's going to be fun to watch," he said of the Nov. 23 meeting with fellow quarterback and Heisman Trophy candidate Bernie Kosar) and Holy Cross.

"You never know how things will work out," Flutie said. "We're going to a bowl, no matter what. But I think we can still get into a big one. I know we won't be playing for the national championship, but I want to be playing on Jan. 1."

And if, for some reason, he can't play beyond next January, meaning as a pro, that's OK, too, he said. He's a communications major with a goal of becoming a broadcaster. "I could get used to anonymity again," he said.

"I've had this kind of attention only a short while now. When the time comes for me to get out of the limelight, whenever that is, I think I'll like the idea of relaxing, taking it easy. Maybe I'll go to a football game and enjoy myself."

Costello, Garza Learn Lessons

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP) — Billy Costello and Jaime Garza learned boxing lessons. Garza's was painful.

"I learned a lesson . . . you've got to take your time and and job," Costello, the World Boxing Council super lightweight champion, said after scoring a one-sided decision over 37-year-old Saoul Mamby, a former champion who has a reputation of making an opponent look bad even when he loses.

Garza learned that a power puncher can suffer a power shortage if he is not careful.

The 25-year-old Garza, of Pomona, Calif., who had scored 38 knockouts in 40 pro fights, knocked down challenger Juan "Kid" Meza just 40 seconds into his second defense of the WBC super bantamweight title.

Meza got up at eight, but Garza landed several more solid punches and was trying to finish his slate in the round.

"I had my guard a little low," said Garza. "I didn't see the punch."

It was a left hook that crashed against Garza's jaw and knocked him down.

"I felt when I hit him, he wouldn't get up," said the 28-year-old Meza of Los Angeles, who failed to win the super bantamweight title when he was stopped by Wilfredo Gomez in 1982.

Garza almost got up, but fell back and was counted at at 2:54 by referee Johnny LoBianco just before regaining his feet.

The knockout was the 33rd for Meza, who weighed 121½ pounds, a half pound under the class limit, as did Garza. Meza's record is 42-6.

Meza is supposed to sign within 90 days for a mandatory title defense against Mike Ayala of San Antonio, Texas.

After Costello's second title defense, both in his hometown of Kingston, which made his record 29-0, with 17 knockouts, manager Mike Jones said he wants the 28-year-old champion to defend next against former champion Leroy Haley.

Jones and Costello have a contract for one more fight with promoter Don King. Haley and Mamby are managed by King's son Carl.

Haley was supposed to fight Costello on Saturday, but withdrew last Monday because of a right-hand injury and was replaced by Mamby.

"I wasn't as sharp as I should have been; I only had five days notice," said Mamby, of New York, who has a 35-16-5 record, with 15 knockouts, in a career that began in 1969 and made him a world traveler.

But the 28-year-old Costello was too strong and too quick. The champion, who weighed the class limit of 140 pounds, a half pound more than Mamby, kept on the pressure. In rounds seven through 10, Costello scored well with both hands to the head and body.

Mamby said after the fight he didn't know whether he would retire, but his wife, Yolande, said it was time.

King Maintains LPGA Money Lead

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Betsy King, top money winner on the U.S. Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, held her No. 1 spot despite finishing in an 18th-place tie Sunday in the $500,000 Mazda Japan Classic, the last official USLPGA tournament of the season.

King won $2,990 dollars, increasing her season's earnings to $266,771, more than $11,000 dollars ahead of Patty Sheehan, who finished in a 15th-place and wound up with $255,185 dollars. Sheehan won $3,330 dollars here.

Japanese golfer Nayoko Yoshikawa surged from behind with a 6-under-par 66 to the tournament by two strokes with a six-under-par 210 total for 54 holes.

Japan's Ayako Okamoto, winner of two tournaments in the United States and the British Women's Open this year, was third in money winnings with $251,108.

Okamoto, who finished the Mazda Classic in a second-place tie with Lauri Petersen, won $21,312 here. The $41,150 first prize would have made her the first foreign woman to take LPGA money winning honors.

Defending champion Pat Bradley finished No. 4 on the money list with $220,461 after finishing in a 15th-place tie. The fifth leading money winner was Amy Alcott with $220,412, followed by Juli Inkster.

with $186,500; Nancy Lopez with $183,756; Kathy Whitworth, $146,401; Jo Ann Carner, $144,900 and Donna White, $129,970.

In the Mazda tournament, Okamoto and Petersen ended up at 4-under-par 212 after Okamoto shot a 73 Sunday and Petersen a 69. Second round leader Jan Stephenson of Australia faded to a 76 Sunday and finished in a four-way tie at 213.

King had a 219, nine strokes off the pace, after a 74 Sunday and Sheehan also had a 74 Sunday for a 218 total.

A field of 47 American pros and 30 Japanese, Taiwanese and South Koreans competed in the 54-hole tournament on the 6,295 yard par-72 Hachimonmatsu course at the Hiroshima Country Club.

Skins Look For Share Of Lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crowd atop the National Conference Eastern Division may have to make room for one more.

The Washington Redskins host the Atlanta Falcons tonight looking to join Dallas, St. Louis and the Giants in a four-way tie for first place in the division at 6-1.

"This could get real exciting," said Washington coach Joe Gibbs prior to Sunday's action which saw both front-running Dallas and St. Louis stumble.

"With these many teams believing they have a shot at first place anything can happen and probably will from week to week," Gibbs said.

Fortunately for Gibbs and the Redskins the one constant this season has been the running of John Riggins.

In his 13th season in the National Football League and already the fifth-leading rusher in the history of the league, the big Redskin fulback is off to best start ever, rambling for 854 yards and nine touchdowns.

Improving with age, the 35-year-old Riggins, the oldest running back in the league, has averaged 100.5 yards a game over his last 31 games. During the same span he has scored 43 touchdowns.

Virtually unbeatable when Riggins is on his game, the Redskins have are 18-2 when Riggins has rushed for 100 yards, including a perfect 10-0 at home.

Mountaineers 'Get Knocked Off'

By The Associated Press
Football players never learn. Although upsets seem to have become the rule rather than the exception over the past few seasons, it is still hard for coaches to get their point across.

"I have preached and preached and preached that when you think you're good, you get knocked off," says West Virginia's Don Nehlen.

That's what happened to Nehlen's 12th-ranked Mountaineers. After beating Boston College and Penn State the past two weeks, they were polished off 27-7 by a Virginia team which has quietly compiled a 6-1-1 record, the school's best in 33 years.

Scouts from five bowls were in Morgantown, W. Va., hoping to corral the home team. Instead, the Mountaineers were ambushed as Don Majkowski threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Geno Zimmerlink while Steve Morse and Antonio Rice ran for scores of 51 and 22 yards, respectively.

The Cavaliers, who have never been to a bowl game, appear to be in line to break the ice. They outgained West Virginia 399 yards to 244 and, according to Nehlen, "deserved to win... Our players had the idea that all they would have to do is show up and they would win the football game. You saw the result of that thinking."

The ranks of Cinderella teams also includes 20th-ranked Texas Christian, which cracked the Associated Press Top Twenty last week for the first time in 22 years and celebrated with a 21-14 victory over Houston, the only Southwest Conference rival TCU had never beaten.

The Horned Frogs, 1-8-2 last year, are 7-1 for the first time since 1958 and are bidding for the biggest turnaround in college football history after Kenneth Davis ran 2 yards for the tie-breaking touchdown late in the third quarter. Sean Thomas preserved the victory with interceptions at the TCU 37- and 13-yard lines in the final three minutes.

"The trademark of this team is kids who are making the big plays," said Coach Jim Wacker. "It's not coaching or any other factor, just the players' attitudes and abilities concerning the big plays."

Meanwhile, Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie passed for 447 yards and became the first in major-college football to accumulate 10,000 yards in total offense, but it wasn't enough to prevent the ninth-ranked Eagles from losing to Penn State 37-30.

And, No. 1-ranked Washington's offensive woes apparently are a thing of the past. Paul Sicuro, making his first start this season, threw three touchdown passes while Jacques Robinson rushed for 152 yards and Cookie Jackson added 119 in a 44-14 rout of California. The Huskies are 9-0 for the first time ever and figure to become the first team this season to be ranked No. 1 four weeks in a row.

Meanwhile, fourth-ranked Brigham Young, No. 5 South Carolina and unranked Cal State-

Fullerton kept pace with the Huskies as the nation's only unbeaten-untied teams.

BYU (9-0) clinched its ninth straight Western Athletic Conference crown and a seventh consecutive trip to the Holiday Bowl as Robbie Bosco fired four touchdown passes in a 42-9 rout of Texas-El Paso, South Carolina (8-0) rallied from a 15-3 halftime deficit and beat North Carolina State 35-28 on Thomas Dendy's 6-yard run with 50 seconds left and Fullerton State (10-0) shaded Fresno State 20-17 on Greg Steinke's 48-yard field goal with 1:36 left to play.

Besides West Virginia and Boston College, the only other Top Twenty loser was No. 11 Auburn which bowed to Florida 24-3 despite the return of All-American halfback Bo Jackson after a six-game absence with a separated shoulder. No. 17 Iowa salvaged a 10-10 tie with Wisconsin but lost quarterback Chuck Long and running back Ronnie Harmon for the season with injuries.

Second-ranked Texas committed six turnovers and trailed Texas Tech 10-0 at halftime but pulled out a 13-10 victory on a pair of fourth-quarter field goals by Jeff Ward.

Elsewhere, third-ranked Nebraska whipped Iowa State 44-0, No. 6 Miami downed Louisville 38-23, seventh-ranked Oklahoma State trimmed Kansas State 34-6, No. 8 Georgia turned back Memphis State 13-3 and 10th-ranked Oklahoma smashed Missouri 49-7.

In the Second Ten, No. 14 Florida State outlasted Arizona State 52-44, No. 15 LSU nipped Mississippi 32-29, No. 16 Ohio State crushed Indiana 50-7, No. 18 Southern Cal beat Stanford 20-11 and No. 19 Southern Methodist downed Texas A&M 28-20.

Coach Don James said Washington's 475-yard offensive showing "gave me some confidence."

The offense didn't need the turnovers from the defense this week. They did it on their own. They needed some confidence. It gave the offense a lift to see the ball go up the field."

BYU, whose 20-game winning streak is the nation's longest, is starting to think about a national championship.

"At this point, we will start rethinking our goals, then begin zeroing in on possibilities down the road," said Coach LaVell Edwards.

South Carolina turned back N.C. State thanks to a 25-point fourth quarter as Dendy scored on runs of 14 and 6 yards. However, the Gamecocks lost leading rusher Kent Hagood with a broken leg.

Despite Flutie's performance, which gave him 10,003 career yards in offense, Penn State sacked him four times, intercepted him twice and forced him into two lost fumbles.

"That kid is amazing. He's unbelievable," said Penn State Coach Joe Paterno.

Florida's Neal Anderson scored on second-half runs of 36 and 15 yards as the Gators trounced Auburn.

McEnroe Downs Wilander

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — He was dubbed "Mac the Nice" after a season in which he partly fulfilled his wish to behave well on the tennis court.

But John McEnroe earned that old label "Superbrat" again Sunday in Sweden after beating local hero Anders Jarryd in a turbulent semifinal of the $315,000 Stockholm Open-Scandinavian Championships.

McEnroe won the match 1-6, 7-6, 6-2 — sending the American into today's title match against Mats Wilander — but faced at least a 21-day suspension after picking up a $2,100 fine for "unsportsmanlike conduct."

McEnroe, the world's top ranked player, played poorly in the first set and behaved poorly when leading 4-2 in the second set.

Unhappy about the officiating, McEnroe called the Swedish umpire a "jerk." That cost him a penalty point and $750.

Going back to his chair for a changeover after dropping his serve, McEnroe used his racket to sweep a table clean. A soft drink can flew out on the court, spilling its contents. That incident cost him a game penalty — and an additional $1,000 fine — making the score 4-4.

Earlier, McEnroe had received a $350 fine for ball abuse after hitting a ball into the stands.

"You make it out as the greatest thing, me hitting a ball into the stands, but look at the things going on in the world, you will find out what's really important," McEnroe said in an outburst directed chiefly against the press at the postmatch news conference.

"Worse things could happen. I could have been defaulted and that has never happened during my entire career."

McEnroe never sat down on his chair at changeovers again, but finally got his act together by completely changing his game.

"I started staying back and not serving hard and just getting the ball in the rally. Then I played better," he said.

The Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, who improved his 1984 record to 74-2 after Sunday's win, went into the final against the only player who has beaten him and Jimmy Connors on at least three different surfaces.

Wilander, who rallied to beat Connors 6-7, 6-3, 6-3, enjoys a head-to-head edge over both Americans. The 20-year-old Swede — who became history's youngest winner of a Grand Slam event when he won the 1982 French Open at 17 — is 3-2 against McEnroe. He has beaten the New Yorker on grass as well as clay and hardcourt, the surface used at the Royal Tennis Hall here.

"I'm not really looking forward to the final. I've got nothing to lose, nothing to gain really," said McEnroe, whose No. 1 ranking of the year is already settled.

"Mats is a great player and a nice guy. It will be tough."

In other tennis action during the weekend, the United States won the Wightman Cup women's competition for the 46th time in 56 meetings with Britain. Chris Evert Lloyd downed Joe Durie 7-6, 6-1 to secure the Cup, which the U.S. won 5-2 in London.

Lloyd, who may have been making her final appearance in the event, recorded her 24th straight Wightman Cup singles win.

At Taipei, Taiwan, top-seeded Brad Gilbert beat Australian Wally Masur 6-3, 6-3 to win the $75,000 Taipei International Tennis Championships.

Gilbert, who also won the title in 1982, collected $15,000 for his victory, which took one hour.

In Zurich, Zina Garrison defeated Claudia Kohde of West Germany 6-1, 0-6, 6-2 in the final of the $150,000 European Indoor Tennis Tournament. It was the first Grand Prix victory in Garrison's two-year professional career.

Rain Delays Atlanta 500, Winston Cup Point Race

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Rain spoiled everybody's day and added more tension to the already pressurized Winston Cup championship race as the Atlanta Journal 500 was postponed for a week.

An on-and-off drizzle Sunday finally forced officials to call off the day's activities 65 minutes after the scheduled 12:45 p.m. EST start of the 500-miler at Atlanta International Raceway.

The race was rescheduled for next Sunday at 1 p.m.

A.J. Foyt, who was scheduled to start 22nd in the lineup, withdrew following the postponement. The four-time Indianapolis 500 winner is scheduled to drive next Sunday at Las Vegas, Nev., in the Indy-car season-finale.

Bill Elliott, the record-setting pole-sitter here, said of the rain situation, "It doesn't make any difference. We're ready whenever they run it."

Season point leader Terry Labonte and second-place Harry Gant said much the same but admitted the delay adds to the tensions of the championship battle.

Gant, who trails Labonte by 49 points with only the Atlanta race and the season finale on Nov. 18 at Riverside, Calif., remaining on the schedule, said, "It is disappointing."

"But, in the racing business, you win races, you lose races, and some you get rained out, just like ballgames," he added.

"I'd like to get it over with, just like everybody else, but we're just going to have to wait like everybody else."

"Obviously, there's nothing you can do about the weather," Labonte said with a shrug. "But this just gives us and Harry's team another week to think about it. I think everybody would just like to get it over with."

On the other hand, Labonte noted he is looking forward to running at Riverside, which is the only road circuit that the Grand National drivers race on each season.

"I've always enjoyed road courses and I've done pretty well out there, so I don't feel desperate about this (Atlanta) race," Labonte added. "But it's going to be a long week."

Gant, who isn't known as a particularly effective road racer, obviously would prefer to end the season on an oval like Atlanta's 1.522-mile track.

"I figure if it rains next weekend, the last race of the season will be in Atlanta," Gant said. "I figure they'll have to postpone the (Atlanta) race until after Riverside. That wouldn't be so bad."

Town Ponders Effect Of Mass Murders

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer
MANLEY HOT SPRINGS, Alaska (AP) — It was spring when a brooding, jobless loner from Illinois methodically executed seven residents of this wilderness hamlet and dumped their bodies into the rain-swollen Tanana River.

Now, with winter's grip squeezing the life from the countryside, townspeople ponder the lingering horror and the changes it made in their lives.

Michael Silka of Hoffman Estates, Ill., was 25 when he drove a beat-up sedan crammed with guns and gear north to Alaska, dreaming to live off the land in the back country.

Authorities believe he had already murdered a man in Fairbanks by the time he reached this log cabin settlement of about 50 year-round residents and killed seven of them, including a pregnant woman, her husband and their 2-year-old son, in a three-hour riverbank rampage May 17.

Nearly a day passed before the town figured out what had happened to the missing people. Alaska state troopers in helicopters headed up the muddy Tanana after the young drifter.

He died May 19, hit five times by troopers' M-16 rifle fire on the muddy bank of the Zitiziana River. Seconds earlier, troopers had offered him a chance to surrender. Instead, he stepped from behind a tree and fired a high-powered rifle at one of the helicopters, killing trooper Troy Duncan.

Nobody knows how Silka found this isolated village on the Elliott Highway. Nobody knows what stirred his demons.

People think he probably first shot a single person, perhaps in an argument, at the boat landing outside town, then — to escape without witnesses — killed the others as they arrived before he fled in a boat.

"Every one of us knows it could have any one of us," said Patty Lee, who runs Manley's lodge, general store and post office along with her husband, Bob. "To me, that's like Russian roulette. We're the ones that weren't hit."

The carnage chilled the soul of little Manley Hot Springs, perhaps changing it forever.

First came numbing shock. Then, the anger. Townspeople could not get at Silka, so they took out some of their frustration on his car, which he had abandoned along a dirt road leading to the bloodied boat landing.

"The boys shot it up, beat it up, tore it up and shoved it in the river," said Cy Hetherington, who runs a flying service from an office cluttered with artifacts, aircraft parts and hides. "I think it may have helped. It got some of it out of their systems."

The phrase "time will heal" pops up repeatedly in conversation, but some of the anger still smolders.

"We're all very happy Silka was killed, rather than having to pay for his sitting in an insane asylum," said Mrs. Lee.

"I don't believe they should have buried Silka in the veterans cemetery. That didn't go over too well with a lot of people," said Hetherington's son, Tom, a 26-year-old trapper, mechanic and commercial fisherman. "He had no right to that." Silka was an Army veteran whose ashes were buried at the National Cemetery at Sitka at his father's request.

Manley is literally paying for the notoriety Silka brought. Residents say tourism, one of the town's few sources of income, and the real estate market were off this summer.

"It's almost like it's a branded town," said Tom Hetherington.

"Tourists, people who like to come here, were afraid of how they would be received here," said Mrs. Lee. "People were afraid of their welcome. There's been sort of an unrest in the people here, short tempers."

"Some of them said the town just didn't feel the same," said Gladys Dart, the main teacher for the village school's 16 students. "When they came here, they noticed a subdued feeling. We've been noted for our hospitality in the past."

She recalled a recent shopping tour to Fairbanks, 90 miles away:

"I bought a large grocery order, and they were curious where I was from. When I told them, one said, 'Oh, I wouldn't go to that place.' It's as if they think we're responsible for the horror."

She said the killings had had a "tremendous impact" on her students. They still regularly talk about it, she said: "It's hard for them to reconcile the horror of it."

But now, with the leaves stripped from the birch-carpeted hills and with pan ice beginning to choke the Tanana River, a cautious sense of optimism is trying to take root.

"Nobody seems to be giving up," Tom Hetherington said. "But the impact will be remembered for a long time. I take a gun everywhere with me now. I never did before. Our general opinion, after this, is that Manley is definitely a closed camp to drifters. Anybody that's questionable now gets watched."

"I don't think anyone's dwelling on it anymore," said Dennis McNeil, a school worker. "I don't think much about it. Maybe I'm a little less trusting. By the end of summer, after the last of the bodies that were going to be found were found, it settled down."

Families and friends of the victims spent months searching for bodies along the brush-choked banks of the Tanana. One at a time, four of them were found, some as far downstream as 50 miles: Larry Joe McVey, 38; Dale Madajski, 24; Lyman Klein, 36, and Fred Burk, 30.

"Every time a body was found, it went on, and on, and on," said Ms. Dart. "It was almost like putting salt in a fresh wound."

By the end of summer, only the bodies of Joyce Heffner Klein, her toddler son, Marshall, and Albert Hagen Jr., 27, remained missing. In Fairbanks, the body of Roger Culp, 34, perhaps Silka's first Alaska victim, has also not been found.

Early last month, troopers in helicopters searched the Tanana, hoping it would yield its dead before winter.

MAYNARD WATERS

Republican Candidate

State Senate 9th District

A Reagan Conservative

DEAR VOTERS IN THE 9TH SENATORIAL DISTRICT:

By now you have had an opportunity to get to know the candidate and the issues before us. I would like to take this opportunity to restate my stand on the critical issues.

ACCOUNTABILITY IN GOVERNMENT:

Such situations as quietly hiding Mather Slaughter (who was fired by the state legislature because of unethical practices) within the N.C. Ports Authority which is headed by my opponent, Tommy Taft, at the tax payers' expense of $26,000 per year are an embarrassment to the integrity of the government of North Carolina. Such practices should not be allowed to continue. As your senator I will offer a bill on the opening day of the 1985 legislature to remove funding for Slaughter's job.

FARMERS:

All through history the farmer has been the backbone of every great nation. Whenever the welfare of the farmer was neglected the result has been disastrous to the economy. We as a people can no longer look the other way while the farmer struggles to survive. Having lived on the family farm most of my life, I am prepared to pursue the best interests of the farmers of eastern N.C. as their senator in Raleigh.

STATE EMPLOYEES:

State employees should not be used as political footballs. They should be encouraged to express their political views freely without harassment or pressure from the current administration. Instead of a large raise in an election year, state employees should receive raises in accordance with their performance on a regular basis.

ABORTION:

While I have been traveling through the 9th district, people in large numbers have expressed their concern over state and federally funded abortions. I share their concern and am opposed to such abortions on demand for convenience sake and will champion the rights of the unborn in the Senate when elected. I also feel that it is morally wrong to force our citizens to participate in such killings against their wills through taxation. North Carolina is the only southern state that still funds abortions.

LAW AND ORDER:

I believe it is time to take the handcuffs off of our law enforcement personnel and put them where they belong, on the criminals. Our citizens need the full protection that officers can deliver without having to worry about technicalities that release the same criminals over and over again to prey upon our citizens. The laws we have need to be strictly enforced. Greater emphasis should be placed on dealing with drug trafficking and pornography. Those operating outside the law need beware because you have no friend here.

EDUCATION:

It is not a secret to our educators that they have been pushed around over the years and because of this our children have suffered. We can no longer afford politics as usual because our very future is at stake in our youth. We must listen to those in the classroom—not an elite few. A merit system of pay for the hardworking teachers must be established. The dignity and high calling of the teacher must be restored.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND COMMERCE:

We are no longer just an agricultural region, but have become influential in fishing and industry. I am for repealing the inventory tax in order to attract acceptable industry to our area. I will work to insure the survival of our fishing industry by protecting the fishing grounds and access to them. The continued development of adequate highways in our region will create a climate of growth which will allow us to choose those industries which will be suitable to our area. With proper planning we can develop our economic base, industry, fishing and agriculture and protect our environment. No aspect of our economy can be ignored if we are to provide quality jobs for our people.

SPORTSMEN:

Our state is one of the richest in the union in terms of exceptional beauty and wildlife. Our sportsmen have paid in millions of dollars annually to our economy, and in so doing have contributed toward the establishment of a wildlife program which ranks among the best in the nation. His right to own firearms and other sporting equipment should not be encroached upon. It is not the sportsman who needs to be punished in this land. It is the criminal who needs to be prosecuted. If we allow gun control legislation to pass, who knows what freedom under the constitution will be attacked next?

The Ninth District must elect a state senator who is sensitive to the needs of the people and of whom the people can be justly proud. We cannot afford to place in office power-seeking individuals who are not in touch with the people. I promise my door will always be open to you and I will do my best to represent the people of the Ninth District as your senator. I look forward to serving the people of the Ninth District for the next two years.

Sincerely yours,

Maynard Waters

ABC Is Sticking By 'Call to Glory' Despite Seasonal Drop In Ratings

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's doubtful that any new series was ever promoted more than ABC's "Call To Glory."

You couldn't watch more than a few minutes of last summer's Olympics coverage without hearing about the new series about an Air Force pilot, played by Craig T. Nelson, and his family. It is set in the 1960s.

"Call To Glory" made its debut in August in a two-hour movie that ran the Monday night after the Olympics ended, and all the ballyhoo paid off. The show was first in the ratings that week.

Then it began to slip, particularly when it faced non-rerun competition on CBS and NBC.

But ABC is sticking by "Call To Glory." The network has ordered nine more shows for the full-season commitment of 22, and it would be a shame to see it fall by the wayside. It's an honest and well-made show, and one of the few on ABC that isn't fueled on glitz.

"ABC has voiced total confidence in the show, and they believe that in January when the football season ends the ratings will come up. And historically, they have," said Steve Tisch, co-executive producer with Jon Avnet. He added that no changes would be made to hype the ratings.

"Call To Glory" has several strikes against it, not the least of which is "Monday Night Football." The show is seen before the game in the East and after the game in the West. Secondly, the show is perceived as male-oriented because of the Air Force setting. Any show needs a good share of the female audience to be a ratings winner.

This is the first series for Tisch and Avnet. They made the well-regarded TV movies "The Burning Bed" and "Silence of the Heart" and the feature film "Risky Business."

"It's been Steve's goal and mine to do only quality work," said Avnet. "And if that means we only reach 20 million people instead of 25 million people, we'll continue to do it." They point out that NBC's "Hill Street Blues" started far down in the ratings and then began its climb when it swept the Emmys for the first time. "They now have a very desirable audience from the standpoint of demographics," said Avnet. "I think we're getting that same kind of audience."

The idea for the show came when an agent on the producers' softball team asked them if they wanted to fly some jets.

"Steve and I got to batting the idea around," said Avnet. "We'd always wanted to do something about a family and the 1960s. So we put them together and the first show we did was about the Cuban missile crisis.

A lot of the stories we do are true." Tisch said he thought one problem might be that the Air Force colonel portrayed by Nelson is "real."

"Shows like 'Simon & Simon' and 'The A-Team' and 'Magnum, P.I.' may be popular, but those people don't exist in the real world," said Tisch. "Col. Raynor Sarnac does. In a sense, I think the audience is pre-conditioned to accept caricatures. Too often in the past military people have been portrayed as stereotypes."

Avnet added, "No one dies in our show gratuitously. No one dies and you just walk away. That doesn't happen in real life. We're cognizant of our social responsibility, and our shows and the people in them are as real as we can make them." In the 1960s Tisch and Avnet were in college.

"We had strong views against the military and wars," Tisch said. "What this experience has meant is that 18 years later I'm able to recognize that there are people behind the uniforms who are people making a contribution to their country. We try to portray them with dignity each week."

"The country is radically different from what it was in the 1960s. Jon and I are older and we're parents now. Our values have changed and the show gives us an opportunity to look back and evaluate how we feel today and make an impact on the public."

Singer Prince Opens International Tour

DETROIT (AP) — Pop singer Prince has made it far beyond the Minneapolis nightclubs where he struggled for recognition in his film "Purple Rain," judging from the reception he got as he kicked off an international tour.

The opening concert of his "Purple Rain World Tour" Sunday night drew not only a capacity crowd of more than 20,000, but also some 300 reporters — nearly half of them from Europe, Japan and Australia, where Prince will perform before concluding the tour June 7, his birthday.

Many fans at the Joe Louis Arena mimicked the Minneapolis-born Prince's eccentric dress style, sporting pompadour haircuts, ruffles and 1980s variations on Edwardian-style suits.

Tickets for the first four shows here sold out in four hours. About 150,000 tickets have been sold for the seven scheduled Detroit performances.

The soundtrack to "Purple Rain" has sold 8 million copies.

"If nothing else, anytime someone sells 8 million albums and it's not Michael Jackson, it's worth celebrating," said Warner Bros. Records publicist Bob Merlis.

Fails To Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Barry Manilow failed to appear on NBC's Saturday Night Live program because of a case of "nerves," a spokeswoman for the network said.

Manilow, who appeared at two sold-out concerts at Radio City Music Hall on Saturday, was to have appeared the same night on the network's weekly comedy show as "an unannounced, surprise guest." But his publicist leaked the information to the press before the show, said NBC spokeswoman Kathy Graham.

"He chickened out," she said Sunday. "It was nerves."

Radio City is across the street from the building where Saturday Night Live is produced.

Candidates Stage Final Campaign Blitz

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Republicans hoping for their first sweep of the top of the ticket in a dozen years and Democrats battling to avert it trod the beaten campaign trail in a final appeal to undecided voters.

U.S. Senate candidates Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms and gubernatorial rivals Rep. Jim Martin and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten planned to hopscotch from coast to mountains today for a series of appearances and news conferences.

Hunt's campaign continued airing a half-hour television commercial which was to appear on 12 stations Sunday and today. Aides said they hoped the ad would clarify and sharpen the contrast between the Democratic challenger and the Republican incumbent.

Filmed in "documentary" style, it focuses on Helms' votes in the Senate and his leadership of a "national network of right-wing extremists," said Hunt assistant news secretary Don Hobart. It also discusses Hunt's "progressive" eight years as governor, Hobart said.

Claude Allen, Helms' campaign press secretary, called the program "the longest-running negative ad in political history." He said it portrayed Helms as leader of the far right but ignored what Allen called Hunt's ties to the far left and the support he's received from labor unions and "radical feminists."

Hunt admitted defeat Sunday in his effort to get results of a Federal Election Commission investigation of the National Congressional Club and Jefferson Marketing Inc. before the public prior to Election Day.

"His victory is a defeat for the voters of North Carolina," Hunt said of Helms in Wilmington. "I challenge Senator Helms to stop covering up 'Club-gate' and let the voters... know the truth."

Allen said the case didn't involve

Helms or his campaign, but repeated the Helms camp's challenge for a special prosecutor to examine the case as well as Hunt's use of state aircraft for political purposes.

A Gallup Poll released Saturday night said Helms led Hunt 49 percent to 46 percent with 5 percent undecided. With a margin of error of three percentage points, the pollsters called Helms' lead "statistically insignificant."

The Carolina Poll, released Friday by the University of North Carolina School of Journalism, shows Helms leading Hunt 57 percent to 43 percent.

The poll, conducted between Oct. 28-Nov. 1, has an error margin of plus or minus 5 percent.

"I don't trust any polls, except the last one on Nov. 6," said Helms. "I figure the turnout is going to decide it."

Hunt agreed that the race was "very close" and said "you can't even tell who is leading."

The Gallup Poll showed Martin ahead of Edmisten by a "statistically valid" margin of 49 percent to 44 percent with seven percent undecided. The margin of error was three percentage points, meaning Martin's lead could be as high as 8 points or as low as 2 points.

Martin's lead "represents a sharp reversal from the findings only a month ago," the pollsters said in a statement. He had trailed Edmisten in all earlier Gallup polls, and one in May showed Martin behind, 63 percent to 26 percent.

On Sunday, Martin attended a rally in High Point, where he told some 300 backers that Edmisten's support has been "sinking slowly in the West ... and the East ... and the Piedmont."

Among those attending the rally were former North Carolina governor Jim Holshouser, who said he was "very excited" about Martin's chances.

"Jim Martin is probably the best candidate for governor in either party that I've seen in my lifetime," Holshouser said.

Meanwhile, Edmisten told about 800 supporters in Greenville Sunday that polls notwithstanding, his grass-roots political organization would carry him to victory.

"We have never let polls tell us what to do, and we'll not this time," Edmisten said at the rally. "Polls don't vote."

Business Charity

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 503 major U.S. companies shows they gave an estimated $3 billion to charity in 1983, about 7 percent more than they contributed in 1982.

Gaining a larger proportion of contributions were such programs as community improvement, housing, jobs, transportation and the environment, the study found.

The share for health and human services dipped from 34 percent in 1980 to 28.7 percent in 1983.

Order Defied

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — A Lutheran pastor who defied a court order to preach in his church says he'll remain in the building until Sunday.

"If they're going to arrest me, they'll arrest me from the altar," said the Rev. D. Douglas Roth after preaching Sunday. He was suspended from the ministry for his outspoken support of controversial pro-labor groups, then barred by an injunction from preaching at the Trinity Lutheran Church here.

A complaint from church authorities would be needed for a hearing on whether the injunction was violated and whether Roth should be fined or jailed, said Judge Emil E. Narick, who issued the temporary injunction Friday.

Freedom Rally

MANALAPAN, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Thomas H. Kean, U.S. Sen. Frank Lautenberg and other participants at a rally that drew 3,000 people here decried the vandalism of two synagogues and vowed that bigotry would not be tolerated.

Vandals used a bulldozer left on the property by a contractor to drive through a wall of Temple Beth Shalom last month, and a few months earlier, a Molotov cocktail was hurled in front of the Congregation Sons of Israel.

"We will not permit any individual or group to thwart the promise of individual freedom," Lautenberg said at the rally Sunday. "It cannot happen in this country."

Old Campaign Buttons May Prove To Be Valuable

CHARLOTTE (AP) — No matter who wins Tuesday, keep your Ferraro, Helms, and Hunt campaign buttons close to your heart — and in your lockbox.

Buttons for winners, and sometimes even losers, can get downright valuable.

While they're only tinny aluminum discs plastered with candidate's smiling mug, collectible campaign '84 buttons might one day garner $1,000 or more, as some Franklin Roosevelt campaign buttons do.

"The thing about it is, it represents history," said Kent Griffin, 28, a Charlotte construction superintendent who has about 250 buttons. "It's something I like to do after a day's work to relax."

As campaign mania spreads during elections, as many people may be hoarding buttons as are heralding candidates.

"You can pretty much spot them," said Michelle Handler, coordinator for the Mecklenburg County Mondale-Ferraro campaign. "They come in with this crazed look in their eyes."

Many already know what will be popular and passe.

"Geraldine Ferraro will be big because she's the first woman to run for vice president," Jim Warlick, president of Political Americana Inc. of Asheville said of the Democratic vice presidential candidate. "Prices on anything with Ferraro on it will probably double or triple after the election."

They're going for $1 to $5 now, depending on size, color and quality. But pity her poor partner, Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, whose political future in buttons is bleak.

"Anything with Mondale on it won't sell," said Guerard Putnam, marketing vice president of Asheville-based Peace Time Ltd., which produces campaign memorabilia.

Mondale is just another male candidate, he said. So rather than mastermind a Fritz blitz, Putnam stamped out 5,000 "Ride with Ferraro in '84" buttons, caricatures of the first woman vice presidential candidate in a convertible.

Another button on the collector's circuit bills Ms. Ferraro above Mondale, making it more valuable than standard campaign fare.

Women collect buttons more than men and most avid collectors are 25 or older and are politically active, Warlick said. About 3,000 people are in the York, Pa.-based American Political Items Collectors Association.

"Value all depends on the volume sold, the money made and how controversial was the candidate," Putnam said.

Because North Carolina's political waters are teeming with conflict, some political buttons from Tar Heel campaigns will grace showcases nationwide.

For instance, buttons bearing defeated Democratic gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox, who jumped ship to become co-chairman of Democrats for Reagan, may be a favorite nationally.

"D.G.," the button of 9th District Congressional candidate D.G. Martin, is a collectible because initials-only buttons are unusual.

Also on collector's must-have lists are buttons from the U.S. Senate race between Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Republican incumbent Jesse Helms.

"Jim Hunt will be popular because that race is so historic," said Warlick, who sold Hunt buttons Wednesday Oct. 31 in Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York.

"Helms also, but there's very little Helms stuff out there."

Karol Goebel, co-chairman of the Helms campaign in Mecklenburg County, said the Helms camp preferred stickers this year.

Eileen Hanson, a 43-year-old Charlotte political activist, has sold 1,000 "Dump Jesse Helms" buttons.

Most recently, she began promoting "HelmsBusters" — a small-volume button from Asheville that is sure to make the collector's circuit.

Ms. Hanson said her future in buttons hinges on a Helms win.

"If he's dumped," she said, "I suspect the market for my button will come to a grinding halt."

Whether pro or not, Helms's senate buttons will be best sellers, said Barbara Balcerak, a Charlotte button dealer who displayed 5,000 buttons at a flea market over the weekend.

"Election buttons are good because you put your money on your candidate then the value comes in later," she said. "Any button is good conversation, especially if it's funny or different."

IN THE STATE

Get Out The Vote Efforts Planned

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Republicans and Democrats have designed sophisticated methods for getting voters to the polls Tuesday but they don't see much need for that with one of the nation's most bitterly contested U.S. Senate races in the state.

"I don't think we could hold them back if we wanted," said Randolph Cloud, who is in charge of getting Democratic Party supporters to vote.

Republicans are more concerned with ballot security, state party chairman Dave Flaherty said.

"Our number one concern is that votes are counted right," he said.

More than 300,000 people have registered to vote since April. Registration drives by the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority boosted the percentage of eligible North Carolinians who are registered to vote to 75 percent.

Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt's challenge to Republican Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election bid also has sparked interest in voting.

"I think the increased registration and all the fussing everybody is doing about the Helms and Hunt race will generate more involvement than we've ever had before and I think that's good," Flaherty said.

Flaherty and Cloud predict that 70 percent of the registered voters will go to the polls but they have elaborate get-out-the-vote plans if that does not happen.

"The name of the game is identifying voters," Flaherty said. "That becomes more important if people are not voting but in this election I think there will be record turnout so it is not as critical."

Flaherty said the party and each Republican candidate are working to identify supporters, check off the names of those who vote and call those who do not appear to get them to the polls before they close.

The Democratic Party, which has obtained a computer and extensive databank, is coordinating voter turnout efforts for all its candidates. The party is depending on workers in the state's 2,354 precincts to do the leg work.

"Because of the technology we've been able to find out in a more sophisticated manner what voters are thinking," Cloud said. "We have conducted a very intense persuasion effort and now we've identified undecideds and ticket-splitting voters."

Such voters have received visits, literature and telephone calls.

Cloud said the party beefed up its voter turnout machinery because it realized "the stakes in this election were so high." He said it's one way to make the most of Democrats' advantage in registration.

Flaherty said there are indications that voter fraud could be a problem in the election. Helms has promised to put observers in polling places, a move that prompted Hunt to accuse Helms of trying to intimidate black voters.

"Why (else) would he do it?" Hunt said at a news conference after a breakfast speech to delegates of the predominantly black General Baptist State Convention. "North Carolina is a state that has a reputation for clean elections. ... I think it's pretty clear what he's up to."

But Flaherty noted there have been numerous people prosecuted for voter fraud in western North Carolina in recent years.

"That's absolutely a lie," Flaherty said. "We are entitled to them. Poll observers do not get involved in the electoral process."

Brock Says No Widespread Election Fraud

RALEIGH (AP) — The increased attention given to possible voter fraud in the final days before Tuesday's election has been a recurring phenomenon, the director of the state Board of Elections said.

Director Alex K. Brock commended efforts to forestall any attempt at voter fraud but said he resented suggestions that fraud is widespread in North Carolina.

"We have a good election process here," Brock said Sunday. "It is true that we had seven or eight convictions up in the western counties, but those convictions were equally divided among Republicans and Democrats. I do not believe that particular instance constitutes any widespread fraud as I've heard in some references recently."

Eight Clay County men, including Democratic Sheriff Howard Barnard and former Republican Sheriff Hartsell Moore, were convicted in 1983 of buying votes in the 1982 elections.

At a Saturday news conference, Samuel T. Currin, U.S. attorney for North Carolina's Eastern District, said the U.S. Department of Justice had singled out North Carolina, Texas and Illinois for "special attention" because they were "states where we have been in recent years having voter fraud convictions and cases."

Currin was accompanied by Kenneth W. McAllister, U.S. Attorney for the Middle District; Charles R. Brewer, U.S. Attorney for the Western District; Robert L. Pence, special agent-in-charge of the FBI in North Carolina; and William I. Berryhill Jr., U.S. marshal for the Eastern District.

The federal prosecutors said they would be in their offices on Election Day, staffing telephones to assist voters and record complaints. Pence said the FBI's state headquarters in Charlotte and its eight regional branches would be open on Election Day, ready to record complaints about voter fraud.

Democrats responded to the announcement by charging that the efforts were timed to fit in with a deliberate Republican scheme to intimidate and discourage voters from going to the polls. The U.S. Senate campaign of Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt released a statement from former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell, who said he was "shocked" that North Carolina's U.S. attorneys were "apparently engaged in a partisan political effort."

In a news conference in front of the Federal Building in Raleigh, former U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn questioned the timing of the federal prosecutors' announcement.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOV. 6, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A tendency to be too argumentative and forceful today could result in some unfortunate confrontations that could stir conditions up and keep you from accomplishments.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't have that quarrel with a person in business or there could be big trouble. Listen to advice of a good acquaintance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Finish that plan for getting ahead in the future and do not try to gain advanced data as yet. Listen to the ideas of a clever advisor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't argue with associates over some account, but show how much you appreciate being allied with them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) It is best not to argue with a partner over some small issue in a contract, then gain the assistance of good friends.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Do nothing that can annoy a co-worker otherwise there can be trouble, and listen to advice of a stranger.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't get into that recreation that you cannot afford. Listen to the advice of one who has a practical mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you discuss financial affairs with partners, you can recoup some monetary losses. Take little trips to visit friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to make your property more charming and valuable. Don't confide any intimate matters to others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit a private worry to keep you from going after your ambitions. Attend social affairs tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid a demanding pal who could spoil your plans today. Get at all those private tasks that await you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Avoid civic or other public matters that could bring you trouble. Employ a new plan to get it working with enthusiasm.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid a new outlet that could lead you into trouble. See an advisor who has fine ideas where money matters are concerned.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to act in both an impulsive and demanding manner. Teach early to think before speaking. The fields of medicine, law, psychiatry etc. are all fine here. Early religious training is very important here. Allow to participate in sports.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦QJ6 ♥954 ♦A83 ♣Q982
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your nine "soft" points are not quite good enough for a redouble, but you must take some action. Nothing other than one no trump should even come into consideration. Over a takeout double, that shows fair values.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦J10652 ♥Q5 ♦J82 ♣954
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Partner has shown a balanced hand of 25-27 points, so there is no reason to presume that you have enough for slam. Also, there are no grounds for you to decide that four spades will be a better contract. Your smattering of points should be more than enough to assure that partner will make his contract. Pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q872 ♥AQ83 ♦9 ♣AK105
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♥
Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have better than a minimum takeout double, and you should advise partner of this. However, no violent action is called for—a simple raise to two hearts serves the purpose.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦72 ♥KJ62 ♦AKJ73 ♣85
What is your opening bid?
A.—When you hold touching suits, it is sometimes right to open the higher-ranking, four-card suit in preference to the five-card suit, to facilitate a rebid. But this is not the hand for that—there is too big a discrepancy in quality between the suits. Open one diamond.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K ♥10765432 ♦A6 ♣854
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand has improved with every round of bidding. You have key honors in each of partner's suits, and partner has shown a good hand and at least two hearts with his bid of two no trump. Since we think you should have a good shot at four hearts, we would bid it.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦QJ1076432 ♥K7 ♦92 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—For all you know, this might not be your hand. You have few defensive values but great offensive potential. Jump to four spades—a preemptive action. If you bid one spade first and then jump to four spades, partner will expect far more from you in the way of high cards.

Activists Free Mink At Farm

ELLAND, England (AP) — Animal rights activists freed 2,000 mink from a fur farm near this north England village, but most were tracked down and recaptured by farm employees, police and firemen, police report.

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said freeing the mink from the Nelson Fur Farm was "downright bloody stupid of these people."

Area inspector Dave Millard said the society opposes fur farming, but it is legal in Britain, and freeing mink in such fashion "will cause suffering to wildlife in the area as well as the mink themselves."

"They are efficient killers who will go for ducks, geese, chickens and all forms of wildlife. The wildlife could be devastated," he said. "It is doubtful anyway whether that number of mink could survive in these conditions. They would be cold and wet, would get disease and die."

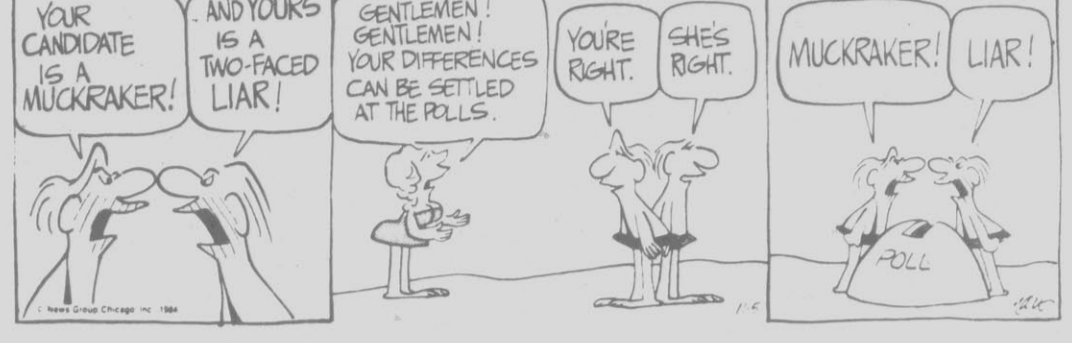

An anonymous caller to Press Association, the British domestic news agency, claimed the liberation of the mink had been carried out by the Animal Liberation Front, a group opposed to the fur trade.

Test May Help Find Parasite

WINSTON-SALEM — A 10-cent test can detect a pork-borne parasite that can cause seizures, blindness, insanity and death and is common in many Central and South American countries, researchers say.

The test, developed by Dr. Raymond E. Kuhn, an immunologist and parasitologist at Wake Forest University, and Colombian Drs. John Estrada and Max Grogl, is aimed at a disease called cysticercosis. The malady begins when larvae from a pork tapeworm called Taenia solium invade the brain and develop into round, cyst-like organisms.

The "brain worms" are common in many Central and South American countries as well as in Africa and Asia, Kuhn said. In Mexico, random autopsies have shown that about 3 percent of the population is infected, he said. About half of those infected are killed by the disease, which also causes epileptic seizures, migraine headaches, blindness and insanity, Kuhn said.

Early detection can improve the chances of a patient surviving without permanent damage, Kuhn said. However, X-ray CAT scans capable of detecting the worms cost about $300 — more than many Colombians make in a year.

Kuhn's test works by detecting in the blood an antibody produced by the immune system to fight the parasite. A similar test on the spinal fluid can tell whether the parasite has invaded the brain, Kuhn said.

The researchers said once the test materials are packaged in kits for rural clinics and doctors' offices, thousands of people could be screened each day at a cost of less than 10 cents each. The university has applied for a patent on the test.

Kuhn said the disease could be controlled if people thoroughly cooked their pork and if their sanitation measures prevented passage of the worm eggs from human waste to hogs, but he said poverty and ignorance in the Third World make it unlikely sweeping changes will come quickly. He said in Colombia people prefer the taste of infected pork, apparently because the larvae make the meat sweeter.

Kuhn said the next best thing to eradication of the parasite is early diagnosis, which will pave the way for treatment through relatively inexpensive drugs.

The researchers have applied to the National Institutes of Health to get funds for a three-year study to refine the tests. And Kuhn said Americans are not immune to the disease, noting that 100 cases of neurocysticercosis have been diagnosed in California in the past 10 years — most among immigrants or Americans who had traveled in Third World countries.

Service Held For Gandhi

RALEIGH (AP) — Some 60 people burned incense and silently prayed on Sunday for Indra Gandhi and called for an end to the violence that erupted in India following the prime minister's assassination last week.

In a memorial service at North Carolina State University's Student Center, Mrs. Gandhi was hailed as a leader who brought India into the modern age and put aside her religious bias to maintain the constitutional responsibility to keep the country a secular state.

Mrs. Gandhi, who was killed on Wednesday at her home by two of her Sikh bodyguards, was cremated Saturday in funeral rites in New Delhi, the capital of India.

"We grieve and we seek support from each other," said Sagar Jain, a professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and founder of the Heritage Society, an Indian organization.

"But she was not simply Indra Gandhi. She was the leader of the country. But more importantly, she was the glue which held the country together," said Jain, who was among the 60 members of the Indian community in the Raleigh area to attend the memorial service.

The death of Mrs. Gandhi has set off bloody violence throughout India as more than 1,000 Indians have reportedly died in days of anti-Sikh rioting. Nearly 300 Sikhs were reported massacred in one New Delhi district.

Benny Stamp

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If the Jack Benny Commemorative Stamp Committee has its way, some day you may be mailing letters with stamps bearing the likeness of the famous comedian.

Comedian Norm Crosby got the idea to honor Benny, who died Dec. 26, 1976. He enlisted Benny's closest friend, comedian George Burns, and Benny's manager, Irving Fein, to serve on the committee.

Crosby said the group would solicit signatures from personalities and executives in the entertainment, business and political fields before submitting the request to the U.S. Postal Service.

State Uncertain About Next Execution

GREENSBORO (AP) — None of the 39 inmates remaining on North Carolina's death row is likely to follow Velma Barfield any time soon, the state's special attorney general responsible for capital cases says.

The 52-year-old woman became the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years early Friday morning when she died by lethal injection.

"It's probably impossible to tell who will be the next person executed or when it would occur," the attorney, Donald Stephens, said.

Lengthy and complicated appeals will delay the next execution in North Carolina, and state officials and capital punishment opponents aren't sure who the next person will be.

Nationally, another execution could occur this week. Timothy Palmes, one of 1,420 prisoners awaiting execution, is scheduled to die Wednesday in Florida.

"There is no certainty that he will be executed," said Richard Brody of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund in New York, "because there are appeals going on."

"There are two people we are concerned about because their cases are pretty far along in the appeals process," said Nan Freeland, co-director of the North Carolina Prison and Jail Project. "But I'd hate to give their names. It might alarm them."

Stephens confirmed the two were John William Rook, 25, and Kermit Smith Jr., 26. He said Rook has completed his state appellate review, but still can take his claims to the federal courts, whereas Smith's case is still on appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Rook was sentenced to die for what Stephens called "about as sick a killing as we've had in North Carolina" in the death of a Wake County woman in May 1980. Smith went to death row for the murder of a N.C. Wesleyan College cheerleader in December 1980.

"If some new legal issue comes up, four or five people could pass them," Stephens said. Larry Darnell Williams, 31, was given the death penalty for killing a convenience store clerk in Concord and a service station attendant in Gastonia on June 3, 1979. Unlike most death row inmates, Williams took his appeal directly to the federal courts, bypassing state remedies altogether.

Stephens said Williams might be able to try the state courts later.

"But if the court says he's waived the state appeals process, he may be ahead of the other two," he added.

While some say the length of time on death row is not a determining factor as to the next execution, opponents of capital punishment disagree. They contend the state has chosen to push the cases of white inmates to ease criticism of the execution process.

Of the 39 men now on death row, 26 are black, 12 are white and one is an American Indian.

"I think the thing is orchestrated," said George Gardner, head of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union. "We have yet to execute a black and that was true all over the country until Linwood Briley in Virginia a couple of weeks ago."

Stephens denied the race is a factor in who dies and when.

"If anybody wanted to cause that to occur it couldn't be done," he said. "It's the courts that determine how rapidly and slowly the process moves."

Everyone talks about the cost of health care. We can help you do something about it.

In response to the rising cost of health care, the typical insurance carrier tends to be long on sympathy but short on substance. What you get, generally, is an outpouring of sincerity to prepare you for a rate quotation that'll render you speechless.

And by teaming such strategies with the rate-containment procedures we employ on our own initiative, we can help you make some substantial improvements in your benefit package.

Duplication of expensive medical services should be reduced wherever possible. And people should be encouraged to incur medical expenses more selectively—to seek outpatient treatment, for example, when hospitalization isn't needed.

To find out how the right cost-containment strategies can benefit your group and

When the need is for some concrete ways to reduce the cost of group health care immediately, and the means to contain those costs effectively across the long term.

- Here's how we can help you.
1. Put cost-containment into practice.

Owing to a literally unique knowledge of health-care costs and cost discrepancies, even at the community level, no health carrier is better equipped than we are to build workable, predictably effective, cost-containment strategies into your health benefits program.

We can show you the specific ways your group can reduce its use of hospitalization.

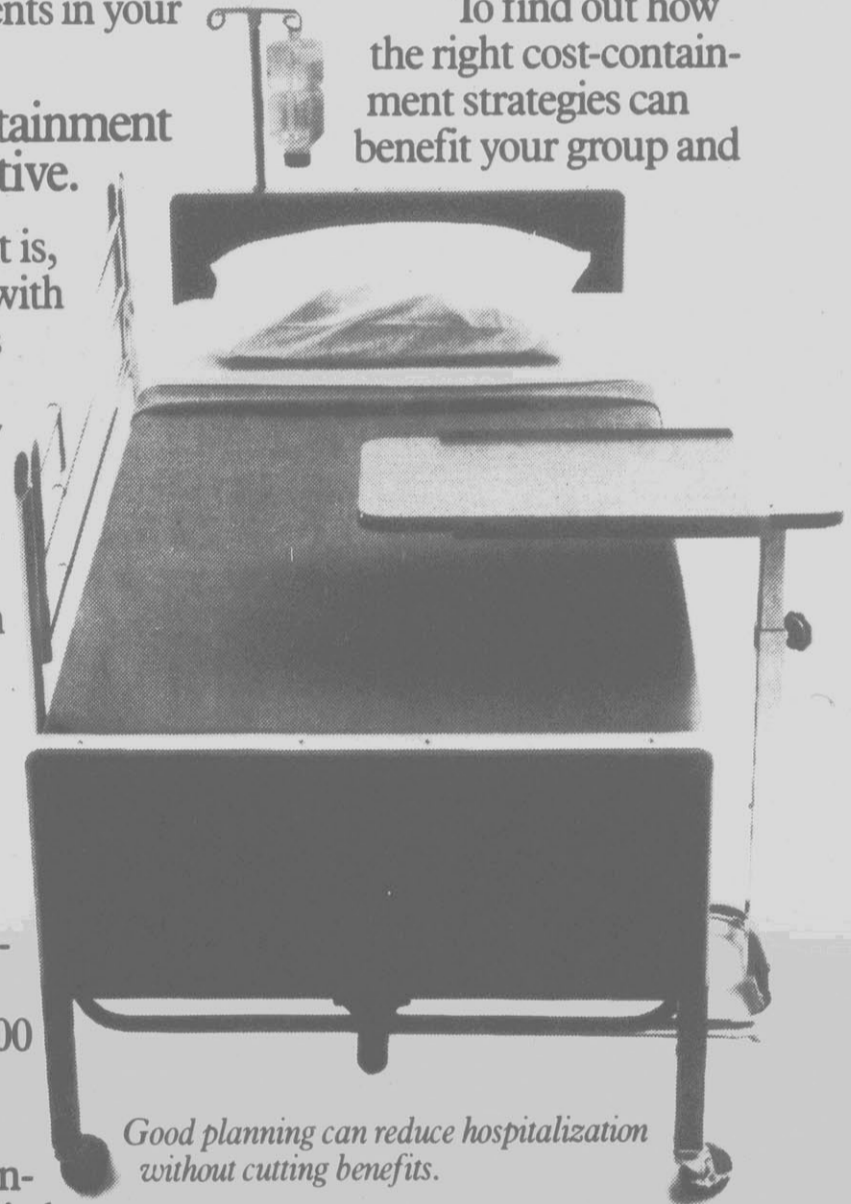

We can structure your program to encourage the use of the most economical care consistent with good medical practice.

2. Put cost-containment in perspective.

Important as it is, however, dealing with rising health costs at the individual group level is only a kind of symptomatic approach. You're coping with effects, when we can also help you address the causes of those dramatic cost increases.

For example, given current construction rates of more than $150,000 per bed, all of us need to support more prudent planning for new hospitals.

Where acute care isn't required, we should have alternative facilities that are appropriate in sophistication to the needs they meet.

Good planning can reduce hospitalization without cutting benefits.

The economic history of three common surgical procedures. Statistics like these argue eloquently for the concrete cost-containment strategies we offer.

General Surgeon's Median Fee	February 1966	October 1975	October 1983
Appendectomy	$175.00	275.00	551.00
Cholecystectomy (Gall Bladder)	$275.00	450.00	901.00
Inguinal hernia, Unilateral	$150.00	270.00	551.00
