Election '84: High Drama, Low Comedy

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

Election Day 1984, in the world's pre-eminent democracy. A mosaic of staggering scope and myriad parts, of high drama and low comedy.

The total cost of all campaigns culminating today, on all levels, is expected to reach $1.8 billion. That could have paid for the entire federal government through its first 64 years, a third of its history.

About 174 million Americans are old enough to vote today. More than 74 million won't. Nowhere in the world does it cost more to seek public office. In few places in the world do fewer people, proportionately, vote.

Still, the numbers are large and the sweep is majestic. Nearly 100 million people are expected to go to the polls this day in schoolhouses and apartment basements, in post offices and fire halls, in libraries and general stores, in recreation centers and grange halls, in huge cities and mountain hamlets, in desert towns and lonely settlements on the arctic tundra.

Many thousands of people are running for thousands of jobs. In a four-year period, Americans are asked to select by ballot about 500,000 public officials, from president to dog catcher, from most members of Congress to the 7,500 members of state legislatures, to the mayors, judges, city council members, county supervisors, coroners, sheriffs, district attorneys, justices of the peace, constables, town clerks, boards of education, sewage districts, mosquito control boards, town auctioneers, packers of fish, keepers of pounds and viewers of fences.

Despite voting machines, giant computers, ubiquitous scientific polls, engulfing vote projections and other examples of creeping hi-tech, quaintness is not dead in the American electoral system.

Marion Varney, the town clerk of Harts Location in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, opened one end of her family basement room for the morning "rush" of voters, who total 14.

In Peru, Vt., voters cast their ballots in a hallway leading into two bathrooms of the town hall, guaranteeing, one official said, the sacred right of privacy. The 25 residents of Pahaquarry, N.J., had difficulty voting for mayor because no one remembered to put hizzoner on the ballot.

As every schoolchild knows, many are called and few are chosen for the White House. This year, 228 people of all parties and splinters filed statements of presidential intention with the Federal Election Commission. They included 22 women whose prospects were such that nobody even asked

HEAVY TURNOUT — Voters turned out in heavy numbers, starting before dawn, to vote in today's general election in Pitt County. Election officials predict 70 to 80 percent of the registered voters in the county will cast their ballots. Although this line at Elm Street Gymnasium in Greenville appeared long, the line was moving fairly quickly. (Reflector photo by Chris Bennett)

Local Polls 'Swamped'

By JERRY RAYNOR

"Flooded, swamped, inundated" were the words Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee used to describe conditions at the Board of Elections and at most of Pitt County's 24 precincts this morning.

In between hurried conversations with election personnel and phone calls from voters, Mrs. Hardee said that today marked the biggest election turnout she'd ever seen. "No one knew how to prepare for this flood," she said.

According to Mrs. Hardee, more than 60 people had lined up outside Greenville Precinct 5, the county's largest, as early as 6 this morning. The precinct, and all others in the county, was scheduled to open at 6:30 a.m. and will close at 8:30 p.m., an hour later than usual.

Once Precinct 5's doors were opened, it became apparent, Mrs. Hardee said, that emergency ballot boxes would have to be brought out to diminish the lines. The emergency ballot boxes — old wooden ones used in previous elections — were set out to receive overflow ballots until precinct closing. The ballots will then, in full view of election officials, be fed into tabulators, she explained.

Despite the overwhelming number of voters coming to the polls, Mrs. Hardee said she was not surprised. (Please turn to page 10)

State Expecting Massive Voter Turnout

By The Associated Press
North Carolina Democratic and Republican officials predicted up to 70 percent of the state's eligible voters would go to the polls today as candidates took 11th-hour jibes at each other in last-day campaigns that stretched statewide.

The sheer number of voters eligible to cast ballots — 77 percent of the voting-age population — and the fervor of the 1984 campaign portend a huge turnout that will tax even the smallest of the state's precincts, state Elections Director Alex Brock said Monday.

Polls were to open at 6:30 a.m.

today in the state's 2,354 polling places and close at 7:30 p.m., although each county elections board has the option to stay open an hour later, Brock said.

Meanwhile, state GOP chairman David Flaherty predicted a record turnout. Randolph Cloud, who's in charge of getting Democratic Party supporters to vote, said "I don't think we could hold them back if we wanted to."

The head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference also urged voters to go to the polls to keep democracy thriving.

Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based SCLC, called the 1984 election "the most important in our lifetime" during a news conference Monday at the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

On the campaign trail Monday, North Carolina's Senate combatants mounted their last-day trips across the state, with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., stressing ties to President Reagan and challenger Jim Hunt calling Helms an extremist.

In the gubernatorial race, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said opponent Jim Martin would not represent all of North Carolina, while Martin charged Edmisten with distributing information that distorted his record.

Hunt, a two-term Democratic governor, said North Carolina deserves "a positive and constructive representative instead of an extremist who pushes radical causes."

Helms, a two-term senator, accused Hunt of being "desperate ... furious ... frustrated ... frightened."

A Gallup Poll released Saturday showed Helms leading Hunt with 49 percent to 46 percent and 5 percent undecided. With a margin of error of 3 percent, the pollsters said Helms' lead was statistically insignificant.

Flanked by two of his daughters and three of his grandchildren at a Raleigh news conference, Helms blasted a 30-minute television commercial aired statewide by the Hunt campaign Sunday. The commercial, praises Hunt's record and goals, repeats his allegations that Helms is a tool of the extreme right and the rich, such as oil billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt of Texas.

Saying he was "proud of my friendship with Bunker Hunt," Helms said, "Let's talk about the homosexuals who support Gov. Hunt, the labor union bosses, the crooks who support him."

Asked to identify the "crooks,"

Helms said "The labor unions and other guys." He didn't elaborate.

Hunt outlined the stakes in the election and meeting voters in the Piedmont, where he anticipates one of the toughest battles in his effort to unseat Helms.

"I am asking the voters of North Carolina to cast a vote for jobs and economic growth, to cast a vote for progress, to cast a vote for hope and opportunity," Hunt said at a Raleigh news conference.

"North Carolina should not be represented by a senator who puts his first priority on Jerry Falwell

PCMH Prohibits Political Activity

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board, in a call meeting Monday afternoon, unanimously adopted a resolution prohibiting political activity by hospital personnel on hospital time, with hospital funds and materials, and in the name of the hospital.

In executive session, the board voted to send a letter of apology to Gov. Jim Hunt for an unauthorized letter written by the hospital's executive vice president endorsing Hunt's U.S. Senate race opponent, Jesse Helms, and to hold a meeting with the PCMH official, Fred T.

Brown Jr., after he has returned from Army Reserve duty in California.

Copies of a letter signed by Brown over his PCMH job title and dated Oct. 30 were sent out by the Helms for Senate Committee and were received last week by citizens throughout the state, including many of the PCMH trustees and at least one Pitt County commissioner.

Board Chairman Reid Hooper opened the meeting by saying that, while "it is commendable that he takes a stand politically, Brown has created a divisive situation in this community with this letter." He

GOP Poll Worker Warned

Law enforcement officials are investigating a threat made against a black Republican poll worker here early Monday morning.

Sgt. C.B. Landreth said Francis E. Anderson of 1016 Colonial Ave., an official judge in Greenville Precinct 3 (the West Greenville Recreation Center) "received the threat through a friend of his. The message was if he showed up (at the polling place) he'd be iced."

But Landreth said "it wasn't a verbal threat on him. It was kind of a rumor."

Landreth, who said Anderson reported the incident to the police department about 12:30 a.m., said department officials "contacted the FBI, the SBI and the Board of Elections and (District Attorney) Tom Haigwood."

Landreth noted that Anderson "wouldn't come down and make a formal complaint. I talked to him on the phone," the officer said, adding that Anderson apparently interpreted the threat to include his wife, who was scheduled to be an observer at the polls.

Samuel T. Currin, U.S. attorney for North Carolina's Eastern District, said this morning that Anderson's wife "felt very intimidated" by the threat and said she was "definitely not going" to the polls.

City School Board Accepts Offer On Roof Warranty

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

An agreement to accept $13,536 from Bird Inc. of North Charleston, S.C., as warranty payment on deteriorated shingles at Greenville Middle School was approved by members of the Greenville Board of Education at its information meeting Monday night.

George W. Shoe, architect for the city schools, explained that although there is no leakage due to the condition of the shingles, they have deteriorated to an extent greater than acceptable under a 25-year warranty for the material. Shoe said the firm's agreement to pay $13,536 based on a pro-rata percentage formula was a fair settlement offer which he recommended the board to accept.

Director of Administration Richard Preston reported that the roof work at Middle School and Aycock has been completed, "with no leaks reported on the roofs to date."

Board approval was given to the appointment of new assistant principals at two schools to be effective upon hiring replacements for the two in their current positions. Sarah Allen, a teacher at Elmhurst Elementary School, will be an assistant principal at South Greenville Ele-

Work At Home Is Allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says it will permit manufacturers of knitted outerwear to employ people for work in their homes, if the companies first get a government certificate.

The new rule, which takes effect in 30 days, grew out of the so-called "Vermont knitters" controversy involving a few hundred women working at their homes. It was published Monday in the Federal Register.

The Reagan administration first lifted a longstanding ban on such work in the home in 1981. That action was challenged by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and the ban was reimposed by a federal appeals court.

Under the new regulation, work at home would be permitted only by knitted outerwear makers who obtain federal certificates. A ban on six other categories of work at home, including women's apparel, jewelry manufacturing, gloves and mittens, buttons and buckles, handkerchief manufacturing and embroideries, remains in effect.

A union lawyer, Max Zimny, said the requirement that employers obtain a government certificate is "an old wrinkle with a new coat ... There is a great incentive for home workers not to complain (to the government about poor conditions). These people are not going to get themselves into trouble by complaining ... even when you find them and identify them."

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

With the busy holiday season fast approaching, now is the time to start making ornaments for your very special Christmas tree and as thoughtful little gifts to enclose with some of your Christmas cards. Use only the simplest of needlepoint stitches, 3- and 4-inch plastic canvas pre-cut circles, 10-mesh colored canvas and small amounts of yarn to create these clever, quick and easy ornaments.

To obtain directions for making the Frosted Christmas Circles, send your requests for Leaflet No. NL-0814 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-0814 by sending a check or money order for $12 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the shipping charges and all materials and instructions needed to make two of each ornament shown.

you do with the beginning strand of yarn or thread when you are starting with a blank piece of canvas?

I'll always be grateful to Marion Scouler of Clemson, S.C., who taught me the "waste now trick" many years ago.

The first step — after threading your needle, of course — is to make a knot in the end of your yarn. This is breaking another unbreakable needlepoint rule — that which states that you never, ever use knots while stitching.

But go ahead and make the knot anyway. Now, insert the threaded needle from the right side to the wrong side of the canvas so that the knot (A in sketch) will be at least a couple of inches away from the point where you will take your first stitch. It should be placed so it is in the direction in which you will be stitching. This way, the strand of yarn that runs from the knot to the first stitch will be covered as you work.

Now, bring the needle up at B and take it down at C to work your first stitch. Then, work a couple more stitches moving toward the knot. When you have done so, you will see that the strand of yarn running from the knot is on the wrong side of your work and is being covered (and thus secured) by the stitches.

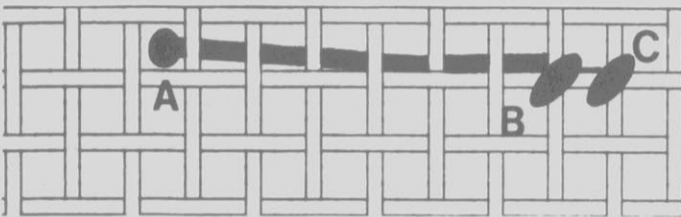

When you come close to the knot, just snip it away. That's all there is to it — a simple trick, but an invaluable one.

With most projects, you will only do this once — at the very beginning. However, when you are using a colored canvas, working scattered stitches or groups of stitches, you should use it each time you start in a new area so that there won't be strands of yarn running from one area to another and showing through the areas of unworked canvas.

While I have illustrated this with a simple continental stitch, this trick can be used with any stitch. If you have been needlepoint for years without being aware of this, you're sure to wonder — as I did — "Why didn't I think of that before?"

One of the cardinal rules in needlepoint of any kind is that you should always secure loose yarn ends under previously worked stitches and then clip the remaining ends immediately. Regular readers will know that I am not one for giving a lot of unbreakable rules for any craft, but this is one that should always be observed in order to keep those loose ends from tangling, knotting or working their way to the front of the work.

That's all well and good when you have some adjacent, previously worked stitches through which to secure the excess yarn. But what do

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently became a victim of a con game I think the public should be made aware of.

A couple who appeared to be in their mid-60s came to our door saying they were soliciting funds for the American Diabetes Foundation. They showed us a plastic enclosed sheet of credentials and wore diabetes-alert necklaces. They said they were selling ballpoint pens to pay for their insulin shots and assured us that they were registered with the local police department.

I was suspicious of them, so I bought some pens (for evidence) and wrote down the license number of their car (out of state). As soon as they left, I called the police chief and asked if these people had been issued a permit to collect in our neighborhood. He said they had not, but he would check into it.

Later that evening I called the chief back (this is a small town) and asked if he had caught up with that couple yet.

He said, "Oh yes, they're on their way back to a neighboring state. We picked them up about the same time last year for collecting money in this area." When I questioned him further about what action would be taken, he said, "Just consider it a donation to the poor."

Abby, these people drove a late-model car and looked anything but poor. Our law enforcement officials seem to think it was OK as long as those running the scam were old enough to be on Social Security and collected only a few dollars from each call.

It just doesn't seem right to me to let these people use the name of the American Diabetes Foundation to collect money under false pretenses.

Abby, please tell your readers not to buy anything or make any donations without checking first to see if the solicitation is on the up-and-up.

WARY IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR WARY: Your letter is a valuable public service, and I thank you for it. But why did you withhold the name of your town, after telling me your law enforcement officials looked out the window while these cheats canvassed your neighborhood?

It's OK to conceal your own identity, but failure to disclose the name of your town in effect protects law enforcement officials who are shirking their duties or are possibly crooked.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy soup, but whenever I have soup, my girlfriend corrects me when I tilt the spoon toward me. She says I should tilt the spoon away from me.

Will you please tell us who is

Priorities

A productive Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce has set its priorities for the coming year, and fittingly enough, education tops the agenda.

Education leading a list of concerns among businessmen? For sure! They know too well the kind of workers most required in today's industries are not the unskilled blue-collar types needed as recently as 30 or even 20 years ago. "Entry level" job-seekers with dreams of middle-American life standards need more education than their fathers and grandfathers enjoyed.

Economic development ranks high in the ambitions of every growing community. Linked so closely to the education role it properly follows on the heels of education in the list of priorities.

Transportation needs are in turn closely tied to economic growth; they are fittingly near the top of priorities. Development of a regional civic center is no longer a "new" concept. Certainly feasibility studies should be continued as an addition to the further development of our county.

Agriculture has always been and will continue in the foreseeable future a basic element of the Pitt economy. The rich farmland within our area carries with it potentials for broader productivity when even closer links are established with those related fields of education, transportation and economic development.

The chamber of commerce has assembled a package of things-to-do that carry implications for only better tomorrows.

Tempest

It is something more than just bad manners to ignore a host country's laws; and it is something less than "good taste" to question your host's concern for one's comfort and welfare.

The French people have a long tradition of being both gracious hosts and gracious guests; so we face up to the furore over visiting President Francois Mitterand's security people "testing" British security by planting explosives.

Ignore the unattributed explanation that British police asked the visiting entourage to test bomb-sniffing dogs. (It is possibly true.)

On the other hand, the recent bombing attempt by the Irish Republican Army to kill Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and other Conservative Party leaders at a major political gathering would strike a nerve among guardians of any visiting head of state. Sudden, violent death missed Mrs. Thatcher by the narrowest of margins.

Wouldn't you, entrusted with the safety of your country's most prominent representative, have taken extraordinary measures to assure his or her security?

Of course you would. All else, even the familiar amenities, would be a remote and secondary consideration. Despite their public denouncements the British probably understand. They could hardly remain silent, but their "storm" more resembles a tempest in a (British) teacup.

Report Shows Lax Restrictions

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — State Auditor Ed Renfrow's recent audit report on day care in North Carolina had to give a boost to advocates of tougher day care regulation in the state. In compiling the report, Renfrow's subordinates found that North Carolina has just about the least restrictive regulations of any state in the country.

According to federal research reported in the audit, North Carolina's allowable child to staff ratios are about the highest of any state that regulates ratios. In four of the six age categories, North Carolina's ratio is the highest of the 45 pertinent states. In the other two categories, North Carolina is third and fourth.

For children aged less than a year, for example, the national average is one staff member per five children. In states like Massachusetts, Maryland, Kansas and Wisconsin, the required ratio is three to one. In North Carolina, the law allows nine children to one worker. That's the nation's highest.

For those aged 1 to 2 years, North Carolina's one to nine ratio ranks fourth highest with Ohio, Georgia and North Dakota allowing 10 children. Maryland allows only three, many other states only four and the average is six.

For those aged 2 to 3, North Carolina is third highest with a one to 13 ratio. For those 3 to 4, North Carolina is highest, with a one to 16 ratio. In the four to five bracket, the state is highest with a one to 21 ratio and in the 5 to 6 bracket, the state is highest again with a one to 26 ratio.

In a related area, North Carolina also had the distinction of allowing very large groups of children to congregate together. Witnesses before a recent Day Care Study Commission hearing said it is felt that group size, more than ratio, effects a child. The noise and confusion of a group of 25 children, which is allowed in North Carolina in all age brackets, can be very disturbing to a child, the witnesses said.

The report provided another tid-bit of information which will probably increase the likelihood of change in day care legislation in 1985. A random scientific sampling of day care centers in North Carolina found that 77 percent were not filled to the maximum standard set by the state.

These centers had chosen to maintain ratios below state levels. As one day care operator said, "The law says I can have 13 two-year olds for each staff member. Forget it." Her point: No human being can control 13 two-year-olds at one time. She had to keep her ratios lower.

After telling a legislative committee about his hopes for more helicopters for the Highway Patrol, Heman Clark, secretary of crime control, was asked how safe helicopters are. "They're very safe," he said, "they can put those things down anywhere."

Clark should know. Just a few weeks earlier, while traveling through Rowan County, his helicopter stalled and was forced to perform an emergency landing in a Salisbury family's backyard, he said.

"Boy, was he surprised," Clark said of his host. "But his kids loved it."

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, a frequent critic of the State Board of Education, described his dissatisfaction with the recently proposed state career ladder for teachers this way: "Have you seen the Charlotte Mecklenburg plan — it's an excellent plan, maybe the best in the country? It's one inch thick. Have you seen the plan for the rest of the state? It's 14 pages."

It's The Label That Matters

WASHINGTON — In politics, as in most games of skill, the world is divided into professionals and amateurs. The big difference between them is that the pros act from their heads and the amateurs act from their hearts. Put another way, the pros know the importance of party and the amateurs don't.

At the federal level, which is what we're mainly concerned with on Tuesday, party labels approach the be-all and end-all. Never mind party allegiance. That's something else; it's the label that matters. On Capitol Hill we count noses on the opening day of Congress, and we do not count liberal noses or conservative noses, or North or South or East or West noses. In each chamber we count Republican and Democratic noses.

We count them in this fashion for reasons that professionals understand and amateurs ignore. The first of these reasons is that the party in power controls the appointment of committee staff. For all the derision that is heaped upon them, the truth is that most members of the House and Senate work hard at their jobs. A larger truth is that the most significant work is done not by the members but by the faceless aides who toil in anonymity in the committee rooms.

Members of Congress rarely draft their own bills and resolutions. They have staff to do this. Staff people line up witnesses for hearings; they draft agendas, prepare amendments, write the committee reports that constitute "legislative history." Some staffers are public servants who make a career of committee work regardless of shifts in political power, but the key people are political appointees who have been ideologically vetted by their patrons.

This is why such vital importance attached to the senatorial elections of 1980. For the first time in 20 years, Republicans gained control of the Senate. They took over the chairmanships of the committees, and with these offices they gained control of majority staff. As the majority party, the Republicans were able to elect Howard Baker as majority leader, and Baker was able to fix the Senate's schedule.

I recite these elementary lessons by way of expressing impatience with those amateur Republican conservatives who are seeking to defeat

Republican Sen. Charles Percy in Illinois. This is playground stuff. The ideologues of NCPAC (the National Conservative Political Action Committee) are not using their heads. They are acting from some other part of their collective anatomy — the adrenal glands, perhaps, or the bile ducts. Their dislike of Percy is so passionate that they are willing to risk not only the election of the ultraliberal Paul Simon in Percy's place; they also are willing to risk control of the Senate. This is political madness. They're not playing hardball; they're playing beanball.

Things are different in the House. There the Democrats have a comfortable margin of 100 seats. Next week's election will see serious contests in only 50 of the 435 House districts. Most of the guessing is that the Republicans will pick up 15 to 20 seats, but Democratic control will never be in doubt. In the Senate, by contrast, the Republicans' control is by a margin of 55 to 45. If they lose six seats, there goes the old ball game. Democrat Robert Byrd returns as majority leader; such old-line Democrats as Stennis of Mississippi and Long of Louisiana return to key committee chairmanships; new staff directors come in.

Am I stressing form over substance? I suppose I am. Once Congress gets under way, ideology and idealism become the paramount considerations. Then conservatives may complain to their hearts' content about the liberalism of Percy of Illinois and Mathias of Maryland. After the opening day, Democrats have the same right to howl at their boll weevil brothers. In the best of all possible worlds, we would abandon the old labels of Republican and Democrat, and we would reorganize our parties sensibly as Conservatives and Liberals. Come the millennium, maybe that will happen. Don't hold your breath.

Meanwhile, be assured that the party pros know exactly what they're doing in urging a vote by party labels on Tuesday. More is at stake in the close Senate races than the fate of a Chuck Percy, a Jesse Helms, a Roger Jepsen. We're talking control of the Senate. The kids at NCPAC need to grow up.

Reagan Offered Help To Other Candidates

WASHINGTON — As the long campaign's final week began, the presence of Ronald Reagan in suburban Delaware County, Pennsylvania, boosting an underdog Republican challenger for Congress, stunned GOP House members who had assumed the president would follow the pattern of selfishness set by his predecessors.

It came late in the game, with considerable limitations, after much reluctance and partly by accident. Still, Reagan was making some effort for House seats. In romping to landslide victories, Dwight D.

Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon helped nobody. Indeed, not until tracking polls showed Reagan soaring, following the second debate with Walter Monale, did the president's handlers agree to any congressional intervention.

That might "nationalize" individual House contests into votes of confidence for Reagan. Polls pitting well-known Democratic incumbents against anonymous Republican challengers yield a GOP pickup of no more than a dozen seats. But turning these races into a referendum on whether the president should have a Republican House could so transform the voter's choice so as to bring the Republican gain into the 20-to-30 seat range.

The smart money had been against any such effort. James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff and political strategist, has told colleagues for months that Reagan's lead would drop to 4 or 5 percentage points by November. That precluded any presidential effort for House seats.

Baker's pessimism seemed realized after the polls narrowed following the Louisville debate. The obliviousness of the president's managers to candidates for Congress was obvious during his whistlestop tour in Ohio when he skirted but did not step foot in Toledo, despite a serious challenge there against a first-term Democrat.

But Reagan's anti-tax commercials and the Kansas City debate standoff again widened his lead to landslide proportions. After the second debate, the president's men agreed Reagan would take part in the battle for Congress — though with strict limitations.

The president's polsters still insisted a call for a Republican Congress would cost Reagan votes without helping congressional candidates. It was decided Vice President George Bush would assume the traditionally grubby duties of his office by going into House districts while Reagan stuck to Senate races.

Besides, the Catch-22 governing presidential help remained in force: Reagan would not campaign for anybody who really needed it. Desperate pleas for help by businessman Ray Shamie, the Reaganite Senate nominee in overwhelmingly Democratic Massachusetts, were about to be spurned on grounds he was too far behind (and might hurt the president's chances of carrying the state). On Oct. 24, we were told flatly by a high-level Reagan-Bush operative the President would not be campaigning for Shamie.

He did not figure on the pressure mounted in Shamie's behalf by conservative activists. The decision to send Reagan into Massachusetts was made Oct. 25. On the next day, Reagan-Bush Deputy Campaign Manager Lee Atwater telephoned Paul Weyrich, New Right Political operative, with this message: Call off the dogs; we give up.

Determination that Reagan would stick to Senate races crumbled mostly by accident. Campaign planners called Pennsylvania operative Rick Robb to ask his recommendation about where in the state the president should go. Robb's theory is that incumbent Republican congressmen ought to take care of themselves; it's the challengers who need help. He therefore suggested the 7th Congressional District in Philadelphia's suburbs.

The Seventh scarcely fit the Reagan-Bush ground rules governing where the president should campaign. Republican Delaware County Councilman Curt Weldon was running well behind four-term Democratic Rep. Bob Edgar, with little chance in an individual popularity contest. But because that race has been nationalized into a referendum on Reagan, Weldon has new life.

Reagan's help for another Republican underdog challenger, former state representative Matthew Hatchadorian, running against first-term Democratic Rep. Edward Feighan in the Cleveland suburbs was similarly haphazard. Bob Hughes, veteran Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) GOP chairman, simply made sure that Hatchadorian was invited to be with the president on his visit to Cleveland four days before the election.

Even with the president scheduled in Massachusetts, there was no invitation from Reagan-Bush headquarters to Greg Hyatt, a young anti-tax activist running for the state's only open congressional seat.

Insiders give Hyatt no real chance against one of the state's most powerful figures: State Democratic Chairman Chet Atkins. After some nervous moments, Hyatt's managers learned he would indeed be on the platform with Reagan and Shamie in Boston.

Strength For Today

Much has been written in recent years about the social gospel. This term indicates the application of the gospel of Christ to great social problems. The individual gospel, on the other hand, is an attempt by each individual seeking to enrich his own spiritual life and to achieve for it certain great spiritual ends.

Actually, this great reality which we know as the gospel has both social and individual applications. We apply the gospel to social, political, and international problems with the confidence that such problems can be solved only through faith in God's willingness and power to forgive man's sins. We have seen great evils exterminated because Christian people have put their faith to work to crush or cure these things.

The gospel in its fullness is oth an individual and a social matter. An attempt to make it one or the other is ruinous. There is one God, one gospel, one Savior.

Housing Authority Will Reduce Some Rents

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Housing Authority have approved and made retroactive to Oct. 1 a resolution to abide by new federal policies governing Section 8 programs. Housing units covered under the Section 8 program include buildings leased from private owners and the Authority's University Towers development.

The action, taken Monday in regular session, will slightly reduce welfare and family rent while leaving working family rents at approximately the same level, Authority

Director Joe Laney said. Laney attributed the anticipated reduction of Section 8 welfare and elderly family rents to increased deductions offered for dependents and medical expenses. New Section 8 policy calls for an increase in deductions for dependents from $300 to $480 and a $400 deduction has been designated for elderly families (a new deduction in addition to the regular deduction for medical expenses for elderly.)

Families will no longer be allowed medical expenses. However, loss of medical deductions for working families should, Laney said, be offset by increased deductions for dependents.

In adopting recommended Section 8 policy changes, the board also provided for revision of income limit guidelines. Under the new policy, income limits for Section 8 moderate rehabilitation and new construction (University Towers) will be based on 80 percent of the median income ($16,400 per year per family of four) for the area. Income limits for existing Section 8 housing will be based on 50 percent of the median income ($10,250 per year per family of four) of the area, limiting issuance of certificates for existing construction to families classified

"Very Low Income." The new guidelines also allow for assets of housing authority residents to be considered when establishing eligibility based on yearly income. Where a family has net assets in excess of $5,000, annual income shall include the greater of actual income or the passbook savings percentage as determined by Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The passbook savings percentage currently recommended by HUD is 5.5 percent.

In other business, Laney and Authority Assistant Director Ken Nolan reported on the fiscal 1984 budget. According to Laney and Nolan, the authority had an extremely good year financially. Operating rental receipts increased approximately 10 percent over the previous year and operating expenses increased only 4 percent. Operating expenses were less than anticipated, Laney said, primarily because of reduced utility costs, brought about by milder weather and beginning results of Authority energy conservation improvements. The most important result of the authority's financial year, Laney said, was an increase in the operating reserve, bringing it to the full amount authorized by HUD ($740,990).

Nolan also reported on the status of Kearney Park and Meadowbrook modernization efforts. Nolan said work on storm sewer improvements at Kearney Park is 65 to 70 percent complete, that installation of new water heaters at Meadowbrook has been finished and that approximately 50 percent of the Meadowbrook units have received new furnaces.

Laney reported that work on new construction is about 87 percent complete and said that the authority expects to move families into the West Meadowbrook development in a few weeks.

mentary School, and Brenda Jones, math teacher at E. B. Aycock Junior High, will be an assistant principal at Greenville Middle School.

Also approved in the personnel line was a list of teachers and other personnel as treasurers at individual schools and at the central office. Of the total of 27 personnel approved as treasurers, five have been placed under a $25,000 surety bond and one under a $50,000 surety bond.

A request by the PTA at Third Street School to have students at the school fingerprinted was approved. Bob Thompson, spokesman for the program, explained that the East Carolina University police have volunteered to do the fingerprinting, and that the Greenville Police Department is providing personnel to assist and would probably also provide the necessary cards. Parents who agree to have their children fingerprinted will have the choice of having cards sent home for safekeeping or kept on file at Third Street School.

Director of Elementary Education Charles Ross announced the scheduled dates for giving the annual achievement tests. The California spoke of the bipartisan support the hospital has had over the years.

Trustee Dave Speir pointed out the hospital has grown and benefitted during the recent Democratic state administrations and censured Brown's use of the word "arrogantly" in reference to Gov. Hunt, whom Speir described as a friend to PCMH.

Trustee Kathryn Lewis described the letter as "a personal embarrassment to me." She said she found the "tone of the letter offensive in view of the facts."

Trustee Joe Parker called Brown's writing the letter "inappropriate even as a private citizen."

Trustee Arlee Griffin said the letter was "in bad taste, actually stupid," and he objected to enclosures which accompanied the letter, including a handout which he said created racial divisiveness with its reference to past controversy over a holiday to honor Martin Luther King Jr.

Mary Williams, a local citizen who asked to be put on the agenda, said she, too, objects to a hospital official speaking out on behalf of a candidate who she feels has created racial divisiveness and she urged the board not to condone that kind of thinking within the hospital administration.

Griffin said he feels the letter has "put the hospital in a no-win situation."

Hooper commented, "It's all very unfortunate. Our mission is not politics, but healing."

Further discussion was carried out in executive session, with the press not present. It was reportedly decided that "the board write a letter to Gov. Jim Hunt stating that the board was taken by surprise and is dismayed and deplors the unauthorized use of the title Executive Vice President of Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the letter by Fred T. Brown Jr., executive vice president, dated Oct. 30, 1984, and that said letter from the board be hand-delivered today to Gov. Jim Hunt's office and that the board chairman express the board's concern to the news media immediately after this meeting." In full board session, following the executive session, Dr. Jeffress Senter and Mrs. Norma VanVeld reportedly cast the only dissenting votes.

Dr. Senter and Mrs. Van Veld also voted against a motion that was approved that "upon Fred Brown's return, he meet with the chairman of the board, hospital president and personnel committee and that a report be made to the board at our meeting of Nov. 20 and that any other action be taken at that time to the executive committee."

Hooper said the meeting with Brown, which will be attended by hospital President Jack Richardson, and personnel committee members Gene Paramore, Arlee Griffin and Robert Hackney, is set for next Wednesday.

In a letter dated Nov. 2, copies of which were disseminated at Monday's meeting, Brown told Richardson, "I was contacted early last week by the Helms for Senate Committee. They asked if I would help with a letter of support for Senator Helms identifying issues in the health arena. I agreed to do this. You must understand I have been a supporter, both financially and with work, for Senator Helms for several years ... I received a draft of the letter about mid-week. I made several changes over the telephone. I did not authorize the use of my title and requested any reference to Pitt County Memorial Hospital be removed. I did send my signature for use on the letter, but did not include my title. Apparently because of the haste in which this letter was developed, there were some misunderstandings in its final draft. He also must know that I have yet to see a copy of the letter that went out."

"I am sorry for any concern that I have caused you and members of the Board of Trustees. It was my understanding that this letter was to go only to hospital administrators. I count most of the hospital administrators in this state as friends. I was doing this as a private citizen supporting a candidate that I believe in.

Brown, a Statesville native, came to PCMH from Greensboro, where he had been employed by Moses Cone Hospital. He began work here in early December of 1982.

under which areas outside Greenville would be served by a contractor. Once in the Greenville area, the rural service could link with the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) for transportation to specific sites.

Under the plan, a non-profit corporation, headed by a transportation board appointed by the Board of County Commissioners, would contract with a private carrier for transportation needs outside Greenville.

According to a timetable included in the study, the plan will be phased in over the next year, with the first contracted transportation of human service agency clients beginning about April 1985.

Citing the proposal as a "significant" change in the present transportation system, the study points out that the state's Division of Vocational Rehabilitation pays the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center 91 cents a mile for transporting its clients. "Even at this rate," ECVC "assumes that it loses money."

GREAT, the study said, "figures its costs at least 93 cents per passenger but collects only about half that in fares."

Conversely, according to the study, rates paid by county agencies to private carriers in other eastern North Carolina counties range from 57 1/2 cents to 69 cents a mile.

"It does appear that a central transportation system operated by a private carrier with linkages to a public urban system would be less expensive to operate than the situation which now exists," the study concludes.

Following the adoption of the plan, commissioners appointed nine persons to serve as the Pitt County Transportation board of directors, including: Dan le Roux of the ECVC; Tony Sanders of the Pitt County Mental Health Center; Dorlas Cayton of the Department of Social Services; Jeff McAllister of the Council on Aging; Jane Parker of the Farmville Child Development Center; Assistant County Manager John Bulow; Nancy Harrington of GREAT; Louise Folger of the Pitt County United Way, and Waje Johnson of the Pitt County schools.

Helen Bunch, a representative of the Department of Transportation, told commissioners that the plan is "one of the better plans" that have been submitted to the DOT. She also said that "because of the non-profit corporation" which will oversee the system participating "agencies will have an equal say-so" in its operation.

In other business, commissioners adopted a resolution asking that Louise Street, Gloria Street and a quarter-mile of Harell Street in Cherry Oaks Subdivision be added to the state highway system.

The board also approved a request by the DOT to amend the secondary road program by deleting the section of SR 1736, between SR 1735 and SR 1711 (the Worthington Road) for paving, because of right-of-way problems, and instead, pave the portion of 1736 between SR 1735 and SR 1725 (the County Home Road), for which the right-of-way has been secured.

Reagan, Mondale Return Home To Vote

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Americans were voting today after final campaign appeals in which President Reagan asked for renewal of his conservative mandate, saying "our work is not finished," while challenger Walter F. Mondale defined the election as a choice between "decency" and "self-interest."

Forecasts were that more than 90 million people would cast ballots, and opinion polls were unanimous in predicting that a solid majority would give the Republican president a second four-year term.

While experts talked about a turnout of 55 percent of the eligible voters, compared to 52.6 percent four years ago, the extent of participation won't be known until polls close from easternmost Maine to Hawaii and Alaska.

Their last speeches delivered, the presidential candidates returned Monday night to their homes — Reagan to his California ranch and Mondale to his house outside St. Paul, Minn. — to vote and then await the returns.

Vice President George Bush was in Houston and his Democratic rival, Geraldine Ferraro, was in New York City.

In addition to the presidential race, this election was determining 33 Senate seats, the entire makeup of the 435-member House, and 13 contests for governor.

One senator, J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was assured re-election when he won a non-partisan primary in September. In the House, 68 incumbents — 54 Democrats and 14 Republicans — had no major opposition.

In a 22-minute television commercial broadcast on the three major networks Monday night, Reagan said America had made an "amazing comeback." But, he added, "We still have much to do — to make our families more secure, to help many of you on our farms, in our inner cities, or working in older industries not yet back on their feet."

Mondale's closing appeal was in a five-minute commercial, broadcast 11 times on Monday, in which he said, "I'd rather be an underdog in a campaign about decency than to be ahead in a campaign only about self-interest."

Mondale campaign officials said it was the biggest commercial buy of the campaign but they refused to disclose the cost. The Reagan campaign said $750,000 was spent for the time to broadcast his commercial.

The contests for offices great and small, from the White House to county courthouses, cost about $1.8 billion, according to Herbert Alexander, a University of Southern California political science professor.

The Federal Election Commission put the tab for federal races at more than $1 billion.

Reagan spent his last campaign day in California. At the state Capitol where he served eight years as governor, Reagan said his top priority during a second term would be "peace, disarmament and the reduction of world nuclear weapons."

Mondale offered a sharply contrasting view. If Reagan gains a re-election landslide, Mondale told a Los Angeles rally, "they'll call it a historical mandate. Do you really want to give them a mandate to turn their backs on those who are suffering in America?"

In the closing days of his campaign, the Democratic challenger repeatedly described himself as "a full-employment Democrat" and "a people's Democrat."

Before a flag-waving, enthusiastic crowd in Mason City, Iowa, Mondale recalled that he gave his first campaign speech there after announcing his candidacy.

Mondale said he returned there on election eve because "I wanted America to know know where I'm coming from and where I'm going. ... I want to reflect our values here in the great Midwest."

In his closing commercial, the president said, "I ask for your vote for one purpose only — to complete the task we began together four years ago ... We must continue, not only into the next four years but into the next decade and beyond."

The president added, "Four years ago, inflation, taxes, interest rates and crime were all going up. Tonight they're coming down. Confidence, jobs, investment, growth, and achievement in our schools were all going down. Now, they're going up."

The Democrats went into the election with control of the House by a 266 to 167 margin, with two vacancies. The Republicans took control of the Senate in the Reagan landslide of 1980 and their majority stood at 55 to 45.

In the 13 states choosing governors, seven now are Republicans, six are Democrats. Nationwide, 35 of the governors are Democrats and 15 are Republicans.

finances. Only three people filed statements of vice-presidential intentions, indicating far fewer are interested in flying in Air Force 2.

Not every schoolchild knows that since the Republicans and Democrats first met in combat in 1856, about 1 billion votes have been cast for their candidates for president, about 500 million for each party, but the Republicans have won the White House 19 times to the Democrats' 13 times.

This year there was talk of Ronald Reagan sweeping to an unprecedented landslide. He will have to go some. He will have to beat Richard Nixon, who got the biggest popular vote — 47,165,234 — in 1972.

In electoral votes, he will have to beat George Washington, who was unopposed and got them all; James Monroe, who got all but one elector (that one didn't want to take the honor of unanimity away from Washington); and Franklin Roosevelt and Nixon, who rank third and fourth in electoral triumphs. Could Ronald Reagan face the Daughters of the American Revolution after taking a single jewel from Washington's crown?

According to statements filed with the Federal Election Commission, there have been 248 candidates for 33 U.S. Senate seats this year, 1,771 candidates for the 435 seats in the House, 78 candidates for 13 governorships up for grabs and uncounted thousands of peoples contesting for other offices on state, county and local levels.

Issues ranged from Armageddon to bingo, from nuclear disarmament, the national deficit, the place of religion in politics and the role of government in abortions to questions of women's rights in Maine, nuclear waste in South Dakota, gambling rights in California, Oregon, Missouri and West Virginia and, in Montana, Initiative 87, which is called the Freedom of Choice in Denture Services Act and asks an aroused citizenry to stand up and be counted on the question of whether non-dentists should be allowed to sell false teeth.

Running for elective office in this country is not only expensive; it is long, hard work, a drain on energy and psyche. It usually requires strong motivation. People run for a variety of reasons, to improve their world or their town, to satisfy their ego or their wallets.

Across the land, they came to the campaigns this year with a wide range of experience, from that of an incumbent president and a former vice president to an 18-year-old student running for probate judge in New Mexico; two inmates in Tennessee running for the U.S. Senate and the Statehouse; a former monk running for the state Senate in New York; a convicted murderer running for the state board of education in Hawaii and, in Rusk County, Wis., running for sheriff, a lady bartender known to her constituents as Jump River Rose.

Across the land, candidates varied widely in style and themes. Ronald Reagan purred into the cameras that America was "back standing tall." Walter Mondale jabbed a finger in behalf of "new leadership."

And elsewhere in the nation that Abe Lincoln said was the last best hope of man, Herbert Shaw, running for Congress in New Jersey, appeared on the ballot as the candidate for the "Politicians Are Crooks Party."

In his race for Congress in California, Robert Dornan found it in his heart to refer to the incumbent, Jerry Patterson, as a "sneaky little dirtbag." (In fairness, Patterson had called Dornan "a right-wing extremist.")

In the same state, David Shell, running for the state assembly with brochures saying he had "served with distinction in Vietnam," was obliged to admit the statement was somewhat flawed; the Air Force had court-martialed him for drug use and given him a year at hard labor.

And in North Dakota, tempers ran high in the race for state treasurer. John Lesmeister charged that his opponent, Robert Hanson, "would step on his grandmother to win this election." The accused lashed back with a news conference in which he produced, from half-way across the state, his 84-year-old grandmother, who said, heavens to Betsy, her Bob would do no such thing.

And the curtain falls on another election, the ultimate self-expression of a system that Winston Churchill said was the "worst form of government except for all those other forms that have been tried."

Reagan Worker Shot By Gunman

BOSTON (AP) — A campaign worker for President Reagan suffered wounds from stone fragments that ricocheted when a man fired two shots from a taxi and screamed "Reagan's next" before fleeing, police and witnesses said.

The shooting occurred after "a confrontation between Mondale and Reagan supporters" near the Reagan-Bush headquarters in Boston on Monday night, said Peter Woloschuk, a police spokesman.

The campaign worker, Gary Vailani, 19, of Hull, sustained minor injuries when he was struck by stone fragments from a building, Woloschuk said.

According to the police report, groups of Mondale and Reagan supporters passing out campaign literature traded shouts Monday night at a subway station on the Boston Common when a cab pulled up and a man in white jumped out.

Engineer Develops Building Design To Stand Quakes

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marc S. Caspe has a dream: He wants to design a building that could withstand a devastating earthquake.

Caspe, a structural engineer, says he has developed a design, using clusters of stainless steel ball bearings, that would allow a structure to "roll with the punch" of a tremor.

Conventional buildings bury their columns in a foundation to provide support. But Caspe, a structural engineer, said his system of ball bearings, which would be sandwiched between steel beams, would be better.

He describes his design as an earthquake barrier concept that limits "the force that the ground can physically put into the building at the underside as it tries to pull the rug out from under the building."

"The ball bearings simply will not permit forces to go through them because they just simply roll," he said.

With the building separated from the foundation by ball bearings, steel control beams are attached to prevent the building from rolling away with a gust of wind or the rattle of an earthquake.

The force of an earthquake is absorbed in the control beams, which are designed to stretch while keeping the structure in place, Caspe said.

"The control beam has a major advantage over the columns, beams and girders of a conventional building because it does not support the weight of the building," he said. "The security of the building is not dependent on the control beams in terms of carrying the vertical weight of the building."

"The building does not experience any of this distortion that would otherwise cause damage to it," Caspe said. "All of the distortion is limited to these control beams that are not a part of the weight supporting members."

An added benefit of the concept is its cost. Caspe said it is cheaper to construct a building using his design than to rely on conventional methods that require heavy, reinforced superstructures.

Caspe, 47, and his employees at M.S. Caspe Co. of San Mateo have worked for three years on the earthquake barrier design. At the same time, a Japanese company, Taisei Corp., developed a similar concept using roller bearings and control beams, he said.

The two companies are comparing notes and exchanging test results, Caspe said.

Because his concept is so new, it hasn't been put to practical use. But Taisei Corp. built an airport control tower after conducting model tests on a shaking table — a device that simulates earthquake conditions.

Caspe's colleagues in San Francisco, Stanford University and the University of California at Berkeley said they've heard of the new design, but haven't had a chance to study it.

A competitor, however, criticized Caspe's claims and said the design should be tested further before being applied to a high-rise building.

"I have some very serious technical reservations as to whether the control beams will dissipate the amount of energy they're asked to and whether the ball bearings will last as long as they're supposed to," said Ronald L. Mayes, president of Dynamic Isolation Systems Inc. of Berkeley.

"It hasn't been tested at this point and I think there are a lot of systems around that sound good from a conceptual point of view...."

Caspe said his design is ideal for office buildings, bridges or any other structures that might be damaged in a major earthquake.

"During an earthquake, the ride, if you will, that people will get in the building will be a much smoother ride," Caspe said. "It will be a ride that will be a back-and-forth motion measured in seconds."

"A second in this direction, and then perhaps two seconds in another direction, versus the sharp vibrations that would otherwise damage the building and cause contents of the building to be damaged. During a major earthquake the occupants of the building would have a very gentle ride," he said.

Phony Pills Are Traced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Counterfeit birth control pills have been traced to a second supplier in New York, but a nationwide withdrawal of Searle's Ovulen-21 contraceptive is continuing, the Food and Drug Administration says.

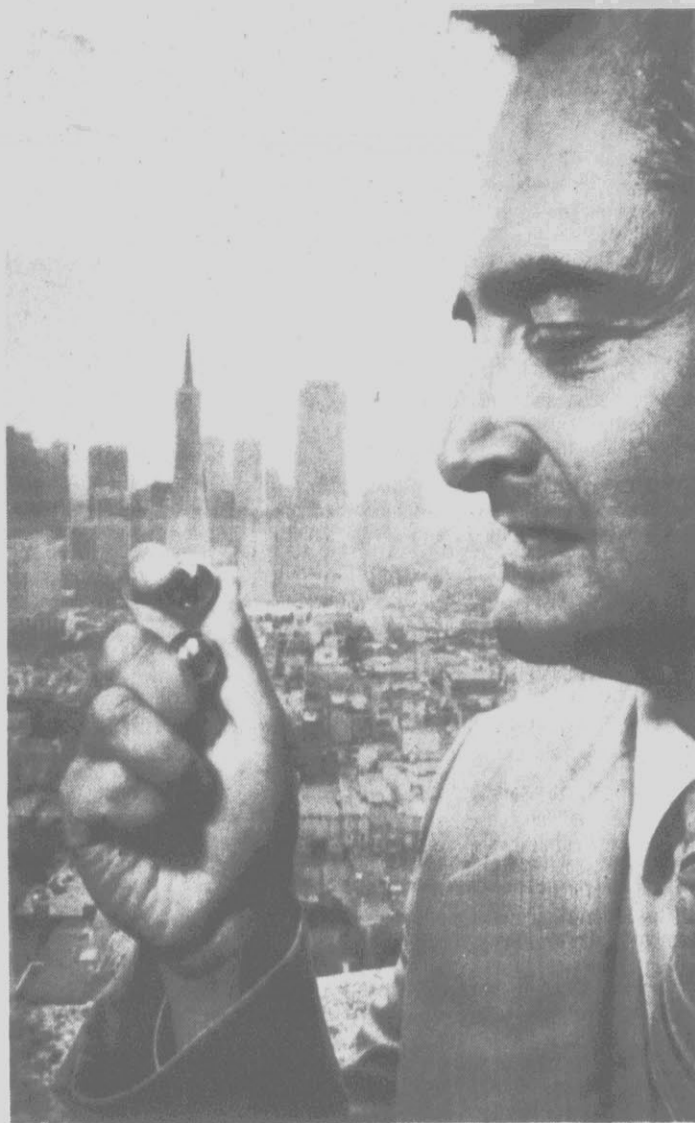

Withdrawal of all Ovulen-21 birth control pills was begun last week by G.D. Searle and Co. of Skokie, Ill., after it was learned that a less-than-potent and possibly ineffective version of the product was being sold. More than one million counterfeit pills were known to be in circulation.

FDA spokesman Bill Grigg said investigators have traced some of the counterfeit pills to Interstate Cigar Co. of Westbury, N.Y. He said the company had been distributing fake pills with the code number 489 on the foil pack after the expiration date. Grigg said that 10,000 to 12,000 units of 21 tablets each had been distributed by this company.

Earlier, the FDA said that Interstate Drug Exchange Inc. of Plainview, N.Y., was found to have sold counterfeit pills from lots with the code number 441 on the blister pack. The two companies don't appear to be connected, Grigg said.

Searle is withdrawing only Ovulen-21 packs with the code numbers 441 and 489.

Women with tablets from the two Ovulen lots are to contact their pharmacists, to whom the company is providing information enabling them to determine whether the pills are counterfeit.

ROLLING — With the unstable city of San Francisco shown behind him, engineer Marc S. Caspe displays two of the stainless steel ball bearings that are an integral part of his design to make buildings earthquake-proof. He says the design allows a building "to roll with the punch." (AP Laserphoto)

FDA Says TV Spot Endangers Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private group's television spot could endanger children by getting their parents to ignore possible links between use of aspirin in children with viral illnesses and the potentially fatal Reye's Syndrome, the government warns.

The Food and Drug Administration on Monday denounced the television advertisement, circulated by the Committee on the Care of Children, a group once financed by the aspirin industry.

The group, which includes pediatricians among its members, was formed to counter the educational campaign run by the government since 1982 that tells parents to consult a doctor before giving aspirin to children with symptoms of viral illnesses such as chicken pox and influenza.

Health experts have noted an association between the use of aspirin for children with chicken pox and flu and the development of Reye's Syndrome, although no direct link has been established.

There have been 154 reported cases of the disease between Dec. 1, 1983, and Aug. 3 of this year, including 34 deaths. Its symptoms are persistent vomiting, sleepiness and lethargy, violent headaches and unusual behavior, disorientation, combativeness and delirium.

The committee's public service announcement says there is no proof that any medication causes Reye's Syndrome.

"By not having a reference to a possible association between aspirin's use in chicken pox and flu and Reye's Syndrome, the committee has produced a spot that is educationally ineffective as well as incomplete and misleading," said FDA spokesman Bill Grigg.

The FDA is launching its own ad campaign Thursday with a TV spot that acknowledges data linking aspirin with Reye's Syndrome are inconclusive and in dispute, but notes that some experts believe it advisable to avoid using aspirin in vulnerable children until more is known.

After meeting with FDA officials to discuss the advertising campaigns, Neil Chayet, a Boston attorney who is spokesman for the committee, criticized the agency's efforts.

"We think that they continue to be misleading and dangerous to people," he said.

Dr. Robert Hoekelman, head of the University of Rochester's pediatrics department and a member of the committee, said he did not think its TV spot is misleading. But he said he advises against giving aspirin to children who may be susceptible to viral illnesses.

The committee's ads were brought to the FDA's attention by Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen's Health Research Group. That organization, founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, has prodded the agency to revive a 1982 plan for requiring warning notices on aspirin packages highlighting the possible association with Reye's Syndrome.

The federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta is evaluating data from about 300 case studies in an attempt to clarify the relationship between the viral illnesses and aspirin. A more extensive study, which probably will take two to three years to complete, is planned.

Shuttle Countdown Goes Smoothly But Sister May Be Late

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Discovery's countdown ticked smoothly toward Wednesday's liftoff, but thousands of loose thermal tiles threaten to delay for several weeks the December flight of sister ship Challenger, space officials said.

Discovery will thunder skyward on its second flight at 8:22 a.m. EST Wednesday with a crew of four men and a woman for a busy eight days in space, where they will release two communications satellites and try to recover two others from useless orbits.

Commanding the mission is veteran shuttle pilot Rick Hauck. Other crew members are pilot David Walker and mission specialists Anna Fisher, Joe Allen and Dale Gardner.

On the second and third days, the astronauts will release commercial communications satellites owned by Telesat of Canada and Hughes Communications Services Inc.

That will clear the cargo bay for the rescue attempts of the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 satellites on the fifth and seventh days. These communications satellites were successfully released by a shuttle crew last February, but they fired into the wrong orbits when booster rockets failed.

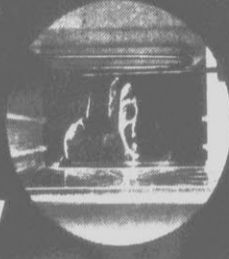

There was bad news for Challenger on Monday when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced that 2,800 of its 31,000 heat-resistant tiles will have to be removed because a compound beneath them has softened, loosening their grip on the metal surface. One of the tiles fell off during Challenger's last mission, which ended Oct. 13, and investigation showed the compound was beginning to soften in other areas.

NASA said the softening may have been caused by a substance used to waterproof the tiles, by the cumulative heating effect of six flights, or a combination of the two. The agency said careful inspection of Discovery's tiles showed that ship does not have the same problem.

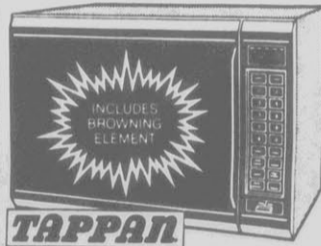

Challenger's next flight, the first Defense Department shuttle mission with a secret payload, had been set for Dec. 8, but officials said that could be delayed several weeks. The job of removing and replacing the tiles is very time-consuming.

On the Discovery mission, Allen and Gardner are to make the rescue efforts during a pair of six-hour-long space walks after Hauck and Walker have tracked down the targets and parked alongside, 35 feet away. The satellites are at 220 miles altitude, 690 miles apart.

Heavily Guarded Queen Opens Parliament

LONDON (AP) — Glittering pageantry mixed with tight security today as Queen Elizabeth II rode in a horse-drawn carriage from Buckingham Palace for the state opening of Parliament, accompanied by armed detectives disguised as royal footmen.

Despite drizzling rain, crowds lined the route of the procession, some standing above sewers scoured by bomb-sniffing police dogs overnight.

The security arrangements, believed to be the tightest ever for a royal occasion, were undertaken as the Irish Republican Army threatened more bomb attacks in Britain following its Oct. 12 attempt to blow up Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and most of her Cabinet at a Brighton hotel.

The 58-year-old queen, accompanied by her eldest son Prince Charles and daughter-in-law Princess Diana, smiled and waved from the gold-encrusted Irish State Coach drawn by four gray horses.

Footmen who walked beside the coach as it left the palace and saber-carrying cavalrymen in red and gold uniforms who rode beside it through the streets of central London were armed detectives, Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency reported.

Hundreds of uniformed London policemen, most armed only with a nightstick and a whistle, were assigned to the one-mile parade route. But Scotland Yard marksmen were posted on roofs along the route, army and anti-terrorist experts conducted an intensive search of buildings all the way into the Houses of Parliament, and armed detectives mingled with the crowds.

A band struck up the national anthem as the queen wearing a full-length sequined white gown and diamond crown arrived at the House of Lords.

The traditional search of Parliament's cellars, to commemorate the discovery of Guy Fawkes's gunpowder plot against King James I and his ministers there in 1605, was more than just a ritual this year.

Last month's IRA bomb killed four people and injured 32 at the Grand Hotel in Brighton, although Mrs. Thatcher escaped unharmed and none of her Cabinet ministers was killed.

The IRA, fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland, warned then: "Today we were unlucky. But remember, we have only to be lucky once — you will have to be lucky always. Give Ireland peace and there will be no war."

A masked IRA man told a meeting in Dublin Sunday that while British troops remain in Northern Ireland there will be bombs in mainland Britain.

From her throne in the House of Lords and wearing the state crown and robes of ermine, the queen was scheduled to read to the assembled peers and lawmakers of the Houses of Lords and Commons a brief speech outlining government legislation for the coming session. The speech is written for her by the Cabinet.

The government's program includes up to 20 bills. Among them is one to abolish the Greater London Council and six other big city municipal governments, all controlled by the socialist opposition Labor Party.

Laborites have vowed to challenge every detail of the proposal.

Commentators said Mrs. Thatcher's determination to cut government spending and sell off more state-owned enterprises like the National Bus Co. and gas and electric power utilities were likely to be mentioned in the queen's speech, along with a law giving parents the right to veto corporal punishment of their children at school.

Mrs. Thatcher was to expand on the program when she addresses the House of Commons later today.

U.S. Denounces Nicaragua Vote As 'Sandinista Farce'

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Daniel Ortega, chief of the leftist Sandinista junta and his party's presidential candidate, claimed victory in a national election that U.S. and opposition leaders denounced as a sham.

With a third of the ballots counted by early today, the returns gave Ortega 240,874 of 355,069 valid presidential ballots, or 67.8 percent of the vote. The remainder was split among five other parties.

"We take for a fact the victory of the FSLN in these elections," said Ortega, referring to the Sandinista National Liberation Front, which came to power in July 1979 after a military victory over the 42-year-old pro-U.S. Somoza dynasty.

In second place was the Independent Liberal Party, considered to be center-left, and the Democratic Conservative Party was third. The Independent Liberals decided two weeks ago to boycott the election, but the Electoral Council said it was too late to withdraw.

Final results are not expected until Thursday. Ortega and election officials said the tally would show a turnout of more than 80 percent of eligible voters.

In addition to a president, voters elected a vice president and 90 members of a new national assembly, all for six-year terms to start Jan. 10. The assembly is assigned to write a constitution within two years.

Ortega also claimed victory over the U.S.-backed rebels fighting his regime, saying they "have failed in military terms." He predicted President Reagan would win today's U.S. election, and then would have to decide whether to invade Nicaragua or negotiate with the Sandinistas.

"He'll have to take a decision rapidly," Ortega said.

As Ortega was claiming the military victory, the Interior Ministry announced that Communications Minister Enrique Schmidt had been killed while fighting a force of U.S.-backed rebels in northern Nicaragua.

A ministry communique said Schmidt, 39, served with a special forces unit fighting the rebels and was killed in the village of El Corozo, 63 miles northeast of Managua. No details were given.

The election was Nicaragua's first in 10 years, and Ortega claimed he had belied opposition criticism by staging a credible election, despite the refusal of four centrist parties in the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate to participate.

"We have won the election battle against abstentionism," said Ortega.

"... the big winner is the people, who have given their support to the FSLN and to the political pluralism that we defend, by voting for other political forces."

Mariano Fiallos, president of the Supreme Electoral Council, said early returns indicated a voter turnout of 82 percent.

Fiallos said 11 of the country's 3,892 polling places had to be closed because of attacks by anti-Sandinista rebels near the Honduran border.

Ortega said the Sandinistas had no immediate plans to reimpose restrictions on individual rights, in effect since the rebels first started fighting the regime two years ago, that were loosened for the elections.

Freedom of assembly was allowed for the campaign and the government said press censorship would only be applied for military reasons.

"We are going to make every possible effort to conserve this political space," Ortega said. He said further changes would depend on the intensity of opposition from the insurgents and the Reagan administration, whom he described as "the principal elements working against" freedom in Nicaragua.

In March 1982, the Sandinistas claimed a U.S. invasion was imminent and placed the country under a state of emergency.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Hughes called the voting "a lost opportunity for Nicaragua," saying the Nicaraguan people were not allowed to participate in "any real sense of the word."

"The Sandinista electoral farce, without any meaningful political opposition, leaves the situation essentially unchanged," Hughes said.

The Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, the main opposition coalition, boycotted the elections, claiming conditions for a free and open campaign were not granted by the government.

Arturo Jose Cruz, the coordinate's proposed presidential candidate, called the election a "farce" and "a referendum to consolidate the Sandinista front in power." Cruz was Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States before he broke with the Sandinistas in 1982.

The election was conducted smoothly, and even Sandinista critics acknowledged that the voting process appeared to be fair.

"The actual voting seems to be a fine, workable system," said one Western diplomat, speaking on condition he not be identified. "But the things leading up to the election, those are the sort of things that cast doubt."

Typhoon Hits Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Agnes, which slashed across the central Philippines, left at least 155 people dead, dozens missing and about 200,000 homeless, government reports said today.

The typhoon, packing winds up to 127 mph, struck Monday morning, blowing down houses, setting off landslides and floods and knocking out communications and power in the Visayas region, about 300 miles south of Manila.

Agnes was the second killer typhoon to hit the Philippines in six weeks. The deadliest typhoon on record to hit the Philippines, Ike, left more than 1,200 dead and about half a million people homeless in a destructive strike across the Visayas and the southern Mindanao island in early September.

RIOT AFTERMATH — Two Sikhs sit in a heavily damaged area of New Delhi today as they, with others, returned to the streets after a week of rioting following the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Hindus burned and looted Sikh-owned shops in retaliation for the death of Mrs. Gandhi. (AP Laserphoto)

Gandhi Offers Financial Relief To Sikhs After Riots

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi is promising financial relief to thousands of Sikhs victimized by the violent Hindu backlash that followed the assassination of his mother, Indira Gandhi.

Police, still under orders to shoot rioters on sight, conducted house-to-house searches today in New Delhi or loot stolen during the four-day wave of violence that followed the assassination last Wednesday. Some $600,000 in loot was found Monday.

Some residents dumped the loot in the street as police approached. At least 2,400 people have been arrested since the assassination of Mrs. Gandhi by two men identified as Sikh members of her security guard.

Five people were reported killed Monday, but the violence was ebbing and life was returning to normal after the massacres, arson and atrocities by Hindus, a majority in this nation of more than 730 million, against Sikhs, a religious minority whose adherents hold influential posts in the military and government.

Rajiv Gandhi, who immediately succeeded his mother as prime minister, extended the offer of compensation to the Sikhs in an effort to heal the wounds of the furious Hindu rampage.

Meeting with Sikh leaders Monday, Gandhi promised the government would pay $870 for each Sikh killed, the same amount for each destroyed home and half that much for damaged residences. Every injured person would be given $175, he announced.

Mexicans Block Cocaine Caravan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The attorney general's office has announced the seizure by police of 660 pounds of U.S.-bound pure cocaine which drug traffickers allegedly planned to smuggle across the Rio Grande on rubber rafts.

The office announced Monday that federal judicial police made the capture over the weekend, cordoning off the Anahuac-Nuevo Laredo road near the Texas border and taking over the smugglers' caravan. Eight were arrested, according to Felipe Flores, spokesman for the attorney general's office.

Flores, who said he did not know the exact time of the capture, reported that there were no shots fired and no injuries during the seizure.

According to a government communique, the men who were arrested said the cocaine shipment belonged to an Ecuadorian citizen living in Miami and a Panamanian living in San Antonio, Texas. Flores said their names had been passed on to Interpol in the United States.

The communique said the cocaine had been transported by a twin-engine plane from Medellin, Colombia, to a clandestine runway in Ciudad Guzman, about 330 miles west of Mexico City.

It reportedly arrived in 14 canvas bags containing 300 small packets and was later mixed with alfalfa. The cocaine was transported northward by truck, in a caravan that included a 1984 Ford Gran Victoria and a 1984 Chevrolet pickup with Texas license plates, and two Ford pickup trucks without plates.

The Ecuadorian and Panamanian, aided by Cesar Gerardo Villarreal Espinosa of Laredo, one of the eight men indicted in the smuggling operation, had planned to deliver the cocaine to the United States, using Mexico as a transit point, the communique said.

It said Villarreal Espinosa hired a Mexican to receive and transport the shipment to the border, where the cocaine was to be transported across the Rio Grande to the United States in rubber rafts.

Police stopped the alleged smugglers about nine miles southwest of Nuevo Laredo, which is across the border from Laredo, Texas.

Hunt Says Race Is Dead Even

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says his U.S. Senate race against Republican Sen. Jesse Helms is dead even as voters go to the polls today, but the Democrat said he has hoped to gain that position for more than a year.

"All along, we had hoped, knowing how much money we were going against, to go into Election Day even," Hunt said Monday as he began a series of news conferences in the Piedmont, where he anticipates a fierce fight for votes.

The Hunt-Helms contest, which spokesmen for both parties say is second in importance to the presidential race, broke national spending records when it passed the $21 million mark.

"To win the election, Hunt predicted he must carry the East, the mountains west of Asheville, major metropolitan counties and "get close in the rest of the Piedmont."

Acknowledging that President Reagan is leading Democratic challenger Walter Mondale in North Carolina, Hunt argued that the presidential race will not have a great impact on his campaign.

"I think the essential question ... is what's going to happen to the Congress," he said. "I believe the people of North Carolina really want to see some balance. I don't think they want to turn everything over to one side or the other."

Hunt told reporters in Charlotte that President Reagan's decision not to return to North Carolina to campaign before the election reflects the relationship between Helms and Reagan.

"Now that there's nothing else that Jesse Helms and the Congressional Club can do to him in terms of cutting off money ... I think it's very clear that Jesse Helms' race for the Senate is not a priority for President Reagan," he said. "I think the real truth is in his heart of hearts ... he would be delighted not to have to fool with Jesse Helms again."

Report Says Hunger Is Growing Worse

By The Associated Press
A "climate of meanness" has made hunger a substantial problem that is getting worse in North Carolina, with people who were once considered middle class now going hungry, a report by a national physicians' group says.

The climate was created by leaders more interested in nabbing welfare cheaters than feeding the undernourished, the 17-page report by the Harvard University-based Physician Task Force on Hunger in America concluded.

The climate includes threatening posters in food stamp offices, a federal campaign to sanction state errors and federal food stamp cutbacks, the report said.

In North Carolina, poverty increased 42 percent between 1981 and 1983 and the proportion of impoverished North Carolinians who received food stamps fell to 40 percent from 66.3 percent, the report showed.

"Just yesterday, an elderly woman who had been hungry for weeks finally came in to apply for (food) stamps," the report quoted a Buncombe County food stamp coordinator as telling task force members in June. "She was trembling as she filled out the forms."

"I asked her if she was all right. As it turned out, she was fearful she might make an error and be thrown in jail for fraud."

The 22-member task force issued its report five months after visiting the state. The task force, which includes C. Arden Miller, chairman of the maternal and child health department at the University of North Carolina School of Public Health, sent physicians and health experts across the state in June — to senior-citizen dinners, migrant camps and Indian day-care centers.

Riley Says No Law Violated By Hunt

RALEIGH (AP) — The Wake County district attorney has refused to prosecute a complaint brought against Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt by the state GOP chairman that accuses Hunt of violating criminal laws.

But Republican Party Chairman David T. Flaherty called the response of District Attorney J. Randolph Riley "garbage" and questioned why Riley issued his response on Monday, the eve of the election.

Riley said Monday he had notified Flaherty that he would not prosecute a complaint Flaherty had filed, accusing the governor of using the state-owned aircraft for political purposes in his U.S. Senate campaign against Republican incumbent Jesse Helms and repaying the state treasury at a rate below operational costs.

"Based on my review, I must conclude that there is no evidence of the governor's having violated any criminal law of this state by his use of state-owned aircraft," Riley said in a letter to Flaherty.

Riley said the aircraft are designed for the governor's use "in his sound discretion" The Legislature, he said, has enacted no guidelines to restrict the discretion.

"His is a political office," Riley, a Democrat, said in an interview on Monday. "Therefore, it's nonsense to divide his travel into political travel and official travel."

Flaherty said he hadn't received the notice from Riley but said he planned to pursue his complaint further. He declined to elaborate.

"That's garbage," Flaherty said of Riley's opinion. "Why did he send it out the day before the election? It's purely political."

Helms Ends Race With New Attack

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms planned to vote early and spend a quiet Election Day at home after ending his campaign for a third term with his sharpest attack yet on Democratic rival Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Somebody asked me ... whether I had any regrets about this campaign," Helms said Monday in Charlotte, halfway through a coast-to-mountains airplane trip. "I've decided that I've got one: that I never trusted Jim Hunt."

"This man is not to be trusted, and I hope he never has another day in public office after he finishes his term as governor."

With last-minute polls showing Helms ahead by a whisker, the New Right champion bitterly lashed out at Hunt in news conferences in Wilmington, Greenville, Raleigh, Greensboro, Charlotte and Asheville.

He spent the evening "with my grandchildren" in Raleigh, and an aide said he'd "do nothing" after voting until the polls close today, when he'll await returns with supporters at a local hotel.

Helms said Hunt was supported by homosexuals and "crooks," and derided a 30-second commercial Hunt aired on statewide television Sunday and Monday as "sick garbage."

Helms said the challenger had created an atmosphere of "hostility" that resulted in death threats against two black Helms supporters in Pitt County.

While stopping short of blaming Hunt for the threat, Helms said, "I think it indicates the hostility that the Hunt campaign has promoted in an effort to get an enormous bloc vote out tomorrow, which is the only hope the governor has in this race." He acknowledged that "bloc vote" meant the black vote.

He said in Raleigh he had "told the truth" throughout the campaign. "I'm the only candidate in this race who can say that," he added as about 25 supporters roared in agreement.

The Hunt commercial praises his record and platform while repeating allegations that Helms is a tool of right-wing extremists and the rich.

Flanked by two of his daughters and three of his grandchildren, Helms said the ad was "a last-minute, desperate attack."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened broadly higher today as the nation elected a new president.

The stock market wrote some history of its own by being open on the day of a presidential election for the first time since organized securities trading began in the United States nearly 200 years ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.75 to 1,233.99 in the opening half-hour after advancing more than 12 points Monday.

Gainers jumped out to a 2-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market's brisk runup this week was credited to a sharp decline in money-market interest rates, which some Wall Streeters said reflected an apparent easing of monetary policy by the Federal Reserve.

The central bank is seen making reserves more available to the banking system because it does not want the economy's slowing expansion to become so severe as to pose the threat of recession.

The Federal Reserve, the government securities market and many major banks were closed today because of the election, which was expected to limit turnover in the stock market.

On the NYSE's active list, Tribune Co. rose 1/4 to 33, American Telephone & Telegraph lost 1/8 to 18 1/2 and General Motors climbed 1/4 to 81.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrials rose 12.59 to 1,229.24.

Advances led declines nearly 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.63 to 97.14.

Big Board volume totaled 84.73 million shares, against 96.81 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 2.02 to 211.43.

Saudi Airliner Hijacked To Iran By 2 Passengers

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian security forces seized the hijackers of a Saudi Airlines jetliner commandeered to Tehran today and freed all the passengers and crew on board, the official Iranian news agency reported.

Officials at Saudi Arabia's civil aviation authority in Riyadh said passengers on the flight, which originated in London, helped overcome the hijackers. The two were identified as North Yemenis and one was said to have carried a gun.

The Saudi officials, who reported that there were 117 passengers and 14 crew members on the Tristar jet when it was diverted, said it was the first hijacking of a Saudi airliner.

The plane was hijacked shortly before it was scheduled to land early today in Riyadh, the Saudi capital. The hijackers were captured about 10 hours later.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said "disciplinary forces" deployed at the Tehran airport after the plane landed "with a swift action arrested the hijackers and released all the passengers and crew aboard."

IRNA said that the hijackers had thrown a piece of paper from the plane announcing their demands. The reported demands concerned Saudi Arabia's relations with North Yemen.

The Saudi officials said the hijackers boarded the plane at the Saudi port city of Jidda, the one stop between London and Riyadh. One of the hijackers entered the cockpit and forced the pilot at gunpoint to divert the aircraft to Tehran, the officials said.

They said the pilot complied and no one was hurt.

According to IRNA, the hijackers' note said Saudi Arabia should "leave the people of Yemen free in their own homeland, recall Saudi teachers from Yemen, that Saudi businessmen should pay half a million U.S. dollars to the hijackers and that the Islamic republic of Iran guarantee meeting their demands and grant them political asylum," IRNA reported.

In view of the hijackers' demands, "it is assumed they are of Yemeni nationality," the news agency said.

The Saudi Arabian-based sources gave a different account of the hijackers' demands, saying they wanted $5000 cash, improved treatment of North Yemenis in Saudi Arabia, deportation of unidentified teachers working in North Yemen and a half million dollars in development aid to the North Yemeni government.

The sources said the officials in Riyadh were in contact with the Tehran authorities to have plane and passengers returned to Saudi Arabia. They said the plane was expected later today.

Earlier, IRNA reported a statement by Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi condemning any form of hijacking and explaining that the Saudi jet was only allowed to land at Tehran because it was running out of fuel.

Baby Fae Parents Considering Offers

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — The parents of Baby Fae, the child who received a transplanted baboon heart, are considering financial offers from news organizations and publications to tell their story, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The unidentified parents decided to accept the bids after organizations from around the world expressed an interest in buying their story, said Joyce McClintock, a spokeswoman for Loma Linda University Medical Center.

"People were asking if they could do this, so the mother was consulted with and then we agreed to take them (bids) from people," Ms. McClintock said Monday.

She said it was the parents' decision, not the hospital's, to accept financial offers, although she said hospital officials would forward the bids to the parents.

The parents have rejected requests for interviews since the infant's operation on Oct. 26.

The hospital reported earlier that the National Enquirer offered $10,000 to anyone who revealed the identity of the parents and the baby, but Enquirer Editor Iain Calder denied the claim.

Meanwhile, nurses attending the infant at the Seventh-day Adventist institution 60 miles east of Los Angeles reported the tiny patient was "sucking strongly, crying lustily and cute as a button," said spokeswoman Jayne McGill.

The 25-day-old infant showed no signs of rejecting the baboon heart and continued to receive fluids intravenously while also taking formula from a bottle, Ms. McGill said.

Baby Fae was still receiving cyclosporine-A, which suppresses the body's immune system, to prevent rejection of her new heart.

Ms. McGill said doctors had no immediate comment on Baby Fae passing into the 11th day with her new heart without signs of rejection.

Hardee said that precinct officials have called in to say how "fantastic" the tabulators are. Officials reported that for the most part everything is going smoothly, however, some problems arose early this morning because voters were using their own pens instead of the specially constructed pens being handed out by election officials. Late voters were urged to use only pens provided at their precincts and to place marks beside unopposed candidates.

Ray Spears, a spokesman at Greenville Precinct No. 5 at Elm Street Park, indicated chances are good that the vote in that precinct will likely be a record one. "At 10 this morning, a total of 634 had already voted," Spears said, "which is something like only 200 less than the total day-long vote of the last election."

Spears also noted that "lines have been long since 6:30 this morning, and unfortunately, we have a machine that is jammed at this time. I hope it can be operative again soon."

In Ayden, Veronica Perkins, reporting on voting at Ayden Precinct No. 1 at the Ayden Community Building, said "623 voted as of 10:35 this morning. This is much, much more than the normal turnout by this time of day in the past. We've had people standing in line since 6:30 and voters have been real patient about the lines. They are good natured about waiting."

At mid-morning, Ms. Perkins reported that there had "been no problems with the voting machines. They're working well," she said.

As of 10 a.m., the Chicod precinct had processed 327 voters; Falkland, 167; Farmville, 544; Fountain, 150; Simpson, 362; Swift Creek, 127; Winterville, 785; Greenville 6, 300; Greenville 7, 644; and Grifton, 460.

Meanwhile, the Hunt campaign released a statement from U.S. Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., expressing concern that activities to fight voter fraud not intrude on voting rights.

Republicans have promised to put observers in each polling place and U.S. attorneys in North Carolina have promised to watch for voter fraud.

Edmisten said the gubernatorial race hinged on which candidate represents all voters and he said Martin failed that test.

"Jim Martin spent 12 years voting for the very rich, for the oil companies, for big utilities and for the chemical industry," Edmisten said at a Raleigh-Durham Airport news conference.

Edmisten dismissed polls showing Martin with a slight lead, saying President Reagan's coattails would not be long enough to sweep the Republican into the governor's office.

Martin, at a news conference at Raleigh-Durham Airport, said a letter signed by present and past presidents of the North Carolina Association of Educators contained five false statements and two half-tr

Washington #1 For Fourth Straight Time; Texas Slips

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Washington Huskies have become the first college football team this season to be ranked No. 1 in four successive weeks but Texas, which had been second, slipped to third place behind Nebraska.

Washington received 50 of 58 first-place votes and 1,147 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in this week's Associated Press poll following a 44-14 rout of California. The Huskies meet Southern Cal this week in a showdown for the Rose Bowl.

However, Texas needed a field goal in the final seconds to edge Texas Tech 13-10 and the Longhorns, who trailed Washington 1,184-1,121 last week with 60 voters participating, received one first-place vote and 1,032 points this time. Meanwhile, Nebraska crushed Iowa State 44-0 and climbed from third to second with four first-place votes and 1,062 points.

The next five teams — Brigham Young, South Carolina, Miami, Oklahoma State and Georgia — remained the same as last week. BYU trounced Texas-El Paso 42-9 and received the remaining three first-place votes and 1,008 points. South Carolina shaded North Carolina State 35-28 and received 921 points, Miami downed Louisville 38-23 and received 832 points, Oklahoma State trimmed Kansas State 34-6 and received 781 points and Georgia turned back Memphis State and received 719 points.

Oklahoma rebounded from its only loss and crushed Missouri 49-7, moving up from 10th to ninth with 686 points while Boston College dropped from ninth to 16th after losing to Penn State 37-30. Florida, a 24-3 winner over Auburn, jumped from 13th to 10th with 665 points.

The Second Ten consists of Florida State, LSU, Ohio State, Southern Cal, Texas Christian, Boston College, Southern Methodist, Iowa, West Virginia and Auburn, which was No. 1 in the preseason poll.

Last week, it was Auburn, West Virginia, Florida, Florida State, LSU, Ohio State, Iowa, Southern Cal, SMU and TCU.

There are no new teams in this week's Top Twenty.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A little sleight of hand and a successful gamble by quarterback Joe Theismann has the Washington Redskins sitting in the pack at the top of the stairs in the National Conference's Eastern Division.

The Redskins downed Atlanta 27-14 in a National Football League game Monday night to join Dallas, St. Louis and the New York Giants atop the division, each with 6-4 marks.

The Redskins were nursing a 7-0 lead midway through the second quarter when Theismann engineered a drive from the Redskin 30-yard line to the Atlanta one.

Atlanta twice stopped John Riggins for no gain, but Redskin Coach Joe Gibbs elected to try again on fourth down.

"I called a power play for John off tackle," said Gibbs.

But Theismann, who completed 19 of 25 passes for 170 yards and a touchdown, had other ideas.

"On second down, I saw the offenses safety come up really quick so I decided to take a chance," said Theismann, who fooled not only the Falcons but his own teammates when he faked the handoff and bootlegged around the left side of the Atlanta line.

"Fourteen years gives you seniority to call plays. Only a quarterback can call a play like that. You have to have a feeling," said Theismann.

Had the play failed, Theismann added, he "would have been booted and would have been here explaining to you why."

Gibbs, though surprised, said the play was fine with him. "It's all right as long as he makes it."

Atlanta's fourth straight loss dropped the Falcons to 3-7 and into the cellar in the NFC West.

"I think the players came to play but we had some injuries that further put us in a bind," said Coach Dan Henning.

The Falcons, who lost starters William Andrews and Billy "White Shoes" Johnson earlier this season, had quarterback Steve Bartkowski leave the game in the first half with a sprained knee.

Bartkowski's replacement, Mike Moroski, completed eight of 15 passes for 99 yards and was intercepted once.

The Falcons proved more effective on the ground where Gerald Riggs rushed for 134 yards on 27 carries. Riggs rushed for 100 yards, the fourth time he has reached the century mark this year.

In the winning dressing room, the talk turned to the continuing battle for first place in the division.

"We are still beat up and in the process of getting better," said Theismann. "We are now able to control our own destiny."

"I said two games ago I thought we were starting all over in the race," noted Gibbs. "But here we are two weeks later and we're starting all over again. It's going to be big every week, but this one was especially critical."

The logjam at the top figures to lose at least one member next week when Dallas and the Cardinals meet in St. Louis. The Giants travel to Tampa Bay while the Redskins are home against Detroit.

Pauling In Pick Victory

Tom Pauling of 2101 E. Fifth St., Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Pauling correctly picked the winners in 27 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's contest pages.

Second place went to Greg Oliver of 814 E. Mumford Rd., Greenville, who had 26 right. Oliver's win came on the basis of his point total guess. His guess of 80 was closest to the actual total of 67 scored in Penn State's 37-30 win over Boston College.

Six other entrants also had 26 games correctly picked, but were further off in their point total guesses.

The final contest for the 1984 season appears on the following pages.

ECU, UNCW Play To Tie

The East Carolina men's soccer team played to a 1-1 tie with UNC-Wilmington in a double-overtime match Monday.

The Pirates scored first when Brian Colgan took a pass from David Spenski and scored at the 34 minute mark of the first period. The game remained 1-0 until Paul Brown fired a penalty shot into the Pirate goal with 15 seconds remaining in the game.

The teams played two scoreless overtime periods for the knot.

ECU outshot the visiting UNC-W team 23-18, and Pirate goalie Jesse Daugherty had 10 saves.

The Pirates finished the fall season 2-15-1.

Huskies Hold To Computer Lead

The Washington Huskies, tops in both the Associated Press and United Press International polls, remains number one on the Daily Reflector's Computer Rankings this week.

The Huskies rose to the top on the computer two weeks ago and have held their ranking since then.

The 9-0 Huskies finished the week — the tenth of the college season — with a total of 386 points through the computer system. Points are awarded for each victory, each win by a victim, and each win by a victim in the third rank.

Miami, Fla., is ranked second this week. The Hurricanes, 8-2, have collected 358 points.

Close behind are Texas (6-0-1) and Brigham Young (9-0), both with 356 points. Fullerton State, 10-0, is just a step behind at 354.

The second ten includes Penn State, Louisiana State, Georgia, West Virginia and Ohio State.

A total of 13 teams which appear in either the AP or UPI polls are listed in the computer rankings which measure success against strength of schedule.

The rankings are programed and operated by Barry Adams.

This week's rankings:

1. Washington (9-0)	386

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Phoenix Shocks NBA

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns are the talk of the National Basketball Association with a stunning 5-0 start, which is a shock to everybody but themselves.

"None of this is surprising to me," said forward Larry Nance. "We worked so hard in training camp and it is just carrying over. A lot of leaders were created in camp."

They were needed.

Veteran forward Maurice Lucas, the club's leading rebounder last year, missed all of preseason as a free agent, waiting for a new contract offer.

Backup center Rick Robey played sparingly due to persistent soreness in his right heel, a carryover from offseason surgery to remove bone spurs.

Then, on Oct. 9 in the second game of the exhibition schedule, all-star guard Walter Davis tore three ligaments in his left knee. Davis, the team's leading scorer last season, is expected to be sidelined until mid-December.

At full strength at the start of last year, Phoenix went 4-4 in preseason and then opened the season with 13 losses in the first 18 games — the franchise's worst start ever.

This year, the Suns were 3-4 in exhibition play and many predicted a worse fate once the real games began.

So what happened?

Seven-foot center James Edwards scored 30 points to pace a 122-114 win at Golden State in the Oct. 26 season-opener and poured in 20 two nights later in a 102-87 win at Seattle.

Rookie guards Michael Holton and Jay Humphries, picking up the slack when Kyle Macy missed his first pro game in five years with a foot injury, combined for 26 points in a 99-96 win here Oct. 30 over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Nance then scored a career-high 44 points in a 139-130 triple-overtime victory over Portland last Thursday night here. And, after veteran center-forward Alvan Adams' 18-point performance sparked a 105-93 win in Dallas, the Suns find themselves at 5-0 — the best start in their 17-year NBA history.

"This is not by accident," said Coach John MacLeod. "We have great chemistry and this is the hardest club we've ever had. This ballclub gives us a 100 percent effort every night and it's been very interesting watching this team grow."

"In training camp, we worked this group harder than any other and they responded. These guys are hungry. They're playing like they have something to prove. And we're playing basketball the way it should be played — unselfishly."

The often fair-weather Phoenix fans have noticed. The largest crowd ever for a home opener, 13,665, showed up at Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum on Oct. 30 while the Portland game was a sellout at 14,666.

"They have all gotten their money's worth and more so far," said MacLeod, who is in his 12th season here. "We're a lot more active and effective this year. We're pushing the ball up the court and down the other team's throats. Last year, we were like turtles advancing the ball to midcourt and our offense was all over the place."

Lucas came to contract terms early Sunday and is expected to be back in uniform for Thursday night's game here against Cleveland. But, there is talk now that Phoenix may trade him to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Clippers Take Up The Slack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With injury-prone center Bill Walton on the bench with his latest ailment, the rest of the Los Angeles Clippers took it upon themselves to pick up the slack.

Norm Nixon pitched in 21 points and Marques Johnson, James Donaldson and Derek Smith each added 19 as the Clippers held off the sharp-shooting Denver Nuggets 107-104 in National Basketball Association action Monday night.

In the only other NBA game, the injury-riddled Detroit Pistons downed the winless Cleveland Cavaliers 107-98 at Springfield, Ohio.

The Clippers needed a little extra from some key players to make up for the absence of Walton, sidelined with tendinitis in his left foot.

"Without Walton, we all tried different things tonight and everything worked out," said guard Junior Bridgeman, who chipped in 16 points.

Donaldson grabbed a game-high 19 rebounds, including 12 off the defensive boards. With the Nuggets coming on in the final quarter, Johnson picked things up for the Clippers with 10 points.

"I really tried hard in the fourth quarter, hoping to be a catalyst," said Johnson. "I wanted to make things happen."

The Clippers led by nine points with 48 seconds left, but 3-point goals by Alex English and Lafayette Lever brought the Nuggets within 105-101.

Nixon sank two free throws with 11 seconds left to put the game away, although Lever hit another 3-pointer with five seconds left to cut the lead to three.

English finished with 33 points, 10 in the third quarter, and Calvin Natt and Lever each had 19.

Pistons 107, Cavaliers 98

Detroit kept Cleveland winless as Isiah Thomas, Terry Tyler and Bill Laimbeer sparked in the absence of injured starters Dan Roundfield and Kelly Tripucka.

Thomas had 33 points, Tyler 25 and Laimbeer 20 points and 22 rebounds for the Pistons, who led 81-69 after three quarters.

The Cavaliers cut the deficit to 85-82 with 8:06 and trailed only 97-93 with 2:40 to go. But a three-point play by Laimbeer, a layup by Kent Benson and a jumper by Thomas made it 104-93.

Johnny Davis led Cleveland with 21 points.

Sugar Bowl Faces Puzzle With Four-Way SEC Race

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Executive Director Mickey Holmes, studying the Sugar Bowl scenario aloud Monday, called it "a conundrum."

That's Websterese for "any puzzling question or problem."

Holmes said Georgia, LSU, Florida and Auburn still could emerge as the Southeastern Conference champion, normally the Sugar Bowl host.

"If Georgia loses to Florida and then Florida goes on and beats Kentucky, and if LSU beats Alabama and Mississippi State, and we have a tie with LSU and Florida, who would the Sugar Bowl pick?"

"Well, obviously in a tie situation, we have our pick. It's at our option."

"How we would approach it, I don't know. We haven't even begun to talk about it."

The conference representative will settle itself, eventually. The problem is trying to pick an opponent, he said.

For instance, Georgia might be eager to play South Carolina again to avenge a 10-17 defeat. But unbeaten South Carolina — while probably willing to play any of the other contenders — might not want a matchup with a team it already conquered.

"If it's Florida or Auburn, that tempers how we look at Florida and Florida State," Holmes said. Auburn beat Florida State and lost to Florida. Florida closes out its season at Florida State.

"If it's LSU, that tempers how we look at the West Coast," Holmes said.

"Memories are long, and people remember what LSU, with a less than a year ago did to Washington."

LSU pounded Washington, then undefeated, 40-14. That colors the way local supporters of the bowl would regard the runnerup in the Pac-10, he said.

A member of the New Orleans Quarterback Club asked Holmes how Florida's status with the NCAA and the SEC affects the selection procedure.

Florida could appeal the NCAA sanctions and at least postpone its punishment. The SEC had not yet announced whether it would impose its own sanctions on Florida for getting caught violating recruiting rules.

"We are continuing to operate on the premise that Florida is very much in the championship picture," Holmes said.

Seminoles, Gamecocks Set For Battle

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — This may be the week No. 14 Florida State gets its offense and defense working in sync, and the No. 5 Gamecocks must be ready, according to South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison.

Morrison, whose team plays host Saturday to Florida State, said Monday he sees plenty to worry about when preparing for the Seminoles.

"I think you have to look at their offense and their ability to put points on the board. And they can play great defense. Look at the Miami (Fla.) game where they held them to three points."

The Seminole, who hold a 6-1-1 record, feature one of the nation's leading rushers — Greg Allen who averages 121 yards per game.

But, says Florida State assistant head coach Art Baker, "We've had only one game this year where we've felt the offense and defense really played well in the same ballgame. It's been sort of ironic.

"One week the offense will play exceptionally well and the defense not so well. And the next week, vice versa. So we're hopeful that before the season is over, and maybe this week, we can put those together again."

Morrison, whose Gamecocks are undefeated in eight games, isn't inclined to wish the Seminole success.

"Maybe they haven't reached the point where they've put it all together," he said. "Hopefully they won't find that solution for another week or two."

South Carolina, meanwhile, lost its star running back — Kent Hagood — when his leg was broken at North Carolina State last Saturday but should lose very little by going to reserve Quinton Lewis.

Lewis, a 200-pound senior, is the Gamecocks' second-leading rusher with 371 total yards and an average of 6.7 yards per carry, the same average Hagood had.

On the other side of the multiple-option Veer backfield will be Thomas Dendy, who picked up 106 yards and two touchdowns as South Carolina battled back to win 35-28 Saturday over the Wolfpack.

In addition to those threats, the Gamecocks have Mike Hold, a backup quarterback with a penchant for coming off the bench to win games. Last weekend, Hold passed for 198 yards and ran for 38 more.

Hold, who plays a supporting role to starter Allen Mitchell, has a tendency to break games open with his passing, a factor that appears to concern Florida State.

"We've had problems through the year in our (defensive) secondary," said Baker. "We've been banged up there.

"Of course the pass has been the culprit against our secondary. Last week we gave up a lot of yards (against Arizona State) and a lot of points. I know that's a concern to our defensive coaches."

Interestingly, Baker says he is proud of the Gamecocks, being a South Carolina native who once lived in Columbia.

"I'll tell you what, they're a heck of a football team and certainly deserve any national ranking in the top five... Joe Morrison and his staff have simply done a terrific job.

"Their players play with as much emotion and they're about as well disciplined in their assignments and their execution as any football team we've seen this year."

Morrison, meanwhile, said it is critical that South Carolina's defensive team improve its tackling, an area he said was deficient last Saturday.

"That's certainly something we're going to have to correct before we run into Greg Allen and Florida State because they're a fine football team, offensively and defensively."

In addition, Morrison said he and his coaching staff were hoping to avoid having punts blocked.

"They blocked nine punts so far this year and we had one blocked down there last year (with South Carolina lost 45-30)," he said. "I don't know if that was the turning point in the ballgame...but it was pretty doggone close to it."

"All in all, we're probably going to have to play as well as we possibly can," Morrison added. "The offense, the defense and our special teams are going to have to have an exceptional week."

McKay Stepping Down After Disappointments

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The past two National Football League seasons have spawned a continuous string of coaching nightmares that Tampa Bay's John McKay would just as soon forget.

Beginning in December, he'll try.

The 61-year-old coach announced Monday that he'll step down from the Buccaneers' helm at the end of 1984 campaign, giving way to a younger man he'd like to help by procuring the talent needed to transform the struggling team into a winner.

"It's a decision I didn't want to make... But let's face it. We're not getting the job done." The only field boss in the nine-year history of the franchise told a news conference at the Bucs' training complex. "Maybe getting some young blood in here will help."

The search for a successor will not begin until the end of the season, said team owner Hugh Culverhouse.

McKay, whose NFL record in eight-plus seasons is 41-85-1, cited the club's 3-7 start this year as well as health reasons when submitting his resignation to Culverhouse.

The former University of Southern California mentor underwent cataract surgery on his right eye Sept. 19 and said he will have a similar operation on his left eye at the end of the season.

"I think I made the right decision for myself and the football team," said McKay, who'll become team president after the Bucs' season finale.

Culverhouse, saying he felt the team has played much better than its record indicates, told reporters he accepted the resignation with regret and only after he was convinced McKay was determined to quit.

He added that he felt the Bucs were only "one play away" from winning five more games — a turnaround that would have given the club an 8-2 record at this point.

As it stands, the club trails NFC Central Division-leading Chicago by four games with six left to play. The 7-3 Bears have beaten the Bucs twice this season by scores of 34-14 and 44-9, but no other team has defeated Tampa Bay by more than six points.

"I know he would like the opportunity to lead the team back to the playoffs," Culverhouse said. "But with the honesty that is so typical of the man, he has advised me that with his current health situation it would be better that we look elsewhere for a coach."

McKay's resignation came only 10 days after the Bucs coach was quoted in newspapers as saying he could become the "next Sam Rutigliano" if the Bucs didn't play well against the Kansas City Chiefs on Oct. 28.

Rutigliano was fired by the Cleveland Browns last month, but Culverhouse dismissed McKay's statement as frustration brought on by an embarrassing loss to the Bears the week before.

The Chiefs went on to beat Tampa Bay 24-20 and the Bucs dropped another heartbreaker Sunday, losing to the Minnesota Vikings 27-24 on Jan Stenerud's 53-yard field goal with two seconds remaining. The team has lost four games in a row.

McKay said he met with Culverhouse Monday morning and told the owner he wanted to step down at the end of the season and devote his time to helping the club secure talent to give his replacement a chance to win.

He added, however, that he gave no thought to stepping down immediately.

"That would put someone else in shoes that if they did not fill them well, people would say they are not a very good coach either," McKay said. "I've always said coaching is highly overrated... You win with players."

The only active NFL coaches who have stayed with one team longer than McKay are Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Chuck Noll of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

McKay left USC in 1975 to become coach of the expansion Bucs, beginning with the 1976 season. Tampa Bay endured a humiliating 0-26 initiation into the NFL, but by 1979 McKay had built a division champion and came within one victory of appearing in the Super Bowl.

"We were nine points away from being in the Super Bowl," Culverhouse said, referring to Tampa Bay's 9-0 loss to the Los Angeles Rams in the 1979 National Football Conference championship game.

The Bucs have made the NFL playoffs three of the past five years, but struggled to a 2-14 finish in 1983 after losing Doug Williams — the quarterback McKay built his offense around — to the United States Football League.

Olympic Reps To Consider Changes

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Boycotts, terrorism and financial problems are among the subjects being discussed this week in a meeting of Olympic representatives from 152 countries.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, arrived in the Mexican capital Monday for today's opening session.

Samaranch said the IOC would listen to what the various national committees have to say, and "from the opinions and advice that they put forward, it will draw conclusions that will allow us to avoid the problems the International Olympic Committee has faced in the last years."

Samaranch will be an observer at the Assembly of National Olympic Committees meeting, which he called "the most important and transcendental one that has taken place in Latin America."

Also on the agenda are reports by the presidents of the organizing committees of the 1988 Olympics at Seoul, South Korea, and the 1988 Winter Olympics at Calgary, Ontario.

Over the weekend, Mexico City played host to meetings that are expected to result in the naming of Indianapolis as the site of the 1987 Pan American Games, replacing Ecuador.

After a presentation by Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut and Ted Boehm, president of the Indiana Sports Corp., the Pan American Sports Organization selected Indianapolis over Havana, Cuba.

The assignment won't be firm until Dec. 15, the deadline given the Ecuadoran Olympic Committee for developing possible alternate funding plans. The country's government, citing severe economic conditions, decided to back away from hosting the event because of the financial costs involved.

The EOC said it wanted to organize the Games even though it lacks government approval, one of the prerequisites for hosting the event.

Hudnut, in town to make Indianapolis' presentation, said his city's chances appear "pretty good."

"The president of Ecuador has said he does not want the games there," Hudnut said.

"The decision is that Ecuador has asked for a little bit more time to see if they can reassemble their proposal," he said. "But they have also voted to designate Indianapolis as the 1987 site for the Games should Ecuador be unable to host them."

LAKER TEAM PLAY

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Coach John MacLeod of the Phoenix Suns calls the Los Angeles Lakers, the losing finalists in the 1984 NBA title series, a unique team.

"They not only have great individual talent but they play team basketball," MacLeod said. "They are willing to give the ball up, always thinking team first. It starts with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson. Magic sprays the ball around, keeping everybody involved."

Vote!

Millions of voters will go to the polls today to elect the President, members of Congress, and many local officials. The written ballot was first used in America when the congregation of the Salem Church chose a minister on July 20, 1629. At that time, a kernel of corn signalled a "yes" vote and a bean represented a "no" vote. In 1869, Thomas Edison greatly improved balloting procedures by inventing the electric voting machine for which he received his first patent.

Networks Face Task Of Reporting Election Without Projecting Win

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Television Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — It's 6:30 tonight. The polls are open, but TV says the presidential election is over. Are you going to leave your easy chair to vote?

Congress and public officials on the West Coast say you may not, and they say that could disrupt the electoral process.

The networks say there's no conclusive evidence that you won't, and, besides, their obligation is to report what everybody in Washington already knows. They're also in their own election-night race — for ratings.

TV is caught in the middle. All year, the candidates have used the nightly news for photo opportunities and imagery. Now that the big day has arrived and the networks can set the news agenda, they're told not to do it.

Recently, the House and the Senate overwhelmingly passed a non-binding resolution asking the networks to restrain themselves voluntarily from projecting or characterizing tonight's presidential election before the polls close. (A characterization, based on exit-poll interviews with voters, offers voting trends and, depending on the margin, suggests the outcome.)

Public officials and political scientists are concerned that these characterizations on the evening newscasts — when all the polls are still open — could affect parts of the ballot besides the presidential columns.

"Even the characterization of the vote may influence the election," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. "If a candidate is reported as doing well, his or her supporters might lose interest while the opponent's supporters may be encouraged to go to the polls."

Bill Woods, a political science professor at American University, said TV projections make some voters in the West and Midwest believe their vote is insignificant.

"Such interference is unconscionable, and raises serious constitutional questions," Woods said. "The problem is whether free speech may subvert free choice, or whether free speech is supposed to serve the ends of free choice."

Four years ago, former Rep. James Corman, a California Democrat, blamed his 752-vote defeat on the networks' early projections.

John E. Jackson of the University of Michigan did research in 1980 that found that one quarter of the potential voters surveyed in the West knew Ronald Reagan was the projected winner before their polls had closed, and that overall voter turnout was reduced among them.

CBS and NBC say they will report voting trends on their 6:30 p.m. EST newscasts. Only ABC, in an about-face announced Monday, has changed its position. ABC will not use exit polls to suggest trends or hint at the likely outcome of the presidential race on "World News Tonight." Exit polling data will not be used from an individual state until the polls in that state have closed.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, maintained that the research wasn't conclusive about network characterizations and projections influencing voter turnout, "but we're attempting to make some sanity out of this. ... We will take the first step and try to be good citizens."

Robert Chandler, a vice president for CBS News, said withholding information ran counter to the First Amendment's freedom-of-press interests and would undermine CBS' credibility.

"We believe that our election reporting has struck a responsible balance, taking into account both our respect for the electoral process and the right of the public to receive prompt and accurate reports about election news," Chandler said.

All three networks intend to declare the winner in each state when the polls in that state close. If and when the electoral votes from the Eastern and Midwestern states count up to a majority of 270 for one candidate, the networks will declare the next president — even if some polls are open.

Ellis Woodward, spokesman for the House telecommunications subcommittee that has been investigating TV's election coverage, doesn't object to that. "That's news," he said.

"Do you wait for Hawaii before you report Iowa?" said Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa. "I don't think the people in Iowa would like that."

The networks say they're acting responsibly. Four years ago, all the networks knew before noon that Ronald Reagan had defeated Jimmy Carter. Yet they waited until their evening newscasts to start saying so.

"The information is available," said Arledge. "It's a question of balancing various rights and obligations."

Television and newspapers have been providing polling information for weeks. Why is tonight's exit-polling data different?

It's because the once-a-year election process is finally in operation, and more is at stake than the presidential race. There are elections for school budgets, local and state offices, congressional seats and important referenda.

"There's been legitimate concern expressed, and it should be taken seriously," said Arledge, who acknowledged a ratings risk in that viewers might believe they would be getting less information on ABC.

NBC's and CBS' public-service messages designed to turn out the raw vote — CBS-TV alone broadcast 580 voter-participation messages since Labor Day — sound a bit hollow when their actions on election night could turn off the vote.

Tonight, CBS and NBC could be right if they joined ABC and let America speak before they do.

Rock Star Gets Lecture In Court

LONDON (AP) — Rock star Jimmy Page avoided being sentenced to prison on a cocaine charge but was fined and lectured by a magistrate on the dangers of drugs in the music world.

Page, 40, lead guitarist of the now disbanded group Led Zeppelin for 11 years, was fined the equivalent of $567 Monday after his lawyer assured Magistrate Brendan Mitchell that Page was aware of stars' responsibilities to fans, who could be influenced by his lifestyle.

It was Page's second recent brush with drugs and the law. He admitted having powder containing cocaine in London on Sept. 6, and was conditionally discharged for possessing cocaine in 1982.

Page's attorney, Timothy Barnes, said the musician bought the cocaine "on the spur of the moment" when he went into an all-night shop to buy wine and a stranger offered him the drug.

"You must realize that to dabble in drugs of this nature is definitely wrong, especially when you are associating with other members of the music world because it may well influence them to take drugs," Mitchell said.

"Generally for a second offense of this nature you should go to prison, but I take the view that if a prison sentence is passed it may well prevent you from pursuing your profession and it will fall short of helping others in the music business," he said.

Actress Katharine Hepburn says she has never seen "On Golden Pond," the movie for which she won the 1981 Academy Award for best actress. She became disenchanted with the movie, she says, after a scene was cut out that showed her hauling a canoe single-handed. (AP Laserphoto)

JAMES CAAN

Caan Sues Magazine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $30 million lawsuit filed by actor James Caan against a men's magazine says the publication printed a "nude and salacious" photograph of another man and claimed it was Caan.

The photograph identified as Caan appeared in the August 1984 issue of In Touch For Men, the actor contends in the lawsuit, filed Oct. 26 in Superior Court.

The suit said the photograph appeared in a seven-page feature that allegedly depicted other nude stars. It accuses the magazine's parent company, In Touch Inc., its publisher, Frank Roedel, and three others of defamation, misappropriation of Caan's name and unfair competition.

Caan, who appeared in such movies as "The Gambler" and "The Godfather," is seeking $15 million compensation for losses to his business and profession, damage to his reputation and physical and emotional suffering, and $15 million in punitive damages.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 7, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning finds it advisable not to make any financial commitment and to wait until afternoon before you engage in decisions where the practical phases of your affairs are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can be most practical now and find ways to economize. Build a reserve for any possible emergencies.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Although a personal affair may displease you in the morning, don't make any drastic changes, and also in your appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Morning is not good for making any private plans otherwise you lose out where your finest interest is concerned.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A good pal may not agree with your ideas in the morning, so await the afternoon and then present your plan quietly.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Morning is not good for forcing anything in the world of business so await the afternoon and then be tactful.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look at every angle of any changes you desire to make early and then carry through in a wise fashion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find the best way to handle your responsibilities early and later you are able to get backing from a bigwig.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may find it difficult to gain your objectives early because of an obstinate individual, but perseverance wins the game.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early handle problematical affairs at work that are difficult and then all should go more smoothly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want entertainment but first count the cost well and forget the most expensive kind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Some home affair could take up a little of your time in the morning, but the situation soon rights itself.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find better ways of getting your work done in the morning before you start handling communications that are important.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to put practical plans in the most precise order, although in earliest youth will seem to be mulling things over too much before reaching a decision. Upon reaching maturity your progeny can become a very successful business person.

Mortician's Trial Is Delayed Again

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — The scheduling of a trial for the former University of North Carolina mortician charged with 11 counts of embezzling cadavers has been delayed for third time in Orange County Superior Court. Orange County District Monday Wade Barber Jr. said Monday's delay resulted from new evidence that might bring additional indictments against Lester S. Sandlin, 42. Sandlin, who was curator of anatomical materials at the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Medicine, was indicted Aug. 6 by an Orange County grand jury on 11 counts of embezzling state property — cadavers — to a Florida mortuary for shipment to a West Indies medical school.

There are a number of situations where a play can only gain. It is to your advantage to be able to recognize the more common of these. Consider this hand, where many of the declarers in a duplicate game failed to find the winning line. The auction is straightforward. Indeed, every pair in the game reached the four spade contract, against which West made his normal lead of the queen of clubs. Declarer played low from dummy and ruffed the club continuation. Obviously, the diamond finesse had to be taken, so the declarers crossed to the queen of spades and successfully finessed the jack of diamonds. Back to the table with the king of spades and another winning diamond finesse was taken. Now the unsuccessful declarers feared a third-round diamond ruff, so they drew the last trump. But when the king of diamonds did not drop under the ace, those declarers still had to lose a diamond. Their last hope for the contract was to find West with the king of hearts, but when that proved forlorn the contract was down one. Declarer should not draw the last trump after winning the second diamond finesse. He should try to cash the ace of diamonds and, when West does not follow but cannot ruff, the contract is secure. Declarer simply ruffs his last diamond on the board. What if West ruffs the ace of diamonds? It costs declarer nothing — he is simply trading trick for trick. Now he can ruff his remaining diamond in dummy — a trick he would otherwise have to lose. He can then fall back establishing on the queen of hearts in an attempt to make his contract.

Parents File Suit In Tattoo Death

By The Associated Press
 A Kentucky couple has filed a $4 million suit in U.S. District Court in connection with the death two years ago of their 17-year-old son, a Camp Lejeune Marine. The suit charges that Pfc. Marc Anthony Butler of Elizabethtown, Ky., died Oct. 30, 1982, of fulminant hepatitis B at the Naval Regional Medical Center in Portsmouth, Va. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Louisville, Ky., said Butler died of hepatitis he allegedly contracted from a dirty needle used by a Jacksonville tattoo parlor. According to the suit, military medical officials were "grossly and wantonly negligent" in diagnosing and treating Butler's illness. It also alleges that Jacksonville city officials were negligent for failing to enact ordinances to govern sanitation at tattoo parlors. Named as defendants in the suit are the state of North Carolina, the city of Jacksonville, the U.S. Marine Corps, Capt. G.K. Cunningham — Butler's former commanding officer — and Don's Ace Tattoo Parlor, whose proprietor is not identified by name in the lawsuit. The suit seeks $1.5 million in damages for "wrongful death" and $2.5 million in punitive damages and legal fees.

Enters Hospital

RALEIGH (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Dan K. Moore is scheduled to enter Rex Hospital in Raleigh for tests on Tuesday, according to his wife. Moore will undergo "some tests and checkups," Jeanelle C. Moore said Sunday. Mrs. Moore said she did not know the exact nature of the tests but said they were not connected with surgery Moore had in January 1983 at Duke Medical Center in Durham. At that time, Moore declined to discuss the nature of his surgery. Mrs. Moore said she did not know whether her husband would remain in the hospital or be discharged Tuesday after the tests.

President Taft's Visit To N.C. Was Memorable

WILMINGTON (AP) — When President William Howard Taft visited Wilmington in 1910, William U. Bremer remembers that his political affiliation made him something of an attraction.

"He was a Republican, which was a strange thing in Wilmington then," Bremer said. "Thank goodness those days are gone forever."

Bremer remembers the day Taft visited Wilmington, even down to the clothes he was wearing and the shape of Taft's mustache.

Bremer said he wore blue, just like many of the school children who created a living American flag. Bremer was part of the background for the stars.

"We enjoyed seeing him," said Bremer, who was then 8 years old. "It was quite a memorable visit. He was very impressive. His curved sort of walrus mustache suited him perfectly."

Bremer recalled that James Sprunt, a local historian and prominent citizen, had the job of entertaining Taft for breakfast. Sprunt, who lived in what is now the Governor Dudley Mansion at Front and Nun streets, had to provide two chairs to seat Taft, who weighed more than 300 pounds.

"It so happened, on my way to school that day, that Mr. Sprunt and the president were driving out in his big carriage," Bremer said.

The school children lined up at Third and Market streets and there were policemen on horseback, he said. After addressing the children, the president made a speech on the steps of Thalian Hall, Bremer said. A marker at City Hall commemorates that visit.

Bremer said he could not remember what Taft said, but he was left with a good impression of him.

"Folks I knew thought he was a brilliant person," Bremer said. "He was a very popular man and an impressive man. Of course, little children are impressionable."

Taft had been elected a year before his visit. He was president from 1909 to 1913, but lost a bid for re-election in a three-way contest with Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson. Bremer said he thought Taft came to Wilmington because people had a right to see their president.

"He came and let us look at him," Bremer said. "He was touring the South. He just came down to see people."

Riley Says No Evidence Pair Knew Of Gifts

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said he had found no evidence that Attorney General Rufus Edmisten or Insurance Commissioner John Ingram knew about $14,000 in illegal contributions to their gubernatorial campaigns.

But Riley recommended Monday that the state Board of Elections "vigorously pursue" a refund from the Ingram campaign of $8,000 in illegal contributions from the family of John Bolt Jr., a Wilson tire company executive. Edmisten already has refunded $6,000 sent to him by the Bolt family.

Riley said he found no evidence of willful or knowing violation of the state law by Edmisten or Ingram. Their campaign treasurers also have denied knowing that the contributions were illegal.

Ingram was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination that Edmisten received.

Allegations that Edmisten and Ingram had accepted illegal campaign contributions from the Bolt family were raised in August by Edmisten's Republican opponent, U.S. Rep. Jim Martin.

The contributions were from Bolt's two children — Melissa C. Bolt, 11, and her brother, H. Carey Bolt, 3. Campaign finance reports showed that the children each contributed $3,000 to Edmisten's campaign and $4,000 to Ingram's campaign.

The elections board ruled that the contributions from the minor children were a civil violation of state law.

The board referred the matter to Riley, who sent letters to Alex Brock, state elections director, and the campaign managers of Edmisten and Ingram Monday informing them of the results of his investigation.

Riley also said there was no evidence of an "improper connection" between the contributions Edmisten received from Bolt and the intervention of Edmisten's office in a lawsuit involving Bolt's tire company.

Brock declined to comment on Riley's action Monday.

"I've got no comment, with the election happening tomorrow," he said.

He said Riley's recommendation that the board pursue a refund from Ingram would be considered at the board's next meeting Nov. 25.

PLUS LIBERAL SURGICAL AND MEDICAL BENEFITS FOR SERVICES AND SUPPLIES and Extended Care and Other Benefits

Illnesses and accidents don't always hit the other person. You or one of your dependents could be hospitalized today.

ILLNESSES such as Heart Attack, Cancer, Stroke, Hepatitis, Anemia, Diabetes, Mononucleosis, Bronchitis, Arthritis, Typhoid, Typhus and Contagious Diseases.

ACCIDENTS such as Automobile Wrecks, Falls, Burns, Boat Mishaps, Explosions, Shootings or Knifings, Concussions, Fractures, Heat Strokes and Asphyxiation.

OPERATIONS such as Tumor, Kidney Stones, Gall Bladder, Appendix, Hernia, Biopsy, Breast Surgery, Tracheotomy, Transplants, Embolism, Brain or Eye Surgery.

Ever-Increasing Hospital Costs

If you know anyone who has spent any time in a hospital lately, you are aware of the rising costs. Even if you now have some type of coverage, chances are it is inadequate. So you may be interested in one of the liberal Gold Shield Plans to augment your present policy.

(See the liberal benefits schedule inside.)

As an individual, husband and wife, family or one-parent family in North Carolina, you will be delighted with the benefits offered by this Gold Shield Health Care Plan. In fact, you may want to call it to the attention of your friends and fellow workers.

GUARANTEED RENEWABLE FOR LIFE

MOST OFTEN-ASKED QUESTIONS ... and our ready answers!

Q. How does the Gold Shield Plan actually work?

A. Gold Shield was established to provide health insurance for millions of individual, husband and wife, family, and one-parent groups who heretofore were unable to get good coverage at reasonable rates. You may qualify for this protection.

Q. What are the deductibles?

A. There are none! Benefits are paid directly to you unless you specify otherwise. And you're paid regardless of any other coverage you have up to $100,000 maximum. Under present IRS rulings, monies you receive are not taxable.

Q. Once I am enrolled, can my premium rate increase?

A. You cannot and will not be singled out for a rate increase. Your rate remains the same. Only if rates were changed for everyone in your class throughout North Carolina could your rate ever change.

Q. And just what am I not covered for?

A. Any sickness or disease which first manifests itself before the effective date of the policy is not covered during the first two years. Losses as a result of war or any act of war. Mental disease or disorder or conditions caused by the use of narcotics or intoxication.

Q. How about family coverage? Does it really include all present children, future pregnancies and all future children?

A. With family coverage, it includes all children through age 19 regardless of number. All pregnancies of insured or spouse beginning after date of issue are fully covered and all children born of these pregnancies through age 19. (Pregnancies of children are not covered.)

Q. How may I pay my premium?

A. You may pay monthly bank draft, quarterly, semi-annually or annually. It's your choice.

Q. How does this policy compare with other policies benefit-wise and rate-wise?

A. We are quite proud of the Gold Shield Plan, and we invite you to show it to anyone you wish—your insurance agent, lawyer, banker, minister or any other trusted advisor.

Q. You say Gold Shield is renewable for life. What happens when I reach 65 and Medicare?

A. Upon reaching 65, you shall automatically be issued a Medicare supplement policy.

Q. Who is Investors Consolidated Insurance Company?

A. We are one of the youngest insurance companies in the nation with some modern and innovative ideas. The Gold Shield Plan is just one example. We are a North Carolina company for North Carolina people. In nine years we have gained approximately 175,000 policy holders in North Carolina.

HOW CAN WE OFFER THIS UNIQUE PLAN AT THESE RATES?

qualify, you and your family can enjoy excellent coverage at good rates simply because our underwriters have selected you, based on your health record. So be sure to accurately complete your health history in your application. Omissions could result in voiding your policy.

WILL APPLICANTS WITH LESS THAN PERFECT HEALTH BE ACCEPTED?

Definitely! In fact, we anticipate that as many as 75 to 85 per cent of all Gold Shield applicants will be accepted. Send in your application today.
