GOP Sweeps Top State Offices

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolinians turned out in record-smashing numbers to give Republicans their biggest victory since 1972, helping President Reagan get his landslide, awarding Sen. Jesse Helms a third term and electing Jim Martin governor.

"Our term is an 'unprecedented turnout' in every section of the state," said State Elections Director Alex Brock. "I believe this record probably will stand just as long as Babe Ruth's home-run record."

With 2,324 or 99 percent of 2,354 precincts reporting unofficial returns this morning, Reagan had 1,298,703 votes or 62 percent to 803,891 votes or 38 percent for Walter Mondale. Libertarian James Bergland had 3,613 — less than 1 percent.

Helms defeated Gov. Jim Hunt, getting 1,110,908 votes or 51 percent to 1,049,837 votes or 48 percent for the Democratic challenger with 2,311 or 98 percent of the precincts reporting. Bobby Y. Emory, a Libertarian, had 9,082 votes or 1 percent.

In the governor's race, with 2,323 or 99 percent of the precincts reporting, Martin had 1,163,077 votes or 54 percent to 985,987 votes or 46 percent for Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. Libertarian Fritz Prochnow had 4,404 votes, less than 1 percent.

Bob Jordan became the highest-ranking Democrat to win Tuesday. He defeated Raleigh businessman John Carrington in the race for lieutenant governor.

With 2,169 or 92.1 percent of 2,354 precincts reporting unofficial returns this morning, Jordan had 1,057,989 votes or 54.8 percent to 872,703 votes or 45.2 percent for Carrington, of Raleigh.

"You have sent a signal throughout this nation and world that North Carolina is a conservative, God-fearing state," Helms told a cheering throng at his Raleigh headquarters.

Hunt conceded defeat but said he was "not beaten in spirit."

"Yes we have suffered a disappointing defeat and yes it hurts," said Hunt, flanked by his parents, wife and children at a local hotel. "But ... we have carried the torch forward and that flame will never, never die."

Martin told 500 ecstatic supporters, "I feel great. ... It was tremendous the way the voters came out and responded in record numbers."

Edmisten said, "I'm proud that my campaign has stood up for some beliefs."

Republicans picket up two congressional seats they lost in 1980 and knocked off a veteran Democratic representative, but failed to hold the 9th District seat abandoned by Gov. elect Martin.

Bill Hendon avenged his narrow 1982 loss to Democratic U.S. Rep. James M. Clarke, recapturing the 11th District seat. State Rep. Howard Coble, a Republican, defeated freshman 6th District Rep. Robin Britt, a Democrat.

Bill Cobey, who lost a close race with 4th District Democratic Rep. Ike Andrews in 1982, narrowly beat Andrews for his first political victory. Cobey also lost the 1989 race for lieutenant governor.

D.G. Martin, a Democrat, nipped Republican Alex McMillan in the 9th District.

Pitt Backs Reagan, Hunt And Edmisten

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County voters, historically hard-core Democrats, went with the rest of North Carolina — and the nation — Tuesday to re-elect Republican President Ronald Reagan. But local area voters, based on unofficial returns, differed from the majority in the state by giving U.S. Senate hopeful Gov. Jim Hunt and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten more votes than their Republican challengers, incumbent Senator Jesse Helms and U.S. Rep. Jim Martin.

In Pitt County, Reagan polled 18,975 votes while Democrat Walter Mondale, who campaigned in Greenville during the spring primary, took only 13,474 ballots. Statewide, Reagan, with 99.4 percent of the state 2,354 precincts reporting, had 61.72 percent of the vote to Democrat Walter Mondale's 38.1 percent.

In the race for the U.S. Senate — the nation's most expensive and perhaps the most bitterly fought — Helms received 15,694 votes in Pitt County, with Hunt leading with 16,947 votes.

Across North Carolina, Helms, with 99.4 percent of the precincts reporting, had 51.3 percent of the votes while Hunt has 48.1 percent.

Helms carried 14 boxes in Pitt County, with Hunt having a majority in only 10 precincts. Hunt's most commanding lead — in fact, more than enough to account for his margin of victory in the county — came from two precincts in Greenville with heavy black voter registration: Greenville 3, at the West Greenville Recreation Center, where Hunt took 869 votes to Helms' 24; and Greenville 4, the old West End Fire Station, where he received 1,156 votes to Helms' 267.

In the race for governor, Edmisten, with 17,622 votes in Pitt County, took 17 precincts, while Martin, who gathered 15,020 votes county-wide, won only seven boxes. Just as in the senate race, Ed-

In Split-Ticket Victory Reagan Gets 49 States

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

President Reagan, celebrating a 49-state landslide over Walter F. Mondale, said early today he means to extend his conservative mandate "into the next decade and the next century," but his was a split-ticket victory.

Despite the sweep, many Republicans were left on the sidelines as Democrats kept control of the House and trimmed the GOP majority in the Senate.

"What we've done only prepares us for what we're going to do," Reagan told exuberant supporters in Los Angeles as they chanted, "Four more years, four more years."

But Democratic House Speaker

Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. was quick to claim, "I don't think there was any mandate out there whatsoever."

And today on ABC's "Good Morning America," White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, commenting on the modest Republican gains in the House, said they were going to make it "very difficult to push some of the things that the president is going to want to push in the Congress."

From the time the first vote totals began rolling in Tuesday night, it was clear that Mondale's dream of a presidential upset was not to be. Reagan was a big winner in state after state, and finally Mondale appeared before supporters in St. Paul, Minn., to say he had called the president to congratulate him.

"He has won," said Mondale. "We are all Americans; he is our president, and we honor him tonight."

His Democratic running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, who made history in a losing cause, consoled her backers, telling them, "American women will never be second-class citizens again."

Vice President George Bush, celebrating "this wonderful hour of victory" in Houston, called on Americans to "come together as one people, united and indivisible."

In a $22 million Senate race, Republican New Right leader Jesse Helms of North Carolina fought back a tough challenge from Democratic Gov. James Hunt to win a third term. The contest in which Helms spent $14 million and Hunt $8 million

Farmville OKs TV Increase

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners voted Tuesday night to approve a rate increase for Alert Cable TV in the Farmville area.

Joe Surles, general manager, requested the $1.50 increase, saying that the company is in the red and has been ever since service began. The commissioners assigned the utilities committee the job of suggesting other channels that Alert might offer Farmville area customers "to make the increase worthwhile to the consumers." The new minimum monthly rate will be $9.

A public hearing was set for the Dec. 4 meeting to consider a zoning change that would allow use of a building on Horne Avenue owned by the A.C. Monk Company for use as Sunday School space by Fellowship Baptist Church.

The town administrator was given the go-ahead to have town employees tear down the Southside Fire Station on South Main Street and arrange for the temporary storage of the fire truck now kept there.

A request by Frank Gill, president of the Farmville Economic Council, that the town provide a 5-year incentive program to provide water, sewer and electrical extensions within subdivision developments inside Farmville and its extrajurisdictional boundaries on a lot-release payback scheduled charging individual lot buyers on a front-footage-cost basis. Gill said one of Farmville's biggest problems in attracting industry is lack of housing and the Council believes that this measure would create more readily available housing. The matter was referred by the board to the planning and finance committee for study and recommendation.

There was considerable discussion of a North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency request for adoption of amendments to its initial project power sales agreement and its supplemental power sales agreement. The changes requested were that the agency's cost and expense related to the issuance and sale of debt which is not long term bonds be included as a monthly power cost; the inclusion of tax-exempt commercial paper in the definition of subordinated debt; the allowance of the debt to be used to pay costs associated with an administrative building, land and related facilities; the allowance of this debt for costs of acquisition and construction to be refunded with bonds and notes; and allowing the board of director of the agency to amend project agreements with power companies without participation by members upon finding the amendments would be in the economic interest of the agency and each participant affected and that the amendment would not have a material adverse effect on the security for agency bonds. The commissioners expressed reservation about the amendments and did not arrive at two-thirds majorities. They asked the attorneys representing the

Outdoor Wedding Takes Place On Saturday

Julie Ann Harris and Joseph Marion Garner Jr. were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in an outdoor wedding held at the home of the bride's parents. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. G.W. Weaver.

MRS. GARNER

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin O. Harris of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Garner Sr. of Vermilion, Ohio.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white organza styled with a fitted bodice accented with Venise lace. The gathered skirt swept into a full cathedral train outlined with garlands of lace. Her elbow length veil of imported silk illusion trimmed with matching lace fell from a lace covered Camelot cap. She carried a colonial bouquet of white snowdrops with white and blue pom poms accented with gypsophila and greenery with white satin streamers.

Wanda Clark of Greenville was bridesmaid and wore a light blue formal gown designed with an open portrait neckline accented by a ruffle of taffeta trimmed with Venise lace extending down the bodice front to the empire waist. She carried a bouquet of mums with gypsophila and greenery with pastel blue and ivory streamers.

Doug Minner of Swansboro served as best man.

The mother of the bride wore a red formal gown with a V-neckline and matching cape. She wore a corsage of white carnations.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points the bride selected an ensemble of lavender and black and wore her mother's corsage.

The couple will live in Morehead City.

The bride, a graduate of D.H. Conley High School, will attend Carteret Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Vermilion High School and is serving in the U.S. Coast Guard aboard the Cutter Chilula at Fort Macon.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The refreshment table was decorated with an arrangement of pastel pink roses, baby's breath and greenery accented with lighted white tapers. Patricia Meeks, cousin of the bride, poured punch. The wedding cake was served by Yvonne Spain of Greenville and Teresa Smith of Greenville presided at the register.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

COME FOR DESSERT
Gingerbread & Beverage
GINGERBREAD

- 1 1/2 cups stirred all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 cup butter, at room temperature
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 2-3rds cup boiling water
- Whipped cream

Stir together flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and ginger. Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg, then molasses. Add flour mixture; beat gently just until blended — mixture will be stiff. Gradually and gently beat in boiling water until smooth after each addition — batter will be thin. Pour into a greased and floured 8-inch-square baking pan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 30 minutes. Let cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on rack. Serve hot with whipped cream that has been slightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Walker's Music Drowns Out Driver's Warning

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine (I'll call him Charlie) is in the hospital. Here's what happened: Charlie was walking down the street listening to music on his headset when a car hit him.

He said the driver of the car didn't come to a complete stop at the stoplight, which was turning from yellow to red.

The driver of the car said Charlie was walking against the light when he (the driver) sounded his horn, but because Charlie was listening to his headset, he didn't hear the horn.

Now Charlie is all banged up with two broken legs and a broken arm, and all he does is pray. I told him to quit praying, hire a real sharp lawyer, and sue the manufacturer for not putting a warning on its headsets to let people know that headsets could be dangerous when worn in traffic.

Do you think Charlie should stick with his prayers, or get a lawyer and sue?

CHARLIE'S PAL

DEAR PAL: I consulted my chief legal adviser, Arthur Groman, and he said, "You know the old saying, 'Prayers should be accompanied by good works.'"

So, pal, what Charlie needs is a good personal injury lawyer to work on his case while he prays.

DEAR READERS: This is from a best-selling book written by an 88-year-old man:

NINE WAYS TO MAKE YOUR WIFE HAPPY

1. When you get home from work, don't tell her about your problems at the office, let her talk about her problems. And if you're one of her problems, don't listen.
2. Surprise her with a sweater two sizes too small. She'll be flattered, she'll love you for it, and since she can't wear it, give it back to your secretary.
3. When you're with her watching a Bo Derek movie, say, "Come on, sweetheart, let's get out of here. I don't know what they see in her."
4. Instead of reading the newspaper at the kitchen table, try talking to your wife. You might learn a few things, like your kids have grown up and moved out.
5. Remember those important dates: her birthday, Valentine's Day, your anniversary, your

Summary Covers Nutrient Interactions

RALEIGH — Foods are complex chemical substances and interact with one another to varying degrees, according to a newly released Scientific Status Summary prepared by the Expert Panel on Food Safety and Nutrition of the Institute of Food Technologists.

"The way foods and food ingredients interact determines how the body absorbs and uses the nutrients it needs," according to Dr. Frank Thomas, of the department of food science at N.C. State University, IFT's Regional Communicator for North Carolina.

The interactions between nutrients and the effects they can have on the health and well-being of an individual depend to a great extent on the nutritional status and dietary habits of that individual," the IFT Expert Panel noted.

"Nutrient interactions may be of little consequence and clinically insignificant," pointed out the panel, "as long as an individual consumes a well-balanced, varied diet that fulfills all the requirements for essential nutrients in appropriate amounts."

But a lot of people don't do that, the IFT Regional Communicator noted and therefore risk adverse effects from natural nutrient interactions.

Among people "at risk," the summary says, are these:

"People who habitually eat unbalanced diets" — food faddists, dieters, those unintentionally consuming unbalanced diets.

"Those on long-term medication" — particularly the elderly.

"Persons who chronically self-medicate by consuming megadoses of vitamins, minerals or other supplements."

"Alcohol and drug abusers" (including users of street drugs).

"Those in any period of greatly increased nutrient requirement" — pregnancy, lactation, rapid growth or with certain diseases.

The subject of nutrient interactions is enormously complex, and is the subject of continuing extensive studies. The IFT Status Summary listed several examples of interactions to illustrate both their importance and complexity.

For example high fiber diets can reduce the absorption of minerals, particularly zinc. But diets with too much zinc run the risk of causing copper-deficiency anemia and can inhibit calcium absorption when dietary calcium is low.

The summary also said that "levels of protein intake have a strong influence on absorption, retention and utilization of other nutrients, especially minerals. Both excesses and deficiencies in protein, especially over long periods of time can have significant health effects."

Calcium metabolism essential for sound bone structure is particularly affected by protein intake. "Even relatively small increases in dietary protein have been shown to increase urinary calcium excretion to a significant degree in health men," the summary pointed out.

This could contribute with age to the incidence of osteoporosis (porosity and weakening of bone).

The summary noted that interactions between protein and calcium "may...be a problem for some segments of the U.S. population" because a recent government survey showed that the average U.S. dietary protein intake was 1.5 to 2 times higher than the recommended dietary allowance.

On the other hand, many nutrient interactions are beneficial the summary pointed out.

"One classic example of a positive nutrient interaction is that of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) with iron; ascorbic acid increases the absorption of non-heme (not from meat) iron...

"Another important positive interaction is that between vitamin D and calcium. Vitamin D is required for the absorption of calcium," the IFT noted.

To benefit most from the nutrient interactions it is best to adhere to age-old advice: Eat a well-balanced, varied diet that will provide the needed nutrients in adequate amounts.

Family Reunion Held Sunday

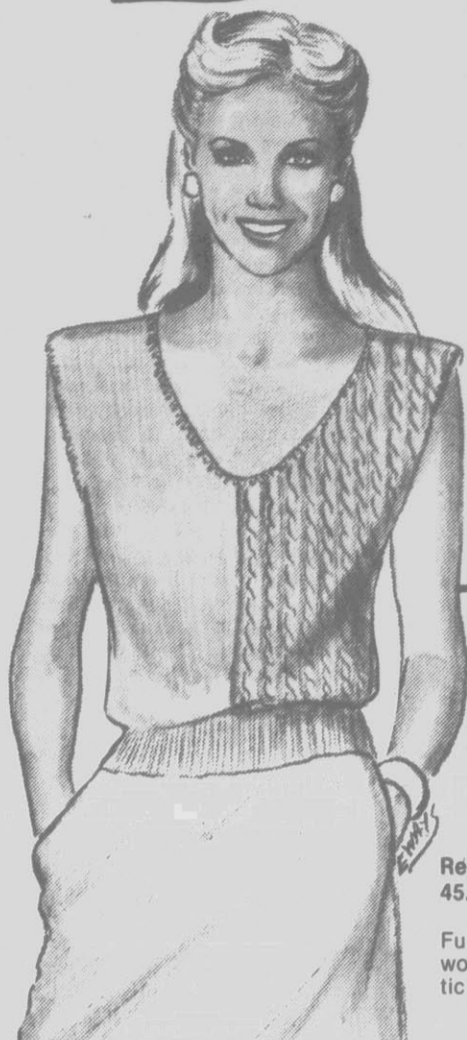

The family of the late Sarah and Walter David Williams held its annual reunion Sunday at the community building in Ayden.

Elder and Mrs. App Mewborn, pastor of the couple, were honored guests. Senior family members present were Verna Jackson, a daughter, and Annie Williams, daughter-in-law.

A covered-dish luncheon was served to the approximately 100 attending.

Guidepost

A University of North Carolina sociologist suspects well-intended public assistance programs may well be harming those people they were supposed to help, by "anchoring" them in areas where manufacturing jobs — the door to a better life in middle America they need and seek — have declined.

John D. Kasarda, chairman of the sociology department at UNC-CH, is doing some research of 1980 census data with a different hypothesis as a launching pad for his studies.

He notes that at the turn of the century the nation's Northern industrialized cities were centers for blue-collar and other entry-level jobs; but in later years many of those jobs left the cities for suburban and more rural areas. They were replaced by industries requiring higher skills, out of reach for many job seekers.

When programs such as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, public housing and health care services came on the scene, says Kasarda, they were focused on meeting large-city needs, where minority groups had gone seeking job opportunities. The government programs, he suggests, became substitutes for a blue collar economy.

The result: public assistance programs kept the disadvantaged in areas of limited opportunity.

Kasarda reminds that, because North Carolina's larger cities are younger and smaller than those of the traditionally big manufacturing centers, and that as assistance programs were largely targeted in cities, the scope of the problem for Tar Heels is not as broad as in the older Northern cities.

The Kasarda line of thought is doubly interesting because in the recesses of our memory there lurk shadows of having heard or read a visionary's advocacy of dispersing assistance programs more broadly among small communities where they would be better applied. The idea did not bear fruit.

The sociologist's research is both interesting and worthwhile. The hindsight he provides explains a great deal how our generation misjudged coping with a social need of our time, as well as an error that might be avoided in the future. His finished work might well be a guidepost for tomorrow's men and women filling responsible roles in government.

Seasonal

A change of seasons is at hand.

There's a small chill in the morning air, and a blanket is sometimes welcome at night. A nice change, but it's time to look ahead.

Last fall this space reminded winter months could be a real hardship on our community's poor and aged; and life could be made easier for many by efforts of clubs, fraternal groups, churches, other organizations and even individuals. The reminder was hardly needed. Such cooperative steps are commonplace in Pitt County.

Still, we feel constrained to once again point out the need before the time of small and large emergencies is at hand.

The cumulative costs of heating, additional clothing, food, sometimes even small medical needs or appliance repairs and replacement can prove too much for people whose resources are badly strained.

True, there are agencies whose work and responsibilities bear the heavier burden of those needs, but the concern and contribution of friends and strangers fill some of the tiny cracks through which individuals and even households could fall.

We'd suggest it is time to think about such things and prepare for the cold weeks and months that lie ahead. That small sharing by many individuals and groups could prove to be a very large blessing to those who would otherwise endure personal hardship.

—Art Buchwald—

Who's Feeling Sorry Now

Every time I read the dollar is getting stronger I am filled with patriotic fervor and I'm proud to be an American.

Therefore I was very annoyed when my French friend Alain came to Washington for a banking conference. I was prepared to be kind to him and not brag. Instead I found him patronizing ME.

"I am sorry your dollar is doing so well against the French franc," he said.

"What do you mean you're sorry it's doing so well? Do you realize I can now buy 10 francs for the dollar?"

"I know you can, and it's all right with us, because now we can export all our snails to the United States and Americans can afford to buy them. But we can't afford to buy any American snails because they're too expensive. You people should have a $5 million trade deficit in snails alone by the end of the year. That's why I feel sorry for you."

"The reason the dollar is strong, Alain, is because the rest of the world has faith in it. Our tourists can go anywhere and just by flashing greenbacks foreign merchants will grovel on the floor."

"Yes, but while they're groveling, they're buying United States Treasury notes with dollars. The reason is that you people are paying higher interest rates for money than anyone else."

"What's wrong with that?"

"Nothing, except your budget is so out of whack you have to continually borrow money from all over the world to meet your $200 billion deficit. As long as you have large budget deficits people will stay in dollars. Your dollar may be strong but your economy is in a mess."

"How can we have a strong dollar and an economic mess at the same time?"

"It's good to have a solid currency, but not one that makes it impossible to compete in the world marketplace. Let us go back to our snails. Because the franc is so weak, the French can undercut the price of French snails, American snail producers have to lay off their workers because they have no market for them. Every country with a weak currency is flooding the United States with their exports, and all you people can do with the dollar is borrow more of them to pay your debt."

"You're just saying that because you want us to go back to having a weak dollar against a strong French franc."

"Up to a point. But we don't want you people to go into a recession, or you won't be able to buy any French snails. Also, with a weak dollar we would start buying American snails again, and that would hurt the export of French snails."

"How would you suggest we weaken our dollar?"

—Paul O'Connor—

is just getting over-publicized.

There are several reasons why state law enforcement officials don't know how much sexual exploitation occurs here.

The first is that kids don't tell. "They think that people might not believe them or they are scared that something else might happen to them if they do," Ms. Holland says. Mary Lee Anderson, coordinator of the N.C. Office of Children's Protective Services, says children often get lured into situations gradually. Maybe a trusted family "friend" starts taking pornographic pictures of them. When the child tries to break free of that adult, the photographer will threaten to show the pictures to the child's parents. The kid is hooked and he or she never reports the situation.

The second reason, says Ms. Holland, has been the state's inability to track missing children. Under a recent executive order signed by Gov. Jim Hunt, new efforts will be made in this area, she said.

These children often run away from home because their parents or someone else is abusing them. Some of the missing children are abducted for sexual purposes. Better identification of these children and why they are missing should provide more information on the problem in North Carolina.

Finally, both women say the state's child abuse reporting laws simply are not broad enough. When a child is abused, local social workers are supposed to report the case to a central registry in Raleigh. But, not all sexual exploitation qualified for the registry. For example, a child forced to model for obscene pictures may not be technically abused. His name doesn't go into the registry. A child abused by someone other than his parent or guardian doesn't get his name in the registry.

Ms. Anderson says the holes in the reporting law leave serious gaps in the state's ability to fight child sexual exploitation. The statistical data provided by a complete registry would give police and social workers a better idea of what kind of children are being abused and what kind of adult is doing the exploiting.

Also, the registry is designed to help social workers and police identify children who are repeatedly being abused. Leaving a child off the register deprives those authorities the information they need about any possible past exploitation the child may have suffered.

As part of the GACCY report, there is a recommendation that state law be amended to include reports of all kinds of sexual exploitation, not just the narrowly defined instances now covered.

To the editor:

I am the mother of a Wahl-Coates School student who recently went to the Texasgulf phosphate plant in Aurora for a science study with the students of Mrs. Jones' 6th grade class. I didn't think the plant was very big, but when I went inside, I realized just how massive it is. I thought that a pile of soil which was dug from deep within the ground, along with an enormous metal basket were good materials for studying geology and natural science. The students enjoyed the digging and picking up sharks' teeth. In addition, there was a museum and a small gift shop.

I strongly recommend Texasgulf as one of the best practical educational places. I am sure that it is much more effective to see it than to hear or read about it.

To the editor:

Regarding your correspondent Sue Hinson's story on the assassination of India's prime minister Indira Gandhi on Oct. 31, we have to say that, not only was it biased, but it also represented poor journalism. We expected Hinson to have taken the trouble of ascertaining the feelings of a wider spectrum of the Indian community of Greenville. Instead, she interviewed only a Sikh gentleman who failed to express even a single word of sorrow which has gripped the rest of the Indian community of this city. I wonder if Hinson knew that the two assassins who were supposed to be Gandhi's bodyguards were also Sikhs.

Like an American president, Mrs. Gandhi was no darling of all the Indian people, and we did not agree with all her policies. But the treacherous and cowardly manner in which she was murdered by her own Sikh bodyguards was, to quote President Reagan, "an act of terrorism," and not a mere "political act" as the gentleman in the interview tended to portray.

To the editor:

Hear ye, Hear ye. Let it be known that our local liberal newspaper refused to print the following response to their Oct. 31 editorial.

Just when it appeared the South, and certainly North Carolina, was overcoming the stigma of a one-party region, The Daily Reflector ups and kicks the sleeping "yellow dog."

Your endorsement of Mondale reminds me of a comment I heard my grandfather make 30 years ago. That being "I'd vote for the donkey if that's what the Democrats chose to run."

It's more than slightly disturbing to realize the local paper for an area as progressive as Pitt County can't remember four years ago when we had 14 percent inflation, 21 percent interest rates, gas lines, hostages in Iran, massive unemployment, etc. The negative list is limited only by column space.

Politics Plays A Role

WASHINGTON — "Starvation knows no politics," says Jay F. Morris, the No. 2 official at the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID).

But politics has almost everything to do with the starvation in Ethiopia that is reportedly taking from 100 to 250 lives per week and, according to the United Nations, threatens as many as 7 million of that country's estimated 34 million people. And the U.S. holds its share of responsibility.

The recent announcement by Morris' boss, AID Administrator M. Peter McPherson, of a U.S. decision to ship an extra 30,000 metric tons of corn, wheat and other grains to Ethiopia overstates the enthusiasm of our government for helping that East African nation. Since Ethiopia's last major famine led to the replacement in 1974 of a U.S.-backed dictator, Haile Selassie, with Soviet-backed Marxists, Congress and every administration since Nixon's have looked askance at giving the current regime humanitarian assistance that could be construed as a political endorsement.

Federal law forbids the U.S. from providing to Ethiopia developmental or long-term assistance of any kind. The prohibition went into effect in 1974 when Ethiopia's new government took control of the assets of U.S. companies operating there.

That left the door open only to "emergency" food and non-food assistance for distribution through private, voluntary agencies. Because of its ability to move enormous amounts of grain, the federal government has provided the bulk of food shipped from the U.S. to Ethiopia over the years.

Yet, according to an AID compendium, "U.S. Overseas Loans and Grants," gifts of food to Ethiopia rose to $15 million in 1980, Jimmy Carter's last year, but then dropped by two-thirds in 1981. In 1982 and 1983, U.S. shipments were worth $2.5 million and $2.8 million, respectively. The Reagan administration talked of phasing out the Ethiopia aid completely.

U.S. food aid to Ethiopia rose to about $22 million, or 41 metric tons, last year, according to an AID spokesman. Because of the current crisis, the U.S. will more than double those figures in the 1985 fiscal year.

But that doesn't mean the government has acted on its own initiative. McPherson's public declaration of new support came only two weeks after the administrator told a meeting of dozens of private organizations that the situation in Ethiopia didn't warrant additional U.S. government assistance. Ostensibly, only after NBC's recent broadcast of grisly BBC footage prompted an emotional response from television viewers did the government loosen its purse strings further.

Morris, a 43-year-old former program manager for Motorola Corp., bluntly expressed the administration's sentiments last summer. For one, he said, U.S. food shipments to Ethiopia were three times the value of similar Soviet gifts to all of sub-Saharan Africa.

Morris added that the Ethiopian government, which wastes almost half of its resources on a military embroiled in civil war, had until recently made hunger assistance a low priority. His contentions were reinforced by recent reports that the Ethiopians had imported $4 million worth of Scotch whiskey to, according to an Ethiopian diplomat, "fight the black market and to spare the people." Outside observers said the shipment would have coincided with the regime's 10th anniversary celebrations.

"It isn't their ideology that bothers us," Morris said. "It's their behavior."

Until recently, at least, Congress felt similarly. It could have sustained Carter's last level of aid, but it didn't. And this year it failed to pass proposals of Rep. Ted Weiss (D-N.Y.) to increase food programs worldwide — with the bulk going to Africa — by $265 million.

American citizens have shown up their government with an outpouring of generosity in the past several weeks. Catholic Relief Services, which is leading the efforts of private groups in Ethiopia, said last Monday that it had received 6,000 telephone calls offering donations. Clearly, when they shift their focus from presidential politics to human tragedy, the media are a powerful humanitarian tool.

Now that the U.S. has turned its attention to an emergency 11 years in the making, it could make the difference for some, if not all, of the hungry. So many stomachs should not have gone empty in the first place.

Information for Consumers Who are Considering the Purchase of a Kerosene Heater

The Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends that the consumer consider the following important safety information when considering the purchase of a kerosene heater:

— Select a kerosene heater that produces the amount of heat required for the area you wish to heat. Consult with your dealer to determine the size of heater that you will need.

— When selecting a heater, look for one that has been tested and labeled by a nationally-recognized testing laboratory. These kerosene heaters have been determined to meet specific safety standards and manufacturers are required to provide important use and care information to the consumer. You have less assurance that the safety features and operating instructions are adequate for a heater that has not been evaluated in such a manner.

General Home-Safety Information—Regardless of the method you use to heat your home, the commission encourages you to:

- Equip your home with at least one smoke detector on each floor.
- Keep at least one operating dry powder, ABC-type fire extinguisher in the home at all times.
- Keep areas around heat sources free of papers and trash.
- Store paints, solvents and flammable liquids away from all heat and ignition sources.
- Develop a fire-escape plan. Be certain that all members of the household understand the plan and are able to carry out the plan in case of emergency.

North Carolina Consumer Complaints

For a view of consumer complaints throughout the state, we have a new resource at the Department of Justice. The Consumer Protection Section has a computer which is now operational on a daily basis. All complaints are entered and the problems of consumers and providers of goods and services can be identified and tracked. The "top ten" categories of complaints from March 1-Dec. 31, 1983, (excluding the FTC-GM settlement) are taken from the annual report for 1983.

Description	Number of Complaints
Mail Orders	934
Motor Vehicles-Car Dealers	918
Creditors, Lending Institutions, Etc.	690
Health Spas, Dance Studios and Entertainment	433
Home Furnishings	350
Motor Vehicles-Manufacturing Problems	347
Home Appliances	319
Miscellaneous Products and Services	317
Home and Commercial Improvements and Repairs	304
Service Station Repair and Auto Supply Shops	286

(Note that the combined problems with motor vehicles equalled 1,551 complaints, representing 20.36 percent of the total.)

Consumer Protection Specialists and attorneys respond to complaints in over 100 different categories and are ready to assist consumers who write or call with a specific complaint or a request for information. In 1983 there were more than 11,000 written complaints and phone calls for information or for assistance with a complaint averaged over 250 each business day. The phone number to use is: 919-733-7741.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I've watched enough animal documentaries to know there isn't an animal alive who has not been tranquilized with a dart and fitted with a beeper to track his migratory habits. The beep has become the music of the '80s.

It was only a matter of time before we started tracking down our doctors, our plumbers and salesmen with electronic devices. Then someone figured out why not keep track of the most elusive thing on God's green earth... car keys. So, a transmitter was built to attach to the car keys and a receiver told us when we were within 30 feet of them. And the beep goes on.

In Florida, the honor system for low-risk prisoners is being subsidized by little beepers attached to their legs. When they stray too far out of bounds — beep beep, you have them cold.

Enter the newest electronic eye... a beeper to attach to your children. Parents carry a receiver the size of a deck of cards which picks up the signal sent by a transmitter attached to the child. It's called Child Watcher and sells for $74.95.

To a young parent that probably sounds like the greatest invention since black towels, but to a woman who has raised three to adulthood, believe me when I tell you it's sometimes best not to know.

When I put my child down for a nap and an hour later discovered he was sleeping with wet hair, a wet body that smelled like chlorine and a smile on his face, I figured why press.

If I had outfitted my daughter in a beeper, I might have worried when I sent her to the kitchen for a glass of water and lost her signal for 36 hours.

And who needs to be fast asleep and hear a beeper returning home at 1 a.m. signifying your teenager's approach and have it remain in the same spot until your imagination goes crazy?

No, no, the beeper experience has gotten out of hand. It's going to get crazy. I can feel it. Parents will be looking for their children and pick up the signal of a black bear hibernating in Montana. A woman will track down her plumber only to discover he's serving time in Florida, and just when you think your doctor is no farther away than the top of your refrigerator, you'll discover the signal is for your lost car keys.

When you come up with a beeper that not only tells me where the kids are... but what they're doing... beep me.

Two Gritton Men Killed In Wreck

Two Gritton residents were killed late Tuesday afternoon when the truck they were in collided with a Seaboard Coastline freight train.

According to Gritton Police Chief Linwood Outlaw, Joseph McCotter, 23, of Route 3, Gritton, and Theodore Roosevelt, 32, of Route 2, Gritton, a passenger in the McCotter vehicle were killed in the accident. The train engineer, William Eugene Boone of Rocky Mount, suffered no serious injuries.

The accident, reported at 5:45 p.m., occurred on Contentnea Drive in Gritton.

Outlaw said a preliminary interview with the train engineer indicated that McCotter tried to avoid colliding with the train, but could not turn his vehicle in time. There were no eye-witnesses to the accident.

A dollar value has not been assigned to damages; however, Outlaw said that the McCotter truck was destroyed and that the train's engine suffered minor damages. The incident was investigated by Officer V.A. Malpass.

UNOFFICIAL RESULTS COMPILED BY THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Martin Opts For Reagan In Heavy Voter Turnout

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County voters split party loyalties on Tuesday to give a Republican a definite nod in the presidential race while maintaining the county's traditional Democratic allegiance in their choice for national and state legislative seats.

A turnout of 9,069 persons out of a total of 13,823 registered voters went to the polls in what election officials say they are certain will set a new voting record for the county.

In the presidential race, Martin voters gave the Reagan-Bush combo a total of 4,263 votes — a relatively small margin of 395 over the Mondale-Ferraro ticket which drew 3,868 votes.

In the race for the U.S. Senate seat, Martin residents favored Democratic candidate Jim Hunt over incumbent Republican Sen. Jesse Helms with Hunt receiving 4,862 votes, a plus margin of 1,143 votes compared to the 3,719 votes accorded to Helms.

Gubernatorial Democratic candidate Rufus Edmisten was clearly Martin County's favorite son in that race, receiving 5,422 votes, with 2,916 votes cast for Republican candidate Jim Martin. The gap was wide too in the choice of Democratic candidate Robert Jordan III in the lieutenant governor's race. The tally was 5,223 for Jordan, and 2,191 for Republican John H. Carrington.

Veteran Democratic Congressman Walter B. Jones received the highest number of votes cast by Martin Countians for any individual, a total of 5,913 votes. His opponent, Herbert W. Lee, received 1,727 votes.

Democrat Tom Taft, in the race for State Senator representing the 9th District of which a few townships in Martin County are included, received 3,421 votes, with his Republican counterpart, Maynard Waters, tallying 1,337 votes.

World Offers Congratulations

By The Associated Press

Governments and politicians around the world congratulated President Reagan today on his re-election and many expressed hope his second term would lead to progress in disarmament.

In Czechoslovakia, however, a state-run newspaper described the results as a "a frontal attack" by American reactionaries, and in Lebanon the Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War, cited the election as it made a new threat to "blow up all American interests in Beirut and elsewhere in Lebanon."

The threat, telephoned to a Beirut newspaper, was addressed "to every American individual residing in Beirut" on the occasion of Reagan's re-election. The shadowy organization has claimed responsibility for several bloody suicide bombings of American installations in Lebanon.

Millions of people around the world stayed up late or got up early to watch or listen to election returns, thousands at parties thrown by U.S.

embassies. In Chile, the U.S. Embassy had to cut short the party when a curfew was imposed in Santiago in connection with the military government's declaration of a state of siege.

There was no immediate reaction from the Soviet Union, where leaders were engrossed in the annual Nov. 7 celebration of anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

The initial reaction from the Soviet bloc mainly appeared in the Communist-controlled media. Czechoslovakia, one of Moscow's closest allies, seemed most critical.

Prague radio said many Americans "believed Reagan's promises that if he is elected one of his principal priorities will be peace, disarmament and limitation of the number of nuclear weapons...even though in the preceding four years in the White House he pursued an entirely different policy."

Mlada Fronta, the state-run newspaper of Czechoslovak youth, said the election was "a frontal attack by American reaction."

In the Philippines, President Ferdinand E. Marcos said Reagan's victory would boost the fight of Third World countries against communist subversion and lessen the likelihood of nuclear war.

"As far as the developing nations like the Philippines are concerned, there is much to cheer about in this electoral victory," Marcos said on nationwide television.

In Australia, Prime Minister Bob Hawke said he expected that with such a large endorsement, Reagan would seek to renew initiatives with Moscow on arms control, and possibly meet with Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko.

"I know on the basis of fairly constant communications with President Reagan that it is his intention now in his second term to devote considerable attention to the overwhelmingly important question of disarmament, both in the nuclear and the conventional field," Hawke said.

Board Adopts Budget Plan

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Due to its participation in a pilot program, the Board of Education of the Pitt County Schools Tuesday adopted, almost four months late, the school system's initial budget resolution for the fiscal year 1984-85 (July 1, 1984-June 30, 1985).

The $31,206,851 in funds was allocated to the school system on July 1, but because the Pitt County Schools are participating in a state financial pilot program, the initial budget was only recently completed. The pilot project, a two-year trial program, allows the school board to determine how the state funds should be used by the school system for the best utilization of the money.

Of the total budget, $18,342,142 was appropriated by the State Public School Fund. This money will be used for regular instructional programs, special instructional programs and administration expenses, among other expenses.

The Local Current Expense Fund appropriated $6,822,242 of the total budget; in addition to regular and special instructional programs, this money will be allotted for vocational education and pupil support services.

The Federal Funds Grant provides $1,595,066 of the total, and this money will be used for such programs as tutoring for migrants and the handicapped and reading materials for the library.

The Capital Outlay Fund designated $1,733,902, and the Child Nutrition Fund earmarked $2,713,499 for Pitt County Schools for personnel and supplies.

The board also approved an annual application for state and federal funding for vocational education. The approval of the board was required for receipt of these funds.

Personnel recommendations relative to employment and resignations were approved by the board.

Bill Wiggins, principal of Ayden-Gritton High School, spoke to the board about the microvideo system recently purchased by the school's science department. The system consists of a microscope fitted with a video camera which displays a magnified picture of the organism on a television screen. Wiggins said students conducted fund-raising events and donations were given to the school so that the system could be purchased.

Superintendent Eddie West discussed several information items with the board.

Proposed changes for substitute teacher regulations were discussed, including a change in the rate paid a substitute teacher from $30 per day to $35 per day. The proposed regulations also include a change in the daily rate paid a long-term substitute teacher; after substituting for the same teacher for five days, the substitute teacher will receive a beginning teacher's salary.

Also discussed by the board were statewide promotion and retention standards proposed by the legislature in the last General Assembly. Phase one of the standards proposes a statewide annual testing program in grades 3, 6 and 8; a student will be promoted if he scores at or above the 25th percentile on this test and meets local requirements for promotion.

Changes in the definition and identification of exceptional children also were discussed by the board. The changes were proposed by the State Board of Education with a directive from the General Assembly. The new definitions clarify the terms "exceptional children" and "academically gifted children" and are more specific about which students will be classified in that manner.

High-Altitude Winds Force Delay In Shuttle's Launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Strong, "erratic," high-altitude crosswinds today forced postponement of the launch of space shuttle Discovery, and liftoff was rescheduled for Thursday for a mission in which free-flying astronauts are to capture two off-course satellites for return to Earth.

"We are no-go today and will have to scrub," launch director Bob Sieck told the astronaut crew of four men and one woman just 32 minutes before the planned launch time of 8:23 a.m. EST.

A weather balloon detected the stiff shear winds between 20,000 and 50,000 feet above the launch pad early this morning. When they failed to subside sufficiently, shuttle managers decided to call off the effort for the day.

The winds ranged from 66 to 80 mph, but from different directions. "The winds are very erratic," launch control spokesman Hugh Harris reported.

At about 40,000 feet — 7½ miles — a shuttle is subjected to maximum dynamic forces as it pushes up through the atmosphere toward orbit.

The crew was informed of the potential problem just an hour before the intended liftoff.

"We want to make you aware of a situation which is not very favorable for a launch today," Sieck told them. "We have a significant shear in the upper atmosphere, and the analysis here is we would exceed the structural load limits on the vehicle."

There was no immediate comment from the astronauts when the launch was scrubbed half an hour later, and they returned to their quarters. They had been aboard the spaceship for more than an hour, and the countdown had proceeded smoothly until the postponement.

The launch of Discovery, rescheduled for 7:17 a.m. Thursday, will send the astronauts on a challenging eight-day mission.

The astronauts' goal: Deploy the two satellites for paying customers and then track down and retrieve the Palapa B2 and Westar 6 payloads, which have been drifting in useless orbits since February.

"It will be a very challenging mission," said Jesse Moore, director of the shuttle program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The other crew members are pilot David Walker and mission specialists Anna Fisher, Joe Allen and Dale Gardner.

Mrs. Fisher, a physician, is the fourth American woman and first mother named to a space flight. She and her astronaut husband, Bill, are parents of a 14-month-old daughter.

The crew will release into separate orbits the commercial satellites for Telesat of Canada and Hughes Communications Services Inc.

That will clear the cargo bay for the attempted rescues of Palapa and Westar. The satellites, costing $35 million each, were launched successfully by another shuttle crew in February, but they fired into wrong orbits when their booster rockets failed. They are 224 miles high, 690 miles apart.

To chase down the targets, Hauck and Walker are to maneuver Discovery through a series of 44 engine firings at 17,400 mph.

When the shuttle steers to within 35 feet of Palapa, Allen and Gardner will don spacesuits and float out of the cabin into the open cargo bay. There, Allen will slip into a Buck-Rogers-like backpack and move over to the satellite, securing it with a pole-like device called a stinger.

Allen will push it close enough to the shuttle so that Mrs. Fisher can grab Palapa with the ship's 50-foot mechanical arm. Allen and Gardner will secure it in the bay. For the Westar rescue, the spacewalkers will reverse roles, with Gardner flying to the satellite.

Insurance underwriters hope to recoup $50 million to $60 million of the $180 million they paid in claims by refurbishing the satellites back on Earth for resale. NASA earns $5.5 million for the retrieval. The underwriters took ownership of the satellites from the original owners, the Indonesian government and Western Union.

The astronauts also will run an experiment for 3M Co., exploring the properties and behavior of organic crystals grown in space weightlessness. The experiment, the first of more than 70 that 3M hopes to conduct in space over the next decade, might have important applications to the company's business in imaging, electronics and health care.

The flight is the third in 10 weeks for the shuttle program. NASA had hoped to maintain a one-a-month launch rate for the next year, but those hopes were dashed Monday when NASA found that 2,800 of Challenger's 31,000 heat-resistant tiles will have to be removed because a bonding compound beneath them has softened, loosening their grip on the metal craft.

Officials said the flight, which had been set for Dec. 8, will be delayed at least six weeks. But they said they hoped by later next year to have the schedule back on track.

Arms Talks To Resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite their differences, the United States and the Soviet Union plan to hold talks on controlling the spread of nuclear weapons and technology around the world, an administration official says.

The talks, to open Nov. 28 in Moscow, are the fourth in a series of discussions that began two years ago.

But beyond that cooperative step, the official said Tuesday, there are no immediate plans for high-level talks between the two superpowers on arms control.

U.S. Watching Soviet Ship That May Carry Aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — American officials have watched closely for weeks a Soviet freighter believed to have docked in Nicaragua, but the White House warns against assuming the vessel contains MiG-21 combat aircraft.

The Nicaraguan Embassy issued a statement here Tuesday night denying broadcast reports of a shipment of MiG-21 warplanes and accusing the administration of trying to set the stage for an attack on the Central American nation.

In Los Angeles, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he was "not prepared to say here what the cargo is," but he did say that if the freighter carried MiG-21s, the administration "would certainly consider that an extreme escalation of the situation."

Speakes, speaking to reporters Tuesday night, said the administration has been "monitoring this situation for a number of days and watching it closely for days and weeks." He warned not to "jump to any conclusion" about what type of aircraft were aboard the vessel.

Speakes said it was "our belief that the ship docked this evening in Nicaragua."

Quoting intelligence sources, CBS News reported that the administration determined that the cargo were warplanes, it would consider an attack to destroy them.

CBS and NBC each quoted intelligence sources Tuesday night as saying a Soviet freighter bound for Nicaragua could be carrying MiG-21s.

CBS quoted intelligence sources as saying the freighter left a Black Sea port in September and that, following its departure, satellite photos showed shipping crates of a kind used for transporting MiG-21s were gone from the pier.

NBC quoted sources as saying the vessel had docked at the port of Corinto.

Earlier, the network reported a Bulgarian ship had tied up at the port of El Bluff with a consignment of Mi-2 attack helicopters. It quoted a Pentagon official as saying such aircraft would be "more threatening to the region" than the MiG fighters sought from the Soviet Union by Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

The network said the shipment consisted of four such helicopters, which could be used with devastating effect against CIA-backed "contra" guerrillas seeking to topple the leftist Sandinista government.

Pentagon sources, speaking on condition that they not be identified, told The Associated Press they had no reliable evidence that the Soviets had shipped MiG-21s to Nicaragua. The sources said the MiG-21s were said to have been transported by helicopter to attack the planes.

A Pentagon spokesman said that Cmdr Richard S. Manning had made a comment on the reports.

The Nicaraguan Embassy said its government "denies any such international conspiracy" and the United States "should not attempt to create conditions which would increase the risk of escalation of the conflict in Nicaragua."

The Nicaraguan statement called on the administration to stop its threat and allow the international community and the people of the United States to judge the administration's actions.

The White House said it was "not prepared to say here what the cargo is," but he did say that if the freighter carried MiG-21s, the administration "would certainly consider that an extreme escalation of the situation."

Speakes said it was "our belief that the ship docked this evening in Nicaragua."

Quoting intelligence sources, CBS News reported that the administration determined that the cargo were warplanes, it would consider an attack to destroy them.

Speakes said that "any escalation is out of line and inconsistent with what they are indicating and wish to achieve in Nicaragua."

The Sandinista candidates won hefty majorities in national elections in Nicaragua on Sunday.

Speakes said that if "the Nicaraguans were serious about the business of elections they would allow the news media the opportunity to come into port and see what's there."

In October, there were reports of a shipment of MiGs to Nicaragua and that nation's embassy here issued a statement, saying that "press reports of this nature are in fact a pretext used by the U.S. government to escalate the aggression by bombing attacks against different economic and military targets in the country."

Reprieves Granted To Two Murderers

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Florida judges have granted Timothy Palmes and Donald Klein reprieves from their scheduled execution today in the nation's first simultaneous execution of two men.

Maxwell, convicted of killing a man during a robbery, and Palmes, condemned for stabbing a man 18 times, had been scheduled to die on the other at 7 a.m. today in the electric chair at Ft. Lauderdale.

In a two-sentence order Tuesday afternoon, the Florida Third District Appeals in Atlanta denied Palmes' appeal for a stay of execution until 11 a.m. Thursday to give his attorneys time to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the high court refuses to stay Palmes' execution, he will die by the death Thursday because of a scheduled stay of execution.

Earlier Tuesday, Florida's Supreme Court granted a stay of the execution of Maxwell, 29, until conditions of the appeals are met.

Palmes, 37, is under his second death sentence for the 1975 slaying of James Stone, who was stabbed 18 times after being held in a wooden box and dropped into a river.

His attorney, Tom McQuinn, argued Tuesday that Maxwell and Palmes' co-defendant were unfairly sentenced to death without adequate testimony for the prosecution to prove their guilt.

Maxwell is under his first death sentence for the 1974 slaying of the death of Donald Klein, 66, over Klein's shot and pistol in a parking lot on a country club golf course.

His attorney, Steven Malone, asked that the 23-year-old be given a stay and order a new sentencing hearing for 7:30 a.m. Thursday. Malone's appeal and appellate lawyers were in court Tuesday.

Malone said the lawyer appointed to represent Maxwell had not obtained prison, educational, psychological, psychiatric and medical records that could have proved Maxwell had a "chronic and severe organic brain disorder and other social and family problems."

The executions would have been scheduled for 7:30 a.m. Thursday. The Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment in 1978.

Soviet General Stripped Of Rank

MOSCOW (AP) — Nikolai Shchelokov, fired as interior minister in a 1987 anticorruption drive, has been stripped of his military rank as a general, the news agency Tass reports.

A decree by the Soviet Parliament accused Shchelokov of "abuse of office and discredit of the military rank of Soviet general," Tass said Tuesday.

Shchelokov, 73, was a confidant of the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Yuri Andropov, the former KGB security police chief, and reportedly presided over the 1987 anticorruption drive.

Shchelokov had headed the Interior Ministry for 10 years. The ministry controls the national police and a special security force, the KGB's main branch.

There were charges that he was involved in embezzlement and misappropriation of property, including Western-made cars he used for police work.

Percy Out As GOP Falls Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats cut into Republican control of the Senate and ended the 18-year career of GOP Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois while Sen. Jesse Helms, a kingpin of the "New Right," survived a hard-fought challenge in North Carolina.

The Democrats captured Republican seats in Iowa and Tennessee as well as in Illinois but lost one in Kentucky, giving them with a net gain of two. Republicans wrested control of the Senate from the Democrats in 1980 and strengthened their edge to 55-45 in 1982.

Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, defeated North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt in the highest-priced Senate campaign in history, with the two candidates spending a combined total of more than $20 million.

Percy, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, lost to Democratic Rep. Paul Simon after a campaign in which the veteran senator shed his liberal image and embraced President Reagan's conservatism.

In Iowa, Democratic Rep. Tom Harkin cut short the one-term Senate career of GOP Sen. Roger Jepsen, who was embarrassed during the campaign by disclosures that he had visited a club that later was closed on prostitution charges.

Republicans upset two-term Sen. Walter D. Huddleston in Kentucky, but Democratic Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan survived a close race with GOP candidate Jack Lousma, a former astronaut.

Democrats conceded in advance that they had little chance of recapturing control this year, but placed high priority on making gains that would put them in a strong position for the 1986 elections, when 22 Republican seats and only 12 Democratic seats will be at stake.

Democrats held onto the seats of retiring Democratic senators in Massachusetts and West Virginia and regained the Tennessee seat of GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who is leaving office for a possible presidential bid four years from now.

But Rep. Phil Gramm, a former Democrat who switched parties after supporting Reagan tax and budget bills, kept the seat of retiring Texas Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, in the Republican column.

In Kentucky, Mitch McConnell, chief executive of the state's largest county and a former mid-level Justice Department official in the Ford administration, upset Huddleston, who said he would seek a recount.

GOP Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, overcame state Sen. Margie Hendriksen despite publicity about a real estate fee paid to Hatfield's wife by a backer of a Midwest oil pipeline plan Hatfield had expressed support for.

Democrats kept the Massachusetts seat that Sen. Paul Tsongas is giving up for health reasons, as Lt. Gov. John Kerry, who rose to prominence as an anti-war Vietnam veteran, defeated conservative GOP businessman Raymond Shamie.

In West Virginia, Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV was chosen to succeed a fellow Democrat, Sen. Jennings Randolph, who was first elected to Congress in 1932. Rockefeller defeated Republican John R. Raese.

Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey won re-election by a healthy margin that is bound to strengthen speculation about the former professional basketball player as a potential Democratic presidential or vice presidential candidate. Bradley defeated Mary Mochary, former mayor of Montclair.

Republican Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, one of two women in the Senate and the only one facing the voters this year, won re-election handily over James R. Maher, an investment executive.

Democratic hopes to regain a Southern seat they lost six years ago were dashed when GOP Sen. Thad Cochran, 46, turned back a challenge by Winter.

Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond, 81, of South Carolina, president pro tempore of the Senate and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, easily defeated Melvin Pervis Jr.

The chairman of the Budget Committee, Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, won a third term over Judith A. Pratt, a Democratic state legislator who was one of nine women attempting to unseat incumbent senators.

The woman who had made the strongest showing in the polls, Minnesota's Secretary of State Joan Growe, bowed to first-term GOP Sen. Rudy Boschwitz.

Two members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, both seeking their second terms, won re-election by big margins over female candidates who campaigned on their experience as state legislators. In Maine, GOP Sen. William Cohen defeated Elizabeth H. Mitchell, majority leader of the state House of Representatives. In Virginia, Republican Sen. John Warner bested Edythe Harrison, a former member of the state House of Delegates.

Republicans Score Modest Victory In House

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans won a modest gain in their House minority ranks, but voter loyalty shielded most incumbent Democrats from President Reagan's re-election avalanche and soured GOP dreams that the new Congress would accord him a second legislative honeymoon.

Though several contests remained unsettled as the count wore on today, it appeared that Reagan's coattails were less than half as long as in 1980, when the GOP picked up 33 House seats and won control of the Senate.

Reagan's own numbers were even more dazzling this time, but the GOP failed to regain the 26 House seats it lost in 1982. Republican leaders had eyed that target in hopes they could restore the "working majority" coalition with Southern Democrats that handed Reagan one congressional victory after another in his first two years.

With 426 of the 435 House contests decided, Democrats had won 249 seats, 31 more than needed to control the chamber, and were leading in four undecided races. Republicans had won 177 seats and were leading in five. By those numbers, the net gain for the GOP would be 14 seats.

That's enough added muscle to improve Reagan's odds on some closely contested issues on which he was forced to retreat this year, including MX missile production and covert aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

But it doesn't shape up as a return to the combination of Republicans and Democratic "Boll Weevils" that ran roughshod over Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and other liberal leaders in 1981-83.

O'Neill dismissed the tidal wave that swept Reagan to a second term, saying it was not a mandate for his conservative agenda but proved instead that "he is the greatest television artist we have ever had. He is a very popular man."

"But the voters sent Democrats to Congress — as a mandate to them, as a safety net for the American public," O'Neill said.

The speaker added that if it becomes clear that increased taxes will be necessary to trim bulging federal budget deficits, Reagan will have to take the lead.

Any tax program "will have to come from the White House," O'Neill said.

Reagan ... broke all spending records for a Senate race.

Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was defeated by Democratic Rep. Paul Simon, which put Helms in line to head the prestigious committee if he chooses to give up his chairmanship of the Senate Agriculture Committee, a post his state's tobacco farmers view as more important.

The closest statewide race in the nation was for governor of Vermont where Democrat Madeleine Kunin held a narrow lead over Republican John Easton.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., who used his chairmanship of a House Appropriations subcommittee to wage a powerful action against Reagan's Central American policy, was defeated by Republican challenger Helen Dietrich Bentley in her third run against the veteran House member.

The 1984 campaign was Reagan's final appeal for electoral support, and it proved his greatest electoral victory, surpassing the landslide vote by which he defeated Jimmy Carter in 1980.

"Tonight is the end of nothing," he told supporters. "It's the beginning of everything."

Four years ago Reagan's landslide carried Republicans to control of the Senate and to a gain of 33 House seats that enabled them to forge a conservative coalition that gave him majorities for his budget and tax cutting proposals.

But that coalition was shattered in 1982 when the Democrats gained 26 seats. Republicans hoped a Reagan landslide would enable them to recoup their 1982 losses.

But as the returns on House races came in, Michael Johnson, a spokesman for House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois, said, "We're not going to have effective control of the place with those kind of numbers."

And O'Neill was quick to claim his own mandate.

"The voters sent Democrats to Congress as a mandate to them, as a safety net for the American public," said the speaker.

O'Neill said any proposal to raise taxes to deal with federal budget deficits would have to come from the White House.

The Democratic speaker called Reagan's victory a tribute to "the tremendous popularity of the president of the United States. We have never seen his equal."

Reagan won 49 states with 525 electoral votes. Mondale won his home state of Minnesota with 10 electoral votes and the District of Columbia with three.

Reagan's electoral vote total was the highest in history, surpassing Franklin D. Roosevelt's 1936 total of 523 electoral votes.

In the popular vote, with 94 percent of the nation's precincts reporting, Reagan had 50,332,332 for 59 percent, Mondale had 34,870,819 for 41 percent.

The battle for control of Congress saw the Democrats pick up two Senate seats. In the final race decided Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., beat back a challenge from Republican Jack Lousma, a former astronaut. Republicans entered the election with a 55 to 45 margin in the Senate.

In the House, the Democrats had won or were leading for 253 seats; the GOP had won or were leading for 182 others. If that trend holds, the GOP would gain 14 seats, short of the 26 seats they lost two years ago. The Democrats entered the election with a House majority of 267 to 168.

In the 13 races for governor the Republicans were winners in four states previously held by Democrats, while two GOP incumbents — John Spellman of Washington and Allen Olson of North Dakota — lost to Democratic challengers.

Democrats captured Republican Senate seats in Tennessee and Iowa, while Republican Mitch McConnell upset Democratic Sen. Walter Huddleston of Kentucky.

The winner in Tennessee was Rep. Albert Gore Jr., who easily defeated Republican Victor Ashe in the battle for the seat vacated by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

misten's biggest margins came in Greenville 3 (859 to 31) and Greenville 4 (1,114 to 292).

With 99.3 percent of the precincts reported statewide, Martin — who pledged "to work with the leadership of the General Assembly, to show them that I respect their prerogatives" and "have the kind of administration we can all be proud of" — had 54.2 percent of the votes, with Edmisten credited with 45.5 percent.

In the 1st Congressional District race, incumbent Walter Jones of Farmville, seeking his 10th term in Washington, won handily over Republican Herb Lee of Greenville, with 22,524 votes in Pitt County to Lee's 9,709. In the 21-county district, Jones, with 299 of the district's 301 precincts reported at mid-morning, led 121,282 to 60,255 for Lee.

In the 9th Senate District Race, Democrat Tom Taft of Greenville, chairman of the State Ports Authority, took 16,576 votes to win over Republican Maynard Waters of Beaufort County, who polled 9,501 votes in Pitt County. In the district, which includes portions of Pitt, Beaufort and Martin Counties, Taft received 28,225 votes to Waters' 15,475, including 8,228 votes in Beaufort County, where Waters received 4,637.

In Martin County, Taft received 3,421 votes to Water's 1,337.

Taft said this morning that "I'm thrilled that I could still maintain this kind of majority," in the face of the strong Republican vote exhibited. "The coattails were running long," Tuesday, Taft said.

Saying Waters campaigned hard, Taft noted that "a political campaign is a team effort, and a political victory is a team victory. I couldn't have done it without the loyal help of so many friends and supporters."

"I feel humble this morning," Taft said.

Democrats won in Pitt County, as well as statewide, in the contested races for lieutenant governor, council of state posts, and judicial offices.

Bob Jordan, facing Republican John Carrington for lieutenant governor, took 19,992 votes in Pitt County, to Carrington's 12,023. State-wide, Jordan, the highest ranking Democrat to win, received 54.6 percent of the votes with 97.3 percent of the precincts reporting, while Carrington polled 45.4 percent.

Unofficial Pitt County totals in contested Council of State races include: incumbent Secretary of State Thad Eure 21,167 to 10,289 for Patric Dorsey of New Bern; incumbent State Auditor Edward Renfrow 20,155 to 10,050 for James Hicks; incumbent Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham 22,378 to 8,968 for Leo Tew; incumbent Commissioner of Labor John Brooks, a former Greenville resident, 21,200 to 9,947 for Margaret Plemmons; incumbent Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips 19,908 to 11,375 for Gene Baker of Wayne County; attorney general hopeful Lacy Thornburg 19,835 to 10,733 for Allen Foster; and commissioner of insurance hopeful Jim Long 19,741 to 11,073 for Richard Morgan.

In the judicial races Pitt voters gave Henry Frye 20,320 votes in his bid for associate justice of the Supreme Court while Clarence Boyan received 10,460 votes. Burley Mitchell Jr., also seeking a Supreme Court seat, received 20,356 votes to 10,253 for Arthur J. Donaldson.

For Superior Court seats, William Griffin took 20,896 votes to 9,542 for James Vosburg, while Charles Lamm, with 20,148 votes, defeated Bruce Briggs who received 9,107 ballots.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which would require the attorney general and district attorneys in North Carolina to be authorized to practice law before their election or appointment, was approved in Pitt County by a margin of 23,630 to 6,277 against.

Uncontested races in Tuesday's voting helped in the re-election of state Treasurer Harlan Boyles; the election of Bob Martin of Bethel to the North Carolina Senate from the new 6th District, which includes portions of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe and Wilson counties; the re-election of Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. to the N.C. House of Representatives from the 9th House District, which includes Greene County and most of Pitt County; as well as the election of L.M. "Mutt" Brinkley of Ahoskie to represent the 6th House District, which includes Bethel and Carolina townships in Pitt County, Hertford County and portions of Martin and Bertie counties.

Also unopposed in Tuesday's voting were: incumbents Charles Gaskins and Bruce Strickland, and newcomer Eugene James to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners; incumbent Register of Deeds Elvira T. Allred; District Court judge candidates Burt Aycock Jr., Randall Hunter, Lee Lumpkin, James Martin, James Ragan and Horton Rountree, Superior Court Judge David Reid of Greenville, was also unopposed in his bid for re-election.

Elsewhere, incumbent representatives were re-elected. They include Republican Jim Broyhill of the 10th District, dean of the congressional delegation; and Democrats Walter Jones of the 1st District, Tim Valentine of the 2nd District, Charles Whitley of the 3rd District, Steve Neal of the 5th District, Charles Rose of the 7th District and Bill Hefner of the 8th District.

The Democratic Party retained its monopoly of the Council of State, despite some shaky starts.

Lacy H. Thornburg, a former Superior Court judge from Webster, defeated Republican attorney Allen Foster of Greensboro to replace Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Jim E. Long, a former Democratic state representative and counsel to House Speaker Liston Ramsey, defeated Pinehurst Republican Richard T. Morgan to replace Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, 84, beat Republican Patric Dorsey of New Bern, keeping the job he has held 48 years.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks won a third term over Margaret F. Plemmons, a Republican from Winston-Salem.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips won re-election over Gene S. Baker of Pikeville in Wayne County.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow won a third term against Republican James E. Hicks of Conover.

State Supreme Court Justices

Burley Mitchell and Henry Frye fought back from very early deficits and pulled off victories over Republican opponents.

Republicans gained several General Assembly seats, as such prominent Democratic lawmakers as Sen. Craig Lawing of Mecklenburg County and Cecil Jenkins of Cabarrus County were defeated.

Rose Seeks To Snap Loss String

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
 One last time, Rose High School's Rampants try to salvage what has become a horror show of a season. The Rampants play host to Elizabeth City Northeastern on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, winding up the year for both teams.

For a team that started the season with such brilliance, the 1984 Rose football team has sunk to the lowest depths. From a 2-0-1 start, Rose is now 2-6-1, having not won since tailback Anthony Cobb went out with a knee injury in the final non-conference game of the season. In the Big East, the Rampants have been goose-egged. This is their last chance for a league victory.

Last week, they came close, as they have on several other occasions. But Hunt held off a late challenge, and a 48-yard field goal attempt by Brian Bridges was about five yards short, preserving a 9-7 victory for the Warriors.

"It's like I said Friday night," Coach Chip Williams, winding up his first year at Rose, said. "We go on the field with an inferiority complex. We get a couple of scores down and then realize that we can play with them. We come back, but not enough. It's a case of too little, too late."

That was the case against Hunt.

The Warriors drove into the end zone on their first possession to take a 7-0 lead. Later in the first half they benefitted from a safety when Rose had a bad snap from center when trying to punt out of the end zone. The ball went through Jimmy Gillihan's raised hands and out the back of the end zone for the two-pointer. It proved to be the margin of victory.

Rose came back in the second half to twice drive on scoring threats. But two fumbles, one by running back Tom Moore and the other by quarterback Ervin Best, ended those threats. Another threat ended on an interception of Best.

But still, the Rampants fought back, moving within Bridges' distance in the closing seconds. But, the loss of seven yards on second down pushed the ball back and forced Bridges to try from 48 yards rather than about 40, had the loss not occurred.

"We were hoping to pick up a few more yards on the play, to get a little closer," Williams said at the time. A missed block, however, forced the play outside, and it resulted in the loss. "We thought they'd be in pass coverage, expecting us to pass," Williams said. "They rotated away from the play at the snap, and if one tackle had hit his block, we could have gained a few more yards. At least we wouldn't have lost seven. In fact, we could have gained a lot of yards on a screen."

"I knew the field goal would be a long shot, but we were out of time out, and I didn't think that we'd have time to get the field goal unit on the field before time ran out if we had a pass complete anywhere on the field."

"Too, Ervin had been intercepted a couple of plays before (the ball was returned because of pass interference), and I didn't want to take the chance of another interception. Maybe I was too conservative," Williams said.

One factor in the game was the ejection of Hunt's nose guard midway the half. Both the Hunt player and a Rampant were thrown out for trading blows. "Up to then, their nose guard had dominated the line of scrimmage," Williams said.

And that has him worried about Thursday's game.

"Northeastern has a top college prospect in their nose guard, Anthony Smith. Good nose guards have given us trouble all year long," the coach said.

The Eagles have a talented team, according to Williams. "Smith is just awesome, and it should be quite a challenge to our kids to play against him."

The leading active rusher for the Eagles now is Prute McCaffity, who has gained 344 yards on 51 carries. He has a 6.7 per carry average. Percell Sharpe was the leading groundgainer for the team, but he has been dropped from the team for the remainder of the season.

The Eagle quarterback is Marvin Sutton, who has hit 48 of 108 passes for 610 yards and six touchdowns. Malcolm Moring and Gerald Spence are his top receivers.

"I'm basically disappointed that we haven't improved toward the end of the season. My first season at Bertie, we were 4-6, but we won four of our last five games. We got better. Maybe we're playing a little better, but we're still not winning. We should play hard, no matter what. But we need to win and a lot of the problem is between the ears."

Northeastern comes into the game with a 5-3-1 overall record and a 3-3 Big East mark. The Eagles opened the season with a 7-7 tie against Edenton, then beat 2-A Camden, 56-0 and Perquimans, 36-8.

But they lost to Fike, 19-7 and Hunt 21-6, before beating Kinston, 26-21. That was followed by a 20-6 win over Northern Nash and a 28-12 loss to Rocky Mount. Last Friday, the Eagles topped Beddingfield, 14-13.

Wilson Fike has already wrapped up one of the league's post-season playoff berths. However, they must beat Rocky Mount on Friday to clinch the Division II spot. A Rocky Mount win would send the Gryphons into the number one slot with Fike taking the Division II berth.

Wilson Hunt is also still in the running for the Division II spot, but must win and see Rocky Mount lose to earn the berth. The Warriors would receive it under those circumstances since they beat Rocky Mount in their meeting.

Emory Remains Ever Positive As Long Year Moves To End

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
 While things may appear dark for the East Carolina Pirates as they bring a losing season to a close, Coach Ed Emory remains ever positive and is hopeful his team can pull out the final game this Saturday to have a good note to build for the 1985 season.

"I will make something positive out of the negative," Emory said. "We're not where we were two years ago. Our scout team line right now is better than the line we had two years ago. We can make progress."

Not that the coach feels it will be easy. "We're going to evaluate everything. Every year, our players have a form to evaluate me and their position coach. The coaches evaluate each other and I evaluate them. We evaluate everything: the study center, sports medicine, the strength program, the equipment program, Belk dorm, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Thursday night socials."

"And we're fortunate this year that we end our season so early. It gives us a chance to get things done earlier and begin making the changes that have to be made."

Some of those changes, it has been rumored, will be in the staff. Emory was non-committal on that. "I'll talk with each of the coordinators and with each individual coach. A coach has to be able to recruit, know his X's and O's and be able to teach. We haven't done a good job teaching this year, but I do feel we have a good, a great staff. But you have to look at everything. It's important to have continuity too, and we've had too much turnover in the past."

Emory added that he would do everything in his power — within the university and NCAA rules — to make the Pirates a winner.

And playing within those rules has cost the Pirates something this weekend. Two senior players, safety Stefon Adams and tight end Damon Pope, will not dress. Both were suspended for the remaining game. Emory did not elaborate on the reasons for the suspensions.

Randy Watts, a defensive end, will also miss the final game, and Emory said that there is a possibility that another player might miss the game. He said these were due to academic policies. "We have a rule that if (a player) cuts class or misses study center, he has to come out the next morning to run. If he misses that, he's given one more chance, then suspended for the next game. That's why several players didn't play last week."

"I said two weeks ago that it's harder to sustain a program than to build one. I'm still a great believer, but we have to do the job the way it has to be done. We're certainly not in a bankrupt situation."

Emory admitted that there are problems on the team. "You always have problems. We had problems when we were 8-3, but they seem to be bigger when we're 2-8. We have academic, social and motivational problems."

"But you win with people. We have to recruit the best and take care of those who are here now. But they have to do it our way. And if I could change anything I've done this year, I think I would have been tougher from the very start."

Emory said that the year had been a domino situation. "The Temple game was devastating to our offense. I think that if we had beaten them, we would have beaten Central Michigan, and if we had beaten Central Michigan, we would have beaten N.C. State, and if we had beaten N.C. State, we would have beaten Pittsburgh. This is what South Carolina has this year. 'Mo' (momentum) is on their side. If 'Mo' jumps on your side you can go a long way."

The coach said the absence of two starting linemen, among them Tim Dumas (who played his first game Saturday and graded 80 percent), hurt the offense. The quarterback situation — having inexperienced people who couldn't do the things they needed to do to beat the great teams, was another factor. "Our tight end play wasn't that good and our line play early didn't give the quarterbacks a chance."

"But we have four quarterbacks with training now. That's going to mean a great difference to us next year."

Emory said the Pirates have a number of fine players who are being red-shirted this year. "We were tempted to bring some of them up, but we brought out only one of them (linebacker John Britt). Maybe you can call it guts or maybe you can call it stupidity in not bringing them up, to build for the future."

"You can't win on defense without good big people up front. We haven't had that all year. I'm not protecting the secondary — when you're in 'three-coverage' and you still get beat, you shouldn't be protected. But not controlling the line of scrimmage cost us. If we have to use all 30 scholarships to get the defense right, we will."

Emory said he was sorry that the season had come down to such an ending for the seniors. "We have some great seniors, too. Some of them people have never heard of."

He listed backs Reggie Branch, walkon Ike Hill, and Jimmy Walden; receivers Ricky Nichols and Henry Williams; and linemen Norman Quick, Mac Powers, Brad Henson, and Tim Mitchell along with Pope at tight end.

"What really hurts the most — more than losing Saturday (to Southwest Louisiana) — was losing Henry Williams for the final game. Few of our players wanted to win more than Henry. Penalties hurt his returns this year."

On defense, he named Dave Thomas ("a five-year walkon that nobody knows"), Curtis Wyatt, Ronald and Donald Reid, Tyrone Johnson, P.J. Jordan, Kevin Banks, Chris Santa Cruz, Tony Smith, James Martin (who started for the first time in his 5-year career Saturday), Kevin Samuels and Stefon Adams.

On special teams, he cited punter Jeff Bolch, who — as a graduate student — received his first grant this year, and placekicker David Hennenlotter — who may see his first action this Saturday due to an injury to Jeff Heath. Heath was injured falling on steps Monday, suffering a severe sprain.

"Not many people know of Chris Duran, either. Chris had cancer three years ago and was told he had six months to live. But he's still with us and is a positive influence for us."

"Our leadership wasn't what I would have wanted this year, but the character and want to were there. I'm just sorry that we can't be 10-0 for these fine young men," Emory added.

Emory said he felt that the Pirates could have beaten Southwestern last week, but the defense didn't play well at all. "Our second half performance on defense was probably the worst since I've been here," he said.

"We did play hard on offense, but the fumbles hurt us too. We stopped ourselves — they never stopped us."

"It's just not easy to go on the road seven times and win."

The Pirates close out the season at home Saturday, facing Southern Mississippi. Kickoff is 1:30 p.m.

Hernandez Selected AL's Most Valuable Player

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Puerto Rico's Election Day restrictions cramped Willie Hernandez's party, but not his exuberance upon learning he had been voted the American League's Most Valuable Player.

No alcoholic beverages, not even beer, can be sold on Election Day in the U.S. Commonwealth. Friends, though, joined the Detroit Tigers' ace relief pitcher in polishing off two bottles of champagne left over from last week, when Hernandez celebrated winning the AL Cy Young Award as the league's best pitcher.

"We're celebrating OK. But you know what's going on in Puerto Rico right now, with elections," Hernandez said Tuesday. "When they called me to tell me I won, we just opened up the two bottles in my house and said, 'Let's celebrate again.'"

"After last week, winning the Cy Young Award, a lot of the people were telling me I was the one who was supposed to win this. But it's unbelievable, winning these two awards in the same year for a relief pitcher ... it's kind of difficult, kind of impossible," said the left-hander, who led the Tigers to the world championship with a 9-3 record, 32 saves in 33 opportunities and a 1.92 earned run average.

"It was unbelievable. It was like I have another win, like winning the World Series again," he added.

Hernandez became the fourth American League pitcher to win both awards in the same season. Rollie Fingers of Milwaukee did it in 1981, Oakland's Vida Blue in 1971, and Denny McLain of Detroit, the last Tiger MVP, in 1968.

National League pitchers Bob Gibson of St. Louis in 1968, Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles in 1963 and Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956 also scored sweeps.

Hernandez is the third Puerto Rican to win a Most Valuable Player award. Orlando Cepeda was selected the National League MVP in 1967 when he was with St. Louis and the late Roberto Clemente of the Pittsburgh Pirates was the NL choice in 1972. Hernandez received 16 of the 28 first-place votes and 306 points in balloting by baseball writers to outdistance Minnesota first baseman Kent Hrbek, who had five first-place votes and 247 points. Hrbek batted .311 with 27 home runs and 107 runs batted in, leading the Twins into surprising pennant contention last season.

Dan Quisenberry, bullpen star for the Kansas City Royals, finished third with five first-place votes and 235 points. Quisenberry was 6-3 with 44 saves, one short of his major league record.

After the World Series, Hernandez exercised his contract option demanding that the Tigers trade him. The move was considered a negotiating ploy, but he would become a free agent on March 15 if the club is unable to sign him or trade him.

"I'm going to stay with Detroit," Hernandez said. "I don't want to talk nothing about my contract. But I just know I'm going to be in Detroit. There's no doubt ... I just want to make a little more money."

Baltimore first baseman Eddie Murray, who received the other two first-place votes, finished fourth in the balloting, followed by AL batting champion Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees, Detroit's Kirk Gibson, Tony Armas of Boston, the Yankees' Dave Winfield, Detroit's Alan Trammell and Willie Wilson of Kansas City.

Baltimore's Cal Ripken Jr., last year's MVP, received just one 10th-place vote this year.

Hernandez, who had managed just 27 saves in seven previous major league seasons, was acquired in an off-season trade with Philadelphia and became the ace of the Tiger bullpen. He teamed with right-hander Aurelio Lopez to help the Tigers to a 35-5 start as Detroit won the AL pennant, leading from opening day.

Where Did It Go?

Sanderson Ends Rampant Hopes With 10-1 Victory

Unbeaten and number one ranked Raleigh Sanderson sprinted past Rose High School last night, 10-1, in the opening round of the State Soccer Playoffs.

The Spartans, unbeaten over 48 straight games coming into the contest, took a 2-0 lead over the first 30 minutes of play and were never headed.

Thirty minutes into the game, however, Sanderson suddenly caught fire and kicked in six goals in the final ten minutes of the first half to roar out to an 8-0 lead.

"It would have been awfully easy to give up at that point," Rose Coach Will Wiberg said, "but I'll give the guys credit. They didn't give up and hung in there and played them almost even in the second half."

Rose avoided a shutout at the 64:00 mark as Jordy Smith made his 16th goal of the season, assisted by Mike Maxon. Scott Simpkins, Robert Larrison, and Mark Honeycutt each scored two goals for the Spartans, while Bruce Arne, Todd Renner, Sparky Colten and John Matthewson each had one.

Sanderson advances to the second round, meeting the winner of the Jacksonville-Swainsboro game.

"All of our seniors played well," Wiberg said, "especially Lewis Robbins. We also had good games from David Lee, Travis King, Jim Carter and Scott Davis."

Sanderson outshot Rose, 37-7 in the contest, and goalie Gregg Ward had 15 saves.

"Sanderson is twice as good as last year," Wiberg said. Rose, in its third year of varsity play, advanced to the playoffs for the second straight year, meeting Sanderson both times in the first round. Last year, Rose fell 7-0 to the Spartans. "They knew we were ready for them this year and they were up for the game. I think our kids deserve a lot of credit for hanging in there and getting on the scoreboard. I believe they've only given up four other goals this year."

"But I think our program has come a long way. We've been playing on the varsity level only three years. Sanderson, however, has some players who've been playing together since they were five years old. They have a very solid, established program."

Sanderson, the defending state champion, advances with an 18-0-1 record while Rose ends the year at 13-5, after winning the Big East Conference title for the first time this season.

To The Sports Editor:

At the risk of being called reactionary, I wish to say I found your column Monday irksome. Your glee at EC's football problems this year has been barely restrained. Your ability to be so knowledgeable about the Pirates while attending about half the games is amazing.

Probably the worst thing you wrote was that twelfth paragraph. I quote "As in any losing year, there are other problems too, which we will not go into." What kind of directionless hokum was that? If you have something to say — spit it out!

Yeah — I am frustrated with the Pirates' season. I intend to find some constructive outlet for that frustration. Real Pirates don't die!

Page, Brown, Randleman Keep Top Poll Positions

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer

Greensboro Page and Kannapolis Brown enter the last week of the regular high school football season as the No. 1 teams in the Associated Press polls, while Randleman closes out its schedule as tops in the 2-A-1-A division.

Page took all but one of the 18 first-place votes cast by a panel of prep sportswriters from across the state in the 4-A division. Wilson Fike got the other first-place vote, but took second place by a 179-163 count.

Kannapolis Brown needed overtime last Friday to take a 24-17 victory over South Rowan. It retained first place with 15 votes and 185 points, followed by SouthWest Edgecombe with 166 points and two first-place votes. West Henderson was third with 150 points and South Point was fourth at 123 points. The latter two received first-place votes.

Randleman got a jump on much of the state and is done for the year with a 9-1 record. It took 177 points and 14 first-place votes. Wallace-

Rose Hill moved up a notch with three first-place votes and 158 points. Newton-Conover was third, up from fifth, with 126 points although it did not get any first-place votes. Jamesville remained in fourth place at 123 with Forest Hills moving from seventh to fifth at 83 points, both of which getting single nominations for first.

Closing out the 4-A top 10 were Fayetteville 71st, Scotland County, Raleigh Millbrook, Northern Durham, Gastonia Hunter Huss, East Burke, Henderson Vance and Rocky Mount.

Vance moved up to replace Charlotte Garinger, which lost a 13-5 decision to Charlotte Independence. Rocky Mount edged Kinston 7-0 to gain entry into the poll.

Clinton finished out the top five in the 3-A poll, followed by Waynesville Tuscola, Tarboro, West Craven, Statesville and Shelby, East Wake tell out of the top 10 following its 17-7 loss to South Johnston.

The final five in the 2-A-1-A were Jordan-Matthews, Maiden, Fuquay-Varina, West Montgomery and Whiteville. Fuquay-Varina dropped from second place following its loss to Clayton 34-20.

Three Hold Top Slots; Cougs Slip To Second In 3-A Pack

Greensboro Page, Randleman and Jamesville held onto their number one spots in the Daily Reflector's High School Rankings this week, but 3-A leader SouthWest Edgecombe slipped out of first in its division.

Kannapolis moved back into the lead in the 3-A ranks with a total of 71 1/2 points, while SouthWest Edgecombe is now second with 68.

Greensboro Page continues to lead the 4-A ranks with a 75 1/2 point rating. Wilson Fike is again second with 70 points, while Fayetteville 71st remains third with 69 1/2 points.

Below that, there is a shake up among the 4-A's with two new teams joining in the top ten: as Fayetteville Byrd and East Burke tie for the tenth spot with 36 points each.

South Point remains the number three team in the 3-A ranks while Clinton and West Craven again follow in that order. Tuscola, however, moves up from seventh to tie West Craven for fifth. The next four teams, Tarboro, West Henderson, Shelby and Statesville were all ranked — albeit in different spots — last week.

Randleman holds the 2-A lead for the second straight week with 58 points, while Wallace-Rose Hill moves up from third to second with 51. Tied for second is Forest Hills, also with 51 points, and unranked last week.

Two other newcomers make the 2-A list this week, Charlotte Catholic and Southwest Guilford.

The 1-A ranks remain totally unchanged this week. Jamesville is again number one, followed by Rosewood, Rosman, Bladenboro and Cullowhee.

This coming weekend winds up the regular season with the playoffs starting the following weekend.

This week's rankings:

4-A
1. Page (9-0)	75	77
2. Fike (9-0)	70	70
3. Seventy-First (8-1)	69	69
4. Scotland (8-1)	62	62
5. Northern Durham (8-1)	60	60
6. Millbrook (8-1)	60	60
7. Parkland (7-2)	59	59
8. Hunter Huss (7-2)	58	58

Mason Returns Three Veterans

By WOODY PEELE, Reflector Sports Editor

(Editor's note: This is the second in a series of stories on ECAC-South basketball teams for the 1984-85 season.)

George Mason, despite returning two members of last year's All-ECAC-South basketball team, are picked to finish only third in the league for the 1984-85 season.

But don't look for the Patriots to lie down and die because of it. They have a talented squad and five fine recruits to go with those two all-conference players.

Tops on the list for the Patriots is 6-5 senior forward Carlos Yates. As a sophomore, Yates was one of the top scorers in the country, and last year, he wasn't far off that same pace. He averaged 22.1 points a game and also pulled away 4.5 rebounds a contest.

Joining him will be 6-3 junior guard Ricky Wilson, also picked on the all-league team. Wilson was the second-leading scorer on the team, hitting 15.6 points a game and pulling 4.3 rebounds a game.

George Mason also returns a third starter, 6-5 junior forward Rob Rose — the third leading scorer. He averaged 13.8 points and 7.2 rebounds, tops on the team.

So — that gives the Patriots all three of their top scorers back — plus the leading rebounder.

Gone from the team are starters John Niehoff and Ricky Dillard, who started in every contest last year, along with three others who saw only limited playing time during the season.

"I don't know who will play the other two positions," Coach Joe Harrington said. "We're not a deep team either and an injury could just make us average."

Five other players return with some experience. Vincent McQueen, a 6-7 junior forward, led the reserves in playing time with over 300 minutes. He is the brother of N.C. State star Cozell McQueen. Another returnee with good experience is 6-8 sophomore forward Mike Dufrene, who played over 200 minutes.

Other veterans back include 6-8 sophomore forward Rob Nieberlein, 6-2 senior guard Mike Yohe, and 6-6 junior forward Warren Green. All but Green played between 100 and 200 minutes. Green played less than 100.

Five freshmen join them on the team, led by 6-5 forward Kenny Sanders, a second-team All-Washington Metro player from last year. He scored 23 points and pulled 14 rebounds a game as a prep senior.

Another top star is 6-4 guard-forward Brian Miller, who averaged 28.1 points as a high school senior, hitting 30 or more ten times.

Anthony Davis, a 5-10 guard, scored 13.9 points a game, but also averaged 8.0 assists per outing. Darin Satterthwaite, a 6-3 guard, scored 14.8 points a game, while Toby Johnson, a 5-8 guard, is a walk-on who hit 16.0 points per game and had a 7.0 assist average.

Houston's Playing Like NBA Kings

By The Associated Press
Houston Rockets Coach Bill Fitch says the Kansas City Kings came at his unbeaten team "like we were the world champs."
If the Rockets keep playing the way they are, they might be the kings of the National Basketball Association.
Akeem Olajuwon scored 23 points and reserve forward Robert Reid got 16 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter Tuesday night to lead the Rockets past the winless Kings 108-94.
The victory boosted Houston's record to 5-0 — the best start in the 18-year history of the franchise.
"It's important to get out of the blocks and build confidence," Fitch said. "A team like Kansas City came at us like we were the world champs and we met that challenge. Learning to do that early is important."
The Kings, now 0-5, ran into lots of trouble matching up against Olajuwon, the 6-foot-11 center, 7-4 forward Ralph Sampson, who had 19 points, and Houston's overall depth.

"He's got enough players to reach back and grab one like that," Kansas City Coach Jack McKinney said of Fitch's enviable situation. "He's got everything he needs."
"You have to neutralize the big men," McKinney said. "That's asking someone to do a lot."
In other NBA games, Dallas shook New York 107-104, San Antonio stopped Seattle 99-91, Denver shelled the Los Angeles Lakers 146-130, and Portland beat Phoenix 116-99.
Houston led 49-46 at halftime and then scored six straight points late in the third quarter in taking a 79-72 margin going into the final period.
Reid then put on a jump-shot exhibition, scoring eight points in the first 3:14 of the fourth quarter to give the Rockets a comfortable 89-74 cushion.

"If I can shoot like that from the outside, they're not going to be able to double-team Akeem and Ralph," said Reid, who made 11 of 14 field-goal attempts.
"That was an extra-special game for us," he said. "We were shooting to go 5-0."
Eddie Johnson led Kansas City with 17 points.
Mavericks 107, Knicks 104
Jay Vincent, who scored 33 points, hit a 20-foot shot with 34 seconds left to break a 104-104 tie and Rolando Blackman made a free throw with 11 seconds remaining as Dallas withstood a barrage of last-second New York misses.
Bernard King, who had 31 points for the visiting Knicks, and Louis Orr each missed shots at tying field goals after Vincent's basket. Three New York players missed three-point attempts after Blackman's foul shot.

Spurs 99, SuperSonics 91
Artis Gilmore scored 20 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to spark San Antonio, which used a decisive 14-1 burst in the fourth quarter.
The Spurs held Seattle to just 11 points in the final period in turning an 82-81 deficit into a 95-83 margin.
Mike Mitchell added 19 points for the host Spurs, while Tom Chambers had 26 and Al Wood 20 for the Sonics.
Nuggets 146, Lakers 130
Alex English tallied 28 points, Calvin Natt got 27 and Lafayette Lever contributed 24 points and 18 assists to lead high-scoring Denver.
Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 19 points for Los Angeles but had to leave the game with 10:56 to play after being hit above the right eye by an errant elbow from Denver's Wayne Cooper during a scramble for a loose ball. Johnson received six stitches in his forehead.

The visiting Nuggets led 66-63 at halftime and increased the margin to 110-95 entering the fourth quarter.
Trail Blazers 116, Suns 99
Kiki Vandeweghe scored 29 points as Portland took the lead for good early in the game to beat Phoenix, which had opened the season with a team-record five straight victories.
Vandeweghe, who scored 12 points in the first quarter and 12 more in the third period, hit an 18-foot jumper to put the Trail Blazers in front 10-9 and they never trailed again.
Mychal Thompson scored 18 points for Portland while Alvan Adams had 16 for the visiting Suns.
The Miami Dolphins set an NFL record by leading the league seven consecutive years, 1976-82, in having the fewest penalties called against them.

Faust Having Trouble Trailing Irish Legends

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — On the office walls are Rockne, Leahy and Parseghian.
On the sofa is Gerry Faust, the man entrusted with their legacy.
But Gerry Faust these days is more like Joe Kuharich, the only coach in 97 years of Notre Dame football to have lost more games.
Some schools figure the bottom line in terms of wins and losses. Notre Dame figures it in terms of wins, forget the losses. And Faust's four-year tenure has produced a lot of those that he would like to forget.
Yet Faust has no fear.
The handshake is firm, accompanied by an arm around the shoulder, a warm greeting just a step short of an embrace.
He spews enthusiasm for the school and team, especially following an unexpected victory over previously unbeaten Louisiana State and a near-miracle comeback to beat Navy.
Yet, in these troubled times, the office is almost like a bunker. Faust is largely insulated from the stream of controversy his 3½-year stewardship of the Irish program has produced.
After a loss, there are 200 letters and as many as 30 phone calls a day, many from disgruntled Notre Dame fans. Faust sees and hears only a smattering of them. Inside his corner office, success is always just a breath away.
But if it is to be better than ever, this time, he believes, he must sound the trumpet. His pumped body slouched over the sofa, he is a challenge. I like challenges. I like to see them work out.
"The record is disappointing, but you can build on it. Sometimes, too much is made of it when you're winning and too much is made of it when you're losing."
Nowhere, though, is losing tolerated less than at Notre Dame, and Faust knows it. "They parade through here because of it," he said, referring to a stream of media guests. "They don't go to see Perkins or Boor Foge."
Ray Perkins, Bo Schembechler and Foge Fazio are struggling through difficult seasons at Alabama, Michigan and Pitt, and none has a better record this season than Faust. But this is Notre Dame, where a coach is virtually a national all-star.
Perkins and Fazio have victories to lift the trash to 5-4. They could just as easily be 2-7. There was a last-quarter recovery to beat Michigan State 24-20, a 16-14 victory over Missouri preserved only when the Tigers missed a 39-yard field goal on the final play, and an 11-point rally in the final 2½ minutes to beat Navy 18-17.
This was supposed to be Faust's season, the first time he was working only with players he had recruited. "I felt it would be a good year," Athletic Director Gene Corigan said. "More things were in place."
The Irish were ranked eighth in The Associated Press preseason poll, a tribute mostly to Faust's recruiting and the season was starting at Purdue, a 52-6 victim last year.
The Irish were against Miami, and the Irish were back in the poll, ranked No. 17.
Then, disaster. Three straight losses at home — the first time that's happened to a Notre Dame team since 1956 — 31-13 to Miami, 21-7 to Air Force and 36-32 to South Carolina after blowing a 26-14 fourth-quarter lead. "Goodbye, Gerry," the students chanted.
The season seemed in shambles. But inexplicably, the Irish reversed the tumble, ignoring punishing heat and hostile road fans to topple LSU, 30-22.
The coach called it a new beginning for his program. Others found it all the more reason to criticize.
If the Irish can beat a quality opponent like LSU, critics asked, why can't they beat Air Force, which has beaten Faust's teams three straight years? Why must they struggle against Navy?

"It was a hair-raiser," Faust said after a field goal with 14 seconds left beat the Midshipmen. "It was a good comeback. There have been a lot of great ones in Notre Dame history. This was not one of them."
But for Faust, a win of any type is important.
"It seems his livelihood depends on it," said Allen Pinkett, Notre Dame's No. 2 career rusher. "That's terrible. It's just a football game, not life and death."
"If he had shoulder pads and a helmet, maybe he could take some of the blame. How can it be his fault? He's on the sidelines. We have the players."
"We're starting to click now," Faust said. "It takes time. We can have a good season. Not a great season, but a good one."
Good, though, may not be enough. Under the Golden Dome, where the ghosts of the Gipper and the Four Horsemen roam, great seasons are expected.
With two games left in his fourth season here, Faust's record is 23-19-1. Against Top Twenty teams, he is 5-9. At home, he is 10-10. In nationally televised games, where the famed "Subway Alumni" can see the Irish, he is 4-10.
At Cincinnati's Moeller High School, Faust's teams went 174-17-2 — two fewer losses in 18 years than he already has suffered at Notre Dame.
But that was high school. Could his ability there be transferred to perhaps the most visible college football job in the country? Father Edmund Joyce, Notre Dame's vice president, thought so.
The last time Notre Dame tried that was with Terry Brennan, who followed Leahy in 1954. Brennan compiled a 32-18 record in five years; ultimately done in by a 2-8 season in 1956. The next two years, 7-3 and 6-4, didn't matter.
Faust has lost one more game than Brennan in less than four seasons. Kuharich, the only coach to lose more than Faust, was 17-23 in the four seasons between Brennan and Ara Parseghian.
Faust's failures have been frustrating. He was 6-1 one year and finished 6-4-1. He was 6-2 the next year and finished 7-5.
He has one year left on his five-year contract and Notre Dame honors contracts. But even Faust, the ultimate optimist, recognizes that he needs dramatic improvement to stay beyond that.
"We can't be 6-5. We've got to be 8-3 or 9-2. But I understand that. I don't know if I'd want to stay if we didn't have a good year."
Ironically, Faust's eternal optimism may be part of the problem.
"If you really evaluate it, he's a victim of his own enthusiasm," said Parseghian, who had a 95-17-4 record in 11 years at South Bend. "He went out and recruited the best players and talked about what a great team he had. The enthusiasm of the alumni and the community was on a high note. You measure results against expectation. When the expectation is not realized, the disappointment is greater."
"If I'm a coach, I don't tell you I'm going to go undefeated or I'm going to win a national championship. That gets everybody so excited. When you don't realize those expectations, the accompanying rumbles are amplified."
The expectations aren't what bother Parseghian.

"My concern are the fundamental errors being repeated," he said. "This is nine weeks into the season. Against Navy, they had to call time out on the second play of the game because of some confusion. These are fundamental things."
Parseghian sees the pressure building on Faust. "He has to measure the impact," the ex-coach said. "If it were me and the season had ended, I'd probably sit down and talk with my family. I know it's got to hurt, regardless of the front he puts up. You know he's wounded. He's a sensitive man, responsive to criticism. This is the fourth year and he is nowhere near achieving the record he had hoped for. Common sense says he must take a look and see the effect."
Faust insists he will not walk away. "When you win, you're a good coach," he says. "We've won, but not enough."

Few Fraud Charges Reported Tuesday

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite massive turnout and tight races, the election in North Carolina produced "incredibly" few complaints of possible fraud, federal authorities said.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin, who warned Saturday that his Eastern District of North Carolina office would vigorously pursue any report of voting irregularities, said shortly before polls closed Tuesday that he had received over 100 complaints ranging from defective machines to ballot shortages.

"So far ... I don't detect any massive fraud," said Currin. "But I got so many (complaints) that I want to see how they're resolved before drawing a conclusion."

Robert Pence, FBI agent in charge of North Carolina operations, said his office had received only three complaints at poll-closing time.

"It's really incredible," said Pence. "It's far different from our normal experience on Election Day."

"I don't know how to interpret it. I'd like to think it's due in part to the preventative work we did, but I don't know that for sure."

Currin said the FBI and State Bureau of Investigation were continuing to probe reports of threats against two black Pitt County poll workers.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Monday the workers, a married couple, were supporters of his. He said they had been threatened with death if they went to the polls.

Currin said the woman stayed home Tuesday, while the man went to the polls with a police escort.

"This was the only complaint I'm aware of dealing with intimidation in the entire state," said Currin.

Currin said one allegation of vote buying had been reported in Brunswick County and another in Beaufort County. Local sheriffs investigated, and "I don't think they turned up anything significant," said Currin.

He also investigated reports that a school bus was used to transport voters in Cumberland County, that marked ballots were distributed in a Durham County precinct, and that some machines weren't registering votes.

He stressed, however, that he didn't know whether most of the reports were valid and said it would take several days to complete the investigations.

Martin Extends Olive Branch

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Jim Martin brushed aside Rufus Edmisten to become North Carolina's second Republican governor-elect this century, and immediately extended an olive branch to legislative Democrats whose cooperation he'll need to enact his program.

"Not only did we have the kind of campaign we all can be proud of, we're going to have the kind of administration we can all be proud of," Martin, 48, told wildly cheering supporters after claiming victory Tuesday night.

"I intend ... to work with the leadership of the General Assembly, to show them that I respect their prerogatives," said Martin. "I expect to be tested a few times, and maybe I'll lose a few and win a few."

Most of the Democratic lawmakers "are moderate to conservative sort of fellows, and I think they're going to find that Jim Martin speaks their kind of language," added U.S. Rep. Jim Broyhill, a Republican and key Martin adviser.

With 2,271 or 96 percent of 2,354 precincts reporting unofficial returns this morning, Martin had 1,144,620 votes or 54 percent. Edmisten, state attorney general for the past 10 years, had 968,089 votes or 46 percent. Libertarian Fritz Prochnow had 4,341 votes, less than 1 percent.

Martin triumphed in the wake of President Reagan's landslide reelection and Sen. Jesse Helms' election to a third term, which together produced the state GOP's first top-of-the-ticket sweep since 1972 when President Nixon, Helms and Gov. Jim Holshouser were victorious.

The six-term U.S. representative from Iredell County, who overcame what polls showed was once a substantial Edmisten lead, united the moderate and conservative wings of his party while persuading thousands of Democrats to abandon their nominee.

He undoubtedly was aided by a divisive Democratic primary that saw Edmisten finish ahead of nine other candidates, then squeak past former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox in a bitterly contested runoff.

Martin and Edmisten evenly split the state's 100 counties, both winning in 50. But Martin overwhelmingly won his power base, the populous Piedmont, outshone Edmisten in the west and made a credible showing in the east, the Democratic attorney general's stronghold.

For example, while Edmisten won 36 of 45 Eastern counties, Martin won one of the biggest — New Hanover — and lost by only 26,948 to 23,215 in another, Cumberland.

Martin acknowledged that Reagan's coattails were a factor, but said a bigger one was the grassroots organization he put together in a relatively short period.

He said the GOP's success "means we're on our way back, and we're in a position to compete on a wider range of political levels than we were before."

Martin said he had asked his brother, Joe Martin, to head his transition team, which he said would include key supporters of defeated Democratic gubernatorial candidates Knox, Jimmy Green and D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth.

Martin said he planned to seek advice from House Speaker Liston Ramsey, Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan, and Gov. Jim Hunt as he sets up his administration.

The former Davidson College chemistry professor and county commissioner said his top priorities would be winning the tax reforms he promised — repeal of the intangibles and inventory levies and sales taxes on food and some medicines — and educational reform.

He also vowed to crack down on drug trafficking, and said he would stand by his promise not to demand that state employees back him politically.

"We're going to reform that system so that those of you who are state employees will have the privilege of supporting any candidate you please on your own time," said Martin.

Edmisten, an aide to Sen. Sam Ervin during the Senate Watergate hearings before first being elected attorney general in 1974, conceded defeat Tuesday night and congratulated Martin at the winner's headquarters.

"He shook my hand, looked me in the eye and said, 'You'd better be a good governor,'" said Martin. "I told him I would do my best."

Edmisten appeared to blame his loss on Reagan's coattails, telling his supporters, "You can't beat the whole nation."

The 43-year-old Edmisten, who campaigned on a platform of concern for the middle- and lower-income citizen, said he didn't know what his future held.

"We know this — I go out with great pride," he said. "I'm proud that my campaign has stood up for some beliefs."

EDMISTEN — Defeated gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten, a Democrat, and his wife appeared at his campaign headquarters late Tuesday night as his Republican opponent, Rep. Jim Martin, piled up his lead. Edmisten acknowledged that he was trailing at the time, but refused to concede while the votes were being counted. (AP Laserphoto)

Election Relief

RALEIGH (AP) — There is a company which wants to make this campaign easier to stomach.

Richardson-Vicks Inc. handed out free supplies of its soft antacid, Tempo, to U.S. Senate candidates Jesse Helms and Jim Hunt, and gubernatorial candidates Rufus Edmisten and Jim Martin.

"There are no political implications," said Malcolm S. MacGruer, a company spokesman. "The tempo of the campaign being what it is, we think the candidates and their staffs need (it). This is a completely bipartisan effort...."

An employee suggested the idea to company executives after watching the 1984 political convention on television. Nearly three-quarters of a ton or 40,000 packages of the antacid was given to delegates and news media at the GOP National Convention in Dallas.

BILL COBEY

Republican Overcomes Andrews

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Bill Cobey avenged his 1982 loss to Democratic Rep. Ike Andrews, pulling away by less than 2,000 votes after a see-saw battle in the 4th Congressional District lasting from Election Day into the early morning hours.

With all 200 precincts counted in unofficial returns, Cobey led 112,161 votes to 110,379, or 50.4 percent to 49.6 percent.

Cobey tried to tie Andrews to policies of Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, saying the incumbent would raise taxes and votes the liberal line. Cobey said Andrews opposed President Reagan's tax cuts as well as military intervention in Central America and the MX missile.

Andrews has said he is known as an independent person who has successfully served under four presidents in his 12 years in Congress. He said he tries to support his constituents in the Piedmont counties of Wake, Chatham, Orange, Randolph and Franklin, rather than the current occupant of the White House.

Cobey has said Andrews misses crucial votes and is ineffective, but Andrews says he has won funding for his district and points out that Cobey has never held elective office.

Andrews beat Cobey 51 percent to 47 percent two years ago despite being outspent 3-to-1 and being charged with drunken driving shortly before the election. Cobey said "sympathy votes" stemming from the arrest and a recession that blunted Reagan's popularity contributed to that defeat.

Neal Holds On In 5th District

RALEIGH (AP) — The 5th District race between Democratic Rep. Steve Neal and Republican Stuart Epperson proved to be the last to be decided, but Epperson finally conceded in what had become one of the state's most expensive congressional races Tuesday.

Neal, who has been in Congress for 10 years, led Epperson — 105,917 to 102,484 — with 223 of 232 precincts counted.

Epperson had raised more than $60,000 while Neal raised more than $36,000 by June 30, with much of the money coming from national political action committees.

Epperson got about $4,500 each from the National Republican Congressional Committee, the Republican National Committee and the National Congressional Club. Neal, chairman of the International Trade, Investment and Monetary Policy Subcommittee, got more than $32,000 from PACs, including $4,000 from the American Bankers Association.

A major issue in the campaign has been textile jobs in the eight-county district, which goes from Forsyth and Rockingham counties west to Ashe and Wilkes counties. Epperson has said Neal backed loans to foreign governments which contributed to textile imports. Neal has maintained the loans could not be used to develop textile plants.

Neal has argued that Epperson has no record of accomplishments and could hope to get no votes beyond those generated by President Reagan's coattails. Epperson has warned that Neal is a big spender who would raise taxes if re-elected.

Neal, 49, is one of the senior Democrats on the House Banking Committee. The Winston-Salem native upset four-term Republican Rep. Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell to go to Washington and twice defeated Republican Anne Bagnal.

Neal says he has helped preserve the Social Security system, improved education, preserved the tobacco program and helped stem the flood of textile imports.

Epperson, 47, was raised on a Virginia tobacco farm and is president and major shareholder of seven radio stations. He is a member of the board of directors of the National Religious Broadcasters.

More Movie Stars Joining 'Dynasty'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — To stay larger than life and competitive with "Dallas," ABC's "Dynasty" is adding more movie stars to the cast.

Rock Hudson and Ali MacGraw are the latest big-name additions. They'll be making their first appearances early in 1985.

"Rock plays a businessman-adventurer and a man who breeds Arabian horses," said Esther Shapiro, co-creator and co-executive producer of the top-rated nighttime soap opera.

"Noelle (Miss MacGraw) is a lady out of the art world," she said. "She's the rich widow of a lord."

Miss Shapiro isn't saying much more. She wants to keep it as much of a mystery and surprise to viewers as possible.

In the ratings rivalry between the Big Two of the soaps, "Dynasty" and CBS' "Dallas," the producers have trotted out all the big guns of TV warfare: cliff-hanger plots, treacherous characters, fabulous wardrobes, luxurious surroundings and star appeal.

"Dallas" unveils Donna Reed as the new Miss Ellie on Friday night. Not to be outdone, "Dynasty" is recruiting movie actors for its huge numbers of female viewers, many of whom remember the stars from their silver-screen days.

Diahann Carroll came aboard near the end of the last season as the mysterious Dominique Devereaux, and Billy Dee Williams joined up at the start of the new season.

The appearances of Hudson and Miss MacGraw, however, mark an escalation in the warfare. Both were major stars, although their careers have peaked and they're doing mostly television movies and miniseries.

Miss Shapiro said Hudson was her first choice for the role. "He's one of the few actors who can portray that heroic and romantic image," she said. "And Ali's an actress whose work I like. Both of them have tremendous likeability."

She said she did not know how long either performer would be on the show. Hudson is committed for six episodes, while Miss MacGraw is committed through the end of the season.

"Rock may become a recurring character," she said. "I'd love for him to stay or do a related series. But when you're doing television it becomes organic. You bring people together and see how they fit."

"When Joan Collins came in at the end of the first half-season, some people here were so opposed to her that for her first appearance we hired an actress and put dark glasses on her," added Miss Shapiro. "That gave me three more months, until the start of the fall season, to persuade everyone else."

Miss Shapiro, a former ABC executive in charge of miniseries and novels for television, said she saw "Dynasty" as an American version of the British miniseries "I, Claudius."

"That told the story of Roman kings and people in power," she said. "We don't have kings, but we do have oil tycoons and they are people whose lives affect the rest of us. These are people who do outrageous things. You have families fighting for power and love. You can get terrific drama from that. Conflict in a family is much more dramatic than conflict between strangers."

"Blake Carrington (John Forsythe) is a 19th-century man. If only his family would do what he wants everything would be all right. So, 'I, Claudius' is the framework."

"When you're a writer you're writing your fantasies," she said.

"You've got your little doll house. But we became producers because we wanted control. If somebody is going to warp our brainchildren we'd rather it be through our own mistakes."

Miss Shapiro said she liked what older actors brought to a series.

Charges Reinstated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Movie-makers should be more safety-conscious after 75 years of filmmaking, said a judge who reinstated all charges against a director and four other defendants in the fiery "Twilight Zone" movie set deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children.

"This is a case to be tried," Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer said this week.

Ringer's ruling left director John Landis facing five counts of involuntary manslaughter. He is the first Hollywood director charged with crimes arising from a movie accident.

Morrow, Myca Dinh Le, 6, and Renee Chen, 7, were killed July 23, 1982, when a hovering helicopter crashed on them amid special-effects explosions as Morrow ran across a stream while holding the children.

Harland Braun, Landis' lawyer, argued that the charges should have been thrown out because the technical cause of the helicopter crash was unforeseeable. Therefore, no one should be held criminally responsible for the accident, Braun said.

Jordan Takes No. 2 Spot In Easy Victory

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan, soon to be the state's highest ranking Democrat, says he'll work with Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin but maintain "certain allegiances" to the Democratic Party.

Jordan handily defeated businessman and political newcomer John Carrington on Tuesday, surviving the state GOP's best showing in a dozen years that claimed as victims Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Hunt failed in his bid to unseat U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, and Edmisten lost to Martin in the governor's race.

With 2,169 or 92.1 percent of 2,354 precincts reporting unofficial returns this morning, Jordan had 1,057,989 votes or 54.8 percent to 872,703 votes or 45.2 percent for Carrington, of Raleigh.

Jordan, a four-term state senator and lumber executive from Montgomery County, will preside over a Senate on which Martin will rely to help enact his programs — including proposals to eliminate the inventory and intangibles taxes and the sales tax on food and some drugs.

"My obligation to the people is to work with (the) governor," said Jordan. "I will work with that governor."

He said as titular leader of North Carolina Democrats, he would play a role in reassessing the future of the state and party.

"I certainly want to be involved in that, and I'll be willing to accept whatever challenge I need to accept," said Jordan. He vowed to "work hard to see that we (Democrats) have more influence."

Referring to the party's showing statewide, Jordan said, "We got in a tidal wave, but we're going to keep the boat afloat ... make sure the motor has plenty of gas and oil and ... have an even better state."

Jordan and Carrington battled to replace eight-year incumbent Jimmy Green in the state's second-ranking office. Green was the first lieutenant governor to serve two consecutive terms after a 1977 amendment to the state Constitution permitted succession.

The race was largely overshadowed by the fierce Hunt-Helms and Edmisten-Martin clashes.

Jordan stressed Carrington's inexperience and portrayed himself as a fiscal conservative who was somewhat more moderate on social issues. The GOP candidate said the state would benefit by having more of a two-party system and its first Republican lieutenant governor this century.

Jordan defeated former House Speaker Carl Stewart for the Democratic nomination, while Carrington finished second in the May 8 primary, then beat little-known businessman Frank Jordan in the runoff.

As co-chairman of the Senate's influential Appropriations Base Budget Committee, Jordan came under fire from Carrington, who said he and other legislative leaders formed a small clique that had stagnated General Assembly operations.

Jordan promised to use his authority to appoint committee chairmen to spread power among more lawmakers.

Carrington is president of The Sirchie Group, a corporation that manufactures law enforcement equipment. He invested heavily in television commercials portraying himself as tough on crime and government inefficiency.

Jordan complained about Carrington ads that accused the Democrat of opposing strong laws against sexual abuse of children, saying they distorted his record.

The candidates clashed on gov-

Jordan Becomes No. 1 Democrat

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Bob Jordan says he has two new jobs for the next four years — lieutenant governor of North Carolina and leader of the inquest into what went wrong with the state Democratic Party this election.

"My first responsibility is to be the best lieutenant governor I can, then deal with other things like the party," said Jordan, who will become the state's leading Democratic officeholder when Gov. Jim Hunt's term ends.

Jordan was the major Democratic winner in a state election Tuesday that saw Hunt lose his bid for the U.S. Senate, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten lose his race for the governorship and several Democrats lose races for Congress and the state Legislature.

With 75.9 percent of the vote counted, Jordan led Republican John Carrington 882,917 votes to 737,505 votes, or 54.5 percent to 45.5 percent.

Jordan brought cheers and enthusiastic applause from about 1,000 Democrats as he stepped up to the podium at Democratic election headquarters at the Raleigh Inn. People with Bob Jordan buttons were the only conspicuous smilers in a ballroom full of furrowed brows.

In his speech, Jordan blamed President Reagan's coattails for the Republican victories.

"I have to be disappointed tonight that the national trend did not let us focus on North Carolina as much as we should," he said. "But I'm proud of this state and the progress it has made under its Democratic leadership. It's not the best state ... by accident."

Jordan said in an interview that he would work closely with Republican Governor-elect Jim Martin, "but also remember that I'm a Democrat."

"It's the responsibility of the Democrats to analyze what went wrong and put the party back together. I never backed down from a challenge like that."

"It means I have a leading role to play," Jordan said. "We've got to bring in all members of the Democratic party and try to analyze whether this is a national or state problem — whether it's a trend or a matter of personalities."

Jordan told the crowd that he looked forward to working with a strong Democratic Legislature, but that the party must work to increase its influence in Congress.

"We got involved in a tidal wave, and we're going to keep the the boat afloat," he said.

Fatal Wreck

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A truck lost its brakes, rammed into five other vehicles and exploded in flames on a country road in northeast Brazil, killing at least 21 people, police reported.

State patrolman Joao Mattos da Silva said the truck, which was carrying building stones to the interior town of Salgueiro, slammed into another truck carrying scrap metal and exploded, then hit four passenger cars, setting three of them ablaze. He said it took nearly four hours to put out the fire.

Thornburg To Be Attorney General; Incumbents Win

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Some got off to shaky starts, but when the Election Day smoke had cleared, every incumbent in the Council of State had won and the remaining spots had been filled by Democrats.

Lacy H. Thornburg, a former Superior Court judge from Webster, defeated Republican attorney Allen Foster of Greensboro to replace Attorney General Rufus Edmisten as attorney general. With 78.7 percent of the vote counted, Thornburg led 54.4 percent to 45.6 percent in the race to replace Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Thornburg, who served three terms in the state House, was a Superior Court judge in Jackson County for 16 years before stepping down last year to run for governor. He switched to the attorney general's race in January and supported a "victims' bill of rights" as well as working to keep utility rates down. Foster, a Duke University law instructor, advocated running the attorney general's office like a law firm.

In the race for insurance commissioner, Jim E. Long, a former Democratic state representative and counsel to House Speaker Liston Ramsey, defeated Pinehurst Republican Richard T. Morgan. Long had 54 percent to 46 percent with 1,852 of the precincts counted. That broke down to 620,609 votes for Long and 537,842 for Morgan as Long took the seat vacated by John Ingram, who dropped out to make a losing run for governor in May.

Long, 43, said he wanted to turn the Insurance Department in a more consumer-oriented direction and create an emergency-response unit. Morgan promised to improve Insurance Department morale and create a "citizens' committee" on insurance matters.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, 84, beat Republican Patric Dorsey of New Bern 55.7 percent to 44.3 percent, keeping the job he has held 48 years. With 1,871 of 2,354 precincts reporting, Eure had 932,127 votes to 732,584 for Dorsey.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks won a third term over Margaret F. Plemmons, a Republican from Winston-Salem — leading 54.6 percent to 45.4 percent with 1,829 precincts counted.

Brooks touted his record on behalf of the state's workers to overcome a stiff challenge from state Sen. Richard Barnes in the Democratic primary. His opponent, Ms. Plemmons, said she'd recruit new industry and that Brooks didn't understand Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips defeated Gene S. Baker in his bid for re-election. Phillips had 55 percent to 45 percent for the elementary school principal from Wayne County after 77.7 percent of the votes had been counted.

Baker criticized a number of education initiatives pushed by Phillips, such as experiments with longer school days and years and a career ladder for teachers.

Democrat Jim Graham, state agriculture commissioner since 1964, won another term by defeating Republican Leo Tew of Raleigh. With 1,852 of 2,354 precincts reporting, Graham had 58.6 percent, or 946,402 votes, to 41.4 percent, or 743,225, for Tew.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow won a third term against Republican James E. Hicks of Conover. With 79.4 percent of the votes tallied, Renfrow had 862,483 votes for 54.1 percent while Hicks had 730,612 for 45.9 percent.

Renfrow said he had improved the state's fiscal responsibility in his first term as auditor, while Hicks said he'd "protect the integrity" of the budget and use his experience as an accountant to insist on wise spending.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles was unopposed for re-election, as were Democratic Appeals Court judges Gerald Arnold of Fuquay-Varina, Charles Becton of Durham, R.A. Hedrick of Raleigh, John Martin of Durham, Earl Vaughn of Raleigh and John Webb of Wilson.

State Supreme Court Justices Burley Mitchell and Henry Frye fought back from very early deficits and pulled off victories over Republican opponents. With 1,645 precincts counted, Mitchell led Republican Arthur Donaldson of Salisbury 53.3 percent to 46.7 percent. With 1,553 precincts counted, Frye led Republican Clarence C. Boyan 53.6 percent to 46.5 percent.

Voters Accept Amendment Requiring Legal Background

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina voters overwhelmingly have agreed to amend the state Constitution to require that prosecutors, including the state attorney general, be licensed to practice law.

With 1,871 of 2,354 precincts or 79.4 percent reporting, 912,681 or 77 percent of the voters supported amending the Constitution and 272,601 or 23 percent opposed amending the Constitution.

There was little debate on the amendment. The change had no impact on the race for attorney general in which Democrat Lacy Thornburg, a former Superior Court judge, edged out Republican C. Allen Foster, a Greensboro attorney.

Rufus Edmisten, the outgoing attorney general, also is licensed to practice law.

The Constitution now says anyone is eligible for election or appointment as attorney general or district attorney if they are 21 years old and were born in the United States or have become a citizen.

They also must meet state and local residency requirements so they may vote in those races.

Most district attorneys are required to try cases in court but the prosecutors in larger counties may have more administrative duties.

A similar amendment was approved in 1980 to require that judges be licensed attorneys. That change was sparked by the candidacy of James Newcomb, a fire extinguisher salesman from Williamston.

Newcomb won the GOP nomination for chief justice of the state Supreme Court in 1974. He was defeated by then Associate Supreme Court Justice Susie Sharpe but it was the closest a non-lawyer had come to holding a top judicial office.

State Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, said the amendment was approved by lawmakers "without very much to do." She said the amendment was proposed by the state Courts Commission.

Mrs. Holt is chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

Reagan Piles Up Massive Margin

RALEIGH (AP) — President Reagan collected an overwhelming victory and 13 electoral votes in North Carolina as Republicans swept the governor's office and a U.S. Senate seat.

With 2,242 of 2,354 precincts reporting or 95 percent, Reagan had 1,255,519 votes or 61 percent and Democrat Walter Mondale had 787,660 or 39 percent while Libertarian Bob Bergland had 3,382 votes or less than 1 percent in unofficial returns.

Mondale carried 18 of the state's 100 counties Tuesday. The Democrats' strongholds included counties with large minority populations such as Durham, Edgecombe and Robeson.

On Reagan's heels, Republican Sen. Jesse Helms edged out Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt to win re-election to a third term and GOP Congressman Jim Martin defeated Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

It was a reminder of 1972 when President Nixon was re-elected. Helms won his first term and Jim Holshouser was elected the state's first Republican governor this century.

"Aren't we proud of our great president?" Helms asked supporters as they watched returns. "What a victory he has achieved today, and he remembers and I think you remember it all began in 1976 in North Carolina."

North Carolina gave Reagan a key primary victory in 1976. The former California governor did not win his party's presidential nomination that year but Helms argued that the N.C. victory pushed Reagan to seek the nomination again in 1980.

In 1980, Reagan collected 49 percent of the vote in North Carolina compared to 47 percent for former President Jimmy Carter.

Republicans Make Strides In House, Senate Races

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Craig Lawing, speaker pro tem of the North Carolina Senate, was upset and dozens of other Democratic incumbents were swept aside as Republicans doubled their numbers in both houses of the General Assembly.

Lawing, of Mecklenburg County, was defeated 22,174 to 19,032 by James D. McDuffie as the GOP moved from a 44-6 minority to a 38-12 deficit. His was among the new, single-member districts that grew out of efforts to avoid diluting minority voting strength.

In the House, based on unofficial and sometimes incomplete returns, the Democrat-Republican ratio moved from 102-18 to 79-37 with a handful of races awaiting later decisions because of redistricting.

Other influential senators unseated as President Reagan swept to the presidency and Republican Jim Martin became governor were Cecil R. Jenkins Jr., D-Cabarrus, upset by James C. Johnson; Robert M. Davis, D-Rowan, ousted by Paul S. Smith; James H. Edwards, D-Caldwell, knocked off when Republican incumbent Rep. Donald R. Kincaid and Daniel Reid Simpson of Burke County took the two seats in the 27th District; Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, beaten by Robert G. Shaw and Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, who fell to Wendell H. Sawyer.

Republican senators re-elected were Kincaid and Cass Ballenger of Catawba County, J.A. "Chip" Wright of New Hanover County, and William Redman of Iredell County. The other GOP newcomers will be Robert Vance Somers and Paul S. Smith of Rowan County, Ernest E. Inman of Surry County and William Eugene Wilson of Watauga County.

With Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., winning re-election after campaigning for such things as voluntary school prayer and an end to federal funding for abortions, one addition to the House took on added significance. Coy Privette, a Christian Action League leader who lobbied against pornography and backed tough anti-drunken driving laws, had a hand in unseating incumbent Robert Slaughter, D-Stanly. Privette and fellow Republican Timothy Tallent of Cabarrus County led contenders for four seats in the 34th District. House Finance Committee Chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, won re-election with Joe Hudson, D-Union, in that district.

Other incumbent House Democrats to fall were J. Paul Tyndall of Onslow County, Bertha Holt of Alamance County, Mary P. Seymour of Guilford County, Mary Jarrell and Bill Grimsley of Guilford County, James Black of Mecklenburg County, J. Worth Gentry of Stokes County, Margaret B. "Pinky" Hayden of Alleghany County and J.P. Huskins of Iredell County, Sam L. Beam, Joe Roberts and D.R. Mauney of Gaston County.

Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty was easily defeated by Rep. Aaron Fussell, D-Wake.

Republicans re-elected were Margaret Keese-Forrester of Guilford County, William T. Boyd of Randolph County, Brad Ligon of Rowan County, Betsy Cochran of Davie County, Harold J. Brubaker of Randolph County, George Holmes of Yadkin County, Robert Brawley of Iredell County, James Hughes of Avery County, George Robinson of Caldwell County, Charles Hughes of Henderson County, L.P. Spoon of Mecklenburg County and Austin Allran of Catawba County.

New Republicans are: James R. Sanders of Carteret County, Gerald B. Hurst of Onslow County, Carlton Hall of New Hanover County, Frank Sizemore of Guilford County, Michael Decker of Forsyth County, Charlotte A. Gardner of Rowan County, Raymond Warren of Mecklenburg County, Charles L. Cromer and Joe H. Hege Jr. of Davidson County, Ann Q. Duncan, Frank E. Rhodes and Theresa H. Esposito of Forsyth County, Marshall Hall of Stokes County, James M. Cole of Watauga County, Lois S. Walker of Iredell County, Walter H. Windley of Gaston County, David J. Noles of Lincoln County, Jonathan L. Rhyne Jr. of Lincoln County, Charles F. Buchanan of Mitchell County and C. Ivan Mothershead of Mecklenburg County.

Facing no opposition were House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, and Reps. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne; Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett; Dan Blue, D-Wake; Billy Watkins, D-Granville; Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir; Frank Ballance, D-Warren; Richard Wright, D-Columbus; Charles Evans, D-Dare; and Joe Hackney, D-Orange.

Senate Democrats without opposition included Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir; Henson Barnes, D-Wayne; Kenneth Royall, D-Durham; R.C. Soles, D-Columbus; Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston; Bill Martin, D-Guilford; and J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

Also without opposition was Ralph Hunt, a black Durham city council member who unseated Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, in the Democratic primary.

Stunned Democrats Looking To Future For Reorganization

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — One person fainted, several wept and some expressed disbelief, but many North Carolina Democrats at election headquarters were looking beyond the defeat of Jim Hunt and Rufus Edmisten.

"Eighty-six, eighty-six!" chanted about 1,000 people packed into a smoky ballroom at the Raleigh Inn Tuesday night after Hunt conceded the fierce battle for U.S. senator to incumbent Republican Jesse Helms.

"I may be beaten, but I'm unbowed," the governor said. "I may be disappointed, but I will not be bitter. When it comes to making this state and this nation all it should be.

I'm not finished."

Earlier, Edmisten, the state attorney general who lost the race for governor to Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, appeared before the crowd to say he hoped the principles he espoused during the campaign would be carried on.

With 96 percent of the vote counted, Helms had 1,090,000 votes to Hunt's 1,034,908, or 51 percent to 49 percent. Martin had 1,142,925 votes to Edmisten's 967,262, or 54 percent to 46 percent.

"We're going to get Hunt in in '86," said Suzan Teague of Raleigh, eyeing a television screen showing a beaming and victorious President Reagan. "People are going to wise up that they've been had by all this.

... We haven't begun to fight yet."

Former Sen. Robert Morgan said the loss of the governorship and the failure to capture the Senate seat did not mean the Democrats were beaten.

"We looked like this in '72 (when Republican Jim Holshouser became the first Republican governor in this century)," he said. "We looked like a dead party, but we came back. We're still the party of the people."

The evening began with confident Democrats sipping drinks, slapping backs and donning hats reading "I was there at the Raleigh Inn Nov. 6 when Rufus was elected." A phalanx of television cameras aimed toward a podium as dozens of reporters milled around the jovial crowd. At about 7:30, ABC-TV projected Martin as the winner over Edmisten, prompting boos and shouts of "You're wrong" from the crowd. Edmisten campaign secretary Dan Hoover scolded television reporters, saying it was "totally irresponsible for the network to call an election while people are still voting."

More boos and hisses resulted when ABC projected Helms ahead at 55 percent to 45 percent.

"I am not willing to accept the fact that the people of North Carolina have elected that man (Helms) as senator again," said Cathy Rieger of Durham. "Gov. Hunt just worked too hard and did too much for this state. ... I'd be ashamed to mention I'm from North Carolina if Helms goes back."

At 11:38, Edmisten came out to thank his supporters and say "you can't beat the whole nation."

"I don't know what the future holds," he said. "I'm proud my campaign has stood up for some beliefs."

About 35 minutes later, Hunt took the podium to say, "Our long and difficult battle is over."

"Yes, we have suffered a disappointing defeat and it hurts," Hunt said as some people shouted "No!" "But we are not defeated in spirit. We have fought for what we believe. We have carried the torch forward. That flame will never die."

Tim Moore of Cary said afterwards that he was "pretty sad," but he said Helms couldn't have won without Reagan.

"If he (Hunt) had gone head-to-head with Helms without Reagan, he would have won," said Moore. "It's a sad day for minorities in this state. ... People voted their pocketbook, not their consciences."

James Buchanan of Raleigh said Helms won because "he appealed to the bad side of so many of our good rural people — the same old racial overtones."

Former state Rep. Tom Gilmore, chairman of the state Democratic Unity Campaign, said the Republicans raised more money and fought a more aggressive campaign than the Democrats. He also said they did not have to contend with a crowded primary field, as the Democrats did in the race for governor.

"I'm not making any excuses," he said. "We got beat; the people have spoken. ... We need to do a better job of communicating what the party has done. ... We have to regroup and look to tomorrow."

Helms Asks Blacks To Join Program

RALEIGH (AP) — A jubilant Sen. Jesse Helms made his strongest appeal yet for blacks to join the GOP as he and his supporters credited his victory over Gov. Jim Hunt in the U.S. Senate race to the desire of voters to return to traditional values.

Helms, 63, won a third term by defeating Hunt, 47, in his fiercest re-election battle. The two spent more than $22 million combined in the race, breaking a national record for spending in a U.S. Senate race. With 2,260 of 2,354 precincts or 96 percent reporting, Helms had 1,090,000 or 51 percent and Hunt had 1,034,908 or 49 percent.

"I want the black citizens of North Carolina to know that I want and I intend to work with and for all the people, including our responsible black citizens who have the most to gain from a strong and flourishing free enterprise system," the Republican senator said late Tuesday night as victory became apparent.

"... And I say to the black citizens, whether or not you voted for me today, you have my hand of sincere friendship. The bottom line is that I think it's time that our black citizens be set free from the political bondage in which they've been kept," Helms said.

The re-election of Helms and the election of Republican Jim Martin for governor, shows that "in the South, the conservative philosophy has been the main philosophy for years," said state GOP Chairman David Flaherty said.

The Democrats once represented that philosophy but have since moved away from the people who support "family values and less government," Flaherty said. Tuesday's vote represents a realignment of the two majority parties in the South, he said.

"We want to become the majority party," Flaherty said.

Lamar Mooneyham, formerly the head of North Carolina Moral Majority and now a national field director for the group based in Lynchburg, Va., said the vote is a referendum on "whose set of values will guide the nation."

He said the surge in Republican registration is because they are "searching for the party and platforms that embody those traditional values." Those values include religious liberty issues and human life issues, including abortion and euthanasia.

In his victory speech, Helms said the election sent "a signal throughout the world that North Carolina is a God-fearing, conservative state." Most of all, he said the election shows "this is a state where people reject politics as usual and reject politicians who try to be all things to all people."

Helms and Flaherty also gave partial credit for Reagan's victory to Helms instead of the other way around.

Flaherty said there was no question that having Reagan at the head of the ticket was an advantage but said "North Carolina made it possible for Ronald Reagan to be elected."

"Aren't we proud of our great president?" Helms asked supporters as they watched returns. "What a victory he has achieved today, and he remembers and I think you remember it all began in 1976 in North Carolina."

North Carolina gave Reagan a key primary victory in 1976. The former California governor did not win his party's presidential nomination that year but Helms argued that the N.C. victory pushed Reagan to seek the nomination again in 1980.

Appearing with Helms were Eddie and Frances Knox. Knox lost the Democratic nomination for governor to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and later was named national co-chairman of Democrats for Reagan. Knox said he came to the reception because he was invited.

Helms also reassured the state's senior citizens that their Social Security program is protected. He told them they could "go to bed with the assurance that the Social Security benefits are safe and will continue to be safe."

Appellate Court Upholds Wake Murder Conviction

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Court of Appeals has affirmed a second-degree murder conviction and ordered a new hearing in the dismissals of two Nash County teachers.

The court Tuesday found no error in the June 1983 conviction of George Huggins in the death of 2½-year-old Leon Jermaine Stroud.

Huggins, who received a 20-year sentence after a conviction in Wake County Superior Court, testified that he hit the boy in the stomach March 8, 1982, but said there was no malice involved, as required for a murder conviction. He also said the jury should have been told it could find him guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Meanwhile, the court reversed a lower court's judgment that the Nash County Board of Education followed proper procedures in failing to renew the contracts of Northern Nash High School teachers Timothy Abell and Don Reams.

Both teachers were notified at the end of the 1981-82 school year that their contracts would not be renewed. The teachers, both assistant football coaches, were on probation and had received satisfactory ratings prior to their dismissal, the suit said.

The teachers contended the letters notifying them their contracts would not be renewed included no reasons for their dismissals and that administrators declined to reveal the reasons under questioning.

The appeals court said there was evidence that three teaching slots were to be cut from the school faculty, but no evidence showing why only Abell and Reams were selected from a list of seven teachers recommended for non-renewal.

In other action, the court upheld the 1983 conviction of Richard Clay Walker on charges of possessing marijuana for sale or distribution.

Appeals Court Judge Hugh Wells, in a concurring opinion, however, questioned the use of a Marine corporal as an undercover agent by the Onslow County Sheriff's Department. Wells said the use of Cpl. David Clark appeared to violate federal statutes restricting the use of military personnel to enforce civilian laws.

The appeals court also upheld a lower court's summary judgment in favor of the city of Charlotte in a lawsuit brought by Cabarrus County. The county sued the city in 1983 after Charlotte imposed user fees on a county residents using a city-operated landfill in Cabarrus County.

A lower court ruled the city could charge the fees despite the county's power to regulate fees for public services.

New Voter Visits Polls At Age 119

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Betty Lyons, born the year after the Civil War ended, voted for the first time Tuesday and said the experience was "just fine."

Mrs. Lyons, at 119 believed to be the oldest person in North Carolina, traveled from a family care home to the Winston-Salem Coliseum to cast her ballot. But she said it wasn't anything special about the elections that drew her.

"I don't know. I just wanted to ... I said once, I believe I'll vote this time," she said.

Mrs. Lyons, who said she voted the Democratic ticket, recalled a time when election officials made it difficult for blacks to vote.

"They passed that law one time to cut the colored folks out," she said. "It was a good while ago. If they couldn't read the (U.S.) Constitution, the law, they couldn't vote."

Even after laws were changed to make it easier to vote, "I just didn't think nothing about it," she said.

New Bishop Named

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The chancellor of the Archdiocese of Washington, Monseigneur John F. Donoghue, has been appointed bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, replacing retiring Bishop Michael J. Begley.

In prepared remarks Tuesday, Donoghue thanked Begley "for the quiet assurance he has given me and for the promise of his advice and help whenever I call upon him."

Donoghue said he was coming to the 12-year-old diocese as "an inheritor of a firm foundation" built by Begley. "It is a privilege and honor to assume responsibilities so lovingly borne by him," Donoghue said.

Donoghue, a 56-year-old Washington native, called upon his fellow churchmen "to pray for me that God's work may flourish and grow and continue to bear good fruit."

The appointment was announced Tuesday in the Catholic Center in Charlotte by Begley, who founded the diocese.

 Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, NOV., 8, 1984

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's full moon brings into effect a number of changes that you can make where your practical interests are concerned, especially those which have to do with your finances.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Come to a fine meeting of minds on every point with those you deal with in business matters.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Look to a partner for assistance in some personal goal you are trying to reach, though he or she may be somewhat adamant.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to confer with co-workers; gain and give cooperation and speed up production.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) If there is an argument between your mate and a friend, keep mum, otherwise you could get into serious trouble.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Schedule your time and interests wisely since kin and business persons do not see eye to eye at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It may be hard to carry through with your philosophy of life today, but persevere and you can win out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to handle a financial matter in the morning, but await the afternoon and it works out better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) In the morning, you want a partner to agree on some practical course of action with you, but this does not happen until evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Some argument with a close ally can be settled by sitting down together and discussing the matter sensibly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Think twice before spending any money either on your mate or friends and be sure you can afford this, whatever you have in mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Problematical practical affairs can crop up today which need wise and quick handling. Employ wisdom.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into every available source for any data you may need at this time. Avoid whatever could be depressing at this time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to handle problematical affairs of a practical nature and solve them wisely, upon reaching adulthood, provided you have given him, or her a good business education. Teach early to be more broad-minded and to have more consideration for others.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Effigies Burned

LEWES, England (AP) — Effigies of coal strike rivals Arthur Scargill and Ian MacGregor went up in smoke as the south England town of Lewes celebrated its annual Bonfire Night. Bonfire Night commemorates the discovery of the Nov. 5, 1605, plot to blow up King James I while he was opening the English Parliament.

The plot by Guy Fawkes and at least a dozen other Roman Catholics dissatisfied with the Protestant government was defused when Fawkes was found guarding 36 barrels of gunpowder in a cellar under the House of Lords.

Rescue Crew Set And Standing By On Each Launch

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After space shuttle crew members are strapped into place and the main hatch is shut and locked, the closest people to the launch pad as the final minutes tick away are seven fire fighters huddled in a tank a mile and a half away.

Their mission: rescue the crew if they become incapacitated in an emergency.

The chief of one rescue team is Russell Hellein, a career fire fighter who has been at the Kennedy Space Center for seven years.

"Our only purpose for being there is to remove the astronauts," said the 46-year-old native of Uniontown, Pa.

The tank, an M-113 military transport that weighs 14,500 pounds and can hit 35 miles per hour, has no first-aid equipment inside.

"Its purpose is fast in and fast out," explained Hellein.

The space center has three of the tanks, nicknamed "hard hats." One is parked in a bunker 300 feet from the launch pad. If a last-minute emergency arises, those aboard the space vehicle are instructed to exit the craft, use slide wires to reach the ground, dash to the tank and drive off.

The rescue crew is ready with the second tank, and a third is left at an 18,000-foot runway three miles west of the pad. This "hard hat" is to be used by rescuers if a returning space shuttle goes off the runway and into nearby marshland.

On Wednesday, space shuttle Discovery is scheduled for its second launch, carrying a crew of four men and one woman on a mission to recover two malfunctioning satellites and return them to Earth for repairs. At the scheduled launch time — 8:18 a.m. EST — a rescue crew will be ready in its tank.

Hellein said that 90 members of the 100-member Kennedy Space Center Fire Department are trained in launch pad rescue procedures. These include removing astronauts from the space shuttle in its poised position on the launch pad as well as from a horizontal position. A crane is used to change the mockup's configuration.

Any emergency that warrants sending in the rescue team is extremely dangerous because of the fuel aboard the shuttle — 2.2 million pounds of propellant in the two solid rocket boosters, 1.55 million pounds of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen in the 154-foot long external tank, and assorted "exotic fuels" for such functions as orbital maneuvering.

Should that fuel explode, anyone near the launch site would perish. The silvery suits worn by the rescuers would offer scant protection in that kind of fire and temperature.

"It's not an entry suit," Hellein said.

Another danger could be the lack of oxygen. The seven fire fighters in the tank are equipped with oxygen masks and canisters containing 15 minutes of air. Two smaller containers can be added to their protective coveralls providing a maximum 30 minutes of air.

"To get the astronauts, we have to climb 195 feet, open the hatch, go inside, unstrap them and carry them out to the tank. That doesn't give you much time," said Hellein, pointing out there was little room to maneuver in the shuttle cockpit which has carried as many as seven crew members.

Hellein's teammate is Jeff Payne, a fire fighter for seven years.

"What we have to do is peculiar to most fire departments," said Payne. "You have to be able to play it by ear more than anyone else."

There has never been a situation at the Kennedy Space Center that warranted emergency evacuation of the shuttle at launch time. The three tanks have been used only in drills.

Hellein has watched many launches and continues to be fascinated each time.

"It never gets dull and it's beautiful," he said. "You become a part of history."

Charlotte Bank Tests Home Plan

CHARLOTTE (AP) — About 100 Charlotte-area residents are paying bills, balancing accounts, reading the news, shopping and even playing video games through an experimental home-banking computer system from First Union National Bank.

"It's so convenient that I think someday, whether a few years or 10 years from now, we won't have a second thought about using it," said bank vice president Michael P. Sullivan.

The 111 evaluators, which make up a cross-section of the bank's customers, can't be interviewed until the experiment is completed Sept. 30, 1985. But Sullivan, who pre-tested the device in his home for 30 days, said it was very popular among all the members of his family.

"I almost had to wait for the kids to go to bed before I could balance my checkbook," he said.

The customers, who volunteered for the project, pay $7.50 a month to use an AT&T Sceptre terminal that plugs into the telephone and television. They're part of an experiment involving 13 other financial institutions across the country.

First Union business analyst Elizabeth Bevan said customers can use the home computers to pay any bills — including alimony — transfer funds among accounts and send and receive messages from the bank. They can program the computer to pay monthly installments, such as auto payments, on time. The payments are made by Automatic Data Processing Inc. of Seattle, which is working with the 13 banks in the project.

The computer also gives customers access to national news, weather and sports, stock market quotations, book reviews, soap operas updates and an electronic mail system, she said. Catalogs enable the user to shop from home and let the computer debit the account. The games include programs teaching children how to count and read, she said.

"This system is self-corrective," said Ms. Bevan. "They either see the mistake or it buzzes them back."

Someday, bank customers may buy "smart cards" with money value encoded into a plastic card, said Sullivan. When you make a transaction with the card, the value is reduced until a "deposit" is made into it.

"But right now, we're more practically looking at home banking," he said. "Home banking will be successful when it's part of a whole array of (computer) services."

Treason Trial

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Former Cabinet minister Balaki Kirya and five other men have gone on trial for treason, and a prosecutor alleged they "waged war" on the government by conspiring to overthrow President Milton Obote.

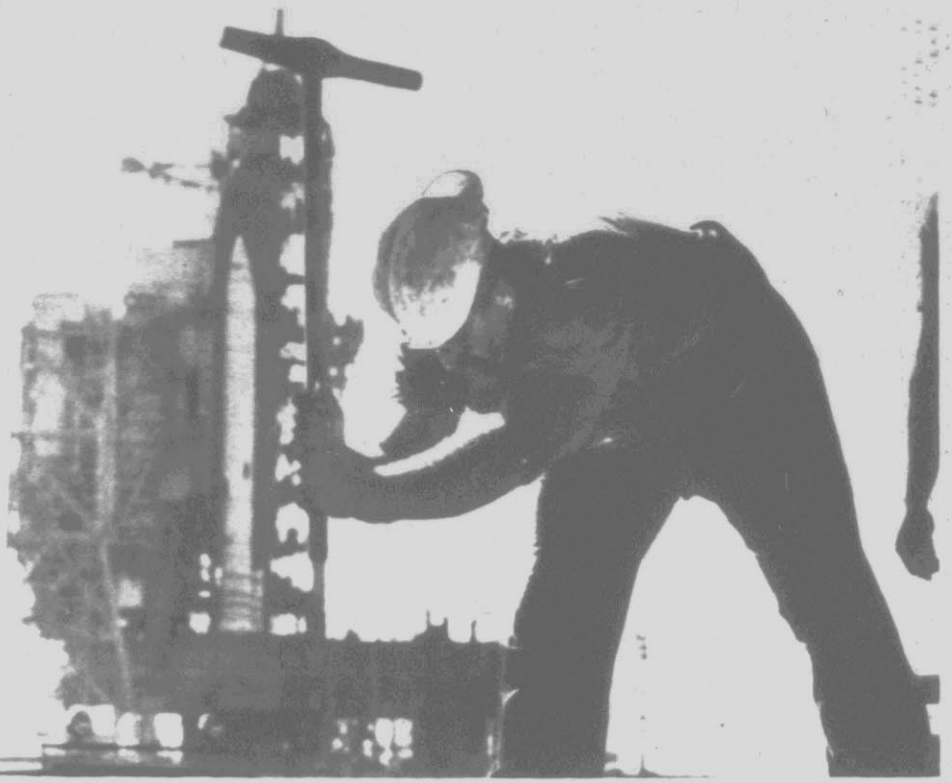

Kirya, who has been detained for two years, Pakistani Sajjed Soori, and Ugandans Hussein Ada, James Alamu, Frank Kiyumbi and Mark Ayasi Kodiri all pleaded innocent to the charges.

Prosecutor Michael Kabega said he would call 35 witnesses to prove that the six men conspired against Obote's government — including two former government ministers in neighboring Kenya, Stanley Oloitipit and Charles Njonjo.

Scenic View Cuts Sting From Hard Work

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer
YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — The 42-member crew had two weeks to make a rutted track look like a hiking trail that would last 40-50 years.

If that meant rolling 175-pound granite blocks across a meadow, the job would get done.

If that meant enduring 16-degree nights and the high Sierra's first snow, the job would get done.

And if that meant working a nine-hour day for minimum wage, the job would get done.

That was the final task of the season for the California Conservation Corps crew camping at 9,400 feet in Rafferty Meadow on the west side of Yosemite National Park.

The job combines the best and the worst of the CCC program.

Corps members are guaranteed the drudgery of their motto: "Hard work, low pay and miserable conditions." But they also live and work as a team amid some of the state's most breathtaking scenery.

CCC Director Bud Sheble and others took a five-mile pack horse ride to the base camp recently to inspect the trail maintenance and reconstruction work in progress. A mule laden with heavy wool blankets accompanied his caravan to ward off the chill.

Park Superintendent Robert Binnewies, who led the trail ride, congratulated the youths on their work.

"The CCC program has just been a godsend for Yosemite," he said.

The trail crew chops granite boulders into maneuverable chunks, lines them up in two rows the width of two backpackers, fills the center with rocks and tops it with soil to replace the meadow's dirt trail.

"It's a tremendous way to deal with the dilemma of maintaining a park," Binnewies said. The corps, modeled after the Depression-era Civilian Conservation Corps, is "preserving a gorgeous meadow that otherwise would have turned into an interstate highway."

Crews from the 8-year-old state agency have worked on more than 300 of the park's 750 miles of trails, which bear about 350,000 hikers plus horseback riders each summer.

"The work is tough, really tough, but living up here isn't," said corps member Kim Orr, 20, of San Clemente. She quit a better-paying trail maintenance job with the state Parks and Recreation Department to join the CCC last January.

"This work's a little harder and more detailed," she explained. "I'm not in it for the money. I'm in it for the scenery. I'm in it to climb peaks every weekend."

Miss Orr was working with crew leader Mary Anne Baum, 22, of Eureka, who has been in the corps two years. They spent their morning cleaning the mule corral at camp and then hiked a mile uphill to resod the dirt trail being replaced with the sturdier granite causeway.

The Yosemite crew is a fraction of the 1,900-member corps of 18- to 23-year-olds who pledge to work for a year in unglamorous public service jobs such as firefighting, flood control and park maintenance.

The corps' unwritten goals are to build character, confidence and skills that corps members can carry with them.

If Miss Baum were not in the corps, "I'd be in Kansas doing factory work, making color crayons," she said. That was the job she had before taking the advice of her brother, a former corps member, and joining the CCC.

She has worn out five or six pairs of gloves in her six months at Yosemite, a sign of the gritty tasks she has performed.

"There isn't a glove made that can hold up to these people," said Walt Castle, a park employee who coordinates back country maintenance projects.

"My Dad can't believe that his girl is out here doing this, and my Mom thinks it's fantastic," Miss Baum said. "We learn how to work hard. We learned what hiking is. We were hiking 3 1/2-4 miles uphill at Waterwheel Falls."

Corps members must maintain a hiking speed of three miles per hour, "and most can do five miles on good terrain," said crew supervisor Richard "Hoss" Payson. He lived up to his nickname physically before joining the high country team last April and losing 75 pounds.

About three-quarters of the corps members leave before their year is up — about 55 percent find jobs or return to school, about 25 percent are fired and about 20 percent leave for personal reasons.

However, the dropout rate for back country teams is very low, partly because corps members are specially selected for the task. But Miss Orr has a better reason for staying.

"Just living out here is worth it all," she said.

Writer Turns To Fiction For History

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — A popular historical writer on the Tudor era has turned to fiction to tell the story of Henry VIII's last wife and to advance her beliefs about a famous sketch.

Mary Luke has written four books about the 16th-century royal family, but "The Ivy Crown," which was a Book-of-the-Month club alternate selection, is her first novel on the Tudor period. It is based on the life of Katherine Parr, an educated noblewoman who had known all of the preceding wives of Henry VIII.

The novel is colorful and detailed, reflecting Mrs. Luke's extensive research in the English countryside about which she writes.

"I think that if you are going to write history as fiction, you have the same commitment to truth as you do when you are writing non-fiction," she said in a recent interview in her home in southwestern Connecticut. She has written one other novel.

Her first three books on the Tudor period were biographies published on both sides of the Atlantic. "Catherine, the Queen," concerning Catherine of Aragon — Henry VIII's first wife — was published in 1967. Her next two books were about Queen Elizabeth I and appeared in 1970 and 1973.

"Jack Geoghegan (her publisher) suggested Elizabeth as the natural follow to the first book, but I didn't want to do it because I thought it was overdone," she said.

Instead, she wrote the first book, "A Crown for Elizabeth," about the queen's childhood and thereby focused on all of Henry VIII's children. It was critically acclaimed and a success, she said.

In the process, the Pittsfield, Mass., native became interested in Katherine Parr, daughter of a prominent English family and practically raised in the king's household. After two loveless, arranged marriages, Katherine received a surprising proposal from Henry VIII.

"I thought this was a whale of a story and the more I researched, the more I knew it was," she said.

Florida Site Is Memorial To Religion Leader

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
ESTERO, Fla. (AP) — When Americans talk about pioneers they usually refer to those men and women who pushed westward across the Appalachian Mountains to the Pacific Ocean in the 100-year period beginning in 1760.

Few ever mention the struggle of those who followed a religious visionary to this quiet nook on Florida's west coast before the turn of the century.

They were called "Korehshans" and never numbered much over 200. Hard workers, devout and obedient, they followed Dr. Cyrus Reed Teed, a New York physician, to 305 acres he obtained here in 1894.

Most of South Florida was a wilderness area then, few roads existed and the easiest way to reach here was by water. Despite the heat, bugs, scorpions and poisonous snakes, the settlers built a community that included tennis courts, picnic grounds and even boasted a traveling baseball team.

The settlement's "Golden Years" were short, however, lasting only from 1904 until Teed's death Dec. 22,

Street Dog Appears Set For Stardom

YORK, Pa. (AP) — It's a real-life rags to riches story.

Glenn D. Hake found The Governor in the streets of Harrisburg six years ago. Now, The Governor is going to be the center of a non-profit corporation, and some day, if all goes well, a big star.

"With a talent like his, he could be big," said Hake, a Hellam truck driver, free-lance photographer and country music singer.

The Governor, who now goes by the stage name Boopie, is an 8-year-old, mixed-breed, pit bull terrier who plays the piano.

He may not play it well but, according to Hake, he's probably the only incorporated dog in the country.

"It could be. I don't know of many other dogs or animals that are incorporated," he said.

The corporation is called Man's Best Friend Charities Inc. Its purpose is to raise money during charity events where Boopie will be the star performer.

So far, Boopie has played at a Be Kind to Animals fund-raiser, where he collected $47 for the York County chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"You should've seen that. When he played, the kids loved it," Hake said. "Whenever he plays and kids watch, they go nuts."

Boopie's rise to incorporation began in 1978 when Hake found the dog in downtown Harrisburg. He was delivering a load of materials to a brick company when he noticed about five stray dogs hanging around the loading dock.

Hake asked about the dogs and ended up taking the 2-year-old pit bull home. His wife, Eleanor, didn't like the idea of having a dog, but as time passed, she grew attached to it.

"Boopie's part of the family. He's just like the son we never had, our pride and joy," Hake said.

Boopie was happy to just hang around the house and occasionally accompany Hake in his truck. Then, in the spring, Hake bought an old piano at a yard sale.

One time, when Hake was playing the piano, Boopie jumped on a stool by the instrument and began tapping the keyboard with one paw.

"A light went on in my head. I thought it was a great thing, a dog playing the piano," Hake recalled.

So, Hake went about teaching Boopie to play the piano. At first, he said, Boopie would only use his left paw. But two weeks and many doggie treats later, Boopie was tickling the ivories with both paws.

Boopie's style can only be described as avant-garde. He bangs on the keys, waiting for a doggie treat, producing something approaching music.

"Of course, a dog can't play melodies," Hake said.

After the show at the SPCA fund-raiser, Hake thought about taking Boopie's act on the road.

"With his talent, I could use him to make a profit. But after thinking about it, I decided I'd rather make it non-profit. I'd like to use his talents to help poor people," Hake said.

That decision was not a difficult one to make, he said. Hake's father died when he was a 3-year-old and his mother had to support the family.

"I came up the hard way. I know what hard times are. If I can help poor people, I'd rather do that than make money with Boopie," he said.

For now, Boopie isn't working steadily.

His last performance was on WGAL-TV's PM Magazine. Since then, Hake's daughter, Glenda C. Goss, has been trying to line up work for the piano-playing pooch.

Meanwhile, Hake said, he's going to try to teach Boopie to sing.

1908, says Jim Baker, a state ranger. Teed's religious beliefs that he was the Messiah and that the earth was a hollow sphere with the sun in the center and life existing on the inside were not readily accepted by local residents, Baker explains. Many Korehshans believed he would be reincarnated and waited to see him again. The majority, disenchanted, drifted away after the two world wars.

"The dream was gone," says Baker.

By 1947, only 13 followers remained on the property. The last resident, Hedwig Michel, died in 1982 at the age of 90.

In 1961, the land was deeded to the state as a living memorial to Teed. The Koreshan State Historic Site is part of a state park off U.S. 41 between Naples and Fort Myers.

Teed was born in Trout Creek, N.Y. He left school at 9, says Baker, and somehow served as an assistant surgeon in the Union Army during the Civil War. After the war, he attended the Eclectic School of Medicine in New York run by his uncle, Jesse Teed.

He set up practice in Utica, N.Y. An inventor of sorts, he tried to make gold out of sea water.

"When he was 39, Teed had a divine illumination. He said he learned he had lived seven lifetimes and was the seventh Messiah. He was to save the remnants of the universe and teach a new religion," Baker continues.

Teed changed his name to "Korehsh," which means Cyrus in Persian, and began to preach "Korehshanity" to his patients. Persecution followed, forcing him to move several times.

Invited in the early 1880s to speak to a gathering of psychics in Chicago, he was credited with "faith healing" a woman who previously could not walk. His following grew to about 150 people, but he was persecuted anew for his beliefs and a growing reputation as the "crazy doctor." It was around this time that his wife, Della, and son, Douglas,

He moved his commune to San Francisco and then Denver before visiting Lakeland, Fla., where he met Gustaf Damkohler, a German immigrant, who donated the 305 acres here Teed said would be "The New Jerusalem."

The first arrivals built a sawmill needed to cut pine and oak trees into lumber. A women's dorm and a "brother's" cottage were built along with a dining hall. He lived in a two-story house.

Teed believed the people who formed the nucleus of his new religion had to be celibate. He broke up families — men and women lived separately and their children were raised in a communal environment.

The settlement included a bakery, general store, boatbuilding shop and machine shop. Cattle, citrus, lumber and products they made were sold to the public.

Of the 40 buildings erected by the Korehshans, the art hall is one of eight remaining.

Here was where their meetings were held and stage plays performed. It also served as the settlement's school where basic education and some trades were taught.

Korehshans loved music and had their own orchestra. The musical instruments they used remain on the stage, including a piano and pump organ.

All-Male Clubs Are Revered, Ridiculed

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — In 1791, six classmates gathered for an evening of ale and song and had such a raucous good time they started a private social club dubbed "The Pig," with a Latin motto, Dum Vivimus Vivamus, "Live life to the fullest."

Thus was launched a die-hard Harvard University tradition that still earns reverence and ridicule.

In the almost 200 years since, the university has adjusted, if sometimes begrudgingly, to changing times. Its nine all-male clubs, wrapped in the banner of tradition, have not.

On Monday, Harvard plans to drag the clubs into the 20th century, officially demanding they admit women or severe ties with the university.

"These clubs must come to terms with the changing role of women in society and learn to associate with them in college as associates and colleagues, and not merely as romantic and sexual partners," said Archie C. Epps III, dean of students.

The Harvard of yesteryear — all-male, almost all-white and almost always rich — is long gone. The university first enrolled women in 1971.

But through the other changes, the social clubs continued to thrive, maintaining their high life with lavish banquets, garden parties and expensive junkets.

About 200 men from a student body of 6,500 belong to the clubs, but it is impossible to graduate without hearing or seeing something of the rarefied club experience.

The most popular stories surround the fall selection process. Candidates are notified that they have been "punched" when a letter slips underneath their dormitory door. After that, an expensive courtship begins.

"I remember being taken out to all these different fancy restaurants all over Boston. It lasted a month," recalled Peter Fleischer, class of '80. "I don't know how I got any work done in that period because we were out three nights a week, eating and drinking and talking. It was definitely a lot of fun."

His suitor, The Phoenix Club, picked up the tab.

Candidates for the Delphic Club have been wooed with weekend trips to the casinos in Atlantic City. Transportation — free, of course — is provided by a chartered Lear jet.

Clubs yearn to snag the sons of the rich and famous — at almost any cost.

The heir to vast New England fortune, who asked not to be identified for fear of upsetting his father, a club alumni, described a cocktail party he attended at The Fox Club. At the time, he was going through a punk rock stage. His hair was bleached blond. His clothes were torn. "I smelled bad," he said.

The heir, then a sophomore, attended the party with his girlfriend, an unsmiling black woman with a Mohawk haircut.

"The entire party, club members kept on coming up to me and telling me how they loved diversity and how good I would be for the club," he said. "I felt embarrassed for them." He did not join.

But the children of the wealthy often do.

"The clubs had an unbroken dynasty of Lowells, Cabots, Sears and Saltonstalls," said journalist Cleveland Amory, a member of the Spee Club in 1939, the year before John F. Kennedy joined. "You had to have just the right amount of money. David Rockefeller had too much. It had to be old money, not new money. In general, a prep school background was essential, although there were exceptions."

"In a word," Amory said, "they were exclusive."

Once made members, "clubbies," as they are called, continue the parties, but also use the clubs as a place to eat, relax, shoot pool, watch television or take saunas.

There are rituals: At the Owl Club each fall, members play touch football with a beer bottle in one hand. Two rival clubs take turn throwing live lobsters and golf balls at each other's houses. The D.U. Club holds a "Golf Classic," where the score is computed as the number of strokes minus number of beers consumed.

But the most famous event of the club social calendar is the elite Fly Club garden party, a Great Gatsby-esque affair where members and their dates dress to impress.

The party is held in a fenced-off garden next to the club, and each year the curious gather to watch the invited come and go, and to listen to the sounds of laughter, music and clinking champagne glasses.

In recent years, party guests have had to dodge water balloons thrown over the fence by opponents of the club system.

"People misunderstand us," said one member who asked not to be identified. "Club people don't see the reason women have to be admitted. The place is so wrapped up in history, people fear breaking ties. There is a tradition, and people want to preserve that."

"We don't get together at the clubs to say nasty things about women. It's just a place where men can be together and have some kind of male camaraderie."

Fleischer said that every time the idea of women members was raised at The Phoenix Club, "Some guys would stand up and say, 'This is the end of the world. This is the loss of all morals.'"

"I personally didn't understand it, but some guys felt so strongly, it would have been pointless to try to fight them."

But the Harvard clubs may not even have the chance to fight now.

If they refuse to accept women, the school will cut off their phones and their heat. Both services are replaceable at higher costs. But that is not what worries club members.

They fear the university's threat to take away their most treasured value: their link to Harvard.

"We certainly are at the whims of the university," said Kyle Stanley, the president of the Porcellian, the original Pig Club of 1791. "We certainly will abide by their rules."

Lafayette College Puts On Month's Commemoration Of French Hero

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — In 1824, a delegation of 200 Eastonians rowed down the Delaware River to Philadelphia to get a glimpse of the Marquis de Lafayette.

The old soldier was making a triumphal tour through the United States, and he was greeted everywhere with parades and pageantry as the hero of the American Revolution. Amateur songwriters penned lyrics in his praise and artists vied for the privilege of painting his portrait.

One of the Eastonians, James Madison Porter, managed to meet him.

"Porter, Porter, I remember that name," Lafayette mused. "I fought with a Captain Porter at the Battle of Brandywine."

Delighted, Porter said the captain was his father, and his uncle, a Mr. Parker, had also fought with them.

"Ah, they were good soldiers," Lafayette recalled. "They were very kind to me when I was wounded."

Dazzled, the younger Porter returned home. Shortly afterward, he and some friends conceived the idea of creating a college in their hometown, and Porter could think of no better name for the new school than that of the defender of liberty. So Lafayette College was born in 1826.

It is now 150 years since Lafayette's death in 1834 and the college has honored him by staging a month-long commemoration for the Frenchman who came to America in its time of need.

An art show called "Images of a Hero: Lafayette in Paintings, Prints and Sculpture" was the first exhibition of the school year. A collection of memorabilia, including swords, letters from Lafayette to American Revolutionary leaders and hundreds of prints were also on display.

The high point of the celebration was a symposium in which scholars from France and America met to debate Lafayette's legacy.

Who was this unusual man who decided on his own to aid a revolution in a foreign country?

Gilbert du Motier Lafayette was a wealthy aristocrat, born into a noble family and allied through marriage with another family of wealth and title. But Lafayette, evidently influenced by the philosophers of the Enlightenment, opposed the position of privilege held by the nobility in pre-Revolutionary France.

He favored a constitutional monarchy for his country, opposed slavery, and all his life supported national revolutions, in the United States, France, Poland and Latin America.

Though scholars today debate his importance in the American Revolution, there is no question that his presence was an electrifying uplift for the embattled colonists.

He was only 19 years old, a 6-foot redhead, when he arrived in the United States in 1777 to offer his services to Gen. George Washington. By all accounts, the two men struck up a close friendship that lasted all their lives. Lafayette, whose father had died when the boy was 2, considered the older man his adoptive father and he later named his own son George Washington Lafayette.

Lafayette was given a command with the American troops, was wounded at the battle of Brandywine and passed the long winter of hardship at Valley Forge. But he rendered possibly his most valuable service by returning to France in 1779 and persuading the king, Louis XVI, to help the Americans do battle with England, France's traditional enemy. Louis dispatched men, ships, supplies and food.

Lafayette returned in 1780 and took command of an army in Virginia, where he had a major part in the Battle of Yorktown, the site of the British surrender.

When he returned home, Lafayette played a major role in the Revolution of 1789 in his own country. He wrote the first drafts of the "Declaration of the Rights of Man," which was heavily influenced by the American Bill of Rights. Lafayette later fell into disfavor during the Terror, and he ended up spending five years in a prison in Austria.

After the defeat of Napoleon and the restoration of the monarchy, Lafayette remained a symbol of the opposition to unbridled royal power. Though his reputation was somewhat sullied in France after the revolution, in the United States, he remained an untarnished hero.

He and Winston Churchill were the only foreigners ever granted the status of honorary citizen.

During his triumphal return to America in the 1820s, Lafayette met the future president, Andrew Jackson. Jackson told the hero that when he was a small boy during the revolution he had seen Lafayette in military garb and had never forgotten the wondrous sight nor lost his admiration for him.

When Lafayette died in 1834, President Jackson called a joint session of Congress to announce his death, news that Jackson called "afflicting intelligence." Jackson ordered that "the same honors be rendered him as were observed upon the decease of Washington."

Another major ceremony took place in New York City, and diplomats and dignitaries from both nations took part. Lafayette College students celebrated the occasion with a full-dress re-enactment of the Battle of Brandywine.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠ Boy Scouts ought to do well at bridge. Their motto should be the creed of every bridge player.

Because of his good five-card suit, South deemed his hand too strong for an opening bid of one no trump. Although his hand had good "body," North was extremely optimistic in considering that his flat 5-point hand would give declarer play for nine tricks.

West led the top of his diamond sequence. Unless the queen of hearts were to drop in two rounds, declarer realized that he would need five tricks from the club suit. There was no point in holding up diamonds, so declarer won the ace in dummy and ran the ten of clubs. When the finesse won, declarer continued with a club to the nine. Unfortunately, West showed out on this trick, so declarer could take only four tricks in clubs. As a result, South ended up a trick short of his goal.

Naturally, our hawk-eyed readers will have spotted what declarer missed — that there was an additional chance for his contract. If the clubs are 4-3, declarer can still come out a winner if West has the eight of hearts.

When declarer leads the ace of clubs from the hand, he should check the hand. As the cards lie, West contributes the eight to this suit. Declarer is still in dummy and can take another finesse by leading the seven of hearts. If West has the eight from his hand, he will be able to reel in the winner. If not, his contract is lost.

Have you been having trouble finding your way through the maze of DOUBLES? Take a takeout. The DOUBLES book, "Goren-Doubles," by Charles Goren, Palmyra, N.J., is available for $4.95, payable to New York.

Drifter Giving Info On Murders

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, who claims to have killed hundreds of people nationwide, has given information on about 54 murders in five states and 12 in Canada, but has been implicated in only 11, authorities said.

Questioned by police while serving a 30-year term, Lucas gave investigators information on about 35 unsolved murders, 19 cases and 19 else, including one in Erie County District Attorney Howard Arcara said. The killings occurred between 1974 and 1980, Arcara said.

Authorities say Lucas, who boasted of 360 killings, confessed to seven murders in 1980. He was sentenced to death in 1982.

No Jail Term In Self-Abortion

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A woman who had a self-abortion last month could have been jailed for 30 days, but was given an unconditional discharge and no jail term after a judge heard new evidence.

Prosecutors dropped charges of criminal negligence against James Jenkins, who was accused of failing to attend to a woman's miscarriage.

A prosecutor showed evidence received in the case that could have led to the death of the woman.

On May 1, the woman's abdomen became swollen and painful. She was rushed to a hospital, where her baby died 30 hours after being born.

The wisest investment you'll ever make for your family.

Comic Book Feeds Tales About Chief

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A comic book packed with sordid details of the case against former Police Chief Arturo Durazo is the latest evidence that his life story is rapidly becoming part of popular folklore.

The colorful publication is based on "The Evil about the Evil Durazo," a book by his former bodyguard, Jose Gonzalez Gonzalez, that has been selling well for almost a year. Plans also are advancing for a movie version.

The comic book vividly illustrates the accusations against Durazo, Mexico City police chief from 1976 to 1982. For example, one two-page spread shows policemen working as laborers to build his opulent mansion on Mount Ajusco on the southern outskirts of Mexico City.

"They didn't teach me how to do this in the academy," one of the workers says, under a caption that describes the estate as a "mixture of an amusement park with a palace. The work on Ajusco brought to mind the construction of the pyramids of Egypt."

That mansion was taken over by the government earlier this year, along with another Durazo estate in the Pacific resort of Zihuatanejo known as "The Parthenon of Mexico." Both have become popular tourist landmarks.

Durazo, who held office during the administration of President Jose Lopez Portillo, remains in a Los Angeles jail cell without bail pending extradition proceedings. He stands accused of extortion among members of his 30,000-member police force, of tax fraud, and of illegal possession of firearms and contraband. He also is wanted for questioning about drug trafficking.

U.S. authorities arrested him June 29 at the San Juan, Puerto Rico, airport when he tried to pass through customs en route from Brazil. In the comic book, the 61-year-old Durazo is shown cavorting in a scanty costume at the Rio de Janeiro carnival while the global search for him proceeds.

The arrest warrants issued for him in January were a culmination of the "moral renewal" campaign President Miguel de la Madrid put into effect after taking office in December 1982, promising to rid the government of endemic corruption. All Mexico's recent presidents have belonged to the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Durazo was a childhood friend of Lopez Portillo, and the former president comes in for particularly harsh criticism in the comic book for sheltering and encouraging him. The police chief even was named an army general, over the protests of career military officers.

Since leaving office, Lopez Portillo has spent most of his time in Europe and has largely maintained public silence.

Durazo, who once told reporters his salary was $1,300 a month, lived the life of a nobleman. Among the facilities of his Ajusco estate were a heliport, a gymnasium with a sauna and whirlpool bath, a discotheque modeled after Studio 54 in New York City, a casino, swimming pool, greenhouse, an exhibition hall for his collection of antique automobiles, a fully stocked wine cellar, and a "library" — though with only a dozen books.

While Durazo is shown in the comic book living in luxury and forcing his officers to turn over part of their salary to him, ordinary citizens are pictured as suffering extortion from police working to get enough money to please their chief.

The "mordida" — or bribe — for officials is a traditional part of Mexican life. Durazo's successor as police chief, Ramon Mota, recently touched off a major controversy by saying that despite progress made under the "moral renewal" campaign it would be utopian to believe all corruption can be rooted out from the police force.

Comic books and pulp fiction have a vast adult reading audience in Mexico, where much of the population has only a primary education.

The government has used comic books to spread information about everything from family planning to Mexican history.

Editorial Esfuerzo, the publishing house of the Durazo comic book, has ties to the Proceso magazine group, which has frequently criticized the government. The 48-page comic book sells for 100 pesos — about 50 cents.

The original paperback book by Gonzalez Gonzalez has been prominently displayed at newsstands. It is favored reading for subway and bus riders.

The author claimed in a January interview he already had made $900,000 from it, possibly unprecedented earnings from a book in Mexico. And now a sequel has been published — "What I Didn't Tell in The Evil about the Evil Durazo."
