Pitt Labels Vote Counters 'Successful'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County elections officials say that, in spite of the heavy voter turnout and the fact that voting machines were being used in the county for the first time, the Nov. 6 election went very well.

Elections board Chairman Clifton Everette Jr. acknowledged that "we had one machine break down during the day ... Greenville 7, Elm Street, actually broke down and we replaced it and had no more problems." And in Greenville precincts 5, 9 and 10, the machines "printed the results in a way that was not acceptable, so we ... took all the ballots and ran them back through a counter again."

But Everette said even as congested as it was, and taking into account the problems with the new vote tabulating machines, "it was better than the old way," of having to hand-count all the ballots after the polls close.

"It was our first time" using machines, Everette said. "We didn't expect to be 100 percent without problems, but I would have liked to have had less problems."

With the problems confined primarily to precincts in the city of Greenville, Everette said machines at precincts outside Greenville "worked fine" and precinct officials were "tickled to death. I'm glad we got them."

Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee also said officials in smaller precincts in the county were happy with the voting machines. But she suggested more machines were needed in the larger precincts, such as Greenville 5, with 4,967 voters registered, Greenville 7, and in Winterville, Ayden and Farmville, which also have large registrations.

Only one voting machine was in use at each of the 24 precinct voting places "because the machine (manufacturing) company recommended the number to be used," Mrs. Hardee said. That was not enough in the larger precincts, she suggested. "We had to rely on their judgment. We had no experience to go on. I believe the machines would have worked very well if there had been enough of them."

"We could have used four voting machines" in Greenville 5, Everette noted. "One machine was not enough." Although it worked properly "it just slowed down the process," he said.

BIKERS' TOY RIDE — About 400 motorcycle enthusisiasts and nearly 200 motorcycles paraded through Greenville Saturday afternoon during the second annual toy ride, with each biker carrying a toy during the parade to Carolina East Mall. The ride was sponsored by the J&E Harley Davidson Co. of Greenville and the Frog Level Bikers Club. There were about 10 clubs participating in the event with some bikers fram as far away as Ohio and Maryland. Toys were presented to Maj. Ronald Davis of the Salvation Army and about $190 collected from each biker was presented to Mayor Janice Buck for the Ronald McDonald House. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Todds Create Major Endowment At ECU

Dr. Richard Cecil Todd, professor of history emeritus, and his wife, Clauda Pennock Todd, have established a major endowment designed to eventually generate a minimum of $1 million a year for enrichment of activities and programs at East Carolina University.

The fund, known as the Richard Cecil Todd and Clauda Pennock Todd Endowment, "is a far-reaching program that will eventually touch every school on campus," according to Rebecca Singletary Harris, planning support and special gifts director.

The Todds have begun funding the endowment and will complete it with bequests in their wills, Mrs. Harris said. "Their goal is for the principal to be held and reinvested until it generates a minimum of $1 million a year," she said.

Unique and elaborate in its design, the endowment will eventually provide for 22 different funds from its interest income.

Funds are planned for support of faculty research, scholarships for student honor organizations, scholarships for a number of academic departments and for maintainance of university grounds.

Once all the specified funds have been endowed and have reached self-perpetuating status, continuing income will be reinvested into the endowment to expand benefits to the univerity, Mrs. Harris said. Portions of the endowment have been earmarked to the chancellor's discretionary fund to enable ECU to meet unforeseeable needs and ensure future development.

"This gift is indicative of the Todds' character and their devotion to East Carolina," Dr. John M. Howell, ECU Chancellor, said. "They've worked most of their lives to improve the educational environment at ECU and the endowment is a wonderful continuation of their commitment.

Four years ago, Dr. Todd established a third scholarship fund bearing his name for scholarships in the department of history where he taught for 27 years prior to retirement in 1977. Since 1970, he has established the Richard Cecil Todd Phi Alpha Theta International Honor Society in History Scholarships of about $500 each; the Richard Cecil Todd Scholarships for Undergraduate Scholars in History with a basic fund to be maintained at a minimum of $20,000 and the Richard Cecil Todd and Clauda Pennock Todd Scholarship fund, set up on an annual matching basis with Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi national honor fraternity, which he served as adviser since its founding in 1950.

Also, in 1975, a gift by Todd was used to furnish a lounge for Lambda-Eta chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, a room which was named in his honor.

Monroe Waters Draws Post On Martin's Transition Team

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Winterville resident Monroe Waters says he feels comfortable as one of two Democrats named to Gov. Jim Martin's transition team.

"Jim Martin has shown that he appreciates the input of Democrats, as well as Republicans," he said, "and that he's working for all the people of the state, so I can work very well for him and with him."

Waters has worked for Martin since Eddie Knox, the candidate for governor in whose campaign he had served during the Democratic primaries, lost in the Democratic primary runoff in June. "Even while I was working for Eddie, I admired Jim Martin," he said. "I was present for most all the debates round the state and I thought Jim Martin conducted himself well ... answered any kind of question well.

"I was pleased when Eddie endorsed Jim. I knew he was a man I could support, too. Endorsing Jim was a very courageous thing for Eddie to do. It obviously wasn't the way to keep friends within his own party, but he did it because he honestly thought the people of this state would be better off with Jim as governor."

Waters leaves his job as a case work technician in the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation with an office at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center here for an office in the legislative building in Raleigh. It's a temporary assignment — until inauguration.

He said he has no assurance, has not even had any conversation with the governor-elect, about whether there will be a job for him in the Martin administration come January. "Jim doesn't make political promises," he said, "and I like that about him. People are allowed to serve based on qualifications and merit, not patronage."

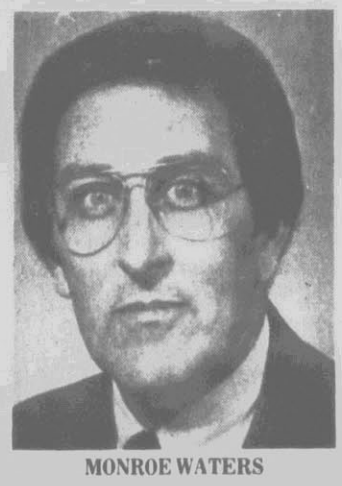

Waters' job within the transition team will be as a liaison between the governor-elect and state employees. Waters has been a state employee for 15 years and has served as an officer of a state employees' association.

"Governor-elect Martin has stated over and over," he said, "that no state employee who's doing his or her job well need fear. Jobs will not be lost because of one's political allegiance."

As state employees' liaison, he said he will "be looking at departments and divisions of the government to see how we can effectively ensure that the services continue without interruption into the new administration ... which areas we can be more effective in."

Waters said he thinks Jim Hunt

Bowers Elected

Lawrence R. Bowers, former chief executive of United Carolina Bankshares Corp., has been elected president and chief executive officer of North State Financial Corp. on an interim basis, North State board Chairman Max Ray Joyner announced Saturday.

Bowers suceeds William D. Reagan Jr., who resigned from North State to pursue other interests, Joyner said. North State Financial Corp. is the parent firm of North State Savings & Loan Corp.

Joyner also announced that preliminary financial data for the nine months ending Sept. 30 indicated a "significant loss" for that period. He said a report will be made later.

Bowers retired last year as president, chairman and chief executive officer of United Carolina Bankshares Corp., parent firm of United Carolina Bank. Bowers is also a former vice chairman of the North Carolina State Ports Authority.

'84 Tobacco Festival Winds Down

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Friday was a quiet day for Southern Flue-Cured Tobbacco Festival and Tobacco Farmer Show officials. At least the pace was slower that day than it had been during the three-week celebration that ended this week.

The festival closed at the end of the regular work day Thursday after three weeks of activities including an awards banquet, bundle auction, and numerous contests for pipe smokers, clog dancers, artists and tobacco spitting, tying and grading experts. The farmer show opened Tuesday and closed Thursday.

Tobacco Festival Executive Director Lynn Caverly Jobes said she was getting ready to go home, "put on some jeans and get some rest like everybody else" when contacted late Friday afternoon. However, she said both the festival and farmer show had been a success. "We have done well, have been a success ... because everyone who is connected with this festival — from growers to warehousemen — makes up one big family, a family that looks out for everyone else," she said.

That self-supporting "family" festival cost approximately $96,000 this year, according to Mrs. Jobes. And next year, she said, the festival will support itself as it has in past years with money earned and raised through festival events, magazine ad sales and event sponsorships. Earnings from 1984 festival activities were not available; however, Mrs. Jobes said that the two beach dances and T-shirt sales were the biggest money makers. Dance attendance was estimated at 1,400.

Jim Swindell, Tobacco Farmer Show general manager, also spent Friday tying up loose ends. He and his staff spent the better part of the day seeing that show exhibitors got packed up and off all right, and making sure that everything was in order at the Farmers Warehouse where the ninth annual show was held.

According to Swindell, approximately 50,000 people came to the

Mommy Hale's Work With Addicted Infants Earns Wonder Woman Award

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike's mother was a junkie. He was born a 5-pound heroin addict, racked with convulsions for his first three months while doctors gave him phenobarbitol, another addictive drug, to ease his withdrawal symptoms.

Then Mike was moved to Hale House, where he was loved back to health by Clara Hale, the 79-year-old founder of a special group foster home for infants of drug addicts.

At the age of 4 months, Mike weighs 12 pounds and is smiling and alert. He is drug-free, and so is his mother, who is in prison on a drug-related charge.

"But she's going to be out next month. She's going to marry the father and take Mike home," says Mommy Hale, as she is called.

The goal of Hale House is reuniting families, and the waiting list is two to three times the house's capacity of about 15. Fewer than 20 of the 550 children who have lived at Hale House since it opened 15 years ago have been put up for adoption rather than returned to their natural parents.

Last week Mrs. Hale's work won her a Wonder Woman Award, given by the Wonder Woman Foundation to honor women who have made significant humanitarian contributions to society.

She says her technique with addicted children is simple: "Just keep walking the floor, talking to them and feeding them. They are very hungry."

Mothers have to apply to place their children in Hale House and agree to undergo drug rehabilitation with the intention of reclaiming the youngsters. The average child stays at the house for 18 months while the mother gets back on her feet. Weekly visits are mandatory.

Most children arrive at the age of 10 days, after the worst of their drug withdrawal has been handled at a hospital.

The youngest ones stay in cribs in Mrs. Hale's bedroom, on the third floor of a five-story walk-up in Harlem. With three infants there now, including Mike, her days begin with 5 a.m. bottle feedings in her rocking chair.

Downstairs in the nursery, older kids reach out for hugs and kisses and Mrs. Hale responds with a ceaseless litany of "love talk" and smooching.

In general, foster care officials prefer private families to group settings in the belief that the children will get more love, said Anita Delaney, spokeswoman for the division of Special Services for Children.

"But this is a very unique setting, a very special program," Ms. Delaney said.

Mrs. Hale has been a foster parent since she was widowed at the age of 26. She was considering retirement when she became involved with drug-addicted children.

Her daughter Lorraine, who is executive director of the house and has a doctorate in child development, said she had seen a woman sitting on a crate with a baby in her lap. The woman was in a drug trance and in danger of dropping the child.

"In a great act of impetuousness, I got out of the car," the younger woman said. "I lectured her and told her to take the baby to my mother."

The next day, Mrs. Hale called her daughter and said: "There's a junkie at my door and she said you sent her."

"That's how we started," the daughter said. "Within six months, there were wall-to-wall cribs."

Now the house has a staff of 15 and an annual budget of about $300,000, funded mostly from government sources and with some donations, including $20,000 a year from John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono.

But there never seems to be enough money and the washing machine has been broken for a month.

According to the city Health Department's Bureau of Biostatistics, 884 children out of 112,000 live births were born to addicted mothers in 1983.

show to inspect the display valued at $9 million and put on by 214 exhibitors.

Neither Mrs. Jobes nor Swindell could say exactly how many people the show and festival brought to Greenville, however, calls to various area motels and inns early in the week revealed not a single vacancy.

Ruth Matous, director of sales and marketing for the Greenville Sheraton and director of the festival queen's pageant, said there wasn't an empty rooom at the Sheraton throughout the festival. "I'd estimate that 90 percent of all our groups were tobacco festival and farmer show related," she said.

When asked how much capital the festival and farmer show brought the Sheraton, Mrs. Matous said that definite figures weren't available, but that the take in on rooms occupied by festival and show goers probably "came somewhere close to $4,500 a day," not including "restaurant and lounge business," she said.

Pitt ...

In those large precincts where long lines formed, the use of "emergency ballot boxes managed to unstop the bottle necks and I think the precinct officials really did a good job in coping with the crowds." Mrs. Hardee said.

At 6 a.m., when they arrived to set up at Greenville 5, Mrs. Hardee said precinct officials found "60 people in line already."

The polls closed on Nov. 6 with some 33,965 Pitt County residents, or 74 percent of the 45,943 registered voters, casting ballots in the election.

Mrs. Hardee said 5,000 of those registered to vote registered between Sept. 18 and Oct. 8.

"The people out there did a tremendous job," Mrs Hardee emphasized. Poll workers "deserve a lot of consideration for what they had to put up with on election day."

With no elections scheduled until next fall's municipal elections, Everette said elections officials will use the time to "purge the books" of voters who have not voted in the past four years — as required by law — and to do other "houskeeping work, which is sorely needed," because with "seven elections and registering all those people (more than 12,000)" in the past year, some things had to be put off.

Everette also said he would like to see the elections board "do some serious study and take some steps to divide some of the larger precincts," such as Greenville 5, Winterville, Farmville. "It's something we've known" needed attention, but "we just haven't had time to get to it."

But unless the present board, including Everette, a Democrat, Democrat Myra Cain, and Republican Dick Green, has the time to rearrange the precincts before June 30, 1985, a new board, most likely with a Republican chairman, will face the problem.

According to Everette, Gov.-elect Jim Martin "will reconstitute the State Board of Elections, very likely in the Republican majority," after he takes office in January. "Sometime during the spring of 1985, the respective executive committees for the Republican and Democratic parties will submit recommendations for appointment to the county boards. Unless the state board deviates from the past, two Republicans and one Democrat will be appointed," in Pitt County. "The county board then elects a new chairman."

Everette, appointed to the local elections board in 1975, has been chairman since 1977.

The County Board of Elections conducts all county-wide elections, as well as elections for every municipality in the county except Ayden, Grifton and Grimesland. Even then, the board maintains voting records for those three towns.

has done a good job as governor and that Martin and his bi-partisan council of state will build on that record. He said he thinks the people of the state will be well-served by having a governor and attorney general who are of a different political affiliation than are most of the members of the Legislature and of the lieutenant governor."

Waters said Lt. Gov.-elect "Bob Jordan is a fine man and a well-qualified person, and he's not going to let partisan politics get in the way of doing a good job for the state."

He said he thinks the coming administration is going "to run the state government like a business."

Waters is a Winterville native whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Waters, live near him. He and his wife, Lorraine Buck Waters, have three daughters — Sherrie, 20, Michelle, 16, and Lori Ann, 9.

At his retirement, Todd held the academic rank of professor and was director of the department's honors program and had served as chairman of the history honors committee since 1957. A native of Lancaster Pa., Todd has degrees from Millersville State College, Pa., Penn State University and the PhD from Duke University.

Todd founded Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi at East Carolina. It is the university's oldest fraternal honor organization and consistently has been recognized as the most outstanding chapter in the nation. A member since 1934, Todd has served as national president, vice president, counselor and historian of Phi Sigma Pi and has received plaques, gold medallions and outstanding service keys as well as a lifetime membership for his leadership.

Mrs. Todd is the first woman nationally to be inducted into Phi Sigma Pi. Both Todds received the Phi Sigma Pi Outstanding Alumni awards in 1983.

Also in 1983, Todd was the first non-alumnus to receive the East Carolina University Outstanding Alumni Award.

Greenville Man Struck By Train

A Greenville man who tripped or fell beneath the wheels of a moving train late Friday afternoon was reported in fair condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Saturday night.

Henry Johnson of Route 2, Greenville, suffered extensive damage to his right leg and was being cared for in the hospital's ortopedic surgical unit, a PCMH spokesman said.

According to investigating officer F.G. Pruitt of the Greenville Police Department, Johnson was conscious when he was found at 7 p.m. Friday, apprimately two-and-a-half hours after Johnson said he fell under the train.

Pruitt reported that Johnson dragged himself approximately 1,000 feet from the point of impact to the Arlington Street railroad crossing where he was spotted by an unidentified individual who alerted police.

Pitt County's Conservative Voice
The Republican Corner

WANTED: 5,000 GOOD DEMOCRATS

The results of the last election show that many thousands of Democrats in Pitt County voted for Republican candidates. Indeed, many voted a straight Republican ticket. The message in this column is especially directed to you.

During the first 9 months of 1984, Republican registrations in Pitt County grew by over 45%. 2,472 new Republicans were added to bring total Republican registration in the county to 7,961. We are about 17.5% of the registered voters in Pitt County. Experience in other North Carolina counties proves that when Republican registration approaches 30% of the voters, Republicans can be elected at all levels. For example, in neighboring Carteret County, Republicans are 28.3% of the registered voters and in the election held last week, Carteret County elected a full slate of 5 new Republican County Commissioners, 2 Republican School Board Members, a Republican State Legislator, and carried their county for Reagan, Helms and Martin.

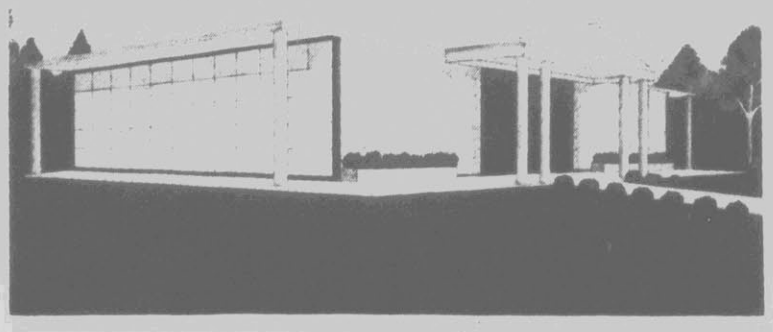

That's why we need about 5,000 Democrats to change their registration to Republican. That would put Republican registration in Pitt County near our 30% goal. The result would be a competitive two party system with the best candidates from both parties emerging. It is time to bring an end to one party's total domination of government.

So, if you are among the thousands of Democrats who find your party's candidates and platforms increasingly out of touch with your own feelings, we welcome you to join us in building the Republican Party. If you feel as we do that the Republican Party's candidates and positions on issues best represents the average working American, then join us. Change your registration to Republican. You can do it easily — right in your own home. Call Pitt County Republican Party Chairman Andy Andrews at 355-2447 for more information.

Note. If you hesitate to change your registration because you think it would keep you from voting in primaries, consider this: The President of the United States, our two U.S. Senators, 5 of North Carolina's U.S. Congressmen, and our next Governor were ALL chosen in Republican primaries. No Democrats were able to cast votes for them in their primaries.

Dr. Privette was a member of the first class of students to study under the medical school's one-year program in 1972-73 and Dr. Younge was the first resident to complete post-graduate training in psychiatry at the medical school.

Dr. James Evans Nicholson, a Williamston family physician who received his residency training in family medicine at ECU, was installed as vice president. Dr. George Horace Moore, a Wake Forest family physician, will be the association's treasurer. Moore was a member of the charter class of students receiving medical degrees from ECU in 1981.

Applications

The University College of East Carolina University is accepting applications for the spring semester. Registration for the semester will be held Jan. 3 and classes will begin Jan. 7.

The University College is the contact point for individuals who wish to earn college credit or pursue a degree as part-time or evening students. Interested individuals may contact the University College, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or call 757-6488 for more information.

School Board

The Greenville Board of Education will meet Monday at 8 p.m. at Agnes Fullilove School.

Agenda items include a report on the Aycock exam schedule, a report on class size expectations and master computer plans, and discussion of a budget amendment.

Voter Cards

Pitt County voters who have not received a voter registration card by mail, or who failed to pick up their card at their polling place on Nov. 8, may pick up their card at the Board of Elections' office on Second Street.

Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee said the cards, although not required for a person to vote, gives a person voter registration information, such as the precinct, voting place, state Senate and House districts, the U.S. Congressional District and judicial district in which the voter is registered.

The pocket card also contains a blank section to be filled out and mailed to the elections office to correct errors or changes of address.

Mrs. Hardee noted that in the future, persons registering to vote will automatically receive a voter registration card in the mail.

Cadets Help

The D.H. Conley High School JROTC recently helped with the Greenville Special Olympics project. The cadets, mostly freshmen and sophomores, were assigned to help groups of handicapped children.

The cadets assisted the children with various events and took them to lunch. According to JROTC member John Kerr, the experience helped the cadets become better leaders, one of the main goals taught in JROTC.

Board Meeting

The Pitt County Planning Board will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St. Included on the agenda is the consideration of the final plat for Stick Valley Estates on Secondary Road 1700 in Winterville Township.

Festival Visit

A group of seventh and eighth graders from G.R. Whitfield School visited the Tobacco Festival Wednesday where they observed agricultural products and machinery, sampled products, entered drawings and talked to business representatives.

The students were chaperoned by Carolyn Watford, Elizabeth Avery and Karin Edwards.

Library Visit

Sixth grade students from G.R. Whitfield School visited Sheppard Memorial Library Wednesday in conjunction with their library studies and National Book Week.

Suzanne Long, the childrens' librarian, explained the services and materials available to students. The students also heard a story and watched a film.

Accompanying teachers were Robert Barrier, Sandra Heck, Lynn Taylor and Mary Jo MacKenzie, the school's media specialist.

Presentations

Students from Dr. Bob Wendling's environmental classes at East Carolina University recently gave presentations to the kindergarten through fifth grade classes at Falkland Elementary School.

The presentations included demonstrations with live animals such as snakes and turtles.

Martin's Ability To Lead Faces Major Challenge

There is one thing certain with the election of Jim Martin as the state's new governor. There will be important differences in Raleigh as the second Republican governor of this century takes office.

Martin will be working with a heavily Democratic Legislature and a totally Democratic Council of State and because of our unique North Carolina system he will be working without a veto over the Legislature's actions. Nevertheless as governor he will wield considerable power and could be able to get things done just as Democratic governors do — that is by using his authority to appoint people to hundreds of state positions, and to control expenditures once appropriations are made.

How skillful Martin will be at all this remains to be seen. We have only one precedent for it, when Jim Holshouser was elected as a Republican governor in 1972. He made early mistakes and had to deal with a strong Democratic lieutenant governor in Jim Hunt.

After six terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, Martin is regarded by those who know him best as shrewd in dealing with other lawmakers and they think he can bring that shrewdness to bear in working with the Democratic Legislature. In fact those who have been with Martin through the campaign see him as the best administrator to come along in some time. Unless there is a change, the Democrats have given him the opportunity of a second term and thus the threat of carrying his programs to the people in 1988.

Jim Martin may well possess the needed skills. However, it will take that and more, too, to deal with a Legislature which already has strong leadership, one which cannot be headed off by a veto and one which sometimes bucks the traces even when a Democratic governor is in power.

We can expect an interesting four years.

Beat The Peak Is Sound Plan

Electric load management is something that most residential customers are not even aware of — but rest assured that it is important in determining how much we are to pay for electricity.

Greenville Utilities purchases all of its electricity. When loads are low, such as in the early hours of morning, the cost is low. However, at peak hours, as when air conditioning loads are heavy on a hot summer afternoon, the cost is high because the generating companies are having to bring on extra equipment. Thus the trick is to keep the electric load down during these peak times.

Greenville Utilities has done this through its Beat the Peak program which utilizes radio-operated switches in homes to turn off water heaters and air conditioners. Those who participate get a $5 credit per switch during the summer months.

The commission last week decided to order 1,000 more load management switches at a cost of $50,000. The investment will pay off since the program saved about $534,000 in wholesale power costs during the first 10 months of 1984. Of this $240,000 was returned to participating homeowners.

It is a good program and it is saving us all money.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

There are few of us who aren't caught up in the excitement of election night. Television networks project the winners almost before we settle down for the evening.

Because of that the process of tallying and combining the totals from elections has been speeded up. In Pitt County we saw the process streamlined this year with the addition of vote tabulating equipment.

We heard about a rural county that decided it didn't want such machines because election night was the only time that everybody turned out and got to visit with their friends while the counting was going on.

We can sympathize. There was a time when practically everyone turned out in Pitt County to watch the tallying, discuss elections or anything else of concern.

Then, as now, the poll holders called The Daily Reflector which maintained a board and added up figures for final unofficial results. On presidential election nights the counting was sure to go on all night and in the days before even radio you had to visit the newspaper office to find out what was going on.

The office then was located at Third and Evans streets (Evans was a street) and the entire block was blocked off to traffic so the crowds could stand out front. Professional politicians often rented rooms at the Proctor Hotel across the street so they could watch the proceedings in comfort.

By 1944, when Roosevelt sought his fourth term, radio was on the scene and the local station, WGTC, broadcast live from the newspaper office. Election watching was still an event and it was billed as an "election party" by The Daily Reflector.

"The public is cordially invited to attend our election party in front of our office tonight or to listen in over radio station WGTC for returns on the county, state and municipal elections in progress today," a front page story said.

There were sure to have been hundreds of people in the block out front to watch the returns being posted.

The year 1948 was the election of the incredible upset when Harry Truman defeated Thomas E. Dewey. Again the crowds were tremendous, but a new force for reporting elections had barely entered the scene in television.

The returns are still tabulated by the The Daily Reflector and posted on a board at the side of the buildings. Crowds still come, of course, but with television and other factors election night is no longer as intense as it once was.

Nevertheless, the work must go on and precinct by precinct returns are printed in a chart the next day, something that only a newspaper can do well. Those who wish to come and watch the returns being posted on the board are still welcomed.

Victory Was Personal

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — It was not a mandate. It was not a revolution. The election marked no turning of political tides. Above all else, this was a personal triumph for the president. With one voice, nearly 60 percent of the voters joined in a resounding chorus: Can't help lovin' that Ron of mine.

It is useless to search for deep meaning in the president's landslide re-election. There isn't any deep meaning there. To the extent that issues mattered at all in this campaign, the only significant issue was summed up in Reagan's rhetorical question: Are you better off than you were four years ago? Most of the people said yes.

Nothing else greatly mattered. Walter Mondale did his best to make an issue of the recurring federal deficits. The people yawned. Mondale hammered at the president's failure to meet with Soviet leaders. The people could not have cared less. In desperation, the Democratic challenger began to swing wildly: Reagan's policies were "vicious" and a Reagan victory would set off "an orgy of intolerance." The people reacted coldly. Aw, Fritz, they said, shut up.

If Tuesday's returns were the stuff from which mandates are made, we would have seen the Republicans gain 25 or 30 seats in the House. We would have seen Republicans pick up Senate seats not only in Kentucky but also in Massachusetts, Michigan and West Virginia. We would have seen wholesale Republican gains in state legislatures. We saw nothing of the sort. We saw the old Gipper, with Nancy at his side, smiling his way through a forest of flags.

If there are lessons to be learned from Tuesday's election, it is the Democratic Party that must learn them. Think back for a moment to Mondale's acceptance speech in San Francisco. He recalled that in 1980 "Ronald Reagan beat the pants off us," but he said his party had heard the voters speak: "We began asking you what our mistakes had been. And for four years I listened to all of the people of our country."

The trouble, manifestly, is that Democratic leaders didn't really listen, or perhaps they listened to the wrong voices. They never grasped the national hunger to see America as one stable, peaceful, relatively comfortable people, eager to be left alone to pursue their potty little lives.

Henry Cisneros, the mayor of San Antonio, said a mouthful: "A party that appeals only to minorities is going to remain a minority party."

Labor unions represent barely 19 percent of the labor force; union members are a minority. Blacks make up 12 percent of the population; blacks are a minority. At San Francisco the Democrats adopted a platform and amended their bylaws in an appeal to homosexuals; and homosexuals most certainly are a minority. Militant women are a minority. Touch-me-not environmentalists are a minority. Intellectuals are a minority. Jews are a minority. And when a candidate promises all of them, metaphorically speaking, to build an embassy in Jerusalem, the disparate promises become an unbearable weight.

Except for his promise not to seek an increase in taxes — a promise he will have to wiggle gently out of Reagan made no promises at all. He offered himself, the lines in his face a little deeper, the hair a little grayer, the bum ear a little deafer. "You know what I stand for," he said. It was all he needed to say.

Fritz Mondale, a thoroughly decent man, has nothing to be ashamed of. He gave the campaign his best shot. No other Democrat could have done much better against our invincible grandpa. Geraldine Ferraro provided novelty; on balance, she provided nothing else. "Feisty" was the overworked word for Gerry, but more than feistiness is required for the heartbeat place on a national ticket.

Reagan will stay on course, but he has some rough water ahead. The deficits cannot be smiled away; they must be met head-on in the budget he will send to Congress next year. A new effort will have to be made on an immigration bill. Before the end of his second term, the Medicare trust fund will be in serious trouble. Getting the Soviet Union to agree to a mutual reduction in nuclear arms will be a formidable task. In the 100th Congress of 1987 and 1988, his program will be handicapped by the truism that lame ducks don't fly. All these troubles are ahead. It suffices for the moment for the president to savor the sweet taste of a triumph well won.

The Test Will Come

Norman Sandler

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the eve of a landslide re-election victory interpreted by aides as a vote of confidence in his policies, President Reagan declared his main priorities in a second term to be the lofty ideals of peace and nuclear disarmament.

But as Reagan moves from the heady aftermath of a 49-state electoral sweep into his second four years as president, the task of formulating new approaches to such longstanding goals as these will not be as easy as he and some associates choose to believe.

Armed with a mandate of debatable scope, Reagan moves into his second term determined to strike early, while his political stock is highest, with an ambitious set of domestic and foreign policy initiatives.

The new year will see Reagan propose more deep spending cuts along the lines of those he sent to Capitol Hill in 1981. The mood on Capitol Hill had precluded such dramatic reductions by his third year in office and ruled out any significant election-year move against the deficit.

Just as a Reagan emboldened by his re-election triumph can be expected to escalate his assault on the budget, the president is likely to devote much of his second term to achieving a lasting place in history on foreign policy.

With little change for the better in the Middle East, tension rife in Central America and the United States an on-again, off-again participant in Africa, relations between the superpowers will be at center stage.

Here is where Reagan hopes to shine. The president seeks vindication for his prediction — called into question over the last four years — that a steady U.S. military buildup eventually would force the Soviets to accept deep reductions in nuclear arms.

In recent days, administration officials have suggested the Soviets, forced to deal with Reagan for another four years, will return early in 1985 to the bargaining table they left a year ago.

While Reagan and his aides talk of new approaches to old problems, there is little evidence of a consensus within the administration on how to bring the Soviets back to the table — or what to do once they return.

At a post-election news conference, the president denied any split among his advisers on how to put life back into the arms control process. Even as he did so, however, aides on one side were describing one scenario while others painted another.

White House officials hinted at the possible appointment of an arms control "czar" to move the process forward through other than routine diplomatic channels. Sensing a possible bureaucratic end run, Secretary of State George Shultz made clear his own determination to remain the chief exponent of U.S. foreign policy behind the president.

With the arms talks at a standstill, the attention for the present has been on process; how the negotiations might be resumed and in what form. Once these hurdles are overcome, the hard part really begins.

There is every indication the bureaucratic infighting Reagan refused to recognize and failed to curb in his first term is just as much of a problem as the arms control agenda is reformulated and repackaged for the second.

Officials at the State Department, Pentagon and White House disagree over what should or should not be on the table if the talks resume and how far Reagan should go in achieving an agreement that might help blunt charges that he has been more interest in blocking arms control than achieving it.

Technical, as well as procedural, disputes among his subordinates offer only the cloudiest idea of how Reagan will proceed if the Soviets follow up on their reported expression of interest in his proposal for "umbrella" talks between Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that later could lead to resumption of full-scale negotiations.

The negotiability of anti-satellite weapons and Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense system remains subject to internal debate. Nor has Reagan made clear here he might go in the talks on intermediate-range nuclear missiles, suspended after his decision to go forward with the deployment of NATO missiles in Europe, or the parellel — and equally moribund — talks on strategic arms.

To the editor:

I would like to commend the Greenville Jaycees for recognizing the sacrifices of 22 Pitt County citizens who gave their lives in service to their country. In today's world, where too many of us only think of ourselves, the Greenville Jaycees have once again lived up to their creed in this community, where all too many of us want to forget the Vietnam war and how our political leaders betrayed those who fought in it.

As a combat Vietnam veteran and former Greenville Jaycee, I want to especially recognize the work of the Jaycee Vietnam Memorial chairman, Mr. Mike Messick, for a job well done.

The Pitt County Family Life Council, an organization whose goals are to support families and to encourage positive family living, wants to remind the families of Pitt County that President Reagan has proclaimed the week of Nov. 17-25 as National Family Week and to encourage you to celebrate with your family during this week. Here are a few suggestions for how to celebrate. Use your family's special talents and ingenuity to create others that are uniquely your own:

1. Celebrate your family by waging a "Thanksgiving Campaign." Exchange written or verbal "thank you" messages with family members as you sit down for your holiday meal which will recognize and express appreciation for the special contributions of each family member to your family circle.

2. Celebrate your family by holding a Ritual of Forgiveness. Ask forgiveness for the hurts of the past year within your family. Make peace with family members who are cut off from your family emotionally and seek out old family friends, thus creating a complete family circle once more.

3. Celebrate your family by observing a Day of Affirmation. Encourage each family member to figure out as many small ways as possible of expressing "I love you" and "I value you" (i.e. little gifts, mini awards, messages, a hug, sharing a task, sharing a memory, spending a special time together) and devote a day to putting them into practice.

4. Celebrate your family by recognizing the Past and the Future of your family. Tell old stories, start a family album, trace your roots. Acknowledge the future by taking a family inventory, making family goals and writing a family plan for the coming year.

To the editor:

The frenzy is over. Now we must pause and wait. Wait for the acid rain to rain on down. Wait for the ships and planes to transport our sons and daughters, in uniform, to Central America. Wait for bootless poverty to raise itself by its bootstraps. Wait for the voluntary school prayer ceremony to harden into granitic. Godless rote. Wait for the 'climate of meanness' to intensify. Wait for women's wombs to be tagged, "Propty US Govt." Wait for the Falwellian Armageddon.

Meanwhile, I'd like to bring up, briefly, a subject that was not even touched upon by any of the candidates running for election; namely, the metric system.

I must confess that I have trouble raising much steam over the topic. In any gathering, when I begin talking about the metric system, my listeners tend to back off from me a bit. They go glazey-eyed, then slowly melt away like shadows lengthening towards the bar or bathroom door; leaving me quite alone.

So I have resolved not to talk any more about the metric system. Except to say this: If we go on the metric system, there will be 10 apostles. That's it. I've nothing more to say about the matter. Please don't call me up or anything. Work things out for yourself.

To the editor:

Thank you for your endorsement of my candidacy for the United States Senate. Although I did not win, I will always cherish your newspaper's editorial support of my fight — our mutual fight — to uphold North Carolina's progressive tradition and reputation.

The more I reflect on the meaning of the 1984 elections, the more I am convinced that our fight is far from finished. In my view, Senator Helms got a substantial — perhaps decisive — lift from President Reagan's tremendous popularity.

In no sense did the people of North Carolina reject the progressive principles that have moved our state forward over the years: an unwavering commitment to better schools, to job-creating economic growth, to a clean and safe environment, to care for the elderly and the needy and to civil and equal rights.

Those are my principles. Judging from the overwhelming editorial support I received in my bid for the Senate, they are shared by most of the opinion leaders throughout North Carolina.

One way or another, I intend to keep fighting to see these progressive principles prevail over right-wing ideology. And I will continue the battle against the politics of distortion, negative attacks and character assassination which have poisoned political discourse in our state for far too long.

I hope that I can continue to count on your support in the days ahead.

My warmest personal regards.

Jim Hunt
Governor

(Editor's note: The following open letter is addressed to President Ronald Reagan)

Dear Mr. President:

The Constitution is the wisest instrument of government the earth has ever known. If America is to endure as a free Republic as ordained by it, presidents, Supreme Court justices, and other public officers must do what they have sworn to do, that is, support it.

Recognizing these truths, I spent my major efforts during my 20 years as a senator from North Carolina trying to persuade government to obey the Constitution.

Despite my admiration for you, I am constrained by my duty to our country to assert that what you say, do, and advocate in respect to religion shows that you do not understand the religious clauses of the First Amendment and how obedience to them is essential to the preservation of the religious freedom they are designed to secure to all Americans of all faiths.

You urge Congress to give federal tax credits to parents who send their children to private schools to be taught the creeds of their churches. Your action in this respect violates the First Amendment, which forbids government to use the taxes of Caesar to finance the things of God.

You named an ambassador to the Vatican — an act in violation of the establishment clause, which in the words of its drafter, James Madison, forbids government to establish an official relationship with any religion.

You urge the adoption of a constitutional amendment to authorize prayer in the public schools. The adoption of such an amendment would drastically alter the First Amendment, which commands the government to be strictly neutral in respect to religion, and leaves the task of teaching religion to children to the homes and churches of our land.

The Founding Fathers rightly believed that the great diversity of religious faiths in America makes governmental neutrality in religion essential if our people are to live together in peace.

The Michie company, of Charlottesville, Va., has just published my autobiography entitled "Preserving the Constitution," and it explains the religious clauses of the First Amendment in plain English.

I send you a copy of "Preserving the Constitution," and urge you to read and ponder the chapters on "The Constitution and Religion" and "Prayer In The Public Schools." These chapters make it manifest that there is a total repugnancy between what you say, do and advocate concerning governmental action in religion and the religious clauses of the First Amendment.

The government must keep its hands off religion if our people are to enjoy religious freedom — our most precious freedom.

Sam J. Ervin Jr.
Former U.S. Senator

To the editor:

It seems that some Democrats will never learn why they lose and the story in the Nov. 11 paper on page one is an excellent example. They are always wanting to blame other Democrats for the failures and instead of sticking together and publicizing the good of the Democratic Party, they continue to break the ranks by this kind of negativism, which only gives the Republicans another opportunity to sit back and gloat.

Yes, Hunt and Edmisten lost, because of the personal appeal of Reagan and the seemingly good economy. I'm not sure if any move made by the national Democratic Party more to the center could have changed what happened. The 1984 Democratic Party platform was the most moderate and to the center of any I can remember. If the "move to the center" as expressed in the article, means we should be more like the Republicans and have a platform which does not support equal rights, abandons the fight for human rights around the world, or fails to mention education, then please define more precisely what it is the national Democratic Party should do.

Running against a popular personality and a false economy put the challenging party behind in the beginning. Add to this the enormous resources of Jesse Helms' Congressional Club, the suicidal impact of the primaries to the Democrats and the personal appeal facade of Mr. Martin all together left the Democrats in North Carolina with a ticket hard to completely pull out of the fire.

Now is not the time to continue in-party chastisement, but a time to start building for 1986. North Carolina Democrats must be a team and run primary races that will not destroy themselves and the party in the end.

Instead of agreeing with the opposition, we need to emphasize the good showing of Democrats in congressional races across the nation, and how Pitt County supported our North Carolina candidates across the state.

The answer is not to move more to the center or mirror the Republicans, but to start working for the Democratic Party principles which have set it apart from the Republicans and the principles which history has proven many times over will prevail and become the way for the country.

To the editor:

On Nov. 3, 1979, five members of the Communist Workers Party were gunned down as they prepared to march and rally against Klan and Nazi members of Greensboro. It took only 88 seconds.

Regardless of the Communist Workers Party politics, they were/are American citizens protected under our Constitution. Why has our government, after five years, refused to take direct forceful action ...? It wasn't that the ... (deaths) weren't documented or that concerned people from all over the U.S. didn't try to see if justice was done. It is beginning to appear that it goes much deeper than that.

When political people are killed in other countries, our government calls attention to those acts and presents rhetoric about that government, yet when it happens in our own country our government tries to brush the issue under the rug. This is a luxury we can't allow our government to have. If they can overlook the deaths of five citizens, what else can they choose to overlook?

What makes our country the great refuge for oppressed people is that we promise the freedom of speech and press, the freedom to a peaceful assembly, and most importantly, the right to hold differing political views. Without these rights, our country would be no better than the Soviet Union. The choice belongs to us. If we are to protect these rights, we also must be willing to fight for them. That is the only way we will be allowed to continue to have them.

I urge people to remember the Nov. 3 massacre and also to remember that no country is infallible, esepcially when it begins to take its freedoms for granted.

Big Time

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan wasn't the only big winner in this year's election. So were the pollsters, fund-raisers and political consultants who worked for him and other candidates.

Federal Election Commission records indicate that political professionals cleaned up financially. Some people might say that's to be expected. But the unabashed money-making is exactly why election spending needs to be tamed.

Among the $75-million Reagan-Bush campaign's biggest beneficiaries were the consultants, some of whom received handsome fees of $3,000 to $5,000 per month for their advice. Among the most highly paid advisers were strategists Roger Stone, Rich Bond, John Rousselot, Michelle Laxalt (daughter of GOP chairman Sen. Paul Laxalt), Stuart Spencer, and William Timmons; fund-raisers Wyatt Steward and Stephen Winchell; speechwriter Vic Gold, and pollster Richard Wirthlin. A host of others, more regionally based, pocketed smaller but still lucrative stipends. Even Joseph Canzeri, who resigned from the White House under a cloud, shared in the cornucopia.

Meanwhile, firms partly controlled by Stone, Winchell and Wirthlin oversaw huge budgets for electronic advertising, direct-mail and polling.

When the final tallies are made, of course, they'll show that television advertising costs inflated campaign expenditures the most. Television and radio budgets consume about half of a national campaign's budget. In some markets, the price of a 30-second spot was almost three times that in 1980. In other words, the networks, which often complain editorially about the high cost of electioneering, are largely to blame for it.

But the hired consultants only fuel the top-dollar mentality. Were political activists all volunteers, as Reagan himself has long advocated, some of the professionalism might be taken out of campaigns. Yet American taxpayers wouldn't be paying big bucks to keep an increasingly affluent profession in business.

The Reagan administration's proposed budget for 1985 includes heavy cuts in energy conservation and solar energy and large increases in nuclear arms procurement, according to an analysis by retiring Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y. Ottinger said, for example, that defense activities now capture 60 percent of the total Energy Department budget, compared to 38 percent in 1981.

Rising Star Balks

WASHINGTON — The decision of California's rising star, Rep. Tony Coelho, to boycott the meeting of Democratic state chairmen in the sunny Virgin Islands as "wrong time, wrong place" sets back efforts by party leaders to pick up the pieces and start looking for a new national chairman to succeed Charles T. Manatt.

Coelho, who has won high marks as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, is interested in creating and then filling a new position of general chairman, similar to Sen. Paul Laxalt's Republican post. But Coelho will not be in the Virgin Islands campaigning for the job. He thinks the time is too soon after the election and the setting wrong for his party. Another up-and-coming Democrat, Missouri's Rep. Richard Gephardt (the new House caucus chairman), also will stay home.

Nevertheless, the three-day session, scheduled by Louisiana Chairman Kathy Vick, will bristle with contenders for Manatt's job — including veteran operative Robert Keefe, who most recently ran Sen. John Glenn's presidential campaign. Keefe will arrive with a large staff for maximum lobbying.

United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's conservative allies within the Reagan administration have taken new heart that her decision to stay at the U.N. until spring hints that President Reagan may be eyeing a new job for her.

During the Republican Convention last summer, Mrs. Kirkpatrick disclosed a hard decision to resign after the General Assembly meeting in October. But she proved indispensable to the president during tense Oval Office prepping sessions for the all-important second debate with Walter Mondale. Reagan repeatedly turned to her for help, not ignoring Secretary of State George Shultz but showing his confidence in Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

A footnote: A surprise replacement at the U.N. now getting quiet, high-level attention is retired Lt. Gen. Vernon Waters, who as roving ambassador has conducted manifold confidential diplomatic missions for Reagan. One advantage: He is master of eight languages.

Even though Sen. Jesse Helms has given no signal whether he wants the vacant Foreign Relations Committee chairmanship, the senator next in line for the post — Indiana's Richard Lugar — conveyed word last week that he will support the conservative North Carolinian.

That could be critical if Helms decides to give up his Agriculture Committee chairmanship. Minnesota's Sen. Rudy Boschwitz's challenge to Helms would come to a vote of Foreign Relation Republicans.

Trudeau Bows Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau has left the world stage, a $50,000 peace prize in his pocket to help ease the transition from politics to whatever the 65-year-old former Canadian prime minister decides to do in the future.

His exit — at an Albert Einstein Peace Prize Foundation luncheon last week — was the kind of performance everyone has come to expect from the United States' peppery good neighbor.

Trudeau spoke almost plaintively of the urgent need "to turn back Armageddon," to make war less likely. He was not pessimistic. If he thought nuclear war was either imminent or inevitable, Trudeau said, "I would be stocking up with canned goods in some remote hideaway."

But, while receiving this year's Einstein prize, Trudeau was also candid about the failure of traditional diplomacy. Citing the "dismal record" of the last decade, he said that since 1974 there have been only two treaties between the United States and the Soviet Union to restrain nuclear arms and one multinational agreement, to protect the environment.

Other weapons talks are stalled and, Trudeau said, there has been no progress toward disarmament or to halt the spread of nuclear technology.

By contrast, from 1963 to 1974, agreements were concluded to limit U.S. and Soviet underground nuclear weapons tests, to etablish a "hot line" between Washington and Moscow and to limit missile defenses and offensive weapons, as well as several other arms control accords.

"I intend no offense," Trudeau said at a news conference after his tough speech. And, indeed, he did not point a finger of blame at any particular individuals.

But he was outspoken.

Having attended four of the six NATO summit meetings held since 1948, Trudeau summed up his experience this way: "I bear solemn witness to the fact that NATO heads of state and of government meet only to go through the tedious motions of reading speeches drafted by others with the principal objective of not rocking the boat."

His experience at economic summit meetings, including the ones hosted by President Reagan at Williamsburg, Va., in 1983, and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London last spring, evidently was even more distressing to the Canadian.

"Efforts at Williamsburg to send out a message of peace as well as one of military preparedness, and attempts in London to include on the agenda a discussion of areas of common ground between East and West were characterized as giving comfort to the Russians," he said.

It's fair to say Trudeau's personal diplomacy did not produce the dialogue he sought. Nor is the world a safer place.

Trudeau is now a private citizen, his influence diminished. It's not clear whether others are prepared to step into the pesky Canadian's shoes.

Winners

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Whatever else the results of the congressional elections signal, conservative members of the House are likely to interpret the outcome as an endorsement of their own political views.

When the new Congress convenes next year the conservatives can be expected to be back at their old stand in the House reciting the conservative agenda on matters of defense, the budget, foreign affairs, school prayer, abortion and demanding that the House get in step. Their persistence will provide the usual irritation to the Democratic leadership and could pose a problem for the Republican leadership as well.

Re-election proved an easy matter for all the hardcore conservatives, including Reps. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.; Robert Walker, R-Pa.; Vin Weber, R-Minn.; Connie Mack, R-Fla.; and William Dannemeyer, R-Calif.

In addition, one of the most fabled House conservatives — Robert Dornan, of California — will be returning after a two-year absence. Dornan gave up his House seat in order to try, without success, for the GOP Senate nomination in 1982. This year he ran against Democratic incumbent Jerry Patterson, who many viewed as too liberal for his conservative Orange County district, and won.

Having been reassured by their own re-election, the conservatives also can be expected to point to the overwhelming victory of President Reagan as a sign the nation has chosen the conservative path and Congress should respond accordingly.

The conservatives will doubtless get some argument on that point. Democrats note with great satisfaction that Republicans gained only 14 or 15 seats in the election, well below the 26 the GOP lost in 1982 and hoped to regain in order to revive an alliance with conservative democrats.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., was quick to say Reagan's victory was only a measure of his personal popularity, not an endorsement of conservative Republican philosophy.

But the band of House conservatives, who have adopted the name "Conservative Opportunity Society," agree with very little of what O'Neill says and can be counted on to doggedly pursue their call for the House to vote the way they and Reagan would like.

The conservatives could be in for a disappointment. Some observers feel that since Republicans did not win enough seats to establish ideological control of the House the administration will have to compromise with the Democrats in order to get any of its programs through.

That prospect is made even more likely by changes in the Senate, where Democrats picked up two more seats, narrowing Republican control to 53-47. With liberal Republicans willing to join the Democrats on some key issues, the administration can not rely on the almost automatic Senate backing it enjoyed in the last Congress and will be under pressure to be more accommodating.

House Republican leader Robert Michel, in post-election interviews, appeared to recognize the situation the GOP faces and the difficulty of trying to muscle the administration program through Congress without deviation.

Nevertheless, members of the conservative band in the House likely will remain steadfast in their goals and persistent in trying to bring the House around to their view.

Lacking any real power, such as committee chairmanships, the conservatives favored tactic is to make speeches in the House, playing to a potentially vast audience of television viewers who watch House proceedings on C-SPAN, a public service cable channel.

But despite their zeal, the conservatives face the prospect of few clear-cut victories in their ideological war with the liberal camp that runs the House.

PROJECT WINTER WARM-UP — Area Boy Scouts assisted the Greenville Utilities Saturday during project "Winter Warm-up," spending the day installing plastic storm windows, weatherstripping and installing water heater jackets. Preparing to install a storm window are Park Williams, front; Nelson Galloway, center, of Boy Scout Troop 30 and GUC employee Andy Yakin. The names of 20 homes where families were physically and financially unable to cope with the hardships of winter, were supplied by local charity organizations. This is the second year GUC had held the program. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Judge Restricts Ex-Bar President

By The Associated Press

A Wake County judge has ordered a former president of the North ... A temporary restraining order issued Friday by Superior Court Judge Donald Smith prohibits Hutchins from writing checks on client trust accounts or accepting any money from clients.

Carolina State Bar ... to handle any client ... is after the State Bar filed documents saying the lawyer had admitted embezzling $... from a client account.

The documents say Robert W. Hutchins of Plymouth admitted to his law partner Tuesday that he has embezzled about $... from the Weyerhaeuser Co., which has a large plant in Martin County.

A spokesman for Pitt County Memorial Hospital said Hutchins has been admitted to the hospital's psychiatric unit.

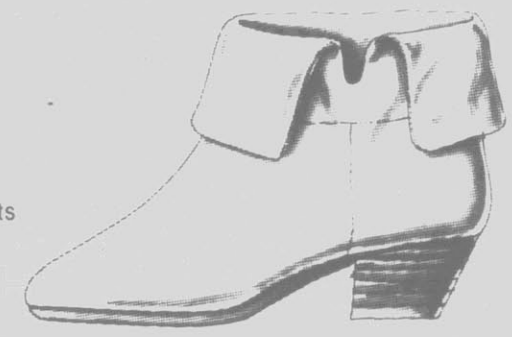

Hutchins was president ... the State Bar ... elected.

"But Hutchins will be treated just like anybody else," said Wright T. Dixon Jr., the current president of the State Bar. "If they don't voluntarily give up their license, we'll take steps to see if he should be disbarred."

Chinese Delegation

An eight-member delegation of higher education officials from the People's Republic of China will visit East Carolina University Nov. 26-27 as part of a tour of nine major universities and medical schools in the United States.

Dr. Phillip Cheng of the ECU School of Business faculty said the delegation from the Tianjin (formerly Tsientsin) district will discuss promotion of education exchanges, exchanging lecturers, students and teachers, developing scientific research and the exchanging of books and reference materials between universities in Tianjin and related universities in the United States.

Cheng delivered a series of lectures earlier this year in China and was instrumental in arranging for two delegations of Chinese officials to visit ECU. In September, a six-member delegation from the newly established Shanxi College of Economic Management at Taiyuan spent several days at ECU.

Mock Election

A fifth grade class at Falkland Elementary School held a mock election on Nov. 6. All students at the school were allowed to vote.

The results were President Reagan with 67 percent; Walter Mondale with 33 percent; Jesse Helms with 58 percent; Jim Martin with 67 percent, and Rufus Edmisten with 33 percent.

Greenville Tour

Fourth and fifth grade students at Falkland Elementary School visited Sheppard Memorial Library, the East Carolina University football complex and Minges Coliseum on Nov. 9.

Field Trip

The D.H. Conley JROTC C.D. 1's recently visited Fort Bragg, where they learned how troopers make jumps and about their equipment.

After eating lunch on base, the group visited the 82nd Airborne Museum and saw a film on the history of the 82nd Airborne.

Name Omitted

The name of Jennifer Hardee was omitted from the list of honor roll students at D.H. Conley High School published in the Reflector last week.

Special Day

Mayor Janice Buck has proclaimed Dec. 7 as Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day in Greenville. This day marks the 43rd anniversary of the attack by the Japanese on Hawaii.

First Meeting

The first public meeting of the new Greenville chapter of Amnesty International will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. in room 101 of the Belk Building.

Guest will be Ann Jenns, coordinator of the East Africa group of Amnesty International USA.

Amnesty International works for the international protection of human rights.

Book Week

Pactolus Elementary School celebrated Children's Book Week with a variety of activites.

The students viewed the program "Book Story" broadcast by the North Carolina Instructional Television Network. Guest storytellers Jane Maier and Bernard Hasselrig told their favorite tales to the students. Friday, the students presented "Bring on the Books," a musical program. The students appeared in costume and sang about famous book characters.

Thanksgiving Feast

A Thanksgiving Feast will be presented at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church from noon to 4 p.m. Thursday. Dinner with all the trimmings will be served.

The feast is open to anyone who would like to spend Thanksgiving Day with friends at the church.

Meeting Canceled

The regularly scheduled meeting of the Greenville Public Transportation Commision Wednesday has been canceled. The next meeting will be held Dec. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Public Works Department, 1500 Beatty St.

Christian TV Station Opens Drive

WXIV, a non-profit commercial television station scheduled to go on the air in April 1985, has launched a new fund-raising campaign.

According to Dr. William Tripp, a member of the station's fund-raising committee, pledges for donations of $14 a month for 36 months are being asked in letters being sent to 223,000 households in 30 counties of eastern North Carolina. The letter explains the purposes and goals of the Christian- and family-oriented station, expected to cost $3.5 million and broadcast maximum power of 5 million watts.

Each person who contributes will have his name inscribed on a bronze plaque that will be permanently displayed in the foyer of the studio, the station's board chairman, Tommy Payne, said.

The new station, Channel 14, will be seen in 30 eastern North Carolina counties. The tower and studio will be located on N.C. between Greenville and Winterville. Offerings are expected to include area and national events, weather, sports, children's shows, music, how-to shows, Bible study, and other offerings the directors consider in keeping with the policies of the interdenominationally supported station. It will be an affiliate of the American Christian Television System, which is based in Fort Worth, Texas, and is owned and operated by the Southern Baptist Convention.

Planning Panel Sets Meeting

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall to address the following items:

•A request by Collice C. Moore to bring "annex" Rownetree Woods Subdivision into the corporate limits of the city. The property is located at the southwest corner of the intersection of N.C. 43 West and SR 1204.

•A request to include the above property into the extraterritorial zoning jurisdiction of the city and to give it a zoning designation. Requests included under the proposal cover approximately 15 acres (asked to be designated R-6) and 8 acres (requested RA-20).

•Discussion of proposals to regulate satellite dish antennae.

•A request by Robert Lee Smith and Sam B. Underwood Jr. to annex approximately 7 acres located at the southern rear portion of lots 1, 2, and 3 in the Executive Park Subdivision, located across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital on Stantonsburg Road.

•Approval of a revised preliminary plat of Camelot Subdivision located on the north side of SR 1725 across from Cherry Oaks. The proposed revision involves a change in a drainage ditch.

•Approval of preliminary plat of Sedgefield Townes located on the east side of St. Andrews Drive across from its intersection with Dexter Street. The proposed development involves 15 townhouse units on a 1.2 acre site.

•Approval of preliminary plat of Fort Storage located at the end of Cheyenne Court, adjacent to Wedgewood Arms Apartments. The development involves construction of a vehicular turnaround at the end of Cheyenne Court to serve a proposed mini-warehouse facility.

•Approval of preliminary plat of Greystone Subdivision, located on the south side of NCSR 1708, adjacent to the N.C. Forestry Service fire tower. The proposed development involves 187 lots on a 49.2 acre tract.

Citizen Of Year Hunt On

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is seeking nominations for its citizen of the year award.

Area citizens and chamber members have been asked to send names of nominees along with resumes on candidates and reasons for the nomination before Jan. 3, 1985. Forms may be picked up at and returned to the chamber office at the corner of Greene and West Third streets.

Baby Fae's Struggle Touches Off Analysis Of What Should Be Done

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Fae's struggle for life with a transplanted baboon's heart is over, but her death opens a period of analysis by scientists who ask whether the knowledge gained from her 21 extra days of life was worth the cost and whether the operation should be done again.

"Does the likelihood of accomplishing good justify the suffering involved in this kind of situation — suffering by the baby and suffering by the parents?" said Dr. Antonio Gotto, who last week ended his term as president of the American Heart Association.

"The thing to do at this time is to very carefully analyze what took place with this case," Gotto said.

Dr. Leonard Bailey, the surgeon who performed the transplant Oct. 26 at Loma Linda University Medical Center, said Friday that it "opened new vistas" of hope for the one in every 12,000 children born with hypoplastic left heart syndrome, the fatal underdevelopment suffered by Baby Fae. Most of those children die because infant human heart donors are rare.

Despite Baby Fae's death Thursday night, Bailey said he learned much about combatting the body's efforts to reject foreign tissue and hopes to perform more baboon-to-human transplants after other scientists review his data.

"I still think the (transplant) method may have some viability. I don't think one can determine that yet," said Gotto, chairman of internal medicine at Baylor College of Medicine and Methodist Hospital in Houston. "There should be a review of what we've learned with Baby Fae and then a decision made whether to do more of these."

Critics point out that Bailey had previously done only animal-to-animal transplants, and the longest-surviving recipient — a goat with a lamb's heart — lived less than six months.

"There is a serious question of whether this group did their scientific homework," said Thomas Murray, a bioethicist at the University of Texas at Galveston.

Bioethicist Ronald Bayer, a critic of Baby Fae's transplant from the outset, said that because of society's desire to aid "desperately ill children, we are often swept up in the excitement of new experimental procedures."

"We have to take a step back and look at the conditions under which the research was done and be very clear that the advance of science and knowledge is not the only value," said Bayer, who works at The Hastings Center in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y. "The preservation of human dignity and the avoidance of unnecessary suffering also are important values."

Baby Fae, whose real name was not made public on request of her parents, died after her kidneys and then the walnut-sized baboon heart failed following a weeklong battle in which her immune system tried to reject the animal organ. The baby, born Oct. 14 in Barstow, lived 2½ weeks longer than any of the previous three human recipients of animal heart transplants.

Conference Focuses On Way Computers Affecting Schools

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The classroom computer revolution that began about four years ago was boosted by parents determined that their children succeed in a high-tech job market.

There could be more to this revolution, however, than those parents ever dreamed, or intended.

Some payoffs, like closer educational ties between home and school, are already appearing in some places, with few dissenters.

But computers could radically alter school roles and the way children learn. Some experts talk of a national curriculum for elementary school, or grade promotion policies based on achievement rather than age.

Those visions and others were discussed last week by some 250 computer experts, school superintendents and teachers at a three-day conference on "Planning The School of The Future," sponsored by Vanderbilt University.

There are now 600,000 computers in America's elementary and secondary schools — one for every 66 students, and roughly 20 times more than in 1980. Rapidly advancing technology has brought computer prices within the reach of nearly all schools.

Still, it was agreed that schools have only scratched the potential of computers, which now often serve only as electronic flashcards, drilling students in long division or spelling.

Where the conferees disagreed was on how sweeping the computer revolution is likely to be — or should be.

Arthur Luehrmann, the former Dartmouth College physics professor who coined the term "computer literacy," offered a modest forecast.

He, along with education professors Gregory Jackson of Harvard and Terrence Deal of Peabody College of Vanderbilt University, argued that schools are "immensely successful" at resisting change. Students, teachers and parents play practically the same roles they have for centuries — each part of a rigid "school culture" which no machine, not even a computer, could easily dent.

Luehrmann also argued that the oft-cited problem of poor quality software — the programs enabling the machine to teach lessons — "may never be solved."

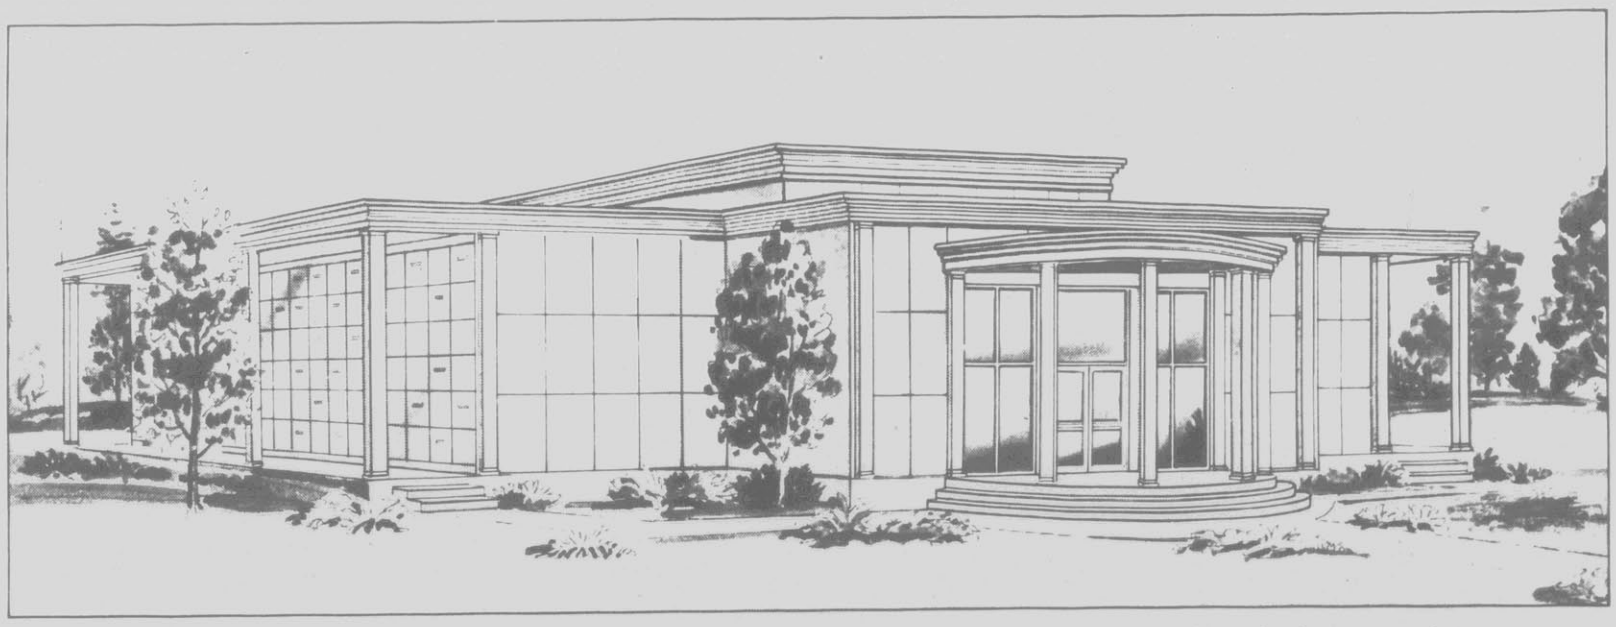

Many schools cannot afford adequate software. Manufacturers, he said, are therefore likely to aim for the far more lucrative home computer market.

Changes Proposed In Women's Roles

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Female soldiers should serve in missile silos like their male counterparts, and the Pentagon should consider allowing some women in technical specialties into combat situations, the Department of Defense's Advisory Committee on Women said Saturday.

The committee, however, opposed totally scrapping the combat exclusionary law, which prohibits women from active front-line duty.

"From a political standpoint, a military standpoint, the standpoint of everyone involved, it is not the right atmosphere right now to make that decision," said committee member Yvonne Alford, staff manager for majority leader Ramona Barnes of the Alaska House of Representatives.

Pinewood Memorial Park's Mausoleum. Designed by America's most respected mausoleum builders for beauty and permanence.

After 3 years of careful planning, Pinewood Memorial Park announces plans to construct its mausoleum.

S. G. Wilkerson and Sons, owners of Pinewood Memorial Park, proudly announce plans to begin construction on a prestigious chapel mausoleum on the grounds at Pinewood.

Now, you have the choice of above-ground entombment in a mausoleum designed to last through the ages.

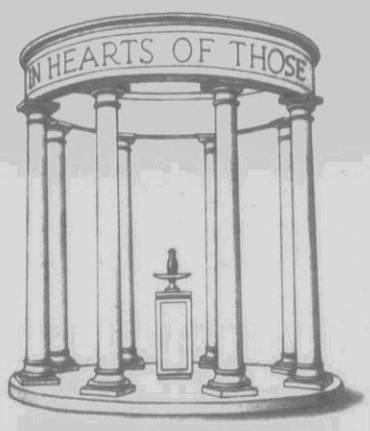

The mausoleum (artist's rendering above) is a McCleskey-designed structure. McCleskey is considered by many in the industry to be the finest available mausoleum designer and builder in America.

The extensive planning that went into this building was necessary to achieve the lasting quality that will result in beauty and permanence.

Italian granite and marble and poured-in-place concrete and steel along with the most respected mausoleum designer in America will result in the kind of mausoleum owners and estate-purchasers will be proud of.

Now, above-ground entombment will be available and affordable from Pinewood Memorial Park. And the costs will be comparable to ground burial.

Our planning has paid off. In design. In beauty. In permanence. And in service you've come to expect from Pinewood Memorial Park.

Egypt Fools Libya, Finds Hit Squad

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt used faked photographs of a former Libyan prime minister lying in a pool of blood to trick Libya into claiming he had been assassinated by a death squad hired by Col. Moammar Khadafy, President Hosni Mubarak said Saturday.

Egyptian officials identified two Britons and two Maltese arrested as members of the Libyan-hired hit squad, and said the four told of other Libyan plots to assassinate leaders in West Germany, France, India, Pakistan, Britain, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

Mubarak said in a speech Saturday that the supposed victim, Abdel-Hamid Bakoush, was safe. Bakoush, 46, later appeared at a news conference in Cairo with Interior Minister Ahmed Rushdi.

"This incident proves that Khadafy lost his qualification as a responsible man and head of state," said Bakoush, Libya's last prime minister before Khadafy overthrow King Idris in 1969. "He is an international criminal, and I call on all countries and governments of the world to take a stand toward him."

Rushdi identified those arrested as Anthony William Gill, 48, and Godfrey Chiner, 47, both of London; and Romeo Nicholas Chakambari, 42, and Edgar Bonic Cacia, age unknown, both of Malta.

He said the four were recruited by Ali Nejm, Libya's ambassador to Malta. They were promised $250,000 to arrange the assassination and were told they could hire Egyptian collaborators — who turned out to be Egyptian undercover officers — for $150,000 to do the actual killing.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 634, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Express OK. (Send card number, expiration date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call toll free 1-(800)-862-6262, ext. 634.

Air Force 'Navy' Losing Its Fleet

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Gary Navarro joined the Air Force 26 years ago with visions of jet airplanes and the wild blue yonder. He's been at sea ever since.

Navarro, a chief master sergeant, is the senior member of the Air Force's little-known navy and director of marine operations at this base in the Florida Panhandle.

Navarro said his cousins all were in the Navy, and he decided to go his own way after visiting an Air Force base.

"I said, forget that Navy stuff," he said.

But when he completed basic training, he was told he would be in the "seaman" career field and found himself wearing blue, bell-bottom Navy dungarees like his cousins' — but with Air Force insignia.

"We get a lot of questions" about the uniform, said Senior Master Sgt. John Hooten, superintendent of operations for Eglin's Marine Branch.

During the Vietnam War, Navarro served aboard landing craft that ferried munitions to riverside air bases from ships anchored offshore.

At Eglin, he commands a fleet of six small boats that pluck practice bombs, missiles and sometimes aircraft from 86,500 square miles of test ranges in the Gulf of Mexico and Choctawhatchee Bay.

The boats also patrol to keep civilian craft safely away and recover equipment and personnel during water training by air-rescue units.

Navarro's fleet sometimes even supports Navy aircraft that use the ranges.

The Air Force has had boats since its inception, many of them used for rescues at bases near the water.

But the fleet has shrunk, largely because helicopters have taken over search and rescue duties, Hooten said.

Only about 100 sailors remain in the Air Force and about 90 percent of them are stationed at three Florida bases, including 25 at Eglin.

There aren't enough seamen to justify an Air Force training program. They are trained not by the Navy, but by the Army, which has its own fleet of small boats, said Master Sgt. Bryan Rathvon.

And now the Air Force is conducting a study to determine whether their duties could be handled by civil service or civilian contract personnel.

The Air Force's largest naval fleet is at Homestead Air Force Base near Miami, where 13 boats support its sea survival school. Tyndall Air Force Base near Panama City has four boats, and a small number of Air Force sailors are stationed in Hawaii.

There are even a few sailors at land-locked Kirtland Air Force Base at Albuquerque, N.M., where they operate on a lake for a parachute-rescue school.

Although small in number, the Air Force's sailors are a loyal group with a high re-enlistment rate, Hooten said. Most members have cross-trained from other fields and a couple are ex-Navy.

Navarro and Hooten say they are proud to be in the Air Force, but consider themselves sailors first.

"That's no affiliation with any service," Navarro said. "That's just the nature of the job."

Cost Of Cleaning Test Site Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of making Bikini Atoll in the Pacific fit for people to live there could be as low as $42 million, a special committee says in a report to Congress.

Bikini was contaminated by radioactivity from U.S. nuclear weapons tests carried out from 1946 through 1958. Residents were allowed to return in 1970 but in 1978 were removed because of high radioactivity in their diet.

A preliminary report from the committee a year ago said the cost could be $100 million, if a five-mile causeway between the two main islands of the atoll were built as the former residents of Bikini want.

However, the new report to be released Sunday said such a causeway "has been questioned environmentally." Constructing the causeway would make the total cost of the project about $88 million, the panel said.

The 1983 preliminary report said the top 18 inches of soil probably would have to be removed, but now the committee says only the top 11 inches need be taken off.

Bikini Island, the main island of the atoll, is a mile-square spot of land about 2,500 miles southwest of Hawaii. Since 1978, its 1,120 residents have been living on other islands in the Marshall Islands.

The main contamination comes from radioactive cesium, which is taken up from the soil and concentrated by plants — especially coconut, a staple of the usual diet. Cesium is chemically similar to potassium, and competes with potassium for capture by plants.

The study panel's latest report said it will take 80 years for the radioactivity in the soil to decay to the point where crops can be grown safely again. Bikini could be inhabited now, it said, if no one ate anything grown there or drank any of the groundwater, the committee said.

President Begins Eight-Day Vacation

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan arrived in California on Saturday for an eight-day Thanksgiving holiday after a week of closed-door, business-as-usual meetings that gave no outward sign that he had just won re-election by one of the largest landslides in history.

After the five-hour flight to California, the president went into seclusion at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara until he returns to the White House Nov. 25.

Reports Say U.S. Planning Blockade

MIAMI (AP) — The United States is planning to blockade shipping lanes from Colombia to intercept marijuana shipments to this country, ABC News and the Miami Herald reported.

ABC News reported Friday night that U.S. ships were preparing to block the coast of Colombia to stop drug shipments.

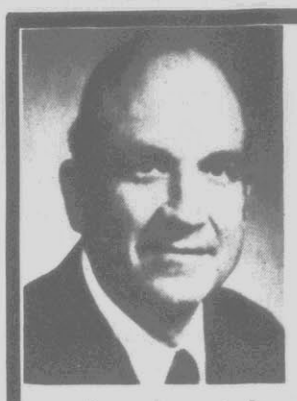

An unidentified Drug Enforcement Administration source told The Miami Herald in Saturday editions that there would not be a blockade of the entire Colombian coast but rather a blockade of the two major shipping lanes leading from the country.

ABC said the U.S. Navy, "working with the governments of Venezuela, Panama and Colombia, is about to launch what amounts to a naval blockade off the coast of Colombia. At least nine U.S. ships are already involved and more are likely to take part when a quarantine is put into place next week."

A Navy spokesman at the Pentagon told the newspaper Friday night that if such a plan exists, it would be a Coast Guard rather than a military matter. The Coast Guard command center in Washington referred questions to Coast Guard offices in Miami, where a spokeswoman who identified herself as Lt. Yount and refused to give her first name, declined to comment Saturday afternoon.

On Friday night, the Pentagon referred all questions to the vice president's drug task force, also known as the South Florida Task Force on drugs. The staff coordinator for that group, Jim Dingfelder, refused to discuss the operation in an interview with the Herald. Dingfelder could not be reached by telephone for comment Saturday.

The task force had denied two weeks ago that armed forces would play a major role in new efforts to stop marijuana shipments.

Thank You

I deeply appreciate the confidence placed in me by your vote on November 6th. I will continue to support and work for programs and policies that are based on sound, long-range planning that contribute to the total growth and development of our district. Your continued support is gratefully acknowledged and appreciated.

TV Film Leads To Night Trial

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — The trial of a man accused of killing his wife and three children will move to rare night sessions Sunday and Monday so jurors cannot see a made-for-television movie about an Army doctor convicted of murdering his family.

The scheduling change was ordered at the request of defense lawyers in the murder trial of businessman David Hendricks because of the broadcast of NBC's two-part dramatization "Fatal Vision."

A prosecutor says there are some "striking" similarities between the Hendricks case and the subject of the NBC mini-series, the 1979 conviction of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, a former Green Beret physician, on charges of murdering his pregnant wife and their two daughters.

Hendricks, 30, a back-brace inventor and salesman from Bloomington, is charged in the Nov. 7, 1983, ax and knife slayings of his wife and three youngsters. He denies committing the killings, contending he was in Wisconsin on a sales trip when his family was slain and his home ransacked.

Hendricks' lawyers contend that two or more people invaded the house and murdered Susan Hendricks, 30, and the couple's two daughters, ages 9 and 7, and son, age 5.

Prosecutors say Hendricks hacked his family to death and then went to Wisconsin to set up an alibi. They say he was driven to the deed by an inner conflict between his fundamentalist religious beliefs and sexual feelings for young women who modeled his patented brace.

The movie "Fatal Vision," based on the best-selling book by Joe McGinniss, details the case of MacDonald, whose conviction came nine years after the killings of his family.

"We think that the effect of that (movie) ... could prejudice the jury for both parties," said John Long, one of Hendricks' two lawyers.

Two weeks ago, the defense asked that Hendricks' jury be ordered not to watch any television promotions for "Fatal Vision," and that arrangements be made to ensure that the jurors, who are not sequestered, not see the movie.

After meetings between both sides, Circuit Judge Richard Baner ordered the Sunday session from 7 to 10 p.m. CST and said trial on Monday would be held from 1:30 to 10 p.m.

"Fatal Vision" is scheduled for both nights from 8 to 10 p.m. CST.

"In my experience, in 11 years in the prosecutor's office, we have never had to do this before," McLean County State's Attorney Ronald Dozier said.

Parents Say Film Factually Correct

RALEIGH (AP) — An NBC television movie about the Jeffrey MacDonald case that will air Sunday and Monday is factually accurate, but doesn't capture the emotion of the events it depicts, say the parents of MacDonald's slain wife.

The mini-series, "Fatal Vision," is based on Joe McGinniss' best-selling book about the murders of Colette MacDonald and her daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, in 1970.

A U.S. District Court jury in Raleigh convicted MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, of murdering his family in 1979. He is serving three life sentences in federal prison in Bastrop, Texas.

Freddy and Mildred Kassab, Mrs. MacDonald's parents, said they have seen the film several times.

"I think it's exceptionally well done," said Mrs. Kassab, adding that it was "in good taste, no bodies or anything."

"My own pictures in my mind are so much worse than anything I could be shown," said Mrs. Kassab. "I was familiar with the house (at Fort Bragg) and I know what happened there. I was shown some pictures in court. There wasn't going to be anything they could put on television that could be worse than that."

The mini-series tells the story from the point of view of Kassab, Mrs. MacDonald's stepfather. When MacDonald was first suspected by U.S. Army investigators of committing the murders, the Kassabs thought their son-in-law was innocent. But as evidence mounted, they changed their minds and led the fight to have the physician indicted.

Burley Sales To Open Monday

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Burley tobacco warehouses open Monday in 28 North Carolina counties, and despite a better-quality crop, sales aren't expected to improve significantly over last year and may even decline, an official said Saturday.

"I'm afraid some of the buyers I've talked with and some dealers who buy for export markets indicate they will make no more orders than they did last year, and in some cases fewer than last year," said John Cyrus, tobacco affairs specialist with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

However, Cyrus said the amount of burley leaf going under government loan should drop slightly — to around 20 percent, down from last year's 24.9 percent, or about 5 million pounds.

Burley tobacco, an air-cured variety, is grown in significant amounts in only about 15 North Carolina counties. All are in the mountainous western section of the state where fall temperatures are especially cool.

The state's 1984 burley crop is estimated at 24 million pounds, a 9 percent increase over 1983, the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said in its mid-October report. The average yield is set at 2,400 pounds per acre, 345 pounds higher than last year. About 10,000 acres were harvested, a drop of 700 from last year.

Cyrus said the unusually warm fall kept some burley tobacco stems from drying sufficiently, but that cooler temperatures in the last two weeks kept problems minor. Also, little leaf destruction during the curing and marketing process is expected.

Most of the North Carolina sales are expected to be completed by Dec. 13, when markets across the eight-state burley belt will close for the Christmas holiday, Cyrys said. However, North Carolina markets will reopen for about a week in January.

Markets will stay open until mid- or late February in the bigger burley-producing states, especially Kentucky and Tennessee. Those states saw as much as 60 percent of their crops go under loan last year because bad weather hurt quality, Cyrus said.

The burley price support remains at $175.10 per hundred pounds, where it has been frozen since 1982. The support price for flue-cured tobacco this year was $169.90.

Erosion Rules Approved

WILMINGTON (AP) — Seawalls and other permanent structures designed to stabilize the shoreline would be banned under erosion control regulations tentatively approved by the North Carolina Coastal Resources Commission.

Under the rules, on which a final vote is set for January after public hearings, erosion control measures would be limited to "soft" structures such as piles of sand or sand bags or use of "innovative techniques" such as artificial seaweed.

Commission members said they hoped the regulations would prevent North Carolina's beaches from suffering the fate of those in New Jersey, where seawalls built to protect beachfront buildings have been blamed for accelerated beach erosion.

Currently, erosion control structures are allowed only to protect buildings constructed before June 1, 1979. The new regulations would ban permanent erosion control structures.

Club Estimates Holiday Deaths

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The North Carolina State Motor Club has estimated that 17 persons will die in North Carolina traffic accidents over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Official observance of the holiday will be over a 102-hour period beginning at 6 p.m. Wednesday and running through midnight Sunday, Nov. 25. Twelve people died during the Thanksgiving holiday last year.

"North Carolina traffic fatalities continue on an upward trend," said Dr. John G. Frazier, president of the North Carolina Motor Club. "Latest figures show an approximate 12 percent increase over the same period last year."

Total fatalities reported to date this year stand at 1,218, an increase of 133 deaths over the same period last year, the club reported.

Pesticide Regulations Modified

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Pesticide Board has modified regulations on spraying pesticides from the air, the state Agriculture Department said.

The regulations become effective on Jan. 1, 1985.

The revised regulations state that no pesticides can be applied under weather conditions that will allow pesticide drift. Pesticides applied aerially as liquids or dust have to be released no higher than 15 feet above the canopy of the target.

New Crop Weed Identified

RALEIGH (AP) — Weed specialists from the North Carolina Department of Agriculture and N.C. State University have identified a new weed — itchgrass — which could be a threat to state crops.

The weed was first noticed on a railroad siding in Robeson County and was later located in two adjacent fields.

Itchgrass is an annual weed and can grow to heights of 10 feet. It is characterized by fiberglass-like hairs on the leaves and has brace roots similar to a corn plant.

Strip Charges Denied

DURHAM (UPI) — The Durham County Education Board and two assistant principals denied charges in a $1 million lawsuit that a 12-year-old girl was strip searched at a junior high school.

In an answer Friday to the suit, board members and assistant principals Marion Jones and Bobby Collins said none of Cynthia Courson's clothing was removed in a search for a missing $5 bill at Lowe's Grove Junior High School.

The officials also charged that the suit "was recklessly filed by the plaintiff without fully ascertaining the facts and was motivated by malice and ill will." The suit was filed by Jack Courson on behalf of his daughter.

Roxboro Jobs To Be Saved

ROXBORO (UPI) — A division of North American Phillips Corp. will buy the Mepco-Electra plant and start operations next year, saving most of the 100 jobs at the factory, officials said.

Mepco officials announced last August that they would phase out manufacture of electronic components but said they were trying to arrange for another North American Phillips Company to buy the plant.

Officials said most of Mepco's 100 workers will be offered jobs with the new company, whose name was not disclosed.

The plant will be closed for several months for renovations but the new owner will supplement unemployment benefits for the workers it is likely to hire, officials said.

Hunt On For Fishing Trawler

WANCHEESE (UPI) — The Coast Guard intensified the search Saturday for a 87-foot fishing trawler that disappeared in the Atlantic Ocean four days ago along with its nine-man crew.

Eight aircraft, the Coast Guard cutter Chilula, and three other vessels combed a 17,600-square mile area southeast of Cape May, N.J., in search of the Amazing Grace, said Coast Guard Lt. L.R. White.

The trawler, owned by the Wanchese, N.C., Fish Co., and based in Hampton, Va., has been missing since Wednesday when the captain radioed another ship that it was taking on water.

"We don't know for sure that the boat has sunk," said White, who is based at the Coast Guard's 3rd District Operations Center in New York. "The cause for concern here is that nobody has been able to contact them."

UNCG Unveils Development Plan

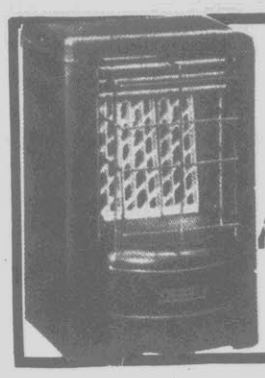

GREENSBORO (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Greensboro has unveiled a 20-year master plan for developing the campus which would amount to $116.21 million in new construction, renovation and land acquisition if realized.

Chancellor William Moran stressed that about 30 percent of the ideas in the plan have not been studied and are not formal proposals. The others are under way or are under formal study, he said.

The university already owns 167 acres and the plan targets nearly 40 more to the south and west for acquisition. If all of that land is purchased, about 100 homes and 16 businesses will be displaced.

New projects outlined in the document include an addition to the library at a cost of $3 million, a Physical Activities Complex at $13.5 million, a Performing Arts center at $7 million, and a new residence hall at a cost of $4.2 million, among other projects.

All of the figures are in 1984 dollars and do not anticipate inflation. The cost of construction projects does not include the cost of land, which is estimated at $7.58 million at today's prices. Several projects, amounting to $24.1 million of the $116.21 million total, would pay for themselves through student fees, rents and other receipts, university officials said.

Foundation Gives L-R $750,000

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The Lineberger Foundation Inc. has given Lenoir-Rhyne College $750,000 — the largest single donation in the school's 93-year history, officials say.

The donation is also the last major gift by the Belmont-based foundation, bringing an end to an era of gift-giving that stretched over 40 years and involved at least $5.5 million.

The donation was announced at Lenoir-Rhyne's Board of Trustees meeting on Friday.

Several major donations this year ate up all but $1 million in foundation assets, foundation President J. Harold Lineberger said Friday. He said income from the remaining $1 million endowment will only fund local charities — the family's original intention.

"We want to get out of the business," he said. "We haven't had time to answer all the people coming to us for money.

"It never was a big foundation," said Lineberger, who would not divulge exactly how much the foundation has given away. "It was never intended that way."

Since the foundation was founded in 1944 by the textile family, it's given millions of dollars to a number of non-profit groups, primarily educational, medical and Lutheran church institutions in the state.

Lenoir-Rhyne President John Trainer said the gift will do a "great deal to ensure the future success of Lenoir-Rhyne College."

Panel Asks Pay Change For Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — The Governmental Operations Commission has agreed to urge the 1985 General Assembly to enact three changes to help implement a centralized payroll system for public school employees.

The Legislature agreed in June to set up a central pay system for school employees like the system for other state government workers.

Changes supported by the commission and recommended by the state Board of Education would set standard pay dates for local school employees, permit some temporary employees to be exempt from direct deposit requirements and revise the schedule for implementing the central pay system.

The revised schedule calls for all employees in one-half the school units to join the central pay system in fiscal year 1985-86 and employees in the other units to join in 1986-87.

The existing schedule calls for all certified school employees to join a central pay system in 1985-86 and the other school workers to join in 1986-87.

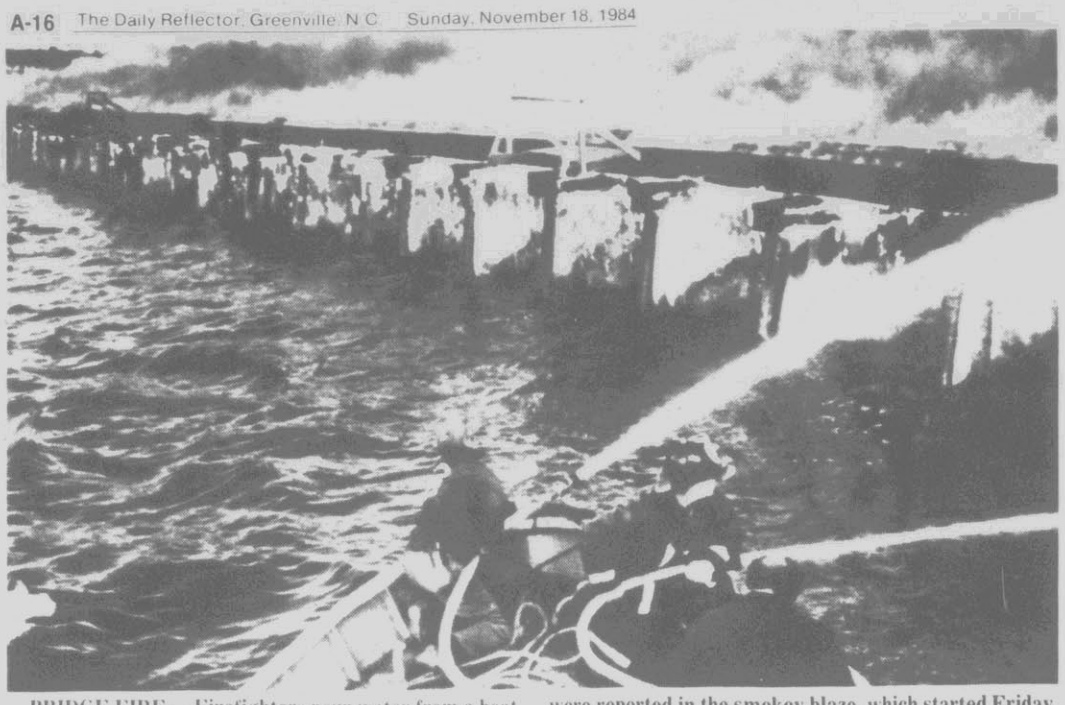

Mass Uprising?

LONDON (AP) — Reza Pahlavi, son of the late Shah of Iran, reportedly says plans are being made for a mass uprising to overthrow the government of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

In an interview in the London-based Iranian exile newspaper Kayhan, Pahlavi, 23, was quoted as saying steps were being taken to form a "central command ... (for) a mass uprising" against Khomeini's regime.

Governor's Race Most Expensive

RALEIGH (AP) — The latest campaign spending reports show Gov.-elect Jim Martin spent $2.7 million in his bid to become the state's second Republican governor this century, while Democrat Rufus Edmisten spent $4.4 million.

Gubernatorial candidates, including the two most expensive campaigns for this spring's Democratic primary, spent at least $11.4 million, almost four times as much as the previous high for a governor's race.

The spending total is second in state history only to this year's $21 million U.S. Senate campaign between Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

Edmisten's expenses totaled $552,000 since his previous report was filed Oct. 29 while Martin reported spending about $309,000 during the same period, the campaign reports released Friday showed.

The Martin campaign estimates that it has $118,000 in bills still unpaid from the final weeks of the race, said Betty Sue Taylor of Charlotte, a Martin spokeswoman.

The totals were preliminary figures. Although post-election campaign finances were due to be filed Friday with the state Board of Elections, the reports had not been received when the office closed for the week.

Martin's report was mailed, fulfilling the legal requirement for a Friday postmark, while Edmisten's was delayed by a computer breakdown. John Buchan, Edmisten's campaign treasurer, said the report would be filed Monday along with the $20 late filing fee.

The preliminary estimates show Martin's campaign expects to be close to a financial balance when all bills are paid.

Edmisten's campaign is about $225,000 to $250,000 in debt, including a $90,000 family loan on some personal property and a $128,000 loan secured by 51 of Edmisten's friends and Department of Justice employees during the spring primary.

With the loans due Dec. 31, Edmisten's supporters plan a fundraiser Dec. 8 in Raleigh to help defray the debt.

Harrington Has Support

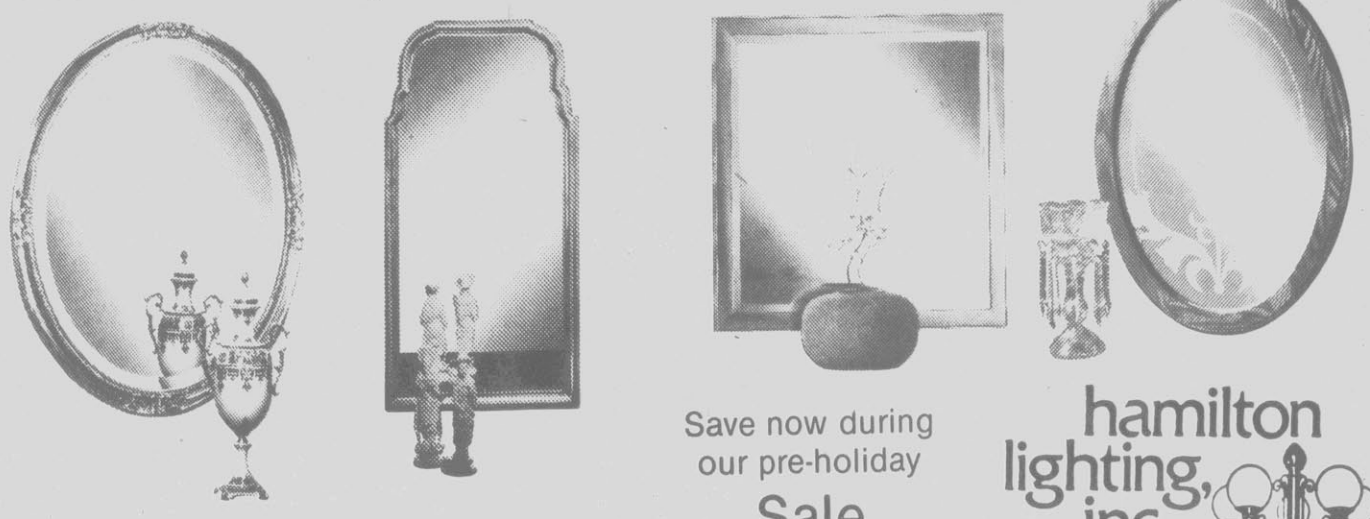

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. J.J. (Monk) Harrington, D-Bertie, said Friday that he has overwhelming support for the post of president pro tem, the second-highest job in the North Carolina legislature.

Harrington said in an interview that he expects to be picked for the post when the Senate's 38 Democrats caucus in Raleigh next month.

Harrington said the race for the post dissolved when another contender, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, called him to concede and pledge his support.

Harrington, the state Senate's senior member, was elected in 1962 and has served 11 terms.

Devils Rally By Wolfpack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Steve Sloan did something Saturday that he doesn't normally do.

With his team trailing at halftime, when he believed it should be leading, the usually calm Duke coach lost his temper.

The Blue Devils went on to defeat North Carolina State 16-13 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game, but Sloan went to the locker room at intermission distressed about an intentional grounding penalty that drove Duke back from the North Carolina State 13 to the 32. It killed a possible scoring drive, and Sloan saw momentum dying.

"I said some things at halftime I hate to say. I got mad," said Sloan. "When you're a marginal team, every play is catastrophic. I had temporary insanity."

"He got real fired up," said Duke quarterback Steve Slayden. "I was surprised he was yelling that much."

Sloan said he apologized later to the official and his team. It was made easier by Ken Harper's 29-yard field goal that gave the Blue Devils the lead and Darryl Brunson's interception that sealed the victory.

"It took a lot of courage for Kenny Harper to make that kick," said Sloan. "He was injured earlier and just fell over after he made it. He made it with a (hip) injury which is a remarkable accomplishment, in my opinion."

North Carolina State coach Tom Reed, meanwhile, spent another frustrating afternoon watching another one get away.

"No matter what happened, it seemed like we weren't going to win," said Reed. "It typifies the season."

The victory was the first in the conference in five tries for the 2-8 Blue Devils, and it spoiled a North Carolina State homecoming before a crowd of 35,200. The Wolfpack finished its season 1-6 in the ACC and 3-8 overall.

Harper's kick came with 1:56 left after a 14-play drive. North Carolina State started in good field position on its own 40 after a kickoff return by Mike Miller, but Brunson picked off a Tim Esposito pass on the second play of the drive to protect the Blue Devil lead.

Duke, trailing 10-7 at halftime, opened the second half with a fumble, but followed on the next series with a 96-yard, 19-play drive which took more than half of the third quarter.

Mike Peacock scored on a 1-yard run, but the snap on the extra point was high and a desperation pass was intercepted.

N.C. State tied the score at 13 on a 32-yard field goal by Mike Cofer with 7:35 left.

The Blue Devils, who are at the bottom of the conference in total offense, slightly outgained the Wolfpack, 343 yards to 326 yards. But mistakes were the most costly for both teams, with Duke coughing up three fumbles and North Carolina State tossing three interceptions.

N.C. State senior tailback Joe McIntosh, playing for the first time in three games because of a foot injury, had only 29 yards in six carries to finish his career with 3,642 yards.

North Carolina State outgained Duke by more than 100 yards in the first half and was able to sustain drives longer than the Blue Devils, but mistakes plagued both teams.

North Carolina State recovered a Duke fumble in the first quarter, only to throw an interception. Duke, meanwhile, was within scoring range with seconds left in the half, but an intentional grounding penalty killed the drive.

Ricky Isom's second effort turned a straight-ahead run into a 15-yard touchdown on its first drive.

Duke tied the score on a 3-yard run by Eric Sanders after a 14-yard drive, as the Blue Devils capitalized on a fumble recovery by Mark Moseley.

Cofer kicked a 26-yard field goal early in the second quarter after a 14-play drive.

Cavs, Heels Eye Goals After 24-24 Tie

Touchdown Plunge

Virginia fullback Steve Morse (29) plunges one yard into the end zone for a touchdown early in the third quarter of the game between the Cavs and North Carolina at Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill. UNC tied Virginia, 24-24. (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL — No. 19 Virginia can still win the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship and North Carolina can avoid a losing season. Those are the possibilities following Saturday's 24-24 tie.

North Carolina had taken a 14-3 edge, then fallen behind on a Virginia charge in the second half. The Tar Heels came back and Ken Miller's 25-yard field goal with seven seconds left to play forced the tie. Miller has now kicked 15 straight field goals, an ACC record. He is the only Division I-A kicker who has not missed this season.

The Cavaliers have a 7-1-2 mark and a 3-0-2 league record and can still capture their first league title ever by beating Maryland next Saturday in Charlottesville.

North Carolina can avoid its first losing season in six years if it beats Duke in the season finale next Saturday. The Tar Heels are 4-5-1 and 2-2-1.

Tar Heel coach Dick Crum remembered a previous situation which resulted in a 16-13 loss at Clemson when he explained the decision to kick.

"I felt it was in our best interest to kick the field goal," Crum said. "Three years ago, we went for the win against Clemson and that hurt us all season long."

Sophomore quarterback Kevin Anthony sparked the charge and said the effort silenced the Cavaliers.

"I think they were laughing at us when they had us 24-14," Anthony said. "A lot of people thought we were out of it. I think we did a heck of a job coming back."

Virginia coach George Welsh tried to understand Crum's position.

"Maybe after his team made such a comeback, he thought it was important for his team not to lose it," Welsh said. "I think they did a great job."

The Tar Heels had taken a 14-3 halftime lead, but Virginia recovered for a 24-14 advantage behind quarterback Don Majkowski.

Playing before scouts from the Hall of Fame and Peach bowls, Majkowski, a sophomore, hit freshman John Ford with a 25-yard scoring pass in the third period and added a 5-yard touchdown run in the fourth period.

Bolstered by a 63-yard pass play from Anthony to Earl Winfield, North Carolina got within 24-21 on Anthony's 11-yard pass to tight end Arnold Franklin with 4:03 left.

Anthony caught a 40-yard touchdown pass from wide receiver Eric Streater, then tossed a 5-yard scoring strike to Streater in the first quarter. He marched the Tar Heels down to the Virginia 9 with time running out, but he missed on two passes and tailback Ethan Horton also missed a pass and Miller came on for the field goal.

Steve Morse started the comeback with a 1-yard plunge to cap an 80-yard drive with 9:20 left in the third period. Kenny Stadlin, who started the the Virginia scoring with a 39-yard field goal in the second quarter, added the first of three conversion kicks.

Virginia took a 24-14 lead when Majkowski hit Ford on a post pattern with 14:39 left to play.

Anthony completed 19 of 38 passes for 281 yards, breaking the record of 271 yards set by Scott Stankavage against Georgia Tech last year.

After Tommy Barnhardt's punt pinned the Cavaliers at their 1, Virginia got no further than its 41. North Carolina took Kevin Ferguson's 34-yard boot and marched to its 7-0 lead.

From the Virginia 40, Streater hit Anthony with a pass at the 25 and the sophomore quarterback sprinted to the end zone with 7:33 left in the period. Miller added the conversion.

Anthony hit Streater on the left side of the end zone with 1:51 remaining in the period and Miller's kick gave the Tar Heels a 14-0 edge.

Horton, who had rushed for 63 yards in his first six carries, was stymied for the rest of the half and finished with 90 yards on 16 carries. He left the game late in the period with a foot injury but returned.

Virginia scored on Stadlin's field goal, which came after a delay of game penalty, with 6:07 left before halftime.

Dam, Pirates Cautious Of Over Expectation

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Peter Dam wants to know what all the fuss is about.

The Houston Cougars made it to the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament three times with 7-0 Nigerian center Akeem Olajuwon, Uwe Blab has helped Bobby Knight's Indiana teams and, more locally, Yvon Joseph has become a force in the middle for Georgia Tech.

So when East Carolina Coach Charlie Harrison signed Peter Dam of Haaksbergen, The Netherlands, many members of the media and Pirate fans were quick to tout the seven-footer as the foreign connection needed to reverse the trend after a disappointing 4-24 record in the 1983-84 season.

Despite a pre-season ankle injury, Dam is listed as a probable starter at center when the Pirates host the Irish National Team Monday at Minges Coliseum. Sophomore center Leon Bass is still sidelined with a stress fracture, and Dam is expected to be joined by guards Curt Vanderhorst and Scott Hardy, with William Grady and Jack Turnbill at forward.

"I didn't expect all the publicity when I decided to come here," said Dam, a sophomore by NCAA standards. "It's not only a seven-footer who can win a game. There's a lot of pressure on Curt Vanderhorst because he's a leader, and there's a lot on Peter Dam.

"(The fans) expect a lot of me. I'm new; I'm a freshman as far as basketball is concerned, not a sophomore. I hope some people aren't too optimistic."

Harrison is cautious about putting the burden of inside production on Dam.

"I don't think he's going to be the Akeem Olajuwon of East Carolina," Harrison said. "But I think with his insight and size he is going to give us something with physical play. Offensively, though, he is very rough."

Dam, 21, admits the transition to NCAA rules played in the United States continues to be a problem, but his adjustment to new teammates after playing in a European club league for two years has been relatively smooth.

"The first three weeks were tough — learning the rules and how (the coaches) expect me to play," Dam said. "I made it, and the other players expect a lot of me; we expect of lot of each other.

"Basketball over here is hard, especially at center. I pick up a lot of fouls in practice, and I have to work on that all the time."

Despite all the caution and "guarded optimism" concerning Dam, his talents were sufficient to draw the attention of Coach John Thompson of the defending national champion Georgetown Hoyas, as well as Joe Harrington of ECAC-South rival George Mason.

"I could of had the chance two years ago to go to Georgetown or George Mason," Dam said. "But I decided to wait and signed to play (club basketball)."

Academics have become a problem for Dam; not maintaining a sufficient grade point average, but determining his requirements and a projected graduation date.

Pirates Face Irish In Open Exhibition

East Carolina's basketball Pirates for 1984-85 go on public display for the first time in Greenville Monday night when they entertain the Marion Basketball Club of the Irish Nationals at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Coach Charlie Harrison's third club is, like last year's, a youthful one. There are no seniors on the team and just two juniors, veteran Curt Vanderhorst and transfer Scott Hardy. The remainder of the roster is composed of seven sophomores and one freshman.

Vanderhorst and those sophomores saw most of the playing time last year, so despite being young, many of the team are experienced. However, after winning only four games last year, Harrison isn't sure that the experience was a good one.

The Irish team features four players who saw college basketball action in the United States, including former Washington High School and Wake Forest University star Alvis Rogers. The 6-8 star is listed as a probable starter in the game.

The other starters will probably come from Frank Lawlor, 6-2, an all-Irish under 20 player; 6-2 Dan Trant, the captain of the team who played at Clark University and was drafted by the Celtics in 1984; Donal Brethnach, 6-1, an Irish All-International player; Chris Logan, 6-9, who played at Holy Cross; and Curtis Harkness, 6-11, who played at Lander College.

The Pirates are likely to start Vanderhorst at the big guard, freshman Herb Dixon at point, and sophomores William Grady at small forward, and Jack Turnbill and Peter Dam at the posts.

Others to see action will include Hardy, coming off an injury, and sophomores Keith Sledge, Derrick Battle and Roy Smith.

Leon Bass, hampered throughout fall drills with a stress fracture in his leg, and another of the sophomores, is uncertain for the game.

The Pirates open the 1984-85 season officially on November 27 when they host Central Connecticut State.

Lady Pirates Face NCSU, Tar Heels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, under their new coach Emily Manwaring, will open the 1984-85 season Friday in the second-annual Dogwood Classic at Fayetteville.

The Lady Pirates will take on N.C. State in Friday night's second game at 8 p.m. The ECU women take on North Carolina in a 6 p.m. contest Saturday. The opening home game of the year is Wednesday, Nov. 28, against Fayetteville State.

"We're ready to play," Manwaring said. "We've been practicing since September 1, and while we still have a few things we want to put in, we've had enough of practicing against ourselves. We're ready for some outside action."

The new coach, who comes to East Carolina replacing Cathy Andruzzi, said she believes the team has improved a lot since the opening of drills. "Over the next few days, it's going to be a matter of working on execution and cleaning up some of the details. We just need to sharpen it up."

Manwaring is fairly well set on her starters for the opener, barring some unforseen changes. She'll open with 5-9 junior Sylvia Bragg and 5-7 junior Loraine Foster at the guards. Bragg led the Lady Pirates in scoring last year with a 13.4 avearge, while Foster averaged 14.5 points a game two years ago. She did not play last season.

Lisa Squirewell, a 5-11 junior, and Annette Phillips, a 5-10 senior, will start at the forward position. Squirewell averaged 9.1 points and 6.6 rebounds last year, while Phillips, who set a new ECU record for minutes played as a junior, averaged 6.6 points and 5.8 rebounds.

At the center position will be 6-0 senior Anita Anderson, who scored 6.6 points and pulled 5.2 rebounds.

"Alma Bethea (6-0, Fr., center) will play early, if she does not start," Manwaring said.

"Our underclassmen have talent, but not experience. I hope the starting lineup will change, too, during the year," she added. Manwaring said that wasn't because she doesn't have faith in the five she lists as starters. "That will show that the others have been motivated to improve so that they can earn the opportunity to start.

"Besides, I think a team that has the same five starters all year long becomes a dull team. But right now, playing time is the goal of the rest. I don't think we have anybody who will hurt us if they start. They all want to win, but we're dealing with human beings, too, and each one of them is different."

Some of the others expected to help very quickly include Monique Pompili, a 5-11 freshman forward, Crystal Grier, a 5-7 sophomore guard/forward; Jody Rodriguez, a 5-9 sophomore guard/forward, and Victoria Watras, a 5-11 freshman guard.

"Watras is a good shooter and passer," Manwaring said. "She works harder than anyone on the team in practice and I'm impressed with that. She was a Converse All-American in high school."

Grier has looked good in practice, according to Manwaring, despite being a walk-on. "She jumps well;

Georgia Tech Stings Deacons

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Georgia Tech gambled and won Saturday.

Tailback Robert Lavette passed for his first touchdown and rushed for another score as the Yellow Jackets whipped Wake Forest 24-7 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

But it was a defense that held the Demon Deacons scoreless the final three periods that Coach Bill Curry wanted to talk about afterwards.

"I'm thrilled, just thrilled as I can be with our defense," Curry said. "I can't ever rememeber us playing a better defensive game.

"We gambled more on defense today. By gambling, I'm talking about blitzing," said Curry, whose team with a victory in the final game could achieve its best record since 1978. "We are getting a little more confident among our young defensive backs ... drilling people and knocking balls loose."

Wake Forest coach Al Groh said he was "bitterly disappointed about this loss ... as much as I've ever been about a loss."

"They just played a lot better than we did today," Groh said.

"What we have accomplished to this point doesn't affect the feeling we have at the present." But when the players walk out of here they should be albe to walk with a feeling of condifence and pride in what they have done," he said. "I'm already looking forward to next season."

Lavette, a 6-foot, 195-pound senior, scored on a 2-yard run and hit flanker Mike Harrington with a 6-yard scoring pass on an halfback option.

The Yellow Jackets scored all four of their touchdowns on drives of more than 70 yards as they improved their record to 5-4-1 and 2-2-1 in the ACC.

Georgia Tech, which finishes its season Dec. 1 against Georgia, marched 73 yards in 13 plays with the second half kickoff before Lavette, who rushed for 80 yards on 20 carries, muscled off right tackle for the touchdown with 9:06 left in the third quarter.

After Georgia Tech forced the Demon Deacons to punt, quarterback John Dewberry threw passes of 26 yards to tight end Ken Whisenhunt and 28 yards to fullback Malcolm King.

One play later Lavette capped the 77-yard drive when he took a pitch from Dewberry and passed to a wide-open Harrington with 2:24 remaining in the third period.

The Demon Deacons, who have never beaten Georgia Tech in seven meetings, did not cross midfield in the second half as they were held to 43 yards in total offense in the second half and 162 overall in their season finale.

Wake Forest finished 6-5 and 3-3, failing to get its second seven-victory season in the last four decades.

The Yellow Jackets amassed 428 yards total offense, including 235 in the second half.

After trailing early, Georgia Tech drove 78 yards in the final 6½ minutes to grab a 10-7 halftime lead on a 3-yard touchdown pass from Dewberry to Whisenhunt with 1:02 left.

EC Men Win; Women Bow In Opening Swim Meets

East Carolina's men's and women's swimming teams opened their 1984-85 season Saturday with meets against different opponents.

The men got their season off with an impressive 69-40 victory over UNC-Charlotte, while the Lady Pirates bowed to James Madison, 90-50, in the Minges Aquatic Center.

The Pirates were led by freshmen Bruce Brockschmidt and Pat Brennen in their first meet of the year. Brockschmidt won the 200 freestyle in a time of 1:46.51, as well as taking first in the 200 breaststroke in 2:14.77. Brennan took first place honors in the 500 freestyle going 4:54.01 and was second in the 200 individual medley with a clocking of 2:04.02.

The Lady Pirates' bright spot in their loss was also a freshman, Chris Holman. In winning the 200 backstroke, Holman's time of 2:14.17 qualified her for the NCAA meet and set a new freshman and school record for ECU. She also finished second in the 200 freestyle in 1:59.12.

The East Carolina teams travel to Raleigh on Tuesday to face N.C. State.

she's not flashy, but she doesn't miss the layup, she rebounds good on the weak side and she knows the plays.

"Pompili jumps well and she can provide us with instant offense. Rodriguez is a versatile player, who can play in the front and back courts."

Three others, 5-5 freshman guard Therese Durkin, 5-7 sophomore guard Cheryl Fout and 5-7 freshman guard Shelley Ann Ridgeway, round out the team. "They are still coming," Manwaring said. "Ridgeway is one of our better outside shooters but needs consistancy. Durkin is a hard worker. She was on the team last year, but missed the entire season with an injury. Fout is a transfer from Virginia Commonwealth, and a good passer."

One other player, Chris O'Conner, a 5-9 guard, will miss the season. She had knee surgery shortly after reporting to ECU.

"We are going to have to play together as a unit," Manwaring said.

"Really, one of the good things about playing N.C. State first is that they haven't seen us. They don't know what we're going to do. And it puts us on the same level with them to some extent."

Too, the coach said, she has not coached the players to go into the game with an everything to gain, nothing to lose, attitude.

"We're going in with the idea that we're supposed to win the game. I want our players believing that they can win. We've been trying to put them into certain game situations, like telling them they're on the line with five seconds left, a one-point lead and we need those two free throws. I know it's not quite the same as the real thing, but it's as close as we can come in practice."

And Manwaring made one other promise: "We're not going to lose the way we did last year." The Lady Pirates bowed to State, 72-41 and fell to UNC, 77-49.

The Pirates will also be the defending tournament champion in the ECAC-South, and this year, the league will operate on a total Division I level. Seven teams, all but Navy, will field teams in the league, with a double round-robin schedule. The league will hold a post-season tournament at Richmond to wind up the season.

"I really don't know much about the league. We don't have any of the video tapes from last year, so I haven't been able to see any of them," Manwaring said.

"But really, the first half of our year is more important right now. We want to get off to a good start. That will determine how we do in the conference."

The league, however, still has not achieved the automatic NCAA Tournament berth for its tournament champion, although Manwaring is hopeful that it will be obtained by next year.

Braves Rip Pitt, 106-70

MURFREESBORO — Chowan Junior College rolled up a 106-70 basketball victory over Pitt Community College Saturday night.

The two teams battled on fairly even terms through the early minutes of the game, with each taking the lead. But Chowan finally pulled out to a 21-16 lead in the middle of the half, and held on for a 42-37 margin at intermission.

Pitt stayed close through the early minutes of the second half, but the Braves then began to pull away. They moved out by 15, but the Paladins cut it back to nine before trailing 67-53 with 9:20 left.

But 15 second half turnovers, most of them in the final ten minutes, helped Chowan outscore Pitt, 39-17 over that time period.

Greg Hollingsworth led Chowan with 28 while Clifton Lynch had 16 and Jim Dillard added 13. Pitt was paced by Andrew Edwards with 24, while Linwood Harris had 12 and Keith Clark had 11.

Pitt, now 4-4, plays host to Mt. Olive on November 28.

"I wanted to go into my major right away, but now (the academic counselors) say I have to have all the general college requirements out of the way," Dam said. "I have three years of basketball eligibility left but five years of school, so I'm not sure what's going to happen. If I do well and like it here and Coach Harrison is satisfied with me, I'll be here.

"Adjusting to school has gone better than I expected, but being so far away from home is very tough.

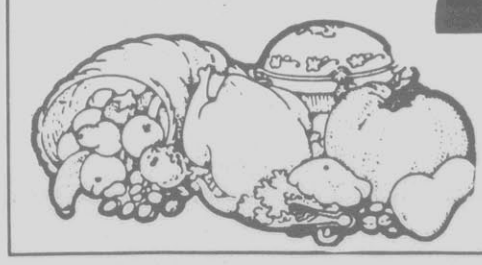

"I came (to East Carolina) for basketball — it's like I'm married to basketball — but the most important thing is school."

#1 Nebraska, #2 Navy Both Upset

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Tim Lashar kicked a tie-breaking 32-yard field goal on the second play of the final period and sixth-ranked Oklahoma stopped Nebraska an inch from a touchdown with a brilliant goal-line stand Saturday to preserve a 17-7 victory over the No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers and keep three Big Eight teams in the running for the Orange Bowl.

Just like the 31-30 Orange Bowl loss to Miami that cost Nebraska the 1983 national championship, this game featured another daring and unsuccessful gamble by Coach Tom Osborne.

Trailing 10-7 and needing only a tie to win the Big Eight title outright for the fourth straight year, Osborne passed up a chip-shot field goal that would have been shorter than an extra-point attempt. It failed when Jeff Smith took a pitchout to the left on fourth-and-goal at the one-inch line but was thrown back by Oklahoma cornerback Brian Hall.

In the Orange Bowl, needing a tie to capture the national championship, Osborne went for a two-point conversion with 48 seconds left. It misfired and the Cornhuskers finished second behind Miami in the final rankings.

Quarterback Danny Bradley, who scored Oklahoma's first touchdown early in the game on a one-yard plunge, added an insurance score when he ran 29 yards for another touchdown with 56 seconds left. Both of Bradley's touchdowns followed Nebraska turnovers.

Smith's one-yard plunge capped an 84-yard second-period Nebraska drive that tied the score and it remained that way as the Cornhusker defense, ranked No. 1 nationally, stuffed the Sooners time after time.

Nebraska finished its regular season with a 9-2 record, but 6-1 in Big Eight play. The Cornhuskers captured at least a share of the conference crown a week ago.

Oklahoma, which winds up next week against fourth-ranked Oklahoma State, is 8-1-1 overall, 5-1 in the Big Eight. The winners of next week's game between Oklahoma and fourth-ranked Oklahoma State will represent the conference in the Orange Bowl, although a tie next week would still enable Nebraka to back into a trip to Miami.

The setback undoubtedly will cost Nebraska the No. 1 ranking for the second time this year. The Cornhuskers suffered their only previous setback to Syracuse, 16-7, on Sept. 29 and were knocked out of the top spot after a three-week stay. This time, they were No. 1 for only one week.

Oklahoma took an early 7-0 lead on Bradley's one-yard sneak. It came 5:57 into the game, seven plays after linebacker Paul Migliazzo recovered a fumble by Nebraska quarterback Travis Turner at the Cornhuskers' 26.

Nebraska, which managed only one first down on its first four possessions, finally got its offense untracked late in the first quarter. The Cornhuskers marched from their 13 to the Oklahoma 29 before Turner's pass, intended for split end Scott Kimball, was intercepted by cornerback Jim Rockford at the 23.

But on its next possession, Nebraska uncorked a 10-play drive that included a 38-yard pass from Craig Sundberg to Robb Schnitzler to the Oklahoma two-yard line. Two plays later, Smith smashed through right guard for the touchdown.

Navy.....38
South Carolina (2).....21

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy, behind two touchdown passes from quarterback Bob Misch to Chris Weiler and two short scoring runs by halfback Mike Smith, stunned No. 2 South Carolina 38-21 in college football Saturday.

The Midshipmen, after building a 14-7 halftime lead, broke open the game in the third quarter when they scored on three consecutive possessions. They went on to increase the lead to 38-7 early in the fourth quarter before South Carolina scored twice in the final period to narrow the margin.

The Gamecocks, who had reportedly been in line for an Orange Bowl berth, slipped to 9-1 and will face Clemson in its final regular-season game. Navy is 4-5-1 and will play Army in its last game.

Two of Navy's third-period touchdowns were set up by pass interceptions after the Navy defense shut down the South Carolina running game, forcing the Gamecocks to go to the air.

A swarming Navy defense also forced several miscues by a South Carolina offense that had averaged almost 35 points a game while winning its first nine games.

A Navy offense riddled by injuries also moved the ball consistently against the Gamecocks, especially during the stretch in the third and fourth quarters when the Midshipmen scored 24 points to put the game pretty much out of reach.

South Carolina's first touchdown came early in the second quarter on a 2-yard keeper by quarterback Allen Mitchell, tying the score after Navy had gone ahead 7-0 on Smith's first touchdown, a 1-yard run late in the first quarter.

The Gamecocks didn't score again until the final period, when running back Quinton Lewis ran two yards for one touchdown and quarterback Mike Hold connected with reciever Eric Poole on an 81-yard touchdown pass.

Brigham Young (3)....24
Utah.....14

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Quarterback Robbie Bosco threw three touchdown passes as No. 3 Brigham Young overcame a plague of turnovers to whip arch-rival Utah 24-14 Saturday, extending college football's longest winning streak to 22 games.

Bosco, the nation's leader in passing efficiency, was intercepted three times in the first half and fumbled once in the third quarter. Utah kept the game close until Bosco's 4-yard scoring toss to Kelly Smith with 7:26 left in the game.

The victory gave BYU an 11-0 mark with one game remaining at home against Utah State. The Cougars, who own their ninth consecutive Western Athletic Conference title, will play in their seventh straight Holiday Bowl Dec. 21 in San Diego.

Utah, which ended its season at 6-5-1 overall and 4-3-1 in the WAC, played before the second-largest crowd in its history — 36,110.

The first of two interceptions by Utah linebacker Ron Ketchoyian, who also recovered a fumble, set up the first score of the game. Quarterback Mark Stevens directed Utah 33 yards and fullback Molonai Hola scored from one yard away to make it 7-0.

Bosco immediately responded, driving the Cougars 90 yards and connecting on an 11-yard scoring pass to Adam Haysbert late in the first quarter.

A 19-yard Lee Johnson field goal with two seconds left in the half made it 10-7 for BYU at intermission.

Bosco's 19-yard touchdown pass to Glen Kozlowski made it 17-7 midway through the third period, but Stevens then drove Utah 80 yards, passing 11 yards to Therman Beard for the score. That made it 17-14, a score that held up until Bosco's final touchdown.

Oklahoma State (4)...16
Iowa State.....10

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Nose guard John Washington lumbered 30 yards with an interception return, setting up Larry Roach's inssurance field goal as No. 4 Oklahoma State escaped with a 16-10 victory Saturday over Iowa State in Big Eight football.

The victory gave the Cowboys a 9-1 record overall and 5-1 mark in the conference. The Cyclones fell to 2-7-2 and 0-5-2.

Late in the fourth quarter, Oklahoma State's Leslie O'Neal deflected a pass by Iowa State's Alan Hood and Washington snared the ball, returning it to the Cyclone 11. Four plays later, Roach drilled a 21-yard field goal — the Cowboys' first points of the second half.

With the field goal, Roach became Oklahoma State's career scoring leader, surpassing Heisman Trophy runnerup Terry Miller with 296 points.

The Cowboys' nationally ranked defense throttled Iowa State's offense, which took advantage of four Oklahoma State fumbles and one interception.

In the second half, Iowa State's Marc Bachrodt drilled a 25-yard field goal to cut the gap to 13-10, but Oklahoma State's defense snuffed all other threats by the Cyclones.

The first Oklahoma State fumble, by quarterback Rusty Hilger when he was hit while trying to pass at the Oklahoma State 23, led to an Iowa State score that gave the Cyclones a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

The drive was capped by a 10-yard scoring run on an option keeper by Hood.

Oklahoma State's first score came after Robert Nunn recovered a fumbled punt by Iowa State. From there, Oklahoma State flanker Jamie Harris made a tremendous diving catch of a 38-yard Hilger pass, and Harris then caught a 7-yard scoring pass from Hilger.

Middies Jubilation

Navy Midshipmen cheer in the background as Navy split end Chris Weiler (33) tiptoes over the goal line to score after catching a pass from Bob Misch as South Carolina defender Bryant Gilliard (20) is too late. Navy upset #2 ranked South Carolina, 38-21. (AP Laserphoto)

Florida Wins SEC Title—For Now

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Bobby Raymond drilled a record six field goals to bail out a Florida offense that found the end zone only once Saturday as the fifth-ranked Gators beat Kentucky 25-17 and claimed — for now — their first Southeastern Conference title in 52 seasons.

However, the SEC executive committee is scheduled to vote Tuesday on whether Florida, bound for a three-year NCAA probation for recruiting violations, may keep the championship and eligibility for postseason bowls. The school has appealed the NCAA ruling, delaying the sanctions and preserving bowl eligibility.

It was the first time since 1928 that Florida, 8-1-1 overall and 5-0-1 in the league, had won eight straight. The Gators lost their opener to No. 14 Miami, tied Louisiana State and haven't lost since, despite the firing of Coach Charley Pell after three games.

LSU lost to Mississippi State Saturday, to insure Florida of the title.

Kentucky fell to 7-3 overall and 2-3 in the league.

Raymond's field goals — from 30, 38, 27, 30, 36 and 43 yards — tied the school record of six in one game that he set against Florida State last season. They gave Raymond 21 on the year, breaking a mark of 20 that he had also set in 1983.

But the Kentucky defense was inspired, keeping an offense that averages 32 points per game out of the end zone until almost 13 minutes into the second half, three plays after Jarvis Williams intercepted a Bill Ransdell pass at the Kentucky 15-yard line.

Freshman Kerwin Bell found Frank Neal in the back of the end zone with 2:10 left in the third quarter to give the Gators, who led only 12-3 at the half, a 19-10 advantage.

Before the interception, Frank Hare had stopped running back Neal Anderson to kill a Florida drive on fourth-and-1 at the Kentucky 1.

Earlier in the quarter, Ransdell ended a 10-quarter streak in which the Florida defense hadn't allowed a touchdown. The sophomore from Elizabethtown passed 7 yards over the middle to Joe Phillips for a touchown at 10:15 of the third. Kentucky had taken the ball at the Florida 32 when John L. Williams fumbled.

Ransdell prevented the Gators from starting another streak in the fourth quarter, directing a nine-play, 71-yard drive that ended with Phillips' one-handed catch of an 8-yard scoring pass to make it 22-17 with 9:11 to play.

Ransdell turned it into a cliff-hanger, driving Kentucky to the Florida 10 with under two minutes to play, but Adrian White intercepted to end the threat.

Hall Named By Florida

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Galen Hall, the assistant coach who led fifth-ranked Florida to seven straight victories after Charley Pell was fired, was named permanent coach Saturday after the Gators beat Kentucky 25-17 to claim a share of the Southeastern Conference title.

"It's been a great honor for me to be put in this situation," Hall said. "We said at the beginning of the year that we would play them one at a time and fortunately it came down to this game. We're conference champions."

The appointment was announced by University of Florida president Marshal Criser.

Hall spent 18 seasons as offensive coordinator for Barry Switzer at Oklahoma. He came to Florida last February and became interim head coach three games into the season when Pell was fired following an NCAA investigation into alleged rules violations by the school. The alleged infractions may lead the SEC to strip the Gators of the title when it meets Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Criser said of the Florida team, "They represented every Gator that every played for the University of Florida today. Finally, conference champions!"

UCLA.....29
Southern Cal (7).....10

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — UCLA's John Lee's established an NCAA single-season record by kicking five field goals Saturday as the Bruins stunned Rose Bowl-bound Southern Cal 29-10 for their third straight victory over the Trojans.

Lee finished the regular season with 29 field goals in 33 attempts. He broke the NCAA record of 28 three-pointers set by West Virginia's Paul Woodside in 1982 and equaled by Arizona State's Luis Zendejas last year.

Despite the one-sided setback, the seventh-ranked Trojans will face Big Ten champion Ohio State in the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day. Southern Cal clinched its Rose Bowl berth by beating Washington 16-7 on Nov. 10.

The Trojans, who turned the ball over six times, completed their Pacific-10 Conference schedule with a 7-1 record and are 8-2 overall. They finish their regular season against Notre Dame next Saturday.

The two-time defending Rose Bowl champion Bruins, who figure to receive a bowl bid next Saturday when invitations may be officially extended, wound up regular-season play at 5-2 in the Pac-10 and 8-3 overall.

Lee, a 5-foot-11, 175-pound junior, booted a 46-yard field goal after 7:30 of play to put UCLA ahead for good in the nationally televised game, played before a crowd of 90,096 at the Rose Bowl.

He added field goals of 29, 43 and 37 yards in the second quarter. Three of the first-half field goals followed Southern Cal turnovers.

Lee broke the NCAA record by kicking a 49-yarder with 9:08 remaining in the game. He had missed from 44 yards out on the first play of the final period.

Lee's only misses this season were on attempts of 41, 44, 49 and 50 yards.

The Bruins led 19-3 at halftime by virtue of Lee's four field goals and a five-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Steve Bono to wide receiver Mike Sherrard with 20 seconds left before the intermission.

The only Southern Cal score in the first half was a 45-yard field goal by Steve Jordan midway through the second quarter, which made it 6-3 at the time.

The Bruins extended their lead to 26-3 on a 63-yard interception return by Dennis Price of a pass thrown by Southern Cal's Tim Green with 5:50 remaining in the third quarter.

Green scored on a two-yard run with 1:43 left in the third period to cap a 70-yard drive and make it 26-10. Lee's final field goal completed the scoring.

Southern Cal leads its series with UCLA 30-18-6 but the Bruins have won three straight and four of the last five games between the teams.

Miss. State.....16
Louisiana State (9)....14

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Artie Cosby's third field goal of the second half — a 27-yarder with 1:15 remaining — pushed Mississippi State past No. Louisiana State 16-14 Saturday and knocked the Tigers out of a tie for the Southeastern Conference football championship.

Mississippi State, a seven-point underdog, held LSU to four first downs in the final 30 minutes and rallied from a 14-7 deficit as Cosby kicked field goals of 45 and 21 yards before game winner.

The loss dropped LSU to 7-2-1 overall and 4-1-1 in the SEC and gave Florida its first conference championship. However, the NCAA has issued Florida a three-year probation, now under appeal, and the SEC executive committee is scheduled to vote Tuesday on whether to let the Gators keep their title and eligibility for this season's bowl games.

The SEC champion is assured a spot in the Sugar Bowl.

Mississippi State won its first SEC game in five outings and raised its overall record to 4-6.

After Cosby's third field goal, LSU drove from its own 20 to the Mississippi State 42-yard line but after three incomplete passes a 59-field goal attempt by freshman Ron Lewis fell about 10 yards short.

LSU broke a 7-7 tie late in the first half with a lightening drive that covered 80 yards in 40 seconds. Jeff Wickersham's 41-yard pass to Eric Martin gave the Tigers a touchdown with 1:57 left in the half.

The two teams exchanged touchdowns in the first quarter with LSU getting its touchdown with Garry James getting the Tigers' TD on a 1-yard run and Mississippi State scoring on Orlando Lundie's 8-yard run.

Texas (10).....44
Texas Christian (12)...23

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Texas Longhorns ended Cinderella Texas Christian's Cotton Bowl fantasy Saturday, seizing command of the Southwest Conference race with a 44-23 victory behind fullback Terry Orr's four touchdowns and 195 yards rushing.

The 10th-ranked Longhorns, 7-1-1, regained the SWC leadership with a 5-1 record.

The 12th-rated Horned Frogs, playing before a crowd of 47,-280, largest in Amon Carter Stadium history, fell to 8-2 overall and 5-2 in the conference.

Texas' much-maligned quarterback Todd Dodge, who threw five interceptions last week in a 29-15 loss to Houston, winged two touchdown passes and setup two more scores as Texas beat the Frogs for the 17th consecutive time.

Texas led the rain-soaked, regionally televised game 10-9 at halftime before Dodge found Orr behind the Frog secondary on a 63-yard pass-and-run early in the third period.

Edwin Simmons scored his first touchdown since 1983 on a 10-yard run to up the Texas lead to 23-9.

After TCU quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa had hit James Maness with an 11-yard scoring pass, Orr scored on a three-yard run to cap a 74-yard drive.

Orr, enjoying his finest running day, iced it for the Longhorns in the fourth period, rumbling 82 and 33 yards for touchdowns.

TCU was bidding for its first Cotton Bowl appearance since 1959. The Frogs, who were 1-8-2 last season, are the most improved team in NCAA Division I this year.

Ohio State (11).....21
Michigan.....6

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tailback Keith Byars scored three touchdowns Saturday as 11th-ranked Ohio State beat Michigan 21-6 to win the Big Ten Conference football title and a Rose Bowl berth.

The Buckeyes, 9-2 overall and 7-2 in the conference, will face Southern California in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

Moments after the final gun, portions of the largest Ohio Stadium crowd in history, 90,286, streamed onto the field. However, campus police circled both goalposts to keep the delerious fans from tearing them down.

The loss left Michigan to a 6-5 record, the worst year in Bo Schembechler's 16 coaching seasons with the Wolverines. Michigan wound up 5-4 in the Big Ten.

Ohio State quarterback Mike Tomczak, coming back from a double fracture of his right leg in spring practice, connected on two long third-down passes to flanker Mike Lanese and split end Cris Carter to keep the Buckeyes' deciding touchdown drive alive in the final quarter.

Byars, the nation's leader in rushing, scoring and all-pupose running this season, bolted 1 yard to give Ohio State a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

His second score of the game led to a 14-6 Ohio State lead with 6:08 left in the game. Less than two minutes later, the 235-pound junior ran 2 yards for his 22nd touchdown of the season, putting the game out of reach for the Wolverines.

Boston Col. (13).....24
Syracuse.....16

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Troy Stradford scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 5-yard run late in the third quarter as Boston College, its passing game shut down by Syracuse for the third consecutive year, launched a rushing attack that gave the 13th-ranked Eagles a 24-16 victory in college football Saturday.

As representatives of the Orange, Cotton, Sugar, Fiesta and Florida Citrus bowls looked on, Syracuse, third in the nation in pass defense, grabbed a 10-7 halftime lead.

Stradford's touchdown with 2:25 left in the third quarter gave Boston College, 7-2, a 14-10 advantage, and Kevin Snow's 25-yard field goal boosted it to 17-10 early in the fourth quarter.

The margin grew to 24-10 when Kelvin Martin got his second punt return touchdown in as many games as he romped 78 yards to score with 6:04 left in the game. But Syracuse, 6-5, struck back with a 49-yard touchdown pass from Mike Kmetz to Scott Schwedes 49 seconds later. It made the score 24-16 before the rushing attempt for a conversion failed.

Midway through the third quarter with Syracuse leading 10-7, Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie, who had thrown for only 256 yards in his last two games against Syracuse, had completed just 9 of 18 passes for 123 yards.

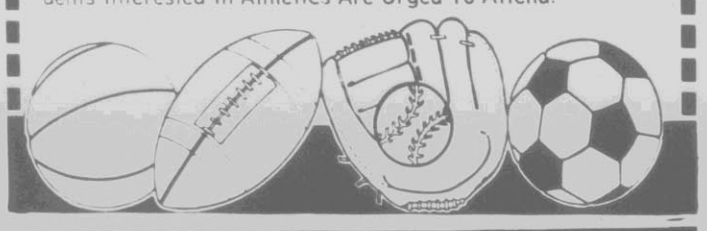

Linebacker Ed Romanowski then intercepted Kmetz's pass, and Boston College took the ball at its own 28-yard line.

Flutie, the major-college all-time career leader in total offense and passing yardage, then shifted his sights from the air to the ground and ended the game with 10 completions in 21 attempts for 136 yards.

Blount, Terps Pound Clemson 41-23

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sophomore Alvin Blount, the first back in eight years to rush for more than 200 yards against Clemson, was impressed by the size of the Tigers' defensive line.

"But from Play One," said Blount, after he rushed for 214 yards and scored two touchdowns in Maryland's 41-23 victory over 20th-ranked Clemson, "I could see that we could run against them."

Blount wasn't the only runner to go through and around the Tigers. Tommy Neal also ran for two scores as the Terps gained 406 of their 577 yards on the ground.

"Maryland was physical and they had a lot of 'want to' today," said Clemson Coach Danny Ford. "Consequently, they won convincingly. They made us look like a very poor football team."

When someone asked Ford if there were gaping holes in the line, he cracked: "I don't know how to spell gaping, but they were a mile wide."

With scouts from the Aloha, Citrus and Freedom bowls on hand, and a record Maryland home crowd of 60,575 in Memorial Stadium, the Terps were impressive.

"This was the second week in a row we played a nationally ranked team and won," said Coach Bobby Ross of the Terps, who overcame a 31-0 halftime deficit and whipped sixth-ranked Miami 42-40 last week.

"Now," Ross said, "we have to win the Virginia game to win the Atlantic Coast Conference."

Maryland, 4-0 in the ACC, plays next Saturday at Virginia, which is 3-0-2 after tying North Carolina.

The fifth consecutive victory for the Terps, 7-3, snapped the five-game winning streak of the Tigers, 7-3, an Atlantic Coast Conference foe on league probation for NCAA infractions.

Maryland, which gained 406 yards on the ground, pushed across 17 points in the third quarter after a 48-yard TD run by Kenny Flowers, who rushed for 136 yards, put the Tigers ahead 23-17.

The Tigers also led 17-14 late in the second period, after a 23-yard field goal by Donald Igwebuike and a 3-yard pass from Mike Eppley to Terrance Flagler followed two Maryland turnovers in the final four minutes.

But Jess Atkinson's 28-yard field goal forged a 17-17 halftime tie.

Blout's second TD, a 13-yarder, put the Terps ahead for keeps, and Atkinson's 36-yard field goal made it 27-23.

Neal, who rushed for 113 yards, scored on a 19-yard run with 28 seconds left in the third period and his 4-yarder midway through the fourth quarter closed out the scoring.

Blout, who had gained only 441 yards in nine previous games, gave Maryland a 7-0 lead on an 8-yard run with 9:52 left in the first quarter.

Clemson tied it 7-7 in the second quarter on an 11-yard pass from Eppley to Shelton Boyer. Rick Badanjek, who rushed for 91 yards, put the Terps back on top 14-7 on a 3-yard TD before a fumble recovery by William Perry and a blocked punt by Jeff Wells sparked Clemson's rally.

Perry, Clemson's huge middle guard, sacked Maryland quarterback Frank Reich and recovered his fumble at the Terps' 26, setting up the Igwebuike field goal which pulled the Tigers to within 14-10 four minutes before halftime.

The Terps failed to move on their next possession, Wells blocked a punt attempt by Darryl Wright, and Clemson went ahead 17-14 on Flagler's diving catch of an Eppley pass.

In addition to dominating play through most of the game, the Terps had to settle for two field goals instead of touchdowns when receivers failed to hold Reich passes.

Greg Hill caught 7 passes for 97 yards, but he juggled and then dropped a pass from Reich as he crossed the goal line, after Clemson had gone ahead 17-14. Atkinson booted his first field goal on the next play to forge the tie.

In the third period, a Reich pass went through the hands of Azizuddin Abdur-Ra'oof in the end zone with the Terps nursing a 24-23 lead. Again, Atkinson saved at least partial face with another field goal.

Labonte Looking For Title

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Terry Labonte would love to have the luxury of racing for a victory in Sunday's Winston Western 500 Grand National stock car race.

But the young speedster, aiming to wrap up the first Winston Cup championship of his budding career, is taking a conservative stance despite winning the pole position Friday in a near record effort.

"I wish we could run hard all day," Labonte said wistfully after celebrating his 28th birthday by touring the Riverside International Raceway's 2.62-mile, nine-turn road course at an average speed of 116.714 mph. "But we're in a situation where we have to take it easy and try to save the car.

"The car is capable of winning the race, but there's a lot more at stake than just a race."

The championship will be worth more than $250,000 and a large measure of prestige to the winning team.

Harry Gant, who is Labonte's closest pursuer, goes into Sunday's 119-lap, 312-mile race 42 points behind the leader.

The only others with even a mathematical shot at catching Labonte are Bill Elliott, 121 points behind, and two-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, 174 points behind.

Waltrip, who set the track qualifying record of 116.782 last November, will start from the outside of the front row after posting a lap of 115.924 Friday.

Tim Richmond was third at 115.730, followed by Dale Earnhardt at 115.702, Elliott at 115.641, Ricky Rudd at 115.558, defending Winston Cup champion Bobby Allison at 115.426 and 56-year-old Hershel McGriff, the top West Coast driver in qualifying, at 115.363.

Gant, who went off course on the first of his two qualifying laps Friday, was 13th at 114.785.

"Starting where I'm at is not going to help my chances," Gant said.

Labonte, despite his conservative words, nearly put his championship effort in serious jeopardy by charging for the pole Friday.

On his fast lap, Labonte drove hard through the sweeping ninth turn, drifting out and tagging the outside wall as he exited the turn.

"It didn't hurt the car, but it sure got my attention," Labonte said. "I knew I'd be close (to the wall), but I didn't think I'd hit it."

Elliott, Waltrip, Rudd and Cale Yarborough, who is not driving here, finished the season in a tie with four poles each. Elliott will take the $25,-000 Busch Pole Award if he remains in front of Waltrip in the point standings after Sunday's race.

"I guess I ought to throw Terry a (birthday) party," Elliott said. "I guess he made me $25,000. Now I just need to finish ahead of Darrell Sunday."

The race, which will be televised live on the cable channel WTBS, is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. EST.

Labonte, who also drives occasionally in sports car endurance races, enjoys competing at Riverside — the only non-oval on which the Grand National cars race.

Gant, like a lot of other NAS-CAR drivers, would prefer the 30-race season end elsewhere.

"I think it definitely should be finished on an oval because this racetrack is just too hard on equipment," Gant said. "You know these 3,700-pound cars just don't work that good on a track this size for the fact that the brakes go away, it's hard on the transmission.

"There's a lot of money at stake at the end of the year on a track that you can puncture tires and if somebody wrecks you can't really see them over the hills. It's not like an oval track.

"It's a lot of fun to run, but it's awful hard to race on. It's hard to pass anybody. You gotta worry about everything breaking on the car. It's just a track built for lighter smaller cars."

Labonte shrugged off the negatives, saying, "A track like this is kind of hard to pass on, but a lot of times cars really get strung out. I've been here before and raced all day and not known who has finished three or four positions behind me because I never saw them.

"The cars do get strung out a lot and a lot of times you don't have to race with anybody. That's an advantage, I think, in a situation like mine, not having to run real close like you would on some of the oval tracks we run. I don't mind finishing here at all."

McGriff Takes Flag At Warner Hodgdon

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Hershel McGriff, a 56-year-old West Coast racing great, ran away from the field Saturday to win the Warner Hodgdon 300 Grand American stock car race at Riverside International Raceway.

The grandfather from Bridal Veil, Ore., picked up $6,000 for his record 13th career victory on the 2.62-mile, nine-turn Riverside road circuit.

His Chevrolet Camaro crossed the finish line at the end of the 300-kilometer, 72-lap race one minute ahead of the second-place Pontiac Firebird of Rick Lach.

McGriff, who also will run in Sunday's Winston Western 500 Grand National stock car event on the same track, averaged 97.949 mph in the race slowed by several full-course caution flags.

"I didn't have the fastest car," McGriff noted. "I couldn't get away in the corners. But I hoped for a lot of traffic to even things out, and that's what happened. Things just went my way."

The only other driver on the same lap with McGriff at the end was Tom Hanson, whose Camaro was almost a full lap down.

One lap behind were Bob Etrick in a Firebird and Steve Bare in a Camaro.

McGriff led twice in the race, heading the field on laps 12 through 20, then taking the lead for good 34 laps from the end.

Despite a series of crashes and off-course excursions in the race, there were no injuries reported.

The top 10 finishers in Saturday's Warner Hodgdon 300 Grand American stock car race, with type of car, laps completed and winner's average speed in mph:

1. Hershel McGriff, Chevrolet Camaro, 72, 97.949 mph
2. Rick Lach, Pontiac Firebird, 72
3. Tom Hanson, Chevrolet Camaro, 72
4. Bob Etrick, Pontiac Firebird, 71
5. Steve Bare, Chevrolet Camaro, 71
6. John Krebs, Pontiac Firebird, 70
7. Marta Leonard, Pontiac Firebird, 70
8. Tom Murdoch, Pontiac Firebird, 70
9. Don Ewing, Chevrolet Camaro, 69
10. Paul Dure, Chevrolet Camaro, 69

Rams Advance By Havelock

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Jerome Flowers raced 70 yards on the first play from scrimmage and Brad Monroe returned a fumble recovery 40 yards for another score as Greene Central advanced in the state 3-A Division II football playoffs with a 14-8 victory over Havelock Friday.

Flowers, who led the Rams with 81 yards rushing, sacked Havelock quarterback Chris Morris in the end zone for a safety in the final period.

Greene Central will host North Edgecombe, which defeated Roanoke Rapids 15-6, next Friday in the second round of the playoffs.

Flowers' touchdown run came with less than three minutes elapsed, but Greene Central wound up with just 103 yards rushing compared to 120 for Havelock. Morris completed six out of nine passes for 42 yards but threw a pair of interceptions to add to Havelock's six turnovers.

The costliest of those turnovers came with 1:05 left in the first quarter, as Richard Carter fumbled on a bone-jarring tackle by Patrick Moye on a punt return. Monroe picked up the ball and raced untouched to the end zone for a 12-0 Rams lead.

"That's the type of play where a guy sacrifices himself for the team," Greene Central Coach Spence Grantham said. "I've never seen a more vicious hit on this field. That play made the difference in this ballgame."

Carter was taken from the field in an ambulance complaining of difficult breathing.

"We got a little shy after that, though," Grantham said. "You could see it in the kids on the sideline and on the field. I think it definately had an effect on them."

The first half went quickly, as four drives ended in fumbles and Havelock struggled for five of the six first downs recorded.

Greene Central was forced to punt from its 24 with 3:36 left in the second quarter, and a partial block of Michael Griffin's punt set up the only scoring drive of the night.

James Mullins had three carried for a combined 11 yards for a first down at the Greene Central 31, and Morris passed to Mullins for 24 yards to the three. Chris Moore was tackled by Moye after a one-yard gain, but Julius Rogers rushed the final two yards with 57 seconds left in the half.

Mullins was forced to scramble beyond the 30-yard line after a bad snap on a point-after kick, and he found Kevin Toon open for the pass to trim the margin to 12-8.

Quarterback Kenneth Grantham bobbled the exchange from center on the first play of the third quarter and fell on the ball for a one-yard loss. But the second-down play began the same way, only this time Marty Rivenbark recovered for Havelock at the Greene Central 24.

Again Havelock ended its drive with a fumble, as Andre Corbett recovered for the Rams.

After the Rams were forced to punt, Corbett recovered another fumble to end Havelock's next drive with 4:19 left on the third period.

Havelock got into trouble early in the fourth quarter after punting safely on a fourth-and-22 inside its two yard line. The Rams were unable to sustain a drive, but Griffin's punt rolled out of bounds at the Havelock five.

Five plays later, Flowers sacked Morris with 4:52 remaining for the final margin.

A first-down pass by Morris was intercepted by Moye with 2:45 left in the fourth quarter, and Charles Artis grabbed a pass over the middle with 55 seconds remaining to end Havelock's final drive.

"We were dropping the ball right and left, and you can't win a football game like that," Havelock Coach Wilbur Sasser said. "I think we played hard, but we didn't play well.

"We knew we had a mental lapse on the first play of the game, but that isn't what beat us; the fumble scoop beat us.

"We didn't have field position in the second half, and every time we had any kind of position we gave it back on a turnover."

Greene Central matched Havelock with four fumbles lost but managed to recover its other three. The Rams averaged just 27.2 yards on seven punts, but Havelock was pinned inside its 25 on all three second-half kicks by Greene Central.

"We've gotten the rolls here lately," Grantham said. "We made a lot of turnovers. Most of the time, we weren't getting good mesh on handoffs; we carried the ball loosely.

"They've got a quick defense, and we just couldn't hold our blocks long enough; they came off the football well. I was hoping that if we scored six we might win it. They've only given up 31 points all year."

Army's Wishbone Offense Tops Montana Air Attack

TOKYO (AP) — More than 60,000 spectators at Tokyo's Olympic Memorial Stadium got a lesson in contrasting offenses — the roll-out passing attack of Montana and the wishbone formation ground game adopted this season by Army coach Jim Young.

Montana quarterback Marty Mornhinweg passed for 424 yards at the Mirage Bowl Saturday, but came up short on the scoreboard as Army's running quarterback Nate Sassaman led the Cadets to an amazing 633 yards rushing and a 45-31 victory.

The Grizzlies ended the season with a 2-8-1 mark, while Army goes into its final game with Navy, set for Dec. 1 with a 6-3-1 record, assured of a winning season after a 2-9 record in 1983.

Army linebacker Jim Gentile said he was bitter catching that one, in which he bulled into the end's "great offensive attack."

Mornhinweg, playing his last game for Montana, attempted 48 passes, completing 31 and throwing two interceptions. Montana's senior tight end Bob McCauley, who needed just 16 yards to set the school's all-time reception record, caught eight Mornhinweg passes for 115 yards.

Freshman tight end Paul Lamb brought in eight more for 106 yards, including a 41-yard gainer. But Lamb's run after catching that one, in which he bulled into the end zone in the second quarter, was called back on a crucial clipping penalty.

Army scored first, but Montana came back with a 42-yard field goal and a touchdown and led for two minutes early in the second quarter. Sassaman, the leading rushing quarterback in college football this season, relied on fullback Doug Black and Jarvis Hollingsworth to give the Cadets a 24-10 lead.

In the final minute of the third quarter, Sassaman brought the crowd to its feet by racing down the left sideline and pitching out to Clarence Jones, who carried it into the end zone for a total gain of 78 yards.

Montana came back in the fourth quarter with an 80-yard scoring drive. Then the normally hapless Montana defense recovered an Army fumble and Mornhinweg hit Curt McGinness for a 63-yard touchdown, narrowing the gap to 38-31.

But Army replied with an 81-yard drive in 11 plays, Doug Black running the final 15 yards for the clinching touchdown with 2 minutes left.

"Sassaman compensated for what our defense didn't do," Gentile said.

U.S. Ambassador to Japan, Mike Mansfield, a native Montanan, threw out the first ball. Mansfield, 81, a former Senate majority leader, has been ambassador since 1977.

Sponsored by Mitsubishi Motor Corp. and named after one of its cars, the Mirage Bowl has been played here for the past eight years, bringing "American football," marching bands and cheerleaders to a country where baseball and rugby enjoy greater popularity.

Ange Leads Jamesville Past Clarkton

CLARKTON — Richie Ange hit on 11 of 15 passes, but it was his interception return that sealed the victory as Jamesville, the lone unbeaten 1-A team in the state, advanced past Clarkton, 25-6, Friday night.

The game was a first round contest in the 1-A ranks.

Jamesville, now 11-0, will take on Rosewood, a 9-8 victor over Creswell in the other eastern game, next Friday night. In the west, Rosman ousted defending champion Robbinsville, 21-6, while Cullowhee beat Cherokee, 19-7. Cullowhee visits Rosman in the western championship game Friday, with the state championship to be decided at the eastern site the following week.

Four different people scored for the Bullets, but it was Ange's passing and the running of Tracy Peele that moved the ball along for Jamesville.

Jamesville scored its first touchdown in the opening quarter — and it turned out to be the only score in the first half of play. After taking over on their own 30, the Bullets launched the drive to the end zone. After several rushing plays, Ange hit Greg Hardison for 36 yards on an aerial down to the three. On the next play, Peele went over and Ange's PAT kick made it 7-0.

It was the third period before either team hit pay dirt again. After taking over following a punt, the Bullets drove 60 yards for the clincher. Ange hit David Biggs for 16 and 15 yards on two passes, and finally, Robbie Harris kicked over from the one for the score. A bad snap negated the kick attempt, leaving it at 13-0.

But at that point, the game was still up in the air. "They had not really threatened," Jamesville Coach Jerry Godley said, "but they were very quick, probably the quickest team we've ever seen. They were shifty runners and it was a tough battle, tougher than the final score would indicate."

Ange then came up with his 11th interception of the year, returning it 33 yards for the touchdown. Again a bad snap cost the Bullets a PAT try, but the 19-0 lead had the game on ice.

"Ange's interception was very important for us," Godley said. "They could have gotten back in the game at any time there. But that sort of sealed it for us."

Clarkton came back to get its only score in the final quarter. Pete Jones got the score on a one-yard run, but a two-point try failed, leaving it at 19-6.

The final score of the game came on the final play of the game. Maurice Moore went over from the three to end it and the PAT was not attempted. Peele had run on consecutive runs of 20, 29 and 14 yards, while Greg Hardison ran for 23 and five to put the ball on the three.

"I was trying to signal them not to even run a play, but to let the clock run out," Godley said, "but they got it off and scored."

Peele finished the game with 124 yards, while Harris added 53. "Tracy really wasn't himself in the game," Godley said. Peele suffered a sprain last week in the regular season ending game against Columbia, and was questionble for the Clarkton game. "He still couldn't pick up yardage like we would want him to. He got outside, but he didn't have the speed to go. Moore did a good job in backing him up and Harris ran well."

The Bullets travel to Rosewood, in Wayne County, next Friday night, for the eastern title battle. The winner hosts the state title game the following week.

Richmond Earns Top Slot

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of stories on ECAC-South Basketball teams for 1984-85.)

Last year, the University of Richmond was overlooked when it came to picking the pre-season favorites in the ECAC-South. The Spiders weren't expected to make much noise, finishing in the depths of the conference.

But when it was over, the Spiders had put together a 7-3 league record, won the championship both in regular season and the tournament, and moved on to the NCAA tournament.

There, they upset Auburn, 72-71, and gave Indiana fits before finally bowing, 75-67.

So it might not be a surprise to find that the Spiders are the choice to win the championship again this year.

A look at the UR roster might tend to validate that assumption. Only four players are gone off last year's team, and just one of them, Bill Flye, was a real contributor to the cause.

Flye was the team's third leading scorer with a 13.6 average and the third leading rebounder at 5.8.

However, the Spiders return 6-7 junior forward John Newman, an all-conference selection as a sophomore and Rookie of the Year as a freshman. Newman was the team's leading scorer last year with a 21.9 average and the second leading rebounder with a 6.1 mark. Having him back gives the Spiders a real backbone to work with.

Joining him are two other major starters, 6-2 senior guard Kelvin Johnson and 6-5 junior forward John Davis. Johnson was the second leading scorer on the team with a 13.8 average, while Davis averaged 6.1 point, but pulled 7.6 rebounds, tops on the team.

Also back are 5-10 junior guard Greg Beckwith and 6-5 sophomore guard Tim Hardin who will be battling for the other starting position. Beckwith averaged 5.1 points a game, while Hardin hit on 2.4 per outing.

"The big challenge for Richmond is to repeat," Coach Dick Tarrant said. "It will be difficult. I understand what it is like to be the hunted instead of the hunter, and our players will learn that this year.

"But with four starters returning, we should be in good shape to start with."

Tarrant brought in three freshman and one junior college transfer to fill in the ranks. The freshmen include 6-7 forward Steve Floyd, 6-8 center/forward Steven Kratzer, and 6-5 forward Peter Woolfolk, while 6-10 junior center Chris Griffin is the transfer.

"We'll be looking to the newcomers to provide us with a lot of help," Tarrant said. Kratzer and Griffin are expected to provide the most aid.

Bengals, Seattle Meet In Key AFC Central Contest

By The Associated Press

After getting off to an 0-5 start, it would be hard to imagine the Cincinnati Bengals in a divisional race, or even an important game, at this time of year.

But that's certainly the case Sunday when they meet the Seattle Seahawks in a key National Football League game.

The Bengals have won four of their last six games, including a 22-20 decision over AFC Central leader Pittsburgh, and are currently only two games behind the Steelers in their division race.

This week's contest also looms important for the 9-2 Seahawks, who must win to stay with the AFC West-leading Denver Broncos, 10-1.

Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche said he was "impressed, to say the least" after watching the Seahawks' inspired defense and quick-striking offense beat the Los Angeles Raiders 17-14 last Monday night.

"Their defensive line is tremendous," Wyche said. "they're as good as anybody playing now. Their defensive backs are just pure talents; they are body-control kind of people. They can get up in the air and knock the ball down or make an interception and make a run after the interception. Their linebackers hit like a ton of bricks."

In another important game, the New York Giants will host the St. Louis Cardinals in a contest matching two teams involved in the tight NFC East race. The Cardinals and the Giants, both 6-5, dropped out of a four-way tie for first place in the division when they lost last week — the Cardinals to the Dallas Cowboys, the Giants to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. That left the division in a familiar alignment — with the Washington Redskins and Dallas tied for first.

"Younger teams may know how to win big games," says St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax. "But the older teams always seem to go out and do it."

In other games Sunday, Cleveland is at Atlanta; Dallas at Buffalo; Detroit at Chicago; the Los Angeles Rams vs. Green Bay in Milwaukee; New England at Indianapolis; Washington at Philadelphia; Kansas City at the Los Angeles Raiders; Miami at San Diego; Minnesota at Denver; the New York Jets at Houston, and Tampa Bay at San Francisco. Pittsburgh visits New Orleans in the Monday night game.

In Los Angeles, the 7-4 Raiders will be trying to end a three-game losing streak that has jeopardized their playoff chances.

"This has become our most important game of the year," says Raiders Coach Tom Flores.

San Francisco, rolling along with a 10-1 record in the NFC West, can clinch at least a wild-card playoff berth against the Bucs, 4-7.

Miami, which had a narrow one-point escape against the Eagles last week, will try to improve its record to 12-0 this year and extend its regular-season winning streak to 17. That would be one short of their own league record as the Dolphins and their players, led by quarterback Dan Marino, close in on 11 NFL records.

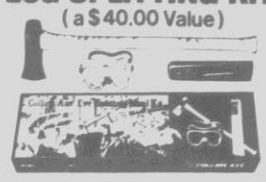

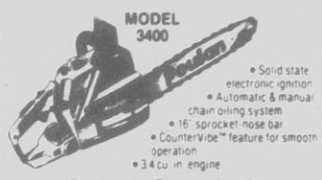

San Diego's Charlie Joiner, meanwhile, enters the game just eight receptions short of Charley Taylor's all-time NFL record for receptions.

Washington, 7-4, will have John Riggins back after a week's rest to take on the Eagles. Dallas, tied with the Redskins at the top of the NFC East, will continue with Gary Hogeboom at quarterback against winless Buffalo after Hogeboom's fourth-quarter touchdown pass beat St. Louis 24-17 last week.

The last time Denver and Minnesota met — in the final preseason game of 1983 — Broncos quarterback John Elway was sacked five times and threw three interceptions in the Vikings' 34-3 victory.

"It was a long night," Elway recalls. "We were unprepared for what they were doing. And because of Minnesota's success, I saw a lot of blitzing the rest of the year, too."

Elway's trial by fire in 1983 has produced a confident, poised quarterback in 1984, one who has shown a propensity for late-minute heroics.

Bullets Win Fifth Straight Game

By The Associated Press

The Washington Bullets are looking good, and say they can do even more. The New York Knicks are looking bad and say they'd better get better.

Gus Williams scored 25 points Friday night to lead the Bullets to their fifth straight National Basketball Association victory, a 118-104 decision Friday night over the Knicks.

"We are getting better, but we still can improve," Williams said after leading the Bullets in scoring for the 10th time in 12 games despite shooting just over 40 percent from the field this year. "We're still getting used to each other."

The loss dropped New York to 2-9 as the Knicks remained winless on the road in seven tries.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia stopped Detroit 101-90, Indiana took San Antonio 128-117 in overtime, Phoenix beat Milwaukee 118-106, Denver beat Houston 119-102, Seattle nipped Portland 91-89, and the Los Angeles Lakers downed Kansas City 128-116.

Williams was helped by Cliff Robinson, who came off the bench to score 22 points. Both Williams and Robinson came to the Bullets in off-season moves.

"I feel we still have some work to do," Robinson said. "Our defense is nowhere near where it should be."

Williams scored 14 points in the first quarter, including five during a 9-0 streak that put Washington ahead for good at 26-21.

"They've added two great athletes and they're getting them the transition baskets," New York Coach Hubie Brown said. "Washington is a very good team and they'll prove that over the long haul."

The Bullets led 68-56 at halftime and, helped by Williams' nine points in the third quarter, took a 95-77 margin into the final period.

Jeff Ruland also scored 22 for Washington while grabbing 12 rebounds and handing out 12 assists. Bernard King scored 34 points for New York, including 17 of the Knicks' 21 points in the third quarter.

"It's been tough," said Brown. "We've been playing without four players on the front line. But we'll be OK. We just have to get on a streak and get our confidence back."

Nuggets 119, Rockets 102

Alex English scored 32 points as Denver, off to its best start in eight years, won its fifth straight game.

The Nuggets improved to 8-2 — best since the 1976-77 season, their first in the league — before a crowd of 18,557, the largest ever to see an NBA game in Denver.

Denver broke the game open when Wayne Cooper, celebrating his 28th birthday, and Calvin Natt led a 15-4 charge that made it 79-62.

Houston's Ralph Sampson scored 23 points but the Rockets got only limited playing time from Akeem Olajuwon, who was in foul trouble most of the night. It was Houston's second straight loss after eight consecutive wins.

76ers 101, Pistons 90

Julius Erving scored 21 points and Moses Malone had 19 as Philadelphia triumphed in Detroit.

Erving and Clint Richardson, subbing for injured guard Andrew Toney, triggered an 11-0 burst that helped the 76ers open an 86-73 lead early in the fourth quarter. The Pistons got no closer than 11 points the rest of the way.

Richardson finished with 18 points and rookie Charles Barkley added 16. Vinnie Johnson had 22 and Isiah Thomas got 21 for Detroit.

A crowd of 30,177 watched the game at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Pacers 128, Spurs 117

Jim Thomas scored nine points in the fourth quarter and then added eight in overtime to pace Indiana.

San Antonio, sparked by Artis Gilmore's 33 points, led 91-82 going into the fourth quarter. But Thomas, who finished with 19 points, scored 11 straight points as Indiana took a 99-95 lead.

Indiana's Herb Williams made a foul shot late in the fourth quarter to tie it at 111-111, and then blocked two Spur shots in their final possession. But Williams missed a shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Suns 118, Bucks 106

Phoenix settled the issue early, racing to a 35-13 lead in the first quarter behind the scoring of Rod Foster and Larry Nance.

Foster finished with 24 points and Nance scored 14 of his 16 points in the first period to pace the Suns. Milwaukee hurt itself with 12 turnovers in the opening period.

Rookie Charles Jones added 15 for the host Suns, while Kevin Grevey topped the Bucks with 16 points.

SuperSonics 91, Trail Blazers 89

Al Wood followed up a rebound with a basket with six seconds left and Jack Sikma added a foul shot to boost Seattle.

Wood's basket made it 90-87, and after Portland's Clyde Drexler scored with three seconds remaining, Sikma was fouled.

The Sonics led 47-46 at halftime and reeled off 12 straight points to take a 74-64 lead in the third quarter.

Tom Chambers scored 24 and Gerald Henderson 22 for Seattle. Mychal Thompson had 23 for the visiting Blazers.

Lakers 128, Kings 116

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit 13 of 15 shots from the floor en route to a season-high 30 points as Los Angeles raised its record 6-5, the first time the Lakers have been over the .500 this year.

Los Angeles blew the game open by outscoring Kansas City 25-9 in the last six minutes of the third quarter in taking a 99-78 lead.

Page Opens 4-A Defense With Win; Fike Advances

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Tailback Michael Brooks scored three touchdowns and rushed for 126 yards as top-ranked and defending 4-A champ Greensboro Page whipped No. 5 Northern Durham 32-14 in the first round of the state high school playoffs Friday.

Brooks scored on runs of 2, 5 and 55 yards as the Pirates, 11-0, amassed 408 yards total offense in extending their undefeated string to 17 straight — the longest in the state.

Page, which will take on West Charlotte next Friday in the second round, was one of two defending state champions to survive the opening round of the playoffs.

Top-ranked Randleman, which has won three straight 2-A titles, defeated No. 4 West Montgomery 29-20, while defending 1-A champ Robbinsville dropped a 21-6 decision to Rosman.

Eastern Randolph, the defending 3-A champions, did not make the playoffs.

Quarterback Todd Ellis completed 15 of 27 passes for 201 yards for Page, which led 16-8 at the half.

Northern Durham, 9-2, had two early-second half drives ended by fumbles, and the Knights never recovered as Brooks rambled 55 yards after one of the mistakes to give the Pirates a 23-6 lead.

Randleman, 10-2, raced to a 29-0 lead after three quarters before holding off West Montgomery in the fourth quarter to advance to round two of the 2-A playoffs against Forest Hills.

Steve Carpenter led the Warriors' final period rally, grabbing a 55-yard touchdown pass from Bryan Yarboro and running 67 yards for another touchdown. West Montgomery's third TD came on a 32-yard touchdown pass from Yarboro to Eric Allsbrook to make it 29-20 ith 5:37 left.

Running back Mike Brinkley scored two TDs — on runs of 2 and 3 yards — to lead Randleman.

In 3-A action, running back Tony Smith rushed for 179 yards and three TDs s No. 1 Kannapolis recorded its seventh shutout of the season, downing David County 25-0 to run its record to 11-0.

Smith scored on runs of 1, 3 and 7 yards as the Wonders scored in all four quarters. Quarterback Scott Measmer hit James Blakeney with a 53-yard TD pass for the Wonders' other score.

Roger Smoot rushed for 125 yards to lead Davie County, 8-3.

Meanwhile, there will be a new 1-A state champ because Robbinsville, which had won five straight crowns, lost to Rosman 21-6 as running back Jay Sheridan rushed for 216 yards and three touchdowns.

Sheridan scored on runs of 56, 7 and 1 yards to lead Rosman, 8-3, into the semifinals against Cullowhee.

Rosman lost to Robbinsville 34-33 in four overtimes in last season's state semifinals.

In other games:

•Fullback Johnny Johnson rushed for 125 yards and scored on a 55-yard run as Wallace-Rose Hill, the No. 2 team in the 2-A and 1-A class, edged Clayton 14-0.

It was the eighth shutout of the season for the Bulldogs, 11-0, who held unranked Clayton, 8-3, to 142 yards total offense.

•Quarterback Walter Walker passed for 135 yards and two touchdowns to key No. 9 Statesville to a 27-7 victory over previously unbeaten South Point 27-7. South Point, ranked No. 4, finishes 10-1.

Walker had scoring passes of 74 and 4 yards, and fullback Brian Stevenson scored on runs of four and one yards as Statesville, 10-1, scored all 27 of its points in the second half, including 20 in the final period.

•Quarterback Richie Ange passed for 153 yards and one touchdown as No. 3 Jamesville defeated Clarkton 25-6. Ange, who also plays defensive back, also returned an interception 28 yards as the Bullets advanced to the 1-A semifinal bracket.

ACC Sets Up TV Package

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference's television package for the 1984-85 basketball season will feature 45 regular-season games as well as all three rounds of the league tournament, ACC officials say.

"This TV schedule is comparable to those of the past few years, and we feel it will be very attractive to the many viewers who have made our conference package the nation's No. 1-rated syndicated show," ACC Commissioner Bob James said.

In addition to the 32 regular-season games and seven tournament games provided by Raycom Sports and Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions of Charlotte, NBC will telecast nine games and CBS will televise four.

The conference package and the tournament will also be televised on ESPN.

The first two games of Raycom's 39-game slate will be shown in December. Virginia visits Duke on Dec. 8, while North Carolina goes to Wake Forest on Dec. 15. The series resumes on Jan. 2, 1985, when North Carolina State visits Maryland.

Nationally, the first contest involving an ACC school pits N.C. State against Kentucky in Lexington on Jan. 5 on CBS.

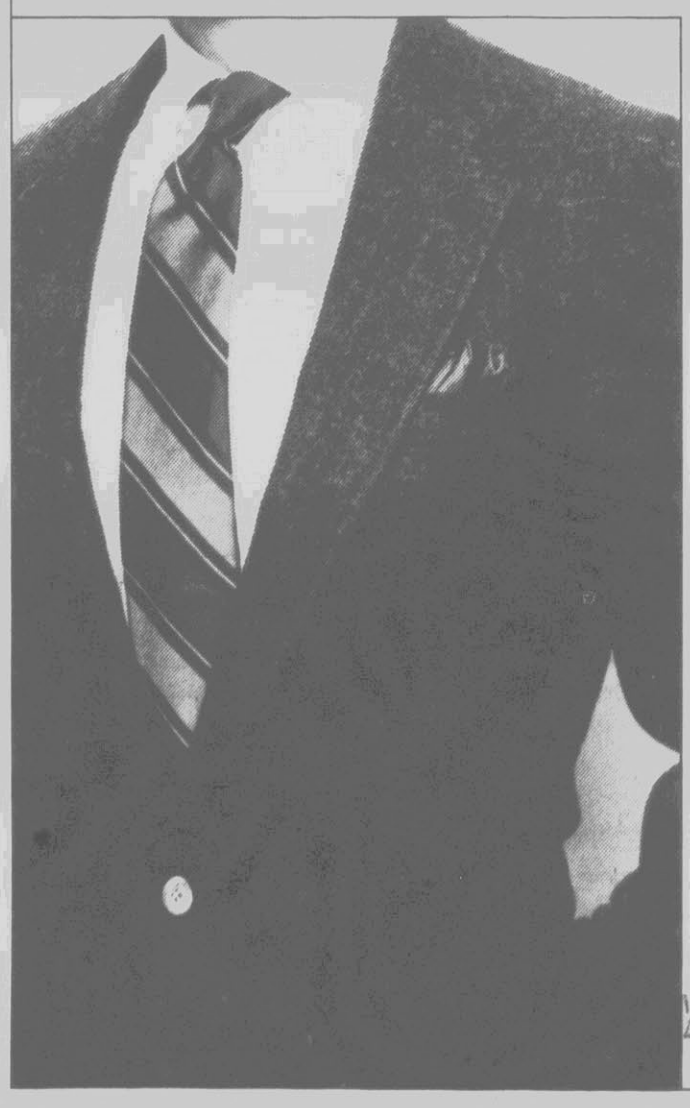

Other nationally telecast games feature Washington at Duke in a rematch of second-round combatants in the NCAA championships last season, Maryland at Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina at Louisiana State and Georgia Tech at Oklahoma.

Raycom President Rick Ray said the stations carrying the ACC package will remain the same as last season.

Coaches Highlight Shootout

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Instead of the great individual talent which has blessed the Great Alaska Shootout in recent years, some of the nation's top coaches will highlight the seventh annual college basketball early season tournament.

National Basketball Association rosters are studded with the names of past Shootout performers, such as James Worthy, Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, Sam Perkins, Clark Kellogg, Sam Bowie, Rodney McCray, Darrell Walker, Alvin Robertson, Kyle Macy, Darrell Griffith, Glenn "Doc" Rivers and Lancaster Gordon.

Other Shootout stars still are in school, including Patrick Ewing of Georgetown and Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma, heroes of the 1984 Olympic gold medal team.

But while there will be some fine talent on display when this year's Shootout begins Nov. 23, the coaches are better known than the players. They include Lefty Driesell of Maryland, Larry Brown of Kansas, Gene Bartow of Alabama-Birmingham, Don DeVoe of Tennessee, Lou Henson of Illinois and Don Monson of Oregon.

For years, Driesell has kept the Terrapins among the nation's top teams. And he was rewarded this year with a new 10-year contract with Maryland.

Last year, the Terrapins finished second in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference, won the ACC's postseason tournament and advanced to the semifinals of the Midwest Regional in the NCAA playoffs, finishing with a 24-8 record.

After trying to replace the renowned John Wooden at UCLA, Brown and Bartow have gone on to establish their coaching reputations elsewhere.

After turning the young New Jersey Nets of the NBA into a contender, Brown has begun to turn around the long-dormant Kansas program. The Jayhawks were 22-10 last season, and reached the NCAA playoffs.

Bartow has built Alabama-Birmingham into a powerhouse in the South. His 23-11 team also advanced to last season's NCAA playoffs.

After a successful stint at Wyoming, DeVoe took over at Tennessee and made the Volunteers a consistent contender in the Southeastern Conference. Although only 21-14 last season, Tennessee reached the quarterfinals of the National Invitational Tournament.

Henson probably had the best team last season, as Illinois went 26-5, advancing to the final of the Mideast Regional before losing to Indiana.

Two Illinois stars will be familiar to Shootout fans. Efrem Winters and Bruce Douglas made their collegiate debuts as freshmen in the 1982 Shootout as Illinois finished fourth.

Although Oregon had only a 16-13 record last season, Monson's first year there was considered a success because the Ducks had been in the doldrums in recent years. Oregon finished third in the Pacific-10 Conference and won a berth in the NIT. Before that, Monson had turned Idaho into a powerhouses in the Big Sky Conference.

The Big Sky will be represented by Idaho State. Wayne Ballard's team was 12-20 last season.

Rounding out the field is the University of Alaska-Anchorage, coached by Harry Larrabee. The Seawolves were 15-13 last season.

The 1984 Shootout field posted a combined record of 159-94 last season.

Smagala Heads List Of 42-Year Old Freshmen

Smagala is a running back for Moraine Valley Community College, putting on the shoulder pads and helmet again after a 23-year absence from the game.

The 6-foot-2, 190-pound insurance salesman got married out of high school, raised a family and never went to college. This year he enrolled in some business classes, learned that Moraine Valley had started a football program and decided had to play.

"I'd been working since I was 16. I felt it was time I took a little rest," he said. "When I first talked to them, I think they thought it was a crank. But I looked the athletic director right in the eye. He said, 'If you pass the physical, you can try out for the team.'"

Smagala, of Burbank, Ill., passed the physical with ease, ranking eighth among players under 200 pounds in strength and speed.

"My immediate reaction was, 'You've got to be crazy,'" said Coach Dennis Wierzal, who is only two years older than Smagala. "But he convinced me."

Wierzal said he had to adjust his coaching techniques for Smagala.

"It's easier for me to bawl out a younger player for a mistake," Wierzal said. "I'll look at Stan and can't do it as easily."

Smagala, clocked in 4.6 seconds for the 40-yard dash, survived two-a-day practices in the heat of August, running wind sprints, slamming into tackling dummies and ramming the practice sleds.

Then he broke some ribs during an early scrimmage.

He missed several games, but returned to rush for eight yards and a touchdown against Wright College at Chicago's Hanson Stadium.

"The last time I was at Hanson Stadium was in 1960, and I returned a kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown," said Smagala, who was playing for Chicago Weber High School at the time.

He injured an ankle against Wright and missed the next two games, but resumed playing after that.

"To me it isn't an experiment," said Smagala, whose jersey number is 42. "I'm not a fanatic about health, but I do keep myself in good condition."

Because he has to be a full-time student to be eligible for football, Smagala's wife, Cristine, has taken over his insurance accounts. They have a teen-age son and daughter.

Moraine Valley's season ended on Saturday, when it lost to DuPage in the Illinois junior college championship game, but Smagala already is thinking about next season.

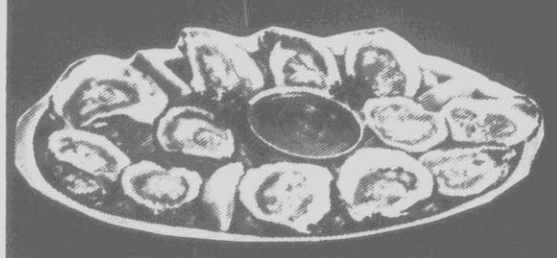

He said he needs to put on weight so he can run over tacklers.

"At 190 pounds I had a little problem getting through the line on drive plays," he said.

And because he played so little this year, he also could be redshirted and play for four more seasons. That means he would be playing at age 46, which Smagala says is not impossible.

"What's the big deal?" he said. "It's just football."

Sooners, Illini Clash In Tip-Off

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Wayman Tisdale may have spent the summer away from the watchful eye of his coach at Oklahoma, but Billy Tubbs isn't too worried.

Winning a gold medal with the the U.S. Olympic team "has got to be better practice than sitting around all summer doing nothing," said Tubbs, whose fifth-ranked Sooners take on second-ranked Illinois Sunday in the Tip-Off Classic.

The Sooners' chances of success in the annual Basketball Hall of Fame benefit game rose considerably last May when Tisdale announced he was passing up the National Basketball Association draft to return to the Norman, Okla. campus for his junior year.

"He may not score more points this year, but I expect him to be a much better player," Tubbs said of Tisdale, a 6-foot-9, 250-pound All-American, who has dominated the Big Eight statistically like no other man in the history of the conference, including Wilt Chamberlain, the NBA great who put some impressive numbers on the board at Kansas. "You expect a junior to be better than a sophomore and a senior to be better than a junior.

"We're ready to play. You get tired of practicing after a while." Tubbs said as his team prepared for the traditional opening of the college basketball season.

"This is going to be a tough one," Tubbs said. "Illinois has a very deserving, well-coached team and they play very good basketball. But you have to start somewhere."

"There's no way to stop Wayman Tisdale. He's just a great player," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said. "We tried to do something about him when he was a freshman and he ended up with 34 points."

Henson has some beef of his own up front in 6-foot-9, 240-pound senior center George Montgomery and 6-foot-9, 235-pound junior forward Ephrem Winters. And they will be re-joined this year by 6-foot-9 forward Anthony Welch, who sat out last season with a leg injury.

Welch's return will allow 6-foot-4 Doug Altenberger, who filled in for Welch last season, to move back to his guard position where he will replace the graduated Quinn Richardson.

"They have a lot of people, but we're very strong defensively," said Henson, who has four starters back from his 26-5 Big Ten championship team that just missed making the Final Four. The Fighting Illini fell 54-51 to Kentucky on the Wildcats' home court in the Mideast Regional.

"We should have a good ball club, but you can never tell," Henson said. "Sometimes when you have a lot of good players back they don't turn out to be a good team. But we will certainly find out how good we are against Oklahoma."

Attorney Said Ready To Assume Tribe Leadership

CLEVELAND (AP) — Want to run the Cleveland Indians? The job's open, says Patrick J. O'Neill, spokesman for the estate that owns a controlling interest in the American League team.

But a report published today says the job of operating the baseball club will be assumed Monday by New York attorney David E. LeFevre, who Wednesday withdrew an offer to buy the Indians.

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer said LeFevre would be given the job in anticipation of another offer to purchase the Indians. That offer is likely sometime after the first of the year, the newspaper said.

Neither LeFevre nor O'Neill would comment on the reported plan.

Indians' President Gabe Paul has said he wants to retire to a consultant's role Jan. 1, and O'Neill said he will honor Paul's wishes.

"Gabe has tried to retire for four years, but (late owner) Steve (O'Neill) would not let him," O'Neill said. "When I took over, I asked Gabe to stay for a reasonable period of time so there would be continuity in the management until I got the club sold.

"Gabe agreed on the basis that it wouldn't go past the year 1984 and I'm honoring my agreement with him."

Patrick O'Neill is nephew of the late majority owner, F.J. "Steve" O'Neill. Since Steve O'Neill's death in August 1983, the O'Neill family has been trying to sell the team.

LeFevre had made a $41 million offer for the club, but that offer was withdrawn Wednesday because of continuing legal challenges from minority stockholders.

LeFevre had promised to keep the team in Cleveland for 15 years, and O'Neill said he wants such a promise included as a condition of any sale.

"The things (conditions) are absolutely the same as they've been all along," said O'Neill. "If we can possibly get it sold within a reasonable time, it'll stay in Cleveland. But I'm not a baseball operator and I want to get out."

O'Neill said a reasonable time is "probably a year."

"We have to go into the 1985 season (as operator of the Indians) because we don't have a choice ... we don't have a buyer," he said.

Mayor George Voinovich said Thursday the team will stay in Cleveland at least through the 1985 baseball season.

O'Neill said directors of the Indians' general partnership will meet Monday.

"No. 1, we will discuss and set plans for the operation of the team in 1985, and No. 2, to bring the board members up to date and discuss the sale that just failed," he said.

NCAA Powers Look For Rebounding

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

Akeem Olajuwon, Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins, Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin are starting in the National Basketball Association. Without them, Houston, North Carolina and Kentucky are starting over in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"I'm bordering on panic," says Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall.

"I'm trying to remember when we were this inexperienced," says North Carolina Coach Dean Smith.

"This year I'm more concerned with rebounding than I have been in 20 years," says Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

Any other year, such comments might be greeted with skepticism at best, as classic cases of coaches trying to downplay expectations.

But as the 1984-85 season dawns, they may be all too accurate for Hall, Smith and Lewis. Powerhouses the past three years, their teams have suddenly lost power.

If Phi Slama Jama isn't dead, Houston's slam-dunking fraternity is barely breathing.

After a taxicab pulled into the Houston campus a few years ago and Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon of Nigeria unfolded his 7-foot frame, the Cougars became the scourge of the Southwest Conference. Now, after three straight trips to the Final Four, they aren't ranked in the Top Twenty in the preseason.

"This is just a completely different team than the past four years," says Lewis, who wrung his red-and-white checkered towel to an 88-16 record the past three years, two consecutive SWC titles and a record 39 straight league wins.

"There is no proven rebounder on this team. Through the years, the real strength has been rebounding, which allowed us to do what we liked to do. That is fast break and control the tempo."

And slam dunk.

"It's a high percentage shot," Lewis says with a smile.

But with Michael Young, the conference's fourth all-time leading scorer, also gone from a 32-5 season, the Cougars have only one frontcourt starter returning, 6-8 sophomore Ricky Winslow. Their strength is in the backcourt with Alvin Franklin and Reid Gettys.

Gary Anderson, a 6-10 sophomore who was Olajuwon's backup, carried 205 pounds on his frame last season but plans to come in much heavier this time after finding an all-you-can-eat pizza joint on campus and stuffing himself with peanut butter sandwiches. Elvin Hayes, the former All-Pro and Cougar All-America, has been working with him.

"I just want to get however many rebounds and block whatever shots I can and play to my best ability," Anderson says. "Akeem was a great player. You can fill his shoes or you can't fill them."

From challengers for No. 1 in the country, Houston may be no better than No. 3 in the conference.

Southern Methodist and Arkansas have solid big men returning in Jon Koncak and Joe Kleine, both Olympians, and appear ready to move into SWC contention.

North Carolina lost three starters, including national Player of the Year Jordan, fellow All-America Perkins and steady forward Matt Doherty, from last season's 28-3 team. For the first time since 1972, the Tar Heels are not in the preseason Top Twenty, and they rank behind Duke, North Carolina State and Georgia Tech in some ACC prognostications.

Still, in the ACC, there's a natural fear of North Carolina, which has not finished below second in the league in the 18 years. Smith has won every title available, including the Olympics in 1976 and the NCAA in 1982.

"We're still the hunted, no matter what," says sophomore guard Kenny Smith.

"I still pick them (North Carolina) No. 1," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell says. "They've got the best center and the best point guard in the league."

"We really do have some fine young players," Dean Smith says. "We don't know how well we'll do as a team. I think it's safe to say that we're just a big question mark.

"I'm not worried about us offensively, even though it was easier with Jordan and Perkins, obviously. It was fun to draw the play to throw the lob to Michael and they would work. We probably won't use those same plays. It was fun to know we could get the ball into Sam and know he would score or get fouled and score from the foul line."

Back are 6-11 Brad Daugherty at center and guard Kenny Smith, whose midseason injury may have cost the Tar Heels a chance to go all the way last season. Guard Steve Hale is the only other player with a lot of experience.

Sophomore forwards Joe Wolf and Dave Popson, who played little as freshmen, and Curtis Hunter and Warren Martin, both medical redshirts last season, and Buzz Peterson, hampered by injuries in the past, should see a lot of action this season.

Kentucky is hurting — literally.

The perennial Southeastern Conference champions made the NCAA semifinals last season before being routed by Georgetown, but "Twin Towers" Bowie and Turpin along with two other starters are gone.

"In 29 years of coaching, I've never had a situation like this," Hall says. "I've never had so many inexperienced players coming back. We'll struggle to have a winning season, and I don't like that."

Kentucky fans will struggle to remember a losing season. The last one in Lexington was 1926-27, when a 3-13 finished made Coach Basil Hayden's first season his last.

Hall's prize recruit, 7-4 Gunther Behnke, left for home in West Germany soon after arriving on the Kentucky campus. Then, the injuries struck.

The Wildcats find themselves without sophomore starters James Blackmon, a guard, and Winston Bennett, a forward, both with knee injuries. Blackmon is out indefinitely, while Bennett could be ready at midseason.

In addition, 6-8 freshman Richard Madison had a benign growth removed from his foot recently and may not be ready for the opener.

Also missing from last season's 29-5 Wildcats are forward Jim Master and guard Dicky Beal.

"We're dangerously low on talent," said Hall, who needed three walkons to hold a series of scrimmages around the Commonwealth.

Kentucky's nucleus now will come from 6-8 junior Kenny Walker, 6-9 Bret Bearup, who saw limited play in the past, junior guard Roger Harden and freshmen Ed Davender, a guard, and 6-11 Robert Lock.

"Our projected starting lineup was Walker, Bennett and Behnke on the front line, and Blackmon and Harden at the guards," Hall said. "We've got two of them healthy.

"So you take 60 percent of the ball club, and we'd already lost 60 percent from last year."

Behnke's defection, for unspecified personal reasons, left Hall in the lurch.

"His coming kept us from recruiting another big man, and when he left, it left a void," Hall says. "We had counted on continuing our offensive and defensive philosophy of the last four years, feeding it to the big men on offense, blocking shots on defense.

"Now, all that's changed. Behnke's leaving has changed the role of every player on the team."

Kent Tekulve Expects Trade

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pirates right-hander Kent Tekulve, describing himself as "totally confused" by the way Manager Chuck Tanner used him last season, said he won't be surprised if the team trades him.

"In many games I was used as a last resort," Tekulve said. "When other clubs signed relief pitchers like (Rich) Gossage, (Bruce) Sutter and (Rollie) Fingers, they were used with the game on the line.

"In my case," said Tekulve, "when they needed a right-handed reliever late in the game, they'd use Robby (Don Robinson) or (Cecilio) Guante and if they didn't do the job they called on me .... I became more confused as the season went on."

Tanner, however, said he was confused by Tekulve's performance. The 37-year-old reliever compiled a 3-9 record as the Pirates ended the season last in the National League East.

"I don't like to hear that Tekulve is saying such things," Tanner said of Tekulve's comments in Friday editions of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"It seems he is making excuses for himself," Tanner said. "Sometimes I was confused with the way he pitched. We didn't score many runs last season and we didn't have the luxury to put Tekulve in games with three-and four-run leads."

The Pirates signed the veteran reliever to a $2.5 million contract last winter. He appeared in 72 games and had 13 saves, the least he has had with the Pirates since 1977, when he had seven saves as the No. 2 reliever behind Gossage.

"I had a chance for 18 saves and got 13. If I had been successful in every save role it still wouldn't have been as many as I usually get," Tekulve said.

"Sometimes, he didn't get the job done, but I consider him a quality pitcher and he is always ready to pitch," Tanner said.

If he is traded, Tekulve said it will be to the Toronto Blue Jays.

"They need a relief pitcher real bad and they have what the Pirates want. They have (outfielder) Jesse Barfield and (shortstop) Alfredo Griffin," he said.

Tekulve also said he won't be surprised if the Pirtates move sore-kneed third baseman Bill Madlock to first base, which would send the highly paid Jason Thompson to the bench.

"I don't know where that would leave Jason," Tekulve said. "I keep hearing they're going to get a power-hitting outfielder, but if they lose (free agent Lee) Lacy, they're going to need to get two outfielders."

Duck Season Opens — The second part of a three-part duck season opens this Thursday morning, Nov. 22, and is open through Saturday, Nov. 24. Bag limit is five daily on most species, with the exception of the woodduck and redhead, where the daily bag limit is two each.

Blackduck season is not open until December 27, and the canvasbacks are closed until January 9.

Canada goose season will be closed until December 20. Snow goose season is open now with a four bird a day limit.

Shooting hours during the waterfowl seasons are considered from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset.

Steel shot will only be required in the following areas of eastern North Carolina: Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, Swanquarter National Wildlife, Ceader Island National Wildlife Refuge and the Cape Hatteras Natinal Seashore Recreation Area (Bodie Island).

Dove Season — The second part of a three-part dove season opened yesterday and will run through Saturday, November 24. Bag limit is 12 daily and shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise until sunset.

Red Drum Tournament — Grand prize money totaling $50,000 awaits the angler who can top the International Game Fish Association (IGFA) all-tackle world record for red drum during a big tourney scheduled for November 26 through 28 on Hatteras Island.

Sponsored by the N.C. Coastal Federation, the World Championship Red Drum Tournament will pit eager anglers against the IGFA record.

Also to be awarded are cash prizes in other categories of competition.

For tournament information, rules and regulations, contact P.O. Box 800, Buxton, N.C. 27920 or call 919-787-0876.

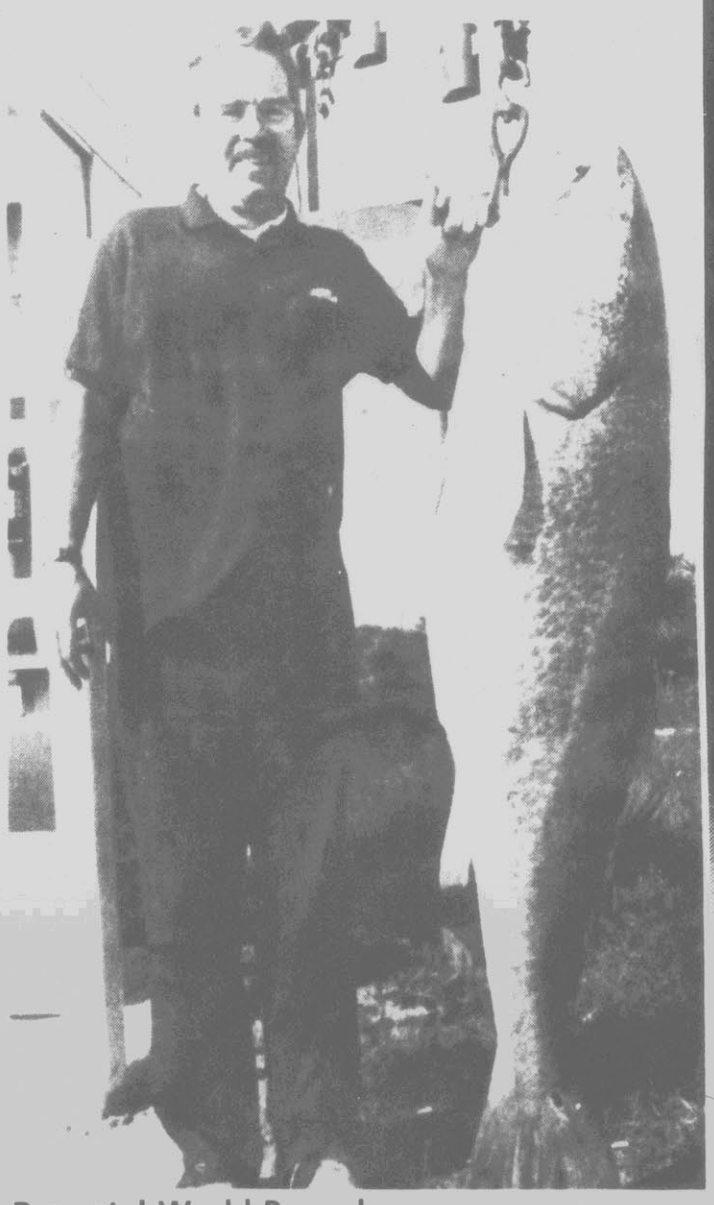

Potential World Record — A potential all-tackle world record red drum weighing 94 pounds, 2 ounces was landed early Wednesday near Avon on North Carolina's Outer Banks by David Deuel of Vienna, Va. If declared a record by the International Game Fish Association, the big fish, 58 inches long with a 36-inch girth, will eclipse the existing record of 90 pounds set by Elvin Hooper of Salvo, N.C., on November 7, 1973, exactly 11 years before Deuel's catch.

Fishing with a 17-pound test line, 50-pound shock leader and cut mullet for bait, Deuel said he followed the drum for approximately three-quarters of a mile after it struck, before landing it about 45 minutes later. A vacationing angler, Deuel said his previous best red drum catch had weighed about 27 pounds.

Blue Bell Going Private In $685 Million Buyout

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Blue Bell's stockholders can cash in their holdings Tuesday under a $685 million buyout that makes the nation's second largest clothing maker a private firm and ends a 4-year fight against corporate takeovers.

In a five-minute meeting Friday, 97.5 percent of Blue Bell's stockholders accepted the buyout, leaving the company with a hefty debt. Blue Bell will make annual loan payments of $40 million to $45 million for the next eight years.

Blue Bell expects to complete the buyout Tuesday when the company's stockholders can cash in their holdings for $47.65 a share.

At that time, ownership of Blue Bell will transfer from shareholders to a 53-member management group, Blue Bell employees, the New York investment firm of Kelso & Co. and a group of banks.

Blue Bell, listed on the New York Stock Exchange since 1967, will be removed from the Big Board.

"Down deep inside, most of us — given a different set of circumstances — would have desired to proceed as a public company," said Edward J. Bauman, Blue Bell's chairman, chief executive officer and president.

"In view of the circumstances, this was the right thing to do," he said.

Since 1981, Blue Bell has been chased by corporate takeover strategists. Blue Bell's buyout uses company profits and property for collateral on loans and Bauman said the plan is the firm's best defense.

"We don't have to look over our shoulders to see which predator is buying our stock," Bauman said.

But the company now faces challenges in other areas. In addition to a deluge of imported apparel products and a strong dollar in foreign markets, Blue Bell lost flexibility by adopting the new structure.

Under the loan agreements with the banks, Blue Bell must curtail capital expenditures to less than $30 million a year, limit mergers and acquisitions and shut down foreign manufacturing operations that fail to break even.

"They're going to have to run a lean operation with that heavy debt load," said Kay Norwood, a textile and apparel analyst with Interstate Securities in Charlotte.

"When you look at it from the outside, it appears they're going to have to slim down everywhere, whether it be inventory or overhead," she said.

Bauman said his company would use capital expenditures money for equipment and machines aimed at improving productivity.

Unprofitable foreign operations already have been whittled. A manufacturing plant in the Ivory Coast was closed in June, he said.

Pabst Faces New Purchase Offers

NEW YORK (AP) — Pabst Brewing Co., which two years ago emerged from a bitter takeover battle as only a part of its former self, is again on the verge of losing its independence.

Pabst is weighing separate offers to buy the company for $10 a share, or $63 million — one announced this past week from rival G. Heileman Brewing Co., and another from investor Paul Kalmanovitz of California.

Unlike two years ago, Milwaukee-based Pabst has not indicated a strong urge to maintain its independence, which is seen as reflecting changes in the industry's economics.

The brewing industry has suffered flat to declining sales and sliding beer consumption since 1981, in part because of the nation's increasing concerns about health and self-improvement and because of its growing effort to curb drunk-driving and other alcohol abuse.

To increase market share, brewing giants such as Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc. and financially sound medium-size concerns such as Heileman are aggressively trying to lure customers away from weaker opponents like Pabst.

Those aggressive efforts include price discounting and heavy advertising outlays, moves Pabst is hard-pressed to match without eroding its profit margins, especially since it is unable to make up lower prices with increased volume.

Industry watchers say Pabst also suffered particular blows from Miller Brewing Co., a unit of Philip Morris Inc. and the nation's second largest brewer behind Anheuser-Busch.

Much of Pabst's volume is in the medium-price or "popular" market, and since 1982 Miller has introduced two new brands into that category, Meister Brau and Milwaukee's Best.

"There wasn't room for all of these products in that market, so Pabst got squeezed some more," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with Montgomery Securities in San Francisco.

In the first nine months of 1984, Pabst's net income tumbled to $83,000 from $6.5 million a year earlier, and it suffered a $987,000 loss in the third quarter of this year. Nine-month sales fell to $596.7 million from $631.1 million.

Hence, Pabst's only solution to remaining competitive might be its merger into a larger company.

Two years ago Heileman tried twice to buy Pabst — once by itself and another time in partnership with investor Irwin L. Jacobs of Minneapolis — and twice was turned down by the Justice Department because of antitrust concerns.

Eventually, the government agreed to let Heileman, based in La Crosse, Wis., acquire part of Pabst in a complicated transaction.

In July 1982, Pabst bought 49 percent of Olympia Brewing Co. of Tumwater, Wash. Heileman momentarily took over both companies, then immediately spun off certain Pabst and Olympia assets to form the "new" Pabst.

You Get Much More Than Money Out of a First Federal Checking Account!

A checking account is a funny thing. We put our money in just so we can take it out. That's because checking is an easy way to pay for things without carrying a lot of cash.

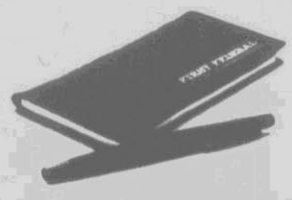

But what happens to our checking money when we're not using it? Well, at First Federal it's earning interest ... the highest allowed by Uncle Sam in Prestige Checking or money market rates in First Investors checking.

But earning interest isn't the total value in your checking account. We've added some extras we knew you'd like. A choice of three checking plans, for instance. Daily compounding of interest. No-fee travelers checks. Out-of-town emergency cash at more than 4000 locations nationwide with Prestige Card. Plus, access to our Prestige 24-Hour Teller, located next to our Boulevard Office.

So when people put their money in a First Federal checking account, they get much more than their money out of it. Come on in to First Federal...the Source of Financial Value.

Demand, Fewer Slaughters Cause Upturn In Prices

By DIANE PACETTI
Associated Press Writer

Livestock and meat futures prices rallied Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, fueled by reports of fewer hog slaughters and greater demand from grocers.

Pork bellies led the rally, advancing 2 cents a pound, the limit allowed in a single day's trading. Trading was active.

Bob Kuhn, a livestock analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds in Chicago said all livestock mar-kets were affected by traders' speculation "that the market has passed the doldrums that usually precede Thanksgiving and that the next move is up."

Demand for beef and pork is traditionally light around Thanksgiving, when more turkeys are being sold. But this year, analysts said, the market is being affected by tight turkey supplies and high prices.

Traders feel retailers will turn instead to other meats and meat products, thus boosting futures prices, sources said.

In addition, meatpackers slaughtered 200,000 fewer animals than a year ago, resulting in declining supplies.

Traders said the rally also triggered buying by traders who watch technical factors such as trends on price charts.

Cattle prices also were supported by such technical factors, and sources noted that beef carcass prices were steady at $1 a pound Friday. Others expected the price of live cattle on cash wholesale markets to advance next week, sources said.

Live cattle settled .10 cent to .53 cent higher with the contract for delivery in December at 67.15 cents a pound; feeder cattle were unchanged to 1.17 cents higher with November at 69.92 cents a pound; live hogs were .60 cent lower to 1.13 cents higher with December at 52.65 cents a pound; and pork bellies were 2 cents higher in all delivery months with Febru-ary at 71.79 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices were mixed at the close of trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

There were few developments in the market to affect prices.

Soybeans were given a boost early in the session by an earlier report from the Agriculture Department that nearly 173 metric tons of soybeans were sold to an undisclosed buyer, thought by some analysts to be the Soviet Union.

But weather conditions were expected to be clear over the weekend, allowing farmers to finish the harvest of corn and soybeans.

As a result, soybeans were under pressure as traders anticipated farmers would sell much of the product they har-vest over the weekend.

Volume was moderate in the soybean pit and light in corn and wheat.

Wheat settled ¾ cent lower to 1 cent higher with the contract for delivery in December at $3.56 a bushel; corn was ¼ cent lower to ¾ cent higher with De-cember at $2.76 a bushel; oats were ¼ cent lower to 1½ cents higher with December at $1.86 a bushel; and soybeans were 2½ cents lower to 1¼ cents higher with November at $6.13¾ a bushel.

Precious metals trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York was light and featureless, analysts said.

Gold settled 70 cents to $1.30 lower with the contract for de-livery in November at $343.90 a troy ounce; silver was .1 cent to 1 cent lower with the contract for delivery in November at $7.591 a troy ounce.

Jean Designers Are Sued By Jordache

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two women who make "resigner" jeans — for the woman who has resigned herself to a full figure — are being sued by the Jordache designer jean company, which contends the trademark "Lardashe" is too similar to its own.

Lardashe jeans, made by Susan Duran, 34, and Marsha Stafford, 32, feature reinforced seams, a high waist and an appliqued pig peering over the back pocket.

The women began selling the jeans in late summer and said they found a good market in New Mexico and other states.

But they believe the suit by Jordache Enterprises of New York may kill their fledgling business.

"When you have $3.76 in your purse and they have $180 million in sales to fight you with, you don't stand much of a chance," said Ms. Duran. "Right now, we're kind of nowhere. It's so depressing in the country that's supposed to be the land of opportunity."

The suit, filed Oct. 26, alleges the Lardashe name is so similar to the nationally recognized Jordache that it constitutes a trademark infringement. The similarity in names creates "a likelihood of confusion" among consumers, the lawsuit says.

Analysts See Potential Tax Reform Problems

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Streeters are decidedly wary as they look ahead to the possibility of "tax reform" measures next year.

Analysts in the financial world, like everybody else who has been paying attention, are mindful of President Reagan's repeated assertion that Americans' income taxes aren't going to be increased.

"Nonetheless, tax reform, and a likely increase in the share of income taken by government, seems inevitable," observed Ian McAvity, a Toronto-based investment adviser, in a recent commentary.

"With the 1986 midterm elections already in view for Republican senators, any tax changes are likely to be made quickly — to bury them as political issues then," McAvity added. "Tax increases have never been bullish before."

One possibility that has been mentioned is putting a greater tax burden on corporations. That might not sit well with stock-market investors, since it would stand to reduce the amount of corporate income available for payment as dividends or reinvestment in the growth of a business.

Amid uncertainty over the prospective shape of the administration's tax proposal, the stock market took a tumble in sluggish trading this past week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 31.03 to 1,187.94.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 2.03 to 94.70, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 2.79 at 209.18.

Big Board volume averaged 72.80 million shares a day, down from 93.80 million the week before.

Even if the Reagan administration is able to realize its stated goal of simplifying the tax system in a "revenue-neutral" way, investment experts see some potential perils for the markets.

Consider, for instance, the widely discussed idea of a "modified flat tax" setup. Under such an arrangement, the present multi-tiered system would be replaced with just a few tax brackets.

Nominal tax rates probably would be lowered for most Americans, while most, or at least many, existing deductions would be eliminated.

Most observers agree that the deductibility of home mortgage interest and charitable contributions likely would be retained. But other present deductions, such as credit-card interest and state and local taxes, could be scrapped.

Analysts point out that any tax-reform measure that substantially lowered tax rates might well have some significant side effects.

The Value Line Investment Survey notes that it would reduce the value of those deductions that survived by putting investors in lower brackets. "We have in mind, of course, the deductions associated with so-called tax shelters," the investment advisory service said.

"Municipal bonds would also be affected, with yields rising (and prices falling) relative to those on taxable bonds, so as to maintain the same relationship in after-tax yields." Bond market-watchers say prices of municipals have already begun to reflect this possibility, in case it becomes a reality.

Furthermore, Value Line says, stocks and all other investments subject to favorable long-term capital gains treatment would also logically suffer some loss of luster. The benefits of the 60 percent exclusion from taxes that applies to such gains diminish in lower tax brackets.

"Obviously, lower tax rates would be good for investors in general," the firm adds. "Our point is that they would diminish the attractiveness of tax-advantaged investments relative to fully taxable ones."

Whether a Republican administration and a Democratic Congress, operating in the midst of many strong special-interest groups, will be able to agree on a significant tax-reform program remains a highly debatable question. But there is also pressure on leaders in Washington to do something about a tax system that is becoming more unwieldy all the time.

"It's still far too early to base investment decisions on the possibility of lower tax rates," Value Line concludes. "But investors should keep an eye on the administration's tax proposals as they develop."

Ingram To Study Investment Plans

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has ordered officials from more than 100 insurance companies to appear next month at hearings in an investigation into investments.

Insurance Department spokesman Oscar Smith Jr. said notices to appear at the hearings were being issued to 15 percent of the 900 to 1,000 insurance companies licensed to operate in North Carolina.

The Insurance Department is investigating insurance companies' investments in their parent and subsidiary firms. Smith said. The hearings are scheduled to start Dec. 10.

"It is my understanding that the intent of the hearing is an effort to protect policy holders of each insurance company from either upstream or sidestream investments," Smith said.

He said an upstream investment is by a subsidiary company in its parent company. A sidestream investment is by a subsidiary in another subsidiary owned by the same parent company.

Smith said the investments can lead to trouble for subsidiaries if the parent company gets into financial difficulty.

"Let's say a company is licensed to do business in North Carolina and they have got $10,000 invested in the parent company. And they've got $15,000 total monies," Smnith said. "See where that leaves them it they have a major claim?"

Insurance industry lobbyists were outraged by the hearings and one accused Ingram of "pure harassment." Ingram leaves office in January and he will be replaced by James Long, a Burlington lawyer who won the Nov. 6 election.

"It appears to me that it is an attempt to libel every company and shake up the confident of the people in the company for no good reason at all," said lobbyist John Bailey. "And I would suggest that it is pure harassment."

Teamsters Reorganize Texas Local

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — The Teamsters, in an unusually bitter internal wrangle, placed a local into trusteeship and ousted its president because of accusations he used unauthorized union funds to lease an expensive automobile, finance an audit and hire bodyguards.

The order by Jackie Presser, the union's national president, followed a two-month investigation of El Paso Local 941 by the Washington-based union.

Joseph Allgood, an international union representative, went to local headquarters Friday afternoon and personally delivered Presser's order to local president Daniel Diaz.

Members of the local accompanied Allgood to the union's offices to station themselves at doorways, and union officials took charge of the headquarters.

Diaz, who waged a fierce fight against the trusteeship, has refused comment.

A Labor Department investigation into the local's financial dealings were inconclusive.

"The department could not find any evidence of violations," said Richard de la Garza, a supervising investigator.

Immediately after taking over the local, Allgood had all the door locks in the building changed and began an examination of the local's financial books.

Based on findings issued Friday, Presser placed the local into trusteeship, ousting its president from the 1,200-member union — an unusual move — and barring him from the property.

Diaz, Local 941 president since January 1981, was also asked to turn over all union property, keys to the local headquarters and a car given to him to use while president.

CHINESE BRUSH PAINTINGS...are hanging in the foyer hallway of the Morris home. The paintings are the work of a Baptist minister, Dr. View Hand, who was killed in Vietnam where he was working with refuges. The paintings are about 50 years old.

GEORGIAN STYLE HOME...of John and Angel Melvin features mouldings, cabinets and windows created by her father, Alvin Costa of Rocky Mount. She has an interior design studio on the second floor.

Greenville Church Plans Christmas Homes Tour

Eight homes in Greenville will be featured on the Christmas tour of homes scheduled for Dec. 4. It is being sponsored by the First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

The tour will also include a bazaar with a bake shop and luncheon. The hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Tour homes are those of Ralph Woodcock Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Perkins Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Taft, Dr. and Mrs. James Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Spence Cosby, Mr. and Mrs. John Melvin and Mr. and Mrs. N.S. Simonowich.

Christmas music will be featured at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Simonowich. Performing at the Webbs will be Philip Evancho, Susie Pair, Camilla Nilsson and Justin Sturz. Mary Paul Castelloe, Amy West, who has just been crowned Miss Rocky Mount, and Carol-Ann Tucker will present music at the Simonwich home. The bazaar and bake shop will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins and will feature crafts and baked items made by ladies of the Christian Women's Fellowship. The luncheon will be held at the church and will have two sittings — 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Woodcock home has been restored and features imported pieces of furniture and antiques from the estate of the late Sen. B. Everette Jordan. The house has solid oak floors. The dining room is highlighted by an English pub table.

The Perkins' house is decorated with handmade needlework and furniture created by the family.

The Georgian styled home of Mr. and Mrs. Taft has a two-story entrance hall. The mirrored dining room will feature a live, decorated Christmas tree.

Family portraits and sculptor are features of the colonial house of Mr. and Mrs. Webb. Period furniture and handmade needlepoint rugs are other features. A decorated Christmas tree will highlight the back porch.

Alvin Costa of Rocky Mount did the woodwork, mouldings, cabinets and windows in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin. He is Mrs. Melvin's father. Over 100 hand-tatted Christmas stars will decorate a single Christmas tree and were tatted by her grandmother. Mrs. Melvin's interior design studio is on the second floor of the house.

A handmade game table from Lebanon is placed in the den of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simonowich. The rugs in the foyer and living room were imported from India. The house also features 19th century collectibles.

Mr. and Mrs. Cosby built their home about four years ago. It is a Tidewater Virginia design featuring a main house with a wing projected off the back. The Cosby's have strived to feature an air of colonial authenticity in design and furnishings.

The two and one-half story contemporary home of Dr. and Mrs. Morris has a glass solarium which will be highlighted by a decorated Christmas tree. A stained glass window of wood ducks nesting is placed in a wall in the atrium. It was created by his sister, Cathy Fitzhjohn of Jacksonville, Fla. The house is decorated throughout with pastel colors and all natural oak wood.

Mrs. Reid Perkins is serving as chairman of the tour and luncheon. She is being assisted by Mrs. W.M. Scales Jr.

The cost of the tour and luncheon tickets are $6 and luncheon tickets must be purchased in advance. Tickets are available from the Frist Christian Church in Greenville or call 756-3138. The event is being held to help raise money for a new fellowship building.

STAINED GLASS WINDOW...decorates a wall in the atrium in the Morris home. The window of wood ducks nesting was created by Cathy Fitzjohn of Jacksonville, Fla.

Couple Marries In Afternoon Ceremony

MRS. HOPKINS

GRIFTON — Deirdra Anne Wiggins of Greenville and Timothy Scott Hopkins of Charlotte were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Gerald Scott Henry, cousin of the bridegroom, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wiggins of Grifton. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Atwell W. Hopkins of Charlotte.

A program of wedding music was performed by organist Sharon Irwin and trumpter Reggie Purvis. Susan Baker sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white matte taffeta designed with an open portrait neckline emphasized with appliques of silk Venise lace accented with pearls. The fitted bodice featured beaded alencon lace appliques interspersed with silk Venise lace, which extended to the modified basque waistline. The fitted taffeta sleeves tapered to calla points of sheer beaded lace at the wrist. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with a ruffled flounce of taffeta bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in imported alencon lace and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and a cluster of phalaenopsis orchids.

Linda Branscome of San Diego, Calif., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Avery of Greenville, Holly Dennis of Arlington, Va., Diane Bellini of Smyrna, Ga., and Wanda L. Wynne of New Bern.

Each attendant wore a formal gown of teal green organza over peau de soie. The Sposabella inspired gown featured a fitted bodice designed with an open V-neck. The short pouf sleeves and elasticized shoulders featured teal silk organza petals which extended over the shoulders and sleeves. The gathered skirt was accentuated by a basque waistline. Each attendant carried a cascade bouquet of pink-tinged rubrum lilies with miniature pink carnations.

Flower girl was Amanda Wright of Lexington, Ky. She wore a formal length white gown trimmed in teal green and carried a lace and net basket filled with rose petals.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Mark Hopkins of Norfolk, Va., brother of the bridegroom; Larry Wright of Lexington, Ky., uncle of the bridegroom; Eric Ward and Donnie Rabb, both of Charlotte; and Bill Wiggins Jr. of Raleigh, and David Wiggins of Grifton, both brothers of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a street length, long sleeved gown of cranberry georgette accented with a beaded shoulder. The mother of the bridegroom chose a street length gown of periwinkle blue georgette with an embroidered scalloped hemline. Each mother wore a white phalaenopsis orchid.

A reception was held at the Greenville Sheraton following the ceremony. Piano music was provided by Darrell Mitchell.

A wedding breakfast was held Saturday morning at the Three Steers Restaurant. Hostesses were Mrs. Dick Adams, Mrs. Gibb Chauncey, Mrs. Allen Drake, Mrs. Carlton Gray, Mrs. Frank Griffin, Mrs. Bobby Price, Mrs. Steve Rogers and Mrs. Carr Tucker.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given Friday by Mrs. Wayne Branscome and Linda Branscome at the Greenville Country Club. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Sheraton.

Also the week of the wedding, an open house was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delano Wilson in Winterville. Hosting the party were Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Claybrook, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Frazier, Miss Mavis Brown and Doug Mitchell. A luncheon was given at the home of Sue Zadeits; hostesses were Mrs. Zadeits, Pat West, Arlene Barrett, Merinda Wetherington, Mrs. Joel McLawhorn and Denise Carrico. The couple was also honored with a several showers, a wine and cheese party and a cookout.

The bride earned a political science degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The bridegroom received a degree in chemistry from Pfeiffer College and is a chemical sales representative with Van Waters and Rogers.

After a wedding trip to Nassau, the couple will reside in Charlotte.

Patient Circle Has Meeting

The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons held its meeting Wednesday at the home of Dr. Lois Staton.

President Polly Dail and Mrs. R.C. Henry reported on the Christmas project for the Spruill home. Plans were made for the December meeting.

The Rev. Susan Pate was a honored guest.

Mrs. Harvey Turnage gave the devotional on "Generosity" and read a poem "Blessings of Service."

Sherri Lane King Marries Samuel Mark Vestal Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Sherri Lane King and Samuel Mark Vestal, both of Greenville, took place Saturday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Whittington of Greenville. The bridegroom is also the son of Sam Vestal of Jonesville. Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Kerry King of LaGrange.

The double ring ceremony ws performed by the Rev. Ray Whittington and wedding music was provided by pianist Darryl Mitchell.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a tea length dress of ivory silk organza over taffeta. The slip style gown was complemented by a sheer jacket of organza designed with short French pouf sleeves trimmed in embroidered eyelet. Matching trim enhanced the neckline and accentuated the waistline in a ruffled peplum. An ivory satin ribbon sash encircled the waist. She wore a bridal hat trimmed in organza and silk Venise lace appliques beaded in pearls enhanced with a pouf veil of imported sparkle illusion with satin ribbon streamers. She carried a classic formal bouquet of orchids, roses and gardenias accented with baby's breath and narrow candelight satin with tips of green springerii tied with matching ribbon.

The bride descended a spiral stairway, woven with greenery and ivory satin streamers and bows, and entered the formal living room where the ceremony was performed.

Matron of honor was Cindy Brown of Grantville, Ga., sister of the bride. She wore a formal gown of dusty rose Italian tineseta knit designed with a bateau neckline. The blouson bodice featured three-quarter length slit sleeves. The accordian pleated skirt fell from a natural waistline and was enhanced by an asymmetrical tie sash. She carried a semi-nosegay bouquet with shades of pink miniature carnations, alstromerias and baby's breath tied with blush pink satin.

Summer Whittington of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was junior bridesmaid. She wore a formal gown of dusty rose silkened organza over peau de soie. The sleeveless gown was designed with an open neckline and featured an organza ruffle which extended over the shoulders and across the back.

The gathered skirt fell from a slightly raised waistline and was bordered at the hem by an organza ruffle. She carried a bouquet designed like that of the honor attendant.

Best man was John Vestal and ring bearer was Josh Whittington, both brothers of the bridegroom from Greenville.

The mothers of the couple each were remembered with a white orchid corsage tied with blush pink ribbon.

A reception was held in the formal dining room of the home. Beverly Tedder assisted in serving.

The bride is employed by WNCT-TV and the bridegroom is employed by Piano and Organ Distributors of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the couple will reside in Greenville.

For over 50 years we, at Lautares Jewelers, have operated a highly ethical jewelry business. One of our principles is to sell our jewelry at a fair price - a price that gives the customer honest value and affords us a reasonable profit. Therefore, we do not sell "discount type" merchandise, and we will not "pre-ticket". "Pre-ticketing" has become wide spread throughout the business world, and, articles that should sell for $100.00 are ticketed at $150.00, $175.00 or even more. The customer is led to believe that he is receiving a "good buy" or a terrific discount. We refuse to use this deception on our customers. We will not give discounts but we will continue to give honest value as we have been doing for over a half of a century.

Wedding Vows Solemnized In High Noon Ceremony Saturday

Rhonda Jane Swaim and Gary Lew Warren were united in marriage at high noon in a ceremony performed in the Oaklawn Baptist Church in Winston-Salem. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Glenn E. Swaim Sr., grandfather of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Swaim of Winston-Salem. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. T. Jack Warren of Greenville and the late Mr. Warren.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of imported white English net over taffeta designed with an open portrait neckline encircled with motifs of silk Venise lace flowers interspersed with appliques of embroidered roses beaded in seed pearls. The fitted bodice was appliqued in silk lace combined with a scroll pattern of pearls. The short butterfly sleeves were fashioned in the sheer net scalloped in the pearl trim with a stylized bow bordered in rows of pearls. The skirt featured the beaded net and the embroidered rose motifs. The pencil skirt was complemented by a detachable sweep train of English net. She wore a coronet headpiece appliqued in beaded lace. Her tiered veil of imported bridal illusion featured a pencil edge. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias and stephanotis interspersed with greenery.

The attendants wore formal gowns of sapphire blue iridescent taffeta which were fashioned with open sweetheart necklines featuring a fitted torso bodice and French pouf sleeves enhanced with loop bows at the shoulder. The full skirt extended to a sweep train with a pouf bustle. Each carried a bouquet of assorted Dutch flowers. The maid of honor wore a cloche hat covered in matching taffeta outlined in pearl trim with a pouf of French netting. The attendants wore circlets of matching taffeta.

Rena Swaim, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Paula Stokes, Page Aman, Dawn Henderson and Marsha Evans, sister of the bridegroom of Greenville, Donya Needham of Winston-Salem, Jane Robbins of Shalimar, Fla., and Melissa Wilson of Charlotte.

Chuck French of Wake Forest was best man. Ushers were Tim Duggins of Winston-Salem, Johnnie Byrd of Kinston, Brad Clapp of Atlanta, Ga., Marty Shirley, Bob Oettinger, Tracy and Glenn Warren, both brothers of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

The flower girl was Ragan Sapp, cousin of the bride. She wore a dress similar to the attendants' and carried a bouquet of assorted flowers. The ring bearer was Eric Warren, nephew of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was presented by Debbie Oldham and Johnnie Byrd. Betty Masten was organist and Chuck French was trumpeter. Nancy Davis directed the wedding.

A reception was held at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Swaim Sr. Lynn Swaim served cake and Patty Walker poured punch. Ann Wilson and Nell Kiser greeted guests and said goodbyes.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the Hyatt House in Winston-Salem Friday evening and was given by the mother of the bridegroom. A dance followed the dinner and was given by parents of the bridal couple. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Lynn Swaim, Rhonda Sapp and Linda Heath at the Stouffers Winston Plaza Hotel. Several showers, a tea and cookout was given for the bridal couple.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University where she received a B.F.A. degree. She is employed with Swaim Originals in High Point. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and received a B.S.B.A. degree. He is self-employed and is affiliated with Farmers Warehouse.

The couple will live in Winston-Salem after a wedding trip to Las Brisas, Mexico.

"Serving The People Of Greenville For Over 20 Years"

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

This week is National Adoption Week and I can think of no better way to celebrate it than with the McGee family of Clinton, Iowa.

There are 14 of them. They don't match. Some are tall and blonde. Some are short and black. Three are natural children of the McGees. Nine followed a path of love and found their way there.

Adoption is uncomfortable only to the people who haven't done it. They don't know what adoptive parents want to hear, so they say dumb things.

The McGees have heard it all.

"What beautiful children. Who do they belong to?"

"Does the government subsidize you?"

"Do they know they're adopted?"

"Where did you find all these kids?"

There's always some well-meaning disciple who has a message from the Lord who assures the McGees they will be crowned in heaven for being so saintly as to take on the "burden" of another woman's child.

And the "goodie" I've always loved comes after you've been up with a child a million times, toilet-trained them, run with them on their first bicycle, dried their tears, calmed their fears, sat white-knuckled in the car while they learned how to drive, dressed them for their first prom, mortgaged the house for their education only to have someone ask, "Do you think they'll ever want to find their 'real' mother?"

The biggest difference between adopting a child and having one naturally is with adoption the labor is longer and more painful.

I had a child adopt me when I was 26. Although she didn't know a lot about my background, she accepted me, flaws and all. It wasn't important to her that I wasn't in at the beginning of her life. It was only important that we had found one another. We too battled prejudice and ignorance.

"Your mother doesn't look like you. She's short."

"Do you suppose your mother will ever want children of her own?"

"I'll bet she wouldn't be so strict if she were your 'real' mother."

And one space cadet even said, "What are you going to do if your mother has a child of her own?"

Come to think of it, that was the same woman who saw me when I was eight months pregnant and asked, "What happened?"

Couple Marries On Saturday Evening

The Memorial Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Patricia Dianne Haynie and Richard Duane Law Saturday evening at seven o'clock.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Allen Haynie of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Edward Law of Winston-Salem.

Performing the double ring ceremony was the Rev. E.T. Vinson. Wedding music was provided by Joseph Goodwin, organist, Philip Evancho, soloist, and Mrs. James Searl, flutist. The wedding was directed by Katherine Vinson.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown of ivory satin with beaded alencon lace. The fitted torso bodice featured a Victorian neckline with a crown collar, illusion deep V-yoke and Victorian sleeves. Alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls and sequins appliqued the satin bodice and sleeves and encircled the collar. Bridal buttons fastened the sleeves and the back of the gown. The satin floor length skirt extended into a cathedral train. Beaded alencon lace motifs enhanced the skirt and cathedral train. Garlands of scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore an ivory waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion with a hand rolled edge flowing from a satin caplet appliqued with alencon lace etched with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white cymbidium orchids, white freesia, white roses and English ivy with satin streamers.

Susan Hill, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a full length gown of grape chiffon over taffeta designed with a sweetheart neckline and pouf sleeves accented with a fuschia sash. She carried a nosegay of sweetheart roses, tulips and carnations.

Bridesmaids were Dell Haynie of Greenville and Melinda Haynie of Wilmington, sisters of the bride; Dawn Hixon of Ahoskie; Jamie Johnson of Chapel Hill; Cathy Law of Richmond, Va.; Juli Spring of Oxford; and Jane Welborn of Greenville. The bridesmaids wore gowns and carried bouquets like that of the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Jim Cain and Jim Reich, both of Raleigh; Herb Oliver of Greenville; Winston Kelly of Dover; Joe Binkley of Clemmons; Bill Wall of Denton; and Scott McDaniel of Rockwood, Tenn.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Brook Valley Country Club following the ceremony.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday evening at Brook Valley, preceded by a cocktail hour. A bridesmaids' luncheon was given Friday by Mrs. Odell Welborn, Mrs. William Johnson, Jamie Johnson and Jane Welborn at the home of Mrs. Welborn. A wedding brunch was given Saturday morning by friends of the bride for the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of North Carolina State University. The bride is employed by H.A. Haynie Co., Inc. The bridegroom is a field engineer for Square D Company.

The couple will reside in Greenville after a honeymoon cruise.

Gminder-Frink Wedding Vows Said

Elizabeth Holle Frink and Nathan Gminder were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church in Greenville. The Rev. Richard R. Gammon performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Paul Topper of Greenville and Dr. and Mrs. Albert Gminder of Belvidere.

Organist Robert Irwin, flutist Amy Reynolds and violinst Paul Topper presented a program of classical music.

The bride, escorted by her stepfather, wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The fitted bodice featured an off-shoulder portrait neckline in a ruffle of chantilly lace beaded with pearls. Appliques of beaded lace enhanced the basque waistline. The long fitted sleeves were edged at the wrist in the clipped chantilly lace. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were appliqued in the beaded lace with a hemline border of scalloped chantilly. She wore a circlet of silk flowers interspersed with organza petals edged in pearls. Her veil of illusion was waltz length. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white cymbidium orchids with burgundy throats, white miniature carnations and pink tea roses accented with white satin streamers.

Betty Topper, mother of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a full length dress of daphne rose labique taffeta with short puffed elbow length sleeves accented with a high Venise lace collar, a point d'esprit illusion yoke with criss-cross draped bodice. The fitted waist was accented with a self-bow. She carried a traditional bouquet of pink and white miniature carnations, burgundy alstromeria lilies accented with burgundy satin streamers. She wore a hairpiece of flowers matching her bouquet.

MRS. GMINDER

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Frink, sister of the bride, Kimberly Hargett and Stacy Stephenson, all of Greenville. They wore burgundy dresses identical to that of the honor attendant and carried similar bouquets accented with pink satin streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Joseph Gminder, brother of the bridegroom, Chip Click of Mebane and Frank Dean of Greenville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Ann Stanton of Greenville coordinated the reception. Bob and Linda Thurber of Greenville provided music and he directed the wedding.

Assisting in serving were Susan Tacker of Greenville, Karlyn McCarty of Wilmington, Esther Smith, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register. Lisa Moore and Julie Kellim, both of of Wilmington, presented rice bags.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Asheville.

The bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. She is employed by Belk Tyler and he is employed by the Ramada Inn.

The couple was honored at an after-rehearsal dinner given by the bridegroom's parents and a rehearsal party was given by the bride's parents.

The bride was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon given by her mother, a lingerie shower given by Kimberly Hargett and Stacy Stephenson and a miscellaneous shower given by her mother and sister.

Deborah Lynne Frutchey Is Bride Of Gregory K. James

GREENSBORO — The wedding ceremony of Deborah Lynne Frutchey of Greenville and Gregory Keith James of Greensboro was performed in the Eller Memorial Baptist Church Saturday evening at seven o'clock. The Rev. Gerald C. Primm officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Carole S. Tyson and Gilbert S. Frutchey, both of Greensboro. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wayburn C. James of Greensboro.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Shirley Patterson, pianist Mark D. Primm and soloist Pat Taylor.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore her mother's wedding gown, a white chantilly lace gown designed with a modified V neckline and long sleeves. The neckline of the gown was detailed with lace appliques sprinkled with sequins and pearls. The skirt featured a wide scalloped ruffle encircling the hemline and a back tier of ruffles cascading into a court train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion crowned with a Juliet cap of lace, sequins and pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, carnations, miniature pom pons, stephanotis and miniature orchids.

Maid of honor was Pamela S. Frutchey of Greensboro, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Margaret M. Bray of Greensboro, Susie Caldwell of Atlanta, and Iris C. Schoolfield of Greenville.

Each attendant wore a formal gown of cranberry red satin designed with short puffed sleeves, a sweetheart neckline, a dropped fitted waistline and a full skirt. Each wore a pearl necklace which was a gift from the bride and carried a cascade bouquet of silk flowers containing shades of pink lilies, fern and ivy.

Flower girls were Joy Hazelton of Greensboro, niece of the bridegroom, and Kelly Whitworth of Gainesville, Fla., cousin of the bride. Each flower girl wore a dress identical to that of the honor attendants. Each carried a white basket with an arrangement of varying shades of pink silk lilies and wore circlets of deep pink flowers in their hair.

Ring bearer was Chad Hazelton of Greensboro, nephew of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Kendall L. Blackwell of Cleveland, Ohio; Will T. Jenkins of Raleigh; Jeffrey P. Keeter of Wilmington, and Michael M. Thompson of Hendersonville.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Virginia Dare Room at the Alumni House on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Piano music was furnished by Robert Gray III of High Point.

The bride received a B.A. degree from UNC-Greensboro and an M.A. degree from Florida State University. She is a city planner with the City of Greenville Planning Office. The bridegroom received an A.B. degree from UNC-Chapel Hill and a J.D. degree from the Campbell University School of Law.

After a wedding trip to the coast of North Carolina, the couple will reside in Greenville.

ICE CREAM THROUGH THE AGES

NEW YORK (AP) — Although the first commercial ice cream plant in this country was established in Baltimore in 1851, it was only another milestone in the history of ice cream, according to Chocolatier magazine.

The magazine says that nearly every culture which could get to natural ice in the summertime seems to have found a way to make some kind of frozen sweet or other. The Romans, for example, sent runners to bring ice from the frozen Apennines to be scraped, coated with flavored syrup, and enjoyed in the Mediterranean sun.

Later, Marco Polo returned from the Far East with a recipe for a frozen dessert that included milk, and ice cream history was born.

Camembert Is Tasty Cheese Used Many Ways

By TOM HOGE
AP Food and Wine Writer

France's province of Normandy is famous for its "three C's": Calvados, cider and Camembert.

I don't have much interest in the cider and I drink Calvados brandy about once a year, but I dearly love Camembert cheese.

More than a million cows are said to graze the fields of Normandy and some of the rich milk they yield goes into the 115,000 tons of Camembert produced there each year. The French make more than 215 kinds of cheese and have a per capita consumption of about 42 pounds a year — more than twice what Americans eat.

The origin of Camembert is credited to Marie Harel, a farm woman in the village of Camembert. She is said to have made the first batch in the late 18th century. About 50 years later, the story goes, her granddaughter served Napoleon III his first sample of the cheese. There is to this day a statue of Marie Harel in the Camembert region.

French Camembert is made from raw milk, and thus is forbidden in America. To gain entry here, the cheese must be made from milk which is pasteurized before it is fermented. This probably accounts for the fact that a mere 470 tons are exported to this country annually.

I once thought that Camembert was only served plain, to be eaten on toast or crackers, but I have since run across a number of recipes.

Camembert, sliced apple and watercress on buttered toast make a delicious sandwich. Cones of canneloni stuffed with Camembert softened with whipped cream is a tasty appetizer. Another savory consists of Camembert dipped into beaten eggs thinned with water, rolled in bread crumbs and deep fried.

My own favorite is Camembert fritters. Here is a recipe from Henri-Paul Pellaprat's "Modern French Culinary Art."

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk

4 ounces Camembert cheese (without crust)
Salt and ground black pepper to taste
Fine dry bread crumbs
1 large egg, beaten with 1 tablespoon water

Melt butter in a saucepan. Remove from heat and blend in flour. Stir and cook one minute. Add milk, mix well, and cook until the mixture is quite thick. Add cheese, salt and pepper, and allow cheese to melt.

Mix well. Spread the mixture ¾ of an inch thick on a buttered baking sheet. Chill. Cut into rounds with a 1½-inch biscuit cutter. Roll in bread crumbs, dip in beaten egg and roll in crumbs again. Set aside for 20 minutes to allow the crumbs to set. Brown in deep fat preheated to 375 degrees. Drain on a paper towel. Serve as a hot hors d'oeuvre. Makes 12 fritters.

Doll Seminar Opens Nov. 30 At Sheraton

Ms. Cann has her own doll company. Ms. Friedhoff is a doll artist and will show her original dolls. She will demonstrate wig making. Hearn has doll stores in the Durham and Raleigh areas.

For further information call 756-4894 or 746-2607.

A doll seminar, sponsored by Timeless Treasures Doll Club of Eastern Carolina and Pitt Community College, will be held Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 at the Sheraton Greenville.

Lectures and demonstrations will include: Bob and June Beckett, Beckett Originals, Deer Lodge, Tenn., "Wooden Dolls Then and Now" and "The Kids;" Joseph and Sheryl Hoffman, Joseph's Original Dolls, Vicksburg, Pa., "Clay Sculpture — Portrait Dolls;" Priscilla Cann, Dolls by Jerri, Charlotte, "A Doll is Born."

Dorothy Friedhoff, Dorothy Friedhoff's Original Dolls, Durham, "Making Doll Wigs;" and David Hearn, Gorgeous Dolls, Durham, "Madame Alexander Dolls Prior to 1975."

The schedule Friday is 8:30-9:30 a.m., registration; 9:30-11:30 a.m., Ms. Cann and the Becketts; 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., exhibition and sales; 1:30-3:30 p.m. the Hoffmans and Ms. Friendhoff; 3:30-6:30 p.m., exhibit and sales, followed by a banquet and David Hearn.

Ms. Cann and the Becketts will have the program Saturday from 9:30-11:30 a.m. and from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., exhibit and sales.

The Becketts have original dolls carved in wood with special clothing made by Mrs. Beckett. They have taught and exhibited at Meredith Doll Symposium and in other areas in the United States. Joseph Hoffman will demonstrate sculpting portrait dolls and how he makes the doll look like the person. They have created a line of porcelain dolls for the Hershey Co. which are taken from the early Hershey ads.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just came home from an extended stay in the hospital, during which time my minister visited me frequently. I wanted to show my appreciation in some special way, and then I remembered the following from your book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

"Many people think religion should be free, and they wonder why it costs so much to belong to a church. I'll tell you why.

"Priests, ministers and rabbis must eat. And since they work full time at their tasks, the churches must support them. Staff, professional choir members and musicians also must be paid. Buildings must be maintained, heated, lighted and beautified. (And of course, first they must be built!)

"Custodial staff must eat and feed their families. Most churches engage in philanthropic work (aid to the needy, missions and education); hence, they have their financial obligations. Even orchids, contrary to folklore, do not live on air. Churches can't live on air, either.

"Religion, like water, may be free, but when they pipe it to you, you've got to help pay for the piping. And the piper!"

So, I wrote a check and sent it to my minister with this note: "Dear Abby said, 'Religion, like water, may be free, but when they pipe it to you, you've got to help pay for the piping. And the piper!' Enclosed is a check to help pay for the piping."

Abby, so few people remember their clergymen or clergywomen. If you want to print this as a reminder to others, sign me ...

LOUIS
FROM ST. LOUIS

DEAR LOUIS: I do. Thanks for the reminder.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful woman for 35 years. She has had a battle with cancer for the last several years—several operations, chemotherapy, etc. The word is now out that she does not have much longer to live. She can deal with that, and so can I, but there is something I cannot deal with.

Women have been calling me at home wanting to "see" me. I've had calls from women as young as 24 and as old as 65. (I am 55.) I never would have dreamed that women could be so brazen!

Maybe a word in your column would let these insensitive, aggressive women know how unattractive they are to a man in my position. Many are friends of my wife, believe it or not.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: I believe it. After 28 years of writing this column, I am shockproof.

Writer Inspired By Lawrence Durrell's 'Alexandria Quartet'

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1978, writer Francesca Stanfill picked up Lawrence Durrell's "Alexandria Quartet," the British author's rich study of the many ramifications of love.

It had a cataclysmic effect on the young writer — so much so that she worked up the courage to write a letter to Durrell two years later. She also sent him a copy of the manuscript for her first novel.

One of the best moments in her 30-year-old life was the response she received from Durrell, a part of which appears on the dusk jacket of Miss Stanfill's novel, "Shadows & Light" (Simon & Schuster, $17.95).

"His letter was a great gift and encouragement to me, and it's really been a talisman," Miss Stanfill said during an interview at the eastside apartment she shares with husband Peter Tufo, a lawyer and chairman of the New York City Board of Correction.

"Ever since I was a little girl, I've written letters," Miss Stanfill said. "You can carry around letters and save and savor them at a later, quiet moment."

In his letter, Durrell told Miss Stanfill that she was "a born writer." She keeps framed copies of the letter in her living room and in the basement cubicle of her apartment building which she uses as her office.

"It's important to have a mentor — especially for women," said Miss Stanfill, a former journalist.

Like Durrell's monumental work, Miss Stanfill's novel also is a study of love relationships. It is an erotic journey through the feelings, fears and flights of men and women.

"I had never written about a love relationship or sex," Miss Stanfill said. "It took me a while to write those sex scenes which are very crucial to the book; they have to reflect the relationship and they can't all start out delicious and wonderful. They have to be tense and ultimately destructive."

Before "Shadows & Light," Miss Stanfill's writing had been limited to frothy adventures about the rich and famous as a staff writer first for Women's Wear Daily and then later for the New York Times Magazine.

"The transition took time," she said. "It took me six months before I could develop my own style of novel writing. When you're a journalist, you're tied to the truth. And when you're a novelist, all of this disappears and you can sit down and lie.

"On the whole, I knew I would always write books. I know this is what I'm best suited for. I used to enjoy the longer pieces for the New York Times Magazine," she continued, "but I don't miss journalism.

"When I was writing my novel, I hardly wanted to sleep. I didn't eat and all I wanted to do was write."

Born in England but raised in New York, Miss Stanfill's life has always been consumed by the written word. As a child, she cloaked herself in books and deemed the public library her best friend.

She lived in downtown Manhattan's Peter Cooper Village with her sister and parents until she was 12. Then the family moved to California. Her father, Dennis, is former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of 20th Century-Fox.

"Shadows & Light" originally was to be published by Doubleday & Co. But Miss Stanfill's first husband — the marriage was annulled — threatened a libel suit because he thought one of the characters in the book too closely resembled him. At Tufo's suggestion, Miss Stanfill repaid her advance to Doubleday, withdrew the book and submitted it to Simon & Schuster.

"There are times in your life when you have to say 'no, this isn't right.' My book was important to me — I had worked hard on it," she said.

At that same time, last February, Miss Stanfill gave birth to her daughter, Serena. "This very unique moment in my life was very nearly ruined," she said.

But like a novel itself, Miss Stanfill's story had a happy ending. Not only did Simon & Schuster publish the book, but it also was made an alternate in the Book-of-the-Month club, it is being sold abroad and was to be auctioned to paperback houses.

"It's a wonderful thrill to see your name on a book," she said, "but it's the process — the voices speaking to you, finding the perfect detail for a character's bedroom, that daily explosion of ideas — that's the magical part of writing.

"I think to myself, 'I've written this book and it's been well-received.' But it does put pressure on you," Miss Stanfill said. "You have to do better with the next."

Stamp News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The U.S.P.S. says it will issue a commemorative stamp in 1986 hailing AMERIPEX '86, the international philatelic exhibition. Design details and dates will be revealed later.

In 1990, the postal service will issue a stamp honoring Luis Munoz Marin, founder of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Munoz was elected Puerto Rico's first governor in 1948. In 1952 the present commonwealth status went into effect and Munoz became its governor.

Volume III of the 1985 Scott Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue, which covers countries from Gabon to Oltre Giuba, is now available to collectors. It is priced at $20. More than 41,500 prices have been revised. The countries noting the most changes are Yugoslavia, Monaco, Luxembourg, Liechtenstein and Japan. The downward trend for German stamps continues as we have noted since 1960. Also plunging down are stamp prices for the Netherlands and its colonies. For example, the 896 5g Wilhelmina was listed last year at $1,350 (new). The 1985 book sets the price as $950.

First Landing Claim

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Where exactly did Christopher Columbus first land in this hemisphere?

There are many theories and claims, but according to Columbus' own diary it was either Grand Turk or East Caicos Island. The people on East Caicos say he reached their shores on Oct. 12, 1492 and met the local Arawak Indians who peacefully accepted and welcomed the famous navigator.

To broaden its claim, publicize the local landing and celebrate Columbus' birthday, the Caicos Islands have issued three new stamps of interesting design.

The 10-cent stamp depicts sailors aboard the Pinta sighting what they think are mermaids — but are really manatees found in abundance in the Caicos.

The 70-cent stamp shows Columbus' three ships — the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria — off the coast of east Caicos at what is now called Columbus Cay. The $1 features Columbus and his translator and two armored soldiers greeting the Indians. A souvenir sheet of $2 stamps illustrates the flagship Santa Maria and a border depicting the routes of Columbus' four voyages.

Caicos also recently overprinted its $2 definitive stamp for the "AUSIPEX '84" exhibition in Melbourne, Australia. The definitive depicted a soldier of the 67th regiment and Fort St. George.

These stamps are available at your local stamp dealer. ———

U.S. collectors, here's one for your future book.

In 1987, the U.S. Postal Service will issue a new stamp to honor noted educator Mary Lyon. It will be in the Great American Series and will coincide with the 150th anniversary of Mount Holyoke College, which Lyon founded.

Ms. Lyon was born in Buckland, Mass., on Feb. 28, 1797. Between the years 1834 and 1837 she raised more than $12,000 (a lot of money in those days) to launch Mount Holyoke Female Seminary in South Hadley, Mass. In 1893, the name was changed to Mount Holyoke College.

Ms. Lyon, who died in South Hadley in 1849, was elected to the American Hall of Fame in 1905.

The value, date of issuance and first-day cover information will be provided in 1987. ———

The U.S. Postal Service is blowing its own posthorn in announcing the success of the big publicity and promotion campaign for "National Stamp Collecting Month," during October. The theme was "Fall In Love With Stamp Collecting."

The major objectives were to focus attention on the power of stamp collecting to unite the family around a common leisure activity, to stress its contributions to building friendships and binding our nation together.

The USPS revealed the following trivia items provided to national collectors and the media:

1 — The doughnut was invented by the sweetheart of a pony express rider in 1860. She is said to have put the hole in the middle of small cakes so the rider could hook them with his gun barrel.

2 — Camels and reindeer once carried mail in North America. The camels were tried by the Confederacy, but that experiment failed when the animals stampeded. Reindeer were tried in Alaska as a test, but they were too difficult to train. They should have asked Santa Claus first.

3 — George Washington wrote the first letter carried by air in America. French balloonist Jean-Pierre Blanshard made a short flight with the letter on Jan. 9, 1793. Nobody knows if it was ever delivered.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JUNE D. PARKER

The following new fiction titles at Sheppard Library are worthy of special attention.

In "Decisions," by Freda Bright, Dasha Croy, the mother of two school-age children decides to finish her law degree. Her lawyer husband, Jordan, at first takes pride in his wife's initiative. But his attitude changes as her career starts to blossom after she finishes her degree and puts his career completely in the shadows. He finally gives her an ultimatum: leave her job or her marriage. Freda Bright paints a realistic picture of the trade-offs women with high-pressure careers must juggle.

Dennis Smith is a firefightr turned novelist whose latest novel is "Steely Blue." It tells the story of Steely Brynes, an alcohoic woman-chaser whose marriage is on the rocks. He is also a good firefighter with both brains and guts when the going gets rough. Crooked political deals that put human lives in danger and the introduction of women to the force prick his conscience and force him to put his career on the line.

John Gardner in "Role of Honor" continues his James Bond novels with Agent 007 on a spending spree after his dead uncle's will stipulates that he spend 100,000 pounds extravagantly. Bond's superiors uses these actions as an excuse to fire him, telling others that Bond was paid off for passing secret documents. This tale gives Bond the opportunity to infiltrate his old enemy, SPECTRE, an international terrorist group now aided by a computer whiz. This novel continues the lively pace of previous Bond novels.

Joseph Heller, author of "Catch-22," has a new novel entitled "God Knows." On his deathbed, King David ruminates about his past deeds and exploits. His contankerous view of his own experiences, bibical history, and his people's destiny form a sadly wry but also humorously passionate memoir. David remembers his wife, worries over his successor, moons over the seductive, but elusive charms of Bathsheba, and always considers his uneasy and unequal relationship with the Lord. While in other hands, this novel might have lapsed into a blasphemous farce, here it becomes a moving contemplation of the human condition.

T-Shirt Design Competition

DURHAM — The American Dance Festival, Spectator Magazine and Spectator Magazine of the Triad are jointly sponsoring a competition for design of the official 1985 American Dance Festival shirt.

The design must read: "1985 American Dance Festival" and may use a maximum of four colors. The winning design will be used on the front of the t-shirt and will be sold throughout the Triangle and Triad area.

A check for $100, two tickets to an ADF performance, plus a one-year subscription to Spectator Magazine will be awarded to the winner.

Full size designs should be submitted by Nov. 30 to T-Shirt Design Contest, American Dance Festival, P. O. Box 6097-College Station, Durham, N. C., 27708. The phone number is 684-6402.

The Battle of Balaclava was fought in 1854 during the Crimean War. During the battle, the British Light Brigade launched a spectacular but futile cavalry attack which cost 247 lives.

BB&T Has Sponsored A Lavish 400th Anniversary Volume

A WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA WATERFALL . . . is one of numerous splendid color photographs used to illustrate "North Carolina: Reflections of 400 Years," commissioned by Branch Banking and Trust Company. The large format, 176-page book is being distributed to all eighth grade classrooms in North Carolina and to public and college libraries. Copies, at $37.50 plus tax, are also available to the public.

"North Carolina: Reflections of 400 Years," is a colorful, large format book commissioned by Branch Banking and Trust Company in honor of the state's 400th anniversary celebration.

An elaborate, primarily pictorial book measuring 11 by 12.5 inches, the 176-page hardbound volume contains a fine collection of superb color photographs covering places and people from the coast to the mountains in all seasons of the year. There are additionally numerous smaller black and white photographs which effectively pinpoint significant factors of the state's past, and sketches of contributors of articles.

In a recent ceremony, Jerry W. Powell, vice president and city executive of BB&T in Greenville, Frank Gill, vice president and city executive in Farmville, and Doug Moore, vice president and city executive in Fountain, joined in a symbolic ceremony in the presentation of a copy of the book to the school library at Farmville Middle School. Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of the Pitt County Schools, accepted the book on behalf of the students and faculty at Farmville Central.

"BB&T will present a copy of the book to all primary and secondary schools in the state with an eighth grade and to all public libraries and college libraries," said Powell. He added that the decision to select eighth grade classrooms as recipeints of the book is based on the fact that "North Carolina history is taught at the eighth grade level as authorized by the North Carolina General Assembly.

"Greenville, site of the organization of the Baptist State Convention in 1830, is featured in the book," Powell pointed out.

A special segment of the book details the state's 400 year past in a timeline format highlighting significant people and events in North Carolina in words and pictures.

Contributors of essays — 35 North Carolinians who are well known leaders in their fields — have provided textual accounts that touch on agriculture, sports, politics, business and the arts. These include Tar Heel notables such as photographer Hugh Mortin, novelist Doris Betts, baseball player Gaylord Perry, North Carolina poet laureate Sam Ragan, Winston-Salem State basketball coach Clarence Gaines, writer of Eastern North Carolina folk events Dennis Rogers and others.

In his introduction to the volume, BB&T president L. Vincent writes: "Because of our unique status as North Carolina's oldest bank, BB&T shares in the keen awareness of our heritage as the home of the first English settlement in the New World."

In addition to the nearly 4,000 copies being presented to schools and libraries, the book is also on sale to the public. It can be purchased at any of the 153 BB&T branch offices in 88 cities throughout North Carolina. The purchase price is $37.50 plus tax.

An official project of the North Carolina Museum of History Associates, part of the proceeds from public sales will be used for renovation of the History Museum's new quarters in the old Museum of Art building in Raleigh.

"North Carolina: Reflections of 400 Years" is also available by mail order or through the North Carolina Museum of History and the Museum of Art gift shops. For detailed order information, interested persons are to contact: BB&T, P. O. Box 1847, Wilson, N.C., 27893.

This handsome, informative book is an ideal gift suggestion for booklovers, history buffs, and for anyone who simply loves the beauty and diversity of North Carolina presented in an excellent pictorial format.

State Commissions Art For Buildings

RALEIGH — A ceremony will be held in Raleigh on Wednesday to call attention to another first for North Carolina: the first state program to commission works of art by North Carolinians for placement in public places.

"A Stone Age painter created what could be called the first public art in a cave in Lascaux, France, 15,000 years ago," said Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the N. C. Department of Cultural Resources, which oversees the program, "Art has been central to our lives ever since, and government leaders have been smart enough to recognize that. I'm proud that North Carolina is taking her place beside other states and cities in history by supporting the 'Art Works in State Buildings' program."

Legislation first passed by the N. C. General Assembly in 1982 appropriated funds and set up a committee to commission the art works. The General Assembly has reenacted the measure every year since, and the program gained so much support that NCNB Corporation and Northern Telecon, Inc. contributed artwork to the program.

The dedication ceremony will be held in the lobby of the Administration building, where a sculpture given by Northern Telecom and a painting given by NCNB have been placed. Jane Patterson, secretary of the Department of Administration, and a member of the "Art Works in State Buildings" Committee, will welcome the group to the building.

The 1984 purchase is an $8,000 sculpture, "Vale," by James Gallucci of Greensboro for the back lawn of the Archives and History/State Library building in Raleigh.

"A vale is a geographic formation, the space between two mountains, and that is what I had in mind when I sculpted the piece," said Gallucci, who teaches sculpture and design at UNC-Greensboro. "Vale," made of painted red steel, is 10 feet by five feet by 21 feet. It was permanently installed in October.

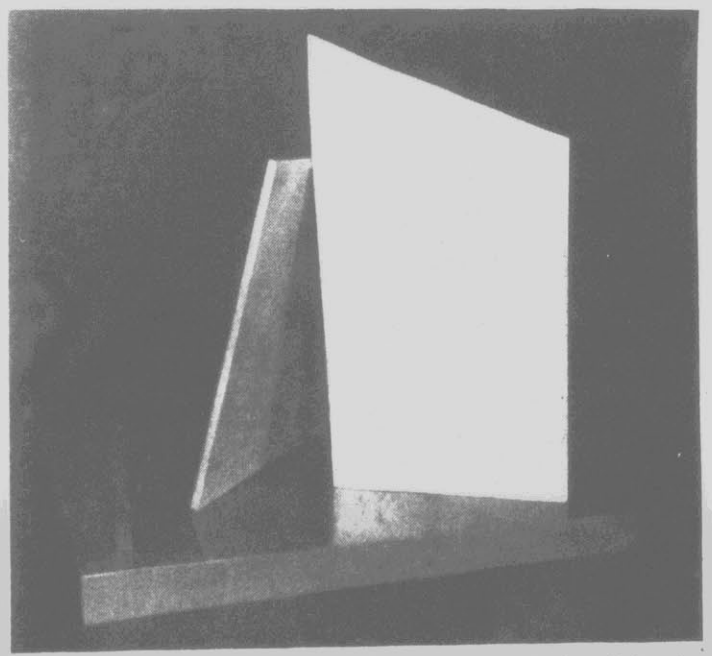

Thomas Sayre of Golden Valley has been commissioned to create an outdoor sculpture for the campus of the N. C. School of Science and Mathematics in Durham, using the 1983 appropriation of about $9,000. Sayre, a member of "Clearscapes," a design and architectural firm, will sculpt a piece to be installed next spring, composed of 22-foot long concrete slabs weighing 30 tons. The concrete walls will lean against each other, indicating the locations of the North Star, the summer solstice, the winter equinox, and the latitude of Durham as measured against the equator.

Several corporate donations have been made to the program. Northern Telecon, which sponsors the annual N. C. Sculpture Show, donated one of the pieces it purchased from the 1983 exhibition, an eight-foot, 30-pound painted wood sculpture, "All of Us," by Lucy Puls. Ms. Puls is assistant professor af art at Western Carolina Univrsity, Cullowhee.

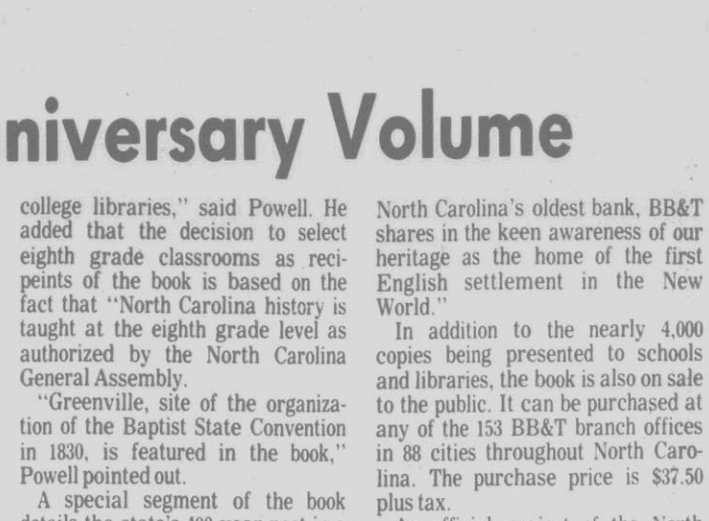

North Carolina National Bank contributed an untitled acrylic painting by George Bireline of Raleigh, professor of design at N. C. State University's School of Design. NCNB, which maintains an art collection of its own, has also donated two other paintings, which will be placed later.

The first piece ever commissioned under the program in 1982 was a $5,000 painting, "Untitled No. 127-1983" by Clarence Morgan of Greenville. It hangs on the third floor of the Legislative Office building in Raleigh, in the entryway off Halifax Street Mall. Morgan, an associate professor of art at East Carolina University, is currently on a year's leave of absence to teach at the Minneapolic College of Art and Design.

KFor more information on the "Arts Works in State Buildings" program, interested persons are to contact Lida Lowrey, Visual Arts Coordinator, N. C. Arts Council, N. C. Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, telephone 73-2111.

Give a part of North Carolina for Christmas.

We've Preserved North Carolina's Past For The Future.

A Literary and Visual Celebration of North Carolina's Quadricentennial from BB&T.

We have captured the Tar Heel spirit and Old North State heritage of the past 400 years in this enchanting collection of poignant essays and over 250 color and black-and-white photographs from contemporary North Carolina writers and photographers.

This unique collection includes reflections of our state's heritage in the arts, business, athletics, education, cuisine, religion, agriculture and politics. An extensive time line traces the years from the Spanish exploration of the 1500's to the launching of Elizabeth II in the 1980's and draws the picture of our past.

For a proud future, give yourself or a friend a part of our past. It's a keepsake that will last forever. But our supplies won't, so order your copy now.

Hans Christian Andersen Returns As Best-Seller Author

JEWELS DONATED — This 61-carat, $250,000 diamond and ruby necklace was presented to the United Negro College Fund by R. R. Reynolds Industries, Inc. in Chicago recently. A company spokesman said Reynolds made its 1984 contribution in rubies in celebration of the 40th anniversary of the College Fund. An audience of 5,000 witnessed the presentation, made during the Chicago Ebony Fashion Fair.

By OLE DUUS
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Demark (AP) — A book meant for a little girl named Christine has brought storyteller Hans Christian Andersen back as a best-seller almost 110 years after his death.

With scissors and glue, Andersen and a friend, Adolph Drewsen, sat down to paste up, hand-color and write commentary in rhyme for more than 1,000 pictures from all kinds of publications of their day. The resulting book, a fairy tale, was a present for Christine Stampe, Drewsen's granddaughter, in 1859 on her third birthday.

Never before published, "Christine's Picture Book" was reproduced in facsimile on this past Oct. 25, to mark Christine's 125th birthday, in Andersen's native Denmark and in Britain.

It sold out in Denmark in less than a week. In Britain, the English-language version was named the book of the month by the trade journal The Bookseller, and it was featured on a children's television show.

The project was the idea of Alette Bardenfleth, lady-in-waiting to Denmark's Queen Margrethe II and widow of one of Christine's grandsons.

"Little Christine took good care of her book ... and now it was mine," Mrs. Bardenfleth said. "But was it really mine? What life could it have with me, considering that I have no children."

For others to share in "the soul that its creators put into it," she set up a foundation to receive royalties and use the funds to support research principally into Danish history, language and literature.

Andersen, a bachelor, was godfather to numerous of his friends' children and made several similar picture books for them. He dedicated the poem "Godfather's Picture Book" to the tradition that thrived in Denmark at a time when children's picture books were not printed.

Before "Christine's Picture Book," none of his picture books had been published. One Danish reviewer hailed it as the work of "a genuine friend of children who, with his visual imagination, his pictures and his paper silhouette art, created a warm contact with his dear godchildren."

It is not known how much time Andersen and Drewsen, a criminal court official, spent in compiling the book's more than 100 pages, but the pictures cut from Danish, German, French and English publications cover an 18-year period up to 1859.

Dr. Erik Dal, an Andersen specialist who wrote a foreword and commentary for the book, said it clearly was a labor of love for the men, both in their mid-50s at the time.

In Dal's assessment, Andersen's main contributions were in some of the rhymes and in five graceful and intricate paper silhouettes, an art he had mastered.

The storyteller did at least 1,500 of the silhouettes during his lifetime, but experts rate those in Christine's book among his best. One portraying a fantastic troll bears Drewsen's hand-written inscription: "This man was authored by H. C. Andersen, the friend of children."

The silhouettes of dancers, swans, storks and mermaids were seen by Andersen experts as reflections of his fairy-tale world. The book has striking picture combinations of butterflies and dung beetles, themes of two Andersen stories, and a page on China recalls his fairy tale "The Nightingale."

Otherwise, reviewers and experts looked in vain for anything more than an improvised compilation of pictures — wild animals, flowers, current events, foreign countries, religious themes and cartoons of the day — that would amuse a little girl and arouse her curiosity about the world.

One of the few attempts at instructional morals is a couplet beside pictures of two pigs, one wild, the other walking on two legs and decked out like a dandy:

"One wears nothing, the other walks about in golden frills. Yet, pigs they both are, and their mother was a sow."

In fact, Dal suspected that the middle-aged compilers had a bit of adult fun. He found them surprisingly irreverent for their time, noting picture constellations on such sacred cows as religion, maternal love and the manners of the 19th-century upper classes.

The art of making picture books was a theme of an Andersen fairy tale considered a self-portrait, much like the poem on the godfather who "could tell stories, so many and so long. He could cut pictures and draw pictures, and come Christmas he would take out a writing book with blank, white pages on which he glued pictures found in books and newspapers."

The story-teller actually did a picture book for himself at a mature age, but Dal said the biggest of all his picture projects was one he did late in life, after his fairy-tale pen had run dry.

GAPA To Hold Open House

The Greenville Area Preservation Association is holding an Old Fashioned Picture Party and Open House on Tuesday, November 17 beginning at 7 p.m.

Anyone having old photographs of Greenville buildings is urged to bring them to the Robert Lee Humber House, 117 W. 5th Street. Members of the East Carolina Camera Club will copy the photos and the originals will be returned to their owners during the party.

Old photographs of Greenville homes, stores, hotels, churches, schools and other buildings that have been destroyed or significantly altered are especially needed.d

Associaton members are editing Kate Ohno's 1982 architectural survey of Greenville and hope to include a number of these documentary photographs in the publication.

Additional information about this event is available from Diane Hankins at the Eastern Office of the N. C. Division of Archives and History, 752-7778. Refreshments will be served.

Folklore, Poetry Awards

Two Readings Of Play On Wednesday

The day before Thanksgiving is the date that playwright Anne Russell of Wilmington will be in Greenville for a reading of her play, "The Porch." The monthly third-Wednesday reading of plays are under the auspices of the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, headquartered in Greenville.

The first of two presentations will take place at noon Wednesday at The Best Lunch Theater Ever at the Greenville Musuem of Art, 802 Evans Street, and again at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Downstairs, Downstairs room in the basement of the Humber House, 117 West Fifth Street.

DR. ANNE RUSSELL . . . of Wilmington will have two reading performances of her first play, "The Porch," given in Greenville on Wednesday. The first reading will be at noon at the Greenville Museum of Art, with the second reading at 8 p.m. at the Humber House, 117 West Fifth Street, downtown Greenville.

Both performances are free and open to the public. Those attending the noon reading at the museum can bring along bag lunches. Refreshments will be served by the museum staff.

"The Porch" is the first play Anne Russell has written. She is the author of several books including "Wilmington: A Pictorial History;" a children's book, "Seabisquit, Wild Pony of the Outer Banks;" and a book of poetry, "Carolina Yacht Club Sketches." She has also written two one-hour documentaries for the UNC-Center for Public Television, "Remarkable Journey: The Albemarle" and "Remarkable Journey: The Cape Fear."

Ms. Russell began writing as a journalist with the Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel and late became the entertainment editor of the Raleigh News and Observer.

A graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill and Georgia State University, she holds a Ph.D. from the University of Hawaii. A Humanities Independent Scholar for Duke University, Ms. Russell has taught at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill and at Wilmington.

Audience discussion will follow the evening performance. The program "Human Values in New Works for the Stage," is coordinated by Dr. Ted Ellis, professor of contemporary drama at East Carolina University and is funded in part by a grant from the North Caroina Humanities Committee. The performance at the museum is partially funded by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

Literary Contest

NORFOLK, VA. — January 31 is the deadline postmark date for entries of manuscripts to be submitted to the 1985 Irene Leache Literary Contest. Now in its 67th year, the competition is one of the most prestigious in the Southeast and is open to residents of Virginia and North Carolina. Eligibility to enter extends to students and members of the armed forces living in the two states, and also to former winners now living elsewhere.

Entry is free. Pertinent regulations applicable to manuscript entries are:

• Entries must be typed on 8½ by 11 inch paper with the contest category specified in the upper right-hand corner of the page. Only one entry may be submitted in each of the five categories. All work must be unpublished and not offered curently in any other literary contest. No manuscripts will be returned.

• Prose entries — (short story and non-fiction). Submit one copy with the title typed at the top of the first page. The author's name must not appear on any page of the copy. The entry is to include a separate page which lists the title, contest category, and author's name, address and telephone number. Mail to: Mrs. Fred Martin, 1544 Cloncurry Road, Norfolk, Va., 23505.

• Poetry — No poem may exceed one page in length. Submit two copies of each entry; one copy unsigned, the other giving the contestant's name, address, telephone number, and the category of the entry. Mail to: Miss Beverley Dabney, 6148 Rolfe Avenue, Norfolk, Va., 23508.

Winners will be notified in March. A list of winners will be sent to all contesttats who enclose stamped, self-addressed envelopes with their entries. Prizes will be presented and winning entries read at the Spring Festival on March 29 at 3 p.m. at the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk. The ceremony is open to the public. Winning poems and a list of prose winners will be printed in a booklet to be distributed at the Spring festival.

The six categories and prizes being awarded are:

• Short story (1000 to 3000 words) — Anna Cogswell Wood Prize, $300; second prize, $200; third prize, $100.

• Non-fiction (1000-2000 words) — Fannie Rogers Curd Prize, $200; second prize $100.

• Traditional verse (blank verse, sonnet, and other conventional forms) — Virginia Lyne Tunstall prize, $100; second prize, $75; third prize, $50.

• Free verse — Helen Evans Ferguson prize, $100; second prize, $75; third prize, $50.

• Light verse — Sallie Shepherd prize, $75; second prize, $50.

Arizona Ensemble Performs In Mexico

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

GUANAJUATO, Mexico (AP) — The chamber ensemble Quintessence shaved down its reeds, took a few extra breaths and embarked on a concert tour of Mexico, which members hope will lead to more performances outside the borders of its home, Arizona.

As one of the official U.S. representatives to the 12th International Cervantes Festival which ended Nov. 3, the 4-year-old woodwind quintet performed in the Temple of San Diego, one of several 18th century churches in this rambling, historic mountain city 220 miles northwest of Mexico City.

"You need that first one to get others," said Quintessence manager Jill Marderness of the ensemble's first tour outside Arizona. "In that sense, it's a very big stepping stone for us."

Though not one of the most well-known foreign groups brought in for the festival, its opening concert in Mexico City and the two here drew large crowds and were enthusiastically received.

The quintet played a mix of classical and modern music, including "Three Impressions" by Eric Hughes, written for the group last summer, the Latin touches of "Air" from the "Petite Suite Dans le Style Ancien" by Mexican composer Manuel M. Ponce and "Pajarillo Barranqueno," a folk tune that drew rousing applause as their second encore.

Quintessence also will give concerts in the country's second-largest city, Guadalajara, and in the northwestern cities of Colima, Hermosillo and Guaymas.

Other members of the group, in residence at Grand Canyon College in Phoenix since the fall of 1983, are Ed Matthew, the artistic director who plays clarinet, bass clarinet and saxophone; Antonio Fernandez-Vinas, who plays horn; Ruth H. Christensen on flute and piccolo; and Nancy E. Clauter on oboe and English horn.

They have been together since 1980 and get along well, something of an accomplishment in itself for chamber groups, Ms. Marderness said. That and their success in Arizona — the quintet's schedule is so full they can't play full-time in symphonies — have to some degree put aspirations for the group ahead of individual ones, they said in interviews after a concert.

"We need to move the group up a few steps," said Ms. Christensen.

"We'll just keep plugging," said Matthew. "Arizona is just growing so much that the state will become more apparent on the cultural horizon. It will inrease the prestige of being an Arizona ensemble."

He said the stature of the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra, recently classified as a major orchestra by the American Symphony Orchestra League, and the Arizona Theater Company also increase the prestige of other arts groups in the state.

The altitude — 7,349 feet in Mexico City and 6,765 feet here — along with pollution in the capital and higher humidity than in Arizona posed some new challenges, particularly for the reed players.

"The air pressure is so different that it affects the vibration of the reed," said Ms. Clauter. She and Ms. Marderness said they compensated by shaving down the double reeds of their instruments. Making them thinner and more flexible makes them vibrate more easily.

Though the Quintessence players also teach and sometimes play in orchestras, they count not having a boss and not getting lost in the crowd among the joys of playing in a small group.

In an orchestra, "your contribution is so small sometimes," Matthew said. "It's too big, it gets way out of hand. Sometimes you could even not show up and they wouldn't know.

"And you don't have to deal with a conductor," he added.

Film Festival In London

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Two Hollywood hits, "Gremlins" and "The Thief of Baghdad," highlight the 28th London Film Festival, which began Nov. 15.

Part of an effort to broaden the festival's appeal, these films bear out festival director Derek Malcolm's belief that this year's event "is a celebration of the cinema, not a collection of art movies.

"Almost every type of film is in the festival," Malcolm said. "Whether you think that type is good or not is up to you."

The festival will mark the British premiere of "Gremlins," one of the biggest box office hits of the summer. "The Thief of Baghdad," a 1924 movie starring Douglas Fairbanks, will feature live orchestral accompaniment by the London Philharmonia of a new score composed by Carl Davis.

Fairbanks' son, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., who was 13 when the movie was made, will speak about his father in a Guardian lecture Nov. 29.

With over 140 films from 40 countries, the festival will feature the British bows of such American movies as Louis Malle's "Crackers," Stuart Rosenberg's "The Pope of Greenwich Village" and the low-budget films, "Old Enough," "Repo Man" and "The Brother From Another Planet."

Malcolm called the West German film "Heimat," directed by Edgar Reitz, "the centerpiece of the festival." About the life of a fictional German village called Schabbach over six decades, the film is 15 hours and 40 minutes long, and will be shown in five parts.

The festival marks the first year under the directorship of Malcolm.

The festival runs through Dec. 2.

Award Winning Film Being Aired

CHAPEL HILL — The 1981 Academy Award-winning film, "Violet," premieres over the nine channels of the UNC Center for Public Television at 10:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 26. The film is part of the series, "From the American Film Institute."

"Violet" is based on a short story, "The Ugliest Pilgrim" by UNC-Chapel Hill English professor Doris Betts.

The film tells the story of a young woman whose search for a miracle to cure a scar on her face takes her on a pilgrimage to meet a TV evangelist. She falls in love with a soldier during the trip, but perseveres in her plans to reach the evangelist.

Other awards accorded "Violet" are the CINE Golden Eagle Award and gold and special jury awards from the 1982 Houston International Film Festival.

Va. Opera's Tenth Year

NORFOLK, VA. - The Virginia Opera Association will mark its tenth anniversary with a holiday production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," directed by the composer, Gian Carlo Menotti, and conducted by Peter Mark, to be presented at the Norfolk Center Center.

The opera opens Friday, Nov. 30 with a matinee performance set for Sunday, Dec. 2 at 2:30 p.m. There will also be a Joy Fund performance at 4 p.m. Sunday to benefit needy children of the Greater Hampton Roads. Other center performances will be at 7:30 p.m. Dec.5, at 8 p.m. on Dec. 7, and at 2:30 p.m. Dec. 9.

Tickets are priced at $12, $10 and $7.50 each. The opera will be on tour in the Norfolk area — at Hampton University at 4:30 and 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 11, at 8 p.m. in Wise, Va. on Dec. 15, and at 8 p.m. Dec. 19 in Chesapeake, Va.

For more details, call 840/627-9245.

TUESDAY RECITAL — Japanese marimbist Keiko Abe will be in recital at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at Memorial Baptist Church. She will perform her own compositions as well as Japanese folk songs, children's songs, and pieces by composers worldwide.

Fialkowska Concert Monday

JANINA FIALKOWSKA . . . a young pianist, will be in performance in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus at 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 19. Tickets are priced at $8 and are available at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, or can be reserved by calling 757-6611, extension 266.

The East Carolina University Artists Series Committee continues its 1984-85 season with the appearance of pianist Janina Fialkowska, who will perform in a concert in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus on Monday, Nov. 19 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $8 and are available from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. The ticket office is open Monday-Friday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and can also be reserved and information on group rates obtained by calling 757-6611, ext. 266.

The daughter of a Canadian mother and a Polish father, Miss Fialkowska was born in Montreal, Canada and began studying piano with her mother at the age of five. She studied at the Ecole Musique Vincent d'Indy, and by the time she was 17 the University of Montreal awarded her bachelor and master degrees. In 1969 she won first prize in the Radio Canada National Talent Festival and then went to Paris to study. In 1970 she entered the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where she studied with Sascha Gorodnitzki and has since become his assistant.

Another major prize she received was first place at the First International Arthur Rubenstein Master Piano Competition held in Israel in 1974. Rubenstein, one of the judges, was so impressed by Miss Fialkowska's playing that he became her mentor, advisor and friend.

In the past several years, Miss Fialkowska has performed with numerous orchestras in Canada, Mexico, the United States, and in Europe and Israel. She has made two recordings for RCA Records — an all-Lizst record and an all-Chopin record.

Jazz Band Concert Today

A concert by the East Carolina University Jazz Band will be performed today at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus. The concert is free and open to the public on a first-come, first-served basis.

Scott Whitley, a graduate teaching assistant, directs the band, which will feature a program of jazz music and a number of performances by ECU student soloists.

A number of standard jazz favorites are included in the ten-composition program. Compositions to be played are: the Joe Bishop/Osser "Woodchoppers Ball;" the Carole King/Stapleton "Corazon;" Warren/Gurton's "There Will Never Be Another You;" and Don Menza's "Love Song," with Rich Stallard, soloist.

Also, the Billy Strayhorn/Duke Ellington/Johnny Mercer "Satin Doll;" Thad Jones' "A Child is Born" with Ed Thigen and Lewis Kendricks, soloists; Strayhorn's "Take The A Train" and "Chelsea Bridge," the latter featuring Wendy Pope, soloist; George Shearing's "Lullaby of Birdland;" and the Hanna/Barbera/Pemberon "The Flintstones' Theme."

Members of the ECU Jazz Band are: Don Edwards, Frank Heath, Kathleen Reed, McGregor McLance and Michele Howe, saxophones; Richard Stallard, Scott Ruedger, Charles Turner and Ledford Wilson, trombones; Richard Edwards, Wendy Pope, Roger Holmes, Lewis Kendricks and Patrick Merricks, trumpets; and Ed Thigpen, piano, Paul Wilson, guitar, Guy Cantonwine, bass, and John Brewington, drums, all of the rhythm section.

Student Recital

Greg Woods of Morganton, a student of David Lewis, will present his senior tuba concert at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday. The recital is free and open to the public.

He will be accompanied by pianist Dr. Rosemary Fischer, a faculty member of the School of Music, ECU.

For his program, Woods has chosen J. E. Barat's "Introduction and Dance;" Paul Hindemith's "Sonata for Tuba and Piano;" and Don Haddad's "Suite for Tuba."

Aycock Student Wins N. C. Music Award

WINS IN STRINGS . . . Jennifer Lucht, 14, a student at Aycock Junior High, is the first prize winner of the State Solo Festival in strings held Nov. 10 in Winston-Salem. This marks the second consecutive year she has won.

Jennifer Lucht, 14, was first prize winner of the State Solo Festival sponsored by the state unit of the American String Teachers Association on November 10 at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem.

The competition is open to violinists, violists, cellists, bassists, and guitartists between the ages of 12 and 23.

For the competition Jennifer, a cellist, performed "Suite No. 2" by Caix H'Hervelois, Scott Joplin's "Elite Syncopations;" and G. Goltermann's "Etude-Caprice." She was accompanied on piano by her father, Dr. Richard Lucht.

This is the second year she has won this competition.

Jennifer studies cello with Selma Gokcen and is a member of the Aycock Junior High School Orchestra and the Greenville Chamber Players. Last summer, she was a scholarship student at Brevard Music Center.

Special Program Today

A documentary, "Assault on Freedom," a film concerned with the subject of government interference in religious matters, is to be aired from 5 to 6 p.m. tonight over WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Grenville.

The Coalition for Religious Freedom is sponsoring the show.

BARITONE GETS TOP PRIZE

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Wroblewski, a Chicago baritone, was recently awarded first prize in the First Annual Rosa Ponselle International Vocal Competition.

In addition to the $7,500 prize, Wroblewski gets a recital appearance at the Rosa Ponselle Museum and a recital appearance at the Newport Music Festival.

Slim Short In TV Role

SLIM SHORT

Slim Short, co-host of WNCT-TV's morning show, Carolina Today, recently completed a brief appearance on the long-running CBS soap opera "As The World Turns." Accompanied by Carolina Today director/photographer Walter Hearne, Slim flew to New York City in early November to tape a segment of the show which will air on the CBS television network on Tuesday between 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. The show can be seen locally on WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville.

'Stage Door' Opening November 27

A successful play about stage-struck folks who keep Broadway theaters lighted is the next major production of the 1984-85 theatrical season for the East Carolina Playhouse. The play is "Stage Door," by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, which will open Tuesday, Nov. 27 and continue through Saturday, Dec. 1, with performances at 8:15 p.m. nightly in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus.

Reserved seats are currenly on sale at the McGinnis Theater Box Office, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets. The office is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Reservations can be made also by calling 757-6390.

"Stage Door" tells an alternately funny and touching story of the hopes and fears, successes and heartbreaks of young, eager, attractice actresses who make their headquarters at a theatrical boarding house in New York City's West Fifties. The bravely struggling debutantes of the theater who live at the Footlights Club are typical of the aspiring ingenues who descend on Broadway and the New York theater each season. For $12.50 a week, they get their meals and a room shared with two other would-be Lauren Bacalls.

Here they compare notes about their daily rounds of managers' offices, rest before matinees and evening performances when they're working, angle for dinner dates that will supplement their drab fare at the club, and plut on unsolicited "auditions" for a movie producer who pursues one of the girls.

In the main, "Stage Door" is a story of Terry Randall, who remains loyal to the theater, enduring a variety of hardships in order to learn her craft, and who finally gets a real part.

Other theater types of this zany account of show-biz life include a young left-wing playwright who loses his idealism in order to write for Hollywood; a beautiful young girl with enough "looks" for the big silver screen, but not enough talent for Broadway; and a wise-cracking actress who lands a role in a play she ultimately describes as "a combination of Ringling Brothers and the Passion Play."

"On the one hand, the emotions of these characters have been very easy for our students to identify with," said director Cedric Winchell. "So many of our students have similar goals for their own professional careers. But this show takes place in the 1940's, and that's where the challenge has arisen."

Devising the scenery for this production has presented another challenge — to the technical staff. Because the Playhouse season has been such a busy one, it has not been possible for Technical Director Leonard Darby to have access to the large stage of McGinnis Theater. So, the entire set for "Stage Door" has been designed by Robert Alpers so that it could be assembled in the scene shop and later broken down and, within a 24-hour period, be reassembled in McGinnis.

"Stage Door" will be the last Playhouse production until after the holiday season.

Robert Irwin To Perform Nov. 26

E. Robert Irwin will be featuring organ music from the 17th to the 20th centuries in an organ recital to be presented at 8:15 p.m. Monday, November 26 in Memorial Baptist Church. The recital is free and open to the public.

Irwin's program will include compositions by six composers. The program will open with three works by Dietrich Buxtehude (1637-1707) — the "Toccata in F Major," "Giacona in E Minor," and "Praeludium in D Major;" to be followed by "Verbum Supernum," by Nicolas de Grigny (1672-1703).

Next on the program is two pieces by J.S. Bach (1685-1750) — "Num Komm, der Heiden Heiland" and "In dir ist Freude.

After an intermission, Irwin's program will feature "Pastorale, Opus 19" by Caesar Franck (1822-1890); "Orgelstucke, Opus 59" by Max Reger (1873-1916); and "Trois Pieces" by Jehan Alain (1911-1940).

Dr. Irwin holds degrees from the Eastman School of Music and Oberlin Conservatory of Music. He has served as state chairman of the Organ/Harpsichord Division of the N. C. Music Teachers Association and is currently dean of the Eastern Carolina American Guild of Organists. He has performed as soloist with the North Carolina Symphony and with the Pennsylvania Orchestra. He has also been a recitalist in the U.S. and Europe, and is a church music and organ consultant to many churches in the Southeast.

In June, 1984, Irwin studied with Harald Vogel at a workshop on "Buxtehude and His Contemporaries" at Wellesley College in Boston, attended by organists worldwide. Irwin was one of five participants selected to play in the masterclass.

A Rambling Route To Stardom For Actor Steven Bauer

By FRANCISCO PEREZ RIVERA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For Steven Bauer, the road to stardom ran from Cuba to Florida to Hollywood to New York.

His latest Hollywood film is "Thief of Hearts," and he's starring off-Broadway in Lanford Wilson's "Balm in Gilead."

The 27-year-old actor says there's only one way to become a star, and that is "to focus all the elements of your energy in only one direction: getting there."

Bauer, who was born Esteban Echevarria Samson in Havana, came to the United States when he was 3 years old. His family settled in Florida.

"I studied humanities at the Miami-Dade Community College and that included philosophy, literature, history," he said in an interview. "At the time, I wasn't sure yet what my main interest was. But just one day I auditioned for a pl three seasons of 'Que Pasa,' I decided that enough was enough," he said. "I left Miami and moved to Los Angeles. And there the question of my name came up again and again. No matter where you go or how you look, your Latin name precedes you.

"The producers wouldn't even consider you for a 'regular' role if your family name is Echevarria," he continued. "So I changed my name to Steven Bauer and tried to be just another American actor. After all, I didn't even have an accent!"

Bauer soon got a one year contract with Columbia Television for 13 hours of the TV series "From Here to Eternity," opposite William Devane.

"After that I kept working on many TV shows, including 'She Is in the Army Now,' a TV Movie of the Week with Melanie Griffith. That movie changed my life," Bauer said.

He married Miss Griffith and signed on with her agent, Phyllis Carlyle.

"It's been luxury in my career," Bauer said about his agent. "She gave me the idea that I could create my destiny — that I didn't have to take whatever role I could get, that I should even refuse to work if that was important for my long range objectives."

Following their agent's advice, Bauer and Miss Griffith left Los Angeles and the TV world, settled in New York and stayed away from show business.

"I worked in New York delivering furniture while studying drama with Stella Adler. At the time Melanie and I tasted hunger. We made a minimum to survive and pay the rent," he said.

Then Bauer got the role as Al Pacino's sidekick on "Scarface."

"It was destiny, really," Bauer said. "I had to win the job over 1,000 applicants. But I did it and 'Scarface' put me on the map of the film world."

Almost immediately after that he got the lead in Paramount's "Thief of Hearts," in which he appears in steamy love scenes with co-star Barbara Williams.

"To do a nude scene is hard work," Bauer said. "It's one of the most difficult things because it has to be technically perfect and yet at the same time you have to retain passion and heat. You can't fake the heat, you have to convey passion. But at the same time you have to hit marks. It's quite a difficult thing."

Bauer plans to keep one foot in the theater and that's why he's in "Balm in Gilead." He also wants to co-star with his wife in a remake of "Born Yesterday." Miss Griffith currently stars in "Body Double."

Empire Celebrates 75th Anniversary

EMPLOYEES AT WORK ... Workers in the Empire Brush plant in Greenville make brushes on automated equipment. The plant is celebrating its 75th anniversary during 1984.

Photographed by TOMMY FORREST

ASSORTMENT OF PRODUCTS ... A small cross-section of products that are produced in the plant are shown, with a brush for almost every need.

Empire Brushes Inc. is celebrating its 75th anniversary during 1984.

Joseph Gantz emigrated from Austria-Hungary in 1905 and established the Jos. Gantz Brush Factory in New York in 1909, changing the name to Empire Brush Works in 1921, and to Empire Brushes Inc. in 1946.

By 1919 Gantz had outgrown the New York facility and decided to look for more space. After investigating several sites, Gantz decided to move the factory and his family to Port Chester, N.Y., with about 70 employees and 18 automatic brush machines.

After the death of Joseph Gantz in 1945, his eldest son, Jack, became president of the company. Jack Gantz continued the tradition of growth inspired by his father. Gantz expanded product lines in response to consumer needs, improving production methods, packaging and marketing.

In 1953, Empire acquired a woodworking factory in Meridian, Miss., which is now processing wood handles since the manufacture of wood blocks was discontinued by the company five years ago. Empire also acquired the American Brush Corp. in Chicago, a paint brush company which has since been sold.

In 1964 Empire began building a plant in Greenville which originally consisted of 55,000 square feet. In late 1979 a new office complex was completed, making the facility's size 375,000 square feet. The company then moved its executive offices to Greenville and hired an additional 40 persons.

After serving as general manager in Greenville for two years, Joseph Gantz became executive vice president in 1978 and is now company president.

During Gantz's tenure as executive vice president, he supervised the building of a 70,000-square-foot raw materials warehouse and new corporate offices in Greenville, the development of a new corporate management team and a formal marketing department.

Buying materials from around the world, Empire Brushes is a vertical-production operation. It makes broom handles, brush blocks, the brushes themselves, and does its own packaging and marketing. Empire Brushes manufactures over 1,000 products.

It was the first company to introduce long-lasting plastic bristles for household brushes and the first company with color-coded blister packaging. Empire pioneered development of a flagged plastic bristle, which led to production of the split-tip broom.

Currently, Empire Brushes has 425 employees, some of whom have been with the company for more than 20 years. It has over 5 million brushes in inventory, for dusting, sweeping, mopping, washing, painting, polishing, basting and grooming.

REMOVING THREAD INSERTS ... Linda Wilson removes thread inserts from floor-type brushes in the foam molding section of the plant.

AUTOMATED DEPARTMENT ... Brenda King packs brushes after they have been made on one of the many automated brush-making machines. The machines make the complete brush, and drop it into a box ready for shipping.

Archaeologists Record Slowly Eroding Monuments In Egypt

EDITOR'S NOTE —The work is tedious and the "discoveries" of the scholarly archaeologists are not the material of adventure movies such as "Raiders of the Lost Ark." But a team of Egyptologists has spent years recording the slowly eroding monuments of the pharaohs before they disappear completely.

By STEPHEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) — A team of archaeologists is recording with painstaking detail the art and architecture of ancient Egypt in the belief that the monuments of the pharaohs are being eroded by salty groundwater, armies of tourists and the winds and sands of time.

The University of Chicago's epigraphic survey was launched in 1924 by Egyptologist James Henry Breasted, who had written in 1894 of "the distressing amount of damage suffered by the monuments since the early recording expeditions had worked on them."

The temples of Luxor and Karnak, the Valley of the Kings and tombs of the queens and the lesser monuments of the ancient capital of Thebes (now Luxor), were "discovered" for the modern world by the 1798 military expedition of the French conquerer Napoleon.

For centuries, they had been plundered by thieves, defaced by vandals and lived in by squatters whose campfires blackened the brightly colored paintings and hieroglyphs. Only in the last 150 years have these monuments been cleared of the dirt and grime of centuries.

But stripped of their cloak of filth, the monuments stood exposed to wind and sand erosion and tourists eager to touch the delicate carvings and paintings more than a hundred centuries old.

Photos taken by Breasted in 1894 show about 40 different painted areas that today, 90 years later, no longer exist.

"Breasted knew, just looking at these monuments, that they were not immortal and that they would eventually deteriorate," says Dr. Lanny Bell, 43, director of the survey and Luxor's "Chicago House," a branch of the university's Oriental Institute here.

"Before they disappear, we want to have complete documentary records — so when they are gone, we will have an accurate picture of them."

The deterioration of the monuments has been hastened by the construction of the High Dam at Aswan, 102 miles up the Nile River. The resulting rise in the water table and in the humidity of the Nile Valley created by the enormous lake behind the dam are eating away at the monuments.

Egypt's soil is very salty because the area once was a seabed. Before the dam, the annual floods of the Nile would wash the salts out of the soil. But with the Nile's level now almost constant, the salts are concentrated at the surface of the groundwater.

The porous limestone monuments "suck" the groundwater into them. When the salts work their way to the surface of the stones, they dry, crack and flake off small bits of stone. Dew condensing on the surface of the stones also leaves behind corrosive salts.

The white salts and the moisture in the stones are visible up to about shoulder level on many of Luxor's monuments.

"The dam was the worst thing that could have happened to the monuments on the plain of the Nile Valley," Bell says.

The main work of the survey's nine archaeologists and artists is making accurate reproductions of the art and architecture of the monuments. In 60 years, the survey has produced 20 volumes.

The "Chicago method" for copying hieroglyphs and paintings involves photographing the original, drawing on the photo any features the camera did not record, then bleaching out the photo to leave a black-and-white line drawing.

The survey also is doing conservation and restoration work in an attempt to lengthen the life of the monuments.

Behind Luxor Temple, Egyptologist Ray Johnson, 31, of Jefferson, Maine, works in a large lot among thousands of stone carving fragments that have crumbled from the temple over the centuries.

Johnson can identify the period of a carving from the style of the sculptor. In five years, he has identified 1,300 fragments from the reign of King Tutankhamen, and has associated 700 of them with specific scenes in the temple. He has reconstructed one mural 5 feet high and 70 feet long.

"It's like 100 jigsaw puzzles all mixed up together, with 80 percent of the pieces missing," Johnson says. He numbers and photographs the fragments, shrinks the photos to one-fifth the original and attempts to fit the pieces into the puzzle back at his studio.

Johnson suspects that many of Luxor Temple's fragments were used to lay the foundation of the road that runs along the Nile. "If they hadn't carried off a lot of stones, we could have rebuilt the entire temple," he says.

Across the river on the west bank, Richard and Helena Jaeschke, both conservators and Egyptologists, recently cleaned the soot of squatters' fires from the paintings of one of the temples of Medinet Habu.

They used cotton-wool swabs less than a half inch in diameter, soaked in a five percent solution of nitric acid and attached to the ends of wooden sticks.

Working a 35-hour week, it took about nine weeks to do a room the size of a bathroom. For the entire six-room temple they used 250 pounds of cotton-wool and 36 quarts of 60 percent nitric acid.

The acid was applied with a twirling motion of the thumb and forefinger. Scrubbing would have ruined the ancient water base paint.

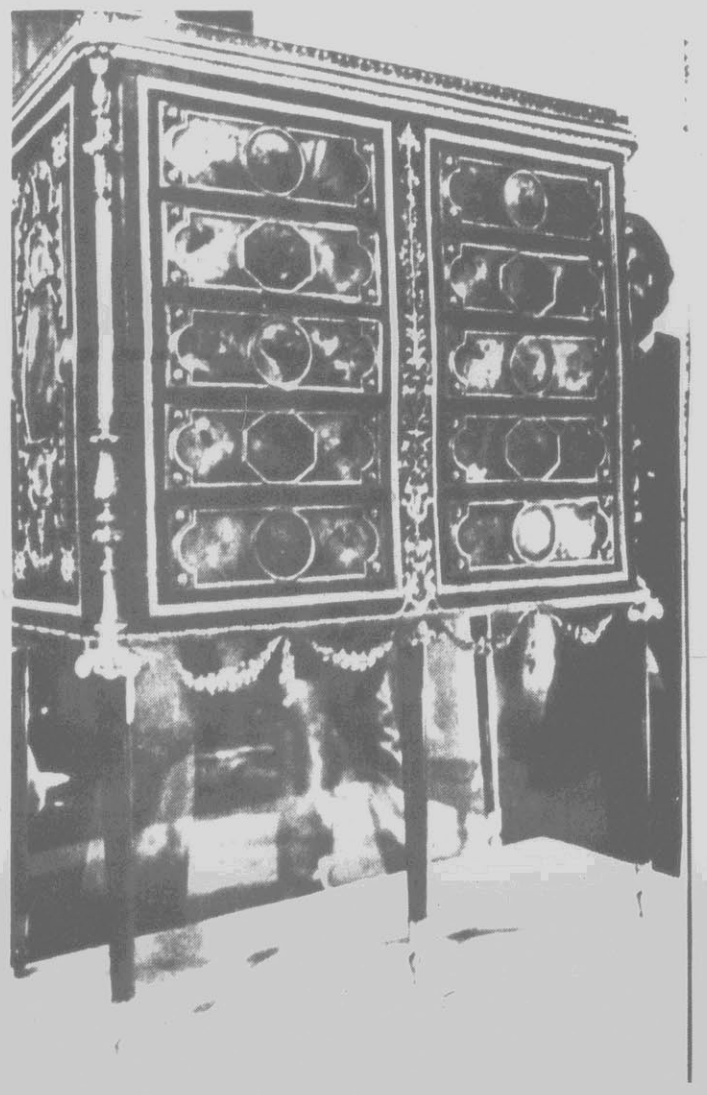

"Sure, it's tempting to scrub, but you just don't do that because you know you'll ruin the work," says Mrs. Jaeschke, 28, of Lymington, England.

Bell says one of the most significant finds of recent years was a series of references in hieroglyphs to Amenhotep III being the father of King Tut, rather than Akhenaton as previously believed.

Nor is the survey a project that will be wrapped up in the forseeable future. Bell estimates there is at least 200 years more work to be done. Sixty-five percent of the survey's $200,000 annual budget comes from the university, and the rest from the U.S. Government through the Smithsonian Institution.

But the government share will end in 1985.

"We'll run out of money before the work runs out," Bell says. "I just hope to be able to finish some definitive volumes during my custodianship here, but the work toward Breasted's original goal may never be finished."

Law Cuts Artifacts Thievery

By HANNY H. HAMDI
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The smuggling of antiques and ancient artifacts out of the country has been cut in half by a law aimed at preserving Egypt's national heritage, officials say.

The law, promulgated in September 1983, provides jail terms and stiff fines for those caught smuggling such items.

The law gave antique dealers one year to sell their current stock of items that were more than 100 years old with "historical or antiquarian value." Private collectors were given six months to register items with the police, after which anything found in their possession would be considered stolen.

Penalties for smuggling artifacts out of the country were upgraded from misdemeanors to felonies, punishable by a minimum fine of 5,000 Egyptian pounds (about $4,200) and prison terms to be decided by the judge.

Senior officers at the Antiquities Police declined to give details on the number of arrests since the law went into effect. But Brig. Ahmed Abu-Taleb, head of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Antiquities Police, estimated that smuggling and related offenses "had fallen by about 50 percent."

During the 19th and early 20th centuries, European and American archaeologists, as well as art dealers, collectors and ordinary travelers, carted off vast quantities of relics from the pharaonic era.

Among the most famous Egyptian treasures no longer in the country is the Rosetta Stone, a tablet with Greek and ancient Egyptian writing which held the key to deciphering Egyptian hieroglyphics. The stone, unearthed in the Nile Delta by Napoleon's troops in 1799, is now in the British Museum in London.

Kent Weeks, professor of Egyptology at the American University in Cairo, said the new restrictions were in recognition of the fact that trafficking in Egyptian and other ancient artifacts has developed into a multimillion-dollar business.

"In recent years, antiquities have become viewed as a commodity," Weeks said in an interview. "Art magazines in the United States now have what resemble stock market reports for antiquities."

Egyptian officials insist the new law is not aimed at hampering the work of reputable archaeologists who come here to explore the ruins of once great cities like Thebes, Memphis or Alexandria.

"I think it is a good thing" said Dr. Richard Verdery, director of the American Research Center, which provides logistical and other support for U.S. archaeologists here.

"Its purpose was to protect the national heritage, and I do not think it is too restrictive. It is a little more difficult to obtain permission (to dig and ship artifacts abroad for study). But if you go through the routine, it works out."

Weeks said the export restrictions could mean a reducton of damage to excavations by peasants and others who go to the sites when digs are suspended during hot summer months to pilfer objects for sale to tourists or dealers.

"A clay lamp from the Greco-Roman period may not fetch more than $25," Weeks said. "But the removal of an object from its site by thieves in search of more expensive items could cause a serious loss of information and damage to the site itself."

Antique dealers in Cairo, who in the past sold small pharaonic statues, lamps and other objects to tourists, do not share the archaeologist's view of the new restrictions

"The market is full of goods which are not being disposed of," said one Cairo dealer, whose spoke anonymously to avoid trouble with the police. "For example, there are thousands of small pottery lamps and little figurines which are now stored away or buried underground. If we were allowed to sell them, it would be a source of hard currency for our country."

One antique dealer admitted he and colleagues had stored antiques rather than dispose of them, hoping for either changes in the law or an opportunity to sell off the items at a profit.

He said many dealers were doing so despite the threat of seven years in jail and a minimum fine of 3,000 pounds (about $2,500) for failing to dispose of the stock in the one-year grace period that ended in September.

"We have been getting rid of what we can," he said. "But the rest is in storage until we can dispose of it."

Energy And Color Mark New York Show Of Van Gogh's Art

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A very special selection of paintings and drawings has been assembled for the exhibition, "Van Gogh in Arles," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art here through Dec. 30.

It's the first exhibition to be devoted to the 15 months of intense creativity that the painter lived through in Arles, in the south of France, from February 1888 to May 1889, and the 146 items in it have been assembled from public and private collections in the United States and Europe.

Many related works are shown here together for the first time since they were dispersed from the artist's studio; there are many very familiar works included, as well as others rarely if ever shown before in this country.

"It's unbelievable — one has to pinch oneself occasionally to believe they're all here. People have been so generous," said Ronald Pickvance, guest curator of the exhibition, at a preview.

Energy and color, especially the blues and golds of the south, radiate from the paintings van Gogh did in Arles: spring orchards and harvest fields, glowing landscapes and gardens, portraits and scenes of his house. The vibrant paintings are often complemented by pencil, pen and ink drawings the artist did of the same subjects — not as preliminary studies but as fully worked-out versions, alternative translations of the point of interest he'd first been inspired to work on.

In both paintings and drawings, the passionate rhythms of his brush and pen convey a controlled urgency with their variety of strokes, dots and dashes. One of the richest revelations of this exhibition comes from its wide selection of van Gogh's drawings, their expressiveness showing his mastery of line, as well as of color in the more often seen paintings.

The work done during this period in Arles is magnificent in itself. But in the context of van Gogh's life and in its influence on the history of art, it has further resonance. Van Gogh's artistic career only lasted 10 years and of these few years, the relatively brief period in Arles represents a dramatic peak of development, a turning point in his short life.

He'd gone south to Arles from Paris, at the age of 34, for various reasons, among them to find the strong sun, light and color he wanted to learn to work with, to express qualities he admired in Japanese prints and Delacroix's paintings. His work through these 15 months shows his reaction to his new environment, his bold experiments, the working out of ideas and problems.

At the Metropolitan, the works are grouped in roughly chronological order, galleries of paintings often alternating with those of drawings, tracing van Gogh's exploration of the countryside, the records he made of his surroundings, his house and its interiors, his friends and neighbors.

In the orchard paintings, the pinks and whites of spring predominate; there's the "Still Life with Coffeepot," a carefully finished exercise in strong color, orange, yellow and blue; a visit to the coast prompted the "Little Seascape," with its incomparable blue-green sea and sky, and several versions of the village street with cottages and flowering bushes. As the seasons progress, the painter's fields grow richer with harvest golds, and there are various depictions of "The Sower," exploring further color ranges.

Portraits include those of Joseph Roulin, the post-office worker, and, side-by-side for the first time since they left van Gogh's studio, the two portraits of "L'Arlesienne," the townswoman in her dark dress, seated at a table in front of a sharp citron yellow background. There are also paintings of the yellow house where van Gogh lived, of his bedroom, and of his chair with his pipe lying on it.

A selection of the paintings done during Gauguin's visit illuminates this important phase in van Gogh's 15 months in Arles. Works by both men are hung together, and show how these two very individual artists dealt with similar subjects and situations. Van Gogh had looked forward enormously to his friend's visit, but their temperamental and artistic differences brought the visit to a disastrous end with a quarrel, after which van Gogh cut off part of his own ear.

The last self portrait in the exhibition is the famous "Self Portrait With Bandaged Ear and Pipe" — a painting of such strength, lucidity and artistic control that it asserts, as van Gogh himself did in a letter, this is in no sense the work of a madman. It's a composed and unsentimental look at himself, in a painting using color as dramatically and masterfully as he ever used it — the complementary red, green, blue and orange.

Pickvance has prepared the informative catalog that accompanies the exhibition — it has a helpful abundance of quotations from the detailed letters van Gogh wrote to his brother, Theo, from Arles.

The exhibition was sponsored in part by Manufacturers Hanover Corp. and the Robert Wood Johnson Jr. Charitable Trust, and will be on show only at the Metropolitan Museum.

Stamps In The News

To prove that most U.S. postage stamps are planned and designed at least a year in advance, we are giving our readers a preview of a commemorative postal card scheduled for issuance in 1986. The card honors Italian-American patriot Francis Vigo.

During the American Revolution, Vigo provided George Rogers Clark with much-needed funding and supplies necessary to secure the Northwest Territory. In 1779, Vigo was imprisoned briefly by the British for aiding the colonists, but after his release, he continued to assist Clark.

The U.S. Postal service says the Vigo postal card will serve as a fitting tribute to one of America's first patriots, an individual whose devotion to the struggle for American freedom will be remembered for generations to come.

The new card features Colonel Vigo in the foreground, General Clark in the background. The inscription reads "Francis Vigo, Vincennes, 1779."

The Marshall Islands has released a block of four 20-cent stamps as part of its ongoing series devoted to its wildlife. Depicted are four dolphin species found in the beautiful Pacific waters.

The dolphins are, clockwise, from upper left to right: common dolphin, Risso's dolphin, bottlenose dolphin and spinner dolphin. The designs are taken from original paintings by Richard Ellis, one of the world's foremost artists on marine mammals. Ellis painted this set specifically for the stamp issue.

The Maldives has been going all out in its tourist promotion campaign and is becoming a major tourist center in the Indian Ocean. To help promote this campaign, the Maldives has issued a set of eight stamps featuring tourist delights awaiting visitors.

One stamp shows resort hotels with birds flying overhead. A second stamp depicts cruising on a four-masted schooner. The third illustrates snorkeling among the butterfly fish. The fourth shows windsurfing. The fifth pictures scuba diving in a school of fish. The sixth depicts night fishing with a full moon in the background. The seventh features big game fishing. The highest value depicts a turtle making its way to the sea.

These stamps are available at your local dealer.

Interest in South Korean stamps has perked up in recent years. We reported last week about a new U.S. souvenir card honoring PHILAKOREA '84, the international philatelic exhibition held in Seoul at the end of October. Shown on the souvenir card is a pair of stamps illustrating views of National Parks. The Korean stamp, issued in 1975, showed the rugged glory of Mount Sorak National Park.

If you would like to get more information on South Korean stamps, or you are interested in purchasing 101 South Korean airmails, commemoratives and definitives spanning 30 years, write to: International Stamp Collectors Society, P.O. Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408. The collection costs $14.95. Also included is a Korean stamp honoring the 1983 visit of President Ronald Reagan.

Don't Purchase Carpets By Price Alone

By The Associated Press

As a relatively permanent installation, wall-to-wall carpeting is a major home furnishings purchase. Familiarity with the factors that contribute to long wear and ease of maintenance can insure satisfaction over the long-term, says Howard Brodsky, chairman of the Retail Floor Coverings Institute.

Brodsky offers some tips to make selection of carpeting easier.

Consider home lighting when making your selection of color.

A carpet's color appears different depending on whether the source of light in a room is natural, incandescent or fluorescent. It is best to take a sample home before deciding. If that is impossible, at least take the sample to a window to examine its color by natural light.

It helps to bring along fabric samples and paint color chips when you go to the store to shop for carpet.

Opt for heavy-duty carpet in well-trafficked areas. The tighter the weave, the more durable the carpet. To check pile thickness, bend the sample backward. If the backing shows through, the carpet is probably not suited for heavy traffic. Some labels indicate if a particular carpet is appropriate for heavy-duty use; ask to see these carpet samples.

Don't buy carpet by price alone; consider the overall value of the investment. Comparison-shop brands within the same store and from store to store, looking for good construction at a good price per yard. Price alone is not a reliable reflection of durability and quality. Sometimes, because of color and style changes, real bargains are available in end-of-roll closeouts.

Select a retail store with salespeople who are trained to help you. Tell the interested salesperson the rooms you plan to carpet, the type of traffic expected, the number of years you expect the carpeting to last.

Check on warranties offered by the retailer, carpet mill and fiber producer. Five-year warranties on fiber wear are common.

Make sure you understand what the price includes. Usually a total price covers the cost of the carpeting, padding and installation. There should be no hidden factors or extra charges involved.

Careful room measurements are a must. Most dealers will send someone to your home to take accurate measurements that make it possible to determine how to cover the area with the smallest amount of yardage. Carpeting is usually sold in 12-foot-wide rolls, so most rooms need at least one seam. Ask how many seams are needed and where they will fall to avoid unpleasant surprises when your purchase has been installed.

Good padding adds comfort and extends the life of the carpet. Urethane and other synthetic padding comes in a variety of thicknesses and densities. Padding density determines both firmness and durability. The denser the padding, the longer it will last.

Keep carpeting clean once it is installed; wipe up spills promptly. Steam cleaning, when it is required, should be done by professionals. Home steam cleaning may not remove all the dampness, causing shrinking of backing and ultimately of the carpeting as well.

Carpet has long been used to lend comfort underfoot, to insulate and keep noise down and to unify space. But new patterns and methods of installation are now creating decorative excitement beyond the traditional uses.

"The latest installation techniques can make two rooms of one, create a feeling of greater space and add color to a room in brand new ways," says Marti Hill, fashion director of Galaxy Carpet Mills.

For example, one installation entails setting off an area of a large carpeted room with a different and distinctive carpet inset. This treatment, in effect, creates a room within a room. It can set apart a dining area, a conversation area, a place for study or a recreational area.

Another way of achieving the same effect if you already have solid-color wall-to-wall carpeting in place is to lay a patterned rug (such as an oriental) over the solid carpeting.

Installing a carpet border in a different color or pattern around the perimeter of a room or area can also have the effect of setting off and defining a specific area.

You may even want to extend your carpeting beyond the floor. Laying the carpet about six inches up the wall gives the impression of increased floor space. It also eliminates the need for baseboards and creates a neat and tidy look.

Carpeting as a wallcovering has also become a decorative possibility. "In a child's room, carpeted walls muffle sound and create a soft environment," Mrs. Hill points out.

Another idea is to install carpet on the diagonal. This method allows you to gently "lead" people from one room to another and might mean installation of two patterns or a pattern and a solid color in unusual and interesting configurations.

When selecting carpet, remember that the color you choose can have a profound effect on the atmosphere of the room.

Light colors tend to expand the room; dark colors make a room seem cozy and warmer.

When coordinating upholstered furniture and draperies with the carpet, try using a lighter or darker color tone in the carpet instead of an exact match. The contrast will create a more interesting look. Keep in mind that too much contrast might be disconcerting. Compare fabric and carpet swatches to judge the finished effect before committing yourself.

Patterned upholstered furniture and wallpaper generally demand solid-color carpeting. If you choose a highly patterned carpet, try to keep furniture and draperies simple.

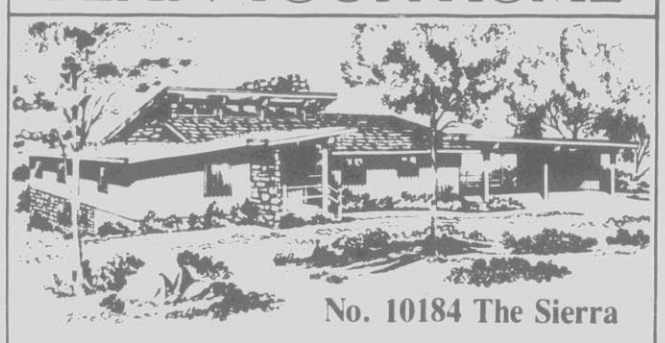

Subtle shades have more "staying power." A bold color that appeals in the showroom may become wearing after several months.

Carpet texture also creates a specific mood. Elegance is communicated with the smooth textures of dense velvet, saxonies and delicate tracery cut-and-loop textures.

Looser saxony weaves provide a more casual ambiance. Deeply sculptured cut-and-loop textures are informal and accentuate a rustic mood. Level-loop textures are more neutral in the impression they create and may be used comfortably in studies and in recreation rooms and summer homes. These carpets often are easiest to care for and prove serviceable in high-traffic areas.

You can also utilize color to hide tracked-in dirt. Deeper shades of brown, blue, green and red will help disguise dark soil. Light colors will mask dust, powdered concrete or light clay. Tweeded and pebbled textures also help hide dirt, according to Mrs. Hill.

No. 10184 The Sierra

Design Blends Shelter, Surroundings

by Jerry Bishop

For the family that needs shelter but loves nature, the Sierra, today's featured home achieves a pleasing unity of both. Indoors and outdoors mingle in the design, which is capable of virtual camouflage into a woodland setting.

Exposed stone, wood siding, and a cedar deck create exterior harmony. Inside, the emphasis is on air, space, and light.

Q. Is a tulip poplar the same thing as a yellow poplar? (G.R., Gaston County)

A. Yes, they are both common names for the same plant, Liriodendron tulipifera, one of the tallest trees in eastern America and one of the best selections for use in the landscape.

Q. What are the symptoms of fertilizer injury on houseplants? (T.B., Mocksville)

A. Symptoms of fertilizer injury on leaves can include dead leaf tips, dead areas along the margins of leaves, erratic brown spots, death of new growth, leaf drop, chlorosis (yellowing of leaves), leaf scorch or browning, and even death of the entire plant. Browning or scorch is usually more susceptible to certain plant diseases, especially root and stem rots. One of the most common problems with houseplants is fertilizer injury. Excessive rates of fertilizer can injure or even kill roots.

Q. Will kiwifruit grow in North Carolina? (S.C., Henderson)

A. Kiwifruit is classified as a subtropical plant and will not tolerate temperatures much lower than 10 degree fahrenheit. When the temperatures decline gradually over a number of weeks, hardened, mature vines have survived temperatures near 0 degrees fahrenheit with little damage. The long growing season required for fruit to mature can also limit production. A frost-free period of at least 220 days is required for adequate fruit ripening. In southeastern North Carolina, the vines can be expected to leaf in mid to late March and flower in mid May. Fruit should be sufficiently mature to harvest in late October or early November. Temperatures lower than 29 degrees fahrenheit between leafing and harvest can damage the leaves and fruit. In the eastern U.S. kiwifruit vines have fruited at Virginia Beach, Va., and at several locations in South Carolina. The kiwifruit is native to the Yangtze Valley in China. Most commercial plantings of kiwifruit are in New Zealand, which is where the fruit acquired its name, and in California.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

While a two-story structure gives you the most house for your money, the ranch or one-story dwelling continues to be the best seller. Why?

For one thing, the ranch is conducive to a pleasant exterior and most closely resembles what we used to dream of as a nice place to live. It affords a low, ground-hugging form easily adaptable to unusual design. There is more opportunity to create a relationship between the indoors and the outdoors. There is no stair-climbing. Sound control is fairly easy. So is maintenance. Access to the outside is easy in case of fire. And the resale value holds up over the years.

Sounds ideal, doesn't it? Not for everybody. A ranch requires more land. Also, more foundation, more roofing and more insulation. That means it costs more per square foot of living area than most other types of house. Which, in turn, means there is more space to be heated and cooled. While there is less or no stair-climbing, there is usually a lot more horizontal walking. And some people do not like bedrooms on the first floor.

All of which points up the fact that there are advantages and disadvantages to any style of house. It thus becomes a matter of which advantages and disadvantages are likely to affect us the most. When anyone asks which kind of house is best, no answer can be given until the questioner is asked a lot of questions and has given the answers.

If the house is to be built to order, how large is the lot and where is it located? How many persons are in the family and what are their ages? Can they all handle stairs? Will most of the maintenance work be done by someone in the family or by an outsider? Does anybody have any idiosyncrasies or hangups? And on and on.

When you buy an existing house — that is, one in which another family has lived — the same questions must be asked and answered. The difference in this case, however, is that everything is already there and, barring extensive remodeling, cannot be changed. Compromises must be made. The kitchen is ideal, but the living room isn't large enough. You would prefer that all the bedrooms be regular-sized, but one of them is in the attic and is rather small. You hoped the house would have a basement, but this one is built on a concrete slab. And one of the bathrooms isn't where you would prefer it.

In a two-story house, the perimeter that surrounds the space can be smaller than it would be in a ranch or split level with the same amount of interior square footage. The lot size, therefore, can be smaller, and so can the foundation and the roof. Heating and air conditioning would require shorter ducts and be less expensive. Plumbing also might be less expensive, because it can be stacked from floor to floor as well as back to back on the main floor. Space layout is more flexible in a two-story house. Bedrooms can usually be larger and more private. But there is always the stair-climbing problem, if it is a problem at all. Remember that many persons prefer the stairs because of the exercise it provides.

A split level eliminates much of the waste space in a basement by utilizing the area for habitable rooms or a garage. It separates the living and sleeping sections. It enables the architect to create a design which is distinctive. While it does not make as much use of land as a two-story house, it makes more use of it than a ranch. Originally conceived to make a house conform to a slope in the plot, it is now often used on flat land. Care must be taken not to wind up with cold-floor problems when bedrooms are located above a garage. Zoned controls are necessary for even temperatures at different levels.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — You can settle an argument about how the saltbox house got its name. My cousin says it is because it resembles an old salt container in Connecticut, but I maintain there never were any salt containers in that shape. What do you know about this?

A. — Enough to be sure the saltbox house did, in fact, get its name from the household salt containers of long ago. Anyone who has ever frequented antique shows has probably seen such containers and noted how closely they resemble the saltbox houses. Also, there are a number of publications about houses which authenticate the origin of the house shapes. However, the long, sloping roof in the rear had certain advantages in New England winters, among them the fact that the long roof side had no windows — a protection from the north winds of the area. If you ever see a real saltbox house, constructed many years ago, you will note the rear faces north and the front faces south.

Q. — I intend to seal the outside of my house shortly, since I know there are several places where there are openings. The house was painted last year, so there is no necessity to do it again. But I want to match the color of the sealant with the color of the house, which is a dark brown. Can I mix some coloring with the sealant or can I just paint over it and how long should I wait before doing so?

A. — Some sealants are not paintable. But you can buy a special paintable sealant. The painting can be done about an hour after application, although it is better to wait a few hours. Don't wait more than three days and follow the manufacturer's instructions as to how the paint should be applied. All this applies to both latex and oil-based paints, but with an oil-based paint test the sealant first on a piece of cardboard or scrap of wood. There is also a special sealant to use on masonry or concrete surfaces.

Thais Study Plan To Link Indian And Pacific Oceans

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Engineers are re-studying a proposal to use nuclear devices to blast out a canal across Thailand's Kra Isthmus, a long-dreamed-of waterway that would shorten ship travel between the Indian and Pacific Oceans.

On the drawing board here is a 60-mile canal across the isthmus near the border of Malaysia. Two centuries ago the rulers of what then was known as Siam studied the possibility of a canal farther north on the isthmus as a protection against invasion by the neighboring Burmese.

Currently, all ships, including oil tankers on the vital Japan-Middle East run, must swing around Singapore at the tip of the Southeast Asian Peninsula and pass through the narrow Strait of Malacca between Malaysia and the Indonesian island of Sumatra.

Proponents say the Kra canal would not only shorten the route by about 930 miles, or up to two days of sailing, but would transform the now jungled isthmus into a key economic hub of Southeast Asia, one of the world's fastest growth areas.

Envisioned is a canal zone studded with industrial estates, commercial enterprises and a major "Asiaport." The latest plans call for a two-lane canal, 1,200 to 1,500 feet wide and more than 100 feet deep, a passageway that could accommodate vessels of up to 300,000 tons.

The plan, which is the result off a 1973 study, places the western end of the canal at a point 18 miles north of the Thai city of Satun; the eastern end would be at the northern edge of the Lake of Songkhla, near the port of Songkhla.

Also under study is a propopsal for nuclear excavation, never before employed outside the Soviet Union.

Dr. Uwe Henke von Parpart, director of research for the U.S.-based Fusion Energy Foundation, estimates such a method would cost about $9 billion as compared to some $17.5 billion for conventional excavation.

"We're getting there," von Prapart said in an interview following a recent international conference here on the project, sponsored by Thailand's Ministry of Communication. The next step appears to be a debate on the proposal in the Thai Parliament.

Supporters for Kra include some Thai politicians, prominent bankers and businessmen as well as organizations like the Fusion Energy Foundation and prominent figures in Japan, which is seen as a crucial potential funder.

There are skeptics, however, who bring up the fact that a canal has been talked about for centuries but never started.

In 1793 the younger brother of Siam's King Rama I believed the canal would facilitate military operations against the threatening Burmese. The British surveyed the area in the mid-19th century and in 1882 count Ferdinand de Lesseps, the French builder of the Suez Canal, drew up plans for Kra.

But Franco-British colonial rivalry and various 20th century conflicts blocked construction of what has been dubbed "the ghost canal." A canal appeared to be headed for reality in 1973 following the completion of a detailed feasibility study, but a student-led revolution that year toppled the Thai government and shelved the canal plans.

The study by international consultants still forms, with some recent modification, the basic document of the pro-canal lobby and the focus of attack by critics.

Opponents question whether the country should sink billions into Kra when funds are urgently needed to combat rural poverty in this agricultural nation. They also warn of political consequences.

Dr. Zainuddin Bahari of Malaysia's Institute for Strategic and International Studies, told the recent conference the canal would inevitably arouse the interests of the superpowers which might move to control it in times of conflict, thus shattering hope for a zone of peace and neutrality in Southeast Asia.

Other arguments against it include what critics contend would be the degradation of the lush, tropical environment of the isthmus and its offshore waters, along with possible human hazards from a still experimental nuclear technology.

The current plan calls for a series of underground nuclear explosions which would rip out the trenches. This nuclear "digging" would take just two days and slash overall construction time by 40 percent over the 10 to 12 years needed for conventional excavation, according to von Prapart.

Von Prapart said research in the United States on peaceful nuclear explosions was stopped in the mid-1970s in face of popular protest, but that U.S. military testing has continued. He said there have been more than 250 uses nuclear devices in the Soviet Union over the past 10 to 15 years on projects such as canals, gas wells and river diversions. Some testing has also been done in India.

Von Prapart said residual radiation six months after the blasts — when the evacuated local population could return to the area — would not exceed the strict safety guidelines set down by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Besides economic arguments for the canal, which include an estimated $10 billion in annual revenue for the Thais, backers believe development stemming from Kra would help eliminate communist and Moslem separatist insurgencies in the region.

They also brush aside arguments that Kra would divert shipping from Singapore, which has benefited immensely from the recent heavy rate of passages around the peninsula. The Strait of Malacca, the backers say, is already crowded with some 50,000 ships a year and will be choked with traffic by the year 2000 if something is not done.

The Kra canal complex, their scenario goes, will not rob Singapore and Malaysia of income but rather would form with them a ring of enterprise benefitting the whole region.

Brazil Top Arms Supplier To Third World Nations

BY STAN LEHMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — From warplanes, missiles and tanks to hand grenades, pistols and bullets, Brazil's fast-growing and secretive arms industry is selling arms around the globe, tailoring them to suit the needs of the Third World.

According to arms-sales executive Luiz Augusto Bernardini Tancredi, Brazil has become the Third World's largest and the entire world's sixth-biggest manufacturer and exporter of conventional weapons.

"Brazil can equip the armed forces of the Third World with almost everything they need," Tancredi, marketing director of Bernardini S.A., a producer of tanks, said in an interview with The Associated Press. He cited the weapons' "simplicity, high quality, ruggedness and low price."

Neither the military government, which has been in power since 1964, nor the private and government-linked firms will identify Brazil's clients or sales figures. But they do acknowledge that 95 percent of Brazil's weapons are exported.

However, Roberto Godoy, a Brazilian journalist who specializes in the arms industry, estimates that sales this year could reach $3 billion, with weapons going to 33 countries in the Middle East, Latin America, Africa and Asia. He says about 400 firms, employing 100,000 people, produce armaments here.

Arms-industry executives refuse to discuss details of their business.

A top executive of Engesa, a company that builds tanks and armored vehicles, agreed to an interview but only on condition that he remain anonymous and told the reporter at the outset, "Don't ask me any questions about markets, prices, sales volumes or production figures, because I won't answer them."

He said Brazil's arms clients "demand that this type of information be kept secret."

Tancredi, of the tank firm, also was reluctant to discuss markets. But when a reporter noticed his briefcase had a "Baghdad Sheraton" sticker on it, he said, "Well, yes, we are trying to sell our new Tamoyo battle tank to Iraq."

He added that the Bernardini company also was trying to sell the 30-ton Tamoyo to other countries in the Middle East and Latin America but wouldn't name them.

The country's largest arms manufacturers are Engesa; Embraer, a government-controlled builder of military and commuter aircraft, and Avibras, which produces missiles, rockets and defense systems.

Brazil's most widely sold weapon, journalist Godoy said, is Engesa's Cascavel, a six-wheeled armored fighting vehicle which was first used in combat in 1977. That year, Libya, another of Brazil's important clients, used it during a border conflict with Egypt.

More recently, the Cascavel has been spotted in use by Iraq in its war against Iran.

According to the Brazilian newsmagazine Veja, 5,000 Cascavels are in use in more than 30 countries, among them Iraq, Libya, Ecuador, Chile, Cyprus, Colombia, Paraguay, Bolivia and Gabon.

China is also reportedly interested in a joint venture to build the Cascavel after successfully testing it in the Gobi Desert, the magazine said.

Engesa also produces the Urutu, an amphibious armored car, and the Jararaca armored scout car and is testing the Osorio, a 35-ton tank with production scheduled to begin in 1985.

Less secretive than Engesa is Embraer, whose main military aircraft are the Tucano, a turboprop trainer, and the AMX tactical jet fighter being built jointly with Italy's Aeritalia and Aermacchi.

Late last year, Embraer announced it signed a $181 million contract with Egupt for the sale of 120 Tucanos. The first 10 will be flown to Cairo later this year and the remaining 110 will be assembled in Egypt. Forty Tucanos are to be used by the Egyptian air force and the other 80 are to go to Iraq, the company says.

Embraer is also competing against British, Australian and Swiss aircraft companies to supply Britain's Royal Air Force with 155 of the trainers. Each Tucano costs $1.2 million.

Last May, the newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo reported that Honduras had purchased eight Tucanos outfitted for anti-guerrilla warfare. Embraer would only confirm that "several" Tucanos had been sold to that Central American country.

Embraer's president, Ozires Silva, said several countries have shown an interest in the AMX, due to enter production in both Brazil and Italy in 1987, but he refused to name them.

He said each AMX, which can be armed with Brazilian-made rockets, guns and air-to-air and air-to-ground missiles, will cost about $10 million.

Silva said the AMX is a "subsonic jet which is less expensive to operate in a land war than the supersonic jets that prevail on the market."

Avibras produces what local press reports have described as Brazil's most technologically advanced weapon — the radar and computer operated "Astros artillery saturation rocket system."

According to Veja, Iraq advanced the money to develop and produce the Astros and is using the system in its war against Iran.

Florida Holds Top Count In States With Executions

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — The electrocution of convicted murderer Timothy C. Palmes on Nov. 8 has left Florida with twice as many executions as any other state in recent years, and one third of the national total.

State officials say that lead means only that Florida was quicker than most states to approve a constitutional death penalty law, but some researchers say politics and the state's violent history play a part.

Palmes, convicted in the stabbing death of Jacksonville businessman James N. Stone, was the 10th man to die in Florida's electric chair since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. Nine of those executions have come in the past year, and two more are scheduled later this month.

Florida's closest rival is Louisiana, with five executions. Across the country 30 people have been executed in the past eight years.

"It's simple. Florida just got a head start on everybody else," said Vernon Bradford, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

Art Wiedinger, Gov. Bob Graham's legal counsel, points to the Legislature's promptness in approving a new statute after the Supreme Court overturned all such death penalty laws in 1972.

"Florida was the first state to reinstate the death penalty," he noted. The Legislature met in special session to approve the new law in December 1972, only months after the Supreme Court had thrown out the old law. Judges began sentencing convicted killers immediately.

When the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976, Florida's law was one of the first to be approved by the justices.

In contrast, Wiedinger said, many other states waited until after the 1976 decision to begin fashioning their laws.

But some researchers claim the special session called to approve the death penalty was a symptom of Florida and the South.

"Florida is part of the South, and the South is the only region that is moving ahead with executions," said Gail Rowland, assistant director of the non-profit Florida Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice.

After Florida and Louisiana, the states with the most executions are Texas with four and North Carolina, Virginia and Georgia with two each.

Ms. Rowland said politically Florida is very conservative and has a history of violence.

"From 1920 to 1922 Florida had more lynchings proportionate to the black population than in any other state," she said.

She also points to Florida state law, which allows judges to overrule a jury's recommendation for a life sentence, rather than death. She said 80 death row inmates had received a recommended life sentence from juries, only to have a judge condemn them to the electric chair.

University of Florida researcher Margaret Vandiver also said the current governor "is very committed to the death penalty."

She said the issue is more political in Florida because the law allows the governor, rather than a judge, to sign death warrants setting the date of the execution, putting a politician in the middle of the judicial process.

Courts here have condemned 222 people to death row, more than in any other state, and Graham already has signed death warrants on 92 of them.

Wiedinger said the governor has no intention of changing his attitude toward capital punishment.

Georgia Farm Features Turkeys Grown On Range

RAYLE, Ga. (AP) — A roundup at Callaway Farms never begins until after sundown because a turkey's journey to the Thanksgiving dinner table must start as a cool walk in the evening, not a stampede in the sunshine.

Turkeys at Callaway Farms are rounded up because they are raised on the range, not in pens.

"A bird on the range is a happier bird, and a happy bird will convert food (into turkey) faster and the cost of growing them is cheaper," said Herman Nation, who is in charge of the turkey program for owner Eugene M. Callaway.

A turkey's life is 20 to 22 weeks of eating and taking it easy. Callaway Farms buys 1-day-old birds and raises them in houses until they are about 7 weeks old and weigh about five pounds.

Then, about Easter, when the forecast calls for several days without rain, the birds are picked up and trucked to the range. They live there, in the sun or under the shade of Georgia pines, until they reach the desired weight in about 12 weeks.

Rain can destroy a flock until the birds become acclimated to the outdoor life. After that they enjoy the rain, playing in mud puddles for hours.

Finally they are herded slowly to a loader, a conveyer belt which gives them a free ride to the truck loaded with coops which will take them to market.

"It takes six people 1½ hours to load a truck with about 1,500 toms," Nation said.

The roundup, however, can start as early as morning, if the birds are widely scattered on the range. Most flocks are about 12,000 and spread over 18 to 20 acres.

"If you push them too hard and they get hot, they'll just sit down" and die of heat stress, said Malcolm Chafin, general manager of Callaway Farms.

To help prevent heat stress among the thousands of birds milling around the loader, workers bring in huge fans mounted on trucks to help keep the birds cool.

Shipping begins in July and continues to about Christmas. In February the first crop of day-old birds arrives and the cycle begins again.

Most of the birds are raised on land belonging to other farmers.

"We provide the bird and the feed and pay them a fee per bird per week. He has to furnish the land and the water," Chafin said.

A flock 10,000 to 12,000 birds will eat about 350 to 400 tons of feed while on the range, Chafin said. The feed is a mix of corn, other grains and vitamins made at the Callaway Farms.

After a year or two as a turkey range, any field becomes far richer cropland, Nation said.

The growers are very careful about choosing rangeland, Nation said. Land to be used in summer must be one-third wooded, to provide shade. It must be rolling, with no cuts, washouts or ravines.

"The birds will just pile into a ravine, one atop of each other, hundreds of them will smother," he said. "If you leave a wheelbarrow or a bucket in a turkey house, they will jump into it until it is full, smothering each other."

But despite the problems, business is good this year, after several very bad years, and Callaway Farms will make a profit on turkeys, Chafin said.

It's partly because avian flu forced growers in the Shenandoah Valley to destroy their flocks, including breeders, and because of increased demand for turkey.

"And as a rule, the country is eating 1 percent more turkey a year," Nation said. Part of the reason for that, Chafin said, is the increasing price of red meat.

In addition, turkey is finding its way into the American diet in more and more places, in addition to the traditional Thanksgiving dinner.

Grocery stores are offering turkey breasts, turkey drumsticks and turkey rolls.

Pamlico Plantation

Ever notice how wildlife picks the best places to live — the quiet places with lots of trees and clear water. We like those places, too, so we made a deal with some of the local inhabitants on a secluded cove of Broad Creek along the Pamlico River. If they'd share their home with us, we'd keep it clean and beautiful and add a few extras for people.

Extra's like a waterfront clubhouse and pool, tennis courts and trails for biking and jogging. We added a security guard and a marina. We built cedar-clad townhomes and sculpted homesites in the woodlands. And still, the ducks swim and deer roam. They approve. You will, too.

Pamlico Plantation near Washington, N.C. — secure, secluded, luxurious.
Homesites from $19,000.
Townhomes from $92,500.

A SPECIAL THANK YOU
From EMPIRE BRUSHES

75 YEARS OF QUALITY

...To Our Employees
...To Our Community

We are honored to celebrate our 20th year in Greenville and the 75th year of brushmaking. We feel great pride in the accomplishments of each and every Empire employee. They are the force who have made our achievements possible:

-Their honest, hard work and attention to quality make our products second to none.
-Their ideas, involvement, and commitment allow us to compete in the free marketplace of today.
-Their history of generosity, compassion, and community involvement is demonstrated again and again each year.

Every company is measured by the people who work for it, and the Empire family is beyond measure.

Thank you Greenville, Pitt County, and all Eastern North Carolina for supporting Empire Brushes since 1964. Empire was the first company to move into the Industrial Park. Together, we have grown in strength and numbers. A special thanks to all the state, county, and city leaders who worked to make Empire one of the largest employers in the area. We at Empire salute all the people of Eastern North Carolina for your generosity and outstanding hospitality.

HISTORY OF EMPIRE BRUSHES, INC.

In 1984, Empire Brushes, Inc. will be celebrating its 75th Anniversary. Thriving on the dedication of its owners, employees, and the loyalty of its customers, Empire Brushes, Inc. has become one of the largest privately owned brush companies in the world.

Joseph Gantz emigrated from Austria-Hungary in 1905 and established the Jos. Gantz Brush Factory in 1909 (name changed to Empire Brush Works in 1921 and to Empire Brushes, Inc. in 1946). He learned the brushmaking trade in Austria-Hungary, so when he started in New York City he knew how to manufacture brushes and what materials to use.

By 1919, he had outgrown the premises in New York City and decided to look for more space elsewhere. After investigation, he decided to move the factory and his family to Port Chester, New York, which is about 25 miles north of New York City. In 1931, with about 70 employees and 18 automatic brush machines, he planned to open a larger plant in the village of Port Chester. Maintaining two facilities, one on Pearl Street, the other on William and Smith Street, he made brooms, mops, and brushes for almost every need.

After the death of Joseph Gantz in 1945, his eldest son, Jack, became president of the company. Jack Gantz continued the tradition of growth inspired by his father. He expanded product lines in response to consumer needs; he improved production methods, packaging, and marketing.

In 1953, Empire acquired a woodworking factory in Meridian, Mississippi, which is now processing wood handles since the manufacture of wood blocks was discontinued five years ago. Empire also acquired the American Brush Corporation in Chicago, Illinois, a paint brush company it has since sold. In 1964, Empire began building a plant in Greenville, North Carolina, which originally consisted of 55,000 square feet and has grown into a 375,000 square-foot facility, largest in the brush industry.

Key to the success of Empire Brushes is a commitment to its workers. To help long-time employees reach retirement age and to give younger employees a chance to find new jobs, Empire Brushes allowed over 15 years for the transition from Port Chester to its new Greenville plant. Mr. Jack Gantz's son, Joseph, helped execute this transition.

After serving as general manager in Greenville for two years, Joseph Gantz became the company's Executive Vice President in 1978, and is now President of Empire Brushes. During his tenure as Executive Vice President, he supervised the building of a 70,000 square foot raw-materials warehouse and new Corporate Offices, the development of a new corporate management team and formal Marketing Department. Under his leadership, Empire has continued to improve merchandising techniques and to introduce a host of new products and new manufacturing methods.

Buying raw materials from around the world, Empire Brushes is a vertical-production operation. It makes broom handles, brush blocks, the brushes themselves, and does its own packaging and marketing. With over 1,000 products, Empire Brushes is an innovator in the brush industry because of its diverse manufacturing methods.

It was the first company to introduce long-lasting plastic bristles for household brushes and the first company with color-coded, blister packaging. Empire pioneered development of a flagged plastic bristle, which led to production of the split-tip broom. Perhaps Empire's greatest innovation is Sup'r Block™, a block made of plastic instead of wood. Sup'r Block™, is a molded structural foam so durable that it will not warp, crack, or split even under repeated dry and wet hot and cold cycles. This block is used on a variety of brushes and it is guaranteed for the life of the bristles. More recently, Empire has introduced Sup'r Brute™, a self-locking broom handle, and MEGA MOP™ with a swivel head, butterfly wringing action, and jumbo cellulose sponge.

Award-winning packaging is another key to success. Empire has won more than 25 awards, including the singular honor of participating in the American National Exhibition in Moscow, Russia in the summer of 1959. These awards are coveted honors because they come from retail-dominated committees that use sales power as a factor in judging the best packaging.

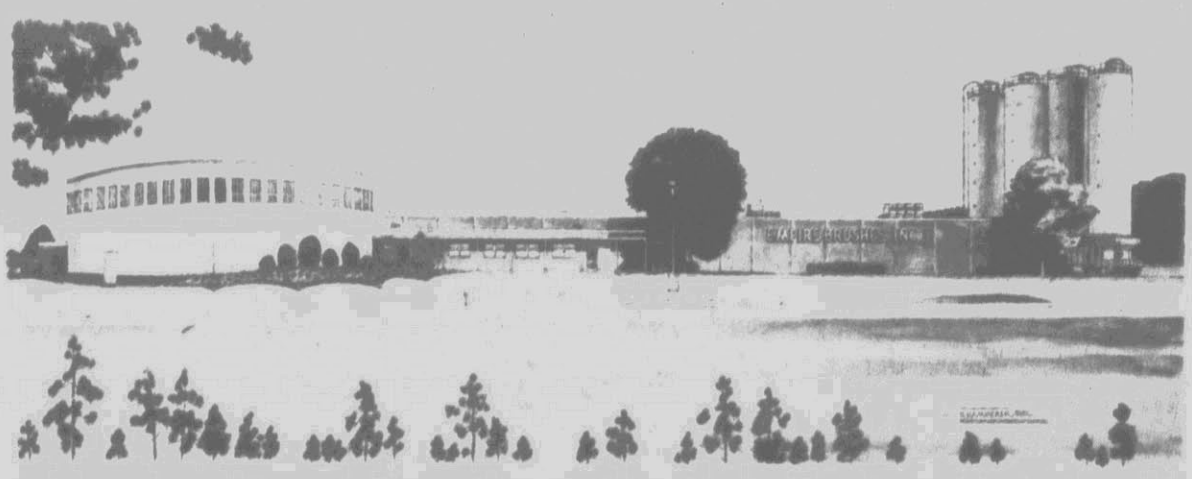

Currently, Empire Brushes has 425 employees, many of whom have been with the company for more than 15 years. It has over five million brushes in inventory for dusting, sweeping, mopping, washing, painting, polishing, basting, and grooming. Professional sales and service support guarantee our customers quality products at competitive prices.

With his son Joseph as President, Jack Gantz is now Board Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. Both father and son see the 80's as a time to expand their marketing research program and continue to produce new products. They plan to build on Empire's tradition as leader and innovator in the brush-making industry.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CLUMSY FEMALE HOUSE PAINTER PUT FORTY ROLLERS IN HER HAIR.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals Y

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

In Adopt-A-School Programs

Business Joins The Classroom

By ED McHALE
Associated Press Writer

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — Principal Margaret Townsend played a longshot after learning Bissonet Plaza Elementary was picked for an "Adopt-A-School" pilot program in New Orleans' suburbs.

She had a parent volunteer make a blind phone call to the president of Radio Shack at Tandy Corp. headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas. The parent got through to a top executive in the company's Education Division.

Letters and more phone calls followed.

"We're to meet soon to work out the details of adoption," Mrs. Townsend reported.

The Jefferson Parish schools are the latest to lock onto the notion that ideas which work for private industry can enrich public education.

Some imminently successful "Adopt-A-School" programs have been roaring along for years in places like Memphis and Nashville, Denver and San Diego.

In those places and elsewhere, businesses are sending their people into public schools to educate and entertain.

The White House also is involved through an agency called the President's Advisory Council on Private Sector Initiatives.

Adoptors in other places already include corporate heavyweights like Exxon and K mart, and such other enterprises as public utilities, banks, churches, civic clubs, professional football teams, shopping centers, newspapers, radio and television stations.

They're teaching children how to interview for jobs, how to cope with stress and how to perform simple banking transactions.

They're sponsoring talent shows, speech tournaments, art classes, computer fairs, musical performances, drama and essay contests.

One Tennessee-based department store chain held seminars to show Memphis school children that shoplifting not only is a crime, but it also adds to the price of goods. Another Memphis business lets every employee spend one hour of his or her work week at its adopted school.

The metropolitan Nashville program has been so successful that its 2½-year-old PENCIL program has 22 fulltime employees and 86 of its 119 public schools have adoptors.

A three-member country music group called Riders In The Sky adopted one Nashville elementary school which changed its nickname to the Bellshire Buckaroos in honor of the event. At Christmas, the band and students wore autographed bandanas and sang about "good guys" and "bad guys."

In Denver, "Adopt-A-School" in 1982-83 involved 22,025 students in 428 activities and over 2,000 volunteers who devoted 11,984 hours to special projects. Adoptors included the beer-making Adolph Coors Co., the Denver Broncos, the Rocky Mountain News and National Bureau of Standards.

In San Diego, adoptors include three U.S. Navy warships, several shore-based naval scientific installations, the city's symphony orchestra, the San Diego Chargers, and the John Robert Powers finishing-modeling schools. The 3-year-old San Diego program boasts 74 business-school partnerships.

They'll start modestly this midterm in Jefferson Parish, where six of 84 public schools are trying now to forge the first "Adopt-A-School" arrangements.

"Our object is not financial. We certainly won't refuse money, but we are not asking for it," said Julius Palone, one of just two parish school officials coordinating the Jefferson program.

"We want the use of their expertise. We want to use their successful methods in our public schools."

Palone and Joe Miller, public information officer for the school system, picked the six Jefferson schools that would participate and told their principals to go shopping for sponsors.

The Jefferson trailblazers are one high school, one middle school and one elementary school on each bank of the Mississippi River.

"When you want to win a race, you enter a thoroughbred," explained Palone. "We picked schools with receptive principals and active parents' groups.

"Those are two success factors to begin with. Add to that the success factor of a successful business and you've got a winner."

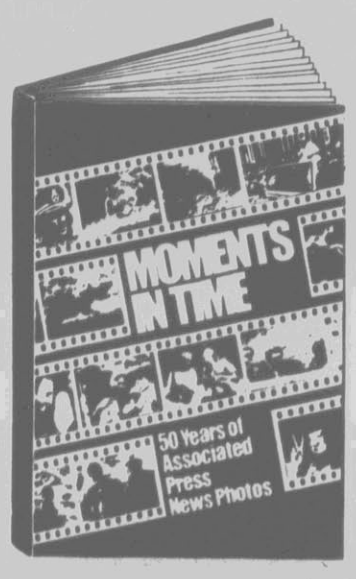

MESSAGE — Principal Margaret Townsend and a few of her students pose in front of their school in Metaire, La. Bissonet Plaza Elementary School recently was picked for an "adopt-a-school" pilot project in which businesses "adopt" the school and then lend expertise to the school's classroom instruction. Know What It Is To Feed A Family

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A confusing condition pertaining to your service to others can arise in the daytime and needs to be handled with care, but later you find that a cooperative person will be able to help.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Small duties need handling in the morning. Take time to analyze your philosophy of living and clarify it.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some recreational plans may need revision early and then you can make arrangements for the new week's activities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The morning may be filled with little irritations at home, so keep your cool, and later you can go out for charming recreation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Do some studying in the morning instead of paying visits to others, and gain greater knowledge.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Forget those practical problems in the morning, and then you can be with friends who are helpful.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get rid of some annoying situation in your life and then plan monetary activity for the new week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Many small situations arise during the daytime which need careful handling and tonight you can have conditions more as you like.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Avoid your friends during the day since they can be disappointing to you. Get your appearance improved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Avoid the public eye during the day and save your reputation, but later good friends make the evening a happy one for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Any new ideas should be well analyzed since there are bound to be errors in them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have detailed work to get into early in the day, so get it behind you quickly, and enjoy the day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Postpone a meeting with an associate since you are both apt to be confused today. Keep some promise you have made.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have to be carefully taught since there is tendency to daydream too much here and get concerned with irrelevant facts. However, upon reaching adulthood your progeny will do well in any work connected with solving the problems of others, being very cooperative and kind.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOV. 19, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day to forget past mistakes where other persons are concerned and to seek out those persons who are willing to coordinate their efforts with yours and come to an agreement.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Steer clear of some higher-up who is too demanding, and be with new and interesting contacts who have fine ideas for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Precision and neatness in your work should be paramount today so that you can make the greatest progress. Avoid a jealous person.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put into action that particular talent that is yours and get fine results. Come to a true understanding with your mate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Although a home tie has different views from your own, reach a point of understanding. Listen carefully.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) An ally could have a fine new plan that should be listened to since it is apt to have great merit. Be more willing to let go of the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) See what a progressive advisor has to suggest so that you can get out of that impasse in monetary matters. Cut down on expenses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Pursue personal aims and put aside practical affairs for awhile. Let your friendships include the influential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make that unusual plan of activity that can gain you your aims, but keep it confidential for right results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Think of companions with whom you have the most fun and plan to be with them more often in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact a clever bigwig who can help you to improve your status in the community in which you reside.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study those activities you want to get into in the near future that can help you to expand and study all the data possible.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Recall something that has proved pleasant in the past and use it again with your mate and find greater happiness together.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will possess a warm and kind nature so slant the education along lines that are humanitarian and pretty much out of the norm of regular scholastic studies. One to whom a family unit is very important and will be most romantic and understanding with the mate.

Medical Specialists Debate Effect Of Private Takeover Of Hospitals

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Growing competition for business threatens the nation's teaching hospitals, but private takeover of public institutions will hurt more than help, a medical specialist says.

The head of a private company controlling more than 400 hospitals says, however, that private takeover can solve many of the financial problems that teaching hospitals face.

Donald S. MacNaughton, chief executive officer of Hospital Corporation of America, and Dr. Arnold S. Relman, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, offered those opposing views at a medical conference in Memphis.

If teaching hospitals are run strictly on the principles of big business, Relman said, the main emphasis will be making money rather than training doctors.

"I think it's oil and water," he said.

But MacNaughton told medical specialists gathered for a forum sponsored by the University of Tennessee that sound business practices will help keep the teaching hospitals from going broke.

"The plain fact of it is, most of them are not well run," he said.

Relman said the nation's 430 teaching hospitals, many of which are affiliated with medical schools, are being hit especially hard by attempts to cut the $400 billion spent annually in the United States for medical care.

If private hospital corporations want to help, he said, they can offer unrestricted grants to teaching institutions and lobby Congress to help keep those hospitals solvent, he said.

"I don't see (private) industry as a whole taking on itself the total costs of medical education and indigent care and standby services and the unreimbursed cost of research that teaching hospitals now have," he said.

MacNaughton said, however, that he expects more and more teaching hospitals to come under the management of investor-owned companies.

And he disagreed that those hospitals will lean too heavily toward making a profit.

"For people's capitalism to work," he said, "the key element is that the enterprise must be successful, and if the enterprise is a hospital, success means serving the needs of the community."

Private hospital corporations are part of an "evolutionary process" in medical care and "are here to stay," he said.

Relman said teaching hospitals have "a heavy burden of unreimbursed care," must have the latest equipment, pay for large staffs of medical residents and other trainees and care for patients with the most difficult diseases or injuries.

"They take care of the sickest patients," he said.

In the past, a hospital would file a bill for treatment and a patient's insurance company or a government program would pay it, Relman said.

Now, however, insurance companies and government programs are setting up schedules for how much they will pay for various medical care, regardless of what a hospital says its actual expenses are.

"That clearly puts the premium on cost containment, clearly puts the highly technological, relatively expensive teaching hospitals at a great disadvantage," Relman said.

Relman said he also expects Medicare to restrict the charges passed along in patients' bills to cover the higher cost of salaries for the large staffs at teaching hospitals.

"There's talk in Congress now that the third parties should not pay for graduate medical education," he said.

Relman said those moves to hold down medical costs will make teaching hospitals compete more directly with other hospitals, ones that can maintain a much lower overhead.

For teaching hospitals to stay in business and care for patients needing heart transplants or other complicated surgery, they must also get patients needing ordinary care, he said.

But with insurance companies and government programs going strictly by cost, he said, patients needing routine care will be channeled away from the teaching hospitals.

"If they do that, the teaching hospitals will die," Relman said.

MacNaughton said all competiton isn't bad, however, even for teaching hospitals.

Hospitals that are a part of an organization like his, which has hospitals in 43 states, are able to work with other institutions to reduce duplication and cut costs, he said.

"Hospitals that are part of a system can specialize in identifiable services, eliminate duplication and more easily safeguard the interest of the patient and the referring physician," he said.

THE TALE OF THE TWO OF HEARTS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

The Two of Hearts was perhaps small in stature, but he was certainly huge in spirit. As he discoursed on his favorite pastime, everyone within earshot paid rapt attention.

"I don't know why you keep making a fuss of all those honor cards. Anyone can win tricks if they are large and powerful. The true test of a bridge player lies in the way he handles us—the insignificant spot cards. Therein lies the real beauty of the game.

"Now I don't like to boast. I am offering this hand simply as an example of what I mean. That it was the crucial hand in a major team championship is purely incidental.

"You might like to dwell a while on the sensible auction conducted by North-South to reach an excellent contract, but in the words of that great Dane—I forget the name for the moment—'the play's the thing.'

"I was in the possession of one of the most imaginative players I have come across in many a year. Against four hearts, his partner led the two of spades—the obvious lead, considering the auction. Declarer made the good play of the king from dummy, and my owner took the ace. He paused to take stock.

"From West's opening lead, declarer obviously held three spades. Unless trumps were drawn, declarer would ruff his spade loser on the table. However, if my star tried to prevent the ruff by leading the ace of hearts and another, declarer would quickly use the board's club suit to take care of his spade losers. What to do?

"The solution was most elegant—to the second trick I was led! Declarer was helpless. If he went after the clubs for a spade discard, West would ruff the third club for the setting trick. If he played another spade, we would win, cash the ace of trumps and a third spade for down one. A masterful defense!"

Send any questions for this column to Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Complete Bridge," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged to be the best received.

Budget Clash

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Students and police clashed during a protest over the university budget and negotiations with international bankers. Authorities said there were arrests, but gave no figure.

The trouble occurred near the campus of the Autonomous University of Santo Domingo, the largest public institution of higher learning in the Caribbean island republic.

Authorities used tear gas, and some demonstrators threw stones at police, but no serious injuries were reported. School officials closed the university, which has an enrollment of about 70,000, for the rest of the day.

Claim Reserved

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Foreign Minister Fernando Moran says Spain's entry into the Common Market will not mean yielding its claim to Gibraltar, the British outpost on Spain's Mediterranean coast.

Moran told reporters that Spain's claim to Gibraltar "is a national cause, shared by all Spaniards."

Russians Finding Success With Tractor Sold In U.S.A.

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

PICAYUNE, Miss. (AP) — For the past decade, the men from Minsk and their cousins in other Russian towns have been cranking out a tough, cheap tractor that is winning over a growing number of American farmers.

The tractor, known as the Belarus, was introduced in this country in 1974 and first sold through a dealership in Picayune in southwest Mississippi later that year.

Despite hot-and-cold relations between the two superpowers over the past 10 years, the tractor shipments have gone off pretty much on schedule. The receiving firm for Belarus in America, headquartered in Milwaukee with a branch in Slidell, La., now serves 145 dealerships scattered around the country.

"People like the price and, believe it or not, parts are easier to get than for a lot of American tractors," said Donald Famularo, who has a Belarus dealership in Picayune.

Famularo said his satisfaction with a model he purchased several years ago prompted him and a partner to begin selling the tractors.

"They're selling real good right now," he said.

The tractor has had its problems, however, with some farmers not overly excited about plowing up American soil with equipment made in a Communist country.

Not long after the arrival of the first tractor, fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntyre called for a rally in Picayune to protest efforts to market the tractor. The effort fell short, however, because it occurred the same day as a hurricane.

"Really, they've caught on pretty good and you don't see resistance much any more," said Ronnie Ryals, manager of the Belarus Machinery Inc. branch in Slidell. "We are starting to get a lot of repeat business."

With the smallest tractor being imported rated at 31 horsepower, the machines are primarily for larger farming operations.

The tractors arrive with a coat of protective orange paint. Before being shipped to dealers, they are painted red and colorful decals are added.

Ryals said that in addition to the price, which is below that of comparable American models, "they don't change these tractors much. They keep on making the same style over and over, so it's easy to keep up with parts."

Lee Graves, president and manager of Tractor Center in Slidell, the third oldest Belarus dealer in the country, said in the past his company had sold only five to 10 of the tractors annually.

"This year we've sold about 30 of them," he said. "It seems they have just caught on. We had a sale and we sold a bunch of them to some Frenchmen down in Thibodaux and Lockport" in south Louisiana.

Graves said that while some potential customers objected to the tractors, 80 percent of the shopping farmers had no problem with its origin.

He said a firm in Mexico was importing parts from the Russian manufacturer and putting together a tractor that is marketed under a different name" from Belarus.

Institute Providing Study On Industries

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce wanted to know what kinds of industry the city should recruit, it turned to experts at the Urban Institute at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

"We did an elaborate study to find those industries most compatible with Charlotte based on...factors like transportation and the labor force," said institute director James W. Clay.

"We asked which industries were in the best interests of the community, whether their wage levels were high enough, and targeting the existing population base."

The 1983 study, which cost $15,000, concluded the city should focus on printing, chemical, biomedical, plastics, fabricated metal and computer firms.

"It's been quite successful," said chamber research manager Tony Crumbley. "But I think even more successful was the (Charlotte-Mecklenburg) atlas they produced for us. It's been a phenomenal resource for us. No other city in the nation has an economic atlas like this."

Clay said the projects were just two examples of the increasing involvement of universities in urban problems.

"When the land grand institutions were established, we were an agrarian society, and they were a good product for the needs of the day," he said. "Now we see more and more urban universities with a service mission to the problems of the urban community."

The institute, founded in 1965, has brought the expertise of UNC-C's 1,400 faculty to bear on hundreds of research projects for local governments, private companies and "quasi-public groups," said Clay.

Gaston County needed to find out which areas should be zoned for industrial use, so the institute provided a study on water and sewer lines. Cabarrus County needed similar resarch on water bonds.

Recently, the institute has been heavily involved in planning University City, a development near UNC-C with a planned community, research park and hospital.

The institute's Piedmont Waste Exchange sets up contacts between more than 100 companies producing waste and thousands of other firms that can use the material. One company that produces 5,000 gallons of waste hydrochloric acid now sells it for $70,000 a year instead of paying to dispose of it.

The waste project, funded by state and local governments and some private firms, is aimed at small or medium-sized companies that can't afford their own recycling.

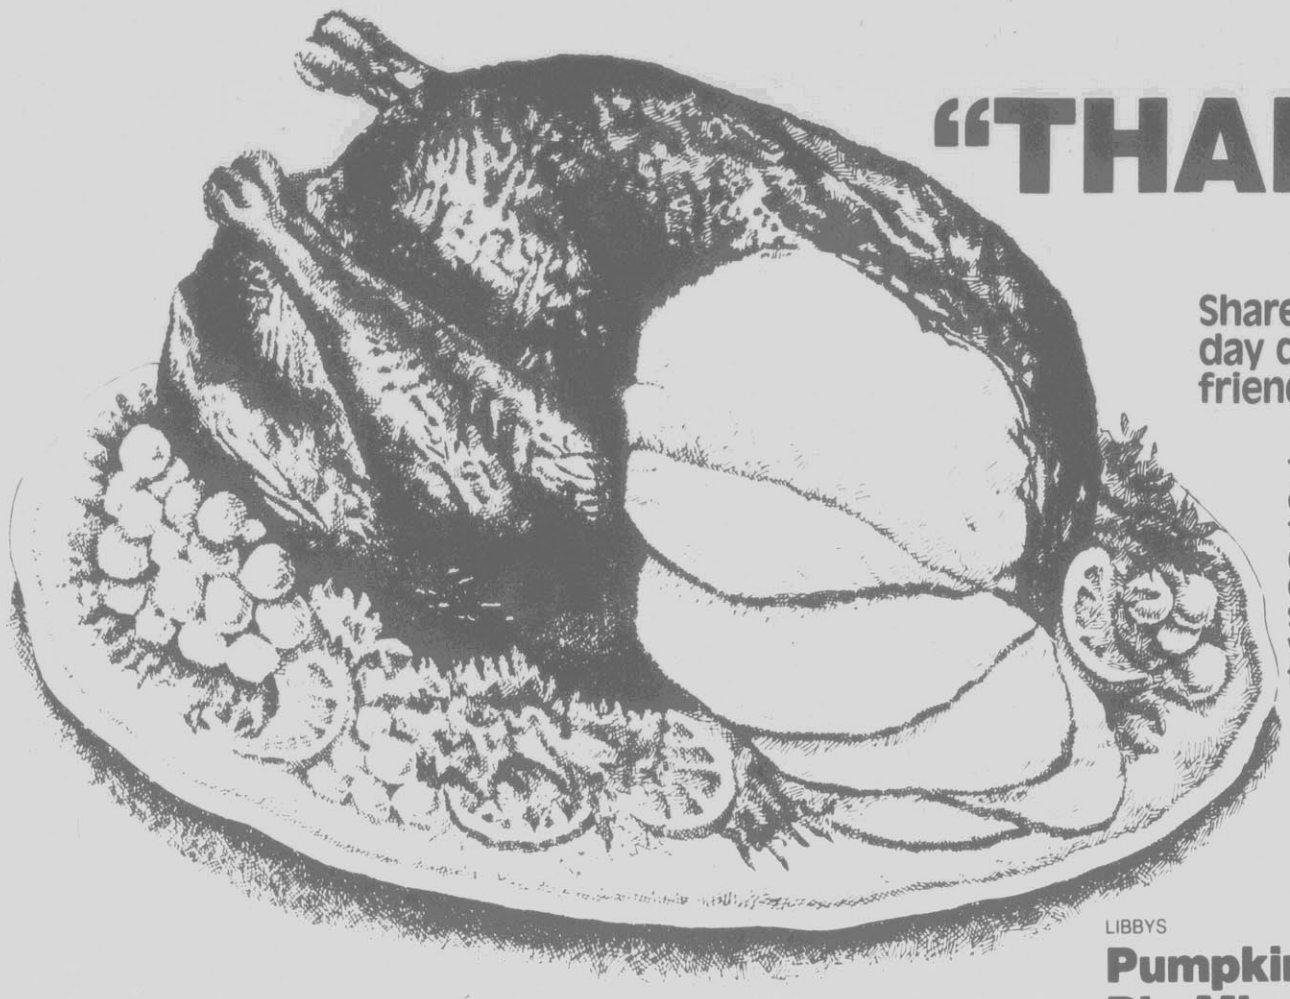

The institute also has a public opinion survey center that conducts about 20 surveys a year for public and private clients, including United Way agencies and local governments. The center polls 800 people for $75 per question and analyzes the results.

Another project lists all the apartment units in Charlotte on computer and in booklet form. Yet another explores teleconferencing, and one conference set up last winter linked audiences and panelists in 25 cities around the nation for discussions on technology's impact on the public sector. The institute is also planning a December conference on robotics and factories of the future.

The state provides about 25 percent of the institute's budget of about $1 million a year.

"For every state dollar we spend, we earn three or four others selling services and contracts," said Clay.

'Fatal Vision' Is A Bit Shortsighted

By Robert DiMatteo

Although "Mistral's Daughter" and "Ellis Island" may have misled you, a good miniseries is not a contradiction in terms. Proof of this is "Fatal Vision" (NBC, Nov. 18, 19). Based on Joe McGinniss's "In Cold Blood"-style "non-fiction novel," "Fatal Vision" follows the decade-long, tortoiselike progression of a sensational murder case involving a former Green Beret physician accused of killing his wife and daughters. The real-life Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, while still maintaining his innocence, is presently sequestered in a Texas prison — a result of his once-loyal father-in-law's obsessive dedication to bringing MacDonald to trial.

The NBC docudrama chronicles that dedication, giving us two chilling versions of the murder scene along the way. First, we see MacDonald's account, in which a Charles Manson-like gang of hippies descend on the doctor and his family, leaving only MacDonald alive. Later, we witness the prosecution's and father-in-law's version, in which a crazed MacDonald himself goes on a bloody rampage against his family. The movie sides with the prosecution. You don't cast good, steadfast Karl Malden to play the avenging father-in-law (and Eva Marie Saint as his wife) unless you want to guarantee viewer identification. The curiosity of the movie is that it still doesn't quite clinch the case. Partly, this is due to a simplification of the evidence, and partly it's a tribute to Gary Cole's non-judgmental performance as MacDonald. To the end, Cole's MacDonald remains an ambiguous, slippery figure — a handsome, charismatic, intelligent man who may be a psychopath. In addition, no motive for the murders has been clearly established. Stylistically, NBC's "Fatal Vision" is not quite first-rate, sometimes mistaking plodding details for dramatic realism. But the case is fascinating enough to makeup the difference.

Meanwhile, ABC is banking on star appeal to attract us. There's "Stripes" (Nov. 18) with Bill Murray being deadpan, and "Arthur" (Nov. 22), with Dudley Moore being bibulous.

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: Can you tell me why Lauren Tewes did not return to "The Love Boat" this season. Does she have other plans? I think the producers made an excellent replacement selection with Patricia Klous. What's her background? — JOHN ANDREWS

To John: Miss Tewes' reported demands for a salary increase apparently didn't sit well with Spelling-Cramer Productions, and they opted to leave port without her this season. Lauren is now making the rounds in the guest-star circuit. Enter Patricia Klous, who guest starred on the series when the boat set sail to China last season. In January of this year, Miss Klous was asked to become a series regular replacing Miss Tewes. Miss Klous was born Oct. 19 in Hutchinson, Kan., but was reared in Texas. She lives in Los Angeles with her husband, airline pilot David Beach, and their 2-year-old son, David. Her previous roles included stints on the short-lived "Flying High" and "Aloha Paradise."

DEAR MICHELE: I would like to know about the house that the Harts lived in on "Hart To Hart." Does it really exist? I miss the show and wish ABC and Aaron Spelling would reconsider renewing it. The show is a lot better than some of the new ones on this season — LOU BOSSERMAN

To Lou: Yes, it really exists. The lovely estate once belonged to Dick Powell and his wife June Allyson. The interiors for the show were shot primarily in the studio. Most viewers, according to letters I have received, appear to agree with you that the show should be renewed. Although both Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers were obviously upset at the abrupt cancellation of their series, Wagner has signed a deal with ABC for a new series scheduled for next season and Miss Powers, recently seen in "Mistral's Daughter," is currently filming the TV adaptation of Jackie Collins' steamy best-seller "Hollywood Wives."

DEAR MICHELE: Please help settle a bet. How old is Meredith Baxter-Birney of "Family Ties"? — SALLY KOENIG

To Sally: Miss Birney is 37 years old. She was born June 31, 1947.

Carroll's Destiny Was To Be On 'Dynasty'

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Diahann Carroll's new role in "Dynasty" as Dominique Deveraux, a strong-willed, confident lady who knows what she wants and lets nothing stand in her way turns out to be inspired casting straight from real life.

Miss Carroll may be the only actress in the history of network television to have gate-crashed her way into a hit series.

Her other career as a cabaret performer and stage actress prevented her from watching prime-time TV with any regularity after her own series, "Julia," faded from NBC in 1971.

But after an exhausting 15-week stint on Broadway in "Agnes of God," Miss Carroll opted for recuperative therapy which included endless hours of ogling the tube.

One night, she clicked on "Dynasty" and decided that, involving though its soaperatics may have been, it needed a black character as rich and powerful as Blake Carrington (John Forsythe) and as ruthless and nasty as Alexis Colby (Joan Collins) to give it a shot in the arm.

There are, of course, no prizes for guessing whom she had in mind for the role.

"The first thing that struck me when I started watching TV seriously after so many years was the number of marvelous, witchy ladies who'd turned up — the sort of women I hadn't seen since Bette Davis's heyday in the movies," she says.

Miss Carroll, was talking as the "Dynasty" crew was setting up a Christmas scene which required all the ladies in the cast to glitter festively in gowns by Nolan Miller. She looked every inch the glamorous, elegant, self-possessed woman she plays in the show.

TV Chatter

Big name stars, exotic locations and expensive settings do not guarantee a hit series. New season favorites are beginning to emerge, while other shows are being condemned to Never Never Land.

Many of CBS's new shows are on shaky ground and NBC's proud peacock is aiming to cast a shadow over the CBS eye. Elliot Gould's new series, "E.R." and the returning "AfterMASH" on CBS have already fallen victim to poor ratings. And who would have thought a happily married couple with four kids would beat-out CBS's dashing and romantic "Magnum, P.I."? But NBC's "Bill Cosby Show" has been a solid winner of its time slot since the beginning of the season.

Although ABC plans to stick by most of its schedule until January, "Glitter" failed to glow and has faded from the schedule. "People Do the Craziest Things," shelved for the present, will return on special occasions.

Big winners thus far include: "Dynasty," "Dallas," "The A-Team," "Hotel," "Cagney & Lacey," "60 Minutes," "The Cosby Show," "Simon & Simon," "Newhart" and "Riptide." Other top-rated shows include "Magnum, P.I.," "Kate & Allie," "Knots Landing," "Falcon Crest" and "Family Ties." Notice that there is only one new series in the list. What does that say about the perspicacity of network programmers?

Traditional Thanksgiving Day parades, football games and specials will be glutting the tube all this week. The Thanksgiving season starts off on a thought-provoking note, however, with NBC's powerful two-part drama "Fatal Vision," airing Sunday, Nov. 18. The film is based on Joe McGinniss's best-seller about the sensational murder case involving Green Beret Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald of Fort Bragg, N.C. Accused of murdering his wife and two young daughters, MacDonald is currently serving three consecutive life terms at a federal penitentiary. He is due for parole April 5, 1991.

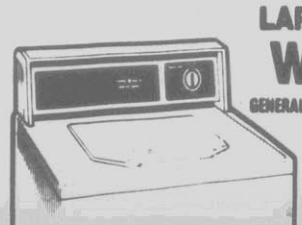

There are those who still believe MacDonald is innocent. The author, originally contacted by MacDonald to write his story, became convinced during his research that MacDonald is guilty. You will be able to see for yourself much of the incriminating evidence brought forth during his final trial.

CBC Dramatizes Life Of War Hero Hughes

CBC is to be congratulated again for dredging up and dramatizing yet another of Canada's ignored heroes. Again audiences will probably be marveling that someone so famous in his day and so much larger than life never became the kind of folk hero that his exploits would have made him in America.

"Sam Hughes's War" (beginning this Wednesday at 8 p.m., 8:30 p.m. in Newfoundland and concluding the following night at the same time) is a tall tale indeed. As played by Gordon Pinsent, the cantankerous Hughes is almost as much a buffoon as a hero. In reality — like Gen. George Patton, the U.S. anti-hero of World War II whom Hughes strongly resembled — he was both.

In the sleepy years immediately preceding World War I, the last thing the Canadian federal government had on its mind was preparing for an unparalleled military disaster. Only Hughes, a belligerent but perspicacious Tory businessman, saw matters clearly. He got himself appointed by Prime Minister Robert Borden to the powerful cabinet post of Minister of Defense and almost single-handedly set out to prepare the Dominion for what was on the horizon.

According to Pinsent, "Hughes traveled from one end of the country to the other making great, charismatic speeches that inspired every patriotic mother's son to want to sign up." The result was a volunteer army of approximately 70,000 men — an astonishing figure for the time. Meanwhile, Hughes spearheaded a massive movement to equip the military forces with the latest weaponry. The result wasthat Canada was ready to march when war was declared in 1914.

Unfortunately, Hughes's weaknesses were almost as monumental as his strengths and they proved to be not only his own undoing but also that of many a Canadian soldier. Time and again, Hughes's arrogance got him into trouble. Considering himself superior to nearly everybody, he ignored channels, offended allies and (probably innocently) allowed war profiteering to flourish.

A combination of calamities eventually prompted Borden to sack Hughes and he died in disgrace shortly afterwards. For more than 50 years, Sam Hughes was forgotten, but now his story makes for fascinating television.

Soap Fans Grateful When The Dead Return

By Connie Passalacqua

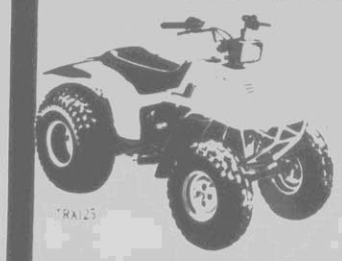

The old adage "never say die" was probably invented by a soap opera watcher. At one point last month no less than four different soaps had a character who was believed to be dead by the other characters on their respective shows, but who was revealed to the audience as still being alive.

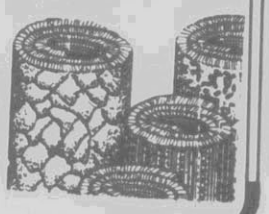

The "resurrection" of a supposedly dead character is a clever dramatic device, from which savvy soap opera writers wring a myriad of melodramatic scenes. First, everyone in town has teary scenes of shock when they learn of our hero's demise. Next, they all gather at a gloomy memorial service, into which our hero has secretly smuggled himself so he can hear his own eulogy. Then his girlfriend starts sleeping with his brother, or his son recklessly takes over his multi-million-dollar company and runs it into the ground. Then there's the dramatic reappearance scene, which most likely occurson his girlfriend and brother's wedding day. All this, of course, consumes months of episodes.

This year, every soap on NBC – ever interested in raising themselves up from third place – has had such a story line. They include Roman Brady (Wayne Northrop) on "Days of Our Lives," Catlin Ewing(Thomas Ian Griffith) on "Another World," Alec Kendall (Robert Curtis-Brown) on "Search for Tomorrow," and most recently (only three months after the show's premiere) Joe Perkins (Dane Witherspoon) on "Santa Barbara."

ABC's latest "live corpse" is Adam Chandler of "All My Children."

CBC, CTV To Air 1984 Grey Cup Game

By Mark Nolan

On Sunday, Nov. 18, both CBC and CTV will be in Edmonton where the top two clubs in the CFL will do battle in the 1984 Grey Cup game. Pre-game programming on each network will begin at 1:30 p.m. (EST). Kickoff is scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

CBC will precede coverage with a 90-minute special pregame show, "The Thrill of It All" at 1:30 p.m. CTV's "Grey Cup Special '84" will also air at that time.

During last year's Grey Cup telecast, more than 8 million viewers across Canada were tuned in for at least part of the game. That figure shattered all records for previous Grey Cup telecasts. In 1984, the people behind the scenes at CBC and CTV are hoping for an even larger viewership rating.

Commentators from both CBC and CTV will be describing the game, with CTV being assigned the first half and CBC the second. CBC is producing the game as a whole. As always, the game remains one of the most popular of all televised Canadian attractions.

"You can never forget the public," says John Spalding, who has been producing Grey Cup telecasts since 1951. "That's your audience, that's who you're programming it to, and you're trying to look at it from the single viewer's point of view at home. What does he want to see in a football game?"

Over the years, the ever-rising Grey Cup ratings would indicate that what the viewer wants is what the viewer has been getting, and the fans' desire to be firsthand witnesses to the action has been fulfilled.

But if that action was presented to the public in anything short of excellent fashion, then perhaps viewers would not be able to so vividly recall that instance when a linebacker delivered a crushing hit to a running back, or a blocker succeeded in clearing the way for a runner to score.

Of course, there are several other reasons why the game is such a great draw on the airwaves. Among the less tangible reasons may be the idea of seeing the East going into battle against the West ona football field, in order that one side may have bragging rights for an entire year.

Also, the excitement which suddenly unfolds on the screen after an entire week spent in anticipation might be enough to cause a considerable number of people who are not true football fans to tune in for at least a portion of the telecast. When asked on Monday, those same viewers can confidently say, of course they saw the Grey Cup.

One can hardly argue, however, that the production crew's efforts to give viewers that which Spalding refers to as unquestionably the "best seat in the house," have been an incredible boost in theGrey Cup's viewership.

Series expanded

Lorimar Productions and CBS Entertainment have reached a new agreement extending the run of "Dallas," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing" for three additional seasons.

With two new upcoming series, "House Detective" and "The New Suzanne Pleshette Show," Lorimar will soon have five series on the CBS Network.

Award for Jennings

"ABC World News Tonight" anchor Peter Jennings recently received the Bob Considine Award, St. Bonaventure University's highest honor for excellence in journalism.

The Considine Awards are presented annually for "extraordinary performances in journalism as well as high moral and ethical standards."

Special holiday show

Radio City Music Hall Productions has announced a one-hour holiday special to air on NBC in December. The program will star the invincible Mr. T as a modern-day sidewalk Santa and Emmanuel Lewis as a little boy who has lost the Christmas spirit. The Rockettes, the Music Hall's world-famous dance team, will also be featured. The project marks the first program to be produced solely under the auspices of the recently created television productions division.

EKLAND: BEAUTY AND THE BOOK.

Michael Wilding's got one up on his mom, Elizabeth Taylor. She may have played Cleopatra, but in the upcoming blockbuster miniseries A.D., he plays the role of Jesus. The 31-year-old, thrice-married actor submitted a picture, the casting director drew a beard on it, and that was that. How do you prepare for a role that, er, elevated? "I would go off by myself before every take to collect the inner peace Christ must have had. And I went over to Tunisia [where the filming of the $30 million production was done] early to soak up the solitude and simplicity of the desert." The role did not spill over after hours, Wilding says. "There was no walking across the swimming pool."

WILDING: WHOLE WHEAT OR RYE?

She may not consider herself "a beauty in the classic sense of the word," but the lack didn't stop Britt Ekland from writing Sensual Beauty: And How to Achieve It. At the top of Britt's list of Classic Beauties: Liz Taylor and Jessica Lange. Work on the magnum opus was enough to put a strain on even the most durable beauty, prompting Britt, once wed to Peter Sellers and now the wife of rock star Jim McDonell of the Stray Cats, to say she doesn't intend to be a full-time author. Her ultimate dream? "To be in a successful nighttime soap."

R.B. of Martinsville, Va., wants to know if Brenda Vaccaro, co-star in the movie Supergirl, feels that she's different from other actresses around today. Vaccaro, 45, replies: "I'm just happy to be working. So many actresses spend a lot of time in trying to please the cameras with their youthful looks. If it was a good part in a major movie, I'd very happily play somebody's grandmother. I'm not vain; I just want to keep busy."

Arguing over suitable garb is standard operating procedure for mothers and their teenage daughters. But when the mother and daughter in question are Rosalynn and Amy Carter, the linen (or cotton or wool) is frequently aired in public. Two years ago when Amy, against Mom's wishes, wore a simple black dress on Late Night with David Letterman, the talk-show wag provided a telephone hookup to Plains, Ga., so Mrs. Carter could discuss the matter on national television. "I'm sure she looks very nice," was Rosalynn's clipped comment. Now Mrs. Carter probably wishes that Amy were still wearing basic black instead of her new wardrobe of "army fatigues and Jimmy's torn undershirts. Half of her hair is blond, and the other half is I-don't-know-what color. She's freaking out." Just wait till Amy's father gets home.

Since Tracey Ross outshone all the competition and captured the $100,000 TV spokesmodel grand prize on the debut season of Star Search she's been in such demand as an actress that she rarely has a chance to do much "speaksmodeling" (spokesmodeling?). But that's just fine with Tracey, who had a recurring role in All My Children, appeared as Eddie Murphy's love interest in last summer's Best Defense, and will soon be on view in Cotton Club. She's also serving as one of the national spokespeople (aha!) for the ACTION drug prevention campaign, a program she kicked off recently with Nancy Reagan in Washington, D.C. "I was born in one of the worst ghettos in the United States, surrounded by drugs and junkies," says Tracey. "There was a lot of pressure to fit in, but I never used any drugs. There's nothing sadder than a kid on drugs. It's the worst problem in the country."

ROSS: SPEAKING U.P.

Jessica Lange was in New York recently for the world premiere of her movie Country, the story of an Iowa farm family fighting foreclosure. On her arm: her long, lean co-star, Sam Shepard, with whom Jessica shares her life and Minnesota farm. "We work easily together," says Lange, who also co-produced the film. "When you work with a stranger you have to create a relationship out of thin air." And the baby gurgling happily on her hip throughout the film? No, it isn't Jessica's own 3-year-old daughter, Alexandra, whose father is ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov. The producers used twins, switching back and forth so the kids never got tired. The realistic touch of carrying the baby around "was a tribute to my mother," Lange says proudly. "She'd walk with one hip slightly to the side, with a baby on it, and do everything she had to do with one hand."

What's Elton John like? No, come on, we want to know what he's really like. "Elton is very sweet," is the considered opinion of English actress Jane Leeves, who worked with John on his new video Who Wears These Shoes? "He's probably the nicest person I've ever worked with. He's generous, funny, and thinks nothing of taking everyone out to eat at the drop of a hat." Yeah, speaking of hats, why does he wear those clothes?

JOHN: A REGULAR GUY.

OUR SECOND ANNUAL NATIONAL TREASURE AWARDS

HELEN HAYES

"Do you consider yourself daring?" asks a familiar voice over the airwaves. "Well, perhaps now that you're getting older you've become more cautious. Maybe too cautious. If you've forgotten just how brave you used to be, look back at some of your adventures. . . ." The voice is that of Helen Hayes, who at 84 personifies the energetic, optimistic lifestyle she encourages her audience to espouse on her nationally syndicated radio program, The Best Years. "I want people to be greedy about life," she explains.

Miss Hayes's career began in 1906 when, at the age of 6, she joined the Columbia Players, an acting troupe, in her native Washington, D.C. She made her Broadway debut at age 9 and, since then, has worked with the great actors of this century. She is unchallenged as The First Lady of the American Theater, having performed in everything from Caesar and Cleopatra to Harvey.

Miss Hayes's work on the stage naturally extended to films, and more recently, to television. She won an Academy Award as best actress in 1931 for her first film role in The Sin of Madelon Claudet, and another Oscar as best supporting actress in 1970 for Airport, becoming the first woman to win awards in both categories. For the past several months she has been filming Murder By Mirrors in Europe.

In 1949, when Miss Hayes's daughter, Mary, died of polio, she felt the need to reach people more directly than she had as an actress. "Polio became my enemy, and I said to myself, 'this has to be stopped,' " she recalls. "I found out who was working in the field and contacted him [Jonas Salk], to see what I could do. Jonas told me later that Mary had not died in vain; funds had been running out, and my work and visibility brought in the money they needed."

Miss Hayes has a disarming capacity to talk both frankly and cheerfully. Her husband of 25 years, playwright Charles MacArthur, died in 1956, but she has not remarried. "I'm still waiting for my reunion with Charlie," she says, "waiting eagerly and happily for it."

The outgoing Miss Hayes is hardly spending her days in close confinement. Since her retirement from the theater in 1971 — due to an allergy — she has taken on the role of spokeswoman for her generation. The Helen Hayes Hospital in West Haverstraw, N.Y., specializes in research on the elderly and on chronic disease, as well as rehabilitation. She is a vocal supporter of Rep. Claude Pepper's (D-Fla.) efforts on behalf of senior citizens; and Mutual of Omaha's The Best Years is aired daily over 175 stations in the United States.

Her two minutes of radio air time nearly gone, Helen Hayes leaves the listeners with this thought: "The benefits of having tried new ventures — that is, really living — far outweigh the possibilities of failure. Whatever you do, take your responsibility yourself."

America's wealth and power derive in no small measure from the blessings of nature. The nation's towering forests, vast oil fields, and generous farmland all promote the public good. However, to confine the roster of our blessings to inanimate assets alone would be to overlook the greatest natural resource of all: the minds and hearts of our most talented citizens.

This cover story celebrates our Second Annual National Treasure Awards; in it, FAMILY WEEKLY honors five individuals nominated by the editors and publishers of the 365 newspapers across America that carry FAMILY WEEKLY as their Sunday or weekend magazine. Final selections were made by a group of judges from the FAMILY WEEKLY staff. Each winner was presented with the distinctive Cartier award shown here. It was created by FAMILY WEEKLY's design director, Robert Altemus.

The awards were presented at a gala dinner earlier this week at New York's elegant Helmsley Palace Hotel. Last year's recipients were Hank Aaron, Walter Cronkite, Martha Graham, James Michener and Jonas Salk. This year's five National Treasure winners are all, like last year's, great national communicators. They believe in America, and struggle with all of us to achieve the fullest extent of our greatness as a nation. Through a lifetime of hard work and good example, these men and women have introduced in our lives the power of possibility.

It is our deep pleasure to announce 1984's National Treasures.

SAUL BELLOW

Novelist Saul Bellow believes that his fascination with writing began as a love of language. Says he: "When I was a boy of about 4, I was sent to learn Hebrew and to read the Old Testament; so there was the beginning of the world, or rather of the universe. I've remained under the spell of stories ever since." Since 1944, when he published his first novel, Bellow's clear hazel eyes and steadfast smile have adorned the jackets of over a dozen books. He has won the Guggenheim Prize, the Pulitzer Prize, and in 1976, he became the seventh American author to win the Nobel Prize.

Lee Goff/Magnum

Bellow's novels are a repository of the American spirit, expressed neither in the King's nor in Webster's English, but in the urbanized vernacular of the streets of Chicago. Bellow remembers completing The Adventures of Augie March, the first of his works written in this particularly American idiom: "I suddenly recognized that life in Chicago in the '30s, as I had known that life, was rousing material for a book. . . . I discovered a language in which a book might be written that was really not quite a legitimate language. I tried to set down a Chicago way of doing things."

Bellow's family moved to Chicago in 1924. Abraham and Liza Bellow had lived in Lachine, Quebec, where Saul was born in 1915. Confined to a hospital bed for five months at the age of 8 because of pneumonia, Bellow became an avid reader: "Books, stories, funny papers — I think that I became dependent on books."

At Tuley High School in Chicago, Bellow's formidable storytelling ability actually got him into trouble: He wrote a short story that his teacher felt was too good to be true: "My teacher accused me of copying it, and I was taken to the principal and charged with cribbing from a magazine. . . . They couldn't prove that I had copied the story, so it died down." Undoubtedly Saul Bellow's subsequent accomplishments made a believer out of his teachers, as he continued his impressive transformation from reader to writer. "It became sort of a natural assumption that I would also become, in my turn, a kind of magical power that others had been for me."

ARTHUR MILLER

Arthur Miller feels that his playwriting chose him as much as he chose it. "The theater has a greater immediacy for me. . . . It was a natural form right from the beginning."

Crafting plays may have been "natural" from the beginning, but it has never been easy for Miller. Although he has been writing since 1936 (his first play, Honors at Dawn, was produced while he was at the University of Michigan), Miller finds the task extremely difficult: "I work every day and then I tear it up in the evening, most of the time."

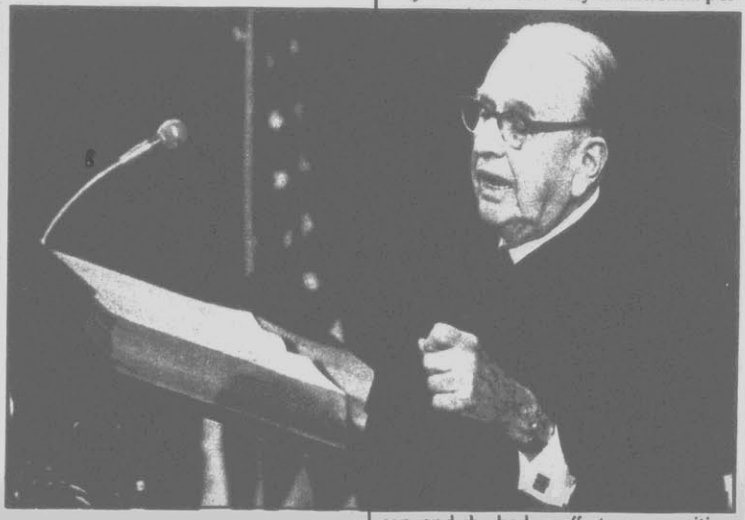

But beyond the problems presented by the physical act of putting pen to paper, Miller's outspoken criticism of government has more than once gotten him into serious trouble. Nevertheless, he sees it as the duty of a writer to use his voice to address national and global issues. "Unlike other kinds of communication, which are either pressed upon the people or forced upon them, people actually pay money to buy a book or go into the theater. It certainly is not to be denied that it's part of being a writer: taking on some kind of responsibility for the effect on people of what you're doing. . . . There's no reason why writers who do affect the public and reach the public shouldn't say publicly what they say privately."

Such sentiments were responsible for Miller's appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1956, charged with contempt of Congress (the charge was reversed the next year). His honeymoon trip to England with second wife Marilyn Monroe was complicated because the U.S. government would not grant him a passport. Out of this experience — and that of many of his colleagues — came The Crucible, a play that implicitly draws a parallel between 1950s McCarthyism and 1640s witchhunts in Salem, Mass.

Inspired by his personal bout with censorship, Miller has been instrumental in the establishment of PEN — Poets, Essayists, and Novelists — an organization dedicated to ensuring that all writers are permitted free expression. When Miller was president he tried to engage Russian writers in PEN, "but the [Soviet] government was a little scared of getting, or letting, them in. . . . Yes, we want them in, and of course the writers want to be in, because it's their opening to the West, to the rest of the world, and it protects them, to a degree, from repression at home."

Miller's plays have been performed in Moscow, and recently a production of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Death of a Salesman was produced in Peking, where it was received with grateful astonishment by a country in which there had been no Arthur Miller plays. It was also revived on Broadway last season, with a cast headed by Dustin Hoffman. This season it is joined by a revival of After the Fall, Miller's meditation on his life with Marilyn Monroe.

These productions exemplify Arthur Miller's view of what the stage could and should be: "At its best, theater entertains every area of the human soul. It'll make you laugh, but it'll make you think and feel. The object, the ultimate object, is, I think, to engage every part of the human experience."

DR. NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

At 21, Norman Vincent Peale was a journalist covering a fire in Detroit; a little girl was trapped, six stories up, in a burning building. Someone had shoved a foot-wide plank across to her so she could walk to safety, but the little girl was frozen in terror. "So I got up there and I said, 'Honey, do you believe in God?' " Peale recalls. "And she nodded her head. I said, 'Do you believe that God is everywhere?' She nodded her head. I said, 'Don't you think that He's up there with you right this minute?' She nodded her head again. And I said, 'You don't look down, but look straight ahead and believe that you're looking at Him, and He's going to guide you across the plank.' So she started across, and I talked to her the same way, and finally she made it. The crowd cheered. A policeman turned to me and said, 'Son, you're a preacher.' And I said, 'No, I'm not. I'm a newspaperman, I'm no preacher.' And he said, 'The heck you're not.' When I think of how I became a minister, I always go back to that strange incident."

That little girl was the first of millions of people to whom Norman Vincent Peale — preacher, writer, and founder of the positive-thinking movement — has communicated his message of hope through inner strength.

Peale's father was a minister; however, given Peale's temperament as a young boy, few people would have guessed that he'd initiate a worldwide religious movement. Peale remembers his boyhood in Ohio: "I was a pretty lively kid. . . . I would smoke cornsilk behind the barn. When the huskings from the corn get dry it's smokable, fairly; that's what kids did in my day." His parents exerted a strong influence over his early life, setting an example of uprightness and intellectual curiosity. "My mother was a very sentimental person, and she had an effect on my writing and speaking. My father was a man's man. I think I got the idea from him that Christianity was a strong philosophy, that it was manly."

The other force shaping Peale's life has been his wife, Ruth (a minister's daughter). "The happiest memory of my career was the day I married my wife; that was the 20th of June, 1930. We were going to be together the rest of the way."

Working together, Dr. and Mrs. Peale have followed a rigorous schedule of travel, lecturing, and writing. The Power of Positive Thinking, which Peale wrote in 1952, has become the most widely read Christian document after the Bible. Although Peale, 86, recently retired as pastor of Manhattan's Marble Collegiate Church, he has a daily radio show, The American Character, that is aired on 440 stations nationwide, and he regularly speaks to various groups around the country.

With all of the awards and accolades, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale has retained a refreshing, no-nonsense attitude toward his achievements. "I never think about myself other than just as a person who is trying to do his best to help people. . . . I just view an audience as an assembly of people, some of whom may be helped by my ideas. I don't relate it to myself; I just go ahead and do my job."

CORETTA SCOTT KING

In the early 1950s Coretta Scott's greatest dream was to be a concert singer. She was enrolled at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, cleaning house for her room and board because her scholarship covered only her tuition. When a friend offered to introduce her to Martin Luther King Jr., a theology student at Boston University, Coretta reacted with indifference: "I wasn't interested in meeting a young minister at that time."

In June 1953 she married King, and her own deeply held beliefs concerning the struggle for human dignity found a catalyst in the movement her husband was to inaugurate. "I had planned to pursue a traditional career," Mrs. King explains, "but there was this tremendous challenge, and I was convinced when I decided to open my life to Martin's quest that it would determine the destiny of my life. . . . Once [the 1955 bus boycott] in Montgomery [Ala.] started, I had the realization that this 'I' was meant to be."

The boycott was close to Mrs. King's roots. She was born in 1927 near the town of Marion, Ala., on her grandfather's farm, and she lived in that vicinity until she graduated from high school in 1946 and entered Antioch College in Ohio. "My sister, Edythe Scott

Bagley, was the first black student to go to Antioch, which referred to itself as 'an experiment in democracy.' She preceded me by two years. During those years at Antioch I was very active in politics and the peace movement, and that's where my orientation started in preparation for activism."

In the period to come, Mrs. King relied on every bit of this preparation. In 1955, when her husband was pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, everything happened to the Kings in a rush. "When the Montgomery bus boycott started, my first child was just born — the 17th of November. And the movement began the 5th of December. We had the church. We had a baby. We had the movement. There was no place for the movement to be housed except in the parsonage, so our house became an office for a few months until we got organized."

Mrs. King found it to be an exhilarating moment in her own personal history and in the history of the world. "It was a very exciting [time]. I think one of the greated periods in my life was the Montgomery period, because there was this great sense of fulfillment in that whole involvement . . . and you thought you were part of a much larger worldwide struggle for liberation, justice, and peace."

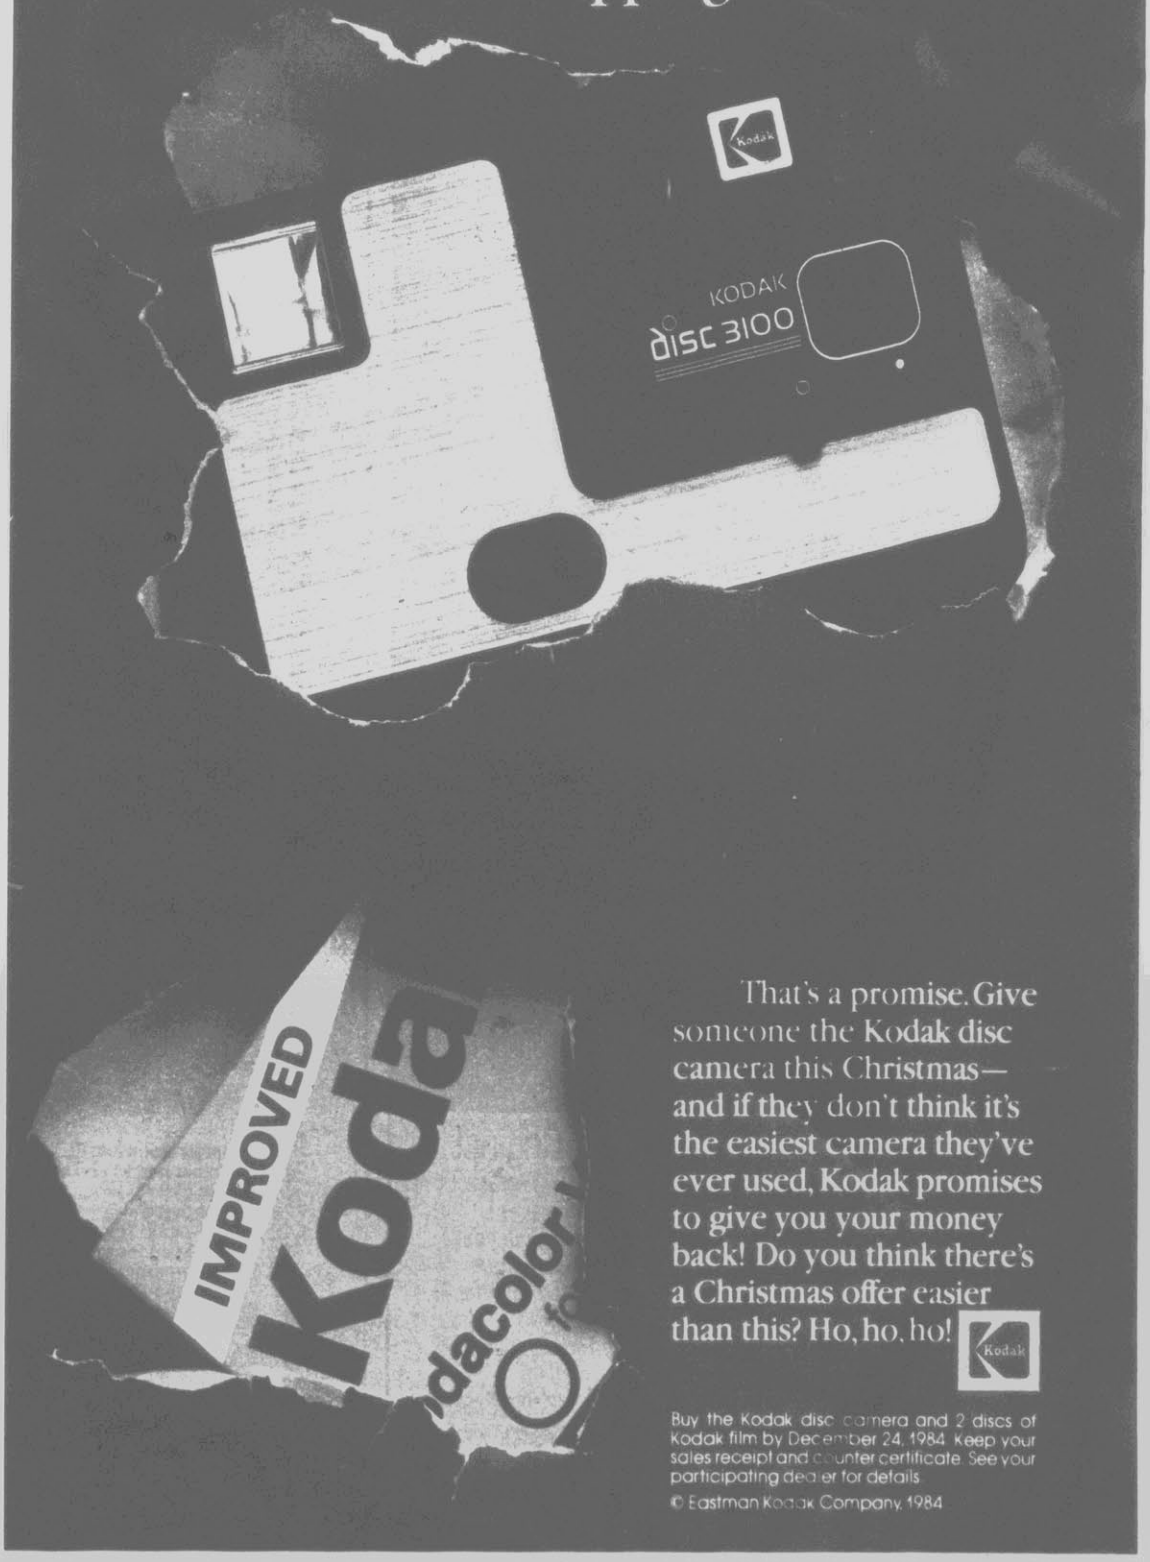

Mrs. King has made that struggle her own since her husband's assassination in April 1968. Four days after his death, she led a civil rights march in Memphis. She continues to fight in order to reaffirm Dr. King's work and ideals. In her home city of Atlanta, she divides her time, not always equally, she ruefully admits, between her children — Yolanda Denise, Martin Luther III, Dexter Scott, and Bernice Albertine — and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

The center was built around Dr. King's vision of an institution that could contain the archives of the civil rights movement. This original organization has been expanded under the direction of Mrs. King to become not only an active force in shaping policy for social change, but also a base for education and a tutoring and day-care center. Mrs. King has received numerous awards and served on committees concerned with the rights of women and the poor as well as with the rights of blacks.

Coretta Scott King is grateful to be able to communicate the message of equality for all people. "It wasn't easy," she says, "but it was a challenge; I just felt that I'm a strong person. Having a lot of energy and stamina gave me the ability to remain calm in crisis situations; that was a gift given from God . . . . He had prepared me with these gifts. I could not have had more fulfillment, and I'm thankful that I've had the privilege to serve with Martin in the role that he played, and that I've been continuing since then." FW

DON SHARP'S MONTHLY CAR CARE COLUMN

PICKING THE RIGHT WINTER TIRES FOR YOU

The phrase is a fixture in physics textbooks: coefficient of friction. For the motorist, the most important coefficient of friction is the one between the tires and the driving surface; it's what keeps the car under control and on the road. When a lubricant such as snow, rain, slush or ice gets under the tires, the coefficient of friction is reduced. And when low temperatures cause the air in a tire to contract, the tire deforms, losing even more of that valuable coefficient of friction.

Winter driving, then, begins at ground level. Start with good tires and keep them properly inflated. The grooves in the tread pattern of a tire subtract from the rubber in contact with the road. Thus, they reduce friction, but for a very good purpose: The grooves allow water and slush to escape from under the tire. Without them, the tire would ride up on top and "hydroplane." In addition, the grooves pack soft, shallow snow into ridges so the tread pattern can pull against them with an action that is more mechanical, like climbing a ladder, than purely frictional.

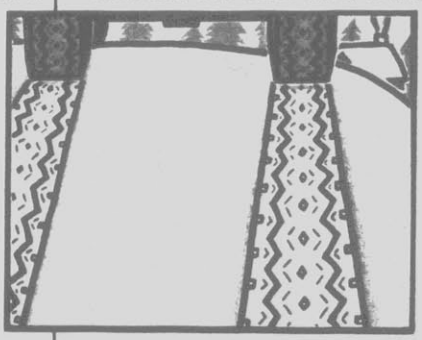

To be effective, though, the grooves must be deep; three-thirty-seconds of an inch is the depth required by law. However, that is a minimum, and it is not, quite frankly, good enough for the winter. If winter brings lots of precipitation your way, get tires with tread grooves that better this minimum.

Deep snow, of course, calls for snow tires with grooves as wide and deep as a finger. However, the open tread pattern of a snow tire means that it deforms more on dry pavement. The manufacturers use harder rubber in snow tire treads to counteract the deforming. If a car needs 175 feet to stop from 60 mph with conventional tires, it will need over 200 feet to stop with snow tires — just enough more to send it through a pedestrian crosswalk.

The harder rubber does allow a snow tire to make an impression in soft ice and thus gain some grip. In general, though, a snow tire is no better and is often worse than a conventional tire on hard ice, where the degree of friction falls to nearly zero. Ice calls for studded tires or chains.

Studded tires, alas, ride up on the points of their studs on dry pavement at highway speed and become dangerously unstable. Also, they wear ruts into the smoothest pavements, and the ruts become puddles or ice patches in bad weather.

Other than four-wheel drive, chains are best for deep snow or ice. However, they are a nuisance to put on, especially to go no farther than to the plowed street at the corner, and they wear out quickly on dry pavement.

No one tire, then, suits all conditions, but it doesn't really need to. Given snowplows, salted roads, and frequent thaws, winter tires spend most of their time on dry pavement. Do you stay home till the snowplows have been by? If so, maybe you don't need snow tires. Do you check into a hotel, rather than commute home on icy highways? If so, you hardly need studs or chains.

On the other hand, your choice may be dictated by "worst case" possibilities: If snow tires or chains keep you out of the ditch one time, they've paid for their cost and inconvenience.

To touch on the relevant dynamics: Don't put snow tires on all four wheels unless the vehicle has four-wheel drive. Snow tires on the front of a rear-drive car just give the rear tires that much more tire to push through fresh snow. Snow tires work very well on the front of front-wheel-drive cars, but they reduce traction at the rear in all conditions except deep snow, when traction at the rear hardly matters.

All-weather tires, which are the biggest sellers, may be put on all four wheels, but these tires, like the others, are a compromise. They are excellent in heavy rain and in snow only a few inches deep, but for slogging through the deep stuff or through mud during the spring thaw, only snow tires or chains can live up to their claims. FW

LIVING TODAY

TUNING TELEVISION TO THE GRASS ROOTS

Look closely at the next cable TV show you're watching and you may see your friends, neighbors, kids, or even yourself. People across the country are using public access channels to write, produce and perform in their own TV shows.

"I see it as an extension of democracy," said George Stoney, a pioneer in the field and a professor in film and television at New York University currently on sabbatical and working with the Atlanta Media Project. "In public access, we are able to make our own programs about our own affairs."

In Knoxville, Tenn., shows have included voter education programs sponsored by the League of Women Voters, as well as musical concerts. In Alaska, Eskimo songs and dances have warmed up the TV screen.

"We work really hard to make shows as professional as possible," said John Thomas, production coordinator at the Fayetteville Open Channel in Arkansas. "But that doesn't mean if it doesn't look like NBC we won't show it."

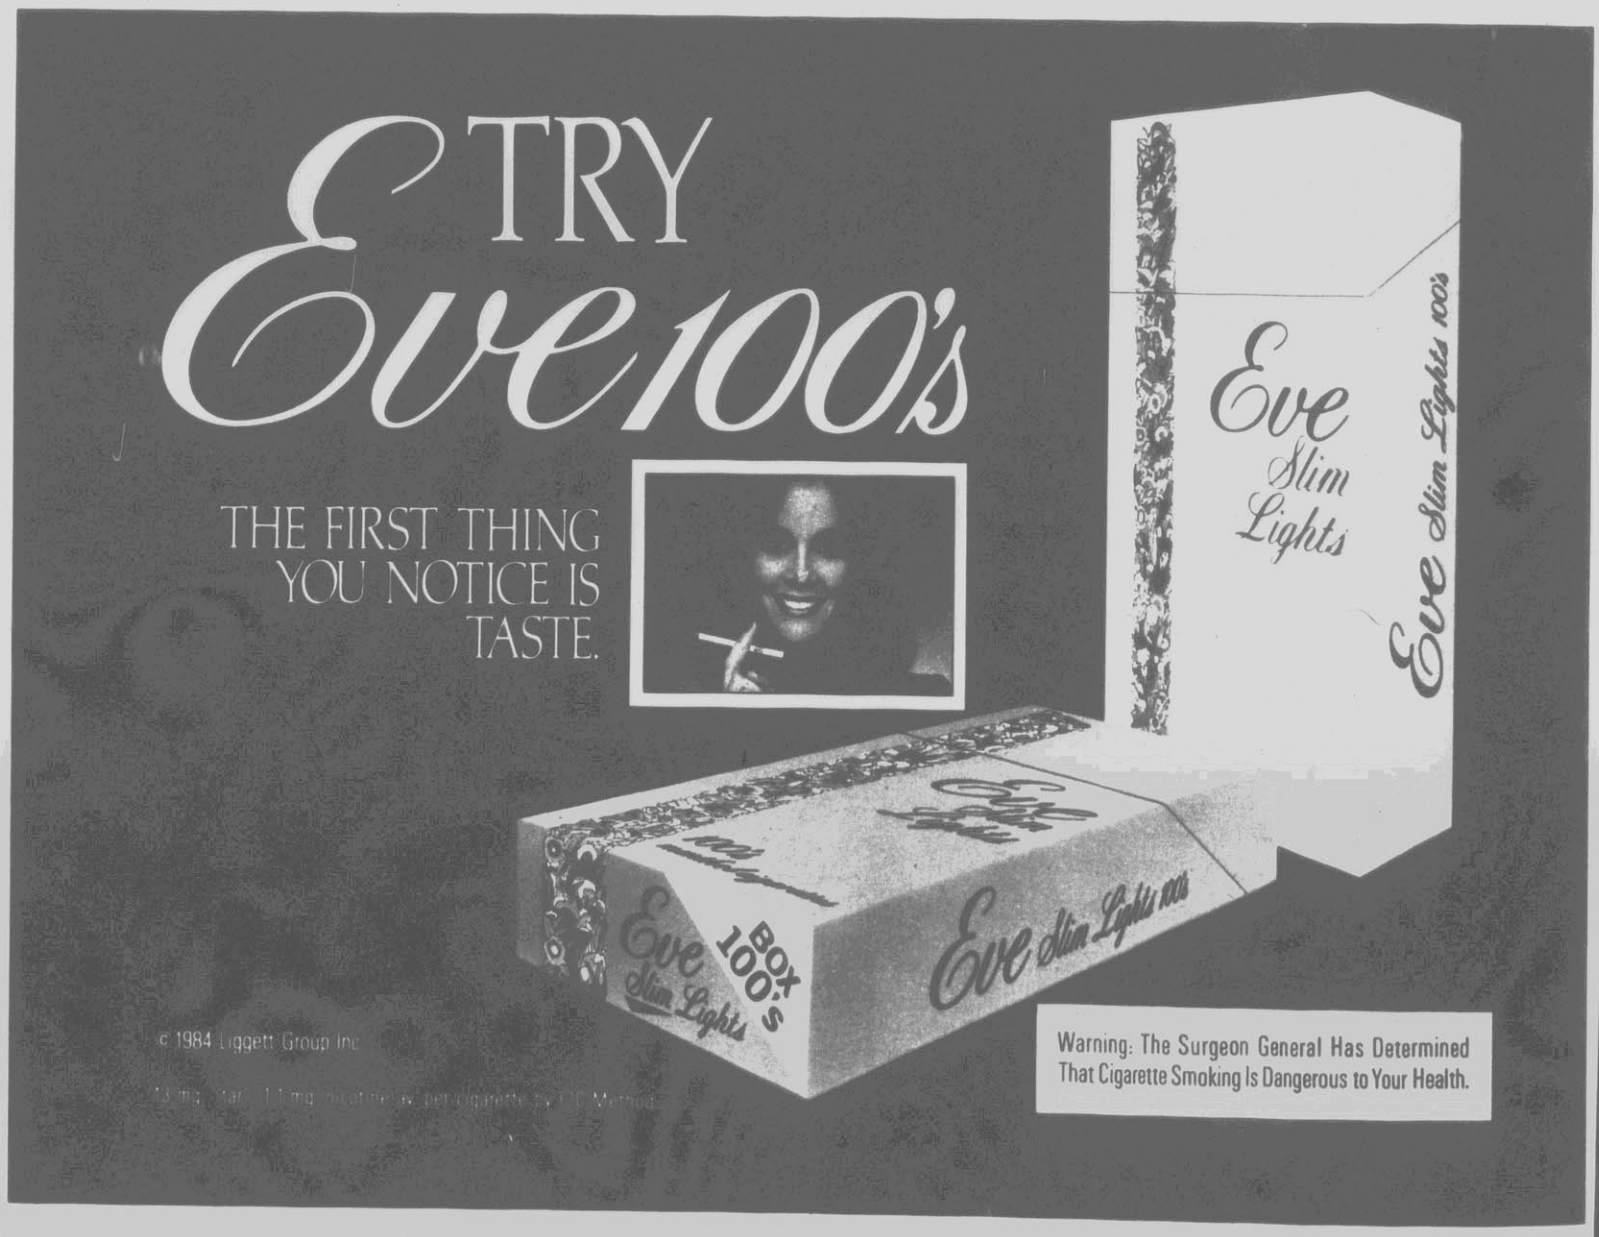

It took Jim Norwood about two months of working part-time to produce his first show, Cattin' Around, for the Fayetteville Open Channel. The show follows the progress of the Norwoods' daughter's pet cat learning how to do tricks. "Basically, it was a glorified home movie," Norwood said.

But public access TV offers more substantial fare, too. In Iowa City, Iowa, viewers get a chance to tune in to the city council meetings. All told, some 100 people ranging in age from 11 to 75 are involved in programming shows that air four hours a day, five days a week. In Arlington, Mass., an access group provided live coverage when rain forced a high school graduation ceremony indoors. And in Reading, Pa., students helped defuse a potential racial confrontation by talking on camera and stopping rumors.

Public access isn't available everywhere. The A.C. Nielsen Company reports there are 36,105,500 households hooked up to cable TV. About 40 percent of them have public access. The local cable TV company must offer the extra channel, the municipality granting the franchise must want it, and the public must be willing to get involved.

"Working with access was really exciting," said Bobbi Clement of Waukegan, Ill., who got involved and produced a show with a police officer giving safety tips to children. "It lets you change something. Instead of just sitting back, you can do something about it."

WHIZ QUIZ

FEAR: HOW IT WORKS

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

1. People who live in cities are more plagued by fears than country dwellers are.
2. Middle-aged people have a greater fear of dying than young people do.
3. It's bad to give a fearful child the impression that you sympathize with him.

ANSWERS

1. Not necessarily. Investigators at the University of Louisville interviewed over 2,000 men and women about their fears. Their conclusion: Country dwellers may have more fears than city residents. The researchers found that those city residents with more education and a higher socioeconomic status were the least worried and fearful. In addition, they uncovered another fascinating correlation: Poor physical health seemed to go hand-in-hand with high levels of fear. And the correlation, they found, was astoundingly high.

2. False. On the basis of interviews with more than 850 subjects (ages 18 to 87), psychologists at the University of West Florida found that middle- and late-middle-aged individuals had markedly less fear of death than persons of any other age. They reached their conclusion by using a questionnaire designed to measure attitudes toward dying, dividing the subjects into six age groups, from young adult to old age.

3. Obviously False. In an extensive study of children's fears, researchers at Purdue University concluded that parents can help children deal with their fears by being supportive and compassionate. They advise parents to give children the chance to express their apprehensions with the understanding that they will not be criticized or ridiculed for them.

BUILDING TOGETHER...
in Cities... Towns... and Rural America

Over 246,000 homes built since 1956

Just imagine 240,000 homes. That's a pretty good-sized city, right? Well it doesn't top the number of homes Jim Walter has built since 1956 when he started in business, over 25 years ago. Which adds up to NOTHING unless you are looking for a homebuilder. If you are, this information, for sure, is important to you. No one wants to trust an investment as big as it takes to build a new home to a "Johnny-come-lately"... a "fly by night" outfit that may or, more likely, may not be around when the dust settles.

With Jim Walter, we finance our own. You won't have to worry about the third party that steps in to "buy your mortgage" as soon as the last nail is driven... one who could care less whether your roof leaks or your doors don't fit, or the foundation cracks or if you just plain aren't satisfied with the workmanship. WE CARE. And we will continue to care because we will be with you for the full term of your mortgage. With builder financing, quality is assured.

10% Annual Percentage Rate FIXED-MORTGAGES NO DOWN PAYMENT FOR QUALIFIED PROPERTY OWNERS

We guarantee 10% annual percentage rate mortgage financing to qualified property owners. No points. No closing costs. No balloon notes. No mumbo-jumbo. Your monthly mortgage payment will remain the same every month for the full term. And if you sell your house your mortgage will not change. Your new buyer can continue the same payments at the same rate. You can count on it and we'll save you money... lots of it... over most other financing.

So, before you decide on a builder be sure to check with Jim Walter ... one of the world's largest... one whose parent company is listed on the New York Stock Exchange with assets in excess of two billion dollars and rated by Fortune Magazine among the nation's top 500 industrial companies.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

JOHN CLEESE

STRAIGHT TALK FROM A TOP COMIC

John Cleese likes to be taken seriously. Which isn't easy when, at age 45, you've spent the better part of the last 15 years clowning around with the manic Monty Python comedy troupe.

With fellow Pythoners, Cleese created the satiric television series Monty Python's Flying Circus and the now classic comedy films Monty Python and the Holy Grail and Monty Python's Life of Brian. He also played the incompetent innkeeper on the PBS import Fawlty Towers. Recently, Cleese collaborated with his psychotherapist, Robin Skynner, on a book: Families and How to Survive Them, a surprisingly sober look at how relationships can go wrong. Cleese talked with writer Ellen Kunes about how the life of a comic actor can be no laughing matter.

Alan Davidson/Photo Trends

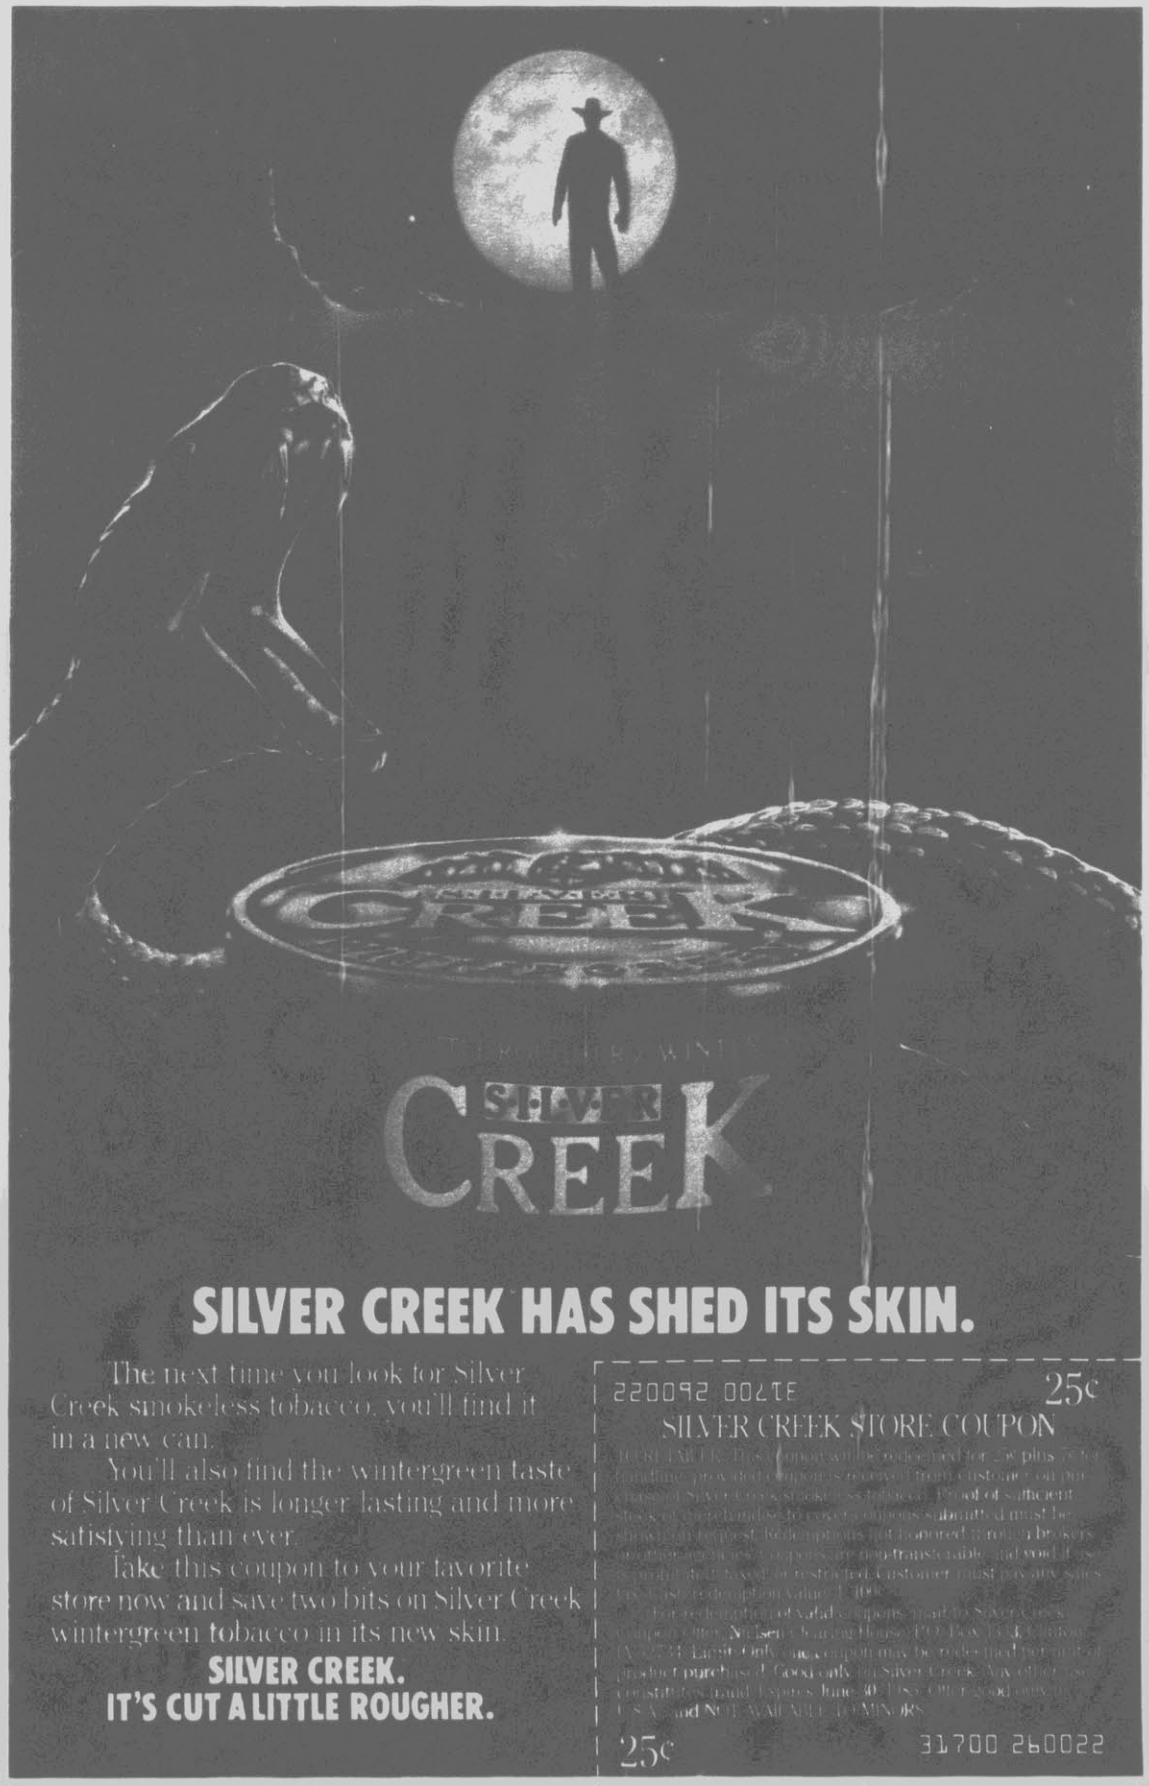

Kunes: You've said that at one point you were losing your sense of humor. Why?
Cleese: Well, I didn't find life too funny for a few years. My first marriage was breaking up, and naturally that time was a bit less hilarious than others.

Q: You and your wife went into group therapy, but it didn't save your marriage. What went wrong?
Cleese: There were a number of problems. For one, I'd never been brought up to believe that spouses should be independent. I think my first wife and I just weren't separate enough.

Q: In the book, you and Dr. Skynner imply that parents can be too kind to their children. Were your parents too kind to you?
Cleese: My father was very loving, but I don't think he was ever tough with me when I needed it. My father didn't shove me out into the cold, hard world when I needed to be, and I think I'm a little bit wimpy as a result.

Q: A lot of performers never seem to get over that compulsive need to be funny and to grab the spotlight. Have you?
Cleese: I don't really think I require that kind of attention now. Of course, some people go through their entire lives wanting attention; some performers simply will not lie down when they're dead, particularly in American show biz. I think at age 65 all public entertainers should be subject to an exam, in which they have to convince the examiners that they're reasonably competent. Except for George Burns, who I think is just wonderful.

Q: Would you say that your attitude toward your work has changed because you've gone through therapy?
Cleese: The main thing therapy cured for me is the need to feel productive. If you bear in mind, quite lightheartedly of course, that in a few years you'll be dead, it can have a very good effect on you. It helps you to decide what's really important in life. FW

NEAT DISHES

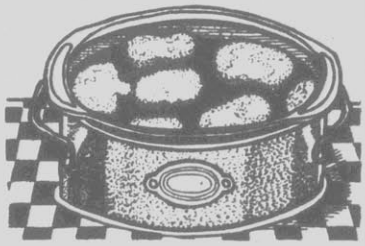

OUT OF THE OVEN, ONTO THE TABLE

Lots of people like to cook, but few really enjoy doing KP. To cut down on clean-up, these two dishes go straight from oven to table. And with the attractive copper-look servers that are on the market today, you won't even need a centerpiece.

BAKED RED ONION AND PORT SOUP GRATINEE

4 tablespoons unsalted butter
5 large red Bermuda onions, sliced
1 large yellow onion, sliced
2 cloves garlic, chopped
¼ teaspoon thyme leaves
3 (13¾-oz.) cans beef broth
½ cup ruby port wine
1 loaf Italian or French bread
1½ cups grated Swiss cheese

1. In large kettle or Dutch oven, melt butter. Add sliced red and yellow onions, garlic and thyme. Saute, stirring, until onions are wilted and soft, about 10 minutes.
2. Add beef broth and port, stir, and heat to boiling point. Cover, reduce heat, and simmer for one hour. Stir once or twice.

Country Maron

3. Meanwhile, cut 6 ½-inch-thick slices of Italian or French bread, and toast lightly.
4. Cover bread slices with grated cheese, pressing down firmly. Ladle hot soup into 2-qt. oven-to-table casserole. Place cheese-topped toast slices on surface of soup. Place casserole on cookie sheet to catch any spills. Bake at 500 F for about 10 minutes, just until the cheese melts and starts to brown.
5. Place casserole into server on table. Serve immediately with remaining bread if desired.

Makes 6 servings

DEEP CHOCOLATE PUDDING CAKE

1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
7 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa, divided
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons unsalted butter or margarine, melted
¾ cup chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup packed dark brown sugar
1½ cups hot water
1 cup heavy cream whipped and sweetened or 1 pint vanilla ice cream

1. In bowl stir together the flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and 3 tablespoons cocoa powder. Add milk and butter and beat until well blended. Stir in walnuts and vanilla.
2. Spoon batter into lightly greased 2-qt. oblong oven-to-table baking dish.
3. Mix brown sugar and remaining 4 tablespoons cocoa together and sprinkle evenly on top of batter. Pour hot water over all.
4. Bake in preheated 325 F oven for about 30 minutes or until top is firm. Bottom will still be liquid.
5. Meanwhile, whip cream and sweeten to taste with a tablespoon or two of sugar, and spoon into attractive serving bowl.
6. Remove cake from oven; let stand 5 minutes. Place baking dish in server and bring to table. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Makes 6 servings

SPORTS SCOPE

AMERICA'S BEST PREP FOOTBALL TEAM

By Tim Sullivan

Before Gerry Faust became head football coach at Notre Dame and began to learn about losing and alumni, he was the nation's prime broker of college football prospects as head coach at Cincinnati's Moeller High School.

The story is told that a college coach called Faust and asked if Moeller had any players who could help his program. Faust responded with a list.

Tim Bath

Familiar sight in Cincinnati: another Moeller score.

Encouraged, the coach decided to take a firsthand look at his future stars. He showed up for a Moeller game, but never saw any of the players Faust had mentioned on the field. Naturally he confronted Faust with this.

"I said they could help you," Faust replied. "I didn't say they could help me."

Such is the regard Moeller receives that no one doubts the authenticity of this anecdote. Since 1964, football players at this Catholic high school have received 341 college scholarships: an average of 17 a year. On a clear day, the recruiters can outnumber the faculty.

The proof is in the winning. In 21 years of varsity football, Moeller has completed 12 undefeated seasons and lost only 19 games. The Crusaders have not lost a league game since a rainy day in 1972 — a streak of over 50 games — and they claim six of the last nine Ohio big school championships.

"Once Moeller ends, if it ends, I don't think it will ever be duplicated," says current coach Steve Klonne.

Most of the credit belongs to Faust, who started the school's football program. The foundation of Faust's approach was enthusiasm. In addition to coaching, which occupied better than 40 hours of his week, Faust served the school as athletic director, chief fund raiser, and typing teacher. He attracted so many supporters that Moeller's football game program runs over 200 pages to accommodate advertisers.

Faust developed a staff of assistants that exceeded the number permitted in college programs and eventually enlisted a quarter of the student body — which now stands at 1,015 — to give shoulder pads a shot. His teams outscored their opponents by an average of 22 points per game from 1964 to 1980.

"I don't think anybody could match coach Faust and his work habits," says current athletic director Jeff Liebert, who doubles as offensive backfield coach. "The total hours the football staff puts in are equal to what they were then — just divided up a little more."

Even so, Coach Klonne's honeymoon this year was his first vacation since 1978. "In season, we work seven days a week, and a usual work day is 10 to 12 hours," he said.

Is this in keeping with a high school program? "It's hard to say," Klonne replied. "Sometimes you wonder. But you get caught up in doing a good job, making sure there's no stone left unturned."

Coaching competitors often wonder if something isn't out of whack. "They say no high school should do what we do," Klonne said. "If they want to rationalize [our success], that's what they'll say. But I think there are people who prepare kindergarten classes with the same zeal."

Faust parlayed his success into the job of his dreams at Notre Dame. And he left Moeller with an almost self-perpetuating dynasty. Families have been known to relocate in order to send a son to Moeller. Anyone who's priced a college education lately can understand why.

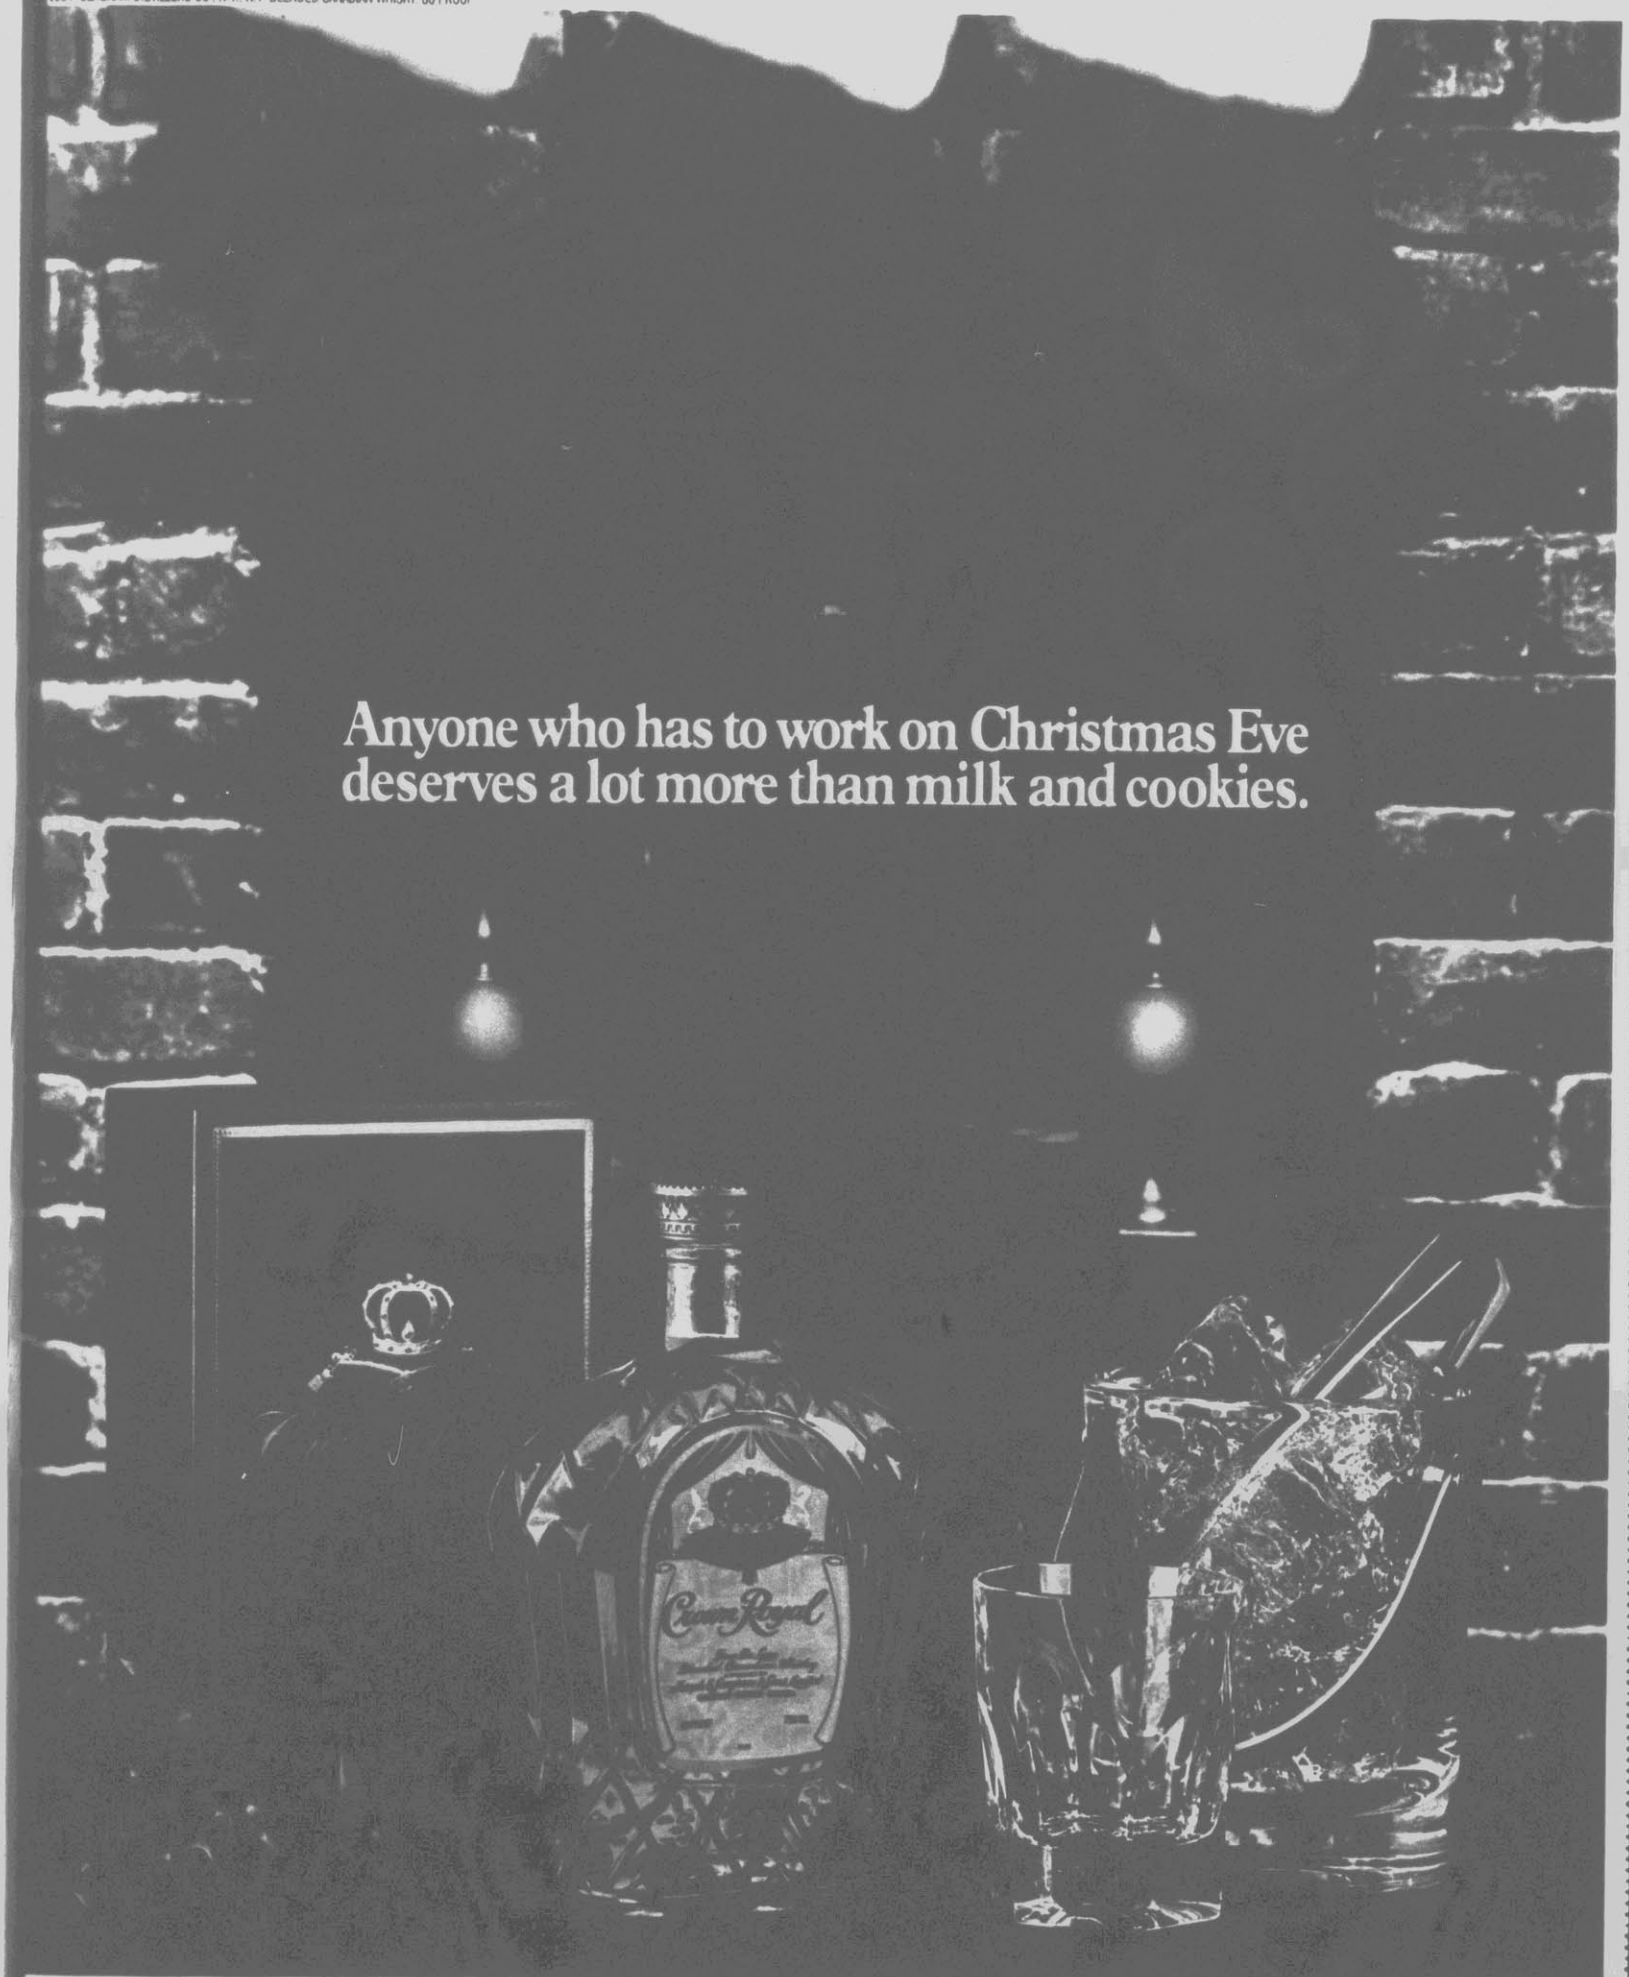

Besides being the only high school team whose home games are available on pay-per-view cable television, Moeller has received national exposure with the birth of USA Today and its weekly high school Top 25. Moeller was ranked first in the newspaper's first season poll in 1982 and has held a tight grip on the top spot in this season's rankings.

Moeller has maintained its brilliantly monotonous success despite a schedule that has included powers from California, Pennsylvania and Texas. Since 1975, they are 9-0 in intersectional play.

"Out-of-state people call us all the time," Liebert said. "If somebody thinks they're pretty good and wants to take a shot at us, that's fine." FW

LEISURE ACTIVITIES

SOME BUSINESSES ARE SHEER MURDER

The New York-Montreal express train speeds through the ink-black night. Suddenly a gunshot pierces the silence, and a woman screams and runs through the dark sleeping car. A body is discovered in one of the compartments. Should the train be halted? Are there any police aboard? Is there a doctor, to determine how and when the victim died?

Not to worry. This Agatha Christie-like scenario is just that — an elaborately planned entertainment for 60 travelers aboard the "Mystery Express." At boarding, each passenger was given a packet of sleuth notebooks as well as information as to when the victim's cabin would be open for inspection, and when the cross-examination, arrest, meals and other entertainment would take place.

Playing up to the seemingly inexhaustible American fascination with crime, entrepreneurs around the United States are staging mock murders in hotels and resorts, on trains and ships, in books and on computers.

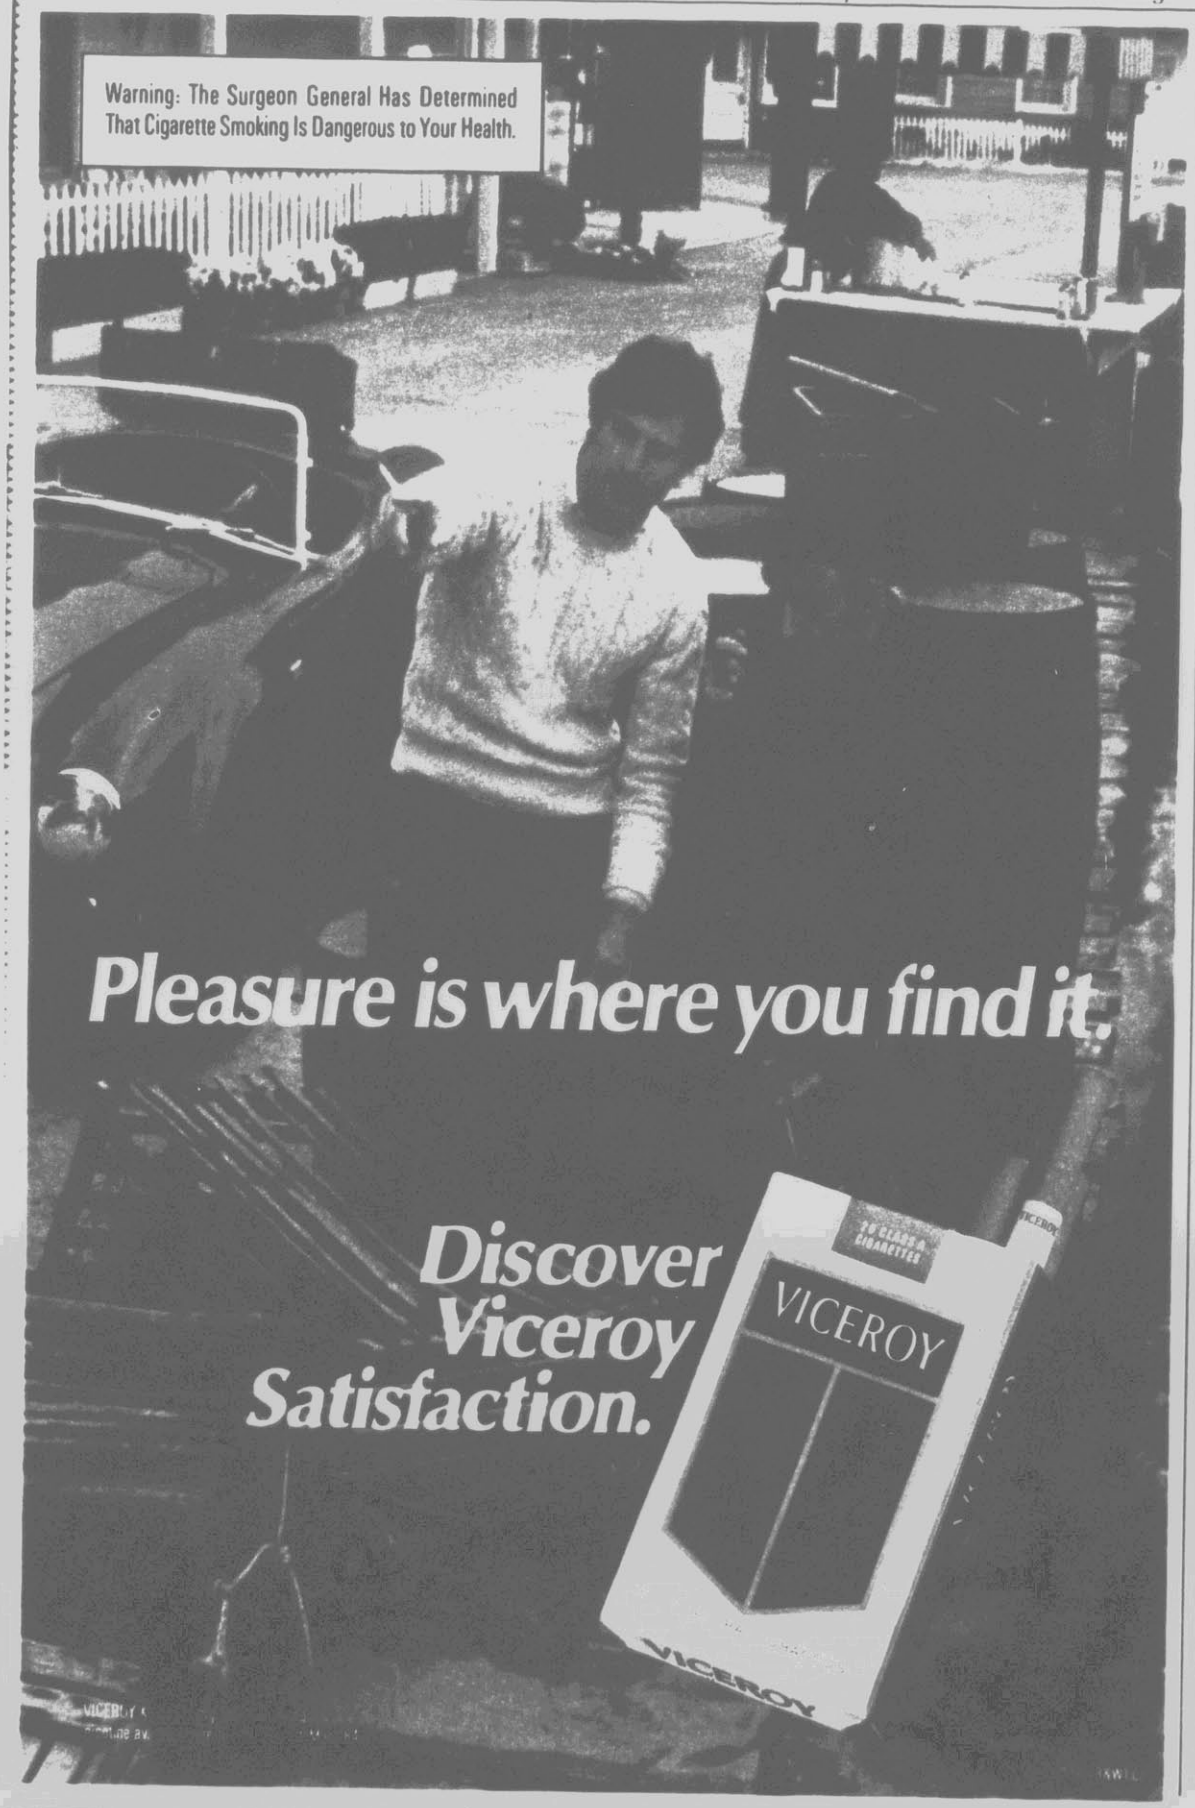

During a recent round-the-world cruise, the S.S. Rotterdam of the Holland-America Line staged an elaborate five-day mystery for guests, the plot constructed around a scheme to smuggle counterfeit funds into South Africa. Vista International Hotel in New York City held a Murder Weekend with a "corpse" in an elevator, among other strange happenings, along with a gala and several cocktail parties for mystery buffs. Resorts in New York's Catskills and Pennsylvania's Poconos employ stage actors to perform mayhem on cue, several weekends each year.

The publishing industry is also coming to see murder as a money machine. Who Killed the Robins Family? (William Morrow) has been a bloody gold mine, and this fall Warner Books issued a paperback version that included the final chapter disclosing the solution. At the same time, the firm issued Revenge of the Robins Family, a hardcover sequel that carries a $10,000 prize for cracking that case. (Nancy Kelcher, a nurse from Denver, Colo., pocketed $10,000 for solving the crime in the first "Robins family" book.)

Meanwhile, Pocket Books has published Prize Meets Murder, the first novel of a paperback trilogy, offering $15,000 for the reader who solves the crime. The first run on Prize was 600,000 copies. The winner, Lynn Clark, had to do more than name the killer; she had to explain the way the crime was unraveled.

Not to be outdone, the video industry is getting into the whodunit-for-bucks business with games such as "Money Hunt," a 30-minute cassette. Karl Home Video, a California-based home entertainment firm, is offering viewers a $100,000 prize for a solution.

None of this is entirely new. In 1905, the publisher of Edgar Wallace's The Four Just Men offered 500 pounds to the first reader who could solve the puzzle. Something similar was attempted with certain early works of Ellery Queen. But now, murder for profit is really catching on. Cash or no cash, mystery excursions seem to be everyone's cup of tea — no arsenic, please. —Alan D. Hass

North Carolina, now you've got a long distance plan to call your own.

AT WORK

BATTLING THE BLAHS WHEN A JOB SEEMS ROUTINE

By Peggy Schmidt

Every so often, perhaps during a tedious staff meeting, a trying commute to work, or a seemingly endless afternoon in the office, that feeling of "Why am I doing this?" occurs. It's natural to get down in the dumps about your job from time to time. When the doldrums strike, there are several things you can do to fight them before your ho-hum attitude affects your work.

Vincent Waller

Boredom is one of the most common causes of feeling blue about your job. "Every job has a lot of repetitive tasks from which you need to take not just a coffee break, but a mental break," says Richard Irish, an executive search expert and author of Go Hire Yourself an Employer. He suggests switching gears: If you have a job that involves a lot of paperwork or thinking, consider throwing darts at a board in your office as a diversion, as Irish does himself. For those whose business keeps them on the phone, a crossword puzzle can be refreshing. People whose hands are on a computer keyboard a good part of the day may find a balance in doodling. If your company provides exercise equipment or space (as an increasing number do), use it.

Altering the routine of your job itself is another possibility, says Irish. Rearrange the times when you normally schedule meetings. Or you might initiate a project that is outside of but consistent with your responsibilities. You can also get out of your rut by having lunch with people who work outside your department or company, even people you don't know well, but would enjoy knowing better. Don't feel hesitant about inviting someone new to lunch; most people are flattered that you're interested in learning more about them and what they do.

Another reason for slipping into the job doldrums is not getting enough positive feedback from your employer. "Each one of us has a recognition quotient that we need filled if we're going to continue turning in good work," says Irish. "Pats on the back are not given out nearly as frequently as they should be."

Rather than feel resentful that you're not appreciated, the next time you turn in an assignment, tell your boss that while you put your best effort into it, you would like to know if there is anything that could be improved upon. If he says yes, you stand to benefit from constructive criticisms. Or you may simply hear what you've been wanting to — that you're doing a great job.

The most serious reason for getting caught in the job doldrums is the frustration that comes with feeling that you're not getting anywhere in your job — or deciding that there is no future for you with your employer. "Plenty of people in that situation slack off because they lose their motivation, but a failure to take positive steps only makes the problem worse," says Irish. Before you take the drastic step of looking for a new job, ask yourself:

- Are you being too impatient? Talk to others with your level of experience and education. If you work for a small company, compare your situation with people who work in other companies.
- What's standing in your way? Often it's the person who has the job you want. Is it worth it to wait for him to retire, move up or on? A personality conflict with a supervisor can also be an impediment. If that's the case, you'll have to win his respect or consider a job move outside his realm of influence. Finally, company policy or precedent may be holding you up, even if you have proven you can handle more responsibility. The challenge is to figure how management can make an exception without risking complaints.
- Do the people in power share your view of your accomplishments? Be aware of what criteria management uses to make judgments. Then ask yourself whether you meet them or want to meet them. Lastly, make sure that management is aware of your accomplishments and your desire to take on more responsibility.

If you decide that there isn't much you can do to improve your situation, scouting out new job possibilities will bring renewed enthusiasm. You may even discover that your current position isn't as bad as you had thought. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

FROM BALTIMORE

THE CHILLING REALITY ABOUT FOUL WEATHER FEASTING

Blaming the holidays for that extra tonnage around your middle? According to doctors at Johns Hopkins University Hospital, your growing girth is not due solely to gingerbread and turkey. You can blame it, in part, on the weather!

Dr. Maria Simonson, of the Health, Weight, and Stress Clinic at Johns Hopkins and author of The Complete University Medical Diet, explains that winter cold (or summer storms) can trigger food cravings.

Dr. Simonson reports that women, whose bodies contain more water, are sensitive to a drop in barometric pressure. "Bodies retain water, and tissues swell with this drop in pressure," Simonson explains. "Many women respond to these changes with feelings of depression and irritability, and turn to food to soothe their spirits."

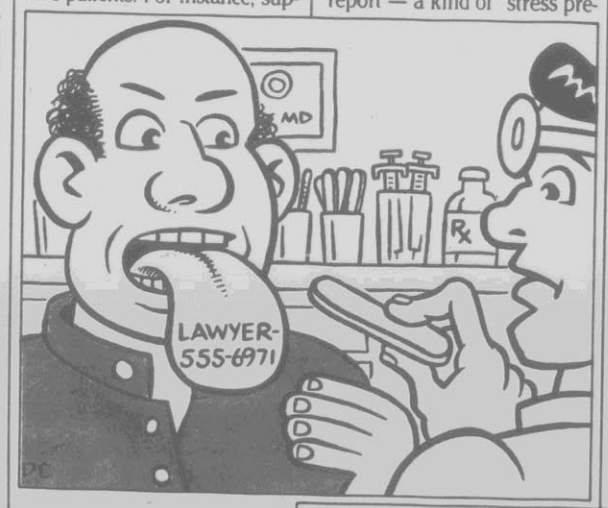

But for men as well as women, says Simonson, eating raises our body temperature and makes us feel warmer. So go ahead, have another turkey sandwich. So what if you gain a pound or two? It's not your fault: The weather made you do it!

FROM MOTOWN

WHEN THE DOCTOR WORRIES ABOUT THE COST OF A CHECKUP

And here's a flash from the annals of medicine: a kind of FBI for the AMA. Physicians Alert Inc. of Detroit is now in the business of providing doctors with legal histories of prospective patients. For instance, suppose you've chalked up a half-dozen malpractice suits against M.D.'s over the past few years. Physicians Alert will so inform your doctor and leave it up to him to decide whether to treat you or send you on to the next shingle down the street.

What would Hippocrates say? Well, that ancient Greek didn't have to deal with skyrocketing malpractice insurance costs. If he had, his oath might have been unprintable.

A MAIL-ORDER REMEDY FOR STRESS

The people at Fitcom Corp. in Havertown, Pa., believe that stress management begins at home. They have thus devised a Personal Fitness and Stress Profile. The questionnaire, developed by a team of health-care professionals, asks about your eating, drinking, smoking, exercise, work, and social habits.

Once you complete the profile, you mail it to the Stress Control Institute, where it is evaluated by experts. Some weeks later, you receive a report — a kind of "stress prescription" — outlining ways to create a less stressful you.

The program's director, Jay Segal, Ph.D., an associate professor at Temple University, claims that the Stress Profile is "a standard, cost-effective means [$50 per questionnaire] to help control stress before it results in physical or behavioral ailments."

FROM NEW YORK

THE LATEST TREND FOR TEENAGERS: SPEAKING IN TONGUES

The Modern Language Association (MLA) reports that the number of high school and college students learning foreign languages has risen for the first time in 15 years. The New York City-based outfit notes especially large gains in the study of Japanese and Russian. Also enjoying renewed popularity are Chinese, French, Italian, Spanish and German.

Monica Devens of the MLA points to several factors: Chinese- and Japanese-Americans' desire to study their heritages; the appeal of Russian to students of America's position as a superpower; and increased interest in international business careers. And then there are those, we figure, who just want to impress their dates in restaurants.

BEDSIDE READING

What are people reading before they retire for the night? Here are two reports:

Dennis Smith, author of Steely Blue and Report From Engine Co. 82:

"I just finished reading The Voyage of the Armada by David Howarth. It examines how the arrogance of the king and the cowardice of his dukes led to the defeat of the Armada. It is important to look at the people who surround great leaders. It's on my mind with our current situation in the White House."

Richard Ornberg, firefighter, Des Plaines, Ill., fire department:

"I have just read James Michener's new book, Space. Being a firefighter who works with paramedics, I use a lot of equipment that we wouldn't have if it weren't for the space program. The book talks about how, through necessity, the scientists developed this equipment that we use daily in our work."

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Hat is moved. 2. Arm is moved. 3. Collar is different. 4. Bag is smaller. 5. Name is different. 6. Poster is smaller.

• FUN HOUSE! To Grandma's house we go, at right, and oddly enough with two deft moves we can turn the whole place around. That is, by repositioning two lines we can turn the house in a new direction. Which lines? Set up house with toothpicks or paperclips and see if you can answer.

Move line No. 5 to connect upper ends of 2 and 4. Move line No. 10 to extend from top of 4 to intersection of 6 and 7.

ALPHABET SOUP SET TO VERSE

Solve this verse riddle, if you can:
Fifty is my first,
nothing, my second;
Five just makes my third,
My fourth a vowel is reckoned;
Now, to fill my whole, put all parts together;
I die if I get cold, but never mind cold
weather.
What am I?

Clue words "first," "second," "third," and "fourth," refer to successive letters. What is the answer to which all these clues lead?

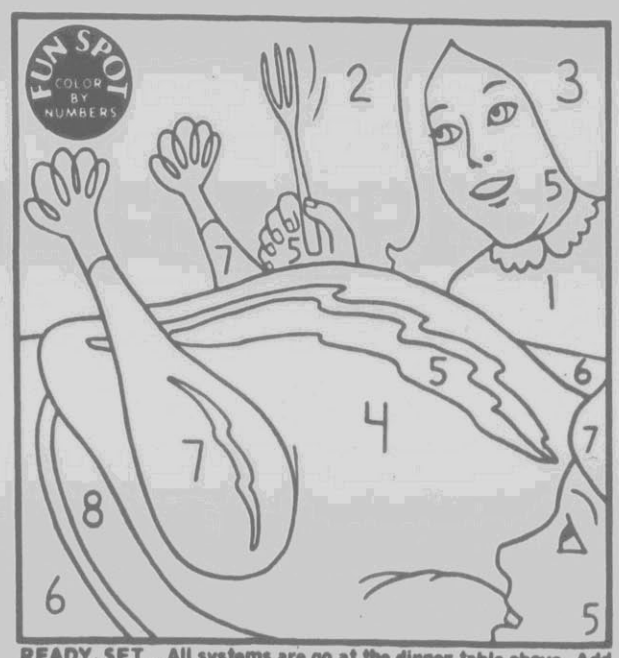

The answer is L.O.V.E

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

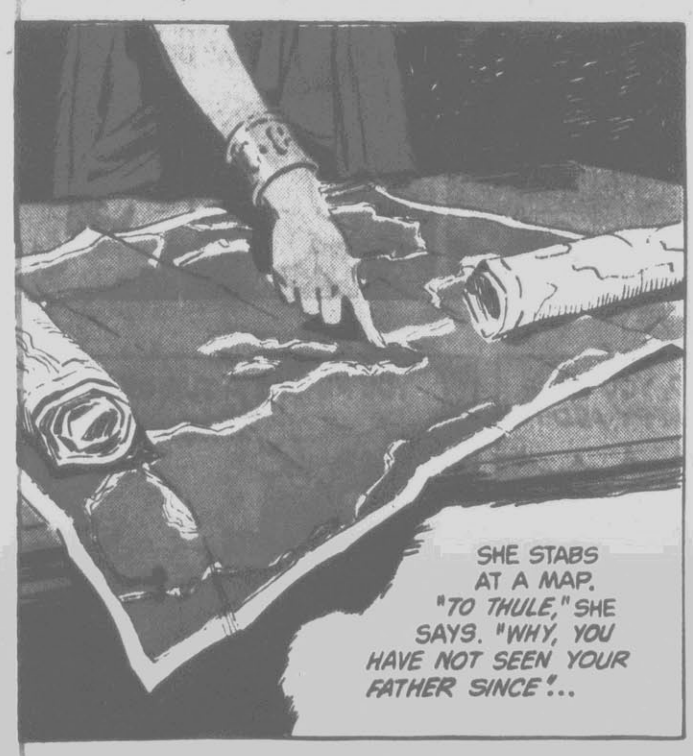

Our Story: AMID THE CHAOS OF FLIGHT, ENTRIES IN THE CHRONICLES ARE FEW. WE KNOW THAT SOME WEEKS ARE SPENT IN GAUL, WHERE KING ARTHUR IS REJOINED BY THE KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE. THEY ARE WEARY FROM THEIR BATTLE WITH THE VISIGOTHS, AND ANGRY THAT THEY COULD NOT COME TO CAMELOT'S AID.

"THE FRANKS YOU SAVED," KING ARTHUR ACCUSES. "THE BRITONS YOU LEFT DEFENSELESS." WHAT CAN GAWAIN SAY? THAT IT WAS THE KING'S OWN DOING?

THE GLOOM AND ILL TEMPER PROVE TOO MUCH FOR ALETA. "YOU MEN! THERE IS NOTHING WE CAN DO TILL SPRING. LET US LEAVE THIS PLACE AND GO WHERE WINTER IS BELOVED AND GOOD FRIENDS WILL NURSE OUR SPIRITS."

"ENOUGH," INTERRUPTS PRINCE VALIANT. BUT AS A SMILE CREEPS OVER HIS FACE, HE ADDS: "TO THULE."

OUTFITTED BY A GRATEFUL FRANKISH KING, THE BRITONS SET FORTH AT ONCE, AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE LAST FEW WEEKS OF CALM WATER BEFORE THE NORTH WINDS INCITE THE WAVES. THEY WILL PASS THE WINTER AT VIKINGSHOLM, AND RECOVER FROM THEIR ORDEAL.
