Hundreds Injured

Death Toll Reaches 80 In Mexico Explosions

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A series of explosions at a natural gas processing complex triggered a huge fire today in a suburb of the Mexican capital, sending smoke and flames high into the air and wrecking nearby homes. Early reports said at least 80 people were killed and hundreds were injured.

Alfonso Olvera Reyes, mayor of Tlalneptanla, where the explosions occurred, said by telephone that "nearly 400 people were injured and 80 killed." A rescue worker said he personally saw 35 bodies.

The fire was still burning four hours after the first explosions.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated, some on city buses that were diverted from their regular routes. Many people fled on foot, some clad only in their underwear.

Dozens of ambulances were seen moving in and out of the suburb northeast of the capital. The injured were taken to several hospitals. At one facility, reporters said the injured were crowding the hallways.

The Red Cross said it had no preliminary figures on casualties.

Arturo Escamilla, a worker with the private volunteer rescue organization Laser, said more than 30 acres in the poor, crowded district were devastated by the initial explosion.

"I, myself, saw more than 35 bodies there. And that is one area only," Escamilla said.

His brother Isidro Escamilla, also a rescue worker, said, "There were people coming out of there all ablaze." He said the explosions sent sections of flaming gas pipes and other construction material raining down on nearby homes and other buildings, setting them afire.

A spokeswoman at the Traumatology Hospital said the facility was "saturated" with wounded and many of the injured had to be diverted to other hospitals. She said many people suffered severe burns.

"We are saturated with wounded and injured. We even have them in the corridors," said the spokeswoman, who refused to give her name.

Hundreds of less severely injured people and other refugees were evacuated to a makeshift clinic at the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

Dozens of nearby houses were wrecked, residents said. Residents told reporters a small supermarket was behind the area where the first explosion occurred, and that many people were in line outside the store waiting to buy milk at the time of the blast.

Genovevo Rivas, a traffic policeman, said the explosion blew away the roof of the supermarket and the flaming debris set it ablaze. "There were a lot of people in there," he said. "Maybe 30, maybe 40 casualties. I don't know."

An air force pilot, Captain Gonzalo

Sciler, told a television interviewer he flew over the area and "the fire was spreading everywhere."

Salvador Del Rio, spokesman for the state-owned oil monopoly PEMEX, said a gas truck exploded and the resulting fire spread to the installations of the Unigas company and then to the Pemex installations where natural gas for two nearby refineries is stored.

The explosions began at 5:42 a.m. (6:42 a.m. EST). Residents said the blasts were heard up to two miles away and smoke could be seen at least four miles away. Huge columns of fire could be seen from several miles away.

"It felt as if there was an earthquake, it shook the earth and then a huge flame shot up," an unidentified resident told the Televisa television network.

Lt. Guillermo Bolsa of the Federal Highway Police said the state petroleum monopoly closed its main gasoline that bring natural gas from the Gulf of Mexico fields to the capital.

"It was imperative to do that immediately since the 16-inch line could well explode. The place is an inferno. No one can get near," said Bolsa.

In a television interview, Bolsa said the main highway linking Mexico City with points north was also blocked and traffic diverted. He said an area of at least 15 blocks around the site was being cordoned off.

U.S., Nicaragua Are Talking Again

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Nicaragua are resuming diplomatic talks over their bitter political dispute, but Nicaragua's foreign minister says it is up to the Reagan administration to make concessions.

Miguel D'Escoto, the Sandinista foreign minister, said Sunday the talks would begin today in Mexico between Harry Schlaudeman, special U.S. envoy to Central America, and Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister.

The White House has said only that the discussions, which began in June and recessed last month, would resume in the near future. The State Department, following past practice, declined Sunday to pinpoint the time and place.

Appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," D'Escoto said the success of the negotiations rests with the Reagan administration, which he accused of stirring up "official hysteria" against his leftist Sandinista government.

"We believe that any negotiation means that you ... want to sacrifice something," he said. "We've already done that. We accepted the Contadora proposal. ... We have demonstrated our willingness to compromise."

D'Escoto was referring to the Central American peace plan advanced by Colombia, Panama, Mexico and Venezuela. The United States once supported the proposal, but backed away earlier this year after Nicaragua said it would accept it.

Asked whether he expected any progress to be made in the talks, D'Escoto replied: "It all depends on whether the Reagan administration is into engaging in fruitful and constructive dialogue. We want to do that. Up to now, they've been going through a sort of charade. We're willing, and we hope that on this occasion, more progress can be made."

He said that Nicaragua wants peaceful relations with the United States.

"We are not enemies of the United States," he said. "We want to have a good relationship with the U.S. if they would only respect our right of self-determination."

D'Escoto said, however, that the U.S. government "has been waging a war" against his nation for four years and has been "contaminating the American public with official hysteria over Nicaragua" since President Reagan's re-election.

He said the "official hysteria," including since-discounted reports that Soviet MiG fighter planes had been shipped to Nicaragua, has been accompanied by "stepped up muscle-flexing exercises" in Central America and at U.S. military bases.

"All of these trends lead us to believe that they have now ... come to the conclusion they must look for the precise moment, for the opportunity, to do what Mr. Reagan has always wanted to do — which is to topple the government of Nicaragua," D'Escoto said.

He defended Nicaragua's acceptance of arms shipments from the Soviet Union and would not rule out the possibility that weapons are on board another vessel headed for his nation.

"What I can tell you for sure is there's nothing that we don't have a right to obtain," he said. "We can not get in as many (arms) from the Western countries because the U.S. has told them not to provide us arms."

D'Escoto said the flow of arms could be slowed if the United States agreed to "stop attacking Nicaragua, killing our people, stop sending CIA aircraft to provide logistical supplies for the people who are inside our country, who are coming from Honduras."

He said that it was "sheer hypocrisy." (Please turn to page 12)

Pitt Democrats Cautious On Martin's Tax Measures

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

An attitude of caution, of wait and see has been expressed by Democratic legislators from Pitt County on the subject of proposed tax cuts being advocated by Republican governor-elect Jim Martin.

Greenville attorney Tom Taft, senator-elect from the 9th N. C. State Senate District said this morning, "I intend to work with governor-elect Martin on everything that I am able to. I'm keeping an open mind on proposed tax cuts and will listen to his proposals."

"I am concerned about not eroding our tax base. We have to look at all needs as well as the constitutional obligation to balance the budget before coming to any decisions. Pitt County, as well as East Carolina University, and the community college systems all have the need to continue to progress if America is to maintain its capabilities in science, technology and industrial capabilities, and North Carolina must do its part.

"Overall," Taft added, "I have to say my feeling is one of caution on tax issues. Of all the proposals being discussed, the most meritorious is probably the repeal of the inventory taxes. I feel this can be done only if these taxes are replaced by other revenues to the local government."

N. C. Representative Walter B. Jones of the Ninth N.C. House District commented, "I feel that I want to hear the proposals from Martin in detail. It's too early for me to tell what the ramifications might be until I see the results of the research to be done by the fiscal department."

"My primary thought," Jones says, "is that we ought to give Martin an opportunity to explain his proposals before any decision on our part is made."

Two legislators, senator-elect Bob L. Martin and Rep. Ed Warren could not be contacted for comment.

Charges Levied After Car Chase

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Multiple charges resulted from a chase early Saturday morning that began on Dickinson Avenue and ended about 12:42 a.m. on Memorial Drive at the Country Club Road intersection where three vehicles, including a Greenville Police Department car, were damaged.

Police attempted to stop a car driven by Bobby Gene Hannah, 17, of Route 5, Greenville, for a traffic check when the car sped off, officers said. The chase led west on Dickinson Avenue and south along Memorial Drive, where police set up a running road block and finally stopped the Hannah vehicle.

Highway Patrol Trooper D.R. Taylor said after he stopped, Hannah then attempted to drive to the right of a police car driven by Officer Robert Brewington, but struck the vehicle. In another attempt to flee, Taylor said Hannah backed up, striking a passing car driven by Lee Arthur Adams Jr., 27, of Norfolk, Va.

Taylor, who set damages from the collisions at $1,000 to the police car, $300 to the Hannah vehicle and $950 to the Adams car, charged both Hannah and Adams with driving while impaired.

Greenville police charged Hannah with speeding to elude arrest, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, hit and run driving and no operators license.

Taylor said a warrant was also issued charging Hannah with unauthorized use of the vehicle, which was owned by his sister.

Libyan Agents Discussed Plans For Assassination, Hijacking, Official Says

By MAURICE GUINDI
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libyan agents arrested in Cairo in a plot to kill a Libyan exile have confessed that they also planned to hijack a U.S.-built F-16 jetfighter and assassinate Egyptian leaders, Egypt's interior minister was quoted today as saying.

The weekly newspaper Mayo, published by the governing National Democratic Party, also quoted Interior Minister Ahmed Rushdi as saying the Libyan agents promised to introduce their Egyptian collaborators, who in fact were undercover security police, to the international terrorist Carlos.

Rushdi cited purported confessions made by Anthony Gill, 48, said to be the leader of the four-man team sent by Libya to Cairo to assassinate former Libyan Prime Minister Abdel-Hamid Bakoush, who has lived in the Egyptian capital since 1977.

Egyptian security used pictures showing Bakoush lying in a pool of blood to trick the team into believing the former prime minister had been killed last week. Bakoush appeared alive with Rushdi at a news conference Saturday.

Today, in an appearance on NBC's

"Today Show," Bakoush called for an economic or diplomatic boycott against Libya to protest terrorism. "There must be an action by the whole world against this Khadafi," he said. "How can such a man be left loose?"

Rushdi said Godfrey Shiner, 47, London and two Maltese were also arrested in the plot. The four arrested agents are currently being interrogated by state security prosecution authorities prior to being served with an official indictment.

"Confessions by the leader of the group showed that one of the principal aims was to gather information about the F-16 and to explore the possibility of hijacking one to Libya," Rushdi was quoted by Mayo as saying.

Egypt has received 80 F-16s from the United States and another 40 will be delivered by the end of next year, air force commander Gen. Abdel-Hamid Hilmy said.

Rushdi said Libyan agents also confessed that Libya "planned to assassinate some Egyptian leaders and blow up some vital Egyptian installations in a manner similar to

Couple Weds Saturday In Pactolus Church

The marriage of Jackie Lynn Lee and Allen Ray Woolard took place Saturday in the Pactolus Missionary Baptist Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Lee and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Tim Woolard.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Tommy

MRS. WOOLARD

Payne. A program of nuptial music was presented by Katrina Gray. Marty Warren sang "Endless Love," "Theme From Love Story," "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown of white bridal taffeta. The fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline were enhanced with silk Venise lace and ruffles of chantilly lace at the shoulders. The bouffant three-quarter sleeves were trimmed with lace and a taffeta bow. The full skirt and chapel train were caught up with bows and draped over tiers of lace ruffles. She carried a cascade of white miniature carnations and pink sweetheart roses accented with baby's breath.

Connie Lee Bunch, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Tammy Diane Lee, sister of the bride, and Crystal Lou Ann Woolard, sister of the bridegroom. Each wore a formal gown of suede rose faille taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring a ruffle of taffeta outlining the off-shoulder bodice and scooped back. Rosettes accented the ruffle. Short cap sleeves complemented the gown and a sash of taffeta encircled the modified waistline from which fell the gathered skirt. Each wore a halo of white pom poms and baby's breath and carried a bouquet of white pom poms, statice and baby's breath tied with white lace ribbons.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Sam Tim Woolard, brother of the bridegroom, Ted and Octavious Wallace, cousins of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a mid-length dress of magenta chiffon with cap sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a mid-length dress of dusty rose accented by a mandarin collar. Each wore white cymbidium orchids. Grandmothers, Mrs. Noel Lee, Hyacinth Toler, Annie Woolard and Louise Pyle, wore white carnation corsages.

The mothers were remembered with red roses.

Kathryn Lewis directed the wedding.

Following the ceremony parents of the bride entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held in the fellowship hall and was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

Arrow point lace panels and gently puffed sleeves highlight a classic knitted cardigan, perfect for the casual or dressy look. The back of this unquestionably feminine sweater has a double panel of the lace pattern stitch. The pattern panels are placed on the sweater in such a way that you will be doing no increasing or decreasing within the pattern stitch.

Unabbreviated directions are written for sizes 32 through 40. Knitting worsted-weight yarn with a gauge of 4 1/2 stitches to the inch is used.

To obtain directions for making the Lace Panel Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-1118 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-1118 by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Send $10.50 for sizes 32 or 34; $12 for size 36; $13.50 for size 38; $15 for size 40. (Sizes are listed for actual body bust measurements.) The kit price includes shipping charges, the instruction leaflet and knitting worsted-weight yarn in your choice of the following colors: Fisherman White, Light Blue, Burgundy, Rust, Mint Green or Light Gold.

The creative knitter can often find one basic pattern that fits her well and create a whole wardrobe of sweaters from this single pattern. The sweater shown today is a good example. The styling is classic but timely, and would allow for many variations.

Make it just as shown in one or more colors, or try a tweedy or variegated yarn with or without the pattern stitch. Then try it with pattern panels of your own choosing. Other lace stitch patterns of about the same width can be used with no alterations in the number of stitches on the needle.

Suppose, however, you wish to use an entirely different type of pattern stitch — one of the many cable variations, for example. Cables have a tendency to draw the knitted fabric in, therefore requiring a few extra stitches to compensate for this.

This doesn't have to be a matter of guesswork, however.

First, make a sample swatch of the pattern stitch used on your leaflet. This is a good idea anyway to become familiar with the stitch before starting your garment. Then, with the same size needles, cast on the same number of stitches and make another swatch, this time working the stitches — or part of them — in a cable pattern.

When the second swatch is finished, place it on top of the lace panel swatch, matching edges on the left side. You are likely to find that there are a few extra stitches showing on the right side of the lace panel swatch.

If, for example, you find four extra stitches showing on the right side, you need to increase four stitches in the last row of your ribbing before you start into the pattern stitch to achieve the correct size.

Then, let's assume you are working on the left front of the cardigan and that you are told to knit 20 stitches before the start of the pattern and 16

ARROW POINT...lace panels on this cardigan are placed so that the knitter needn't increase or decrease within the pattern stitch.

after you have finished the pattern panel. In this case, I would recommend that you knit 22, work the pattern, and knit 18 after the panel.

Whenever you make an adjustment such as this in the number of stitches on the needle, you will have to remember that these extra stitches have to be taken into account when you start the neckline or shoulder shapings.

In the example I have given, it is also assumed that the pattern panel is worked on the same number of stitches. If the stitch number within the pattern panel is different, you will have to adjust your stockinette stitches differently.

There are too many possible stitch counts for me to give you exact directions, but the general principle will apply to almost any pattern stitch

THUMBSUCKING OR PACIFIER?

If your infant has the thumb-sucking habit, should you try to replace this habit with a pacifier?

All babies have a natural instinct to suck. But if the habit lingers beyond infancy, when the primary teeth are beginning to appear, you may want to give baby a pacifier. If you start the pacifier soon enough, just after your child has been weaned and is getting solid foods, your child may never develop the thumb-sucking habit. Pacifiers have proved a lot less harmful to a child's teeth and mouth than sucking thumb or fingers. Thumbsucking may force your child's teeth out of position and narrow the dental arches. This may cause the upper teeth to protrude outward because of a deformation of the supporting bone. One advantage of the pacifier is that it is made of soft rubber, while thumb or fingers have an unyielding bone inside. They exert much more pressure than a pacifier and are much more likely to cause dental problems.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

If your Thanksgiving menu this year is to be a traditional one, the chances are you'll want to serve creamed onions with the turkey. Fortunately, pearl onions — those small white globes that are only from 3/4 to 1 inch in diameter — now come packed in 10-ounce baskets from California and are available nationally in many supermarkets. They're expensive, but they taste mild and sweet and make a splendid holiday offering.

You'll need two baskets to have the pound called for in the following recipe, but you will of course have some onions left over. In weighing the onions for the Thanksgiving dish, we picked the 1-inch ones and kept the smaller ones for another use. One pound of the 1-inch pearl onions measures 3 cups — about 60.

Instead of using a plain cream sauce with the onions for the Thanksgiving dish, we suggest embellishing it with cheddar cheese and pistachio nuts. An attractive and delicious combination.

CREAMY ONIONS WITH PISTACHIOS

- 1 pound 1-inch pearl onions
- Boiling water
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 4 teaspoons all-purpose flour
- 1 cup milk
- 2 ounces finely shredded cheddar cheese (1/2 cup packed)
- Salt to taste
- 1/4 cup (or more) coarsely chopped pistachio nutmeats

In a medium saucepan, cover onions with boiling water; bring to a boil and boil 3 minutes. Drain; rinse with cold water. Cut away root ends; gently squeeze toward stem ends to slip off skins. Cut a shallow "X" on each root end to help keep onion intact.

In the clean saucepan, cover peeled onions with boiling water; bring to a boil, uncovered, and boil until tender — 15 minutes. Drain.

In the clean dry saucepan melt butter; over low heat stir in flour until smooth; off heat, gradually stir in milk, keeping smooth. Stir in onions and heat to serving temperature. Off heat, stir in cheese and salt until cheese melts. Top with pistachios.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.
Note: If you wish, you may use small silverskin onions or very small (each about 1 ounce) yellow globe onions in this recipe.

Corrine McCain taught a workshop on canvas. It was a bargella star. The meeting also included a luncheon.

The Tuesday night meeting will be held at the home of Gloria Baker, 312 Queen Anne's Road, starting at 7:30. The program will be a continuation of the birthday party and making a Christmas ornament.

The Embroiderers' Guild is a non-profit organization established to promote and encourage interest in needlework. For information on the guild call Ms. Baker at 756-8840 or Lucille Sumrell at 752-4137.

Skier Should Not Consider Amputation

DEAR ABBY: I'm hoping that you or perhaps one of your readers can help me. I am a cross-country skier who froze the tips of two toes the winter before last. This past winter, they were very sensitive to the cold and did not take long to freeze. I was miserable.

I have even considered having these toes amputated, one to the first joint and the other to the second joint, but I'm afraid they will feel like they are still there, and frozen.

Does anyone have any suggestions about how to keep these toes warm and from freezing?

I've asked in ski shops, and no one has come up with a solution.

LOVES TO SKI
IN NEW YORK

DEAR LOVES: Please, do not consider amputation! See your physician. Surely he or she can come up with a suitable solution.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "In Love in Oregon," who went to Harris Beach, Ore., and met a girl from Grants Pass. He said it was love at first sight and they spent a fabulous weekend together, but they said goodbye before he could get her last name. He asked you to help him find her.

If he's sincere, he should have no trouble finding her. He could go to Grants Pass and knock on doors, asking, "Does Mary live here?"

Or he could place an ad in the local newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me!" (And give his telephone number.)

Or he could get copies of the local high school yearbooks for the appropriate years and find her picture.

He could also have fliers printed saying, "MISSING. THE GIRL I LOVE. FIRST NAME 'MARY.' PLEASE HELP ME FIND HER!" and tack the fliers on telephone poles.

Of course, if he feels that the time and expense aren't worth it, he doesn't deserve to find her.

PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR PORT: If he places an ad in the Grants Pass newspaper saying, "Mary, I love you. Call me," and gives his telephone number, he may have more marriageable Marys than he knows what to do with. He might even meet another "Mary" and fall madly in love with her at first sight, too.

There's even an outside chance that his Mary is already married, or going (or living) with someone, and she's hiding.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column in which you made a pitch for handgun control was a lot of bull. You said: In 1980, handguns killed 77 people in Japan, eight in Great Britain, 24 in Switzerland, eight in Canada, 23 in Israel, 18 in Sweden, four in Australia and 11,522 in the United States. You said we must be doing something wrong.

I can tell you what we're doing wrong. In foreign countries, criminals are stopped after their first crime because bleeding-heart liberals haven't forced the judicial system to put the rights of the criminal before those of the victim.

If people really want to get rid of handguns, they should put the criminals behind bars where they belong. Then the rest of us won't have to carry guns to protect ourselves and loved ones.

B.H.,

SHENANDOAH, IOWA

DEAR B.H.: Voltaire, the famous 18-century French philosopher and author, is reported to have said: "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." I'm with Voltaire.

And for those of you who want to send a few bucks to the National Rifle Association, its address is: 1600 Rhode Island Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Dreams

The national election euphoria didn't last long. In fact, it ended in about a week.

That old dread of a budget deficit reared its ugly head; and cheerful dismissals of the problem with assurances economic growth would solve everything became highly suspect.

For one thing, the August forecast of a $172 billion deficit for the 1985 fiscal year fell far short of post-election projections. Budget director David Stockman's subsequent deficit projection (last week) added $18 billion to the earlier figure, volunteering the possibility it was reaching toward $210 billion.

(Last summer the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office predicted that by 1989 the red ink would hit $263 billion without farther spending reductions, tax increases, or both.)

With the repeated solemn promise by President Reagan there would be no tax increase, he is left with the prospect of producing a new tax system that will increase revenues (meaning a bigger bite on taxpayers without the stigma of "increasing taxes"), or repeating the alibi his problems are inherited and biting the bullet of increased taxation via the present formula.

The point that somebody has to provide more federal revenue if the deficit is to be brought down was underlined by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas. Too many responsible voices have said the limit on cutting federal spending has just about been reached. The bottom of the barrel is in sight.

We continue to dream the element of reduced waste could spell a big difference in deficit spending; but more and more we fear fiscal waste has become an entrenched quality of government.

The budgetary deficit problem ranks with the biggest Mr. Reagan has to face. How he handles it is going to largely determine the grade he gets after eight years.

'Costs'

"Cost containment" is a relatively new term in the medical profession, but for people with long memories it is a welcome exercise in keeping necessary health care within parameters of personal income.

So, with people enjoying long memories (among whom we are a dues-paying member) we are pleased the ECU School of Medicine will make future doctors more conscious of patient costs in their practice.

Our contribution to fuller understanding of the importance attached to cost containment comes from a Pitt Memorial Hospital bill given a new father in March 1955. For all services (over a five-day period) except the doctor's fee, it came to $93.85.

Since those days of innocence, inflation intruded, affecting costs of everything.

We have no desire to return to the economy of 1955; we would like to see the 1984 economy stabilized for the foreseeable future. Medical care costs are part of the inflationary spiral.

Obviously future doctors share the responsibility of other professions, businesses and industries in restraining their costs without compromising the quality of their services. It's a good move.

Who Ends Up Paying The Bill?

—Paul O'Connor—

GA RALEIGH — You're walking along a country road with your child when a dog runs out in front of a truck carrying hazardous waste products from the local factory. The truck swerves to avoid the dog, swerves to avoid you and tumbles into a stream that feeds into the local water supply.

Although the truck did not hit you, you are sprayed with burning chemicals. Your child isn't burned but quickly grows woozy from the fumes. Some chemicals spill into the stream before a cleanup crew arrives.

That is the kind of hypothetical, but totally plausible, scenario that has a legislative study committee looking at the state's liability laws for the producers and transporters of hazardous wastes.

No one was at any fault here. But some people were hurt. Now the question arises: Who pays? Under current North Carolina law, it is entirely possible that you could not recover anything. This was an accident, no negligence was proved and negligence is a necessary ingredient under current liability laws. Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, a lawyer, says that's not fair. He introduced legislation in the 1983 session that would have created the standard of "strict liability" for those handling hazardous wastes but opposition from business leaders meant the bill's death in the Senate after it had passed the House.

The study committee is looking at Hackney's bill now, trying to compromise with business lobbyists to provide some protection from this kind of scenario. (Things like this rarely happen, Hackney says. Industry is usually very careful.)

Under Hackney's bill, several parties would be eligible to collect compensation from the generator and the transporter of the hazardous wastes. It is Hackney's belief that "because you're on the public highways, carrying extremely dangerous materials, you ought to be liable to someone who gets injured by that material, whether or not you were negligent."

In this hypothetical accident, you were burned, so you could sue. Also, your child may have suffered physical harm that will not be evident for years. Maybe in 25 or 30 years, some kind of internal disorder will be traced back to her exposure to those chemicals. Under Hackney's bill, an injured person could sue up to 30 years after such an accident. Current liability law allows for only 10 years.

Finally, the chemicals slipped into the water supply and, downriver, someone might become ill. They could sue under Hackney's bill, although their case would be more difficult to prove.

North Carolina common law already deals with situations similar to that which Hackney's bill addresses. "Under our common law, when you engage in ultra-hazardous activities, such as blasting, and someone gets hurt, you pay whether there was negligence or not," Hackney said.

Opposition to the bill is strong. There remains the possibility that Hackney won't even be able to get his bill out of the study committee, let alone through the General Assembly. But members of the committee appear a bit testy with industry spokesmen who oppose the bill. "You're opposing a bill but you have not told the committee what it should do to make the situation better," Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, committee chairman said in rebuking business lobbyists.

Hackney doesn't have to win his battle in the legislature. Given the common law, it is entirely possible, he said, that if a case like the hypothetical above ever occurs, the courts could rule that "strict liability" should apply. Hackney says he'd just prefer that the legislature, not the courts, make that decision.

How Goes The Holiday?

NEW YORK (AP) — By the reckoning of many Wall Street analysts, the Christmas selling season that begins this week is shaping up as an important test for the economy.

They say the behavior of consumers during the holiday period will go a long way toward determining whether business activity can resume a healthy growth rate into early 1985, or whether an economic slump of some consequence is in the offing.

Last year at this time, many retailers were in a confident mood approaching this pivotal stage of the year for their business. The economy was surging ahead, and consumers were in a spending mood after the lean Christmases many had experienced in the 1981-82 recession.

This time around, however, the outlook is filled with question marks. Since last summer, economic growth has clearly lost some of its momentum.

By all accounts, that has translated into lower retail sales than had been hoped for, and stepped-up price competition in the industry. The other day the government reported that retail sales declined 0.1 percent in October.

Yet recent surveys have found that consumer confidence appears very strong — higher, in fact, than it was a year ago at this time. Employment growth remains vigorous as well.

So the portents are mixed as the start of the season nears. As John Connolly at the investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. points out, at least the retailers have the calendar working in their favor.

The observance of Thanksgiving, which traditionally marks the start of the holiday selling season, takes place on the fourth Thursday in November. As chance would have it, that Thursday falls on the 22nd of the month this year.

Thus, says Connolly, "there are 32 days — the maximum — between Thanksgiving and Christmas." He adds parenthetically, "They are all selling days, Virginia."

Optimistic observers say there are good reasons to believe that recent weakness in retail sales has been just a temporary lull. In much of the eastern United States, for one thing, October was warmer than usual, depressing demand for items like winter coats.

"We remain convinced that when weather becomes seasonably cool, sales gains will accelerate nicely," said analysts David Taylor and Tom Tashjian in a recent report for Prudential-Bache Securities.

In addition, some of the softness in the recent figures has been attributed to low auto inventories, partly resulting from short strikes in September.

"But it goes beyond that," says Connolly. "Merchants have simply found it difficult to entice the consumer to open his/her pocket-book."

With interest rates having come down of late, Connolly observes, the role of Santa Claus could be played this year by Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve Board. If the Fed continues to relax its credit policy, inducing a further drop in interest rates, money now socked away in banks and money funds could emerge from those havens to help fill Christmas stockings.

Whether that will happen remains to be seen, of course. For now, Connolly says the best description of the outlook for the holiday selling season is probably "decent but subdued."

Strength For Today

A state division of motor vehicles published a pamphlet titled, "How Fast Can You Stop?" The folder gives a terrifying picture of what may happen if the brakes of one's automobile are not in good working condition.

The picture of a person being subjected to split second deceleration and being tossed several hundred feet as a result, reminds us that the brakes with which we as individuals are equipped (they are known as inhibitions) have to be kept in good working shape if we are to avoid trouble. How many real tragedies have occurred because people could not throw on the brake quickly enough to keep back a torrent of words which broke up a marriage, or destroyed a friendship, or dissolved a business partnership.

Brakes are as necessary in operating a car as is a good engine. And without sound brakes operating on thought, word and act, every individual is trifling with disaster.

Old Brunswick Town: A Site Filled With Memories

Visitors to the Brunswick Town State Historic Site will find only ruins of a once bustling town that was the scene of armed defiance of Great Britain nine years before the Battle of Lexington and eight years prior to the Boston Tea Party.

By their resistance to royal authority at Brunswick Town in 1765, the men of the lower Cape Fear prevented the enforcement of the Stamp Act in the area. It was one of a series of disputes between the colonies and mother country which culminated in the American Revolution.

But, ironically, the revolution sounded the final death knell of the town, which at one time was the leading port in the American colonies for the export of lumber and naval stores — tar, pitch and turpentine — to England. The British burned Brunswick Town in 1776, but by then most of its inhabitants had fled to nearby Wilmington or elsewhere in the colonies.

Only four families moved back to Brunswick Town after the revolution. In 1842, the site was sold to Frederick Hill for $4.25 and became a part of Orton Plantation. Except for a brief period during the Civil War, when the Confederates built Fort Anderson on the site as part of the defense of Wilmington, Brunswick Town laid abandoned.

Methodist Bishop Francis Asbury, wrote this description of the town in 1804: "An old town, demolished houses, and the noble walls of a brick church; there remains but four houses entire."

The noble walls of St. Phillips Church, 33 inches thick and 22 1/2 feet high still stand, but in 1952 when E. Lawrence Lee Jr. of the University of North Carolina history department began studying the site, he found large trees growing inside its walls. Along the Cape Fear River, where the town had stood, he found a ticket of yaupon, scrub oaks and holly so thick that he literally had to cut his way through. Lee and archaeologist Stanley South of the state Department of Archives and History, who succeeded Lee, found a number of interesting ruins in addition to the walls of St. Phillips and the breastworks of Fort Anderson. They also located the breastworks of a fort which guarded the town during the Revolutionary War and the stone foundations of the homes of some of its leading citizens. Before the museum-visitor center was opened in 1967, the workers had also cleared away most of the trees which had hidden the walls of the church. They also found several open wells.

Brunswick Town was begun in 1726 when Col. Maurice Moore began laying off half-acre lots on 350 acres of a 1,500-acre land grant he received from the king of England. Cornelius Harnett, father of the Revolutionary War hero of the same name, bought the first two lots. The following year, Harnett, a tavern keeper, received a license to operate a ferry from Brunswick Town to the east bank of the Cape Fear.

The town grew rapidly, and in 1748 its importance as a shipper of lumber and naval stores, vital to the operation of the British fleet, made it a tempting target for the Spanish during a conflict — the War of Jenkins' Ear. The townsfolk were caught by surprise when two Spanish ships arrived and began shelling and a column of several hundred Spanish soldiers, which had been landed downstream, fought within 100 yards of the town before it was discovered. The townspeople fled while the Spaniards set about pillaging and destroying.

Two days later the Brunswick Town folks counterattacked and drove the Spaniards back to their ships. The battle had become a stalemate when the Fortune, one of the largest Spanish ships, was ripped by a terrific explosion and the others fled. Funds derived from the sale of goods salvaged from the ship were used to complete St. Phillips Church and St. James Church in Wilmington. A painting of Christ, entitled Ecce Homo, which now hangs in the vestry of the Wilmington church, was one of the objects taken from the Spanish ship.

Meanwhile, a group of Wilmington citizens organized an association and swore to resist the Stamp Act to the death. The association sent a column of more than 1,000 men to march on Brunswick Town. They were led by Cornelius Harnett of Wilmington, one of the wealthiest and most influential men in the colony. The colonists called themselves "Sons of Liberty," but Gov. Tryon dubbed them "inhabitants in arms."

The Sons of Liberty tried to extract a promise from colony officials not to enforce the Stamp Act. All promised to comply except William Pennington, a comptroller who had taken refuge in Tryon's house. The next day the house was surrounded and Harnett informed Tryon he was under house arrest. After Tryon and Harnett had engaged in a debate, Pennington agreed to leave with the armed men. However, this so irritated Tryon he made the comptroller resign before leaving. By the stamp tax was not enforced in North Carolina nor in any of the colonies, and the British soon repealed it.

As noted previously, virtually all the inhabitants of Brunswick Town left before or during the revolution. The area reverted to yaupon, scrub oak and holly until the Confederates constructed Fort Anderson on the site during the Civil War. The earthworks they erected, up to 25 feet high in places, stretched diagonally across what had been Brunswick Town and on for more than a mile, from the Cape Fear River to Orton Pond. Fort Anderson, with its gun emplacements almost intact, stands today much as it appeared during the Civil War when it was manned by the 40th North Carolina Regiment. These men were augmented by 900 additional Confederates after the fall of Fort Fisher on Jan. 15, 1865.

Soon Union ships began shelling Fort Anderson from the river. They pounded the fortress for three days while the Union army began surrounding it.

As a result, Bill Faulk, site assistant for the state Department of Archives and History when the museum-visitor center opened, said that as far as he could determine, "Fort Anderson was the only fort surrendered to the Federal navy by the Federal army."

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Extension Agent

The computer is sure to affect your life more and more as time goes on. All of us are now in the process of adjusting to the potential benefits of the computer in our daily lives. There is a great deal of decision-making capability within reach at present.

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension office has available a micro-computer that can be of benefit to the farmer and homeowner alike. There are programs that are capable of being run by the computer that enable the farmer to evaluate the profitability of many different field crops, horticulture crops, and livestock operations as well as programs in home economics.

In order to properly use the computer for any of the available programs, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension office for an appointment. Prior to using the computer, a farmer must know the costs that he has incurred, or will incur in producing the crop or crops that he or she would like to examine.

The computer can be a valuable tool in making decisions concerning lease arrangements, equipment purchases, feed requirements and many other important considerations of farm management. A few minutes at the computer can provide information that compares various price levels or various expectations that will affect a farmer's profit or loss at season's end.

One of the disks that is available is the "Crops disk." On it are seven different programs including:

1) CROPBUD — prepares NCSU enterprise budget sheets for field crops.

2) FMAUP — calculates feed requirements for cattle herd(s) and available forage production.

3) CROPS — produces a crop by crop analysis, divided if applicable between landlord and tenant ... shows nine results based upon the users best and worst expectations for yields and prices.

4) CROPRENT — soybean varieties information access program.

6) GRMOIS — wet to dry grain conversion.

7) VISICALA — various crop budget and other Visicalc files.

As Pitt County farmers are now arranging loans for next year's crops, the computer can help the farmer examine alternatives that may be present. Farm management and planning for profit are great concerns for the 1980s, and there is no doubt that the computer can help in generating information that is essential to wise decision making. To arrange for a computer appointment, contact the extension office at 752-2934.

Prisoner Release, War Payment Demands Are Rejected By Israel

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today rejected Lebanese demands for the release of prisoners and the payment of up to $10 billion in war reparations, during negotiations on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

At the start of the third round of talks, Israel's chief delegate instead stressed the need to agree on measures to protect Israel's northern border after an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, which it invaded almost 2½ years ago.

The Lebanese spokesman, Lt. Col. Bassam Saad, retorted that the Lebanese were not "policemen of Israel and our only objective is to seek peace in south Lebanon and to let the Lebanese civilians feel secure."

Saad said his delegation "accentuated the role of the United Nations in our country. We reminded the Israelis of the U.N. (resolutions) that say Israel should withdraw from Lebanon and let the central Lebanese government control the south."

Saad said the Lebanese negotiators "totally rejected" any role after an Israeli withdrawal for the South Lebanon Army, a militia equipped and guided by Israel. He said that included any efforts to integrate the militia into the regular Lebanese army.

Chief Israeli delegate Brig. Gen. Amos Gilboa said in a statement: "In regards to the request for compensation of $8 (billion) to $10 billion, I wish to assert most vigorously that the Israeli delegation rejects this request outright."

"The reason for our presence in this forum is to discuss security arrangements which will insure the safeguarding of our northern border.

It is not our role to discuss the irrelevant matter of compensation," Gilboa said.

During the second session of the talks in this border town last Thursday, Lebanon demanded the war reparations to offset the cost of repairing damage caused by Israel's invasion and occupation of south Lebanon.

Gilboa also rejected other Lebanese demands, including the release of hundreds of prisoners held by the Israelis at south Lebanon detention centers and the opening of key roads connecting south Lebanon with Beirut and the north.

"Israel at the present time cannot permit herself to make such gestures as long as the hostile activities against her continue," Gilboa said.

Israel had sought a cease-fire in south Lebanon but the offer was rejected by Shiite Moslem leaders.

A joint communique read by U.N. spokesman Timor Goksel at end of the day's talks said the two sides would meet again Wednesday. It said that "principles for security arrangements were presented by both sides and some positive elements appeared during the discussion."

Since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to rout Palestinian guerrillas, 602 Israelis have been killed and more than 3,500 wounded.

Greenville Utilities Offers Heat Loss Help

As temperatures go down, requests for the services of Greenville Utilities Energy Services Supervisor Robbie Tugwell go up.

Tugwell, and others in his department, can help GUC customers use energy more efficiently, and in cold weather, this means cutting excessive heat loss — a problem that translates into higher heating costs.

To help customers locate these costly leaks, Greenville Utilities is offering a thermography program. According to Tugwell, thermography is a simple technique that allows customers to "see" heat escaping from their homes. "With special infrared film, we can take a picture (thermogram) of the leaks through which heat escapes," Tugwell explained.

A certified thermography consultant contacted by GUC plans to provide the service in January 1985.

However, in order to conduct the program GUC needs 100 people to sign up for the service by Dec. 1, Tugwell said. "The thermogram costs $40, but Greenville Utilities recognizes the benefits the program can bring its customers and will contribute half the cost."

About two weeks after the color thermogram is taken, customers will receive a copy, a photograph of their home and a detailed explanation of problems detected.

"If further explanation of the thermogram is needed, I would encourage customers to contact our office for a free home energy survey," Tugwell said.

GUC's Energy Services' number is 752-7166, extension 275.

Possible MIA Remains Returned By U.S. Vet

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A retired Air Force colonel, long involved in the search for Americans missing in action in the Vietnam War, today gave the U.S. Embassy what he said were the remains of three U.S. soldiers who had been killed in Laos.

Jack E. Bailey, 61, said the remains were brought out of Laos by anti-Communist guerrillas who found them at airplane crash sites along the route of the former Ho Chi Minh Trail. The remains of another American soldier found along the same route were turned over to the embassy last Tuesday, he said.

"I hope to have 10 more remains before Christmas," Bailey said.

Bailey said he paid nothing to the guerrillas for the remains, which he said were those of servicemen killed in the mid-to-late 1960s. He would not reveal any names, however, citing U.S. government policy against naming possible victims until a positive identification has been made.

Lt. Col. Paul Mather, who handles MIA matters at the embassy, said Bailey had turned over "a small quantity of what appeared to be skeletal fragments," one identification tag and other "identification material." Mather said it would all be sent to a special U.S. military laboratory in Honolulu for examination.

Hunt Considers Options

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today he's unsure of what he will do when he leaves office after eight years, but said he is not interested in a job with the chairman of the Democratic National Committee or president of the University of North Carolina system.

Hunt, in one of his first interviews since losing the U.S. Senate race to Republican incumbent Jesse Helms, said the job with the National Democratic Party would be "too time consuming."

As for the job as university system president, Hunt said, "that is not the kind of thing I would be prepared at this time to commit the rest of my life to."

Hunt said he has given no thought to mounting a challenge to Republican Sen. John East in 1986.

"I am not about to start thinking about politics again," Hunt said, although he added he is not ruling anything out yet.

"There are a lot of exciting things to do in the world, and I'm going to look at some," Hunt said.

Hunt said he was not ready to analyze the Nov. 6 vote, but said "an avalanche situation is basically what happened."

Doctor Says Incest Problem Must Be Tackled

By TOM FORTNER
ECU Medical Writer

Few things rankle the sensibilities of people quite like the idea of incest. It is a behavior considered so dark and depraved that the taboo associated with it is as strong as any in our society. It's so strong, in fact, that most of us would rather pretend incest doesn't exist.

But a psychiatrist with the East Carolina University School of Medicine is urging health care professionals to put aside their emotional responses to incest and deal with the problem for what it is — a symptom of dysfunction in an individual family which needs and deserves medical treatment.

Incest is just one form of child sexual abuse that has received increasing attention in the national media. According to Dr. Lesly T. Mega, an ECU child psychiatrist, the term refers broadly to any type of sexual activity between persons too closely related to marry — activity ranging from "non-touching" abuse to sexual intercourse.

Whether the incidence of incest is increasing is a difficult question to answer. On the one hand, Mega speculates that there may be a built-in multiplier effect resulting from the tendency of all forms of child abuse to be repeated from one generation to the next. Therefore, those who are victims of incest as children are more likely to commit incest as adults.

Then too, theories about the causes of incestuous behavior cite contributing factors which can all be said to be on the rise today. Families which are socially isolated, broken homes with uncertain parent-child relationships, and a younger generation that increasingly looks and acts more adult are all fixtures in the social landscape of the 1980s that may be linked with child sexual abuse.

On the other hand, however, Mega believes more cases of incest are seen today simply because more are being reported. That has resulted both from a growth in awareness of health professionals as well as a greater willingness of victims to report.

"We're in an era where you can say something like that happened to you without being totally isolated and persecuted," Mega said.

Despite our growing exposure to incest, it remains a problem that can incite strong emotions in the physicians, psychologists, social workers and teachers who discover it. Such emotions, said Mega, can threaten professional detachment and impair one's ability to deliver appropriate care.

Some professionals react with outrage at the prospect that incest might be occurring and may add fuel to an already volatile situation. Others may become so upset by the prospect that they convince themselves it can't really be happening, a classic case of denial.

Another reaction is to allow feelings of loyalty toward the family to interfere with the professional responsibility to deal with the problem, so nothing is done. "But that's not really being loyal," Mega explained, "because you're colluding with the family to continue what's going on."

Mega said some professionals avoid incestuous cases because they're concerned they'll have to spend days in a courtroom testifying. Others, in an attempt to protect a family from public embarrassment, may try to quietly handle the problem themselves, without involving police or child protective service. Without agency involvement, however, it can be difficult to keep the family from falling back into the incestuous behavior.

All these reactions are unsatisfactory responses to what is a very serious medical problem. Incest is not an emotional issue. Yet Mega believes the hysteria surrounding the incest taboo would be lessened if the problem were viewed as merely a symptom of deeper disorders within the family.

Said Mega: "If people can look at it not so much as a sexual crime than as a case of a sick family that needs treatment, we'll be a lot better off."

In general, there are two types of families in which incest occurs, Mega said. One is unruly, chaotic and disorganized, and incest may be only one of many problems in the family, along with drug abuse, alcoholism, and prostitution. The other type of family is outwardly normal, but its internal relationships are marked by poor control of impulses, confusion of roles and distorted boundaries between generations.

Although it is difficult to generalize about the web of complex behavior that culminates in incest, it can be said that usually one and often both parents have troubled backgrounds. They may have lacked parental support and nurture as children and find it difficult to provide nurture to their own children. The probability is high that they themselves were physically or sexually abused. Their marriage is typically unhappy and unfulfilling, both emotionally and sexually.

Mega said incestuous adults use their position of authority to engage children in a sexual relationship. Even if force is not used, the parent coerces compliance from the child simply by virtue of having the dominant role. The child, though it may comply with the sexual advances of the adult and even want them to continue, has no real choice in the matter.

"Incest is a symptom of family pathology," Mega explained. "No one individual is entirely to blame, but it is evident that the child is an innocent victim. The parents, though understandably troubled, are responsible."

For the health care professionals who encounter the victims of incest, recognizing the problem can be difficult, especially in the absence of obvious physical evidence. The child rarely openly reports the incest, but instead may suffer from symptoms of depression or anxiety. An unexplained drop in school performance or the sudden appearance of anti-social behavior may also be clues to what is happening.

Above all, Mega said, the people in a position to recognize incest must be alert to the possibility that it may be happening. Then they must provide support and reassurance to the victim, being careful not to react with disbelief or disapproval.

In general, Mega said, if a child discloses that incest is going on, then it probably is.

Once a diagnosis of incest seems "feasible," Mega insisted that it must be reported to appropriate authorities. Professionals need not feel that they have all the answers before they report. Rather, they must work together with law enforcement and child protective agencies to explore the case further.

Once the incestuous behavior is confirmed, the emphasis should be on psychiatric treatment for the family rather than punishment. Overly harsh punishment of the perpetrator that might result in the breakup of the family can discourage physicians and others from reporting suspected incest for fear that the punishment will be worse than the crime.

In particular, Mega completely opposes the practice of having children testify against parents in open court, where they are subject to sometimes ruthless cross-examination by adults.

"That's victimizing the child again," she said. "Any effective lawyer could tear down any child. Children don't have the comprehension or the ability to handle themselves in that situation."

Unfortunately, shielding children from that kind of courtroom trauma is further incentive for health professionals to avoid reporting incest.

Mega said it is advisable for legal authorities to be involved in the process, both to stop the incestuous activity and to act as motivators of treatment. But the law should be primarily therapeutic rather than punitive.

With professional therapy, she said, a family can possibly recover a normal life. Without it, they have little chance.

"My major point is that we have to report incest," Mega concluded. "The development of a more treatment-oriented system will encourage that."

Teen Killed After Game

MIAMI AP — As many as 100 passengers witnessed the fatal shooting of a 14-year-old football fan, hit by a bullet fired from a bus carrying rowdy spectators after a high school game at the Orange Bowl, police say.

Learon Williams never recovered after sinking into critical condition after the Friday night shooting. The eighth grader died Sunday morning at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said Miami Police spokesman Raymond Lang.

Williams, a student at Allapattah Junior High School, had gone to watch the football game between arch-rivals Northwestern and Miami Jackson high schools. Northwestern won 41-0.

"It just doesn't make any sense," Lang said. "It's a one-in-a-thousand incident. What a way for the family to spend Thanksgiving."

Police hope one of the passengers from the standing-room-only bus crowd will come forward with information.

"The homicide investigators are out in the field talking to youngsters who were on the bus," Lang said. "There were about 100 youths on the bus. The youngsters who do know are either friends or classmates, and for that reason there's probably that code of silence."

After the game, Williams and a friend boarded the bus to return to the school to greet the Jackson players.

"I don't know if there were any students on there from Jackson," Lang said. "About a mile or so from the Orange Bowl, some of the youngsters in the back of the bus started knocking out back windows," he said.

Mother Says NBC Movie Is Accurate

RALEIGH (AP) — NBC is preparing to air the second of its two-part movie about the Jeffrey MacDonald case, and the mother of MacDonald's slain wife says the film is accurate and "in good taste."

The mini-series, "Fatal Vision," is based on Joe McGinniss' best-selling book about the murders of Colette MacDonald and her daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, in 1970. The first part aired Sunday night and the second part will be shown tonight.

A U.S. District Court jury in Raleigh convicted MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, of murdering his family in 1979. He is serving three life sentences in federal prison in Bastrop, Texas.

Freddie and Mildred Kassab, Mrs. MacDonald's stepfather and mother, told The Raleigh Times they already had seen the film several times — first in their New York home, then at the California premier, and recently at the New York press review.

"I think it's exceptionally well done," said Mrs. Kassab, adding that it was "in good taste, no bodies or anything."

"My own pictures in my mind are so much worse than anything I could be shown," said Mrs. Kassab. "I was familiar with the house (at Fort Bragg) and I know what happened there. I was shown some pictures in court. There wasn't going to be anything they could put on television that could be worse than that."

The mini-series tells the story from the point of view of Kassab. When MacDonald was first suspected by U.S. Army investigators of committing the murders, the Kassabs thought their son-in-law was innocent. But as evidence mounted, they changed their minds and led the fight to have the physician indicted.

The couple traveled to Raleigh for the trial and every hearing in the case, including hearings in September when MacDonald's attorneys asked for a new trial. The years and stress have taken their toll, Mrs. Kassab said.

"Mr. Kassab and I are both in poor health," Mrs. Kassab said. "This kind of thing either gets you in the head or in the body. But it's what we wanted to do. It's what we had to do."

Mrs. Kassab is portrayed in the movie by Eva Marie Saint. Karl Malden plays Kassab.

Another prominent figure in the case, former U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn, who prosecuted MacDonald, said he had read the screenplay.

"The scenes and language from the trial ... (are) all verbatim from the transcripts ..." said Blackburn.

"It tries to be dramatic. Some things are more dramatic or less dramatic than they really were, but that's for the sake of filming. It's accurate, although very condensed."

Mrs. Kassab said she was disappointed by actor Gary Grubbs' portrayal of Blackburn, who's now in private practice in Raleigh.

"Jimmy Blackburn did a much more sensitive job than the man who portrays him," she said.

MacDonald said he is concerned that the movie will prejudice any potential jurors if he is granted a new trial.

Leaf Sales Projections Are Not Good

RALEIGH (AP) — The high quality of this year's burley tobacco crop isn't expected to improve crop sales as tobacco warehouses open in 28 North Carolina counties, an official says.

"I'm afraid some of the buyers I've talked with and some dealers who buy for export markets indicate they will make no more orders than they did last year, and in some cases fewer than last year," said John Cyrus, tobacco affairs specialist with the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Burley markets are scheduled to open today.

However, Cyrus said Saturday the amount of burley leaf going under government loan should drop slightly — to around 20 percent, down from last year's 24.9 percent, or about 5 million pounds.

Burley tobacco, an air-cured variety, is grown in significant amounts in only about 15 North Carolina counties. All are in the mountainous western section of the state where fall temperatures are especially cool.

The Burley Belt includes Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri. Farmers in the eight states will bring in an estimated 731 million pounds of the golden leaf, according to the most recent government figures.

The state's 1984 burley crop is estimated at 24 million pounds, a 9 percent increase over 1983, the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said in its mid-October report. The average yield is set at 2,400 pounds per acre, 345 pounds higher than last year. About 10,000 acres were harvested, a drop of 700 from last year.

Cyrus said the unusually warm fall kept some burley tobacco stems from drying sufficiently, but that cooler temperatures in the last two weeks kept problems minor. Also, little leaf destruction during the curing and marketing process is expected.

Most of the North Carolina sales are expected to be completed by Dec. 13, when markets across the Burley Belt will close for the Christmas holiday, Cyrus said. However, North Carolina markets will reopen for about a week in January.

Markets will stay open until mid- or late February in the bigger burley-producing states, especially Kentucky and Tennessee. Those states saw as much as 60 percent of their crops go under loan last year because bad weather hurt quality, Cyrus said.

The burley price support remains at $175.10 per hundred pounds, where it has been frozen since 1982. The support price for flue-cured tobacco this year was $169.90.

Cruiser Stolen

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 37-year-old Charlotte man turned himself in to the Mecklenburg County Sheriff's Department about 12 hours after someone stole a state Highway Patrol cruiser in Gaston County, officials say.

Theodore Van Huntley was taken Sunday to the Gaston County Jail, where he was charged with vehicle larceny, driving while impaired and resisting arrest. His bond was set at $1,500.

The black and silver 1983 Ford cruiser was taken about 11 p.m. Saturday on N.C. 273 in Mount Holly.

Trooper R.K. London said he had stopped Huntley Saturday, suspecting him of driving while impaired. He said he was taking Huntley to the Gaston County Jail when Huntley, who was in the front seat, started a disturbance.

"Huntley became unruly," said Highway Patrol Sgt. William Thomas. "Trooper London stopped the car to handcuff him. As Trooper London got out to go to the passenger side of the car, Huntley slipped under the wheel and drove off. He left Trooper London on the road."

About 50 officers from the state Highway Patrol and Mount Holly, Belmont, Charlotte, Mecklenburg County and Gaston police departments searched Belmont, Charlotte and Mount Holly for the suspect and the cruiser.

Police found the cruiser about 12:30 a.m. Sunday, abandoned in the Jackson Park community of Stanley, about 12 miles from where it was taken.

Two Charged In Thefts

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported two Greenville men, 22-year old David Gay and 25-year old Michael Joyner, both of 115 W. Fourth St., were charged with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with an incident at noon Friday.

Tyson said Gay and Joyner were arrested following a break-in at the home of Jean York, 322 Oxford Road, in which entrance was gained to an office in the house and $20 in coins and seven credit cards were taken. Damage to the home was assessed at $150. Mrs. York was in the home and called the authorities.

Officers Larry Parker and Neil Elks arrested Gay and Joyner on 14th Street and the credit cards were recovered. Gay and Joyner were each jailed under $500 bond.

In an incident Sunday at 4:30 a.m., David Henry Cox, 30, of 104-B Phillips Circle, was charged with first degree burglary in connection with a break-in at the residence of Joseph Carr, 503 Rawl Road, according to Sheriff Tyson.

Damage to the door of the residence was estimated at $150. Cox is being held without bond.

Pedestrian Is Killed

A pedestrian was killed and the driver of a car critically injured in separate incidents over the weekend, according to the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

Trooper John Tomer said Donald Ray Cox, 32, of Route 2, Ayden, was killed when he stepped into the path of a car driven by James Allen Harris Jr., 16, of Winterville, on N.C. 102 2.6 miles east of Ayden about 6 p.m. Saturday.

Tomer, who made no charges, set damage to the Harris car at $1,000.

Tomer reported that Leigh M. Stubbs, 39, of 2702 Webb St., was injured in an 11 p.m. mishap Sunday on N.C. 33 east of Greenville.

The Stubbs car, Tomer said, ran off the left-hand side of the road and overturned several times. Damage to the vehicle was set at $10,000.

Lobbyist Questions Reasons For Insurance Co. Hearings

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative lobbyist and former state senator says he doesn't know why Insurance Commissioner John Ingram would schedule hearings for insurance companies unless it's as a "parting shot."

Ruffin Bailey of Raleigh, an attorney and insurance industry lobbyist, said Friday he had seen an order with Ingram's name on it referring to insurance company investments in parent and subsidiary companies.

"I don't recall the language but it said they (the investments) were excessive and unlawful and of doubtful value," said Bailey. "I would expect it would be pretty substantial injury to that company to have such a thing as this alleged arbitrarily and indiscriminately."

"It appears to me that it is an attempt to libel every company, and shake up the confidence of the people in the company for no good reason at all," said Bailey.

Oscar Smith, spokesman for the Insurance Department, said notices to appear at hearings were being sent to 15 percent of the 900 to 1,000 insurance companies licensed to operate in North Carolina.

That means notices would be sent to between 135 and 150 companies. The hearings are scheduled to begin Dec. 10.

He said a list of companies involved in the hearings would be made available today.

"It is my understanding that the intent of the hearing is an effort to protect policy holders of each insurance company from either upstream or sidestream investments," Smith said.

He said an "upstream investment" is an investment by a subsidiary company in its parent company. A "sidestream investment" is an investment in another subsidiary owned by the parent company.

Such investments can lead to "financial difficulty down the road" for subsidiaries if the parent company has financial problems, Smith said.

"Let's say a company is licensed to do business in North Carolina and they have got $10,000 invested in the parent company," said Smith. "And they've got $15,000 total monies. See where that leaves them if they have a major claim?"

Smith declined to say what would happen at the hearings, how the companies were selected, or whether the hearings would be completed before Ingram leaves office Jan. 5.

Bailey, who is legislative agent for American Insurance Association, said he saw one order that ordered the company to appear on Dec. 10 and show cause why its license should not be revoked. He said the move could be Ingram's "parting shot."

"I don't know why he's doing it now," said Bailey.

MAY BE NAMED CARDINALS — Pope John Paul II will name as cardinals this week, from left, Archbishops John O'Connor of New York, Bernard Law of Boston, and William Borders of Baltimore, the New York Daily News reported Sunday. They will be among 16 or 17 prelates who will be named cardinals, according to the newspaper. (AP Laserphoto)

Archbishops React To Reports Of New Cardinal Elevations

By The Associated Press
New York Archbishop John O'Connor was "stunned," Archbishop Bernard Law of Boston "just laughed it off" and Baltimore's Archbishop William Borders termed "crazy" reports that they would be elevated to cardinal.

The New York Daily News quoted unnamed Roman Catholic Church sources Sunday as saying that O'Connor, Law and Borders would be among 16 or 17 world archbishops named by Pope John Paul II to wear the cardinal's red hat.

"I was stunned," O'Connor said Sunday after Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral. "I really did not hear word one. If it happens, and I say this not Pollyanna-ishly, then I would consider it a tribute to New York, on the part of the holy father, to the people of New York."

Law, who heads the nation's third largest Roman Catholic diocese, has been in Washington and Bogota, Colombia, for meetings but knows reports have been "churning in the mill," church spokeswoman Ethel Froia said in Boston.

"He is aware of the rumors, but he just laughed it off," she said.

"It's crazy," Borders said after Mass at the Cathedral of Mary Our Queens Church in Baltimore. "Someone has picked up one of those rumors in Rome."

The 71-year-old archbishop added that he is "too old" and is due to retire under Vatican rules at age 75.

The Daily News said the announcement would be made Tuesday or Wednesday during the pope's weekly general audience. It said the pope set Dec. 18 for the consistory, or formal investiture, at the Vatican.

The Vatican on Sunday refused to confirm or deny the rumors.

"It's been at least eight months that there have been these rumors that there will be a consistory the following week," said the Rev.

Pierfranco Pastore. He declined to comment further.

Borders said that if there were to be a consistory so soon, he would have expected word of it from the pope's representative to Washington, who had dinner with the archbishop and other church leaders Nov. 10.

Besides O'Connor, the church source told the News there was speculation that the archbishops of Washington, Detroit, St. Louis, and a San Belt City — possibly New Orleans, San Antonio or Miami — would also be elevated.

Pope John Paul II has held two consistories in his six-year reign. In the first, in 1979, he named 15 cardinals, none of them American. In the second, in 1983, he named 18, including Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, the last American named a cardinal.

Currently, there are eight American cardinals, including three retired archbishop-cardinals, in Washington, Detroit and St. Louis, and one, William Cardinal Baum, who works at the Vatican.

Cardinals serve as the pope's top advisers. They exercise no special powers other than electing the next pope, usually from their own ranks.

Trawler Search Resumes

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — Coast Guard officials say they will begin looking again for an 80-foot trawler owned by Wanchese Fishing Co. and its nine-man crew as the search enters its sixth day.

Officials planned to launch two Coast Guard aircraft, one Air Force aircraft and the cutter Chilula off Cape May, N.J., this morning for the trawler Amazing Grace, said Stan Christman, a public affairs with the Coast Guard in Portsmouth, Va.

The trawler, with its home port in Wanchese, has been missing since the captain radioed another ship Wednesday that it was taking on water in the engine room, authorities said. It isn't known whether the boat sank or simply lost radio contact. There was no distress call, said Raymon Fullerton, public affairs specialist with the Coast Guard in New York.

Christman said Coast Guard officials hadn't been able to find out the names of the crew members. A fish company official said the Amazing Grace's captain was Paul Robles.

On Sunday, seven airplanes combed 21,600 square miles off the New Jersey and Delaware coasts in the search for the missing trawler.

The Coast Guard, Air Force and Navy contributed aircraft and searchers, Fullerton said.

The search was centered 67 miles east of Cape Penlopen, Del., the vessel's last known location, said Fullerton.

The weather Sunday was "ideal for searching, with winds at 15 mph and seas at four to seven feet, Fullerton said. But today's weather is overcast and windy with showers, seas building up and some fog, Christman said.

Lawmakers Ponder 'Wait And See' Attitude On Martin Tax Proposals

By The Associated Press
As requests for additional funding pour in from state agencies, some lawmakers say they will let Gov.-elect Jim Martin explain his tax-cut proposals before deciding which will take priority in the General Assembly.

"He's a smart man, a college professor," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey. "He can add and subtract. We ought to wait and see what his proposals are."

Democrats are not eager to move quickly against Martin's tax proposals, fearing that they'd be labeled pro-tax and suffer at the polls in 1986. Legislative leaders such as Ramsey agree that they'll proceed cautiously and give Martin a chance to demonstrate that his plans will work.

One powerful senator said there was widespread support for tax cuts, and said many state officials are going to see their budget requests denied.

"We have a very conservative mood out there," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, a member of the Advisory Budget Commission and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

As key planks in his campaign platform, Martin proposed eliminating the state sales tax on food and medicine as well as phasing out taxes on business inventories and intangible assets. The tax cuts would total $634 million by 1988-1989.

But in two days of hearings last week, state agencies asked the ABC for more than $1.7 billion in additional funding, or "expansion budgets," for the 1985-87 fiscal years.

The ABC drafts budgets for the governor to submit to the Legislature, which has the final say.

But another legislative leader said education programs and salaries for state employees stand the best chance of receiving significantly bigger budgets, and may take precedence over tax cuts.

"It's going to be very difficult to have any tax cuts if we're going to supply the needs of the people of North Carolina ... (and particularly) to progress like we should in education," said Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the ABC.

State Rep. Charles Hughes, R-N.C., who prepared the budget projections on which Martin's tax program is based, says they depend largely on continued growth of the state's economy.

Among the requested budget increases submitted to the ABC last week were:

— $498 million by the State Board of Education for operation of public schools, including money to hire more teachers and pay them higher salaries, and set up an experimental career-ladder program for teachers and administrators.

— $517.5 million by the State Employees Association of North Carolina for a 15 percent across-the-board pay raise for all state workers. The group also wants an additional $30 million a year for merit pay and $34.4 million in additional retirement benefits.

— $301 million by the University of North Carolina for capital improvements.

— $149 million by the Department of Community Colleges for salary increases and enrollment growth.

— $209.7 million by the Department of Human Resources, including money for pregnancy prevention, prenatal and hospital care and community support services for teenagers and youthful parents as well as $7.1 million for alcohol awareness programs.

— $82.6 million by the Department of Correction for prison construction.

Diversification Helps Soothe Economic Woes, Officials Say

By The Associated Press
The diversification in North Carolina's agricultural economy from flue-cured tobacco to other products, particularly poultry, has helped blunt the economic blows that have been thrown at the leaf industry in recent years, officials say.

"We have a much more diverse agricultural economy than 30 or 40 years ago," said Marc Johnson, an economist with the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University.

"Diversification is healthy because without it, a recession in one segment will just kill you. Can you imagine where we'd be right now if tobacco was still 75 percent of our farm economy? We'd be in big trouble."

Last year, tobacco accounted for $1.02 billion, or about 27 percent of the state's total agricultural cash receipts of $3.784 billion. The poultry industry — including turkeys, chickens and egg producers — came in second with $912 million or about 24 percent of the total.

In 1985, poultry is expected to account for about $950 million, while tobacco may be less than this year's total, officials say. The amount probably would drop if the federal support price, averaging about $1.70 a pound, is lowered as growers have urged. The tobacco program allows growers to put their leaf in storage if the minimum price isn't met.

Tobacco accounted for almost half the $922 million in farm cash receipts 30 years ago, while poultry brought in slightly less than 11 percent. In the 1930s, tobacco was a full 75 percent of the state's entire farm income.

In the post-World War II period, such commodities as livestock, soybeans and corn became more important to the North Carolina economy while traditional crops like peanuts and cotton declined.

J.E. Legates, dean of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU, said commodities other than tobacco became increasingly important because tobacco can be grown only by farmers who own or lease government allotments.

"Our poultry industry and other commodities have allowed us to expand our income because they are not a controlled commodity," he said.

Legates also said the livestock industry became a bigger force in state agriculture because the state has been growing more corn and soybeans, which are used as feed.

The tobacco industry has been hurt by a decline in U.S. cigarette consumption and by cheaper imported leaf. Importers have found a toehold because domestic prices are kept comparatively high by the federal tobacco program.

Last year, U.S. tobacco companies bought 660 million pounds of domestic leaf for an average price of $1.77 a pound, while buying 127.6 million pounds of imported tobacco at an average price of $1.41 per pound.

John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said another cut of 7.5 percent may be in the offing for the 1985 crop year, although U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block hasn't announced the quota for the federal program yet.

"I don't know of one tobacco farmer who grows nothing but tobacco any more," said Carlton Blalock, spokesman for the N.C. Tobacco Growers Association. "They're growing beans, corn, sweet potatoes, or they have some poultry, too. Because tobacco growers have a heavy investment in machinery and labor, if you grew only tobacco, you couldn't keep operating an efficient level."

"Tobacco has made diversification possible," Cyrus said. "... You need tractors and equipment to produce tobacco and it was tobacco money that bought that equipment that is being used to produce other crops now."

Political Links Cause Rifts Among Baptists

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Ideological tensions within the 154th North Carolina Baptist State Convention may have become more acute because a number of church leaders have ties to both major political parties, officials say.

"I kept hearing that we have a unified convention, but my feeling is that this is not true," said the Rev. Marion Lark of Henderson. "There are some basic differences and divisions."

Several prominent Baptist conservatives are linked to the Republican Party. They include Sam Curran, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina and a former aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, who is chairman of the state convention's Public Affairs Committee; and the Rev. Coy Privette, a past convention president who has been elected as a Republican state representative.

Some moderate leaders have aligned themselves with Democrats. One is Marse Grant, former editor of the Biblical Recorder, the convention's newspaper, who campaigned for Gov. Jim Hunt in his unsuccessful attempt to unseat Helms.

Divisions between moderates and conservatives have divided the Southern Baptist Convention since 1979. In North Carolina, the split has been less severe, but Baptists of both persuasions closely watch the way that elections, appointments and resolutions affect the power balance.

Some Baptists say the debate pivots on matters of conviction, specifically God's role in inspiring Scripture. Others say the problem is a power struggle for the heart of the country's largest Protestant denomination.

High on the agenda of Baptist conservatives is fighting what they see as encroachments on Judeo-Christian values in American society by "secular humanism." Several resolutions passed by Baptists in Asheville in last week's convention were aimed at combating the secular humanist philosophy.

One such resolution encourages parents to protect their children from public school activities that seem counter to their moral and spiritual beliefs.

Divisions between moderates and conservatives surfaced in Asheville when the Committee on Committees presented a slate of nominations Wednesday morning. That panel nominates people to serve on the convention's other major committees.

Two nominations — Privette as chairman of the Resolutions Committee and Lark as a member of the Nominations Committee — were challenged.

50 Billion Burgers Support 1948 Decision

By EDMUNDO LAWLER
Associated Press Writer
OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — 1948. America was home from the war. The baby boom was on. And in San Bernardino, Calif., Dick and Maurice McDonald were poring through receipts from their drive-in restaurant.

They noticed something odd. "Ninety percent of the orders were for hamburgers, french fries and a cold drink," recalled Dick McDonald, 75.

They were a successful California drive-in, with carhops and a big, busy menu. From their barbecue pit, they offered "hotdogs, hamburgers, steaks, beans — you name it." The parking lot was always full.

But that day, the McDonalds decided to close their restaurant, fire the carhops and gamble on their instincts.

Three months later, McDonald's restaurant reopened with a short menu — burgers, fries, drinks — and delivered it with assembly-line efficiency.

That assembly line, according to McDonald's Corp., will fry its 50 billionth burger this week.

Dick McDonald, whose brother died in 1971, will be served the symbolic burger at a griddle-side news conference Tuesday in New York City. The president of McDonald's U.S.A., Edward H. Rensi, will grill it.

The McDonald brothers' stripped-down restaurant hardly looked, at birth, like the beginning of a chain of 8,000 restaurants in 31 countries.

"It was a complete disaster at first," McDonald said in a telephone interview from his home in Bedford, N.H. "There were times we were tempted to throw in the sponge. The carhops were gone. People didn't like having to wait on themselves and throw away their own trash."

But the teen-agers didn't mind. "The youngsters became our most loyal customers," McDonald said. They brought their parents.

It wasn't long before as many as 200 customers were waiting in line. That's when Ray Kroc, the milkshake mixer salesman from Illinois, arrived.

Kroc, who died this year, described in his autobiography, "Grinding It Out," how he was struck with the speed and simplicity of the McDonald brothers' operation. "I felt like some latter-day Newton who'd just had an Idaho potato caromed off his skull," he wrote.

Kroc acquired franchising rights from the McDonalds, agreeing to use their restaurant design with the golden arches.

He opened his first McDonald's the following year in the Chicago suburb of Des Plaines, ringing up sales of $366.12 on the first day. The 1.6-ounce hamburgers cost 15 cents.

The next year, Kroc sold his first three franchises; by the end of 1957 there were 21. McDonald's sold its 100 millionth burger in 1958. Three years later, Kroc bought out the McDonald brothers for $2.7 million.

Today, Rensi is projecting the addition of 500 restaurants a year and continued strong profits. McDonald's reported sales of $3.2 billion in the last four quarters, with a net profit of $364.2 million.

The menu, of course, has grown. Fish sandwiches were added in 1963; Egg McMuffins a decade later. Breakfast foods came in 1977. Chicken McNuggets were introduced in 1983 — and quickly made McDonald's the nation's second-largest chicken retailer after Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Can the Golden Arches retain their luster? Steven A. Rockwell, a fast-food industry analyst at the Baltimore brokerage firm of Alex. Brown & Sons, sees no immediate flattening of McDonald's golden growth curve.

Even if McDonald's reached a saturation point in the United States, he said, there is plenty of potential for adding to the 1,600 McDonald's restaurants overseas.

Yet he sees a possible problem. "The baby boomers, a generation practically raised on fast food, may begin looking for more than what McDonald's has to offer," Rockwell said.

Rensi disagrees. "Meat and potatoes have been the staple of the American diet for two centuries. That's not going to change."

Seventeen million people eat at McDonald's every day. The company sells 4.35 billion burgers a year, despite vigorous competition from Wendy's, Burger King and others.

Enjoying it all is Dick McDonald, who said he has no regrets about selling his business to Kroc for a fraction of what it's worth today.

"Everybody has an ego and I must admit I enjoy seeing my name on restaurants all over the world," he said.

He recalled being introduced at a party as "the man who invented the McDonald hamburger. The man, who'd had a few too many, looked at me and said, 'Don't you wish you were.'"

Poll Says Confidence In Government Is Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans' confidence in government has risen sharply under President Reagan, who is expected to keep the economy on an even keel and make progress in arms control in his second term, according to a New York Times-CBS News Poll.

The poll, published today, found support for the Republican Party at its highest level in more than a decade, with the strongest backing coming from the young.

However, it also found that 57 percent of the 1,798 adults interviewed for the survey between Nov. 8 and Nov. 14 believed that Reagan would renege on his promise not to raise taxes in his second term. Those expecting a tax increase included 40 percent of those who said they voted for Reagan.

The poll asked: "Would you say government is pretty much run by a few big interests looking out for themselves, or that it is run for the benefit of all the people?"

Forty percent said it is run for everyone, with 49 percent taking the more cynical view.

Comparing the Times-CBS Poll results to earlier results from the National Election Studies Series indicates a rising confidence in government.

The earlier studies, conducted by the University of Michigan's Center for Political Studies, showed confidence in government plummeting from 1964, when 76 percent of its respondents said government could be trusted most or all of the time.

Anti-government sentiment reached its lowest point in 1980, the year Reagan was first elected, when only 21 percent of the people questioned thought government could be trusted. The figures have been rising since.

Forty-seven percent of those questioned for the Times-CBS Poll said they were Republicans or leaned toward the Republican Party, while only 44 percent identified with Democrats. The Republicans held their biggest advantage among 18-29-year-olds, who favored the GOP by a 50-42 percent margin.

The poll's margin of error is plus or minus 2 percent for answers involving all respondents, and higher for those involving sub-groups.

Fifty-eight percent of those questioned said they believed Reagan would make a real effort to cut the federal deficit in half, and would handle the economy without a recession. Sixty-nine percent said he would make a real effort to negotiate an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union.

Thirty-three percent said they believed he would get the U.S. into a war in Central America, while 39 percent said they believed he would successfully promote passage of a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion.

New Role For 'Lash' LaRue

ASHEBORO (AP) — Al "Lash" LaRue, star of numerous 1940s cowboy movies, says he's excited about his first major role in over 30 years, in a horror flick that will be filmed in Belews Creek and Kernersville. Shooting of "The Dark Power" is scheduled to begin Nov. 26, said producer and director Phil Smoot of Asheboro, who has worked in various capacities on 24 feature-length motion pictures.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, attracting some buyers after its steady decline since the election.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.31 to 1,192.25 in the first half hour.

But losers took a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said stock prices had reached levels that brought in some traders who had been waiting for a drop to do some buying.

But they also said worries persisted about the federal budget deficit and a possible business slump.

The Treasury Department is expected to present a tax reform proposal to President Reagan in early December. There have been numerous published reports about possible elements of that plan.

However, brokers said there still was great uncertainty among investors about the ultimate shape of the package, and its prospective reception in Congress — especially with Democrats retaining control of the House.

Another question mark is the approaching holiday selling season, a pivotal period of the year for many consumer businesses. By most accounts, consumers are in a good financial position to make it a busy period in the nation's stores.

The government reported this morning that personal income rose 0.6 percent in October. Still, other recent evidence of a slowing economy has raised some doubts about individuals' potential eagerness to spend.

risys" for the Reagan administration to accuse Nicaragua of arming itself in order to attack its neighbors.

"No one would be best served than the Reagan administration to have us do such a thing. It would give them the pretext that they're looking for to take action, direct military action, against Nicaragua," he said.

Two members of Congress, Reps. Michael Barnes, D-Md., and Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said during the interview program they thought the Reagan administration had internal conflicts about Nicaragua.

"There is clearly a debate going on within the administration of people who think that the U.S. has no choice but to try ... to topple the government of Nicaragua and others who want to put the emphasis on negotiated political settlements," Barnes said.

Hyde said conflicting reports about U.S. policy emanating from the Pentagon, State Department and White House are a "serious problem."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan was vacationing, a spokesman said the administration had no plans for a summit with Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega, who on Friday called for a meeting with Reagan.

what happened in 1976." He gave no details.

The Egyptians blamed Libya for explosions in 1976 in a government building housing several ministerial departments in Cairo and on an Alexandria-Cairo train.

Egyptian officials have said since the arrests that the Libyans were plotting to assassinate several world leaders, including West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

On Sunday, President Hosni Mubarak said evidence from the four agents pointed to Libyan involvement in the Oct. 31 assassination of Indira Gandhi, India's prime minister.

The Libyan news agency JANA carried a Foreign Ministry denial of Mubarak's allegations.

Rushdi met Sunday with the ambassadors of France and West Germany to brief them on information said to have been obtained from the agents.

Rushdi said Gill confessed that after assassinating Bakouh, he planned to establish an investment company in Egypt to serve as a cover for further terrorist acts.

Gill had been a "terrorist operative for the last 12 years" and had carried out terrorist operations in Britain and France, including the assassination of a Libyan dissident in Paris, Rushdi said.

Rushdi quoted Gill as saying he had met Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi "many times" and had seen Carlos "more than once" at a hotel in the Libyan capital, Tripoli.

"Gill promised those Egyptians whom he thought were working for him, and who were in fact policemen, that they would meet Carlos after the assassination of Bakouh," Rushdi said.

Carlos, a Venezuelan whose real name is Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, has reportedly been responsible for several major terrorist actions.

Rushdi quoted Gill as saying that he had met Mohammed Abbasi, a Pakistani, in Tripoli and "understood from him that Col. Khadafi was financing a clandestine

The Miami Dolphins can now forget about 1972 and concentrate on 1984.
"There won't be any more comparisons now" with the Dolphins' unbeaten team of 1972, Coach Don Shula said Sunday after Miami's first loss of the season, a 34-28 overtime decision to the San Diego Chargers. "I guess we won't have to worry about that anymore."

Miami, 11-1, lost for the first time in 17 regular-season games dating back to last year. The Dolphins fell one game short of the National Football League record for consecutive regular-season victories set by the Chicago Bears in 1933-34, and also missed a chance to clinch the AFC East title.

Meanwhile, Buffalo shocked Dallas 14-3, Philadelphia stunned Washington 16-10 and the New York Giants defeated St. Louis 16-10 to throw the NFC East race into a three-way tie. The Cowboys, Redskins and Giants are each 7-5, while St. Louis dropped to fourth with a 6-6 record.

In other games, it was San Francisco 24, Tampa Bay 17; Denver 42, Minnesota 21; Los Angeles Raiders 17, Kansas City 7; Chicago 16, Detroit 14; Cleveland 23, Atlanta 7; Green Bay 31, Los Angeles Rams 6; New England 50, Indianapolis 17; Seattle 26, Cincinnati 6, and Houston 31, New York Jets 20.

New Orleans hosts Pittsburgh tonight.

Dan Fouts set San Diego records with 57 pass attempts and 36 completions while throwing for 380 yards in the game and four touchdowns during regulation play. He also guided the team in overtime to Miami's 25-yard line, where Buford McGee ended the game with a touchdown run with 3:17 elapsed.

"We had our chances. We didn't score when we had to," said Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who threw for 338 yards and two touchdowns but could direct only one scoring drive in the second half. "Fouts is a winner. He keeps coming back and he did it again today."

Bills 14, Cowboys 3
Rookie Greg Bell scored two touchdowns, one on an 85-yard run on the first play of the game, as the previously winless Bills shocked the Cowboys. The Bills, 1-11, snapped a 13-game losing streak that extended back to the last two games of 1983.

Bell rushed for 206 yards on 27 carries in becoming the first player to run for 200 yards against Dallas since Jimmy Brown of Cleveland in 1963.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said he was "somewhat embarrassed" by losing to the Bills. On the other hand, Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson said the victory was a testament to character. "I don't think too many teams could have gone through what we have this year and come back and win like we did today," he said.

Eagles 16, Redskins 10
Andre Waters returned a kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown and Paul McFadden kicked three field goals as Philadelphia stunned Washington.

Washington's Mark Moseley had given the Redskins a 10-9 lead on a 33-yard field goal with 5:26 left in the third period when Waters broke loose on the ensuing kickoff.

Giants 16, Cardinals 10
Ali Haji-Sheikh kicked three third-quarter field goals and Mark Haynes picked off two passes for the Giants.

The Giants forced four interceptions and two fumbles in the bruising battle. That gave the Cardinals 16 turnovers in their last three games.

49ers 24, Buccaneers 17
Fred Dean made two key defensive plays in his first game this year to help San Francisco beat

Tampa Bay. Dean, the defensive end who joined the 49ers last Wednesday after settlement of a contract dispute, forced a wobbly pass by Buccaneers quarterback Steve DeBerg which resulted in an interception and eventually a touchdown. He also contributed a key sack in the closing minutes of the game that killed off Tampa Bay's final scoring threat.

Broncos 42, Vikings 21
John Elway threw five touchdown passes in less than three quarters to spark Denver's 10th straight victory. The victory raised the AFC West Division-leading Broncos' record to 11-1 and set up a showdown with second-place Seattle, 10-2, next week.

Elway completed 16 of 19 passes for 218 yards, with no interceptions. His five touchdown passes tied the Denver record set by Frank

Bodine Wins At Riverside, Labonte Takes Point Title

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Terry Labonte, the new Winston Cup champion, stopped celebrating and accepting congratulations long enough to think back to a dark day two years ago at Riverside International Raceway.

Labonte, who wrapped up the season title for the first time in his career by finishing third to winner Geoff Bodine in Sunday's Winston Western 500, left the Riverside track in an ambulance during the 1982 race.

He had slammed hard into the wall in turn nine of the twisting 2.62-mile road course, suffering a broken arm, shoulder and kneecap, as well as facial injuries that required plastic surgery.

"I've thought about that this week," said the soft-spoken 28-year-old. "This is a lot happier day than it was a couple of years ago."

"That was the lowest time (in my career) and this is definitely the best," added the Corpus Christi, Texas, native.

Labonte, whose record for consistency this season included three victories and 17 top-10 finishes in 30 starts, earned $291,000 in bonus money for himself, team owner Billy Hagan and the rest of the Piedmont Airlines-sponsored Stratagraph

Team.

Although Labonte's blue and white Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS ran flawlessly throughout the 312-mile, 119-lap race, the championship battle with second-place Harry Gant was almost lost in the dramatic final minutes.

The start of the race was delayed for nearly three hours by a steady drizzle, which meant the race ended as darkness enveloped the desert racetrack.

"It was a little dark and it was hard to see the last few laps," said Labonte, who wound up 65 points ahead of Gant, the eighth-place finisher Sunday. "I was a little concerned that somebody would lose an engine and we wouldn't be able to see the oil or some debris on the track. I just didn't want anything to happen when we were so close."

Bobby Allison, who wrapped up his first championship in this race a year ago, was leading Bodine by about two seconds four laps from the end when his right-front tire went flat. Allison was able to get into the pits, get a new tire and come back to finish seventh, but Bodine won the race and the $31,900 that went with it.

The 35-year-old Bodine's Chevrolet, sponsored by Northwestern Security Life, won his third race of the year by crossing the finish line five seconds ahead of Tim Richmond's Pontiac. Bill Elliott and Benny Parsons were fourth and fifth, respectively.

"Bobby was running a very good race out there," explained Bodine, who averaged 98.448 mph in the race slowed by four full-course caution flags. "He had a good, steady line out there and we probably wouldn't be celebrating a win if he hadn't had the tire go down."

"But that's part of the way racing is. My car ran strong all day and we were there at the end."

The new champion came into Sunday's race knowing he had to finish seventh or better to clinch the title.

"We ran exactly the kind of race we wanted to," Labonte said. "We ran a conservative race. At one time towards the end of the race, I felt I had to chance to lead. But, when I got up with the guys ahead of me, I felt I couldn't really pass without abusing the car, so I backed off. The one thing we didn't want to do today was abuse the car."

Lakers Overcome Milwaukee Defense

By The Associated Press
Stop the Los Angeles Lakers' fast break and you stop the Los Angeles Lakers, right?

Not all the time.
The Milwaukee Bucks, who gave up fewer points than any team in the National Basketball Association last season, held the Lakers to 40 field goals in 90 attempts Sunday night. But Los Angeles won the game 96-89 for its fourth straight victory.

"We're not always going to shoot under 50 percent and pull games out," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We won tonight because of our defense and we controlled the offensive boards. Both teams played well defensively. It was a very aggressive, physical game, which Milwaukee always plays."

The Lakers, now only one game out of first place in the Pacific Division after a 3-5 start, held the Bucks to 39 field goals in 86 attempts.

"It pleases me that for the first time this season, we shot under 50 percent and won," Riley said.

In other games, New Jersey trimmed Seattle 102-97 and Portland outlasted the Los Angeles Clippers 113-105.

The Lakers outscored Milwaukee 17-2 in the last three minutes of the second period and the first three minutes of the third quarter to take a 56-46 lead. The closest the Bucks got after that was 86-81 with 2:50 remaining.

James Worthy hit 10 of 16 shots to lead the Lakers with 24 points, while Milwaukee's Terry Cummings was 14-for-20 from the field to lead all scorers with 29.

"Milwaukee played a controlled tempo game," Worthy said. "We weren't able to get our fast break going, but we did play good defense."

"I think both teams enjoy a challenge like this," Riley said. "Milwaukee is extremely good. It was a good trade for Cummings. (Bucks Coach Don) Nelson is one of the best coaches in the league. They are committed to stopping the break. Milwaukee is going to make some noise."

The Lakers opened a 23-16 margin in the first quarter, but the Bucks, who still lead the Central Division by one-half game over Chicago, cut the deficit to 27-26 at the end of the period. Milwaukee then built a 38-33 margin midway through the second quarter before the Lakers started their 17-2 rally.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 20 points apiece for Los Angeles, while Paul Pressey had 17 for Milwaukee.

Nets 102, SuperSonics 97

of his team-high 23 points in the third quarter and New Jersey held Seattle to 39 second-half points.

Richardson hit six of seven shots from the field as the Nets built an 86-74 lead late in the third quarter after trailing 58-57 at halftime.

Al Wood, who led the SuperSonics with 25 points, led a rally that cut New Jersey's lead to 96-95 with 2:53 left, but a layup by Albert King and two baskets by Darwin Cook kept the Nets in front.

Trail Blazers 113, Clippers 105
Mychal Thompson had 31 points and 12 rebounds to lead Portland past Los Angeles.

Thompson had 14 points in the third quarter to help the Trail Blazers take an 84-82 lead into the final 12 minutes. A layup by Kiki Vandeweghe, who had 21 points, broke a 96-96 tie with five minutes left and the Clippers never caught up again.

Marques Johnson led Los Angeles with 20 points, while James Donaldson added 18 points and 15 rebounds. The Clippers outrebounded Portland 54-38, but committed 22 turnovers to 11 for the Trail Blazers.

Writers Pick Blue Devils As ACC Cage Favorites

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sixth-ranked Duke has been chosen by a poll of sportswriters and broadcasters to capture the 1984-85 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball championship. But the ACC coaches downplayed their teams' abilities.

The Blue Devils captured 43 of a possible 92 first-place votes and a total of 652 points. Their season gets started on Nov. 26 against St. Louis University. Duke returns the same starting five of a season ago and has added several freshmen expected to bolster the Blue Devil bench.

"I think we're competitive with anybody in the league, but not better," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "At this point, we're not a better team than we were last year."

But he said the Blue Devils do have one thing in their favor. "We now have experience in our program," he said. "I hope that we can be a deeper team and better able to withstand any injuries which may occur."

Duke reached the finals of the ACC tournament last March, where it lost to Maryland. An appearance in the NCAA championships ended with a loss to Washington.

North Carolina State, 1983 national champions, finished second in the balloting with 573 points and 25 votes for first place. Georgia Tech received 18 first-place votes and 554 points for third. The Wolfpack is laden with talent, featuring senior forward Lorenzo Charles, and highly sought center Chris Washburn.

Ballots were cast during Sunday's ACC Operation Basketball in Greensboro.

"I don't think we have a starting team," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "We have a situational team. Now, I have a lot more decisions on the bench."

North Carolina was fourth with 531 points and five first-place votes.

Maryland received the final first-place vote and drew 422 points.

"We're inexperienced, we won't be nearly as quick, and we're not as strong a rebounding team," Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said, comparing this year's team to the one from last year.

Closing out the balloting were Virginia at 237 and Wake Forest at 212. Neither team was chosen higher than fifth. Clemson received 77 votes for last place and garnered 115 points.

Missouri Fires Powers

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Warren Powers was fired today as head coach at Missouri because of growing "negativity" surrounding the football program, Chancellor Barbara Uehling said.

Uehling and Athletic Director Dave Hart announced the firing of Powers at a news conference in the chancellor's office shortly after 9 a.m.

"This is not an action we take lightly or easily," Uehling said. "We are grateful to Coach Powers for what he has been doing."

However, Uehling said "There is a kind of negativity that has grown around the program and we believe it is time to make a change."

Hart agreed the lack of success in the program had generated negative feelings among alumni athletic committee members and also was reflected in dwindling home-game attendance and a drop on season tickets sales.

Missouri lost to Kansas 35-21 Saturday in their season finale for a 3-7-1 mark, their first losing season in seven years under Powers. Powers' seven-year record was 46-33-3.

Powers, a Kansas City native and a star defensive back at Nebraska, was head coach at Washington State for one year before he was named to replace Al Onofrio at Missouri who was fired after the 1977 season. Powers' seven-year record was 46-33-3, including appearances in five bowl games.

His dismissal comes just one year after he was named Big Eight coach of the year and given a three-year contract extension. The Tigers tied for second in the Big Eight with a 5-2 conference record in 1983 and finished 7-5 overall after losing to Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl. Powers' bowl record at Missouri was 3-2, with victories in the Liberty in 1978, the Hall of Fame in '79 and the Tangerine in '81.

Seven, count 'em, seven. That's the number of Top Twenty teams that went down to defeat this past weekend. Another, the University of Virginia, was tied.

It would appear to be mandatory that this week's number one team would be the only Division I-A unbeaten team in the country, Brigham Young, now 11-0 with one game left to play. (Yes, they play 12. Those teams who go to Hawaii still play under the rule that if you make that trip, you are rewarded with an extra game, even if it's a conference game. It's a rule the NCAA needs to examine again. In this day of jet travel, it's no longer necessary.)

Many of the so-called upper crust of football might question B-Y-Who?, but nevertheless, the NCAA rule that ordered parity some years back is finally being felt, and the Alabamas, Southern Cal, Notre Dames, Penn States, and the like are no longer the most dominate teams in football any more. Teams like Boston College, Brigham Young, Virginia, and, yes, even East Carolina, have the opportunity to move into those select circles, be they ever wider than in years past.

Meanwhile, the Holiday Bowl folks must be rubbing their hands in both alternate glee and frustration. Brigham Young, the champion of the Western Athletic Conference, is bound by contract to that bowl game. But, should they continue unbeaten, they will probably have to beat a so-called "major" to have a chance at the national title when it's finally voted in January. The question will be whether the Holiday Bowl can attract such a big name. Attempts to increase the ante for the game appear to be a failure, and the contest is syndicated over Mizlou rather than telecast over a major network. All that will go against it.

Whether the WAC, swelling in their new-found glory will continue with the bowl when the current contract expires will be questionable. But the league should remember that without the bowl, it probably would not have had the chance for such exposure.

Ah, parity! It's made the big folks tremble this year. And the little folks glad they stuck around.

Just recently across our desk came a new record album. Some of you may have already seen it, or heard something from it.

It's called "Blue Cowboy," and the artist is none other than former Greenville resident Joe West. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude West, retired school teachers here in Greenville, Joe was a star football and baseball player at Rose before becoming an all-conference quarterback and record-setter at Elon College. After his career ended there, he went on to umpire school and made it to the big leagues in only five seasons.

Now he's turned, as a sideline, to country-western singing, putting out his first album. Several of the songs included are written by West himself.

Caruso can rest content, Joe's not going to threaten his memory. But as a country and western singer, he's not bad at all. Don't know if it'll be a million seller, but it was pleasant to listen and remember the kid we watched from Little League up to the Big Leagues.

SEC Considering Compromise Plan

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Southeastern Conference, wary of a lawsuit, is considering a compromise which would allow Florida to remain the league's football champion but would prevent the Gators from playing in the Sugar Bowl. The Orlando Sentinel reported today.

The deal is expected to be finalized and announced by the SEC's executive committee after a meeting Tuesday with Florida officials in Birmingham, Ala., the newspaper said.

The newspaper said representatives from Florida and the SEC refused to comment on the agreement.

Because of Florida's impending NCAA probation, the executive committee said two weeks ago that it would not allow Florida to represent the conference in a bowl or officially win the championship.

A source close to the negotiations told the newspaper that both sides want a compromise to avoid the legal action Florida has threatened against the SEC.

"If this thing goes to court, the wounds from it will fester for a long, long time," the source told the newspaper. "Everything will be done to keep it out of court."

Florida, 8-1-1, beat Kentucky 25-17 Saturday to earn the conference championship. Normally, the league's top team receives an automatic bid to the Sugar Bowl.

If the fifth-ranked Gators are excluded from the Sugar Bowl, Auburn can earn the SEC's berth by beating Alabama Dec. 1. Should Auburn lose, LSU would go to the Sugar Bowl.

Tigers Look For Surprises

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

A new head coach and experience in the starting lineup are reason enough for the Williamston Tigers to be optimistic going into the 1984-85 high school basketball season.

The Tigers managed just six wins in 19 outings a year ago including a 4-12 Northeastern 3-A Conference mark, but four seniors return to the starting unit.

"Our seniors want to go out on a winning note," new Coach Mike Mosely said. "I think possibly that alone would make us play better than in the past."

"I've been somewhat of an advantage in that our five starters didn't play football and have been playing together for a couple of weeks. But our other seven did, and it's taken a little longer for them to grasp the new system."

David Little (6-4, senior) and Stacy Peele (6-2, senior) are slated to start at the forwards, with Tony Doughty (6-4, senior) at center and Mike Griffin and junior Robert Slade at the guards. Jesse Ward and George Rucker are the top reserve guards, while Sam Johnson subs at forward and Ricky Mason at center.

The only freshman in the top 10 is 6-3 forward Lewis Purvis. Ron Myrick and Jerry Speller round out the Tiger dozen.

"I think all four of our seniors that will be starting could play Division II or III (college) basketball,"

Mosely said. "Ward and Slade are good outside shooters. Doughty is the most physical player we have inside, but they're all good jumpers."

"Mike Griffin is our point guard; he runs the offense and sets the defense. It's a lot of responsibility, but he seems to handle it pretty well."

Mosely's first squad will operate a man-to-man defense, which he feels will be one of the Tigers' strengths.

"I've been impressed with their effort on defense," Mosely said. "Defensively, we've improved every day. I consider myself a better defensive coach than offensive. I like to see kids push themselves on defense."

"I told them we'd run a man-to-man defense similar to what Bobby Knight uses at Indiana. We're going to have to be aggressive."

"We've worked on transition defense in particular. A lot of times, a game will be decided more by which team plays better defense than by which team shoots better."

The Tigers will be tested Tuesday in a scrimmage against Perquimans, but rebounding and controlling the tempo are the main concerns of Mosely.

"We're going to try and control the tempo with aggressive defense, and on the other end of the floor control it by taking good shot," Mosely said. "I'm a little concerned about our rebounding, but we've been working a lot in practice on blocking out."

Mosely thinks Washington and Plymouth have the early edge in the Northeastern Conference, but he added Roanoke could contend for the title. Williamston opens its non-conference schedule Nov. 27 at Bear Grass, but then must travel to Plymouth for its league opener Dec. 4.

"I hear (Plymouth) really plays good down there," Mosely said. "That's a little early for conference games, but our kids are looking forward to the challenge."

"If we can win some games early and get the kids some confidence, we're going to surprise some people."

LADY TIGERS

While the boys team was having a rough season a year ago, the Lady Tigers were having even more trouble.

Williamston managed just a 3-17 record overall and 2-14 in the Northeastern Conference. Tarboro eliminated the Lady Tigers from the league tourney in the first round with a 66-30 thumping.

Experienced outside play was missing last season, and two inside players graduated to make that the questionable area this year.

"We're going to be very small and very young," Williamston Coach Peggy Taylor said. "Our tallest girls are 5-7, so we're giving up a lot of height inside. We've put in a weight program, and the girls have been lifting every day after practice; we're hoping to be small but strong."

Senior center Sonya Purvis returns to the squad after sitting out her sophomore and junior seasons. Jan Mills and Beth Gardner are the only juniors on the team, while sophomores Cham Miller and Monique Pou will help out at forward. Queensha Sanders, Susan Forehand and Myra Brown are the three freshmen on the roster.

"We only have eight, so everybody's going to have to play," Taylor said. "We really don't have a center, so we've had to move (Purvis) over from forward. Our board game is going to be weak as a result."

"Our shot selection is going to be the most important factor. We're not going to get many second or third shots, so we've got to make the first one count. We're going to have to run a control offense and look for the percentage shot."

Taylor expects Edenton, Tarboro, Plymouth and Ahsokie to be the strongest teams in the Northeastern Conference, but she's not certain where the Lady Tigers will fall in.

"Tarboro lost a lot of height, but they're coming back with speed," Taylor said. "Right now we're probably in the bottom third of the conference, but we're aiming to move into the middle third."

Cavs Still In ACC Title Race

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina disdained a chance at an upset and as a result, 19th-ranked Virginia is still in the running for its first-ever Atlantic Coast Conference football title.

Remembering what happened the last time he chose to go for a victory — when North Carolina dropped a 16-13 decision at Clemson three years ago — Tar Heel coach Dick Crum elected to go for the tie. Ken Miller responded with a 25-yard field with seven seconds left to play, forcing a 24-24 tie with the Cavaliers.

Maryland stands in the way of that first tie for Virginia, and the Terrapins built momentum for their clash in Charlottesville with a 41-23 victory over No. 20 Clemson.

The Tar Heels are 4-5-1 and 2-2-1 and can still avoid a losing season by beating Duke next weekend. Virginia is 7-1-2 and 3-0-2 and can capture the crown by .003 points if it can trip the Terrapins next Saturday.

Duke snapped its eight-game losing streak at the expense of North Carolina State's farewell performance for its seniors. Ken Harper's 29-yard field goal with 1:56 left and a Darryl Bruns interception sealed a 16-13 victory for the Blue Devils.

Georgia Tech ended Wake

Forest's hopes of a seven-win season by taking a 24-7 victory.

Virginia was trailing 14-3 in the third period when quarterback Don Majkowski engineered the tie. After Steve Morse's 1-yard run in the third period, Majkowski fired a 25-yard pass to freshman flanker John Ford, then scored on a 5-yard run to give the Cavaliers a 24-14 lead.

Majkowski's counterpart, Kevin Anthony, guided the Tar Heels on their own comeback trail. With a 63-yard pass play to Earl Winfield as a guide, North Carolina rallied to win 24-21 on an Anthony scoring pass to Earl Winfield with 4:03 left.

After three incomplete passes, Crum said there was no choice.

"I felt it was in our best interest to kick a field goal," Crum said. "Three years ago, we went for the win against Clemson and that hurt us all season long."

Virginia coach George Welsh didn't find fault with Crum's decision.

"Maybe after his team made such a comeback, he thought it was important for his team not to lose it," Welsh said.

Sophomore Alvin Blount rushed for 214 yards, becoming the first running back to dent the Clemson defense for 200 yards or more. He said he saw it coming despite the size of the Tiger defensive front.

"But from play one, I could see that we could run against them," Blount said.

Maryland is 7-3 and 4-0 and has taken its last two triumphs over top 20 competition. Clemson, ineligible for the title, is also 7-3 and faces South Carolina in its final regular season game.

"Now, we have to win the Virginia game to win the Atlantic Coast Conference," Maryland coach Bobby Ross said.

Coach Steve Sloan lost his temper at halftime after the Blue Devils lost 19 yards on an intentional grounding penalty.

"I said some things at halftime I hate to say. I got mad," Sloan said. "When you're a marginal team, every play is catastrophic. I had temporary insanity."

It was the fourth close loss in the last five games for N.C. State, which ends 1984 at 3-8 and 1-6.

"No matter what happened, it seemed like we weren't going to win," Wolfpack coach Tom Reed. "It typifies the season."

Tailback Robert Lavette limbered up his right arm and tossed a touchdown pass and ran for another one. But Yellow Jacket coach Bill Curry was more interested in talking defense.

"I'm thrilled, just thrilled as I can be with our defense," Curry said. "I can't ever remember us playing a better defensive game."

Georgia Tech is 5-4-1 with a season finale against Georgia on Dec. 1. The Yellow Jackets also finished the ACC slate at 2-2-1.

Wake Forest finishes at 6-5 and 3-3. Coach Al Groh was not pleased with being shut out over the final three quarters but was satisfied that this year's squad achieved a winning season.

"What we have accomplished to this point doesn't affect the feeling we have at the present. But when the players walk out of here they should be able to walk with a feeling of confidence and pride in what they have done," he said. "I'm already looking forward to next season."

Gymnasts Qualify

DURHAM — The Greenville Gymnastics Club placed four girls in the State Meet to be held in February with scores in the Class IV and Class III-C qualifying meet held this weekend.

Rhonda Davis took sixth on the balance beam with a score of 8.35 and went on to place seventh in the all-around competition with a 32.30.

Anna Morgan took first place on the vault with an 8.25 and qualified in the all-around with a 30.40. Tracy Roberts also qualified in the all-around at 30.95.

Tonya Williams was 10th in the vault at 7.35, and Courtney Bishop was seventh in the floor exercise at 8.75.

Spain Takes World Cup

ROME (AP) — Lanny Wadkins and Tom Kite were the more well-known players. But Jose Canizares and Jose Rivero were the winners.

Canizares and Rivero teamed Sunday to lead Spain to an eight-stroke victory in the 31st World Cup team golf tournament while the favored American duo tied for 12th.

Canizares shot a 4-under 68 Sunday and finished with an 11-under-par total of 265, and won $25,000 for the lowest individual score. Rivero had a 70 for a 7-under 269, giving the Spaniards a total of 414. The Chinese team from Taipei and Scotland tied for second in the tournament shortened from 72 to 54 holes because rain wiped out Thursday's opening round.

The victory, the fourth for Spain in the past eight World Cup tournaments, earned each player $30,000.

The defending champion U.S. team wound up tied with Argentina and France at 436, 22 strokes behind Spain.

Canizares and Rivero began Sunday two shots ahead of Scots Sam Torrance and Gordon Brand Jr., who was also the individual leader after shooting 67s in the first two rounds.

After four holes of the final round, the Spaniards led by four strokes. Then, on the 489-yard, par-5 fifth, Canizares hit the green with a 3-iron on his second shot and holed out from 22 feet for an eagle.

Torrance matched that with an eagle, but Rivero birdied the hole while Brand took par, giving Spain a five-stroke edge and a comfortable cushion.

Tisdale was rudely welcomed to the opening of the college basketball season Sunday.

Second-ranked Illinois ganged up on the two-time All-American from fifth-ranked Oklahoma Sunday and crushed the Sooners 81-64 Sunday in the sixth Hall of Fame Classic.

It's not something the 6-9, 250-pound Tisdale hasn't seen before when he averaged 25.8 points for his first two seasons.

"It's the same old game," said Sooners' coach Billy Tubbs. "Three or four guys knocking the hell out of him all the game."

Tisdale did score 19 points before fouling out with 2:42 remaining, but 11 of those points came while George Montgomery, a 6-9 senior center, was on the bench.

"I just tried to keep him from getting the ball and play my role which is defense," said Montgomery, who paced the Fighting Illini with 17 points, 10 rebounds and was named the game's most valuable player.

"Montgomery did a great job of keeping the ball away from Tisdale, as did the rest of the team," said Illinois coach Lou Henson. "One player can't stop him, and when he is on, I'm not sure one team can stop him."

"It was embarrassing," said Tisdale. "We just had one of those days. Our shots just wouldn't go down."

Illinois, which shared the Big Ten title with Purdue last season, looked as if it was in midseason, rolling to a 41-30 halftime lead, and pulling away after the defending Big Eight champions reduced to lead to 45-41 early in the second half.

The Illini outscored Oklahoma 17-6 to take a 62-47 lead with 6:55 left. The Sooners pulled to within 67-57, but Montgomery was fouled by Tisdale, his fifth, and the Oklahoma bench drew a technical. Montgomery and Tony Wisinger each made two free throws and Illinois went on to roll up the biggest victory margin in Tip-Off Classic history.

"We are very pleased with the way we played," said Henson, whose team next plays in the Great Alaska Shootout this coming weekend. "We didn't play like it was a typical opening game."

Illinois outshot Oklahoma from the field 53 to 42 and dominated the boards, 40-31.

Tubbs, in his fifth year as Oklahoma coach, understandably had a low opinion of the Sooners' opening performance.

"This is as bad as I've seen an Oklahoma team play," Tubbs said. "We have no excuses. We got a country lickin' today."

Tisdale acknowledged that the Sooners have some work to do. "If we want to play in Final Four we have run our offense and play some defense," he said.

Oklahoma will have a chance to avenge the loss when they visit Illinois on Dec. 1.

Guard Doug Altenberger hit six of eight from the field and added 14 points for Illinois. Other Illini in double figures were 6-9 Anthony Welch, sidelined lined for all but two games last season, with 12 and guard Bruce Douglas with 10.

For Oklahoma, guard Anthony Bowie, a junior college transfer, made seven of 10 from the field for 14 points, and Darryl Kennedy and Linwood Davis, contributed 10 points apiece.

Guard Tim McCalister, the Sooners' second-leading scorer last season, with a 16-point average, scored only five points on two of 12 shooting from the outside.

He has been suffering from tendonitis after two operations on the left knee during the offseason.

Taylor Sticking To Simple Strategy

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — To Lawrence Taylor, secretary of defense for the New York Giants, it was a rather simple strategy. "You just run to the ball and hit people," he explained. "We stuck our basic stuff and won with it." There's nothing to it, really. It's just plain, no frills football, the kind that old-fashioned, nose-for-the-ball defenders like Taylor love to play. It created a fair share of sacks (2), recovered fumbles (2) and interceptions (4), and constructed New York's 16-10 victory over St. Louis Sunday. That left the enigmatic Giants tied with Dallas and Washington — both losers Sunday — for first place in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division. Surprised? "No," Taylor said, "but I'll bet you guys are." Indeed. In fact, even Taylor's linebacking buddy, Harry Carson, admitted he didn't expect the Giant defenders to manhandle the high-powered Cardinal attack quite so thoroughly. "When you go to bed Saturday night and you think you're gonna be playing one of the most potent offenses in the league, you don't get much sleep," Carson said. "I woke up at 3 a.m. thinking about (quarterback) Neil Lomax and (wide receiver) Roy Green." Lomax and Green had been chewing up yardage in huge chunks all season but against the Giants, the Cardinal battery managed just one completion all day. "That's all I caught!" Green said, sounding a bit bewildered. "One?" One. That matched the number of completions Lomax had to Giant linebackers Taylor and Gary Reasons and was one less than New York cornerback Mark Haynes had. The key to the victory was a tenacious Giant zone defense which would simply not give Lomax any long range room with which to operate. The Cardinal quarterback finished with 230 yards but much of that was accomplished on short pitches to his backs. "We did a good job," Carson, a tough critic, decided. "We tried to confuse him, get a good rush, put pressure on him, force him to make a decision." "It was not so much their defense beating our offense. It was their offense being beaten by our defense. Their offense is so potent. We couldn't let up. We kept bearing down, putting pressure on every play. They've got a scoring machine." Perhaps the best tribute the Giant defense received all day was a silent one from St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan. Needing a field goal and a touchdown to win with time running out and the Cardinals on New York's 3-yard line with a fourth down, Hanifan chose to take the three-pointer then, hoping to get a later shot at the TD. That decision came after the Giant defenders had yielded just one yard to St. Louis in the previous three plays. Lomax got his chance for the TD

in the final 81 seconds and was throwing into the end zone as time ran out. But the Giants' secondary was having none of that, surrounding Green and his buddies, leaving no room for final-second heroics. Carson appreciated that. "There is hardly a feeling you can describe like this," he said. "Exhausting yourself and coming up a winner. It's hard to describe."

Lomax was disgusted with his performance, particularly with the pass that Taylor intercepted on a ball that seemed to be thrown right at the defender. "It was supposed to be a screen," Lomax explained. "The linebackers hooked on the back and he looked open, so I decided to give him the ball."

Lendl Moving Closer

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — The $200,000 prize for capturing the European Champions' tennis title is nice, but Ivan Lendl wants the trophy that the event offers. Lendl, the world's No. 2 player, crushed Sweden's Anders Jarryd 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 in Sunday's final and moved a step closer to gaining possession of one of the game's most ostentatious trophies — a 16-pound gold racket with 1,350 diamonds in a stylized "E" across the strings. The trophy, valued at about $600,000, goes to the player who wins the ECC, a tournament for European Grand Prix winners, three times in a five-year span. Lendl, 24, won it in 1982, the first year of competition. John McEnroe won it in 1983 but was absent this year because of a 21-day suspension for penalties assessed at the Stockholm-Scandinavian Open this month. "It is very nice to know I have two more years to win that racket," he said. The top-seeded Lendl won the final of the $800,000 ECC by taking revenge on fourth-seeded Jarryd, 23, who beat the Czech in straight sets in Australia last month. Lendl used only 98 minutes beat the Swede, ranked sixth in the world but looking tired from an exhausting semifinal victory over India's Ramesh Krishnan Saturday evening. Jarryd, who battled nearly three hours for a 6-0, 6-7 (10-12), 9-7 decision over Krishnan, pocketed $130,000 for losing to Lendl.

"I couldn't move too well," said Jarryd. "I was still very tired. It was difficult to start up again." "I was concentrating well," Lendl said. "I wanted to beat him very badly. My form grew all week and today I played the best game of the tournament," during which he also ousted fellow Czech Tomas Smid and Argentina's Guillermo Vilas.

In other weekend tennis action, Czechoslovakian teen-ager Helena Sukova won her first major tournament with a 6-4, 6-4 victory Sunday over Australia's Liz Sayers Smylie in the $150,000 National Panasonic women's tennis classic. Sukova, ranked 12th in the world, collected $27,500 for winning the tournament in Brisbane, Australia.

Tripucka in 1962.
Raiders 17, Chiefs 7
Linebacker Rod Martin returned one Kansas City fumble for a touchdown and forced a second that set up another Los Angeles score as the Raiders broke a three-game losing streak.
The victory boosted the defending Super Bowl champions' record to 8-4 and kept them from losing four straight games for the first time in 20 years.
Bears 16, Lions 14
Bob Thomas' third field goal of the game, a 19-yarder with two seconds remaining, lifted Chicago over Detroit.
The triumph boosted the first-place Bears to 8-4 and dropped Detroit to 3-8-1, eliminating the defending champion Lions from title consideration in the Central Division of the National Conference.
Browns 23, Falcons 7
Cleveland's defense unloaded an NFL record-tying 11 sacks and Paul McDonald threw two touchdown passes as the Browns beat the Falcons.

Clay Matthews led the sack parade with 3 1/2 as the Browns nailed Steve Bartkowski 10 times for losses totaling 89 yards and Mike Moroski once for six yards. Two Bartkowski sacks resulted in fumbles, the latter sending the Atlanta quarterback to the sidelines with an injured right knee early in the final period. A team spokesman said that will keep him out for the rest of the season.
Packers 31, Rams 6
Eddie Lee Ivey rushed for three touchdowns and cornerback Tim Lewis returned an interception a team-record 99 yards for another TD to power Green Bay to its fourth straight victory.
Green Bay, 5-7, stayed alive in the NFC Central race, while the Rams, with hopes of a wild-card playoff spot beginning to fade, fell to 7-5 in the NFC West.
Patriots 50, Colts 17
Tony Eason passed for 292 yards and four touchdowns, three of them to Derrick Ramsey in the first half, as New England routed the Colts.
The three touchdown passes to Ramsey helped the Patriots to a 26-10 lead at halftime, and a 12-yard scoring completion to Stanley Morgan iced the game in the third quarter.

Seahawks 26, Bengals 6
Seattle's defense set up one of Zachary Dixon's two touchdown runs and Norm Johnson's field goal, leading the Seahawks over Cincinnati for a team-record sixth consecutive victory.
The Seahawks stayed in the thick of the AFC playoff chase with their 10th regular-season victory, another team record, against two losses.
Oilers 31, Jets 20
Houston's Warren Moon threw three touchdown passes — two to Tim Smith — during a string of 31 straight points to lead the Oilers over the Jets. The loss was the fourth straight for the Jets and marked the first time since 1981 that the Oilers have won two straight games.
Oiler running back Larry Moriarty rushed over 100 yards for the second straight week and iced the game with a 51-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter that completed Houston's 31-point surge.

Testimony Continues In Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland returns to the witness stand to explain his role in a 1967 intelligence dispute over the strength of the enemy in Vietnam when his $120 million libel suit trial enters its sixth week.

As was the case on Friday, the 70-year-old Westmoreland's testimony will be limited to four hours today.

In the 1982 documentary "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Conspiracy," CBS said Westmoreland deliberately suppressed information about rising enemy strength in 1967 to convince President Lyndon B. Johnson and others in Washington that the war was being won.

On Friday, Westmoreland testified about the difficulties of waging the first televised war.

"My troops did a wonderful job," he told jury in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. "They were proud of themselves and properly so. They were doing a difficult job and doing magnificently. They never felt — and I got this everywhere I went — they were getting a fair shake in the media."

"The men got clippings from home," he added, "and when they didn't get the credit they felt they deserved it was detrimental to morale."

Thus, Westmoreland said, he was concerned when his chief of intelligence suggested in 1967 that estimates of enemy strength be sharply increased. The intelligence chief, Gen. Joseph McChristian, reported that Communist "irregulars," including guerrillas and "self-defense" and "secret-self-defense" forces, totaled nearly 200,000, instead of the then-estimated 100,000.

"To come out with a statement publicly that we were fighting 100,000 more people than we said we were, it would have been a distortion," Westmoreland said. "It would have hurt morale terribly and these were not people we were trying to fight. These were basically civilians."

Westmoreland said he delayed transmission of a cable by McChristian until after he was briefed on the subject. After ordering his staff to "separate the fighters from the non-fighters" included in the estimate, he added that he ordered the cable "sent forward" without reducing McChristian's estimates.

CBS attorney David Boies contends that by working to keep the "irregulars" and Communist political workers out of an enemy strength estimate prepared in late 1967, Westmoreland succeeded in holding the figure for Communist manpower below 300,000, when it should have been above 500,000.

Besides the network, the defendants in the case include CBS correspondent Mike Wallace, who narrated the broadcast; George Crile, who produced it, and Sam Adams, a one-time CIA analyst who became a consultant for the network.

Milling Firm Blast Hurts 3

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — One of three critically injured workers was left perched on a fire escape for hours after an explosion touched off by ignited flour dust blew the walls of a milling company "in all four directions," officials said.

The explosion, which was felt up to six miles from the Bay State Milling Co. plant, was touched off shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday as three workers were unloading railroad cars, fire officials said.

"It was a violent dust explosion," said Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Dobkowski. "It blew the four walls of the five-story building in all four directions."

The explosion also knocked out a brick wall of a city public works garage about 60 feet away, and shattered and rattled windows elsewhere in the industrial area, officials said.

It took firefighters about three hours to control the fire that followed the early-morning blast.

Two of the workers were quickly rescued from the basement of the five-story building, but rescue workers were unable to find the third, Raul Nieves of Passaic, and "assumed he was underneath the rubble," Dobkowski said.

About seven hours later rescue workers noticed Nieves, collapsed on a fire escape, he said. "How he got out of there, I don't know. We found him perched up on the fire escape shivering. We gingerly got him down the teacherous outside fire escape."

Dobkowski said investigators did not know what ignited the dust.

"When that dust gets stirred up somehow, any source of ignition — a short circuit, a guy smoking, anything — it explodes like a bomb," he said.

The milling center and two smaller buildings connected to it by walkways were heavily damaged by the explosion and fire, and Dobkowski said they would probably have to be razed.

RAYLE, Ga. (AP) — A roundup at Callaway Farms never begins until after sundown, because a turkey's journey to the Thanksgiving dinner table must start as a cool walk in the evening, not a stampede in the sunshine.

So say the folks at Callaway, where a turkey's life consists mostly of eating and taking it easy in a way most commercial birds never experience: They grow up on the range, not in pens.

"A bird on the range is a happier bird, and a happy bird will convert food (into turkey) faster and the cost of growing them is cheaper," said Herman Nation, who runs the turkey program for owner Eugene M. Callaway.

The farm buys day-old birds and raises them in houses for about seven weeks, when they weigh about five pounds.

Then the birds are trucked to the range, where they live in the sun or under the shade of Georgia pines until they grow large enough to make a centerpiece at a holiday meal.

But getting the turkey from the range to the table takes lots of care; the bird must be protected from all sorts of hazards — including itself.

Nation said summer rangeland must be three-fourths wooded, to provide shade, and rolling, with no cuts, washouts or ravines.

"The birds will just pile into a ravine, one atop of each other," he said. "Hundreds of them will smother. If you leave a wheelbarrow or a bucket in a turkey house, they will jump into it until it is full, smothering each other."

Then, the birds are released only when the weather forecast calls for several days without rain.

Rain can destroy a flock before the birds become acclimated to the outdoor life. After that they enjoy the rain, playing in mud puddles for hours.

Most flocks comprise about 12,000 birds spread over 18 to 20 acres; rounding them up may be the trickiest task of all for a grower.

"If you push them too hard and they get hot, they'll just sit down" and die of heat stress, said Malcolm Chafin, Callaway Farms general manager.

To help the thousands of birds milling around the loader keep cool, workers mount huge fans on trucks to keep the air circulating.

Shipping begins in July and continues to about Christmas. In February the first crop of day-old birds arrives and the cycle begins again.

After several lean years, the turkey business is good this year, said Chafin.

Avian flu forced growers in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley to destroy their flocks, including breeders, and demand for turkey has taken an upturn, partly because of the rising cost of red meat, Chafin said.

"And as a rule, the country is eating 1 percent more turkey a year," Nation said.

In addition to the traditional Thanksgiving turkey dinner, the bird is finding its way into the American diet in more and more ways.

Turkey breasts, turkey drumsticks and turkey rolls have found their way onto grocers' shelves beside whole birds.

But the real innovations have come in the way turkey substitutes for red meat in a number of products.

"More and more, processors are going into other things, making turkey ham and turkey loaf and turkey hot dogs," Chafin said.

Most of today's turkeys never make it to the roasting pan, he said. "Most now go into processing for baloney or some other product."

Research Job For Feminist

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A year after she was found innocent in a murder trial that brought nationwide attention to a New Orleans suburb, California feminist Ginny Foat has returned to do research for a book.

Accompanied by free-lance writer Laura Foreman of Philadelphia, Ms. Foat spent part of the past week in her lawyer's offices reviewing materials from her trial.

An ex-husband of Ms. Foat had accused her of taking part in the 1965 murder of Argentine businessman Moises Chao, who was beaten with a tire iron near New Orleans in 1965.

But when the case was tried in the city of Gretna, a jury found her innocent Nov. 16, 1983, on the first vote.

The book, "Presumption of Guilt," is three-quarters finished and is scheduled for spring publication by Random House, Ms. Foat said.

"I have total control over the book. It will be honest and it will be accurate," Ms. Foat said.

Also in the works is a television movie, a project unrelated to the book, she said.

Ms. Foat said she spends her time making speeches and working on the book and that she still owes about $50,000 from a legal bill that once totaled about $250,000.

'Sesame Street' Celebrates 16th Birthday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Sesame Street," public television's precocious program for pre-schoolers, has turned sweet 16.

This award-winning, entertainingly educational series began its 16th season today. As with any teen-ager, "Sesame Street" has all the answers; we supply the questions:

- Which of the the human and puppet characters remain from the November, 1969 debut?
- Only Loretta Long, who plays Susan, and Bob McGrath, who plays Bob, are originals. Puppeteer Jim Henson created the Muppets' Big Bird, Bert & Ernie, Cookie Monster and Grover for the show. All of them are still around.

—Why is Kermit the Frog the only character to star in both "Sesame Street" and Henson's "The Muppet Show"?

Kermit was Henson's first character, and he has been part of other Henson productions. The rest of the original cast of inanimate characters were created by Henson expressly for "Sesame Street."

—What was the educational goal of "Sesame Street," and how has that evolved?

"The original emphasis was on numbers and letters," said executive producer Dulcy Singer. "We were trying to prepare kids for school. Over the years, the curriculum has grown to include feelings, the role of women, career awareness, health, environment and computers."

—"Sesame Street" dealt with death last season after Will Lee, the actor who played Mr. Hooper, died. What impact did that have?

A follow-up study, in which 31 children and 20 parents were interviewed, indicated that, for 4- and 5-year-olds, the messages about Mr. Hooper's death were clear and readily understood. The information on death was less clear for 3-year-olds. Parental response to the program was overwhelmingly positive.

"These findings suggest," the study said, "that television can be used effectively not only to educate children but to help parents express their feelings and beliefs about death with their children."

—Will any important issues be raised this season?

Indirectly, the program will touch on the issue of child abuse by giving Big Bird's so-called imaginary friend, Mr. Snuffleupagus, more credibility. Several adults will finally believe he exists — an important lesson that might persuade kids to talk openly with their parents.

The big joke on "Sesame Street" was that nobody except Big Bird and the audience believed Mr. Snuffleupagus existed. "It could have been keeping children from divulging things to their parents," said head writer Norman Stiles.

Specialists say one way of dealing with child abuse in both the preventive and therapeutic stages is for children to have complete confidence about talking to parents.

In addition, "Sesame Street" this season will also attempt to familiarize children with hospitals and make them less threatening through the situation of Luis (Emilio Delgado) breaking his arm and going to the emergency room.

"We'll follow the healing process," said Ms. Singer. "We'll stress that the injury was accidental, that it doesn't happen all the time. We don't want to worry kids."

"Sesame Street" also will continue its work with computers, and encourage the development of creative writing skills with the keyboard. "As a result of working with computers, we know now that kids can create writing before their motor skills are developed," said Stiles.

—What was the original target audience for "Sesame Street," and has that changed?

It was designed to reach the educationally deprived child in urban areas — and still is. The show, with five of the seven human cast members black or Hispanic, is set in the inner-city, but in recent years, it has traveled to a nearby farm to broaden its appeal.

"But if we're reaching the middle class and not ghetto kids, we're not doing our job," said Ms. Singer.

—What else will be new this season?

"Sesame Street" is getting into music videos.

Human Characters Had Careers Before They Became 'Muppets'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bob used to sing with Mitch Miller. Linda was once Fonzie's flame in "Happy Days." And Susan used to be a teacher. These are some of the different roads that have led to "Sesame Street."

Kids and animals have been upstaging actors for years, but on "Sesame Street," it's Jim Henson's Muppets that get most of the attention. After all, would you want a Bob or Luis doll, when you can have a cuddly Cookie Monster, Ernie or Big Bird?

But the show's humans are more than people puppets serving as role models and teachers. They're also actors and singers with long lists of credits.

Bob McGrath, who has played Bob since the series began 16 years ago, was a solo vocalist on the "Mitch Miller Show." He frequently sings on "Sesame Street." So does Alaina Reed (Olivia), who has played all the female roles in the Broadway musical "Hair."

Linda Bove, a deaf actress who as Linda has made children sensitive to the world of deaf people, has had roles on "Happy Days" (as one of Henry Winkler's loves), the daytime serial "Search for Tomorrow" and the national touring company of "Children of a Lesser God."

Sonia Manzano, who plays Maria, appeared in the off-Broadway musical "Godspell" and the movie "Death Wish." Northern J. Calloway, who plays David, was featured in the Broadway hits "Pippin" and "Whose Life Is It, Anyway?" Emilio Delgado (Luis) has starred in episodes of "Lou Grant" and "Falcon Crest."

Dulcy Singer, executive producer of "Sesame Street," says the show's humans can't accept jobs that conflict with the program's 6-month taping schedule or its clean, positive image. "They can't endorse products or be in R-rated movies," she said.

Several years ago, Roscoe Orman (Gordon) appeared on the daytime soap opera "All My Children." His bald pate was covered by a wig, but kids saw through that. Even though the program wasn't for children, some were watching and became upset because the kindly Gordon was playing a villain.

Eventually, he gave up the part. "There was some misunderstanding about that role," Ms. Singer said tactfully.

Playing the part may be a 6-month job, but being a role model and educator is a full-time responsibility.

Loretta Long (Susan) actually was a teacher before becoming an actress and joining "Sesame Street" in 1969. She, too, was motivated by "Sesame Street," subsequently receiving her doctorate in urban education at the University of Massachusetts.

Her dissertation, on video education, was entitled "Sesame Street: A Space Age Approach to Education for Space Age Children."

Puppeteer Plays Two Roles

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Call it great character acting. Carroll Spinney, the alter-ego of both the chirpy Big Bird and the cantankerous Oscar the Grouch, says he has no trouble keeping their voices and personalities distinct.

"It's easy because they're so different," said Spinney, a puppeteer for 40 years who began playing Big Bird and Oscar when "Sesame Street" began 16 years ago. "It doesn't mess up my head at all."

Spinney goes underground from behind a trash can when he plays the immobile Oscar, but he dons orange leggings and a bulky, canary-yellow body costume to play the lumbering 8-foot character, Big Bird.

One hand held aloft maneuvers the beak and the other hand moves one of the bird's feathery claws. It's hard physical work. When he hasn't performed for awhile, Spinney lifts small weights to stay in shape.

Maneuvering his awkward character, who sometimes rollerskates, requires real coordination. The costume has no eye holes, so Spinney has a miniature TV monitor strapped to his chest to see where he's going and who he's talking to. But he only can see what the camera is covering.

"It can get a little stuffy in there," said Spinney.

Sixteen years ago, Big Bird was much scrawnier, "the equivalent of Mickey Mouse's pal Goofy," said Spinney. "He started out looking very ratty, sort of an ugly duckling who turned into a good-looking bird."

In the next decade and a half, Big Bird has grown in stature and aged from 4½ to 6 years old. Meanwhile, his appeal, as the loving, naive child in all of us, has always been universal.

"I have the sweetest audience in the world," said Spinney. "They haven't been spoiled by the rest of television yet."

He prefers Big Bird to the surly

Oscar, who's a favorite of many adults because of his biting sense of humor.

"We've had a hard time keeping Oscar on track," said Spinney. "There's a distinction between being grouchy and being mean. A grouch doesn't want to be bothered. Being mean might make somebody upset."

Last season, Spinney felt that the writers had allowed Oscar to mistreat one of the characters, Telly. "That was last year's mistake. We were a little off the track," Spinney said. "Now, we're back to being grouchy and not mean. Things get corrected each year."

"I guess the purpose of Oscar is as an example — don't be like him."

Candy Taken From Shelves In Britain After Threat

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — British storekeepers cleared an estimated 10 million Mars candy bars from their shelves today after animal rights activists said they injected some with rat poison to protest the use of monkeys in a sugar-rich diet experiment.

About a dozen people, including some children, reportedly ate Mars bars before finding typewritten warning notes inside the wrappers, but there were no reports that anyone had been poisoned. Police said the heat-sealed wrappers had been punctured, probably by activists posing as shoppers in supermarkets.

Laboratory technicians were checking for traces of poison in bars found in at least six cities and towns, including Coventry, Leeds, Manchester, Plymouth and Salisbury, police said.

In a statement Sunday, Mars said that with the aid of storekeepers it was removing and checking all Mars bars on sale. It said there could be 10 million of them.

"These measures will allow our customers to continue to buy Mars bars with confidence," it said, adding that so far no evidence of contamination had been found.

A telephone caller to the London Broadcasting Corp., who identified herself only as Vivien, said the action was taken against Mars U.K. Ltd to protest the company funding dental researchers to discover if monkeys get tooth decay on a sugar-rich diet at Guy's Hospital in London.

The telephone caller said: "There will be actions of this sort by the Animal Liberation Front against all companies that abuse animals. It will continue to step up its actions in any way necessary to put these companies out of business."

"These people are lunatics," said farmworker Michael Phippen near Dorchester in southwest England. He said his family was terrified when he found a note in a Mars bar after his wife, Sandra, and 14-year-old daughter Chantelle, had each eaten one.

Mrs. Phippen, who opposes animal experiments, said she and her daughter apparently suffered no ill effects from the bars.

Britons buy 3 million of the chocolate, caramel and nougat Mars bars daily, the company said. The candy bar has been sold in Britain since 1932.

Mars said it pays $31,250 a year to fund the monkey research. Loxley Ryan, corporate affairs director, denied any cruelty to animals. He said the monkeys get Mars bars as part of their diet to see whether dental problems in children can be prevented.

Ryan said the monkeys are neither force-fed nor mistreated.

The Daily Mail reported that the monkey labs are on the 28th floor of a building at the Guy's Hospital complex in Southwark, south London, under tight security.

Hospital administrator Paul Litchell said his staff feels "the animals are well looked after."

The Daily Star newspaper reported interviewing an unidentified member of the Animal Liberation Front in London who said hundreds of Mars bars were spiked with enough rat poison "to kill or seriously injure someone."

The woman was quoted as saying: "We aim not to endanger human life. That's why we gave out a warning. If someone were to die it would not affect our cause in the least."

She said that further campaigns are planned on other issues involving confectionary, fur coats and turkeys. The activists object to the breeding each year of several million turkeys for Christmas dinners.

The Animal Liberation Front first gained notoriety in 1981 when it attacked the homes of scientists with paint. In July it spiked shampoo bottles with bleach in the Boots drug store chain, protesting that the shampoos were tested on animals to see whether they damage skin. No one was injured.

Conservative lawmaker David Mellor, undersecretary at the Home Office which controls the police, denounced front members Sunday as fanatics who "need to be caught."

"They are dangerous and must be stopped before someone is severely injured or even killed," he said.

Mellor has come under criticism from animal rights activists because part of his job is to license animal experiments.

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — The Great American Dog, Garfield and Yogi Bear spend three hours a year delighting children and grown-ups alike as they take to New York City skies and streets in the Annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

But 364 days a year they loiter in the Macy's Parade Studio, a former candy factory where workers keep the famous giant balloons and mechanical floats in tip-top shape.

Since autumn, members of the store's Special Productions Department have been preparing for the nationally televised extravaganza that is viewed by about 55 million people, said Judy Cohn a spokeswoman for the retail chain.

"It's sheer joy for everyone," she said of the about 2,500 Macy's employees who will participate in the parade as clowns, dancers, balloon handlers and stagehands.

On Thanksgiving Eve, the nine giant balloons are taken in vinyl coverings to the inflation site at 77th Street and Central Park West, where they are secured by giant nets and inflated.

Meanwhile, workers here add the final touches to 18 giant floats — some 40 feet tall — and fold them into 8-by-12½-foot components for a midnight convoy through the Lincoln Tunnel into New York City for reassembly at the starting line on the Upper West Side.

This year's parade, the 58th since 1924 (two were cancelled during World War II and deflated balloons were donated as rubber for the war effort) features the revival of the Donald Duck balloon, which is coming out of a 14-year retirement in recognition of the cartoon character's 50th birthday. Donald first flew over New York in 1962.

Along with the giant balloons that are the parade's hallmarks will be two new ones. Garfield, the cartoon cat whose favorite activities are sleeping and eating, will loom 60 feet high and 35 feet wide and require 18,907 cubic feet of helium.

The second new balloon also is the second female in the cast — Rag-gedy Ann. The rag doll with bright red hair will be 62-feet high and 32-feet wide, with 12-foot feet and "I love you" emblazoned across her heart. Olive Oyl, the first female balloon, will return this year.

Macy's workers carefully watch the weather while they inflate the balloons. In 1966, 45 mph winds knocked them all out and only Mickey Mouse struggled to the finish line before collapsing. And in 1971, high winds forced cancellation of the balloons altogether.

Among the themes of new floats this year — created and built in the warehouse in this waterfront community — are the Cabbage Patch Kids, Care Bears, Disneyland and the Statue of Liberty. Celebrities and Macy's employees in costume ride in the nooks of many floats.

Old favorites that are scheduled to return this year are the Great American Dog, Santa Claus, Big Apple and Turkey floats.

Twelve bands chosen from more than 300 applicants from all over the country will be among the marchers, who step off at 9 a.m.

An estimated 3 million people will be along the parade route, which starts at 77th Street and Central Park West, proceeds south to Columbus Circle, down Broadway to the staging area in front of Macy's Herald Square store and onto the finish line at 34th Street and Seventh Avenue.

French artist and scientist Louis Daguerre was born 195 years ago yesterday. Daguerre is famous as the inventor of photography. But the first object we can call a photograph was produced by another Frenchman in 1822. It required an exposure of up to 8 hours. Daguerre refined the process by 1837. A "daguerreotype" required only a fifteen minute exposure. In order to make certain the subject did not move, his head was placed in a clamp.

A Sporty Lady

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Johanna Huddleston's no little old lady from Pasadena, but the 83-year-old woman who used to work in a garage has bought the car she needs to shift into life in the fast lane.

Last week, she drove her 2-year-old four-cylinder car onto a dealer's lot and drove away — against the advice of the salesman — with a $20,000 cranberry-red 1985 Nissan 300 Z-X with T-top and digital dashboard.

"I just wanted a sports car," Ms. Huddleston said. "I'm not going to live 100 more years, and I can't take my money with me. I figured I might as well go sporty.

"I'm still on cloud nine. I just did it on the spur of the moment. That's the way I do things," she said.

Ms. Huddleston said she had to get an automatic transmission because of arthritis and bad hip joints, and she keeps a cane in the back seat. But once she's behind the wheel, she puts the pedal to the metal, cranks up the stereo, curses traffic congestion, admonishes bad drivers and harasses slow movers.

Woman Is Deported Following Arrest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who married an American citizen earlier this year has been deported to her native Philippines because she lived here illegally for nearly 10 years before her marriage, immigration officials say.

Although her attorney contends her marriage now makes her eligible for legal residency here, Eleanor Parnes, 29, was put on a Manila-bound plane Thursday after a judge lifted an order barring the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service from deporting her.

"I brought a suitcase so she'd have some clothes, and (INS officials) wouldn't even let me see her to give it to her," her tearful husband, Richard Parnes said Friday. "I couldn't hold her or kiss her or even say goodbye."

Mrs. Parnes was arrested last week at the couple's West Los Angeles apartment on a 1980 warrant ordering her deportation.

INS officials said she had lived in Los Angeles illegally since leaving her job as a housekeeper to the Philippine consul general here in 1974.

However, Mrs. Parnes' attorney, Hiram Kwan, contends she is now eligible for legal residency in the United States because of her marriage to an American citizen.

After Mrs. Parnes' arrest, deportation proceedings were halted when a federal judge ruled the court must first consider her attorney's request that the case be reopened.

But while a hearing was to have been held Friday or Monday, the judge instead issued a written decision lifting the no-deportation order on Thursday, based on written arguments filed by the INS and Kwan.

YORK, England (AP) — A $125 fine levied against a teen-ager who meowed at a police dog has drawn growls from a British lawmaker.

"The next thing you know, somebody will be arrested for saying boo to a goose," Tom Torney, a member of Parliament, declared Saturday.

Torney said he would write the head of the British judiciary, Lord Hailsham, to protest the sentence, which was delivered at York Magistrate's Court on Friday.

Larry O'Dowd, 18, was found guilty of using abusive language and behavior likely to breach the peace.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A83 ♣AQ8762 ♢95 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 4 ♣ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You might argue that South has a minimum opening bid and, therefore, should pass. But that is lazy thinking. On any hand where North has first- or second-round diamond control, 12 tricks could be a near certainty. For instance, give North some holding like:
♠xx ♣Kxx ♢Kxx ♣AQJxx
Regardless of the defense, North can make a small slam at no trump. To investigate the possibilities, cue-bid four spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ ♣AK873 ♢A952 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is tempting to double, but your reward might be insufficient. Your side can surely make game, and slam is not out of the question. Since a new suit by responder is forcing, all we would do for the moment is bid two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J85 ♣J1062 ♢K952 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dbble Pass 1 ♣
Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—First, we trust you know that, in this sequence, North's jump is not forcing. However, it does show a very good hand and, probably, a near-solid suit. Therefore, we would venture three no trump—the gain in closing out the rubber if we succeed is worth the risk.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ63 ♣J5 ♢AKQ82 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Since partner has bid twice, he is unlikely to have a dead minimum, so it might seem that you should take your chances at three no trump. However, in view of the partial misfit, we would proceed cautiously and raise to two no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A76 ♣8754 ♢K983 ♣73
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner is trying for game and looking for help in clubs. You have an excellent hand for him—four-card trump support, an ace and a king, and a ruffing value where he needs it. Jump to four hearts.
