U.S. Soldier Injured

Incident At Panmunjom Leaves 3 Dead

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A gun battle broke out today after a Soviet tourist fled while touring the area around the truce village of Panmunjom, the United Nations Command said. The command said two North Koreans and one South Korean were killed and an American soldier was wounded.

The official North Korean radio said three people were killed "on the North Korean side" in "the Soviet defector incident," and that one other person was seriously wounded.

A United Nations statement said the shooting started after North Koreans, following the Soviet tourist, crossed into the southern half of a small joint security area in the demilitarized zone that has divided the Korean peninsula since 1953.

The South Korean and American casualties were not identified, pending notification of relatives. The American was reported to be hospitalized in stable condition.

Neither American nor South Korean officials would identify the Soviet, saying only that he was a member of a North Korean-sponsored tour of the 800-yard diameter joint security area that surrounds the truce village.

But Kyodo News Service in Japan identified him as Basil Mapuzak, 22. The state-run (South) Korean Broadcasting System said he was a "Russian tourist guide."

U.S. and South Korean troops took "defensive actions against an armed attack on the UNC (United Nations Command) side of the joint security area at Panmunjom," the United Nations Command said in a statement.

"Between 20 and 30 security guards from the North Korean People's Army intruded across the military demarcation line about 11:50 a.m. (9:50 p.m. EST Thursday), firing at an apparent defector from a North Korean-sponsored tour of the joint security area," it said.

The North Korean Radio Pyongyang, monitored in Tokyo, said the gunfight broke out when a Soviet tourist at the Panmunjom conference site "carelessly crossed the central border line, and a U.S. guardsman pulled at the tourist's arm."

When a North Korean guard tried to pull the Soviet tourist back across the line, a U.S. guardsman fired at the North Korean guard, Radio Pyongyang said. The North Korean radio report also referred to firing from the South Korean side at 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. in "provocative, militaristic attacks" which were designed to "increase tensions in the demilitarized zone."

It was not clear if the report was referring to the defector incident, which occurred at noontime, or to later firings elsewhere in the 151-mile-long demilitarized zone which extends 1 1/4 miles on each side of the border.

It was the first known shooting incident involving casualties inside the joint security area since the 1953 armistice that ended the Korean War.

However, there have been other shootings and deaths elsewhere in the demilitarized zone. And on Aug. 18, 1976, two U.S. army officers inside the oval security area around Panmunjom were axed and beaten to death by North Korean guards. Nine other U.S. and South Korean soldiers were injured in that incident.

The United Nations Command said today it had requested a meeting of security officers "to preclude further incidents."

The apparent defector was said to have been taken to the South Korean capital of Seoul, 25 miles south of Panmunjom.

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Soviet would probably be questioned at a U.S. military facility in Seoul.

American and South Korean troops make up the security force assigned to the southern side in the Panmunjom area. Troops of Communist North Korea have similar roles on the northern side of the military demarcation line.

Some buildings in Panmunjom straddle the demarcation line, including a structure where two meetings have been held this month between North and South Korean officials in an attempt to open a dialogue and ease tensions between the bitter enemies. A meeting of economic experts is scheduled for Dec. 5.

The U.S.-South Korean security unit includes about 300 men. However, under the armistice agreement that ended the Korean War, 30 enlisted men and five officers from each side, armed only with sidearms, are permitted in the security area at one time.

Greenville Enjoyed Quiet Thanksgiving

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Thanksgiving Day was a relatively quiet day according to law enforcement and other emergency service officials, with only a relatively few and minor calls being reported.

Thursday was also a day of good will.

The Rev. Jerry Sherba, rector of St. Gabriel's Catholic Church said over 600 meals were served to people in St. Gabriel's school auditorium as part of a Thanksgiving feast program sponsored by St. Gabriel's and the Tabernacle of Prayer for All People.

Sherba, who said the Thanksgiving feast "started as a dream" to have an open meal on Thanksgiving "so everybody and anybody could come and sit down and eat and have some fellowship," said 300 people were served last year. "There are a lot of people in this area who either have no one, have no money to spare for Thanksgiving or just want to be with others," he noted.

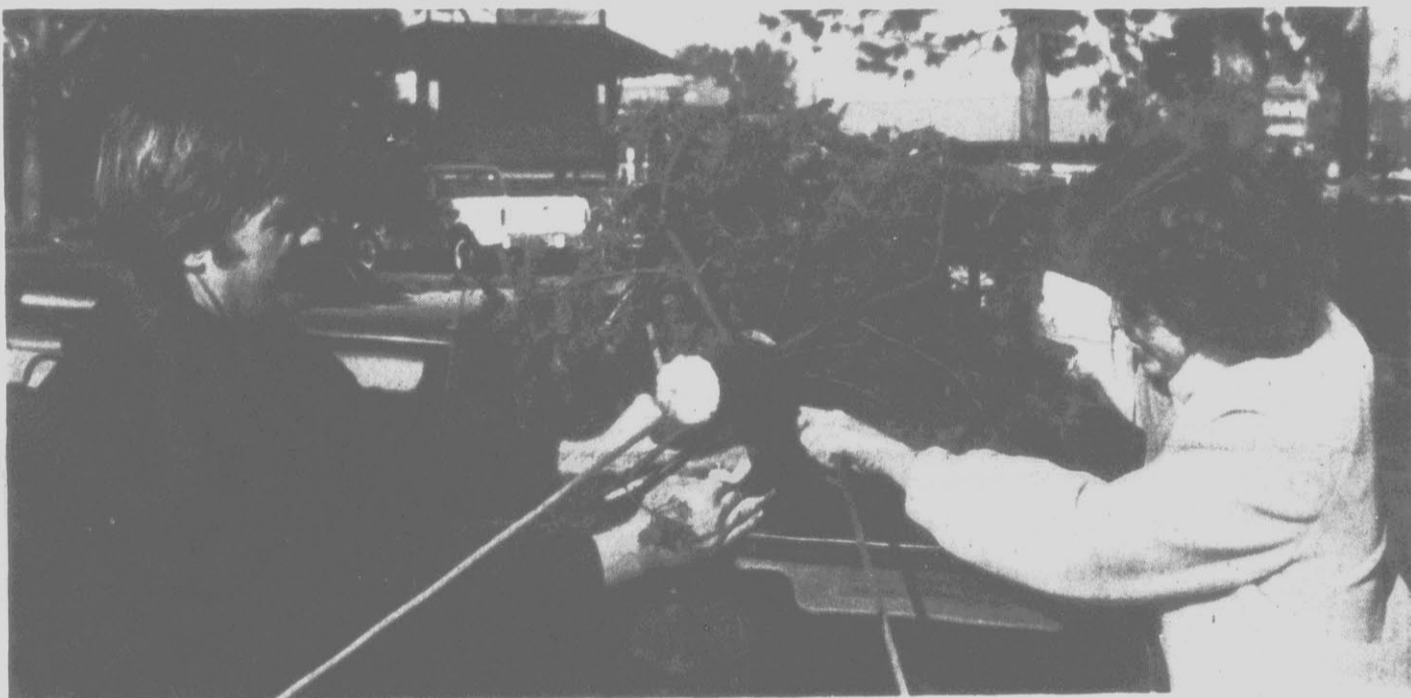

"Everybody worked very hard and enjoyed themselves and we're shooting for 1,000 next year," Sherba said.

With some of the food donated, and donated money used to purchase other food, Sherba said, "It was the neatest thing, how people came together and really enjoyed themselves ... met friends there, met new people. A lot of the people would not ordinarily have gotten together. It was a real fellowship of brothers and sisters. It really was."

Doug Roos, general manager of the Holiday Inn, said the restaurant there served 134 people Thanksgiving dinner, including 32 long-time residents and staff members from a local nursing home.

"We had plenty of food and everything went real well," Roos noted.

The Salvation Army also helped 15 families, "where folks were unemployed or had no income," with food for Thanksgiving, which was donated by several groups, a spokesman reported.

No Injuries In S. Pacific Earthquake

HONG KONG (AP) — An earthquake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale shook the South Pacific near the Vanuatu Islands, about 1,400 miles northeast of Brisbane, Australia, the Hong Kong Observatory said today.

Neither the observatory or the U.S. Geological Survey, which also recorded the quake in Golden, Colo., had reports of damage or injuries.

USGS officials said they measured the quake at 6.7 on the Richter scale.

Meanwhile, the Indonesian meteorological agency said an earthquake, also registering 6.5 on the Richter scale, rocked the capital of Jakarta and its surrounding areas shortly before noon today, about a half hour before the South Pacific quake was recorded.

It did not report any casualties or damage from that earthquake, which it said was centered in the Indian Ocean about 255 miles west of Jakarta.

The reported center of the South Pacific quake was thousands of miles from the reported Indonesian quake.

The USGS National Earthquake Information Center placed the hypocenter of the South Pacific earthquake at latitude 14.1 degrees south and longitude 170.6 degrees east.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5

reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 6 on the Richter scale can cause severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The Vanuatu Islands were known as the New Hebrides until 1980.

Japanese Fighters Scramble To Meet Soviet Bombers

TOKYO (AP) — Two Soviet bombers violated Japanese airspace today near the main southern island of Kyushu, and 34 Japanese warplanes scrambled to meet them, a Defense Agency spokesman said. There were no reports of a clash.

Spokesman Masamu Nishida said two Tu-95 "Bear" bombers flew south over the Tsushima Strait near Okinoshima Island at about 6:30 a.m., violating Japan's 12-mile territorial airspace for about 3 minutes and 20 seconds.

The bombers ignored repeated warnings from Japanese ground stations and the fighters, Nishida said. There were no reports on whether the fighters fired tracer bullets or took any other action to prevent the bombers from intruding further.

Five Soviet Tu-16 "Badgers," also were spotted near the Tu-95s but they stayed away from the Japanese airspace. The two planes continued flying south, presumably to Vietnam, while the other five turned either to the north or east, Nishida said.

The Japanese jetfighters, including F-4 Phantoms, F-98s, F-15 Eagles and F-104s, took off from four bases, the spokesman said.

The intrusion into Japan's airspace was the second in 11 days. On Nov. 12 a TU-16 bomber, part of a nine-bomber convoy, entered Japanese territory in the same area. In recent years there has been a sharp increase in Soviet warplanes flying off Japan's western coast in flights between Siberian bases and the U.S.-built Cam Ranh airbase in Vietnam.

Friday's violation was the 17th since the end of the World War II in 1945, Nishida said.

Earlier Detection Of Hearing Loss Now Possible At Pitt Memorial

Hearing deficiencies can now be diagnosed as soon as child is born, thanks to the advent of new technology in use at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Since early diagnosis is essential to successful treatment, this new technology should make it possible to deal effectively with hearing loss in many patients, said Rhonda Jones, an audiologist in the hospital's Department of Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology.

Joyner uses special equipment to measure a child's electrophysiologic responses to various levels of sound. This equipment is especially useful in dealing with infants or youngsters who are difficult to test with traditional headphones. It works like this:

Once the child is asleep, a small earphone which emits varying degrees of sound is held near his or her ear. Electrodes attached to the head and earlobe record the child's subconscious neurological responses to the sounds. Those responses are fed into a computer for storage and analysis.

One of the many advantages of this equipment is that it provides immediate results, Joyner said. As soon as the test is completed, the audiologist can often inform the patient's family of any hearing loss.

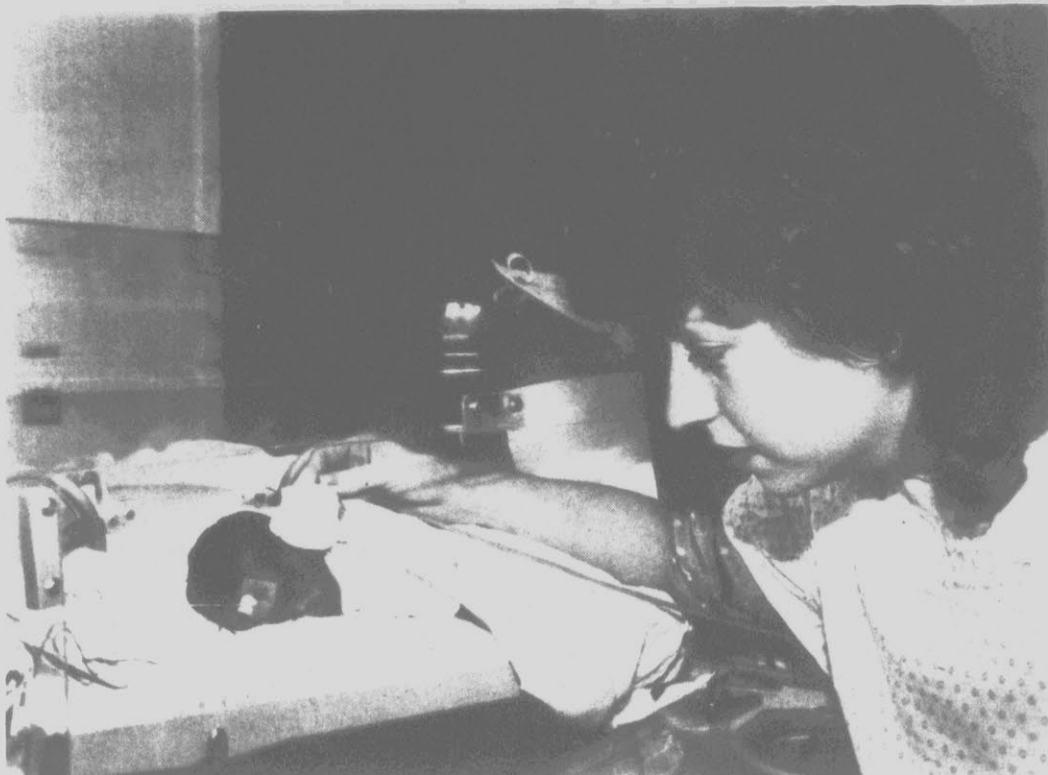

It provides highly reliable audiologic information at relatively low cost and can also be useful in the detection of neurological disorders which involve the auditory system.

The test for hearing loss — called auditory brain-stem response (ABR) audiometry — has been in use here since April 1983. It is more frequently used in the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, Joyner said, where many of the patients were born prematurely.

Premature babies are prone to hearing problems, Joyner explained. In fact, 2 to 5 percent of all premature infants experience some degree of hearing loss, she said, most of which is permanent and will require a hearing aid.

Until this equipment became available, a child's hearing problem may not have been discovered before first grade, Joyner said. By that time, six of the child's most valuable years of learning to communicate and respond are lost.

How can parents tell if their young child is prone to experiencing hearing loss?

If either of the child's parents or siblings has a congenital hearing problem, there is a greater chance the child will too, Joyner explained. The incidence of rubella, syphilis, cytomegalo virus, herpes, toxoplasmosis, liver malfunction, deformed ears or severe lack of oxygen may point to hearing deficiency, she said.

In addition to testing newborns, Joyner also provides this service to pediatric patients referred to her from within the hospital and to others on an outpatient basis. Pitt Memorial has become a major referral center in eastern North Carolina for cases which require ABR audiometry.

The only other medical centers in the state currently providing ABR audiometry on a routine basis in neonatal units are Duke in Durham and Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem.

Necklace Styles Will Vary

NEW YORK (AP) — Necklaces will come in all lengths this spring, reports Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council.

Among the styles expected to be popular are collars, chokers, lariats, opera lengths and ropes. The currently favored "twisters" — several strands in one necklace with mixes of gold, pearls and beads, will continue to have fashion appeal, Ms. McCulloch says.

They Put On The Dog For Wedding Ceremony

By JOHN ZAVINSKI
Sharon Herald

SHARON, Pa. (AP) — Call it a case of puppy love.

When Julee Ann McCamey and Donald L. Snow walked toward the altar in Sharon recently, Julee's year-old dog, Muffin, joined them in the wedding ceremony as ring bearer.

Mrs. Snow says she has dedicated much of her life to dogs and to the Mercer County Humane Society, operating one of the society's foster homes for pets.

The gray wire-haired terrier means a lot to her, Mrs. Snow said. Her previous dog died of cancer last year. Shortly afterward, Mrs. Snow adopted Muffin from among the animals in her care.

Muffin was stolen the day after adoption from a yard enclosed with a locked fence, Mrs. Snow said. After newspaper and radio advertisements, the dog was returned three days later.

The idea of incorporating Muffin in the wedding came in a dream, Mrs. Snow said. Her fiance had no objections.

A few of the approximately 50 wedding guests knew of the surprise. But "you never saw so many cameras at a wedding in your life" when Muffin was led down the aisle by the flower girl, Don's niece, Angela Snow of Sharon.

Mrs. Snow made a pillow and strapped it to Muffin's back. It held the rings, which her husband removed after calling the dog to his side.

For the rest of the wedding, Muffin found a comfortable spot near Mrs. Snow's feet.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

- CHICKEN MOLDS
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
 - 3/4 cup water
 - 1 1/4 cups clear fat-free chicken broth
 - 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 - 1/2 cup finely diced celery
 - 1 small scallion, finely chopped
 - 1 cup cooked finely diced chicken white meat
 - Lettuce and mayonnaise
- In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over water and let soften about 5 minutes. Heat chicken broth until boiling; pour over gelatin mixture and stir vigorously until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in lemon juice, celery, scallion and chicken. Chill until slightly thickened; stir to distribute vegetables and chicken. Ladle into four 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. At serving time, unmold. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. Makes 4 servings.

- TWO APPLE PIE
- 3 cups pared, cored and sliced Granny Smith apples
 - 3 cups pared, cored and sliced Golden Delicious apples
 - 2-3rds cup sugar
 - 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - 2 tablespoons butter
 - Pastry for two-crust 9-inch pie
- In a large bowl mix together the Granny Smith and Golden Delicious apples. In a small bowl stir together sugar, flour and cinnamon; mix with apples. Turn into pastry-lined 9-inch pie plate; dot apple mixture with butter. Roll remaining pastry into an 11-inch round; cut into 1/4-inch wide strips. Weave a lattice top over pie plate with pastry strips. Seal and flute edges. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 25 minutes; reduce heat to 400 degrees and bake until juices begin to bubble and apples are tender — 20 minutes longer.

- PEPPER SOUP
- 4 large green peppers (about 1 1/2 pounds)
 - 13 1/2-ounce can chicken broth
 - 1/2 cup heavy cream
 - Salt and pepper to taste
- Remove stems, seeds and ribs from peppers. In a large saucepan, cover peppers with water and bring to a boil. Simmer, uncovered, for about 30 minutes. Off heat, let peppers stand in the water until cool — about 1 1/2 hours. With a slotted spoon transfer peppers to an electric blender or food processor and puree. If desired, strain puree. Stir in chicken broth and chill. Just before serving stir in cream, salt and pepper. Serve cold. Makes 3 1/4 to 4 cups.

EARLY HOLIDAY START MAKES WAITING HARD

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A too-long anticipation time can create overstimulation and anxiety for children, warns a family development specialist for Cornell Cooperative Extension, who urges parents not to start Christmas preparations too soon.

"A long anticipation period can be very difficult for children to cope with," says Suzanne West, who is also director of the nursery school in the New York State College of Human Ecology at Cornell University. "Children have a different sense of time. Six weeks to a child can seem like an eternity of waiting."

To make the season a meaningful and pleasant holiday for children, don't give in to the commercial pressure of beginning the celebration far in advance, she advises. Preschoolers often expect immediate gratification and they may express their frustration in waiting as many as six weeks for Christmas to arrive through whining, irritability and other behavioral changes, Ms. West notes.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Volunteers In Popular Walkathons Are Mostly Spinning Their Wheels

DEAR ABBY: It seems that walkathons are becoming increasingly popular. This has bothered me for a long time, so I decided to get it off my chest.

I cannot see the relationship between charity and how far a person can walk. On the other hand, I could see some relationship if the volunteer walkers were sponsored for performing a meaningful service instead of walking.

For example: How about a "trash-athon" to see how many bags of litter the volunteers could pick up off the land? Or how about a "window-athon" to see how many senior citizens' windows could be washed by volunteers? Or "readathons" to see how many pages volunteers could read to nursing home patients whose eyes have failed them? Or how many letters they could write for nursing home patients? Or how many senior citizens' yards could be raked or otherwise cleaned up?

I think you see my point. Why should walkers expend all that energy just to wind up with sore feet and aching muscles from walking until they're ready to drop?

It seems to me that if people want to volunteer their energy for charity, they might as well do it in an activity that's both productive and charitable.

ENERGY CONSCIOUS, GODDARD, KAN.

DEAR CONSCIOUS: Right on!

DEAR ABBY: "Indiana Mason" asked you to reprint the letter about the wife who kept nagging her husband to tell her all the secrets of the Masonic lodge of which he was a new member.

You told him you couldn't accommodate him unless he could pinpoint the year and month that letter appeared in your column.

Well, I am the editor of the Aaron Lodge No. 49, Free and Accepted Masons, in Tucson, Ariz., and I would like permission to run that letter in our newsletter. And I can pinpoint the date it ran: It was Nov. 17, 1968. Gotcha!

How about it, Abby?

MORRIS SEGAL, TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR MORRIS: You win. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently joined the Masonic lodge.

Naturally I was very proud of him, but now it has presented a problem to us.

He tells me that this is a "secret organization" and he has given his word that he will tell no one about the secrets of the lodge.

Abby, in all the 18 years we have been married, we have not kept any secrets from each other. I have cried, begged, threatened and tried everything I could think of to make him tell me these "secrets" of his lodge, but he refuses.

How can an organization that is supposed to be dedicated to such high ideals create a barrier between a man and his wife? I'd appreciate your views.

WIFE OF A MASON

DEAR WIFE: Consider yourself fortunate to be married to a man whose word means something. And quit pestering him to reveal the lodge secrets or you'll lose your Mason by degrees.

DEAR ABBY: "Grandma" says, "Marriage is the price a man pays for sex, and sex is the price a woman pays for marriage."

Well, she's all wet. I say, "Men give love in order to get sex, and women give sex in order to get love. And marriage has nothing to do with it."

ANOTHER GRANDMA

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

HOW NOW COW?

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The cow has now been launched into the age of electronics in Australia, reports a computer management information journal.

At the flick of a switch, according to MIS Week, farmers in two Australian states — Victoria and New South Wales — are able to plug their microcomputers into a central computer for advice on herd management, feeding programs, market predictions and even irrigating systems.

As a result, a herd will not be able to mutter a moo without being monitored by a panel of computers in the dairy shed and the farmer's office.

According to the Victorian Agriculture Department, the computer system is expected to improve the quality of both milk and beef and provide farmers with an up-to-date rundown on their herds.

Granddaughter Helps Keep Mortician Trade In Family

LOWES, Ky. (AP) — Roy Lowe has spent his life burying the descendants of settlers buried by his great-grandfather.

The Lowe family has been in the funeral business in this town of 130 people for four generations, and Roy, 78, is the last of the Lowe males in it. He is not unhappy his one son decided to become a corporate lawyer for Exxon, because his daughter and granddaughter have entered the trade.

Despite his age, Lowe says he has no intention of retiring from Lowe Funeral Home. He took up the task in the days when funerals were prepared at a family's home.

He later introduced embalming to the area, and eventually built its first funeral home. Now, he is letting the women of the family do the innovating.

"My granddaughter was one of the first women to graduate from the embalming school in New Albany," he said. "They didn't use to have women in the business."

When Lowe was a child, his father sold pine caskets from the back of his general store in the Graves County community. "He'd ask the people what color they wanted — white or black. There weren't any other colors."

According to local superstition, when someone died, the family would measure the casket using a stick cut to the length of the deceased's body.

"They all had tape measures, but they wouldn't use them," he recalled. "They'd always go cut a stick. I'd see two or three men coming up to the store carrying a stick and I'd say, 'Daddy, somebody's dead.'"

That had changed by the time Lowe entered the business, but the preparation of the dead for funerals was still commonly done in people's homes.

Lowe introduced embalming in 1926, and built the town's first funeral home in 1940.

Lowe used to carry bodies from the people's houses to the cemetery in a horse-drawn hearse built in 1890, but traded it in for a motorized model in 1928. He still keeps it in a nearby barn, however, and old-timers regularly ask if he would haul it out for their funerals.

But Lowe said the modern way of death wouldn't allow that.

"It's got to be pulled by horses, and nobody's got the time now to follow behind that thing. I remember you'd spend four or five hours just getting from somebody's house to the churchyard in that thing."

Lowe has kept a record of every person he's buried, but has no idea how many names are on the thick notebooks piled around his office.

"It's up into the thousands, all right," he estimated.

His funeral home used to handle hundreds of services a year, in the time when influenza and pneumonia were deadly plagues. Now, the home handles about 60 funerals annually, mostly of people who have moved to the nearby cities of Paducah and

"People don't hardly die anymore," he said. "So many people used to die young that to be 40 was to be an old man. Now, most teen-agers have never seen a dead person."

His daughter, Judy Milner, owns the Milner Funeral Home in Bardwell with her husband, Billy. Lowe's granddaughter, Andrea Orr, runs the Milner Funeral Home in Wickliffe with her husband, Randy.

Mrs. Orr, 25, said her parents thought the family business had come to an end after they produced no boys among their four children.

"But my husband got interested in it and we decided to try it," she said.

A number of women have become funeral directors, she said, but few have joined her in becoming licensed embalmers.

No long-term plans have been made for the funeral home in Lowes, she said. "But we'd like to keep it in the family."

Cooking Is Hobby Of Judge Jean S. Cooper

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

Judge Jean S. Cooper, an administrative judge for HUD (Housing and Urban Development) in Washington, says if she ever gives up law it will be to work in the culinary field. Meanwhile, cooking is her hobby.

And it's a hobby that's paid off. Her recipe for Grilled Chicken, Santa Fe Style, has just won first prize in "Food and Wine" magazine's recipe contest. Her recipe appears in the current November issue of "Food and Wine," along with others that were runners-up.

Judge Cooper wasn't bowled over when she heard she had won because she has entered many recipe contests and walked away with a number of prizes. In her capacity as a federal administrative judge, she has traveled a great deal in the United States and has learned to know, love and reproduce American regional food. Her "Food and Wine" magazine winner was inspired by the piquant dishes she enjoyed in the American Southwest. The recipe follows:

- J E A N C O O P E R ' S
G R I L L E D C H I C K E N ,
- 4 small whole chicken breasts, bones removed, skin on
 - 1-3rd cup fresh lime juice
 - 3 tablespoons olive oil
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
 - 1 1/2 cups canned whole peeled tomatoes (1 1/2 cans, 13 ounces each), drained and rinsed.
 - 1/2 cup heavy cream
 - 5 plum tomatoes — peeled, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch dice
 - 1 small onion, cut into 1/4-inch dice
 - 1 fresh jalapeno pepper, seeded, deribbed and minced
 - 1/4 cup minced fresh coriander (cilantro)
 - 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar

Preheat the broiler with the broiling pan set about 4 inches from the heat, or light the charcoal. Pat the chicken breasts dry with paper towels. With a sharp paring knife, lightly score the skin in a crosshatch pattern.

In a small bowl, whisk together the lime juice, olive oil, 1/4 teaspoon of the salt and the black pepper until blended. Brush the marinade on both sides of the chicken.

In a blender or food processor, process the tomatoes until finely chopped. Pour into a medium non-corrodible saucepan and stir in the cream. Bring to a simmer over moderately high heat and cook stirring occasionally until slightly reduced and thickened, about 5 minutes. Season with the remaining 1/4 teaspoon salt. Remove from the heat and cover the sauce to keep it warm.

To cook the chicken, arrange the breasts skin-side down on the grill and broiling pan. Cook turning once, for 5 to 7 minutes on each side, until no longer pink but still moist.

Meanwhile in a medium bowl, combine the tomatoes, onion, jalapeno pepper, coriander and vinegar until mixed to make a salsa.

To serve, spoon the tomatillo sauce onto 4 warmed plates. Arrange the chicken in the center and mound a heaping tablespoon of the salsa on top of each serving. Pass extra salsa at the table. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Tomatillos, fresh jalapeno pepper and fresh coriander (cilantro) are available in Latin American markets and some supermarkets.

Ervin

North Carolinians have long been justly proud of Sam J. Ervin Jr., not only for his lengthy and distinguished career as a public servant, but as one of America's foremost authorities on the Constitution.

It is a subject close to his heart; and his opinions carry weight because of profound study and knowledge of safeguards the Constitution extends to Americans' freedoms. His recent letter to the president (a copy of which was carried in this newspaper last Sunday) underscored his concern over what Mr. Reagan says, does and advocates relative to the role of governmental relations with religion.

Sometimes we forget the Constitution was written not to defend government from the people, but to protect the people from follies of government.

The former justice and U.S. senator's autobiography includes in some detail his reasoning on separation of government and religion, which he urged the president to read and ponder. His concern for his country, his interpretation of certain clauses in the first amendment of the Constitution, prompted the unusual step.

Ervin's letter is a strong advocacy of strict government neutrality in all dealings with our churches so that in light of the great diversity of faiths in America our people may live together in peace and harmony. He is concerned that Mr. Reagan's approaches in that field are endangering the concept.

With all courteous respect our courtly senior statesman points to "a total repugnancy between what you say, do and advocate concerning government action in religion" and existing restraints.

He points to advocacy of tax credits to parents who send their children to private schools to be taught the creeds of their churches; advocacy of an amendment to authorize prayers in the public schools, and objections to naming an ambassador to Vatican City (an independent state comprising a few acres) which has as its chief function that of church headquarters).

Is the intrusion of political ideologies unsettling in our churches? Obviously it can be.

A wire service story out of Asheville tells us that "tensions within the 154th North Carolina Baptist State Convention may have become more acute because a number of church leaders have ties to both major political parties, officials say." How much similar impact is felt within other denominations is undeterminable; but if it is manifest in one, others may well be similarly affected.

Unquenched

Ever since Nov. 7 North Carolina's politically minded brethren have pondered a new question: what will James B. Hunt Jr. do next?

While time is running out on his governorship he shows no sign of being in a hurry to decide, and he does have all the time he wants.

Since losing the U.S. Senate race to incumbent Jesse Helms, Hunt has disclaimed interest in a job with the national Democratic Party and says at this time he is unprepared to take on a role as university system president. He did so with a relatively firm "no."

It is hard to visualize Gov. Hunt sitting on the sidelines while political wars rage around him. He is a highly political person, and driven by strong feelings of principle. He may test the waters of private life ... for awhile ... but in our view his fires of political ambition are unquenched.

One Version Of Thanksgiving

(Are the French people better off today than they were four years ago? They would be if they celebrated Thanksgiving Day. To show what they're missing, we once again explain this most memorable of all American holidays.)

One of our most important holidays is Thanksgiving Day, known in France as le Jour de Merci Donnant.

Le Jour de Merci Donnant was first started by a group of Pilgrims Pelerins who fled from L'Angleterre before the McCarran Act to found a colony in the New World le Nouveau Monde where they could shoot Indians les Peaux-Rouges and eat turkey dinde to their hearts' content.

They landed at place called Plymouth now a famous voiture Americaine in a wooden sailing ship called the Mayflower, or Fleur de Mai, in 1620. But while the Pelerins were killing the dindes the Peaux-Rouges were killing the Pelerins and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only way the Peaux-Rouges helped the Pelerins was when they taught them to grow corn mais. The reason they did this was that they liked corn with their Pelerins.

In 1623, after another harsh year, the Pelerins' crops were so good that they decided to have a celebration and give thanks because more mais was raised by the Pelerins than Pelerins were killed by Peaux-Rouges.

Every year on le Jour de Merci Donnant, parents tell their children an amusing story about the first celebration.

It concerns a brave capitaine named Miles Standish (known in France as Kilometres Deboutish) and a shy young lieutenant named Jean Alden. Both of them were in love with a flower of Plymouth called Priscilla Mullens (no translation). The vieux capitaine said to the jeune lieutenant:

"Go to the damsel Priscilla Allez tres vite chez Priscilla, the loveliest maiden of Plymouth plus jolie demoiselle de Plymouth. Say that a blunt old captain, a man not of words but of action un vieux Fanfan la Tulipe, offered his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier. Not in these words, you know, but this, in short, is my meaning.

"I am a maker of war Je suis un fabricant de la guerre and not a maker of phrases. You, bred as a scholar Vous, qui etea pain comme un etudiant, can say it in elegant language, such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers, such as you think best adapted to win the heart of the maiden."

Although Jean was fit to be tied convenable a etre emballe, friendship prevailed over love and he went to his duty. But instead of using elegant language, he blurted out his mission. Priscilla was muted with amazement and sorrow rendue muette par l'etonnement et la tristesse.

At length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence: "If the great captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, why does he not come himself and take the trouble to woo me?" (Ou est-il, le vieux Kilometres? Pourquoi ne vient-il Pasupres de moi pour tenter sa chance?)

Jean said that Kilometres Deboutish was very busy and didn't have time for those things. He stammered on, telling her what a wonderful husband Kilometres would make. Filly Priscilla arched her eyebrows and said in a tremulous voice: "Why don't you speak for yourself, Jean?" Chacun a son gout.

And so, on the fourth Thursday in November, American families sit down at large table brimming with tasty dishes, and for the only time during the year eat better than the French do.

No one can deny it le Jour de Merci Donnant is a grand fete and no matter how well fed American families are, they never forget to give thanks to Kilometres Deboutish, who made this great day possible.

Republicans Cool To Tax Plan

RALEIGH — Since the election, political speculation in Raleigh has centered on Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin and the success he'll have getting his tax reform packages through a Democratic General Assembly. But before Martin tries to settle his inter-party problems, he might want to conduct an intra-party survey to see how popular his plans are with Republican legislators.

Interviews with three leading Republican legislators indicate a serious lack of enthusiasm for the first stage of Martin's tax package — repeal of the state sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs on Jan. 1, 1986.

Sens. T. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, and Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, and Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, all said Republican legislators might not be enthusiastic about repeal of the sales tax on food. The tax, according to Martin's projections, brings $150 million a year into state coffers.

All three approach the food tax differently and none have heard of any organized efforts among Republicans to confront Martin on the issue.

Brubaker says he just doesn't think repeal of the food tax is a good idea. "I'm all in favor of reducing taxes," the former House minority leader said. "The sales tax is something everybody pays, across-the-board. It is a tax that the poor pay, and everybody has to contribute." If general-tax relief is to come, he said, it should be in the form of a reduction in the seven percent state income tax.

Kincaid agrees with Brubaker on the necessity of the poor to pay some taxes. He'd support 1985 repeal of the drugs tax — estimated to cost the treasury about $20 million a year — but not the food tax. Kincaid said the state should repeal the intangibles tax — a tax on savings, stocks and bonds — before repealing the food tax. Other annoying taxes, such as the sales tax that is included in the use of laundromats, should come before food tax repeal, he said.

Both Brubaker and Kincaid commented that their political antennae had picked up no support for food tax repeal. "I've never had anyone comment to me on the sales tax (on food)," Kincaid said. Brubaker added, "Everybody welcomes any tax reduction, but my stand on the food tax represents the feeling in my district."

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, czar of the past four Senates, tried to repeal the food tax in 1983 and ran into the same kind of opposition. Conservative senators felt the poor should have to make some contribution to the government.

Ballenger says he personally opposes the food tax. "It is regressive," he said. "But we've heard people saying over and over again that it may be regressive but it is the only tax the poor pay. Now I don't believe that," Ballenger said in noting that the poor pay taxes indirectly whenever they buy any product, "but I bet I've heard that 300 times."

Ballenger predicts that Martin will have a tough time convincing the Republican legislative delegation — most of whom are considerably more conservative than Ballenger — to repeal the tax. "The more conservative a legislator is, the more he thinks that is a fair tax."

Brubaker and Kincaid see room for compromise — especially with a Republican governor. But their sentiments expose the basic problem Martin faces on this issue. He's a Republican, working from a conservative base, whose top priority is an issue the liberals have been pushing for years.

If Jim Martin fails to get the food tax repealed, it is likely to be the result of opposition from conservative Republicans and Democrats rather than from liberals and moderates.

Strength For Today

Trash accumulates quickly. And this becomes very plain to us if we fail to empty the wastebaskets in our homes at periodic intervals.

What is true in the case of the wastepaper basket is also true in a mental sense in your life and mine. It is the easiest thing in the world to fill the head with trash — trashy reading, daydreaming, resentful thoughts. It is easy to fill the life with inconsequential action — complaining about there being nothing to do in hours of leisure. Is television filling our lives with trash? There is much violence at times. The same is true with movies, and many are not in the best of taste. But the better productions in these media can contribute considerably to our knowledge and understanding.

We should remember, however, that life is short for all of us. We should use it well and remember that trash accumulates quickly.

THERE!! GUESS THEY'LL NEVER DO THAT AGAIN!

Tax Support Weakens

WASHINGTON — The familiar autumnal chorus from the Reagan White House seeking to stir sentiment for yet another round of tax increases may this time be no more than budget director David Stockman singing by himself.

Although President Reagan reiterated abhorrence of higher taxes in the first post-election Cabinet meeting Nov. 12, similar sentiments did not deflect Stockman from his tax-hiking path in either 1981 or 1982. But this time the director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) does not seem to have full support from the two most important figures in the West Wing: chief of staff James A. Baker III and presidential assistant Richard Darman.

If Stockman is truly on a solo flight, it means he may finally have gone too far as he starts his fifth year of flirting with personal disaster by bureaucratic loop-the-looping. But beyond his possible crash, Stockman's separation from Baker-Darman suggests that the smart money inside Washington was wrong in predicting the inevitability of higher taxes once the election was over.

The word from the West Wing is Reagnite, not Stockmanesque: a tax reform that would not raise taxes, on a track separate from the budget resolution. It would meld elements of the Republican Kemp-Kasten flat tax and the Democratic Bradley-Gephardt flattish tax.

The appeal for bipartisanship would be with Democratic backbenchers, not with the regular Democratic leadership, exemplified by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. "Do you really think we won 49 states in order to sit down and make concessions to Tip O'Neill?" a senior White House aide asked us.

But that is just the approach that is favored by Stockman in private conversations. He has talked about a "grand" coalition, Democratic and Republican leaders — O'Neill and Reagan (or their seconds) — would construct a stealthy little tax reduction that would gladden the hearts of Wall Street bond traders.

For this to happen, spending and taxes have to be rolled into one package — a process Stockman has been pushing relentlessly in his sessions with reporters. When Congress refuses to cut spending, there is no alternative other than higher taxes. That duplicates the formula of 1982 when the Gang of 17 functioned as a grand coalition.

But the Gang of 17's master agent was Jimmy Baker, and he seems to be marching to a different drummer for 1985. That drumbeat sounds like 1981, when taxes and spending — handled separately — were reduced over the speaker's fierce opposition.

Still, when Stockman began his patented campaign of upwardly revising his budget deficits when Reagan's re-election celebrations had barely died down, Washington insiders could not believe he did not have West Wing endorsement.

High-level administration officials insist Darman is playing a tricky game of seeming to distance himself from Stockman, and at the proper moment will openly join him.

That view was not dispelled by the strange course of events at the Nov. 12 Cabinet. Reagan opened the meeting by declaring that he would submit no budget that either called for a tax increase or suggested he would "acquiesce" in one. He and Cabinet members then triggered a pep rally for budget cuts. But Stockman changed the tune with his new budget figures and pessimism about serious spending cuts.

Officials seated around the table were immersed in gloom, perceiving Baker and Darman standing behind Stockman.

Dentists Fastening Discs To Teeth In Child ID Effort

By DAVID FOX
Associated Press Writer
O'FALLON, Ill. (AP) — The black spots on the teeth of some youngsters might not be tooth decay. They could be tooth display — tiny identification discs cemented to teeth that could help locate missing children.

The Maxwell-Conover Micro Informational Disc is the inspiration of Dr. Jeffrey Maxwell, a Pekin dentist, and police detective Sgt. Jim Conover. It is a piece of plastic containing vital data, such as the wearer's name, address, telephone number, and medical information.

"The disc is mounted to the side of the tooth," Maxwell explained. "Then, in a case where you're unconscious and go to the emergency room, they have the information they need."

"Or say a child is found and, either because of youth or drugging he doesn't know who he is, you can tell everything you'd want to know about him."

He said the disc also would be useful for the elderly, amnesia victims or the mentally ill.

It takes only a few minutes to be bonded to a tooth, and drilling is not required. The disc can be removed, and the information on it viewed with a magnifying glass.

Maxwell said the disc was developed for the forensic work he and Conover had done in identifying both the living and dead.

"We worked with the FBI computer out of Washington, filling in dental charts for missing children," he said Wednesday. "A couple of the charts we filled out were very non-unusual; they could have fit almost any kid."

"We kept getting together, and more frustrated, especially with the problem of missing children. We felt there's just got to be a better way of identifying these kids, something they can't lose so no one can take their wallet or ID card and throw it away."

Maxwell said more than 1,000 discs have been sold to dentists from every state since they went on the market in July, but the Spring Valley Dental Group, four O'Fallon dentists, was the first big client.

"We offered it free of charge — that is the service; the disc costs $10," said Dr. Philip E. Kahlert. "As far as I know, we are the first large dental group to use it."

Kahlert's group is offering the service at cost, but only about 50 discs have been applied.

School Activities

Activities were held recently at Falkland Elementary School in celebration of American Education Week. Parent conference day was held, with 84 parents visiting the school.

For "Staff Support Day," proclaimed by the Pitt County Board of "The response has just not been overwhelming," he said. "Maybe the $10 stood in the way of some people, and maybe some are just sort of burned-out."

Still, he was confident the project would continue.

"It's a good service; I'm still firmly convinced of that," he said. "Of course there's a lot of people who deny the reality of it. They believe it can't happen to their kid."

"But when you look at the number of missing children in the United States every year, I think it's frightening. And if it saves one kid Education, Falkland Elementary teachers and aides presented the cafeteria and custodial staff with lemon meringue pies to show their appreciation.

Hussein Praises PLO As Second Meeting Held

By MONAZIADE
Associated Press Writer
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization's legislative body held its second day of meetings here today despite a boycott by Syrian-backed dissidents who declared the session illegal, charging it lacked a quorum.

At the opening session, Jordan's King Hussein praised the PLO as the sole representative of Palestinians and asked it to join him in offering Israel peace in exchange for return of occupied Arab lands. Barely a decade ago Hussein expelled PLO guerrillas from Jordan in a bloody conflict.

Arafat loyalists said he mustered 257 members of the 384-seat parliament — four more than required for a quorum — and this was seen a vote of confidence in his leadership of the PLO, which has been weakened by infighting since its fighters were expelled from southern Lebanon by Israel in 1982.

Splits in the PLO widened when Syrian-backed rebels forced Arafat and his supporters from the northern Lebanese port of Tripoli last year.

"Arafat falsified the names of representatives of the union members and popular organizations to cover up the lack of quorum," the government-controlled Syrian newspaper Tishrin charged today.

Damascus-based PNC speaker Khaled Fahoum, an independent who sided with Arafat's opponents, told a news conference in Damascus on Thursday night that the Amman meeting was "a tragi-comedy."

He said 177 members, more than one-third, had boycotted the meeting and that no quorum was present. "This means the meeting is illegal and consequently the former PNC remains the only valid PNC," Fahoum said.

Stringent security measures caused a 50-minute delay in today's session in the Jordanian capital. All members were frisked three times by Jordanian security officers before they were allowed into the meeting hall in suburban Amman.

In Israel, a spokesman for Prime Minister Shimon Peres said today the Israeli leader does not believe the PLO will take up Hussein's appeal to try diplomacy.

"We don't believe that the PLO will accept his call to take the political path. Past experience has shown that divisions in the Arab world, including the PLO, have only sparked competition over a radical line," Uri Savir said.

Hussein told the Palestinian delegates they could join Jordan in an initiative to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict or "go it alone" with Jordan's support.

He said he believed a Jordanian-Palestinian move should be based on U.N. resolutions calling for Israel to withdraw from occupied territories and for Arab recognition of Israel's right to live within secure boundaries.

"The principle of 'territory for peace' is the landmark that should guide us to an initiative to present the world," he said.

Palestinians are a majority in Hussein's Jordan, which until the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, controlled the West Bank of the Jordan River. The idea of a Palestinian-Jordanian confederation has been put forward before, and was supported by President Reagan two years ago. But Arafat and Hussein have been unable to agree on what form it should take.

Hussein, indirectly referring to Syria and its support for the PLO rebels, congratulated Arafat on gaining a quorum and added: "You have defeated attempts to impose guardianship and proved once again that the Palestine Liberation Organization is the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

Since the PLO was forced from Lebanon in 1982, four Syrian-backed groups have been demanding that Arafat be removed as PLO chairman.

In his speech Thursday, Arafat, dressed in an olive-drab uniform with a pistol on his right hip, pleaded for the reunion of the "bickering" guerrilla factions and said the Soviet Union was mediating "to correct the relation with the brothers in Syria." Syria is a major Soviet ally in the Middle East.

Many delegates feared that Arafat, whose Fatah organization dominates the PLO, could perpetuate the split in the PLO by electing a new 14-member Executive Committee without the boycotting factions.

Among the factions boycotting the meeting are the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which had split from the PFLP-GC.

But the two largest of those groups, the Democratic Front and the PFLP, have said they would oppose setting up a separate PLO under the wing of the Syrians and have insisted there is only one representative of the Palestinian people, the PLO.

Newsman Questioned

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — An Associated Press newsman has been questioned for two hours by Amritsar police in connection with a dispatch about the army assault on the Golden Temple, holiest shrine of the Sikh religion.

Brahma Chellaney, 27, had been directed by the Supreme Court to go to Amritsar and cooperate in the police investigation. He was not arrested, however, and remained free on temporary bail.

Chellaney, who has worked for the AP for six years, was asked Thursday about his activities in Amritsar when he was the only representative of a foreign news organization present during the storming of the temple in June.

The supreme court scheduled a formal bail hearing on Dec. 4.

Students Get Plenty Of Attention At Fredonia School

ELLIS CORNERS, Mich. (AP) — When Debbie Beyer isn't busy teaching the three R's at Fredonia Township School No. 2 she spends her time ordering supplies, shoveling snow and cleaning the bathroom. But none of the three students in the one-room school complain about a lack of attention. "I always thought it would be really fun to teach in a situation like here," Ms. Beyer said. "A lot of good things go on here. There's lots of love and good feelings. I think they are getting a good, quality education. In a lot of ways it's superior." Kindergarten through fifth-grade classes are offered at the south-central Michigan school, one of only 21 one-room schools left in the state. The class this year consists of fourth-grader Tina Smith, 9, and third-graders Susan Washburn, 8, and Shawn Combs, 9. No other elementary-age children live in the 5³/₄-square-mile district. But it does have preschool-age children, so the school likely will stay open, Ms. Beyer said.

Ms. Beyer, who began teaching in Fredonia this fall, said the students benefit from the school's relaxed atmosphere, high teacher-pupil contact and lack of discipline problems.

"There's not so many kids as in other schools," said Tina, the fourth-grader.

That fact allows Ms. Beyer to offer special projects — like microscope study — that would be much more difficult in a 30- or 35-student classroom. She also teaches math, spelling, history, art, physical education and music.

Specialized programs like speech therapy and social work, as well as audio-visual equipment, come from the Calhoun County Intermediate School District.

The students pitch in by washing chalkboards, cleaning sinks and helping clean the 1860s-vintage building.

The intimate environment has paid several dividends, Ms. Beyer said. Third-grader Susan probably will be ready for fifth-grade schoolwork next year, and Fredonia School students have posted consistently high scores on state assessment tests, she said.

The tiny district never has had trouble finding candidates for the teacher's job, which pays about $11,000 per year, said township school board Treasurer Nyle Katz.

WAITING OUT THE FIGHTING — Refugees huddle at an evacuation site near their camp a few miles from Angsila, Thailand, as they wait for fighting at the camp to die down. According to reports the Vietnamese have attacked the border near the Nong Chan camp, sending some 22,000 refugees fleeing. (AP Laserphoto)

Sharing, Helping Needy Highlight Holiday

By MARY MacVEAN
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans kept alive a tradition that started with a harvest feast more than 350 years ago by sharing dinner with loved ones and reaching out to the hungry in Thanksgiving celebrations that kicked off the winter holiday season.

From the nation's first family to its desperate poor, it was a day to belly up to turkey and all the trimmings. Tens of thousands of homeless, hungry or lonely people feasted on free meals and warmth offered in soup kitchens, restaurants and shelters.

Miles of parades wound through the streets of several of the nation's biggest cities on Thursday, a day before those same streets would be taken over by the kickoff of the Christmas shopping madness. To herald the season, more than 100,000 people watched the lighting of a 90-foot Christmas tree in Atlanta.

In New York City, at least 100,000 people bundled up against the cold to watch Raggedy Ann, Garfield the mischievous cat and the other helium-filled stars of the 58th annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

In Montgomery, Ala., the Turkey Day Classic parade was marred by the stabbing death of a 20-year-old spectator. A juvenile was in custody.

Police said more than 500,000 people turned out, despite temperatures dipping as low as 12 degrees, to watch Detroit's 58th annual parade. And more than 400,000 people lined Philadelphia's streets for the Gimbels Thanksgiving Parade. An estimated 80 million people watched the parades on television.

Thanksgiving marks the five-day feast held in 1621, when Massachusetts Bay colonists shared their harvest with the Wampanoag Indians.

"Thanksgiving is supposed to be with the Indians," said Indian activist Russell Means, adding that he and others across the country fasted and prayed in mourning on Wednesday and Thursday. "There isn't a thing with the Indians in the public or the press — out of sight, out of mind."

But for most people, it was a day of gobbling gobblers and sharing with those more familiar with want than bounty.

Daniel Alvarez, 39, was among the estimated 18,000 people who ate free Thanksgiving dinners in New York City.

"I'm on Social Security. I can't get an apartment. I sleep on the train. ... I don't usually eat this much," he said, eyeing three pieces of pie on his tray during a dinner given by the Salvation Army.

Nicole Petculescu and her husband, John, came to the United States from Romania in 1972. On Thursday, they opened their cafe in Kingman, Ariz., to "everybody who comes in."

"This country received me with

In Chicago, Ismet Deloitoglu prepared to feed 1,600 guests at his ninth annual feast at Matt's Port, even though the restaurant closed this summer because it was losing money. Thousands lined up for blocks in front of Daddy Bruce's barbecue restaurant in Denver for Bruce Randolph's 20th annual free dinner. "Each time I feel better," Randolph, 84, said. "My cup runneth over."

Bernie Ziller of Livermore, Calif., has a home and full refrigerator, but brought his wife, brother and three children to eat with an estimated 5,300 people at a free dinner in San Francisco "to see the way a lot of other people have to live."

"I guess I see myself differently now. I feel humbled being here," said his wife, Marilyn.

Traffic accidents over the long weekend could claim between 400 and 500 lives, the National Safety Council said. By 3 a.m. today, 85 people had died on the nation's highways. The council says 480 people would die on the average during a non-holiday period of the same length at this time of year.

In Woburn, Mass., nine members of the Standish family celebrated the 91st birthday of Myles Standish 9th, whose ancestor came to America aboard the Mayflower in 1620.

IT'S UNDERDOG — Underdog seems to fly toward the intersection of 36th Street and Broadway in Manhattan Thursday during the 58th annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. A float of the Statue of

Youth Dies Trying To Aid His Cousin

PEDLEY, Calif. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy visiting relatives here for Thanksgiving was shot to death as he tried to prevent the abduction of his 13-year-old cousin during a trip to the store, authorities said.

Daniel David Osentowski, of Rancho Cucamonga, was shot in the head as he ran into the street to flag down motorists after a man in a parked van tried to abduct his female cousin, according to Riverside County sheriff's deputies.

The girl escaped the abductor's clutches and jumped a fence into the yard behind a house where she sought help.

Based on her descriptions and those of motorists who saw the van, deputies arrested a man 3½ hours later and booked him for investigation of murder, Sgt. William Ferguson said.

Horace Edward Kelley, 25, of San Bernardino, was held at Riverside County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond, Ferguson said.

Deputies said the boy and the girl, who was not identified, were walking home from a 7-Eleven store about 6:30 p.m. Thursday when a man, who had been sitting in the van, suddenly grabbed the girl and tried to force her into the vehicle.

As the boy ran for help, he was shot in the head, authorities said.

The girl reported to the Sheriff's Department that she heard about three shots and that her cousin may have been kidnapped.

"As she was running, she heard sound of gunshots behind her. She did not know the status of her cousin," Ferguson said.

Sheriff's Lt. Bernard Bueche said the girl told deputies the man was wearing a jacket or a long-sleeve shirt with patches that resembled a security guard's uniform.

A passing motorist stopped to give first aid to the boy, who was dead on arrival at Riverside Community Hospital.

The boy was killed about a block from the home his family was visiting, authorities said.

Begin Attends Memorial Service

JERUSALEM (AP) — Menachem Begin, the former prime minister who retired more than a year ago, briefly emerged from seclusion today to attend a memorial service for his late wife, Israel Radio reported.

Begin's son Benjamin recited the traditional Jewish prayer for the dead, but the former prime minister did not speak at the service. It was the second anniversary of Aliza Begin's death, according to the Jewish calendar. She died on Nov. 14, 1982.

Begin had been seen in public only twice since he resigned in mid-term in September 1983 and retired from politics — once in December 1983 when he moved from the prime minister's residence to a private home and the second time last month when he emerged from a hospital after prostate surgery. Begin did not attend a memorial service on the first anniversary of his wife's death.

Continuing depression over his wife's death and disappointment over the results of his Lebanon policy were cited by aides as reasons for Begin's resignation and seclusion.

Four Prison Escapees Are Captured, Hunt Goes On For Fourth Fugitive

BURKEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Law officers and a court clerk today captured four of the five inmates who escaped from a medium-security prison the day before by cutting through a fence below a guard tower, authorities said.

A hunt continued for the remaining fugitive, 29-year-old Anthony Fox, who was serving a sentence of life plus 335 years for his conviction on rape, sodomy and abduction charges.

Thursday's escape was the first from the $24.6 million Nottoway Correctional Center, which was opened in August following a series of uprisings and breakouts at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center, 50 miles to the south at Boydton.

Corrections Department spokesman Wayne Farrar said authorities apprehended three of the fugitives around 4:30 a.m. today as they were walking across a bridge just a half-mile from the prison.

Farrar identified the three as Jimmy Jones, 39, serving 43 years for armed robbery; Robert Stockman, 23, serving 18 years for breaking and entering and grand larceny; and Jimmy Lee Hollingsworth, 23, serving a 45-year sentence for grand larceny and burglary convictions in several counties.

Richard Vescuso, 27, serving 22 years for robbery and weapons convictions, was taken into custody by deputies at approximately 12:15 a.m. after he tried to enter the Burkeville home of a court clerk.

Authorities said Vescuso knocked on the door of James King, clerk of the Nottoway County Circuit Court, and asked to be let in because he was cold.

"Mr. King held a gun on him until we could arrive to make the arrest," said Sheriff Jesse E. Powell.

The escape was reported Thursday evening after four inmates were spotted running across the parking lot outside the 500-inmate prison by a guard in a tower, Farrar said.

The guard called for the men to halt, but she was unable to get off a shot before the escapees disappeared into woods nearby, Farrar said.

He said the prisoners had cut through two fences below the guard's tower. The two reinforced steel, chain-link fences are 15 feet apart and separated by coiled razor wire.

Farrar said a fifth inmate was then found to be "unaccounted for," and after a cell-by-cell check of the prison turned up no trace of him, authorities said he had also escaped.

Nottoway Warden David Garaghty confirmed there had been a shakedown at the prison late last week in which officials turned up a pair of wire cutters.

It was the largest breakout in Virginia since May 31, when six inmates at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center escaped in the largest death row breakout in U.S. history. All were captured within a month.

Thursday's escape will be investigated by the Corrections Department's internal affairs unit, Farrar said.

Men Ready For Order To Respond

WARNER ROBINS, Ga. (AP) — Around the clock, a group of airmen wait for war, springing to their planes to the blare of an alarm, not knowing whether it's another drill or a genuine alert.

Their numbers and their response time are classified. They attend training meetings, celestial navigation courses and flight simulations. Their planes are checked daily to be sure they are ready for takeoff.

But if war broke out, the airmen would not go to battle. The KC-135 members would fly the tanker planes that refuel fighters and bombers in midair en route to combat. Once the bombing and dogfights were over, the fighters and bombers would be refueled in midair for the return home.

"Everyone knows the safest time to take a shower on alert is immediately after an alert exercise, although they sometimes have one right after the other," said Col. Thomas Mooney, commander of the 19th Wing at Robins Air Force Base.

"The alert exercises test the response of crews to their airplanes, to see if we can make the required reaction time. And we always do," he said.

One day each week, a group of airmen rotates into the Strategic Air Command alert facility at the base to spend the next 168 hours on alert duty. Crews spend about one of every three weeks there.

"If you only had to do it every once in a while, you could look at it as a little release," said Maj. Larry Wheeler, a pilot on alert duty at Robins last week. "But when you think about it, it's really one-third of your life."

Wheeler heads a flight team of four, including a co-pilot and navigator to fly the plane, and a boom operator to guide the fuel into other aircraft. Maintenance workers on the alert team make sure the planes are in good repair.

"We're really lucky here," he said, pointing to a cafeteria window. "A lot of alert facilities around the country don't have windows."

Outside the window but still inside the facility fence, a maintenance worker checks over "alert vehicles," yellow-painted cars and trucks mounted with flashing lights.

Alert crews use the vehicles to move about Robins. Although they're on alert, the Air Force allows them to travel to specified areas such as the base dining hall and the Officers Club. If war breaks out during a movie at the base theater, crew members are alerted by a flashing red sign that reads "SAC ALERT."

Of course, the alarm usually doesn't signal war. About once a week, the men have a "fire drill" alert for practice, but they never know whether it's the real thing. Mooney said the drills are unexpected and randomly scheduled by a computer at SAC headquarters in Nebraska.

The daily routine includes briefings in which the soldiers receive daily reports on information necessary to their refueling mission. After the briefing, the airmen check their planes, then go to their meetings and courses.

Off-duty hours are taken up with such pastimes as reading, studying, watching television and visiting with family members. "But as far as just hanging out around the building, that's pretty much frowned upon," Wheeler said.

"You know how it is," one member of Wheeler's crew explained. "We're on duty 24 hours a day."

Car Prototypes To Be Auctioned

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Two prototypes of the stainless steel, gull-winged sports car developed by John Z. De Lorean will be auctioned this weekend to pay debts from the bankruptcy of the De Lorean Motor Co.

"These cars were the beginning of the dream and are the only remaining prototypes known to exist," said auctioneer Rick Cole. "With all the interest in the De Lorean saga, I expect these cars to go upwards of $30,000 each, but you can never tell at this event."

The cars were the first models De Lorean used to attract interest and investment in his now-defunct auto company in Northern Ireland.

GENUINE UNITED STATES GOV'T. SILVER DOLLARS

U.S. MINT STATE .900 FINE PURE SILVER

UNITED STATES COIN RESERVE

United States Coin Reserve, a distributor of Government Currency, through its audit of coin depositories has found 10,000 uncirculated Government Silver Dollars dating back as far as 1878. These treasured coins will be released to the American Public for one week only at a guaranteed price of $84.90 each...an incredible $50.00 less than a major advertiser! All Government silver dollars are to be held in guarded vaults in the United States until shipped. Orders received later may not be honored due to volatile fluctuations in the precious metals markets, and checks may be returned uncashed.

U.S. CONGRESS CREATES SHORTAGE

These beautiful pieces of American Silver were created by the United States Mint over a century ago. During WWI because of a major silver shortage, Congress and the Federal Government were forced to melt down 270 million silver dollars increasing the value of these coins dramatically. Their silver content then as today is almost one Troy ounce of .900 fine silver. Despite fluctuations in the price of silver, Morgan Silver Dollars have had an average annual appreciation of 26.5% in value over the last 10 years alone!

AUDIT REVEALS GOVERNMENT SILVER

Through a normal procedural check of coin vaults and depositories this latest audit revealed an unknown stockpile of rare Government Silver. This fully preserved rare United States Silver after having been stored in vaults for decades will now finally see its distribution into the hands of the American Public. Although all opinions, estimates, information and projections can't be completely guaranteed, they do represent the judgement of the U.S. Coin Reserve; a division of Verret Enterprises, a private corporation. The U.S. Coin Reserve also estimates that due to the massive meltdowns very few of these Government Morgan and Peace Silver Dollars still exist and that these 10,000 are some of the only ones available today.

GOVERNMENT SILVER RELEASED

All American citizens will qualify for this great investment of Government Silver Dollars and should call or send money to insure that your orders will be filled. We do not expect the Government Silver dollars to last more than one week because this find from our coin network is very rare. Silver dollars are up to 105 years old and are guaranteed to be in uncirculated condition - MS63-65. All Silver dollars are guaranteed by the United States as to their silver content and accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity from the U.S. Coin Reserve.

STRICT LIMIT

Since our price of $84.90 each is an incredible $50 less than a major national advertiser, we expect an avalanche of orders to come pouring in. Therefore, we advise you to get your order in early before the strictly limited supply at this price is sold. We offer a 4 day examination period for each order; orders returned within that time will receive a full refund. A limit of five hundred coins per order will be strictly adhered to! So, avoid disappointment. Act now!

PEACE

AMERICA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL COINS

These American relics have a history as illustrious and as varied as the coins themselves. Soon after the first issues appeared in 1878 these coins were nicknamed "cartwheels." This is because the surface has such a brilliant silvery luster that when one rotates the coin at a slant a white halo is seen moving back and forth. This beautiful Gov't Silver more than any other U.S. Coinage is highly symbolic of American Freedom and Liberty. The Morgan Liberty head wears what is known as a Phrygian Cap, this was worn by the Roman slaves at Phrygia when they finally won their freedom. The Peace Dollar instead of legal tender origins really began as a commemorative to celebrate the end of the First World War. Hence the name - Peace Dollar. On the reverses of both coins we find two distinctive American Eagles representative of the fearless heroic spirit found in American Patriotism. These coins are the most famous and popular of all U.S. Issues. This is no small wonder when one considers the large one ounce crown size, the breathtaking figures of Liberty and the powerful American Eagles all representing the strength and beauty of America and its currency.

Man Suspected In Florida Death

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — An unemployed X-ray technician who is charged with killing eight women has been identified by police as a suspect in another slaying, that of an unidentified teen-age girl earlier this year.

Robert J. Long, 31, of Kenova, W. Va., is charged with murder, sexual battery and kidnapping charges in a series of killings that officials began investigating last May. He has been charged in eight deaths and is a suspect in a ninth.

Long, who was arrested last week in Tampa, also is suspected in a 10th death, of a girl in a home in the Orlando area, said Sheriff's Capt. John Guemple. He said investigators have not been able to identify the teen-ager, but would not discuss further details.

Guemple said Long became a suspect in the Orange County murder because the death was similar to several of the nine killings in Hillsborough and Pasco counties.

In several cases, the victims' nude bodies were found along Tampa-area roads on Sunday mornings after the women reportedly were seen at nearby lounges the previous evening. Some of the victims were strangled, some were stabbed and one was shot in the head. All the victims were young and female and often went out at night.

Pasco County Sheriff Jim Gillum said Wednesday that Long would be charged next week with first-degree murder in the death of Virginia Lee Johnson, 18, the ninth first-degree murder charge against him.

Authorities in New Port Richey said Wednesday that they had identified the skeletal remains of Ms. Johnson of Danbury, Conn., through dental records.

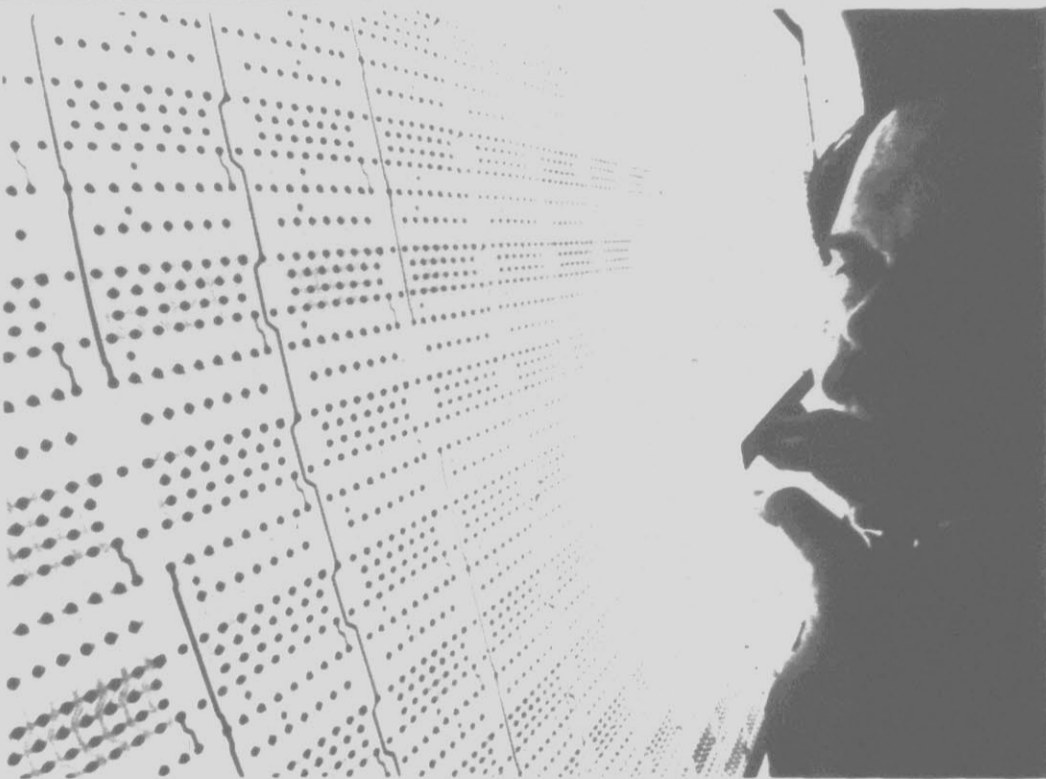

Ms. Johnson's remains were discovered Nov. 6 in a field near Zephyrhills in Pasco County. She was reported missing by a friend Sunday, two days after Long's arrest in neighboring Hillsborough County.

A Pinellas County sheriff's spokesman, meanwhile, said authorities searched Long's Tampa apartment Wednesday and found items believed to have been stolen during a May 29 sexual assault of a woman living in Palm Harbor.

"We have identified Long as being a good suspect in the case," Pinellas Sheriff's Sgt. John Bocchichio said. "We feel it's a particularly good case at this time."

Study Backs Eye Surgery As Safe Procedure

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — A new study will encourage more doctors to perform a controversial operation that corrects nearsightedness with tiny cuts in the cornea, says a Charlotte doctor who has performed it.

The study finds that radial keratotomy is a safe and effective alternative to eyeglasses, said Dr. Maxwell Greenman.

"The process started about 10 years ago in Russia. It's been here about five or six years, but it hasn't really been accepted until now," Greenman said. "I feel it's going to catch on." Results of the five-year, $2.5 million study were announced in Atlanta this month at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology. The study found that 78 percent of 413 patients who underwent the operation had their vision improved from 20-200 or worse to 20-40 or better.

Research is currently underway on a similar procedure to correct farsightedness, which involves an eyeball that is too short, Greenman said.

Greenman said he has done two radial keratotomies on people whose eyes were injured, but he plans to do more on people whose illnesses or occupations won't let them wear glasses. He said he doesn't know of any other North Carolina eye doctors who have done the operation, although several contacted by telephone said they were planning to.

"I feel it's effective in those situations where people can't wear glasses or contacts," said Greenman. "It's for those people with arthritis who can't get contacts; for other people who have to pass a (vision) test such as policemen, firemen and airline pilots. If a fireman's glasses fog up or his contacts get lost, he's in trouble." People suffering from allergies or dry eyes who can't wear glasses or contacts could also be helped, he said.

In the operation, the doctor makes eight to 16 small cuts in a wheel-spoke pattern in the clear cornea covering the eye. The cuts cause the cornea to bulge at the edge and flatten at the center, refocusing the light entering the eye.

The technique was developed by a Soviet doctor who discovered it by accident, said Greenman.

"A child in Russia got hit in the eye, and the glass from his lenses cut the cornea," he said. "All of a sudden ... he could see without glasses. American doctors went over to Russia to talk to the doctor — they didn't believe him. But they did the operation in Moscow and it worked out well."

Greenman said he charges about $1,500 per eye for the 15-minute procedure. He plans to switch from steel knives to diamond knives, while some doctors are considering using laser knives.

Minister Tries To Prevent Firing By Filing Lawsuit

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A minister who has been charged with impaired driving and simple possession of marijuana says the deacons of the church don't have the right to fire him and has filed a suit to prevent them from doing so.

The Rev. Emory L. Clark Jr., 49, has filed suit in Forsyth Superior Court to restrain the six-member board of deacons and the trustees of Second New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church from firing him.

Named as defendants in the suit are the deacons — Ernest D. Jones, Charlie W. Fields, Frank Linton, Nimrod Weathers, Louis Simon and William Barber. They have not yet filed a response to the action.

Clark received written notice last month that he was discharged because of his arrest June 9 on charges of driving while impaired and simple possession of marijuana.

He has refused to accept the deacons' decision to terminate his employment and pay him one month's salary, $1,100. And he has continued to preach to a divided congregation on Sundays.

Clark was arrested in Greensboro in June, according to court records, but the cases have been continued periodically several times and have not been tried in District Court there.

Records in Winston-Salem show that Clark was arrested March 15 and charged with driving while impaired. He pleaded guilty, received a suspended sentence and paid a $200 fine and costs.

The deacons were willing to forgive that transgression, but another driving charge, coupled with marijuana, was too much.

They employed Gary W. Williard, a Winston-Salem lawyer, to write Clark a letter informing him of their disenchantment.

Clark says in his suit that the church is a religious association operating under a "congregational form of government in accordance with the customs and traditions of the Southern Baptist denomination."

THE QUALITY OF PROPHETS

ALL OF THE PROPHETS OF THE BIBLE HAD MANY OF THE SAME QUALITIES TO MARK THEM FROM THE COMMON MAN. "THUS SAITH THE LORD"...WAS THE TYPICAL STARTING POINT OF THEIR DISSERTATIONS TO THE PEOPLE. THE PROPHET WAS ALWAYS THE FIRST TO REMIND THE PEOPLE THAT HE WAS SPEAKING IN THE WORDS OF THE LORD." AND THE WORD OF THE LORD CAME TO THEM IN VARIOUS WAYS--SOME CAME BY IT IN THE WILDERNESS, SOME FOUND IT IN THE VAST EXPANSES OF THE SEA, SOME IN THE HUMDRUM OF EVERYDAY LIFE IN THE CITIES--EVEN AS DANIEL, TAKEN AS A SLAVE TO THE CITY OF BABYLON AND THERE IN THE COURTS OF THE KING FOUND THE PROPHETIC INTERPRETATIONS FROM THE LORD BY WHICH HE COULD GUIDE THE KING IN HIS DECISIONS. (DANIEL 2:28)

Bible Readings Alter Implied Slights To Blacks and Jews

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Another sequence of Bible readings in "inclusive language" is out, modifying misconstrued slights of blacks and Jews, as well as pointing up women's full humanity, and their obligations.

In one of the Ten Commandments, saying "you shall not covet your neighbor's wife," the revised reading adds, "or husband," thus including women in that admonition against craving anyone's mate.

Throughout the readings, male-oriented terms such as "men," meaning humanity, are recast to include both women and men.

Instead of saying "So then, brethren," for example, Romans 8:12, starts out with "So then, brothers and sisters." The 14th verse reads, "For all who are led by the Spirit of God are daughters and sons of God," not just sons.

The new lectionary is for "Year B," the second year's collection of revised readings for worship services in the church's traditional three-year cycle, each beginning the first Sunday of Advent, this time on Dec. 2.

Like the "Year A" round of readings, which a year ago set off a storm of reaction, both condemnation and praise, the new set portrays God as "Father (and Mother)," the maternal aspect in brackets to show it is added.

Although God is considered beyond gender, an explanatory note says the "Father and Mother" metaphor balance the "familiar male imagery for God with female imagery," in accord with many Scriptural allusions.

Based on the Revised Standard Version of the Bible, the modified readings were turned out by an 11-member committee of scholars as a project for the National Council of Churches, a cooperative body of 31 denominations.

The readings are for voluntary, experimental use by congregations, whose responses and suggestions will guide subsequent revisions. The first set of third-year readings, "Year C," is to be issued next year.

"It's a pioneering thing," says the Rev. Victor Gold of Berkeley, Calif., chairman of the lectionary committee. He says the changes "get to the very roots of religious thought and sensitivity."

The Rev. David Ng, director of the council education and ministry division and project director, says the effort "has opened up some very interesting theological study and debate" in congregations, seminars and publications.

About 25,000 copies of the first "Year A" readings were sold by a cooperating group of denominational publishers, John Knox Press of Atlanta, the Pilgrim Press of New York, and Westminster Press of Philadelphia.

The new readings, like the previous sequence, portray Jesus as male in his historical life, but in the transcendent sense as the "Child of God" instead of "Son of God," and as the "Human One" instead of "Son of man."

The "Sovereign" is used instead of "Lord" or "King" with their male connotations for God. "Realm of God" is substituted for "kingdom of God," and "rule of God" for "kingship."

In some New Testament passages, particularly in the Gospel of John, some references to "the Jews" are modified since they actually refer only to religious opponents of Jesus, an explanatory note says.

It adds that such usages, "the Jews" are rendered "the religious authorities" or "the Jewish authorities" to "minimize what could be perceived as anti-Semitism in the Gospel of John."

For instance, John 20:19, saying the disciples were in hiding "for fear of the Jews," makes it read "for fear of the Jewish authorities." References to Jews as a people, including Jesus and his followers, are unchanged.

In altering misconceived slurs against blackness, the readings modify such passages as Psalm 51:7, saying "wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow," to read "cleaner than snow."

Also, instead of John 1:5 saying "The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it," the revised form says, "The light shines in the deepest night, and the night has not overcome it."

Even though the Scriptural context is "free from racist intent," the equation of "darkness" with evil has led to misconceptions that black or dark-skinned is bad, so "darkness" as a metaphor for evil was avoided, a notesays.

In many passages, solely male references are changed to include women. For example, in Galatians 4:5, "the Child" is substituted for "his Son" and "as children" is substituted for "as sons," so that it reads:

"But when the time had fully come, God sent forth the Child... so that we might receive adoption as children."

John 6:27 regularly reads, "Do not labor for the food which perishes, but for the food which endures to eternal life, which the Son of man will give to you: for on him has God the Father set his seal." The last part is changed to this:

"... which the Human One will give to you: for on that One has God the Father (and Mother) set God's seal."

Bitter Words Are Exchanged

DENVER (AP) - Sharp words have been exchanged between United Methodist Bishop Roy I. Sano of Denver and James V. Heideringer II, editor and executive secretary of a conservative Methodist faction called Good News.

Heideringer had issued a news release about a speech by the bishop, saying he made "venomous charges" against evangelicals, accusing their independent mission agency of "blasphemy" by rejecting "stirrings of the Holy Spirit" in liberation theology.

"What the bishop wants is a baptizing of violent revolution," Heideringer claimed.

In a counterstatement, Sano says "no such remark was made... The misrepresentation constitutes a false impression otherwise known as the sin of lying or libel."

He says that in his speech, he had raised questions about the Good News group's "adherence to a narrow slice" of Christian tradition and that Heideringer's response "betrays the bad news they embody."

Joint Service

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lutheran and Roman Catholic representatives are planning a joint "service of the Word" for use at ecumenical services, they said after their 10th annual meeting.

They said the proposed service booklet, to supplement existing orders of worship for common use.

Jewish-Arab Settlement Tries For Recognition

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

NEVE SHALOM, Israel (AP) — On a rocky hilltop overlooking biblical battlefields in the Ayalon valley, 10 Israeli families have built up a small but vigorous settlement they call the Oasis of Peace.

What makes this village unique is that the 60 or so residents are both Israeli Jews and Arabs, trying to make their life together a model for a society in which the two communities live apart with deeply rooted hostility and mistrust.

The 100 acres of land leased from the nearby Trappist monastery at Latrun is located in what was a "no-man's land" between the West Bank and Israel before the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. There are a dozen single-story white houses, a sheep-pen, beehives, an olive grove and two small schoolhouses.

Life in Neve Shalom, Hebrew for Oasis of Peace, centers on the school where four-day workshops are held three times a month for Jewish and Arab high school students.

"We started the School for Peace because we realized it was not enough to gather a group of people who live together," said Jacob "Kobi" Sonnenschein, a 31-year-old physicist and Israeli army reserve officer who is one of the original settlers.

"Just living together does not have any influence outside," he said. "We decided that somehow we had to disseminate the idea."

Since 1980, about 5,000 Arab and Jewish students have attended the workshops, including 1,500 this year. The workshops are handled like encounter groups; students talk freely about their impressions of each other and such sensitive subjects as sex and politics.

Lectures are also given on the Arab-Israeli conflict, a subject offered only to high school seniors as an elective course in the public school curriculum.

For Elizabeth Tahan, 16, a Palestinian Christian from Jaffa, mixing with Jewish teenagers was not a new experience. "I have Jewish friends at home, and we talk together about everything. But I met some new friends here and we agreed to keep in touch."

But for Shirley Singer, 15 from Tel Aviv, it was a new and somewhat disconcerting experience.

"On the social level we have very good relations here. But when it comes to discussing politics, it's as if we didn't know each other at all," said Miss Singer.

The goal, Sonnenschein said, is not assimilation or integration of the two ethnic groups but getting to know and respect each other's culture, traditions and religious beliefs. For example, he said, that meant learning to appreciate Arab music "which I couldn't stand to listen to for more than five minutes at a time."

Despite their efforts at equality, the Israeli culture appears to dominate. Even though the population is evenly divided, Hebrew is the language spoken among the Arab and Jewish residents as well as the visiting students.

Elias Idi, a 24-year-old Arab counselor who has lived for two years at Neve Shalom, noted that the settlement was originally founded in the early 1970s by a Dominican priest, the Rev. Bruno Hussaar, as an experimental community for Moslems, Christians and Jews.

"Today we tend to view the problem more on a national basis than a religious basis, more as one between Palestinians and Israelis than between the three religions," said Idi, a graduate of Hebrew University in Jerusalem. "Our message is that the problem can be dealt with through education, in a non-violent way, so there can be co-existence."

Like the pre-state settlers who founded kibbutz collective farms in Israel, the first residents of Neve Shalom lived in tents without electricity, running water, telephones and other utilities. The community still lacks an adequate sewage system and paved roads.

"We have had many difficulties," said Sonnenschein, interviewed in his home overlooking the monastery near the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv highway. "First and foremost, we have not been recognized by the authorities in Israel as a village."

Official recognition means more than winning acceptance. It means financial help for an infrastructure such as roads and utilities that is afforded to most communities in Israel and the West Bank.

Yitzhak Agassi, spokesman for the ministry of interior which approves new settlements, said the government had not recognized Neve Shalom as a village because the settlers had established their community without seeking advance approval from government agencies.

"We have an order of priorities in our spending plans and these things cannot be settled after the fact. It is now their responsibility," Agassi said in a telephone interview.

He rejected the idea that the government was discriminating against Neve Shalom because Arabs and Jews lived together. "They get the same treatment as anyone. We'd react the same to any partisan settlements whether Arab, Jewish or Hottentot."

Neve Shalom's budget for the current year is $250,000, funded mostly by grants and donations from abroad. It includes a $70,000 Ford Foundation grant for education projects.

Lottery Eyed To Help Town

WEST HOMESTEAD, Pa. (AP) — Mayor John Dindak says that with a little bit of luck this depressed mill town might be able to turn around its sagging fortune. In fact, he wants to bet on it.

Dindak wants borough employees to gamble on their futures by contributing to a fund to play the lottery.

"Hey, it's worth a shot," said Dindak, who originally had suggested that the town budget $416 next year so it could put $4 twice a week on the state Lotto game.

"I asked the solicitor about it and he said that's probably illegal," Dindak said. "So now I'm suggesting that borough employees — including the mayor, council and police — make a small monthly donation, say $5, to a Lotto fund."

Transplant Recipient Is Grateful For Life

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Just a little less than a year ago, Dr. Robert McQueen Jr. suffered a heart attack that almost cost him his life. This year, McQueen's not only grateful for Thanksgiving but he's also looking forward to Christmas.

"Every day is Thanksgiving," said McQueen, 50, who underwent a heart transplant seven months ago. "I think it makes me more thankful for the things that have occurred in my life. I'm certainly looking forward to Christmas this time."

McQueen, 50, suffered a heart attack six days after Thanksgiving 1983. He underwent surgery for six bypasses to restore the blood flow to his heart, but three months later his heart failed again.

At Duke Medical Center, doctors gave McQueen one day to live. He spent the day with his family, planning his funeral. Pallbearers were named; music was chosen.

But an experimental drug began to help, and doctors began considering him as a candidate for a heart transplant.

McQueen went to the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, his alma mater. He was accepted as a heart transplant recipient and was placed April 12 in a computer network to search for a donor.

Eight days later a heart became available. The operation went smoothly and cost $125,000.

McQueen was out of the hospital 28 days after he received his new heart, a recovery time he said was a national record. Heart transplant recipients usually are in the hospital two to three months, he said.

"It's been a pretty miraculous experience," he said, attributing his rapid recovery to the "determination to work hard."

"I was sick in the bed for six months and lost a tremendous amount of muscle," said McQueen. "Ten days after the transplant, I was on a stationary bicycle going two miles a day. You've just got to do that."

The 6-foot, ruddy-cheeked family practitioner works full time and makes regular speaking appearances, relating his experience and seeking support for the organ-donor program. He also is working on a book.

McQueen takes his life one day at a time, knowing that the survival rate for heart transplant recipients after five years is only 50 percent. The body fights an everyday battle of "rejection and infection," he said.

"Your body is always trying to get rid of it," he said. "It's an ongoing, never-ending process, but it's better than the alternative."

Triad Seen As Good Place For Singles

GREENSBORO (AP) — The relatively low number of rapes in the triad area of Greensboro-High Point-Winston-Salem and the area's easy access to abortions makes it a good place for single women to live, says a study for Ms. magazine.

Using four major categories, two writers from Oregon merged 50 cities into 14 metropolitan areas that single women ought to find to their liking. The list is in the November issue of Ms.

The four categories are opportunities and acceptance in leadership positions, health and safety, availability of mass transportation and legal concerns. The Greensboro area placed in two rankings in the health and safety category.

Carl Abbott, a professor of urban studies at Portland State University, and Joan Starker, a doctoral candidate there and a social worker with a special interest in relocation, compiled the rankings.

Abbott said they hope information in the article "would be expanded to a book that deals with a number of other issues that have to deal with cities for women, and not just single women."

The ranking considered Greensboro as encompassing the standard metropolitan statistical area including High Point and Winston-Salem. Abbott said the overall ranking did not follow through to all 50 metropolitan areas, so he cannot say where Greensboro would stack up.

According to the article, Greensboro ranks ninth among the 10 cities that offer the highest accessibility to abortions.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, responding to the recent cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 9.61 to 1,211.13 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After the market closed on Wednesday, the Federal Reserve announced a 1/2-point reduction, to 8 1/2 percent, in the discount rate — the charge it imposes on loans to private financial institutions.

The move was seen as a strong signal that the Fed is seeking to foster a further decline in interest rates in order to keep the economy from slowing too much.

Most analysts welcomed the Fed's action. But they also noted that it had been widely anticipated on Wall Street.

Along with its positive aspects, they noted, it also underscored the central bank's apparent concern that the recent dropoff in business activity might lead to a recession.

The Friday after Thanksgiving is traditionally one of the quietest days of the year on Wall Street, with many investors taking a long holiday. But it also has a strong historical upward bias.

Over the last 32 years, noted Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co., the Dow Jones industrial average has risen in this particular trading day 28 times, and posted only fractional losses in the other four.

Among today's early volume leaders, American Express rose 1/4 to 36 1/2, and Sears Roebuck 1/4 to 32, while American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 18 1/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 6.40 to 1,201.52.

Advances outnumbered declines by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 81.62 million shares, against 83.24 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 20 to 94.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .46 at 207.40.

Duck Title

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — Quack, quack.

Now, that wasn't so hard, was it? Hunting enthusiasts at this weekend's Wings Over the Prairie Festival will tell you that duck calling is a bit more involved than that.

The 49th annual festival features the world championship duck calling contest, which draws duck callers from across the country. Many of them have won state or regional contests.

Competitors must master several calls: the hail, which calls ducks from afar; the feeding call; the mating call; and "the regular old quack," says Bryan Hancock, 15, of Stuttgart, who first accompanied his brother and father on a duck hunting trip at age 4.

The feeding call is the hardest, he says. "It takes a lot of practice to get your tongue just right," Bryan says. He should know; last year, he won first place in the intermediate contest for duck callers 14 to 16 years old. He also has won regional competitions.

Stuttgart is in one of the continent's few surviving hardwood swamp areas and is a natural wintering place for tens of thousands of mallards and other migratory waterfowl.

The festival, which starts today and ends Saturday night, also includes a duck gumbo cook-off, a duck race 10K run, carnival rides, arts and crafts, and the Grand Prairie Classic Trap Shoot.

Did you know that over 20,000 individuals use the GREAT bus service every month? For information on the City's transit system and routes, call 752-4137.

Ethiopian Food Aid Unlikely To Loosen Ties With Soviets

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
AP News Analysis

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — An international effort to ease a catastrophic famine here has provided a diplomatic opportunity for the United States and other Western countries.

But Ethiopian officials and foreign envoys based here say they doubt that the influx of mostly Western aid will prompt the military government to significantly loosen its close ties with the Soviet Union.

"We're here only for humanitarian reasons right now," remarked an official of the U.S. Agency for International Development. "If our relations improve, that's a bonus." That official, like other Western and Ethiopian sources, spoke on condition he not be identified.

An Ethiopian official, observing that the Americans were attaching no strings to the aid, said: "This time they are showing signs of maturity. They are concentrating on humanitarian concerns, rather than political things."

The United States has become the biggest single donor of humanitarian aid to Ethiopia, providing about $19 million worth of aid in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. The United States also has pledged $60 million more for the new fiscal year.

In the short term, the United States is expected to be allowed soon to upgrade its diplomatic representation here to ambassadorial level. The U.S. ambassador was asked to leave in July 1980, and since then the embassy has been headed by a charge d'affaires.

A longer-term effect of the famine assistance may be the winning over of thousands of ordinary Ethiopians who know that much of the food coming into the country is from the United States. One diplomat said the aid is creating a reservoir of goodwill toward the West that would be beneficial if there ever is a change of government.

But Ethiopia, a country of about 42 million people occupying a strategic position in the Horn of Africa and along the Red Sea, is likely to remain for the foreseeable future the Soviet Union's biggest investment and staunchest ally in Africa.

Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam, at a rare news conference on Nov. 16, thanked the people of the United States and Western Europe for the outpouring of aid for more than 6 million people estimated to be suffering from a prolonged drought and famine.

But Mengistu also said the Soviet Union and other Eastern Bloc countries had helped Ethiopia make more progress in the past decade — since the ouster of Emperor Haile Selassie in September 1974 — than it had made in the previous 40 years.

Much of the Soviet aid has been in the form of military hardware, perhaps $3 billion worth by Western estimates, to fight secessionist guerrillas in the northern provinces of Eritrea and Tigre and to counter any threat from neighboring Somalia.

Food aid from the Eastern Bloc has been minimal. It was only after Ethiopia received substantial pledges of famine relief from the West that a somewhat embarrassed Soviet Union said it was sending 300 trucks, 24 helicopters and 12 cargo planes to help transport the food aid.

Ethiopians say privately there have been questions among ordinary people over why the Soviets waited so long to act.

It was an invasion by Somalia in July 1977 of a disputed region of southeastern Ethiopia called the Ogaden that brought about a major turning point in U.S.-Ethiopian relations.

Some well-connected Ethiopians contend the United States forced their country to seek aid from the Soviets by refusing to supply arms to help them fight the Somalis, a foe for centuries.

The Soviets responded with a massive airlift of arms. That, plus a deployment of Cuban troops, helped Ethiopia expel the Somalis from the Ogaden in March 1978.

While trying to cope with secessionist wars in the north and a simmering border conflict with Somalia, the military government is faced with trying to feed its people and maintain its security.

"We're winning over their stomachs," a Western diplomat said of the food aid. "But their minds are still bent on security."

Gov. May Have Ingested Glass During Flight

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The jagged piece of glass removed from Gov. Martha Layne Collins' intestine during emergency surgery in London may have been ingested during dinner on her trans-Atlantic flight, her husband says.

Mrs. Collins, 47, spent Thanksgiving Day in "a great deal of pain" after 3 1/2 hours of exploratory surgery Wednesday to remove a four-inch section of small intestine containing a glass shard measuring 1.3 inches by 0.2 inches, said Dr. Bill Collins, a dentist.

Collins, who flew to London on Thursday, told his wife's press secretary in Frankfurt that surgeons at the private London Clinic believe she swallowed the glass "when she was eating some food because when they removed it there was carrots and beans wrapped around it. And that's what she ate on the plane."

Collins told reporters in London today that the governor had taken a Pan Am flight Monday night from Washington, D.C.

"I'd have to think that there would be (an investigation), just to look at the possibilities of how it got where it did," he said.

Collins said his wife "looked good" but was groggy from injections for pain, which was expected to continue for two or three days after intestinal surgery. Doctors "expect her to make a full recovery," he said.

"She's doing fine. The doctor said he was pleased with her progress this morning," said Collins.

Mrs. Collins, in Britain with other governors for the start of a European tour to study acid rain, first complained of pain about eight hours after eating the airline meal, which included lamb chops, green beans and carrots, said state Natural Resources Secretary Charlotte Baldwin, who accompanied the governor.

Mrs. Collins left a meeting about noon Tuesday in London and returned to her hotel to rest, Mrs. Baldwin said. Later Tuesday, she was seen by the hotel physician, who consulted with Dr. William Shand. They decided to admit her to the clinic after talking with Mrs. Collins' Louisville physician.

The glass sliver, jagged on both ends, smooth on one side and rough on the other, "looked like the rim out of some sort of pop bottle, or something like that," Collins said in a telephone interview.

Lions, Cowboys Post Upset Wins

Detroit Snaps Packers' Three-Game Win Streak

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The defeat was devastating and heart-breaking for the Packers who saw their winning streak snapped at four games and their slim chance for a National Football League playoff berth all but disappear.

It embarrassed Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg.

"That was probably the worst 60 minutes of defensive football I've seen. It was horrible," Gregg said after the 31-28 Thanksgiving Day loss to the Detroit Lions. "This put us out of any hopes for this year. It was embarrassing in front of a national television audience."

"We'll have to struggle like the devil to break even, now."

Green Bay, which has not won five successive games since 1966, slipped to 5-8, and has to win its remaining three games to finish at .500.

Detroit quarterback Gary Danielson, who completed 24 of 33 pass attempts for 305 yards and three touchdowns, said his club went into the game with aspirations of its own.

"Today, we were ready to play. I don't think it would have mattered who we were playing, it just happened to be Green Bay," Danielson said. "Winning on national television shows everybody we're not a joke franchise. We just haven't done what it takes to win some of the close games this season."

Of Detroit's 13 games, 10 have been decided by six points or less. However, the victory over the Packers only improved the Lions' record to 4-8-1. Not exactly what was expected of the defending NFC Central division champs.

"We're not embarrassed by the way we've played this year, just the outcome," Danielson said. "This team has played hard all year and we're not going to give up now."

There were two key factors in the game. Detroit's receivers made clutch catches to keep drives alive. As a result, the Lions had possession of the ball 44:47 compared with only 15:13 for the Packers.

The Lions finished with a 33-14 edge in first downs and outgained the Packers 518 to 306 in total yards.

"They wanted to show the U.S. they're not a bad team," said Green Bay tight end Paul Coffman, whose only catch went for a 44-yard touchdown. "The Lions' offense did a super job of holding on to the ball. Maybe we should have scored a lot more when we had the chance."

In the first quarter, it looked as if the Packers could turn it into a rout. Gerry Ellis scored on a 40-yard end run and Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey tossed the TD strike to Coffman and — just like that — Green Bay had a 14-0 lead.

Danielson hit rookie tight end David Lewis on a 10-yard TD pass early in the second quarter, but Dickey answered with a 7-yard scoring pass to Eddie Lee Ivery that put the Packers ahead 21-7.

However, the Lions scored a TD and a field goal in the last 1:14 of the first half and Gregg felt that might have turned the game around, even though Green Bay still led 21-17.

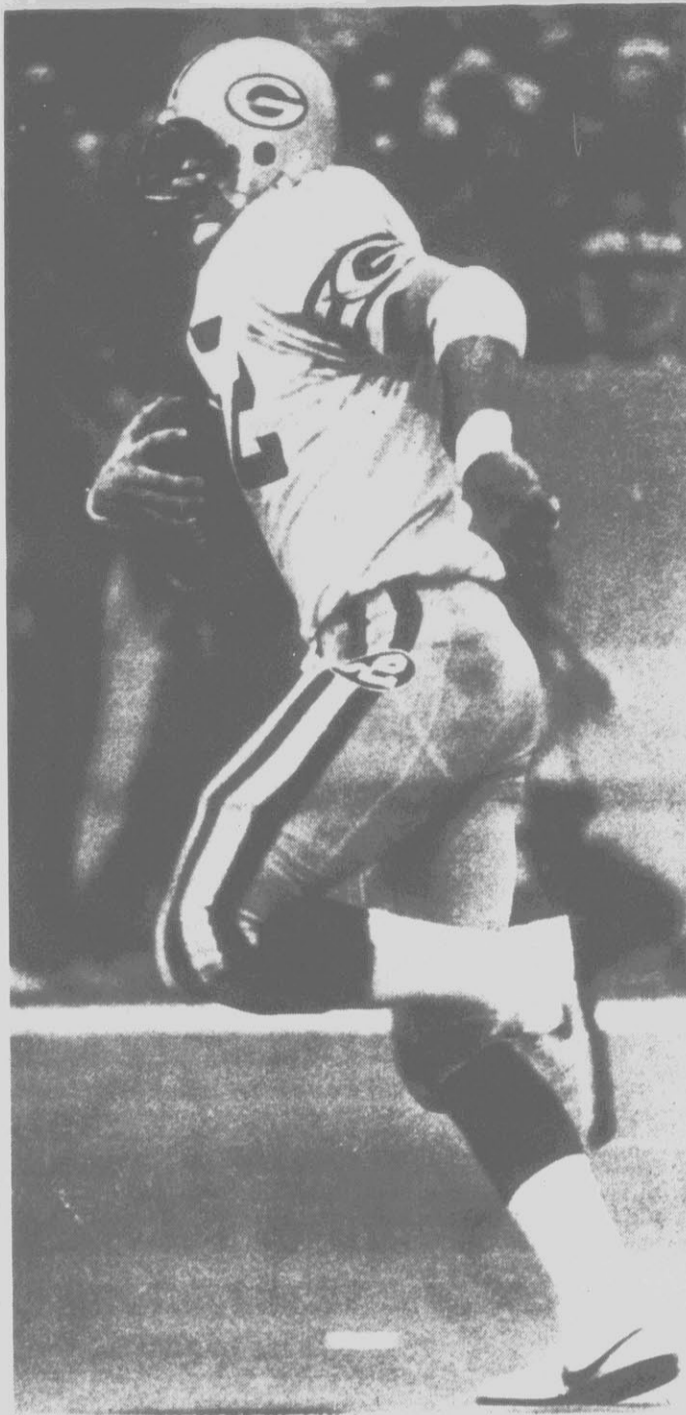

Danielson tossed a 21-yard TD to Lewis and, after a 35-yard punt by Bucky Scribner, the Lions sent in reserve quarterback Mike Machurek who put up a 48-yard "Hail, Mary!" pass that Mark Nichols brought down among five defenders to set up Eddie Murray's 32-yard field goal as time ran out in the second quarter.

"The field goal just before the half was the difference in the ball game," Gregg said. "You can't coast or glide in this league or you'll get your teeth kicked out, and that's what happened today."

"At the start of the second half, we told our defense to get ready. Stop 'em here. They didn't."

Detroit fullback James Jones scored on a 1-yard dive in the third quarter and Danielson pitched a 21-yard TD strike to Jeff Chadwick at 8:45 of the fourth quarter to put the Lions ahead 31-21.

Dickey, who was held to eight of 17 for 115 yards, had to leave the game after being poked in the eye and rookie Randy Wright finished up by flipping a 4-yard touchdown to Phil Epps with 55 seconds remaining.

Dallas Rebounds For Victory Over Patriots

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys went from a joke to a juggernaut in just four days.

"We came back from one of the worst losses in franchise history," said running back Tony Dorsett after the 20-17 Thanksgiving Day victory over the New England Patriots. "People had lost respect for the Cowboys."

Dallas, whipped 14-3 by the winless Buffalo Bills on Sunday, extracted some respect from Patriot quarterback Tony Eason.

The Cowboys sacked him 10 times, most ever against a New England team, and safety Michael Downs returned an interception 27 yards for a touchdown.

Still, it took a 23-yard field goal by Rafael Septien with four seconds to play to subdue the Patriots.

"I'm sorry to disappoint you all but I'm happy to announce the Cowboys aren't dead yet," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It was our best game of the year. We really played good defense."

The Cowboys moved a half game ahead of Washington and the New York Giants in the National Conference Eastern Division with an 8-5 record. New England is also 8-5 and alive for a wild card berth in the American Conference East.

Dallas quarterback Danny White, coming back after a two-week absence, threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Tony Hill and directed the game-winning drive. His 16-yard pass to Doug Cosbie set up Septien's kick.

Dallas led 10-3 at halftime and stretched the advantage to 17-3 in the third period on the White to Hill connection.

Eason refused to be rattled and threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Derrick Ramsey and sneaked across for a touchdown from a yard out to tie the score 17-all with 1:58 left.

White, replacing young Gary Hogeboom who was benched because of Dallas' puncheon offense, directed a flawless drive to tie the Patriot 6.

After Dorsett ran 16 yards, White hit Doug Donley for 13 yards, Hill for 11 and Cosbie for 16.

Septien's kick was perfect and New England's wild series of laterals after the kickoff failed.

"The Dallas defense did not surprise us at all," said New England Coach Ray Berry. "You just have to look at their past history. They get awfully tough in November and December."

Berry said the Patriots should be a better team with the experience.

"I told our squad after the game that Dallas has actually done us a favor in some respects," Berry said. "A football game is a test. It reveals where you are. What we found out today is that we are not prepared good enough to win a close game like this one."

Landry said, "It was a great game for us. After last week, I'm sure New England was somewhat eager to play us after scoring 50 points (against Indianapolis) and then seeing our films. If you have any character at all, you are going to play your best."

White completed 21 of 41 passes for 288 yards and Hill snagged 8 for 125 yards.

Eason was on target 19 of 38 times for 204 yards but suffered 57 yards of losses on traps.

"White hit the passes to keep us in the game," said Landry. "He did a good job of moving the ball under the circumstances, considering we have such a patched up offensive line."

The Cowboys lost starting guard Kurt Petersen with a twisted ankle early in the game.

The victory, Dallas' 13th against 3 losses and a tie on Thanksgiving, assured a 20th consecutive non-losing season.

"I didn't want to be on the list Cowboy team not to make the playoffs since 1974," said Dorsett.

Eason said he'd like to play Dallas again.

"I'd like to have another shot at them," he said. "Their defense did a good job of mixing things up."

Georgetown, Illinois Open Slates

By The Associated Press

Georgetown and Illinois are ranked No. 1 and 2, respectively, but the teams aren't even close this weekend as the college basketball season gets rolling.

Georgetown, the defending national champion, opens its campaign tonight in the Civic Auditorium in Hilo, Hawaii. After facing Hawaii-Hilo, the Hoyas will rest until Monday's road contest at Hawaii-Loa.

The Fighting Illini will face the more familiar Idaho State but the game will be a first-round matchup in the Great Alaska Shootout which began today. What ever happened to home openers?

In addition to the Illinois-Idaho State matchup, the first round of the Shootout will see Tennessee meeting Alabama-Birmingham, Maryland versus No. 19 Kansas and Oregon against the host Seawolves of Alaska-Anchorage.

"It's earlier than I've ever played a tournament, and particularly with the type of teams that are in there," Oregon Coach Don Monson said. "It's a chance for us to make a little bit of national recognition for ourselves."

Illinois earned itself some more national recognition when they soundly defeated No. 5 Oklahoma, 81-64, last Sunday in the Tip-off Classic in Springfield, Mass.

"I'd probably be just as happy beating up on some teams," Illinois forward Doug Altenberger said. "We're going to find out a lot of things in a hurry, but it feels better after beating Oklahoma."

Besides just beating Oklahoma, Illinois was able to stop the Sooners' All-American forward Wayman Tisdale. The job was handed to senior center George Montgomery, who was named Most Valuable Player in the Tip-off scoring 17 points, grabbing 10 rebounds and holding Tisdale to 19 points, eight below his average last season.

Georgetown isn't the only team visiting Hawaii this weekend at Virginia, Providence, Pepperdine and Davidson all will play games after receiving leis, the traditional welcome to the 50th state.

Two other Top Twenty teams will inaugurate the 1984-85 season tonight as No. 10 Southern Methodist hosts Texas Southern and No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas visits Nevada-Reno.

On Saturday, five more ranked teams will play.

Northern Illinois visits No. 3 DePaul, debuting under new head coach Joey Meyer. No. 17 Louisville is at No. 4 Indiana. Campbell travels to face No. 13 North Carolina State, Southeastern Louisiana is at No. 16 Arkansas and Baptist is on the road at No. 20 Georgia Tech.

The Louisville-Indiana will provide some early-season answers as to just how good the teams of Denny Crum and Bobby Knight will be.

Indiana suffered through a season of injuries last year finishing 22-9 and at times dressed less than 10 players for a game.

"This is the first time we've had this many people sitting on the bench," Knight said of his current 15-man Hoosier roster that includes U.S. Olympian Steve Alford, who was the team MVP as a freshman, and West German Olympian Uwe Blab whose most impressive statistic is his height — 7-foot-2.

Louisville, 24-11 last season, will have to replace Lancaster Gordon and Charles Jones. Kevin Walls, one of the leading high school scorers in the nation last year, should get tested quickly against Knight's tenacious man-to-man defense.

"There are five things you have to do defensively — pressure the ball, pressure the passing lanes, take away cuts, know where the ball is and block out," Knight said. "I don't think there is any one of those five things we do really well."

Louisville will get to find out just how well.

Washington Picking Up Pace

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

AP Sports Writer
The new-look Washington Bullets, no longer just bruisers on offense, are asserting themselves on the court after a slow start.

The Bullets, despite the offseason-acquisition of speedy guard Gus Williams and quick forward Cliff Robinson, looked like the same defense-oriented team as they scored only 93, 79, 96, 107 and 88 points in five losses.

After starting with a 2-5 record, however, the Bullets picked up the pace, averaging 109.7 points in winning their next seven for a 9-5 mark. In the process, they handed the Boston Celtics their only loss of the season, a 112-95 rout on Nov. 10, and beat the 76ers at Philadelphia 120-105 on Tuesday night.

"I think that you will see us scoring more points as the year goes on," Coach Gene Shue said. "When they get confidence in each other and learn about each other, we'll score off the break, the set offense and on the offensive boards."

Last season, the Bullets were 21st in the 23-team National Basketball Association in scoring with 102.7 points per game. They relied mainly on the muscle of 6-foot-11 Jeff Ruland and 6-10 Rick Mahorn, the "Beef Brothers."

Although Washington made the playoffs, it finished last in the Atlantic Division. To keep up with the depth of talent in the division, the Bullets knew they couldn't stand pat.

In a three-team deal on draft day last June, Washington traded veteran guard Ricky Sobers and their No. 6 pick in the first round, potential Beef Brother Melvin Turpin, in exchange for Williams and Robinson.

"The trade was great for us because we play in a tough division," Shue said. "You have to have talent to win."

"Gus is a terrific basketball player who knows what he is doing out there. Cliff is a very talented player and if he can learn to play defense the way we want, he's going to play a lot for us."

After a slow start, the 6-9 Robinson has averaged 18.3 points off the bench in his last six outings since missing the previous four games because of the death of his brother. In training camp, he was sidelined because of back spasms.

"It was a shock to be traded at first, but I'm pleased now that I'm getting comfortable with this team," Robinson said. "Problems have delayed my getting started and I still have problems with my conditioning."

But any running the Bullets do this season will be the responsibility of Williams, a career 18-point scorer with Golden State and Seattle.

"The thing about Gus is that you have to run just to keep up with him," Robinson says. "And even then you sometimes fall behind."

"You'll find that players will run if they get rewarded for it," Williams said. "At Seattle, we relied more on the fast break, with me in the middle and two men on the wings. We have more threats inside here, so we have to use that, too."

"We are running more because we have the type of personnel to play that game now," Shue said. "The last four years we did not have the ability to play race-horse basketball."

So far this season, Williams has not been shy about taking his shots, leading the team with a 21.4 scoring average. He also is the runaway leader on the team in field goal attempts with 307, far ahead of the 163 shots taken by Ruland, who is nevertheless in close behind

The U.S. Postal Service has issued a stamp in honor of Baseball Hall of Famer Roberto Clemente. Other players so honored in previous years were Jackie Robinson and Babe Ruth.

Sooners, Cowboys Face Challenge

By The Associated Press
 The Big Eight title and an Orange Bowl berth are on the line. So is the championship of the state of Oklahoma.
 Both the second-ranked Oklahoma Sooners and No. 3 Oklahoma State Cowboys, however, are after bigger game — a national championship.
 "I feel like both teams are playing for a chance to play for the national championship," said Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones. "I'm very proud for the state of Oklahoma. It's a great opportunity and challenge for both teams."
 The Cowboys are 9-1 and have never been to the Orange Bowl. They haven't beaten Oklahoma since 1976, when the teams shared the Big Eight crown with Colorado.
 Oklahoma, 8-1-1, set up this battle for the Big Eight crown by upsetting then top-ranked Nebraska 17-7 last week.

 "Our destiny is in our hands," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "A victory over Oklahoma State gives us an opportunity to fulfill all our goals of a conference championship, Orange Bowl trip and possible national title."
 The game will be televised nationally by ABC and is sold out. According to Switzer, his team might have an edge in experience in such big games — Oklahoma has won two national championships in his 11-year reign.
 "We've played a lot of big games. We've played No. 1 a bunch of times. I don't think OSU's got the same thing to say," Switzer claimed.
 "There's no bigger game they've ever played before. They've never had the opportunity to go to the Orange Bowl in one game, to play for the national championship in one game. Not many teams do. It's got to be the biggest game, and our victory over Nebraska rivals that."

 "Tradition is definitely on their side," said Oklahoma State safety Adam Hinds. "They have beat us quite a bit. But this year is a little bit different. We've got a lot of older guys, a lot more experienced players. There are games this year that we would have lost in years past because they were close, but we found a way to win."
 The loser goes to the Gator Bowl against South Carolina.
 Brigham Young, ranked No. 1 for the first time in its history, looks to finish off a perfect season against 1-9

Utah State. The Cougars, 11-0 and headed for the Holiday Bowl, are the nation's only unbeaten team.
 Elsewhere among ranked teams, No. 6 Texas is at Baylor; No. 9 South Carolina at Clemson; Arkansas at No. 11 Southern Methodist; Notre Dame at No. 14 Southern California; Tulane at No. 16 Louisiana State at night, and No. 17 Texas Christian at Texas A&M.
 Also, Pitt is at Penn State; Kentucky at Tennessee; Maryland at Virginia; Mississippi vs Mississippi State at Jackson; North Carolina at Duke; Air Force at Texas-El Paso at night; Houston at Texas Tech; Arizona State at Arizona at night; Fresno State at Nevada-Las Vegas; Long Beach State at San Diego State at night.

and New Mexico at Hawaii at night.
 In the only major college game Thanksgiving Day, it was Miami of Ohio 31, Cincinnati 26 as quarterback Al Marlow ran for a touchdown and passed for another. Miami completed the season at 4-7, Cincinnati was 2-9.
 Today's featured game was 10th-ranked Boston College at No. 12 Miami, Fla., in what was expected to be a passing duel between BC's Doug Flutie and Bernie Kosar of Miami.
 Bowl games can extend their invitations — officially — at 6 p.m. EST Saturday, though just about every slot has been locked up.

 Among the teams playing Saturday who are Bowl-bound are Air Force (Independence vs. Virginia Tech); Tennessee and Maryland, headed for the Sun Bowl; Penn State (Freedom against Iowa); Arkansas (Liberty); SMU (Aloha, with Notre Dame the likely opponent if it beats Southern Cal); Kentucky (Hall of Fame vs. Wisconsin); Virginia (Peach vs. Purdue), and TCU (Bluebonnet vs. West Virginia).

Cavs Playing For First Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
 AP Sports Writer
 Virginia has been the home of several Atlantic Coast Conference champions, but none has been claimed for the football team. This year's Cavalier squad can change that on Saturday when it hosts Maryland for the conference title.
 Both teams are strong choices for bowl games, but the victor gets the added privilege of representing the ACC as champion. The 14th-ranked Terrapins are defending champions, while Virginia has never won a title and has finished no better than third in the 21-year history of the ACC.
 Two other rivalries highlight the weekend. North Carolina goes to Duke and tries to earn a .500 season, while Clemson meets South Carolina in Death Valley.
 Georgia Tech is off, but faces No. 20 Georgia next week.
 Maryland, 7-3 and 4-0, might have been top-ranked Brigham Young's opponent in the Holiday Bowl in San Diego, but the Terrapins chose to take a sure thing.

 "It would have been interesting," Maryland coach Bobby Ross said. "But it was only a feeler, not a firm offer."
 As a result, Maryland will meet Tennessee in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas, on Dec. 22. The same teams met in the Florida Citrus Bowl last December and the Volunteers claimed a 30-23 victory.
 Ross considers this season with the Terrapins the toughest of his three years at College Park.
 "But it might have been the most satisfying too," he said. "We were a young team going into the season, but the talent base was good. It was a matter of how fast we matured, and the injury situation."
 Virginia, 7-1-2 and 3-0-2, had to forget a 35-0 shellacking at the hands of Clemson. The Cavaliers did that, and can make history if they can top the Terps at Charlottesville. Lying ahead is a date with the Peach Bowl in Atlanta against Purdue on New Year's Eve.

 First, however, is the business of the conference title.
 "Maryland has to get their attention," said Virginia coach George Welsh. "They are not that dumb."
 Welsh, named coach of the year by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association, said he thought reaching the upper level of the ACC might take time.
 "We thought we would get to this point eventually," he said. "But I'm not sure anybody thought we'd get there this fast."
 North Carolina chose to go for the tie instead of the victory against the Cavaliers at Chapel Hill. Ken Miller's field goal with seven seconds left means Dick Crum can avoid going below the .500 mark for the second time at Chapel Hill if he can get his team past the Blue Devils. The Tar Heels are 4-5-1.
 "Now we have a chance to end the season on an upbeat," Crum said. "A victory Saturday would give us four wins and a tie in our last six games. That would be a good way for our seniors to finish out their careers and would also give some confidence and momentum to our kids coming back next year."

 Duke nearly beat Wake Forest two weeks ago, then got past North Carolina State last weekend to break an eight-game decline. That sets the Blue Devils in a position to spoil North Carolina's season.
 "We try to win every game, but we try even harder to win this game than any other," Duke coach Steve Sloan said. "For us, Carolina is our biggest game."
 South Carolina was ranked second and apparently headed for the Orange Bowl and a shot at the national championship before Navy burst the bubble. The Gamecocks are ninth and still in search of their role in the post-season bowl picture.
 Clemson is still on ACC probation and ineligible for a bowl game. The Tigers are looking to finish the season with a positive note after the loss to the Terrapins. Clemson has won the last four games in the series, including a 22-13 victory at Columbia.

Florida Files Appeal On NCAA Sanctions

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has never imposed such severe sanctions as against the University of Florida and should reduce them to maintain its reputation for fairness, the school said in a formal appeal.
 The appeal complains that the stiff sanctions, including three years' probation and loss of 20 athletic scholarships, for wrongdoing in the UF football program don't take into account the school's cooperation throughout the probe.
 "The University of Florida, in complying with the letter and spirit of NCAA legislation, and in an effort to show good faith, cooperated with the NCAA to the maximum extent possible," wrote UF attorney Jim Quincey in the appeal released Wednesday.
 The Southeastern Conference on Tuesday ruled the Gators will not be eligible to participate in any bowls this year, but postponed a decision on whether Florida could keep its new conference title.
 Last Saturday UF beat Kentucky 25-17 to cap its first SEC championship in 52 years. UF officials also announced interim Coach Galen Hall had been named to the permanent job.

 Coach Charley Pell was fired in September and two assistant coaches were dismissed amid allegations that included spying on other teams' practices. The school also attempted to put more distance between itself and overzealous supporters, Quincey said.
 "The institution was told by the NCAA enforcement staff that such actions would be taken into account," Quincey said, adding that new UF President Marshall Criser "had the right" to expect the corrective steps would be considered for leniency.
 The UF appeal of the 59 infractions cited by the NCAA asks that the third year of probation be immediately suspended as compensation for its cooperation. The current NCAA plan allows suspension of the final year only if Florida controls its football program for the first two years.
 The appeal blasts NCAA plans to take away 20 initial scholarships over two years and reduce the total number of scholarships to 85 next year, plus make only 75 scholarships available in 1986-87.

Coaches Disagree On Freshman Rule

NEW YORK (AP) — Freshmen. Some coaches say the best thing about them is they become sophomores. Other coaches need them to fill a void in a solid lineup or make them the centerpiece of an ailing program.

The best of the class of '88 are all heading for programs that might be one player away from national prominence.

The player considered the best catch of last year's high school senior class is Chris Washburn, a 6-foot-11, 265-pound center, who is headed for North Carolina State where he is expected to relieve the rebounding burden on senior power forward Lorenzo Charles. Washburn averaged 28 points, 22 rebounds and 12 blocked shots per game for Laurinburg Institute in North Carolina, his third school in three years.

"After our recruiting efforts," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said, "we have every right to be optimistic."

Adding to the optimism in Raleigh is 6-5 junior college All-American Nate McMillan, point guard Quentin Jackson and shooting forward John Thompson, who join three returning starters.

The second big man to draw raves before he has played a college game is Danny Manning, a North Carolina transplant who played his senior year of high school ball in Kansas. Kansas is where he'll be attending college and Coach Larry Brown couldn't be happier.

"Danny call play all three spots," Brown said. "How fast he arrives at his best spot will depend on a lot of factors."

Manning was one of just two high school players invited to last year's Olympic tryouts. The 6-11 center-forward averaged 22.7 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots per game last season after he transferred to be closer to his father, who was a first-year assistant coach under Brown at Kansas last season.

Delray Brooks was the other Olympic invitee and the 6-4 guard will be playing collegiate ball for the man who ran those tryouts — Bobby Knight at Indiana. Brooks will place his 33.4-point average next to Olympian Steve Alford in the Hoosiers' backcourt.

Louisiana State may have nabbed the player with most professional potential in beating out Houston and Nevada-Las Vegas, among others, for 6-8, 235-pound John Williams, from the same high school as former UCLA All-American Marques

Johnson. Williams, who earned most valuable player honors in the McDonald's All-America game last spring, will be the most celebrated freshman the Tigers have had since Pete Maravich in the early 1970s. One National Basketball Association scout said Williams "is ready for us now physically."

The leading high school scorer in the nation last season, Kevin Walls of Camden, N.J., will be heading for Louisville where he is expected to concentrate more on ball-handling duties. The 6-2 speedster, who broke the 80-point mark last season en route to a 44.8 scoring average, joins Milt Wagner and Billy Thompson, both Camden graduates, in the Cardinals' lineup.

Some of the other names to watch this year include Michigan's Gary

Grant, a high-scoring guard who grew up in the shadows of the Ohio State campus; Michael Brown and Keith James, high school teammates at Baltimore's Dunbar, who headed in opposite directions, Brown to Syracuse and James to South Carolina; Missouri's Derrick Chievous, considered by some the best player in New York City last year; and Charlie Smith, a 6-8 forward from Bridgeport, Conn., who will try to fill the scoring void at Pittsburgh left by the graduation of Clyde Vaughn. One freshman who won't help his program at all is 7-4, 245-pound Gunther Behnke, who left the University of Kentucky campus just days after arriving from his native West Germany. The Wildcats will have a lot more trouble than just filling the massive void left by Behnke, who Coach Joe B. Hall had hoped would make up for the loss of Twin Towers Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin.

McEnroe To Return For Davis Cup Final

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — John McEnroe will miss two weeks of tennis but will be ready to play for the United States in the Davis Cup final next month in Sweden.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, was ordered to take a two-week break from tennis after injuring his left wrist during practice in California two days ago. He will miss the Australian Open, which opens Monday.

"He called me and told me about his wrist," Dr. Omar Fareed, a member of the U.S. Tennis Association's Sports Medicine Committee, said from Los Angeles. "I examined him and prescribed two medications. I advised him not to play for two weeks. He's not ready to play right now."

The decision has cost McEnroe the chance of joining Don Budge and Rod Laver as the only male players to capture four consecutive Grand Slam titles. He has won the last two and could have pocketed a $1 million bonus by winning both the Australian Open and the French Open next June.

But he should be ready for the Davis Cup finals next month.

"I'm looking forward to his playing in the Davis Cup," Fareed said. "As far as I'm concerned, he should be ready for that 100 percent."

With McEnroe out, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the reigning French Open champion, will be the No. 1 seed for the Australian Open as officials attempt to entice Jimmy Connors to take McEnroe's place.

Without Connors, the No. 2 seed would be defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden.

Hagler, Hearn's Meet In April

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The deal is all but done and next April, Marvelous Marvin Hagler expects to defend his middleweight championship against Thomas Hearn's in Las Vegas, Nev.

Maybe. "Hearn's looks pretty set, but I don't believe anything until I step in the ring," Hagler said. "I've been around long enough to learn that. That's the ups and downs of boxing."

Two years ago, Hagler also thought he was going to fight Hearn's. But it never happened. A series of problems climaxed by an injury to Hearn's right hand postponed it. Hagler frowns when he thinks about the whole affair.

"He said he hurt his little baby pinky," the champion said, his tone dripping derision. "Guys in the street would cut that pinky off for a $1 million. We offered him $3 million and he didn't want to fight."

"We've been negotiating five times for the same fight. I say he'd better come and get me before I change my mind and say 'Forget it.'"

There is, however, very little chance of that happening. That's because Hagler and Hearn's need each other right now, and they know it. Their match is the only big money fight on the boxing horizon at the moment.

So, every chance he gets, Hagler tosses a little gasoline on Hearn's fire. There is, for example, the matter of height. Hearn's is 6-1, some 3½ inches taller than Hagler. The marvelous one's eyes gleamed when the topic was raised.

"I love tall dudes," he said. "I always like to chop down big trees. You know, what you do is bring those tall guys down to your size and then, whammo, you put their lights out."

He made the process sound absolutely ominous.

Then Hagler did some more prodding with his needle.

"I think Hearn's is waiting for me to get old and gray, get so old I can't see anymore," he said.

Hagler has been in this brutal business since 1973 and he knows it can't go on forever. He has some goals, though, one of them the record 14 title defenses by Carlos Monzon, who ruled the middleweight division from 1970-77. Hagler has defended his crown 10 times in the four years he's held it.

"I'm ahead of his schedule," he said. "After I beat Thomas Hearn's, the only option left for me is to go for Monzon's record. I'm tossing it around. I'm so close, the closer I get, maybe I might want to go for it."

The problem though, may be finding opponents. Hagler knows a string of stiff opponents could cause bad taste. "I don't want to be criticized for fighting bums of the month like Joe Louis and Larry Holmes," he said. "I'd like to go out with a lot of grace and style as still the undisputed middleweight champion of the world."

There was a brief dispute earlier this month when the World Boxing Council threatened to strip Hagler of his crown because he wasn't paying attention to its 12-round limit for his fights. The argument was settled out of court when the WBC, in an attack of common sense, realized that Hagler is recognized as the middleweight champ by the public, with or without its sanction.

The argument was not nearly as important as the internal debate Hagler's conducting about just when he will walk away from the ring permanently.

"I thought I wanted to fight until I made a million bucks," he said.

That plateau was reached some time ago and he's still punching.

"When I was 16, starting out, I also said I'd retire at the age of 30," he added.

And how old is Hagler now?

"Thirty."

Five Teams Open ACC Cage Slates

By The Associated Press

Five teams open the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball season this weekend, with Virginia and Maryland making the most exotic road trips while North Carolina and North Carolina State stay closer to home.

The Cavaliers play two games in Honolulu, while the Terrapins are in the Great Alaskan Shootout in Anchorage. Campbell meets the 13th-rated Wolfpack in Raleigh and the Tar Heels face Fordham in Charlotte. No. 20 Georgia Tech has Baptist on the slate to open in Atlanta.

Wolfpack senior forward Lorenzo Charles returns along with three other starters from last year's 19-14 team. Junior college transfer Nate McMillan is expected to fill in at the forward position as Coach Jim Valvano looks for the perfect combination of size and speed.

"It's the first game, and first games are always special," Valvano said. "We've been practicing since Sept. 30, and that's a lot longer than most years. So, I think our kids are looking forward to playing someone other than their own teammates."

The Tar Heels are coming back off a 28-3 record of last season, but have lost Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty.

San Diego, Chicago Bidding For Sutcliffe

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The bidding for free-agent pitcher Rick Sutcliffe will come down to a battle between the San Diego Padres and the Chicago Cubs, Padres General Manager Jack McKeon predicted.

"Rick has a genuine interest in playing here. I think it's going to come down to two teams — us or the Cubs," McKeon said following two days of meetings between Sutcliffe and top Padres management.

Sutcliffe, the National League's Cy Young Award winner, declared his free agency at the end of the season after compiling a 16-1 record with Chicago.

The Padres beat the Cubs, three games to two, in the National League Championship Series in October.

The 28-year-old Sutcliffe was wooed by such Padres brass as owner Joan Kroc during his visit to San Diego with agent Barry Axelrod.

so consequently I'm a little more worried about our opener than usual," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "Last year, we had an experienced team and were not sharp in our opener. In fact, Perkins and Jordan had their worst offensive games of the year that night."

Junior center Brad Daugherty has the most game experience along with sophomore guard Kenny Smith. Coach Smith hasn't announced a starting lineup beyond Smith, Daugherty and Steve Hale.

Georgia Tech will be without the services of Craig Neal, who suffered a broken wrist. Even without the injury, Coach Bobby Cremins felt his team might still have problems.

"My biggest concern is that the program may still have a lot of growing pains left," Cremins said. "It seems like we went from nothing to respectability. Now, we have gone from being respectable to a top 20 team. I think we've missed an important step in the progression. Too much may be expected of us early."

Virginia meets Providence Friday night, then plays Davidson on Saturday. Maryland opens against Kansas and freshman Danny Manning in a tournament dominated by the ACC in recent years. North Carolina won the Shootout in 1982, followed by N.C. State last season.

"I'm impressed by the area and the people in the Padre organization," he said. "The Padres are an outstanding team and they're going to get nothing but better."

Sutcliffe and Axelrod said they were impressed by the enthusiasm of Mrs. Kroc, who hosted a dinner for the group Tuesday night in La Jolla, and by the inclusion in the discussions of Padres first baseman Steve Garvey.

Garvey and Sutcliffe are friends and former teammates on the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Joan Kroc has done some tremendous things with this ballclub and for the people in this area," Sutcliffe said. "You read some bad things about ballplayers, but people like Steve Garvey and Andre Thornton try to give something back."

Peach Bowl Observers Search For Direction

ATLANTA (AP) - Peach Bowl observers are asking whether the 1984 matchup of Purdue and Virginia will steer the bowl in a new direction or maintain the same course of the past 16 years.

Virginia, which plays Maryland on Saturday for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, is 7-1-2 and is the only major college team other than Army which has never played in a bowl game.

CBS paid the Peach Bowl $315,000 in 1983 and will pay $350,000 this year. Good TV ratings are imperative this year, the last of a four-year contract.

Six months ago, the bowl sought a new beginning. It hired a public relations company to turn the Dec. 31 game into the world's largest New Year's Eve party and the sixth highest-paying bowl. The bowl's leadership vowed to pursue aggressively the most appealing available teams each year. But the questions remain.

The Peach Bowl almost always struggles to meet the National Collegiate Athletic Association's mandate of selling 40 percent of its tickets locally. It has been plagued with bad weather and its overtures to football powers consistently have been rebuffed.

Money is another consideration. The Peach Bowl payoff of $419,000 per team ranked 11th among the 16 bowls in 1983. Two Bowls younger than the Peach, the Hall of Fame in Birmingham, Ala., and the Fiesta in Phoenix, Ariz., have larger payoffs and Birmingham has basically the same weather as Atlanta.

"I'm afraid we've wound up with the same old song, even though we've sold tickets on the basis of a new beginning," said Atlanta insurance broker Dick Boger, a member of the Peach Bowl advisory committee. Purdue is 7-4 for the year.

This year, the Hall of Fame Bowl has sold 32,000 tickets so far, while the Peach has sold fewer than 20,000. The Peach Bowl must sell 24,000 tickets locally to retain its NCAA certification.

Golf's Famous Foursome Highlights Skins Game

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Pro golfer's most celebrated foursome - Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson - get together again this weekend in the second of a series of television productions called the "Skins Game."

A total of $360,000 will be up for grabs Saturday and Sunday in the 18-hole match (9 holes each day) on the Nicklaus-designed Desert Highlands course.

The event, highly successful in its inaugural performance with the same foursome last year, is a co-production of Ohlmeyer Communications and Trans World International and, admittedly, is a staged-for-television event.

It will be televised live on NBC 3:30-6 p.m., EST, Saturday and 4-6 p.m., EST, Sunday (with taped replay to sections of the country in which the live telecast conflicts with pro football).

And it will be the last under the current format and sponsorship. PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman has announced that the 1985 Skins Game will be played under the direction of the Tour, with only one of the four players to be selected by the Skins Game sponsor.

The unique aspects of last year's event - the first time Palmer, Player, Nicklaus and Watson had competed in the same group, along with the unusual format - produced high TV ratings, some cheerful banter among the game's greatest players, and moments of drama.

"I've had more mail about the Skins Game than anything I've ever played in," Nicklaus said.

But the most controversial moment came after the television cameras had completed their coverage.

In a post-match confrontation that was supposed to be private - but which was overheard by a reporter - Watson angrily accused Player of illegally improving his lie on the 16th hole. Player, who took the most money out of the match, denied it. Relations between the two have been cool ever since.

In all, Player won $170,000, including $150,000 on one hole. Palmer provided the most dramatic moments and collected $140,000, including $100,000 on one hole. Nicklaus won $40,000 and Watson $10,000.

Zola Budd Returns To Track In Search Of 'Fresh Start'

STELLENBOSCH, South Africa (AP) - Running star Zola Budd said today that she may resume her international track career and will enter an 8-kilometer road race in Zurich, Switzerland next month as a "fresh start" to her career.

Budd, the 18-year-old South African who became a British citizen in April and met disaster in the Los Angeles Olympics, said she still had made no firm decision on continuing her running career for Great Britain.

She also announced the formation of a three-man trust to manage her business affairs and to arrange her running commitments for the next four years.

Last month, Budd said she would remain in South Africa and would forsake her overseas future on the track. South Africa is barred from international competition because of the white-minority government's race-segregation system, called apartheid.

But then Budd went into seclusion on the wine estate of Jannie Mornberg, vice president of the nation's athletics union, and agreed to reconsider that decision.

At a news conference today on the farm, Budd said, "I've only planned my career until Dec. 30, when I will participate in a road race in Zurich and will have a rethink on my future after this race."

"At the moment, I'm keeping all my options open. I feel like competing internationally again, and will see what it's like when I run in Switzerland."

After that race, she said, she will return to South Africa and make a final decision on her future.

"At one stage after the Olympics, she was confused as to whether she wanted ever to run any more," said Graham Boonzaier, a Cape Province wine farmer and one of the three members of the "Zola Budd Sports Trust."

Budd, who set an unofficial 5,000-meter world record in January, became a British citizen in a blaze of publicity.

In the 3,000-meter final at Los Angeles, Budd collided with American star Mary Decker as both attempted to take the lead in the race. Decker fell and Budd staggered in seventh.

Budd conceded that the method she chose to go to the Olympics was full of mistakes, and advised others facing similar decisions "to make sure about the people who are closest to you. Be sure about the people's intention."

Although Budd declined specifics, Boonzaier said that Budd's father is no longer involved in her career and only her coach, Pieter Labuschagne, has survived the Olympic debacle to serve as the third member of the trust, along with Mornberg and Boonzaier.

Mornberg said Budd was considering becoming a "commuting" runner, living in South Africa and competing overseas.

"This girl wasn't going to run," he said after the press conference. "Then we had to look at the option of coming and going."

Neither Miss Budd nor the two members of the trust who were present would admit to any plans after Dec. 30, but Mornberg said Labuschagne had already applied for teaching jobs in the Stellenbosch area outside Cape Town, where Mornberg's farm is located.

Clemson, USC Prepare For Bout

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - If South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison wants help pumping up his team after a disappointing loss to Navy, he might invite Clemson Coach Danny Ford over for a last-minute pep talk.

Ford has made a habit this season of saying he's worried more about his 7-3 Tigers than their opponents.

When he talked about the Tigers' game Saturday against the 9-1 Gamecocks and Clemson's loss last weekend to Maryland, he offered this analysis:

"What happened to South Carolina at Navy? What happened to them? I don't even know what happened to us."

And this: "If South Carolina looked worse than us last week they must have looked terrible because we looked awful."

He even sympathized: "I would have like to see them undefeated, but I wouldn't want to see them win a national championship because then I would have to recruit against them."

And praised: "South Carolina deserves everything they've had. They have an outstanding coach."

At stake in the annual in-state rivalry Saturday is Clemson's streak of four consecutive wins in the series and 27 consecutive wins at home.

Ford says if his team doesn't "stand up and be counted," they'll "blow everything" they've built.

The Tigers' problem, according to Ford, is their attitude. He blamed the 41-23 loss last weekend on lack of pride and worried that the Tigers might not find their confidence.

Maybe Ford should have Morrison over to say a few words to the team.

"Overall, they're a very strong football team," Morrison said of Clemson. "Defensively they had a tough game last week. But prior to that they played well. They're big and strong up front. As far as their kicking game is concerned, Clemson has probably got one of the finest in the country."

Clemson quarterback Mike Eppley "may be one of the finest quarterbacks" the Gamecocks have played against this year, he said.

"They have a variety of runningbacks that they throw in there and all of them are very quick and very strong," Morrison said.

But in a rivalry like this, pep talks probably aren't necessary.

Religious Group Leader Is Sought On Counts Of Mistreating Children

By CHARLES E. BEGGS
Associated Press Writer
SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Authorities are looking nationwide for the leader of a religious group who is charged with criminally mistreating children, and 15 children were taken in raids on his commune, authorities said.

Police and state Children's Services Division workers said in a custody hearing that the children of the Good Shepherd Tabernacle told of being tied, suspended from a ceiling, forced to stand or squat for as long as 13 hours in an empty swimming pool and being tied and put into a dark room.

The children, ages 4 to 15, said the punishment was for such offenses as bedwetting and leaving commune property without permission. They said the discipline was ordered by Ariel Sherman, 55, the commune's pastor-leader.

Tales of harsh punishment first surfaced after police took a boy from the commune into custody for allegedly stealing a candy bar at a supermarket.

The 15 children were taken from the commune on Nov. 9 and Nov. 12 and placed in temporary state custody. Sherman has been missing from the area since Nov. 10.

Sherman is charged in arrest warrants with three counts of criminal mistreatment, a felony, and two misdemeanor counts of assault, authorities said.

Law enforcement agencies, including the FBI, are conducting a "nationwide hunt" for him, said Salem police Sgt. Larry Stephens.

On advice of a lawyer, adults remaining at what apparently is a nine-family commune refused to talk to reporters.

Children's Services employees who took children from the commune said they appeared healthy, were neatly clothed and groomed and that few had any external marks of punishment. Officials say they believe about a dozen youngsters still may be at the commune.

Neighbors said commune members were reclusive.

Texas Town Selling Lots

EASTVALE, Texas (AP) — If you're interested in owning a tiny plot of land in Texas, Eastvale could be the place for you. The yard sale has taken on an entirely different meaning in this North Texas town.

The financially strapped town is selling its last lot of land for $10 a square inch, hoping to bring in enough money to repair roads and install water and sewer systems, said Mayor Bert Eubanks.

"We're advertising this sale nationally," Mrs. Eubanks said. "I also think it would make great Christmas gifts for relatives in the North. This way people can own land in Texas."

The sale could bring $9 million if the entire 900,000 square-inch parcel across from City Hall sells, Mrs. Eubanks said.

George Lucas' 'Ewok Adventure' Aimed At Youngsters And Parents

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Although "The Ewok Adventure" — George Lucas' first TV movie — is more stepson than sequel to "Star Wars," it is an enchanting fantasy-adventure for young children and all parents who wish they could be young again.

The Ewoks, those pint-size, fuzzy creatures who helped save the day in Lucas' "Return of the Jedi," have been rewarded with their own movie on ABC Sunday night.

"If people come to this thinking it's the fourth 'Star Wars,' they'll be disappointed," said producer Tom Smith. "It's really sort of a side trip."

"The Ewok Adventure" is based on a story by Lucas, mastermind of the "Star Wars" trilogy and executive producer of the Indiana Jones epic adventures. Lucas is listed as executive producer of "The Ewok Adventure."

Smith said the film's budget was about twice that of a typical television movie, which would make it about $4 million. He said it's scaled down in size and scope, and made for TV, because Lucas didn't want to spend three years on the project.

The Thanksgiving weekend broadcast should provide a needed boost for ABC, which has sunk to No. 3 in the ratings and, uncharacteristically, has very few miniseries and special events as bailouts. The film was offered to all three networks, but Smith said ABC won the bidding with its "tremendous enthusiasm."

"The Ewok Adventure," shot amid the splendor of the redwoods of Northern California, will be released to movie theaters internationally after the ABC broadcast.

The story resembles a space-age version of the "Wizard of Oz," with enlightenment and peril lining the road back home. In this case, a family's spacecraft has crashed, separating two children from their parents. With the help of the brave Ewoks, the kids do the searching and eventually rescue their captive parents.

Along the way, the band of little warriors — the pastoral Ewoks don't believe in first strike but they are pesky self-defenders — run into the kind of larger-than-life creatures, benign and otherwise, who inhabited Lucas' zany, intergalactic barroom scene in the original "Star Wars."

There's really nothing in "The Ewok Adventure" to alarm or scare the young; "Ewoks" will never be confused with "Gremlins." But, at the same time, there's probably not enough action-adventure to wow the older, more cynical kids who have seen it all on cable TV.

"You get a lot of real life on TV in the evening news," said Smith, who spent 4½ years as general manager of Lucasfilm's special effects division. "There's not a lot of TV that goes to fantasy."

The special effects, which Smith defines as the optical images that are created after the actors leave the set, are outstanding for television. He said there were 170 special effects shots on "Ewoks," compared to 50 for "E.T.," 200 for "Star Trek" and 1,000 for "Return of the Jedi."

The movie's human acting is unexceptional. Eric Walker plays Mace Towani, a pugnacious teenager who distrusts the Ewoks but learns to appreciate their gentle, compassionate ways. Aubree Miller is his young sister, Cindel, who has golden locks and an instinctive attachment to the cuddly Ewoks.

Hearing Is Ordered On Producer's Will

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A former actress and model who unsuccessfully contested the will of the late film producer Darryl F. Zanuck has been granted a hearing before the state Supreme Court.

Genevieve Gillaizeau, 37, who was Zanuck's mistress for about eight years, contested the will in 1980, a few months after Zanuck died in Palm Springs at the age of 77.

Last August, a state appeals court said her appeal was frivolous and fined her attorney, Gerald Goldfarb of Los Angeles, $3,000 for filing it. But Goldfarb, in his petition to the Supreme Court, argued that there are legitimate legal issues of fraud and equity raised by the case and that the Court of Appeal overlooked them.

During a trial in 1983, Ms. Gillaizeau contended that Zanuck was of unsound mind and unduly influenced by his children when he excluded her as an heir to his estate.

A will Zanuck executed Feb. 15, 1973, in New York provided her with 40 percent of his securities, his car and two miniature Yorkshire terriers. That will was nullified Oct. 31, 1973, when he signed another leaving most of his estate to family and friends.

Judge Frank Moore dismissed the case when he found that the attorney who had filed the suit — noted divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson — had erred by failing to mention a 1977 codicil to the October 1973 will. The codicil, which essentially repeats the original will with some changes, should have been the suit's target, not the October 1973 will. Moore ruled.

High Heeled Women Are Zany Quartet

NEW YORK (AP) — They turn up in the darndest places — books, television commercials, soap operas, nightclubs. But the High Heeled Women are hardly an American institution.

If they were, they'd be an insane asylum.

This unstrung quartet — Tracey Berg, Cassandra Danz, Mary Fulham and Arleen Sorkin — has been performing together in Manhattan clubs since 1978, breaking up audiences with routines they write and choreograph that include impersonations, songs, satires and even a take-off of Busby Berkeley movies.

"We get discovered about every six months," Miss Sorkin said in an interview. "Big stars come see us and say, 'You girls are terrific,' and we say, 'Oh, really?' We just started together."

Even if you've never seen their act, you probably know them from the book "Plain Jane Works Out," a spoof of "Jane Fonda's Workout Book." And you might remember their faces from TV commercials or bit parts in such movies as "Tootsie" and "Trading Places."

They also are regulars on Lynn Redgrave's "The Weight Watchers Magazine Show" on cable TV and Miss Sorkin plays Calliope Jones on NBC's daytime soap, "Days of Our Lives."

But the High Heeled Women really click when the lights go down, the audience grows quiet and the four strut onstage in black dresses slit up the thigh and — what else? — stiletto shoes.

They segue into a rap number, "For White Girls Who Have Considered Analysis When Electrolysis Is Enut" — a parody of a Broadway play. "For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow Is Enut."

They chant:

"We live in condo bondage,
"We never miss a meal,
"But no one ever asks about
"The pain which white girls feel."

They also do Tarzan movies, in which Miss Berg plays a screeching Cheetah and Miss Sorkin a troubled Jane.

"Tarzan and I had a terrible fight," Jane confides to Cheetah. "All I said was 'Tarzan, help me fix the place up, hang a few vines. You live here, too.'"

"And he said, 'Jane better watch step. Name not on lease. Treehouse going co-op.'"

Miss Berg, who was born in Nanuet, N.Y., Miss Fulham, who is from Boston and Miss Sorkin, who grew up in Washington, met in Boston when they were drama majors in college — they won't say just how long ago that was.

"We're older than Brooke Shields but younger than Joan Collins," Miss Danz said.

Miss Danz is from Brooklyn.

The idea for the High Heeled Women wasn't born until 1978 when they all did standup acts at a Manhattan club called Once Upon a Stove. Their first performance together came a year later.

Then TV producer Ernest Chambers saw them perform. At the time, Chambers was hoping to launch a new variety show starring all women.

"So we signed with (a talent agency), which at that point in our careers seemed like a big deal," Miss Sorkin recalled. "And we were so cheery back then that we went to sign the contract in our costumes. We thought, 'This way, they'll remember us.'"

The agency made some tantalizing promises, Miss Sorkin said. "They told us, 'We're going to have High Heeled Women dolls, High Heeled Women comic books, High Heeled Women movies, magazines, shoes... So we couldn't sign fast enough,'" she said.

"So the outcome of the story is that all-girl show that Ernie Chambers wanted to do was done by the Mandrell Sisters," Miss Fulham said. "And they did a wonderful job."

But when the High Heeled Women look back, it's never in anger.

They can laugh about the early days when they'd invite friends again and again to see the act, just so the house would look full.

"But even your best friends can't laugh at a joke after hearing it for the 18th time," Miss Danz said.

These days, it's their talent and reputation that fill the house each Saturday night when they perform at the Greene Street Cafe.

The quartet has a book coming out in the spring "about motherhood in the '80s — the latest fad," said Miss Danz, who refused to divulge more.

Repeat Performance

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Marching Leech Kazoo Band and the Synchronized Brief Case Drill Team will make return appearances during Sunday's 8th Occasional Doo Dah Parade, a satirical answer to Pasadena's famed Tournament of Roses Parade.

The 1½-hour parade, which starts at noon, also will feature the lawn mowers of Toro!Toro!Toro!, the Great American Yankee (GAY) Freedom Band from West Hollywood, a Barbecue Drill Team and something called Granny Grunt's Alzheimer Hummers and Calypso Band.

Members of the latter group "haven't lost their rhythm, they just can't remember the words," says the official Doo Dah program.

Poor taste? Doo Dah organizer Peter Apanel said he didn't think the parade had ever "crossed the boundary" into the offensive.

North Carolina Senator Jesse Helms recently won his bid for re-election. But how many votes did he get in Republican, North Carolina? O'Neill Unconcerned About Likely Challenge To His House Leadership

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Southern Democrat, asserting that Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill "is too far to the left" to continue as House speaker, says he's ready to challenge O'Neill's re-election in a party caucus.

Rep. Charles Stenholm of Texas, a leader of the so-called "Boll Weevil" faction of conservative Southern Democrats in Congress, said "there's definitely going to be a challenge of the speaker, and there's a 99 percent certainty that it will be me."

Stenholm disclosed his plans in a telephone interview Thursday with The Associated Press.

O'Neill, D-Mass., who has been in Congress for 32 years and speaker of the House since 1976, said in a telephone interview from his Cape Cod home that "anybody has a right to run" in the caucus of House Democrats scheduled for Dec. 3. But the veteran Democratic leader also said he has sufficient "pledges of support to be able to retain the post."

"We haven't made an announcement," said Stenholm, reached at his suburban Virginia home. But he also said that "those of us who feel it's time for a change, have decided to do it."

"There are many of us in Congress who believe this is the time to begin rebuilding the (Democratic) party for 1986, and several feel that if we're going to do that, it's time to get started," the congressman said.

O'Neill, who turns 72 next month, has said he will retire in 1986. Some party sources have said that for this reason, any challenge to O'Neill's leadership role in the 99th Congress starting in January likely would only be symbolic. These sources discussed the leadership situation on the grounds they not be quoted publicly.

These sources have said that current discussions among legislators focus on changes that could be made in 1986, when O'Neill retires.

Stenholm, 46, said he was concerned about the image of House Democrats in the wake of President Reagan's landslide Nov. 6 election victory over former Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Stenholm said he feared that under O'Neill's continuing leadership, the party would be seen as "obstructionist" by the American people. "I'm afraid we'll be left with a stalemate," he said.

A Stenholm challenge would be the first formally launched against O'Neill since 1977, although in recent years there have been signs of discontent among young Democrats who feel the leadership gives them too little say in the affairs of the chamber.

The Republican Party made only modest gains, picking up just 14 seats in the House, despite Reagan's landslide victory, and Democrats still hold a 253-182 margin.

Stenholm, who is leader of a group known as the Conservative Democratic Forum in the House, met frequently with Reagan's representatives in 1981 as the administration was seeking Democratic support for Reagan's budget proposals. But the Texan is a staunch Democrat who has persistently spurned suggestions by the Republican Party to change political labels.

In the interview, Stenholm, a West Texas cotton grower just re-elected without opposition to his fourth term in Congress, denied that his goal is to use the speaker's platform to become a surrogate for Reagan.

Saying that "I have no personal animosity" toward O'Neill, Stenholm said he believed the House speaker "should represent a more moderate or a little more-to-the-center philosophy."

He alleged that O'Neill had "virtually hand-picked" Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., to be Mondale's vice presidential running mate and said O'Neill's image as an old-style liberal Democrat is harmful to the party.

"I guess you could say it's a conservative movement to make the challenge," Stenholm said, "but the dissatisfaction is very, very widespread. We hope that we will be able to make some of the needed changes."

News Attorney Will Not Seek Kennedy Photos

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — An attorney for several news organizations says he will not seek release of photographs and a videotape of the scene of David Kennedy's death of a drug overdose.

"My clients just wanted to make absolutely certain these photographs contained nothing that is of legitimate interest to the public," said Martin Reeder, who viewed the tape and the 69 medical examiner's photographs showing all or part of Kennedy's body in the Palm Beach hotel room where he died.

The body of the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was found April 25 on the floor of his $250-a-day suite at the Brazilian Court Hotel.

"The pictures show a person that had died of a drug overdose," Reeder said Wednesday. "They weren't anything more than they were purported to be."

Under an agreement he said is "mutually beneficial to both sides," he is forbidden to reveal details of the pictures.

Reeder, representing media including the The Palm Beach Post and Evening Times in West Palm Beach and The Miami Herald, signed an agreement Tuesday night saying the material would be kept private if it appeared to show Kennedy's death was drug-related.

The agreement, which also orders the Palm Beach County state attorney's office and medical examiner's offices and the Palm Beach police not to make the photos public, is part of a settlement in a public access dispute between the media and the Kennedy family.

David Kennedy's brother, Joseph Kennedy II, and his sister, Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, filed suit claiming a release of the photos would violate the family's constitutional right to privacy. It also challenged the constitutionality of Florida's public records law.

On Monday, attorneys for both sides agreed to let Reeder review the photos and the tape to determine whether they held any news value for his clients.

If the Kennedy family had prevailed in court, a portion of the state open records law could have been declared unconstitutional, Reeder said. If the media had prevailed, the photos would have become public.

"A settlement was in the best interest of both sides," he said.

Agricultural Industry Seeking Top Students

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — For most college agriculture students, there are excellent job opportunities everywhere but on the farm.

However, enrollments across the nation are down and the number of graduates falls short of meeting the needs of a sophisticated and rapidly changing agricultural industry, experts say.

"If we don't look out, we aren't going to have the best and brightest minds going into agriculture," said Dale Wolf, vice president in the agricultural chemicals division of DuPont Co.

One problem, educators believe, is that top students pick college majors in high-tech fields like computer science and engineering because agriculture has a poor image.

"There has been an adverse reaction by students to the financial misery on the farm, and there have been misconceptions about careers in agriculture in its broadest sense," said James Anderson, dean of the college of agriculture and natural resources at Michigan State.

Suter, director of the federally funded Food and Agriculture Education Information System, said preliminary indications were that undergraduate ag enrollments in the land grant universities dropped another 7 percent or 8 percent this fall. That would be in addition to a decline of about 20 percent in the past four years, he said.

For example, enrollments at Michigan State and Purdue have declined sharply; they have remained steady at Illinois and Cornell. Oregon State posted a slight increase.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has projected an annual shortfall of 13 percent in the number of qualified graduates available for a variety of agricultural jobs through 1985. They include international marketing, biotechnology, computer application, finance and economics, agricultural engineering and sales.

"It's taken industry leaders and educational administrators a while to realize that they face a serious problem," said Jane Coulter, director of higher education programs for USDA. "We've got to make the outstanding high school students aware of the opportunities in agriculture. We need the best minds applied to these fields."

1,000 students received Ph.D. degrees each year, and 40 percent of them are foreigners. That means "there are not very many" available for jobs in this country, she said.

That also worries the universities. Many faculty members with doctorate degrees are nearing retirement age, and "we don't have enough graduate students in the pipeline to handle that," said John Campbell, dean of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

A number of things are now being done in an effort to attract the best students to agriculture, said Ms. Coulter.

—The USDA and Texas A&M are keeping track of enrollments in agricultural programs and the jobs that are available.

—Congress has appropriated $5 million for graduate fellowships for 305 new students in agricultural programs at 47 universities.

—Private industry is stepping up efforts to inform, and in some cases, assist, students. DuPont, for example, offered two new $10,000 scholarships in agricultural engineering at Oklahoma State and Illinois. Monsanto, another farm chemical manufacturer, sends employees to high school career days to talk about opportunities in the new agriculture.

—Universities are recruiting more and are redesigning some agricul-

A few examples: At Michigan State, Anderson sends his "best students out to visit high schools with a very modern, upbeat slide presentation" about opportunities in modern agriculture. He also encourages high school science teachers to include agriculture in their classes and coordinates summer internships in ag-related jobs.

At Purdue, efforts include $1,000 awards of excellence to the top high school graduates entering the college of agriculture.

At Illinois, Campbell said more emphasis was being placed on communication and leadership skills sought by industry, and a new farm computer course has grown from 30 students to 600 in two years. A scholarship program is designed to attract top high school students from a variety of backgrounds.

Some, like Illinois senior Bob Burd of Armstrong, come from the farm but will find a career in other areas of agriculture. "There's just room for two people to make it on our farm with the economy the way it is," said Burd, whose older brother already works with his father on the 400-acre family farm.

Burd saw an opportunity to use his degree in agricultural economics to work in the farm credit system, because "farmers have a lot of debt and they are borrowing more and more money."

Classmate Virginia Montgomery of Winnetka grew up in the city and "knew nothing about agriculture." But a summer job at the Chicago Board of Trade — where grain is bought and sold — got her interested, and Illinois counselors showed her the career opportunities. Like nearly all ag graduates, she will begin work immediately — as a commodity merchandiser for a major grain company.

"We're looking for curious and outstanding students," said Campbell. "It's a very rich and exciting experience to be part of providing the world with food and fiber."

Christmas Holidays Ranks As Top Food-Selling Period Of The Year

By The Associated Press
Although most people have just finished stuffing themselves with the Thanksgiving feast, food distributors say the biggest holiday for food consumption is yet to come.

Everett Suddreth of Charlotte, executive director of the N.C. Food Dealers Association, said Christmas ranks as the top food-selling holiday of the year, followed by Easter.

But Suddreth said Thanksgiving's third-place finish doesn't bother the 2,000 independent grocery stores that are part of his association. Food sales swell 3 percent to 5 percent above normal in the holiday season.

That may sound low, but it represents a bulge over an already increased base. "The consumer buys and eats more during the colder months," Suddreth said.

The increased food buying is also good news for North Carolina's producers of turkeys, yams and oysters.

Tar Heels produce 29 million turkeys or 17 percent of the nation's supply, and supply nearly 38 percent of the sweet potatoes that appear on the nation's holiday tables.

Charlie Brewer, extension specialist with the Department of Poultry Science at N.C. State University in Raleigh, said the popularity of turkey parts has helped drive up the cost this season.

"There's plenty to go around," he said. "There are fewer whole birds. That's the reason prices are up."

Producers are getting in excess of 50 cents per pound, which is good. "The market for most of the year has been quite good," Brewer said. "The latter half has been very good for the producer."

The state's turkey industry is the biggest in the country, accounting for about $203 million in sales last year.

The sweet potato crop ranked 13th last year, worth about $58 million.

Sweet potato production is expected to total 390 million pounds this year, according to the N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Carson Barnes of Spring Hope, the nation's largest producer and shipper of sweet potatoes, said that from 28 percent to 31 percent of the state's annual crop is shipped during the three weeks preceding Thanksgiving.

"The biggest movement of the year is Thanksgiving. Christmas is second, and Easter is third."

Thanksgiving is also one of the times of highest demand for oysters from the North Carolina coast. The oysters industry was worth $1.2 million at dockside last year, according to Bob Mahood, director of the Marine Fisheries Division in the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"You generally use a multiplier of four by the time it gets to the consumer," Mahood said. That would include processing and shipping. "That's been about our highest year."

Sales of other types of seafood decline at Thanksgiving, according to Ed Cross, owner of Pamlico Packing Co. at Vandemere in Pamlico County.

"There are an awful lot of oysters consumed at Thanksgiving," Cross said.

Cross said his sales to restaurants — about 250 gallons a week — fall some 25 percent at Thanksgiving. But his sales that end up in home consumption double. That means he shipped about 200 gallons day in the four days preceding Thanksgiving.

Man Helps In Arrest

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A kitchen worker at the Western Charcoal Steak House may have prevented a second shooting at a parking lot where a Burlington teen-ager was mortally wounded.

And a 16-year-old girl was thankful Thursday that William Slade, 36, doesn't know how to mind his own business.

Steve Farrell, 17, died Thursday at Duke University Hospital in Durham, where he was taken after being listed in critical condition at Alamance County Hospital, said supervisor Mary Barker. Authorities say he was shot Wednesday at the AT&T Technologies parking lot.

Police have arrested Eddie Lee Herbin, 19, of Elon College in the shooting.

Before police arrived at the scene, Slade had grabbed the arm of the shooter and held him until security guards from A&T Technologies arrived.

The man had pointed the gun at Kim Spencer, a companion of Farrell.

"I said 'Don't shoot the girl, give me the gun,'" Slade said Wednesday.

According to Slade, he was in the restaurant parking lot when Miss Spencer ran up to him and told him her boyfriend had just been shot. She pleaded for help, he said.

"It just got me real upset how she was crying and I ran over," Slade said.

At the parking lot, Slade says he found a man standing over Farrell, pointing his pistol at the victim and yelling at him.

Miss Spencer, in hysterics, started screaming at the man and "pulling on him," Slade said. The man then pointed the gun at her.

Slade said he grabbed the man's arm. "I said 'Don't pull that gun on her.'"

"I wasn't thinking he was going to shoot me," Slade said. "I was thinking he was going to shoot the girl."

Seconds after Slade grabbed the man's arm, security guards arrived.

The soft-spoken Slade played down the significance of his involvement Wednesday.

Most important to him at the time, he said, was the girl's welfare.

"I figured he didn't have nothing against me," he said. "I just got a little nervous afterward."

Vessel Search Resumes

NEW YORK (AP) — The Coast Guard says the discovery of a small life raft in the Atlantic Ocean prompted the resumption of its search for the Amazing Grace and the trawler's seven crewmen.

The 87-foot, Hampton, Va.-based vessel was last heard from Nov. 14 from off Cape May, N.J. The Coast Guard had suspended the original search Wednesday night.

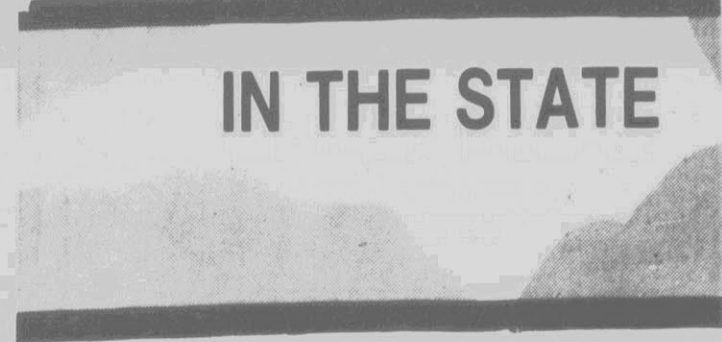

But the small raft, which should have been one of two on board the Amazing Grace, was reported found at about 6 a.m. Thursday about 270 miles off the coast of Chincoteague, Va., said James Graham, a spokesman with the Coast Guard's 3rd District Headquarters in New York.

"There was no name on the raft," Graham said. "It was a little plate on the raft that was traced to the manufacturer, who identified it as belonging to the Amazing Grace."

The spokesman said the raft was the smaller of the two carried by the trawler, and that both would normally be stocked with two days of provisions.

"The one thing that was found was a knife in an open position. That was it," Graham said. "Provisions for two days were missing."

Researcher Points To Child Care By Schools

By BARBARA MILFORD
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Schools must begin making allowances for the children of their teen-age students if they are to keep young mothers from dropping out in a continuing cycle of poverty, a researcher says.

In addition, by steering girls toward stereotypical female roles, schools inadvertently encourage teen-age pregnancy, said Margaret Dunkle, co-director of The Equality Center in Washington, D.C., and a member of the Governor's Task Force on Teen-age Pregnancy in Maryland.

A lack of child care during school hours, classwork missed by students whose children have doctors' appointments and school rules barring parents or pregnant students from such groups as the National Honor Society can nudge student-parents out of the classroom, Ms. Dunkle said in an interview Wednesday.

"Right now," said Ms. Dunkle, who spoke earlier in the week at a conference on teen pregnancy attended by educators and state agency representatives, "services are fragmented and the students who are 12, 13, 15 years old fall through the fragile safety net. They can't navigate the bureaucratic maze. In fact, most 30-year-olds can't."

The conference attracted 430 representatives of schools and four state agencies and discussed an interagency approach to dealing with teen-age parents, said Ms. Dunkle.

Nationwide, more than 1 million teen-age mothers are raising 1.3 million children, according to the Alan Guttmacher Institute of Washington, D.C., a non-profit research organization. Eighty percent of them never return to school and more than one-quarter become pregnant again within a year, according to the National Center for Educational Statistics.

"If you have a very young woman who has been creative enough and persistent enough to keep up with her studies during pregnancy and has returned to school, she may be faced with a host of problems like an unexcused absence or failing a math test when she has to take her baby to a clinic," Ms. Dunkle said.

Ms. Dunkle singled out the Laurence Paquin Junior-Senior High School in Baltimore, a 405-student school for pregnant students that provides some day care for students' children, as one which is dealing with its students problems.

But she said, "The long-term answer isn't in schools like Paquin because the students who (most need an education) drop out in the transfer process."

Instead, schools and state agencies must form a partnership to "provide services for the total person," said Ms. Dunkle, who has spent two years researching problems related to adolescent pregnancy.

"Teen-age pregnancy is a symptom of poverty; teen-age pregnancy rates are highest where income is lowest," she said. "Young girls who have low self-esteem and no hopes for the future are the ones most likely to become young mothers."

But schools, too, by discouraging girls from studying advanced math or auto mechanics can "give very traditional sex-stereotyped messages (that) in fact encourage teen-age pregnancies," she said.

"Teachers and administrators are well-meaning; they want to help students," Ms. Dunkle said. "But most of them don't realize that when they give the message to young girls that the only role or their major role is to be a wife and mother, they are encouraging teen-age pregnancy."

Labor Department Official Probe Target, Sources Say

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is refusing to disclose the status of its chief of staff, who, sources say, is under investigation for his role in awarding no-bid contracts and a trip on a lobbyist's sailboat.

The sources said the department's Office of Inspector General — which investigates fraud, waste and abuse — has been interviewing employees about the activities of Daniel K. Benjamin, a senior aide and trusted ally of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

The sources spoke only on condition they not be quoted by name, and several said they have been asked by investigators and other department officials not to speak with reporters about Benjamin.

Donovan is on unpaid leave while he defends himself against a grand jury indictment in Bronx County Court in New York.

A woman answering Benjamin's office telephone refused to say whether he was working and referred a reporter to department spokesman Michael Volpe, who also refused to confirm whether the chief of staff was on the job. Volpe added that information on leaves by department officials is "private and non-disclosable."

Attempts to reach Benjamin at his home on several occasions were unsuccessful. Messages left on his home phone recording system, asking him to call, produced no results.

In mid-October, Benjamin told senior department officials in a memo that he would be on leave from his $66,400 salary through the end of that month. One source said he has not returned since, although it is possible he could have appeared in his office briefly. As chief of staff, Benjamin normally has a high-profile job within the department.

According to the sources, investigators are focusing on:

— Benjamin's trip last July on the 32-foot "Navajo Chief," a sailboat owned by lobbyist Mike McKeivitt, Washington counsel for the National Federation of Independent Business. The organization represents some 560,000 small businesses, which are affected by department regulations and programs.

— The role Benjamin played in the award of contracts without competitive bidding, including a seven-day contract to his former research assistant who was one of his sailing partners on the lobbyist's boat.

— Government forms filled out by Benjamin, in which he listed different amounts for his earnings before entering government service.

Asked about the case, Deputy Inspector General Raymond Maria said, "I cannot confirm nor deny that we have an investigation of that nature."

A former assistant professor of economics at the University of Washington in Seattle, Benjamin, 37, entered the Labor Department as a consultant in June 1982 and served in several high-ranking jobs before his appointment as chief of staff last May.

The sources said investigators specifically asked about a $2,357 contract awarded to Keith Wollenberg, a former research assistant to Benjamin at the University of Washington.

And employees reportedly told investigators what they knew about other no-bid contracts in which Benjamin played a role. Contracts without competitive bidding are permitted under specified criteria when the contracting official can properly justify them.

Wollenberg spent seven working days last summer preparing a report that analyzed public comments on Ethylene Dibromide (EDB), a hazardous substance regulated by the department.

A department memo, justifying the lack of competitive bidding, cited Wollenberg's experience with EDB regulations and "tight time pressure" for producing the report.

But an internal computer message system in the Labor Department shows that Benjamin also wanted Wollenberg in Washington to be part of a three-man sailing crew for a trip just days before the EDB analysis

Benjamin's messages were directed to Eric Sonett, a former student of Benjamin who worked at the Labor Department last summer and the third crewman on the lobbyist's boat.

"When is Wollenberg coming? Will he need money to finance the research he will be doing?" asked Benjamin, whose computer code name was "captain."

In another message, Benjamin asked Sonett, "Are you interested in helping me crew? ... If KW can get in the night before, he can help too."

Wollenberg submitted a bill for his work totaling $2,357 that included round-trip airfare between San Francisco and Washington, per diem expenses and seven days' labor at $110 a day between July 31 and Aug. 8.

Regarding the financial disclosure issue, Benjamin said in an interview last month that instructions on different forms sought financial information for different time periods — and that fact accounts for any differences.

Studies Suggest It's 'Never Too Late' To Stop Puffing

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Cigarette smoking is the single largest preventable cause of death in the United States, but people who kick the habit even after decades of addiction can significantly reduce the risk of fatal heart disease, researchers say.

Studies published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association say there are about 1.5 million more smokers in the United States than 20 years ago and that cigarette smoking causes more than 350,000 deaths each year.

But physicians say the fatality rate can be reduced even among older people who have smoked for as long as 50 years.

A five-year study in Cook County of 2,674 poor, urban residents ranging in age from 65 to 74 found the risk of heart-disease deaths was 52 percent higher among current cigarette smokers than nonsmokers and ex-smokers alike.

"These data suggest that even among older persons who have smoked for decades, the effects of smoking are at least partly reversible within one to five years after quitting," the study said.

Dr. Adrian Ostfeld, one of the authors, said the results demonstrate that "it's never too late to quit."

Ostfeld, a professor of epidemiology and public health at Yale University's School of Medicine, said long-time smokers who quit can expect to lose their cigarette cough, walk up stairs without losing their breath and be less prone to heart attacks.

Among people younger than 65 the risk of fatal heart disease was nearly 100 percent greater when comparing heavy smokers — a pack or more a day — to non-smokers, he said.

Ostfeld's study is one of several dealing with smoking and tobacco in today's journal.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. William Pollin, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, called smoking the single largest preventable cause of death in America and because of recent advances in understanding addiction, the medical field has an "unparalleled opportunity" to fulfill its primary responsibility of reducing suffering and death.

One doctor suggested that the "havoc of smoking" would be more apparent if it weren't almost always omitted from death certificates.

Of 350,000 smoking deaths in 1980, only 46 death certificates listed smoking as the underlying cause of death, said Dr. R.T. Ravenholt of World Health Surveys Inc. About 2,000 others made some mention of smoking.

Ravenholt said if more death certificates mentioned smoking, legislators, lawyers and the public would be "more heedful of the hazards" that he estimates killed about 10 million people this century.

The 350,000 deaths from cigarette smoking "constitute more than all other drug and alcohol abuse deaths combined," Pollin said. More than 60 percent of the annual cigarette deaths were among people who became addicted to nicotine as adolescents, he said.

He added that dramatic changes can be achieved in addiction and noted that more than 70 percent of U.S. servicemen addicted to heroin in Vietnam kicked the habit.

"More than 200,000 lives per year can be saved if we achieve the same level of success in dealing with nicotine that was reached by returning Vietnam heroin addicts," Pollin said.

Other findings in the journal:

—More than 30 million regular smokers have been able to quit in the last 20 years. The percentage of American male smokers dropped from 52 percent to 35 percent; the percentage of women smokers fell from 34 percent to 29 percent.

—During the 1970s, smoking among teen-age girls went up — higher than their male counterparts.

—An estimated 35 states have laws limiting smoking in public places.

—Nicotine chewing gum, when complemented with group therapy, is twice as effective as a placebo in helping smokers who want to quit.

—For the first time since 1974, total annual cigarette consumption in the United States is running below 600 billion.

Officials Plan Park On Site Of Blasts Near Mexico City

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — State officials say a park will be built on the scorched ground where fiery explosions destroyed scores of houses and killed 346 people in a poor neighborhood outside the capital.

Benjamin Granados, state of Mexico public works director, said bulldozers would begin razing 122 homes no longer safe for habitation, possibly today. Trucks began moving belongings from the homes to warehouses Thursday.

"In 10 or 15 days it will be a park," he said of the heaviest damaged part of the San Juan Ixhuatepec section of suburban Tlalneantla. The death toll rose to 346 on Thursday when nine victims died in the hospital.

People whose homes are razed will be given new homes worth $10,000 in another area. But some residents said they would rather remain, especially if the devastated gas storage plant, owned by the government oil monopoly PEMEX, is moved.

Some residents said that about eight or nine months ago they also fled a fire at a lumber facility in the same PEMEX complex. That fire was controlled and they returned home some afterwards.

PEMEX officials have said they do not plan to rebuild the gas facility in the same place, and the location may also be turned into parkland.

Some residents said they believed their houses could be repaired, although they were in the area considered uninhabitable.

Granados said a few standing houses in the planned park area will probably be demolished, even if they are in satisfactory condition, to develop a "security belt" against future explosions, should PEMEX rebuild.

He said the residences were built on land sold illegally by farmers who had the right to work, but not sell, government communal farmland. "We are taking advantage of the situation to regularize the zone," said an official involved in the planning, who spoke on condition he not be named.

For Raul Pena Duarte, 44, there was little left.

"All my family died there," Pena Duarte said as stood at a doorway opening onto the blackened rubble of the house and patio he had built. Only walls and the wheels of what might have been a bicycle were recognizable.

"I had gone to work. They were all asleep," he said. "A piece of one of the tanks went through there and then everything burned."

Pena Duarte, his wife, four children ranging from 10 to 16, his wife's mother and sister and another family lived in the simple three-room house.

"I think I will leave here," he said. "I'm from the state of Michoacan. That's where I think I will go at the end of the year. What's left here?"

Alfredo Jara Garcia wept as he lingered in the shell of the burned-out two-room home where his sister, her husband and their six children died.

"All this that you see here was just our family," his cousin Sergio Avila Morales said, pointing to a row of small homes facing a field of gas storage tanks. At least 15 family members died, he said.

Telephone and electrical crews strung new wires and men wielding brooms made of bunches of twigs swept the streets. Other crews dug trenches to repair water leaks. Bags of cement, concrete blocks, steel construction rods and other building supplies were unloaded into a church recreation lot for distribution to people repairing their homes.

Sidewalk Santas On Job

NEW YORK (AP) — With 31 shopping days remaining until Christmas, a squadron of sidewalk Santa Clauses hit the streets today in the annual Volunteers of America fund drive.

Between 45 and 50 Santas will take to the street to raise money for Christmas dinners and other holiday comforts for the poor and homeless, old and young, the group announced Thursday. The Santas will get a hearty breakfast of steak and eggs before kicking off the 88th annual Yuletide solicitation drive.

The bidding doesn't find favor with this department. We would prefer a preemptive jump to three clubs with the West hand, and a cuebid of four clubs rather than unilaterally picking a major with the South hand. The final contract, however, was eminently reasonable.

West elected to lead his singleton heart. East rose with the ace and returned the nine. Declarer played low. West ruffed and shifted to a club. After capturing East's king with the ace, declarer drew two rounds of trumps, cashed the diamond ace and returned to hand with a trump for the diamond finesse. When that succeeded, declarer cashed dummy's remaining diamond winner to reach this position:

Declarer exited with dummy's club, and he didn't mind who won the trick. If East took it, he could either lead away from his queen of hearts or give declarer a ruff sluff; if West wins the club, he is forced to yield a ruff sluff. Either way, declarer could lose no more tricks.

East could have prevented the end play. At trick two he should return the queen of hearts, and West ruffs away declarer's king. Now when declarer tries the throw-in play in clubs, East can rise with the jack and exit with the ten of hearts, and he must still come to a heart trick for down one.

Caspian Sea Resort Of Baku Exemplifies Diversity Of Russia

Associated Press Writer
BAKU, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Vines twist around ornate iron balconies overlooking noisy narrow streets and women in scarves hawk pomegranates and spices. It's more like the Mediterranean here in Baku than the Soviet Union.

Yet the city on the Caspian Sea 100 miles north of Iran is the capital of Azerbaijan, a Soviet republic whose development under communism in many ways exemplifies the vast land ruled from Moscow.

The foreign styles mixed with Baku's Soviet-era apartment blocks and outside government buildings predate the 1917 revolution, which spread south to incorporate Azerbaijan into the Soviet Union in 1920.

Conquered by Persians, Turks and Arabs in the past, the old Azerbaijan shared the Moslem religion with neighboring Persia, now Iran. Its native language is related to that spoken in Turkey, about 300 miles to the west.

Now, one of Baku's two functioning mosques is almost empty on a Friday, the Moslem sabbath. Locals barely glance at a portrait of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini outside the Consulate of Iran and profess no interest in day-long broadcasts of readings from the Koran, the Moslem holy book, on Iranian television.

Moscow decreed in 1929 that the local language, written since the 7th century in Arabic script, be transcribed into Latin letters.

Ten years later, Russian cyrillic was substituted, with eight specially added characters. Now, this very Soviet melange of Russian and Arab styles is the language of numerous Communist Party slogans adorning Baku factories.

The European style of Baku's Victorian villas, now subdivided into flats, arrived with the oil discovered in the 19th century.

Russians and businessmen from as far away as Britain made Baku the world's premier oil producing area in the early 1900s.

Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite whose legacy funds the Nobel prizes, was among the wealthy who built mansions on the Caspian Sea, prompting Azerbaijanis to say even now that there is Baku oil in the Nobel prizes.

Revolutionaries also found Baku profitable. Josef Stalin helped to organize an oilworkers' strike in 1905. Twenty-six commissars set up a socialist commune after the 1917 revolution and even their slayings in an alleged plot by British and Turkish oil tycoons did not halt the communism that holds sway today.

As in most other parts of the Soviet Union, traditional ways underwent radical upheaval amid dogged pursuit of industrialization, modern agriculture, universal education and atheism.

The oil that built Baku is drying up. Detuned pumps stand everywhere. Hundreds still functioning extract every available drop, even at the price of marring the view at the Temple of Fire Worshipers, a tourist attraction and ancient center of an Indian sect where an oil pump stands across the street.

To halt the trend that saw annual oil production fall more than 10 percent from 1976 to 1982, the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev urged speedy completion of a plant for manufacturing deep sea drilling platforms to extract sizeable deposits from the Caspian.

Reportedly delayed by a switch from U.S. to European contractors, the plant still is not ready.

Much credit for Azerbaijan's model performance goes to Geidar A. Aliev, the republic's former KGB (secret police) chief and party leader tapped in 1982 to become a Politburo member and first deputy premier in Moscow.

Just as his republic is something of a model for the rest of the Soviet Union, Aliev is an ideal Soviet man.

A native Azeri, Aliev has risen to high office in Moscow via his secret police career and the schooling and promotion the country offers promising Communist Party loyalists.

In the 1970s, when laxity became the fashion elsewhere as Brezhnev's control faltered, Aliev purged corruption.

policeman) who loved his native Azerbaijan and worked hard for it."

He left a land where communism is now so entrenched that the forces that once destroyed the past now are comfortable in preserving it.

Monuments in the ancient walled center of Baku are being restored. At a caravansary restaurant, the wailing, sinewy sound of Azeri music greets guests eating stuffed vine leaves, pilaf and other native dishes.

Other traces of the past are the evident abiding reluctance of men to treat women as full equals and the dominance of the native language amid the Azeris who make up nearly 80 percent of the republic's 6.4 million people.

Lack of modern housing remains a problem in Baku. Though picturesque, many of the one-floor tumbledown houses of the city center lack running water.

Natives say, however, that changes have been vast.

"My daughter (a 14-year-old) pointed to a picture in a book the other day and asked me where it was," one woman said. "I told her it was a mountain village, like the one where I used to spend my summers as a child. You see, our children cannot remember the villages."

Ancient Syrian Village Believed Inhabited 20 Centuries Ago

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer
MAALULA, Syria (AP) — It's only about 30 miles north of bustling Damascus, but the village seems a world apart. You turn off a main highway rising through dusty, brown hills and suddenly a valley green with fields and trees spreads out before you.

The valley leads to Maalula, whose houses cling to the limestone rockface so precipitously they seem almost piled atop each other. Some of the houses are stucco painted a light blue which, set among white-stucco houses and others of rough stone, give the village almost a mosaic appearance.

The oldest houses are built into caves believed inhabited by man as early as the 10th century B.C.

What also makes Maalula distinct is the language the people speak. It is Aramaic, the language spoken by Jesus Christ nearly 2,000 years ago.

The Rev. Michel Zaroura, head of the Greek Catholic Mar Sarkis Monastery here, said that while in most places the language disappeared about 270 A.D., it somehow survived in Maalula.

"The village was an important religious center at the time," the priest explained in an interview.

In addition to religion, there are other reasons readily apparent why the language, less guttural than the Arabic also spoken here, would manage to survive in Maalula.

In addition to the Mar Sarkis Monastery, Maalula is the home of the Greek Orthodox Convent of St. Tekla, and Zaroura related a legend about the woman saint and how the village got its name.

He said that St. Tekla, a student of St. Paul, was being persecuted by her father for having converted to Christianity from paganism. She tried to flee but ran into the limestone mountain Maalula is built against. Suddenly an opening appeared in the mountain and she made her escape.

Maalula means "entrance" in Aramaic.

The Convent of St. Tekla is partly built into a cave, and Zaroura said the building dated to the 1st Christian century. Water drips from the cave into a small trough, which has a cup attached to it by a small chain.

"The water is said to have healthful properties," Zaroura.

The priest said his own monastery, named for Mar Sarkis (St. Sergius), was built in the 4th century. Mar Sarkis was a Syrian serving as a Roman soldier who was tortured and executed near the end of the 3rd century when it was learned he had secretly converted to Christianity, Zaroura said.

He added that the monastery's site was believed to be that of a pagan temple earlier and that wood from one door in the monastery was tested and found to be 3,000 years old.

Most of the building's doors are only about four feet high, said to be so built both to give the monks humility and as a defense against invaders.

The monastery church, built in the shape of a Greek cross, has walls of rough stone and a dome that is white stucco inside. Dusty crystal chandeliers with electric bulbs illuminate gold painted icons and crosses inlaid with various woods and mother of pearl.

Zaroura walked from one icon to another, dismissing some as recent, describing others as "very old, very valuable."

Later, as he explained the Mar

Sarkis' history, he served tiny glasses of a dark red, very sweet wine made at the monastery.

The only Western language Zaroura speaks is French. But he brought out tapes he had made of a brief lecture in more than half a dozen languages — among them, English, Hungarian, and Russian.

He said he wrote out a script in Arabic, then with the help of native speakers, painstakingly memorized in each language his short history of Maalula and Aramaic.

The ancient language was spoken throughout Southwest Asia from about 900 B.C. until the end of the 3rd century A.D. The biblical books of Daniel and Ezra were originally written in it, and Zaroura's tapes feature an Aramaic recitation of the Lord's Prayer. The rhythm is similar to that of an English recitation of the prayer, which begins "Our Father," and was taught by Jesus to his disciples.

Today Maalula and the nearby villages of Bakha and Jubadin are the only known places where Aramaic is generally spoken. Its 4,000 residents are mostly Greek Catholic. Aramaic survives in small pockets elsewhere, especially among the elderly. For example, the language is used ritually by the elders of a dwindling community of Syrian Orthodox Christians in Jerusalem.

Maalula's isolation, at a time when few tourists visit Syria, was apparent in that a reporter's search for almost an hour produced only one English speaker, a boy of about 9.

"I am fine," the boy said. "How are you?"

When asked in English if he could speak Aramaic, he replied, "I am fine. How are you?" — apparently exhausting his vocabulary in English, if not in Aramaic.

12TH CENTURY LETTER — Dr. Stefan Reu of the Cambridge University Library holds a page, left, from a 12th century letter in Hebrew and an 11th century Hebrew Bible recovered from a dusty room in a Cairo synagogue. The writings were pieced together from scraps of paper and other writings, including family letters, household accounts and children's drawings, sacred texts, forms of worship and eyewitness accounts of the Crusader conquest of the Holy Land. (AP Laserphoto by John Redman)

UNESCO Crisis Made Worse By Britain Joining U.S.

By HARRY DUNPHY Associated Press Writer PARIS (AP) — Britain's decision to join the United States in threatening withdrawal from UNESCO unless reforms are made deepens the crisis facing the U.N. agency...

One Western delegate, who spoke Thursday on condition that he not be named, said the decisions of two founding members to withdraw from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization was especially significant.

"In this situation, one plus one means an awful lot more than two," he said. "There will have to be a re-examination of possibilities in Washington and European capitals."

Geoffrey Howe, Britain's foreign secretary, said Thursday that his country would pull out of the 161-nation organization unless management and budget reforms are made by the end of 1985.

UNESCO's director general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal, has been gambling the agency could survive the U.S. withdrawal set for the end of this year, even though the United States pays 25 percent of UNESCO's budget.

Britain, the United States, the Netherlands, and other Western countries have criticized the organization as being overly political, badly managed and often anti-Western.

Delegates said Britain's decision will put pressure on the Netherlands, Denmark, Switzerland, West Germany and other Western nations to go along.

Like the British, the Dutch and Danish governments sent letters to M'Bow during the summer calling for reforms to prevent UNESCO from plunging into a crisis from which it might never recover.

However, a Dutch foreign ministry spokeswoman said: "We are not considering withdrawing now and we are still cautiously optimistic about UNESCO. We still think that improvements can be made."

The United States was assessed about 25 percent of UNESCO's two-year budget of $374.4 million for 1984-85, but has agreed to pay only $46.8 million for 1984.

"We have not been satisfied that value for money has been obtained," Howe said. "Nor were we satisfied that the developing world has been getting value from (UNESCO)."

He noted that a UNESCO general conference has been scheduled for Sofia, Bulgaria, next October and he said it would "have a key part to play" in reforms.

During its autumn meeting the 51-nation Executive Board agreed to put a ceiling on UNESCO spending in the 1986-87 budget. This was one of the major demands of the United States and other Western countries who charge UNESCO does not show fiscal restraint.

But resolutions calling for UNESCO to put less emphasis on or eliminate controversial programs and improve personnel, monitoring and budget practices were put off until the spring session.

UNESCO programs on communications, human rights and peace and disarmament often have led to ideological confrontations. Western media organizations have expressed the fear that discussion of "protection" of journalists in member countries would lead to licensing, effectively restricting their activities.

UNESCO spokesman Dileep Padgaonkar said the organization regretted Britain's decision "all the more because it was on United Kingdom territory that the organization's founding charter was signed 39 years ago."

Howe's announcement in the House of Commons on Thursday was criticized by former Prime Minister Edward Heath, a Conservative like the current prime minister, Margaret Thatcher. He said Britain would lose influence over the organization if it quit.

Thanksgiving Day Flooding In Fla.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Strong winds and nearly 8 inches of rain forced residents of two trailer parks to head for higher ground, snapped power lines and made traffic accident rates go "bonkers" as South Florida sloshed through Thanksgiving Day.

The National Weather Service in West Palm Beach reported 7.53 inches of rain for the 30-hour period ending at 1 a.m. today, said forecaster Andrew Stern.

"I don't think we'll have more in the way of heavy amounts, but it's going to rain a light rain on and off," said meteorologist Ron White at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

Red Cross workers set up a temporary shelter for residents of two trailer parks in suburban West Palm Beach driven from their homes by flooding.

"This morning, the water was up to the second step outside," said Tom O'Donald, a resident of the Seminole Colony trailer park. "A little more and it would have come into the trailer."

Jerry Krinn, a Red Cross disaster services coordinator for Palm Beach County, said most residents of the parks returned home late Thursday.

High waves grabbed at the shore along part of State Road A1A in Palm Beach where sections of the highway routinely wash out during heavy weather. Auto accident rates were up Wednesday because of the rain.

"It was crazy ... it went bonkers," said Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Lee Ann Pender in St. Lucie County.

About 1,200 Merritt Island residents were without electricity for about two hours Thursday morning when winds gusting to 25 mph blew tree limbs onto power lines, said Florida Power & Light spokesman Jim Rentz.

"It doesn't take a strong wind when the limbs get wet," Rentz said.

Four Die In House Fire

By The Associated Press Four members of an Illinois family died in a house fire that began in a chair, and a fire in a mobile home in Michigan killed two young brothers, authorities said.

Fire broke out early Thanksgiving morning at a house in East Peoria, Ill., killing a couple and two children, authorities said. A third child was in critical condition early today.

The couple and an infant son were sleeping in a front bedroom of the single-story home when fire broke out in a living room chair, said East Peoria Fire Chief Terry Brewer. The other children were sleeping in a rear bedroom.

Officials were investigating the cause of the fire.

About 25 firefighters extinguished the blaze in about 10 minutes, and most of the damage was confined to the living room and one bedroom, Brewer said.

A Toll-Free Line For Confused Cooks

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of confused cooks were spared a variety of potential Thanksgiving Day embarrassments by a toll-free turkey Talk-Line set up by meatpackers Swift & Co. to give last-minute advice to pilgrims in the kitchen.

Forty-four experts on the talk-line answered questions such as, "Is it O.K. to thaw a turkey in the dryer?" and "Were this year's turkeys bred to produce only white meat?"

In the first 15 days of this year's program, which began Nov. 5, the talk-line had straightened out 28,000 confused cooks. Last year, 40,000 people sought advice during a seven-week program.

"We're like little talking turkeys," said advisor Sonja Stahl.

Pamlico Plantation
Ever notice how wildlife picks the best places to live - the quiet places with lots of trees and clear water. We like those places, too, so we made a deal with some of the local inhabitants on a secluded cove of Broad Creek along the Pamlico River. If they'd share their home with us, we'd keep it clean and beautiful and add a few extras for people.
Extra's like a waterfront clubhouse and pool, tennis courts and trails for biking and jogging. We added a security guard and a marina. We built cedar clad townhomes and sculpted homesites in the woodlands. And still, the ducks swim and deer roam. They approve. You will, too.
Pamlico Plantation near Washington, N.C. - secure, secluded, luxurious. Homesites from $19,000. Townhomes from $92,500.
