Buyers Hungry For 'Outrageous' Items

NEW YORK (AP) — Gerry Grinberg came to America 20 years ago with what he calls "an outrageous plan" to make a living selling Piaget watches for $2,000 to $3,000.

Now Grinberg's North American Watch Co. is selling tens of thousands of Movado, Piaget, Concord and Corum watches each year at prices beginning at $500 and ranging up to $3 million for a one-of-a-kind platinum watch blazing with 87.87 carats of diamonds.

Such success is not uncommon at the "upscale" end of the retail market. WIth a sharp rise in disposable income, Americans have developed a growing appetite for the outrageously expensive — whether in ball-point pens, Swiss chocolates, watches or sporty cars.

The $3 million watch is still waiting for a buyer, but Grinberg said North American's sales doubled from 1975 to 1976, grew sixfold in 1978, and will be lapping at $100 million this year.

"There's an example of explosive growth," said Fabian Linden of the Conference Board, a business-financed economic research group.

Linden said sales in the upscale market have been enormous in the past few years. "If you take your major retailing disasters of the past years, they are mostly low-end companies — not top of the line," he said.

"Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman Marcus, I. Magnin, Bonwit Teller — the specialty stores — are doing particularly well during this period of affluence," said Stanley Marcus, former chairman of Neiman Marcus department stores.

Business at Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc.'s specialty stores, including Neiman Marcus and Bergdorf Goodman, grew 25 percent over the year through November, company spokesman Bill Dombrowski said.

That's a dozen percentage points ahead of the average for department stores.

Greenville Stores Expect Better Than Usual Holiday Sales In Christmas Season

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville merchants should have good Christmas-season sales — better than last year — if a survey of stores is any indication.

Herman Johnson, manager of K-Mart, said, "I think they (sales) will be better than last year. All indications are it's going to be a banner Christmas."

Although a number of new retail stores have opened in the past 12 months, Johnson said "our traffic is just as good before." He added that there is "a good base of consumers" in the Greenville area. "The Greenville market is becoming a regional shopping area in eastern North Carolina. That's helping us."

Belk-Tyler manager Greenville Banks said the prospects for the Christmas season "look great. I think we're going to have an even better holiday this year than last year."

Because of new retailers, "I think the whole area will do better," Banks said. "We're attracting shoppers from outside of Pitt County. Anytime you bring more people to town, it means more money for us."

Banks said as usual, clothing is a big item this year, as well as "big-ticket items such as microwave ovens and furniture."

"I feel like it's just going to be a tremendous season," he said.

Doug Locklear, manager of Nichols' Discount City, said "the general trend now" is that sales are going to be up from last year, although Christmas buying "started a little bit later" than in 1983.

Locklear also suggested that, "based on out-of-county checks and charges," Greenville is drawing more shoppers from out of the county.

The best selling items, according to Locklear, are "hard-to-get toy items" such as Cabbage Patch Dolls.

J.C. Penney Co. manager Bill Hopper said, "I think at The Plaza and at Penney's it will be the best Christmas we've ever had," because the mall being enclosed has produced "an added incentive for customers to come to The Plaza ... to see the new stores."

According to Hopper, "There's more merchandise in the store than ever before and sales are really good. I can see ... a 15 percent increase, a good 15 percent increase," in sales this Christmas season.

Having two enclosed malls in the city now, Hopper said, will "entice customers to come into Greenville," where there "are over 100 stores in two major malls."

Suggesting that shoppers are not as price conscious this year as in the past, Hopper said customers "are looking for quality goods and fashions."

"We've found in our store ... customers are pleased with ... name-brand lines. We've dropped a lot of lines ... dropped toys, heaters, hunting apparel ... expanded fashions and it's really paid off. The response is overwhelming in our favor."

Hot items, according to Hopper, are those such as "women's sweaters, women's boots have been big ... and home lines, decor items for homes have been exceptionally good."

"We're looking for a good Christmas at Sears Roebuck and Company," according to manager Joe Pochowicz. "Business has been good through October and November."

At Sears, which opened at 8 a.m. Friday and Saturday to provide "extended shopping service" for customers, Pochowicz said, "microwaves, anything in electronics ... VCRs, small radios, dishwashers" are selling well, as are "bicycles, always a fantastic item." He said, too, that "sweaters are doing greater than normal.

"We're looking for a good Christmas ... a super season."

Pitt Democrats Say Jordan Will Be Good For Party

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

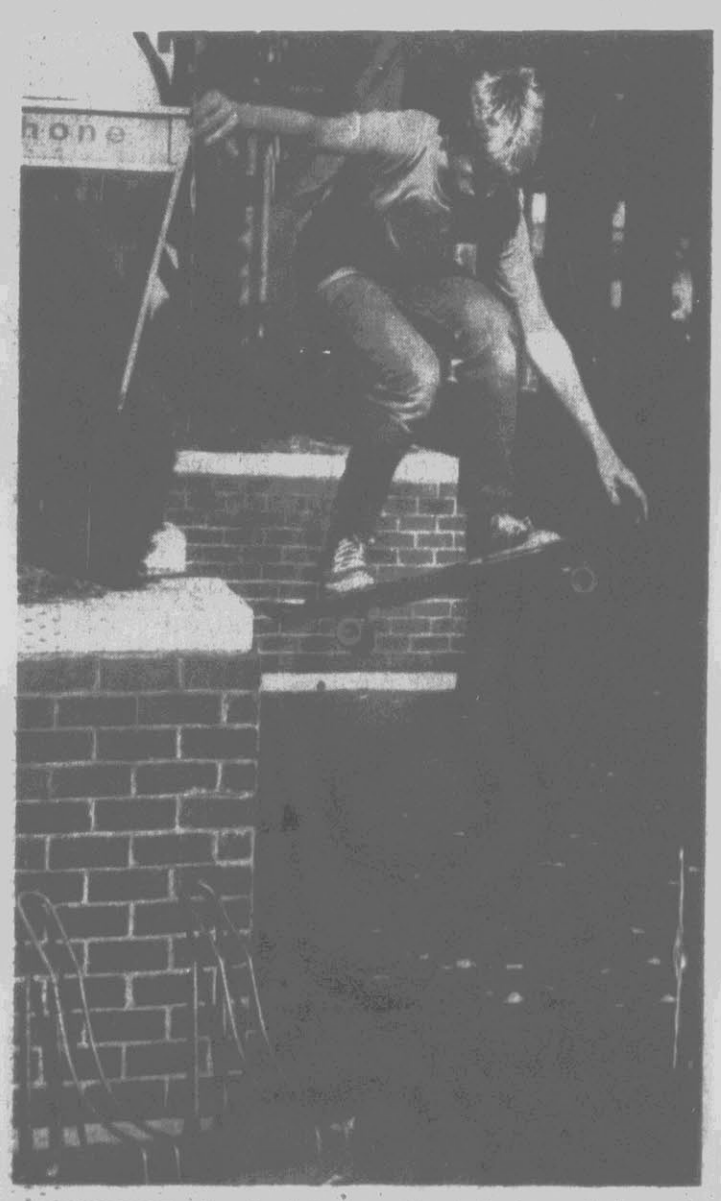

Pitt County Democratic leaders say they think Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan will be an able lieutenant governor as well as a strong leader of the state Democratic Party.

Kenneth Dews, Pitt County campaign manager for Gov. Jim Hunt's losing effort for the U.S. Senate, said, "I think he (Jordan) is ideally suited by his business experience and his service in the Senate. He has run a successful lumber business and has served well in the Senate. I spent a considerable amount of time with him when I briefed him on natural resources as a member of the State Goals and Policy Board. I found him to be an intelligent person with a good grasp of the needs and the possibilities for our state. He's going to do a good job as lieutenant governor and he's definitely going to lead the Democratic Party forcefully and well."

Carl Darden, who served as Jordan's Pitt County campaign chairman, said he sees Jordan as "absolutely the person best suited to return unity of spirit to North Carolina Democrats."

"Our party was extremely divided by the 10-person primary race for governor," he said, "and there's a lot of healing to be done. Bob's race with Carl Stewart was a hard-fought

Grifton Boy Loses His Fight

A 6-year-old Grifton boy who underwent two transplants to combat a rare bone morrow disease has died at Pitt County Memorial Hospital of possible liver failure.

Dr. Abbas Emami said the tousel-haired youngster, Adam Potter, died Friday. His plight and that of his family had touched much of Pitt and Lenoir counties in recent months as the youngster went through medical centers here and on the West Coast.

"He had a long, hard fight of seven to eight months," Dr. Emami said. "The whole family went through so much over the past few months. It's sad to see it had to end up this way."

Emami said Adam's death may have been caused by liver failure.

The son of Harold Potter Jr. and Jo Anne Potter, Adam had returned Monday to Pitt County after seven months at Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle, where the boy underwent two bone marrow transplants from his father May 21 and July 19.

"He had been a little weaker, but just the last few days he had really gotten weak," said Mrs. Potter.

Emami said Adam's doctors in

Armed Soldiers Hijack Somali Jet To Ethiopia, Threaten Passengers

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Three armed Somali soldiers hijacked a Somali jetliner with 130 people aboard Saturday, beating up the pilot and wounding a security guard in a gun battle during the takeover, the official news media reported.

The hijackers directed the Somali Airlines Boeing 707 to Addis Ababa, where they released some passengers and then threatened to blow up the plane and the remaining hostages unless their demands were met.

The government's Ethiopian News Agency said the demands included the release of 13 political prisoners in Somalia and stays of execution for seven young men scheduled to be executed Sunday for political crimes in Somalia.

Ethiopian state television reported the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane at midnight Saturday (4 p.m. EST) unless the demands were met. But the state news agency later said the deadline had been extended until noon Sunday (4 a.m. EST).

"They agreed to extend the deadline early this morning at the request and persuasion of the Ethopian authorities who have been negotiating with them continuously since the Somali airliner was forced to land at Bole International Airport" near Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian News Agency reported.

ENA said the negotiations secured "the release of 19 passengers and three crew members. These are four children between three and ten years of age, 15 women, the security man wounded aboard the plane, the captain of the airliner who was beaten up for refusing to obey the instructions of the hijackers, and the copilot, who was ill."

Without the captain and the first officer, it was not known whether there were crew members aboard qualified to fly the plane even if the hijackers wanted to leave the side-taxiway tarmac where the craft was ringed by security men and armored cars.

A Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry told his embassy the hijackers also had threatened to begin killing Somali passengers one by one.

ENA said said "food and provisions" were delivered to the remaining passengers, crew and hijackers aboard the plane.

The agency reported there were indications that the passengers included one American, two Italians, two South Yemen nationals, one North Yemen national, one Egyptian diplomat and one United Nations' staff member, but their names were not given.

ENA added: "The demands of the hijackers have been handed by the (Ethopian) minister of foreign affairs to a representative of the Egyptian Embassy in Addis Ababa, which is looking after the interest of Somalia in Ethopia."

Somalia and Ethopia, bitter enemies on the Horn of Africa, do not have diplomatic relations.

In Mogadishu, the Somali capital, the official Radio Mogadishu broadcast a statement early Sunday saying the government had contacted "various embassies about this action of banditry and terrorism against the civilian passengers, since this terrorist action is in breach of international agreements covering civilians."

It did not say what the government would do about the hijackers' demands.

The aircraft was on a flight from Mogadishu to Jidda, Saudi Arabia, via Berbera in northern Somalia, when it was commandeered.

Frank Brown, Ex-Chancellor At WCU, Dies

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Frank H. Brown Jr., 69, a former state legislator, lobbyist and educator at Western Carolina University, died Saturday after a lengthy illness.

Brown began his career at WCU as coordinator of forestry and agricultural programs. Later, he became professor of chemistry, assistant to the president, vice president and vice chancellor for administration, vice chancellor for development and extended services and acting president and acting chancellor.

He retired from full-time duties in 1976 but continued until his death as special assistant for legislative relations to University of North Carolina President William Friday and special assistant to WCU Chancellor Myron L. Coulter.

Brown was a state representative from Jackson County in the General Assembly sessions of 1949, 1951 and 1953.

"Frank Brown was one of North Carolina's distinguished public servants," said William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system. "His great effort to improve the well-being of our Western citizens never ended."

A native of Cullowhee, Brown was the son of the late Frank Hamilton and Hattie Norton Brown. His father joined the WCU faculty as professor of chemistry in 1908. His grandfather, R. Hamilton Brown, was one of the nine founding trustees of WCU in 1889.

Brown joined the faculty in 1953. His death marked the first time since 1889 that a member of the Brown family had not been an official or faculty member of the university.

Solons Say Not Creating Barrier

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic legislative leaders say they will not try to keep Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin from seeking a second term — even if they seek repeal of the 1976 Constitutional amendment permitting succession.

The Democrats told The News and Observer of Raleigh that any change in the current law, which allows the governor and lieutenant governor to seek two consecutive terms, should take effect in 1992.

That view was endorsed by House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison; Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan; Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham; and Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

"I have heard enough discussion to know the bill will be introduced (in the 1985 legislative session)," said Jordan, a potential challenger to Martin in 1988.

Duarte To Pass Up Second Round Of Talks On Peace

By RAUL BELTRHAN
United Press International

Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte said Saturday he will not attend the second round of peace talks with leftist rebels next week in accordance with an agreement reached during the first session last month.

In Nicaragua, President-elect Daniel Ortega charged U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels attacked and destroyed seven privately owned coffee production centers in the northern province of Jinotega.

At the first round of the historic peace talks, Duarte and guerrilla represenatives issued a statement pledging both sides would meet again in the second half of November.

"Peace does not come in one, three or more meetings," Duarte told United Press International, adding that "expectations reached in La Palma (at the peace talks) would be processed in this second meeting to establish the levels of analysis that are going to be made in consecutive meetings until achieving peace."

"We agreed with the guerrillas in the meeting in La Palma that a commission would be established in which there would be four government representatives and four of those who have taken up arms," Duarte said.

A Salvadoran government spokesman said a top-level commission would represent Duarte at next week's talks. San Salvador's Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas is to announce Sunday the time and location of the second session.

Duarte said the meeting would focus on "preparatory work in the area of mechanics and in the area of discussions of the offer of peace that I have presented and any counter-offer that they can make."

On the battlefront, the army said 12 guerrillas had been killed in the eastern war zone of Morazan, Usulutan and San Miguel provinces in the latest fighting in the 5-year-old civil war.

Officers said guerrillas occupied and blew up a coffee processing plant in El Tazumal in rare fighting in the western province of San Ana, which has been spared most of the civil war violence.

The official said rebels later clashed with army troops near the town of Chalchuapa, 40 miles west of San Salvador, and said the guerrillas captured an unspecified number of soldiers on leave and killed them. No further details were immediately available.

Ortega did not give a date or details of the raids by rebels of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, known as the FDN.

Film Mogul Demanding Assurances

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Movie mogul Dino De Laurentiis says he might cut production at his Wilmington studios unless Gov.-elect Jim Martin reassures him that North Carolina will support its burgeoning film industry.

In an interview published Saturday, De Laurentiis said he fears Martin might abolish the North Carolina Film Commission. The producer already has shelved plans to build a "super" sound stage at the Wilmington site of North Carolina Film Corp., a subsidiary of Deno De Laurentiis Corp.

"I postponed it because I want to see if the attitude is the same with the next governor," De Laurentiis said.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who leaves office in January, was a strong supporter of De Laurentiis' projects.

"I want to see if the new governor, the new political people in North Carolina, have the same feeling about the studio in North Carolina," De Laurentiis said. "If the politics don't change, we are pleased to be there."

Martin said he has no plans to scrap the film commission.

"North Carolina is delighted to have the De Laurentiis studio," he said. "They have already made an enormous investment in Wilmington. We want to encourage them to move forward."

Seattle had sent him home because they recognized that he was not responding to treatment.

"My feeling was that they knew that he was not in good shape and knew eventually he was going to die," the doctor said. "And the parents knew it, too, and it was their joint decision to bring him home to North Carolina to die."

Adam had myelofibrosis, a scarring of the normal marrow space in the bones where blood is made. Myelofibrosis is extremely rare in children.

In Adam's case, doctors also suspected an unusual complication of chronic myelogenous lukemia, one of the rarest forms of lukemia that is characterized by rapid proliferation of cancerous white blood cells.

one, but there was never any negativeness and Carl quickly pledged his support to Bob after the primary and Bob gladly accepted it.

"It will be up to Bob to bring unity about and he's proved he's someone who can do it."

Dews said he feels sure that Jim Hunt will continue to play an active part in the life of the party, but that he is more than willing to "turn the reins over to Bob Jordan."

The two men have always been good friends and political allies, he said. Dews predicted Hunt will "offer Bob all the aid and assistance he can."

Betty Speir, long a leader of the state Democratic Party, said, "It is natural that Bob Jordan should assume the leadership of the Democratic Party. I know he will prove to be effective both in his style of leadership and in his identification of the issues important to the majority of North Carolinians. He encompasses a view that is both conservative and progressive and should be able to provide a new type of leadership for North Carolina."

Sen. Vernon White said, "I think Bob Jordan has a great deal of ability and will be a great lieutenant governor. I served with him in the Senate for as long as he was there and I know that he knows the legislative process well, who he's working with and whom he can depend on and whom he can't.

"I also think he has the potential of being a strong leader of the party, but he's going to have to prove himself, because he's never had that role before. I believe he can do it," White said.

In The Area

Regional Meetings

The fourth in a series of regional meetings to inform the citizens of North Carolina on University of North Carolina system activities will take place in Greenville Dec. 4 at the Mendenhall Student Center.

The program, with the theme Partners in Progress, will feature a multimedia slide show to provide a close-up look at the activities and accomplishments of the 16 campuses of the university and its other institutions.

Letters of invitation have been sent to known alumni of UNC institutions in the Greenville area. However the meeting is open to all interested persons.

The evening will begin with a light buffet at 6:30 p.m., followed by the program at 7:30 p.m. There is a $5 per person charge to cover costs.

The series is being sponsored by the UNC Board of Governors and President William Friday. Chairman for the UNC Board of Governor's Steering Committee for the Greenville regional meeting is William Dees of Goldsboro.

Medical District Land Use Panel Is Vitally Needed

The City Council has taken the first steps toward naming a Medical District Land Use Committee which will be charged with making recommendations for development of the area bounded by Memorial Drive, N.C. 43, State Road 1204 and the Norfolk Southern Railroad. (This area embracing Pitt County Memorial Hospital and other medical facilities has been controversial insofar as rezoning is concerned.)

The committee will be composed of nine members — representing a bipartisan, cross-section of the community — who will be asked to make a four-to-six month study considering zoning, options for rezoning and a determination of the size area which should be involved in medical zoning. Its findings will go to the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission with recommendations to the City Council for final consideration.

The creation of this committee is an appropriate move, but what will be even more important is how committee members approach the task before them. Members should concern themselves with orderly development of the area around the hospital and medical school. First priority should be given to related medical uses.

The citizens of Pitt County and North Carolina have a huge investment in the medical complex and it is certain to grow larger in future years. Thus the Medical District Land Use Committee has a major responsibility to determine that land in the area is used in the best interests of the taxpayers. This important assignment will determine for many years the direction of development in the PCMH area.

Police, Drivers Doing It Right

Greenville has not had a traffic fatality this year.

It's almost like watching a no-hit baseball game in progress — tradition says that nothing is mentioned about it until the game is over.

Chief of Police Ted Holmes says the city's goal now is to make it through December without a fatality, a notable goal. It is difficult to determine when a fatality will come. Sometimes fatalities involve no driver error and are simply a matter of bad timing.

Still city police are doing some things that may be helping. During the first nine months of 1984 traffic citations issued were up by 132 percent. Arrests for driving while impaired increased by 122 percent.

Chief Holmes said these efforts will continue during December. Drivers were also urged to obey speed limits, refrain from driving after drinking and to use seat belts.

Not only can such measures save lives, but they also save injuries and the inconvenience that follows after even a minor wreck.

It takes a combination of strong law enforcement and a public awareness of the need for safe driving to reduce accidents. Apparently we are doing something right this year. Let's continue it.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Santa came to town at The Plaza Friday. The kids, however, found more than Santa!

Old St. Nick has his very own mountain which soars at the east end of the mall. The Merry Old Gent was asleep in his bedroom at the foot of the mountain last week and he awoke Friday morning to take his place on a throne on the west side of his mountain. There he will be the rest of the Christmas season, taking orders from good little kids for toys, nuts, fruits and candies.

There's more to this mountain than just a pile of snow, however. Kids and adults, too, who explore will find a tunnel leading through it. If they follow it — and what kid or adult can resist — they will find a virtual wonderland inside.

The tunnels lead by little rooms which feature Santa's elves at work and some displays of merchandise. The displays can be viewed through windows. Since it is for kids these windows are placed only a few feet off the floor at an ideal viewing level for the youngsters. Adults just have to stoop to view as best as they can.

How did such a structure come to be? Mall Manager and Marketing Director Chuck Milian said it was an idea that originated with Mark Pitney, owner and manager of the leasing company that is part of Pentago Properties, the owner of the mall.

Dubbed Santa's Magic Snow Mountain, it is built of wood and sheet rock and covered with a fire-rated snow. It is 40 feet square at the base and 20 feet high and was built at a cost of $28,000. The mountain sits in a large area that was once an open square before the mall was enclosed. It soars toward a skylight which was built in the roof of the recently reconstructed mall. There are other Santa's mountains but none that features the interior design of this one. The management says it is an original. Because it is an original, Carpenter Decoration — from which the animation was purchased — was helpful in its design. It was built in about a week and a half by Boyd and Associates.

Fortunately the entire display can be disassembled and stored away for use next year. Of course the internal scenes can be changed as desired.

At any rate the kids will find, not only Santa, but an entire mountain at the The Plaza this year. Inside, a small world waits to be explored.

Student Suicides

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Myron Liptzin knows media hyperbole when he sees it.

Liptzin runs the mental health section of the University of North Carolina's student health service. His position makes him a local authority on what is said to be a national crisis: student suicides. In the last year, there has been a spate of highly-publicized suicides for which job and academic pressure have been blamed.

But has Liptzin seen evidence of a higher suicide rate on his campus? "Not at all," he says. "We stay busy," he adds, but students "are more willing to come forward with less serious problems." Grades, it turns out, aren't the killers they're made out to be.

Liptzin's view will probably reassure some people, because stories about suicidal students have surfaced with alarming frequency — especially at the high school level. Last year, there was a string of teenage suicides in a Dallas suburb. Just this month, reports of single or multiple suicides have come from Washington, D.C., as well as mid-size towns in Illinois, Maine and Massachusetts, among other states.

But college campuses have accounted for their share of the death toll. This fall, there have been three suicides and five unsuccessful attempts at the University of Virginia alone; at least seven Georgetown University students have tried to take their own lives. "Suicides Plague College Campuses" was the headline of a front-page Washington Post article of Nov. 12 which linked the purported epidemic to the competition for high marks and job security.

Suicide stories go against the conventional wisdom that students are more upbeat than they've been in years. To a certain extent, media hype has glossed over the new conservatism's less praiseworthy roots in paranoia and greed. Students, like anyone else, defy overgeneralization.

So, too, does suicide. Where college students are concerned, the data are hardly conclusive. No one, in fact, knows the full number of college suicides nationally. Nor do the suspected motives fit some simple pattern.

Mental-healthniks apparently agree that the suicide rate has increased significantly since the mid-1950s, when the first institutional studies were conducted. A suicide explosion at England's Oxford University precipitated a flurry of investigations in America.

But Allen J. Schwartz, chief of the University of Rochester's mental health unit, contends that the rate leveled off during the late 1970s. Schwartz adds that the studies to date have focused on single and often highly selective instutitions. Even then, the results have been mixed, sometimes indicating a lower suicide rate among college students than for the college-age group as a whole.

Agenda

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says he wants to be remembered as the president who gave the government back to the people.

Most Washington observers believe a second-term president has about a year at most to move effectively to translate his mandate into action.

Reagan had no agenda to explain to the people during the campaign, and from the lack of public clamor for specifics, none apparently was needed. Suffice to say that the president had billed himself as an anti-governmentalist, who would like to eliminate many of the programs that have offered a support system for so many groups in this country, and not necessarily only the deprived and disadvantaged.

Since he hopes to reduce the $200 billion federal deficit with domestic spending cuts and hopes for economic expansion to increase revenues, rather than new taxes, the president is eyeing programs that have strong constituencies, so he will have a fight on his hands.

Reagan is considering asking Congress to cut back farm price and income suports when it writes a new farm bill next year. The proposal being floated by budget officials would reduce the level of price-support loans on major crops and cut the target price on direct subsidy payments to farmers.

Another way being suggested to bring about cost reductions would be to restrict health benefits and hospital care for veterans to service connected ailments. Currently at the age of 65, millions of World War II veterans are automatically eligible for health care on request without regard to financial need.

Some of the proposals being batted around would place a nominal charge for health-care services on veterans. Others would make medical care contingent on financial need or curb benefits for veterans seeking treatment for disabilities unrelated to their military service.

Neither farmers nor veterans, two special interest groups wooed by Reagan in his re-election campaign, have been known to fade silently into the night when their interests were threatened.

Many of the proposals for cuts are being circulated as trial balloons to see how high they will fly.

Although Social Security and military spending are sacroscant under Reagan pledges, there are reports that the administration is contemplating big cuts in Medicaid, grant programs for low-income energy assistance, environmental protection and creation of work-incentive programs for persons on welfare. Much publicity is being given these days to the Heritage Foundation report that recommended reforming all aspects of government and giving private enterprise a b!g slice of it in the doing.

A Large Pair Of Shoes

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans will hold their organizational meeting on Nov. 28. The first order of business will be to elect a new majority leader to succeed retiring Howard Baker of Tennessee. Baker is not a very big fellow — he stands maybe 5 feet 7 — but he is leaving a large pair of shoes to be filled.

One thinks back to other majority leaders of recent years — Bob Byrd of West Virginia, Mike Mansfield of Montana, Lyndon Johnson of Texas. Each was effective in his own way. Johnson by brute force of will. Mansfield by gentle persuasion. Byrd by shrewd bargaining. Those of us who have watched Howard Baker from the press gallery for the past four years might credit his remarkable success to a single quality: patience.

Baker has demonstrated other fine qualities in the post — a lively sense of humor, an intuitive understanding of his colleagues' political necessities, and a surpassing knowledge of the Senate's rules of parliamentary procedure. But patience, the kind of patience for which old Job at last won salvation, has been the characteristic we have most admired.

Job, you will recall, suffered from boils from head to foot; he lost his sheep, his camels, his oxen, his sons and his daughters, and still he remained steadfast in his faith. So, too, with Baker and the Senate. There were times Baker had to suffer worse than boils — he had to suffer, for example, the insufferable vanity of Senator Obnoxious, D-Ohio — and he had to suffer the whims and impulses and stubbornness of others in the chamber. He never lost his temper, at least in public, and he never stopped trying to make the democratic process work.

Someone asked Baker what was his greatest achievement as majority leader, and that was his answer: He made the place work.

"We have shown, once again," he said in his farewell address, "that in the clamorous, cumbersome, chaotic way we do business here, we do it in the people's name and with the people's consent, and in a manner that reflects with astonishing clarity the passion and conviction and ultimate common sense of the American people themselves."

Baker took the occasion of his farewell to say some things about the Senate that carry special weight because of his experience. Surely there must be a better way to do the Senate's business "so that the months we pass at leisure in the beginning of a congressional session need not be redeemed in long hours of agony and turmoil at the end."

Such remonstrances are heard whenever a Congress nears adjournment. Baker acknowledged, but nothing ever is done about the chaos, "and I fear we are becoming accustomed to this accursed system when that is the last thing we should do." Senate procedures demand reform, Baker was saying, but the situation demands something more: It demands a change of heart. "We are in danger of losing the spirit of civility that can sustain us in times of political stress and legislative logjams."

"The Senate cannot fight a guerrilla war over every issue all the time. We cannot be sniping at one another and talking issues to death while the essential work of government goes undone. ... If we cannot resurrect the spirit of chivalry that once reigned here, at least must restore some semblance of civility and commonality of purpose."

That is about as close as Baker ever came to speaking severely to his colleagues. He kept the Senate's affection and respect because he never broke his word and he always found time to listen. Said Lawton Chiles of Florida: "He is, above all, a reasonable man." No matter who the Republicans name as majority leader next week — Dole of Kansas, or Lugar of Indiana, or McClure of Idaho — Baker's successor will have a high example to follow.

What's ahead for Howard Baker? He told the Senate that he believes it possible to be simultaneously both a public servant and a private citizen. "I intend to show my abidingly skeptical colleagues by my own example how to be a useful 'public citizen.'"

"I believe there is life after the Senate," he said, "and I intend to live that life to the full."

That farewell may not have been exactly an announcement of his intention to run for the presidency in 1988, but it had a nice ring. If he does make the race, he should know that his four years as majority leader won him a world of respect and made him a host of friends.

To the editor:

Your readers might be interested in knowing that the Jimson weed featured on page 7 of the Tuesday, Nov. 20, issue of the Daily Reflector is highly toxic. While it may well be "a favorite for inclusion in arrangements of dried seeds and grasses," it may also present a danger for young children who may ingest parts of the plant. All parts of the plant are poisonous, containing scopolamine and other alkaloids.

Jimson weed, also known as Datura, devil's apple and loco weed, has a long history of use and abuse. The name Jimson weed comes from an incident of mass poisoning that occurred in 1676 in Jamestown, Va., when Datura leaves were included along with other greens in British soldiers' dinner salad. Datura has been used medically and as an intoxicant by many cultures for many years. It has been smoked, eaten and applied as an ointment. Its active ingredients can be found in a number of modern drugs, including some over-the-counter medicines. It should be kept out of children's reach, like any other medicine or poison.

To the editor:

In response to Ray Masten's letter in the Public Forum, there are several points to make.

First, Ray says Jesse Helms and Jerry Falwell will "have a hand in" making selections for the Supreme Court. I think Ray is correct! But, if so, that will put the president and Rev. Falwell in the realm of lying, for both have denied Falwell will make, have a veto over, etc., any of Reagan's appointments to the court.

I appreciate Ray's expressions of sympathy to me, John Clark and others. He can send me flowers c/o Route 3, Box 161-C, Greenville. I need all the sympathy I can get. I believe the same goes for a majority of the citizens of Pitt County.

In his letter, Ray admitted to a condition I didn't expect him to confess (ignorant and uninformed). Seriously, most of us are ignorant and uninformed, in a real sense. Until Ray or I have waddled about for nine months with an "accidental" pregnancy in our bellies, we can't fully appreciate the plight of the female who is in that predicament, whether married, single, rich or poor. If Ray's expectations are fulfilled, we'll simply go back to the day of self-induced or back-alley abortions, except for the well-to-do, who will be able to buy first-class care and secrecy. No law which is without very broad public support is worth writing; and even then, abortions of one sort or another will continue. Let us pray that governmental policies of this administration will show as much concern for young children, old people and the handicapped as it shows for the unborn fetus. They are generally as "helpless" as the fetus.

In all seriousness, my pastor wisely advised that now is the time to pray fervently for the winners that they may be the leaders the world needs. I can second that and say let's get on with the work that needs to be done.

To the editor:

I was delighted to see the letter from Bonnie Korta, Family Life Council, Nov. 18, with its outstanding suggestions for "celebrating the family.".

In 1980 a small but dedicated group of Greenville childbirth educators and parents saw a great need in our area for support and encouragement for the demanding job of parenting. They began the ground work for establishing a local chapter of the national organization of the American Society for Psycholprophylaxis in Obstetrics/Lamaze. The goals of the organization are to support preparation for childbirth (Lamaze method), the ideals of family-centered maternity care, and education and support for parenting.

We felt the many new people coming into our area without benefit of extended family support, as well as local expectant and new parents, needed a good resource and referral organization and a place to get together with other parents to learn and share in the process of parenting.

A.S.P.O./Lamaze has a unique governing board represented equally by physicians, childbirth educators and parents, thus creating an atmosphere for sharing and rapport among these groups.

Amng the programs we have started are a bi-monthly mothers and babies group with infant stimulation sessions and time for discussion and sharing, a monthly parents' night with speakers and social time following, a resource pamphlet for expectant and new parents in Pitt County, a bi-monthly educational and resource newsletter, and a telephone contact line called Dial-A-Mom for peer counseling and referral information.

Much progress has been made toward family-centered maternity care at Pitt County Memorial Hospital with the opening of two homelike labor-delivery-recovery rooms with "borning" beds. With input from A.S.P.O. members and P.C.M.H. staff, these changes came about, along with sibling classes and visitation, 24-hour rooming-in, early discharge, and fathers in for Cesareans. We have had much support from area physicians and professionals and from the hospital.

We work with childbirth educators and perinatal professinals regionally to provide good continuing education opportunities. We welcome all area parents and professionals to join us.

Out Of This World

WASHINGTON (AP) — In-depth questioning of two relatives, 14 acquaintances and a woman at a fast-food takeout counter indicates that three people in 17 want to travel aboard the space shuttle.

Extrapolated to the nation as a whole, that suggests millions of Americans are ready to sign up for a trip out of this world. Up to 100 of them might be United States senators, but that's a consideration for later.

The poll result could change if one of the respondents decides that becoming a cement truck driver when she grows up might be more fun than being an astronaut.

Officially, the government is committed to making space flight available to the most people. NASA's mission calls for "the widest practicable and appropriate dissemination of information concerning NASA's activities and the results thereof."

For years, the space agency claimed it wants people who can "communicate" the experience of space flight. Twenty-three years as a spacefaring nation has taught us that astronauts are not among this species. It is as if the ability to be inarticulate in space is a requirement, like being at least 5 feet, 4 inches tall.

Through last week's landing of Discovery, 84 individual Americans have left Earth to circle the globe or fly to the moon. The sum total of their reaction can be summed up in four words: "Fantastic. Beautiful. Fantastically beautiful."

So, it was said, the best candidates for space flight were professional communicators — journalists, artists, novelists and poets. Before he retired, Walter Cronkite would have been a shoo-in. Singer John Denver is an applicant. Comedian Bob Hope, at 81, is on NASA's official list of "prominent Americans who will be considered."

A scholarly panel decided that plain folk can fly without undue damage to shuttle or mission; that with a little bit of training, space flight isn't stressful and you don't have to be as fit as an astronaut to get past NASA's doctors.

That out of the way, NASA set about deciding who would go first and space-writing journalists got set to apply.

But President Reagan burst that bubble by announcing on Aug. 27 that "I'm directing NASA to begin a search in all of our elementary and secondary schools" to choose a teacher.

That may have pleased the nation's two million school teachers as overdue recognitions but got little applause from journalists. Inside NASA, not for publication, it was said journalists were passed up because choosing one would anger too many others.

While the agency publicly was formulating its selection system for "The NASA Teacher in Space Project," NASA privately was yielding to a persistent and powerful applicant for flight.

Sen. Jake Garn, a Republican from Utah who chairs a subcommittee that oversees NASA spending, had asked for a shuttle berth almost every time space agency officials came before him.

On the day after the election, he announced at a press conference that he had been picked for an upcoming flight. "Obviously, with the amount of training I have, I will not be a mission commander or pilot," Garn said modestly.

NASA now was forced to explain the invitation to Garn, and how senator and teacher could both be the first citizen-astronaut.

For the first question, the agency could not very well come out and say "he has us by the purse strings." Instead, administrator James M. Beggs told Garn "given your NASA oversight responsibilities, we think it appropriate that you consider making an inspection tour and flight aboard the shuttle."

The second question also required some verbal dexterity. Patrick Templeton, charged with the agency's external affairs, said the teacher still would be first, but probably not ahead of Garn.

It's a matter of roles, according to Templeton: "observation versus management."

The offer made to Garn, said NASA, was being made to all chairmen of congressional committees with space responsibilities.

One of those, Sen. Slade Gorton, D-Wash., said he would not want to go just as a piece of luggage. The cost per pound for payloads is just too much, he said.

Commercial customers, buying space on the shuttle, pay $1,500 a pound. Weighing 167 pounds, Sen. Garn would pay $250,500 for the ride if he were a satellite or an experiment.

It would be much cheaper if the Senate bought out the shuttle and sent the two senators from each state in a single trip — a sort of NASA's Ark. That would give every senator an inspection tour and save money at the same time.

Customers who buy out all the space on a shuttle flight get a bargain: only $1,100 a pound.

Clark Has Inside Role

WASHINGTON — With Michael K. Deaver confiding to associates that he will be gone from the White House next spring, Interior Secretary William P. Clark is the new favorite as eventual successor to James A. Baker III as White House chief of staff.

Confirming what we reported two weeks ago, Deaver recently told a senior colleague he would quit as deputy chief of staff to take a public relations job in April. Ironically, that puts Clark, Deaver's arch-enemy, in line to succeed Baker when a Cabinet post is found for the chief of staff — expected to happen sometime in the next six months to a year.

That pleases conservatives who held an emergency meeting during the Republican National Convention in Dallas last summer when it seemed Deaver was in line for the job. But the succession of Clark promises such a personnel upheaval, with a conservative bias, that White House staffers may try to block him before Baker actually leaves.

Far from being disheartened by the Reagan-Bush ticket's sweep or worried by John Zaccaro's continued legal problems, campaign staffers for Rep. Geraldine Ferraro were so elated by her performance that they have been seriously discussing bypassing the 1986 Senate race in New York and concentrating on a 1988 presidential run.

Even before Walter Mondale picked her as his running mate, Ms. Ferraro was a likely contender for the Democratic nomination against Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, a first-termer considered vulnerable as a conservative Republican in a liberal state. But some of her campaign aides believe she is now a national figure who could go for the gold in 1988.

Skipping the 1986 Senate race would avoid a bruising Democratic primary against Rep. Thomas Downey and possibly state Attorney General Robert Abrams. Furthermore, D'Amato has carefully built a strong base of support over the past six years and will not be easy to beat in the general election.

No sooner had Rep. Phil Gramm won his unexpectedly easy Senate race in Texas than he and his advisers began discussing presidential politics. The decision was that 1988 probably is too early, but a bid for the White House is in the 42-year-old congressman's mind.

That contradicts reports by Washington insiders that Gramm soon will join the parade of presidential hopefuls to survey New Hampshire. The front-running status of a fellow Texan, Vice President George Bush, requires Gramm to tread softly in 1988. Nevertheless, some conservative insiders view Gramm as their best alternative if Rep. Jack Kemp chooses not to run.

A footnote: Oilman Boone Pickens of Amarillo, Texas, who won a fabled takeover battle against Gulf, is being pressed by Republicans to try to unseat Democratic Gov. Mark White in 1986. Pickens tells friends he has no desire to try a 1-in-4 shot, but might be willing if White is battered by authoring an unpopular tax increase next year.

The prospect that a newly re-elected Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina may become chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee suddenly galvanized the Reagan administration to draft a reply to his letter about the Soviet arms buildup in Cuba that had gone unanswered since it was sent to President Reagan last June.

A pro forma response was put in the mail within a week after the election. Another reason, besides Helms, for this belated haste was that the letter also was signed by Sen. James McClure of Idaho. He is a strong contender in the Nov. 28 election for Senate majority leader

Sen. Steve Symms of Idaho, a persistent critic of communist arms in the Caribbean, was originator and a third co-signer of the letter.

Democrats Face Task Of Rebuilding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the three weeks since Walter Mondale's landslide loss to President Reagan, Democratic leaders across the nation have come to realize there is no easy answer to solving the party's problems.

Right after the election there was a rush to condemn Mondale as a bad candidate, overbeholden to special interests. Party leaders said all that was needed to turn the party around was a bright new and dynamic face to replace Democratic National Chair Charles Manatt when the national committee picks a new boss early next year.

Since then some sober thoughts have hit the Democrats:

— Mondale was not a bad candidate. Moreover there probably was no one else who could have done that much better against Reagan.

— Special interests, particularly organized labor, didn't do as much as it was hoped to boost Democrats in the election. But it won't do much good for the party to abandon what is left of its traditional base, especially since that base provided the party with a better financed campaign than it has had in recent years.

— Manatt is probably one of the best national chairmen the party has had in years. He has a plan that is working to pay off a party debt that goes back to 1968. For the first time in history the party will move into its own home, a new structure built on Capitol Hill, early next year. These were the goals Manatt pledged to accomplish and he has.

— By copying the Republican's highly successful direct mail fund raising program, nearly every party program for raising money was more successful this year.

The Democratic Party is much like another great American pastime — baseball. For 10 years Bowie Kuhn was commissioner of baseball, doing exactly what the owners told him to do. Then one day, the owners decided that wasn't what they wanted and fired him. Then they realized he hadn't done such a bad job after all, decided what had gone wrong was not really his fault, and tried to keep him on the job.

Newsman Says Health Ignored

When Weimar Jones stepped down in 1954 as president of the North Carolina Press Association, the Asheville Citizen praised the Franklin editor as a "defender of the people's right to know ..."

So, it was ironic that only four years later, Jones castigated the Citizen and its sister newspaper, the Asheville Times, as well as all the newspapers in the 12th Congressional District for not adequately informing the public of the seriousness of a stroke U.S. Rep. George Shuford suffered on May 25, 1958, six days before Shuford was renominated in a hotly contested election.

Jones, a former instructor in the University of North Carolina School of Journalism and a former city editor of the Asheville Times and later a reporter for the Citizen, said that "in principle, every paper in the district is responsible, but the difference is in degree. The heaviest responsibility fell on the largest paper in the district which is published in Shuford's home town (Asheville). It (the Citizen-Times) is the paper to which most people of the district look for news of that nature."

The Citizen-Times replied that it had published "what the family doctors told us," and Don Elias, a long-time political leader in western North Carolina and an official of the two Asheville papers, characterized Jones as "a little squirt."

The ruckus erupted a few days after Shuford won the Democratic nomination for Congress at the election on May 31, 1958. Shuford got 52.95 percent of the vote to 37.25 percent for Heinz Rollman, a Waynesville shoe manufacturer, while three other candidates divided up the remainder.

While Shuford supporters were celebrating his victory, he was a patient in an Asheville hospital where he had undergone an operation to remove an obstruction in an artery in his neck that had left his arms and legs paralyzed.

Although Shuford was admitted to the hospital on May 25, it was not until May 29 that the fact was noted by the press. At that time, the Asheville Times reported the congressman was in good condition after surgery. It quoted members of the family as saying he entered the hospital for a routine checkup and said they declined to give details of the operation. On May 31, the day of the election, the Citizen said in a front page story that Shuford was recovering from "minor surgery" and would be able to leave the hospital "within the next few days."

A few days after the election, Jones asserted in an editorial in the Franklin Press that "the voters were denied their right to pass judgment on the facts. They were indeed deceived — deceived purposely and deliberately, the evidence suggests ...

"The press of Western North Carolina failed to meet its responsibility — failed miserably," he added. "By what they published in their news columns, or by their silence, the newspapers made possible this deception of 50,000 voters ..." Jones called for an investigation by the Western North Carolina Press Association or the North Carolina Press Association.

By that time, Shuford had been transferred to the Navel Hospital at Bethesda, Md., where his wife denied they had deceived the public.

"... We told people that he was a sick man and had a growth removed from his neck. We didn't go into the details of the thing." In defense of his newspapers, Elias said, "We published everything the doctors gave us and that is all we could do." However, when a reporter asked one of Shuford's doctors about the congressman's condition, he told the reporter to contact Elias.

In response to Jones' editorial, James Gray Jr. of Sylva, the association president, summoned its members to meet in Asheville on the evening of June 12 to discuss Jones' assertion that "the true nature of his (Shuford's) illness was withheld from the people until after the election."

"I think you'll agree that the newspapers did not report the facts as we should have," Gray told a reporter after he announced the special meeting.

After about an hour of debate, the association voted 5 to 2 to kill a resolution offered by Jones calling for the North Carolina Press Association to set up a special committee to investigate Jones' charges.

Several weeks later, however, Shuford stepped down as a candidate for reelection. In a letter to the chairman of the 12th District Democratic Executive Committee, Francis Heazel of Asheville, Shuford said he was resigning as a candidate.

"He said in the letter that his doctors fell that he should not put on an active, vigorous campaign and he thinks the district is entitled to have a candidate who can wage a vigorous campaign," Heazel said.

Mayors Holding Session

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Leaders of the nation's cities, worried about the federal deficit and tight local budgets, gathered Saturday for a conference focusing on problems ranging from housing the homeless to attacking chronic unemployment.

Some 3,000 officials representing over 900 local governments arrived in this city, which has invested more than $850 million over the last 20 years to renovate its downtown, for the 61st annual conference of the National League of Cities.

The program for the conference, held at the Hoosier Dome complex in the heart of the downtown, is light on speech-making and laden with workshops and meetings of the league's various policy and steering committees.

President Reagan was invited to speak to the conference but declined, said league spokesman Randy Arndt.

"It's an awkward time," said Arndt, noting that Reagan and his advisers face major decisions on the fiscal 1986 federal budget and taxes.

This assessment was shared by Ron Alvarado of the White House Office of Intergovernmental Relations.

Alvarado will attend the meeting, however, along with Lever Verstandig, the office's director.

Among the guests who will address the delegates are Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.; Bess Meyerson, New York's cultural affairs commissioner; and Morris Tanenbaum, chairman of AT&T.

Principal players among the mayors will be league president George Latimer of St. Paul, Minn.; William Hudnut of Indianapolis; Tom Bradley of Los Angeles; Donald Fraser of Minneapolis; Charles Royer of Seattle; George Voinovich of Cleveland; and Carol Bellamy, New York City council president.

In a report to league members, executive director Alan Beals said:

"The spirit of enterprise, hard work and dedication among city officials has kept cities on the right track this last year despite an economic recovery that has left many cities behind, and cutbacks and consolidation of federal programs that have required many cities to slash budgets and investigate new ways to provide city services and programs."

Noting a league survey of 388 cities last summer, which found that chronic unemployment lingers in many ares, Beals said the problems of inner-city joblessness have been "masked by the general decline in the nationwide unemployment rates."

Movie Buffs Buy McQueen Toys, Gadgets

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Some 1,500 movie buffs and antiques collectors packed a hotel-casino auction showroom Saturday to bid on thousands of toys, gadgets and bits of memorabilia belonging to the late actor Steve McQueen.

Among the first items to go, for $1,900, was a firefighter's hat worn by the star in "The Towering Inferno." Two antique fans, which McQueen preferred to air conditioning, sold for a total of $250.

The sale, which continues Sunday, was expected to raise at least $1 million for the surviving children of McQueen, who died in 1980 at the age of 50 after a bout with cancer.

Also up for grabs were 100 antique motorcycles, some dating back to 1928, and 25 vintage cars which had been stored at the actor's California beach houses, Idaho ranch house and airplane hangar in Santa Paula, Calif.

The sale provided a rare glimpse into the life of a very private star.

"They said they expected to raise $1 million, but the way it's going this morning, it will go over a million," bidder Bill Mashburn of Claremont, Ill., said Saturday. "This is not a celebrity auction. It's more of a happening."

Another bidder, Bill Griffith of Lake Forest, Calif., commented: "The prices are going to be out of hand. Even the small things are out of sight. People apparently like to spend money. They're selling for a lot more than they're worth."

A prosaic set of 20 monkey wrenches brought $500, a 3-foot-long toy car big enough for a child to ride in was sold for $1,500, and a model of a World War I German airplane with a 4-foot wingspan garnered $2,000.

The items were wheeled onstage at the Imperial Palace hotel-casino, where four tuxedo-clad auctioneers gave their history and began the bidding.

The items ranged from kitchenware and antique phones to gas pumps, signs, autograph pictures, racing gear and antique toys and furniture.

The two small antique fans brought $250 after one of the auctioneers said McQueen used them because he did not like air conditioning. Six photographs of antique airplanes brought a total of $450.

Book Warns Old Bombs Still Around

CENTRAL POINT, Ore. (AP) — Some balloon-borne bombs the Japanese launched during World War II may still be scattered across the United States and Canada, warns the author of a new book that says the project was more successful than was previously believed.

About 6,000 crude balloons carrying 30,000 bombs were sent to cross the Pacific during the six-month project, Bert Webber says in "The Silent Siege, Japanese Attacks Against North America in World War II," which was published Friday.

Japanese meteorologist Sakyo Adachi estimates that at least 300 unexploded bombs remain in 26 states and provinces in the United States and Canada, Webber says. Some of the devices are "potentially in areas farther east" than they have been found so far, he adds.

No bombs have been found east of the Detroit suburb of Farmington, Mich., but Webber has counted 45 that turned up in Oregon, 37 in Alaska, 28 in Washington and 25 in California. A bomb rack was found as recently as 1978 near Agness, in southwest Oregon, he says.

The balloons were launched beginning Nov. 3, 1944, with Japanese officers hoping the bombs would start forest fires and create panic.

Newspapers and magazines soon afterward reported on a few mysterious bombings, but Webber says military authorities then imposed a blackout on further coverage at the time.

"These balloon-bomb attacks caused more paperwork and red tape hang-ups in the U.S. than Japan used to build the things," Webber, who describes himself as a research journalist, said in an interview.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special)—An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 634, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Second Artificial Heart Implant Planned

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A man whose heart was so weakened that even wheelchair rides "just about knocked the bottom out for him" gathered his family about him Saturday for a special Thanksgiving dinner on the eve of becoming the world's second person to receive a permanent artificial heart.

William J. Schroeder, 52, of Jasper, Ind., described by doctors as anxious but willing to take a possibly life-saving chance, cleared the way for the implant of the Jarvik-7 polyurethane heart by signing a lengthy consent form Friday in the company of his wife, Margaret, and Dr. William C. DeVries, the only surgeon approved by the U.S. government to perform the surgery.

The consent form warns, among other things, that the replacement of his own disease heart is experimental with no guarantee of success, DeVries has said.

The operation, which DeVries said would last from three to eight hours, was scheduled to begin about 8 a.m. Sunday at Humana Hospital Audubon, just one week short of the second anniversary of the first permanent mechanical heart implant, the hospital said.

DeVries, 40, also performed the first implant, at the University of Utah. The recipient, Barney Clark, survived for 112 days.

Without the procedure, Schroeder's chances of living more than two weeks were slim, Dr. Allan M. Lansing said Friday. Lansing is chief of Humana Heart Institute International, the heart research branch of the hospital's parent corporation, Humana Inc.

"Just going down for an X-ray in a wheelchair just about knocked the bottom out for him," Lansing said. "His blood pressure dropped and he was very cool, sweaty and weak.

"He's very anxious, but he realizes fully that he is deteriorating steadily and he really won't get out of the hospital without something else done," the doctor said.

The hospital gathering Saturday with Schroeder's wife and six children was planned as "the equivalent of a Thanksgiving dinner," Lansing said.

Schroeder's general physician in Jasper, J.P. Sald, said Schroeder was not a candidate for a human heart transplant because he is over 50 and has diabetes. "If he was a transplant recipient, the (anti-)rejection drugs just throw diabetes out of control," he said.

Dr. Phillip Dawkins, Schroeder's heart specialist in Jasper for two years, said Friday that his patient's lungs and kidneys function "quite well."

Clark, a dentist from the Seattle area, was in poor health when he received the first artificial heart on Dec. 2, 1982, and his death was attributed to multiple organ and circulatory collapse.

Accepting the artificial heart "wasn't a decision he (Schroeder) made quickly," Dawkins said. "His comment to me was, 'I think that's the best chance I have to live.' He feels like it's going to be successful, and I honestly do, too."

The heart, a pump driven by compressed air, has been improved with new valves machined out of single pieces of titanium. Clark's heart once failed, after 13 days, when a valve fractured at a point where its segments had been welded together.

The heart is powered by a 323-pound, $40,000 air compressor. But doctors also plan for Schroeder to use a new portable drive system, no larger than a camera bag and weighing 11 pounds, for up to three hours a day. The patient will be tethered to the compressor by air tubes that exit the body near the navel.

Schroeder — pronounced "Shrayder" — suffered a heart attack in 1982, and underwent a double coronary bypass operation in March 1983. But his heart continued to weaken, and he was diagnosed in October as having cardiomyopathy, or chronic failure of the heart muscle.

He underwent gall bladder surgery at Humana on Nov. 17. He has recuperated from that, and although he had been taking insulin for his diabetes, that is mild enough now to be controlled by diet, Lansing said.

DeVries said early last week that he would consider his next operation a success if the patient could enjoy a better quality of life than otherwise would be possible.

"Whether that's realistic or not, we'll have to see. If I thought that the patient would spend the rest of his days in the hospital, I would think twice about it," he said.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, who designed the artificial heart, said it costs $15,500, and officials have estimated the operation will cost $100,000 to $250,000.

Humana Inc., the Louisville-based private company that owns and operates the institute and hospitals in the United States and three other countries, has agreed to underwrite the cost of 100 implants. That commitment was one factor that enticed DeVries to from Utah to Humana. He also expressed frustration at long delays in gaining approval for further implant surgery at Utah.

Utah Surgical Team Offers Best Wishes For Operation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Members of the University of Utah's artificial heart team are frustrated that they are not performing the second implant of the device, but hoped for success in the operation scheduled for Sunday in Kentucky.

"I wish them a lot of luck and I'm sure they will do very well," said Helen Key, director of nursing at the school's Health Sciences Center, where Barney Clark became the first person to receive a permanent artificial heart on Dec. 2, 1982.

"I hope the patient will do well. I assume that he is very ill and that this is his only chance," said Dr. Willem Kolff, director of the university's Institute for Biomedical Engineering.

The surgeon for Clark's implant, and for the operation planned for Sunday at Louisville's Humana Hospital Audubon, was Dr. William DeVries, the only surgeon authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to perform the procedure.

Humana Heart Institute International announced Friday that William J. Schroeder, 52, of Jasper, Ind., would become the second recipient of the air-driven plastic pump.

Clark lived 112 days on the device. He died March 23, 1983, of multiple organ failure and circulatory system collapse.

DeVries left Utah for Humana in August after becoming frustrated with delays in gaining approval for a second implant. "I don't like to see people die while I wait for the red tape to be cleaned up," he said.

Both Kolff and Mrs. Key acknowledged that they were disappointed the second implant was not being done in Salt Lake City.

"I wish that they were doing the second heart here," Mrs. Key said. "I would have liked to have seen what we did differently with the second heart than the first ... all the things we didn't know about to begin with."

Kolff said he preferred to look to the future, when Utah might have a revitalized artificial heart program.

Buyers ...

with plans to open shop on New York City's Fifth Avenue. The company's wares include lacquered pens and watches, which sell in the range of $60 to $10,000.

"Maybe they cannot afford a Rolls-Royce, a yacht or an apartment on the Mediterranean," said Andre Doucet, president of the Paris-based subsidiary of the Gillette Co. "But they can own the finest ball point pen in the world."

Analysts say the buying splurge follows a sharp rise in disposable income — what's left over after taxes, food and housing costs.

Marcus said disposable income gained by nearly one-half from 1970 to 1980 as the number of two-wage earner families rose.

Mercedes Benz's sporty new $23,000 "Baby Benz" 190 series is being snapped up by a younger, better-educated and even higher-salaried crowd than the traditional Mercedes buyer, company spokesman Fred Chapman said.

"It's a status symbol, a statement that they made it," he said.

David Wyss, a senior vice president with Data Resources Inc., said members of the "baby boom" generation have more money to spend because many have put off marriage or children, and bring in two pay checks per household.

He said the number of American households with two wage earners has increased from one in three families in 1970 to about half.

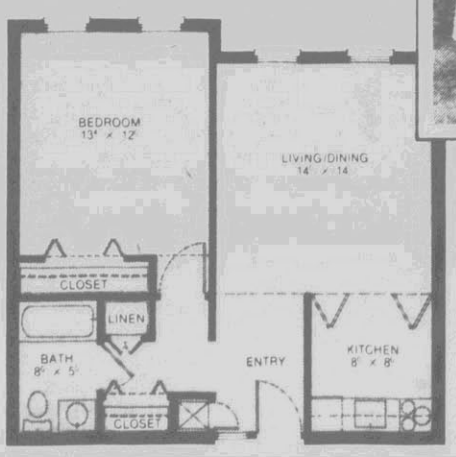

Two-earner families make an average of more than $20,000, "better than double" traditional single-earner households, and well above an average $15,000 for all families, he said. According to the Federal Reserve Board, 10 percent of American families earn $50,000 a year or more.

Linden and Marcus say that growth in disposable income extends through all age groups.

It's "very simple arithmetic," Linden said. The American population has grown about 1 percent a year since World War II, but gross national product has increased at an average 3.8 percent in that time.

Destructive Storm Ends On Florida Coast

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Strong winds and high seas along Florida's east coast abated Saturday, and the governor began touring areas worst hit by the three-day storm that left one man dead, washed away beaches and roads and prompted the evacuation of up to 1,000 people.

Gov. Bob Graham set out for aerial inspections of St. Johns, Volusia and Indian River counties "to see if we need to ask the federal government for further help," said press secretary Steve Hull.

"It's the worst happening we've had in many, many years as far as beach construction is concerned," Brevard County Civil Defense Director Don Kean said. "We have no idea of damage estimates in terms of monetary loss."

Forecasters said the weather system was moving east and "conditions are slowly improving."

Tides were 3 to 4 feet above normal, and coastal winds were up to 40 mph with higher gusts, the National Weather Service in Miami reported.

One weather-related death was reported Friday as Graham declared a state of emergency for Volusia and St. Johns counties in the northeast.

Construction worker Anthony F. Borodauchuk, 40, of Juno Beach, died when he stepped on a high-voltage power line that went down when a Florida Power & Light Co. pole fell, said Palm Beach Sheriff's Detective Russell Butler.

In Indian River County, about 1,000 tourists and residents who fled hotels and condominiums along a 2-mile beachfront strip on Friday began returning to the area Saturday.

"We've got an awful lot of sea wall damage and two establishments that have had part of their buildings washed into the ocean," said Steve Wells, Indian River emergency management director.

All but about 300 feet of a new $1 million concrete fishing pier in the community of St. Augustine collapsed, said Ray Ashton, the public safety director for St. Johns County.

Volusia County officials reported that the water level Saturday afternoon remained up to hotel seawalls and boardwalks. Beach access roads had also been washed out. In Flagler County, 200 feet of the coastal highway A1A foundation was washed out and traffic was being rerouted.

Water levels along the Intracoastal Waterway in Indian River County were 3½ feet above normal and "causing minor flooding in many locations," according to the weather service.

Power outages affected 20,000 customers in Palm Beach, Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee counties.

The storm also left a 230-foot Venezuelan freighter washed up against a sea wall adjoining the compound of Rose Kennedy, mother of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass, in posh Palm Beach.

Erosion

Huge waves roll in off the ocean at Palm Beach, Fla., along state road A1A, the coastal highway that spans Florida's east coach beaches. A fire hydrant, still standing, and a crumbling beach house stood as testimony to the storm's fierceness. The strong winds and high tides abated Saturday, allowing residents to begin assessing their damage. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan Shaping Plans For Tax Overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is on the verge of unveiling a proposal for what would be the biggest overhaul of the U.S. tax system since the income tax came into existence 71 years ago.

Individual taxpayers would see their tax rates shrunk, but in return they would lose some of their favorite deductions.

The administration's goal is to make the current jumble of tax regulations simpler and fairer. President Reagan insisted during his re-election campaign that the enterprise would not be used as a vehicle to raise taxes.

But as with any tinkering with the tax code, some individuals and businesses will benefit by having their total tax bill lowered while others will pay higher taxes. And some fear that Congress — faced with soaring budget deficits — will turn the simplificatiion plan into a tax increase for everybody.

The president's order for a complete review of the tax system was made in his State of the Union address last Janaury.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told a group of business leaders on Wednesday that he expected to meet the deadline of forwarding the review plan to the president on Dec. 1. According to participants at the private meeting, Regan also indicated that he hoped the entire plan would then be made public.

While the administration has refused to publicly disclose specifics of the plan, Treasury Department officials have discussed the tax issue with various interest groups.

Chilean Troops Display Show Of Force

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Troops, in a show of force three days before scheduled antigovernment protests, rounded up hundreds of men in one Santiago shantytown Saturday and patrolled more than a dozen others.

Residents of Santa Julia said 12 truckloads of heavily armed soldiers sealed off their neighborhood in eastern Santiago for 2½ hours in the fourth raid there since President Augusto Pinochet's military regime declared a state of siege Nov. 6.

As a helicopter swooped low overhead, five-soldier units with machine guns would surround each male suspect picked at random by police officials on the dirt streets or in doorways, witnesses said.

The Rev. Patricio Rojas, a Roman Catholic priest in Santa Julia, said 400 to 500 men were herded at gunpoint into a vacant lot, a neighborhood police station and a welfare office for identity checks and at least seven were singled out for arrest. The district has about 50,000 residents, and many have taken part in previous demonstrations against Pincochet's rule.

Soldiers in trucks and police in armored vehicles patrolled at least 13 other shantytowns on Santiago's outskirts, ranging from La Victoria in the south and Villa Francia in the west to Conchali in the north.

Chile's independent Human Rights Commission reported 41 arrests in those districts, and said the troops continued the patrols for several hours.

The government gave no information on the midday troop movements. It has called previous operations part of a crackdown on common criminals and left-wing terrorists.

Rojas said the police in Santa Julia appeared to be searching for leaders of a Marxist coalition that is backing a two-day protest aimed at paralyzing Chile next Tuesday and Wednesday. The moderate Democratic Alliance and other opponents of Gen. Pinochet's 11-year-old authoritarian regime also are backing the demonstrations.

"These gentlemen are just trying to intimidate the people from taking part in the protest," said Merena Sanchez, a middle-aged woman in Santa Julia. "The way they carried those rifles and used that helicopter — it was pure exhibitionism."

Jose Munoz, a resident of Villa Francia, told reporters, "There were two army trucks in the streets here. They didn't take anybody away, but we are afraid of what might happen next week."

Communists Start Purge In China

PEKING, China (UPI) — The 40 million-member Chinese Communist Party Saturday announced it was mounting a major purge aimed at eliminating corruption and the last vestiges of radical leftism.

The purge ordered by the party's Central Committee was the second phase in a "party rectification program" begun a year ago by Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, Western diplomats said.

Communist Party members will have to undergo a reselection process aimed at purging criminals and radicals who still espouse the hardline doctrines of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution orchestrated by Mao Zedong, the state-run Xinhua News Agency said.

"Over the next two years, all 40 million party members will have to face a reselection procedure and register again with the party," the report said. "This will involve the reassessment of members in party organizations from the top of government to the grassroots level."

Western analysts said the success of pragmatic, capitalist-style reforms instituted by Deng appeared to have given him the confidence to call for implementation of the second phase of the program.

The first stage of the "rectification program," ran into stiff opposition from the radicals he set out to purge and has yet to remove opponents of his policies.

Shamir Rejects Jordanian Plan

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir Saturday rejected Jordan's call on Israel to trade the occupied territories for peace with its Arab neighbors, but opposition leaders demanded the proposal be explored.

Shamir said the statement from Jordan's King Hussein to the Palestine National Council, currently meeting in Amman, Jordan, "is the same old demand for Israel's withdrawal to the pre-1967 war boundaries — and that we reject."

In an interview with Israel radio, Shamir said Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat "sees such a withdrawal as a first step toward the destruction of Israel."

Shamir criticized Hussein for hosting Arafat's parliament in exile in Amman, saying, "That brought the voice of the terrorist movement closer to Israel and to Judea and Samaria."

Judea and Samaria are the Hebrew names for the occupied West Bank, home of about 800,000 Palestinians.

Bomb Defused

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A small bomb hidden in a parcel post package was defused by Jordanian police just before it was set to explode near the entrance to an American research center, sources at the center said.

The 33-pound package was found near the gate of the American Center for Oriental Archeological Research, said the sources who spoke on condition they were not identified. The center is a base for American archeologists exploring ancient sites in Jordan.

Technology

PEKING (AP) — China will spend $14.2 billion of its hard currency reserves in the next several years to buy foreign technology, the China Daily newspaper reported Saturday.

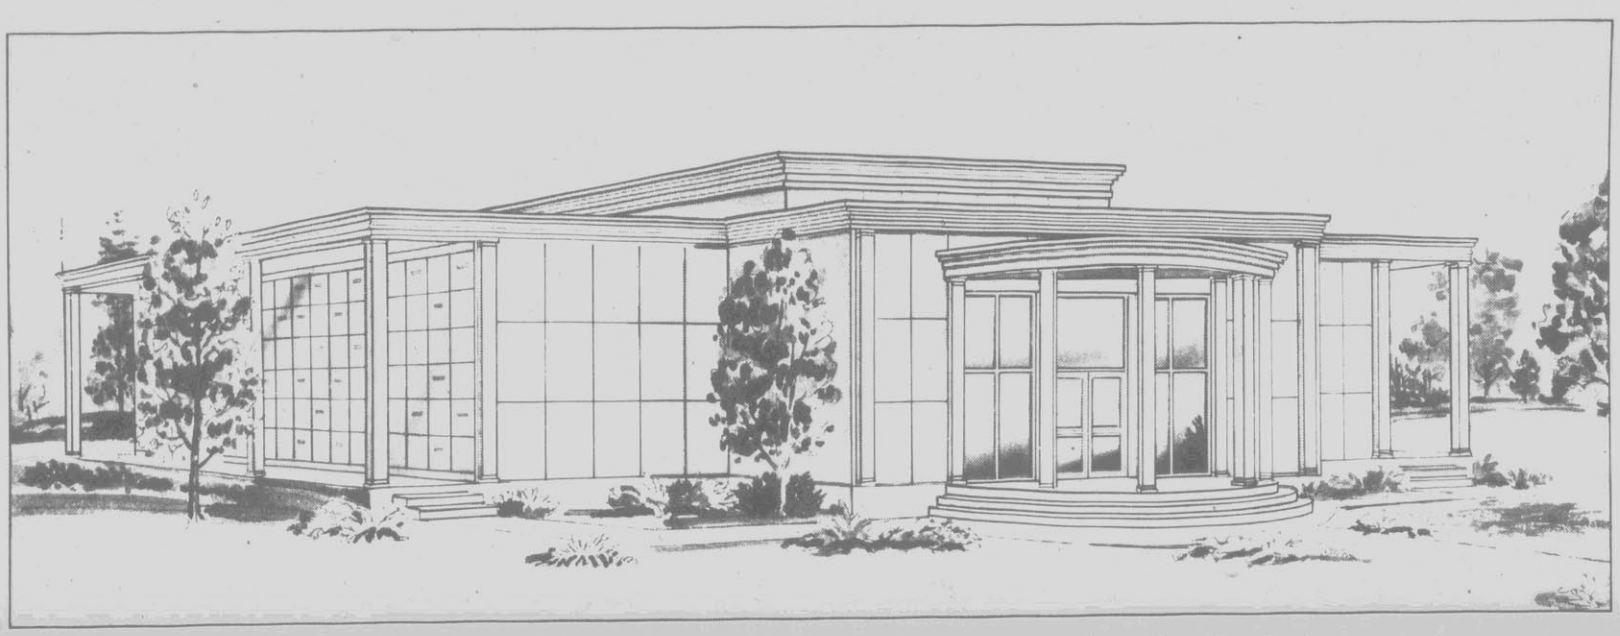

"China has decided that it is time to dip into its foreign currency hoard," the official English-language newspaper said. "The next three to five years may see China spending more money than ever."

The newspaper said China had accumulated $16.48 billion dollars in foreign currency as of June, compared to $2 billion at the end of 1980.

After 3 years of careful planning, Pinewood Memorial Park announces plans to construct its mausoleum.

Pinewood Memorial Park's Mausoleum. Designed by America's most respected mausoleum builders for beauty and permanence.

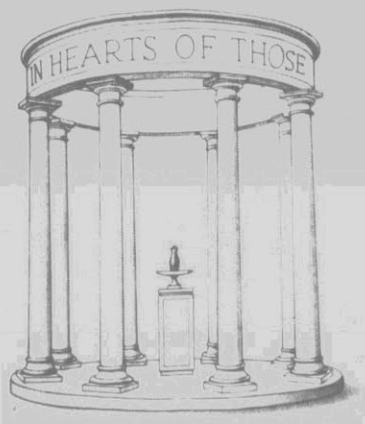

S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, owners of Pinewood Memorial Park, proudly announces plans to construct a chapel mausoleum on the grounds at Pinewood, offering you the choice of above-ground entombment.

The mausoleum (artist's rendering above) is a McCleskey-designed structure. McCleskey is considered by many in the industry to be the finest available mausoleum designer and builder in America.

Years of careful planning have gone into the design and S.G. Wilkerson has used the nation's best builders and consultants to bring you the finest structure of its kind anywhere.

Now above-ground entombment will be available and affordable from Pinewood Memorial Park. And the cost will be comparable to ground burial.

Our planning has paid off. In design. In beauty. In cost. And in service you've come to expect from Pinewood Memorial Park.

South Carolina Town Puts Out 'Welcome' For Chitlin

SALLEY, S.C. (UPI) — More than 40,000 people from as far away as California crowded into the tiny village of Salley Saturday to celebrate an unlikely delicacy — the chitlin.

Residents began boiling more than 20,000 pounds of the hog intestines before dawn Friday in preparation for Salley's annual "Chitlin Strut," a folk festival that townspeople say has made Salley the "chitlin capital of the world."

The chitlin also has lightened the tax load in Salley, population 584. Taxes have not been raised for 20 years because revenues from the annual celebration are used to meet the needs of the municipality.

Campers began pulling into Salley Friday night to get an early start on the festivities, which include a hog calling contest, carnival rides, arts and crafts and The Big Strut dance Saturday night.

"You can't stir'em with a stick," said Kella Clamp, the stepmother of Salley Mayor E.W. Clamp. "You can't hardly find a parking place. I see license plates from California, New York, Pennsylvania, everywhere."

This is the strut's 19th year in Salley, and Clamp said many of those in attendance are old hands at chitlin strutting.

"They come one time and they have such a good time they keep coming back," she said. "You can't know how it is until you come and see it."

In addition to no tax increase for 20 years, Mayor Clamp said residents pay only 3.50 per month for water. In past years, he said, the town has used proceeds from the strut to buy a new fire truck, dump truck and garbage compactor, renovate a community center and purchase new Christmas decorations.

Last year the city installed a new water line, and Clamp said Salley will use revenue from the strut this year to upgrade low-income housing.

While the mayor's stepmother said she "just loves" chitlins, she concedes the hog intestines aren't to everyone's liking. For the non-believers, barbecue also was available at the more than 40 concession stands spread out over the Aiken County town.

"But lots of folks come just for the chitlins," she said.

State Bar Starts Program To Find Dishonest Lawyers

By United Press International

A rash of embezzlements by North Carolina attorneys prompted the State Bar to set up a fund to repay clients and start a new audit program aimed at catching dishonest lawyers.

In the past two years, 18 North Carolina lawyers — including some prominent attorneys — have been disbarred and another five suspended for misappropriating client money.

"This is the kind of thing that should not happen," said State Bar President Wright Dixon. "We're going to do what we can to ensure it will not happen, or if it does, that we bring the culprit to light."

Starting in January, victims of unscrupulous lawyers will be able to seek reimbursement from the State Bar's security fund, which is expected to total more than $450,000 in its first year.

The State Bar also has started conducting random audits of lawyers' trust accounts to ensure that records are being maintained accurately.

The list of lawyers caught stealing from their clients includes Mecklenburg County Bar President Francis Clarkson Jr., who was sentenced to 9 years in prison two months ago for taking more than $500,000 from clients.

Last January, Clinton lawyer Joseph Chambliss was convicted of embezzling $455,000 from his clients and this month, allegations of wrongdoing surfaced against former State Bar President Robert Hutchins.

In a petition filed in Wake County Superior Court, the State Bar accused Hutchins of admitting that he embezzled $190,000 to $200,000 from a corporate client, Weyerhaeuser Co.

Superior Court Judge Donald Smith has issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the 59-year-old Plymouth lawyer from handling any clients' funds or writing any checks from his trust account.

In August, at the request of the State Bar, the state Supreme Court approved the client security fund to repay at least in part those residents whose lawyers have embezzled or misused their money and other property.

"Every lawyer is concerned when a member of the profession violates the trust and takes money from a client. . .," said Chief Justice Joseph Branch. "It's a reflection on the whole profession."

The court directed active members of the State Bar to pay $50 annually to the fund. The first payments are due by Jan. 1.

State Bar officials sought legislation in 1975, 1977 and 1981 to establish a fund but they faced stiff opposition from legislators who disagreed that all lawyers should pay for the thefts of a few.

The Supreme Court also approved letting the State Bar make random spot audits of lawyers' trust accounts. The audits will be made unannounced by State Bar investigators.

Fayetteville In Running For Award

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Fayetteville, once scorned for its topless bars, prostitution and violence, now is up for an All-America City award for lively interest in self-improvement.

Fayetteville is one of 17 finalists to win the title and become the first All-America City in North Carolina since Durham got the award two years ago. Fayetteville is in the running for the award because of a shining new image earned with downtown renewal started four years ago, city boosters said.

"Now when we go somewhere and mention where we're from, people will say 'Oh, great things are happening in Fayetteville,' rather than 'Oh, you're from Fayetteville, you poor little thing,'" said Assistant City Manager Susan Cheek.

In 1980, the city of 67,000 elected a new mayor and city council on the promise of tearing down the notorious 500 block of Hay Street. The block, a favorite haven for prostitutes, was cluttered with adult entertainment clubs.

Now, a six-story condominium featuring 46 doctors' offices and retail stores is going up on Hay Street and workers are expanding the 60-year-old Prince Charles Hotel, vacant the past six years. The hotel is scheduled to reopen in the spring of 1986 with 160 rooms.

Community residents also raised $1.2 million in three months toward a new central county library.

The adult entertainment and prostitutes were drawn to Fayetteville because of nearby Fort Bragg and its post population of 65,000. City residents now consider the base one of Fayetteville's biggest assets.

"Anytime you have a military town like this, you're going to have a prostitution problem and an alcohol problem," said Victor Dawson, an owner of radio station WFNC. "After all, the median age around here is 21½. Once people get used to Fayetteville, they like it."

City officials went to San Antonio, Texas, last week to make a pitch for Fayetteville to be named a 1984-85 All-America City. Winners will be announced next April.

There is no set number of winners each year but about half the finalists usually win. Other finalists include Alexandria, Va.; Anaheim, Calif.; Dallas; Pocomoke City, Md., and Tempe, Ariz.

Acid Rain Found In Wilmington

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Rain soaking the sandy soil of Wilmington last year was almost as acidic as the showers that are killing trees and fish in the Northeast, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington say.

The scientists had thought ocean breezes would disperse polluted air, which contaminates the rain. "When we started out the study, we did not expect to find acid rain," said Joan D. Wiley, an associate professor of chemistry at the school.

Rain falling within 25 miles of Wilmington last year was more acidic than rain measured in Raleigh and Clinton, and was eight times more acidic than that in Morehead City, another coastal city, Ms. Wiley said.

Sulfur dioxide emissions from industry around Wilmington and traffic exhaust caused more than half of the acidity, Ms. Wiley said, adding that the study did not conclusively link any local industry to acid rain.

There has been no obvious damage to life around Wilmington from the acid rain, Ms. Wiley said. Most vegetation in the area is acid-tolerant and the levels of acid in the rain were not high enough to hurt marine life, she said.

Celestrial Show Set Sunday

GREENSBORO (AP) — Just after sunset Sunday, three of the brightest natural objects in the night sky will appear in an unusual cluster, a physics and astronomy professor says.

"The crescent moon will be joined by the brilliant planets Venus and Jupiter to form a spectacular triangle in the southwestern sky," said Joe Pollock, an astronomer with Appalachian State University's Dark Sky Observatory.

Mars and Mercury also will be visible, making Saturn the only planet visible to the naked eye that won't make an appearance in the sky Sunday night, Pollock said.

Mercury will dip in the sky shortly after sunset and will be visible only on a horizon free of trees, mountains and other obstructions. While Mars will be higher in the sky and easier to locate, it will seem dim when compared to Venus and Jupiter. Venus will appear directly above the moon while Jupiter can be seen above and slightly to the right of the crescent.

Pollock said that on subsequent evenings the planetary pattern will remain essentially the same but that the moon will appear to move farther east as the size of the crescent begins to grow.

Truck Spreads Fire Along I-85

DURHAM (AP) — A pickup truck hauling Christmas presents spread grass fires along Interstate 85 in five counties Friday.

The truck's exhaust system started a fire in a love seat and sofa that spewed bits of burning furniture stuffing in grass along the interstate in Orange, Durham, Granville, Vance and Warren counties.

The truck's driver, Robert Green of Chesapeake, Va., was unaware of the fires until a motorist waved him over about three miles from the Virginia border. The fire was extinguished by bystanders and the Norlina Volunteer Fire Department.

Carey Teen-Ager Dies Of Shooting

RALEIGH (AP) — A Cary teen-ager has died of what police are calling a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Todd Walton, 15, was taken to Rex Hospital about 3:30 p.m. Friday and died about 9 p.m., a hospital supervisor said.

Cary Police Sgt. W.J. Hunter said the shooting occurred at the Waltons' home and that it was being ruled a self-inflicted wound. He said other details were not available.

Washington Gunshot Victim Dies

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 29-year-old Washington man has died from a gunshot wound he received during an argument Thanksgiving night.

Det. Melvin Hope of the Washington Police Department said Charles S. Foster died Friday after being shot in the stomach with what appeared to be a .38-caliber pistol.

William H. Blankenship, 36, was originally charged with assault with a deadly weapon, but the charge was changed to first-degree murder after Foster died.

Hope said the shooting occurred at the home of Foster's girlfriend.

Inmate Wins Suit, Gets $2

RALEIGH (AP) — A Central Prison inmate who filed a $100,000 federal lawsuit against a former prison guard for beating him has won his case in court, but was awarded only $2 in damages.

Eddie Collins, 37, who is serving time for armed robbery and assault, charged that former guard D.T. Shell beat him on the head and legs with a billy club in February 1983.

The jury deliberated about five hours before ruling that Shell had violated Collin's rights by using excessive force and that Shell's actions were "malicious, oppressive and recklessly indifferent." Collins received $1 in nominal damages and $1 in punitive damages.

Six Die In Traffic Wrecks

RALEIGH (AP) — A Georgia man whose car rolled out of a driveway and struck another car became the sixth person to die on North Carolina highways during the long Thanksgiving weekend, the state Highway Patrol said Saturday.

David Michael McGee, 20, of Hephzibah, Ga., was getting out of his car about 3:25 p.m. Friday when it rolled down a private driveway, crossed a rural Yancey County road, and struck a second vehicle.

Timothy Scott Forbes, 24, of Graham died around 12:05 a.m. Thursday after the car he was driving on N.C. 119 in Alamance County ran under a tractor-trailer rig that was backing out of a driveway, the Highway Patrol reported Friday.

William Bernard Leak, 18, of Wadesboro was killed at 8:13 p.m. Thursday on N.C. 109 in Anson County, about 2 miles north of Wadesboro, when his car ran off the road, struck a ditch bank, overturned and burned.

Jody Len Hall, 17, of Greensboro died when he was thrown from a car about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday. Troopers said the car ran off the left side of a Greensboro street and overturned, injuring the driver.

Jacob Otha Wynn, 38, of Monroe died about 4 a.m. Thursday when the car in which he was riding ran off the side of SR 2169 nine miles south of Monroe, then crossed the road and overturned into a pond.

John Joseph Brendle, 20, of Fort Bragg, was killed Wednesday around 6:18 p.m. when the car he was driving was struck by another vehicle on N.C. 210 1.7 miles north of Spring Lake in Cumberland County.

The fatalities bring the state highway death toll for the year to 1,274, compared to 1,109 on the same date last year.

The North Carolina State Motor Club has predicted that 17 people will die over the holiday weekend, which began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and ends at midnight Sunday.

Special Glasses Help Deaf Read Lips

DURHAM (AP) — Robert Beadles' 17-year-old daughter Elena, born deaf, never learned American sign language, but her parents taught her another way to communicate — through lip reading.

Today Beadles and other Research Triangle Institute scientists are putting the finishing touches on a device that uses eyeglasses, a microphone and a microcomputer to help the deaf read lips.

The device, called an autocuer, uses a microphone on the eyeglasses frame to pick up speech to be analyzed by a microcomputer carried in a coat pocket or clipped to a belt. The microcomputer produces signals akin to the hand symbols in cued speech.

"The deaf child is not dumb, but he has no means of clearly communicating in the native language — English," said Beadles, director of the institute's Center for Biomedical Engineering.

Cued speech is a system that uses eight hand symbols held at four different positions to help the deaf distinguish syllables or words that otherwise are indistinguishable to a lip reader.

The device should be commercially available by 1987, said Beadles.

Cued speech was developed in 1966 at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., by Orin Cornett, the man who first envisioned a device like the autocuer. The hand positions in cued speech remove the ambiguity associated with lipreading vowel sounds and hand shapes clarify consonant sounds.

Cued speech is just starting to gain wide acceptance, however, because some have argued that few deaf people can master lip reading well enough to make the approach useful in the real world, Beadles said. Such opponents support sign language instead.

Beadles said sign language is limited. It is not based on the English language and does not exist in written form. He said that can create problems in the classroom.

Development of the autocuer began in 1971. The first wearable unit was built 10 years later and has been refined over the past three years. Gallaudet College plans to begin field tests of the device using 18 subjects next spring.

Beadles estimated that the autocuer will be able to detect about 70 percent of the significant sounds in human speech and about 70 percent of the detected sounds will be accurate.

It is not a substitute for lip reading but should enable deaf people who lipread to understand the speech of a person three to 10 feet away. Beadles said a child as young as 6 could use the device.

The first commercial autocuers probably will cost about $4,000 but the price could fall to $1,000 when the devices are mass produced.

Cable TV Sues Man For Piracy

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Spring Lake man who rigged his television to receive a cable movie channel for free has become the first person penalized under a new state law on cable piracy, a Fayetteville Cablevision spokesman says.

Cumberland County District Judge Robert Kinyon ordered Fort Bragg serviceman Joseph Kamer to pay $300 to Cablevision, according to Earl Larkins, Cablevision's communications manager.

Kamer had been receiving Home Box Office without paying for it, Larkins said.

The law allows cable companies to file a civil suit against people suspected of stealing cable service. The law allows judges to award $300 or three times the value of the services stolen, whichever is greater, Larkins said.

The law makes it easier for cable companies to prove cable theft by relying on evidence, he said. Under the old law, successful prosecution "almost" required catching the person in the act" of making the illegal connection, Larkins said.

Cable companies may file criminal charges against suspected cable pirates. The law makes stealing cable service a misdemeanor punishable by a $500 fine and 30 days in jail. Cablevision took no criminal action in Kamer's case.

"The point is not to throw people in the pokey but to let the community know that stealing cable is not a joke," Larkins said. "It's something that is serious and we intend to pursue it when we have to."

From July to Oct. 1, Cablevision offered amnesty to people who illegally tapped onto the service, he said.

Search Teams Photograph Ocean In Hunt For Trawler

NEW YORK (UPI) — Searchers using a military reconnaissance plane photographed sections of the Atlantic off the Virginia coast Saturday in an effort to locate crewmen from the missing trawler Amazing Grace.

A Coast Guard spokesman in New York said four military aircraft and the Coast Guard cutter Chilula continued searching an area about 180 nautical miles east of Chincoteague, Va., for a lifeboat that could contain seven crew members from the missing scallop boat.

"It's pretty much the same area that has been covered over the last 24 hours," said Coast Guard public affairs specialist James Graham.

He said a decision was made about 9 a.m. Saturday to begin photographing sections of the ocean in an effort to locate the men aboard the Hampton, Va.-based trawler.

The search for the Amazing Grace was called off Wednesday, a week after the 87-foot trawler disappeared off the New Jersey coast. But it was resumed Thursday after a merchant vessel sighted an empty lifeboat from the vessel.

The inflatable lifeboat was sighted by the Clifford Maersk merchant ship Wednesday night east of Chincoteague, Va. The lifeboat contained an open knife, but the required provisions were missing.

The sighting prompted the Coast Guard to dispatch a jet to resume its search of the area Thursday night. Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard planes were summoned to the scene Friday.

The Amazing Grace was last heard from 10 days ago when its captain, Paul Robles of Hampton, radioed a nearby vessel that the ship was taking on water. The message was not a distress call, but Coast Guard officials began a search the next day when the vessel could not be located.

Four of the missing crew members — Robles, John Davis, Don Hancock, and James Raynor — are from Hampton, Va.

ECU Opens Cage Year Tuesday

The 1984-85 basketball season will officially get underway at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday for the East Carolina Pirates.

Coach Charlie Harrison's third Pirate squad will play host to Central Connecticut State in Minges Coliseum as the Bucs attempt to rebound from last year's 4-24 season. That Pirate schedule was played mainly by six freshmen, a sophomore and a senior.

Those young Pirates are now a year older and Harrison is hopeful that they have grown and matured from the experience. Nevertheless, Harrison still rates this year's team as a young one, with not a single senior on the squad. There are two juniors, returning veteran Curt Vanderhorst, a 6-1 guard, and Scott Hardy, a 5-9 transfer, who plays the point.

They are joined by a class of seven sophomores, six of whom were on the team last year. The one newcomer is Hollander Peter Dam, a 7-0 center, playing his first year of American basketball after several years of Dutch Youth Club ball.

The other sophomores include 6-10 center Leon Bass, 6-6 forward Derrick Battle, 6-2 guard William Grady, 6-3 guard/forward Keith Sledge, 6-8 forward/center Roy Smith and 6-9 forward Jack Turnbill.

The lone freshman on the team is 6-3 point guard Herb Dixon.

Most likely to handle starting positions are Turnbill, who scored 21 points against the Irish National team last week, and either Battle or Bass at the posts, Grady at the small forward, Vanderhorst at big guard and Hardy at the point.

However, both Hardy and Bass have been slowed by injuries this fall. Hardy suffered a pulled groin muscle early in practice and has aggrivated it several times and hasn't returned to full speed as yet. Bass suffered a stress fracture early on also, and has been held out of heavy work because of it. He was the lone Pirate who did not see action last week in the exhibition game.

Both players are expected to play key roles in the Pirate plans once they return to full health.

For Central Connecticut, it will be their second game of the year. They will open their season on Monday night at Seton Hall. It is the first meeting of the two teams.

Probable starters for the Blue Devils, 26-6 last year and the Divison II New England Collegiate Conference champs, will be Dwayne Jones, a 5-9 guard; Renardo Mack, a 5-10, guard; Johnny Kidd, a 5-9 guard; Constantine Yiannoutsos, a 6-11 center, and Tony Little, a 6-3 freshman.

Top reserves include 6-7 forward Tyrone Canino and 6-2 guard Rich Nappi.

Jones is the leading returning scorer as the top three are gone from the team. Jones had a 9.2 average last year, while Canino hit 8.9 per game and pulled 8.6 rebounds.

The game is the first of two this week for the Pirates, who entertain Sun Belt member Virginia Commonwealth on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges. VCU, 23-7 last year, advanced to the second round of the NCAA playoffs. The Rams, again Sun Belt contenders, and possible Top Twenty members, return three all-conference performers in 6-3 guard Calvin Duncan (13.6 ppg), Mike Schlegel, a 6-8 center (11.5 ppg, 7.2 reb), and Michael Brown, a 6-5 forward (11.2 ppg).

Other starters are expected to be 6-2 guard Rolando Lamb (5.9 ppg), and 6-7 forward Neil Wake (4.3 ppg).

Following those two dates, the Pirates take to the road for the first time next week, traveling to Philadelphia to face Drexel on Tuesday, Dec. 4. They are back in town on Saturday, Dec. 8, to meet Christopher Newport in the final December home game.

Terps Capture ACC Crown In 45-34 Win Over Cavs

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Maryland's 18th-ranked Terps captured their second straight Atlantic Coast Conference football title Saturday by overpowering Virginia's Cavaliers 45-34 in a battle of bowl-bound teams, and coach Bobby Ross said, "I am pleased to win ... without an asterisk. There is no asterisk on this one."

Ross was referring to the fact that the Terps' title last year was slightly tarnished by a loss to Clemson, which was ineligible for the conference championship. This year the Terps finished 5-0 in the ACC and also defeated Clemson 41-23 a week ago.

"Rick Badanjek was fantastic. Our ground game has really picked up since the second half at Miami," said Ross. Two weeks ago, the Terps staged major college's greatest rally by overcoming a 31-0 halftime deficit to nip Miami 42-40.

Badanjek ran 17 times for 217 yards and two touchdowns and set up a third Maryland score with a long run to the Virginia 11 early in the second half.

The Terps, 8-3 with six straight victories, officially accepted a bid to play Tennessee in the Sun Bowl Dec. 22 at El Paso, Texas. Virginia, which finished 7-2-2 overall and 3-1-2 in the conference, accepted a bid to play Purdue on Dec. 31 in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta.

"The team deserves all the accolades you can give them," said Virginia coach George Welsh. "I'm looking forward to taking this team to a bowl game. This game takes a little of the lustre off. I don't feel real good right now."

Welsh said "it was the kind of game I just abhor — a shootout. We just couldn't stop them. Nobody stopped them since Penn State at the end of that game (Maryland's last loss by 25-24) so I guess you'd have to say it was more their execution and our lack of defense."

Ross paid tribute to Virginia, saying, "They did a good job of attacking our defense. Not to take anything away from Virginia, but we did not play as well defensively as we can. We did not have a good week's practice on defense, and it carried over. Offensively, I could not be more pleased and proud."

The two teams combined for more than 1,000 yards in total offense before a crowd of 43,017, the third largest in Virginia's history, but it was Badanjek who put on the big show.

The 223-pound junior fullback scored once on a 65-yard run, set up another score with a 72-yard ramble and added a 1-yard scoring run as he broke Maryland's scoring record for one season with 102 points and career touchdown record with 34.

Maryland, up 24-14 at the half, broke the game open by driving 79 yards in 9 plays to open the second half. Badanjek got his second touchdown after carrying 5 times for 24 yards in the march.

After that, the Terps simply held off Virginia's comeback efforts by striking quickly after each Virginia score.

Badanjek's 72-yard run set up an 11-yard score by Tommy Neal and Maryland quickly negated a second Virginia touchdown in the second half with a 78-yard strike in two plays — runs of 6 and 72 yards by sophomore tailback Alvin Blount.

Sophomore quarterback Don Majkowski was the star of Virginia's 527-yard offensive output, hitting 15 of 32 passes for 219 yards and running 12 times for 79 yards and one touchdown as Virginia got all five scores on the ground.

The Terps finished with 575 yards in total offense.

Virginia's defense, which had twice forced Maryland to settle for field goals in the early going, was hit hard on the last play of the first quarter when all-ACC tackle Ron Mattes broke a bone in his arm and was lost for the game.

Badanjek had 94 yards on 5 carries in the first half and it was hit 65-yard burst — for a Maryland career record 33rd touchdown — that turned the game around.

Badanjek also ran for the 2-point conversion that ied the score at 14.

The Terps then drove 80 yards in 9 plays for the tie-breaking score. Quarterback Frank Reich completed all 5 passes he threw for 72 yards, including a payoff 25-yarder to Azizuddin Abdur-Ra'oof.

Jess Atkinson's third field goal, a 28-yarder on the last play of the half, was set up by linebacker Eric Wilson's 30-yard return of an intercepted pass.

The first two field goals by Atkinson, from 47 and 33 yards, were set up by breakdowns in Virginia's kicking game. A 20-yard punt from his 7 by Kevin Ferguson led to the first field goal, and the second came after Ray Daly fumbled a punt and Ron Fazio recovered for Maryland on the 'Virginia 17.

Virginia's first touchdown was the result of a 78-yard drive, all on the ground. Majkowski had 36 yards rushing and scored on the 12th play.

The first of two touchdowns by sophomore tailback Howard Petty was the 11th play of an 80-yard drive by Virginia. Petty had runs of 14 and 11 yards and Antonio Rice a 13-yard run in the advance, in which Majkowski completed 3 of 4 passes for 24 yards.

Bad Snap Ends Duke's Hopes Of Upset Victory

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM (AP) — Duke football coach Steve Sloan considers it a miracle that North Carolina took a 17-15 victory from his Blue Devils. It seemed more like a simple case of bad luck, however.

Carl Carr dashed 96 yards with a fumble recovery and Ethan Horton dived in for a 1-yard score in the third period. Still, Duke had a shot at knocking off the Tar Heels.

The end came on Ken Harper's 26-yard field goal attempt. Ted Million snapped the ball over everyone's head. Noel McEachern caught up with the ball at the 46 and it was over for the Blue Devils.

"To anyone who saw the game, it had to be a miracle that they won," Sloan said. "I thought we dominated the game and I think (North Carolina coach Dick) Crum would agree. They got two touchdowns on flukes and we moved the ball well the entire game."

Duke had marched from its 16 to the North Carolina 6 with the help of a 49-yard pass play from Steve Slayden to John White. The decision to kick came after a timeout.

"It was pretty close and there was a little question about going for it," Sloan said. "But realistically, there was no other choice."

Duke held a nearly 2-1 edge in offense and pushed North Carolina defense about the field. Nonetheless, it was a matter of capitalizing on the breaks and North Carolina cashed in.

"I want to give Duke credit for taking our running game away from us," Crum said. "They had a fine game plan and really got after us defensively."

Harper had given the Blue Devils a 3-0 lead early in the second quarter and Duke was about to raise the lead when Carr grabbed Tracy Smith's fumble from the air and outran Slayden for the score. It was the longest fumble return for a score in ACC history, breaking the record of 89 yards set by Virginia's Bryan Shumock against Virginia Tech in 1979.

Horton, who was nursing a sore ankle and who played briefly, got his scoring run with 6:16 left. Duke was apparently in possession following a punt, but the officials, after discussing the play for several moments, ruled that the punt touched Howard Woods and awarded the ball to the Tar Heels to set up the touchdown.

Ken Miller's streak of 15 consecutive field goals came to an end with two first-half misses, but he kicked a 36-yard field goal with 21 seconds left in the third period.

Duke had little trouble moving against the Tar Heel defense, but could only get field goals of 25 and 32 yards from Harper in the first half and a 7-yard pass from Slayden to

Lady Heels Hand ECU Second Loss

FAYETTEVILLE — Dawn Royster pushed in 27 points and pulled 14 rebounds in leading the University of North Carolina's Lady Tar Heels to a 77-65 basketball victory over East Carolina last night.

The loss was the second straight for the Lady Pirates in two nights. They lost to N.C. State, 93-63, on Friday night as the three teams, along with UNC-Charlotte, played in the annual Dogwood Classic doubleheader.

State played UNCC in the nightcap.

East Carolina managed to move out into a 9-4 lead in the early going of the game, forcing several turnovers by the Tar Heels over the first seven minutes of play.

But the Tar Heels finally gained control at 12-11 and never lost the lead again. They steadily pulled away behind 12 points by Royster and ten by Kathy Wilson. By the end of the half, the Lady Heels held a 40-29 lead.

East Carolina rallied at the start of the second half, outscoring North Carolina, 12-7, to cut the lead back to 47-41. But after getting two quick baskets, Carolina added a three-point play by Pam Hammond to take a 57-43 lead.

The Lady Pirates again rallied, this time to within eight with 7:09 left in the game as Sylvia Bragg connected for her first points of the evening. But they could come no closer and Carolina held on for the win.

Anita Anderson led the Pirate scoring with 19 points while Loraine Foster added 12. Lisa Squirewell pulled away 11 rebounds, while Anderson picked off nine.

In addition to Royster's scoring, Wilson finished with 13, while Marlene List and Pam Leake each has 12. Wilson also pulled away ten rebounds.

East Carolina's biggest problem was hitting from the field, as they connected on but 27 of 67 shots (40.3), while UNC canned 30 of 65 (46.2). Bragg was good on only two of 15 shots from the field.

Carolina climbs to 3-0 with the win, while the Lady Pirates drop to 0-2. East Carolina will open its 1984-85 home schedule on Wednesday, when the Lady Pirates entertain Fayetteville State at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Charles Sparks State By Camels

RALEIGH (AP) — Senior forward Lorenzo Charles scored 18 points and junior guard Ernie Myers added 16 as 13th-ranked North Carolina State blasted Campbell 94-54 in non-conference college basketball Saturday.

Senior center Cozell McQueen scored 13 points and sophomore forward Russell Pierre chipped in with 12 for the Wolfpack in the season opener for both teams.

N.C. State, going to its deep bench early and often, jumped to a 16-6 lead in the first seven minutes and never looked back.

Led by Pierre, who scored 5 early points, the Wolfpack reeled off a 14-3 spurt to take its biggest first-half advantage at 28-9 with 7:40 left, a margin it equalled three times in the opening period before taking a 42-28 halftime lead.

McQueen led an early 14-5 surge in the second half, scoring six points, as N.C. State went ahead 56-33 with 14:08 left. Campbell pulled to within 58-40 on senior guard Andrea McGee's 10-footer with 12:30 left, but got no closer.

The Wolfpack used a 14-0 surge, with Charles scoring six including two dunks, to increase the lead to 76-43 with 5:17 left.

N.C. State's biggest margin was 88-47 when freshman center Chris Washburn hit a free throw.

McGee led Campbell with 17 points, and senior center Russ Elbaum added 10.

Bowl Situation Quickly Clearing

By The Associated Press

Oklahoma's 24-14 triumph over Oklahoma State boosted the Sooners into the Orange Bowl Saturday as bowl invitations officially were extended.

The second-ranked Sooners, 9-1-1, will play Washington, 10-1 and runner-up in the Pacific 10 to Southern California.

Top-ranked Brigham Young will make its postseason appearance in the Holiday Bowl. The Cougars, headed to their seventh consecutive Holiday Bowl after they won the Western Athletic Conference, will take on 6-5 Michigan, a Big Ten also-ran.

If Brigham Young falters in the Holiday, the Orange Bowl could decide the national championship.

Texas' 24-10 loss to Baylor threw the Cotton Bowl into a flux. Tenth-ranked Boston College, 8-2 with Holy Cross on the schedule next weekend, was invited to play the Southwest Conference winner. That will be Arkansas if it beats No. 11 Southern Methodist Saturday night and if Houston wins next week against Rice. Or Houston will go if SMU downed Arkansas and the Cougars cook Rice next week. Or it still could be Texas, if it gets by Texas A&M next Saturday and Houston loses.

Even SMU could wind up in the Cotton Bowl with a victory over Arkansas and losses by Houston and Texas next week.

The Cotton Bowl situation affects several other bowls which intended to invite the SWC contenders.

The Sugar Bowl will feature Big Eight co-champion Nebraska, 9-2, against either No. 13 Auburn or No. 16 Louisiana State. Florida won the Southeastern Conference but is going on probation. Auburn, 8-3, plays Alabama next week and a victory will send it to New Orleans. If Auburn loses, LSU goes to the Sugar.

The only New Year's Bowl which was set prior to Saturday was the Rose Bowl. Big Ten champion Ohio State, 9-2, takes on Southern California, which lost 19-7 to Notre Dame, and finished 8-3.

The Fiesta Bowl, the fifth Jan. 1 game, has No. 12 Miami, 8-4, against No. 19 UCLA, 8-3.

South Carolina, 10-1, lost 26-14 to Wake Forest in the first Gator Bowl in 1946. The ninth-ranked Gamecocks get another shot this year against No. 3 Oklahoma State, 9-2.South Carolina is winless in five bowl appearances.

No. 11 Southern Methodist was set for the Aloha Bowl — unless the Mustangs sneak into the Cotton Bowl. SMU's opponent is Notre Dame, 7-4.

The SEC team which does not go to the Sugar Bowl among Auburn and LSU will oppose Arkansas in the Liberty Bowl — unless Arkansas qualifies for the Cotton.

Army and Virginia, two teams which have never seen postseason action, officially accepted bowl invitations Saturday.

The Cadets, 6-3-1, will be playing in the brand new Cherry Bowl at Pontiac, Mich., against Michigan State, 6-5. Army has one game remaining, its traditional battle with Navy.

Virginia, 7-2-2 and runner-up in the Atlantic Coast Conference, earned a trip to the Peach Bowl against Purdue, 7-4.

No. 15 Florida State, 7-2-1 with a meeting against Florida next Saturday, was invited to the Florida Citrus Bowl to play No. 20 Georgia, 7-3 with Georgia Tech on next weekend's agenda.

Texas Christian, ranked 17th, lost 35-21 to Texas A&M to fall to 8-3 but was invited to the Bluebonnet Bowl against West Virginia, 7-4.

Maryland, ranked 18th, earned a trip to the Sun Bowl. The 8-3 Terrapins won the Atlantic Coast Conference and will oppose 6-3-1 Tennessee, which has a game left with Vanderbilt.

The other new bowl, the Freedom in Anaheim, Calif., invited Iowa, 6-4-1, to play either Texas or Houston.

The Hall of Fame Bowl took 8-3 Kentucky and 7-3-1 Wisconsin. Virginia Tech, 8-3, opposes Air Force in the Independence Bowl. The California Bowl matches Nevada Las-Vegas of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Toledo of the Mid American.

Gamecocks Rally, Slip Past Clemson, 22-21

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Christmas came early for South Carolina's ninth-ranked football team.

The Gamecocks received two big presents in the form of Clemson penalties, turned the gifts into eight points and erased a 21-3 deficit to defeat their arch-rival 22-21 Saturday.

Quarterback Mike Hold's one-yard run with 54 seconds left and Scott Hagler's second-chance extra point capped a rally that began with a roughing the kicker penalty late in the first half as Hagler missed a 27-yard field goal attempt.

Quinton Lewis' five-yard touchdown run more than made up for Hagler's miss and pulled South Carolina to within 21-10.

The Gamecocks, who completed the winningest regular season in their history with a 10-1 record and a Gator Bowl bid, marched 84 yards in eight plays for the tying touchdown, including a 36-yard pass from Hold to Chris Wade and runs of 16 yards by Quinton Lewis and 18 by Thomas Dendy.

Hold, getting his first start of the season after being South Carolina's relief pitcher over the first 10 games, scored on a keeper to the right side. Hagler's first conversion kick was wide, but a Clemson player failed to get to the sidelines in time and the Tigers were penalized for having too many men on the field.

"The referee blew the whistle when I was starting my approach, so I stopped, brought my head up and just kicked the ball anyway," explained Hagler. "I had no butterflies. Not really. That's what I live to do. My job is to put the ball through the goalposts."

Given a reprieve, Hagler's second kick was perfect, giving him a school record 43-for-43 this season.

"This was just a great, great win and it really shows the character of our football team," said Coach Joe Morrison. "Any win is a big win, but with all that (Clemson) orange in the stands today, it really means a lot. The character of this team has shown through all year long. I told our young men this was what college football is all about and I felt this would be quite an experience. It was."

Lewis' second-chance touchdown sliced Clemson's 21-3 lead to 21-10. South Carolina kept closing in with a safety in the third period and Hagler's 41-yard field goal midway through the final quarter. Hagler also kicked a 23-yard field goal for the Gamecocks' first points of the game.

Quarterback Mike Eppley's clutch running set up first-half touchdowns by Clemson tailbacks Terrence Flagler, Stacey Driver and Steve Griffin on runs of nine yards, one yard and 12 yards, respectively.

But Clemson failed to score after taking a 21-3 lead with 2:50 left in the first half and finished its poorest season since 1980 with a 7-4 record after three years in which the Tigers posted a 30-2-2 mark, including the 1981 national championship.

"We're real proud of our seniors for the record they had at Clemson," said Coach Danny Ford. "I thought we played well in the first half, but they got that safety and we had some penalties that hurt us. Our problem seemed to be that we couldn't make the big play in the third and fourth quarters."

Clemson's only good news was an end to three years of probation, two by the NCAA and one by the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The setback also ended Clemson's 25-game unbeaten streak — 23-0-2 — in Memorial Stadium, also known as Death Valley.

Hagler's second field goal with 7:19 remaining pulled South Carolina to within 21-15 and the Gamecocks began their winning drive at their 16-yard line with 3:07 left following Dale Hatcher's punt.

On third-and-seven, Hold, who completed only six of 24 passes for 112 yards, teamed with Wade on a 36-yard play to the Clemson 45. Lewis then cracked the right side for 16 yards and Dendy, who reeled off a 51-yard run on Carolina's first touchdown drive, took a pitchout around right end for 18 more.

Hold kept for two yards and then added a seven-yard run. With a face mask penalty against Clemson tacked on, it gave the Gamecocks a first down at the one and Hold promptly lugged it in for the tying points.

South Carolina's swarming "Fire Ant" defense not only shut Clemson out in the second half but provided two vital points when ends Tony Guyton and Willie McIntee sacked Eppley in the end zone for a 10-yard loss and a safety early in the third period.

Flagler's nine-yard run with 1:32 left in the opening period capped a 41-yard drive after a short punt and gave Clemson a 7-0 lead. Hagler's first field goal made it 7-3 early in the second period but Eppley, who fooled South Carolina with his option keepers through much of the first half, took the Tigers on a 13-play, 86-yard march, which included runs of 15 and 30 yards by the quarterback. Driver's one-yard made it 14-3 midway through the second quarter.

Clemson struck again when Griffin darted 12 yards with 2:50 left in the half. It came four plays after Dendy fumbled the ball away at his 37 following a 17-yard pass from Hold. Fifteen of the yards came when South Carolina was called for roughing the Eppley on an incomplete pass.

Donald Igwebuike, who converted after each Clemson touchdown, set an ACC single-season record of 41 extra points without a miss.

Leading 21-3, Igwebuike's kickoff was returned 13 yards to the Carolina 17 by Kevin White. After Hold kept twice for 21 yards, Dendy dashed 51 yards to the Clemson 11. Hold was sacked for a four-yard loss and threw two incomplete passes after Clemson was called for a five-yard face mask penalty.

On fourth-and-nine, Hagler missed a short-range field goal. But the roughing penalty made it fourth-and-four at the five and the Gamecocks called time out to talk it over. The decision was to go for a touchdown and Lewis slammed across to trigger the comeback.

"I decided I wanted to go for it," Morrison said, "and I told Coach Sadler (offensive coordinator Frank Sadler) to come up with a play. The trap was a great call."

Clemson had won won the last four games in this heated intrastate rivalry. The setback trimmed the Tigers' series lead to 48-31-3.

Watson Rakes In The Skins Dollars

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Tom Watson, at 35 the youngest member of golf's greatest foursome, won all the money — $120,000 — in a nine-hole shutout of Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player in the Skins Game Saturday.

"Oooooh," Watson breathed, his lips pursed and a big smile breaking across his face when he rapped in an eight-foot putt for a birdie that was worth $70,000 on the par-5 ninth hole at the Desert Highlands course.

While he had a huge lead, it was far from a lock at the halfway point of this unique event that brought together a foursome that has a combined total of 41 major professional victories.

Nine more holes, with a total of $240,000 up for grabs, are scheduled Sunday.

"He outclassed us all, quite easily," said Nicklaus, slightly hobbled by recent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

"It's a little better than through the first nine holes last year," Watson said, "but it isn't over."

Watson, who won a record sixth Player of the Year title earlier this season, was the only member of the foursome to score a birdie in the crisp, desert weather.

He made three of them, and won the first hole with a routine, two-putt par when the other three, each a Hall of Famer, all made bogey-5.

That was worth $10,000.

Watson, a five-time British Open champion and generally recognized as the outstanding player in the game today, also won the third and fifth holes — with carry-overs, each was worth $20,000 — with birdies. On the third, he scored from about 15 feet, and needed only a six-footer on the fifth.

The format calls for a prize of $10,000 on each of the first six holes, $20,000 on the next six and $30,000 on the final six. If no player wins a hole outright, the money is carried over to the next hole.

With ties on the sixth (Nicklaus and Watson), seventh (Player and Watson) and eighth (Player and Watson), the par-5 ninth carried a $70,000 value.

And Watson got himself in trouble off the tee, driving into the cactus and wasteland of the desert while the other three landed in the fairway.

Watson had no chance of reaching the green in two and laid up. Nicklaus hit his second short of the green on a slope. Player, the biggest money-winner in this event last year, tried to get too much on his second shot and commented "I forced that," as the ball hooked into the sand. Palmer got his second in a bunker, but came out nicely and had a 15-footer for birdie, which he missed.

Nicklaus and Watson each put his third shot on the green, Nicklaus some 10-12 feet away and Watson only eight. Nicklaus missed and Watson rapped it home for his fourth skin of the day, a $70,000 prize and a shutout of the aging group once known as golf's Big Three.

Brigham Young Wins Again; Ends Regular Season At 12-0

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Lakei Heimuli and Vai Sikahema ran for two touchdowns each as top-ranked Brigham Young rolled over Utah State 38-13 Saturday, giving the Cougars a spotless 12-0 season record and extending college football's longest winning streak to 23 games.

BYU became only the third team ever to win 12 games in a season — Nebraska has done it twice. The Western Athletic Conference champions now have a chance to go 13-0 when they entertain 6-5 Michigan of the Big Ten in the Holiday Bowl Dec. 21 in San Diego.

The nation's leading passing team scored only once through the air in the penalty-plagued contest. However, BYU quarterback Robbie Bosco threw for 338 yards in directing the Cougar offense.

Utah State, 1-10 to end its season, remained in the game, trailing 24-13, until early in the final quarter, when Heimuli scored on a 4-yard run set up by Sikahema's 56-yard punt return.

A BYU interception seconds later was followed by a 26-yard scoring jaunt by Sikahema for the game's final score with 9:19 remaining.

BYU, which won its ninth straight WAC title three weeks ago, claimed the Beehive Boot — emblematic of gridiron supremacy in Utah — and the Old Wagon Wheel contested each year by the longstanding in-state rivals. The game was played before a record crowd of 65,580.

Utah State went into intermission trailing 17-7 after quarterback Gym Kimball fired a 3-yard touchdown pass to Tracy Duckworth.

Kimball's 50-yard pass to Richard Gwynn set up Willie Beecher's 27-yard field goal midway through the third quarter, drawing the Aggies to within 17-10.

However, a bad USU punt was followed by a 19-yard touchdown pass from Bosco to Mark Bellini late in the third period to make it 24-10.

Beecher's 46-yard field goal late in the quarter completed USU's scoring.

BYU's Bosco, a junior, broke an NCAA record previously held by four other quarterbacks, passing for more than 200 yards a game for 12 games in a season.

Oklahoma (2).....24
Oklahoma St. (3).....14

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Spencer Tillman scored two second-half touchdowns as No. 2 Oklahoma came from behind Saturday to defeat third-ranked Oklahoma State, 24-14, to win a share of the Big Eight Conference and a berth in the Orange Bowl.

Tillman's scores, on runs of 3 and 20 yards, came on option pitches from quarterback Danny Bradley and capped long drives by Oklahoma, 9-1-1.

Tillman's first score came after Oklahoma State, which finished the season 9-2 and goes to the Gator Bowl against South Carolina, took a 14-7 lead by scoring on the last play of the first half and the third play of the third quarter.

The Sooners' initial score came on a 6-yard touchdown pass from Bradley to tight end Keith Jackson.

With 1:23 left in the first half, a Bradley pass was tipped and intercepted by Oklahoma State's Warren Thompson.

Hilger then directed the Cowboys down to the Sooners' 1-yard-line, where Thurman Thomas was stopped for no gain with :08 remaining.

Because of the slowness in unscrambling the play, officials stopped the clock with four seconds left, and Hilger then lofted a pass to a diving Jamie Harris in the corner of the end zone for the tying score as time expired.

The Cowboys then struck quickly with a 77-yard touchdown pass from Hilger to Malcolm Lewis to take a 14-7 lead on their third play after halftime.

After the Sooners tied up the game 14-14, Oklahoma State turnovers contributed to the next two scores by Oklahoma. Meanwhile, Oklahoma's defense completely stifled the Oklahoma State offense.

Oklahoma regained the lead, 17-14, on a 27-yard field goal by Tim Lashar after the Sooners' Dante Jones recovered an Oklahoma State fumble.

Tillman then scored on a 20-yard run early in the fourth quarter after Oklahoma State's Bobby Riley fumbled a punt, which was recovered by Oklahoma's Kert Kasper at the Cowboys' 25.

Baylor.....24
Texas (6).....10

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor scored on two short touchdown drives after an interception by linebacker Ray Berry and a fumble recovery by defensive end Derek Turner to upset sixth-ranked Texas 24-10 in Southwest Conference football action Saturday.

The loss stalled, and perhaps ended, Texas' hopes for an SWC championship and automatic host spot in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas on Jan. 1.

Texas fell to 5-2 in the conference, tying the Longhorns with four other teams that have two losses each. The Longhorns, reportedly being considered by several other bowls, are 7-2-1 for the season and play Texas A&M next Saturday.

Baylor, ending its season at 5-6 and 4-4 in the SWC, has beaten Texas five out of the last six games at Waco.

Texas scored first on Jeff Ward's 38-yard field goal with 1:06 left in the first quarter, and Baylor rebounded after Berry intercepted a Todd Dodge pass and returned it 9 yards to the Texas 18. On third down from the 14, quarterback Cody Carlson threw to running back Derrick McAdoo for the touchdown and a 7-3 Baylor halftime lead.

A fumble by Texas' Kevin Nelson on the Longhorns' first possession in the second half was recovered by Turner at the Texas 24. After a 12-yard loss, a 27-yard pass from Baylor quarterback Tom Muecke to Glenn Pruitt carried it to the Texas 9. Ralph Stockemer ran over left tackle untouched on fourth-and-one for a 14-3 lead.

Dodge, who was knocked dizzy in the first half, threw three second-half interceptions, including a game-clinching 46-yard scoring return by Thomas Everett with 3:21 left in the game.

Dodge, intercepted five times two weeks ago in Texas' other SWC loss to Houston, guided the Longhorns 54 yards in the third quarter for their only touchdown. Nelson scored on a 1-yard leap.

Notre Dame.....19
Southern Cal (14).....7

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tim Brown and Allen Pinkett scored touchdowns in a four-minute span of the second quarter as Notre Dame sloshed to a 19-7 victory over 14th-ranked Southern Cal in a downpour Saturday and wrap up a berth in the Aloha Bowl.

John Carney kicked two 45-yard field goals in the third period for the Irish as they beat error-prone Southern Cal in the Los Angeles Coliseum for the first time since 1966.

Notre Dame wound up the regular season with a four-game winning streak to finish at 7-4 and will play in the Dec. 29 Aloha Bowl in Honolulu, probably facing 11th-ranked SMU.

The defeat, the Trojans' second straight, put them at 8-3. However, Southern Cal already had won the Pacific-10 title to clinch a Rose Bowl date with Ohio State on Jan. 1.

After the Trojans took a 7-0 lead on Ryan Knight's three-yard touchdown run seven minutes into the second period, Irish quarterback Steve Beuerlein directed a 76-yard scoring drive to tie the contest. Brown capped the march when he cut across the field just behind the line of scrimmage, took a short shovel pass from Beuerlein and scooted 11 yards around end for a touchdown.

Moments later, Notre Dame linebacker Rick DiBernardo came up with a fumble by the Trojans' Fred Crutcher to give the Irish the ball at the Southern Cal 44-yard line and set up the next score. Pinkett squirted three yards up the middle for the go-ahead touchdown.

With tackle Mike Gann and safey Hiawatha Francisco leading the Irish defense, Notre Dame held the Trojans scoreless after Ryan's touchdown.

Carney's third-period field goals, coming on a slick, muddy field, both followed Irish recoveries of fumbles by Southern Cal quarterback Tim Green.

Green, having trouble with the snap from center, also fumbled the ball away two other times, and Crutcher lost a pair of fumbles.

Texas A&M.....35
Texas Christian (17)...21

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M, criticized throughout much of a lackluster season, ignited behind a 53-yard interception return for a touchdown by James Flowers and three touchdowns by Anthony Toney to beat 17th-ranked Texas Christian 35-21 Saturday.

The loss seriously damaged TCU's chances of being the Southwest Conference representative in the Cotton Bowl but the Horned Frogs were poised to accept an invitation to the New Year's Eve Bluebonnet Bowl game in the Astrodome against West Virginia, 7-4.

The Aggies, blanked by Arkansas 28-0 last week, scored the game's first 17 points and held on in the fourth quarter to improve their season record to 5-5 and their SWC record to 2-5.

TCU dropped to a 5-3 in the SWC and 8-3 for the season.

The Aggies had to hold off a fourth-quarter TCU surge that included a one-yard touchdown run by Toney Jeffery and a nine-yard touchdown pass from Antony Sciaraffa to running back Kenneth Davis before claiming their victory.

Toney ran one yard for the final touchdown with 1:24 to play. His touchdown followed a fumble at the TCU 8 by quarterback Anthony Gulley that was recovered by A&M's Rod Sadler.

A&M's startling first-half surge started with Flowers' 53-yard interception return for a touchdown on TCU's first series and the Horned Frogs didn't recover until 37 seconds remained in the half when Sciarafa hit Dan Sharp with an 11-yard touchdown pass to make it 20-7 at the half.

Kentucky 17
Tennessee 12

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kentucky tailack George Adams ran for 110 yards and scored two touchdowns Saturday as he became only the third Wildcat to exceed 1,000 yards rushing in a season during a 17-12 Southeastern Conference football victory over Tennessee.

Both teams accepted bowl bids after the contest, with Kentucky headed for the Hall of Fame Bowl for the second year in a row to play Wisconsin and Tennessee going to the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Tex., to meet Maryland.

Kentucky, which lost a 20-16 decision to West Virginia in last year's game at Birmingham, Ala., ended its regular season at 8-3 overall, 3-3 in the SEC.

Tennessee, which slipped to 6-3-1 overall and 2-3 in the SEC, will meet Maryland for the second year in a row. The Vols topped Maryland 30-23 in last year's Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

Kentucky took the lead for good 4:25 into the game after a 25-yard drive that began when Tennessee tailback Charles Wilson fumbled on the game's first play from scrimmage and defensive guard Frank Hare recovered for Kentucky.

Adams, who has now rushed for 1,085 yards this season, scored on a 2-yard run and place-kicker Joey Worley added the conversion kick.

Adams scored on a 1-yard run with 11:05 left in the third quarter to give the Wildcats a 14-6 lead and Worley added a 34-yard field goal with 2:09 left in the contest after Tennessee had pulled to within 14-12.

Cards Upset Indiana, 75-64

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Seniors Manuel Forrest and Milt Wagner led 17th-ranked Louisville to a 75-64 victory over No. 4 Indiana Saturday in their season opener and first meeting between the two schools in 25 years.

Forrest, a 6-foot-6 forward, scored 18 points, and Wagner, a 6-5 guard, hit from the outside for 17.

Louisville withstood a late Hoosier rally after leading 39-27 at halftime and 63-48 with 7:50 to play.

Two layups by freshman Delray Brooks reduced Louisville's margin to 69-64 with 2:10 remaining, but Louisville pulled away again on two free throws apiece by senior reserve James Jeter and Forrest and Jeff Hall's layin.

Other Cardinals in double figures were Billy Thompson with 12 points and Hall with 10.

Sophomore guard Steve Alford, Indiana's leading scorer last season, was the only Hoosier to score double figures with 18.

Mike Giomi and Todd Meier added eight points apiece for the Hoosiers.

Louisville, which lost starters Lancaster Gordon and Charles Jones from last season, was outscored by the Hoosiers 13-0 early in the first half and fell behind 20-11.

But the Cardinals bounced back behind Wagner and Forrest and scored the last 13 points before intermission as Indiana committed 17 turnovers.

Indiana cut down on its turnovers in the second half and wound up with 25. Louisville had 20.

Indiana's freshmen were put into the game in the second half and Steve Eyl's two jumpers brought the Hoosiers to within 47-41. But Wagner tossed in a 15-footer, his final points of the day, with 13:47 to go, and the Cardinals ran away gain to their biggest lead, 63-48, on Barry Sumpter's layin.

Another Indiana freshman, Brian Sloan, hit two goals to keep Indiana close late in the contest.

Louisville shot 48 percent from the field to Indiana's 42.

Forrest made six of nine shots from the field and Wagner seven of 18. Alford connected on seven of 16 from the floor.

Forrest and Thompson paced Louisville in rebounds with six apiece, while Giomi topped the Hoosiers with seven.

Clemson's Perry Is Among Lombardi Award Finalists

HOUSTON (AP) — Four players have been named finalists for the Rotary-Lombardi "College Linesmen of the Year" Award in 1984, the 15th year the award has been presented to the best linesman in college football.

The four, who are all seniors, were selected in voting by a 217-member national selection committee of college football coaches, sportswriters and sportscasters.

Selected as finalists are Tony Degrate, a University of Texas defensive tackle; Jack Del Rio, a Southern California outside linebacker; Bill Fralic, a Pittsburgh offensive tackle; and William Perry, a Clemson noseguard.

The winner will be named at a 1,000-guest awards dinner Dec. 6 in Houston.

Degrate is a 6-foot-4, 280-pound All-Southwest Conference player, whom Texas Coach Fred Akers says is "getting better and better."

"Last year going against him was like trying to block an oak tree and in 1984 the tree was a year older and stronger," Akers said.

Southern California Coach Ted Tollner says Del Rio, at 6-4, 250 pounds, "is the most dominant defensive player in the Pac-10 and the most aggressive, intense one I've ever been around. He gives 100 percent on every down."

Fralic, 6-5, 285 pounds, was the only underclassman to be a finalist for last year's Lombardi award.

"Bill's one of the greatest players in his position in the history of college football," said Panthers Coach Foge Fazio. "Take a Tony Dorsett at his position or Hugh Green at his. Bill Fralic at his position is in the same category."

A leader in both quarterback sacks and tackles-for-loss at Clemson, Perry, 6-3, 315 pounds, is the Tigers' strongest player, being able to bench press 465 pounds.

"Perry is outstanding and one of the most mobile players at his position in the nation," said Clemson coach Danny Ford.

Pitt.....31
Penn State.....11

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback John Congemi threw three touchdown passes as Pitt rose from the ashes of its worst season in 12 years to upset Penn State 31-11 Saturday in the 84th meeting of these traditional rivals.

Congemi completed 16 of 22 passes for 204 yards as Pitt boosted its record to 3-7-1 for the season and reduced their deficit in the series to 41-39-4.

Penn State lost for the fifth time against six victories as the Nittany Lions posted the worst record since they were 5-5 in Coach Joe Paterno's first season in 1966.

Penn State took a 3-0 lead in the opening period after recovering a kickoff fumble at the Pitt 9. Nick Gancitano booted a 21-yard field goal.

Then Pitt took over. Congemi threw 29 yards for a touchdown to split end Bill Wallace to send the Panthers ahead 7-3. Congemi repeated to Wallace for 30 yards and a second-period touchdown to make it 14-3.

Pitt then intercepted a pass and drove to a 39-yard field goal by Mark Brasco, boosting its lead to 17-3. Before the half ended, Congemi threw 23 yards to Chuck Scales for a touchdown and a 24-3 halftime lead.

Houston.....24
Texas Tech.....17

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Houston running back Raymond Tate grabbed a 9-yard pass from quarterback Gerald Landry late in the fourth quarter to score his second touchdown and clinch a 24-17 victory over Texas Tech in Southwest Conference football action Saturday.

The victory boosted Houston to 6-4 overall and 5-2 in conference play. Tech, playing its final game of the season, fell to 4-7 and 2-6.

Tate, who gave the Cougars their first six points on a 10-yard run in the first period, put Houston up 22-17 with 6:41 left in the fourth quarter. Houston added insurance points on a two-point conversion, a pass from Landry to junior Carl Hilton.

Tate and Landry led the Cougars in rushing, gaining 116 and 94 yards respectively.

In a see-saw battle in a constant drizzle of rain, Houston outplayed Tech offensively, gaining 357 yards to the Red Raiders' 265.

Jackson Eulogizes Slain Chicago Basketball Star

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson eulogized slain high school basketball star Ben Wilson as "one day the No.1 treasure, the next day the No. 1 tragedy" at the funeral Saturday, which was attended by thousands of mourners.

About 2,000 people packed into the auditorium of Operation PUSH, Jackson's civil rights organization, to pay their last respects to Wilson, who police said was slain by two teen-agers on the street near his high school Wednesday.

Thousands more were gathered outside, and the two-hour service was interrupted at least twice as some of them tried to get in.

"We're gathered here today, heavy-hearted, teary-eyed, because a superstar is dead — shot down unarmed, in cold blood — in the midday of his life," Jackson said.

"When a young person dies as their flower is budding, you feel death has cheated them," he said.

Following the service, the funeral procession drove to a cemetery on Chicago's South Side where Wilson was buried, wearing his basketball uniform.

A seven-hour wake was held Friday night for Wilson at the Simeon High School gymnasium, where last year Wilson led the Wolverines to the Class AA state championship.

Mayor Harold Washington also praised Wilson on Saturday, saying, "He lit the skies with his brilliance, and in so doing, taught others how to be the best."

Ray Meyer, retired basketball coach at DePaul University, which was among the schools watching the 6-foot-8 forward's athletic career, said, "Benji was a boy, a young man, of stature, a young man of character.

"He was all the things we want to see in an individual. I have not seen a better potential basketball player in the last four or five years than Benji Wilson. ... He was the kind of player I'd love to have play for me."

Simeon Principal Ned McCray told family, schoolmates, faculty and friends at the funeral that the school "has lost one of its finest members."

Wilson's death "has created pain and sorrow that has drawn nationwide attention," McCray said. "His memory will always be with us — the tall, smooth, graceful figure, creating magic on the court."

Bad Snap...

Gary Frederick with 9:30 left to play. Slayden attempted a two-point conversion pass, but missed Frederick.

Duke finishes at 2-9, duplicating its record of 1980. The Blue Devils close at 1-5 in the ACC.

North Carolina closes at 5-5-1, avoiding a second losing season in the last five years. The Tar Heels are 3-2-1 in league play.

North Carolina chose to attack Duke through the air, rushing only seven times and gaining 14 yards in the first half. Duke's offense had much easier going, gaining 234 yards, 127 of which were on Slayden's 12-of-20 passing in the first 30 minutes.

Harper's 37-yard field goal try was wide midway through the first period, but he hit a 26-yard attempt at the 14:46 mark of the second quarter for Duke's temporary lead.

Anthony fumbled the snap from Brian Johnston and Nick Buoniconti recovered for the Blue Devils at the North Carolina 22. The Blue Devils reached the 8 when Slayden hit Smith in the left flat. Barry James' tackle jarred the ball loose and Carr grabbed it out of the air and raced for the score. Miller added the conversion and North Carolina took a 7-3 advantage with 11:55 left before halftime.

The Tar Heels used a pass interference call to reach the Duke 27, but Miller missed a 36-yard field goal try. Miller also missed a 50-yard effort as time ran out.

Duke's offense continued to push the Tar Heels around and the Blue Devils got a 32-yard Harper field goal with 2:34 left before intermission to narrow the deficit.

Spiders Win I-AA Playoff Opener

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Greg Grooms and David Bayer scored two touchdowns apiece and Bob Bleier threw for 225 yards to lead Richmond to a 35-33 victory over Boston University in NCAA Division I-AA football playoff action Saturday.

The 8-3 Spiders, who will play at Rhode Island next Saturday in the second round of the playoffs, survived a late scare by the Terriers, who finished at 9-3.

Richmond had a 35-14 lead with 10:41 left, but Boston University quarterback Pat Mancini connected with William Brooks for three touchdowns to cut the margin to 35-33. After the Terriers' final score however, Richmond was able to run out the clock.

Boston Univesity had taken an early first quarter 7-0 lead on an 11-yard run by Paul Lewis. Bleier retaliated with a 21-yard scoring strike to Grooms to tie the game late in the quarter.

Grooms and Bayer then scored one apiece to give Richmond 21-7 lead with 5:24 left in the first half. Lewis countered with a 4-yard scoring run with 2:15 left in the half.

Following a scoreless third period, Bayer rumbled into the end zone from 8 yards out, giving Richmond a 28-7 lead on the fourth play of the final quarter.

On their next possession, the Spiders went 60 yards in five plays, with Bleier hitting James Church for a 27-yard score. Then the Terriers went to work.

The Mancini-to-Brooks scores came on strikes of 34, 18 and 4 yards, the final strike coming with 2:11 left. But Richmond made one first down on its next possession, and Boston University was unable to stop the clock.

Louisiana Tech.....66
Miss. Valley St.....19

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Louisiana Tech, sparked by Kyle Gandy's passing and David Green's rushing, rolled over Mississippi Valley State 66-19 in an NCAA Division I-AA playoff opener Saturday.

Tech, 8-4, amassed 703 yards total offense with Gandy throwing for 262 yards and three touchdowns and tailback Green rushing 24 times for 179 yards and three touchdowns.

Mississippi Valley had averaged 60.9 points per game in a 9-1 regular season, and had 608 yards total offense in Saturday's game. Quarterback Willie Totten hit 43 of 75 passes for 485 yards and two touchdowns.

But Tech's defense intercepted six passes and recovered two Valley fumbles. Valley failed to score in the second half.

Tech, the Southland Conference champion, advanced to a quarterfinal game next Saturday at Jackson, Miss., against unbeaten Alcorn State, which handed Valley its only previous loss, 42-28, in a showdown for the Southwestern Athletic Conference Championship.

Gandy threw touchdown passes of 34 and 68 yards to Todd Breske, and Cleve Bailey scored on a 69-yard reverse run.

Green scored on runs of 1, 1 and 4 yards. Gerry Jones scored on an 8-yard pass from Gandy and a 5-yard run.

Arkansas St.....37
Tenn.-Chattanooga...10

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas State broke open a 9-3 NCAA Division I-AA playoff game against Tennessee-Chattanooga with a pair of touchdowns in the last 30 seconds of the first half and went on to a 37-10 victory Saturday.

The triumph, which boosted ASU's record to 8-3-1, moved the Indians into the quarterfinal round Saturday against second-ranked Montana State, 9-2, champions of the Big Sky conference.

The visitors fumbled the opening kickoff and less than two minutes had elapsed when fullback Ricky Jenison scored from the 1 after a 24-yard drive. Freshman Jim Wiseman increased ASU's lead to 9-0 with a 27-yard field goal early in the second period.

UTC's Scott Giem cut into ASU's lead with a 25-year field goal with 2:56 left in the half.

Arkansas State drove 85 yards to add a score with 24 seconds left before halftime. The touchdown came on a guard-around play by 6-foot-5, 255-pound Farrell Wilson.

Two plays later, with 19 seconds showing, ASU safety I.J. Chapman returned an intercepted pass 57 yards for a score.

The Indians increased their 23-3 halftime lead on a 1-yard dive by Preston Maddox with 1:23 left in the third period. They scored their final touchdown at 7:31 of the fourth on a 1-yard dive by reserve fullback Lewis Brown.

UTC scored at 6:13 of the fourth quarter on a 7-yard pass from Tim Couch to Darryl Streeter.

Middle Tenn.....27
Eastern Kentucky.....10

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — Vince Hall and Gerald Anderson rushed for fourth-quarter touchdowns to lead Middle Tenneseee to a 27-10 victory over Eastern Kentucky Saturday in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA college football playoffs.

Hall's 2-yard scoring run with 11:36 remaining in the last period culminated an 80-yard drive and gave Middle Tennessee some breathing room at 20-10.

Anderson added the game's final score with a 33-yard run with 1:04 left to ice the victory.

Middle Tennessee, 10-2 overall, now advances to play Indiana State at Terre Haute next Saturday, while Eastern's season ended with an 8-4 record. Eastern was the Ohio Valley Conference regular season champs, and Middle Tennessee was the conference runner-up.

Bias' Jumper Lets Terps Win, 54-52

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Len Bias banked in a short jump shot with three seconds remaining to enable Maryland to subdue Alaska-Anchorage 54-52 Saturday in the Great Alaska Shootout.

In an earlier loser's bracket game, an injured Fred Jenkins came off the bench to score 14 second-half points and lift the Tennessee Volunteers to a 65-59 victory over Idaho State.

Later winner's bracket games pitted Alabama-Birmingham against No. 2-ranked Illinois and 19th-ranked Kansas against Oregon.

Sloppy ballhandling and poor shooting by Maryland enabled the overmatched Seawolves, the tournament's only Division II team, to stay close throughout the game.

Even when the taller, stronger, quicker Terrapins built an 11-point lead with just over 11 minutes to go in the game, the determined Seawolves refused to fold.

They battled back to tie it at 52 on Kevin Smith's long jumper with 1:26 remaining. UAA had a chance to take the lead with 58 seconds, but Gerald Brown missed the front end of a one-and-one.

The Terrapins ran the clock down to 11 seconds before calling time out to set up their final play. Bias maneuvered his way in for a four-footer directly in front of the basket.

He was fouled, but missed the free throw, giving the Seawolves one more chance. But John Larsen's desperation jumper was far off the mark at the buzzer.

Bias, a 6-foot-8 junior forward from Landover, Md., finished with a game-high 21 points.

Smith and Ron Beach each had 11 for the Seawolves.

Arkansas Eases By SE Louisiana

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Joe Kleine scored a game-high 23 points and senior forward Charles Balentine finished with 11 as No. 16 Arkansas defeated Southeastern Louisiana 65-62, in non-conference season-opening action for both teams at Barnhill Arena on Saturday.

Arkansas used all 14 players in different combinations throughout the game. Following the contest, head Coach Eddie Sutton brought the Razorbacks back out on the court for more practice.

"My biggest disappointment in the game is maybe we didn't compete as hard as we could have on both the floor and on the bench," Sutton said. "There have been too many guys give their blood and guts for this program for this bunch not to. These guys had better learn that."

Southeastern Louisiana was led by Willie Samuel's 17 points and teammate David Jones' 13. The Lions shot only 34 percent from the field, and hit 26 of 34 chances at the free-throw line.

Arkansas held its largest lead, 61-47, with 3:58 remaining as the Razorbacks outscored the Lions 11-1 over a span of six minutes.

Southeastern Louisiana outrebounded Arkansas by three with Samuel collecting 13. Kleine led Arkansas with 11 and Balentine had nine.

Rams Nip Warriors On Field Goal

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Quarterback Kenneth Warren rushed for a pair of touchdowns, but it took a 22-yard field goal by Kenneth Radford following a near turnover to lift the Greene Central Rams to a 24-22 victory over North Edgecombe Friday in the state 3-A Conference Division II playoffs.

The Rams led most of the way but had to rally in the final minutes of the game to regain the advantage. Greene Central drove 57 yards before settling for Radford's game-winning field goal with 20 seconds remaining, but North Edgecombe Coach Richard Byrd doubted the kicker's accuracy — and the officials' decision.

"I though it was three feet outside the field goal post," Byrd said. "That's the worst officiating I've seen in my life; the best football team's going home.

"There's no excuse for a bunch of officials being paid $200 to come down here and take a football game away from a bunch of kids that worked their butts off. That's got to be an automatic call; the officials just stood around and looked at each other — none of them had the guts to call it.

"That's going to leave a bad taste in our mouths for the rest of the year."

Although Byrd and the Warriors were upset — to say the least — with the ruling on the decisive field goal, it was a mistake by North Edgecombe on a potential Ram turnover that kept the final drive going.

With Greene Central facing fourth and 10 at the North Edgecombe 38, Warren completed a pass to Patrick Moye. After a four-yard gain, Moye fumbled, and a Warrior defender attempted to pick the ball up on the bounce. But Brad Monroe recovered the fumble for an additional seven yards and a Ram first down at the North Edgecombe 27.

Both coaches agreed that Monroe's fumble recovery was the crucial play in the game. Ironically, Monroe returned a fumble recovery 39 yards for a touchdown last week against Havelock to lead the Rams to a 14-8 victory.

"(Monroe) is quick and always around the football," Grantham said. "That's two big plays in two weeks."

On third and two at the 19, Warren passed to Moye for first down at the seven. Two incomplete passes and a two-yard run by Flowers set up Radford's boot.

"(The field goal) didn't look that close to me, but everybody I've talked to that was on that side of the field said it looked wide," Greene Central Coach Spence Grantham said. "It's hard to tell from the sideline."

The Rams rolled the ball on the kickoff and Radford recovered at the Warrior 48. Byrd, still livid over the ruling on the field goal, drew a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty, and a Warrior player was also flagged for 15 more yards to the 18.

Greene Central ran out the clock with one play from scrimmage.

"We really wanted him to hit it harder," Grantham said. "But we missed a signal. We didn't want to give them the ball with the type of field position they would of had if we hadn't recovered. We wanted to kick the ball low and maybe have it roll around to kill time."

In all, there were 14 fumbles with each team losing a pair.

Warren finished with 127 yards rushing on 13 carries, including touchdown runs of 29 and 69 yards. Jerome Flowers added 89 yards rushing after scoring the first touchdown for the Rams with a 63-yard run on their first play from scrimmage.

The Rams will host Jamestown Ragsdale next Friday for the Eastern championship of Division II. There is no state championship game in 3-A for the division.

Tailback Troy Suggs led North Edgecombe with 75 yards rushing, including touchdowns of one, 14 and five yards.

After Flowers' run put Greene Central on the board with loss than three minutes elapsed, the Warriors retaliated with a one-yard plunge by Suggs with 8:42 left in the second quarter. The point-after kick by Kenneth McKinzie hit the cross bar but floated through the up-rights to even the score at 7-7.

Warren's 29-yard TD run came with 4:52 left in the first half, and he added a 69-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage in the third quarter for a 21-7 Greene Central lead.

A 14-yard run by Suggs capped an 80-yard drive by the Warriors with 4:17 remaining in the third period.

Charles Pittman recovered a Greene Central fumble at the Rams' 25, and the Warriors needed seven plays before Suggs plowed through from five yards out with 11:17 to be played in the fourth quarter to trim the margin to 21-19.

Steve Watson blocked a Greene Central punt and recovered it at the Rams' 10 yard line. The Greene Central defense kept North Edgecombe out of the end zone on three running plays, and the Warriors were forced to settle on McKinzie's 21 yard field goal to take a 22-21 lead with 7:03 left in the final period.

The Rams ran 6:37 off the clock on their final drive after only running four plays from scrimmage in the third quarter.

"We were having a hard time sustaining our blocks," Grantham said. "They knew we weren't going to put the ball in the air much, and they played against the run well.

"In the fourth quarter, we mixed up our plays pretty good. Kenneth Warren had a couple of good runs; one was on a poor read when he just cut up the field. He's got quick feet, and he's a threat when he's out there.

"We're not a picture pretty team to watch. But if we get the lead early, we'll sit back and let our running backs take care of it."

Veteran William & Mary Team Could Be Challenger

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

(Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of previews of ECAC-South basketball teams for 1984-85.)

William & Mary's Indians were picked to finish second in the ECAC-South this year, and there's a very good reason for it. The Indians return a veteran squad that includes four of the starting five from last year and their top three scorers.

The lone loss from last year's club was 6-6 forward Gary Bland, who averaged 9.2 points per game.

But while that might be the bad news, it's the good news that's much more overpowering. Back are four seniors who were starters last year, along with a fine group of reserves and a couple of top freshmen, giving the Indians a fine balance of experience and youth.

Tops among the returnees is 6-4 guard Keith Cieplicki, an all-conference selection for three years. Cieplicki is the glue that holds the Tribe together, as well as the team's top scorer with a 15.3 average.

Also returning is 6-6 forward Kevin Richardson, who pushed through 10.8 points a game last year and was the leading rebounder with a 6.7 average.

Joining Richardson in the front court is 6-7 Herb Harris, a 6.7 point scorer who also averaged 4.9 rebounds.

And rounding out the group is 6-2 guard Tony Traver, who scored 9.6 points a game last season.

And while it might be only the second year for head coach Barry Parkhill, he's been around a while, having served for a number of years as brother Bruce's assistant before he departed.

Coming off a demanding schedule that left them 14-14 last year, the Indians have another rough slate this year, but can lick their chops when thinking about the ECAC-South tournament, to be played in William & Mary Hall.

"I hope we can be a nasty host," Parkhill said. "I feel good about this season, not because I have five seniors back, but because I have a year under my belt. We have a great player in Cieplicki and probably the most underated player in the league in Richardson."

The fifth senior on the team is 6-8 center/forward Matt Brooke, who averaged 2.2 points a game last year. But whether or not he makes the starting lineup will depend on his pre-season work.

Mike Bracken, a 6-8 junior with a 2.5 average, Bobby Dail, a 6-9 sophomore, Mark Boddy, a 6-10 sophomore, and David Bond, a 6-7 sophomore, are all in the running for the fifth spot.

Scott Coval, a 6-1 junior, will see action at point guard, while Scott Trimble, a 6-2 sophomore, will also play some there.

The two rookies on the team are 6-5 forward Alex Rocke, who averaged 27 points a game and 13 rebounds as a senior in high school, and Tim Trout, a 6-8 All-American who scored 19.6 points and 10.0 rebounds in his final prep season.

Whether they can all make it come together for a title is the question, but with the experience and talent the Indians have, the rest of the ECAC-South must be on the lookout for the Tribe.

Lady Pirates Bow To State

FAYETTEVILLE — Nationally ranked N.C. State romped to a 93-63 victory over East Carolina's Lady Pirates Friday night in the opening game of the season for ECU.

The Lady Pirates were to face North Carolina Saturday night in the second evening's play in the Dogwood Classic, a doubleheader that is tipping off the season for the four teams involved.

Details of the game were not made available to The Daily Reflector.

Bullets Win, To Host State Finals

ROSEWOOD — Chris Jones was at the right place at the right time twice for Jamesville's Bullets Friday night and as a result the Tobacco Belt Champions will be hosting the State 1-A Championship game next Friday night against Rosman.

Jones twice recovered fumbles that set up Bullet touchdowns as Jamesville gained a 28-14 win over Rosewood, the Carolina Conference champ, to advance to the finals of the state playoffs.

Rosman downed Cullowhee, 10-7, to move into the championship contest, to be played at Jamesville.

Rosewood scored first, getting a touchdown in the first period after driving 69 yards following a Jamesville punt. Three plays into the series, Keith Edwards broke away to dash 58 yards for the score and Tim Harvey booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Jamesville came back to score three times in the second period to take a 21-7 lead by halftime. The first came on an 80-yard drive, sustained when Rosewood was called for roughing the kicker when the Bullets were forced to punt. The penalty however, gave them new life, and they moved it down field and Robbie Harris scored from a yard away. Tracy Peele then carried over the two-point try for an 8-7 lead.

"Robbie got hurt early in the series, and Neil Lilly came on to run three straight times for him on dive plays, picking up 16 yards. That helped us move along," Coach Jerry Godley said. "That put the wind back in our sails."

Minutes later, Edwards, back to field a punt, fumbled the ball and Jones was there to recover on the Rosewood nine yard line. That set up the second Bullet score, as Peele cracked over from three yards out to take a 14-7 lead.

Not long afterward, Pee Wee Groover hit the Rosewood quarterback, forcing another fumble, and again Jones was there to recover at the Rosewood 20. Ange hit Terry Perry from there and then added the PAT kick for a 21-7 halftime lead.

Following a second half punt, Rosewood drove 78 yards to get back into the game. Edwards scored again, this time on a ten-yard run and Harvey added the PAT to pull them within range.

They quickly got the chance as Peele fumbled it away on the next series. But on the first play after the exchange, Rosewood was intercepted, and Jamesville used the possession to shut the door. They drove in from there, with Harris scoring from six yards away to wrap up the victory.

Peele finished the game as the leading rusher, picking up 130 yards on 25 carries.

"They were a big strong football team," Godley said of Rosewood. "We had to mix it up a great deal, and when Ange began hitting, it really opened up our rushing game." Ange was five of nine for 79 yards in the first half and attempted only one pass, a screen, in the second half.

Rosewood finishes the season with a 9-3 record, while Jamesville, the state's only unbeaten 1-A team, is now 12-0 and goes after the title Friday.

'Skins Look For Good Year

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROBERSONVILLE — Even though the Roanoke Redskins open the season with four of the toughest teams in the east, Coach Clarence Atkinson is confident his basketball squad will pick up where it left off a year ago.

Roanoke struggled through a 7-9 record in the Northeastern 3-A Conference in 1983-84 while 10-12 overall, but the Redskins regrouped for the league tourney to cruise to the finals before bowing to Plymouth 70-62.

Roanoke opens the 1984-85 schedule on the road at Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt of the Eastern Carolina Conference, then plunges into the Northeastern race at Washington. After opening its home slate against Edenton, the Redskins host Plymouth — another Northeastern power.

"I feel like Washington and Plymouth are the top two teams in our conference," Atkinson said. "With any kind of early success, we can be in the top third of our conference. We've got to let them realize that there's a lot to be gained by winning, but that they can't get too down because of a couple of early losses.

"I think last year we let the pressure of a few losses get us down in the middle of the season, but then we finished strong.

"We don't get much of a chance to iron out many mistakes before we play what I think is the best in the conference. We start conference play early, but everybody is at the same disadvantage."

The Redskins have a reasonable amount of experience returning, as second guard James Duggins and small forward Shawn Chance were starters last season. Duggins leads the returners, averaging 15 points per contest last season.

Point guard Derrick Edge and sophomore center Derrick Boyd were part-time starters last season, while power forward John Bennett "played a lot of minutes." Guards Chris Robinson and Troy Hines and forwards Mickey Knox and Herman Duggins are the top reserves for the Redskins.

"Those are the ones we expect to play a lot at the start of the season, at least," Atkinson said. "Once Boyd comes out, we don't have another true center. We'll have to go with a three-guard or three-forward offense then.

"We should have enough depth, but it's going to take a few games till our younger players get caught up in the situation."

Junior forward Ricky Taylor is competing for the first time, while junior James Leggett and senior Ronnie Jones are battling at forward, also.

"Offensely, we want an up-beat tempo," Atkinson said. "We need to push the ball up the floor a little faster than we have been.

"Chance and Duggins would be our best outside shooters, but Edge has been shooting fairly well. Bennett is our strongest player and works the boards well inside."

Roanoke will mix zone and man-to-man defense depending on the opposition, and Atkinson has been pleased with the Redskins' effort.

"They're willing to work harder and can take criticism much better than they did a year ago," Atkinson said. "They want to have a good senior year. Last year we played man-to-man well on the ball but not off the ball.

"If we have one shortcoming it's that we haven't come along as well on blocking out on rebounding. One of the biggest things we have to watch is that they may try to do too much — to overplay their roles."

LADY REDSKINS

The Lady Redskins return three starters, but Coach Robbie Calfee is concerned about depth in the early portion of the schedule.

Center Cheryl Randolph (6-0), guard Gloria Duggins and forward Patricia Alexander (5-6) all started on the 1983-84 squad which posted an 8-8 Northeastern Conference mark while 10-12 overall. Junior guard Debbie Atkinson and senior forward Tammy Brown (5-5) also lettered last year and are probable starters for the opening game at Ayden-Grifton.

"I'm going to use Atkinson at point guard and Duggins at wing this year," Calfee said. "We're going to be pretty quick and use a lot of pressure defense. We'll run with the ball on offense."

Calfee is counting on sophomore Sheila Carlisle and freshman Robbie Harris as the top reserves at guard, with juniors Roslyn Chance (5-9) and Sonya Teele (5-5) at forward.

"I'm concerned about injuries right now," Calfee said. "We've got some height and seven letter winners back, but after that there's not much experience.

"I've got three freshmen trying to figure out what's going on. They're just making the transition from junior high ball to varsity; they're not used to setting offense and defense."

Five of the Lady Redskins attended summer basketball camp, and Calfee has been impressed by their progress along with Teele's natural ability.

"Duggins is a good outside shooter, and Teele shoots fairly well outside," Calfee said. "I've been pleased with the play of a couple of reserves; Carlisle and Teele could press for a starting position after a couple of games.

"We scrimmaged North Edgecombe last Tuesday, and they had two big girls that ate us up inside because we stood around. We've worked on blocking out and rebounding more the past couple of days."

Calfee said Tarboro, Edenton, Plymouth and Ahoskie are his preseason favorites in the Northeastern Conference, but he added there could be some changes.

"We open with three tough games on the road; Ayden-Grifton has always been tough on us," Calfee said. "Then we go to North Pitt, and after that we've got two of the top teams in our conference (Edenton and Plymouth).

"I think right now we'd have to be considered in the four, five or six spot. But depending on if we use the best of our ability, we could finish higher."

Stress Led To Hormone Use

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Martti Vainio, the Finnish runner who lost his silver medal at the Los Angeles Olympics when his dope test proved positive, says he accepted the use of male hormones to "avoid overstress" at the Games.

Vainio made the revelation in a new book titled, "Martti Vainio, A Run Of Agony," co-authored with journalist Eino Leino.

"I accepted the use of testosterone to cure overstress, provided I did not know when it was applied to me," Vainio was quoted as saying in the book.

Vainio, however, declined to say who instructed him to use the forbidden hormones.

After winning the silver medal in the 10,000 meters in Los Angeles behind Italy's Alberto Cova, Vainio's doping test was graded positive and he lost his medal.

Immediately after the Olympics, Vainio claimed he had "never used forbidden preparates," and that he could not understand "how my test could give a positive result."

But in the book Vainio is quoted as saying he acquired the banned hormones in Palermo, Italy, and that the injection was applied by his training partner on July 10, less than a month before the Olympic race.

In his written statement to the Finnish Athletics Association, Vainio said: "In a presumed overstress situation, I got without my knowlege testosterone in connection with a vitamin B injection."

He said the ampule had been "acquired from abroad and it contained anabolic steroids."

As Vainio's confession came to light, the chief coach of the Finnish Athletics Association asked to be relieved of his duties after admitting he had destroyed a positive doping test result that the runner had given after the Rotterdam Marathon last April.

Antti Lanamaeki was dismissed immediately by the board of the Athletics Association.

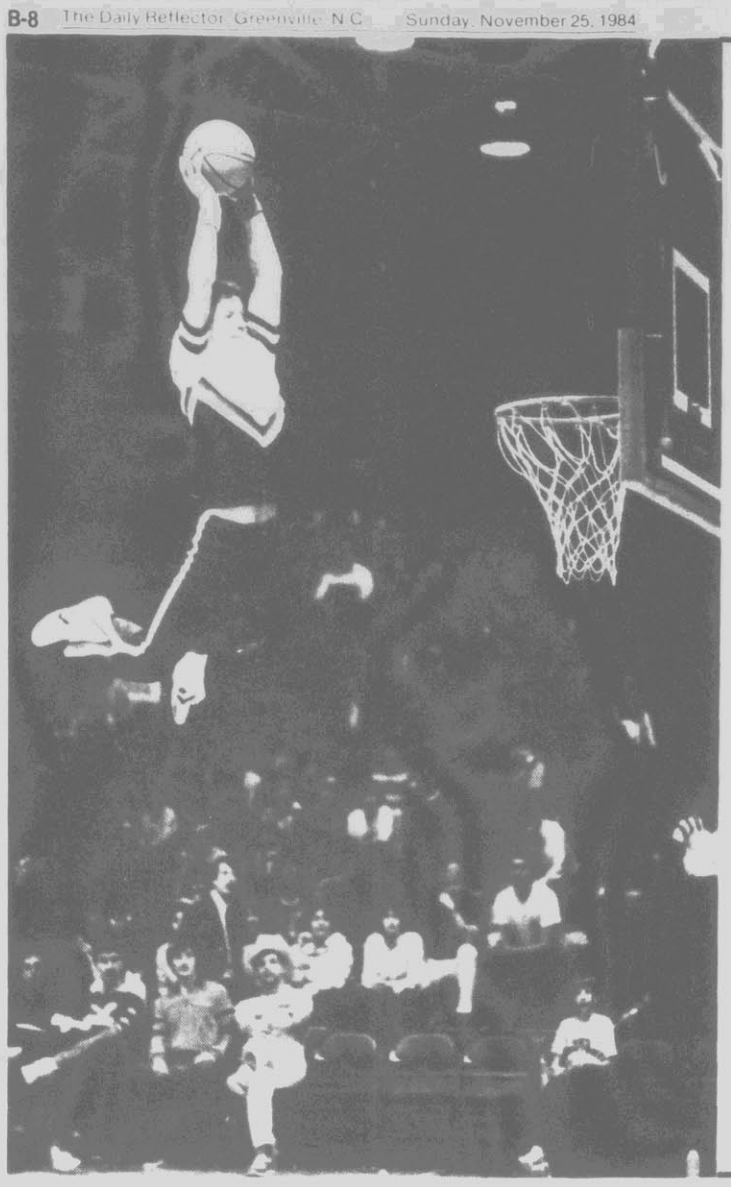

Lanamaeki said at a press conference he had destroyed evidence of Vainio's positive doping test in May because of "human reasons."

When the chief coach got the test results, taken in preparation of the Summer Olympics, he said he was "shocked as I noticed the positive test was Martti Vainio's."

"I came into the conclusion that I could not destroy his life only because his urine had contained about one milligram of a substance forbidden only by the rules of some ideological organization," Lanamaeki said.

As you may have gathered from the small hint running down the middle of this ad, something is happening to Isuzu's low prices.
They're getting even lower.
We call it our Lowest Price Truck Sale and if you look over on the right you'll find the truck that inspired it.
With its suggested retail price of only $5775,* this rugged, four-speed, standard-bed Isuzu P'UP already costs less than America's five best-selling compact pickups.
But now, thanks to generous factory incentives, you can pick up one for even less than that.
The nice part is you're not getting less of a truck. Isuzu P'UPs have not only earned a world wide reputation for toughness, Four Wheeler Magazine has called them "a shining example of what quality control is all about."
Of course, this isn't the only price we're lowering in our Lowest Price Truck Sale. You can take your pick of a variety of different P'UPs.
But don't take too long. The arrow won't be pointing this way forever.
This Isuzu is already priced lower than the top five compact pickups.
So where do we go from here?

Dunkers

The Bud Light Daredevils, formerly known as the Dixie Daredevils, will put on a halftime show at East Carolina University's opening basketball game Tuesday night.

The Pirates host Central Connecticut State University at 7:30 p.m. in the game that opens the year for the team.

The Daredevils are currently on a 70-performance tour that includes more than 60 cities across the United States, lasting from October until April.

The group consists of brothers Ty and Guy Cobb and Mack Hirshberg. Their program includes an eight-minute slam dunk and acrobatic show.

Page Wins; Randleman Ousted From Playoffs

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Calvin Hailey returned two punts for touchdowns and quarterback Derrick Leak scored on a 73-yard run as No. 4 Forest Hills defeated top-ranked and defending 2-A champs Randleman 26-7 in high school football playoff action Friday.

Meanwhile, Greensboro Page, the top-ranked 4-A team, defeated No. 10 West Charlotte 21-7 in the state quarterfinals, while Kannapolis, ranked No. 1 in the 3-A class, slipped past unranked West Caldwell 9-7 in overtime.

In the 1-A class, third-ranked Jamesville edged Rosewood 28-14 and Rosman downed Cullowhee 10-7. Jamesville, 12-0, meets unranked Rosman, 9-3, for the 1-A title Friday.

Hailey raced 53 and 86 yards with punts in the second period after Leak's score to give Forest Hills, 11-1, an 18-0 lead. Randleman, 10-2, made it 18-7 on Chris Wood's 22-yard pass to Todd Gant, but John Norton scored on a 1-yard run to make it 26-7 at the half.

The loss ends Randleman's three-year reign as 2-A state champions.

Dean Mullinax kicked a 17-yard field goal — his third of the night — in overtime as Kannapolis survived an upset bid by West Caldwell.

West Caldwell got the ball first in the overtime, but Kannapolis recorded two quarterback sacks to push the ball back to the 34 before taking over and winning on Mullinax' fourth-down field goal.

Mullinax gave Kannapolis a 3-0 lead at the half with a 31-yard field goal in the second period. His 28-yard boot with 8:22 left in the game tied it at 6-6 after West Caldwell had taken the lead on Stepp Banner's 12-yard pass to Quinton Hershaw early in the third period.

Meanwhile, quarterback Todd Ellis scored on runs of 1 and 2 yards and had 249 yards passing as Page ran its record to 12-0. West Charlotte, 9-3, took a 7-0 lead on a 45-yard punt return by Ritchie Melchor, who gained 156 on the ground.

But Ellis' wrapped his two TD runs around a 2-yard run by running back Michael Brooks as Page scored three second-period touchdowns. Ellis completed 11 of 23 passes, while Brooks, who play linebacker on defense, had four sacks and forced one tumble.

In other 4-A quarterfinal action:

— Kenny Jones passed for two scores and Eric Herndon scored two TDs as No. 3 Fayetteville 71st downed No. 8 Jacksonville 25-7. Jones hit Herndon with a 15-yard scoring pass and Jeff Davis with an 11-yard score after spotting the Cardinals a 7-0 lead.

Herndon also scored on an 8-yard run in the third period, which was set up by defensive end James Singletary's eighth blocked punt of the year.

Fayetteville, 11-1, held Jacksonville, 9-3, to 69 yards total offense.

— Michael Graham scooped a blocked punt by linebacker Raudell Fields with 1:10 left and raced 33 yards for a score as No. 4 Scotland County slipped past No. 2 and previously unbeaten Wilson Fike 21-20.

Fike, 11-1, drove inside the Scotland County 40 after the TD, but Graham picked off a pass with 12 seconds left to seal he victory.

Anthony Thompson, who rushed for 137 yards, gave Fike a 20-14 lead with a 27-yard TD run with 10:22 left. Scotland County, 11-1, then had three scoring drives ended by turnovers before the last-minute heroics.

In other 3-A games:

— Defensive back Eddie Walker returned an interception 36 yards for a touchdown with 4:24 to go to spark third-ranked West Henderson past No. 9 Statesville 21-14.

Walker's interception culminated a 14-point fourth period that started with running back Bryon Osteen's 83-yard touchdown run with 6:45 left.

West Henderson is now 12-0. Statesville finishes 10-2.

In 2-A action:

— Kevin Alderman rushed for 152 yards and two scores as second-ranked and undefeated Wallace-Rose Hill defeated unranked Currituck 44-13.

Alderman scored on runs of 5 and 30 yards, while backfield mate Johnny Johnson scored on runs of 5 and 17 yards while rushing for 120 yards for Wallace-Rose Hill, 12-0.

Currituck, 8-4, was led by Bryan Patterson, who rushed for 160 yards and scored on a 10-yard run.

— John Mitchell rushed for 125 yards and scored on one TD as unranked Swain County upended No. 5 Maiden 23-6.

Quarterback Gary Lackey threw touchdown passes of 57 and 12 yards to Charles Fooe as Swain ran its record to 9-3. Maiden ends up 10-2.

— Tailback Patrick Lennon scored on runs of 22 and 40 yards and fullback Chris Little rushed for 117 yards as No. 8 Whiteville downed unranked Pamlico 35-6.

Whiteville, 11-1, held Pamlico, 7-5, to 122 yards total offense.

Budd To Try Again

STELLENBOSCH, South Africa (AP) — Zola Budd is giving her track career another chance.

Coming out of virtual seclusion, the South African teen-ager said Friday she would run again on Dec. 30 and then decide if she still wants to compete internationally.

"We will try this race and then decide. We haven't made any decisions for after Dec. 30," the baretoot runner said of the eight-kilometer race in Zurich, Switzerland.

That will be her first appearance since the Los Angeles Olympics, when Budd collided with American Mary Decker during the 3,000 meters. There had been rumors that Budd was so shattered by her collision with Decker that she would abandon international track.

But Budd held a news conference Friday on the lawn of a wine estate outside this university community near Cape Town to dispel the rumors.

Acknowledging that her trip to Los Angeles involved "some mistakes," she announced the formation of a three-man trust to give a "fresh start" to her career.

Budd has been in virtual seclusion since she tangled with Decker and finished seventh under a cascade of boos. Decker did not finish the race.

Graham Boonzaier, business manager of the newly formed Zola Budd Sports Trust, said she was so distressed after the incident that "she was considering giving up running, forgetting it all."

Budd was unable to compete internationally as a South African because of international sports bans against the nation's apartheid policy. Controversy swirled around her in March when Britain gave her quick citizenship on the strength of her grandfather's British birth.

She easily won a berth on the British Olympic squad but became a target for organizations protesting South Africa's race-separation policies.

"She might have a future in international running. She might not. We'll see after Zurich," Boonzaier said. "You are talking about a sensitive 18-year-old girl, not a 28-year-old woman. She doesn't want to remember the past."

Giants Keeping Wary Eye On Kansas City

By The Associated Press

With a National Football League playoff berth looming, the New York Giants are keeping a wary eye on Sunday's foe, the Kansas City Chiefs.

"I'm just worried about Kansas City, not anything else," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "They have guys who can hurt you. (Carlos) Carson, (Henry) Marshall and J.T. Smith all are capable of making the long play."

Kansas City, 5-7 and last in the American Conference West, made only one long play against the Giants in last year's 38-17 victory over the Giants, but Parcells remembers how his team's mistakes contributed to the loss.

"They (Kansas City) intercepted a pass for a touchdown ... they got another touchdown on a third-and-17 play," he said.

The Chiefs also recovered a fumble to set up another touchdown.

"It was certainly right up there with the bad beatings we took last year," Parcells said.

With four weeks remaining in this season, the Giants are tied with the Washington Redskins, one-half game behind National Conference East Division leader Dallas.

The Cowboys took a half-game lead with a 20-17 victory on Thanksgiving Day over the New England Patriots. Detroit beat Green Bay 31-28 in the other game Thursday.

Dallas is 8-5, while Washington and New York are 7-5. The Redskins will meet the Bills in Washington on Sunday.

A key matchup in the American Conference will send second-place Seattle, 10-2, to Denver, which leads the AFC West with an 11-1 record. Thanks to Detroit's victory over Green Bay, the Chicago Bears, 8-4, can clinch the NFC Central with a victory over Minnesota, and the San Francisco 49ers, 11-1, can wrap up the NFC West with a victory over New Orleans. The Pittsburgh Steelers, holding onto a two-game lead over Cincinnati in the AFC Central with a 6-6 mark, play host to the San Diego Chargers.

In the rest of the league, it's Indianapolis at the Los Angeles Raiders, the Los Angeles Rams at Tampa Bay, Philadelphia at St. Louis, Atlanta at Cincinnati and Houston at Cleveland.

Monday night's game has the New York Jets at Miami, which clinched the AFC East with New England's loss.

Kansas City has been troubled by injuries this season. Running back Theotis Brown is just returning from an injury, but now the defense has problems with end Mike Bell and linebacker Gary Spani hobbling with leg injuries.

"The Giants are leading their division and heading toward the playoffs," Chiefs safety Deron Cherry before Dallas' victory. "I think they will take it seriously, I know we will. I know we played them last year and beam them, so that's still got to be fresh in their minds."

Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann needs 191 yards to pass Sonny Jurgensen as the team's all-time leading passer. Theismann has thrown for 2,354 yards and 17 touchdowns this season, and he could have a good day against the Buffalo secondary, which is allowing a 60 percent completion average to opposing quarterbacks.

The Redskins, like the Cowboys, were defeated last week to help create the NFC East tie. The Redskins lost 16-10 to Philadelphia, while the Cowboys fell to Buffalo — the Bills' first victory of the season.

"We have to turn it around now," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs says. "The defense has been carrying us, but it is time for the offense and special teams to carry their share."

The Seahawks and Broncos will be playing the first of two showdown games for the AFC West lead. They play again on the season's final weekend.

"I'm not a historian, and I haven't been with the franchise since its inception," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said. "But yes, needless to say, this is an important game."

The Broncos and Seahawks are ranked 1-2 in the conference in defense, and both teams feature a conservative style offense that relies heavily on opportunism to score points.

"This is the exciting part of this business, to play in a game like this," Denver Coach Dan Reeves says. "Both teams have thrived on turnovers to win, and Seattle tries to tackle the ball just like we do."

The St. Louis-Philadelphia game matches the two bottom teams in the NFC East. But each has only six losses — the Cards are 6-6 and Eagles 5-6-1 — which puts them in contention for at least a wild-card spot.

St. Louis has lost three straight games in which they have lost the ball 16 times on turnovers — the Giants beat them 16-10 last week by intercepting four Neil Lomax passes and recovering two fumbles.

The Eagles, meanwhile, have been playing their best football of the season — they lost in Miami two weeks ago by the margin of a blocked extra point, then upset Washington 16-10 last week to help make the race even tighter.

"If we win our last four, I think we can take the division," says quarterback Ron Jaworski.

Baseball Clinic Set

SNOW HILL — The Eastern Carolina Baseball Coaches Seminar will be held December 8-9 at the Greene Central High School, sponsored by the Greene County Educational Center.

Miracle Pass Wins For Boston C.

MIAMI (AP) — With 28 seconds remaining and 10th-ranked Boston College trailing Miami by four points, Eagles Coach Jack Bicknell prepared himself for what he felt was the inevitable — defeat.

"My kids had given so much and had still come up a little short," he began. "I was already thinking about what I could tell them to get them prepared to play again next week."

Bicknell should have known better. When you've got Doug Flutie on the field, you don't concede until time has expired.

"He's a winner, what more can I say," Bicknell said after the diminutive quarterback heaved a 48-yard "Hail Mary" touchdown pass to Gerard Phelan on the game's last play to give Boston College a 47-45 victory over the 12th-ranked Hurricanes Friday.

"I didn't believe it until I saw the kids going nuts," he added. "It was a miracle. I know it was, but we deserved it because we had played well enough to be in a position to do it."

Flutie, a 5-foot-9 senior who's considered the leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy, didn't hurt his chances for the award that goes to the nation's top collegiate player.

The triumph boosted Cotton Bowl-bound Boston College's record to 8-2 with one regular-season game remaining against Holy Cross. Miami, headed for a Fiesta Bowl date against UCLA, dropped to 8-4.

Flutie passed for 472 yards and three touchdowns to outduel Miami's Bernie Kosar, who threw for 447 yards and two touchdowns against a defense that yielded 655 yards of total offense.

"It was just two teams hammering away," said Bicknell, whose team rolled up 627 yards of offense itself. "Both quarterbacks are super. Both defenses struggled against very talented people and never really stopped them."

The lead in the nationally televised, see-saw battle changed hands five times in the fourth quarter and left a rain-drenched Orange Bowl crowd of 30,235 emotionally drained.

Melvin Bratton's fourth touchdown of the game gave Miami a 45-41 lead with 28 seconds remaining, but Flutie never doubted his ability to bring the Eagles back.

"With 28 seconds left, I knew we had at least four plays," said Flutie, who moved his team 80 yards in exactly that many plays. "I figured, let's get it out near midfield and put one up in the end zone."

Completions of 19 yards to Troy Stradford and 13 yards to Scott Gieselman gave Boston College a first down at the Miami 48. Flutie's next pass fell incomplete and with six seconds left, Bicknell called for "Flood Tip," the Eagles' "Hail Mary" play.

"The idea is to send three receivers downfield," Bicknell said. "If one of them can go up and catch the ball, fine. If not, he's supposed to try to tip it to somebody else."

Flutie, who completed 34 of 46 passes, scrambled to his own 35 and let his desperation heave sail from about the 38. Bicknell said he thought Miami's secondary relaxed when they saw him dropping back.

"They stopped, probably thinking Doug couldn't throw it that far," Bicknell said. "He can throw it as far as he has to. There was nothing left for us to do. It's worked two out of three times we've used it."

Phelan got behind Miami safety Darrell Fullington and made the game-winning catch as he tumbled backward just inside the end zone. Six other players — three from each team — leaped for the ball in vain.

"I really don't know what I was thinking," said Phelan, who had 11 receptions for 226 yards and two touchdowns. "It (ball) came down and down and I figured if somebody doesn't tip it, I'll get it."

Kosar — a 6-5 sophomore who's already thrown for nearly 6,000 career yards — completed 25 of 38 passes, including scoring strikes of 10 and eight yards to Willie Smith and Warren Williams as the Hurricanes overcame an early 14-0 deficit only to fall behind 28-21 just before halftime.

Flutie, meanwhile, tossed a 33-yard touchdown pass to Kelvin Martin and a nine-yarder to Phelan before intermission. He also scored on a nine-yard run and set up Ken Bell's five-yard touchdown burst with pinpoint passing.

While the Boston College quarterback has one more regular-season game to add to his NCAA career passing record of 10,303 yards, Kosar has two years to chase the mark.

Kosar's two-year yardage total stands at 5,971, more than 1,500 yards ahead of Flutie's 4,401 at the same point in his career.

"I don't know why I'm setting records now," Flutie said. "He's just going to break them in two years."

Kosar tried his best to win the duel Friday.

He and Hurricanes wide receiver Eddie Brown teammed on 10 receptions for 220 yards, while Bratton scored on runs of two, two, 52 and one yard while rushing for 134 yards on 16 carries.

Greg Cox' 19-yard field goal gave Miami its first lead, 31-28, with six minutes left in the first quarter, but the game headed into the final period at 31-31 after Boston College's Kevin Snow split the uprights from 28 yards away.

Snow's 19-yard field goal, 5:14 into the fourth quarter, gave the Eagles a 34-31 advantage that Bratton erased 43 seconds later with the 52-yard scoring jaunt. The redshirt freshman started up the right sideline, broke a couple of tackles, traversed the field and crossed the goal line in the left corner.

Undaunted, Boston College recaptured the lead on Steve Strachan's one-yard dive with 3:50 to go, a touchdown Miami answered with Bratton's fourth touchdown.

"It's really a shame that someone had to lose that ball game," said Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson, who watched his team blow a 31-0 halftime lead in a 42-40 loss to Maryland two weeks ago.

"I told the players to hold their heads up high," he added. "That they have nothing to be ashamed of. But that doesn't take away that sick feeling."

Mad Bomber

Clemson Officials Making Sure No More Probation

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — At least one outcome of the South Carolin-Clemson game is already set — the Tigers will go off NCAA probation after two years for recruiting violations.

And school officials are making sure such disciplinary action isn't repeated.

"Everybody has an NCAA rulebook now," Athletic Director Bill McLellan said. "In my heart, I know we were wrong, and we've done everything to correct it."

Clemson President Bill Atchley orchestrated the reform, imposed disciplinary action on unnamed school officials and instituted a system of financial controls. He said several specific changes were made, including:

—Naming an administrative assistant to monitor recruiting, including visits and disbursement of complimentary tickets, and report directly to him.

—Revamping the faculty athletic council to give it a policy advisory role.

—Holding meetings with NCAA officials and ACC Commissioner Bob James to discuss rule changes and interpretations.

—Conducting staff meetings to discuss rule changes and indoctrinating alumni and other recruiting representatives about the rules.

—Preparing internal financial audits of expense reports and the number of visits prospective athletes have received from school recruiters.

—Introducing a tighter system of financial controls, including the elimination of telephone credit cards, and instituting direct billing to the school for rooms and meals during a recruit's campus visits.

—Installing a new record system requiring athletic department employees to report outside compensation from such ventures as summer camps.

"We have a system of checks and balances," said Atchley, who blamed sloppy management problems for Clemson's probation woes. "We will continue to improve on many things we have done."

One major part of the reorganization never came about, and remains a sore point with some members of the academic community. Atchley had promised to appoint an athletic coordinator over both McLellan and assistant athletic director Bobby Robinson, a move that was seen as a reduction in McLellan's authority. The coordinator was to have ultimate authority and report directly to Atchley.

But after a dispute with the board of trustees, some of whom backed McLellan, the idea fell by the wayside. Atchley maintains it was because of a tight budget. He added that the faculty council has assumed some of the duties he envisioned for the athletic coordinator position.

McLellan said in an interview last week that his duties had not changed.

Dr. Steve Wainscott, a member of the athletic council, said he has some questions about the role of that group.

"We don't approve policy," he said. "We still are primarily an advisory body," he said. "Who is running the show? I'm not sure. I really don't think it can be said the faculty is in charge of the athletic department."

But Wainscott added, "One thing I think seems to be happening is a greater emphasis on academics."

Martina Believes She Hasn't Reached Her Peak

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Martina Navratilova has some bad news for her rivals.

The 28-year-old left-hander bids for a record seventh consecutive Grand Slam tournament victory in the Australian Open tennis championships, starting Monday, yet she believes she still has to reach her peak.

"I might have played some great matches, but I'm still learning," she said."I think I'm still capable of playing on another level. I haven't got there yet, but I'll know when I have.

"For the past two or three years I've felt that I'm about a year away from fulfilling my potential. I'm 28, so I've still got time to get there."

Navratilova, tanned and relaxed, admitted that the tag "greatest woman player of all-time" — increasingly being applied to her — makes life difficult.

"Sometimes (tennis raconteur) Ted Tinling will make a comment like that when he is introducing me before a match," she said, "and all I can think is, 'I hope I get my first serve in and don't make a fool of myself.'"

Navratilova already has collected a $1 million bonus from the International Tennis Federation for winning the four Grand Slam events — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian opens — in succession. That streak started with Wimbledon in 1983, so she must win the Australian this year to satisfy those who feel the Slam is not legitimate unless accomplished in one calendar year.

The last player to win the Grand Slam in one year was Margaret Smith Court, in 1970. She and Maureen Connelly each won six Slam tournaments in a row, a mark Navratilova can smash in Melbourne.

Navratilova is very conscious of setting records but tries hard not to let the pressure get to her.

"I'm very aware that if I win the Australian Open I'll do what no one has ever done before," she said."The pressure gets to me sometimes, but I'd rather have that pressure because I'm winning than because I'm losing. I want the success because that is what I work for.

"I get exasperated sometimes because I know what I can do. I know I am capable of things, but I don't always achieve them."

Once regarded as moody and temperamental, Navratilova now is impeccably behaved on the court, obviously enjoying her tennis.

"It's just not worth it to throw fits," she said. "I've outgrown it.I don't want to add to my aging process if I can help it. I'm supposed to be enjoying myself out there — why make myself miserable?"

Navratilova's relaxed attitude in the face of relentless expectations from the media, the fans and herself is something she has worked on.

"I don't get that much time to myself, but I do try to enjoy it," she said. Her relaxtion involves playing basketball, an occasional game of golf, watching football on television and reading. She swam at Bondi Beach in Sydney last week but left the water after twice being dumped by waves.

"I also try to find a nice restaurant in the evening and wind down," she said.

On court, however, she is aware that every defeat is a huge upset.

"It is a shock to lose now," she said.

That is a position of luxury she has worked hard to achieve.

Nevada-Reno Pulls Upset Over Cross-State Rival

After 20 years of college coaching, Nevada-Reno's Sonny Allen got his biggest victory on the first night of the 1984-85 season.

"This is the greatest regular-season win for Nevada-Reno and for me, in my opinion," Allen said after the Wolf Pack upset 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas 97-89 Friday night before a record crowd of 11,125 in Reno. "I said before the game that we'd upset them. I thought we'd be ready to play. We did the things we wanted to do, the things it takes to beat a team like Las Vegas."

Allen got a brilliant all-around performance from senior guard Curtis High, who had 22 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds. Forward Dwayne Randall, a junior college transfer playing his first game for Reno, added 20 points and 10 rebounds.

"We couldn't really stop them, so we just outscored them," Allen said. "We wanted them to take the outside shot and shut down the middle."

In other games involving Associated Press Top Twenty teams, No. 1 Georgetown crushed Hawaii-Hilo 81-47, No. 2 Illinois outlasted Idaho State 64-44, No. 5 Oklahoma bombed Morehead State 94-48; 10th-ranked Southern Methodist outscored Texas Southern 91-72 and No. 19 Kansas edged Maryland 58-56.

The Reno-Las Vegas game was won on the boards, with the smaller and unranked Wolf Pack outrebounding the Runnin' Rebels 62-38.

"They whipped us every way possible and they deserve all the credit," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "They outplayed us, outhustled us and there was no reason for them to dominate us that way. We missed the easy shots and then couldn't get the second and third shots. They dominated the boards.

"Reno played a super game. Our biggest problem was defense and we didn't rebound."

Reno trailed 49-45 at halftime and still was behind 79-76 with six minutes left. But the Wolf Pack scored six straight points to take the lead for good.

It was only the 10th victory in 41 games for Reno against its intrastate rival.

Top Ten

Defending national champion Georgetown had little trouble on the road with Hawaii-Hilo. Bill Martin scored 20 points and All-American Patrick Ewing had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Hoyas.

Georgetown used a tenacious full-court press in racing to a 41-21 lead at halftime. David Wingate added 12 points and eight assists for the Hoyas.

Illinois led Idaho State only 27-24 at halftime, but steadily pulled away in the second half in the Alaska Shootout tournament in Anchorage. George Montgomery scored 16 points and Doug Altenberger for the Illini.

Efrem Winters, who had nine points, denied that Illinois was flat after last week's impressive 81-64 victory over Oklahoma.

"I wouldn't call it a letdown," he said. "We just didn't know what to expect."

Oklahoma shook off its loss to Illinois as All-American Wayman Tisdale had 31 points and 15 rebounds against outmanned Morehead, which lost its top seven scorers from last year's 25-6 team. Morehead managed to hit only 27 percent of its field goals.

Carl Wright scored 25 points and Olympian Jon Koncak added 19 points and 21 rebounds for SMU against Texas Southern. The Mustangs saw Texas Southern cut a six-point halftime deficit to 45-41 early in the second half, but Wright, Koncak and Larry Davis, who had 20 points, helped SMU pull away.

Second Ten

Calvin Thompson's game-winning jump shot with three seconds remaining capped a stirringcomeback for Kansas against Maryland at the Alaska Shootout.

Thompson, a reserve forward, scored 11 of his 13 points in the second half to lead a Kansas rally from a 38-30 halftime deficit. Ron Kellogg led Kansas with 14 points, while highly touted freshman Danny Manning had 12 for the Jayhawks.

Adrian Branch and Len Bias led the Terrapins with 22 and 18 points, respectively, but they combined for only 11 in the second half.

"We did a phenomenal job on Bias and Branch in the second half. Those are two great players," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "Manning played Bias like an All-American in the second half."

"He's pretty poised for a freshman," Branch said. "I think his outside game is a little more advanced than his inside game, but give him time."

"We gave it to them," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said. "I can hardly believe we lost the game."

Other Games

Elsewhere, UCLA made the debut of Coach Walt Hazzard a successful one, beating Idaho 87-58 behind Reggie Miller's 16 points.

Cuban Team Is Looking For Match Against Pros

HAVANA (AP) — Having reasserted its domination of amateur baseball, Cuba is interested in again matching its players against professionals.

Juan Luis Suse, commissioner of Cuban baseball, said recently that if the International Baseball Association will allow Cuban players to compete without jeopardizing their amateur standing, Cuba would like to play in the next Caribbean Series.

"We are available for a confrontation to test our forces," Suse said.

The annual series, which will be played in February in Mexico City, pits the champions of the Winter Leagues in the Dominican Republic, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Venezuela. The Winter League rosters are dotted with major league players.

Caribbean baseball officials support Cuba's participation, and International Baseball Association President Robert Smith said he personally would have no objections, although the IBA board will have to rule.

"For many years, We've been wanting to play against major league teams," Suse said. "But the permission has never been granted."

He referred to a proposed trip to Cuba in 1977 by the New York Yankees that was blocked by then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, apparently because of State Department opposition.

Fidel Castro's 1959 revolution and the U.S. trade embargo against the Communist island that followed killed Cuba's own Winter League, which was very popular with major league players. It also marked the end of professionalism in Cuban sports — and the rich influx of Cuban players into the major leagues.

The only remaining Cuban-born players in the U.S. major leagues are Tony Perez, nearing the end of his career with Cincinnati; Montreal reserve catcher Bobby Ramos, who emigrated to Miami at age 13, and Detroit's Barbaro Garbey, who arrived in the United States in 1980 among the 124,789 refugees of the Mariel Boatlift.

Garbey was allowed to leave Cuba after his suspension from the national baseball team. He was among several top players caught in a betting scandal that temporarily stopped Cuba's rule of amateur baseball worldwide.

The Cubans won every major international tournament between 1969 and '81, then found their post-scandal squad struggling to place in the tournaments.

But they came back with a gold medal in the 1983 Pan American Games and, after the Soviet-bloc boycott of the Los Angeles Olympics, won the 13-team Amateur World Series here in October. They swept two games with Japan, winner of the Olympic exhibition baseball series.

Besides the Cuban proposals to play against professionals, there have been hints that Castro is mulling allowing Cubans to play on U.S. teams.

Smith said Castro peppered him with questions about major league baseball, from Astroturf to salaries, during a meeting here. The baseball-loving Cuban president stopped short of talking about playing his nation's players in the major leagues, Smith said.

David Lefevre, a businessman who has been trying to buy the Cleveland Indians franchise, claimed last July that he was working out an arrangement with Castro, an old family friend, to obtain Cuban players for his team. The claim caused a stir by other teams and was followed by a statement from the commissioner's office that all teams would have equal access to Cuban players.

"That's should Cuban talent become available. We have no reason to anticipate any imminent availability," Chuck Adams, a spokesman in the commissioner's New York office, said.

There has been no publicity in Cuba about the possibility, although some government functionaries privately expressed curiosity.

"Perhaps there could be an arrangement where the players' salaries would go to the state," one Cuban official, who didn't want to be named, said privately. That would enable the government, which has a debt estimated at $10 billion, to get badly needed U.S. dollars into its system — but it would have to be approved by the Reagan administration.

There have been preliminary discussions between the National Hockey League and Soviet-bloc nations about such a salary arrangement to allow Communist players to compete.

The consensus of baseball experts — including Garbey — familiar with Cuban baseball is that, while the pitching needs work, many hitters are on the major league level.

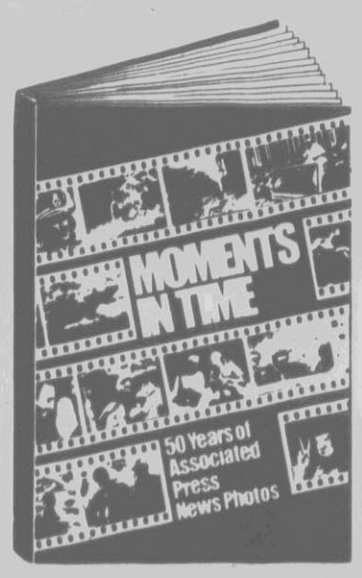

"I'm not a scout, but I would say they have several players who could play in the major leagues right now," Smith said.

Osvaldo Gil, president of Puerto Rico's baseball association, said 25-year-old Luis Giraldo Casanova reminds him of the late Roberto Clemente. Casanova has played all positions, but is a slugger best suited to first base.

Eaton, Bailey Outshine Houston's Super Giants

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

It was highly touted Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon of the high-flying Houston Rockets against barely touted Mark Eaton and Thurl Bailey of the struggling Utah Jazz.

When it was over, the Rockets were singing the blues over Utah's 111-98 National Basketball Association victory.

"Akeem and Ralph had as many easy shots as they've had this year," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said, but the the 7-foot-4 Sampson and 7-foot Olajuwon made only 13 of 35 field goal attempts and had six of them blocked by the 7-4 Eaton and four more blocked by the 6-11 Bailey.

Eaton also had 16 rebounds and scored seven of his 15 points in the pivotal third quarter. Bailey added eight of his 15 points in the period, when Utah took control of the game and went on to improve its record to 7-7 and drop Houston to 10-3.

"Thurl hasn't been attacking the basket much, but tonight we saw a little more of the real Thurl Bailey," Utah Coach Frank Layden said. "We saw him bust out tonight. He is a good athlete."

In other NBA games, it was Boston 118, Washington 110; New York 120, Detroit 97; Kansas City 122, Indiana 105; Golden State 107, Cleveland 106; Philadelphia 119, Phoenix 117 in overtime and Chicago 113, Seattle 94.

Layden said a 122-90 loss to Atlanta in New Orleans Wednesday night might have had an effect against Houston.

"What happened to us the other night in New Orleans must've woke us up," he said. "We did not play well, we were tired and we were blown out that night, but we came back and played a good game tonight. We played the way were are capable of playing — consistently."

Utah led only 60-56 at halftime, but outscored Houston 29-17 in the third period to pull ahead 89-73 as Eaton and Bailey combined for only two points fewer than all the Rockets.

Sampson led all scorers with 24 points, but he was only 9-for-22 from the field and scored nine of his points in the fourth quarter when the outcome already was decided. Olajuwon had 13 points.

Darrell Griffith and John Drew had 23 and 18 points, respectively, for the Jazz.

Both Layden and Fitch said backcourt play had as much to do with Utah's victory as the giants up front.

"Our strategy is to run the floor, and we did it well," Layden said. "Rickey (Green) and John (Stockton) each did a fine job directing the offense. It's nice that we can do this without a letup."

"Their guards hurt us most," Fitch added. "Our guard play was not good at all, our shot selection was no good. Our guards looked like they were in concrete."

Celtics 118, Bullets 110

Boston, whose only loss in 11 games was to Washington Nov. 10, snapped the Bullets' seven-game winning streak behind Larry Bird's 29 points.

Washington, which got 24 points from Gus Williams, rallied from a 51-31 deficit in the second quarter to tie the game 67-67 in the third period.

But Bird, who scored 13 points in the third quarter, helped the Celtics pull ahead 92-83 going into the final 12 minutes. Kevin McHale then scored six of his 22 points during a 12-2 Boston surge that made it 107-91.

76ers 119, Suns 117

Julius Erving scored nine of his 31 points in overtime to lift Philadelphia to victory at Phoenix.

Erving put the 76ers ahead to stay at 111-108 on a three-point play with 1:42 left in the extra period. He added a jumper 20 seconds later and Bobby Jones capped the 7-0 streak with a layup with 1:05 to go.

Alvan Adams and Larry Nance led the Suns with 25 points, while Maurice Lucas, in his first start of the season, forced the overtime with a basket with four seconds left in regulation.

Bulls 113, Sonics 94

Chicago snapped a four-game losing streak as rookie sensation Michael Jordan scored 23 points and Orlando Woolridge 20 against Seattle.

Woolridge had 10 points as the Bulls outscored the Sonics 31-14 in the first period. Chicago shot 71 percent from the field and Seattle 23 percent in the quarter.

The SuperSonics, who were led by Al Wood with 21 points, got no closer than 13 points the rest of the way.

Knicks 120, Pistons 97

Bernard King scored 14 of his season-high 45 points in the third quarter as New York pulled away from Detroit for its fourth straight triumph.

King's third-period outburst helped the Knicks extend a 54-44 halftime lead to as much as 24 points.

Vinnie Johnson and Bill Laimbeer scored 20 points apiece to lead the Pistons, while Darrell Walker had a career-high 24 for New York.

Warriors 107, Cavaliers 106

Melvin Turpin was called for traveling and then goaltending in the closing seconds to aid a Golden State comeback against Cleveland.

The Warriors trailed 106-103 before Purvis Short, who led all scorers with 27 points, made a layup with 52 seconds left to cut the deficit to one. After Turpin, who led the Cavaliers with 24 points, was called for traveling, he was whistled for goaltending when Larry Smith rebounded a missed Golden State shot and tried a follow-up with 19 seconds remaining.

Kings 122, Pacers 105

Mike Woodson scored 28 points and led a 12-0 Kansas City rally in a two-minute span late in the third quarter and early in the fourth period at Indiana.

The Pacers, who got 20 points from Clark Kellogg, led 77-71 with 1:42 to go in the third period, but Woodson scored six points as the Kings went ahead 83-77 with 11:20 left in the game.

Quail Conservation Stamp — Quail Unlimited, Inc. recently announced the fourth in a continuing series of Quail Conservation Stamp/Prints in its effort to promote wildlife habitat management nationally. The 1985 Quail Unlimited Stamp/Print was painted by award winning artist Phillip Crowe and is now available in a signed and limited edition of 1,500.

The print, with matching stamp, sells for $130. Individual stamps are available at $5 each or $20 for a block of four and $50 for a collector's mint sheet of 10 stamps.

The 1985 print features a bird dog, staunch on point. Phillip Crowe was selected to paint this scene because of his relentless dedication to anatomical accuracy and setting. Crowe has won two Tennessee duck stamp awards, was recently named artist for the 1984 New Hampshire duck stamp, and is noted for his most famous work, the 1982 National Retriever Club Stamp/Print. An avid sportsman and conservationist, Crowe prefers to paint natural looking scenes, which hunters and outdoorsmen can truly relate to. All bird hunters and dog owners will appreciate the dedication of the bird dog depicted in the 1985 print, and the dog's faithful intent upon performing well afield.

For additional information on the Quail Unlimited habitat projects and the 1985 stamp/print, write Quail Unlimited National Headquarters, P.O. Box 10041, Augusta, Ga. 30903.

Doe Season — For the first time, a special two-day doe season will be held in all of Pitt County. Wildlife biologists have determined that the local herd can stand to have the doe population thinned. The season will run from Wednesday, Nov. 28 through Thursday, Nov. 29.

Fishing Report — Big bluefish (15-18 pound class) have hit the beaches from Nags Head south to Hatteras. Anglers have been using cut mullet for bait or 4B Hopkins if the fish have been blitzing in large numbers. As long as the cold temperatures hold, the fish should stay in close.

Elsewhere, speckle trout have been biting on the beach at Emerald Isle. Try a Mirr-o-lune 52M 11 or Mister Twister four-inch white grub for bait.

Inland, fishing has slowed due to the cold temperatures. Crappie fishing should be hot if you can brave the chill.

Pete Rose has played in more winning baseball games than any man in the history of major league baseball.

Swedish Netters Must Still Do Their Duty

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Exclaiming that tennis players "should do their duty like all other Swedish men," a member of Sweden's Parliament is pressing for stricter government control over draft-dodging tennis stars.

Liberal deputy Rune Angstrom has asked the minister of defense if the government plans to tighten loopholes in the law in order to prevent Swedish tennis stars from escaping military service, it was reported Friday.

"Tennis players are no exception (from the draft)," Angstrom said. "They should do their duty like all other Swedish men."

None of the Swedish tennis stars, including Bjorn Borg, Mats Wilander, Anders Jarryd, Henrik Sundstrom and Joakim Nystrom, have served in the Swedish military.

But all of them decided early in their careers to move abroad because of the high taxes in Sweden and thus became ineligible for the draft. Wilander, who will lead Sweden in the Davis Cup final against the United States at Goteborg Dec. 16-18 after trying to defend his Australian Open title, moved to Monte Carlo two years ago.

Only citizens aged 17-28 and residing in Sweden are eligible for the draft. Borg, the five-time Wimbledon and six-time French Open winner, did show up for the draft in the early 1970s but never did any military service after moving to Monte Carlo.

Other players residing in Sweden use an old trick to avoid the draft by playing abroad when they get their draft orders.

"It's no secret that we all try to get away from it (the military service)," Magnus Tideman was quoted as saying in Aftonbladet, a Swedish newspaper.

Tideman, ranked 180th on the Association of Tennis Professionals' computer, said, "You lose computer points and money and get out of shape by doing the military service.

PSI Meeting Set

The November meeting of the Greenville chapter of Professional Secretaries International will be held Monday at 6:15 p.m. at the Western Sizzlin Steak House on East 10th Street.

Beryle Waters of the department of cooperative education at East Carolina University will present the program.

Education Session

Area Equitable agents W. Alan Pittman, G. Edwin Porter, William S. Johnson and Barry C. Chesson, district manager, returned recently from a four-day education conference and cruise to the Bahamas.

The agents qualified for the sessions on the basis of production achieved during the first 10 months of 1984. They attended seminars on advanced underwriting and financial planning.

Regular Dividend

The board of directors of Branch Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of 30 cents per share, up from 29 cents per share paid in the first three quarters of 1984. The dividend is payable Dec. 14 to shareholders of record Nov. 30.

Branch Banking and Trust Co., sole subsidiary of Branch Corp., operates 153 offices in 88 cities and towns in North Carolina.

Figures Increased

Jack Eckerd Corp. sales and operating revenue for the 1985 fiscal year's first quarter which ended Oct. 27 were $638 million, up 17.4 percent from 1983, the company reported.

Eckerd Drugs, the corporation's chain drug business, reported sales of $2.25 billion during 1984, an increase of 12 percent. Operating profit was $168.8 million, up 23.5 percent. The company ended the 1984 fiscal year with 1,423 Eckerd Drug stores for a net gain of 104 since 1983.

Eckerd directors declared a cash dividend of 25 cents per common share, payable Jan. 2 to shareholders of record on Dec. 14.

New Board Member

Thomas E. Wainwright, executive vice president of Pitt County Transportation Co. Inc. of Farmville, has been appointed to the Farmville board of First American Savings Bank, according to Dr. John A. Marks, president.

Wainwright resides with his wife Barbara and their three sons at Route 2, Farmville.

He will serve with present members Milton Barnette, Marvin Speight Jr., Wesley Webb and Carter Smith. Dean Corbett is local community banking center manager.

THOMAS E. WAINWRIGHT

Earnings Fell

Rose's Stores Inc. has reported that sales for the third quarter increased 7.7 percent over last year to $202,460,000, and 12.6 percent for the first nine months to $613,262,000.

Net earnings for the quarter totaled $3,646,000, down 6.2 percent from a year earlier. For the first nine months, earnings rose 12 percent to $13,151,000.

Inspection Company

Leroy Everette Jr., president of Everette's Pest Control Inc., has announced the formation of Better Home Inspections Inc., a new home inspection firm for the Greenville and Pitt County area.

Everette said the company offers home buyers a written home inspection report including mechanical, electrical, plumbing and structural inspections.

Loan Office Moved

Branch Banking & Trust Co. has announced that its mortgage loan office in Greenville has moved to a new location. BB&T said the office, originally located at 3101 S. Evans St., is now at the bank's Medical Village branch on Stantonsburg Road near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Receivables Up

Great Southern Finance Inc. has announced that finance receivables for the first three months of the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 were up $782,554 or 15 percent above the comparable 1983 period.

Revenue for the period increased $94,700 or 22 percent, while net income rose 174 percent despite an income tax increase of 266 percent, the company said.

Great Southern has branches in Greenville, Ayden, Elizabeth City, New Bern, Raleigh, Scotland Neck, Selma, Tarboro, Washington, Williamston and Windsor.

Agents Congress

Maxine Anderson of Quixote Travels Inc., Greenville, and her husband Dale attended the recent 54th American Society of Travel Agents Congress in Las Vegas, Nev.

Requirements Met

Pat Walden, general agent of Pilot Life Insurance Company's ordinary division agency in Greenville, recently completed requirements to obtain his chartered life underwriter designation, the company has announced.

The designation, awarded by the American College of Life Underwriters, is earned when a student completes a 10-part examination program and meets ethical and professional requirements.

Training Course

Kim Peele, an employee of Travel Express of Greenville since October, recently completed a five-day Delta Air Line computer training course, according to Ginger Scales Longino, travel agency president.

She said the course was designed to develop skills necessary for accessing all airlines' schedules and fares.

Ms. Peele was formerly associated with Sunbird Airlines.

Check Presented

Robert Beaman, executive vice president of The Convenience Store Group, and Peggy Bennett, Special Olympics coordinator for the CSG, presented five checks recently totaling over $39,000 to the Special Olympics executive committee.

The checks represented CGS's involvement in the Special Olympics program within its five-state, southeastern U.S. marketing area, along with the time and assistance given to the program by Fast Fare and Zippy Mart employees, said Beaman.

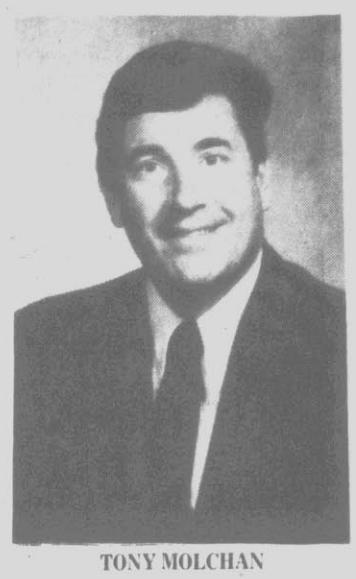

The Raleigh headquartered CGS operates 559 Fast Fare and Zippy Mart stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Senior Executive

Horace Mann Insurance Companies has announced the promotion of Tony Molchan of Greenville to senior account executive. The firm said said the advancement represents the highest level a company agent can achieve.

Molchan, who serves clients in Pitt, Lenoir and Beaufort counties, has been associated with Horace Mann for seven years.

The multiline insurance corporation provides insurance primarily to teachers.

Juice Firms Entangled In Lawsuit

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The makers of Donald Duck orange juice have filed a $9 million antitrust lawsuit against Tropicana Products Inc., charging the juice company giant with trying to drive them out of business.

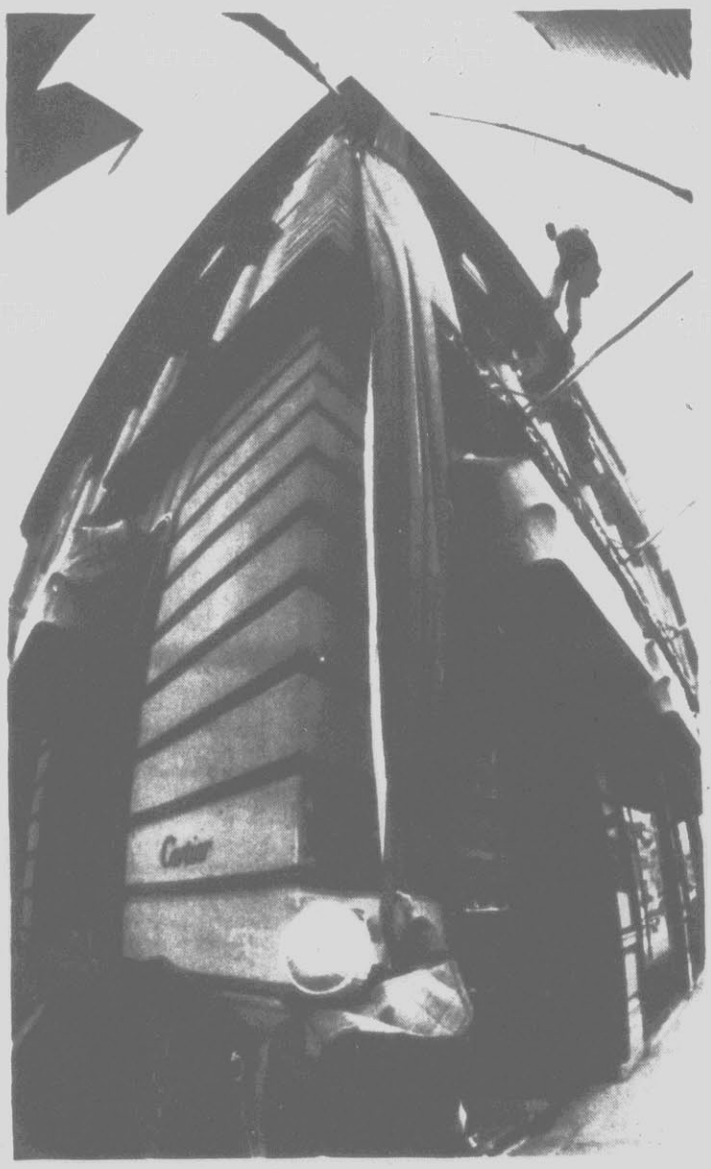

In the lawsuit, World Citrus Inc. of Florida accuses Tropicana and the Donnelly F. Cameron Co. of Charlotte of conspiring to monopolize the North Carolina market for reconstituted orange juice.

World Citrus manufactures Donald Duck, a brand of reconstituted orange juice, at a plant in Winston-Salem that which also serves as a distribution center.

Tropicana, a subsidiary of Beatrice Foods Co., is one of the country's largest manufacturers of orange juice. The Cameron Co. is the food broker in North Carolina that handles Tropicana products.

World Citrus alleges that Tropicana and the Cameron Co. offered Tropicana Gold N' Pure, a brand of reconstituted orange juice, at an unprofitably low price to grocery stores and chains that had been customers of World Citrus. Tropicana did not lower its prices, however, in areas of the country where World Citrus was not distributed, according to the lawsuit.

Officials at Tropicana and the Cameron Co. have not yet responded to the suit.

Service Distributing Agrees On Back Wages, Overtime

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The owners of a chain of service stations based in Albermarle have agreed to pay more than $288,500 in back wages and overtime to current and former employees as a result of a lawsuit filed by the U.S. Department of Labor.

More than 660 employees of the Service Distributing Company Inc., which operates the Servco and Service Plus stations, will receive between $412 and $3,600 each from the company, according to a court order outlining the settlement of the lawsuit. The order was filed this week in U.S. District Court in Greensboro.

The heads of the company agreed to pay the sums without admitting to any violations of federal labor laws.

The defendants in the case were the company and four of its executives: J. Russell Helderman, president; Kenneth R. Helderman, executive vice president; Robert E. Gresham Jr., vice president; and A.R. Roach Jr., operations manager.

The Department of Labor conducted two earlier investigations of Service Distributing, and the company agreed in 1975 to pay more than $174,000 in back wages to its employees. The Labor Department did not bring a lawsuit as the result of either of those investigations.

In the most recent case, the Labor Department said that from October 1979 until October 1982, the company failed to pay certain attendants the minimum wage, did not pay adequate overtime to station managers and kept inadequate records of the hours worked and the wages paid. The violations occurred repeatedly at 30 stations in the state, the Labor Department alleged.

The department investigated 37 of the company's 90 stations before filing the lawsuit.

The company's attorneys denied the government's accusations and blamed any "technical violation" of the law on the employees.

According to court documents, the company's station managers were expected to work 45 to 48 hours a week but did not receive any overtime. The company contended the managers were salaried executives and thus exempt from the law governing overtime.

The company also did not pay its attendants for the work they were assigned to do before and after their shifts ended, court records state. And the managers and attendants were required to pay for any shortages in the stations' cash registers and inventories, among other losses, according to court records.

Trial of the case recessed after five days in August, with 50 witnesses testifying. Before the trial reconvened, the two sides negotiated a settlement.

The consent order, which was signed by Judge Richard C. Erwin, instructs the company to pay all its employees no less than the minimum wage, to pay at least time-and-a-half for overtime and to keep records of how many hours the employees work, what they are paid for their regular shifts and how much they are paid for overtime work.

Erwin gave the company 90 days to send checks for 662 employees to the Department of Labor.

Dollar's Strength On Foreign Markets Prompts Mixed U.S. Prices For Futures

BY DIANE PACETTI
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The continued strength of the dollar against foreign currencies prompted mixed to lower futures prices for grains, soybeans and precious metals Friday.

Volume was almost uniformly light as many traders extended their Thanksgiving holiday.

At the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold settled $2.40 to $3.60 lower with the contract for delivery in December at $340 a troy ounce; and silver was 4.5 cents to 6.9 cents lower with November at $7.540 a troy ounce.

"Metals were under pressure mainly from a strong dollar," said Glen Rosenberg, a research analyst with Rudolf Wolff Commodities in New York. "Normally a cut in the disocunt rate would weaken the dollar, but with very high budget and trade deficits, the dollar's still looking very strong."

On Wednesday, the Federal Reserve Board cut its discount rate — the rate at which it lends money to banks and other fianncial institutions — one-half percentage point to 8.5 percent.

The dollar's strength also weighed on grain and soybean futures prices at the Chicago Board of Trade, analysts said. When the dollar is strong, exports are limited because foreign currencies don't buy as much.

Soybeans and corn futures prices were lower and wheat was mixed at the close of trading Friday.

According to Dale Gustafson, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert in Chicago, beans suffered from some hedging pressure and an overall, continuing attitude that demand has been less than brisk.

"Corn took a hard break," he said, "with some farmer selling, very diappointing overseas buying and concern about the bridge situation (in the St. Lawrence Seaway) all weighing on premiums."

Shippers said Friday that grain loading in the Great Lakes could be delayed up to two weeks because of needed bridge repairs near Montreal.

Wheat prices were supported by tightness in cash market supplies, and reports of delays in planting soft, red winter wheat, Gustafson said.

Wheat settled ½ cent lower to ½ cent higher with the contract for delivery in December at $3.61¾ a bushel; corn was ¼ cent to 3¼ cents lower with December at $2.70¼ a bushel; oats were ¾ cent to 1½ cents lower with December at $1.84¾ a bushel; and soybeans were 3 cents to 5¾ cents lower with Janaury at $6.10¾ a bushel.

Cattle futures prices were higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as the market continued to reflect the strength in the wholesale beef market, sources said.

Lawmakers Gather For Business Forum

PEACHTREE CITY, Ga. (UPI) — Legislators from throughout the South began arriving Saturday for a three-day forum designed to teach lawmakers the skills needed in international business transactions.

The lawmakers — from 14 Southern states — are to participate in seminars and workshops from Sunday through Tuesday. The purpose of the session is to assist leaders involved in international commerce.

"This program will serve as a model for other regions of the country and will assist the leadership of the South in understanding a region that is becoming increasingly global," said James A. Crupi, managing director of the Georgia World Congress Institute.

The World Congress Institute and the Southern Legislative Conference are sponsoring the legislative forum. Both groups are based in Atlanta.

Legislators from Oklahoma, Maryland, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, Alabama, West Virginia, Tennessee and Texas accepted invitations to participate in the forum.

Economically, the South is the fastest growing region in the United States. In recent years cities such as Miami, Atlanta, Baltimore, Orlando, Fla,, Mobile, Ala., Jackson, Miss., and Nashville, Tenn. have experienced dramatic increases in international commerce.

A spokesman for the World Congress Center said the forum at the Peachtree Sheraton Conference Center, about 25 miles south of Atlanta, would review the issue of world trade and its impact on state policies.

Kodak Diversifies, Finds Footing Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastman Kodak Co. still faces a clouded future, but it certainly has more to give thanks about this year than in late 1983.

A year ago the photographic-products giant was finishing a dismal year. Faced with sluggish growth in many of its traditional businesses, Kodak was involved in a major effort to cut costs, an effort that eroded its bottom line.

Kodak offered early retirement to thousands of its employees, and simply laid off others. Severance payments and other costs related to the move helped leave Kodak on its way to a 63 percent drop in fourth-quarter profit, and a 51 percent decline in full-year earnings.

For the first time in 35 years, Kodak failed to raise its annual dividend.

This year, however, the Rochester, N.Y.-based concern is beginning to regain its footing.

Earnings are up sharply from the depressed 1983 levels even though sales are not, despite the economic recovery. The company resumed raising its annual dividend and, with its cost-cutting effort mostly behind it, Kodak is now moving to find new growth areas.

Kodak signaled its diversification intentions this past week, announcing plans to offer commercial customers reduced-rate, long-distance telephone and data-transmission services through Kodak's existing internal telecommunications system.

Kodak initially will concentrate marketing its service to large businesses that can be served by major communications switching facilities that Kodak already has in place in 17 U.S. cities.

The system now handles about 7 million calls and 1 million files of data a year among 225 worldwide locations.

While the communications service isn't expected to be a major contributor to net income, Kodak watchers said the service's up-front costs should be minimal and its risk low.

More importantly, they said, the new service showed that the company is aggressively pursuing new business opportunities for the 1980s.

Only a month earlier, Kodak expanded its move into the market for floppy disks, the thin record-shaped disks that store the data in personal computers.

Kodak said it would initially market, and later manufacture and market, eight types of floppy disks; Kodak already has begun making the drives that read the data on the disks.

The company also already is involved in copiers, clinical blood analyzers, fibers, plastics and equipment that converts film images to electronic form for higher-density storage and transmission of the images.

Both of Kodak's new markets, long-distance service and electronic storage products, are hotly competitive and promise Kodak no easy time in making itself an industry leader.

In the communication-services arena, such heavy hitters as MCI Communications Corp. and GTE Corp.'s GTE-Sprint unit are already established.

The floppy-disk market is dotted with so many competitors that price-cutting, and resultant pressure on profit margins, is prevalent. Indeed, a shakeout in that market is often forecast by industry trackers, and Kodak won't succeed on its brand identification alone. It will have to be a low-cost producer.

Still, Kodak at the moment has the benefit of an upward earnings trend, thanks in part to its 1983 cost cutting, which lowered its worldwide workforce by 8 percent, to about 125,000 employees.

For the first nine months of 1984, net income jumped 61 percent from a year earlier, to $719.4 million, on only a 3.3 percent rise in sales, to $7.85 billion.

Kodak subsequently lifted its annual dividend by a nickel, to $3.60 a share.

In the third quarter alone, operating income climbed 29.7 percent despite sales edging up only 2.5 percent, and its profit margin widened to 19.6 percent from 13.9 percent, estimated Eugene G. Glazer, who follows Kodak for the investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Now, Kodak's challenge is to turn its diversification efforts into sizable sales gains to take further advantage of its lower cost structure.

Its traditional photographic-equipment business will not show "above-average growth in the 1980s," Glazer recently wrote, citing continued disappointing sales of cameras.

Try Small Ideas For Christmas Fun

Favors for Christmas parties or welcome gifts to a children's hospital ward, shut-ins or for at home Christmas treats can be easy to make and also entertaining.

Ideas can include a — Pretzel Wreath. Glue seven small pretzels together to form a wreath. Electric glue gun works but other glues can be used, althought it takes longer to dry. Spray with acrylic sealer. Insert ribbon around and through the outer holes.

— Pine Cone Reindeer. Material needed are a small pine cone, one small plastic spool (shiny), two twigs, two brown pipe cleaners, two small circles of felt (red or brown) glue (rubber cement). Cut pipe cleaners: one to three inches for neck and four to three and a half inches for the legs. Glue three inch pipe cleaner through hole in spool and bend for neck. Glue to pine cone. Cut circiles of felt to glue on each end of spool to hold twigs in place for antlers. Glue on legs. Bend end of legs in a circle so they will stand up. Tie a ribbon bow around neck.

— Paper Plate Angel. The angel can be used to hold a candle. Materials needed include a paper plate, fluted around the edge, and a pattern to trace, which can be obtained from the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

— Animal Ornaments for Country Tree. Trace animal patterns from coloring books and cut out of Styrafoam trays.

— Tobaggans. Materials needed are: two by seven inch red construction paper, chocolate bar, box of mints and package of gum, Christmas paper and ribbon, cotton balls, red yarn, pipe cleaner, glue and felt tip marker. Cut construction paper two by seven inches and roll one end over a pencil about an inch and release pencil, making the front shape of the tobaggan. Wrap candy, mints and gum packages in different Christmas paper. Tie three together, one of each. Dot bottom with glue and stick group to construction paper tobaggan. Wrap pipe cleaner like a barber pole with red yarn. Use two cotton balls for the little Santa and glue them, one on top of the other. Use a felt pen to mark dots for his face and then glue them on the back of the tobaggan.

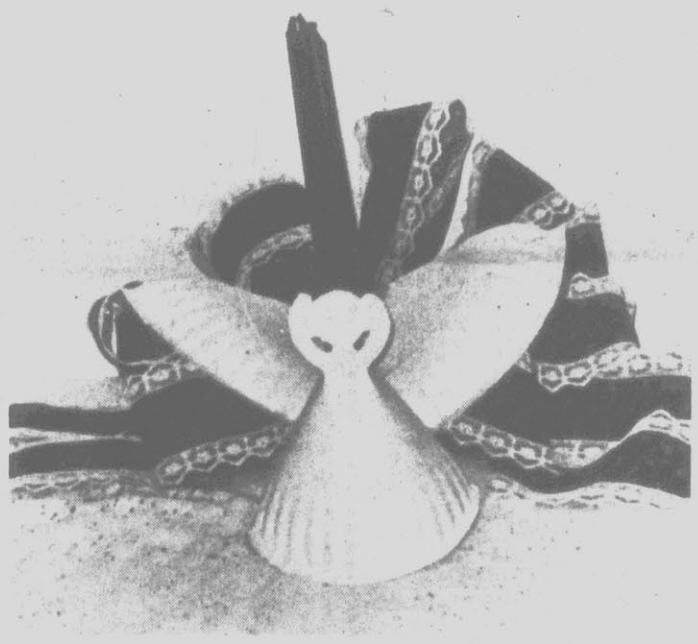

Classes in making potpourri ornaments or wreaths were conducted by Lucille Sumrell and Patsy Denson of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Materials needed are four-inch embroidery hoops, net material, ribbon and lace and potpourri.

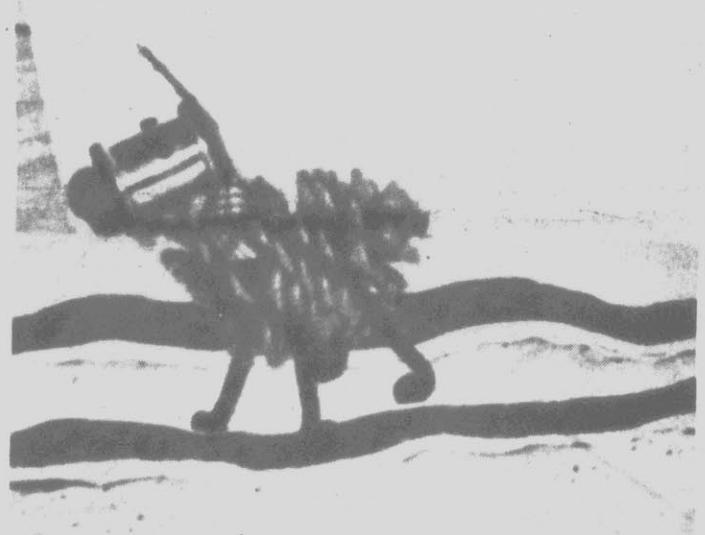

MAKING POTPOURRI WREATHS AND ORNAMENTS...are Clara Carr, Sarah Perkins, Dally Snider, Dorothy George, Marja Ross and Mary Ruth Stocks.

Christmas Tours Begin Wednesday

REIDSVILLE — Chinqua-Penn Plantation House, a country mansion and tourist attraction near here, once again will be decorated and open for its annual Christmas tours, which will begin Wednesday and run through Dec. 16.

Construction work on the 27-room house began in 1923 and was completed in time for its former owners, the late Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Penn, to move in before Christmas of 1925. Now, almost 60 years later, the mansion's traditional yuletide decorations are still being displayed seasonally.

Hours for the guided holiday tours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Sundays. Two special evenings of unguided, candlelight tours and handbell music also will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Thursdays, Dec. 6 and Dec. 13. At that time, visitors will be able to walk through the first floor of the house.

Admission for the regular daily tours is $3 for adults, $2 for senior citizens and $1 for children under 12 years. Admission to the two evening tours will be $2 per person. Groups of more than 10 are asked to make advance reservations by calling Chinqua-Penn at (919) 349-4576. A meeting room that can accomodate 50 people is available at a $10 charge.

Visitors to the plantation house will be able to see several different types of holiday decorations. Two large Christmas wreaths will be placed in the huge iron gates leading to the house. Greenery will be used to trim the front entrance, and two additional wreaths will be placed on the doors.

Inside, a 13-foot Frazier fir will be decorated as the living room's Christmas tree. Two trees of poinsettias will be displayed in the house, along with other decorated Christmas trees. Approximately 300 other poinsettias, all grown in the Chinqua-Penn greenhouse, can be seen, in addition to floral displays of snapdragons, reiger begonias and chrysanthemums.

Chinqua-Penn is a favorite spot for sightseers during the holidays, according to Doug Merritt, director of the plantation house, who noted that approximately 11,200 people came for Christmas tours in 1983. Overall, since the mansion first opened for public tours in 1966, approximately 503,000 people have toured the house and grounds.

"Last Christmas, Chinqua-Penn had its largest number of visits ever for holiday tours," said Merritt. "It's a special kind of place to visit during the holidays and for many people, it's become a tradition."

During the tours, special Christmas music will be piped throughout the mansion. Among the special objects visitors can see will be figurines of the Holy Family, along with several Madonnas. The house also features many art objects, treasures and furnishings collected by Mr. and Mrs. Penn during their travels around the world.

The house was trimmed and opened to the public for the Christmas season 18 years ago for the first time since the mansion was given to the University of North Carolina system in 1959. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro is responsible for management of the plantation house and for 36 acres of surrounding grounds.

Made of stone and logs, Chiqua-Penn is Y-shaped and is located on a knoll. While it resembles an English country home more than anything else, the house represents no particular architectural style.

Couple Speaks Vows In Kinston Church

MRS. BALL

KINSTON — The Spilman Memorial Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding of Bessie Yvonne Aman of Kinston and Micah David Ball of Greenville Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. David R. Troutman.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Warren Aman of Kinston and Dr. and Mrs. Wilbert R. Ball of Route 3, Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length ivory satin gown accented with beaded alencon lace. The fitted torso bodice of the gown featured a Victorian neckline with a crown collar, illusion deep V-yoke and fitted tapered beaded alencon lace sleeves. Alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls and sequins appliqued the satin bodice and sleeves and encircled the collar. Bridal buttons fastened the sleeves and the back of the gown. The satin floor length skirt extended into a cathedral train. Garlands of scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and cathedral train. She wore an ivory bridal hat appliqued with re-embroidered alencon lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls and crystals. Flowers tipped with pearls accented the turned-up brim and French veiling and streamers trimmed the back of the hat. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, ivy and greenery.

Patricia Aman of Kinston served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sheila Crawford of Pikeville and Kimberly Pate of Goldsboro, both cousins of the bride; Susan Carraway of Greenville and Donna Davidson of Raleigh, both sisters of the bridegroom; Cindy Gilliam and Karen Ham, both of Greenville; Janet Dupree of Kinston and LeaAnna Whitehead of Washington. Each attendant wore a full length dress of scarlet red satin and carried a cascade bouquet of orchids and white cushions accented with baby's breath and greenery.

Flower girls were Molly and Meme McNairy McNairy of Kinston and ring bearer was Nathan Ham of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Joseph Rex Carraway of Greenville and Frederick Gregory Davidson of Raleigh, both brothers-in-law of the bridegroom; Tommy Joe Payne III of Alexandria, Va.; Robert Gentry Brinkley of Greensboro; Jack Warren Jenkins and Edwin Lafayette Clark Jr., both of Greenville; Marcus Gerald Carraway of Winston-Salem, and Bruce Sasser of Mount Olive, cousin of the bride.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Mrs. Danny Rice and soloists Mrs. Johnny Henderson and Earl Head. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Edward Thigpen. Mrs. Hoyt Minges Jr., presided at the register.

Following the ceremony, a reception given by the parents of the bride was held in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. Robert Fowler and Mrs. Carrow Fort served the wedding cake and Mrs. Clay Croom and Mrs. Bill Hayes poured punch.

A rehearsal dinner was given at Zachary's Restaurant in Kinston by the parents of the bridegroom. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the Kinston County Club. Several parties and showers were given in honor of the bridal couple including a wine and cheese party held at Quail Ridge Clubhouse in Greenville.

The bridegroom graduated from Kinston High School and received a degree in fashion merchandising. She attended Lenior Community College and is presently majoring in elementary education at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and received a B.S.B.A. degree from ECU and a J.D. degree from Wake Forest University. He is a trust officer with First Citizens Bank in Kinston.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

Tamperproof Bottles Hard On Arthritic Hands

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, her husband and their 6-year-old son recently moved from Las Vegas to a small town in northern California. (Her husband's company transferred him there.)

They wanted to attend services for the High Holy Days, but were told the "tickets" cost $50 apiece—even for the child. Her husband went to see the rabbi and told him they couldn't afford it because they were expecting another baby soon, and making ends meet was difficult.

I offered to pay for their tickets, but they said they needed a larger apartment, a crib and other things for the baby more.

I am very sad to think a ticket to attend services on the High Holy Days costs more than a ticket to a Michael Jackson concert.

Abby, it seems to me that there should have been some way this could have been worked out for people who want to worship at a temple. I await your reply.

APPALLED MOTHER
IN OHIO

DEAR APPALLED: I, too, was appalled, so I called Rabbi Jacob Pressman at the Beth Am Temple in Los Angeles and read your letter to him.

His reply: "Unlike churches that are supported by weekly collections or tithing, synagogues are sustained by annual membership dues. Because of the great number of worshipers who want to attend only for the High Holy Days, the seating capacity exceeds the limit, so it is necessary to reserve seats for those who make prior arrangements. Those who do not wish to join the congregation make their contributions, then seats are reserved for them. They are also welcome every other day of the year. (Nobody has to 'pay to pray.')

"Those who cannot afford a full membership or even a High Holy Day donation are welcome in any synagogue in the world, if they make their special needs and limitations known to the responsible parties."

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your answer to "Runner-up" in which you explain how far some beauty contestants go in the use of artificial attachments: I have seen wigs, caps, plates, artificial freckles, phony suntans, falsies, hip and rear-end padding, false fingernails, colored contacts, false eyebrows and hair colored every color on the palette—sometimes all on one head—plus various other beauty "aids," but who ever heard of a teen-ager with silicone implants? Certainly not I, and I am a ...

BOSOM BUDDY

DEAR BUDDY: You should get around more. I assure you there are some.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am not asking for advice, I need help. I think I speak for a lot of elderly folks with arthritic hands. We cannot open those tamperproof pill bottles! And why should we have to?

Instead of making the druggist put those caps on all prescription bottles, why not put the responsibility where it belongs? Make the customers ask for them if they want them!

Thanks for listening.

GNARLED KNUCKLES IN PITTSBURGH

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Do you know who is forcing those gross swimsuits on the women of today?

The fashion designers, that's who! They are making fools of women! Do something, Abby!

DISGUSTED IN SAN JOSE

DEAR DISGUSTED: Fashion designers can design from now until eternity, but without buyers, their wares would go the way of the Nehru jacket. (Remember?) No one can force anyone to buy anything; the success or failure of the "gross" new swimsuits will depend upon how many women are willing to grin and bare it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: If you know where one can buy a modest bathing suit, please let me know. I am a senior citizen whose doctor has recommended swimming as a healthful exercise, but I am no Venus in a bathing suit.

I've searched all the mail-order catalogs, and the stores here and elsewhere for over a year, and have yet to find that modest one-piece suit.

MAD IN MADISON

DEAR MAD: I'll keep my eyes open for you. Send me your name and address.

Carolyn Ann Sabatino Weds G. Quinn Morris

Carolyn Ann Sabatino and Grover Quinn Morris were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church in New Castle, Del. The Rev. John F. O'Brien officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and mrs. Andrew J. Sabatino Sr. of New Castle, Del. Mr. and Mrs. Grover Morris of Route 1, Vanceboro, are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a schiffli embroidered English net gown with an illusion neckline with a high collar. It was styled with long Victorian sleeves, basque waist, trimmed with Venise appliques. The full bouffant skirt ended in a chapel train. Her circular fingertip veil was attached to a cap covered with schiffli lace and pearls accented with a raised schiffli lace bow.

Marie Sabatino, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a marigat blue taffeta sress with a batteau neckline and V-back. The dress had leg of mutton sleeves and a long skirt featuring a double cascade panel. It had a sash and bow in back. She wore a taffeta covered cap with a raised bow.

Bridesmaids were Ann Hardy, sister of the bride of Newark, Del., Rudy Schulte, sister of the bridegroom of Greenville, Bettina Lackey of Siler City and Marsha Zent of New Castle, Del. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Rooney Haddock, cousin of the bridegroom of Vanceboro, William Schulte, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Greenville, Brian Edwards of Grifton and Joseph Davenport of Wilson.

A program of wedding music was presented by Thomas and Wendy Sabatino, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, accompanied by Anthony Romano.

A reception and sit down dinner followed the ceremony at the Ramada Inn. An after-rehearsal party was held Friday night at the Ramada Inn and was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Delaware and Western Maryland College. She is employed as the coordinator for Hearing Impaired Services at Wilson County Technical Institute in Wilson. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and graduted from Pitt Community College. He is employed as production manager at U.N.X. Chemicals, Inc. in Greenville.

MRS. MORRIS

The couple will live in Farmville after a trip to Nassau.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Guilford Lewis entertained the bridal couple, family and friends at a dinner buffet. Other parties included miscellaneous showers, bridesmaids luncheon, pig picking, coctail and bachelor parties.

Club Receives Blue Ribbon

The meeting of the Greenville Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. R.G. Little. It was announced the club won a blue ribbon for the best yearbook at the District 12 meeting held in Wilson last month.

The program was an exhibit of dried arrangements made by members. Each member identified the materials used, type of container and arrangement made. They will be shown in the library of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church after Thanksgiving.

Guests for the meeting were Barbars Stone, Mary F. Leggett and Edna Seeley.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. R.A. Davis, Mrs. C.M. Respess and Mrs. Eugene Sutton.

Officers To Be Installed

The meeting of the Greenville-Pitt County Women's Council of Realtors was held at the Greenville Country Club Wednesday. New officers will be installed at the annual Christmas party.

New officers are Jean Hopper, president, Lyle O. Davis, vice president, Inda Wingate, secretary, and Dwen Tyson, treasurer.

Linda Lee of Herbalife presented the program. Members will donate a signature quilt for the Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina. JoAnn Jackson was named project chairman.

Woman Of Conscience Goes To Bat For Troubled Children

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

Salvaging troubled children can be compared to fighting a housefire, according Julia E. Robinson, named the 1984 Woman of Conscience by the National Council of Women of the United States.

"The chance for success goes down as one gets further away from the start of the problem," says Robinson, who's leading a program with a new twist for Wyoming's young spoils of society — delinquents, abandoned, abused, emotionally crippled.

"We think the salvage rate is higher if there's intervention earlier, right when the trouble starts. There have been lots of failures, especially when the youngsters are sent to correctional institutions. They return home. They repeat.

"I think what we are doing here will not give us an answer in three to five years but I think the chance of success is good and the approach can be used anywhere."

For all those reasons Robinson, of Cheyenne, has worked around the state since 1982 to get an "early intervention" program moving for troubled kids.

She is administrator of the division of community programs in the Wyoming Department of Health and Social Services.

For her accomplishments, including talking the legislature into funding a new troubled youth program, she was nominated by Gov. Ed Herschler for the "Woman of Conscience" award. Rachel Carson, Margaret Mead and Barbara Jordan are among recipients of the award, given since 1963.

"We researched this new approach in 1982," Robinson said. "We sold it to the legislature in 1983 and got it moving in with formation of 23 separate county plans designed to help kids with problems right in their homes, even helping the parents or, when necessary, foster homes in their communities," she said.

The old way was to send the kids with emotional, behavioral and juvenile justice system troubles out of the home county to correctional institutions in or out of the state or to a catch-all children's home — where abandoned toddlers mingled with the emotionally disjointed and delinquents.

"One of the largest problems with services to children all across the country," Robinson said, "is coordination. You have law enforcement people, educators, welfare and mental health workers trying to save the children or correct them.

"Our alternative services will try to help three classes of troubled boys and girls. First there are the kids with emotional problems, most of whom are shuffled around. This might include those who have been sexually abused or beaten. Such children have emotional scars.

"Second are the kids with behavioral problems. Runaways. Drinkers. Out of school. Third, we have the delinquents.

"To deal with children with such problems we have services in the community were we had none before. There even are job training and recreational therapies.

"We think we have a chance of reducing institutional placement — and, therefore, a chance of nipping the trouble at the start."

Robinson recalled that it was difficult getting the legislature to fund the program — "we were going from zero dollars to $1 million."

"But the trouble disappeared when I got to my best selling point," she recalled.

"I told about how the March of Dimes, at the height of the polio epidemics, had to shift priorities, putting some of its funds into the hunt for ways to prevent polio.

"It couldn't all go into iron lungs needed by people who were polio victims. Well, that paid off when the polio vaccine was found. Prevention. There was not so much demand for iron lungs after that.

"With prevention — which is the way I view early intervention with troubled youths — there will not be so much need for institutions and, hopefully, the level of repeats will drop."

Merrinelle Sullivan, executive director of the New York-based National Council of Women of the United States, said the woman of conscience award goes to a person who has demonstrated, in an exemplary way, innovation, leadership and dedication to improving the "world in which we live."

The council is composed of 26 organizations, including the International Association of Physical Education & Sports for Girls and Women, American Mothers Inc., March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, National Association of Negro Business & Professional Women's Clubs Inc., Hadassah-Women's Zionist Organization of America and Young Women of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"We try each year to tie the award into the United Nation's Year," Sullivan said.

"The year 1985 is the UN Year of Youth and that is why someone doing outstanding work with youth was selected for the 1884 award.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Couple Marries In Saturday Ceremony

Kristina Love Troutman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Troutman of West Jefferson, and Douglas M. Jones, son of Inez B. Jones of Vanceboro and the late McDaniel Jones, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at one o'clock.

Barbara Miller presented the wedding music.

The Rev. Mike Jordan performed the double ring ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her attendants were Davida Ward and Patti Aldridge, both of Greenville. The best man was Harold Jones of Ayden, brother of the bridegroom, and Neal Sessoms of Raleigh was the usher.

The bride wore a tea length dress of candlelight chiffon over taffeta styled with a sweetheart neckline, bordered in a panel of candlelight schiffli embroidered English net. The dress was styled with off-shoulder pout sleeves and handerchief hemline. The modified natural waistline was enhanced with a sash of self-fabric. She wore a bridal circlet of silk Venise lace and silk flowers accented with a pouf of illusion. She carried a silk candlelight and white magnolia, lilies, stepanotie and sweetheart roses.

The bridesmaids wore length dresses of teal matte taffeta designed with a sweetheart neckline, pout sleeves fitted at the elbow. Each had a fitted bodice with a scooped back. The gathered skirts were accented with a self-fabric bow. Each carried an arm bouquet of silk flowers, candlelight stephanotis, white lilies and sweetheart roses.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and Wake Forest University School of Law. He is an attorney with the U.S. Navy stationed at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., where the couple will be living.

MRS. JONES

A reception was held after the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents. Cake was served by Harriett Watkins of Oxford and punch was poured by Ruthie Ellison of Greenville. Ginnie Anderson of Greenville presided at the guest register.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's mother Friday night at Eldreth's restaurant. Several showers were given for the couple by friends and relatives.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Every time I hear talk about nations getting toGether and working as one toward world peace, I look at the Shelves of cereal in our house and get very depressed.

How can we hope to find common ground for universal love when we can't even agree on one cereal that fits all?

We have a cereal for every season, every mood, every size mouth, every cartoon character and every malady. We have cereal that builds a fire in your tummy on a cold morning, has delayed timers to guard against morning hunger, cereals that sound like a cannon going off in your bowl, cereals that wake you up in the morning and make you jump higher than a basketball hoop.

We have cereals that make you regular, fulfill all your nutritional needs and can be used for cocktail snacks, cookies, or to add zest to your meat loaf.

All of the boxes have two things in common: they're half-filled and stale.

I can remember exactly what the first box of cereal looked like that my child ever clutched to her chest and refused to give up. It had two cartoon characters on it called Beany and Cecil and it took her two hours to pick out. It has taken her 30 years to eat it and the box is still on the shelf. I don't know what there is about a box of cereal that has such a long shelf life, but no one can bring themselves to throw one away.

Throughout the years, we have tried everything to get a handle on the problem. We tried a cereal embargo once for 30 days. No cereal was to be brought into the house until some of it was eaten. During that period of inactivity, there was an outbreak of cereal incest and we ended up with eight boxes more than when we started.

My husband tried consolidating several cereals in one box only to have a rebellion that warned, "If our milk doesn't turn brown, we'll know you've been fooling around with the cereal again, so don't try to be creative!"

The problem with all the cereal inventory is that you can't fool kids about what is current and what isn't. They know that Donald Duck is 50 years old now, that Captain Crunch was canceled, the Flintstones are passe and Count Chocula doesn't scare anyone anymore.

They will only consider Strawberry Shortcake, Gremlins, E.T., C-3 POs and Smurfberry Crunch.

Hope has always sprung eternal that one of these days families would sit down with one another and decide on one cereal, until last week when I opened my mother's cupboard door and saw six kinds of bran.

She shrugged. "It beats arguing with your father in the aisles."

Is there no place in this world for detente?

20-ounce can unsweetened sliced apples
½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1-3rd cup 80-proof bourbon

Cook butt according to wrapper directions; drain well and insert cloves at 1-inch intervals over surface. Place butt in a baking dish (about 10 by 6 by 2 inches); surround with apples. Sprinkle apples with sugar, cinnamon and bourbon. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven, basting butt several times, until apples are very hot. Makes 6 servings.

LIGHT SUPPER
Soup, Salad & Crackers
Blueberry Cake & Beverage

AVANELLE'S WINTER BLUEBERRY CAKE

¼-pound stick butter
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs
2 cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup buttermilk
1 cup unsweetened frozen blueberries (see Note)

In a medium bowl cream butter, sugar, baking soda, salt and vanilla. Beat in eggs one at a time. Stir in flour in 3 additions, alternately with buttermilk, just until smooth each time. Fold in blueberries. Turn into a greased and floured 9-inch square cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out free of batter — 45 minutes. Loosen edges. Turn out on wire rack; turn right side up. Serve warm.

Note: Just before using berries, rinse with cold

FISH FARMING

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — A backyard "fish farm" can supply low cost, high-nutrition food for as little as 50 cents a pound, says a university teacher who teaches a course in raising fish.

The only requirements are a supply of fingerlings, or baby fish, that can be purchased or taken from a lake or river, and a wading pool 12 feet in diameter and 3 feet deep. A pool that size holds enough water to raise 100 pounds of fish.

After five or six months of feeding the fish table scraps, pulverized compost and yard trimmings, or commercial fish food, the crop can be harvested at an average weight of one-half to three-quarters of a pound.

Copycat Cooking: Butterscotch Pudding

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

About 20 years ago a good many cooks discovered a delicious dessert that could be made quickly. All you had to do was add instant coffee powder to a bought butterscotch pudding mix.

But nowadays cooks have changed; they are inclined to make their own pudding mixes. Recently I was asked to copycat that coffee version of bought butterscotch mix pudding. Here is the recipe from scratch. Simple but delicious enough to serve to guests.

BUTTERSCOTCH COFFEE PUDDING

- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- 2½ cups milk
- ¼ cup cold strong coffee
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

In a small bowl, stir together ½ cup of the sugar and the cornstarch. Gradually stir in ½ cup of the milk and the coffee, keeping smooth; reserve; restir before using.

In a heavy 2-quart saucepan stir together the remaining ¼ cup sugar and water. Stirring often over medium heat, bring to a boil. Without stirring, boil until sugar looks amber color and like a heavy syrup — about 10 minutes. Over moderately low heat stir in the remaining 2 cups milk, gradually and carefully, pouring it near the side of the pan. Continue cooking over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until the heavy amber syrup is completely dissolved. Stir in reserved cornstarch mixture. Stirring constantly over moderate heat, bring to a boil and boil until as thick as mayonnaise and mixture mounds when dropped from a spoon. Off heat, stir in butter and vanilla.

Turn into individual serving dishes. Without pressing down, lightly cover surfaces with saran; refrigerate to set. At serving time, remove saran and garnish with unsweetened whipped cream.

Makes six ½-cup servings.

FOREST CAKE

- Two 18.25 ounce packages chocolate cake mix
- 21-ounce can cherry pie filling
- Chocolate Frosting (about 2 cups)
- 1 cup heavy cream (whipped and sweetened and flavored to taste)
- 8 ounce semi-sweet chocolate bar

Make up cake mix according to package directions. Turn ¼ of the batter into each of three greased and floured 9-inch round layer cake pans. Turn remaining ¼ of batter into 12 medium size muffin pans lined with fluted cup cake papers. Bake according to package directions. Turn out on wire racks and cool completely. Place one layer on a cake plate and spread with some of the Chocolate Frosting. Add second layer and spread with cherry pie filling, saving some of the cherries. Add third layer. Cover sides with Chocolate Frosting leaving enough to decorate cup cakes. Swirl whipped cream over top. Decorate edge with saved cherries. Briefly warm chocolate bar between your palms. With a butter knife, slice very thin curls of chocolate and, as you do so, drop onto top of cake.

This cake was requested by T. J. Siegal (age 10), whose mother Vicki kindly contributed the recipe.

Sorority To Aid Social Services

The Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority meeting was held at the home of Gail Costello. A donation will be sent to the Pitt County Social Services Department to help with the needy during Christmas.

A report on the craft bazaar held recently was given. Plans for future fund raisers were also discussed.

Janice Hopkins presented a program on helpful hints around the house.

The meeting was conducted by Libby Kinley, president.

Buy The Best In Furniture

It is one thing to make a mistake when purchasing an article of clothing, and quite another to buy the wrong furniture. People buy furniture so infrequently, the variety can be confusing.

Buy individual pieces rather than suites of furniture, and buy the best quality you can afford, recommends Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension interior design specialist, North Carolina State University.

Price is not the final sign of quality. Check the hangtag. It will tell you what materials have been used — solids, veneers, etc. This will help you comparison shop. Examine the finish. It should look even and feel smooth.

One of the best places to check construction is drawers. Pull the drawer out with one hand. It should glide smoothly. Look for dovetail joints, not nails.

Then check the stability of the piece. Place your palms on the table, press down hard and try to rock it. A well-constructed piece will not wobble or creak.

Make sure upholstery fabric is tightly woven. Hold the fabric in your hand and press down of the fabric as hard as you can. If the yarns slip or separate, the fabric construction is weak.

Rub printed fabric briskly to see if any of the color rubs off. Then check the padding. Make sure you do not feel the wood frame anywhere. If you can feel it, the fabric will wear through in that area.

Notice To Women

Have you worn an intrauterine device (IUD) in the past?
If you have, it may have been a Dalkon Shield IUD

(shown below enlarged)

Many women have obtained significant compensation for injuries (HYSTERECTOMY, INFERTILITY, ECTOPIC PREGNANCY) resulting from use of the Dalkon Shield Device.

Gift Books Can Be Inexpensive

By Jill Lai
United Press International

If you'd like to give a book as a gift this Christmas but don't want to spend what coffee-table books are going for, don't despair. There are plenty for the choosing and with one exception, all of the following are $25 or less.

Get the season off to a good start with the Reader's Digest's "A Family Christmas" (304 pp., illus., $21.50). This lovely book covers most of what you need for a traditional Christmas — craft ideas, menus, stories and prayers. The articles talk about the tradition of the Christmas tree and cards, and stories include "Yes, Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus." James Beard provides the menus for holiday feasts.

Another seasonal book is "Images of Christmas," by Elaine Wilson, calligraphy by Dorothy Boux (Doubleday, 127 pp., $12.95). The collection of poems, carols and writings are both English and American. It includes such favorites as the carol, "We Three Kings," and the story of the nativity from St. James. All are beautifully illustrated and transcribed by Boux.

A delightful gem is "A Happy Book of Christmas Stories," by William J. Lederer (Norton, 64 pp., $7.95). These short stories are full of Christmas spirit and are bound to leave you with the warm feeling you get when Christmas is just right.

The one expensive book in this selection is "The National Archives of the United States," by Herman J. Viola (Abrams, 288 pp.). It's $49.50 but well worth it for those interested in this country's heritage. This volume makes the past come alive in its pictures and text of items such is the Constitution that are contained in the Archives. The book's publication coincides with the Archives' 50th anniversary.

Nostalgia of a different sort comes through "Coney Island, A Postcard Journey to the City of Fire," by Richard Snow (Brightwaters Press, 119 pp., $24.95) This is a journey into history, to a time when Coney Island was the place to go. Snow restores the hustle and bustle of the early 20th century amusement park, restaurants and waterfront as he describes the photographs and postcards reproduced in this book.

For the mystery lover in your family, there's "Hercule Poirot's Casebook" (Dodd, Mead, 878 pp., $15.95). It contains all 50 of Agatha Christie's stories starring the French inspector. They range from "The Veiled Lady," to "Murder In the Mews."

Readers will get a different perspective of space from the photographs in Timothy Ferris' book "SpaceShots — The Beauty of Nature Beyond Earth" (Pantheon, 143 pp., $24.95). Ferris and Carolyn Zecca selected these photographs as much for their beauty as anything else. Jupiter's ring, a Magellanic cloud, and the north Polar region of Mars are but a few of the unusual shots in this lovely book.

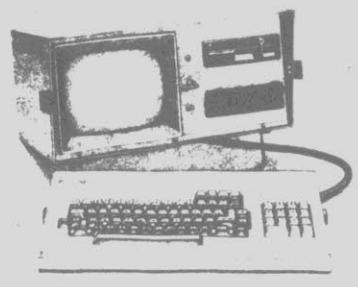

"The Good Housekeeping Book of Plants" by Rob Herwig (Hearst Books, 288 pp., $19.95) is the perfect gift for anyone with a green thumb. Herwig's book recommends plants for indoor gardening, gives information on plant care, and lists plants according to their light and humidity needs and growing characteristics.

A wonderful book to browse through is "Castles," (Bantam, 192 pp., $24.95) by Alan Lee, written by David Day. Lee's haunting drawings of the castles of legends and myths takes the reader on a spell-binding tour of castles through the ages — Asgard of the Norse gods, the Rhine Castles of Germany weave their spell in these pages.

In a lighter vein, some of the funniest cartoons from the Wall Street Journal are now for the keeping in a collection called "Pepper ... and Salt," (Franklin Watts, 96 pp., $9.95) edited by Charles Preston. It wouldn't do to describe any of them, you have to see them to appreciate them.

Everyone will appreciate "Miss Piggy's Treasury of Art Masterpieces from the Kermitage Collection," edited by Henry Beard (Holt Rinehart & Winston, 43 pp., $12.95). Da Vinci and Botticelli may never recover but Miss Piggy's legion of fans will love this book of "art." The porcine art expert takes you on a tour of such great works as Rodin's "The Smooch" and Sandro Botticelli's "The Birth of You Know Who." As Miss Piggy says, "I think vous get the drift."

On The Young Side

By CLAY DEANHARDT

Next weekend is the big date, as weeks of work by the Drama Club finally come to their fruition when the club presents its production of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland."

Performances will be held at the Wahl-Coates School auditorium on Friday through Sunday nights, Nov. 30-Dec. 2, at 8 p.m. There will also be a matinee performance on Saturday at 2 p.m.

The club is once again under the director of Betty Topper. She has been teaching drama, speech and chorus at Rose High for many years, and is also the director of the school's yearly spring musical. This year's student director is Amy Vanscoy, a senior.

Carol Ambert plays the part of Alice in this year's production. Other cast members include Leah Harris as the Dutchess; Doug Frelke as the Cheshire Cat; Amy Vanscoy as the Queen of Hearts and Humpty Dumpty; Chris Chappel as the King of Hearts and Tweedle-Dum; Robin Bolande as the White Rabbit; Anne Bentzel as the White Chess Queen; Michelle Hersey as the Red Chess Queen; Larry Howard as the Mad Hatter; Ellen Cotter as the Dormouse; Debbie Morrison as the March Hare; Mike Garris as Tweedle-Dee; Carsten Dose as the Mock Turtle and the White Knight; Jeff Stevenson as the Gryphon, and Glenye Cain as the Catterpillar.

Other members of the club involved in the production include Anne-Marie Ambert, Renee Adams, Julie Wilem, Cindi Moye, Kim Williams, Julie Mayberry, Kendra Harris, Martin Wiesenhoffer, Amy Reese, Gina Leggett, Ally Savitt, Michelle Staffelbach, Evangela Mercer, Lara Perry, Jon Pringle, Clif Deanhardt, Jeff Bray, Lisa Pories, Amy Dohm, Jose Wilem, Richard Haselrig, Camilla Nielson, Amy Hardee, Sarah Burden, Ingrid Lalik, Nancy Johnson, Heidi Schellenberger, Elizabeth Warren, Christine Ackerman, Kimber Smith, Latecia Marrow, Carl Wille and Leigh Lanier.

Tickets will be $3 in advance and $4 at the door. They can be picked up from any Drama Club member. Everyone is encouraged to come see these young students perform, as their productions are done both professionally and with great enthusiasm.

EVENING REFRESHER
Ice Cream & Fudge Sauce Beverage

FUDGE SAUCE
(Large Version)

1 cup sugar
¼ cup cocoa
2-3rds cup milk
½ cup light corn syrup
2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, chopped
4 tablespoons butter
2-3rds cup heavy cream
2 teaspoons vanilla

Into a heavy 3-quart saucepan sift sugar and cocoa; stir well. Stir in milk and corn syrup until blended. Stirring constantly over medium heat, bring to a full boil. Stirring occasionally, boil 12 minutes. Off heat, stir in chocolate and butter until melted. Gradually stir in cream until blended. Stirring constantly over medium heat, return to a boil. Stirring occasionally, boil 3 minutes. Off heat, stir in vanilla. Cool. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator. Reheat, uncovered, in the jar in a saucepan of almost simmering water until liquefied. Makes about 2½ cups.

Youngsters Work Hard To Be Tops In Sports

By LAURA MUHA
Harrisburg Patriot-News

HARRISBURG Pa. (AP) — While most children are watching television, 10-year-old Allison Mulder is in the gymnasium pursuing a dream. She wants to be a top gymnast, and if that means practicing four nights a week, it's OK with her.

"My friends, they go to parties, and I always have to cancel, 'cause I like gymnastics better. I want to be good," she says with an emphatic nod.

Like Allison, more and more children are spending their days in the gym, on the football field or in the pool, hoping to become top athletes.

But is it good for a child to devote so much times to one activity? Yes and no, say the experts.

Participating in sports teaches children about teamwork, gives them self-esteem and builds character. But it can also be stressful for children who are more concerned with winning than having fun.

"Children are starting out (in sports) younger every year," says Larry Thompson, a Lancaster psychologist who counsels young athletes. "We're hearing of 6-year-olds starting in specialized sports. I'm not saying that's good or bad ... just that parents should be aware of the signs of stress."

If a child complains of nausea before games, misses practice repeatedly because of illness, lies awake at night, or his sports or school performance suddenly drops, stress may the be reason, he said.

In that case, it might be best for the child to stop for a while to "see if that's really what he wants," said Thompson.

It might also be a good idea for the parents to examine their own attitudes. Sometimes, they unconsciously push their child so hard that he or she loses interest in the sport.

Thompson explained most young children don't understand the concept of competition, so when they take to the pitcher's mound or dive in the pool, they're doing it to "please their parents, receive praise for good performance, and have fun."

Parents should make sure they praise their child for trying, even if he or she doesn't win. "The emphasis should be on fun, (on) the fact that the person is trying," Thompson said. "The child should always come first. Even if they're not the best (on the team), they deserve to play."

Glenda Pae, director of the West Shore YMCA swim program, agrees. "Everything in our society is so competitive," she said. "I've felt for a long time that there's too much pressure put on young kids to win, win, win all the time. When kids keep driving themselves harder and harder ... they tend to burn themselves out."

As a coach, she tries to emphasize teamwork and having fun rather than winning. "We tell them, just do the best you can ... we don't expect any more."

And this approach seems to be successful; the Y swim team has been in the top 10 nationally since 1972.

But helping child athletes deal with mental stress is not the only challenge for coaches. They also have to make sure the youngsters work hard enough — but not too hard.

"With the amount of pressure that these little kids are putting on their bodies, you have to be careful they don't overdo it," says Malcolm Parker, who coaches the women's team at Keystone Gymnastic School in Mechanicsburg. "When they're 40 years old, I don't want to have them remembering me by the pain in their ankles."

He explained that in a sport like gymnastics, athletes "peak" while in their teens. "They do hard things so early that their bodies can't take it and they end up with chronic injuries," he said.

But physical ability alone does not make good athletes, he added. The child must also have dedication, concentration and "a seriousness, a maturity, that not every 6- or 7-year-old has."

Glenda Pae, who has been coaching for 21 years, thinks "unity, togetherness, and team-mindedness" are also important. She says most of the top swimmers she has worked with all had "a desire to be part of a team, like a family. They needed that sharing with other individuals."

And that's exactly why most children like sports, says Thompson. Whether they're top athletes or merely average, belonging to a team feels good.

"Kids like the affiliation with the team, and they really enjoy excelling, and they like challenges," he said.

Ask Allison Mulder, and that's exactly what she'll tell you, in different words.

"It's like, interesting, and it's fun to compete," she says. "I want to help my team. When my friends do something and I have practice, Mom always says, 'It's your choice' and I take gymnastics ... 'cause I like it."

Check Charities Before Giving Advise Donors

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies show that a sense of depression often accompanies the holiday season, says Dr. Philip F. McKean, a cultural anthropologist, who suggests that putting the emphasis on giving rather than getting will avoid these feelings.

Many people have a deep desire to receive gifts at holiday time, based on childhood memories and expectations, notes McKean, director of Planned Giving for CARE, the international aid and development organization.

"But we're bound to be disappointed and depressed if that is the center of our holiday attention, because we never receive enough of the 'right' presents to fulfill our juvenile fantasies," he says.

"Grow up," he advises. "Learn to become a 'good giver' rather than a passive receiver. When we reach out by making gifts to others, we assert our maturity instead of our immaturity. Our culture emphasizes 'gimme and get' but each of us must learn to 'give and grow' for a deeper joy and satisfaction."

McKean has these suggestions for making gifts count:

— Make a holiday "gift list" to include at least one local, one national and one international cause that expresses your concern and compassion, and reaches beyond yourself.

— Examine the charity to be sure it is doing the bona fide work you want and expect it to do — whether in health care, education, religious leadership, the arts, social services or overseas development and relief.

— To be sure your funds are going to organizations that are publicly accountable, check with a Better Business Bureau.

— Make sure of the charitable deducations from taxes, to which all taxpayers are entitled, in order to make larger gifts. Every dollar of charitable contributions to qualified non-profit organizations is deductible for income tax purposes.

— Plan to make your largest gifts in the future — through a bequest in your will, or a charitable trust, through a gift annuity or a transfer of appreciated property. Consult a charitable organization for guidance.

Council Report Given Members

Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International held its meeting at the home of Julia McLawhorn.

Barbara Parker, Anne Davenport and Betty Williams attended the Southeastern Regional Council held earlier this month in Atlanta, Ga. Ms. Williams announced that North Carolina had won three major awards: the Adeline Smith Diaster Fund, second place; education reporting award, second place; and the rushing award, third place. SERC is composed of 11 states.

Diane Corbin gave the education program and did a slide presentation on Camp Rainbow, a summer camp for cancer stricken children. The camp is jointly sponsored by the ECU Pediatrics Department and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A candlelight installation ceremony was held. Pledged and pinned were Jean Carson and Arlene Hull.

Former Beatle Paul McCartney

McCartney Special Airs Over Station WRQR Today

Radio Station WRQR-FM, 94.3 on the radio dial, Farmville, an affiliate of the Mutual Radio Network, is presenting a special three hour program "Paul McCartney: The Beatles and Beyond," beginning at 3 p.m. today.

The special program highlights McCartney's phenomenal musical career, from the days of the early Beatles to the soundtrack of his new film, "Give My Regards to Broad Street."

In a mixture of interviews supplemented by music, McCartney talks about his years with the Beatles and their subsequent breakup, his own goals as a rock artist, the force behind his success, his relationships with John Lennon and his feeling about Lennon's death, and the sense of balance he has now found in his own life.

"Paul McCartney: The Beatles and Beyond," is distributed nationally by the Mutual Radio Network via satellite to over a thousand affiliate and associate stations across America.

Another program, of interest to sports fans, "The Billy Packer — Al McGuire Basketball Report" will be aired by WRQR daily Monday through Friday for five minute segments at 4:25 p.m. and 6:25 p.m. The two will comment and provide analysis about the 1984-85 basketball season.

The daily reports can also be heard over WGHB-AM, 1250 on the radio dial.

Art School Summer Tour

A summer tour of the British Isles, scheduled for July 20-25, 1985, will be conducted by Mindy Mechanic, an assistant professor in the East Carolina University School of Art.

The group will visit various significant sites in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

The cost of the tour, including travel to and from New York, is $1,895, double occupancy, with a supplement of $160 to be added for single occupancy. The price includes all breakfasts, some dinners, transportation within Great Britain, tour fees and lodging expenses. Persons 16 years old or older are eligible to join the tour.

Further information about the tour is available from Ms. Mechanic at the School of Art, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834; or by phone, 757-1933 or 757-6563.

Rose High Drama Group Opens Season With Carroll's 'Alice In Wonderland'

The Rose High School Thespians are inaugurating their 1984-85 drama season with a production of Lewis Carroll's classic, "Alice in Wonderful," which has been adapted for the theater.

Four performances are being given — at 8 p.m. on Friday Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2, and a matinee at 2 p.m. on Sunday. All performances will be in the auditorium at Wahl-Coates School.

Tickets are priced at $3 in advance and $4 at the door. Advance tickets are available from any member of the drama club or by calling Rose High at 752-3169 for reservations.

Rose's drama teacher, Betty Topper, is directing the play with the assistance of student director Amy Van Scoy. Choreography is by Rene Adams.

Carol Ambert is featured in the role of Alice, the young girl whose fanciful ideas sparks her curiosity to the point that she discovers she can go into a wonderful world of wonderland by entering into her mirror.

In this place of magic, Alice discovers the creatures of her imagination — the nervous White Rabbit, performed by Robin Bolande. Then in succession, she encounters the Mouse, played by Ann-Marie Ambert; the Caterpillar, Glenye Cain; the Duchess, Leah Harris; the Cheshire Cat, Doug Frelke; the Mock Turtle, Carsten Dose.

There's also other strange creatures living in Alice's wonderland — the Gryphon, performed by Jeff Stevenson; and members of the Mad Hatter's tea party with Larry Howard as the Mad Hatter, Debbie Morrison as the March Hare, and Ellen Cotter as the Dormouse. Act I closes with the King and Queen of Hearts — Chris Chappel and Amy Van Scoy, presiding.

Act two opens with the Red Queen, Michelle Hursey, where Alice meets players in the land-wide chess game. Then the fantasy proceeds to encounters with Tweedledee and Tweedledum, Chris Chappel and Mike Garris the White Queen, Anne Bentzel; Humpty Dumpty, Amy Van Scoy; and the White Knight, Carsten Dose.

Other members of the large cast include Lara Perry, Chris Frelke, Julie Mayberry, Machelle Staffelbach, Kendra Hollis, and Jon Pringle. Also, Martin Weisenhoffer, Amy Reese, Ally Savitt, Cindi Moye, Gina Leggett and Debbie Morrison.

Local Writers To Meet Tuesday

Members of the Greenville Writers Club will hold their second meeting for the month of November at the home of Helen Parks, 1209 Oaklawn Drive at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27.

Anyone interested in any form of creative writing is welcome. There are no fees or offical membership involved, and the club is open to the public. It meets twice monthly on the second and fourth Tuesday nights of the month.

Joffrey Dancers To Dance At WCU

CULLOWHEE — The emerging professional dancers of Joffrey Ballet II will perform at Western Carolina University on Thursday, Nov. 29 in Hoey Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The program is part of WCU's lectures, concerts and exhibition series, and is sponsored jointly by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Tickets are priced at $10 for adults and $5 for students. For ticket reservations call Doug Davis, 704/227-7234.

Visitors Leave Mementos At Memorial

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — They come to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial by the thousands. Some cry softly, some run their fingers across the names on the black granite wall, and some leave a part of them.

Flowers, fresh or plastic; a scruffy teddy bear; medals; leather holsters; fatigues; candles; miniature American flags; beer for a hot day; pictures; handwritten poems encased in plastic. And letters.

Those are just some the memorabilia that visitors place at the foot of the sweeping, V-shaped memorial on which the names of the 58,022 Americans killed or missing in action are engraved.

"People treat that place more like a cemetery than a monument. It's like a grave site," said Bill Clark, an employee of the National Park Service, which is responsible for maintenance at the memorial.

For some of the tourists, reading and seeing the letters and gifts to the Vietnam dead seems to open the floodgate of emotion that marked the divisive war.

Take Lester Paquin's typed letter.

A small group of passers-by stooped or knelt to read the letter; most were crying by the time they had finished.

"Dear Neil, we never had a chance to meet," wrote Paquin, who described his anger that Neil Robert Burnham of Petersham, Mass., had died so young.

But, Paquin wrote: "You found someone who loved you very much ... Mary Lou is doing well. She has two beautiful children, a promising career and is now married to a man who is perhaps my dearest friend. ... Your dying has forever changed our lives."

Burnham died Dec. 17, 1968, at age 20.

"People put all kinds of things here," said Gary Young, a park service volunteer and former Vietnam veteran. "Sometimes they give away their medals to their buddies, saying 'You deserve this more than me.'"

The memorabilia is collected by park service maintenance crews, who make a sweep of the memorial daily. Generally, perishable items, like fresh flowers, wreaths and fruit, are left until they wilt or look unsightly.

The other items are taken to the park service maintenance area near the Potomac River. There it is stuffed, willy-nilly, into boxes, which are locked away in a dark tool room.

Rummaging through the boxes is like going through grandmother's attic, except that the sadness of war lingers.

There are hundreds of little flags, tied by elastic bands; a hat inscribed "Vietnam — Sorry About That"; a poem entitled "The River" by Wayne Alan Stevens of Laurel, Md., who died May 1, 1969; a newspaper clipping of the memorial service held for Col. Robert Hampton, and a piece of paper handed out at a memorial service for Pfc. Ronald Eidson.

The date: Monday, July 21, 1969, at 1230. The place: LZ (landing zone) Debbie, Republic of Vietnam.

Park service volunteer Jerry Dufault said he once went to the warehouse, shortly after the memorial opened two years ago, to retrieve a medal for a friend who wanted it back.

"You have the option of getting your medals back," he said.

Earle Kittleman, a park service spokesman, said the agency intends to keep the memorabilia because it "might have social or historial value" in the future. "Someone might want to look at it to give a record for future generations," he said.

Although the park service has no plans to catalogue the items, some veterans said they hoped the memorabilia would eventually become part of a museum collection.

"I think it should be displayed," said Dufault. "It's part of our history."

On Sept. 30, 1946, an international military tribunal in Nuremberg, Germany, found 22 top German Nazi leaders guilty of war crimes and 11 of them were sentenced to death.

In 1792, George Washington laid the cornerstone of the executive mansion in Washington, D.C.

A 1933 English Journey

ENGLISH JOURNEY. By Beryl Bainbridge. Braziller. 158 Pages. $12.95.

The late J.B. Priestley wrote an earlier "English Journey," which he described as "a rambling but truthful account of what one man saw and heard and felt during a journey through England in the autumn of 1933."

This book by the well-regarded English novelist Beryl Bainbridge is a diary covering some 2½ months spent retracing Priestley's footsteps 50 years later, in late summer and fall of 1983, for the filming of a documentary series for British television.

Ms. Bainbridge's route may have been programmed, with serious purpose, but her account of it is racy and irreverent, colored with personal observations, sparkling with spontaneity.

Along the way, she finds vivid contrasts, sadness and gaiety. "Someone's murdered Liverpool and got away with it," is one reaction, to her native city today. But there was "nothing wrong with Manchester." Newcastle was positively festive, and the countryside was lush and productive.

In the Cotswolds there was "a slumbering, rural village. No cars, and a girl on a horse standing motionless in the middle of the village pond." In Birmingham, "everywhere we walked buildings were either going up or coming down, or else the roads were being widened to take yet more motor cars ... it seemed there was neither time nor room for pedestrians. We were literally a dying breed."

She laments the disappearance of many of the shabby, old-fashioned towns Priestley had deplored. "Show me another motorway, I thought, another shopping precinct, another acre of improved environment and I shall pack up and go home."

Her impressions are delivered mostly in short, sharp bursts, with fast cutting from vignette to vignette. Her own personality is the link, the continuity, emerging as the diary is read. Her nostalgia, her reminiscences, a fondness for churchyards, a sympathetic eye for eccentrics, the unexpected questions she pops, all help make this an armchair tour well worth giving time to.

Bald Eagles Making A Comeback Due To Restoration Projects

EDITOR'S NOTE — The bald eagle, chosen as the fierce-visaged, soaring symbol of a proud young nation, is making a comeback — thanks in large part to restoration projects in a dozen states. One of the most successful programs is in New York State where the eagle population had been reduced to a single pair by the 1960s.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

ALCOVE, N.Y. (AP) — As the white smoke of a cold autumn dawn curled off the Alcove Reservoir, a dozen birdwatchers gathered for the rare opportunity of seeing a young bald eagle take its first flight.

Gene McCaffrey, his wispy beard moving in the breeze, squinted against the low-angled sun at a color video monitor set up in a van at the public observation area, a mile from where six eaglets perched on man-made aeries.

On McCaffrey's screen, via microwave signal from a remote-control camera, an eaglet, rigged with radio transmitter, leg bands and wing tags, displayed its six-foot wingspan, hopped along its log roost, and cocked an amber eye at the camera lens. It was in no rush to soar forth in the wilderness.

"Sometimes they'll sit around like that for days before they fly," says McCaffrey, a state biologist, to the dismay of the school children and office workers who had arisen early to witness the grand finale of a summer's work at preserving a threatened national symbol.

The bald eagle, chosen by our forebears as the symbol of a proud young nation, in recent decades became a symbol of the lethal effects of civilization on wildlife. Now, however, the bird is coming to symbolize the ability of mankind to cleanse and replenish the environment.

New York's bald eagle restoration program is the nation's oldest and largest, says McCaffrey, a wildlife expert for the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Wildlife groups say restoration programs in New York and 11 other states, along with efforts to clean up environmental toxins, preserve forest land and prosecute poachers, are helping the bald eagle make a comeback.

The 1984 census by the National Wildlife Federation showed 11,819 eagles wintering in the 48 contiguous United States, compared to 9,815 when the annual survey started in 1979. The breeding population is estimated at about 5,000 to 6,000 now, compared to about half that in the early 1970s, according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service spokeswoman Megan Durham.

An estimated 25,000 to 75,000 bald eagles nested in that same area when the nation was young.

There are about 30,000 bald eagles in Alaska today, and the nation's largest eagle sanctuary has been established at that state's 48,000-acre Chilkat preserve. However, between 1917 and 1952, about 128,000 eagles were shot in Alaska. That was partly because the canning industry was concerned about eagles competing with fishermen for salmon and there was a bounty on the birds.

There are many other reasons for the bird's decline. The pesticide DDT, banned in the early '70s, causes the birds to lay thin-shelled eggs; lead shot in carrion they eat poisons them; hunters still shoot them for their magnificent plumage, despite the threat of a $10,000 fine; the cutting of forests leaves them homeless. The bald eagle is listed as endangered in 43 states and threatened in five others.

This summer, a New York team headed by Peter Nye climbed to nests 100 feet high in sitka spruce trees to capture 33 eagle chicks in Alaska's Tongass National Forest.

The birds were placed in nesting towers at the Alcove Reservoir, about 15 miles south of Albany, and at a private lake in the Adirondacks, where caretakers fed them live fish through trap doors and discreetly watched their progress by video monitor for about six weeks.

Nye, 34, heads the state's endangered species program. Since 1976, Nye and his colleagues have brought 118 eaglets to the state, mostly from southeastern Alaska but also a few from Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and a captive breeding facility in Maryland.

New York had about 70 nesting pairs of eagles at one time, but there was only one pair left in the 1960s — and DDT made the female barren.

So far, birds from the program have established two nests in New York and one in Pennsylvania, Nye says. By the time all the birds have developed the characteristic white head and tail feathers of adulthood in 1990, he says, it is hoped that there will be 40 nesting pairs in the state.

"We consider the eagle program an absolute success," Nye says. "It's working beyond our expectations, and has bolstered a lot of other states to participate."

Although New York is the only state with a federal permit to capture eaglets in Alaska, 11 other states have started similar programs using birds captured in Canada, or hatched by captive birds at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Laurel, Md., which has released 70 eaglets to the wild since 1977.

The Patuxent center has sent foster eaglets to New York, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maine, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Ohio.

"Education is becoming one of our primary roles," says Dr. James Carpenter of the Patuxent center. "Putting eagles back in the wild is great, but we also have to educate the public about habitat protection and the problems caused by disturbance of breeding areas."

Brian Milsap, who directs the eagle census for the National Wildlife Federation, says, "The bald eagle seems to be making a comeback, or holding its own at the very least.

"The bird is still in a precarious position, though, because it reproduces so slowly — any gains in population can be quickly offset by mortality from shooting, pesticides, habitat loss or other threats. We have to be cautiously optimistic, because they haven't increased to the point where the population is secure."

A Review

Many Ingredients In Novel

The Twelve Apostles. By William J. Coughlin. Putnam. 347 Pages. $16.95.

Take a corporate power struggle that reflects today's headlines, add a liberal dose of intrigue, rivalry, sex and double-dealing, and you have the formula for William Coughlin's latest novel.

Coughlin, now a federal judge, has served as law professor, prosecuting attorney and former partner in a large Detroit law firm. His legal background serves him well in writing "The Twelve Apostles," a tale of corporation lawyers and their multimillion-dollar clients.

In this fast-moving suspense story, Coughlin opens the door to the inner sanctum of an elite New York firm, Nelson and Clark, whose 12 main partners are known in the legal world as "The Twelve Apostles." The law firm is hired to spearhead a hostile takeover of one of the nation's largest drug corporations.

The two central characters — Christina Giles and Dan Spencer — are both participating partners of Nelson and Clark, vying for promotion to one of the "apostolic" positions. But while they are competitors, they are also good friends.

In developing the plot, Coughlin's exceptional talent for dialogue helps move the story along at a well-paced clip. The central theme involves the classic but timeworn dilemma of a woman who must chose between her career and love.

Coughlin gives the yarn more surprise twists than are usually found in an O. Henry story.

Limited Free Enterprise System Is Reportedly Gaining Ground In China

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's not exactly capitalist free enterprise, but it's a great leap away from communist dogma, which frowns on the profit motive. The effects on life in China have been startling, a reporter who has covered that nation for many years finds on his latest visit.

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

PEKING (AP) — After 35 years of communism, the quality of life for many of the billion people of China has begun to improve dramatically. Two years ago the economy, long stagnant in a period of hapless experimentation, took off.

The propellant was the profit motive, an idea introduced by that doughty old realist, Deng Xiaoping.

Suddenly, after years of taking orders from Peking, the Chinese both in the cities and in the countryside were told to get out and make money on their own, not only for the state, but for themselves.

The result has been spectacular. Thanks to the new affluence, the Chinese by and large eat better, dress more stylishly, own more of the material things of life, have more leisure and seem to enjoy themselves more than they have since the communists came to power in 1949.

Few people lament the death of the utopian ideology of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who twice purged Deng for insisting on heaven now rather than pie in the sky.

"Isn't that what Marxism is all about?" asked one Chinese. "Doesn't it claim that it can do better economically than capitalism?"

An American diplomat puts it another way.

"The Chinese," he says, "are nothing if not cynical. They also are a nation of pragmatists. The Deng realism suits them more than Mao's unattainable utopianism."

That was my impression, too, on a recent return visit to China. I had a chance to observe them for three full weeks in Peking, Harbin and Dalian, better known as Dairen.

I found a mood of optimism and a national pride lacking before. People in those very different cities were encouraged by the economic upturn. While admitting that pockets of poverty remain and that managerial skills still are in short supply, they were enthusiastic about the results already achieved in a short time.

It is a youthful China. About 500 million Chinese are 30 or younger. They get a glimpse of the outside world through radio, television and their newspapers. Thousands have gone abroad as students or with official delegations.

"We have gone so far that we cannot turn back," said one official in Harbin, just back from a visit to Japan. "We will and must keep a door open to the West."

Some foreigners in residence in those three cities conceded that there has been real progress. Others remain skeptical. Some businessmen chafe at the communist bureaucracy.

"Everyone has been told to make a profit," says an American businesswoman of Chinese ancestry, "but not how to do it. So they just raise their prices indiscriminately.

"They are pricing themselves out of the market."

An American salesman based in Shanghai has a more specific complaint.

"You can trust the South Koreans, the Taiwanese and the Hong Kong Chinese when it comes to doing business," he said, "but these people break their promises and raise their prices without warning. It's a wonder that my company keeps me here."

A Japanese salesman adds: "What's maddening is that we meet qualified people at the lower level, but their superiors are politicians with no expertise. As a result, they make all the wrong decisions."

Rusen Ko, of Occidental Oil, California, a Chinese-American on his first visit, is less critical. "The Chinese are quick and intelligent," he says, "but the cultural revolution produced a lost generation. Many are too old to learn the new technologies. But they are trying hard."

Another Chinese-American who makes frequent visits here is unimpressed by the younger generation.

"The young," he says, "are like the young elsewhere. They want to have all the advantages without any of the work. They have no memories of the past. They are not interested in ideologies. They are bored with it all, particularly the cultural revolution."

The cultural revolution of 1966-67, launched by the Maoists, left China broken and exhausted. Most of today's ills are blamed on its excesses.

The itch to make money has also produced side effects: corruption and greed, increased crime — but probably no worse than anywhere else. The regime is dealing harshly with criminal offenders, inflicting the death penalty for 44 different crimes, some of them only economic in nature.

In Peking, a current joke is that the Chinese aren't worried about China taking over Hong Kong but about Hong Kong taking over China by 1997.

They are only a comparative handful, but the Hong Kong Chinese are much talked about in the big cities. They have come here in joint venture companies or to run the modern, new hotels going up in profusion. They not only provide sorely needed managerial skills but they also pass on their knowledge to their Chinese staffers. One of the more memorable sights of my visit was seeing a Hong Kong Chinese manager, down on his knees in the Jianguo Hotel showing a local employee how to dig out the dirt in the stairway with a putty knife.

Being Chinese, they assimilate better than Westerners, and are listened to with greater respect.

Greenville Couple Visited In China

Dr. Chia-yu Li, a professor of chemistry at East Carolina University, and his wife, Susie, were recent visitors to the People's Republic of China.

The purpose of the trip was for Dr. Li to present a series of lectures on liquid chromatography with electro-chemical detection and the applications of microprocessors in electrochemical instrumentation. The lectures were given at Peking University and at three other universities — in Xian, Shanghai and Canton.

There was also time for sightseeing for the Li's. "We visited many well-known attractions such as the Great Wall, the Forbidden City, the vast underground Ming tombs, and the Emperor Qin's tomb near Xian," Li pointed out.

Excavations of the tomb of Emperor Qin has revealed one of the most spectacular treasure finds in the 20th century, a huge underground array of life-size terra cota soldiers and horses.

Commenting on contact with the citizens of China, Li said: "More than just sight seeing, we were able to make contact with a number of relatives we had never met.

"This would have been considered as a taboo during the Cultural Revolution era," he added.

"As an American citizen of Chinese ancestry, we certainly welcome the recent open-door policy. It is also most interesting to find that capitalism is now being practiced to a degree in a so-called 'socialistic' country.

Boredom Is Major Enemy At Cold Outpost

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

ATTU, Alaska (AP) — Time can be friend or foe to the isolated Coast Guardsmen assigned for a year to a lonely military outpost here in a corner of the world described as the "birthplace of the winds" and the "cradle of storms."

Lt.j.g. Drew Rambo, 24, is in charge of the 25-man detachment at the U.S. Coast Guard Loran Station at Attu, a rocky, misty island at the westernmost tip of the 1,000-mile-long Aleutian chain. It's his job to keep things running smoothly at one of the most remote navigation stations in the United States.

He tries to motivate his crew with his enthusiasm for Attu's abundant wildlife and rich World War II history.

"There's no McDonald's here," says Rambo, a 1982 graduate of the Coast Guard Academy from Valley Forge, Pa.

But, he adds, "There are species of birds here that you can't find anywhere else in the United States. I try to let them know what we do have here and try to keep them from thinking about what we don't."

The Coast Guard operates 35 Loran (long range radio navigation) stations worldwide. All transmit electronic signals used by ship and aircraft navigators to plot their positions.

Like Attu, many are classed as "isolated duty stations" and are staffed by Coast Guardsmen on 12-month assignments.

Except for spawning salmon, a variety of waterfowl and other wildlife, the Coast Guardsmen have the 40-mile-long, 17-mile-wide island all to themselves.

Only about a half-dozen of the 279 islands in the volcanic Aleutian chain are inhabited and most are unspoiled — protected by their distance and notoriously wet and windy weather from population centers.

Rambo, whose command is headquartered in a three-story, World War II-era building, says, "Our station is run like a ship. We're a seagoing service, so it's a practical habit plus it's just a good way to handle it.

"If a fire breaks out, you can't call the Attu Fire Department. Everybody has a designated job to insure the safety of everybody. It could take awhile to get a plane out here."

Weather permitting, Attu's detachment is resupplied every two weeks by a Coast Guard C-130 transport plane that ferries in provisions, mail and movies. As one of the four-engine planes made its turn toward the small landing strip one day this fall, the wreckage of a similar C-130H was visible a few miles away.

Hundreds of pieces of crumbled aluminum painted Coast Guard white were strewn across the face of a treeless mountain that extends like a rocky fist between two bays.

"We had a survivor of that one come through Kodiak a couple of weeks ago," the pilot told his passenger in a matter-of-fact tone. "He said they were letting down through the soup when the cloud suddenly turned green. They tried to climb out to avoid it, but couldn't."

Aside from a telephone link with the mainland, one TV station and one radio station relayed from a super-secret U.S. Air Force base at nearby Shemya, the flight crews comprise the only regular human contact with the outside world.

Along with Kiska, about 200 miles to the east, Attu is the only piece of U.S. territory to be held by foreign troops since the War of 1812.

One of the toughest and bloodiest campaigns of the war was fought for control of the Aleutians through 15 months in 1942 and 1943.

The U.S. Army launched its first amphibious assault in the Pacific War at Attu. It cost the landing force 3,828 casualties before the island was retaken from the Japanese — many of whom committed mass suicide rather than surrender to the Americans.

But the winds of war soon blew over the Aleutians and after the battles came occupation — garrison duty in a backwater sector that too often led to boredom and alcoholism.

Four decades later, the Coast Guard takes steps to see that doesn't become a problem with its Loran crews.

Capt. Larry Telfer, who supervises the stations from Juneau, says local commanders "have a pretty good handle" on what's going on concerning drugs and alcohol.

"If there's a alcohol problem, we can send that person out to rehabilitation," Telfer says.

"We have a policy now where we don't put up with it. They have an obligation to do a job while they're there."

Listening to music and reading are favorite pasttimes. Movies are shown at night. Many crew members cram for exams.

"It's barren, windswept, gray and wet," he said. "But it can be a rose for people who know how to manage their time."

A Review

Writers, Their Work, Ideas

WRITERS AT WORK: The Paris Review Interviews, 6th Series. Edited by George Plimpton. Viking. 414 Pages. $22.50

This volume is the latest in a continuing series that offers fascinating looks into the lives and, more important, thoughts of writers.

The 12 writers interviewed include such as Rebecca West, Kurt Vonnegut Jr., Nadine Gordimer and Gabriel Garcia Marquez. While all are writers, the work they produce is unique to them, as is the way they approch their craft. They are a mixed and terribly interesting bag.

Rebecca West is charmingly outspoken. Whether discussing men — "I always have gone through life constantly being surprised by the extreme, marvelous qualities of a small minority of men. But I can't see the rest of them. They seem awful rubbish" — or God — "I have often a suspicion God is still trying to work things out and hasn't finished." — her opinions on a host of subjects are fascinating.

Vonnegut is witty even though a thread of horror runs through his conversation. Captured by the Germans during World War II, he was a prisoner in Dresden when the city was fire-bombed, and 135,000 persons died. Vonnegut lived — but the memory still haunts him.

Gordimer, the South African writer whose books are read around the world, speaks with brutal candor about her early life. She is just as direct in discussing her country's system of government and how it affects her works.

And Garcia Marquez gives a most interesting definition of literature. It is, he says, "nothing but carpentry. Both are very hard work. Writing something is almost as hard as making a table. With both you are working with reality, a material just as hard as wood."

Money is the lure. Waiters, bellboys and desk clerks in the Hong Kong-run hotels make more money than their parents. One hotel keeps them up to snuff with a sobering rule: Three bad mistakes and out.

A rash of murders, rapes and acts of violence prompted Deng to order mass meetings where the criminals were denounced and humiliated before being shot, without Western-style appeals.

Amnesty International recently spoke of "the reported ill-treatment of prisoners, usually in detention centers," and condemned "the arrest and imprisonment of prisoners of conscience, the prolonged detention without trial of people on political grounds."

That appeared more reminiscent of the cultural revolution, when Deng himself and millions of others were punished without benefit of legal process, than the reforms of yesterday.

Still, a lot of things have changed under Deng.

I first saw communist-run Peking in 1971 with the American table tennis team. It was not the Peking I had loved as a young correspondent in the 1940s. It was grandiose in a shabby sort of way. A vast square had opened up in front of Tienanmen, the Gate of Heavenly Peace, to accommodate millions herded into it for periodic displays of Maoist xenophobia. The people seemed frightened. Public life ground to a sullen halt early in the evening.

Today's Peking gives a different impression — fear seems to have dissipated and there's a new air of exuberance.

The changes in Harbin, which I had last seen as a guest of Communist commander Lin Biao in 1946, were not as dramatic as I had expected. World War II had only recently ended, and it still had the mood and feel of a Russian city, its life centered on the great Manchurian railway. All but a handful of the White Russians have gone to the Soviet Union or the United States. Only a few of the old onion dome Orthodox churches remain. And the surviving Russian buildings have a seedy, rundown look. But there is an immense vitality to the place.

The Chinese here dress better, and more elegantly, than anywhere else in China. The Harbiners consider themselves more cosmopolitan than their fellows. They make a point of eating bread, rather than rice, for breakfast.

I met Tim Doyle, 28, of San Francisco, there and he seemed to share my impression of the people of Harbin.

"They're smart, hard-working and always prepared," he says. "They do what you ask, politely."

A prize-winning ice-skater, Doyle arrived a year ago to coach skaters here and in Shenyang.

"They're rather naive and innocent," he says, "particularly in matters of sex. No one ever kisses on Chinese TV. They are inward, self-contained, haven't studied much about the outside world. They think things are getting better and better and have a lot of hope for the future."

I saw Richard Pontzious, dressed in full bib, tie and tails, conduct the Harbin symphony orchestra with all the verve and bounce of a Seiji Ozawa. The results were on the ragged side, but he got an ovation.

Pontzious, a San Francisco music critic, was in Harbin for a two-week teaching and conducting stint from his duties at the Shanghai Conservatory where he is the first American resident musician.

"The Chinese have spirit, soul," he says. "They are not afraid to react. The Japanese do as I say, without question. The Chinese want to know why."

There are slums in the outskirts of Harbin and housing is a problem. It is the Pittsburgh of China, a great, sprawling industrial city, not particularly beautiful.

Dalian, on the other hand, is a thing of beauty, laid out by the Japanese like a miniature Paris with Sun Yat Sen square at the center. Its tree-lined avenues radiate outwards and are broken by 35 smaller squares. The Gulf of Pohai glitters nearby.

Johnny Chen found me in the No. 1 Guest House, a collection of airy Japanese residences turned into a hotel.

We had last met in 1946 in Nanking when he was an interpreter for the Nationalist army and I a young correspondent. He left China in 1949 when the communists took over but returned two years later, naively hoping to help the emerging new society. He became an engineer.

He paid for his idealism in 1957 and 1967, during the anti-rightist campaign and the cultural revolution. He was beaten, reduced to technician and sent to the frozen Northeast. He spent years with his family in the countryside, punished solely because of his past connection to the Nationalists.

At 67, Chen is now deputy director of the Dalian Sheet Glass Factory.

"I am old now," he says over warm Chinese wine and prawns at the Seamen's Club. "My life has been wasted. Everything is better now, but the future is not mine. It belongs to my children and grandchildren."

He pauses and the lines on his lean face deepen. "At times I was deeply discouraged," he continues. "We were punished unnecessarily. My wife and children were looked down on because we came from the old society. But I was right to come back. We are at last on the right road. The troubles will not come again."

A Chinese proverb says, "One generation opens the road upon which another travels."

Liu Chingchieh, driver of a minibus, is going down that road. The story of his life is different from Johnny's.

At 28, he is one of the self-effacing millions, the straw and mortar of the modern country Deng hopes to build. He has spirit and pride. Idealism is not his bag.

When he was 20 he had his moment of anguish and drama. A dancer, he injured his foot. Despite eight operations, he was never able to dance again. Married, with a five-year-old son he dotes on, he agreed to be a minibus driver for the foreign affairs people, and that is how I met him.

Slender, bright-eyed, down-to-earth, he accepts his modest niche in Chinese life philosophically and aims no higher. He has an uncomplicated affection for his country and his parents, with whom he lives.

Though he is serious, industrious and sober-minded, he doesn't concern himself greatly about politics.

Art Critiques, Lectures Set

NEW YORK, N.Y. For the first time in its 160 year history, the National Academy of Fine Arts is offering evening series of critiques to serious students or advanced amateurs. Auditors will also be permitted to attend.

The next in the series of critiques will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 10, with painter Will Barnet on hand to study paintings and offer suggestions.

Interested artists are to call Ellen Lee Klein, 212-369-4880. The fee is $5 for participants, $3 for auditors. Participants may bring a maximum of three examples of their work to be presented for discussion before the group.

Also, December lectures at the academy will be presented at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 27, by painter Audrey Flack who will present a slide talk about her work and trends in the contemporary art world; and at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 12 by printmaker Robert Kipniss. Admission to these lectures is $2 per lecture per person.

The academy is located at 5 East 89th Street, New York, N.Y., 10028.

. . . a fern frond, green all spring and summer, changes color to wheat straw brown with the onset of frost. The intricately patterned fronds becomes dry, lightweight in their final stage before winter's decay. At this time of year fern fronds are transformed into souvenirs of nature from summer days.

. . . the remaining leaves on a running briar vine appear to be thin discs of rubies sihouetted against the sky on a crisp autumn morning

The Final Splendors Of Nature In Autumn's Waning Days

. . . in a protected nook where sun, but not wind and chill reaches, a lone morning glory vine retains its summer green long after more exposed vines have withered under night winds and frost

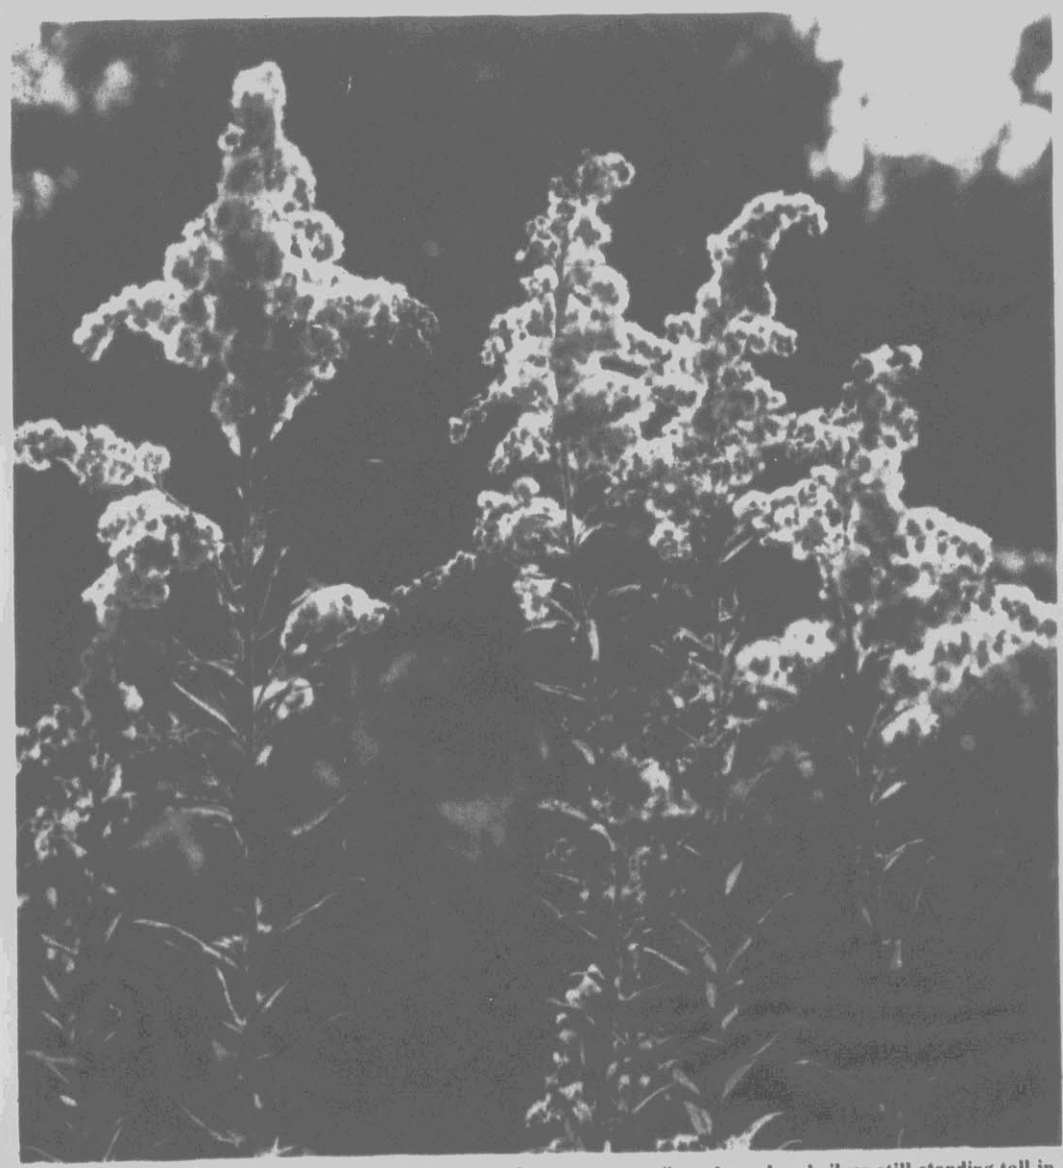

In the days of late November and early December, the rich colors of autumn leaves begins to fade as trees shed their jeweled foliage. Within weeks, the last vestiges of autumn's display will give way to the panorama of dark, leafless branches outlined against a winter's sky.

In these final autumn days before the arrival of winter, the landscape of eastern North Carolina offers miniature, less spectacular splendors easily overlooked when compared to the spectacle of brilliant leaves.

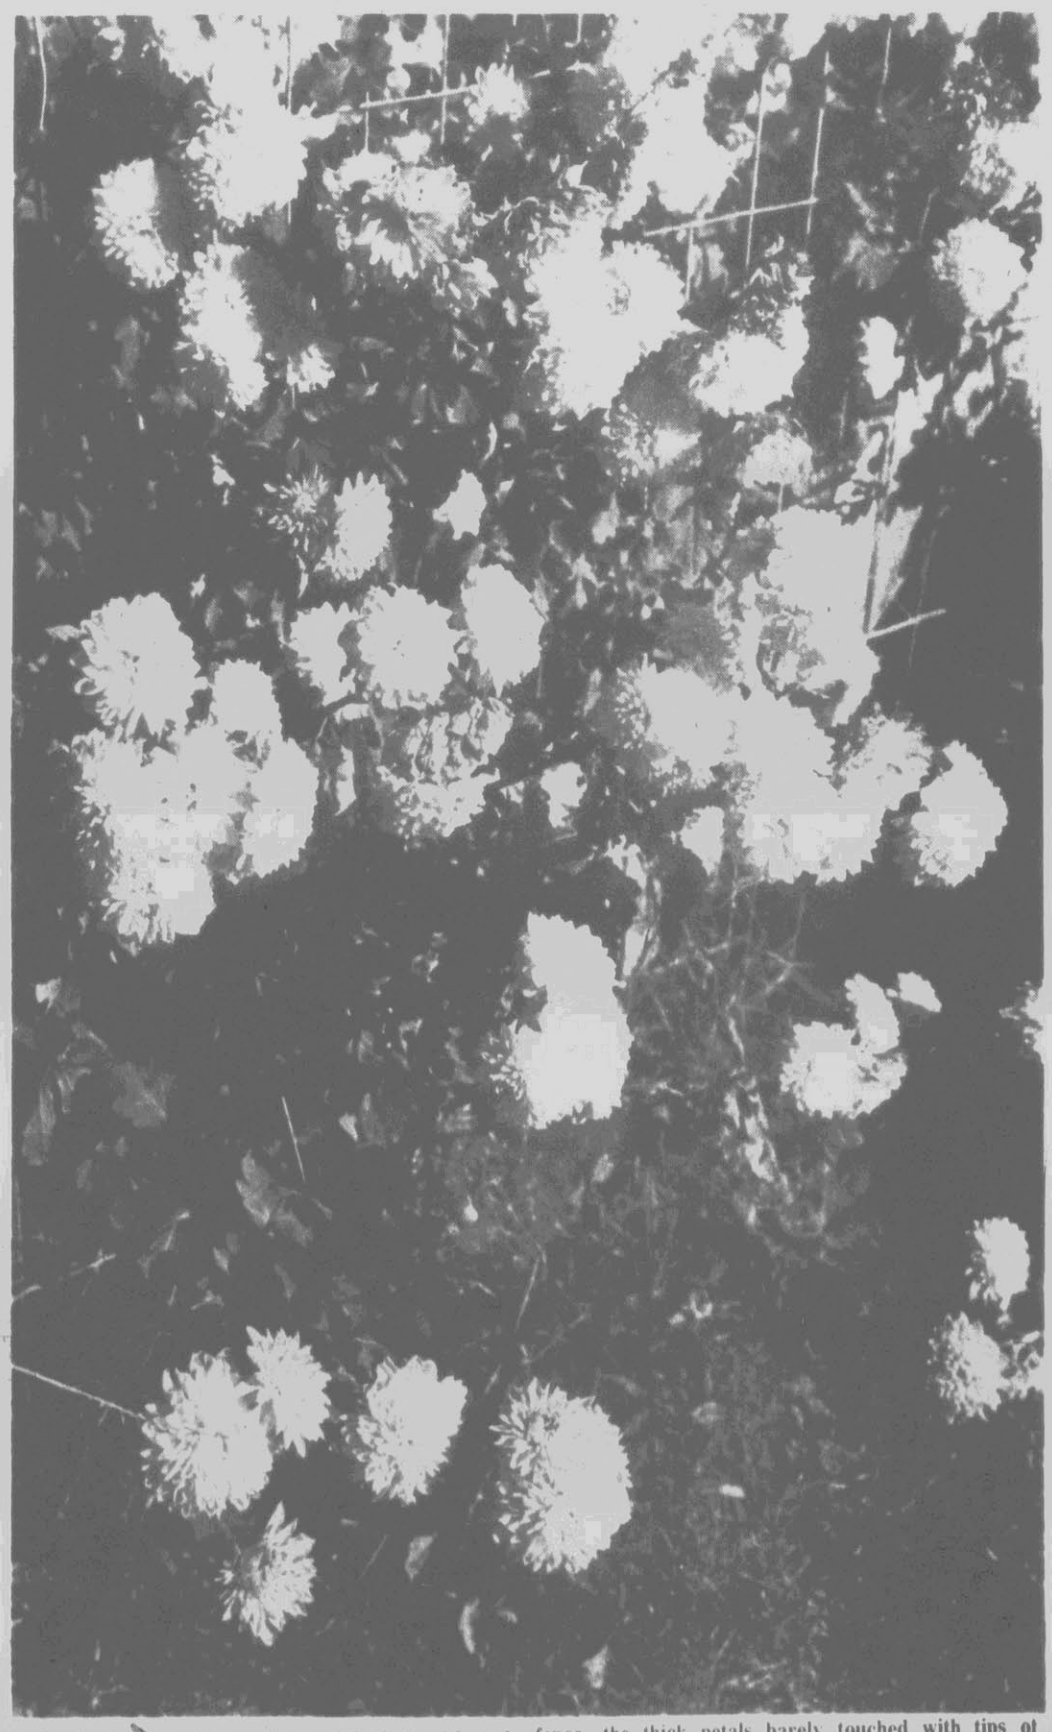

In woods, fields and along roadsides, summer and autumn wildflower blossoms now display seed heads of sunlight-capturing silver and iridescent golden brown — of gossamer lightness ready to float away at the urging of any breeze. Ferns, drained of life, fold and fall to the earth. The shedding of leaves reveal the bright red of dogwood amd yaupon berries, or misty blue or black berries along the stems of many species of vines.

These may be minor splendors in nature, yet they constitute an enchanting part of nature's cycle as autumn gives way to the stark beauty of winter.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

. . . in September and October a glory of brilliant gold, clusters of goldenrod forming into seed heads after the flower are revealed in sunlight as a different form of beauty — spikes of powdered silver still standing tall in the early weeks of cold weather

. . . the hardy crysanthenum is one of the last cultivated flowers to brave the onslaught of transforming frosts. Here, a lavish spray of the flower spills over a garden fence, the thick petals barely touched with tips of withered brown suffered from cold night hours

When you get into woodworking, you begin visiting the local lumberyard fairly regularly. It takes a considerable time before you know what to ask for to get the material you need for your particular project.

The way to shorten the period for this proper understanding is to become acquainted with the various terms used by dealers. Then, when you make a request, you will be on the same wave length as he is and there will be little or no room for misunderstanding.

When you ask for the heartwood of a particular kind of wood, he will know you mean the part which is usually darker than the sapwood and more decay-resistant.

When you ask for a certain grade of wood, he will know you mean the quality of the wood.

When you ask for veneer, he will know you mean the thin sheets of wood sometimes used in the manufacture of plywood and sometimes sold and used separately for surfacing.

When you ask for air-dried wood, he will know you mean that which has been dried solely by exposure to the air as contrasted with that dried with the use of artificial heat, usually called kiln-dried.

When you ask for hardwood, he will know you mean oak or maple or walnut or any wood which comes from trees with broad leaves.

When you ask for softwood, he will know you mean woods from trees which have scaly leaves or needles, such as pine, fir and redwood — trees that generally retain their leaves or needles all year.

When you ask for posts and timbers, he will know you mean wood graded mainly for use as columns and which are usually at least 4 inches by 4 inches.

When you ask for yard lumber, he will know you mean boards less than 2 inches thick and 8 inches or more in width.

When you ask for a 2 by 4, he will know you mean a piece of wood that actually is only 1^1_2 by 3^1_2, that being its size after it has been milled, a fact that has to be taken into consideration when precision is important.

When you ask for plywood or hardboard or similar processed materials, he will know such dimensional differences do not apply, a piece of plywood 4 feet by 8 feet, for instance, being exactly 4 feet by 8 feet.

When you ask for pressure-treated wood, he will know you mean wood treated to resist decay, insects and the like so it can be used outdoors — and that when you ask for a wood that naturally resists these enemies of wood, you mean redwood, cedar or a similar product.

When you ask for the cheapest wood you can use for the specific job at hand, he will give you one of those which may be marred in certain ways but has the strength and durability to do the job, its appearance being secondary.

When you ask for a wood with only one good surface, he will know you mean a wood which will be used in an endeavor where one surface will show and one will not.

When you ask for interior flooring and millwork, he will know it should not be delivered until it can be stored inside the structure and stacked for a week or more until the moisture content of the wood balances that of the air inside the building.

When you ask for shiplap lumber, he will know you mean wood which has a lapped edge that generally is used for wall and roof sheathing.

And when you ask for tongue-and-groove lumber, he will know you mean wood which fits together and makes an even tighter joint than shiplap.

Dyeing Is Becoming Popular Way To Dress Up Holiday Decorations

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With winter holidays just around the corner, this is a good time to begin thinking about creating holiday decorations.

It's a charming custom to bring out a special tablecloth or centerpiece or wall hanging. But to do so, you generally have to plan ahead to finish the work before the inevitable busy round of parties and gift-buying chores.

One technique that seems to be increasingly popular for holiday decorations made inexpensively at home is to dye them. Sales figures from one company indicate a 10 percent increase in sales of powdered and liquid dye within the last three years.

You can dye most fabrics, including cotton, linen, nylon, rayon, silk, wool and blends, and many natural materials such as cork, cornhusks, weeds and grasses. You can also dye beans, macaroni and rice, wood, string, seashells, wicker and straw, among other materials.

The technique is particularly suited to creating countrystyle projects, according to Kate Williams, home decorating consultant for RIT Dye. She suggests applying dye which is transparent to create a burnished effect typical of old wood. This can be done by using several different colors in a manner similar to antiquing.

Following directions to the letter for projects will give good results, but she offers some additional tips for working with dye. First of all, use natural materials if possible as a base, since they take color best.

If you're working with fabric, start with plain white muslin or sheeting and wash it with detergent to get rid of any surface treatment.

When working with wicker, straw or wood, use unfinished materials as light in color as possible. When the project has been completed, follow dye package directions to set the color on fabrics. With other materials, spray on several coats of polyurethane so the dyed surface won't run when it comes in contact with moisture.

For simple clean-up, wear rubber gloves when working with dye and line table surfaces with plastic garbage bags and newspaper. Use disposable receptacles such as one-pound coffee cans to mix dye and then discard them when you are finished.

What simple projects can you make for the holidays? Ms. Williams suggests creating a tablecloth and matching napkins or a set of placemats and napkins for the holiday table. You can also dye wicker trivets and wooden napkin holders to make an even grander holiday table. Another idea is to dye unfinished wicker baskets and then place seasonal arrangements of dried flowers, grasses, pine cones and other materials in them.

The easiest dye technique is to paint freehand a design or pattern on a white surface. For example, you might create a small holly sprig with a green leaf, a red berry and a brown stalk and then in a few brush strokes transfer the motif onto a white sheet cut and hemmed to fit the table. Paint the same pattern on white handkerchiefs and use them as matching napkins.

A rewarding and inexpensive project is to dye small wicker baskets, spray with polyurethane to set the color, and then fill with cookies, bubble bath or soap as gifts. The project is suitable for children. Another project for kids is making small tree ornaments. Use balsa wood, if available, and dip the wood ornaments into a dye bath. Or, make bread dough ornaments, bake and then paint with dye, suggests Ms. Williams.

Techniques for working with dye include solid-color hand dyeing, which is done in a sink, pot or other container. You dip the item into the dye bath for about 20 minutes for light colors, longer for dark colors, and then rinse it in clear water to set the dye.

Ombre dyeing produces a multicolored piece of fabric and involves dipping sections of the project into several successively darker dye baths. You start with the lightest shade and end with the darkest.

Tie dyeing is done by bunching or tying together several portions of the fabric, then dipping to create a multicolored fabric.

No. 10326 The Crainebrook
Balcony Overlooks Dining Area

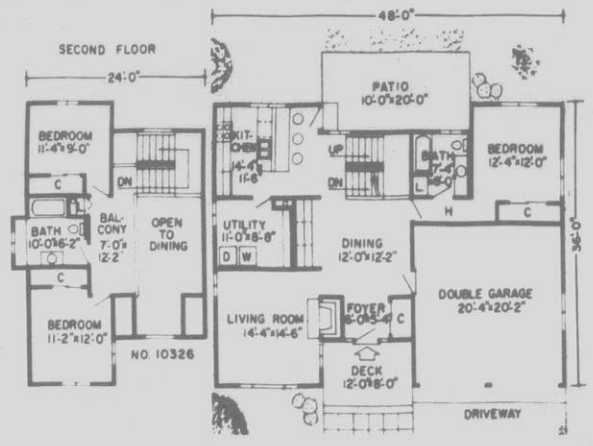

by Jerry Bishop

With the impressive two story dining area visible from the second story balcony, the Crainebrook, a three bedroom design, strives for contemporary appeal inside and out. Its up to date use of space includes a utility/laundry room, firelit living room, and informal kitchen complex with connecting patio.

Vertical siding sheathes much of the home's exterior, and the front entry, double garage is placed for convenience. Inside, from a gracious foyer, visitors can glimpse the dramatic dining room, the design focus, and its double story sweep.

Well-placed to minimize cross-traffic, the formal living room enjoys plenty of natural light, a wood-burning fireplace, and a delightful sense of seclusion.

Q. What are some good varieties of pansies to plant? (L.T., Johnston County)

A. A few good varieties are "Orange Sun," "Red Wing," "White Lady," "Swiss Giant Mix," "Silverbride," "Yellow Master" and "Reingold," but there are many others. Some gardeners make the mistake of setting out pansy plants in February or March, but pansies that are planted in the fall can become established and will bloom throughout the winter. On the coldest days, the flowers will not be at their peak, but given a sunny, mild winter day, the flowers will be brilliant. Locate the transplants in well-drained soil, pH 6-6.5, where there is plenty of sunlight. The plants should be placed no more than six inches apart. Mulch them with about two inches of fine organic matter.

Q. How should soil for houseplants be sterilized in the oven? (L.B., Elizabeth City)

A. A soil mix should be sterilized by baking it for one hour at 210 degrees F. Many commercial mixes are already sterilized when you buy them.

Q. Are Norfolk Island pines rapid growers? (R.J., Durham)

A. The Norfolk Island pine is a slow-growing houseplant. Under average home conditions it typically grows three to six inches a year.

Q. What is the inkberry? (M.C., Wadesboro)

A. Inkberry or bitter gallberry are common names for Ilex glabra, a holly that is native to eastern North Carolina but hardy throughout the state. It grows six to eight feet tall and six to eight feet across. It has a rounded form and a moderately slow rate of growth. Its black berries are showy in the fall. Inkberry is excellent for foundation plantings or natural area plantings.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We sometimes get mildew in the bottom corners of our bathroom walls. Generally, it is fairly easy to get off with a household bleach. But in a few weeks, it comes back again. We have been told one way to keep it off is to scrub the corners with ammonia, but I read somewhere about the danger of using bleach and chlorine together. What can you tell me about this?

A. — Household bleach will eliminate mildew, but it will not keep it off. The only way you are going to get rid of mildew on a more or less permanent basis is to correct the conditions causing it — namely, excessive moisture and continual dampness, plus a little dirt and grime. Also, ammonia will help to prevent mildew from returning too quickly, but it will not stop it indefinitely if the wrong conditions prevail. Finally, you cannot mix bleach and ammonia in any situation because it will cause a toxic gas. It is possible that if bleach is used on a surface and you are positive no trace of it remains you might be able to wash the same surface with ammonia. Since these products cause such a bad reaction if they accidentally come together, it is better not to use them even in the distant relationship suggested to you.

Q. — I understand tempered hardboard is much harder than regular hardboard. My friend says it is also moisture resistant. Is this correct?

A. — Yes. That's why it is often used in bathrooms and kitchens, and sometimes outdoors when installed according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Q. — My dining room shade is in fine condition, but it just doesn't want to go up when I want it to. It takes a considerable amount of tugging and pulling to get it to return to its up position and, even when it does go up, I am not sure just what caused it. Is there some way the shade can be fixed so it goes up and down easily and properly or do I have to take it to a repair place?

A. — Try this. Get it all the way up, then pull it down slowly and carefully a few inches. Now take the shade and roller from its brackets, removing the flat pin at the spring end. Roll the shade up by hand until it is at the top. Put the pin back and test the shade. If it works all right, your job is finished. If it does not, adjust it again until it works easily.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Rules For Santas

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rules for the job are explicit: No smoking, drinking or cussing, and you must be able to bounce a crying child on your knee while reciting the names of eight tiny reindeer.

A twinkle in the eye is helpful.

"It's the type of job anybody can learn to do if they want to, if they have a love of children and the Christmas spirit," said Nancy Sargent, an employment counselor for Western Temporary Services Inc.

Mrs. Sargent is Santa Claus' boss.

Each year, she hires a dozen or so part-time workers to put on red suits and white beards and head for stores around town. This year, 15 have been trained here according to manuals and films from her company's headquarters in California.

The manual advises Santas, for example, to refrain from shouting, "Ho, Ho, Ho," she said. Youngsters, it seems, are often frightened by a deep voice booming "Ho, Ho, Ho."

And since so many children come from broken homes, a department store Santa should refrain from using the word "parents" in referring to a child's family, a training pamphlet says. Use "folks" instead.

John Cleese Makes People Laugh All Over The World

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Twenty years ago, a lanky undergraduate stood before the enrollment desk of a college entertainment troupe.

He was asked if he could sing? Um, no. Dance? No. Well, what did he do?

"I try to make people laugh," stammered John Cleese. Then, crushed with humiliation, he fled.

Cleese eventually joined the troupe, and that led to radio and television, Monty Python's Flying Circus and the unforgettable Basil Fawlty. He makes people laugh all right — millions of them, from America to Japan, from the Middle East to the South Pacific.

And despite the 6-foot-5 frame and apoplectic glare, he's still a trifle shy. During a recent 1½-hour train ride across England, one discovered a supremely modest, quiet-spoken and courteous man who, like most great comedians, is a lot more serious than his screen persona.

At 45 he has gone through depression and marital crisis and survived to tell the tale in a book co-authored by his therapist, Robin Skynner.

He has outgrown the "Ministry of Silly Walks," dead parrots and the philosophers' football match, and now makes people laugh without the help of his five fellow Pythons.

His Python days are over, despite persistent rumors of an imminent reunion. "There is no way that I am interested," he said, adding that he is tired of "committee-work scripts."

On the train carrying him to Leeds to appear on a TV program about psychotherapy, he is self-effacing to a fault, squirming each time he admits responsibility for some particularly memorable Python routine.

He has a quaintly English way of forgetting the name of a sketch he did a week ago while flawlessly reciting the endless nonsense title he made up for a Teutonic nobleman in a 1969 sketch.

If the breakup of the Beatles killed off a certain esprit in the '60s, the end of Monty Python has done something similar for the '70s. Today, the distilled silliness of elephant-trunk transplants, argument clinics, pet halibuts and chocolate-coated crunchy frogs seems out of fashion.

And now the unlikely setting for Cleese's talents is at training seminars for sales people. He is a partner and chief actor in Video Arts, a highly successful British company which makes humorous training films.

In this little-known serious side of his career, he plays obnoxious salesmen, officious bureaucrats and bungling executives in short films designed to show people involved in marketing how to do it right by demonstrating how ridiculous they are when they do it wrong.

In these roles, which he has been playing for 10 years, one discovers the origins of Basil Fawlty, the ill-tempered hotel manager Cleese portrayed in the TV series seen in the United States.

Though it was one of England's most popular series and has been exported worldwide, "Fawlty Towers" ran for only 14 episodes. It was so intense and energetic that Cleese and co-writer Connie Booth, his ex-wife, were exhausted.

"Fawlty was a sort of exemplar, a paradigm of the whole British services industry — this idea that if it wasn't for the customers we could run this place properly," he said.

English life is fertile ground for Python humor with its absent-minded vicars, pompous retired colonels, judges in wigs, snooty royals, cane-wielding schoolmasters and dour trade unionists.

But English as they are, Monty Python and Basil Fawlty travel well, nimbly hurdling language and cultural barriers. Cleese finds it "quite mysterious and inexplicable" that there are Python fanatics in America.

He says he meets many Americans who can recite Python acts by heart. He recalls forgetting his lines on the New York stage and getting a chorus of help from the front row.

At Cambridge he studied law and overcame his shyness to become a star in the Footlights, a college revue that was so successful it performed in New York.

Then he was invited by British TV personality David Frost to join his humor program.

Hiroshima Visit

TOKYO (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa, who was honored for her work with the poor, visited Hiroshima today and prayed that a nuclear attack would not occur again.

The 74-year-old nun arrived in Japan Monday for a weeklong visit to appeal for world peace and relief aid for refugees. She was invited by Archbishop Seiichi Shira Yanagi, spiritual head of the Tokyo Roman Catholic diocese.

Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for her work with the poor of Calcutta, India, Mother Theresa visited the Hiroshima Peace Memorial Hall today. She saw a miniature model of the city after it was bombed on Aug.9, 1945, Hiroshima city official Hirotoshi Masumura said.

The first atomic bomb killed an estimated 118,000 people from the heat, blast, and radiation.

Star School

CHICAGO (AP) — Actresses Jennifer Beals of "Flashdance" and Darryl Hannah of "Splash" both were launched by drama teacher Dan Reichel, who says he doesn't believe in stars, even though he keeps turning them out.

"We're getting the reputation of being a star school because of Daryl and Jenny," said Reichel, who has taught at the private Francis W. Parker School on Chicago's North Side for 10 years.

"They're very talented young ladies," Reichel said. "I'm very proud of them. But we don't try to produce stars here.

"What we try to do is give kids a total experience, make them secure in who they are."

Miss Beals said the most important thing Reichel taught her "was how to listen to a scene and not be so centered on yourself. He stresses group work, which is the way to go.

NOTICE OF SALE

United States Government Property, formerly owned by Charles F. Sutton, Jr., located one mile east of Farmville, North Carolina.

This property will be sold as one property.

Property consists of a 48.0 acre farm with approximately 31.0 acres cleared located on State Road 1200, and in that same tract of land described in the Trustee's Deed filed on the 28th day of October, 1981, in Book K-50, Page 365, at the Pitt County Registry, Greenville, North Carolina.

Sealed bids will be received by the Farmers Home Administration, 115 Eastbrook Drive, Greenville, North Carolina 27834, until Friday, Dec. 14, 1984, at 5:00 o'clock p.m. and will be publicly opened at the Farmers Home Administration Room 570, 310 New Bern Avenue, Raleigh, North Carolina 27601, on Thursday, Dec. 20, 1984, at 2:30 o'clock p.m. Five percent (5%) bid deposit in the form of cash, cashier's check or certified check, payable to the Treasurer of the United States will be required. The Government reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

TERMS: Cash or ten percent (10%) down and the balance payable in twenty (20) equal annual installments of principal plus interest on the unpaid balance at a rate of ten and three quarters percent (10 ¾%) per annum or the prevailing rate at the time of bid acceptance by the Government.

For inspection of the property, information and bid forms, contact Mr. Bert M. Hall, Acting County Supervisor, Farmers Home Administration, 115 Eastbrook Drive, Greenville, North Carolina 27834. Telephone: (919) 752-2035.

PLEASE NOTE THAT:

1. Bids will be accepted only in writing on Form FmHA 465-10, "Invitation, Bid and Acceptance." Any conditions of the bid proposed by the bidder which are not specified on Form FmHA 465-10 must be attached to Form FmHA 465-10.
2. If the bids received are for the same amount, preference will be given to the bid offering cash over the bid requiring financing by FmHA.
3. Bidders whose bids contain the condition that FmHA finance the sale on terms will submit, along with Form FmHA 465-10, a current financial statement and a pro forma statement indicating their repayment ability.

Farmers Home Administration properties are sold without regard to race, sex, creed, color, or national origin.

HUGE COMPLETE DISPERSION AT ABSOLUTE AUCTION OF 32 DOZERS, 30 WHEEL TYPE TRACTORS, 22 TRUCKS & MORE

Wed., Nov. 28th, 1984
10:00 AM
Gum Neck, North Carolina

Location: From Columbia, N.C., go South 12 mi. on Hwy. 94 to sale site at Hq. of PRULEAN FARMS. Closest airport served by major airlines is Norfolk, Va. and rent cars are available (Norfolk is about 2 hrs. from sale by car). Nearest airport for pvt. planes is at Edenton, N.C. with a 4,000 ft. lighted runway (rent cars available from Manning Motor Co., Tel. 919-355-3472) and Edenton is 45 min. from sale site by car. The PRULEAN FARMING OPERATION occupies a large part of Dare, Tyrrell & Washington Counties; it is bounded on the North by Albemarle Sound and on the East by Pamlico Sound.

Yokley & Lundy Auction Co. will sell this construction, farming, hauling & field equipment for PRULEAN FARMS at ABSOLUTE AUCTION to the highest bidders WITHOUT RESERVE. By far most of this equipment is classed as "GOOD" but, nevertheless, there is no warranty, expressed, implied or assumed as to the condition of anything in the sale--everything sells "as-is" and "where-is". Our descriptions are based upon our own inspection of it and on information given us by our consignor. The sale site telephone is 919-796-1479; call that number for questions you may have or for assistance with motel reservations (ask for Mr. JERRY MITCHELL). To request brochures on sale, contact YOKLEY & LUNDY AUCTION CO., Box 577, Tel. 601-247-3292, Belzoni, Miss. 39038. At night Mr. Mitchell may be reached at the Dalton House Motel, Columbia, N.C., Tel. 919-796-0381.

We operate under the North Carolina Auction Licensing Laws as follows: Yokley & Lundy Auction Co. License No. 3532 with our auctioneer, Col. Larry Garner's Lic. No. 3533.

Venetians Search For Early Relics

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Venetians are searching for clues to tell them more about their first two government capitals that were abandoned and mysteriously disappeared more than 800 years ago.

The two areas are Heraclea and Malamocco, several miles from the center of modern Venice, which served as the capitals from the 7th to the early 9th centuries.

Venetians of those times sought to further consolidate their defenses against the invading Germanic Lombards, who had driven the early settlers onto the islands and outlying areas. So in 812 they moved their capital to the Rialto in the heart of the city, which also was perfectly located for sea trade in the coming centuries.

Heraclea, founded in 639, was recently discovered under farmland on the mainland, 18 miles north of Venice.

Venetian historian Mario De Biasi has just published a book on the original Malamocco, the second capital, which probably was located about five miles from the center of the city but whose site has never been found.

"This has a history, a mystery, a fascination," says De Biasi, author of "Malamocco — a Land to be Rediscovered."

A recently published photograph shows the distinct outlines of Heraclea, the first capital, buried under farmland.

It includes the clear shape of a winding grand canal, much like the main waterway in Venice today, as well as smaller connecting canals. The photograph also shows the foundations of large buildings, many of which were destroyed by fire and later invasions.

"We plan to go and dig up the important things there," says Franco Pasoco, Venice's regional secretary for land resources. "We don't think we should touch anything there until we have an overall plan."

So far the region has approved 1 billion lire ($571,000) for the start of work at the site, about three-quarters of a mile long and 660 yards wide.

Pasoco, in an interview with The Associated Press, said the discovery is important in learning more about the city that "gave birth" to the mighty Venetian Republic that dominated the Adriatic.

Heraclea, after being abandoned by its several thousand inhabitants beginning in the middle of the 8th century, disappeared under water and soil.

The Venetians in 742 moved the capital from Heraclea to Malamocco, which is believed to have been on or near the Lido, the spit of land that today protects Venice from the Adriatic Sea.

While a modern-day section named Malamocco exists, no one knows exactly what happened to the site that served as the capital from 742 until 811 before disappearing in the 12th century.

"The old Malamocco disappeared without leaving a trace," says De Biasi.

Legend holds that the ancient city may have been situated off the current Lido in what is now deep water, while more credible theories say it was on or near the narrow strip of land.

De Biasi said that new research techniques, especially infra-red photography and archaeological studies, should make it possible to find the former capital and possibly to dig up some relics.

"We should investigate a mystery that's existed for hundreds of years," he said.

The disappearance of the city has given rise to many legends, spurred in large part by fishermen who that every now and then claim to have spotted ruins in the water.

"The history books attribute the cause of the disapperance to an earthquake, underwater tremors, or a fire," says De Biasi. But he adds that continuous erosion is a more likely cause.

A Review
For The Beautiful Guy

LET'S HEAR IT FOR A BEAUTIFUL GUY. By Bruce Jay Friedman. Donald Fine Inc. 252 Pages. $15.95.

Bruce Jane Friedman is better known for his novels — "A Mother's Kisses" — and plays — "Scuba Duba" — than he is for his short fiction.

But his ample talent in that field is made quite evident by the 18 works of short fiction gathered together in this volume.

Possessed of a wonderful sense of humor he is happily able to put into a few very well-chosen words. Friedman nicely entertains his readers as he spins them stories about life as it is lived in contemporary America.

That this humor is often outrageous only adds to the word pictures Friedman draws. "Detroit Abe," for example, tells of Abrahamowitz, a man "alone, frightened, pounded on the head by alimony, the IRS circling closer."

An ill-paid teacher of "irony to a group of students in a heavily ethnic division of a city university," Abrahamowitz is slowly but steadily sinking into the pit of utter despair when he is befriended by a pimp. From that moment, his life takes a radically different course, and he is soon transformed into the urbane Detroit Abe.

In a similar vein, "The Candide of Copiers" tells of Ramirez, an inventor of copying machines, who seeks psychiatric help to deal with his problems. But as Ramirez works his way back to mental stability, his psychiatrist, Kornfeld, begins to falter and Ramirez has to help the doctor heal himself.

Other notable selections in this collection of mostly good fictions are "Marching Through Delaware," "The Car Lover," and "Let's Hear It for a Beautiful Guy."

LITHOGRAPHS BY DAUMIER

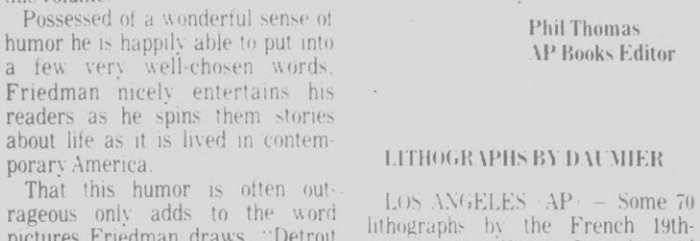

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some 70 lithographs by the French 19th-century artist Honore Daumier and his contemporaries are on view at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art through March 17, 1985.

Entitled "Political Caricatures: Lithographs by Daumier and His Contemporaries From the Armand Hammer Collection," the exhibition features more than 40 of Daumier's satires of mid-19th century national and international political events.

Other artists whose work is included in the show include Charles-Joseph Travies and Alfred Darjou.

Dismal Pecan Season

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Bad weather and other misfortunes have combined to produce a dismal season for south Georgia pecan growers, threatening some with economic hardship.

Pecans, which provide the crunch and nutty flavor to many candies and cakes, are a major crop around this city of 74,000 that bills itself as the Pecan Capital of the World.

With numerous groves dotting the landscape, Dougherty and neighboring Lee and Mitchell counties have the highest density of pecan trees in the country and produce the bulk of the state's crop.

Among the 16 pecan producing states, Georgia is the leader. Its 1983 crop totaled 100 million pounds, worth nearly $63 million.

But growers fear a shortfall this season.

"Economically ... this is probably going to be one of the worst years," said Bucky Geer, president of the Southeastern Pecan Growers Association. "I would say it's going to be a very large money-losing crop for 50 percent of the growers."

After starting the season with almost perfect weather, growers were hit with a drought and blistering temperatures in August and September that stunted the fruit inside the shell and promoted insect problems.

To add to their woes, shellers and growers had 135 million pounds of pecans in cold storage from the previous season, and the Crop Reporting Service (CRS) overestimated the state crop.

Both actions tended to drive pecan prices down by creating the impression among buyers there would be an oversupply, Geer said.

In the meantime, growers in California had a bumper crop of walnuts and almonds, nuts that compete with pecans in the confectionary trade.

Ordinarily, much of the almond and walnut crop could be exported. But because of the high value of the dollar in relation to foreign currencies, the competing nuts have glutted the domestic market, reducing pecan demand still further.

"All of these factors have caused the buyers to have reservations about buying pecans at a price equitable to the grower," said Geer, whose association represents growers in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and Mississippi.

Tom Crocker, a pecan expert with the Georgia Extension Service in Tifton, said the drought and hot weather produced smaller kernels and forced growers to spend more money fighting insects such as the yellow pecan aphid.

"It feeds and sucks the juices out of the tree," he said of the pest, which reproduces every four to seven days in hot, dry weather. "They're pulling straight carbohydrates out of the tree that should be making nuts."

Geer, who has 1,500 acres of pecans, said the high crop estimates in September and October contributed most to the lowering of prices this season.

The CRS, a branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, estimated Georgia's pecan crop at 130 million pounds on Sept. 1 and 125 million pounds on Oct. 1.

"Everybody was alarmed and totally confused as to where they got that figure," said Geer. "It created havoc and confusion in the pecan industry. Everybody started saying, 'Who's got all those pecans?'"

Responding to requests from growers, the Athens-based Reporting Service conducted a special Nov. 1 survey of the Georgia crop and lowered the estimate still further to 115,000 million pounds.

The CRS normally conducts surveys of the pecan crop on Sept. 1, Oct. 1, Dec. 1. Its final report is prepared in July after all pecans have been harvested.

Mike Hammer, a CRS statistician, said the Reporting Service agreed to conduct the special survey after growers expressed disappointment at the quality of the crop.

"The weather had been quite dry and the harvest was underway. There were some disappointments (over) the fact that the nut weight was down," Hammer said.

Geer said he doubted whether many Georgia growers could recoup the estimated $579 it costs to produce an acre of pecans.

"It is going to be a situation in which people are not going to get their investment back," he said. "It's going to put a hardship on a lot of the growers and cause some of them to possibly get out of the business."

Pecan producers usually get their best prices for nuts sold in gift packages during the Christmas season. But this year Georgia growers have had to accept lower prices, Geer said.

Being an "alternate bearing" plant, pecan trees produce more nuts one year and less the next. Growers take this into account when planning their budgets.

"This was supposed to be the 'on' year for pecans to produce some reserves to help growers get through the next year," Geer explained. "The bottom line is the cash return. It's going to be negative for many pecan growers."

Many Flocking To Art Show

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Visitors are flocking to the Royal Academy of Arts in London's Piccadilly to see a marvelous and colorful show of modern paintings from Corot to Andrew Wyeth.

The 115 works by 78 artists — including two Cezannes, two Dalis, two Picassos, two Van Goghs and two Gauguins — belong to Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza. He's the head of an industrial empire with interests in chemicals, oil, transportation, engineering and computers, but is better known as an art collector. He also is the chairman of Heineken, the brewing company.

A large, affable man, with a crumpled face, a gold front tooth and four ex-wives, the baron discussed the legendary published reports about his art collecting in an interview. "One said I spend 30 million pounds ($36 million) a year on art," he said.

"Another said that I paid 28 million pounds ($33.6 million) for paintings and the same paper said that an exhibition of them was worth 14 million pounds ($17 million). That would make me a pretty poor sort of collector if it was true."

The 63-year-old baron said the most he has spent in a 12-month period is $5 million, and that includes the Gauguin he paid $3.85 million for at Sotheby's in New York last May.

"And I had to sell several less important paintings to finance that purchase," he added.

The Gauguin "Mata Mua" ("In Olden Times"), is in the Academy show, "Modern Masters From the Thyssen-Bornemisza Collection," open through Dec. 19.

"It doesn't happen very often that great wealth finds itself in the hands of impeccable taste but when it does the results are spectacular. There are no bad moments and entire rooms full of great ones," wroteWaldemar Januszczak of the Guardian, a critic never lavish with praise.

Art is the baron's passion and he collects primarily for pleasure. He said he will probably leave the best things to a foundation when he dies.

His collection of old masters and modern art is reckoned by experts to be among the best in the world in private hands.

It was started by his father, Heinrich, who died in 1947. He was the son of the founder of the family fortune, German Ruhr iron and steel magnate August Thyssen, who died in 1926.

"My father wasn't interested in any art after the 18th century," the baron said. "He had a fixed idea that modern paintings were not up to the old classical masters."

Heinrich Thyssen married into the Hungarian nobility, acquiring the extra name of Bornemisza, and he and his descendants were granted the right to bear the title of baron by a special decree of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria-Hungary.

There are about 1,400 old masters at the baron's Villa Favorita near Lugano in Switzerland, many of them on show to the public, and over 800 modern works which he has collected over the past 20 years. They are divided between the villa and his western England home at Daylesford in Gloucestershire, and are rarely on view.

"If you were to stay with the baron you'd likely have one hanging in your bedroom," said an aide of the industrialist."They hang in all the rooms and aren't kept under glass."

All the major movements of modern art are represented at the exhibition, from Impressionism to contemporary British artists.

The baron's portrait in the show is by an admired British painter, Lucian Freud, grandson of the famous psychoanalyst.

Kordas Show To Open Dec. 2

Chapel Hill artist Patricia Kordas will exhibit recent landscapes and still lifes at Arlington Hall gallery beginning Sunday, Dec. 2 and continuing through Jan. 15. The gallery is located at 327 Arlington Boulevard, and hours are 10-5 Mondays through Saturdays.

A native of North Carolina, Ms. Kordas studied in France and Italy. She holds a master's degree from UNC-Chapel Hill and has been on the art faculties of Benedictine College and Randloph-Macon Womans' College. She was a founder and director of the Pythagoreion Institute of Painting, a summer art school for Americans on the island of Samos in Greece, from 1969 through 1975.

Ms. Kordas has exhibited widely, in shows at the North Carolina Museum of Art, the Albrecht Gallery, and in the "Young Artists' Exhibition" at the Hellenic-American Union in Athens, Greece. Her first one-artist show was at the Panoras Gallery in New York City in the late 1950's, and her most recent one-artist exhibit was at the Horace Williams House in Chapel Hill. Other showings of her art have been in New York City, Greece, and several North Carolina cities.

A reception for the artist is being held Dec. 2 from 5 to 7 p.m., and is open to the public. The Kordas exhibit marks the first anniversary of Arlington Hall gallery.

MEMORIES OF PLATAMONAS . . . an oil painting of a Greek landscape by Patricia Kordas. An exhibit of her recent work is going on view Sunday, Dec. 2 at Arlington Hall gallery in Greenville.

New Shows At Chrysler

NORFOLK, VA. — The seventh annual juried photography exhibition sponsored by the Photography Alliance of The Chrysler Museum is currently on view at the museum, located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch in Norfolk.

The show features 120 photographs selected by juror Willis Hartshorn, associate director of exhibitions at the International Center of Photography in New York City. Hartshorn selected the photographs from 100 photographers from Virgina, Maryland and North Carolna.

A reception for the show took place on Friday, Nov. 16 with announcement made of prizewinners in the show.

• Another show is opening at The Chrysler on Friday, Nov. 30. This is an exhibition of "Nineteenth and Twentieth Century Drawings from the Permanent Collection," comprising 45 drawings by European and American artists.

Drawing techniques represented range from the detailed "Peasant Girl" by Theodore Robinson to a crytic suggestion of form in Henri Gaudier-Brzeska'a "A Vulture" to Charles Dana Gibson's use of line and repeated hatching to suggest texture and dimension.

Other artists represented in this show include Sir Edward Coley Burne-Jones, Daubigny, Renoir, Rodin, John Vanderlyn, George Caleb Bingham, James A.M. Whistler, and Diego Rivera among a number of other artists.

Admission and parking are free. Hours are 10 to 4 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 1 to 5 on Sundays, closed Mondays.

Contemporary Art In Wilson Show

WILSON — A total of 26 artists are represented in an exhibition of contemporary crafts from the Touchstone Gallery now on view at the Arts Council of Wilson Gallery, 205 Gray Street.

The work being shown has been selected by Holli and Michael Sherrill.

Also on view at the gallery at this time is a selection of porcelain teapots created by Malcolm Davis.

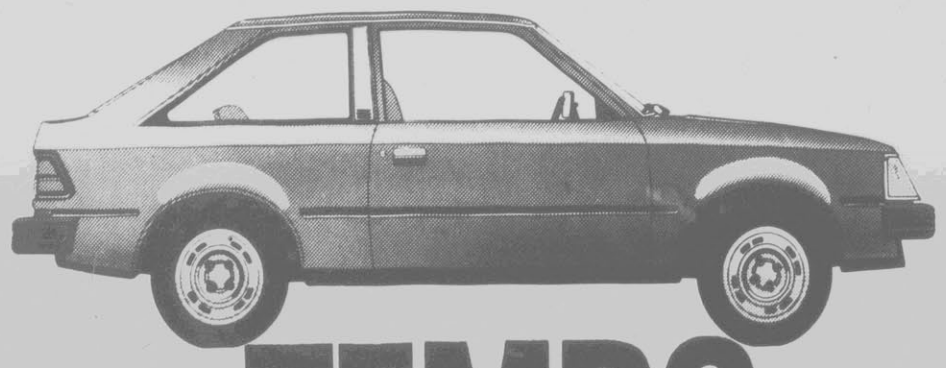

Gallery hours are 9-5 on weekdays, and from 1-4 on Sundays. There is no admission charged and the exhibitions are open to the public.

Award Winning Writer Has Deep Rapport With Her Subjects

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Sheehan agrees that to an extent she has lived a lot of other people's lives, but then she has second thoughts.

"No, not really lived them because you have to bear in mind, I can get out of prison," she says. "I'm not on welfare. I don't have five or six children by different men. I'm not 81 years old and trying to get on Medicaid. I'm not a schizophrenic. So, no, but I have lived more of those sort of lives than other people."

Indeed she has lived the life of a welfare mother, an inmate at a maximum security prison and a schizophrenic woman enduring some 15 years of mostly useless treatment. In her latest book, "Kate Quinlan's Days," she tells the story of a feisty woman in her 80s facing a society that wants to do things with the rest of her life that she can't quite agree to.

Mrs. Sheehan's book, "Is There No Place On Earth For Me," won Mrs. Sheehan a Pulitzer Prize last year. All four of her books are examples of what might be called "close up" journalism, focusing on social problems by looking deeply into the lives of those who live with those problems.

Elderly Kate Quinlan, for example, has medical problems and lives with a caring daughter. But she found herself locked in a morass of social programs that seemed to accept categories of patients rather than individuals. The book details the contrary needs of the individual and the proposed solutions society would offer.

Mrs. Sheehan lives with her subjects off and on for long periods. A book about Sylvia Frumkin, a schizophrenic, took two and a half years to research. The story on Kate Quinlan took a year and a half. It's a matter of total immersion. She slept at the Creedmore psychiatric facility in New York State when she was interviewing Sylvia.

"I was there sometimes 24 hours, but usually I kept it to 16. You don't get enough done in eight hours when you're working on something like that. I come up for a week every three weeks if I'm writing on a New York subject. That's all the subjects can bear of your presence. You wear them out.

"I don't run. I'm the only one in the world who doesn't jog. But what I train for is interviewing people. I can go 16 hours. That's what I've done all my life — ask questions. But other people can't answer questions for periods like that."

She lives in Washington, D.C., with her husband, Neil, a former New York Times reporter now working on a book about Vietnam. They and their two teen-age daughters have adjusted their lives to accommodate the demands of writing and researching.

They are home from their two desks at the Library of Congress by dinnertime, so they can spend the early evening hours with the children. Then, when the kids go to bed, she goes to her family room office and he to his in what is the fourth bedroom. They work through the night, have breakfast with their daughters and send them off to school. Then they sleep during the day, until it's time to go to the Library of Congress again.

For her the research is fun, the writing agony, although that is not apparent in the clarity and leanness of her style. She takes shorthand notes and distrusts tape recorders. She types her notes every night, until not too long ago on a manual typewriter. She honed her talents with The New Yorker, where she began doing "Talk of The Town" pieces, and the New York Times, where she wrote for the Sunday magazine.

She walks a tender line with her subjects, taking care not to distort the reality of their situation with her presence. Easier said than done.

"I'm really with Kate Quinlan and her daughter and their world for a year or more. So you become a friend. And sometimes it may seem like a waste of time when you're drinking tea ... but you're noticing the phone calls or how she likes her tea or whether she's eager to watch the news ... how she does her grocery shopping. There's a lot you don't have to ask when you're observing."

Very little escapes her eye, whether it's Kate Quinlan's sore throat or her swollen feet or the fact that her eyes keep surveying the prison her hospital room has become, always focusing finally on the clock in the hall, every two minutes. Kate Quinlan's boredom and frustration become palpable through the detail of Susan Sheehan's description.

Ms. Sheehan refrains from making judgments. The reader makes his own from the evidence she offers. The names and some of the locations are fictitious to protect the privacy of these very open lives. But it is still hard to picture this mother of two in a maximum security prison for men, sleeping when she has to on a cot in the women's room.

HISTORICAL MARKER PLACED — The Paul Green Foundation, Inc. of Chapel Hill has placed a highway historical marker in Buies Creek to commemorate the late dramatist laureate of North Carolina, Paul Eliot Green. Green, author of the first outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony," and winner of the 1927 Pulitzer Prize, was born in Buies Creek. Shown with the newly installed marker are, left to right, W. A. Johnson of Lillington; Mrs. Mary Green Johnson of Buies Creek, and Paul E. Green, Jr. of Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

One of the greatest and most sinister events of human history is portrayed in Peter Wyden's "Day One: Before Hiroshima and After." Hiroshima was an event of such magnitude that it divided history into two periods, before the bomb and after it — " "Day One" of a new age, in which all life would be a risk.

Wyden reveals the dawn of that new age — the creation and use of the atomic bomb. Wyden goes beyond the story of Hiroshima to reveal the doubts of men who made the bomb, the ignorance of those who were called upon to make the decision to use it, and the fact that even those who designed the weapon "did not know what it was," or guess what its fearsome after-effects would be. He has drawn on fresh eyewitness interviews and documents never before published to trace today's nuclear stalemate to its historical roots and to answer the questions that still surround the building and the use of the bomb.

Wyden shows the scientific breakthroughs and the espionage, the manipulations and the false assumptions by the highest policy-makers on three continents, the extraordinary secret life in three American cities where 100,000 people worked to build the bomb and the reality of Day One in Hiroshima where 130,000 people died.

"Heading Toward Omega: In Search of the Meaning of the Near-Death Experience" by Kenneth Ring breaks new ground in near-death studies by focusing on the meaning of the near-death experience for the survivor and for human evolution. A near-death experience occurs when a person is clinically dead but then survives and reports such phenomena as floating out of the body, entering a dark tunnel, reviewing a life panorama, and entering a brilliant white light.

Such accounts have been described in best sellers by Raymond Moody and Elizabeth Kubler-Ross and in Ring's previous book "Life at Death."

Dr. Ring's intensive three-year search for the meaning of near-death experience has been pursued through both scientifically designed questionnaires completed by hundreds of experiencers and wide-ranging interviews. A provocative pattern of very positive changes in outlook, values and behavior following a near-death experience emerges from this study.

New Silversmith Book

RALEIGH — A second revised edition of "Silversmiths of North Carolina, 1696-1860," by Mary Reynolds Peacock, has been published. It offers twice the number of pages and three times the number of photographs contained in the 1973 revised edition of George Barton Cutten's original 1948 work on North Carolina silversmiths.

The new volume, published by the Historical Publications Section of the Department of Cultural Resources, includes research and information accumulated by Mrs. Peacock during the past 11 years.

This new volume has 301 pages and incorporates 447 illustrations of silver, makers' marks, silver-related artifacts, and documentary material, and covers the decade 1850 to 1860, a period not covered in the previous edition.

The new "Silversmiths of North Carolina, 1696-1860" is available in both a hardbound edition at $12 and in a paperbound edition at $8 a copy, plus $1 for postage and handling. It can be ordered from: Historical Publications Section, Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611. Checks are to be made payable to the Department of Cultural Resources.

The book is also available at the N.C. Museum of History Gift Shop in Raleigh, in some state historic sites and at commercial bookstores.

Rocky Mount Craft Show

ROCKY MOUNT — The Planters Craftsmens Guild's annual craft show will be held at the National Guard Armory in Rocky Mount on two days — Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 1 and 2. Saturday hours are 9-5, and Sunday 1-5.

About 60 craftsmen from eastern North Carolina and Virginia will display a large vriety of handmade items to include furniture, needlework, weaving, tin ware, clocks, folk art, woodcrafts, holiday decorations and ornaments, and many other crafts.

The craft show is open to the public.

Noontime Lecture

Dr. Randolph W. Chitwood, Jr., chief, Division of Cardiac Surgery, Department of Surgery, East Carolina University School of Medicine, is the guest lecturer to be speaking from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Monday in the upstairs conference room of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

This is the fourth and final fall 1984 lecture in the Perspectives Noontime Lecture Series held at the hospital. Dr. Chitwoold's lecture is a Charles E. Culpeper History of Medicine Lecture.

Admission is free and the event is open to the public.

Autograph Party At EEii's Today

BELHAVEN — From 2 to 5 p.m. today, author Melville Garton will autograph his book, "High Profile" at EEii's little KORNERS of the world in downtown Belhaven. The public is invited to attend the open house honoring the author.

A world traveler, Garton lived and worked in Mexico for many years. That country, its people and customs are woven into the context of novel.

While living in Mexico, Garton was in the hotel business as owner-manager, operated an orphanage, worked as a brokerage house account executive, and was a teacher. He is a retired architect who practiced in California and in Spain after completing studies of architecture and painting in Paris. During World War II, he served as a naval office. He currently makes his home in Belhaven.

The novel centers on the story of a young American man, who with only a few dollars and Yankee ingenuity, adapts to his adopted Mexican homeland. He works his way to success, becomes one of the elite of society, and then becomes the victim of intrigue.

London Plays A Bargain For Americans

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — For Americans, London's West End is a bargain compared to Broadway, and the difference can be attributed to an undeniable fact of theatrical life — higher production costs mean higher ticket prices.

In New York, theatergoers who saw "Kipling," Alec McCowen's recent one-man show about the eminent English author, paid $30 for a top-priced ticket. In London, a ticket for the same show was $13.40. But it cost $200,000 to produce "Kipling" on Broadway and only $65,000 in the West End.

"Blockheads," the American-produced musical about Laurel and Hardy that ended an unsuccessful London run Nov. 3, closed at a loss of $500,000. On Broadway, the loss would have tripled, and so would the top ticket price: $45 in New York vs. $15 here.

"It's part of the reason there are only 20-odd shows on Broadway now, compared to 33 or so on the West End," said British producer Ray Cooney.

"Ultimately, I think there will be less theater in both New York and London," said British producer Duncan Weldon, who said that it will cost $1.25 million to open "Aren't We All?" — his hit London revival co-starring Rex Harrison and Claudette Colbert — on Broadway in 1985.

At London's Theater Royal Haymarket, the play cost Weldon about $137,000 to mount — one-tenth the projected New York sum.

But the American ticket-buyer is also likely to be earning a proportionally greater salary than his British cousin.

"The average wage is about 50 percent higher in New York," said Cooney, pointing out that ticket prices must be seen in relation to what an audience is capable of paying.

According to London's Department of Employment, a weekly wage here averages about $180. In New York, the average wage in 1980 — the last year for which figures are available — was $350 per week, the U.S. Census Bureau says.

"The English public thinks 15 pounds a ticket is dear, and Americans think $45 is dear," said Weldon. "Everything is proportional.

"What happens is that Americans come to London and think we're giving the tickets away, because they're only paying 40 percent of what it would cost to see the same shows at home," he said. "Londoners go to New York and find they can't afford to go to the theater."

"Everything to do with people in New York costs more," agreed British producer Michael White, who opened the Rodgers and Hart musical "On Your Toes" in London for approximately $760,000 "as opposed to over double that in New York."

In London, "Kipling" had a six-person production staff at the 650-seat Mermaid Theater, where house expenses — including ushers and box office personnel — amounted to the equivalent of $3,900.

At Broadway's 1,066-seat Royale Theater, a production staff of 11 was required to put on a show whose house expenses totaled $4,000 to $15,000 a week.

To lease Broadway's Royale cost producer Roy Somlyo $10,000 a week, plus 5 percent of the gross. The rental of the Mermaid cost London producer Nathan Joseph roughly $2,450 a week. No percentage was taken.

The weekly break-even in New York was $70,000; in London, the break-even came to about $15,000.

In accordance with Actors' Equity union requirements in New York, McCowen had an understudy who was paid $615 a week, even though the illness of the star would mean canceling the performance.

British Equity does not require an understudy in one-person shows, since — according to press spokesman Peter Finch — no one would pay to see a one-man show without the actor who is supposed to be in it.

Pay scales between the two Equities differ dramatically as well. The Equity minimum for West End work is about $151 a week. On Broadway, it's $650 and will rise to $700 on June 1, 1985.

Average production costs differ accordingly — from $120,000 for a straight play in London to between $750,000 and $1.5 million in New York, depending on such variables as the size of the cast and complexities of the scenic design.

NCNB Competition Set For Young Musicians

CHARLOTTE — For the fourth year, North Carolina National Bank (NCNB) Corporation is offering scholarships and cash awards valued at $26,000 for young musicians in North Carolina who are winners in the 1985 NCNB Music Competition. The prizes have been expanded to allow more young North Carolinians to receive a music education.

First prize is a $12,000 scholarship to the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winson-Salem. The winner will receive $3,000 annually for four years of study at the school.

Second place is a four-year scholarship to the School of the Arts valued at $8,000 — $2,000 annually; and the third prize is a $4,000 — $1,000 a year, four-year scholarship, also for the School of the Arts.

Competition begins with regional auditions in Fayetteville, Marion, Wilson and Winston-Salem on Feb. 16. One contestant in each region will receive a $500 cash award to be used at the winners' discretion for their music careers. Regional auditions determine the finalists to be invited to the final competiton to be held in NCNB Performance Place in Charlotte's Spirit Square on March 12.

The competition is open to residents of North Carolina who have not reached the age of 20 and who are not enrolled in a music program at an institution of higher learning.

Competition covers the fields of strings, woodwinds, brass, percussion, harp, piano, classical guitar and voice.

Applications are available through music teachers or by writing: Ms. Shelby Graham, NCNB Corporation, T24-1, Charlotte, N. C., 28255.

The annual music competition is part of NCNB's continuing support of the arts, which includes a corporate art collection, traveling art exhibits and various performances.

1985 Opera Auditions

WINSTON-SALEM — The North Carolina District Auditions of the Metropolitan Opera National Council will be held in Crawford Hall on the campus of the North Carolina School of the Arts at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 9, 1985.

Applicants must be prepared to sing five operatic arias in their original languages.

Deadline for submission of applications is Jan. 21, 1985. Application forms are available from: North Carolina School of the Arts, Box 12189, Winston-Salem, N. C., 27107.

Three winners form the North Carolina district will each receive awards of $325 and will proceed to the regional competition to be held in Atlanta on Feb. 23. A $50 honorable mention will also be provided.

Those who advance from the regional competition will receive a week of coaching and study with the Metropolitan Opera artistic staff before the semi-final competitions to be held March 31 in New York. Each semi-finalist not chosen as a finalist will receive an award of $1,000. Finalists will receive $1,000 cash awards, $4,000 study grants and the opportunity to perform at the Finalists Concert on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera before a public audience.

The public is invited to attend the district auditions in Winston-Salem. A donation of at least $1 is requested.

Playhouse Auditions

Acting auditions for "The Diviners" have been scheduled by the East Carolina Playhouse on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 29 and 30, at 7:30 p.m. in room 206 of the Messick Theater Arts Center, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets, on the East Carolina University campus.

"The Diviners" is the third major production of the Playhouse season with performance dates set for Feb. 6-9 in McGinnis Theater. It is a folk story of the 1930's about a special relationship between a teenager and a preacher.

Don Biehn, a professor of theater arts, will direct. The play offers roles for 11 performers, two of which are men in their 50's to 70's. Biehn has posted audition scenes outside room 206 for actors to look over; however, he comments: "if reviewing these scenes is impossibe, I will be happy to work with actors on an individual basis on auditon night."

Copies of the play are available in the Reserve Reading Room of Joyner Library on campus. Auditions are open to everyone. All ECU students, faculty, staff and area residents are encouraged to attend.

Playwight Found Material In New York Night Prowling

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Lanford Wilson moved to New York more than 20 years ago, he got a job in a furniture store. He typed, answered the phone, handled billing and took care of complaints.

But his real work began after 5 p.m. Then he could write, and he found inspiration in an all-night coffee shop located in his apartment building on New York's Upper West Side. In the middle of the hustlers, hookers, drug addicts and lost souls who populated this greasy spoon, Wilson discovered the more than two dozen characters he would use in "Balm in Gilead," his first full-length play. Now, nearly two decades after it was first produced, the play is enjoying a major off-Broadway revival.

"When I was writing 'Balm in Gilead,' it never crossed my mind that anyone would ever put it on stage. The first draft had 50 characters," Wilson said recently, sitting in the Soho offices of the Circle Repertory Company, where he is a founding member and the troupe's resident playwright.

Wilson's soft, Show-Me accent still has traces of Lebanon, Mo., the town where he was born 47 years ago, and the setting for two of his most popular plays, the Pulitzer Prize-winning "Talley's Folly" and "The Fifth of July."

But he has a certain amount of affection for the time when he was a night prowler, gathering material and writing "Balm in Gilead," a free-wheeling look at New York City lowlife.

"I was getting about four hours sleep, but I loved it, of course," he says. "I sat in the coffee shop endlessly, night after night, for a long while, and knew all of the people.

"I was taking dictation a lot of the time, jotting down things that I heard and doing character studies," Wilson says. "I'd hear four different conversations and I'd listen for about half an hour and then try to take those four conversations down simultaneously and interweave them in some way. I was playing dialogue games."

Wilson used everything he heard, even incorporating conversation from the street people who hung around outside the coffee shop. It was on the street that he first met Fick, who became a character in the play.

"Early one morning I got off the subway at 72nd Street and walked home in the pouring rain. This kid run along side me and spills out this incredible monologue," Wilson recalls. "I just wanted to get in out of the rain. I couldn't figure out what he wanted. He didn't want a quarter. He just wanted me to be his friend.

"I told him, 'I'm terribly sorry. I've got to go to bed now.' But I didn't. I stayed up all night and wrote down everything he had said. It was the only thing I could give him," Wilson says.

Less than five months after he started the play, it was finished. Wilson gave it to Marshall Mason, a director he met at Cafe Cino, a Greenwich Village coffee house that was then at the center of the fledgling off-off-Broadway theater movement.

"It was weeks before I realized that he liked it," Wilson says. Mason agreed to direct the play. It was the beginning of a collaboration that still exists.

The playwright and the director enlisted the support of Ellen Stewart who agreed to present "Balm in Gilead" for two weekends at Cafe La Mama, her temple of off-off-Broadway avant garde located in a rundown section of the East Village. It opened in January 1965 in the tiny second-floor playhouse that seated fewer than 70 people.

"The first-night audience was mostly friends of the actors. I think they were terribly confused," Wilson says.

There were no major reviews, but everyone connected with the production knew it was something special. Today, the production is talked about in reverent tones as one of the early glories of the off-off-Broadway movement.

"About the third performance, it just ignited and went right through the roof," Wilson says. "After that, Ellen started letting in about 80 people or so to each performance. She even stood outside because the fire marshall kept making surprise visits. She was there to charm him."

Conditions were primitive. There was no backstage at the theater. The entire cast had to sit in the front row.

"The audience started screaming with laughter even before the show started," Wilson says. "Just to see 31 actors stream up the aisle, single file, before the beginning of the show and sit down.

"I was thrilled with the audience reaction as the week went on. And the second week was just as phenomenal. We really did have packed houses with screaming and yelling and bravos and people stomping in unison," he says.

Playwright Wins New Jersey Award

TRENTON, N. J. — Mark St. Germain, whose play "Rubbings" was presented at The Best Lunch Theater and Downtown Downstairs, both in Greenville, recently, is the 1984/85 recipient of the New Jersey State Council on the Arts Playwriting Fellowship.

Currently employed as program coordinator for the Bergen County Office of Cultural and Historic Affairs, he is the author of several plays, including "Gift of the Magi," a musical for which he wrote the books and co-authored the lyrics, scheduled to open in December at the Lambs Theater in New York City. He has had plays produced in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

"Night Mother' At NCSU Dec. 2

RALEIGH — "Night Mother," Marsha Norman's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, will be performed at Stewart Theater, N. C. State University, at 8 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 2.

Academy Award-winner Mercedes McCambrige is being starred in this production, which also stars Phyllis Somerville, understudy for the original Broadway show.

For additional information and ticket reservations call the box office at 737-3104 Monday-Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

CHALLENGE GRANT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum says it was recently awarded a $750,000 Challenge Grant by the National Endowment for the Arts.

It was the second time the museum had been the recipient of a Challenge Grant from the NEA. The first was awarded in 1978.

Choral Concert Scheduled

At 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9 the Greenville Choral Society will present the first concert of its 15th season in company with the Greenville Chamber Orchestra at Memorial Baptist Church.

Tickets for the concert are priced at $3.50. They may be purchased in advance from members of the chorus or at the door prior to the 3 p.m. concert hour.

Ms. Carolyn Green Ipock is conductor of the Choral Society. The Chamber Orchestra will be directed by Ms. Candace Dixon.

The work to be performed by the orchestra will be Mozart's "Divertimento" K.136.

Choral works in the concert will include two opening numbers that are examples of late Renaisance polyphony — J. P. Sweelinck's "Hodie Christus Natus Est," and the "Ave Maria" of Tomas Luis de Victoria. Sweelink, a Dutch organist and composer, and de Victoria, were both active in the 16th century.

The first portion of the concert will conclude with Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," a composition written at the request of Serge Koussevitsky for the opening of the Berkshire Music Festival in 1940.

The concluding section of choral offerings will begin with a 12th century plainsong, "O Come, O Come Emmanuel," to be followed by Christmas carols from the Ukraine, Spain, France, Sicily, Austria and England.

The concert will close with "Go Tell It On The Mountain," a well known spiritual dealing with the birth of Christ.

Ms. Ipock is guest conductor of the 50 member community-based Greenville Choral Society for the 1984-85 season. She teaches performing arts at D. H. Conley High School. A native of Virginia, she completed undergraduate and graduate studies at the ECU School of Music, and has performed with the Robert Shaw Chorale and as soloist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. Recently, she sang the lead role of Anna in an Ayden Theater Workshop production of "The King and I."

Dr. Rhonda Fleming is the musical director of the Greenville Choral Society.

The 16-member Greenville Chamber Orchestra directed by Ms. Dixon includes high school and professional players.. Ms. Joanne Bath serve as concert master.

A graduate of the ECU School of Music, Ms. Dixon was the founder of the Pitt County String program, the High School Honors Orchestra, and the Greenville Chamber Players.

The Greenville Choral Society is funded in part by a grant from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council and the Grassroots Program.

Special Concert

A special Christmas concert, free and open to the public, with children particularly encouraged to attend, is being presented by the East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble. The concert, sponsored by the Friends of the School of Music, will be presented in Wright Auditorium on Monday, Dec. 3.

"For the benefit of children who attend, this concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be under an hour in length," said Herbert L. Carter, director of the ensemble. "We have also planned a visit from St. Nick and audience participation in the singing of several familiar carols.

Carolyn Green Ipock, an alumnus of the ECU School of Music and a music teacher at D. H. Conley High School, will be soprano soloist on "Gesu Bambino," and for "The Christmas Song," made popular by Mel Torme.

Other familiar holiday music will include "Jingle Bells," "What Child Is This?", themes from "The Nutcracker Suite," and Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring.

A brass choir directed by Dale Hair will perform "The Twelve Days of Christmas" and "Sleigh Ride."

This seasonal concert by the ECU Wind Ensemble has been a favorite for several years. It has previously been held in the School of Music's A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Mrs. Nelson Crisp, president of the Friends of the School of Music, noted: "The friends has arranged to hold the concert in a larger hall this year so that more community people will have the opportunity to attend."

CANCELLATION

The concert announced earlier by the ECU New Music Ensemble "Instead" for Thursday, Nov. 29, has been cancelled.

Cloggers Day At ECU December 1

The Ninth Annual Cloggers's Day Celebration and Workshops will be held in Greenville on Saturday, Dec. 1 on the campus of East Carolina University. Events will begin at 2:30 p.m. and continue until 11 p.m., all to be held in Wright Auditorium.

Tickets are priced at $5, free to children under 12 accompanied by their parents. The ticket includes attendance at any of the workshops as well as for the evening performances. They can be purchased from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council office, the Record Bar (The Plaza), Apple Records, The New Deli, and at Gourment International.

The celebration program features clogging teams and performers of traditional music from throughout the eastern United States.

The activity is being sponsored by the Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Organization, in conjunction with the East Carolina University Student Union Minority Arts Committee and the Greengrass Cloggers.

Workshops are being held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and will basically cover the topics of beginning and advanced clogging, square dancing, and hammer dulcimer playing. Mary Whichard of Greenville will conduct the workshop on square dancing.

The program of evening entertainment will be opened by Major Jancie Buck, Mrs. Glady Howell, 400th Anniversary Coordinator, and Patricia Pertalion, president of the Arts Council.

More than a dozen dancing and music performing groups are scheduled to be in Greenville for the entertainment activities from 8 to 11 p.m. Among these are three Chapel Hill based groups – Dave Holt and Burr Beard, Touchstone, and Cane Creek Cloggers. Also scheduled are the Mac Bemford Old Time String Band from upper state New York; the O.K. Bayou Band from Richmond, Va.; Cub Hill, Baltimore, Md.; Green County's Swift Creek group; the Fiddle Puppet Cloggers from Washington, D. C., and Greenville's home team, the world champion Greengrass Cloggers.

The Ninth Annual Cloggers Day Celebration and Workshop has been endorsed by teh Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Pitt County committee on America's 400th Anniversary Commemoration, and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

From Tuesday, Dec. 4 through Sunday, Dec. 9, "The Nutcraker" will be presented by NCSA and the Winston-Salem Symphony at the Joan Hanes Theater, Stevens Center. For ticket information and reservations, call 725-1068.

The NCSA Orchestra will be in concert at 8:15 p.m. Thrusday, Dec. 6 in Crawford Hall on campus. Composer Karel Husa will be guest conductor. Tickets are priced at $3.

Movie Depicts Irish Crossfire

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) – "Cal," a somber movie about the agony of Ulster, is bringing home to mainland Britons what it's like to be caught in the crossfire of Northern Ireland's turmoil.

The $2.6 million film, produced by an Englishman and directed by an Irishman, was well received at the Cannes Film Festival, where its only name star, Shakespearean actress Helen Mirren, won the best actress award.

"Cal" is the latest in a string of feature films about Ulster. Most won critical praise but were financial flops because British distributors shunned them as too politically sensitive.

A few years ago, London's National Film Theater canceled showing "The Dawn," a 1936 movie about the 1920 Black and Tan War, because it was considered too provocative for English audiences.

When the movie finally got a private showing, police Special Branch agents hovered outside the theater noting who went in to see it.

"Cal," produced by David Puttnam, who made the Academy Award-winning "Chariots of Fire," breaks new ground because it is playing to a wider audience on a major circuit after a London premiere.

It's also doing good business in Dublin and was released in the United States last month.

"Cal" will premiere in Northern Ireland Nov. 12 at the Queen's University film festival in Belfast, where festival administrator Michael Open said it is "the most important film we've ever shown."

It was directed by Pat O'Connor, who has made a dozen TV documentaries on Ulster. The movie, his first feature, is based on a novel by Bernard MacLaverty, an Ulster Catholic, who wrote the screenplay.

"I don't see that Protestants should be regarded as having a South African laager mentality," O'Connor said in an interview. "Nor do I think that all Catholics should be thought of as bloodthirsty gunmen because this clearly isn't the case."

The central character is Cal McClusky, a 19-year-old Catholic sucked into the relentless cycle of sectarian violence. He's the driver for an Irish Republican Army gunman who kills a Protestant policeman. Ridden by guilt, he is unable to break free of the IRA, like many young men in the North.

Cal seeks forgiveness from the policeman's widow, a Catholic named Marcella and played with smoldering restraint by Helen Mirren.

They are helpless victims, trapped by Ireland's centuries of violence, unable to comprehend anything but their own despair. They also become lovers, but the romance is doomed by the events that brought them together and their environment.

Cal and his father, Shamie, are burned out of their home because they are Catholics living in a Protestant area. The boy is beaten by Protestant thugs. His father, who works at a meat-packing plant – a symbol of the sectarian slaughter – is driven to insanity.

John Lynch, 21, a Catholic from the flashpoint border town of Newry, was plucked from a London drama school for the role of Cal. He makes an impressive screen debut and gives the character flesh and blood.

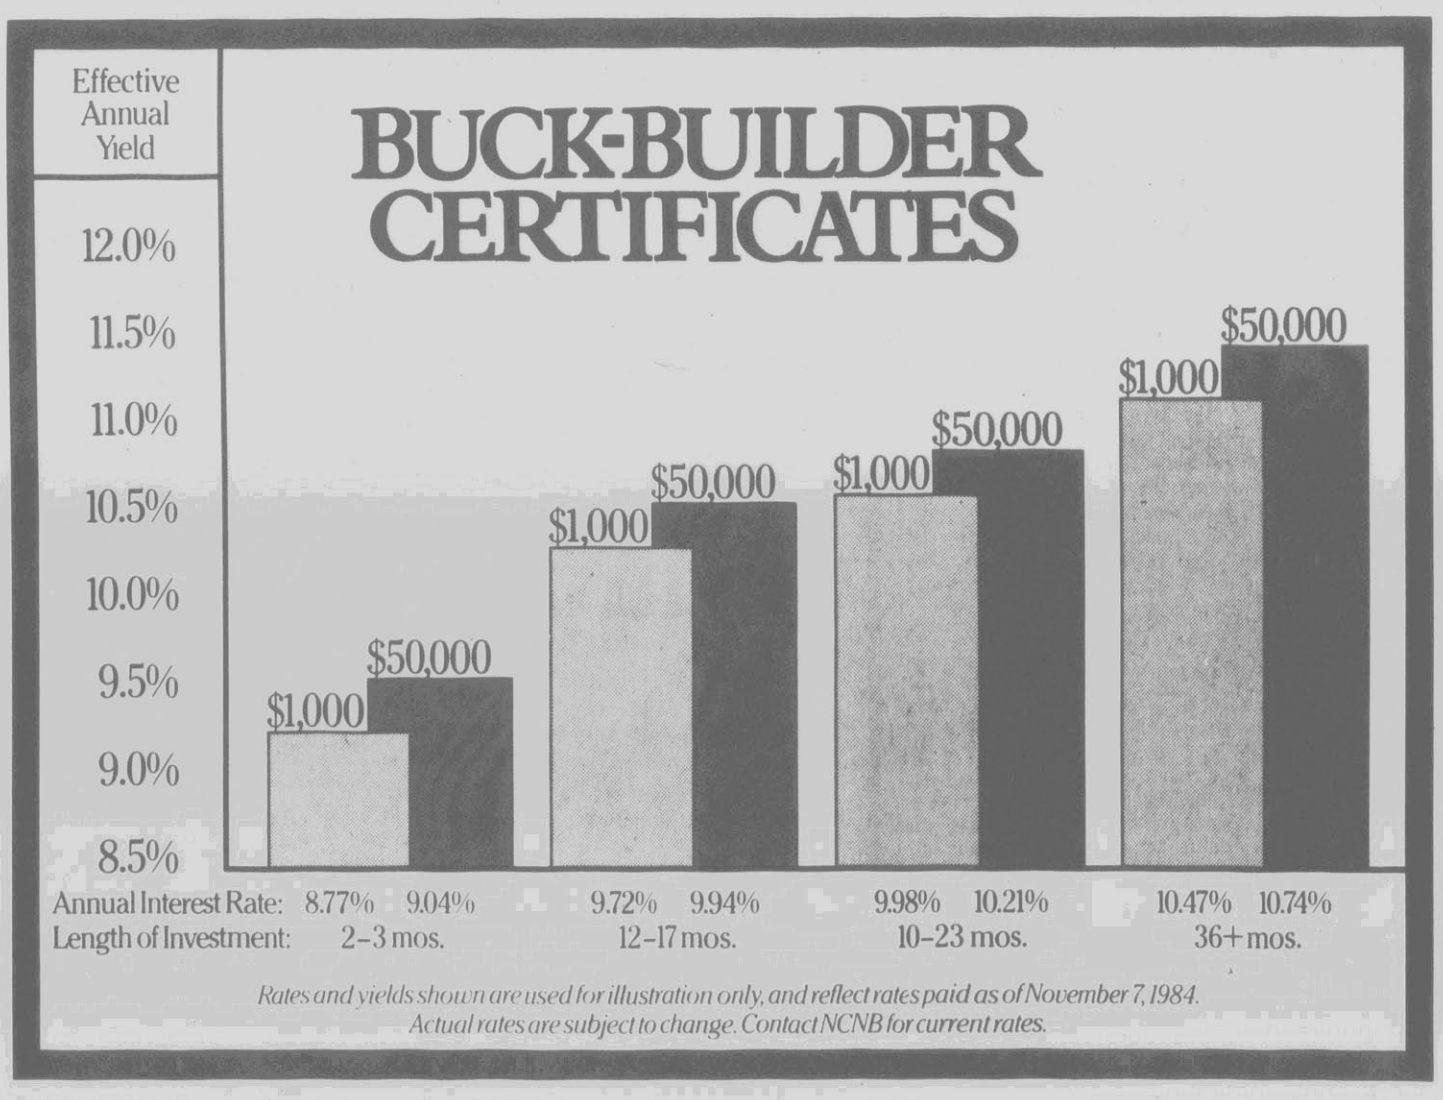

Stamp News

Most school children know that Abraham Lincoln's birthday is Feb. 12. But few know that is also the birthday of Alden Partridge, a pioneer in promoting military education in civilian institutions. Partridge will be honored on a new stamp in the Great Americans Series to be issued on Feb. 12. The birthday coincidence can make a good trivia question.

Jersey, in the English Channel, has issued two beautifully designed stamps for its Christmas 1984 set. Featured are two Jersey hybrid orchids. Both orchids are from one of the finest privately owned orchid collections in the world, created in Jersey by the late Eric Young.

The first U.S. souvenir sheet was issued for the International Philatelic Exhibition on 1926 held in New York City.

Old Cemetery In Oil Refinery Field

By KRISTIN GILGER
Times-Picayune, States-Item

GARYVILLE, La. (AP) — The huge tanks hover over the cemetery, a tiny patch of green trees and crumbling stone.

A chain-link fence topped with barbed wire separates the oil tanks, machinery and tool sheds from the concrete crypts that settle at crazy angles into the soft, uneven ground.

An iron cross leans against a nearby tree. The name is no longer legible, but a few hand-painted letters remain. They read: "Dide 75 old years."

The cemetery, buried deep within the Marathon Petroleum Co.'s Garyville refinery, holds the remains of descendants of slaves who once lived and worked at the San Francisco Plantation in St. John the Baptist Parish.

They were buried here long before Marathon's predecessor, ECOL, bought the surrounding sugarcane fields in 1974 and built a massive oil complex.

But on days such as All Saints Day, relatives and friends make their way through the refinery, escorted by guards, to pay their respects.

They leave homemade bouquets and stand for a moment, silent. Then they stroll through the graveyard, looking at other tombstones, talking and remembering.

They follow no path through the cemetery. There is none, just grass and trees growing between the scattered headstones, the moss-covered crypts and the more recent, enameled tombstones that dot the half-acre plot.

Myrna Adams could not even count the number of relatives she has buried in the cemetery. They include her mother, great-grandmother, great-grandfather, aunt, uncle and others.

The majority of the graves belong to the Baloney family, but there are other familiar names within the parish's black community. Names such as Dunn, Green, Johnson, Williams, Joseph.

They or their forebearers were among the 100 or more families who tended the cane fields or worked in the sugar mills of San Francisco Plantation in the early 1900s.

Winnie Lodrigues of Garyville, whose family owned the plantation from 1904 to 1974, said many of the families are the descendants of plantation slaves.

They stayed, and they were buried in a cemetery set aside at a distance from the house. That cemetery no longer stands, she said.

In about 1910, a new cemetery was founded at the present site when a plantation worker was buried under a big oak tree, Lodrigues said. The man's name was Bishop, so the cemetery became known as "Bishop's," she said.

"They were always very faithful about going to see their dead," she said. "Every year, about a week before All Saints Day, I would see them pass by the sugar house with their shovels and cane knives, going to take care of the graves. Some would make paper wreaths — the kind made out of different colored paper — or bring candles or flowers from their gardens.

"When we sold the plantation, many of the old ones asked, 'Where are we going to be buried now?'" Lodrigues said. "So we asked that the cemetery be kept open and the few remaining ones be buried there if they wanted."

John Fusilier, division controller for Marathon, said several burials have taken place in the cemetery over the past few years.

"The cemetery's still in use," he said. "We keep it up and let people come to visit any time."

N. Y. Met Featuring Marathon

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The Met Marathon, a special four-hour program featuring memorable Metropolitan Opera debuts, will air form 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1 over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. (Locally, the program will be broadcast over WITN Radio, Washington, N.C., 930 on the radio dial).

This program opens the 45th consecutive season of Texaco-Metropolitan Opera radio broadcasts and precedes the upcoming seson of twenty live opera broadcasts which begins on Saturday, Dec. 8 with Rossini's "Il Barbiere de Siviglia." The season marks the first full stereo coverage via satellite to all opera radio network stations.

Saturday's program will focus on memorable debuts from past Metropolitan Opera radio broadcasts from 1938 through the present as well as interviews with many Met artists. Among those included will be female stars Judith Blegen, Grace Bumbry, Montserrat Caballe, Christa Ludwig, Roberta Peters, Leontyne Price, Rise Stevens and male stars Placido Domingo, George London, James McCracken, Cornell MacNeil, Sherrill Milnes, James Morris, and Luciano Pavarotti among others.

Listeners to the marathon are invited to call a toll-free number to receive a special "Broadcast Guide." The guide, a gift from the Met, includes information on all the broadcasts and telecasts from the Metropolitan Opera this season, the stories of the operas, a station listing and other information.

In the continental United States, the toll-free number is 1-800-638-1984. Listeners in Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico can write for their guide to: The Met, Box 5, New York, N. Y., 10023.

The marathon program is made possible by Texaco Inc. as part of the 1984-85 season, and by generous assistance from radio station WQXR, New York.

Yuletide Events In Portsmouth

PORTSMOUTH, VA. — Traditional annual festivities are now underway in the city of Portsmouth. A special event is the Second Annual Trolley Car Christmas Tour which takes visitors to the old town area of Portsmouth and to Coleman Nursery. The nursery is noted for its east coast's largest collection of animated Christmas displays.

The trolley trip to the nursery traverses a scenic route through historical districts of the city — Olde Town and Park View, and return through areas of historic Port Norfolk.

The trollery rides are at 10 a.m., 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Fridays, and every half hour between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Saturdays. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children and senior citizens.

For information on other activities in Portsmouth and for trolley ride reservations, call 804/627-0150 between 11 a.m. and 2 p.. Tuesdays through Sundays.

Oldtime Screen Beauties Return In Nostalgic Photo Book

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those oldtime beauties whose lovely faces once illuminated the silver screen are with us again.

They can be found in a handsome new book, "Return Engagement: Faces to Remember — Then and Now", Clarkson N. Potter, $24.95. James Watters has written the text, and famed fashion photographer Horst has provided the up-to-date pictures of 74 actresses, aged 60 to 95.

Many of the actresses have remained in the public eye, such as Katharine Hepburn, Bette Davis, Claudette Colbert, Lillian Gish, Ginger Rogers, Dorothy McGuire and Sylvia Sidney.

Others were found in retirement or obscurity by Watters and Horst. A surprising number live in the Santa Barbara, Calif., area.

But practically all retain their oldtime beauty, at least through Horst's expert lens.

Mary Astor, Humphrey Bogart's co-star in "The Maltese Falcon," lives at the Motion Picture Country House in the San Fernando Valley.

"But I am not on charity, I pay my way," she says. She has suffered a heart attack and two strokes but can still sit in a yoga position at 78.

Evelyn Venable, 71, sweet-faced leading lady of the 1930s, resides in suburban Brentwood with 13 cats and thousands of books. Widow of cameraman Hal Mohr, she taught at UCLA after her acting career ended. "My students never heard of Evelyn Venable," she says.

Gale Sondergaard, 85, first winner of the supporting actress Academy Award in 1936 for "Anthony Adverse" and classic film villainess, lives in the rundown Echo Park district of Los Angeles. Victim of the studio blacklist, she bears no bitterness about the 20 years she was unable to work in films.

"I personally have put the blacklist behind me," she says.

Annabella, wife and co-star of Tyrone Power, has a home in Paris and a farm at Biarritz but often visits the United States. Now 75, she never remarried and still reveres the memory of Power. "We were always friendly to the end," she says.

Ina Claire, 88, who made her stage debut in 1907 and became a great star in light comedy on Broadway and in Hollywood, has long been a figure in San Francisco society. She delines to remininisce. "The memories do not linger on," she says.

Vera Hruba Ralston, the Czech ice skater who became the protegee and wife of Republic pictures boss Herbert J. Yates, lives with her second husband, Charles Alva, in an estate on the Santa Barbara coast. Still athletic at 63, she says: "I never felt so good in my life as I do now.".

Greta Nissen, 78, resides with husband Stuart Eckert on a 1,400 ranch near President Reagan's in the Santa Ynez mountains north of Santa Barbara. Howard Hughes cast the Norwegian actress in "Hell's Angels," then replaced her with Jean Harlow when the film was converted to sound.

"I get an occasional birthday card from a fan; they must be pretty old," she said.

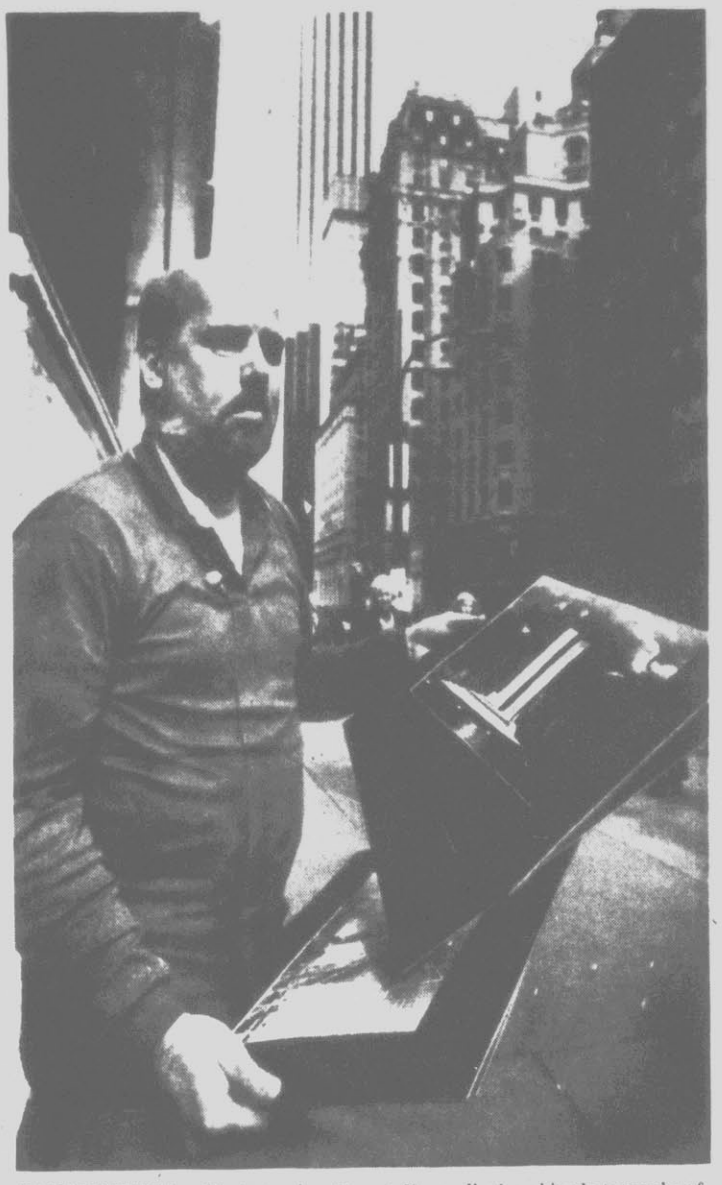

Virginia Cherrill, 76, Charlie Chaplin's leading lady in "City Lights" and first wife of Cary Grant, is retired in Santa Barbara with husband Florian Martini, an aircraft engineer. She said about Grant: "Cary was always married to his career."

Pola Negri, siren of the silents, has been a resident of San Antonio for many years. At 88, she maintains Rudolph Valentino was the great love of her life — "we had only one year together," she says.

Olive Carey, widow of Harry Carey and a fixture in John Ford Westerns, lives on a ranch near Santa Barbara and remains as crusty as ever in her 90s. Acting to her was "nothing but making all 12 faces."

Laura LaPlante, flapper of the 1920s, still wears bobbed hair at 80. She and her husband, producer Irving Asher, make their home in Rancho Mirage near Palm Springs. "I can't sit though those old movies of mine, and I just don't understand how anyone else can," she says.

Florence Eldridge, widow and co-star of Fredric March, is another Santa Barbara dweller. She is in her early 80s, travels and takes adult education classes. "It's T.S. Eliot I'm studying now," she says, "and he isn't easy."

Mitchell Critical Of D.C. Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General John Mitchell says the District of Columbia government is like "the Amos 'n Andy Taxi Cab Company" and criticizes the city's newfound authority to issue bonds.

Mitchell, in an interview published in the bond trade publication, "Credit Markets," said: "I have never been in favor of the nation's capital issuing its own bonds. I certainly wouldn't be until they stop running the government like the Amos 'n Andy Taxi Cab Company," a reference to the company owned by the black characters in the 1950s radio and television comedy show.

David Clarke, chairman of the D.C. Council, called Mitchell's comments "racist" and said the city stacked up well compared to the Nixon administration. The district's mayor and most members of the city council are black. Clarke is white.

Mitchell was convicted in the Watergate scandal that forced the resignation of President Nixon.

Anti-Nuke Party May Hold Key To Australian Elections

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A small anti-nuclear party supported by a popular rock star and Australia's sole Nobel Prize-winning author could keep Prime Minister Bob Hawke's Labor Party government from gaining control of the Senate in national elections Dec. 1.

Hawke, riding a wave of popularity, called the elections 16 months ahead of time, figuring that the timing would give the Labor Party control of the Senate and maintain its wide majority in House of Representatives.

But polls indicate the message of the tiny Nuclear Disarmament Party (NDP), formed in July, is gaining ground and threatens Labor's drive for a Senate majority. The message also is sharply critical of the U.S. nuclear policy, which traditionally has had the support of Australia.

The NDP was organized with the solitary aim of making Australia a nuclear-free country. It would close U.S. military bases here and halt the mining and export of Australia's huge uranium reserves.

The NDP also says the United States must be forced to return to talks with the Soviet Union on ending the arms race and that Australia should support neighboring New Zealand in its dispute with Washington on nuclear weapons.

Dr. Michael Denbrough, a physician who is the NDP leader, said, "We are ordinary citizens from all walks of life ... making a stand for survival. We are talking about survival and death, not party politics."

Acknowledging that it has few resources and little organization, the NDP has attracted the support of several leading Australians, including Patrick White, winner of the 1973 Nobel Prize for literature, and rock star Peter Garrett.

The bald-headed Garrett, lead singer of the popular rock band Midnight Oil, is running as an NDP Senate candidate.

"I'm not a lunatic ... skinhead who likes violence," he told a recent rally. "I believe in peace and believe the nuclear disarmament issue is the single most important election issue."

Polls indicate small but growing support for the party and this could be enough to rob Hawke of control of the Senate.

One poll, by the Bulletin magazine, reported NDP support rose recently from 3 percent to 8 percent and there was a chance that the party would win one Senate seat at the government's expense. The party is running candidates for the Senate in all states and a handful of seats in the House of Representatives.

The NDP's warnings about nuclear war appear to have had an impact. A poll by the newspaper The Austalian reported 58 percent of voters surveyed around the country said they would be influenced in the balloting booth by the nuclear issue.

"The formation of the Nuclear Disarmament Party seems to have attracted the enthusiasm of not a few potential voters and is a new and probably significant factor in the election," The Australian said in an editorial.

Hawke hopes to win control of the Senate and increase his large majority in the House of Representatives. But while the government is widely expected to score a big victory, Hawke and other Australian Labor Party leaders have acknowledged the NDP could deny them a Senate majority.

Contending that a vote for the NDP would be wasted, Hawke has said that "only a government and not some minority group in the Senate can do anything about disarmament. ... No small group can determine what a country will do."

The government appears to be slightly embarrassed by the NDP because the Labor Party has traditionally portrayed itself as the anti-nuclear peace party in Australia.

But Hawke has toned down many Labor Party policies in the name of responsible government. A 1983 Labor Party election promise to end all mining of uranium was shelved and Hawke has championed close defense ties with the United States since coming to office.

Novelist White, a long-time Labor Party supporter who helped launch the NDP, assailed Hawke in typical Australian campaign talk as a hypocrite who is "screaming from under his cockatoo hairdo, screaming the platitudes he's (learned) by heart."

"From now on it is our duty to start exercising hate and suspicion to unite all of us in creating faith in life and human kind," White told a public rally.

White's most recent novels were "A Fringe of Leaves" (1977) and "The Twyborn Affair" (1980).

The NDP has voiced little or no faith in the United States, charging that it is just as likely to launch a nuclear first strike as the Soviet Union. The party is demanding the closing of three U.S. intelligence-gathering bases in Australia, claiming they are vital to Washington's ability to launch a first strike.

Said party leader Denbrough: "We've had the situation where the U.S. has always been ahead in the arms race and the U.S.S.R. has been trying to catch up. We accept it's no good us going round giving little moral lectures to the United States or the Soviet Union. What we can do though is realize we are now part of America's nuclear war winning strategy, an integral part of this madness."

The Hawke government denies the U.S. bases play any nuclear role, saying they are vital to monitoring arms limitation agreements between the superpowers.

The NDP also wants Australia to stand behind New Zealand in its defense dispute with the United States. New Zealand's Prime Minister David Lange has refused to allow U.S. nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed warships into the country's ports despite ANZUS, the defense alliance of Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz has warned that New Zealand could wreck ANZUS and Australia has supported Washington. Australia allows U.S. nuclear-powered warships into its harbors and sidesteps a ban on nuclear weapons by never asking if the vessels carry them.

Exports By Ecuador's Shrimp Farms Hurting U.S. Netters

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Men who catch shrimp with nets have tough competition shaping up from exotic "farms" where a new breed of shrimpers raise shrimp like peas or chickens.

Down in equatorial Ecuador, with three or four crops a year possible due to perpetual summer, the annual export to the U.S. has boomed from 5 million pounds of shrimp in the early 1970s to 51.4 million in 1983 — most of it from farms.

Last year, with vastly greater effort and expense, Louisiana's 30,000 commercial shrimpers produced 48.9 million pounds.

Shrimp farms also are doing well in Colombia, Peru, Panama and Brazil. There are efforts to set up farms on the Texas coast, near Brownsville.

Tee-John Mialjevich of New Iberia, president of the Concerned Shrimpers of Louisiana, sees Ecuador's success as further evidence that there ought to be import quotas on shrimp.

"We've already had problems with competition from foreign shrimping fleets because they have lower fuel costs and some countries subsidize their shrimping industry," he said.

"Now, if foreign shrimp are supplied from a pond, that takes away the high overhead and operating expenses faced by fishermen. These shrimp are coming in dirt cheap because growers don't have to work about fuel, boat repairs or insurance.

"And when they are harvested, (foreign) growers use a seine and laborers they might pay $1 a day. There's no boat, no shipyard, no propeller — some of the things I face each year as a ship owner."

Actually, said William Chauvin, an industry consultant, farm grown shrimp are seldom "dirt cheap" because they are good enough to command the market price.

"There are cheaper imports coming in from Asia but shrimp coming in from Ecuador is not dumped at lower prices because importers can get the market price," said Chauvin, a member of the Louisiana Seafood Promotion and Marketing Board.

The key factor in the competition, he added, is quality and the men who catch shrimp at sea are going to have to do something about it.

As an example, Chauvin cited a chain of seafood restaurants which buys 15 million pounds of shrimp a year and has decided the farm-raised shrimp are better.

Shrimpers who trawl the seas can't afford to let that kind of business get away.

"You get a shrimp boat that goes out 20 days, those first-week shrimp he caught and iced down cannot be too fresh when they are brought in," Chauvin said. "But on a shrimp farm, they harvest this morning and by mid-day those shrimp are graded out, packed in boxes and in the freezer."

Thin House

LONDON (AP) — London's narrowest building, a six-foot-wide house that was advertised as of "interest to thin people," was sold at auction for the equivalent of $41,000.

Bidding on the five-story, nine-room house at 110 Goldhawk Road in West London's Shepherd's Bush neighborhood began at $25,000 and ended three minutes later.

James Cooper, a 56-year-old London lawyer, said after he won the bidding: "I am not particularly thin, but I have managed to squeeze inside. It is a funny little place, and I think it will have to have special furniture."

U.S. Looking More Like The Old South

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The United States has grown closer to the Old South in such things as localism, violence and religion, but regional differences are unlikely to disappear, a University of North Carolina sociologist says.

"I think we underrate the importance of regional differences in general," said John Shelton Reed, an adjunct professor of American Studies at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Reed, who wrote a book called "The Enduring South" 15 years ago, said recent follow-ups showed regions are maintaining their identities. But he said where differences eroded, "it's not a case of the South looking more like the rest of the country, but a case of the rest of the country looking more like the South."

Southerners have distinguished themselves over the years for their localism, their tolerance of guns and violence and the depths of their religious beliefs, Reed said.

When asked in a Gallup Poll: "What man that you've heard or read about, living anywhere in the world today, do you most admire?" nearly a third of white Southerners in 1965 chose a family member, a friend or some other local figure instead of an international celebrity.

"They were almost twice as likely to give that kind of response as non-Southerners," Reed said in a paper on converging regions. "When the question was repeated in 1980, the percentage of Southerners who refused to give their highest admiration to some public figure had risen from 32 percent to 38 percent. But the percentage of non-Southerners who have this cranky, Southern type of response had risen too from 18 percent to 33 percent."

Tolerance of violence was determined through attitudes and behaviors surrounding ownership and control of guns.

Reed said slightly more than 60 percent of Southerners opposed a ban on private handgun ownership in 1965 and in 1981.

"But the regional difference has decreased — because in 1965 most non-Southerners supported such a law (only 43 percent opposed it) and in 1981 most (51 percent) had come to share the 'Southern' point of view," Reed wrote.

The South's homicide rate — 50 percent higher than the national average in 1965 — had been whittled to 25 percent above the national average by 1980 despite a 14 percent increase in Southern homicides. In the same period, the rate in the North Central states increased by 20 percent, the Northeast's rate rose by 41 percent and the West's rate rose 77 percent, Reed said.

"We need to remember that the South is not the only New World society with a culture of honor and violence, the sort of culture that produces the domestic and neighborly killings that make up the bulk of the homicide rate," Reed wrote. "When you put together Southern whites, blacks, Hispanics and add a good measure of organized crime, what you get is Miami — which had the highest homicide rate in the country in 1980, roughly three times the national average."

On religion, Reed looked at the number of respondents who had been to church in the preceding week, how many believed in the Devil, how many believed the Bible is the literal word of God, how many watch religious television programming and the importance of religion in their lives.

The only convergence among regions came in spiritual rebirths.

"In 1962, 37 percent of Southern Protestants told the Gallup Poll they had experienced a moment of "sudden religious insight or awakening.' Eighteen years later, in 1980, 46 percent said they had — a 9 percent increase. But the regional difference decreased a bit because the non-Southern Protestants who had been through such experiences also increased, even faster, from 19 percent ot 32 percent."

Reed said the rare instances of convergence might signal growing pessimism in the United States.

"Southerners may have learned not to expect a great deal from the commonwealth," he wrote. "I believe that there is an individualist ethic more common in the South than elsewhere, an ethic that says: in the last analysis, you ... are on your own. ... Perhaps the last 20 years have brought some non-Southern Americans around to that same conclusion.

"The experience of defeat and frustration, a sense of the intractability and perversity of the world, the realization that sheer will is not enough — all of these Southern attributes are shared more widely now than a generation ago. Our public life does not produce many unalloyed heroes these days. And the achievements of even the greatest have been sullied by what we have learned about their private lives.

"Better ... not to expect too much from a government that seems increasingly unable even to protect its citizens. And what citizen, these days, expects any lasting sense of worth from public life? For that, and for consolation and reassurance in an indifferent and dangerous world, you turn to religion."

Reed said he didn't expect regional difference to disappear despite migrations and modernization of industry.

THE TALE OF THE EIGHT OF DIAMONDS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Opening lead: Ace of ◇.

The Eight of Diamonds was wizened and gray, but there was a spark in his eye that time could not extinguish. As he spoke, his sense of humor showed through every word.

"I know that I do not have a reputation for winning tricks. But that very reputation can prove to be an asset. Well, perhaps you do have to be something of a con artist to take a trick early in the play when you are only an eight, but a little larceny is good for the soul.

"I had barely turned 21 and I was playing in my first major championship. You might not like my bid of two no trump but, believe me, I was so nervous I could think of nothing else. Partner needed to hear no more from me than a spade cue-bid to barge into a club slam.

"West led the ace of diamonds and then shifted to the jack of hearts. I won in dummy and surveyed my prospects. Needless to say, I did not like what I saw. I could get rid of one of my spades on dummy's high heart, or two of the board's spades on my diamonds, but I would still be stranded with a spade loser. It looked as if I was going to launch my international career by going down in a slam!

"There was no legitimate line to make my slam, but I did spot a way to take advantage of an unwary West. I came to hand with the king of trumps and casually launched myself into the attack as if I was going to be ruffed in dummy. West certainly thought so, for he followed with a low diamond. But I did not ruff! Instead, I sluffed a spade from the table.

"When East could not beat me the slam was home. I quickly drew two more rounds of trumps with the ace and queen, then took two more spade discards on the high diamonds. Now I could ruff one spade on the board and discard one on the king of hearts, so the 'impossible' slam was made."

CHRISTMAS GIFT GUIDE

Faced with a gift-giving dilemma?

'Tis the season for books, the simplest way to please everyone on your Christmas list

By ERNIE SAXTON

Are you ready for Christmas shopping? Before you answer, take this little Christmas shopping quiz, and then we'll talk.

1. Between November 23rd and December 24th I expect
   (a) To stand in lines most of the time.
   (b) To be hospitalized for exhaustion.
   (c) To kill for a parking space.
2. I will choose presents for family and friends
   (a) By the computer-selection-process method.
   (b) On December 24th, in desperation.
   (c) Knowing I'll see them on the white elephant table at the next community bazaar.
3. To me, Christmas shopping is
   (a) Here again already?
   (b) An annual ritual that must be endured, like the flu season.
   (c) My personal vision of heaven.

If you found yourself nodding in recognition at any of the answers, then holiday gift-giving has caused you a bit of anxiety for you.

Fear not. I have a simple solution to the Christmas shopping blues that will once again bring joy to both gift-givers and receivers. Fifteen years ago I discovered a way to give everyone on my Christmas list the same thing (thereby simplifying shopping trips considerably), but at the same time giving everyone a gift tailored to his or her own needs and interests (thereby making for a truly appreciative gift receiver). The answer to this riddle: Buy books.

Great gift idea

Books make great gifts because, with a little effort, you can find a book on virtually any subject matter. Over the past few years I've given as gifts books on such diverse subjects as bovine anatomy (to a dairy farmer friend), dollhouse construction, the pseudonyms of mystery and detective fiction writers and Civil War atrocity photos, just to name a few.

Even those on your list who aren't readers normally will be easy to buy for, if you think for a moment. For instance, an uncle who loves to brag that he hasn't read a book since high school (he really means novels) — gets a book every Christmas that he thanks me for profusely.

Why? Because I always pick a book on his lifelong passion — cars. I've given him everything from a picture book on antique cars to the latest Chilton Auto Repair Manual. He loves his books more than the boring shirt and tie combos I used to give him.

Books for hobbies

I give cookbooks to an aunt who spends rather spare time in the kitchen, photography books to my shutterbug kid sister, and household project books to my do-it-yourself dad.

In fact, most of the books I buy for gifts fall into the do-it-yourself and hobby categories. After 15 years as a book-giver, I've learned that these are the kinds of books that get more than one reading.

I enjoy giving a gift that I know will be used all year long, or even for years to come. And every time my uncle gets out his Chilton Manual to do a tune-up, he's going to remember his favorite nephew who thought enough to get him a gift he can really use.

I've been doing my Christmas shopping early this year. I've discovered a series of books that are going to make terrific gifts for my do-it-yourself family, on subjects ranging from furniture building to developing your own pictures.

The books are written by Ed and Stevie Baldwin, a husband and wife team who founded and direct The Family Workshop, a creative idea company in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

The Baldwins are experts at presenting complicated how-to information in an easy-to-read, easy-to-follow format. You may already know them through their how-to columns syndicated in over 400 newspapers nationwide or their craft demonstrations on television. Below is a list of some of their books available for this year's Christmas shopping.

Building Outdoor Structures and Building Outdoor Furniture (both $10.95) provide complete plans for making 30 projects for the garden, yard and patio. The projects are both practical and stylish, as is evident from the color photos of each finished project.

This is a book suitable for both novice and experienced home builders. Projects include everything from patio furniture and storage sheds to fences and gazebos.

For parents looking for a way to channel the inexhaustible energy of their kids, the Baldwins offer Toys to Ride ($10.95). It includes plans for 30 riding toys that are propelled either by pushing or pedaling.

Color photos and clear instructions help make this the perfect project book for any parent (or grandparent) with a basic home tool kit.

Constructing toys

In the same vein, The Great Mechanical Wooden Toy Book ($10.95) is filled with everything you need to know for constructing six toys that move.

For years I've treasured a mechanical wooden toy carousel that's been passed down through my family for generations. I'll pass it on to my daughter some day, but I'm also going to start a new family tradition by making her the silly but wonderful "Do-Nothing Machine" found in this book.

Other projects (all depicted in full color) include an oil well pump jack, a cog dog, a carousel and a fantastic freight train with a working water car.

In July, for her birthday, I gave my camera-crazy sister the Baldwins' Focus On Photography ($12.95), an excellent introduction to the basics for beginners of any age. It helped her choose a 35mm camera and the accessories she needed, like additional lenses and filters.

For Christmas I'm giving her the second Family Workshop photography book — Darkroom Designs and Techniques ($12.95). In down-to-earth language, it shows how to plan a home darkroom, with electrical and plumbing specifications, storage tips, equipment you'll need and much more. Also covered are chemicals, developing procedures, and advanced printing techniques.

Quilting fever

Like millions of others, my oldest sister and numerous aunts and cousins have quilting fever. Consequently, the Baldwins' The Quilted Clothing Collection ($10.95) makes it easy for me to cover six gifts this Christmas.

The books will go to a half dozen quilters who, after covering the beds with enough quilts to last a millennium, are ready to move on to more challenging projects.

In fact, there's an entire wardrobe of projects here, everything from formal evening wear to hunting vests. All projects are shown finished in full-color, with complete patterns and instructions.

The last Family Workshop book I'm going to buy for Christmas is The First Family Computer Book. Craft experts they may be, but the Baldwins know how to translate computerese into plain English.

This lucid, non-technical introduction to computers underscores just how good the authors are at presenting technical information to general readers. The humor found throughout the book makes it a natural for kids. I'm going to keep this Family Workshop book for myself.

All the Family Workshop books mentioned here are published by Chilton Book Company. They are available in bookstores nationwide, or they may be ordered directly by writing to: Chilton Book Company, Dept. M, Radnor, PA 19089.

Mystic Seaport delivers old-fashioned Christmas

For many people, Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas without a visit to Mystic Seaport.

An evening Lantern-light Tour of the Seaport is becoming a holiday tradition, one that charges family visits early and always delivers the Christmas spirit early.

Other seasonal activities at the maritime museum include Yuletime Christmas tours, a Star of Bethlehem Show at the Planetarium, Children's Victorian Tours, and a community caroling. And decorations in the Seaport's 19th-century village — from wreaths on doorways to evergreen trees atop ships' masts — make any excursion to the Seaport a merry one.

From December 7 to 22, one-hour walking tours leave from the adjacent Seamen's Inne from 5 to 9 PM, bringing small groups of visitors on a sensory visit to another era.

Leaving the 20th century behind, they will spend the next hour smelling gingerbread, dancing to a fiddler's tune in the tavern, singing Christmas carols and meeting a cast of characters from the past.

Housewives, sailors, fishermen and sea captains all appear in the lantern-lit journey that unfolds like scenes in a play, one in which everyone has a role. There's even a surprise appearance by St. Nicholas, the 19th-century forerunner of Santa Claus.

Led by a guide in the costume of the last century, visitors are welcomed as guests in several historic homes, learning as they go how Christmas customs evolved in past generations. In the course of the evening, participants also go aboard the whaleship Charles W. Morgan and walk through the cramped quarters below decks where sailors spent many a holiday at sea, thousands of miles from their New England homes.

Though the Seaport streets may be dusted with snow, tour-goers are warmed by open hearth fireplaces and pot-bellied stoves along their way.

When the tour is over, many choose to enjoy a traditional roast goose dinner, complete with all the trimmings, at Seamen's Inne Wassail and plum pudding are other treats to sample from the menu.

Tickets go on sale early (October 1) for the tours and may be scarce as the holiday approaches. Another alternative to the evening programs are group daytime tours that explore the theme, "Christmas at Sea and Ashore."

Escorted by costumed guides, groups of 15 or more are given an intimate look at the Seaport's village and exhibits on daytime tours from December 1-23.

The one-hour tours trace the development of Christmas customs in the early, middle and late 1800s. Before or after the tour, groups may purchase lunch at Seamen's Inne. Advance tour reservations are required through the Seaport's Travel Development department (adult groups) or the Education department, (child groups).

Children can also take their own "hands-on" tour of the Seaport on the three Saturdays before Christmas: December 8, 15 and 22. The four-hour program includes a variety of craft activities and games from the Victorian era. The Planetarium show is also included. Reservations are made through the Seaport's Education Department.

"The Star of Bethlehem," a half-hour Planetarium Show that illustrates theories about the origin of the Christmas star, is scheduled December 3 to 23, both days and evenings. There is an additional charge for private group showings, but daytime showings are free to Seaport visitors.

On December 23, a community carol sing brings thousands to celebrate the season with song in the Seaport's Anchor Circle.

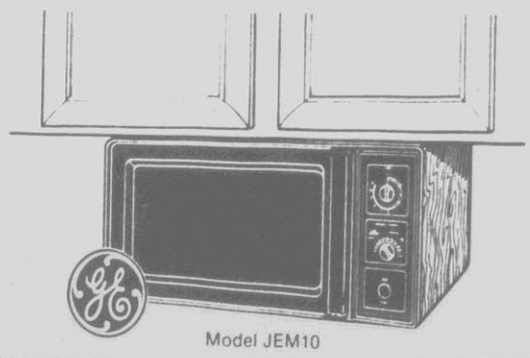

No matter what the day or occasion, December is a favorite month for families to visit the Seaport. The onset of chilly weather does not limit the offerings of the nation's largest maritime museum, and all the 40 exhibits and three major ships remain open to sightseers.

Local garden clubs decorate many of the Seaport buildings as part of an annual competition.

Children and pets together: A natural at holiday time

HAVE A "BEAR-Y" MERRY HOLIDAY with best friends! Dressed in holiday red jackets and vests, these toddler boys are suited for success in a Teddy Bear world. Their holiday outfits are available in most JCPenney stores, and their bear friends at select JCPenney stores nationwide. Whether the best friend is another child or a Teddy, the friendship they share is their special gift from one to another.

On the top of every child's list to Santa you will find written in red, "Puppy" or "Kitty." In fact, dogs and cats are the most popular pets in the country! But, to find one under the tree would be a child's dream come true.

On the big day, choose a festive ribbon so the pet will be "dressed-for-giving" (though, for the pet's safety, the ribbon should be removed immediately).

Chances are the child will be specially dressed for the holidays in "kitten soft" velvet, and ribbons and lace of his or her own.

Debra Chambliss, JCPenney's Children's Fashion Advisor says, "Children respond to softness whether in a kitten's fur or the softness of clothing.

"Even holiday colors this year resemble the animal world, like the black and white of Dalmatian puppies. Or the winter white of a fluffy kitten. Blue ribbon winners are also rich, jewel tones, and delicate, icy pastels.

"Silhouettes can be wide and flowing or sleek and drop waisted or even pinafored. And boys will look like little men in jackets, vests and ties for dressing up in a Teddy Bear world."

As a parent, you may have been thinking for some time that your child's life would be enriched by a pet — and you are right! The closeness a child develops with a pet is of extreme importance to his or her social and emotional well being.

In today's world with working parents and changing family patterns, a pet can be a very stable element in a child's changing world. And a pet gives a child an exchange of affection and friendship with no strings attached.

But Mom and Dad, don't be fooled by your child's heartfelt promise of "I'll take care of him, I promise!" You will be the primary caretaker of the pet, especially if your child is a pre-schooler or toddler.

You can, however, give the child small responsibilities like pouring the food into the dish or brushing the pet. Increase responsibilities as your child gets older. Even though the tasks may be small, the child will benefit from his responsibilities.

"If a real animal is not possible," says Mrs. Chambliss, "a plush animal can be a viable substitute. In fact, the range of possibilities can be greater — a real pet raccoon would be out of the question, but what about a furry plush one? He could be a best friend to take everywhere!"

By all means, consider giving your child a pet this holiday season. You'll be giving much more than a present, it will be a gift that will give your child years of love.

CHEESE TOMATO CROCKS

A microwave oven gives you the time to make holiday memories

The holiday season, that wonderful time of the year, is almost here. Soon we'll be enjoying evenings by the fire, caroling in the snow, and tables ladened with festive holiday food.

Unfortunately, such foods may mean weeks of painstaking preparation and long hours in the hot kitchen that take time away from enjoying all the other activities.

That's why a microwave oven can be such a help, say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation. When your busy lifestyle leaves you with little time to spend in the kitchen, the microwave oven comes to the rescue and lets you still prepare all the family's seasonal treats.

Here's a microwave recipe for a wonderful fudge that takes only four minutes to make. As delicious as it is easy, this fudge makes a perfect gift to share with neighbors and friends.

PEANUT CHO-CO NUT FUDGE

- 1 12 oz. package chocolate chips
- ½ cup chunky peanut butter
- 1 14 oz. can sweetened condensed milk
- ½ cup coconut
- ½ cup chopped walnuts

Melt chocolate chips at MEDIUM HIGH for 2½ minutes. Stir until melted.

Add peanut butter and condensed milk and blend. Cook at MEDIUM HIGH for 1½ minutes.

Add coconut and nuts. Pour into an 8½"x12" buttered dish.

Cool before cutting.

Whether it's a steaming holiday punch, quick hors d'oeuvres for drop-in company, or the Christmas ham itself, your versatile microwave oven lets you spend less time in the kitchen and more time making holiday memories.

Focus on holiday gift-giving features the universal language of photography

Photographs spread joy all year long, but are especially well-suited to the holiday season by lending a personal touch to your gift-giving.

Some new and different ideas for holiday gifts suggested by the experts at Fuji Photo Film U.S.A. include enlargements of your own color photographs, personally inscribed and beautifully mounted and framed; a sampling of various types of film suited for any picture-taking situation tucked away in those stockings hung with such care; or one of the many new, exciting photographic books available at local retailers that will help inspire the budding enthusiast or confirmed fan among your friends and family.

Picture this!

Photographs capture those special moments and memories your friends and family will share for years to come. With a little practice and planning, anyone with basic equipment can take colorful, dynamic photographs that can serve as the perfect holiday gift.

Personalized touch

Now is the time to look through your favorite shots of family gatherings, vacations, outings and other memorable events to choose those best suited for enlarging and framing in time for holiday giving.

Or you may want to create a special image, collage or album. For example, grandparents are sure to cherish large portraits of their grandchildren and friends will treasure a framed photograph created especially for their home.

The family of Fujicolor HR color print films is especially well-suited to high quality color enlargements. Choose your photograph carefully, examining the image for sharpness, background detail and subject interest.

Decide the final size of the photograph in advance and choose a background mat and frame that best complement the photograph. Your neighborhood photo or camera retailer will be happy to give advice on printing, enlarging and framing.

The holiday season is filled with picture-taking opportunities. And a variety of films is a perfect gift idea for the budding photographer or serious hobbyist.

Fuji Film offers a variety of color films that produce critically sharp, brilliant color photographs of the highest quality in almost any picture-taking situation.

Fujicolor HR100 and HR200 color print films will capture the highlights and natural colors of outdoor daylight scenes or indoors with flash. To photograph faster action and in low light try Fujicolor HR400.

And for very low light situations or even sporting events without a flash, use Fujicolor HR1600, the fastest color print film available today.

Fuji Film's color transparency films also offer a wide variety of film speeds that are all characterized by natural color rendition, high color saturation and ultra-critical sharpness.

Fujichrome 50 and 100 are perfect for portraitures and outdoor scenes, while Fujichrome 400 offers higher film speed to capture sports action or events that occur in lower light conditions.

Great gift idea

A new book that captures the glory and excellence of America's participation in the Los Angeles 1984 Olympic Games is an ideal holiday gift for the amateur photographer or sports enthusiast on your list.

Shooting For The Gold: Portraits of America's Olympic Athletes features more than 200 full-color photographs by world renowned sports photojournalist Walter Iooss, Jr., along with text by New York Times sports columnist and Pulitzer Prize winner Dave Anderson.

The 144-page hard bound volume features inspiring images of Olympic gold medalists Carl Lewis, Mary Lou Retton, Greg Louganis, Mark Breland and Evelyn Ashford as well as American athletes competing in more than 20 other sports.

Photographer Walter Iooss, Jr. spent more than two years on assignment for Fuji Photo Film U.S.A. to produce Shooting For The Gold.

The resulting dramatic images allow the reader to share the Olympic experience as well as to own a piece of Olympic history. Fuji Film will donate all profits from sales of the book to help support America's amateur athletes. Shooting For The Gold: Portraits of America's Olympic Athletes is available through local bookstores and can be purchased for $24.95, ($29.95 after January 1). To order the book by mail contact Jameson Books, 722 Columbus Street, Ottawa, IL 61350.

If a picnic or outing is on the agenda, the SG-J500 can run on batteries, as well as AC power, so it can travel with you.

Christmas gift to education...

Plan allows parents to donate computer software to schools

Looking for that special Christmas gift for your child's favorite teacher? Computer software could be the answer.

Across the country, schools are tooling up for the computer age, many with the help of gifts and donations of hardware from parent groups and computer companies.

But most classrooms still don't have good libraries of high quality educational software to use those computers to best advantage.

Now, a leading educational software publisher is seeking to meet the challenge of helping schools acquire more quality software through a $4 million donation plan.

Timed for Christmas

The plan, offered through the holiday gift-giving season by Scarborough Systems, makes it possible for parents to donate a software program to the school of their choice when they buy any Scarborough program from a local software retailer.

Can schools really use more software? Consider the school district in Peekskill, New York, a city of 22,000 just 40 miles north of Manhattan, which is justifiably proud of its computer-related curriculum.

Peekskill elementary, middle and high schools are all equipped with modern computers. Most weren't purchased with taxpayer funds, but received as gifts, the most recent a donation of 15 IBM computers valued at $100,000.

"Financially-strapped districts like ours just couldn't offer the level of computer teaching we can today without gifts from parents and civic-minded companies," says Peekskill Superintendent of Schools Donald Rickett.

"Donations are more than just money — they give us the incentive to develop a fine high-tech curriculum."

Today, Peekskill elementary and middle schools use computers for remediation and enrichment, and high school students learn programming and other computer skills.

But the district has few quality software programs in its permanent library. Most programs are still borrowed from a county-wide library where software is shared with 17 other districts in the region.

To donate software to your own local schools through Scarborough's donation plan, you merely return a donation certificate included on the package with a $3.50 handling fee to Scarborough.

The publisher will then send the designated program to the school selected, with a gift card indicating the name of the donor.

Scarborough's educational programs include MASTERTYPE, the best-selling educational program of all time, which teaches typing skills and computer keyboard literacy in an exciting game format.

Other Scarborough programs are PHI BETA FILER, a list and data management program for children that also generates quizzes on any school subject; RUN FOR THE MONEY, an educational game teaching business strategy; PATTERNMAKER, teaching elements of design through color and symmetry; SONGWRITER and PICTUREWRITER.

All programs retail for $29.95 to $49.95, and all are or will be available for the most popular personal and school computers, including Atari, Commodore-64, IBM PC and PCjr, and the Apple II family.

Double gift

A purchase of educational software this Christmas through Scarborough's donation plan is a double value — it will provide fun and education at home, and the personal satisfaction of helping fill a need in your local schools.

PEANUT CHO-CO NUT FUDGE makes a wonderful holiday gift for friends and family. This microwave recipe from a Whirlpool cookbook takes only four minutes to make.

"Luck of the Irish" ingredient in unusual holiday offerings

Among the most versatile of liqueurs sold, Irish cream liqueurs are surprisingly mixable — perfect for a wide range of holiday drinks.

Excellent for cold weather days, Irish cream liqueur in hot coffee is a welcome warm-up treat. Simply add a dollop of Emmets Ireland's Cream Liqueur to a cup of freshly brewed hot coffee. Serve with Irish shortbread or biscuits for an unusual holiday treat.

Or try an "Emmets White Russian." Combine ¾ ounce Emmets, ¾ ounce Kahlua and 1½ ounces of vodka. Shake or blend with ice and serve in a tall, stemmed glass.

Served hot or cold in a coffee mug, "Apples and Emmets" is one-third Emmets and two-thirds apple cider.

Or, serve in a stemmed glass one-third rum to two-thirds Emmets for a zesty holiday drink.

In further testament to its versatility, Irish cream liqueur may also be served straight up in a cordial glass, either chilled or at room temperature. Like any cordial or aperitif, a cream liqueur should always be sipped slowly for maximum enjoyment.

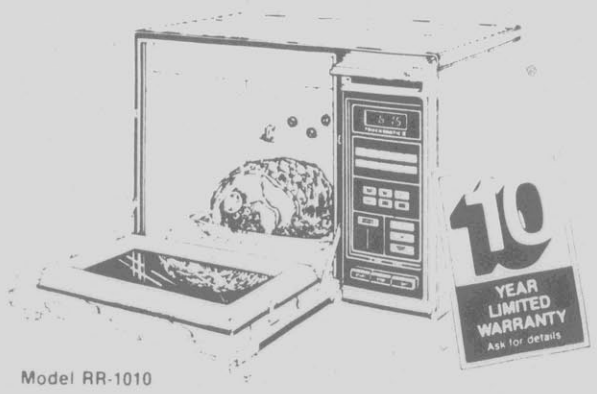

Irish cream liqueur and imaginative gastronomy are all it takes to create an extra-special holiday treat!

Christmas company coffee: Easy, elegant and festive

When you invite people to "come over for coffee" during the holiday season, it's elegant — and easy — to make the occasion festive.

All you have to do is serve fancy coffee in addition to your regular delicious brew, add a pretty cake or cookies, and decorate the table with some Christmas greenery.

For example, you might entertain a few neighbors after the Christmas concert with glamorous coconut-flavored Cafe Au Laitco topped with globs of whipped cream.

The night before, put together the sweetened milk and coconut mixture, and refrigerate. Then set up a Norelco Ready Brew II coffee maker with analog clock timer to be ready at your expected arrival time.

When you walk in with your guests, you'll just have to strain the milk mixture, heat, and stir into the carafe of hot, fresh-brewed coffee.

Pour into attractive eight-ounce mugs, top with whipped cream and a sprinkle of toasted coconut, and enjoy the raves from your friends.

Unexpected guests tend to drop in throughout the season, so be prepared. Put together a tray of cinnamon sticks, whole cloves, sliced lemons and oranges, peppermint sticks, nutmeg, fruit and cream liqueurs and cordials. Everybody can then enjoy creating original flavor combinations.

CAFE AU LAITCO

Stir together and refrigerate overnight:

4 cups scalded milk
2 cups shredded coconut
¼ cup sugar
1 tsp vanilla or rum extract

In your Norelco coffee maker brew:

6 cups dark coffee

Strain milk mixture to remove coconut.

Reheat flavored milk in a double boiler or glass bowl in a microwave until it reaches 185°F.

Pour milk mixture into coffee carafe and gently stir using a wooden spoon.

Pour coffee into mugs and top with whipped cream. Sprinkle toasted coconut on top.

Makes eight 8-oz. mugs.

The rich and wonderful traditions of Christmas stockings and their stuffings

When your family hangs its stockings by the chimney with care this Christmas, you are honoring a holiday custom that goes back a lot further than the greeting cards we send or the tree we decorate.

Legend has it that this holiday custom was inadvertently started by a Greek bishop named Nicholas as he gallantly came to the aid of a poor young maiden facing a bleak future.

Back in the days of the late fourth century, a young woman without a dowry, especially if she were plain, was unmarriageable, and relegated not only to a life of spinsterhood, but servitude, for there was no other way for her to support herself.

Nicholas took pity on this one particularly unfortunate young maiden in his parish whose father and mother had several daughters and no money to ensure any of them a better future.

Nicholas himself had come from a wealthy family before he became a member of the Church, and it was his pleasure to be generous to people in need, always anonymously.

So, one particular dark and cold December day as he passed by this humble family's home, he tossed a small package of three gold pieces inside through an open window. Supposedly, the coins happened to land in one of the stockings hung over the fireplace to dry, and that's how a custom was born that survives 1,500 years later.

Before Nicholas died, his generosity — of which this was just one example — had already become legendary throughout Europe. After he died, he would be sainted, and it is this same St. Nicholas who would become Father Christmas, jolly old St. Nick, and eventually Santa Claus.

It should be noted that the original Nicholas was reputedly a tall, thin and somber gentleman. He wore a black cleric's robe and not a fur-trimmed red velvet suit.

The familiar image of Santa Claus that we recognize today is largely a product of the last 100 years, following the publishing of the poem by Clement Moore, "A Visit From St. Nicholas."

The generosity of St. Nicholas is still celebrated in many parts of Europe, but December 6th is his special feast day. On that day, gifts of candy and fruit are traditionally given to all good children. Supposedly, naughty little boys and girls find coal in their stockings.

In America, the stocking is also used as a cornucopia of goodies, but it has always been associated with December 25th. Not just children, but every member of the family — even the dog and cat — is likely to have his or her own stocking hung on the mantel. What a stocking may contain is limited only by size and imagination.

Though very few young ladies are likely to find gold pieces in their Christmas stocking today, some have been known to find a diamond ring there instead of a dowry. Very few lumps of coal are reported, either, though candy still is popular.

Among other thoughtful, welcome little treasures that make excellent stocking stuffers are pens, note paper and address books: A very good idea, too, when you consider the thank you notes that will soon be written, and the address book that will need updating as we hear from old friends far and wide.

Everyone can always use a new pen. You can find a nice one in every price range, with different styles suitable for men and women, boys and girls, and any age group.

For example, Sheaffer Eaton makes these suggestions:

• A fashion-coordinated TRZ™ ballpoint pen and lady's bow tie from J.G. Hook, a special Christmas value package priced at only $15.00;

• A classic matte black Targa by Sheaffer™ fountain pen or ballpoint for Dad, either in the classic profile or the new slim profile, with 14K gold inlaid nib. Can be engraved with his initials or name ($47.00);

• A Kaleidoscope® Christmas novelty ballpoint, refillable, and only $3.98. Shown here with Santa Claus and Christmas tree patterns;

• For the music lover, an At-A-Glance® address book with a piano keyboard-design, in hardcover, retails for $13.50;

• The new "Gremlins" ballpoints from Sheaffer, at only $3.95, are sure to delight children. Featured are characters "Gizmo" and "Stripe" from the movie of the same name;

• Matching Wedgewood initial notes ($5.00) and ballpoint pen ($2.95) from Eaton will make writing holiday thank you notes a pleasure.

ROSETTES

2 eggs
1 tablespoon (15mL) sugar
¼ teaspoon (1mL) salt
1 cup (250mL) sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup (250mL) milk
¼ teaspoon (1mL) vanilla
8 cups (1.9L) vegetable oil for frying

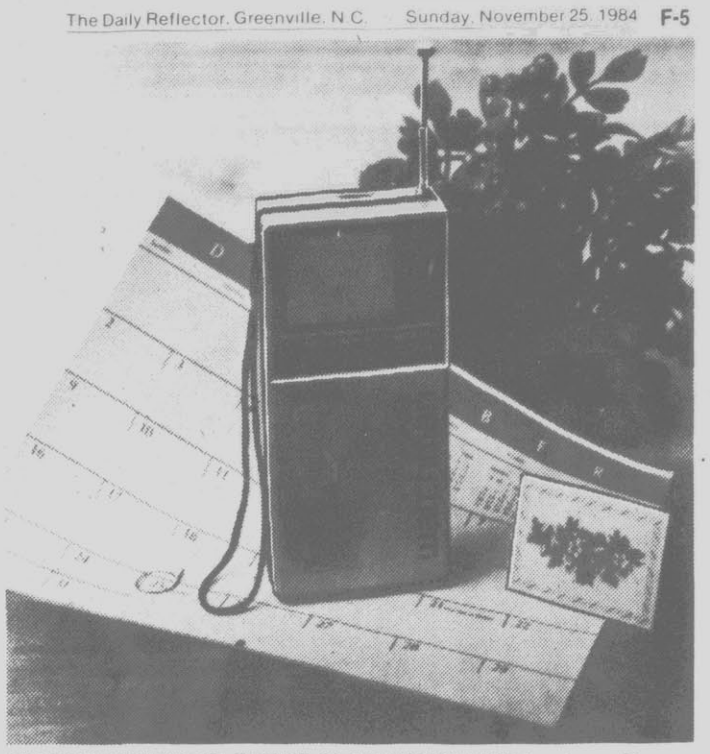

Preheat oil in Super Pot cooker at 375°F (190°C).

In a small bowl lightly beat eggs, combine with sugar and salt. Add flour and milk, beat until smooth. (Do not overbeat.) Stir in vanilla.

Heat rosette iron in oil. Dip iron into batter, making sure batter does not run over top of iron.

Place iron into preheated oil; cook until crisp and golden brown. Remove rosette from iron and drain on absorbent paper. Repeat with remaining batter.

Sprinkle with Confectioner's sugar to serve.

RECEIVE BROADCASTS IN OVER 60 COUNTRIES WITH Sony's new Voyager Watchman® portable TV with multi-system tuner . . . Sony continues to expand its portable Watchman black and white TV line with the introduction of its new FD-20AEB Voyager Watchman featuring a three system tuner for channel reception in over 60 countries. A built-in tuner is capable of receiving CCIR broadcasts on the United Kingdom and western European standards, as well as American EIA standard broadcasts. The Watchman TV is an ideal Christmas gift for travelers. Supplied with a carrying case and handstrap, the FD-20AEB features an attractive silver metallic cabinet. The FD-20AEB is available at a suggested retail price of $239.95.

SHE WON'T BELIEVE HER EYES when you give her a portable Panasonic stereo system this Christmas. Designed to be used on the go, this unit has many features commonly found on a home system and a sound to match. This model incorporates an AM/FM stereo receiver with a cassette deck which has the sophistication of soft-touch controls, soft eject, pause, auto-stop and One-touch recording. A three-band graphic equalizer is also featured, to tailor the sound to personal preferences. To deliver the music, this unit incorporates a two-way speaker system in cabinets which can be separated from the main unit to help spread the stereo image. This three-piece system can operate by AC or battery power, and has a built-in fold-away handle for easy portability.

Exciting and luxurious, furs are affordable too

Deciding what to buy that special woman for Christmas? Think no further. A fur is one gift every woman would love.

"Furs are exciting, luxurious, warm — and they feel great on," says assistant buyer Nancy Krier of Susie's Casuals, a national chain of woman's fashion apparel stores that specialize in furs. "And you'd be surprised at how affordable they are," she adds.

It's true you needn't be a millionaire to afford a fur. A good rabbit jacket can be bought in the $150-$200 range, and a nice fox will start at about $400.

According to Ms. Krier, the best time to shop for a fur is November and early December. The earlier you go, the bigger the selection you will have.

Sizes normally run small, medium and large, so if you know the dress size, a salesperson will be able to assist you.

Another nice feature about furs is they never go out of style. To make sure that special woman enjoys her fur for a long, long time, you might want to pass along these tips on proper maintenance:

• Always keep your fur on a broad-shouldered hanger. And make sure it isn't crushed in the closet.

• Never store the fur in a plastic bag, which prevents air from circulating, causing the coat to dry out.

• Never mothproof the fur with chemical sprays. If you're concerned about moths, store the coat professionally during hot months.

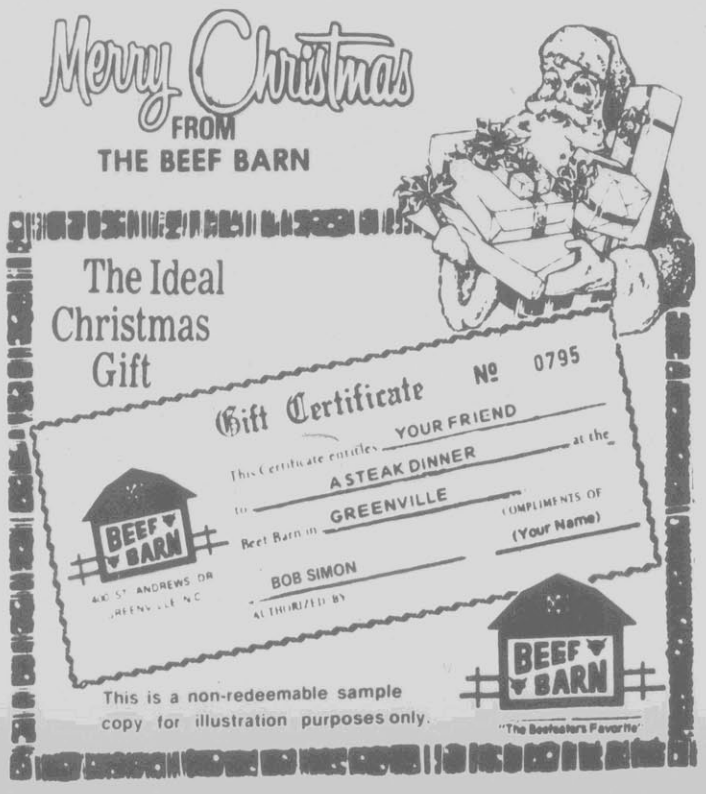

• If the fur gets wet, shake it out and hang it up to dry, away from heat. After it dries, shake it out again. Do not comb or brush.

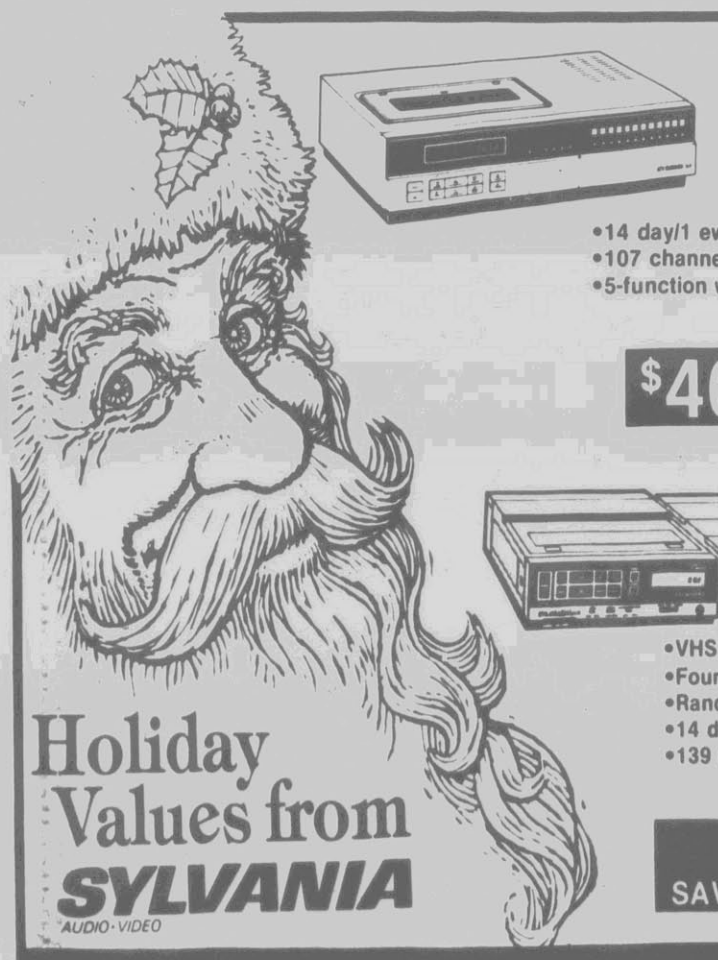

• Have any small rips or tears repaired immediately.

• Have the fur cleaned regularly by a fur specialist, not a dry cleaner.

• And, most importantly, enjoy wearing your fur on any occasion!

Party wines extend cheer for many holiday occasions

Wines are fast gaining as the drink of choice on many holiday occasions. Served in the more moderate portions now growing in popularity, imported table wines are often "lighter" and more economical, and their wide variety appeals to a broad range of tastes.

Italian table wines, currently the most popular imported wines in the U.S., are favorites at festive gatherings. Folonari wines, for example, offer four dry table wine selections in whites and reds.

Folonari Soave, a crisp, dry, light wine, will complement any cocktail or dinner party. Folonari Orvieto is another light, very dry wine, straw-colored and offering a delicate aroma.

Folonari's two red wine selections are Bardolino and Valpolicella. Brilliant ruby in color, the Bardolino is a light, dry, yet fruity wine, while the Valpolicella is a more full-bodied red wine with a slightly spicy taste.

Semi-dry wine selection

In the semi-dry wine category, Folonari offers three sparkling wines certain to add flair to holiday parties. Lambrusco is a sparkling red wine; Bianco, a sparkling white; and Rosato, a rosé. All three may be served either chilled or at room temperature.

Not to be outdone by Italian winemakers, the French also offer Americans several excellent and highly affordable table wines. Among the newer imports on the American wine scene are René Junot "everyday" white and red wines with well-balanced, full-bodied character.

René Junot white wine offers a light, delicate bouquet, and should be served chilled, between 45° and 50°F.

René Junot red wine accompanies hors d'oeuvres and cheeses well. It is best when served at cool room temperature.

Recipe ideas

Holiday get-togethers often take place around a punch bowl. Here are two punch recipes featuring wine which are sure to please a crowd:

HOLIDAY WINE PUNCH

In a large pot, combine two 1.5-liter bottles of René Junot red wine, 8 ounces freshly squeezed orange juice, 8 ounces lemon juice, 8 ounces pineapple juice, four sliced oranges and ½-cup powdered sugar. Simmer ingredients for 1½ hours.

Let cool and transfer to a large serving bowl. Add ice cubes and one bottle of sparkling water. Garnish with cherries or lemon wheels.

Makes 24-32 servings.

ORANGE WINE

Delicious with holiday cookies or as a dessert punch, this zesty recipe should be prepared two weeks before serving.

Grate the skins of 5 large oranges and one lemon and put aside. Quarter the fruits and put into preserve jars or any large glass containers. Add the grated rind, five 1.5-liter bottles of Folonari Soave, two pounds sugar, one vanilla bean and one large piece of dried orange rind.

Seal the containers and store at a cool room temperature for about two weeks. Pass mixture through a sieve and pour into bottles. Seal tightly and refrigerate. Serve chilled.

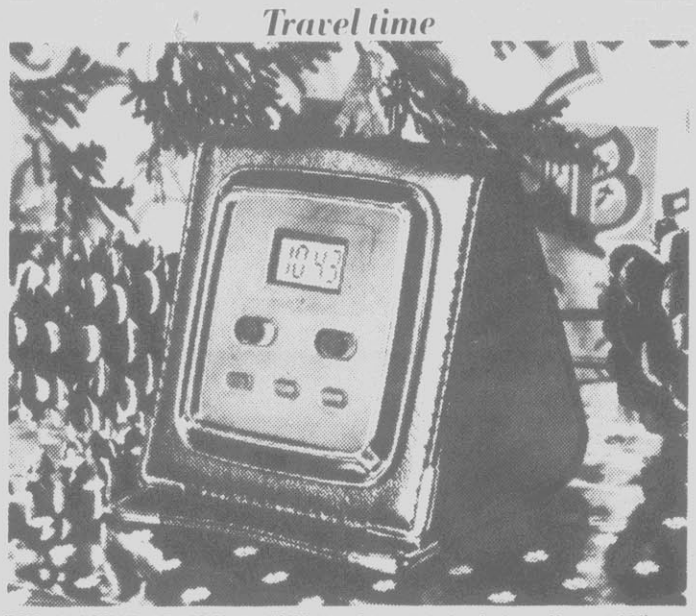

With recipes like these, your hospitality is sure to be a high point of the holidays!

Pamper her

A LUXURIOUS, PRACTICAL GIFT — what could make a woman happier on Christmas morning! This Norelco Satin rechargeable ladies' razor has unique high-tech features and improved SFR shaving head for smoother, closer shaves than ever. The recharging unit plugs directly into the wall socket, so there's no need for a cord, and can charge any rechargeable AA batteries for use in other appliances. In sophisticated dove grey, with an elegant mirrored travel case, this top-of-the-line razor will help her stay sleek wherever she goes.

Travel time

THE PERFECT STOCKING STUFFER, this travel clutch from Howard Miller is both handy and inexpensive. Enclosed in a brass-edged burgundy wallet measuring just 3" by 3", the digital quartz battery alarm has a brass finished face with black accents and features easy-to-set controls, four-minute snooze sound, nightlight. Retail, about $15.

Colorful and decorative ideas for planting the holiday spirit

It used to be that pictures were the only way to make the holiday season last beyond the few days allotted for the festivities. This year, there is another way to preserve the spirit of the season by having it live on through a living, breathing gift — a houseplant.

Plants are colorful and decorative, and add a warm touch to any room. A particularly appropriate plant to give at this time of year would be the Christmas cactus, with its striking bright green leaves and timely rosy red blossoms. Or, for something a little more exotic, an African violet, the number one favorite flowering plant on anyone's list, would be a good idea.

Proper maintenance

Maintaining these and any other plants beyond the holidays can be made easier this year, thanks to a new indoor gardening tool, "Ortho's Complete Guide to Successful Houseplants."

This elegant new hardcover book contains all the information that the aspiring gardener or aficionado could possibly need to lovingly care for and nurture indoor plants.

With 320-pages of stunning color photographs, this comprehensive volume covers such basic topics as seed starting, watering and light requirements to more advanced subjects like plant propagation, conservatories and greenhouses.

In the section on light requirements, for example, the novice gardener will learn that a Christmas cactus, if positioned near a bright, cool window, will bloom again at Easter.

The newcomer to plant care will also be pleased to discover that African violets, contrary to common belief, are in fact easy to grow. Plenty of bright indirect light and evenly moist soil will ensure that this lovely plant stays in constant bloom.

Expert and novice gardeners alike will be particularly interested to learn about the many ways they can enhance the beauty of their home by decorating with plants.

Helpful decorating tips offered in the Ortho book include how to obscure an architectural defect with a tree such as a ficus or how to use plants like chinese evergreens as effective room dividers.

"Ortho's Complete Guide to Successful Houseplants" also offers an extensive list of over 300 houseplants with detailed descriptions on all their growing requirements, while another section contains a comprehensive guide to houseplant problems and their solutions.

A gift that grows

So, whether that special someone on your Christmas list is a "green of thumb" or not, a lush plant accompanied by "Ortho's Complete Guide to Successful Houseplants" is a gift that will help the holiday spirit grow all year long.

Pets offer year-round delight for person who has everything

If you've found a gift for just about everyone on your shopping list save that very special older companion or grandparent, perhaps a gift that will remind them how much you care year-round would fit the bill.

A pet can offer an older person a wealth of warmth and companionship that lasts long after the holiday decorations have been put away.

Lasting benefits

According to the Pet Information Bureau, friendship and love from pets help reduce stress and alleviate loneliness. In fact, a recent study indicated that heart attack patients who owned pets actually lived longer than their non-pet owning counterparts.

Older couples whose children have already grown and left the house, will discover that a pet can help fill the void created by the "empty nest."

A pet can be talked to, confided in and cared for, and elderly people who live alone will certainly enjoy the unquestioning attention and affection a loving pet can provide.

Before selecting a pet for Christmas, there are several important questions that should be answered.

First, the size of a person's home should guide you in choosing the type of animal that will live most comfortably in that environment.

Second, carefully consider the older person's lifestyle, so that a pet will be a welcome and suitable addition to their regular routine.

For example, physically active seniors will enjoy the excitement and enthusiasm that a puppy can bring into a home.

In fact, Grandpa is sure to welcome a companion on walks or during light exercise routines. And, he'll love showing off his new pet and the amusing tricks and antics it has learned to perform on visits with friends and family.

If the older person on your gift list enjoys a challenge, perhaps a bird that can be taught to speak would make an excellent choice.

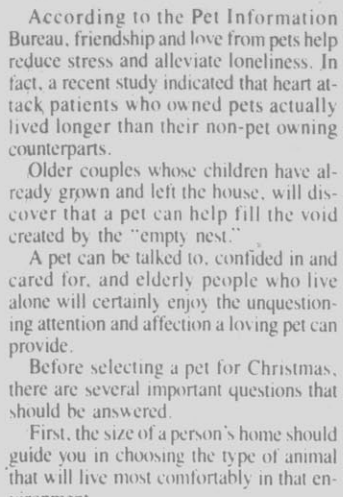

Birds require less care and attention than dogs, but are equally as enjoyable to watch and spend time with. Bird species range from those that sing like canaries to those with large vocabulary capabilities like macaws.

Fishkeeping is a popular hobby that most of us have dabbled with at one time or another, and post-retirement is an ideal time to renew that interest.

Watching fish swim in an aquarium has been shown to lower blood pressure and help people feel more relaxed. And, for people who are on-the-go, fish require very little time commitment.

How about a gift certificate?

Because the holidays can be so hectic, it's a good idea to wait and introduce a pet to its new environment after the hustle and bustle are over. A gift certificate for pets and pet supplies is the perfect way to enjoy the excitement of giving a pet at Christmas, while providing the older person with a chance to select the pet he or she will really want.

BASKET OF CRUDITES

Pick the freshest vegetables in the market — a few of each. Trim into bite-size pieces and parboil in boiling salted water to bring out the color. Refresh in cold running water. Arrange "bouquet" in bowl of crushed ice set in basket.

Serve with Crudites Sauce made by blending 1 cup cottage cheese, ½ cup each mayonnaise and sour cream, 1 tsp. each chopped parsley, chives and ginger.

CHEESE TOMATO CROCKS

Slice a wedge from tops of 24 cherry tomatoes and scoop out the seeds. Fill each tomato with 2 tsp. of cheese puffery: 1 cup sharp Cheddar blended smooth with ½ cup mayonnaise, 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, pinch cayenne, 1 tsp. lemon juice and a splash of Cointreau.

VEAL BROCHETTES

- 1 lb. lean veal
- 1 medium zucchini
- 4 large white mushrooms
- 1 red pepper
- 1 small eggplant
- ¼ cup Cointreau
- ¼ cup white wine

Cut 1 pound lean veal in 1-inch cubes, 1 medium zucchini into ½-inch slices, 4 large white mushrooms in half, 1 red pepper into eight 1-inch squares and 1 small eggplant into eight 1-inch rounds.

Marinate the above in a mixture of ¼ cup each Cointreau, white wine, oil and lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and add 1 tsp. chopped garlic, 2-4 hours.

Arrange on skewers, and broil 6 inches from heat, turning and basting with marinade, until well browned and cooked through, about 12 minutes.

Makes 4 servings.

FLAMING LOG

Creme Patissiere

- 6 egg yolks
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup sifted flour
- 2 cups hot milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons Cointreau

In top of double boiler, beat egg yolks very thick; beat in sugar gradually, then flour. Add milk in thin stream. Stir over hot water until thick and smooth.

Remove from heat; stir in butter, Cointreau. Cover surface with plastic wrap. Chill.

Cake Roll

- 3 eggs
- ½ tablespoon salt
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¾ tablespoon vanilla
- ¾ cup pancake mix
- Confectioners sugar
- ¼ cup Cointreau

Line greased 15x 10-inch pan with wax paper; grease again, coat lightly with flour.

Beat eggs with salt until very thick; gradually beat in sugar. Stir in vanilla, pancake mix.

Spread batter in pan. Bake in preheated 400 degree F. oven 8-10 minutes.

Loosen edges; turn out on towel sprinkled with confectioners sugar. Peel off paper.

Roll cake in towel, starting at narrow end. Cool ½ hour; unroll.

Spread with Creme Patissiere; roll up. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar.

Just before serving, warm Cointreau, ignite; pour flaming over cake.

Exchange of good will leads to spirit of peace on earth

There is something so special about Christmas that, no matter how the rest of the year may have gone, when Christmas rolls around, there is a renewed spirit of hope and good faith.

This feeling can be compared to a fresh snow fall that covers the ground — beauty renewed which, even if it is only temporary, is meant to be enjoyed by all.

Christmas seems to best symbolize this fresh beginning. It represents and brings forth the strongest feelings of family unity and an almost universal appeal for brotherhood.

There is a beauty to the spirit of Christmas that goes far beyond the bright, blinking lights and wonderful and different ornaments which adorn the trees. The beauty lies in the inner peace and sense of unity that we all feel towards each other this special time of year.

Christmas is much more than parties, or a few days off from the office. It is a time when people of diverse opinions and beliefs can get together and share ideas and friendships, not bound to any particular ideal.

Beauty of the season

The Christmas season is beautiful because of the lights and the decorations, not to mention the brightly wrapped packages underneath the tree. Christmas really does represent the time when we all realize again that it is truly better to give than it is to receive.

With the stockings hung from the fireplace, and the candy canes dripping like icicles from the trees, Christmas is a time of wonderment, not just for the young, but for anyone who finds their youth at Christmas.

Home is where the heart is

No matter where you live, enjoying a white Christmas in the east or midwest, or at least a spell of cooler weather in the south and in the west, Christmas brings a special longing for home and family that is virtually unmatched at any other time of the year.

While it is easy to get caught in the sentiment of Christmas past, it is with enthusiasm that we look forward to this Christmas of 1984.

It seems now that all of the commercial hoopla for Christmas begins the day after Thanksgiving and doesn't really subside until the last of those Christmas returns are made, at the start of 1985.

In most households, especially those with young children, the excitement of Christmas builds to a great crescendo, peaking Christmas morning at the crack of dawn, when everyone races down the stairs to awaiting packages and overflowing stockings.

It is exactly that excitement and joy that is truly the signature of Christmas and all that it brings to everyone.

Christmas is the time of the year that is meant most to be enjoyed. The songs, laughter and, most of all, the good cheer is something which is meant to be passed on from generation to generation.

More important than the gifts we exchange at Christmas are the cherished traditions, rich in family heritage, that are renewed each year.

Maintain ideals all year

For, as much as Christmas is part of our lives, it is the ideals of Christmas which should be observed all through the year.

Christmas is a time that we should look forward to, because it is a time that brings us together, and lets us appreciate who we are and where we are from, and allows us to remember everything that is really important to us.

ARTIFICIAL CHRISTMAS TREES made of ignition-resistant vinyl are a safe alternative to natural wood trees.

Vinyl Christmas trees keep Christmas and the holiday season safe, jolly for all

As you put the finishing touches on your holiday preparations, stop for a moment and consider the most important part of the season's festivities — the health and welfare of your loved ones.

While Christmas decorations lend magic to the holiday season, they can also be a potential fire hazard when handled improperly.

Artificial trees are a safe alternative to natural Christmas trees if they are manufactured from ignition-resistant polyvinyl chloride (commonly known as vinyl).

In a recent experiment conducted by the International Society of Fire Service Instructors, a natural Christmas tree and a vinyl tree were ignited.

The natural tree was consumed in flames in a matter of minutes, and the room filled with a heavy black smoke. But, under the same conditions, the vinyl tree did not cause the fire to spread, or give off the dense black smoke.

According to Dr. Roy T. Gottesman, executive director of The Vinyl Institute, the results of the experiment showed that a vinyl tree can actually help prevent a fire. "Unlike natural trees, vinyl trees will not cause a fire to spread."

Before you buy an artificial tree, check to be sure that it carries either a UL or FM label. The Vinyl Institute recommends. This ensures that the entire tree, from the base to the needles, is ignition-resistant.

Do keep all decorations away from heat sources such as radiators, stoves, heaters, fireplaces and any open flame. Don't use lighted candles on trees or decorations.

Before stringing your lights, check carefully for damaged plugs and frayed wires. Also be careful not to overload electrical outlets or plugs.

Plan ahead for a safe and merry Christmas by installing smoke detectors and sprinklers in your home. Also make sure each member of your family knows what to do if a fire starts.

Common sense and a few preventive measures will help you rest safely this holiday season.

SQUAB COINTREAU

4 plump squabs
1 cup brown sauce
1 cup of white wine (dry)
½ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon Cointreau

Roast the squabs for 15 minutes in a 425 degree F. oven. Reduce heat to 350 and continue roasting until done. This should be approximately 30 minutes more.

When your squab is done, remove the fat from the pan juices at bottom of your roasting pan. Remove as thoroughly as possible.

Dilute the remaining juices with the cup of white wine and reduce approximately three-quarters. Add the cup of brown stock or sauce, thickened slightly.

Simmer for not more than five minutes and add the ½ cup of orange juice and the teaspoon of Cointreau.

Heat thoroughly and pour over squab. Serve with wild rice.

BOOK ON IRISH CRAFTS ENTHRALLS READERS

There's no better holidaytime gift than a beautiful book, tailored to the recipient's particular interest.

For someone interested in traditional crafts or in the culture of Ireland, a recently published volume, Ireland's Traditional Crafts (Thames and Hudson) by David Shaw-Smith makes an ideal present.

An intelligent and informative narrative provides the thread through this overview of crafts practiced on the Emerald Isle for centuries.

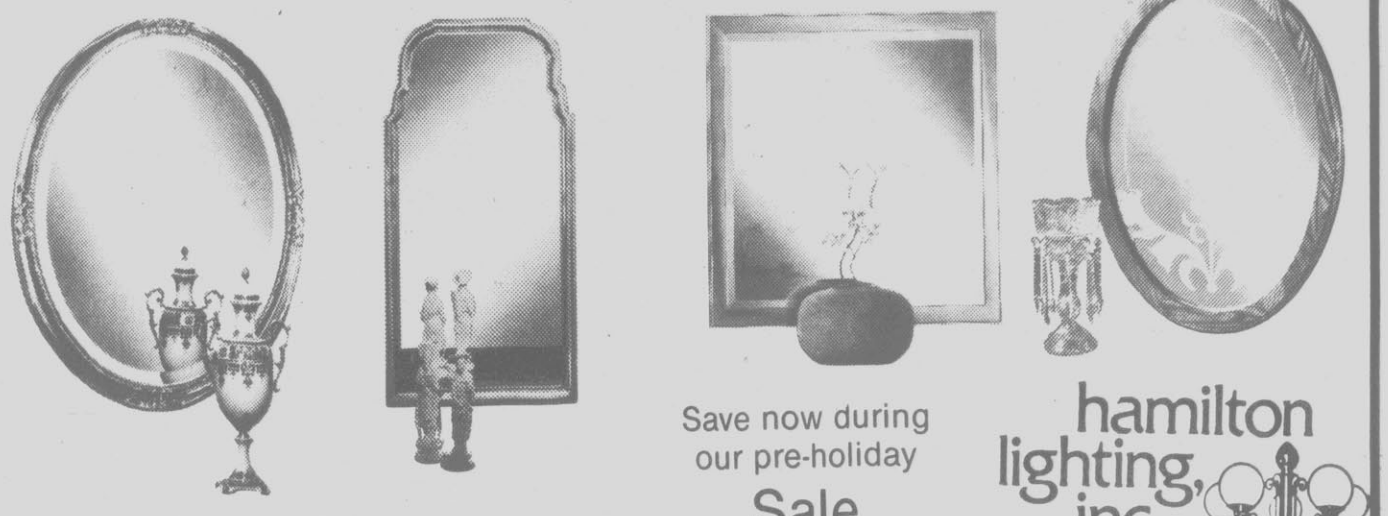

Along the way, pictures (both color and black-and-white) bring such crafts as pottery-making and lace-making vividly to life, in the context in which they are most at home.

Under the Glassware heading, a visit to the Waterford factory is in order, as might be expected. But the book's verbal/pictorial visits take the reader farther afield into less renowned, but none the less interesting fields: Candlemaking, basketry, stonecutting and harp-making, among them.

Over all, the volume provides an unusual and illuminating look at a country renowned for its crafts, and the love, care and originality bestowed upon them. This it does gracefully and harmoniously — providing pleasure for casual browsers and even more so for serious readers.

Gem of an idea...

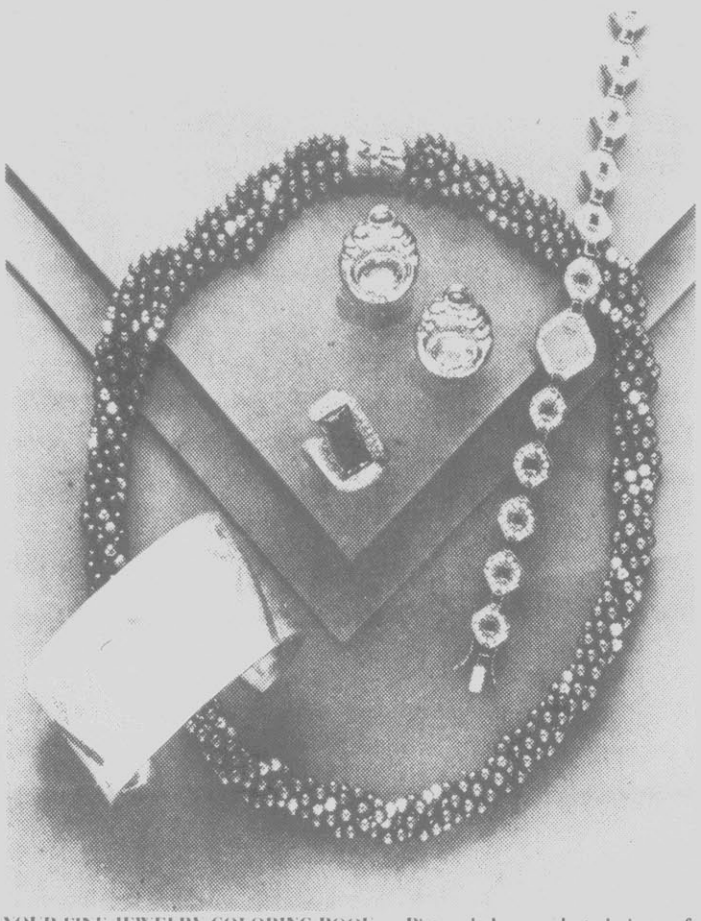

Colorful jewelry is a wonderful way to liven up wardrobe and spirits, and makes great gift too

Looking for a jewel of a Christmas gift this year can be easy and affordable if you think COLOR, according to Jewelers of America (JA), the national association representing more than 12,000 retail jewelers across the country.

Colorful jewelry is the perfect way to brighten up wardrobes and spirits this holiday season, especially with the new, innovative design trends now being shown at your local jeweler.

The colors in gemstones are as varied as the rainbow, and their prices range from "affordable" to "expensive." Combine a colored stone with gold, diamonds, pearls, silver, and with other colored stones, and you have an ideal Christmas gift. Some suggestions:

- Large faceted colored stones set in gold or silver seen in large earrings, cuffs and collars;
- Ropes of semi-precious beads of lapis, jasper, carnelian, coral, tiger's eye, onyx, crystal, worn long, or twisted together and worn with a clasp to make a choker. This hot new versatile gift allows the wearer to create new looks by mixing and changing bead combinations;
- Gold chains with colored stones set in the links;
- Combinations of colored stones set in bold rings;
- For men, black onyx, lapis or hematite cufflinks and ring sets.

If you are selecting a colored stone ring, bracelet, or necklace, and are afraid that it will cost too much, Jewelers of America offers some interesting information that can show you how to match a color with a pocketbook.

When people think of colored gold, tricolor in pink, yellow, and white comes to mind, but there is green, rose, and black! Colorful gold gifts include:

- Sculpted large collars, cuffs and earrings in colored gold;
- Bi-color white and yellow gold matte and polished finished rings with colored stones;
- For men, matching sets of tie-bar, button covers and money clip in colored gold combinations.

Silver jewelry has taken on a renaissance as a high-styled jewelry accessory, especially when combined with gold and precious stones. Also, it is very affordable.

The traditional white pearls have been around for a long time . . . now these lustrous beauties are seen in black, gold, pink, gray, blue and green. Some pearl gift suggestions:

- Pearl necklaces in all lengths are always a terrific gift;
- Simple large mabe pearl earrings set in gold, or extra special with black onyx and diamonds;
- For holiday evenings, long strands of pearls with crystal and diamonds;
- To add color to pearls, there are numerous fasteners, slides, shorteners, pendants and clasps that will change the look of last year's pearl gift.

Glittery diamonds in all hues, including canary, blue and copper, make an unusual, colorful gift for special holiday evenings.

- Long, dangling, shoulder-skimming waterfall earrings;
- Chokers and bracelets with diamonds and colored stones;
- Sparkling pins and medals in antique and art deco styles.

Some other suggestions that will add "color" to last year's gifts include:

- Diamond pendant and earring jackets, in all combinations of colors and styles, create a new look and broaden jewelry wardrobes;
- Attachable clips and pendants to gold chains and pearls in precious and semi-precious stones set in gold.

Pins this Christmas can add color to any wardrobe and have become an important fashion accessory. Pins come in a variety of styles — bar, stick, circle and whimsical motifs in gold, pearls, diamonds, colored stones and silver. There's a pin for everyone's personal taste, and pins are very affordable.

For men, tie tacks denoting hobbies or special interests such as sports make a personal statement that he'll enjoy wearing all year.

Summing up, Jewelers of America advises that there is a colorful jewelry Christmas gift in every price range. Local jewelers that are members of JA have wide selections and are available to answer questions and offer advice on the best purchase for each person's needs.

JA also offers a series of informative brochures offering tips and guidelines for buying fine jewelry. Anyone interested should write to Jewelers of America, 1271 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020, Department MNSX.

Aquariums: This year, give a living gift of beauty to that special someone on your Christmas list

Of all Christmas presents, perhaps the most beloved is a living gift such as an aquarium filled with tropical fish. Colorful, varied and sure to be enjoyed by the lucky recipient, it's also easy to maintain and adds a unique decorative touch to family room, living room or den.

In fact, a recent study by researchers at the University of Pennsylvania concluded it is even a benefit in relieving stress.

Bestowing a home aquarium upon a friend, relative or your own children has many positive benefits. Throughout the U.S., 10 million aquariums are being enjoyed in homes, offices, restaurants and hotels.

In order to select the best aquarium for your money, one that's filled with colorful tropical fish and easy to maintain, it's a good idea to do a little investigating.

Reliable source

First, you will want to locate a good dealer in your area. If you have a friend who has an aquarium, ask for a reference; otherwise the phone book lists most tropical fish retailers.

It is advisable to purchase a book that provides complete instructions on setting up and maintaining an aquarium.

One basic rule to follow, however, is to buy the largest aquarium possible since, the greater the water environment, the less chance of water problems.

If you receive an aquarium as a gift, you must assume all the responsibilities for maintenance.

When determining where to put your new aquarium, you should consider several factors. You will not want to put it in direct sunlight, since this will cause algae to grow on the glass and plastic accessories.

You will also not want to put it on your best carpeting since, during water changes, it is possible for some water to splash on the floor, and you will be sure to want to put it on a firm stand since water is heavy.

After you have decided on the aquarium, your first accessory will be a tightly fitting canopy cover equipped with a fluorescent fixture. Fluorescent fixtures throw off a cool light and will not cause fluctuations in the water temperature.

While we are on the subject of water temperature, tropical fish require an environment maintained at around 75° F (25°C). You will therefore need a good heater and an aquarium thermometer.

A recent development in this technology is the liquid crystal digital thermometer which affixes to the outside of the aquarium yet measures most accurately the water temperature.

You will also need a quality filter. Your dealer can give you proper advice since there are several types of filters and your needs will vary with the size of your aquarium. If you are going to keep a lot of fish, you will also want a separate air pump to add oxygen to the water.

Planning decor

Decorating an aquarium is great fun. There are multi-colored gravels, highly decorative backgrounds and hundreds of ornaments, as well as plastic plants so real in reproduction it's almost impossible to distinguish them from live plants.

NOVEL AND ENTERTAINING, an aquarium filled with tropical fish makes an ideal Christmas present for that very special someone. Adults will appreciate it as an eye-catching conversation piece while, for children, an aquarium provides an excellent learning experience which is also an enjoyable hobby. If you're interested in purchasing an aquarium, the experts at Tetra Sales are offering an informative full-color illustrated starter booklet. For a free copy, write Tetra Sales, 201 Tabor Rd., Morris Plains, NJ 07950.

Most good retailers will have a complete assortment and your selection should be based on the size of your aquarium and the amount of money you decide to spend.

Once you have set up your aquarium, you should add a chlorine neutralizer to the water and add only a few fish initially. These few fish will help develop the proper biological conditions necessary to maintain a fully stocked aquarium.

After three to four weeks, assuming everything is functioning properly, you can then go ahead and add the rest of your fish.

Aquarium maintenance is a lot simpler than people think. Every two weeks a partial water change (not greater than 20 percent) by siphoning the water from the bottom of the aquarium is all that is required.

A device called the Hydro-Clean allows an efficient siphoning by separating the debris in the gravel and removing it with the water from the aquarium. On a monthly basis, your filter will require minimal maintenance. That's all there is.

Following this simple routine, chances of fish disease or any other aquarium problems are remote. In fact, one of the biggest problems people have is spending too much time maintaining their aquarium.

On a daily basis, of course, fish should be fed and a good quality flake food will provide a complete diet for almost all fish.

CAROL'S CRANBERRY NUT BREAD

- 3½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons grated orange peel
- ¾ cup butter or margarine, softened
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 can (16 oz.) LIBBY'S Solid Pack Pumpkin
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 1 cup chopped cranberries

Preheat oven to 350°F. Combine dry ingredients; set aside. Cream butter and sugar.

Add eggs one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add pumpkin alternately with dry ingredients. Stir in nuts and cranberries.

Pour batter into two lightly greased 8x4-inch loaf pans. Bake 60 to 65 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean.

If desired, drizzle with icing (mix just enough cream or milk into powdered sugar for drizzling consistency); garnish with walnut halves and cranberries.

Yields 2 loaves.

HEARTY GOLDEN SOUP

- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 2 cups sliced mushrooms
- ½ cup rice, uncooked
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon tarragon
- 1 can (16 oz.) LIBBY'S Solid Pack Pumpkin
- 2 cups half and half
- ¼ cup dry sherry

In medium saucepan, sauté onion and celery in butter. Add broth, mushrooms, rice and seasonings.

Bring to boil. Cover; simmer 20 minutes or until rice is cooked.

Stir in pumpkin; continue cooking 5 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients; heat thoroughly.

Yields 6 cups or 4 to 6 servings.

PUMPKIN CHEESE BALL

- 1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
- ½ cup LIBBY'S Solid Pack Pumpkin
- 1 package (2.5 oz.) smoked sliced beef, chopped
- 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded sharp cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup crushed pineapple, well-drained
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- Short celery stalk

Combine cream cheese and pumpkin, mixing until well blended. Stir in beef, cheddar cheese, pineapple and onion; mix well. Chill at least 1 hour.

Form into large ball. Score sides with knife to resemble pumpkin. Garnish with celery for stem. Serve with crackers.

Yields about 2½ cups.

HOLIDAY GLAMOUR: The sophisticated one-shoulder look is a holiday favorite of designer Paula Ross, who has made her name in luxurious suedes.

THE LOOK OF SOPHISTICATED SUEDES

If you've always thought of suede in the context of cowboy chaps and hunting jackets, think again. In the hands of talented designer Paula Ross, suede is treated "like pure silk!"

Glamorous treatment

Or so says Paula, whose booming, year-old business specializes in the glamorous treatment of suedes and leathers. "My luxurious designs are a bit of the rugged Western cowgirl and all-out Hollywood glamour rolled into one," says the former Ford model whose fashions now sell on prestigious Seventh Avenue to fine stores across the country.

"For holiday, my dresses range from feminine to festive," says Paula of her collection. The artfully draped styles include ruffled chemises and fringed dolman dresses. "I particularly like the one-shoulder look; it is sophisticated and shows off jewelry well."

Luxury finishes

Luxury finishes on suede helped Paula build her name and, "I'm not stopping now," laughs Paula. She has encrusted rich suedes with rhinestones and put glittery Art Deco embroidery on the basic tee for holiday finery.

Topping it off are reptile-embossed leather jackets and ragged edge capes, "which are timeless," says the designer.

GREAT GIFT IDEA FOR THE SPECIAL MAN IN YOUR LIFE

The holiday season is supposed to be everyone's favorite time of year. Then why are there so many hapless, harried souls gritting their teeth each time they hear another "Have a happy holiday!"

You've got a million and one things on your mind, and a million and two things to do before you can even think about having a happy holiday. But, somehow, you find just the right gifts for friends and loved ones, you discover and trim the perfect tree, and you even manage to plan and prepare a holiday feast.

At last, the fun can begin. And that's when looking and feeling your best for holiday merrymaking becomes a priority. However, erratic schedules, over-indulgence in food and drink, and harsh, blustery winter weather can conspire against you.

The same goes for the special man in your life. And, through it all, he must engage in a daily ritual looked on by most men as a "necessary evil," if not as downright torture — shaving.

Shaving is rough on your man's skin, there's no doubt about it. Shaving produces nicks, cuts and scrapes and can leave the skin dry, vulnerable and irritated.

During the holiday party season, when a man often shaves in the morning and evening, he's even more apt to look worse for wear.

According to Dr. Eugene H. Gans, Director of Biomedical Research at the Richardson-Vicks Skin Care Research Group, the high alcohol aftershaves or colognes that many men use to complete their grooming ritual can make matters worse.

"Such products dissolve natural skin ingredients that would otherwise aid in the recovery process after shaving and protect the skin against the harsh winter elements."

Fortunately, Richardson-Vicks has taken the sting out of shaving with Saxon Lotion for Men®, an aftershave skin conditioner for lasting comfort.

Low in alcohol, high in emollients and long on clean, masculine scent, Saxon offers a soothing, refreshing and non-greasy solution to the shaving dilemma.

Saxon is available in two fragrances, Original Woodspice and exciting new Golden Musk. Just in time for holiday gift giving, two holiday gift sets are also available from Saxon.

The Saxon Golden Gift Set features a solid brass change dish and a 2.5 ounce bottle of the popular original fragrance Saxon, at a suggested retail price of $9.95.

The Saxon Gift Collection, designed for the man who desires variety, contains 2.5 ounce bottles of both original fragrance Saxon and new Golden Musk at a suggested retail price of $8.00.

Attractive, stylish packaging adds the finishing touch of class. Both sets are available at leading drug and discount outlets.

To help your special man be at his best during holiday gatherings this year, gift him with tidings of comfort and joy ... surprise him with Saxon.

Christmas collector's plates: 89-year-old holiday tradition with contemporary appeal

Christmas is a time of warm and personal traditions: Grandmother's handmade ornaments, temptingly wrapped presents, and turkey with plum pudding. All of these have earned a special place in our hearts, and we count on them year after year.

In recent years, millions of Americans have adopted a yuletide tradition that dates back before the turn of the century — one with enough excitement to carry beyond Christmas to the rest of the year. It is the tradition of giving and receiving collector's plates at Christmas.

1895 Christmas plate worth $4,000

From the beginning, collector's plates and Christmas have been intertwined. The roots go back to the Feudal period when wealthy Danish landowners gave food on decorated wooden plates to the common folk at Christmas.

After the holidays, many families hung the plates on their walls as a year-round reminder of the spirit of Christmas giving.

The first authentic collector's plate, called "Behind the Frozen Window," was issued for about 50¢ at Christmastime in 1895 by the prestigious Danish porcelain house of Bing & Grondahl. A "Frozen Window" plate recently was sold for $4,000 in the United States.

Although there were earlier decorative dishes and platters, and even some commemorative plates, "Frozen Window" was the first true collector's plate because it was the first to be produced in a limited edition.

Bing & Grondahl continued the Christmas series. Each year since 1895, even during two World Wars, the company has issued another plate in the series.

Today, more than 100 companies make collector's plates, which are defined as plates that are produced in limited editions for the purpose of being collected. They are collected, displayed and enjoyed by about eight million persons throughout the world.

Variety available

Collector's plates are excellent Christmas gifts. They're attractively priced. They contain artwork with a wide range of designs, colors and themes, and they are produced in fine china, crystal, silver, wood and other materials.

Unlike most gifts, collector's plates are not consumed. They are not eaten, worn, used up or worn out. Because they are artworks created by some of the finest contemporary artists and artisans, they are valued and collected.

Many collectors display their plates on mantels or walls, in china cabinets and breakfronts; in living rooms, dining rooms, bedrooms or halls.

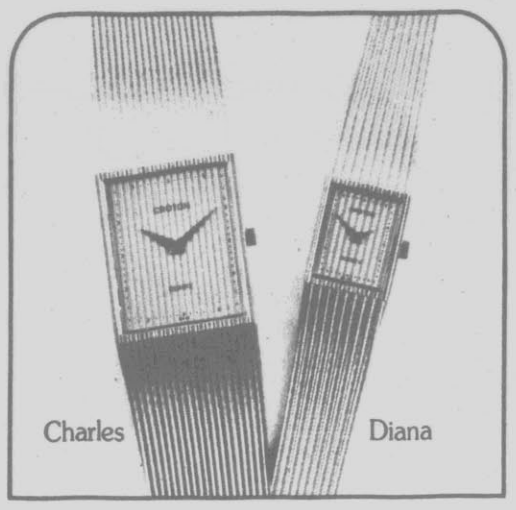

Great Gift Idea!

'Police Woman' Wants To Cop New Series

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Humor has not been a noticeable ingredient of any of the roles Angie Dickinson has played since "Police Woman" turned in her badge in 1978 — and her one and only stab at situation comedy was dumped in 1981 without even making it to the NBC schedule.

But the off-screen Miss Dickinson has a self-deprecating sense of the "ridiculous" and delights in telling stories against herself.

In particular, she recalls a dinner party encounter in which she asked TV executive Aaron Spelling, "Whatever happened to that script you sent me — the thing called 'Oil' co-starring George Peppard?"

Miss Dickinson had turned the role down flat, reasoning that after four seasons as the lone star of her own hit show, she wanted no part of a project with an ensemble cast.

Spelling replied: "It's on ABC on Wednesday nights and it's doing rather well. We changed the name to 'Dynasty.'"

"Soon after that, I met Linda Evans on a plane and told her I'd turned down her part as Krystle Carrington," says Miss Dickinson. "She just roared with laughter... and thanked me."

Miss Dickinson has remained in demand for meaty roles in TV movies, and approaches most of them with an eye to adapting them for a weekly time slot.

This week, she can be seen in "A Touch of Scandal" (CBS, Nov. 27) playing a powerful politician with a guilty secret. When we met, she was filming "Hollywood Wives," a big-budget ABC miniseries treatment of the best-selling novel by Jackie Collins.

In "Hollywood Wives," she plays Sadie LaSalle, Tinseltown's biggest agent. ABC's no-expense-spared treatment of the novel, with the aid of a top-dollar cast headed by Rod Steiger, all but guarantees the network monster ratings when the miniseries airs early in 1985.

"Sure, I'm looking for a series!," says Miss Dickinson. "I was exhausted when 'Police Woman' ended, as well as emotionally drained — but now I'm single and my daughter has grown up, 13-hour days won't worry me.

Viewers will take an Ewok on the wild side when George Lucas's first made-for-TV movie, "The Ewok Adventure" airs Sunday, Nov. 25 on ABC. Starring in the film are the Ewoks, Lucas's furry creations from his 1983 film "Return of the Jedi."

Michele Will Tell

DEAR MICHELE: I recently saw Farrah Fawcett in "The Burning Bed," and would like to know what Francine Hughes is doing today. Did she finish school? What happened to her children? — KATHY MACK, MALVERN, OHIO

At age 37, the trials of Francine Hughes have not ended. After receiving an advance payment for her collaboration on the book "The Burning Bed," Miss Hughes bought a house in the suburbs of Jackson, Mich. This fresh start, however, did not produce the desired results. She was laid off from work, and began using alcohol and drugs. After licking these problems, she met Robert Wilson, an ex-convict, and married him. The vicissitudes of her life, however, took their toll on her children. Their relationship with Wilson was strained, and they regarded him as an interloper. The family later moved to Tennessee, where Francine finally went back to school and became a licensed practical nurse. Daughter Christy returned to Michigan, preferring not to live with her family. Following allegations of Wilson's sexual abuse against 13-year-old Nicole, vigorously denied by him, Francine resigned her job this summer. She packed up Nicole and returned to Michigan, reuniting with Christy. Her son Jimmy lives with her, while 15-year-old Dana elected to remain with her stepfather in Tennessee. There are sporadic visits between the two disjoined families.

DEAR MICHELE: I say Charles Bronson is 72 years old, but my daughter says he's younger. Who is correct? — MRS. R. EDSTRAND, PORTSMOUTH, N.H.

Perhaps it's Bronson's craggy face that has you way off the mark. He's only 63.

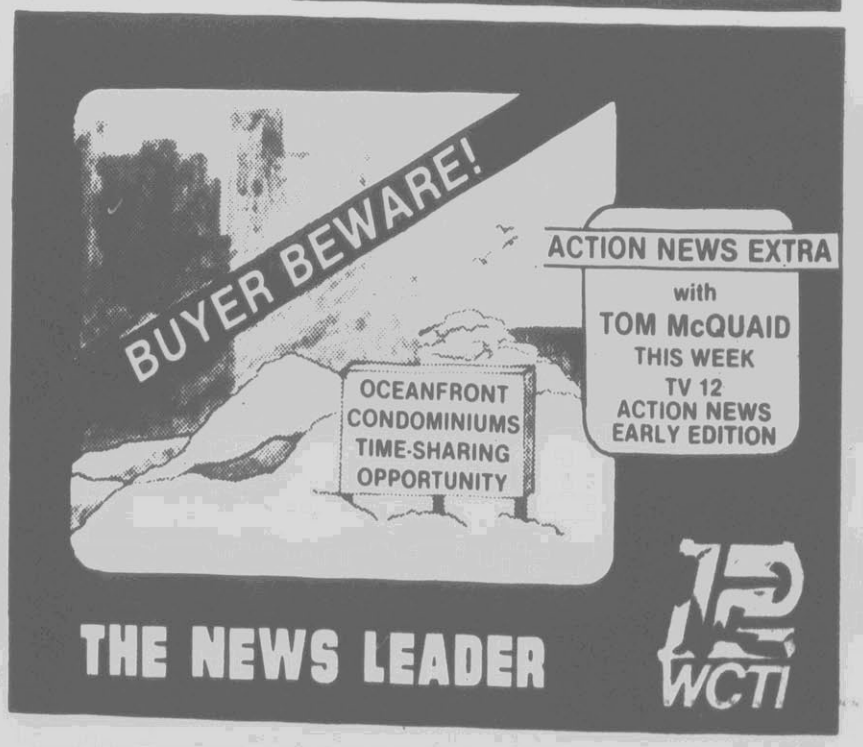

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please fill me in on Tony Perkins? — DARLENE BIGGS, NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.

Everyone's favorite motel keeper, Anthony Perkins, was born April 4, 1932, in New York City. He is the son of the late stage and screen actor Osgood Perkins. Although Perkins received an Oscar nomination as Best Supporting Actor for his work in the 1956 film "Friendly Persuasion," he is probably best remembered for his film portrayals as the psychotic motel keeper Norman Bates in "Psycho" and "Psycho II."

Landon Renews His French Connection

By Tim Boxer

Victor French almost did not get the co-starring role in "Highway to Heaven." He says NBC wanted "a young pretty boy for teenage and sex appeal" to be Michael Landon's partner on this new series. But Landon did not believe that type of person could teach his character anything.

"Besides," French says, "they already have sex appeal — Michael Landon."

For French, playing opposite a sex symbol means having to look older. "I'm being forced by Landon to wear a beard. I have to do everything to keep looking older than he is. He has hair on his head — I have hair on my face."

French has been acting with Landon for 15 years. He appeared with him in "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie." In "Highway" French plays an ex-cop who teams with an angel (Landon) to dogood deeds for people.

TV Chatter

Benny Hill, that lovable English comic with the schoolboy grin and puckish glint in his eye, recently visited America for the first time on a sightseeing trip. And although no fanfare or talk-show guest spots were planned, Hill did say he would like to meet Jack Lemmon, Steve Allen, Clint Eastwood and Burt Reynolds — if it could be quietly arranged.

This spring, Brooke Shields will introduce her own line of designer jeans, coordinating jackets and vests. Different materials in many colors will be used.

Red Skelton's funny holiday special, "Freddy the Freeloader's Christmas Dinner," is currently airing on HBO. The popular comic, who was to be honored by the Friars Club earlier this month, called off the event when he learned his old friend, Milton Berle, had a conflicting engagement. Skelton asked that the tribute be held at a later date so Berle could attend the roast.

Who says television is all glamour? Since $500 and $1,000 bills aren't that easy to come by and excited traders on "The All New Let's Make a Deal" constantly wrinkle them up, the producers found themselves in a predicament: How to keep the limited supply of bills looking crisp and new for an entire season?

The solution to the tight money problem eventually ironed itself out. Brian Cummings, the show's new announcer, offered to help out by dutifully ironing all of the bills after each taping so they look brand new for the next show. The contestants go home with a check instead of the cash.

Carroll O'Connor will soon appear on Broadway in "The War at Home," a four-character drama written by James Duff. "I want it to last in the worst way," says O'Connor. His last Broadway outing, "Brothers," closed opening night. "The audience expected to see Archie Bunker and were disappointed," he says "But nothing ventured, nothing gained."

"The Ewok Adventure," George Lucas's first made-for-TV movie, will premiere on Nov. 25 on ABC. The fighting teddy bears introduced in "Return of the Jedi" come to the aid of two young space castaways in search of their parents.

Gross Creates His Own 'Family Ties'

By Jay Carman

Even if you've been enthusiastically following the fortunes of the remarkable troupe on "Family Ties" for the past few seasons, you probably don't know that one of the cast was harboring a surprising secret. Now it can be told.

Michael Gross, who plays Steven Keaton, the father of the three — soon to be four — precocious TV kids was a bachelor all along.

It wasn't until this past June that the 37-year-old, Chicago-born actor finally tied the knot. He also became an instant father to his wife's two teenaged kids from a previous marriage.

"Suddenly, I acquired a wife, two kids, two cars and a house in the suburbs crammed full of stuff, all in one day, mind you," the tall, bearded actor says with a contented grin.

Gross's better half is Elza Bergeron, a former associate director of talent for Paramount Studios. In an ironic twist, it was Miss Bergeron, before she knew her husband-to-be, who actually did some tough negotiations on Gross's "Family Ties" contract.

"Unfortunately," says Gross, again looking entirely contented, "Elza was a hard-nosed negotiator and struck a tough deal with my agent in New York the week before I came to Hollywood. Now she's suffering the consequences."

Actually, it doen't sound like anybody in the newly created family is doing much suffering. According to Gross, everyone involved has been as happy as clams ever since he and Miss Bergeron returned from their romantic honeymoon aboard a train that took them all the way from Banff to Montreal.

"We chose the Canadian railroad because it's the longest transcontinental trip by railway that you can take in North America," says Gross. "It was a breathtaking journey all the way."

So now Gross's real family is moving happily along in much the same manner as his TV family. Speaking of his stepdaughter Katie, 16, and his stepson Theo, 15, he says. "They're wonderful kids and their mother did a super job of raising them. I think the best thing I can do is to be careful not to undo what she has already accomplished."

Gross adds that his daily life now is warmer and more rewarding than it has ever been since he left his Chicago home. He was raised there with his eldest sister, Elizabeth, who now works with the World Bank in Washington, D.C., and his youngest sister, Mary, who's a regular on "Saturday Night Live."

"The term 'family ties,'" he says, "now holds a lot of deep meaning for me."

The Month Of Living Dangerously On 'AW'

By Connie Passalacqua

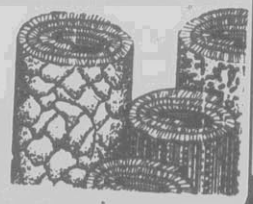

Is it a soap opera or an Errol Flynn movie? This is a question that might be occurring to "Another World" viewers as they watch a month of action-packed on-location scenes shot in Majorca, Spain.The show journeyed to Europe to wind down two of its front-burning story lines including convicted murderer Catlin Ewing (Thomas Ian Griffith) tracking down the real killer of David Thatcher and theinterconnected mystery of whatever happened to long-lost Cecile de Poulignac (Nancy Frangione).

Griffith, Stephen Schnetzer (Cass Winthrop) and Robert Phelan (who plays the real murderer, Ross) were their own stunt men in many of the exciting — and dangerous — taped scenes. Griffith, who had choreographed fights on stage and on television, found himself using those skills. He has a black belt in Tae Kwan Do, an Oriental fighting discipline which involves high kicks. "A lot of my fight scenes in Majorca call for karate kicks. That was easy for me to choreograph."

Golf's Best Battle Again In 'Skins Game'

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

Nicklaus. Palmer. Player. Watson. Four of golf's best return this weekend to the Desert Highlands Golf Club in Scottsdale, Ariz., for a rematch of last year's "Skins Game," a two-day affair played over 18 holes for $360,000 in prize money. It airs Sunday, Nov. 25 on NBC.

It is, indeed, a different approach to the game of golf. Each hole stands on its own merit, with the first six worth $10,000; the next six $20,000 each and the final half-dozen going for $30,000. Ifthere is a tie on any of the holes, the money moves to the next hole and is open to any of the four.

Last year's biggest winner was Gary Player, who carted off $170,000 ($150,00 on the 17th hole alone). Arnold Palmer closed second at $140,000. Jack Nicklaus ($40,000) and Tom Watson ($10,000) had off-weekends.

Don Ohlmeyer, president of Ohlmeyer Communications who, with Trans World International, is co-producing the program, thinks the "Skins Game" is the best thing to ever happen to golf. Ever.

"It attracts a lot of people who don't ordinarily watch golf on TV," he says. "The match-play format works very well on TV. It's like showing 18 mini-tournaments rather than one long, sometimes uninteresting one."

It has also allowed such golfers as Player and Palmer to compete with the younger lions of the game, something which they cannot do on a consistent basis on the tournament circuit. "The players love it," says Ohlmeyer. "Watson, who probably grew up watching Palmer play, now gets to go one-on-one with him on every hole for 18 holes. In fact, the 'Skins Game' may well be the only format in golf where these four men can compete effectively against each other."

Golf, which usually is not a ratings grabber, scored big with the "Skins Game," which may account for its return this year. "We had a nine rating in New York against the Giants." Ohlmeyer says.

"And we took in a 13 in Los Angeles. Those are numbers golf tournaments do not normally see. For that reason alone it's worth televising."

The "Skins Game" has turned a staid sport into an offensive one. Each hole has dollar signs stamped over it, putting added pressure on the players. The four golfers combined have won 44 major tournaments and have taken home millions of dollars. They are all wealthy men, seasoned vets, sometimes weary of tournament life and play. The "Skins Game" gets their juices flowing. It also makes golfexciting to watch. That in itself is quite an accomplishment.

Question of the Week

Q: This is a legitimate letter — not a prank. I was wondering if you can help me. I am trying to locate the mother of Detroit Tiger shortstop Alan Trammell.

We were girlfriends all through grammar school here in Swedesburg, Pa. We both attended Sacred Heart parochial school and our teacher in the eighth grade was Sister M. Seraphis. Mrs. Trammell's maiden name was Anna Panczak, and she had two sisters, Mary and Helen. I know Anna is divorced, and I'm told that she is suffering from cancer.

I would like to send her a card and perhaps reach her so we might reminisce. What should I do? — Mrs. Alfreda Wisniewski Campbell, Bridgeport, Pa.

A: Yours is a touching story. We suggest you contact Alan Trammell c/o the Detroit Tigers, Tiger Stadium, Detroit, MI 48216. I'm certain when he reads of your desire to see his mother, he will respond.

NICK'S KNACK

BOB KESSLER
LICENSED CHEESE GRADER

From the heart of Wisconsin's "Cheese Country," comes the farm fresh milk that is used to produce the fine cheese Bob selects for The Swiss Colony Stores. He tests and samples every block and wheel of cheese we buy throughout the year. All of our cheeses are richly waxed to preserve their natural freshness and delicious flavors before they are packed in festive gift boxes. Everyone will be delighted to receive a gift of fine cheese.

FAYE: CLAIMING SENIORITY

Alice Faye may be 69, but her waistline still measures a tidy 25 inches. That's one of the reasons Pfizer Pharmaceuticals has recruited the '40s film star for a nationwide tour to give pep talks about health for senior citizens. "I tell the people about being careful to take their medication and to stay active and involved, see their doctors regularly, watch their diet, and exercise," explains Faye. "I give them little pearls of wisdom." Catching Faye on her lecture tour may well be the only way for fans to see her; she hasn't made a movie since her abrupt departure from the industry soon after her marriage to Phil Harris 43 years ago. The TV series Falcon Crest has offered her a cameo, and she is tempted, but says, "In my time Hollywood had much more class. There was a glamour, an intrigue. Now the people in pictures all look alike, and everybody's a 'star.' The word has really been kicked around."

□

Actor Bob Prosky, the new roll-call sergeant on Hill Street Blues, has signed up for only a three-year hitch on the series, which is shot in L.A. A Tony nominee for Broadway's Glengarry Glen Ross, Prosky had turned down the role of "Coach" on Cheers because, curiously enough, he thought the comedy show was "too good — it looked like it might run seven years." Does Prosky have a fear of success? Not quite. It's simply that Bob gets the blues when separated too long from his East Coast-based family.

PROSKY: HOMESICK BLUES

There is a condition in Hollywood called "clout." Symptoms include: paychecks with as many digits as a phone number, approval of a film's final cut, approval of a director and fellow cast members. Robert Redford, Clint Eastwood, Barbra Streisand — these people have clout. So, apparently, does the endearing Debra Winger, who is exercising it on her new movie, Peggy Sue Got Married. After piloting the original director, Jonathan Demme, off the production, Winger considered Penny Marshall as his replacement. Though Marshall directed a few episodes of her series, Laverne and Shirley, she's never directed a feature film. Noted an insider, "Selecting Penny to direct Peggy Sue is like saying the director is Debra Winger." But as of this writing, Laverne is out, and Deb is having doubts herself. Maybe it's time for Shirley to step in.

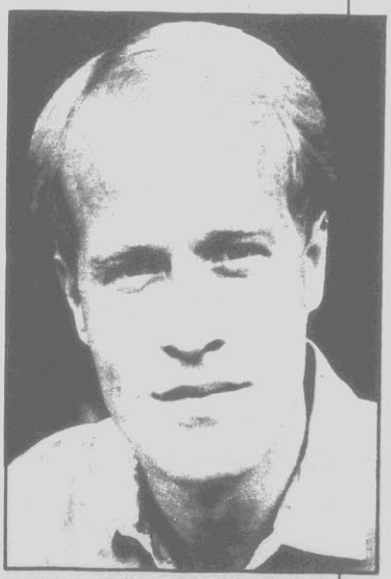

WINGER: MARSHALLING HER CLOUT

A note from Merrye Olde Englande: James Bond was attacked by the British Family Planning Association for, would you believe, his dreadful and inconsiderate habit of bedding down with girls and taking off without as much as a thought to the possibility that he has left them pregnant. FPA President John Dunwoody used Bond as an example in conjunction with a new campaign about men waking up to their responsibilities. He declared, "If James were a real person, he would have at least 50 children and would most likely be suffering from [any number of diseases]."

Gregg Henry, star of Brian De Palma' latest film, Body Double, caused many women to murmur, "Be still my heart," when he appeared as Welsley Jordache in the mini-series Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II. But he's as perplexed by his macho image as he ever was, seeing it as a case of macho ado about nothing. "I have average looks, average build, the makings of a spare tire around my middle," he claims. "I did not create my image. In fact, I'd like to lose it, because I feel I have to live up to that reputation, and when I don't, I get labeled a bore."

HENRY: SPARE TIRE?

Catherine Hicks, who stars with Anne Bancroft in the current Garbo Talks, has great admiration for the highly elusive Swede, but doubts that the legendary star would make it in today's film world. "They'd say she overacts and is too beautiful," believes Hicks. "About her wanting to be alone, they'd probably decide she was uncooperative, that she really didn't seek solitude, but was simply very affected." Hicks is also currently onscreen in The Razor's Edge, or "Bill Murray Goes to the Himalayas," as some have dubbed the film.

Thanksgiving Memories

By Rosalynn Carter

In an exclusive essay for Family Weekly, the former First Lady reflects on this distinctly American — and joyous — holiday, and what it has meant to her.

"Over the river and through the woods to grandmother's house we go." That little song keeps running through my mind, in and out of all my other memories of Thanksgiving. So much has happened since I sang it to myself in the back seat of the car, on the way to my grandmother's house outside of Plains, Georgia, for Thanksgiving dinner. As a child I could never have imagined the many changes that would take place in my life, or the many different ways I would celebrate this special day: in Hawaii as a young Navy wife, in the Georgia governor's mansion, in the White House. Nor could I imagine that I would come back home to Plains after all that to celebrate Thanksgiving Day in the way I remembered it as a little girl, but with so much more for which to be thankful.

The Thanksgivings of my childhood are still the picture of what that special day should be. For weeks at school we decorated our room with Pilgrims cut from paper and turkeys made from pine cones with paper heads and tails. I was always thankful for the break in studies, and learning about the Pilgrims seemed faraway and romantic to me. In those days anything far from Plains seemed glamorous and exciting, and the hard work and sacrifices of these early forefathers were totally lost on me.

Many Thanksgivings have passed since those early childhood days, but my memories still are of wonderful food and strong, safe family feelings. There have been years when I have had more to be thankful for than others, though I think we tend to block out of our minds the unpleasant things that happen to us and remember the pleasant.

Jimmy and I spent our first Thanksgiving together in our tiny apartment in Norfolk, Virginia, with Jimmy cooking the dinner. Two months pregnant, I was too sick even to think about food, so he bought a turkey and some champagne to celebrate the day and the promise of our first child. I was happy, and especially thankful that I had married someone who could cook.

Each year that Jimmy was in the Navy there was another promotion for him or another child for which to be thankful. Thanksgiving was not always the traditional one we had celebrated in Plains. We had chicken instead of turkey in Hawaii, and ate Indian pudding instead of sweet potatoes in New England, but it seemed completely normal. We had each other and an exciting future ahead.

The Carters spent their four "White House" Thanksgivings at tranquil Camp David, Md.

After we moved back to Plains, Thanksgiving once again became the large family ritual I remembered from my childhood, except this time I was the chief cook. I remember exactly what we ate. It still varies only slightly from year to year: turkey, roasted without stuffing; cornbread dressing, baked in a flat pan and cut into squares; sweet potatoes, drizzled with honey and orange juice, and baked; green beans; fresh cranberry sauce; and ambrosia made from orange slices and coconut.

One of our memorable Thanksgivings during those years came in 1967 when we all gathered round our one-month-old daughter, Amy. My heart was overflowing that year with thankfulness and love that I cannot express.

Thanksgiving took on a whole new meaning for us after Jimmy's first venture into politics. For more than 20 years, it has been a time at our house for celebrating an election won, pondering an election lost, or feeling very thankful that it isn't an election year.

In the Georgia governor's mansion I learned to savor the day, to celebrate it fully when it came, with family around me and my thoughts on the wonderful things that a life in politics had brought me: an opportunity to do something about problems such as mental health and care for the elderly, a chance to meet and learn from virtually every person I had ever wanted to know, and a rare challenge to be a partner with my husband in a full and exciting life.

One year in the governor's mansion, with television cameras rolling, we were presented with a live turkey. Amy called him "Tom" and quickly let us know that there was no way he was going to be on the table! The long prayer before dinner that day included thanks for "Tom," who was safely in his pen in the backyard.

After Jimmy was elected president early in November of 1976, we looked forward to Thanksgiving with anticipation as much as thankfulness. Life in Plains had been nothing but turmoil, with a constant stream of advisers, potential Cabinet members, and diplomats — and with the press camped outside our door. Still, we had our hearts set on a normal family dinner with all our children, something that had been a rarity in recent months.

Halfway through the morning, however, Jimmy's press secretary, Jody Powell, knocked on the door. "The press out here wants to know what you're having for dinner," he said sheepishly. Yearning for some privacy, I asked, "Do we have to tell them?" "No," he replied and went back outside.

An hour later, he was back. "I think we need to tell them," he said. "I know it sounds ridiculous, but they think you must be having something really strange if you won't tell them." I wrote out the menu, realizing that nothing in our lives was likely to be private anymore. But we wouldn't have changed places with anyone in the world that Thanksgiving.

I appreciated Thanksgiving in the White House in a way that I had not thought about before. It is a uniquely American holiday, the one day when everyone — every race, religion, and ethnic group — joins together in celebrating the joy we have in our families and our country. Our divisions don't disappear, and we don't forget that some Americans have more to be thankful for than others, but each of us finds a way to celebrate what we have, and we try to remember and share with those who have less.

We ate Thanksgiving dinner each year at Camp David, with as many of our family as we could gather together, and often with snow on the ground. In 1978, we held a White House dinner in honor of National Bible Week on the Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving, with actor Alec McCowen reciting the entire Gospel of Mark from the New Testament. Although I had read and reread the book of Mark many times since I was a child, hearing it recited in the East Room, in a festive White House atmosphere, was like listening to the words for the first time. How thankful I was to be there. When I awoke from my private reverie, I realized that my guests were also feeling the special magic of the moment. Then I was full of my own thanksgiving, grateful to have the privilege of hosting such an event at such a place, and thankful that ours is a country where this is possible.

The events surrounding our White House Thanksgiving in 1979 were not so joyful. It was early in November of that year when the United States Embassy in Teheran was overrun by terrorists who took our people hostage. That wasn't the only crisis at hand. Two days after the hostages were seized, I had gone to Thailand to investigate the situation created by thousands of people dying daily in the refugee camps and thousands more arriving each day. We had planned to spend the holidays on Georgia's Sapelo Island, but now we needed to stay close to the White House. Some of Jimmy's senior staff had planned to take their families to Camp David for the weekend, and we decided to join them. It was the largest Thanksgiving dinner we ever had, with the families of the senior staff, from grandparents to babies. Before returning to the White House, we joined together in a special service in the helicopter hangar to thank God that the hostages were alive and to pray for their safety and for the many homeless refugees.

The next year we spent a traditional day at Camp David. It was November of 1980, and that election-year Thanksgiving will alway be one we'll remember with mixed emotions. It was hardly the happiest time we ever had, but we truly cherished our last Thanksgiving together as First Family. Drawn closer by the unpleasant election results, we talked about our experiences, thankful for the chance we had had to try to make our country better.

Four years later, we celebrate Thanksgiving counting our newest blessings. Rather than being bored in Plains, which I had considered an almost certain possibility, Jimmy and I have found life busy and fulfilling.

We have both written our memoirs. Jimmy finished his in a year, but not being as disciplined as he, it took me much longer. The deadline for my book, First Lady From Plains, was August 1982. I finished it in February 1984! It was the hardest thing I have ever done. Even a campaign comes to an end; I didn't think my book ever would.

Together Jimmy and I have planned The Carter Presidential Library and the Carter Center of Emory University in Atlanta. There he and other leaders will continue to address some of the most difficult and controversial questions that he faced as president and that still confront our nation and the world. Also, I will have an opportunity to continue my mental health work at the Center.

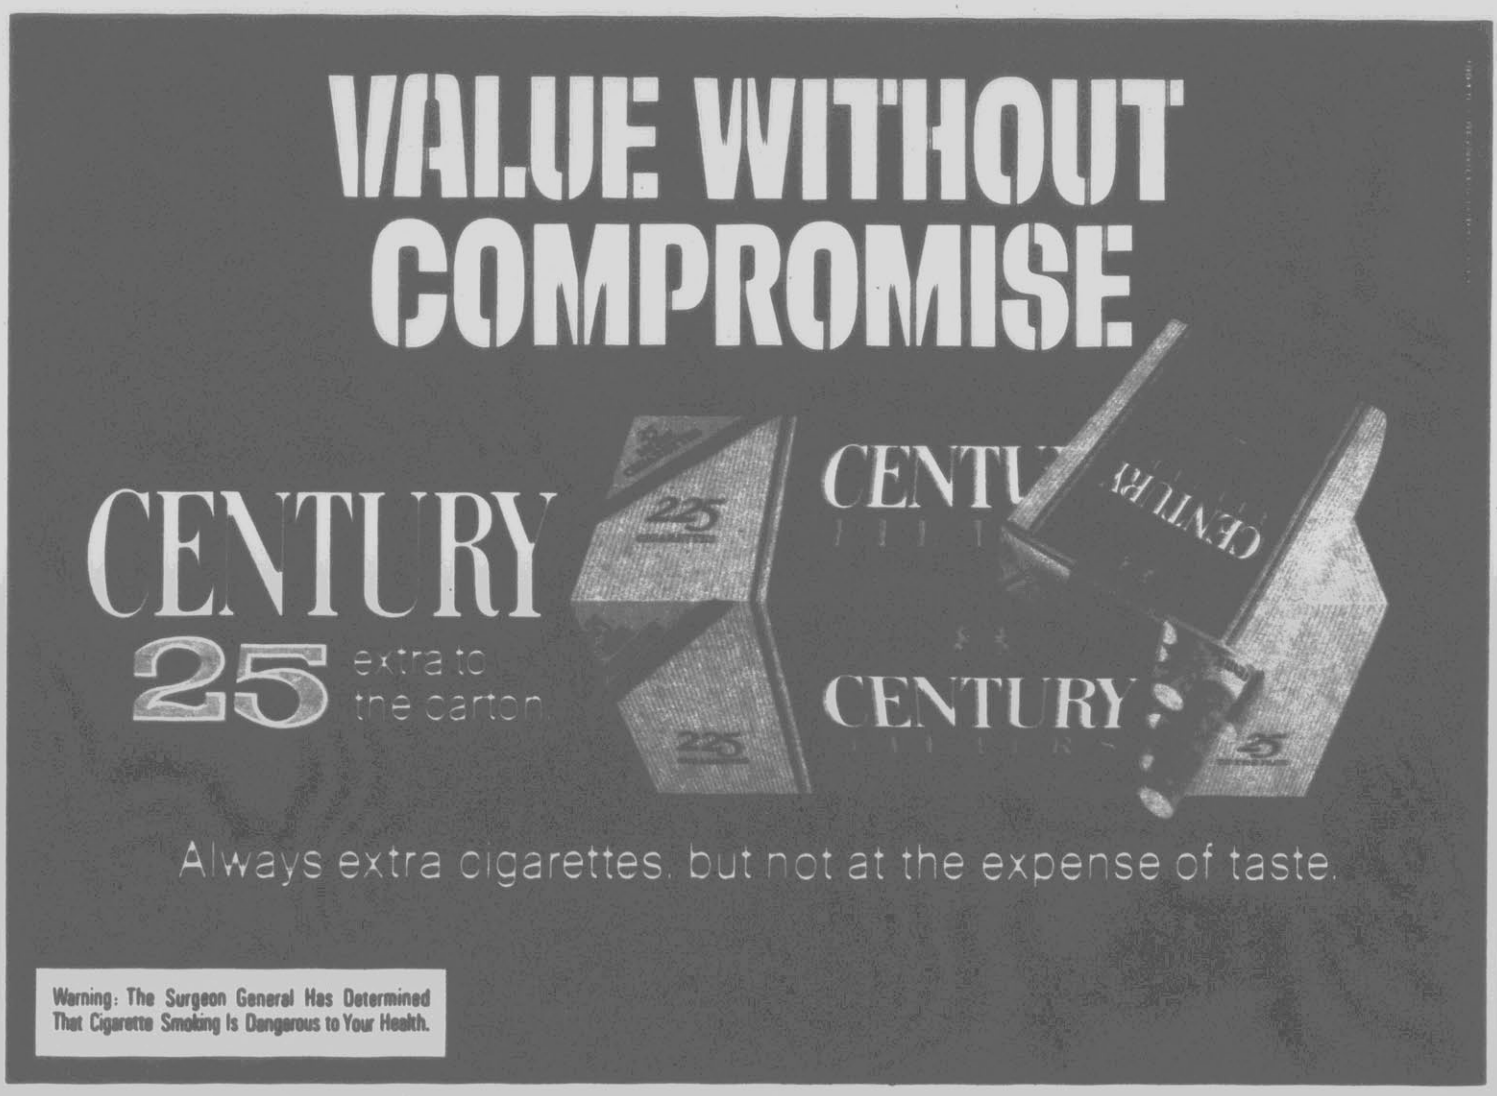

Jimmy is at peace and excited about his new life. He is enjoying his third year as a distinguished professor at Emory University, where every department has access to his knowledge and experience. And with the plans for the library and the Carter Center complete and construction under way, he is free to pursue issues that are important to our future. He spent last year studying the Middle East peace process, traveling to seven Mideast countries, meeting with heads of state and other government officials as well as with scholars and other private citizens. Jimmy and President Gerald Ford have become good friends, and they co-chaired an extensive consultation at Emory with representatives from the Middle East countries and interested officials from our country. Jimmy is now writing a book based on these discussions and his experiences that he will call The Blood of Abraham — since Moslems, Christians, and Jews all claim Abraham as a forefather. It will be a controversial book because it will be an analysis of the peace process from the viewpoint of each of the countries and peoples in the Middle East.

One very important study under way at the Carter Center is on U.S.-Soviet relations, with an emphasis on arms control. A team of people from Emory University has been working with a team from UCLA on the issue for almost a year. Jimmy and President Ford are cooperating on this study also, believing that if they can work on these important issues in a non-partisan way, they will have a greater possibility of having a beneficial impact.

Life is fulfilling after the White House. Betty Ford and I talked about that at the First Ladies Conference at the Ford Museum earlier this year. We still have the tremendous access that we had when we were in the White House. I can call on experts in any field for help with any project, and they respond. That knowledge puts a heavy responsibility on me. I have finished my book, and now I must decide what I will do with the influence I have. What can I contribute back to the country that has given so much to me? At Thanksgiving, as I ponder the future and my part in it, I thank God for the countless blessings He has bestowed upon me and my family.

And as I recall the Thanksgivings of years past, I marvel at the changes that have taken place in my life and at the promise the future holds. Although I no longer fantasize about faraway places, I will never forget those Pilgrims I cut from construction paper in school. Their hard work and sacrifices are no longer lost on this little girl from Plains. PW

The Carter Center will be providing funds for research on health, issues related to peace, and other areas of social concern. Tax-deductible contributions may be sent to: The Carter Center, Emory University, Atlanta, GA 30322.

GETTING NORTHERN IRISH EYES TO SMILE AGAIN

By Bruce Henderson

The terrorists burst into the McCormick family home with no warning. They dragged a teenage boy into the backyard and beat him with clubs for ten minutes. When the thugs left, their victim had two broken arms, a broken leg, and internal injuries.

Though the incident made the local newspaper, it was really nothing unusual. The victim was of one religion, his attackers were of another, and the setting was Northern Ireland, where Catholics and Protestants have been killing each other for centuries.

At the time of the June 1984 attack, Bridget "Bridie" Hennebry was visiting her hometown of Belfast. After migrating to New Jersey in 1957, she had married a Belfast native, Tom Hennebry, who had come to America several years earlier. They had settled in Covina, Calif., and raised four sons.

She was out when the gang broke into her brother's home. The wanton violence she had been reading about for years in newspapers suddenly had new meaning. While her 18-year-old nephew would remain hospitalized for weeks, he would live. His younger brother, Adrian, who had witnessed the attack, had wounds of another kind.

Bridie decided to take Adrian home with her for the summer, to give him a respite from the violence and hatred. But no one in the family was wealthy, and air fares were expensive. Her husband, Tom, a Kaiser steel worker, had been laid off months before.

Then she heard about Children's Committee 10, a volunteer organization that provided Northern Irish children with a summer holiday in the United States, away from the terror that plagued their lives. The group was founded in 1981 by Vincent Lavery, a Fresno, Calif., teacher, after he had visited his homeland and had been shocked by the "insanity" he saw. Soon, Lavery returned to Ireland, drumming up support for his plan.

Each host family in the United States takes two children: a Catholic and a Protestant. The children do not know each other. The idea, in addition to getting acquainted with American families, is for youngsters from opposite sides of the conflict in Northern Ireland to learn how to live together.

By the time Bridie Hennebry contacted Lavery, the program was beginning its third summer. She told Lavery that she would be happy to take a Protestant youth into her home if the program could provide a means for Adrian to come home with her. Lavery thought he could help. Usually, American families are not related to their visitors, but in this case it was permitted. Also, most host families are asked to organize fund-raising events and make efforts to provide the money needed for travel,

The payoff will come years from now, when these children confront each other as adults.

but there was no time to ask that of the Hennebrys. Lavery used donations to purchase two round-trip tickets to California for Adrian McCormick and 12-year-old Trevor Espie.

The two boys lived a mile apart in Belfast, but they might as well have resided in different galaxies. Yet in California, thousands of miles away, they shared a bedroom in Tom and Bridie Hennebry's modest tract home.

For Adrian, Trevor and the Henne-

Now YOU CAN Prevent the Back Pain and Fractures of Aging...

An Important Book on PREVENTING OSTEOPOROSIS!

If you are over 30, your bones are already beginning to lose their strength. Later in life, brittle bones cause spinal fractures, followed by a stooped posture ("dowager's hump"), height loss, and chronic back pain. Brittle bones also lead to broken hips.

By the age of 60, one out of every four women suffers from brittle bones—or osteoporosis. That's unnecessary. Because osteoporosis can be prevented!

STAND TALL! THE INFORMED WOMAN'S GUIDE TO PREVENTING OSTEOPOROSIS was written by a gynecologist in easy-to-understand language. It explains how young and middle-aged women can prevent osteoporosis and how older women can stop the problem from getting worse.

This book gives detailed guidelines on how to protect yourself through proper diet, nutrition, and exercise, and offers a thorough discussion of the pros and cons of hormone therapy.

So don't wait until it's too late. Act now to prevent back pain and fractures later in life. Order your copy of STAND TALL! today!

The Shrinking Woman

Spinal vertebrae weakened by osteoporosis collapse causing loss of height (all from the upper part of the body), inward curvature of the lower spine, outward curvature of the upper spine, and protruding of the abdomen.

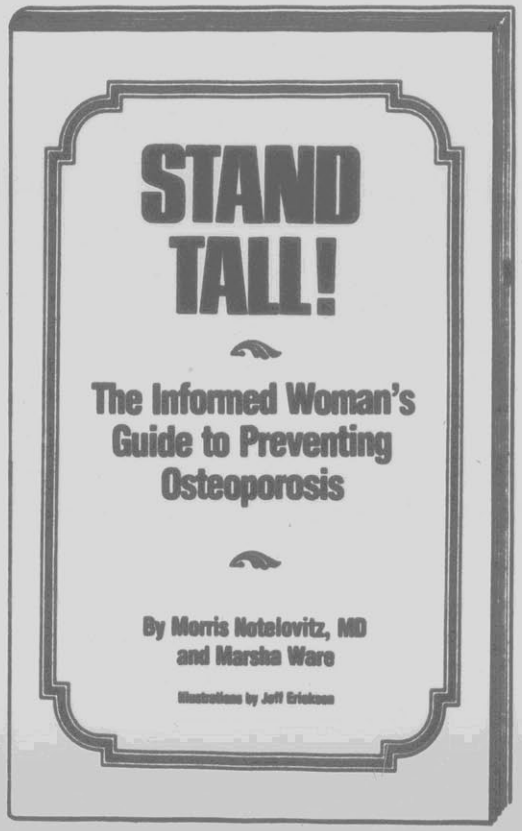

These Women Agree...

"STAND TALL! is an important book for women of all ages. It's thorough, clear information on osteoporosis gives us the knowledge we have needed to maintain strong bone health, good nutrition and exercise throughout our lives."
—Jane Fonda

"I am so relieved to have read STAND TALL! when I did. It's one of the few consumer medical books I've read where the information is complete enough that one can actually make effective use of the practical guidance given. What a shame that this information was not available a long time ago."
—Betty Bloker, Birmingham, MI

"I've lost a couple of vertebrae, and I'm shorter now. I wish I'd had STAND TALL! 30 years ago. It seems to me that if someone reads this book at a young enough age, and follows the guidance given, they'll be able to avoid this problem. I'm giving a copy to each of my three daughters."
—Mrs. Howard Waugh, Lancaster, Ohio

"I couldn't understand why all the calcium and Vitamin D I was taking wasn't being absorbed properly until I read STAND TALL! Now I've become a virtual missionary to middle aged women about this book. There's more helpful information on the topic of osteoporosis in STAND TALL! than you can get anywhere else."
—Marty Anthony, Vero Beach, Florida

"I highly recommend STAND TALL!"
—Dr Art Ulene (NBC Today)

"A simple and useful guide to proper nutrition and exercise. STAND TALL! is highly recommended for both the young and the mature woman."
—Journal of American Medical Women's Association

"STAND TALL! is an extremely informative, interesting and well-written book that provides essential information concerning osteoporosis. Highly recommended for all teen and adult women."

brys, the seven weeks went by quickly. There was no talk of religion or politics. Once, a TV news report on a deadly skirmish in Ulster could not be avoided. "Don't worry, boys," Bridie told them reassuringly. "It didn't happen up in your neighborhoods."

Adrian and Trevor visited Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm. Two grown Hennebry sons took them surfing. Neighbors and friends helped out, too, taking the boys to movies and other events.

Keeping busy, though, is not the most important part of the program, says Lavery, but rather bringing "warmth and sharing and love into the lives of the children."

Host parents Bridget and Tom Hennebry had clearly done that, as neither Adrian nor Trevor was ready to return home. They did, of course, at summer's end, each clutching a surprise gift from the Hennebrys: a photo album illustrating their stay. They also took with them memories of the United States, friendly Americans and, most importantly, getting to know one another.

"Knott's Berry Farm," Trevor answered unhesitantly when asked about his favorite memory.

"The beach," Adrian said, smiling. Then he turned serious and added: "No trouble, too. And being free."

Both were honest about the chances of seeing each other back home. "No," one said softly. "I don't think so," the other agreed.

Vincent Lavery understands. He knows when the payoff will come: years from now, he says, when these children are adults and find themselves in a confrontation — in the streets or across a table. He hopes that Adrian and Trevor and all the others who have participated in the Children's Committee 10 programs will remember that long-ago summer they spent together in Albuquerque or Los Angeles or Des Moines. If they could talk and live together then, why can't they now?

"That's when solutions may begin to be found," Lavery says.

The Hennebrys were left with their own memories. "It was sad to have to send those children back to Belfast," Bridie admits. "I'm just glad we were able to have them here. Having those boys as a part of our family made us feel — well, like we were doing our part. I wish we could do more. It was so good seeing the boys talking and joking and playing together. I'm going to write them both and put some pressure on them to call each other once in a while. I don't want them to forget." FW

LEWIS BERMAN'S MONTHLY COLUMN

IF YOU GIVE AN ANIMAL, THERE ARE STRINGS ATTACHED

It's the holiday season. What could be a better gift than that doggie in the window? But let the buyer beware: It is often wiser to walk away from the store empty-handed. An animal is a great responsibility, requiring constant love and care. Every year, 13 million lost, abandoned or rejected animals are tossed into animal shelters. Only 15 to 20 percent of those find homes. The others are put to sleep.

A family pet should be bought by the entire family, not by Mom or Dad trying to be the "perfect" parent. Plans should be made before the animal is brought home: Who will take the dog for walks, and who will change the cat's litter box? Who will take the animal to the veterinarian and supply the food? How much time can be spent with the pet? The family that expects to be away from home much of the time has no business picking out an Irish Setter or a German Shorthaired Pointer, which love exercise. Better to settle for that Great Dane who will sleep most of the day instead of pacing nervously, waiting for its owner. Ask a veterinarian which breeds best suit your lifestyle.

Tim Grajek

Cats, of course, are ideal for busy people. They are superior sleepers. They don't need to be trained or chaperoned on chilly winter-morning walks. They're independent and proudly self-reliant. They're also generally healthier than dogs, requiring less veterinary care. Because they require less work, fewer cats are taken to shelters than dogs.

Before you buy a pet, examine your lifestyle. Few of us have as exciting a life as my client Rex Harrison, but we are all capable of making the innocent mistake he and his wife made when they bought a Yorkshire Terrier — an incessantly rowdy little rascal they named Terror. While the Harrisons loved their dog, they weren't about to abandon their life in the fast lane. They soon discovered a jet-set fact: If Terror came along on an intercontinental trip, she had to be quarantined for months. Eventually, the Harrisons were forced to retire Terror to Switzerland, where their longtime housekeeper resides.

Cheryl Tiegs, on the other hand, loves to travel in the company of small dogs. Her well-trained constant companion is a Wire Fox Terrier, Martini.

A new pet's health is another important factor to consider. How can you assess an animal's physical well-being before buying? Good looks (a clean coat, bright and shiny eyes, no discharges running from the animal's nose, eyes or back end) are tipoffs. If you adopt a needy kitten or puppy from your local ASPCA, shelter or dog pound, vets will often offer a free medical examination. If you choose an older animal, take it on approval; if it seems untrainable after you've tried your best over a reasonable period of time, you can take it back. ASPCA officials should be understanding. As a spokesman for the Chicago Humane Society told me, "The last thing we want for our animals is abandonment."

Buy cautiously at a pet store. The animals there can be very expensive, and should come with money-back health guarantees. The bill of sale should include a statement of the responsibilities of both buyer and seller, certification that the animal is in good health, its pedigree (if it has one), a vaccination history, and diet information. If you want a show-quality dog, you may want to buy from a breeder. For leads, consult a veterinarian, ads in newspapers or magazines such as the American Kennel Club Gazette, or a breed club.

No matter whom you're buying for — yourself, or anyone else — don't act on thoughtless impulse. The person you intend to surprise with a fuzzy little kitten or pup must have a deep desire to give an animal love and care. According to an official at the Humane Society of the United States, one of the heaviest seasons for animal returns is after Christmas: "With perfectly good intentions, someone will buy a young pet for a friend who just happens to work 11 hours a day, and who then becomes enraged to come home to a lonely, frustrated animal chewing up the sofa. It won't be long before the animal is brought back." But if you're prepared to do the lion's share of the work, go ahead and surprise your child with a pet. Many times parents have told me that their child's first word was not "Mommy" or "Daddy," but "CAT!" FW

SPECIAL!

A Henry Field's Special for Home Gardeners

This recent release from the University of Arkansas yields lots of bright green, spineless pods. The pods are much longer than other varieties, are uniform, nicely textured, with good color and great taste. This is just one example of the many fine items available in our spring catalog. We're out to make friends — not money — with this offer. So send 10¢ today for a packet of seeds and a FREE catalog, too. Limit one offer per customer, please.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

FROM WYOMING

LEAVE IT TO BEAVERS

As if the beavers in Wyoming weren't busy enough already, the Bureau of Land Management lured three of them to construct a dam across Currant Creek. For years, spring runoff has gouged out the banks and flooded nearby farms. Instead of spending $100,000 (the cost of the average dam), someone at the Bureau got the bright idea to press the bucktoothed engineers into service.

So, for less than three grand (the cost of hauling trees in for the ever-eager beavers), the farmers of Wyoming have a $100,000 dam, and the trio of beavers are having a tail-slapping time in their new digs with the river view.

FROM ARKANSAS

WHEN YOUR FOWL IS ONLY FAIR

At the University of Arkansas, they've proved that a bird in the hand is two-and-a-half times better. That is, a chicken plucked by hand is that much more tender than one that has been processed commercially.

Poultry scientist Tommy Goodwin tested the texture of machine-handled chickens. These birds are subjected to a scalding bath and then to mechanical pluckers whose whirling rubber fingers remove the feathers. Not surprisingly, the hot bath and rubber fingers tend to produce one tough birdie. And if the chicken is deboned, its muscles will shrink, and it will be even tougher.

How to counteract some of this mass-production processing? "Premature freezing locks in the toughness," explains Goodwin, "so thaw and age your frozen chickens in the refrigerator for 24 hours before cooking." That way, maybe next time your favorite chicken fricassee won't lay an egg.

FROM PARIS AND TOKYO

SORRY, BUT NEHRU JACKETS ARE BACK AGAIN

Just what we've all been waiting for? Incredibly enough, designers from Paris to Tokyo are touting the return of the Nehru jacket. Remember that high-collared, lapel-less look? It was the grooviest of trends for about half an hour back in the days of love beads and sit-ins.

The style was ripped off originally from the clothing of Jawaharlal Nehru, the late Indian prime minister. One London shop reports that Bill Murray, David Bowie, and Elvis Costello have all decided to turn up their collars with this retreaded trend.

If $450 for one of these jackets seems a bit steep, and you threw your old one out when leisure suits came along, don't worry; this too will pass.

FROM CALIFORNIA

GETTING ON THE LAUGH TRACK

Katherine Ferrari of the International Laughter Society claims, "We are not comedians, nor do we teach people to increase their own sense of humor." The Society's "laughter fitness" classes teach people how to take things less seriously and relieve stress by "thinking funny." And why not, we say! Even doctors are recognizing that a little rib tickling goes a long way toward increasing wellness, productivity and creativity.

"Of course, you don't need the Society in order to laugh," says Ferrari, "but just as you don't need a health club to help you stay physically fit, it can be a real help and reinforcement to be with like-minded people."

Some famous members of the Society: Norman Cousins, Bill Cosby, Erma Bombeck, and Phyllis Diller. So if you want to get the last laugh yourself, call the International Laughter Society at (408) 395-LAFF.

BEDSIDE READING

What are people reading before they retire for the night? Here are two reports:

James Dickey, author of Deliverance, Columbia, S.C.:

"I just finished a biography of Emily Dickinson by Richard Sewell that was very good, and a novel by the 19th-century author George Gissing called The Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft. This is the journal of a hack writer who has [been left] some money, and it involves the reflections of this worn-out guy when he has the chance to live as he pleases."

David Bottoms, author of In a U-Haul North of Damascus, Atlanta, Ga.:

"I just finished reading Oral History by Lee Smith. It's like a spooky witch story. She has a great ear for Southern dialogue. I've also recently read a very good book called Departing as Air, by Allen Wier. It's very descriptive; parts of it read almost like poetry."

THIRTY-MINUTE CHEF

QUICK TRICKS FOR FALL TASTES

It's a common predicament: You want your family to eat well, but there never seems to be enough time at the end of the day to prepare a good, tasty, nutritious meal. Sure, convenience foods have gotten better over the years, but they're still no match for a hearty, home-cooked dinner.

In response to this need for appealing, wholesome recipes that can be prepared with a minimum of time and effort, we've devised the Thirty-Minute Chef. This week's column features a robust menu that's just the thing for fall's keen appetites. Hot Tomato Toddy, a warmed-up version of the popular Bloody Mary, really takes the chill off on a crisp autumn evening. Our main dish combines sauerkraut, potatoes, onions and three types of sausage, all cooked in one pan in only 30 minutes. And once you've tasted our incredibly simple applesauce, you'll never use the jarred version again. (It makes your kitchen smell wonderful, too.) With a loaf of dark pumpernickel or onion rye bread and steins of ice-cold beer or other beverage, this supper will take you back to the days when grandmother spent hours working over her black iron stove.

HOT TOMATO TODDY

1 qt. tomato or vegetable cocktail juice
¼ teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup vodka
Few twists freshly ground pepper
4 celery stick stirrers

1. In large saucepan heat tomato juice, celery salt, Worcestershire and lemon juice to boiling.
2. Remove from heat, add vodka; stir. Pour into mugs and garnish each serving with a celery stick stirrer and a few twists of freshly ground black pepper. Makes 4 servings

SAUERKRAUT AND WURST SKILLET

2 lbs. sauerkraut
¾ lbs. potatoes, peeled and cut into ½-inch-thick slices
2 medium-sized onions, quartered
1 cup white wine or beer
½ teaspoon caraway seeds
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf
1 lb. kielbasa sausage
½ lb. frankfurters
½ lb. knockwurst

1. In large skillet or Dutch oven combine sauerkraut, potatoes and onions. Add wine, caraway seeds, black pepper and bay leaf. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat, and boil slowly for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.
2. Diagonally slice kielbasa, frankfurters and knockwurst into 2-inch pieces. Top sauerkraut with meats, heat to boiling, cover, and simmer for 10 minutes longer, until meats are steamed throughout and potatoes are tender. Makes 4-6 servings

1-2-3 APPLESAUCE

4 medium-sized unpeeled MacIntosh apples, cored and quartered
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons sugar or honey
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon

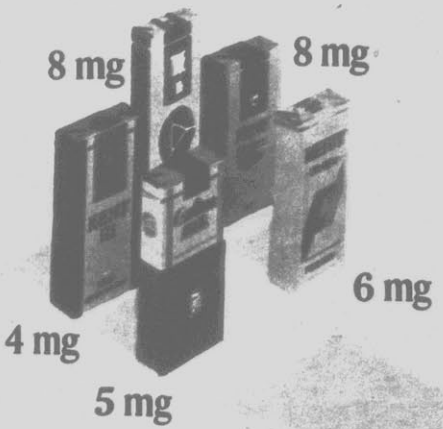

1. In medium-sized saucepan combine apple quarters, water, sugar and cinnamon.
2. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat and simmer about 10 minutes or until apples cook down into a sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Tom Landry
Head Football Coach
Dallas Cowboys

Is Football the most important thing in Tom Landry's life?

No.

Tom Landry has led the Dallas Cowboys to 18 straight winning seasons. His teams have made the playoffs 17 consecutive years—and won 2 Superbowls.

You might think that football was the most important thing in Tom Landry's life. But it isn't.

"The most important thing in my life," he says, "is my personal faith in God. I turn to Him for guidance and answers to my daily problems. In His Word He has promised, 'I will instruct you and teach you in the way you should go.'"*

• TAKE STEPS! It is easy to transform the word WALK into RIDE in five steps, changing one letter each step to form another word. Example: To change Boy to Man — Boy, bay, ban, Man.

Give it a try in the diagram at right.

More than one solution is possible. No fair peeking at answer below.

RIDE

One way: Walk, talk, tale, tile, file, Ride.

• SNAKE OIL! Where did snakes originate? In adder space. What do snakes take for headaches? Aspirin. What did the tourist say, looking into the fakir's basket? "Snakes alive!"

SUM LABOR TO PONDER

Joe and Frank were assigned to inspect telephone poles on two parallel streets, each street having 12 poles.

Joe arrived first, inspected three poles on street A, and, when Frank showed up, Joe moved over to street B.

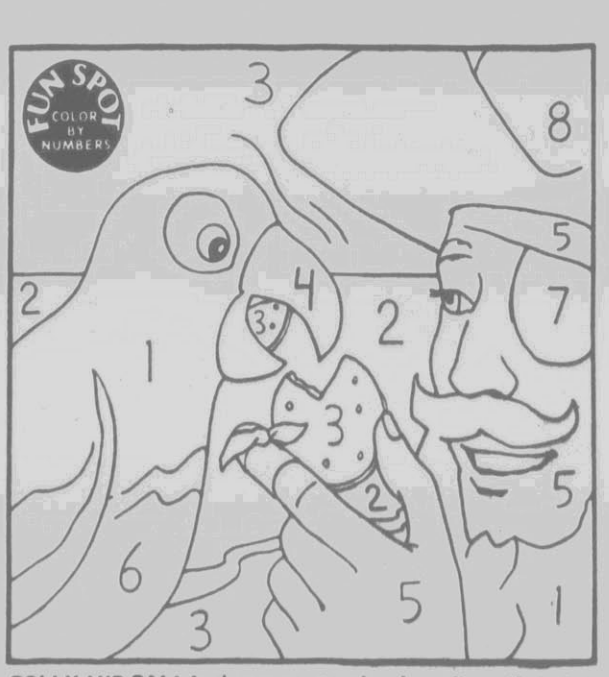

Frank finished up those on street A, then went to the end of street B, and working back toward Joe, did six more poles as Joe did the rest.

Question: How many more poles did Frank inspect than Joe?

Six more than Joe
