Chief Urges Safe Driving For Holiday Observance

Traffic accidents, which normally increase during the winter months, are even more frequent during holiday periods when more people are shopping and partying and traveling from place to place, say local police.

In an effort to reduce the number of traffic mishaps, Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said today that motorists should "drive safely and defensively," and be aware of winter driving hazards.

"Anticipate situations that call for reduced speed — slick road surfaces, poor visibility, turning maneuvers, stopping, intersections and bridges," Holmes suggested.

Pointing out that a large percentage of collisions involve drinking drivers, Holmes said Greenville police have stepped up enforcement through a grant which pay's off-duty officers to seek out drinking drivers. So he suggested that persons who are drinking have non-drinkers — a designated driver — drive them home.

"Worry and fatigue" can also contribute to accidents ... people rushing home or drivers rushing to go shopping after working all day, and not having their minds on their driving.

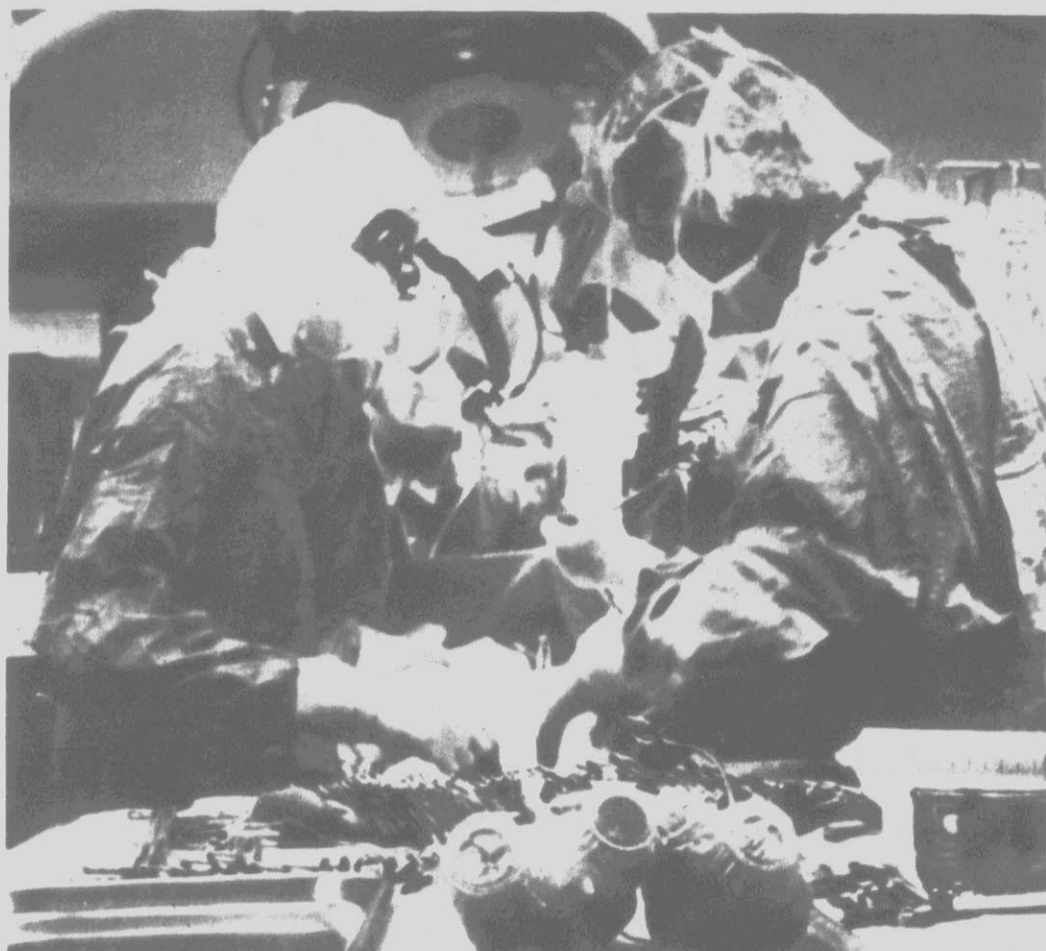

Reduced vision, because of less daylight, fogging windows and frost, are other factors that contribute to more wintertime accidents.

Holmes said drivers should use extra caution and adjust driving to fit winter road conditions.

"Make sure the windshield, rear and side windows are free of dirt, ice or fog, and make sure headlights and taillights are clean so other drivers can see you," Holmes said. Tires should be in good condition, windshield wiper blades and defrosters operating, batteries should be fully charged, brakes working properly and exhaust systems checked for leaks, he suggested.

Other helpful suggestions: compensate for bad weather by using low beams and turning on your directional signals well in advance; allow extra space between you and the car ahead (rain or ice on streets increase the car's stopping distance); avoid hard, sudden braking which could lock the breaks and cause a skid (pump the breaks to

Artificial Heart Patient Stable After Surgery

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Editor

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William J. Schroeder, the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, was in critical but stable condition today with a plastic pump beating in his chest despite losing half his blood when his aorta began bleeding after the implant.

"I'm happy to tell you the patient is doing very well this morning," said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, chairman of Humana Heart Institute International, where Schroeder's distorted, malfunctioning heart was replaced with softly clicking air-driven device in a seven-hour operation Sunday.

"He is not bleeding," Lansing said. "He is warm, pink and dry, indicating excellent circulation.... There appear to be no major complications."

Schroeder is sedated and will continue to be on a respirator to assist his breathing today because of some haziness shown on X-rays of his lungs, he said. He shows slight kidney and liver problems, but these are to be expected after open-heart surgery, he said.

Before the operation, doctors had said Schroeder would have had less than a week to live without the artificial heart.

The Jarvik-7 heart, similar to the one that kept Barney Clark alive for 112 days in Salt Lake City two years ago, was functioning normally, as was its drive system, Lansing said.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, the artificial heart's inventor, said in an interview on "CBS Morning News" this morning that Schroeder had "done very well over the night, considering the bleeding problem, which seems to have alleviated overnight."

Shortly after the operation, Schroeder had been wide awake, squeezed surgeon William C. DeVries' hand, and even tried to get out of bed, Lansing said.

But at 8:30 p.m., less than six hours after the heart implant was completed, the 52-year-old retiree was rushed back to the operating room when doctors could not stem a flow of blood accumulating in his chest.

By the time the bleeding was stanchied, shortly before 10 p.m., Schroeder had lost 8,000 cubic centimeters of blood, or about half of the blood in his body, Lansing said. Schroeder, who received massive transfusions, was returned to a coronary intensive care unit, where he was in critical but stable condition today, officials said.

Lansing said some internal bleeding had been expected because of scar tissue on Schroeder's arteries from earlier bypass surgery.

The blood was leaking from a hole where the artificial heart was stitched to the aorta, the principal artery that carries blood from the heart to the rest of the body.

Early Mailing, Good Packaging Help Ensure Postal Efficiency

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Neither sleet, snow, nor Christmas rush will keep the U.S. Postal Service from delivering your cards and presents if they're mailed in time and packaged right. But according to Greenville Post Master Lloyd Mills, if the zip is off, the tape won't stick or the box is crushable, your gifts and greetings might never make it under the Yuletide lights.

To ensure safe and timely delivery of Christmas presents, Mills recommends mailing parcels and cards before Dec. 17, and when packaging, "make sure the box is taped up real well."

"Use packaging tape, not cellophane tape, and make sure you use a good sturdy box," Mills advises.

United Parcel Service spokesman Dan Buckley also says careful packaging will increase chances of your gifts arriving at their destinations unharmed.

"Obviously, the packaging has to be appropriate. If you give us a set of dishes in a gunny sack it's not going to get where it's going in one piece."

"What you need to start out with," he says "is a corrugated box in good condition that is slightly larger than the item you're shipping. Then, you need to find some kind of cushioning material and pack under, around and on top of the item you're shipping." According to Buckley, brown paper bags cut and balled up make an excellent buffer.

"Then before you close the box, put in a duplicate address label so if the address on the outside of the box gets damaged, becomes illegible when a snowflake lands on it and smears the ink, we can open the box and find out where the package is supposed to go," he said.

"Now you're ready to seal the box. Tape it shut, do not use string or cord or cellophane or Scotch nor masking tape.... Use strapping tape with pressure sensitive nylon filaments or heavy brown paper tape that you wet on the back."

Once you've acquired the right kind of tape, the objective, Buckley says, is to seal all exposed flap edges and corners as well as seams on the bottom of the box. "Then put on the second address label with a zip code, making sure the zip is accurate, and you have done a professional packaging job."

Despite an estimated 10 percent increase in mail volume over the holidays Mills says the Post Office has always maintained shipping standards in the past. UPS, too, has no difficulty dealing with the increase.

However, Buckley and Mills warn that they can't get your packages delivered safely and on time unless you package them correctly and mail them before it's too late.

5 Dead, 21 Hurt In Gas Pipeline Explosion In La.

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

ST. FRANCISVILLE, La. (AP) — An isolated hunting camp was reduced to "just charred leaves and stumps" by a 250-foot fireball from a natural gas pipeline that exploded while being repaired, killing five workers and injuring 21 other people, officials said.

Authorities were uncertain what caused the blast Sunday afternoon about 12 miles west of St. Francisville in the hilly, southeastern Louisiana woods as workers for Clarkco of Jackson, Miss., and Texas Eastern Gas Corp. of Houston reconditioned the pipeline.

"All we know is that a construction crew was working on a Texas Eastern line," said West Feliciana Parish Sheriff Bill Daniels. "For some unknown reason, there was an eruption that was followed by an explosion."

"The area was leveled with just charred leaves and stumps for a wide area. The hunting camp was destroyed," Daniels said.

"The clock stopped at 1:21," said Tommy Tubbs, who lives across a rural road from the construction site. Tubbs and his wife heard the blast and "ran and opened the door, and looked down the road," Tubbs said.

"We saw what looked to be a dirt cloud — it must have been 250 feet over the trees," he said. "Then we heard a loud roar, and the dust cloud turned into flames."

Tubbs said he and his wife fled when that happened. "We were scared. We came back when some police cars and some ambulances started coming in."

Four of the dead worked for Clarkco and the other was a Texas Eastern employee, Daniels said. Some of the victims were burned beyond recognition and none had been identified by early today, he said.

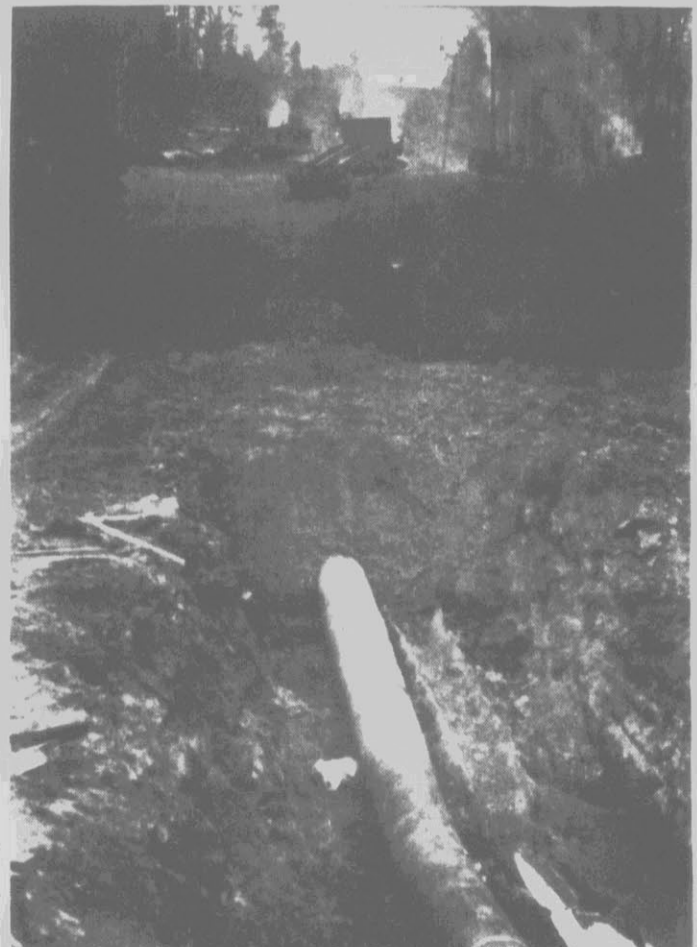

Texas Eastern spokesman James Young in Houston said the cause of the explosion, which knocked out telephones and electricity in the area, was not known. "We are investigating the cause right now," he said.

Two bodies were found near a bulldozer and two backhoes, Young said. "They were burned fairly badly."

Workers were "rehabilitating" the pipeline when the blast occurred, he said. "We routinely replace pipeline, to maintain the integrity of the pipeline to go along with the density of the population in the area."

As soon as the fire occurred, sensors noted a loss of pressure and shut off the gas supply to the line, he said. The fire was out by sunset.

The injured were originally taken to West Feliciana Hospital.

Popular Gifts

By JERRY RAYNOR

Holiday gift-givers consider brand-new American greenbacks as hot a gift item this year as the past, say local banks.

In a survey of area banks, all tellers interviewed confirmed two little-known facts about money today — there are no large silver Eisenhower dollars available for banks to order from the United States Mint, and the highest currency denomination available to the public through banks is the $100 bill.

The silver Susan B. Anthony dollar, and the little-used $2 bills are plentiful, but all spokespersons said these two items are not popular staples for holiday gift-giving.

All the banks contacted say they have ample gift envelopes to use as wrappers for Christmas money.

Mary Anderson, senior teller at Branch Banking & Trust Company, said that "the demand for new money usually picks up the first week or two of December."

"In past years, $5 and $10 bills have been our most called-for item, however, it may be different this year," she said. "We have ordered enough of all denominations to meet requests. The Susan B. Anthony silver dollar is the only dollar coin we can get now, the Eisenhower dollar is not available for banks."

At First State Bank, head teller Denise Hauthn commented: "Our customers have generally wanted everything from $1 to $100 bills.

The Tuesday film is titled "The Edge of History" will address a nuclear arms treaty and techniques for reducing international tensions.

space increase the chances for nuclear war.

The Monday, Dec. 10, a film titled "The World After Nuclear War: Nuclear Winter" will depict scientists from the USA and the USSR discussing the effects of nuclear war on climate.

The final film scheduled for Monday, Dec. 17, is titled "The Last Epidemic: Medical Consequences of Nuclear Weapons and Nuclear War" and will show members of the scientific and medical communities discussing short and long-term effects of nuclear weapons.

An open discussion will follow each film, according to the Physicians for Social Responsibility, Eastern North Carolina Chapter, which is sponsoring the films.

Mrs. Olive Morrill used a wood-carved mold to churn butter for students, who then tasted it on home-made bread baked by Joy Collins. Mrs. Linda Ross also helped students construct edible turkeys using fruit and candies.

The theft of a television and some stereo equipment from 6 West Hills was reported at 7:10 p.m. Saturday, O.C.M. Credle said, while two purses, containing a total of $160 in cash, were taken from a car parked in a lot near the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets, according to an 11:14 p.m. report, Officer J.G. Bridges said.

Sunday, two television sets and a radio, valued at $1,200, were taken in a break-in at 310B Paris Ave., which was reported at 9:30 a.m. according to Officer K.R. Best Quacker Is Selected STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — He doesn't have feathers and he doesn't fly south for the winter, but David Starks can quack with the best of them.

Starks beat out 39 other contestants Saturday to win the 49th World Championship Duck Calling Contest. He captured the title — his second in four years — using a duck call made by his uncle.

In the contest, the culmination of a five-day festival that included the crowning of Queen Mallard, callers had 90 seconds to blow the hail, feed, come back and mating calls.

And this year's competition was no duck soup — the renditions were so accurate that judges had to look for "a quacker come-back call or a sexier mating call" to determine the top finishers, said Pat Stephens, chairman of the rules committee.

Program Aim Is Attorney Embezzlement

RALEIGH (AP) — A rash of embezzlements has led the State Bar, which regulates and disciplines lawyers, to propose two new programs aimed at repaying the victims of unscrupulous lawyers and discourage lawyers from embezzling client money.

Both programs have been approved by the state Supreme Court.

In the last two years, 18 North Carolina lawyers have been disbarred and another five suspended for misappropriating money they held in trust for clients.

Starting in January, victims will be able to seek reimbursement from the State Bar's client security fund, which is expected to total more than $450,000 in its first year.

The State Bar is also conducting random audits of lawyers' trust accounts to ensure that records are being maintained accurately.

In August, the Supreme Court approved the client security fund and ordered active members of the State Bar to pay $50 annually to the fund. The first payments must be made by Jan. 1.

State Bar officials had sought legislation to establish such a fund in 1975, 1977 and 1981. They turned to the Supreme Court when the General Assembly rejected the legislation after strenuous opposition to requiring all lawyers to pay for the thefts of a few.

The Supreme Court, in ordering the fund to be created, said that the misuse of client funds by a few lawyers "is a problem which is bringing public disrespect upon the legal profession, the courts and the administration of justice."

"This (embezzlement) is the kind of thing that should not happen," said State Bar President Wright Dixon. "We're going to do what we can do to ensure it will not happen or if it does, that we bring the culprit to light."

The random audits, also approved by the state Supreme Court in August, are aimed at deterring lawyers tempted to embezzle client money. The audits will be made unannounced by State Bar investigators.

Before the Supreme Court's approval of the audits, State Bar investigators had only the authority to audit lawyer trust accounts if they believed embezzlement or mismanagement had occurred.

"It won't solve everything," Dixon said. "And there's no way we can guarantee there will not be another embezzlement."

"What we're trying to do is make sure that if anybody does embezzle, we'll catch them sooner or later and get rid of them — get them out of the practice of law."

Couple Marries In Thursday Ceremony

Karen Sue Forrest and David Paul Cook were united in marriage Thursday at 4 p.m. at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Irving E. Cook.

Parents of the couple are David and Hazel Cook of Ayden and the Rev. and Mrs. Cook of Williamston.

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. Her maid of honor was her sister, Pamela Forrest.

The best man was Phillip Cook, brother of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was presented by JoAnna Cook, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over white taffeta designed with an open sabbina neckline outlined in white re-embroidered lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in matching panels of lace. The full bishop sleeves were finished in organza cuffs with calla points of lace motif. The modified A-line skirt and wattleau attached train were edged at the hemline with re-embroidered lace. Appliqued motifs were scattered over the front of the gown. Her fingertip veil was attached to a headpiece of nylon and lace. The bride carried an arm bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

The honor attendant wore a gown of wine lustrous knit. It was styled with a collar, sleeves, front and back yokes of sheer nylon lace. The gown had a flared skirt and a tie belt. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

A reception was held following the ceremony. The mother of the bride served cake and Cheryl Bellah, sister of the bride, poured punch. The refreshment table was decorated with pink carnations and white daisies.

The basic afghan stitch is a crochet pattern stitch worked with an implement that looks like a knitting needle with a hook on one end. To practice, use an afghan hook, size G (or any size you have on hand) and some medium weight yarn. Make a chain of 24 stitches.

Row 1 (first half): Insert the hook into the first chain from the hook and draw up a loop of yarn. Keep this loop on the hook. Keeping all loops on the hook, draw up a loop in each of the remaining chains (Diagram A). You should have 24 loops on the hook at the end of this row.

Row 1 (second half): Yarn over and draw the hook through one loop; (yarnover and draw through two loops). Repeat the steps given between parentheses (Diagram B) until one loop remains on the hook. This will be the first stitch for the next row.

Row 2 (first half): You will see a series of little vertical bars that were formed by the loops of the previous row. Keeping all loops on the hook as before, draw up a loop in the second vertical bar and in each remaining vertical bar across the row until you are one stitch from the end. For the last loop of the row, insert the hook through the final vertical bar and the stitch directly behind it (see arrow in Diagram C). Draw up a loop as before. If you do not pass the hook through the bar and the stitch behind, you will not have a nice firm edge. You should again have 24 loops on the hook.

Row 2 (second half): Work the same as for the second half of Row 1.

Continue by repeating the two halves of Row 2 over and over until your piece is the desired length.

Unlike any other crochet stitch, you need to bind off when you complete the piece. To do this, skip the first vertical bar; then (insert the hook through the next vertical bar and draw the yarn through this bar and the loop on the hook.) Repeat the steps between parentheses to the end of the row. Cut the yarn and draw it through the last loop to fasten off.

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's time to prepare for the holidays again? Well, it is, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas shopping early.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Jennie or Grandpa, who don't go out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

No dusting powder, aftershave or cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Bertha doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or bracelets.

With the price of groceries so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income probably would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

The homebound will appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so that they too can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (Be a sport! Stamp some envelopes.)

Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some useless little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's counting pennies a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you know he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to take it back he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure it's wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than they are. And parents will thank you for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the appropriate age range.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and him) much time and effort and give him a gift certificate in the first place.

Holiday time can be very depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him or her the best gift of all—an invitation to spend the holidays with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty.

Love, Abby

Trend

With the announcement that another 30 million-plus pounds of flue-cured tobacco has been imported into the United States during the past 3½ months, one has to expect a deepening sense of discouragement among North Carolina's producers.

Taken by itself, 30 million pounds of imported tobacco does not represent a very big share of the product needed by manufacturers. But the fact that flue-cured tobacco was being imported even as the domestic crop was going on the market adds salt to the growers' wounds. Too, realization that import figure represents but 3½ months of the year and there have been almost 9 months of other potential imports, signifies a considerable loss of sales for U.S. growers whose costly stocks of surplus leaf pose one more handicap they have not been able to overcome.

One can put just so much blame on the manufacturers. They may feel a natural instinct to "buy American," but realities of business demand they must also buy at the lowest possible prices so they can compete on the world market. Survival is their responsibility, too.

The effective marketing quota for the five flue-cured tobacco states this year was 831 million pounds, which is less than North Carolina alone grew in 1978.

Area tobacco farmers may not be abandoning their main cash crop operations, but they most certainly are seeing themselves forced to diversify their operations. "We're just losing the tobacco market," C.V. Anderson, manager of Braswell Farms, an operation near Rocky Mount, said recently.

Warehousemen and other people in the industry are concerned by the trend to diversification as crop quotas continue to shrink.

If one could foretell the future by appraising the past, they might well conclude all signs point to a decline of tobacco as a way of life on North Carolina farms. We're sure tobacco will continue to be grown in the state, but its role in the economy is visibly dwindling.

Upset

On the face of it, there could be little in the way of legal or ethical questions raised over a film version of a book about a 1970 multimurder case in which the accused was convicted and that conviction repeatedly reviewed and confirmed on up to the highest court in the land.

Yet, Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald and his attorneys say they are mightily upset by the airing of the story about his family's murders, his trial and conviction.

They claim it impairs MacDonald's chances in his bid for another trial. How much of that represents maneuverings and word-games is anybody's guess. The basis for getting a new trial is reputedly linked to what is said to be incriminating statements by two people who are now dead ... a frail reed on which to rest such hopes. After all, the crime was committed 14 years ago. The passage of time will claim others who played roles in the drama.

Many people saw the dramatization of the MacDonald story. But we'd doubt it could have little impact on the shape of his life for the many years to come.

Remember The Salute

As is the case with most former Marines, when I hear an alarm I want to go to the fire.

So when word was leaked by the Defense Department that a Soviet ship was heading toward Nicaragua loaded to the gunnels with Soviet MIG-21s, I immediately put on my World War II uniform and went down to the Pentagon to reenlist.

I was in such a hurry I rushed right by a colonel in the parking lot.

He called me back. "Don't you know when to salute an officer?"

"I'm sorry, sir. I was on my way inside to volunteer my services for the invasion of Nicaragua."

"Where did you hear we were invading Nicaragua?"

"It's all over the papers, sir. The Pentagon said the Soviets are sending MIG-21s to Managua, and we're not going to stand for it."

"We didn't say they were sending MIGs, we said they might be sending them on a Soviet freighter."

"You mean there wasn't any MIGs on the ship?"

"There weren't on this particular ship, but that doesn't mean there might not be some on the next one."

"But you people sounded so positive. There was even talk of sinking the freighter at sea. Why didn't you wait until you were sure there was no planes on board before you leaked the story to the press?"

"Because we wanted to send a message to the Russians that we would not tolerate offensive weapons in Central America. We're not going to let Nicaragua become another Cuba."

"I can understand that, sir. But isn't it dangerous to put out unconfirmed information that could get us in a war?"

"If you read carefully, we said there were crates on the ship that could be MIGs."

"I must have missed that in my newspaper," I admitted. "I was certain there were fighters and that's why I rushed over to volunteer my services."

"We can't be responsible because the media goes overboard on a Defense Department leak. The fact is, even if there wasn't any MIGs on board, there is an enormous military buildup in Nicaragua that the public refuses to accept. The advanced jet story at least got their attention."

"You mean that was the purpose of the exercise?"

"I can't discuss that with an enlisted man."

"I understand, sir, and I'm not questioning the Defense Department's reasons for scaring the hell

RALEIGH — The cynics who work and hang out at the Legislative Building are having a bit of fun with the state's newest fountain.

The fountain, which is located on the mall behind the Legislative Building and to the east of the new Legislative Office Building, keeps leaking. Ray DeBruhl, state construction officer, says the fountain has been filled three or four times and has leaked every time.

The fountain is part of a $400,000 project which puts the finishing touches on the mall. Also included in the project are lighting, paving, landscaping and drainage. The mall runs from Raleigh's Civic Center, through downtown and to the northern end of the state government complex.

As regulars around the Legislature saw the fountain repeatedly filled, drained and patched, they began to dream up some interesting hypothetical scenarios. Their favorite has the leak blowing wide open one day and flooding the underground parking garage. It just so happens that the water has been dripping into the parking area reserved for the lieutenant governor.

Other wags note that the lawn in front of the fountain is wide open like a prairie. When the fountain is working, and the wind is blowing, the spray should make it a wet venture to use the state's newly constructed bridge between the Legislature's two buildings. (Remember legislators wanted a tunnel so they wouldn't get wet when it rained.)

Finally, there are the legislative staffers who expect to look out their windows one day and find some legislator crestfallen over the defeat of a favorite bill trying to drown himself in the two-foot deep reflecting pool.

DeBruhl says the contractor has been told to install a new plastic membrane in the reflecting pool and to have the whole thing ready by the Dec. 20 dedication.

Zeb Alley will be an influential lobbyist so long as his friend, Liston Ramsey, remains House speaker. But Alley's influence will surely decline from its current heights now that he'll no longer be doing the work of Gov. Jim Hunt.

Alley came through the speaker's office recently and staffers joked that he was now a nothing. Quipped Russell Clay, Ramsey's press aide, "One day you're drinking wine, the next day you're picking grapes."

One successful candidate for office got this response to a campaign mailing several days after the election.

"Yes, I'll probably vote (your whole ticket). But, I would also like to afford the opportunity to send through the mail as much junk as I received in your letter and be able to do it for nine cents instead of 20 cents. Don't try to explain it, I don't care to know it. What I would like to see is the Post Office busted up and the telephone company put back together!!"

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, 76, was asked shortly after the election if he was bitter about his loss after a long legislative career. "No," he said, but he found solace in the story about the elderly pastor who was being replaced by a young preacher.

As Huskins tells the story, the departing pastor gave a wonderful sermon on his final Sunday, telling the congregation that he'd prefer to stay but would accept their decision. He ended his sermon this way: "And so, as I leave through the front door now, I'd like you all to notice the bit of mistletoe I have hanging from the tails of my jacket."

Strength For Today

Where is God?

This query has been continually made by children — and philosophers. You may say he is in heaven, but where is heaven?

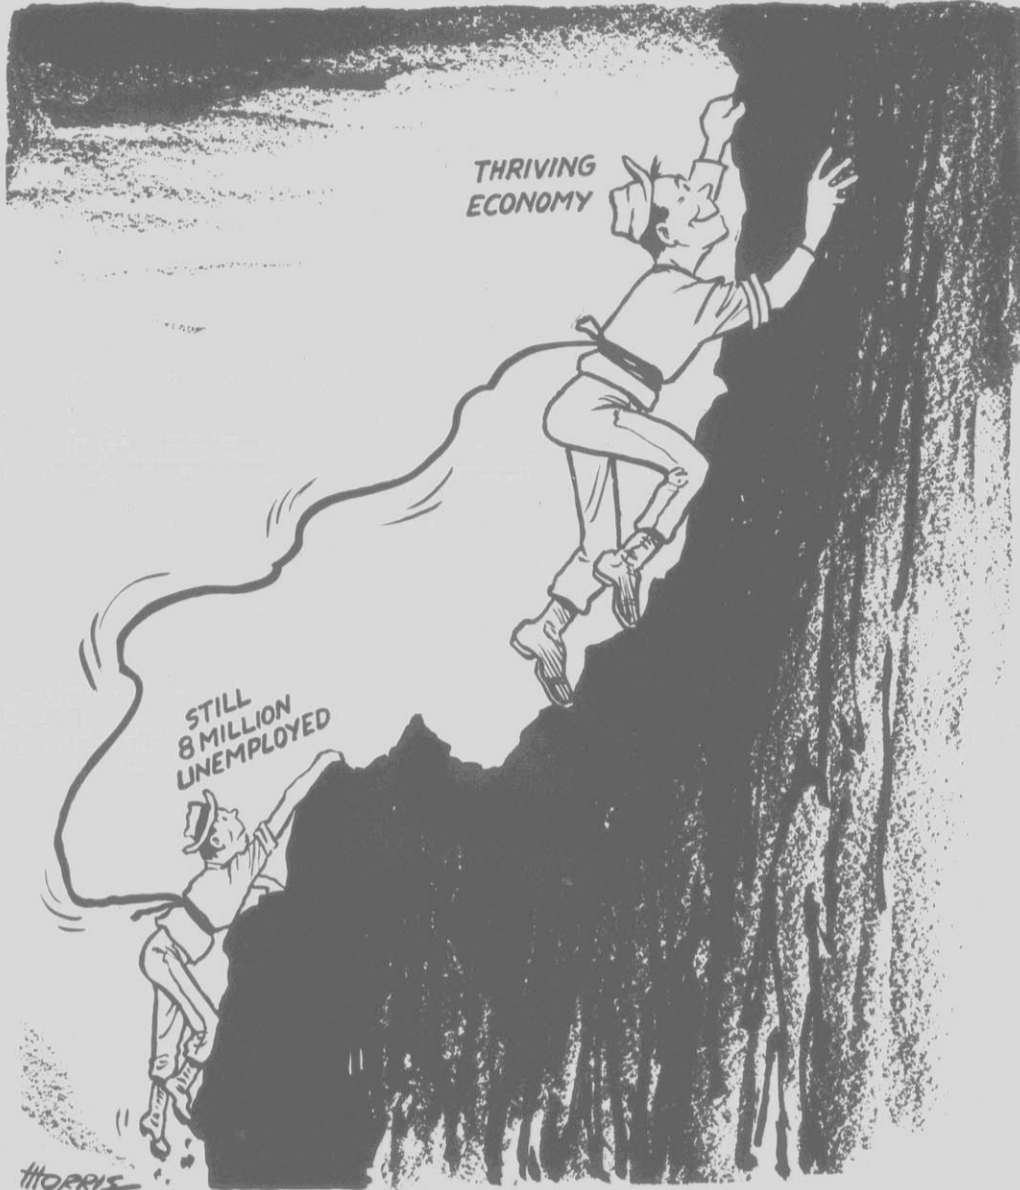

In all these matters we are, of course, dealing with realities too great for the human mind to encompass. Eternity has no geography. Heaven probably exists apart from time and space. Try to think of something which has no geographical reality and does not exist in time and space. There you have a poser indeed.

The truth of the matter is that these little minds of ours can catch only a small amount of the universal truth about God. The responsibility laid upon us is that we take what we know about God and put this at the center of our lives. If we do this we will have done all that God requires in order that we come into the fullness of his purpose for us.

Exercise: Pain Of Neglect

WASHINGTON — On any morning of the week, dozens of joggers plod by our office window. Most of them tend to be Yuppies in their late 20s who've yet to confront the effects of aging. Otherwise, they're middle-aged business types trying to combat bulging waistlines. Rarely do we spy runners of high school or college age.

Despite the efforts of 40 million-plus joggers, most Americans aren't into physical fitness. A recent Harris Poll found that while 59 percent of all Americans claimed to exercise regularly, only 15 percent boasted the kind of physical condition that, in our book, means in "good shape."

But even more disturbing news comes from the Department of Health and Human Services and the American Athletic Union (AAU). Both of these institutions released studies last month suggesting that America's youth were more out of shape than anybody else.

The government study focused on how little physical activity instruction America's young were receiving; less than half of all kids in grades five through 12 were given enough exercise to develop healthy lungs and hearts. Meanwhile, the AAU reported that two out of three children could not pass a basic physical education test. Among the test requirements for 12-year-old boys were 38 sit-ups in a minute, 30 push-ups in two minutes, a long jump of 5 feet 4 inches and a mile run in 8 minutes and 42 seconds.

Some may find the national decline in fitness somewhat inconsistent with our nation's strong performance at the Olympics. But while American educators have for decades emphasized the importance of physical conditioning, they've concentrated on making fit those who are already fit, specifically athletes of potential value to school teams. Consequently, most young people don't realize the value of good physical conditioning until they're long out of school — at which point getting in shape is a game of catch-up.

For years, too, physical education classes in public schools have been run like boot camps. The emphasis has always fallen on taking orders, meeting dress code standards and winning — not strength and cardiovascular fitness. The Marines' format is very similar. Run in the Marine Corps Marathon here, and you'll notice how many grunts don't make the 19th mile.

In requiring tests that allegedly judge power, speed and agility, many fitness experts may be carrying out the inane doctrines of the President's Council on Physical Fitness. For example, such routines as the 50-yard dash and standing broad jump are why so many non-athletes are turned off to exercise. The challenge for physical education teachers is how to turn students on to jogging, swimming, raquet sports and other activities that they can enjoy for a lifetime.

In the past decade, physical education courses have gone the way of the American buffalo for the wrong reasons. Where they should have been eliminated because of incompetence on the part of instructors and outmoded, ineffective course outlines, they instead have fallen victim to budget cuts. An overwhelming majority of school districts today no longer require daily physical exercise. In fact, 16 states have no physical education requirements for the last three years of high school.

Equally disturbing is that most physical education instructors come out of the old school. Because of budget cuts, many young coaches have been laid off. In Boston, for example, there were 199 physical education teachers in 1978; today, there are only 126.

Hiring younger teachers and altering the way physical education courses are taught might help to improve young Americans' understanding of the benefits of fitness. That understanding cannot be improved too soon. The long road to recovery is evidenced by the folks who jog by our office window with the pain of neglect on their faces.

No Charges In 'Freak Accident'

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — There are no plans to file charges following a weekend party that left nine people hospitalized, some for burns to their stomachs and esophaguses, after they drank a corrosive liquid they apparently mistook for wine, authorities said.

"It's just a freak accident," said a spokesman for the Catawba County Sheriff's Department who refused to give his name. "The kids drank it themselves — no one forced it on them. We can't charge anybody if it wasn't forced on them."

The nine were hospitalized Saturday after they attended a party in Conover where potassium hydroxide was mistaken for wine, Catawba County Sheriff's Department officials said. The bottle containing the substance was in the refrigerator and the liquid was red, sheriff's officials said.

Three people were in critical condition, three were in serious condition and one in satisfactory condition at North Carolina Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem Monday morning, hospital spokesman Bill Glance said. Two patients were discharged late Sunday afternoon, he said.

All or part of the stomachs of three of the party-goers were removed Saturday because of severe burns. "They're very seriously damaged," Glance said.

The red liquid was kept in the refrigerator in a bottle with a German label on it, police said.

"I guess they thought it was wine," the sheriff's department spokesman said.

"It's got a smell of alcohol to it," the spokesman said.

The chemical is used industrially to make soap, bleach, liquid fertilizers, herbicides and other chemicals and is powerful enough to burn deeply and penetrate the stomach walls when ingested, said Dr. Victor Holloway, a Charlotte surgeon.

The incident occurred at a party attended by about dozen teenagers and young adults between midnight and 2 a.m. Saturday at a house in Conover, located about 50 miles northwest of Charlotte and 100 miles west of Greensboro, sheriff's officials said.

The victims, who drove themselves to Catawba Memorial Hospital in Hickory, were later taken to Baptist Hospital with internal and external burns, Glance said.

Glance said Dwayne Brown, 19, of Catawba, was burned most severely and was in critical condition early Monday morning. Doctors removed his severely burned esophagus and stomach.

"If he survives, he'll be in for a long series of reconstructive surgery," Glance said.

Physicians can reconstruct an esophagus, using a colon or small bowel, and a stomach, but the procedure is complicated when both need to be replaced at the same time, said Holloway.

Doctors removed part of Steven Estes' burned stomach Saturday. Estes, 17, of Conover, underwent additional surgery Sunday and was in critical condition, Glance said.

Russell Cooper, 24, of Newton, also was listed in critical condition Sunday. His stomach was partially removed Saturday.

Angela Bowman, 16, of Conover, was in serious condition after surgery Sunday. Glance said he did not know the nature of the operation.

Glance said Steven Reinhardt, 25, was initially believed to be seriously burned when he was brought in Saturday, but his condition has been upgraded to satisfactory.

"His mouth was swelled shut," Glance said. "But it turned out that his burns were limited to the mouth and he didn't have any other organs burned."

Lester Osborne, 24, of Conover, and Eric Sigmon, 19, of Claremont, were listed in serious condition with burns on the esophagus.

HEART SURGEONS — Dr. Allan Lansing, director of the Humana Heart Institute, left, talks with Dr. Robert Jarvick, inventor of the Jarvick-7 artificial heart at a press conference following Sunday's surgery on William Schroeder who became the second person to receive an artificial heart. MCC Board Disappointed At Service Area Proposal

The Board of Trustees of Martin Community College have expressed concern over a proposal by the state to remove Washington County from the college's service area.

The trustees expressed their dislike for the plan at the board's recent quarterly meeting. Dr. Travis Martin, president of the college, told trustees that new plans drafted for service areas of community colleges in northeastern North Carolina would take Washington County from MCC's service area and add it to Beaufort County Community College's service area. Washington County is adjacent to Martin County on the east and adjacent to Beaufort County on the north.

The new service area plans were recently submitted to the office president Bob Scott of the North Carolina Community College system, said Martin. MCC trustees requested that MCC President Martin express their concern over the proposal to state officials.

Trustees noted that the proposed changes have not taken place and have not been approved by the State Community College Board.

The new service area proposal for Martin Community College would consist only of Martin County and the townships of Indian Woods, Merry Hill and Windsor in Bertie County. Under the proposal, the population of the area served by Martin Community College would be 35,282, while the populations of the service areas of Beaufort Community College and Roanoke-Chowan Technical College would be 65,004 and 49,057 respectively.

In other actions at the meeting, the trustees approved action to temporarily eliminate the carpentry and heavy equipment mechanics courses due to insufficient enrollment. They also approved hiring several new staff members for the school.

Trustees were notified that about 40 acres of property near Plymouth would be transferred to the college from the North Carolina Nature Conservancy to be used for research and educational purposes.

World Court Ruling Blocks U.S. Motion

By ROLAND DE LIGNY
Associated Press Writer

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court ruled today that it does have jurisdiction over Nicaragua's complaint that the United States was "waging armed attacks" aimed at toppling the Sandinista government.

The ruling foiled a U.S. motion to dismiss the complaint, which was filed April 9. The United States claimed that Nicaragua never recognized the authority of the World Court and thus the court had no authority in the case.

In a 15-1 vote asserting jurisdiction, the court said Nicaragua "had unconditionally declared that it recognized the jurisdiction of the court by signing and ratifying the charter of the United Nations" under which the court is constituted.

American Judge Stephen M. Schwebel dissented from today's majority ruling. At Nicaragua's request, one judge was added to the court for this case only, due to the United States' presence on the 15-member panel.

The United States contended during oral proceedings in April that Nicaragua never recognized the authority of the World Court, or its predecessor, the Permanent Court of Justice of the League of Nations, and thus could not apply to the court for a judgment.

During those initial proceedings, Nicaragua maintained it had in fact recognized the panel's jurisdiction by signing and ratifying the U.N. Charter.

In today's ruling, read by Court President Taslim Olawale Elias of Nigeria, the court also rejected a Reagan administration declaration last April 6 that the United States would exempt itself from World Court jurisdiction in Central American disputes for a period of two years.

That statement by the United States was intended to undercut Nicaragua's filing of its complaint three days later. The World Court today ruled that the United States cannot exempt itself in advance from court authority.

Despite its announcement, the United States assigned a legal team to the case and has participated in the proceedings thus far.

The court based its ruling on U.S. acceptance of its authority on a 1946 U.S. pledge to unequivocally recognize court jurisdiction unless the United States had given six months notice that it would not do so.

The court's assumption of jurisdiction in the case cleared the way for hearings on U.S.-supported military action against the leftist Sandinista government. Those hearings could take several years, and any ruling would not be binding since the court has no enforcement powers.

The court also ruled today that last May's interim ruling against the United States — which ordered it to cease any military actions against the Sandinistas and to "fully respect Nicaraguan sovereignty and political independence" — should remain in force until a final adjudication of the dispute.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.PA

DETECTIVE AT WORK

When your dentist looks into your mouth, he puts all his powers of detection to work. Tooth decay or unhealthy gums are easy to spot. But he has to look closer than the obvious. Mirror, light, x-rays and other instruments help. So do his years of training and practice.

Your dentist is a trained medical observer. He'll be able to spot any suspicious lesions, lumps, discolored areas, or sores that might be malignant. Early detection saves lives.

Lips, tongue, cheeks, any part of the oral cavity are proper sites for inspection. If there's any suspicion of oral cancer, a biopsy or sample of the tissue under suspicion can be sent to a pathologist for examination. In most cases the suspect tissue may be found to be normal and not malignant. It may be just a minor irritation that's causing the problem.

But it's always best to be sure. If there is a problem, it's so much easier to cure if discovered in time. Your dentist is trained to spot other medical symptoms as well as give you the care you need for good dental health.

CONTROLLERS WATCH — Raleigh-Durham Airport air traffic controllers work on the catwalk outside Terminal B's control tower after an electrical fire forced the evacuation of about 1,500 people. The controllers were evacuated along with others inside the terminal but later returned, working first on the roof of the terminal, then the catwalk before moving back into the tower about 1:30 p.m. (AP Laserphoto)

RDU Airport Fire Forces About 1,500 To Evacuate

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A fire that forced about 1,500 holiday travelers and Raleigh-Durham Airport employees to be evacuated may have been caused by a short-circuit, but the airport director says he's not satisfied that's the "total cause."

"We definitely know where it started, but I'm not totally sure it was an electrical short-circuit that caused it," said John Brantley, RDU director.

Preliminary reports by investigators indicated a "shortage in the wiring that went through the ... area" may have caused the fire, which began early Sunday morning in an area near a storage room but was not discovered until shortly after noon, he said.

"But I don't feel that may be the total cause of it. The insurance folks will be out (today) and we may have better thoughts on it at that point," Brantley said.

No injuries were reported, but the fire did force at least one flight to be diverted and also delayed many travelers returning from the Thanksgiving holiday by 30 minutes to an hour, officials said.

"There was smoke in the terminal when we arrived on our flight at about 10 o'clock," said Richard Bentzen of Rye, N.Y. Bentzen and his wife, Anne, were on their way to New York City's LaGuardia Airport from Savannah, Ga.

But Mrs. Bentzen said that she thought "the kitchen was the cause of the smoke."

The Bentzens were at the airport restaurant when "a police officer came into the restaurant and indicated that there was a fire and for us to leave the terminal."

Art St. John of North Palm Beach, Fla., had just put his son on board a flight to New Jersey and was on his way out of the terminal when police told him and his daughter, Lisa, to evacuate the building.

St. John, who was visiting his daughter, said that there was no panic or hysteria and that everyone left the terminal calmly.

"It was exciting for a few minutes ... and then everything went back to normal," he said.

The fire started in a room that carries wiring and plumbing throughout the Terminal B, oldest of the two facilities at the airport, said Russell Capps, Wake County fire marshal.

"There's no physical damage outside the room, but it knocked out the power and did considerable damage inside (the walls)," Capps said. "It apparently started in a janitor's room on the ground floor, which was used to store equipment."

Brantley said it didn't "appear the fire burned that long."

Because power was disconnected to the terminal, air traffic controllers at the Washington Air Route Traffic Center in Leesburg, Va., handled traffic to and from RDU.

Controllers at RDU worked from the observation deck at the airport before returning to the tower late Sunday afternoon, said Don Liggins, a controller at the airport. "We went back into limited status about 2 p.m., operating on top of the terminal roof," Liggins said in a telephone interview. "We actually got back into the tower about 4:30."

George McConnachie, area manager for the Washington traffic center, said the center took responsibility for directing RDU air traffic at about 1 p.m. and continued until 9 p.m.

"As of 9 p.m., the (RDU) tower was back in operation," McConnachie told the News and Observer of Raleigh. He said the center handled 173 flights to and from RDU while the airport's tower was without power.

The fire forced Piedmont Airlines to divert one flight from RDU to the Greensboro-High Point Winston-Salem Regional Airport, said Frank Bouska, operations manager for Piedmont Airlines at RDU.

Authorities started investigating the report of smoke as early as 5:30 a.m. Sunday. It wasn't until a second search five hours later that officials found the problem.

"At that point, we checked around and turned on some fans," Brantley said. "The smoke turned black and that helped us find the source of the fire."

Once the fire was discovered, the terminal was evacuated.

The fire erupted as Thanksgiving travelers prepared to depart North Carolina and others returned to the state. As local fire fighters arrived on the scene, planes continued to land and takeoff from the airport, which serves the eastern portion of the state.

UNC-President Search To Begin; Friday Says He Won't Suggest Names

GREENSBORO, AP — University of North Carolina President William Friday says he will not make any suggestions as to who should follow him as the board of governors of the 16-campus system begins its search this week for his successor.

Friday is the only non-board member invited to sit in on the board's meeting Friday in Southern Pines, but he said he won't be among those dropping names.

"My involvement, if any, will be as a resource person, someone to help the board look a bit into the future, determine the role and function of the university and the type of person needed to lead it," Friday said.

"I'll probably be suggesting other people with whom they should talk — groups like the Carnegie Foundation and the American Council on Education — groups that can give them leads on people all over the country.

"I certainly don't want to do anything that even remotely looks like I'm trying to influence the choice of my successor," he said. "That wouldn't be fair to anyone involved."

Friday announced on Sept. 14 he'll retire in July 1986, a few weeks before his 66th birthday. Friday, president of the system since 1956, had planned to retire in 1985 but delayed his departure when members of the board said they needed more time to find a replacement to head a system with a budget projected at $1 billion next year.

Board members were hesitant to discuss the agenda for the meeting.

"How can I predict what 31 other people are going to want to talk about?" board Chairman Philip G. Carson of Asheville said. "Really, the best I can do is to say the purpose of the meeting is to begin the presidential search process."

Because the 12-year-old board never has chosen a president, it has no procedures or guidelines for conducting a search. Carson said one of his personal goals "is to have the framework for selecting a president at least begun" when the meeting is over.

Carson said the meeting will be held in private "because it's hard to believe there'd be a session like this without names coming up. I know enough about how many people have mentioned names to me to know it's almost certain to happen."

Former North Carolina Gov. James Holsouser, a board member from Southern Pines, said the private session also is designed "to make sure everyone is able to speak his or her mind without feeling inhibited."

The meeting may go beyond procedure to focus on what type of person the board should seek as Friday's successor, Holsouser said.

Democrats Foresee No Changes In Law During Martin Tenure

RALEIGH, AP — Democratic legislators are unlikely to change in the state succession law, which allows the governor and lieutenant governor to seek two consecutive terms, should they take effect until 1992 and should named Republican Gov. James Martin.

The proposal, told the News and Observer, is based on the fact that even if they could repeal the 1976 constitutional amendment, the succession law would still stop Martin from serving two terms.

That view was endorsed by House Speaker Lister Ramsey, D-Madison, U.S. Gov. Bob Ladd Jordan, Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Harold Burdison, D-Lenoir.

"I have heard enough discussion to know the bill will be introduced in the 1985 legislative session," said Jordan, a potential challenger to Martin in 1988. But he added, "Anything that happens to succession should not impact Jim Martin."

"My opinion is, if anything is done, it would not be done to affect the sitting governor," said Hardison.

The statements indicate that Martin already has tended off a potentially controversial challenge from the Democratic-controlled General Assembly. Martin, who takes office in January, had said he would fight any effort to seek him from seeking re-election in 1988.

Other Republicans warned that efforts to keep Martin from running again would be viewed as a partisan political ploy that might anger voters.

Gov. Jim Hunt pushed the succession amendment through the Legislature in 1976, and in 1980 was re-elected. Some legislators have complained that succession tends to give the governor more power and slows career advances of other ambitious politicians.

The amendment was ratified by the state's voters, and repeal also would require a statewide referendum.

Former State Legislator Dies

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Frank H. Brown Jr., 69, a former state legislator, lobbyist and educator at Western Carolina University, died Saturday after a lengthy illness.

Brown began his career at WCU as coordinator of forestry and agricultural programs. Later, he became professor of chemistry, assistant to the president, vice president and vice chancellor for administration, vice chancellor for development and extended services and acting president and acting chancellor.

Brown was a state representative from Jackson County in the General Assembly sessions of 1949, 1951 and 1953.

Debate Looms On Erosion Control Proposals

By The Associated Press
State officials who would enforce proposed regulations banning structures such as seawalls, bulkheads and stone revetments along the North Carolina coast are bracing for a stormy debate when the proposals go before public hearings in January.

The state Coastal Resources Commission last week tentatively approved new regulations banning the structures, which some say are necessary to keep buildings up and the ocean out.

Temporary measures such as piling sand or sandbags in front of property, would be allowed on ocean beaches. The proposed regulations will be discussed at a series of public hearings along the coast in January. A final decision will be made after the hearings, which have not yet been scheduled.

David W. Owens, director of the N.C. Office of Coastal Management, said he expected the issue to be controversial because it affects what private property owners can do to protect their property. He said the commission is attempting to balance property rights with public rights to the ocean beaches.

"We see it as one of the most critical issues the state will face regarding oceanfront development, because it will answer the question of what our beaches will be like in the future," Owens said. Owens said the use of permanent erosion-control structures causes a loss of sand that can eventually eliminate the public portion of the beach at high tides when water reaches the private property. In addition, he said, the structures create pressure for intensive development and an increase in public expenditures for services and for projects to replace the eroded sand. Under existing regulations, permanent erosion-control structures are allowed to protect erosion-threatened buildings constructed before June 1979, when the state implemented standards that restricted how close buildings could be put to the beaches. The standards established setback lines based on the rate of erosion.

Only temporary erosion-control measures, such as sandbags, are allowed at property developed after June 1979.

The proposed regulations said unsuitable projects would include wooden bulkheads, seawalls, rock or rubble revetments, concrete or rock jetties or groins, and concrete-filled sandbags or tire structures.

Colleges Reach New Students Through Technology

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — College officials are using the latest video technology to generate inquiries and to help college-bound students narrow their choices, officials say.

"We view ourselves as an information resource," said Robert L. Chapman, president of Learning Resource Network of Durham. "You'll never get a better impression of a college than if you're visiting a college, but who can afford to do it? In an hour, a student can visit five colleges, at a cost of zero."

Winston-Salem's R.J. Reynolds High School is one of five schools in North Carolina using such technology made available by the Durham company and Info-Disc Corp. of Gaithersburg, Md., which provides laser disks and playback machines free.

The company plans to lend equipment to 500 schools across the country with large enrollments of college-bound students.

Laser disks are inserted into the playback machine. The programs imprinted on the disks are read by lasers, making for extremely detailed reproduction of images with virtually no wear and tear on the disks.

Learning Resource Network distributed videotaped slide programs to 1,450 high schools nationwide before moving to laser disks. The network has put disk players in about 300 schools and plans to eventually convert the rest to disks, Chapman said.

"The old filmstrips are boring," said Marion Joyce, a spokeswoman for Info-Disc. "Today's high school students have grown up on television and they're used to the motion and the color and the excitement."

One university that recruits through the Info-Disc system is the University of Maryland at Baltimore County. To make its brief video, the university enlisted Peggy Park Hughes, an alumna who won an Emmy for her work in computer graphics for ABC Sports.

The video is a quick succession of images with happy, enthusiastic and attractive students engaging in various academic and athletic pursuits. Lillian Wray, the school's director of publications, said that the school went the laser disk route because "UMBC is very, very interested in getting our message into some of the schools outside of Maryland and outside of the areas where we normally recruit."

Ms. Wray said the school, which has a small and overworked recruting staff, hopes than an eye-catching video will be intriguing enough for someone to send for more information.

Politics A Factor In Dam Project

GREENSBORO (AP) — Proponents of the controversial Randleman Dam project in Randolph County say they hope to win two newly elected Republican congressmen to their side.

"All I would want is to have the opportunity to sit down with them and present our case," said Greensboro Mayor John W. Forbis. "I think the project stands on its own."

But the dam has less of a chance for federal funding since the election, one of those congressmen says.

"I'd say the prospects look dimmer than they did two months ago," said Rep.-elect J. Howard Coble of the 6th Congressional District.

Although Coble said his mind is not closed on the $132 million project, Rep.-elect Bill Cobey of the 4th Congressional District, which includes Randolph County, actively campaigned against the dam.

"Bill was pretty strongly opposed," said Steve Long, Cobey's press secretary. "He feels like other alternatives need to be examined."

Coble defeated incumbent Democrat Ike Andrews, while Coble unseated Democrat Robin Britt of Greensboro.

Britt was one of the most active spokesmen for the project, which proponents say is needed for the long-range water needs of the Greensboro area.

"It's a political question now," Britt said. "In a Democratic-controlled House where there's a premium on dam projects, what happens when a Republican congressman doesn't want a particular dam in his district?"

Legislative aides for Andrews said Congress rarely goes against the wishes of a congressman in whose district the project would be built.

"I think the project is deadlier than 40 hells," said Andrews aide James Hughes, who worked on legislation for the dam for three years.

Coble said his mind is not completely made up, even though he's spoken against the dam. He said he worries about the water quality of Deep River, which would fill the reservoir, and the loss of agricultural land.

"I'm not sure all the answers are in," Coble said. "Issues need to be resolved."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY

BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♥Q65 ♦Q1095432 ♠A62

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♥	?	?

What action do you take?

A.—It's hard to suppress a seven-card suit, but think of the danger. To bid at the three-level would be forcing to game. If partner is short in diamonds, they will be picking up the pieces for weeks. You don't even know whose hand it is. Pass, and see how the auction develops.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠6 ♥AKQJ98 ♦Q3 ♣KQJ6

Your partner deals and passes, as does your right-hand opponent.

What is your opening bid?

A.—You have an excellent hand and, had partner not been a passed hand, you would certainly have opened one heart. However, since partner could not open you can virtually rule out slam possibilities. As a matter of fact, it might not even be your hand! Open four hearts. Naturally, you expect to make your contract, but you also are making it very difficult for the opponents to venture into the auction.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ762 ♥93 ♦Q98 ♣AJ3

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	?	?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner has shown a 6-4 distribution and a dislike for no trump, so there is no reason why you should insult him by blithely going on to three no trump. All you can do now is take a preference to three hearts—you certainly don't want to play in the 4-3 diamond fit.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K103 ♥109763 ♦AJ6 ♣K4

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
?	?	?	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three bids come into consideration—three hearts, three spades and two no trump. We reject three hearts, even though it shows spade support, because our values are too scattered and the heart suit is too weak. There is little to choose between the remaining two actions. We slightly prefer a jump to three spades, despite the flaw of having only three trumps, because our points are prime and we have a ruffing value in clubs.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQJ63 ♥J6 ♦872 ♣962

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dble
2 ♥	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♦
Pass	?	?	?

What action do you take?

A.—For his balancing double, partner could be considerably weaker than for a double in the direct seat. His raise to three spades confirms a sound double, but if he needs no more than you have to make game, he could have cue-bid three hearts or jumped to game himself. Pass.

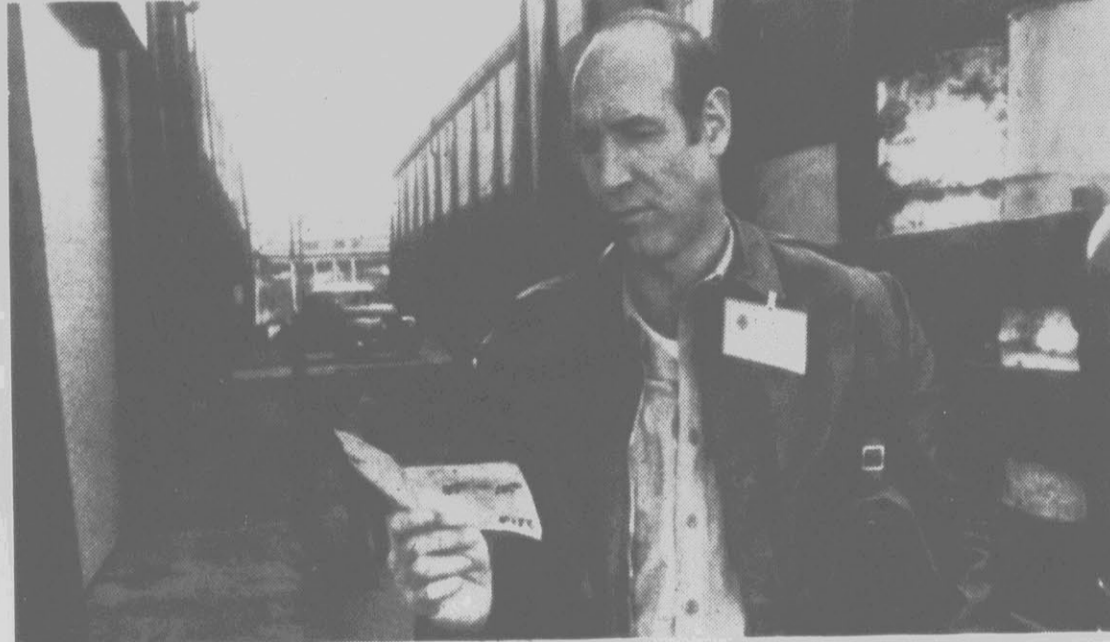

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠3 ♥Q109754 ♦A65 ♣972

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You have a guaranteed eight-card or better fit, so your hand revalues to about 10 or 11 points. Together with partner's no trump opening bid, you should have enough for game, and it is up to you to bid it. Jump to four hearts.

Potter Counts Looks For Variety In City

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Potter Charles Counts, one of the South's best known craftsmen, has come down from his mountain in a middle age search for inspiration in Atlanta's thriving urban art community.

"I'd lived in a rural area for 25 years and I felt like I needed some variety in my life. So the city beckoned," said Counts, who had taught over 500 Southeastern potters in classes and private lessons at his workshop nine miles up Lookout Mountain from the tiny northwest Georgia town of Rising Fawn.

Counts removed his favorite pots and tools from the Rising Fawn Pottery Workshop this month and, on his 50th birthday, set up shop in a studio at a soon-to-open artists' building in the Buckhead community just north of downtown Atlanta.

"It's really the cultural attractions of the city that interest me at this point," he said. "No artist lives in isolation."

Counts, whose pots sell for $8 to $650 at craft shows and fine art galleries, said he intends to work on his clay sculptures and functional flower vases and planters in his new Atlanta workshop.

"I try to make a wide variety of sizes and shapes, so that a lot of people can have it. I'm interested in a lot of people owning my pottery," he said. "It's an ethical consideration. I don't want my work priced so high that people can't buy it. But I want it to be valued and treasured like any artwork, like a painting or sculpture."

Counts said he plans to continue his teaching, taking on private students in Atlanta and conducting more summer workshops on Lookout Mountain, under the auspices of the Rising Fawn Center Inc., a non-profit educational outfit that also plans to offer courses in textile arts and photography.

Counts had considered moving to Atlanta for the last five years, as his children matured and left home. He and his wife, Rubynelle, now a Gwinnett County school teacher, have a son who is a senior at Georgia Tech and a daughter, son-in-law and a new granddaughter who live in Ringgold.

"I've been talking about it, moaning and groaning about it," he said. But what finally prompted him to go through with the move was Tula, a ready-made artists' colony created by photographer Lil Friedlander in an old factory renovated by architect Gilford Smith.

The Tula building, which opens officially Friday, contains more than 25 workshops, studios and galleries for a variety of artists, including painters, weavers, sculptors, architects and interior designers.

Counts said his attraction to Tula stemmed from his early training under Marguerite Wildenhain, a master craftsman from Germany.

Counts was introduced to pottery at Berea College in Kentucky. After obtaining a master's degree in fine art at Southern Illinois University, Counts interned at Pond Farm Pottery in Guerneville, Calif., 1958, under Wildenhain, who had studied at the Bauhaus in Germany.

"The Bauhaus concept was that all the arts should work together under the same aegis, like the Tula building. One art stimulates the other. And the arts survive better in a good architectural setting. That's why you have to have a good environment to work," he said.

Counts shares his workshop and showroom space with Atlanta potter Craig Smith, 27, who got his advanced pottery training from Counts at the Rising Fawn School of Crafts.

Counts has influenced numerous potters in Georgia and the Southeast, either through 20 years of training sessions at Rising Fawn or through the basic primer he wrote in 1973, "Pottery Workshop." The how-to book, published by Macmillan Company, sold 10,000 copies the first year and a steady 5,000 a year since then.

He produced the book after completing a three-year tour of museums, art galleries and pottery workshops throughout the United States. He traveled as a lecturer and guest artist while serving as the elected representative of 1,500 Southeastern craftsmen on the American Crafts Council, from 1968 to 1971.

Counts also wrote a poetic history of Southern potters, "Common Clay," in 1972. And his 1970-72 study for the Smithsonian Institution, called "Encouraging American Craftsmen," was republished by the National Endowment for the Arts and formed the basis for federal policy governing the giving of artistic grants to native craftsmen.

He served on the Georgia Commission on the Arts for five years during the early 1970s, including two years as chairman, and received the Governor's Award in the Arts in 1972 for his research on traditional potters.

Counts, who studied pottery in Africa in the late 1970s, was named a trustee emeritus of the American Crafts Council in 1981 and serves on the board of the Southern Highland Handicraft Guild, an organization of 500 artists working in the nine-state southern Appalachian area.

But Counts said his "best achievement" is his survival "as a really working potter for 25 and a half years."

"The interest in making arts and crafts and selling it is one of the most important social changes in our era. When you think about how many Americans are making things by hand, it's phenomenal," he said.

"In my professional lifetime, in the last 25 years, the fine line between art and craft has been erased and we're living in a culture in which Americans are educated to search out the human value in a work.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After David Yomtoob's 1981 liver transplant, his parents urged teachers and coaches to "treat him like any other kid."

Joyce Shannon is jealous of her twin sister Katie's new liver.

The Yomtoob and Shannon families, like Charlie and Marilyn Fiske — whose daughter Jamie is one of the world's most celebrated liver transplant recipients — are coping with the aftermath of transplant surgery.

"They're certainly much happier when they have a healthy child," said clinical social worker Beverly Kirkpatrick at Children's Hospital, a leading transplant facility. "But it's a strain on the whole family to adjust to a new family member who's active and running around."

Jamie Fiske, who turns 3 today, is treated no better or worse than her 4½-year-old brother Daren, said her father, a hospital administrator who captured headlines when he appeared before the American Academy of Pediatrics on Oct. 28, 1982, to plead for a new liver for Jamie.

Eight days later, Jamie underwent the life-giving operation.

"We have no choice but to treat her as a healthy, normal child. She wants to do all the things a normal healthy 3-year-old wants to do. Any effort to hold her back is impossible," Fiske said from the family's home in Bridgewater, Mass. "You still worry, you're still concerned. But it's just part of being a parent," he said.

The family's transition from a life of uncertainty and desperation to one of unconditional joy has been relatively easy. The adjustment for other families has been much more difficult as parents are forced to deal not only with the sick youngsters but jealous siblings, and with the guilt of having an ill child or having an improving child while others are doing poorly.

The strain in some cases proves so great that the result is divorce, experts say.

After 16-year-old David Yomtoob of Niles, Mich., returned home following his 1981 liver transplant, his parents were forced to write letters asking his teachers and coaches to "please treat him like any other kid."

"I was real afraid ... I had hard time making friends again. But I managed to get through it and I'm OK now," David said.

For Donald and Mary Shannon of Chicora, Pa., the problems of adjustment have been far greater for their daughter, Joyce, 6, than her twin sister Katie, who received a new liver in 1982. Joyce has told her mother she can't do all the things Katie can "because I have an old liver and she has a new one."

Ms. Kirkpatrick has been studying the effects of transplants on the families of recipients since Dr. Thomas E. Starzl performed the first liver transplant in Pittsburgh in 1961.

She and Larry Gold, a clinicocial worker for heart transplant patients, have discovered a fairly predictable pattern of "ups and downs."

Parents are forced to make travel plans and raise money for the costly operations, then must wait as frustration and fear mount for a donor organ to become available, Ms. Kirkpatrick said.

When a suitable organ is located, new concerns quickly replace old ones, including the threat of rejection, she said. Even after the child is home, many emotional scars remain, often lasting as long as a year.

"Parents say now they have a new disease and it's called liver transplant," said Ms. Kirkpatrick, whose findings were presented at the International Pediatric Social Work Conference earlier this month in Miami. "They have to learn how to deal with a liver transplant."

"The child is different. Before he was sick and couldn't get around and needed mom and dad for everything. Now they can do things without mom and dad. The roles have switched."

"It's just like somebody handed you a new child," said Arlen Hollinsworth, whose 4½-year-old only child, Benjamin, became "more willful" before he died following a liver transplant in September 1981.

Because of the excessive attention before and immediately after their transplants, young organ recipients can end up being "very bratty."

Adjustments For Families Of Transplant Patients Vary

Officials Negotiate With Somali Hijackers

By JAMES R. PEPPER
Associated Press Writer
ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP)

The Somali hijackers held by Somali forces are demanding to know up a Somali Airlines jet with 100 people aboard passed without incident to day, and Ethiopian officials said they were negotiating with the gunmen.

Information Ministry officials told reporters at Bole International Airport that talks with the sky pirates were being supervised by Foreign Minister Goshu Wolde. The officials did not disclose the substance of the talks.

More than 100 people aboard the Boeing 707, which has been parked at the airport since Saturday, the same day it was hijacked on a flight from Mogadishu, Somalia, to South Arabia. Somali pilots are requested and received a monetary bribe plant called star. When they get a producer, wariness and a slight euphoria.

More than two hours after the latest deadline set by the hijackers to blow up the plane, soon today, 3 a.m. EST, the plane could be seen sitting on an airport tarmac. Reporters were kept away from the area, but the jet could be seen via binoculars.

The hijackers first threatened Saturday to blow up the plane if Somalia did not meet their demands for the release of political prisoners. They set three additional deadlines and allowed each to pass without exploding the plane.

Ethiopia's Foreign Ministry said it appeared that five people were holding the plane — three hijackers who seized control of it, and two passengers who joined them.

Somalia's official Mogadishu Radio called on the Red Cross to contact Ethiopia for permission to visit the plane and urged the international community to pressure Ethiopian authorities to end the hijacking.

Somali President Mohamed Siad Barre, in a Radio Mogadishu report monitored in London, was quoted as saying, "The problem is with the Ethiopian government. We await their action... The Ethiopian government is totally responsible for securing the safety of the passengers, the crew and the aircraft itself. We hope that they will meet their international obligation and role, as agreed by the world at large, to fight this ugly action."

Somalia, in a statement from its Foreign Ministry telexed to The Associated Press bureau in Nairobi on Sunday, rejected the hijackers' demands.

The plane was commandeered on a flight to Jidda, Saudi Arabia, with 130 people aboard. It tried to land in South Yemen but was turned away, and the hijackers then directed the pilot to fly to Ethiopia.

On Saturday, the hijackers freed 19 women and children passengers; a security guard who was shot and wounded in the takeover; the pilot, who was beaten for refusing to follow hijackers' orders; and the first officer, who became ill, Ethiopian authorities said.

Officials said 103 crew and passengers — including one American — remained aboard the jet along with the hijackers and their accomplices.

The Ethiopian statement said the government had appealed to the hijackers "not to make this unfortunate incident become a hostage to a time factor."

The hijackers wanted Somalia to free 14 prominent political prisoners and grant reprieves to seven students scheduled to be hanged in Somalia on Sunday for anti-government activities, Ethiopian officials said.

A statement Sunday on Mogadishu Radio said the demands were "a false reason, one of their own making which they have invented as a pretext for their act of terrorism. This is because what they have said (about scheduled executions) is not intended."

Goshu, the Ethiopian foreign minister, told reporters the Somali government had said "no executions are foreseen for the immediate future," a response that apparently upset the hijackers.

He said the hijackers feared the youths would be executed "at any moment" and they would not be satisfied until the seven are safe in neighboring Djibouti.

Computers Have Impact In Home Mortgage Arena

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The time-honored tradition of shopping for a mortgage by phoning lenders one after another until you got bored or fed up with the project is changing.

Computers are taking the drudgery out of finding a way to pay for the most expensive thing most people will ever buy — a home.

The idea is simple enough. Lenders list their loan options in a computer network. Borrowers, usually for free, can have personal information and the type and size of loan they are looking for punched into the system. The computer sorts out the matches.

The computer screens are located in the offices of lenders, in which case only that lender's loans are listed; in the offices of Realtors; or in a few cases in the offices of a service set up to match lenders and borrowers.

The more sophisticated operations are called CLOs, for computerized loan origination networks.

Not only will those systems find you a loan, they will enter your salary and other personal information, tell you if you meet the basic qualifications, transmit your application to the lender and keep track of it for you, telling you the status of the approval process.

For example, an applicant will know if an employer has sent in a verification form, or if the appraiser has turned in a report.

While the computer printout presents a wide choice, it is not a complete choice. And the consumer trying one of the new services should understand what is offered.

Dallas Bennewitz, the vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions who is involved with mortgage lending programs, says, "If the borrower doesn't really shop the deal, they may end up paying" extra to cover the cost of the network.

"They could end up paying more for the loan if they don't really know what's being offered off the system as well as on competing systems.

John M. Toups, chairman of Planning Research Corp. which operates LoanExpress in the Washington, D.C., area, disagrees to an extent. "It isn't a question of completeness, it's a question of can you get close to the best deal you can make?"

He argues that a borrower is in good shape if he or she can get within an eighth of a percentage point of the best deal offered. In addition, he noted the "untold time" saved by using the computer system.

He acknowledges the number of lenders in his system is "relatively small" considering all of the potential lenders in the Washington area.

Bennewitz says that limitation may work to the borrower's advantage. "If you've got every lender doing this it can be a bewildering number" of options, he said in an interview.

Mark Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, says a task force saw a developing "fight over access to the customer ... that the lender is going to start waking up to when they start losing the customer."

He told Women in Housing and Finance at a recent luncheon meeting that traditional relationships between lenders and the Realtors and homebuilders who steered business their way will no longer exist.

A Realtor is more likely to go to a system to explore the loan offerings on the screen and then hand-hold the consumer through the entire process, "thereby acing out the entire rest of the marketplace," he said.

Voluntary X-Car Recall Rejected By General Motors

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors Corp. is rejecting a government request that it recall more than a million 1980 X-cars because of a possible defect in their power-assisted brakes, a company official says.

The latest proceeding concerning the X-car — that the power-assisted brakes require more pressure than normal — is separate from a U.S. District Court trial under way in Washington in which the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration alleges that the rear brakes of the cars sometimes lock, resulting in skids.

In the latest case, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is asking for a voluntary recall. But Clifford Merriott, GM's director of news relations, said Sunday the company would reject such a request.

"With the engine adjusted properly, there's no vacuum problem," Merriott said in a telephone interview from his home in Detroit, referring to the cars' ability to create a vacuum that allows the operation of power brakes.

Even if the problem arises, it does not create a control problem, he said, because the driver continues to have the ability to stop the car.

"You don't lose all brakes," he said.

"A recall letter has been written" in the latest proceeding against the X-car, said Richard Burdette, spokesman for the highway safety agency.

"That letter represents a judgment by investigating engineers that we will be able to prove at some point in the future that a defect exists. It asks for a recall so that we don't have to go through the long procedure" often required to force one, he said.

While the agency has not made a declaration that a defect exists, he said, "the overriding idea is that we are concerned a defect exists and want to get the car off the road as quickly as we can."

The cars involved include the 1980 Chevrolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Buick Skylark and Oldsmobile Omega. GM made a total of 1.1 million X-cars in 1980.

The New York Times, in today's editions, reported that experts said a recall could cost the automaker from $30 million to $50 million.

Burdette said the safety agency has confirmed 509 complaints that extraordinary pressure was required to activate the X-cars' power-assisted brakes, involving 106 accidents and about 31 injuries.

"There have been a number of allegations of fatalities," Burdette said, but "we have not at this point concluded there is a fatality."

Complaints allege that when a driver hits the brake pedal, "it feels dead and there is a need to apply more pressure than normal," Burdette said. It is particularly hard for short people or those who sit far away from the brake pedal, he added.

In the federal trial now under way, General Motors contended it has proved the X-car is a safe product. It presented an analysis of traffic records that suggests 1980 X-cars have been involved in fewer accidents than similar autos built by competitors or than 1980 passenger cars in general.

A government attorney replied that the accident analysis was not sophisticated enough to detect the brake defect alleged in the safety agency's suit — that the rear brakes sometimes lock, causing skids. He said the government would present test data in its rebuttal case to counter GM's test results.

Ax-wielding temperance leader Carry Nation was born on this day in 1846. She would have applauded a recent 239-238 vote that banned liquor sales in the seven taverns and two liquor stores of one Chicago precinct. In Chicago, the individual precincts still have the "local option". This year Oklahomans legalized "liquor by the drink," but it is still illegal there to give liquor to fish. In 1982, retail liquor sales in the U.S. reached $19 billion.

AP Newsman May Face New Charge

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An Associated Press newsman, accused of criminal offenses related to a report about the Indian army assault on the Sikhs' Golden Temple, says an interrogating officer told him the government might also charge him with sedition.

That charge carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Brahma Chellaney, 27, in a telephone call to New Delhi from Amritsar, said Sunday that investigating officer P.N. Mehta told him he was "waiting for government permission" to bring the charge. Mehta was quoted as saying the government had no intention of dropping the case against Chellaney.

The journalist said he was questioned for two hours Sunday, the fourth day of interrogations during which he has been refused the presence of legal counsel.

Chellaney has been accused of maliciously inciting communal discord with a dispatch, published only abroad, that said some Sikhs were tied up and shot last June during the army's operation against terrorists inside the Golden Temple in Amritsar. Chellaney is accused of two criminal offenses on incitement, each carrying a maximum of three years in jail. He also is accused of violating press censorship in Punjab state, where Amritsar is located.

Chellaney has declined to reveal the sources for his news dispatch, citing journalistic ethics and constitutional freedom of the press.

The Indian government has called his report baseless. The Associated Press said it stands by the report.

Chellaney was the only representative of a foreign news organization present in Amritsar during the siege of the Golden Temple. He reported that at least 1,000 Sikhs and 200 soldiers were killed and quoted police and medical sources as saying some Sikhs were shot with their hands tied behind their backs. The government said about 600 people were killed.

The leading Indian news magazine, India Today, later reported the same death toll as in Chellaney's dispatch. The Indian Express newspaper, the largest circulation English-language daily in the country, also reported that some Sikhs were found dead with their hands tied behind their backs, and the Express quoted post mortem reports.

Sedition is defined by the Indian penal code as bringing or attempting to bring hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection toward the government.

Chellaney said Mehta told him the army wanted the sedition charge leveled against him and that the central government regarded his case as a "prestige issue."

The newsman was ordered by the Supreme Court to go to Amritsar and cooperate in the police investigation. The court rejected his lawyer's plea that he be questioned in the presence of legal counsel. The court extended his temporary bail and Chellaney has not been arrested.

Farm Scene

Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

A successful farm business has as its foundation a well-organized records system. Record keeping is becoming more and more vital to the survival of the agricultural industry. A good records system will assist managerial decision-making and be a source of personal satisfaction.

Farm record-keeping may be separated into two basic parts: recording of business transactions and enterprise budgets. Recording of business transactions involves the flow of money inward and outward while the business is actively in progress. Enterprise budgets are the result of this flow of money. These budgets reflect the return per acre experienced after the harvest of a particular crop has been completed.

Record-keeping styles vary from shoe boxes to sophisticated computers. What method is used depends upon the manager's skill in record organization. Computer programs have helped farmers make significant progress in their record-keeping systems. These devices provide a faster and more efficient way of calculating such items as operating costs and returns per acre.

Efficiency is the "bottom line" in agriculture today. A good record-keeping system assists growers in making decisions which are critical to the life of a farming operation. Tobacco leasing costs represent a good example of what records can do for a farmer. By examining the enterprise budget of tobacco, a farmer can decide how much he can afford to pay for rent of a pound of tobacco while still expecting to receive a reasonable return per acre. This same kind of information can be used for various other kinds of agricultural commodities.

The Agricultural Extension Service provides enterprise budgets for all kinds of crops grown in North Carolina. These budgets have space available so farmers can calculate their personal costs per acre. A computer is also available so that this process can be quicker and more efficient.

Come by the Agricultural Extension office in Pitt County located at 1717 W. Fifth St. to begin your farm record-keeping system.

NEW YORK AP — The stock market opened slightly ahead today as two major banks cut their prime lending rates.

Citibank in New York was first to drop its prime, or base, rate by a quarter-point, to 11 1/2 percent. It was quickly matched by First National Bank in Chicago.

The banks' moves came just after the market opened, and in the first 1 1/2-hour the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 32 points last week, edged up another 9.44 to 1,220.74.

Gainers took a 3/2 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Further reductions in the banking industry's prime rate were expected by some credit analysts, who noted that other interest charges had fallen in recent weeks, lowering the banks' cost of obtaining funds.

The downturn in rates has accompanied a substantial slowing of the economy's expansion, which has provided crosscurrents for the market.

Investors are encouraged that the slowdown is expected to push rates even lower in the weeks ahead, particularly if the slower growth prompts the Federal Reserve to further ease its grip on credit. But investors also are worried that the economy's contraction will adversely affect corporate earnings.

On the NYSE's active list, Kellogg gained 1/4 to 29 1/2. Warner Communications rose 1/2 to 21 1/2. American Express lost 1/4 to 37 1/2, and Dow Chemical was up 1/4 to 29 1/2.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 18.79 to 1,220.36, giving it a gain for the week of 32.36 points.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 3 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index jumped 1.3 to 96.19.

Big Board volume totaled 7.91 million shares, against 11.62 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.32 to 209.22.

Heart ...

Jarvik said the mood in the operating room during Schroeder's implant surgery differed sharply from that in the University of Utah operating room where Clark became the first recipient of a permanent artificial heart.

"It was an entirely different situation here — a great feeling in the operating room of deliberate, calm progress," Jarvik said. "There was never a point when we felt we might lose him."

Clark lived for 112 days after the Dec. 2, 1982, implantation of his artificial heart. He died of circulatory collapse caused by multiple organ failures.

Schroeder's artificial heart was implanted by Clark's surgeon, DeVries, the only person authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to implant the experimental device.

Schroeder, a retired quality assurance specialist at Crane Army Ammunition Activity in Crane, Ind., lives with his wife of 32 years, Margaret, and his six children in Jasper, Ind., 90 miles west of Louisville.

He had suffered from cardiomyopathy, a gradual wasting away of the heart muscle caused, in his case, by heart attacks he had in 1982 and 1983.

Members of his family had "a few tears in their eyes" when they learned that his operation was a success, said Lansing.

Meanwhile, hospital officials said a potential artificial heart recipient was admitted to the hospital Sunday for evaluation and a second candidate would be admitted today.

"We are not stopping our search for patients," Lansing said.

Schroeder had twice signed a long consent form that spells out in great detail the things that can go wrong with the artificial heart.

The surgery began at 7:57 a.m. Sunday and was completed shortly before 3 p.m., when Schroeder was wheeled into the coronary intensive care unit.

After the implantation, DeVries leaned over Schroeder's bed and said, "You did really well. It went perfect."

For the rest of his life, Schroeder will be tethered by flexible plastic tubes to an external power supply. He is now being sustained by a $40,000, 323-pound console the size of a small refrigerator. When his condition improves, that power supply will be replaced for up to three hours a day with an 11-pound briefcase-sized power pack worn over the shoulder.

DeVries was lured from the University of Utah to Humana Hospital Audubon, where the heart institute is located, by the promise of $10 million to $25 million to pay for 100 artificial heart implants.

Humana Inc., the Louisville-based parent of the Audubon hospital and the heart institute, owns 89 hospitals in the United States and abroad, making it one of the largest owners of for-profit hospitals in the nation.

Planning a long trip? Holmes suggested that you should be fully awake and "properly rested" and make frequent stops or occasionally switch drivers. "Drivers should have ample rest in order to be alert at the wheel and able to make split second decisions."

Emergency equipment should include a glass scraper-snow brush, booster cables, flares or emergency light, a shovel, tow chain or strap, blankets; and in case of snow, tire chains, sand, rock salt or traction mats.

The proper use of safety restraints for children (required by law for children under 2 years of age), and seat belts for adults, can help prevent serious injury in case there is a collision.

In addition to practicing safe driving habits on streets and highways, Holmes said caution should be used in parking lots as well. Noting that many accidents are occurring in local parking lots, Holmes said drivers should make sure the way is clear before pulling from a parking space and said drivers should watch for pedestrians and other vehicles while driving through parking lots.

Banks Trim Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Two major banks today reduced their prime lending rates by one-quarter of a percentage point, lowering the key borrowing charge for businesses to 11.5 percent.

It was the fifth cut in the banks' base lending rate since late September, returning the prime to a level last seen in early April.

Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, was the first major bank to reduce its prime rate. The reduction was quickly matched by First National Bank of Chicago, the seventh largest.

Several regional banks also made identical reductions.

The prime rate is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans. Banks' most creditworthy customers often borrow at below the prime rate, while small businesses often are charged more than the prime.

The latest reduction had been widely expected because other money-market rates, such as those on certificates of deposit, have been falling.

Lebanon Levels Accusations As Talks Continue

By EARLEEN F. TATRO

Associated Press Writer
NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon accused Israel today of trying to create "a no man's land" in south Lebanon by rejecting the deployment of Lebanese army troops along its border.

Israel has said it recognizes Lebanon's sovereign right to control Lebanese territory "but contradicts it by trying to control the deployment" of the Lebanese army, said Lebanese delegation spokesman Lt. Col. Basaam Saad.

He spoke to reporters after the opening of the fifth round of troop withdrawal talks between the two military delegations at United Nations headquarters in Naqoura.

The talks ended this afternoon and were to resume Thursday. Both sides reported little progress.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli military sources said two rockets fired Sunday night from Lebanon hit fields inside Israel in an area known as the Finger of Galilee, but caused no casualties or damage. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, would not say exactly where the rocket fell.

Before Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982, Israeli border settlements were often the target of Katyusha attacks by Palestinian guerrillas.

Conference sources said today's talks at Naqoura focused on trying to define the role in south Lebanon of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon under a 1978 mandate drawn up after Israel's invasion that year.

One of the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said, "They (the conferees) are still at the starting position."

A statement from Lebanon's chief delegate at the conference, Brig. Gen. Mohammed Al Hajj, read in English by a Lebanese army lieutenant, contained many of the accusations and demands echoed by Saad.

The sessions, sponsored by the Carter Center of Emory University, will focus on unintended injuries; cancer; circulatory diseases; infant mortality; perinatal morbidity and unintended pregnancy; homicide, suicide and domestic violence; infectious and parasitic diseases; diabetes mellitus; dental diseases; depression and alcoholism.

Since the $100 denomination is the largest that banks can stock for the public, anyone wanting to give over $100 must get several, whatever it takes for what they plan to give. And we've got plenty of Susan B. Anthony silver dollars.

According to Furrell Taylor, senior teller at NCNB National Bank, "Based on demand in past years, NCNB's request for new money as Christmas gifts have been for $100's, $50's, $1's and $20, in that order. Requests this year have just begun to come in, and we have whatever people want in abundance, except for the Eisenhower silver dollars."

The Anthony dollar and the $2 bills, Taylor says, "are definitely not hot items for gift giving, although the demand for $2 bills does pick up at Christmas time."

Wachovia Bank's senior teller Gailya Hill said "as of today, we have had only a few requests for new money, however, this will likely change within the next two weeks."

Bears Top Vikings For Central Title

By The Associated Press

In a moment of triumph, the Bears' first title of any kind in 21 years, Coach Mike Ditka's thoughts went back to Chicago's rich football past. He remembered Papa Bear.

The year was 1963. The Chicago Bears were coached by George Halas, one of their better players was a tight end named Mike Ditka and they won the National Football League championship.

"I think that the most important thing is that this game go to the man that deserves it most, Mr. Halas," Ditka said after the Bears beat the Minnesota Vikings 34-3 Sunday to wrap up the NFC Central title with a 9-4 record.

Another division title was wrapped up Sunday as the San Francisco 49ers crushed the New Orleans Saints 35-3 to win the NFC West title.

Two other divisions remained close as the season finished its 13th week.

The Seattle Seahawks beat Denver 27-24 to create a tie in the AFC West at 11-2 and break the Broncos' 10-game winning streak.

In the NFC East, the Washington Redskins beat the Buffalo Bills 41-14 and New York Giants rallied to edge Kansas City 28-27 to tie them with Dallas at 8-5 atop the division. St. Louis, 7-6, remained one game behind with a 17-16 victory over Philadelphia.

In other games Sunday, Pittsburgh crushed San Diego 52-24, Cincinnati beat Atlanta 35-14, the Los Angeles Raiders defeated Indianapolis 21-7, the Los Angeles Rams edged Tampa Bay 34-33 and Cleveland downed Houston 27-10.

Last Thursday, Dallas beat New England 20-17 and Detroit edged Green Bay 31-28.

Miami, which has already clinched the AFC East title.

Halas, the founder and owner of the Chicago franchise until his death in 1983, was the man who hired Ditka to run the Bears.

Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time rushing leader, was also feeling good after he rushed for 117 yards and scored the Bears' fourth touchdown on a 2-yard run.

"I knew my body would hold out, but I'm just glad to get it done," Payton said.

One player who is glad just to have a job is Steve Fuller, the quarterback who replaced starter Jim McMahon three weeks ago after he suffered a kidney injury. Fuller threw two touchdown passes and completed 12 of 19 passes.

"What we do best, our bread and butter, is give the ball to Walter," Fullers said.

49ers 35, Saints 3
Rookie linebacker Todd Shell had two sacks, six tackles and an interception that he returned 35 yards for a touchdown as the 49ers clinched the NFC West. The Saints, 6-7, managed only a second-quarter field goal by Morten Andersen as New Orleans' quarterbacks were sacked seven times.

"I think we just wore them out," San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana said. "They were blitzing so much you just can't keep that up for an entire game ... It was just a matter of time before we pulled away."

The 49ers led 7-0 at halftime before Montana overcame an 0-for-6 first-quarter start to make his next 14 of 24 for 177 yards and two touchdowns.

Seahawks 27, Broncos 24
Dave Krieg and Darryl Turner combined for an 80-yard touchdown on the first play of the game, but the Seahawks needed help from the Broncos to tie them for the division lead at 11-2. Denver drove to the Seahawks' 8 with 39 seconds remaining, but Rich Karlis missed a 25-yard field-goal attempt.

"We were hoping for a big play on that field goal attempt," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said. "The ball just bounced right for us. That's football."

Steve Largent had his best day as a pro for Seattle catching 12 passes for 191 yards and a touchdown. Krieg completed 30 of 43 passes for 416 yards.

"I hit the ball well," Karlis said. "It just went straight into the upright. The bottom line is that I missed it."

The teams meet again in the Kingdome on the final day of the season.

Horton, Lavette Head All-ACC Team

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Seven football players from five Atlantic Coast Conference schools were unanimous selections to the 1984 All-ACC team announced by the Associated Press.

Leading the way on the team announced Sunday were tailbacks Ethan Horton of North Carolina and Robert Lavette of Georgia Tech, who have provided more than 2,200 yards of offense for their respective teams.

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Horton came to North Carolina as a quarterback, but when Kelvin Bryant went down in 1981, Horton stepped in and has charged ahead to become the fifth leading rusher in Tar Heel history at 3,074 yards behind Don McCauley, Kelvin Bryant, Mike Voight and Amos Lawrence. His performance includes a career-high 1,247 yards this season.

Lavette rushed for 80 yards on 20 carries against Wake Forest last week, leaving him 15 yards short of becoming the ACC's third all-time leading runner, thus surpassing North Carolina's Mike Voight. With 1,080 yards in 233 carries, Lavette will close his collegiate career next Saturday against Georgia.

The 24-man team was selected by a panel of sportswriters who cover the ACC in their particular state and the North Carolina members of the AP's national college football panel.

The other unanimous picks were tackle Jim Dombrowski of Virginia and tight end Ken Whisenhunt of Georgia Tech. Virginia defensive back Lester Lyles joined Maryland linebacker Eric Wilson and Clemson punter Dale Hatcher as a unanimous choice of the seven panel members.

The rest of the offense featured Greg Hill of Maryland and Terrance Roulhac of Clemson at wide receivers and Georgia Tech's Ken Whisenhunt at the tight end spot.

On the line with Whisenhunt and Dombrowski are North Carolina State's Joe Milinichik at tackle, Georgia Tech's Tony Kepano and Clemson's Steve Reese at the guards and Maryland's Kevin Glover at center.

Clemson's Mike Eppley is the quarterback and Clemson's Donald Igwebuikwe is the placekicker.

Massive Clemson nose guard William Perry anchors the all-ACC defensive line joined by Wake Forest junior Gary Baldinger, Maryland's Bruce Mesner and Virginia's Ron Mattes.

Virginia's Charles McDaniel and Maryland's Eric Wilson combine with North Carolina's Micah Moon to form the linebacking corps. In the defensive backfield with Lyles were Maryland's Al Covington, Wake Forest's Ronnie Burgess and Clemson's Ronald Watson.

Whisenhunt has caught 26 passes for 500 yards and three touchdowns, ranking fifth on the ACC list entering the last week of action.

Eppley is known for his two-sport heroics — in addition to quarterback, he was also a guard for former coach Bill Foster's basketball team. He closed out his career at Clemson as the school's all-time leader in completion percentage, passing efficiency and touchdown passes.

His favorite receiver was Roulhac, who caught one touchdown pass in seven of 11 games this year and was a runaway leader with eight scoring catches. Hill is the league's leading receiver with 51 catches.

Dombrowski and Milinichik were the most consistent performers for their offensive lines this year, while Reese constantly graded in the 90s. Glover was the anchor of Maryland's top-ranked offense.

Igwebuikwe finished the year with 89 points, hitting all 41 extra point kicks and adding 16 field goals.

Baldinger led a Wake Forest defense that improved dramatically en route the club's first winning season in five seasons. Burgess picked off 16 interceptions, tying the ACC career mark.

Mattes was one of Virginia's outstanding defenders, breaking up many backfield combinations. Lyles was part of a Cavalier defense that ranked second overall prior to last weekend's loss to Maryland.

Perry possesses most of the records on the Clemson defensive books. He is the ACC's all-time leader in tackles for losses with 57. Mesner was the third leading tackler on the Maryland defense.

Wilson is the leading tackler on the Maryland and holds the Terrapin career record for tackles with 468. McDaniel was part of the Virginia defense that held then-ranked West Virginia to a touchdown, then shut-out N.C. State to earn a spot in the Top 20.

Watson led the Clemson secondary with 84 tackles and was second to Perry.

Hatcher led Wake Forest's Harry Newsome with a punting average of 44.7 yards per kick entering last Saturday's finale against South Carolina.

Welsh Named Top ACC Coach

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

He has guided Virginia's football program from the depths of the Atlantic Coast Conference to the heights of championship caliber, and for his work George Welsh has been named ACC coach of the year by The Associated Press.

Welsh received six of the seven votes cast by a panel of sportswriters who cover ACC schools as well as the North Carolina members of the AP's college football board. The other ballot was cast for Georgia Tech's Bill Curry, who also led his team out of the cellar.

When he took over for Dick Bestwick, Welsh inherited a program that had topped the 500 level once in 14 years. His first campaign finished at 2-9, but he remained determined to bring a winner to Charlottesville and raised the club to a 6-5 finish in 1983.

The 1984 season got off to a dismal start when Clemson pounded the Cavaliers 55-0. It was then that Welsh gave his team a big dose of confidence.

"We treated it as a loss, one game out of 11," Welsh said. "We pointed out to our players that we were fooled on a couple of occasions. We decided to forget about it."

The Cavaliers proceeded to forget and use their opponents as therapy. Four straight victories followed before a tie with Georgia Tech stopped the momentum. Through the early games, Welsh was using two quarterbacks, sophomores Kevin Ferguson and Don Majkowski. As Ferguson failed to guide the team effectively, Majkowski came on as the offensive leader, guiding the team down to its challenge with Maryland to the ACC title.

"He played better in two games, against Virginia Tech and Duke," Welsh said of Majkowski. "He played better and practiced better. He's just gotten better."

Added to the success story was an effective running game led by Howard Petty and Barry Word, a stout defense which got stingy in the last half of the schedule and Welsh and the team had earned a bowl bid, first ever in the school's history.

Even as it became apparent that the team was going to get to a bowl game, Welsh wanted to keep things in perspective.

"I tried to," he said. "I think that was important. You start dreaming about some things and you forget how to get it."

Welsh considers the future bright for Virginia as long as the program maintains its desire to be among the best in the ACC.

"I think we have to rebuild our defense next year. There's a fine line between winning and losing," Welsh said. "You have to be tenacious. Your players have to be dedicated. You have to work just as hard."

With that in mind, Welsh says his coach of the year honor is the result of everyone's hard work.

"I think our players need to share in that," Welsh said. "I think that's the best part."

Previous winners of the AP coach of the year award include Clemson's Danny Ford in 1983 and Maryland's Bobby Ross in 1982.

Bassett Eliminated

Anne, 21, ousted 11th-seeded Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden 6-0, 3-6, 6-2 while 19-year-old left-hander Liz defeated 14th-seeded Alycia Moulton of the United States 4-6, 6-3, 8-6 in Monday matches.

Carling Bassett of Canada, the No.

7 seed, also tumbled out of the tournament, beaten 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 by unheralded South African Beverly Mould.

Four other seeds successfully negotiated the opening round of the women's singles.

Rose Looks To Climb From Cellar

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants open the 1984-85 cage season Tuesday night at Jacksonville looking for better things.

The Rampants return three starters and one part-time starter from last season's 12-12 club, and Coach Jim Brewington is hopeful that they will be able to climb out of their seventh place finish of last year to the middle of the pack this time around.

"We don't have a lot of height and that will be our biggest weakness," Brewington said. The tallest man on the team is 6-5 senior forward Carlton Wilson, who averaged 14.6 points a game, tops on the team.

"We do have good quickness, and I hope that can offset our lack of height," Brewington added.

In addition to Wilson, the Rampants return 6-0 senior guard Tyrone Smith, 6-1 senior forward Gary Scott and part-time starter Dwight Smith, a 5-9 junior guard.

"We have more depth this year than we've had in a while," the coach said.

Currently listed as starters are Wilson, Tyrone Smith, Scott, 6-3 sophomore forward Melvin Jenkins and 6-3 junior center Martin Norville — if Brewington goes with a one-guard offense. If he goes with a two-guard offense, Scott will be replaced by 5-9 junior Wayland Moore.

Others on the team likely to see action include 6-1 senior forward Jesse Pratt ("a real leaper"), 6-3 senior forward Mike Hathaway, 5-8 junior guard Mike Herring ("he's going to play a lot") and 6-0 senior forward Adrian Brewington.

Two others, 6-2 junior forward Glenn Duttie and 5-8 junior guard Peter Grice currently look to work their way in more slowly, although Brewington wants to take a good look at everyone before conference play starts in January.

"We tried a lot of combinations in our scrimmage," Brewington said. "Some of the things I saw weren't pleasing, but we've only been working a couple of weeks."

Wilson is expected to carry a good deal of the scoring, but Brewington feels that Moore can hit from the outside and that Melvin and Norville will give the Rampants more of an inside game than they've had in recent times.

"Our defense is a little suspect at this time," Brewington said, "but we're trying to put more emphasis on man-to-man because I think we've got to be able to play some. We looked pretty fair in our scrimmage."

Brewington figures Kinston as the team to beat, but feels that Fike and Beddingfield both have good groups of returning veterans to work with.

"I think we'll be somewhere around the middle. I'd like to think we could finish in the top four."

RAMPETTES

Rose's Rampettes have a new coach this year in Bill Kuykendall, a five-year veteran at Washington High School.

But the new coach finds only one returning starter from last year's club that went 4-19 and finished in last place in the league. That lone starter is Vickie Parrott, a 5-8 guard who averaged 5.3 points a game.

She's currently on the starting five along with Pam Smith, a 6-1 junior center who started at times last year, but averaged only 2.6 points a game. Joining them are 5-6 senior guard Lisa Trevathan and 5-11 junior forward Chris Holec, both of whom saw limited action last year as reserves.

Rounding out the group is 5-10 sophomore forward Kim Dupree, who was the leading scorer on the junior high school team last year.

Others on the squad include Kim Bridges, a 5-10 sophomore; Jeannie Carroll, a 5-6 sophomore; Margaret Koonce, a 5-4 sophomore; Karen Dixon, a 5-8 sophomore; Daphne Furlough, a 5-6 junior; Casey Drewery, a 5-4 junior; Lisa Harkley, a 5-7 junior and Samantha Dixon, a 5-10 senior, out for the first time.

"We're extremely inexperienced," Kuykendall said. "Pam and Vickie are the only ones with any great experience at all."

The coach expects to go with the starting five a good deal of the time, but looks for Koonce, Bridges, Drewery and Furlough and Karen Dixon to see good time too.

Kuykendall rates the shooting as "fair" at this time. "We don't have any good long range shooters."

Rebounding should also be fairly good, but the coach feels that a lack of quickness could cause problems in that area as well as on defense.

"It would help for us to have more experience and quickness, but I guess with what we have the biggest need would be a more positive attitude. They need to believe in themselves. They've worked hard in practice and they need to win some to see that they can do it."

Kuykendall said that he is fairly unfamiliar with the Big East and he can only go by what other coaches are saying. From that, he assumes that Northern Nash and Northeastern should be the class of the conference. "It sounds like they'll be head and shoulders over the rest of us."

As for Rose, "I'd like to say that we'll finish .500 or better. But I'd settle for being in the middle of the pack."

Post-Season Politics Begin For NCAA

By The Associated Press

The politicking is growing more intense in the year's second great campaign for votes, college football's national championship.

No sooner had top-ranked Brigham Young and runnerup Oklahoma ended their seasons Saturday than the coaches were trying to make points.

For example, BYU, which became No. 1 in The Associated Press poll last week for the first time ever, trounced Utah State 38-13, completing a 12-0 regular season and prompting these words from Coach LaVell Edwards:

"I got a lot of calls all week long from the news media asking should we or should we not be No. 1. I think we have as legitimate a claim on it as anyone. More than anyone, for that matter."

And, following Oklahoma's 24-14 triumph over third-ranked Oklahoma State, Coach Barry Switzer made sure to point out that his Sooners "have played three No.

1 teams. BYU has not played any team that is in the Top Twenty. So we would like the Orange Bowl (against fifth-ranked Washington) to be for No. 1."

Actually, Oklahoma has only played two No. 1 teams — tying Texas, beating Nebraska — but some politicians have been known to stretch the truth occasionally.

One of Edwards' boosters is Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden, who says, "I've always felt it you can't be beat, you ought to be the best." And BYU is indeed the nation's only unbeaten major-college team.

But Miami's Jimmy Johnson feels that "there are probably 10 or 15 teams that can go out on a given day and beat anybody, and BYU is one of them."

Nevertheless, only BYU, Oklahoma, fourth-ranked Florida (the 3-1-1 Gators wind up against Florida State next Saturday) and Washington (the Huskies' regular season is over at 10-1) realistically have a shot at being No. 1 when the results of the final poll are announced on Jan. 2. And, even though Florida will not be in a bowl because of Southeastern Conference action for violations in its program, remember that Auburn in 1957 and Oklahoma in 1974 won national championships while on probation.

For those who make light of BYU's schedule, Edwards replied that "we had our Kansases, our Syracusees and our Navys (referring to unranked teams which upset Oklahoma, Nebraska and South Carolina during the season) and whomever else, and this particular group of guys have always come out a winner. To me, that's what makes them legitimate in the rankings where they are."

Most of the postseason invitations went as predicted, although the Cotton and Sugar Bowls won't know their host teams for another week. In both those games, as well as the Rose Bowl, the host won't even be ranked as high as other teams in their own conferences.

For the second time in three weeks, Texas did the Cotton Bowl dirty. The sixth-ranked Longhorns were upset by Baylor 24-10, virtually destroying the hoped-for match with Doug Flutie and No. 10 Boston College.

On Friday, the Cotton Bowl was on Cloud Nine when Flutie heaved a last-second 48-yard touchdown pass to Gerard Phelan, giving the Eagles an amazing 47-45 victory over No. 12 Miami. But the only way Texas will be their Cotton Bowl opponent is for the Longhorns to beat Texas A&M next Saturday while Houston loses to Rice, the Southwest Conference cellar-dweller.

Houston, which handed Texas its only other setback, tied the Longhorns for second place in the SWC at 5-2 by downing Texas Tech 24-17. Eleventh-ranked Southern Methodist is 6-2 and through with league play after defeating Arkansas 31-28 but Houston, a four-time loser which hasn't been in The Associated Press Top Twenty all season, would go to the Cotton Bowl in the event of a three-way tie.

With Florida out of the bowl picture despite its first-ever SEC title, the Sugar Bowl host will be No. 13 Auburn, provided the Tigers defeat Alabama on Saturday. Otherwise, it's No. 16 LSU, a 33-15 winner over Tulane.

Southern California will represent the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl against eighth-ranked Ohio State, but the No. 14 Trojans suffered their second straight loss since clinching their bowl trip, bowing to Notre Dame 19-7. Meanwhile, Washington, whose only setback came at the hands of USC, will be in the Orange Bowl hoping for a chance to be No. 1.

Elsewhere in the Top Twenty, ninth-ranked South Carolina, down 21-3 late in the second period, rallied to nip Clemson 22-21. Texas

A&M stunned No. 17 Texas Christian 35-21 and No. 18 Maryland captured the Atlantic Coast Conference crown by trimming Virginia 45-34.

The bowl picture looks like this pending next Saturday's results:

Holiday — BYU-Michigan; Orange — Oklahoma-Washington; Sugar — No. 7 Nebraska vs. Auburn or LSU; Cotton — Boston College vs. Houston, Texas or SMU; Rose — Ohio State-Southern Cal; Gator — Oklahoma State-South Carolina; Aloha — SMU-Notre Dame; Fiesta — Miami vs. No. 19 UCLA; Florida Citrus — No. 15 Florida State vs. No. 20 Georgia; Liberty — LSU or Auburn vs. Arkansas; Bluebonnet — TCU-West Virginia; Sun — Maryland-Tennessee (the Vols lost to Kentucky 17-12); Hall of Fame — Kentucky-Wisconsin; Peach — Virginia-Purdue; Freedom — Iowa vs. Texas or Houston; Cherry — Army-Michigan State.

Michigan Could Solve Collegiate 'Crisis'

By HAL ROCK
AP Sports Writer

There is a crisis at hand in college football and the only people who can do anything about it right now are the Wolverines of the University of Michigan.

That's 6-5 Michigan. On Dec. 21, Michigan travels to California — not to Pasadena and the tradition-laden Rose Bowl, the target of every Big Ten team — but rather to San Diego for the more modest Holiday Bowl, a few matches and many dollars below the major postseason games.

Across the field that day, the Wolverines will find the Cougars of Brigham Young University, unbeaten Brigham Young University, No. 1 Brigham Young University.

Now, it's BYU and its bombs away air attack beats Michigan that day, the Cougars may be expected quite justifiably, to claim the national championship for their very own, based simply on having assembled the best record in the land.

Dissenters will argue that BYU comes from the Western Athletic Conference for goodness sake, and how can you possibly have a national champion from the WAC, with its less than mighty athletic tradition?

The fact remains, though, that the Cougars will have beaten everybody on their schedule. Go argue with that. Nobody's beaten them. Who's better than them? If you're No. 1 and you don't lose a game after reaching that pedestal, then you should remain No. 1.

And if BYU wins in the Holiday Bowl, then where does that leave the New Year's Day bowl games, when this business of who really is No. 1 usually is decided once and for all each season?

It is almost an American tradition that the national champion emerge from the Jan. 1 bowl games. Television demands that kind of drama to justify its big bucks payoffs which enable the Cotton, Sugar, Orange and Rose Bowls to enrich the coffers of the participating schools with millions compared to the paltry $470,000 per team paid by the Holiday Bowl.

But it all could be quite moot by then, unless, of course, Michigan jumps to the defense of major college football and upsets these upstarts from Utah.

A victory by the Wolverines would throw the whole thing wide open on New Year's Day and the bowl folks would delight in the debate over who's got the best matchup to produce a new No. 1.

The decision on the national championship will be made by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters who will vote in the final Associated Press poll after the New Year's Day games.

The Cotton Bowl would argue that it has flamboyant Doug Flutie and 3-2 Boston College, which plays the survivor of the Southwest Conference, Texas or Houston. The winner of that game will have lost two games this season.

National champions? Hardly.

The Sugar Bowl has 9-2 Nebraska against the Southeastern Conference representative, Auburn or LSU. Nebraska blew the SWC title by losing to Oklahoma and had bowed before that to Syracuse. Whoever the Cornhuskers play will be also-rans in the SEC, replacing conference champion Florida, which was barred because of its eligibility problems.

Those are not national champion credentials.

The Orange Bowl has Oklahoma,

9-1-1 and Washington, 10-1. The winner will have one loss blemishing its record. Oklahoma was beaten by other ordinary Kansas, and Washington, remember, would be in the Rose Bowl representing the Pac-10, if it had won its conference.

Suppose the Huskies win this game. Could you have a national champion who hadn't even won its own conference? Hardly.

The Rose Bowl has USC, 8-3, with consecutive losses to UCLA and Notre Dame, against 9-2 Ohio State.

Not exactly national championship stuff there, either.

So it comes down to Michigan and the Holiday Bowl game. If the Wolverines can knock off BYU the others have a shot. If not, well there won't be a lot riding on the Jan. 1 games.

Now you know the burden Michigan is lugging along on its trip west, and just who the folks in Miami, Dallas, New Orleans and Pasadena will be rooting for on Dec. 21.

Nicklaus Celebrates $240,000 Putt For Skins Game Victory

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — It was an unusual scene: Jack Nicklaus flipping his putter in the air in an uncharacteristic display of emotion, then whooping and yelping around the green like a small boy.

He had just drilled in an 8-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the Skins Game Sunday that was worth $240,000 and climaxed the two-day match with Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Tom Watson.

Some 35 percent of the country was unable to see it, however. At least on a live basis.

In California, the Mountain Time Zone, portions of the Southeast and an area around Indianapolis, an NBC spokesman said, the network cut away from the made-for-television competition.

Player, Palmer and Watson all had birdie opportunities from 12th tee — and all missed — on the 18th hole before Nicklaus sent home the winner and tossed his putter in jubilation, something he said he hadn't done since winning the 1970 British Open.

"I wanted the putter out of my hand and the ball in it," said Nicklaus.

"I was just happy to be here, to be able to play," Nicklaus said, a reference to orthoscopic surgery which was performed on his left knee less than three weeks ago.

The surgery made it impossible for him to squat down to line up putts. But the 44-year-old Golden Bear converted three clutch putts as the first eight holes of the day were halved and the purse kept building and building, growing and growing until all the money — almost one-quarter million dollars — was riding on the par-5 18th hole at the Nicklaus-designed Desert Highlands course.

After we got past the 17th, it was obvious that at least two of us were going to be shut out," Nicklaus said. "No one wants to be embarrassed."

"So, at that point, it became a matter of pride as much as anything else."

Watson shut out his three Hall of Fame opponents over the first nine holes Saturday, winning all $120,000 available, including $70,000 on the last hole.

Then the first eight holes Sunday were halved, with the prize money mounting on each hole.

Palmer, who drove into a fairway bunker, Nicklaus and Player were unable to reach the 18th in 2. Watson, with the best drive, got it pin-high but well off the green to the right. Palmer, Player and Nicklaus all pitched on and Watson, facing a delicate little chip, saw it take an awkward kick from the fringe and run well beyond the cup.

Bears, Ditka Remember 'Papa Bear'...

skins' all-time passing leader as he threw for 311 yards and two touchdowns. Theismann passed Sonny Jurgensen as the Redskins' passing leader as he completed 26 of 33 passes. Art Monk, who caught one of the touchdown passes, finished with 11 catches for 104 yards. The Redskins took a 24-0 lead one minute into the second quarter as they scored on their first four possessions.

Giants 28, Chiefs 27
Phil Simms threw two touchdown passes in the final 7 1/2 minutes to rally the Giants over the Chiefs, who lost their fourth straight game. Simms hooked up with Bobby Johnson on a 22-yard scoring play with 7:30 left and connected with tight end Zeke Mowatt on a 3-yard touchdown with 2:22 remaining. The Chiefs wasted a three-touchdown passing effort by Bill Kenney and two field goals by Nick Lowery. The Chiefs were driving toward a possible winning score when defensive back Mark Haynes recovered a fumble.

Cardinals 17, Eagles 16
Neil O'Donoghue kicked a 44-yard field goal with eight seconds left to give the Cardinals, 7-6, the victory. Philadelphia's Paul McFadden had given the Eagles a 16-14 lead with a 32-yard field goal just two minutes earlier.

The Eagles, 5-7-1, who were eliminated from any post-season play, also lost starting quarterback Ron Jaworski for the remainder of the season. Jaworski suffered a broken left fibula on a sack on the game's opening series.

Steelers 52, Chargers 24
The Steelers maintained their two-game lead in the AFC Central and scored the most points in an NFL game this year as Mark Malone made a complete recovery from the concussion he suffered last Monday night. Malone connected with John Stallworth on three touchdowns and threw a fourth scoring pass to Louis Lipps as he completed 18 of 22 attempts for 253 yards.

Lost in the Steelers' offensive show was San Diego's Charlie Joiner becoming the NFL's all-time leading career receiver. With six second-half catches for a career mark of 651, Joiner passed Washington's Charley Taylor.

Bengals 35, Falcons 14
Turk Schonert, making his second consecutive start in place of Ken Anderson, completed 11 of 12 passes in the first half as the Bengals took a 21-0 lead and never looked back. On the game's fourth play, Schonert and wide receiver Cris Collinsworth combined on a 57-yard touchdown. The loss was Atlanta's seventh straight and leaves them one shy of the club record set in 1974.

Raiders 21, Colts 7
Marc Wilson threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as the Raiders, 9-4, kept alive their chances for the second AFC wild-card berth. Indianapolis, 4-9, did not have the ball in Los Angeles territory until the third quarter and that came after Greg Pruitt fumbled a punt and Don Bailey recovered at the 1 and Randy McMillan scored on the next play.

Rams 34, Buccaneers 33
Eric Dickerson rushed for 191 yards and three touchdowns, but a blocked extra point on the game's first touchdown turned out to be the difference. Dickerson, who leads the league with 1,632 yards, overshadowed Tampa Bay quarterback Steve DeBerg who threw for 322 yards and two touchdowns. Tampa Bay led 26-17 after three quarters before Dickerson, who gained just 49 yards in the first half took over. His 33-yard run in the fourth quarter gave the Rams a 31-26 lead.

James Wilder crashed over from the 1 in the first quarter to give Tampa Bay a 9-0 lead. Obed Ariri was successful on the conversion, but the Bucs were called for holding and on the second attempt, Gary Jeter broke through and blocked the kick.

Browns 27, Oilers 10
Paul McDonald threw three touchdown passes and Matt Bahr kicked two field goals as Cleveland snapped Houston's modest two-game winning streak. McDonald threw touchdown passes of seven and 14 yards to Brian Brennan and 12 yards to Ozzie Newsome. Houston running back Larry Moriarty, who had rushed for more than 100 yards in each of the last two games, was carried off the field on a stretcher early in the fourth quarter after suffering a pinched nerve in his neck. Moriarty had gained 81 yards on 16 carries when he was injured.

Four Fall In Opening Weekend

By The Associated Press
If the first big weekend of the college basketball season is any indication, the preseason elite could be in for a long winter.

Already, No. 2 Illinois, No. 4 Indiana, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 19 Kansas have tasted defeat, and third-ranked DePaul, in its first game in 42 years without Coach Ray Meyer, barely escaped with a 59-58 victory over lightly regarded Northern Illinois.

Tonight's card featured No. 1 Georgetown, an 81-47 winner over Hawaii-Hilo in its opener, at Hawaii Loa; Arkansas-Little Rock at No. 5 Oklahoma; No. 6 Duke at St. Louis and Cal State-Santa Barbara at No. 13 North Carolina State.

Much of the weekend focus was on Anchorage, Alaska, site of the Great Alaska Shootout. Based on its ranking, Illinois figured to win the tournament, but the Illini, 2-1, dropped a 59-52 decision to Alabama-Birmingham on Saturday and then needed three overtimes to nip Oregon 75-72 in Sunday's third-place game.

UAB, 3-0, added Kansas' scalp to its belt on Sunday, beating the 19th-ranked Jayhawks, 2-1, by 50-46 in the Shootout's championship game. Steve Mitchell, the tournament's most valuable player, hit a three-point play with 28 seconds to play to cinch it. He scored 26 points in the victory over Illinois.

"Steve Mitchell had a phenomenal tournament," said UAB Coach Gene Bartow. "This team, I believe, has a lot of character, a lot of determination."

In a major early-season confrontation, No. 17 Louisville traveled to Bloomington and ripped No. 4 Indiana 75-64 in the first meeting in 25 years between the traditional Midwest powers. Manuel Forrest scored 18 points and Milt Wagner added 17 for the Cardinals, while Steve Alford had 18 to lead Indiana.

Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight said he recalled telling his charges that "there may be 20 really good basketball teams in the United States, but that they're not one of them."

"I'm not worried about winning every game in November or December," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "I just worried about getting our team ready for the (Metro) Conference and having the best team we can have at the end of the year. That's our main goal. We'll know by the end of December whether or not we've got a good team."

Nevada-Las Vegas, mentioned in some circles as a national championship contender, stumbled out of the gate by dropping a 97-89 decision to Nevada-Reno on Friday.

In more routine outings for ranked clubs this weekend, Oklahoma butchered Morehead, Ky., State 94-48. No.

Emmy Competition Creates Tense Moments

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Right after Jane Curtin beat her "Kate & Allie" co-star Susan Saint James for an Emmy award, they returned to New York to tape tonight's episode, which happens to be about how two friends handle their competitive jealousies.

In the show, Kate's daughter, Emma Ari Meyers, and Allie's daughter Jennie Allison Smith, are up for the same part in a school play, so they make a deal that "the loser won't hate the winner, and the winner won't hold it over the loser's head."

The pact, of course, is short-lived, and there are angry words and hurt feelings — the kind of normal behavior and emotions that CBS' hit comedy, which is about two divorced women sharing an apartment, displays so honestly.

The real-life bruises, after Miss Curtin was named best actress in a comedy, weren't as apparent, but Bill Persky, the show's producer-director, acknowledged that people on the set didn't know exactly how to treat the stars.

"There was a lot of treading lightly," said Persky, who himself won an Emmy for best comedy director this year.

"In most situations, the winner goes home and celebrates; the loser goes home and cries," added Persky. "In our show, the winner and loser were in the same house. It forced us to hold down some of the celebrations and condolences."

Persky said the two actresses had lunch together and talked about their feelings. "If there was any problem, it never showed on stage," he said.

Persky, whose career goes back to the "Dick Van Dyke Show" in the 1960s, said egos can easily get wounded in TV, and it can be particularly delicate for shows with co-equal stars in the leads.

Cindy Williams and Penny Marshall feuded openly on "Laverne & Shirley," and "everybody in the business knew that was a living nightmare," said Persky.

"Some of those problems were due to the personalities," added Persky. "Susan and Jane have put in the long time coming to this. They had worked together before and were friends. You have to remember when this show was created, the stars were chosen first, and they had total approval over who could be brought in."

Persky said he tried to avoid potential problems by not hiring actors who have a history of causing complications.

CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," about two female detectives, is another show that divides storylines and the acting load between two co-stars, Tyne Daly and Sharon Gless. The actresses also have competed for the same award. Miss Daly beat Miss Gless for the dramatic-series Emmy last two seasons.

"There were some sensitivities," said Barney Rosenzweig, the show's executive producer. "Sharon and Tyne have a relationship in real life similar to what they have on-screen. That doesn't mean they're not competitive with each other. Both have said the other was their second choice for the Emmy."

The episode filmed just before this year's awards placed the two cops in deep conflict, with their partnership seriously threatened. "That added to the emotional ramifications," said Rosenzweig. "It was a very difficult week."

Miss Daly has played the part of Mary Beth Lacey with two other actresses, but she wasn't nominated for an Emmy until Miss Gless became Chris Cagney.

"They recognize that (Jimmy) Connors always plays his best tennis against (John) McEnroe," said Rosenzweig. "Sharon and Tyne are very close. They rely on each other, and if they didn't get along, that would show up on the air."

On NBC's "St. Elsewhere," Ed Flanders (Dr. Donald Westphal), beat his colleague William Daniels (Dr. Mark Craig) for best actor in a dramatic series. A day or so after the 1984 announcement, Daniels, who has a bad back and was in severe pain, came in to shoot his scene anyway.

"Ed heard about it and brought in the Emmy," said producer Tom Fontana. "Bill was lying down in pain. Ed put the Emmy between Bill's legs, and said it was his, too. It was a very nice moment."

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Library Of Congress Is Increasing Its Inventory Of Television Classics

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Tom Sawyer and Moby Dick move over. The Library of Congress is adding Fred Flintstone and Flipper to its huge collection of classics, in a drive to preserve America's cultural heritage — even a part once derided as a "vast wasteland."

With little fanfare, the nation's largest collection of television shows has grown to nearly 35,000 titles and the experts at the library are looking for more, especially programs made in the 1950s.

"There's the beginning of an explosion of interest in this material from cultural historians and other scholars," says Patrick J. Sheehan, head of the film, television and recording reference department. "There was time when TV was considered devoid of any interest to serious people. That's all changed."

It's the kind of interest that once led Sheehan to leap from his chair and shout to the staff, "Take them, take them all," when a batch of episodes from "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis" became available to the library.

Also enthusiastic are the daily audiences of 200 people this month at experimental lunchtime showings of selected treasures from the library's TV collection.

Program director Scott Simmon said he created the program as "pleasant lunchtime diversion" for Capitol Hill workers during Congress' end-of-the-year recess.

Simmon said, "I didn't dream we'd get this kind of response," to episodes from Groucho Marx's quiz series, "You Bet Your Life;" "The Lone Ranger;" "Have Gun Will Travel;" "You'll Never Get Rich;" "Burns and Allen;" and "Do You Trust Your Wife," a 1956 quiz show hosted by ventriloquist Edgar Bergen and his wooden dummies.

Normally, the TV collection is limited to use by scholars and writers. Viewings are arranged by appointment and the staff discourages citizens from dropping in unannounced to see, for example, an episode of "The Brady Bunch" they may have missed in 1969.

But once admitted to the collection, viewers have a mind-boggling array of titles to choose.

They range from the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon presidential debates to 10 episodes of "Flipper," a show about a heroic porpoise. There are samples of "The Flintstones," a cartoon about cavemen, and "classic" ads for Miller Lite Beer and hundreds of other products.

Nearly every movie made for television is in the collection, along with nightly news broadcasts, documentaries and teleplays from the golden age of live TV. And there are the game shows, Westerns, private-eye series and sitcoms that prompted Newton Minow, as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission in 1961, to label television a "vast wasteland," — a procession of "most of all, boredom."

Tapes of many of the current shows like "Hill Street Blues," "Dallas," "Dynasty" and "General Hospital" and selections from the Playboy cable channel are being saved.

Ironically, the man who is picking the shows for posterity is not a TV buff, but rather a viewer who confines his watching mostly to sports and news.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The rock group Twisted Sister will headline the Providence Civic Center's first New Year's Eve concert since a "near riot" erupted at a 1978 performance by the J. Geils Band, officials say.

The civic center had refused to book rock acts on Dec. 31 in the five years following the melee of fighting, bottle throwing and vandalism, with former director Charles J. Toomey calling New Year's Eve "amateur night for drunks." But executive director Stephen Lombardi said the policy was abandoned after consultation with city officials and police and that security would be tight for the concert. "I think things are going to work out well," he said.

Doo Dah Parade Is Becoming An Institution In Pasadena

By RICK HOLGUIN
Associated Press Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Toro!Toro!Toro! lawnmower team added "rake dancers" this year, and the "tasteless" Texas Chainsaw Massacre Dool Team was back, making the 8th Occasional Doo Dah Parade seem almost an institution. But parade founder Peter Apanel said Sunday, "If this is an institution, then institutions are in trouble."

About 60,000 people packed the sidewalks of Pasadena's "Old Town" area five-deep with an enthusiasm rivaling the million-strong crowds of Rose Parades — which are an institution in Pasadena. They saw such diverse entries as the Synchronized Briefcase Drill Team and the Great American Yankee (GAY) Freedom Band from West Hollywood as well as the mower and chainsaw wielders. "When we started, there were a lot of counterculture groups, now, there's a lot more corporate groups," said banker James Kemp, leader of the Briefcase Drill Team. "I took a poll, and all but two of our team members voted for Reagan—the others are out of step anyway."

But some clung stubbornly to a zany past. "We're tasteless and we wanted to stand out in the crowd," said Don Coursey, 29, of Huntington Beach, the leader of the Dool Team and the Night of the Living Dishonor Guard. "We're mental Neanderthals. We want people to boo us as we go by."

Coursey wore an executioner's mask and carried a fake head speared on a stake. He wore real chicken legs dangling from a necklace. Unlike the other famous Pasadena parade, the Doo Dah Parade has no theme, judging or motorized vehicles, Apanel said. It's called

"occasional," not annual, because one year they had two Doo Dah parades. Sunday's event featured 140 entries, many of them with satirical or political messages. The Dump Developers of Unscrupulous Mindless Pollution promoted low-income housing on the nation's toxic waste dumps. "You don't even need electricity," said Mark Kemmer, 29, a Huntington Beach real estate developer who offered Three Mile Island Triplexes, Silkwood models and stock with a half-life of 500,000 years. While taste was not a prime consideration, few spectators seemed offended. They lined the streets under sunny skies to cheer and whistle for their favorite entries. "It's wonderful entertainment. There's a lot of spirit," said Carol Farina, 40, a nurse who came from Grand Junction, Colo., to see it. Her favorite group was the Cancerettes.

Consumers Show Preference For Alcohol

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are drinking more alcoholic beverages than they are milk, but soft drinks are the most popular of all, says a new Agriculture Department report. Overall, per capita consumption of "commercially produced beverages" rose to an average of 133 gallons in 1982 from 114 gallons consumed 20 years earlier. That includes milk, coffee, tea, beer, wine and liquors, soft drinks and fruit juices. Milk accounted for 20.3 percent of the total drinks consumed in 1982. Beer made up 18.3 percent, while wine and liquors accounted for 3.1 percent. The 1962 consumption included: milk, 29 percent; beer, 13.2 percent; and wine and liquors, 2 percent. In other words, using those figures, Americans on the average drank about 27 gallons of milk in 1982, compared with slightly more than 33 gallons in 1962. Meanwhile, beer consumption rose to 24.3 gallons in 1982 from about 15 gallons 20 years earlier. Wine and liquor consumption increased from about 2.3 gallons in 1962 to 4.1 gallons. Thus, alcoholic beverages in 1982 comprised about 28.4 gallons, compared with 27 gallons of milk. In 1972, the ratio was 17.3 gallons of beer, wine and liquor to 33 gallons of milk. Over the 20-year period, soft drinks showed the most spectacular changes in consumption patterns. In 1982, those accounted for 29.7 percent of the beverages consumed — about 39.5 gallons — compared with 14.1 percent or 16 gallons in 1962. "Meanwhile, coffee plummeted from a first-place share of 33.4 percent of the total in 1962 to fourth, at 18.3 percent, 20 years later," the report said. "These shifts in consumption patterns, in turn, have affected calorie intake." In 1982, soft drinks, beer, wine and liquor accounted for almost 10 percent of all the calories consumed by the average American, compared with 5 percent in 1962. "These beverages added about 343 calories a day to per capita calorie availability in 1982, almost double the 175 calories 20 years earlier," the report said. Why the shift in drinking habits? Economists say price is a major factor. For example, coffee prices rose more than 300 percent during the 1962-82 period, compared with an increase of 218 percent in the cost of all food. In the late 1970s, a freeze in Brazil hurt the crop and drove up prices. "Per capita coffee consumption, which had been declining at an annual rate of one gallon, fell by almost eight gallons in 1977 as consumers responded to the 85.2 percent rise in price," the report said. But for some other beverages, prices are less clear as a consumption factor. Soft drink prices rose 274 percent during the 20-year period, while fresh whole milk prices only gained 144 percent. Yet, per capita consumption of soft drinks soared 146 percent while milk dropped 18 percent. "Other factors, then, such as changes in lifestyle, dietary concerns, and shifts in the age distribution of the population affect consumers' decisions about what and how much they drink of different beverages," the report said. In the last decade, many health-conscious consumers have made changes in food and beverage preferences, accounting for much of the growth in low-fat products, decaffeinated coffee, low-calorie soft drinks and "light" beer.

"Historically, men have consumed 81 percent of all beer, but that could change since the introduction of light beer has already expanded the market to include more women," the report said. Milk consumption may continue to lose ground in the next decade as the 1945-60 "baby boom" generation gets older. On balance, consumption over the next five years "is expected to be at a rate less than the projected 3 percent increase in population." However, the report said, the new dairy promotion program established by Congress last year "could help boost consumption and improve the outlook for milk." The program is financed by an assessment on dairy producers of 15 cents for each 100 pounds of milk sold commercially.

Drug Links Suspected In Bomb Blast

MONTREAL (AP) — A bomb that ripped through a downtown highrise apartment, killing four people and injuring eight, could have a link to Montreal cocaine trafficking, police say. About 400 tenants of the 21-story, 339-unit Le Maisonneuve apartments were forced to spend the night with family or friends, or at a deluxe hotel at the city's expense, while police sought an explanation for Sunday's Charles Poxon. "But all four were known to police." The dead were identified as Paul April, 42; Gilles Paquette, 27; Robert Lelievre, 63; and Louis Charles, 54. The first three men — and possibly Charles as well — were in apartment 917 when the blast occurred at 4:13 a.m. and might even have been shot beforehand, Poxon said. Poxon said one hypothesis being considered by investigators was that the blast was linked to the Nov. 13 motel slaying earlier this month of Frank Peter Ryan, a reputed cocaine kingpin. Facial hoods and "illegal firearms" were found in the apartment late Sunday, Poxon said. It was not known how many weapons were discovered or what type they were. While the nature of the explosives was still unknown, bomb squad investigators found fragments of a suspected remote control device among the debris. Three of the four dead suffered fatal lacerations over the entire front of their bodies. The fourth victim, discovered some 30 yards from the others, had fatal lacerations to his back. One of the injured, a 22-year-old unidentified woman who lived next door to the bombed apartment, was in stable condition in hospital after undergoing surgery for serious eye injuries. The others were treated and released. The explosion blew down every interior wall in seven of the eight apartments on the north side of the ninth floor. It severed cables suspending the building's two elevators. CHICAGO (AP) — More than 360 people died in accidents on the nation's roads and highways during the long 1984 Thanksgiving holiday weekend, authorities reported. The death toll at 6 a.m. EST Monday stood at 366. California, with 33 deaths, Texas, with 30, and Florida, with 28, led the nation in holiday traffic deaths. The National Safety Council had predicted last week that highway accidents during the weekend could claim between 400 and 500 lives.

Death Toll Was High, But Below Projections Council statisticians said 480 people could be expected to die in traffic during a non-holiday period of the same duration at this time of the year. The holiday began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday and ended at midnight Sunday. Last year, 400 people were killed in traffic accidents over the Thanksgiving holiday. The worst such observance was in 1968 when 764 were killed.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into bookkeeping and records that can help you to know how you should prove yourself in the future. Be active and happy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be a Jet Age product and should be sent to schools where technological subjects are taught. Your progeny may seem quite different from most others, but don't try to change the life pattern since the greatest success can come from this very difference.
