TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

103rd YEAR NO. 291 GREENVILLE, N.C. TUESDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 4, 1984 20 PAGES PRICE 25 CENTS

NEW ADDITIONS — Units in the Greenville Housing Authority's new West Meadowbrook development have been equipped with energy efficient water heaters and furnaces, shown on the left by Authority Director Joe Laney. The 40-unit development located near the Pitt-Greenville Airport is scheduled for occupancy by mid- to late-December and has two-, three- and four-bedroom units.

Housing Authority Approves Plan To Improve Meadowbrook Units

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Housing Authority board members Monday approved a $262,350 budget revision to allow for modernization of the authority's Meadowbrook development.

Capital shifted from the operating fund by the board's action will be used, Assistant Authority Director Ken Nolan said, to replace doors, door screens, windows, outdoor siding and kitchen cabinets at the 65-unit east Greenville project, located near Greenville Utilities' operations center. According to Nolan, the revision brings the cash total of authority energy improvements made in the last five years with operating budget funds and without federal assistance to $800,000.

Also approved at the meeting was a $64,280 budget amendment to fund the replacement of 228 cooking ranges at Moyewood and the purchase of miscellaneous office equipment.

In other business, Nolan reported that HUD-funded modernization efforts at Kearney Park are under way and include storm sewer maintenance, electrical work, installment of new kitchen cabinets and interior wall reconstruction. Nolan added that energy efficient furnaces and water heaters have been installed at the authority's Meadowbrook development and that installation of water heaters at Moyewood is complete.

Director Joe Laney reported that work at the authority's new West Meadowbrook development is 93 percent complete and that the authority is hoping to open units to residents before Christmas. West Meadowbrook consists of 40 units and includes two fully-equipped handicapped residences. The development has been under construction since November 1983 and was scheduled for completion in November of this year.

Laney also told board members that GHA has been invited by HUD to apply for 30 units of existing Section 8 housing. "We're fourtunate to have even been invited," Laney said, "because the state only got 600 units this year." Laney said Greenville has not received funding for Section 8 housing since 1982, and in that year only received "a very small allottment."

Occupany in exisiting Section 8 housing is temporarily down, according to Laney. He reported that 114 of the authority's 120 existing Section 8 units are occupied and that 107 of 109 moderate rehabilitation units are filled. All 60 University Towers units are full.

In other business, Laney said he had received the 1983-84 audit of University Towers and that the report indicated the high-rise senior housing development is good financial shape. University Towers operations generated a 26 percent surplus increase, Laney said, bringing the surplus to $390,555.

Director of Resident Affairs Sallye Streeter reported that average rent at authority developments in November totaled $121.03. Rent at Meadwobrook was $110.95; Kearney Park, $131.01; Moyewood I, $123.11; Moyewood II, $135.42; Newtown, $117.07, and Hopkins Park, $106.62.

Gas Leak Toll May Hit 1,000

BHOPAL, India (AP) — As many as 1,000 people, mostly children, are feared dead from the poisonous gas leak at a U.S.-built pesticide plant here, doctors said today, calling the incident the worst such disaster on record.

Authorities said 600 bodies had been found, and police teams were searching for more in Bhopal and nearby towns today as relatives flocked to mass burials and cremations in the central Indian city of 895,000.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi told reporters after a tour of the stricken city that his government would in future not allow production of "dangerous" material in heavily populated areas. "There will be an overall government policy change," he said.

The doctors, working at Bhopal's Hamedia Hospital, said the accident was expected to cause severe long-run health problems to the estimated 20,000 townspeople who are suffering from gas inhalation.

Dr. Parveen Chaudhury said there was a danger that the survivors may lose their eyesight. Surviving women may not be able to have children, he said.

Another doctor, S.K. Trivedi, said the gas inhalation may also cause blood circulation problems.

Authorities, meanwhile, ordered the Union Carbide Corp. to pay compensation to the victims.

The leak of methyl isocyanate gas affected an estimated 20,000 residents of Bhopal, capital of Madhya Pradesh state about 370 miles south of New Delhi, and triggered a mass exodus from the city.

Bhopal was almost a ghost town with most offices and businesses closed today, an officially declared day of mourning. Streets were littered with carcasses of water buffalo, dogs and birds. Survivors attended mass burials and mass cremations.

The deadly white cloud of gas had cleared but air samples tested today were found to still contain deposits of the deadly gas.

Police and army trucks were picking up bodies from a roughly nine mile radius around the Union Carbide plant, where state Chief Minister Arjun Singh said one of three underground tanks leaked the deadly gas for 40 minutes early Monday.

He told reporters the number of deaths was likely to rise and said it was unlikely the plant would be allowed to reopen at its site in the heart of Bhopal.

Singh also said five plant officials

STOP SIGNS AT RAILROAD CROSSINGS?

Some states have stop signs at every railroad crossing just like they do at intersections of highways. Why isn't this true in North Carolina? Once drivers would get accustomed to it, it would be just like stopping at any intersection and I know it would save a lot of death and injury, not to mention the expense of the elaborate signals now used at railroad crossings. All that would be required would be stop signs and stop ahead — railroad signs. C.B.

State highway administrators say the reason this easy solution isn't put into effect is "related to the liability of the railroad company in an accident. If there were a stop sign at a crossing and somebody got hit, the railroad would be relieved of part of the liability because the driver had run through a legal stop sign." The state has even refused citizens' petitions to erect stop signs at crossings that have had fatalities until signals can be installed.

Some railroad companies have pushed for stop signs at crossings as part of their "Operation Lifesaver" campaign and several state legislatures have complied.

Martin Retires From Pitt Board

By STUART SAVAGE

Robert L. (Bob) Martin of Bethel retired Monday from his seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, after 28 years, and was honored by fellow commissioners at an afternoon reception.

Martin, who served six different terms as chairman of the board during his tenure, told those gathered for the reception, "I don't have the words to express myself properly." But, he said,"It has been a personal privilege to have served.

"It has been a nobling experience for me. I appreciate it. It's just been great."

Martin, who did not seek re-election to the Board of C mmissioners, waged a successful campaign to represent the 6th Senate District in the General Assembly. He will take the oath of office as senator on Feb. 5.

He served as president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners in 1971 and 1972 and has been a member of the board of directors of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners and the National Association of County Officials for a number of years.

Saying "I feel very uneasy," Martin told the gathering that Pitt County "has so many good people interested in the welfare of other people and in the advancement of good government." Martin also said, "I believe Pitt County is favored with as good a staff as there is in the state of North Carolina."

He was presented a resolution of "thanks, admiration and appreciation"

Martin Urges 'Unified State'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Gov.-elect Jim Martin pledged Monday night to work with members of the General Assembly "to create a sense of unity" in North Carolina, to "create a united state."

Speaking at a dinner attended by more than 200 business leaders in the region, which followed a caucus of northeastern North Carolina legislators, Martin said "just think what it will do" to show prospective industrial clients that "Republicans and Democrats work together" in the state.

"Begining the greatest challenge of my life," Martin, a Republican, said to the score of Democratic state senators and representatives at the dinner, "we want to work with you and help you serve our mutual constituants."

Citing "my committment to build a strong economic base" in the rural areas of the state, Martin suggested that the most important thing to encourage industrial growth is "efforts to modernise and reform" the state's tax structure. He also said the state must use it's educational, land and water resources wisely in attracting economic development

Saying some past efforts to improve particular regions of the state pitted one reigon against another, Martin suggested "a sense of unity" should be created across North Carolina, so "the people in the Piedmont will share in the excitement of what can be done in the East ... in the mountains. We need to see to it we have balanced growth within each region."

By working together, Martin said "we can create a united state. I want to build a united state ... North Carolina, the united state. We can do it."

Talking to newsmen following the dinner, the governor-elect said he "didn't promise highways" during his campaign. "When it comes to roads, I'm negotiable." But he said he would "speed up" work on I-40, which, he said, would benefit all of North Carolina.

He also said a speed-up in developing a northern loop of U.S. 264 at Greenville is "negotiable."

Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan, who also attended the dinner, suggested "too much" of the state's economic development has been "up and down the I-85 corridor." He pledged to "try to see that we get our fair share in small counties."

Jordan, who will be the top elected Democrat in the state when the new administration takes over in January, said North Carolina needs to "promote expansion of existing industry," continue to improve roads, and "the number one ingrediant ... education."

Liston Ramsey, speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives, said eastern North Carolina is "a large, spacious area full of natural resources" and human resources. But he said "you haven't had the atten-

ECU To Observe 50th Year Of Women's Basketball

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

When the late Dr. A.D. Frank wanted to form a girl's basketball team at East Carolina Teachers College more than 50 years ago, he was told that such boisterous activity would be unladylike for young women preparing to be teachers.

"In 1932, Dr. Frank wanted a team, but President (Robert H.) Wright didn't think girls should engage in such a sport. But Dr. Frank was dedicated and knew he had interested players because a bunch of girls had played on high school championship teams," said 70-year-old Annie Askew of Greenville, a member of the first women's team.

And despite opposition from administrators, she said, Frank was finally allowed to organize a team in 1933-34 on a one-year trial basis. The team, coached by Frank, went undefeated during that first year.

When the season was over, President Wright announced in chapel one April morning that he would give his support to women's "basket ball." He also dismissed the longstanding rule that the school's women students leaving campus had to wear hats and gloves.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m., East Carolina University will celebrate 50 years of women's basketball at Minges Coliseum when the 1984-85 team plays Howard University. Six members of the first team will be present and a short game illustrating the old rules will be played during half-time.

Ms. Askew said the first team was called 'The Ramblers,' but "I can't remember why they called it that. We used to play in Wright Auditorium, where they had to move the chairs out for us to play."

The first women basketball players in the 1800s, she commented, had to wear bloomers to cover their ankles, "but we wore short pants that just bloused a little." She said that when the players left the gym, they were required to put on warm-up suits.

The rules were also much different then because the sport was considered more of a 'play' game instead of a competitive game. The players were not allowed to play aggressively and therefore couldn't steal or even touch the ball when another player had it.

"There were six players and three played on half of the court and three played on the other half. You couldn't cross your side. We were also only allowed two dribbles," Ms. Askew said.

The first team, she added, played such teams as William and Mary, Chowan, Appalachian, Wingate and the Rocky Mount and Goldsboro YWCAs.

"I just wish Dr. Frank (who died two years ago) was still alive to see this day. You know he always sent me a Christmas card until he died and he never failed to mention the team," she said.

Church Meeting

There will be a meeting of the members of St. Paul Church of Christ Disciples of Christ Church, Ayden, tonight at 7:30.

Safety Council

The Pitt County Safety Council meeting will start at 12:30 p.m. Friday at the Greenville Country Club. Marjorie Purgason, instructor of water safety and swimming for the American Red Cross, will speak and give a slide presentation.

Christmas Play

The Fellowship Church of Greenville is sponsoring a Christmas play at Parker's Chapel gym on N.C. 903 Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Scuffleton Parade

The community of Scuffleton will hold its first Christmas parade at 10:30 a.m. Saturday beginning at the oak tree on Edwards Creek Bridge Road, state road 1004, in Greene County.

The parade will feature 57 entries, according to Janice Beaman, chairman. After beginning at the oak tree, it will continue down state road 1004 to Stocks Grocery, turn onto N.C. 903 and end at Little Creek Original Free Will Baptist Church.

The parade will also feature Santa Claus riding a fire truck.

In addition to the parade, a bake sale will be held at the Scuffleton Rural Fire Association's building and hot dogs and barbeque sandwiches will be available. The food sales will begin around 10 a.m. and all proceeds go to the Scuffleton Rural Fire Association.

Box Tops Needed

The J.H. Rose High School Future Homemakers of America organization is collecting Kellogg's cereal box tops in an effort to help preserve the Statue of Liberty on Ellis Island.

The group is one of many from across the nation participating in the "Keep The Torch Lit" project sponsored by Kellogg's. For every 5,000 box tops collected, the company has agreed to contribute $250 toward the restoration of the statue in the name of Rose High.

Box tops are being collected at the school's home economics office and at the main office. The project will continue through March 15. For further information contact advisors Elaine Tschetter, Marion Wilkes and Renetta Smith.

Vepco Changes Name For N.C.

WILLIAMSTON — T. Justin Moore, chairman of the board of Doninion Resources Inc., the parent company of Virginia Electric and Power Co. (Vepco), announced here Monday that Vepco's North Carolina operations will now be known as North Carolina Power.

"Officially, the name change is effective tonight," Moore told some 200 people, including Gov.-elect Jim Martin, Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan and a score of legislators, gathered for an appreciation dinner honoring business and industry officials following a caucus of northeastern North Carolina legislators.

According to Moore, the change of Vepco's name to North Carolina Power "is a sincere attempt to bring the company closer to our customers" in 15 northeastern North Carolina counties.

Moore pledged North Carolina Power's continued support — in the form of "people, money, action" — toward economic development in the region.

The dinner, at the Roanoke Country Club, was sponsored by North Carolina Power's economic development department.

World Hunger Day

World Hunger Day will be observed Dec. 14 by the Salvation Army when proceeds from its Christmas kettles at two sites and receipts from the day's sales at the Thrift Store will be channeled into the Army's worldwide program to feed the hungry.

Mob Lynching

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brail (AP) — A mob of 300 people lynched five men accused of killing a policeman during a bank robbery in the northern state of Espirito Santo, authorities said.

The men were dragged from police cars by the crowd and killed in front of the bank branch where a police officer was killed during a hold up last week, police agent Jose Carlos Souza Machado said by telephone from Vitoria, 315 miles northeast of Rio de Janeiro.

He said the five, who were among seven men charged with the crime, were being taken to the scene of the holdup to testify when they were attacked by the crowd.

Early Release

RALEIGH (AP) — State Department of Correction officials will be checking the files of almost 400 inmates to see if they can be released early in time for Christmas, officials say.

Each year the governor's office grants Christmas commutations to inmates who meet specific criteria so they may be home for Christmas. Last year, 418 inmates — out of a possible 450 — were released early.

Clerks in the Combined Records Office of the department will being this week checking the records of the nearly 400 inmates whose release dates fall between Dec. 14, 1984, and Jan. 31, 1985.

Wedding Vows Said On Sunday Afternoon

Emily Susan Smith and Timothy Clay Branch were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at two o'clock in the Grindle Creek Church of God. The Rev. Ronnie Dyson performed the ceremony.

Donnie Lee Harris was vocalist for the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robert Smith of Bethel and Carlton Ray Branch and Evelyn Branch, both of Winterville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her maid of honor was her sister, Brenda Dell Smith of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Janie Harris of Greenville, Teresa Page of Winterville and Frances Branch of Jacksonville, Fla., sisters of the bridegroom.

The flower girl was Christine Bibbs and Michael Page was ring bearer. Both are from Winterville.

The best man was Joey Joyner of Winterville. Ushers included Mitchell Smith of Washington, brother of the bride, Danny Smith of Stokes, cousin of the bride, and Ray Branch of Winterville, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline encircled with chantilly lace. The Victorian inspired bodice featured a sheer, V-shaped yoke of embroidered medallion of silk Venise lace. The yoke was outlined in chantilly lace ruffles banded in white satin ribbon. Lace ruffles also accented the basque waistline. The Renaissance styled sleeves featured a pouf of sheer tucked organza trimmed in the lace and ribbon with a fitted undersleeve of Nottingham lace edged at the wrist in a ruffle. The full skirt extended to an attached cathedral length train that was edged at the hemline in a wide ruffled flounce of Nottingham lace banded in satin. She wore a fingertip length veil of imported bridal illusion edged in lace to complement her gown. Her veil was held in place by a Camelot headpiece trimmed in lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of pink bridal roses, white daisies and baby's breath tied with white lace and satin ribbon with pink shower ribbon.

The honor attendant wore a daphne rose colored dress styled with a bustle back of sheer polyester lined in acetate taffeta. It had a ruffled neckline and bow trim. The dress had caplet sleeves and a flared skirt with a flounced hem.

Each of the attendants were dressed identical in wine colored dresses. The flower girl was dressed like the honor attendant.

The honor attendant carried a colonial nosegay of pink and burgundy miniature carnations with white pom pons and pink and white lace ribbons. The bridesmaids carried nosegays like that of the honor attendant. The flower carried a wicker basket with a garland of pink miniature carnations and ribbon.

The mothers of the bridal couple each wore a corsage of white carnations with ribbons matching their dresses. The grandmothers were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

A reception followed the ceremony. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of white snapdragons, pom pons and baby's breath with red carnations, miniature carnations interspersed with holly and cedar.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

MRS. BRANCH

Peterson-Ricks Vows Exchanged

The marriage ceremony of Lt. Gwendolyn M. Ricks and Lt. Nelson O. Peterson took place Nov. 10 at 2 p.m. in the Military Chapel in Nuernberg, Germany. The Rev. Frederick R. Peterson, father of the bridegroom, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride, of the Third Forward Support Battalion, is stationed in Bamberg, West Germany. The bridegroom, of the Second Battalion, 28th Field Artillery, is stationed in Ansbach, West Germany.

After the ceremony the couple left the chapel under an arch of sabers held by fellows officers. A reception was held at the Nuernberg Officers Club. Col. and Mrs. Charles Hood entertained at a rehearsal dinner at their home.

Turkey leftovers can be used in sandwiches, salads, barbecue, tacos, meat pies, turnovers, meatloaf, corn pudding, gumbo and even as a pizza topping as well as in casseroles ands creamed dishes.

Candlelight Christmas Tours

AT BILTMORE HOUSE — George Vanderbilt's 250-room French renaissance chateau is open to the public for evening tours each Saturday this month as part of the estate's Victorian Christmas celebration. It is the first time in the estate's 89-year history that it has opened in the evening to the public. A 40-foot Frazier fir tree dominates the banquet hall. A topiary goose and rabbit occupy the center of the oak banquet table and on either side of them stand five-foot fruit trees containing some 300 apples.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

My husband was rummaging through the "catch-all" drawer the other day when he asked, "Why are you saving a warranty for a bottle warmer?"

"Get out of my drawers!" I said. "What I keep is no concern of yours. Besides, you wouldn't understand."

"I understand that the baby is 26 years old and we no longer warm his bottles."

I had no intention of engaging in an argument about it. Men just don't comprehend that there are some things a woman never throws away.

Maternity clothes, for instance. Women know that somewhere is an informant who tells God when a woman is smug and confident enough to give her clothes away. It doesn't matter if she's 80 years old and living alone on a mountaintop, she will need them.

A sane woman cannot throw away a key. Even a key that doesn't fit anything and probably came with the house; you just don't do things like that.

I can't throw away chicken innards. Hope springs eternal that one day I will gather all of them up from the freezer and make 35 gallons of chicken broth. And don't even suggest that I get rid of a matchbox of my children's baby teeth given to me by the tooth fairy. Some women have dumped them and lived in unbearable guilt for the rest of their lives.

I have never known a woman personally who was able to throw away a tube of lipstick. It could be the color of a marble slab, drier than an Arizona desert and smell like singed hair, but it might just match something you're wearing someday.

All of you women out there who have an entire room filled from floor to ceiling with plastic oleo containers will know what I'm saying when I confess I have not discarded one in 35 years. If there's another birthday celebration for America, I've got the leftover dishes for it.

Souvenirs are assured of a home for the rest of their lives. The times I've stood poised over a trash can holding a coconut with the face of a half-crazed Indian I bought in Hawaii or a small outhouse with the door ajar from Covington, Ky., you don't want to hear about.

This probably sounds like borderline superstition or irrational to a fault, but I knew a woman in the Sun Belt who was cleaning out her closet one day and threw away a pair of shoes that no longer fit, a tiara, and a winter coat she no longer had use for.

The very next day her feet shrunk and she was invited to an inauguration in Washington.

How much room does a bottle warmer warranty take up?

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The woman who wrote that she was frustrated and irritated because of guests who failed to return their already stamped and addressed RSVP cards for her wedding had every right to be upset. Dinner receptions are expensive, and it would be very embarrassing to run out of food.

My husband and I have a solution to this problem. After the ceremony, when the couple has left the sanctuary, the pastor should make a brief announcement:

"Those people who returned their RSVP cards indicating that they would be able to attend the wedding dinner may go downstairs and find their places at their assigned tables; and for everyone else, there is punch and cookies in the room just to the right of the sanctuary where the bride and groom will be ready to greet you."

This would let everyone know, without insulting anyone, that dinner was prepared for those who responded and yet there is still punch and cookies for everyone else. This would greatly help the bride-to-be, who could then just sit back and relax and forget about calling those who did not respond.

RICK AND SUE
IN CENTRALIA, WASH.

DEAR RICK AND SUE: Your suggestion makes sense—but few would have the courage to do it. Of one thing I am certain: Those who missed out on the wedding banquet because they failed to respond would respond PDQ to their next RSVP.

DEAR ABBY: My 28-year-old grandson and his wife have just had their second child. I love this grandson dearly as I took care of him when he was a child.

Yesterday he told me that he was going to have a vasectomy! I was horrified. He said he couldn't tell his mother or father but wanted me to know, which shows how much he thinks of me.

I am very much against his getting a vasectomy. In fact, I couldn't sleep for worrying about it. Abby, what if his wife dies and he marries a woman who wants children from him? There's also a chance that something will happen to one or both of his children; he would definitely want more.

I don't think he realizes what it would mean for a young fellow like him to do such a thing. He makes a meager living. I pay his rent and utilities. I agree, no more children, but I can't let him do this.

His wife thinks the pill is dangerous. Surely there are other ways of birth control besides a vasectomy for him.

Please help me before it's too late. I am an 80-year-old doting grandmother, but sign me ...

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Although I am informed that some vasectomies can be reversed, your grandson may not be one of the lucky ones should he later change his mind. He and his wife should visit a family planning clinic and learn about alternate methods of birth control.

Your concerns are legitimate, Grandmother, but the final decision is your grandson's.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter, someone objected to keeping children out of school for appointments. You supported this view, and requested that all physicians and dentists make their appointments with schoolchildren after school.

How? I am a pedodontist and my practice is totally limited to children and adolescents. If I were to follow your recommendation, I would have to schedule all my patients between the hours of 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. daily. Obviously this is impossible.

Please print this, Abby. Perhaps some people will try to be more understanding. My poor secretary takes an awful beating from irate parents.

FRUSTRATED DENTIST

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Thank you for calling to my attention the obvious. I may need a dentist to get my foot out of my mouth.

Concensus

The Treasury Department's new income tax code proposal has been laid out for public discussion with predictable reactions of distrust, dismay and questions. It has been in the works since last January, so it is no off-the-cuff product. The changes were devised to keep a presidential promise to come up with a simpler way of filing taxes.

The simplification process is a continuing one; having its beginnings decades ago with periodic revisions.

Mr. Reagan is sensibly sitting back and awaiting responsible public reaction.

This is not — repeat, not — the re-elected president's oft-promised tax cut plan. That will be another ball of twine. What we have now is just a starting point.

What most taxpayers are concerned about in preparation of a new tax formula is the quality of fairness ... as well as simplification. The fairness issue worries some people more than a little, because the Treasury — in its process of simplifying the code — uses its wealth of statistics on taxpayers to compute a host of averages and putting them together to provide a pretty good picture of what the various brackets deduct and pay. With their millions of income tax forms over the years they have resources for determining awfully close approximations of what the average tax share in varied income brackets should be.

One big objection: there are bound to be some taxpayers who do not fit the arbitrary "average" tax figured into their bracket. That means some will benefit and some won't. Alternative forms, as we have today, may suffice.

Experience tells us the objectors will make more noise than the silent majority. So it was no surprise that critics were heard within a few hours of the plan's public release. People who enjoyed certain benefits from the familiar code were prone to look first at how they would be affected in the new formula.

The process of obtaining a workable new code is also the process of obtaining some sort of consensus. That will take time.

Coming

Miracle medical developments often seem remote, but we have seen in the past that medical innovation we read about soon becomes procedures that are performed on the people we know.

Thus it is likely that the development of a new cochlear implant system which will give some measure of hearing to a selected number of deaf people will soon be done here.

A local ear, nose and throat specialist says he and his partners have been familiar with the development of the system and they will go to California in January to learn the specifics performing the procedure.

The device will not be for everyone, nor will it restore full range of hearing. For some who are deaf, however, it can mean hearing a car horn or the door chimes. It can help, with lip reading, in interpreting what other people are saying. And these first models should be improved in the future.

All in all it is a development which can restore some sound contact with the world for some people. No doubt there are local people who will soon benefit from the development.

The Roar Comes From A Mouse

WASHINGTON — The Treasury's tax plan recently handed to President Reagan launched his second term by alienating some of his staunchest supporters and exciting nobody.

Months of wrangling at the Treasury ended with a decision not to attempt the daring innovation that could have captured the nation's imagination: a true flat tax at 25 percent. But much worse from the standpoint of generating public support, the Treasury cut back the Accelerated Cost Recovery System (ACRS) — the faster tax write-off to spur business investment contained in Reagan's 1981 tax cut.

Based on popular appeal, the Treasury's mountain has labored all year — and brought forth a mouse. Tax Division bureaucrats, neither Reaganites nor supply-siders, have seemed more interested in closing old tax shelters than seeking economic growth.

With business mobilized against anything remotely resembling the Treasury package, the White House is now faced with the need for radical surgery on the product so long in the making. That could further roil disturbed waters between Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and the president's men. But anything less could mean legislative disaster for the freshly re-elected Reagan.

Worried presidential aides are nostalgic about how much easier it was to generate enthusiasm for the three-year, 10-percent-a-year tax cut in 1981. While tax reduction is indeed easier to sell than tax reform, the 10-10-10 plan was clearly proclaimed during the 1980 campaign and only later consigned to bureaucrats to fill out details. In contrast, the president this time kept silent during the campaign while Treasury bureaucrats were given nearly a free hand.

Secretary Regan imposed on them one iron limit: The package would have to be revenue-neutral, neither increasing or decreasing the Treasury's tax take. While cheered by foes of higher taxes, that restriction was used by the Tax Division to justify a package inflicting more pain than pleasure. Treasury experts used static analysis to claim that the Kemp-Kasten flat tax would lose revenue, not break even as claimed. To supply-siders, the package the Treasury insists will be revenue-neutral looks like a revenue-gainer.

That is, it would be a revenue-gainer were it not for its assault on ACRS. By limiting depreciation, the bill also limits profitability and, therefore, tax revenue. Why did they do it? Because the tax experts insisted corporate tax rates must follow down individual rates, and the prohibition against static revenue loss meant depreciation rules had to be tightened.

The politically attractive single 25 percent rate was rejected in favor of three rates because Treasury computers found lower bracket taxpayers would pay more under a flat tax. That could be prevented by giving those taxpayers a credit on Social Security payroll withholding, but the experts claimed that would violate the prohibition against financing the old-age insurance system out of the Treasury's General Fund. Thus did the bureaucrat's mind prevail over the politician's.

But a politician's cunning will be necessary to overcome interests arrayed against tax simplification: limousine lobbyists who win their clients exemptions from complex taxes, sellers and buyers of tax shelters, even members of Congress and IRS officials who derive power from complexity.

Against the phalanx, the president needs support from business interests who helped him pass the 1981 bill — especially the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. A single-rate bill might have been sold to the chamber even though shelters were assaulted. But attacking ACRS rules out business help.

Nor would this package win any support from the influential Senate Finance Committee chairman, Robert Dole. He told us over Cable News Network he would fight to save ACRS. While no fancier of either the flat tax or Rep. Jack Kemp, Dole added: "I prefer a single flat tax. I would adopt the so-called Kemp-Kasten approach ... If we get to the point we're going to have simplification, let's have simplification."

The Treasury expresses fear the White House will try to transform its reform package into a tax increase, but the more likely effort there will be making it more attractive to organized business and Bob Dole by removing anti-business provisions. That is essential. With its most unattractive elements leaked piecemeal, Ronald Reagan's great second-term reform has emerged as a mouse.

Taking A Second Look, Later

WASHINGTON — The Heritage Foundation, this city's most conservative think tank, has just published a massive volume of criticism and recommendation. The work criticizes what the foundation perceives as failures of the Reagan administration, and it proposes various legislative, executive and judicial initiatives for the next four years. It is an impressive compilation.

The chapter on the Justice Department, however, calls to mind a couple of proverbs. One teaches us that you can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink. The other tells us that any enterprise that demands strong leadership is doomed to failure if it has too many chiefs and not enough Indians.

The authors of this chapter are sharply critical of the Justice Department for "failing to use its resources effectively" in the matter of legislation to reform our criminal law. Early in the 98th Congress the administration introduced its omnibus bill. After its most controversial features were set aside, the bill finally rocketed to passage in the closing days of the Congress in October. Says the report: "If this victory had been achieved much earlier, as it could have been," the department could have won the sidetracked measures also.

This is baloney — the kind of balcney that is served up by ideologues whose naivete thrives in the warm culture of a think tank.

There never at any time was the slightest possibility of getting the whole of the original crime bill through Congress. The votes weren't there in the 98th; they won't be there in the 99th. The same thing is true of the department's efforts to win enactment of an immigration bill. The disagreement on this issue was so profound that no departmental lobbying had a chance of success. A president proposes, the Congress disposes; no administration is going to get everything it asks for.

The Heritage report on the Justice Department also reflects the frustration, that presidents regularly experience. Harry Truman, complained bitterly at his inability to get cooperation from executive agencies. Dwight Eisenhower fumed that the bureaucracy was like a feather pillow: If you thumped it at one place, it plumped up somewhere else. Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Carter at various times railed against their inability to Get Things Done.

So, too, with Reagan and the Justice Department. The Heritage report comments on the "failure" of Attorney General William French Smith to gain "hands-on" control of his department. "Many of Justice's shortcomings are the fault of some of the attorney general's chief assistants and of the simple fact that most of the department's staff lawyers do not share, or even are hostile to, the Reagan agenda."

Precisely. The identical difficulty crops up in every department in every administration. To an unbelievable degree, a president — any president — is the prisoner of the entrenched and tenured bureaucracy. The State Department probably evidences this problem more than any other, but they all share it. A president needs obedient Indians who will carry out his orders cheerfully, enthusiastically and effectively. More often than not, what a president gets is a crew of foot-draggers.

The Heritage report urges the administration in its second term to crusade boldly for racial policies based upon the principle of color-blind justice. The foundation opposes the system by which 10 percent of a federal construction contract is set aside for minority contractors. It demands an end to racial quotas in public housing. It asks the Reagan administration to seek court judgments that will put an end to racial-balance busing. The report calls for "continued resistance to attempts to increase the scope of federal regulation under the guise of civil rights." All this is sound doctrine.

It is generally anticipated that President Reagan next month will renew his nomination of Edwin Meese to succeed Smith as attorney general. Now that the report of independent counsel has dispelled the miasma of innuendo and allegation that once clouded the Meese nomination, the Senate should move swiftly to get him confirmed. Thereafter it will be up to Meese to knock some heads together and compel obedience to Reagan's directives. This is much easier said than done, but Meese will have to give it his very best shot.

Personality Isn't The Only Reason

WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the years that Franklin Roosevelt held the presidency, Republicans made things worse for themselves by embracing the position that FDR's personality was the reason he was beating them every time.

That certainly was one of the keys to Roosevelt's political success, but by seizing on it to explain all their troubles, the GOP crippled itself for more than two decades. Instead of examining what they were doing wrong, Republicans spent the 1930s and 1940s snarling at FDR and his works.

(Wendell Willkie was an exception to this, but he was never accepted by the Republican establishment and was in effect drummed out of the party after his one shot at making it over in 1940.)

The question now is: are the Democrats repeating history in 1984?

The answer is yes if the party tries to explain its 1984 defeat as nothing more than a victory of personality for Ronald Reagan. If the Democrats tell themselves they did nothing wrong and nobody could have beaten the old smoothie in the White House, they will blow the chance to learn something from their loss.

Will Rogers has been quoted as saying he didn't worry as much about things people didn't know, as about things "they know for sure that are dead wrong."

This points toward several areas in which the Democrats might profitably spend their energy in the next few years.

They could examine the government policies they have been espousing. Are the programs of the New Deal, the New Frontier and the Great Society still valid? Are there better ideas that Democrats can offer?

They also could take a cold, hard look at the political strategies they have used in the last half century. For openers, here are just a a few examples of Democratic political "truths" that might be worth examining.

The South is Democratic. Not in the national sense, it isn't. Most Southern local and state offices are held by Democrats, but the GOP has a virtual lock on its electoral vote in presidential elections. Yet Walter Mondale wasted valuable time trying to woo Southern votes that never were within reach.

Big Labor has big political clout. The AFL-CIO is a legitimate player in presidential politics, but it can't elect a president and if it appears to become a dominant factor in the effort, its support may hurt more than help. That seems to have happened to Mondale.

Women have untapped political power. The gender gap exists, but a statistical difference in male and female opinion or the selection of a woman vice presidential candidate does not by itself win a presidential election. Reagan had a larger share of the men than of the women, but most important, he had more of each than Mondale.

Young people are natural liberals. Youth and liberalism no longer are synomymous. Young people seem interested primarily in making their own way rather than embarking on crusades. Reagan spoke to that interest; Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro seemed unaware of it and spoke to the young people of the 1960s.

The ethnic vote is dependably Democratic. Italian, Polish, Irish or whatever-Americans aren't automatic Democrats anymore and haven't been since the suburbs bloomed after World War II.

Strength For Today

A friend of mine who teaches in a college told me that he grew very tired one semester of looking day after day at the blank, expressionless, apathetic faces of students in an early morning class. At their last class meeting he electrified them by saying, "There will be no final examination in this course. Last night I put all your names in a hat. The first 10 I draw out will receive an A for the course; all the rest of you get F."

For a moment or two, he looked with considerable pelasure at the expressions of amazement, concern, protest and anger which confronted him. Then he said quietly, "I don't really mean that, of course, but just once this semester I want to see you all looking as if you are alive."

We cannot do much about how handsome or homely we are, but we can control how alive we look. Life is short as it is — don't spend most of yours looking as if you ar already dead.

Shipwreck Artifacts Show Culture 3,400 Years Ago

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mediterranean waters off the coast of Turkey have yielded the most extensive collection of Bronze Age artifacts ever found beneath the sea — a cargo of trade goods that went down in a shipwreck more than 3,400 years ago, scientists announced today.

The remains of the vessel and its cargo, which show the influence of three ancient cultures, represent a "major discovery" and significant find for marine archeology, said the National Geographic Society, which is co-sponsoring the research.

Dr. George F. Bass of Texas A&M University, the chief project scientist, said the wreck located off Cape Ulu Burun in southern Turkey is one of the oldest ever excavated.

The cargo ship, situated at a site near the coastal town of Kas, probably sank around 1400 B.C. when driven onto nearby rocks while trying to round a peninsula, Bass said.

The craft, estimated to have been about 65 feet long, settled to the bottom without capsizing while laden with a cargo of metal ingots, pottery, jars, glass, gold and ivory. These raw materials probably were destined for craftsmen and manufacturers elsewhere in the area.

The single most costly item excavated so far is a gold goblet found in a nearby sandy gully. But proving even more valuable, scientists said, was the simple, two-handled Mycenaean Greek pottery cup located next to it, which helped date the wreck.

Also recovered was pottery of two other cultures — Cypriot and early Phoenician or Canaanite. Some of the Cypriot pieces were stacked in a large storage jar and other goods were carried in Canaanite amphoras, tall rounded jars with narrow necks and bases.

Bass, who is a director of the Institute of Nautical Archeology located at the university, speculates that the ship sailed from Syria, stopped in Cyprus, and was headed for either Greece or western Turkey.

The remains rest in waters ranging from 145 feet to 170 feet in depth, he said, and this depth probably thwarted salvage efforts at the time of the sinking.

Bass said the excavation, which he began this summer with the aid of research associate Cemal M. Pulak, is expected to last five more years and yield unprecedented details about ancient Mediterranean trade and shipbuilding.

Divers raised a stone anchor and uncovered part of the vessel's keel and planking. When compared with later designs, this revealed that Bronze Age shipbuilding techniques were still being used by the Greeks 1,000 years later.

"Although only partially uncovered in 1984, these bones of the wreck push back our knowledge of Mediterranean shipbuilding by nearly a millennium," Bass writes in the January issue of National Geographic Magazine.

Scientists learned of the wreck in 1982 from a report of a young Turkish sponge diver who said it contained many objects resembling "biscuits with ears." These turned out to be scores of large, four-handled copper and tin ingots, the raw materials for the bronze tools and weapons of the era, they said.

Other surprising pieces of cargo include two dozen cobalt-blue glass ingots about two inches in diameter, which probably were to be fashioned into jewelry items, and a piece of elephant tusk, carefully squared off at each end.

The heaviest artifacts found were a row of eight stone anchors, each weighing about 600 to 800 pounds, which are the first such anchors ever to be found with an ancient Mediterranean shipwreck, Bass said.

Study Points To 1,000-Foot-Tall Hawaiian Wave

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A skyscraper-high wall of water crashed into the Hawaiian Islands 100,000 years ago, stripping soil from ground 1,200 feet above sea level, says a study by the U.S. Geological Survey.

The 1,000-foot-tall wave probably was caused by a tremendous undersea landslide crashing from the Hawaiian submarine ridge to the sea floor below, USGS geologists and brothers George and James Moore said Monday at the American Geophysical Union's fall meeting.

"An uneven area of the sea floor about 25 miles south of Lanai ... may mark the remains of the submarine slide that caused the giant wave," the Moores said in a scientific paper. "The head of the slide had an area of about 3-by-15 miles, and the total volume of rock in the slide is more than 70 cubic miles.

"When the slide moved abruptly down into deeper water, perhaps triggered by a local earthquake, a temporary depression formed in the surface of the sea above the head of the slide," the Moores said. "Sea water then rushed in from surrounding areas to fill this void. The onrushing water gained enormous momentum ... and continued toward and up onto the islands."

Reagan Puts Lid On Family Squabbles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, tired of seeing the first family feud conducted in public, has ordered his children to stop talking about the situation as he tries to work out his problems with his eldest son, Michael.

Michael, meanwhile, speaking in a more conciliatory tone than in recent interviews, told The Associated Press on Monday he intends to attend his father's inauguration but was spending Christmas in Los Angeles with his own family.

Sheila Tate, press secretary to Nancy Reagan, revealed Monday that the president has told his children to stop giving press interviews on the first family's problems.

"The president said, 'Don't talk,' to his son and daughter," Mrs. Tate said. "He said, 'no more.'"

The presidential directive was prompted by interviews given by Michael on television and in print and by an interview by his daughter, Maureen, who said last week Michael was carrying on a vendetta.

The entire matter became public during Thanksgiving week, when an interview was published in which the first lady said Michael and his father had been estranged for three years. Michael was adopted by Reagan and his first wife, Jane Wyman, who also is Maureen's mother.

Mrs. Tate said the president issued the silence order last week after Maureen informed him that she had given an interview on the family problems. Earlier in the week, Reagan had urged Michael to cancel television interviews he had scheduled. Michael went ahead with the interviews.

"Dad's not saying anything. Mom's not saying anything. Maureen is not supposed to be saying anything," Michael, the president's eldest son, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. And he said he wasn't going to say much, either.

While refusing to comment on Maureen's remarks, Michael said he's spending Christmas at home with his wife and two children, but "hopefully Dad and I can get together" in California when Reagan takes his traditional New Year's vacation in Palm Springs and Los Angeles beginning Dec. 27.

No definite plans have been made, though, and Michael said he still does not know when his 19-month-old daughter, Ashley, will meet her grandfather for the first time. The president has met Michael's oldest child, son Cameron.

Michael also expressed dismay at what he said were leaks coming from the White House over the family dispute. He denied reports that his sister had been appointed as an intermediary between him and his father.

"Never," Michael Reagan replied when asked whether Maureen would mediate. "Dad and I have always in the past been able to handle any problem. We don't need my sister negotiating."

He said the family problems have been "blown out of whack," adding that he talks regularly with his father.

"We probably talk to each other two or three times a month and always have," he said.

Jury Says Tainted Beef Sold

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thousands of schoolchildren, hospital patients and Air Force personnel in five states ate "putrid and decomposed" beef butchered from dying and diseased cows, a federal grand jury concluded.

During the 3½-year conspiracy, the cattle went from farmers to a pet-food company to a meat processor to wholesalers, who shipped tainted hamburger patties and stew beef to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia and Arkansas, according to a 31-count indictment handed up Monday.

Federal officials said they could not determine whether the meat had caused any illness.

Each week from October 1980 to February 1984, the processor sold up to 15,000 pounds of meat that "consisted in whole or in part of filthy, putrid, and decomposed substances and was unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome and otherwise unfit for human food," said Joel Friedman, director of the Philadelphia Strike Force in charge of organized crime.

The indictment named Vincent Perry Sr., 50, of West Chester, owner of the Summit Beef Co. in Linwood; Berwin Taylor, 63, of Chester Springs, owner of Taylor Pet Food in Downingtown; his son, Wayne Taylor, 34, of Downingtown; and Dominic Impaghazzo, 68, of Chester.

The four were charged with conspiracy to sell uninspected meat for human consumption. If convicted, they face prison terms of up to 53 years and fines of up to $170,000.

The indictment described Taylor pet food as a "4-D operator," a company that bought, slaughtered, processed, prepared, sold and transported "dead, dying, disabled and diseased animals and parts of carcasses of animals that died otherwise than by slaughter."

"The Taylors then boned the meat from these sources, then sold it to Perry for resale for human consumption," Friedman said.

Surgeon Says Heart Drive Successful For Schroeder

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A portable drive system for the artificial heart works so well that chief surgeon William DeVries said he may ask for federal approval to allow William Schroeder to use it longer.

The portable pump, known as the Heimes driver, can be carried over the shoulder, weighs about 11 pounds and may eventually replace the more cumbersome 323-pound Utahdrive that keeps Schroeder's mechanical heart working.

"Bill Schroeder likes that portable drive system much better than the other thing," DeVries said in an interview Monday.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has restricted its use to three hours at a time, and Schroeder, who received the artificial heart on Nov. 25, was the first human to try the portable unit.

DeVries said the Heimes driver, named for its inventor Peter Heimes of West Germany, is quieter and less forceful in Schroeder's chest than the Utahdrive.

Schroeder also likes it because "he has more mobility when he gets up and around," DeVries said.

Doctors hope the mobility could provide a more nearly normal life for Schroeder, the second person ever to get a permanent artificial heart. Doctors at Humana Hospital Audubon switched Schroeder from the Utahdrive to the portable for the first time on Friday and several times since.

The portable unit has worked well enough that DeVries said he may ask the review board of Humana Hospital Audubon and the FDA to extend the length of time Schroeder can use the Heimes driver.

DeVries said the device can operate for six hours on one battery, but Schroeder conceivably could use it indefinitely because the rechargable battery can be replaced without interrupting the machine's pumping.

Panel Says No Deception Found In Ferraro Acts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ethics Committee has concluded that defeated Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro violated the Ethics in Government Act at least 10 times in filling out financial disclosure forms, the Washington Times reported today.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified congressional sources, reported that the panel arrived at that conclusion on an 8-2 vote during a 1½-hour closed meeting on Monday. But it said the committee found that Ms. Ferraro's staff's willingness to provide all material it requested showed there was "no deceptive intent" on the part of New York Democratic congresswoman.

A committee staff report also said amendments by Ms. Ferraro to her disclosure forms filed from 1978 through 1983 "include nearly all of the information originally omitted or misreported," the newspaper said.

Ms. Ferraro's original financial disclosure filings contained "numerous errors and omissions," the Times quoted the report as saying. It said the amendments "reflected approximately 98 changes, some significant, ranging from a failure to report capital gain in the value category $15,000-$50,000, to the omission of her position as a board member of a cultural organization."

The report also said there were 463 checks missing from the joint checking account of Ms. Ferraro and her husband, John Zaccaro, for the years 1978 through 1983, according to the newspaper. It said there are "some checks with similar amounts that seem to be repeatedly missing each month" and that a number of them were in large amounts.

The report approved by the panel was quoted by the Times as saying the action was "primarily for the benefit of the historical record, since the full House of Representatives is unable to take formal action ..."

Under the rules, Ms. Ferraro would have at least 21 days to respond to a statement of allegations. When the new Congress convenes Jan. 3, Ms. Ferraro will not be a member.

Among other things, the panel found that Ms. Ferraro's claim that the act exempted her from having to report Zaccaro's business dealings failed to meet all three tests necessary for the exemption.

The committee issued no statement after its closed session, and spokeswoman Adrienne Gray said the panel would file its report next week.

Teachers' Strike Prompting March

CHICAGO (AP) — Marathon negotiations aimed at ending a teacher's strike that has closed classrooms to 430,000 students resolved many issues today, officials said, while the Rev. Jesse Jackson and other community leaders prepared to lock arms in a march calling for both sides to bend.

Talks between representatives of the Chicago Teachers Union and the Board of Education recessed early today after about 10½ hours. Monday's walkout by 28,000 teachers and 12,000 other unionized workers slammed doors shut in the nation's third-largest school system.

Jackson, who heads the Chicago-based community action group People United to Save Humanity and has a daughter enrolled in John J. Pershing Elementary, was to lead a downtown march today beginning at noon to urge greater cooperation by both sides, said the Rev. Willie Taplin Barrow, executive director of Operation PUSH.

"(Jackson) will be flying here to join his daughter, to take her by the hand and let them know we don't like what's happening," Ms. Barrow said Monday.

Negotiations, meanwhile, recessed shortly before 2:30 a.m. today. They were to resume this afternoon.

"We report that today's exchanges reflected good-faith negotiating, and communications were more clear," school board President George Munoz said as he left the talks. "There were a lot of issues resolved today."

Salaries were discussed "in context" with other issue but were not resolved, he said.

Earlier in the evening, union spokesman Chuck Burdeen said that as long as union President Jacqueline Vaughn "feels we're making even miniscule progress, she'll want to stay at the table."

Asked about the salary increase needed to settle the walkout, Mrs. Vaughn said it would take a "respectable offer," adding that "2 (percent), 3 (percent) and 4 percent is not respectable."

Bargaining between the teachers and the board, with the assistance of a mediator, broke off early Sunday, after the board made an offer satisfying one of the union's principal demands but leaving unresolved the issue of a salary increase and requiring some union concessions.

That plan would have ended deductions from teachers' paychecks for medical insurance, previously paid for by the district. The deductions started Nov. 16, prompting the union to set Monday's strike deadline.

In addition, the offer would increase teachers' pay, but the amount was unspecified because it would be tied to the amount of money the district receives from Illinois' tax-amnesty program.

Scientists recently succeeded in cloning a blood-clotting agent that will help treat hemophiliacs. Human blood is six times thicker than water. It is carried to all parts of the body by more than 60,000 miles of blood vessels —enough to circle the equator four times. The skin contains about 10 percent of the body's blood supply. One-third of your blood is in your legs at all times. To find out how many pints of blood you have, divide your weight by 12.

DO YOU KNOW — On average, who has more blood — men or women?

Governors Back Spending Freeze

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — There is strong support among GOP governors for an across-the-board spending freeze to reduce the federal deficit, says the head of the Republican Governors Association's policy group.

But despite support for the spending freeze, New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu told the association's annual conference Monday that he didn't know if the group would adopt a formal resolution backing that.

"I think every governor here has made it clear that they feel the deficit has to be dealt with and it has to be dealt with by virtue of the arithmetic that exists, by touching some of the untouchable areas," said Sununu, head of the policy group.

Sununu cited defense spending and entitlement programs as sacred cows that should be pared to save money.

"There may not be enough political courage to face this issue," said Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh, chairman of the association. "I'm not yet sure that the people of the United States think the deficit is so bad."

"We'd best get started and I guess the best way to start is to freeze," said Indiana Gov. Robert Orr, speaking during an informal discussion.

In another session, the governors were told that they shouldn't worry that natural gas prices will climb next year when much of the nation's natural gas supply is decontrolled.

"We will not see the price flyup that was predicted," said Energy Secretary Donald Hodel. "We're going to get a decrease."

Hodel said between 50 percent and 60 percent of the nation's gas supply will be decontrolled as of Jan. 1.

Governors in the "Frost Belt" Northeast and upper Midwest are worried about decontrol because their states are energy dependent.

Hodel also cautioned against quick action to limit coal-fired power plants because of fears of air pollution and acid rain.

"There's more and more evidence coming to light to suggest it may be things other than power plants" that cause acid rain, he said.

The governors were warned that they shouldn't be complacent in the wake of President Reagan's sweeping victory last month.

"We still labor with an albatross around our neck ... as a party that lacks compassion," Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said.

Fahrenkopf told the governors that it's crucial for Republicans to win statehouses controlled by Democrats in the next two elections because state legislatures will draw new political district lines after the 1990 census.

Republicans felt the sting of 1980's redistricting this year, he said. While GOP congressional candidates across the nation pulled about 49 percent of the popular vote, they won only 42 percent of the House seats.

"This is a process and a problem that we can only resolve at the state and local level," he said.

No Decision Yet On Farm Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says "the jury is still out" on how deeply farm programs should be cut from the record levels of recent years.

Block said "agriculture is prepared to take its lumps along with everyone else" as the administration and Congress prepare to trim soaring federal budget deficits.

"I personally prefer an across-the-board freeze, because I think it would be perceived to be fair — and I think that it is fair," Block told a news conference Monday.

"But, at the same time, to precipitously pull the rug out from this agricultural industry — an industry currently in agonizing pain in a lot of parts of the country — would be unconscionable," he said.

The Agriculture Department's spending for price support operations for major commodities such as wheat, corn, cotton and dairy products rose from $4 billion in fiscal year 1981 to $11.6 billion in 1982 and then to a record $18.9 billion in 1983.

Block said spending on farm programs declined to around $10 billion in fiscal 1984, which ended Sept. 30, but is expected to climb again to about $13 billion in the current year.

"Agricultural programs and policies desperately need reform for the long-range health and prosperity of the industry, as I've said before," Block told visiting reporters attending the Agriculture Department's annual outlook conference.

Family Finances Aided By Homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical American family saw its total wealth increase by one-third since 1970 with rising home values accounting for much of the jump, the government reports.

By 1983, half of all American families had a net worth of $24,000 or more, but the richest Americans still controlled the bulk of the country's wealth, according to a study released Monday by the Federal Reserve Board.

The study found that 63 percent of the average family's net worth came from equity in the family home.

With real estate values rising rapidly in the late 1970s, this was a key factor in a big jump in family wealth, the study said.

The median net worth of a family in 1983 was $24,574, a 33.3 percent increase over the $18,425 family net worth in 1970. The median, which was figured after taking out the effects of inflation, means that half the families had a higher net worth and half had less. Net worth is the total amount of assets after subtracting liabilities such as mortgages on a home.

The study said there had been only a 12.6 percent gain in the typical family's net worth from 1970 to 1977, when it put the median net worth, after adjusting for inflation, at $20,752 compared to the 18.4 percent spurt from 1977 to 1983.

It attributed much of the difference to a sharp rise in real estate values "which had a particularly heavy impact on home equity, a large component of consumers' balance sheets."

The value of the home accounted for 63 percent of total assets in 1983 while cash in checking accounts and other liquid assets accounted for 19 percent. Families had debt amounting to 20 percent of total assets with 15 percent included in the home mortgage and 5 percent in other loans.

While 43 percent of U.S. families had a net worth of $25,000 or more in 1970, that figure had grown to 50 percent by 1983. But the new study confirmed findings in an earlier report that a vast amount of American wealth is controlled by the very rich.

The study said that in 1983, 28 percent of the total net worth of the families surveyed was held by the richest 2 percent. The study said that the wealthiest 10 percent of families controlled 57 percent of all net worth.

In contrast, 20 percent of the families surveyed had a zero or negative net worth, meaning that their liabilities were greater than their assets.

The findings were even more dramatic when homes and other real estate were excluded. In 1983, 54 percent of total financial assets were held by the wealthiest 2 percent of U.S. families and the richest 10 percent controlled 86 percent of all financial assets.

By contrast, with homes and other real estate excluded, 55 percent of American families had a net worth of zero or actually owed more than the total of their financial assets.

The survey interviewed 3,824 randomly selected American households to develop a comprehensive picture of family wealth.

The total net worth was computed by including all financial assets and equity in homes and other real property as assets while counting as liabilities such things as consumer credit and other debts.

Items not counted in the calculations were the value of automobiles and other consumer durables, the cash value of life insurance policies and equity in farms and small businesses.

D'Abuisson Dinner Drawing Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — A testimonial dinner tonight sponsored by conservative groups in honor of Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson is drawing heated criticism from two human rights groups that claim d'Aubuisson has systematically advocated the use of violence.

D'Aubuisson is being honored at a dinner organized by the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, a conservative group headed by Paul Weyrich. Representatives of 11 other organizations also are participating.

"They ought to be ashamed of themselves," said Aryeh Neier, executive director and vice chairman of Americas Watch, a New York-based human rights group.

The Rev. Joseph Eldridge, director of the Washington Office on Latin America, said, "Groups that would choose to express their values by honoring a man implicated in the assassination of an archbishop shock the conscience of peace-loving Americans."

Pat Derian, who served as assistant secretary of state for human rights in the Carter administration, called the decision to honor d'Aubuisson "bizarre and ludicrous. It would be intriguing to know what aspect of his persona they are honoring. His efforts to overthrow his own government? His leadership of death squads?"

Weyrich refused to discuss the matter with The Associated Press. Other sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the letters of invitation to the dinner called d'Aubuisson "a symbol of resistance to communists" who deserves recognition for his efforts.

The letters reportedly said the platform of d'Aubuisson's ARENA party reads like the 1980 Republican Party platform. D'Aubuisson made a bid for the presidency this past spring but was defeated by the incumbent, Jose Napoelon Duarte.

Groups accepting the invitation were asked to pay $125 for two tickets. D'Aubuisson is to receive a commemorative plaque with an inscription showing the names of the sponsoring groups.

A former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Robert White, has accused d'Aubuisson of being a "pathological killer" who had a role in the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero in San Salvador.

According to Ms. Derian, d'Aubuisson, a former Army major, also was implicated in an abortive military coup attempt in that same year.

Secretary of State George Shultz has said the administration does not have firm evidence to substantiate White's claims or other allegations that d'Aubuisson was a key figure in the establishment of rightist death squads in El Salvador several years ago.

Nonetheless, the administration's actions indicate it has deep reservations about d'Aubuisson. When d'Aubuisson sought the presidency of El Salvador this past spring, the administration offered quiet backing to Duarte. A year ago, the administration, citing human rights considerations, rejected a visa request from d'Aubuisson.

U.S. Says Soviets Building For Possible War In Space

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is expanding its military space program to support combat operations on Earth and to fight a war in outer space, the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency says.

The program matches the United States in most, if not all, military space functions and aims to surpass it, the agency said in a report, "Soviet Military Space Doctrine."

The conclusions drawn by the Pentagon's intelligence agency last summer and released recently could lend support to the "Stars Wars" and anti-satellite programs of the Reagan administration.

Both U.S. research projects are under attack in the scientific and arms control communities as unrealistic, expensive and apt to fuel a race with the Soviet Union that could have dangerous consequences while unraveling weapons-limitation accords.

More properly known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, the "Star Wars" program seeks a space-based defense against Soviet nuclear missiles. An anti-satellite component centers on technology designed to kill military satellites.

"Western analyses of the Soviet space program provide convincing evidence of Moscow's intention to acquire military superiority in outer space," the Defense Intelligence Agency said.

The two basic purposes, it said, are to be able to wage war in outer space and to support ground operations, by such means as using satellites to command Soviet battle forces and to provide navigational and weather information.

"For the immediate present, of course, military support functions are more important," the U.S. agency said. "But as the capability of conducting warfare in space becomes less technologically constrained, this function will increase in importance."

The United States and the Soviet Union in 1967 signed an international treaty prohibiting the placing of "nuclear or any other weapons of mass destruction" in orbit around the Earth, on the moon, or anywhere else in space.

The treaty does not, however, restrict the use of space for communications, reconaissance, early warning or other military support functions.

Before 1967, the agency said, the Soviets acknowledged they were trying to achieve some military capability in space but said it was for defensive purposes.

"The current Soviet stance, refusing to admit the existence of any military element in their space program, can only mean that the Soviet leadership, rather than merely counteracting U.S. moves, is actually seeking military superiority in outer space for offensive, as well as defensive, purposes," the agency said.

Soviet military doctrine calls for providing the armed forces with "all vital resources" to maintain superiority in outer space and to assure maximum support for combat operations on land, at sea and in the air, the DIA said.

And yet, it said, "Soviet propaganda would have the world believe that the Soviet space program is wholly peaceful in nature, dedicated only to scientific and economic pursuits."

In another development, the Soviets were reported to be getting ready to begin landing tests of their space shuttles similar to the tests that preceded the first flights of the U.S. space plane.

Preparations for the tests indicate the Soviets "believe their shuttle flight systems are mature enough to commit the orbiter to flight to assess its aerodynamic performance and stability and control characteristics," Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine said in this week's issue.

The Soviet shuttle is believed to be closely modeled after the U.S. version. The approach and landing tests will involve an orbiter riding piggy-back on another plane and then released for an unpowered glide to Earth.

America's first space shuttle, Columbia, made its maiden flight in April 1981, nearly four years after the kinds of drop tests contemplated by the Soviets. Some of the U.S. delay was caused by problems with the shuttle's heat-resistant tiles.

Diplomat Shot

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A Jordanian diplomat was shot and killed in Bucharest, Romania, today, Prime Minister Ahmed Obeidat told Jordan's Parliament.

Obeidat's statement followed a report from diplomatic sources in Bucharest that two Jordanians were assassinated by one or more gunmen in front of a hotel in the Romanian capital.

However, Obeidat mentioned only the slaying of Asmi al-Mufti, who he said was the second-ranking Jordanian diplomat at the embassy in Romania.

Army Says No Plan For Biologicial Warfare

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — The Army's planned $294 million upgrading of its Dugway testing facilities and construction of a new biological laboratory does not mean biological weapons will be produced for offensive purposes, officials said.

The project includes $172 million for new equipment, $105 million for military buildings, $17 million for staff housing and $1.4 million for a new biological testing laboratory, which faces an uncertain future in Congress.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., has blocked money for the laboratory and said he will do so until he is satisfied the research would be for defensive measures only.

Asked by one of two dozen reporters who toured Dugway on Monday whether the new laboratory could be used to produce biological weapons, Gary Resnick, branch chief of technical and assaying projects, said "That's really ludicrous."

He said the proposed laboratory would not be big enough to produce biological weapons.

Col. David A. Nydam, Dugway commander, said the five-year program is necessary to upgrade outdated facilities, some of which date to the early 1950s.

Nydam said the chemical and biological warfare testing at Dugway involves only defensive measures. It includes determining how military equipment — from gas masks to tanks — can withstand chemical agents in battle.

Officials said there is no open-air testing of chemical or biological agents at Dugway.Such testing was halted in 1969 following the deaths of 6,400 sheep from nerve gas that escaped the proving ground.

"It's so politically fraught that I don't see it (open-air tests) coming about for a long, long time," Nydam said.

If chemical weapons were used against U.S. troops, the soldiers would be forced to wear gas masks and other protective gear. Nydam said the government wants to retain the option of being able to force the enemy troops to suffer similar impediments.

Asked about security measures against terrorism, Nydam said, "We constantly are being apprised of this threat. A terrorist attack would yield little chemical or biological material, because only small amounts are stored at the facility."

"It wouldn't be to anybody's practical advantage to take anything," Nydam said.

Army Simulated Attack By Germs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army simulated a germ warfare attack two decades ago by spraying bacteria on bus and airplane passengers in the District of Columbia, according to declassified Pentagon documents released through a Freedom of Information Act request.

The documents, released Monday by the Church of Scientology, show the tests were intended to see how a disease would spread if it were introduced in a place where travelers congregated. The papers did not say how many passengers had actually been sprayed.

While the Army planned similar tests in Chicago and San Francisco, the documents were censored and it couldn't be determined whether those tests actually took place.

An Army spokesman, Maj. Don Maple, said the service had not seen the documents and would have no immediate comment.

The Scientologists have used the Freedom of Information Act to obtain a number of documents about Defense Department germ weapons tests.

Since 1969, when President Nixon ordered the destruction of U.S. germ weapons stocks, U.S. policy has banned production or stockpiling of biological weapons.

The District of Columbia tests used Bacillus Subtilis, according to the documents. The Army has described that bacteria as harmless, but Sylvia Stanard, a Scientology official, said "the bacteria have been found to cause symptoms of respiratory infections as well as blood and food poisoning."

Passenger Killed In Hijacking Of Kuwaiti Jet

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — One passenger was killed and another wounded as five Arabic-speaking hijackers commandeered a Kuwaiti jetliner today and forced it to land in Tehran after threatening to blow it up, Iran's official news agency reported.

The Kuwait Airways plane was carrying 11 crew members and 150 passengers, including about 120 Pakistani citizens, Kuwaiti aviation officials said.

Kuwait radio, which interrupted its programs to announce the hijack, said the commandeered plane was an A-300 airbus on a flight from Kuwait to Karachi, Pakistan, via the United Arab Emirates.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the identities of the dead and wounded passengers were not known. It also said it was not known whether the violence occurred before or after the jet was forced to land at Tehran's Mehrabad airport.

Qatar's news agency quoted unidentified sources in Qatar as saying three people had been killed in a shootout aboard the plane, but there was no official verification of this report. The agency also said the hijackers had purchased their tickets in Beirut, Lebanon.

IRNA said the hijackers rejected a request by Iranian authorities for the release of the injured passenger and the women and children aboard. The requested medical aid was provided immediately, IRNA said.

The hijackers also demanded the refueling of the plane, IRNA said, an indication they were planning to fly to another destination.

IRNA said the hijackers asked Iranian authorities to send an Arabic interpeter to the aircraft landing steps. The agency later said the hijacked jet was parked on a subsidiary runway at the airport and was under "security control."

IRNA said all Iranian airports at first were closed to the hijacked plane, even though the hijackers had threatened to blow it up if it was not allowed to land at Iehran.

Iran permitted the aircraft to land "due to humanitarian considerations and to save the lives of the passengers and crew" only after the pilot reported he was running out of fuel and he had to land at the nearest airport, IRNA reported.

The agency said the Kuwaiti airliner was first observed entering Iranian air space at 3 a.m. An Iranian jet fighter sent to intercept the intruding aircraft established it was a hijacked passenger airliner, IRNA said.

The jetliner was allowed to land at Mehrabad two hours later, the agency said.

Kuwait's prime minister, Crown Prince Saad Abdulla al-Sabah sent an "urgent message" to Iran's prime minister, Hussein Musavi, requesting "immediate and effective action" to safeguard the aircraft and obtain the release of the passengers and crew, Kuwait radio reported.

Haitians Found Off Coast

MIAMI (AP) — More than 300 Haitians were seized from two ships in the Atlantic as they headed toward southern Florida, and the Coast Guard sank one of the boats because it was a health hazard, officials said today.

The Haitians were put aboard Coast Guard cutters pending questioning by immigration officials, authorities said.

One group of 340 Haitians crammed aboard at 60-foot sailboat was spotted by a Coast Guard jet Monday night, some 60 miles off the Florida coast, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Dan Waldschmidt.

The immigrants were put aboard the cutter Seahawk. Their sailboat, "a health hazard," was sunk, Waldschmidt said.

A second group of 31 Haitians was seen aboard a 50-foot freighter eight miles southeast of Miami Sunday evening, he said.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials interviewed the 31 Haitians and determined they were illegal aliens. They will be returned to their homeland today, Waldschmidt said.

INS officials were on their way this morning to rendezvous with the Seahawk some 40 miles east of Fort Lauderdale, in international waters between the Bahamian islands of Bimini and Great Isaac, he said.

"Haitians found with no legal reason to enter the United States will be returned to Haiti," said a news release from the Coast Guard.

Both vessels were found in what has become known as the "Haitian Highway," the waters between the string of Bahamian islands closest to southern Florida.

Fleeing the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere and a repressive political regime, Haitian immigrants seeking new lives in the United States travel from one Caribbean island to another, with the Bahamas usually being the next-to-last stop. From there, refugees board rickety boats and point the bow toward Florida.

In the last three years, more than 2,000 Haitians — more than 90 percent of all aliens stopped at sea — have been caught trying to slip into the United States through Caribbean and Atlantic waters.

Close to 98 percent of those are returned to Haiti, which shares the island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic.

The Haitian Migration Interdiction Operation, which began in October 1981, is regarded by some as a humane program aimed at saving lives at sea. But to many Haitians already in the United States, and lawyers who represent them, the operation is discriminatory and violates their human rights.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday agreed to hear arguments in a suit filed by Miami lawyer Ira Kurzban on behalf of Haitians in Miami, claiming federal immigration laws don't treat Haitian immigrants the same as other refugee groups.

BACK IN U.S.A. — The Seward Explorer docks near the Miami Beach Coast Guard station Monday after being towed to the dock at the Florida city. The mapping vessel broke down Thursday and was towed for a time by a Cuban armed patrol boat. Moderates Win In Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — As hoped by the United States and its Caribbean allies in the 1983 invasion, a moderate party was overwhelmingly elected to form Grenada's first democratic government since a 1979 leftist coup.

In the voting Monday for a 15-seat Parliament, Herbert Blaize's New National Party won all 11 districts in which complete returns were tallied. The party seemed assured of winning at least two of the remaining four districts after counting resumed today.

Blaize, a 66-year-old attorney, was scheduled to be designated prime minister today by Governor General Sir Paul Scoon, who had appointed an interim government following the U.S.-led invasion on Oct. 25, 1983. The invasion came six days after former Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was slain and his pro-Cuban government toppled by more radical leftists.

Voter turnout was estimated at 90 percent of the 48,000 people registered for the country's first general election in eight years. No major problems with the voting were reported.

"It's a relief, a satisfaction," said Nicholas Brathwaite, chairman of the interim government council. "Today marks the achievement of the chief objective, which was to restore democracy.

In Pitt Case

Court Disallows Adultery Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Court of Appeals ruled today that there is no legal reason to continue to allow husbands or wives to sue for adultery or "alienation of affection."

"They (the legal actions) protect no interests and further no public policies not better served by other means, and the potentialities for abuse posed by their existence outweighs any possible benefits to be obtained by their retention in contemporary society," said the opinion written by Judge Clifton Johnson.

Judges Hugh Wells and Charles Becton concurred in the opinion.

The ruling came in a Pitt County case where Haywood A. Cannon filed suit against Jeffrey L. Miller, a local attorney, charging alienation of affection and adultery and seeking actual and punitive damages totaling $250,000.

Cannon's wife, Rachel Beaman, met Miller while working as a deputy clerk in the Pitt County Courthouse.

Alienation of affection consists of wrongful acts that are said to deprive a married person of the affection of his or her spouse, including love, companionship and comfort.

A Pitt County judge ruled in favor of Miller after presentation of evidence but before completing the trial.

The Appeals Court opinion notes that during the last 50 years the charges of adultery and alienation of affection have come under attack from the public and the courts. The opinion said that almost one-half the state legislatures have abolished them.

Money Taken

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of the theft of $4,857 in cash and checks from a car at Abram's Riverside Oyster Bar at 710 N. Greene St. Monday.

Officer C.A. Sharpe said James Abram of Tarboro, reported that he parked his car at the rear of the restaurant to visit friends. When he returned, a NCNB bank bag, containing the cash and checks was missing from the front seat of the vehicle.

The theft was reported at 3:16 p.m.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Trend is steady to 50 cents to 75 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville unreported; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 50-50; Wilson 50-50; Rowland 50-50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 42.00; Fayetteville 40.00; Whiteville 41.00; Wallace 40.00; Spivey's Corner 39.00; Rowland 40.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 44.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 to 3 pound birds. The final weighted average is 43.27 cents f.o.b dock or equivalent. The market tone for next week's trading is steady to firm and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,642,000, compared to 1,845,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: Market 7 cents higher. Supply adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 33 cents FOB plants too few.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn irregular at mostly 2.77-2.89 in East and mostly 2.85-3.05 in the Piedmont. No. 1 yellow soybeans 2 to 7 higher at mostly 5.96-6.06 in the east and mostly 5.87-5.88 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.26-3.38; new crop wheat 2.99-3.19.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, following its fourth consecutive daily loss in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.66 points to 1,134.08 after the first half-hour of trading.

Advancing issues took a narrow lead over decliners in early trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts say uncertainties about the Treasury Department's wide-ranging tax proposal and the Federal Reserve Board's reaction to last week's unexpectedly large jump in the money supply are pressuring the market.

The tax proposal would reduce the basic corporate and individual tax rates but would also do away with many frequently used deductions.

The $6.7 billion rise in the money supply signalled to some that the Fed would wait for more information before taking new steps to encourage lower interest rates.

CAPT. RANDY M. NICHOLS

CAPT. NELSON STATON

Holmes Promotes Two To Captain

Lt. Nelson Staton and Lt. Randy M. Nichols have been promoted to the rank of captain, Greenville Chief of Police Ted Holmes announced this morning. Holmes said the promotions are effective immediately.

As captains, Nelson will command the department's patrol division, while Nichols will command the detective division.

Staton, a Martin County native, attended Martin Technical Institute and Pitt Community College, receiving a degree in police science, and studied business administration at Beaufort Technical Institute. He joined the police department here in 1981, was promoted to juvenile officer in 1982 and, following his promotion to lieutenant in 1983, was in charge of the uniformed division's midnight shift.

Since returning from the Southern Police Institute in Louisville, Ky., where he was enrolled in the administrative officer's course, Nelson has been assigned to the department's support services division.

Nichols, a Pitt County native, attended Farmville High School and Pitt Community College, where he received a degree in police science. He is currently enrolled in the criminal justice program at East Carolina University.

Assigned to the patrol division when he joined the department in 1969, Nichols was transferred to the detective division in 1974 and promoted to sergeant in 1976. He returned to the uniformed division in 1982 and was promoted to lieutenant in 1983. Nichols has been in command of the support services division since the division was formed in January.

In announcing the promotions, Holmes commended Lt. David Bullock for his "outstanding work" as acting captain of the patrol division during the past few months. The chief also praised Bullock for his support and efforts during the transitional period.

Bullock, who has 20 years with the department, opted not to seek permanent captain status, Holmes said.

— all Indians — were arrested on charges of negligence. A majority of the Union Carbide's stock in India is owned by Indians.

Thomas Sprick, spokesman for the U.S.-based Union Carbide Corp. in Danbury, Conn., said the gas that leaked was methyl isocyanate, which he said can be fatal if inhaled or swallowed.

Sprick said filters that should have removed the poison from the gas before it leaked did not function and the company did not know the reason for the failure.

Union Carbide Corp. called an immediate worldwide halt to production and shipment of methyl isocyanate, and dispatched a doctor and four technicians to India to investigate. India's Central Bureau of Investigation also was probing the incident.

Union Carbide's managing director in India, Y.P. Gokhale, said the gas began leaking when a storage tank valve broke under rising pressure. Within 40 minutes, the cloud of gas had settled over a 25-square-mile area inhabited primarily by poor laborers, he said.

The United News of India said the factory siren did not sound to alert the neighborhood until two hours after the leak began, and said police and doctors did not come into the area until four hours after that.

Panic-stricken people, many carrying luggage on their heads, walked as far as 25 miles to escape the poisonous white cloud. Many who fled Bhopal were reported to have died in the neighboring towns of Sehore, Ashta and Hoshangabad.

Rumors of yet another gas leak spread panic through the city Monday afternoon, and police drove through the city using loudspeakers to urge people to return home.

State, Carolina, Cavs Win Monday

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State proved worthy of its Top 10 ranking while North Carolina coach Dean Smith says the party's over for his Tar Heel team after both teams grabbed college basketball victories.

Meanwhile, Virginia defeated Virginia Military Institute 68-57 in Lexington, Va., Monday night.

Tenth-ranked N.C. State defeated Hartford 83-46 in Raleigh Monday night.

"I've said before we're a deep team and we have tremendous size," Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said. "I think we can play anybody in the country. If that makes you a top 10 team, then maybe we are ... Polls really mean what people think of your team at that time. I'm glad they think highly of us. We'll try to live up to it."

Hartford coach Jack Phelan agreed that Valvano has a talented team. "State is a good team that will only get better," he said. "... His (Valvano's) problem is going to be trying to get all that talent to mesh and find enough minutes for everyone."

Junior guard Ernie Myers scored 17 points to help key the Wolfpack victory in Reynolds Coliseum.

The Wolfpack, which led 40-16 at the half, stretched its lead to 43 points in the second half when Bennie Bolton hit one free throw to give N.C. State an 81-38 lead with 1:20 left.

Senior guard Spud Webb scored 13 points for the Wolfpack, while freshman center Chris Washburn added 10.

The Hawks, 0-4, were led by freshman guard Larry Jenkins and senior center Mike Jones with eight points each.

In Chapel Hill, junior center Brad Daugherty scored 13 points and grabbed 13 rebounds and sophomore guard Kenny Smith had nine assists as No. 16 North Carolina rallied to beat Howard 77-63 Monday.

But Tar Heel coach Dean Smith says "the party's over" for his basketball team.

"We've had three games we thought we should have won. Now it's Oral Roberts and then Wake Forest," Smith said.

The Tar Heels erased a 37-35 halftime deficit two minutes into the second half when guard Buzz Peterson scored on a layup to give North Carolina a 40-39 lead.

The Bison, 0-2, hung tough and trailed only 54-51 with 10:12 left, but the Tar Heels, led by Kenny Smith, scored 12 straight points to take command. Smith hit Daughtery with a pass for a layup and then canned two jumpers to give the Tar Heels a 60-51 lead with 7:48 left.

Daughtery then converted a steal into a layup and Smith stole the ball and fed Warren Martin for a dunk as North Carolina stretched its lead to 66-51.

George Hamilton led the Bison with 19 points, while Fred Hill and Robert Jones added 10 points each.

Howard coach A.B. Williamson said he thought his team "played well in the first half but failed to keep their composure in the second half."

The lead changed 10 times in the first half of the Virginia-VMI game Monday night before freshman Darrick Simms' jumper from the foul line put Virginia ahead for good 15-14 with 9:17 remaining. The Cavaliers held a 27-23 halftime advantage.

The victory improved Virginia's record to 4-1 while VMI fell to 2-3.

Sophomore Tom Sheehey led Virginia with 15 points while Tim Mullen had 12, Miller 11 and Simms 10. Olden Polynice scored 9 points and hauled in a game-high 9 rebounds for the Cavaliers.

Cedric Wins led the Keydets with 19 points while Gay Elmore added 17 and Darren Sawyer 11.

In ACC action Wednesday, Appalachian State takes on fourth-ranked Duke in Durham, North Carolina A&T meets N.C. State in Raleigh, Wake Forest will be at Davidson, Virginia at William & Mary and Clemson at South Carolina.

Lady Pirates Host Howard

East Carolina's Lady Pirates return to action tonight at 7:30 p.m., hosting Howard University in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

Tne 1-3 Pirates will be trying to build on their 1-0 Minges Coliseum record as they also celebrate 50 years of women's basketball at the school.

The first women's team at the university, in 1934-35, will be honored at halftime, and several members of that squad are expected to be on hand.

Meanwhile, the men's team will be in Philadelphia to take on Drexel University tonight. The 1-1 Pirates will be looking for their first road victory since the 1982-83 campaign in the contest.

Chargers Rally Past Bears

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Welcome to Don Coryell's nightmare.

It's a recurring dream. One of his fleet of receivers is striding toward the goal line with a touchdown pass, one that will lead to the defeat of a highly touted opponent, when — just like that — the ball pops loose. Fumble. Touchdown negated. Opportunity lost.

It happened Monday night, and the San Diego coach feared the worst. But Bobby Duckworth atoned for his miscue with an 88-yard touchdown reception in the fourth quarter, and the Chargers dealt favored Chicago a 20-7 defeat that may keep Bears Coach Mike Ditka awake nights.

"I couldn't believe it," said Coryell, who watched in horror as Duckworth, nearing the completion of a 54-yard touchdown pass, lost control of the ball and fumbled it away at the 2-yard-line. "I thought, 'This can't be our night.'"

He was wrong. Five minutes into the final period, Duckworth slipped behind defender Shaun Gayle, took a pass from Ed Luther over his right shoulder and went untouched to the goal line to complete the game-winning play.

He held the ball aloft briefly before entering the end zone, but it was clutched tightly to his hand. He didn't spike it, handing it instead to offensive lineman Sam Claphan.

"I was happy the coach had enough confidence in me to go back to me again," the third-year pro from Arkansas said. "That is part of the game of football — the ups and downs."

His redemptive catch, which preceded a 66-yard interception return by Lee Williams, helped the Chargers improve to 7-7. Chicago, which lost its eighth straight Monday night road game, fell to 9-5.

The Bears, who last week clinched their first-ever NFC Central Division title, hurt their chances of gaining home field advantage in the post-season playoffs. Chicago has not hosted a playoff game since 1963.

Duckworth's third-quarter gaffe, which came with San Diego trailing 7-6, stirred memories of a similar miscue by teammate Jesse Bendross earlier this season. Bendross inexplicably fumbled out of bounds near the goal line on a certain touchdown pass, and the Chargers eventually lost to the Los Angeles Raiders, 44-37.

This time, they had better odds. The Bears were ineffective on offense after second-string quarterback Steve Fuller, filling in for injured Jim McMahon, went down with a separated shoulder in the first quarter.

Under third-stringer Rusty Lisch, Chicago managed 312 yards, but was forced to punt 11 times. The Bears' only score, a 10-yard touchdown run by Walter Payton, came after a fumble by San Diego's Earnest Jackson put them in scoring position.

"This was a costly game for us because of the injury (to Fuller)," Ditka said. "I really thought we were going to win it."

Neither team seemed to want to until the final period. San Diego, stifled by Chicago's league-leading defense, settled for two first-half field goals by Rolf Benirschke. The Bears punted on each of their first six possessions, and a fumble on their seventh set up Benirschke's second goal.

Then, in the third quarter, Jackson's fumble gave Chicago an opportunity, and Lisch, who had thrown only 28 passes in 13 games prior to Monday night, maneuvered the Bears from San Diego's 36-yard-line to the 10.

Payton, who gained 92 yards on 24 carries, burst through a gaping hole up the middle and covered the distance for his team's only touchdown.

On the next possession, Luther found Duckworth alone on a simple slant pattern, and the wide receiver sprinted toward the end zone. But the ball slipped out of his hands — "it all happened in one motion; I wasn't trying to spike," he insisted — and Chicago's Mike Richardson recovered at the 4-yard-line.

"I got ridiculed enough from my teammates," Duckworth said. "(Wes) Chandler said, 'If I was falling from a burning building, I wouldn't want you to catch me.' But we won, so what the heck."

Ron Butler Is Honored

LOS ANGELES — Outside linebacker Ron Butler received two awards at UCLA's annual Football Awards Banquet held last week. Both awards honored Butler for his excellence on and off the field of play.

The fifth-year senior received the Jack R. Robinson Award for Outstanding Scholarship by a senior player and the Paul P. Wellman Award for All-Around Excellence. Butler, a 3.10 student in Economics, overcame a painful back injury to help the Bruins to a fine 8-3 record this season as well as a 29-10 victory over Pac-10 Rose Bowl respresentative Southern California. The Bruins will meet Miami on January 1 in the Fiesta Bowl.

In presenting Butler with the Wellman Award, offensive coordinator Homer Smith had these words: "He overcame a back injury that would have caused most players to quit. He came back to the team this year and exemplified hard work and dedication."

Butler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Butler of Greenville, N.C., and a graduate of Rose High School.

BYU, Sooners Head Polls

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Brigham Young and Oklahoma will head into the bowl games as the nation's 1-2 college football teams.

Despite last weekend's ABC-TV telephone poll which branded Brigham Young as an also-ran — 191,336 voters said the Cougars should not be No. 1 as opposed to 166,590 who thought they should — BYU held onto first place today for the third week in a row in The Associated Press' final regular-season poll.

But again it was close. BYU received 33½ of 57 first-place votes and 1,091½ of a possible 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Oklahoma, No. 2 for the second week in a row, received 16½ first-place votes and 1,083½ points as the Top Ten remained unchanged from last week.

However, a week ago, with 59 of the 60 voters participating, BYU led Oklahoma 34½-18½ in first-place votes and 1,133½-1,-128½ in points. Brigham Young, the nation's only unbeaten team at 12-0, will face Michigan in the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 21 while Oklahoma, 9-1-1, meets fourth-ranked Washington in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Night.

Florida, which closed out a 9-1-1 season by defeating Florida State 27-17 for its ninth consecutive victory, remained No. 3 with six first-place votes and 1,033 points. Last week, the Gators were No. 1 on five ballots and received 1,048 points. Florida is ineligible for a bowl game.

This week's other first-place vote went to Washington, 10-1, which received 963 points. The Huskies were followed by Sugar Bowl-bound Nebraska, 9-2, with 888 points. Sixth-place Ohio State, 9-2, which meets Southern California in the Rose Bowl, received 811 points to 808 for No. 7 South Carolina, 10-1. The Gamecocks play Oklahoma State in the Gator Bowl.

Eighth-place Boston College concluded a 9-2 regular season by trouncing Holy Cross 45-10. The Eagles, who meet Houston in the Cotton Bowl, received 767 points. Oklahoma State, the No. 9 team at 9-2, received 725 points while Southern Methodist, which defeated Nevada-Las Vegas 38-21 to finish at 9-2, received 608 points. The Mustangs have an Aloha Bowl date with Notre Dame.

The Second Ten consists of LSU, Maryland, Miami, UCLA, Florida State, Auburn, Notre Dame, Southern Cal, Texas and Wisconsin, which made the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

Last week, it was Auburn, Florida State, Texas, LSU, Maryland, Miami, UCLA, Georgia, Notre Dame and USC.

Georgia, which had been in the Top Twenty for 11 straight weeks, fell out by losing to Georgia Tech 35-18. That made room for Wisconsin, which finished the regular season 7-3-1. In other weekend games involving members of the Second Ten, Florida State lost to Florida, Auburn was upset by Alabama 17-15 and Texas was trounced by Texas A&M 37-12.

Florida Takes Big Lead; But Can It Hold To It?

The University of Florida, with its victory over Florida State this past weekend, has taken a commanding lead in the Daily Reflector's Computer Football Rankings. The only question is whether the Gators will be able to hold onto it after sitting out the holiday bowl parades.

The 9-1-1 Gators have amassed a total of 807 points through the end of the regular season. Those points were awarded on the basis of success against strength of schedule. Six points were awarded Florida each time it won, with four more points added each time a victim won. Two additional points were awarded for third level victories by teams beaten by Florida victims.

Texas, despite its loss to Baylor, clung to the number two spots with 665 points, just five ahead of Boston College, third with 660 points.

Louisiana State ranks fourth this week with 637 points, followed by Brigham Young, the lone unbeaten Division I-AA team — and the national polls leader — with 634 points.

The second five includes Washington, Maryland, South Carolina and Oklahoma and Penn State, tied for ninth place.

There are 18 bowl games this year with the addition of the Cherry Bowl in Pointiac, Mich., and the Freedom Bowl in Anaheim, Calif., sending 36 teams to those bowls.

While Florida is not eligible for a bowl game due to its problems with the NCAA and a prohibitation by the Southeastern Conference, every other member of the Top Twenty is going to a bowl with one exception. That is Penn State, which at 6-5, was left out of the bowls, although other teams with 6-5 marks, ranked lower, are going.

Fullerton State, ranked 22nd this week, is the next team in order to have been shunned, after posting an 11-1 record. Those two are the only eligible teams in the top 30 not to be picked.

Below them, however, are several who might have had a chance. Georgia Tech is ranked 31, but at 6-4-1, is staying home. Syracuse (6-5) is 33rd, Hawaii (7-4) is 34th and Rutgers (7-3) is 36th.

With Florida ineligible, teams ranked below 37th and still going to bowls include Texas Christian (8-3), 38th; Michigan (6-5), 39th; Virginia Tech (8-3), 45th; Air Force (7-4), 50th; Army (7-3-1), 51st; and Michigan State (6-5), 57th.

This week's Top Twenty, the last before the bowl games:

1. Florida (9-1-1)	807
2. Texas (7-3-1)	665
3. Boston College (9-2)	660
4. Louisiana State (8-2-1)	637
5. Brigham Young (12-0)	634
6. Washington (10-1)	628
7. Maryland (8-3)	596

Gamecocks Top Citadel, 94-82

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Winning Coach Bill Foster says South Carolina's 94-82 victory over The Citadel Monday night had to be a fan's delight, and losing Coach Les Robinson agreed.

"This is what college basketball is all about," Robinson said. "With this type of atmosphere we had tonight, any team can learn to play well.

Life No Different Under New Meyer

By The Associated Press

Only three games into the post-Ray Meyer era, the DePaul basketball team is finding that life won't be any easier under new Coach Joey Meyer.

Despite the margin in a 77-37 victory over Chico State Monday night, the younger Meyer proved to be just as harsh a critic as his father, who held the DePaul reins for 42 years before retiring last spring.

"DePaul has a stigma that it doesn't play hard in games it's supposed to win. It still has that," the 29-year-old Meyer said.

"You don't expect emotion against the likes of Chico, a Division II team), but you expect them to be in control, and they weren't," Meyer said.

Second-ranked DePaul, now 3-0, wasn't the only Top Twenty team to learn a thing or two Monday night.

No. 9 Washington needed Paul Fortier's rebound basket with two seconds left in the second overtime to subdue Texas Tech 59-57, and No. 16 North Carolina struggled before beating Howard University 77-63.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 10 North Carolina State clubbed Hartford 83-46, No. 13 Louisiana State outscored Texas 87-79 and No. 14 Virginia Tech blitzed Maryland-Eastern Shore 91-46.

DePaul was never in danger in running its Rosemont Horizon winning streak to 29 games. Center Marty Embry scored nine of his 14 points in the first six minutes of the second half as the Blue Demons expanded a 32-16 halftime lead to 47-23.

Washington, 3-0, trailed 38-33 at the half, but went ahead of Texas Tech at 49-48 when Detlef Schrempf canned a jumper with four minutes left in regulation.

After Tech's Tony Benford tied the game with a free throw at 3:03, each team tried, and failed, to hold the ball for a last shot.

Benford's two free throws gave Tech a 53-51 lead in the first extra period, but another Schrempf jumper, this with three seconds left, forced a second overtime that wasn't settled until Fortier coverted his own miss into the game-deciding bucket.

"It was a good college game," said Washington Coach Marv Harshman. "I felt like toward the end that no matter if we won or lost, it would be a good experience for us."

North Carolina's youthful Tar Heels had hoped to impress the home folks for the first time this season by making quick work of tiny Howard. But North Carolina found itself trailing 37-35 at the half and the embarrassed Tar Heels didn't take the lead until Buzz Peterson sank a layup for a 40-39 advantage.

Brad Daugherty had 13 points and 13 rebounds for North Carolina, 3-0.

North Carolina State's romp over Hartford, a new Division I team, "was not a contest that you find a lot out about your club," said Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano. "But I was pleased we came to play."

Ernie Myers scored 17 points to lead North Carolina State, which held leads of 30-4 and 34-6 in the first half.

Nikita Wilson scored 18 points and Jerry Reynolds came off the bench tom contribute 14 to LSU's victory over stubborn Texas. The Tigers, 3-0, held a 15-point lead in the second half, only to have Texas cut that margin in half by the end of the game.

"When you play a team worth its salt, they won't let you put them away," said LSU Coach Dale Brown.

Volleyball Champs

Hoyas Near Unanimous As AP's No. 1 Cage Team

By The Associated Press

Georgetown remains No. 1 in the Associated Press college basketball poll by a voting margin every bit as impressive as the scores of its last two games.

The defending national champions, who last week ripped Hawaii Loa 74-45 and Southern Connecticut 80-46, amassed 55 of 58 first-place votes in the nationwide balloting of sports writers and broadcasters. The Hoyas, 3-0, have 1,157 points to easily outdistance runnerup DePaul.

DePaul, 3-0 after blasting UCLA 80-61 on Saturday and Chico State 77-37 on Monday, got two first-place votes and 1,049 points.

St. John's, which nipped St. Bonaventure 58-57 in the finals of the Joe Lapchick Memorial Tournament to run its record to 2-0, remained third and Duke, 3-0, stayed in fourth and collected the other first-place vote.

Fifth place went to Memphis State, 2-0, by a single point over Louisville, which used reserves much of the way Monday night in an 83-61 exhibition loss to Athletes in Action. The Cardinals are 2-0 in regulation games.

Illinois, a 73-70 victor over then-10th ranked Oklahoma, remained seventh, followed by Southern Methodist, 1-0, Washington, 2-0, and North Carolina State, which is 3-0 after an 83-46 drubbing of Hartford Monday night.

The Second Ten this week is: Indiana, Syracuse, Louisiana State, Virginia Tech, Georgia Tech, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Alabama-Birmingham, Kansas and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Last week's Second Ten was: North Carolina State, Indiana, Alabama-Birmingham, Syracuse, Virginia Tech, Louisiana State, Arkansas, Georgia Tech, North Carolina and a tie for 20th between Kansas and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Arkansas, 2-1, which lost to Ohio State 85-84 on Saturday was the only team to fall from the Top Twenty.

Henderson Helps Sonics Top Phoenix By 108-96

SEATTLE (AP) — As a former member of the world champion Boston Celtics, Seattle guard Gerald Henderson knows the value of defense in the National Basketball Association.

"I'm a firm believer that defense creates offense," Henderson said after the point guard's overall performance helped propel the SuperSonics past Phoenix, 108-96, in the only NBA game played Monday night.

The Sonics' victory snapped the Suns' three-game winning streak.

Seattle grabbed an early 23-6 lead, and injury-riddled Phoenix, without veteran guard Kyle Macy and with backcourt mate Walter Davis already on the injured list, never could catch up.

"Young guys just can't make any mistakes," said Henderson, referring to the Suns' youthful guard corps of Rod Foster, Jay Humphries and Michael Holton. "They got off to a slow start.

"We came out very aggressive, and we were very confident coming off a good win in Houston."

Seattle had wrapped up a three-game road trip Saturday night by becoming just the second team this season to beat the Rockets at home.

Jack Sikma, the league's player of the week last week, continued his fine play by scoring 29 points and grabbing 11 rebounds for Seattle. Teammate Tom Chambers added 28 before being ejected for fighting with Phoenix rookie guard Jay Humphries with 4 minutes 33 seconds to play in the game. Humphries also was ejected.

Chambers scored 10 of Seattle's first 23 points.

Chambers and Sikma are "one of our strengths," Henderson said. "When they're going, we have to get the ball inside. Of course, that opens it up outside for the rest of us."

Foster, who sank three three-point bombs in the closing minutes, topped the Suns with 19 points while center James Edward and reserve Alvan Adams added 16 each. Because of a respiratory infection, Adams played just 12 minutes.

The Suns' Charles Jones topped all rebounders with 13 as Phoenix dominated the boards for the fourth straight game. The Suns, however, shot just .419 from the field compared with Seattle's .488.

"It came down to they executed their offense better than we executed our defense," Phoenix Coach John MacLeod said. "We got behind early.

"We had a lot of shots that just wouldn't drop. The rest of the game we were trying to catch up to them.

"We just couldn't shut them down at all. They got the ball into Sikma in the second half and he got a lot of points. Chambers was going good in the first half."

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "When we post Tom, he is difficult to cover. When they made adjustments, we went to Jack.

"We got the ball up court quickly and did a better job of passing and not dribbling. We got off to the fast start because of good execution."

Late in the third quarter, Phoenix cut the deficit to one point. The Suns trailed by three early in the fourth quarter before Sonic reserves Tim McCormick and Jon Sundvold scored six straight points.

"Sundvold and McCormick were very patient," Wilkens said. The pair has seen very limited action so far this season.

Craven Holds Off Rally By Pitt

NEW BERN — Craven Community College shook off a stubborn Pitt Community College team and gained a 76-67 basketball victory last night over the Paladins.

Neither team seemed to be able to get on track in the first half of the game. Both suffered from cold shooting and turnovers, as Craven moved out to a 29-22 lead after the first 20 minutes of play.

Craven warmed up first in the second half, and over the first five minutes built its lead out to 42-29. During the next ten minutes, the lead continued to build and with 4:28 left in the contest, Craven held a 62-46 lead.

But over the next few minutes, Pitt went on a 19-4 spurt and cut the lead back to 66-65 with 50 seconds left in the ball game.

However, Linwood Harris scored a three-point play for Craven to push the lead back to 69-65 and Pitt was forced to foul to get the ball back after that, allowing Craven to pull away and preserve the win.

Craven was led by Harris, who pushed in 30 points, while Donald Johnson added 20. Pitt was led by David Joyner with 14 and Andrew Edwards with 12.

The loss drops the Paladins to 4-6 on the year. They play host to Sampson Tech on Thursday at A.G. Cox School in Winterville. This is a substitute game for one scheduled with Southeastern Community College, which has forfeited its games this year due to academic problems on the team.

Cavaliers' Year Hard To Explain

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach George Welsh, who will guide Virginia in its postseason debut in the Peach Bowl Dec. 31 against Purdue, says the Cavaliers' season was very unusual and "hard to explain."

The Cavaliers finished 7-2-2 overall and were 4-2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, second place behind Maryland. But they had to overcome a 55-0 thrashing in their opener against Clemson and a pair of ties against Georgia Tech and North Carolina.

"We had a very unusual season. How do you explain that your football team had more ties than your soccer team," Welsh said Monday at a news conference along with Purdue Coach Leon Burtnett. "The soccer team played about 22 games and only had one tie."

And then there was the Clemson game.

He said the only way to deal with that one was to "not think about it. Get it out of the way and forget it."

Welsh, however, felt the fourth game against state-rival Virginia Tech was the key to the season and bowl bid.

"We were down 23-13 with less than 10 minutes to go and came back to win 26-23," he said. "If we didn't do that, I don't know what kind of season we would have had."

Purdue, which was picked in preseason as an also-ran in the Big Ten Conference, surprised Notre Dame 23-21 in its opener and ended with a 7-4 record overall, 6-3 in the conference, second behind Ohio State, whom the Boilermakers beat during the regular season 28-23.

"That first game was probably the most important. We were a tremendous underdog to Notre Dame and they had beaten us badly the year before," said Burtnett. "After that win, the kids knew they could play with anybody in the country."

Purdue Athletic Director George King said the Boilermakers, who have made one other appearance in the Peach Bowl, beating Georgia Tech 41-21 in 1978, selected the Atlanta bowl over others because "it fell into the slot where the kids could stay home for Christmas, and more importantly its proximity of being less than 600 miles from campus."

Dick Shultz, athletic director of Virginia, said the Cavaliers narrowed their choice of bowls to the Hall of Fame in Birmingham, Ala., and the Peach.

"We felt it being our first bowl that Atlanta would be perfect. We have a large group of alumni there and since we're hopefully a coming national football power, the television contract with CBS was important," he said.

"We felt that this was the best spot for us for our first bowl," said Shultz.

Peach Bowl President Don Elliott Heald said 22,000 tickets have been sold locally for the contest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, which seats 60,763.

Both schools were given 10,800 tickets apiece and Shultz said more than 5,000 already had been sold at Virginia. King said tickets would go on sale later this week on campus, but predicted "there would be a great turnout from Purdue."

Doug Flutie Leads All-America

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie, the only player in major-college history to pass for more than 10,000 yards in a career, was named to The Associated Press All-America football team today, along with two repeaters — offensive tackle Bill Fralic of Pitt and free safety Jerry Gray of Texas.

Flutie, the magical 5-foot-9¾ rifle-armed scrambler who captured the nation's fancy and became the first quarterback in 13 years to win the Heisman Trophy, passed for 10,579 yards and also set an NCAA career total offense mark of 11,317 yards.

With Flutie at the controls, Boston College led the nation in scoring with 36.7 points a game and earned a Cotton Bowl bid, its first major bowl trip in 42 years. For the year, Flutie completed 233 of 386 passes for 3,454 yards and 27 touchdowns and led the nation in passing efficiency.

He threw six touchdown passes against North Carolina, passed for 447 yards against Penn State and thrilled a national television audience with a dramatic last-play 48-yard bomb that pulled out a 47-45 triumph over Miami, a game in which he was 34-of-46 for 472 yards. Flutie passed for more than 300 yards on four other occasions.

"It's not his passing ability, it's not his running ability, but rather his ability to make a play out of nothing," says Alabama Coach Ray Perkins, a two-time victim of Flutie's passing. "He does the best job of any quarterback I've ever seen at improvising-type things, making something happen out of nothing."

Joining Flutie on the offensive unit are running backs Keith Byars of Ohio State, the nation's leading rusher, and Kenneth Davis of Texas Christian, along with wide receiver David Williams of Illinois, the nation's leading receiver, whose 101 catches and 1,278 yards were Big Ten records. The 101 receptions were the second highest in major college history and eight of them went for touchdowns.

"He probably is the most versatile receiver we've ever had," says Illinois Coach Mike White. "What he does better than anybody is run with the ball after he catches it."

The rest of the offensive unit consists of tight end Mark Bavaro of Notre Dame, wide receiver Eddie Brown of Miami (Fla.), tackles Fralic and Lomas Brown of Florida, guards Dan Lynch of Washington State and Del Wilkes of South Carolina, center Mark Traynowicz of Nebraska and placekicker John Lee of UCLA. Fralic made first-team All-America for the third year in a row.

Named to the defensive unit were tackles Leslie O'Neal of Oklahoma State and Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech, middle guard Tony Casillas of Oklahoma, linebackers Gregg Carr of Auburn, Jack Del Rio of Southern California, James Seawright of South Carolina and Larry Station of Iowa and deep backs Gray, David Fulcher of Arizona State, Kyle Morrell of Brigham Young and Tony Thurman of Boston College, along with Ricky Anderson of Vanderbilt, the nation's leading punter with a 48.2-yard average.

Three players who made the first team a year ago failed to repeat — running back Bo Jackson of Auburn, placekicker Luis Zendejas of Arizona State and nose guard William Perry of Clemson. Jackson missed six games with a shoulder injury.

The AP All-America team will be featured Sunday, Dec. 16, on Bob Hope's Christmas special entitled "Ho-Ho Hope's 35th Jolly Christmas Hour" (NBC-TV, 9-10 p.m., EST).

Ohio State's Byars, a 233-pound junior, led the nation with 1,655 yards on 313 rushes — both Big Ten regular-season records — and in scoring with 24 touchdowns. He has scored a rushing touchdown in 21 consecutive games. In addition, he caught 37 passes for 453 yards and two TDs.

"He is a complete player," says Coach Earle Bruce. "He works hard, he can run inside or out and he can catch. His size fools people sometimes. They don't think a player his size should be able to run by them, but he does."

Like Byars, TCU's Davis is a junior, but somewhat smaller at 5-10, 210. He finished third nationally with 146.5 yards a game and his average of 7.6 yards per carry — 211 for 1,611, best ever for a Southwest Conference underclassman — was tops in the country. Seven of his 17 touchdowns came on runs of 50 yards or more.

Brown became Miami's career leader in reception yardage and touchdown catches in just two seasons. This year, he caught 59 passes for 1,114 yards, the Hurricanes' first single-season thousand-yard receiver.

The 242-pound Bavaro, who is considered Notre Dame's best blocking tight end since Dave Casper, also led the Irish in receiving. He has elected to forego his final season of eligibility in 1985 — he missed 1982 with an injury —and graduate with his class.

Fralic, one of four finalists for the Lombardi Trophy as lineman of the year, had his No. 79 jersey retired by Pitt. Three years ago, he became the first Pitt freshman since Tony Dorsett in 1973 to start in his first varsity game. The other tackle, Florida's Lomas Brown, was the leader of one of the nation's top offensive lines.

The blocking of Lynch and Wilkes helped their teams finish among the nation's top 10 in total offense. Nebraska, with Traynowicz leading the way, finished third in rushing.

Nebraska line coach Cletus Fischer says Traynowicz "is a better center than (two-time Outland Trophy winner) Dave Rimington if for no other reason than he is 6-6, but he also is as quick or quicker off the ball, strong, tough and smart."

UCLA's Lee, a junior, connected on an NCAA record 29 of 33 field goal attempts. He tied an NCAA record with six field goals for all UCLA's points in an 18-15 victory over San Diego State, kicked three more in a 23-17 triumph over Long Beach State and booted a 47-yarder as time expired to give the Bruins a 27-24 victory over Arizona.

On the defensive unit, the speedy Gray tied a Texas record by intercepting seven passes this season while BC's Thurman led the nation with 12 interceptions in 11 games. BYU's Morrell is "as good a player as we've ever had in our secondary," according to Coach LaVell Edwards. Arizona State's Fulcher is the only sophomore on the All-America team.

Oklahoma State's O'Neal was The AP's Defensive Player of the Year in the Big Eight while Casillas' 84 tackles, including 10 sacks, helped Oklahoma lead the nation in rushing defense, yielding just 68.8 yards a game.

Pay Television Offers Advisories On Movie Content

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Silkwood," according to the HBO-Cinemax Guide for December, is an R-rated movie that contains adult language, mild violence and brief nudity.

The guide warns in addition that the HBO comedy "First and Ten" has a strong sexual content and nudity.

"We have a number of different platforms to communicate to our viewers which movies are appropriate for various members of the family," said Seth G. Abraham, the senior vice president for programming operations at Home Box Office, the nation's largest pay television service with 13.5 million subscribers.

Abraham said the public is warned about R-rated material in other ways besides the monthly programming guide. A show called "Coming Attractions" tells parents about shows with adult situations and violence. On-the-air promotions of upcoming shows also discuss those that may be inappropriate for young viewers.

"The advantage of the three steps we take is that it's in advance," Abraham said. "It's not the same as someone tuning in, seeing nudity and being surprised by it. Our messages are quite repetitive. We don't want to surprise anyone.

"We're also careful how we schedule. When we have a children's show, like 'Fraggle Rock,' we're careful what we schedule after that. It has a young audience and we don't want it to flow into Eddie Murphy or Richard Pryor or Buddy Hackett."

At Showtime/The Movie Channel, the second largest pay television system, every program carries an advisory. Showtime has 5.4 million subscribers. The Movie Channel has 3.2 million.

"We have advisories that go on the air before a program is aired," said Jim Miller, Showtime's senior vice president for program planning.

"We must have 12 to 14 different kinds of advisories suitable to every kind of program. One may simply say, 'The following motion picture is suitable for viewing by the entire family.' Or another may warn of language and violence. Or violence and nudity, or nudity and adult subject matter, or whatever."

In its program guide, Showtime brackets its more explicit movies as "Showtime After Hours." The Movie Channel lumps these racier films under the label "The Movie Channel Drive-In Theater."

Some examples this month: Showtime's "Incubus," starring John Cassavetes as a physician who stumbles upon an ancient legend about the demon Incubus that ravishes women in their nightmares, and "Lunch Wagon," described as "three sexy coeds (who) serve up a tantalizing menu when they take over a contruction site lunch wagon."

The "Movie Channel Drive-In Theater" has "Mortuary," in which "terror stalks a girl convinced her father's drowning was no accident."

The Movie Channel advises the film has violence, adult themes and nudity. It will be broadcast Dec. 21 and Dec. 24.

Neither HBO nor Showtime schedules R-rated movies before 8 p.m. The Movie Channel, which shows nothing but movies 24 hours a day, may show an R-rated film at any time.

HBO's Abraham admitted there sometimes were slip-ups.

"We have missed one or two," he said. "Say the opening lines in a movie are very direct and blunt. And say it's coming right after a children's show. The most recent time was when we had a Richard Pryor movie at 8 o'clock right after 'Fraggle Rock.' The first couple of lines of the movie were very tough. We haven't repeated that faux pas again."

Reviewers also criticized HBO for Eddie Murphy's comedy concert because of its frequent profanity.

Abraham estimated that one-fourth to one-third of all the movies shown on HBO and Cinemax were R-rated.

"Our own original movies are not rated but we rate them ourselves," he said. "For instance, there's a brief nude scene and some salty language in 'Draw.' We called it an R and did not schedule it before 8 o'clock." (In that Western, one scene catches Kirk Douglas, from the back, with his pants down.)

HBO's "Glitter Dome," an original movie made from the book by Joseph Wambaugh, would have been R-rated. Cinemax's first original movie was "Louisiana," which was listed as a PG.

Because they are not free television, the pay services feel they have to offer something more in their own productions. Michael Fuchs, the head of HBO, for example, was critical of HBO's "The Far Pavilions," suggesting that the sex scenes between Amy Irving and Ben Cross should have been more explicit.

Jourdan Playing In 'Gigi' Again

BOSTON (AP) — Twenty-six years after he played the young lover in the movie "Gigi," French-born actor Louis Jourdan is playing the older male lead in a stage version of the musical — and his attitude is, vive la difference.

Jourdan, who appeared as Gaston in the 1958 Academy Award-winning film, plays Honore this time around, the older romantic played by Maurice Chevalier in the movie.

"I always sensed somehow that I would play this part," he said. "When you're French and you live and work in America ... it is almost inevitable if you are around 25 years later."

Jourdan, 63, said the character Honore "is the soul of the play," but the biggest challenge is following Chevalier.

"I cannot beat that. ... You cannot fight the memory," he said.

Brent Musburger Is Highest Paid

NEW YORK (AP) — Brent Musburger, whose new five-year, $10 million contract with CBS makes him the highest paid sports broadcaster ever, says he was tempted by an offer from ABC Sports.

"ABC is a tremendous sports division for the big events, but I enjoy the constant and wide variety of things I do at CBS," Musberger, anchor of the "NFL Today" pro football broadcast, said at a news conference Monday.

The ABC offer, which Musburger said never reached the money stage, included a role in "Monday Night Football," ABC's baseball telecasts and the Olympics.

Diseases Blamed For $68 Million Loss In Tobacco

RALEIGH (AP) — Heavy rainfall, which ranged from as much as eight inches above normal this year, was partially responsible for diseases that reduced the value of the 1984 flue-cured tobacco crop by an estimated $68.3 million, officials say.

The rainfall was responsible for appreciable loss in tobacco plant beds and in fields, said Dr. N.T. Powell, extension plant pathology specialist at North Carolina State University. The rain was followed by cool temperatures, which helped spread diseases.

"Conditions such as these usually favor infection by pathogens but often do not promote the development of symptoms," Powell said. "Nevertheless, soil-borne diseases, which are so important on flue-cured tobacco, were gain significant in 1984.

Tobacco mosaic was the most destructive flue-cured disease in North Carolina for the second straight year, Powell said. It cost growers $16.4 million, nearly a fourth of total disease losses.

"Mosaic has now become a chronic problem in the state," Powell said. "Its damage often is underestimated because the disease does not kill affected plants."

North Carolina flue-cured tobacco crops also suffered from Granville wilt, which claimed $12.6 million of this year's crop. Until a few years ago, Granville wilt affected only limited areas of the state, but now has spread over most of the Eastern, Border and Middle belts and has established a foehold in the Old Belt. Heaviest losses were in the eastern part of the state, where some fields were destroyed, Powell said.

"Growers must plan more effectively for managing this persistent problem," Powell said, adding that the use of resistant varieties of tobacco and multi-purpose chemicals, and crop rotation can help with the disease.

Losses to root-knot nematodes increased in 1984, and Powell said the problem is expected to persist. Nematodes reduced the 1984 flue-cured crop value by $10 million.

Brown spot disease, which is aided by high humidity and rainfall, caused losses of $9.3 million, Powell said.

Black shank, once the most destructive tobacco disease in North Carolina, cut flue-cured tobacco growers' income this year by $8 million, down $1.25 million from 1983.

Barn rot was also costly, accounting for $3.3 million in damages, while weather fleck took $2.8 million of the crop, and angular leafspot took $1.1 million.

Motoring Costs Are Going Up

CHARLOTTE (AP) — It now costs $30 a year more to own and drive a car in North Carolina than it did three months ago, but Carolina Motor Club officials say that doesn't necessarily show a trend toward increasing driving costs.

"It was down by a like amount at the first of the summer," said Quentin Anderson Jr., spokesman for the 264,000-member affiliate of the American Automobile Association. "You'd need at least two quarters showing similar up or down movements to consider it a trend of any sort."

It cost $3,390 to own and operate a car in North Carolina and other Southeastern states during the third quarter of 1984, according to a study for the club by Runzheimer International of Rochester, Wisc. That's less than any other region and less than the national average of $3,480.

The figure combines the costs of owning and driving a car. Driving costs, which include gasoline, oil, maintenance and tires, actually dropped slightly from 7.55 cents per mile to 7.47 cents per mile during the quarter. But "they did not drop enough to offset a 13-cent-a-day increase in ownership costs," said club president Ralph Peters.

Anderson said the decrease probably was due entirely to a drop in the cost of gasoline. Fuel in North Carolina cost an average of $1.24 per gallon on June 26 and fell to just over $1.20 by Aug. 28, he said.

Ownership costs, which include insurance, license and registration fees, taxes, depreciation and finance charges, were $6.24 per day or $2,227 per year in this part of the country. That compares with second-quarter figures of $6.11 per day or $2,230 per year.

"You have to pay ownership costs whether you use the car or not, but the cost is less if you pay cash for the car and don't finance it," Anderson said.

Based on 15,000 miles a year, drivers in North Carolina and other Southeastern states pay an average of 22.6 cents per mile, compared with 23.2 cents nationwide, the study found.

Researchers averaged figures for three 1984 Chevrolet cars of varying sizes to come up with their conclusions.

Animal Adoption

Approximately 90 wild horses from Oregon and 75 wild burros from Arizona will be adopted by Carolina residents in a four-day event sponsored by the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management at the Union County Livestock Showyards in Monroe Thursday through Sunday. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Persons interested in applying for screening for adoption of one of the animals may set up an appointment by calling 703-274-0231. A fee of $125 for each horse and $75 for each burro is charged to cover veterinary expense and round-up costs.

Farm Bureau Eyes Tobacco Problems

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Delegates of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation will consider 68 resolutions concerning flue-cured tobacco, which faces increasing scrutiny by Congress and growing competition from overseas producers, when the group meets for the third day of its annual convention.

"There's been a lot of talk about reducing the price of tobacco to compete on world markets," Federation official Bob Jenkins said Monday. "But the county presidents (of the federation) have the philosophy that other things have got to be done except cut prices. Cuts alone are not going to solve the problem. ... Selling more is not going to help if you're selling at a loss."

Farmers are willing to consider major changes in agricultural policy only if they don't threaten to reduce their already slim profit margin, Jenkins said.

That's the basic philosophy behind some 600 resolutions the 800 voting delegates of the federation will decide today during the 49th annual convention, he said.

"The delegates are pretty much agreed that this is the basic philosphy, but there will be some debate," said Jenkins.

The proposed resolutions, which become federation policy for lobbying purposes if adopted, originated at the county level. They were sent into the state office in Raleigh and packaged by a resolutions committee comprised of the presidents of each county farm bureau.

"No one resolution proposes any sweeping change," said Jenkins, assistant to the president of the 230,000-member organization. "Farmers are willing to look at change, but they got to know the results."

Sanford Backed For Party Post

By The Associated Press

Duke University President Terry Sanford is getting increased support to become the chairman of the Democratic National Committee and might be interested in the post, associates of the former governor say.

"Terry's name seems to be the one that everybody is focusing on as the ideal guy," R. Spencer Oliver, staff director of Congress' Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe and a long-time Sanford friend and supporter, said Monday in a telephone interview from Washington with the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Sanford, 67, who has announced that he will retire July 1 as president of Duke University, did not return numerous calls to his office Monday. He said last month that he could not consider being drafted while still at Duke.

But Gov. Jim Hunt said that he had encouraged Sanford last week to "make himself available."

"I think he has the kind of moderate philosophy, progressive yet fiscally responsible, that the party needs," Hutn said. "He is a national figure that could help our party have the broad-based appeal it needs throughout the country.

When you try to disparage the ability of someone, you might sneer: "He doesn't even know how to take a finesse!" You are, in fact, libeling the finesse, not the person. Knowing when to finesse and when not to is an art that takes years to perfect.

The final contract of four hearts is beyond reproach. Not even West's interference could sway North-South from their appointed task.

West led the king of diamonds, and South wasted little time in going down. He won the diamond lead, drew two rounds of trumps, ending in hand, cashed the ace of spades and finessed the jack. East was delighted to win and shift to a club, and the defenders collected their three club tricks to inflict a one trick defeat on South.

This was a hand to spurn the finesse. Declarer overloooked the power of the jack of diamonds. See what happens if declarer wins the opening lead, draws trumps and then cashes the ace-king of spades. Now he leads the jack of diamonds and sluffs his spade loser.

West, who is marked with the queen of diamonds by the opening lead, wins and, as the cards lie, he is end played. He must either yield a ruff-sluff or else lead a club up to declarer's king. Either way, declarer will lose only two more tricks.

What if West had another spade? The contract is still ironclad. Assume West exits with a low spade. Declarer puts in dummy's jack. If East covers, declarer ruffs and the last spade is good for a club discard. If East shows out, declarer gets an immediate sluff.

Moore Recovering

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Gov. Dan K. Moore is recovering at home from "major surgery" and is hoping to return to his Raleigh law office late next week, his wife says.

Jeannelle C. Moore declined to discuss the nature of the surgery at Duke Medical Center. In a telephone interview, Mrs. Moore said her husband "is recuperating nicely ... everything is just fine."

Moore, 78, entered Rex Hospital in Raleigh for tests in early November and underwent other tests at Duke before his surgery. He also underwent surgery at Duke Medical Center in January 1983.

Moore, an Asheville native, was governor from 1965 to 1969.

Bomb Explodes

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A bomb planted under a station wagon belonging to the Iraqi Embassy exploded and killed a Greek bomb disposal expert, police said.

A police spokesman said three other explosive devices found beneath cars belonging to Iraqi diplomats were detonated by police sharpshooters, wrecking the vehicles.

In Paris, a clandestine Iraqi opposition group claimed responsibility for the bombs. An anonymous caller telephoned the news agency Agence France Presse, claiming to represent the Islamic Action Organization in Iraq. The caller said the attack was directed against three Iraqi diplomats responsible for surveillance of Iraqi opposition figures in Europe.

Flash Floods

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — At least 16 people were killed and 1,000 left homeless in flash floods triggered by three days of heavy rains in the southern Thai province of Nakhon Sri Thammarat, the provincial governor said.

Gov. Anek Sithiprasasana said reports indicated that while the floods have since receded, about 40,000 acres of paddy fields have been submerged.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 5, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Arguments over money and possessions today could lead to fixed troubles and you would be wise instead to get into less practical interests and develop them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Many new and fascinating outlets are open for your study during the day, so delve right into them. New contacts can be helpful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some thoughtful act for your loved one is wise in the morning. Do not be demanding during the daytime.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Think along the policy level with outsiders and avoid the practical in daytime. The evening can be romantic with a loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Step out early for personal aims and gain them. Later, you can accomplish a good deal where work is concerned.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have some inspired ideas during the day. Get your talents to the attention of bigwigs. Go over money affairs with kin.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Discuss that emotional problem with an expert during the day and tonight be with new friends who are charming.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Talk over with an associate new trends that can be profitable in the future. Tonight, go over reports and statements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more enthusiastic about handling duties ahead of you and get excellent results today. Talk over problems tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Now is the day to put a good idea into motion. Tonight handle work you have neglected to do. Buy a present for loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be more thoughtful of the needs of kin and try to provide them more magnanimously in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use the day to get much done, but in the evening, get home surroundings bettered. Seek out vital information.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can handle important work that has been difficult to do today. Study your assets and liabilities from a different standpoint.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she is likely to get into all sorts of interesting, though sometimes dangerous, situations because of the inquisitive nature. Early teach to reason before taking any action. Make sure that the diet is right and that good health habits are taught early in life.
