Hijackers Kill 2 More Hostages

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

Hijackers holding a jetliner at Tehran airport today killed at least two more passengers and renewed their threats to kill Americans on the plane, Iran's official media reported.

The officials Iranian news agency said the hijackers, who had killed one passenger and wounded an on-board security guard shortly after they commandeered the Kuwait Airways plane Tuesday, today killed two more passengers.

Tehran radio also said two passengers were killed today, but it was not clear if both agencies were referring to the same two killings or if there had been a third.

There was no information on the identity of the latest victims other than an Islamic Republic News Agency report that the first victim killed today was a Kuwaiti.

The five Arabic-speaking hijackers earlier said the passenger killed Tuesday was an American diplomat, but the U.S. State Department said there was no confirmation of that report.

Today's killings reportedly followed demands by the hijackers that the pilot and co-pilot, apparently suffering from exhaustion, be replaced.

The hijackers today allowed food to be delivered to the plane for the first time since landing in Tehran. They also allowed a medical team and a cleaning crew on board after the first reported killing today but before the most recent.

Members of a cleaning crew were quoted by IRNA as saying the roughly 90 hostages still on board — the hijackers earlier released 67, mostly women and children — were tied to their seats with ropes.

The U.S. State Department said at least five Americans were among the passengers when the jetliner was hijacked en route from Kuwait to Pakistan, including two women who were released and three officials of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The hijackers have demanded the release of prisoners in Kuwait.

According to IRNA, the cleaners saw two men on the floor behind the cockpit but could not tell whether they were dead or alive. A photographer the hijackers asked to take photos of the two men on the floor said he saw the men but was not allowed near them.

Tehran radio quoted the photographer as saying he saw only two hijackers and both "had their faces covered."

"One of them had a pistol and the other had a hand grenade. They talked in English and Arabic," he was quoted as saying.

After the cleaning crew and photographer left the plane, and Tehran radio reported that two passengers had been killed, IRNA reported another death.

IRNA said the hijackers shoved a Pakistani passenger out of the plane onto the landing steps today and threatened to kill him, but the passenger leaped off the steps and ran to safety as the hijackers opened fire.

The news agency quoted an Iranian official at the airport as saying more shooting was heard from inside the plane later.

The agency quoted an Iranian Foreign Ministry official as saying the hijackers "were still demanding the release of their friends from prison (in Kuwait) and had announced that if they were not released the Americans aboard the plane would be killed."

The hijackers had been threatening to blow up the plane or to start executing British and American passengers if their demand for the release of a group of prisoners in Kuwaiti jails was not met. The prisoners, the Kuwaiti newspaper al-Watan reported, were convicted for their part in suicide bomb attacks on the U.S. Embassy and French consulate in Kuwait in December 1983.

BRAVE THE BITTER DAY — East Carolina University students Elizabeth Weeks of Goldsboro and Patty McGinley of Wilmington, Del., wait for the ECU bus during the rain and Laura Brooks of Goldsboro also waits for the bus with her umbrella. An Arctic weather system has been moving toward North Carolina, bringing forecasts that the weather will become windy and colder today, with occasional snow flurries over the mountains.

Skies will clear tonight but temperatures will be much colder. Temperatures in the northern Plains today were down to 18 below zero. A snowstorm was moving through the Appalachian states and an even more powerful storm promised snowpiles up to a foot deep in the Northeast. (Reflector Photos by Tommy Forrest)

Storms Deliver Deep Snowpiles, 18-Below Cold

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer

The northern Plains shivered in a deep freeze today, with temperatures as low as 18 below zero, while a snowstorm trudged across the Appalachian states and another more powerful storm promised snowpiles up to a foot deep in the Northeast.

The combined effects of a supercold Canadian air mass and a storm system that swept across the Texas Panhandle left 10 motorists dead Wednesday in Ohio, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Minnesota.

Police reported hundreds of fender-benders during this morning's rush-hour, and schools in some areas were closed today. Travelers' advisories were posted from the Plains to New England.

"It's absolutely a winter wonderland going into the Christmas season," said Missouri Highway Patrol Cpl. Jerry Chrismon, who measured snow in Poplar Bluff at 10.75 inches. "But since we're in another business, it looks bad."

"We could have a terribly hazardous situation if all the slush freezes," said Chrismon.

Arctic winds made it feel as cold as 60 degrees below zero overnight in parts of Minnesota and the Dakotas, and the storms dumped as much as 10 inches of snow Wednesday in parts of Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Oklahoma.

Three weather systems — the weakening Appalachian storm, a storm off the mid-Atlantic coast and a cold front from Michigan that was rapidly moving eastward — were expected to bring more snow, rapidly dropping temperatures and brisk winds to the Northeast today, the National Weather Service said. A foot or more of snow was forecast for Vermont, northern Maine, northern New Hampshire and northeastern New York, with slightly less expected in other areas of inland New England, northern New York, western Pennsylvania and the western Maryland mountains.

"You won't be able to tell the snow from the blow," said George Adamson of the weather service at Burlington, Vt. "What you shoveled this morning, you'll be shoveling again tonight."

The heaviest snow early today blanketed parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, V. Pa., Wheeling, W. Va., and Binghamton, N.Y., and 3 inches of new snow at Buffalo and Rochester, N.Y., and Augusta, Maine.

Pacific air moving eastward was expected to end the deep freeze today.

FOR TRAGEDY — The U.S. flag at the Union Carbide Corporation's battery products plant here was being flown at half-staff today in recognition of the victims of the gas leak at the company's Bhopal, India, chemical plant Monday morning. Mary Ann Ford, a spokesman at the company's agricultural research center at Research Triangle Park, said flags at all Union Carbide facilities will be flown at half-staff for the next week. She said too that all Union Carbide employees "will observe a moment of silence at noon" for the victims of the disaster. (See related stories on page 10.)

PROGERIA FOUNDATION

A foundation that aims to help children afflicted with the rare premature aging disease known as progeria has been established. The Progeria Foundation Inc. seeks to raise funds with the help of community organizations to subsidize medical expenses for progeriacs, support a communications network and eventually fund research into the cause of the disease.

Progeria appears to be a genetic disorder that afflicts one in every 4 million children born. It stunts growth, causes baldness and results in death by heart attack usually by about 13 years of age. Progeriacs look remarkably alike, regardless of sex, race or social background, and their intelligence is normal. There is no known treatment or cure, but investigators hope that studying the disease will provide treatments and clues to the aging process.

Contributions may be sent to the Progeria Foundation Inc., Box 4434, Warren, N.J., 07060. Anyone wishing to work for the foundation may make contact at the same address.

ECU Will Move Security Office

The East Carolina University campus security and traffic office will be moved next month from the Howard House on East Fifth Street to a former residence on East 10th Street, university officials have said. The ECU News Bureau and public relations office will then be housed in the Fifth Street building, moving from the Erwin Building on campus.

C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, said the new location will give employees more space and ease concerns of neighborhood residents about the Howard House.

A spokesman for the Tar River Neighborhood Association said the association is pleased about the move. The association has, for some time, protested the use of the Fifth Street property as a campus police office and also has protested the university's demolition earlier this year of the house next door, the Coleman House, to make way for a parking lot. The organization, composed of 200 families who live north of the ECU campus, has issued a statement saying the security office hurts the neighborhood because it operates 24 hours a day and attracts a high volume of traffic.

A neighborhood representative contacted this morning said the association members believe the security office has been in violation of a special use permit given in 1981 for an 8-to-5 office the three years it's been there. The news bureau will be more in line with the university's agreement with the city, the spokesman — a university employee who asked not to be identified — said.

Wedding Vows Said In Evening Ceremony

Berchie Rochelle Bullock and Irving Keith Liaros were married in a double ring ceremony held Saturday at 7 p.m. in Broad Street Christian Church conducted by Dr. Arthur Lilley.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Garland M. Bullock of New Bern and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Duke of Washington, N.C.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white sheer organza and alencon lace. It featured an empire waist and long straight sleeves of alencon lace, a Queen Ann neckline accentuated with clusters of seed pearls, a full A-line skirt ornamented with frontal matching lace motif with lace trimmed border that flowed into a chapel length train. The bridal veil was a matching lace covered Juliet capulet accentuated with seed pearls from which flowed a fingertip veil of illusion. Her bouquet was of red and white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, lace and satin streamers.

The matron of honor was Lisa Goddard. She wore a formal length colonial red satin gown with long white opera gloves and a red satin picture hat with an over-the-face veil. Her flowers were red roses with baby's breath and red streamers.

The best man was Roy Duke and ushers were Mitchell Bullock and Dallas Dickerson.

The organist and soloist was Judy Lewis; the trumpeter, Dan Jones; the guitarist, Tim Stewart. Ms. Lewis sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Gift of Love."

The bride's mother wore a formal blue gown with embroidered bodice. The bridegroom's mother wore a street length cranberry dress.

A reception was given in the fellowship hall of the church following the wedding by the bride's parents. Carolyn Peaden presided over the bride's book.

MRS. LIAROS

The bride is a graduate of New Bern Senior High School and is employed at Howell's Child Care Center. The bridegroom attends Beaufort Community College and is employed by Johnson Auto Parts. After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Washington.

Dear Abby

Couple Adds To Party Babble By Speaking In Foreign Language

DEAR ABBY: Without knowing the facts, you sided with "Fed Up in Frankfort, Ky.," saying, "People who speak a foreign language in the presence of those who can't understand it are rude, insensitive and offensive."

Abby, if Schatzi and Joe normally speak to each other in English when they are alone, I might have agreed with you, but if they usually communicate in German, and are speaking only to each other in a group situation, why shouldn't they speak in German? Perhaps they were making a few side remarks such as, "This party is boring. It's time to go home." Or, "Your zipper is down."

Anyone who would consider this to be insensitive is entirely too sensitive for his own good.

OFF MY CHEST

DEAR OFF: According to "Fed Up," the German-speaking couple did not limit their conversation to a few "side remarks."

I maintain it's all right for Schatzi and Joe to speak German to each other in a group situation in Frankfurt, Germany—but in Frankfort, Ky., they should speak English.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you were asked if a tomato was a fruit or a vegetable, and you said it was a fruit. Wrong!

Originally the tomato was considered a fruit, but now it is classified as a vegetable. Please set the record straight.

OKLAHOMAN

DEAR OKLAHOMAN: Read on for more on the anatomy of a tomato:

DEAR ABBY: In the book titled "The Story of Our Fruits and Vegetables," by Dorothy Crispo, I learned that it took the Supreme Court to establish the tomato as a vegetable. In 1893, an importer argued that the tomato was a fruit, and therefore not subject to duty. Then the Supreme Court later reclassified the tomato as a vegetable because it was served in soup, with soup, or with the main meal.

JIM ARNOLD,
FORT WAYNE, IND.

DEAR JIM: Although the Supreme Court may be legally empowered to reclassify a fruit to a vegetable, my common sense tells me that horticulturally speaking, a fruit is forever a fruit and a vegetable remains a vegetable regardless of how it is served or with what.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law insists on calling me by my first name ("Joan"). I don't like it. I think it shows a lack of respect. After all, we are not contemporaries.

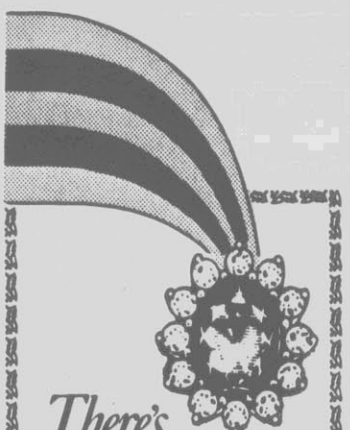

When she first started to call me Joan, I asked her to please call me Mom or Mother, as my son does. She told me that she has only one mother, and her mother would resent it if she were to address me by that title.

Abby, I feel that I have earned that title, and out of respect to me—and her husband—she should call me Mom or Mother.

What do you think?

A NAME PROBLEM

DEAR NAME PROBLEM: I think how your daughter-in-law addresses you is not the problem. The real problem is how she feels about you, and how you feel about her.

Couple Marries In Recent Ceremony

Linda Smith Mackey and William Arbie Davenport Jr. were united in holy matrimony in a recent ceremony performed at the home of Hilda Owens. The Rev. Robert C. White of Fountain performed the double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Smith of Route 2, Goldsboro, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Arbie Davenport Sr. of Deep Run.

The bride, escorted by her brother, Marvin Smith Jr., wore a winter white suit designed by Steven Peters. The jacket was scalloped and she wore a matching crepe blouse accented with embroidery. She wore a single strand of pearls and baby's breath in her hair. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of roses, carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with greenery.

Dianne Langston, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Wendy Nicole and Mary Madolyn Mackey, daughters of the bride, were junior bridesmaids.

Ralph Noble of Snow Hill was best man. Groomsmen were Winfred Langston, brother-in-law of the bride, and Nicholas David Mackey, son of the bride.

Melissa Jones of Albertson presided at the register. Mrs. Owens directed the wedding.

A reception was held after the ceremony and was given by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pittman of Fountain. Melissa Jones poured punch and champagne was served by Winfred Langston. Mrs. Paul Pittman served cake.

The bride is a graduate of Eastern Wayne High School of Goldsboro and is employed as office manager of Bill Clifton Agency in Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of Deep Run High School and is employed by Joe Culliper Chrysler-Plymouth-Peugeot of Greenville.

The couple will live in Fountain after a wedding trip to the coast.

Sorority Has 12th Birthday Celebration

Iota Kappa Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority recently celebrated its 12th chapter birthday at a dinner at Tar Landing Restaurant. The celebration included the annual tribute of members' husbands.

Ella Harris gave a history of the group which was chartered in 1972. Jean Carter, Addie Gore, Charlotte Smith and Ms. Harris were charter members.

Gloria Hines gave a tribute to husbands. Receiving gifts from their wives were Ernest Brown, Issac Artis, Bobby Pettis, Wade Johnson, Charles Whitner, Wally Hines, Alton Harris, Ed Carter, Ray Congleton, Bobby Smith and Roderick Harrell.

Chapter president Jean Carter presided at the program. She was assisted by Charlotte Smith and Barbara Joyner. Planning the program were Patricia Artis, Charlotte Smith and Peggy Brown. Jocelyn Foy of Bennett College in Greensboro was a special guest.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Joseph A. Faw of North Wilkesboro announces the engagement of her daughter, Shirley Ann, to Douglas Paul Lucas, son of Cmdr. and Mrs. H.H.I. Sugg of Greenville. The wedding will take place Dec. 22.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I guess we've all heard "loser" stories about the comic who was booked into Las Vegas during Holy Week, the entrepreneur who bought 500 acres at the base of Mt. St. Helen's in 1982, and the guy who sold his Chrysler stock.

It's timing, right?

Add this to the list. In a year when half-clothed men with muscles basted in Wesson Oil are dominating the calendar industry, this is the year I came out with an engagement calendar of cute sayings and little cartoons celebrating cellulite, stretch marks and varicose veins.

How was I to know that beefcake was selling like hotcakes?

In assessing the array of calendars past, I figured we were saturated with breathtaking views of America, cute little babies with adult sayings ballooning out of their mouths, old-world paintings from museums and tasteful bits of poetry showing clouds of daffodils. I figured it was time to spice up the year with a few laughs and one-liners, right?

Wrong. This is not a cerebral year. It's a year of a calendar featuring men of USC who majored in weight-lifting and were all sired by orthodontists.

Carol-Ann Tucker Gives Program

Carol-Ann Tucker presented a program on stress management at the meeting of Alpha Iota Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa recently.

She is associated with the East Carolina University Regional Training Center. Ms. Tucker identified three principles of stress and shared methods of dealing with stress.

Mildred West reported on the district workshop held in New Bern. It was attended by members Barbara Finch, Linda Ferebee, Elizabeth Avery, Peggy Rowelette and Ms. West.

It was announced that Sarah Allen was recently appointed assistant principal of South Greenville School. A tour of Liberty Hall in Kenansville will be held Dec. 23.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

and look good. There will eventually be pageants where they'll vie for scholarships based on their poise while wearing a bathing suit.

When they travel with their wives, there'll be fashion shows for them while their wives attend meetings. They will get jobs jumping out of cakes and sitting on people's laps.

There'll be a rebellion to change social attitudes which no one will pretend to understand.

That's when I'll come out with my engagement calendar . . . Getting Through 2184 with Erma Bombeck!

Partnership

North Carolina has a unique and exciting asset in its University of North Carolina system, which embraces under a central administration all 16 campuses of the state's universities.

Born of controversy, the development of the university system has exceeded even the early expectations for its success. It is a system which has maintained the missions of the component universities and their freedom to explore new areas of service. Yet planning and budgeting has been centralized under the board of governors and the system's president, Dr. William Friday.

Tuesday night area citizens were able to attend a presentation on the services being rendered by the university system. The benefits are impressive with emphasis on education, research and public service.

There are 350,000 living alumni of the UNC system and they are making their contributions to the state and nation. They are being joined by a list of graduates each year to help build a better society.

The slide show was titled, "A Report to the Citizens of North Carolina: Partnership for the Future." It is indeed a partnership, one which is paying dividends to the taxpayers.

Think

The average American household keeps a supply of poisons or explosives on the premises. It has become a way of life.

Explosives?

Well, the hunter may have a box (or several boxes) of shells tucked away on a shelf or in a drawer; that can of gasoline that fuels the lawnmower might have the power of a stick of dynamite — maybe two sticks. You use gas for heating or cooking? How about kerosene, alcohol? Under given circumstances they are also explosive.

About poisons: an overdose of many commonplace medications can have serious results for the unwary. Insecticides are not for swallowing by people, especially children; nor are fungicides or cleaning agents or herbicides ... it's a long list, and we're only scratching the surface.

A home in Claremont had a bottle of lye in the refrigerator and some young people thought they had found a treat. Party time! They drank it. The results were a disaster. You probably read or heard the gory details.

The point is, there are disasters waiting to happen in medicine cabinets, sheds, under the kitchen sink or in a closet ... waiting for small children who don't know about such things and careless grownups.

But you do know, and you have known for a long time. What have you done about it?

WASHINGTON — A couple of weeks ago the National Conference of Catholic Bishops delivered itself of a 120-page draft of a pastoral letter on economic justice. I had intended to drop the topic in the round file, on the reasonable grounds that any outfit that fathers the bastard verb "to marginalize" should be charitably ignored, but further reflection prompts a few observations.

The bishops' concern is with the poor. They find it morally unacceptable that so many persons should be living in poverty in so rich a land. One threshold difficulty is that such terms as "poor" and "poverty" defy crisp definition. The draft letter tells us what the bishops mean by "poor." To be poor "means being denied full participation in the economic, social and political life of society." It means "being marginalized." It is here that the bishops begin to get a bit barmy, for no one — not even a Catholic bishop — enjoys "full participation" in the economic, social and political life of society. All of us are on one margin or another. By such rubbery yardsticks we are all poor.

Put such quibbles aside. Beyond dispute, some millions of Americans are poor by any definition. Why did they get this way? And what should be done about it?

The bishops assert confidently that "everyone knows the significance of economic relationships," but obviously this is not so. The bishops themselves seem not to have even the foggiest notion of why some are poor and some are rich. Their gentle notion is that all men are, or at least morally ought to be, substantially equal in this world's goods. The reality is that some of God's creatures are more ambitious, more talented, more productive, more industrious and just plain luckier than others. There is respectable authority for the proposition that the poor we shall always have with us; and as long as we preserve a free society we shall always have the relatively rich with us also.

Why do people work? Tell us, gentlemen. Why? I suspect the bishops have not thought this out, and this may be because bishops never have had to work in the way that others work. Priests have the greatest job security on earth; they are more secure than federal judges, crowned heads and tenured professors. The idea of working in a fiercely competitive marketplace — the idea of working to exhaustion in order to feed and clothe and house a family — is an idea the bishops know only at second hand.

Thus their bland pronouncement: "All U.S. citizens, especially parents, must resist pressures constantly to seek more." We must break with "the frenzy of consumerism and adopt a simple way of living." The bishops deplore "a consumerist mentality which encourages immediate gratification." They do not like "luxury consumer goods."

But it is in the nature of men constantly "to seek more." This is the unquenchable flame that drove our immigrant forebears to labor for their children. It is preposterous to find something immoral or unjust in the desire of ordinary folk to improve their lot in life. And if people choose to spend their earnings on lipsticks or whiskey or "luxury consumer goods," this is how a free marketplace works.

The bishops are not oblivious. After they had delivered their manifesto the other day, some of them reportedly trotted down to the flossy Tiberio restaurant on K Street, where they put away good wine and veal marinara and otherwise lived the simple life; and in thus gratifying their comfortable bellies they gave employment to cooks, waiters, bakers, butchers, farmers, vintners and the suppliers of crystal and linen.

What to do about the poor? The bishops' feeble answer is to throw money at them. Our programs for the poor provide only "meager" benefits; the whole welfare system is "woefully inadequate." Funds should be distributed without regard to whether supplicants are capable of working. While some degree of inequality may be both acceptable and desirable, the present distribution of income and wealth is so inequitable that it violates a "minimum standard of distributive justice." So the bishops would redistribute the wealth, taking from the productive and giving to the unproductive.

Perhaps that is economic justice in the ecclesiastical view, but it looks like spinach to me.

Strength For Today

A prominent British statesman was invited to journey from England to Canada in order to make a commencement address.

His opening words were, "I have traveled 4,000 miles to tell you there is a difference between right and wrong."

There is not only a difference — the difference is so marked that we could all see it if we were not so selfish, indulgent and perverse. To be sure, real conflict of duties sometimes appear in life — but not often. Usually it is a conflict of interests. Of course, not all problems we confront are moral problems.

Watch that you do not make the mistake of advocating as a principle something that is nothing more than a policy.

But a great many of life's problems are moral. And down through the center of them is an easily discernible line separating right from wrong. Let us face life as it is, not just as we want it to be.

Priority Goes To Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, convinced in the words of one official that so-called tax reform will be "very, very difficult" to achieve, clearly is planning to relegate that issue to the back burner as it concentrates first on pushing its budget cuts through Congress.

Although President Reagan will send Congress his proposal for major changes in the federal income tax system by the end of January, White House strategists are saying outright in private that they expect the proposal to languish for quite a while before any action is taken.

But, when Reagan gets around to trying to sell his tax changes, it seems apparent the president will stop referring to "tax simplification," as he has been calling it for a year, and start referring to "tax fairness," which is likely to have a bigger — and more positive — impact on voters.

Whatever it is called, one official, who spoke on the condition he not be named, said, "A major tax reform is going to take a lot of time. ... We would hope we could get something considered this year."

The first step, in the view of this official, is to "develop bipartisan support for the initial proposal," and to get the appropriate congressional committees to begin considering the plan, which probably will be some version of the modified flat tax proposed last week by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

"And then you will have a very lengthy process of hearings and a substantial amount of negotiation over many aspects of that very complex reform" among the White House, Congress and various interest groups, he said.

This official and others in the White House have made it clear that the cuts Reagan proposes in the fiscal 1986 budget will have priority.

But he refused to concede that after an all-out effort to push those cuts through Congress the White House may not have enough political capital left to mount the kind of major campaign needed to change the tax system — especially if Reagan sticks to his insistence that the tax revision plan not be used as a method of reducing the enormous federal deficit.

"I think seriously that if we're able to develop the (tax reform) proposal that there is potential to generate as much public support for tax fairness and reforming the current tax system as there is for spending cuts," the official said.

But he described it as "very, very difficult," saying: "I'm trying to be realistic in terms of the legislative process. It will just be a slower process."

RALEIGH — The sweeping public education changes proposed by the Education Policy Council promise to do more than change how public school classrooms operate. If enacted, the council's recommendations would scramble the current relationships between local and state educators, redistributing educational authority in North Carolina.

Two major recommendations of the council would do the scrambling. One would reorganize the financing of public education, the other would create a basic statewide curriculum which all schools would have to offer.

In the area of finance, power would shift from the state to the local schools. Currently, state funds for the schools are distributed on the basis of student population. The money comes to town on a line item budget. That is, the state sends $10 and mandates that $5 be spent here, another $2 here and the remaining $3 in these places. Local units have little flexibility in applying state money to local needs.

After a successful pilot project which allowed some schools to experiment with greater flexibility, the council is now recommending to the full General Assembly that the local schools be given greater flexibility in the spending of state education funds. The state would continue to allot the money on the basis of student population, but the line item budget would be dropped.

Another facet of the finance recommendation could realign local school administration in a way which local school boards have opposed. Included in the proposal's funding formula is a change in the way administrators are paid. Members of the council noted that that change could pressure multi-system counties to move to a single school system. "They will almost have to go to a single district," said Janet Wilson, past president of the N.C. School Boards Association.

In the area of curriculum, power obviously flows from the local districts to Raleigh. The council approved a State Board of Education plan to provide each child in North Carolina with a basic minimum core of subjects. In some school districts, there is not enough money, nor enough students, to take courses like physics, foreign languages and art. The basic program says the state would be responsible for providing the money to make sure those courses are all taught.

In the process, local school boards would be losing some of their authority. As Howard Maniloff of the Dept. of Public Instruction conceded, "This would be a mandate. The local schools would have to teach all those subjects in those grade levels."

The curriculum recommendation also takes some of the flexibility away that was provided in the finance recommendation. A local school board would have the flexibility to shift resources around but, in doing so, the local school board would have to make sure that guidelines in the basic curriculum were met.

For example, a school board might decide to increase the size of history classes so that English classes could be smaller. That would be fine. But the basic curriculum will have a limit on the number of students who could be enrolled in that history class and the school board could not go beyond that.

Fire Prevention Can Save Lives

Fire can provide comfort and warmth, cook your food, take away your home, even take your life.

Although fire deaths have dropped 23 percent in the United States since 1978 — largely because smoke detectors have been installed in about two-thirds of all homes in the country — 6,000 people still die in fires every year, Capt. Michael Branch, fire prevention specialist with the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, said.

Branch, who said 79 percent of all fire deaths occur in one- and two-family homes, urged Greenville area residents to practice good fire prevention techniques.

"One of the best ways to keep your family safe," Branch suggested, is to "install smoke detectors — one on each level of your home," and test them often to make sure they are working. He said statistics show that the use of smoke detectors will reduce a person's chance of dying in a fire by more than 50 percent.

"Be careful with cigarettes," Branch urged. "Don't smoke in bed. And after a party, make sure there are no cigarette butts smoldering in ashtrays or on furniture or floors." A 1982 survey, he said, showed that while 7 percent of all home fires are caused by cigarettes, 30 percent of all fire deaths resulted in fires started by cigarettes.

Sixteen percent of all home fires result from cooking accidents, according to Branch, who said "don't leave food unattended on the stove," and make sure stoves are turned off when not in use.

Home heating systems are the major cause of dwelling fires, accounting for 28 percent of the total, Branch said.

Make sure your heating system is working properly, Branch suggested. "If you smell oil or gas, or have problems, call a service man."

If you have a wood stove, Branch said "make sure the chimney has been inspected and cleaned if necessary, and make sure the stove itself has been checked for deterioration."

He said woodstoves should be installed by a professional and "hearths, made of non-cumulative materials, should extend beyond the front and sides of the stove."

Cumulative materials should be kept away from fire places, wood stoves, and kerosene or other space heaters, Branch said, adding that heaters using liquid fuel should be refueled out-of-doors if possible.

Branch also said that flammable liquids should not be stored in the house.

"Make sure your family, even children as young as 3, know two routes of escape out of the house," and in case of fire, "get out of the house first, then call the fire department." Once out of the house, "don't go back inside to get anything."

If you find yourself inside a burning building, "stay low ... get below the smoke. The air is better near the floor, since smoke rises." And he said, "don't open a door if the door or door-knob feels hot. That probably means there's fire on the other side."

Branch suggested that a good policy is to have a home fire escape plan and a designated place outside your house where the whole family can meet in case of a fire.

If you have a grease fire on a cookstove, "cover the pan and cut the stove off," Branch suggested. In case of an electrical fire, cut off the electricity, he said.

Branch said "it's a good idea to keep a UL (Underwriters Laboratory)-listed multipurpose fire extinguisher near the kitchen," and "keep emergency numbers by your telephone."

Reagans Sending 125,000 Cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, are sending out 125,000 Christmas cards, showing a Jamie Wyeth painting of the White House as a squirrel scampers across freshly fallen snow and makes the first footprints.

The oil painting, titled "Christmas Morning at the White House," marks the second time the Reagans have used a Wyeth painting for their Christmas card. The 1981 card, depicting the south view of the White House, was a reproduction of the artist's "Christmas Eve at the White House."

Inside the card, in gold engraved script, is the message: "The president and Mrs. Reagan extend to you their warmest holiday greetings and best wishes for the new year, 1984." Above the message, the presidential seal is embossed in white.

A White House statement said the cards were printed by Hallmark at cost, and that the Republican National Committee paid for printing and mailing expenses. The cards will go into the mail beginning Dec. 12.

Traffic Accidents Reported

An estimated $12,700 damage resulted from five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 7:30 p.m. collision on the Stan-tonburg Road east of the Medical Drive intersection.

Officers said the collision involved cars driven by Alicia Ivey Milam of 124 Blacksmith Lane, Loren Robert Long of Farmville, and a car owned by James Earl Hammond of 314 Conley St.

Police, who said the driver of the Hammond car and a passenger in the vehicle left the scene of the collision on foot, said an estimated $5,000 damage resulted to the Milam vehicle. No damage was listed for the other two cars.

Investigation of the collision is continuing.

A 5:18 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road, involved vehicles driven by Roland Bryan Williams of Greenville, and Robert Francis Fearnot of 205 Wedgewood Arms.

Police, who charged Fearnot with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $2,500 to the Williams truck and $900 to the Fearnot car.

Michelle Sue Woodley of Route 1, Greenville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 6:29 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 175 feet east of the Mall Drive intersection.

Officers said the Woodley car collided with an auto driven by Sylva Gene Wells of 1902 Fairview Way, causing $1,500 damage to the Wells car and $500 damage to the Woodley auto.

Cars driven by Gerald S. Mason of Route 1, Belhaven, and David Washington Robinson of Route 4, Tarboro, collided about 5:13 p.m. on Fifth Street, 100 feet west of the Memorial Drive intersection, causing $1,000 damage to the Mason car and $400 damage to the Robinson auto.

Drivers involved in a 5:53 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 1 mile south of the Village Drive intersection were identified as Barbara Lynn Gilmore of 409 Wedgewood Arms and Jose Francisco Caro of 201 Kenilworth Drive.

Damage from the collision was set at $100 to the Gilmore car and $800 to the Caro vehicle.

Investigators charged Caro with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, while Ms. Gilmore was charged with having expired registration plates.

Court Rejects Suit By Leaf Exporters

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court today said tobacco exporters have no right to challenge part of a federal tobacco support program that was never meant to protect their interests.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a ruling of a U.S. district court at Raleigh, N.C., dismissing the complaint filed by the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association Inc.

The association challenged a 1981 change in policy permitting the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. to sell tobacco stored under the federal price support program directly to foreign buyers.

The corporation, better known as the "Cooperative," had previously exported tobacco only through U.S. commodity brokers such as those in the tobacco exporters association.

But agriculture officials said the change might reduce cooperative losses by creating an additional market. It noted that any losses incurred by the cooperative would have to be borne by the farmers.

The tobacco dealers, however, said their business was threatened by the change since the cooperative was financed by low-interest government loans.

In denying the challenge, the appeals court said Congress created the tobacco support program to protect the interest of tobacco farmers, not dealers.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police are investigating three thefts reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer W.R. McLawhorn said watches and jewelry valued at $285 were taken from 2110 Pendleton St. in a break-in reported at 3:15 p.m.

Officer K.A. Bedell said a .44 caliber pistol, valued at $423, was taken from a display case at Bond's Sporting Goods at 218 Arlington Blvd. in an incident also reported at 3:15 p.m.

Police said a .38 caliber pistol and a watch, valued at $265, as well as $40 in silver coins, were taken from 501 Pittman Drive in a break-in reported at 6:01 p.m.

Woman Charged

Greenville police arrested Sharon Johnson, 24, of 1212 Battle St. about 2 a.m. Wednesday on charges of carrying a concealed weapon and assault by pointing a gun following an incident on Mahanattan Avenue.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said Ms. Johnson allegedly pointed a gun at Brenda Bell of 120 Manhattan Ave. about 12:49 a.m.

Special Program

A special program will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Ayden Deliverance Center, 137 E. Second St., Ayden. The program will honor Helen Mills and Rose Gorham.

Fire Insurance

As of Dec. 1, 16 fire departments in Pitt County have been authorized by the Insurance Service Office of North Carolina to extend their boundaries to five road miles, thus improving insurance rates for the new households to be served, according to Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

The departments are Ayden, Bell Arthur, Belvoir, Bethel, Black Jack, Falkland, Farmville, Fountain, Gardnerville, Grifton, Grimesland, Pactolus, Red Oak, Staton House, Stokes, and Winterville.

Joyner said the extension will mean a 15 to 20 percent savings in insurance premiums for people living in the one-mile outer perimeter added to each district. He said that residents affected should contact their insurance agents and call the fire marshal's office if there are questions.

Joyner emphasized that everyone in the county has fire protection. He said the designation only decreases the price of insurance coverage of those living nearest fire departments.

Services Planned

Little Creek Baptist Church will hold 7:30 p.m. services Thursday through Sunday. Guest speakers and singers include: Thursday — Bill Moss and the Celestials of Detroit and the Macedonia Singers of Albany, La.; Friday — the Three-in-Christ Team featuring Elder J.E. Vance, Elder W.H. Joyner and Elder Tyrone Turnage, and Sunday — Elder Maurice Laws and the Mount Shiloh Baptist Church of Winterville will be featured in a pastor's appreciation service.

Holiday Programs

Two holiday programs have been scheduled early next week at Greenville Middle School. On Monday at 7:30 p.m., the school's annual Christmas program will be presented by the students.

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, the school orchestra will perform a program of Christmas music.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting services will begin at Philippi Church of Christ at 8 p.m. Friday with a conference.

At 2 p.m. Saturday the mothers and deacons will hold a service for the church's sick and Holy Communion will be held at 8 p.m. Regular worship will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday by the Rev. Randy Royal and at 3 p.m. Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church will be in charge of the service.

New Uniforms

Ayden-Grifton High School's junior varsity cheerleaders have new uniforms to begin the season, school officials have announced.

Mrs. Lillie Craft, mother of cheerleader Cathy Craft, planned and made the green jumpers for each cheerleader. Mrs. Kathy Stokes, mother of cheerleader Carole Stokes, arranged for the monogramming and raised the funds for the uniforms.

Dental Program

Four fifth and sixth-grade homeroom classes at Ayden Middle School have been awarded 100 percent participation certificates by the 1984 Pitt County dental health program.

The homerooms of Shirley Grimsley, Jan Gunter, Sandy Matthews and Wanda Warren received certificates for their participation in the fluoride rinse program. The students used the rinse solution once a week to strengthen teeth and reduce cavities.

According to statistics, the fluoride rinse program has improved the dental hygiene examinations for Pitt County students by 55 percent in the past three years.

Hospitality House

Four West Coast entertainers will be featured in taped interviews this week on Kay Currie's weekly magazine show, Hospitality House.

The show will be aired from noon to 12:30 p.m. Saturday over WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington.

The first two guests are Hart

Bochner and David Carradine, who will be seen on the NBC movie special, "East of Eden," to be aired on Dec. 9 and 10. The second pair of guests in taped segments are Marcy Walker and A. Martinez, members of the cast of the soap opera "Santa Barbara."

A local area guest is Edith Connor of Rocky Mount, co-owner of the Doll Haus, which features a collection including Elvis Presley and Prince Charles dolls.

Christmas Campaign

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a "Christmas Cheer Membership Campaign" through Wednesday, organization officials have announced.

According to Burke Barbee, chairman of the chamber's membership committee, 23 participants from area businesses are working on the campaign. The purpose of the campaign, Barbee said, is to "recruit new members to become part of an organization that is working for total community development."

For further information or to join the chamber call 752-4101.

Volunteers Meet

The Ronald McDonald Volunteers meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the main auditorium at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Reunion Set

A reunion of Battery A, 113th Field Artillery will be held at Western Sizzlin Steak House, 2903 E. 10th St., Sunday at 1 p.m. For more information, call Steve Nobles at 746-3246.

Open House

An open house at the Newbold-White House near Hertford will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday. The state's oldest house will be part of a tour that will include three other Hertford houses.

The house will also remain decorated for the holiday season through Dec. 14, and is open without charge to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Hertford is about 75 miles from Greenville, located on U.S. 17 between Edenton and Elizabeth City.

'Restless' Heart Patient Freed Of Temporary Tubes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — All temporary tubes have been removed from artificial heart recipient William J. Schroeder and he might take a wheelchair ride later today for a change of scenery, a hospital official said this morning.

"He is getting a little restless," said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, chairman and medical director of Humana Heart Institute International.

Schroeder's heart rate also will be increased from about 70 beats per minute to 80 or 90 beats per minute to keep him from tiring so easily as he exercises, Lansing told reporters.

Schroeder tired after a 12-step walk and moderate exercise Wednesday.

Lansing said he thought a heart-rate increase would be appropriate because Schroeder was beyond the risk of seizures that plagued Barney Clark, the world's first human recipient of a permanent artificial heart.

"I think, at this stage, all the things that could lead to seizures ... are all sort of past and I'm really not concerned," Lansing said. "If something happens now, I would have to assume that it's unrelated to the heart."

Though hardly frisky, Schroeder has been less sedentary this week as doctors have prodded him to get back on his feet. Today, they hoped to get him out of his room so he doesn't become depressed by being confined to it.

His "cardiac output" has remained at 70 beats per minute while he has been tethered to the 323-pound Utahdrive pumping machine that is the primary power source for his Jarvik-7 heart.

Lansing said the heart rate later could be returned from the 80-or 90-beat level to around 70 beats as Schroeder regains muscle strength and his body demands less help from the drive system.

The heart rate had been kept low because of fear of the seizures suffered by Clark after he became, in 1982, the first artificial heart recipient.

But Lansing, recalling Clark's array of ailments, said he "didn't really believe that the cardiac output was the cause of the seizures."

Unlike the 11-pound Heimes portable driver, which Schroeder prefers but can use only for three hours a day, the Utahdrive doesn't automatically adjust the heart rate to meet increased exertion.

Lansing said that probably was to blame for a wave of fatigue that suddenly engulfed Schroeder on Wednesday morning as the pump provided less blood than his body demanded.

Mothers Meet

The Mothers of Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church will meet with the pastor Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be at the church.

Shortage Eased

An emergency bloodmobile held Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital netted 95 units of type O blood and eased a "very critical shortage of type O" in the county, according to Dick Carney, director of Tar River Blood Services.

The next bloodmobile visit will be Dec. 26 at the Boys Club in Greenville.

10 Million Have Homes On Wheels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau says more than 10 million Americans lived in mobile homes at the time of the 1980 census, with the dwellings accounting for 5.3 percent of the nation's housing stock.

A new report on housing characteristics issued Wednesday disclosed that there were 3,874,236 occupied mobile homes in use, and their presence varied sharply from state to state.

In Wyoming, for example, 29,993 mobile homes constituted 18.1 percent of housing. But in Hawaii, only 139 mobile homes were counted, for one-tenth of one percent of all dwellings.

Nationwide, two-thirds of the mobile homes in use in 1980 had been built within 10 years.

About 80 percent of mobile homes were occupied by owners and 20 percent by renters, compared with 64 percent owners and 36 percent renters for all homes.

The median income for mobile homes owners was $13,355, compared with $20,549 for all homeowners. Mobile home renters had median incomes of $9,443, while the median for all renters was $11,331.

Ford Delaying Minivan Sales

DETROIT (AP) — Chevrolet's competition for Chrysler Corp.'s popular compact vans should arrive in dealer showrooms in January, but Ford Motor Co. said its minivan would not be out until late June.

Ford said Wednesday that delays in setting up sophisticated plant machinery pushed back the Aerostar compact van's introduction, which had been planned for earlier in the year.

The little van's debut is now scheduled for June as a 1986 model, Ford said. Production is scheduled to start May 6 in St. Louis, Mo.

Ford for the first time is employing laser beams to line up scores of robots and other automated plant machinery, said spokesman James Olson.

"We have no product problems or supplier problems — it's just the plant," Olson said.

Federal Auditors Criticize Power Agency's Executive Jet Purchase

By MATT YANCEY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government auditors are criticizing as unjustified and unnecessary the Western Area Power Administration's purchase last year of a $1.8 million executive jet for use by its top officials.

In a 12-page report, auditors in the Department of Energy's inspector general office said the need for the jet "was not justified" and that the purchase violated federal budget policies.

"As a result, at least $129,000 in annual aircraft costs, or $1.9 million over the estimated 15-year life of the aircraft, could be incurred unnecessarily," said Inspector General James Richards.

The audit, sent to Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, recommended that the power administration immediately sell the jet.

The power administration, headquartered in Golden, Colo., purchased the used 1981 model seven-passenger Cessna Citation II in September 1983. The plane is the same one that the Postmaster General William F. Bolger was trying to buy at the time.

After the power administration beat him to the deal, paying for the jet with cash, Bolger went out and bought a new plane for the Postal Service, a move that drew severe criticism from some members of Congress.

The Western Power Administration, one of five regional agencies under the Energy Department, operates 15,839 miles of power lines in 15 Western states for marketing electricity from 48 federally owned hydroelectric dams.

Freeze Plan Could Force Cut In Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, freezing some programs while deep freezing others, is tentatively calling for elimination of federal revenue sharing for the states and phasing out subsidies for mass transportation as part of a plan to slash domestic spending by nearly $34 billion next year.

Reagan's decisions, reviewed with his Cabinet on Wednesday and later shared with Republican members of Congress, would freeze spending for the 1986 fiscal year at current levels for hundreds of federal programs.

Federal employees would be forced to take a 5 percent pay cut under the plan tentatively approved by the president, said sources who spoke on condition they not be identified. Cost-of-living increases would be frozen for several programs, including food stamps, veterans' retirement benefits, railroad retirement and black lung payments, the sources said.

Other programs, such as the Small Business Administration and the Community Development Block Grant Program, would be cut back dramatically, and one source said the federal program of farm price supports would be cut by half over three years.

Still other programs, such as revenue sharing, the Legal Services Corp., Amtrak and other transportation subsidies and the Jobs Corps would be eliminated or phased out over several years. The Urban Development Action Grant program would be phased out, for example, as would the federal subsidy for the Postal Service.

One congressman briefed by Budget Director David Stockman said Social Security wasn't affected by the president's plan. But sources said the Department of Housing and Urban Development was targeted for significant reductions.

Thus far, none of the cuts involve the administration's military buildup, an issue the president is expected to address next week when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger returns home from a trip overseas.

But some administration officials have been urging the president to trim his military buildup.

While the officials in Golden said the jet would be used to fly crews to trouble spots, the inspector general's report said it could not find a single instance in which the plane had been used to transport repair teams.

"According to available records," the report said, "the stated purposes for the trips aboard Western's aircraft were not of an emergency nature and usually involved headquarters or area office officials."

The audit found that power administration officials had used the jet or had leased other chartered aircraft a total of 206 times over a 13-month period.

It said 119, or nearly 60 percent of those trips, were destined for eight cities — among them, Las Vegas, Salt Lake City, Phoenix and Sacramento, Calif. — that are served by frequently scheduled commercial airline flights.

"Western maintained that its employees are less productive when subjected to such time-consuming activities as 30 to 50-minute check-in times before departures ... and waiting to pick up baggage," the inspector general's report said.

However, the auditors continued,

"We found no travel which was unique or unusual necessitating treatment outside the standard travel guidelines prescribed for all federal agencies."

Bob Zecek, a spokesman at the power administration's headquarters in Golden, said the agency "disagrees with the conclusions of the report."

Rather than costing an additional $1.9 million over the next 15 years, the agency said having the jet will save the government some $2.3 million in avoided chartered services over that period.

Death Toll In Indian Chemical Leak Mounts To At Least 1,267 People

BHOPAL, India (AP) — The government today said at least 1,267 people — more than 500 above its previous figure — were killed by the poisonous gas leak from a Union Carbide pesticide plant. Workers carried out mass cremations and used cranes to remove animal carcasses that posed a threat of epidemic.

The chairman of Union Carbide Corp., Warren Anderson, arrived in Bombay for a day of talks with company officials on compensation for victims of the gas leak.

The United News of India initially reported Anderson today flew from Bombay to Bhopal, and that he and a team of U.S. experts then were refused entry to the plant where the gas leak occurred. UNI later withdrew its story, saying it was erroneous. The news agency gave no explanation for the error.

UNI reported Anderson would visit the site of Monday's methyl isocyanate gas leak on Friday.

Arjun Singh, chief minister of Madhya Pradesh state, said today the official death toll was raised to 1,267 from 706 on the basis of reports submitted by authorities who visited the city's mortuary and cremation grounds.

UNI said its investigation confirmed more than 1,400 deaths. The news agency said there were unofficial estimates that 2,000 died from the leak.

Another 150,000 people in Bhopal, a city of 900,000 in central India, were treated for blindness, eye irritation, nausea, shortness of breath and other effects of the gas.

Vasante Sathe, the minister of chemicals and fertilizer, said Wednesday he expected Connecticut-based Union Carbide to pay American rates of compensation to victims of the poisonous gas.

Workers today carried out mass cremations and used cranes to remove animal carcasses that posed a threat of epidemic.

Also today, about 500 residents of a slum neighborhood near the plant marched to the chief minister's residence to protest inadequate relief for the victims of the gas.

Their leader, city councilman Sumir Khan, told reporters more than 4,000 residents of the neighborhood were affected by the gas leak. He said some residents had been without food since Monday.

Technical experts were probing the cause of the leak from an underground storage tank. Company officials said a valve broke under rising pressure inside the tank. The pressure was so great, the officials said, that the gas escaped without being neutralized by chemical "scrubbers." Investigators were trying to determine why the pressure was allowed to build.

Anderson met in Bombay with Keshub Mahindra, chairman of Union Carbide India Ltd., who said compensation for victims was being discussed. Anderson would not talk with reporters.

Victims continued to pour into hospitals, seeking treatment. Doctors and medicines were rushed to Bhopal, where such supplies were running short.

EPA Says Leaky Tanks Everywhere

By LARRY MARGASAK Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of leaky storage tanks dot the United States, but the federal government doesn't know where they are and only recently received the authority to regulate them, an Environmental Protection Agency official says.

Dr. John H. Skinner, director of the Office of Solid Waste, said Wednesday the government has no idea how many Americans are threatened by tanks like the one that leaked in India, killing at least 1,200 people with a poison gas.

"There are many, many more tanks than toxic waste dumps, maybe something in the millions and at least hundreds of thousands," he said.

"It's probably true that a fair amount of those are leaking or will leak," said Skinner.

He said locating and regulating all the tanks "would be just as significant of an effort as the superfund" toxic dump cleanup program.

Environmental legislation signed by President Reagan last month gives the EPA, for the first time, the authority to inventory storage tanks and regulate them. It also provides that anti-corrosion standards for new tanks be issued by next May.

But the new law gives the EPA up to 45 months to fully regulate existing storage tanks, which range from huge industrial tanks to those at neighborhood gasoline stations to small tanks alongside private homes.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., the chief author of the legislation, said, "The EPA record is not as great as it could be" in acting quickly to eliminate hazards. "I hope (the accident in India) would direct them to work sooner rather than later."

"We don't know how many tanks are out there. We have to rely upon industry reporting," Florio said.

If an emergency occurred in this country, the chemical industry says it is ready to help with its 24-hour emergency response network, called CHEMTREC.

Dr. Geraldine V. Cox, vice president and technical director of the Chemical Manufacturers Association, said the experts would quickly contact industry response teams in the local area and also provide fast advice on whether to evacuate a community.

She said in a railroad accident involving hazardous substances in Livingston, La. a few years ago, the CHEMTREC experts advised evacuation, and the community was evacuated in less than an hour without injury.

Richard Fortuna, executive director of the Hazardous Waste Treatment Council, said disposal of pesticides stored in tanks can present an even greater problem than the leaks.

He said most pesticides in this country "are classified as solid but not hazardous waste, and could be disposed of like orange peels."

Without the hazardous classification, he said, the substances can be taken to dumps that have no liners, no devices to collect dangerous liquid buildups and no segregation of different types of substances.

Bodies Recovered

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Rescue workers today uncovered 31 bodies of miners crushed in a coal mine shaft near Taipei that collapsed after an explosion, the third major mine disaster in Taiwan in six months.

The discovery of the bodies, piled in crumpled rail cars that had been transporting them into the mine, brought the death toll to 33 from the explosion Wednesday.

Police said 61 miners remained trapped in the mine, probably about a mile under the surface, and said the chances of finding them alive were slim because of carbon monoxide accumulations in the mine shaft.

Radio stations, quoting unidentified rescuers, said radio communications with the trapped miners had suddenly ceased.

She said in a railroad accident involving hazardous substances in Livingston, La. a few years ago, the CHEMTREC experts advised evacuation, and the community was

Computer Hackers Can Easily Get Info From Credit Banks

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Information on more than 120 million consumers in the nation's largest credit information storage system is readily available to computer pirates who pilfer access codes from its users, a spokeswoman for the credit company says.

So-called hackers invade TRW's vast computerized credit library using codes stolen from the banks, stores or finance companies who are its customers, said Delia Fernandez, spokeswoman for the TRW's information services division.

Most recently, Newsweek reporter Richard Sandza complained that hackers, apparently upset over an expose he wrote about their activities, entered the TRW system and got his VISA card number.

The legitimate customers use the codes to run credit checks on consumers applying for charge cards. In 1983, TRW sold more than 50 million credit reports, Ms. Fernandez said Wednesday.

The company is unaware if pilfered credit card numbers have been used fraudulently, since victims would contact the store or bank to complain — not TRW, she said.

Sandza was told his credit card number had been posted in an electronic "bulletin board" that hackers could read by calling a computer number in Charleston, W.Va.

Ms. Fernandez said TRW will prosecute the hackers under California felony law against illegal entry to computer systems if Sandza gives TRW the names of the individuals involved.

She said TRW cannot secure its system against unauthorized entry as long as customers are careless with their passwords, which actually are series of numbers rather than words.

"There is not a pat technical solution that is going to solve this problem," she said. "No computer system is 100 percent secure unless it is shut off."

The passwords sometimes find their way into the hands of people not authorized to have them, Ms. Fernandez said. "We point out to them (customers) that they should be changing their password regularly, especially when one of these operators leaves the company."

She said any security system is vulnerable to legitimate users who willingly or unwittingly give away the secret: "The human link is the weakest link in any computer system."

She warned that customers should be wary of people who try to trick them into giving out passwords by pretending to be from TRW, something she said the company never does.

TRW in the past year has offered its customers an extra security measure, which has attracted few takers, she said. Customers can add digits to their regular access codes to create a secondary password, which they can change daily or hourly if they wish.

In addition, TRW now permits customers to store abbreviated credit card numbers in the system rather than a consumer's complete number that could be pirated.

Ms. Fernandez said the company is "very, very concerned" about unauthorized entry to its files, but that the amount of break-ins is believed to be "not a significant number" of the company's total volume of calls.

Washington Monument 100 Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitter wind whipped through coats and snatched hats a century ago today as politicians and engineers huddled on a wooden platform 550 feet in the air to crown the world's tallest structure — the Washington Monument.

Placing the aluminum tip on the monument completed 36 years of construction, a project slowed by political wrangling, lack of money and the Civil War.

Today's anniversary was not marked by any formal remembrance, the National Park Service reports. Official ceremonies noting the century mark for the monument took place last summer, when the weather was better and the National Society of Professional Engineers was holding a convention in Washington.

Although resolutions were read and the Star-Spangled Banner was sung on Dec. 6, 1884, to mark completion of the structure, it wasn't officially dedicated until the following Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, 1885.

And it wasn't opened to the public until Oct. 9, 1888, when it had only months remaining to claim the honor of world's tallest structure.

The monument, which wrested the tallest building title from the Cologne Cathedral, was itself surpassed in 1889 by the Eiffel Tower.

But losing that title hasn't diminished the monument in the eyes of millions of Americans who visit it annually to see the sights and honor the father of our nation.

The day after the spire was capped, The New York Times likened the spartan structure to a factory chimney. But architects and artists have since grown more fond of the monument.

While visitors are usually impressed with its size, many also notice what seems to be a flaw — the color of the face marble seems to change about one-third of the way up.

That change reflects an earlier political battle over control of the private society that raised money to build the monument.

The cornerstone was placed on July 4, 1848, but funds were exhausted by 1854 and work stalled at 154 feet.

Political infighting began as groups divided along religious lines, with a donated memorial stone from the pope becoming the focus of the battle. The stone was stolen in a midnight raid on the project and has never been recovered, but the subsequent dispute dried up contributions and work ground slowly to a halt. It took four years to iron out the dispute and by then the Civil War was looming.

Interest built again after the war and at the nation's centennial in 1876 Congress voted $200,000 to resume work, placing the Army Engineers in charge. But despite turning to the same Maryland quarry for marble, engineers were never able to match exactly the color of the stone used on the lower portion of the monument.

An aluminum cap was chosen to top off the monument both because it was a rare and costly metal — more expensive than silver at the time — and because aluminum conducts electricity, providing lightning protection.

The nine-inch block that was screwed into the monument top was the largest block of aluminum cast up to that time.

It remains there today, just over 555 feet above the ground, capping a memorial to the most towering figure of the nation's beginning.

Medical Unionist Forecasts Growth

BOSTON (AP) — Physicians, squeezed by government and corporate controls and a growing doctor glut, may turn to organized labor to protect their interests, the head of the nation's largest doctors' union says.

Writing in today's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Sanford Marcus, president of the Union of American Physicians and Dentists, said unionism may be a response to a trend he says has seen doctors' decision-making role usurped by accountants.

"With the cash flow of the health-care industry now coming under almost total control of a new class of managers, a trade union offers the only vehicle that doctors can use to develop effective negotiating power," said Marcus, whose California organization represents 14,000 members.

Marcus said corporate control of the nation's health care threatens to force "the bending or outright sacrifice of principles and ethics that have become cornerstones of the American medical system."

But Marcus, a 63-year-old San Francisco surgeon, admitted that financial considerations were another impetus to unionize.

Doctors are seeing their fees cut by government and private insurers and some of their traditional roles replaced by less expensive nurse practitioners and physician's assistants, he said in a telephone interview.

Chemist Says African Dust Causes Haze Over Atlantic

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hazy skies over the tropical North Atlantic and "red rain" in parts of this hemisphere are the result of the severe drought that is the primary cause of the Ethiopian famine, a chemist says.

Red mud following showers and summertime dust hazes that periodically cloud Florida's skies are familiar to Miami residents, said Joseph Prospero, chairman of the division of marine and atmospheric chemistry at the University of Miami.

The new aspect is the dramatic increase in dust concentrations with the drought," Prospero said. "When we get rainfall during the summer months, we'll get a layer of red mud in our rain collectors, and Miami has no substantial red soils."

Since 1965, Prospero has recorded dust from Africa in Barbados, more than 3,000 miles from its source, and in Miami, some 4,000 miles away.

His earlier studies found that maximum dust levels occur during the summer, when airborne concentrations are 10 to 100 times larger than during the winter.

But in his new study presented

Wednesday at the American Geophysical Union's fall meeting, Prospero also found that dust concentrations in Barbados during the winter of 1982-83 were 100 times above normal winter levels.

The amount of African dust in the air in Barbados, West Indies, in 1983 was more than double the average during non-drought years, he said.

The exact source of the dust in Africa is not known, although Prospero said it occurs because the drought has sharply raised wind erosion of soil. Mineral studies proved the dust comes from Africa, he said.

Frequent cloud cover over the Sahel — the drought-afflicted sub-Saharan band of North Africa — makes it difficult to distinguish dust storms from clouds in satellite photos, Prospero said.

Prospero said he didn't know how far the dust travels into the United States, since he only has monitoring stations at Barbados and Miami.

During the summer months, hot air carrying the dust creates an inversion layer that can prevent summer cloud buildup over Miami, but Prospero wasn't sure if the dust reduced summer rainfall.

"These studies demonstrate that soil deflation (wind erosion) is extremely sensitive to climate and that the dust generated can affect very large areas," he said. "However, it is not clear if this deflation is attributable primarily to purely natural processes or if it is exacerbated by land use practices such as overgrazing and poor agricultural techniques."

The latest droughts in the Sahel began in the late 1960s, peaked in 1972, then continually worsened from 1975, with Chad and Ethiopia the hardest-hit countries, Prospero said.

A similar increase in dust transport was seen at Barbados in the early 1970s after the drought of the late 1960s.

Candidate Is Killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A gunman firing from a speeding car today assassinated the top rival to the mayor of Soweto, South Africa's largest black township, as the victim's caravan motored through Soweto's streets, police said.

Councilman Edward Manyosi, chairman of the Soweto Management Committee, was shot in the head and body by one of four men in a car that sped past the convoy about 1 a.m., said the police spokesman, Brig. J.J. Viktor.

The killing took place hours before the Soweto Township Council was to hold a meeting at which Manyosi was expected to challenge the leadership of Mayor Ephraim Tshabala.

Viktor said Manyosi and his supporters held a meeting late Wednesday to plan strategy for the council m

House Unit Says CIA Broke Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — While concluding that the CIA's Nicaraguan rebel manual broke a 1982 law, the House Intelligence Committee is stopping short of calling for additional action or the ouster of CIA Director William J. Casey.

In a statement supported by both committee Democrats and Republicans, the panel laid the blame for the controversial manual on "negligence, not intent to violate the law."

After a 2½-hour closed hearing Wednesday, the committee issued a statement declaring that the manual "illustrates once again ... that the CIA did not have adequate command and control of the entire Nicaraguan covert action."

The committee said the manual, written by a CIA contract employee in October 1983, violated the so-called Boland amendment, which barred the CIA from spending money for the overthrow of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The panel also suggested that the manual's advice on "neutralizing"

Nicaraguan officials could be interpreted as violating a longstanding ban on U.S. participation in assassination, although adding that there appeared to be "no intentional violation."

The 90-page, Spanish-language manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War," also called for hiring professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs"; creating "martyrs" and coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out rebel assignments.

Despite criticizing the CIA's management controls, the committee did not call for Casey's removal or for punishments to be extended beyond five mid- and junior-level officials who have already been disciplined. The author, known by his pseudonym John Kirkpatrick, was allowed to resign.

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., committee chairman, said that while Casey "ultimately, probably would be responsible" for agency actions, it would be unfair to expect him to know about all CIA activities.

New Caledonia Natives Killed

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — The French administration of this Pacific territory said nine militant natives were killed and several wounded today in a clash with white settlers. Police said settlers ambushed the militants and hurled dynamite at them.

Among those reported killed were two brothers of Jean-Marie Tjibaou, leader of the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front which has declared a provisional government and is seeking independence from France. The natives of the island group east of Australia are known as Kanaks.

Despite the bloodiest incident since civil strife flared last month, Tjibaou said he would go ahead with planned talks with Edgard Pisani, a French government envoy who arrived Wednesday to mediate an end to the trouble.

Pisani earlier met the front's demand for release of 17 arrested front members, and a spokesman for the front said roadblocks that were set up around the 250-mile-long island last month in a bid to freeze commerce were being dismantled.

Scholarship

WASHINGTON — The President's Committee on Mental Retardation is offering a $5,000 scholarship for advanced study in the field of mental retardation. The scholarship is directed to university and college seniors and graduate students in programs such as social science, medicine, nursing, biological science, psychology, and physical therapy. The scholarship is being offered through the auspices of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Requirements for the program and application forms will be considered until Jan. 15, 1985. For information, write: Chairman of the PCMR Scholarship Award Committee, Fred Rose, 205 Beachway Drive, Ocean Ridge, Fla., 33445.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 42.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The market is generally steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,660,000, compared to 1,555,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, continuing the recent slide that has brought it to its lowest levels since mid-summer.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.22 to 1,170.38 in the first half hour.

Losers opened up a 9-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts say concerns about a slowing economy have been exacerbated lately by uncertainty about prospective efforts to cut the federal budget deficit and overhaul the U.S. tax system.

Airline Grounds Planes For Tests

ATLANTA (AP) — A commuter airline grounded all 16 of its aircraft for checkups after one engine quit on each of three planes the same night, but all the planes were returned to service today although the exact cause of the problem was not found.

Atlantic Southeast Airline was "back operating the schedule 100 percent as of this morning" after the planes were grounded Wednesday, said John Beiser, the airline's vice president for sales and services.

Three multi-engine planes — headed to Atlanta, Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Fort Walton Beach, Fla. — were carrying passengers when they lost power in one engine Tuesday night, but all were able to land without incident, said George Pickett, ASA president.

Orange Claims It Decides Who's #1

NEW YORK (AP) — It's Brigham Young against the rest of the college football world — or, rather, the world against Brigham Young.

The politicking for the 1984 national championship picked up steam Wednesday when several Orange Bowl committeemen, along with Coaches Barry Switzer of second-ranked Oklahoma and Don James of No. 4 Washington, campaigned that the winner of the Orange Bowl between — surprise! — Oklahoma and Washington should be voted No. 1.

"Both teams definitely have a real opportunity to win the national championship," Switzer said at a luncheon sponsored by NBC-TV, which will televise the Orange Bowl. "If either team should win decisively, they should be recognized as national champions."

However, Switzer conceded that "if Brigham Young beats (Michigan) soundly (in the Holiday Bowl), they'll deserve to be national champions. But if it is a close game, our two teams have a legitimate chance for the national championship."

Oklahoma quarterback Danny Bradley pointed out that the Sooners knocked off the No. 1 (Nebraska) and

No. 3 (Oklahoma State) teams during the last two weeks of the regular season and said there's "no reason Oklahoma shouldn't be No. 1 right now."

Nevertheless, Brigham Young has been No. 1 for the last three weeks in The Associated Press poll, although the Orange Bowl is trumpeting the Oklahoma-Washington clash as a national championship game.

"Brigham Young hasn't played a representative schedule. Their opponents as a group have a losing record. How can a team like that be the national champion?" Nick Crane, chairman of the Orange Bowl's team selection committee, said. "In our opinion, and in the opinion of a lot of others, they shouldn't be ranked No. 1."

For the record, BYU's 12 opponents (the Cougars are 12-0) had a combined record of 54-79-3. But Oklahoma's (9-1-1) were 52-63-6 and Washington's (10-1) were 55-66-0. At the time they played, BYU's opponents were 25-37-1, Oklahoma's 30-27-1, Washington's 29-25-0.

BYU and Oklahoma faced two common opponents — BYU defeated Pitt 20-14 and Baylor 47-13; Oklahoma beat Pitt 42-10 and Baylor 34-15 — while Oklahoma and Washington both defeated Stanford, Oklahoma winning 19-7, Washington 37-15.

"I'm not prepared to say BYU is not a good football team," said James. "I've been low-profiling the No. 1 thing because we play them the next two years. But I'm saying 'Go Blue' (Michigan's war cry) every night in my prayers. I certainly hope the Orange Bowl is for the national championship."

This was the latest shot in the burgeoning campaign to prevent BYU, the nation's only undefeated team, from winning the national championship if the Cougars win their bowl game.

In a telephone poll conducted by ABC-TV last weekend, 191,336 viewers said the Cougars should not be No. 1 while 166,590 thought they should.

BYU Coach LaVell Edwards, who was in town for the National Football Foundation's awards banquet Tuesday night, shrugged off the criticism, saying:

"The fact remains that we had our Kansas games (Kansas handed Oklahoma its only setback), our Syracuse games (Syracuse beat Nebraska when the Cornhuskers were ranked No. 1) and our Navy games (Navy was the only team to defeat South Carolina), and we won them," he told The AP. "How good we are and how good they (Oklahoma and Washington) are we won't know unless we play. There are probably 30 or 35 teams in the country that can beat each other."

Martina Upset By Sukova

Martina Ousted

Martina Navratilova returns the ball to Czechoslovakian teen-ager Helena Sukova during Thursday's semifinals of the Australian Open Tennis Championships. Sukova scored an upset win over Navratilova, ruining her chances of winning a record seventh straight grand slam tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Martina Navratilova said after being upset today at the hands of Czechoslovakian teenager Helena Sukova in the Australian Open tennis tournament hurt, but probably inflicted no permanent psychological damage.

"It hurts, but I'll get over it," Navratilova said after being banished 1-6, 6-3, 7-5 in her quest for a seventh straight grand slam title.

Ironically, the ouster of the world's top-ranked player bettered the chances of another American, Chris Evert Lloyd, to keep alive a streak of her own. Lloyd, who advanced to the final of the $1.28 million tournament with a victory over Aussie Wendy Turnbull, is trying to win a major — Wimbledon, the United States, French and Australian opens — for the 11th straight year.

AMA Seeks Boxing Ban

HONOLULU (AP) — The American Medical Association plans to work with state medical societies to support legislation banning professional and amateur boxing.

The AMA's House of Delegates on Wednesday adopted by voice vote a resolution to work toward eliminating the sport, while working to educate the American public about the dangers of boxing.

"Two people are literally paid to get into the ring and beat each other to death or beat each other into a state of senselessness that could leave them permanently brain-damaged," said AMA President Dr. Joseph F. Boyle.

Boyle called amateur and professional boxing "a dangerous sport that ought to be outlawed." He said evidence has indicated brain injuries and serious disabilities occur among boxers following even short careers in the ring.

"There are laws preventing putting dogs into the ring for the purpose of killing one another, but none for humans," Boyle said.

The resolution merged recommendations made by delegates from the District of Columbia and California and from the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American Academy of Neurology.

The House is composed of 365 delegates nationwide. It is the policy-making body of the AMA.

Sukova, the 19-year-old daughter of former Wimbledon finalist Vera Sukova and a former ballgirl for Navratilova, used a superb serve to beat the 28-year-old former Czechoslovakian national. The loss was only the second of the year for Navratilova, who was shooting for an unprecedented calendar-year sweep of the grand slam events.

Sukova and Lloyd, who beat Turnbull 6-3, 6-3, will meet Saturday for the championship. The 29-year-old Lloyd has won 15 grand slam events, including the 1982 Australian Open. Sukova will be playing in a grand slam final for the first time.

Navratilova picked her compatriot to win the final, saying Lloyd would be able to beat Sukova with a lob.

"I don't think I lobbed her enough," Navratilova explained. "I would be surprised (if Sukova won), not just because Chris is a better player, but simply because I think she (Sukova) will have a letdown."

Navratilova, whose last defeat came 11 months ago at the hands of Czechoslovakian Hana Mandlikova, breezed through the first set in a bid to win the 100th tournament of her career. But Sukova returned and passed brilliantly to win the second and take a 3-0 lead in the third.

Navratilova, riding a 74-match winning streak, fought back to 4-4, but Sukova broke her serve again in the 11th game. Navratilova saved five match points in the 12th game before Sukova eventually prevailed.

On the men's side, South African Kevin Curren faces unseeded American Ben Testerman in Friday's semifinals. The big-serving 26-year-old, who lives in Austin, Texas, advanced by overpowering American Scott Davis 7-5, 6-2, 6-3.

Testerman clinched a match against the ninth-seeded Curren with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 triumph over West German teenager Boris Becker.

In the other semifinal, defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden faces South African-born American Johan Kriek. Wilander eliminated countryman Stefan Edberg 7-5, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4.

Navratilova's coach Mike Estep said she had many chances to win.

"She didn't put the other girl away in the second set when she had the chance," Estep said. "Then she got mad with herself and played tight."

Lloyd, who was in command throughout against Turnbull, made note of her grand slam streak being on the line against Sukova.

"I know this is my last shot for the year," she said. "But I don't want to put pressure on myself."

EC Women Host #1 Old Dominion

East Carolina's Lady Pirates take on Number One ranked Old Dominion Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, hoping to pull off a major upset and keep their home court record intact.

The Lady Pirates come into the game with a 2-3 record, having won both of their home games and lost all three of their road encounters this year.

The Lady Monarchs, 5-0, come into the game off a victory over tenth-ranked Virginia Tuesday night. ODU holds a 10-7 lead in the series between the two schools and has won the last nine games in a row.

ODU is led by 6-4 junior center Dawn Cullen, hitting 16.3 points a game and pulling 7.5 rebounds, while Medina Dixon, a 6-3 senior forward is close behind at 16.0 with an 8.3 rebound average. Dixon is the sister of ECU men's point guard Herb Dixon.

Tracy Claxton, at 6-2, is the other forward. The senior averages 14.5 points a game and a strong 10.8 rebounds. The other two starters are 5-7 sophomore guard Marie Christian (10.3 ppg) and 5-10 senior guard Lis Blais (5.0 ppg).

The game is the final home contest until January 2 when South Carolina visits Minges. In the meantime, ECU will visit South Carolina, Morehead State and Marshall on a three-state swing starting December 15 and winding up on the 19th.

Four Win, Two Lose In ACC

By The Associated Press

Both North Carolina State and Duke cleared their benches as they took easy victories over non-conference opponents while Maryland nearly frittered away a 23-point lead before defeating Cleveland State in college basketball.

In Atlantic Coast Conference Wednesday night, N.C. State defeated North Carolina A&T 101-34 in Raleigh, while the fourth-ranked Blue Devils blew away Appalachian State 98-64 in Durham. The Terrapins ran up a 57-38 halftime lead and then stumbled before holding off Cleveland State 95-84 in College Park.

Elsewhere, Wake Forest had a come-from-behind 69-55 victory over Davidson in Charlotte, while Virginia lost a squeaker to William & Mary 54-53 in Williamsburg, Va., and Clemson dropped one to South Carolina, 71-66, in Columbia, S.C.

The 10th-ranked Wolfpack once again showed its depth before 10,500 fans. But the star was senior guard Terry Gannon, who scored 18 points, just behind Lorenzo Charles, who had 23 to give the Wolfpack their fourth straight victory.

Against the Aggies, N.C. State found its inside game ineffective because of a tight zone defense. Gannon came on and led the Wolfpack on a rally that broke open a contest.

"My role is about the same as it's been the last few years — hit the long jump shot," said Gannon, who was 8 of 14 from the field. "We need to hit the outside shots to take the pressure off the big man."

For the first time this season, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski had a full arsenal. He used all 12 players — including junior David Henderson and sophomore center Martin Nesbitt, who had missed the Blue Devils' first three games because of injuries. Eleven of the 12 scored.

Krzyzewski says guard Johnny Dawkins had "fire in his eyes" as he guided Duke past the Mountaineers.

"Johnny may be struggling with his shooting a little bit," Krzyzewski said, "but it certainly wasn't hurt his rebounding. I like the way he reacts when his shooting is not going well. He didn't sit back, he attacked."

"On rebounding, you could see a fire in his eyes," he said. "When he missed his shot, he was going to get the ball back."

Dawkins scored 19 points, grabbed eight rebounds and had five assists, while junior Mark Alarie led the way with 22 points.

Terrapin coach Lefty Driesell gave perhaps the most succinct postgame summary.

"In the first half we played great, and in the second half we stunk," he said.

Maryland, which has won four in a row since losing its opener by two points to 19th-ranked Kansas, pushed its advantage to 63-40 shortly after intermission before Cleveland State came storming back.

Adrian Branch led the Terps with 23 points.

"We had turnovers just trying to get the ball inbounds, and made foolish passes," Driesell said. As for frittering away a 23-point lead, he said: "Good teams don't do that."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said the match between the Tigers and the Gamecock could have gone either way. But the Tigers failed to score in the last two minutes and that made the difference for South Carolina, which claimed its fourth straight victory.

"They doubled up on Vincent Hamilton or (Glenn) Corbit or (Chris) Michael and that was the difference," Ellis said. "Our defense put us in a position to win the game, but we could not convert when we had the opportunity."

Clemson had a 66-65 lead with 2:38 remaining, but South Carolina went ahead for good with 1:06 left when Linwood Moye, who finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds, scored on a layup to give the Gamecocks a 68-66 edge.

"We kept our poise when things looked bleak for us," said South

Veteran Bears Looking For Finish Among Top Teams

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BEAR GRASS — With all five starters back from last year's team, Coach Jerry Rogerson is expecting big things from the Bear Grass Bears this winter — but he's afraid that those expectations might have put too much pressure on the team.

After a 9-13 season last year and an 8-8, tied for fourth position in the Tobacco Belt Conference, the Bears didn

Some Coaches Express Dislike Of Coaching Box

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Talk is already heating up in the Atlantic Coast Conference about the NCAA's new 28-foot coaches' box, designed to keep coaches from harassing the referees by requiring them to remain in a specific area along the sideline.

Fred Barakat, supervisor of officials for the ACC, said the coaches are the most vocal opponents.

"People who don't get up as much and are not as active think it's OK," Barakat said in an interview. "It evens things up at the other end if the coach is more active."

Barakat said the rule has the potential for controversy. North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said the box is "the dumbest rule in college basketball."

"I think it's an ethnic rule put in by Anglo-Saxons to punish Italian-American coaches," Valvano said jokingly. "It's like asking me to talk with my hands in my pockets. You can take a couple of steps to the left or right, but not forward. That's impossible for me."

North Carolina coach Dean Smith made his objection simple.

"I do not like it. It is unnecessary in my opinion," Smith said.

The rule states that a coach, squad member or team attendant may only leave the box if they are only seeking information from the scorer or timer during a time out. The only other time coaches and players can leave the box is to request a time out during a "correctable error," such as a clock or scoring mistake.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said he supports the rule if it achieves its purpose.

"If it makes it easier for them (the officials) to control the game or officiate the game, then it's fine with me," Krzyzewski said. "I have no problem staying in the box."

Wake Forest's Carl Tacy said all college coaches are being penalized for "the conduct of a few who have caused problems for officials."

Television analyst Billy Packer said he didn't think the rule would last the entire 1984-85 season.

"If the coach gets out of order, hit him with a technical," Packer said. "There's no need for the box. Part of the attraction for the fans in watching St. John's and Villanova is seeing (Lou) Carnesecca and (Rollie) Massimino running around."

Barakat said he has instructed ACC officials to consider the intent of the rule before making a call.

"There is a difference between literally interpreting and realistically interpreting," Barakat said. "We try to understand the spirit and intent of the rule. We look at the box in the sense it is to keep the coach away from midcourt harassing the officials."

Another rule under scrutiny this year is one which allows the coach who calls a time out to control the length of the time out up to the 60-second limit.

"A time out is for 60 seconds, but a time out can be called for strategic purposes," Barakat said. "A coach might want to stop the clock but not let the other team go to the bench (to receive instructions from its coach)."

Redmen Foes Face Tough Question About Fouling

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

AP Sports Writer

To foul Chris Mullin or not to foul Chris Mullin, that is the question. So far, St. John's opponents have not found the right answer.

In two one-point victories, opponents of the third-ranked Redmen have been ordered by their coach not to foul the 1984 U.S. Olympic team stalwart, who has made 90 percent of his free throws for his college career.

In a 58-57 triumph Saturday night over St. Bonaventure, the Bonnies were told to stay away from Mullin in the final seconds. St. John's kept the ball in Mullin's hands and the Redmen ran out the clock.

Wednesday night, St. John's was trailing 46-45 when Fordham Coach Tom Penders told his team not to foul Mullin. But when he drove the lane, Joe Franco failed to heed the warning and Mullin canned two free throws with 15 seconds left to give St. John's a 47-46 victory.

"During the timeout, I told them not to foul Mullin," Penders said. "Chris is a very smart player and when he cut across the key there was contact between him and Franco and the call went St. John's way."

"We tried to get the ball inside," Mullin said. "Franco was pretty aggressive and when he bumped me I knew the whistle was going off. I was happy to get to the line."

In other games involving teams ranked in The Associated Press Top Twenty, it was No. 1 Georgetown 76, St. Leo 56; No. 2 DePaul 84, Illinois State 71; No. 4 Duke 98, Appalachian State 64; No. 5 Memphis State 90, Middle Tennessee 77; No. 10 North Carolina State 101, North Carolina A&T 54; No. 13 Louisiana State 89, Mississippi 64; No. 17 Oklahoma 88, St. Mary's, Texas, 55 and No. 18 Alabama-Birmingham 73, South Carolina State 56.

Mullin, who led the Redmen with 16 points, was a little disappointed that St. John's has not won more handily in its early-season games.

"I never expected to be playing close games this early in the season," Mullin said. "Everybody's gunning for us and we just have to be ready."

Despite the loss, Penders was encouraged by the performance of the 2-2 Rams.

"No question, this is the best team I've had since I've been at Fordham," added Penders, who is in his seventh year of coaching there. "I hope St. John's is No. 3 in the country because that means we're a pretty good club. They certainly didn't take us lightly."

Steve Samuels, who shared scoring honors with Tony McIntosh at 14 points each for Fordham, hit a jumper with 34 seconds to play to give the Rams a short-lived 46-45 lead.

After Mullin's free throws and a timeout, Mike Moses of St. John's fouled McIntosh with seven seconds remaining, but Fordham was not in the bonus situation. Samuels then missed a shot and St. John's center Bill Wenington blocked a follow shot attempt by Frank Williams at the buzzer.

Top Ten
Georgetown, which is 4-0 but has yet to play a Division I team, rolled over St. Leo, a Florida school, with Bill Martin scoring 13 of his 15 points in the first half as the Hoyas rolled to a 41-24 lead and coasted the rest of the way. All-America center Patrick Ewing had eight points, nine rebounds and six blocked shots.

DePaul stayed unbeaten and handed Illinois State its first loss in four decisions as sophomore Dallas Comegys had 20 points and Tyrone Corbin 14 rebounds for the Blue Demons.

Illinois State, which got a game-high 27 points from Lou Stefanovic, led by as many as five points in the first half, but a 15-5 streak by DePaul gave it a 43-34 lead at halftime. The Blue Demons then held off a second-half rally by the Redbirds that pulled them within two points.

Guard Johnny Dawkins had 19 points, eight rebounds and five assists to pace Duke over out-manned Appalachian. Dawkins scored 11 points in the final 10 minutes of the first half to spark a 24-12 surge that gave the Blue Devils a 46-32 halftime advantage.

Memphis State overpowered Middle Tennessee as senior Keith Lee had 33 points and 16 rebounds. The Tigers, who also got 16 points and 17 rebounds from sophomore William Bedford, took a 45-27 margin at halftime and didn't lead by less than seven points in the second half.

Lorenzo Charles scored 23 points and Terry Gannon added 18 as North Carolina State pulled away from North Carolina A&T. An 11-2 run by the Wolfpack extended a 26-20 lead to 37-22.

Second Ten
In an early Southeastern Conference game originally scheduled for February, freshman John Williams and Nikita Wilson both scored 19 points to lead LSU over Mississippi. The Tigers held the Rebels scoreless for the first five minutes of the game en route to a 43-30 halftime lead.

Ballesteros Is Favored In Million-$ Challenge

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Reigning British Open champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain is the favorite to repeat last year's performance and win the generous $300,000 first prize of the Million-Dollar Golf Challenge.

The long-hitting Spaniard finished first a year ago by five shots with a 72-hole total of 274, 14 under par on the 7,010-yard course.

This four-year-old tournament is the game's richest. The second-place finisher wins $150,000, and third place is worth $105,000. The last-place finisher gets $50,000.

Ballesteros and Britain's Nick Faldo were scheduled second on the tee today, followed by Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite of the United States.

At the draw on Wednesday, Japan's Isao Aoki was teamed with Australian Greg Norman.

Aoki, a former winner of the World Matchplay Championship, ignored pleas from his government not to play in white-minority-ruled South Africa.

South Africa is banned from most international amateur contests — such as the Olympics because of the government's apartheid policy.

Sun City officials and some players argue that this is not South Africa, but the independent nation of Bophuthatswana, where there are no laws segregating the races.

South Africa, which created

Bophuthatswana as a black homeland, is the only nation that recognizes the area as independent. Most countries view the homelands as a way for South Africa to strip its blacks of South African citizenship, with the goal being to eventually make South Africa a "white" country.

FBI Plays Larger Role In Fighting Porno

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite weak and vague obscenity laws, federal authorities are taking more action against pornography in North Carolina as grassroots opposition to smut grows, the FBI's top agent in the state says.

But a censorship opponent says the current public outcry against obscenity is part of a recurring fad and that the increased official attention may be the Reagan administration's way of rewarding conservative Christians who helped the president win re-election.

"I get letters from all over the state saying, 'Please, Mr. Pence, clean up the smut' ... maybe a couple a week or a dozen a month," said Robert Pence, agent in charge of North Carolina FBI operations. "We probably get more mail and calls about that than anything else. We try to explain that we might not like what we see, but that the big question is whether it violates federal law."

"It's a very difficult area because of the law," Pence said. "Our law is interstate transportation of obscene matter. But what is obscene? What is pornographic? It all depends on community standards."

The Supreme Court has ruled that "community standards" should determine whether something is obscene enough to be banned. Those standards may be getting stricter in North Carolina, which some groups say has the highest per-capita number of X-rated movie theaters in the nation.

"You see so many citizens' groups and church groups picketing outside bookstores and movie houses," Pence said. "I see a movement across the state along those lines — a lot of grassroots people who are against pornography."

Even many people considered liberal, such as feminists, have joined the fight against pornography in this state, Pence said. Many local authorities have been successful recently in closing down pornographic outlets as "public nuisances," he said. And the FBI has become increasingly active this year in investigating North Carolina bookstores and movie houses involved in interstate transport of pornography.

For example, two Charlotte men pleaded guilty this week to charges of transporting obscene material across state lines as a result of an FBI raid that netted material showing humans having sex with snakes, dogs and horses, he said.

"We have several interconnected pending investigations on possible federal violations in the state," he said. "We're working on a number of other things."

FBI agents here are constantly discussing possibly obscene material with prosecutors and the FBI's own pornography experts.

"We're trying to find those materials that indicate a clear-cut and vivid example of what we think the courts would interpret as pornographic — that would stand the test of laws in North Carolina and federal courts," he said.

George Gardner of Greensboro, executive director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, agreed with Pence that obscenity laws are "awfully vague," but he criticized FBI involvement.

"I wish they'd respect states' rights in this area," Gardner said. "My wild guess is that it's part of the Reagan payoff to the Moral Majority which supported it in the election."

The "community standards" legal test for obscenity "means that in smaller communities, where you don't have the mixture of ideas and education, the most narrow-minded can stultify the whole (field of) communications," he said.

Gardner said there's still no evidence that pornography fuels sexual aggression against women. In fact, he said, President Nixon's commission on obscenity found that it might serve as a therapeutic release for frustrated people.

"It's very sad because the feminists have been working with us on the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) and the right to choose abortion," he said. "They seem to have gotten off on some kind of tangent — that pornography is an offense to the civil rights of women."

Gardner said public sentiment against pornography seems to come and go in waves.

"It seems to be a recurring event," he said. "But in the end, the Constitution has to be upheld."

"People can bewail pornography, but the solution is not to buy it and to enact laws to put it beyond the reach of minors," said Gardner. "Since we've always had pornography, all you have to do is turn up your nose and walk away from it."

Pence said the stronger federal stance against pornography had nothing to do with the election and had been gathering steam for about three years. And he said pornography in North Carolina seems to be getting increasingly visible and more and more perverse.

"They're getting away from the just normal male-female heterosexual stuff," he said. "We're seeing more of the bondage, masochism, animals, the use of children ... It's getting worse and there's more of it."

Child pornography is still very scarce in North Carolina — at least on a commercial level, Pence said. Most fans of kiddie porn treat it as a hobby, trading material among themselves within the "subculture," he said.

Recently, federal law has been changed to make it easier to charge people who possess child pornography, Pence said. No longer does it have to be made for profit.

Asked whether he thought the fight against pornography was like the futile battle against liquor during Prohibition, Pence acknowledged that smut seems to be very popular among customers from all economic levels.

"It all depends on the people," he said, however. "They can do anything they want if they get their legislators aroused. If they want to tighten pornography laws, they can do it. They can make them so tight that pornography would not exist."

Senate Democrats Elect Harrington President Pro Tem For '85 Session

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats in the state Senate were to meet today with newly elected leaders to prepare for the 1985 session and dealing with a Republican governor for only the second time this century.

The informal, closed meeting at a Pinehurst hotel followed a caucus Wednesday in which Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, was elected to succeed Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, as president pro tem. Lawing, who held the job a record six years, was defeated in the Nov. 6 elections.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, also was re-elected as majority leader. He has held the job since 1977.

Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan called the Pinehurst meeting. He said he was prepared to discuss major issues in the upcoming legislative session, review election results and review Senate operations when Republican Jim Holshouser was governor.

He also said he would talk about "how I feel that they as Democratic senators are obligated to get involved in the party structure."

Jordan said he has not completed plans for reorganizing Senate committees but said he would talk about establishing a committee on children to handle matters ranging from day care to child pornography.

He said he also wanted to begin discussion of possible rule changes that he already has mentioned to House Speaker Liston Ramsey. One possible change, he said, would set May 15 as the cutoff date for filing new bills. It would require support of two-thirds of the Senate to suspend the rule.

When the 50-member Senate convenes Feb. 5, 1985, it must formally approve Harrington as president pro tem and Royall as majority leader. That is expected to be just a formality because there are 38 Democrats and 12 Republicans.

Harrington, if elected president pro tem, would be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Senate, share authority for overall legislative operations with the House speaker and preside over the Senate in the absence of the lieutenant governor.

He also would assign legislative offices, make some appointments to special committees and chair the Rules Committee.

Harrington, 65, is the senior senator with 11 terms. He was co-chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and vice chairman of the Finance Committee last year.

He retired recently from the family business, Harrington Manufacturing Co. Inc., before it went bankrupt and was sold.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, withdrew from the president pro tem race when many of his supporters lost their re-election bids Nov. 6.

Lobbyists and journalists, who were told by spokesmen in Jordan's office that the caucus would be open, were escorted out of the meeting by the sergeant-at-arms staff. Legislative security officers patrolled the halls during the meeting.

Royall said he decided the meeting should be closed as it has been traditionally.

"We have to be a little more specific than you want to hear about," Royall said, adding that he was afraid personalities might be discussed.

"He (Jordan) doesn't run the caucus," Royall said, adding that he did not know there was any question the meeting would be open to the public until he arrived Wednesday.

"This is not my meeting," said Jordan, who was invited by senators to attend the caucus. "I am not a member of the Senate. I don't have a vote. I don't go into office until January 5."

Jordan, who promised during his campaign to open Senate proceedings, said no one asked him whether the meeting should be closed and he gave no opinion.

"It always has been a closed meeting but I thought it would have been open myself," Harrington said. "He (Jordan) never got into it... Royall and the older heads thought it would be better if we continued the caucus in executive session."

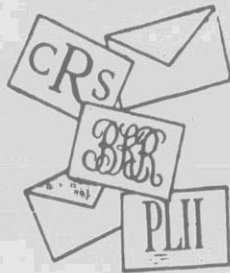

All three men predicted the Senate Democrats will be holding more caucuses next year in light of Republican Jim Martin's election as governor. Royall, as majority leader, will be in charge of calling the meetings.

Royall said some of the caucuses will be open and some will be closed. He said they would be designed to explain Democrats' questions on upcoming bills.

Jordan said he feels strongly that committee meetings should be open but said he considered party caucuses like "family talks" and they could be closed.

General Assembly Republicans will select leaders Dec. 16 and House

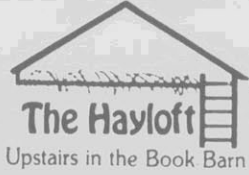

Democrats meet Dec. 20 to select a speaker and speaker pro tem. Unlike the Senate pro tem race, the House will pick a speaker pro tem from two Democrats — Jack Hunt of Cleveland County and incumbent Allen Barbee of Nash County.

Helms And Martin Ask Voters To Switch

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms and Gov.-elect Jim Martin are launching a new political campaign that promotes the Republican Party instead of an individual candidate.

North Carolinians for a Strong Two-Party System, or Operation Switch as Helms calls it, is designed to get conservative Democrats to become registered Republicans. Helms and Martin will be honorary co-chairmen of the group.

Helms said at a news conference that he discussed the effort with President Reagan, who is "looking to this as a possible prototype for the nation."

The drive, announced Wednesday, will include television and radio advertisements purchased in the beginning by the Martin and Helms campaigns. The politicians will cooperate on future fund-raising efforts but they did not disclose their budget.

"Now is the time for a realignment of the political parties," Helms said. "It is now within our grasp. Never before has there been such a clear-cut difference between the two parties in their goals and intents for the American people."

Although Democrats outnumber Republicans in North Carolina by an almost 3-to-1 margin, President Ronald Reagan defeated Democratic challenger Walter Mondale in the state with almost 62 percent of the vote.

Helms won re-election against Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt with almost 52 percent; Martin defeated Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten with 54 percent; and Republicans won five of 11 congressional seats for a net gain of three.

"I think it's fine if Republicans want to try to enlist more people," said state Democratic Party Chairman David Price. "If they think though that most people in this state are ready to pledge allegiance down the line to Republican policies, I think they will be sadly disappointed."

"The economic situation this year did make for a good number of Democrats switching over in specific races but I think that's a far cry from becoming a committed Republican," Price said.

Martin, the state's second GOP governor this century, said the liberal policies of the Democratic Party were rejected by voters Nov. 6. He said there is an opportunity to build a strong two-party system in the state and it is his obligation to help accomplish that.

"I believe North Carolina needs an effective two-party system to make government more accountable and to strengthen political competition throughout North Carolina," Martin said.

"The most important benefit (of a two-party system) is stronger competition ... that will mean both parties have to work to earn support," he said.

He said that strengthening the Republican Party at the grassroots would help recruit stronger candidates and build election victories, launching a positive cycle for the GOP.

Helms said the addition of conservative Democrats to the GOP could "redeem America's fundamental principles ... restore strength and hold down taxes."

Helms, who switched his registration 14 years ago, said the Democratic Party has abandoned the principles of limited government, free enterprise, strong national defense and family values.

He said it has written off the majority of Americans in favor of "special interest groups, radical union leaders and political demagoguery."

The two Republicans were joined by former Democratic Wake County Commissioner J.T. Knott, who said he plans to change his registration soon.

Textile School Expansion Proposed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal to expand the North Carolina State University textile school recognizes that traditional industries are still the mainstay of the state's economy, the school's deans say.

"It's a recognition of the fact that the traditional industries are still the backbone of the economy of North Carolina," Dame S. Hamby, dean of the textile school, said after Hunt made his proposal during a rare public cabinet meeting.

Hunt also warned against cutting state taxes to the point of crippling vital programs at the meeting.

Hunt disclosed that the 1985-87 budget plan he completed last week and will make public later this month included $10 million to expand the N.C. State University textile school. Hunt proposed that another $19 million be spent in later budget periods.

REGISTRATION DRIVE — Gov.-elect Jim Martin gestures while Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., looks on Wednesday at a news conference in Raleigh. Martin and Helms announced they are heading a drive aimed at convincing Democrats who voted for them to switch their registration to Republican. (AP Laserphoto)

The plan, if funded by the General Assembly, would enlarge and modernize the school, providing new laboratories, research facilities and equipment.

Battered by cheaply produced imports, North Carolina's textile industry recorded its lowest level of employment in 37 years in October, with 213,700 people on the payroll.

Hamby said that, while tougher restrictions against unfair imports would help, "the long-term solution is in technology."

Hunt said cutting too many taxes could mean the loss of jobs.

"It is sort of popular nowadays to say we are for cutting all the taxes ... cutting this and ... that," Hunt said. "But I can tell you this: if you start cutting your transportation system, you are going to lose jobs. It is just that simple."

Hunt, who leaves office when his second term expires Jan. 4, said spurring economic growth required public investments in roads, schools and utilities.

"If you really care about economic growth and jobs, you just can't talk about it, you have to do something about it," he said.

Hunt's successor, Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin, made tax reform the centerpiece of his campaign against Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. Martin wants to repeal the state sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs and to phase out local taxes on intangible assets and business inventories.

Instructor Loses Civil Rights Suit

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a former Western Piedmont Community College instructor's $600,000 civil rights suit against the college.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones ruled Wednesday there was no evidence that the Morganton college systematically — by any custom, practice or procedure — violated former instructor Dennis Brockland's civil rights because of his association with a teacher's union.

Jones also ruled that evidence failed to show the college's 12 trustees, also defendants in the suit, acted individually to deprive Brockland of any civil rights.

Jones' action, just before closing arguments, came after almost 10 hours of testimony from 16 witnesses over two days.

College officials declined comment, but their attorney, John McMurray of Morganton, said, "I never did think (Brockland) had anything you could put your teeth into as discriminatory. The college didn't have anything to apologize for."

Brockland's lawyer, Gary Triggs of Morganton, said he will appeal Jones' decision to the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond.

Triggs also said he will file civil rights suits against Western Piedmont President Jim Richardson and Brockland's former supervisor, John Boyd.

"I'll fight this thing until the day I die," said Brockland, 42, and a Western Piedmont criminal justice instructor for seven years.

Brockland contended the college did not renew his contract in May 1982 because of his association with the American Federation of Teachers.

Brockland sought reinstatement to his position, $500,000 in compensatory damages and back pay, and $100,000 in punitive damages.

The college denied any discrimination, arguing that Brockland's position, one of six eliminated at the time, fell victim to budget cuts.

State To Allow Employees To Build Retirement Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive director of the State Employees Association of North Carolina said he was pleased that a new plan for state employees to build retirement funds involves payroll deductions.

Durwood F. "Butch" Gunnells, said in a statement Wednesday that public employees were "grateful to this state for recognizing an individual's need to plan and save for the future."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said state employees will be able to set aside part of their pre-tax income to build retirement funds under the "unique" plan that will take effect in January.

The plan "permits an individual to help direct the course of his or her investments, while at the same time providing superior tax deferral advantages," said Vincent Lowe Jr., president and chief executive officer of BB&T, which will administer the program.

Known as the 401(k) plan, it will be available to about 255,000 state and local government workers covered by state-administered retirement systems, "which could make it the largest 401(k) plan in the nation," said Boyles in a news conference.

The plan, authorized by the Legislature this year, does not alter existing retirement programs, he added.

A contribution means an immediate reduction in an individual's taxable income and deferral of taxes one ordinarily would pay on investment income earned through the plan, Lowe said.

"Taxes are paid when the earnings are distributed to the employee," said Lowe. "Since it is the intent that these funds be used for retirement purposes, most individuals are in a lower tax bracket."

"Additionally, under certain requirements, the 401(k) plan permits 10-year income averaging after distribution of income for tax purposes."

Another provision is that participants are "fully-vested from date of the first deposit," said Lowe. "This entitles an employee to collect 100 percent of his funds if he or she is terminated with a participating state, county or other local government employer."

Participants can obtain their savings at age 59½, upon normal retirement, through disability or death, or in special hardship cases. Participants also may borrow against their funds, and there are no penalties for early withdrawal.

Employees will select the amount of their salaries deferred from the 401(k) plan, within Internal Revenue Service limits, and direct their investments from a list of options.

Eligible to participate include all state employees; teachers and other workers employed by local boards of education; employees and faculty of the state university system; local government employees; and local and state law enforcement officers.

Lowe said Pat McNeill had been appointed senior vice president of Wilson-based BB&T, the state's fifth-largest bank, to oversee the 401(k) plan.

"The entire resources of BB&T are at the state's disposal to make the 401(k) plan successful," said Lowe. "We want every employee who invests to reap the greatest benefits possible under existing financial conditions."

BB&T was among 23 contenders for the plan's contract, which will be considered for renewal in 1989.

Mother's Trick Ends Kidnapping

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — When Mary Anne Hester found a stranger in her home, holding a butcher knife behind his back, her first thought was to fight the intruder. Instead, she outsmarted him in a bold move.

Ms. Hester brought her son back to their Lincolnton home from a doctor's visit Tuesday morning, built a fire and went into the kitchen to put some pies in the oven.

But when she returned to the living room to check the fire, the intruder walked out of her bedroom and demanded she drive him to Shelby.

Ms. Hester, 34, said Wednesday she worried that if she attacked the man and failed, her 8-year-old son, who wears casts on both legs, would not be able to get away.

So she agreed to comply with the stranger's wish. But pulling her Pinto out of her driveway with the man beside her, Ms. Hester seized on a plan.

"I said I was going to have to get a check cashed — like I didn't have enough gas to go to Shelby," she said.

So with son Robert in her arms and the menacing intruder behind her, Ms. Hester marched into Lowe's Foods, a grocery store on U.S. 321.

She walked up to cashier Betty King and said: "This man was in my house when I came home and he's trying to force me to take him to Shelby. Please call the law. I'm sure they'll be glad to take him."

With that, the man fled. Roosevelt Davis Jr., 22, of Forest City, was arrested about an hour later by Lincolnton police and charged with two counts of kidnapping and one count of breaking and entering.

Authorities said Davis escaped Monday from the Lincoln County Prison Unit, where he was serving a 12-year sentence for arson.

Advisers Critical Of Vocational Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — An education advisory board criticized the state Board of Education for shirking its duties in administering the vocational education program, saying skills taught in those classes have not kept pace with changes in technology.

"During fiscal year 1983-84, the board gave very little attention to vocational education," said a report released Wednesday by the North Carolina Advisory Council on Education.

The council recommended that the board either "provide more effective leadership" or transfer responsibility for vocational education to another agency.

The education board has been considering a study of the vocational education system, but members haven't agreed how extensive the study should be.

Board member Barbara Tapscott, director of instruction at the Burlington City Schools, rejected the council's criticism of the board's leadership, saying that strides made within schools are evidence that vocational education courses are progressing.

The report did not cite specific deficiencies and council chairman Thomas B. Broughton said a comprehensive study is needed to identify shortcomings. The council was set up under federal law to make recommendations, primarily on vocational education, to the board.

"I don't want to quote any evidence, but I think everybody has the concern that maybe some wheels are spinning in vocational education, not necessarily statewide, but in some systems," Broughton said in an interview.

Broughton said he thought the education board needed to keep in closer contact with business and industry to assure that vocational education courses keep pace with technological changes. He said he thought the education board had done an "acceptable job" but needed to give vocational education more attention.

"The whole ball of wax is wrapped up in one question," he said. "Is vocational education, as a statewide system, really responding to the needs, present and projected? We think it's got a long way to go."

John L. Tart III, president of Johnston County Technical Institute and chairman of the board's vocational education committee, echoed the criticism.

"The board members haven't spent any time on (vocational education)," Tart said. "I assume they're not interested in it... There are a lot of things we're teaching that don't need to be taught and some are being neglected."

In other business, the board received a report from the Public Education Policy Council on proposed changes in the way public school teachers are paid.

The board endorsed the council's recommendation that state law requiring career growth plans for teachers and administrators be modified to allow for two years — instead of one — to test the program and to provide that teachers be evaluated by peers within their own school districts rather than from outside, as the law now is written.

Business Index Climbs Slightly

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Business activity in North Carolina increased three-tenths of a percent to 130.3 in October over September, buoyed by rising building expenses and business starts, according to the Wachovia Business Index.

Wachovia spokeswoman Barbara Aker said the average manufacturing work week increased while non-agricultural employment remained steady.

The index measures economic activity each month using indicators of employment, business expansion, production and construction.

Eileen Brennan Stars In ABC Pilot Film

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two years after she was struck by an automobile and critically injured, Eileen Brennan says she is able to laugh at her brush with death.
"I think it's funny now. Humor is tragedy plus time," said the actress — although her slow recovery included a bout of addiction to drugs prescribed to lessen the pain of two broken legs.

"When someone gets run down by a car there's humor in it. Here I was giggling with my girlfriend over dinner and I walk across the street to my little Rabbit car and get mowed down."
At the interview, Miss Brennan smoked one cigarette after another. Her long blonde hair was in ringlets, her blue eyes so pale they seemed to bore right through her questioner.

"What makes someone funny?" Miss Brennan asked.
"Objectivity about the human condition, the ability to laugh at yourself, not take yourself seriously, and a knowledge of the technical skills," she said, answering her own question. "You study the human condition and try to determine why we all get caught up in making it so important."

Miss Brennan stars with Ed Asner in a comedy pilot for ABC called "Off the Rack," set for Friday, in which they play reluctant partners in the garment industry.
It marks her return to work after she was hit by a car on Oct. 27, 1982, after having dinner in a Venice restaurant with Goldie Hawn. They had starred together in the movie "Private Benjamin," and at that time Miss Brennan was playing Capt. Doreen Lewis in the TV version.

Miss Brennan suffered facial fractures and fractures of both legs. She said she would have to undergo therapy for the rest of her life. After completing "Off the Rack" she spent six weeks at the Betty Ford Center to cure her addiction to the pain-killer drugs prescribed during her hospital stay.
"Off the Rack" was made in February 1984. ABC passed it for its fall schedule and is running it now to see if it draws any reaction.
Third-rated ABC is scrambling for quick-fixes after none of its new series worked. Last week, ABC gave tryouts to two other comedy pilots it passed on last spring: "Mr. Mom" and "Never Again."

On Friday, ABC opens with a "Cabbage Patch Christmas" special, followed by "Webster," "Benson," "Off the Rack" and "Matt Houston." "Hawaiian Heat" has been canceled, and ABC wants to see if a two-hour comedy block will do better in the ratings than a mixture of comedy and action-adventure.

"Off the Rack" is funny, and the humor has a tangy crispness that's refreshing. It's a comedy that appears to have lots of audience appeal, and maybe ABC will not pass it over again.
Both Miss Brennan and Asner are still under option, should ABC decide to turn it into a series.

"I play Kate, the widow of Ed's partner," she said. "The pilot starts with my husband's funeral. Kate's a lady who had devoted her life to raising a family and now she learns all the insurance money has gone to keeping her husband's business running. So she has to go to work — and she's never been able to tolerate Ed. Part of his character is his crudity. When buyers come in Ed tells them dirty jokes."

Miss Brennan also acted in an Easter special with Alan Arkin and Martin Sheen.
"That was a wonderful experience," she said. "And the Betty Ford Center was a spiritual experience, too. I've had a whole new feeling of spirituality since the accident. No question." She smiled. "That's why I had it."

Ex-Beatle Reports Split Relationship

LONDON (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney says his relationship with John Lennon deteriorated after the pop group split up in 1969.
"Once we were equal, when we were Lennon and McCartney," McCartney, 42, said in a British television interview. But after the group's break-up, "John moved away to New York. ... John was calling me Englebert Humperdinck," he said.

"I really didn't want to come back at him. I knew we would just have had a big media row," he said.
Lennon was murdered outside his New York apartment on Dec. 7, 1980.
McCartney said he fell out with the rock group because of his dislike of their manager.
"It all started because I didn't like Allen Klein," he said. "They wanted to go with him. I thought it was a bad thing to do. Later I was proved right."

'Satanic Content'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The themes of songs such as "Into the Coven" and "Nuns Have No Fun" by a band barred from a performance here are "pure fantasy and imagination," says King Diamond, lead singer of the group Mercyful Fate.
The Danish band was scratched from a show tonight at the Syria Mosque.
"Mystery has always fascinated me so that's what I write about," said Diamond.
The promoter, DiCesare-Engler Productions, did not blame the cancellation on the band's image, but the group's road manager, Hans Castensmith, said, "They told us we had satanic content."
Motorhead and Exciter, two other heavy-metal bands, were scheduled to play the concert.

Actress' Dog Killed By Paper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Bain says she was offered restitution after her dog was killed by a newspaper tossed onto her lawn, but asked, "How do you put a price on a pet you've had for 14 years?"
The accident occurred last week when the Los Angeles Times was being delivered, Miss Bain's agent, Marty Blumenthal said Wednesday.
A man contacted late Wednesday afternoon in the Times circulation department declined to comment on the incident, saying he knew nothing about it. He did not give his name.

Three Teen-Agers Who Set Fire To Dog Face Charges

KING, N.C. (AP) — Three teen-agers have been charged with cruelty to an animal after they admitted setting a dog on fire, Stokes County sheriff's deputies said Wednesday.

The dog, a cocker spaniel named Brandy, was found last week by her owner, Wilson E. Bowles, near the family's house in King.

Bowles' wife, Jan Bowles, said that Brandy was burned so severely that the family decided to have her put to sleep.

"We felt we did the right thing," Mrs. Bowles said. "We hope we did."

Kenny Beasley and Paul Cockerham, both 16, and a 15-year-old unidentified juvenile were charged with cruelty to an animal, said Det. Larry G. Reeves of the Stokes County Sheriff's Department.

The teenagers were charged after they confessed to dousing Brandy with a mixture of kerosene, wood, stain and lacquer and setting the dog on fire, Reeves said, adding that a tip to the county's Crimestoppers office led to the arrest.

"They didn't really give me a motive," he said. "I don't think they really thought about the consequences of their actions."

Mrs. Bowles said that her family became aware of the incident while eating dinner about 7 p.m. on Nov. 28. They heard a dog crying in distress and went out to look for the dog, a family pet for 11 years. Bowles drove around the neighborhood following the cries of pain, and found the dog inside a culvert.

The dog was taken to an emergency clinic in Winston-Salem, where a veterinarian said that she would be blind and badly scarred if she survived.

The teenagers were released from Stokes County Jail with no bond required. They are scheduled to appear in Stokes District Court on Dec. 17.

Cruelty to an animal is a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Three weeks before the dog burned, Mrs. Bowles said, someone tied a rock to a kitten's tail in the neighborhood and threw it into a creek, where it drowned. No one has been charged in that incident.

Attorney Says D.A. Hurt Case

MURPHY, N.C. (AP) — Witnesses have been reluctant to testify in vote-buying cases in Cherokee County since the district attorney said earlier this year he might bring charges against vote sellers, U.S. Attorney Charles R. Brewer said.

Brewer said Wednesday the Justice Department has targeted eight Cherokee County residents for indictment in an ongoing investigation of vote buying in western North Carolina. He said he plans to present the first case to the grand jury Jan. 7.

Although District Attorney Marcellus Buchanan has not prosecuted any vote sellers, Brewer said Buchanan's statements have hurt the federal investigation. "To threaten it (to prosecute) and then not follow through is just not right," Brewer said.

Brewer said he has conducted an intensive investigation into vote buying in Clay and Cherokee counties, which resulted in the conviction of several residents.

Buchanan, who serves the 30th Judicial District, which includes both Clay and Cherokee counties, could not be reached for comment.

The Justice Department has not prosecuted vote sellers, and Brewer said it was the department's policy at this time to prosecute only vote buyers.

Buchanan said on Sept. 18 he had received "numerous complaints with respect to the prosecution of those who sell their votes as opposed to those who have bought votes. There is no distinction between the two. If you don't have someone willing to sell their vote, there will be no buyers. If you are going to stop this thing, you have to stop it from both directions."

Brewer said his cases would be hampered if vote sellers were unwilling to testify.

Nearly 50 people testified last year they sold their votes in Clay County in the 1982 general election for $50 to $75.

Among those convicted last year on the vote seller's testimony were former Clay County sheriffs E. Hartsell Moore, a Republican, and Howard Barnard, a Democrat. Moore served eight months of a 15-month prison sentence and was paroled on July 17. Barnard is serving a 30-month sentence.

Six other Clay County residents and two Cherokee County residents have been convicted and fined for buying votes in the 1982 general election.

Ceremony Is Held For History Museum

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Museum of History is like a youngster who's outgrown his clothes, Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday at groundbreaking ceremonies for the new facility.

The Museum of History is like a "youngster who has grown up but has only hand-me-down clothes so small that they are bursting at the seams," Hunt said.

"Today, we are changing that," he said.

Rain forced the ceremonies inside, with Hunt cutting a ribbon rather than wielding a jackhammer as planned.

The new building, which will be built at the site of the former state art museum, will be used to house collections of Civil War uniforms, folk arts and crafts, textiles and historic flags that are now gathering dust at the museum's current location in the Archives and History-State Library Building.

John Ellington, an administrator in the history section of the Department of Cultural Resources, said some of the items haven't been seen for as long as 10 years, but all will be displayed in the new facility.

The old building will remain open after the new one is completed, he said.

"I'm sitting here on pins and needles waiting for the bulldozers to start on the parking lot," Ellington said. The new facility, which is expected to open in late 1987 or early 1988, will include twice as much exhibition space and a 200-seat auditorium.

Mecklenburg Man Held In Beating

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 20-year-old Mecklenburg County man was charged on Wednesday with killing his mother, a Charlotte-Mecklenburg school teacher, authorities said.

The badly beaten body of Emily Marie Cannon, a history teacher at South Mecklenburg High School, was found shortly after noon Wednesday about 6 miles from her home in a patch of woods just north of Charlotte, according to authorities.

Robert "Bobby" Erving Cannon Jr. of Charlotte was charged with murder and was being held in Mecklenburg County Jail without bond, Charlotte Police Department spokeswoman Mickey Casey said.

"The body was found nude and face up," she said. "It was evident she had received multiple blows to the head and there were slash wounds on one arm and both wrists."

Investigators found the body almost five hours after Cannon reported his mother missing.

"When the first officer arrived, the son said his mother was missing," Ms. Casey said. "There was blood in virtually every room of the house."

According to a police report, Cannon said he left his home about 7:30 a.m. Tuesday and returned about 7 a.m. Wednesday to find his mother missing. He said he didn't know what had happened to her, police said.

But, after several hours of questioning, Cannon said he killed his mother after an argument, according to Maj. L.L. McGraw, head of felony investigations for the department.

"He said he killed her because she was getting on his case," McGraw said.

Firm Retained

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NCNB Corp. has retained the investment banking firm of Goldman Sachs as it considers selling TranSouth Financial Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary, officials said Wednesday.

NCNB has not decided whether to sell TranSouth, which has assets of about $375 million, the company said in a statement.

TranSouth is headquartered in Florence, S.C., and operates 145 consumer lending offices in seven southeastern states.

NCNB Corp. is the largest bank holding company in the Southeast, with $14.5 billion in assets. NCNB operates full-service banks in North Carolina and Florida.

Pill Loses Status To Sterilization

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the recent decline in the pill's popularity, sterilization has become the nation's most common form of birth control, particularly among married couples whose families are complete, new statistics show.

"The most widely used method of contraception in 1982 was sterilization," either male or female, the National Center for Health Statistics said Wednesday in the report "Use of Contraception in the United States, 1982."

The study said 18 percent of women aged 15 to 44 avoided pregnancy through sterilization of either themselves or their partner, while 16 percent chose birth control pills. Condoms were used by 7 percent, diaphragms by 5 percent and intrauterine devices by 4 percent of women.

"Contraceptive practice has changed dramatically in the U.S. since 1965, with the rise and subsequent decline of the pill and the rise of male and especially female sterilization," said a report by the private Population Reference Bureau that was published simultaneously with the release of the government study.

Based on the same statistics, the private research groups' analysis, entitled "Understanding U.S. Fertility," was prepared by William F. Pratt, William D. Mosher, Christine A. Bachrach and Marjorie C. Horn, all of the government's health statistics center.

The new study sought to analyze contraceptive use of all women in the childbearing ages through the National Survey of Family Growth. That survey consisted of interviews with a national sample of 7,969 women. However, comparative statistics for previous surveys are available only for married women.

The survey found that 29.5 million American women were using some form of contraception in 1982, 55 percent of those in the age group of 15 to 44, which is generally comparable to the childbearing years.

While 8.4 million women using birth control pills outnumbered the 6.4 million who had been sterilized, adding in the more than 3 million sterilized males makes that method more common than the pill.

"In 1965 the leading methods were the pill, condom, rhythm and diaphragm. By 1982 the leading methods were female sterilization, the pill, male sterilization and the condom," among married couples, the Population Reference Bureau's analysis showed.

The report said sterilization tended to become more common as couples aged and completed their families, while younger couples are often seeking to delay rather than prevent arrival of children and they tended to choose methods that can be stopped.

"Among couples intending to have no more children, the proportion using male or female sterilization more than tripled between 1965 and 1982, from 18 (percent) to 62 percent," the study noted.

Among couples who want children later, the pill remains the most popular method of delay, but it is losing ground. Use of the pill by such couples fell from 61 percent in 1973 to 45 percent in 1982. During the same period use of the diaphragm rose from 16 percent to 34 percent of these couples.

Birth control pills were used by 23.9 percent of married couples in 1965, 36.1 percent in 1973 and 19.8 percent in 1982, the report showed.

The report said female sterilization increased steadily from 7 percent in 1965 to 12 percent in 1973, then more than doubled to 26 percent in 1982, while male sterilization rose from 5 percent in 1965 to 11.2 percent in 1973 and 15.4 percent in 1982.

Intrauterine devices accounted for only 1.2 percent in 1965, 9.6 percent in 1973 and 7.1 percent in 1982.

DES Cancer Risk Cited For Daughters

CHICAGO (AP) — The drug DES creates "the environment for cancer" in the daughters of women who took it to prevent miscarriages, according to a study showing that the cancer risk for the daughters is twice normal.

The seven-year study revealed tissue abnormalities that might lead to the most common forms of cervical and vaginal cancer in 15.7 per 1,000 women whose mothers took diethylstilbestrol while pregnant. The rate in women not exposed to the drug was 7.9 per 1,000.

"I don't think DES, per se, is a cause of cancer, but it provides, you might say, the environment for cancer," Dr. Duane Townsend said Wednesday in a telephone interview. Townsend, of Cedars Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, was one of several physicians who took part in the 1974 National Cancer Institute study.

The study appears in Friday's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

He predicted that the results of the study will "open a whole new can of worms" in terms of DES-related lawsuits, and said he advises women whose mothers took the drug to "get a lawyer."

DES was used in the 1940s and '50s by as many as 3 million pregnant women to prevent miscarriages, but was taken off the market after it was linked to rare forms of vaginal and cervical cancer in the users' daughters.

"The evidence regarding dysplasia (tissue abnormalities) should not be a cause for alarm among exposed women, but rather a caution that any exposed woman should continue to have yearly examinations," wrote Dr. Stanley J. Robboy of the New Jersey Medical School in Newark, the study's chief investigator.

Townsend said he also would advise such women to have Pap smears every year, or even every six months "to make them feel more secure." If DES-related tissue abnormalities are detected and treated, the victims' risk for developing cancer is "infinitesimally small," he said.

Although women exposed to DES developed tissue abnormalities at double the normal rate, researchers aren't sure how many would subsequently develop cancer, Robboy said.

The study found that none of the DES-exposed women who were virgins developed the tissue abnormalities. An increase in the incidence of tissue abnormalities "was associated with increasing numbers of sexual partners and with intercourse before the age of 20 years," Dr. Cecilia M. Fenoglio of the VA Medical Center in Albuquerque, N.M., said in an accompanying editorial.

In light of such findings, Townsend said DES-exposed women may be able to reduce the risk of developing the "pre-cancerous" tissue abnormalities by using barrier forms of contraception, such as the diaphragm.

The results of the study follow a Nov. 29 report in the New England Journal of Medicine, which found that women who took DES to prevent miscarriages from 1940 to 1960 had a higher than usual risk of developing breast cancer.

The JAMA study followed 3,980 women exposed to DES before birth, and a control group of 1,033 unexposed women.

While the JAMA study showed that daughters of women who took DES run a two-fold risk of tissue abnormalities, sons did not appear to be at a higher than normal risk for developing genito-urinary abnormalities, infertility or testicular cancer, according to a related study.

are cases when there are a lot of brain cells dying, but yet the person can function normally," she said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

In the study reported today in Nature magazine, Ms. Lee and her colleagues, including Yoshio Hosobuchi, a University of California neurosurgeon, reported that six of 10 cats given the drug survived massive, laboratory-induced strokes.

Twelve cats who were not given the drug, called dynorphin, did not survive, the researchers reported.

A half-million Americans a year suffer from strokes, in which bleeding or clotting disrupts blood flow to part of the brain, and brain cells in that area die.

Depending upon how much of the brain is lost, strokes can be fatal or can leave their victims partly paralyzed.

Opium-Like Drug Helps After Stroke

NEW YORK (AP) — The lives of many of the 164,000 people who die annually of strokes might be saved with injections of a drug that apparently lets the brain reorganize itself and recover after stroke damage occurs, according to a study published today.

The drug, a synthetic version of one of three kinds of opiumlike chemicals that occur naturally in the brain, reduces the severity of strokes without reducing the size of the damaged area in the brain, said the authors of the study.

"If that's the case, the next line of thinking would be that it allows the brain to reorganize itself and survive," said one of the authors, Nancy Lee, a pharmacologist at the University of California in San Francisco.

"The brain can reorganize itself and can salvage information. There

Nitze's Choice Enhances Prospects

A News Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The appointment of veteran negotiator Paul Nitze to a key advisory position on arms control should significantly improve chances of a major arms control agreement with Moscow if serious negotiations resume.

It also represents a victory for Secretary of State George P. Shultz in the administration infighting for control over the American negotiating strategy.

President Reagan on Wednesday named Nitze to serve as a special adviser to Shultz in exploratory arms talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that will be held Jan. 7-8 in Geneva.

"He is clearly Shultz's choice," said a senior State Department official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified.

Nitze, 77, was the chief negotiator at the intermediate range nuclear force (INF) talks that were broken off by Moscow in Geneva late last year. He was an opponent of the unratified SALT II nuclear arms control treaty negotiated during the Carter administration.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said he would not characterize Nitze's position as a "czar" or "special envoy."

The administration briefly considered the idea of creating an arms czar to overcome strategy disputes between the Pentagon and the State Department in arms talks.

State Department officials say Shultz opposed such a position because that would have appeared to make the individual independent of the State Department and responsible directly to the president.

Shultz, who is chiefly responsible for the move toward improved relations with Moscow and the resumption of arms control talks with the Soviets, wants to maintain overall control, aides say, believing this is the only way the administration can develop a credible negotiating strategy.

Shultz and the State Department are regarded as much more in favor of negotiating major arms control agreements with Moscow than the Pentagon, where Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle have proved more cautious.

The two factions have tended to cancel out each other, with the result that during Reagan's first term it has proved extremely difficult to develop workable arms control proposals for the START negotiations on strategic weapons and the INF talks on intermediate-range weapons.

The senior State Department officials contend in talks with reporters that unless the president puts one of the competing factions in clear charge — they favor Shultz, of course — the difficulties in formulating a credible negotiating position will continue into Reagan's second term.

Moscow broke off both the INF and START negotiations late last year after NATO and the United States began to deploy new intermediate-range cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe. The NATO deployment was in response to Moscow's deployment of SS-20 intermediate-range missiles targeted on Europe.

The talks next month between Shultz and Gromyko are aimed at setting the stage for resuming negotiations on both strategic and intermediate weapons, as well as initiating talks on space weapons.

In his September meeting with Reagan, Gromyko suggested that each country name a special envoy to get the arms talks back on track after a year's lapse.

Although Speakes said no decision would be made on who would head any U.S. negotiating team until after the Geneva discussions, two informed State Department officials said Wednesday that Nitze is now ideally placed to become special envoy if Moscow and Washington agree on such an approach. For Shultz, having Nitze responsible to him assures a chain of command he will feel comfortable with.

U.S. officials anticipate the Shultz-Gromyko talks will lead to separate negotiations on individual weapons categories. An aide to Edward L. Rowny, the administration's START negotiator, said Wednesday that Rowny was prepared to resume talks with Moscow "right now."

He said if the Shultz-Gromyko talks go well, detailed negotiations could begin in six to eight weeks.

Nitze has demonstrated his willingness to negotiate seriously with the Soviets even though he opposed the SALT II treaty. Nitze and the Soviet INF negotiator, Yuli Kvitsinsky, went outside the regular Geneva negotiations in 1982 to develop an informal compromise known as the "walk-in-the-woods" formula.

However, both Washington and Moscow turned down the formula, and Nitze received a mild reprimand from the White House for exceeding his instructions.

Afghan Rebels Say Soviets Bogging Down

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Despite a tougher and more ruthless strategy against Moslem guerrillas, Soviet intervention forces seem more bogged down than at any time since they entered Afghanistan five years ago, anti-government guerrilla leaders claim.

But they agree with Western diplomatic and military observers here that the divided guerrilla movement is unlikely ever to force the 115,000 Soviet troops to withdraw against their will.

Western intelligence experts believe the Soviets may have lost as many as 20,000 men since the start of their intervention.

"We will never leave them in peace, not if they stay for centuries," said a guerrilla chieftain, Younes Khalis. "They must regret they ever invaded us."

In the main strongholds of the "jihad" (holy war), the Soviets are for the first time using tough new commando units specially trained and equipped for anti-guerrilla warfare in Afghanistan, resistance leaders say.

They say these airborne commandos move into previously impenetrable mountain terrain after it has been "softened up" by high-altitude carpet bombing.

"We have shown we can survive these mass destruction methods and can hit back harder than ever," said Massoud Khalili, spokesman for Jamiat Islami, a main resistance movement. "Our objective is to go on hitting them so hard that they will have to negotiate a political settlement."

The guerrillas demand a Soviet military withdrawal and the replacement of the Soviet-sponsored President Babrak Karmal by a new leader acceptable to them. Four successive rounds of U.N.-sponsored "proximity talks" between Pakistan and the Karmal regime have revealed no Soviet willingness to accept such a deal.

On the contrary, the guerrillas say the Russians have sharply intensified their war effort since Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko came to power in February.

Khalis, a 65-year-old former mullah (Moslem priest) who leads the moderate wing of the Hezbi Islami guerrilla movement, described the new strategy in an interview.

"First, waves of TU-16 bombers fly in from bases in the Soviet Union to obliterate our villages. Then the commandos swoop down in helicopters or by parachute.

"We have suffered many such ferocious attacks recently, particularly in the Panjcher Valley. They cause terrible devastation, but they have proved less successful than the Russians must have hoped."

A turbaned, red-bearded mountain warrior with pistols and bandoliers draped over his "kurta" tribal dress, Khalis claims to be the only top guerrilla leader based in Peshawar who regularly crosses the mountains in Afghanistan to lead his men.

"We have good intelligence information, and we usually know when and where to expect them," he said. "This gives the mujahedeen (anti-government fighters) plenty of time to get out of the way. The Soviet commandos land by helicopter or parachute. They often find no mujahedeen in the villages, but they destroy everything left standing after the bombing. One aim is to scare the civilians out of helping us."

He said Soviet commanders rely less than before on Karmal's Soviet-led Afghan troops who often desert to the mujahedeen.

Khalis said the commandos — volunteers rather than the usual conscripts — burn crops to deny the guerrillas food and then drive civilian survivors into the valleys.

International relief workers say this Soviet practice has left more than 2 million starvation-threatened "internal refugees" in Afghanistan in addition to the 4 million who have fled to neighboring Pakistan and Iran.

"We estimate that at least one third of Afghanistan's 18 million inhabitants have had to flee from their homes," said Lars Nelson, acting director of the Swedish Committee for Afghanistan, a relief organization operating in Peshawar.

The Swedish Committee, using Afghan doctors and male nurses, maintains 10 clinics in caves or remote farmhouses in guerrilla-controlled "liberated areas." An additional 100 Afghan paramedical staff trained by the committee accompany mujahedeen units in operations against the Russians.

The Swiss-run International Committee of the Red Cross has five first aid posts and ambulances along the border and a fully equipped hospital in Peshawar for seriously wounded victims who reach Pakistan.

Michel Mordassini, head of the Red Cross mission, said the Communists have refused to allow the Red Cross to carry out its traditional role of protecting war prisoners on both sides.

The guerrillas admit they execute many of their Russian captives, and they expect the same treatment if taken alive. In five years, only 11 Soviet prisoners have been handed over to the Red Cross for internment in Switzerland.

One Soviet officer captured in the Panjsher early this year, identified as Lt. Nikolai Toshin, was not executed.

"He gave us a wealth of detailed information about Soviet operations," Khalili said. "According to him, the morale of the Russian conscripts is lower than at any time since the invasion began. Many have deserted or traded their weapons for drugs."

The mujahedeen have problems too. At least 10 different movements operate from Peshawar, some representing thousands of guerrillas, others little more than groups of exile politicians.

Seven are loosely grouped into an alliance, but there is frequent confrontation inside and outside Afghanistan between theoretically allied guerrilla units. Some accuse others of secretly collaborating with the Russians.

The different movements operate separate military training camps on Pakistani territory under the watchful eye of Pakistani authorities. President Zia Ul-Haq supports the Moslem struggle against what he regards as an atheist Communist regime in Pakistan's northern neighbor, but he does not want the rival guerrilla movements to get out of hand or destabilize the unruly mountain tribes in Pakistan's border regions.

Radio's Classical Music Listeners Are Few, But Loyal

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Heading to the Allentown hospital at 4 a.m., Dr. Tamar Earnest was roused gently out of her sleepiness by the classical piano music pouring from her car radio.

The music, she said, gave her a sense of calm alertness as she went to help a young accident victim.

"Doing surgery to Vivaldi is my idea of happiness," said Ms. Earnest, part of the loyal following of WFLN, Philadelphia's only full-time classical music station.

"It's just the kind of mood you want. If the other doctors have on a rock station, I make them change it."

While other stations have segued to rock 'n' roll, to contemporary, to country music, WFLN, in its 35th year on the air, hasn't changed its tune.

"We've been faithful to our audience and they've been faithful to us," said Harry Haas, station manager and vice president.

Surveys by Arbitron, the national ratings service, show the WFLN audience averages around 290,000 listeners a week compared to 900,000 for rock stations in Philadelphia. But though the WFLN fans are smaller in numbers, they are among the most dedicated, and the most affluent.

The station's listener profiles show an audience ranging in age from 30 to 60, in what Haas calls an "upscale" category.

"They are well educated, and because of that, they are well-jobbed," Haas said. "They include a lot of professionals, a lot of medical types, market types, independent business people."

That's by design. When WFLN went on the air in March 1949, founder Raymond Green, a violinist who had worked in intelligence in the Army — where he roomed with Clark Gable, among others — knew the kind of audience he wanted.

"We decided to use classical music as a format for attracting people of better-than-average intelligence, and we infiltrated it with news as much as possible," he said.

"We're the kind of a station you have to listen to. We're not a background music station. That, I think, is one of the reasons our commercials are so effective. The commercials come on, and people are still listening."

Green said, "Sometimes we have as many as 300 advertisers in the course of a month. They're supporting the arts. That to me is a great accomplishment."

"We have never had a dollar in support from a taxing entity. We've always shown commercial support for the arts."

WFLN publishes a program guide so listeners know when specific works will be played, and its programming is the result of extensive research.

"Generally, at drive time, from 6 to 10 a.m. and 4 to 7 p.m., things tend to be shorter and lighter," said program director Dave Conant. "The more serious standard fare, like symphonies, is scheduled from 10 to noon, 1 to 4 and 8 to 10. Overnight it's a mix."

Haas adds, "We can't take baroque and play it at 2 p.m., or we'd get shot. But we can put it somewhere and let people know where to find it."

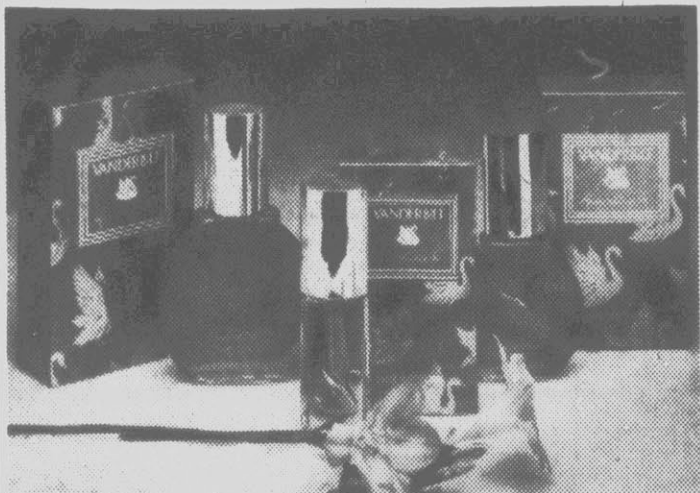

After he was discharged from the Army in 1946, Green served as radio director of the NBC Symphony under conductor Arturo Toscanini, and went looking for a city with no classical music station. He settled on Philadelphia, where he got financial support from five others to start WFLN.

"When I grew up, my father was adamant that music was not a way to make a living," Green explained. "I had to work in a bank. With the experience of the bank behind me, it gave me the ability to put administrative things together — and the Army didn't hurt, either."

When the station began, Green said, only 14 percent of the homes in Philadelphia had FM receivers. Working with several companies, he was able to get FM receivers for cars, and, at one point, had a radio made for only one channel, WFLN.

Campus Image Can Make Or Break Schools

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Quick: what pops into your mind when someone says "University of Miami"? Berkeley? Bennington? Brooklyn College? Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology?

Schools' images can sometimes make or break them, say some higher education administrators, especially if the image is negative, misleading or outdated and thus stigmatizes the school and repels potential students.

True or not, many high school students and their parents regard the University of Miami as "Suntan U." Berkeley as a hotbed of radicalism. Bennington as a pricey haven for artists in the Vermont woods, and Brooklyn College as a once glorious but now downtrodden city school.

Image is a growing concern at colleges and universities as competition intensifies to attract able high school graduates and as the quality and direction of higher education comes under attack in federal studies.

In some cases, college images are simply outmoded. Berkeley is a long way from its 1960s radical past. Most students are still politically liberal. About 70 percent voted Democratic, according to spokesman Ray Colvig. But there is now a sizable conservative presence on campus. The "Berkeley Barb," the prototype for underground student newspapers a generation ago, died four years ago, replaced by a conservative weekly, the "Berkeley Review."

Bennington is still exceptionally expensive — about $16,000 a year total cost — and still appeals to the artistically inclined. But president Michael Hooker has introduced computers into the curriculum to broaden the school's appeal.

"We always had a certain smugness. We were sometimes misperceived as being a luxury that students could ill afford," he said.

Likewise, land grant schools like Michigan State University have outgrown condescending imagery like "Cow College," or "Moo U." Most remain committed to agricultural research, but many have also taken the lead in such areas as biogenetic engineering.

Occasionally a school's image problem is lack of image. Rose-Hulman Tech, one of the nation's better technical schools, is virtually unknown outside Terre Haute, Ind. Its anonymity is due partly to a name change in 1972, after being known as Rose Polytechnic for 100 years, and partly to a lack of athletic teams to get the school's name on television.

Self-effacing humor has helped solve the problem, said Rose-Hulman president Sam Hulbert. He recently started "Operation Catapult" as an attention-getter — a tongue-in-cheek mailer to prospective students that includes a "Ski Terre Haute" poster and boasts that a major campus activity is "going to the local truck stop and watching gas tanks rust."

Apparently it's working. This fall, there were 2,809 applications for 350 freshman spots, and applications have been up "a couple of hundred each year," Hulbert said.

Other schools have had less humorous struggles with image.

The University of Miami for most of its 59-year history drew smirks as a haven for the casual student. In 1980, the image worsened amid Miami's racial unrest and increasing drug trafficking.

"Many hundreds of students who had planned to study here did not," said president Edward T. Foote II.

While Foote conceded in an interview that his school would probably be associated with nice weather "as long as there's snow in New York City," the university has reversed the slide in applications, with freshmen enrollment up to 1,772 this fall from 1,463 a year earlier.

Miami opened an honors college this fall and boosted the number of merit scholarships to attract academically able students. As a result, the school claims that mean verbal and math Scholastic Aptitude Test scores of its latest freshmen class are 1,059, up 97 points from five years ago, placing it among the 200 most competitive colleges in the country.

"Images, whatever they are, change slowly. But we are emerging from the negative image that all you get here is a suntan," said Foote.

Like Miami, part of Brooklyn College's image problem has to do with surroundings. To many, Brooklyn is either a place to be ridiculed or avoided.

"When you think of Brooklyn, a lot of people get an image of John Travolta or Sylvester Stallone," said Jerry Tubbs, a 27-year-old graduate student from Texas who chose Brooklyn College because of its low tuition ($2,550 for out-of-staters, $1,275 for New Yorkers) and the chance to study under Pulitzer Prize-winning poet John Ashbury.

Brooklyn College's image has had abrupt ups and downs. In the decade after it opened in 1930, some called it "The Little Red Schoolhouse" because communist and left-wing groups thrived on campus. In the 1950s until the late 1960s, it was known as the "poor man's Harvard" because it charged no tuition but maintained rigorous academic standards. Then in 1969, the city opened its four-year colleges to any high school graduate who cared to attend, regardless of academic credentials.

The policy made Brooklyn College's population swell from about 15,000 to a cramped 35,000 by the mid-1970s. Just as abruptly, New York City's fiscal crisis in 1975 forced city colleges to charge tuition and, later, to require certain academic standings for admission. The student population dropped to current levels of about 14,700.

College president Robert L. Hess said the school's academic reputation was "badly shaken" in the 1970s. But he said a 4-year-old "Core Curriculum," a 10-course liberal arts requirement for all students, will help the school regain its former grandeur. The curriculum gives undergraduates heavy doses of art, music, chemistry, biology, computer science and humanities.

A report last week by the National Endowment for the Humanities singled out its core curriculum as one of a few "bright spots" among current liberal arts programs.

The University of Denver's image problem is more subtle, and serious. In the 1960s, said chancellor Dwight M. Smith, Denver decided to appeal to top students as an alternative to Harvard or Yale. It became the classic "safe school," the third or fourth choice of academically capable youngsters.

In the 1970s, however, the school "was sprouting new programs and we got a confused image," Smith said.

Now, with fewer potential freshmen and top schools dipping deeper into their applicant pools, Denver's pool is evaporating — from 5,000 in 1980 to about 3,000. About 40 percent of its students drop out before graduating, and the school has been operating in the red for three years.

Denver has been taking steps to clarify its image — eliminating weaker departments such as theater and its schools to train librarians and nurses. The key step will be a "core curriculum," beginning next fall, to place rigorous liberal arts requirements on all undergraduates, including, for the first time, a foreign language requirement.

"We plan to become smaller, but better," said Smith.

U.S.-South Africa Link Upsets Some

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The anti-apartheid protests at the South African Embassy here have been accompanied by a strong undercurrent of resentment over what the demonstrators regard as the cozy relationship the Reagan administration has with that country's white supremacist leadership.

At issue is the administration's policy of "constructive engagement," an effort U.S. officials say is aimed at creating a favorable climate for incorporating South Africa's disenfranchised blacks into the country's political system, among other objectives.

To many critics, the policy represents an American embrace of apartheid that has encouraged South Africa's leaders to maintain their segregationist system.

Has the United States contributed to "clear progress" toward a non-racial society in South Africa over the past four years, as Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker believes?

Or, is the United States, because of its policies, "stained with the filth that dominates the South African government," as Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., believes?

Mitchell made the statment on Monday as he became another of the many congressmen arrested outside the South African Embassy during two weeks of virtually non-stop protests. To Mitchell and many other American blacks, there is no more emotional foreign policy issue than apartheid and the way the administration has dealt with it.

"I think my country needs to hang itself in shame," he said.

In their private and public statements, administration officials believe that the critics have grossly misrepresented the substance and intent of constructive engagement.

Contrary to popular perception, the officials say, the administration has consistently said it finds apartheid "abhorrent" and has repudiated South Africa's policy of "denationalizing" its black population by declaring them citizens of so-called "homelands."

The administration also has said that South Africa's new constitution is "fundamentally flawed" because it denies political participation to the country's 73 percent black majority.

The constitution does offer limited enfranchisement of South Africa's "colored" and Asian populations for the first time. This, Crocker has said, is a step forward that was partly the result of the conscious U.S. effort to relax the siege mentality that he claimed had prevailed in South Africa at the time the Reagan administration took office.

Crocker, who heads the State Department's Africa bureau, also has noted that the South African government, in a departure from past policy, now says that a process of dialogue with black leaders should begin.

The core issue is whether black enfranchisement in South Africa would be speeded if the United States adopted a more confrontational policy, as liberal critics recommend, or whether such an approach encourages the Afrikaner establishment in Pretoria to dig in its heels, as the administration believes.

The critics say the United States should engage in economic warfare against South Africa by restricting American investment in the country and other measures.

Charlotte Firm Produces Exercise Trails For World

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Many people who run, vault, chin, stretch and wheeze their way through one of the exercise courses popping up around the world can thank a Charlotte company for their improved heartbeats and aching limbs.

Southwood Corp. has sent its "Fit-Trail" equipment to parks, hospitals and military bases around the globe, said spokesman Patty Chapman.

"We got 'em worldwide — Greece, Germany, throughout the United States, Japan, Bermuda, Italy, Australia and Guam," she said.

Ms. Chapman declined to give sales figures for Fit-Trail or for the redwood sign products also manufactured by Southwood. But she said the company has sold about 1,000 of the exercise courses — including about three dozen in North Carolina — at about $4,750 each.

Business is so good that Southwood's 64 employees are moving to a larger plant.

"We are probably one of the top three manufacturers in the country," she said. Other major exercise course makers include Par Course of San Francisco and Wells Fargo, which produces the "Gamefield" course.

The idea originated in Switzerland in the late 1960s when an insurance company built jogging paths with wooden exercise equipment stations spaced along the way. Fit-Trail, designed in the early 1970s with 32 exercises at 20 stations, was one of the first such trails in this country, said Ms. Chapman. The user runs from station to station, following direction signs on stretching, warmups, chinups, jumping jacks, body tucks, parallel bars, ladder walks, leg raises, sit-ups, bar jumps and cooling down.

"I have done it," said Ms. Chapman. "I thought I was in really good shape. But out there, I really felt it in a lot of places I didn't realize I had places."

The course, usually from 1 to 2 miles long, also has heartbeat check stations where the runner can stop and check his heart rate against a chart.

"It's amazing, the different kinds of people who are buying it," she said. "Hospitals are donating them to parks for wellness programs, there are a lot of them on military bases, and NASA in Florida has one. There are a lot of schools and colleges and corporations now getting into employee fitness programs."

Pharr Yarn in McAdenville, for example, is donating a Fit-Trail to the community, she said. Other corporations with the trail include IBM, Polaroid, Upjohn and Kimberly-Clark. The Camp Lejeune Marine base near Jacksonville has installed 10 courses. Hotels and resorts also have the exercise courses.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: MEAN LANDLORD'S FORMER WIFE NEEDED A NEW LEASE ON LIFE.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals G

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Interrogation

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Investigators have finished interrogating four men suspected of trying to kill a former Libyan premier but have not formally charged them, a senior security official said.

Ragaa El-Araby, chief state security prosecutor, said investigators are now interrogating "witnesses" and may have more questions for the two Britons and two Maltese who were arrested Nov. 17.

Israel Wants Toned-Down Ties With South Africans

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — With an eye on improving ties with black Africa, Israel is trying to edge back from its close ties with South Africa's apartheid regime.

As a nation founded by refugees who fled racial persecutions, Israel has always been uneasy about its relationship with the white supremacist regime in Pretoria, the South African capital.

The discomfort was aggravated by the fact that the National Party, which has governed South Africa since 1948, was founded by Nazi sympathizers.

Israeli officials say one reason ties with Pretoria are essential is to maintain contact with South Africa's 120,000-member Jewish community, which supports Israel financially and politically.

Ranging from special economic agreements to military cooperation, the relationship was enhanced as increasing world opprobrium focused on both nations — Israel for its policies toward the Palestinians and South Africa for its treatment of its black majority.

Israel is now trying to rebuild bridges to black Africa, but finds its efforts hindered by the ties with South Africa.

The South African connection is "the standard number one topic" in dealing with the black African nations, said Naomi Chazan, director of the African studies department at Hebrew University.

The Africans are legitimately sensitive toward the racial segregation of the apartheid system, she said in an interview, but it also "makes a good propaganda issue for unfriendly states to talk of the nefarious alliance."

Ms. Chazan said she believes the relationship is used as an excuse by some black African states not ready to break with the Afro-Arab bloc.

Israeli leaders denounce apartheid while defending diplomatic ties. In official policy statements, they have said Israel has links with other countries governed by objectionable regimes and cannot interfere in any nation's internal policies.

Addressing a meeting in New York with U.S. newspaper editors in October, Prime Minister Shimon Peres called the South African government "an idiotic regime that is not acceptable, and we as Jews have unequivocal reservations about it."

But Peres brushed aside Israel's military and economic ties as insignificant. He said Pretoria buys tanks from Britain, warplanes from France and even maintains diplomatic relations with some black African states.

Based on foreign reports, the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University said in a recent study that Israel had sold South Africa six missile boats along with Gabriel sea-to-sea missiles in 1977. It also has reportedly supplied a variety of smaller weapons and anti-guerrilla devices.

The government contends it has strictly abided by an arms embargo imposed later that year by the United Nations, but foreign reports cited by Ms. Chazan assert that Israeli training programs are continuing.

Israel's total trade with South Africa last year was $252 million, amounting to nearly two-thirds of Israel's trade with Africa, according to government figures.

But the figure has declined sharply in 1984, totalling only $88 million through the end of August.

Aubrey Berman, treasurer of the Israel-South Africa Chamber of Commerce, said in an interview the drop was a result of the crisis in Israel's construction industry and a fall in timber and steel imports. He maintained that the decline had nothing to do with politics.

Mutual economic benefit has been the linchpin of Israel-South African ties. Israel needs South Africa's raw materials, including coal for power. South Africa uses Israel as a conduit to Europe, exporting raw material and components to Israeli industry for re-export.

South Africa seems loath to relinquish its close ties to Israel.

Ignoring Israel's reticence, Foreign Minister R.F. (Pik) Botha of South Africa made a highly publicized private visit to Israel in early November. He met with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, but Prime Minister Peres pointedly avoided him.

Even so, the visit raised an outcry among Israeli leftists. Yair Tsaban, a parliament member, complained that Israel once supplied the weapons that South Africa now uses to suppress its black majority.

"I would want Israel to take morality into account in its affairs of state," he said in an Israel radio interview.

Family Yields To Economy and Weather, Sells Farm

HOLLY SPRINGS, S.C. (AP) — The sun is high in an ice blue sky, and the crisp fall air is perfect for deep, cleansing breaths.

Albert Jackson stands beneath this elegant shroud. He is dressed in the clothes of a laborer — plaid flannel shirt, khaki work pants and work boots. Dark hair laced with gray is cut in a perfect '50s flat top and active eyes survey the surroundings through thick-framed glasses.

"Some farmers worry, sit up all night watching temperatures," Jackson said. "The only thing that ever worried me was something I could do something about."

Over the years there have been a number of things Jackson couldn't control, including the declining demand for his cotton and the price.

One thing he sure couldn't control was the weather. A late freeze, an early frost, too much rain, too little rain. Two years running, his peach crop was about wiped out.

After a line of hail moved through Spartanburg County and wiped out the third peach crop in as many years, Jackson and his brother, Harold, decided to call it quits.

Tyger River Farms, the last major cotton grower in Spartanburg County, will be no more.

"It was something my brother and I had been thinking about for several years," Jackson admitted. "But when the hail wiped out the peach crop we definitely made the decision to get out."

As he spoke, muted rattles, jingles, grinds and hums came from a tin gray building. On the front of the building in fading black letters a sign reads: Lewis Jackson and Sons, Quality Ginned Cotton Always Sells.

The sounds were made by three 80-saw Lummus Cotton Gins and the pipes, stacks, belts, motors and pulleys which take cotton as it comes off the plant and prepare it to be woven into fabric.

Since Eli Whitney invented the gin in 1793, cotton has been a great part of the South's economic family, as it has with the Jackson family.

There have been other crops, peaches for example, but the foundation of Tyger River Farms since it was founded in 1926 by Lewis Jackson has been cotton, which for 55 years has been grown, harvested, ginned and sold to the same buyer.

That will end when the Lummus gins fall silent sometime in mid-December.

"The problem?" Jackson asked. "I would say high cost. The cost of fertilizer, equipment, insecticides. We (farmers) are at the mercy of buyers. We have no control over the market."

Back in the good old days, Jackson harvested and ginned as much as 2,000 bales of cotton, each bale weighing 400 to 600 pounds. The price then was around 80 cents a pound, while it now lounges in the low 60s.

"When he was deciding on a career, I advised my boy against farming," Jackson said. "I saw it coming. I told him to get out. No matter what he decided to do, if he made a dollar, it would be a dollar more than I've made in the last five years."

"There's always been the problems," he said. "I'm selling out, getting out of the farming business, getting into something less demanding."

"I guess it always looks better on the other side, but it can't be any worse than this ... I have to say I enjoyed it though."

Earlier in his office, Jackson had held up a four-page brochure. It looked like any piece of advertising mail, well-designed, commercially artistic, with the words accentuating the positive.

Only this brochure was different: It was advertising the sale of someone's life. A 2,500-acre farm that had been in a family for five generations was being sold by the government to pay off delinquent loans.

"I'm not going to wait around for that to happen to me," Jackson said.

So he and his brother are selling out. There is little emotion in his voice; if anything, there is relief.

But he added, "It is like a little part of me is dying."

FOCUS

Fascinatin' Rhythm

Ira Gershwin, born on December 6, 1896, wrote lyrics to many popular Broadway musicals of the 1920s and 1930s. One current Broadway hit, "My One and Only," is a revival of many Gershwin hits. Broadway musicals evolved from 19th-century operettas. Some archeologists say musical theatre may have begun as early as 10,000 B.C. One Stone Age cave painting, found in France, shows a man in a buffalo mask playing an instrument and dancing wildly amidst a herd of reindeer.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the longest-running musical in Broadway history?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Columbus was born in the Italian city of Genoa.
