Cold? It Was Only 21 Here

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's 21-degree low temperature this morning was a new record low for Dec. 7.

Jim Woods, weatherman for WNCN-TV, said the previous low recorded on Dec. 7 was 23 degrees.

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported Thursday's high at 45 degrees, while the low for Thursday was 28 degrees.

Rainfall for the 24-hour period ending at midnight Thursday amounted to .02 inches.

Utilities officials suggested the low temperature today contributed to a power outage which affected 1,000 to 1,200 customers in an area south and east, from Charles Street to Brook Valley, including such areas as Cherry Oaks, Windy Ridge, Quail Ridge and other developments.

Malcolm Green, superintendent of the GUC's electric department, said "something disturbed the circuit ... possibly a squirrel ..." serving the area from the East Carolina University substation to cause the interruption, which occurred about 6:50 a.m. Green noted that power was restored to most of the customers in "45 minutes or so," although he said "it might have been a little longer for a small number."

Green explained that the substation near the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street has been out of service since October 20 allow workers to "double the capacity" of the station. The load normally carried by the substation has been shifted to other substations, thereby increasing the load other stations must carry.

He said the combination of things, including heavy loads caused by today's low temperatures, and the disturbance — whatever its cause — contributed to the circuits served by the ECU substation off Ficklen Drive shutting down.

He said utility crews "made changes" this morning in an effort to prevent a similar occurrence until the substation on Greenville Boulevard is put back on-line later this month.

First Decline Since June

Jobless Rate Drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian joblessness fell to 7.2 percent last month, the first drop since June, as the creation of roughly 300,000 jobs pushed American employment to an all-time high, the government said today.

With a record 105.9 million Americans holding jobs, the labor force resumed its dramatic improvement after a four-month period of practically standstill unemployment, the Labor Department said.

As overall employment set a record, the ranks of those officially listed as jobless plunged by approximately 275,000, from 8.43 million to 8.15 million.

The November report was the brightest since unemployment fell from 7.5 percent to 7.1 percent in June. The jobless rate, however, bounced back to 7.5 percent and stayed in that range through October.

An alternate unemployment rate, which combines the 114-million civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, fell even more dramatically, from 7.3 percent to 7.0 percent.

Since national civilian joblessness hit a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982, with more than 12 million people listed as unemployed, some 6.8 million jobs have been created, principally service jobs in areas such as retail, hotel, restaurant, hospital, banking and insurance.

Government figures also show that since November 1983, when the jobless rate was 8.4 percent, total employment has grown by 3.2 million while the roster of the unemployed has shrunk by 1.3 million.

In testimony prepared for delivery to the congressional Joint Economic Committee, the director of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, noted that a separate survey of business establishments not used in compiling the unemployment rate showed the addition of about 300,000 jobs in November, approximating the job-growth figures reflected in the department's random survey of 60,000 households that is used to compile the unemployment rate.

Ms. Norwood said that November labor market developments continued "the pick-up in employment which began in September following slow growth during the summer."

But she also said that "indeed, there has been virtually no growth in factory jobs since the summer." Only about 19.7 million of the record 105.9 million jobs last month were in manufacturing industries.

On the eve of today's announcement, analysts said that many corporation executives feel confident of continued job growth through the remainder of this year and well into 1985.

Greenville Man Missed Breakfast During '41 Raid

By NANCY CROFT

Hawaii is well known for her legends and native mythology. One such legend tells of the benevolent shark goddess Kahupau, whose sharks protected man from evil spirits. The shark goddess made her home in the sacred waters of Puuloa. We know those sacred waters as Pearl Harbor, but its magic spirits were no match for the 353 Japanese planes, 33 ships and five submarines that made their historic attack on Dec. 7, 1941.

To baby-boomers, the event at Pearl Harbor is respected as merely a lesson in the history books. For many of those who lived through that era, the tragedy has faded into safer recesses of the mind.

Though the waters of Pearl Harbor have long since quieted, the Sunday of Dec. 7, 1941, still echoes in the memory of Jesse C. Moore, a native of Pitt County and a resident of Greenville. In a cardboard box on his coffee table is a shuffle of newspaper clippings, photographs from his stay in Honolulu and even a menu from Thanksgiving dinner 1941. "I don't know why, exactly, but I sent all of this home before the Pearl Harbor attack," Moore said. Ninety-four American ships were in the harbor, and over 2,000 military men were killed during the first 30 minutes of the Japanese attack. Nearly 70 civilians were killed nearby. Hospitals in Honolulu were overflowing. Local schools were converted to hospitals to care for the wounded, while teams of doctors, nurses and aides worked 24 hours a day for 10 days following the attack.

America was thrust into World War II.

The Japanese had been planning their Pearl Harbor strategy for two or three years. 67-year-old Moore said, yet the actual attack came as a surprise to the Navy. Two two-man submarines even penetrated the harbor undetected while the sub nets were open for passing ships.

Moore, who was a fireman 1st class on the USS Utah, recalled, "I was fixing to eat breakfast when the first torpedo hit. When I went up topside to see what was going on, I saw planes and smoke and bombs. They (the Japanese) huddled over us so fast, we didn't even get a chance to mount our guns."

The Utah was used as a mobile target ship — its deck constructed of timber and cement for protection against the practice bombs dropped

Tar Heel Veterans Remember Pearl Harbor

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

It is now just seven years short of half a century ago that Imperial Japanese Air Force planes, based on ships in a secret task force in the Pacific near Hawaii, made their infamous sneak attack on the huge American naval installation at Pearl Harbor and nearby U.S. Army and Air Force installations on land.

At the time of the attack on Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941, nearly 100 naval vessels were stationed at the giant naval facility. Eight of this fleet were battleships. By a stroke of good luck, the American superships — the aircraft carriers — were at sea.

On sea and on land, more than 2,200 American military men died, with well over 1,000 wounded. The Navy suffered the greatest toll in the loss of lives, with 2,000 deaths. The Army loss in lives was a little more than 200. The greatest tragedy was the direct hit on the USS Arizona, which sank immediately, carrying to their death 1,102 sailors. Two other battleships, the West Virginia and the Oklahoma, were destroyed.

The Japanese, in contrast, lost less than 100 men, 29 small aircraft, and five midget submarines. Their task force was able to escape without being attacked by the badly crippled American fleet. Today, a white concrete-steel structure spans the hull of the sunken ship as a national memorial to those who died.

Of the several thousand servicemen stationed at Pearl Harbor and at nearby Army barracks and Air Force fields, about 300 of the total were North Carolinians.

Today, 43 years after the attack, many of the North Carolinian survivors of the attack on Pearl Harbor are members of the statewide Pearl Harbor Survivor's Association of North Carolina.

Following their usual custom, they are remembering that tragic Sunday by gathering together to renew old acquaintances and to recall their personal role in the horrors of what would normally have been another quiet Sunday in the balmy Hawaiian Islands.

This year, the Pearl Harbor Day meeting of the association will be held Saturday in Lumberton.

Atwood Gurganus of Greenville, a survivor who is active in coordinating activities of the association, says "we expect to have about 80 survivors present for this year's meeting in Lumberton. Some of the survivors are now dead," he added, "and others have lost contact with the association. A number of the known Tar Heel survivors are now living in Pitt and Martin counties."

As a reminder to the public to remember Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, Greenville Mayor Janice Buck has signed a proclamation in which she urges "every citizen of this community to recall this day and to observe its recurrence with sober contemplation of the nation's objectives now being undertaken and to take the necessary steps to insure that such a day of infamy shall never again be permitted."

Mayor Buck, in the proclamation, also recalls that on Dec. 7, 1941, "our great nation became the victim of an aggressive power taking full advantage of our lack of preparedness and our unfounded faith of the intentions of our fellow men."

Citizens old enough to remember the attack will recall the shock of disbelief that followed the news of the attack first made public in a radio broadcast by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The attack ended America's reluctance to become embroiled in the escalating wars that had been raging in Asia since the early 1930s and in Europe since the autumn of 1939 — the conflict now known as World War II. The next day, Dec. 8, 1941, Congress simultaneously declared war on Japan and Germany.

The majority of the American public quickly rallied to the support of the American war effort. Shipyards and many factories made the changeover from the production of civilian goods to begin an unprecedented outpouring of military weapons and supplies. Numerous young men enlisted, not waiting to be drafted. Thousands of women replaced men in jobs in factories, and entertainment celebrities toured every state selling War Bonds. Songwriter Irving Berlin, noted for his patriotic composition, "God Bless America," came up with a now mostly forgotten song, "Any Bonds Today?"

First Place Awards Received By Pitt County Farm Bureau

Two first place awards, public relations and women's program, were presented to the Pitt County Farm Bureau in Winston-Salem this week at the 49th annual meeting of N.C. Farm Bureau.

The women's award is given for excellence of achievement in 1984. The purpose of the award is to encourage county farm bureaus to provide additional leadership opportunities and to further enable women to be active participants in the total farm bureau program.

The local women developed a special program of work to include compiling an achievement book to record total county accomplishments, worked with all county high schools on applications for the R. Flake Shaw Memorial Scholarship program and participated in Farm-City Week by continuing their annual Farm City breakfast. In addition they organized a safety program "Drive on Country Roads" and participated in the State Women's Leadership Conference and N.C. Safety Council annual meeting.

Lois Briley is chairman of the women's committee in Pitt County. The award presentation was made by Ruth Cherry.

Helen Wooten is chairman of the publicity committee. Special projects carried out this year included the annual Farm-City breakfast and distribution of materials throughout the county. Farm bureau leaders appeared on television numerous times and news releases of upcoming events were submitted to the county's newspapers and broadcast media. Posters, bumper stickers, brochures and a booth at the county fair were among the ways the rural roads safety program was promoted.

Roast Duck Is Welcome Change For Christmas

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

If you are weary of feasting turkey or goose on your yuletide menu, how about a nice roast duck?

Duck goes very well with holiday fare. I've found, and you don't have to worry much about leftovers.

If you are a hunter, ducks abound in most bodies of water. But make sure there are no local laws against shooting. And, above all, keep in mind that a duck which lives on salt water usually feeds there and has a fish taste that takes a lot of marinating in wine to tone down. If you still want to bag your own bird, try if possible to go to a fresh-water area where they have been feeding on wild grain.

Long Island, where I live, has plenty of salt water ducks which live in the Sound, but the island is also the center of America's duck-raising industry. These captive white Pekings, descended from birds brought here from China more than a century ago, usually have a delicious flavor.

Some cooks fill wild duck with celery, onion and sliced apple, then let it stand in the refrigerator for a day or two. Then they remove this filling before popping the bird in the oven.

Others stuff their catch with raisins, wild rice and orange juice or white wine before roasting. One cook I know who lives on the Sound stuffs a wild bird with sliced onion and lemon quarters and keeps it in the refrigerator overnight. Then she discards this filling and stuffs the bird with sauerkraut that has been marinated in red wine for a couple of days, and puts it in the oven.

Unless you are an expert, it is well to skip wild birds for such an important meal and go to your butcher, who will give you a mild-flavored bird that requires no marinating. Here is a recipe I like.

- 1 Pekin duckling, about 5 pounds
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped cooked prunes
- 1 cup seedless raisins
- 1 cup white wine

- 1/4 cup minced onions
- 1 1/2 cups diced celery
- 1 1/2 cups cooked rice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon thyme

In skillet, melt butter. Add prunes, raisins, wine, onions and celery and saute until tender, about 5 minutes. Add rice and seasonings. Toss. Stuff neck and body cavity of bird. Roast uncovered in 325-degree oven about 3 hours. Serves 4. Good with a chilled rose wine.

Riding Gives Disabled Children Confidence

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — It's hard to keep kids away from ponies, and the children in the ASTRIDE class are no different when they reach the equestrian ring at a Merced area ranch.

But these youngsters are different from most.

They are disabled. One suffered brain damage in a car accident, another has spina bifida, and another has Down's syndrome.

ASTRIDE stands for Academy for Special Therapeutic Ride. The free program offers horseback riding lessons to physically and mentally disabled children.

"Riding provides the feeling of freedom, confidence, excitement and accomplishment for the handicapped person," said ASTRIDE director Lois Knoll, who coordinates the program at a ring next to her ranch house.

"The motion of the horse moves the rider back and forward and side to side, causing the rider to learn to compensate for this motion and adjust his balance," she explained.

The class is the high point of the week for Christen Cameron, a brown-haired 6-year-old girl with spina bifida.

"We wouldn't miss Tuesday evenings because we are reminded of it all week long," said her mother, Sandra, who adopted Christen when she was 4 months old after the spinal cord defect was apparent.

"She may forget therapy and swimming lessons, but she won't forget riding lessons," Mrs. Cameron said. "As soon as we get in the car, she is bubbling like a magpie."

Thomas Sullivan was leaning on the arena gate as his 8-year-old daughter, Katie, rode. She suffered a damaging blow to the left side of her head in a traffic collision that claimed the driver of the other car's life four years ago.

"These kids have limited occasion to smile," he said, as Katie worked to perfect her balance.

"Riding is therapeutic," noted Mrs. Knoll. "It will strengthen muscles and develop muscle control, balance and coordination. It also helps develop self-confidence and attention span for both the physically and mentally handicapped."

Tony Huish, 10, has Down's syndrome. He advanced in his sixth class to riding with breakaway stirrups.

"It doesn't look like much for Tony to handle the reins and squeeze his knees against the horse," admitted

Mrs. Knoll, a kindergarten instructor who used to teach special education. "But it took six weeks to bring him to this point."

She and her husband, Mike, developed the program on the advice of Christine McPharland of Sacramento, vice president of the North America Riding Handicapped Association. The program is supported by donations.

Her son, Josh, inadvertently was helpful in choosing the horse and two ponies for the program.

"One of the horses took Josh by the shirt and lifted him upright with his teeth. Immediate disqualification," Mrs. Knoll said. For the chosen three, "We ran at them with wheelbarrows, threw coats on their backs and pretended to fall off to see if they would stop."

The horses were trained to ignore wheelchairs, crutches and a ramp used by the children for mounting.

The animals also must be calm enough to tolerate three adults hemming them in: two beside the horse holding onto straps around a rider's waist and one in the lead.

"Our goals are safety, enjoyment and a sense of achievement for the riders," Mrs. Knoll said.

Mobley-Sorrell Wedding Vows Spoken Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Phyllis Marlene Sorrell and Ralph Summral Mobley Jr. took place Saturday in the Highland Baptist Church in Garner. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Carlton McDaniels.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Billy Howard Sorrell of Garner and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Summral Mobley Sr. of Robersonville.

A program of wedding music was presented by a five-member string ensemble directed by Phyllis Garriss. Soloist was Susan Waters of Garner.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white tissue taffeta designed with an open portrait neckline. The bodice and long puff sleeves were styled with alencon lace overlays embellished with seed pearls and crystal beads. Covered button closures trimmed the back of the gown to the waist. The full princess skirt extended to a chapel sweep train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was encircled with matching lace. It was accented with chapel length silk illusion and both were secured to an alencon lace and pearl covered cap. She carried a bouquet of cymbidium orchids, rubrum lilies, pink butterfly roses and baby's breath accented with twining ivy.

Cathey Cottle, sister of the bride, was the honor attendant. She wore a tea length gown of amethyst chiffon over taffeta with a high scoop neckline. The fitted bodice featured a basque waist. She carried a bouquet of minuet roses, carmen alstromeria, snow crystal chrysanthemums and baby's breath tied with satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Lisa Sorrell of Boone, sister of the bride; Suzanne Mobley of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom; Amy George of Garner; Jan Hylton of Durham; and Becky Parrish of Baton Rouge, La. Their gowns and flowers were identical to those of the matron of honor.

Honorary bridesmaids were Genny Kirby of Richmond and Cammie Emery of Garner, sisters of the bride. They carried long-stemmed roses.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were James Barnhill and Michael Matthews, both of Robersonville, Edward Warren of Williamson, John Miller of Charlotte and Joe Rucker of Raleigh.

Following the ceremony, a champagne reception was given by the parents of the bride at Heather Hills Club. Music was provided by a five-member string ensemble.

The bride attended North Carolina State University and is an administrative assistant at Grainger Laboratories in Raleigh. The bridegroom received a degree in chemistry from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a degree in civil engineering from

MRS. MOBLEY

N.C. State University. He is an environmental engineer with the N.C. State Department of Human Resources in Raleigh.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

Pre-wedding parties included a bridesmaids luncheon Friday at the Side Street Restaurant in Raleigh given by the bride's sisters; an after-rehearsal cocktail hour at the Mission Valley Inn given by the bridegroom's sister and grandmother, an after-rehearsal dinner given by the family of the bridegroom; and other gatherings.

Baked Fennel & Salad
Pineapple Mousse & Coffee

BAKED FENNEL
1 large bulb fennel
2 tablespoons butter
1-3rd cup freshly grated
Parmesan cheese
Freshly grated white pepper to taste

Cut long stems from fennel close to bulb; discard stems. The bulb's outer layer will come off by itself; discard. Cut bulb into 1/4-inch-thick slices and rinse. In a saucepan cook fennel, covered with boiling water, until it has lost its raw look — about 5 minutes; drain. Arrange fennel neatly in a buttered rectangular baking dish and dot with most of the butter; sprinkle with Parmesan; dot with remaining butter. Sprinkle with pepper. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven about 20 minutes or until top is golden. Serves 4. Adapted from "Cooking for Company" by Hedy Giusti-Lanham (Barron's).

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in dating men who have the same thing in common with me, but how do you find them? Let me explain. I am not yet 30, and I've had a hysterectomy. All the men whom I have dated get serious to the point of proposing marriage and speak of raising a family. I feel less than a woman and must discontinue the relationship because I cannot have children.

If I could meet men who have had vasectomies, I wouldn't feel so useless. We could marry and adopt children.

I need to know now where to find these men. Can you help me?

UNHAPPY IN COLUMBIA, MO.

DEAR UNHAPPY: Several years ago a reader suggested that all men who have had vasectomies should wear a small "V" on the heels of their shoes in order to identify themselves. (It never caught on; most women never saw it, and those who did thought the "V" was for Virgin.)

In any case, quit searching for vasectomized men, and please don't feel "less of a woman" because you've had a hysterectomy.

When talk of "raising a family" begins, you can speak your piece. No man worth his salt, excluding royalty, would refuse to marry a woman because she couldn't bear a child any more than a woman would turn down a man because he couldn't give her one.

DEAR ABBY: Please make room for this open letter to those who instigate gift-giving within the office:

"Dear Generous One: Next time you get the urge to collect money from your fellow workers for a gift to Joe or Jane, please keep in mind that not everybody in the office makes as much money as you. Others may have expenses or bills that you don't know about. Ten bucks may not sound like much to you, but to me, it's gas money for a week.

"So instead of coming around and telling people that they need to reimburse you for the gift you have already bought, try sending around an envelope first, and let everybody contribute what he or she can afford. Then you can have the thrill of purchasing a gift for Joe from 'the office gang.'"

Abby, I'm really worked up about this because my husband just started a new job five months ago, and every other week he's been hit up for money for flowers, gifts, parties, etc. for a co-worker who is either sick, retiring, being transferred, had a baby, or celebrating a birthday or anniversary. He was never asked how much he could give—he was just told to come up with the money.

Please publish this before the holidays, or God knows what it will cost us.

ANGRY WIFE IN MICHIGAN

DEAR WIFE: Here's your letter. I hope it makes an impression.

DEAR ABBY: Our 16-year-old son has recently been placed in a state facility due to many problems at home and with the law. We try to be supportive and include him in the family as much as possible.

My question: Do I include his name on our holiday greeting cards? He's still a part of our family even though he doesn't live with us. We don't want to leave him out, but neither do we want to give an incorrect impression as to his residence.

IN DOUBT

DEAR IN DOUBT: You most certainly should include your son's name on your holiday cards. Regardless of where he is, he's still "family." Those close to you know where he is; don't worry about misleading others.

December 7

For something a little over 40 years speakers and the news media have felt obligated to remind everyone that Dec. 7 marked "Pearl Harbor Day." The memory has been kept evergreen.

In recent years we have sensed a waning of interest in the commemoration. So many of those who shared the shock of that 1941 surprise attack have left the earthly scene; and there have been subsequent crises, disasters and mightily distracting events that impressed themselves on our consciousness. They beclouded the past.

Too, time heals many wounds.

Historians help in the process. They have added to knowledge not then widely shared among multitudes of Americans whose immediate reaction was a long-abiding fury.

In succeeding decades that knowledge brought perspective and understanding which contributed to a cooling of popular passions.

It would be no surprise if in another decade or so that once-famed "day of infamy" would be little more than just another textbook date for children to remember.

Spirit

Santa Claus arrives in Scuffleton Saturday forenoon, riding a fire truck. The fire truck represents one part of Scuffleton's first-ever Christmas parade featuring 57 entries.

So?

There's more to it than that.

Scuffleton is a tiny community of maybe 20 -to-25 families in what you might call a cluster just inside Greene County from Pitt, on and south of N.C. 903. A tornado wiped out more than half the homes last March and damaged many of the others. Last summer the General Assembly also wiped out Scuffleton's town charter (which had been inactive many years — no mayor, no town government).

Following the tornado people got together to clean up the mess and rebuild. Today, there are few traces of twister damage.

Now Santa's coming, and he's going to find there's little he can give them that they haven't already got. We think it's wonderful.

A new town charter?

Shucks, they don't need it. They've got each other.

A Search To Soothe Mankind's Fears

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting them to talk was no mean trick, but now that the United States and the Soviet Union are set to meet next month, the question is whether they can do much to allay mankind's nuclear fears.

At best, the Jan. 7-8 session in Geneva will be an icebreaker — cutting through the distrust that has frozen negotiations to reduce U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons for more than a year.

It could be argued that the Soviets had no option but to propose the talks once President Reagan was re-elected. Otherwise, the deadlock would remain, with the onus on Moscow for causing the breakdown by walking out in the first place.

Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko sent the message to the White House in mid-November that reopened the dialogue. The Soviet leader also had taken two major initiatives a few months earlier by proposing space talks and sending Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko here to meet with Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

And yet, less than a month before the Shultz-Gromyko meeting, neither side seems prepared for the kind of concessions that could lead to an early accord. Their goals are too dissimilar at this point.

The Soviets, for instance, are determined to block the administration's Star Wars research program on missile defenses, while the United States refuses to declare a moratorium on anti-satellite tests or to delay the deployment of new missiles in Western Europe.

The Soviet edge in warheads apparently is increasing. According to figures released earlier this week by the State Department, Moscow has 387 mobile SS-20s deployed, and at least 10 new missile bases under construction.

The United States has installed 91 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Britain, Italy and West Germany in a year. NATO's idea in authorizing the deployment in 1979 was to balance the Soviet SS-20 arsenal, but that has more than doubled since the decision was made.

So, unless an agreement can materialize, the Reagan administration has every incentive to keep going until all 572 missiles are in place. The Soviets, meanwhile, won't sit still.

The futile competition escalates, and an arms control agreement is shunted aside in the process.

A treaty slashing arms arsenals clearly will not come out of the talks between Shultz and Gromyko. Their job is to construct — in Reagan's phrase — a "framework" for understanding. But having Paul H. Nitze, the veteran U.S. negotiator, at Shultz's side gives the Geneva meeting additional significance.

The 77-year-old conservative Democrat brought a hard-liner's reputation with him to the Reagan administration. But his "walk in the woods" with Soviet negotiator Yuli Kvitsinsky in 1982 brought the two sides closer than they ever have been to an accord.

Instead of insisting the Soviets dismantle all their SS-20s, it would have had them scale down to 300 warheads and held the U.S. deployment to an equal level — with the potent Pershings kept out of Europe.

His appointment as special adviser — and his readiness to meet with a Soviet counterpart after Shultz and Gromyko are done — is an overture that will not be lost on the Kremlin. He is there to demonstrate U.S. flexibility.

How the Soviets choose to respond is not clear.

Chernenko, in a letter published Wednesday, said he hoped the Shultz-Gromyko meeting would lead to "mutually acceptable understandings" on nuclear and space weapons. The conciliation was tempered, however, by Chernenko's reference to "the entire set of questions related to nuclear and space weapons."

That is a tall order, and leaves plenty of room for posturing and public relations. It also means the talks could bog down on an almost infinite number of issues.

Chernenko told visiting American industrialist Armand Hammer on Tuesday that it would be "desirable" for the United States and NATO to commit themselves not to be first to use nuclear arms.

That, in the diplomatic jargon, is a non-starter.

The Western allies have declined to make a formal commitment for years on the ground it would be meaningless. The United Nations Charter already implicitly rules out first use.

Unless the United States and the Soviet Union settle soon on negotiable issues, the Geneva meeting could be just another top-level meeting that did not pan out.

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

State Holds The High Cards

WASHINGTON — When one high-level arms-control skeptic learned that the White House has pigeonholed new findings of Soviet treaty violations, his complaint of being "mau-maued" to death accurately described the plight of hard-liners inside the administration out-flanked by the stampeding pace of the arms control offensive.

The Senate had mandated President Reagan to report on violations by Dec. 1. Nevertheless, James Baker III, White House chief of staff, has delayed it until after next month's talks in Geneva between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko so as not to anger the Russians.

That delay shows that the State Department, where concern over antagonizing Moscow runs deep, holds the high cards. To specialists in the Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency, Baker's decision conveyed an attitude of timidity and excessive eagerness to please.

Baker's Shultz-backed delay went through the bureaucratic mill so quietly for only one reason: Pentagon and CIA weapons and intelligence specialists are too busy trying to prepare a U.S. position for Geneva to engage in heavy bureaucratic hostilities.

That also explains the lack of resistance thus far to the imminent appointment of arms control elder statesman Paul Nitze as the president's "special ambassador" and chief negotiator following Shultz's opening talks. Although he is widely respected, Nitze's tendency to operate and negotiate on his own in the past has raised eyebrows among arms-control hard-liners. A prime example was his 1983 "walk in the woods" informal negotiations in Vienna with Yuli Kvitsinsky, rejected in both Washington and Moscow but providing Walter Mondale's campaign ammunition for a year.

The pre-Geneva task of prepping Shultz, whose lack of familiarity with nuclear weapons has surprised Pentagon experts, has proved awesome. It leaves no time for other activities by the administration's in-house critics of easy-come arms control agreements.

These specialists are now sweating out separate negotiating concessions on outer-space defense systems, offensive strategic arms and Europe-based intermediate weapons to be ready for Shultz in two weeks. "They've hit us with incredible time restraints, so much that we can't even move against delaying the violations report or anything else," the high-level arms-control skeptic told us. "We're being mau-maued to death."

Baker has agreed to let the president send a letter to the Senate with a secret summary of the 19 Soviet violations and a statement that the full report will be sent to Congress on Feb. 1. If then, why not now? The answer lies in White House sensitivity to endangering a resumption of the arms control process.

What's Between Macho And Wimp?

Whether we want to admit it or not there are serious emotional problems in the new man-woman relationships.

Peter Gastonernough, a young friend, asked me a very strange question the other day. "Do you think I'm a wimp?"

"I don't believe so. Why do you ask?"

My girlfriend thinks I am."

"Why does she think that?"

Because she says I'm indecisive and I don't know what she wants."

"Did you ask her what she wanted?"

"Yes, and she said if I didn't know what she wanted then I must be a wimp."

"You have a problem. Do you have any idea of the way she wants you to behave?"

"I think she wants me to be strong and assertive and masculine."

"Have you tried it?"

Every time I do, she says I don't treat her as an equal. She maintains the days of pushing women around are over. She wants me to respect her feelings.

"Have you told her you do?"

"Yes, and then she calls me a wimp."

Are you sure this girl is for you?"

"We're very much in love, but there is a not more going on than I bargained for. It's not easy being a man today, he said.

"We're all aware of that. Perhaps you should tell her your feelings and the problems you have satisfying her."

"If I told her my feelings, she would think I was a weak person."

"Well, she already thinks you are a wimp, so you really don't have much to lose."

"I could lose her respect."

"How did you get in this mess in the first place?"

"I think it had something to do with consciousness raising. When we first met she said I was nothing but a macho jock, and if I didn't change my attitude she'd never see me again. So I made an effort to change. When she wanted to do something, I left the decision to her. At first she liked the role I was playing, but pretty soon she got ticked off and asked why she had to make the decisions for both of us."

That may have been a sinall.

Women may pretend they like it, but mhey're much happier when someone makes a decision for them."

"I'm aware of that. But I spoiled her. Now when I make a decision, she gets mad and says it's only fair that since we're partners she should have as much of a say as I do."

"I asked her if she really meant what she was saying, and she told me she was tired of always being questioned."

"On the basis of our conversation, she seems to enjoy making life miserable for you."

"I don't think so. I believe she's as confused as I am. It's not easy being a woman these days."

"We all know that. Why don't you take the bull by the horns and go back to being the macho jock you were before?"

"I don't think she'd stand for it. She's very much into being a liberated woman."

"Which means?"

"Even if she accepted it, her girlfriends would never forgive her."

"There has to be something between macho and wimp," I said. "What happend to the new liberated man?"

"We cry alot."

Strength For Today

"Man is the only animal that laughs and weeps; for he is the only animal that is struck with the difference between what things are and what they ought to be."

The great essayist, Wiulliam Hazlitt, wrote those words many generations ago. The statement might be called a thumbnail biography of mankind. Unlike the animals, we are made in the image and after the likeness of God. Animals are to be dominated and utilized. We, on the other hand, have the capacity to be on terms of friendship and fellowship with our Creator. We are able to look at life and think of it in terms of eternal destiny.

Schools Face A Mandate From Raleigh

RALEIGH — The State Board of Education's proposed basic education program certainly got a big boost when the Legislature's Education Policy Council accepted and endorsed it. But before the plan takes effect, it must be approved by the General Assembly and there it will face skeptics likely to raise both practical and philosophical opposition.

For years, North Carolina has talked about equal education for all its children. But that equality doesn't exist, even though the state Constitution demands it. Schools in poor counties and in remote areas simply cannot afford to offer the curriculum that the metropolitan counties offer. The basic education program seeks to change that. All students would be guaranteed a minimum curriculum which would be funded by the state.

That is the positive way of looking at the basic education program. Skeptics might see it as an effort to supplant local decision-making with mandates from Raleigh. The basic education program is just that, a mandate from Raleigh on courses, class size, facilities and even, to an extent, promotion policy.

The sparsely populated, rural areas which are most likely to benefit from the increased funding the basic education program carries are also most likely to send legislators to Raleigh who will be upset by the usurpation of local control. There has been no indication, as of yet, as to how vocal this opposition may be — if it arises at all. In fact, one rural legislator, Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, a very conservative famer, expressed interest in the program at a recent legislative meeting saying he knew children in his area were not getting as good an education as that available in the Triangle.

Another philosophical question likely to arise is flexibility. This is supposed to be a uniform program and it currently includes little flexibility for local school boards. Howard Maniloff of the State Department of Public Instruction says it may have to be amended to accommodate local concerns. (For example, dance is a required arts course. Some North Carolinians have religious objections to dancing and accommodations need to be developed for those people.)

Flexibility in the arts program is Gov.-elect Jim Martin's main criticism. In an interview, Martin said students not interested in the arts shouldn't be required to take those courses.

Certain to be a very hot topic of debate is the very practical argument of how quickly such a program could be implemented. There are several limiting factors.

Money is the main one. The program, if enacted in full next year, would add $691 million to the state budget. If spread over six years, the program would cost an additional $115 million a year (not adjusted for inflation). If implemented over eight years, it would cost $86 million a year. The Legislature has to decide how much the state can afford.

Even if the money is available, the program couldn't be enacted too quickly because the classrooms and teachers are not.

The program, when fully implemented, would require 11,000 new teachers at a time when there is a teacher shortage. Move too quickly and the state will find itself hiring unqualified people.

Currently, the state's public school facilities are considered "woefully inadequate" in many areas.

Raid ...

on her by American planes. During the attack, the Utah was the object of heavy fire by the Japanese, who mistook her for the cruiser Saratoga, according to Moore. It took only eight minutes for the Utah to sink after being the target of three torpedos and two bombs, and was the first ship to capsize.

"I didn't think the ship was sunk, but then everybody started bailing over," Moore remembered. "People were running up and down, trying to help people who had been shot ... there were dead people lying all around. It was terrible."

Though 461 men survived the sinking of the Utah, 58 were either crushed by the ship's timber, shot by the enemy or trapped inside the hull. One or two of the men were cut from one of the lower decks after someone heard them banging for help, noted Moore, who bailed overboard.

"I jumped off and hit the slick side of the ship where it overturned. And while I was swimming to shore, the Japs were strafing us and bombing us," Moore stated. He remembers watching the bombs fall from the planes, "looking like they were coming right at you." Once on the beach, Moore hid in a ditch for some time before seeking refuge in a building nearby. "They bombed us for about 2 1/2 hours and I watched everything."

By 1 p.m. all but 29 of the 353 Japanese planes were back aboard their carriers en route to Japan. But the Americans at Pearl Harbor were less fortunate. Moore recalls approximately 20,000 people with no shelter or clothing, lining up 24 hours a day for food. Those not injured badly, like Moore, stayed on the island to do chores before being shipped out to war. "There was a lot of burying to do," he said.

After three days, Moore was assigned to the heavy cruiser New Orleans, which undertook several battles in Guadalcanal. Moore spent most of the war in a sub-chaser, patrolling the Atlantic for German submarines and was in the Philippines when the war ended. After retiring from the Navy in 1950, Moore spent 10 years in the Fleet Reserves. He recently retired from 26 years of working as a powered support systems mechanic for the Voice of America headquarters not far from Greenville.

Moore jokes about Pearl Harbor's long-term effect on him: "I don't buy anything made in Japan." Yet the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association (PHSA) bumper plate on his meticulously polished blue 1981 Cadillac indicates a more serious attitude.

The organization numbers over 20,000 members bonded together by the knowledge they survived a great American holocaust. Anyone within 10 miles of Pearl Harbor during the attack is eligible to join the national association, which meets once a year in different U.S. cities. This year they met in Grossingered, N.Y., on Dec. 4. Every five years the convention is held in Pearl Harbor. Besides electing officers and discussing business for the coming year, Moore said, "We get together and see old friends — some we haven't seen in 30 or 40 years." The PHSA also publishes a quarterly newsletter, informing members of individual chapters' activities and business. North Carolina's chapter has a membership of around 70 survivors who meet three times a year.

Moore says that, perhaps, the greatest lesson learned from Pearl Harbor is stated by the PHSA's motto: "Remember Pearl Harbor — Keep America Alert." He warns, "You just never know. That ought to be a hint for people to learn to live with one another."

Call Meeting

The Greenville City Council will conduct a special call meeting at 5:30 p.m. Monday in the first floor conference room of City Hall to consider a resolution creating a Medical District Land Use Study Committee and appointing committee members.

Immediately following the call session, the council will conduct an agenda workshop meeting to review the proposed agenda for its regular monthly meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in third floor council chambers. City Hall is located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Honor Society

Five students at East Carolina University have been initiated into ECU's Tau chapter of Phi Sigma Pi national honor society.

New members are junior Kathryn Lindsey of Jamesville, and sophomores Leigh Ann Doub of Pfafftown, Clara Ellis of Fuquay-Varina, Melody O'Brien of Oxford, and Lee Ann Weeks of Newton Grove.

District Officers

Two Ayden-Grifton students have been elected to district offices in the North Carolina High School Library Students' Library Association.

Camille Dixon, a junior, was elected district vice president, and Delores Williams, a junior, was elected treasurer at the organization's recent northeastern district convention in Williamston.

Jenkins Selected

Peggy Jenkins, a junior at North Pitt High School, has been selected to participate in a medical careers program for minority students at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Wake Forest University.

The program involves a weekend awareness conference at Bowman Gray for the participants and their parents, individualized long-range plans and independent study projects for each participant, and a two-week summer program at Wake Forest University.

Miss Jenkins will attend the summer program, which features patient care, clinical research and the function of physicians, in 1985. After the program, participants will continue with their independent study projects and will be tracked by project staff through the remainder of high school and into undergraduate school. One or more programs per year will be organized to bring participants back to the Bowman Gray campus.

Miss Jenkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Altona Jenkins of Washington, D.C., and resides with her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Wall of Bethel. She ranks number one, academically, in a class of 173 students.

Driver Charged

Greenville police charged William Henry Clark of Winterville with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 4:18 p.m. collision Thursday on Memorial Drive, 200 feet north of the N.C. 33 intersection.

Officers said the Clark car collided with a vehicle driven by Eunice Gooding Parson of 104B Emma's Place, causing $300 damage to the Clark car and $400 damage to the Parson vehicle.

Thefts Probed

Greenville police are investigating four thefts reported to the department Thursday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a fish tuner, two telephones and other items were taken from 1308 Cotanche St. in a break-in reported at 8:35 a.m., while Detective N.L. Garrish said five gas water heaters were taken from a Greenville Housing Authority storage area at 1103 Broad St. in an incident reported at 10 a.m.

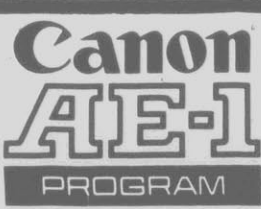

Officer K.A. Bedell said a kerosene heater, valued at $125, was taken from 1300 Ward St. in a break-in reported at 7:09 p.m. Officer W.R. McLawhorn said a pocketbook, wallet, jewelry and clothing, valued at $102, were taken from a car parked at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 401 E. Fourth St. in an incident reported at 8:06 p.m.

Armed Robbery

Winterville police are investigating an armed robbery reported at the Fresh Way Food Store on Mill Street about 12:55 a.m. today.

Officer Paul Scott said a man, armed with a rifle and wearing a ski mask over his face, entered the store and took about $144 from the cash register, then left on foot. Scott said the robber was last seen running behind the store.

Pitt County Sheriff's deputies are assisting in the investigation.

Walstonburg Parade

The Walstonburg Christmas parade will be Sunday at 3 p.m. Approximately 85-100 units are expected to participate. Peggy D. Gray is chairman of the event, sponsored by the Walstonburg Women's Club.

Lamaze Party

Greenville ASP/Lamaze will hold its annual Christmas party Sunday from 2-4 p.m. in the Jaycee Park auditorium.

Parents are invited to bring tagged gifts for their children. Santa Claus will be present to deliver the gifts. For more information call Laura Kesler at 752-1952.

Orphanage Donation

Masons from William Pitt Lodge recently traveled to Oxford to present a $2,100 check to the Oxford Orphanage. The masons and their wives toured the orphanage's facilities.

'ECU Concepts'

John Hallow, an East Carolina University graduate student whose hobby is imitating the voices of famous people, will be the guest on "ECU Concepts" at 8 a.m. Sunday on radio station WOOW.

The former ECU athlete and current assistant football coach says he discovered in high school that he could impersonate Mohammed Ali. He has since added others to his repertoire.

"ECU Concepts" is a 15-minute program produced weekly by ECU. The program's host is James Rees of the department of theater arts at ECU.

Club Party

Hillsdale Community Club will have a Christmas party Saturday at 4 p.m. at Parker's Restaurant on South Memorial Drive.

Rose Book Fair

The second annual Book Fair, sponsored by the Rose High Library/Media Center, opened Monday and ends today in the school library. Central Book and News assisted in sponsoring the event.

Proceeds from the fair will be used to purchase instructional materials for the library. Tony Johnson, a library science student, was recognized as top salesman during the week.

Memorial Benefit

Radio Station WRDU in Raleigh is coordinating various events Saturday aimed at raising funds for a memorial honoring Vietnam veterans that will be built at Union Square at the state capitol.

The station will play 60s music starting at 10 a.m. Saturday and will accept pledges from callers who request favorite songs (1-800-233-1061). From 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Sunday a dance contest, trivia pursuit contest and other fundraising events are planned at Sparkles Night Club on Hodges Street, Old Wake Forest Road, to benefit the memorial.

The Vietnam Veterans Committee and other sponsors are involved in the project.

Maxwell Brothers Furniture Chain Sold To S.C. Firm

Grover C. Maxwell Jr. of Greenville confirmed this morning that Reliable Stores Inc., a retail holding company based in Columbia, S.C., has bought the 21-store Maxwell Brothers Inc. furniture chain.

Maxwell, who operates Andalusia Interiors, is the son of the founder of the retail furniture store chain.

The Maxwell Brothers chain was sold in 1968 to Family Finance, which became part of Gamble-Skogmo in 1977 and part of Wickes Cos. Inc. when Wickes acquired Gamble in 1980. The chain then operated under the name of Maxwell Furniture.

Maxwell headed a group of investors who purchased the chain from Wickes in January 1982 and reactivated the Maxwell Brothers name.

Maxwell, who served as president of Maxwell Brothers until the chain was sold to Reliable Stores in September, declined to reveal the price paid by Reliable. "It was a private transaction," Maxwell said.

Thomas Guerico, Reliable's vice president and treasurer, said the 21 stores of the Maxwell chain will retain the Maxwell name.

Reliable owns 73 other furniture stores, 73 jewelry stores and six waterbed specialty stores.

Most of Reliable's stores are concentrated in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, but the firm has stores throughout the country.

Guerico said when the chain was bought from Wickes in 1982, there were 72 Maxwell stores. The chain was "so spread out; many (stores) were in not very good locations and even though they put a substantial amount of capital into them, they didn't have enough capital to operate. They were spread too thin and had to start closing stores; they closed or sold many."

Maxwell's was eventually paired down to 21 stores, Guerico said, adding that Reliable does not plan to close any more stores. Once the chain becomes profitable, Reliable may look at some expansion, Guerico added.

Bethel Board OKs Clean Water Grant

BETHEL — The Bethel Town Board has agreed to accept a Clean Water Bond Grant in the amount of $290,875 for the town's wastewater treatment project.

The board adopted a resolution this week authorizing Rivers and Associates to proceed with the preliminary design phase of the Professional Services Agreement, part of the wastewater treatment project.

The board agreed to an amendment change as requested by Municipal Trust of N.C., the company which handles hospitalization of town employees, to ask the Internal Revenue Service that payments made by members to the fund be exempt from taxes under federal law.

A portion of Ives Street and West Railroad Street was relinquished to the Department of Transportation by the board.

A resolution was adopted by the board to rezone an area between Ives and Carson streets to disallow multifamily dwellings.

Ray Bell of the Greenville Cablevision discussed the planned increase in rates to Bethel Cablevision subscribers. Bell said Cablevision has completed the installation of a second satellite dish to provide three additional basic service channels and one premium service channel.

The board voted to sell the lot on Smith Street where the abandoned well is located.

The month of January 1985 has been proclaimed by the board as Selective Service Awareness Month.

President And Tutu Meet To Discuss South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today faced growing pressure to get tough with South Africa as he met with Bishop Desmond M. Tutu, the black winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize who says U.S. policies are "immoral, evil and totally unchristian" because they encourage South African apartheid.

Reagan declined to say, when asked by reporters at the start of the meeting, how he would respond to Tutu's criticism of his policies. "I've always believed that when people talk to each other rather than about each other, they get along just fine," he said.

The South African cleric said he would talk to reporters afterward.

Reagan and Tutu, wearing his clerical garb, met in the White House Oval Office. Also attending were Secretary of State George P. Shultz, National Security Adviser

Robert McFarlane, Vice President George Bush and Edwin Meese III, the presidential counselor.

A fire was burning in the fireplace, and Reagan was overheard to apologize to Tutu that "we turned out winter for you," a reference to the sub-freezing temperatures. Tutu, in turn, described winters in South Africa.

Aides said Reagan would tell Tutu, who sought the meeting, that his administration is forthright in its opposition to apartheid and that U.S. policy is helping to ease the plight of South Africa's 22 million blacks, who have been subjected to decades of iron-fisted rule by the white minority.

Tutu was expected to make a statement to reporters after the meeting. The South African cleric planned to leave later in the day for Oslo, where he will receive the Nobel Peace Prize.

But even as Reagan and Tutu prepared to meet, pressures mounted in the Congress and in the streets for a change in policy. Demonstrators seeking the release of imprisoned black labor leaders marched outside South African diplomatic posts throughout the United States.

Two children of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy were arrested Thursday outside the embassy in Washington. Douglas Kennedy, 17, and his sister Rory Kennedy, 15, were accused of violating city codes for demonstrating within 500 feet of the embassy.

"My whole family has been concerned with this issue for a long time," said Douglas Kennedy, a student here.

The influential new chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., joined lawmakers urging President Reagan to take a stronger stand against apartheid.

Lugar and Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., wrote a private letter to Reagan late last week, asking him to look at other options to the administration's so-called "constructive engagement" policy, which shuns economic and political sanctions in favor of quiet diplomacy.

Bush, Ferraro: 'No Apologies'

WASHINGTON (AP) — They didn't talk about the time she referred to him and President Reagan as "The Gipper and the Gaffer." Nor was there any mention of the day he used off-color language to boast he had whipped her in a debate. There were no apologies offered or expected.

When Vice President George Bush and Rep. Geraldine Ferraro sat down for lunch Thursday in his executive office, it was largely light-hearted talk about their families and their future and rehashing the campaign when they were rivals in the first man-versus-woman vice presidential race.

"I'd have preferred to be the host today, but under the circumstances I'll take what I can get," said Ms. Ferraro, who was defeated with Walter Mondale in last month's election.

Bush initiated the meeting when the New York congresswoman called him on election night with congratulations.

There has been no similar meeting between Reagan and Mondale.

"It was delightful to be invited over to see the office I would have had... It was a lovely, lovely lunch," Ms. Ferraro said afterwards, looking tanned from a post-election vacation on St. Croix in the Virgin Islands.

She said she harbored no hard feelings toward Bush on his success.

"I have the tan and Vice President Bush does not so I was not envious and there's always tomorrow, which I will not sing to you today," she said laughingly.

Ms. Ferraro is believed to be mulling a run for the Senate in 1986 or even a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988.

Offering a window on her immediate plans, Ms. Ferraro said she and Bush "talked a little bit about what I'm going to do in the future... about making a lot of money which I'm going to do, and writing a book because I've got to pay off accountants' fees." She said she also planned to make speaking appearances and might join a law firm.

Bush described the luncheon as "a very pleasant encounter."

He was quoted by his press secretary, Peter Teeley, as saying the meeting was "warm and friendly, no acrimony, no tension." And there were no apologies — from either side.

"I don't think there are any apologies either necessary nor expected," said Ms. Ferraro.

During the campaign, her staff said Bush owed her an apology for boasting after the debate, "We tried to kick a little ass last night" — a remark he later described as an old Texas football expression.

Were any football expressions voiced during the meeting?

"No. No, we missed those," she said.

Bush inquired about her problems with the House ethics committee, which found she technically violated the Ethics in Government Act by failing to file information about her husband's finances. "I said it felt good that it's all over," said Ms. Ferraro.

They dined on beef consomme, salmon, potatoes, asparagus spears, salad and a nut fudge brownie with ice cream. Ms. Ferraro said she ate only half her desert because she's dieting.

Lawton Chiles Issuing Challenge To Byrd For Top Democratic Post

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, claiming Senate Democrats need a more dynamic public spokesman for their own political survival, is waging a surprise battle to wrest the position of Senate minority leader away from Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

Chiles, 54, conceded he would have a hard time defeating Byrd, who has been his party's uncontested leader for the past eight years, but he declared: "It's time for new faces and I'm a new face."

Sen. ROBERT BYRD

Byrd, 66, told reporters he had votes "ample enough to win."

"I did not expect this challenge, but I'm ready for it," he said.

Although Byrd declined to cite figures, an aide, Linda Peek, said the West Virginian had commitments from more than 30 of the 47 Democrats who will serve in the new Congress, and that eight of them were Southern Democrats.

Senate Democrats will pick their leaders next Wednesday by secret ballot.

Chiles, a leading voice on spending issues as senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said the loss of two presidential elections in a row persuaded him that it was time for new, aggressive leadership in the Democratic party.

Sen. LAWTON CHILES

Byrd, 66, told reporters he had votes "ample enough to win."

"I did not expect this challenge, but I'm ready for it," he said.

Although Byrd declined to cite figures, an aide, Linda Peek, said the West Virginian had commitments from more than 30 of the 47 Democrats who will serve in the new Congress, and that eight of them were Southern Democrats.

Senate Democrats will pick their leaders next Wednesday by secret ballot.

Chiles, a leading voice on spending issues as senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said the loss of two presidential elections in a row persuaded him that it was time for new, aggressive leadership in the Democratic party.

"I think we're in a situation where you can only circle the wagons so long. At some point you have to hitch up the team and say let's move out," Chiles told a hastily called news conference on Thursday to announce his candidacy.

A boyish-appearing, low-key Floridian who first came to national attention by winning an upset victory to his first term in 1970 by walking the 1,000-mile length of his state, Chiles is a political moderate on most issues.

He has generally supported President Reagan's spending cuts, but also has urged the president to extend the cuts to the defense budget and to consider raising taxes to help trim deficits. In 1982, Chiles managed to steer through the GOP-controlled Senate a Democratic alternative to the president's budget. And he has been a leading Senate critic of the MX missile.

Chiles said Senate Democrats need a spokesman who's a match for newly elected Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan. "He's good," Chiles said.

In choosing Dole, Republicans "voted against philosophies. They voted for their survival," Chiles said. He suggested Democrats would do the same thing and pick him when they hold their organizational caucus next week.

Chiles' challenge was one more sign of turmoil within the Democratic Party following President Reagan's landslide victory. A struggle for control of the Democratic National Committee is also under way and there were some efforts, eventually abandoned, on the part of young party conservatives to mount a challenge to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

Byrd's reputation is based on his knowledge of the Senate rules and

The best gift is the one made with care.

Tragedy-Prone Airline Hit Again As Another Crash Kills 13 People

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A commuter plane belonging to an airline that was shut down for two weeks last month for alleged safety violations crashed and burst into flames, killing all 13 people aboard, authorities said. It was the airline's third crash in six months.

The bodies of the 11 passengers and two crew members aboard Provincetown-Boston Airlines Flight 1039 were left in the wreckage overnight pending the arrival of National Transportation Safety Board investigators, said police spokesman Sgt. Charley Hill.

The investigators planned today to inspect the wreckage, which was strewn over a mile-wide swath of swamp. The cause of the crash was not immediately known, and an FAA spokesman said he could see no immediate connection to the airline's safety problems.

Meanwhile, the head of the House Aviation Subcommittee, Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said the panel should consider whether the FAA, in response to pressure from small towns for which PBA is a sole carrier, returned the airline's operating license too soon.

"One of the things we have to look at is did the FAA, in its enforcement and inspection capability, operate in an impartial, careful way with respect to this carrier," Glickman said on NBC's "Today Show."

CIA Used Balloons To Drop Manuals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA used balloons to float some of its Nicaraguan rebel manuals into the leftist-ruled nation, apparently in a bid to scare government leaders there, administration and congressional officials say.

The manual contains advice on the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan officials, but U.S. officials said the balloon drop was aimed at scaring the leftist government by creating the impression that the CIA-backed rebel movement was stronger than it was.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the program was stopped after fewer than 100 manuals were sent aloft from Honduras last March because funds for the covert operation were running short. They said the balloon action had no discernible effect on the Nicaraguan government.

The 90-page, Spanish-language manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War," also called for creating "martyrs" for the cause and coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out rebel assignments. It was unclear how the manual, written for soldiers, would help Nicaraguan peasants who might find the booklets after they landed.

The House Intelligence Committee concluded Wednesday that the CIA's production of the manual violated a 1982 law barring efforts to overthrow the Nicaraguan government, but it blamed the manual on "negligence, not intent to violate the law."

One member of the House Intelligence Committee said CIA officials informed the panel that toys were also contained in the packages carrying the manuals. He added that committee members expressed disbelief and amusement upon learning of the balloon action.

Another official said specially designed balloons were used, capable of carrying objects as heavy as the manual. He said similar balloons were used by the CIA in propaganda operations against the communist government of Czechoslovakia in the 1960s.

The official said the balloon drop "was meant to scare" Nicaraguan officials.

About 2,000 copies of the manual, printed in Honduras, were distributed to soldiers of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest CIA-backed rebel force, a year ago. But the ones attached to the balloons were part of a 3,000-book edition printed at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., and were coated with plastic to make them water-resistant, the officials said.

Also this year, CIA-backed rebels began distributing a 16-page comic book-style manual urging Nicaraguans to sabotage their government through a variety of actions, from calling in sick to work and clogging toilets to damaging government trucks and throwing firebombs.

That booklet, also produced by the CIA, was left behind after rebel attacks on Nicaraguan villages.

The CIA has refused to discuss the manuals, although it has denied to Congress that they violate any law.

Special dashboard permits and license plates for handicapped parking can be purchased at the State License Agency, 718 Dickinson Avenue, or call 756-1193 for information.

"There was a lot of pressure to get this carrier back in the skies again and we have to see if they operated the way they would have done with respect to every other carrier."

Police stood watch overnight in freezing temperatures as portable generator lights illuminated the site 1½ miles northwest of Jacksonville International Airport.

Rescue efforts after the 6:15 p.m. crash Thursday were hampered by muck 3 feet deep, said airport operations manager Charles Hardrick. "We could find no sign of life," Hill said.

"There are no survivors," said Valerie Baltzley, emergency communications officer for Jacksonville Fire-Rescue.

It was impossible to count the bodies because the wreckage was "too entangled," Hill said. Identification of the victims was withheld pending notification of relatives, the airline said in a statement.

The plane — a Brazilian-made twin-engine turboprop known as an Embraer Bandeirante — crashed in a densely wooded, swampy area north of the airport. It burst into flames on impact, Hill said.

The plane, headed from Jacksonville to Tampa, "took off and disappeared immediately off the radar screen," Hill said. "The inside of the cabin is charred," he said, adding that some of the victims were thrown from the plane when it crashed.

The plane did not radio the tower of an emergency and visibility was seven miles so the weather was "no factor" in the crash, said FAA spokesman Roger Myers in Atlanta.

PBA officials would not comment on the crash beyond their written statement, which said, "There was no pilot contact or any indication of trouble prior to the accident."

Two people died in PBA's two previous crashes. After one crash, the NTSB found evidence that the wrong type of fuel had been pumped into the aircraft.

The FAA pulled PBA's operating license Nov. 10, charging the carrier with violating federal safety rules. The action was prompted by complaints from a former PBA pilot and capped a two-month investigation into allegations of shoddy maintenance, inadequate pilot training and falsified inspection records.

Two weeks later, PBA had complied with some FAA regulations and was allowed to put part of its 103-aircraft fleet of propeller planes back in the air. At the time, FAA spokesman Jack Barker called it the "most-inspected airline in the nation."

On Sunday, airline President Peter Van Arsdale announced the carrier had resumed service to all its markets, including Jacksonville, and was flying more than 60 percent of its commuter aircraft.

Myers said he did not see any connection between PBA's recent problems and the crash. "PBA has been moving quite rapidly on recovering their operations," he said.

Asked whether the FAA planned any new action against PBA, Myers said, "The answer to that is no. There'd be no action taken and there'd be no reason to take any action based on the fact that one aircraft went down."

Indians Arrest Union Carbide Chairman

BHOPAL, India (AP) — The chairman of Union Carbide Corp. was arrested today and charged with "negligence and corporate liability" as he arrived to investigate the gas leak from his company's plant that killed more than 1,600 people, the United News of India reported.

Chairman Warren M. Anderson and two of Union Carbide's top Indian executives were arrested at the airport and taken to the plush Union Carbide guest house atop a hill overlooking Bhopal, UNI said.

Officials at corporation headquarters in Danbury, Conn., said later that Anderson had left Bhopal. Walter Goetz, director of corporate communications, said corporation President Alec Flamm had learned that Anderson left Bhopal by airplane.

Goetz would not explain how Flamm received his information, but he said Anderson was expected to call "when he gets someplace."

A reliable source in New Delhi, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Anderson was traveling to New Delhi.

Earlier, Union Carbide spokesman Edward M. Van Den Meele said company officials understood that Anderson was under house arrest, but no charges had been filed. Van Den Meele said Anderson was being treated courteously.

"U.S. embassy officials are in Bhopal working to secure his safe departure from the area," said Van Den Meele.

UNI said the two Indian executives arrested with Anderson were Keshav Mahendra, chairman of Union Carbide India Ltd., and the company's managing director, V.P. Gokhale.

"We are convinced on the basis of facts already available that each one of them have criminal liability for the events that led to the grave tragedy," said a statement issued by Arjun Singh, chief minister of Madhya Pradesh state.

The statement added: "This government cannot remain a helpless spectator to the tragedy and it knows its duty towards thousands of innocent citizens whose lives have been so rudely and traumatically affected by cruel and wanton negligence on the part of the Union Carbide management."

UNI said the 63-year-old Anderson and the others were charged under seven sections of the Indian penal code, including Section 304A — causing death by negligence. That is a nonbailable offense in India.

The charges are believed to be preliminary charges filed by police and contained in what is known in India as a first information report. A formal charge sheet is presented later to a magistrate after an investigation.

Anderson, who started working for Union Carbide in 1945 and became its chairman in 1982, flew to Bombay from Washington and had been discussing compensation for victims of the gas leak.

The government's All-India Radio said Thursday that the official death toll had risen to 1,600. Unofficial reports say more than 2,000 people died and another 200,000 were affected by the gas early Monday, many of them seriously.

Five senior Indian officials of the pesticide plant previously were arrested on charges of criminal negligence.

Van Den Meele, asked about the Union Carbide chairman's decision to go to India, said, "Mr. Anderson is our chairman and he's head of this company. He feels that everyone is saddened by this tragedy and he felt it was his place to go there to offer his condolences, express his sadness, and to see what he could do to be of help to the survivors and also to see what he could do to help to give aid in this situation."

Union Carbide management had sent several teams of U.S. experts to the plant but they were refused entry to prevent tampering with evidence. The plant has been shut down and sealed. The Central Bureau of Investigation seized logbooks and records pertaining to gas storage and safety procedures.

Singer Says Song Is His

CHICAGO (AP) — When superstar Michael Jackson testified in a $5 million copyright-infringement case, the courtroom became his stage, the witness stand his drums, the microphone his sound system and the jury his audience.

A smiling, singing, clapping, even swaying and rocking Jackson testified Thursday in the trial of Fred Sanford's lawsuit alleging the pop star stole his song, "Please Love Me Now," and made it into the hit "The Girl Is Mine."

But Jackson, 26, assured U.S. District Court jurors he had composed "The Girl Is Mine." He said he hadn't even heard "Please Love Me Now" until after the lawsuit was filed.

"I woke up from my sleep and wrote the song," he said. "And I went over to the tape recorder and sang it into the tape recorder and wrote what was in my head."

The lawsuit, filed against CBS Inc., does not name Jackson as a defendant.

But Sanford, of Schaumburg, says he gave a tape of his song to a CBS employee in March 1982 and that Jackson — under pressure to produce an album by April 1982 — cut a tape of Sanford's song 19 days later.

"The Girl Is Mine" appears on Jackson's album, "Thriller." With more than 20 million copies sold, it is the largest-selling album in history and has earned $100 million.

President Gets Jump On Budget

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, expecting no honeymoon the second time around, is trying to sell his 1986 budget to Congress even before he has finished deciding what it will contain.

"We've got to develop a proposal that can move quickly and so we've got to start pre-selling it to our friends and allies," one White House official said in an interview.

"Anything we propose is going to be extremely difficult to pass," he added. "I don't think there is a honeymoon period for the beginning of a second term."

This official, closely involved in the process of preparing the fiscal year 1986 budget that will be presented to Congress next month, said it was important for the White House to take advantage of the momentum generated by Reagan's landslide re-election and his Jan. 21 inauguration to a second term.

"You've got to try and build toward certain key votes as quickly as possible and take advantage of the momentum and the public support you can develop," he said.

"I don't want to suggest that the opposition might want to stall or try to get as far away from the election as possible before they have some of these considered, but I think it's incumbent on us" to move as fast as possible.

Administration aides have no illusions about congressional resistance to deeper cuts in social programs — many of which affect middle-class wage earners — designed to cut the record federal deficit to about $100 billion by 1988.

In 1981, Reagan's controversial economic program was approved by Congress by a very slim margin when a coalition of conservative Democrats called the Boll Weevils joined forces with Republicans to deliver the necessary votes.

GOP Solons Urge Freeze On SS Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's campaign pledge that Social Security would not be cut, some Republican senators are urging him to consider including the giant retirement system among the administration's targets in the drive to cut federal spending.

At a private Capitol Hill meeting with White House Budget Director David A. Stockman on Wednesday and again at a meeting with Reagan on Thursday, several senior GOP senators suggested that cost-of-living increases for Social Security be frozen along with other programs the president has included in a tentative plan to achieve $33.6 billion in domestic spending savings.

Following the session with Reagan on Thursday, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said, "The position was stated by a number of other senators that if you're going to freeze cost-of-living (adjustments), obviously, to be fair, you ought to freeze everything."

"A number of senators indicated that Social Security — a freeze, not a cut, for one year — ought to be considered," Domenici said.

Domenici previously has said the automatic boosts in Social Security benefits should be restrained, but not cut, if there is to be some overall move to cap federal spending.

Social Security became a favorite subject of Democrats during this year's presidential campaign.

Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale charged that Reagan had a secret plan to curtail benefits for future retirees.

Reagan replied, "A president should never say 'never,' but I am going to violate that rule and say 'never.' I will never stand for reduction in Social Security benefits to people who are now getting them." Later he amended this to include recipients "now and in the future."

On Thursday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes reiterated "the president has made it emphatic that he will not touch Social Security in any shape, form or fashion."

But Speakes sidestepped questions about whether the president would veto legislation Congress passed to curtail Social Security increases.

The president gave his Cabinet orders Wednesday to achieve $33.6 billion in domestic spending savings next year through a proposed plan that would freeze, reduce or eliminate some of the government's most politically popular programs, and cut the pay of all federal civilian employees by 5 percent.

Overall, Reagan has set a goal of reducing spending by $42 billion in the 1986 fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1, with the aim of holding total spending to current levels.

Reagan gave GOP congressional leaders a pep talk on his plan during a 90-minute White House meeting Thursday, telling the legislators, "We have no alternative to spending controls."

However, the number of Republicans in the House is smaller now than it was in 1981, the spending cuts are deeper, and the president is a lame duck.

So instead of waiting to unveil the budget when it is sent to Congress in January, the White House has been meeting with key congressmen already in an effort to get their views and enlist their support.

"We're trying to get the congressional folks involved in this process much earlier than we ever have before," said this official. "They never were involved like this at this stage. It's going to be tough if we don't have those folks involved in the process. It's going to be that much more difficult to get their support."

So far, Reagan has met twice with the congressional Republican leadership, and the White House congressional liaison staff is in the process of speaking individually with every member of Congress to solicit their views on a variety of topics.

In addition, Reagan intends to capitalize on the campaign promises of many congressmen, who said they joined Reagan in a desire to cut federal spending. And the president intends to take his case directly to voters in the hope that they will pressure their congressmen to vote the president's way.

"I think there are a tremendous number of people on the hill who during the campaign shared the president's views with regard to spending, including some people who may not have voted with us in the past," he said. "Every vote is going to make a difference. We want to give every member of Congress an opportunity to help the president reduce the deficit by cutting spending."

Pentagon Declares War On 'Gold-Plated' Spare Parts

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's second-ranking executive is launching an effort to stop the military from buying what he called "gold-plated items" such as $435 hammers or $7,600 coffee makers.

In a speech delivered Thursday, Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV urged his audience to "help us identify these gold-plated items. They are giving both the Defense Department, and the defense industry, a black eye."

Taft, speaking to the National Security Industrial Association, also revealed that he was ordering an expansion of a program launched in January to give military contractors more freedom in designing weapons. For too long, Taft said, the Defense Department has stifled private-sector ingenuity by setting too many specifications and standards at the start of the procurement process.

But the Pentagon, he added, must also do a better job itself of deciding what it needs before turning to military contractors.

"It makes sense, for example, to demand an aircraft that can withstand great stress, especially if it may have to land on primitive runways," said Taft.

"It does not make sense to specify requirements for a refrigerator that enable it to withstand more stress than the airplane it goes in can withstand." Meanwhile, the Pentagon's new spare parts "czar" told reporters Thursday that his job is to prove to Congress and the public "that we do have a plan and we know what we're doing." Maurice Shriber, elevated earlier this week to the new post of assistant defense secretary for spares program management, said he's not interested in creating a bureaucracy or conducting studies as the Pentagon's new point man for buying spare parts. "There are no new problems in this area," Shriber, 41, said.

Florida Shivers As Storms Cover North With Snow

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer
 Storms that caused 200 fender-benders in Tennessee and closed airports in Maine sent a blast of arctic air to Florida citrus country today, prompting hypothermia warnings, and left Northeast ski resorts basking in nearly 2 feet of snow. This week's storms were blamed for 28 deaths in 10 states.

Travelers' advisories were posted today for Vermont and New York state as the region's first major snowfall of the season showed no signs of abating. Vermont's Jay Peak received at least 4 inches of snow overnight, adding to the 16 that fell Thursday.

Snow warnings also were posted for portions of Ohio and West Virginia, where a mixture of snow and freezing rain left Charleston "under siege, like Fort Apache," as motorists battled with treacherous roads Thursday.

"Today's weather is going to be confined to northern New England. It's going to still be pretty bad up there," Pete Reynolds, a meteorologist with the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

In Florida today, the concern was not for fruit but for people as forecasters reminded residents of last year's December cold snap, during which six people died of hypothermia, or a lowering of body temperature.

The National Weather Service warned residents of north Florida and the Panhandle that "respect should be given" to the wind-chill effects of cold air and strong winds.

Temperatures in north Florida dropped to the freezing point after midnight Thursday and were sliding into the 20s today. Freeze warnings were issued from Jacksonville in northeast Florida to Appalachicola in the Panhandle.

But the first freeze of the season "actually will be beneficial. ... It should put the (citrus) trees in a dormant position, which means they won't put out any new growth," said Doug Bournique, executive vice president of the Indian River Citrus League. Dormant trees face less danger during freezes later on in the season, he said.

One of two cold fronts had reached as far south as the Florida Straits by Thursday night, said Allen Cummings of the weather service in Coral Gables. A second blast of arctic air was centered over north central Florida.

Numbing cold stretched from Maine to Maryland on Thursday.

while the Great Lakes states and New England were doused with freezing rain, snow and sleet. Snow forced the closure of six Maine airports.

Most of Vermont got 6 to 12 inches of snow, with 12 inches on Killington, the state's largest ski area. It fell at the rate of 2 inches an hour.

"Cars are going off the road all over the place," said Vermont state highway dispatcher Ray Burke. "We're not even trying to bare the roads with the plows. We're just trying to keep the cars going."

Driving conditions were nightmarish at best in parts of West Virginia.

"The average speed of vehicles on Interstate 64 between Charleston and Huntington is 20 miles per hour, the road is so bad," said West Virginia state police spokesman Rick Robinson. "And it's probably going to get worse instead of better."

By late afternoon, Charleston was "under siege, like Fort Apache, the Bronx," said Public Safety Director Kent Carper. "All the ambulances, police are tied up, cars over the hill — I don't know what else you could call it."

An arctic blast ushered in Tennessee's first snow with chaos on icy roads and some 200 accidents reported in the Nashville area.

Weather related motor vehicle accidents this week claimed four lives in Illinois, three each in Indiana and Tennessee, two each in Missouri and Ohio and one each in Arkansas, Kansas, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

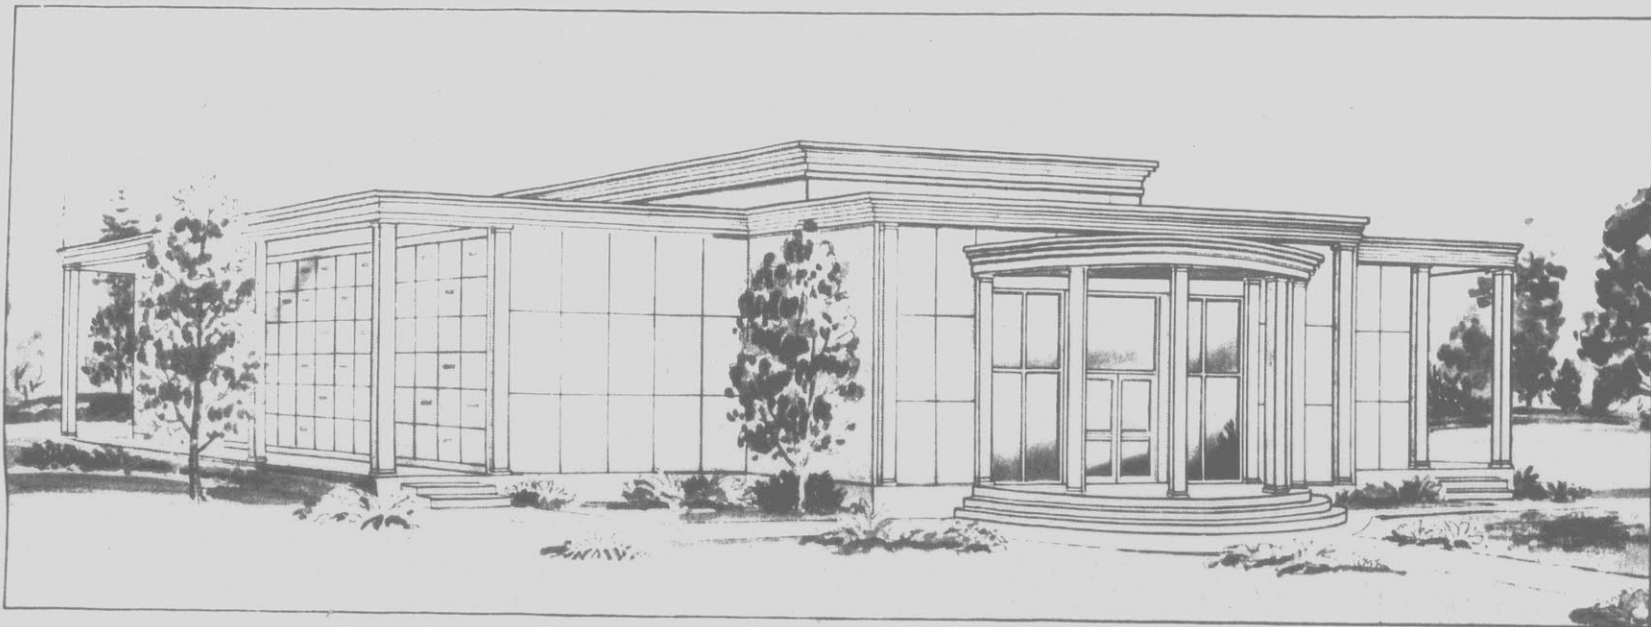

Fire officials believe a kerosene heater started the fire in a living room of a one-story frame home that killed a mother and three children Thursday in Oliver Springs, Tenn.

And in Ohio, authorities said five people collapsed and died after shoveling snow.

ONLY WAY TO GO — Dwight Thompson of Cincinnati tries out his cross-country skis for the first time Thursday after seven inches of snow fell in the Ohio city. This week's storms have left most of the northern half of the country under snow, and more is forecast. Freezing temperatures hit as far south as Florida's citrus country this morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Pinewood Memorial Park's Mausoleum. Designed by America's most respected mausoleum builders for beauty and permanence.

After 3 years of careful planning, Pinewood Memorial Park announces plans to construct its mausoleum.

S G. Wilkerson and Sons, owners of Pinewood Memorial Park, proudly announce plans to begin construction on a prestigious chapel mausoleum on the grounds at Pinewood.

Now, you have the choice of above-ground entombment in a mausoleum designed to last through the ages.

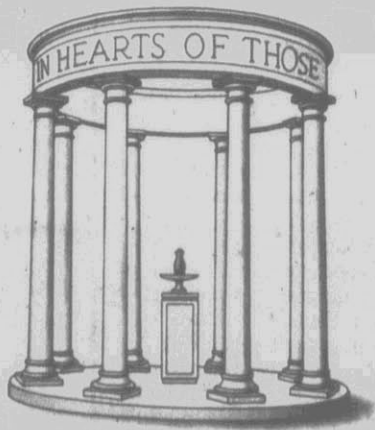

The mausoleum (artist's rendering above) is a McCleskey-designed structure. McCleskey is considered by many in the industry to be the finest available mausoleum designer and builder in America.

The extensive planning that went into this building was necessary to achieve the lasting quality that will result in beauty and permanence.

Italian granite and marble and poured-in-place concrete and steel along with the most respected mausoleum designer in America will result in the kind of mausoleum owners and estate-purchasers will be proud of.

Now, above-ground entombment will be available and affordable from Pinewood Memorial Park. And the costs will be comparable to ground burial.

Our planning has paid off. In design. In beauty. In permanence. And in service you've come to expect from Pinewood Memorial Park.

Diana's Family Papers Bought

LONDON (AP) — The British Library says it has bought the papers of Princess Diana's family, the Spencers of Althorp, for an undisclosed sum of money.

The papers date back 400 years, fill 300 feet of shelving and "contain historical material of the greatest importance," the Library said in a news release.

The sale follows the disposal of paintings, silver and furniture from the family mansion of Althorp since the 8th Earl Spencer, 60, married his second wife, Raine McCorquodale, in 1976.

The family needed money for a $1.2 million renovation of its 100-room mansion, which was ordered by the countess, Princess Diana's stepmother. The Spencer papers are of interest to historians because they range from the mid-16th century to 1910, and involve many famous people.

Red Brigades

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A court convicted and sentenced 19 Red Brigades terrorists to life imprisonment for eight murders committed between 1978 and 1983.

The verdicts came in the trial of 112 suspected members of a Milan cell of the leftist terrorist gang that has been weakened in the past few years by arrests or by members surrendering and turning state's evidence.

Eight defendants were sentenced to 30 years in prison each and 13 were acquitted.

The 19 given life terms, the harshest penalty allowed in Italy, were found guilty of involvement in one or more of eight homicides in the Milan area between April 1978 and July 1983.

The victims included policemen, businessmen and the medical director of a public hospital.

Sex Slave Trial Is Ordered

RED BLUFF, Calif. (AP) — A mill worker must stand trial on charges he kidnapped and kept as a sex slave for seven years a woman who says she stopped pleading for freedom when the man told her a society of slave owners would find and torture her if she escaped.

Justice Court Judge Dennis Murray on Thursday ordered Cameron Hooker to stand trial after two days of testimony by the woman and Hooker's wife at a preliminary hearing.

According to testimony, Hooker, 31, kidnapped the woman at knife-point in May 1977, imprisoned her in locked boxes for long periods, and forced her to commit various sex acts, usually while bound to a bed or homemade torture rack.

Citing "extremely serious and, to put it mildly, bizarre" circumstances, Murray scheduled a Dec. 17 trial on a kidnap charge and six felony sex charges, including rape and sodomy. He ordered Hooker to remain in custody in lieu of $500,000 bond pending arraignment.

The hitchhiker, now 27, testified under questioning by defense attorney Rolland Papendick that she had told Hooker and written in a diary that she loved him. But she added that she feared him and resisted every time he had sex with her, usually after he had bound her to a bed or a homemade torture rack.

"I kept telling him over and over that I wanted to leave," she said.

After being confined for several years, she said, she didn't try to escape or notify police when Hooker eased the restrictions and let her hold a job, visit her family or go jogging or on shopping trips.

"I was too afraid to tell anyone. ... I was afraid of people getting hurt," she said, explaining that Hooker had convinced her that he belonged to a secret society of slave owners known as "The Company" that would track down runaway slaves and torture them before returning them to their owners.

The woman said she signed a contract with Hooker to be his slave because "Cameron told me ... if I didn't sign the contract, I would wish I had."

She said she believed members of the society watched her home and tapped the telephone until the defendant's wife, Janice Hooker, told her three months ago that "The Company" was fictitious.

She left the next day, returning to her parents' Southern California home.

Hooker was arrested Nov. 18 after his wife and the woman went to authorities.

Mrs. Hooker, who was granted immunity from prosecution for her testimony, said her husband also practiced sexual bondage on her before and after the hitchhiker was kidnapped.

She and the hitchhiker testified that Hooker had hanged the hitchhiker nude from rafters in leather handcuffs, chained her to a rack, inflicted electrical shocks and once burned her breasts.

"He put me in this box. It had some kinds of hooks you could connect chains to," the woman said, speaking in a near-whisper. "My wrists were chained. At first my legs were free, and I kept kicking the sides of the box, so he tied my legs somehow."

On one occasion, Hooker gave her a gun and "told me to put my mouth over the barrel and pull the trigger" to prove submission, she said, adding she obeyed "because I didn't believe the gun was loaded, and I didn't want to find out what would happen if I didn't."

In tearful and often confusing and contradictory testimony, the hitchhiker said she spent three years in a coffin-shaped box under the Hookers' waterbed, being released daily for meals and to use the bathroom and occasionally for sexual or punishment sessions.

She also was confined in a 15-by-15-by-18-inch "head box" that closed around the neck, and in a larger box with hooks inside to lock on leg and arm chains, she said.

Release Sought

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — French National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen and his group of 15 rightist European Parliament deputies have requested the release of jailed ex-dictator George Papadopoulos and other leaders of the 1967 military coup.

"We recommend that the Greek government, respecting the highest traditions of Hellenic civilization, grants freedom to men who have suffered excessively," said a communique issued after a four-day meeting in Athens.

The meeting provoked protests by more than 1,000 former political prisoners of Papadopoulos's Greek junta and clashes between police and extreme leftists. Twenty people were injured and hundreds were arrested.

Huskies, Illini Claim Victories

By The Associated Press
In his freshman season, Kevin Vidato scored a total of six points. Against St. Mary's, the sophomore reserve forward doubled that total, leading the ninth-ranked Washington Huskies to their fourth victory without a loss.

"Thank heaven for Kevin Vidato," Washington Coach Marv Harshman said. "I don't know if a star is born, but the guy came to play."

Washington held a slim 28-25 lead at halftime against St. Mary's. Then Vidato scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half to lead the Huskies to a 68-48 victory.

"He contributed offensively, and that was a blessing," Harshman said of his unlikely star. "He compensated for the rest of us standing around."

The only other member of the Associated Press' Top Twenty college basketball teams to see action Thursday night was seventh-ranked Illinois, which downed Missouri 65-50.

"Everything seemed to fall into place," Vidato said of his point explosion. "Everything felt really good. If I got a chance, I wanted to take advantage of it."

Washington sophomore center Chris Welp said Vidato showed poise under pressure.

"When you're a sub, you're afraid to make a mistake and you're cautious," Welp said. "Tonight he wasn't. He came in and played a great game."

With Vidato leading the way, Washington outscored St. Mary's 40-23 in the second half. St. Mary's, which shot 71 percent in the first half, was unable to continue at that torrid pace as Washington's superior size and aggressive defense eventually wore down the Galloping Gaels.

"We had too many turnovers and a lack of patience," Gaels Coach Bill Oates said. "It was a lousy second half."

"They kept us off the offensive boards. They beat us down the court. We didn't get back on the break."

Forward Detlef Schrempf scored 13 points to lead a balanced attack for the Huskies, while the Gaels, who fell to 3-3, were paced by senior guard Paul Robertson with 12 points.

Anthony Welch and Bruce Douglas headed a balanced Illinois attack with 12 points apiece as the Fighting Illini stopped Missouri.

The defending co-Big Ten champions jumped out to a 20-6 lead in the first 8½ minutes and led 38-19 at halftime.

Akeem Hot, But Warrior Job On Ralph Is Enough

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Akeem Olajuwon was a mountain of strength for the Houston Rockets, but the Golden State Warriors reduced his Twin Tower partner, Ralph Sampson, to rubble.

The Warriors held the 7-foot-4 Sampson to six points on 2-for-11 shooting and took their only lead of the game with nine seconds remaining on two free throws by Mickey Johnson to beat the Rockets 114-113 despite a season-high 42 points from Olajuwon.

"I can't believe we lost it," said Olajuwon who hit 18 of 22 field-goal attempts and had 13 rebounds and five blocked shots. "I wasn't getting the ball in the second half. I don't think the Warriors were doing anything different. The ball was just always on the other side of the court."

Olajuwon had 32 points at halftime for the Rockets, who led by as many as 15 points in the second period.

In other National Basketball Association games, it was Portland 113, San Antonio 96; Seattle 106, Utah 99; Milwaukee 114, Detroit 99; Washington 111, Indiana 106 and Dallas 112, New York 83.

Olajuwon, a 7-foot rookie from Nigeria and the University of Houston, was disappointed although he easily surpassed his previous high game of 30 points.

"I'm not interested in points, I just wanted to win," he said.

Larry Smith, Golden State's rugged 6-8 forward, got the defensive assignment as the Warriors contained Olajuwon in the second half, but he said he got plenty of help from his teammates.

"We put more pressure on their guards and stopped them up top," said Smith. "I tried to keep Akeem away from the basket because when he does get close, there's no way to stop him. He's strong, whew!"

"He's not as strong as some, like Artis Gilmore," said Jerome Whitehead, who had 10 rebounds overall and 20 of his 24 points in the second half for the Warriors. "What makes him so good is that he's quick and very active."

"I can see why they drafted him No. 1," added Warriors Coach John Bach. "It was no mistake. We played more aggressively on him in the second half. I warned my players before the game that if he gets a chance, he'll take the ball, you and everything else to the basket. His power is awesome."

The Warriors trailed by 13 points at halftime and were never ahead until Johnson, a reserve forward, made the winning foul shot after being fouled by Sampson. Houston's Lewis Lloyd got off the final shot of the game and missed with one second left.

Golden State got 30 points from Purvis Short and 27 from Eric Floyd.

Bucks 114, Pistons 99

Milwaukee took over sole possession of first place in the Central Division by beating Detroit for its ninth victory without a loss at home this season.

The Bucks got 20 or more points by four players, led by Sidney Moncrief and Terry Cummings with 27 each. Moncrief scored seven points during a 15-2 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter, which started with the teams tied 77-77.

Bill Laimbeer led the Pistons with 20 points, while Paul Pressey had 22 points and Craig Hodges 20 for Milwaukee.

Trail Blazers 113, Spurs 96

Portland pulled within one game of the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division as Mychal Thompson scored 28 points against San Antonio.

Thompson scored eight points in the fourth quarter as the Trail Blazers pulled away by outscoring the Spurs 26-17 in the period.

George Gervin scored 30 points and Mike Mitchell 27 for San Antonio, while Kiki Vandeweghe had 25 and Jim Paxson 21 for Portland.

Mavericks 112, Knicks 83

Dallas buried New York with a 15-0 spurt at the start of the second half.

The Mavericks led only 49-43 at halftime, but Rolando Blackman scored seven points and Mark Aguirre six during the run that settled the outcome.

Blackman had 18 points to share team scoring honors with Derek Harper, who hit eight of his 10 field-goal attempts. Louis Orr equalled his career high with 28 points, including 17 of the Knicks' total of 23 in the third period.

Bullets 111, Pacers 106

Washington got two baskets from Frank Johnson in the final 39 seconds to stifle an Indiana rally.

The Pacers, who got 22 points from Herb Williams and 21 from Clark Kellogg, came back from a 13-point deficit in the third quarter to lead by one point twice in the fourth period. But two turnovers by Williams led to the late baskets by Johnson.

Cliff Robinson led the Bullets with a season-high 28 points, while Jeff Ruland added 27.

SuperSonics 106, Jazz 99

Tom Chambers and Jack Sikma scored 26 points apiece to lead Seattle to victory at Utah.

Chambers, Sikma and Ricky Sobers, who had 23 points for the Sonics, led a 13-4 Seattle rally in the fourth quarter that turned an 85-83 deficit into a 96-89 lead.

Pitt Tops Sampson

WINTERVILLE — Andrew Edwards fired in 18 points to lead Pitt Community College to an 81-55 victory over Sampson Tech in Thursday basketball action.

Albert Brown added 13 points for Pitt, with David Joyner and Keith Clark chipping in 12 points each. Keith Jones paced Sampson with 15, while James Miller added 12 and Terry Armwood 11.

"We had lost six in a row, so I started the second string," Pitt Coach Charles Coburn said. "(Sampson) led 6-2 after five minutes, but we came back and took control before the half ended."

Pitt took a 36-28 lead at halftime, then outran Sampson to even its record at 6-6. Pitt travels to Fayetteville Monday to play the Methodist College Jayvees at 5:15 p.m.

"I thought we played fairly well, but we've still got a way to go," Coburn said. "We're still working on some things in practice."

Pirates Seek To Snap Back Against Newport Saturday

East Carolina's Pirates, after suffering an 80-73 loss at the hands of Drexel University on the road Tuesday night, return home Saturday night to host Christopher Newport.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m., and the game is the lone December stop in Minges for the Pirates. They have four more dates in December, all on the road.

The Captains bring in a 4-2 record, but are coming in off a 108-88 drubbing of Bluefield Wednesday night. However, they have lost two of their last three games.

The Pirates, 1-2, won their opener against Central Connecticut State, then lost a close contest to Virginia Commonwealth before going on the road for the first time against Drexel. In that game, the Pirates fell behind in the late stages of the first half, then dropped back by as much as 20 points in the second half, only to rally to have a chance to win it before finally bowing.

The defeat continued a losing streak on the road that stretches back into the 1982-83 season, now 16 straight games.

"We dug a hole for ourselves with our defense," Coach Charlie Harrison said of the Drexel affair. "We let them dictate the tempo and when we started playing well in the second half, they were playing out of their minds."

Christopher Newport has rolled out to a 3-1 start, its best since 1977-78 when the Captains scored six wins in their first seven games and finished 20-7. They are 12-9 against ECAC-South teams, but 11 of those wins came over George Mason.

The Captains' losses this year were to Longwood and Averette.

Probable starters for Christopher Newport include 6-1 junior forward Buck Moore, the leading scorer at 15.8 points a game, while 6-0 senior guard Bobby Griffin has an 11.0 average. The others are 6-1 guard Keith Cobb, hitting 7.2 points a game, 6-7 sophomore center Carl Hayes (8.3), and 6-5 junior forward Joel Fortune (6.3).

Top reserves include 6-3 sophomore forward Broderick Royce (7.8) and 5-11 senior guard Jimmy Deans (9.3).

The leading rebounder is Haynes, pulling 11.0, while Moore is close behind with 10.2, while Fortune is grabbing 9.8 per game.

"I don't know how they'll play against us, but they've been playing a lot of multiple defenses. We understand that they are very patient against a man-to-man defense, and in the game we saw they try to push the ball up the floor and create havoc with their defense."

Harrison said he did not assign great importance to the Christopher Newport game. "It's too early in the season to have any importance," he said. "Right now I want us to get better in every game and we didn't get better against Drexel. We practiced well, but we didn't play well and we can't do that. We can't go on the road and not dictate the tempo."

Following the Newport game, the Pirates hit the road for the rest of the month. They travel to Fayetteville on Thursday to face Campbell, to Winston-Salem on December 19 to meet Wake Forest, and to Tulsa, Oklahoma, on December 28-29 for the First Tulsa Classic, where they will meet the host team in the first round. North Texas State and Alcorn State round out the competition in that field.

East Carolina will return to Minges on January 3 to face Boston University.

Pressure On Steelers As Season Inches Toward End

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Pittsburgh cornerback Dwayne Woodruff thinks it may be for the best that the Steelers' seemingly safe lead in the AFC Central isn't so safe any more.

"Maybe it's good that the pressure is on us," says Woodruff. "We haven't had to play a game where the pressure was really on."

It's on this week. The Steelers, who dropped an overtime game in Houston last week while the Cincinnati Bengals pulled within a game of them by beating the Cleveland Browns in another overtime game, face the Browns at Three Rivers Stadium Sunday while the Bengals visit New Orleans.

And while a Pittsburgh win and Cincinnati loss Sunday could clinch it for the Steelers, things could get a lot worse. If the Steelers lose either to Cleveland or to the Raiders in Los Angeles next week and the Bengals win both their games, the Bengals win the title because their division record is better.

The Pittsburgh and Cincinnati games are two of nine games this weekend with bearing on the playoff races.

The four teams who still have a chance to win the NFC East play each other. The Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys, tied for the top at 9-5 with the New York Giants, meet at Texas Stadium while the Cardinals, who a game back at 8-6.

The Giants can win the title by winning both their games; the Redskins and Cowboys can win if they win both and the Giants lose one, and the Cards can win if they take both and the Redskins beat the Cowboys.

The 9-5 Los Angeles Rams can clinch an NFC wild-card berth by winning their last two games. They're at home to Houston as Eric Dickerson will continue his pursuit of O.J. Simpson's record of 2,003 yards in a season, 212 yards away with two games to go.

Seattle is at Kansas City and San Diego at Denver in the AFC West. The Seahawks, 12-2, can clinch if the 11-3 Broncos lose; if not, the division will be decided in their game in Seattle on Dec. 15 in which the winner takes the division, the loser gets a wild card.

New England, marginally alive for an AFC wild card, visits Philadelphia. The only way the Patriots can make the playoffs is if they win their last two games while the Raiders lose twice. The Raiders can clinch Monday night if they beat Detroit at the Pontiac Silverdome.

There are two Saturday games — NFC West champion San Francisco plays host to Minnesota and Buffalo visits the New York Jets.

In Sunday games with no direct bearing on the playoffs, Green Bay visits NFC Central winner Chicago; Atlanta is at Tampa Bay and AFC East winner Miami at Indianapolis.

The Steelers have one major edge against the Browns — since Three Rivers Stadium opened in 1970, Cleveland is 0-14. And the Browns are 4-10 this season but are 3-3 since Marty Schottenheimer took over for Sam Rutigliano, whose only win was 20-10 victory over the Steelers at Cleveland.

"I haven't even thought about it (the streak)," says Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll. "We're getting our football team ready to play another football game."

And Cleveland linebacker Robert Jackson says:

"I don't believe in a jinx. I do believe that for some reason, we continue to lose there. Going into the game, we don't think about having never won there."

Cincinnati, meanwhile, will face a fresh quarterback in New Orleans, where the 6-8 Saints, out of playoff contention, will replace Richard Todd with Dave Wilson.

"I'm sure Pittsburgh realizes that if we continue to play well we have a chance to win two, and therefore that they cannot afford to lose a game," says Bengals Coach Sam Wyche, whose team beat the Browns 20-17 in overtime last week while the Steelers were losing in overtime, 23-20 to Houston.

Blue Devils Open ACC Title Drive

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Fourth-ranked Duke opens the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball title race Saturday when it hosts sputtering Virginia, while 10th-ranked North Carolina State and No. 16 North Carolina also entertain weekend guests.

The Blue Devils have claimed four straight victories and were the preseason pick to take the league title. Virginia split a pair of games in a tournament in Hawaii, captured its own tournament in Charlottesville, then was knocked off by William & Mary Wednesday night.

N.C. State meets Western Carolina and will try for its fifth straight victory. The Tar Heels meet Oral Roberts just as the school starts into final exams.

In other action involving ACC teams, Augusta meets a struggling Clemson team, Maryland goes to Alabama and Appalachian State faces Wake Forest.

Duke trounced Appalachian State 98-64 as Mark Alarie, the conference's player of the week this week, tossed in 22 points. The contest also marked the return of David Henderson, whose back problems have kept him out of action.

"It was good to get Henderson in for that long (14 minutes) and he didn't seem to have any trouble with his back," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Virginia dropped its first decision to William & Mary in Williamsburg since 1966 when Scott Coval's 15-foot jumper at the buzzer gave the Indians a 54-53 victory.

"We've still got a long way to go," Cavaliers' coach Terry Holland said after the game. "There's no question about that. We're a decent team, hopefully headed towards becoming a good team."

For the Wolfpack, Wednesday night's 101-54 victory over North Carolina A&T was a chance for Coach Jim Valvano to look at a tall lineup that overcame the Aggies' zone defense as well as a sluggish start.

"The depth was the difference," Valvano said in reference to his clearing the bench when the game was in hand. "I'm most proud of how hard everybody played. I'm most proud of that."

North Carolina pulled away to defeat Howard earlier this week, but Coach Dean Smith is convinced that the easy games are over for his young Tar Heels.

"We have beaten the three teams we should have won from," Smith said. "Now, here we go."

Wake Forest trailed by as many as 19 points in the first half against Davidson before tying the score in the second half and going ahead on a Tyrone Bogues layup.

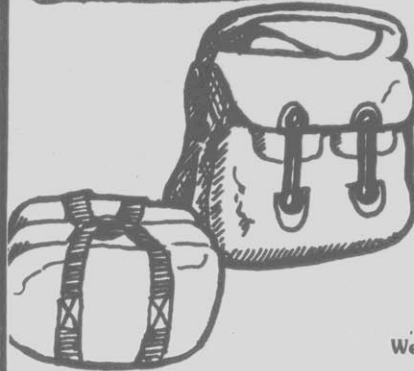

Maryland held off Cleveland State for a 95-84 victory as Adrian Branch scored 23 points.

Clemson has been so plagued by injured that the Tigers took Ed Bynum out of his role as trainer and made him a member of the team. He is the brother of former Clemson player Clarke Bynum. Against South Carolina Wednesday night, the Tigers went scoreless in the last two minutes and fell to 2-2.

Lombardi Award Winner To Utilize Pro Leverage

HOUSTON (AP) — Tony Degrade, a defensive tackle from the University of Texas, said he was looking forward to two things after winning the Lombardi Award — using the trophy to bargain with pro teams and getting out of his tuxedo.

Degrade, a 6-foot-4, 280-pound senior from the small West Texas town of Snyder, was honored Thursday night as the best college football lineman in the country.

"I've never made this many speeches in my life," he said in acceptance. All four finalists had addressed the audience shortly before.

"Each of these guys would have deserved this award," Degrade said. "I'm just left speechless and all I can say is thank God and thank everybody out there."

He said in a news conference afterward that the award "definitely will" help him negotiate a professional contract.

"Lombardi winners have a little edge," he said.

But Degrade said his mind was on other things as well. He said one evening of fancy dressing was enough.

"This is the first time I've ever been in a tuxedo," he said uncomfortably and indicated he was looking forward to getting rid of the suit.

our opponents' backfields."

The Lombardi award, made from a 40-pound block of granite, is named for player and coach Vince Lombardi. It has been presented annually since 1970 and is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Houston.

Dean Steinkuhler, last year's winner and now an offensive lineman with the Houston Oilers, presented the award. When he announced the winner was from the University of Texas, the partisan crowd did not wait for him to finish his sentence, but roared its approval. Several spectators made "hook 'em Horns" signs as Degrade walked to the speakers' podium.

Degrade, who said he never would have gotten the nomination without his teammates, credited Texas' other starting defensive tackle, Bill Heathcock, for his success.

"He did all the dirty work and I received all the glory," Degrade said.

Akers called Degrade "one of the most genuine people I have ever had the pleasure to meet."

Akers said that when he went to visit Degrade in Snyder "the first thing he wanted me to do was to meet his town."

Edmonds Honored

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose Edmonds, a 5-11 senior forward for N.C. Wesleyan's women's basketball team, has been named Player of the Week in the Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. Edmonds was cited for her play against Methodist and Roanoke last week.

Against Methodist, Edmonds scored 25 points, pulled down 11 rebounds and made 11 of 15 shots from the floor in a 74-48 Battling Bishop win. Against Roanoke, she scored 24 points, captured 16 rebounds and was 12 of 20 from the floor.

Edmonds, a co-captain this year, played her high school ball at Farmville Central and is from Fountain.

Degrade said his coat measured "52 or 54" inches in the chest — huge, but, he noted, far smaller than that of another finalist, 325-pound William Perry, a noseguard from Clemson.

Degrade said the gargantuan Perry, known as "the Refrigerator" for his massive build, would have won the award if it had been given purely for highlight films. In footage shown at the awards ceremony, Perry scooped up a running back and spiked him several feet away, then chased down a quarterback.

Other finalists were Bill Fralic, a 6-5, 285-pound offensive tackle who is a senior at Pittsburgh, and University of Southern California outside linebacker Jack Del Rio, a 6-4, 235-pound senior.

Degrade led the Longhorns to a 7-3-1 season by making 147 tackles, 123 of them unassisted. His coach, Fred Akers, called him "a fixture in

As you may have gathered from the small hint running down the middle of this ad, something is happening to Isuzu's low prices. They're getting even lower. We call it our Lowest Price Truck Sale and if you look over on the right you'll find the truck that inspired it.

With its suggested retail price of only $5775; this rugged, four-speed, standard-bed Isuzu PUP already costs less than America's five best-selling compact pickups.

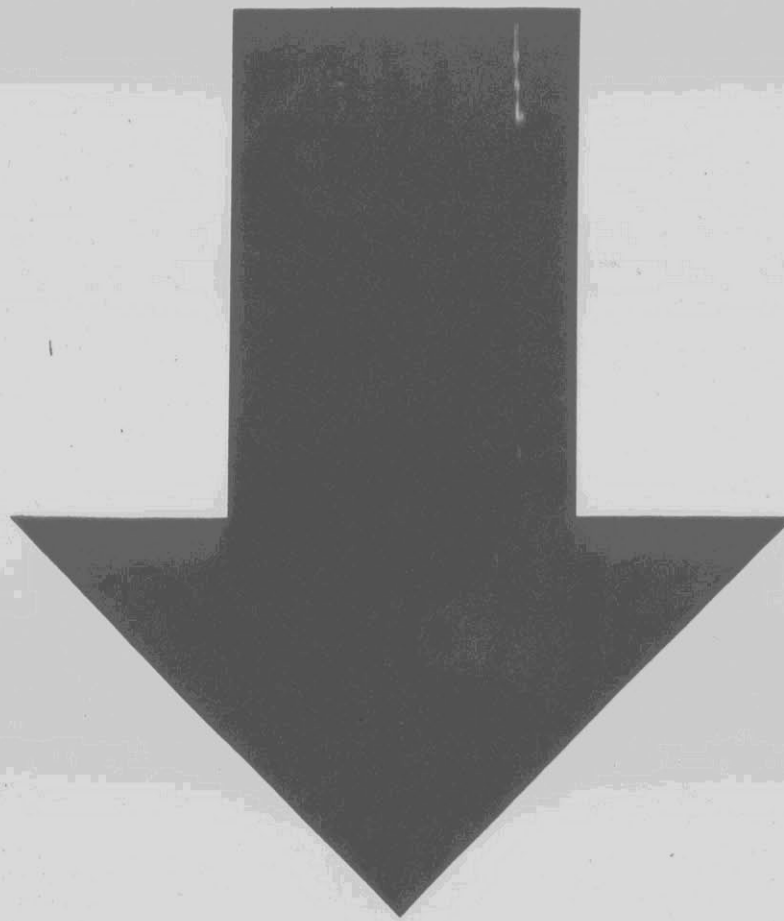

But now, thanks to generous factory incentives, you can pick up one for even less than that.

The nice part is you're not getting less of a truck. Isuzu PUPs have not only earned a world wide reputation for toughness, Four Wheeler Magazine has called them "a shining example of what quality control is all about."

Of course, this isn't the only price we're lowering in our Lowest Price Truck Sale. You can take your pick of a variety of different PUPs. But don't take too long. The arrow won't be pointing this way forever.

This Isuzu is already priced lower than the top five compact pickups. So where do we go from here?

Facts About The BIBLE

BY

A MAIN CAUSE OF STRIFE

AMONG THE EARLY HEBREWS (INCLUDING ABRAHAM AND HIS DESCENDANTS) A PRIME CAUSE FOR QUARRELS WAS THE IMPORTANCE OF ABUNDANT GRAZING AREAS. AND THESE QUARRELS COULD EVENTUALLY EXPLODE INTO A FULL-FLEDGED TRIBAL WAR! THE HERDSMEN WERE KNOWN FOR THEIR QUICK AND VOLATILE TEMPER! AND THERE WAS NO REASONING WITH THEM WHEN IT CAME TO PROPER PASTURES FOR THEIR SHEEP--BECAUSE THEIR MAIN SOURCE OF WEALTH AND FOOD CAME FROM THE WELL-BEING OF THEIR HERDS. ABRAHAM KNEW FULL WELL THAT THIS WAS SO, AND TO PUT A STOP TO THE QUARRELING OF HIS HERDSMEN WITH HIS NEPHEW LOT'S HERDSMEN HE PARTED WAYS WITH HIS FAVORITE NEPHEW RATHER THAN RISK A SERIOUS CONFLICT. (GEN. 13:6-8) AND EVEN MORE IMPORTANT THAN PASTURE WERE GOOD WATERING PLACES. IF THE HORNY-HANDED KEEPERS OF THE SHEEP FOUGHT OVER PASTURE LAND, EVEN MORE SO WERE THEY READY TO GO TO BATTLE FOR PLENTIFUL WATER. IT DIDN'T TAKE MUCH TO INCITE THEM TO THE POINT WHERE ROCKS WOULD FLY AND THEIR STURDY STAFFS BE RAISED IN ANGER! WE FIND A MENTION OF THIS WHEN ISAAC'S HERDSMEN PROCLAIM TO THE HERDSMEN OF GERAR, "THE WATER IS OURS!" (GEN. 26:20) AND JUST INSTANCES LIKE THIS WOULD BRING ON WARS THAT LASTED FOR GENERATIONS!

Battler Against Apartheid Mixes Fun With Outrage

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Referring to South Africa's Department of Plural Affairs, an agency to regulate black people, the black bishop says its name suggests that "one of us would be a singular Plural. If he lived out of town, I suppose he'd be a rural Plural."

Such touches of humor, mingled with indignation at restrictions on blacks in his homeland, are hallmarks of South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and elected last month as the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg.

He is the first black to hold that influential post in the strongly white branch of the worldwide Anglican communion, magnifying his position as a forthright opponent of South Africa's racial separation laws at a time of rising American protests against them.

"We shall be free, about that there can be no doubt," he says, emphasizing his conviction that God is involved in the situation and that his purposes of justice will prevail.

"For goodness' sake, don't mope," he recently advised a group of U.S. church people. Despite the present sufferings of blacks in his country, he said, "Don't feel sorry for us. We are going to win. Of that, we can be certain because God is going to win."

That firm confidence radiates steadily from the blocky bishop of 53, along with his bent for laughter, his sense of the absurd in compartmentalizing races and his banked outrage at the dehumanizing effects of it.

About that, he admits he himself sometimes gets despondent. "Sometimes I feel so low I could crawl under a snake."

South Africa's whites "are trying to defend the indefensible," he says, adding his typically charitable note, "They are not demons. They are human beings who are scared." He notes that whites are only one in five of South Africa's population, and, arching his brows, adds perplexedly:

"Perhaps they have reason to be scared."

Tutu is a marvelously expressive man, gesturing expansively, clapping his hands, scratching the back of his neck as he speaks, puckering his lips, sometimes breaking into high-pitched, infectious chuckles, his eyes lighting with impish mirth.

"What I do has nothing to do with courage," he says. "It has everything to do with belonging to the church of God. When God takes you by the scruff of the neck, you've had it."

At present a visiting professor at the Episcopal General Theological Seminary in New York, he since 1979 has been general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, his country's biggest ecumenical organization, including whites. He is expected to take over the bishopric of Johannesburg early next year.

With American demonstrations surging this week outside the South African Embassy in Washington and at consulates in a half dozen other cities, charging that Reagan administration policy props up South Africa's apartheid system, Tutu assailed that policy.

Christians Condemn Capital Punishment

MIAMI (AP) — Christian leaders in Florida, which has the nation's largest death-row population, have joined in condemning capital punishment as counterproductive and immoral.

The statement, initiated by Episcopal Bishop Frank Cerveney and Roman Catholic Bishop John J. Snyder of Jacksonville, was signed by three other Episcopal bishops in the state, eight other Catholic bishops and leaders of 10 additional Christian denominations.

"A moral consensus in opposition to the death penalty has developed within the leadership of our communities," they said. Declaring that the death penalty is harmful, immoral and not necessary to "any legitimate goal of the state," they said "its use threatens to undermine belief in the inherent worth of human life."

Leaders of the state's largest Protestant group, the Southern Baptists, were not listed among the signers.

Florida, whose 226 condemned men give it the largest death-row population in the nation, in 1979 became the first state to execute a man after a decade-long moratorium on executions. It since has executed nine others.

Faithful Of Judaism See Dreams Fading

By The Associated Press

"Next year, in Jerusalem." It's an old dream of the scattered faithful of Judaism, that someday, in bright fulfillment, they all would again be gathered in their spiritual homeland of Israel. But the goal has altered for many in America.

The change often is pondered in Jewish circles, discussed and debated, but rarely voiced explicitly and publicly — something that Rabbi David M. Gordis of the American Jewish Committee has put in forthright terms.

"This is our home," he told the organization's recent executive council meeting in Chicago, adding that American Jewry now should also be seen as an enduring center of the faith in "equal partnership" with Israel.

He said "the time has come" to assert "that we are part of a proud and self-confident Jewish community that can, and will, survive creatively in this country, in a constructive and mutually enhancing partnership with Israel."

This runs counter to the classical idea of Zionism that with the establishment of Israel, the "diaspora" — the Jews dispersed around the world — would gradually all return to Israel, he noted, adding:

"It is now clear that this will not happen."

While American Jews may encourage "aliya," or return, he said they need to recognize that it's not an inclusive aspiration in this country, nor a broadly realistic expectation.

"There will be no mass shifts of Jewish population to Israel, except from countries where Jews face grave danger or severe and ongoing discrimination," he said, emphasizing that this is not the case in America.

Other Jewish scholars also say a growing reassessment of Zionism has gone on in American Jewish thought, a shift in attitudes about it, despite continued strong emotional ties to the biblical homeland.

"Ideology has undergone a transformation, a fundamental change," says Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, the committee's international affairs director. Instead of the classical ideal of an "ingathering of the exiles," he said, "we've come to see America as our home, a land of liberty, justice and fulfillment."

He said this has meant for a kind of "polycentric view" of Jewish nationhood, despite continued "strong emotional ties to the biblical homeland."

The United States has about 6 million Jews, compared to about 4 million in Israel.

Gordis, a Talmudic scholar, former vice president of the Jewish Seminary in Los Angeles and recently named the committee's executive vice president, said:

"We may expect a central role for Israel in Jewish life, but we reject totally the principle that because we do not live in Israel we are only peripheral to Jewish life."

Citing "mutually respectful" exchanges in educational, cultural and political life, he said:

"Israel may safely predicate its viability and its future on American Jewry's strong and continued support, but not on the disintegration of American Jewish life," he said.

"Israel must not be built on the ruins of American Jewry."

Classical Zionism sees "diaspora Judaism" — the scattered flock — as "historically irrelevant" at best, and "at worst, a destructive aberration," Gordis said.

"There are many in Israel, and some in this country as well, who still believe this. But there are many all over the world who challenge this assumption...We will continue to feel strongly and personally Israel's anguish and triumphs. But this is our home."

Another Zionist assumption that requires "rethinking," he said, is the "expectation that creation of a Jewish state would bring about a 'normalization' of the Jewish people."

Gordis said "I, myself, have serious doubts that there is such a thing as a 'normal people.' But even if there is, I'm quite sure we Jews do not fit the bill. We defy all the usual sociological characterizations."

"We are a universal people and a nationality; we are a faith and an ethnic community; and the relationship between the state of Israel and world Jewry is an essential element of Jewish uniqueness and, if you will, our abnormality."

"Given all of these 'aberrations,' I see no normalization in sight, nor do I crave it."

In regard to Judaism's firm and permanent establishment in the United States, he said "Jews occupy a prominent position in American political, social and economic life."

Brown Returns

The Rev. Luther Brown has been returned to York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church to begin his 12th year. His reappointment was announced during the 121st session of the North Carolina Conference of the A.M.E. Zion Church held in Rocky Mount recently.

Charles Davis, preacher's steward, presented Brown to his congregation for the 12th time Sunday.

Margaret Blackmond was a conference delegate from York Memorial and D.D. Garrett Sr. was appointed coordinator of social and political action for the conference.

Services Scheduled

Holy Mission United Holy Church will hold preaching and healing services at 7:30 p.m. today with missionary Annie Dixon as the guest speaker.

Services will continue at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday with lay missionary Darlene Wilkes and evangelist Ella Brown as speakers. At 11 a.m. Sunday pastor Shirley Atkinson will speak at the regular worship service.

'Messiah' Sunday

The chancel choir of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church will present Handel's "Messiah" (part I) at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the church.

Jerry F. Jolley, the church's music minister, will conduct the performance, which features the Greenville Chamber Orchestra and Philip Evancho, baritone. Other soloists include Joel Merritt, tenor; Teresa Goodman, alto; Kay Henderson, soprano; Wendy Bissinger, alto, and Susan Pate, soprano.

A nursery will be provided. Part II will be presented March 31, Palm Sunday, and Part III will be presented Easter Sunday, April 7.

Rehearsal Canceled

The Mount Calvary Mass Choir rehearsal and business meeting scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today has been canceled.

Pastor Anniversary

Pastor anniversary services honoring Vice Bishop J.B. Taylor will be held at Corey's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church this week. Services will be held Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m.

Speakers, churches and auxiliaries participating include: Monday — the Rev. Charles Paker and the deacons and trustees of Cherry Lane; Tuesday — the Rev. Elmer Jackson and the usher board and pastor's aid of Elm Grove; Wednesday — the Rev. Otis Green and the Bible study and YPCL of Cedar Grove; Thursday — the Rev. Matthew Best and the senior choir of Oak Grove; Friday — the Rev. A.H. Hartsfield and the traveling choir, mother board and home mission of Loving Union, and Sunday — Selvia Chapel.

Pageant Planned

The New Covenant Bible School of Grifton will present "O Holy Night," a pageant of the Christmas story told in song, Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The program is directed by the Rev. Ollie Harris.

Musical Tribute

The A&T State University Fellowship Gospel Choir of Greensboro will present a musical tribute to the late Richard B. Johnson Sunday at 5 p.m. at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church. Reddick Chapel Church Choir No. 2 will also appear.

Johnson, a Bethel resident and former agriculture teacher, served several years as president of the Pitt County chapter of the A&T Alumni Association and was serving in this office when he died last November. A World War II veteran, he was a Bethel town commissioner, a member of the Mid-East Commission executive board, a board member of Operation Sunshine girls' activities program and the Pitt County Boys' Club, a deacon and senior choir president of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, and a Bethel Senior Citizens Club member.

The 90-member A&T choir has been organized since 1969. For the past six years it has appeared in Greenville, largely through Johnson's efforts, to assist with fund raising for the Pitt County A&T Alumni Chapter Scholarship Fund.

Observance Set

The members of St. James Free Will Baptist Church will observe the ninth anniversary of Pastor C.R. Parker Sunday at 11 a.m. Guest speaker will be the Rev. Roger Hooks of Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church, Belvoir.

Mills Chapel FWB

A worship service will be held Sunday at Mills Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Black Jack. At 11 a.m., the service will be conducted by the Rev. J.L. Swinson and the church choir. At 3 p.m., Swinson and the choir will have the service at St. Johns Missionary Baptist Church, Washington.

Waterside Service

A service will be held at Waterside Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Proceeds will be for the building fund.

Brown's Chapel

Elder James Lloyd and the congregation of Lloyd's Chapel Church of God in Christ of Robersonville will be guests Sunday at 8 p.m. at Brown's Chapel Apostolic Faith Church of God and Christ on Belvoir Highway.

Missionary Malissa Spain is in charge of the service, which is for the anniversary of Bishop R.A. Griswold.

English Chapel

The Rev. Theodore Underhill will have a service for Bishop W.L. Phillips Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at English Chapel Church.

Week Of Services

Services will be held Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. at First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church, 1104 Douglas Ave.

The schedule includes: Monday — Elder W.E. Bowser of Elm City and his congregation; Tuesday — Elder E.L. Garner of Kinston and his congregation; Wednesday — Elder James Trip of Greenville and the Holly Hill Male Chorus; Thursday — Bishop H.B. Brown of Newark, N.J., and the G & W Chorus, and Friday — Bishop Lillie Boyd and Burning Bush Holiness Church.

Saturday Bazaar

Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church will hold a Christmas bazaar Saturday beginning at 8:30 a.m. at the Rotary Club in Bethel.

Elm Grove FWB

Bishop Arlester Coward and his choir, ushers and congregation from New Haven, Conn., will be at Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Ayden, tonight at 7:30.

Presidents of church auxiliaries will meet with Pastor Elmer Jackson Saturday at 5 p.m. At 6 p.m., there will be a deacon, mother and trustee meeting.

Church school will be held Sunday at 9:30 a.m. The 11 a.m. worship service will be conducted by Pastor Jackson.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting services will be held this weekend at Rock Spring Free Will Baptist Church.

Quarterly conference will be Friday at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at 7:30 p.m., Holy Communion will be celebrated with Elder Horace Joyner and Mount Shiloh Free Will Baptist Church. Sunday at 11 a.m., the worship service will be led by Bishop W.L. Phillips and the senior choir. Bishop J.H. Vines and Lewis Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will be in charge of the service Sunday at 3 p.m.

TV Alters 'Sun Also Rises' But Basic Story Still Intact

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Sun Also Rises," in two parts starting Sunday night on NBC, is stylish, visually appealing and occasionally dramatic television, but it is not what Papa wrote.

While Robert L. Joseph sought with appreciable success to maintain the spirit of Ernest Hemingway's 1926 novel in his adaptation, one minor character from the book is made the central figure in a gratuitous scene of violence that does not belong in "The Sun Also Rises."

There are other less climactic events written into the four-hour miniseries, for theatrical effect, that likewise do not appear in the Hemingway version.

In one, Jake Barnes, Hemingway's protagonist played by Hart Bochner, attends a silly, overly sentimental funeral for a prostitute he knew before the war, and in another, Barnes' friend, Bill Gorton (Zeljko Ivanek), dies of injuries suffered in a plane crash while on a daredevil flight.

They neither contribute significantly to, nor particularly detract from, the production.

Joseph, on the other hand, emphasized what he calls the anti-war aspect of the story, which Hemingway only suggested, by including a battlefield scene in which Barnes is rendered impotent by an exploding grenade — something that occurs before Hemingway's story begins — and another vignette not drawn from the novel in which a wartime friend kills himself rather than face life with a grotesquely disfigured face.

"When Hemingway wrote the book," the screenwriter said, "the streets of Europe were littered with those wounded in World War I, and he felt he did not have to call attention to that in any graphic sense. The anti-war feeling in the book is tacit. I felt it had to be expanded."

Tampering with classic books for the sake of an audience that cannot reconsider a passage from the book to learn the author's meaning or intention is not new to Hollywood.

A 1957 motion-picture version of "The Sun Also Rises," starring Tyrone Power and Ava Gardner, was more faithful to the novel, but was a critical, and box-office, flop.

One thing seems clear here: Joseph has damaged neither Hemingway nor "The Sun Also Rises" with his dramatization, and the resulting production is more than acceptable.

"You can't approach it as changing the book, rather as adapting it to another medium," Joseph said. "When you take something like 'The Sun Also Rises,' really an impressionistic novella, you can't simply photograph a work like that."

The cast is, on the whole, adept, particularly Jane Seymour, the British-born actress who was in the 1981 ABC production of another American classic, John Steinbeck's "East of Eden," as Lady Brett Ashley, and Ian Charleson ("Chariots of Fire") as the drunken Scotsman, Mike Campbell, whom she plans to marry.

Robert Carradine, however, is unconvincing as Robert Cohn, Barnes' prizefighter-friend from Princeton who falls irretrievably in love with Lady Brett, while Leonard Nimoy as the shadowy Count Mipopolous is fine in a role that has been broadened to excess for the TV production.

Bochner, with his matinee-idol looks (he is co-starring in the current theatrical film "Supergirl"), is certainly appropriate as Barnes from a physical standpoint, but he seems at times to regard his disability and its effect on his relationship with Lady Brett in an ironic rather than anguished way.

In fact, there may be no such thing as definitive Hemingway on film, and the 20th Century-Fox Television production is at least successful in evoking the ambience of Papa's Paris and Pamplona of the 1920s.

Credit NBC for attempting a dramatization that might have been more at home on public TV's "American Playhouse." And there's this:

"Why not give millions of people who have never been exposed to Hemingway a taste of his work?" said Joseph, who knew the writer in Paris. "The recent PBS miniseries 'Brideshead Revisited' put Evelyn Waugh's novel back on the bestseller list and I'd li Lo do that with 'The Sun Also Rises.'"

Florida County Saves Its Turkey

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Officials have rescued the county mascot from the chopping block, turning down a motion to take the turkey off the official seal of Collier County.

County Manager Don Lusk last week proposed changing the mascot because some employees in county cars bearing the bird logo had been called "turkeys."

'Diploma Mill' Customers May Be Exposed

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Calling bogus diploma mills a mushrooming problem, federal authorities said the "Dipscam" investigation will continue indefinitely and that 2,500 people who bought phony Harvard, Penn State and other diplomas from an Oregon man may be exposed during court proceedings.

A U.S. attorney said the names of the 2,500 people, who may be practicing medicine or law or holding other jobs under false pretenses, may be revealed during court proceedings against Dennis Everett Gunter of Grants Pass, Ore.

Gunter, 38, indicted in August and scheduled for arraignment on federal charges Dec. 19 in Eugene, Ore., is accused of selling counterfeit diplomas and certificates from about 300 schools for $39.95 to $64.95, authorities said.

The indictment alleges that Gunter offered, among other things, counterfeit certificates from the American Society of Clinical Pathologists and Bronze Star medals of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The case against Gunter is the FBI's sixth "Dipscam" probe in four years. It differs the first five because he is charged with selling phony degrees from real schools; the others were convicted of setting up fictitious schools and issuing fake degrees and transcripts for a fee.

More than 10,000 people in the United States may be holding false medical degrees, according to a six-month congressional investigation. Democratic Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida, chairman of the House Health Subcommittee, said his panel's findings suggest "the largest medical scandal in recent memory."

U.S. Attorney Tom Coffin in Eugene told The Associated Press that "it's possible" the names of purchasers of the phony diplomas might be made public as part of the court record.

"If that occurs, it would be the first time any purchaser's name would be on the public record," said Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI's North Carolina office, which has run the Dipscam investigation since it began in 1980.

"It's hard to put a dollar price on this sort of thing, but people have used these degrees to get better jobs," said Pence. "It seems to be a mushrooming problem." He said the Dipscam operation will continue indefinitely.

Gunter is charged with one count each of mail fraud and wire fraud, both of which carry possible penalties of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Gunter allegedly operated a firm called "Alumni Arts," which placed ads in such publications as Rolling Stone, Moneyworth, Soldier of Fortune, Science Digest and Psychology Today.

The ads read: "College diplomas — one day. Has your diploma been lost or damaged? Most schools available. Beautiful exacting reproductions, including seals and colors. All inquiries confidential."

The schools Gunter allegedly offered bogus degrees from included Harvard, Penn State, University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, North Carolina State, the University of Michigan, Michigan State University and the University of Colorado.

Coffin said the circumstances under which purchasers' names could be revealed depend on how Gunter pleads.

Pence said that in the previous five Dipscam cases, purchasers' names were furnished only to state or licensing authorities for possible action.

Under federal trial rules, if Gunter pleads guilty in Eugene federal court, the case will stay in Oregon and the decision on releasing the purchasers' names would probably be made there, Coffin said.

But if he pleads innocent, the case would move to Charlotte, N.C., federal court, where the indictment originated. Whether names are released would then be up to North Carolina prosecutors.

An FBI investigator who spoke on condition he not be identified said agents who checked with registrars of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University confirmed that "more than 90 percent" of individuals who had purchased fake diplomas from those schools from Gunter had never attended the schools.

Raymond Strong, UNC-Chapel Hill registrar, confirmed that the FBI had contacted him with the names of "12 or 15" people claiming to have diplomas from his school. Strong said only two had attended the university. One failed to graduate, and the other had his diploma withheld because he owed the university money.

James Bundy, registrar of North Carolina State, said the FBI asked him to check "two or three names," but he said he couldn't recall if they had attended the school.

Workers Returning

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Employees of Union Carbide Agricultural Products Co. were expected to return to the job after a bomb threat forced the evacuation of about 400 employees.

A "limited staff" returned to work Thursday following the bomb threat, which was phoned in about 7:40 a.m., company spokeswoman Mary Ann Ford said. Most of the 400 employees were expected to return to work today, she said.

The research facility was evacuated after receiving a bomb threat from a caller who spoke "broken English," Ms. Ford said.

No bomb was found in an hour-long search, she said.

The threat occurred in the wake of the toxic methyl isocyanate gas leak at a Union Carbide pesticide plant in Bhopal, India, that has killed at least 1,267 people, Ms. Ford said.

RULE FOR THE DAY — This sign at the town limits of Banner Elk was the rule for the day Thursday as the first major snowstorm of the season struck the northwestern North Carolina mountains. Snow fell

Actuary Says Auto Insurance Too High

RALEIGH (AP) — Automobile insurance rates should be lowered, as suggested by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, rather than increased, as the North Carolina Rate Bureau has recommended, an industry consultant says.

J. Robert Hunter Jr., a Virginia actuary who is a consultant to the N.C. Department of Insurance, says Ingram's proposal to cut automobile insurance rates to $294 a year for the typical customer who pays $325 is fair.

Current rates, if continued, "would impose excessive rate charges upon the taxpayers," Hunter said.

The Insurance Department contends that rates should be reduced because the insurance industry has overestimated the growth in its losses and expenses it pays.

The N.C. Rate Bureau, which proposes rates for the insurance industry, has suggested changes that would result in an overall rate increase of 4.1 percent. It is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

Hunter said in an interview after a public hearing Wednesday that the Rate Bureau's proposal would result in a rate of return on equity for insurance companies of 30.2 percent and that Ingram's proposal would result in a rate of return on equity of 23 percent.

That rate indicates the percentage of profit earned for each dollar of stockholder investment.

The Rate Bureau's proposal, Hunter said, would result in a profit of more than $9 for every $100 of premiums — $5 on the premiums and more than $4 from income earned by investing those premiums, including investment.

The industry average, Hunter said, was $2.90 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983.

V. Lane Wharton, a Raleigh attorney who represents the Insurance Department, said in an interview that the Rate Bureau had overestimated the amount of its losses and expenses.

For example, he said, the Rate Bureau said its losses for bodily injury liability coverage would grow to $107.5 million from $92.4 million. The department estimates that those losses would grow to $102 million.

The Rate Bureau estimated that expenses for providing bodily injury liability coverage would grow to $34 million from $29.9 million. Wharton said, while the department estimated those expenses would remain about the same.

"We have witnessed intensified efforts at expense control by the insurers, and drive for sharply increased worker productivity," said Hunter in documents filed with the department before the hearing.

Ingram's proposed reductions, modified by Hunter to take into account more recent data, would be 4.8 percent for bodily injury; 6.8 percent for property damage liability; 5.4 percent for medical payments; 23.3 percent for comprehensive coverage; and 13.2 percent for collision coverage.

Dare Police Chief Missing In Plane Crash

By TOM FOREMAN JR
Associated Press Writer
NEW HOPE, N.C. (AP) — Officials say they have to wait until a staff member of the National Transportation Safety Board arrives before they can investigate the wreckage of a Franklin County plane crash that killed at least one person.

Lt. Wesley Denton of the Franklin County Sheriff's Department said Thursday that an NTSB staff member from Atlanta is scheduled to arrive today to investigate the crash off N.C. 98, about 20 miles northeast of Raleigh.

A sheriff's department dispatcher said two people were killed and identified them as Kill Devil Hills Police Chief Charles E. Bray and his wife Roma. Later, however, Denton said only a female body had been found aboard the plane, along with Mrs. Bray's identification. The body had not been positively identified Thursday evening, Denton said.

"Our problem is that we can't go into the wreckage" to see if another body is inside, Denton said.

An eyewitness said he saw someone jump from the plane moments before it crashed.

"According to witnesses, they reported an explosion, apparently when the wing and tail section came loose on the plane," Denton said of the crash, which was reported at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Cecil Monk, area supervisor for the Federal Aviation Administration at Raleigh-Durham Airport, said Bray filed a flight plan saying he would fly the plane and would have one passenger.

"We have two search teams out on foot looking for other parts of the wreckage," Denton said. "They are also searching for the other occupant."

Douglas Rider said he was standing in a field when he saw the plane come out of the clouds and someone leap from the plane.

"From where I was at, it looked like he was right above me and somebody jumped," Rider said. "It looked like the plane was going to land on the highway. Then I heard it hit."

"It looked like somebody jumped," he said. "It looked like a person."

Tony Horton, a member of the Bunn Rescue Squad, said he "saw a glimpse of something falling out of the air" as he was driving along U.S. 401.

"The beepers went off and I just pulled in here (the wreck site)," he said. "It was over with when I got here. It was so mangled and everything, I just had to look through the wreckage a little bit."

Denton said the wreckage was scattered over a half-mile strip, with the wings and tail section about a quarter-mile from the rest of the plane. He said about a five hours' worth of gasoline was still in the plane's tanks.

The plane's nose was buried in the ground, while the tail section was left leaning against a tree. No houses were in the immediate area of the crash, but three houses, a store and a church are within sight of the crash.

Members of the 12-man police department gathered at the Kill Devil Hills town hall Thursday afternoon as Duty Officer Jack West attempted to confirm details of the crash with police officials in Franklin and Wake counties.

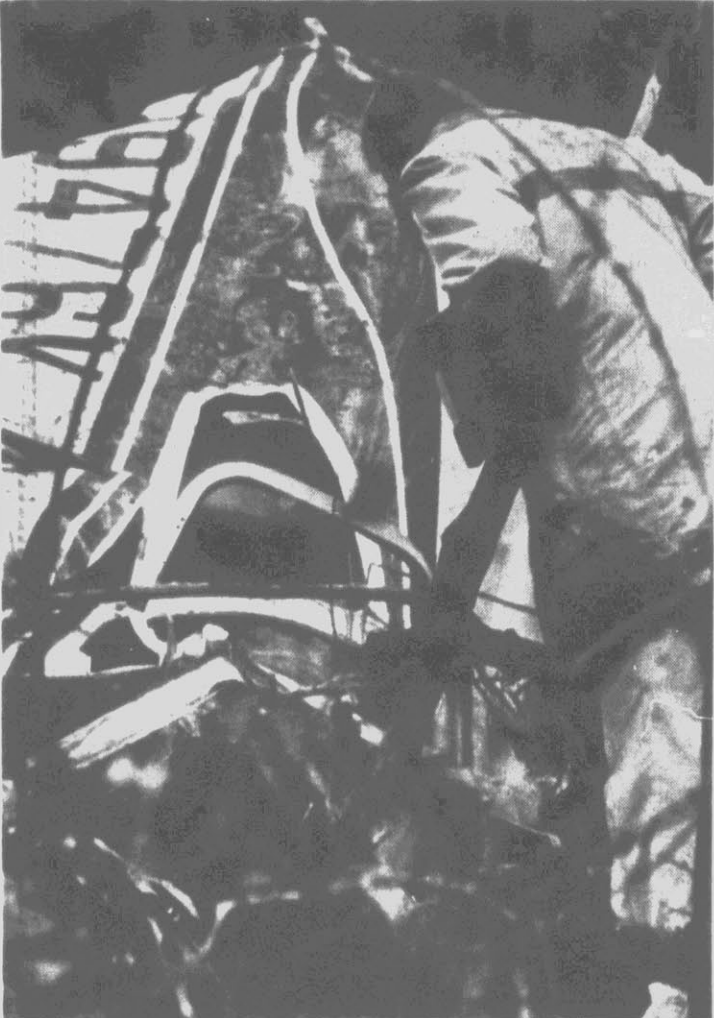

Bray, 39, was hired as a Kill Devil Hills patrolman in 1973 and has been chief of the department since 1977, town officials said. He is a graduate of the FBI training school at Quantico, Va.

Lonnie Dickens, the police chief at nearby Nags Head, said Bray joined the department when it was only a two-man force.

"I'm shocked and deeply moved," Dickens said. "I have no other words that I can say."

Town Commissioner Lacey McNeil said he was shocked by the accident and praised Bray's work in developing the resort community's police department.

Fees Dropped

LONDON (AP) — Yielding to protests from its middle-class supporters, the Conservative government has dropped a plan to force more parents to pay their children's university tuition fees.

But Education Secretary Sir Keith Joseph told the House of Commons that the government still intends to make parents who can afford it pay a greater share of the overall cost of their children's university education.

Joseph backed down on the most controversial part of the program under which an estimated 50,000 parents earning more than 20,000 pounds ($24,000) a year would for the first time have had to pay tuition fees, now set at a state-subsidized 520 pounds ($630) a year. He then cut by nearly half a proposed 39-million pound ($46.8 million) reduction in state grants to college students from middle-class families.

Robeson Girl Will Not Let Loss Of Leg Block Her Life

By DENNIS GARCIA
The Robesonian

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Six-year-old Janna Bray of Lumberton has every right to be bitter, but she isn't.

She has every right to hang her head when she sees other children her age playing games, but she doesn't. She has every right to ask herself, day in and day out, "Why me?" but she doesn't do that either.

Instead, Janna refuses to let what other people call a handicap stand in her way of doing the things any other child her age enjoys.

On July 26, 1983, Janna's right leg was amputated. She had been diagnosed as having osteogenic sarcoma, a form of bone cancer that spreads from the bone to softer tissue, usually the lungs. She was admitted to North Carolina Memorial Hospital, where she underwent surgery to remove the cancer from her leg and lungs. She remained hospitalized for 192 days, receiving chemotherapy treatments. So far, no more cancer found in Janna since the operation. If, after five years, there is no recurrence of the cancer, Janna will be considered cured of the disease.

Her road back to recovery has been long and hard, consisting of many hours of work. With patience and the help of friends and family, Janna has overcome what could have been a permanent emotional setback in her life.

"She's doing great," said Janna's father, Ken Bray, who is the director of social services at Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton. "She finished chemotherapy in August and her hair is coming back and soon she'll have her long, curly hair back. Janna really doesn't think she is handicapped, and she's not. She has what other people call a handicap."

But Bray said her looks are not the only improvements the child has made since her operation. Her mobility is now that of any normal 6-year-old and she doesn't use her artificial leg.

According to Paulette Bray, her mother, Janna has lost interest in the leg and "with as much as she grows, we'll wait until she's interested in it again."

Using crutches has not been easy for Janna, her parents say, so she spends a lot of time hopping from one place to another.

"The crutches are too slow and a headache to work with," Bray said. "She'll use them, but anywhere she can't, she'll hop. She can keep up with any 6-year-old. When she puts it in high gear, we can't keep up with her."

Bray said Janna enjoys all the things other children her age enjoy, such as climbing trees, swinging on the monkey bars at school and "regular 6-year-old stuff."

Janna says she enjoys the monkey bars, and "climbs to the highest bar at school," whenever she can.

Her teachers and friends at school have been supportive, Mrs. Bray said.

"They help her carry things when necessary but best of all, they treat her like one of the others and that's what she needs," she said.

"Janna's real happy," Bray said. "She's full of life, love and expectations. All the things that 6-year-old girls are supposed to be."

However, the Brays weren't always relaxed as they are these days.

The decision the Brays had to make concerning the operation was not made overnight, Bray said.

"We knew we had to be the ones to make the decision because my wife and I are going to take care of Janna for the rest of our lives," he said. "So I'm going to be responsible day in and day out for the decisions that we made. If you let the doctors make the decision for you, they're going to do it in a clinical way."

Bray said he contacted a number of people before the decision was made.

"You gotta think of not just life, but the quality of life," he said.

The Brays finally decided to grant permission for the operation and say it's a decision they will never regret.

"We saw a lot of children who suffer every day of their lives and our daughter is enjoying her life," Bray said. "That hospital (North Carolina Memorial Hospital) is full of children who suffer every day. We feel especially blessed."

Janna had a lot of pain before the operation, Bray said.

"Like the doctor said, it's like carrying a weight around with you and then the weight's gone and you feel a whole lot better," Bray said.

According to Bray, Janna hasn't had any uncommon negative side effects from the operation or chemotherapy.

"She's had the usual effects," he said. "She's been nauseous. She's felt bad for a couple of days but she snaps right back and goes to it."

Not only has Janna's struggle bound the family closer together, but also received support from the entire community.

"We've drawn closer to a lot of these folks in Lumberton," Bray said. "We've had a lot of real positive support from our neighbors and especially our church. People really care around here."

When news of the Brays' situation reached residents of Robeson County, two "Janna Bray Days" were held to raise money to help the Brays defer the cost of hospital bills.

"The insurance took care of most of the bills and we still have some money left over from the 'Janna Bray Days,'" Bray said. "We couldn't have made it without that type of support."

Bray says that Janna has doubled her weight since the operation and that things are going fine.

"She's growing perfectly now and she has superior strength compared to other children her age," Bray said. "Her attitude is great. We feel Janna will be able to do anything she wants to do in life if she's given half a chance. It's not going to slow her down."

Federal Panel Says Money Lure May Push Smuggling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette bootleggers forced into retirement by federal law six years ago may be back in business soon because the money's now too good to resist, a federal commission says.

Smuggling profits are up because some states are increasing cigarette taxes and others — primarily tobacco producers — are holding the line, the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations said Thursday in a report.

"There have been numerous state tax increases since 1981 and state cigarette tax differentials, which are the primary cause of cigarette smuggling, have widened in the past few years," the study said.

"That kind of situation does create potential for an increase in smuggling," explained commission staff director, S. Kenneth Howard, who presented the study to the panel at a public meeting.

A look at the differing state tax rates is all that's need to understand how well crime can pay, the panel says.

North Carolina, the top tobacco-producing state, charges a two-cent tax on each pack of cigarettes, while Michigan and Pennsylvania charge 21 cents a pack. In New York City, state and local taxes add 29 cents to the cost of every pack. Most other states levy at least a dime-a-pack surcharge.

By regularly running truckloads of cigarettes, thieves can take millions of dollars that might otherwise go to state treasuries. Already, the commission's report found, "some evidence has surfaced that cigarette smuggling increased in 1983, albeit modestly."

Federal and state officials thought they had the problem licked in 1978, when Congress enacted a law against running cigarettes across state lines to avoid taxes.

For a time, thugs who once hijacked cigarette trucks from southern states and counterfeiters who put fake tax stamps on packs turned to other scams rather than battle federal lawmen.

But as the cigarette tax disparity rises among states, so does the potential for illegal profit. "Independent entrepreneurs and organized crime groups" are thus likely to take more risks, the commission study reasoned.

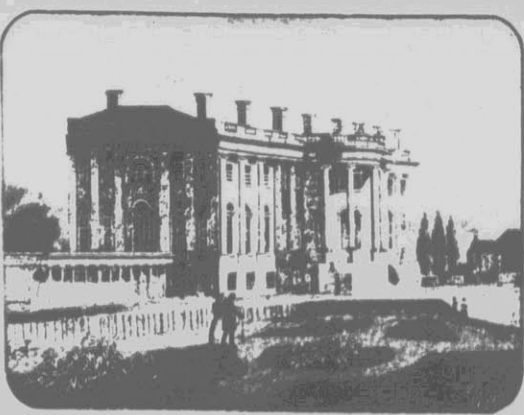

To prevent a resurgence in smuggling, the commission recommended that Congress continue to provide money for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to fight bootlegging. It also warned the federal and state governments not to let down their guard against smugglers.

The commission is a bipartisan panel comprising governors, congressmen and private citizens who meet regularly in Washington to offer advice on ways to improve state and federal cooperation.

FOCUS

"Built for Ages to Come"

Tomorrow is the anniversary of the death of James Hoban — the architect who designed the White House. In 1814, as British soldiers neared the capital, Dolley Madison refused to leave the White House until George Washington's portrait had been removed from the walls for safekeeping. When they arrived, the British set the house on fire. A thunderstorm put out the blaze. The Oval Office, where the President works, was not added until 1902.

DO YOU KNOW — Who painted the portrait of George Washington that hangs in the White House?

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WHICH VENGEFUL MAN GAVE OUR LOCAL DRUGGIST A TASTE OF HIS OWN MEDICINE?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, DEC. 8, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Try to get an early start this morning for today's full moon brings into sharp focus whatever ability to really get much accomplished in a variety of ways you have.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to contact those persons who can best help you to solve some problematical affairs that are important.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get into monetary matters for which you have had little time of late. Make collections and then pay pressing bills.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Concentrate on your own desires and wishes and state them to whomever can be of assistance to you in gaining them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A good day to privately go after the information you need on several matters. Seek out every available source.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You are able to gain your personal wishes today but only if you put out the effort to do so. Socialize this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan early what you want to do in public circles and then carry through in a positive way. Avoid taking risks today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to contact one at a distance by phone or taking a trip for some good purpose. Listen to others' ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact the wisest business person you know and learn how to get your practical affairs in better order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A partner may be upset so postpone a meeting and handle more important affairs. Seek out a cooperative co-worker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you schedule your work wisely, you can handle it very efficiently today. Fine time for health treatments, also.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get into some kind of recreation that will relieve you of anxiety and get good friends to go along with you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Fine day to do whatever will improve conditions at home and to complete whatever has been left undone.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will easily take care of any strange or unusual situations that may come up and should have courses in modern technology and can become quite successful in any such field of endeavor. There is much ingenuity here and could become quite an inventor.

Mourners

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher were among the mourners at a memorial service for IRA bomb victim Sir Anthony Berry, a Conservative Party lawmaker.

The 59-year-old Berry died in the Oct. 12 bombing of the Grand Hotel in Brighton. The bomb was planted by the Irish Republican Army to kill Mrs. Thatcher and others attending the Conservative Party's annual conference.

Princess Diana, wife of the heir to the British throne, attended the service Wednesday because her aunt, Lady Mary Burke Roche, was Berry's first wife. He was married twice and left six children.

NOTICE OF SALE

United States Government Property formerly owned by Charles F. Sutton, Jr. located one mile east of Farmville,
North Carolina.

This property will be sold as one property.
Property consists of a 48.0 acre farm with approximately 31.0 acres cleared location on State Road 1200, and in that same tract of land described in the Trustee's Deed filed on the 28th day of October, 1981, in Book
K-50, Page 365, at the Pitt County Registry, Greenville,
North Carolina.

Said bids will be received by the Farmers Home Administration, 115 Eastbrook
Drive, Greenville, North Carolina
27834, until Friday, Dec. 14, 1984, at 5:00 o'clock p.m., and will be publicly opened at the Farmers Home Administration,
Room 570, 3100 New Bern
Avenue, Raleigh, North Carolina
27601, on Thursday, Dec.
20, 1984, at 2:30 o'clock p.m.

Five percent (5%) bid deposit in the form of cash, cashier's check or certified check payable to the Treasurer of the United States will be required.
The Government reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

TERMS: Cash or ten percent
(10%) down and the balance payable in twenty (20) equal annual installments of principal plus interest on the unpaid balance at a rate of ten and three quarters percent (10 3/4%) per annum or the prevailing rate at the time of bid acceptance by the Government.

For inspection of the property, information and bid forms, contact Mr. Bert M. Hall, Assistant County Supervisor, Farmers Home Administration, 115
Eastbrook Drive, Greenville,
North Carolina 27834. Telephone (919) 752-2035.

PLEASE NOTE THAT
1. Bids will be accepted only in writing on Form FMHA 465-10,
"Invitation, Bid and Acceptance." Any conditions of the bid proposed by the bidder which are not specified on Form FMHA 465-10 must be attached to Form FMHA 465-10.

2. If the bids received are for the same amount, preference will be given to the bid offering cash over the bid requiring financing by FMHA.

3. Bidders whose bids contain the condition that FMHA finance the sale on terms will submit, in addition to the FMHA 465-10, a current financial statement and a pro forma statement indicating their repayment ability.

Farmers Home Administration properties are sold without regard to race, sex, creed, color, or national origin.

IN THE STATE

Graham Visits

RALEIGH (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham spent three hours at the North Carolina Correction Center for Women, delivering a sermon and visiting inmates in their cells, the infirmary and the mental health facility, officials said.

"Basically, he took the time he felt he needed to talk to everybody," said Martin McDade, assistant superintendent of the prison, of the Wednesday visit.

Bible study leader Anne Graham Lotz invited her father after she became involved with the prison through her work with Velma Barfield, who was executed at Central Prison Nov. 2.

"He told them a personal commitment to Jesus Christ would relieve their suffering," Mrs. Lotz said.

Edmisten Satisfied

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Thursday he is pleased with the state Court of Appeals decision affirming a $500,000 judgment against a Florida firm accused of operating a pyramid scheme in North Carolina.

The court upheld a Jun 1983 Superior Court decision finding Challenge Inc. of Orlando and five of its officers in violation of the state's pyramid laws.

Pyramid schemes, like chain letters, depend upon funds from new participants to pay old participants.

"Obviously, there aren't enough people in the world to make these schemes profitable to everyone who joins," Edmisten said. "It's deceiving to lure people with a promise of unlimited fortunes to be gained from an endless chain of recruits."

Cigarette Taxes Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette taxes were imposed on 2,234,965,000 packages in September nationwide, down 8.8 percent from September 1983, the Tobacco Institute reports.

The taxes netted $345,151,819 for the month, compared with $358,982,673 in

Martin Fills Two More Cabinet Posts

RALEIGH (AP) — The man named by Gov.-elect Jim Martin as secretary of the Department of Human Resources says he will work to end state funding of abortions for poor women except in cases of rape or incest or when the mother's life is endangered.

"Governor Martin made very few promises during the campaign, but that is one of them," Phil Kirk said.

Kirk, 40, a Salisbury native, was named to the post Thursday by Martin, a Republican. He is administrative aide to Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., of Lenoir. Patric Dorsey, 60, of New Bern, was named as secretary of the Department of Cultural Resources.

Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission had included more than $1 million for abortions in their 1985-87 budget proposals, Kirk said. The Martin administration will work in the Legislature to have that money eliminated, he said.

Kirk said he was also interested in expanding statewide the workfare program for welfare and food stamp recipients if current pilot projects are successful.

Another point of emphasis will be "children's programs," especially those relating to child abuse and drug problems, Kirk said, adding he will also examine how state day-care regulation can be improved.

Kirk said he wanted to re-examine state policy regarding release of mental patients from institutions. He said he wanted to study whether there was a proper balance between hospitalization and community-based alternatives.

Other goals, he said, will be holding down medical costs and cutting unnecessary paperwork.

Kirk will succeed Sarah Morrow, a physician and former director of the Guilford County Health Department. Kirk was the youngest cabinet member in the state's history when he served as Human Resources secretary in 1976-77 under former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Kirk, executive director of Martin's transition team, also served one term in the state Senate, 1971-73, representing Davie, Davidson and Rowan counties. He has been a teacher in the Salisbury city schools and a reporter for the Salisbury Post.

The Department of Human Resources has one of the largest department budgets in state government. It administers more than 400 programs and is responsible for protecting the health, social and economic well-being of North Carolinians, their families and their communities.

"Phil Kirk brings a tremendous amount of experience and enthusiasm to this post," Martin said in a prepared statement.

McDevitt will lose his job as manager of the Governor's Western Office in Asheville when Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin takes over in January.

McDevitt's salary for the newly created university post, which he will assume Jan. 2, will be $41,649 a year.

He had moved up in state government from a beginning on the staff of the speaker of the House in the General Assembly to manager of the Asheville regional office of Natural Resources and Community development to head the governor's office.

Father Convicted In Death

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — A 36-year-old Hot Springs man was convicted Thursday of first-degree murder in the poisoning death of his 5-year-old daughter.

Richard Johnson may be sentenced to death or life in prison on the recommendation of the Buncombe County jury that convicted him of killing Joyce Elizabeth Johnson. The case is being heard in Madison County Superior Court.

After three days of testimony, the jury found that on the morning of June 17 Johnson gave his daughter a teaspoonful of an insecticide known as diazinon. Joyce died in Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville three days later.

Defense attorneys conceded Joyce died from poisoning by organo-phosphates, an ingredient used in insecticides, but argued the fatal dosage did not necessarily come from Johnson. He had no motive for killing his daughter, Asheville attorney William Patton said.

September 1983, even though six states increased their cigarette tax rates between the two periods.

The Tobacco Institute report cautions that the figures do not necessarily reflect retail sales and does not take into account comparative inventory levels.

Odometer Charges Filed

RALEIGH (AP) — Two New Jersey residents have been charged in connection with an odometer rollback operation in North Carolina, a state official said Thursday.

Roger Parker, assistant director of the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles' License and Theft Division, said George Michael Siniscalchi, 38, of Wayne, N.J., was charged with 12 counts of misdemeanor fraudulent title application and Pamela Ann Bellias, 27, of Little Falls, N.J., was charged with aiding and abetting.

The charges stem from an operation Parker said involved buying rental cars, rolling back their mileage and shifting titles from New Jersey to North Carolina before reselling the cars in New Jersey.

McDevitt Named To Post

ASHEVILLE (AP) — R. Wayne McDevitt, director of Gov. Jim Hunt's western office since 1980, was named Thursday as special assistant to David G. Brown, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♦	2 ♦
3 ♦	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♦.

In these columns we have often railed against pointless falsecarding. More often than not, falsecards simply confuse partner — declarer usually doesn't care who has a specific card. But once in a while a hand comes up where confusing partner can only help your cause. Consider this case.

There is nothing to the auction. Both North and South bid what they had and, once the double fit was uncovered, North wasted no time in getting to game.

West led the top of his doubleton in partner's suit. As soon as dummy came down, East realized that, unless his partner had a trump trick, the defense was doomed.

However, even with a trump trick West might strive for a diamond ruff if he could overruff dummy, because he could not know that declarer, too, had only a doubleton diamond. What could East do to persuade his partner to shift to a heart when he gained the lead, rather than continuing diamonds.

The solution was delightfully simple. At trick one East falsecarded by following with the king of diamonds. Declarer won the ace, crossed to dummy with the king of clubs and led a spade to his queen.

West won the king and had no difficulty in finding the winning defense. Because of the fact that his partner had played the king of diamonds to the first trick, West placed declarer with the queen. Therefore, he thought there was no purpose in leading another diamond. The only shift that was attractive was a heart. So East was able to take two heart tricks and the queen of diamonds for a one-trick set.

Now that's what we call an intelligent use of a falsecard.

General Moved

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Communist government has moved Gen. Lajos Czinége from defense minister to a deputy premiership and retired one of his senior aides.

Czinége, 60, was replaced by his former deputy, 58-year-old Col.-Gen. Istvan Olah, the official MTI news agency reported. Czinége became defense minister in 1960 and Olah deputy minister in 1966.

MTI said the aide, Col.-Gen. Karoly Csemi, state secretary of the Defense Ministry, "has been allowed to retire ... with recognition of his merits."

Blacks To Review Report

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — A report by a Davidson College task force on concerns of blacks at the campus will be reviewed this weekend by a black response team, whose members include Robert Albright, president of Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte.

Two discussion forums at the college are scheduled for January and a final proposal is due in February on the nearly three-month-long study, which found Davidson could improve its image among blacks by offering them scholarships and aggressively recruiting black students from area high schools.

"So far, (the report) is pointing in a very positive direction," said Paula Miller, a task force member and Davidson's only black administrator. She is both assistant dean of admissions and assistant dean of students.

The 20-member group of students, faculty members, administrators, alumni and trustees issued this week the results of the study ordered by college president John Kuykendall, who called black concerns one of his top priorities.
