'Moments Of Terror' Recalled

Hostages Freed From Airliner

By JOSEPH PANOSSIAN

Associated Press Writer

One American bore signs of torture after he and other hostages were freed from a hijacked Kuwaiti Airways plane at Tehran Airport by Iranian security men disguised as garbage collectors, Iran's news agency said today.

Seven remaining hostages and four Arab hijackers were taken out of the jetliner Sunday night after the security men posed as a doctor and cleanup men to gain access to the aircraft and end the six-day ordeal, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The British flight engineer of the Airbus A-300, Neil Beeston, said "every moment" of the hijacking was filled with terror. The last captives freed had been "strapped to their chairs with explosives around," said the crewman in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

Two American passengers, identified as employees of the U.S. Agency For International Development, were reported killed last week during the hijacking, which began on Tuesday when IRNA said four gunmen commandeered a Kuwait Airways jetliner after a stopover in Dubai during a flight from Kuwait to Karachi, Pakistan.

"The operation went by so fast and unexpectedly that I didn't even notice it," the news agency, IRNA, quoted American John Costa as saying. The agency described Costa, 50, as a New York businessman and said he was the most severely beaten of the seven people freed.

IRNA said Costa had cigarette burns on his face from two sessions of questioning by the hijackers and quoted him as saying he had been beaten "in most places of his body."

"What they (the hijackers) wanted was for me to say I was from the CIA, that's all they wanted to hear," IRNA quoted Costa as saying.

"We couldn't tell from one minute to the next what they might do and how they would react to anything you might say. If they got angry they beat, and then they would offer you orange juice," he was quoted as saying.

"It was quite a frightening experience in all, very noisy and always under the threat of death. I was hoping something would happen, but we didn't know what to think or what to expect," he said.

"In any case, we are all happy it's all over. I suppose if you live long enough you see it all, and once is enough."

The other American freed in the rescue mission was identified today by IRNA as Charles Kaper. IRNA had previously given the name of the second American as "Charles Kipper," stating he had identified himself so during an emotional appeal by radio to the control tower earlier for an ending of the killing.

The agency said the two were tied up in the front of the plane along with the pilot. Among the reported survivors were two wounded Kuwaiti passengers whom IRNA said previously were killed along with the Americans.

IRNA said that one of the Kuwaiti hostages freed today, Hamad Saleh, 33, the vice consul in Karachi, showed "some stress from his shocking experience." His left hand was bandaged.

Originally, officials in Kuwait said there were 150 passengers and 11 crewmen on board the plane. Most of the passengers and crew were freed in groups during the week as the plane sat on a runway in winter weather at Mehrabad Airport.

IRNA today revised the number of hostages rescued, saying there were only seven and not nine as it had reported previously. It did not explain how the difference had arisen.

The drama ended at 11:45 p.m. Sunday (3:15 p.m.

EST) when the hijackers, three of whom were "severely beaten" in the rescue mission, and the remaining hostages came down the ramp with their hands over their heads, according to IRNA.

Earlier, IRNA said the hijackers dragged a Kuwaiti passenger to the landing steps and beat him. The screaming man pleaded for the hijackers' demands to be met.

Beeston, among a group of hostages released earlier Sunday, said his captors put a gun to his head several times and fired some 100 shots inside the cabin.

"There was a frightening moment every moment. Every five minutes there was a frightening incident. There was no letup at all," Beeston said in a telephone interview with the BBC in London.

Asked if he thought the hijacking would end as it did, he replied:

"No, I didn't. I didn't think there was much chance of storming the aircraft because it was all wired ready to blow up. We didn't know what the outcome was going to be... Even after the release, we were still expecting to be shot coming down the steps."

Two hours before the rescue assault, according to IRNA, the hijackers asked for food and a generator.

Consolidation

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

In November 1982, the Pitt County Commissioners contracted with the Research Triangle Institute to conduct a study on the feasibility of merger of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems.

The study took almost a year and cost the county $40,000. When completed, it recommended consolidation as the "best way to solve serious problems facing the two school districts."

The problems, said the study, included a declining enrollment and a lopsided black-white student population in the Greenville schools and overcrowding and old, outdated facilities in Pitt schools.

The County Commissioners liked the study's findings and asked both boards of education to give it careful consideration. The Greenville school board quickly announced its support of consolidation. But when 1984 began, the commissioners, the Greenville board and the citizens were anticipating a statement from the Pitt County Board of Education.

As the year progressed the issue went from simmer to sizzle. The first six months of the year were spent waiting for the May election — and for the board's position statement. Now, as 1984 ends, not only has the statement been made, but steps have been taken toward consolidation of the two systems. Here's how it happened:

In June 1984, the Pitt County Board of Education announced it favored "conditional long-range consolidation of the two school systems." The conditions of the consolidation included funding for what board members called "severe and immediate" capital outlay needs in the county through a 14-item capital outlay project list. The board's position statement also mandated a 12-member consolidated board of education elected from townships by the county at large and a gradual, phased-in merger of the two systems as capital improvements are completed.

Capital outlay projects included:

- Construction of a new elementary school in the D.H. Conley attendance area to eliminate mobile units.
- Construction of an addition to D.H. Conley, North Pitt and Farmville Central high schools to eliminate mobile units in use over 15 years.

- Renovations to A.G. Cox School for modernization.
- Construction of an addition to Sam Bundy School to eliminate mobile units.

At the time the position statement was released, county school Superintendent Eddie West said the 14-item capital outlay list reflected "the board's concern about overcrowding and outmoded facilities" and trailers that have "exceeded their life expectancy" being used as classrooms.

The board also made the following stipulations in the position statement:

- County Commissioners provide revenues for upgrading current county facilities and in doing so eliminate necessary adjustments in attendance lines through the 14-item list of capital improvements.
- The Greenville Township (with adjustments to school district lines) would become a township within the Pitt County schools.

- Consolidation would not take place until dollars are available and the specified capital projects are completed or under way.

- Adjustments in attendance lines in the Winterville and Belvoir districts would be made to ease overcrowding in these areas. These adjustments would affect only new students. Under a grandfather clause, current students would continue to attend the same schools.

- Funding of the consolidated system by the County Commissioners would continue at and above the current level allocated to both systems.

- Prior to formal consolidation a committee of eight county board members and four city board members would review and make decisions necessary for consolidation.

- Services of the two systems would be jointly planned, shared and reviewed by the consolidation committee and phased in with the completion of the requested improvements to county facilities.

The conditions met with the approval of the Greenville board and the County Commissioners. In its 1984-85 budget the commissioners earmarked $3 million for the construction of a new elementary school near Winterville, the initial project on the capital outlay list.

The Debate Continues

The consolidation committee was formed, held its first meeting in September and has met monthly since then. To date, the committee has adopted a set of operating procedures, set a schedule for completion of consolidation-related tasks, hired an architect and approved a site for the new elementary school.

"The committee is composed of four members of the city board and eight members of the county board, as was specified," according to Mark Owens, chairman of the consolidation committee. "After the committee was created we met and formulated our plan of action and directed West and Blinson to proceed with preparation for consolidation of programs from both units."

West and Blinson, joint secretaries for the committee, were also directed to "create legislation to be presented to the General Assembly for the creation of one school system in Pitt County," Owens said. According to the committee's schedule, these legal documents are scheduled for final review by the committee this month, and according to Owens, "all tasks presented to the committee at this time have been completed on schedule."

According to the schedule, other tasks targeted for conclusion in December include:

- Completion of plans for a consolidated school food service staff, maintenance and custodial services.

- Development of education specifications for the new elementary school.

- Development of schematics for the new elementary school for submission to the consolidation committee.

The biggest step in the process — setting a date for the actual consolidation — still lies ahead. Committee Chairman Owens said he couldn't speculate on when the date would be set or what the date would be. Still to come, Owens said, is "approval by the committee of a plan of consolidation and continuation of funding as approved and directed by the Pitt County Commissioners."

After the RTI study was released, the superintendents of both school systems said they made extensive efforts to present the findings to the public. Opposition to the proposed consolidation has been stiff at times in the county, and a number of city residents admit they preferred another solution suggested by the RTI study — co-terminous boundaries for the two school systems. A group of county parent advisory council members that reportedly oppose consolidation met in November to discuss the issue.

Tax Itemized

Greenville Utilities Commission's customers will see a tax — a 3 percent sales tax — itemized on their electric bills beginning in January.

But the tax is not a new tax, according to John Ferren, assistant general manager for the utility, and will not represent an increase in a customer's bill.

"Taxes have always been included in the total amount on a customer's bill," he said. "Now, the tax will be broken out and shown separately." Ferren said the change is a result of legislation passed in 1984 by the North Carolina General Assembly, which — as of Jan. 1 — requires that the sales tax amount be identified.

"If a customer lists sales taxes as a deduction on his federal income tax return, he will now be able to include the sales tax from his electric bill," Ferren explained.

According to Ferren, the GUC has for years paid a franchise tax — 6 percent — on electric sales to the N.C. Department of Revenue. The tax, he said, has been passed on to customers.

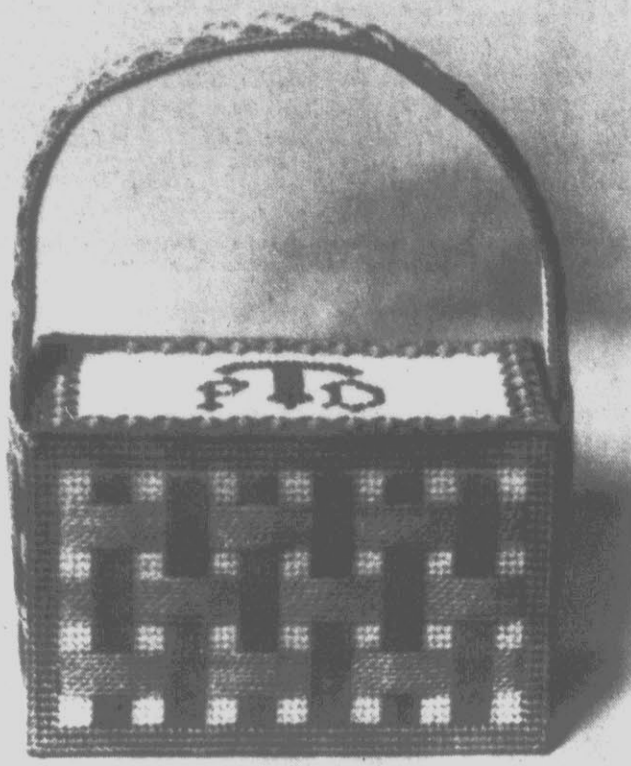

The General Assembly simply changed half the franchise tax on electric sales — 3 percent — a sales tax, Ferren noted. "It simply makes it possible to include the sales tax when listing deductions on federal income tax returns," Ferren explained. Ferren said persons wanting more information on the tax can call the GUC customer service department at 752-7166.

BASKET BAG...is monogrammed and is a "learn-a-stitch" project worked on plastic canvas with needlepoint or knitting yarns.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

A tisket, a tasket, needlepoint a basket ... and you'll have one of the brightest new ideas in pocketbooks for spring or summer. This roomy basket bag — one of Pat's "Learn-A-Stitch" Projects — is easily made with plastic canvas and needlepoint or knitting yarns. If you use colored plastic canvas, the background of the lid can be left unworked.

In addition to complete stitch diagrams and construction details, the leaflet also features full monogram charts.

To obtain directions for making the monogrammed basket bag, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-5040 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-5040 by sending a check or money order for $13.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, leaflet, needle, yarn, canvas and lining. Please specify your choice of the following color combinations: moss green/Unny yellow; grape/lae; royal blue/light blue. If you prefer, you may request white instead of any of the second colors listed.

Dear Readers: I goofed! The first printing of leaflet No. KL-1111 had an omission in the paragraph explaining the shoulder shaping of the back of the vest. Please add these words: "Continue to decrease at the center back as before." I hope this clears things up for those of you having problems with this pattern.

Pattern stitchery adds new dimensions to needlepoint, regardless of the type of canvas or project. Even traditional pillows or pictures gain from the imaginative use of decorative stitch borders or backgrounds. One example of a rather unique border stitch is the eight-point star — also known as the Canterbury Cross. On the stitch chart, the lines of the graph represent the threads of the canvas and the blank squares represent the holes of the canvas.

To work this stitch, bring the needle up in hole 1, 3 count down diagonally and to the left over two canvas threads and take the needle down in the first hole near the top of the chart, which is marked with a small open box. The stitch direction is shown by the solid dark lines.

Continue around in the same way, always bringing the needle up in a numbered hole and taking it down in a hole corresponding to an open box on the chart. Work around in numerical sequence, following the stitch slant as shown.

Only the first 11 stitches are numbered, but the remaining stitches are worked the same, as shown on the chart. The "wiggly" lines on the chart show how a second pattern repeat joins the first one.

One full pattern covers 12 canvas threads. So you can use this as a geometric border any time you have a multiple of 12 threads along all edges. For example, if the border area contains 48 canvas threads in one direction and 60 canvas threads in the other direction, this would fit perfectly as both are evenly divisible by 12.

This pattern can also be used as a overall geometric design. It is best started in the middle of the canvas, centering the first Canterbury Cross and then adding others at all points, when a number of these are worked as an overall design, you will have a blank square of eight canvas threads in the space between each group of four crosses. This eight-thread square can then be filled in with tent stitches or a variety of pattern stitches.

I'd suggest that you take some scrap canvas and yarn and see for yourself how easy — and pretty — this stitch is. Perhaps you can find a way to use it on some current project. If not, watch for next week's column, which will feature a tissue box cover making use of it.

FIXED BRIDGE TO THE RESCUE

If you have one or more missing teeth creating gaps that should be filled, you may want to consider the fixed bridge.

Missing teeth can do more than affect the shape of your face. They can also throw your other teeth out of alignment and cause other serious dental problems. If you choose a fixed bridge to solve the problem, you'll have "new" teeth that will be permanently fixed in your mouth. You won't have to take them out to clean them. They can be brushed the same way your natural teeth are and flossed (with a little dexterity from the underside) to remove bacteria and food particles.

Before your dentist makes a fixed bridge, he'll check the health of the adjacent or supporting teeth. They have to be strong and healthy with enough underlying bone structure to support the denture. Then he'll make crowns for the supporting teeth to make them even stronger. As a final step, the dentist will solder the crowns to the replacement teeth (called pontics) and cement the entire bridge into place.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St. Phone: 752-5126. Greenville 752-5126 Vanceboro 244-1179

SCIENCE TEACHERS GET NEW JOBS

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — About 25 percent of science teachers nationwide soon will abandon teaching for corporate jobs because of low salaries, according to Charles Kittrell.

Kittrell, an executive at Phillips Petroleum, says, "Why should science teachers accept a starting teaching position at $13,000 when they can make double or triple that amount in industry? To me it's not shocking that they leave their chosen profession. It's shocking that they stay at all."

Wedding Vows Solemnized In Ceremony On Sunday

Angela Paulette Worthington and Bryan Andre Smith were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at five o'clock in Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. Eldress Shirley Daniels, aunt of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Julia D. Worthington of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith of Columbia, Md.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Rodger A. Ingram of Ayden, organist. Karen Ebron and Charles Worsley of Greenville sang "The Two of Us." Worsley also sang "You and I." Harold Allen, cousin of the bride, sang "What a Difference You've Made in My Life" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, James Worthington. She wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was overlaid in chantilly lace and the long fitted sleeves were also fashioned in the matching lace. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with an edging of silk Venise lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace and beaded with pearls. She carried a cascade of red roses, carnations, daisies, baby's breath and statice with red and white streamers.

Brenda Smith, cousin of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of red slipper satin designed by Nina Ricci for Vogue. The dress was strapless featuring a fitted bodice, front bodice pleats and attached sleeves accented with a flared skirt and highlighted by a red satin ruffle around the sleeves and front and rear bodice. She carried a single white rose with baby's breath and red and white streamers.

Bridesmaids were Linda Bacon of Savannah, Ga., sister of the bride; Deltha and Crystal Smith, aunts of the bridegroom, both of Greenville; Terrell Downs of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, and Kathy Streeter of Wrappings Falls, N.Y. They wore dresses in an identical style and color of the honor attendant and carried identical roses.

Daniell and Deshonda Smith, nieces of the bridegroom, were flower girls. They wore formal gowns of red taffeta that featured a square neckline, elbow length puffed sleeves and a gathered waist adorned with a white satin tie bow. They carried white wicker baskets.

Michael Smith, cousin of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow edged in lace and garnished with love knot streamers.

David Smith of Greenville, uncle of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Charles Smith, uncle of the bridegroom; Barry Smith and William Haynes, cousins of the bridegroom; Howard Worsley and Ronnie Worsley, all of Greenville.

Mrs. James McIntyre and the Rev. M.A. Streeter directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride chose a formal dress of aqua polyester crepe with a draped bodice. She wore a wristlet of white carnations, daisies and baby's breath. Both mothers were honored with long-stemmed roses.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Elks Lodge. Mary Daniels, aunt of the bride, greeted guests and presided at the register. Geraldine Smith and Betty Moore, aunts of the bridegroom, served cake. Gladys Smith, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch. Candice Smith, cousin of the bridegroom, distributed rice bags.

An after-rehearsal dinner and dance was given by Mary Daniels at the Elks Lodge. The bride was also honored by a miscellaneous shower given by Brenda Smith.

The bridal couple are both graduates of J.H. Rose High School. He is employed by Procter and Gamble and the bride is employed at Brook Valley Country Club.

MRS. SMITH

The couple will reside in Greenville after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Casserole dishes have come back in favor. But with a difference. Nowadays they are likely to be vegetarian in style.

When we tried the following main dish made of cornmeal, cheese, broccoli and a tomato sauce, it occurred to us it might be an offering some families would enjoy trying now — and then making again for Christmas Eve supper.

PARMESAN POLENTA

- 1 cup enriched yellow cornmeal
- Water
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 15 and 1/2-ounce jar spaghetti sauce
- 10-ounce package frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and drained
- 2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

In a bowl stir together the cornmeal, 1 cup cold water and salt. In a medium saucepan bring 3 cups cold water to the boil; over low heat, gradually stir in cornmeal mixture and continue stirring until thickened. Cover and continue cooking, stirring occasionally, for about 15 minutes. Off heat stir in Parmesan. Divide mixture evenly among three empty 12-ounce frozen juice concentrate cans. Chill until set — about 2 hours.

Slide chilled polenta out of containers; cut each roll into 6 equal rounds (each a generous 1/2-inch thick). Arrange 9 rounds in the bottom of an 8-inch square baking dish. Pour half the spaghetti sauce over polenta; sprinkle with half the broccoli and half the mozzarella. Repeat layers of polenta, sauce, broccoli and mozzarella. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes; let stand 5 minutes before serving. Makes 9 servings.

An Invitation To Sit Doesn't Include Paying

DEAR ABBY: We have a problem that I'm sure a lot of people have, but so far I haven't seen it in your column.

Last evening my husband and I went out for dinner. This is a rather small town and we are quite well-known. The two of us were seated at a table for four and had already ordered when a couple we knew came in and spoke to us. Should we have asked them to join us? We've done so in the past, and we always had to go through that embarrassing check-grabbing scene. One time a lady filled her handbag with crackers, French bread and packets of sugar.

Well, this other couple was given a table directly across the aisle from us, so we chatted back and forth. It was very awkward, and I've felt uncomfortable about it ever since.

Prices are so high these days, we don't always have enough money for four meals, and we don't carry credit cards unless we're traveling. What should we do if this happens again, as I'm sure it will?
A LA CARTE IN ALAMEDA

DEAR A LA CARTE: If a couple whose company you think you'll enjoy comes in, ask them to join you. An invitation to sit with you doesn't necessarily imply that you will pick up their tab. (If they couldn't afford to eat there, they wouldn't be there.) Bon appetit!

DEAR ABBY: I feel foolish asking a question like this because I'm 33 years old and I guess I should know the answer, but I don't.

I have a friend I like a lot, but I don't consider her a really close friend. She's expecting her first baby, and I have a feeling she's going to ask me to be the baby's godmother.

Here's my situation: I am already godmother to two children—my younger sister's and my favorite cousin's. My husband and I both work hard to make ends meet, and buying our two godchildren gifts for their birthdays, Christmas, Easter, etc. is just about all we can handle.

So how can I turn her down without losing her friendship? She's rather pushy and might not take no for an answer.

TWO IS ENOUGH IN TEXAS

DEAR TWO: Tell her that you appreciate the honor and feel flattered, but you think the honor should go to someone closer—perhaps a relative.

And if she won't take no for an answer, haul out the heavy artillery and tell her you already have two godchildren and that's your limit.

Handicaps

When one reads that North Carolina's net farm income has fallen from $1.2 billion in 1981 to only $800 million last year, it's pretty clear that something is wrong.

It is especially true on further reading that gross farm income for the state last year amounted to $4.3 billion.

Gov. Jim Hunt, in analyzing the Tar Heel agricultural plight before the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation's annual session, provided the figures and some explanations. He said part of the loss was due to drought, but the lion's share was laid at the federal government's doorstep ... citing deficit spending and other policies and programs which kept interest rates high and the American dollar artificially high.

The over-valued dollar, he said, was equivalent to placing a 30-cent to 40-cent tax on every dollar's worth of exported farm products.

Obviously, no U.S. export product could expect to favorably compete under such conditions.

There are no glib answers to questions on agriculture's problems, and no quick fixes. It is plain that in dealing with the nation's deficits we are also talking about the handicaps they impose on marketing products in every field, including agriculture.

The road to recouping past and present losses is bound to be slow and difficult; made slower and more difficult by philosophical differences as well as narrow, special fields of interest and perennial jockeying for political one-upmanship. Finding a common ground for resolving our economic problems will not be easy.

Hands Tied

Last week Arabic-speaking hijackers took over a Kuwaiti airliner and ordered it flown to Tehran. It is a scene that has been repeated many times. This time, however, it was a difference. The hijackers made good on a systematic killing of passengers. Apparently they were being killed one by one pending the meeting of the hijackers demands for release of prisoners in Kuwait. The shootings apparently started with Americans on board.

Such hijackings and danger to the safety of American citizens are matters of grave concern to our government. In this case there was little the U.S. government could do since the plane had landed in Iran, a nation with which we have no diplomatic relations. It was not even clear how the Iranians were treating the situation. Given their callous disregard for the freedom of the U.S. embassy hostages, it is difficult to imagine them treating it as a criminal act as other nations would.

Perhaps in the future we will be in a better position to attempt a rescue of our own people.

The Outstretched Hand

A man knocked on the door of the White House the other night and the president, in his pajamas, answered it.

"Yes," Mr. Reagan said. "I'm from the Visa card company, and you owe us $210 billion. We were wondering when you planned to start paying on it."

"Two hundred and ten billion?" I thought it was only 170 billion," the president said.

"That's what you told everyone during the election campaign. But it turns out it's 210, give or take 5 billion. You've been using your credit card for the past four years, and I think it's time you acknowledged the debt."

"Who is it?" Mrs. Reagan called from the top of the stairs.

"It's a man from the Visa credit card company who says we owe him $210 billion."

"That's ridiculous," Mrs. Reagan said. "I only bought two suits at Adolfo's."

The Visa man said, "These were not for personal purchases. They are government related. I have all the receipts here. Defense, Social Security, Medicare, Human Services and entitlements. We can't stay in business if people just keep using plastic and don't honor their debts."

"Don't worry about getting paid. My tax advisers are now working on a plan to see that you get your money."

"How do they propose to do that?" "We're cutting back on spending, reforming the tax structure and lowering interest rates. Listen to my State of the Union address."

Mrs. Reagan yelled from the top of the stairs, "Tell him we didn't run up the bill, Congress did."

The Visa man heard her. "The card is made out in your name, Mr. Reagan. Whether you like it or not

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The fact that nothing really changed — same Republican president and Senate, same Democratic House — in the 1984 elections means that not much is likely to change in 1985 Washington.

It is one of those ironies of politics that although President Reagan produced a genuine landslide with his campaign for a second term, he may actually have less power to achieve his goals in the next four years.

The failure of the Republicans — some would say the failure of Reagan — to capture control of the House or to elect a secure conservative Senate GOP majority leaves the power balance between the White House and Capitol Hill much the same as it was at the end of the 98th Congress last fall.

Although Reagan surprised Washington by the ease with which he was able to dominate Congress during the first two years of his presidency, GOP losses in the House in 1982 and what can be called nothing less than distrust of the president by some key congressional leaders resulted in near stalemate in the final two years of his first term.

An example. The toughest political problem Reagan confronted during the 1981-82 congressional session was reform of the Social Security system's financing. He solved the problem by persuading Democrats to take part in a bipartisan commission that reached a compromise solution.

The 1983 compromise did put some nicks in the retirement program, but by taking part in the commission, the Democrats effectively gave up the issue for the 1984 campaign.

Medicare also has impending money problems, but because Reagan and the Republicans got the biggest political gain from the Social Security compromise, it seems unlikely in the extreme that the president will be able to sign up the Democrats for a bipartisan approach to solve the problems of that program or any other of major proportions, such as how to get the federal deficit under control.

Gun-shy Democrats represent only one of the factors that may trim Reagan's effectiveness. He also has incipient problems with Republicans.

In the Senate, where the GOP majority actually was reduced in the same election that gave Reagan a landslide, the president will be working with new leaders who will insist on a strong voice in policy making. In the House, the leadership is more malleable, but there is a growing group of increasingly assertive conservative Republicans there who can be expected to resist any Reagan moves to do business with GOP moderates or, even worse, Democrats of any stripe.

Finally, Reagan is a lame duck president, which in Washington is shorthand for a politician without a future. In his first term, Reagan had influence with Republicans and some Democrats based on what he could do to or for them in the next campaign. For Reagan himself, there is no next campaign and his political clout has diminished because of it.

Ironies

RALEIGH — Although Raleigh may today be a good place for a newcomer to find a job, it is also a city where a good number of people are getting very scared about their approaching unemployment.

Gov.-elect Jim Martin has said he will not institute mass firings of state employees and nothing he has done to date indicates he will go back on his word. But his promise does not cover political appointees of outgoing Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt. A new governor must be able to bring his own people into office with him.

For Hunt's top-level appointees, the change in administration means little to their own financial situations. Many can return home to jobs and businesses they left behind. Others, like Gary Pearce, Hunt's former press secretary, have put away enough money and made enough contacts to go into business for themselves.

But for many lower level political appointees, the crush is on. Inauguration Day is fast approaching and they need a steady paycheck.

It is a fact of political irony that the people who are now in trouble are the people who looked to be in good shape when Rufus Edmisten, the Democratic candidate for governor, was leading in the polls. These state employees are Democrats and, although they had supported Edmisten, there was a feeling that because they are low level he would either make room for them or let them stay on long enough to find other work.

Several agreed to talk with this reporter on the grounds that their names not be used. They're hoping that Martin's transition team, which faces a huge task of installing a new administration, won't find them right away. In a sense, they hope to hide for a few extra months.

One 40-year-old worker in the Archdale Building has been looking for a new job for a year. He says he's just about ready to give up and, when he gets his pink slip, will become "a house daddy" to his pre-school aged son.

A 36-year-old woman in the Dobbs Building says she plans to cash in her Individual Retirement Account to pay off all her debts. By waiting on tables and selling the crafts she makes in her spare time, she hopes to earn enough to pay her mortgage. That income will be a big step down from the $35,000 a year salary she's earned with the state. She's been looking for work since last January.

Others aren't looking for work at all. "I need to get my act together and start looking," said Brent Hackney, Hunt's press secretary. "I don't know of anyone ... who has found work. We've all just been suffering from collective burnout from the campaigns."

Democrats still control the legislature and all Council of State departments. So, some jobs are open and the competition is apparently very intense. Jim Devine, spokesman for the Agriculture Department, said there'd been a "tremendous amount" of job inquiries lately and "it's going to get worse."

In two departments, Democrats are worried that new Democratic officeholders will fire them. Jim Long, the insurance commissioner-elect, and Lacy Thornburg, the attorney general-elect, are expected to do some housecleaning.

When an administration goes out of office, political appointees usually tender their resignations. But several of the lower-downs, the people who really need the jobs they're losing, said they have no plans to resign. "I'm going to make them fire me," one woman said. "I need the unemployment check."

Doing Things In Big Way

WASHINGTON — Despite the folksy image Ronald Reagan created by eating Big Macs and visiting picnics during this year's presidential campaign, he'll celebrate Inauguration Day 1985 with his wealthy pals.

In modern-day America, whooping it up with one's affluent contributors and friends has become an Inaugural tradition. The Kennedys, Johnsons, Nixons and even Carters have tried, with varying degrees of success, to celebrate in style. In fact, though of modest cloth, the Eisenhowers set the trend in recent times by attending four Inaugural balls in 1952.

But no past president can match the Reagan's grandiose social plans. On the eve of Reagan's first Inaugural, Donnie Radcliffe, the veteran social reporter of the Washington Post, observed, "The Republican aristocracy took over last weekend, making it safe again to put on diamonds and designer gowns." Added Fortune magazine: "An armada of 400 corporate jets snarled traffic at National Airport. The streets were bumper-to-bumper with limousines."

Sensitive to such criticism, Michael Deaver, assistant to the president and general chairman of the 1985 Presidential Inaugural Committee, has gone out of his way to de-emphasize black-tie events and fancy parties at next year's Inaugural. Last Thursday, Deaver acknowledged that he'd chosen the theme "We the people ... an American Celebration" for the 50th Inaugural to connote a more populist image. "We want participation in the Inaugural to be as broad and wide as the president's victory," Deaver said.

The media-conscious aide has tried to protect himself against charges that the Inaugural is exclusionary by selling to the television networks the rights to a Frank Sinatra-produced gala on Saturday evening, Jan. 19. Deaver thinks that, like "Entertainment Tonight," the program will enable all Americans to ogle and oggle at the well-to-do as if they, too, were invited.

But as skillful as Deaver may be with themes and symbols, there is nothing he can do to conceal the fact that there will be 20 major events during the Inaugural weekend, only four of which will be open to the public. Nine of the remaining 16 events will be black-tie, invitation-only affairs; tickets will range from $75 to $200 apiece. Events open to the public will largely involve standing outside in the cold to watch fireworks. At least, black tie won't be required.

Ordinarily, the Reagan's parties are their business. But uninvited taxpayers are unknowingly subsidizing the Republicans' fun.

Although financed largely by private contributions, the Presidential Inaugural Committee will receive $1.5 million from the General Services Administration for office space, furnishings and "details of employees." Another $2.3 million will come its way from the District of Columbia.

Meanwhile, the Joint Congressional Inaugural Committee will spend $500,000 in tax (or deficit) dollars for expenses related to the swearing-in ceremony, which will be conducted twice this time. (Reagan will be sworn in on Sunday, Jan. 20, in a private White House ceremony and on Monday, Jan. 21, in a public ceremony.)

Less is certain about the inauguration-related expenditures of the Pentagon, but there are likely to be some. In 1981, the Defense Department assigned 1,533 of its personnel as social aides, drivers and ushers to members of the Presidential Inaugural Committee and VIPs. (Some Presidential Inaugural Committee members had an armed forces chauffeur driving them to and from home from the third week of November until the end of January.) While Deaver says the troops won't be called this time, he sees nothing wrong with using the military personnel to escort big shots around town. Yet one wonders why the likes of Debbie Reynolds, Charlton Heston, Frank Sinatra and 43 other Inaugural entertainers and their guests can't find their way around Washington.

A few million obviously doesn't seem like much these days. But those millions are as much a symbol as the festivities under consideration by Michael Deaver.

Strength For Today

Some people regard religion strictly as their own personal possession. They gather it into their hearts, lock the door, and praise the Lord for the fine understanding which exists between Him and themselves. For them, religion is a personal matter.

But religion concerns our neighbors as well as ourselves. We are to love God, but we are also to love our neighbor as ourselves. This latter responsibility has sometimes been termed social service. Christianity starts with the individual. It takes in the family, the community, the nation and finally the world. The person who thinks of his religion only in connection with his own salvation and earthly benefit is not a Christian in the truest sense of the word. His thoughts must go out to others.

There is more to Christianity than social service, but there is no religion without social service.

Reagan Eyes Plan Affecting Military Funding

By CLIFF HAAS
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Having given preliminary approval to nearly $34 billion in domestic spending cuts, President Reagan shifts his focus to the Pentagon this week and is expected to consider a plan that would virtually freeze his planned military buildup.

Budget Director David A. Stockman has been drafting recommendations to hold most military spending programs to current levels, according to sources who spoke only if not quoted by name. They said such a freeze would produce about $8 billion in savings next year.

Reagan has set a goal of holding total federal spending at current levels for the 1986 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. To do that will take $42 billion in savings next year.

"We know that it's important across the board to see that everyone participates in trying to achieve this freeze," Reagan said last week, leaving the door open for reductions in military spending.

The president ordered his Cabinet last week to come up with $33.6 billion in domestic spending cuts. Another $8 billion in military spending savings would meet the overall $42 billion goal.

Decisions on the Pentagon budget were delayed last week while Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was out of the country meeting with allied defense ministers and other foreign officials.

Some administration officials have argued against paring the military buildup now, saying it would weaken the U.S. position in upcoming arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

However, Stockman's plan would retain planned increases in major weapons programs, including the controversial MX nuclear missile.

Republican congressional leaders have told the president that his hopes for another round of significant budget reductions will fail in Congress unless the Pentagon also takes a share of the cuts.

Interviewed today, the Senate majority leader, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said spending restraint won't be enacted "without substantial reductions in defense spending."

Dole said more taxation, which Reagan has ruled out except as a last resort, may be necessary to get the program through congress.

"When we ... start reducing programs that affect very-low income Americans and other very vulnerable groups, then loopholes closing may not seem like such a bad idea," Dole said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

The decisions on military spending come as Reagan and his senior aides try to build congressional support for the president's ambitious deficit-reduction effort to freeze, reduce or eliminate almost all domestic federal programs.

Reagan has moved to seize the budget debate early, arguing that he is translating last month's election returns into action.

"In the November elections, the people made clear that first and foremost, they wanted to continue policies that would assure strong economic growth," Reagan told reporters Friday.

"So the people voted against tax increases, and they were right," Reagan said. "And they voted against wasteful government spending, and they were right."

Reagan has tentatively agreed on a broad program that includes drastic steps such as a 5 percent pay cut for federal workers, reductions in welfare programs, elimination of the Small Business Administration, cuts in federal grants to local governments and significant reductions in farm price-support programs.

Senior administration officials said they hope to overcome the initial shock by making the public and Congress understand the actions are necessary to fulfill campaign pledges to cut surging budget deficits.

"To a certain degree, we have tried to take concepts that have a substantial amount of stated support and have fleshed it out," said a senior administration official.

He added that in early discussions with congressional Republicans "they steered us off of a longer list of terminations" and told us "to talk more about across-the-board."

For example, sources said Reagan and his budget advisers had considered ending so many programs carried out by the Department of Housing and Urban Development that it would have amounted to a virtual shutdown of the department. But that plan was dropped under congressional pressure.

"That change was more a reaction to the (GOP) congressional leadership saying, 'You're better off in terms of packaging (by) spreading it out rather than eliminating,'" the administration official said.

The official indicated that selling the spending reductions that are finally included in the budget Reagan sends to Congress early next year will involve making senators and representatives from both parties live up to their campaign rhetoric about cutting deficits.

"Now if we can structure a package and structure the debate and appeal to the American people (showing) that doing such and such and so and so will actually do something ... I think we can get support for a program.

State Ponders Higher Insurance Premiums

RALEIGH (AP) — The board of trustees that oversees the self-insurance plan for state government workers is scheduled to vote Wednesday on changes in premiums and benefits in the plan that could mean a 37.9 percent increase in premiums.

The board recommended the changes to a committee of the General Assembly Nov. 14. The board, which is authorized to make changes in the plan after consulting with the committee, scheduled a final vote on the changes for Wednesday.

But House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison, says the board should delay the vote and wait until the entire General Assembly, which convenes in February, can review the insurance plan's finances.

The reason for the proposed changes is that the cost of the insurance plan is rising and a deficit is projected.

The bare facts are that the benefits that were created for the state employees now are exceeding the funding that was created in 1982," said Donald S. Patterson, a member of the board overseeing the plan.

Through 1982, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina provided health insurance coverage for state government employees and public school teachers under a contract with the state. But lawmakers that year voted to establish a self-insurance plan under which the state became the insurer for its workers, paying the premium for employees and teachers.

Those who have dependents covered by the plan pay an additional premium through payroll deductions.

Texas-based EDS Federal Corp. later replaced Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Since Oct. 1, 1982, when the new plan took effect, the board has raised the premiums once — an 11.2 percent increase in the first month of the plan in premiums for dependents.

During the same period, premiums for health insurance plans in the United States have increased an average of 15 percent to 20 percent per year, said John E. Coalson, an associate with William M. Mercer Meidinger Inc., a Charlotte company that serves as consultant to the plan.

However, the rates under the state plan have not risen since the increase two years ago, but inflation and other factors have prompted increases in claims paid by the state. Officials say those claims will produce a $7 million-a-month deficit next year.

Also, the board voted in July to change the way EDS' fee is calculated, a change estimated to generate about $1 million more a year in payments to the company.

Coalson told the board Nov. 14 that the plan would face an estimated deficit of $2.4 million June 30. He estimated that the deficit would balloon to about $7 million a month in the fiscal year that begins July 1.

Coalson said some of the reasons for the projected deficit are the rising cost of medical services, the level of deductibles and the use of costly medical procedures like CAT scans. Officials say a key reason for the plan's projected deficit was the fact that premiums have been increased only once since the plan was established.

Before Oct. 1, 1982, a state government worker paid $69.22 for coverage for his spouse and two children. That coverage increased to $76.98 on Oct. 1, 1982, and increased last January by 25 cents to the current level of $77.23.

Before Oct. 1, 1982, the premium for a typical North Carolina family of four cost about $75 a month, Coalson said. Because premiums have risen at an annual rate of 15 percent to 20 percent, he said, that coverage currently would cost $114 to $130.

Under changes recommended by Coalson and endorsed by the board:

— Premiums for family coverage would rise by 37.9 percent — or about $29 — from about $77 to about $106 a month. The state pays premiums for employees and teachers and those who have dependents to be covered by the plan would pay an additional premium through payroll deduction. The change would take effect July 1.

— Deductibles would rise from the current level of $100, which applies to a combination of hospital and non-hospital charges, to a total of about $300. That deduction would include two parts — a charge for each hospital stay at a level equal to the cost of room and board for one day at that hospital or about $150. There would also be a $150 deductible for non hospital charges. The change would take effect Jan. 1.

— Coinsurance — the portion of the coverage paid by employees after paying their deductible — would increase from the current level of five percent of the charge, with a $100 limit to 10 percent, with a $500 limit. Those changes would take effect Jan. 1.

Edwards To Head PCC Center

Local businessman Jack Edwards has been named coordinator of the newly-formed Pitt Community College Small Business Center. The center is being organized to aid small businesses in Pitt County.

"I am pleased that Jack was willing to take on this important responsibility," PCC President Charles Russell said. "His successful small business experiences and drive will enable him to give the center the quality leadership needed to successfully launch this effort."

JACK EDWARDS

Edwards is co-owner of the University Book Exchange, Book Barn, Art and Camera Shop, Art and Camera Frame Shop and Gallery, Edwards Auto Supply and Rent-a-Wreck.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Edwards was awarded a master of arts degree in business at East Carolina University in 1960. For two years he was an instructor in the business department at ECU and was the recipient of the first Small Business Leader of the Year award given by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce last year.

As part of PCC's continuing education division, the center's three primary functions will be providing referrals, training and resource information.

"We will survey small businesses in Pitt County and find out what the needs are," Edwards said, adding: "PCC already has many programs in place for small businesses, but additional courses will be added as needed."

PCC's small business center will coordinate efforts with existing national, state and local agencies such as the Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE), the Small Business Administration, the ECU Regional Development Institute, the ECU Small Business Institute and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Small Business Council.

North State Corp. Looks At Options

New operating strategies for North State Financial Corp. were announced today by Lawrence R. Bowers, president of the holding company and parent firm of North State Savings and Loan Corp. of Greenville and North State Savings and Loan Corp. of Southern Pines (formerly First Colony Savings & Loan).

Bowers, who recently assumed the duties as president of the firm, said in a prepared statement today "we have taken a hard look at where we are, where we are trying to go, and where we have been. We are beginning to explore all options that will make us a more viable financial institution."

One of the options, he said, includes the recent employment of W. Max Hollmann "as our new senior vice president and chief financial officer."

According to Bowers, Hollmann, who "is highly qualified and experienced ... brings additional strengths to our new executive management team," which includes William T. Blair Jr., North State's chief operating officer and Dale Caines, senior vice president of lending.

Bowers also said Trident Financial Corp. of New Bern has been retained by North State to help "attract additional capital." Trident, Bowers continued, "will work with us in determining appropriate strategies, recommending attractive terms, identifying qualified potential investors, and assisting in negotiations, if necessary."

North State today reported a pre-tax unaudited operating loss for the nine-month period ending Sept. 30, of about $2.9 million.

Bowers said the operating losses were primarily the result of problems experienced in consolidating the three major savings and loans (First Colony, New Bern Savings and Loan, and Wilson Savings and Loan) acquired by North State during 1983, "and the extraordinary growth that was experienced."

Bowers said "major steps have been taken, and are being taken, to eliminate further losses."

Coroner Says Fatal Illness Was Possibly Preventable

LEESBURG, Ind. (AP) — The Rev. Hobart Freeman, the leader of a faith-healing sect who was under indictment in connection with the death of a child who received no medical attention, may have died of preventable ailments, a county coroner said.

Freeman, founder of the Faith Assembly, died Saturday night in his sleep after being confined to his bed for four weeks. He was 64.

An autopsy conducted Sunday showed that Freeman suffered from severe cardiovascular disease, mild bronchopneumonia, gangrene and other ailments, Kosciusko County Coroner Gary Eastlund said.

Freeman was indicted by a county grand jury Oct. 17 on three felony charges in connection with the death of a 15-year-old girl, whose parents belong to the Faith Assembly sect.

The girl, Pamela Menne of Warsaw, died Sept. 16 of untreated kidney failure after her parents' faith-healing efforts failed.

The coroner said that Freeman also suffered from an ulcerated foot.

"Gangrene had set in, which in all probability led to the pneumonia, but that's conjecture on my part," Eastlund said.

"I won't go out on a limb and say he would have survived if he had medical treatment, but it makes you wonder," he said, adding, "I'm leaning that way."

Members of the Faith Assembly, based in Wilmot, are taught to shun medical care and rely instead on prayer to heal illness and injury. Freeman taught that medical care is evil and tied historically to witchcraft.

Earlier this year, two Faith

Assembly couples in Indiana were convicted of child neglect and reckless homicide in the deaths of their children.

An Indiana newspaper, the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, has reported that at least 88 members of the sect have died of treatable illnesses or injuries after shunning medical attention in Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri and Tennessee.

The grand jury charged Freeman with aiding and inducing reckless homicide, criminal recklessness and neglect of a dependent. The girl's parents, James and Ione Menne, were indicted on charges of reckless homicide, criminal recklessness and neglect of a dependent.

Freeman pleaded not guilty, saying that withholding treatment was "an individual decision."

Freeman, who was born in 1920 in Ewing, Ky., started the Faith Assembly in the mid-1970s.

Originally a Baptist, Freeman earned divinity and theology degrees at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. He later joined the Brethren church and earned a doctorate at Grace Theological Seminary, but was eventually excommunicated and dismissed from his teaching post for extremism.

A former Faith Assembly member said Sunday that business manager Bruce Kinsey had been generally considered Freeman's successor. However, Kinsey, Freeman's son-in-law, apparently left the sect recently, according to Catherine A. Goldstein.

Ms. Goldstein, who now lives in Albuquerque, N.M., was a member from 1976 to 1982. She said she believed Freeman's death would have little impact on the core group of the sect, about 600 members strong.

"I don't think that this will dissuade them," she said. "As a matter of fact, I think this will make them more fanatical in their adherence to what he has taught."

Freeman is survived by his wife, June, and at least two daughters, officials said.

Police Chief Charged With Assault

PINEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Pineville police chief Fred Fleming has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon on a state Alcohol Law Enforcement officer during a disturbance in this town just south of Charlotte.

Fleming, 56, chief of the Pineville force since Tuesday, was served with a criminal summons specifying the assault charge early Saturday, said Mecklenburg County police.

Robert Hammond Jr., 26, an officer with the Alcohol Law Enforcement Division, told police Fleming hit him with a flashlight about 10:45 p.m. Friday. Hammond was treated for cuts on his head at Presbyterian Hospital and released, police said.

Two other men were arrested in connection with the incident. David Osborne, 22, of Pineville was charged with disorderly conduct. His 28-year-old brother, Michael, of Matthews was charged with intoxicated and disruptive behavior, resisting and obstructing arrest, disorderly conduct and two counts of assault on an officer. Both men were released on bond from the Mecklenburg County Jail.

County police and witnesses said Hammond and about a dozen other plainclothes ALE officers were in Pineville Friday as part of a countywide crackdown on illegal gambling machines at lounges, pool halls and similar recreational facilities.

By 9:30 p.m., police said, the officers had arrested 13 people and confiscated 15 machines and about $4,000. The confiscated machines were stored in a rental truck.

About 10:30 p.m., the officers raided the Pineville Pool Hall, parking their truck at the nearby Texaco Service Station, which is co-owned by the Osborne brothers.

"Mike (Osborne) went up to them (the ALE officers) and told them they'd have to move the truck," said witness Gary Campbell, 31, of Pineville. "They never identified themselves as police officers. They were wearing blue windbreakers, but didn't have on uniforms."

A brawl broke out, police said, and the ALE officers called Pineville police for assistance.

"They (the ALE officers) grabbed Mike by the shirt and coat and started swinging him around,"

Campbell said. "They told him he was under arrest. Mike didn't swing a fist, but two officers were beating him with a flashlight."

About 10:40 p.m., Fleming arrived in a Pineville police patrol car.

"The chief tried to get in between the officers and Mike," said Campbell. "Fleming went down on his knees to the ground when one of the officers pushed him. From that point on, everything went wild."

County police called to investigate arrived minutes later.

Fleming, a veteran Pineville police officer, was served the summons shortly after midnight. Like a warrant, the criminal summons contains a formal charge, but it does not require the recipient to go to the county jail.

Illegal Aliens Arrested At Factory

STONEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal immigration authorities say officials of Stoneville Furniture Co., where 20 illegal aliens were arrested, offered to cooperate when they were informed of the problem.

Immigration officials told Stoneville Furniture Co.'s management a couple of months ago that they had information indicating the company was employing illegal aliens, said Edward H. Brigham, acting officer in charge of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Charlotte.

The company said it was unaware of the problem and offered to cooperate.

"They exercised what we think is extremely good corporate responsibility," said Brigham. Company officials refused to comment.

No charges were filed against Stoneville Furniture, which has joined the immigration service's Operation Cooperation and will work with federal agents to ensure that no more illegal aliens are hired, Brigham said.

Altogether 21 people were arrested. The arrests, made with administrative authority, carry no criminal charges, Brigham said.

The Mexicans arrested Thursday were placed on a chartered bus, which stopped at the homes of those who wanted to pick up personal belongings, and driven to the immigration service's Charlotte office. There, they were fingerprinted and photographed.

One illegal alien, a woman in her 20s, requested a formal deportation hearing and remained in Charlotte on Friday as the others boarded a bus to the Mexican border near Del Rio, Texas, Brigham said.

Five federal immigration agents and two detention officers entered the plant around 1:30 p.m. Thursday. About 700 hourly workers are employed at the plant, where dinette sets are manufactured.

Brigham said about 25 Hispanics were interviewed throughout the afternoon. He said 20 workers, some of whom had worked at the plant for as long as four years, admitted that they were illegal aliens. Brigham declined to elaborate on actions inside the plant.

Several other workers said the Mexicans were called from jobs on various manufacturing lines into another area of the plant, then were ordered into the bus.

The bus passed through a mobile home court where many of the aliens lived. Children of some Mexicans on board were allowed to leave with their parents.

To hold most permanent jobs in the United States, an immigrant must have a valid alien registration card, sometimes called a green card, said James Lounsbury, deputy director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service's office in Atlanta.

Brigham said some illegal aliens are transported into North Carolina via organized rings. But Susan Torres, a Stoneville resident, said she doubted there was any system for bringing aliens there. Most hear about jobs from friends or relatives, she said.

"Most of them send money back home," said Ms. Torres. "There are very few of them up here just blowing it all. If you'd ever been to Mexico, you'd know why."

Farm Scene

Swine production is an integral part of agriculture in Pitt County and in North Carolina. However, being far removed from the corn belt, swine producers in North Carolina must be very efficient to remain competitive with midwestern producers. After all, some say that the best place to raise hogs is right next to the corn crib with a packing plant just down the road.

To be efficient in the hog business, swine producers must be able to measure many aspects of their operation. This requires that accurate records be kept. Production records are tools that producers can use to identify weaknesses in their operation. Only then can the producer make the necessary changes to maximize production. In order for production records to be valuable, they must be accurate, complete, simple and used.

Identification of breeding stock is the first step in beginning a production record system. Ear notches and tagging are the most popular way to identify swine. The best way to use ear notches is to ear notch all gilt pigs at birth that are potential replacements. One drawback to ear notching is that everyone who works the animals must know how to read the notches. Another is that there is a limit to the numbers in the standard notching system. Tags can be applied after the final selection is made for replacement gilts. Tags are easier to read than ear notches but sometimes are lost.

After identification of breeding stock, a production record system can be utilized. The North Carolina Extension Swine Husbandry Department has developed a record system that covers production from breeding through weaning. Information for the record comes from a farrowing house card and a breeding bar record. After data is collected on these two forms, it is transferred to four permanent records. The four permanent records can be used to evaluate and improve production. This system can be modified to suit any producer's needs. If used, these records can help to improve production.

For copies of this swine record-keeping system, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

The 29th annual N.C. Pork Producers Conference will be held Jan. 9-10 at the Raleigh Civic Center. There is a registration fee of $15 prior to Jan. 2. Contact your local N.C. Agricultural Extension Office for a registration form.

Optimistic Schroeder Looks To Days Of Fishing, Games

By AUDREY LEE
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder entered his third week with an artificial heart that was pounding "like a horse" and said that while he once had only 40 days to live, he now looks forward to fishing and going to ball games.

"I'm not here for praise or glory. I'm just here to get well and show people what can be done," Schroeder said Sunday night during his first interview with reporters since he received the Jarvik-7 heart on Nov. 25.

Schroeder, 52, dressed in pajamas and reclining in bed at Humana Hospital Aududon, said the metal-and-plastic heart had given him "a real, new purpose in life."

"That purpose is to be with God, and I feel like he was No. 1. He saved me," he said, the heart's mechanical drive whirring loudly nearby.

Breaking into tears, Schroeder kissed his wife, Margaret, and looked at her as he said, "I've got a purpose right here. We've been married 33 years."

He said he felt "super," and no longer as short of breath as he was before the implant.

"Each day I go to see him, he feels better. I can tell the difference," Mrs. Schroeder said in a television interview broadcast today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

The couple's daughter, Cheryl, added that her father "knows what he wants. He's got his mind made up. He's going to try his best."

Schroeder suffered from chronic congestive heart failure and was given only 40 days to live before he decided to undergo the implant. The world's second artificial heart recipient, Schroeder was moved to a private room Friday, and is listed in satisfactory condition.

"With the new heart, I feel like I have 10 years," he said.

Schroeder wept again near the end of the 35-minute interview, when he talked about how he decided to allow doctors to implant the heart.

After discussing it with his family, Schroeder said he was "gung-ho for this thing" and that his only fear was that his diabetes would keep him from healing.

The Jasper, Ind., native said he had adapted well to the new heart and likened himself to the "bionic man" of 1970s television.

"I don't even know it's there," he said. "It's beating like a horse."

Schroeder, who is constantly tethered to a whirring, clicking machine, said he did not see that as a handicap and looked forward to going fishing and to "ball games."

Schroeder said he wants to drive a specially equipped van to carry his 323-pound Utahdrive pumping machine. Under current regulations, he also can for three hours a day use the 11-pound portable Heimes driver.

"You get around, maybe not like you want to," Schroeder said, adding that some handicapped people are worse off than he is.

When asked if he wanted to say anything to the public, Schroeder advised, "If you have a heart problem, you need to take care of it. Don't wait."

When asked if he wanted anything, Schroeder looked up at his wife and smiled. Others in the room laughed and one person said, "You can't have that."

EXPLOSION SITE — FBI investigators work at the scene Sunday where a small, wood-frame home burned to the ground Saturday night. Robert J. Mathews, a neo-Nazi who was wanted for the shooting of an FBI agent, is believed to have perished in the fire and consequent explosions of ammunition or armaments from within the structure. (AP Laserphoto)

FBI Believes Body Found In Rubble Was Fugitive

By TIM KLASS
Associated Press Writer
COUPEVILLE, Wash. (AP) — The body of a man believed to be a neo-Nazi sought in the wounding of an FBI agent was found Sunday in the charred rubble of an island house, which was ignited by police flares during a gunfire-punctuated 35-hour standoff, authorities said.

Allen Whitaker, FBI special agent-in-charge for Washington state, said he believed the only occupant of the house, which burned to its foundation, was Robert T. Mathews, 31, of Metaline Falls. But the FBI said the identity could only be confirmed by an autopsy.

Kevin Gow of the King County Medical Examiner's office said Sunday that his office would conduct the autopsy.

The occupant of the house on Whidbey Island in Puget Sound held federal agents at bay for 35 hours before flares intended to illuminate the site started the blaze shortly after 6 p.m. Saturday, said Joe Smith, FBI spokesman.

FBI-crime scene experts from Washington, D.C., searched the rubble Sunday morning.

Mathews had been the object of an intense search since Nov. 24, when he allegedly escaped from about 20 FBI agents surrounding a Portland, Ore., motel. Agent Arthur Hensel was wounded in the knee, and Mathews was believed to have been wounded in the hand as he fled.

John Lee Mathews, also of Metaline Falls, said his brother had been involved in the white supremacist group National Alliance.

Robert Mathews broke off from the self-described white separatist Aryan Nations Church in Hayden Lake, Idaho, said Larry Broadbent, undersheriff of Kootenai County in northern Idaho. He later founded a white supremacist group called the White American Bastion, said Barbara Strakal of the Cult Awareness Center in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

One family member said Mathews has "a tendency toward being a martyr for his cause."

John Mathews said he and his family did not share his brother's beliefs. But he added, "I didn't give up loving my brother, I was just totally against what he was doing."

The fire began as agents made their second attempt of the day to enter the house. Although they were met by bursts of automatic-weapon fire both times, no injuries were reported among the agents, Smith said.

In an effort to apprehend the occupant, agents fired or tossed illumination flares into the residence, which set the house on fire, Smith said.

"Immediately afterwards, the individual in the house commenced firing at our agents. This individual did not exit the house," he said. Agents returned fire before retreating, he added.

An administrative inquiry into the incident will be conducted by the FBI, he said.

Several hours earlier, a special weapons team had entered the house but was repulsed in a gun battle.

In that attempt, Smith said, the SWAT team, wearing fatigues and with blackened faces, entered after sheriff's deputies and FBI officers had fired canister after canister of tear gas inside without results.

"We drew fire, we returned fire," he said.

Corbett said a color television camera and video cassette recorder were taken from Greenville TV and Appliance at 200 E. Greenville Boulevard, according to a report received at 8:09 a.m. Saturday.

Evans said three car batteries, two radios and a quantity of tools were taken from Miller & Davis Construction Co. at 402 N. Greene St. in a break-in reported at 1:45 p.m. Sunday.

Evans noted that some $5,000 worth of tools taken in the break-in were recovered from woods behind the business.

Meeting Thursday

The Greenville Board of Adjustment will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the board room of the Greenville Utilities building, located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

OH MY (EXPENSIVE) ACHING BACK

- 75 million Americans have back problems
- 2 million Americans cannot work because of it
- 80% of all Americans will suffer from back pain
- 20% of all work related injuries involve the back
- Back pain is the most expensive ailment in the 30 - 60 age group.
- $14 Billion is spent annually by back patients and insurance companies.
- The average insurance claim for a back injury is $6,600!

Those statistics were found in an Associated Press (AP) article. The magnitude of expense they show is frightening. A chiropractor must wonder if early treatment couldn't have significantly reduced these costs. The problem with backaches, is that they are ignored in their early stages when the discomfort is only slight. As the pain worsens, the condition is gradually degenerating into a severe ailment. If you are experiencing any discomfort in your neck or back, get a chiropractic examination now, before the pain (and the expense) become severe.

GUC Meeting

The board of commissioners of the Greenville Utilities Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the utilities building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets.

Included on the agenda for discussion is the abandonment of the old water treatment plant, the water and sewer rate implementation schedule and the city's proposed annexation schedule.

Human Rights Protesters Repelled By Riot Troops

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Riot troops, firing water jets, turned back about 10,000 people who tried to march on the armed forces headquarters in suburban Quezon City today to protest alleged violations of human rights by the military.

More than 50,000 other demonstrators marched in two provincial cities as foes of President Ferdinand E. Marcos observed Human Rights Day by denouncing what they called his "reign of terror" and calling for an end to U.S. support for his regime.

In the central Philippine city of Bacolod, 300 miles southeast of Manila, a five-day march by several thousand rural residents grew to 50,000 after city-dwellers joined them as they entered the city.

At a rally in a Bacolod Plaza, the protesters demanded the ouster of "the U.S.-backed Marcos regime."

About 5,000 others marched in Iloilo city, 280 miles southeast of Manila.

churchmen and professionals marching toward Camp Aguinaldo, the general military headquarters.

Some protesters replied by throwing rocks and bottles at police.

The marchers regrouped with linked arms, but police kept up the blockade of the main avenue leading to the military camp and the protesters turned around at an intersection to disperse, jeering at the policemen.

The day's protest included the start of a two-day lawyers' strike in metropolitan Manila and the provinces by some lawyers' groups which defend political prisoners in subversion trials. The lawyers are protesting the judiciary's "subversion" to Marcos and alleged and secret killings of political prisoners. military abuses, including torture

Flynt Says Fallwell To Remain A Target

ROANOKE (AP) — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt won't say whether an ad parody depicting the Rev. Jerry Falwell as an incestuous drunkard will ever run again in his magazine, but he does say humor and satire about the Moral Majority leader will continue to appear on its pages.

A U.S. District Court jury ruled this weekend that the fake advertisement didn't libel Falwell, but it awarded the evangelist $200,000 in damages for the emotional distress purposefully inflicted by Flynt and Hustler.

Flynt and his attorneys, contending the emotional distress verdict won't stand without a finding of libel, are confident the jury's decision will be overturned. A First Amendment specialist from Harvard and a media and libel specialist from Stanford said Sunday that they believe the verdict should be thrown out.

"Once they came out and said there was no libel, we knew he (Falwell) wouldn't be getting any money at that time," Flynt said. "If there was no libel there was no real malice, so they can't very well say he suffered any emotional damage."

"Falwell has cost me a lot of money and I don't think the thing was libelous to begin with," Flynt said. "But you can expect Falwell to be in the magazine in the future. Like I said during the trial, he makes good copy."

The eight-woman, four-man jury deliberated six hours before reaching its decision in the case late Saturday. The verdict capped a six-day trial with four hours of closing arguments and 50 minutes of jury instructions Saturday from U.S. District Judge James C. Turk.

Under the judgment, Flynt and Hustler are to pay Falwell $100,000 in compensatory damages and $100,000 in punitive damages. A third defendant, Flynt Distributing Co., was found not to be liable.

Turk declined to enter a judgment in the case and gave lawyers 10 days to file motions.

Professor Alan Dershowitz of Harvard Law School said Sunday the verdict for the intentional infliction of emotional distress normally wouldn't stand without a finding of libel.

"A publication can intentionally inflict emotional harm on a public figure as long as it didn't do it in a libelous way," Dershowitz said.

"If it was against Harvard Lampton or the New York Times ... I have no doubt that the court would throw out this verdict. But since it's against Hustler, an extremely offensive and unpopular magazine, there's just no predicting how the court will respond. The judge, the court of appeals, may very well bend the law to express their outrage at Hustler."

Stanford University law professor Marc Franklin said the verdict might even result in a new avenue through which public figures can collect damages for statements printed about them.

"The ease with which a plaintiff could say he was upset shows the danger of creating this kind of category," he said. "The public figures in our society can't be as thin-skinned as Falwell appears to be."

When Flynt arrived in Roanoke Tuesday night, he was sure he would lose on the libel count.

"I thought that being in his backyard and being in the Bible Belt area with a conservative jury that we wouldn't fare very well," he said from his brother's home in Lexington, Ky.

"It's almost impossible to select 12 jurors without getting someone on there who feels they're at an obscenity trial rather than a libel case. That's what my concern was early this week. I really thought the results were going to be disastrous, even though I knew whatever happened would be returned on appeal."

After the verdict was announced, Falwell said he was pleased the jury awarded him some damages. He attended the final day of the trial with his wife, Macel, and his three children — two of whom waited with him for the verdict.

"We would have liked to have gotten two (counts) through," Falwell said. "I think that libel was a valid claim. In principle we won, but anything less than half a million dollars will not ring his bell."

Skins, Cards Chase Titles

By The Associated Press

In the often confusing, and very mathematical, world of the National Football League, the Washington Redskins and St. Louis Cardinals need worry about only one thing. Victory next Sunday means a division title and an automatic playoff spot.

The Redskins hold the upper hand in the National Football Conference East with a 10-5 record after rallying Sunday for a 30-28 victory over the Dallas Cowboys. The Cardinals, meanwhile, stopped the New York Giants 31-21 to pull into a tie with the Giants and Cowboys at 9-6.

Washington hosts St. Louis on Sunday, and the winner will claim the East title — Washington with a better record, St. Louis by virtue of the NFL's tie-breaker procedure.

"We control our own destiny now and that's what is important," said Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, who rallied his club from a 21-6 halftime deficit at Dallas.

"We're in good shape now," added St. Louis linebacker E.J. Junior.

In other NFL action Sunday, Eric Dickerson ran for 215 yards to break O.J. Simpson's single-season rushing record as the Los Angeles Rams enhanced their chances for a wild-card playoff berth with a 27-16 victory over Houston; Pittsburgh stayed one game ahead in the AFC Central chase by beating Cleveland 23-20, while Cincinnati kept pace with a 24-21 defeat of New Orleans; Dan Marino lifted his season touchdown-pass record to 44 in leading Miami's 35-17 victory over Indianapolis; Denver pulled into a tie with Seattle in the AFC West with a 16-13 verdict over San Diego while Seattle was a 34-7 loser to Kansas City; Green Bay edged Chicago 20-14; Philadelphia slapped New England 27-17 to eliminate the Patriots from playoff consideration, and Tampa Bay bested Atlanta 23-6.

In Saturday games, the New York Jets nipped Buffalo 21-17 and San Francisco routed Minnesota 51-7.

Tonight's game features the Los Angeles Raiders at Detroit.

"This game was probably one of the all-time gut checks that I've been part of," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said after the Redskins' third straight victory over Dallas. "It looked like it was over about 10 different times."

It certainly looked over at halftime, after Dallas' Danny White had thrown three scoring passes to give the Cowboys a 21-6 lead.

Cornerback Darrell Green, victimized on two of White's first-half strikes — including a 60-yarder to Mike Renfro — got revenge and started the Washington comeback when he returned an interception 32 yards for a third-period touchdown.

"I was at a low peak after Renfro's touchdown, but I kept the faith," said Green.

His interception cut Dallas' lead to 21-13, Theismann threw 22 yards to Calvin Muhammad and Mark Moseley kicked a 21-yard field goal for a 23-21 Redskin lead.

White's fourth TD pass, a 43-yarder to Tony Hill, gave Dallas its last lead, but Theismann then directed a fourth-period drive that settled things. John Riggins, troubled all week by a bad back, capped a 111-yard rushing day with a one-yard plunge.

Cardinals 31, Giants 21

Neil Lomax was sacked five times, but he nonetheless found time to shred the New York secondary for 305 yards and three touchdowns. Lomax's third TD throw, a fourth-down toss to Roy Green that covered 35 yards, gave St. Louis a 21-14 lead.

But New York stormed back to tie it on Rob Carpenter's one-yard run.

St. Louis finally got the deciding score on Ottis Anderson's 12-yard sweep of left end with 12:17 left in the game. Neil O'Donoghue's 34-yard field goal with 4:54 to play added insurance.

Run For The Record

L.A. Rams running back Eric Dickerson carries the ball on his way to setting an NFL single season rushing record. Dickerson gained 216 yards for a total of 2,007 to surpass the mark set by O.J. Simpson. (AP Laserphoto)

Dickerson Hopes To Improve

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The record is his now, but Eric Dickerson still feels he has some distance to go toward greatness.

"It makes me feel great because it's only been two years," the Los Angeles Rams' second-year pro said Sunday after he had shattered O.J. Simpson's National Football League single-season rushing mark. "But I'm not going to say I'm the caliber of a Jim Brown or an O.J. because I could come back next year and have a terrible season."

"I still respect O.J. He's the best because he did it in 14 games and I did it in 15. So there's a difference that people will always bring up."

"But nobody else has done it since O.J., and I've done it now."

Dickerson, whose gliding, powerful style makes his running seem almost effortless, ran for 215 yards Sunday as the Rams downed Houston 27-16. He carried 27 times, with a nine-yard gain late in the final quarter pushing him to 2,007 yards on the season, four more than Simpson gained during a 14-game season in 1973.

Asked how long he would like for his record to stand, Dickerson alluded to Walter Payton, who earlier this season bettered Brown's career NFL rushing mark.

"Unlike Payton," said Dickerson. "I hope that I can get it so far out that the next guy who tries to break it, breaks his neck... except me."

Dickerson, a 6-foot-3, 218-pounder speedster who was an All-American at Southern Methodist, gave a glimpse of things to come in 1983 when he set a league rushing mark for a rookie with 1,808 yards.

After he surpassed Simpson's mark Sunday, Dickerson seemed more relieved than excited.

"I'm glad it's over," he said. "I got so tired of hearing about it. I even started dreaming about it, couldn't sleep. I hope I can have some more 2,000-yard seasons but I'm glad this one is over."

Wilander Proves Versatility With Grass Title

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Like countryman Bjorn Borg before him, Sweden's Mats Wilander has proven that his tennis game is as effective on grass as it is on clay.

The young right-hander, who powered his way into prominence in 1982 by capturing the French Open on the slow, red European clay courts of Roland Garros, on Sunday collected his second consecutive Australian Open title on the grass courts at Kooyong.

But now Wilander faces a challenge that only Borg has been able to accomplish — play winning tennis on the fastest and slowest surfaces within two weeks. Borg did it for three straight years — 1978 through 1980, when he won the French Open, then two weeks later stepped onto the grass courts at Wimbledon where he also took the crown.

Wilander will lead the Swedish Davis Cup team Dec. 16-18 when it plays the United States in the final for the prestigious international team trophy in Goteborg, Sweden. And, the surface the Swedes have picked is slow clay.

"I'll just have to get used to the clay quickly," Wilander said after earning the $100,000 first-place prize with a 6-7, 6-4, 7-6, 6-2 victory over South Africa's Kevin Curren. "I think we have good chance to beat the Americans."

"(John) McEnroe is a very good clay court player, but maybe (Jimmy) Connors is not so good on clay."

McEnroe and Connors, the world's No. 1 and 3 ranked player, respectively, head the U.S. Davis Cup squad.

Following Wilander's victory, Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver combined to capture the women's doubles in the $1.5 million tournament, the year's final Grand Slam event.

Navratilova and Shriver recorded their seventh consecutive Grand Slam doubles title by stopping Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany 6-3, 6-4.

Sukova, 19, upset Navratilova in the women's singles semifinals, stopping the world's No. 1-ranked woman player's bid for a record seventh straight Grand Slam event and a calendar-year Grand Slam.

Chris Evert Lloyd stopped Sukova 6-7, 6-1, 6-3 Saturday in the women's singles final, stretching her string of winning at least one Grand Slam tournament to 12 straight years.

The doubles victory by Navratilova and Shriver were their 53rd success this year and 83rd in a row. In the last three years, the pair has recorded a 158-4 record.

Mark Edmondson of Australia and American Sherwood Stewart won the men's doubles title on Saturday with a 6-2, 6-2, 7-5 victory over Wilander and fellow Swede Joakim Nyström.

Last year, Wilander used the Australian Open as preparation for the Davis Cup final against Australia — which was held on grass. He ended up winning the title, defeating McEnroe and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia along the way.

Sweden, however, lost to Australia in the Davis Cup final.

McEnroe missed this year's Australian Open with a wrist injury.

Wilander, 20, had to fight for nearly three hours before downing Curren, who was playing in his first-ever Grand Slam final. The Swede played solid but unspectacular tennis.

"I feel pretty good. I've certainly changed my attitude to grass," Wilander said. "I know I can play pretty well on it now and my serve is effective because I keep it fairly low."

Curren, feeling no ill effects from an ankle injury, served well early in the match, but wilted in the face of Wilander's power in the latter stages.

The Swede returned serve superbly — particularly in the fourth and decisive set. His low, dipping returns forced the 26-year-old Curren into numerous volley errors.

Wilander said the only time he felt in danger was in the third set, when Curren served at 5-3.

"I lost control a little, and when he served for the set I thought I was in trouble," he said. "But after the tiebreaker I thought I should win it. I don't think he served as well after the first set."

Donald, Alvarez Combine For J.C. Penney Crown

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — By themselves, Mike Donald and Vicki Alvarez haven't made much of a mark in the world of professional golf. But together they made an impressive team at the J.C. Penney Mixed Team Golf Classic.

Donald and Alvarez, non-winners on their respective pro tours, combined for a 4-under-par 68 Sunday to capture the Penney title with a 72-hole total of 18-under-par 270. They were the only pair to score in the 60s all four days at Bardmore Country Club.

The duo vaulted past third-round leaders Craig Stadler and Lori Garbacz with consecutive birdies on the 10th and 11th holes and held on for a one-stroke win over Stadler-Garbacz and the team of Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez.

Donald and Alvarez, who fired a 64 in the third round to move into contention, were one stroke back entering the final round.

Stadler and Garbacz started with a birdie on the first hole, but a Stadler-Garbacz bogey at No. 12 combined with the Donald-Alvarez birdies on the 10th and 11th to put the latter in control.

"We just rode the momentum in from there," said Donald, of Hollywood, Fla. "We didn't do anything really special, but Craig and Lori didn't either."

Donald and Alvarez, who calls Jacksonville home, each earned $50,000 for the victory. They both said they plan big celebrations to commemorate their first pro triumphs.

Lucas Retiring After Relapse

HOUSTON (AP) — After a mandatory drug test showed traces of cocaine in his system, Houston Rockets guard John Lucas has become the second National Basketball Association player in 48 hours to lose his job because of a drug relapse.

The 6-3 Lucas, the Rockets' starting point guard through the first 21 games, was placed on indefinite leave of absence Sunday by Rockets coach Bill Fitch, and Lucas announced Sunday night that he was calling it quits after 8½ years in the NBA.

The Utah Jazz waived forward John Drew on Saturday because of a drug relapse.

"I can't take it anymore. It's the travel, the road, and the lifestyle," the 31-year-old Lucas said from a Portland hotel where he remained instead of making a three-hour bus ride with Rockets teammates to a Sunday night game at Seattle.

Lucas, who is married and has two children, said he would return to Houston and try to sort things out.

"It's not something that I decided on the spur of the moment," Lucas said of his decision to retire from basketball. "I've been thinking about it for a while now, for several weeks. This was the time to finally do something about it, and I've made the decision to retire. Other than that, I've got no comment."

Fitch said Lucas was asked for a urine sample when he showed up for the team's practice in Portland Friday afternoon after missing the Rockets' flight from Oakland Friday morning.

Results of the test were received, Fitch said, after the Rockets' 127-120 victory Saturday night over the Portland Trail Blazers, in which Lucas scored 17 points and dished out nine assists during 34 minutes of action.

Lucas had been suspended twice previously in his pro career by the Golden State Warriors and the Washington Bullets and has admitted to a cocaine addiction in the past.

"I doubt very much if he'll be playing basketball again," Fitch said Sunday night.

"He's just a great guy, and it's a damn shame that he's got the disease. It's far from terminal. It's too bad he has to take a step backward. I think John was convinced he wouldn't go back to it. I suppose I'm surprised, but we knew this could happen," Fitch added.

Lucas, obtained by the Rockets in October from the San Antonio Spurs, was looked upon as the final piece in the Rockets' puzzle, the trigger man who would run the offense and funnel the ball consistently to 7-4 Ralph Sampson and 7-0 Akeem Olatunju.

He scored in double figures in 20 of the Rockets' first 21 games and had eight games of double-digit assists. He was a major factor in the Rockets' early-season spurt in which they won their first eight games. He was the club leader with 9.1 assists per game and the team's fourth-leading scorer with a 15.3 average.

The Rockets' contract with Lucas specifically gave them the right to make random drug checks and waive him — with no further financial obligation on his two-year, $400,000 contract — if he tested positive just once.

"What it boils down to is that John has had contractually to pass tests any time we asked him," Fitch said.

Lucas was tested approximately 18 times since the start of the season, Fitch said, adding that "He had passed them all up to now. But this time, on a routine test, he didn't pass."

The Rockets began testing Lucas more frequently after he missed a team flight to Kansas City earlier in the season. He had not missed a game, but was late for several practices and missed more team flights.

Henderson Joins Baseball's Top Five

HOUSTON (AP) — It took several missed airplane flights, a few acting lessons and several million dollars.

But the New York Yankees did what they came here to do. They finally nailed down Rickey Henderson.

Three days after the trade was conditionally made and almost a full day after baseball's winter meetings officially ended, the Yankees completed a seven-player swap Saturday that brought Henderson from the Oakland A's.

He did not come cheaply. Henderson, one of the best leadoff men in baseball history, will be paid an estimated $8.75 million for five years, making him one of the game's top five money-earners behind George Foster, Dave Winfield, Mike Schmidt and Gary Carter.

"It boiled down to business and what was best for both ballclubs," Henderson said. "We felt I would be better off in New York."

To get Henderson, an outfielder who set the major-league record of 130 bases in 1982, plus minor-league pitcher Bert Bradley and a reported $200,000, the Yankees gave up pitcher Jay Howell, highly regarded minor-league pitchers Jose Rijo, Eric Plunk and Tim Birtsas and minor-league outfielder Stan Javier.

A large portion of Henderson's money will be deferred over the next 20 to 35 years. The exact details have not been finalized.

"We were extremely reluctant to trade Rickey," Oakland Vice President Sandy Alderson said. "He has demonstrated outstanding ability."

"But we were faced with certain economic realities, given the overall composition of our ballclub, and the need to improve in several areas."

Henderson, to turn 26 on Christmas Day, had a year left on his contract and received $950,000 last season, an amount he won in salary arbitration.

Henderson, who played left field for the A's last season, probably will patrol centerfield for New York. "We haven't discussed it, yet," Henderson said.

On Wednesday night, the A's and Yankees announced that the seven-player trade had been worked out but would not become official unless the Yankees reached agreement with Henderson on a new contract.

"He would add a new dimension to our team," Yankees General Manager Clyde King said.

The A's gave the Yankees 48 hours to negotiate with Henderson and his agent, Richard Bry, and they began talking that night at the hotel where the winter meetings were being held.

By 5 p.m. Friday, no agreement had been worked out. The A's granted a 24-hour extension; the Yankees said they would know by midnight.

At 1 a.m., the two sides broke up.

"At that point, I thought it was 50-50, less than 50-50, that it would work out," Bry said.

Bry, King and Yankees Vice President Woody Woodward resumed talks Saturday morning and said they would have a final decision by noon.

Around 3 p.m., a grimacing Henderson stalked through the hotel lobby and out of the building.

Less than 30 minutes later, the deal was announced.

"They told me to be an actor," Henderson said.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, known for his free spending but somewhat reluctant to spend this much for Henderson, visited Houston briefly. He left without directly taking part in the meetings, but kept in constant contact by telephone.

"Woody and I were guided by Mr. Steinbrenner's direction," King assured.

A few minutes after the Henderson trade was completed, the A's dealt reliever Bill Caudill to the Toronto Blue Jays in exchange for infielder Alfredo Griffin, outfielder Dave Col-ins and cash.

Oakland made the trade after acquiring Howell, to be used as a reliever.

The Caudill deal satisfied Toronto's biggest need, a bullpen stopper. The Blue Jays, a good team that lost many leads in the late innings recently, had courted free-agent Bruce Sutter, who signed with Atlanta last week.

Caudill took part in more than half of Oakland's 77 victories last season, saving 36 games while posting a 9-7 record with a 2.91 earned run average.

"We've been taking about Caudill for three years," said an obviously pleased Pat Gillick, the Blue Jays' General Manager.

Saturday's flurry of activity came well past the 5 p.m. CST official conclusion of the 83rd annual meetings.

The day-after trades wrecked several travel plans.

"I think we missed eight flights waiting for all of this happen," A's spokesman Mickey Morabito said.

Friday afternoon also represented the end of the interleague trading period, although another such time exists from Feb. 15 to April 1.

There were nine deals involving 22 players completed during the week-long meetings. Among those traded were former Cy Young Award winner LaMarr Hoyt, from the Chicago White Sox to San Diego; Don Sutton, winner of 280 games, from Milwaukee to Oakland; and starting pitcher Walt Terrell, from the New York Mets to the World Series champion Detroit Tigers.

In addition to Sutter, other free-agents who signed contracts during the meetings were pitcher Steve Trout, who remained with the Chicago Cubs; designated hitter Andre Thornton, who stayed with Cleveland; outfielder Lee Lacy, who left Pittsburgh for Baltimore; and DH Cliff Johnson, who departed Toronto for Texas.

Bird, Wilkins Battle As Celts Top Atlanta

By The Associated Press

The individual battle between Boston's Larry Bird and Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins was so brilliant that the rest of the players felt like they were taking an instructional course.

"I loved it, the two professors, Professor Bird and Professor Wilkins, taking each other to school," said Atlanta guard Eddie Johnson.

Bird outscored Wilkins 48-47, and perhaps fittingly, the Boston Celtics also won Sunday night's game by one point, 128-127, Sunday night.

"Dominique was awesome and I can't say enough about Bird," said Johnson, who had 21 points for the Hawks. "It was two superstars playing to the maximum effort. This was the way the game should be played."

Despite the heroics of Bird and Wilkins, the game was decided at the final buzzer when Kevin McHale tapped in a rebound.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Philadelphia 110, New York 94; Seattle 96, Houston 90; Los Angeles Clippers 126, San Antonio 123; and Utah 123, Kansas City 120.

Atlanta, 8-13, led 127-126 and guard Glenn Rivers at the free-throw line with five seconds remaining. But he missed both shots to give the Celtics a final chance to win.

Bird missed, but McHale's rebound extended the Celtics' unbeaten record at home this season to 10 games and their overall mark to 18-2.

"They are the world champions and we played them even," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "The fans saw a great individual effort on one side [Bird] and another on the other side [Wilkins], but overall this was a great game for us. We'll be looking at the films for a long time."

Wilkins, in his third year with the Hawks, hit 18 of 31 field-goal attempts and 11 of 13 free throws to register his career-high point total. Bird was 20-for-32 and 8-for-9 and added 14 rebounds.

"I'm sure Dominique was playing that good because he was playing against Larry," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "It was like there were two separate games going on."

"We were pumped up for this game," Wilkins said. "It was a team effort. Both teams ran, never slowed down. Bird makes you work hard. He plays hard and he does so many things."

"We're lucky he didn't score 50 points," Bird said of Wilkins. "I just wanted to win like I do every game. I'd rather win by a big score. We don't need close games to shake us up. We come out to win every game and play hard."

Robert Parish had 21 points, McHale 20, Dennis Johnson 17 and Danny Ainge 15 as the Celtics defeated Atlanta for the eighth time in a row and for the 16th in the last 18 meetings.

76ers 110, Knicks 94

Philadelphia won its seventh in a row, beating New York to remain two games behind the Celtics in the Atlantic Division.

Stacy Pochowicz tied for third in the floor exercise at 8.75, tied for fourth in the vault with a 7.85 and qualified for the state meet with a 30.35.

"Tracy Roberts looks like she could be the strongest for us in Class IV," Greenville Gymnastics Club Coach Darlene Rose said. "She could place in the state meet; we're really looking for good things from her in the future."

Other GGC results:

Lady Pirates Dunk Navy, Men Split

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Chris Holman led the East Carolina women's swimming team to its first victory of the season over Navy, while the Pirate men beat Shippensburg State but lost to the Midshipmen Saturday.

The Lady Pirates won their meet 78-62, as Holman took first place in the 200-meter freestyle and 200 backstroke — qualifying for the nationals in the latter.

"Navy always has a tough women's program," ECU Coach Rick Kobe said.

The Pirates defeated Shippensburg State 71-41 but lost to Navy 60-53. Shippensburg State was fourth at the 1984 NCAA Division II nationals.

Freshman Pat Brennan won the 800 freestyle and the 200 breaststroke, while Bruce Brocksmit won the 200 individual medley and placed second in the 200 butterfly. Kevin Hidalgo took first in the 200 backstroke.

"It was our closest meet with Navy in some time," Kobe said.

"Navy is ranked third in the east and is one of the strongest programs in the east. But we went up to their pool and really scared them."

"We had our chances to win it. It ranks as one of the finest meets for ECU's men, even in a loss."

Both East Carolina teams will swim against Johns Hopkins Jan. 2 in North Palm Beach, Fla.

Trouble Multiplies For Cavaliers In ACC Race

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer

While victories continue to grow for Duke, North Carolina and North Carolina State, troubles seem to multiply for Virginia as the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball season moves on.

The fourth-ranked Blue Devils climbed to 5-0 by holding off the Cavaliers 78-65. No. 16 North Carolina won its fourth game without a loss by whipping Oral Roberts 87-65, while No. 10 N.C. State smacked Western Carolina 100-67 to raise its record to 5-0.

Elsewhere, Maryland nipped Alabama 59-56 on Keith Gatlin's free throws in the final minutes, while Clemson knocked off Augusta College 89-62.

The clouds began to gather over the Cavaliers when it was revealed that center Olden Polynice had been acquitted by Virginia's honor court. Polynice was apparently affected by adverse publicity surrounding the incident and left the team Friday. Three of Coach Terry Holland's freshmen were kept off the traveling squad for the William & Mary game, a contest the Cavaliers lost.

In losing to Duke, Virginia was called for two technical fouls, including one called on forward Tom Sheehey, who was thrown out in the closing minutes. Also, Jim Miller sprained an ankle in the last minute of play. The Cavaliers do not play again until Dec. 20 against Randolph-Macon, then face Virginia Tech on Jan. 2.

Johnny Dawkins scored 23 points and Dan Meagher added 17 points in the ACC opener for both schools.

"I'm pleased with the win," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We took a really good shot from a good basketball team."

Holland, whose team dropped to 4-3, felt his club was a victim of a rough battle.

"I thought there were several instances we were intimidated out there tonight," Holland said. "I thought that was the difference in the game."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith usually doesn't hand out superlatives, but he wasn't able to contain himself after watching his team romppast the Titans.

"Kenny Smith was sensational. Brad's defense was outstanding," Smith said of junior center Brad Daugherty, who scored 17 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. It wasn't long, however, before Coach Smith got a hold of himself.

"I'm afraid our players are thinking they are better than they are," he noted. "But we haven't played a tough road game yet."

North Carolina meets Wake Forest at Greensboro next Saturday.

The Wolfpack outscored Western Carolina 23-3 in the last six minutes, including 20 straight points, to stop what had looked like a last bid for an upset by the Catamounts. What had been a 32-point edge was whittled to 20-64 before N.C. State went back to its regulars to settle things.

Tiger Coaches Suspended

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Two Clemson University track coaches have been suspended without pay while state law officers investigate claims prescription drugs were given to student athletes.

Track coach Stan Narewski and women's coach Sam Colson were suspended Saturday pending the outcome of the investigation, school officials said.

The probe was prompted by a blood analysis following the death of cross country runner Augustinus Jaspers, said state Law Enforcement Division spokesman Hugh Munn.

Jaspers, 23, from Aerdenhout, the Netherlands, and a member of the Dutch Olympic team, was found dead in his dormitory room Oct. 19. An autopsy later showed the cause of death to be heart failure.

An analysis of his blood found a non-lethal dose of a prescription pain killer, phenyl butazone. Following that disclosure, Clemson University officials met with the solicitor and asked the state to investigate, Munn said.

"Now I don't even mean to intimate that that's what killed him (Jaspers) but I'm just saying there was this prescription drug in his blood and he did not have a prescription for it," Munn said.

"The investigation involves the alleged dispensing of prescription medications to some student athletes in the track program, an idea which Clemson University will not permit to exist even at the level of gossip and innuendo," said Clemson President Bill Atchley.

Atchley said that while the investigation was being conducted university officials would have no further comment.

"Until I have all the facts and a final report from SLED, I plan not to make additional statements or to make a personal judgment on the matter, and I hope others will do the same."

Phenyl butazone fights inflammation and is used in the treatment of gout, rheumatoid arthritis and other conditions, medical publications say.

Narewski said he could not comment on the probe. "It's under investigation, and I'm not permitted to speak on the subject until that investigation is closed," he said.

Colson could not be reached for comment.

Munn said the state agency has assigned a three-man team to the investigation. He said he did not know how long the probe would take.

"We're just tickled to be where we are," said St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan.

"We just played completely different than last time," said Lomax, referring to a 16-10 loss to the Giants earlier in the season. "We just took our time, showed patience, and made it work."

"They did the same thing as they did the first game," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "They just did it better."

Rams 27, Oilers 16

Dickerson increased his rushing total to 2,007 yards, four more than Simpson's 2,003 yards in 14 games in 1973. More importantly, he scored twice, moving the Rams within one game of a wild-card playoff spot. The Rams can clinch the No. 1 wild-card spot with a victory at San Francisco on Friday.

"I got so tired of hearing about it... I even started dreaming about it, couldn't sleep," said Dickerson. "I hope I can have some more 2,000-yard seasons, but I'm glad this one is over."

Dickerson carried 27 for his 215 yards Sunday and scored on runs of seven and six yards.

Blue-Gray Rosters Set

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Some of college football's top talent will take the field Christmas Day in the 47th Blue-Gray All-Star Classic, according to the director of the annual grid-iron battle.

Alabama's Paul Ott Carruth, Ricky Moore and Preston Gotard, as well as Southern Mississippi's Sam DeJarnette and North Carolina State's Joe McIntosh are among the players selected for the South's offensive roster.

Blue-Gray Director Charles "Fats" Jones, announcing the roster Saturday, said it was probably "the best overall crop of talent" ever to play for the South.

The North's offensive roster and both team's defensive lineups will be announced later.

Coach Ray Perkins and Georgia Tech's Billy Curry were named as the Gray coaches Friday, while Arizona State's Darryl Rogers and former Missouri Coach Warren Powers were named to lead the Blue squad.

The two teams of college seniors collide in Montgomery's Cranton Bowl in a nationally televised game beginning at 11:30 a.m. CST Dec. 25.

Gotard will be joined at tight end by Clemson's K.D. Dunn and Murray State's Keith Lester, while Kurt Page of Vanderbilt and Mike Eppley of Clemson will share the quarterback duties for the Gray. Page, a two-time all conference selection, completed 203 of 350 passes this season for 2,405 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Jerry Rice of Mississippi Valley State, Chuck Scott of Vanderbilt and Chris Burkett of Jackson State have been chosen as the Gray team's receivers.

"This may be the best overall crop of talent we've ever had," said Jones.

knowledge the Steelers probably must beat the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders next Sunday to gain a playoff spot.

If Pittsburgh loses, the Cincinnati Bengals can gain a tie for the Central Division title with a victory over the Buffalo Bills. And Cincinnati would then advance to the playoffs because of the NFL's tie-breaker system.

"This is the single most important game for us," Steeler Coach Chuck Noll said in looking ahead to the Raiders. "Everything will be on the line for us."

The Pittsburgh passing combination of quarterback Mark Malone and wide receiver Louis Lipps accounted for a 61-yard score and an 18-yard gain that set up Frank Pollard's short touchdown run.

Cleveland rallied from a 17-6 second-quarter deficit to tie it 20-20 on Paul McDonald's three-yard bootleg run with 8:49 left in the fourth period.

Hanford Dixon's interception of a McDonald pass set the stage for Anderson's winning kick.

Bengals 24, Saints 21

Ken Anderson passed for two touchdowns in his first outing in a month after injuring a shoulder. The Bengals led just 3-0 when Anderson relieved starter Boomer Esiasin in the second period. He completed scoring passes of 27 yards to James Brooks and 15 yards to Stanford Jennings for a 17-7 halftime lead.

Reserve Dave Wilson threw three touchdown passes for New Orleans, the last with 49 seconds left in the game to cut Cincinnati's lead to three points.

Dolphins 35, Colts 17

Indianapolis held a 17-7 halftime lead, but it was all Miami — and Marino — after that. The second-year pro from Pittsburgh led Miami to its 13th victory in 15 games with scoring throws of two yards to Nat Moore, two yards to Bruce Hardy, 25 yards to Jimmy Cefalo and seven yards to Mark Clayton.

Marino's 44 TD passes tied the professional football record of 44 set this year by Jim Kelly of the United States Football League's Houston Gamblers.

Broncos 16, Chargers 13

Rich Karlis, who missed last-second field goals in Denver losses the previous two weekends, connected on a 28-yarder with 2:08 left to give the Broncos a victory over San Diego.

Karlis and San Diego's Rolf Benirschke each kicked two field goals in the first half before Denver took a 13-6 third-period lead on Sammy Winder's four-yard run. San Diego tied it for the last time after Winder fumbled at the Denver 4-yard line. Ed Luther passed to Buford McGee for the touchdown early in the final period.

Chiefs 34, Seahawks 7

Bill Kenney threw for 312 yards and two touchdowns and Kansas City's aroused secondary intercepted six Dave Kreig passes as the Chiefs atoned for a 45-0 loss to Seattle earlier in the year. One of the thefts was returned 19 yards by linebacker Scott Radeic to give Kansas City a 17-7 lead early in the second quarter.

Kenney made it 24-7 at the half with a 26-yard strike to Henry Marshall.

Packers 20, Bears 14

Rich Campbell, a third-string quarterback pressed into action when Randy Wright was hurt, threw a 43-yard scoring pass to Phil Epps with 34 seconds left as Green Bay hurt Chicago's hopes for the home-field advantage in the playoffs.

Walter Payton was heroic in defeat, rushing for 175 yards and a touchdown and passing two yards to Matt Suhey on a halfback option for another.

Eagles 27, Patriots 17

Quarterback Joe Pisarcik ran for a pair of touchdowns and Wilbert Montgomery dashed 10 yards for another as the Eagles ended playoff aspirations for the Patriots. Pisarcik's 16-yard scramble set up Montgomery's scoring run that gave Philadelphia a 17-10 edge with 54 seconds left in the first half.

South African Bishop Gets Nobel Prize

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — South African Bishop Desmond Tutu accepted his Nobel Peace Prize today, saying it has given new hope to the "voiceless, dispossessed, oppressed" and those who doubt God cares about the fate of his creatures.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee awarded the 1984 prize to the black Anglican church leader in October, describing him as "a unifying leader" in the fight against the racial segregation laws — "apartheid" — enforced by the white minority government in South Africa.

Tutu accepted a gold medal, diploma and $193,000 stipend before Norwegian King Olav V and other guests in Oslo University's stately Aula Festival Hall on the 98th anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite whose will established and endowed the Nobel awards.

In his prepared remarks, Tutu described the congratulations he had received from heads of state, church leaders and ordinary people, "notable exceptions being the Soviet and South African governments."

"A new hope has been kindled in the breasts of the millions who are voiceless, oppressed, dispossessed, tortured by the powerful tyrants, lacking elementary human rights in Latin America, in Southeast Asia, in the Far East, in many parts of Africa and behind the Iron Curtain, who have their noses rubbed in the dust," he said.

"The world is in such desperate straits, in such a horrible mess, that it all provides almost conclusive proof that a good and powerful and loving God such as Christians and people of other faiths say they believe in could not exist, or if he did he really could not be a God who cared much about the fate of his creatures or the world they happened to inhabit which seemed to be so hostile to their aspirations to be fully human."

However, Tutu said, "the prize has given fresh hope to many in a world that has sometimes had a pall of despondency cast over it by the experience of suffering, disease, poverty, famine, hunger, oppression, injustice, evil and war — a pall that has made many wonder whether God cared, whether he was omnipotent, whether he was loving and compassionate," the bishop said.

Tutu said the 1984 award, in particular, raised the prospects of change in his own country. "New hope," he said, "has sprung in the breasts of many as a result of this prize — the mother watching her child starve in a Bantustan homeland resettlement camp, or one whose flimsy plastic covering was demolished by the authorities in the K.T.C. squatter camp in Capetown; the man emaciated by the pass laws as he lived for 11 months in a single-sex hostel, the student receiving an inferior education," jailed and tortured activists and political exiles.

Tutu added that his award "says more eloquently than anything else that this is God's world and he is in charge, that our cause is a just cause, that we will attain human rights in South Africa and everywhere in the world."

Norwegian Nobel Committee chairman Egil Aarvik said in presenting the award to Tutu that the 1984 prize recognized that "a peaceful alternative exists ... (and) must succeed" to end the "outrageous violation of basic human rights" in South Africa.

"The question has been raised whether the award of the peace prize to Desmond Tutu is to be seen as a judgment on the South African apartheid system," said Aarvik. "The answer is that the system has judged itself ... Racial discrimination used and defended as a political system is totally incompatible with human civilization."

At a news conference upon his arrival Sunday, Tutu called his prize "a corporate award" given him on behalf of all those committed to ending apartheid in his country.

"It is an award that honors all those very many people down through the years who have committed themselves to a struggle for justice and peace and reconciliation in our land," he said.

Tutu said he was proud to follow in the footsteps of the only other South African peace prize winner, Albert J. Lutuli, former head of the African National Congress, who won in 1960.

Pretoria had banned that black nationalist group at the time, and it has become the main guerrilla movement fighting apartheid.

Tutu vowed never to take up arms against oppression but said he didn't doubt that the South African government's violence will one day be answered by violence. "The Christian tradition is one which says that there may come a time when it is justifiable, it is the lesser of two evils, for people to overthrow an unjust dispensation by armed struggle."

Nobel laureates in physics, chemistry and economics from the United States, Italy, the Netherlands and Britain were to accept their prizes at traditional ceremonies in Stockholm, Sweden today.

Jaroslav Seifert, the 83-year-old Czechoslovak poet who won the Nobel literature award, did not make the trip to Stockholm for health reasons. His daughter and son were expected to pick up the prize for Seifert.

Inspections Ordered On Commuter Planes Following Crash In Florida

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Investigators probing a Provincetown-Boston Airline crash that killed 13 people have issued an emergency order for immediate inspection of all commuter planes of the same model flying in the United States.

The Federal Aviation Administration said Sunday that last year it had warned the owners of the aircraft that crashed of potential defects that could cause the tail to break off.

But the airline said it had thoroughly inspected the plane and investigators said they had not yet been able to reconstruct the chain of events that led to the crash.

The PBA twin-engine plane crashed Thursday evening just after takeoff when a 21-foot section of the tail separated. All 11 passengers and two crew members aboard died.

The FAA on Sunday called for the inspections of the Brazilian-made Embraer Bandeirantes Model 110 planes. A day earlier PBA, which had been completely grounded by the FAA last month for alleged safety violations, announced that it had grounded its 18 other Embraer Bandeirantes to check their tail assemblies.

Crews today were to go over records in Miami on the last FAA inspection of the downed aircraft and documents at PBA's headquarters in Naples, said Patricia Goldman, vice chairwoman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

In Washington, the FAA said Sunday it had issued an inspection order for all Embraer Bandeirante Model 110 airplanes flying in the United States.

There are about 130 such aircraft in use in this country, said FAA spokesman Ed Pinto, but he did not know how many were being used commercially to carry passengers.

Aviation inspectors over the weekend found cracks or loose rivets in tail sections of other Model 110s across the country, Ms. Goldman said without further elaboration.

The newly found problems are not serious, said Newton Berwig, president of Embraer's U.S. operations.

"We're getting inspection reports from all the different operators," said Berwig from Fort Lauderdale.

"But we have not found anything that would have caused the accident."

The 3-year-old plane that crashed shortly after leaving for Tampa had only flown about 5,000 miles since it returned to the skies three weeks ago along with about two-thirds of the airline's fleet, said PBA President Peter Van Arsdale.

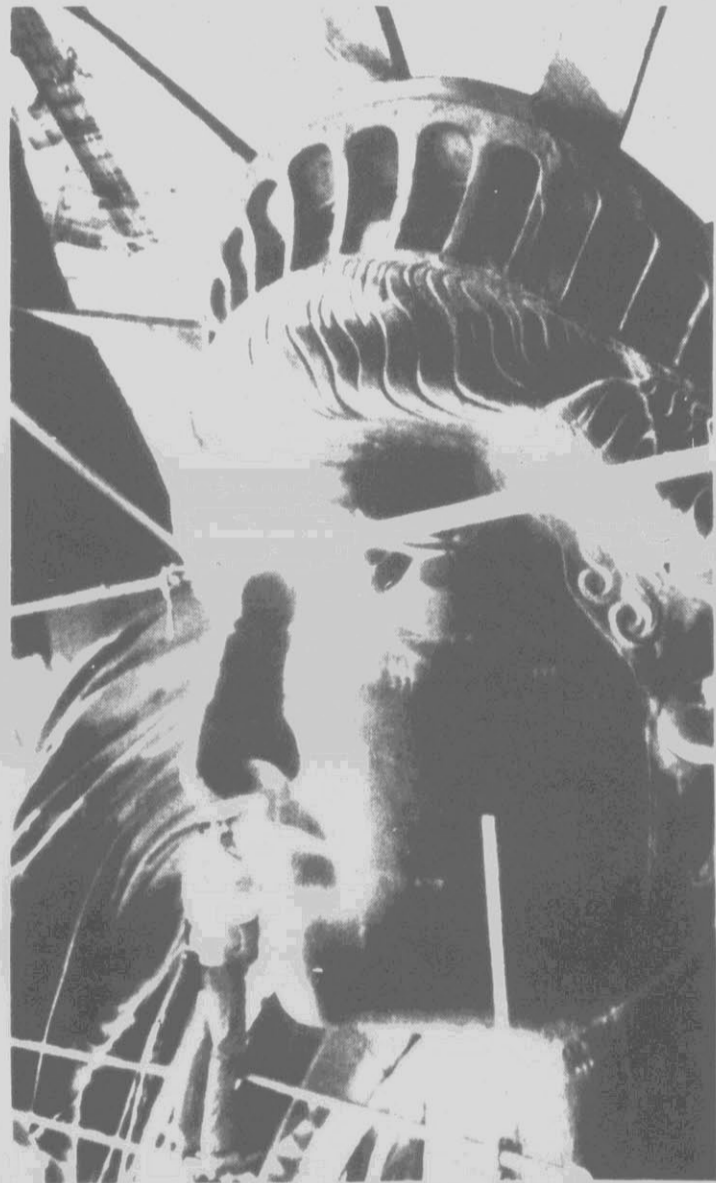

"I'll state until I drop that we did absolutely everything we had to do to get recertified by the book, rule by rule," Van Arsdale said Sunday. "We met all the federal standards and went beyond them."

The plane had been inspected twice in the past two weeks and logged 25 hours of flight time since it was returned to service, he said.

Preliminary NTSB findings of the plane indicate the horizontal stabilizer broke loose, Ms. Goldman said Sunday.

But officials were uncertain as to the chain of events that caused the tail section to separate.

The fuselage, the metal "skin" of the plane that adds structural strength to the tail section, apparently began to tear and the added stress on the weakened stabilizer

The nose is 4-feet, 6-inches long, and from the chin to the top of the head measures 17-feet, 3-inches. Teachers Strike Goes On CHICAGO (AP) — Marathon weekend bargaining failed to get striking teachers back to work today, sending the 430,000 students in the nation's third-largest school district into a second week without classes.

Weary negotiators talked for nearly 30 hours straight over the weekend, finally calling it quits at 5:15 p.m. Sunday. Bargaining was to resume this morning.

"It's unfortunate that the union felt it had to go home now," said school board president George Munoz after the talks ended. "It would have been productive to continue."

Late Saturday, board negotiators offered striking teachers a salary increase of one-half of 1 percent and a one-time 1 percent bonus. The salary increase would take place in January, meaning that the teachers would receive only a one-quarter percent pay raise this year.

The Chicago Teachers Union has demanded a 10 percent pay raise, but the school board has insisted that no money is in the budget for such an increase.

caused the mounting brackets to snap, she said.

Officials said they don't know if the elevators on the rear of the stabilizer pulled loose first, dragging the stabilizer with them, or if the stabilizer first separated from its three-eighths-inch-thick alloy mounting bracket.

An FAA airworthiness directive issued Aug. 9, 1983, listed 18 steps for owners of the aircraft to take to prevent possible separation of the horizontal stabilizer, including checking for loose rivets.

Without the stabilizer, the pilot loses control of pitch, or the up and down movement of the aircraft.

New York Timberlake Show Helps Children's Program

NEW YORK (AP) — More than $30,000 was raised for the children's cancer center treatment program at Duke University Medical Center at the opening of a one-man show by North Carolina artist Bob Timberlake, officials said.

Sunday's opening also attracted entertainer Perry Como and syndicated columnist Sylvia Porter.

Hugh Morton, owner of Grandfather Mountain in North Carolina, said in a telephone interview that about 300 art patrons and guests attended the $100-a-person opening at Hammer Galleries. The event was officially hosted by Como, Ms. Porter, industrialist Armand Hammer and his brother, Victor, but Armand Hammer was in the Soviet Union and could not attend, Morton said.

Timberlake's show, his fifth at Hammer Galleries, is scheduled to run through Jan. 4. The exhibition goes to the Frye Museum in Seattle for the month of February, Morton said.

Guests at the Timberlake opening fund-raiser included North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt and his wife, Carolyn.

Morton said for the past 11 years Como has provided the leadership for several successful fund-raising events for Duke Medical Center and serves as honorary chairman of the annual Duke Children's Classic golf tournament.

In 1983, Timberlake donated to Duke a limited edition reproduction of his "Jonquils" painting, sales of which helped raise more than $300,000 to date, Morton said.

Timberlake serves as the official artist of "Keep America Beautiful," and has been active in fund-raising events for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, the American Forestry Association and more than 20 other non-profit organizations. He has been honored in private meetings with Presidents Carter and Reagan in the White House and Great Britain's Prince Charles in Buckingham Palace.

Adviser Suggests Plant Closings Should Result In Federal Aid For N.C.

By The Associated Press

The number of closings of textile and apparel mills this year alone should make North Carolina able to apply for disaster relief, the chairman of a Charlotte-based company says.

"The state of North Carolina should be able to ask for billions of dollars in disaster relief," said Tom Roboz, chairman of Stanwood Corp., and the senior adviser to the federal government on foreign textile and apparel policy negotiations.

"Thirty-five textile and apparel mills have closed" in the first 10 months of 1984, Roboz said. "What would the governor of North Carolina do if 35 textile mills were wiped out by a tornado?"

Many textile and apparel representatives, led by Roboz, support global quotas on foreign products, an immediate freeze on imports and a permit procedure that allows the Customs Service to know what products are being shipped before they arrive.

From 1974 to 1983, the state suffered a net loss of manufacturing jobs, led by declines in textile and apparel employment. About 354,800 non-manufacturing jobs were gained, according to figures by the Employment Security Commission.

"We've got to get some fair trade. We've got to stop the crippling of American Manufacturing," said Charles Dunn, chairman of the North Carolina Textile Manufacturing Association.

While North Carolina has attracted new businesses in an attempt to provide jobs for the unemployed textile workers, many of those jobs are in the high technology sector. In addition, many of those companies locate in the Research Triangle Park, Charlotte or the Piedmont Triad.

"The Hunt administration has done a great job of bringing in high-tech plants," said Curt Hedrick, who spent 29 years at Burlington Industries' Franklinton plant, which will close in four months. "People there go to work for $10 an hour, but they have the background and education. That's great for them, I've got nothing against that, but some people are just not equipped to handle putting computers together."

New Faces Among State's Congressional Delegation

By The Associated Press

The six Democrats who survived the November elections to remain part of North Carolina's congressional delegation return to Washington with what some think was a clear message from the voters.

"The clear message is that we be conservative," said Rep. Charlie Rose, a Fayetteville Democrat who won re-election to a seventh term. "We (Democrats) shouldn't be noisy detractors from the president, but we still need to stand by our principles."

Rep. I.T. "Tim" Valentine agrees that the Nov. 6 election was a warning that the Democratic Party must move to the right.

And Valentine said that his re-election this year "showed that you don't have to swallow the party line hook, line and sinker to survive."

The election also reshaped the North Carolina congressional delegation, filling it with fresh Republican faces.

When the 99th Congress convenes Jan. 3, the greatest number of North Carolina Republicans since the late 1860s will take the oath of office.

The new faces include Republicans Bill Cobey, who defeated 12-year incumbent Ike Andrews in the 4th District, and Howard Coble, who became the fourth man in five years to hold the 6th District seat. Republican Alex McMillan took the seat vacated by Rep. Jim Martin, who was elected North Carolina's governor in November, and Bill Hendon regained the 11th seat he lost in 1982 to Democrat Jamie Clark.

Meanwhile, the new Republicans are putting together their wish lists for House committee assignments, knowing that the prestigious assignments usually don't go to freshmen.

"You've got to be realistic," said Cobey, who says his preferences are the Education and Labor or the Science and Technology committees.

McMillan, 52, a former president of Harris-Teeter Super Markets Inc., said he thought he could contribute on the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

Coble's preferences are for the Armed Services, Small Business and Government Operations committees.

"As a state legislator, I kept talking about getting rid of waste in government and I think Government Operations might provide a good forum for that," Coble said.

Hendon said he would like to get back on the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, where he served from 1981 to 1983, and on the POW-MIA Task Force. He said he would also like a first-time seat on the Veterans' Affairs Committee.

The four freshmen congressmen say they are opposed to tax increases. Though they say the defense budget should not be exempt from cuts, they emphasize that they are strong supporters of a powerful defense program.

"I've never seen a budget that couldn't be cut," Cobey said. "But I think we need to increase the spending in our defense area because it has been neglected over the years."

Ownership Fight Looms Over Coastal Property

RALEIGH (AP) — Three state agencies responsible for resolving whether the state or individuals control thousands of acres of North Carolina coastal waters are looking to the General Assembly for help, one official says.

Daniel F. McLawhorn, an assistant attorney general who specializes in issues dealing with coastal waters and development, said the Department of Administration and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development are mainly responsible for resolving the submerged land disputes.

But, those two agencies and the attorney general's office, which represents the state in legal matters, are looking "for assistance" from the General Assembly in the form of laws to make the settlement process "less cumbersome," he said.

The warning signal for the fight over the submerged land was sounded last week when a legislative study committee issued a draft report on the issue. Waters that everyone takes for granted as public access areas for boating, swimming and fishing are suddenly under discussion because it is unclear who is responsible.

"I really don't think people know that there are people out there who think they own the bottom of the inland waterway, or for that matter, of the inlets," Jane S. Patterson, secretary of the N.C. Department of Administration, said in an interview.

Mrs. Patterson said if citizens saw a map plotting the 10,000 private claims that have been made to submerged coastal lands, "I think it would shock people."

Such a map would include submerged land and marshes beneath 70 percent of the waters and marshlands from Morehead City to South Carolina.

The legislative report issued last Friday recommended that the General Assembly enact a set of laws to help clear up the submerged land issue and that the claims be settled by 1990. Unless the state moves soon to resolve the claims, courts may rule that they are valid, McLawhorn said.

If that happens, McLawhorn said, "then we will have private waters and there would be, I would expect, fees charged by people who contend they own them."

Some coastal residents are angered by the state's contention that their deeds to submerged lands are invalid.

"They know good and well I own it," said Sidney A. Credle of Swan Quarter in reference to his dispute with the state over 85 acres, most of which is permanently covered by the waters of Swan Quarter Bay.

Credle said his family has been removing shellfish from those waters since 1917.

Producer Gloria Monty Keeps ABC's 'General Hospital' At Top Of Pack

By JERRY BUCK
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three years ago ABC's "General Hospital" made television history when the marriage of Luke and Laura sent the Nielsen ratings almost jumping off the chart.
 What a time that was. Tony Geary as Luke and Genie Francis as Laura were the Rhetts Butler and Scarlett O'Hara of the soaps. Elizabeth Taylor made a guest appearance. And executive producer Gloria Monty was taking her story cues from Alfred Hitchcock and Frank Capra. (Some stories also seemed to have been inspired by Edgar Rice Burroughs and H. Rider Haggard.)
 Three years later, despite a few ups and downs, despite the loss of Geary and Miss Francis as regular performers, "General Hospital" is still the highest-rated daytime show.
 "I don't think we'll ever reach the viewer level we had during the wedding," said Miss Monty. "I don't know if all of television will ever reach that level again. All the ratings have gone soft. The competition is so tough."

 She does think the show has more viewers than Nielsen gives it credit for because many people videotape the show and watch it later.
 "I've heard more people tape 'General Hospital' than any other show," she said, "but there's no way of telling."
 Currently, Geary is winding up a brief return to the show and Miss Francis has already left after a return engagement. Geary had a treasure hunt adventure in Mexico with Scorpio (Tristan Rogers), Holly (Emma Samms) and Miss Francis.

At the same time, there were stories involving the rock singer Frisco (Jack Wagner) and Felicia (Kristina Malandro); Dr. Rick Webber (Chris Robinson), Ginny Blake (Judith Chapman) and Derek Barrington (Mark Goddard); plus the Quartermains and the other characters.
 Miss Monty was in her office beneath the stage where "General Hospital" is taped. The suite of offices was a one-time cellar, and when she took over the show in 1978 the offices were ankle-deep in water.

 Which was appropriate, because the show itself was in imminent danger of being sunk by ABC for low ratings. The show was at death's door when Miss Monty's unusual approach and ideas turned it into the super soap opera of the 1980s.
 How has she kept the show No. 1 in the ratings? She laughed and said, "Blood, sweat and tears." After a brief pause, she added, "And a good company. By managing to keep good writers. By keeping the actors interested."
 She explained that the writers, directors and actors are constantly trying something new — or something old. For instance, one director used the old technique of the camera-as-the-eye to show a murder. In other words, the camera saw it as the killer would.
 Last year, they came up with their own "General Hospital" music video, which was used as part of the ongoing story. That involved John Stamos, who played Blackie Parrish before leaving the show to star in the CBS sitcom "Dreams." Now that "Dreams" has been canceled, it's possible Stamos may rejoin the soap. Blackie was sent to prison so Stamos would have the option of returning at some future date.

 Miss Monty's success with "General Hospital" has brought her perks from the network, such as producing movies of the week. That, in turn, had its own benefits. She was in Chicago filming "The Imposter" with Geary, Billy Dee Williams and Lorna Patterson when she did some casting on the side. That's how she found Miss Malandro.
 Miss Monty is confident she can change the direction of soap operas again, as she did in the past.
 "There are better ways of breaking out of the four walls of the studio," she said. "There are better ways of using music. There's more that can be done photographically and electronically."

Peppard Says Fourth Marriage Will Last

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor George Peppard, star of "The A-Team," says his new marriage — his fourth — will succeed because he is "not the same person" he was when he was drinking heavily.
 The 56-year-old actor and artist Alexis "J.J." Adams, 28, were married Saturday at the Little Brown Church in the Studio City area, said publicist Cheryl Kagen. Peppard's daughter, Sarah, was maid of honor.
 "I do not drink anymore," Peppard said. "This is the first marriage where I can say that is true. Secondly, Alexis saw me at what may be considered my worst time. The future will hopefully be a lot easier."
 The couple plans to honeymoon in January, when Peppard's popular television series is on hiatus, Ms. Kagen said. It is Ms. Adams' first marriage.

Peppard has also starred in such films as "The Carpetbaggers," "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "The Blue Max."

NEW BRIDE — Actor George Peppard poses with his new bride, Alexis "J.J." Adams, Sunday at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. The two were attending the annual Christmas Festival of the Crippled Children's Society, of which Peppard is the 1984-85 honorary chairman. It was Peppard's fourth trip to the altar. (AP Laserphoto)

 MILWAUKEE (AP) — Entertainer Liberace, inaugurating a $1.6 million fund-raising drive to refurbish a 103-year-old theater that now bears his name, said he grew up "practically a stone's throw away" from the building.
 The colorful pianist was back in his hometown Saturday on behalf of the Liberace Playhouse, a Victorian Gothic building which houses the amateur Milwaukee Players acting group.
 After autographing a "wall of fans" to be given those who donate money to the renovation project, he quipped that he might have something in common with the theater located on the grounds of a Veterans Administration center: a long history in entertainment.
 "I don't believe there are too many entertainers in show biz today who can say they played for veterans of the Civil War," Liberace, 65, said, explaining that as a child he performed for some people who were veterans of that war.

Long-Lost Mozart Work Is Performed

ODENSE, Denmark (AP) — The music of a long-lost symphony was performed in public Sunday for the first time in perhaps two centuries, and musical experts said it displayed the budding genius of an Austrian youngster — Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.
 The audience, including Queen Mother Ingrid of Denmark, gave thunderous applause as the Odense Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Tamas Vetoe, ended the performance of the 15-minute work in A major billed as Mozart's Symphony KV16a "Odense."

Thousands Of Young Nicaraguans Dodge Sandinista Military Draft

By MONTE HAYES
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Emiliano, a 19-year-old former student of computer programming, rarely sleeps at home. Sometimes he spends his nights at his mother-in-law's place, other times at the homes of neighbors or friends. He has dropped out of school and is afraid to look for a job.

Emiliano is on the run from the Sandinista military draft.

"I have many friends who are fleeing from military service," said Emiliano, a thin, soft-spoken young man who asked that his last name not be revealed. "Many have left the country. They escaped across the border" to Costa Rica and Honduras.

Since the law was enacted in September 1983, thousands of young men have gone into hiding to avoid the draft and thousands more have deserted after being forcibly inducted, according to Nicaragua's Permanent Commission on Human Rights.

U.S. military sources who claim access to intelligence information estimate that a quarter of the 25,000 young men drafted into the army and 23 are being drafted to battle U.S.-backed guerrillas in Nicaragua.

The Roman Catholic Church, the human rights commission and opposition parties have attacked the draft. Critics accuse the Sandinistas of calling up young men viewed as opponents of the government while leaving untouched their own supporters among the young.

Sandinista officials deny the charge.

The Sandinistas have molded the army into a political force, Hernandez says, noting that young draftees receive both military training and political indoctrination in Marxism from Cuban military advisers.

Speaking of deserters and draft dodgers interviewed by the commission, Hernandez said, "They prefer imprisonment to being shot or shooting someone else while defending the Sandinista Front."

The Sandinistas have promoted the Patriotic Military Service, as the draft is called, through billboards and a heavy campaign in the government media. One poster shows Sandinista soldiers defending against a rebel attack. In the foreground a mother with a baby boy in her arms says, "My son will never be a traitor."

In a recent incident investigated by the commission, 300 young inductees were given four days to visit their families before being shipped off to a military training camp in a war zone, he says, but at the end of the four days only 50 showed up at the rendezvous point.

"There is an extraordinary exodus of 16-year-olds who are leaving before they become eligible for the draft," Hernandez said. "Parents are looking for any way they can to get their sons out of the country."

But leaving the country is not easy for men 17 to 23 because the government denies them exit permits.

"I have three brothers and the law affects us all," Emiliano said. "One left before the law, and my parents paid bribes to get exit permits for the other two. It cost them $1,800 for each one. But there is more control now and you can't buy your way out."

since the beginning of the year have deserted.

The issue has begun to dwarf food shortages and rationing as a threat to popular support of the leftist Sandinista government. Public protests by mothers have erupted in towns in the interior, and in some cases police have used force to put down the demonstrations.

But the growing opposition to the draft has gone unreported by the opposition newspaper La Prensa and independent radio stations, which operate under government restraints.

When the Sandinistas eased censorship in July in preparation for the national elections Nov. 4, they stipulated that any discussion of security matters was prohibited and made clear the restriction included the draft.

"They told opposition parties: 'Criticize anything you want to, but don't stick your nose into the Patriotic Military Service,'" Lino Hernandez, head of the legal department of the human rights commission, said in an interview.

The military conscription law applies to men 17 to 40 years old, but in practice only those between 17

You big Palooka!

For more than 80 years, comic strips have enriched American life. "You big Palooka!" meant anyone as naive, strong, and unbearably sweet as Joe Palooka, Wilkes-Barre's own favorite. Joe's big line was "Keep Punchin'." Al Capp was an early, uncredited artist for "Joe Palooka." Minor characters he drew for "Joe Palooka" later appeared in "Li'l Abner." When Captain Marvel shouted "Shazam!" he was invoking Solomon, Hercules, Atlas, Zeus, Achilles AND Mercury.

Officials Declare Air, Water Safe In Bhopal, But Prohibit Meat Sales

BY TINA CHOU
Associated Press Writer
BHOPAL, India (AP) — Authorities concerned with the fallout of the industrial gas leak that killed almost 2,000 people have banned meat sales but declared Bhopal's air and water safe.

Meanwhile, Calcutta's Amrita Bazar Patrika newspaper quoted Indian scientists as saying the methyl isocyanate gas that escaped from the Union Carbide pesticide plant Dec. 2 ruined $5.2 million in agricultural crops and could keep the land barren for years.

Doctors continued Sunday to report new cases of poisoning — people experiencing delayed effects from the pesticide plant's leak — and said viral pneumonia was endangering those with lungs damaged by the gas.

An estimated 200,000 citizens were affected by the methyl isocyanate that escaped in the early morning hours one week ago from a 45-ton underground tank.

Moti Singh, Bhopal's city administrator, said slaughterhouses were ordered closed after official reports said attempts were being made to sell meat of livestock stricken by the gas.

Arjun Singh, the chief minister of Madhya Pradesh state, appealed to the public not to panic over rumors of contamination. Some residents, frightened by reports of air and water pollution, tainted vegetables and long-term effects of the gas, are leaving the city of 900,000.

About 100 demonstrators marched in Bhopal to protest what they said was "criminal negligence" by U.S.-based Union Carbide Corp. and the state government. They carried black flags, a coffin and placards demanding prosecution of the guilty for "genocide."

Union Carbide announced in New Delhi on Sunday that it would contribute nearly $1 million to relief operations. A company statement said the corporation also planned to set up an orphanage in Bhopal, the capital of Madhya Pradesh, India's largest state. News reports have said 500 children were orphaned by the leak.

Warren M. Anderson, the American chairman of Union Carbide, who was briefly arrested in Bhopal on Friday and later reportedly urged to leave India, departed Sunday on a special corporate aircraft.

Union Carbide spokesman Tom Failla in Danbury, Conn., declined to disclose the itinerary, but said Anderson planned to address a news conference at 1 p.m. EST today in Danbury.

Anderson, arrested on charges of negligence, homicide and criminal conspiracy, was ordered released unconditionally by the state government because of concern that the case might undermine U.S.-Indian relations, according to press reports Sunday. The Reagan administration protested Anderson's detention.

Newspapers ridiculed Arjun Singh's statement that charges against Anderson had not been dropped and that he may have to return for questioning.

The U.S. company owns 50.9 percent of the Indian facility. The remainder of the company ownership is held in India.

India's Central Bureau of Investigation began a probe into the leak Sunday, as seven top Indian Union Carbide executives remained under police detention or charges of causing deaths through negligence. Among them was Keshub Mahindra, chairman of the Indian subsidiary and one of India's wealthiest industrialists.

The state government said it would file a compensation suit against Union Carbide in the United States shortly. The amount of compensation to be sought would be decided in consultation with the central government, Arjun Singh said.

A $15 billion class action suit has been filed in the United States by San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli, who arrived in New Delhi on Sunday, his staff in San Francisco said. He was due to go to Bhopal later to interview victims.

The suit, filed Friday on behalf of two Bhopal survivors in Charleston district court in West Virginia, says Union Carbide was negligent in designing the methyl isocyanate production unit at Bhopal and failed to warn Indian citizens about the chemical dangers.

Washington lawyers John Cole and Arthur Louis also arrived in India on Sunday to prepare another suit on behalf of victims.

"The number of deaths are going down and patients are also responding better to treatment," Bhopal's Hamidia Hospital Superintendent R.K. Bhandari said. But he expressed concern over the new threat from viral pneumonia.

Doctors said undernourished slum-dwellers who suffered lung damage from gas inhalation were more susceptible to viral pneumonia for which there is no specific treatment.

New cases of patients who showed no symptoms immediately after the leak but then suffered delayed effects were reported over the weekend and doctors said patients continued to pour into hospitals.

The Indian Express newspaper said that 51 serious cases of poisoning were admitted to Hamidia hospital Saturday. It said Sunday that some new victims had eaten fish from Bhopal Lake. Authorities closed the main fish market.

Bhandari said doctors were not certain about the long-term effects of the gas. "But we can give some kind of a partial guarantee since people we have treated are not returning with further complications," he said.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ73 ♥95 ♦A4 ♣AKQ83

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1♦ Pass
1♠ Pass 3♣ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have considerably more than you have shown so far. Slam is a distinct possibility if partner has a heart control, and even a grand slam may be in the offing. For the moment, though, you can do no more than show your key card in partner's suit. Cue bid three diamonds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A96 ♥5 ○KQ876 ♣J1052

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♠ Pass 1♦ Pass
1♠ Pass 3♣ Pass
3♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The companion hand to the one above. Partner is probing for the right contract by showing the diamond ace, and there is no reason why you should do anything other than cue bid in return. Three spades is the only action we accept.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KQJ75 AKJ ○KQ ♣QJ8

What is your opening bid?
A.—You have a balanced hand of 22 points, which is the textbook opening of two no trump. The fact that you have a five card major suit is no reason to eschew the most descriptive bid available.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKJ54 ○AJ6 ♥762 ♣62

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♠ Pass 1♦ Pass
3♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Obviously you are in the slam zone, but how are you supposed to tell partner about both the quality of your spade suit and your fine trump support? The solution is to delay raising hearts for the moment. Rebid three spades then bid five hearts at your next turn. Partner should get the message that you are making a slam try in hearts with no control in either minor suit.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ5 ♥762 ○KJ3 ♣10762

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♠ Pass 1NT Pass
3♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite the fact your support for diamonds is much better than for hearts, you must return partner to his first suit because it is as long, or longer, than his second suit. But three hearts is not enough. You have an absolute maximum no trump that is made even better by the fit in partner's second suit. Jump to four hearts.

Q.6—East West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠654 ♥752 ○J109754 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♠ Dble Pass 1♦
2♠ Dble Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's action is primarily for penalties. However great your respect for partner's judgment might be, there are still limits to what you should have to pass. To expect partner to produce at least six tricks on defense is a bit too much. For safety reasons, we would pull to two diamonds.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check payable to Newspaperbooks.

Nite Owl's For Sale

WEST, Texas (AP) — Marge Lundy, a nightclub owner who gave country singer Willie Nelson his start when he was a 15-year-old with slicked-back hair and a cracking voice, is selling out after 42 years in business.

But Mrs. Lundy, 63, says she hopes that whoever buys the Nite Owl won't change the place much.

"That's the first thing I've told 'em," she said. "If they're planning on buying it, they should leave the name Nite Owl there. See, this is where Willie Nelson started. This Nite Owl's a landmark here, or the old building was."

Nelson has never performed in the current Nite Owl, which replaced the original after it burned down Dec. 27, 1969.

Jet Is Seized

LONDON (AP) — A Boeing 707 private airliner belonging to a Saudi Arabian sheik has been seized by the owners of an airport near London after the owner failed to pay two years' parking fees, municipal officials say.

David Ward, principal legal assistant for Luton borough council, which owns Luton Airport, said that Sheik bin Birjis al-Muraibidh abandoned the 179-seater jet as if it was an old car. The plane has rusted and its tires are flat. Ward told London's Daily Telegraph on Sunday that the jet incurred $42,000 in parking charges.

Ward said the High Court has given the council permission to sell the aircraft to recover the parking fees, which are imposed by the hour.

The sheik engaged a company to refit the Boeing with luxury accommodation costing $900,000 so that he could tour Europe in style. But the money failed to arrive on schedule and the project was abandoned.

WGH B
December 12, 1959. WBTC which is now WGH 1250 AM signed on the air. In 1961 the call letters were changed to suit the Farmville area to WFAG. In 1978, with a power increase from 500 to 5,000 watts WGH came about to serve more people with more power and a longer broadcast day including nighttime service. The Farmville Broadcast Company also grew in 1974 signing on the air WROR-FM 94.3 and today these stations are leaders in their music and news formats, serving over 40,000 listeners in Eastern North Carolina. December 12, 1959 - December 12, 1984, twenty-five years of service. Thank you Farmville and Eastern North Carolina for 25 years. And a special thanks to our advertisers. Join us on Wednesday December 12 at the American Legion Building in Greenville from 7:00 PM-11:00 PM for a 25th Anniversary Party.

Half Of Survey Participants Felt Female Candidate Hurt Democrats

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Half the Americans in a Media General-Associated Press survey said it hurt the Democrats to have a woman on the ticket in last month's presidential election, but almost as many said it made no difference that the woman was Geraldine Ferraro.

The 1,476 respondents in the nationwide telephone survey were asked, "In general, do you think it helped or hurt the Democrats to have a woman on the presidential ticket?" Fifty percent said it hurt, 18 percent said it helped and 29 percent said it made no difference. The rest had no opinion.

The respondents were also asked, "Did it help or hurt for that woman to have been Ms. Ferraro?" and 16 percent said it helped, 34 percent said it hurt and 46 percent said it made no difference.

Women were slightly more likely than men and Republicans slightly more likely than Democrats to say Ms. Ferraro's candidacy helped the Democrats.

As the first woman to be the vice presidential nominee of a major party, Ms. Ferraro's campaign was the subject of many polls which tried to determine what effect a woman's candidacy would have on the race.

Earlier polls found "there are some fields in which women are perceived to be weaker than men — foreign policy, handling a crisis, dealing with enemies, standing up for the country," said Kathleen Frankovic, director of surveys for CBS News, speaking at a recent seminar on political polls.

Similarly, Geraldine Ferraro always ran behind George Bush when it came to the question of confidence in handling a crisis. She always ran behind George Bush when it came to questions of experience," she said.

On the other hand, Ms. Ferraro

"was seen as qualified to be vice president, she was also seen as smart," Ms. Frankovic said.

On another topic, more than two-thirds of the Americans in the Media General-AP survey who said they voted said they based their decisions on a candidate's position on the issues. But almost half the people interviewed said they believed that most people voted for a candidate because of other factors such as personal appeal.

Among those who said they voted for President Reagan, six out of 10 believed "people in general voted for the presidential candidate based primarily on the issues." Among those who voted for Mondale, only 2 of 10 held that position. Sixty-eight percent of the Mondale voters said people voted for a presidential candidate because of other issues.

"Leadership qualities" were cited by 59 percent of the respondents when they were asked to choose the one factor other than the issues that was most important to them. Thirty-three percent chose trust in the candidate. The other factors were personal warmth of the candidate, intelligence of the candidate, or none of these.

Those interviewed were also asked, "Do you think religion played too big a role in the recent presidential election, about the right role, or should religion have played an even bigger role in the recent presidential election?" Twenty-nine percent said religion played too big a role, 43 percent about the right role, and 9 percent said religion should have played a bigger role.

Among those who said they voted for Mondale, 42 percent said religion played too big a role, 10 percent said about the right role and 13 percent said it should have played a bigger role. The rest had no opinion.

Among those who said they voted for Reagan, half said religion played about the right role, one-quarter said too big a role, and 8 percent said it should have played a larger role.

The respondents were also asked if Reagan's age helped, hurt or made no difference in his campaign, and 81 percent said it made no difference.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,476 adults across the country Nov. 12-19. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several additional reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Army Tries New Paint

WASHINGTON (AP) — In attempts to safeguard against chemical warfare agents and improve camouflage design, the Army is repainting thousands of pieces of field equipment with a new three-color pattern.

The new design uses more forest green and black and less brown and takes the place of the older four-color pattern, which had a wider variety of shades to match different environments, said Stuart Kilpatrick, director of the Army's Combined Arms Support Laboratory in Fort Belvoir, Va.

He said the new camouflage, which will provide better visual deception at ranges beyond 300 yards, was developed in a joint U.S.-West German program completed several years ago.

Kilpatrick said his group has been working for the past 18 months to develop several hundred new, three-color camouflage patterns for various types of equipment ranging from tanks to cruise missiles to electrical generators.

In addition, the new paint is a polyurethane mixture, known as CARC, for Chemical Agent Resistant Coating, and allows vehicles to be decontaminated after exposure to chemical weapons, Kilpatrick said.

The enamel paint now in use retains the toxic chemicals, and would force the Army to abandon contaminated equipment, he said.

Kilpatrick said the Army "generally repaints all its tactical vehicles every two to three years," and that "full implementation of the new program should be complete by 1986."

Rock Singer Is Arrested After Crash

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The lead singer of the heavy-metal rock band Motley Crue was freed on bail Sunday after being arrested in connection with a car crash that fatally injured a British musician from the group Hanoi Rocks, police said.

Vincent Neil Wharton, 23, whose stage name is Vince Neil, was booked for investigation of driving under the influence and vehicular manslaughter after the Saturday evening accident, police Sgt. Paul Rossiter said.

Wharton was released early Sunday after posting $2,500 bail, said Alex Gayson, a Redondo Beach jailer.

Wharton, of Redondo Beach, lost control of his car while driving south along the beachfront Esplanade in this coastal community, Rossiter said. The car veered into northbound lanes and struck two other vehicles.

Wharton's passenger died at South Bay Hospital less than an hour after the accident. Los Angeles County coroner's investigator Ed Murrell identified him as Nicholas Dingley, 24, of London.

Dingley, who used the stage name Razzle, was drummer for Hanoi Rocks, a "trash rock" group founded in Finland four years ago and since relocated to London, said Epic Records spokeswoman Sue Sawyer. The group's four other members are all Finnish, said Hanoi Rocks manager, Seppo Vesterinen.

The band, winding up a 30-city U.S. tour, was to make its Los Angeles debut Friday at the Palace nightclub, but Vesterinen said that date and four others remaining in California and Arizona would probably be canceled.

The driver of one of the other cars was in serious condition at South Bay Hospital, and his passenger also was in serious condition at Little Company of Mary Hospital in Torrance, Rossiter said. The driver of the third car was uninjured.

Motley Crue is a Los Angeles-based foursome that openly embraces the extremes of heavy metal: loud music, long hair, make-up, colorful language and hardware-studded black leather garb.

Elektra-Asylum Records' September 1983 biography of the band quotes Wharton as saying he was "obsessed with sex, fast cars and faster women."

The band released its first album, "Too Fast for Love," in 1981 and followed up last year with "Shout at the Devil" — described in the Elektra biography as "dripping with impure and adulterated lust" and "a call to arms for American youth."

Hanoi Rocks was touring to promote its first U.S. album, "Two Steps From the Move," but had three other albums released in Europe: "Bangkok Socks, Saigon Shakes, Hanoi Rocks," "Oriental Beat" and "Back to Mystery City."
