Parents' Group Wants Vote On Merger

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A group of Pitt County parents who say they are "concerned by uncertainties" have voted to circulate a petition requiring the County Commissioners to hold a referendum on the proposed consolidation of the two school systems in the county.

The group, composed of around 15 representatives of the 150-member Pitt County school advisory councils, met Thursday night to discuss the issue of consolidation. The group wants the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County to approve or disapprove the proposed merger, according to Bobby Hazelton, who spoke for the group.

Consolidation of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems was recommended by a Research Triangle Study requested in 1982 by the County Commissioners and completed in September 1983. The study concluded that merger would be the best solution to the problems the two systems face. The problems, according to the study, include overcrowding and outmoded facilities in the county and racial imbalance and declining enrollment in the city.

The Greenville school board accepted the study's recommendations quickly and in July 1984, the Pitt County Board of Education announced it endorsed "conditional consolidation" of the two systems. The conditions included a 14-item capital outlay project list for county schools. Currently, a consolidation committee meets monthly to work on the process.

The petition will be drafted in the next few weeks, Hazelton said, and then will be circulated by the group. At the meeting members expressed displeasure over the 10-cent tax increase levied by the County Commissioners for 1984 to raise the funds for the consolidation, saying citizens should have been allowed to vote on the issue before the tax was approved.

According to Hazelton, who said he was not a leader for the group but had agreed to speak for it, the group is solidly against consolidation in its present form but believes the issue should be decided by a vote.

The lack of concrete information about the proposed merger is one of the group's biggest objections, he noted. "Nobody in the county knows what will happen," Hazelton said. "There is no detailed plan concerning the priorities on this capital outlay list. For example, some schools are scheduled for 'modernization.' We want to know what that includes."

Hazelton said the group was concerned that the consolidation's capital outlay projects would amount to "putting a Band-Aid on a hemorrhage."

"In many cases just building a classroom won't do," he said. "Most schools have serious capital outlay needs that go past just classroom space. They need repairs, bathrooms, other things."

One of the group's primary goals, he said, is to become more informed. "There is just too much uncertainty. Nobody has any idea what will

Council OKs Emergency Plan

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

City Council members Thursday unanimously approved an ordinance giving Greenville mayors authority to proclaim a state of emergency and impose restrictions in the event of civic disorder or natural disaster.

The ordinance authorizes four basic restrictions which might become necessary during a disaster including implementation of curfews; restrictions on possession, consumption or transfer of liquor; restrictions on possession, transportation and transfer of dangerous weapons and substances (gasoline and explosives), and restrictions on access to specified areas.

Adpoted in the same action was a comprehensive emergency management plan providing for orderly call up of city personnel and resources to meet demands placed on public services during times of emergency. Efficient implementation of the plan, city officials said, will lessen the effect of disasters on the people of Greenville.

According to Mayor Janice Buck, the plan is the result of concern promoted by the March tornado disaster that devastated much of Pitt County. Mrs. Buck said she, council members, and city officials found it "frightening" that the city did not have an emergency plan outlining chain of command for disasters and agreed that the city manager and her staff should compile an emergency plan.

"Certainly this is something that gives us all a sense of security ... knowing there is a plan that will begin to function immediately should there be an emergency," she said.

In other business, council members opened the floor to public comment concerning a request now before the city to annex a 4.779-acre portion of Heritage Village Subdivision lying outside the corporate limits of the Greenville. No one, however, spoke in favor of or against the request at the public hearing. Annexation of the parcel would bring the city yearly revenues of $6,713.68. Anticipated yearly expenses are projected at $844.80. The property is located on the east side of 14th Street and southerly of Norfolk Southern Railroad, and is slated for duplex development. The request for annexation was made by the property owner, John Wellons.

Additional annexation items considered by the council Thursday included resolutions scheduling public hearings on requests for annexation of two land parcels located in the medical district. The council approved January hearing dates on requests to annex Rownetree Woods Subdivision and bring a 7.05-acre portion of the Executive Park Subdivision within the city's corporate limits. Rownetree Woods Subdivision is located at the southwest corner of N.C. 43 West and SR 1204. Executive Park is located directly across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Stantonsburg Highway.

Miscellaneous items approved in blanket action included the following.

ECU Taps Baker As Head Coach For Grid Pirates

East Carolina University has hired Art Baker as its new head football coach, Dr. John M. Howell, chancellor, announced this morning.

Baker fills the vacancy left when Ed Emory was relieved of his duties as head football coach Monday. Baker, former associate head coach and offensive coordinator under Emory at ECU during the 1983 season, comes from Florida State, where he served as assistant head coach and quarterback coach under Bobby Bowden for the 1984 season.

"We are very pleased to announce Art Baker as our new head football coach," Howell said. "We know him here at the university since he was a very successful offensive coordinator during the 1983 season. And I know he had a fine record as a head football coach before he came here. We are going to enjoy working with him toward the goal of making ECU's football program a success at the NCAA Division I-A level."

Art Baker

Before his stops at ECU and Florida State, Baker was head football coach at The Citadel (1978-82) and Furman (1973-77), compiling an overall record of 57-48-5. Baker left East Carolina following the 1983 season, one of the most successful in ECU history, for Florida State, where he helped the Seminoles earn a Florida Citrus Bowl invitation against Georgia on Dec. 22. Baker will fulfill his responsibilities at Florida State for the bowl game.

"Greenville and East Carolina were probably one of my most favorite places to live and work," Baker said. "It is nice to be coming back. I'm delighted to be coming back, but it is always unfortunate when it is under circumstances like these. I'm just anxious to roll up my sleeves and get to work."

Baker agreed to a multiyear contract, Howell said. The 55-year-old Sumter, S.C., native is a 1953 graduate of Presbyterian College and began his coaching career in the South Carolina high school ranks before collegiate stops at Clemson, Texas Tech, Furman and The Citadel.

"We are excited about moving into the next era of Pirate football with such a capable coach," Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics, said. "He is a very knowledgeable coach who has had years of success as a head coach and is held in the highest regard by his peers."

A 10 a.m. press conference Saturday with Coach Baker is scheduled in ECU's Pirate Club.

State Advances Pitt Projects

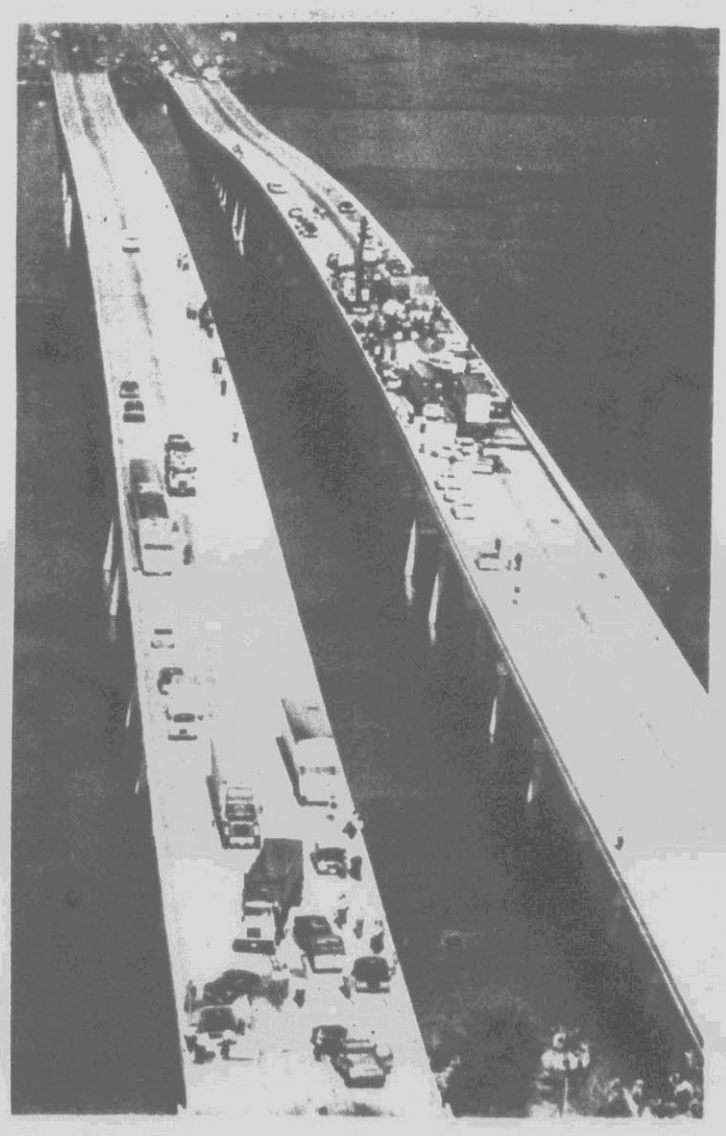

RALEIGH — The N.C. Board of Transportation this morning, in adopting a new Transportation Improvement Program, moved up the timetable for two proposed Pitt County projects and added the widening of Evans Street in Greenville and N.C. 903 from N.C. 11 to the Martin County line.

George Harper of Kinston, a member of the transportation board, said the U.S. 264 bypass north of Farmville, scheduled for construction after fiscal year 1993, was moved forward so that construction is scheduled to begin on the $12 million project in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1987.

Harper said construction of a planned multilaned bypass for U.S. 264, from Stantonsburg Road to U.S. 13 at Greenville, was included in the plan for right-of-way acquisition to begin in the year beginning July 1, 1987, and construction to begin in the fiscal year starting July 1, 1988.

According to Harper, the previous

Druggist Faces Civil Complaint

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A civil complaint asking a federal judge to prohibit Farmville pharmacist Robert L. Crocker from manufacturing and distributing drugs for root canal therapy has been filed by the U.S. attorney's office in Raleigh.

The complaint charges that Crocker, owner of Farmville Discount Drugs, has been manufacturing "Prednisolone Root Canal Dressing" and "Sargenti RC2B Root Canal Cement" at his pharmacy without the approval of the Food and Drug Administration.

The complaint also alleges that Crocker is violating regulations regarding the registration of new drugs, the registration of himself as a manufacturer and the interstate shipment of drugs.

The complaint seeks an injunction requiring Crocker to comply with FDA regulations concerning registration and application procedures related to new drugs, and asked that all root canal treatment drugs in his possession be destroyed under FDA supervision.

DTP Vaccine In Short Supply

Federal health officials, warning of forthcoming shortages of pertussis (whooping cough) vaccine, recommended Thursday that children's fourth and fifth "DTP" shots be postponed. Pitt County has as yet set no policy, Dr. Robert Ehinger, county health director said.

The Centers for Disease Control warned that the supply of diptheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccine "will be very limited" next year, partly because two of the three U.S. manufacturers have restricted or halted distribution amid a wave of lawsuits and damage claims.

"Beginning in January ... some areas may be without DTP vaccine," the CDC said. "This situation may continue through most of 1985."

"We will be getting directives from the state," Ehinger said. "The state buys all the vaccine used throughout the state by the year, so they'll make the distribution decisions." There has been plenty this year, he said, and there will be until the end of the year.

He said some of the local physicians have had some trouble getting vaccine promptly this year and have borrowed from and paid back the Health Department. The department administers about 200 DPT injections a week, he estimted.

Pertussis is a "very devastating" disease that can cause pneumonia, seizures and even death, said CDC researcher Phil Horn.

Whooping cough vaccine is between 70 percent and 90 percent effective in protecting younger children, and nearly 100 percent effective after all five doses are given — usually at 2 months, 4 months, 6 months, 18 months and 4-6 years, he said.

But children under 1, and especially those under 6 months, are at highest risk for serious complications from whooping cough, which kills about seven of every 1,000 victims. Seventy-seven percent of all babies under 6 months who get whooping cough, must be hospitalized, and 23 percent get pneumonia.

The whooping cough vaccine shortage leaves only two possible options, the CDC said: reducing the amount of vaccine in each dose or postponing one or more doses.

Since "it is impossible to predict" how effective partial doses would be in preventing whooping cough, the CDC recommended Thursday that the 18-month and 4-6-year shots be postponed in all children "immediately ... until greater supplies are available."

"We can postpone the (last two) booster doses, there's no terrible problem about that," said Dr. Martin Smith, a Gainesville, Ga., pediatrician and vice president of

Patriots Both Young And Old Sound Off On National Anthem

DEAR ABBY: This is prompted by "Patriot's" letter urging you to use your influence in retiring "The Star-Spangled Banner" as our national anthem in favor of a song that's easier to sing.

Few people know that we had a national anthem before 1916. When I went to elementary school in Detroit, our singing teacher taught us the national anthem—"My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty." That was our national anthem until I graduated from the University of Michigan in 1915. The following year, President Wilson proclaimed "The Star-Spangled Banner" our national anthem, and Congress confirmed it in 1931 when Herbert Hoover was president.

I don't know if "My Country 'Tis of Thee" was ever officially proclaimed our national anthem, or if, like Topsy, it just grew. For me it's part of my heritage. "The Star-Spangled Banner" has always seemed a poor substitute. By the way, I am 91 years old.

HELEN BEUTLER,
COLDWATER, MICH.

DEAR HELEN BEUTLER: Read on for an opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: Tell the person who wants to get rid of "The Star-Spangled Banner" to jump in a lake. We are second-graders and we know all three verses by heart. Come to our school and hear us sing.

DEAR ABBY: Other than plastic surgery, what can you recommend for breast enlargement? I have always been flat-chested and would feel so much better about myself if I could add a couple more inches to my chest measurement.

I've tried creams and exercises, but they don't work, and I can't afford all these gadgets I see advertised. Besides, I heard they don't work anyway. If I had $2,000 to spare, I'd get the surgery, but that's out of the question. Please help me.

FLAT-CHESTED
IN MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR FLAT: I know of no "gadgets" that will add inches to your measurements. Get a padded bra—it will solve your problem in nothing flat!

DEAR ABBY: I've had it with some of the forms I've had to fill out when applying for a job or establishing credit. (Most doctors and dentists use these forms when a patient comes for a first visit.)

After "marital status" are the following: Single? Married? Widowed? Separated? Divorced?

Abby, I am legally single, and it's nobody's business if I am widowed, separated or divorced. I have indicated that I am single on all the forms I've filled out since my divorce, but those who know that I am divorced have crossed out "single" and written "divorced."

How should this be handled?

SINGLE, PERIOD!

DEAR SINGLE: In filling out the form, indicate that you are single, then ignore the other categories.

Some questions that appear on forms are clearly an invasion of one's privacy, so should you encounter a question that you feel uncomfortable answering, either ignore it, or write "not applicable." You will be astonished how infrequently your refusal to answer will be questioned.

Exaggerated discount claims are always suspect. Deep discounts, when frequently offered by a store, may not be discounts at all. You should question the higher price which is often described as the "regular," "former," "compare at," or other comparative price.

Is that discounted price one at which the item actually sold? Or is it a fictitious price that is meant to mislead you into believing you are getting a bargain??? Always comparison shop. Check the price of the item in several stores. You owe it to yourself.

Bowing To The Fads

It wasn't meant to be that way, but Christmas has become a nightmare for parents who feel they must prove their undying love for their children. The only way some fathers and mothers know how to do it is to provide them with the "in" toy of the season.

That was the case when Broadstreet came into my office sweating and shaking.

"Help me," he said.

"That's what I'm here for," I told him. "What do you need?"

"I have to get my hands on a Cabbage Patch doll for my daughter this Christmas."

"Are you crazy? If you need a kidney for an illegal alien, I can help. If you want a billion-dollar defense contract from the Air Force, I'll fix it for you. If you'd like on the next space shuttle I'll get you a seat. But where am I going to find a Cabbage Patch doll in December?"

"You're my last resort. I've been to every toy store on the East Coast. They advertised in the newspapers. I even tried to break into a Coleco toy factory in Connecticut. In all cases I struck up empty. I can't face my Jessica on Christmas morning if there isn't a Cabbage Patch doll under the tree."

"A lot of fathers will have the same problem this year," I told him.

"I don't care about fathers. All I worry about is Jessica. If I don't produce a Cabbage Patch doll she'll never believe anything I say again." He put his head in his hands. "I've failed as a parent."

"You're not a failure," I told Broadstreet. "The system has failed you. Jessica can't hold you responsible because the toy manufacture didn't produce enough dolls for Christmas."

"It's not just Jessica that I'm worried about. Every night when I come home my wife Deborah is waiting for me at the door and she hisses, 'Did you get one?' When I shake my head I see nothing but fear and loathing in her eyes."

"Does she say anything?"

"No, but I can read what's going on in her head when we're eating dinner in silence. She's saying, 'I could have married 100 successful guys, and I had to choose one who couldn't even provide his child with a Cabbage Patch Kid.'"

"You're just imagining things," I told him. "She's probably thinking, 'I wish I could share his pain.'"

"You don't know Deborah. Four of her girlfriends already had Cabbage Patch dolls stashed in their closets for Christmas. They don't say it out loud, but Deborah knows they pity her for having married beneath herself."

"Broadstreet, if you don't get a Cabbage Patch Kid for your daughter, you're not going to be accused of child abuse. Maybe it's as good a time as any for Jessica to learn that she can't have everything in life she asks for."

"Would you like to tell that to a 4-year-old girl on Christmas morning?"

"I guess not. Are you sure you've tried every resource available? I read in the newspaper the other day that if you deposit $50,000 for 10 years with the Old Faithful Savings and Loan, they'll give you a Cabbage Patch Kid absolutely free."

"I saw the same ad. They ran out of dolls the first day. Someone also ran an advertisement for a $2 million house in Georgetown, and said they'd throw in a Silver Cloud Rolls-Royce and a Cabbage Patch doll in the dea. They had to call out the police when 600 people show up. I'm desperate. That's why I came to you."

"All right," I said. "I'll make one call for you to the White House. They owe me a lot of favors."

I rang up one of the president's top gofers. When I hung up, Broadstreet said, "What did he say?"

"He told me to forget it. The Reagans can't even get a Cabbage Patch doll for their grandchildren."

White House Needs Initiative Now

WASHINGTON — After splendering the month following President Reagan's landslide re-election and permitting the discredited issues of Walter Mondale to dominate Washington, the White House will now try to seize the initiative in time to save the second term.

Post-election noises in the capital have seemed to confirm Mondale's forecasts of a November surprise: emphasis on budget austerity as the economy falters, with tax increases to follow. The countervailing effort under way in the White House is to return to the theme of economic growth that won Reagan 49 states.

Time is short. Rigid deadlines and formidable obstacles confront the president's men. The Promethean tasks of evolving growth-oriented tax and monetary policies must be done by Jan. 21 so Reagan that day can regain the offensive in his second inaugural address, spelling out details in his State of the Union message. The next and perhaps hardest task: mobilize the country to deflect Congress from its austerity track, and do all of it — including assured passage of a tax reform bill — by the Fourth of July.

The president's men consider spending cuts important but they remember Reagan defeated Mondale not on deficits and arms control but on economic growth and no tax hikes. Consequently, after languid November, December has turned anxious in belated efforts to regain the initiative:

Task No. 1: Realizing that a recession and second-term disaster beckon if monetary policy is not erased, develop in the next two months what the administration has neglected for four years: a growth-oriented monetary policy. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who has been salivating for a crack at the Federal Reserve Board's money manipulation, is the point man here.

Task No. 2: Recast the Treasury's reform to win the support not only of Rep. Jack Kemp and his Republican supply-siders but the progressive Democratic tax reformers, headed by Sen. Bill Bradley and Rep. Richard Gephardt. The reform must at least win the neutrality of organized business, requiring changes in treatment of corporations and upper-income taxpayers (though risking help from friendly Democrats).

Confusion

RALEIGH — If the public is confused about the criminal justice system, is it any wonder in light of this recent discussion in the Legislature's Criminal Code Committee?

When the committee began to review a parole statute, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, chairman, said, "What we're trying to do is make the laws of this state simple so the people know what their laws are. If a man gets life in prison, it ought to mean life in prison."

At that point, a female lawyer in the audience who'd been debating Blue chimed in, "But it doesn't mean life in prison. It means 20 years."

Blue retorted, "It means 40 years."

That prompted Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, to say, "We've been saying life, but we don't really mean life."

A few minutes later, Butch Zimmerman, a prosecutor from Lexington who is also on the committee, said of the parole system, "I wish the Legislature would keep in mind that the public just doesn't understand it."

Actually, all of these lawyers were right in a way, all except Blue the first time. A life sentence really means 40 years, according to state law. If you're sentenced to life at age 20 and you're a terrible inmate who is consistently denied parole you get out at age 60. Life does not mean that you spend the rest of your life in prison.

But, if you're a good inmate, you can be paroled, under standard procedures, in half the time of your sentence. An inmate earns one day off the time he serves for every day he's good. So, the woman who said life is 20 years was also right.

Now, since the Legislature passed something called "gain time" a few years ago, it's possible to get out of prison even before spending 20 years on a life sentence.

If you — like this reporter — thought life meant life then Zimmerman is right. We're all confused.

Finally, someone has done something for that weakest of special interest groups, Obnoxious People of America.

Several weeks ago, the committee decided that the current Assault on a Female statute ought to be sex neutral. If the Legislature agrees, a woman will be punished just as severely for striking a man as vice versa in current law.

A consultant to the committee issued a warning to women regarding that change: If an obnoxious man insults you and you slap him, you're culpable for a two-year misdemeanor.

That's just what the obnoxious need, some protection.

The committee's proposal would affect another bit of obnoxious behaviour, but not to the extent that one legislator wanted.

The Assault on a Female statute now makes the pinching of a woman on a public street a two-year misdemeanor instead of a simple assault. During debate on making the law sex neutral, it was noted that any woman who pinched a man, in the future, would also be subject to the stricter sentence.

Strength For Today

It has sometimes been assumed that Christian martyrdom ended when Christianity became the accepted religion of the Roman empire and Christians were no longer executed or thrown to the lions.

Actually, however, persecution for one's Christian faith has not ceased to exist. It occurs in communist areas of the world, and in our own society it often takes the form of ridicule and social ostracism which is brought to bear on people who stand up for what they believe to be right. People are often shocked to find themselves objects of contempt when they are doing something which by every standard of religious and ethics is precisely the right thing to do.

Endure any inconvenience or even suffering which is involved in doing the right thing. Christian character and a clear conscience are worth what they cost.

Slum Exodus Leaves Plant Area Deserted

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Many police failed to report to work and victims of the Dec. 3 poison gas leak fled hospitals today along with tens of thousands of people who feared a recurrence of the disaster that has claimed more than 2,000 lives.

The slums in a 2½-mile radius around the Union Carbide plant were a ghost town following the government's announcement it would process the remaining 15 tons of methyl isocyanate gas into pesticide starting Sunday. The process is expected to take four to five days.

The chaotic exodus began Wednesday when rumors of the government plan spread.

There was no official count of those who had departed, but government officials here estimated that as many as 150,000 to 200,000 people had fled the city of 900,000.

Most were poor people from the small houses and mud-brick huts in the old sector of the city near the Union Carbide plant. But even farther away in the new sector, officials said hundreds had left.

Despite government assurances that the process was not dangerous, trains, buses and trucks leaving Bhopal today were jammed with people carrying their meager possessions in burlap bags on their heads.

City medical authorities say more than 2,000 people were killed from the gas leak, but Indian news agencies place the toll at more than 2,500. Although precise numbers of injured are not available, hospitals report treating about 60,000 people. State and federal officials say the escaping gas affected 150,000 to 200,000 people to varying degree.

Pentagon Says Pay Cut Unfair

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's effort to wrap up an initial round of decisions on a $42 billion deficit-reduction plan has snagged on administration infighting over the Pentagon budget, including arguments about a military pay freeze.

Reagan's senior budget advisers are virtually unanimous in pressing for about an $8 billion reduction in the planned 1986 military buildup.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has proposed a smaller reduction — about $6 billion — using savings that some of the budget advisers say add up to even less than Weinberger claims.

The president, meanwhile, is remaining silent.

The argument has been building over the past several weeks as Reagan has worked his way through a series of decisions aimed at meeting his goal of cutting deficits from a projected $200 billion a year to $170 billion in 1986, $138 billion in 1987 and $99 billion in 1988. To do that will require budget savings of $42 billion next year, then $85 billion and $110 billion in each of the next two years.

The fighting increased Wednesday during a private White House meeting among Reagan, Weinberger and the president's senior budget advisers, and then spilled into the open Thursday when the defense secretary publicly walked away from a military pay freeze plan the group had discussed the day before.

Weinberger made an unexpected appearance at the regular Pentagon briefing for reporters Thursday to deny reports that he had proposed freezing the salaries of military personnel.

"The idea of being unfair to the troops who are performing such fine services for all of us is certainly no proposal of mine and no proposal of the president," Weinberger said.

"The stories that have been appearing to that effect, I think, do a great disservice to them and to their morale," the defense secretary added.

Sheriff Nabs 'Mountain Men' Suspects

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — A sheriff who spent five months tracking two mountain men who allegedly kidnapped a woman the younger man wanted as a bride and killed her would-be rescuer got "the drop on them" as the exhausted pair huddled by a campfire.

"It was exactly as I had hoped it would be — exactly as I prayed it would be," Madison County Sheriff Johnny France said Thursday after he single-handedly marched Don Nichols, 53, and his son Dan, 20, at gunpoint to other law officers who had flown into the rugged mountains of southwestern Montana to meet them.

"I have planned this thing, dreamed of it and everything I did today was just as if I'd been there before," France told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday night.

France said both men were charged with aggravated homicide, assault, felony kidnapping and felony intimidation. They were taken to Virginia City and arraigned, then taken to the Gallatin County jail in Bozeman.

The Nicholses are accused of kidnapping Kari Swenson, 23, a Montana State University student and member of the U.S. biathlon team, as she jogged along a mountain trail near Big Sky on July 15. The men apparently wanted her as a bride for Dan Nichols, authorities said.

A day later, Don Nichols allegedly shot and killed Alan Goldstein, who was searching for Miss Swenson along with Jim Schwalbe when they came upon the woman chained to a log with a bullet wound in her chest.

The two men fled into the mountains. Miss Swenson, who authorities said apparently had been shot accidentally, was rescued hours later. Miss Swenson has recovered and resumed training. Schwalbe was not injured.

A week-long search by foot, airplane and horseback failed to locate the men, but France did not give up. The men were finally apprehended at gunpoint after France, acting on a tip from a rancher, tracked them on foot in rocky and heavily timbered terrain for two hours.

He said he approached the men's camp as they were preparing supper on a mountainside about five miles northeast of the small town of Norris. "I had the drop on them," France said.

"I just snuck up on them. Don reached over and grabbed his rifle and I was able to talk him out of doing anything stupid.

"I told him not to make me kill him or Dan," France said.

"He wanted to know what guarantees I could give him that I wouldn't shoot him.

Storm Blamed For 11 Deaths

By The Associated Press

A winter storm already blamed for 11 deaths stretched from the southern Rockies to the upper Midwest today after burying parts of Arizona and Colorado under 20 inches of snow, unleashing tornadoes in Texas and downing ice-laden power lines in Kansas.

Six inches of new snow was already on the ground early today in Kansas and Nebraska and forecasters said more was on the way.

Raging thunderstorms spun off at least two tornadoes that damaged more than 100 homes and businesses in Texas on Thursday and motorists in the western part of the state were warned that snow and freezing rain today would make driving hazardous.

In the Pacific Northwest, meanwhile, travelers' advisories were posted for the Cascade Mountains of Washington and Oregon as a new storm gathered strength in the Gulf of Alaska.

The mercury tumbled to 15 degrees below zero overnight in West Yellowstone, Mont., but in the East more than a dozen cities reported record high temperatures Thursday.

happen after the merger takes place," Hazelton explained.

Other concerns listed by the group included:

•Uncertainty concerning where school boundary lines will be drawn.

•"Grandfathering" students currently attending areas where boundary line changes are proposed. Group members said grandfathering will not add students quick enough to schools that need them.

•Lack of communication from county officials on the consolidation process.

•The Greenville district's proposed four-member representation on the consolidated board of education. The group said they felt Greenville should have two representatives, the same number of the remainder of the school districts.

•Concern that schools sixth or seventh on the capital outlay priority list won't get needed construction or repairs because the funds will dry up.

Members from each of the county's four attendance areas were at the meeting and reported that a vote in their areas indicated consolidation was opposed by all advisory councils except Farmville.

The county's advisory councils are organizations composed of parents from each school. The groups meet monthly to discuss school concerns.

— Passage of three ordinances amending city, community development and Greenville Utilties Commission budgets

According to City Manager Gail Meeks, the city budget amendment made funds available for city employee wage adjustments which became effective in November, the community development amendment involved transfers to close out out-dated community development programs, and the GUC amendment involved transfer of capital from the GUC contingency fund for the purchase of load management switches at a cost of $50,000.

— Awarding of an architectural contract for renovations to city offices and restrooms to East Architects and Engineers, a Kinston company

The project, estimated to cost $120,000 to $130,000, will include renovations to police department offices and dispatch center, improvements to City Hall restrooms to comply with handicapped regulations, and renovation of the first floor of the city's community building located on the corner of Greene and Fourth streets.

— A resolution abandoning a utilities easement located between two lots in the Clark's Lake subdivision officials say is no longer necessary

— A resolution authorizing the sale of a containerized truck to the town of Ayden

— Acceptance of a portions of Belmont Drive, Cedarhurst Road, Boxwood Lane, Pickney Drive, Walnut Drive, Baywood Lane and Kempton Drive for permanent maintenance by the City of Greenville

the American Academy of Pediatrics. "Our biggest concern is the fact that we've got to have a supply for children at 2, 4 and 6 months.

"The other concern I have is that when we postpone boosters, we should have a good, fail-safe method for recalling those patients. Their immunity will certainly wane."

The DTP crisis has developed as manufacturers of DTP vaccine, which may cause permanent nerve or brain damage in about one in every 320,000 cases, have run into lawsuits and escalating insurance costs.

Wyeth Laboratories of Radnor, Pa., stopped distributing its DTP vaccine in June because of "the risk of liability exposure from suits alleging injuries," a company spokesman said.

And Connaught Laboratories, with labs in Swiftwater, Pa., has limited its production to "existing contracts only" because of "difficulty in obtaining full product liability insurance coverage," according to a statement released by the company.

The only American company still fully active in unrestricted manufacture, distribution and sales of the vaccine, Lederle of Pearl River, N.Y., was expected to be able to produce adequate supplies for nationwide demand, the CDC said.

But several lots of that company's vaccine recently failed to meet quality standards and could not be released, and "no new vaccine lots may be available until sometime in February," the CDC said.

"A couple of batches didn't meet their standard," Horn said, adding that as far as the government knows, "no harmful vaccine is on the market."

More than 2,400 cases of whooping cough — roughly half of them in children under 1 year — were reported last year, the CDC said, and researchers estimate that the disease may be 15 times more common than that.

But without the vaccine program, it is estimated that 150 in every 100,000 Americans would get whooping cough.

"It is critical to continue providing protection against pertussis to infants," the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

After the shortage has eased and more DTP vaccine becomes available, "steps should be taken to recall all children under 7 years of age who miss these doses," the Atlanta-based federal health agency said.

Higher insurance costs and other expenses have driven up the cost of DTP vaccine to $42.50 for a 15-dose vial, Smith said. That still represents a small cost to parents, although to state and local health agencies, which buy about half the vaccine sold in this country, the quadrupled prices may present a problem, he added.

Police Checking Series Of Thefts

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of eight thefts reported to the department Thursday, seven of which involved the theft of radio-cassette players or stereo equipment from vehicles.

According to Officer M.J. Nobles, a television set was taken from University Seafood at 1308 Charles St. in a break-in reported at 8 a.m., while an 11:22 a.m. report listed a radio-cassette playher taken from a car at Brinkley Moore Motors at 3104 S. Memorial Drive, Officer J.C. Mulford said.

Officer C.R. Anderson said a radio-cassette player was taken from a car at Pirates Landing in an incident reported at 4 p.m., while Officer W.R. McLawhorn said the theft of a radio-tape player from a car at Arlington Square Apartments was reported at 5:37 p.m.

TIP called for the construction of the 7.3-mile, $17.7 million project to begin in the fiscal year starting July 1, 1990.

Harper said the Evans Street project — widening of the two miles from 10th Street to Greenville Boulevard to four lanes, at a cost of $2.9 million — was added to the TIP with construction scheduled for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1989.

The N.C. 903 project — widening the road from N.C. 11 to the Martin County line, 10.7 miles at a cost of $3.3 million — was added to the 10-year improvement plan for construction to begin in the fiscal year starting July 1, 1986.

Harper noted that work on other road projects, including the four-laning of U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville and from Greenville to Washington, "is progressing on schedule."

Drugs ...

Crocker, in a telephone interview this morning, said he only compounds the root canal drugs on request from dentists, according to formulas they provide.

"It's a disagreement in their classification of me. I'm not a manufacturer. I'm a retail pharmacy," he said.

Crocker said the N.C. Board of Pharmacy and the FDA allow pharmacists to compound drugs for local physicians and patients. But he suggested "when I advertise the fact to physicians outside of the local market area that I compound drugs, they say that constitutes manufacturing."

In doing so, Crocker said the FDA is "depriving dentists of the product."

He said the root canal drugs he is charged with manufacturing are common preparations used by dentists for 50 years, although they are not commercially available from a manufacturer in the United States.

"I've sent prescriptions" for the drugs to 35 or 40 states or more, Crocker said. "I've sold to several (U.S.) military groups ... several state health departments" and to the "(U.S.) State Department for use in Thailand."

In compounding the drugs, Crocker said, he has not marketed or advertised them under a trade name. "I compound formulas they ask me to make ... like a regular prescription. It's custom dental compounding."

Crocker would not say if any dentists in Pitt County use the root canal drugs, but said he has sold them to "40 or 50 (dentists) in North Carolina. I have 5,000 to 6,000 dentists in the file that have used it," although he said most are not regular users.

"I fill 100 to 200 orders a month. It won't hurt me to lose it," but filling the prescriptions, he suggested, is "a basic freedom and right and there is a need for it."

Crocker said the chemicals used to compound the drugs "are so expensive that most dentists and pharmacists can't justify buying the chemicals and compounding the drugs themselves."

A Greenville dentist, commenting on the root canal procedure which uses the drugs Crocker is charged with manufacturing, said the technique was developed in Switzerland. Although "a lot of people use it," he said the technique is "not as widely used as the conventional root canal therapy. It's not that widely accepted."

Heart Transplant Patient Survives Paralyzing Stroke

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder survived a partially paralyzing stroke, his second setback since he became the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, but motion in his weakened right side improved overnight, his doctor said today.

The stroke, which froze Schroeder's arm in midair as he was eating, came just hours after he received a Social Security check that was hand-delivered by two officials Thursday, as a result of his complaints to President Reagan in a telephone conversation the day before.

But Schroeder began recovering quickly, and "he is even better still" today, Dr. Allan M. Lansing, chairman and medical director of Humana Heart Institute, said this morning. The patient had improved steadily since 8 p.m. Thursday, two hours after the stroke, Lansing said.

Tests indicated there was no permanent damage in Schroeder's right leg, although "the arm motion is still not normal," Lansing said.

Schroeder, 52, was in serious but stable condition today, his 19th day with the artificial heart. His blood pressure and other vital signs were normal.

Schroeder had a restful night, and he "did moan, attempt some garbled speech during the night," nurses reported, Lansing said. There was "spontaneous movement of both the arm and leg" overnight, Lansing added.

Lansing stuck by his estimate that Schroeder could be released from the hospital in two to four weeks — "particularly the four-week (estimate)" — if his recovery goes well.

At 6 p.m. Thursday, during dinner, Schroeder's wife, Margaret, realized that something was desperately wrong with her normally talkative husband, officials said. He suffered a stroke in the lower left side of the brain that partially paralyzed his right side and affected his speech.

Doctors were encouraged by Schroeder's attempt to talk shortly after the stroke and that he recognized his wife.

During the night Schroeder was given two units of packed red blood cells to help carry more oxygen to the brain, Lansing said. A stroke temporarily cuts off oxygen to a part of the brain.

Doctors have not determined the cause and will be conducting studies over the next seven to 10 days to find out what went wrong. No tests were scheduled today because doctors wanted to allow Schroeder to rest without interruption.

Food Costs Boost Wholesale Index

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fresh surge in food prices pushed wholesale prices up 0.5 percent in November, the biggest increase since January and the first of any kind since July, the government said today.

Energy costs and automobile prices also rose last month.

Food prices rose 0.7 percent, largely the product of big jumps in meat prices, the Labor Department said.

The November increase in the Producer Price Index meant wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of 1.9 percent through the first 11 months of the year, more than triple last year's 0.6 percent gain but still well under the rates of more than 10 percent in 1979 and 1980.

Economists expect next year's increases to be only slightly higher than this year's.

Energy prices rose 0.6 in November, including a 1.7 percent gain for heating oil at the start of the fall heating season in many parts of the nation. Heating oil prices had risen 3.3 percent in October.

Automobile prices were up 0.4 percent after a 1.2 percent seasonally adjusted October decline that had helped cause the 0.2 percent decrease in that month's overall wholesale prices.

Food prices had risen in only two of the seven previous months, but the big November jump in meat costs abruptly reversed the downward trend.

Beef and veal prices surged 7.5 percent; pork prices rose 5.8 percent; poultry prices were up 3.3 percent; fish prices gained 0.6 percent.

Dairy prices rose 0.3 percent, but there were sizable declines of 7.3 percent for eggs, 7.1 percent for vegetables and 6.8 percent for fruit.

In other major categories:

—The overall energy-price gain included a 1.1 percent rise for gasoline but a 0.3 percent decrease for natural gas. Overall energy costs had risen 1.5 percent in October.

—Clothing costs were up 0.6 percent after declining 1.1 percent in October.

—Capital equipment prices costs rose 0.3 percent after decreasing 0.6 percent in the preceding month.

In all, the Producer Price Index for Finished Goods reached 292.3 in November, meaning that goods costing $10 in the base year of 1967 would have cost $29.23 last month.

If the month's 0.5 percent increase continued for 12 straight months, the yearly gain would be 6.4 percent on a compounded basis.

One month ago, the government has said that the October decline in the overall index was the third straight, the longest string of decreases in 17 years. Today, however, the August calculation was revised from 0.1 percent decline to no-change.

The November increase was the first since July's 0.3 percent gain and the biggest since the 0.6 percent hike of January.

Board Backs I-40 Speedup

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Transportation today approved the 1985-1994 Transportation Improvement Program, which would accelerate by four years completion of Interstate 40 from Benson to Wilmington.

The 91-mile segment of the interstate originally was scheduled for completion in 1995. The plan approved today will open the segment in 1991, the same time as the opening of a 28-mile section from Raleigh to Benson.

The accelerated schedule was made possible by part of the Highway Improvement Act of 1984, which allows the state to use money designated for rehabilitating interstates to build the Benson-to-Wilmington connection.

Gov. Jim Hunt said the change allows more than $100 million in federal money to be channeled toward the completion of the $224.3 million highway.

Hunt told the board the money may be used immediately because of design work and right-of-way aquisition during his eight years in office.

"I do not (think) the fact ... that I am leaving office in January will jeoprdize this new schedule for I-40," said Hunt. "I am very proud of the fact that Governor-elect (Jim) Martin is publicly committed to completing the road as quickly as possible, and I am confident that he will hold to that commitment."

One of Martin's major campaign pledges was completing I-40, which he said was the only new highway project he could promise.

Hunt said there was no political motivation in the timing of the interstate approval.

Jim Harrington, who will serve as transportation secretary under Martin, attended the board meeting. He said he was unsure whether the Martin administration would propose adjustments to the transportation improvement program but said he was confident that I-40 would remain a priority.

Disease Subsides

RALEIGH (AP) — The incidence of leucoencephalomalacia — a deadly disease carried by moldy corn feed — among North Carolina horses appears to be decreasing, the state Department of Agriculture reported Thursday.

"Even though we have had 19 cases here in the state, and those cases are very important to the affected horse owners, given the fact that we have over 219,000 horses in the state, we do not feel this represents a massive outbreak at this time," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

THE UNSUNG HERO

JACOB'S FIRST BORN CHILD REUBEN, THE SON OF LEAH, GREW UP WITH A KIND DISPOSITION. TO HIM, AND HIM ALONE, THE PRESERVATION OF JOSEPH'S LIFE APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN DUE! WHEN HIS BROTHERS PLOTTED TO KILL JOSEPH, BECAUSE OF THEIR JEALOUSY OVER THE FACT THAT HE WAS JACOB'S FAVORITE SON, REUBEN CAME FORTH AS THE ELDEST BROTHER, WITH THE PROPOSAL TO CAST HIM INTO A PIT, INTENDING TO BRING HIM BACK TO HIS FATHER LATER WHEN TEMPERS COOLED. HIS KIND DISPOSITION WAS AGAIN EVIDENT WHEN HE VISITED THE PIT TO FIND JOSEPH GONE, SOLD INTO SLAVERY BY HIS BROTHERS WHEN HE WAS ABSENT FROM THE SCENE. THE ACCOUNT IN GENESIS 38 RECALLS HOW REUBEN "...RENT HIS CLOTHES" AND SAID, "...THE CHILD IS NOT; AND I, WHITHER SHALL I GO?" THE TRAITS THAT ARE REUBEN'S ARE THOSE OF ARDENT AND IMPETUOUS GENEROSITY, NOT CRAFTY AND CRUEL AS THE OTHER BROTHERS SEEMED TO BE! THIS THEN IS THE PROGENITOR OF THE FUTURE TRIBE OF REUBEN.

Bible Shipments Increasing To Eastern Europe Believers

By The Associated Press

Openly and with approval of communist authorities, increased supplies of Bibles are being shipped into countries of Eastern Europe and also being produced there, Bible society leaders say.

The influx included a Christmas cargo of Bibles this week for Soviet believers.

Officials said that getting more Bibles into such areas has resulted from a broad decision by United Bible Societies, embracing about 100 national societies, to operate only through legal channels.

That policy contrasts with tactics of some other groups which attempt to smuggle Christian literature into communist countries, where the laws impose confiscation of such detected material when not officially authorized.

It has become increasingly clear that using "official channels to import Bibles or to help have them printed locally is the best policy," the Rev. Fergus Macdonald said after a recent visit to Eastern bloc countries.

Macdonald, head of the Bible Society in Scotland, told officers of the American Bible Society that despite the increased flow of Bibles there still is a "very great hunger for Scriptures" in communist areas.

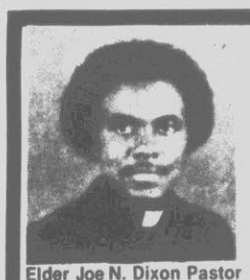

Among the latest approved shipments, according to the American society, were 10,000 Bibles in Russian, turned out in Stuttgart, West Germany, trucked into the Soviet Union and delivered in Moscow on Tuesday.

The council, an umbrella body of Soviet Protestants, also received permission last summer to produce 20,000 New Testaments locally.

In November of 1960, after losing everything, including the will to live, Curley cried out to the Lord in desperation on his knees in Newport News, Virginia. Jesus met Curley that day and spoke to him audibly to assure him that Curley belonged to Jesus. Immediately, Curley's life was transformed.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, finding some suppport after its decline of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 9.49 points in the past two trading days, recovered 2.21 to 1,171.05 in the first half hour today.

But losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Investors have been given some evidence of late that the economy is reviving from its summer-autumn slowdown. Government reports Thursday and today showed gains in retail sales and industrial production last month.

But analysts said doubts persisted about the economic outlook for early 1985 and beyond.

Late Thursday the Federal Reserve reported an unexpectedly large $7.1 billion drop in the money supply. Some Wall Streeters watch the money supply as an indicator of future trends in economic activity.

Brokers also said there was much confusion over the likely future course of the Fed's credit policy. Hopes have been widespread for a further loosening of credit by the central bank because of the sluggish behavior of the money supply.

But if economic activity shows renewed strength, the theory goes, the Fed may be reluctant to give it any added stimulus.

Among today's early volume leaders, Florida Power & Light dropped ⅝ to 43¼; Mobil ⅛ to 26⅛; General Motors ⅜ to 73⅝, and Ohio ⅛ to 31.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 6.29 to 1,168.84.

Declines outpaced advances by about 6 to 5 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 30.85 million shares, against 78.71 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .37 to 93.42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.08 at 200.40.

Americans Taken

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Four Americans apparently were abducted from an affluent neighborhood in Guadalajara last week and have not been heard from since, says a spokesman for the U.S. consulate said.

Spokesman Alan Rogers identified them as Benjamin and Patricia Mascarenas of Ely, Nev., and Dennis and Rose Carlson of Redding, Calif. They were last seen Dec. 2.

Rogers said the Mascarenases have lived in the Guadalajara area for about a year and the other couple arrived for a visit in the city, 330 miles northwest of Mexico City, about three days before the abduction.

Dixon's Shot Wins For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

FAYETTEVILLE — Herb Dixon took but one shot in the basketball game last night, but for East Carolina and hosting Campbell, it was the most important shot of the night.

Dixon's shot was midway to the basket when the final horn went off and it touched nothing but the nets as it swished through to give East Carolina a 58-56 victory over the Camels.

The victory took a big monkey off the backs of the Pirates, who had lost their last 17 games on the road. Their last win came in the next-to-last road game of the 1982-83 season against Baptist. They also won on a neutral court in the ECAC-South tournament's first round later that season.

But throughout the 1983-84 campaign the Pirates went winless. "None of these kids except Curt Vanderhorst has ever won on the road," Coach Charlie Harrison pointed out afterwards. "He's the only one on the team who was on the team the last time we won on the road."

For the Pirates the night which had started off so well nearly fell apart in the final 14 minutes of the game. East Carolina had forged a 16-point lead and appeared on the verge of blowing the Camels right off the court when suddenly everything came apart at the seams.

East Carolina banged in 57.5 percent of their shots in the first half, led the rebounding and were generally in total control of the contest, building up a 37-24 halftime lead.

Campbell had only put together more than two points only twice in the first half — for four and three points — and hadn't matched that in the second half when Leon Bass hit a turnaround jumper with 14:27 left in the game making it 46-30.

But the Pirates didn't score again for four minutes and got only 12 more points the rest of the way as Campbell suddenly got some momentum and got itself back into the game.

"Two things happened," Harrison said. "First, this group of kids hasn't won on the road for 17 games, except for Vanderhorst. I don't give a damn who you're playing when you're 0-17, getting that first win is tough. And we missed a lot of easy shots.

"When we started missing, they seemed to say, 'Uh-oh, here it goes again'. Even Curt missed some shots and free throws that he usually makes."

Led by the play of Andrea McGee, the Camels began to inch back, scoring the next seven points to trim the lead to nine. East Carolina matched the next baskets on fast breaks by Wiliam Grady for a 50-41 lead with 9:18 left.

But the Pirates made but one more basket over the next nine minutes, that a rebounder by Leon Bass with 6:42 showing. Scott Hardy made two free throws at the 2:13 mark and after Larry Spencer and JOhn Huffstetler hit for the Camels to cut the lead to 54-52, Vanderhorst made two at the stripe with 18 seconds left to make it 56-52.

McGee hit a jumper with 11 seconds left and the Camels immediately called time out. When time resumed, the Pirates were called for a five-second violation on the inbounds, and Huffstetler, after flipping it in for the Camels, stepped into the corner and took a pass back from Juan Austin. Huffstetler's shot tied it up at 56-all with six seconds to go, and the Pirates got time with five seconds to play.

Bass got the ball in to Grady in the forecourt and he drove to the middle, passing on the wing to Dixon from just over the center stripe. The freshman immediately put it up micro-seconds before the horn and the Pirate celebration began.

"We didn't know who was going to take the shot," Harrison said. "We really wanted to get the ball in to either Herb or Scotty, but we couldn't. The play was to get to the middle, look for someone on the wing and jump it up. It was no tricky play, just a matter of pushing it out and down the floor. I'm surprised that they jockeyed up with us. I expected them to be softer on their defense on the play."

It was a game in which the Pirates had to overcome a lot of adversity — not just ending the loss string. Derrick Battle, who usually starts at forward, didn't play at all with an ankle injury. Hardy played hurt — and more than Harrison wanted to play him. Both Leon Bass and Peter Dam also played more than they have — and more than Harrison wanted — due to Jack Turnbill's being in foul trouble and playing only ten minutes before fouling out.

"We went with right much zone because of the situation after we got ahead," Harrison said. "That was because of Scotty's injury and Peter and Leon being in there more than they were used to."

For a while, it looked like the Pirates could do no wrong. Although Campbell took a 1-0 lead on a free throw by Russ Elbaum, the Pirates took the lead on shots by Turnbill and Vanderhorst and never trailed again.

Over the remainder of the first half, the Pirates steadily pulled away. Campbell scored four straight points near the midpoint of the half and three more at the close of the period after ECU had worked up as much as a 16-point lead, 37-21. The three-points cut it to 37-24 at intermission.

The Pirates regained the 16-point edge and had several opportunitites to up it ever more before suddenly running out of gas and having to pull it out at the last second.

"I think we were really on the verge of blowing it open," Harrison said. "But when you won a close game on the road, it helps. Any win on the road is a good one. And winning in adversity helps, too.

"Campbell played poorly in the first half, but our defense took everything away from them. We didn't let them do anything they wanted to do. In the second half, they just flattened everyone out and let McGee play with the ball. He got open, or dished off to someone who was open. He's a fine player and he made some tough shots to get them back into it."

Grady led the Pirate scoring with 20 points, while Vanderhorst had 13. Campbell was led by McGee with 17, while Tracy Williams had 12 and Huffstetler had 10.

The Pirates, now 3-2 — with a winning percentage for the first time since the third game of the 1983-84 season — travel to Winston-Salem next Wednesday to face the Wake Forest Demon Deacons.

Lady Pirates Take To Road

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, 2-4 on the young season, will be looking for their first road victory of the year as they launch a three-day swing through South Carolina, Kentucky and West Virginia over the next week.

The Lady Pirates open that tour with a 5 p.m. game Saturday at the University of South Carolina. They continue from there to Morehead State in Morehead, Ky., on Tuesday night and conclude their pre-holiday schedule on Wednesday at Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va.

Both of the ECU wins have come on the Minges Coliseum court, where the Lady Pirates have suffered only one loss — that to number one ranked Old Dominion. The other three losses, to North Carolina, N.C. State and UNC Charlotte, all came on the road — although the UNC and NCSU defeats were on a neutral court in the Fayetteville Dogwood Classic.

South Carolina, 18-12 a year ago, is off to a 2-2 start, but will be playing only their second game at home. They opened with wins over South Carolina State, 59-50, and Indiana, 74-67 in overtime, before losing to Kentucky, 75-62, and Clemson, 62-70, the latter in Carolina Coliseum.

The ECU game will be the first for them in 10 days.

USC is led by 6-0 junior Brantley Southers with a 16.3 average. She's also the leading rebounder with an 8.3 average.

She's joined by three other teammates in double figures, 6-1 sophomore forward Renee Najarian at 13.5, 5-11 swingman Marsi McAlister at 10.5 and 5-9 junior guard Mindy Ballou, 10.5. Ballou is a former star player at West Carteret High School in Morehead City.

East Carolina trails in the series, 8-2.

The meeting with Morehead State will be the second between the two schools, with the first won by the Lady Eagles. Against Marshall, the Lady Pirates split their two previous meetings.

The Lady Pirates return to action following the holidays on Wednesday, January 2, hosting South Carolina.

Players Have Mixed Emotions

The announcement Friday that Art Baker will succeed Ed Emory as head football coach at East Carolina University came as a surprise to members of the team, many of whom are still upset over Emory's dismissal Monday.

Most of the team had already left Greenville following the completion of their exams when the announcement of Baker's hiring was made Friday morning.

"We got a good one," said tight end Jeff Patton, who will be a senior next season. "I really hate it that Coach Emory got fired, but I liked Coach Baker when he was here. I think if anyone else was coming in, it would make (the transition) much harder.

"A combination of the two like we had (in 1983) would have been great, but I guess they had their reasons for firing Coach Emory. We'd just like to know what they are.

"I heard a lot of (players) say they weren't sure if they were going to play unless it was someone like Coach Baker."

"I think it's better," reserve split end Brent Holbrook said. "He's already familiar with the program here, and some of the players are familiar with him. It should be easier."

ECU Athletic Director Ken Karr met with Pirate football players Thursday afternoon but refused to comment on the meeting.

The players, many outraged at the firing of Emory, said they had hoped to find out why Emory was fired, but they said after the brief meeting that they were given no answers.

"We went to the meeting and just wanted to know why (Emory was fired)," Patton said. "(Dr. Karr) came in and told us good luck on our exams and to have a Merry Christmas.

"Then he said he would not answer any questions about why Coach Emory was fired, but that he would answer questions about the future of the program. Everybody just got up and left."

Some players were upset about the timing of the meeting, which came one day before final exams end. Many of the players had already gone home for the holidays and were unable to attend.

"We just don't understand," Patton said. "We went in there hoping to find out why he was fired; it's a shame."

More Tickets

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia needs an additional 2,500 Peach Bowl tickets to meet the demand from fans who want to see the Cavaliers play Purdue in Atlanta on New Year's Day, the school says.

The 10,000 tickets originally allocated the school have nearly all been sold at $20 apiece, Todd Turner, an associate athletic director at the school, said Thursday.

Sutcliffe To Remain With Chicago Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — The bidding for Cy Young winner Rick Sutcliffe is over, and the Chicago Cubs' commitment to re-sign their free-agent pitchers is nearly fulfilled.

Although the Cubs would admit only to being "very confident" of re-signing Sutcliffe, Chicago won the player raffle by default Thursday when every other team in the running was eliminated from consideration.

The Atlanta Braves, Kansas City Royals and San Diego Padres all confirmed Thursday that they had been informed Sutcliffe was going elsewhere — meaning the Cubs. The Padres, apparently the last team in the running, were the last to be informed, around 6 p.m. EST.

"The Cubs got him," said General Manager Jack McKeon of the Padres. "We were happy to be in the final two."

The Cubs now have re-acquired free agent pitchers Dennis Eckersley, Steve Trout and Sutcliffe. Rick Reuschel also left the club via free agency, but Chicago has shown little interest in re-signing him. That leaves only free agent reliever Tim Stoddard out of the fold.

"We made a commitment to the city of Chicago and to our ballclub to get our people back," General Manager Dallas Green said when the Cubs re-signed Trout last week.

On Thursday, as news of Sutcliffe's intentions leaked to the media, Cubs public relations director Bob Ibach would say only: "We're very confident that we'll re-sign Rick Sutcliffe."

Team president Jim Finks refused to comment on the reports, but Green told a television reporter: "I'm happy. We're getting closer by the minute. It still could fall through. Until Rick and Barry (agent Barry Axelrod) come to me and we're shaking hands on the deal, it's not a deal."

Ibach said team officials were shunning the media because they "didn't want to muddy the waters" until talks with Sutcliffe were completed. Ibach said he did not know when the Cubs could announce Sutcliffe's signing.

Details of the veteran right-hander's new contract, estimated to be worth between $9 million-$10 million over five years, were still being negotiated, Cubs officials said.

Wolfpack Hosts Ga. Tech

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Five Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams take exam breaks this Saturday as No. 9 North Carolina State hosts 12th-ranked Georgia Tech and 13th-ranked North Carolina meets Wake Forest in Greensboro.

The Tar Heels are undefeated after four games, while the Wolfpack has won all five of its games. Wake Forest has lost to Boston College and the Yellow Jackets were knocked off by Georgia earlier this week.

Clemson is the only other ACC team in action, at home to Middle Tennessee State.

Third-ranked Duke meets Davidson on Monday and could move up a notch in the rankings following this weekend's contest between No. 1 Georgetown and second-ranked DePaul.

The Wolfpack has not settled on a starting lineup as Coach Jim Valvano searches for a small forward with an outside shooting touch. Nonetheless, N.C. State is averaging 94.8 points per game and has scored 100 points or more in its last two games.

N.C. State is allowing 58.2 points a game, one-half point more than Maryland's league-leading average. Spearheading the attack is Lorenzo Charles, averaging 18.8 points per game to rank third in the ACC. In addition, center Cozell McQueen has emerged with a 9.8 average and scored a career-high 19 points against Western Carolina last week.

"I've been pleased with our play so far. We've been able to play many players and have used a variety of lineups," Valvano said. "But we need to improve on our perimeter shooting and man-to-man defense."

Georgia Tech is 3-1, and trails in its series with the Wolfpack 22-9. The Yellow Jackets have never beaten the Wolfpack in Reynolds Coliseum.

"They have a nice balance between their inside game and their outside play," Valvano said. "Coach (Bobby) Cremins has done a marvelous job of bringing them along the way he has."

Sophomore Bruce Dalrymple has been the catalyst for Georgia Tech, scoring at a 17-point-per-game clip and dishing out five assists. Haitian Yvon Joseph is shooting 69.2 percent from the field with teammate John Salley right behind him at 67.9 percent.

Junior center Brad Daugherty has replaced Duke's Mark Alarie as the conference's leading scorer after three weeks of play with a 19.5 average. Coach Dean Smith considers the 6-foot-11, 240-pound Daugherty a key to his team's early success.

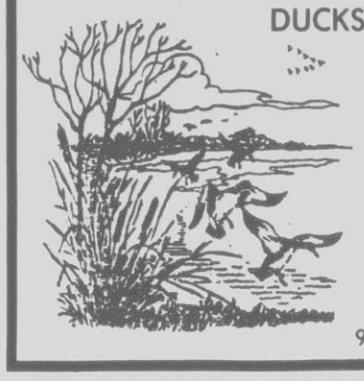

"Brad is 200 percent improved over his freshman year," Smith said. "He's still only 19 years old and he should continue to develop."

North Carolina downed Wake Forest 70-62 in the Greensboro Coliseum last season, but were clinging to a 2-point edge with 1:28 left before pulling away.

"This will be a lot different from last year," Smith said. "Wake's missing Anthony Teachey and Danny Young and we're without (Michael) Jordan, (Sam) Perkins and (Matt) Doherty. But, I expect a similarly close game."

Wake Forest has the league's seventh leading scorer in senior guard Delaney Rudd at 17.8 points, while junior forward Kenny Green is ninth at 15.4 points per game. Green is also the league's third best rebounder at 8.8 per contest.

At 6-8, Teachey was the league's shortest center. This year, Coach Carl Tacy must send 6-7 Charlie Thomas into the pivot position against Daugherty.

Tom Baines has got it all wrapped up as this year's predictions come to an end with the bowl games. The real battle is for second place.

Going into the 18 bowl games, Baines has a 96-56 record, seven games ahead of Vickie Spivey and this writer, tied for second place at 89-63.

Our guests are fourth with an 87-65 mark, followed by Jimmy DuPree at 85-67.

And then there is Joe Jenkins. If Joe were to go 18-0, he wouldn't even catch Jimmy. Joe wound up the regular season with a 70-82 record, the first losing record in the history of the panel.

Tom's picks — compared to Vickie's and ours — don't provide for enough differences to make the charge. Vickie — with the differences all right, could close to two, while we could close within one.

However, Spivey and we have nine differences, so there definitely will be a shift here — even with a split, there should be a definite winner between us.

Our guest for the finale is ECU's new baseball coach Gary Overton, who posted a 10-2 record during the regular season to be our top guest picker.

Two Atlantic Coast Conference teams made it to the bowls this year, along with area team Virginia Tech.

Maryland, the ACC champion, will be playing Tennessee in the Sun Bowl, while surprising Virginia faces Purdue in Peach Bowl. Virginia Tech takes on Air Force in the Independence Bowl.

•California Bowl — Nevada-Las Vegas vs. Toledo, a toss-up.
•Independence Bowl — Virginia Tech over Air Force.
•Holiday Bowl — Brigham Young over Michigan.
•Cherry Bowl — Army over Michigan State.
•Citrus Bowl — Florida State over Georgia.
•Sun Bowl — Maryland over Tennessee.
•Freedom Bowl — Texas over Iowa.
•Liberty Bowl — Auburn over Arkansas.
•Gator Bowl — South Carolina vs. Oklahoma State, a toss-up.
•Aloha Bowl — Southern Methodist over Notre Dame.
•Hall of Fame Bowl — Wisconsin over Kentucky.
•Peach Bowl — Virginia over Purdue.
•Bluebonnet Bowl — Texas Christian over West Virginia.
•Cotton Bowl — Boston College over Houston.
•Fiesta Bowl — Miami, Fla., over UCLA.
•Rose Bowl — Southern Cal over Ohio State.
•Sugar Bowl — Nebraska over Louisiana State.
•Orange Bowl — Oklahoma and Washington, a toss-up.

Sikma, Sonics Give Lakers Problems

By The Associated Press

The Seattle SuperSonics have the solution to a problem the rest of the National Basketball Association has a hard time solving — beating the Los Angeles Lakers.

Jack Sikma hit a jumper with eight seconds left in overtime Thursday night to give Seattle a 124-122 victory over the Lakers, the third time in three tries the Sonics have defeated the three-time defending Western Conference champions this season.

13 points in the final 7:14 to help force the extra period.

Utah led 105-103 with 10 seconds left in regulation, but steals by Darrell Walker and King led to two baskets and offset two free throws by Ricky Green. Walker also stole the ball from Adrian Dantley, who had 30 points for Utah, late in the overtime to keep New York ahead.

Clippers 106, Trail Blazers 100

Los Angeles won its third straight game and handed Portland its third consecutive loss as Derek Smith scored 29 points and Junior Bridgeman 22 for the Clippers.

The Trail Blazers led 92-89 with 4:42 left in the game before Smith triggered a decisive 9-0 run by the Clippers by tipping in a missed shot.

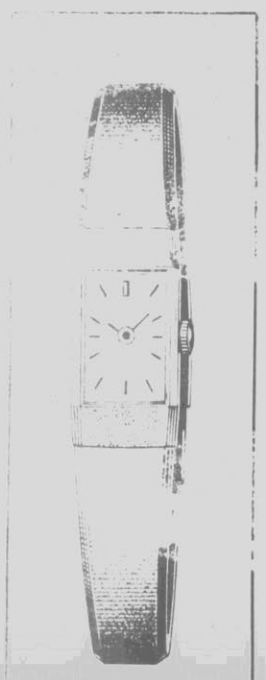

Kiki Vandeweghe led Portland with 26 points.

Lefty's Son In His First Start

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - It was a night to remember for senior Chuck Driesell and freshman walk-on Ed Woods.

In an acknowledged mismatch, Driesell made the first start of his career and Woods played in his first game ever as Maryland rolled to an 87-48 victory over Maryland-Eastern Shore Thursday night.

"It felt good, I never felt anything like that before," Driesell said after being given the starting nod by his father, Coach Lefty Driesell.

Playing 31 minutes, or 24 minutes longer than he had in 47 previous appearances, Driesell scored five points, three below his career high.

"I was kind of surprised," Driesell said of his start. "He (his father) mentioned it to me yesterday that he was thinking about it, but until the time comes, you never know."

Lefty said Chuck "had worked hard for four years and never started, so I thought this would be a good game for him to start."

The slim crowd of 5,890, aware early that a runaway was in progress, chanted for an appearance by Woods.

He finally got a chance, and with 2:04 left he sank two free throws during a 21-point streak by the Terps, which ended when Antonio Bateman scored for the losing Hawks with 21 seconds on the clock.

All 11 players used by Maryland scored, with fou. in double figures. Adrian Branch led the way with 16, Jeff Baxter had 14, Tom "Speedy" Jones 12, and Len Bias 11.

Bias, 0-for-4 in the first half, played only 19 minutes and just averted being held below double figures for the first time in 24 games.

"Usually, when I miss two or three shots," Bias said, "I play the whole first half and shoot my way back in the game. Tonight I missed, and I was taken out."

It was the seventh straight victory for the Terps following an opening game defeat. Maryland-Eastern Shore, a branch of the University of Maryland, dropped to 1-6.

Marvin Blye scored 12 points to pace the Hawks and Donnell Boney, the team's high scorer in the six previous games, added 10.

Maryland-Eastern Shore scored the first basket of the game for its only lead, and was tied twice at 2-2 and 4-4. By halftime, the Terps were on top 45-24.

About the only bright spots for the Hawks were two six-point strings in the second half. But they never lowered their deficit below 15 points.

"It was a good game to get the subs some work," said Coach Driesell. "We've had a lot of close games, so they haven't had much chance to play. It was a fun game for them."

Driesell conceded it was a mismatch while noting: "Sometimes in a mismatch you get sloppy. But I thought we played a solid game."

The Hawks, who had lost their first five games by margins of 12 to 45 points before beating Bowie State, were kept in uniform for about 20 minutes after the game as Coach Howie Evans conducted a closed-door session in the locker room.

Later, Evans said he was upset because the Hawks abandoned their ball control offense and tried to run with the Terps instead of taking time off the 45-second clock to make a shorter game.

'Jewel In The Crown' 14-Part

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Jewel in the Crown," beginning Sunday night on public television's "Masterpiece Theatre," is a lavish and spectacular production drawn faithfully from the most distinguished body of English-language literature to yet emerge from post-colonial India.

The 14-part dramatization is as rich in the sights and sounds of India as anything previously mounted for the screen, with the possible exception of Richard Attenborough's epic film, "Gandhi." It is also timely in the context of recent, tragic events in the vast and enigmatic subcontinent.

The miniseries was adapted by Britain's Granada Television from the "Raj Quartet" of novels, written by the late Paul Scott and published from 1966 to 1975 to widespread critical acclaim.

The TV production is all the more remarkable for its reconstruction of a "labyrinthine narrative ... so complex," said Sir Denis Forman, Granada's chairman, "as to make all the flash-backery of (Joseph) Conrad and Ford Madox Ford look like a children's game."

Another of Scott's novels set in India, "Staying On," was produced earlier by Granada to "to help us decide whether the logistics and the cost of a lengthy shoot in the distant subcontinent were within our reach," said Forman in an introduction to "The Making of the Jewel in the Crown," published by St. Martin's Press.

That TV movie, starring Trevor Howard and Celia Johnson, was completed in 1980, and later broadcast in this country. The success of that project convinced Granada to go ahead with the more ambitious production.

"The Jewel in the Crown" (the title of the TV miniseries is taken from the first novel in the "Raj Quartet") is set in the last half-decade of British rule, which ended with India's independence in 1947, and is resplendent in historical and geographical detail.

The miniseries was filmed on location, starting in Udaipur in January 1982, and continuing in Mysore, Simla, Srinager, Delhi, Bombay and Bangalore.

The rape in the second episode of Daphne Manners (Susan Wooldridge), a volunteer at the British hospital in Mayapore, which occurs in a period of civil unrest, establishes a theme that underlies the entire presentation.

The violent attack in the Bibighar Gardens, in which Miss Manners' Indian-born lover, Hari Kumar (Art Malik) is implicated, was Scott's way, the London Observer suggested, of calling attention to "another love affair that was also a rape ... the relationship between two nations, India and imperial Britain."

Kumar is tortured, and then imprisoned, by Ronald Merrick (Tim Pigott-Smith), a district police official whose proposal of marriage to Miss Manners has been rejected. The young woman subsequently dies in childbirth, and her dark-skinned offspring is taken by the elderly and mildly eccentric Lady Manners (Rachel Kempson), the dead woman's aunt.

Morrow Leaving Her Post Early

RALEIGH (AP) — Dr. Sarah Morrow says she's proud of the achievements made during the eight years she served as secretary of the Department of Human Resources as she prepares to leave her office several days early.

Ms. Morrow said Thursday she will begin her new job Jan. 16 as medical director for Electronic Data Systems, which administers the state employee health plan.

The resignation comes as Gov.-elect Jim Martin prepares to take office Jan. 5 and install Phil Kirk, former administrative assistant to Republican Congressman Jim Broyhill, as the department's new secretary.

"I'm proud of the strides we've made in the department during Governor (Jim) Hunt's administration in providing services to those North Carolinians who need help the most," Ms. Morrow said in a prepared statement.

She cited an almost 25 percent reduction in the state's infant mortality rate since 1976; expansion of maternal and child health programs; improved adult health care services; reduction in the error rate in welfare, food stamp and Medicaid programs; creation of new programs for handicapped and emotionally disturbed children and an emphasis on helping the elderly remain healthy and in their own homes as long as possible.

William B. Shaw, executive director of the state health plan, said Ms. Morrow will provide leadership for all health-care related activities in the state and guidance for EDS in the health care field on a nationwide basis.

"Dr. Morrow brings a superb record of achievement and many years of fine service to the state of North Carolina to her new position," Shaw said.

Ms. Morrow, 63, was director of the Guilford County Health Department, 1968-77, and was associate director of the department for eight years before that. She took the job as department secretary in 1977, when Hunt took office.

She headed the department charged with helping individuals as well as families and communities to maintain adequate levels of health, social and economic well-being. The department has more than 400 programs, many involving services delivered by county agencies.

The department has one of the largest budgets in state government.

Ms. Morrow said her last day as human resources secretary would be Dec. 31. Kirk is scheduled to take office Jan. 7.

Brent Hackney, Hunt's press secretary, said Hunt would appoint a temporary secretary to head the department until Kirk takes over. Deputy Secretary Lucy Bode or Assistant Secretary Richard Rideout probably will get the appointment, Hackney said.

Ms. Morrow said in her new position, she will "work closely with the board of trustees of the State Health Plan, the Legislature, the governor and the State Employees Association" to improve EDS' services to state workers.

EDS has drawn some criticism from state workers who complain that it takes too long to process claims. Ms. Morrow said she had no immediate ideas about ways to remedy the problems, but said it was "up to EDS to prove they can handle (the job) to the satisfaction of the people in charge."

House Leader Sees Health Plan Bailout

RALEIGH (AP) — It's premature to discuss possible changes for the state health insurance plan that may be introduced when the General Assembly convenes Feb. 5, but the plan needs "a lot of looking at," a state House leader says.

The General Assembly will investigate the way the insurance plan has been run, and may provide money to bail out the financially troubled system, said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who co-chairs a powerful oversight committee that created the insurance plan for state employees and teachers.

"It was one of the first self-insurance plans outside of private companies," Watkins said Thursday. "And we've done a credible job of setting it up. I think we need to knock off some of the rough edges."

He said the legislative oversight committee will consider making an emergency appropriation to come up with some or all of the $33 million a year the health plan board says it needs to save by cutting benefits.

"We have not started off with a bang," Watkins said of the program, which began in October 1982.

The board of trustees of the Teachers' and State Employees' Major Medical Plan voted Wednesday to impose an April 1 deadline for General Assembly action.

If lawmakers fail to act on board proposals to quadruple the medical expense plan members must pay themselves each year, the board vowed to impose the benefit cuts on its own authority.

The board's consultant, William C. Mercer-Meidinger Inc., of Charlotte, recommended the changes last month and predicted that without them, the plan will go broke in early June and sink more than $2 million into debt by July 1.

Green Urges Other Democrats To Join In

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Outgoing Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has called on other Democrats to put away partisan politics to help North Carolina as he begins his job as paid consultant and head of a Government Relations Advisory Council to Republican Gov.-elect Jim Martin.

"In the wider interest of the people of North Carolina we do not need partisan wrangling but common concentration on common problems," Green said Thursday in a prepared statement read by spokesman Vernon Morton.

"I trust that the speaker, the new lieutenant governor and all members of the North Carolina General Assembly will join with me in placing the best interest of the people of North Carolina above partisan considerations," he said.

The council also includes former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor, and former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser. The group will advise Martin on legislative tax proposals.

Unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth was named to the group but withdrew, saying Martin had misinterpreted his willingness to lobby for tax cuts.

Green's comments came one day after Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Jordan told reporters that Green's potential presence at the Legislature would present "a new twist to the challenge" of the job as lieutenant governor and it would be easier if Green did not visit the Legislative Building.

Morton said Green's schedule was too busy to permit Green to meet with reporters to discuss the appointment. He said the timing was not related to Jordan's statement.

"He did not frame the statement in reference to anything Jordan had to say," Morton said.

Jordan had no comment on Green's statement Thursday, said spokesman Brenda Summers.

Green said in the statement that he is enthusiastic about the new position.

"For almost a quarter of a century I have considered my station in public life as one devoted to the benefit of all citizens without limitations by other considerations," Green said in the statement.

"We are one state and one people. Our fate as a state and our future as a people rest not upon one citizen or class of citizens but upon all citizens," he said.

Morton said Green told him he has not discussed the specifics of the consulting job with Martin.

Jordan said Wednesday that Green apparently has "made a decision not to run further on the Democratic ticket."

"He (Green) believes that as many Democrats, if not more Democrats than Republicans, sent Martin to Raleigh," Morton said. "As lieutenant governor, he came here the same route. He is a Democrat and will remain Democrat."

Legislative Studies Propose Repeal Of Some Taxes, Ask New Spending

RALEIGH (AP) — Recommendations made by about 30 study committees on some of the most talked about issues of the past year, such as day care and tax repeals, may find their way to the General Assembly when it convenes Feb. 5.

The Legislative Research Commission collected the reports Thursday. Traditionally the study committees, which work between legislative sessions, have laid the groundwork for bills that are introduced during the session.

Study committees on revenue laws and banking agreed that the intangibles tax on deposits in banks should be repealed. Currently deposits in savings and loans or credit unions are not taxed while bank deposits are taxed at the rate of 10 cents per $100.

The revenue goes to local governments. The Revenue Laws Study Committee suggested that the state reimburse local governments for the loss, an estimated $21.3 million.

"North Carolina's intangibles tax places this state at a comparative disadvantage with other states not imposing this tax in attracting new industry and those individuals dependent on earnings from invested income," the banking committee report said.

A committee studying motor vehicle inspections suggested raising the inspection fee from $3.65 to $4.25 and the inspection sticker price from 60 cents to 75 cents.

Rep. Aaron Fussell, D-Wake, said the increase would help inspection stations cover their costs and would help pay for enforcing the inspection laws.

"We really need to bear down on inspections," Fussell said, adding that some inspection stations are only glancing at the automobiles for problems.

Several of the committees recommended additional spending items.

A panel studying the biotechnology industry determined that other states have started programs to develop the industry but the field is open and North Carolina could capitalize on the opportunity.

The panel recommended a five-year $70 million program to aggressively promote the biotechnology industry in North Carolina.

The money would go for increasing the North Carolina Biotechnology Center budget, establishing a program in the University of North Carolina system for biotechnology research and teaching and for building a bioprocess engineering facility.

Other study committee recommendations call for:

— Enactment of a "Right to Know" bill that requires employers to keep information about hazardous chemicals in the workplace and make such information available to workers, health and emergency personnel and government and community officials in some cases.

— A "Clean Detergent Act" that would limit the amount of phosphorus in laundry detergents sold in North Carolina.

— More money for monitoring toxic substances in water and creation of a technical assistance program to help private industry detect and reduce toxics.

— Consideration of minimum state standards for water quality protection.

— Consideration of giving the state banking commissioner power to regulate bank holding companies, to approve acquisitions of North Carolina banks by holding companies operating in the state and to require and examine reports of the holding companies.

— Increased welfare funding and additional money for spouse and child abuse programs.

— Starting licensing adult day-care programs and increasing the property tax exemption for people age 65 and over.

— Consolidation of day-care services within the Department of Human Resources, increasing state licensing standards for day-care facilities, permitting the state to investigate day-care providers against whom reports of abuse or neglect have been received and provision of money for the state to increase day-care facility inspections.

Bus Overturns

ASHEVILLE (AP) — More than a dozen Buncombe County children were sent to Memorial Mission Hospital after their school bus overturned going around a curve, but none of the injuries was serious, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Trooper M.T. Murphy said the most serious injuries among the 14 North Buncombe High School students hurt were a cut lip and a broken finger.

Hospital spokeswoman Cindy McKeehan said Thursday night the 14 students, including the bus driver, had been treated and released. She said the students ranged in age from 14 to 17.

Murphy said the accident occurred about 3:40 p.m. Thursday on an unpaved road about three miles east of Weaverville. He said the bus dropped off a 3-foot embankment at about 10 mph while going around a tight curve. Murphy said the road had just had a new layer of gravel applied to it and had been banked to make the road look wider than it was.

No charges were filed in the crash.

IN THE STATE

Chopper Crashes

TROY, N.C. (AP) — Two men were slightly injured when a helicopter caught its skids on a power line, flipped over and wrecked, police said.

Highway Patrol Trooper B.M. Taylor said H. Graham Reynolds, 59, of Trenton, S.C., and Frank Arthur Vella, 36, of Augusta, Ga., received cuts and bruises in the 11:17 a.m. Thursday crash.

Reynolds, owner and operator of the helicopter, was flying with Vella from Reynolds' construction company in Trenton to Raleigh to check on a job prospect, said Taylor. The two-man Hughes 300-C helicopter crashed about 9 miles west of Troy on rural paved road 1150.

The two men were treated and X-rayed at the Stanly County hospital in Albemarle, Taylor said.

Hunter Charged

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — A 65-year-old Rocky Point man has been charged with involuntary manslaughter in the hunting death of Pearlie Haywood Wells, 44, also of Rocky Point.

James H. Blake was placed under a $5,000 unsecured bond. Blake said he mistook Wells for a bear in fading twilight and did not realize that he had shot a man until the following morning.

Sgt. Cordelia Lewis of the Pender County Sheriff's said the shooting, which occurred Dec. 5, was apparently an accident. Wells' body was found Dec. 6 at the edge of an overgrown field on N.C. 210 west of U.S. 117. He had been shot in the face and shoulder with a 12-gauge shotgun.

Early Release

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Thursday that 487 inmates will be allowed to leave prison early as part of the traditional Christmas commutation.

Inmates who received the commutation must be due foor unconditional release between Dec. 14, 1984 and Jan. 31, 1985. They must not be serving a death sentence or a life sentence, must not be in maximum or close security, must not be in prison awaiting trial, must not be serving a split sentence, must have been admitted to prison after conviction on or before Aug. 31, 1984. The inmates, who were to be released today, also must not be of a mental condition that could pose a threat to the inmate or society and must not be serving time for escape.

Surgery Plan

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The Cardinal Health Agency's Board of Directors has endorsed a plan to establish open-heart surgery and cardiac catheterization facilities in Southeastern North Carolina.

The plan adopted Wednesday night says three surgery units and three catheterization units are needed in Cardinal's 15-county region. It will become effective Jan. 1, contingent on comments during a public-review period that ends Dec. 28.

Cardinal is responsible for determining what health services are provided by hospitals and other institutions in its region, which includes Bladen, Brunswick, Columbus, New Hanover and Pender counties.

Grant For TIP

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University's Talent Identification Program has received a $30,000 grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation to support scholarships for North Carolina girls attending the program's summer session.

Preference will go to those with aptitudes in math and science, according to TIP Director Robert N. Sawyer. Each scholarship carries a $500 stipend with the possibility of additional support if needed.

Skeleton Identified

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A skeleton found in Wilkes County has been tentatively identified as the remains of Sherry Hart, a 24-year-old West Jefferson woman missing since January, the chief state medical examiner said.

Dr. Page Hudson said he will look at old X-rays to confirm the identity.

Settlement

HIGH POINT (AP) — A $16 million civil suit resulting from a traffic accident that left a High Point woman a quadriplegic has ended with $3.24 million out-of-court settlement.

Jenny Starr Highfill and her husband, Jerry Wayne Highfill, had sought $16 million in damages from Spartan Express Inc. of Greer, S.C., after her Highfill's car was involved in a collision with a Spartan tractor-trailer on June 30, 1983, near High Point. Part of the settlement will be paid immediately, and the remainder will be paid to Ms. Highfill monthly throughout her lifetime.

Duke Plans Bank For Brain Tissue

By The Associated Press

Duke University Medical Center may begin operating as early as next month a brain bank allowing researchers to remove brain tissue and freeze it for future experiments on Alzheimer's disease, officials said.

Duke will receive the laboratory equipment soon, but the procedure could be performed now if a victim or his family was interested, said Dr. Allen Roses, Duke professor and chief of neurology.

"The brain deteriorates very rapidly after death, and there are a whole bunch of things that can't be studied in material available from routine autopsies," Roses said Thursday. "This will open up a whole new phase of Alzheimer's disease research."

Greensboro businessman Joseph McKinley Bryan donated $250,000 to help pay for the brain bank. The retired senior vice president of Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co., made the gift in memory of his wife, Kathleen Price Bryan, who died Aug. 6 after a lengthy illness.

As many as three million Americans may have Alzheimer's disease, a degenerative brain disorder whose cause and cure are unknown. Before it kills them, the disease slowly robs a victim of his memory and reason.

To donate a brain to the bank, a patient must be in or near Duke Medical Center at the time of death, Roses said. The bank hopes to obtain five to 10 diseased brains, plus an equal number of normal brains for control purposes, each year over the next five to 10 years, he said.

Researchers will use brain tissue preserved in liquid nitrogen to explore the prevalence of a number of nucleic acids and enzymes in normal and diseased brains to define the disease's chemical abnormalities.

"No one has been able to properly measure this kind of biochemical activity in Alzheimer's disease.

Jackson Chairman Says GOP Is Best

By The Associated Press

The state chairman of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's unsuccessful presidential campaign is urging black voters to register as Republicans, saying that blacks would increase their political leverage if they supported candidates of both parties.

Marion Rex Harris, a Fayetteville businessman and Jackson's state chairman during the primary campaign last spring, said he favored a public education campaign to register 20 percent of North Carolina's black voters in the GOP by 1988.

"Twenty percent blacks in the Republican Party will have more impact than 80 percent left in the Democratic Party," Harris said.

Harris served on the state Board of Transportation during the administration of former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser. He is a registered Democrat although he switched briefly to the Republican Party during the Holshouser administration.

The subject was discussed Saturday when about 60 black political figures gathered at the Whispering Pines resort to discuss the recent election and evaluate the political future of the black community.

The meeting was sponsored by the N.C. Black Leadership Caucus and was called by the group's chairman, Lavonia Allison of Durham.

CDC Says Hepatitis Strain On Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The infectious viral disease hepatitis B, which can lead to death from liver cancer or cirrhosis, is striking an increasing number of Americans despite the availability of a safe, effective vaccine to prevent it, health experts say.

Health groups launched a nationwide education campaign Thursday to increase use of the vaccine by those at high risk of contracting hepatitis B.

Those at high risk include health care workers, sexually active homosexual men, hemophiliacs, kidney dialysis patients, injectable drug abusers, people in institutions and certain ethnic groups, such as Alaskan Eskimos and Vietnamese refugees.

The number of cases has risen steadily, even though the preventive vaccine has been available for almost two years, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control. It says there are 200,000 hepatitis B infections annually.

Dr. James O. Mason, the CDC director, told a news conference that the reasons why so many remain unprotected are not only the traditional difficulty in vaccinating adults and the high cost but also concern about vaccine safety.

Extensive tests show the vaccine, which is derived from blood products, does not transmit acquired immune deficiency syndrome despite unsubstantiated rumors to the contrary, Mason said.

AIDS, an often-fatal disease that destroys the body's immune system, is believed caused by a virus transmitted through intimate contact with bodily fluids such as blood.

"It is clear, absolutely clear, that this vaccine is safe," Mason said. "It does not contain the AIDS virus, and even if it did, the data demonstrate that the virus would be killed by inactivation steps used in the manufacturing process."

The nation has a successful system for childhood immunization but always has difficulty convincing adults to get vaccinated for diseases they may not perceive as life-threatening, Mason said.

The vaccine, which was developed by Merck Sharp & Dohme, Inc., is the most expensive ever produced. The manufacturers claim that the price of $100 for the three-innoculation series needed to produce immunity reflects the extremely high cost of developing and producing the vaccine.

Medical experts said many insurance companies and other so-called third-party payers do not compensate for the vaccine. The health professionals criticized this policy as short-sighted because hepatitis B costs the country more than $1 million daily in treatment and other expenses.

Dr. James E. Maynard of the CDC said there were about 40 cases of hepatitis B per 100,000 people in 1979, he said, but by 1983 the number rose to 60 cases per 100,000. The B-type now accounts for 40 percent of all cases of viral hepatitis in this country, he added.

"In the United States, hepatitis B is primarily a disease of young adults between the ages of 15 and 39 years," Maynard told the briefing. "However, significant numbers of infants, children and adolescents are also affected."

There is no effective treatment for the disease, which directly kills 250 people each year, he said. In 10 percent, or about 20,000, of the cases, the victims become chronic carriers who can infect others. About 3,500 of these carriers eventually develop cirrhosis and 850 get primary liver cancer, highly fatal conditions.

Groups involved in the campaign to increase hepatitis B innoculation include the American College of Preventive Medicine, the National Association of County Health Officials, the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases, the American Red Cross, the American Medical Association and the Gay Rights National Lobby.

Women Top-Rated In Detecting Odors

WASHINGTON (AP) — To detect the world's vast variety of nasal sensations from roses to garbage, women have a more acute sense of smell than men and keep their olfactory advantage throughout life, says a study published today.

Researchers at the University of Pennsylvania, in the largest study of smelling ever conducted, also found that the ability to detect and distinguish odors drops off with age.

Since smell is an important component of taste, they added, this finding could partly explain why so many elderly people complain that their food is flavorless.

The study of 1,955 persons of all ages also found that females generally are more accurate in identifying odors than males in each age group, and that the sense of smell declines less quickly in older women than men.

In addition, nonsmokers outperformed smokers in every category, it said.

Dr. Richard L. Doty, director of the university's Clinical Smell and Taste Research Center, said in a telephone interview that the study helps resolve conflicting results from numerous smaller studies done earlier.

"This is the largest study of its kind, the first major use of a standardized test with the general population," Doty said, "and it clearly shows there is a relationship of smell to age."

Researchers used a test developed at the center to check 1,158 females and 797 males with ages ranging from 5 to 99 years. Subjects included university employees, residents of homes for the elderly, students, youngsters at summer camps and people at regional health fairs.

According to the report in the journal Science, the test consisted of four, 10-page booklets the size of business envelopes. Each page contained a scratch-and-sniff patch of aromas trapped in microscopic capsules that are released when rubbed.

The scents were carefully chosen and arranged to cover a variety of psychological classes of smells, such as good, foul and fruity, and so that they would not overwhelm the sensing cells located far back in the nasal cavity, Doty said.

Subjects scratched each of the 40 pages and recorded what they smelled in the booklet. The aromas included such things as menthol, peanuts, soap, lilacs, pine, cheddar cheese, pizza, onion, motor oil, root beer and dill pickles.

The researchers found that both sexes performed at their peak between the ages of 30 and 60, and that there was a slight decrease in average performance from 60 through 80, after which smelling ability dropped sharply.

Study Warns Men To Check For Cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Most young men fail to examine themselves for cancer of the testicles, one of the most common forms of the disease among males between the ages of 18 and 40, says a doctor who studied the level of awareness of the ailment.

Dr. John Goldenring, a staff physician at Loyola Marymount University's Student Health Services, said Thursday that doctors rarely inform their male patients of the importance of checking for the cancer.

"The problem is that men haven't been getting equal time," Goldenring said. "Women are being taught about breast cancer, but men aren't being taught about testicular cancer."

Goldenring said less than 10 percent of the men who took part in a 1983 study knew how to check their testicles for signs of cancer, wile 64 percent of women interviewed had been taught to perform self-exams for breast cancer.

Testicular cancer is one of the leading types of cancer among men between the ages of 18 and 40, he said, along with cancers of the blood and lymph system. He said there is disagreement over which ranks first.

About one in 50,000 men contracts testicular cancer, the Chicago-based American Academy of Pediatrics said in a news release announcing the findings.

Goldenring said the disease is almost fully curable if detected before the cancer has spread beyond the affected testicle, although the cure often requires the testicle's removal. The removal of one testicle does not make a man infertile or impotent.

If not diagnosed, testicular cancer kills about 50 percent of its victims, he said.

Deaths Mount as Ethiopia's Famine Victims Arrive Too Late for Help

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

BATI, Ethiopia (AP) — "This was my fourth child, a daughter," said Mohamed Hassan, waiting for diggers to finish graves for those who did not survive the night. "Now they are all dead."

The small, wasted body — once a 4-year-old girl named Kadicha — was bundled in a sack that earlier had contained West German relief grain.

The emergency feeding center at Bati, in the Ethiopia highlands just west of the torrid Danakil Desert, long ago ran out of cloth for shrouds.

Another mourning father asked Mohamed, a 48-year-old peasant farmer to move Kadicha next to his own dead child so he can shield both bodies from the hot East African sun with a ragged cotton shawl.

The Bati camp, about 180 miles north of Addis Ababa, the capital, appears efficiently run by Red Cross personnel from Ethiopia, Finland, Iceland, Australia and Sweden.

But deaths mount because many victims of the Ethiopian famine arrive too late at the camp to be helped, while some infants are left in their tents without treatment because their mothers consider them beyond recovery.

"Death has become a normal thing here," said Masfin Halefin, 28, the camp administrator. From Oct. 22, when the camp opened, to Dec. 2, 2,044 men, women and children died.

The daily toll now ranges from 100 to 120.

Three years of crop failure due to drought have brought, by current count, 16,733 people to the small city of tents and graves. There are three doctors six nurses, 32 cooks and 32 gravediggers.

Many more starving Ethiopians, too weak from malnutrition to walk, cannot reach the 211 food distribution centers like Bati, once a tourist attraction because of its colorful Sunday markets.

Today, it has become a place of death and mourning.

"We cannot assist the mothers and the children still in the villages because we don't have the means to do so," said Masfin.

"Some walk 50 to 60 kilometers (31 to 38 miles) to Bati, taking four to five days. Many are beyond help and cannot be saved. Many are dying on their way here. But there is no way to know how many," the administrator told a group of American reporters during a recent visit.

Ibrahim Hassan Abdulla watched his 6-year-old son, nearly lifeless, receive treatment from an Ethiopian doctor who inserted a feeding tube through a nostril. A 2-year-old daughter, shrivelled by starvation, waited her turn on the floor of the white medical tent.

"I came from Barigu, and we haven't had rain in three years," said Ibrahim. "No crops have grown. If rain comes, I will return to my village and farm. If not, I'm interested in resettlement so my children can live." Barigu is about two hours' walk from Bati.

Ethiopia's Marxist-based government has launched a program to relocate drought victims to less affected areas in the south and west of the country. Most Western donor countries have expressed reservations about the scheme. Some question the program's freedom of choice and speculate whether it will be used to speed up collectivization.

Ethiopian authorities, while admitting that similar schemes had been poorly administered in the past, maintain that resettlement is motivated solely by regard for human life.

They see it as the only long-term solution because much of the land here has been degraded by the stripping of trees and by erosion and can no longer support the people.

At Bati the desperation is evident.

Since most of those gathered at the camp are Moslems, the Ethiopian Red Cross organized a "food for work" program for 18 men and four women who cleanse the bodies of the dead and recite prayers according to Islamic ritual. Each receives 5.5 pounds of wheat every three days and a blanket in exchange for their labor.

The camp's 32 fulltime gravediggers receive similar payment.

"Yesterday, my uncle was buried and today three of my nieces," said Saeed Mohamed, 65, a gravedigger for 30 years.

"I helped bury 1,000 in the past month — not less than that. Sometimes relatives of the dead give us bread and coffee. Sometimes I eat nothing.

"Our problem is the hunger," he added through an interpreter. "We don't have the energy. I am working to dig my own grave."

Red Cross Nurse Says Ethiopia Is 'Heart-Rending'

BATI, Ethiopia (AP) — "I have never seen so many people die before. Some have died in my arms."

Sigridur Gudmundsdottir, 30, a Red Cross nurse from Reykjavik, Iceland, was talking about being here in an emergency feeding center for victims of Ethiopia's drought and famine.

She said she previously had worked with refugees in neighboring Somalia and on the Cambodian-Thailand border and came to Ethiopia in October from Reykjavik where she specialized in care for overweight coronary patients.

This has been her most heart-rending job.

"We try to put feelings aside because we are no good if we are just crying over the situation," Ms. Gudmundsdottir she said in an interiew.

To make things worse for her and other foreign nurses and relief workers, some mothers refuse to bring the sickest children into the hospital tent for treatment.

"I don't know whether it's their culture, or she (the mother) has just given up on the child, or whether she is forced by nature to make a decision about which child to bring up because she doesn't have enough food and she chooses the more healthy one," she said.

The Red Cross nurses make daily checks of the 288 tents for the neglected and dying children and take them to the hospital tent for feeding.

"Of the many deaths I have seen, the one that affected me most was that of a woman who walked three days without food to bring in her baby. In the feeding tent, she started to eat some porridge and suddenly died," Ms. Gudmundsdottir said.

"When the body was carried out, the 50 mothers there all stood up. They really showed respect for her, although dying is now commonplace.

"They cried very quietly and you could see tears on their cheeks. Amazing! Even though these people are poor they have their pride.

"It's very bad, depressing. But there's something very good — when you see a very malnourished child and then three weeks later it leaves as a healthy child."

Mexicans Felt Gas Depot Was 'Time Bomb'

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN IXHUATEPEC, Mexico (AP) — Ever since the state petroleum monopoly set up a storage and distribution facility for home gas here in 1968, residents felt they were living with a time bomb.

The warnings were everywhere — yellow signs with skull-and-crossbones and the warning, "High-pressure pipes underneath, do not blast, do not drill."

They were placed every 50 feet or so along the streets, marking where three underground pipelines snaked in from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pemex plant outside Mexico City.

"The smell of gas was always in the air," Isidro Hernandez, an ice-cream parlor owner, said the other day. "In the subconscious, we knew something horrible would happen sooner or later. It was a time bomb."

The bomb went off Monday, Nov. 19, at 5:42 a.m.

At least 13 explosions rocked the low-hill valley of San Juan Ixhuatepec, on the northern edge of Mexico City, where the town nestles by the Los Remedios River — an open sewer for industrial wastes.

Huge balls of flaming gas and white-hot steel shards shot into the air.

An airplane pilot approaching Mexico City's international airport, six miles to the southeast, said flames rose a mile. The gray dawn sky turned a dull orange all the way to the south side of the capital, 17 miles away.

One-third of San Juanico, as this community of 250,000 people is called, was devastated. According to the latest government report to President Miguel de la Madrid, 452 people were killed and 4,248 burned or injured.

About 180 families were left homeless, and 100,000 people had to evacuate the area for a time.

It was the one of the world's worst gas explosions on record.

Going up in flames were 80,000 barrels of liquid petroleum gas — a mixture of propane and butane — filling to capacity six huge spherical tanks and 40 cyclindrical tanks called "sausages."

Because Mexico is in an earthquake zone, the distribution of natural gas by pipe is dangerous. So Pemex, the state oil monopoly, sold the liquid petroleum gas to half a dozen private companies that trucked it in small cylinders to buildings and homes.

Residents here bitterly recall "a number" of previous accidents at the San Juanico plant.

"I remember the last one," said Hernandez in his ice-cream parlor. "It was last March, on March 22, at around 9 p.m., when there was a big fire at the Pemex plant, but no explosion. We all ran out of our houses like mad. The fire brigade put it out; there were no victims. But we never got an explanation as to what happened."

German Antonio Cortes, who with two brothers has a coffin factory; Demetrio Cruz Munoz, 56, owner of the local bicycle repair shop, and the Rev. Alejandro Perez, a Roman Catholic priest, all say San Juanico has been living with the fear of a ticking time bomb.

In separate interviews, they all said the first thing that crossed their minds when the first explosion woke them up, was that the Pemex plant had blown up.

"The door rattling woke me up ... and, when I saw the sky light up, I immediately thought to myself: 'Oh, my God! The plant has gone up!'" said Perez, who lives two miles away.

He is now temporarily replacing the Rev. Abel de la Cruz at the San Juan Roman Catholic Church, who suffered a nervous breakdown tending the victims.

Spray painted slogans on the town's fire-blackened walls attest to the bitterness: "Fuera Pemex" — "Pemex get out."

The life in this working people's community has been completely dislocated.

"A huge ball of fire descending from the sky" wrecked Cortes' little plant, destroying 200 coffins, he recalls now. A section of a "sausage" tank lay in the patio of the police station next door, 1½ miles from the plant.

Cruz Munoz's bicycle-repair shop was intact, but the houses on each side of it were badly damaged.

Only half of the 1,400 students registered showed up for classes at the Abundio Gomez grammar school when it reopened Nov. 30. The same was true of the other grammar school and at the No. 24 High School.

About 130 of the homeless families were moved to government housing projects elsewhere in the capital. Some 50,000 of the evacuees refuse to return, still fearing for their lives.

But not Victoria Soriano Roja, 29.

"I came back and I stay," she said, as she and her six children poked through the rubble that was once their home, a two-room, cinder-block shack with a tin roof that she and her husband built three years ago by a spur of railroad track, 200 yards from the plants.

"I was cooking breakfast when I heard a bang and I thought our gas cylinder had exploded," Mrs. Soriano said.

But she said her husband, Tomas Soriano Viloria, 59, who loads and unloads cylinders on Gasomatico trucks for the equivalent of $100 a week, knew better and rushed the family out to safety.

"He saved our lives," Mrs. Soriano said. "The lady next door, she was also cooking breakfast. And they found her dead, completely burned, standing over the stove on the kitchen table. They were all dead, frozen in their places."

Asked why they lived so close to the plants knowing they were risking their lives, Mrs. Soriano shrugged; "What do you want us to do? There is no housing. Everything is so expensive, and there is just no money."

Poison Candy Plot Frustrates Japanese

BY EUGENE MOOSA
Associated Press Writer

KOBE, Japan (AP) — It began with a group of masked kidnappers, brazenly abducting a company president from his bath. It got more attention when the man suddenly reappeared, safe, unharmed and claiming that he had escaped.

Then came the terrifying discovery of cyanide-laced candy on store shelves, and a frantic nationwide investigation by police — as anonymous letters to newspapers mocked and ridiculed their efforts.

The case known in Japan as "The Man with 21 Faces" is a sinister reprise of the 1982 Tylenol affair in the United States in which seven people died from cyanide placed in bottles of the pain-killing drug.

No one is known to have actually been poisoned in Japan, but the motive — extortion — is the same. It also has proved as puzzling for the authorities here as was the Tylenol case, which remains unresolved.

After eight months, and despite special surveillance by a force of 50,000 officers, Japanese police apparently still have no solid leads to the identity of the mysterious "21 Faces" gang which seeks to extort money from large food manufacturing companies.

As far as is known, the criminals have not actually obtained any money from the 27 companies they are reported to have threatened.

That no one has died stems largely from the fact that the plotters attach warning notes to boxes of poisoned candy left on supermarket shelves, mostly in the Western cities of Osaka and Kobe.

The case, however, has enthralled the Japanese public and especially experts on criminal behavior.

"They have attracted the most number of policemen, as much as a fifth of the country's entire police force. They are the first ones to fully utilize the effects of mass media, making a fool out of police for repeated blunders," Hiroaki Iwai, professor of criminology at Toyo University, said in an interview.

Some theorists say the gang's careful planning and apparent grasp of police operations suggests radical leftists. Others envision ties to the violence-prone yakuza, or Japanese mafia, and still others speculate that the culprits are disgruntled former employees of the companies.

Police say there are at least three plotters, and believe the peculiar pseudonym used in the letters comes from "The Man with 20 Faces," a popular magazine series of 30-40 years ago about an elusive thief. The author's pen name, "Edogawa Rampo," was a linguistic play on the name of Edgar Allan Poe.

The gang's letters to news media have alluded to Sherlock Holmes and the idea of sending them appears to have come from Edogawa's own stories.

The case broke last March 18 when Katsuhisa Ezaki, president of Ezaki Glico Co., Ltd., a major confection maker, was kidnapped from his bathtub by two masked men who invaded his home in Nishinomiya, near Kobe.

The kidnappers demanded ransom of 1 billion yen ($4.08 million) and 100 kilograms (220 pounds) of gold, but never called with instructions for payment. Three days later, Ezaki turned up safe, saying he had escaped but apparently unable to offer police much information on his abductors.

In April, the group struck again, setting fire to Glico buildings and cars, and demanding 60 million yen ($24,000), which as far as is known was not paid.

In a letter to Osaka's news media, the group offered "clues" to their identity and hints of their next move. Like 10 other letters which were to follow, it ridiculed the police for incompetence.

In May, the group claimed to have placed two boxes of cyanide-laced Glico candies in stores and threatened to place more unless the firm paid 120 million yen ($48,000). Supermarkets took the products off shelves, but no poisoned candy was found.

In late May, the group hiked its demands to 300 million yen ($1.22 million).

This time Glico agreed to pay, but a scheduled rendezvous fizzled when the extortionists, having used an innocent decoy as a contact man, eluded a police trap by not showing up. In a subsequent letter, they mocked police for having "poorly disguised" the operation.

On June 25, the "Man with 21 Faces" abruptly called off the war on Glico, citing "boredom" with the cat-and-mouse game. The company and the police deny that Glico had made any deal.

After a three-month break, the extortionists were back, with a new target — the big Morinaga and Co. Ltd., confection maker.

This time, the gang showed it was more serious: When Morinaga refused a demand for 100 million yen ($408,000), the group placed 17 packages of poisoned Morinaga candies in supermarkets on Oct. 7.

Attached to each was a memo, written in the distinctive Osaka dialect, saying "Danger. Contains poison. You'll die if you eat this." Inside were candies laced with a lethal dose of sodium cyanide.

Morinaga products vanished from store shelves and the company cut production by 90 percent, acknowledging a loss of 8 billion yen ($32.6 million) and laying off its 450 part-time workers.

Because the gang's moves have come only on weekends, police deployed special weekend patrols in stores, using 50,000 police officers each time.

More than a million people have dialed special numbers set up by police to offer information, but there have been no arrests, and authorities are frustrated, embarrassed — and increasingly close-mouthed.

"Obviously, we're not going to tell you what leads we're following," said one detective. "And we're not answering the abuses in those letters. The only thing is that we must catch these guys — and we will."

E. Germans See Credit Improving

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East Germany's credit rating has improved to such an extent that Western bankers now regard it as the second-best loan risk in the East bloc after the Soviet Union, West German government officials report.

The development is part of a general trend towards more East German self-sufficiency, both political and economic, that has increased the country's standing in the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, the officials say.

But they warn against expecting too much independence from a more self-confident East Germany. Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany said earlier this year that Communist-governed Eastern sector "has room to manuever within a fenced-off area" — meaning that Moscow has ultimate authority.

East Germany nearly doubled its assets in European banks outside of West Germany between mid-1983 and the mid-1984, while decreasing its net indebtedness, according to financial statistics.

These East German assets jumped from $2.4 billion in June 1983 to $4.2 billion in June 1984, according to the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, which keeps track of world debt and world economic development.

A 1981 decision to slash imports and step up exports appears to be the main explanation for the increase in East German assets, said an official at the Intra-German Relations Ministry, who like others interviewed spoke only on condition of anonymity.

East Germany's net indebtedness to the same banks dropped from $5.5 billion to $4.2 billion in the same period.

The assets would be sufficient to pay off East Germany's net debt of $3.6 billion to West German banks, or the estimated $3 billion it owes to the Soviet Union, the Bonn officials noted.

"There's an argument that says they could pay off their debts to the Soviets and then tell them to get lost," said one Bonn official.

Opposition Says Sandinistas Will Keep Political Channels Open Following Election Acts

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Opposition leaders say they believe the Sandinista government will try to keep open the limited channels for political participation established for the recent election campaign.

Their comments in separate interviews were made despite some signs — especially related to censorship — of a crackdown in connection with a state of alert declared because of what the leftist government said was the threat of a U.S. invasion.

The Sandinistas' came away with a clear victory in the Nov. 4 election intended to legitimize their five-year rule. The effect was diluted, however, because the major opposition group did not participate, saying concessions on censorship and freedom of assembly still were inadequate for a free and open campaign.

Opposition leaders have been meeting with the leftist Sandinista government in a so-called "national dialogue" aimed at easing internal tensions. Some expect Daniel Ortega, currently the governing junta's coordinator, to give opposition leaders minor posts in his Cabinet when he is sworn in as president Jan. 10.

Ortega was elected with 61 percent of the 1.1 million popular votes. His Sandinista National Liberation Front also took 61 of the 96 National Assembly seats in the elections.

The dialogue includes the six opposition parties that participated in the elections as well as the anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, an alliance of political parties, labor and business groups that boycotted the election.

"There is still optimism in the opposition that solutions can be worked out," said Virgilio Godoy, president of the Liberal Independent Party.

Godoy, who withdrew his presidential candidacy a week before the elections, said the Sandinista victory maintained the party's solid grip on power, but did not take away a need to maintain some degree of political pluralism.

"No government can survive by simply creating problems and not solving any," he said.

But the leaders interviewed also said that hardliners in the government could try to take advantage of fears of a U.S. invasion to force the opposition to side with the Sandinistas or face accusations of treason.

While Ortega's inauguration is not expected to dramatically alter the Sandinista leadership, one prominent opposition leader said the moderating influence of Ortega could increase after he takes office. The leader spoke on condition he not be identified.

Opposition leader Arturo Cruz, the presidential candidate of the Democratic Coordinate before the decision to boycott, recently urged the Reagan administration to give Ortega a grace period.

Members of the opposition have continued to meet with government leaders in a dialogue that began two weeks before the elections.

According to three opposition leaders involved in the talks, the 12 opposition parties, ranging from the far-left Popular Action Movement to the Conservative Party, have agreed to try to push the Sandinistas to accept concessions aimed at giving them a greater voice in the future.

They are demanding that the parties in the dialogue be given the power to instruct the newly elected National Assembly to write a constitution that guarantees political pluralism and a mixed economy.

They are also demanding the assembly — elected for a six-year term — call new general elections for late 1985.

The Sandinista front is expected to reject both options in principle, but opposition leaders say their unanimity may force the Sandinistas to provide some concessions or face political isolation within the country.

The opposition leaders said they viewed as a concession the fact that the Sandinistas were at least willing to continue the dialogue.

Aside from the threat of stepped up attacks by U.S.-supported rebels, the Sandinistas are faced with an economy expected to hit an all-time low in 1985, with growing food shortages, foreign debt and trade imbalances.

"I think we are seeing a change in their point of view from the one-party state to one party's hegemony within the state," Godoy said. "For various reasons, it is impossible in Nicaragua for there to be a one-party state."

"I think they are looking toward the Mexican model," said Erick Ramirez, president of the Social Christian Party, a member of the coordinate. "They want a parliamentarian regime, but an authoritarian one."

RARE BREED — Mei-Lin, a Chinese Sham pers, peers out over the top of her 8-week-old pups. They are owned by Edward and Dortohy Serrano of Greenwood, Del. The owners said the breed is one of the world's rarest. The pups are Tam-Sham, Bam Boosie, Ding-Ding-Ding and Egg Roll. (AP Laserphoto)

Legal Precedent May Block Union Carbide Suit In U.S.

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers filing multibillion-dollar claims against Union Carbide over last week's Bhopal, India, poisonous gas disaster may encounter problems getting their cases heard in an American court.

"Our initial research has shown there should be nothing to prohibit" the suits from being tried in courts in the United States, said George Misko, a Washington lawyer with a firm representing some of those with claims against Union Carbide.

But a 1981 Supreme Court ruling could pose a serious obstacle to efforts to place the suits before an American jury.

The high court ruled three years ago that those filing damage claims arising from an overseas accident are not entitled automatically to a trial here just because the U.S. legal system is likely to treat their case more favorably.

The 1981 decision stemmed from an air crash in Scotland of a plane manufactured in Pennsylvania.

A federal judge in that state, ruling that it was more convenient to try the case in Scotland, threw out the suit by relatives of several Scottish citizens killed in the crash.

The Supreme Court said the judge acted properly. In a 5-2 opinion with two justices not taking part, the court said it was reasonable to assume that trying the case in Great Britain presented fewer problems than trying it in the United States.

The fact that U.S. courts and juries might be more favorable to the plaintiffs was not a good enough reason to try the case here, the court said.

Peter Raven-Hansen, a law professor at George Washington University, said the case may have a bearing on the Bhopal disaster in which at least 2,000 people died and tens of thousands were injured in a Dec. 3 leak of a deadly gas, methyl isocyanate, from the Union Carbide plant.

Raven-Hansen, who said he was not familiar with the details of the Indian case, said the 1981 Supreme Court ruling makes it difficult to force a trial here of a foreign case.

"The first thing to consider is whether there is an open court elsewhere," he said. "It might be different if it were the Soviet Union. But the Indian courts are modeled on the British system and are supposed to be open."

If You Could See What I See

The French seer Michel de Notredame — better known as Nostradamus — was born on this day in 1503. Many of his 1,000 prophecies came to him as he stared at a bowl of water. Some seem amazingly accurate. He gave the year of the Great Fire of London, and even referred to Franco and the Spanish Civil War. When he died in 1566, a plate engraved with a number was buried with him. In 1700, his coffin was moved. Inside, on his skeleton, was that plate — marked "1700."

DO YOU KNOW — Which horrible event in 1945 did Nostradamus predict?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Irving Berlin wrong the song "White Christmas."

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, DEC., 15, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is no day to take any chances for illusive and confused conditions can be very much in the picture, and you need to know actual and true facts, which may be hard to obtain.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Unless you are alert you will find that co-workers could upset production badly, so use care. The evening is best for recreation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure you count the cost for any amusements you have in mind, or you will later regret extravagance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may not find it easy to come to an understanding with family, so try to understand their views better.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Much care must be exercised in driving in order to avoid possible accidents. Listen carefully to what others say.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be most careful in handling any financial affairs otherwise you could lose a good deal of money. Drive carefully this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You want to get everything in fine working order around you, but don't rush otherwise you could make costly errors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You want to run away from limiting conditions, but don't tread on the toes of others in so doing. Use tact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A friend may be out of sorts today and criticize you, so laugh and let it go at that. Later avoid a group for recreation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use much tact in the business world today and keep out of trouble. Don't jeopardize your good name.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Some new plan needs more study before you get it in motion, since there are bound to be small errors n it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't get uptight about some account which seems exorbitant to you, but study it further and you will know exactly what is best.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) An associate may not be very understanding today, but keep mum, and tomorrow all will be well again. Seek entertainment tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will always have to study matters thoroughly since there is a tendency here to see things in rose-colored hues which are not practical or what they seem to be. However, your progeny would do well as an artist or whatever profession requires vision and imagery.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

If you look at all four hands, it would seem that declarer must lose three tricks in the minor suits and a trump at his contract of four hearts. But a bit of legerdemain, or sound technique if you prefer, allowed South to succeed.

The auction was routine. With prime values, South naturally preferred a suit contract to three no trump, even though the latter would have been a sounder contract as the cards lie. Perhaps North should have bid three no trump at his second turn, rather than giving South a choice of contracts.

West led a spade, and declarer was not enamored of his chances. Since he had three sure losers in the minor suits, he had to avoid losing a trump trick. One hope was that a defender had started with Q-J bare, but that was considerably against the odds. A more reasonable line was to try to force the opponents to open trumps for him.

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the king, cashed the ace and ruffed a spade in hand. He cashed the ace and king of diamonds and led dummy's last spade. If East ruffed, declarer would discard his diamond loser and his problem in trumps would be solved. So East sluffed a club. Declarer ruffed, cashed the ace of clubs and exited with a club.

The defenders could take their minor-suit tricks, but then they would be in trouble. If East won the last trick, he would be down to three trumps and would have to lead one. By playing for split honors, declarer would always be able to pick up the trumps. If West won, he would still have a diamond to lead, but whether East ruffed high or low, the contract would still be made by relying again on split honors. Try it if you don't believe us.

Bishops Back Youths Strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Roman Catholic church officials say three bishops in southern Poland are supporting a strike by hundreds of vocational school students and their parents who are protesting the removal of crucifixes from the school.

"The parents and children demand that the crucifixes be replaced. We believe that this proper demand of the Catholic parents and youths should be fulfilled," said Bishop Stanislaw Szymecki and two auxiliary bishops in the provincial capital of Keilce.

About 300 students, 100 parents and two local priests have occupied the 700-pupil school in Wloszczowa, 155 miles south of Warsaw, since Dec. 3. The students arrived at the building that day and found school authorities had removed the crosses they put up two days earlier.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said authorities were determined to enforce the ban on crosses in state-run schools, citing Polish laws providing for the separation of church and state.

Urban on Tuesday accused the local priests in Wloszczowa of inciting "fanatic emotions" and "intolerance" among the local youth. He said the government does not want a "war of the crosses" with the influential Roman Catholic church, but accused some priests of engaging in "militant clericalism."

Szymecki and the two auxiliary bishops ordered prayers said in all churches of the diocese to support the Wloszczowa protest.

The bishops cited a statement issued last March by the Polish episcopate supporting a similar protest by students at an agricultural high school near the eastern town of Garwolin. Classes there were suspended for more than a month.

"The parents take under consideration the goodness of their children and grant them as well as the priests solicitous care," the bishops said. "They also guard the order around the school so as to avoid any disturbance of the peace about which we are so anxious."

Violence Casts Doubt On India's Future

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Assaults on democratic institutions, communal violence, army interventions and the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi have raised the question of the strength of India's democracy.

"Democracy has a bright future in India. It is invigorating itself with every election," insists Ram Krishna Trivedi, chief commissioner of the country's eighth general election since independence from Great Britain in 1947.

A staggering 370 million of India's 730 million people will be eligible to cast ballots late this month.

A number of respected political commentators and academics recently interviewed in the Indian capital tend, with some reservations, to share the commissioner's optimism. Seen as the greatest potential threat is an insurgency that would fuel a rightist surge in the name of India's unity and end in an army take-over.

The traditionally apolitical, 1.2-million-strong army has, by government account, been called out of the barracks more than 370 times in the past four years, often to quell civil disturbances.

Most recently, troops were ordered to end Sikh-Hindu carnage following the Oct. 31 assassination of Mrs. Gandhi by two of her security men who were identified as members of India's Sikh minority.

"Army commanders are human: ask them to save the civilian administration time after time and they will begin to get ideas... Military rule is no longer unthinkable," wrote the news magazine Imprint, labeling the current state of affairs as "the politics of uncertainty."

Another common theme among independent observers is the erosion of democratic institutions during Mrs. Gandhi's 15 years at the helm and uncertainty whether her successor and son Rajiv Gandhi, a 40-year-old former airline pilot, will have the power, ability and desire to make necessary changes.

The last few years of Mrs. Gandhi's tenure saw an unprecedented concentration of power in the executive and the prime minister's "kitchen cabinet," an emasculation of Parliament and its ruling Congress Party and the toppling or attempts at toppling key opponents through at best questionable constitutional means.

V. Tarkunde, a prominent lawyer and civil rights leader, said Mrs. Gandhi packed courts with pliable supporters rather than follow a tradition of allowing the judiciary to appoint judges. He also cited curbs on the press, misuse of government-controlled television and radio and a law of preventive detention in government-declared "terrorist areas."

"Mrs. Gandhi left a legacy of ruins," said Arun Shourie, one of India's top political writers. "But her departure opened the way for reform. Her mastery of a corrupt and venal system was so great that even attempts at reform were impossible."

Shourie said he sees Gandhi's Congress Party winning the coming parliamentary elections, but then fragmenting under inadequate leadership. This, he said, would foster the rise of leaders long held in check by Mrs. Gandhi and, it is hoped, a democratic revitalization.

But, he warned: "There is also a popular urge for army rule because people no longer look to the government for development, justice or even physical security. One day, two or three generals may just decide to run things."

Dr. Yogindra Singh, a leading sociologist, maintained that the debasement of democracy could not be blamed solely on Mrs. Gandhi.

The government structure, he said, has come under tremendous pressure in recent years from a slew of new, powerful interest groups and from rapid socio-economic change. Key institutions have failed to change and cope.

Democracy, he believes, is not on an irreversible slide downwards but rather passing through a stage similar to the era of machine politics in the United States during the 1920s and 1930s, with its attendant big bossism and corruption. It has shed the democratic idealism of India's struggle for independence and the early years of the republic.

India, he said, cannot afford not to have democracy. A rigid, authoritarian central regime could not accommodate the country's incredible variety — seven religions, 33 major languages, striking regional differences. Without the give-and-take of a democratic structure, India's unity would be shattered.

Tarkunde said it would be harder for a dictator to take over today than a decade ago, largely because more Indians have acquired political educations and grass-roots movements fostering civil rights and democracy have spread across the country.

When Mrs. Gandhi trampled democratic procedure to oust N.T. Rama Rao, a popular movement got him re-instated as chief minister of Andhra Pradesh state earlier this year, Tarkunde said.

Another "litmus test" of Indian democracy, he said, was Mrs. Gandhi's own decision to lift the 1975-77 emergency, when thousands were jailed for political reasons. She lost the next election.

"Our liberties are fragile, and they must be fought for, for democracy won't blossom on its own," Tarkunde said. "But if we can keep it another 15 years or so, I think we'll be safe."

Slogans

A small boy looks on as supporters of the ruling Congress Party write the name of the party's candidate on a wall in Calcutta recently. India, the world's largest democracy, goes to the polls later this month to elect the national parliament. Nearly 6,700 candates will seek the Parliament's 515 seats. (AP Laserphoto)

Professor Seeks Best Tree Ever

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — A Northwest Arkansas professor attempting to clone the perfect Christmas tree said his Yuletide research eventually could mean a year-round cash bonanza to the nation's timber industry.

Feng Huang, a professor of plant genetic engineering at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, said the same research used to produce a thousand copies of a nicely shaped tree also could be applied to produce thousands of disease-free trees resistant to insect infestation.

"In our area, Scotch Pine is a very popular Christmas tree. But Christmas trees. generally speaking, vary from the model tree to the next generation. The next generation may not be as good looking as the first," Huang said.

Since 1979, when the native of Taiwan began teaching at the university, Huang has spliced, diced and bombarded Scotch pine seeds, cuttings and seedlings with variations of light and temperature in his laboratory. In nearby pots are growing small plants born of his mutant tree tissues.

"This type of propagation is very difficult. Pine trees are all kind of a hybrid," he said. "It's all very difficult."

"If we can improve the regeneration rate, then maybe one day we can put it in large-scale commercial propagation," he said.

Huang said he is trying to uncover the control mechanisms within the genes of the trees to determine how tissues are formed. That is the key to easier manipulation of the cells, he said. The work also could lead to more understanding of how plant cells work. A future side effect would be more progress in efforts to prevent and cure plant diseases, he said.

Huang said he is the only scientist in the United States concentrating his research on Scotch pines, but that research is under way in Europe, where Scotch pines also are a favorite Christmas season purchase.

His research could prove a boon to the timber industry, he said.

"We've lost millions and millions of dollars because of tree disease," he said. Insects also have proved a costly hazard of the business.

"Many Southern pines are very easily attacked by beetles," he said.

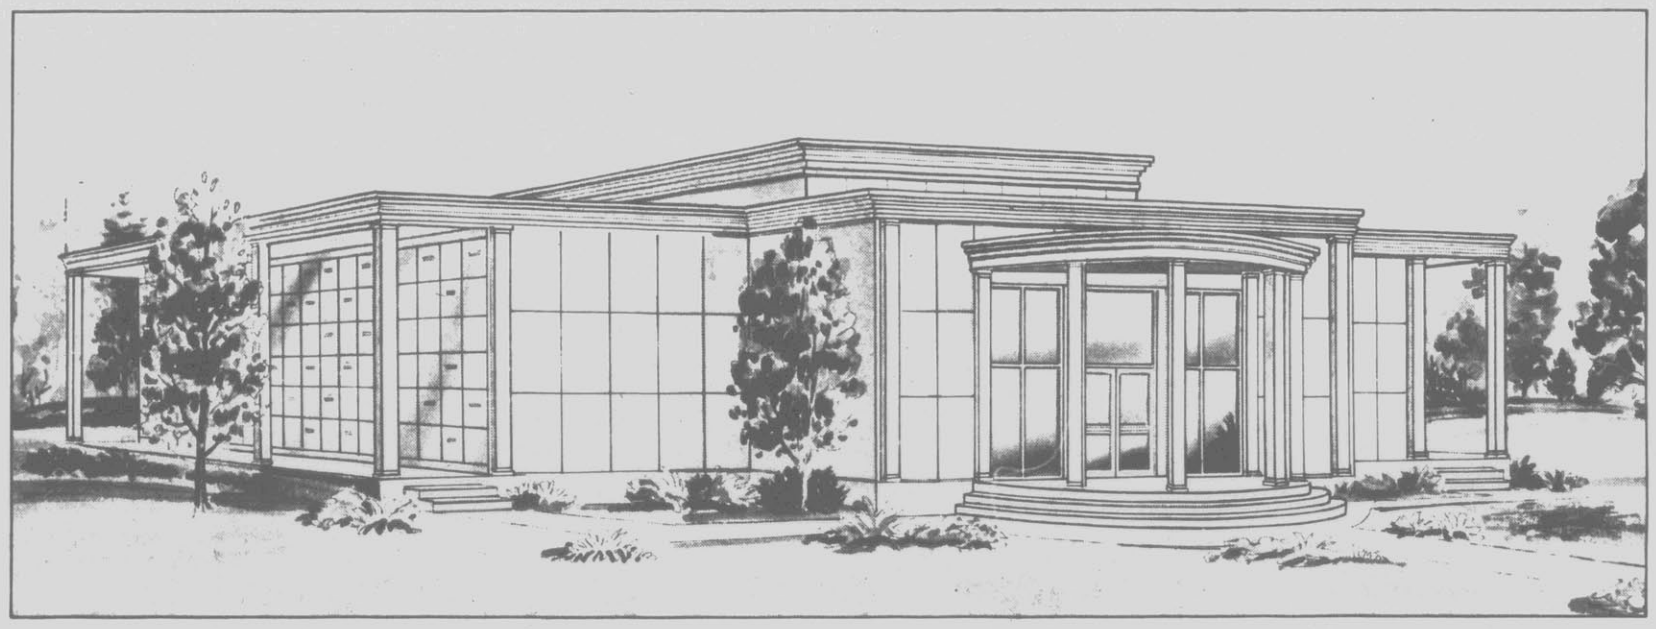

"If we can select individual trees which are resistant to these diseases or insect attacks, that would be of great value."
