PCMH Orders Work For Air Ambulance

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital administration was authorized Tuesday night to begin work on contracts for a helicopter "air ambulance" service for the hospital.

The hospital has budgeted $754,119 for the service this year, with $422,000 expected to be spent on a lease arrangement and $304,000 on personnel.

Fred Brown, hospital executive vice president, speaking to the executive committee which met before the board meeting, explained how the full amount expended is expected to be recouped through per flight charges ($220 was noted as a possible reasonable price) and through increased hospital revenue due to the additional patients that will be brought here from outlying areas and the number of people who will live instead of dying (20 percent survival of all transported is projected) due to faster treatment in critical situations. The service will be used to bring critically ill and injured persons into the hospital and to take specialized medical personnel to the location of the person in need.

Brown told the executive committee and the full board that the state of North Carolina has been looking at the possibility of starting a statewide service through its Emergency Medical Services program. He and trustee Robert Hackney, however, said they believe the state program is at least 18 months away from being approved and funded by the Legislature. Brown said the PCMH program is planned to easily dovetail with the state program when and if it is explained that the emphasis now is not on problem solving, but on planned and systematic monitoring of all activity with quality patient care as the prime intent. Quality assurance plans are important for continued approval by the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals and the program is formatted to comply with JCMH standards and procedures, Dr. West said.

Three participants in the hospital's Management Trainees' Program were introduced. They are Derrie Land, now in nursing; Barbara Battle, now in purchasing; and Gail Stephens, now in rehabilitation. Elroy Farrar, the fourth participant, was not present due to other work commitment. Each of the four is engaged in a 12-month program of training to be a member of the hospital's management team. Each is assigned to five different areas of work and have specific projects to complete in each. Ms. Land and Ms. Stevens have already begun and Ms. Battle and Farrar will begin soon.

Dr. Thomas F. O'Brien Jr. and Dr. John D. Rose were welcomed by the board. They will be attending meetings for the coming year, since Dr. O'Brien is the newly elected chief of the medical staff and Dr. Rose is the chief-of-staff-elect. Dr. Jack Wilkerson was presented a plaque of appreciation for his work since January, as chief of staff.

Dr. William Laupus, East Carolina University School of Medicine dean, reported that screening of medical school applicants is under way with 560 or so North Carolina applicants

Zoning Board Reverses Ruling On Tar River Plan

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday reversed a previous ruling on a rezoning request made by the Tar River Neighborhood Association.

Commission members, acting on a City Council request to re-address its previous recommendation of a proposal to rezone a portion of the Tar River neighborhood from high density residential (R-6) to single family residential (R-6S), approved by a vote of 7-2 a recommendation to designate a 90-acre portion of the neighborhood as a residential neighborhood revitalization district (R-6N).

Commissioners opposing the revised proposal were Dr. Wallace Woolees and Dr. Chuck Ziehr. Commissioners approving the proposal included Rufus Keel, Les Turner, Dennis Alexander, Jim Ward, Burney Warren and Willie Pate.

The request to rezone from R-6 to R-6S was scheduled for consideration by the City Council in its September session. However, the council elected to continue the request until alternatives to R-6S could be developed. Council approval of the rezoning request at that time would have blocked reconstruction of duplex and multifamily dwellings located within the 90-acre portion of the neighborhood encompassed by the request should those dwellings be destroyed by fire or other disaster.

According to city planning department officials, the alternative R-6N designation will discourage increases in duplex and multifamily development in the area as would have the R-6S designation. However, zoning the 90-acre area R-6N would allow reconstruction of existing duplex and multifamily structures if they were destroyed.

Increases in duplex and multifamily development, planning officials said, would be limited under the R-6N designation by assigning development percentages within the area. Development percentages approved for recommendation by the commission included limiting area composition of duplex and multifamily dwellings to 14 percent. Single family dwellings would constitute the remaining 86 percent.

Tar River Neighborhood Association President Inez Fridley said her organization felt R-6N designation would meet the needs of single family owners within the district as well as safeguard the rights of individuals owning rental property in the neighborhood. No one owning rental property spoke at the meeting.

In other business, commission members recommended approval of a plan for revitalization, conservation and development in the Greenville central city area. The revitalization plan, planning officials said, would go hand-in-hand with the developing Evergreen project designed to set up a low interest loan pool to enable revitalization of the central city area.

Evergreen, a non-profit development corporation, has been working on the loan program over the past year. The program is slated for implementation in early 1985 and

U.S. Economy Maintains Growth At Snail's Pace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, as sluggish at yearend as it was robust when 1984 began, is expanding at an annual rate of just 2.8 percent in the final quarter, preliminary government figures indicated today.

Growth for all of 1984 will still be very strong at about 6.7 percent — the biggest gain since a similar increase in 1955 — as had been assured by the surging expansion in the first half of the year, according to the Commerce Department report.

However, in the fourth quarter alone, the economy grew at a pace little better than the 1.6 percent annual rate of the third quarter, which itself had been the slowest since 1982. The figures are for inflation-adjusted gross national product, the broadest gauge of U.S. economic activity.

Today's report revised the third-quarter figure downward from the 1.9 percent rate estimated one month earlier.

Business expansion since mid-year has been so meager that some economists have dubbed current conditions a "growth recession" — little better than the declining GNP that would mean an actual business recession.

In good news, though, the report also included an estimate that prices — as measured by a GNP-linked index — were rising at a low 2.9 percent annual rate in the fourth quarter, which would mean a modest 1984 increase of 3.8 percent, the same as last year.

The figures were contained in the government's "flash report," estimating fourth-quarter economic activity on the basis of only partial statistics through November and hardly any for December. The numbers, subject to later revision, are also adjusted to discount for normal seasonal variations.

Total GNP, before adjustment for inflation, is rising $52.6 billion to a record rate of $3.747 trillion for the economy as a whole in the fourth quarter, the report estimated. After adjustment for inflation, the fourth-quarter increase would be $11.5 billion, to a rate of $1.657 trillion.

Other than those totals, the report does not give actual growth figures for the fourth quarter. But it said American businesses' final sales would be improved from the third quarter. And it said the GNP drain caused by foreign imports wouldn't be as bad.

Those gains, however, would be nearly canceled by a slowdown in production going into inventory stockpiles, an indication that many companies had overestimated the recovery's continuing strength and had stocked up more goods than they could sell this fall.

Many economists have said the economy has seemed to be showing new strength in recently released November figures for retail sales and personal income and spending. And they are predicting faster GNP growth in the first quarter of next year.

However, none is predicting figures that would challenge the annual rates of 10.1 percent and 7.1 percent that occurred in the first two quarters of 1984.

The jobless rate in November was 7.2 percent of the civilian labor force.

Bank Merger OK'd

C.D. Langston, president of First State Bank of Winterville, said that shareholders of the bank today approved a merger with the Raleigh-based First Citizens Bank.

Langston said the merger, which is subject to regulatory approval, should be completed next spring. He said no changes in personnel at First State Bank are anticipated.

Langston said that under terms of the merger, First State shareholders may elect to receive $145 in cash or 12 percent unsecured subordinated notes with annual maturities of up to seven years based on $145 per share, or any equivalent combination.

First Citizens reported assets of $2.071 billion and deposits of $1.789 billion on Sept. 30, while First State Bank reported assets of $49.1 million and deposits of $42.9 million.

First Citizens, subsidiary of First Citizens Corp., serves 60 North Carolina counties with 269 offices in 127 towns. First State has three offices in Greenville and one in Winterville.

Be Aware Of Holiday Blues
Holiday time is supposed to be a happy time — yet some people find themselves lonely and isolated — even when there's lots of activity swirling around. Why?

In some cases it may be high expectations — demanding more from holiday activities than they can possibly provide.

In other cases it might be frustration of trying to do too much. Usually at holiday time there's an increased need for communication, organization, rules and regulations.

In addition, there are certain symbolic expressions that are part of our holiday festivities. If a person isn't accustomed to this type of expression he may feel lonely or isolated.

And the holidays may cause economic strain for some. People who don't have the money for gifts or festivities either go into debt or feel frustrated.

Going into debt adds up to anxiety during the holidays and depression when the bills come due.

However, some holiday blues can be lifted if family members and friends are alert. Try to notice if someone is more quiet than usual. If so go to him. Include him in everything that's going on. Sometimes people don't realize the blues are lurking in the background until tempers flare or someone is crying.

So during these busy times check signals with your family and friends often. And listen to what they're trying to tell you.

Taking Care of Poinsettias

Your Christmas poinsettia should retain its beauty for many weeks, that is, if you take good care of it. So here are some suggestions on how you can extend the beauty of your poinsettia.

First, place your poinsettia in the sunniest portion of your room.

Next avoid cold drafts from doorways or excess heat from television sets, radiators or heating ducts.

Also water your plant thoroughly when it needs water. Make sure a small amount of the water drips through the drainage holes of the container.

If your poinsettia had decorative foil wrapped around it, you'll need to punch a hole in the foil beneath the pot to allow excess water to escape. To prevent water damage to your furniture place the plant container on a saucer.

To retain the bright color of your bracts, keep your poinsettia at a temperature no higher than 70 degrees. Cooler temperatures are even better — that is if the temperature does not dip below 50 degrees.

One more thought. If you're going to try to keep your poinsettia for a couple of months, you'll need to fertilize it. Use a soluble complete fertilizer such as 20-20-20 twice each month.

Common Sense Gifts

The joy of Christmas comes from being with friends and family and from expressing the spirit of Christmas through sharing with those most needy.

I hope that's Christmas at your house. Or does your family emphasize the commercial side of the holidays — trying to top last year's gifts?

This year try a common sense Christmas — that's one where you've planned ahead recognizing the limits of time, energy and money.

These questions might help you get started. First, what personal needs of others can you help to alleviate? Is there someone nearby who is lonely and depressed?

What do you already have in abundance that you can share with others? When can you put your plans into action?

Here are some giving ideas you might consider: Babysit for a young mother so she go shopping; take an older person shopping, offer sleeping space to relatives visiting crowded neighbors or cook up a special dish for someone.

You might invite someone who will spend the holidays alone to share dinner with you. Or giftwrap your homemade jams, jellies and pickles to share with a neighbor or share that pretty houseplant you've grown with someone else.

You may find your common sense Christmas brightens the holiday for others — and for you.

Children Learn Music Early By Popular Suzuki Method

By SEHYON JOH
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After a tough night of knocking them dead at Carnegie Hall, a concert pianist likes to unwind. For Aki Kanaya, that means a bedtime story from her chaperone.

But the 5-year-old Japanese pianist is no prodigy; she's a typical product of the Suzuki method of teaching music.

She appeared at Carnegie Hall recently with other Suzuki students, the oldest of them 14, to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the method.

Aki began her piano lessons at age 2½ and she now plays Bach's Partita in B-minor "quite well," according to the leader of the tour, Masaaki Honda.

"In fact, she is a typical Suzuki student who has responded well to our system of providing young children with a favorable environment for learning music," said Honda, a protegee of Shinichi Suzuki, who founded the school with the belief that "man is a product of his environment."

About 20,000 youngsters study the Suzuki system in Japan, and as many as 400,000 students are enrolled in the United States.

Similar to the techniques used to teach foreign languages to the very young, the Suzuki method relies on the child's ability to quickly and eagerly absorb tremendous amounts of knowledge.

The method also requires the active participation of parents "who need not be musical." The parents learn music with their children so that they can act as a substitute for teachers at home.

A violinist and child psychologist, Suzuki, now 87, began teaching violin to children 35 years ago, branching later into piano, cello and flute. He has developed scaled-down instruments for child-sized hands, and has written textbooks and music for his students.

The Suzuki method was introduced to the United States in 1958 when a Japanese student brought a film showing 1,000 children standing in rows with small violins under their chins, playing a Bach double concerto.

That picture was credited with igniting a "Suzuki explosion" in America. The interest was kept up through an annual U.S. tour by 10 select students, beginning in 1968.

There are now between 300,000 and 400,000 children in America learning music under the Suzuki method, said Louise Behrend, director of the School for Strings in Manhattan.

"The number is growing by leaps and bounds," she said.

Some 20,000 children are taking the Suzuki courses in Western Europe and many more in Canada and Australia as interest in the Suzuki method spreads to other parts of the world.

Not everyone is impressed. The famous violinist, Isaac Stern, for one, maintains that such mass education projects stifle individuality and character development.

Mrs. Behrend acknowledges that the Suzuki method is part of the Japanese educational system that stresses group, rather than individual, learning. That is probably why many Suzuki students grow up to be excellent chamber music or orchestra players, she said.

Woman's Sad Tale Is Lesson For Teen-Ager Eager To Smoke

DEAR ABBY: Please help me make my mother give me permission to smoke at home. I am a 14-year-old boy and I have been smoking since I was 12. My mother knows this, but she still won't give me permission to smoke at home. I can smoke in the homes of my friends but not in my own house. I think that's crazy. I have begged my mother to change her mind, but she says, "No way." My stepfather says as long as I'm already smoking he doesn't see why my mother won't give permission, but he doesn't count around here—my mother has the whole say. Abby, please tell me how I can make my mother listen to reason and be realistic. Thank you.

A BOY IN DULUTH

DEAR BOY: Your mother is right, and since she is your guardian, and your welfare is in her hands, she should forbid you to smoke anywhere. Please read this letter I received today:

DEAR ABBY: I am a 59-year-old woman. I started smoking when I was 14 because both my parents smoked. I realize now how stupid it was, but on with my story:

By the time I was 24, I was smoking three packs a day. I kept it up until 2 1/2 years ago, then I got sick and the doctor said I had walking pneumonia. That's when he cut me down to six cigarettes a day. Then he found a tumor pressing against my air passage and it turned out to be cancer. Believe me, when I heard that, I quit cold turkey.

I was cancer-free until October, then the doctor informed me that the cancer was back again. I also have emphysema. I am praying I can beat it. Had I known years ago that this could happen, I never would have smoked that first cigarette. I have two sons—both heavy smokers who have trouble breathing, but they say they can't quit.

God in heaven, I wish I had never started. It's so hard to quit. Please print this for kids to see.

SICK AND SORRY IN WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who calls me every day—sometimes twice a day—just to chat. I don't mind small talk every once in a while, but not every day. She goes on and on. It's boring and a waste of my time. She's a very sensitive person, so if I were to tell her not to call me every day, I know her feelings would be hurt.

I've tried taking my phone off the hook, but she keeps trying until she reaches me, then I'm trapped for more of her dull, time-consuming small talk.

What should I do? I'm beginning to resent her.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Don't take your phone off the hook. When your friend calls, tell her you're sorry but you're busy and can't talk to her right now, and you'll call her when you're free.

Then call her the next day or the day after. If she calls you in the meantime, repeat the above message. Eventually she'll get the message. And if you lose her friendship, what have you really lost?

DEAR ABBY: I've been told that the only way a person can get crabs is by sexual contact. Is this true?

Plane Models Show History Of Aviation

By LES SEAGO

Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Raymond Waddey of Parsons, Tenn., may have one of the world's largest air forces in miniature.

Waddey, who earns his living painting airplane portraits, presides over a collection of exquisitely detailed model aircraft that depicts aviation history from the Wright Brothers spindly biplane to the Air Force's latest Rockwell B-1 bomber.

His collection currently numbers 312 planes, each of them representing a particular aircraft right down to the serial numbers, battle damage and pilot's name beneath the canopy rails.

"Each airplane has to be researched completely before I start work on it," Waddey said recently as he exhibited his collection at the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association convention in Nashville. "I like to make sure that every model is as close to being perfect as possible."

Waddey, who is not a pilot himself, is nevertheless an authority on aviation history, thanks to his exhaustive research on his model collection.

"I never had the money or time to learn to fly myself," he said. "But I like airplanes."

His collection is heavy on military aircraft, but it also includes dozens of airplanes that only a serious aviation buff would recognize — planes such as the Northrop Gamma and the Stinson Reliant.

There are, of course, models of well-known U.S. planes such as the B-29 and the P-51 Mustang. But he also has models of the likes of the Boulton-Paul Defiant, a World War II British fighter that was much-maligned by its crews; a Savoia-Marchetti, an Italian flying boat; and the TF-102, a two-seat version of a well-known American interceptor of the early 1960s.

The latter began as a single-seat interceptor version of the delta-winged fighter, but Waddey used scrap plastic and skill to create the two-seat trainer version of the plane in miniature.

"Almost everyone is interested in classic planes," Waddey says. "People like military planes. But not too many people are interested in seeing something like the (Boeing) 707 or the 747. They can go out to the local airport to see those."

Waddey's models go beyond the store-bought plastic planes. He picks out a model, studies the history of

Rose-Colored

Decline of November's jobless rate to 7.2 percent is cheering in many ways. It means a record 105.9 million Americans are holding jobs and there has been creation of roughly 300,000 jobs.

The Labor Department report also tells us the number of those officially listed as jobless fell by approximately 275,000. It tells us, too, that if the military personnel stationed in the U.S. were included it would represent an even more dramatic fall in the unemployment rate.

The bad news: there has been virtually no growth in factory jobs since summer. Our manufacturing industries are in trouble.

Part of this is due to failure of some industries to keep their plant equipment in line with states-of-the-art, hurting them in terms of economic productivity and costs.

Another factor damaging our industrial field is the strong dollar (which creates bargains for the American public in imported goods, a boon to consumers, but harmful to our own manufacturers).

Thirdly, while some American manufacturers have faced up to ever-rising costs of their workforces (and subsequently survived), many have been unable to cope.

Nationwide, there is another cloud. Ranks of those officially listed as jobless have been reduced, but over 8 million are said still looking for work.

Full employment is a near-impossible dream, and some think it is not wholly to be desired. The spread between 8 million-plus said looking for work and the near-106 million employed remains; and there is reason to think a large number of the new job-holders are in seasonal, and therefore temporary, positions.

It could be better.

Waiting

When China's leadership tacitly supported a widely published editorial calling Marxist-Leninist theories unsuited to facts of today's world, it was almost as though the laws of gravity had been challenged. For if ever there was a fixed-in-cement ideology in Peiping, basic Communism was its hallmark.

The broad hint of a new direction for China should have stirred a storm of hopeful speculation in the West; but it didn't. Observers chose to wait and see.

There were reasons.

That long-time defiantly self-dependent country is now encouraging foreign investment and promoting foreign trade. (Maybe, too, Taiwan's economic growth from a backward island to an almost overnight industrial society was a factor.)

In the West there are lingering doubts ... chief among which is that China may be primarily trying to reassure investors, and encouraging more foreign capital, investments, and trade.

If China should in fact turn away from a Communist economic doctrine and return to its old free economy, it would be a remarkably rare turnabout.

The new Chinese leadership is made up of pragmatists; and we are reminded they would find it difficult to abandon their standing ideologies without some risk. Later we might learn anew that words are only words — which can be changed or censored.

This makes the wait-and-see stance in the U.S. and other countries a very realistic policy.

New Fed-White House Fight Looms

WASHINGTON — The top domestic priority acknowledged privately at the White House is not reducing the budget or simplifying taxes but facing the danger of Paul Volcker's Federal Reserve Board producing another recession.

The core group of President Reagan's top dozen advisers, which has been wrestling with the budget, is turning to the long-deferred headache of monetary policy. After four years of non-benign neglect of the Fed, the administration is starting a yuletide cram course to yield specific recommendations by the president in his State of the Union address two months hence.

The reason for haste is belated horror at the White House over monetary policy conducted in splendid secrecy by the Federal Reserve Board, the nation's central bank. Quiet persuasion from the White House and Treasury has been ignored. The Fed has brought the recovery to a screeching halt and threatens another recession or at least stagnation with chronically high unemployment.

Politically, the Fed is out of Reagan's control. There is no sign that Volcker, reappointed chairman by Reagan in 1983, will make the early post-election exit that one senior White House aide thought he promised. Even a growth-oriented successor would have trouble leading the seven other Fed governors and the five Federal Reserve Bank presidents comprising the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC), which dictates the nation's economic future behind closed doors.

On the contrary, Volcker wants to institutionalize his long-term influence on the FOMC. He is seeking to fill Federal Reserve Bank presidencies and, ultimately, his own chairmanship with clones. That promises to continue policies that have made Volcker a hero to the creditor class, protecting it from resurgent inflation but permanently braking economic growth.

This is ignored by the titans of Congress, who shrug shoulders over the complexities of monetary policy and concentrate on minutiae with infinitely less impact on the economy. But the West Wing of the White House understands what the Fed is doing and is aware of its political and economic impact.

The president's men have failed to move against the Fed not out of WINSTON-SALEM — Ever since his Election Day loss to Sen. Jesse Helms, Gov. Jim Hunt's future has been the number one topic of political speculation in North Carolina. Will he try to oust Republican Sen. John East in 1986? Would he seek the presidency of the University of North Carolina? Would he become chairman of the national Democratic Party?

Hunt has said he's not interested in the party and university posts but he's refused to say what his plans are, other than possibly returning to the practice of law. After spending a half day with the outgoing governor on a trip to the N.C. Farm Bureau Convention, it is obvious to this reporter, however, that Hunt isn't getting out of politics and is still running for something.

"I haven't decided that," Hunt said when asked if he planned to challenge East. His decision to run again for the Senate will depend on two factors, he said. "My own frame of mind. I may get into something I'm enjoying and I'll be enjoying more time with my family. I may decide I don't want to commit the time and effort again.

"And, I don't know what the state will be like in two years," Hunt continued. If the state doesn't appear ready to "want the kind of leadership I offer," he said he wouldn't want to run.

Although he may not have decided to run, Hunt isn't wasting his speaking opportunities, either. At the Farm Bureau meeting, Hunt sounded as much like a candidate as he did last September. He spoke mostly about federal issues. He railed against the high dollar which is hurting U.S. farm exports. He blasted away at the federal deficit and chastised the Reagan administration's farm policies.

He also didn't act like a man just going through the motions of sneaking out of office. Hunt was out in the lobby both before and after his speech, pumping hands, thanking supporters for their work during the 1984 campaign. He could be overheard telling Wilson County farmer Joe Brewer, "There'll be other years."

During the interview, which took place on Dec. 3 and was embargoed until this week, Hunt said he had several job opportunities under consideration. "I'm speaking with at least four major law firms. Some of them in-state. Some multistate."

He said he'd practice law, hitting the law books, but mostly he considered his value to a firm as a business draw. "You would obviously attract business. A governor gets to know an awful lot of business and industrial leaders around the country, a lot of people who might be doing business in North Carolina."

Hunt said he was surprised to hear his name mentioned as a possible candidate to replace retiring UNC president Bill Friday. He said he was "honored" but not interested. Nor is he interested in a full-time teaching job — although he is considering a part time-teaching post.

Had he had the opportunity to run for a third term, would he have done it? "I'm glad I couldn't," he said. Two friends, Govs. Bob Milliken of Michigan and Bob Ray of Iowa held onto their offices for many years, Hunt said, but he thinks a man has to move on to new challenges. The state also needs new ideas, he said.

Hunt appears ready to go back to work as a lawyer and his future beyond that is unclear. But one thing he said during the interview may have been telling. He's reading Gore Vidal's new book on Abraham Lincoln and inside the front cover is an inscription from the friend who gave him the book. It notes that Lincoln lost his run for the Senate.

Jim Hunt doesn't sound or act like a man ready to get out of politics.

Public Forum

To the editor:

With respect to your article about the pharmacist who is facing charges for compounding special dental preparations (Daily Reflector, Friday 12/14/84), I am saddened and disappointed at the narrow-mindedness of individuals who are willing to bring such charges, obviously without completely understanding the situation. As long as Mr. Crocker has compounded the preparation pursuant to a legal prescription by a duly licensed dentist, and he is not otherwise offering these preparations for sale to the general public, I believe he is justified in doing so, as it is within the scope of his practice. Mr. Crocker is a licensed professional, charged with overseeing that area of public health dealing with the preparation and dispensing of medicine to the public. Unless he broke the law by dispensing illegally, he was only performing his duty.

In taking the issue one step further should every practicing pharmacist also be required to register as a pharmaceutical manufacturer? Unless a pharmacist has had extremely limited experience, I would suppose that each one has compounded special preparations within the scope of his/her community/clinical/hospital practice. To believe otherwise is naive! The alternative is to allow the patient to do without the medicine. Perhaps the individual(s) who initiated the action should also assume the responsibility of explaining to the patients why the medicine is not available.

I suggest that a review of the North Carolina Pharmacy Practice Act, and the relevant federal laws governing the practice of pharmacy would be in order. My sympathies are with Mr. Crocker.

Strength For Today

Robert Browning once penned the words: "God's in his heaven, all's well with the world."

Many people throughout the years have scoffed at this sentiment. Be realistic, they have urged their contemporaries. Look round about you and you will see that all is not well with the world. Wickedness is widespread, confusion rocks every country in the world to its foundation.

But this confusion is not created by God. He allows us to work out our own destiny in this world. And it is only in the conflict of good and evil that we can see the difference between the two.

The world is an education for all of us, and education entails failures as well as successes. Just because there is confusion on the planet does not mean that God has lost control of his creation. "All's well with the world" is true in the sense that God's plan is working out in dimensions we cannot yet appreciate.

OH, NO - ANOTHER DISASTER...

—Art Buchwald—

Making Up The Difference

I met a man from the local telephone company who is about to go up and plead for higher 1985 phone rates.

"Do you think you'll have any luck?" I asked him.

"We'll get something, but not everything we want," he said. "The consumer groups always make a big deal of it when we ask for a fair profit. They don't understand our problem."

"What is your problem?"

"We're losing money."

"I didn't know telephone companies lost money."

"We're not exactly losing money, but we have to make a bigger return in order to attract investment for the future."

"Everyone seems to be paying a lot more than they paid before," I said. "Why can't you people make ends meet?"

"Well, when the phone company was one big happy family, we were able to keep the costs of local calls down by charging more for a long-distance ones. Now we no longer can count on the subsidy from long distance since we're not in that business anymore."

"Therefore you have to charge more for local service than you did before."

"How did you know that?"

"I just got my phone bill."

"Then you can see that we're up against. We're charging you more, and yet we're not making what we did before."

"I thought the whole idea of breaking up the telephone company was so it would be competitive, and cost the consumer less."

"It does cost less if you call Oslo, Norway."

"I don't want to call anyone in Norway, and I doubt if there are 10 subscribers who do. Why don't you double the rate to call Norway and cut back on what it costs to make a call in this town?"

"We have nothing to say about what the long-distance telephone companies charge for Oslo. As the local telephone company all we do is switch your call to one of them, for a measly $10 a month."

"Do you make any money on that?"

"We're not sure. You see, no one ever broke up the phone company before, and therefore we never knew what it really cost to service our local subscribers. Now we're finding out it's much more expensive than we thought."

"Maybe it's a problem of management," I suggested. "Are you sure the people working for the local telephone company know what they're doing?"

He took this as a hostile question and said angrily, "We know exactly what we're doing. You have been living for years off the poor souls who were overcharged for calling Norway, and now you're angry because you have to pay your own way."

"I have a question. If the government broke up the phone company to create more competition, and we now can choose from a half-dozen long-distance firms, why can't we choose from three or four local phone companies, and take the one with the lowest rates?"

"Because if there was more than one local company in any given area you'd have anarchy."

"Then why did the government claim the consumer would benefit from breaking up Ma Bell? It seems that we're paying 25 percent more than we paid before."

"You are paying more for the privilege of owning a phone," he said. "But if all evens out, depending on how many times you want to call Norway."

Thefts Probed

Greenville police are investigating seven thefts reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer J.E. Nichols said a television set was taken from 86 Riverbluff Apartments, according to a 9:26 a.m. report, while 70 record albums, a turntable and cassette player were taken from 131 Green Mill Run Apartments in an incident reported at 12:58 a.m.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a leather coat was taken from a car parked in a lot at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets, according to a 1:30 p.m. complaint, while Officer D.W. Nichols said a stereo system was taken from 31F Arlington Square in a break-in reported at 7:29 p.m.

According to Officer J.G. Bridges, a diamond ring valued at $2,500, and other items were taken from 37D Stratford Arms Apartments in an incident reported at 3:35 p.m.

Officer D.R. Best said a television set and a beer sign were taken from 400 Line Ave. in a break-in reported at 12:37 p.m., while a quantity of items were taken from Carolina Office Equipment Co. at 510 S. Greene St. in a break-in reported at 8:35 a.m.

Robbery Reported

Officer J.G. Bridges said police are investigating a strong-arm robbery that occurred at the intersection of Spruce and Skinner streets that was reported about 9:15 p.m.

Bridges said Tina Melanie Sexton of 2409 E. Third St. told investigators she was stopped at the intersection when a man on a bicycle reached into her car, grabbed her neck and demanded her money.

The officer said that after Miss Sexton gave the robber $20 from her purse, the man kissed her on the cheek and rode away.

Man Arrested

A 25-year-old Washington man was arrested by Greenville police shortly before 10 p.m. Tuesday on charges of unauthorized use of a siren and assault by pointing a gun.

Police said Michael Rudolph Hall of 802 Isabella Ave. was apprehended following an incident that occurred on Dickinson Avenue near the 14th Street intersection. Bond for Hall was set at $200.

Sheriff Issues Day Care Alert

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department alerted area day care facilities to tighten their security measures in the wake of a recent incident at a center where two unauthorized people made inquiries regarding a child.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the Red Oak Day Care Center reported that a woman went to the facility on Dec. 4 and asked if a child was ready to leave. He said the woman left when personnel at the center stated that a child could not be released without parental permission. He said a man visited the center about 30 minutes later and inquired about the same child but was cited the same policy.

Tyson, who said the incident was reported to his department on Dec. 6, said area child care facilities were notified and urged to enforce their security policies and maintain child supervision at all times.

will involve funding commitments by local lending institutions including Planters National Bank, Branch Banking and Trust, Wachovia, and North Carolina National Bank. The four banks have made a minimum combined commitment of $2 million to the loan pool project.

Also approved at the meeting were the following preliminary and revised preliminary plat proposals:

— A preliminary plat of Lynndale Townes, located on the south side of a section of Red Banks Road now under construction. The property adjoins Lynndale Subdivision and involves 31 townhouse units on an 8.8 acre tract.

— A revised preliminary plat of Rowntree Woods, located at the southwest corner of N.C. 43 (Falkland Highway) and SR 1204 intersection. The revision involves addition of three units and extension of the development into an area immediately adjoining the intersection.

— A revised preliminary plat of Quail Ridge Addition, located on the south side of Bell's Branch and adjacent to Phase I of the development. The revision involves minor changes in building location, an additional nine units and deletion of a minor street proposed to run southward off Quail Ridge Road.

Rezoning items recommended for approval by the commission included a request by Robby Jones to rezone approximately 2.18 acres from shopping center to high density residential. The property is located on the northern side of East Fifth Street, approximately 500 feet west of 10th Street and adjacent to Kentucky Fried Chicken. Jones plans to build a multifamily development on the property.

A request of the North Carolina Association of Free Will Baptists to rezone approximately 7.495 acres from residential-agricultural to office and institutional was also recommended for approval by the commission. The property is located to the east of SR 1704, along a portion of Quail Ridge Road. An association spokesman said the organization plans to build an office building, books store and a rest home and retirement village of small scale on the property over a 10-12 year period.

Areas Selected For Nuke Sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today picked three sites in Texas, Nevada and Washington as standing the greatest chance of getting a backyard neighbor virtually no one wants — a permanent gravesite for highly radioactive nuclear wastes, a congressional source said.

The source, who demanded anonymity, said Energy Secretary Donald Hodel told members of Congress this morning the three priority sites are:

— Deaf Smith County about 30 miles west of Amarillo in the Texas Panhandle.

— The government's Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland, Wash.

— Yucca Mountain on the western edge of Nellis Air Force Base and the Nuclear Weapons Test Site in Nevada near the California border.

The next two alternative sites, according to several congressional sources, are Davis Canyon just outside the boundary of Canyonlands National Park in southeastern Utah and Richton Dome near the town of Richton, Miss.

Accidents' Damage Set At $18,700

Cause An estimated $18,700 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Fairview Way, involving vehicles driven by Floyd Preston Harris of 1205 Greenville Blvd., and Freddie Foster Bryant of Ayden.

According to police, after the Harris and Bryant vehicles collided, the Bryant car ran through a yard at 1900 Fairview Way, struck a brick pillar of a carport at the address, and a car parked in the carport, owned by David E. and Deborah H. Gladson.

Damage from the collision was set at $1,600 to the Harris truck, $4,600 to the Bryant car, $6,000 to the Gladson car, and $2,300 to the Gladson's yard and house.

Cars driven by Fred Ernest Wainright of 205 Club Pines Road and Linda Anderson White of 611 Clark St., collided about 6:15 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, .1 mile east of the Memorial Drive intersection, causing $400 damage to the Wainright car and $3,000 damage to the White vehicle.

A 4:45 p.m. collision on Dickinson Avenue, 150 feet from the Pennsylvania Ave. intersection involved cars driven by Mary Daniels Mills of 1101B N. VanDyke St. and Barbara Baker Grimes of 74 Riverview Estates.

Investigators, who charged Mrs. Mills with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $500 to the Mills car and $100 to the Grimes auto.

to be interviewed. He said another 400-500 applications will be accepted from out-of-state, but only two or three out-of-staters will be chosen. He said the ECU medical school has experienced a downturn in the number of minority persons applying, as have other N.C. schools. He said he is not sure why.

Richardson reported that he and East Carolina Health Services member G. Henry Leslie, vice president, recently visited Pungo District Hospital in Belhaven to talk about ways the health care delivery subsidiary corporation of PCMH could be a resource to the Pungo hospital. He said this same service is also available to other area hospitals.

Fred Brown, in his report, urged the board members to convey to the administration any complaints heard from citizens about hospital services. He said each will be looked at with an eye to improving services wherever possible.

Roy Clark, the hospital's vice president for financial services, reported that there were 13,025 patient days in November, with only 12,365 budgeted for, so income and service rendered is running 5.34 percent above budget. The average amount charged per patient day in 1983, he said, was $476.06; in 1984 so far, it's been $552.76. He said part of this increase is due to increased average acuity of patients served.

Approved for provisional active staff privileges were Dr. Robert G. Crouse in internal medicine and dermatology; Dr. W. James Metzger in internal medicine, allergy and clinical immunology; Dr. J. Peter Harris in pediatrics and cardiology; Dr. Duane D. Webb in internal medicine, gastroenterology and hematology. Approved for full staff privileges were Dr. David J. Dabbs, Dr. Stephano P. Marcuard, Dr. Thomas G. Irons and Dr. Roberta S. Gray, active; and Dr. Frank C. Sheldon, Dr. David L. Shumway, Dr. Edwin B. Cooper, and Dr. Ronald B. May, consulting.

It was reported that a special credentialing section for limited health practitioners like physicians' assistants, nurse practitioners and the like is being developed and will be explained to the board in the near future.

Trooper Dies After Shoot-Out Involving Williamston Man

RUPERT, W.Va. (AP) — Police in West Virginia today captured a prison escapee who fled into the woods following the fatal wounding of a Virginia State Police sergeant and a shoot-out with a West Virginia trooper.

The fatal shooting Tuesday triggered a 40-mile chase that ended when the car the gunman was in collided with another vehicle on a U.S. 60 bridge a mile east of here.

FCC Votes To Raise Phone Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted 5-0 today to increase residential telephone rates by $1 a month next June and by another dollar in June 1986.

But those who use their home phones for long-distance calls will see a reduction in the cost of out-of-state calls to help offset the new "access charge," a fee designed to make the user pay for the line linking the home phone with the various long-distance networks.

Before American Telephone and Telegraph Co. was broken up, part of the price of long-distance calls went to support the local lines that connected individual homes and offices with the nationwide system.

The new charge will affect connections with the AT&T long-distance network as well as those of competitors such as MCI and Sprint. Businesses with one phone will also be affected by today's ruling.

Larger businesses began paying a $6 per phone access charge earlier this year.

FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said "If we don't move this way, local telephone rates are going to be higher, much higher."

The vote followed recommendations by the Federal-State Joint Board, composed of four state public utility commissioners and three members of the FCC.

The joint board also recommended that the access charge, also called a subscriber line charge, be capped at $2 in June 1986. The FCC went along with that suggestion as well.

A statement issued by the FCC said the joint board felt that the access charge would not be high enough to force people to have their home phones removed.

Late in 1986, the joint board will study the effect of the charge.

The fees approved today are half those that were originally set by the commission. There was widespread criticism in Congress when the FCC ordered a $4-a-month access charge for residential phones.

Some lawmakers and at least one consumer group say they will fight imposition of the new charges.

Escapee Calls With Greeting

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — The only inmate to escape Folsom Prison in the last 15 years telephoned one of his guards to wish him a Merry Christmas, officials report.

Prison Lt. T.J. Smith said Tuesday that the escapee, Stephen Leslie Wilson, 39, didn't say where he was calling from, other than "in the country north of us. That could mean anything from the foothills to the Canadian border."

Wilson escaped Aug. 2, apparently aboard a truck that was in a warehouse in which he was working. The truck was leaving just as three fork-lift trucks had a collision, diverting the attention of guards.

Smith said guards frequently get Christmas cards from paroled inmates, but rarely hear from escapees. Wilson was serving 25 years to life for the 1979 execution-style slaying of his father-in-law, a prominent rancher.

Folsom is just east of Sacramento.

Witnesses said one man was left at the scene suffering from a gunshot wound while the second man fled into the woods on foot.

Greenbrier Valley Hospital nursing supervisor Connie Rose identified the wounded man as James Price, 22, of Williamston, N.C.

Griffin said Price was transferred to the University of Virginia hospital in Charlottesville. He was reported in serious but stable condition early today.

The escapee, Gregory David Frye, 22, was captured about 2:30 a.m. near Rupert, said J.B. Griffin, a Virginia state police dispatcher in Salem.

Griffin said Frye did not offer resistance when he was captured.

According to Virginia state police Lt. C.R. Compton, Frye was tracked down by a K-9 trooper.

Frye had escaped from the Huntington work release center July 28, about a month after he was transferred from the Huttonsville Correctional Center. Huttonsville Associate Warden Steve Yardley said Frye was serving a one- to 10-year term for a Kanawha County breaking and entering conviction.

Virginia State Police Sgt. J.L. Biggs was shot twice in the chest about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday after stopping a car for a traffic violation on Interstate 64 two miles from the West Virginia line, authorities said. Biggs, 47, of Covington, Va., died at 5:05 p.m. at Alleghany Regional Hospital, said Duty Sgt. B.L. Almany at the Virginia State Police headquarters in Richmond, Va.

Griffin said both Frye and Price would face a capital murder charge. Compton said Frye was being held by West Virginia authorities this morning pending extradition proceedings.

Jim Gross of Mount Sterling, Ky., said he was installing guardrails on I-64 when he saw Biggs pull a car over Tuesday afternoon. He said he resumed work and a short time later heard gunshots and saw the car speed away.

"I heard two shots, and then the cop was on the pavement," Gross said.

After the shooting, the car Biggs had stopped headed for West Virginia, witnesses said.

Cpl. M.C. Kochenderfer of the Rainelle detachment of West Virginia state police said he stopped the vehicle a few minutes later on U.S. 60 near Crawley.

"While approaching the vehicle, the driver turned from his position behind the wheel and toward the door," Kochenderfer said.

The corporal said he fired his gun when he saw that the man was armed. He said five shots were exchanged before the men fled west on U.S. 60.

One mile down the road the vehicle collided with an eastbound car on the Big Clear Creek Bridge, Kochenderfer said.

Local residents hid in their homes overnight as a police helicopter circled overhead and troopers with bloodhounds tracked the man who fled.

"We've all got our doors locked up," said Mrs. Wilkie Dietz of Crawley.

About 50 police officers joined in the search. Equipped with rifles and shotguns, groups of three and four troopers fanned out to conduct house-to-house searches along local roads. Residents peered from the corners of their windows as police searched backyard sheds and parked cars.

Closed Christmas Day.

U.S. To Launch Secret Communications 'Spy' Satellite In January

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new spy satellite that will intercept radio, telephone and satellite transmissions will be launched into orbit over the Soviet Union during the January military mission of space shuttle Discovery, reliable sources have told The Associated Press.

The satellite is an improved version of payloads the Air Force has launched for years with expendable rockets, said the sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

The earlier satellites were named Elint, for electronic intercept. The new version is called Sigint, for signal intercept, the sources report.

In addition to electronically eavesdropping on communications, the payloads are capable of collecting radio telemetry data from Soviet missile tests, the sources said.

The satellite is a military payload Discovery will carry on liftoff here on Jan. 23 under security so tight that even the countdown will be secret.

The satellite will be attached to a rocket called an Inertial Upper Stage, or IUS. The rocket is to propel the payload to a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high after the combination has been released from the cargo bay by the five-man shuttle crew.

The Associated Press learned of the secret space shuttle payload in early December from sources familiar with the mission. An effort to obtain Pentagon comment at that time led to a Defense Department request that the story be withheld on grounds that disclosure would damage U.S. national security.

The AP agreed not to use the information so long as it remained secret. The Washington Post published the story on the new satellite in its editions today.

NBC News also agreed to a Defense Department request not to report information about the shuttle's payload. Aviation Week & Space Technology had received information regarding the mission's military aspects from confidential sources on the basis it not be published.

In an interview today on Cable News Network, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger attacked the Post for publishing the story and refused to confirm any of its contents.

"I can confirm only that it's the height of journalistic irresponsibility to violate requests that are made. These requests were made and responsibly honored by many networks, ABC, NBC, CBS, Associated Press. The Washington Post felt they simply had to run the story which a great many people had, ran it with the typical usual inaccuracies."

He added that publication of certain stories "can only give aid and comfort to the enemy. I'm not confirming or denying whether this did."

Leonard Downie Jr., managing editor of the Washington Post, said today that the information the Post published did not "remotely" threaten national security.

"The very sparse information which we published this morning is well known throughout Washington and throughout the world, for that matter, for anybody who follows the various technical information involved with this next shuttle launch," he said. "More detailed information about (the satellite's) capabilities, which, in fact, the Pentagon itself has given, apparently, to some reporters who work there, we have not published because it is not so widely available and its publication might be more sensitive."

The Defense Department on Monday announced its first classified space shuttle mission will begin after a secret countdown designed to "deny our adversaries" knowledge of information about the military cargo.

Reporters will be allowed to watch the launch, but Brig. Gen. Richard Abel, Air Force director of public affairs, said, "You won't know the specific launch time until engines ignite."

News stories that "speculate" on the secret payload will be investigated as a breach of national security, Abel said. He said that Defense Department officials are already investigating the material obtained by NBC.

"The more mission information they (the Soviets) have, the easier it is for them to counter the capabilities of these payloads," he said.

"Our intention is to make the maximum information available to you, consistent with national security," Abel said. "We are working to deny our adversaries any information which might reveal the identity or mission of DOD payloads."

The launch will take place between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. EST, Abel said. He said there would be launch commentary starting an hour before that period.

Deregulation Set For Gas Pipelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protected for decades by federal controls, natural gas pipeline companies that sell one-fourth of the nation's energy are being singled out by the Reagan administration to bear the immediate brunt of deregulation.

Raymond O'Connor, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, fired the opening volley Tuesday, just two weeks before federal price ceilings are removed from about half of the nation's gas supplies.

O'Connor told energy industry officials his agency will launch a formal inquiry later this month into ways to change interstate pipeline companies from wholesalers of natural gas into non-owner "carriers" or transporters of the fuel.

For the 45 million American families who heat their homes with gas, the change could mean lower prices — if their local utility companies jump into the competition for cheaper supplies from the 15,000 drillers in the country.

But pipelines warn that changing their traditional role also could result in residential customers losing out to more powerful industrial users and possibly even an eventual recurrence of the shortages of the late 1970s.

"Pipelines have been gradually moving away from exclusive reliance on their historical function of marketing natural gas," O'Connor told the National Energy Resources Organization, an organization of energy industry lobbyists here.

"In my view, even greater improvements are possible ... and bringing these about will be one of the commission's first priorities in the coming year," he said.

While pipelines have been moving on their own to compete against falling fuel oil prices, most of them have vehemently opposed government efforts to make them do it.

"We don't need this new layer of federal controls," says George Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, a trade group for pipeline and local distribution companies. "It's already going on everywhere now."

Homeless To Get Free Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of the nation's homeless people soon will receive free health care, courtesy of a $25 million grant from two charitable foundations that believe the homeless are "not simply winos or bag ladies."

The Pew Memorial Trust and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation said they have selected community organizations in 18 U.S. cities to supervise health clinics which will be located in city shelters and soup kitchens next year.

Foundation spokesmen were to announce the cities selected to conduct the Health Care for the Homeless Program at a news conference today.

Dr. David E. Rogers, president of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, said the special health care program is designed to help not only "the skid row bums," but also "the temporary homeless."

"This is a broad group of people whose lack of housing is due to external misfortunes such as unemployment, or loss of welfare benefits, personal or family life crises, or the growing shortage of low-income housing," Rogers said in remarks prepared for delivery at the news conference.

"These are not simply winos or bag ladies. Too often they are families with innocent children starting life on the wrong foot," he continued. "Some are even college educated."

Under the program, private non-profit groups in each city will receive two-year grants and will be eligible for an additional two years of support. Each group may be awarded up to $1.4 million over the four-year period.

The money will provide free health care and social services to some of the 250,000 to 300,000 homeless people the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development estimates now live in America. About half the homeless suffer from alcoholism and drug abuse, the department said in a study released last May. Homeless advocates have estimated the number of homeless at 2 million to 3 million.

The HUD study, which surveyed 60 metropolitan areas, said Los Angeles has the most number of homeless people with up to 33,800. New York is next with up to 30,000. Chicago, 20,300. San Francisco, 8,800. Detroit, 7,800. Houston, 7,500. Miami, 6,800. Washington, D.C., 6,400. Boston, 3,300. and Seattle, 3,250.

Rogers said doctors and nurses at the free clinics will treat illnesses and injuries, referring advanced cases to hospitals. Mental health services and treatment for drug and alcohol abusers will also be established, he said.

Projects will include referrals to local public health agencies for communicable diseases and drug problems, and coordination with state, local and private services to provide housing assistance and help in securing housing, jobs, and

Keach Denied Prison Appeal

LONDON (AP) — Columbia Pictures Television said the U.S. detective series "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" will not be produced while actor Stacy Keach serves nine months in prison here for smuggling cocaine.

Keach, who stars as the tough-talking detective in the series, looked pale Tuesday as Lord Chief Justice Lord Geoffrey Lane rejected the actor's appeal of the sentence, saying it was "correct in principle and cannot be criticized as being too long."

The Court of Appeal threw out a three-month sentence for Keach's secretary, Deborah Steele, 41, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal possession of drugs. She was given a suspended two-month term.

Lane said Ms. Steele's involvement in the drug case was minimal. "It was only by accident that she was there at all," he said.

Keach, 43, was ordered returned to Reading Prison, where he began serving his sentence Dec. 7 after pleading guilty to smuggling 1.3 ounces of cocaine through London's Heathrow Airport.

Hong Kong Pact Signed

PEKING (AP) — Britain and China signed today a historic agreement that will return Hong Kong to China in 1997, ending 156 years of British rule over the prosperous capitalist colony.

In the presence of top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, dignitaries from both countries and guests from Hong Kong, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain and Premier Zhao Ziyang of China signed the agreement in the Great Hall of the People.

Both Thatcher and Zhao praised the accord.

For China, implementation of the agreement will launch it on an experiment unique in the annals of Chinese Communism. Under a formula known as "one country, two systems," it has promised to retain Hong Kong's capitalistic lifestyle and traditional freedoms for 50 years.

The Chinese, who hailed Mrs. Thatcher for her "foresight and sagacity" in reaching the agreement, accorded her a 19-gun salute at a red-carpet state welcome this morning and promised Peking would implement the historic accord "in every respect."

From the welcoming ceremony, Mrs. Thatcher went straight to almost three hours of talks with Zhao before the signing ceremony in the afternoon. She told him the signing was a momentous occasion, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

Earlier, Mrs. Thatcher lunched with President Li Xiannian and met Deng and Communist Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang.

Under the "joint declaration" initiated in Peking on Sept. 26, Britain relinquishes sovereignty when its 99-year lease on the New Territories — the bulk of Hong Kong's land area — expires on July 1, 1997.

British-ruled since 1841, Hong Kong is the world's third largest financial center after New York and London.

Although the takeover terms generally have been welcomed, many in Hong Kong question China's ability to deliver on its promises in view of the tumultuous 1966-76 Cultural Revolution and other political upheavals since Communist rule began in 1949.

But Zhao assured the British leader: "In the years to come, China will implement this agreement in every respect. China will do so and I am convinced the British side will also do so."

Government spokesman Ma Yuzhen also quoted Zhao as saying that China's "one country, two systems" policy "is not an expedient measure."

Xinhua quoted Zhao as adding: "We always mean what we say. What we say to the world counts and we have always adhered to the agreements we have signed internationally."

Zhao termed the pact "a major event in modern world history," conducive to peace in Asia and the world and opening a new chapter in Chinese-British relations.

He praised Mrs. Thatcher's "vision and statesmanship" and accepted an invitation to visit Britain next summer.

British officials, meanwhile, said Queen Elizabeth II is likely to visit China in the second half of 1986. She would be the first British monarch to travel to the world's most populous country.

The officials said Mrs. Thatcher, in her talks with Zhao, conveyed the queen's acceptance in principle of a Chinese invitation extended last July. They said Mrs. Thatcher told Zhao that the queen's 1985 schedule is full.

Xinhua quoted Mrs. Thatcher, who arrived late Tuesday for a 36-hour stay before flying to Hong Kong and Washington, as telling Zhao: "I thought it was of extreme importance to come even for a short visit because it is such a great occasion and a historic occasion."

The 59-year-old prime minister wore a black coat with fur collar, but no hat, for the official welcoming ceremony attended by 101 Hong Kong dignitaries, who gave Mrs. Thatcher a round of applause when she greeted them.

A 19-gun salute echoed across Tiananmen Square as the military band played "God Save the Queen" and the Chinese national anthem. Schoolchildren waved pompoms and tambourines and shouted in welcome as Mrs. Thatcher and Zhao reviewed an honor guard.

In a front-page editorial, the People's Daily, newspaper of the Communist Party, paid tribute to "Margaret Thatcher's foresight and sagacity" in ending Britain's colonial role in Hong Kong.

The two-year negotiations on Hong Kong began with Mrs. Thatcher's September 1982 visit to Peking. Key figures in those talks joined Mrs. Thatcher and Chinese leaders at today's meetings.

They included Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and Hong Kong Governor Sir Edward Youde.

Protestors Miss Out On Target

LONDON (AP) — Protesters heckled a Soviet delegation that laid a wreath today at the tomb of the founder of communism, Karl Marx, but senior Soviet official Mikhail S. Gorbachev was not on hand for the confrontation.

Gorbachev's tentative schedule had shown him leading the delegation to Highgate Cemetery in north London, but instead Leonid Zamyatin, the chief Kremlin spokesman, headed the Soviets' visit to the gravesite, which was ringed by guards, reporters and cameramen.

"It was only the delegation which was supposed to be represented," said Zamyatin, who did not elaborate on Gorbachev's activities this morning.

Women protesters shouted slogans against the Soviet KGB secret police as the delegation laid its wreath of red carnations draped with red flags. In Russian and English, the wreath said: "To the great Karl Marx, founder of scientific communism (from) the delegate of the Supreme Soviet, December 1984."

The German-born Marx lived and wrote in London for more than 30 years before his death in 1883. His grave, with a large stone topped with a bust of him, is a regular point of pilgrimage by communists and socialists.

Later today, Gorbachev — considered the No. 2 man in the Kremlin hierarchy — was scheduled to lunch with leaders of Britain's opposition Labor Party and afterwards meets with David Owen, leader of the Social Democratic Party, and David Steel, leader of the Liberal Party.

Gorbachev told British legislators Tuesday that Moscow is ready to cut down radically on all types of armaments if the United States and its allies agree to do likewise.

The Soviet official has won plaudits from the London Times and other papers for his affability and humor. But he reportedly bristled when pressed on Moscow's human rights record by members of the House of Commons Select Committee at a closed-door meeting.

When legislator Norman St John Stevas, a former arts minister in Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, accused Moscow of "attacks on religious groups, legislators said Gorbachev retorted: "When the West raises human rights, it nearly always comes down to one or two names. You govern your society and leave us to govern ours."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead in heavy trading today, adding a bit more to Tuesday's strong gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.32 to 1,213.89 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was meeting with some resistance from traders selling to cash in on recent advances in stock prices. But they also noted encouragement over evidence that the economy was continuing to grow.

In a "flash" estimate issued this morning, the Commerce Department put the annual inflation-adjusted growth rate of the gross national product for the fourth quarter of the year at 2.8 percent.

It also said inflation slowed to a 2.9 percent annual rate in the current quarter from 3.9 percent in the July-September period.

Those figures, and the recent declines in interest rates that touched off Tuesday's outburst of buying, were taken as favorable portents for continued expansion of business activity in 1985 without a revival of inflation.

Shell Transport & Trading led the active list in the early going, unchanged at 31 1/4. A 217,000-share block of the stock changed hands at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 34.78 to 1,211.57, its biggest gain since it rose 36 points last Aug. 3 and its seventh largest ever.

Advances overwhelmed declines by about 4 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 169.08 million shares, the sixth biggest total on record, against 89.49 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index jumped 2.35 to 96.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.25 at 204.00.

Recovering
LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — A doctor said octogenarian Belgian author Georges Simenon recovered so well after removal of a growth from one of his sinuses that he planned "to have a bottle of champagne when he got home."

Simenon, 81, best known for his 80 books featuring the detective Inspector Maigret, was released Monday from Lausanne University hospital, said Dr. Nicolas de Tribolet.

The author, who underwent surgery Dec. 7, to remove the benign growth, "is perfectly well; he will be walking home," de Tribolet told The Associated Press. "He plans to have a bottle of champagne when he gets home."

Simenon stopped writing novels in 1972 for health reasons. Later, he wrote his memoirs, which were published in 1981. Simenon, who lives in Lausanne, said at the time that the book would be his "last book to be published."

Shaw Powers North Pitt By Conley

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Levon Shaw tallied 17 points including seven in the fourth quarter as North Pitt outran D.H. Conley in the final period for the second time in four days for a 42-37 victory in non-conference 3-A high school basketball action Tuesday. The Panthers defeated Conley 41-40 Friday night.

Myra Moore scored 12 points in the second half to lead the Pant-HERS to a 51-37 win over Conley's Valkyries in the opener. Regina Cox paced North Pitt with 16 points, while Bernice Teen Wilkins added 10.

Clifton Williams added nine points and Gentry Sneed eight as the Panthers improved their record to 5-1 overall. Jeff Wright led Conley, now 1-6 overall, with a game-high 19 points, while Ricky Farrow chipped in 12.

"It was a ragged ballgame," North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans said. "It was a game of spurts for us, and (Conley) did the same thing. It was not something you enjoyed being a part of."

"What worries me is that some of (my players) seem satisfied. They've got to wake up and go after it for 32 minutes a game."

The first half was plagued by turnovers and poor shot selection at both ends. Shaw tied the score at 8-8 on a bank shot with two seconds left in the opening period.

Gentry Sneed connected from 15 feet out to put the Panthers ahead 30 seconds into the second quarter, but Conley retaliated with field goals by Wright and Farrow for a 12-10 edge with 6:21 till intermission.

While the Conley offense went without scoring another point through the end of the half, North Pitt was able to move ahead by just 17-12 as Williams provided three points in the final minute.

Shaw sank a free throw two minutes into the third quarter for the first point of the half, then added a move inside to put the Panthers ahead 20-12 with 5:54 left. But Wright posted seven points as Conley rattled off nine-unanswered points to move ahead 21-20 with 1:40 remaining in the third quarter.

Sneed drove inside with four seconds on the clock to give the Panthers a 22-21 advantage going into the final period.

Sneed connected from 10 feet out, then Williams completed a fast break with a layup and added two more field goals from outside as North Pitt outscored the Vikings 8-2 through the 5:44 mark of the fourth quarter to expand the margin to 30-23.

Conley trimmed the margin to three points on a tip in by Farrow with 56 seconds left in the game but could not come any closer as the Panthers sealed the victory at the free throw line.

"I think tonight, in a lot of aspects, we played better than we did Friday at North Pitt," Conley Coach Walter Claybrook said. "We missed just one foul shot — that's a big improvement, and we made less turnovers."

"So overall we played better, but their experience showed especially changing defenses in the first half. Our guys were a little slow to recognize what was forming around them. Even when we were ahead and changing our defense in the first half, they were still getting good shots — they just weren't going in."

Both North Pitt and D.H. Conley will be competing in the Rose Holiday Tournament Friday and Saturday along with Farmville Central and the host Rampants.

"I was hoping we would play well so I could feel good about going into the tournament," Deans said. "Now I don't know what to think."

Pant-HERS, VALKYRIES

While the Valkyries concentrated on shutting down Cox in the second half, Myra Moore proved to be the killer inside and Bernice Teen Wilkins chipped in 10 points to balance the North Pitt offense.

"The key for us was having people come off the bench and perform under pressure," North Pitt Coach Randy Avery said. "We're not going to be able to count on Regina every game; teams with good defense are going to concentrate on her."

"(Conley) shut down Regina in the second half, and fortunately Bernice Teen and Myra Moore came through for us. This is the first time we've had people rise to the top when we needed it."

Conley tied the score with 20 seconds elapsed in the third quarter, but the Pant-HERS quickly rolled up a 32-22 margin as Myra Moore had six points in the 12-2 scoring burst.

The Valkyries never cut the lead below seven, as Conley's Debbie Patrick missed the second free throw with 4:36 left in the game for a 40-33 North Pitt advantage.

The Pant-HERS improved their overall mark to 4-2, while the Valkyries slipped to 2-5.

Jones Honored For Handball

Former East Carolina women's basketball player Leora "Sam" Jones has been named outstanding women's team handball athlete by the governing bodies of the amateur sports which are members of the United States Olympic Committee.

Jones was the leading goal scorer at the 1984 Olympic Games with 32 goals. Ironically, Jones had never held a handball prior to April of 1982 when Wayne Edwards, former ECU director of intramural sports, asked her if she'd like to go to the Olympic Games.

The Mount Olive native progressed to the top U.S. player and will be one of the U.S. threats for the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, Korea.

The USOC named 65 other athletes as the best in their respective sports, including their SportsMan and SportsWoman of the Year: intermediate hurdler Edwin Moses of Laguna Hills, Calif., and swimmer Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn.

Pro basketball coach John Bach wore uniform No. 17 in the 34 games he played for the Boston Celtics. The number is now retired. John Havlicek wore it after Bach.

Grant Returns To Vikes

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Less than a year after he retired, veteran coach Bud Grant says a lifetime contract and a personal appeal from the Minnesota Vikings' owner were enough to lure him back to the team he guided to four Super Bowls.

The National Football League team announced Tuesday night that Grant, who compiled a regular-season record of 151-87-5 in 17 seasons at Minnesota's helm, had agreed to return as head coach.

Grant's surprise appointment came a day after the Vikings fired Les Steckel, who led the team in 1984 to its worst season ever with a 3-13 record.

"I missed the Sunday afternoons," Grant said in accepting the offer to coach the Vikings, "but I admit I never missed the training camps."

Grant added: "I can coach as long as I like under the terms of the contract."

Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn and team owner Max Winter made the announcement at Twin Cities International Airport late Tuesday after a day of speculation on who would succeed Steckel.

Grant, who had been watching his son play in a high school basketball game that went into double overtime, was a half-hour late for the news conference. Grant, who had coached the Vikings since 1967 before retiring last January, said he was approached by Lynn twice last week before accepting the job.

"Last Wednesday Mike asked me and I said no. I went pheasant hunting. He asked again Friday and I said no. Max entered the picture, and when Les was actually released I accepted," Grant said.

An appeal from Winter was "something I hadn't foreseen (when I retired) and thought I had to honor," Grant said.

Grant, 57, said he did not consider offers from other teams. "I had feelers from other teams, but I told them I was not interested."

Grant said the first thing he will do as head coach is to begin building a coaching staff.

"I have no staff now," Grant said. "But it takes time, and I don't expect to be making any announcements tomorrow night."

Steckel's 12 coaching assistants were dismissed when he was fired Monday.

Grant said he plans no radical changes in the Vikings strategy, and said he could not make a complete assessment of the team yet. He said he has no immediate plans to meet with players.

Vikings players were enthusiastic about Grant's return. Grant was known for his easy-going style, while Steckel, a former Marine, was a disciplinarian.

Marino, Easley Best In NFL

MIAMI (AP) — The accolades keep rolling in for Dan Marino.

The Miami Dolphins' record-breaking quarterback was named Tuesday as The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Year, winning the honor over Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who set a new National Football League single-season rushing record.

Marino, in only his second NFL season, shattered five league passing marks in leading the Dolphins to a 14-2 record and the AFC Eastern Division title.

"It's nice to have all the records," he says. "But it's better to play on a team that can win as many games as this one has."

The 23-year-old quarterback finished the season with 362 completions; 5,084 yards passing and 48 touchdown passes. He also had nine 300-yard games passing and topped the 400-yard plateau four times — both all-time highs.

"What can you say?" Dolphins Coach Don Shula asked after watching Marino toss four TD passes to lead his team to a 28-21 victory over the Dallas Cowboys Monday night. "It's hard to believe Dan is only in his second year considering all the things he has accomplished."

Marino collected 52 votes for Offensive Player of the Year to 18 for Dickerson, also a second-year pro, who smashed O.J. Simpson's single-season rushing record.

A scattering of votes also went to Chicago's Walter Payton, San Francisco's Joe Montana and Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders.

Marino's 48 touchdown passes in 16 games was 33 percent better than the previous record, 36 in 14 games by Y.A. Tittle of the New York Giants in 1963 and George Blanda of the Houston Oilers in 1961.

There was no asterisk involved, though. Marino had 40 after 14 games.

He also averaged almost 318 yards per game in becoming the NFL's first 5,000-yard passer — breaking Dan Fouts' 1981 record of 4,802 — and surpassed the completion record (360) Fouts set the same year.

Passed over by 26 teams in 1983 NFL draft, Marino passed for 2,210 yards and 20 touchdowns with only six interceptions last season and was the first rookie quarterback voted to the Pro Bowl game.

This year, he began with five touchdown passes in an opening-game 35-17 victory over defending National Conference champion Washington and had fewer than two TD passes only once — he threw just one in a 24-23 triumph over Philadelphia. He also had help from an offensive line that allowed him to be sacked only 13 times in 16 games and from two game-breaking wide receivers, Clayton and Mark Duper.

"I think I'm fortunate because I've been able to play with great players to help me accomplish a lot of good things," said Marino. "Any award I get makes me feel good because it shows the guys were able to help me out."

But Shula said there's more to it than that.

"He deserves all the recognition that he can get," said the Miami coach. "He's done things that nobody else has done. But what's so great about him is the way that he does it in a way that you don't even notice it while he does. And the way he handles it is so great."

NEW YORK (AP) — Strong safety Kenny Easley of the Seattle Seahawks, a man his coach says had the best season of any defender he's ever seen, was named today as the National Football League's defensive player of the year by the Associated Press.

Easley was the bulwark of Seattle's offensive defense, a defense that produced turnovers in bunches and scored eight touchdowns on its own. Easley, who led the NFL with 10 interceptions, scored two of them himself.

"Kenny Easley is simply a great football player," says his coach, Chuck Knox. "I've never seen a defensive player have a better year in the 31 years I've been coaching."

Cox, White Pace West Craven Win

VANCEBORO — Tim Cox tallied 20 points and William White 14 to lead West Craven to a 75-50 victory over Farmville Central Tuesday in 3-A non-conference high school basketball.

Stephanie Newton led a foursome of Lady Jaguars in double figures with 20 points as Farmville Central rolled to a 60-50 victory over West Craven in the girls game. Lisa Lang chipped in 14 points, Debra Joyner 12 and Joy Peaden 11 for Farmville, now 6-1 overall.

West Craven's Linda Gatlin led all scorers with 22 points, while Jarwan Cox added 15.

Andre Vines paced Farmville with 15 points, while Ronnie Barnes added 14 and Bobby Evans 10.

West Craven took a 19-10 edge in the first quarter, then increased the margin to 41-26 at halftime. The Jaguars, now 2-5 on the season, were unable to trim the deficit.

Harris, Andrews Lift GCA, Lady Knights Top Bethel

Maury Harris fired in 16 points and Dan Andrews added 15 as Greenville Christian defeated Bethel 68-58 Tuesday in high school basketball action.

Jo Williams pumped in 14 points to lead the GCA girls to a 41-31 win over Bethel.

"Both teams came out flat," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "Our girls went inside more and had good percentage shots as a result."

The GCA boys rolled up a 38-24 advantage at halftime, then cruised to its fourth win in nine outings.

Keith Murphy led Bethel with 19 points, while David Smith added 13 and David Davis 12.

"It was an easier game than most of them, but we played in spurts," Thatcher said. "We've got to key in on third quarter. We're just not playing well then, and we have to make up for it in fourth quarter."

"Dan Andrews played one of his best games overall; he led us in rebounding and assists and still managed to score his points."

Bullets Give Shue 700th NBA Win

By The Associated Press
Seven-hundred victories, 700 losses and 53 birthday candles. It all added up to quite a day for Washington Coach Gene Shue.

Shue became the first National Basketball Association coach to lose 700 games when the Bullets lost for the fourth consecutive time on Sunday night. But on Tuesday, he celebrated his 53rd birthday by joining Red Auerbach and Jack Ramsay in the 700-victory club as his team outlasted the New Jersey Nets 104-95.

"Winning 700 games doesn't mean a whole lot," Shue said. "The significance of winning this single game was breaking the four-game losing streak we had, not the 700th game."

The Bullets trailed 80-71 with 3:18 left in the third period, but they held New Jersey to a 6-for-24 shooting percentage over the final 15 minutes to win easily.

"I feel much older now than I did before," Shue said.

In other NBA games, it was Boston 126, New York 108; Los Angeles Lakers 117, Atlanta 116;

Cleveland 118, San Antonio 110; Indiana 88, Utah 81; Houston 104, Chicago 96; Kansas City 127, Phoenix 116; Milwaukee 110, Dallas 96; Denver 126, Golden State 122 in overtime and Seattle 109, Portland 99.

The Bullets, who got 30 points, 18 rebounds and seven assists from Cliff Robinson and 28 points from Gus Williams, outscored the Nets 12-2 in the last three minutes of the third quarter to take an 83-82 lead, then held New Jersey to 13 points in the final 12 minutes.

"Our defense was sensational in the fourth quarter," Shue said. "We played the person with the ball, overplayed the passes, and Tom McMillen did a fine job on Buck Williams."

Williams, who led the Nets with a season-high 29 points and had 14 rebounds, scored 16 in the first half as New Jersey took a 56-53 lead. But he managed only five points in the final period.

"I'm kind of like an insurance policy," said McMillen, who played 31 minutes, 21 over his average, because Jeff Rutland was sidelined with an eye injury and Rick Mahorn was limited to 16 scoreless minutes because of an upset stomach. "I'm there in case of foul trouble or injuries. My game is not at its peak offensively, but on defense I can come in and play hard."

Mike O'Koren, who had missed seven games because of a bruised shoulder, returned to action for the Nets, but New Jersey still has four other injured players — Darryl Dawkins, Albert King, Darwin Cook and Wayne Sappleton.

Lakers 117, Hawks 116
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 12 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, including two sky hooks in the last nine seconds, to lift Los Angeles past Atlanta.

The first hook gave the Lakers a 115-114 lead, but Glenn Rivers' two free throws put the Hawks in front with five seconds remaining. There were only two seconds left when Abdul-Jabbar hit the game-winner.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 25 points, an NBA season-high 20 assists and 14 rebounds for the Lakers, while Rivers had a career-high 25 points for Atlanta.

Celtics 126, Knicks 108
Larry Bird led four Boston players with 21 points or more by scoring 23, including 10 during a 28-10 surge in the second quarter that broke open a close game against New York.

When the Knicks tied the score 44-44 with 9:19 left in the second period, it was the seventh deadlock of the game, but a 12-2 run made it 56-46, and with nine seconds left in the half, the Celtics were ahead 72-54. They led by as many as 27 points in the second half.

Bernard King had 29 points and Darrell Walker 24 for the Knicks, while Kevin McHale, Robert Parish and Dennis Johnson had 21 each for Boston.

Bucks 110, Mavericks 96
Milwaukee took over sole possession of first place in the Central Division as Terry Cummings scored 29 points against Dallas.

The Bucks led 36-15 after the first 12 minutes as Cummings scored 12 points in the first period. He added 13 more in the final quarter.

Rolando Blackman led the Mavericks with 24 points.
Cavaliers 118, Spurs 110

Roy Hinson scored 32 points against San Antonio to boost Cleveland to its fourth victory in 23 outings and second in a row.

The Cavaliers led by 15 points with 3:43 to go, but the Spurs, who got 32 points from Mike Mitchell, scored nine in a row to cut the deficit to 113-107. A basket by Hinson and a free throw 20 seconds later sealed the victory.

Rockets 104, Bulls 96
Houston scored the last nine points of the game to beat Chicago in the first meeting between rookie sensations Akeem Olajuwon and Michael Jordan.

Olajuwon, who scored 13 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter, hit two free throws to put the Rockets ahead for good at 97-96 with 1:18 left.

Orlando Woolridge scored 28 points for the Bulls, while Jordan had 18 before a season-high high crowd of 18,543 at Chicago Arena.

Nuggets 126, Warriors 122
Wayne Cooper rebounded a missed shot and dunked to break a 122-122 tie with 1:20 left in overtime against Golden State.
Alex English, who led the Nuggets with 29 points, made two free throws with nine seconds remaining to clinch the victory. Purvis Short, returning from an injury that kept him out of two games, scored 38 points for the Warriors.

Sonics 109, Trail Blazers 99
Seattle handed Portland its fifth straight defeat as Jack Sikma had 27 points and 22 rebounds for the SuperSonics.

Pacers 88, Jazz 81
Indiana handed Utah its fourth straight defeat while winning for the seventh time in 25 outings.

The Jazz held the Pacers to 13 points in the second quarter and Darrell Griffith scored 13 of his 29 points in the third period to help Utah take a 66-59 margin into the final 12 minutes.

But rookie Tony Brown scored four points during an 8-0 Indiana run that gave it the lead for good with five minutes to go.

Kings 127, Suns 116
Mike Woodson scored 10 points and Don Buse had three three-point goals in the decisive second period to lift Kansas City over Phoenix.

Swedes Claim Davis Cup

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — "We're going to take it back next year," said U.S. Davis Cup team captain Arthur Ashe after Sweden had wrapped up a 4-1 triumph for the most coveted team title in tennis.

A few minutes later on Tuesday night, two guards and a few hundred fans watched as the huge trophy was put in a big box for shipment to Stockholm, the Swedish capital.

Stockholms like to note that while its nation has but 8 million people, it has four top-ten tennis players — more than any other country in the world.

The defeat was the worst for the United States since 1973 when Australia won 5-0 in Cleveland.

At least some of the cause may have been the surface in the indoor arena.

"Unless you have a good four weeks you're not ready to play on clay," said John McEnroe, who earned the Americans' only point Tuesday by beating Mats Wilander 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 in a meaningless match.

"Anything other than that, I don't think it matters really. I don't think that you're going to be used to the court. You just hope for the best."

In the other closing singles match, Henrik Sundstrom spoiled American Jimmy Arias' Davis Cup debut, 3-6, 6-6, 6-3.

McEnroe, the Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, and doubles partner Peter Fleming had complained several times about the clay-courts during their loss Monday night.

Both McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, who lost to Sundstrom Sunday and then left Sweden Tuesday morning, play an attacking game and take the ball on the rise.

"So you need to have the ball bounce the right way every time and it just wasn't," McEnroe said. "If you play the way they (The Swedes) do at least they have more time."

"I felt I was going to play better today. That was maybe the problem because I figured I was going to play like that two days ago."

"So maybe I wasn't as prepared mentally as I needed to be."

And coming into a Davis Cup final after long layoffs don't improve your chances either. One of Ashe's major concerns prior the final was that the Americans weren't match-tough.

McEnroe, the world's No. 1 player, had not played for seven weeks because of a three-week ban and a wrist injury. Connors and Fleming had been idle five weeks.

Wilander, match-tough after defending the Australian Open title on grass 10 days ago, did not understand why the Americans complained about the clay surface.

"They play in the French Open every year. And clay is one of the oldest surfaces in tennis," said the Swede, who beat McEnroe on clay, hard-court and grass last year.

Next year, the United States will play Japan away in the first round while Sweden plays Chile in South America.

The final? Well, it could be a repeat but with the U.S. having the home court advantage this time. And it certainly won't be played on clay.

"There is a strong possibility that we'll play Sweden in next year's final," said McEnroe.

"But if (Ivan) Lendl decides to play next year, we'll play Czechoslovakia in the semis. And that could be a tough match in Czechoslovakia."

"But the favorites are the U.S. and Sweden in the final. I would like that."

McEnroe said Sweden would have had a lot less chance if the final had been played in America.

"But, on the other hand, we don't get that kind of support that I've seen in other countries," McEnroe said.

"There are so many other sports that are bigger than tennis in America. We have so many great athletes and, other than the Olympics, it's hard for people to get involved in Davis Cup."

Four Schools Contemplate Action Against NCHSAA

By The Associated Press
Four high schools may pursue legal actions in response to the 1985-86 North Carolina High School Athletic Association realignment, arguing the changes could prove financially destructive to the schools' athletic programs.

The executive board of the association approved realignment of some 337 schools about a month ago, but Central Davidson, East Lincoln, Lincolnton and West Caldwell are anything but happy about the moves they will be facing.

"At this point, our board of education did authorize our attorney and myself to go ahead with research for possible litigation," said Ronnie Brooks, associate superintendent of the Lincoln County school system. "We're going to report back and look at some kinds of steps in early January."

"The problems lie with this being the third or fourth time East Lincoln and Lincolnton have been involved with being put in a six-team conference," Brooks added.

East Lincoln and Lincolnton have been placed in a 3-A conference with Fred T. Foard, Hibriten, St. Stephens and West Lincoln, something Lincoln and Caldwell county officials say could be financial ruin. Their complaint is that they have to travel across Catawba County and into Caldwell County to compete in their conference's games.

"We know it's kind of final," West Caldwell athletic director Mike

Biggerstaff said, "but we administrators are supposed to look out for our young people. It's awfully hard to sit back and see our young people dealt what's been given to them."

Although all appeals avenues through the NCHSAA have been exhausted, the four schools say they will continue to fight to the end.

"We'll have a community-wide meeting Jan. 7," said Central Davidson athletic director Kevin Firquin. "No decision has been made at this time. We'll meet and discuss their total situation then." Central Davidson have been aligned with High Point Andrews, High Point Central, Asheboro, James Ragsdale and Trinity.

Central Davidson wants to compete with Charlotte-area schools.

Charlie Adams, NCHSAA executive director, said the association does not welcome legal action by the schools and that membership in the NCHSAA is voluntary.

"History shows we are a voluntary organization," Adams said, "and that when schools decide to join, they agree to go by the rules."

"I think everyone else who might have been unhappy and dissatisfied has taken the position that it's over with and they will accept (the realignment)," Adams said.

Adams added in a telephone interview that there will be no more changes until the four-year cycle ends.

"As far as we're concerned, realignment is over," he said. "Regardless of what people say or do, we're working on winter sports."

Widenhofer New Tiger Coach

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Woody Widenhofer, a linebacker at Missouri in the early '60s and a long-time assistant with the Pittsburgh Steelers, is returning to his alma mater as head football coach, sources told the Associated Press.
Missouri scheduled a news conference for today in Columbia to make the announcement.
Widenhofer, 41, was a finalist for the Missouri job in 1977 but lost out to Warren Powers, who was dismissed last month after the Tigers went 3-7-1 for his first losing season.
Widenhofer's selection ends a month-long search which had sharply divided many Missouri factions over a decision by Chancellor Barbara Uehling to stretch the school's Affirmative Action guidelines the full 30 days. Several top candidates withdrew because of the delay, including Maryland Coach Bobby Ross and Tulsa's John Cooper.
Widenhofer last year served as head coach for the Tulsa franchise of the United States Football League, the Oklahoma Outlaws. His job was dissolved when the Outlaws left Tulsa after going 6-12 their first year and merged with the USFL's Arizona franchise.
Widenhofer, whose full name is Robert William Widenhofer, is a 1965 Missouri graduate. He was selected Tuesday over two other finalists, Oklahoma assistant Merv Johnson and Cal-Fullerton head coach Gene Murphy.
After coaching in the Detroit high school system, Widenhofer, a native of Riverview, Mich., began his college coaching career in 1969 as

Henderson Relies On Instinct

NEW YORK (AP) — Instinct. That's what Rickey Henderson says makes him the best basestealer in baseball.
Not sheer speed. Henderson doubts that he's the fastest man in the game.
Willie Wilson of Kansas City probably could beat Henderson in a footrace. The St. Louis Cardinals' Willie McGee might be faster. So might another half-dozen of baseball's sprinters.
"Instinct," says Henderson. "I also get a quick first two steps from my stance. I read the pitchers well, and I'm aggressive."
Another thing that makes him a good basestealer is his .400 on-base percentage. In five major league seasons, his batting average is .291, and he walks an average of twice in every three games.
All these factors led to Henderson becoming the greatest single-season basestealer in baseball in 1982 when he stole 130 bases. Three times in his five seasons he has stolen 100 or more bases.
"You might just as well give him second base," says one of Henderson's new teammates, New York Yankees pitcher John Montefusco. "He lights a fire under everybody. Somebody like him gets everybody going."
In one of the most celebrated trades of the offseason, Henderson came to the Yankees from the Oakland A's on Dec. 8 along with minor league pitcher Bert Bradley for pitchers Jay Howell, Jose Rijo, Tim Lirtsas and Eric Plunk and outfielder Stan Javier. The Yankees signed him for five years and $8.6 million.
Henderson, who turns 26 on Christmas Day, saw his stolen base production drop to 66 last year — still an American League-leading figure — as the A's asked him to provide more power and less speed. In the tradeoff, Henderson achieved career-high numbers in homers (16) and RBI (58).
With the Yankees, however, he likely will return to past form.
"He fits into our plans just perfect," Yankees Manager Yogi Berra said Tuesday at a luncheon to introduce Henderson to the New York media. "He'll be a good man in center field, and he's exciting on the bases."
"He's already got my signs. He can go anytime he wants."
Berra already has pencilled in Henderson as his leadoff hitter, followed in the batting order by Willie Randolph, Don Mattingly, Dave Winfield, Don Baylor and Ken Griffey. Although a left fielder for the A's, Berra plans to use Henderson in center field with Winfield in right and Griffey in left.
"The way I look at it, the Yankees were looking for a leadoff hitter who can help out by getting on base," Henderson said. "I can make things happen, steal a base, get in scoring position, score from third on a grounder."
"I know the guy behind me can put the bat on the ball," he said. "In Oakland, I had to fight a lot, steal second, steal third. The Yankees lineup will help me get into position to score more runs."
Jim Dent, one of the longest hitters on the pro golf tour, says his biggest problem is finding the ball after he hits it.

Ga. Bulldogs Investigated

ATLANTA (AP) — The NCAA is investigating possible recruiting violations in the University of Georgia football program, Athletic Director Vince Dooley said.
"It's true that there has been an ongoing cooperative inquiry into a limited number of allegations regarding recruiting violations in football at Georgia," said Dooley, who is in Orlando, Fla., preparing his Bulldogs for their Citrus Bowl game with Florida State.
"According to NCAA enforcement policy, it would be inappropriate for me to comment any further on the matter at this time," Dooley is quoted as saying in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution.
The NCAA also is looking at Georgia's basketball program because of allegations of irregularities involving the recruiting of Marietta High School star Cedric Henderson, the newspaper said.

Incumbents Win Delayed State House Primaries

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Six weeks after helping choose a president, governor and U.S. senator, voters returned to the polls to nominate state House candidates in four eastern North Carolina districts that only recently escaped legal limbo.

Four Democrats and one Republican won nomination in Tuesday's delayed primary in Nash, Wilson and Edgecombe counties. The tardy elections resulted from a dispute dating from 1981, when blacks filed a class-action suit claiming that a reapportionment plan approved by the Legislature was discriminatory.

State Reps. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and Allen Barbee, D-Nash, were nominated without opposition in House Districts 8 and 72, respectively. They face no Republican opposition.

Milton "Toby" Fitch Jr. defeated Shelly Willingham to capture the Democratic nomination in District 70. Fitch also has no Republican opponent. Unofficial returns showed Fitch with 2,206 votes or 77 percent to 666 votes or 23 percent for Willingham.

Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, defeated three Democratic opponents in to win re-nomination in District 71 and will face Republican Larry Ethridge in a Jan. 29 general election.

Mrs. Fenner avoided a runoff by garnering 1,604 votes or 59 percent. Richard Harn got 776 votes or 28 percent; Michael Killion received 239 votes or 9 percent; and Ronald Hoelz got 122 votes or 4 percent. The second-place finisher could have called for a runoff had Mrs. Fenner received less than 50 percent of the vote.

Voter turnout was extremely light. Only 12.4 percent of registered Democrats voted in Edgecombe County, and 9 percent voted in Wilson County. Turnout figures weren't available for Nash County.

The 1981 lawsuit alleged that the redistricting plan violated the 1965 Voting Rights Act by diluting minority voting strength. The state responded that district lines were not drawn with intent to discriminate against any minority group.

The Legislature revised the district map several times, only to see parts of it rejected repeatedly by the Justice Department or federal courts.

Federal Judges Dickson Phillips, Franklin Dupree and Earl Britt created the four districts in a Nov. 2 ruling, after the U.S. Department of Justice rejected Oct. 1 the Legislature's final reapportionment plan for those areas. The Legislature had created one predominantly black single-member district and three mostly-white three-member districts.

Under the new plan, District 70, representing parts of all three counties, has a population of 46,570, 66 percent of which is black.

District 8, represented by Mavretic, is comprised mostly of Edgecombe and northern Nash counties and is 48.3 percent black. Its population is 46,565.

District 71, including most of Wilson County and parts of southern Nash County, is 20.2 percent black with a population of 46,565.

District 72 is 23.3 percent black and has a population of 46,573.

On Jan. 26, the three-judge panel gave the Legislature until March 16 to fashion an acceptable plan. The judges warned that they'd draw the map themselves if the Legislature didn't do it right.

The Legislature revised the map again in a special March session. Most of the plan — including a new Senate district in Mecklenburg and Cabarrus counties and House districts in Wake, Durham, Mecklenburg and Forsyth counties — won the judges' approval April 20.

Two Marines Die In Florida Crash

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Two crewmen on a routine practice bombing mission were killed while apparently trying to parachute out of their Marine Corps jet as the aircraft crashed into the shore of Lake Kissimmee, authorities said.

The bodies of the pilot and a bombardier-navigator were found several feet from where the A6E Intruder jet crashed Tuesday, on the marshy edges of a cattle ranch that borders Lake Kissimmee, along the Osceola-Polk county line.

The names of the two victims were being withheld until their families are notified, officials said.

The aviators and the jet were part of the all-weather Attack Squadron 533 attached to the Marine Aircraft Wing at Cherry Point, N.C.. They were temporarily stationed at Patrick Air Force Base, near Cocoa Beach, said Sgt. Marie Johnson, spokeswoman at Cherry Point.

The jet and crew were taking part in military exercises with the 549th Tactical Air Support Training Group, officials said. The jet was flying in a holding pattern, waiting to proceed to the Avon Park Bombing Range when the crash occurred, said Patrick spokeswoman Lt. Bo Clearman.

The aircraft was flying at 400 mph and disintegrated on impact, at about 12:30 p.m. It had taken off from Patrick at 11:25 a.m., said Marine Lt. Dennis Brook, another spokesman at Cherry Point.

"When an aircraft traveling at that speed hits, everything goes everywhere," said Lt. Alexander Shockley, public information officer at the bombing range. "We're talking about a massive explosion."

A crater some 20 to 30 feet wide and about five feet deep was created by the explosion and smoke and flames could be seen rising from it, according to reports.

Although eyewitnesses told Osceola County Sheriff's deputies the two aviators died while trying to parachute to safety, officials said the facts were not yet clear.

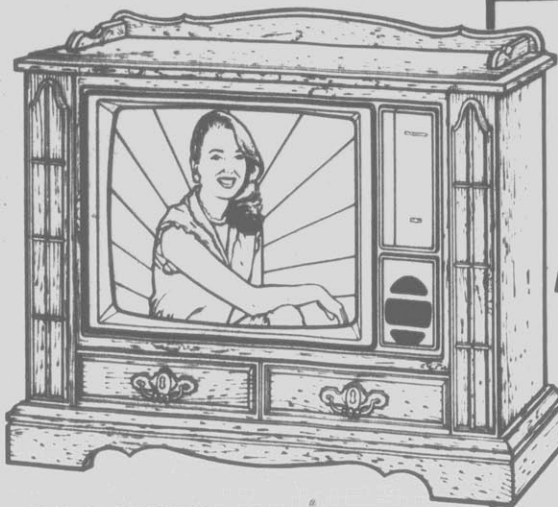

"We just don't know what happened out there," said Major Frank Rhoads at the bombing range.

Charlie Rose Says Leaf Companies May Suffer Unless Surplus Is Sold

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco companies may suffer politically in Congress if they do not buy surplus tobacco clogging stabilization warehouses, U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose says.

"I'm not threatening the companies," said Rose, chairman of the House tobacco subcommittee. "I'm pleading with the companies to help us and I think they are. But we've got to be ready to use every gun in our arsenal, including (cigarette) excise tax."

Rep. Charles O. Whitley, D-N.C., said the announcement Monday on the proposed assessment hike "adds a great deal of steam to the move to reduce price supports."

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. recommended Monday that the fees collected from farmers to finance the federal leaf program be increased next year to 25 cents per pound. The 1984 rate was 7 cents.

Whitley said it also added pressure on congressmen from tobacco states to seek legislation that would restate for at least the 1982, 1983 and 1984 crops some federal subsidization of the program. But he conceded that such a renewed subsidy would be politically difficult to pass.

Rose said the hope that Congress would renew tobacco subsidies was "pretty farfetched" considering the current national budget problems and considering that such politically popular programs as veteran benefits were threatened.

But Rose said it was impossible to ask growers to live with a 25-cent assessment.

Fred Bond, general manager of the grower-financed co-op, said Tuesday that "it was not the intent" of the board to try to pressure a reduction in price supports but only a reflection of the "basic reality" of the tobacco program's financial plight and the possibility that Congress might cut the price support, which has been frozen since 1982.

Meanwhile, U.S. Agriculture Department officials said they weren't sure when Agriculture Secretary John Block would act on stabilization's recommendation.

Under the recommendation, a farmer with a 50-acre tobacco operation that produces 100,000 pounds would pay an assessment of $25,000 next year, up from $7,000 paid this year under the current assessment.

The fee is paid when the crop is marketed and is deducted from the check farmers receive at the auction warehouse.

The final decision on assessment will be made by U.S. Agriculture John Block, who in the past has approved all of Stabilization's proposed fees.

Tobacco farmers began paying the assessment in 1982 after Congress enacted legislation aimed at making the tobacco program self-supporting. The money is used primarily to pay handling costs and recover losses on resale of tobacco acquired by Stabilization with government loans.

Stabilization buys tobacco that fails to be a bid above the federal support price.

The proposed fee increase came on the heels of a 3.7 percent cut in next year's basic marketing quota.

Vaughn Named Justice

RALEIGH (AP) — Making what he said was a difficult choice, Gov. Jim Hunt appointed North Carolina Court of Appeals Chief Judge Earl W. Vaughn to the state Supreme Court, replacing retiring Associate Justice J. William Copeland.

"I don't ever recall a situation when I have had so many outstanding candidates from which to choose," Hunt said Tuesday.

Hunt passed over such contenders as Court of Appeals Judge John Webb and state Rep. George W. Miller, D-Durham.

"Earl Vaughn will bring to the Supreme Court a wealth of judicial, legal and legislative experience," said Hunt in a prepared statement. "He has tremendous respect within the legal community, and I believe he will offer the kind of common-sense approach that made Copeland such a valuable member of the court."

Copeland's retirement takes effect Dec. 31. Vaughn, 56, will serve the remainder of Copeland's term, which expires in 1986.

The appointment of Vaughn means that Hunt can fill two Appeals Court vacancies before leaving office Jan. 5. Judge Maurice Braswell announced recently that he was stepping down.

A native of Rockingham County, Vaughn served five terms in the North Carolina House of Representatives and was House speaker during the 1967-69 legislative session. He earned his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

IN THE STATE

Appeals Court Says Safe Roads Rule OK

RALEIGH (AP) — The legality of the section of the state's Safe Roads Act that says a breathalyzer operator can submit an affidavit in District Court and does not have to appear as a witness has been upheld by the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

But Assistant Attorney General Dale Talbert said the use of affidavits had been decided last week by the state Supreme Court in another case, making Tuesday's ruling moot.

The ruling came after District Court Judge Elton Tucker ruled the affidavit section was unconstitutional because it violated a defendant's right to face his accusers.

In another ruling, the court said the state Constitution permits a city that has annexed a neighborhood to reverse the move because of a civil rights challenge.

The court, ruling in a suit brought by the Clybourn Pines-Country Club Citizens Association against the Lumberton school board and the Robeson County school board, affirmed the transfer of the neighborhood from the city school system to the county school system in 1982.

Children from the neighborhood had attended Lumberton city schools during the 1960s, even though they lived outside the city limits. In 1969, special legislation approved by the General Assembly allowed the city school board to formally annex the neighborhood into the city system.

But the annexation was challenged by the U.S. Justice Department, which said it violated the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The General Assembly enacted another special bill in June 1982, allowing the city school board to de-annex the neighborhood and the county school board to accept it into the county system.

Hunt, Education Officials Disagree On Bell's Report

RALEIGH (AP) — Shortcomings in North Carolina's public schools that are included in a U.S. Department of Education report emphasize the need to approve increased education funding in a proposed two-year budget, Gov. Jim Hunt says.

The report shows average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores in North Carolina have not improved during the past two years, and the state ranks near the bottom nationally in payment of public school teachers.

"While we have made strong progress, we do have a long way to go. These rankings reinforce the need for full funding of my education recommendations to the 1985 Legislature. Those recommendations are crucial to the continued improvement of our schools," Hunt said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

A state education official said the federal study was a "waste of time" and treated North Carolina unfairly by putting it in categories where it didn't belong.

"The federal government has sponsored some research that has been helpful in pointing the way to improve our schools," said Howard Manloff, an assistant policy development director with the Department of Public Instruction. "That's what we need to do — not make false comparisons that mislead."

Statistics released by outgoing Education Secretary T.H. Bell showed that North Carolina ranked 19th among 21 states and the District of Columbia on the 1984 SAT with an average score of 827. That matched the average score in 1982, when the state ranked 19th. Hunt said the scores had improved over the last several years.

North Carolina ranked 16th in the number of students who took the test — with 46.4 percent in 1984. In 1982, 46.6 percent took the test for a rank of 17th.

Manloff said one reason for the low average test scores is the unusually high number of North Carolina students who take it.

"The more kids who take it, the lower the average score will be," Manloff said. "We have a situation where all our kids who go to college take the test. We have a major emphasis on education, so a whole lot of kids are interested in it.

"Across the country, SAT scores change very little. If there had been a change, it would have been by only two or three points," Manloff said.

To meet President Reagan's call to improve the SAT scores to the same level held in 1972, North Carolina would have to gain 22 percent by 1990, the statistics showed. The goal for 1985 would be an improvement of 3.7 percent.

The federal study that produced the statistics showed that North Carolina's graduation rate in 1983 was 69.3 percent, up from 68.4 percent in 1982. The graduation gain needed to meet President Reagan's challenge by 1990 is 20.7 percent.

North Carolina ranked 40th in teachers' salaries in 1983 with average pay listed at $17,585. In 1981, North Carolina was 29th; the average salary was $15,858.

"Clearly, we have a problem with teachers' salaries," Manloff said. "We are worried about salaries. But we think we have a pretty high quality teaching force and we're not going to keep it unless salaries go up. The General Assembly recognized that in June and raised them 15 percent. Unquestionably, they have to go higher."

The average class size in the state in 1983 was 19.8 pupils. The state ranked 41st in that category, meaning that 40 states had a smaller average class size. In 1982, the average size of a North Carolina class was 19.9 pupils, which ranked the state 38th nationally.

The survey showed that 12.2 percent of North Carolina's school revenue comes from federal funds, which ranks the state seventh, the same ranking it held in 1982 when 11.9 percent of the funds came from the federal government.

The 1983 spending per pupil in North Carolina was $2,162, ranking the state 44th. In 1982, North Carolina was ranked 42nd, and spent $2,099 on the average for each student.

Hunt Sticks To Proposal To Transfer Dix Property

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt intends to proceed with a plan to transfer ownership of 355 acres of Dorothea Dix Hospital property to North Carolina State University despite criticism from other officials, a Hunt spokesman said.

"Governor Hunt feels very strongly that the appropriate action is being taken," said Lynne Garrison, Hunt's deputy press secretary. "The secretary of administration has the authority to approve this transfer ... under regulations approved by the Council of State."

But some state officials criticized the plan, saying the move usurped their authority.

"It's a move that has far-reaching implications," said State Treasurer

Harlan Boyles. "It has its advantages and disadvantages. As a consequence, it's a matter deserving serious discussion and consideration ... by those who would favor it and those who would oppose it."

Hunt announced Monday he planned to transfer the land ownership through a little-used state statute that allows the secretary of administration to swap land between agencies under the governor's control.

He recommended that the General Assembly transfer to the university another 741 acres of property on the Dix campus controlled by the North Carolina Farm Commission.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks agreed with Boyles that the move circumvents the Council of State's normal role in approving land deals.

"It's startling," said Brooks. "It's not fair to the Council of State. And it's not fair to the city. ... They have an interest in how (1,480) acres in downtown Raleigh is used."

Senior Deputy Attorney General Andrew Vanore advised Hunt several weeks ago that Secretary of Administration Jane Patterson, a Hunt appointee, could use her agency's power over state property to make the transfer without approval of the Council of State.

But Brooks said Vanore's opinion classifies N.C. State as an agency under the governor's control. The university is run by an independent board of trustees.

Gasoline Prices At Lowest Rate Since Christmas 1979

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Santa apparently has struck a deal with service stations in North Carolina and South Carolina this Christmas. Motorists will be able to buy gasoline this year for less than what they have paid during any Christmas period in the past five years and for nearly 4 cents a gallon less than last Christmas, the AAA-Carolina Motor Club says. The motor club also reported that gasoline is averaging $1.191 per gallon in North Carolina and $1.207 in South Carolina, less than the national average of $1.222 a gallon. The club cautioned motorists to fill their tanks during the early part of the weekend, however, if they planned trips during the holiday. A pre-Christmas check of 148 service stations in the two states showed 64 percent plan to close Christmas Day. Survey results also show that about 28 percent of the monitored stations in both states will be open 24 hours a day during the holiday period. During the four weeks since Thanksgiving, gasoline prices in both North Carolina and South Carolina have declined an average of 1.5 cents a gallon. "Prices are dropping fairly steadily at this point, and we expect them to continue falling," said Ralph Peters, president of the 264,000-member affiliate of the American Automobile Association. "We think the decline will be most noticeable in late winter or early spring, as demand for heating oil begins to slacken," he said. The AAA survey showed an across-the-board drop in both states for both regular and unleaded grades of gas at both full and self-service pumps. In North Carolina, self-service regular gas dipped 2.2 cents to average $1.033 per gallon while self-service unleaded dropped 2 cents to average $1.116 per gallon. South Carolina's self-service regular dropped 1 cent to average $1.051 per gallon and self-service unleaded fell 0.6 cents to average $1.138 per gallon. At North Carolina's full-service pumps, both regular and unleaded grades of gas declined 1.9 cents a gallon. Regular grade now averages $1.279 a gallon and unleaded, $1.336 a gallon. In South Carolina, full-service regular averages $1.294, a drop of 0.8 cents a gallon, and unleaded averages $1.343, a drop of 1.6 cents a gallon. The difference between pumping gas yourself or having the station attendant pump it amounts to an average of 23 cents per gallon, the same as the record high set at Thanksgiving and 2 cents more than last Christmas. With an average price-per-gallon of $1.15, Fayetteville has the lowest prices in either North Carolina or South Carolina. Winston-Salem has the highest prices with an average of $1.259 a gallon.

The Christmas grinch is threatening to steal Christmas from motorists in Charleston, S.C., where prices average $1.257 a gallon and where one service station is charging $1.559 a gallon for standard unleaded gasoline.

ROCKET MAN — A.G. Deyton of Charlotte gazes skyward from beside the 40-foot replica of a Saturn 2B rocket he welded out of aluminum. He made it from a photo his daughter cut out of a newspaper 20 years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

Charlotte Man Has Rocket With No Place It Can Go

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — When A.G. Deyton put his 40-foot rocket on the launching pad last month, he got an official call — not from the president or from NASA, but from the local police. "They said, 'You're not going to shoot that thing off, are you?'" said Deyton, who built the two-thirds scale model of the Saturn 2B's second stage last summer. He said an officer came by and told him 10 mothers had called and said their boys reported that the gleaming aluminum structure would be thrust into orbit Nov. 1 from Deyton's sheet-metal shop on the outskirts of Charlotte. "Last August it was sticking out of the shop at an angle, and when the school bus went by, the boys said, 'When are you gonna launch it,'" said Deyton, 63. "I said, 'When it's set up and you come by.' "I tell people if I had an engine, man, I'd push the switch to see it go. But it's strictly for display purposes." Deyton has wanted to build the rocket ever since his 8-year-old daughter cut a picture of the Saturn 2B — a forerunner of the Saturn V, which took men to the moon — out of the paper some 20 years ago. He had wanted to restore a Navy F4U Corsair fighter plane, which he worked on during World War II, but he couldn't find one.

"She said, 'Well, daddy, why don't you build a rocket,'" said Deyton. "I hadn't thought about it. But then I thought, the F4U represents the past. The rocket represents today." Recently his daughter, now a 28-year-old schoolteacher, brought her second-grade class by to see the rocket. "These little jokers were smart — they asked all kinds of questions," he said. "One of them tried to climb the guy wire up to the top." When one boy asked when he was going to launch it, Deyton turned a valve at the bottom of the rocket to let sun-heated air out with a loud hiss. "You should have seen him jump," he said. "It was worth $100." Deyton declined to say how much the rocket cost him to build, but he said it wasn't much. "If I had made it 20 years ago, it would have been worth half a million dollars in advertising by now," he said. "But now I'm semi-retired and I'm not looking for a thing." The rocket is emblazoned with "United States" in vertical blue letters and a small "N.C. State Alumni" decal underneath. Deyton said he's not going to put any advertisements on it but that he may put a disco ball on top that he says could be seen for 50 miles. ## Martin Finishes Cabinet

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrat Helen Powers of Asheville says the matter of tax cuts will have to be resolved by Gov.-elect Jim Martin and the General Assembly while her job as revenue secretary will be to see that the state's tax laws are administered fairly. Martin, a Republican, announced the final member of his 10-person cabinet Tuesday, when he named Ms. Powers, 59, as Secretary of Revenue. In a telephone interview from Raleigh Tuesday with the Asheville Citizen, Ms. Powers said she supported Martin's tax cut proposals and that it was her appraisal of him as a "man who would represent the state well" that caused her to support him in his campaign. Ms. Powers said Martin approached her about the cabinet position Dec. 10 in Asheville at Grove Park Inn where she was attending an appreciation dinner for supporters sponsored by the campaign. "I never aspired to political office," Ms. Powers said. "It was a bombshell." In announcing the appointment, Martin described Ms. Powers as a "real heroine of women in western North Carolina" and "a fine representative of the type of cabinet I hoped to assemble."

Fund-Raiser Offers Everthing, Including A Piggy That Got Kissed

By BOB SPRINGER
Associated Press Writer

MANITO, Ill. (AP) — This was one contest Nancy Proehl didn't exactly relish winning. As top money raiser for a charity drive she had to plant a kiss on a pig in front of 500 townfolk during halftime at a basketball game.

Mrs. Proehl, 41, was one of eight contestants whose names were placed on jars in public spots around this central Illinois farm town of 1,400 people for the fund-raiser.

Residents deposited money in the jar bearing the name of the person they wanted to see kiss a pig. When Mrs. Proehl's jars collected the most money, $167, she had a date with Fred, a 6-week-old piglet, for the halftime show.

A costumed Santa held the young porker while the winner cupped the animal's head in her hands.

Looking it squarely in the face, Mrs. Proehl took a deep breath and smooched. Then she winced, wiped her mouth on her sweater sleeve and proclaimed: "Blechhhh."

Fred was oblivious, but the audience gave a thunderous cheer.

"I think I kissed the nose. I don't know for sure, but it was wet and cold," Mrs. Proehl said.

Vickie Gilbert, who organized the event, said it raised $450 to help buy food baskets for the poor.

Layoffs at a Caterpillar Tractor Co. plant and hard times for farmers have left a lot of poverty in this area 20 miles southwest of Peoria, she said.

"This little pig brought this community together tonight, that's for sure," said Mrs. Gilbert. "We'd have been thrilled with (raising) $200."

J.D. Proehl should be pleased. His wife said he kisses better than a pig.

"It was cute — the pig that is," she said. "But there's no comparison with my husband."

Christmas Parties Abound, But They're Less Spirited

By GEOFFREY QUINN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — This holiday season promises a bountiful — if more sober — time for office party lovers, with more festivities planned and more of them underwritten by employers prospering in the economic rebound.

Among them are Hyatt Hotels parties tonight at 66 hotels across the country to raise money for charities.

In New York, textile wholesaler Alfred Heft is giving a sit-down dinner for his employees and friends. Warner Bros. Records Inc. partygoers will mingle with folk and rock musicians.

And in Noel, Mo., the 10 workers at Natural Log Homes are thinking of closing the shop one afternoon and inviting spouses to join them in munching on dips, cheeses and hot meatballs.

"What we are seeing is that things are a little better, bonuses are a little more generous and there's a little more giving," said Hilda Marx, an editor of Prentice-Hall Inc.'s annual survey of corporate Yuletide activities.

Of the 194 businesses surveyed — including factories, offices and banks — 83 percent planned Christmas parties.

Bell Scotch Whisky's fifth annual survey on Christmas parties found 10 percent more businesses throwing parties than a year ago, with 62 percent of the companies polled planning more expensive festivities, said Bell spokesman Andy Lavin.

Prentice-Hall also found that 27 percent of the companies it surveyed are handing out Christmas bonuses, 27 percent are giving gifts and 13 percent are giving both. Bell's survey found a 13 percent increase in the number of companies planning to hand out cash or gifts.

But an air of moderation will accompany festive spirits, even though 80 percent of parties will have liquor available, Mrs. Marx said.

"There is a great deal of awareness of a need to protect employees from themselves," she said. "Companies seem to be more aware about taking care that their employees drink within reason."

She said the change is partly the result of court cases, mostly recently in New Jersey and California, that found companies may be held liable for the actions of employees who drink too much at office parties. Tougher drunken driving laws also have had an effect.

The result is more food, more invitations to spouses, friends and children, and less to drink at companies big and small, she said.

At Heft's party on Thursday, friends of Hawyin Textile Inc. and its 14 employees, their spouses and guests will gather for a sit-down dinner of fettuccini, filet of sole and other fare.

"It's not going to be more alcoholic, it's going to be more food, more food," Heft said.

The 40 employees at the Manhattan office of Warner Bros. will be provided with sushi and an open bar, spokeswoman Liz Rosenberg said. The Roaches, a folk group, may drop by to sing carols, and the rock group ZZ Top, singer Madonna and a surprise Santa also may visit.

Hyatt Hotels employees and the public are invited to the chain's star-studded coast-to-coast affair tonight at 66 hotels in 52 cities. All proceeds, including bar tips, will go to selected charities.

Entry is by invitation only at the New York Hyatt party, but admission at the other hotels is either a new toy for the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve's "Toys for Tots" program or $2 to $5 depending on the hotel, the company said.

And in Seattle, Andy Seitz, head of Washington Mechanical Contractors Inc., climbed partly way up Mount

'Passage To India' Named Best Film

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Board of Review has named "Passage to India" best film of the year, the film's director, David Lean, best director, and two of the film's stars best actor, and best actress.

Victor Banerjee and Peggy Ashcroft were named best actor and best actress by the group — which has given its film awards since 1920 — for their work in the film adaptation of the E.M. Forster novel.

Sabine Azema was named best supporting actress for "A Sunday in the Country," and John Malkovich was chosen best supporting actor for "Places in the Heart."

The group also issued a "10 best films" list. "A Passage to India" was followed by "Paris, Texas," "The Killing Fields," "Places in the Heart," "Mass Appeal," "Country," "A Soldier's Story," "Birdy," "Careful, He Might Hear You" and "Under the Volcano."

"You may be suffering from the effects of whiplash and not even know it!"

"Whiplash" can occur when you are involved in an automobile accident, sustain a fall or just step off a curb the wrong way. Your neck and head is thrown forward or backward in a "whiplike" action. Whiplash is serious business. The worst part is that you may not know anything is seriously wrong until days or weeks later. Some symptoms of whiplash are:

- Neck Pain
- Headaches
- Arm Pain
- Dizziness
- Nausea
- Numbness in Hands
- Muscle Spasms
- Ringing in Ears

It's A Question Of Taste For TV's Auto Ads

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Prime-time television is littered with the mangled leftovers from reckless driving, high-speed car chases and good-ol'-boy stunts.

Is that any place to run an ad for the friendly, reliable family car?

That's a question automakers and their advertising agencies grapple with all the time, and the answer can be symbolized by a yellow light: proceed with caution.

"It certainly concerns us," said R.E. "Buck" Buchanan, executive vice president of the J. Walter Thompson ad agency, which supervises Ford's commercials. "Ford avoids excessively violent situations, but we can't walk away from the prime-time entertainment audience and every program that has a car crash."

"You have to use good judgment and common sense," said Jerry Rubin, president of Needham, Harper Worldwide, Honda's ad agency. "If it's borderline, we won't be in it. Honda's target prospect is not the racing aficionado or the aggressive 21-year-old male. We're an all-family product."

Competitive pressures and the recognition that the car companies' favorite targets, male viewers, are watching the action-packed "A-Team" and "Hardcastle & McCormick" are cited as explanations for why auto ads sometimes appear for programs that make mincemeat of their products.

Sports events, particularly football, always have found male audiences, and still do. "Football may be violent, but it is as American as apple pie," said Buchanan. "It's an action arena, and that's what cars are — action."

But the declining ratings of "Monday Night Football" and the steep asking price for major sports events are troubling some advertisers. Chevrolet rejected the 1985 Super Bowl at $1 million a minute, investing, instead, in the upcoming miniseries "Space."

In prime time, many men are watching less commercial TV and more pay-cable movies, says Dave Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research. So when men do tune in to the networks, car advertisers want to be there, too.

Cars and automotive products are the third largest network advertiser, behind food and toiletries, according to the Television Bureau of Advertising. The Bureau says car advertising was up 9 percent for the first nine months in 1984 over the same period in 1983.

"Each General Motors division make its own advertising decisions," said Harold Jackson, General Motors' publicity manager. "I'm sure if they felt that cars were being used dangerously, they'd think long and hard before they went into it. But it's tough to find shows that don't involve some use of automobiles. They're so much a part of everyday life."

Buchanan makes the distinction between gratuitous recklessness and professional use of cars.

"If cops are chasing criminals, or firefighters are getting to a fire, or ambulance drivers are taking a cardiac patient to the hospital, that's OK," he said. "We're concerned about shows that squeal tires getting out of the driveway to buy a carton of milk."

Rubin fears viewers might "emulate" TV's perilous driving. He said Honda makes a practice of running safety ads ("Seat belts, a simple fact of life, brought to you by Honda") in peak driving periods around Christmas, Thanksgiving and Labor Day.

Nobody wants a worst-case scenario in which a gruesome car wreck in a TV show leads directly into a glossy car commercial, just as advertisers for over-the-counter drugs and alcoholic beverages worry about the treatment their products receive on TV.

To avoid embarrassing situations, screening services view programs beforehand and alert agencies to potentially troublesome programs. "It's not the show; it's the situation," said Buchanan.

The networks are sensitive to this; they're not in the business of antagonizing their Madison Avenue meal ticket. For example, cars are never identified by make.

Jerry Dominus, CBS' vice president for sales, said his department read scripts and flagged possible danger areas.

"We don't want the viewer saying that was a silly place for that ad," said Dominus. "We try to avoid stupidity, like running an oven-cleaning ad during 'The Holocaust,' and that actually happened."

Dominus says car commercials fit easily into the "fantasy, action-adventure" treatment of high-flying automobiles on the "Dukes of Hazzard," but CBS must be more sensitive about grittier sequences, such as the famous car chase through the Bronx in "The French Connection."

"We'd run a car ad earlier in that movie, away from that footage," said Dominus. "It's a question of taste."

Some programs are less sticky. Last season, General Motors was full sponsor of the miniseries about George Washington.

"At least," said Jackson, "we didn't have to worry about car chases."

'Dynasty' And 'Dallas' Top Hope

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ratings released the week before Christmas showed that America had no trouble getting into a festive, family spirit with the holiday specials offered on television.

Show-business troupers Bob Hope and Mickey Mouse led the way with top-10 specials on NBC. According to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures released Tuesday, "The Bob Hope Christmas Special" was third and "Mickey's Christmas Carol" was eighth.

"Christmas shows always do well, particularly Bob Hope's," said Michael Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement. "It's a tradition and part of the whole holiday season."

These two specials helped NBC to a second-place ratings performance for the week of Dec. 10-16. NBC had a 16.1 rating, below its season average of 16.4. CBS was the top-ranked network with a 16.6, also below its 12-week average of 17.0.

"It's nice to be able to win in an off-week," said Eisenberg. "This is the time when viewing levels start to drop, and people get busy with other things."

Only third-ranked ABC's 15.6 was better than its average 15.2. For the second week in a row, ABC's "Dynasty" beat CBS' "Dallas" for America's favorite show.

A rating point represents 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes watching a network, on average, during a given minute of prime time.

Other holiday programs proved successful. NBC's "Christmas Dream," starring Mr. T and Emanuel Lewis, was 17th out of 70 shows. NBC's "Christmas in Washington" was 24th and "Perry Como's Christmas in England" on ABC was 32nd, winning its time slot.

Even repeat broadcasts on CBS of "The Night Before Christmas" (No. 33) and "Frosty the Snowman" (No. 34) performed respectably.

CBS' "Dallas" was the second-rated show, and the network's two Monday night comedies cracked the top five. "Newhart" was fourth and "Kate & Allie," fifth, both benefiting from the disappointing performance of the final part of NBC's "The Sun

Also Rises," which finished 60th. "Simon & Simon" tied for ninth.

NBC's other top 10 shows were: "Riptide" (No. 6), "The Cosby Show" (No. 7), and the prime-time rerun of the National Football League game between Pittsburgh and the Los Angeles Raiders (tied for ninth).

ABC's glamorous Wednesday night programs were the network's main bright spots. "Dynasty" was

No. 1 and "Hotel" tied for ninth.

ABC's "World News Tonight" also was third, finishing behind the "NBC Nightly News" for the fourth consecutive week. NBC averaged an 11.6 rating. ABC, which was preempted by football on the West Coast on two nights, had an 11.0. Once again, the "CBS Evening News" was dominant, averaging a 14.5.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, said NBC benefited from not having a newscast on Thanksgiving night, and then for two of the next three weeks, ABC was hurt by an extra prime time football broadcast.

"I honestly believe that it's all technical," he said. "On a normal week, we'd be in second place."

NBC's "Today" show had its best rating since April of 1982, finishing the last measured ratings period with a 4.9, moving closer to ABC's top-rated "Good Morning America," which had a 5.3. The "CBS Morning News" had a 3.5.

Lawford Is Reported In Serious Condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Lawford's family gathered at a hospital where the British-born actor was in serious condition in intensive care suffering from a liver disease, according to hospital authorities and a published report.

Lawford's wife requested that no specifics be released about the 61-year-old actor's illness. Cedars-Sinai Medical Center spokesman Ron Wise said Tuesday night.

Lawford was suffering from kidney and liver problems, according to the New York Daily News, which quoted an unidentified Lawford associate in today's editions.

"The doctors said the next 24 hours will determine if he will pull through," the newspaper quoted the associate as saying. "In addition to his liver problem, he is also suffering kidney failure."

Lawford entered the hospital Sunday, Wise said, adding that doctors expected no immediate change in his condition.

"Peter Lawford is in serious condition," he said in a statement. "The prognosis is uncertain at this time. His wife, Patricia, has been with him since he came into the hospital on the 16th."

His four children had also arrived late Tuesday, Wise said.

Lawford was in the hospital several weeks ago, Wise said.

Lawford underwent surgery for a pancreatic cyst in November 1972. In January he sought treatment at the Betty Ford Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment Center in California, the Daily News said.

His many film roles include "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and "Ocean's 11," but he has made few television or film appearances in the past decade.

However, he recently had a cameo role in the CBS-TV movie "Malice in Wonderland," about rival gossip columnists Hedda Hopper and Louella Parsons. The movie, which stars Elizabeth Taylor, is scheduled for broadcast next year.

Lawford is known as a member of

PETER LAWFORD

Frank Sinatra's "rat pack," which also included Sammy Davis Jr. and Dean Martin.

A bobbysoxer's idol in the 1940s and supporting actor in the 1950s, Lawford gained added fame in the 1960s as the brother-in-law of the late President John F. Kennedy. He married Kennedy's sister Patricia, but they were divorced three years after the president's assassination in 1963.

In 1972, Lawford was married to Mary Rowan, daughter of "Laugh-In" star Dan Rowan, and got divorced after eight months.

In July, while hospitalized for an ulcer problem, Lawford married the former Patricia Seaton, 26.

He has one son and three daughters by his first marriage: Christopher, 29; Sydney, 28; Victoria, 26; and Robin, 23.

Born Sept. 7, 1923, the son of British aristocrats Sir Sidney and Lady Lawford made his film debut at age 7. At 15, he was cast in the movie "Lord Jeff," but his family moved to Florida with the onset of World War II.

Training Center Proposed For Teachers

RALEIGH (AP) — A training center for public school teachers, as proposed in Gov. Jim Hunt's budget for 1985-87, would give about 450 teachers special training each year.

The center was recommended to Hunt by the North Carolina Commission on Education for Economic Growth. Hunt has recommended that the center be located at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said Tuesday he had encouraged Hunt to put the center in the west out of a sense of "fair play."

"I'm a great believer in developing the entire state," Ramsey said.

Robert E. Stoltz, WCU academic vice chancellor and an adviser to the 50-member education commission, said the center's purpose was to give midcareer teachers a boost.

Hunt's proposed budget calls for $7.4 million to build the teaching center, $500,000 in start-up costs for 1985-86 and $4.3 million in operating costs for 1986-87.

Gov.-elect Jim Martin will review Hunt's proposals and present his revisions to the 1985 General Assembly. Martin declined to say at a news conference Tuesday what changes he might propose to Hunt's budget.

As envisioned, the center would attract college and university professors for stints of one to three years, plus others to work on a one-time limited basis. Public school teachers might train at the center from 10 weeks to a semester.

High Temp Records Set Across State

By The Associated Press

High pressure centered to the south of North Carolina pushed temperature readings to three records for the date and tied three others Tuesday, the National Weather Service reported.

Asheville's high of 71 degrees was 10 degrees better than the record set in 1968. Greensboro reached 75, four degrees higher than the mark established in 1939 and Raleigh-Durham's high of 77 beat the record of 73 set in 1961.

Two coastal towns tied records. Cape Hatteras reached 72 to tie the high set in 1961, while Wilmington got up to 79, the same temperature reached on Dec. 18, 1924.

At Charlotte, the high of 75 tied the mark, also set in 1924.

The weather service said a weakening cold front pushed southeast toward the Appalachians late Tuesday, but high pressure over the southeastern states remains strong enough to keep the front out of the region.

Mixup Dumps One Band While Other Gets In Step

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — The church bells pealed and the sirens went off in Lincolnton, but only briefly, as officials discovered that a "communications problem" caused a mixup that means the Lincolnton High School band won't perform at the president's inaugural parade.

The Presidential Inaugural Committee announced Tuesday that A.L. Brown High School in Kannapolis — and not the Lincolnton band as officials there were told Monday — will represent North Carolina in the 50th Inaugural Parade Jan. 21 in Washington.

"The worst thing about this is that the whole town's excited," said band director Donald Peach. "The church bells pealed, the sirens went off, we rang our chimes. The kids were expecting to be on national television."

Inaugural committee spokesmen said only the Kannapolis band would perform as the state's official representative. But late Tuesday, an aide to Dan Dennings, coordinator of bands for the parade, said Lincolnton will perform as a "route band," entertaining spectators before the parade.

Inauguration committee spokesman Will Cattin blamed the confusion on a "communications problem" but did not explain.

"We're sorry about the mixup," Cattin said.

Lincolnton High Wolfpack Marching Band officials said they had not decided whether the 156-member band would accept the lesser role.

"I haven't given up," said band supporter Ginger Heglar.

Ms. Heglar, who is the Lincoln County co-chairman for the Reagan-Bush campaign, said she would contact inauguration officials in Washington.

"I have no intention of letting our band stand on the sidelines," she said. "If there was a mistake, it was made in Washington. Why should our town pay?"

Kannapolis Brown and Lincolnton were among five North Carolina high school bands nominated by the inaugural committee.

Meanwhile, in Kannapolis, band Director Mickey Driver spread the news during the 220-member band's Christmas concert Monday night. "It's confused and hectic," Driver said Tuesday.

The Rocky Mount High School band also will march, as the American Bandmasters Award winner. The parade will contain 37 high school and six military bands, 35 horse units and five civilian units.

Executions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. branch of the Bahai International Community says six more members of the religious group have been executed in Iran.

Gerald Knight, Bahai representative to the United Nations, said since the 1979 revolution by Islamic fundamentalists, 137 Bahais have been executed, 10 others have died in prison, five have been assassinated, 22 have been beaten, stoned or burned to death by mobs and 14 have disappeared.

According to Knight, the latest executions took place Dec. 9 in Tehran, Iran's capital.

Malpractice Award

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Buncombe County Superior Court jury, deciding that an Asheville man's injuries resulted from negligence on the part of St. Joseph's Hospital and Dr. Stuart D. Tauber, awarded the man $3.7 million in damages.

After two weeks of testimony, a jury of four men and eight women deliberated about four hours Tuesday before awarding that amount to Howard E.G. Sawyer.

Pencilmaker Leaves His Sign Behind

By BOB DVORCHAK

Associated Press Writer

MOUNTAINTOP, Pa. (AP) — For 135 years, Eberhard Faber has made a tool that is portable, needs no electricity, works with the flick of the wrist, deletes its own errors and can be cheaply replaced.

It's the wooden, graphite-filled pencil, an ordinary device that has demonstrated extraordinary staying power in the face of fancy gadgets that would seem to threaten to make it obsolete.

"People have been predicting the demise of the pencil for ages, but it hasn't happened," said Eberhard Faber IV, 49, a member of the fourth generation of the family that built the nation's first mass production pencil factory in 1849.

"First, it was the typewriter, then the ballpoint pen. Now it's the computer. But we don't feel the computer is going to put the pencil out of business. The paperless office is not paperless. ... The market isn't shrinking," Faber said.

In October, Eberhard Faber Inc. won an exporting award from the U.S. Department of Commerce. The company's exports had increased 119 percent over the four years through 1962.

"For a company our size, we do a lot of exporting," said Faber. "The first writing instrument used in developing countries is the one that gives the most value for the money. There's a burgeoning market for pencils out there, particularly in the Third World."

The family-owned company, with $28 million in annual gross sales, has partnerships in Venezuela and Colombia and license agreements in Argentina, Chile, El Salvador, Peru, the Philippines, Syria and Japan.

Originally located in New York City, the company relocated in 1956 to this northeastern Pennsylvania town. If the 323,800-square-foot factory ran around the clock at full throttle, it could make a million pencils in a day.

But the pencil is no longer the biggest selling item for Eberhard Faber, which touts itself as a graphics communications company and sees its biggest growth potential in art products. The company newsletter "The Pencilman" was even renamed "E.F. Communicator."

Pens and markers are 34 percent of the company's sales, and erasers make up 27 percent. The company calls itself the world's largest producer of erasers and the second biggest maker of rubber bands.

Pencils are third with 25 percent of sales. But the writing tool hefted by millions of school children and office secretaries is the company's most renowned product.

What's in a name? The name Eberhard Faber is a registered U.S. trademark, which has subjected Eberhard Faber IV to a slew of pencil-pusher jokes. In the Army, drill sergeants called him "Leadhead," a misnomer because pencils are filled with graphite and clay, not lead.

"Ever since I was a little kid, my name has been instantly recognized. Good or bad, it definitely shapes your existence," said Faber, who is nicknamed Timmy and has a son named Eberhard.

"It's a little bit clanky. But nevertheless it's eminently remembered. Whatever inconveniences there might be are powerfully outweighed. I'm very proud of the name. I think the name stands for quality," said Faber.

The company's most illustrious product is the Eberhard Faber yellow Mongol No. 2 — a medium graphite that is not too hard or not too smudgy. When it was first made in 1900, it sold for a nickel. You can buy one today for a dime.

The Mongol No. 2 is listed in a book called "Quintessence," which was written by Betty Cornfield and Owen Edwards about familiar products that do more than specifically asked of them. The pencil shared pages with such items as Hershey's Kisses, Zippo lighters, Ace combs, Ivory soap and the Oreo cookie.

What helps distinguish the Mongol No. 2 is a black and gold fastener called a ferrule that joins the eraser to the wood. The fancy ferrule is unmatched by the 17 domestic pencil makers and numerous foreign competitors.

"It costs a lot of money for that ferrule. We've been tempted to change it, but we think it's the best looking ferrule in the industry. It's a trademark we're not going to change," said Faber, whose first job with the company was as a shipping clerk.

"We're not ever going to be the highest volume, lowest cost producers of pencils. But we are going to be the top quality producer. I would hate to see a product with the name Eberhard Faber on it that wasn't a quality product," he added.

A hot lunch is provided for any citizen 60 years old or older. The lunches are served at the Senior Citizens Center in the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets.

Students Find N.Y. Dorm Good Source Of Learning

By JENNIFER JUERGENS
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Manhattan's Upper West Side can be a tough place. Tough to walk through, tough to live in, and tougher still for foreigners trying to get an education.

But perched atop one of Manhattan's highest points overlooking the Hudson River and Grant's Tomb, there's a place that provides food, shelter and an atmosphere where students from all over the world can learn about life in the United States.

It's called International House. I. House, as it is generally referred to, is a dorm-style residence where on any given floor there may be students from as many as 15 to 20 countries. A third of its residents are American.

Students pay about $300 a month for small rooms and married couples pay about $500 for apartments.

Curtis Ingraham, who has lived there for the past two years, says the residents' rooms were made small and the meeting rooms large purposely so the students would come out and mingle.

The 530 students who live here are in New York City to further their education in graduate schools at Columbia and New York universities, City University of New York, Parsons School of Design, Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music.

More than 2,000 students apply annually to the non-profit house, supported by individuals, foundations and corporations. International House's yearly budget runs to about $4 million. I. House is more than just a place to eat, sleep and study. It is a place where foreign students live with Americans to learn more about life in the United States, says Nancy Cooper, director of development and alumni affairs. "Many warm friendships — and marriages — have been made," she says.

Svava Bernharsdottir, 24, a viola player, is from Iceland and has two more years at Juilliard. She says New York is a wonderful place to study. "I've gone to concerts I never would have dreamed of going to. You have the whole world in a nutshell. I've talked to people from Africa to Salvador. I've become a well-rounded person."

Spiros Branis came from Greece to get his master's degree in physics at the New York City University Graduate Center. His tuition and living expenses are being paid by the city of New York. In return, he teaches physics to nursing students at City College. He also earns minimum wage at the house as an equipment technician.

International House was the dream of Harry Edmonds, a former secretary of the YMCA, who died in 1979 at the age of 96. Edmonds had begun playing host to small gatherings of foreign students in 1909. He got the idea after a Chinese student thanked him for being the first person to speak to him since his arrival in New York three weeks before.

By word of mouth, the gatherings grew and Edmonds had to find other meeting places. In 1920, he enlisted the help of John D. Rockefeller Jr., who gave almost $3 million for the Upper West Side site and the building itself.

Mrs. Rockefeller designed and furnished the house, a stately building with meeting rooms with high ceilings and paneled walls.

In 1924, International House in New York City was opened, and in 1930 the Berkeley, Calif., House was opened, followed by the Chicago House and the Paris House. More than 60 International Houses and Centers now operate worldwide.

American students may stay in the house here one year and foreign students are allowed two. Those who are awarded fellowships may stay an extra year.

Eighteen resident fellows are on hand from 9 p.m. to midnight every night to help students. They are also responsible for arranging the many, varied programs that go on in the house.

There's the "Night of Nations" festival in the spring when visitors sample everything from Belgian waffles to tacos while listening to calypso, bluegrass and jazz music at booths set up by the residents.

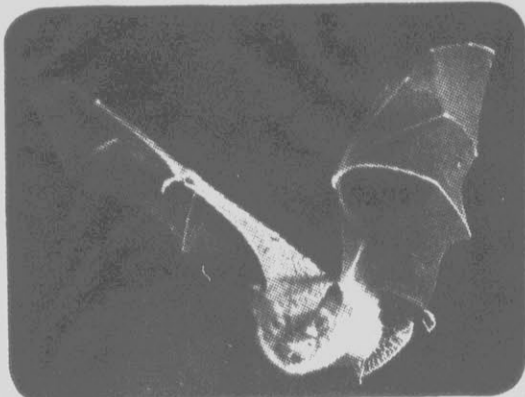

In addition to a literary magazine, photography club, and a 60-piece orchestra, activities include serving the community. The Harlem Tutorial program enlists the aid of residents to tutor 4th- and 6th-graders from New York's Public School 125.

There's also a ham radio club that enables students to call their families and friends around the world, and a pub that has more varieties of beer than most bars in Manhattan. And there are occasional weekend trips. Herman Rottenberg, president of the Performing Arts Foundation, affiliated with International House, participated in one excursion. "When the students got on the bus they looked straight ahead, almost afraid to speak to anyone," he recalled. "These 50 people are now pals. It was a microcosm over one weekend of what we hope will happen over one year."

FOCUS

Vanishing Point

The International Union for the Conservation of Nature recently identified 12 animals and 12 plants in danger of extinction. They include the world's largest butterfly (Queen Alexandra's birdwing) and smallest mammal (the bumblebee bat). Both are threatened by deforestation. One study concludes that 500,000 to 1 million species — one-fifth of those on Earth — may vanish by the year 2000 due to habitat loss and pollution.

DO YOU KNOW — What nation is the sole habitat of the Queen Alexandra's birdwing?

Extradition

CLEVELAND (AP) — U.S. treaty obligations to honor Israeli extradition requests give civilian courts authority to extradite Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk for trial for alleged atrocities during World War II, government lawyers said.

Demjanjuk's lawyer argued before District Judge Frank J. Battisti that a military court should decide whether to extradite his client to Israel. Battisti took the matter under advisement.

Demjanjuk, a 64-year-old retired auto mechanic who is a native of the Ukraine, is accused by Israeli authorities of being a Nazi death camp guard. He faces deportation for lying on his U.S. immigration papers.

Homeless Women Find Refuge

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen women huddled together in the chilling rain outside the Luther Place shelter, waiting for some hot food and a warm place to sleep for the night.

When the doors to the refuge for homeless women finally opened, Mary moved quickly to her usual corner of the small church hall, stripped out of her wet clothes and laid them out to dry.

The soft-spoken Japanese woman passed up the supper — soup, macaroni with cheese, orange sections — and carefully put her bangs into pincurls for the night. She has been sleeping at the shelter for three years. "I never sleep outside; too dangerous," she says.

Her husband dead, Mary apparently came to Washington in search of pension benefits. But with no money and no friends here, she eventually joined the estimated 5,000 to 10,000 homeless in the nation's capital.

Henrietta, 53, wearily shook off her damp coat and sat down to eat. She talked of not burdening her three adult children — "They have had enough problems by this old woman" — and of her daily routine — "I be standing around the street, I be looking for a job."

Dressed in a sleeveless dress and thongs in 30-degree weather, Henrietta's conversation rambled at times, from God to fortune tellers. She has been relying on the shelter for a place to sleep for three weeks.

On a recent night, 28 women stayed at Luther Place, an oasis for the homeless and needy just a few blocks away from 14th Street, where sex and drugs are as easy to buy as a meal or a drink.

Since 1977, the shelter has been providing homeless women with food, a rubber mat, a blanket and a few hours of relief from the outside world.

"They're exhausted, lonely and frustrated that this has to be and has happened to them," says Beth Borstad, coordinator of the women's shelter. "Most of these women led normal lives at one time. They worked, had a place of their own and had families."

So why are thousands, even millions out on the streets? In Los Angeles, the number of homeless is estimated at 35,000; in New York, it's 40,000. Nationwide, advocates for the homeless put the figure at 2 million to 3 million, although the federal government officially says the number of homeless is less than 500,000.

Over the years, the face of the homeless population has changed: whereas the homeless in the past had been mostly white men who were alcoholics or drug addicts, the average age now is 34, 44 percent are non-white, and 13 percent are women, according to the General Accounting Office.

"The homeless are younger and there's a lot more women," says Lee Holthaus, executive director of the Union Rescue Mission in Los Angeles. "Women by nature don't want to live on the streets. Except in the extreme bag lady cases, you don't find women on the streets. They're primarily afraid for their safety. It's really alarming...."

"It's the breakup of the American family, the pressures that have been brought on it, whether it be substance abuse, a freer society or whatever, there just isn't the protectivity that there used to be."

As women adopt the mores of what used to be a relatively male-dominated society, they pick up the social ills as well as the physical ills of that world, says Yaakov Jacobs, a spokesman for the Human Resources Administration in New York City.

"It's jarring to see a woman in the streets, obviously not," he says.

"In the old society before women were liberated, women were considered to be vulnerable. Women would not walk the streets. ... You don't hear the word 'hobo' used much anymore but just from my own recollections, one didn't hear about women hobos. The people who rode the rails were predominantly men, except in a few Hollywood films."

In New York, city shelters housed 2,074 men and only 46 women on any given night in 1978. By late this year, 5,955 men and 846 women were being sheltered each night.

"I think essentially that women are more out in the world. With that comes all of the social ills. When women were more protected, more sheltered, they were spared, so to speak," Jacobs says.

At Luther Place, a psychiatrist and social worker come in one night a week to help the women who want counseling. Signs are posted advertising free clothing and job counseling. The women generally keep to themselves, and do not talk to one another.

With a $20,000 a year budget, "it's a miracle" the shelter is able to survive, says Erna Steinbruck, the wife of the church's pastor. Food is donated, as is the time of the volunteers who work there.

On Ms. Borstad's first night on the job, two women began fighting with chairs and one of them grabbed a kitchen knife. No one was hurt, but it taught her that "the potential for violence is always here," she says.

Soviet Spouse Gains Western Spotlight

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Raisa Maximovna Gorbachev, unknown in the West until she stepped out from an Aeroflot jet in London, has joined her husband in the limelight during their visit here and seems to have charmed her hosts.

Trimmer than many Soviet women, with short, styled brown hair and tailored clothes, Mrs. Gorbachev has appeared frequently at the side of her husband, Mikhail, who is widely considered second-in-command at the Kremlin, during the couple's week-long stay in Britain.

The families of Kremlin leaders keep lives shrouded from the public eye as they reside in closely guarded dachas, shop in special stores and attend exclusive schools, their movements generally known only to fellow members of the Soviet elite.

But trips abroad can give the outside world a look at the leaders' wives.

Mrs. Gorbachev's most prominent appearance has been Sunday's lunch with Prime Minister Margaret

The foreign affairs spokesman for the opposition Labor Party, Denis Healey, suggested on Monday that Mrs. Gorbachev added charisma to her husband's smiling public appearance.

"He's a very attractive personality with an attractive wife," Healey told the British Broadcasting Corp. in an interview.

"This is a new style of Soviet leader," he said, adding that when in Moscow last month he met a senior foreign affairs adviser to the Politburo who "was exactly the same — charming, with a very attractive wife, and absolutely straightforward."

The London Times commented: "Mr. Gorbachev's affability and humor, together with the charm of his wife, have made the most vivid impression on his British hosts."

The Gorbachevs on Monday were the guests of Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, at a luncheon at Hampton Court, the Tudor palace along the Thames which was presented by Cardinal Wolsey to King Henry VIII in 1526.

One of the most publicized glimpses in the West of Soviet wives came in 1959, when Nikita S. Khrushchev took his wife, Nina Petrovna, with him on a tour of the United States. Mrs. Khrushchev died last summer.

Reporters and Western diplomats who saw Mrs. Khrushchev at receptions in Moscow depicted her as a traditional Russian wife — a shy woman concerned with her family and domestic duties, a quiet partner to her bombastic husband.

Khrushchev's successor, the late Leonid I. Brezhnev, seldom took his wife, Viktoria, on foreign trips.

And the wife of Yuri V. Andropov was so unknown that Western diplomats and reporters in Moscow were not even sure she existed until she appeared to mourn his death last February.

The last comparably senior Soviet leader to visit Britain, then Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, habitually took his daughter, Ludmila Gvishiani, on trips. When they came here in 1967, grandson Alexei was also part of the entourage.

Despite the glare of publicity, some things stay secret.

It is not known where or when Mrs. Gorbachev was born, or where and when she met and married her husband, who, at 53, is the youngest member of the Soviet Politburo.

A British official said after Sunday's meetings at Chequers that Mrs. Gorbachev took an extensive two-hour tour of the mansion while her husband talked politics with Mrs. Thatcher and showed a special interest in the library.

"She clearly knows quite a lot about English literature," the official said, adding that she spoke some English. "She is a philosopher, we understand, by training and profession."

A member of Parliament, Donald Anderson of the Labor Party, told reporters after he sat next to Mrs. Gorbachev at a dinner at opulent Claridge's hotel on Saturday night that "she is a pleasant and charming woman without being shy."

"I told her of my Christmas shopping and she told me of her 4-year-old grandchild."

Device Can Help Mutes Communicate

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Thousands of handicapped people who have lost control of all but their eye muscles could learn to communicate by using a computer-operated scanner that attaches to eyeglasses, the device's inventor says.

Inventor Martin King said he worked about 18 months to develop his scanning device after reading a work of fiction "about a man who had a stroke and could only move his eyes."

Eyeglasses are fitted with a transparent cylinder, about as long as a salt shaker, which is wired to a desk-top computer. Letters, words or symbols are displayed inside the cylinder, and infrared sensors tell the computer which symbol the subject's eyes are viewing.

The computer then prints the word or letter on a video screen or speaks it through a voice synthesizer.

"A person can use his or her eye much as like a joy stick," said John Eulenbergh of Michigan State University, whose artificial-language laboratory is testing the device.

About 100,000 people in the United States could benefit from the device, and Eulenbergh predicted that it could be used by up to 1 million people worldwide.

"When you consider that someone prior to this technology had virtually no interaction with society ... I think you can see that it makes a real major difference," he said Monday.

King said the device, when linked to electronic networks available to home computers users, could allow people who have lost control of all but their eye muscles because of injury or disease to shop, send and receive mail and borrow library books.

He said he hoped to market a version of the device portable enough to be carried on a wheelchair. It would cost a couple thousand dollars, he said.

"Ideally, you might see this on the market late this spring," he said.

Drug Recovery Program Utilizes Indians' Traditional Culture

BRainerd, Minn. (AP) — The sacred pipe, the sweat lodge and the talking circle for sharing feelings have been incorporated into Brainerd State Hospital's Four Winds Lodge program to enable American Indians to touch base with their culture and spirituality as they recover from chemical dependency.

Although the hospital treats people of any race with chemical dependency problems, Four Winds Lodge is a new program within the total program and is aimed primarily at helping the Indian population.

Program director James Holien freely admits he has had no experience in seeing things from the Indian point of view.

"The idea was in my head about a treatment program for native Americans," he said, "but I had no experience with it."

Then Holien met Micky and Pat Norris, a husband-wife team from South Dakota. He is an Ojibway Indian, she a Sioux, and both are counselors who were harboring the same idea as Holien.

"We had a lot of meetings," Holien said. "Eventually we came up with the idea of this program."

"Micky and Pat have a much easier time relating to Indians and their problems. They realize the culture differences. They understand that special identity problem Indians have."

Patients who were surveyed when leaving chemical dependency treatment at the hospital over the past two years showed the need for a special program for Indians, Holien said.

"One of the best things to come out of the survey was, we found out, Indian patients needed Indian counselors so they could relate," he said. "There was a need for the sacred pipe. The sweat lodges. The traditional ways. To find a person to do that in a treatment setting was hard."

Holien says that because the program is new and different, it has been a difficult adjustment. But he says the state and the administration have backed the idea 100 percent.

The treatment program is based on Alcoholics Anonymous principles. But, spiritually, it is directed at the Indian belief system.

Norris explained that the teepee and sweat lodge, located behind the center, are part of the culture and the treatment.

"The sweat lodge is used to assist in healing the physical, mental and spiritual imbalances," Norris said. "The sweat cleanses and purifies the body."

Many of the Indians coming into the program are from families where the parents drank. They were removed and put into foster homes, reared without benefit of their culture or beliefs. The traditional ways were lost, along with the language.

"I was raised by my grandmother," Norris said. "I used to go with her to the store and translate English for her. Later I was sent to a government school. I remember some of the language — some of the words. But a lot was lost."

Mrs. Norris mentioned the feasts held once a week, a time for women patients to renew their identity with traditional lifestyles.

"For a lot of women, life revolved around drinking," she said. "They got away from cooking and taking care of their families. They lack confidence to try some of the traditional dishes."

"We make fried bread, wild rice, and sometimes fried walleye at these feasts. The women take turns learning how to do these things well again."

Mrs. Norris said that women are considered sacred because they can give life; that a woman's place in Indian society is one of great respect. "Realizing this, for a lot of them, a good step back into a positive outlook," she said.

Patients coming out of the program have a new sense of self-worth, and that, combined with treatment, seems to be the extra push they need to stay sober or drug free.

The program serves Indians from both Red Lake and Leech Lake reservations, and a part of the White Earth Reservation in Minnesota. There have been calls inquiring about the treatment center from outside Minnesota.

"Word of the program is spread by Indian grapevine," Mrs. Norris said, "or as we call it, by 'moccasin telegraph.' The program is a good one. We're glad the word is out."

U.N. Agency

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has announced the creation of a special U.N. agency to oversee African relief operations.

Perez de Cuellar said the new U.N. Office for Emergency Operations in Africa would coordinate U.N. assistance programs for drought-stricken countries and "help ensure a broad yet concentrated international response to the continuing crisis."

He designated Bradford Morse, a former U.S. congressman from Massachusetts who directs the U.N. Development Program, to head the new office.

Death Toll

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The official death toll from the explosions and fire that devastated a working class suburb of Mexico City last month has risen to 490 — up 38 from the previous figure issued two weeks ago.

The government newspaper El Nacional said 278 people remained hospitalized with injuries caused by the fiery explosions in the early morning of Nov. 19 at a liquid petroleum gas storage facility run by Pemex, a government monopoly.

Fire swept through San Juan Ixhuatepec, a crowded, poor neighborhood on the northern edges of the capital.

Western Experts Say Major Chemical Disaster In Europe Would Be Unlikely

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The Bhopal chemical plant disaster in India, the world's worst recorded industrial catastrophe, has spurred some Western European countries to check safety measures at chemical complexes.

But government and industry officials say they believe that a host of existing regulations, from European Economic Community directives to municipal statutes, are already stringent enough.

"An accident like the one in India is impossible here," said a spokesman for Bayer Antwerpen NV, which produces deadly methyl isocyanate, the chemical involved in the Bhopal disaster, near the Belgian port city of Antwerp.

More than 2,000 people were killed in Bhopal Dec. 3 when a cloud of methyl isocyanate, or MIC, from a Union Carbide Corp. plant drifted through a crowded shantytown. At least 60,000 people were injured.

The Bhopal disaster happened as Europe's chemical industry was finally implementing safety measures imposed after highly toxic dioxin leaked in the northern Italian town of Seveso in July 1976.

The Seveso explosion at the Hoffman-La Roche and Co. plant near Milan killed thousands of animals and left at least 200 people, many of them children, suffering from skin disease, sterility and birth defects.

"Since the Bhopal disaster, discussions are under way to check whether the EEC needs more stringent rules," said a spokeswoman at the 10-nation EEC's Brussels headquarters who declined to be identified.

Europe's chemical industry is policed by government agencies as well as labor union watchdogs. Toxic chemical production is regulated by a wide range of health, safety and environmental controls.

But environmentalists warn that with many big chemical plants located in densely populated urban areas of West Germany, Britain, the Netherlands and Switzerland, Europe may be sitting on a disaster waiting to happen.

There are thousands of chemical plants in Western Europe, the United States and Japan. Britain alone has 1,500. Of these, 250 store large quantities of dangerous substances such as hydrogen cyanide, phosgene (an ingredient of MIC) and acrolein.

Some are in or near centers of population. These are mainly first-generation chemical plants, often built years ago in open country now enveloped by urban sprawl.

In Britain, environmentalists say the big Canvey Island petroleum complex in the Thames River estuary 25 miles east of London is a hazardous site.

About 8,000 people live in the shadow of the refineries and huge storage tanks containing liquid petroleum gas — the same substance that exploded in Mexico and Brazil earlier this year, killing nearly 1,000 shantytown dwellers.

The British, more than most European countries, are secretive about the location of hazardous plants, partly because of an increasing terrorist threat.

Canvey Island was a target for IRA bombers in 1978. Many officials want more disclosure on the potential for catastrophe in the chemical industry.

But a spokesman for the Health and Safety Executive, who declined to be identified, opposed that, saying: "We don't want to give a shopping list to terrorists which would tell them where to plant their bombs to kill half of Liverpool."

Robert Haast, spokesman for the Dutch Environment Ministry, noted that his country's chemical safety regulations date as far back as 1870 and said: "We're more advanced than India as far as safety is concerned."

The Bhopal leak apparently was caused when liquid MIC overheated and began to give off deadly gases that were not contained.

European government, industry and labor union officials said they are convinced that safety measures taken after Seveso rule out a disaster on the scale of Bhopal.

Haast said the Dutch government is "refining its risk-evaluation program" in cooperation with other EEC member nations.

MIC is produced or stored in Belgium, France, Britain and West Germany. Most of the European output is exported to make insecticides, vital to the economies of hunger-plagued Third World nations.

Belgium's Environment Ministry spokesman, Jan Monballiu, said that MIC production was halted there before the Bhopal leak because pesticides are a seasonal product.

Monballiu said government officials inspected Bayer's Antwerp plant Dec. 6 but found all safety measures operative and effective.

But French Environment Minister Huguette Bouchardeau ordered Union Carbide to halt MIC deliveries from the United States to its plant at Beziers in southern France until a new safety survey has been performed.

Mme. Bouchardeau refused to allow Union Carbide to import 12 tons of MIC after the Bhopal disaster. Authorities said they expected the chemical, isolated on a barge under guard in the Mediterranean port of Fos, to be shipped back to the United States.

In Switzerland, Jan Kreiger, spokesman for the Ciba-Geigy company, one of the world's top chemical producers, said it has no plans to tighten safety controls.

Albert Kuhlmann, head of West Germany's Interior Ministry commission that investigates industrial accidents, said that chemical companies in his country are "very security-conscious."

In the aftermath of Bhopal and other disasters, environmental groups charge that multi-nationals have exported dangerous processes to developing countries.

The British relief aid charity Oxfam estimates that at least 22,000 people die and 400,000 suffer sickness in Third World states every year from industrial chemical poisoning. In Spain, 150 people were killed in 1978 when a truck carrying liquid petroleum gas exploded.

American Portrays Soviets In 3-D

By ED MORENO
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) — What difference can one man make on the U.S.-Soviet arms race?

If the man is Ronald Reagan, probably a big difference. But for ordinary people, like Jim Terr of Las Vegas, the proportions of a global arms race and possible nuclear conflict are somewhat overwhelming.

At least they were in 1982 when Terr, sufficiently concerned about the destruction of the world, visited the Soviet Union to meet the people who make up the Soviet empire.

Terr, 36, is the thoroughly American grandson of Russian immigrants. He admits to having fearsome thoughts about the Communist superpower and its inhabitants.

"It was interesting to me to realize that I had never really thought of them as people, or thought that they might be nice, nice to Americans, or thinking about this or anything, in other words they had no dimension to me," Terr said in a recent interview at his Las Vegas home.

That changed when the jingle-writer and graphics designer attended a three-dimensional slide show.

"It's so real, the 3-D," he said. "I just had the idea of trying to get a 3-D outfit, going over, seeing what I could see — making this real for myself — and bringing it back and getting as many people as I could to see it."

So, armed with only a pair of 3-D cameras, Terr spent 2½ weeks in five cities of the Soviet Union, from Leningrad to Armenia, taking 3-D pictures of everyone he could meet in situations not often seen by Americans.

The result is a collection of what — aside from the 3-D effect — could be considered ordinary snapshots of Soviet people in casual surroundings, at leisure, wearing T-shirts, smoking Marlboro cigarettes and being just plain people.

"This is what I think is missing in our view," Terr said. "When you have no experience with the people, you just think it's monolithic. (You think) people are doing nothing but spending their time thinking how to do in the United States."

"It's kind of a paranoid view, but I had it myself. You find out people are there living their lives — and that's all I'm trying to convey."

Since his return, Terr has been traveling, largely in the Las Vegas area, showing his slides to civic clubs, church groups and schools and producing a 1985 calendar featuring photographs of Soviets and Americans.

Terr also sent about 20 small pop-up 3-D viewers and some slides to key members of the Reagan administration and Congress.

"I simply want to do my part to let people see what I saw — that these are people. Maybe it will spark a feeling that they are people with their own lives and own interests that we can deal with as human beings," he said.

Terr says he is careful to avoid editorializing on the dangers of nuclear war or his one-man diplomacy when he shows his slides. "I'm very careful not to give people (a message) ... I don't think people are interested in people's opinions that much. If your opinion is not backed up by what you see, nobody cares, so I just provide the visual information."

However, Terr is not just a dreamer who hopes his one-man diplomacy can change the world.

"Obviously, appreciating the Soviets as people and dealing with their government are two different things," he said. "But, on the other hand, you can at least start to appreciate that Soviet leaders are people, they have families, they live in the society, they're influenced by the society, like here, you know."

"I know (the Soviets) get a good amount of anti-American propaganda. I also know most of them seem to take it with a grain of salt," he said.

People were "very curious about America," he added.

Although the experience has not resulted in financial benefits for Terr so far, he says he hopes to continue spreading the word by marketing his calendar and perhaps writing a book.

"I'm trying to get (the pictures) circulated around the Soviet Union, for instance, with people I know who are going over, because I think they need to see us," he said.

"Something I'd really like to do is take 3-D pictures of Americans, which I have not, and make up a set and get them placed in as many American and Soviet libraries as possible with these little 3-D viewers. Again, no comment, just take a look, see what's on the other side."

North Sea Is Test Ground For 'New Frontier' Push Into Deep-Water Oil

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The turbulent North Sea has become the testing ground for a new generation of oil and gas technology designed to open up deep-water fields and bring in reservoirs that have been written off as uneconomical.

The British government, eager to prolong the life of its North Sea fields, is encouraging oil companies to move into largely unexplored "frontier zones" in waters as deep as two miles — 10,560 feet.

Seismic tests, using advanced computerized techniques, show geological structures there similar to those in the rich North Sea fields.

Jan Memelink, technical director of Shell UK Exploration, said in an interview with The Associated Press that the new technology is "a revolution in underwater techniques and an important landmark not only in North Sea history but in world production."

"The only comparable challenge is space exploration," he said. "The deep sea, just as much as deep space, is an environment where man is alien and where technology will be stretched to the maximum. More and more oil must come from the deep sea."

Oilmen have stuck to shallow waters around Britain. While they have the hardware to drill in deep water, until now they haven't been able to build production platforms in waters deeper than 600 feet.

The hardware they're developing now will be used to produce new zones around the Shetland Islands off northern Scotland, the eastern Atlantic — and beyond.

Many countries, including the Soviet Union, China and India, are launching offshore exploration, and the technological advances made in the North Sea will have a far-reaching impact on the world's energy map.

Analysts believe that oil the equivalent of 7 billion barrels, about half the total found in the North Sea, lie in Britain's frontier zones.

Worldwide, seabed zones in 1,000 feet of water comprise an area twice the size of Africa and they are still largely unexplored.

"Exploration of new areas is vital ... to take over from the declining output in the future from existing oil fields," said Britain's energy secretary, Alick Buchanan-Smith.

The French, Norwegians and Americans are also pushing to move into deeper waters for the next major phase in offshore production.

Conoco, the U.S. oil company, has built a 51,000-ton semisubmersible known as a Tension Leg Platform, or TLP, designed for deep-water operations. The TLP has been deployed in the relatively shallow waters of the Hutton field for testing.

The TLP tethers itself to the seabed with tubular steel mooring cables, unlike fixed conventional platforms that stand on concrete and steel legs.

The $1-billion TLP can be moved from one field to another and will be able to operate at depths of up to 1,400 feet in the worst storms and eliminate the need for more costly fixed platforms.

Shell operates a floating production system using a tanker permanently moored to a single 29-story-high anchor leg in its Fulmar field. Shuttle tankers load from the moored vessel, saving the money spent on underwater pipelines.

British Petroleum has developed the Single Well Oil Production System, or SWOPS, and touts it as several times cheaper than conventional offshore systems.

Oil is collected in a 43,000-ton tanker that plugs into a seabed tap through jointed "risers," or flexible pipes. The vessel is held in position by computer-controlled thrusters and even has an on-board mini-refinery producing gas to run the ship's turbines.

The companies say both systems will be able to operate in deep waters, even in storms with waves of up to 85 feet.

Oilmen believe they could be drilling in waters as deep as 5,000 feet by the end of the decade and double that by the year 2000.

The TLP is just one of a plethora of technological advances signalling a new phase of offshore production using cost-cutting techniques to squeeze even the smallest deposits from under the sea.

The most immediate focus is on small "marginal" North Sea fields — those with reserves of 40 million to 50 million barrels — once passed over as uncommercial.

There are 200 such pockets in the British sector of the North Sea and 800 worldwide. Oil strikes get smaller all the time, with half estimated at 50 million barrels or less.

Oilmen say conventional methods extract only a world-wide average of 30 percent. In the North Sea, it's more than 40 percent.

Industry experts claim that Enhanced Oil Recovery, or EOR, could boost production from known fields by as much as 15 percent and stretch out Britain's oil reserves into the 21st century.

The real impact of EOR won't be felt until the turn of the century. Analysts estimate it could boost the world's oil output by 1 million barrels a day.

Scientists led by Prof. Alan Barker of England's Birmingham University have developed a micro-organism named Xanthon that produces wax-like polymers.

Israelis Ask Men To Do More

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A women's organization has launched a nationwide campaign urging Israeli men to do more around the house to help women.

"Be a Man, Give Her a Hand" is its slogan.

But the campaign has angered conservative and liberal Israeli women, who feel it reinforces stereotypical ideas of male-female roles.

Israeli women serve in the army, but seldom as high-ranking officers and never on the battlefield.

No woman currently sits in the Cabinet and only 10 of 120 Knesset (parliament) members are women. Golda Meir, prime minister from 1969 to 1974, is viewed by most Israelis as an anomaly.

Even the month-long drive to get men out of their armchairs and into an apron has a very limited goal.

The campaign includes colorful bumper stickers, posters and television advertisements showing smiling men helping out their wives in the grocery store and maternity ward.

"It's been the talk of the country, and the key to bringing social pressure to bear on Israeli men. Some women have asked me why we didn't do it years ago," said Masha Lubelsky, secretary-general of the Na'amat organization which is sponsoring the campaign.

But Ruth Resnick, a Na'amat member who runs a shelter for battered women, said she thinks the slogan was a poor choice.

"The word for man in the slogan means 'he-man' in Hebrew, and reinforces the macho idea men here have," Ms. Resnick said.

"I would have gone for a slogan more along the lines of 'Let's be partners,' instead of the little woman looking up to the big man and saying 'Please, help me out,'" she said.

About 37 percent of Israel's 1.1 million women work, but only about 1 percent are in executive positions, according to a study by Na'amat, which is funded by the Histadrut trade union federation.

Even in kibbutzim, the collective farms that are the symbol of Israeli progressiveness, women nearly always are found in the nursery and men usually in the fields.

Israel's women, while more likely to be found outside the home than women in neighboring Arab countries, still must fight prejudices and preconceived notions.

This was glaringly underlined when Knesset member Shimon Ben-Shlomo of the religious Shas Party was quoted by a Tel Aviv newspaper as saying in early December that "licentious behavior" of Israel's women soldiers was corrupting Israeli society. He claimed this resulted in a weakened military that led to more deaths of Israeli soldiers in South Lebanon.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he "rejected with disgust" Ben-Shlomo's comments in the newspaper. Ruth Lev, the Jerusalem leader of Na'amat, sent a letter of protest to Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

But Chaim Hefer, one of Israel's leading songwriters, asked in a newspaper commentary why women were seeking help in the kitchen when they should be fighting against Ben-Shlomo's published remarks and men "who insult you with winks and debase you with jokes."

Many reasons are given for the failure of Israel's feminist movement to live up to the promise of the strong women who helped found the state 36 years ago.

New Catalog Offers Old Gift Ideas

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Running out of holiday gift ideas? Then why not step back into the 19th century for a Gatling gun, perhaps, or a Victorian corset, or a clawfoot bathtub?

History buff Alan Wellikoff has made it possible by publishing a catalog of hundreds of century-old items — some reproductions, some replicas and some still being made as they were in the past.

"What I had in mind, ideally, was that someone would have the impression they were coming across an old catalog and when they opened it, suddenly discover, as in a dream, they could still order the things," said Wellikoff, of Springfield, Mass.

The products from all over the country are listed, described and often pictured in his "The American Historical Supply Catalogue," published in November by Schocken Books of New York.

From the House of Thoreau in Concord, Mass., shoppers can buy blueprints and wood frames for replicas of the cabin Henry David Thoreau built on Walden Pond.

The cabin is said to have cost Thoreau $28.12 when he built it in 1845. Construction cost today is estimated at $4,000.

The Gatling gun, a replica of the 1862 model, is said to fire 200 rounds of .50-caliber ammunition a minute and costs $10,000.

The corset, white with black lacing and 37 bones, costs $59.95 plus shipping. It is listed by Custom Blacksmithing and Manufacturing of Waterloo, Iowa.

Clawfoot bathtubs, salvaged and restored, can be bought from Sunrise Specialty in Berkeley, Calif. Solid oak commode seats are at DeWeese Woodworking Co. in Philadelphia, Miss.

Wellikoff, who was co-founder and president of a windmill manufacturing company in Buffalo, N.Y., says there is no "direct link" between his catalog and his five years of making windmills, but both ventures do illustrate the value of past technologies.

The germ of the idea came from junk mail received at the windmill firm. One day Wellikoff got a catalog from a man in Pennsylvania who made and sold copies of Conestoga wagons.

"That sort of plugged into romantic notions I had," said Wellikoff, who majored in American history at George Washington University.

He left the windmill company, talked to an agent and began research in specialty magazines. When he thought of an old item, he'd look in the Thomas Register of companies in the United States and their products to see what was available.

If he came across a product that especially caught his fancy, he'd look more closely into the lore around it.

He learned that McGuffey of "McGuffey's Eclectic Readers," those 19th century schoolbooks, "carried a red leather bullwhip to keep boys at bay. He used to be pelted with mud or snow, depending on the season."

Readers discover that Bell's Seasoning for turkey stuffing was created by an engineer, and that cheese can be bought in Plymouth, Vt., from John Coolidge, son of President Calvin "Silent Cal" Coolidge.

Wellikoff sets out definitions in a preface. Items described as "in continual production" are made as they always have been and, along with "reproductions," are considered authentic.

Reproductions are made from the same materials and plans, patterns or molds as in the past, and usually by the same firms. Replicas are copies.

Meal Counting

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A U.S. representative vowed to investigate the Social Security Administration's policy of counting soup-kitchen meals as income in determining benefits after a local charity learned of the practice.

"I wouldn't think that it would be very cost-effective for them to do this," said Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., of the disclosure that meals served by St. James Episcopal Church were considered income.

Martha Minnich, a church executive, said Social Security officials said the practice will end when the soup kitchen is certified as a non-profit organization.

New Trial?

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A prosecutor said that in spite of a jury deadlock in the case, he would recommend retrying a woman accused of killing her 3 1/2-year-old adopted son by physical abuse.

Superior Court Judge David G. Eynon declared a mistrial when jurors said they could not reach a decision on the second-degree murder charge against Mimi Rohrer, 43, wife of Haddon Township Mayor William G. Rohrer Jr., 74.

Deputy Attorney General Anthony Zarrillo said a decision on a retrial would be made by next week.

You might think that, at the international level, it should be easy to cash the first seven tricks in a suit you have bid if the opponents get to seven no trump. Not necessarily so. On this example from the intercity championship at the recent Epton International Bridge Tournament in Tokyo, no fewer than five pairs managed to get to seven no trump with only a low singleton as the combined stopper in the enemy suit. And three of the five made their contract!

The auction shown was by a pair of Canadian internationalists who were representing Montreal. They were an unfamiliar partnership, and an opposing four-level preempt caused their bidding to go off the rails and resulted in a rather undignified no trump grand slam. East had good reason to think he could defeat that, so he upped the ante by doubling.

Now a convention reared its ugly head. West thought that his partner had made a Lightner double, requesting an unusual lead, not the suit bid by the partnership. He chose to lead a heart and the Canadians found that they had 14 tricks at their disposal — one more than necessary.

At one of the five tables seven no trump was made legitimately. There East opened four spades out of turn. He kept competing later in the auction, and South eventually decided to bid seven no trump over East's seven spades. East wisely did not double — his bid out of turn entitled declarer to bar a spade lead. No matter what other suit West chose to lead, the hand required no play.

Comic Uses Wheelchair For Humor

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Comedian Jeff Charlebois makes light of being paralyzed as he works to keep his audiences in stitches over his life in a wheelchair.

Though many in his audience feel they shouldn't laugh at his handicap, the Wright State University student works to teach them differently.

After being lifted onto the stage recently to warm up the audience at a comedy club here, he confided to his audience, "The good thing about being in a wheelchair is I haven't worn out a pair of shoes yet — instead of getting new shoes every year, I have to get new school tires."

Some of his jokes have a poignancy along with a chuckle. Charlebois, 21, said people often tell him they "know what I'm going through." He jokes that one fellow told him "I know what you're going through... I have herpes."

The common denominator, according to the joke, is "We're both waiting for a cure." Charlebois' warmup also included impressions — of Humphrey Bogart, Barbra Streisand, infant Bee Gees, Elvis Presley, Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy, and Sammy Davis Jr.

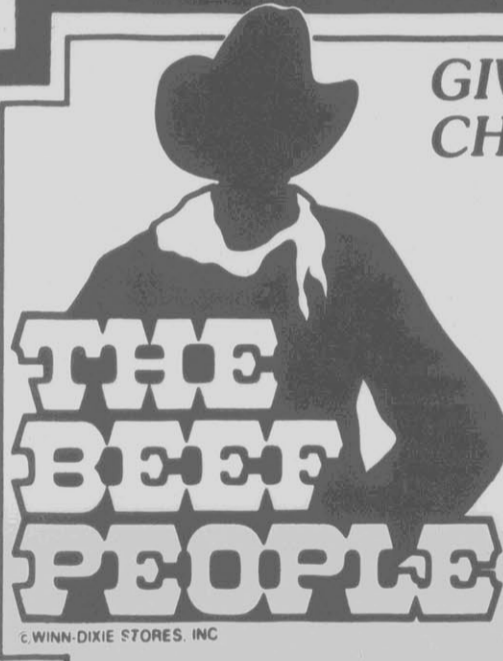

Offstage, Charlebois reflected on how he developed a love of comedy, and how his humor evolved after the automobile accident in 1979 that left his legs paralyzed.

"I've always liked comedy. I was just a little wise guy when I was a kid, and I thought, wouldn't it be nice to get paid for this," he said. "I guess when I first started college I used to like to watch the comedians and I started writing down material. I thought, 'There's not too many comedians in a wheelchair.' This year, I guess I finally got up the guts to get up there" and perform, he said.

Charlebois credits encouragement from friends with helping him see "how well an audience would take to a guy in a wheelchair."

"You can tell sympathy laughs from regular laughs," Charlebois said. "With a sympathy laugh, they kind of laugh when they're not supposed to."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 20, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a good day to consider what changes you wish to make at the end of the present year, and differences in your standpoints that can aid your progress. State your views.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good day to concentrate on how best to expand your interests so that you can have greater success and happiness in the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Thinking about how to improve relations with others in business can result in getting excellent ideas.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your associates well and then decide which you want to retain and which you desire to drop.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Stop wasting time and get right at the tasks that await your attention and then you can get into more interesting projects.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early think about the recreation you would like and contact good friends you want to go along with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You should get out more often and should plan little trips now to improve your interests during the holiday season.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you are more direct with allies, you can come to a far better understanding with them now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You had better handle neglected monetary duties now and get all of your affairs in far better order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can express yourself very well now even though feeling a little nervous, so go after personal aims and gain them easily.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get at the motivations behind certain interests and improve your perspective. You must be more direct in stating your love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact as many friends as you can and plan to see them during the holiday. Then go after your personal aims.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Analyze your outside affairs and make any needed improvements. Express your good ideas for bettering conditions all around.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have much interest in both local and worldly news and should have as much education as possible and learn several languages as well since much travel is denoted here during the lifetime. Teach early not to be so overly independent since the greatest success comes from being cooperative with others.

Southern Christmas Tree Farms Add Something Extra

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER
Associated Press Writer
POCAHONTAS, Miss. (AP) — There is no snow, but Longstreet Minor III does his best to re-create the spirit of Christmas past when families come looking for holiday trees.

Customers ride to the fields in a haywagon, and after they cut down their trees, they come back to Minor's house for hot apple cider and peanuts.

"I remember as a child our family going out and cutting down Christmas trees," Minor said. "I'm trying to encourage families to have outings together."

Minor is among a growing number of Mississippians who have tapped into a market for home-grown trees that took root in the South only a decade ago.

Edward and Charlotte Blake started their Christmas tree farm in Pocahontas in 1961, making it one of the oldest in the state. Mrs. Blake said they sell all their trees every year.

"I'm not trying to brag, but we don't have to advertise," Mrs. Blake said. "We've had customers coming back for years, and now their children are coming."

Bob Daniel of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service said the trees grown in the state were fresher and often $10 cheaper than the blue spruces and Douglas firs that are trucked in from the North and West. The imported trees, which sell for about $25, have dominated the Southern market for years.

"We've done some economic analyses and found that Christmas tree farming here can still be a profitable operation even in the face of a potential glut," Daniel said. "The National Christmas Tree Association has found that one-third of all homes have live trees, one-third have artificial trees and the other third have no trees."

"Rather than growers competing for the one-third of the households that already buy live trees every year, the association says the growers should try to expand to the other two-thirds."

Most of the Christmas tree growers in Mississippi run "choose and cut farms," Daniel said.

"It's a throwback to the Currier and Ives type of imagery," he said.

He estimated about 205,000 Mississippi-grown trees were available last Christmas. This year, he figured about 296,000 were ready for cutting.

Southern farmers plant mainly Virginia pines, which have shorter needles and are lighter green than the Scotch pines, Daniel said.

The Virginia pines grow relatively quickly, respond well to shearing and thrive in different types of soils, he said.

"The trees grow faster in the South because the growing season is longer," Daniel said. "It only takes the Virginia pines four or five years to grow from seed to 6 or 8 feet tall. In the North, it would take 8, 10, 12 years for a tree to grow that tall."

But, he added, "Christmas tree farming in the South is more labor-intensive."

The Virginia pines need to be sheared two or three times a year because they don't grow naturally in a conical shape. Weeds have to be controlled because they compete with the growth of the seedlings and later provide a home for insects, and the trees also have to be sprayed to prevent diseases.

"As long as a grower stays on top of the work, there's no problem, but it does take a lot of time," Daniel said.

Charles F. Young, a Tupelo dentist, said he started his farm as a hobby about four years ago, not realizing how much work it would be. This is the first year he will have market-size trees.

Mrs. Blake agreed that the farm kept her and her husband busy.

"Sure, it's a lot of work," she said.

"We tell everybody that they're crazy to get into it unless they love being outdoors. And it's definitely rewarding when you see the finished product going into someone's home."

Growers Concerned Over Glut

MOUNT ZION, Ill. (AP) — Frank Evans trudged through his huge field of Christmas trees, stepping over the stumps of yesterday's prize selections to cut a six-foot Scotch pine picked by a customer.

Two weeks ago, this was sold trees, said Evans, who will saw and sell more than 8,000 before Christmas. "Business is always good."

So good, in fact, that many of the nation's 12,000 Christmas tree growers cannot keep up with the demand. That has meant profits, but also has triggered overproduction that could lead to a glut of real trees, experts say.

"If we don't start selling about 15 percent more trees each year, we're going to have a surplus," said Don McNeil, executive director of the National Christmas Tree Association in Milwaukee. "We're developing a marketing program to increase the use of real trees, and we'll have to take some customers away from the fake trees."

About 36 percent of the families in the United States buy real Christmas trees — slightly more than use artificial ones, he said.

There was a good balance in 1978, with 39 million seedlings planted and 27 million harvested, said McNeil. But this year, growers put in 80 million new trees and will sell just 32 million.

So far, the industry has done little Christmas tree advertising because "they've sold themselves," he said, but that will have to change.

"We're going to plant more Christmas trees and by gosh we're going to sell them," said McNeil, who hopes growers will spend $1 million a year on promotion.

Many people like to pick a Christmas tree while it is growing so they know it is fresh, said Evans. Twelve percent of the sales are at pick-and-cut operations like his 120-acre Central Illinois farm.

For many, it is "a family outing in the country — some even bring their lunch," said Evans. He recalled one woman who spent three days and 16 hours selecting the perfect tree.

Evans wastes nothing. Poorly shaped trees are cut up to make wreaths; pieces of trunk become the base for centerpieces that feature weeds, pine cones and nuts made into tiny animals or elves; the entire shop is heated by a stove that burns unusable by-products.

Evans looked at the rolling hills of his farm 25 years ago, knew it was not suited to row crops, and decided Christmas trees "looked like a cinch." Instead, he soon found it was a lot of work. Seedlings must be hand set, then carefully watered and nurtured. As trees grow, they must be pruned into Christmas tree shape, and the fields must be mowed and occasionally sprayed.

Finally, there is the month-long harvest: 18-hour days of cutting and selling, often hampered by severe weather. One year, snow drifted to the tops of the tallest trees. In another year, ice coated the trees, making them "250 pounds and fragile as glass," Evans said.

The main advantage of a Christmas tree farm is that income is about three times as great as that earned by neighboring grain farmers, said Evans.

The main disadvantage is the long period from initial planting until harvest. "Not many people can go six years without any income," he said.

Customers Set Prices For Meals

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer

WARRENDALE, Pa. (AP) — You can pay any price you want. At Juliano's restaurant.

And it's not a gimmick, but an act of faith, says Jerry Juliano, owner of La Casa de Pasta Italian restaurant, where customers decide what a meal is worth on the honor system.

"I don't have to advertise specials or two-for-one dinners," Juliano says. "You come in and make your own special. If you want a dollar off, you get a dollar off. If you don't like it, you don't have to pay."

The small family-run eatery about 25 miles north of Pittsburgh has been open for about 14 months, featuring heaping platters of spaghetti, manicotti and chicken parmigiana. But Juliano just took the prices off the menu two weeks ago.

Until then, "no matter what I did, it wouldn't work," he said of his past year in the restaurant business. "I would be in a stalemate. I wanted the Lord in this, but I wasn't putting Him first. So I said, 'It's yours. If you want it to go, it's yours.'"

So far, he said, he isn't "losing a penny" by the new system.

"It's balancing out. Some people pay under and some pay over," he said. "I may even be doing a little bit better than before. But I don't take each bill and analyze it to see whether it's high or low."

Juliano, 42, offers a regular menu with suggested prices to those customers who are uncomfortable with the price-less system.

"I'd rather not show them that menu because they'll think that's what I really want," he said. "I had a lady who felt uncomfortable about not having prices. She looked at the regular menu and overpaid anyway. She was more worried about cheating me than about cheating herself."

Two recent customers, Don Hoover and his wife, Kate, drove 20 miles to try the restaurant, which is located on an isolated section of highway.

"I just couldn't believe there was a place like this in the whole country."

That there was anybody who trusted in the Lord that much," said Hoover. "That first sentence at the top of the menu means more than anything."

Juliano's new menus read: "Here at Juliano's, we trust the Lord to meet our needs. For this reason, there are no prices on the menu. You may place your order and when you are finished, you will decide what the cost should be. We ask that you would be fair in your judgment."

Another customer, Arveta Fichter, said she looks upon her meal at the restaurant "as an adventure."

"It's really great that someone has as much faith to do it," she said. "We all need a little more."

Domenic Teny wasn't so sure he liked the idea.

"It's a lot of pressure," he said. "We don't want to cheat them, but we don't want to overpay either."

A former truck driver who tired of the tedium of the highway, Juliano said he always wanted to own a little restaurant but was reluctant to give up the security of a regular job.

"Right there was a step of faith — just quitting our jobs and coming into the restaurant business," he said. His wife, Pat, 43, also quit her job in a discount store, and his two teenage daughters help out after school by waiting on tables.

When customers finish eating, they receive a bill that lists only what was ordered. Juliano then pencils in what is paid for the meal so he can set aside 6 percent state sales tax. If a tip isn't left on the table, he takes another 10 percent of the check and gives it to the waitress.

Juliano said he's already had a few customers who deliberately underpaid their bills, such as the family of five who ordered large dinners and then left $15 for the entire meal.

He said they drove away in "a big, white Cadillac."

"Sooner or later I'll probably get someone who will do a real job on me," he said. "But I won't worry about it. I'll leave it in the Lord's hands. If a person comes in and hands me only a buck, I'll say, 'God bless you.'"

No Trials

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) — A judge said he refused to do "what my heart says is wrong" when he spared two executives trial on manslaughter charges in a fire that killed eight teenagers at an amusement park.

Superior Court Judge Arthur L. Blake ordered Great Adventure Inc. General Manager David L. Paltzik and Larry B. Cochran, Paltzik's predecessor, to perform community service and pay restitution to the victims' families.

Paltzik and Cochran, if convicted, would have faced a maximum 10-year prison term and a $100,000 fine. The fire broke out in the park's haunted house May 11.

Consumers Spokesman Sees Need for Change

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring there's "no sense in continuing something just to continue it," the outgoing chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says it might be time to merge the agency with other federal consumer-protection efforts.

Or, says Nancy Harvey Steorts, it might be preferable to redesign the agency — vesting the power now spread among five commissioners in a single administrator.

Either way, she said in an interview with The Associated Press, "I think a real hard look needs to be taken at where we go from here. I think right now we are really at a crossroads."

Ms. Steorts, who was appointed head of the product safety agency by President Reagan in 1981, has announced her resignation effective Jan. 5.

She said it was a "wise decision" to create the commission 11 years ago to get dangerous products off the market and encourage manufacturers to produce safer goods.

But she added, "There is no sense in continuing something just to continue it, if there is a better way to do it."

While Ms. Steorts said she feels a federal involvement is absolutely necessary in product safety problems, the question is how it can be approached most efficiently in an era of government cutbacks.

"It seems to me that a lot of time is being wasted and there is a lot of overlap on some of the issues that we're involved with by other government agencies," she continued.

She cited the example of formaldehyde, a relatively common product that has been associated with instances of cancer.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission looks at formaldehyde as a product, the Environmental Protection Agency addresses it as an environmental concern, the Food and Drug Administration studies its uses in the cosmetics area, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration addresses it as it relates to the work environment and the Department of Housing and Urban Development looks into its use in mobile homes.

"It's one chemical that has an effect on the consumer, everybody's addressing it from a different point of view," Ms. Steorts said.

"It seems to me that there needs to be a real hard look taken by both the administration and by the Congress at what is the best way to handle product safety."

"I feel very strongly that it needs to be centralized and it needs to have an important role within the government. I think there are some options that need to be reviewed," she said.

Besides continuing the current five-member commission, she suggested other possibilities:

—Restructuring the consumer product safety agency to resemble the EPA, with a single administrator. It could be either independent or part of the administrative branch.

—Combining the work of related agencies into a broader safety agency where many of these issues could be addressed under one single entity. For example, adding product safety to the Food and Drug Administration under the Department of Health and Human Services.

—Retaining a product safety agency but making it subordinate to a government department such as Health and Human Services.

—Merging the CPSC into some other independent agency, such as the Federal Trade Commission.

"Constantly the budgets of smaller agencies are being chipped away at. You get to the point of diminishing returns where you can't go any lower in cutting the budget, otherwise you get into the program areas and you can't do anything very well," Ms. Steorts said. "My feeling is this commission right now is at that point."

The commission has a budget of about $35 million, but Ms. Steorts said she has not been informed whether that will change in the coming year.

If funds are cut beyond that, she said, then reductions would have to come in programs, which would affect consumer safety. Changing the form of the agency to save management overhead would allow staff and programs to continue.

"The president has a real serious problem in that he is going to try to get this budget deficit down, and everybody is going to have to take some cuts. That's the way it is," she continued.

So, she said, "rather than taking cuts and destroying something from the inside, I'd rather see it looked at, reviewed and moved into another entity than to see it whittled away and destroyed from within."

Asked her reflections on three years of work as chairman, she said she leaves office "with a feeling of pride and with a feeling of accomplishment."

She took office at a time of confrontation and hostility between consumer groups and business and has strived to obtain cooperation and voluntary safety efforts.

DELI DELIGHTS

foods abound in the Kroger Deli!

GO KROGERING AND RELAX THIS HOLIDAY - LET THE DELI DO IT!

Enjoy your Holiday more by letting the Deli prepare your Christmas Feast. It's easy as pie - just order in advance and we'll do all the work!

Let the Kroger Deli Prepare the Food for your Holiday Entertaining

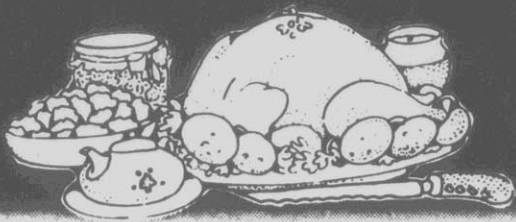

Pick up a Party Guide in the Kroger Deli and you'll see what a wide variety of Party Trays we have available. Most trays are available in small, medium and large sizes. There are over 29 different Party trays ranging from cheeses and fruits to meats, salads, and sandwiches. You'll find some helpful Party Tips in the Deli Party Guide, too. Let Kroger do the preparation this year so you can enjoy the party!

Connoisseur's Choice

Our most popular tray includes moist, pink ham, roast beef, savory corned beef and tasty turkey breast along with American, Swiss and Muenster cheese. Accented with the dip or salad of your choice.
