Public Prices Gain Slightly

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a scant 0.2 percent in November as the previous month's sharp gains in food and gasoline prices were dramatically moderated.

The overall increase was the smallest in five months.

Food prices rose just 0.2 percent, half the October rate, while gasoline prices were up 0.4 percent, a small fraction of the prior month's 1.8 percent gain.

With only one month left, prices for 1984 were rising at an annual rate of 4.1 percent, virtually matching last year's decade-best 3.8 percent.

Labor Department analysts said in releasing the latest Consumer Price Report that much of October-to-November change was the result of seasonal adjustments designed to remove predictable, periodic influences from price fluctuations.

For example, gasoline prices actually fell at the pump 0.3 percent last month. But those prices normally decline 0.7 percent in November, meaning that, on a seasonally adjusted basis, the department calculated they rose 0.4 percent.

And food prices, which actually fell 0.1 percent, recorded a 0.2 percent gain after the seasonal adjustment.

The overall 0.2 percent November increase was half the 0.4 percent gain in both September and October and matched June's 0.2 percent hike.

Department analyst Patrick Jackman said that the inflation picture for 1984 was "shaping up very much like the last two years." As for next year, private economists predict inflation remaining in the range of 4 percent as Americans benefit from lingering dissension among major oil-producing nations.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are meeting this week in Geneva in an effort to avert a price war and reassert the cartel's influence in the global oil market.

But many analysts believe the effort will fail and world oil prices, now about $27 a barrel for premium-grade crude, will fall to $25 by spring. Only last year, the OPEC benchmark price was $34 a barrel.

In a separate report issued today, the Commerce Department said American businesses are planning to increase spending on expansion and modernization next year at a rate only about half of this year's big increase.

After discounting for the expected effects of inflation, the 1985 increase would be 6.8 percent compared with the 1984 gain of 13.3 percent — the biggest since 1966. The spending-plan figures are from a survey taken in late October and November.

Florida School Prohibits Christmas Card Showing Photograph Of Jesus

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — In a dispute over religion in school, an 8-year-old girl was forbidden by officials to give Christmas cards to her classmates because the cards bore a picture of Jesus, the girl's mother says.

The decision to prohibit Olivia Myers from giving the cards to her second-grade classmates at Pine Crest Elementary School was "ridiculous," said Katrina Mendez, her mother.

"It's like the world's giving a great big birthday party and the guest of honor" isn't coming, Ms. Mendez said Wednesday.

Olivia bought the cards with money she earned by getting good grades and took them to school Tuesday, when she asked her teacher, Olivia Cotton, if she could pass them out at a class party, Ms. Mendez said.

The cards have pictures of toys or dolls on the front and contain three stickers, including one showing Jesus, she said.

Because of heated reaction to the school district's guidelines on religion and public school Christmas celebrations, Ms. Cotton checked with Assistant Principal Kathleen Procon, who told her the cards should not be handed out, the teacher said.

Ms. Procon was out of town and could not be reached for comment.School Superintendent Robert Hughes said it was appropriate for the assistant principal to review the cards.

Seminole County's guidelines advise school administrators not to hold "schoolwide attendance programs depicting the religious theme ... of Christmas" but do not rule out "reasonable recognition" of the holiday in the spirit of exposing students to different cultures and creeds.

Last week, administrators at Tuskawilla Middle School in south Seminole County removed "Silent Night" and three other carols from a program.

Hughes said too much attention is being paid to the role of the school system in celebrating Christmas. The majority of teaching about religious holidays should take place in the home and places of worship, he said.

Ms. Mendez said she also was bothered that Ms. Cotton on Tuesday lighted candles in a menorah to illustrate the Jewish holiday of Hanukkah. Ms. Cotton said her pupils know she is Jewish and asked her on Monday to bring in a menorah and light it. She said it was the first time she has done that.

Olivia said she protested by putting her head on her desk and did not watch while Cotton lit the candle. Olivia said she later gave the cards to friends in the hallway and on the bus to her Sanford home.

"She wanted to give; that's what Christmas is," Ms. Mendez said.

Keystone To Buy Construction Firm

Keystone Financial Corp. of 311 S. Evans St., is scheduled to acquire the controlling interest in McDowell Enterprises Inc., a Nashville, Tenn., heavy construction, highway building and real estate firm, from Louisiana-based Charter Company insurance units — Charter Security Life Insurance Co. and Charter International Reinsurance Co.

Principals in Keystone include Dr. P.S. Prasad of Greenville, Harry McMullan III of Tulsa, Okla., president of Oklahoma Valve Co. and Alliance Steel Co., and accountant Bill Zachman, a partner in the firm of Lowrimore, Warwick & Co.

McDowell, with 1983 revenues in the $100 million range, is traded on the American Stock Exchange as "McDow," Prasad said today. He noted that McDowell has been loosing money, but said the firm reported a "$300,000 profit this quarter," a trend which is expected to continue.

Charter, an oil and insurance concern, Prasad said, has agreed to sell 1.2 million McDowell shares (48.9 percent of the outstanding stock) to Keystone, provided a first refusal right, held by McDowell's president and chief executive officer James E. Poole and Southern States Acquisition, a unit of Southern States Corp. (which owns 10 percent of McDowell's common stock), are not exercised by Dec. 28. Prasad noted

ANTIQUE DOLLS...were recently given to the North Carolina Museum of History.

Antique Doll Collection Given Museum Of History

A collection of over 300 antique dolls were recently given to the N.C. Museum of History by Mr. and Mrs. William Cannon of Concord.

The Cannons donated the collection through the museum's statewide support group, the N.C. Museum of History Associates, in memory of their friend Rachel Pollard Liske who had collected the dolls during her lifetime.

According to the museum's Pitt County Chairman Mrs. Rhett Honeycutt, "The collection features dolls by such famous dollmakers as Jumeau and Grenier as well as excellent examples of bisque, tin Minerva, wax, papier mache, partian, celluloid, Kewpie and baby dolls. Several are over 100 years old with one of the oldest dating to 1780."

Museum Associates across the state attended a speical viewing of the doll collection and a Christmas celebration earlier this month in Raleigh.

Mrs. Honeycutt said that the collection, which is especially appropriate for the Christmas season, is on display for the first time at the museum in Raleigh located between the Legislative Building and the Governor's Mansion on Jones Street.

The museum held a groundbreaking ceremony Dec. 5 for its move to a new location also in downtown Raleigh. It will comprise the former State Art Museum and a new annex which will be built adjoining it on the corner of Morgan and Blount Streets, a block east of the Capitol.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Maxam of Rocky Mount announce the engagement of their daughter, April Marie, to Markam Ryan Wheatley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Wheatley of Grifton. The wedding will take place Dec. 27.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Trying On A New Dress? Someone May Be Watching

DEAR ABBY: "Appalled in Boston" wrote to say that a friend had told her that some of the finest ladies' stores in Boston had peepholes and two-way mirrors in their dressing rooms in order to catch shoplifters. You said she was full of beans. You were wrong.

I was employed as a detective for a prestigious store in California, and I know there were peepholes and two-way mirrors in both the men's and women's dressing rooms, and it was common practice for store detectives to spy on customers in an effort to catch shoplifters.

In our store, males were forbidden to observe women's dressing rooms but there was no rule to cover the opposite. (This rule was largely ignored anyway.)

In some states, catching shoplifters by spying on them is forbidden by law, so store detectives have been known to lie and say they "witnessed" the theft on the floor.

I'm signing my name, but please don't use it. I am no longer in this line of work because I had some emotional problems and was caught shoplifting. Sign me ...

GOT AN EYEFUL

DEAR GOT: Too bad after getting an eyeful, you were caught with an armful. Many readers will be grateful for the earful with Christmas approaching. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I've never written to you before, but I couldn't let the matter of two-way mirrors in the best stores in Boston go without adding my 2 cents. You said you checked and were told there weren't any.

Well, I know for a fact that Bloomingdale's and Saks have this type of security. They even have signs in their dressing rooms warning their customers that they are being "monitored" by security personnel.

I have it on good authority that Lord and Taylor also has two-ways mirrors.

Come to Boston and see for yourself—unless they changed their policy since yesterday.

STILL APPALLED IN BOSTON

DEAR STILL: I pursued the matter again—this time more tenaciously. A Bloomingdale's spokesperson courteously said there were signs posted in the ladies' fitting rooms that read, "These fitting rooms are monitored by female detectives." But no two-way mirrors are used. Saks' security manager was equally courteous. He said the company had signs in all its dressing and fitting rooms that say, "These rooms are monitored by Saks Fifth Avenue associates." I was told there were no two-way mirrors.

After innumerable calls to Lord and Taylor, I concluded it would have been easier to talk to the Lord than Lord and Taylor's security manager. Three times I left my name and stated my business. Each time I was told that he would get back to me. I'm still waiting.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: It's possible that the Boston stores put one over on you, but they didn't get away with it in New Jersey. A woman filed a complaint against two stores seven years ago when she suspected there were two-way mirrors in the ladies' dressing rooms.

An employee revealed that not only detectives were looking, some of the store personnel also took turns looking. He said they were in hysterics when a fat lady tried on a bikini and did a little dance in front of the mirror!

Another time the men lined up in front of a peephole to get a look at an unbelievably well-built woman "everyone had to see."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

This is the time of year when the box savers of the world have their finest hour.

You all know who they are. They're the ones who squirrel away every box and carton they ever receive and bestow upon them the gift of immortality.

There is something arrogant about people who save boxes. They remind me of the sanctimonious people who always have their ticket and the right change at the parking garage . . . or whose car is always in gear when the traffic light changes.

The carton queen in our family is my mother. There is nothing you can name that she does not have an empty box for. Want to wrap a piano? Go to Mother's. Want to surprise someone with a load of firewood? Mother has the carton for it. Buying a goalpost for your grandson? Mother can wrap it.

They are not only arrogant about their habit, but box savers are downright evangelistic. I remember the first time I gave my mother a pair of earrings wrapped in a rectal thermometer box. I thought she'd be choked up that I found a box with cotton. Instead, she gave me that God-knows-I-did-the-best-I-could look and said, "Why didn't you come to me for a box?"

I've watched her at birthday celebrations and Christmases and she is like a minesweeper. No sooner is the paper off the present than she is winding the ribbon around her fingers and smoothing the creases out of the wrapping paper. As soon as the receivee holds the gift up for everyone to see . . . the box disappeara to be recycled. It will appear again for the next 35 years . . . somewhere . . . holding something.

This week when I discovered a man's jogging suit would not fit into a shoebox, I did something I do not take lightly. I went to Mother's for a box.

She flipped on the light in her closet and I felt if Tutankhamen's mother had a tomb, this would have been it. I have never seen such a box glut. There were boxes in boxes, boxes for folding chairs, lampshades, tubes for posters and cartons for mattresses. There were boxes from exclusive stores my mother couldn't even pronounce. There were boxes singed with black where she had pulled them from the fire.

She turned to me. "What are you putting in this box? Where are you sending it? How much did the item cost? Is there a chance you can get it back after it's used? How important is it to you?"

"I'm not adopting it, Mother, I'm only borrowing it." "You're the one who makes fun of me every year for saving boxes, aren't you, missy?"

"That's true, Mother, but you know what a rotten person I am."

"You don't treat boxes nicely. I saw you jam an afghan in one one year and broke down the sides."

"MOTHER! I'M BEGGING!"

She handed it to me off the shelf. "Tell me what time it is to be opened and I'll be there."

Challenges

Astronomers, last year, using an infrared scanning device detected more than 40 stars that may be orbited by planets or other solid material.

This year they reported finding an enormous planet orbiting a faint star trillions of miles from the Earth. It was a finding that might represent the first planet observed outside of our solar system.

The report also appears to confirm what astronomers have long believed (but had no direct proof) that a planetary system is no rarity in the universe.

The more recent find is believed to be a huge ball of gas orbiting a dim star 21 light-years from Earth. (One light-year is about 6 trillion miles.)

We can share scientists' curiosity about the universe and their mind-boggling reach outward to the stars. It stretches imagination to its limits.

As against that, we look to challenges mankind confronts right at his doorstep. They pose innumerable problems of life and death. Under such circumstances it is cause to wonder why we seek answers to riddles so far afield when we have so many problems at home.

Service

Thanks to the man with an artificial heart, the White House would not be the same for a number of days.

It began with a telephone call from the president to congratulate Bill Schroeder on his courage and rate of recovery from an operation replacing his heart with a manmade pump.

The call was spontaneous. The president could not know he would be ambushed with an appeal to do something about Schroeder's Social Security problems.

Under the public's eye Mr. Reagan could not brush the appeal aside. He said he'd get right on it. He did, and perhaps in less than 24 hours Schroeder received his hand-delivered Social Security check and was assured the problems were resolved.

If all went according to our expectations, the White House switchboard lit up like a Christmas tree with telephone calls from people who have their own Social Security problems (one learns fast on seeing evidence if you want something done you go to the top).

What else are presidents for?

A Question Of Being Too Nice

RALEIGH — Sometimes politics doesn't make any sense.

Take this controversy over Lauch Faircloth and whether or not he planned to join an advisory committee to help Gov.-elect Jim Martin push a tax cut package through the legislature.

Martin asked Faircloth, outgoing Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, all losing Democratic candidates for governor, to join with former Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser on the committee. Green will get a salary, the others won't.

Some Democrats immediately got all bent out of shape. They accused the three of abandoning their party. Rufus Edmisten, the man Martin beat, said the three Democrats owed the party their loyalty after having sought the gubernatorial nomination. Somebody even hung up posters in Raleigh accusing Faircloth of having sold his soul for 30 pieces of silver.

Faircloth, who has plans to run for the U.S. Senate in 1986, quickly dropped off the committee, saying there'd been a misunderstanding and he'd never agreed to such an out-front role.

But in dropping off the committee, Faircloth also delivered a stinging indictment of the thinking which led his party's colleagues to criticize him. "It's time for Republicans and Democrats to put aside the bitterness of the campaign," he said. "As Democrats, we certainly can't afford to sit back for four years and let the state lose its vitality and drive while Democrats and Republicans squabble."

The bi-partisanship Faircloth calls for is just what Martin had in mind. His party is outnumbered by large margins in both the House and Senate, so Martin needs Democratic support to get his policies through. Certainly with Green and Faircloth, he had two influential Democrats helping him. (Knox is a party pariah these days and will have little influence.)

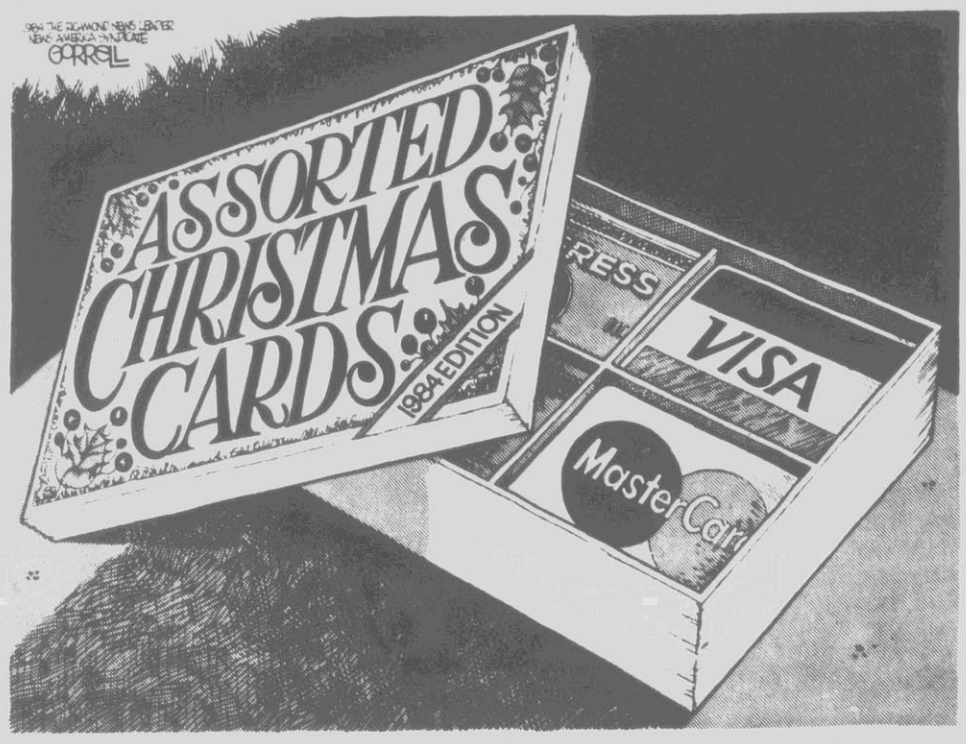

Now Martin knew the Democrats would have been of great help to him. But he also must have known that you don't get people like Green and Faircloth working with you and then ignore their thoughts. If Martin wanted their help, he'd also have had to bend his plans to conform to the thoughts of these prominent Democrats.

That's called power-sharing and politicians rarely share power when they get 55 percent of the vote, as Martin did. But Martin needs help in the Legislature so he made the offer and, in the process, came off as bipartisan and public-spirited, even magnanimous.

David Price, Democratic Party chairman, says it is not his party's role to supply the talent for the Martin administration. Instead, Democrats must now play the role of "the vigilant opposition ... (walking) a fine line between cooperation and constructive opposition. Our system works through opposition, through checks and balances. The role of an opposition party, up to a point, is to oppose." Price said Democrats shouldn't carp about everything Martin does but they also should not abrogate their role to oppose and offer alternatives.

The controversy boils down to this: Martin wins the election in a landslide but asks selected members of the defeated party to help him govern. They howl in protest that he's being too nice to them.

As one Raleigh correspondent for a state newspaper said, "Martin's got them confounded. They were all geared up for him to dismiss Democrats. Not only is he not doing that, he's bringing more Democrats in."

Recollections Of A Traveler

SCRABBLE, Va. — Your ink-stained wretch, meaning me, was away from home on 181 days in 1984. The travel included well over 100 nights in about 60 different hotels, and it involved flights on all of the major domestic airlines and quite a few little airlines as well. As Bill Buckley is so fond of saying, a few observations:

Air travel gets less and less pleasant as the years roll by. I don't know why this should be so, but I believe most experienced travelers would agree that it is so. Delays are a way of life. Planes are so crowded that passengers are crammed into their seats like olives in a bottle. Often planes are overcrowded; four times this year my flight was delayed while resentful passengers were talked out of their seats. With every seat taken, there never is enough room for luggage. When interiors are remodeled, some thought should be given to providing more closet space for the ubiquitous suitbags that have become so popular in recent years.

Airline personnel, both on the ground and in the air, continue to merit applause. To be sure, pilots still refuse to level with their passengers on the reasons for delay, and they always fib about the time it will take to get going, but flight attendants earn our admiration every day. I hit only one surly attendant all year, on a United flight to Las Vegas. She was one of the bossy types who will not let a passenger get his own seatback in the upright position. Wake him up! And slam the seat forward with a snarl. Airline food tends slightly to improve, except on Eastern, where it remains dreadful.

On the matter of hotels, my conviction grows firmer than ever that good management is the first key to a good operation. Above a certain level of price and quality, all hotels have clean rooms, good beds, fresh towels, workable showers; these one takes for granted. What makes a good hotel a really superior hotel is the attitude of the staff, all the way from the doorman to the assistant manager. Good management gets a smile on their faces. Good management cracks a whip to see that rooms are promptly made up. Good management works unceasingly to see that dining room service is smooth and courteous. Good management rushes in extra cashiers or registration clerks when they are needed. Poor management fails in all these areas.

My own first-place award for good management goes to the Marriott people. One day I suppose I will hit discourtesy at a Marriott hotel — nobody's perfect — but that day hasn't come. The Hyatt people are at the same level. The Chicago Hyatt, to name only one, is a truly pleasant hotel, and in driver Joe Phillips it has perhaps the best limousine driver in the world.

Good management comes first; good design comes second. I have a theory to this effect, that few hotel architects and designers ever stay in hotels. Maybe they stay home, or maybe they stay with friends. Nothing else could explain misplaced telephones, lamps that are bolted in place, lamps with inaccessible switches, lamps with no switches, lamps with inadequate bulbs, and bathrooms with no place for a man to put his shaving kit except on top of the john.

Little amenities make a difference. Do many travelers resent these infernal theftproof hangers as much as I do? Could we please have a little notice on the TV set, letting us know which channels are which?

Worst hotel of my year: The Ambassador, Los Angeles, featuring a cockroach in the dime-sized bathroom, cheap furniture, a wastebasket full of beer cans, theft-proof hangers. Second worst: The Castle Harbor in Bermuda, which was shabby, shabby, shabby.

Runners-up: The Barclay in Philadelphia, the Cavalier in Virginia Beach, the Regency Park outside Kansas City, and because of a haughty staff and steak that had been carved from saddle leather, the Vista International in New York.

Best of my year: The Campton Place in San Francisco, which is as small as a nice diamond and just about as expensive. In second spot, the Cambridge Club in Denver, which offers everything a small hotel should offer.

Recess Appointments Bring Grumbling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The narrow vote in the Senate Banking Committee to approve President Reagan's nomination of Martha Seger to a seat on the Federal Reserve Board virtually guaranteed a bitter floor fight over her appointment.

But Reagan, in an adept flanking maneuver, waited a few days for the Senate to take its customary July 4th recess and promptly appointed Ms. Seger to the post, using the power granted him under the Constitution to make recess appointments.

Democrats in the Senate, including Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, were furious — but powerless.

Ms. Seger, a Reagan loyalist and fiscal conservative named to succeed the most liberal Democratic holdover at the Fed, was immediately sworn in and took her seat on the board, secure in her job — until the Senate adjourns sometime late next year.

Her term will automatically expire then if her nomination has not been resubmitted by Reagan and confirmed by the Senate. Getting that confirmation will be all the more difficult because of what Reagan did last summer.

The Constitution says, "The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session."

And although that power remains unquestioned in almost all circumstances, one veteran of Senate politics and the chamber's sensitivities said, "There's always a bit of underlying resentment up here when the president makes a recess appointment."

A "low grumbling" is to be expected, said the congressional source, who discussed the issue only on condition he not be identified. "The Seger appointment really made people mad because it had only been on the calendar (for floor action) for one day, and there was still plenty of time for the Senate to act when it got back from the recess."

And the Democrats were spoiling for a fight.

In the two months since Congress went home in October, Reagan has made more than 30 recess appointments, many of them to positions left vacant when the Senate adjourned without acting on the president's nominations.

Among them are 11 members of the board of the Legal Services Corp., which Reagan has sought unsuccessfully to abolish. Unable to get his nominees confirmed, Reagan has resorted to recess appointments to fulfill his legal obligation to parcel out the funds Congress insists that he spend to provide legal services to the poor.

Nine of the president's latest crop of Legal Services nominees won unanimous approval of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee this year, but they never reached the Senate floor in the crush of business at the end of the session. Reagan is expected to resubmit those names to the new Congress.

Another nomination that died with adjournment was that of the president's trusted counselor, Edwin Meese III, to be attorney general. Meese's nomination stalled amid questions about his financial affairs.

Although a special prosecutor investigated and decided not to bring criminal charges against the nominee, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond let the matter drop rather than rekindle the controversy in the midst of the election campaign. Reagan has announced he will resubmit the nomination in January.

Under his power of recess appointment, Reagan could install Meese at the Justice Department immediately, but White House officials said a political judgment was made not to try it, knowing such a move would anger an already wary Senate.

White House counsel Fred F. Fielding said the president also has agreed not to use the recess clause to appoint any of the judges whose nominations weren't acted upon.

Federal judges, once confirmed, hold lifetime appointments immune from the vagaries of political life, and there are conflicting appeals court rulings on whether recess appointments interfere with the Constitution's grant of judicial independence.

Fielding said this administration has no interest in raising such an issue that might have to be decided by the Supreme Court.

But in a soon-to-be-published book, Louis Fisher of the Library of Congress notes that two recent Democratic presidents, John F. Kennedy and Jimmy Carter, had no such qualms. Both sent judges to the bench during congressional recesses.

And President Dwight D. Eisenhower, a Republican, named three Supreme Court justices, Earl Warren, William J. Brennan and Potter Stewart, using his power of recess appointment. All three later were confirmed by the Senate, which then passed a resolution asking the president not to try that again.

Strength For Today

Do you have confidence in yourself? You should have. You and I are, to be sure, little specks on a planet, which is itself only a little speck in a great universe.

Yet the basic teaching of religion is that God remembers every individual he has created. There is not an item in our lives which escapes his notice. And the God presented to us in the Bible is not a diety indifferent to our welfare.

When we think about these things, our insignificance fades away. We come to realize that we are personalities made to fellowship eternally with a personal God. Every power of that God is placed at our disposal in the living of a good and purposeful life.

We have no cause for discouragement — rather we should be thrilled every day by the realization of our privilege and the confidence we can have in ourselves and in the God who made us.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Optimist Club of Greenville was formed in 1959 and for these past 25 years its goals have been in complete harmony with its motto "Friend of Youth." As a result, we annually contribute several thousand dollars to various youth programs in this area. To support these goals we must, of course, conduct fund raising projects, from which 100 percent of the proceeds above expenses go to these various youth groups.

From the beginning the main fund raiser has been the sale of Christmas trees in this community, which fact should have been well known by The Daily Reflector, for we have on each occasion run ads in this paper advertising the fact, all of which were paid for at the going rate.

The December 5th issue of the said paper contained one of the most impressive items advertising the sale of Christmas trees that we have seen, the same covering more than one-fourth of the front page. It depicted two men from a nursery in the western part of this state unloading Christmas trees at their lot here in Greenville, particularly mentioning a popular type of tree with its price (which was higher than our price for the same tree). Needless to say, the Reflector considered this a news item, and there was no charge for it. We should also note that there is no question but what those people took every penny of their profit with them when they left Pitt County. In fact, they left as soon as the rush season was over, leaving the many people who had for one reason or another not purchased a tree, to go to lots that were considering them too.

The Optimist Club, to the man, considers your ad a slap in the face of this club — but more importantly, your act is an inexcusible insult to the youth of this community. We believe the very least you could do would be to publish an apology to them.

Ben O. Womack

In The Area

Local Thefts

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of three thefts reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a radio-tape player and speakers, as well as several gifts from under a Christmas tree, were taken from A-18 Glendale Court in a break-in reported at 9 a.m., while Officer J.C. Mulford said $430 was taken from West End Circle Drive-In on Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 9:30 a.m.

According to Officer K.A. Bedell, a television set valued at $300 was taken from 67 Greenway Apartments in an incident reported at 7:31 p.m.

Vehicles Collided

Cars driven by Ricky Allen Smith of Route 1, Oak City, Natalie Eyvette Moore of Washington, and Rachael Phillips Hardee of Route 3, Greenville, collided about 6:09 p.m. Wednesday on Greenville Boulevard, 400 feet west of the Evans Street intersection.

Police, who charged Smith with following too close, estimated damage from the collision at $100 to the Smith car, $400 to the Moore vehicle and $100 to the Hardee car.

Assault Charge

Greenville police arrested Edna Deloris Wooten, 25, of Route 6, Greenville, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon following investigation of an 8:05 p.m. incident at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Airport Road.

Officer S.D. Furr said Ms. Wooten was arrested after she allegedly struck Sylvia Clemmons of 1500 Mumford Road with a golf club.

Party Scheduled

The youth department of Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church will celebrate Christmas with a program and party Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Library Holiday

Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches will be closed four days during the Christmas holidays. The libraries will be closdd Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The libraries will resume normal operating schedules on Wednesday.

Course Completed

Douglas H. Stephenson of White Ophthalmology Clinic successfully completed the eye enucleation course held recently at the Brody Medical Sciences Building, East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Degree Earned

Virginia Lynn Kimbrell of Greenville has received a bachelor's degree in dental auxiliary teacher education from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

She received her professional training at UNC-CH and attended East Carolina University. She was employed by Dr. Richard H. Evans. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luby M. Skinner of Greenville.

Graduates Honored

The students, who completed degree requirements at the end of summer school or the fall 1984 semester, were given certificates by the division.

Students Recognized

Outstanding students in the department of physics at East Carolina University were honored recently by two campus physics organizations.

Eric Tucker of Raleigh, a rising junior, was given the Sarah Patterson Lane Award by the ECU Society of Physics Students. The award, presented by Dr. Carl Adler, acting department chairman, recognizes outstanding achievement in physics during a student's first two years.

Other students honored included Wayne Adams of Ayden, Willie Hendricks of Pinetown, Bernard Maxik of Havelock, Omega Smith of Winston-Salem, Peter Van Staagen of Greenville, Andrew White of Hope Mills and Marilyn Harper of Pittsburgh, Pa. All seven were inducted into the ECU chapter of Sigma Pi Sigma, a campus physics honor society with a membership of both graduate and undergraduate students.

'Viewpoint' Airs

Helpful study hints for the Christmas holidays will be the topic of this week's "Pitt County Schools' Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations.

Host Barry Gaskins will interview Santa Claus.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WITN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHB-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 9:30 a.m. WRQR-FM; 1:06 p.m. WNCT-AM, and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

Dean's List

Stephen A. Irwin, a junior studying jazz at the University of Cincinnati in Cincinnati, recently made the dean's list at the school with a 3.8 average. He is the son of Dr. E. Robert Irwin and Mrs. Sharon W. Irwin, both of Greenville.

Services Set

Weekend services at Haddock Chapel Free Will Baptist Church include: Sunday, 9:45 a.m., Sunday school; 11 a.m., morning worship with the Rev. Billy R. Anderson and the young adult choir, and 7:30 p.m., anniversary services with the Rev. Elmer Jackson and the District No. 3 union meeting choir in charge.

Holidays Begin

Christmas vacation for students and teachers in Pitt County schools will begin Friday, school officials announced today.

Yuletide Recital

Music Unlimited Studios will hold its first Christmas music recital at 3 p.m. Sunday at York Memorial AME Zion Church.

The program will include classical, contemporary and Christmas music and a sing-along with band and audience participation. The guest conductor will be Frank Norris of Greenville, director of the Jamesville High School Band. Program director is Johnny Wooten.

Reid Leads Field

Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville was the highest vote-getter among the 18 Superior Court judgeships filled in the November general election, according to the official canvas by the state Board of Elections.

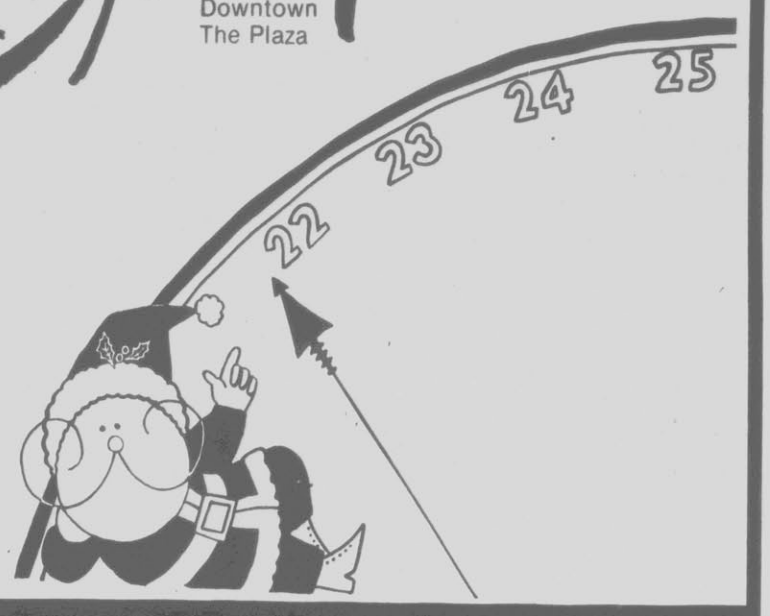

Reid, senior resident Superior Court judge for the 3rd Judicial District — including Pitt, Craven, HAM WATCH — Robert M. Sickels, a ham radio operator for over 25 years, received a Governors Award Wednesday for his part in the Ham Watch program. The program, which uses over 10,000 amateur radio operators linked in a statewide network to report crimes, accidents and fires to local officials, was conceived by Sickels. Shown from left are Sickels, W.J. Sherrill of the Public Safety Crime Prevention Committee and Pitt County Sherriff Ralph Tyson.

ered the Angeles Crest Highway with 15 feet of snow, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Dave Tellez. Snow hampered searchers in the mountains east of Los Angeles.

Authorities planned to resume a search this morning for a Culver City girl feared drowned in Ballona Creek near Marina del Rey, where she slipped from the grasp of two schoolmates who tried to save her.

Near 4,144-foot Tejon Pass north of Los Angeles, workers kept trying Wednesday night to free about 40 trucks stuck in snow and mud on Interstate 5, said California Highway Patrol Officer Ruben Soliz.

The highway remained closed, covered by a sheet of ice, and only residents with snow chains were allowed through, Soliz said. Snow was piled 2 feet deep on adjacent land.

Snow up to 16 inches deep also kept Edwards Air Force Base and 38 schools north of Los Angeles closed Wednesday.

State Jobless Rate Climbs

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate rose to 7 percent in November, up from the October rate of 6.8 percent, and the rise was blamed on seasonal declines in agricultural and manufacturing employment.

The total number of unemployed workers in November was 212,400, the state Employment Security Commission said today. In October, 208,900 workers were without jobs.

Commission Chairman Glenn Jernigan said despite the jobless rate rise the North Carolina unemployment rate was lower than the 7.1 percent rate of last November.

Jernigan said the increase this November is due to seasonal declines in agricultural employment, and a drop in manufacturing jobs including declines in the tobacco processing industry.

Nick-of Time Sale
Now thru Christmas
Just in the Nick of Time—A sale for all you last minute Christmas Shoppers!

'Twas the week before Christmas
And all thru our store
The racks were filled like never before
Savings were hung thruout our store
We'd marked our merchandise down once more
When at our doorway we heard such a clatter
We ran to the front to see what was the matter
When what to our wandering eyes should appear
But a "Nick-of-Time" shopper standing
There in the clear
We reassured him and said "you have plenty of time"
And you'll save money, as you make up your mind
We've marked down dresses, down suits, down sportswear too
We've marked blouses, jackets, coats and more we must do

Superior Court judges are nominated from their judicial districts, but are elected statewide.

Bloodmobile

A four-hour bloodmobile Wednesday at Procter & Gamble netted 42 pints of blood and saw two people deferred for health reasons, according to Red Cross spokeswoman Ruth Taylor.

Mrs. Taylor said the drive was coordinated by Chris Zaewski, plant nurse.

The next area bloodmobile visit will involve the after-Christmas drive on Dec. 26 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Boys' Club on Arlington Boulevard.

that Poole and Southern States are not expected to exercise their rights.

Prasad, a resident of Greenville for the past eight years, describes himself as "a venture capitalist," with investments primarily in hotels and other real estate. He also holds an interest in Sew and Sew at 101 W. 14th St., which he descibed as the only manufacturer of clothes for the "Cabbage Patch" dolls in the United States.

Chemical Tests

LAURINBURG, N.A. (AP) — State and company officials say they will continue testing the soil at the H.A. Astlett and Co. plant in Laurinburg where chemicals were illegally dumped, including at least one substance linked with cancer.

Exposure of the chemicals led to a small fire on the plant's grounds Monday afternoon, forcing temporary evacuation of two families in the area.

Although the chemicals were dumped illegally, the state will not take legal action because the current owners of the property, I.M. North America, are participating in the cleanup, Lee Mittelstadt, a spokesman for the state Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch, said this morning. I.M. North America is a Dutch holding company, Mittelstadt said.

"The goal at this point is to clean up," said Terry Dover, eastern area supervisor for the Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch.

Pleads Guilty

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A former Greensboro woman has pleaded guilty to her role in a scheme to defraud an African bank out of several million dollars in diamonds.

Ameenah Muhammad, 37, of Durham, entered her plea after U.S. District Court Judge Richard C. Erwin refused to separate her case from that of her husband, Abdul Hafeez Muhammad, 40.

Mrs. Muhammad pleaded guilty to one count of wire fraud — one of seven counts lodged against her.

As part of her plea agreement, Mrs. Muhammad agreed to relinquish her claim to more than $3 million in diamonds held by the FBI. The government contends the Muhammads bought the diamonds through a worthless check scheme.

Fatal Mixture

LONDON (AP) — Lady Gormanston, 29-year-old wife of Ireland's premier viscount, died after taking a mixture of heroin and cocaine, an inquest was told.

Police found the Polish-born viscountess lying in the back seat of a car in London last month after she and her husband had been out all night at two parties. She was taken to a hospital where she was pronounced dead Nov. 18.

Pathologist Dr. Ian West told Westminster Coroner's Court the viscountess took "a very high level of heroin" as well as cocaine. "It appeared she had taken a mixture of cocaine and heroin and died as a result of the effects of the heroin causing her to vomit," West said.

Dr. Paul Knapman, the coroner, recorded a verdict of death from a non-dependent drug abuse.

Jane's Says Soviets Eroding NATO Edge In Air Power

LONDON (AP) — The Soviets are eroding NATO's technological lead in air power with a new generation of fighters, but U.S. efforts to develop planes with voice-activated weapons could make up lost ground, the new Jane's aircraft yearbook says.

"Air power remains one of the most effective deterrents to war at every level, but the present situation is far from satisfactory for the leaders of NATO military forces," said editor John W.R. Taylor in the 1984-85 edition of the authoritative "Jane's All The World's Aircraft," published today.

The Soviets now have three advanced all-weather fighters — the MiG-29, the Sukhoi Su-27 Flanker and the MiG-31 Foxhound — in service or due to become operational soon that pose a major challenge to the West's long-held air superiority, Taylor said.

On its side, NATO has the U.S. F-16 Falcon, F-15 Eagle, the F-18 Hornet and Europe's Tornado. Taylor said all will be improved with more powerful engines and advanced technology over the next decacde, but most have run into problems already.

However, U.S. designers are working on Advanced Tactical Fighter, or ATF, programs aimed at providing front-line superiority over the Soviets until at least 2025.

General Dynamics' ATF-F-16 and Grumman's X-29A, which uses forward-swept wings that give more lift, more agility and better performance than conventional fighters, are pointing the way to bring to life "science-fiction Star Wars craft," Taylor said.

In the ATF-F-16, Taylor reported, there will be a voice-recognition system on cassette programmed to pick up a pre-arranged series of verbal commands given by the pilot. The device will translate a voiced command into electrical impulses fed into the on-board data system, which then executes the command. Such an arrangement leaves the pilot free to concentrate on fighting.

Among the other technologies emerging with these programs are Very High Speed Integrated Circuits, or VHSIC, and advanced integrated flights systems known as Pave Pillar.

VHSIC microchips can prccess information up to 100 times faster than current systems and are expected to revolutionize navigation computers, radar and missile guidance systems, Taylor said.

"Pave Pillar, applied to the ATF, aims to integrate man and aircraft to an unprecedented extent," Taylor wrote.

"Pilot, airframe, engines, weapons, flying controls, fire control and sensors are to be interfaced so that they work as a total system. The idea is to ease the pilot's workload at a time of ever-increasing complexity."

A measure of that complexity is that World War I biplanes had 15 cockpit controls. Modern supersonic fighters have some 300 dials, buzzers, switches and computer terminals in the cockpits.

U.S. Formally Withdraws From UNESCO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says U.S. withdrawal from UNESCO should serve as a warning to other international organizations that mismanagement and anti-Western policies could jeopardize American support.

The administration, in a widely expected announcement, said Wednesday it is pulling out of the 161-member body because of its "endemic hostility" toward the West, its "extraneous politicization" and inefficient management.

The U.S. withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization becomes effective Dec. 31.

The United States has been a probationary member since last December when it gave the required 12 months notice of its intention to pull out.

"The circumstances that impelled us last year to announce our plan to withdraw have not changed sufficiently this year to warrant a change in our decision," said Assistant Secretary of State for International Organizations Gregory J. Newell.

Newell said the United States is not contemplating similar action in other international organizations but he did not rule out that possibility.

"It should certainly be a warning to other organizations that this administration will not tolerate the problems that caused us to remove ourselves from UNESCO," Newell said.

Newell, responding to questions at a news conference, said the United States has complained for years that UNESCO "has been involved with studies and conferences and meetings which we believe could lead to the licensing of journalists and the establishing of codes."

As an example of what he said was UNESCO's mismanagement, Newell said the agency spends 80 percent of its $374 million biennial budget at its Paris headquarters.

On the question of UNESCO's attitude toward free markets, Newell said the agency has demonstrated a bias against trans-national corporations.

British Library May Start Charging Fees

LONDON (AP) — It's been free to the public for 225 years, but the British Library has fallen on economic hard times and may have to start charging readers of one of the world's greatest literature collections.

The bombshell for users of the state-run institution was dropped almost casually Wednesday by the library chairman, Sir Frederick Dainton, at a news conference about the annual report.

"It would be a sad day for Britain and we shall have reached rock-bottom if it happens," he said.

But he pledged that if there are to be charges, they won't be introduced for a year.

He said the library's board is re-examining all its spending to see where economies can be made as a result of Monday's budget announcement by Arts Minister Lord Gowrie.

Although total funding for the arts, museums and libraries will increase by 5.8 percent to a total 272 million pounds ($318 million), many of them, including the British Library, will be restricted to a 3 percent rise.

Dainton noted that an increase of 3 percent on last year's government grant of nearly 45 million pounds then ($53 million) is below the current inflation rate of 4.9 percent and below the average of current pay increases of about 4.5 percent.

He added that it also comes at a time when the British pound is falling almost daily against the dollar.

Gun Battle Leaves Officer And 2 Hold-Up Men Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A policeman was killed and his partner wounded when they confronted four robbers in a Chinatown jewelry store, triggering a fierce gun battle in which two of the hold-up men also died, police said.

The shopkeeper was wounded and two of the bandits evaded a house-to-house search of a 40-block area after the Wednesday afternoon shooting, said Officer Rod Bernsen.

An all-points bulletin was issued Wednesday night for two Asian men in their mid-20s, believed to be armed with a .25-caliber automatic pistol and a .38-caliber revolver, Bernsen said. By late evening several men had been questioned, but no arrests had been made, he said.

The shootout occurred after the two officers, patrolling Chinatown during an afternoon rainstorm, received a silent alarm of a holdup in progress at the Jin Hing jewelry store.

The officers, Duane C. Johnson, 27, and Archie Nagao, 29, ran into a volley of shots when they confronted the gunmen, said Police Chief Daryl F. Gates.

"The officers were aware of the potential for violence," Gates said. "The proprietor, as the officers asked him if everything was OK, raised his hands very quickly. The suspects then drew their weapons and fired."

Johnson, a three-year veteran, was shot in the head and neck and died later at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, Bernsen said. Nagao, a seven-year veteran, was in stable condition today at White Memorial Hospital after surgery for a gunshot wound to the neck.

Both officers were wearing bulletproof vests under their uniforms, but the vests offered no protection from the rounds that struck them, Gates said.

The shopkeeper, Robert M. Lee, 48, of Los Angeles, underwent surgery at County-USC for a gunshot wound in the chest. He was in fair condition, hospital spokeswoman Adelaida De La Cerda said.

The names of the two others killed in the gun battle were not immediately released.

Nagao staggered out of the store with blood streaming down his yellow raincoat and bystanders held an umbrella to shelter him from the rain.

The shop's elderly owner, known as "Uncle" On Lee in the Chinatown community just north of downtown, told police two well-dressed men came to his store and he unlocked the door because he thought they were customers.

As On Lee and his son showed the men some gold coins, one of them pulled a handgun as two accomplices entered the store. The bandits herded three customers and a saleswoman into a back room, police said.

When police arrived, the gun battle erupted in close quarters amid the cramped display cases of jewelry, coins, jade, vases and bowls.

Johnson and Nagao fired a total of seven shots, Gates said. On Lee had a gun in the shop and may have joined in the shoot-out, he added.

Gates said the incident appeared to be unrelated to gang-related extortion attempts that have plagued Chinatown and other Chinese communities in major cities. The storefront police substation that Johnson and Nagao worked out of was opened last year and partly subsidized by Chinatown businessmen in an effort to stem the tide of crime.

AMC Cuts Car Prices

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp., caught in the shrinking and highly competitive small-car segement of the U.S. automobile market, has cut its prices by $64 to $394 per vehicle, the company says.

AMC makes only small cars — the French-designed Renault Alliance and a hatchback derivative called the Encore. The recent U.S. market growth, however, has been in the midsize, large and luxury segments.

Joseph Cappy, vice president for sales and marketing, said Wednesday an already competitive market was made worse for AMC by the trouble General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have had meeting federal fuel-economy standards.

FDA Approves Use Of Shock Treatment For Kidney Stones

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shock-wave treatment that shatters painful kidney stones in the body without harm to the surrounding tissue could eliminate costly and sometimes dangerous surgery for about 80 percent of patients in two years.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said 100 German-built Lithotripter shock wave generators costing $1.7 million apiece could be installed in U.S. hospitals within two years, enough to treat the 80,000 patients a year who might benefit from the procedure.

The treatment not only is less dangerous than surgery and requires less recuperation, it could save as much as $2,000 per patient, Mrs. Heckler said. The average kidney stone operation now costs about $6,700.

"What it does is an authentic modern medical miracle," she said. "By pulverizing kidney stones in a patient's body without surgery, (the device) will eliminate the need for sometimes dangerous surgery, banish pain for most patients and save millions of dollars in health care costs."

She made the comment at a news conference Wednesday announcing approval of the shock wave treatment by the Food and Drug Administration after a year of tests in six U.S. medical centers on some 2,000 patients.

The treatment destroys the stones by pounding them, like a jackhammer, with shock waves, battering them to sand without harm to surrounding tissue.

The particles then are simply flushed through the urinary system, relieving an agony that FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young called "the worst pain known to mankind."

Kidney stones can form from materials such as calcium, uric acid or phosphate for various reasons. Small kidney stones can be passed through the urinary system with pain, but no permanent damage.

Some stones, however, are so large they cannot move through the system. Yet, they can cause permanent kidney damage if not removed, and their presence causes excruciating pain.

At present, the answer is surgery — an expensive, painful and debilitating process.

With the new treatment, the patient is strapped into a reclining chair and lowered into a tub of water. A sonic reflector on the floor of the tub concentrates sound waves on the kidney stone, which is precisely located by X-rays.

The shock waves are generated by an oversized spark plug in the reflector and are focused to converge at the stone. The water, which has roughly the same acoustical properties as the body, delivers the shock wave at full strength and transmits it into the body. The shocks pulse in time with the patient's heart, to prevent cardiac arrest.

The soft tissues of the body, and even the bones, are not damaged by the pulsing shock waves. But the crystalline stone at the focus eventually shatters, just as glass shatters from a sonic boom.

The FDA said there was no indication of serious problems from the treatment. Young said about 1 in every 250 patients had some bleeding around the kidneys, but the condition corrected itself without further treatment.

Some Fear New Fee May Cut Off Phones For Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer watchdogs are trying to ensure that telephone service isn't priced out of reach for the poor following a Federal Communications Commission decision to increase residential phone charges by $1 a month.

On a 5-0 vote Wednesday, the FCC ordered the dollar-a-month increase beginning in June, with another dollar to be tacked on in June 1986.

"If you have a monthly income of three or four hundred dollars, which many consumers in America have, if you get an additional charge on your telephone of $2 a month, that just makes it that much harder to survive," said Joan Claybrook, president of the consumer lobbying group Public Citizen.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, is preparing legislation to insure that the handicapped, the poor and the elderly can have a home phone no matter how high local rates go.

Under his proposal, state regulators who approve local phone rates would be allowed to reduce the so called "access charge" for the poor.

Before American Telephone and Telegraph Co. was broken up by court order, part of the cost of long-distance calls went to support the local lines that connected individual homes and offices with the nationwide system.

Those who use their home phones for long-distance calls will see a reduction in the cost of out-of-state calls to partially offset the new access charge.

Businesses with one phone will also be affected by the ruling.

Larger businesses began paying a $6-per-line access charge earlier this year.

"If we don't move this way, local telephone rates are going to be higher, much higher," FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said.

Although it wouldn't make sense for a residential user, businesses with a large volume of long-distance phone calls have begun buying their own lines to the office of their long-distance phone company, so the local phone company can no longer make money from their long-distance business.

If that practice, called "bypass," continues to grow, that loss of business could eventually force local phone companies to raise monthly rates for remaining small customers, the FCC reasoned.

Samuel A. Simon, president of the Telecommunications Research and Action Center, which claims to represent 14,000 telephone users, said, "We do not accept the premise that access charges are required to avoid bypass. Other options are available, if necessary, to minimize the impact of potential bypass. These include alternative pricing mechanisims."

Stocks And Markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was widely mixed today, repeating Wednesday's indecisive pattern.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 7.73 to 1,215.77 in the first half hour.

But losers took a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

A reduction in the prime lending rate to 10¾ percent, first adopted early this week by New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust, continued to spread in the banking industry today. Open-market money rates generally showed only modest changes, however.

The Labor Department reported that the consumer price index rose 0.2 percent in November, down from increases of 0.4 percent in the two preceding months. That news reinforced many Wall Streeters' optimism about the inflation outlook for 1985.

Meanwhile, traders kept a close watch on developments from the yearend meeting of Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries oil ministers in Geneva.

Signs that the group was having trouble reaching agreement on a plan to avert a price war depressed many oil issues on Wednesday.

Many analysts have mixed feelings about the potential effect of any further cracks in OPEC.

Deacs Hold Off EC Rally, 83-57

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WINSTON-SALEM — To say that East Carolina's Pirates were intimidated by Wake Forest University last night may be understating things.

The Pirates walked on the court and didn't realize for 20 minutes that they could play with the Demon Deacons of the Atlantic Coast Conference. By then, it was too late, as Wake powered to an 83-57 victory over the Bucs.

"We played very timid and intimidated in the first half," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "When we overcame that, we got back into the game. But you can't be down 20 points with a good team and expect to come back and shoot free throws like we did."

The Pirates were terrible from the line, making only seven of 20 shots, including just three of 14 in the second half — two of those shots coming after time had expired.

Those two shots, both by William Grady, typified the frustration of the Pirates at the line. His first missed everything — an air ball. The second bounced off the front rim, never making it over the hoop.

Despite being down by 23 points late in the first half, 43-20, the Pirates fought back and nearly made a game of it. Several times they cut the lead to 10 points and had the opportunity to do more damage to the Deacon lead, only to fall apart once more.

"The people we were counting on didn't have the games we expected of them," Harrison said. "I mean Grady misses eight free throws, and you take back six loose ball freak baskets (by Wake) and it's a ballgame."

The cold from the ice rink underlying the basketball floor seemed to seep through to the Pirates and Deacons as both teams started off quite cold. The Pirates didn't scored for the first three and a half minutes, but Wake could muster only five points during the same stretch. East Carolina ended up shooing just 36.7 percent for the half — 11 of 30, while Wake made 17 of 35 for 48.6 percent. Both teams warmed somewhat for the game, but the Pirates, who had shot 56 percent for the season, made only 41.7 percent for the game as compared to Wake's 49.2.

The Deacons totally dominated the boards, led by Kenny Green's 13 as Wake held a 48-30 edge in that department. It allowed the Deacs a number of second shots and the garbage collection paid off.

"Carl's (Tacy) got a good team," Harrison said, "but there is no need to come in and back down just because they happen to belong to a league called the ACC.

"We did come back and cut it to ten, but we just couldn't get over the hump. It wasn't everybody, just some. But when you make a flurry of mistakes, the other team scores a flurry of points.

"We're just trying to become a better team. This isn't the NCAA playoofs. I really thought we had a chance to beat them and I thought we could play with them. We just have to continue to work to get better. There are a lot of little things that need to be corrected and in some of them, the players have to do them theirselves."

It wasn't that the Pirates weren't getting good shots — in general they were. Although the Pirates were impatient at times, it was generally a case of not getting it to the hoop or being too strong.

Green, who scored a game high 24 points, hit the first point for Wake, making the second of a two-shot foul 15 seconds into the game. Chuck Thomas and Mark Cline followed with baskets before Jack Turnbill broke the ice for the Pirates at the 16:32 mark.

The Pirates closed the gap to 8-6 on a basket by Leon Bass with 13:43 left, but Wake then ran off 15 straight points as the Pirates made several forced — and several unforced turnovers — and missed some more shots, going scoreless for over four minutes.

Chuck Kepley led the spurt for the Deacons, hitting eight of those points as Wake took a 23-6 lead with 7:17 left in the half. Grady stopped the drought for the Pirates with a three-point play, but Wake continued to pull away, and finally gained a 43-20 lead on two free throws by Tyrone Bogues with 3:47 left.

It was then that the Pirates began their comeback, outscoring the Deacs, 6-2, the rest of the half to trail 44-26.

After the two teams matched points in the opening seconds of the second half, East Carolina ran off eight in a row, four of them by Bass, to trim the lead to ten, 46-36, but Green hit a jumper from the lane and Bogues followed with one from the middle of the key to up the lead to 14 again.

East Carolina fought back and again cut the lead to ten, 54-44 on a Scott Hardy jumper, and the Pirates missed on a couple of chances to cut it back before Grady scored off a drive to make it 58-48 with 8:07 left.

Grady was fouled on the play, but missed the shot, and missed on two more tries — his fifth straight miss of the half — with 7:40 remaining.

That, coupled with a no-call on what Harrison said was a "very obvious" goaltending by the Deacs, helped Wake spark another pull away — this one the fatal one.

The Deacons outscored the Pirates, 25-9, over the remaining 7:30 of the game, to clinch the victory, their second in the history of the series.

In addition to Green's 24 points, Lee Garber came off the bench to score 18. Grady led East Carolina with 16 points while Curt Vanderhorst added 11.

The win upped Wake's record to 5-3, while the Pirates fall to 3-3.

East Carolina is idle until next Friday when the Pirates face the hosting Golden Hurricane in the first round of the First Tulsa Classic in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Alcorn State and North Texas State meet in the other first round game. The tournament winds up on Saturday, Dec. 29.

Marshall Fouls Top Lady Pirates

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates went down to defeat for the third straight time on the road in the past week, bowing to Marshall University, 86-76.

The foul line played a great role in the contest, as East Carolina outshot the Thundering Herd by 14 points from the floor. However, the Pirates were whistled for 31 fouls, while Marshall collected only 15. Both Lisa Squirewell and Annette Phillips fouled out and Anita Anderson and Sylvia Bragg finished the game with four fouls each.

Marshall went to the stripe 43 times, hitting on 28 of them. East Carolina made only four of ten shots at the foul line.

Again, too, the Pirates outrebounded their opponents, 54-42, marking the third straight them they've held at least a ten-round edge in defeat.

Squirewell and Anderson had 11 and 12 rebounds, respectively, while Karen Telphrey led Marshall with 13 rebounds. Telphrey was also on the receiving end of most of the fouls, going to the line 15 times and making 11 of those. She also hit six of 18 shots for a total of 23 points, tops on the Lady Herd team.

Ironically, she did not commit a foul in the game.

Anderson turned in another fine game, finishing with a total of 29 points, hitting 14 of 29 shots from the floor and one of five from the line.

Squirewell was the only other Lady Pirate in double figures with 10.

In addition to Telphrey's points, Tywanda Abercrombie had 16 and Annie Wiggins had 12 for Marshall.

East Carolina was also hurt by its shooting percentage, hitting just 36 of 88 shots, for 40.9 percent. Marshall hit on 29 of 57, 50.9 percent.

The defeat dropped the Lady Pirates to 2-8 on the year. They are now idle until January 2 when they return home to host South Carolina.

NCAA Checks Ga. Women

ATLANTA (AP) — The University of Georgia, which has confirmed that its football and basketball programs are under probe by the NCAA for possible recruiting violations, said its women's basketball program is also being investigated.

Vince Dooley, the school's athletic director and football coach, confirmed the reports to The Atlanta Constitution.

Sources at the NCAA said a report on Georgia's program would be completed soon and no major penalties are anticipated, the newspaper reported in its Thursday editions.

Devils Treated For Latest Win

By The Associated Press

The second-ranked Duke Blue Devils munched on their reward for defeating Northwestern as four Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams took victories over non-conference opponents.

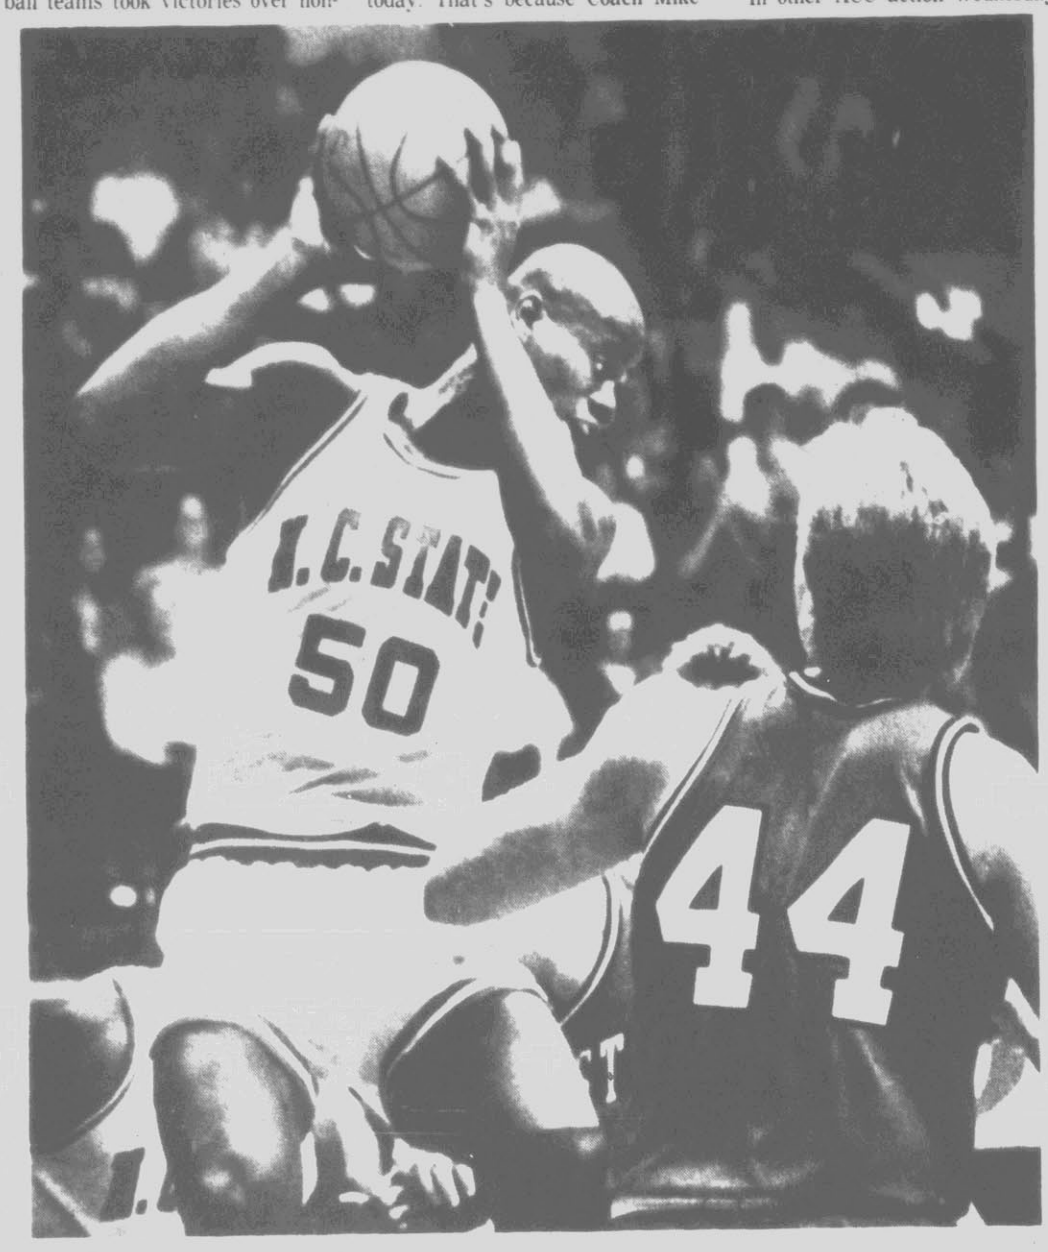

Duke defeated Northwestern 76-55 in Evanston, Ill., and the team munched on homemade cookies before flying home to North Carolina today. That's because Coach Mike Krzyzewski's 72-year-old mother lives in Chicago, and he promised his players she would bake cookies for them if they beat Northwestern Wednesday night.

In other ACC action Wednesday, 14th-ranked N.C. State took an 82-64 victory over St. Francis in Raleigh, N.C., while Wake Forest came back from exams to hand East Carolina an 83-57 defeat in Winston-Salem, N.C. Clemson defeated Furman 55-53 on the Paladins' home court in Greenville, S.C., but not before the game went into overtime.

"This is the biggest team we've played and their height hurt us," said Krzyzewski. 'We're not an all-airport team, where you walk through an airport and people are amazed by how big you are."

Mark Alarie was deadly from outside all night, and led all scorers with 19 points.

"We never expect to win by 20," Krzyzewski said. 'I just want us to play well, play hard and not get too excited."

Grabbing A Rebound

N.C. State University center Chris Washburn (50) grabs of his game-high nine rebounds as St. Francis player Joe Sharkey (44) looks on during first half action Wednesday night in Raleigh. Washburn also had 18 points to lead N.C. State to an 82-64 victory. (AP Laserphoto)

The first half, when Duke built a 36-19 lead, decided the outcome. In the second half, Northwestern, of the Big Ten Conference, was outscored just 40-36.

Coach Rich Falk praised his team's play in the second half, but said the Wildcats, now 3-4, are still struggling.

"We're proving to ourselves just how good you have to be at the execution phase of the game," he said.

In Raleigh, Wolfpack Jim Valvano said the effects of last weekend's loss to Georgia Tech were apparent his team's victory over St. Francis.

N.C. State lost a 66-64 decision to the 13th-ranked Yellow Jackets on a last-second basket.

"We came to play the first six games," Valvano said. "But the loss to Georgia Tech took an emotional toll.

"Not to take anything away from St. Francis. They've been on the road playing the likes of Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Louisville," Valvano added. "But it wasn't an inspiring performance for us."

Nonetheless, freshman Chris Washburn and senior Lorenzo Charles scored 18 points apiece in the victory.

"They're the biggest team we've played so far," St. Francis coach Kevin Porter said. "But Notre Dame is the toughest team we've played."

Senior center Jim Conway led the Red Flash with 14 points.

"There is always a lot of apprehension when you come off exam week, but we're glad exams are over and that we have that game behind us. I know that we face a much sterner test on Saturday against Temple. We'll have to play much better Saturday," he said.

Kenny Green had 24 points and a game-high 13 rebounds while Lee Garber scored 18 to lead Wake Forest over East Carolina.

William Grady paced East Carolina with 16 points while Curt Vanderhorst chipped in 11.

"We played horrendous," said East Carolina coach Charlie Harrison. "We came out and were intimidated totally. Once we got over that, we played better, but you can't expect to get down by 20 points to a team like that on the road and come back — especially the way we were shooting free throws."

The Pirates hit only 7 of 20 free throws.

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis says his Tigers were lucky to defeat Furman in an overtime game that involved "two good defenses."

Greene Teams In Finals; Chargers In Consolations

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central's boys and girls moved into the finals of the Tri-County Holiday Tournament last night with a pair of wins. Greene Central's boys won their first game of the season with a 60-52 victory over South Lenoir, while the Lady Rams downed Ayden-Grifton, 43-30.

The Rams will face North Lenoir in both games in the finals, to be played Friday night.

Ayden-Grifton's boys, a 64-63 loser to North Lenoir, will face South Lenoir, as will the Lady Chargers, in the consolation games, to be played tonight.

The loss by the Chargers came after North Lenoir put on a furious rally in the final quarter of the contest. Ayden-Grifton moved out into a 15-8 lead in the first period and expanded that with an 18-12 margin in the second quarter. That left the Chargers in a comfortable 33-20 lead at the half.

North Lenoir began its rally in the third period, outscoring the Chargers 15-12. But that still left the Chargers up 45-35 going into the final quarter. In that period, however, the Hawks took complete control, and forced a five-second violation on the inbounds with five seconds left in the game to get a chance at pulling it out. Trailing by one, the Hawks got the ball to John Johnson with three seconds left and his shot went through for the 64-63 victory.

Johnson finished with 23 points to lead the Hawks, while Larry Johnson had 14 and Larry Garner had 12. Ayden-Grifton was led by Marvin Smith with 20 while Doug Anderson had 19.

• •

Greene Central, winless in all its previous outings in the year, held a 7-6 lead at the end of the first period, but fell behind in the second quarter, trailing 26-21 at intermission.

"We played terrible in the first half," Coach Gregg Ashorn said, "but we hung in there. In the second half, we went man-to-man, and I thought Mike Warren did a great job on Mike Isler to help us get back into the game."

The Rams outscored the Blue Devils, 23-9, in the third period, and pushed into a 44-35 lead. They hung on during the final period, allowing only one point to be chipped off the lead the rest of the way.

Harvey Dupree led the Rams with 13 points while Maurice Edwards and James Hill each had 10. Isler led South Lenoir with 16, while Jay Phipps had 13 and Luby Outlaw hit 12.

• •

Greene Central did most of the damage to Ayden-Grifton's girls in the first period, running out to a 12-2 lead. They outscored the Lady Chargers, 16-10, in the second period and held a 28-12 lead at intermission.

Ayden-Grifton outhit the Rams in each of the final two periods, but couldn't overcome the first half advantage.

Cynthia Jones led Greene Central with 16 points, while Cyndi Hicks added 10. Karen Edmonds had 16 points to lead Ayden-Grifton.

DePaul Upset By Western Michigan

By The Associated Press

DePaul's Blue Demons, flying high just a few days ago, suddenly are in danger of going down in flames.

DePaul, which last week was unbeaten and ranked No. 2 in the country, suffered a 77-57 walloping Saturday at the hands of No. 1 Georgetown and then dropped a 65-64 stunner Wednesday night to Western Michigan.

"We're on the canvas," said Joey Meyers, DePaul's first-year coach. "We'll see now what we're made of. I'm certainly not pleased."

While DePaul floundered Wednesday night, Georgetown blasted Morgan State 89-62 despite the absence of All-American center Patrick Ewing, who was resting a sprained left hand.

In other games involving ranked teams, second-ranked Duke hit 66 percent of its field goal attempts in romping past Northwestern 76-55, No. 6 Southern Methodist trambled North Texas State 90-45, No. 14 North Carolina State pounded St. Francis, Pa., 82-64 and No. 17 Virginia Tech ripped Rider 107-74.

Pete Hansen hit a pair of free throws with 16 seconds left to provide Western Michigan's margin of victory over DePaul. The Blue Demons, who trailed by seven points with 5:40 to play, led for the last time on Marty Embry's rebound basket and free throw with 47 seconds to go.

Hansen's first free throw bounced off the rim before falling through to tie the game.

"My heart went as high as that ball did after the first shot," said Hansen. "But the second one was in the minute it left my hand. What a great feeling."

"After the first five minutes, we found our game plan was effective," said Vern Payne, coach of the 4-3 Broncos. "We could play with them and keep it close. The more the game went on, our confidence grew, and I think DePaul pressed as the game went on."

Despite the absence of Ewing, who hurt his hand in the rout of DePaul, and backup center Ralph Dalton, Georgetown breezed to its eighth victory this season and 18th in a row over two seasons.

Bill Martin scored 22 points and freshman Grady Mateen, who started at center, added 17 for the Hoyas, who led 14-2 after only 3½ minutes. Morgan State, winless in nine games, got 14 points from guard Tom Foster.

"Patrick wanted to play," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said, "but I thought it best not to let him if we could get away with it. It was important for us to let the young kids play and get a feel for things."

Northwestern enjoyed a decided height advantage over unbeaten Duke, but the Blue Devils more than made up for that with shooting accuracy. Duke, now 6-0, hit 78 percent of its shots in the first half in building a 36-19 bulge at intermission.

"We're not an all-airport team, where we walk through an airport and people are amazed by how big we are," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We showed excellent patience in the first half. Their height really hurt us, but our guys put good pressure on."

Mark Alarie hit nine of 11 shots in scoring 19 points for Duke and Johnny Dawkins added 18. Northwestern, which slipped to 3-4, was led by Elliot Fullen's 15.

Carl Wright contributed three dunks and Larry Davis added another as SMU bolted to a 9-0 lead against lowly North Texas State. The Mustangs, unbeaten since a one-point loss to Georgetown last March, led 44-20 at the half and 60-22 five minutes into the second half.

Wright and Davis each scored 17 for SMU.

Despite the margin, Coach Jim Valvano wasn't satisfied with North Carolina State's victory over St. Francis, the Wolfpack's first outing since a 66-64 loss to Georgia Tech.

"We came to play the first six games, but the loss to Georgia Tech took an emotional toll," Valvano said. "Not to take anything away from St. Francis . . . but it wasn't an inspiring performance for us."

Chris Washburn and Lorenzo Charles scored 18 points each for North Carolina State, which took a 10-2 lead after four minutes and never looked back.

Forward Perry Young scored 16 points and Keith Colbert and Bobby Beecher added 14 apiece in Virginia Tech's sixth victory in seven starts.

The Hokies led just 18-14 in the early going, but built a 54-34 margin by halftime and an 83-46 bulge midway through the second half.

Rider, 3-3, was led by forward Derrick Lamar's 18 points.

At Provo, Utah, Timo Saarelainen scored 22 points to pace Brigham Young to an 89-81 victory over UCLA. The 10-time national champions fell to 2-4, the worst start for a UCLA team since 1962.

In other games, it was Clemson 55, Furman 53 in overtime; New Orleans 87, South Alabama 76; Tulane 87, Brooklyn College 55; Wake Forest 83, East Carolina 57; Detroit 85, Eastern Michigan 80; Ohio State 83, Central Florida 59; Colorado State 89, Texas-Arlington 77; Rice 63, Arkansas-Monticello 39; Santa Clara 76, UC-Davis 66; and Stanford 83, Seattle 46.

To The Sports Editor:

If you can believe the media, the firing of Coach Ed Emory by Chancellor John Howell and Athletic Director Ken Karr brings up some serious doubts as to the competency of ECU's administrative leadership.

The track record of a football coach is pretty easy to measure: you win some, you lose some, and hope wins out-number losses.

But how do you measure the performance and competency of Chancellors and Athletic Directors?

If you use the recent firing of Coach Emory as a yard stick, John Howell and Ken Karr would be in deep trouble.

Was the wrong man fired, or do administrators have lifetime jobs, regardless of performance?

ECU owes something to Ed Emory that cries out for justice.

To The Sports Editor:

One year ago in this same newspaper I wrote a letter to Coach Ed Emory and his football team thanking them for one of the greatest accomplishments of all time in the world of college football. I thanked Coach Emory for giving us the finest East Carolina football team ever. Coach Emory did the greatest coaching job of any college football coach in America in 1983. He gave us poor Eastern North Carolinians a piece of the pie that we had never had before.

I also said in the letter that as long as we had Coach Emory, we would reap more great things in future ECU football. Lo and behold, this person I am referring to now has been fired! I totally disagree with the decision. And, I hope everyone filled out the ballot (and checked yes on all four items) in Sunday's Daily Reflector newspaper, as I did. Justice has to prevail here in Greenville!

Coach Emory, I really can't find the words to express my appreciation for the fantastic job you have done. Thanks is just not enough. None of us real football fans and Pirates even thought anything at all about the 2-9 season just completed. We all knew about the heavy senior losses, the many injuries this fall, the seven road games, the lack of support from Karr, and the lack of money that other college have available to spend on football.

Coach Emory, we appreciate you being a players' coach and also a "people" person. There are thousands of us little people out here who stand behind you.

Maas Is Top New Defender

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Maas, the most aggressive lineman in Kansas City since the days when Curley Culp was helping the Chiefs to a Super Bowl triumph, was named today by the Associated Press the National Football League's defensive rookie of the year.

Despite missing two games with a hairline fracture of his left leg and playing in pain for a half-season more, Maas' strength at nose tackle forced opponents to double-team him and freed defensive ends Art Still and Mike Bell to roam.

The combination helped the Chiefs to hold opponents to an average of 20 yards less per rush than in 1983 and only three men rushed for 100 yards or more against them as they improved from 6-10 to 8-8 by winning their last three games.

The balloting by three writers or broadcasters representing each of the NFL's 28 teams was close and spread out.

Maas received 19 votes to 13 for safety Don Rogers of the Cleveland Browns. Others with significant support included Maas' teammate, cornerback Kevin Ross; safety Tom Flynn and end Alphonso Carreker of Green Bay; linebackers Carl Banks and Gary Reasons and cornerback Perry Williams of the New York Giants; cornerback Terry Taylor of Seattle, linebacker Eugene Lockhart of Dallas and tackle Rick Bryan of Atlanta.

The 6-foot-4½, 265-pound Maas, the fifth player taken in last year's draft, was an All-America defensive tackle at Pitt. He was switched to noseguard by the Chiefs, a switch he accepts, but doesn't recommend to anyone who won't take punishment.

Odds Against Court Attempt

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

High school athletic associations are accustomed to the torrent of criticism that follows attempts to realign their members, but several groups say their battles rarely wind up in court.

The North Carolina High School Athletic Association recently completed its realignment. While most of the 334 member schools went home with little or no grumbling, Central Davidson, East Lincoln, Lincolnton and West Caldwell have refused to let the issue die.

An official of the Lincoln County school system said in a published report that the system is considering litigation to block the NCHSAA's decision to switch two Lincoln County schools to conferences in Caldwell County. In addition, Central Davidson is upset because it wanted to play more Charlotte-area teams but was turned down by the association.

But interviews with several association officials in other states show that when such matters reach the courtroom, the associations prevail.

"It has been the history of the court that if you lose one, you get into a series. Until you lose one, you do quite well," said Jim Pinkerton, director of the South Carolina High School League, which just extended its realignment period from two years to four years, just as in North Carolina.

"Very seldom does the state Supreme Court rule with the parent or the school," Pinkerton added. "Very seldom do they win, unless you've got some rules that you shouldn't have."

Virginia's high school association just completed its two-year realignment. Unlike North Carolina, Virginia has three classes of competition and the biggest noise made in that state was the cry to add a fourth class. Otherwise, said spokesman Earl Gillespie, the changes made this year caused little commotion.

"It wasn't as big a problem this year as we thought it would be," Gillespie said. "It may not be two years from now, but right now it's quiet."

Realignment in Virginia is handled by a committee appointed by chairmen from each league. The boards of the divisions then vote on the changes. Schools may move up in classification, but very few have the chance to step back.

"They have to be voted into their group classification," Gillespie said. "They have to vote them in or out."

In Tennessee, there were problems two years ago, but none of them resulted in court cases. Ronnie Carter of the state's Secondary School Athletic Association, said the format for determining divisions had to be changed because of drastic declines in enrollment.

"All of a sudden, our classifications were looking like a large number in A, but the AA had a big gap and the AAA were less," Carter said. "Our number imbalance was way out of whack."

Instead of using 375 students as the cutoff for Class A and 875 as the high point for Class AA, the state divided the number of high schools into thirds. The system is based on numerical order.

"That way, we don't have to worry about enrollments rising and enrollments breaking," Carter added.

It has never been easy, each of the administrators said. Carter, in commenting on Tennessee's system, might have sounded the idea for each of the surrounding states and their own methods.

"Hey, it's the fairest system I've ever seen," he said. "I don't think there is a way that is foolproof."

Jack Nicklaus was named the PGA Player-of-the-Year five times, in 1967, 1972, 1973, 1975 and 1976.

Florida Files Second Appeal

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A second appeal has been filed by the University of Florida asking the NCAA to reduce its two-year sanctions on bowl and television appearances to one season on the school's probation.

Most of UF's seven-page amended appeal, filed Wednesday, is taken up by an analysis of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's scholarship rules.

The NCAA penalized the school for numerous violations involving the Gator football program. It originally announced plans to impose a three-year sanction on bowl and television appearances, to be reduced to two years if the school met certain requirements.

The NCAA also took away 20 scholarships over two years, reducing the number of scholarships available to the football team to 85 next year and 75 in 1986-87.

UF President Marshall Criser asked the NCAA to modify the scholarship sanctions, which he said actually will result in the loss of more than 20 grants because of the organization's four-year cap on football scholarships.

Criser accused the NCAA of failing to consider the corrective measures the school already has taken on its own, including the firing of Head Coach Charley Pell and two of his assistants.

He said he was "unable to explain why the corrective action and cooperative attitude have not been more appropriately recognized by the NCAA."

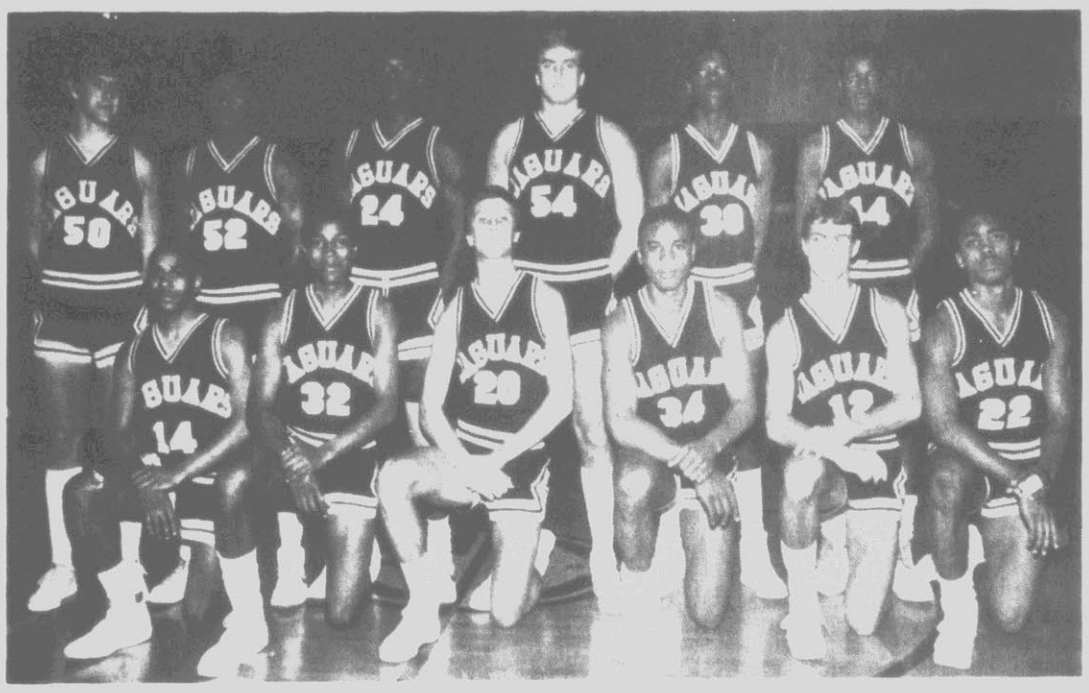

The university's first appeal of the NCAA decision on Nov. 21 also asked for reductions in the scholarship sanctions.

Both appeals will be heard Jan. 14-16 in Nashville, Tenn.

UF attorney Jim Quincey maintains that the NCAA broke its own rules by stripping the Gators of 20 initial scholarships over the next two years and also imposing limits on total scholarships.

The appeal notes that the organization has never imposed limits on both levels before.

Heart-Lung Patient Off Respirator

By KAREN L. SCRIVO
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 22-year-old North Carolina man who received a heart and lung transplant at Johns Hopkins Hospital this week is off the respirator and ready to get on the bicycle, one of his doctors says.

Vann Matthews, who was taken off the respirator Wednesday, asked doctors when he would be able to get out of bed and ride the stationary bike, according to Dr. William Baumgartner, one of the doctors who performed the six-hour surgery on Monday.

A hospital spokeswoman said Matthews was taken off the respirator late Wednesday morning and breathing without any problem. The Gastonia, N.C., man remained in critical but stable condition Wednesday night, which doctors consider normal following surgery. Doctors said they expected to let Matthews sit up today.

Matthews' mother, Annabelle Royster, said the family could not have received a better Christmas wish. Mrs. Royster said she also considered it a great birthday present since she got word that the hospital had found a donor on her birthday, Sunday.

"We're so grateful that Johns Hopkins for doing this transplant," Mrs. Royster said at a hospital press conference. "And I can't emphasize how grateful we are to the donor's family."

Mrs. Royster said her son looked well and was in good spirits when she saw him Wednesday morning. A John Wayne fan, he flashed her the Duke's famous thumbs up sign and wrote her several notes since he couldn't talk while on the respirator, she said.

"We're pleased with how he's doing," said Dr. Thomas Traill, one of the physicians who performed the operation. "His heart is in excellent condition."

The former high school athlete underwent a second operation shortly after the transplant so doctors could repair bleeding in the aortic connection which links the transplanted heart with the main artery, Traill said.

"Surgery is a lot like plumbing," Traill said. "And in a heart-lung tranplant, the parts are quite large. There's no surprise that there's some leaks, and a little leak goes a long way."

Matthews, who ran track and played football in high school before developing primary pulmonary hypertension, waited $1\frac{1}{2}$ years in Maryland for a donor, Traill said.

Officials have said the donor was a trauma victim from Maryland but delcined to declined to give further details.

The disease, which is fatal, causes a narrowing of the blood vessels in the lungs which leads to a shortness of breath and makes the heart work four or five times harder, Traill said. Eighteen months ago, a doctor gave Matthews only six months to live, he said.

"The majority of (heart-lung transplant) patients lead normal lives," Traill said. "The operation either succeeds or fails, like other transplants, there is little in-between."

In the next two weeks, doctors hope to have Matthews off intravenous feeding, take out the tubes which suction off excess fluids and have him exercising, Traill said.

Baumgartner said doctors will be closely monitoring Matthews reaction to the new organs during the critical three weeks following the operation to make sure his body does not reject them or contract any infections.

Matthews has been taking medications including Cyclosproin-A and steroids, anti-rejection drugs; Isopril to maintain a regular heartbeat and antibiotics to ward off infections, said Karen Helsley, Hopkins spokewoman.

Raleigh Theater Offers Modern Twist To 'Christmas Carol'

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The way Ira David Wood sees it, there's a little bit of Ebenezer Scrooge in everybody, and as times have changed, so has the hard-bitten miser from Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

In Wood's 1984 adaptation of Dickens' Christmas classic, Scrooge doesn't tremble in fear when Marley's ghost warns him to change his ways. Instead he does what any hip, 1984 miser would do — he summons a group of ghostbusters.

Scrooge as played and directed by Wood, also throws firecrackers at carolers, gets chased by a gorilla and offers a running string of sight gags.

"We kept all the lessons we've taken the lameness out of Charles Dickens and moved it to 20th century tempos," said Wood, who wrote the first adaptation 12 years ago after becoming executive director of Raleigh's Theater in the Park.

"There were so many traditional productions, I decided what we might like to do was something a little different," Wood said. "I think, however, we are very, very true to the spirit of the work."

Wood's version of the story has become a Christmas tradition of its own, drawing thousands of spectators each year to revel in what have become standard gag routines and each year's new surprises.

"The way we play old Ebenezer, he's a lot like Archie Bunker would be," Wood said. "There's a little bit of Scrooge in all of us. I don't think there's anybody who at one time or another didn't want to hit Tiny Tim in the face with a lemon meringue pie."

The production brings a few frowns from traditionalists, but Wood said "some reviewers say they believe Old Boz would have smiled at what we've done with his work."

leaving, so Wood decided to go for more broad-based family productions.

His first was a rock opera written by local high school students that drew swarms of spectators.

"The board was in shock," Wood said. "They asked me what I wanted to do next, and I said 'Hamlet.' They didn't know any better and neither did I.

"They asked me how much money I needed and I asked how much they had," he said. "They had $127."

The production, in modern dress, "played Hamlet like David Eisenhower", and portrayed Rosencrantz and Gildenstern as a couple of guys who partied a lot, Wood said. The production drew 8,000 people to an outdoor amphitheatre that seated 3,500.

Wood later set "Taming of the Shrew" in the Roaring '20s, and gave modern adaptations to other Shakespearian works.

"We couldn't afford royalties for shows," Wood said. "Shakespeare

"Even though people laugh so much for two hours, at the points that should be serious, they are serious," Wood said.

"When we think of Christmases past, we think of loved ones no longer with us," Wood said. "People are not only happy and cheerful, they're ready to cry. The tears are just below the surface and they go hand-in-hand with this time of year."

Wood said the cast always experiences a moment of dread just before rehearsals begin in November, a fear of what they are doing to a Christmas classic. But the rewards, he said, linger all year.

"You can be depressed and someone will come up and ask if you weren't the one who played Scrooge," Wood said. "Then they tell you it made their family's Christmas last year.

And men, Wood said, are the ones who give the cast the biggest compliments.

"You get a dad who comes backstage and says, 'My wife drug me down here to your show,'" Wood said, dropping into the drawl of his native Halifax County. "'I was sitting back watching the football game and she insisted I come along. Well, I enjoyed it.'

"We know if we can get those guys, the football guys, then we're doing something," he said.

Wood said there is a possibility the show may go to England next year as part of a cultural exchange, and there are plans to take the show on the road to broaden the community theatre's base.

Wood said Theater in the Park, North Carolina's largest community theater group, owes "a great debt to Mr. Dickens and his work" because of the funding the Christmas show brings in.

"Literally, in our theater, it pays the bill for us all year long," Wood said. "It permits us to do other things that are not box-office fluff."

Wood began adapting plays 12 years ago when he left a job as a theater consultant for the state Department of Public Instruction to be the executive director of what was then called the Raleigh Children's Theater.

Too many parents were dropping their children off at productions and was there and the price was right."

Wood, who portrayed Natalie Wood's lover in the 1983 movie "Brainstorm," splits his time between a home in Los Angeles and a home and family in Raleigh. His three-week-old son, Ira David Wood IV, made his stage debut in this season's "A Christmas Carol."

He is working on movie scripts set in North Carolina, in part so his friends in acting can find work in their home state.

"It sounds like a cliche, but there are a lot of talented people here who are leaving the state because there's no work for them," Wood said. "The one thing I learned from FFA (Future Farmers of America) is that you can't keep taking from the soil without putting something back."

Martin Picks Lake As His Lobbyist

RALEIGH (AP) — Beverly Lake Jr., a Democratic candidate who lost his bid for a seat on the state Supreme Court in 1982, has been elected Jim Martin's chief lobbyist in the General Assembly.

Lake, a Raleigh attorney, will work with [illegible] Charles H. Hughes in the governor's office, Martin announced Wednesday.

Lake has been in private practice in Raleigh since his defeat in the election to the Supreme Court. From 1975 through 1978, Lake was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. He was chairman of the Forest Fire Control Board from 1977 to 1981 and served as a U.S. Navy [illegible] during World War II.

Martin said Lake's appointment would help him "maintain the wide ranging bipartisan friendships and contacts." Joseph B. Martin, the governor-elect's brother and a top adviser, said in an interview Wednesday: "He brings credibility and a strong philosophical compatibility with the governor and, we believe, with the majority of the General Assembly."

Lake could not be reached for comment Wednesday. But in a June interview, Lake said that during the 1982 campaign he clashed with the National Congressional Club, a conservative political action committee, and had second thoughts about abandoning the Democratic Party.

Hughes, a GOP representative from Hendersonville, served as research director for Martin's gubernatorial campaign and helped draft his package of proposed tax cuts.

Hughes, a Guilford College graduate, announced his resignation from the General Assembly in a speech Wednesday at the Henderson County GOP Headquarters.

Hughes said he had not discussed the post with Martin until last Saturday. He said that despite his November election to a third state House term, he felt that western North Carolina would be benefit from his presence in the Martin administration.

"The research department will be responsibile for furnishing information to the governor on whatever is necessary," said Hughes. "The governor does not initiate every idea.

"The department will have the responsibility to check with other states and the federal government. It will be our job to go to the governor and say 'this is what is going on,' and he will then decide if it is something we need to look into."

Hughes said he would have a staff of four people, who would be selected from a group of people already working in Hunt's administration.

The executive committee of the Henderson County GOP will select Hughes' replacement. He said he would recommend someone, and in an interview said his wife, Suzie, was qualified for the post.

Martin Inauguration Jan. 5 To Stress Statewide Unity As New Administration's Goal

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 120,000 invitations have been mailed to the Jan. 5 inauguration of Gov.-elect Jim Martin, but the public may attend the event that will stress unity and celebration, organizers say.

The inauguration will focus on the unifying process and its theme will be "North Carolina: A United State," said Patric Dorsey, chairman of the Inaugural Committee.

"During the course of his campaign, Governor-elect Jim Martin spoke of the need for unifying all of the people of this state and it was his hope that the election would bridge any regional, ethnic and political differences that may exist among our people," Mrs. Dorsey said Wednesday.

She said a train from the east and another from the west will bring people to the event. "We are right on target with our program, invitations and the multitude of small details that had to be accomplished," she said.

Martin, the state's second Republican governor this century, will not be the only person taking the oath of office. Democrat Bob Jordan will be sworn in as lieutenant governor as will Democrats who are members of the Council of State.

The three-day inaugural period will start Friday, Jan. 4, with three unofficial functions. There will be a luncheon honoring Dottie Martin, the new first lady, a reception for the inaugural party and distinguished guests and the Inaugural Ball.

Republican state legislators will sponsor a prayer breakfast Saturday morning before inauguration ceremonies at the state Archives and History Library Building. That is the same site where Gov. Jim Hunt was inaugurated in 1981.

The Charlotte Symphony Orchestra will perform at an 11 a.m. concert on the inauguration site.

Martin played the tuba with the symphony for six seasons. Mrs. Dorsey said a special three-sided shell equipped with heaters will be built for the symphony because its contract prohibits musicians from playing in temperatures below 64 degrees.

At 11:50 a.m., Hunt and Martin will walk from the Executive Mansion to the stage at the Archives and History Library Building for the one-hour inauguration ceremony. Martin decided to wear a business suit as he takes the oath of office instead of more formal attire.

A parade with about 120 units, including 53 marching bands, will follow at 1:30 p.m. Hunt will pass on the state seal to Martin in a ceremony after the parade.

The Jim Martin Inaugural Committee, a private group, is planning a celebration that night at the Raleigh Civic Center.

Mrs. Dorsey said the new governor is provided with $51,000 for the inauguration and transition. She said that money will be used to pay for official functions — the parade, inauguration itself, pre-inaugural reception for dignitaries and public reception at the mansion.

She said other funds are coming from a number of private sources.

"This whole city is in a celebration mood," she said.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg Opens Crackdown On Pornography

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A crackdown on pornography launched by Charlotte and Mecklenburg County officials is the most significant anti-pornography effort in North Carolina in more than a decade, Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt says.

"I want to see this kind of thing shut down and pushed out of the city of Charlotte," Gantt said at a Wednesday afternoon press conference that coincided with the start of the searches.

Authorities began the crackdown Wednesday, attempting to close down six bookstores and movie theaters described as centers for homosexual prostitution and obscene materials. The operation involved more than 100 law enforcement officers.

Mecklenburg County Superior Court Judge Frank Snepp issued search warrants for the six businesses Wednesday afternoon after police officers said they had observed sex acts and purchased obscene materials during an eight-month investigation. Also on Wednesday, District Attorney Peter Gilchrist filed civil lawsuits seeking to close down the businesses as public nuisances.

"After these six, there may be other cases," said Charlotte lawyer Paul Whitfield, who is handling the civil suits for the district attorney's office. He added that a total of about two dozen Charlotte-area businesses deal in similar materials.

A search and inventory at each business was conducted by a team consisting of a uniformed officer, two to four city or county accountants and plain-clothed officers.

The civil suits filed on behalf of the district attorney's office allege that the purpose of the six businesses is illicit lewdness, prostitution and homosexual activity. They seek a trial on whether books and films handled by the businesses are obscene and whether the businesses should be declared public nuisances.

In temporary restraining orders issued Wednesday, the businesses were allowed to remain open, but owners and operators were required to keep detailed records of transactions.

Rev. Joseph Chambers, chairman of the anti-pornography group Concerned Charlotteans, said the Wednesday the searches "mean that we're making progress. We intend to continue until every ounce of pornography is removed from Mecklenburg County if possible."

Concerned Charlotteans, which Chambers says is supported by 500 people and 200 churches, started in mid-March.

The group also will focus on magazines carried by convenience stores, he said. "People don't realize that Penthouse and Playboy are not mild stuff, they're very serious stuff," Chambers said.

Prince Resigns

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Prince Talal bin Abdel-Aziz has announced that he was resigning as UNICEF's special envoy to Saudia Arabia.

"My decision does not entail giving up the humanitarian mission, particularly relating to work for mothers and children," the prince said. He explained he planned to devote more time to his work as president of the Arab gulf development program known as AGFUND.

Prince Talal said UNICEF has received more than $80 million through AGFUND. He pledged to continue such support.

Show Host Preserves Music From Past

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Holt's life took on a whole new direction 20 years ago when he found an old cowboy record in the local Santa Barbara library.

"It was an old 78 record by a singer named Carl Sprague," said Holt. "I talked to a folklorist, and he told me Sprague was still alive in Texas. Sprague was the first man to ever record cowboy music."

Holt tracked Sprague down in Texas, and the old man taught him to play the harmonica. Before that, Holt had played the drums in rock 'n' roll bands.

Holt then turned his attention to acoustic instruments and to preserving the old-time mountain music of the rural South. He focused on "bluegrass music," a branch of country music distinguished by its three-fingered banjo style and founded by Bill Monroe in 1945.

Bluegrass is also characterized by its use of only acoustic instruments, high tenor singing with close harmony and often the use of the mandolin. An acoustic instrument is one that is not assisted by electrical or electronic means.

Monroe's band was called The Bluegrass Boys and the term bluegrass soon became generic.

Holt is now the host of "Fire On the Mountain," a half-hour show on the Nashville Network, providing country music to 19.5 million cable television households.

Holt's guests include such bluegrass stalwarts as Monroe, John Hartford and Doc Watson. He also goes on location, seeking out the old-timers living back in the hollows. Holt has been trekking through the mountains for 15 years to record the old music before it vanishes.

One find was Dellie Norton, 87, an herbalist and balladeer in Sodom Laurel, N.C. "She follows the traditions passed down for many generations," he said. "We can't forget about these people because they have so much to teach us."

Holt also was host of "Folkways" on public television, and he brought his music to Thailand, India, Burma and South America on State Department tours. He has two albums out and a third, "Reel and Rock," is due out soon.

"Fire on the Mountain" is going into its 92nd show, which Holt believes has established a valuable archive of American folk music.

His program originates in Maggie Valley, N.C., and he lives in Asheville, one-time home of O. Henry, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Thomas Wolfe. "It's a very sophisticated city, yet it is close to the roots of Southern culture," Holt said. "Within two hours of my house are 1,000 country musicians. ...

"I know the Nashville Network doesn't look on it as an archive," Holt added. "But I know that 50 years from now people will study this show to see what bluegrass music was like. Something else is also happening: I think it's creating a greater range for the use of acoustic instruments."

Although he was born in Garland, Texas, Holt went to high school in Los Angeles. His father was in the electronics business.

"I was in the class of 1965 at Pacific Palisades High School, but I wasn't in the book," he said. He was referring to the book "What Really Happened to the Class of '65" by classmates Michael Medved and David Wallechinsky. It also became a short-lived TV series on NBC.

"I grew up playing drums in rock 'n' roll bands," he said. "That helped me a lot with rhythm. I play a lot of rhythm instruments."

Holt laments that Nashville, the center of country-western music, does little to preserve the old-time music.

"In general, the old-time country music has been lost to the past," he said. "It certainly doesn't lend itself to a rock 'n' roll beat. The people playing old music today are either front-porch pickers or urban players who have taken a liking to the music. It will never enter the mainstream that way."

Peter Lawford In Coma, Listed In Critical Condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Peter Lawford has lapsed into a coma, reportedly from kidney and liver problems, and hospital officials say his chances for survival remain uncertain.

Lawford, 61, who often played urbane men-about-town in a career that began at age 7, entered Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Sunday, but his wife requested that no specifics be released about his illness, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said Wednesday.

The New York Daily News, quoting an unidentified Lawford associate, said the actor has kidney and liver problems.

Wise said Lawford is in critical condition, has slipped into a coma and "the prognosis, the outlook, is quite uncertain at this time."

The British-born actor's four children from his first marriage to the sister of former President John F. Kennedy, Patricia Kennedy Lawford, were with him, as well as his present wife, also named Patricia, 26, Wise said.

"Visiting is being restricted to the immediate family," Wise said.

Earlier this year, Lawford was treated for drug and alcohol problems at the Betty Ford Center in Rancho Mirage. In 1972, he also had surgery for a pancreatic cyst.

Lawford starred in NBC-TV's "The Thin Man" series in the late 1950s, and was known as a fun-loving member of the Hollywood "Rat-pack" that included Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr. and Joey Bishop.

He recently played a talent agent in the CBS-TV movie "Malice in Wonderland," about rival gossip columnists Hedda Hopper and Louella Parsons. The movie, which stars Elizabeth Taylor, will be broadcast next year.

Lawford gained added fame in the 1960s when he became President Kennedy's brother-in-law. However, his marriage to Patricia Kennedy ended in divorce in 1966 on grounds of mental cruelty.

The tall, dark-haired actor was born Sept. 7, 1923, the only son of British aristocrats Sir Sidney and Lady Lawford. He made his film debut at age 7 in "Old Bill" in England.

In 1938, the Lawford family visited Hollywood, where 15-year-old Peter was cast as an English boy in the movie "Lord Jeff."

In 1942, he signed a contract at MGM, and acted in "Mrs. Miniver." Subsequent roles included "A Yank at Eton," "White Cliffs of Dover," "Mrs. Parkington," "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and "Easter Parade."

Later, he was featured in "Exodus," "Advise and Consent," "Harlow," "The Oscar" and "Ocean's 11."

CARD COLLECTION — This sample of greeting cards from Christmases past offers a look at thevolution of the tradition. This collection is housed in Perkins Library on the Duke University campus. Snow-covered countrysides was a favorite scene of the older cards. (AP Laserphoto)

Duke Exhibit Shows How Scenes On Cards Change

But that was the case with Christmas greetings sent and received in the early 1900s, said Bill Erwin, assistant curator in the manuscript department of Duke University's Perkins Library.

The collection was not intentional, Erwin said "A lot of them just came with other collections, and (university) archives gave us a lot of their collections," he said.

The illustrations date the cards much more than the written sentiment. Most of the greetings are simple, the words similar to their modern counterparts.

'My wish," says one, "Happiness, Just old fashioned Christmas Happiness, For you, my friend." The postmark is Dec. 24, 1915.

A 1917 card has the familiar greeting-card rhyme scheme: "If I could only my way, I'd jump into Kris Kringle's sleigh, And be with you on Christmas Day."

Another card, postmarked 1918, went from Arnold Perry of Durham to Quinton Holton, also of Durham. It went like this: "Wishing you the Happiest of Christmases! Upon this card your name is writ, so YOU must be the OWNER; Then take, I pray, along with it, Kind greetings from the donor."

The biggest change in cards from the late 19th-century and very early 20th-century post cards is in appearance because "the color printing is much finer than it was later in the 20th century," Erwin said.

Another change is in the materials used, he said. The Perkins Library collection features greeting cards and post cards made from leather, cloth, feathers and silk flowers.

An examination of 135 post cards from the early 1900s showed winter countrysides with snow-covered cottages and farmhouses outnumbering religious themes 35 to 21.

One card from 1911 solved the problem of traditional vs. secular by featuring both Santa Claus and a steepled church.

Birds, were particularly popular for Victorian Christmas greetings, Erwin said.

Early greetings that feature a thin Santa or one dressed in anything but a red suit are popular among collectors, Erwin said. The manuscript department's card collection features a Santa in purple robes and one in a fur-trimmed green suit, both considered rare.

The library also has a card by Louis Prang, considered "the father of the American Christmas card," Erwin said.

"The Prang card is an example of the late 19th-century usage of spring and summer scenes on some Christmas cards instead of seasonal winter views," Erwin said.

Erwin said the American custom has its roots in England, where Goodall & Sons issued what was probably the first large selection of Christmas cards in 1862. Just as card-sending in England surged with the penny post, Prang's efforts in America were boosted by Congress establishing free mail delivery in large cities in 1863.

Owner Says Boat Was Seaworthy

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The fishing trawler Amazing Grace was "in good condition" before it sailed from Hampton into the Atlantic Ocean last month and vanished, the boat's owner has told federal investigators.

Kenny Lou Daniels, who owned the 86-foot boat with his father, testified Wednesday at the start of two days of hearings by the National Transportation Safety Board into the disappearance of the vessel and its seven-man crew in the Atlantic off New Jersey.

Daniels and his family also owns Wanchese Fish Co. of Wanchese, N.C.

Daniels said he boarded the Amazing Grace a few days before it left on its last voyage Nov. 7.

"The boat was in good condition," he said. The captain, Paul Robles, "took care of the boat. Everything was in good shape."

He said the boat had two six-man life rafts, but no exposure suits or emergency locator transmitters used to find ships in distress.

Robert Holloman, captain of the fishing vessel Carolina Princess, also testified that he knew of no problems with the Amazing Grace and that Robles was a capable captain.

On Nov. 14, Robles radioed to his brother's vessel that the Amazing Grace "had water on the deck, but nothing serious," Holloman said he was told by the brother.

After the brother lost radio contact with the Amazing Grace, Holloman notified the Coast Guard.

The Coast Guard launched a 16-day search by air and water but found nothing.

Capt. Thomas P. Keane, chief of search and rescue operations for the Coast Guard in New York, said the search was one of the most extensive conducted by the Coast Guard, covering more than 192,000 square miles and costing $12.1 million.

Keane said the Coast Guard believes it searched every area in which a life raft carrying the crewmen might have drifted. The maker of the boat's life rafts, Jim Givens, has said the Coast Guard searched the wrong area.

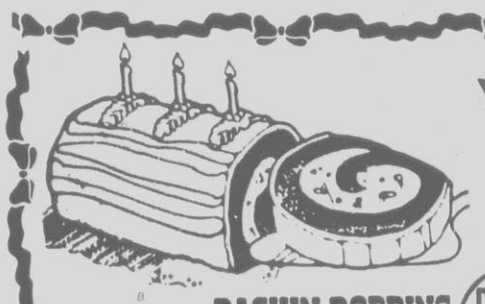

Jeffrey Breit, a Norfolk lawyer representing the estates of missing crewmen John Davis and James Raynor, told reporters a steering defect may have caused the boat to capsize in high seas.

"We think there was a steering problem on the trip preceding this one," he said.

The ship's owners have filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court in New Bern, N.C., seeking to limit their liability in the case on the grounds that they knew of no problems with the boat.

Breit said he expects to seek about $500,000 in damages for each of his clients.

Besides Robles, Davis and Raynor, all of Hampton, the missing crewmen are Don Hancock, also of Hampton; Texas residents Jimmy Bowers and Dario Perez and David Ruffin, address unknown.

Oregon Man Says He Sold Fake Diplomas

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A Grants Pass man has admitted he sold college and university diplomas without permission knowing "some persons whom I sent diplomas were not entitled to them and would misuse them."

Dennis Everett Gunter made his admission when entering guilty pleas in Eugene before U.S. District Judge James Burns Wednesday. He pleaded guilty to a two-count federal indictment charging him with mail and wire fraud in connection with his diploma "reproduction" business.

The indictment against Gunter was returned Aug. 7 by a federal grand jury in North Carolina conducting an ongoing investigation of diploma mills throughout the country.

Gunter did business as Alumni Arts Diploma Reproduction Service. He was charged with providing diplomas for customers without permission of the colleges, universities and organizations identified on the documents and without verifying the competency of the people who got the degrees.

FBI officials said Gunter's operation was unique because it offered degrees bearing the names of numerous real colleges, universities and organizations but did not itself claim to be an institution.

The FBI searched Gunter's belongings earlier this year after an agent ordered and received college degrees from Gunter under an assumed name.

"You know it now," Burns persisted.

"Yes, your honor," Gunter said.

After the arraignment, Burns released Gunter on his own recognizance pending a Jan. 17 sentencing. In exchange for the guilty pleas, the government promised to recommend that Gunter's sentences on the two charges run concurrently.

Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Coffin said the guilty pleas entered Wednesday nearly wrap up the case against Gunter. He indicated the nearly 2,500 people who bought diplomas and certificates from Gunter are likely to be investigated by governments, regulatory agencies and licensing boards.

Gunter's attorney, Stephen Heiser of San Francisco, told the judge that Gunter is cooperating with the continuing FBI investigation of diploma purveyors and recipients.

FBI officials said one of the main objectives of the so-called "Dipscam" investigation is to uncover people who may be practicing in professions for which they have not been trained.

A list of the people who did business with Gunter probably will not be released publicly, Coffin said. He said such an action would be unfair because not all of the people on the list used the diplomas illegally.

Robert Pence, agent in charge of the FBI's North Carolina office, which is coordinating the investigation, said the purchasers were under investigation.

"We're still looking at some people on the list," Pence said. "Some people on it legitimately went to the colleges. We're in the process of trying to identify those people on the list who actually did graduate."

Those who did not graduate but who used the diplomas to get jobs or practice medicine or law could be charged with fraud, he said.

The indictment alleges Gunter has sold degrees bearing the names of about 300 colleges, universities and organizations, including North Carolina State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

According to the indictment, Gunter advertised Alumni Arts as a "reproduction" service that could provide a college diploma — everything from a B.A. to a Ph.D. from a list of 134 institutions — to those whose diplomas may have been lost, damaged or stolen. Diplomas from the list cost $39.95; special orders were $25 extra.

Gunter placed advertisements in a number of publications, including Rolling Stone, Psychology Today, Easy Rider and Oregon Magazine, and used the telephone to conduct business, according to the indictment.

Airlines Open Price War In Triad Area

GREENSBORO (AP) — Piedmont Airlines and People Express started warring Wednesday over airline ticket prices at Regional Airport that will leave air travelers with cheaper flights in the Triad area.

People Express announced earlier this month they would start service out of Regional Airport and fly one-way to Newark, N.J., for only $39. Piedmont officials said they took action to "keep travel on Piedmont competitive with other discount fares offered at Regional Airport."

"Our commitment to the Triad is the same as it always has been: full service at the most competitive price," said William G. McGee, senior vice-president of marketing for Piedmont.

Piedmont's fare cuts, which are subject to some restrictions, are directed toward Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Norfolk, Va., Pittsburgh, Washington and Hartford-Springfield.

Piedmont has also matched People Express' fares to New York and Newark, N.J. Piedmont's New York fares cost $35 on off-peak hours and $49 during peak hours to Newark, and $45 off-peak and $59 peak to LaGuardia Airport.

Unlike the fares to New York, the nine cities effected by the fare reductions are subject to "super saver" restrictions. A super saver means a ticket must be bought at least seven days in advance and bought as a roundtrip in order to get the fare reduction.

Oregon Man Says He Sold Fake Diplomas

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A Grants Pass man has admitted he sold college and university diplomas without permission knowing "some persons whom I sent diplomas were not entitled to them and would misuse them."

Dennis Everett Gunter made his admission when entering guilty pleas in Eugene before U.S. District Judge James Burns Wednesday. He pleaded guilty to a two-count federal indictment charging him with mail and wire fraud in connection with his diploma "reproduction" business.

The indictment against Gunter was returned Aug. 7 by a federal grand jury in North Carolina conducting an ongoing investigation of diploma mills throughout the country.

Gunter did business as Alumni Arts Diploma Reproduction Service. He was charged with providing diplomas for customers without permission of the colleges, universities and organizations identified on the documents and without verifying the competency of the people who got the degrees.

FBI officials said Gunter's operation was unique because it offered degrees bearing the names of numerous real colleges, universities and organizations but did not itself claim to be an institution.

The FBI searched Gunter's belongings earlier this year after an agent ordered and received college degrees from Gunter under an assumed name.

"You know it now," Burns persisted.

"Yes, your honor," Gunter said.

After the arraignment, Burns released Gunter on his own recognizance pending a Jan. 17 sentencing. In exchange for the guilty pleas, the government promised to recommend that Gunter's sentences on the two charges run concurrently.

Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Cottin said the guilty pleas entered Wednesday nearly wrap up the case against Gunter. He indicated the nearly 2,500 people who bought diplomas and certificates from Gunter are likely to be investigated by governments, regulatory agencies and licensing boards.

Gunter's attorney, Stephen Heiser of San Francisco, told the judge that Gunter is cooperating with the continuing FBI investigation of diploma purveyors and recipients.

FBI officials said one of the main objectives of the so-called "Dipscam" investigation is to uncover people who may be practicing in professions for which they have not been trained.

A list of the people who did business with Gunter probably will not be released publicly, Cottin said. He said such an action would be unfair because not all of the people on the list used the diplomas illegally.

Robert Pence, agent in charge of the FBI's North Carolina office, which is coordinating the investigation, said the purchasers were under investigation.

"We're still looking at some people on the list," Pence said. "Some people on it legitimately went to the colleges. We're in the process of trying to identify those people on the list who actually did graduate."

Those who did not graduate but who used the diplomas to get jobs or practice medicine or law could be charged with fraud, he said.

The indictment alleges Gunter has sold degrees bearing the names of about 300 colleges, universities and organizations, including North Carolina State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

According to the indictment, Gunter advertised Alumni Arts as a "reproduction" service that could provide a college diploma — everything from a B.A. to a Ph.D. from a list of 134 institutions — to those whose diplomas may have been lost, damaged or stolen. Diplomas from the list cost $39.95; special orders were $25 extra.

Gunter placed advertisements in a number of publications, including Rolling Stone, Psychology Today, Easy Rider and Oregon Magazine, and used the telephone to conduct business, according to the indictment.

Airlines Open Price War In Triad Area

GREENSBORO (AP) — Piedmont Airlines and People Express started warring Wednesday over airline ticket prices at Regional Airport that will leave air travelers with cheaper flights in the Triad area.

People Express announced earlier this month they would start service out of Regional Airport and fly one-way to Newark, N.J., for only $39. Piedmont officials said they took action to "keep travel on Piedmont competitive with other discount fares offered at Regional Airport."

"Our commitment to the Triad is the same as it always has been: full service at the most competitive price," said William G. McGee, senior vice-president of marketing for Piedmont.

Piedmont's fare cuts, which are subject to some restrictions, are directed toward Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Norfolk, Va., Pittsburgh, Washington and Hartford-Springfield.

Piedmont has also matched People Express' fares to New York and Newark, N.J. Piedmont's New York fares cost $35 on off-peak hours and $49 during peak hours to Newark, and $45 off-peak and $59 peak to LaGuardia Airport.

Unlike the fares to New York, the nine cities effected by the fare reductions are subject to "super saver" restrictions. A super saver means a ticket must be bought at least seven days in advance and bought as a roundtrip in order to get the fare reduction.

PTL Club Will Open Heritage USA Hotel

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — A 504-room hotel will open Saturday at the PTL Club's Heritage USA complex, pushing the organization toward its goal of a "religious Disney World."

Television evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker and PTL Club members will celebrate the opening of the Heritage Grand Hotel with a parade from the Youth Chapel around Lake Heritage to the front of the hotel.

Singer Della Reese will be grand marshal of the parade, which will feature 18 floats.

Other special guests will include pianist Dino Kartsonakis and evangelist Rex Humbard, whom the Bakkers helped last year with fund-raising.

The hotel, one of the largest in the Carolinas, is just the beginning, according to the non-denominational PTL Club.

It is part of a $37 million shopping and convention complex that will make their Heritage USA retreat like a "religious Disney World." That's how the plans were described in 1983 by Roe Messmer of Wichita, Kans., president of Commercial Builders of Kansas Inc.

Messmer has been designing and building the complex.

In addition to the hotel, the Bakkers are planning a shopping area with more than 40 stores, a cafeteria and a 1,200-seat convention center.

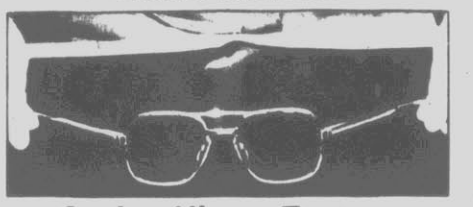

The entirely enclosed and climate-controlled area will be called the PTL Partner Center Complex.

It is designed to bring in thousands of devoted fans of the Bakkers' television program, the PTL Club.

BETHEL ROTARIAN — James Dupree, left, a member of the Bethel Rotary Club, has been named a Paul Harris Fellow, the highest award presented in Rotary International for outstanding contributions to Rotary. State Records List 75 Water Act Violations

RALEIGH (AP) — State records show that owners and operators of 13 public water systems failed to notify their customers and the news media that water systems exceeded the maximum contaminant level for coliform bacteria during July.

Records also show that the owners and operators of another 62 public water systems failed to notify their customers that they did not sample water for coliform bacteria during the same period.

The North Carlina Drinking Water Act requires owners and operators to notify their customers in writing and to provide the state Divison of Health Services' Water Supply Branch with a copy of the notice within 90 days of the date a violation occurs.

The act also requires violators of the maximum contaminant level to notify the news media within 14 days of their violation notification and provide the Water Supply Branch with clippings of the notice.

Coliform bacteria are an environmental bacteria found in the soil and in the intestinal tracks of warm-blooded animals, including humans. The presence of this bacteria in drinking water indicates that some contamination has occurred, said John McFadyen, an environmental engineer with the N.C. Department of Human Resources' Water Supply Branch.

Federal and state laws require owners and operators of public water systems to submit samples of drinking water each month to a certified laboratory for testing to see if the water is contaminated.

McFadyen said a failure to test drinking water each month as required doesn't necessarily mean the water is contaminated, but it cannot be assumed that the water is safe without proper and continued testing.

Systems that failed to meet the notification requirement for exceeding maximum contaminant levels were in the following counties: Craven, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gaston, Granville, Haywood, Hertford, Randolph, Warren and Wayne.

Systems that failed the notification requirement for not sampling water were in the following counties: Alleghany, Avery, Beaufort, Brunswick, Buncombe, Burke, Caldwell, Carteret, Cherokee, Cleveland, Cumberland, Currituck, Gaston, Greene, Guilford, Harnett, Haywood, Iredell, Jackson, Lee, Macon, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Moore, New Hanover, Onslow, Robeson, Rutherford, Stanly, Swain, Wake and Watauga.

New Legislator Faces Court Test

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Republican who won a seat in the Legislature in November despite 17 convictions for writing worthless checks faces a Jan. 30 hearing on a charge of driving without a license.

Rep.-elect David Noles of Lincoln County was cited Dec. 13 on U.S. 321 in Lincolnton. Trooper B.R. Brooks of the state Highway Patrol, in issuing the citation, reported that Noles license expired Sept. 17, 1983.

Court records show that when Noles' license expired, he was in a category of North Carolina drivers not allowed to renew their licenses without first paying court costs from a previous driving conviction.

In April 1982 the Burke County Clerk of Court's office had referred a 1981 charge against Noles for exceeding a safe speed to the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles as a "90-day failure."

That is a procedure routinely used in North Carolina when a defendant fails to appear in court for a motor vehicle offense.

Court records show Noles paid the $35 court costs Dec. 5.

Noles could not be reached for comment on the driving cases.

Lincoln County Republicans disavowed Noles' candidacy for one of four at-large seats in the state House of Representatives for Lincoln and Gaston Counties.

Modern Yule Celebration Has Roots In 19th Century

By PETER COY
Associated Press Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Celebrating Christmas in Massachusetts three centuries ago was risky: Anyone who took the day off from work could be fined 5 shillings.

When George Washington crossed the Delaware River the night of Dec. 25, 1776, he could count on catching the Hessian soldiers drunk and sound asleep after a day of carousing.

But, for Washington's men, Christmas was just another day.

And it wasn't until 1836 that the first state — Alabama — declared Christmas a holiday. Later, when the Civil War separated soldiers from their families, 13 states adopted Christmas as an official holiday.

Americans like to think the modern Christmas celebration has deep roots, but in fact it dates back no earlier than the 19th century, according to University of Pennsylvania historian Karin Calvert.

Visions of apple-cheeked colonial children hanging wreaths and singing Christmas carols are "totally fictitious," she said, because for two centuries Protestant America considered Christmas a "popish" holiday.

Christmas was a "conscious and deliberate invention" in the mid-19th century of such figures as Washington Irving, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Clement Moore, Thomas Nast, Sir Walter Scott and Charles Dickens, she said.

Mrs. Calvert, a specialist in the history of children in America, spoke recently at Rochester's Margaret Woodbury Strong Museum on "Christmas in America: The Fabrication of Tradition."

"I'm not trying to debunk Christmas by any means," she said in an interview. "I'm trying to give credit where credit is due."

Nevertheless, Mrs. Calvert is a Scrooge-like figure to people who prefer to imagine that the Pilgrims decked the halls with boughs of holly.

"They're quite irate," she said. "It's hard on someone who's living in a 1790 house and trying to decorate it authentically and are told they can't."

The "inventors" of Christmas emphasized the pagan origins of the holiday because they wanted nothing to do with the Roman Catholic roots of the celebration of Christ's birth, Mrs. Calvert said.

"If you had to choose between Catholic and pagan, pagan was the lesser of two evils," she said.

Christmas trees of the 19th century were topped with an American flag or a sugar plum fairy, never a star, Mrs. Calvert said.

The youthful United States of the early 1800s was hungry for tradition, and several founding members of the New-York Historical Society set about to create some, Mrs. Calvert said.

Washington Irving's "Knickerbocker History of New York," published in 1809, remade St. Nicholas from a stern bishop into jolly St. Nick, who showered gifts on the burghers of old Manhattan.

In 1822, theologian Clement Moore borrowed from Irving's book to write "An Account of a Visit of St. Nicholas," the Christmas poem that begins, "'Twas the night before Christmas ...."

The publication of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" in England in the 1840s gave Christmas a moral anchor, though not a religious one, by fixing family reunion and charity as the seasonal virtues.

It had been a good year for Trump Coup Tommy. Since he had held his fair share of the cards, his losses for the year were a mere $2,500 or so. Our readers will remember Trump Coup Tommy as a duffer who excels in only one situation — when he is declaring a contract where the trumps break badly.

Tommy had given another typical display at the club on his last visit. He had managed to underplay three vulnerable game contracts and ended losing each rubber. Then this hand came along.

For once, Tommy conducted a sensible auction. After his partner had shown a strong hand with excellent diamond support, Tommy cue-bid his ace of clubs. North needed no more encouragement to bid slam.

West made his normal lead of the queen of spades, taken by the ace in dummy. It seemed that a club was going to be declarer's only loser, but when Tommy next cashed the ace of diamonds and West showed out, declarer had a certain trump loser. Tommy was in his element.

He crossed to the ace of clubs, ruffed a spade on the board and led a club. Since to ruff would squander his trump trick on a losing club, East sluffed a heart. Declarer won the king of clubs, cashed the king of spades for a club discard, then ruffed another spade on the table.

The ace of hearts was cashed for a club discard, and a heart was ruffed in hand. Declarer entered dummy with the queen of trumps and led another heart. East was caught. If he failed to ruff, or ruffed low, declarer would score his 11th trick with the nine of diamonds. So East ruffed with the ten, but that proved to be as ineffectual. Tommy simply discarded his club loser and took the last two tricks with his remaining trumps.

At least East had one consolation — he didn't double!

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: IS A SMALL DESSERT FOOD A MERE TRIFLE?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

American Christians Get Challenge From Baptist Pastor In Soviet Union

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — With Soviet officials presiding at a front table, the tall, sturdy Baptist pastor rose from his seat near the rear, looked about at the roomful of American Christians and asked:

"If you believe in Christ, if you seek his kingdom of love, if you believe in the prince of peace who said to love your enemies, how can you as Christians be preparing for war?"

The question, pointing an implied finger of blame at the United States for the nuclear-armed tensions with the Soviet Union, sparked one of the sharpest retorts by the Americans on their two-week look at Soviet religion.

It happened at the headquarters of the local Friendship Society, the likes of which the Communist government has set up in almost every Soviet city to promote an image of peace and to which the city-hopping Americans invariably were taken for a session.

The question came from the Rev. Ants Rebane, 48, a one-time boxing champion of the Soviet air force, reared an atheist, converted to Christianity in 1960 and now pastor of the liveliest church in this Estonian town.

He had been particularly hospitable to the Americans, spoke fluent English, invited several of them into his home, introduced them to youth leaders, spoke frankly of difficulties and then, in front of the Communist officials, popped his accusatory question.

To it, the Rev. Lincoln Stelk, an Episcopal rector from Gambier, Ohio, stood and said quietly but firmly that throughout history, peoples and nations have seen "the necessity for defense."

"Sometimes it has been against real dangers, sometimes against imagined dangers," he said. "Speaking the truth in love, some people of the United States, both believers and non-believers, see a threat from the Soviet Union."

He paused, then added, "It was not the United States that tried to put missiles in Cuba." He finished by saying, "We must get better understanding to preserve the only world we have."

Elenie K. Hussagh of Glenview, Ill., an attorney and a Greek Orthodox worshipper, took the floor like a courtroom lawyer.

In contrast to the Soviet Union, she said, the American people "have the power over their government," which is answerable to them and has responsibilities to them.

"It is the right of the people to elect our government," she said. Concerning military preparedness, she said, "The nation in turn has a duty to protect the people."

To break out of the U.S.-Soviet impasse, she said, "We have to find we can trust you, and you have to find you can trust us, so we'll both stop piling up armaments."

The Rev. Robert White, a leader of the Reformed Church in America from Mahway, N.J., replied that the arms race was "against God's will for human life. We of the United States do have terrible weapons but without them, many people fear we might lose our religious freedoms."

"Like Archbishop Hark (the Lutheran bishop in Estonia)," White continued, "we believe we can be Christian and use war to defend one's country. But we must teach our people that nuclear weapons are not war, that they threaten all life."

Ashes To Ashes, Let's Have A Sip

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Some people were offended by a paid death notice that said a "drunken brawl" would follow Charles J. Evans' funeral, but Evans' son says his sailor father would have wanted it that way.

"A drunken brawl will immediately follow the services," read the last line of the notice in Monday's Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

By Tuesday, the "drunken brawl" had been edited into an "old-fashioned Irish Wake." But Evans' son Timothy of Sodus said he had no apologies for the original version.

"That was appropriate for an old sailor," Evans said. "He wanted it short, sweet, simple. Time for people to pay their last respects and then get on with their living."

The elder Evans, 74, belonged to the U.S. Merchant Marine for about 30 years.

Charles Evans grew up in Buffalo and ran away from home at the age of 13 to work on merchant ships all over the world. During World War II, he spent more than a month on a life boat after his ship was destroyed by a torpedo, his son said.

The Gannett Rochester Newspapers deleted the last line of the death notice in Monday afternoon's Times-Union after it came to the attention of supervisors in the classified advertising department.

The deletion bothered Timothy Evans.

"I called and told them I wanted a reprint at least. They got a lot of ... gall," he said.

Eventually he went along with changing the "brawl" to a "wake," he said.

The death notice was written by Timothy Evans and relayed over the telephone to an advertising department clerk at Gannett Rochester Newspapers by James Ryan, an associate at Farrell Brothers.

Ryan said the funeral home received more than 20 calls from people after the notice appeared.

"It caused quite a stir," Ryan said. "Some people were upset. They said it showed a lack of respect for the dead. But others wanted to know where the party was."

The inexperienced clerk did not think to question the notice, according to Thomas Flynn, the newspapers' director of promotion.

"This is very rare," Flynn said. "Death notices are not something to be taken humorously."

Evans was cremated and his ashes will be scattered at sea, as he had requested.

Soviets Keep Watch

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unusually large number of Soviet reconnaissance planes was dispatched over the Sea of Japan to watch a U.S. fleet that included three aircraft carriers conducting a military exercise, says a Navy official.

The incident occurred sometime in the past few weeks as the U.S. ships, including the nuclear-powered carriers Enterprise and Vinson and the conventionally powered Midway, moved into the Sea of Japan, said the official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified.

The official said the fleet was always in international waters and was hundreds of miles from Soviet territory when the reconnaissance planes appeared, but the Soviets sent out more planes than usual because of the unusually large number of U.S. carriers in one location.

He did not provide details on the number of Soviet planes on the scene. A story in Wednesday's New York Times said that the Soviet reaction involved at least 100 jet fighters, bombers and reconnaissance planes as well as surface vessels.

The Times story said that one civilian source quoted experienced military officers as describing it as "the most vigorous Soviet reaction" to any American military movement of its kind since World War II.

U.S. planes also were airborne in the vicinity and kept tabs on the high-altitude Soviet reconnaissance, the Navy official said, adding: "You get within 1,000 miles of the Soviet coast and they get very protective."

He described the Soviet reaction as "probably a little bit more than usual, but then we had more than one carrier there participating in the exercise."

Registration for Recreation and Parks Department Winter programs will be beginning soon. For information call 752-4137 Ext. 216.

French Walking Tightrope In Trying To Halt Violence In New Caledonia

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — France, which has ruled New Caledonia for 131 years, is struggling to determine the South Pacific territory's future without touching off a civil war between European settlers and independence forces of the Melanesian people, the original inhabitants.

The Melanesians' Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front demands immediate independence for the island 1,200 miles northeast of Australia — something bitterly opposed by nearly all the Europeans, Polynesians and Asians who make up 57 percent of the 150,000 New Caledonian people.

After years of discussion about independence, the situation exploded in mid-November when the Kanak front boycotted elections and threw the island into chaos, erecting barricades on main roads. Twelve people have been killed since the Nov. 18 elections.

The French government responded to the boycott by sending Edgard Pisani as high commissioner to take control of the island and start talks on its future. Pisani met Saturday with front leader Jean-Marie Tjibaou and seven top members of the militant organization.

But Jacques Lafleur, leader of the European-dominated, anti-independence party Rally for Caledonia in the Republic, refused to talk until French authorities regain full control of the island.

Scores of homes and businesses have been burned and hundreds of French settlers have fled their farms and villages. Heavily armed Europeans guard the towns around the island while the Kanak militants control the roads and the countryside.

The situation has become increasingly tense outside Noumea and the authorities fear a major clash at any time.

Tjibaou, a former Roman Catholic priest, says the situation is becoming extremely serious as nerves wear thin.

Life continues normally in Noumea, but much of the 250-mile-long island is deserted. The French paramilitary Garde Mobile, armed with machine guns and rifles, are deployed in the provincial towns.

The Kanak front demonstrated its strength after the elections when it seized and held the main east coast town of Thio for 18 days. Terrified residents stayed indoors as militants armed with everything from pump-action shotguns to axes and chains held the town.

The siege was lifted only after French authorities met the front's demand for release of 17 imprisoned militants.

French officials were surprised by the strength and organization demonstrated by the front, which says it represents nearly all the Kanak people.

Most Kanaks probably supported independence, but not all of them necessarily approved of all the front's actions, said a Western diplomat, speaking on condition he not be identified.

"It's a determined minority of activists spurred on by the acquiescence of the majority," he said.

The elections had been intended to usher in a five-year period of greater autonomy before a proposed referendum on independence in 1989. About 50 percent of the electorate took part in the elections. The Rally for Caledonia in the Republic party swept the elections, winning 34 of the 42 seats in the territorial assembly.

A small pro-independence Kanak party which supports a more gradual transition from French rule won six seats, and independents split the remaining seats.

Pisani, who is to return to Paris Feb. 2 with a final report, has warned that the island could not return to the "old order."

The Rally party insists that any decision must be approved in a referendum and is confident it has the numbers to win such a vote since the Kanaks are 43 percent of the population.

Lafleur dismisses the militants as terrorists who, he contends, have the support of only 15 percent of the Kanaks.

"I'm strongly against independence," he said. "I'm convinced it's bad for everyone."

On Saturday he said he would not meet with Pisani until order was complete. "Before negotiations there must be an end to terrorism," he said.

The anti-independence forces say New Caledonia is French and most of the population wants it to stay that way. They say an independent New Caledonia would be socialist and that Europeans — some of them fifth-generation settlers — would be forced to leave.

They worry that the Socialist government of French President Francois Mitterrand plans to give the island its independence.

The Rally party is strongly backed by conservative opponents of Mitterrand in France and the settlers hope to stall until French elections in 1986, which they believe the government will lose.

"We don't really have anywhere to go. This is our home," said third-generation settler Sylvain Blum in Thio.

Tjibaou says New Caledonia is the home of the Kanaks and only they can decide its future. The only thing to be negotiated with Pisani, he says, is the timetable for ending French rule.

"The right of independence belongs to the Kanak people, not the French," he said. If there is a referendum on independence it will be for Kanaks alone, he said.

Tjibaou says there will be a role for the 55,000 Europeans and the other non-Kanak groups when New Caledonia is independent, but he is vague on details.

African Leaders Upset Over French Views Of Their Role On Continent

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — Humiliated by Libya, France has promised to pursue its role as policeman in Africa — but only on its own terms. That unsettles African leaders who are fearful for their borders and see nowhere else in the West to turn.

"We will take risks, but not useless risks," President Francois Mitterrand said after a summit of French-speaking African states. He was acquiescing in fact, though not in principle, to partition of the former French colony of Chad, where rebels and Libyan forces occupy the north, and the government of President Hissene Habre and his loyalists occupy the south.

Mitterrand sent French troops to Chad in August 1983 to blunt the Libyan advance and he says France was not obliged to drive the Libyans out of the country.

African leaders, however, argue that past statements committed France to preserving Chad's territorial integrity. Mitterrand says France had no such obligation because Chad was not among the six African countries with which it has formal defense pacts.

Leaders of former French African colonies pressed him to go further, arguing that de facto partition of Chad meant that no African borders were safe from power-hungry neighbors.

Most maintained that Mitterrand was humiliated and outmaneuvered by Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, who ignored a mutual withdrawal accord with France and kept his troops in northern Chad.

With the exception of some advisers in the capital, French forces were withdrawn. There remain French troops in the neighboring Central African Republic, where they are normally based, and Mitterrand says they are poised to act if Libyan pushes south of the 16th parallel.

Mitterrand, placed on the defensive by Khadafy and African allies, would only say, "Wait and see," when pressed by reporters for details of his intentions in Chad.

Unconvinced by the Socialist president's assurances that the Chad affair was not over, some quietly evoked the bogey of French strategists: turning to the Americans.

"They're dreaming," said a U.S. official, repeating an assessment echoed in Washington. "We don't have the experience, or the means, or the desire to get involved."

In Paris, policymakers say they are not worried seriously the United States might try to rival their influence, although they object to American pressure when French actions do not please Washington.

"The Americans want to defend Chad to the last Frenchman," grumbled a French official.

Many French consider the events in Chad tarnish their honor and are a dereliction of self-ascribed duty in Africa.

Unlike Britain, France left troops and assault aircraft at strategic points when it granted independence to its African colonies 25 years ago. French forces have restored some leaders, deposed others, and intervened in Chad off and on since the 1960s.

In 1977 and again in 1978, France helped Zaire put down rebellions in Shaba, placing the huge former Belgian colony in its debt. The United States lent transport aircraft, but France sent paratroops.

For economic and ideological reasons, most of former French Africa rejects any reliance on the Soviet Union.

Today, 7,500 French troops are stationed across Africa. French officers command Zaire's elite 5,000-man 31st Brigade. In Corsica, Foreign Legion troops are poised to respond quickly to any threat.

The question now, African leaders say privately, is whether France can be trusted to take action in new emergencies.

One uneasy African leader is Seyni Kountche of Niger who skipped the French-African summit in nearby Burundi to make a long-scheduled trip to Washington.

Niger is Chad's western neighbor, and its rich uranium mines in the north are just over an open desert border with Libya. It has a defense pact with France, but Kountche is plainly worried.

He recently saw Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Abdussalam Treiki, his first contact with a senior Libyan since 1981. In an interview with the French daily, La Croix, he praised the United States as a valuable ally of developing nations.

The dean of French African leaders, President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast, also missed the summit. His reasons were not made clear, but he is known to be dismayed by Mitterrand's handling of the Chad conflict.

French authorities worry that even if their political role is not challenged, disaffected Africans might shop elsewhere for imports. Privileged export accords for oil, uranium and strategic materials might be threatened.

President Omar Bongo of Gabon, host to a large contingent of French forces, attended the summit. But he has set in motion a major campaign to court U.S. official attention and private investment.

And if American policymakers tread lightly in French Africa, they are hardly out of the picture. It was U.S. satellite intelligence, made public in Washington, that showed Libyans remained in Chad, thereby touching off Mitterrand's Chad crisis.

France was quietly allowing Khadafy to withdraw gradually while asserting in public that all troops had gone. The French were not happy at the American differentiation between fact and political expediency.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mort Rosenblum, based in Paris, has covered Africa since 1967 and attended the recent French-African summit.

FOCUS

Monumental

This year marks the 100th anniversary of the Washington Monument. Robert Mills, the designer of the Washington Monument, was the first native-born professional architect in the United States. The Monument is the tallest all-masonry structure in the world. But it is sinking an average of six inches every year. One-third of the way up, the color of the monument changes. Work was halted by the Civil War and builders were unable to match the color of the original marble.

DO YOU KNOW — How tall is the Washington Monument?

Inmates Change Prison Walls Into Christmas Fantasy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Usually a dingy yellow, the outside walls of the Orleans Parish Prison have been transformed by inmates into a New Orleans Christmas fantasy complete with Santa Claus, the Superdome, a nativity scene and St. Louis Cathedral.

"It goes from a sort of whimsy piece...then into a city scene and into a nativity scene," Sheriff Charles Foti said last week as inmates were putting the finishing touches on the 500-foot-long Christmas mural that adorns two walls of the prison.

The giant Christmas card that now greets downtown motorists is a mish-mash of yule images. On one section of the wall "Pac-People" of video game fame hold presents in Santa's workshop while Garfield and Teddy Bear exchange gifts near a guard shack painted like a candy cane.

On another section, a sheriff who looks a lot like Foti is driving a police car filled with gifts while an inmate hangs onto the rear bumper. That scene melds into another one in which an inmate is seated in a sleigh pulled by Rudolph and the other reindeer.

That runs into a cityscape featuring the Superdome, St. Louis Cathedral and other New Orleans landmarks. The last panel shows the Magi bearing gifts for the Holy Family.

"You can see it from a religious angle, you can see it from a Santa Claus angle, you can see it from a child's perspective or as an adult," said Foti.

Foti said the project has been a morale booster for inmates. Inmates who have worked on the month-old project agree that it has lifted morale and given them a sense of pride.

Foti's enthusiasm for the plan seems boundless. "We'd talk about stuff every night," he said when asked about the planning that went into the mural.

The project was gratifying, he said, because he was able to get a broad cross-section of prisoners involved, with the less skilled inmates filling in the lines drawn by those more artistically inclined.

"We had three or four male inmates who had art talent and we used a whole bunch of inmates who had no artistic talent whatsoever," he explained.

Psychologist Says Computers Cause Stress

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Computers may be the best innovation for businesses since the cash register, but they also are a source of a growing malady among the nation's corporate workers — stress.

Dr. Kathryn Cramer, a health psychologist at St. Louis University, says the greatest cause of stress among workers is "a lack of feeling of control over one's circumstances and resources."

She said that feeling of helplessness can be reinforced by a computer, and the result is costly stress-related problems for business.

"The ability to cope well with stress is the difference between excellent performance and mediocre performance," said Cramer. "The costs of poorly managed stress are astronomical."

Cramer works for HealthLine, a network of 52 hospitals in 35 states that delivers health care programs to local and national corporations and organizations. Her clients range from AT&T to Ralston Purina Co. and the Harvard Business School Alumni.

"We consider ourselves an educational vehicle so people can get the right information and then go out and choose the programs that are best for them," Cramer said.

She said one of HealthLine's most popular features is the stress management program, citing statistics that up to 80 percent of the people who call on physicans do so because of stress-related problems.

Cramer said every corporate position has its stress-causing elements, and the key is to identify them and find ways to cope with them. Contrary to popular belief, executive positions are not always the most pressure filled.

"The higher up you go on the corporate ladder, the more degrees of freedom and resources you have in dealing with problems," said Cramer. "Secretaries can be under much more stress than top corporate management because they don't have as much freedom to deal with problems."

She said men and women in the corporate environment react differently to their stress. As a rule, men tend to hold in their feelings and create a negative buildup while women personalize the negative feedback, resulting in interference with their decision making.

Cramer said a common sign of stress is overeating.

"Food is meant to be a pleasurable and nurturing experience," she said, "but many use it as a way to feel better and reduce tension. A change in eating or drinking habits, any changes like that would be a clue that you are not managing stress well."

Another source of stress is the business trip because it is disruptive to the employee's daily routine. Cramer said business travelers fail to maintain their exercise level and a balanced diet.

"One of the things we tell people to do is to pay attention to their activity level," she said. "We recommend to people to do something active for at least a half an hour a day.

"We find that people who exercise on a regular basis have more energy and stamina. To the business traveler, that is very important."

Stars Decorate Trees For Charity

By HENRIETTA LEITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If you find Christmas tree trimming a bore, let Liz Taylor or Brooke Shields do it for you — but be prepared to pay dearly.

Or if you're not too flush just now, how about one trimmed by Drew Barrymore, Ricky Schroeder or Lee Majors?

And when jeweler Harry Winston trims a tree, come with a fat wallet, even though it's only a tiny bonsai evergreen. For the little gold stars are real gold, and their centers are real diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds.

Winston's tree, which went for $7,500 — probably a fraction of its value — was among about 40 celebrity-trimmed trees auctioned off this week at a party to benefit the New York Special Olympics for handicapped athletes.

Miss Shields' tree sold for $1,700 without any gems. Miss Taylor's, an arrangement of bare branches painted white and adorned with shell jewelry and placed in a huge gilded kettle, went for $1,000.

Most of the celebrities who donated trees didn't attend the party, including Miss Taylor, but Miss Shields was there, as was very pregnant starlet Pia Zadora.

Miss Shields' tree had a space motif, with dozens of tiny toy spacemen and space creatures from sci-fi movies nestled in the white cottony tinsel.

Asked if she collected space toys, she replied, "I always liked toys, and for little kids ..."

She got no further, because her mother, Teri Shields, angrily and obscenely ordered the reporter away.

Child actress Drew Barrymore's tree was lavishly decorated with all types of tiny teddy bears from her own collection, which so intrigued playwright Harvey Feirstein, the auction's emcee, that he bought it himself for $225.

The tree trimmed by singer-actor Rick Springfield shot up in the bidding when Feirstein disclosed the sweat shirt and bandanas hanging on it were "unwashed," and eventually went for $250.

One of the most traditional trees — blinking lights, tinsel, wooden soldiers and antique dolls — was trimmed by a very untraditional Broadway star, Whoopie Goldberg. It brought $300, partly because two tickets to her one-woman show were tied to the tree.

Rock musician David Bowie's tree and stained sweat shirt went on the block and the auctioneer announced "rumor has it that Brooke Shields is bidding." Mrs. Shields apparently bought it for daughter at $450.

Designer Henry Grethel's tree brought $2,500 because it was accompanied by wardrobes for man and woman, round-trip tickets to Mexico and four nights at a hotel. The offering of Susan St. James and Alison Smith of "Kate and Allie" caused spirited bidding because it included six tickets to a taping of the television show and a walk-on part in one segment. It brought $650.

A tree offered by Rita Jenrette was bought for $5,000, but the life-sized pair of bronze Egyptian dogs that accompanied it were said to be worth much more.

One of the most distinctive trees was Morgan Fairchild's — pink marabou feathers and silver ornaments, plus a $2,000 designer dress in size 8. Some lucky size 8 got dress and tree for $800.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY IN PITT COUNTY

The listing of property for tax purposes in Pitt County will begin January 2, 1985, and will continue through January 31, 1985.

Any person, firm, corporation or organization owning property in this county as of January 1, 1985, whether real or personal, must list such property within the listing period or be subject to the penalties prescribed by North Carolina Law. Property must be listed in the township in which it is located.

Persons who requested to list by mail should receive their listing forms early in January. These forms must be completed and returned to the office of the Tax Supervisor before the deadline of January 31, 1985.

Bring your social security number and your motor vehicle registration cards with you when you come to list.

Application for the Age and Disability Exemption should be made at the time of listing, but no later than April 15th. Once application is made and approved, you will not have to reapply unless circumstances change within the household.

Owners and operators of parks or storage lots renting spaces for three or more trailers or mobile homes are required by law to furnish the Tax Supervisor of the county in which the lot is located, the name of the owner and a description of each trailer or mobile home situated thereon. This list must be submitted by January 15th of each year. Owners and operators failing to comply with the law shall be liable to payment of taxes in addition to a penalty of $250.

Persons having custody of taxable tangible personal property belonging to another firm or individual that is held for storage, sale, rent, or any other business purpose shall furnish the Tax Supervisor a report of such property by January 15th or will be liable for the taxes on the property plus a penalty of $250.

Computer Games, Declining Birthrate Cut Into German Toymakers' Business

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — After years of booming sales every Christmas, lean times have come to West Germany's model train business.

The popularity of computer games and the world's lowest birthrate — 10 births per 1,000 West Germans — have combined to cut into profits in a classic branch of toymaking. Model railway industry executives for the first time are worried about the future.

"After years of expansion, during which adults fulfilled their childhood dreams by turning toy trains into model layouts, a slowdown became evident in 1983 primarily because of the lack of kids," said Wolfgang Huch, chief executive of the Maerklin model train company, West Germany's largest.

That is not good news for the West German toy industry, which who traditionally has counted on the sales of model trains and accessories for 15 percent to 20 percent of annual revenues. That amounted to 700 million marks, or about $230 million, in the most recent year, industry figures show.

One of every five West German households, or about 3 million, own model train sets. An estimated 5 million people regularly play with the layouts, according to industry figures.

Ever since the postwar economic recovery, exquisitely detailed model trains have been favorite items under the Christmas trees. But last year computer hardwear and software became the Christmas gifts most coveted by German kids.

To maintain their share of the market, model train makers are scrambling to develop new technology and perfect ever-smaller gauges of miniature trains to lure kids and parents back to the traditional hobby.

Advertising for model trains has increased noticeably in West Germany in magazines and on television. And the toymakers are banking on higher sales in the United States this Christmas season because currency exchange rates have made German products a better value for buyers with dollars.

The industry eagerly backed a model train fair in November in Cologne, which drew almost 80,000 people in five days to see elaborate exhibits by 140 companies and clubs. The first fair in 1983 drew 76,000 visitors.

Maerklin, which has been an industry leader ever since it sold the world's first electric trains in 1900, unveiled what it calls the world's first steering system based on microelectronic processors.

"Previously, most computer results could only be seen on a screen or a printer. The results now can be realistically linked with a model train," Huch said in a speech at the fair.

The system, which goes on sale early next year, uses a transformer-sized computer and decoders built into the miniature locomotives to eliminate the need for complicated track wiring for model train layouts.

The digital system permits up to 80 trains and 256 signals and switches to be operated at one time on a large layout. It can be connected to a home video screen using an attachment to program even more elaborate routes.

"There's no question the system will be a big hit," predicted a salesman at Hobby Haas model train shop in Frankfurt. "It will make it easy for beginners to advance quickly into layouts with complicated switches."

The basic system will cost 500 marks ($166), with extra decoders that can be added to locomotives going for 50 marks ($16) each.

But the pricetag should not be a hindrance, the salesman said. "Eighty percent of our customers are adults. Model railroading isn't a game for kids."

A whole specialty industry has sprung up around the hobby, including book publishers, cabinet makers and craftsmen who produce landscapes and trains built to order.

Maerklin, with 55 percent of the market, employs 1,700 workers at its two factories in Swabia and produces 800 separate items.

A starter set in the popular HO track gauge sells for 89 marks ($29) in a Frankfurt department store. The set includes a locomotive and two cars with a circle of track.

Extra locomotives and boxcars, electronic switches and signals, landscapes with bridges and tunnels, all beautifully built to scale, can add hundreds of dollars to the bill.

West Germany has 300 model train clubs with 18,500 members, who pool their money to afford big layouts with dozens of trains.

Hartmut Groll, an employee of the West German railway, and dentist Bernard Jordan worked for three months before the Cologne fair to design and help build a sprawling American West landscape.

Pole Builds His Own Cathedral

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — In Wlodzimierz Herman's homeland, his miniature Christmas cathedral would have to compete against scores of others to be displayed in a museum. But in his new country, the structure has no competition.

The colorful creation of a man who left Poland and settled in Gastonia is on display in the Cleveland County Museum's Polish exhibit. The museum is located in Shelby and the exhibit is on display until Christmas.

Herman's contribution to the collection of Polish Christmas treasures in the museum is a Krakow creche — a Baroque-style cathedral with the manger scene on the front steps.

Herman, an unemployed painter and sculptor who has been in the United States two years, began work months ago on the cardboard-and-paper cathedral with turrets that reach higher than 6 feet and lights that shine through mock stained-glass windows.

He enlisted the help of his Polish friend, Diane Kamienski of Gastonia, for pasting the colored paper in the windows of his creation.

In Krakow, the only place in the world where cathedral creches are created, Herman said, residents compete to see who can build the most beautiful. All entries are placed on exhibit and judged and the best is placed in a museum.

But Herman doesn't have any competition this year because his is the only Krakow creche on exhibit in Cleveland County. He said he knows of only one other in the United States in a museum in Chicago.

Herman never lived in Krakow, but he said everyone in Poland knows about the creches made there.

Although he dropped out of training to become an architect after two years at Gdansk Polytechnic Institute of Architecture in Poland, Herman drew on what he had learned there to construct the cathedral.

He said he transferred to the school of painting and sculpture at the Academy of Fine Arts in Gdansk because he wanted more training in other artistic media.

There, he received a scholarship for outstanding artistic work during his studies, and he received a master of fine arts degree in 1966.

The walls of Herman's apartment are covered with his paintings, predominantly still lifes and nudes. One room that he uses as a studio is filled with paint, drawings and a painting in progress. The wall of another room is covered with a preliminary painting on a sheer fabric, which Herman said he first wanted to complete in stained glass, but has now decided to do in a weaving.

Herman said he likes working in all artistic media. "I like to do different things with different things," he said.

In 1980 Herman received a scholarship from the Italian government for four months of travel and study in Florence.

And he was commissioned by an industry in Poland to build a sculpture that still stands on the shore of the Baltic Sea.

Herman proudly shows visitors slides of that sculpture and others, including one in a hotel that provided the backdrop in a scene in the movie "Men of Iron."

"I hope someday I can go back and see them," he said.

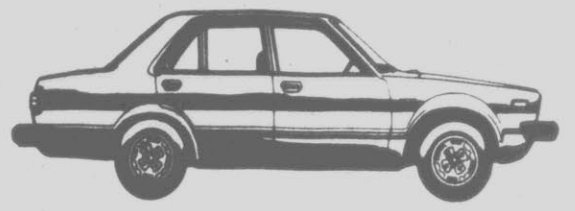

Herman said he and his wife intend to become U.S. citizens. His children by a former marriage still live in Poland and, he said, he worries about them.

For that and other reasons, he said, he doesn't like to talk about why he left Poland. But he said he wanted to paint and sculpt in a land where he could be free.

He has been unable to find a job, he said, but is looking and hoping.

Herman also is painting daily and said he hopes to have a series of paintings done soon that he can show and maybe sell.
