Tornado Disaster Ranked Second

Helms' Senate Victory Top State Story

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse Helms' victory over Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in the record-breaking Senate battle was voted the top North Carolina news story of 1984 by the state's Associated Press member editors and broadcasters.

AP members said the No. 2 story occurred March 28 when a string of tornadoes cut a broad path of destruction through eastern North Carolina and killed 44 people in the state and caused $100 million in property damage.

Hurricane Diana was voted the No. 3 story, followed by the historic execution of Velma Barfield at No. 4.

The victory by Gov.-elect Jim Martin, a Republican, over Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten was the No. 5 story. The execution of James Hutchins was voted No. 6.

At No. 7 was the manhunt in Marion, N.C., for two escaped Tennessee killers and No. 9 was the manhunt for six death row inmates who escaped from Virginia and came briefly to Warren County.

The No. 8 story was coverage of the state's important textile industry. Rounding out the list was the acquittal of nine Nazis and Ku Klux Klan members accused of civil rights violations in the shooting deaths of communists in Greensboro.

The Helms-Hunt race, in which incumbent Helms won 52 percent to Hunt's 48 percent, broke a national spending record — nearly $25 million by Election Day.

Politicians said the race was the second most important in the country, following only the presidential race. Helms was a two-term senator and chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Hunt was a two-term governor.

On the evening of March 28, tornadoes whipped from Robeson County to Bertie County, leaving a trail of misery and damage. While the suddenly homeless threaded through debris along the 250 mile corridor of destruction, officials tallied North Carolina damages: 44 dead, 2,200 homeless and $100 million in damages.

The National Guard and Salvation Army joined thousands of other volunteers to provide shelter, food and clothing in the dismal days when families first saw the wreckage by light of day. Road crews worked around the clock chopping up fallen trees and it took several days to restore power and telephone service to stricken areas. Ham radio operators filled in to provide communications.

Hurricane Diana hovered off the coast for days before slamming ashore at Fort Fisher the morning of Sept. 13. Diana brought memories of deadly Hurricane Hazel in 1954. Two people died in Diana and damage totaled about $70 million. Hazel killed 347 on the East Coast and in Haiti and caused $280 million property damage.

Officials said coastal residents were more prepared for Diana and the storm came ashore at low tide and with slightly diminished winds. Still, the hurricane ranked as the worst of the '84 season.

On Nov. 2, just four days before the general elections, Velma Barfield was executed at Central Prison. She became the first woman executed in the United States in 22 years and the first in the state in 40 years. She was executed by lethal injection after saying she was sorry "for all the hurt I have caused."

Mrs. Barfield, 52, was convicted of the 1978 poisoning death of her boyfriend, St. Paul's farmer Stuart Taylor. She had appealed three times to the U.S. Supreme Court, but dropped her appeals hours before the execution and prepared to die.

Earlier in 1984, James Hutchins was executed, becoming the first person put to death in the state in 22 years. He also was the first person executed in the state by lethal injection.

Hutchins was convicted of shooting to death three law enforcement officers in 1979.

Four days after the Barfield execution Rep. Jim Martin beat Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and became the second Republican governor-elect this century in North Carolina.

Red Ink Blots Reagan Deficit Projections

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which only four months ago was predicting the federal budget deficit would decline in 1985, is now bracing for the biggest deficit in the country's history.

Just two months into the 1985 fiscal year, the deficit is already running 23 percent above last year's pace, according to government figures released Wednesday.

The deficit in November totaled $28.46 billion, nearly matching the $28.79 billion in red ink run up in October.

If the pace of the first two months continued, the deficit for all of fiscal 1985 would top $340 billion. While no one is predicting things will be that bad, the Reagan administration is now projecting the 1985 deficit will be around $210 billion — compared to $175.3 billion for the 1984 fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The revised 1985 projection is far above the previous record of $195.4 billion set in fiscal 1983 and even farther above the $166.87 billion 1985 deficit projected by the administration last August during the presidential campaign.

In those days, President Reagan was talking optimistically about a booming economy allowing the country to grow its way out of the deficit morass.

What has happened since then is a marked slowdown in economic growth. While the economy raced ahead at a rate of 8.6 percent in the first half of the year, a summer slump sent growth down to 1.6 percent from July through September.

Slower growth means lower corporate profits and fewer jobs being created. That in turn means lower tax revenues.

While growth showed signs of rebounding somewhat to a rate of 2.8 percent in the final three months of the year, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said recently that even with a good rebound early next year, revenues are still likely to be $14 billion below the administration's August estimate.

The deficit problem is compounded by the fact that the government must borrow $1 for every $5 it spends. A bigger deficit means more borrowing than originally anticipated and thus higher interest payments — which already rank as the third biggest item of government spending.

Private analysts generally agree with the administration's new projections, which are being made as part of the budget preparations for 1986.

RETURNED MONEY, CHECKBOOK

Mrs. Edith B. Nobles said the spirit of Christmas was made real for her Dec. 22 when an area resident returned items of value she could easily have kept. Donald Hines of the Dixie Queen Restaurant in Winterville called her to say that an unidentified woman had turned in at the checkout counter her checkbook and an envelope containing $80 in cash, a Christmas gift from her mother. "It is heartwarming to know there are good and honest people around," Mrs. Nobles said.

The day after Christmas is generally considered one of the best sales days for retail merchants, and a survey of local businesses today indicated that Wednesday was indeed a good day.

At Nichols' Discount Center sales were "extremely strong," manager Doug Locklear said. Saying "we were real busy," Locklear noted day-after sales were up, although he said he was unable to give any accurate estimate of the increase.

Locklear also noted that "returns (of gift items) were down from last year ... about 10 to 12 percent below" the 1983 level.

Barrels Found In Tar River

A spokesman for the state's Division of Environmental Management said today the agency is continuing its investigation into the discovery of several fumigant barrels found in the Tar River near the Memorial Drive bridge at Greenville Wednesday afternoon.

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department personnel recovered five 30-gallon barrels which had contained Terr-O-Cide 30 after employees of WNCT-TV reported that a caller informed the television station that as many as 50 of the barrels were in the river.

Steve Reid said that although the barrels were "sealed" and "essentially empty" environmental management workers took samples of water from the river to determine if any of the fumigant had contaminated the water.

Reid noted that the fire-rescue workers had recovered "five or six" of the "eight drums" that were located Wednesday afternoon.

A spokesman for the fire-rescue department said this morning that a search for other drums would not be

At Belk-Tyler Co. Wednesday, business was "very brisk ... extremely good, considerably better" than last year according to manager Greenville Banks, who added that "exchanges were mild and easy" with "no problems whatsoever."

Banks noted that "overall ... when all the figures are in," Christmas season sales at Belk's will be "15 to 20 percent better ... this year than last."

Banks noted that one of the reasons for increased sales is the fact that Greenville is "not just a Pitt County shopping community anymore."

Bill Hopper, manager of J.C. Penny Co., said "business was quite good," Wednesday, with "crowds almost as heavy as they were Christmas eve."

While describing day-after sales as "quite good, on track with what we expected," he said "the returns were astronomical. Our returns were up 30 percent over 1983."

But Hopper noted that "our level of merchandise was greater" than in the past so "we had the goods to swap."

According to Hopper, "business as a whole for December (was) 5 percent ahead of last year it looks like. We're well pleased with what we've done this year and for the December period."

Hopper said Penny's "white sale" is "building bigger and bigger each year," with sales of home furnishing "up 20 percent for the same sale" in 1983.

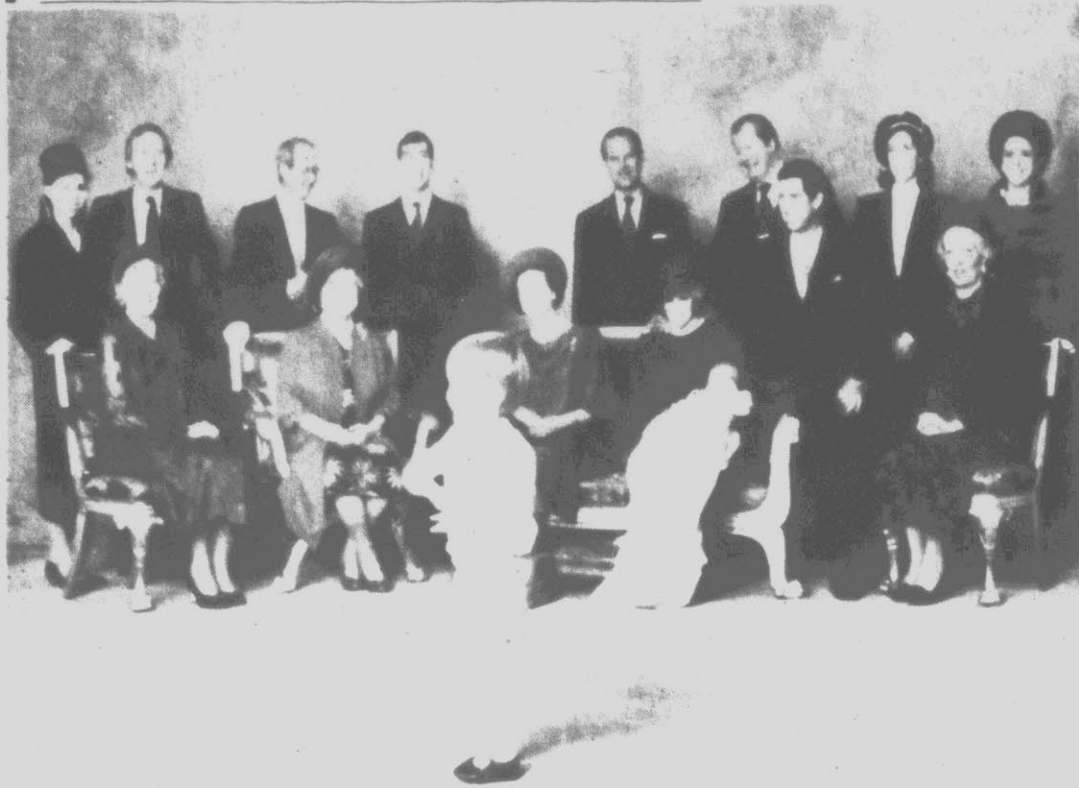

Herman Johnson, manager of the K-Mart Discount Store termed after-Christmas traffic Wednesday "real good" but said sales and returns were "about the same as last year."

However Johnson said total Christmas season sales at K-Mart are "a little better" than in 1983.

BLOODMOBILE VISIT — Area residents give blood Wednesday at the Boy's Club of Pitt County during the annual after-Christmas blood drive by the local Red Cross. According to executive director Ruth Taylor of the Red Cross, the drive netted 217 pints, with 240 persons participating. Mrs. Taylor said although the goal of 325 pints was not met, Wednesday's bloodmobile still represented "a good turnout." The next bloodmobile visit will be Jan. 23 with Greenville's Public Works Department. Wednesday's drive was sponsored by The Daily Reflector, WNCT-TV and WRQR radio. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

An Old Debate Resurfaces: Price Tag For Human Health

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The old bugaboo of cost-benefit analysis is bedeviling environmental law debate once again, with industry groups saying cleanliness at any cost is not necessarily a sound investment and environmentalists saying human health does not lend itself to a dollar value.

The Natural Resources Defense Council, a private advocacy group, asked a federal court on Wednesday to tell the Environmental Protection Agency it may not consider cost-benefit arguments made by industry when deciding whether certain construction permits are required for 31 kinds of industrial facilities.

The same court, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, was asked by the National Coal Association last week to tell EPA that the agency must make cost-benefit analyses in reaching such decisions.

Environmentalists have always been suspicious of cost-benefit analysis, arguing that data are never good enough to yield a sound result — essentially that preventive health benefits are impossible to measure.

Some environmental laws flatly prohibit EPA from doing such an analysis — for example, when setting national air quality standards to protect public health.

The latest dispute arises over so-called "fugitive" emissions of pollutants — generally valve and pipe leaks, but in the case of strip mines, all the dust thrown up in the mining operation.

If those fugitive emissions make total emissions more than 100 tons a year for a new plant, then EPA calls it a "major source" of pollution and sets requirements that industry typically finds expensive to meet.

And in areas where the air does not meet national standards for the pollutant in question, or in specially protected clean areas, EPA must approve new major sources.

At present, 30 industries must get construction permits from EPA in those circumstances.

In October, EPA proposed to make strip mining the 31st industry, and said it would consider any cost-benefit analyses anybody cared to make, for all 31 industries, to the effect that "compelling negative social and economic impacts" meant that permits should no longer be required for a particular industry.

"This is the reason for the whole controversy. The statute is not clear at all" on whether EPA must, may or may not consider such arguments, said Sara Schneeberg, an EPA attorney handling the litigation.

"In a dubious attempt to solve the problems of one industry (strip mines), they have opened an enormous loophole for all industry to try to squeeze through," said David Doniger, the attorney handling the case for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The 30 industries are: coal cleaning plants, kraft pulp mills, portland cement plants, iron and steel mills, primary aluminum ore reduction plants, primary copper, zinc and lead smelters, large municipal incinerators, hydrofluoric, sulfuric and nitric acid plants, petroleum refineries, lime plants, phosphate rock processing plants, coke ovens, and sulfur recovery plants.

Also some carbon black plants, sintering plants, secondary metal production plants, large fossil-fueled boilers, large petroleum product storage and transfer operations, taconite ore plants, glass fiber processing plants, charcoal plants, fuel conversion plants, chemical plants, fossil-fueled electric plants and anything covered by the new source review process or by national air quality standards.

Hunt Proud Of Economic Growth During His Tenure

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said today he would like to be remembered for leading North Carolina through its most exciting period of economic growth and educational progress.

Hunt steps down next week after eight years as governor, the first man to serve two consecutive terms. Republican Jim Martin will be sworn in Jan. 5 to take his place.

"During the Hunt administration, North Carolina had its most exciting period of economic growth in its history, becoming for the first time a national leader in high technology, and it made the most significant education progress it had ever made," Hunt said today in an interview.

Although he could not be specific about his future plans, Hunt said he wants to continue to work for economic growth through private industry.

"I will continue to be a sort of spokesperson, in a private capacity, for this state," said Hunt, who lost the U.S. Senate race in November to incumbent Republican Jesse Helms.

He said he will immediately enter a major law firm and perhaps some business ventures will come along later. Hunt said he is keeping his political options open.

One such option is running against Republican Sen. John East in 1986. Hunt said that is a possibility but "not one I'm doing anything about at this point." He said candidates for that office should decide to run by next December.

"I believe that five years from now I will either be actively involved in the life of this state including the involvement as a lawyer or in business or both or back in public life," he said.

Looking back on his eight-year administration, Hunt said he believes he has "been right on the major decisions." He said he was criticized for spending money on education instead of cutting taxes in the late 1970s and raising the gasoline tax. But Hunt said his choices were correct.

Hunt said there is one thing he would have done differently in the race against Helms.

"Had we known we could have raised as much money, we would have started spending money a little earlier," he said. "The essential thrust of the campaign was on target. There is no question had it not been for the Reagan landslide we would have won."

Gunman Supported

NEW YORK (AP) — Relatives and friends of four teen-agers shot by a subway rider who said they were trying to rob him have criticized public support for the mysterious gunman.

A police telephone line set up to get the public's help in finding the man has been flooded by calls from people praising him despite city officials' pleas that people not glorify him.

"I'm very angry at those people," Patricia Allen, 17, the sister of Barry Allen, 18, one of the four teens who were shot, told the New York Daily News.

"If it was one of their kids, how would they feel?" said a friend of another shooting victim, 18-year-old James Ramseur, who asked not to be identified.

But a Bronx woman who knows all four of the youths told the Daily News that while she wouldn't glorify the gunman, she understood the feelings of those who voiced support for him. "The people who are calling are the same people who ride the subways every day, and they're scared," said Adrienne Harris. "People are prisoners in their home after a certain hour."

All four of the teen-agers were expected to survive, but one, 19-year-old Darryl Cabey, suffered a damaged spinal cord and was paralyzed from the waist down.

Attorneys Disagree With Davis Decision To Reject Appointment

RALEIGH (AP) — Several North Carolina lawyers said they are disappointed a Forsyth County attorney declined an appointment to the state Court of Appeals and are concerned a drug charge that was expunged from her record was connected to her decision.

Joslin Davis of Winston-Salem announced on Monday she had declined the appointment by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Ms. Davis, 33, said in a statement Monday she and a man were arrested on a drug charge in December 1972 while she was a student at the University of Colorado at Boulder. The charge was dismissed and her record expunged by a judicial order, which is legally considered to mean that the arrest never occurred.

"An expungement ... is not even a verdict of not guilty," Raleigh attorney Howard Twiggs said. "It means that the state elects not to prosecute and the whole thing is wiped clean. Expungement means the charge did not exist ... It's a sad day in our state and a sad day in America if an expunged record keeps someone from serving who otherwise is fully qualified to serve on a court of our state."

"Anyone can be charged," he said. "... It's what you plead guilty to that amounts to something."

Twiggs is former president of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Wilmington lawyer Jim Nelson, the current president of the academy, agreed with Twiggs and said even if Ms. Davis had been convicted, he didn't think it would be reason for her to decline the appointment.

"If a person has become qualified since then — gone to law school, had other high positions of authority and demonstrated she could be held in public trust — I don't see how that's any different from anybody else who may have had a DWI," said Nelson, who indicated he was speaking as a private attorney, not for the academy.

Hunt was informed of the charge by an unidentified person after Ms. Davis was appointed to the bench Thursday. He asked her to meet with him Sunday to discuss the incident.

Ms. Davis said Monday she was declining the post to spare Hunt criticism that might arise over the incident.

Hunt is expected to announce a new appointee this week. Among those being considered are Superior Court Judge Robert Farmer of Raleigh, Elizabeth McCadden, a deputy commissioner with the Industrial Commission; and Raleigh attorney Alene Mercer.

Ms. Davis and Jack Cozort, Hunt's 34-year-old legal counsel, were both appointed at the same time to fill vacancies on the appeals court.

Ms. Davis said in her statement that when she applied for an appointment about a year ago, she told Cozort of the drug charge and he advised her not to include it on her application.

But Cozort said Wednesday he didn't remember having such a conversation with Ms. Davis. He said he talked with her about a drug charge Sunday but did not learn until that evening when he talked with Hunt that the charge involved cocaine.

"What Joslin told me Sunday was that when she first submitted an application to be considered for a judgeship ... she said something to me about not listing a charge that had been expunged," Cozort said. "She said that I told her that was legally correct. I don't have any recollection of that conversation."

"I don't question whether she is remembering it correctly. ... I think if she told me two years ago there was some charge involving cocaine ... I would have remembered that," he said. "I'm not denying that it happened. Over the course of eight years, I've talked to a lot of people about judgeships and am just unable to remember our having discussed it."

Ms. Davis could not be reached for comment Wednesday, but her husband, attorney Fred R. Harwell Jr., said he was at her meeting with Hunt and recalled the governor saying Cozort had confirmed to Hunt that he had discussed the matter with Ms. Davis a year ago.

Japan Holds Up Soviet-Bound Submarine Tracking System

By KOZO MIZOGUCHI
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese customs officials acting on a U.S. request barred export of an American-made submarine tracking system as it was about to be shipped to the Soviet Union, a Foreign Ministry official said today.

The sonar system is on a list of high-technology items banned for export to Communist countries by the Coordinating Committee for Export Control. Japan is a member of the organization.

An official of the ministry's Economic Affairs Bureau, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the product was held at the request of the U.S. government.

The official did not say when the U.S. request was made, but said the Foreign Ministry had notified customs offices throughout Japan to watch for the tracking system.

The official said he could give no further details because an investigation was under way.

The economic newspaper Nihon Keizai Shimbun said today the U.S. government had asked allied countries to watch out for the advanced sonar system for fear that it would be shipped to an Eastern bloc nation.

The newspaper said the system, which turned up in Osaka, western Japan, had been exported from the United States to Norway but then disappeared. It did not say which company exported the system to Norway, or when.

But, quoting "concerned officials," it said one Japanese trading company had bought the sonar system from another Japanese trading firm in late November, after it was imported from Norway around April.

It did not identify the companies, but said the firm which purchased the system started export procedures for "parts for use in shipping craft" at the Osaka Customs Office before officials there discovered they were dealing with part of the missing sonar system.

The system was the latest model sonar, capable of surveying as deep as 39,600 feet, Nihon Keizai said.

With the help of a built-in microcomputer, it can probe deep into the sand at the sea bottom, the paper said.

It quoted Japanese security authorities as saying they were concerned over whether the KGB or Soviet intelligence were involved.

Spokesmen for the Public Security Investigation Agency and the National Police Agency, reached by telephone, said they could not comment on the reports.

Shigeharu Takatori, a spokesman of the Osaka Customs Office, also declined comment.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Adoptive Mother's Love Is Abundant Enough

DEAR ABBY: I read with sadness the letter from "Devastated," who advocates hiding from adopted children the fact that they were adopted to prevent them from searching for their birth parents.

How sad that "Devastated" is so insecure as a parent. The fact that an adopted child may want to know a birth parent does not necessarily mean that the adoptive parent will be abandoned or replaced.

As the mother of an adopted daughter, I have often wished that her birth mother could see what a beautiful and happy child she is. If my daughter ever wants to find her birth mother, I will gladly help her. I love her enough to hold her with open arms.

WILLING TO SHARE IN PHOENIX

DEAR WILLING: Your daughter is indeed lucky to have been placed in your arms. Not all adoptees are so fortunate. Nor are all adoptive parents as generous and secure as you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: There is no good reason why adopted children should seek out their biological parents. A complete medical history is given to adoptive parents. They are also told something about the birth parents, although identities are never revealed.

Why is it necessary to pursue a relationship that, for a child, never existed? Does satisfying the curiosity of the adopted child justify the hurt to adoptive parents? They are the parents who raised those children. They paid for braces, participation in sports, for party dresses and college educations. They are the parents who waited for their kids to get home safely from parties, and helped junior to buy his first car. They're the ones who will foot the bill for a big wedding if that's what Susie wants.

Suddenly today there's a curiosity among adopted kids demanding to know who the "birth parents" are, so the kids start searching. What a great thank-you to the parents who raised them!

To adopted kids I would say: "Be grateful. Show your mom and dad how much you love them, and forget the two strangers you've never even met!"

ANONYMOUS PARENT

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an upwardly mobile executive. We recently moved to a new area and have been invited to the country club for lunch several times. We enjoyed these visits enormously and would like very much to join the club.

Now the problem: My husband and I are both born-again Moravian Baptists and take our religion very seriously. However, the inference has been made that unless we are Episcopalian, our chances for being accepted into the country club are non-existent. We were told that in this area Baptists are considered worse than "low church."

Could you please explain this concept of "low church" to me, Abby? Moravian Baptist churches are just as tall as any others I have seen.

CURIOUS IN DAYTON

DEAR CURIOUS: I'm also curious. Ask the person who made the remark about "low church" to explain it to you. Then explain it to me. I've never heard the expression.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There comes a moment at our house when we want to serve leftover holiday turkey a simple way — but not in the usual sandwiches and salads.

That's the moment when we may arrange the sliced turkey in a platter, garnish one end with whole cranberry sauce and the other with watercress, and present it with Potato Scallop.

Potato Scallop is an old-fashioned hot side dish that is easy to make and delicious enough for guests. You may want to try the following recipe — just enough for supper for four. Green peas make a fine addition to the turkey and potatoes, and holiday cookies or fruitcake a convenient dessert.

POTATO SCALLOP

4 medium (scant 1½ pounds)
all-purpose potatoes
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 medium scallion, thinly sliced
2¼ cups milk

½ teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
Dash of cayenne pepper
2½ tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Paprika

Pare potatoes one by one and as you do so drop each into a bowl of cold water so they are covered with the water.

In a medium saucepan over low heat, melt 2 tablespoons of the butter; stir in flour, then scallion; cook, stirring, for a few minutes. Off heat, gradually stir in milk, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Off heat, stir in salt, cayenne and pepper; keep hot, stirring occasionally, over very low heat.

Drain and thoroughly dry potatoes on paper towels. Slice each crosswise 1½-inch thick. Stir potatoes into hot sauce, increase heat and let bubble a few minutes. Turn into a buttered 2-quart (9 by 9 by 2-inch) baking dish. Dot with remaining 1 tablespoon butter. Sprinkle with Parmesan and paprika.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until potatoes are tender and top is golden brown — about 45 minutes. Serve hot.

Makes 4 servings.

PARTY SPINACH

Four 10-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach
½ pound mushrooms
¼ cup butter
1-3rd cup mayonnaise
2-3rds cup sour cream
1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

8½-ounce can artichokes, drained
2 tomatoes, sliced
2-3rds cup bread crumbs

Cook spinach according to package directions and drain. Sauté mushrooms in ¼ cup of the butter. Combine mayonnaise, sour cream and 2-3rds cup of the Parmesan; stir in spinach, mushrooms and artichokes. Turn into a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan. Arrange tomatoes on top. Melt remaining ½ cup butter and stir in crumbs and remaining 1-3rd cup Parmesan; sprinkle over top. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 8-10. Spring?

Winter, says the calendar, is formally on the scene in North Carolina. It barely preceded Christmas Day. The weather does not approach resemblance to the new season's image.

One has yet to read or hear of a rush for tire chains, sleds, or cold weather clothing. We can live with that.

People who have been singing about sleighbells and winter wonderlands are daydreamers ... or not thinking about other parts of the country where people who could not escape to the Sun Belt now are grumbling and fretting. They have to endure below-freezing temperatures, snowdrifts, icy streets, cold noses and colder feet. (It has been almost a year since we last had to defrost our fingers before setting to work at a computer terminal.)

For awhile there, one couldn't avoid encountering somebody singing to themselves "I'm dreaming of a white Christmas" — only they rarely knew all the words, which was a merciful blessing. They just don't stop to think about what they're saying. Somebody Up There might be listening!

The only people who can sensibly relish all the snow and cold of winter are those who operate ski slopes. They need snow, and we can appreciate that as well as wish them luck.

Fortunately there is not a slope in our area as far as the eye can see. Maybe even farther ... we don't know what's over the horizon and in no hurry to find out, so wishing the ski people well doesn't hurt one bit.

The barren tree branches of winter point skeletal fingers in all directions. A poet or painter, a philosopher or camera buff may find beauty in those bare trees. We are not among the aforementioned.

They are bitter reminders of foliage that used to be, and ended their glory with autumn's colors which turned drab and brown — strewn in streets and yards, creating labors of herculean quality.

We will not further discuss the shortcomings of our new season.

Now spring is something else!

So OK

If you have overheard doting grandparents and parents talking to their very young offspring to prepare the way for that very first word it may have appeared that the "OKs" are so frequent as to comprise a lesson in themselves. The possibility of that long-awaited first word being a distinct "OK" rather than "mama" is very much present.

"OK" may be the most over-used word in Americana.

A smattering of samples:

"OK" is a query, often meaning "do you understand?"

"OK" is also confirmation that things are all right or "doing fine".

"OK" is frequently indicative of "so be it". (Will it someday replace "Amen"?)

"OK" is most often used instead of "yes", or "I will", and could be adapted into wedding vows.

"A OK," thanks to our early astronauts, soon came to mean "perfect."

There are other uses which might fill an entire book. The term has shadings of intonation and context which convey other meanings.

In essence of this nonsense is we may be working our way toward a one-word vocabulary.

Water Crisis Lies Ahead

WASHINGTON — No one yet is crying "crisis!" No one yet is clamoring for emergency action this week or next. But the time is swiftly approaching over much of the world when concern must be directed toward our most important, most abundant and most forgotten resource: fresh water. Here and there, parts of the world are running out.

That is the measured conclusion of an important study just released by Worldwatch Institute. The principal author of the study, Sandra Postel, looks around the globe. She sees plenty of water. Every year the volume of fresh water renewed by nature is sufficient to meet the material needs of five to 10 times the world's population. If nature only would distribute these supplies in some nice orderly fashion to the farms, industries and homes in need of water, no problem would arise. Nature is not always orderly. Canada has more water than Canada possibly can use. In much of Africa and the Middle East, the story is disturbingly different.

"Given existing climatic conditions and current population projections," Postel writes, "the per capita global water supply at the end of the century will have declined by 24 percent. Per capita supplies in Kenya and Nigeria will diminish by 50 and 42 percent respectively. Supplies per person in Bangladesh and Egypt will diminish by a third, and in India by a fourth."

These troublesome prospects are affected by all kinds of forces. The worldwide trend toward urbanization is among them. Pollution is another: China treats only about 2 percent of the 28 billion cubic meters of wastewater discharged every year. In virtually all of Latin America, Postel reports, municipal sewage and industrial wastes are discharged into the nearest rivers and streams without treatment. Every gallon of polluted water thus discharged will contaminate additional gallons of water in the receiving stream. "Unless governments begin attacking urban and industrial pollution soon, they will inevitably face the prospect of a water supply too polluted for their people to drink."

Population movements and pollution are only part of the slowly growing problem. Mismanagement and extravagance also contribute. Only in very recent years have Congress and a few of the states begun to manifest signs of concern for prospective shortages here at home. Failure to conserve the vast Ogallala Aquifer, for one example, has led to serious depletion of a vast underground reserve that stretches from South Dakota to northern Texas.

Many other domestic aquifers, it appears, also are suffering from overuse.

The best bets for the near future lie in recharging and in simple conservation. More than 20 countries are now actively recharging some of their aquifers by moving water from one area to another, but only Israel is recharging on a large scale.

Conservation is the least costly approach, but it probably is the one approach for which our affluent society is least prepared. So long as farmers pay only one-fifth of the actual cost of supplying water for irrigation, farmers will use more water than they truly need. Industries and individuals are as indifferent. Like Elijah's famous cloud, a crisis is yet far off; but unlike Elijah's cloud, which produced heavy rain, our water problem may produce a shortage instead.

Toymaker Create Their Markets

WASHINGTON — Any adult who karate-chopped his or her way through toy store aisles this holiday season is familiar with Transformers and GoBots. Sales of these two lines of toys surpassed those of last year's winner, the Cabbage Patch Doll.

The genius of Transformers and GoBots is indisputable. With a twist of a wing or a flap, these miniature planes and guns, in the case of Transformers, and cars and tanks, in the case of GoBots, change into robots. They're two toys rolled into one.

But the techniques used to market them have created as much a stir as the toys themselves. At issue are cartoon commercials and the federal licensing policies that permit them.

Until recently, toy manufacturers modeled their products after characters portrayed in television shows or major movies. E.T. dolls, for example, were mass-produced after the box office hit captivated America's heart. When the movie faded from our psyche, E.T. sales declined and another TV or movie character simply replaced it.

To encourage longer shelf life, the toy industry changed its marketing strategy. In the past year, major manufacturers have bankrolled 14 animated cartoon series based on products they created; among the new stars are GoBots and Transformers. At least six more programs are planned for next year.

Meanwhile, toy companies have loaded the airwaves with slick and clever commercials. During the first nine months of 1984, their expenses for promotion increased 49 percent, to a record $122 million.

Product-script television programs and fancy commercials have paid off for toy companies. Transformers' distributor, Hasbro-Bradley, expects to sell $90 million worth of the product this year. For its GoBots, the Tonka Toy Co. already reports sales of well over $100 million. These figures contrast favorably to the $60 million that Cabbage Patch Dolls brought to Coleco Industries last year.

But what warms the hearts of toy executives could prove unhealthy for their target market. The national advertising division of the Council of Better Business Bureaus has already criticized the makers of GoBots and Transformers for raising unrealistic expectations about their products' performance and quality. Other critics have charged that the programs and commercials leave little room for a child's own imagination.

"They've given kids a whole new world to play in and they even tell them how to play it," says Peggy Charren, president of the Newton, Mass.-based child-advocacy group Action for Children's Television.

Of course, some people see nothing wrong with pre-packaged fantasy that spins out stories in infinite detail. But the danger of too much of it is that children's minds are already too easily transformed into blobs. When toy manufacturers lead their consumers straight to the TV set, they're denying them the right to explore and speculate on their own.

College professors are now confronting the first generation of students bred on television. And from what we hear, they're not happy with the results. Not enough students, they say, ask questions in class. They are too docile and too willing to accept anything that's paraded in front of them.

The Federal Communications Commission could help keep another generation from becoming automatons. In 1974, the FCC prevented Mattel Inc. from airing a Hot Wheels cartoon program, arguing that the act of creating program-length commercials mixed vested-interest speech with commercial speech.

While the FCC's public-interest standards have become less stringent during the last four years (over-commercialization seems to be no vice), the 1974 ruling hasn't lost its relevance: Too much toy culture is counterproductive. More stringent licensing practices may not block the invasion of GoBots, Transformers and their successors, but they might leave some room for thinking and dreaming.

Strength For Today

Followers of Jesus Christ have throughout the ages dwelt fondly on the title, "The Prince of Peace," which Isaiah said the coming Messiah would possess.

War, strife and cruelty are the result of man's disobedience. God opened to the human race in the beginning a life of perfection. "And God saw everything the He had made, and behold, it was very good" (Genesis 1:31). And then came the dedication of human life so often to selfishness and evil. We have entered into that heritage of wrongdoing and misery.

But the Prince of Peace points us in a new direction and promises that in that direction is to be found the happiness which every normal being craves. There is no happiness in sin. There is no lasting satisfaction in selfish indulgence. The peace which passeth all understanding comes to the heart that is made right with God and kept right with God.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It hurts me when I pick up your paper and read that a Nativity must be removed, that a little girl couldn't give out cards because they had pictures of Jesus on them. Who are these people? Do they not realize this is why Christmas is celebrated at all? The word Christmas literally means "Christ's celebration" or "In celebration of Christ."

Christmas is much more than presents and television specials. It is the celebration of God's love for us — a love so deep and so strong that we as humans cannot even come close to understanding it. He humbled himself and became like us, lived among us, undeserving as we were and still are. He died so that we might have eternal life. What greater gift is there? Or can there be? It is this gift that we celebrate. Many of us didn't just hope for dozens of gifts. We gathered with friends and loved ones to celebrate the love of God and the love we share.

I must also correct Karin Calvert's article in your Dec. 20th issue. Sorry, Karin, but we Christians have been celebrating Christmas for centuries. Of course, customs have been added over the years. Many of our traditions such as the wassail bowl began in the 1400s. Charles Dickens and Thomas Nast and the others did not "create" Christmas. They just wrote about it.

Removers of Nativity scenes say their rights are violated. What about our (Christians') rights? The Constitution says nothing whatsoever about displaying the Nativity or other Christian symbols. The Constitution says the government shall not force the people to worship in a certain way, nor shall they prohibit the citizens from worshipping the way they wish. Christianity has been persecuted for centuries, yet it thrives and will thrive. You can take Jesus off of our porch steps, but you will never take him out of our hearts.

Photographer Kept Guests Waiting

WASHINGTON AP — 'Twas the season to be jolly, but all was not so merry last week when hundreds of families tried to accept their White House invitations to take a "candlelight tour" of the executive mansion decorated for the holidays.

Congressional staffers and members of the White House press corps, many of them with spouses and children in tow, lined up down East Executive Drive waiting to go through security checks and begin the tour. A few hundred actually got inside the mansion but were confined to the East Wing corridor, barred from going upstairs to the State Floor to see the fabled East Room, State Dining Room and the Blue Room, where the White House Christmas Tree stood.

The line outside grew longer and longer; the children more and more rambunctious; and the would-be guests less and less patient as their wait stretched past the one-hour mark, and the end of the two-hour tour period drew closer and closer.

Many gave up and walked away, their disappointed brood in tow.

But with 20 minutes left to go, the gates finally were thrown open, and several hundred of those still in line scurried through for a quick peek.

It turned out that Time magazine photographer Dirk Halstead, known affectionately among his colleagues as "Elbows," had decided the cloudy skies would spoil the outdoor picture-taking session he had scheduled with Nancy Reagan. He asked that she pose briefly on the Truman Balcony off the State Floor, and the Secret Service closed the floor until Mrs. Reagan left — nearly an hour after the session had been scheduled to end.

President and Mrs. Reagan threw separate Christmas parties during the holidays for several thousand of their closest friends; all members of Congress, incoming and outgoing; more than 1,000 reporters, photographers and their bureau chiefs; the White House staff; the White House senior staff; the Secret Service; and uniformed guards and military support personnel.

Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, estimated the Reagans shook about 4,000 hands each as they stood for a combined total of about three hours in receiving lines.

The White House perimeter seems under almost permanent construction these days, as sprucing up for the Inauguration and building of the inaugural stands have followed the erection of reinforced concrete anti-terrorist barriers outside the iron fence surrounding the mansion.

In recent weeks, the building boom has spread around the corner to 17th Street, where crash-resistant gates are being installed outside the Old Executive Office Building, headquarters for Reagan's not-quite-closest aides.

And inside the 19th-century office building, which is as ornate as the White House is simple, painters are at work re-creating the original, multicolored mouldings in the four remaining skylights at each corner of the block-square building.

White House administrative officer John F.W. Rogers, an unabashed fan of the building next door, dug up documentation on the fancy paint job that once adorned the ceilings and had the National Park Service's preservation center do a microscopic analysis of the bottom layer of paint to identify the original pigments.

He asked White House painters to mix up colors to match, and although some might consider the result a bit gaudy, Rogers said he much prefers it to repainting them "the same old government yellow."

Shopping Facilities Packed As Crowds Look For Bargains

By The Associated Press

Americans went from giving to returning — and to buying — as shoppers descended on the nation's stores in heavy numbers in a post-Christmas rush that retailers expected to be as heavy as before the holiday.

Crowds pressed against entrances at malls and stores across the country, some of which opened early to handle Wednesday's rush. Returns in some places were down from past years, and shoppers took advantage of year-end sales to stock up for next year's holidays, retailers said.

"We're expecting today and tomorrow to be as heavy as before Christmas," when about 400,000 visited the more than 170 stores in Cleveland's Randall Park Mall, the nation's sixth largest, said Marie Graf, regional marketing manager for the DeBartolo Corp., which also owns three other malls in the area.

"A lot of people were buying sales items, a lot of people were exchanging for higher priced items," said a cosmetics department assistant sales manager at Saks Fifth Avenue in New York City. "I think there will be more people tomorrow (Thursday)."

A survey of the 5,000 members of the Retail Council of New York State between Nov. 26 and Dec. 24 revealed an 8 percent increase in sales over last year's Christmas shopping season, said the organization's president, James A. Quaremba.

And Ron Poli, manager of Colonie Center in suburban Albany, N.Y., said the trend appeared to be continuing. "It doesn't look like they're returning as much as buying all the half-price stuff that's around," Poli said.

Executive Director G. Wesley Williams of the Raleigh, N.C., Merchants Bureau, estimated a 15 percent to 18 percent increase in sales for the Christmas season over 1983.

"People are coming in to buy; they're not coming in to return," said Claire Goldman, a spokesman for Filene's department store in Boston. "They're using their Christmas gift money and gift certificates."

Many department stores in Southern California opened as early as 8 a.m. At the May Co. store in downtown Los Angeles, people were grabbing armloads of toys, gift wrapping, cards and tree ornaments in preparation for next year.

Bill Dombrowski, spokesman for Los Angeles-based Carter Hawley Hales Stores Inc., said, "Our stores are mobbed around the country."

Reagan Heads For Vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after a quiet Christmas holiday in Washington, was flying to California today for a vacation that features his annual New Year's Eve get-together with old friends at Palm Springs.

White House aides said Reagan planned to see some of his children while in California, but would not say whether his oldest son, Michael, was likely to be among them.

"I have not inquired," said Sheila Tate, press secretary to Nancy Reagan, when asked whether the president would see Michael, the adopted son from Reagan's marriage to actress Jane Wyman.

"I am sure they will see them (the children), but I can't tell you any specifics," she said. All of Reagan's children — Maureen, Michael, Ron and Patti — live in California.

Mrs. Reagan, in a pre-Thanksgiving interview, said the president had been estranged from Michael for three years, but did not say why. After hearing of his stepmother's comments, Michael said he was surprised and hurt.

He also said he hoped he and his father — who talked by telephone after the public flap — would be able to meet during the president's trip. Michael's youngest child, 20-month-old Ashley, has never met her grandparents.

After two days at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, the president and his wife, Nancy, were flying to Palm Springs, Calif., for several days to celebrate New Year's Eve with old friends at the walled estate of millionaire publisher Walter Annenberg and his wife, Leonore, who was chief of protocol in Washington in 1981.

Mrs. Tate said the Reagans have been spending New Year's Eve with the same circle of friends at the Annenberg estate for about 18 years. About 60 to 80 people usually are invited to the party, including the so-called "kitchen cabinet," a group of wealthy California businessmen which was influential in convincing Reagan to run for public office.

In Los Angeles, the president is expected to make his annual visit to his ear doctor, who fitted Reagan with a hearing aid more than a year ago.

But the only official appointment on the presidential calendar was Reagan's Jan. 2 meeting in Los Angeles with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan. After that session, the president will fly back to Washington.

Future Bright For Contact Lenses As Popularity Grows

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bright future is in sight for makers and wearers of contact lenses, a congressional agency suggests in a new industry assessment.

Contacts, though still far behind regular eyeglasses in usage by Americans, have been gaining in recent years and eventually may pass eyeglasses in popularity as technical advances improve the lenses and prices continue to decline, said Wednesday's report from Congress' Office of Technology Assessment.

"The lens of the future may well be a low-cost, easy-to-wear, visually near-perfect, extended-wear, disposable lens," the report said.

And it added, "Given their potential development, it is at least conceivable to project their displacement of eyeglasses as the dominant method of vision correction in the not-too-distant future."

A main plus for makers of contact lenses, the transparent discs that fit over the eyeball, is that many people who need some form of visual help would rather wear them if possible — simply because of a feeling that they look better than eyeglasses.

Drawbacks include relatively higher cost, greater chances of eye irritation or even infection and less help in correcting certain vision problems, the report said. But the cost has been about cut in half since the mid-1970s, undoubtedly pushing sales, and the other problems are being worked on now.

"In the past, many of the important developments in contact lenses originated from a wide range of scientific and industrial sources (and) the technologies of electronics, imaging, optics and all of the other sciences are expanding exponentially," the report said.

The percentage of people 3 years and older who wore eyeglasses remained about steady at just over 47 percent between 1971 and 1977 while the figure for contact lenses rose from 1.3 percent to 3.5 percent, according to government figures cited in the report.

More recent figures from the industry itself indicated that about 120 million people — or 51 percent of the total population — were using eyeglasses by 1982 compared with between 16.3 million and 18 million — or about 7 percent — using contacts.

One reason prices for contacts have dropped, the report said, was "vigorous competition among dispensers and manufacturers of lenses." And it added, "This competition is likely to continue and prices will probably continue to decline."

Use of contact lenses probably would be even greater by now if not for the two recessions so far in the 1980s, the report said. The reasoning: "Cosmetic" desires for contacts wouldn't have been enough for people who were losing jobs and salaries.

Steady use of contacts has been increasing by about 1.5 million a year since 1979, the report estimated.

However, on a negative note, it added, "Since the number of new contact lens patients per year is well above 1.5 million, it appears that substantial attrition or failure rates do occur."

Among contact-lens wearers themselves, there has also been plenty of change in recent years, the report said.

Hard lenses held 51 percent of the contact lens market in 1978, but were estimated to have fallen to about 15 percent in 1982 and are projected to decline to only 5 percent by 1987. Soft lenses rose from 49 percent to about 75 percent in the same period and are estimated at 65 percent to 75 percent for 1987 while a third type — gas-permeable contacts — rose from zero to 20 percent of the market and appear headed higher, the report said, relying again on industry figures.

The softer lenses can be worn for longer periods than the hard ones but can provide less acute vision correction and may increase the likelihood of eye infections from handling and wearing, the report said.

It said the gas-permeables, matching some qualities of each, may match the soft lenses in popularity in the future. And it added that a combination of the soft and permeable lenses would probably take over the market, if and when it is developed.

Boy Injured In Explosion

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Shocked neighbors are collecting donations to pay medical expenses for an 11-year-old boy who suffered "horrible" injuries when a bomb filled the air with metal and flaming liquid as he filled his bicycle tires.

Paul Edward Jewell was in critical condition today and doctors were considering flying him to a specialized burn hospital, said an Orlando Regional Medical Center nursing supervisor.

Doctors worked to save the boy's leg Wednesday by reattaching severed nerves, arteries and ligaments. But a spokesman said the extensive burns posed more of a threat to the boy's life.

"It's a horrible injury," said Dr. Harry Tucker. "It's the same as what you see when you step on a land mine."

Orange County Sheriff Lawson Lamar said the blast outside a convenience store was "one of the worst situations of this kind I've ever seen."

Jewell had stopped at the Stop & Go to use a coin-operated air compressor when a small, wrapped package attached to the machine blew up in his face. Investigators said the box contained a pipe bomb filled with metallic fragments and flammable liquid, which set the youngster afire when it exploded.

There were no suspects in the case, and police knew of no motive.

Presidential Election Was 1984's Big Story

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Ronald Reagan's landslide victory, while no surprise, was the top news story of 1984 in a poll of Associated Press member editors and broadcasters.

Another political story came in third: the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro for vice president, the first woman so selected by a major party.

Other stories in the top ten dealt with death and disaster. The poison gas leak from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, which killed more than 2,000 people, placed second.

In fourth place was the assassination of Indira Gandhi, the Indian prime minister. The bombing of the American embassy annex in Beirut and the African drought and famine, which had taken some 300,000 lives in Ethiopia alone, were the fifth and sixth choices.

All six received top-heavy scores in the balloting. There was less unanimity in the voting for the other four, all of which were on domestic topics.

The U.S. economy, the top story in the 1982 poll and ranked fourth in 1983, dropped to ninth this year, with inflation quiescent, a marked recovery, but deficits a continuing concern.

- The list:
1. The Reagan landslide.
 2. The Bhopal disaster.
 3. Ferraro's challenge.
 4. Indira Gandhi's assassination.
 5. The bombing of the U.S. embassy annex in Beirut.
 6. The Ethiopian famine.
 7. The Summer Olympics.
 8. Implants of a baboon heart and an artificial heart.
 9. The economy.
 10. The slaying of 21 at the McDonald's in San Ysidro, Calif.

The second 10, in order:

Death of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov; Jesse Jackson's presidential quest; Miss America scandal over nude photos; Mexico City's gas explosion that killed hundreds; space shuttle retrieval of satellites; spread of child abuse cases; tornado-caused damage and casualties in the Carolinas; rumor over CIA pamphlet for Nicaraguan rebels and U.S. pressure on Sandinistas; government bailout of faltering Continental Illinois bank in Chicago; and Duarte's election in San Salvador.

The Top Ten:

1. If Americans believed the polls that came out with numbing regularity in 1984, they could not have doubted, from July to November, which presidential candidate would prevail. President Reagan was running far ahead of the Democratic nominee, Walter F. Mondale.

Reagan carried 49 states for a total of 525 electoral votes. Former vice president Mondale carried only his home state of Minnesota and the District of Columbia. That was a record showing.

The 1984 election produced two other firsts as well. Chief among them was Mondale's choice of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York as his running mate, the first woman to run on a national ticket.

The other was the credible showing of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the first black to make a serious bid for the presidential nomination by a major party. Jackson had a considerable following and proved a strong campaigner. He was a force in increasing voter registration of blacks.

Jackson hung on in the race for the nomination even as Sen. John Glenn, the former astronaut considered to have "the right stuff," and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, considered to have the stuff of John Kennedy, fell by the wayside. The Democrats did find some consolation. They picked up two Senate seats and held GOP gains in the House to 14 seats, fewer than the Republicans once thought they would pick up.

2. As residents of the Indian city of Bhopal slept on Monday night, Dec. 3, a poisonous cloud of methyl isocyanate gas began leaking from a pesticide plant on the outskirts.

The deadly leak became the greatest industrial accident in history, killing more than 2,000 and sending thousands to hospitals.

Union Carbide Corp., which owns 51 percent of the plant, was hit almost immediately by a class action suit seeking $15 billion in damages. More suits are expected to follow, suits that could threaten the stability of America's 37th largest industrial corporation. The company claims it is adequately covered by insurance.

Union Carbide board chairman Warren Anderson flew to the site from the United States and was detained briefly by Indian officials. The company reopened the plant after the accident to use up the toxic chemical. Still many residents fled the town.

3. U.S. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, a three-term New York congresswoman and former school teacher and prosecutor, stepped out of Archie Bunker Country and into the headlines in 1984, securing a place in history as the first woman vice presidential candidate on a major party ticket.

Walter Mondale's historic choice of Ms. Ferraro, a 48-year-old Italian Catholic from a conservative blue-collar district of Queens, brought a wave of enthusiasm and support. But the initial excitement soon gave way to controversy, in the form of a lengthy investigation of the finances of Ms. Ferraro's husband, John Zaccaro, a New York real estate dealer.

In her first appearance before New York Democrats following Reagan's landslide re-election, Ms. Ferraro pledged to remain active in state and national politics. Her name was prominently mentioned as a possible candidate to oppose New York's incumbent Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

4. It was a bright autumn morning, the last day of October, when India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi walked from her bungalow in her New Delhi compound to meet with Peter Ustinov for an interview. Two members of her security guard, identified as Sikhs, cut her down in a hail of bullets.

Mrs. Gandhi, the daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first Prime Minister, died despite extraordinary efforts by a team of 12 doctors. Mrs. Gandhi, who had dominated India for 15 of the past 18 years, was 66.

Within hours after the official announcement, India experienced its worst violence since partition in 1947. More than a thousand were killed in anti-Sikh riots. Within 12 hours of her death, Mrs. Gandhi's son, Rajiv Gandhi, was named to succeed her.

5. American Marines were pulled out of Beirut, the Lebanese capital, in February, five months after an explosive-laden truck blew up the Marine compound, killing 241 U.S. servicemen.

But even the limited U.S. presence that remained was targeted by terrorists. Just before noon on a sunny Sept. 22, a station wagon driven by another suicide fanatic ran a gauntlet of guards and concrete blocks, slammed into a parked car and blew up. Fourteen people were killed, two of them Americans, in the U.S. embassy annex in East Beirut.

Security improvements were only three-quarters complete when the terrorist struck, the State Department said.

6. Drought and famine continued to stalk large parts of Africa, and vivid photographs and television films brought the tragedy to the awareness of Americans. The number of victims is guesswork, but the toll was high.

Some 300,000 were believed to have died in Ethiopia. Millions more there and elsewhere were starving.

Two enormous belts of drought have spread across the land, making desert of part of it, killing the cattle, sheep and goats and now the people. In the last 20 years, Mauritania has lost more than three-quarters of its grazing land to the Sahara and last year's rainfall in parts of Africa was the lowest in 70 years.

Relief is pouring into the continent, but for many it is too little, too late.

7. The Olympic Games at Los Angeles turned out to be a study in gold for U.S. athletes and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The LAOOC turned to the private sector for sponsorship and the games realized a surplus of at least $215 million.

With such athletically powerful nations as the Soviet Union, East Germany and Cuba staying away, U.S. athletes won 83 gold medals and 174 total medals in 16 days of competition, which drew 5.6 million spectators and were watched on worldwide television. West Germany was second in the medal race with 59, 17 of them gold.

Carl Lewis of the United States emulated Jesse Owens by winning gold medals in the same four events that Owens won in the 1936 Games at Berlin — the long jump, the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the 400-meter relay, he woman star of the games, at least to American eyes, was 16-year-old Mary Lou Retton, who won the all-around gold medal in gymnastics.

8. In a pair of dramatic attempts to prolong the lives of two critically ill Americans, teams of surgeons implanted a baboon's heart in an infant and an artificial heart in a 52-year-old man.

Baby Fae, born with a congenitally deformed heart, lived three weeks with her walnut-sized baboon heart before succumbing in a California hospital in November. Ten days later in Louisville, Ky., William Schroeder, a retired federal employee whose own heart was damaged beyond repair, became the world's second recipient of an artificial heart.

In the days immediately following his surgery, Schroeder amazed his doctors with his rapid recovery. Then, a stroke suffered in his hospital room interrupted his progress, leaving him temporarily paralyzed on one side of his body and affecting his speech and memory.

9. The American economy recovered strongly from the recession. Inflation was stymied, unemployment dropped. Still, there were nagging uncertainties — foremost among them the towering deficit and the continued strength of the dollar overseas that harmed U.S. exports. And interest rates remained high though they dropped markedly toward the end of the year.

Walter Mondale's campaign promise was a tax hike to trim the deficit. Reagan was adamantly opposed to a tax increase and promised to cut spending. In the background were several proposals to simplify the tax structure.

At year's end, spending cuts seemed to be a bipartisan cause, and tax revision was gaining support.

10. Each passing year produces its share of the unexpected. What are called "acts of God" give us earthquakes and tornadoes and floods.

But there was no way to explain what happened in San Ysidro, Calif., last July 18.

Union Carbide Denies Report

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Union Carbide Corp. today denied a news report that its Bhopal research center had secretly tested new chemicals for biological warfare.

The report by the Press Trust of India news agency was "absolutely unfounded and baseless," said a statement by the company's Indian subsidiary.

The news agency reported Wednesday that the Union Carbide research center, located six miles from the pesticide plant where a gas leak Dec. 3 killed more than 2,000 people, tested new chemical agents for six years without obtaining permission from a top Indian defense screening committee.

An unidentified Indian defense scientist was quoted by Press Trust as saying that the center had conducted studies "in the grey area between agricultural research and anti-crop warfare" and that India was concerned that Union Carbide may have used Bhopal as a "guinea pig" for testing chemical agents on crops.

The Union Carbide statement said the center was recognized by the Indian government and its research activity was known to several top government-sponsored agricultural scientists who visited it.

Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,389,000, compared to 1,745,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in a sluggish yearend session. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials managed a 1.77 gain to 1,210.69 in the first half hour. But losers opened up a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts said the mood among money managers at investing institutions was very subdued. The performance of the market in 1984 has disappointed many people after the large gains recorded in the two previous years.

Furthermore, many portfolio managers have had trouble this year producing results as good as the market averages — in part because smaller stocks that don't carry much weight in the indicators have performed even more poorly than the big-name blue chips.

Brokers also noted that the economic news has been quiet lately. Retail sales in the important holiday selling season have generally been described as decent, but below expectations.

The government is expected to sound an upbeat note for the 1985 economy when it reports Friday on the index of leading economic indicators for November. However, a strong showing by the index has been widely forecast, and may well already have been taken into account by the market.

Southern California Edison led the active list in the early going, down 1/4 at 23 1/2. A 750,000-share block of the stock changed hands at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.22 to 1,208.92.

Declines outpaced advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 4670 million shares, against 55.53 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 14 to 96.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .01 at 202.42.

Spending in the race topped $7 million as Martin steadily outgained Edmisten, who suffered from intra-party squabbles caused by a divisive 10-candidate May primary election. Edmisten said later it was "every man for himself" and that party unity had evaporated.

On March 7, lawmen hunted two escaped killers from Tennessee who were trapped in the mountain town of Marion. One escapee was shot to death in an abandoned house as he tried to kill a lawman. The other was dragged from under a storage shed and sent back to Tennessee for trial.

The drama was intensified by the wounding of a state trooper, and the heart attack death of a woman who came face-to-face with the fugitives.

Another fugitive drama was played out in Warren County in May and June as a manhunt was mounted to find six death row inmates who fled Virginia's maximum security prison. No one was hurt or killed.

Dollar Stronger

LONDON (AP) — The dollar emerged from Europe's long Christmas holiday with a strong showing today in what dealers said was a thin market. Gold prices headed lower.

On Wednesday, while virtually all European markets were closed for post-Christmas holidays, the dollar was gaining ground in New York and Tokyo on the strength of corporate demand and rising interest rates.

Today, the dollar solidified on that ground. It advanced for the second straight day against the Japanese yen, closing at 249.03 yen, compared with Tuesday's 248.33. Later, in London, it was quoted at 249.65 yen.

Other European dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday, the last day all markets were open here:

-3.1360 West German marks, up from 3.1200.
-2.5890 Swiss francs, up from 2.5725.
-6.9025 French francs, up from 9.5425.
-3.5438 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5250.
-1,925.00 Italian lire, up from 1,920.00.
-1.31695 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3160.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.695, compared with $1.1740 Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $311.20 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $313.25. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $310.25.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $310, down from $311.50 at the close of Switzerland's last business day, Friday.

Clarification

A news article in Wednesday's edition of The Daily Reflector, listing several break-ins under investigation by Greenville police, identified Anne Halevy as a resident of 312 E. 12th St., the site of one of the break-ins.

Ms. Halevy is not a resident of the 12th Street home, although she did report the break-in to police.

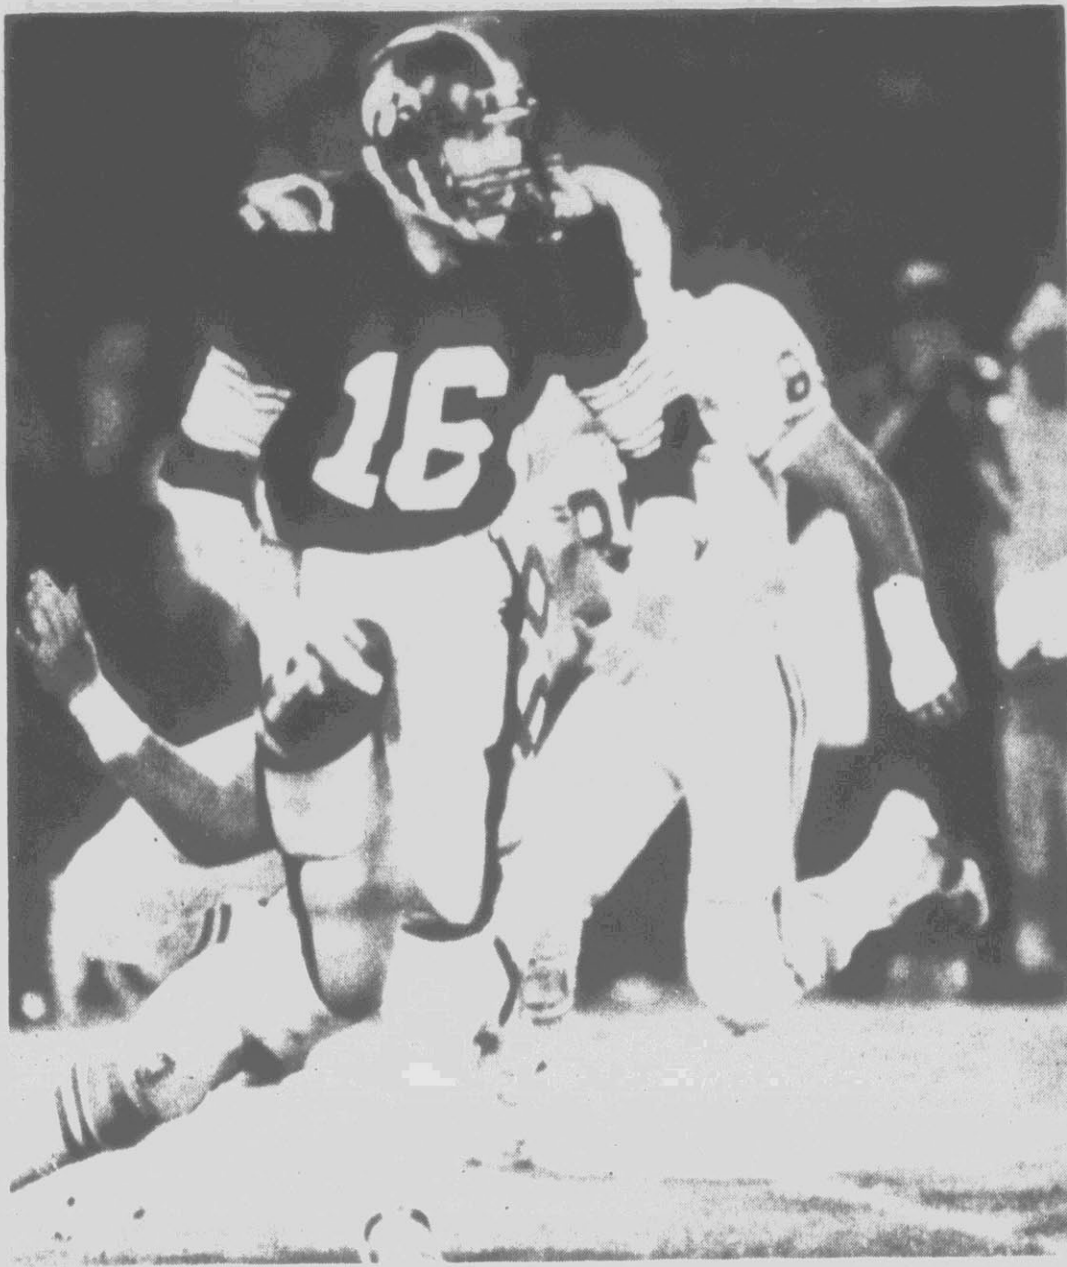

Two Virginia fugitives were captured in Warrenton as they ate cheese and drank wine in a coin laundry. Two more were captured in Vermont nine days later. The final two were nabbed as they barbecued chicken in Philadelphia.

The state's textile economy suffered in 1984, losing 6,659 jobs and 38 textile or related plants. Textile exports dropped 50 percent from 1982 while imports increased.

Textile officials called for global import quotas to stave off foreign competition that used cheaper labor to produce basic textile products.

On April 15, a Winston-Salem federal jury acquitted nine Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis on civil rights charges stemming from the 1979 slayings of five anti-Klan demonstrators in Greensboro.

Six Klansmen and Nazis had been found innocent of murder in a 1980 state trial. The nine Klansmen and Nazis, including five of the original defendants, were indicted in 1983 on federal civil rights charges after civil rights and church groups blasted the acquittals.

Pirates Return To Action In First Tulsa Classic

Once again, the East Carolina Pirates try to do what they've never done before — win a holiday basketball tournament — as they open play in the First Tulsa Classic Friday night in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

And, as they have been in recent years, the Pirates are paired up against the host team in the first round of play, facing the Tulsa Golden Hurricane in a game set to begin at 9 p.m. North Texas State and Alcorn State meet in the other first round game at 7 p.m.

Saturday night, the consolation game between the Friday losers will be held at 7 p.m. with the winners meeting for the title at 9 p.m.

The last time a Pirate team made the finals of a tournament was during the 1978-79 season when they defeated Manhattan, 74-71, in the first round of the U-Conn Classic, but they lost to hosting Connecticut, 80-68, in the finals.

Ironically, the time before that also also in the U-Conn Classic, during the 1974-75 season when the Pirates beat Baylor, 73-57, then lost to Connecticut in the championship game, 79-78, on a last second shot.

Friday night's game marks the fourth straight tournament in which the Pirates have faced the host team in the first round.

East Carolina brings a 3-3 record into the tournament, having lost their last outing to Wake Forest University a week ago.

Tulsa, meanwhile, is 5-2, having won its last two in a row, over Drexel — a former Pirate foe — and Oklahoma City.

Drexel is the only common opponent for the two teams, ECU having lost to the Dragons, 80-73, and Tulsa coming away with a victory over Drexel, 86-62.

The Golden Hurricane also has an impressive record on its home court, the Tulsa Convention Center Arena. They've won 12 straight since losing to Illinois State on January 19, 1984.

The Hurricane is expected to start 6-10 senior Herbert Johnson and 6-6 senior Vince Williams at the forwards with 6-9 sophomore Anthony Fobbs at center. The guards will be 6-5 freshman Tracy Moore and 6-5 senior Steve Harris.

Harris is the leading scorer for the team with a 20.2 average, while Johnson is hitting 16.0 points per game.

While Tulsa is the host team, the other three teams in the field may find themselves familiar with one another. All three were the visiting teams for last year's River City Shootout at Bradley University. East Carolina lost to North Texas State, 62-58, in the consolation game of that tournament.

Following the tournament, the Pirates return to Greenville to play host to Boston University on Thursday, Jan. 3.

Fuller Says He's Ready To Take On The Redskins

By The Associated Press
Quarterback Steve Fuller's battered right shoulder is OK. Now, he'll shoulder the burden of leading the Chicago Bears against the Washington Redskins in this weekend's National Football League playoffs.

"I'm too excited right now to be apprehensive," Fuller said as he prepared for Sunday's game at Washington's RFK Stadium.

The game will mark Fuller's fifth start this season with the NFC Central champion Bears. He began the year as a backup to Jim McMahon and suffered a separated shoulder in the team's first exhibition game.

But when McMahon got a lacerated kidney in a Nov. 4 game, Fuller took over. Soon thereafter, Fuller re-injured his shoulder and was again out of action.

Now, he's back and ready to take on the NFC East champion Redskins.

"We don't anticipate a problem,"

Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Wednesday. "The real test will come when he takes a blow on the shoulder. But we, and our line, know we have got to protect him."

In the other NFC playoff game, wild-card survivor New York will travel to San Francisco to play the West champion 49ers Saturday. The Giants advanced with a 16-13 victory last Saturday over the Los Angeles Rams.

In American Football Conference playoff games, wild card Seattle will play at East champion Miami on Saturday while Central winner Pittsburgh will play in Denver on Sunday.

Washington finished second in the NFL in quarterback sacks with 66. Chicago led the league with 72.

"I think it will be tough on both quarterbacks to pass because of all the sacks," Ditka said.

The success of the Bears may not depend on Fuller. Chicago often relies on its ground game and Walter Payton, who was the NFL's second-leading rusher with 1,684 yards and 11 touchdowns.

"I know they are tough against the run, but I feel we can run on anybody," Ditka said. "I don't think their front four is that much better than Dallas, the Raiders or Seattle and we did pretty well against them."

Ditka says his team will have one other factor to contend with — the crowd.

"They will be in a pressure type game for the first time before a hostile crowd," Ditka said of the Bears. "There is no way they can envision what they are getting into."

"It is an unusual crowd of some 52,000 tightly compacted together — with no friends. The Seattle dome echoes more but no stadium crowd sounds louder than the one in Washington."

The 49ers were 15-1 this season.

the best record in the NFL. One of those victories was a 31-10 triumph over the Giants.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana figures to like what he sees against an injury-depleted New York secondary.

"I think the forward pass is the way we would approach the game with the Giants," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said.

Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg threw 32 TD passes this season, second in the NFL only to the 48 thrown by Miami's Dan Marino. Yet in a wild-card playoff victory over the Los Angeles Raiders, Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox had Krieg throw just 10 times.

What will the game plan be against the Dolphins?

Nixon Upsets Top Seed Lloyd

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Unseeded American Randy Nixon stunned top-seeded John Lloyd of Great Britain today in the opening round of the $100,000 Victorian Open tennis tournament.

Nixon, ranked 232nd in the world and in his first year on the circuit, stunned Lloyd in three sets, winning 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

In other first-round matches, Christo VanRensburg of South Africa took American Mike Bauer 7-5, 6-2; Dan Cassidy of the U.S. whipped John Frawley of Australia 6-4, 6-3; Aussie Peter Doohan beat countryman John Alexander 6-4, 6-4; Aussie Wally Masur ousted Danny Saltz of the U.S. 6-3, 6-3; Aussie John Fitzgerald eliminated David Mustard of New Zealand 6-2, 6-3, and Brad Drevett won an all-Aussie matchup with Brod Dyke 6-2, 7-6.

Iowa's Quarterback Guides Hawkeyes To 55-17 Victory

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Iowa quarterback Chuck Long still doesn't know if he wants to be a professional football player next year, but if he asked the Texas Longhorns, they'd probably tell him to do it.

That way, they'd be sure they'd never have to face him again.

In what may or may not have been his final game as a collegian, Long enjoyed his Christmas feast one day late, carving up the Texas secondary for 461 yards and six touchdowns passes in leading the Hawkeyes to a 55-17 rout Wednesday night in the first Freedom Bowl.

"He was everything we saw in the films," a stunned Texas Coach Fred Akers said. "He was as perfect as I've ever seen a quarterback be."

Long wasn't quite perfect, but he was close. The 6-foot-4, 202-pounder misfired on his first four passes, but bounced back to complete 29 of 39 attempts in a driving rain, including 11 straight at the end of the first half and beginning of the second.

The yardage, touchdowns and completions were school records, along with his 481 yards in total offense. The six TD passes are believed to be the most ever thrown in any bowl game.

"For a wet ball and throwing against a man-to-man where you have to throw perfect strikes, he was fantastic," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said.

"He's not the picture perfect passer. All he does is throw strikes. He's so poised and so calm and he probably reads coverages better than any quarterback in America. He almost never throws to the wrong guy."

Long, a two-time All-Big Ten Conference pick who finished seventh in the Heisman Trophy voting this year, has to make a decision about his future because he could either return to Iowa next fall for another season or declare himself eligible for the NFL and USFL drafts.

Long, who has thrown for 7,164 yards in his Iowa career, said he still hasn't made up his mind.

"This was a good game to end the year on, but I still want to sit down and think about my decision," said Long, who pulled himself out of consideration for postseason all-star games in case he wanted to stay at Iowa. "I don't want this game to have any bearing on what I do."

"I want to go home, sit down for about a month and think about it, talk to some people and then make up my mind."

Long was at his best in the third quarter, when he engineered a 31-point explosion that turned the game into a laughter after Iowa led only 24-17 at halftime. He completed 12 of 14 passes for 241 yards in the quarter, including scoring strikes of 33 yards to Bill Happel, 49 yards to Robert Smith, four yards to Scott Helverson and 15 yards to Jonathan Hayes.

Hayes, a tight end, caught a 6-yard TD pass from Long in the first quarter and his backup, Mike Flagg, grabbed an 11-yarder later in the period.

"I told our guys at halftime that whichever team got the big plays in the third quarter would win," said Akers, whose team lost four of its last five games and finished 7-4-1 after being ranked No. 1 nationally at one point.

"I felt that if we made the plays, we would win. We didn't. They made the big plays and won."

Fullback Fred Bush scored a first-half touchdown for Iowa on a 1-yard run and Tom Nichol added field goals of 27 and 35 yards as the Hawkeyes (8-4-1) ran up the highest point total ever against Texas in modern times.

The most points a Texas team ever allowed came in a 68-0 loss to the University of Chicago in 1904.

"Our guys certainly played inspirational football against a good Texas team," Fry said. "Texas is usually one of the best defensive teams in the country. I never dreamed we could throw the ball on them like that, especially in the rain."

The victory was especially meaningful for Fry because he was born in Texas, played at Baylor and coached for 11 years at Southern Methodist and six at North Texas State before taking the Iowa job. He had won only two of 13 previous games against the Longhorns, with the last victory back in 1966.

"It was a great team victory, one that the coaching staff, especially myself, wanted very badly," Fry said. "Being from Texas, you don't get a chance to beat the University of Texas very often."

"I was trying to keep it low key going into the game, but I've never had a victory mean more to me than this one."

Not many people saw Fry's special moment. Only 24,000 people showed up at 69,000-seat Anaheim to watch the game, although Tom Starr, executive director of the Freedom Bowl, said about 30,000 tickets were sold.

Starr said the rain, which began in the early afternoon and continued the rest of the day, hurt the chances of a good "walk up" crowd, which officials were counting on to boost attendance at the inaugural game.

After spotting Iowa a 14-0 lead, Texas came back behind quarterback Todd Dodge to make things interesting in the second quarter. Dodge threw touchdown passes of 11 yards to Billy Boy Bryant and one yard to William Harris and Jett Ward kicked a 46-yard field goal.

But Iowa, which led the Big Ten in the four major defensive categories this year, shut down the Longhorns in the second half, limiting them to 112 yards, recovering two fumbles and intercepting a pass.

Dodge completed 16 of 32 passes for 189 yards, but was sacked five times. Long was never sacked and did not throw an interception.

"We couldn't get enough heat on him," Akers said. "We had to blitz too often to get pressure on him. That forced us to play man-to-man, which was not effective."

"We had some awfully young defensive backs out there. I really felt for them."

FBI Telling It How It Can Be

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Ten years ago, athletes in the Atlantic Coast Conference might have stared wide-eyed at an FBI agent who explained the problems drugs and gambling can present in athletics.

Today, it's nothing they haven't already heard before.

So when North Carolina FBI agent Chuck Richards travels from school to school in the ACC, he tells athletes about the consequences of drug use and gambling. He says that usually gets their attention.

"We're the man," Richards said. "We are the FBI. We're the badge. We mean business and it may be prison."

Richards, a former professional basketball player, said the FBI began a program two years ago in October in which 12 agents travel to professional teams in football, basketball, baseball and hockey. He also travels in the ACC, giving the same speech.

Richards was in Kansas City a week before Royal's player Willie Aikens was charged with drug possession. He winces when he reads that Durham native John Lucas was booted from the National Basketball Association because of drug use. But they are the examples he uses in his speeches to ACC players. He carries a portfolio of clippings from magazines and newspapers to graphically illustrate his message.

"In pro sports, we spent from one to three hours with the coaches, players, trainers and owners," Richards said. "Most are interested. They are aware of the problem. The FBI picked former players who are now agents because they understand the travel problems and understand the players. They are more receptive to that."

Richards holds a group talk with the professional players, with no coaches or management. He says it is not an interrogation — but an information session. But he said players are given the opportunity to tell agents in confidence what they know or suspect. He employs the same tact with the ACC teams.

"This is not to scare athletes, but to let them know the pressures," Richards said. "We tell them what's going to happen if they get caught."

Jim Valvano, head basketball coach at N.C. State, admits that the effect may be a little frightening.

"At one point, it was the shock value," Valvano said of the FBI's effort. "Telling a kid the extent of it and the legal ramifications — that's scary. The FBI is out there. You better think twice about it."

Valvano said the FBI's involvement with college basketball players isn't new.

"They were doing it at Iowa when I was there 10 years ago," Valvano said. But 10 years ago, no one talked about drugs. It was gambling and point shaving. Now drugs are more of an issue with the kids."

The FBI is bringing the issue to the front with videotapes of bookies placing bets, Valvano said. He said coaches are also being made more aware of the drug problems by receiving instructions on what the warning signs of drug abuse are.

Price Leads Georgia Tech Past Arkansas Five, 75-52

HONOLULU (AP) — When Georgia Tech guard Mark Price first began playing four years ago, no one in the country considered the Yellow Jackets much of a basketball team.

But Price said that started to change when the Yellow Jackets began beating some talented teams. And it is continuing.

"We beat a good basketball team tonight," Price said after scoring a game-high 22 points to lead 10th-ranked Georgia Tech to a 75-52 victory over Arkansas on Wednesday night in opening round of the Rainbow Classic college basketball tournament.

Georgia Tech faces Washington tonight in a semifinal game. The Huskies advanced with a 72-59 victory over Iowa State in Wednesday's other opening-round match. Host Hawaii meets Maryland in tonight's other semifinal meeting.

The Rainbow Classic games were the only action Wednesday featuring ranked teams.

Price's shooting was complemented by the play of teammate Bruce Dalrymple, who had a game-high 11 rebounds to go with 11 points, four assists and two steals.

"I think Bruce Dalrymple is the one of the best rebounding guards in the United States," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins. "He's incredible."

Arkansas jumped to an early 8-4 lead, only to see the Yellow Jackets, now 8-1, score 16 unanswered points to take a 20-8 lead with 8:42 to play in the first half.

Georgia Tech did not score a field goal for the rest of the half while Arkansas came back with 11 straight points before Georgia Tech managed to gain a 26-20 halftime edge.

Joseph Kleine, who scored 16 points to lead Arkansas, cut the lead to 26-23 as the second half began. Georgia Tech then scored 10 straight points to take a 36-23 lead before Arkansas could score again on a field goal by Darryl Scott with 16:43 to play.

Arkansas closed the margin to 42-33 on a follow shot by Charles Balentine with 13:47 to play. Balentine fouled out 13 seconds later to hamper chances the Razorbacks could pull out a victory.

Georgia Tech went on another streak, outscoring Arkansas 11-3, to take a commanding 53-36 lead with 9:36 to play as John Salley led the surge with six points.

Salley, a 6-foot-11 forward, scored 14 points and Yvon Joseph, also 6-11, had 12 points for the Yellow Jackets.

In the first game, Detlef Shrempf, one-half of the West German connection on the University of Washington basketball team, was feeling the effects of a slight case of the flu. But his roommate, 7-foot West German center Chris Welp, picked up the slack.

"When Detlef is off his game, I know we have to take over," Welp said following Washington's 72-59 victory. "The other teams tend to double or triple-team Detlef, leaving me and Paul (Fortier) open."

Welp, who played on the West German Olympic team, scored 14 of his 20 points for the game in the first half as the 11th-ranked Huskies, now 6-1, took a 39-30 halftime lead.

The Cyclones slowed Welp in the second half, enabling Shrempf, who scored 18 points, and Fortier, who had 16, to lead the way. The Huskies gained 58-45 lead with 6:57 to play before Iowa State made one last push, cutting the margin to five at 60-55 with 3:24 remaining.

Shrempf hit four free throws and Welp had a pair to enable the Huskies to pull away to their final margin.

Washington jumped to a 10-4 lead on three baskets by Welp and increased it to seven at 24-17 with 6:56 to play in the half before Iowa State went into a full court press and cut the margin to 28-27 with 4:47 to go.

Shrempf then hit a jumpshot and a free throw and Gary Gardner hit a long set shot to give the Huskies some breathing room. The team slowly increased the lead to the 39-30 halftime margin.

Monarchs, Wolfpack Play In Holiday Festival Event

NEW YORK (AP) — How times change.

St. John's basketball coach Lou Carnesecca was psyching himself up the other day for tonight's appearance against Old Dominion in the opening round of the Holiday Festival Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

"Brian says they have better talent than UCLA," the veteran coach said.

Carnesecca was referring to his top aide, Brian Mahoney, who has scouted Old Dominion, a school probably better known for its powerful women's teams.

As have most teams this season, St. John's, ranked No. 5 nationally, had no trouble in disposing of the once-mighty Bruins, 88-69 in its last start, running the Redmen's record to 6-1 and sinking UCLA to 2-5.

Old Dominion, 5-1, makes its Garden debut in the opening game of tonight's double-header. Fourteen-ranked North Carolina State plays Rutgers in the second game.

"We're still not touching the surface on how good we can be," said Chris Mullin, a 6-foot-6 senior and the leading scorer in Redmen history. "It takes time. It's kind of frustrating, really. We haven't played up to our potential yet."

While Mullin has been averaging 18.1 points, junior college transfer Walter Berry, a 6-8 forward, has provided scoring (15.3) and rebounding strength (8.6). Seven-foot Bill

Wennington, 6-6 Willie Glass and Mike Moses round out the starters.

Old Dominion's Monarchs, who have won five straight after losing their opener to Virginia Tech, has a front line of 6-5 Mark Davis, 6-8 Kenny Gattison and 6-10 Clarence Hanley and a backcourt of Keith Thomas and Charlie Smith.

All five starters are averaging double figures.

N.C. State has knocked off Campbell, UC-Santa Barbara, Hartford, North Carolina A&T, Western Carolina and St. Francis (Pa.) and lost to Georgia Tech 66-64.

The Wolfpack will be playing its first game without Chris Washburn, a 6-11, 250-pound freshman starter who had been averaging 10.7 points and 5.9 rebounds.

Washburn was suspended from the team after being arrested on a second-degree burglary charge. His future status awaits a Jan. 8 court hearing in Raleigh.

Coach Jim Valvano has three holdover starters from his 1982 NCAA championship team — 6-7 Lorenzo Charles, the team's leading scorer with an 18.7 mark, 6-11 Cozell McQueen (9.1) and guard Ernie Myers (11.3).

Rutgers, Valvano's alma mater, is led by guard John Battle, who has been averaging 24 points. The Scarlet Knight also have been bolstered the return of Eric Riggins and Brian Ellerbe. Both had been sidelined with injuries.

The 33rd Festival title will be held Saturday.

Whitson Expects To Be A Yankee

NEW YORK (AP) — Free agent pitcher Ed Whitson figures to be wearing the pinstripes of the New York Yankees next season.

Attempting to rebuild an aging, injury-plagued pitching staff, the Yankees have agreed to a contract with the right-hander, according to a source close to the negotiations.

The Yankees called a news conference for today at which they were expected to announce the signing.

Finalists in the running for Whitson as late as last week had included the San Diego Padres, for whom he pitched last season, and the Atlanta Braves, who already had signed free-agent reliever Bruce Sutter from St. Louis.

According to the source, the 29-year-old Whitson has agreed to a five-year contract worth about $4.5 million. Shortly after the draft, Whitson's agent, Tom Reich, said Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner had been "very strident that Ed is his clear, No. 1 priority."

Jack McKeon, general manager of the Padres, said he understood the Braves' offer was about the same as that of by the Yankees, while the Padres offered "three years, then moved it up to four."

Whitson joins a Yankee staff that includes 45-year-old Phil Niekro, 16-8 in 1984 but ineffective late in the season; 34-year-old Ron Guidry, who finished below .500 for the first time in his career with a 10-11 mark, and John Montefusco and Marty Bystrom, both of whom have been injured.

Whitson had an earned run average of 3.24 and led the Padres with 103 strikeouts in 189 innings. His 14 victories tied Mark Thurmond for the second-highest total on the club.

Whitson was the winner in Game Three of the National League playoffs against the Chicago Cubs, giving up one run on five hits in eight innings as the Padres beat the Cubs 7-1 and began their comeback from an 0-2 deficit in the best-of-five series. In San Diego's five-game loss to Detroit in the World Series, Whitson lasted only two-thirds of an inning in Game Two, although the Padres won 5-3.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

The recent dismissal of Coach Ed Emory has been the subject of much controversy for several weeks. Articles printed by Sportline have blatantly attacked the athletic committee, Dr. Karr, and Dr. Howell, respectively. Condemnation seldom elicits any positive effect to a worthwhile program.

While petitions continue to circulate in support of Coach Emory, many are unwilling to accept the coaching change. Art Baker, the successor, has demonstrated both credibility in the coaching profession as well as the desire to pursue the respect and recognition prerequisite to any viable program.

Those individuals who have courageously assumed the responsibility for the coaching change, made a decision they felt necessary to the future of the athletic program. Art Baker deserves an equal opportunity to incorporate his ideas to assure integrity and continued success of East Carolina athletics. Webster's Dictionary defines integrity as "the quality or state of being complete or undivided." The choice remains with all East Carolina supporters, united we stand or divided we fall.

Gminski Gets In His Time

By The Associated Press

Darryl Dawkins isn't doing much for his career sitting on the bench with an injury — but he is doing a lot for Mike Gminski.

The 6-foot-11 center from Duke University has been flourishing in Dawkins' absence, and Wednesday night continued his fine play of late with 24 points and 13 rebounds to help the New Jersey Nets beat the Detroit Pistons 112-97.

"It's a great feeling for me to have contributed like this, getting these kinds of numbers," Gminski said.

On Tuesday night, Gminski recorded season highs of 27 points and 14 rebounds when the Nets overcame Bernard King's 60 points to beat the New York Knicks 120-114.

"In the past, I hadn't been an integral part of the offense," said Gminski. "When you get those shots as part of the offense, you're going to score 15 to 18 points a night."

In other National Basketball Association action, it was Washington 119, Indiana 89; Dallas 124, Los Angeles Clippers 118; Milwaukee 97, Houston 87; Boston 119, Phoenix 114; Atlanta 117, New York 105; Utah 133, Kansas City 122; Denver 130, San Antonio 119, and Los Angeles Lakers 101, Seattle 97.

Dawkins hasn't been the only Nets' player out with an injury of late. Also missing from the lineup have been Otis Birdsong, Mike O'Koren, Albert King and Darwin Cook.

On Wednesday night, they all sat and watched, sidelined by injuries, as Nets Coach Stan Albeck employed Mike Wilson, Kevin McKenna, and Chris Engler — all under 10-day contracts — in beating the Pistons.

The Nets received fine performances from three regulars. In addition to Gminski, Micheal Ray Richardson collected 26 points, nine assists and eight rebounds and Buck Williams had 24 points and 16 rebounds.

"We didn't play with any emotion and it was quite embarrassing," said Detroit's Kelly Tripucka. "Our pride was dented out there."

Bullets 119, Pacers 89

Jeff Malone scored a game-high 25 points, while Dudley Bradley added 22 and Jeff Ruland 18 to lead

Washington over Indiana. The Bullet guards were able to score almost at will, combining for 64 points. Malone hit 11 of 18 shots, while Bradley connected on eight of 11, including three 3-pointers as he tied his career high.

Ruland scored all of his points in the second half. With the Pacers double-teaming him, Ruland didn't get a shot in the opening half.

"I think the last time I didn't get a shot in a half was probably the eighth or ninth grade," Ruland said.

Mavericks 124, Clippers 118

Mark Aguirre scored 31 points and the Mavericks held off a late Clipper charge led by Norm Nixon, who recorded his 5,000th career assist.

Nixon scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, including a basket that pulled LA to within 116-110 with 2:06 to play. A Michael Cage free throw made it 116-111 before Dallas' Jay Vincent and Rolando Blackman hit back-to-back jumpers to put the Mavericks out of reach at 120-111 with 1:02 to play.

Bucks 97, Rockets 87

Sidney Moncrief scored 23 points and Terry Cummings added 21 to lead the Bucks to their sixth consecutive victory.

After the Bucks opened a 90-76 lead with 6:04 left to play, the Rockets cut the margin to 90-85 on Craig Ehlo's two free throws at 2:51. But two free throws by Moncrief and one by Cummings, followed by a basket by Alton Lister, moved the Bucks ahead 95-85, and they stayed in control the rest of the way.

Celtics 119, Suns 114

Larry Bird, limited to one point in a lopsided second period, scored 20 of his 34 in the second half as the Celtics beat the Suns.

Phoenix had led 69-57 at halftime after outscoring the Celtics 43-23 with the 43 second-quarter points being a season-high. But Bird then poured in 16 points in the third period — 12 coming in a 3:48 span — as Boston closed the gap to 95-89. Dennis Johnson, who had eight of his 21 points in the final quarter, put the Celtics ahead to stay at 97-96 on a jumper with 9:28 to go.

Hawks 117, Knicks 105

Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points to lead the Hawks over the Knicks. NBA scoring leader Bernard King, who had a season-high 60 points Tuesday night against New Jersey, had a game-high 36 points in another losing cause.

The Hawks, playing the fifth of 12 home games this season in New Orleans, took command from the start, leading 37-21 at the end of the first quarter and extending it to 69-44 at the half.

Jazz 133, Kings 122

Adrian Danley scored 41 points and Darrell Griffith set a league record for three-point field goals in a career as the Jazz downed the Kings.

Dantley scored 31 points in the first half as Utah threatened to blow the Kings out early. But Kansas City, led by Eddie Johnson and rookie Otis Thorpe, came back to make a game of it.

Griffith had three 3-point field goals in the game, giving him 197 in his career and breaking the old NBA record of 194 set by Joe Hassett of Golden State.

Nuggets 130, Spurs 119

Mike Evans scored all 18 of his points in the first half and Alex English took over the scoring lead in the second half, finishing with 31, to spark the Nuggets over the Spurs.

Evans came off the bench early in the game when starter Lafayette Lever picked up two quick fouls, and he fueled a spurt that produced a 10-point lead with 3½ minutes left in the opening quarter. The Spurs were never able to catch up, although they cut the Denver margin to 62-61 with 1:30 left in the first half.

Lakers 101, SuperSonics 97

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 24 points to pace the Lakers over the SuperSonics for their fifth straight win. Magic Johnson added 18 points and Bob McAdoo had 17 for the Lakers. McAdoo became the 18th player to score 18,000 points in an NBA career.

This was the Lakers' first win over Seattle this season, following three losses. It increased the Lakers' Pacific Division lead to four games over the Phoenix Suns.

Collier Keeping Steelers Guessing

DENVER (AP) — You never know what to expect when Joe Collier tinkers with his fine-tuned defense, and the Denver Broncos' defensive coordinator intends to keep the Pittsburgh Steelers guessing in Sunday's National Football League playoff game.

When the Steelers' two Pro Bowl wide receivers, John Stallworth and Louis Lipps, line up in their usual positions, Stallworth would expect to be working against Denver cornerback Mike Harden and Lipps against Mike Wright.

The last three games, however, Collier has occasionally flip-flopped his cornerbacks, with Wright, the left cornerback, going to the right side, and Harden switching to Wright's spot. The moves were made to take advantage of certain matchups; in the season finale Wright spent most of his time on the right side defending against Seattle's deep threat, Darryl Turner.

Turner is a long-strider, like Wright, and thus that matchup. Turner, after all, had beaten Harden on a bomb on the first play of the previous meeting between the two teams.

But if Collier plans to have Wright working primarily against the lanky, long-striding Stallworth or against the shorter but faster Lipps on Sunday, he isn't saying. And neither are the Denver cornerbacks.

"We may mix things up, but I'm not sure how much," said Wright. "It probably will depend on certain situations. Either way, though, we're going to have our hands full."

This season, Stallworth caught a career-high 80 passes for 1,395 yards and 11 touchdowns. Lipps, a rookie, had 45 catches for 860 yards and nine scores, besides being one of the league's best kick returners.

"Stallworth has the experience, and we pretty much know what he's capable of," said Wright, one of the league's most respected defenders. "Lipps plays like he has a lot of experience. He makes adjustments to his patterns whenever a play is disrupted. He keeps working to get open, and that's unusual for a rookie. We have a lot of respect for both of them. They're both very dangerous."

Paultz, Reid Appreciate The Pampered NBA Life

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Don't count Utah's Billy Paultz and Houston's Robert Reid among the professional athletes who don't appreciate their pampered status.

When Reid sat out the 1982-83 National Basketball Association season for religious reasons, he worked at a discount market and learned lessons that he won't ever forget.

"When I worked for 40 hours and got a check for $225, I cried," Reid said. "I said, 'I got more than this for per diem in training camp.' A lot of guys lose their perspective. There's not another job in the world that will pay us this kind of money for what we do and the kind of time we put into it."

Paultz says the same thing a little differently.

"The hours are good, the pay is good, for the most part you meet good people, you stay in shape, you get summers off and sometimes you get your name in the paper. That's a lot of perks," said Paultz, a 15-year pro.

Micheal Ray Richardson says he is playing the best basketball of his career of late, and he credits patience for his improvement.

"When I came into the league, I got a reputation of being out of control," Richardson said. "I don't think I really deserved that, but I definitely have more patience now. I'm trying hard not to rush my shots."

Rookie Michael Jordan has prompted the NBA to change its rules for the slam-dunk contest to be held in Indianapolis on Feb. 9, the day before the All-Star Game.

Last season, the rules limited entries to one player per team, but Jordan's teammate, Orlando Woolridge, put on such a good show last season that it was decided it would be unfair to exclude him. There was never any question that Jordan might be excluded.

Despite Boston's fast start, Celtics Coach K.C. Jones says his team's goals do not include equalling the NBA record of 69-13 by the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers.

"Injuries are our biggest concern," Jones said. "We try to just keep our minds on just the next game. We don't really care about a certain number of victories."

The Celtics lost 110-85 to Chicago last Saturday night when both Kevin McHale and Dennis Johnson were sidelined with ankle problems. It was the first time this season that Boston has been noticeably hampered by injuries.

"We've been lucky so far," said last season's Most Valuable Player, Larry Bird. "Nearly every team we've played has had a lot of injuries and we haven't had any to speak of. Detroit, New York and New Jersey have had a lot of injuries and we've played them all at least twice."

Liberty Win May Redeem Season

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Both Arkansas and Auburn view their meeting in the 26th Annual Liberty Bowl tonight as a way to redeem disappointing losses at the end of the regular season.

Arkansas dropped out of contention for the Southwestern Conference championship by losing its last game to SMU 31-28, while Auburn's 17-15 loss to Alabama kept the Southeastern Conference Tigers out of the Sugar Bowl.

Arkansas, 7-3-1 under first-year coach Ken Hatfield, didn't figure in the bowl picture at the start of the season and that may give the Razorbacks, who are 3-point underdogs, extra incentive as they face an 8-4 Auburn team that was a preseason No. 1 choice.

"It always feels good to get to go to a bowl game," Arkansas quarterback Brad Taylor said Wednesday. "It is a great opportunity for us to play a team like Auburn. They compare to SMU and Houston in our league. They are big and physical. It will take one of our best offensive games to move the ball."

While the Razorbacks will be smaller man-for-man against the Tigers, Hatfield hopes his Flexbone offense — which splits receivers and running backs out of an option set — will continue to be effective.

Using the diverse Flexbone, the Razorbacks were able to run more offensive plays than any team in the SWC while having their defense defend against less plays than any other team in the league.

"Our offense may go 1 yard on the first play and 2 yards on the second, but on the third play we may go 90 yards," said Taylor, who is Arkansas' all-time passing and total offense leader.

The Razorbacks' hope to control the ball with their Flexbone and keep Auburn running back Bo Jackson on the bench.

Jackson, who missed several games with a shoulder injury is

Stevenson Is Enjoying 'Bad Guy' Role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is that Parker Stevenson, former "Hardy Boy," playing a bad guy? How about bigamy to start with, then rape and blackmail?
Stevenson is the new resident villain on CBS' "Falcon Crest." He joined the show this fall and in effect replaced Cliff Robertson, whose character had died in the plane crash that made up the summer cliffhanger.

"Cliff was married to a woman I was also married to," he said. "I show up to stake my claim. My character is bad. He starts out with bigamy, rape and blackmail — and he gets worse. Basically, I'm a one-man crime wave in the Napa Valley. It could apply for a government emergency loan."

Stevenson, blond and handsome, said it was unusual for him to be even considered for such a role, although he did play the arrogant race driver Aubrey James in "Stoker Ace."

"This role lets me go unshaven," he said. "I let my hair grow out and get greasy. I wear old clothes. I look so tacky. But I get mail from people saying they love my new look. New look? I'm just trying to look like a bum."

Stevenson makes his final appearance in February. "I can't tell you exactly what happens, but no one blows me away," he said. "It's left up in the air. Fortunately, I've already been contacted by the producers about coming back. I hope they don't make me a good guy if I come back, a guy who's gotten it together. The only way I'd do that is if I could start out as a good guy then go bad again."

Stevenson sees this as a definite turn in his career, which began while he was still at Princeton and had a role in "A Separate Peace." He also had roles in "Our Time" and "Lifeguard." He moved on to New York University Business School, but left to do "The Hardy Boys." Last year he co-starred with Billy Dee Williams in the pilot movie "Shooting Stars," about two out-of-work actors who become detectives.

His career began to turn around when he did "Stoker Ace," which starred Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson. Stevenson's hobby, oddly enough, is racing. He has his own Panther Racing Team and competes in the I.M.S.A. and Trans Am professional series.

"I was originally supposed to play Jimmy Joe Jones," he said. "I'd prepared a Southern accent, but I ended up as Aubrey James, the bad guy driver in the canary yellow. It sort of put 'The Hardy Boys' to rest."

When he finished that series in 1979 it wasn't hard to get roles — as long as he was willing to play another version of Frank Hardy. "But I'd done that for three years and I didn't want to repeat it," he said. "The difficult thing was getting people to meet with me and discuss new roles."

His real name is Richard Stevenson Parker, but he had to reverse it because another actor with that name was a member of the Screen Actors Guild. SAG does not allow two actors to have the same name, even if it's a real name.

Stevenson is married to actress Kirstie Alley, who stars with Tom Selleck in "Runaway." She also stars as Gloria Steinem in the upcoming ABC movie "A Bunny's Tale," which tells of the time Miss Steinem posed as a Playboy Bunny 21 years ago and wrote about it for a magazine.

Stevenson and Kirstie met at a restaurant through mutual friends when she was doing "Star Trek II."

Lawford Rites Held

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The ashes of actor Peter Lawford, a familiar face on the Washington social scene during the Kennedy administration, were buried during a private service attended by more than 20 relatives and close friends.

The brief service for Lawford, who died Monday at age 61, was held Wednesday night at Westwood Village Mortuary and Cemetery, where Marilyn Monroe and Natalie Wood are buried.

The Rev. Robert Spicer-Smith, an Episcopal priest, and Monsignor Peter Healey, a Roman Catholic, were the only speakers at the service, which included the playing of John Lennon's "Love," said mortuary general manager Bill Pierce.

Lawford's fourth wife, Patricia, 26, planned to invite the British-born actor's many friends to a memorial Mass at an unspecified date at the Good Shepherd Catholic Church in Beverly Hills, Pierce said.

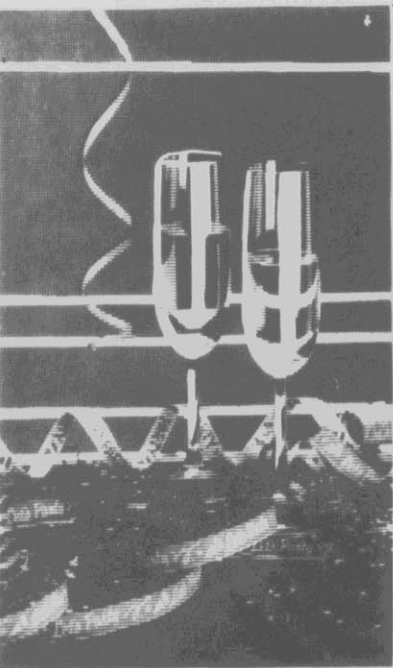

"It will probably be after the first of the year, when all their friends are back in L.A.," he said.

Lawford died of cardiac failure after entering Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Dec. 16. He was married, for 11 years, to Patricia Kennedy Lawford, sister of the late President John F. Kennedy. The couple had four children, and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called his death "a special loss to all of us."

The guest list for the service included Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late president. But Pierce could not confirm who attended, saying only that the mourners included Lawford's children, Christopher, Sydney, Victoria and Robin, and "some of the nieces and nephews."

Episcopal and Catholic priests spoke at the service because Lawford, the son of British aristocrats, was raised in the Church of England, but his widow and children are Catholics.

Lawford died five days after lapsing into a coma, and about 12 hours after being placed on life-support systems. His wife was at his side when his heart stopped beating, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

Dobson Residents Dispute Mayberry Reports, Want Town Name To Remain

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — Mayberry may be a nice place to visit on a nostalgic trip through television reruns, but people in Dobson don't really want to live there.

And national news reports saying they do are causing a stir in the Surry County foothills town.

"My phone's ringing off the hook today with reporters wanting to know about my changing Dobson's name to Mayberry," Dobson native and Town Manager Bob Comer said Wednesday.

"I've been on live radio in Atlanta, Milwaukee and Alberta, Canada, today," he said. "Even CBS News in New York called. The town's oldest citizen, a 95-year-old man who's one of our town fathers, called this morning very upset because he saw on the news that I was changing our name."

Comer says that despite the reports, the town of 1,270 that is 8 miles south of Andy Griffith's real-life hometown of Mount Airy, isn't interested in changing its name, although it might consider opening a museum with Mayberry memorabilia, or redesigning a section of town to look like Mayberry.

"The idea of really changing a town's name is ridiculous," Comer said. "But one thing I'm not kidding about is talking to some developers about building a little village around Dobson as a 'Mayberry, RFD,' with memorabilia and tourist attractions.

"It would be great. We have Pilot Mountain — Mount Pilot on the show — and could draw a lot of people off I-77 who are looking for something to do — places to eat, anyway," said Comer, who is also chairman of the Surry County Economic Development Commission tourism committee.

A few weeks ago, 14-year-old John Meroney of Advance suggested that some small town in North Carolina change its name to Mayberry, the fictional town on The Andy Griffith Show, in honor of the show's 25th anniversary, which is next year.

Comer said that he was surprised that Meroney, a ninth-grader at North Davie Junior High School, could create such a furor with his suggestion. Meroney is also the president of the 500-member Andy Griffith Show Appreciation Society, which is based in Winston-Salem.

But Richard Kelly, an English professor at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville and the author of the book, "The Andy Griffith Show," is not surprised at all. Kelly, a member of the society, said that Meroney is "like a 30-year-old man in the body of a 14-year-old boy. He's persistent."

Kelly, for one, hopes that no town adopts Mayberry's name for its own. "To try and turn a fantasy world into the real world is fundamentally flawed thinking," he said.

Meroney could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

IN THE STATE

Study Finds Fewer But Larger N.C. Dairy Farms

RALEIGH (AP) — Although North Carolina's commercial dairy farms are decreasing in number while increasing in size, they are not likely to become as large as those in the Southwest, an economist at North Carolina State University reports.

But Geoffrey A. Benson, one of three economists who did a study on the state's dairy farms, said the trend toward fewer but larger farms will likely continue.

Farms have decreased about 9 percent in numbers from 1978 to 1983, while average herd size increased 19 percent, according to the recent N.C. State study.

There were 1,349 Grade A milk producers in 1978, but the total fell to 1,222 in 1983. Meanwhile, average herd size increased from 78 cows in 1978 to 92 in 1983. By 1988, herd size is expected to be 100 cows per farm.

Meanwhile, data from the Agriculture Census by the Bureau of Census shows the number of farms declined from 81,706 in 1978 to 72,799 in 1982. Land in farms averaged 135 acres in 1978 and 142 acres in 1982, according to the census.

"Milk production in North Carolina is becoming concentrated in the Piedmont," Benson said. "Herds are declining in the coastal plain and the mountain regions."

He said the Piedmont is better suited for livestock production than for crops because of its rolling landscape.

The study showed yearly milk sales range from 1 million pounds to more than 2 million pounds per farm in North Carolina. About 43 percent of the average 391 acres of land on dairy farms is rented and 86 percent of all dairy farmers studied rented some part of their lands.

Dairy operations provided more than 90 percent of total farm marketings on three out of four dairy farms. Two-thirds had no nonfarm income, the study showed.

Experiment Extended On Courtroom Camera Use

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court says it is still considering the impact of news cameras in courtrooms and has extended the experiment a second time to Dec. 31, 1985.

In a three-paragraph order, the court said that the experiment would be extended for a year provided at least 12 trials were televised between Jan. 1 and Oct. 31. To the end that this court may make a fair determination as to the effect of television on the conduct of the trials.

Neither Chief Justice Joseph Branch nor Henry Frye, the associate justice who signed the order, could be reached for comment Wednesday. Dallas Cameron, Branch's administrative assistant, said he didn't know what criteria, if any, would be used in selecting the 12 trials.

Cameron said he had not discussed the order, issued last week, with any of the justices but assumed it was intended to give the court more opportunity to assess the impact of photo coverage.

"They haven't had many reports on cameras in courtrooms," he said. "They are seeking to have it in there so they can have an evaluation of whether it is a good policy."

In the experiment, the court required cameras not be obtrusive in trials, and booths have been used in courtrooms to hide the photographers and cameras.

The two-year experimental period had been scheduled to end Oct. 31. It was extended through this month after a study by the News Media Administration of Justice Council of North Carolina found little evidence cameras significantly influenced the outcome of trials or otherwise disrupted court proceedings.

Branch said in October the justices had reviewed the study before agreeing to the first extension.

"We need to get some other information," Branch said at the time.

The study included interviews with about 100 people involved in two televised trials of high media interest.

The first trial, which ended October 1983, was that of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who was acquitted of bribery charges. The second trial, which ended in February 1984, Mario Evangelista Villabona Navas was convicted of the murders of his sister and nephew during a siege of an Amtrak train in Raleigh in 1982.

Ski Resort Officials Turn To 'Snow Dance' To Lure Winter Conditions

By The Associated Press

Christmas has passed, but one North Carolina ski resort is hoping that an Indian dance will bring a gift from the gods to the area, which is suffering from a lack of real snow and conditions far too warm to make artificial snow.

Ski Hawksnest, about 120 miles northwest of Charlotte between Boone and Linville, planned to hold "Hawksnest Snow Day," complete with an Indian "snow dance" at noon today.

"We want to bring wintertime back to the mountains," said Hawksnest marketing director Tom Gidley. He said snowfall, about 4 inches there so far, is more than a foot below normal and temperatures since Dec. 1 are above the average by 15 degrees.

Richard Crowe of Cherokee will lead the dance as he did five years ago.

Crowe said the Cherokee Indians don't have a snow dance — or a rain dance for that matter.

"I don't think we have that kind of power," Crowe said. "I wish we did."

"It's a festival dance with the intentions of cold weather and snow," Gidley said Wednesday of the performance. "That's plenty good enough to refer to it as a snow dance. Besides, it snowed last time. It then became a snow dance."

Headless Body Is Discovered

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — The "execution-type" slaying of a man whose hands and head were cut off in an attempt to cover up his identity may be drug-related, authorities in western North Carolina said.

The body was found Wednesday on the shoulder of U.S. 276 about 14 miles north of Brevard just across the Transylvania County line in Haywood County. Chief Investigator Hubert C. Brown of the Transylvania County Sheriff's Department said.

Gidley said at the last — and only other — dance there in 1979, more than a foot of snow fell that day and night.

Of the state's 10 ski resorts, six which planned mid-December openings did not because of what one weather forecaster called "double trouble" — no real snow and weather too warm to make artificial snow.

"We're sitting here twiddling our thumbs while the season's going by," said Jim Head, owner and operator of Scaly Mountain, the southernmost North Carolina ski resort, 45 miles southwest of Asheville.

"It's a total disaster," said Head, who estimated losses at $200,000 so far, almost half a season's revenues. "And there's nothing you can do about it."

Officials at other resorts said they are also having problems. Even the four open ski resorts have had to close at least once during the season which begins in late November or early December, officials said.

"Christmas week is usually a week's worth of Saturdays, but (this year) not for anybody south of New England," said Andrew Corpening, public relations director of Sugar Mountain near Banner Elk.

Appalachian Ski Mountain in Blowing Rock, probably the most fortunate resort, has had to close only one day.

"It's nothing to brag about," General Manager Grady Moretz Jr. said.

Still, Appalachian has seen a 50 percent increase in business this season, despite spotty conditions, Moretz said.

The reason is that conditions were good at the start of the season, he said. Appalachian opened several days earlier than most resorts.

According to the North Carolina Ski Areas Association, about 545,000 skiers pumped more than $61.8 million, including $16.1 million directly to ski areas, into the N.C. economy during the 1981-82 ski season, the most recent figures available.

Life Expectancy In China Rises, World Bank Says

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Life expectancy has risen drastically in China during three decades of communist rule and now the average resident of Shanghai can expect to live nearly as long as the average American, the World Bank says.

In a wide-ranging report touching on several aspects of health care, the bank finds that the most dramatic achievement since the communist government took power has been an increase in life expectancy from 32 years in 1950 to 69 years in 1980.

"Estimates range from 59 years in Guizhou to 72 in Shanghai," says the report compiled by Dean T. Jamison and released this month.

Life expectancy in the United States is now 74.2 years, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

One reason for the jump in China is elimination of many epidemics that once gave China the reputation as the "sick man of Asia," according to the report, titled "China: The Health Sector."

But it adds that there are still 100 million to 200 million people in rural areas of China living under the same bad health conditions as in other poor countries.

The United States has a doctor for every 520 people, Jamison said, compared to one doctor of Western medicine for every 2,220 people in China. But there also are numerous "assistant doctors" as well as practitioners of traditional Chinese medicine, he added.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Jamison suggested that the tendency of Americans to eat too much affects overall U.S. health adversely, noting that in 1980 Americans ate an average of 3,658 calories daily, or 38 percent more than necessary for good nutrition.

By contrast, he estimated the Chinese are getting an average of 2,539 calories each, or about 7 percent above their needs. Jamison noted that such an average suggests malnourishment remains a national problem for China because many individuals would not be eating that much.

Noting the tremendous amount of money spent on health care in the United States compared to China, Jamison said the outlays and comparative life expectancy figures suggest costly treatment does not necessarily yield a significant increase in life expectancy.

"Approximately $280 billion (or almost the gross national product of China) was spent on health care in the U.S.," Jamison's report says of the year 1980. "Life expectancy in urban areas of China is almost as high as in the U.S., suggesting very limited returns, in reduced mortality, to many types of costly investment."

The study says that, as in the Western world, heart disease, cancer and stroke now lead the causes of death in China.

"The approaches to treatment of these diseases developed in the West tend to be extremely costly and of limited efficacy; yet very natural demands for treatment — and efforts by physicians to supply the best available cure — have led to expenditure of vast resources with relatively little health impact," according to the study.

"In the United States, for example, approximately half of all expenditures are for individuals in the last year or two of life."

Infant mortality is still higher in China than the United States — 13 for every 1,000 births in the cities and 23.9 per 1,000 in the country in 1980 — but that is a big drop from the overall national rate of 200 per 1,000 in 1949, when the communist government took over.

In the United States the national rate was 11.2 per 1,000 in 1982.

Twins Have Same Cavities

RACINE, Minn. (AP) — To show how far they go to do everything alike, identical twins Andy and Tony Capelle merely opened their mouths. "We knew they did everything together," said their mother, Marcy. "But we were really surprised that they had identical cavities."

When Dr. Douglas Peak of Spring Valley examined one twin during a recent checkup, he found cavities in four upper teeth and four lower ones.

But he didn't do a double take until he looked in the other's mouth. That twin's cavities were in the same teeth.

Peak told Andy and Tony's

The type of hand that appears in bridge columns does occur at the table with considerable frequency. Here's a lesson in trump management at the recent World Team Olympiad in Seattle, from the match between Brazil and India.

The Brazilian pair conducted a well-reasoned auction to get to slam. Note North's jump shift on an excellent suit and outside ace, even though he had a singleton in his partner's suit and not the sort of point count you usually associate with a jump. South painted a picture of his shape, then leaped to slam in his solid suit when his partner showed club values.

West led a low heart. East won and, since he did not want to help the declarer, Marcelo Branco of Brazil, by shortening his trumps, he shifted to a diamond. Branco won in dummy and cashed two high trumps to reveal the break. Now he needed an extra entry to the table, so he led a club to the jack. When that held, the rest was easy.

Declarer reduced his trumps to the same length as West's by ruffing a heart, then returned to the board with a diamond. When both defenders followed, declarer simply ran winning diamonds from dummy. East could ruff whenever he desired, but declarer would over-ruff, draw the remaining trumps and, if needed, there was still the ace of clubs in dummy as an entry to the high diamonds.

South could have avoided these histrionics. At trick three declarer should have ruffed a heart, and he would then not have needed the club finesse.

parents that the brothers may have the same tooth and oral bacteria configurations, which could account for the identical decay patterns. The twins always have the same things happen to them, said their mother. "If one falls down the other is sure to fall down and have the same injuries," she said. "Their minds even work the same," Mrs. Capelle said. "Many times I'll be upstairs with one and he will bring up a subject out of the blue. And when I go downstairs, the other twin will bring up the same subject. It's happened many times."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 28, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until late afternoon, it is a very good time for you to get into whatever your vital plan for the future happens to be and you can make big progress towards getting constructive results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can have discussions with dynamic persons and this can be very helpful to you, but in the evening don't start any new projects.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Join with pals or associates in some worthwhile new interest that fascinates you and get good results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to complete that work you started and get the approval of higher-ups and gain fine benefits from it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Early get your entertainments for the days ahead nicely arranged so that you can avoid confusion in the evening.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can solve problematical affairs very easily today and later steer clear of an inveterate gossip.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Listen to what others are saying since you can benefit from new ideas picked up here and there.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy at important work that will bring in fine benefits, and later steer clear of an associate who is too demanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan early for the amusement you want in the evening. Get important work done after that and be efficient.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Have quiet conversations with several members of your family and tonight much accord can be reached at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Taking little trips in the company of others, whether for business or personal purposes, can bring good results today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Financial affairs should come first in your activities today, so be clever at them. You can see how to have greater prosperity.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put the ideas in motion which you feel can bring you greater success in the near future. Entertain older persons who mean a lot to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will intuitively know what others are thinking and understand the situation around and know how to proceed and handle all such intelligently. Give good practical training in order to make the most of this natural talent. In adulthood, your progeny will become even more successful.
