Economic Index Posts Big Gain

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge jumped 1.3 percent in November, the biggest gain in nine months, as various business barometers offered new evidence that a four-month slowdown is ending, the Commerce Department reported today.

The sharp increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a revised 0.5 percent drop in October.

Before November, the index had fallen in three of the last five months — something that had not occurred since the recession year of 1981.

The declines had spurred growing concern that a new recession might be imminent. Overall growth, as measured by the gross national product, dipped to an anemic 1.6 percent from July through September — far below rates of 10.1 percent and 7.1 percent turned in during the first and second quarters this year.

However, a variety of economic statistics have pointed to renewed strength last month. Unemployment fell sharply and orders for manufactured durable goods posted their biggest gain in almost four years.

Despite the revival in the domestic economy, the country is still suffering from huge trade deficits.

In a new report today, the Commerce Department said the trade deficit rose to $9.9 billion in November, up 7.6 percent from the October level of $9.2 billion.

The increase stemmed from a 2.7 percent rise in imports and a slight 0.1 percent dip in exports. For the first 11 months of the year, the country has posted a trade deficit of $115.4 billion, virtually guaranteeing that the total deficit will almost double last year's record of $69.4 billion.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators is a compilation of 12 forward-pointing economic measurements.

The increase for November was broad based with nine indicators contributing to the gain.

The biggest boost came from an increase in building permits during November. Other positive factors in order of their influence were a gain in the money supply, an increase in plant and equipment orders, a rise in sensitive materials prices, gains in net business formation and the length of the average workweek, a drop in initial claims for unemployment insurance, a rise in stock prices and in new manufacturers orders for consumer goods.

Two indicators which detracted from the gain were a change in the growth of credit and in the time it takes companies to fill orders.

One measurement, business inventories — was not available when the report was compiled.

The actual index in November rose to 166.6 of its 1967 base, compared to a level of 164.5 percent in October.

The gain of 1.3 percent was the best since a February increase of 1.5 percent. Following that gain, the economy posted some of its best growth of the current recovery.

However, analysts cautioned about reading too much into the latest increase.

"It would be a mistake to get carried away and say things will really bounce back next year," Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics, a Washington forecasting firm, said in advance of today's report. "This is just telling us things are returning to normal."

The government reported last week that overall economic growth bounced back somewhat to a rate of 2.8 percent for the final three months of this year.

Most analysts expect a further strengthening early next year with many predicting growth rates between 3 percent and 4 percent for all of 1985.

While that would be below the 6.7 percent estimated for this year, it would still be strong enough to keep unemployment from rising.

First Lady Hints At Reunion Of President, Son

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan apparently was moving to end his three-year estrangement from son Michael, with the first lady's spokeswoman hinting that a reunion would take place today during the first day of Reagan's New Year's vacation.

Sheila Tate said Thursday when she asked Nancy Reagan about reports that Michael would visit the president today, the first lady "didn't deny it."

The only item on Reagan's public schedule today was a visit to his ear doctor. Otherwise the president and his wife were to spend their two days here in a suite at the Century Plaza Hotel.

In an interview last month, Mrs. Reagan disclosed the troubled relationship between the president and Michael, whom Reagan adopted when he was married to actress Jane Wyman.

Mrs. Reagan said Michael and his father had been estranged for three years. Michael and his wife, Colleen, are the parents of two children — Reagan's only grandchildren.

The president has never met his youngest grandchild, 1½-year-old Ashley.

Since Mrs. Reagan revealed the family problem, Michael said he and his father have had a few telephone conversations. The younger Reagan added he hoped to see his father over the holidays.

Reached at his home Thursday night, Michael would not comment on his plans. "I'm just not talking about anything concerning that. I just want to lay low on that."

The president's other three children, Ron, Patti and Maureen, all live in California and did not spend Christmas with their parents, who celebrated the holiday at the White House.

Mrs. Tate said Ron was with his parents Thursday night, but Patti, who is married to Paul Grilley, was visiting her in-laws in Montana. Mrs. Tate did not know the schedule of Maureen, who lives in Sacramento.

The Reagans arrived here Wednesday in a light rain and were driven to the hotel, where they will remain until they fly to Palm Springs on Saturday.

Reagan's only public activity today was a journey to see John Huse, the ear doctor who fitted him with a hearing aid more than a year ago.

In Palm Springs, where Reagan has celebrated New Year's Eve for about 18 years, he will stay at the walled estate of millionaire publisher Walter Annenberg.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Reagans also will attend a dinner at a Palms Springs country club.

Next Wednesday, the president returns to Los Angeles for a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and then returns to the White House.

Officials Continue Drums Investigation

State environmental management officials said an investigation is continuing into the discovery of a number of chemical drums found in the Tar River at Greenville Wednesday.

"It's a pretty routine investigation at this point," Paul Wilms, assistant director of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management said, adding that a visual check indicated there has been no environmental damage associated with the incident.

Greenville fire-rescue department employees recovered five of the 30-gallon drums from the river Wednesday. Several others found in the river Wednesday and Thursday were left in the river.

The drums, sealed and essentially empty, bore labels indicating they had contained Terr-O-Cide 30, a tobacco fumigant containing ethylene dibromide and chloropicrin.

After learning of the discovery of the barrels, officials at the Greenville Utilities Commission's water plant shut down the raw water intake structure on the river shortly before midnight Wednesday, "strictly as a precautionary measure," spokesman Ron Elks said.

Elks, who said "all the drums were found downstream of the plant," said as "a standard operating procedure ... we will not be withdrawing water from the river for the next couple of days."

In addition, Elks said, water plant employees are "feeding an activated carbon compound" into the water treatment process "to remove any organics" in case "any trace amounts (of the fumigant) find their way into the water."

Elks, noting that the water plant normally treats about six million gallons of water a day, said a 60 million gallon pre-settling impoundment contains "a seven-10 day supply, not including the deep wells, which provide 3-4 million gallons a day."

Oil Ministers Agree On Policing Project

By HANNS NUERBOURK
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The 13 OPEC oil ministers reached unanimous agreement today on a policing mechanism they hope will help prop up slumping oil prices.

The official news agency of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, OPECNA, reported that Nigeraa had joined other members in supporting the monitoring project.

Ecuador's delegation expressed opposition to the plan earlier in the day, but changed its mind after consultation with its government, according to Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela, a nearby nation.

OPEC delegates declined comment as they entered the meeting room just after 11 a.m. today but conference sources said there was general confidence that formal approval would be given to a mechanism designed to ensure production restraint by all members and discourage undercutting of pricing.

Indonesia's oil minister, Subroto, who chairs the conference as current president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Ecuador earlier questioned the "legality" of the proposal to strictly police production and prices.

Chances of the plan's success do not hinge on Ecuador, a small producer. But the decision of Nigeria, one of OPEC's biggest producers, will be crucial. Nigeria, seeking to bolster sagging sales in a time of slackened demand for oil, has not indicated which way it will lean.

Last fall, Nigeria unilaterally lowered its list prices for high-grade light crude oil after independent producers Britain and the Netherlands cut their prices. Nigeria's move seriously damaged OPEC's solidarity.

Although details of the proposed enforcement plan have yet to be disclosed, the proposal is believed to call for independent monitoring of each country's production, exports and prices of crude oil and refined petroleum products, such as gasoline and heating oil.

Thursday's meeting was a resumption of OPEC's regular year-end conference, which recessed six days earlier to allow ministers to consult with their governments on the unusual enforcement proposal.

OPEC remains sensitive to the possibility of new price cuts by Britain and Norway. Several OPEC ministers have warned that further cuts by the North Sea oil producers would ignite a price war, a battle they have said OPEC has the resources to win.

Several oil ministers said today's meeting also would tackle the controversial issue of differentials, the system under which premiums or discounts are fixed for various quality grades in relation to OPEC's "benchmark" Saudi Arabian Light crude.

David-West on Thursday called for a "very bold" adjustment of the price differentials structure.

He restated his opposition to a proposal tabled last week that would increase the price for low-quality heavy crude by 50 cents a barrel while reducing that for top-quality light oils by 25 cents. This would narrow the gap between these grades to about $3.50, an approach David-West called "too modest."

Nigeria, Algeria and the United Arab Emirates are predominantly producing the more expensive lighter grades. But they have found fewer buyers in recent years as improved technology prompted refiners to shift to the cheaper, heavier crude supplied by Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and others.

OPEC's ceiling on overall output was lowered to 16 million barrels daily on Oct. 31 from 17.5 million in an attempt to defend its prices.

But prices on the open markets failed to level off because of competition to OPEC from independent producers, cheating within the cartel and a relatively mild winter in the Northern Hemisphere.

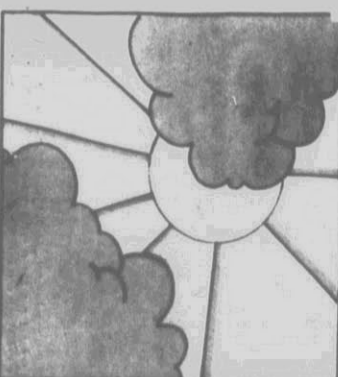

Oil markets appeared jittery Thursday and prices in the spot, or (Please turn to page 14)

WISHES TO RETRIEVE RETRIEVER

A Winterville woman is appealing for the return of her family's golden retriever. The dog was picked up Friday by the Winterville Police Department and taken to the county animal shelter. Monday before the hour that she had been told the shelter would be open so she could claim it, the dog was taken by another person. Josephine Brookshire says she knows the dog was taken in good faith, but she is hopeful that when that person learns what it means to her family, it will be returned. Chemical Shipment To Arrive At Port NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A 13-ton shipment of the chemical that killed 2,500 people in Bhopal, India, is due to arrive at this port city on Saturday, and special precautions by the Coast Guard and police are planned to safeguard the operation.

Officials say there is little cause for worry.

"Frankly, if it were not for the press interest, we wouldn't be doing anything more than normal," said Lt. Cmdr. Fred Brox, a spokesman for the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Norfolk.

In its gaseous form, the chemical methyl isocyanate caused the worst industrial accident ever. But it will arrive in liquid form, and in that state, Brox said, it is a fire hazard but does not pose the risk it does as a gas.

Lt. Cmdr. Dennis Sande, chief of port operations for the Coast Guard, said the vessel American Rigel, owned by United States Lines Inc., will be inspected when it arrives carrying drums of methyl isocyanate.

The shipment is being returned from Brazil, which refused to accept the chemical, according to its manufacturer, Union Carbide Corp. Another 25 tons of methyl isocyanate was shipped through Norfolk on Dec. 3 and was returned a week later after Brazilian authorities refused to accept it.

The earlier shipment was transported by truck to a Union Carbide plant in Woodbine, Ga., where the new shipment will also be taken, Brox said. Union Carbide Corp., the company that produced the chemical at its plant in Institute, W.Va., has not confirmed that Saturday's shipment will go to Woodbine.

Government officials and representatives of Union Carbide have planned extensive precautions to safeguard the shipment.

First, the shipment will be inspected before it is transferred from the ship to a truck, Brox said.

Sande said the overland shipment would be strictly monitored by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

It will be escorted from the port by Virginia State Police and a special Union Carbide team on another truck. The company vehicle will carry special equipment and personnel able to neutralize the chemical in the event of an accident.

State and local authorities along the route have been notified of the shipment. The ship is carrying two 20-foot containers, each of which holds 32 drums of the chemical, Brox said.

Janet Clements of the Virginia Department of Emergency and Energy Services said state police will inspect the trucks for mechanical defects before and after the containers are loaded.

In Georgia, Gov. Joe Frank Harris has ordered state police to escort the shipment.

Ten New Year's Resolutions For Better Times In 1985

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Beth Whelan, executive director of the American Council on Science and Health, recommends ten familiar and worthwhile resolutions for a better New Year.

Whelan, who earned a Ph.D. in nutrition from Harvard and is a frequent guest on television talk and news shows, said adopting the resolutions will help make a happier, safer, healthier 1985.

"If people followed these resolutions close to 50 percent or more of hospitals in this country could be closed eventually," Whelan said.

That would happen, she said, as one result of preventing auto crashes due to driving drunk and adopting lifestyles that build up instead of tear down health.

The resolutions, Whelan maintains, give people some control over disasters and debilitating conditions that can shorten one's life or cripple it.

They are:

1. Don't smoke. "Each year, about 350,000 Americans die from heart disease, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, or cancers of the lung, mouth, throat, pancreas, or bladder caused by cigarette smoking. The long list of cigarette casualties includes Humphrey Bogart, Walt Disney, Nat 'King' Cole, Buster Keaton, John Wayne."

2. Don't mix drinking with driving. "Forty-two thousand people died in the United States in 1983 in traffic accidents. Sixty-five percent of these deaths were attributable to alcohol. It's no disgrace to call a cab or ask someone to drive you home if you've had one too many. As the slogan of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration goes — 'Friends don't let friends drive drunk.'"

3. Avoid obesity, but avoid fad diets too. "One-third of American adults are obese, weighing at least 20 percent more than they should. Getting rid of excess poundage is worthwhile because obesity increases the risk or severity of many medical problems, including heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, and arthritis.

4. Exercise regularly, but cautiously. "Consult a physician before starting an exercise program, especially if you are middle-aged or older or if you have any of the major risk factors for heart disease."

5. Drink alcohol in moderation. "If you've had more than one or two drinks, both your judgment and your coordination are affected. Your ability to swim, ski, use power tools, drive a boat or car or perform other potentially hazardous activities is impaired. There also is clear evidence that long-term, excessive use of alcohol is harmful."

6. Have blood pressure checked. "High blood pressure often has no symptoms, which is why it's called the silent killer. High blood pressure increases the risk of strokes, heart attacks, and kidney failure if left untreated. The good news: there's evidence that effective treatment of high blood pressure reduces these risks."

7. Wear Seat Belts. "More than half of the people driving ... are making a mistake that could kill them. They're not wearing safety belts. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says that safety belts can reduce traffic deaths by 50 percent and injuries by 65 percent."

8. Keep a smoke detector at home. "Residential fires are the second most frequent cause of accidental deaths in the home, claiming more than 5,000 lives a year. Many of these deaths occur because too much time elapsed before the fire was detected. Smoke detectors could reduce the home fire death toll by 40 percent or more."

9. Be a cautious consumer of health information. "Shop as carefully for health advice and health products as you do for everything else. If something seems too good to be true, it probably is."

10. Focus your efforts on things that matter. "Priorities are what our New Year's Resolutions are about. The resolutions are our way of letting you know about things you can do to improve your health that are of proven value."

Personally, Whelan said she tries to keep the resolutions year after year. "My regular exercise is swimming," she said, then added other examples.

"I use alcohol in moderation and don't drive if drinking. I consider smoke detectors extremely important. Every home needs more than one. There should be one on every floor."

Different Carpets For Different Rooms

Carpet shoppers should rank carpet for practicality, cost and appearance and consider different types for different rooms.

Halls and stairs, for example, are high traffic areas that require a densely tufted carpet with a low pile height. The dining room, on the other hand, needs a carpet that's stain resistant and easy to clean. Subtle prints are better for dining areas than light, solid colors.

The carpet chosen for the living room depends on its use. If it's really "lived in," it may require the same type of carpeting as the dining room. More formal rooms may look better with soft, smooth textured fabrics, such as velvet plush or saxony.

Wise carpet buyers should know the different textures and their performance.

A level look pile carpet has a tight, pebbly surface that can take hard wear and is easy to clean. Multi-level pile hides dust and dirt better but doesn't wear as well.

Cut pile carpeting has the top of the loop sheared off to create different textures including velvet or plush saxony and frieze. Cut and loop textures combine cut-pile and loop-pile yards. The shorter loops are left uncut and the top level is sheared creating a sculptured effect. Cut and loop carpeting is slightly less durable than multi-level loop carpets.

Quick Answers To Carpeting Problems

Shedding, sprouting, snags, shading and rippling of elements are all common problems plaguing many people.

— Shedding means the little bits of fiber often found on the surfaces on new carpeting especially cut pile constructions. Don't worry — eventually they'll all be taken up in the vacuum cleaner.

— Sprouting refers to small tufts of fibers sticking up above the surface of carpeting. Cut the sprouts off with scissors — don't try to pull them out because you may remove other fibers in the process.

— Snags. A heel or almost anything sharp can snag a carpet. Cut the snag off and if it's especially large consult your carpet dealer.

— Shading. Household traffic causes the pile fibers of the fine carpets to assume different angles which makes the carpet appear darker or lighter in different areas. To remedy the situation give the carpet a thorough vacuuming so all the pile is going in the same direction.

— Rippling is caused in wall-to-wall carpeting by high humidity. Have the carpeting restretched by a professional using a power stretcher (not a knee-kicker, the manual device often used in laying wall-to-wall carpeting).

By Erma Bombeck

When I thought of the "empty nest" — as I started to do three days after the birth — I fantasized about what it would be like.

You could open up a door and know it was bedroom because you could see a bed. The closets would hold a few empty hangers and an extra blanket for cold nights. There would be nothing to trip over, nothing growing under the bed, and nothing to spray for.

It has been five years since the nest emptied and my home still looks like a garage sale that was moved indoors because of rain. It's as if the kids never left.

Cardboard boxes marked "MISCEL" spill out of every closet, ski poles hang out from under the bed, backpacks, sleeping bags and torn luggage line the shelves.

Somewhere it is written that something bad will happen to a mother who throws away a yearbook, a report card, or a bluebook full of wrong answers. Those are things that are supposed to comfort us in our old age — if we live through the fire.

We are the keeper of the hard shoes they may need in case a friend gets married. We store the drum set that the apartment manager objected to because it left oil stains on the carpet. We are the watchdog of the deflated basketballs, the whoopee cushions, the stringless tennis rackets, the pressed corsages and the memorabilia of the last 20 years or so of their lives.

A son dropped in the other night with a contribution for his storage room. "You think you can hang onto this scuba stuff?"

"You don't deposit one more thing until you withdraw something," I said. "Your grade school trophies were asking for you today. They want to live with their Daddy."

"I don't have room for them. I told you my apartment is too small."

"How about the large basket with the stuffed cobra nibbling on the mongoose?"

"Is it bothering anyone in the utility room?"

"You could at least take those cartons of records you stored in the pantry."

"Why would I want them? They're old and scratched."

"Then toss them out."

"Are you crazy? They're classics!"

I took a deep breath and prepared to deliver one of my better speeches.

"You know I love you," I said.

"I hate it when you start a speech with that."

"But this is the end of an era. You are an adult now who controls his own destiny and with it comes the responsibility for your possessions. If they are an important part of your life, weave them in the fabric of your existence. If they're not, pitch 'em. I'm ready to pass the torch."

"My torch? Where did you find it?"

Couple Marries Saturday

Shirley Ann Faw and Douglas Paul Lucas, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock at Mountain Valley Baptist Church in North Wilkesboro.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph A. Faw of Wilkesboro and the late Joseph A. Faw. The bridegroom is the son of Cmdr. and Mrs. H.A.I. Sugg of Greenville and the late Capt. Robert Joseph Lucas of the U.S. Air Force.

The bride wore a gown of white tissue taffeta. The gown, which featured a high neckline, was accented with long Juliet sleeves and a basque bodice of beaded silk Venice lace. The garland skirt, which fell to a chapel length train, was fashioned with a schiffli ruffle at the hemline of the gown. She wore a close fitting headpiece of blossoms and pearlized peps. It was attached to a waltz length veil of pearled sheer illusion fashioned with a pouf. The bride carried a bouquet of red roses, stephanotis and white spider mums accented with ivy.

The matron of honor was Kim

Verdier of Toledo, Ohio. She wore an emerald green dress and carried a bouquet of pink poinsettias, red roses, spider mums and ivy.

The stepfather of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included David Simonowich of Greenville and Bryant Pierce of Wilkesboro.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. A Christmas color scheme of red and green was used.

The bride is a graduate of Texas Woman's University and the bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University.

MRS. LUCAS

Couple Has Anniversary

The Rev. and Mrs. Rashie Kennedy celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday with a reception at the Whalley's Rest Home in Kenansville where she is a patient. He is a retired Free Will Baptist minister and lives in Beulaville.

Guests were greeted by the couple's children, R.J. Kennedy of Columbia, S.C., Hilda Mills of Ayden and Beverly Shea Kennedy of Durham Springs, La. Six of the couple's eight grandchildren were also in attendance.

Anniversary cake was served by Mrs. R.J. Kennedy and Mrs. Beverly Shea Kennedy. Punch was poured by granddaughters, Julia and Mary Katherine Kennedy.

The Rev. Kennedy held pastorates in 11 churches in North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Florida at the Free Will Baptist Children's Home in Tennessee.

Each location was recorded on a map of the United States and was displayed at the reception along with pictures, snapshots and a family tree.

Activity Reports Given At Garden Club Meeting

The Greenville Garden Club held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. James Keel. Committee reports were given.

Mrs. J.C. Galloway, reporting for the garden therapy committee, said several plants and shrubs were planted at the garden plot of the psychiatric unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Several club volunteers and a patient in the unit participated.

Mrs. R.M. Helms, reporting for the civic concerns committee, said work had been started on the cafeteria courtyard at E.B. Aycock Junior High School. Todd Williams, horticulturist with Worthington Farms, will supervise the work. Several members participated in a workshop at ARC making plaques of evergreens with red ribbon bows. Some were also used at the University Nursing Home and were also presented to the Carolina Care Center.

The horticulture exhibit for the meeting was displayed by Mrs. Helms. She showed several kalanchoes in different colors and told how each were grown and the care required.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Helms, Mrs. J.A. Piver, Mrs. J.E. Ricks and Mrs. L.S. Worthington. Elaine Hardy was welcomed as a guest.

Dear Abby

Grown Children Have Found There's No Place Like Home

DEAR ABBY: Please say something in your column about grown children who choose to live at home. I am a widow with a large house and three grown children who live with me because their jobs are in this area, and so are their friends, their church and a university where they take advanced courses to enhance their careers.

Every day some busybody (usually a woman my age whose children have all left home) asks, "Why are your children still living at home?" Such astonishment is expressed that one would think there was something wrong with adult children living at home. My children tell me they often find themselves trying to justify their living at home, as though it were some kind of abnormal lifestyle.

We hope that one day they will all have homes of their own, but in the meantime, living together offers each of us financial and emotional support. Besides, there are four of us to share all the household chores, and that ain't bad.

himself for not paying attention. Instead, he hired a real sharp lawyer to sue you. After all, you should have put a warning in your column to let people know that it's dangerous to read "Dear Abby" in traffic. Right? Sorry.

ANOTHER CHARLIE'S PAL

DEAR ABBY: I have a crush on a guy. I'm 25 and he's 29. I felt that he was as attracted to me as I was to him, although he never asked me for a date.

I knew that your advice would be, "Tell him how you feel about him," so I did.

He told me that it would be a long, long time before he got into a new relationship after having broken up with his girlfriend of several years. (They broke up about a year ago.)

I'm afraid that if I'm not the one to change his mind, some other girl will. The only time I see him is when my friends take me to the club he belongs to.

Do you think I blew it? What should I do now?

DEAD END

DEAR END: Do I think you blew it? Probably. Now, back off. The next move, if there is to be one, should be his.

A MOTHER WHO LIKES HER KIDS

DEAR MOTHER: When grown children want to live at home, and their mother wants them to, I would say it's an ideal arrangement.

Three cheers for you, Mother. (Make that four.)

DEAR ABBY: "Charlie's Pal" wrote to say that Charlie was hit by a car while crossing the street listening to music on his headset. So Charlie winds up in the hospital with two broken legs and a broken arm. "Charlie's Pal" told Charlie to sue the manufacturer of the headset for failing to warn the buyers that headsets could be dangerous if worn in traffic.

Abby, following that kind of logic, manufacturers of paper bags should be required by law to put a warning on their product stating that if the paper bag is worn over the head while walking in traffic—or operating machinery—it could cause serious injury or death.

If we could only protect the fools from the world, we could have a world of fools.

DIK BROWN

DEAR DIK: I received a ton of mail on that one. Hear this from Chelsea, Mich.:

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine (I'll call him Charlie) was walking down the street reading your column when a car hit him. The driver said Charlie had walked against the light, right into the car's path. Now Charlie is all banged up.

If it hadn't been for your column, Abby, Charlie would have blamed

WOMEN ARE LONGER LIVED THAN MEN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The average 25-year-old American man can expect to live another 48 years, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

But if you are an average 25-year-old American woman, your life expectancy is 55 more years, says the council.

Quite A Year

Looking back, one has to concede 1984 was quite a year for Pitt Countians. They shared 12 months of good news and bad, occasions for pride and occasions for sorrow.

Among the latter we count the March tornado which claimed eight lives in the county and caused scores of injured. Many more lost their homes. It was a disaster that is still fresh in our memories.

The disaster provoked an outpouring of gifts to the victims from the local citizenry. We saw and shared in demonstrations of concern and giving that ranged from contributions of money, food and clothing to household needs. We have never been prouder of our people.

Politics and their climactic elections combined to create another major chapter in the year's story.

The results demonstrated one more time that Pitt County is a Democrat bastion, with local voters giving their collective nod to Jim Hunt and Rufus Edmisten (both of whom lost in state races) and to the White House incumbent ... who won 50 of the 51 states. Tom Taft won his first Senate district bid, R.L. Martin won a House seat in the realigned 9th; and Walter Jones retained his seat in Washington. There were a lot of winners, as well as losers.

November's elections saw record voter turnouts in the county.

The year was not wholly satisfactory to our farmers. Tobacco's problems worsened, and those to whom growers looked for solutions to those problems had little hope to offer.

Costs of production, mounting imports from abroad and other factors have raised widespread concern that small tobacco farms will soon become almost a thing of the past.

Food crops saw a plentiful harvest; land that was a bright spot in an otherwise frightening view of famine and food shortages in other parts of the world.

Five-laning of U.S. 264 was working its way to reality during the year. We also saw improvements underway on N.C. 11-13. Good highways and roads have always been considered essential to economic growth, and sometimes it seems Pitt Countians have had unduly hard times convincing Raleigh to look in our direction ... but things have been looking up with growth in state revenues.

Our hospital had another year of growth and planning which includes expanding the physical plant and a move into the cardiac surgery field. One more concept, the Ronald McDonald House, has been introduced and is being developed. It will serve families of children hospitalized at Pitt Memorial Hospital and the idea is considered a valuable adjunct to what has already become a regional medical institution.

Work was begun on renovations at Sheppard Library. Part of the project involves expanding the children's section ... particularly gratifying to those who link Children, Books and the Future.

As expected, 1984 was a reasonably good year for local business. Final reports on the crucial Christmas sales season are not yet in, but early observers were looking to prospects above those in some other parts of the country where merchants were claiming traffic was below expectation (or, was it "hope"??).

All things considered, the good news outweighed the bad in Pitt County; and that's the way it ought to be.

A State Department Purge

WASHINGTON — The objective of the Christmas Massacre that is purging Reaganites at the State Department is to shift U.S. policy toward detente with Marxist Nicaragua and to destabilize rightist Chile.

To effect such drastic change, President Reagan's politically-appointed ambassadors must be ousted from Santiago and Central American capitals in favor of career Foreign Service officers. This was the crucial policy backdrop to frantic holiday-season maneuvers surrounding Secretary of State George Shultz's purge earlier this month.

A backfire from conservatives in the administration and Congress did slow Shultz. "We interrupted him in mid-coup," one angry critic opponent told us. L. Craig Johnstone, deputy assistant secretary and a principal architect of the new soft line on Nicaragua, has been blocked from appointment to the crucial ambassadorship to Honduras. But Shultz remains determined to fire Reaganite ambassadors who stand in the way of policy change.

No apologist for Ronald Reagan can claim he is an innocent bystander. The president recently was made aware in detail of policy and political implications of the Christmas Massacre. He was informed that Shultz was simply not telling him the whole story when he described the purge as normal diplomatic rotation Reagan has been loathe to believe that his senior Cabinet member, a man he has come to trust and like, did not show all his cards.

The Christmas Massacre follows escalating guerrilla warfare between Reaganite ambassadors and the State Department. The backbiting descended to unseemly depths. Foreign Service deputy chiefs of mission in Latin capitals have been sending back-channel telegrams to Assistant Secretary Langhorne Motley criticizing their ambassadors. Businessman Motley is a Reaganite political appointee. But hard-line ambassadors say that Johnstone has far too much influence with him.

Since arriving at the Latin American bureau in 1981, Johnstone has pressed for a deal with Nicaragua that would accept the Sandinista dictatorship in return for a hands-off El Salvador promise. In October, after Congress ended funding of the contras, Johnstone told colleagues a new policy "without the freedom fighters" is needed.

He since has claimed, not for quotation, that Nicaragua's totalitarian election is "not a Soviet-style sham" and called President-elect Daniel Ortega "the pragmatic Sandinista." Such praise will soon be reinforced by "moderate" image-building out of Managua in which Ortega will return some expropriated land, loosen screws on RALEIGH—The chairman of the Wake County commissioners has a proposal which he thinks could save the state's predominantly urban school systems a lot of money. Commissioner M. Edmund Aycock of Raleigh says the Wake Board of Education would institute a 12-month school schedule.

Under Aycock's proposal, children would be scheduled for 180 school days a year. But, the children might attend school in the summer and take the winter, spring or fall as vacation. He proposes that several alternative school schedules be developed and that parents be allowed to choose one for their child.

Aycock, probably the board's staunchest fiscal conservatives, is facing a $130 million school construction program proposed by the Wake Board of Education. He figures that by stretching the school population out across 12 months instead of ten the need for new school buildings might be reduced.

"The cost of facilities continues to increase and it makes no more sense for us to close down public school facilities for three months in the summer than it would for the university system to close its facilities," he said in an interview.

"The current schedule is based on the agrarian type of life many, many years ago and here in Wake County we have long left that kind of schedule," Aycock said.

Aycock says such systems have been tried in other parts of the country and apparently are working. He said he plans to talk with other commissioners from urban counties and to ask both the State Board of Education and the Department of Public Instruction to consider the idea.

There's a lot of arrogant talk in Raleigh these days about who the new 4th District congressman will be. After the Democrats in 1986 win back the seat Bill Cobey won from Ike Andrews this year.

But a couple of conservative Democrats, having lunch a few days before Christmas, weren't that confident.

A prominent black politician in Raleigh has devised the profile for the perfect candidate to oppose Cobey. The Democrat should be between 40 and 50 years old, a white male from Wake County, and a businessman.

The conservatives agreed and said only former Raleigh Mayor Smedes York fit that bill. Since York doesn't look much interested in the job, these boys at lunch weren't very confident of their party's chances.

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, who fits most of that bill, says he can't understand why anyone would want to run for Congress. As is his practice, he has a lot of reasons for his distaste for that office.

"First of all, why would anyone want to leave North Carolina to live in Washington?"

"Second, who can afford to risk their income every two years on an election?"

"Third, the job's too much of a hassle," Johnson said. A congressman has visibility and is accessible, so he gets embroiled in all political storms. A state senator and a U.S. Senator, because one is too small and the other too big, avoid most of that stuff.

"The only way to be a good congressman is to be a twin," Johnson summarized. "You put one of you up in Washington and the other back in the district."

—Elisha Douglass— Strength For Today

Most people react to the onset of a disease in two different ways. Some turn to pain-killing pills which moderate the symptoms; others face the possibility that they may be dangerously ill and take whatever steps may be necessary to effect a cure.

Some people insist on handling sin by the pill method. They pay little attention to sin until it begins to hurt them. Then, instead of giving up sin they try to escape its consequences with the equivalent of analgesic pills.

Sin generally requires surgery. Jesus said that if thy right hand offends thee, cut it off. If thine eye offends thee, pluck it out. Jesus never tried to make people believe that putting away sin was an easy matter. It is very difficult, and because it is, it takes concerted effort on our part, and exercises every spiritual capacity to the growth and maturity of our souls.

New York's Bad Rap

NEW YORK CITY — They say that people in New York are reluctant to get involved.

This is a bad rap. People who live in the Big Apple will get involved if they believe something unusual is going on.

I realized how oblivious New Yorkers are to their environment while walking up Lexington Avenue with a friend named Arthur Stevens. We were hemmed in by giant skyscrapers, and everything looked gray.

"Don't you miss the sun?" I asked him.

"What sun?" he wanted to know. "You know, the thing that lights the sky in the daytime. It's up there somewhere above the glass buildings."

"If God wanted New Yorkers to have sun, He would have never sold the air rights to Manhattan," Stevens said.

We couldn't continue the conversation because 12 jackhammers were going full blast in the street.

A half-block later I said, "I don't understand how you people can take the noise."

"I don't hear any noise," Stevens said.

"Doesn't the constant din of jackhammers, wrecking balls and automobile horns get on your nerves?"

"It probably would if I thought about it."

"What do you think about when you're walking in New York?"

"Most of the time I think to myself, 'I hope a bank or brokerage firm in one of those skyscrapers doesn't go broke.'"

"Why do you think about that?"

"I'd hate to have a vice president on the 35th floor fall on me just as I was passing by."

We walked around mountains of plastic bags filled with refuse.

"Do you ever think about garbage?" I asked him.

"What garbage?" he wanted to know.

"The stuff in those large green bags on the curb."

"You could have fooled me," he said. "I thought they were Christmas bushes the merchants put out to decorate the sidewalk."

"I'm just a tourist," I said. "And I don't want to be critical of New York. But there is a lot more going on here than you people are aware of."

"Give me an example."

"A man on roller skates just grabbed that lady's purse."

"How do you know he did it?"

"He was wearing a ski mask. Should we call a cop?"

"Are you crazy? If New Yorkers called a cop every time a guy on roller skates snatched a purse, no one would ever get home for dinner."

"Don't you care about the lady?"

"Of course I care about the lady. But when you live in the Big Apple you have to make choices. Mine right now is whether I want to deal with her purse problem, or get something for dinner. Let's stop in the delicatessen."

"A large pizza," Stevens said to the man behind the counter. The man replied in a foreign tongue.

"I think he's speaking to you in a calypso patois, probably indigenous to Haiti," I said.

"Is that what it is? I've been coming here for 10 months, and every time I ask for pizza someone gives me a loaf of pumpernickel bread."

"Why do you patronize this place if no one speaks English?"

"It's only a block from my apartment."

"Aren't you tired of eating nothing but bread for dinner?"

"Now that you mention it, I am. But I'm like most New Yorkers. By the time I'm almost home, I'm so glad to be there I'm too bushed to argue with a guy over the difference between pumpernickel and pizza."

Second Agent Orange Lawsuit Is Filed

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for veterans exposed to the herbicide Agent Orange in Vietnam said Thursday they have filed a second lawsuit, based on a novel legal theory, against the federal government in an attempt to win $1.82 billion.

The lawyers, who settled a suit against the makers of Agent Orange for $180 million last May, lost in an earlier attempt to sue the government and conceded that the latest suit was a long shot.

"I wouldn't bet money on myself," said one of them, Benton Musslewhite of Houston, Texas, in describing his chances. "But it's viable."

Musslewhite represents veterans who claim they have suffered cancer and some of their children have suffered birth defects because of exposure to Agent Orange, which was contaminated with a dioxin compound known to be a powerful cause of cancer in laboratory animals.

Generally, veterans may not sue the government for wrongs allegedly done them in the armed forces.

In the suit in the U.S. Court of Claims in Washington, Musslewhite and his colleagues argued that the government had unconstitutionally deprived their clients of their "property" because it provided the chemical companies with virtually an ironclad defense against their allegations.

The argument goes like this: federal law protects government contractors from lawsuits as long as what they supply meets government specifications. The herbicide did meet specifications when supplied.

Therefore, in settlement negotiations, the companies were able to take a tough line and force the veterans to accept only a fraction of their $2 billion claim, and so the government should pay the difference between $2 billion and $180 million, the suit contends.

The suit also advanced two other arguments — that the government knew of the dangers of exposure to the herbicide and failed to impose handling precautions, and that the government wronged the veterans after they left the armed forces by failing to give them medical tests and treatment.

Both arguments assume that dioxin in fact caused the disorders experienced by the veterans — something that the government and the judge in the suit against the companies have never accepted, and that several surveys by government agencies have failed to establish.

Musslewhite said he was "convinced that there is substantial medical authority, certainly enough to get you to a jury or a fact-finder," that dioxin indeed caused the suffering of his clients.

Suits in the Court of Claims are heard without juries.

The judge in the chemical company suit, Jack B. Weinstein of the U.S. District Court in New York, said after the settlement that he had serious doubts as to whether the veterans had a case at all.

After the settlement, the veterans sued the government in Weinstein's court on behalf of the veterans' wives and children, asking that all of them be made plaintiffs in a class action.

The judge refused to make it a class action and dismissed that suit on two grounds — that the wives and children had no right to sue, and that it had not been established that dioxin caused birth defects. His ruling is being appealed.

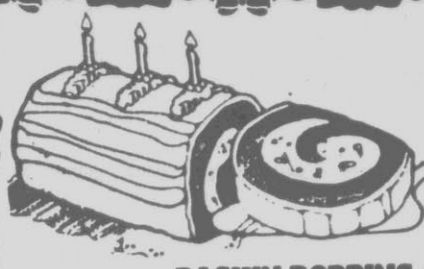

Musslewhite listed nine veterans or their estates and relatives as plaintiffs in Thursday's case and asked that it be made a class action. None of the nine was a plaintiff in the wives and children's case. If any had been, they might have been barred from suing on the grounds that courts do not hear substantially the same case twice.

Some 100,000 veterans have filed claims on the $180 million fund established in last May's settlement and another 20,000 are expected, Musslewhite said. Those claimants would constitute the plaintiff class in the Court of Claims, he said.

Asked if his unusual lawsuit was an attempt to bring pressure on Congress to compensate the veterans, Musslewhite said he was obliged to pursue every possible legal avenue in representing his clients, but that if Congress did appropriate funds for an adequate settlement, "my recommendation would be" to accept it and drop the lawsuit.

Justice Department spokesman Dean St. Dennis said, "Our lawyers have not seen the complaint, and so there's nothing we can say about it."

Board Chairman Awaits Decision On County Job

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The chairman of the Buncombe County Board of Commissioners and acting county manager is awaiting a court decision on whether he can become the full-time county administrator but has already applied for the job.

"I have filed an application within the deadline (Wednesday) in order to preserve my options," R. Curtis Ratcliff said Thursday. "Hopefully we will have a decision from (the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in) Richmond (Va.) right away."

The 1983 General Assembly passed legislation doing away with the elective post of board chairman as the county's chief executive officer, a job held by Ratcliff for the past 12 years. The legislators also mandated that a county manager be named and prohibited any member of the board from also holding the new post. Ratcliff sued to strike the dual-role prohibition.

County Personnel Director Robert Thornberry said 95 applications have been received for the post.

Ratcliff has said that a voting membership on the board is important and that, in the event of a negative ruling, he would seek outside employment in order to stay on the board.

"If I lose the lawsuit, then I intend to do a little shopping ... I really have mixed emotions about not being a voting member, but I would still like to remain as full-time administrator," Ratcliff said. "It all hinges on the court decision."

No decision has been made on further appeals should he receive a negative ruling from Richmond, Ratcliff said.

In addition to ruling on the state law, the appeals court could remand the appeal, saying that it is more appropriate that it be heard in state rather than federal courts, or they could rule that it is an issue that should be resolved and refer it back to the local federal court.

"The only thing that would create a further appeal from us would be a completely negative reply — without any options," Ratcliff said, adding that if the appeals court upheld the state law, his only avenue of appeal would be to the U.S. Supreme Court, "if we went into it."

The selection process for a new county manager is expected to begin with the Jan. 8 meeting of the commissioners.

Thornberry said that a background search will be made made on the 10-15 finalists and that the manager then would likely be selected from the top three or four candidates.

1984 Best Films Survey

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For moviemaking, the year yawned open with mostly misses. But studios saved 1984 from being the year of the flops by closing the season with a number of Oscar-worthy films.

Here is one reviewer's assessment of the year's Top 10 movies:

1. "A Passage to India." With John Ford, Henry King and Howard Hawks gone, only David Lean remains among those filmmakers who can tell panoramic stories. He displays his customary magnificence with the E.M. Forster classic of the dying years of British imperialism.
2. "Amadeus." Milos Forman ("Ragtime" and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") has made a marvelously cinematic version of the Mozart saga that played on Broadway, capturing the flavor of 18th century palaces and concert halls and drawing spectacular performances from Tom Hulce and F. Murray Abraham.
3. "Places in the Heart." This Robert Benton film far outdistanced the other two farmland-travail movies ("Country" and "The River"). What made the difference was Benton's sensitive evocation of his Texas boyhood. The film was marked by a handful of superior performances, especially Sally Field's portrayal as the beleaguered farm widow.
4. "A Soldier's Story." Norman Jewison, who knows how to deal with social issues ("In the Heat of the Night"), provided a gripping interpretation of the Pulitzer Prize-winning "A Soldier's Story." The actors are superb, especially Howard E. Rollins and Adolph Caesar.
5. "The Killing Fields." Amazingly for a first-time director, Roland Joffe created a totally convincing depiction of the horrific events in recent Cambodia. Sam Waterston and Haing S. Ngor horrify beautifully in the roles as a real-life New York Times correspondent and his assistant.
6. "Cotton Club." Much maligned because for its outrageous budget, Francis Coppola's film is nevertheless consistently entertaining and visually stunning.
7. "The Natural." Any return of Robert Redford is most welcome, and this baseball yarn provided an ideal vehicle, despite its murky symbolism. A first-rank cast and tight direction by Barry Levinson helped create a satisfying film.
8. "Splash." The best comedy of the year, it was an offbeat tale directed with expert timing by Ron Howard and acted by bright young performers: Tom Hanks, Daryl Hannah, John Candy.
9. "The Neverending Story." The least appreciated fantasy of 1984, it deserved more than it got. Wolfgang Petersen ("Das Boot") created a world of pure imagination.
10. "Garbo Talks." Another unappreciated film, it had some marvelous moments, with Sidney Lumet giving full throttle to Anne Bancroft, Hermione Gingold, Howard Da Silva and others.

Crewmen Die In Jet Crash

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A Navy bomber crashed in a swampy area of eastern North Carolina Thursday night near a Dare County bombing range, killing both crewmen, a Navy spokesman said today.

Lt. Cmdr. Dale Smith, a spokesman for the Naval Air Force Atlantic in Norfolk, said the bodies of Lt. Joseph A. Logan, 25, of Barrington, Ill., and Lt. Rick Dempsey, 29, of Manassas, Va., were recovered from the Alligator River 20 miles west of Manteo about 9 a.m. today.

Smith said the airmen reported they were nine miles west of the bombing range about 7 p.m. Thursday. Range personnel heard an explosion shortly after that radio message and began a search in the thick fog.

Smith said the A-6E Intruder Navy bomber was armed with four 25-pound non-explosive training bombs. He said the bombs had "the strength of a good-sized firecracker."

Navy trucks used on rough terrain searched through the night, along with a 40-foot utility boat on the river. Helicopters joined the search when the fog lifted today and spotted the bodies.

Test Tube Triplets OK

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Triplets born as a result of in vitro fertilization to a Mormon couple who already had eight children are "an ultimate expression of high technology and high faith," their father says.

Daniel, Jonathan and Rebecca Day were delivered by Caesarean section Wednesday at Stanford University Hospital, the first babies produced through the University of California-San Francisco's in vitro program.

"All three are doing really well," Carol Day, 36, said Thursday. "Everything is going rather smoothly. It's a terrific Christmas present."

Mrs. Day, who had three children by a previous marriage, had been sterilized and later tried surgery to reverse the procedure, but her fallopian tubes remained blocked. Her husband, Dennis, had five children.

"This is a great moment in our lives," said Day, 53. "It's an ultimate expression of high technology and high faith."

The couple consulted doctors at the university after deciding they wanted to have at least one child together.

In the in vitro process, the woman's eggs and the man's sperm are combined in a glass dish, then implanted in the woman's womb.

Jonathan weighed in at 4 pounds, Daniel at 3.7 pounds and Rebecca at 3.5 pounds.

Day said fellow parishioners at the couple's Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints church prayed and fasted for them.

"But unlike a lot of people, we don't subscribe to the idea that you should leave everything to God," he said. "We believe you should do what you can for yourself, and then let God decide the outcome."

Pizza For Deaf

SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Robert Jones believes the electronic device that lets deaf people type their orders into the pizza shop he manages may someday be commonplace in fast-food restaurants.

At Jones' suggestion, a Domino's Pizza franchise installed a Telecommunication Device for the Deaf — TDD — several weeks ago, after the manager read about another Domino's in Arizona that had the machine.

A deaf person places an order by using a TDD at home to call the pizza shop over the phone. When Jones answers, he hears what he describes as a "computer-digital sound" and places the phone receiver on the shop's TDD.

"I just type in, 'Hi, this is Domino's Pizza. May I help you?' and they type in, 'Yeah, I want to order.' So we just carry on a normal conversation by typing it in," Jones said. "It's kind of wild."

Jones said he believes TDDs may become more common for pizza chains and other restaurants that deliver food.

"I wouldn't be surprised if others do install TDDs. There's a large population in our country that if not totally deaf, is at least hearing-impaired," he said.

Arrest Possible In Defense Probe At Stencel Aero

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Material seized during a Department of Defense probe of overcharging on defense contracts could lead to the indictment of at least one high-ranking employee at an Arden defense contractor. The Asheville Times has quoted a federal official as saying.

The official, who asked not to be identified but is said to be close to the investigation, said eight Defense Criminal Investigative Service agents from Atlanta, aided by local U.S. Marshal Max Wilson and two deputy marshals, did not come away from last week's search at Stencel Aero Engineering Corp. empty-handed.

"They found what they were looking for," the official said. "They found what they wanted all in one desk about 4:30 p.m. Friday."

Both Stencel President Michael Hobbs, on whom a DCIS search warrant was served last Thursday, and General Manager Hank Greene have said through their secretaries they will not comment.

Meanwhile, Wilson expressed guarded agreement Wednesday with a Naval Air Systems Command lieutenant who hinted DCIS may be investigating Stencel for something in addition to contract irregularities. NASC is in charge of all naval aircraft contracts.

Stencel has manufactured ejection seats and escape systems for Navy jets and Marine helicopters since 1969.

"I think it'll be sometime before there's news let out on it because it's so involved," Wilson said.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones had ordered investigators to make a record of seized material by noon Wednesday, but extended that deadline to Monday at the request of DCIS agents. The order was made orally by Jones at his Rutherfordton office, and no written copy of the order exists, Wilson said. Jones said Thursday the order is still being drawn in written form.

"Ordinarily when a paper like this is served, there must be a public record filed of what was seized," Jones said. "But in this case there are problems I can't discuss, and the record of material seized under the warrant will not be made public unless an indictment is issued."

Wilson said DCIS agents and Stencel's attorney both tried to constrain the order. Investigators wanted to file only a list of what was seized, not its content, and Stencel wants documents returned to the company "for normal conduct of business," Wilson said.

Jones has ordered photocopies made of seized material. DCIS in Atlanta refers all inquiries on the investigation to the U.S. attorney's office, and local U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer has said it is standard procedure for his office to refuse comment on any investigation until indictments are issued.

Wilson said the company employs at least 20 executives, who along with other employees were warned to stay away from their desks during Friday's search. Hobbs ordered everyone but himself, Greene and two security guards home about 1:30 p.m. Wilson said some documents were taken from briefcases in searches of employees before their departure.

Wilhelmina Bratton, contracts administrator for Stencel and Asheville vice mayor, said Wednesday that she could not comment "because I really don't know what's going on."

Stencel Aero is a subsidiary of Talley Industries, with plants in Mesa and Phoenix, Ariz. Talley manufactures ballistics and ordnance devices, escape systems, solid propellants and strategic and tactical missile gas generators.

The U.S. marshal's office and U.S. District Court in Mesa and Phoenix reported no investigation of Talley had been ordered by Wednesday. A court clerk said Westinghouse Electric Corp. filed a civil suit "for a contract" against Talley on March 14, but "voluntarily dismissed" the suit two weeks later.

In November 1981, the family of a Greek military pilot filed suit in Ohio against Rockwell International Corp. and Stencel Aero. The suit, transferred to Asheville in August of this year, charged company responsibility for the wrongful death of Theodoros Nisiotakis, whose Rockwell T-2E trainer, equipped with a Stencel ejection system, crashed on July 8, 1977.

The suit was dismissed by Jones in December because it violated North Carolina's two-year statute of limitations in cases of wrongful death.

Attorney Gen. Issues Opinion

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia officials cannot revoke the license of a Virginia driver who is convicted in North Carolina of drunken driving, Attorney General Gerald Baliles says.

In an opinion issued Thursday, Baliles said the legal intoxication levels in Virginia and North Carolina are sufficiently different to prohibit revocation of a Virginia license for a North Carolina offense.

The opinion was issued at the request of Sussex County Commonwealth's Attorney E. Carter Nettles Jr.

Under Virginia law, the state can revoke a driver's license after a driver has been found guilty of driving under the influence of alcohol under a law "paralleling and substantially conforming" to Virginia's drunken driving law, Baliles said.

In North Carolina, it is a crime to drive with a blood-alcohol concentration of .10 percent or more. In Virginia, it is a violation to operate a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol concentration of .15 percent or more. A concentration of .10 may be considered legal intoxication in Virginia depending on other evidence and circumstances.

Farmers Fussing With Air Force Over Flight Requests

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Farmers, who say the noise will upset their pigs, cows and chickens, haven't gone hog wild over a U.S. Air Force request to fly its planes within 100 feet of their rural Sampson County land during test flights.

"You fly low over a herd of hogs and see what they'll do. They'll tear down the world," said Sampson County Industrial Developer Henry Turlington.

Military planes now must fly at least 7,000 feet up when venturing into Sampson County's airspace. Officials of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro are considering asking the Federal Aviation Administration for approval of flights as low as 100 feet, according to a notice sent to Sampson County officials by Thomas D. Sims, chief of the Air Force's Environmental Planning Division.

The plan is part of an effort by the Air force, Navy and Marine Corps to get more airspace for aerial training near air bases. More airspace also is being sought around the Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station in Havelock, near Stumpy Point and over Pamlico Sound in Dare County, and over the Albermarle Sound near a bombing range in Perquimans County.

Turlington and Clinton Mayor A.E. Kennedy agreed that low-flying planes will upset poultry, hogs and cattle on local farms.

Local officials also say low-flying planes would be detrimental to crop dusting and economic development in the county.

Four groups — the Sampson County Board of Commissioners, the Clinton-Sampson Airport Authority, the Clinton City Council and the Sampson County Industrial Development Commission — have adopted resolutions opposing the Air Force request.

"We've got a lot of reasons not to support," said Kennedy, who served on the City Council and the Airport Authority and who is also a private pilot. We hope the opposition will cause them to back off."

The matter "is on hold right now," Turlington said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Whitley, who represents Sampson County, said Thursday that he had been notified

"not only by people in Sampson County, but by officials in other counties as well."

Whitley said he'd oppose the Air Force plan unless convinced of its merit.

The congressman said he didn't think the Air Force would go through with the request. "I think it's something that they run up the flag pole to see what kind of response they'd get, and I think they've gotten a lot of salutes," he said.

In Sampson County, the proposal would allow Air Force planes to fly at 100-foot levels in areas stretching from Newton Grove in the northern tip of the county to Harrells near the Pender County line, and from Roseboro in western Sampson County east to Goldsboro in Wayne County.

Currently Seymour Johnson planes can fly only into the northern and eastern half of Sampson County.

Under the proposal, Sims said, military aircraft would avoid the Clinton-Sampson Airport by 1,500 feet in altitude and three miles in distance to avoid private planes.

Kennedy said increased military airspace would discourage both private and corporate planes from using the airport.

"Here we have the airport on the move, and (the military officials) want to give us a hard time and shut it down," Kennedy said. "We have done, we feel like, all we can," he said. "We certainly don't want to do anything to hurt the military, but we feel with the airspace they already have they can take care of themselves."

Trailer-Car Collision Kills 4 In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A trailer that broke loose from the dump truck that was hauling it careened straight at a car, killing four of the five occupants as family members in another car looked on, police and eyewitnesses said.

The accident occurred Thursday on Interstate 85 just north of Charlotte.

Police Capt. Norris Anderson identified the victims as James Percelle Skinner, 52, his wife, Hattie James Skinner, 49, and their grandson, 5-year-old Jamien Skinner, all of Hertford. A fourth passenger, Ronell Brothers, 24, died later at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Lisa Skinner, 24, mother of Jamien, was listed in critical condition.

Carl Clark, whose car was behind the Skinner car, said he saw plastic construction barrels flying through clouds of dust as the trailer careened across the median.

"The trailer just made a leap," said Clark, 44. "It came straight at (the Skinner car). It jumped up broadside and hit the car dead center. If I had been there a little earlier, it would have been me."

Police said a second car of family members following the Skinner car saw the accident.

The trailer somehow was jarred loose from the truck, which was traveling south near the Beattie's Ford Road exit, and hurtled across the highway into the northbound lane, Anderson said. Traffic was delayed for several hours as officials cleared the busy interstate.

The driver of the truck, Clon Matthew Burleyson, was charged with three counts of misdemeanor death by vehicle and an equipment violation, Anderson said. Bail for Burleyson, 55, of Concord, was set at $4,000.

Anderson said he didn't know why the trailer broke free, and that he didn't know the specific equipment problem that led to the charge against Burleyson.

Burleyson told police his southbound truck hit a bump on the highway, which is being repaired. In a rearview mirror, Burleyson said, he saw the empty trailer roll across the highway median and into northbound lanes of traffic.

Police said Skinner slammed on the brakes. Skid marks 17 feet long led up to the point of impact. Police estimated the trailer was traveling 60 mph and the Skinner car 50 mph. The speed limit is 45 because of interstate construction.

Skeptic Claims Psychics Bombed On Predictions

By LISA LEVIT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California hasn't slipped into the ocean. No lightning bolt has struck Mr. T. And Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has yet to elope to Europe with his secretary.

None of these non-happenings surprised Robert Sheaffer, a skeptic who says the nation's psychics generally struck out in this year's spiritual game with dozens of predictions that haven't come true. "It never ceases to amaze me some of predictions that are made — and how short people's memories are," said Sheaffer, a member of the Bay Area Skeptics, a group that since 1982 has traced the track records of psychics' annual prognostications.

Presuming the final four days of 1984 don't prove the seers' correct after all, this year's predictions were dismal, but no worse than other years, Sheaffer said Thursday. "1983 was quite terrible, too. This kind of thing happens every year."

For example, Jeanne Dixon of Washington, D.C., predicted that Fidel Castro's agents would take over two small Latin American countries, that drug scandals would leave the "outcome of the Olympic games in doubt" and that Richard Burton was "very likely" to step back into Elizabeth Taylor's life.

"She somehow failed to predict Burton's death," Sheaffer said. "They never seem to do too well with specifics like that."

"Some psychics are experts at being vague," Sheaffer said. "Jeanne Dixon is the best of these. She might say, 'Nancy Reagan is entering a time of great crisis.' That's a great prediction because it says nothing. It's bound to be true."

Dallas psychic John Catchings predicted Kennedy would elope; Miami psychic Micki Dahne predicted that Mr. T would be struck by lightning attracted to his gold jewelry; and local psychic Barbara Mousalam foresaw an assassination attempt against President Reagan on the campaign trail in October. "People say, 'What about the serious psychics?' Well, these are the serious psychics," said Sheaffer, adding that psychics use publicity from their annual predictions to attract customers for private readings that cost as much as $300.

But even Sheaffer admits the tellers of the future occasionally were on the mark.

For example, Ms. Mousalam predicted a woman would run for vice president on the Democratic ticket. However, journalist Jack Anderson made the same prediction in a Parade magazine article, he said.

"Most people can do as well by guessing. And a lot of the predictions could be made by anyone who reads the newspaper," Sheaffer said.

The Rev. Woods Mattingley, leader of The Seeker's Quest Ministry in San Jose, was responsible for what Sheaffer called the most dramatic prediction of 1984: that the California coast would drop into the ocean.

On Thursday, Mattingley said he backed away from that prediction this year but was convinced it would happen "before the year 2000."

"There will be a geological disturbance along the Southern California coast that will lead to a very large earthquake or inundation by the Pacific Ocean or both," he said. "The timetable is just very hard to get. That's not meant to be an excuse. It's just very hard to get."

After he sensed the disaster would occur, Mattingley said, he turned to prayer.

"I think the power of prayer changes things," he said. "When I get a negative forecast, I apply prayer. I see it make a difference in people's personal lives, so why can't we apply it to the planet and expect to see it work there?"

No matter the record, polls show 50 percent to 75 percent of the public believes psychics can see the future, Sheaffer said.

"For many people, this is a kind of substitute religion," he said. "For other people, they've simply seen and heard it so many times, and they've never heard it effectively challenged. The skeptics are just now starting to get organized."

Teen-Ager Will Be Placed On Probation

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — One of three teen-agers jailed after the slaying of "junk food" professor Howard Appledorf in 1982 will be released to his mother's custody next week, a prosecutor says.

Shane Kennedy, 17, is to be released Monday after serving 15 months of a four-year sentence for burglary, robbery and grand theft for breaking into Appledorf's Gainesville home in 1982, said prosecutor Ken Hebert.

Kennedy, of Woodbury, Conn., pleaded guilty to the charges when authorities dropped a first-degree murder count after two others who admitted to the killing said he did not take part. Kennedy was 15 at the time.

Avowed homosexuals Gary Bown, now 21, and Paul Everson, now 20, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the case and drew life sentences.

Appledorf, a University of Florida professor, was known for defending the nutritional value of "junk food."

Hebert said Kennedy will be sent from Hillsborough Correctional Institution in Riverview to Connecticut, where he will be on probation for two years while living with his mother in Bridgeport.

Hebert said he agreed to let Kennedy serve his probation outside the state because "Gainesville doesn't need him, and he doesn't need Gainesville. Let them (Connecticut) take care of their problem and pay the costs of supervision."

Kennedy broke into Appledorf's condominium with Bown and Everson while the professor was away on a business trip, authorities said.

When Appledorf returned, he was tied up and slowly suffocated with a bag of ice. Wine glasses and plates holding partly eaten food were found near his body. The words "murder" and "redrum" — murder spelled backward — were scrawled on the walls.

After staying in the condominium for three days, the teen-agers fled in Appledorf's car to New York City.

Kennedy underwent psychological, drug and alcohol counseling while in prison, said his attorney, Bill DeCarlis. "He had some schooling and was a model inmate. I hope he can make something out of what he learned in prison."

Researchers Say Finding Could Open Door For AIDS Treatment

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The discovery that the AIDS virus latches onto a protein in a key immune system cell and kills the cell, crippling the immune system, could lead to a way to block the virus, researchers said.

The finding by scientists in France and England may help in the search for chemical "antibodies" that can bind to and neutralize the AIDS virus, said British researcher Robin Weiss.

Weiss said he "would not wish to make large claims" about medicinal uses of the discovery, but added it "does give us possible ideas" for prevention or treatment and helps illuminate the process of acquired immune deficiency syndrome infection.

Dr. Robert Gallo, an AIDS expert at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., said it was important to identify the "receptor" protein that the AIDS virus latches onto for infection.

"If you know a lot about the receptor, it opens up ideas you didn't have before," he said Thursday. "You can start doing things that might interfere with the virus infection of the cell."

Weiss, professor of viral oncology and director of the Institute of Cancer Research in London, was among six British researchers to report the work in a recent issue of Nature, a British scientific journal. In the same issue, a team of eight French researchers reported the same conclusion.

The protein is at least an essential part of the receptor, and other factors may also help determine what limits the targets of the AIDS virus, Weiss said Thursday in a telephone interview.

AIDS had struck 7,594 people in the United States and killed 3,627 of them as of Monday, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Scientists had known that the AIDS virus invades and kills "T4" white blood cells whose surfaces display the "CD4" protein, Weiss said. Nobody knows the protein's normal role, he said, but it may help the T4 cell work with other immune system cells to fight off disease.

He and his colleagues used three tests to show that the virus suspected of causing AIDS attaches itself to the protein. One was to mix the T4 cells with many other cells and expose the mix to the AIDS virus. The virus would find cells with an appropriate receptor and merge them into "enormous great balloons" that would be easily visible under a microscope, Weiss said.

That experiment showed that the virus merged only those cells displaying the CD4 protein, he said.

Another experiment involved an unrelated virus, which researchers essentially dressed in the AIDS virus' protein coat, the part that binds to receptors. "Once it's wearing the coat of the AIDS virus, it can only infect cells that have receptors for the AIDS virus," Weiss said.

This "transvestite" virus infected only cells that had the CD4 protein on their surfaces, Weiss said.

Finally, researchers turned to monoclonal antibodies, natural substances that normally grab invading organisms and either neutralize them or mark them for destruction. The scientists experimented with antibodies that would latch onto the CD4 protein and prevent anything else from binding to it.

The experiment showed that once the antibodies had blocked the CD4 protein on a cell, the AIDS virus did not infect it, Weiss said.

"That really clinched the story," Weiss said. "We were then quite confident that all our results fit together very well."

Tavern To Be Sold

WEST, Texas (AP) — The tavern owner who helped put Willie Nelson on the road to country music stardom says she plans to sell the north central Texas honky-tonk where he made his first professional appearance.

Margie Lundy, 63, has run the Nite Owl for 40 years, but says she "can't get around like I used to."

"I just love her," Nelson said. "She's part of the family. She was just a friend to everyone. If you had a hard story, she'd be there to listen to it."

The tavern about 40 miles north of Waco has also featured such country greats as Merle Haggard, Ernest Tubb and Bob Wills.

Murderer Executed In La. As Victim's Parents Watch

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer
ANGOLA, La. (AP) — With a final wink to the nun who helped him through his last hours, a cocky Robert Lee Willie went to his death in the electric chair today as the parents of the 18-year-old woman he raped and murdered watched.

Willie, 26, winked at Sister Helen Prejean, his spiritual adviser and a death penalty opponent, but avoided eye contact with the seven other witnesses in the death chamber, including Elizabeth and Vernon Harvey, the mother and stepfather of the victim.

He was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. by Dr. Alfred Gould, said C. Paul Phelps, Secretary of the Department of Public Safety and Corrections.

"I would just like to say Mr. and Mrs. Harvey that I hope you get some relief from my death," Willie said in a statement 12 minutes before his death. "Killing people is wrong. That's why you've put me to death. It makes no difference whether it's citizens, countries or governments. Killing is wrong."

During trials and interviews Willie had expressed no remorse and said he had "lived a good life."

The Harveys showed no emotion but watched intently as Willie was strapped into the electric chair and was jolted by four alternating surges of 2,000 and 500 volts.

When Gould, coroner for West Feliciana Parish, pulled back Willie's white sweat shirt to check his pulse, he revealed tattoos of a woman and of the Grim Reaper carrying a knife and a burning hourglass.

"I'm sorry every victim doesn't have the opportunity I had to see the perpetrator's sentence carried out," Harvey said after leaving the Louisiana State Penitentiary. "I wish everyone could have the same satisfaction."

Faith Hathaway, 18, was kidnapped, tortured, raped and then stabbed 17 times in 1980 after Willie and another man picked her up as she celebrated her last night before leaving to join the Army.

"I think that justice is finally going to be served," said Lizbeth Harvey, Miss Hathaway's 14-year-old sister, who was at the prison but barred from watching the execution because of her age.

Lizbeth Harvey joined a group of pro-death penalty demonstrators at the prison gates, where a group of seven nuns also had gathered to protest the execution. Harvey and his friends were laughing after the execution. Asked if he were happy that it was over, he responded, "You want to dance?"

Sister Helen said, "He died sorry for what happened."

Willie dined on a last meal of fried fish, oysters, shrimp, french fried potatoes and a salad, said Warden Frank Blackburn.

He was the 32nd person executed in the United States and the sixth in Louisiana since the Supreme Court allowed states to reinstate the death penalty in 1976.

Willie and Joseph J. Vaccaro testified during the trial that they were "loaded" when they saw Miss Hathaway walking on the side of a road and picked her up. She was walking home from a farewell party at a Mandeville disco.

They said they blindfolded her, raped her in the back seat of the car and drove to a remote area. Willie and Vaccaro each blamed the other for inflicting the 17 stab wounds that killed her.

Vaccaro was sentenced to life in prison. Gov. Edwin Edwards turned down Willie's requests for a reprieve.

Willie also had been sentenced to six life terms for the murders of a Louisiana deputy and a Mississippian and in cases of aggravated rape and aggravated kidnapping.

Vietnamese Gain On Rebels After Seizing Enemy Camp

NONG SAMET, Thailand (AP) — Backed by artillery fire, Vietnamese tanks and troops moved closer to the headquarters of a Cambodian resistance group today after seizing the group's largest stronghold, Thai military sources said.

The sources near the battle zone, speaking on condition they not be identified, said shells exploded near Ampil camp today, fired from 105mm howitzers based northeast of the camp.

Ampil is 12 miles northeast of the rebels' largest camp, Rithisen, which was overrun by the Vietnamese on Wednesday — the second day of their offensive. The beleaguered rebels of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front are armed mainly with rifles and mortars.

A guerrilla commander claimed his fighters destroyed a Soviet-built tank today while trying to dislodge Hanoi's troops from Rithisen. The commander, Lia Ne, was overheard radioing to his headquarters that his troops had destroyed a T-54 tank near the Buddhist temple at the camp and damaged another tank in close-quarters combat.

Lia Ne told reporters his troops had killed or wounded 70 to 80 Vietnamese at Rithisen.

There have been conflicting casualty figures, but Thai and guerrilla commanders have estimated several hundred Cambodians and Vietnamese killed or wounded since Hanoi's offensive began Tuesday. Artillery fire from the fighting has landed in Thailand, and Thai border forces in the area are on alert.

Gen. Arthit Kamlang-ek, Thailand's supreme military commander, toured the tense border area today. Shortly after he left Nong Samet, an artillery round — apparently fired by Vietnamese gunners — struck the ground about 100 yards from where the general had been standing.

Thai intelligence officers in Bangkok said about 1,000 Vietnamese troops had moved from the northeast and southwest today to within a half-mile of Ampil.

The U.N. Border Relief Organization said Ampil's 23,500 civilians had already evacuated their shanty bamboo and thatch shacks and were huddled along a Thai-built anti-tank ditch. The ditch is inside Thailand but the refugees have not yet fled to prepared evacuation sites deeper inside Thai territory.

An all-out on Ampil would increase the refugee burden and the fall of the camp would be a major blow to the front, one of three major resistance groups fighting Hanoi's occupation forces and the smaller army of the pro-Hanoi Cambodian government set up after Vietnam invaded in late 1978.

Ampil is better defended than was Rithisen, which was penetrated by a tank-led attack. Ampil is defended by an estimated 5,000 well-entrenched guerrillas, fringed by thick forests and somewhat protected by a lake. Rithisen is located on a flat, sparsely vegetated plain where tanks could easily maneuver.

At Rithisen, accurate Vietnamese artillery fire thwarted rebel efforts to counterattack the camp, the military sources said. More than half of the sprawling camp has been razed or burned by the Vietnamese.

Newsman were told by the guerrillas that some of their wounded fellow fighters could not be evacuated from Rithisen due to the Vietnamese artillery, which appeared to be accurately directed by forward observers.

One Thai officer, who has observed Vietnamese operations in past years, said the Vietnamese would probably pull out of Rithisen on their own. "It's not worth holding a wasteland," he said.

Guerrilla officials have said they deliberately pulled out of Rithisen and were seeking to cut the Vietnamese army's supply lines and harass it with small unit raids.

Patrick A.J. Van de Velde, a U.N. officer, said 62,000 former residents of Rithisen were now being cared for by international aid agencies at an evacuation site known as Red Hill. The U.N. border group is the key co-ordinating agency for international relief at the Thai-Cambodian border.

Van de Velde said there are now on Thai soil about 124,500 Cambodians — excluding those from Ampil — who were driven out of their camps over the past year. Most have fled since mid-November when Vietnam opened its offensive in the dry season. They are allowed to stay by the Thais on a temporary basis.

The U.N. organization and the International Committee of the Red Cross, the two key agencies at the frontier, have set up temporary evacuation sites where the refugees are quickly moved and provided with food, water and rudimentary shelter.

The Khmer Liberation Front is the strongest of the two anti-communist resistance groups but is less powerful than the communist Khmer Rouge. The front is headed by Son Sann, a former prime minister of Cambodia.

Senator Says Nose-Blowing In Eateries Is 'Gross'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Striking a blow against what he calls a "gross" and potentially unhealthy habit, a state lawmaker has proposed banning loud nose-blowing in restaurants.

Rep. Fred Williams, assistant majority floor leader of the Missouri House, wants to make it a crime for any person in a restaurant or other eating establishment to "blow his nose in a loud, obnoxious or offensive manner" while in the presence of the other patrons.

"I can't think of anything more gross," Williams said in an interview Thursday. "That's just like letting somebody spit on the floor of a restaurant while you're eating there."

Williams, who also is a candidate for mayor of St. Louis, said "a lot of people" had complained to him about restaurant nose-blowers and he had been disgusted by the action "at least a dozen times."

"If we can tell people they can't smoke in a restaurant why can't we tell them they can't blow their nose?" Williams said. "Some people don't have strong stomachs."

Williams also said allowing people to blow their noses in restaurants contributes to the spread of germs.

Although his proposed bill does not include specific penalties, Williams said a small fine probably would be appropriate.

Williams said his measure would be no more of an infringement on civil liberties than anti-smoking ordinances. Customers who needed to blow their noses could do so in a restroom without breaking the proposed law, he said.

The representative admitted some lawmakers might make fun of the measure, recalling how some House members emitted barks during debate earlier this year over a bill to toughen penalties for dogfighting.

Residence For Schroeder Bought; Family Is Trained

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A building about a block from the hospital containing four two-bedroom apartments was purchased Thursday and will be ready in February, said Linda Broaddus, a Humana Inc. spokeswoman.

It will be used "as a transitional home for our artificial heart recipients as well as transplant patients," she said. Schroeder and his wife Margaret would live there until he can return home to Jasper, Ind., about 90 miles away.

Several new artificial-heart candidates are scheduled for tests after New Year's Day, according to Polly Brown, institute administrative director. She said she did not know how many will be tested.

Schroeder's half-hour shower bath on Thursday, "tired him out a little bit," but "he said that he liked the shower much better than he liked the sponge baths" he had been receiving, Ms. Broaddus said.

"He sat in a chair and used a shower hose," Ms. Broaddus said. "He basically did everything himself, washed himself, and had a little bit of assistance with his back and to shampoo his hair."

The inventor of Schroeder's heart, Dr. Robert K. Jarvik, said he believed the strokes were probably caused by implantation of the device.

"It's very, very likely that it occurred as a result of some change from the surgery and the heart," Jarvik said. "I don't think he was destined to come up with a stroke if he had not had the surgery."

The most likely cause was the formation of blood clots in the heart or where the heart was sewn into Schroeder, or some other loose particles that broke loose from the aorta, Jarvik said.

He also said it was possible that the stronger pumping of the artificial heart dislodged plaque that had built up inside the aorta. But he said the exact cause will probably never be known.

DeVries said earlier this week the artificial heart was "probably" responsible. Tests performed on Schroeder did not prove the artificial heart caused the strokes, but they did not rule it out, doctors said.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, DEC. 29, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The day is good for getting rid of whatever unfinished tasks face you in a calm and unperturbed fashion or you can get irritable and annoyed. Put your plans into motion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Forget those secret anxieties and go ahead with plans you have in mind but don't confide in others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Quietly handle whatever tasks are ahead of you and get much done during the daytime and handle restrictions wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Get activities handled, well but don't be so concerned about getting credit right now, be it in business or personal affairs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21): Some new condition seems hard to handle or understand during the daytime and tonight an expert is not helpful.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21): Don't relegate tasks to others but handle them yourself, and be reasonable about a bill you think is too big.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Although an associate may not seem to be living up to an agreement, don't raise Cain but be sure to handle your part.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Organize that work ahead of you and don't expect assistance from others and you can handle it very well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Try not to argue when you are out with another for a good time, otherwise it will spoil the fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Gad about doing shopping, paying visits, etc., during the daytime, but tonight is best spent at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Handling outside duties is important today, but use extreme care while driving. Smile and be cheerful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Steer clear of borrowing or buying anything that will require steady payments to be made. Stay within your budget.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Hide any discontent you may feel or you could lose a valuable friend, and do whatever will improve your health and appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she has to be organized to solve problems so not to get nervous with others around. Slant education along lines of investigation and your progeny will be very successful at such. Teach to be more objective throughout the lifetime. Possibly an impatient person here.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

A MAN CALLED "BELOVED"

ONE OF THE MEANINGS OF THE NAME DAVID IS "BELOVED." THE SON OF JESSE WAS THE SECOND KING OF ISRAEL. HE WAS THE YOUNGEST OF EIGHT BROTHERS (1 SAMUEL 16:40-11; 17:12-14) MANY OF THE GOOD TRAITS IN DAVID'S CHARACTER WERE, NO DOUBT, INFLUENCED BY HIS MOTHER, WHO WAS KNOWN FOR HER GODLINESS. SOME OF THE PSALMS THAT DAVID WROTE WERE IN REMEMBRANCE OF HIS MOTHER'S DEVOUTNESS. (PSALMS 86:16; 116:16) DAVID'S ANCESTRAL HISTORY WAS PICTURESQUE AND INSPIRING ALTHOUGH, AT TIMES TAINTED BY SINFUL ACTS. (GEN. 37:26-27,38) IN PERSON, DAVID WAS RUDDY AND BEAUTIFUL TO LOOK UPON AND AS THE YOUNGEST SON, HE WAS CHARGED WITH THE DUTY AND CARE OF HIS FATHER'S SHEEP. HIS DISPLAY OF COURAGE IN THIS OCCUPATION, BY SLAYING BOTH A LION AND A BEAR WHICH ATTACKED THE FLOCKS, POINTED UP HIS GREAT BRAVERY. HE WAS ALSO POSSESSED OF MUSICAL GIFTS OF THE HIGHEST ORDER AND HE PLAYED SKILLFULLY ON THE LYRE AND WAS VERY ADEPT AT COMPOSING PSALMS. THESE NATURAL GIFTS WOULD CERTAINLY STAND HIM IN GOOD STEAD WHEN DESTINY BROUGHT HIM TO THE THRONE OF ISRAEL!

IRS Sues Renee For Back Taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has lobbed a lawsuit at Renee Richards, saying the transsexual tennis player owes $23,549 in back taxes, fines and interest.

The civil suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, alleges that Ms. Richards, who is also an eye doctor, owed the money as of Dec. 13 for failing to pay sufficient taxes for 1974, 1977 and 1979.

Her attorney, Edmund Mendrala, said he believed the suit is "a normal, routine disagreement" over record-keeping.

Ms. Richards, 50, was born Richard Raskind but underwent a sex change operation in 1975. After playing professional tennis she coached champion Martina Navratilova before retiring from the sport last year.

NEW YORK AP: — The stock market got off to a mixed start today in the next-to-last trading session of 1984.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.65 to 1,204.17 in the first half hour.

But losers took a 7-6 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators climbed 1.3 percent in November, rebounding strongly from a revised 0.5 percent drop the month before.

Some analysts saw that as new evidence that the expansion of business activity was starting to regain momentum after a slowdown in the summer and early autumn.

Others, however, said it would take more evidence of a revival to clear up a clouded outlook. They noted that retail sales reports for the holiday season are coming in below expectations.

In any case, the leading indicators figure came as no big surprise on Wall Street, though it was somewhat above most advance estimates. Brokers said many traders seemed to be inclined to wait out today's and next Monday's sessions before plotting their courses for 1985.

Toys R Us rose 1/4 to 40 1/2 in early trading. The stock fell 7 1/2 Thursday after the company said its holiday-season sales were below expectations.

Among other early volume leaders, British Telecom rose 1/2 to 12; Revlon slipped 1/4 to 34 1/2; Schlumberger gained to 37 1/2; and American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 19 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 6.40 to 1,202.52.

Declines outpaced advances by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 70.10 million shares, against 46.70 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 40 to 95.64. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .50 at 201.92.

Durham Man Gets Pardon

DURHAM (AP) — A Christmas Eve pardon from President Reagan will allow a Durham man who pleaded guilty to buying handguns with a forged gun permit in 1976 to resume his gun collecting hobby.

Johnny Charles Lay, 34, got a telephone call from his lawyer on Christmas Eve, telling him he had just received a pardon from the president. Lay had been fined $500 and was put on probation for two years for the felony plea.

A convicted felon is not allowed to use, own or deal in handguns unless pardoned by the president. A pardon doesn't expunge the conviction, but it does restore a person's civil right to bear arms, according to David Stephenson, a pardon attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice, who made the call to Lay's attorney on Christmas Eve.

"He was very pleased," said Lay's attorney, Jim Craven.

Lay bought a 25-caliber pistol from a licensed gun dealer in Person County on June 10, 1975, with a counterfeit permit and a month later went to another dealer in Orange County and bought a 22-caliber pistol.

The permit process allows authorities to verify no felonies have been committed by the person seeking the weapon. A permit is not required for a rifle or shotgun.

Weather Blamed In Deaths Of 11 People

By The Associated Press
Freezing rain, fog and snow made an encore appearance today across much of the North after a surprise storm glazed highways with an icy crust, and bad weather was blamed for the deaths of 11 people.

A travelers' advisory was issued today for Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey and southern New York for freezing rain, drizzle that made roads slick. Advisories also were posted for ice-covered roads in parts of the Dakotas, Minnesota and upper Michigan.

Meanwhile, record warm temperatures were set in more than a dozen Midwestern cities today.

Snow blanketed much of the Northeast on Thursday, snarling traffic, causing delays at airports and surprising forecasters who predicted only a dusting.

A moisture-laden storm also barreled into the Colorado mountains late Thursday, and National Weather Service forecaster Jim Wiesmueller in Denver said, "The snow will be in the 8- to 18-inch range down there. They could get up to 2 feet in a few areas, Wolf Creek Pass in particular."

New York City got 6 inches in its first heavy snowfall of the year.

A 38-year-old man was killed and 19 people were injured in a 28-car accident that occurred when one car slid on ice on New York City's Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive late Thursday night, and then over a period of time, other cars just drove into it," police spokesman Sgt. Peter Ruane said today.

More than 100 cars were involved in a chain reaction pileup on Interstate 95 near Pawtucket, R.I., and 26 people were sent to hospitals for treatment of cuts and bruises.

"It was complete chaos out there," city police Capt. Patrick J. McConaghy said today of the Thursday night crash.

A 47-year-old New York man was killed and nine people were seriously injured when the van they were riding in slid off the snow-covered Long Island Expressway and into a parked truck, police said. In another Long Island crash, a 36-year-old man was killed, police said.

In Michigan, an 11-year-old girl died in a highway accident Wednesday as heavy snow from the same storm pounded the southern part of the state. Police called the death storm-related.

In Upland, Calif., a pilot and three passengers were killed when a light plane trying to land crashed more than 100 yards from a private airfield's runway in a nighttime

Quake Hits Eastern USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strong earthquake occurred today off the east coast of the Kamchatka peninsula in the northeastern Soviet Union, the U.S. Geological Survey reported.

The tremor, which had a preliminary magnitude of 6.7 on the Richter scale, was recorded by monitors in to $26.40 a barrel.

Andrew Lebow, an oil analyst at the investment firm of Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc. in New York, attributed the rise in Arabian Light prices to stepped-up attacks on tankers by Iran and Iraq in the Persian Gulf. He also said there was "some optimism OPEC might come up with something."

OPEC's members are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Libya, Kuwait, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

A port official here also said there should be no concern about the chemical's arrival.

"We move it through with all confidence that the regulations will take the proper safety into account," said Donald Hawkins, risk manager for Virginia International Terminals Inc., operator of the state-owned Norfolk International Terminals. "We've moved it very safely for many, many years."

Hawkins said the chemical is stored in 55-gallon drums, which are stored inside steamship containers.

Lieutenant Says Priest Was Beaten

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A secret police lieutenant on trial in the killing of a pro-Solidarity priest said today that the priest was beaten unconscious after trying to escape his abductors. He said he reluctantly took part in the slaying on his commanding officer's orders.

The lieutenant, Leszek Pekala, testified for the second day as the trial of four secret police officers accused of the Oct. 19 abduction and slaying of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, 37, continued in a heavily guarded courtroom in this northern Polish city. The trial opened Thursday.

Pekala said in response to a judge's question that the abductors' car with the priest bound and gagged in the trunk was stopped twice by police patrols.

He said the abduction could not have been carried out without a special pass enabling the holders to avoid police inspections.

"This pass was of great importance," Pekala, 32, told the court. "Had we not been given it, we would never have decided to undertake this action."

In his earlier testimony, Pekala said he was sent by his superior officer, Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, 33, to pick up the pass from Col. Adam Pietruszka, the deputy director of the Interior Ministry department in which the secret police officers served.

Pietruszka, 47, is charged with aiding and abetting three officers charged with kidnap and murder in the death of Popieluszko, according to the indictment read in court Thursday.

The killing of Popieluszko, a staunch defender of the outlawed independent trade union Solidarity, shocked Poland's predominantly Roman Catholic population. The impact of the priest's death was so severe that it led Communist authorities to take the unprecedented step of placing secret police officers on trial for the crime.

Jackson's Late Run Wins For Auburn

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The big play — only a fingertip away for Auburn and halfback Bo Jackson, whose 40-yard, fourth-quarter touchdown run gave the 16th-ranked Tigers a 21-15 Liberty Bowl victory.

Despite four pass interceptions by the Auburn secondary — one turned into a 35-yard TD run by cornerback Kevin Porter — Arkansas, 7-4-1, came within a whisker of capping its 1984 season with an upset victory Thursday night at Liberty Bowl

Memorial Stadium.

After seeing an early 3-0 lead turned into a 14-3 first-quarter deficit on a 2-yard run by Jackson and Porter's TD return, the Southwest Conference Razorbacks gave Auburn and Coach Pat Dye everything they expected and a little more before becoming the Tigers' ninth victim in 13 starts.

"They did exactly what we thought they'd do, and they did it well," Dye said. "The only thing that beat Arkansas is four turnovers."

The Razorbacks put on a determined rally in the fourth quarter, scoring on a 2-yard run by fullback Marshall Foreman with 11:56 remaining to cut the Southeastern Conference Tigers' lead to 14-9. Then they came within one play of possibly taking home the trophy.

That play, on fourth-and-one from the Tiger 46, saw Arkansas halfback Bobby Joe Edmonds drop a sure touchdown pass from quarterback Brad Taylor in the open at the Tiger 15.

Five plays later, Jackson, who gained 88 yards on 18 carries and was named the game's MVP, slithered through the hands of the Razorback defense at the Arkansas 38 and raced into the end zone with the deciding touchdown.

"We went for it all on fourth-and-one," said first-year Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield. "We felt the play would be open. If we scored, it would put us ahead and would force them to throw the ball late in the game when they were tired."

Edmonds said it was a case of "being too open."

"It was a lack of concentration. It looked like the pass would be long, then I thought I'd have to dive for it. Then the ball was there and I knew I was in trouble when I felt it go off my hands and into the air," said Edmonds, who set a Liberty Bowl record for pass receptions with 10, covering 68 yards.

After Jackson's scoring run, the Razorbacks got a 25-yard TD pass from Taylor to split end James Shibest with 3:10 remaining, but could not move past their own 45 as the clock ran out on their final possession.

"I told our team they would have to fight and scratch the whole game if they were to beat Arkansas, and that's exactly what they did," Dye said.

"Everybody knew coming into the game that Arkansas wasn't that big," said Jackson. "They're quick and get around the football. I didn't expect a game like this at all. I thought we'd be able to move the football well, but they proved me wrong on the first series."

Despite the loss, Hatfield found little fault with his players.

"This team left a tradition for teams in years to come," said the Arkansas coach. "They never doubted they'd win. Even on the last play our players felt they would win."

For Dye, who has led Auburn to 9-, 11- and 9-win seasons in the last three years, the victory was viewed as a springboard for an Auburn program which was ranked No. 1 in the preseason.

"Winning the game certainly makes it just that much better a trip for us," said Dye. "This is a good way to end the season and look ahead to next season."

Rose, Farmville Advance In Field

HOLLYWOOD — Farmville Central and Rose High School moved into the winners' bracket of the Conley Invitational Girls Holiday Tournament yesterday, but North Pitt and the hosting Valkyries both were first round losers.

Farmville Central topped Kinston, 52-47, while Rose nipped West Craven, 51-49. North Pitt fell to Goldsboro, 55-24, while Roanoke slipped past Conley, 40-37.

Today's pairings send West Craven up against Kinston at 4 p.m., followed by Conley and North Pitt at 5:30 p.m. in the losers' bracket games. Rose and Farmville collide at 7 p.m. with Goldsboro and Roanoke meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the winners' bracket games.

The final round of play, deciding all eight places, will be played on Saturday.

In the opening game, Farmville slipped out into a 15-13 lead over Kinston after one period and padded that to 30-25 by the end of the half. In the third quarter, the Lady Jaguars continued to pull away, working up a 46-33 lead to take into the final quarter. In that, however, Kinston rallied, 12-6, in the final frame, but never quite caught up.

Lisa Lang led Farmville with 18 points while Stephanie Newton added 14 and Joy Peaden had 12. Kinston was led by C. Murrell with 22, while J. Whitfield had 11.

The contest between Rose and West Craven was the tightest of the day, with neither team giving an inch along the way. It was tied at the end of the first period, 8-8, and again at the half, 23-23. By the end of the third quarter, it was still tied, 35-35.

In the final quarter, the two continued to play neck-and-neck until Pam Smith cashed in two free throws with eight seconds left to give the Rampettes the victory.

Chris Holec led the Rose scoring with 14 points, while Kim Dupree had 13 and Smith had 12.

Rose was hampered by the absence of starting guard Vicki Parrott, out of town for the holidays, and Kim Bridges, a top reserve, suffered a shoulder injury late in the game and will miss the final two games.

Scoring for West Craven was not available.

North Pitt never stood a chance after the first eight minutes as Goldsboro ran away with the third game. After trailing by only one point after the first quarter, 12-11, the Pant-HERS were caught in a buzz saw. Goldsboro outraced them to the half, 20-6, to hold a 32-17 lead at intermission.

Goldsboro continued to run away with it in the final half, building up a 43-20 lead at the midpoint. They outscored North Pitt, 12-4, in the final period.

Pam Williams led Goldsboro with 17 points while Connie Taylor had 12 and K'ia Marshall has 10. No one scored in double figures for North Pitt.

Gloria Duggins proved too much for the Valkyries in the final game of the evening, scoring 25 points in leading the Lady Redskins to their win. Roanoke held a 12-8 lead after one period and extended that to 25-16 by the end of the half.

In the third period, Conley rallied, 12-6, and cut the lead back to just three points, 31-28, but they could come no closer in the final quarter as both teams pushed in nine points.

Trellany Boyd led Conley's scoring with 17 points.

Rainbow All-ACC Finale

By The Associated Press

The Rainbow Classic final in Hawaii will be an All-Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament between Georgia Tech and Maryland while 14th-ranked North Carolina State takes on No. 5 St. John's for the Holiday Festival championship.

The Wolfpack downed Rutgers 80-68 in the Holiday Festival tournament Thursday night before a crowd of 12,570 at Madison Square Garden in New York. In the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii, No. 10 Georgia Tech defeated No. 11 Washington 65-58, while host Hawaii fell to Maryland 79-71.

In other ACC action tonight, Clemson travels to Nashville, Tenn., for the Music City Tournament, Wake Forest will play in the Sun Bowl Tournament in El Paso, Texas, and North Carolina takes on Hawaii-Hilo.

N.C. State gained the final of the Holiday Festival Thursday night in its first game without 6-foot-11 freshman starter Chris Washburn, who was suspended last Friday after being booked on a second-degree burglary charge.

"In adversity," said N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano, whose 1982-83 team won the NCAA title, "clubs tend to come together and pull together. Whether it'll translate into wins and losses, I don't know."

Lorenzo Charles, a 6-foot-7, 255-pound senior, scored 24 points and Spud Webb, a 5-7 senior, added 16 points, seven rebounds and seven assists to give the Wolfpack the victory.

St. John's, a six-time winner of the Holiday Festival, downed Old Dominion, making its Garden debut, 77-66 behind Walter Berry's 15 points and nine rebounds.

Both N.C. State and St. John's will carry 7-1 records into Saturday's finale.

"We are different team," said Valvano of the loss of Washburn, who gets a court hearing Jan. 8 which will determine his status. "We miss Chris on offense. We're back to the same team as last year. We don't have the depth."

What the loss of Washburn means is that Charles, hero of the 1983 championship game, will be double- and triple-teamed as he was by Rutgers, 4-3.

"I'm used to it," said Charles said, who hit on eight of 11 field goal tries.

As for the confrontation with St. John's, Valvano said, "They have nice balance. It's going to take a great effort to beat them."

Because of the absence of Washburn and foul trouble, Valvano ordered his team into a delay game with just under seven minutes left and the Wolfpack leading 66-53.

Rutgers then outscored N.C. State 10-3 behind Eric Riggins and Chris Remley to cut it to 69-63 with 3:22

Aloha Teams On Winning Streaks

HONOLULU (AP) — The weather might not be hot, at least by Hawaii standards, but the teams playing in the third Aloha Bowl on Saturday certainly are.

Southern Methodist, 9-2 and co-champion of the Southwest Conference, won its last five regular season games. Notre Dame, 7-4, won its last four.

"Certainly, closing out the season with four straight wins has been a plus for them (Notre Dame)," SMU Coach Bobby Collins said Thursday. "But I think we are playing good football right now, too. It should be a great football game."

SMU flew in for its combination business trip and vacation Wednesday afternoon. And even if Collins had given his 101 players some early free time, they wouldn't have had much to do with it. The island of Oahu had been drenched with rain since Monday.

"It's like a business trip for us, with a lot of pleasure also," said SMU's star tailback Reggie Dupard, the lead horse of "Pony Express II."

"Hawaii's always a place that I wanted to go," Dupard added. "Now I have a free trip and a chance to play Notre Dame."

Although the Mustangs ranked tenth in the country, and Notre Dame 17th, the Fighting Irish were early two-point favorites.

"The oddsmakers have them picked over us," said offensive tackle Dale Hellestrae. "I don't really understand that. But if we win, it will be great for our program."

Hellestrae, a 6-6, 282-pound senior, also said the Aloha Bowl is a business-first proposition for the Mustangs. "The first thing we have to take care of out there is to win the game," he said. "You can enjoy yourself, but the trip isn't as much fun if you don't win the game."

Or if it rains too much.

Rally Falls Short

Kansas City Kings Coach Phil Johnson didn't let a little thing like being outscored by 20 points in the third quarter get him down. "I knew they were going to have a run," Johnson said after the Kings rallied to defeat the Houston Rockets 96-92 in a National Basketball Association game Thursday night. "But I just told the guys that we had to be patient and play our game."

Houston was hampered by Ralph Sampson's foul trouble. He fouled out with 8:57 left in the fourth period after scoring nine points. "We got good defense on him," said Johnson. "And, obviously, he was off his game a little."

Miami's Passing Offense To Face Its Toughest Test

By The Associated Press
 The record-setting passing offense of the Miami Dolphins could be facing its sternest test of the year Saturday when it matches up with the ballhawking secondary of the Seattle Seahawks.

Miami quarterback Dan Marino broke the National Football League record for touchdown passes in a season by 12 with a total 48, including a record 19 to Mark Clayton. Clayton and Mark Duper each caught more than 70 passes for more than 1,300 yards.

"He's difficult to sack because he's got the arm. He can launch the ball with his arm; he doesn't have to get his body into it."

"Marino does an excellent job of throwing the ball where other quarterbacks wouldn't dare," Harris added. "Some quarterbacks have trouble throwing to little receivers, but not Marino. He instills confidence in them and they instill confidence in him because they get the ball. That's what counts."

Conley Captures Four Titles

The Seahawks, 12-4 this season, led the NFL with 38 interceptions, so something has to give when the two teams meet in the first of four playoff games this weekend.

MOREHEAD CITY — D.H. Conley's wrestlers captured four championships and had three second place winners as the Vikings finished second in the West Carteret Invitational Wrestling.

Washington finished in first place in the meet with a total of 136 points. Conley was second with 127, followed by New Bern with 104. The hosting Patriots had 99 1/2, while Athend Drive was fifth with 81 1/2, Plymouth was sixth with 62 1/2, Havelock, seventh with 51 1/2, and Camp Lejeune finished eighth with 33.

Conley returns to dual meet action on Wednesday, January 2, hosting West Craven in a Coastal Conference match.

"They believe in themselves," Duper said. "They are aggressive and they attack the offense very well. They try to make you make mistakes. What we have to do is attack their secondary like they attack our offense."

Conley's David Farris (98), Kerry Farris (126), Martin Anderson (155) and Gerald Harper (heavyweight) each won titles. Second place finishers were Jackie King (119), Joel Maye (132), and Ricky Rice (195).

Kerry Farris' victory in the tournament was his second straight in that event, while Anderson won what Coach Milt Sherman called the toughest weight class of the tournament. Harper was also a victor in last week's WRAL Invitational Tournament in Raleigh and is unbeaten at 12-0 so far this year.

Summary of Conley wrestlers:
 98 — David Farris (C) bye, d. Dean McCormick (WC) 7-2; d. Andre Nicco (AD), 19-1, to win first place.
 105 — no entry
 112 — no entry
 119 — Jackie King (C) p. Jimmy Davis (AD); p. Jim Vasilko (CL); pinned by Brian Stokes (W), to finish second.
 126 — Kerry Farris (C) bye, p. Kevin Anderson (CL); d. Marty Hodges (W), 15-2, to win first place.
 132 — Joel Maye (C) d. Tony Williams (AD), 9-2; d. Bill Snow (CL), 19-7; pinned by Thomas Locklear (WC), to finish second.
 138 — Carter Atkins (C) lost to Michael Jackson, 8-3.
 145 — no entry.
 155 — Martin Anderson (C) p. Lee Young (CL); d. Kent Keyes (W), 5-4; d. Anthony Tyndall (NB), 11-3, to win first place.
 167 — Derrick Parker (C) lost to Ed Newhouse (CL), 6-1.
 185 — Clifton Clemons (C) was pinned by Carlton Williams (P).
 195 — Ricky Rice (C) bye; d. Joe Fitzgerald (CL), 10-7; lost to Joe Couch (NB), 6-4, to finish second.
 HWT — Gerald Harper (C) bye; p. Craig Cassidy (AD); d. Anthony Grist (NB), 7-5, to win first place.

Miami Coach Don Shula, who Dolphins finished 14-2, said Seattle "has great defensive personnel."

With only ten wrestlers in the 13 classes, we were in seventh place after the first round," Sherman said. "But we had an outstanding second round with all seven of our survivors"

Ken Easley led the NFL with 10 interceptions, two of which he returned for touchdowns, and Harris had six interceptions, also with two for scores.

Seattle Coach Don Shula said his Seahawks are wary of Marino, despite their defensive successes this season. They held the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders to one touchdown in a 13-7 wild-card playoff victory last week.

"This guy has got the quickest release and is the most accurate passer I've seen in a long, long

State, St. John's Move Into Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — The alley-oop passes from Spud Webb to Lorenzo Charles are a sight to behold.

Whether 14th-ranked North Carolina State can work the same magic against No. 5 St. John's in Saturday's championship of the 33rd Holiday Festival basketball tournament remains to be seen.

N.C. State gained the final Thursday night in its first game without 6-foot-11 freshman starter Chris Washburn, who was suspended last Friday after being booked on a second-degree burglary charge.

"In adversity," said N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano, whose 1982-83 team won the NCAA title, "clubs tend to come together and pull together. Whether it'll translate into wins and losses, I don't know."

Charles, a 6-foot-7, 255-pound senior, scored 24 points and Webb, a 5-7 senior, added 16 points, seven rebounds and seven assists before the crowd of 12,570 at Madison Square Garden to down Rutgers 80-68.

St. John's, a six-time winner of the Holiday Festival, downed Old Dominion, making its Garden debut, 77-66 behind Walter Berry's 15 points and nine rebounds.

Georgia Tech, ranked 10th, won Thursday night's only battle of ranked teams, beating No. 11 Washington 65-58 in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. Ninth-ranked DePaul which crunched Creighton 87-58 in the only other game involving a ranked team.

"A lot of people may think I'm whacky," said Rutgers Coach Tom Young, "but I'd rather see Washburn than Webb getting more playing time."

Both N.C. State and St. John's will carry 7-1 records into Saturday's finale.

"We are different team," said Valvano of the loss of Washburn, who gets a court hearing Jan. 8 which will determine his status. "We miss Chris on offense. We're back to the same team as last year. We don't have the depth."

What the loss of Washburn means is that Charles, hero of the 1983 championship game, will be double- and triple-teamed as he was by Rutgers, 4-3.

"I'm used to it," said Charles said, who hit on eight of 11 field goal tries.

As for the confrontation with St. John's, Valvano said, "They have nice balance. It's going to take a great effort to beat them."

Because of the absence of Washburn and foul trouble, Valvano ordered his team into a delay game with just under seven minutes left and the Wolfpack leading 66-53.

Rutgers then outscored N.C. State 10-3 behind Eric Riggins and Chris Remley to cut it to 69-63 with 3:22 left, but the Wolfpack cashed in on the foul line with guard Terry Gannon making six free throws to pull away again.

N.C. State also got 16 points from Gannon and 14 from Nate McMillan. Guard John Battle, seven for 20 from the field, paced the Scarlet Knights with 21.

Brian Ellerbe of Rutgers set a Festival record with 16 assists.

St. John's, which led 43-30 at halftime as Chris Mullin scored 10 of his 12 points, shook of an Old Dominion rally which cut a 16-point second-half margin to six with 5:25 to go.

"People are going on the assumption we are perfect," said St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca. "We weren't perfect. It's a game of mistakes. We played well and they're a pretty good team."

ODU, 5-2 and winner of five straight before meeting the Redmen, used a pressing defense to twice come to within five points of the Redmen late in the second half, but St. John's pulled away, just as it did in the first half.

Mike Moses scored 13 points, Willie Glass 12 and Bill Wennington 10 for St. John's.

"It was our first game since Dec. 15 and our second since Dec. 8," said ODU Coach Paul Webb, "that hurt us."

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said his team failed to play with any intensity for 37½ minutes, but he liked the final 2½.

"We finally got a little intensity at that point," said Cremins. "Bruce Dalrymple had poor ballgame all night long, but he got intense when he had to."

Dalrymple, hit a jump shot and followed it with a tip shot with 2:16 left in the game to put Georgia Tech ahead for good against the Huskies 57-56.

In Thursday's second game, Maryland beat host Hawaii 70-71 as was to meet Georgia Tech tonight for the championship.

Mark Price scored 20 points for Georgia Tech, while center Yvon Joseph added 13 points. Forward John Salley had 11 points. Dalrymple scored 10.

Kevin Holmes scored a career-high 23 points and Tyron Corbin added 22 as DePaul extended its home-court winning streak to 32 games. DePaul, 8-2, raced to a 42-16 lead at halftime, then scored the first eight points of the second half and coasted to victory.

Troy Taylor scored 18 points to lead five Ohio State players in double figures as the Buckeyes trounced Tennessee-Chattanooga 84-62 in the first round of the Red Lobster Classic.

Ohio State will face Stetson, a 66-56 victor over Florida A&M, for the tournament title.

Buck Johnson and Terry Coner each scored 14 points to lift Alabama to a 73-55 victory over the University of New Orleans an opening-round game of the Sugar Bowl tournament.

Olden Polynice scored 25 points and dominated the backboards to lead Virginia to a 66-54 victory over Penn State in tournament's opening game.

Sophomore Elliot Fullen scored 22 points to help Northwestern defeat Butler 61-48; Bubba Jennings hit a three-point play with 14 seconds left in overtime, giving Texas Tech a 76-75 triumph over Colorado, and Michael Brooks tallied 20 points to help Tennessee down Lafayette 77-58.

Osborne Denies He Broke Rules

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Booker Brown says he accused Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne of violating NCAA rules in recruiting him 12 years ago because Osborne "lied on national television about not breaking the rules."

However, in a telephone interview Thursday night, Brown acknowledged that he had been angry at Osborne ever since 1972 when the alleged incidents occurred because he felt that the coach had damaged the relationship between Brown and his mother.

Osborne at the time was an assistant coach and Nebraska's chief recruiter. He denied Brown's charges Thursday in New Orleans where Nebraska is preparing for its Sugar Bowl game with Louisiana State on New Year's Day.

"My mother passed away in 1974," Brown said. "For a good while after what happened in 1972, she believed that this man (Osborne) could do more for her and more for me than anybody else."

"I never at any point opposed my mother on anything. This time I did. That was the first time I felt friction with her in any way. This is what I had to go through because somebody (Osborne) came out and recruited her."

"I'm sure he wouldn't remember that, either. If he wants to deny it, that's fine. I know I'm right. I've got my convictions and I'm going to stick by them."

Brown was an offensive lineman at Southern Cal in 1972 and 1973. Before he decided to attend Southern Cal, he was recruited by Nebraska.

While being recruited, Brown said on Wednesday, Osborne offered him a car, money, airplane tickets for his mother to fly back to Nebraska to watch him play, and other items illegal under NCAA rules.

Osborne, when asked why someone would make such accusations, said, "After 12 years you'd have to wonder. I personally don't think he was acting on his own. I don't think it was another school."

When asked if the claim could be related to his accusations that some talent agents are illegally approaching college players prior to completion of their eligibility, Osborne said, "I can't say any more than that, but I guess that could be a possibility."

In addition to denying all of Brown's charges, Osborne had said he would be willing to take a lie detector test.

Bob Devaney, the head football coach in 1972 and now Nebraska's athletic director, said, "Tom Osborne has never done an illegal act in college football."

"It seems very peculiar that somebody would come up with this 14 years or so later. The timing is very strange, too. Obviously somebody is trying to discredit our recruiting efforts."

Brown indicated he thought the two may have been referring to Mike Trope, whom he described as his former agent, and "still my friend."

Trope has represented several top college players in negotiations with the pros.

"He visited my mother without my knowledge," Brown said of Osborne. "That was the ultimate in deception. He convinced her more than he convinced me that I should go to Nebraska. She was excited about taking trips across the country on the school's expense."

"That's what he said to me and to her. No one else offered me such a thing. I decided I'd be better off going to USC. My mother wanted me to go to Nebraska."

"I'm not doing this for publicity. I don't need that. My whole point is that it's wrong for him to lie on national television that he hasn't done this because I know for a fact that he has done it. He broke the rules. He said he didn't. I say he did. I know this first-hand."

Brown, who played in the World Football League and for the San Diego Chargers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League after his career at Southern Cal, is now a real estate investor in the nearby San Fernando Valley.

He said he had an offer to make to Osborne.

"In 1972, Tom Osborne offered my mother plane trips and today, in 1984, I'm going to reciprocate by offering Tom Osborne a free plane ticket to Los Angeles and a hotel room for one night for the purpose of having a professional administer a lie detector test to Mr. Osborne at my expense," he said.

"A pre-condition to the offer would be my ability to have the lie detector examiner ask Coach Osborne questions that expand beyond my experiences with him regarding NCAA violations."

"While in Nebraska on my recruiting trip, I personally saw Coach Osborne give money to ballplayers on his own football team. I do not want to embarrass those individuals or put them on the spot, but I would like to offer to test Coach Osborne's credibility by asking him questions not only about what happened to me but what I saw him do in the way of violating NCAA rules."

"Also, I would like to add a bit to my earlier statement. The car that Tom Osborne allowed me to use was a Ford LTD. In addition, when Tom Osborne gave me the $300 in spending money, it was at a banquet being held at the governor's mansion in Nebraska and we had a fish dinner."

Edneyville leads the 1-A's with a total of 65 points, while Jamesville, which won the football championship is tied with Acme-Delco and Rosman for second place with 55 points. Cullowhee is fifth with 52½ points.

Creswell, another member of the Tobacco Belt Conference with Jamesville, is tied for ninth with 27½ points.

Whiteville is the 2-A leader with 107½ points, followed by Swansboro with 100. Wallace-Rose Hill stands third with 82½, followed by Leford with 67½ and Charlotte Catholic with 65.

Jordan and Watagua finished the fall season with 120 points each. Skyland's T.C. Roberson is third with 110, followed by Statesville and West Henderson with 97½ each.

South Mecklenburg heads the 4-A standings with 170 points. Winston-Salem Reynolds is second with 162½, followed by Greensboro Grimsley with 157½.

Fourth place is held by Raleigh Sanderson with 152½, while Chapel Hill is fifth with 137.86.

Additional standings from the winter and spring seasons will determine the state winners in the four divisions for 1984-85.

NATURE'S ARRANGEMENT . . . of live and dead trees is graphically shown in this creek shore area of shallow water. When age or storm fells one of the trees — primarily gum or cypress, the fallen trunks wedge themselves into any convenient opening between or alongside the living trees.

ROOT FORMATIONS . . . that resemble wood sculpture or forest monsters, depending on the viewer's viewpoint, nestle at the base of their parent tree. The largest of the three is more than two feet high.

Exploring The Woods And Waters of Martin County's Conoho Creek

A Winter Trek Within A Creek Swamp

Rural eastern North Carolina abounds in fascinating strips of swampland that adjoin the shores of the area's numerous creeks and small, often unnamed streams. During most of the year, these swamps are easily accessible only to seasoned woodspeople who know how to avoid hazards such as snakes, insects and poisonous plants.

In the winter months, the story is different. Though the brilliant wildflowers, the dense canopy of leaves are gone for the year, there is a special compensation in the subtle beauty of gray and silver tree trunks and limbs, the sharp delineation of shadows on the forest floor, and the calm dark water of a creek channel that spreads its overflow onto innumerable areas of flat shore.

A typical creek swamp is the one pictured on this page — Conoho Creek in the area of Butler's Bridge on the Poplar Point Road between Williamston and Hamilton.

Shortly after entering the forest, one is soon aware of forest restfulness, of being removed from the daily noise of the world. The call of winter birds, the rustle of beech leaves that cling to branches long after other leaves have fallen are the predominant forest sounds.

On and along the shore, gums and cypresses grow, with a sprinkling of beech, maple and pine. With the exception of a rare forest giant that has overpowered its immediate neighbors, the trees grow close together, and are tall. Sometimes a breeze will cause the tops of the trees to rub together, creating a melancholy music.

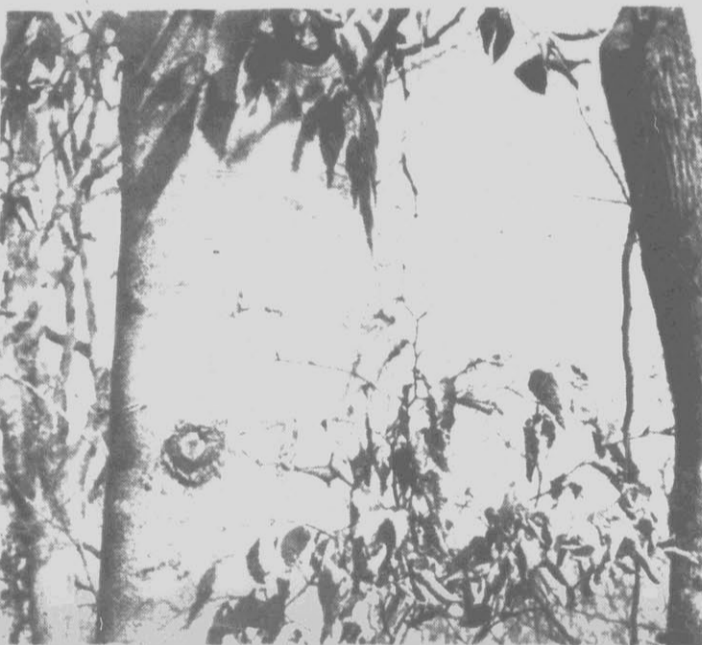

This forest, like many of its type, is seldom subjected to logging or thinning, and consequently is a study in dead and live trees. The fallen trees are wedged between living trees, or after a time of deterioration, have drifted to more open areas of water. A variety of fungi encase the molding wood, giving bright notes of color — white, brown, green, maroon, yellow, orange.

Where cypresses grow, the tree's exotic root formations — cypress knees — surround the trees, their appearance much like miniature forest castles and cathedrals. Sometimes, the roots will attain a height equal to that of man.

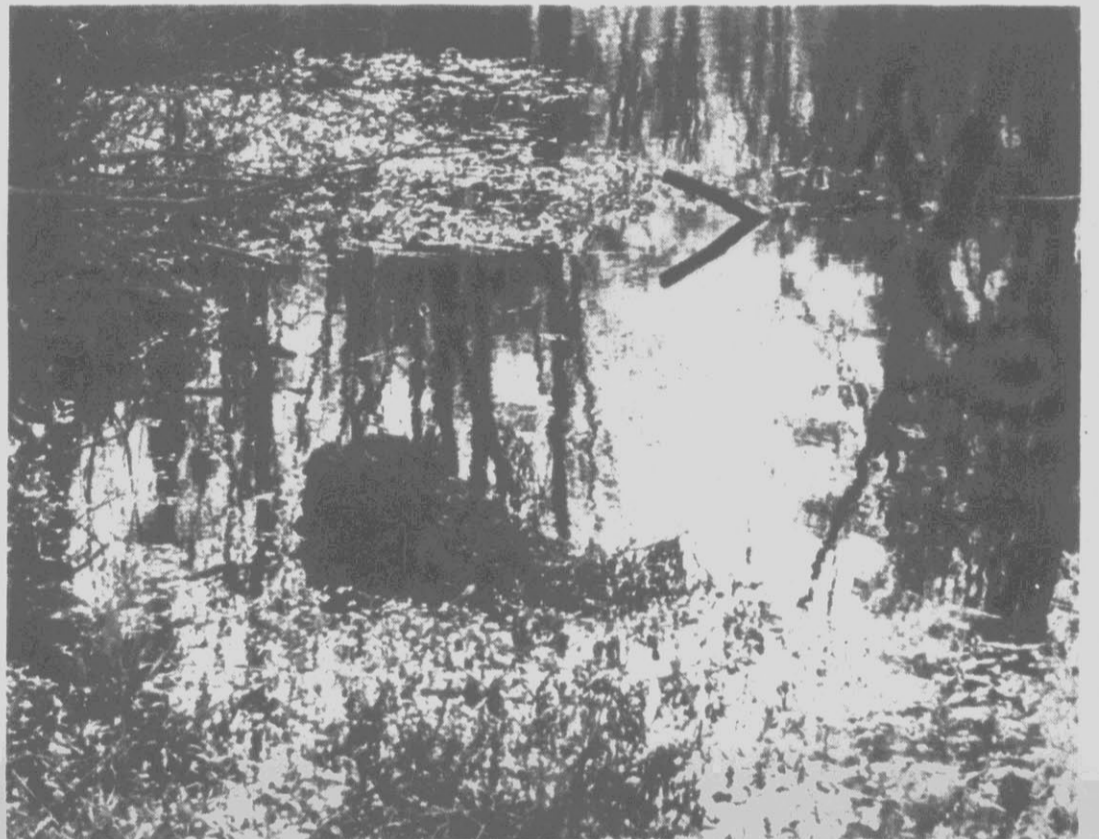

At this point bordering Conoho Creek, there are several intriguing circular mounds ringed and rising 10 to 20 feet above circular depressions — formed by nature? Or long unrecognized sites of ancient Indian campsites? And on the slopes of these mounds, green ferns flourish.

A winter trek in a creek swamp is full of surprise and rewards. At most of these sites, it is not difficult to get permission from a landowner to explore for an hour or so in a natural setting not familiar to many residents of our area.

Recruiting Effort By FBI Begins

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — The FBI is looking for a few good men and women.

A college education is required, along with the ability to write clearly and communicate well verbally. Proficiency with firearms is helpful but not necessary — at first. The ability to do 70 pushups and run 2 miles is a great help.

The federal bureau will be involved in a massive, nationwide recruiting effort for new agents in the next two years, and North Carolina FBI director Robert Pence says his bureau will be doing its part.

"Our efforts in recruiting will be significant," Pence said. "We can service some of the bureaus where there will be need."

Pence said the FBI is trying to get back into a better balance with counter-intelligence, and the new agents will go where the need is greatest.

North Carolina has proven to be a good hunting ground for special agents, Pence said, largely because of the state's university system, the network of military bases, and a wealth of minority schools.

And the interest in becoming an agent is greater than many might imagine.

Pence said his office starts with hundreds of applications. Those are weeded down to perhaps a few hundred, who are allowed to complete a longer, more complex form. The number is pared to perhaps 50 candidates who are chosen to be interviewed by an FBI panel. Pence said about half of those attend the FBI training school at Quantico, Va.

At the training school, the candidate is faced with 593 hours of total training. That includes 89 hours of firearms instruction and 64 hours of classroom work in legal affairs.

Students are also required to pass physical training tests, with one calling for the ability to run two miles in 16:30 for men and 18:45 for women. Other physical tests are rated on a point scale. Men and women will receive 10 points for doing 100 situps, and men can get another 10 points by doing more than 71 pushups, while women can get 10 for pushing up more than 50 times.

In all, the candidates must come up with 30 points on the physical tests in order to pass.

Getting through the academy translates to a starting salary of around $30,000 and the opportunity to travel.

College graduates are recruited because their intelligence and study habits help them remember the legal precedents that can be the stickiest part of classroom work, Pence said.

"It's not something you can go into with half an attitude," Pence said. "But it's not like sitting in some of the philosophy courses you find. The tests are based on the material."

And while many candidates don't have previous firearm and self-defense training, Pence said that is not often a stumbling block. Students must be proficient with both handguns and shotguns, both accuracy and judgment in using the weapon. Pence said instructors at Quantico will work overtime to give students extra help on the firing range.

Dru Kurrle, one of the female agents in the Charlotte bureau, said she had no previous experience with guns, but the firearms training turned out to be one of her favorite courses of study.

"The firearms were no problem," she said. "I like firearms." In her experience as an FBI agent, she said she has had to draw her weapon, which she has nearby at her desk, but she has never had to fire.

Mrs. Kurrle, who holds a master's degree in criminal justice and psychology as well as a law degree, is presently working on bank robbery cases. She is responsible for interviewing bank employees and customers present during the robberies, and to develop enough information to make an arrest.

1984 has been a busy year for her, as North Carolina has suffered through one of its worst years for the crime.

Mrs. Kurrle said the first six to nine weeks of training is generally the breaking point for candidates because that's when the stress level is the highest. By then, the first written examinations have started and the physical training has begun in earnest.

Pence said it takes an average of about nine months to complete the application process and the training. Applications, interviews and physical examinations can be handled in Charlotte and passing applicants move on to Quantico.

N.C. Officials Are Satisfied Waste Rules Are Adequate

RALEIGH (AP) — Virginia and Georgia will take extra precautions when a shipment of a chemical that killed about 2,500 people in Bhopal, India, passes through, but North Carolina officials said they will not follow suit.

Thirteen tons of methyl isocyanate will be trucked down Interstate 95 this weekend en route to a Union Carbide plant in Georgia. The toxic chemical will be unloaded from a ship Saturday at Hampton Roads, Va. Union Carbide notified state and federal agencies of the shipment.

North Carolina authorities said they were satisfied that existing rules and regulations governing hazardous waste were adequate to protect the public.

"There's no legal requirement to notify us about the transportation of anything but spent nuclear fuel," said Lt. Col. Jack F. Cardwell, executive officer of the North Carolina Highway Patrol. "There's a lot of stuff transported other than that (methyl isocyanate) that's dangerous."

The Virginia Highway Patrol said it would inspect the two tractor-trailers transporting the chemical.

In South Carolina, the state Department of Health and Environmental Control has alerted its 24-hour emergency response team, a spokeswoman for the agency said.

Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris told reporters last week that he would provide a state escort for any future shipments of the chemical to Union Carbide's plant in Woodbine, Ga.

Cardwell said North Carolina did not plan to duplicate the safety checks planned for trucks in Virginia. But he said he would discuss with other officials a possible patrol escort when the trucks are in North Carolina.

Capt. H.B. McKee, administrative assistant of zone operations for the patrol, said he would be satisfied with simply alerting troopers to the shipment.

"We're making our troopers on patrol aware that it is being transported through here, and that's about all we can do," McKee said. "We have hundreds and hundreds of hazardous materials traveling through the state all the time, and they're (shippers) not required to notify us. This is a courtesy."

William L. Meyer, an environmental engineer with the Division of Solid and Hazardous Waste Management, echoed the highway patrol.

"We look at methyl isocyanate as no different from any other hazardous material," he said.

North Carolina officials said they did not know exactly what time the shipment would enter the state.

Since the Dec. 3 gas leak in India, thousands of gallons of methyl isocyanate have been shipped to the Georgia plant to be converted into Temik, a pesticide manufactured there.

Hydroelectric Projects Are Popular In Western N.C. As Power Suppliers

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Hydroelectric projects in the North Carolina mountains range from Richard Hotaling's backyard operation in Cullowhee to the 1.4 million kilowatts the Metropolitan Sewage District of Buncombe County hopes to generate by rebuilding the old Carolina Power and Light Co. dam on the French Broad River.

The North Carolina Utilities Commission lists 36 large and small projects under construction in the state, with nine of them in western North Carolina.

Hotaling's outfit is small enough to supply power to his house but large enough to help Western Carolina University meet some of its energy needs. The federal Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 allows Hotaling and thousands of other small producers of hydropower to sell excess energy to public utilities.

Tax investment credits allowed under federal and state law are among the reasons for the activity in alternative power projects. Investors like Bruce Radford, who is building a 1,200 kilowatt plant on Ivy River near Marshall, are allowed the normal 10 percent investment credit and also an extra 11 percent under federal energy law. State credit is somewhat less.

One reason homeowners jump into the energy game is the wealth of available water, especially in the North Carolina mountains. Three percent of the state's energy needs could be produced by small hydroelectric turbines placed along the state's streams and rivers, said

Harvard Ayers, a hydroelectric expert at Appalachian State University.

The state has nearly 250 small dams on its rivers, but less than 20 percent are producing power, said Ayers, who praises micro and small hydro plants as having "benign" environmental effects on the state's river systems.

Charles Tolley, general manager of French Broad Electric Membership Corp. that is renovating the old Capitola Dam in Marshall, summed up the back-to-basics reasoning recently: "The cost of electricity is rising very rapidly. We feel the only way to get a handle on it is to produce as much of our own power as we can."

FBEMC buys 100 percent of its power from CP&L and sells it to its 21,000 customers. Its new project, expected to be in service by early January, will produce 3,000 kilowatts (enough to power about 300 residences simultaneously) and satisfy about 8 percent of its own needs, said project manager Rick Thomason.

The old Capitola Dam was shut down in 1958 after a log washed into a turbine and damaged it. At the time, electricity was so cheap that FBEMC could buy it for less than it could rebuild the turbine.

But the situation now is different. The broken machinery at Capitola has been replaced by two monster 1,500 kilowatt turbines. The French Broad River will be channeled into the turbines through a newly built conduit that includes a gate to allow migrating fish to pass upstream.

Because much of the electricity produced will be transferred through CP&L lines, the two utility companies have been working together on the project, but CP&L has something of its own in the works about 2 miles downstream.

Its 5,000 kilowatt project should also be on line in early January, CP&L officials said, and will produce enough power for about 500 families, said Cletus Clark, project startup coordinator.

Then there's Radford's project, also near Marshall — a 1,200 kilowatt plant being built on the site of the old North Power Co. dam on Ivy River. Its three turbines should begin turning by Feb. 1. Radford said, and the electricity (enough for about 120 homes) will be sold to CP&L.

The runoff from the old dam there was used in the early 1900s to supply electricity for Asheville's street cars, but the power plant was shut down in the late 1920s because maintenance costs outran production revenues.

Lake Junaluska officials are negotiating with contractors to reactivate a power plant at a dam there that last produced electricity in 1920.

Power from the proposed 540 kilowatt plant would be sold to CP&L, Haywood Electric Membership Cooperative or the town of Waynesville, officials have said. The dam won't need to undergo any structural modifications, and the entire $1 million project should be completed in early 1985.

Construction recently began on Metropolitan Sewage District's project on the French Broad River a few miles north of Asheville. MSD officials have estimated that the $6 million project would generate enough energy to run the waste treatment plant, eliminating the plant's annual $280,000 bill for electricity.

It should also create enough electricity to sell a surplus to CP&L, officials have said. The hydroelectric facility, known as Craggy Dam, was built in 1904 but was abandoned by CP&L in 1951 in favor of the Lake Julian power plant.

Progress Slow On I-85 Stops

GREENSBORO (AP) — Twenty-one months after construction began on two new Interstate 85 rest stops, highway officials say they aren't sure when motorists will be able to use the solarheated restrooms and the landscaped picnic grounds.

Because of that, R.G.K. Inc. of Burlington has paid $12,150 since Dec. 1 and continues to absorb a $450-a-day penalty for failing to complete the rest stops on time, officials say.

Construction began east of Greensboro in March 1983 for rest stops each covering 25 acres on both sides of the highway. Total cost was to be $2.465 million.

"If you had asked me in September, I would have told you I thought they would have been completed by now," said John Watkins of Greensboro, division engineer for the state Department of Transportation. "Surely they will be open in two to three months."

The penalty, which went into effect Dec. 1, has so far cost R.G.K. $12,150.

R.G. Kirkpatrick, president of the company, could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Watkins said taxpayers will suffer only inconvenience from the delay. No cost overruns are expected and some money will be recouped from the penalties being imposed on R.G.K. Inc.

Watkins said the company is reputable and has done many highway projects satisfactorily before, but he said R.G.K. is nonetheless being blamed for the delay.

"It is our philosophy to give a contractor a reasonable completion date," he said. "He bids on the project knowing the date and he makes arrangements to meet it."

Watkins said unexpected delays came when a culvert had to be built under I-85 and site preparation proved more difficult than envisioned.

The rest stops are the biggest the state has built and are expected to be the busiest in the state.

Interviews With Justices On 'Closeup'

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, the least visible of the nation's three branches of government, is the subject of a television documentary that has its best moments when the cameras are pointing away from the courtroom.

The ABC "Closeup" special, which will be broadcast Saturday, provides unusual interviews with two of the nine justices.

But the remarks of Justices William H. Rehnquist and Harry A. Blackmun are overshadowed by more gripping footage of ordinary Americans caught up in such issues as silent school prayer and the right to die.

The most memorable moments are scenes of David Mack, a police officer who suffered severe brain damage and spent 20 months in a coma after he was shot. Doctors disregarded his previously stated wishes not to have his life prolonged if he was injured seriously, the documentary recounts.

Mack breaks down in what appears to be tormented, silent weeping as his wife, Marlies, describes how he is unable to hug and play with his children.

"I do believe that David should have had the right to, at least, maybe have a chance to go peacefully," Mrs. Mack says. "Oh, it's been rough."

Marshall Frady, writer and narrator of the show, points out that the issue of mercy killing has yet to reach the Supreme Court.

The documentary also examines silent meditation and prayer in public schools, an issue that is pending before the court and likely to be decided by July.

A 1981 Alabama law permitting a moment of silent prayer or meditation in public schools was challenged by Ishmael Jaffree, an agnostic whose children attend school in Mobile.

Jaffree explains, "I wanted to free my children from state-imposed religious activities in the public schools and because I felt sincerely that if I didn't bring it (the court challenge) no one else in the Mobile community would."

The tension between majority power and minority rights is brought into sharp focus when a church woman asks, "Why does he not take his children out of the schools? ... He is one man. We are many."

Allowing for TV's time constraints, the show might have better clarified the controversy by explaining that the Supreme Court's famous 1962 decision on school prayer doesn't prevent any child from praying in school. It only banned organized prayer, ruling that teachers and public school officials are prohibited by the Constitution from giving state support to religious activity.

The program has also generated its own controversy.

Harvard law Professor Arthur Miller plays a key role in the documentary, commenting on legal issues and interviewing Rehnquist and Blackmun.

Some critics have questioned whether there is a conflict of interest since Miller conducted the interviews at a time when he appealed to the Supreme Court in behalf of Phillips Petroleum Co. The court has since agreed to review the case in which the oil company is challenging a state court's power to order it to share profits with out-of-state holders of gas reserves.

ABC defended using Miller partly because the show's producers assumed the justices would never permit on-air interviews by a professional journalist.

ABC asked all nine justices to be interviewed. Only Rehnquist and Blackmun agreed, and Rehnquist only after he was assured he could review the segments in which he appears.

ABC officials said that if Rehnquist had objected to any of the footage, all portions involving him would have been eliminated. But the justice had no complaints, they said.

The documentary provides viewers with insight into the high court's relevance to everyday life and rare glimpses of two justices.

Rehnquist, appointed by President Richard Nixon and probably the court's most reliably conservative vote, comes across as a man of self-deprecating charm in his first network television interview.

Asked about the justices' qualifications to decide life and death issues involving complex technological and medical questions, he replies:

"There probably is no very good reason for suspecting that we're more capable of handling that kind of issue than any other nine people you might get a hold of."

Blackmun, who has been interviewed on Cable News Network, also displays modesty in the show's closing sequence.

"It may be a struggle," he says. "We'll climb some mountains in the meantime. We'll fall into some crevices here and there. But we'll make it."

Narrow CBS Win In Weekly Ratings

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC came within a whisker of its first weekly ratings victory of the season over No. 1 CBS as "Dynasty" took a firm hold on the hearts of the nation and "Monday Night Football" played to its largest audience ever.

"Dynasty," about the high-style schemings of the Carrington clan, was the top-rated show in the nation for the third straight week, while "Monday Night Football" had the most viewers since it began in 1970, ABC said Thursday.

percentage of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes watching a network during a given minute of prime time.

"Dynasty" had a 25.9 rating to boost its season average to a 25.1. That ties it with CBS' "Dallas" as the most popular show.

The "Monday Night Football" game between the Dallas Cowboys and the playoff-bound Miami Dolphins finished No. 2 for the week with a 25.1 rating. The show, which has been averaging about 31st place among all shows this year, had 21.3 million homes per average minute.

Football will be even more important to the networks in the weeks ahead as the remaining National Football League teams spar for the two spots in the Jan. 20 Super Bowl.

ABC had only one other show in the top 10 — "Hotel" — which tied with NBC's "Riptide" for eighth place.

There were few Christmas specials last week, with the CBS Special Movie Presentation: "A Christmas Carol" finishing No. 10. A repeat of the "Yogi Bear Christmas" was 53rd among all 65 prime-time shows.

In the evening news competition, CBS maintained the No. 1 position with a 14.1 rating, followed by NBC's 11.2 and ABC's 11.1.

'Spirit Of America' Theme Of 96th Rose Bowl Parade

By LEE SIEGEL
Associated Press Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Officials predict more than 1 million spectators will line up on New Year's Day to watch the 96th annual Tournament of Roses Parade.

"We think we'll have a real good crowd this year," police spokesman Mike Guerin said Thursday. "With the upbeat tempo in the country in the past year, this turnout might typify the parade's theme 'The Spirit of America'."

The two-hour extravaganza features 59 floats, 22 musical groups and 200 horses.

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, who will ride in a 1928 Chrysler Touralette, is parade grand marshal. Kristina Kaye Smith, a 20-year-old broadcast journalism major at Pasadena City College, will reign as the parade's first black queen.

Another guest is the 2,500-pound torch from the Statue of Liberty, which is being refurbished in time for its 1986 centennial. The torch will ride on the Hilton Hotels Corp.'s float, "Sweet Land of Liberty." National Park Service rangers will guard the beacon until it is shipped back to New York after the parade to be placed in a museum. A new torch is being built for the statue.

The parade will be followed by the 71st Rose Bowl football game between Pacific-10 Conference winner University of Southern California and Ohio State University, champion of the Big Ten Conference.

In addition to 1 million curbside spectators, 125 million people will watch on television, officials predict.

Float entries include Pasadena's "Mom and Apple Pie," Glendale's "Happy Birthday Donald Duck," International House of Pancakes' "A Chicken In Every Pot" and Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream's "Mousse Love," featuring a male

Hispanics Give Priest A Rude Greeting

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A crusading Catholic priest from Chicago who was deported from Chile after his fifth arrest for protesting alleged torture of political prisoners arrived here today, and was greeted by a Hispanic crowd who shouted "Communist!" and "Get out!"

The Rev. Denis O'Mara, 48, arrived early today at Miami International Airport on an Air Jamaica flight after his expulsion Thursday from Chile, where he, a Chilean nun and two other human rights activists had been arrested last weekend.

O'Mara said he had not been mistreated by Chilean police after his arrest for handing out Christmas cards wishing Chileans "a New Year without torturers."

"There is more torture (in Chile) now than there was a year ago," O'Mara said to reporters at the Miami airport, adding that his deportation showed that "the Chilean government has committed itself to torture."

He said he was "pessimistic" about the political situation in Chile, where he had been living for six years.

Upon overhearing O'Mara's comments to reporters, some 50 people, mostly Hispanics awaiting other arrivals, followed him out of the waiting lounge and started shouting "Communist!" and "Get out, get out!"

O'Mara, visibly upset by the crowd's reaction, said, "I've protested human rights abuse in Afghanistan and Cuba, too."

He was met at the airport by several people, including a priest who refused to identify himself. O'Mara said he had not yet talked to anyone in the Catholic church hierarchy in the United States.

He said he would continue travel to Chicago but did not know what his plans were after that.

Before O'Mara left Chile, a spokesman for Gen. Augusto Pinochet's government, Francisco Cuadra, accused him of taking part in "political activities." Since imposing a state of siege Nov. 6 to combat growing unrest, the government has decreed a law barring foreigners from "intervening in internal politics."

The expulsion appeared to be a warning to more than 600 foreign priests in Chile, most of them working in politically volatile slum districts.

During a stopover in Lima, Peru, O'Mara called his ouster "an unjust act" and said he had been upholding the Chilean Roman Catholic bishops' position of opposing torture.

"The bishops said that anyone who tortured, was an accomplice to torture or allowed torture to exist was outside communion," he said, adding that 500 cases of torture had been documented "but of course, there are many more."

On orders of the Interior Ministry, O'Mara was hastily put aboard a DC-8 of a Peruvian airline and expelled Thursday evening. He said he only had time to talk to his superior, although about 150 friends waved goodbye at the Santiago airport.

"I never imagined passing out Christmas cards would result in my expulsion," O'Mara wrote in a farewell statement read to his parishioners and friends at Santiago's airport by the Rev. Louis Connaughton, his superior in the Dublin-based Columban Fathers order.

The Christmas cards that O'Mara was passing out were signed by the Sebastian Acevedo Anti-Torture Movement, a group of about 200 priests and others who stage frequent sit-ins outside police stations where prisoners are allegedly tortured. It is named for a Chilean who burned himself to death in November 1983 to protest his two grown children's arrests.

The group at the airport cheered as the priest, in police custody, waved from a distance before boarding the Peruvian jetliner.

O'Mara, who holds a doctorate in philosophy, worked six years among Chile's poor. He often met with police in his western Santiago slum parish "trying to evangelize them," said the parish secretary, Ingrid Sagredo.

But O'Mara's activism outside his parish pulpit underlined longstanding friction between the church and the government over human rights, as well as tension within the church over the participation of priests in demonstrations.

The Catholic archdiocese of Santiago has recorded accounts of torture from dozens of victims each year since Pinochet seized power in a 1973 coup. Amnesty International reported last year that "the use of torture has been a constant feature" of his authoritarian rule.

The government steadfastly denies the practice, although the charges are often backed by medical evidence. In September, a 50-year-old activist of the opposition Christian Democratic Party died in a hospital of internal bleeding after interrogation by the secret police.

Shredded Cash Found In Pipes

FOLSOM, Pa. (AP) — Plumber Dennis Coren thought he had retrieved just about everything from sluggish drains until his workers found a pipe clogged with shredded cash.

Coren, owner of ABC Sewer Cleaning Co. of Philadelphia, said the shredded money was discovered Thursday in a sewer line outside a house in Ridley Township.

"They put in a motorized drain cleaner and pulled out the money," Coren, 36, said. "When they found it, they were scared to death and didn't mention it to the owner of the house."

Instead, Coren said, they returned to the company's office with the money in a plastic bag.

The Secret Service, which handles crimes involving U.S. currency, assured Coren possession of shredded money was not a crime, he said.

"We have never found anything like this. This was strange," Coren said. "I wish we could glue it back together. ... We could take it to the casinos and have a ball."

Michael Montagna, 24, who lives at the house, said he received the shredded money as a gag gift.

"Let's put it this way — I don't have enough money to shred," said Montagna, who is unemployed. "A friend of mine gave me a bag that said, 'First prize — $100,000.' It was filled with shredded money."

Montagna said he threw most of the money in the trash, but flushed some down the toilet.

INJURED AIDED — Some of the more than 20 commuters injured Thursday when a Southern California Rapid Transit District bus overturned on the San Bernardino Freeway at Pomona, Calif., are tended to by Pomona Fire Department personnel along the stretch of highway. The bus was en route to downtown Los Angeles when the accident occurred.

FBI Called In Art Theft

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The guest list for a party attended by Mayor W. Wilson Goode has been subpoenaed by the FBI in an investigation into the theft of an oil painting worth at least $75,000 from the Philadelphia Museum of Art, detectives said.

The detectives said the party was held by the Sigma Pi Phi, a fraternity of black professionals, at the museum earlier this month.

The 8-by-12-inch painting, an 1877 depiction of a $5 bill by American artist William Harnett, was stolen between 6:30 p.m. Dec. 15 and 9 a.m. Dec. 16, museum officials said.

The painting, valued at $75,000 to $100,000, was being stored temporarily in an unlocked gallery on the first floor of the museum.

Insurance underwriters for the museum have offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the painting's recovery.

One detective involved in the investigation told the Philadelphia Inquirer that the guests virtually had "free rein" of the museum after having dinner on the lower floor. The detective said the belongings of the guests were not searched, a departure from museum policy.

However, Larry Snyder, the museum's vice president for operations, said he thought a museum employee might have taken the painting in an "inside job."

Arlington National Cemetery Burial Set For Homeless World War II Hero

By GREG MYRE
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — A decorated World War II hero who froze to death three weeks ago in a park facing the White House was being buried today in Arlington National Cemetery, honored in death with respect that eluded him during the last 20 years of his life as a homeless wanderer.

Jesse Carpenter, 61, apparently homeless since leaving his wife and family in 1962, froze to death in Lafayette Square, a park across the street from the White House that has become a gathering place for the homeless in the nation's capital.

Carpenter's body was found in the sub-freezing chill on Dec. 5 by U.S. Park Police. Aside from his clothing, his only protection from the cold was the warmth of his friend and fellow street person, wheelchair-bound John Lam, 59, who was found huddled near the veteran's body.

Carpenter's ashes were to be placed in the National Cemetery's columbarium, which holds the cremated remains of some 3,900 other service personnel.

A brief service was scheduled and the Community for Creative Non-Violence, a Washington-based homeless rights group, said it planned to take a busload of homeless people, many of them Carpenter's friends, to the ceremony.

Lam said he planned to attend the funeral. He told reporters in the park Thursday that Carpenter took care of him, pushing his wheelchair to soup kitchens, shelters and public restrooms.

Snyder called the conditions surrounding Carpenter's death "unconscionable," and said it dramatized the need for homeless shelters.

"Jesse shows you that the people we step over on the streets every day are people with histories," Snyder said. "They just weren't born on the streets."

HOMELESS FRIEND — John Lam talks to reporters in Lafayette Park across the street from the White House Thursday. Lam, a wheelchair bound street person, was found huddled next to the body of World War II hero Jesse Carpenter the night he froze to death in the park earlier in December. Lam survived the night's cold temperatures but was hospitalized suffering from hypothermia. Funeral services for Carpenter were planned for today in Arlington National Cemetery. (AP Laserphoto)

"I knew him (Carpenter) 20 years," Lam said. "I met him drinking (on the streets)."

Carpenter, who entered the Army in September 1943 in Indiana, was awarded the Bronze Star in 1944 in Brittany, France. According to the award certificate, the Army private made three trips carrying the wounded to an aid station 400 yards from the fighting, "braving the unabated fire."

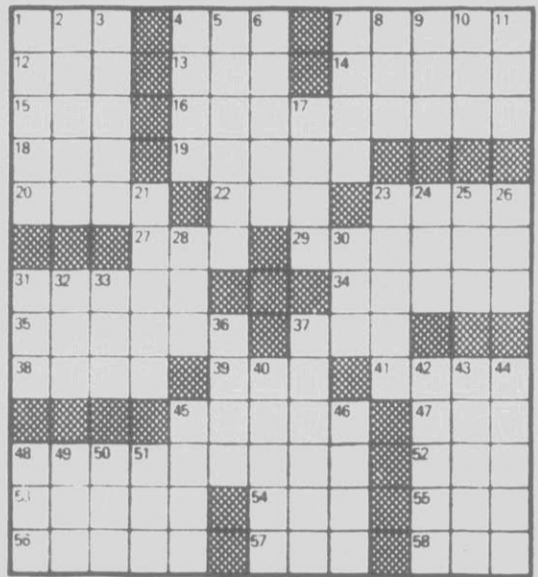

But Mitch Snyder, who heads the CCNV homeless shelter and who knew Carpenter for several years,

Veterans Administration spokesman Ozzie Garzy called Carpenter's death "unfortunate" and said the VA had been issuing a $433-a-month check to Carpenter since 1980. He said he didn't know if Carpenter was receiving the checks, but added "we mailed the checks to a local post office box (that Carpenter requested) and we never received any further inquiries from him."

Heston Urges Assistance For Alleged War Prisoners

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Charlton Heston has asked more than 12,000 Americans to help rescue alleged U.S. prisoners of war in Southeast Asia, saying some "are used as slaves, forced to drag plows in rice paddies."

"America can't forget these men. We have to bring them home, all of them," Heston says in a 60-second recorded telephone solicitation. He says the POWs are "locked in bamboo cages in the jungle or in caves in the mountains."

Mariam Expected To Weather Ethiopian Crisis

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer
AP News Analysis

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A disastrous famine contributed to the overthrow of the late Emperor Haile Selassie in 1974.

Ten years later, drought and starvation of even greater magnitude are gripping this impoverished Horn of Africa nation. But many observers, ranging from Western diplomats to officials of the deposed imperial regime, believe the Marxist head of state, Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, can for the time being weather the crisis.

The main difference between the two crises was that the doddering Haile Selassie government, fearing that starvation deaths would damage its reputation, waged an active campaign to suppress news of the situation.

Open reporting would have clashed with the officially promoted image of Ethiopia as a "poor but developing country guided by enlightened leadership," according to a former senior official who, like other sources, all spoke on condition they not be identified by name.

The current government has allowed foreign journalists greater access and given them a degree of cooperation — although somewhat belatedly.

It is widely believed that authorities earlier this year restricted news coverage so as not to mar the 10th anniversary of the revolution, celebrated last September.

"Even now, the famine gets less publicity here than abroad," complained an Ethiopian intellectual. "People hear of its severity mainly from outside sources — Voice of America, BBC World Service, Deutsche Welle (West German radio) and foreign periodicals."

A Western diplomat involved in the relief operation aimed at feeding the hungry has said that an estimated 900,000 people will die from famine in Ethiopia — a nation of 42 million — in 1984.

Some analysts point out that the 1972-74 famine disaster was just one of a number of factors that spelled doom for Haile Selassie, who began public life as a reformer and modernizer but whose rule in the end was seen as reinforcing feudalistic traditions.

Students, teachers and, at a critical moment, taxi drivers organized protests and strikes in a politically charged atmosphere that does not now exist.

Haile Selassie was 81 when overthrown in 1974 and died under mysterious circumstances while in detention a year later and secretly buried.

"Drought was one factor in the emperor's downfall," said a senior Western diplomat, who declined to be identified because of the sensitivity of the subject. "However, there was also the emperor's senility and the fact that his top aides were generally discredited."

"On the other hand, Mengistu is young, bright, active and quite determined," he said, but added: "I don't know if there is a lieutenant or sergeant lurking somewhere."

A lieutenant colonel who specialized in ordnance, Mengistu was a founding member of the secretive "Dergue" organization that removed the emperor.

He moved into undisputed leadership in 1977 by combining political shrewdness with unflinching use of ruthless force, if necessary, to achieve his goals, analysts say. He has been described as a committed Marxist who is nonetheless wary of Soviet intentions.

Mengistu, believed to be about 44, "at this stage is not threatened politically by the famine," said a former Ethiopian civil servant.

"But it's a problem that is not going to go away in a matter of months or even years, perhaps."

The danger comes from two possible sources — Ethiopia's Soviet-bloc allies, put on the spot by the flood of Western aid; and possible urban discontent arising from shortages if the drought drags on with no end in sight, he said.

"While Mengistu appears firmly in control, there could be an explosion of sorts if there is a convergence of these factors," said the civil servant.

In recent months, Mengistu eased harassment of Protestant denominations, and Western diplomats — including Americans — have sensed a friendlier air in the pro-Soviet state attributable to the massive infusions of famine relief aid from Western governments and charities, including church groups.

And in courting Western support for its controversial resettlement scheme for drought victims, the government has backed away from Marxist-Leninist ideology, stressing that similar past programs failed because people were put directly into socialist-style collectives. Now, each head of family will get personal use of five acres.

The development is not likely to please Moscow which, though unable to match the West's humanitarian support, has funneled an estimated $3 billion worth of armaments into the country since 1977.

Decherd Will Head Dallas' Belo Corp.

DALLAS (AP) — A great-grandson of Dallas Morning News founder G.B. Dealey will be the new president of the newspaper's parent company, A.H. Belo Corp., officials announced.

Robert W. Decherd, 33, a 1973 cum laude graduate of Harvard College, will assume the position Jan. 1. Decherd has held a variety of management positions at Belo since becoming a management trainee 11 years ago.

James M. Moroney Jr., 63, who has held the position, will retain responsibilities as chairman and chief executive officer of the Dallas-based company.

A series of executive changes at the News also were announced Wednesday after the Belo board of directors met.

John A. Rector Jr., 64, president of the newspaper, was named publisher of the News. The publisher's position had been vacant during recent years, Moroney said.

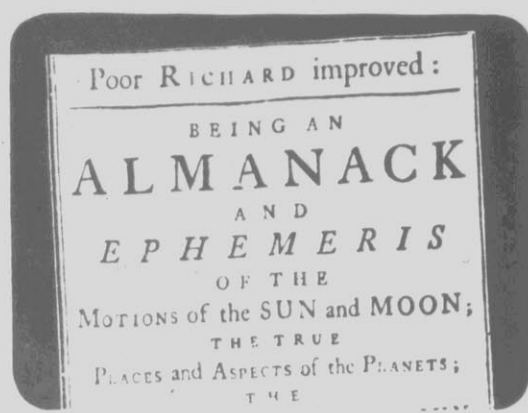

Rector will be succeeded as president by Burl Osborne, 47, currently senior vice president-editor of the newspaper. He has had responsibility for the paper's news, editorial and production operations.

Jeremy L. Halbreich, 32, senior vice president in charge of advertising, marketing and circulation, was promoted to executive vice president and will be responsible for business and production operations.

Rector is due to retire from the News at the end of 1985, while Moroney said he is scheduled to step down at Belo in 1986.

Rector, a 37-year veteran at the News, was elected president in January 1983.

"Poor Richard's Almanack" was first advertised for sale on this day in 1732. Benjamin Franklin published it every year from 1733 through 1758. He filled "the little spaces that occur'd between the days" with proverbs such as "A penny saved is a penny earned." Franklin also published a newspaper, "The Pennsylvania Gazette." Historians say he was the first American editor to publish a newspaper cartoon, and the first to illustrate a news story with a map.

Sweden's Per-Olov Sundelin has been an outstanding member of his country's international team for many years now. Here's an example of his technique from the Sweden-U.S.A. match at the recent World Team Olympiad, which ended in a tie.

By and large, the Swedes conducted a natural auction. South's three diamonds showed a diamond value and North's three hearts confirmed a six-card suit. When South bid three no trump it denied a second heart, so North preferred a spade contract to no trump.

Considering the trump break, it would seem that Sundelin has at least four losers at his four spade contract. However, West decided this was the time to make the deceptive lead of a low club. The eight was played from dummy and East would have done best to duck. But he elected to cover with the ten and Sundelin falsecarded mildly by winning with the queen. Three rounds of trumps revealed the sad news of a trump loser.

Declarer crossed to the ace of hearts and led the queen, with the idea of sluffing a diamond if East did not cover. When East produced the king, declarer ruffed. A low club was led to the king and ace, and another heart ruff set up the suit. Now he led a club.

If West ruffed, he would be end played and forced to lead a diamond away from the ace. So he played low in the fond hope that his partner held the club jack. Dummy's nine won, and a diamond was sluffed on a high heart. Whether West ruffed or not, declarer would lose no more than one diamond trick, so he was home with a serendipitous over-trick.
