Soviets, U.S. To Resume Arms Talks

BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. officials fanned out today to brief world leaders on the agreement to resume arms control talks with the Soviet Union, an agreement the Americans said was nearly derailed by a Soviet walkout.

No date or place has been set for the negotiations, which the two sides — in a joint statement issued late Tuesday — said would be aimed at "preventing an arms race in space" and "the complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere."

The agreement came after two days of discussions between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, along with top aides, at the U.S. and Soviet missions in Geneva.

Shultz, on his flight back to Washington today, acknowledged to reporters that he and Gromyko had "some ups and downs" but said a total breakdown was never in the cards. If no agreement had been reached in Geneva, Shultz said, he would have tried to arrange a new round of talks.

Gromyko, who left Geneva 45 minutes after Shultz, read a brief statement in English in which he spoke of the "immense tasks" that lie ahead for the two superpowers.

"There is no need to speak at length that the talks were not simple," said Gromyko, adding that the Soviet Union "will go its part of the road fully aware of the responsibility shared by the two great powers."

President Reagan, interviewed by the Dallas Morning News shortly before the agreement was announced, was quoted as saying, "It sounds very good."

The agreement to reopen nuclear arms negotiations, which the Soviets broke off a year ago, nearly didn't materialize, top U.S. officials said, because Gromyko threatened to walk out of the discussions and because of a dispute over Reagan's "Star Wars" research program.

Gromyko "was on the verge of walking out without an agreement."

Kenneth Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said Tuesday night.

If Gromyko had walked out, only a "vague statement" would have emerged from the discussions, Adelman said.

Instead, the superpowers issued a joint statement, saying: "The sides believe that ultimately the forthcoming negotiations...should lead to the complete elimination of nuclear weapons everywhere."

The statement added that the "objective of the negotiations will be to work out effective agreements aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on Earth, at limiting and reducing nuclear arms, and at strengthening strategic stability."

The key dispute, according to Adelman and Robert C. McFarlane, the White House national security adviser, was over the "Star Wars" space-weapons program.

Pitt Schools Get Rules For Honors

MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County now has uniform honor roll and principal list requirements that school officials say will "assure consistency across the county in terms of the designees."

The county's Board of Education approved the new guidelines at its monthly meeting Tuesday after the policy received "unanimous support of principals of affected schools," officials said. The guidelines stipulate that the names of students making the honor roll and principals list be submitted to the central office for verification.

Under the new policy, qualifications for the honor roll include:

•Students in grades 4-8 must earn A's on all academic subjects, satisfactory on all non-academic subjects and satisfactory conduct in all subjects for grades 4-8.

•Students in grades 9-12 must have A's and satisfactory conduct on all subjects. Academic subjects include reading, language, spelling, mathematics, science, social studies and health. Non-academic subjects include physical education, art, music, occupational education and handwriting.

Principals list guidelines include:
•In grades 4-8 students must earn A's on at least one-half of the academic subjects with no grade lower than B, satisfactory on conduct and all non-academic subjects.

•Students in grades 9-12 must earn A's on at least one-half of all courses attempted, receive no grade lower than B and earn satisfactory conduct marks on all subjects.

The policy was developed, say school officials, to provide consistent guidelines for academic honors.

School Superintendent Eddie West reviewed the concept of program budgeting for board members and gave them an update on the status of the concept's local implementation.

Program budgeting keys on funding for individual programs rather than funding individual line items. It is, West said, a type of budgeting which allows more flexibility and accountability. Program budgeting has three basic steps: structure, budget and analysis, he said.

In step one, structure, Pitt County has currently placed activities into programs, West said. "The structure

GUC Projects Annexation Cost At Over $11 Million

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

It would cost the Greenville Utilities Commission about $11.55 million to provide water and sewer service to areas under consideration for annexation by the city of Greenville, according to a report presented to commission board members Tuesday.

In a written report to the board, John Ferrin, GUC's assistant general manager, said water service to Oakgrove Estates, Colonial Mobile Home Park, an area along Secondary Road 1417, Floral Park, Brook Valley, Camelot, River Hills and Cherry Oaks would cost $1.36 million, while costs involved in providing sewer service to the areas would be $10.19 million.

According to the report, the commission has sufficient funds available (including authorized but unsold general obligation water bonds) to provide water service to all the areas.

But the report said "there are insufficient funds available to provide sewer service to all areas," adding that "available and projected funds through June 30, 1988, amount to $4.7 million, leaving a need for an additional $5.5 million."

The report noted that the sale of revenue bonds or $5 million in additional general obligation bonds (if approved through referendum), would require a major increase in sewer rates.

Among alternatives cited in the report were a reduction in size by the city of the area proposed for annexation or financial participation of the city by agreeing to an acceptable level of reduction in turnover each year through June 1988 to enable maximum service expansion.

The most costly area to provide water service to would be Cherry Oaks, at an estimated $895,200, followed by River Hills at $183,150 and Brook Valley and Camelot at $170,850, according to the report.

The price for providing sewer service to Brook Valley and Camelot was estimated at $5.51 million, followed by an estimated $2.24 million to provide sewer service to Cherry Oaks. The next most costly area to provide sewer service to would be the Mumford Road area at an estimated $870,100.

The City Council is expected to decide soon just which areas are to be annexed and are expected to trim some areas from the proposed annexation plan.

Councilman Stuart Shinn, who attends commission meetings as the council's representative, told commissioners that the proposed areas covered by Ferrin's report represent "a worse-case scenario."

Mack Green, superintendent of the electric department, reported that load management operations during December reduced wholesale power costs during the month by $125,915, while a power outage at the East Carolina University Substation on Dec. 7 — which occurred, coincidentally —

WHERE'S NICE LADY?

I tried to call Time and Temperature Saturday and was dismayed to discover that it is no longer in operation. What happened? Is that nice-sounding lady who always spoke so well of Pepsi sick? Or is she on vacation?

I had always heard that she lived in a room at a local motel and had her meals catered. Her life must have been fairly drab... answering the phone at all hours of the day and night, but she could have at least given some warning, even if it was by being a little less cheery with her Pepsi plug, A.R.

Jack Minges of the local Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. said he regrets that the service has been discontinued. The cost became prohibitive, he said, more than doubling in the years the service was offered — from about $6,000 a year to about $11,000 a year. "And the phone company still said they were losing money and were going to have to go up some more," he said. "We were getting between 8,000 and 10,000 calls a day at the time we stopped, so it was well used and we hate not to offer it."

Merger Enabling Act Studied

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The consolidation committee of the Pitt County and Greenville boards of education is "reviewing an enabling act" that would make consolidation of the two school systems a reality, according to Committee Chairman Mark Owens.

After an executive session Tuesday which committee officials said was to discuss a legal matter, the committee instructed its secretaries,

Superintendent Eddie West of Pitt County and former Superintendent Delma Blinson of Greenville, who is serving as a consultant, to "explore several legal items" and provide the findings to the committee at a later meeting.

"All I can tell you at this point is that the committee is reviewing an enabling act that would set forth the process of consolidation," Owens said today. "Discussion has arisen in the joint committee on items that needed to be taken back to both boards for review." Owens said he couldn't be more specific on the nature of this discussion.

At the request of the Pitt County Commissioners, Research Triangle Institute completed a study of the problems of the two school systems in 1983. The study recommended merger as the optimum solution for the city's declining enrollment and lopsided black-white student population and the county's overcrowding and outmoded facilities in areas.

The committee was formed in September 1984, after both boards of education endorsed "conditional" consolidation. The conditions include construction of a new elementary school in the Winterville school district and a list of capital outlay items that must be funded by the Pitt County Commissioners before the schools merge.

The committee has met monthly since its inception, and discussion has included consolidation of the food service, maintenance and custodial services. A site for the new elementary school was selected and plans for the structure are currently under consideration.

Farmville Will Annex Monk Site

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners voted Tuesday night to annex the 34.77-acre site of the A.C. Monk and Co. plant here effective June 30.

During a public hearing held prior to the vote, there was no discussion.

The board accepted for the town the remainder of a bequeathal by Tabitha M. DeVisconti — $197,381.96. The money left by the Farmville citizen who died July 21, 1983, is to be used to create a museum and public park of her house and grounds at the corner of Main and Pine streets here. The town has used $52,618 of the $250,000 left for the project for work on the house and grounds.

An amendment was enacted to close out the grant the town has had from the Environmental Protection Agency for participation in the building of a waste water treatment plant. Final payment has been received, Frank Bradham, town administrator, said.

An auction of town property was set for Jan. 19. Two automobiles, 14 bicycles and some bicycle parts will be auctioned.

A budget amendment was enacted to allocate $5,000 for the removal of several trees from town rights of way. All of the trees have been inspected by the N.C. Forestry Service and deemed to be dangerous or soon to be dangerous.

The board voted to confirm the adoption of the Eastern Municipal Power Agency Agreement amendments that have been discussed for several months by the board. With one commissioner absent, the vote was 3-1. Commissioner Moses Moye voted against the confirmation.

An electrical load management policy was adopted. Under this policy the town utilities department will begin installing radio-controlled devices to cut off during peak load times current to participating residences which have electric 30-gallon-or-larger water heaters, 1½-ton central air conditioners, and heat pumps. By cutting peak loads this way, the town hopes to save

Book Explains Drug Terms For German Parents

By GERD BRAUNE
Associated Press Writer
WUERZBURG, West Germany (AP) — Germans who rave about "California sunshine" aren't necessarily referring to warm weather on the U.S. Pacific Coast.

In the drug scene, the phrase denotes a trip with the mind-altering drug LSD.

To help German parents recognize conversational jargon that could be a tip-off of drug use by their children, an employee of the Wuerzburg prosecutor's office has written what he calls the country's most complete lexicon of narcotics terminology.

The 300-page book defines more than 4,400 words and phrases from the drug scene gathered during Gerold Harfst's 20 years of dealing with the problem among German youths and U.S. Army troops stationed in West Germany.

Because many of the slang words are English, he said, German parents, teachers and other adults who work with young people have a particularly difficult time fathoming drug-related jargon.

"Knowledge of drug jargon helps prevent narcotics crimes and offers parents the chance to discuss drug abuse with their children," Harfst said in an interview with The Associated Press about the book he published privately.

"Parents should regard the book as a help in understanding the problem so that they don't have to say when it's too late. If we only had an inkling," he said.

Drug abuse is a major problem in West Germany, where there are an estimated 50,000 heroin addicts. The Bonn government said 472 people died of drug abuse last year, up 25 percent from 1982.

Hashish is readily available throughout the country, and Bonn authorities warned last summer about a "cocaine wave" rolling toward Europe.

Harfst's book suggests that authorities have sometimes failed to catch drug abusers because they did not understand esoteric terminology.

The book tells of one trial where a letter written by the defendant in a drug abuse case described an experience with "California sunshine." The judges, jury, defense lawyer and interpreter all failed to recognize the code word for LSD, Harfst writes.

Among the words explained in the book are relatively well-known terms like "bread" and "gold," meaning money and hashish, respectively.

The glossary calls "Mickey Mouse" a synonym for LSD, "happy sugar" a code word for heroin or cocaine and "Miss Emma" another term for morphine.

The German word "Haarbuerte," or hair brush, means heroin syringe, "Indianer" stands for marijuana and "Beerdigung" or burial refers to a court trial for narcotics users, the book says.

In a chapter on LSD, Harfst writes that "trips" or tiny portions of the drug are sold affixed to backs of postage stamps.

"You can even find them offered on pieces of puzzles," Harfst writes.

Champagne Is From California

By TOWN & COUNTRY
A Hearst magazine

Americans are drinking more and more sparkling wines, but the labels read "methode champenoise" instead of "champagne" and the price tags read in single instead of double digits.

Well-known French champagne houses are sinking roots — and growing grapes — in California, according to the December issue of Town & Country, while Americans also are drinking sparkling wine from other regions of France and from Spain, Italy, Germany and Romania.

And they are paying as little as $4 a bottle, instead of the $20 and up that French champagne costs.

The trend away from French champagne (according to Common Market rules only wine produced in the Champagne district of France can use that name) goes back to 1952 when California's Beaulieu Vineyard made a small amount of sparkling wine in the French manner. By the early 1970s other West Coast wineries were trying to produce premium sparkling wines.

In the 1970s, the French champagne house of Moet & Chandon bought 1,200 acres in California's Napa Valley, where they now produce Domaine Chandon sparkling wine. Piper-Heidsieck followed suit in 1980 with Piper-Sonoma, which one wine expert called "Perhaps the most elegant sparkling wine made in this country."

The French houses of Roederer, Deutz and Lanson now are in the process of moving into California.

California winemakers also are turning to the more intricate and costly "methode champenoise" — the process of producing sparkling wines practiced in the Champagne district. So are wineries in Washington, Idaho and New York.

Unfortunately, methode champenoise wine can be costly, and the wine fancier may wind up paying more for a premium California bubbly than for a discounted genuine French champagne.

That's where the wines of other regions of France, as well as those of Spain, Italy and Germany enter the wine picture.

French sparkling wines not produced in Champagne are called vins mousseux, and such labels as Veuve Amiot, Bouvet Brut and Brut Royal sell for from $5 to $10 a bottle.

Spanish sparklers such as Freixenet Cordon Negro may not have the delicacy of elegant champagne, but at $4 or $5 a bottle they are much more affordable.

Italian sparkling wines require caution, since there is some cloyingly sweet Asti Spumanti on the market as well as such dry and zesty Asti as Vibosa, Fontanafredda or Bersano for $8 or $9 a bottle.

German "sekt" wines are just beginning to make their mark in the U.S., Romania's Premiata Methode Champenoise is a bargain at $6 a bottle, according to Town & Country, and soon Australia will be getting into the act with classically made bubbly from the Taltarni Vineyards.

CAN YOU TOP THIS?

NEW YORK (AP) — The amount of toppings sold at retail in the United States in 1983 would cover more than 350 million servings of ice cream.

If packaged in half-gallon containers and formed in a line, the total production of ice cream in America would encircle the equator 11 times, according to Chocolatier magazine.

A microwave oven uses a third of the electrical energy required by a conventional electric oven.

DEAR ABBY: I know you would want to give credit where credit is due, so please let your readers know that the originator of National Smokout Day ("Quit smoking for 24 hours and you can quit forever") was Lynn Smith. He was at that time the editor and publisher of the Monticello Times in Monticello, Minn. (He's now retired.) Mr. Smith launched his quit-smoking campaign in 1974, and it was so successful that it went national in 1977.

MARY L. STUBBS,

DEAR ABBY: A marriage of 35 years is about to end because my spouse has become repulsively obese. It's not that this person cannot "perform"—it's that I get totally turned off before I ever get to the bedroom.

Have you any advice for the partner of the fat one? I think I could handle sickness. A person can't help getting sick, but growing fatter and fatter because of over-eating is another story.

If I just didn't have to sleep with that spouse, I could survive. What is there besides divorce?
TURNED OFF IN SEATTLE

DEAR TURNED OFF: There's understanding. Overeating is an addiction. Food, like drink and drugs, is used by many to make them feel better. Don't be judgmental or unkind. Communicate with your spouse on a loving level. Try to get that spouse to the family physician for an examination, a sensible diet and an exercise program. Then suggest Overeaters Anonymous. (There are chapters all over.) I've seen the miracles they have performed. It's worth a try. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you were a 5-foot-8, 60-year-old lady in love with a shrimp?
STATUESQUE

DEAR STATUESQUE: I'd get on my knees and thank God if he loved me back. Then I'd pray that no 5-foot lady was fishing off my dock.

DEAR ABBY: The 80-year-old woman who is heartsick about her 28-year-old grandson's decision to have a vasectomy should mind her own business. She says he already has two children and makes a meager living, so she pays his rent and utilities. I wonder if Grandma has given any thought to who will pay her grandson's rent and utilities when she's gone?

After we had a girl, then a boy, we decided our family was complete, so I had a vasectomy. We also heard a lot of "what ifs" from family and friends. "What if something happened to one of your children?"

We told them, "What if we had 10 children, our house burned down and we lost them all? One child could never be replaced with another."

I was asked, "What if your wife died, or you were divorced, and you married again and you wanted children with another wife, then what?"

I had my answer ready: "I'm covered at the sperm bank."

Clothing can make a greater impact on keeping you warm than you realize. A woman can lower the thermostat setting if she:

- replaces a skirt with slacks — 1.5F
- replaces an open-weave dress with tightly woven dress — .5F
- wears a full slip — 1F
- replaces a half slip with a full slip — .6F
- puts on a light long-sleeved sweater — 1.7F
- puts on a heavy long-sleeved sweater — 3.7F

For example a woman who wears slacks instead of a skirt and puts a light long-sleeved sweater over her blouse will feel as comfortable at 75F (23.8C) as she previously did at 78F (25.5C). In other words, the clothing adjustments allow her to lower the thermostat three degrees and still feel comfortable.

A man can lower the thermostat setting if he:

- replaces a summer-weight jacket with a winter-weight jacket — 2.5F
- replaces a short-sleeved shirt with a long-sleeved shirt — .8F
- puts on a winter-weight jacket — 4.5F
- puts on an undershirt (T-shirt) — .5F
- replaces ankle-length socks with knee-length socks — .6F
- puts on a light long-sleeved sweater — 2F
- puts on a heavy long-sleeved sweater — 3.7F

An example is a man who puts on a jacket over his shirt and tie will be as comfortable at a temperature of 70F (21.2C) as he previously was at 74.5F (23.6C). Other factors that affect the warmth and comfort of clothing are:

- absorbency
- layering of clothing — Several light-weight loose layers of clothing will keep air trapped between each of the layers. Air is a good insulator.
- clean clothes — If air pockets in and around the yarns in fabrics are displaced with moisture or dirt particles, the fabrics can not hold as much warm air. Therefore, dirty, damp clothing will not insulate the body as well as dry, clean clothing.

•tight clothes — Tight clothing can inhibit circulation and there is less chance for warm air to be trapped around the body for insulation.

•garment design — Garmets which fit closely at the wrists, ankles and neck will provide better insulation than a garment that is open at these areas. Warm air can circulate and not escape.

These comments may seem like common sense but they are often overlooked especially when it may be easier to turn up the thermostat.

Restoring Shrunken Woolens
Shrunken washable woolen articles like sweaters and infant knits usually can be restored to their original beauty and usefulness by following these few steps.

Make a solution of two tablespoons of synthetic detergent shampoo (not soap) and one gallon of lukewarm water. (Note: If the shampoo is made of soap, it will say so on the label. Avoid this type.) Place the clean woolen article in the solution and gently squeeze the solution through the wool. Lift the article out of the solution and squeeze the excess solution out. Do not rinse the article!

Lay the article flat on plastic and gently stretch it back to its original shape. Use a similar article of comparison of size. Let the article dry flat, away from the sun and other heat. Turn the article over when half dry to complete drying.

If necessary, when dry, steam with an iron to restore the original mat finish. Use a press cloth to keep the wool from becoming harsh. If the garment has a fringe, use a comb or brush to separate fringes which have matted.

Dry herbs upside down in a dry, well-ventilated area in a paper bag that has holes punched all around the sides. The bag will catch any falling leaves and keeps dust off.

This Man's Best Friend Is A Horse

By ART COX
Enid Morning News
CARMEN, Okla. (AP) — Jim Beckwith was a lonely man, until Baldy came into his life.

Baldy, a tobacco-chewing, roan-colored colt, is Beckwith's best friend. They can sit for hours, and Baldy doesn't seem to mind helping out with the chores.

Beckwith does the talking but Baldy listens. He won't let the old man out of his sight — follows him around the yard like a pet dog.

Beckwith, an 87-year-old retired jockey and rodeo performer, lives in a tiny mobile home on about 10 acres of land outside Carmen. He hadn't raised horses for several years — until Baldy.

The two met at a horse sale in Woodward last June. Beckwith went there for something to do. He hadn't intended to buy a horse.

None of the other buyers would touch Baldy because he had a "glass eye" — an imperfection in the eyeball.

Beckwith felt sorry for the animal and offered $100 for the horse. That afternoon, Beckwith and a couple of handlers unloaded the colt.

"He just went crazy because he'd left his mother," Beckwith said. "So I moved a chair out to the corral and spent the night there with him. I've been his mother ever since."

That night may have been the beginning of the bond between the two, Beckwith said.

"At feeding time every day, he'll come and knock on the door of that trailer."

When Beckwith opens the door, Baldy sticks his head inside and nickers.

Beckwith feeds him and, for a treat, gives him an occasional chew of tobacco. But Baldy's habit has become so pronounced that whenever Beckwith pulls out a package of chewing tobacco, the colt immediately begins nuzzling it.

"Better than any dog," he said. "Baldy's the only company I got."

ESTATE PLANS NEED PLANNING

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Most Americans have no estate plans or have one that is either inappropriate, outdated or undermanaged, according to an official of a personal financial management firm.

"Many estate plans," says Fredrick Sandstrom of Fleet Financial Group, "are wrong simply because it is easy to ignore them." He says most healthy people consider estate planning to be something they can put off. He encourages a financial status report every two years.

"The report," says Sandstrom, "will give you a current picture of where you stand in relation to your estate tax, investment and income planning."

On The Move

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is starting another year with the naming of Ray Boleman as new chairman of the board. The Daily Reflector extends its best wishes to the chamber and its chairman. Their opportunities are great, as are the dreams they hope to fulfill.

Priorities have been set; and if they sound familiar it is because they represent longstanding goals that time, past efforts and continuing growth have brought nearer to realms of attainment.

In terms of industry, business, education, population, cultural climate, medical care, agriculture and wealth this area is far from being the same community as 20 years ago or 10 years ago. Big things have been happening; and the snowballing pattern makes realization of expanding goals ever so much more possible.

Boleman has already announced business, commercial and economic development, as prime targets for 1985. "Undivided attention" is promised to improved transportation by highway and air. More effort, too, is promised to bolster agricultural facets of the county; and possibilities of a civic center are promised a continuing and intensified effort.

Old stuff? Certainly. But past work in those fields has raised them to higher plateaus of achievability. They may well linger as targets of the foreseeable future, but continuing development will demand ever higher aspirations and accomplishments for our people.

Take one example: transportation.

The potentials for expansion of airline service and better highway links have grown with the ever-increasing traffic needs resulting from development of a regional medical center, the mushrooming industrial and business facilities, the university. All require accessibility by air and good highways. That civic center concept would add new pressures for accessibility, as will growth in existing population and a strengthening economy.

The C-of-C is on the right track and big things for Pitt County and Greenville are just over the horizon.

Coliseum

One of the goals of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce this year is the development of a coliseum for Pitt County.

The chamber proposes to work with ECU Chancellor John Howell in an effort to construct the coliseum.

It is a project well worth pursuing. The coliseum could provide an adequate arena for the East Carolina University basketball team and perhaps carry the basketball program to new heights.

Pitt County is also rapidly becoming the location for area, state and national meetings. The envisioned coliseum could provide various meeting halls and facilities to handle the large crowds that meetings and conventions draw.

Visitors that come to the area for a few days spend money and that money helps the local economy. We need to do all we can to attract meetings here and a coliseum could play a major part in that.

GOP Election Sweep Rubs Off In Texas Race

AUSTIN, Texas — The reality that 1984's unprecedented Republican victory in Texas was no aberration but true party realignment is confirmed by Democratic Gov. Mark White's burdens as he prepares for his 1986 re-election campaign.

Democratic politicians here want the governor to show ordinary Texas "Angelos" (non-Hispanic whites) that they can still be comfortable in their ancestral party. Yet, White will have trouble making state government seem less a haven for the blacks, browns, women and other liberals he has hired the last four years. Worse yet, he may have to boost state revenues this year.

Mark White is a non-ideological middle-roader who combined a good-ole boy conservative image with populist rhetoric. But like Democratic officeholders nationwide, he cannot repudiate liberal and minority group interests by radically cutting spending or changing the state government employment. That is the cutting edge of party realignment, particularly in the Sunbelt.

Liberal-to-moderate Democrats scoff at realignment, blaming 1984 on the miserable Senate campaign by liberal State Sen. Lloyd Doggett (upon whom Texas Democrats bestow the scapegoat's horns worn elsewhere by Walter F. Mondale). Nevertheless, there is no longer euphoria over 1982's Democratic sweep, once seen as proving that Hispanic and black voter registration opened up statewide election of liberals.

After 1984, liberals say it is not prudent to nominate the Doggetts. State AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard denies any desire to run the Democratic Party or select its candidates, asking only that Democrats not nominate labor-baiters. Liberals want no challenge mounted against conservative Lt. Gov. William Hobby, whose primary election defeat could doom White and the rest of the ticket in the general election.

Needless to say, liberal daydreams of challenging White in the primary are buried. But liberal restraint does not guarantee his re-election. His masterful passage last year of a state education program, while alienating teachers, did not reinforce his soggy standing with voters. A post-election poll taken for Sen. Phil Gramm gives White 52 percent positive and 36 percent negative ratings — shaky when compared with 66 percent and 27 percent ratings for Gramm after his bitter campaign against Doggett.

Republicans plan to worsen those ratings by contending that revenue increases for White's education program violate his 1982 no-tax-hike pledge. But the governor's real trouble is falling oil prices, causing $120 million less in revenue a biennium for every $1-a-barrel drop. Even if disguised in state college tuition and other fees, a second White tax increase could be fatal.

Higher taxes might well propel the Amarillo oil entrepreneur, T. Boone Pickens Jr., into politics as Republican candidate for governor. White's sensitivity is shown by his charges that Pickens' takeover attempt of Phillips Petroleum would cost jobs.

Republican strategists are divided over whether a candidate Pickens would emerge as anti-establishment corporate rebel or unscrupulous corporate raider. What they agree on is that a tax increase would turn some politically inexperienced businessmen into a viable challenger for governor. But they would much prefer ex-senator John Tower, four times a statewide winner, returning to run for governor.

Actually, the identity of the Republican nominee is less important than the new arithmetic of Texas politics. The Anglo majority is now clearly Republican, stemming from both Northern immigration and rural disaffection. Further registration of blacks and browns cannot overcome that, but might drive more Anglos to the Republicans. Simultaneously, the 25 percent upper-income bracket of Hispanics are trending Republican.

Strength For Today

When navigation began, many centuries ago, sailors crept only from one point of land to another. Scarcely ever did they venture out of sight of land. It was only when men began to sail by the stars and sun that navigation, as we know it today, became possible.

People without religious faith have to creep through life, darting from one circumstance to the next. Their lives consist of petty little objectives to be attained by stealthily darting from one point of safety to what appears to be another.

For the person genuinely religious, life is a voyage to a distant point. There will be black and fearful nights, and storms. But about the Christian's whole life there is a rollicking sense of adventure and trust which arises from the fact that he steers his ship by the sun and stars and knows for a certainty that because these guides are eternal, his voyage will not fail.

Legislature Awaits Coy Privette

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — No freshman legislator will join the General Assembly next month with more notoriety than the Rev. Coy Privette of Kannapolis, a Republican upset winner in the Nov. 6 election.

Privette's arrival as a state representative is being awaited with dread by some legislators while others are eagerly anticipating his fireworks.

Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League, is distinguishable from most other freshmen because he's an old hand at the assembly. He's lobbied there since 1980, preaching the league's emotionally charged legislative agenda.

He is also known from the U.S. Senate campaign this year because, without approval, he sold a State Baptist Convention mailing list to Sen. Jesse Helms.

Privette is a Southern Baptist minister, a 1955 graduate of Wake Forest and the Southeastern Theological Seminary. He was an offensive guard on the Deacon football team and is still, at 51, quite athletic. He can be found most every afternoon working out at the Raleigh YMCA.

The agenda which Privette will bring to Raleigh is not modest. He wants the food tax eliminated and state funding of abortion stopped, tougher anti-pornography laws, more restrictive alcoholic beverage laws, and new programs to fight drug abuse.

"You never get everything you ask for," Privette said when asked if he thought it was realistic to seek so much. "But you throw your bills in the hopper hoping to get people to look at them."

Ordinarily, freshmen Republicans are lucky to pass a local bill. But with Privette, there are much higher expectations. He's seen as the natural leader of a bloc of maybe 20 fundamentalist House members. Veteran legislators say he could be very effective, especially if he is willing to work through the system and to shun personal credit for his initiatives.

But on particular issues he'll have to unite with legislators who hold different general philosophies if he is to be successful. For example, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, chairman of the Black Caucus, says he's looking forward to working with Privette on repeal of the food tax. "Coy's my good brother," the liberal Blue says.

The man Privette beat, ex-Rep. Bob Slaughter of Albemarle, says Privette is a friendly guy "who seems to make a great effort to get along with people." But Slaughter questions whether Privette can make the compromises needed in a body of 120 legislators. "He is so adamant in certain views he holds and so unwilling to listen to others that he may have difficulty accomplishing what he seeks."

Slaughter questions whether Privette will be flexible enough to be effective with the 37 GOP House members, let alone the larger Democratic majority. Rep. Betsy Cochran, R-Davie, House minority leader, says Privette will get along well. She's more concerned with portions of his agenda. "Perhaps some of the things he'll be pushing for will not be paramount in this session," she says.

For example, Mrs. Cochran says the assembly won't be interested in drinking laws unless they are seen as part of an anti-drunken driving effort. Anti-drug programs will fare better if they're presented as part of a child abuse package, she said. His effectiveness, she said, relies on his approach. Some bills will pass, she said, "if they are presented in a positive fashion. If they're presented just to create controversy, they're not going to go anywhere."

Anyone Can Make A Mistake

After noting the positive reaction of citizens to the shooting of four thugs by a vigilante in the New York City subway, a bunch of us in Washington decided to form our own vigilante organization to see that justice was served in the nation's capital.

There are tough gun laws in the District of Columbia so we drove over to Virginia where you can buy anything you want, from a .22 Saturday night special snub-nosed revolver to a Uzi semiautomatic machine gun.

I chose a .38 Smith & Wesson because it fits snugly under my coat and reminds me of the old westerns when the good guys constantly drove the bad guys out of town.

Our vigilante group didn't have long to wait. Schneider had been mugged the night before and he said he could identify the guys who did it. We went with him to a Georgetown bar and he pointed them out to us. "Are you sure they're the ones?" I asked him.

"Our course I'm sure," he said. "The big guy is wearing a raincoat just like the one I owned."

That was good enough for us. So we took the three men out of the bar and shot them.

The police were furious that we had done their jobs for them. But the public was delighted and we became folk heroes overnight.

The next time we went out was when a 7-Eleven in the neighborhood was held up.

The clerk in the store said the stickup man wore a Halloween mask, but he had a hunch it was a taxi driver who lived down the street.

We routed the cabbie out of bed and brought him down for identification. The clerk said, "It could be him."

"Wait a minute," Pester said. "We have to be certain because as vigilantes we don't want to hurt an innocent man. You said the guy was wearing a Halloween mask. What kind of mask was it?"

"It was a Darth Vader mask." We sent Pittman to get a mask at the costume shop. Then we put it on the cab driver.

The clerk said excitedly, "That's the guy."

"You're sure?" "The clerk replied, "I never forget a face."

So we took the cabbie out in the alley and broke his legs.

After that we were dubbed "The magnificent 7-Eleven" and more people were rooting for us than they were the Redskins.

The liberal press wrote bleeding heart editorials accusing us of being nothing more than hooligans, and the mayor went on television to condemn us. It didn't matter, because the criminals were now more afraid of us than they were the police.

Christmas night Alvin told us, "I just got a tip that there are a bunch of drug dealers holed up in a house in Northwest Washington. Let's burn it down to teach all the drug dealers in town a lesson."

We hopped in our van with 10 gallons of gasoline and drove to the address the tipster gave Alvin. We threw the liquid all over the house and set it on fire. A father and mother and three children came pouring out of the front door. The father screamed, "What the hell are you doing?" "Teaching you drug dealers a lesson."

"I'm not a drug dealer! I'm a postman." "Is this your address?" Alvin asked, showing him the one the tipster had written down.

The postman looked at it and said, "No you dumb SOB's. That's in Southwest Washington, not Northwest. You guys burned down the wrong house!"

"Don't get all shook up, pal," I said. "Even vigilantes make a mistake once in a while." (c) 1985, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Public Forum

To the editor: These are some of my thoughts for this new year.

May I keep this year in remembrance that God has this entire world in His hands. May I live and let live. May I see His light in the dark. May my darkest path be lighted with his blessed assurance. May our young be given the chance to be treated as youth and not as adults. Give me the mind it takes to live by the Golden Rule. Deliver my mind from all evil, even the smaller evils, such as making light of the clothes people wear, how they walk, and how they talk. I do know that what comes from the heart is what counts with God.

May the aged be given a handshake and thanks for their part in helping to build a better land and a decent living place for the younger ones now that in the future they will be the aged of their time. We the aged need the dream of hope for a tomorrow.

May I say, while I have time, that following you, Lord, is a plan of protection. Thank you, Lord, for my past 70 years of love and care right from your heart and hands. Thank you.

Reagan Names Hodel To Interior Job

WASHINGTON (AP) - Energy Secretary Donald Hodel has been chosen to succeed William Clark as secretary of the Interior, an administration source said today.

The source, who demanded anonymity, said he expected the White House to announce Hodel's choice Thursday. Earlier, other administration officials said there would be no announcement today.

Hodel himself, in an interview with The Associated Press late Thursday night, branded as "speculation" reports of his selection to succeed Clark. "As far as I know, President Reagan has made no decision," Hodel said.

Hodel also says proposals under discussion to merge the Energy and Interior departments don't have "any momentum presently."

Clark last week made a surprise announcement that he intends to resign in two or three months.

Hodel was known not to be eager to switch jobs but would move to Interior if Reagan asked him to.

"Some folks, including Clark, view Interior as a greater post and a promotion," said one source familiar with Hodel's thinking. "But he doesn't really want to move. He likes energy better and considers it a more challenging, significant issue. And he doesn't believe that a merger (of the two departments) will ever go through."

In the interview Tuesday night, Hodel dismissed reports that a job change was imminent.

"I've talked to people, and they say they know what's going on, but I find out that they don't," Hodel said. "The president has not talked to me, and I don't believe a decision is going to be made or announced until the president has talked with me."

He added that he expects it will be "a few days" before any decisions are made.

Certain officials in the White House used Clark's resignation to revive Reagan's 1980 campaign promise to abolish the Energy Department, a move that was overwhelmingly rejected by congressional leaders two years ago when the administration proposed folding it into the Commerce Department.

Administration sources, asking not to be identified, said Tuesday that White House Counselor Edwin Meese III is the primary advocate of utilizing Clark's departure to ask Congress to merge the Energy and Interior departments into a new Cabinet-level Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Hodel confirmed that several reorganization ideas are being discussed but said none of the talks have taken place "in my presence."

"Many people are taking this opportunity to think about various proposals," he said. "But nobody has come up with a proposal that has gained any momentum presently. There has not been an organized assessment of the options."

While Hodel said it is not Reagan's nature to move Cabinet officials around without consulting them first, he did not rule out his possible return to the Interior Department, where he was undersecretary to James Watt before taking his current post.

Energy Department officials said last week that Hodel, a former head of the government's Bonneville Power Administration, prefers dealing with energy issues to Interior matters such as grazing rights.

"I would never say anything that would sound like I was demeaning another job," Hodel said. "I might end up in that job and would not like having to graze on those words."

"I have a job and am happy with it," he added. "If he (Reagan) does not have a preference, I am happy where I am."

If Hodel does not move, Assistant Interior Secretary Robert Broadbent, a Nevada rancher, would probably be named to succeed Clark, said one well-informed official who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

Meanwhile, other administration officials confirmed Tuesday that Reagan has given the Interior and Defense departments until Feb. 15 to prepare plans for consolidating the government's chief water resources agencies.

Ed Dale, a spokesman for Budget Director David Stockman, said merging the Army Corp of Engineers with Interior's Bureau of Reclamation would save nearly $50 million.

Interior officials said last month that they had buried the idea. But it was revived by Reagan last week after Clark - who with Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger opposed the merger - announced his intention to resign, several officials said Tuesday.

The corps and the bureau both build dams and other water projects, but with different emphases. The bureau operates in the 17 westernmost states with irrigation as its top priority while the corps builds projects nationwide that are aimed more toward flood control and navigation.

Safety Board Says Commuter Aircraft Should Be Grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal safety board today urged the immediate grounding of the Embraer 110 "Bandeirante" commuter planes for detailed safety inspections by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The National Transportation Safety Board said the planes should be taken out of operation until the inspections are conducted to ensure none of the aircraft's tail sections have structural problems that could result in weakening of the tail.

There are estimated 130 of the Bandeirante aircraft in the United States but Allan Stephen, executive director of the Regional Airline Association, said today that only about 90 of the planes are in service and about a third of those already have undergone the type of inspection recommended by the NTSB.

Patricia Goldman, the board's vice chairman, told reporters at a news conference, however, that all of the Bandeirantes should be grounded for another inspection.

Stephen and Langhorne Bond, attorney for Embraer, the Brazilian manufacturer of the plane, said that the airlines are prepared to go along with another inspection but they questioned whether the planes needed to be grounded immediately.

The NTSB's recommendation went to the FAA, which has yet to decide whether to order additional inspections.

Stephen said that the operators of the Bandeirante have been advised of the NTSB recommendation and "are going to respond. We're going to do the inspections. If we got to look again, we'll look again."

He said industry representatives and FAA officials were going to try to work out an inspection procedure.

The NTSB said Tuesday night that its investigation into the crash of one of the planes in Florida last month has produced evidence indicating possible structural weaknesses in the tail section.

The board made its recommendation after concluding that visual inspections ordered last month by the FAA were "not adequate to detect damage" to the planes.

"We have found that rivets can be loose and sheared without being detected" by a visual inspection, said Ms. Goldman. She said the planes should be grounded until detailed inspections can be made.

Ms. Goldman is heading the board's investigation into the crash Dec. 6 of a Provincetown-Boston Airline "Bandeirante" after the tail section broke apart shortly after the plane took off from Jacksonville, Fla., killing all 13 people aboard.

FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman said the agency had not received the NTSB recommendation, but that "if the board has come up with some specifics the FAA will carefully assess it and take prompt action."

Feldman reiterated that the inspection of all "Bandeirante" planes ordered by the FAA on Dec. 9 produced no evidence of a safety problem, although some small cracks and loose rivets were discovered.

Marijuana Charge

William James Robertson of Broadway was arrested by Greenville police about 2:30 a.m. today on a marijuana possession charge.

Officer G.W. Williams said Robertson was charged with possession of the drug after an estimated $10 worth of marijuana was found in his car when the vehicle was stopped at the intersection of Tenth Street and Rock Springs Road in connection with a traffic violation.

In addition to the drug charge, Robertson was charged with driving while impaired, Williams said.

Possession Counts

Officers assigned to the police department's special investigations unit have charged Calvin Earl Reddick, 39, of 1009B Broad St. with possession of cocaine, possession of drug paraphernalia and the sale of lottery tickets.

Officers said the charged resulted from an incident at Reddick's home about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Charles Adams Vincent of 3107 Tucker Drive was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 10:35 a.m. collision Tuesday at the intersection of Tenth Street and Cedar Lane.

Officers said cars driven by Vincent and Earl Foster Mason of Roanoke Rapids collided, resulting in an estimated $600 damage to the Vincent vehicle and $250 damage to the Mason car.

Arrests Reported

Two Kinston women, Louise Jackson, 27, and Willie Mae Jackson Williams, 26, were arrested by Greenville police about 1:30 a.m. today in connection with a theft at the Sheraton Greenville on Greenville Boulevard.

Officer J.E. Woolard said Mickey Corbett, 42, of Raleigh, reported at 12:28 a.m. that his wallet had been stolen.

An investigation resulted in the arrest of Ms. Jackson on a larceny charge and Ms. Williams on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, Woolard said.

Property Taken

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of four thefts reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer J.W. Corbett said a gold chain valued at $300, was taken from 109 Fairwood Lane in an incident reported at 7:42 a.m., while Detective Pete Lavin said a portable electric typewriter was taken from Taff Office Equipment Co. in an incident reported at 10:30 a.m.

A love seat and silver candle holder were taken from the First Christian Church in an incident reported at 1:43 p.m., Officer J.M. Jones said, while Officer T.G. Shane said a camera and a quantity of sheet music were taken from a car parked at Hillcrest Lanes in an incident reported at 11:50 p.m.

Chapter Meeting

The history of hemodialysis and continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis (CAPD) was outlined by Dr. Thomas E. Burkhart, medical director of the Greenville Dialysis Center, at the January meeting of the Eastern Carolina chapter of the N.C. Kidney Foundation.

Yvonne Maness, executive director of the National Kidney Foundation of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, was a guest at the meeting. She discussed activities planned for the foundation.

Petitions Circulating

Petitions asking that the Pitt County Commissioners let the voters decide the issue of consolidation are now being circulated throughout the county, according to a spokesman for a group of county Parent Advisory Council members.

The petitions request that the County Commissioners hold a referendum to determine whether the Pitt County and Greenville school systems should merge. The group said it hopes to collect signatures from the required 25 percent of the registered voters in the county. In December the group voted to have the petitions drawn up.

The petitions are available in all school districts, the spokesman said. In some areas members are going door-to-door. The group is pleased with the number of signatures currently on the petitions, he said.

According to members, the group is not opposed to consolidation but it wants the taxpayers of the county to decide whether the process should take place.

In addition, the group said it was concerned with the way consolidation is being handled by county officials, specifically with the "slim flow" of information on the issue.

The eastern chapter sponsored a Christmas party for the dialysis patients from the Greenville Center in December. A barbecue pork cookoff fund-raiser will be held in May in conjunction with the N.C. Pork Producers Association. The chapter meets the first Thursday of each month.

Philippi Service

The Rev. Charles Covil and congregation of New Deliverance Church of Greenville will be in charge of a service Sunday starting at 3 p.m. at the Philippi Church of Christ.

The Philippi Church will have a mortgage burning during the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday.

Oyster Roast

The Sidney Volunteer Fire Department, located seven miles south of Belhaven off N.C. 92, will have an oyster roast Saturday from 5-9 p.m. Hot dogs and beans with corn bread will also be available.

Jarvis Preschool

Jarvis Methodist preschool will have registration for new members Sunday from 2-4 p.m. in the basement fellowship hall. Applications will be taken on a first come, first served basis.

Children presently or previously enrolled or their siblings will register in the director's office Friday from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Programs offered are two-day 2-year-old classes, two or three-day 3-year-old classes and three or five-day 4-year-old classes. Further information may be obtained from Elizabeth Havens at 757-1676.

Conley Workshop

The guidance department of D.H. Conley High School will sponsor a financial aid workshop for seniors and their parents at 7 p.m. Monday in the school library.

A representative of the East Carolina University financial aid office will conduct the workshop.

Financial Aid

A financial aid workshop for seniors at North Pitt High School planning to attend college will be held at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 16 in the school's library.

Kenneth Wheeler of the East Carolina University financial aid office will present information on applying for financial aid. The meeting is also open to parents.

Chapter Met

The Alpha Nu chapter of North Carolina Alpha Delta Kappa, sorority for outstanding women educators, recently met at the Ramada Inn for a program by Brenda VanBaars on pre-retirement planning.

Several bylaw changes were brought to the attention of the group. President Faye Dempsey announced a new scholarship.

Auction Benefit

Radio disc jockey Rick Vick will auction off items donated by area merchants as part of the Weekend of the Stars Telethon Sunday. The auctions will be held at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. at Carolina East Mall, with all proceeds benefitting United Cerebral Palsy.

Meeting Planned

St. Peter's School will hold a home association meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Featured speakers will include Sister Ann Louise, provincial superior, and Sister Georgia Ann, coordinator of ministries of the Sister of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ Order. Other items will include election of a new school board member and Halloween carnival money-spending plans.

Scholarship

The North Carolina Farm Writers and Broadcasters Association is offering a $1,000 scholarship to a college freshman, sophomore or junior planning a career in agricultural communications. The career can be in any phase of agricultural communications: news and information dissemination, public relations or advertising.

Application may be made by letter to the scholarship committee chairman, Tom Byrd, Box 7603, N.C. State University, Raleigh, 27605. Byrd may be reached at 919-737-3173 for information. Application deadline is Jan. 31.

Resnik Honored

Dr. Bramy Resnik, a member of the foreign languages and literature faculty at East Carolina University, was honored Sunday at a luncheon sponsored by Hillel of North Carolina.

Resnik has been faculty adviser and sponsor of Hillel on the ECU campus for the past 17 years. Hillel is an organization which promotes social, educational and religious activities for Jewish students in colleges and universities. It serves approximately 3,500 Jewish students in North Carolina.

Ervin I. Baer of Fayetteville, Hillel board chairman, said Resnik was honored "for almost a single-handed effort to organize and establish Hillel at East Carolina University." Baer said Resnik and his family "have made their home a home away from home for hundreds of Jewish students who came through here."

Resnik is a native of Czechoslovakia who fled Europe during the Holocaust.

Cerebral Palsy Funds

Radio station WRQR-FM has scheduled several activities this week as part of its efforts to raise funds for the annual cerebral palsy campaign.

During the week, the station is accepting telephone requests for specific records to be played on the air in return for pledges to the campaign. The number to call is 753-4110.

At 7 tonight at North Pitt High School, WRQR's Count Casuals will play the F&D Thunderbirds of Bethel in a benefit basketball game. Admission is $1, with the money going to the fund. A cerebral palsy T-shirt sale will be held Sunday afternoon at Carolina East Mall.

The station raised $2,241 for the campaign last year.

Talent Bank

Greenville Talent Bank committee members will be contacting local civic, women's and church groups in the near future to solicit participation in the talent bank program.

According to City Clerk Lois Worthington, the program is used by local government officials to fill vacant positions on city boards and commissions. Those whose names are included in the bank are often contacted to serve as resource persons for city projects as well.

Anyone interested in offering his or her services through the talent bank should contact Mrs. Worthington at 752-4137.

Telethon Appearance

ABC television performer Carmen Thomas will be in Greenville Sunday, appearing on behalf of United Cerebral Palsy as part of this year's annual Weekend with the Stars Telethon.

Miss Thomas, who plays the role of Hilary on the ABC daytime drama, "All My Children," will be at Carolina East Mall from noon to 6 p.m. Also appearing will be Tom McNamara, co-host of PM Magazine on WRAL-TV.

Live entertainment and an auction of items donated by local merchants will be held in connection with the telethon at Carolina East Mall beginning at 8 a.m. Sunday. WRAL-TV will also be doing live cut-ins from the mall during the telethon, which will be aired Saturday and Sunday on WRAL-TV, Channel 5.

Proceeds from the telethon and related events will be used to support Cerebral Palsy Development Centers in North Carolina.

British Court Takes Custody Of Child Born To Surrogate Mother

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The English High Court has taken temporary custody of a 5-day-old baby girl, the first child known to have been born in Britain to a woman paid to serve as a surrogate mother.

The baby's natural father and his childless wife are Americans, according to the Daily Star newspaper, which bought rights to the story.

The action placing the baby in the custody of the High Court's Family Division was announced Tuesday night by Leonie Cowen, chief attorney for the north London borough of Barnet.

Miss Cowen said the ruling "means the jurisdiction and the decisions as regards the child's future will be made by the High Court, which has taken on the responsibility in this matter."

According to the Guardian newspaper, the court now will allow "interested parties, including the natural father," to apply for custody of the child.

"The anonymous American father has no rights over the child because she is illegitimate," the newspaper said. "But for the High Court the baby's interests must be paramount, and it might favor an application by him so long as it is not proposed to take the child out of the country."

The court action came as government officials considered ways to outlaw surrogate motherhood for pay, a practice that a Church of England leader compared to prostitution.

The Barnet Council had obtained a lower court order Friday night, a few hours after the birth, preventing Kim Cotton, 28, from handing over her unnamed daughter to the childless couple. The Daily Star said the couple, reportedly wealthy Americans, paid Mrs. Cotton $7,475 to have a baby for them, and said Mrs. Cotton was artificially inseminated with the childless husband's sperm.

The tabloid, which bought exclusive rights to Mrs. Cotton's story, says a British surrogacy agency arranged the birth.

While the legal storm swirls around her, the girl, dubbed "Baby Cotton" by nurses, has been kept at Victoria Maternity Hospital in Barnet. Mrs. Cotton left the hospital Saturday.

A Barnet Council spokesman said he did not know who obtained Tuesday's High Court order, "but it was not ourselves." The order supercedes the one the council obtained from a Magistrates Court.

The British domestic news agency Press Association said the High Court order could only stand temporarily. To have it extended, whoever applied for it has to present the case before a High Court judge.

Earlier Tuesday, Health Minister Kenneth Clarke said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview that Cabinet ministers will discuss a timetable for legislation to outlaw commercial surrogacy.

But he added: "It may well be in this case that one has parents who want to give a perfectly sound loving home to this child and one of the parents is the natural father. My own personal reaction is that if this is the case, it is presumably best if, as quickly as possible, the child is united with the parents who want to offer her a loving home."

Commercial surrogacy has been widely condemned in Britain and, in the flood of news reports since Baby Cotton's birth, little has been heard from childless British couples seeking to employ it.

The Bishop of Birmingham, Hugh Montefiore, chairman of the Church of England's council for social responsibility, said Saturday that commercial surrogacy was "not wholly unlike prostitution."

A Roman Catholic theologian, the Rev. Carlo Caffarra, said Tuesday in the Vatican paper L'Osservatore Romano that the technique destroys love and makes procreation a mere "rent-a-uterus" practice.

Clarke, in an interview with the weekly newspaper The Observer, said: "I don't think there is any doubt about the general distaste over the idea of paying money for agencies to charge fees for such services."

He predicted legislation would be introduced to outlaw the practice but said it might be difficult to do so in the current Parliament session because of time constraints.

Most of the parliamentary timetable is booked months ahead with government legislation. But a few gaps are set aside for rank-and-file legislators to propose their own legislation, called Private Members Bills. Clarke said if such bill was proposed to outlaw commercial surrogacy, the government might support it.

Great Paper Plane Event Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the millions whose classroom boredom led to youthful flings at paper airplane construction, there will soon be a chance to win fame in the world of aeronautics.

The Second Great International Paper Airplane Contest was announced Tuesday by two of the nation's leading aviation museums and a science magazine.

It's been 18 years since Scientific American magazine launched the first contest, and organizers of the new event hope the strides made in building real aircraft since then will be reflected in their contest entries.

Walter J. Boyne, director of the National Air and Space Museum, said that "imagination will be the key" to this year's event.

Joining Boyne's museum in sponsoring the contest this year are the Museum of Flight in Seattle, Wash., and Science 85 magazine.

The first paper airplane contest drew 11,851 entries from 28 nations and resulted in a book which stirred interest for years. Allen L. Hammond, editor of Science 85, said the organizers hope to receive as many as 20,000 entries this time.

Father Reunited With Son Missing For Over 2 Years

SCITUATE, R.I. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy, allegedly abducted two years ago in California and sexually assaulted, hugged his father today in a tearful reunion after police traced him to Rhode Island.

"I always knew ..." said the father, Robert Smith Sr., his voice breaking off as he caressed the boy, who was delivered to state police headquarters here in a helicopter. The boy wept.

When asked what they planned to do now, the father, who had flown from California, said, "Get back to warm weather."

Meanwhile, authorities held without bail a man who had been a casual friend of the youngster in Long Beach, Calif., on charges of first-degree sexual assault and being a fugitive from justice.

David R. Collins, 56, was arrested Tuesday after a car registered under one of his many aliases and driven by another man crashed during a highway chase, police said. Authorities used a national crime computer to trace Collins to his present address in Providence, where they found him and the boy, said state police Capt. John T. Leyden.

In Long Beach, Doris Smith said she talked to her son Tuesday after police went to Collins' apartment and found him in good health.

Leyden identified the boy as Robert Smith Jr. "I think I was in shock when I heard it," she said. "When they said my son was there and did I want to talk to him, I said yes."

"He sounded scared. I started crying when I heard his voice," Mrs. Smith said. "And he started crying. He said he didn't want to be with him," a reference to his alleged abductor.

Mrs. Smith said her son, one of seven children, disappeared on April 10, 1983 after leaving the home of a friend with whom he had spent the night. The child, then 11, had occasionally done chores for a man who lived several blocks away, she said.

When she and her husband visited the man's home, they were told he had been seen leaving with a boy matching the description of her son, Mrs. Smith said.

"I'd had hopes," she said. "I've had a feeling maybe someday he'd come home. ... I'm still in shock. I can't believe they found him."

It's Never Too Early To Start

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to reading to your children, it's never too soon to start. In fact, some librarians are urging parents to read to their children while they are in the womb.

"It's for the rhythms," Darrel D. Hildebrand, a Bismarck, N.D., librarian, explained Tuesday at the American Library Association's annual midwinter meeting here.

"In the womb you can sense things and hear the sounds. Water transmits them," said Virginia McKee, an expert on children's books for the state of Alabama.

White House Not Expected To Change Policy

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's approval of a surprise job swap by his staff chief and Treasury secretary removes an archenemy of hardline conservatives from the White House but probably does not signal a major change in development of administration policy.

Only 24 hours after the idea was first presented to him, Reagan announced Tuesday that Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan had worked out a deal with Chief of Staff

James A. Baker III to change jobs. The two officials, in conjunction with White House Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver, had been engineering the switch secretly since before Christmas and took it to the president only after they had hatched all the details. As much as anything, the behind-the-scenes planning and last-minute endorsement from the president underscored the image of Reagan as a chief executive who delegates extraordinary power to his subordinates and counts on them to develop a consensus requiring only his approval or disapproval. In the eyes of conservatives, Baker was the leader of White House moderates, eager to negotiate compromises that diluted ideals espoused by the president. His supporters prefer to view him as a pragmatist who would rather settle for what is possible than lose a battle standing on principle. Baker repeatedly joined forces with budget director David Stockman to try to sell Reagan on tax hikes and cuts in the defense budget. Although Regan is not viewed as an insider by the far right, he has championed the president's conservative ideology in general and served as the chief defender of Reagan's tax and budget-cutting program, even under the heavy fire and doubts spawned by the deep recession in 1981-1982. The question now is how Regan will run the White House and how much influence Baker will retain in his new job.

"Conservatives are encouraged by (Regan's) views on some economic issues, but he's not an ideologue," said former White House communications chief David Gergen. "On foreign policy issues, it's important to remember that his closest friend is George Shultz," who is regarded as a moderate. Lyn Nofziger, former political director of the White House and a force in the conservative movement, said Regan may not be regarded as a sympathizer by the right wing but may serve as a closer ally than Baker did in the office so close to the president.

"While Don Regan is not looked upon as one of the right wingers, I think the conservatives will just be glad to see somebody that they didn't quite trust gone," Nofziger said. "I think they see here a new beginning." Yet, some conservatives eyed the switch warily. "It may be, on balance, a negative," said Richard Viguerie, publisher of the Conservative Digest.

Only a week earlier, though, Viguerie said the chief of staff's job was the most important post in the administration and that "conservatives have been holding their breath waiting for Jim Baker to leave." They had hoped he would be replaced by Interior Secretary William Clark, who has announced he is quitting to return to his California ranch.

John T. Dolan, head of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said, "We are a bit concerned ... the next move as far as assuaging conservative concerns is Regan's."

The switch could spell trouble for budget director David Stockman. He and Regan frequently disagreed on economic matters, taking opposing views in the debate over whether budget deficits threaten the economic recovery and whether tax increases are necessary.

On Capitol Hill, the consensus was there would be no change in ideology or policy. "Don Regan and Jim Baker are both pragmatic men who understand the need to reduce the deficit," said Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole. "I called the president to indicate I don't think there are any losers." Vice President George Bush, in an interview, said he does not foresee major changes in policy as a result of the switch. "I wouldn't think so, but there will be obviously different management styles and all of that," Bush said.

The vice president said it was possible there may be some other personnel changes with the departure of Baker and arrival of Regan. "Any manager would want to make changes so it wouldn't surprise me. ..." Bush said.

'BIG THREE' GONE — President Reagan's closest advisers at the White House are leaving as his administration starts a second term. Reagan announced Tuesday that chief of staff James A. Baker III will become secretary of the Treasury, with the current secretary taking over Baker's job at the White House. Deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver announced earlier he is leaving the government post and Edwin Meese III has been nominated for attorney general. (AP Laserphoto)

Mother Looks As Son Dies In Georgia Electric Chair

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Convicted killer Roosevelt Green went to his death in the electric chair today, winking at his attorney and making his last words a goodbye to his mother, who witnessed the execution at her son's invitation.

Green, son of a Pentecostal minister, showed no sign of fear, watching as guards strapped him into the wooden electric chair after he was led into the execution chamber at 12:12 a.m.

Death penalty advocates jeered him outside the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center, chanting "Burn, burn, burn."

Green, 28, was executed for the 1976 shooting death of Teresa Carol Allen, an 18-year-old college student who was abducted from the Cochran convenience store where she worked.

Green went to his death claiming his innocence.

"What you people are about to witness is a grave injustice," he said. "I am about to die for a murder that I did not commit, that someone else committed."

Green, who was black, also complained that "black lives are not equal to white" in the criminal justice system.

"I have nothing against anyone and I have no enemies," he said. "I love the Lord and hope that God takes me into his kingdom, and goodbye mother."

Green's mother, Annie Green of Roosevelt, N.Y., raised her hand slightly in a farewell gesture and one of his lawyers, John Matteson, gave a thumbs up sign after Green winked at him.

Mrs. Green showed no emotion during the execution.

Two guards placed a leather harness containing an electrode on Green's head, attached a wire to the electrode and placed a leather mask over his face.

At 12:19 a.m., Green's body jerked rigidly against the back of the chair and his fists clinched as high-voltage electricity was applied for two minutes.

After waiting six minutes for the body to cool, two doctors checked for a heartbeat and pronounced Green dead.

About 50 death penalty advocates demonstrating outside included four robed members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Several demonstrators said they were from Cochran and knew the victim's family. Tommy Norris said, "We won't be able to see the switch pulled, but I wish we could. She was a friend of ours."

Some 30 death penalty opponents assembled in a separate area, holding candles and softly singing until a prison spokesman announced that the execution had been carried out.

On Tuesday, hours before Green was to die, the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles refused to commute the sentence.

Miss Allen was raped and shot twice with a high-powered rifle, and her body was dumped in a rural section of Monroe County. A second man sentenced to die in her death, Carzel Moore, 32, remains on death row, pending appeals.

ROOSEVELT GREEN

Vigilante Gunman Out On Bail

NEW YORK (AP) — On the eve of his arraignment on charges of trying to kill four youths on a crowded subway train, Bernhard Goetz bailed himself out of jail with a $50,000 check and slipped quietly away.

Goetz, who has become a hero to many crime-weary straphangers, shunned public efforts to provide his bail and posted it himself with a cashier's check early Tuesday evening, said Correction Department spokesman Edward Hershey. Hershey said he believed the $50,000 was Goetz's own.

Goetz was scheduled to be arraigned in Manhattan Criminal Court this morning on four counts of attempted murder.

He allegedly shot the four teenagers on Dec. 22 after they approached him on a crowded subway car and asked first for a match, then for the time and finally for $5. Saying "I have $5 for each of you," Goetz stood up and fired five shots from a .38-caliber revolver, according to police.

Two of the four youths have been released from hospitals.

IRS Says 299 Earned $200,000 But Paid No Taxes

By JIM LUTHER AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two hundred ninety-nine couples and individuals with incomes over $200,000 used deductions and tax credits to avoid paying a penny of federal income tax in 1982.

Their income totaled $149 million. The number of untaxed upper-income Americans was down slightly from the 304 who escaped the tax net in 1981 but considerably higher than the 114 recorded by the Internal Revenue Service in 1979.

How They Did It

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how the 207,291 couples and individuals with incomes above $200,000 a year made their money and reduced their tax burden when they filed their returns in 1983.

- According to the Internal Revenue Service:
 - 161,440 had wages and salaries totaling $30.9 billion.
 - 32,756 reported net business profit of $3.98 billion.
 - 25,794 reported net business loss of $1.5 billion.
 - 4,009 had a net farm profit of $272 million.
 - 16,776 had a net farm loss of $1.1 billion.

 - 99,150 had medical deductions totaling $207 million.
 - 20,843 deducted casualty or theft losses totaling $91 million.
 - 201,641 deducted $5.3 billion for state and local taxes paid.
 - 22,688 paid foreign taxes totaling $216.4 million.
 - 206,992 paid U.S. income taxes totaling $28.7 billion, an average of $138.653 per return.

However, since the number of returns with incomes over $200,000 a year more than doubled from 1979 to 1982, the IRS says, "a high-income return was 55 percent more likely to be non-taxable in 1982 than it was in 1979."

In 1979, about 9 of every 10,000 people above the $200,000 level paid no tax; by 1982 the portion had grown to more than 14 per 10,000.

The IRS is required by Congress to report annually on the tax status of Americans with incomes above $200,000. The report is based on the unaudited returns filed by these people, and the IRS declared that almost any change caused by an audit would add the 299 couples and individuals to the roll of taxpayers.

The latest report is for income earned in 1982 and reported on returns filed in 1983. The IRS said 207,291 couples and individuals reported incomes above $200,000 in 1982, up 18 percent from 1981 and up 70 percent from 1979.

The report is understated in one respect. A favorite legal way of avoiding taxes is to invest in tax-free state and local bonds, whose interest is not even reported to the IRS. An uncounted number of Americans are pushed above the $200,000 threshold by their tax-exempt interest.

The biggest single means used by the 299 non-taxpaying returns to avoid any liability was the foreign tax credit, which allows a $1 reduction in U.S. taxes for each $1 paid to a foreign government. The IRS said the credit was the largest offset on 139 of the returns.

On the other hand, 153 of the high earners paid no income tax to either the United States or any other country.

The deduction for casualty and theft losses was the largest tax-saving item on 64 of the high-income returns that paid no U.S. income tax. In fact, one of every 10 high-income returns reported a casualty or theft loss, an average of $4,366 per return.

That trend prompted Congress in 1982 to severely restrict future deductions for such losses.

The report showed the deduction for interest paid was the No. 1 item on 33 of the high-income returns. The investment tax credit, under which the federal government pays 10 percent of the cost of buying business equipment, was the biggest tax-saving device on 25 returns. The deduction for state and local taxes paid was tops on 20 returns.

The IRS has been tracking the taxes of high-income Americans since 1976. Congress approved a major tax law that, among other things, cracked down on the ability of the wealthy to use accounting gimmicks and tax shelters to avoid taxes and toughened a provision, known as the minimum tax, designed to ensure that most people pay some tax regardless of how many big deductions they have.

After that law was passed, the number of over-$200,000 people who paid no tax dropped from 215 in 1975 to 53 in 1976.

About one of every five people over the $200,000 mark who filed returns paid the minimum tax in 1982 but the 299 obviously did not. Tax laws enacted in 1982 and 1984 further restricted the ability of upper-income people to avoid all federal taxes.

Senate GOP Considering Money Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly a month before President Reagan sends his budget to Congress, Senate Republicans are meeting to consider their own spending plan, including military reductions and Social Security savings the president has resisted.

Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., called a meeting today of Senate GOP leaders and committee chairmen to begin drafting a budget plan that would retain Reagan's goal of holding federal red ink to less than $100 billion by 1988.

Administration officials have acknowledged that the budget Reagan sends to Capitol Hill on Feb. 4 will not achieve that goal, although they emphasize it will meet his short-term goal of holding the deficit to about $170 billion next year. Administration projections show the deficit for the current fiscal year at about $218 billion.

Major Senate options under consideration are elimination of the Social Security cost-of-living increase for next year along with a virtual freeze on the Pentagon's spending authority at the current level.

In an interview Tuesday with The Dallas Morning News, Reagan made clear that he remains strongly opposed to any effort to clamp restraints on the Social Security increases. "You can't blame the deficit on Social Security," which currently is running a surplus, he said.

At the same time, Reagan declined to rule out flatly any moves involving Social Security, noting that "if Congress en masse came down on the side of, say, reducing or holding off on the COLA — cost-of-living increase — you know, what would I be able to do about that?"

In making the preliminary decisions on his new budget, Reagan has agreed to a broad plan to freeze, reduce or eliminate most other domestic spending programs. But the president also rejected proposals from his top advisers for deep reductions in the planned Pentagon buildup.

Under pressure from Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale, Reagan told campaign audiences last year that he would do nothing to reduce or change benefits for current Social Security recipients or future retirees.

But the White House sent out signals Tuesday that the president may be willing to back away from the campaign pledge and accept restraints on Social Security benefit increases as a way of reducing federal red ink.

GM Plans New Unit For High-MPG 'Saturn'

By EDWARD MILLER
AP Auto Writer

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — The success of Saturn Corp., General Motors Corp.'s challenge to Japanese dominance of the subcompact car market, will hinge on a highly computerized and robotized factory and an assist from Toyota, GM's chairman said.

The Saturn plant would employ 6,000 people and the unit, GM's first new nameplate since it added Chevrolet in 1918, would be nearly the size of GM's Pontiac unit or Chrysler Corp.'s Dodge division, GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said Tuesday.

Although Smith did not say where the Saturn plant would be located, he said it would turn out nearly a half million cars annually with a highway mileage of 60 mpg. The front-wheel-drive cars with special transmissions will be sold through a new dealer network by the end of the decade, he said.

"This car, we hope, will be less labor-intensive, less material-intensive, less capital-intensive, less everything-intensive than anything we've ever done before," Smith declared.

"It will be the most efficient plant and plant site and the most efficient way to produce a car anywhere in the world," Smith said at a news conference at GM's sprawling Technical Center in Warren, just north of Detroit.

But without help from the Japanese, who are said to enjoy a $1,500 per car price advantage on small, traditionally low-profit cars, Saturn could not get off the ground, Smith said.

He said GM's 12-year joint carmaking venture with Toyota Motor Corp. was crucial to Saturn Corp.'s existence.

The GM-Toyota linkup, which produced its first car just last month, is threatened by a federal antitrust lawsuit filed by Chrysler, which contends that the world's two biggest carmakers have no business trading secrets. The case is to be heard this March in Washington.

"I don't think we would be able to sit here announcing Saturn if we did not have that joint venture experience coming on," Smith said. "We've learned an awful lot already. We need even more."

Saturn Corp. has an initial capitalization of $150 million, with assets to reach $5 billion, GM said.

Unlike the other divisions, Saturn, as a separate corporation, will have its own labor contract, allowing GM to pursue labor-cost savings GM says it must have to compete against the Japanese in the small-car market. The United Auto Workers union has cooperated in plans for Saturn, GM said.

Donald Ephlin, the UAW vice president who negotiated the union's GM labor contract last fall, attended the news conference and said he didn't expect wages to be an issue.

"Traditionally, the UAW has not opposed the introduction of technology. Rather, we've taken advantage of it to get a greater standard of living for our members and to do better for them," Ephlin said. "We don't intend to reduce the standard of living of our members in any fashion."

A bigger labor-management issue, union members say, will be how much of the Saturn car will be made by UAW members in the United States.

Meanwhile, GM President F. James McDonald said GM dealers will be the preferred applicants for franchises, but becoming a Saturn dealer "probably would require separate facilities."

Smith said it's possible that Saturn dealers would sell other makes of GM cars.

GM came together in its five familiar car divisions in 1918 when Chevrolet merged, joining Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and Oakland. Pontiac replaced Oakland in 1926.

Expanding Labor Force Sends Jobless Level Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment edged up to 7.2 percent of the civilian work force in December as a surge in Americans looking for work surpassed the creation of about 340,000 new jobs during the month, the government reported today.

The number of Americans actually holding jobs in December rose to a record 106.3 million, but the total of unemployed increased to 8.2 million as the labor force expanded by 390,000, the Labor Department report said.

Meanwhile, the number of "discouraged workers," those without jobs but not counted as unemployed because they've given up looking, increased to 1.3 million from the September level of 1.2 million. Those quarterly figures have been falling for the last two years, since reaching a recession high of 1.8 million at the end of 1982.

Since then, some 7.1 million jobs have been created. In 1984 alone, the economic expansion produced 3.2 million new jobs.

A year-end slowdown in U.S. economic growth had led many economists to expect that the jobless rate would either rise a bit or remain flat in December. But widespread predictions of at least somewhat faster growth early in this new year would seem to indicate the unemployment increase will be short-lived.

Many analysts had been surprised by November figures that showed the rate declining to 7.2 percent from October's 7.4 percent. Today's report revised those figures to 7.3 percent for October and 7.1 percent for November.

The rate, which reached 10.7 percent near the end of the 1981-82 recession, dropped to a revised 7.2 percent last June but bounced back to 7.5 percent before beginning to decline again.

An alternate overall unemployment rate, which combines the 114.5 million-member civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, rose to 7.1 percent from 7.0 percent.

The biggest gains in employment were a hike of 95,000 in businesses providing services and an increase of 85,000 among manufacturers.

Nixon Turns 72

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Afflicted with what he called a "very painful" case of shingles, former President Richard M. Nixon ignored a doctor's orders to remain confined in his Saddle River home and took a day trip to the nation's capital.

Nixon, who is 72 today, said he would spend his birthday quietly at home with family members.

"At my age, you don't make a big celebration of your birthday," he said, adding that his daughter Tricia and grandson, Christopher Cox, would visit him at home for the occasion.

In brief remarks to reporters at Pennsylvania Station upon his return from Washington on Tuesday, Nixon said he considered the Geneva arms control conference a success for merely gaining agreement to resume talks between the United States and Soviet Union.

Nixon would not comment at length on the discussions between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, saying he had not been brought up to date on the conference in briefings he regularly receives.

But the 37th president, who resigned in 1974 in the wake of the Watergate scandal, said the Reagan administration had "quite properly tamped down" any expectations that the talks might yield dramatic results.

"I don't expect a significant breakthrough at this point, but these talks will succeed if the parties do nothing more than agree on a process to continue meeting," he said.

Such an agreement was announced late Tuesday after two days of talks.

Relaxed Bumper Standards Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Safety groups and insurance companies say a court decision upholding the Reagan administration's relaxation of automobile bumper standards spells a major defeat for consumers and leaves motorists with "eggshell protection."

A federal appeals court on Tuesday upheld a decision by the Transportation Department nearly three years ago to scrap a federal requirement that all cars have bumpers that protect the vehicle from damage in crashes up to 5 mph. The requirement was cut to 2½ mph.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration concluded that the stronger bumpers are not cost effective because they increase the price of cars and make them slightly less fuel efficient because of added weight.

The insurance industry strongly criticized the rule change and since has argued repeatedly that the weaker bumpers result in sharply higher repair costs and higher frequencies of claims.

But in a 2-1 decision the U.S. Court of Appeals sided with the highway safety agency.

Judge Antonin Scalia in a majority opinion said the government had not acted "arbitrarily and capriciously" and reached its decision "through a methodology that was sensible" while listening to all sides in the dispute.

"No more is necessary to survive our review," Scalia wrote.

But Judge J. Skelly Wright, in a dissent, called the court's decision "an unacceptable retreat from our judicial responsibility" and said NHTSA in its easing of the bumper standard "moved into the field of unreasoned ratification of preordained conclusions."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today in buying encouraged by recent declines in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.51 to 1,198.21 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 6-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Bond prices, which rise when interest rates fall, recorded healthy gains Monday and Tuesday. Today, after some early hesitation, they resumed their climb.

Meanwhile, the small Southwest Bank of St. Louis lowered its prime lending rate from 10 1/2 to 10 percent.

Brokers said there were expectations that large banks across the country might soon make similar reductions in their basic charge on loans to their blue-chip customers.

With interest rates coming down again, analysts said stock traders were growing more optimistic about the economic outlook for the months ahead.

In addition, lower interest rates diminish the competitive allure of bonds and other interest-bearing investments by comparison with stocks.

In the economic news, the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate rose a tenth of a percentage point to 7.2 percent in December. An increase of about that size had been widely predicted on Wall Street.

Today's early prices included Delta Air Lines, up 1/4 at 43 1/4; Eastman Kodak, up 1/4 at 70 1/4; Inco Ltd., up 1/4 at 12 1/4; and American Telephone & Telegraph, unchanged at 19 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials rose 1.11 to 1,191.70.

Bomb Threat

A bomb threat at Ayden Middle School that caused evacuation of the school and a thorough search of the building by bomb specialists Tuesday was a hoax, county school officials said today.

According to Associate Superintendent Tom Craft of Pitt County schools, no explosives were found in the facility. Craft said school officials believed the threat came from a student, and that the student had been identified and disciplined.

Ayden Middle Principal Gaston Monk was not available for comment early today.

identally, at the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's peak period — cut another $118,900 from December's bill.

Green's report said that load management switches on water heaters accounted for $63,017 in savings, while a voltage adjustment from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. on Dec. 7, accounted for another $61,828. The GUC's water plant going to emergency generation saved another $1,070.

The commission Tuesday night approved GUC participation in a "Wellness Program" similar to one established by the city last year, utilizing the facilities and staff of ECU's Human Performance Laboratory, and appropriated $27,000 to fund the screening of employees by the lab.

Dr. R.G. Israel, who heads the lab, told the commission the purpose of a

Martin School Leader Resigns

WILLIAMSTON — R. Eugene Rogers, superintendent of Martin County Schools for more than 19 years, announced his resignation Monday to the Martin County Board of Education.

In a letter to Chairman Macon Holliday, Rogers, 55, asked the board to accept his resignation effective June 30, with the stipulation to withhold the resignation for a short length of time if any state legislation develops concerning additional retirement benefits.

The board accepted Rogers' resignation with regret. His contract was to have ended June 30, 1987.

In other business considered at the board's January meeting, the board approved a bid of $14,833 to Lanier Business Products of Raleigh to install a telephone system for the board's central office. The board also allocated $5,000 to buy a passenger van, allowing an existing van to be converted to a cargo van.

wellness program is to educate employees on the various aspects of health and wellness in order to help them make the right decisions regarding their health.

He noted that typical components of a wellness program include health questionnaires, nutritional counseling, blood pressure screening, smoking cessation programs, stress management, cardiovascular disease evaluation programs, occupational safety, exercise programs and health care consumerism.

As part of the wellness project, the human performance lab will screen GUC employees, on a voluntary basis, to determine their present level of health, then recommend measures the workers can take to improve their physical well-being.

Israel said the wellness program serves as a cost-effective means of identifying and preventing potential medical problems and a continuing program should result in future reductions in health care costs.

In other business, the commission awarded contracts to: Suffolk

Chemical Co. for 150,000 pounds of caustic soda for $11,326; ASEA Electric Corp. for a substation power transformer for $252,724; Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for a power circuit breaker for $21,925; Hesco Inc. for three fault interrupter switches for $85,185; Mellis Corp. for a substation relay and control switchboard for $12,703; and M.D. Henry Co. for substation structures and equipment for $127,862.

is in place," he said.

In step two, budget, costs of staffing, materials and equipment are being compiled and in step three, analysis, the county has determined goals and accountability of results.

Program budgeting is currently in the "phase-in process" in the county, West said. In October 1984, the board adopted a basic program of education that provides a uniform curriculum for all county schools and "this year we will prepare a program budget that reflects the implementation of our basic program of education," he said.

Program budgeting, in contrast to traditional line item budgeting, provides the advantages of flexibility of funds and no dollar reversion, West said.

"A line item budget is a skeleton," according to the schools' Information Management Director Dan Thomas. "Program budgeting fleshes this skeleton out."

In other business: West reported that the schools received $25,467 in December from fines and forfeitures in the county. The figure is $9,634 above the projection for the month.

Ayden-Grifton student Tina Venters was recognized as a recently elected state officer of Future Homemakers of America.

Wellcome Middle student Jeffrey Ward was recognized for having his design selected for the Ronald McDonald House Christmas Card.

Gromyko insisted the approach has offensive potential, while Shultz stressed the emphasis is on research of space-based anti-missile defenses.

"We agreed to disagree," Adelman said. In a compromise, "Star Wars" and several controversial Soviet defensive measures, including a Siberian-based radar system, will be taken up in one package by future negotiators.

The agreement set up two other negotiating groups. One will grapple with ways to reverse the buildup of intercontinental missiles, bombers and submarines. The other will try to reduce U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range ground missiles in Europe.

Shultz, explaining the agreement today aboard his Washington-bound plane, said it permits either side to block any understanding by carrying a dispute about one type of weapon over into other areas.

The arrangement appeared to link talks on offensive and defensive armaments, but Shultz said he wasn't disturbed by such linkage.

"I think there has emerged a kind of mutual recognition that they have their relationship to each other," he said.

At a news conference late Tuesday, Shultz said the United States is unlikely to give up the "Star Wars" program.

"We really don't believe in bargaining chips," he said. Shultz said there was no certainty "we will get anywhere" in the new negotiations. And, he said, "the president will only agree to something if he feels it is in the national interest."

On the Soviet side, Vladimir Lomeiko, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said "obviously this agreement is just a beginning. The negotiation — the most important part — lies ahead of us."

Lomeiko, sounding as firm as Shultz, said "the Soviet position is that it is not admissible to further militarize outer space," a point he said Gromyko emphasized in the discussions with the American.

Shultz, who said he entered the talks with considerable uncertainty, planned on his return to Washington to report to Reagan, who scheduled a news conference for this evening.

Five other U.S. officials were dispatched to foreign capitals to brief government leaders in Western Europe, the Middle East, the Far East and the Pacific.

One potential snag is the setting of a time and site for the new negotiations.

According to Mark Palmer, a State Department official, the Americans wanted to settle both matters in Geneva and get the negotiations quickly under way. However, he said the Soviets were not ready to make the decision and it was postponed for up to a month.

Palmer said Shultz had considered a visit to Moscow for further talks to clear the final hurdles.

Shultz and Gromyko met for a total of 14 hours and 7 minutes, in two sessions Monday and two Tuesday.

The final session, which ran more than five hours, cleared the way to the agreement, Palmer said.

It was reached 13 months to the day that all U.S.-Soviet negotiations on curbing nuclear weapons were stalled in Geneva.

The Soviets walked out of talks on medium-range missiles on Nov. 23, 1983, protesting the start of NATO's deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe. On Dec. 8, they refused to set a date for further discussion of strategic nuclear weapons.

Gryphon Rally Carries By Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
 Successes have been few and far between for Rocky Mount's Gryphons, who — going into last night's game with Rose High School — counted only two wins to their credit. One of those came over a 1-A team, as did one of their seven losses.

But last night, Rocky Mount hung close and then rallied in the final period to push past a lackadaisical Rose team, 57-52.

Rose's girls captured their first Big East win of the year, downing the Lady Gryphons, 41-34 in their game.

Rose led by as much as nine points in the game, and held a 48-43 lead going into the final quarter. But the Gryphons quickly erased that as Tony Coley, Mike Mabry and Pete Davis each hit, putting Rocky Mount up, 49-48, with 6:07 to play.

Rose regained the lead on a basket by Carlton Wilson, but David returned it to the Gryphons. Melvin Jenkins tapped back a missed shot for another Rose lead, 52-51 with 4:28, but it was to be the final Rampant points of the game.

Coley sunk a hook with 3:51 left for the lead and after Rose missed a jumper, the Gryphons rebounded and called time out with 3:26 left in the game.

From then on the Gryphons played keepaway, as Rose left four men back in a zone and chased the ball with only one, Dwight Smith.

With about 30 seconds left, Smith almost stole it, but Rocky Mount managed to regain possession and James Avent was fouled, making both shots. After another Rose miss, Mabry canned two more free throws to put the game away.

"It was a sorry-played game," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "I told them that it was going to be a tough game, but they didn't believe me. Rocky Mount got blown away by Beddingfield by over 50 points and I guess they figured that all they had to do was show up. We deserved to lose."

Brewington added that his team failed to play any defense, letting Rocky Mount score any number of easy baskets. That was shown in the Gryphons 59.0 percent night from the floor. They also didn't miss much as the line, canning 11 of 13.

Rose meanwhile, hit on only 38.5 percent of its shots from the floor.

"We outrebounded them in the first half (19-12) but they came back and outrebounded us in the second (13-9) when we missed a lot of shots. They were ready for us, but we shouldn't have lost to them. The things we've been doing well, we didn't do tonight. I don't know, maybe it'll help us in the long run."

Rose appeared ready to make a rout of it in the first quarter, streaking out to an early seven point lead. But they never took a killer grip on the Gryphons and instead allowed them to come back. After Rocky Mount moved out to a 4-2 lead, Rose came back to score nine straight points, four of them by Wilson and three by Jenkins, to take an 11-4 lead.

The two teams then exchanged baskets until Tyrone Smith made two free throws with 17 seconds left for a 19-10 lead — the biggest for Rose in the game. Sherron Barnes hit for the Gryphons, however, to cut the lead back to 19-12 at the horn.

Throughout the first five minutes of the second quarter, Rocky Mount chipped away at the lead, outscoring Rose two to one along the way. Finally Coley's ip cut the lead to 25-24 with 2:52 showing.

But Smith, Gary Scott and then Smith again scored to run it back to 31-24 at the break.

Rocky Mount again cut the lead to three, 35-32, before Rose scored five straight to go back out by eight, 40-32. But again, the Gryphons steadily chipped away at the lead until they cut it to 46-43 with 46 seconds to go. Jenkins closed out the quarter's scoring, however, with two free throws, giving Rose a 48-43 lead to take into the final period.

But the Rampants ran out of gas in that frame, and Rocky Mount surged back to claim the win.

Coley led the Gryphon scoring with 18 points while Davis had 14 and Mabry, 10.

Rose was led by Jenkins with 17, while Wilson added 12 and Martin Norville had 10.

The loss drops Rose to 6-4 overall and 1-1 in the league. Rocky Mount climbs to 3-7, 1-1.

Rampettes-Lady Gryphons
 The girls' contest was a tight affair for three quarters as both teams had their problems in finding the mark. After an early 1-0 lead by Rose, Rocky Mount took the lead at 4-1 and held on to lead the rest of the way, taking a 6-5 lead at the end of the period.

Rose finally regained the lead at 11-10 on a jumper by Lisa Trevathan, only to lose it right back on a jumper in the lane by Jewel Sharpe, 12-11. Rocky Mount held on after that to lead, 16-13 at the half.

JV Game: Rose 64, Rocky Mount 60.

The lead changed hands four times in the third period before Vicki Parrott hit from the baseline to give Rose a 21-20 lead with 2:18 left in the period. That score held the rest of the way, but Rose was never to trail again.

Trevathan and Parrott both scored early in the final quarter to open a 25-20 lead, and after a Gryphon free throw, Kim Bridges hit two straight shots to run the lead to 29-21 with 4:48 left.

A three-point play late in the quarter by Sharpe cut the lead to 34-30, but Pam Smith made two free throws and then pushed back a missed shot to up the lead to 38-36 with 35 seconds left, and Rose hung on for the win.

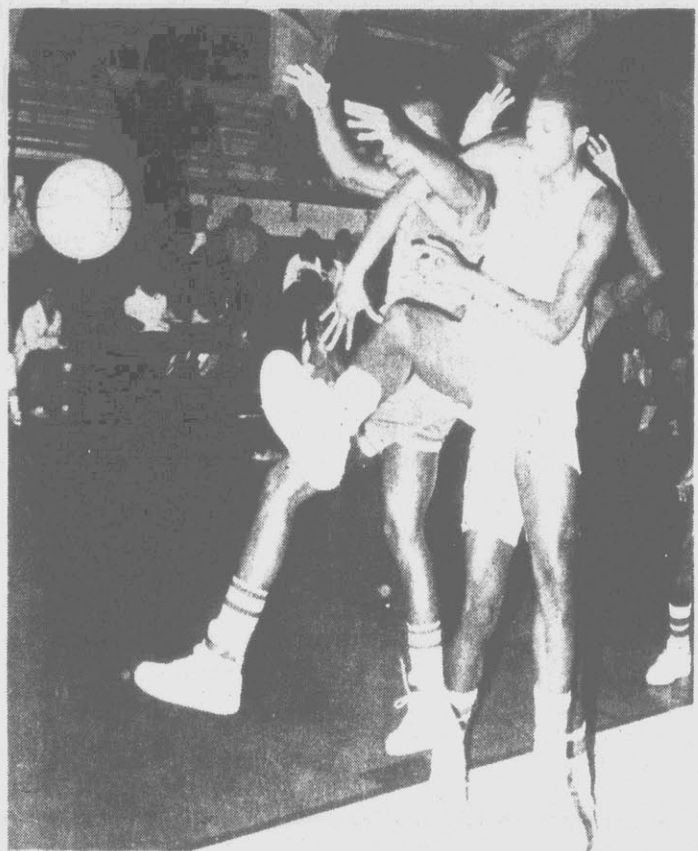

"As slow as the tempo of the game was, I should have gone to a man-to-man defense earlier," Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "I switched at the half, and it opened things for us."

"What worries me is that we didn't show much enthusiasm in either of the last two games. I'm not complaining about winning, but we're capable of playing better than we did in the last two games."

Trevathan led Rose with 11 points, while Sharpe led all scorers with 22 for the Lady Gryphons.

Rose is now 5-6 overall and 1-1 in league play. Rocky Mount drops to 2-6, 0-2.

Rose travels to Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

East Carolina Challenges Duke's Number 2 Ranking

East Carolina's Pirates travel to Durham tonight to face the nation's number two ranked team in the Duke Blue Devils. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Cameron Indoor Stadium.

The Pirates go into the contest with a 5-5 record, having lost their Monday night ECAC-South opener to George Mason, 81-69. Duke comes into the non-conference affair with a 10-0 mark, having slipped past Virginia, 63-58, in Charlottesville.

The meeting between the two schools will be the 13th — and Coach Charlie Harrison and his Pirates are hoping that 13 will be an unlucky number for the Blue Devils. East Carolina has never beaten Duke, but has come close on several occasions, including a 70-65 game two years ago. Last year, Duke rolled up an 80-64 victory, but had a battle on its hands for a while before finally subduing the Pirates.

The Blue Devils have four of their five starters in double figures, led by 6-2 junior guard Johnny Dawkins, hitting 17.6 points a game. Mark Alarie, the 6-9 junior forward is hitting 16.8 per game, while 6-8 junior center Jay Bilas is scoring 11.3 per outing. Rounding out those in double figures is the lone senior starter, 6-7 forward Dan Meagher at 10.9.

The other starter is 6-0 sophomore guard Tommy Amaker, scoring 8.0 points a game.

Backing them up are 6-5 junior guard David Henderson, scoring 11.3 per game in relief, and 6-6 junior forward Weldon Williams, scoring 3.7 per game.

Alarie is the leading rebounder at 4.2 with Dawkins pulling 5.1.

Duke will be the highest ranked team the Pirates have met since playing host to #1 ranked South Carolina in Minges back in December, 1969.

The Pirates return home on Saturday night to reenter the ECAC-South race, playing host to William & Mary.

Chowan Eases Past Paladins

MURFREESBORO — Chowan Junior College, ranked #7 in the nation, had its hands full with Pitt Community College before finally taking an 81-75 victory last night.

Pitt jumped out to a 6-0 lead, but Chowan came back with an 18-4 advantage over the next few minutes to take an 18-10 lead. They stretched that to 31-15 with seven minutes left to play. But over the rest of the half, Pitt outscored them, 22-11, and cut the lead to 42-37 at the half.

In the opening minutes of the second half, Pitt closed it to 42-40, but Chowan again pulled away, steadily building up an 82-62 lead with three minutes left in the game.

"Offensively, we only played fair," Coach Charles Coburn said. "There are just things we are not doing right and we're standing around too much. But I was real pleased with our free throw shooting (25 of 28). That kept us in the game."

Tracy Battle led Chowan with 18 points, while Ken Reynolds had 16. Rob James had 12, Jerome Cooper had 11 and Ron Harper, 10. Pitt was led by David Joyner with 21, while Kevin Tyree hit 16, Andrew Edwards had 13 and Keith Clark, 10.

The loss broke an eight-game winning streak for the Paladins, now 12-7. Pitt travels to Clinton on Saturday to face Sampson Tech at 8 p.m.

Viking Matmen Suffer 1st Loss

MOREHEAD CITY — West Carteret took advantage of a pair of forfeits to capture a 36-31 victory over D.H. Conley in Coastal 3-A high school wrestling action Tuesday.

Jeff Newsom pinned Conley's Clifton Clemons in the 187 pound match and Jay Mulwee decisioned Ricky Rice at 197 to insure the Patriot victory.

But the upset of the night came in the 128-pound class, as Conley's Kerry Farris pinned 1984 state runnerup Danny Iwanicki 5:29 into the match. Iwanicki held a 6-4 point lead at the time of the pin.

"Farris was able to take him down to his back and secured the pin with tight combination that he learned in practice on Saturday," Conley Coach Milt Sherman said. "The forfeits have had us dodging the bullet all year. The boys have done real well to be 9-1 with that problem: we're 12 points behind before the match starts."

Conley, now 3-1 in the Coastal Conference, travels to Camp Lejeune Thursday for a non-conference match.

Braxton Sparks Panthers In Romp By Rams, 68-34

BETHEL — Alfred Braxton appeared in nine of the first ten games North Pitt played, scoring a total of 14 points. But last night, he got his big chance, and might possibly have found a home.

Braxton, starting in place of the injured Gentry Sneed, scored 18 points and led North Pitt to a 68-34 romp over Eastern Carolina Conference foe Greene Central.

Greene Central's unbeaten girls rolled up a 57-33 win in their outing.

North Pitt wasted little time in letting the Rams know who was boss, running out to a 14-4 lead in the opening quarter of the game. The Panthers cooled a little in the second frame, but still ran the lead out to 27-14 by the end of the half.

The Panthers continued to pull away in the second half. They upped their lead to 47-24 in the third period and outraced the Rams to the wire, 21-10, to win handily.

In addition to Braxton's output, the Panthers got 11 from Levon Shaw. No one scored in double figures for the Rams.

North Pitt climbs 10-1 overall and 3-0 in the league. Greene Central drops to 3-8 overall and 0-2 in conference play.

Greene Central's girls had a little trouble with the Pant-HERS in their win as they boosted their record to 11-0 overall and 2-0 in ECC play.

By the end of the first period, the Lady Rams held a 17-10 lead and they increased that to 26-18 by the end of the half. North Pitt proved pesky however, hanging close until the third period, which ended the Greene Central holding a 41-30 lead. In the final quarter, the Lady Rams outscored the Pant-HERS, 16-3, to wrap it up.

Cynthia Jones led Greene Central with 21 points while Cyndi Hicks had 17. Regina Cox led North Pitt with 13.

North Pitt drops to 6-6 overall and 1-2 in the league.

North Pitt returns to action on Friday, hosting Farmville Central, while Greene Central travels to Ayden-Grifton.

Patriots Hold Off Conley Rally

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — West Carteret rolled up a 13-point lead in the third, then had to rely on the free throw line in the final period to hold off D.H. Conley 42-39 in Coastal 3-A Conference high school basketball action Tuesday.

In the girls game, Lisa Mills and Angela Smith posted 16 points each as Conley downed West Carteret 47-40. The Valkyries, who struggled at the free throw line last week in a loss to Farmville Central, connected on 10 out of 12 attempts in the final 1:25 to record the win in their Coastal Conference opener.

Conversely, the Conley boys lost the game at the free throw line — not by inaccuracy, but by attempting just two from the charity stripe. Ricky Farrow, who led the Vikings with 15 points, sank the second attempt on a two-shot foul 1:39 into the game, and Conley never sent anyone else to the line.

West Carteret managed to hit just 10 out of 21 free throws, while Conley held a 19-16 edge in field goals.

David Yancey led the Patriots with 15 points. Jeff Wright hauled down 11 rebounds for Conley, while Farrow grabbed seven.

"Basically, we accomplished what we wanted to in the ballgame," Conley Coach Walter Claybrook said. "I'm pleased with (the game) other than the fact that we lost. We're not going to see a team any better than West Carteret."

"They gave us problems in matching up with their height, but I thought Ricky Farrow and Jeff Wright held their own — they didn't back down. Steve Mills has started playing more like we want him to at point guard — taking over and being the quarterback on the floor."

The Patriots outscored Conley 14-8 in the third quarter, leading by 34-21 with two minutes left before the Vikings trimmed the margin to 34-25 at the end of the period as Joel Cox tipped in a rebound and Mills pulled up for a 10-footer.

The Vikings scored eight unanswered points through the 4:43 mark of the fourth quarter to pull the score to 34-33, but West Carteret used a trapping press on defense to confuse Conley. The Patriots forced three turnovers before the Vikings managed to get the ball past mid-court.

West Carteret hit on four out of seven free throws to build the lead to 38-33 with 4:02 remaining, and the Vikings never managed to catch up.

"The biggest difference in the game was their press, and at times we did a good job of handling that," Claybrook said. "If we could of handled the press a little better in the end, it could have been different."

"But this gives us something to build on if the kids look at the positive things they accomplished and not just that we lost."

West Carteret never trailed in the game, as the Patriots took their biggest lead of the first half on a free throw by Kelly Willis 29 seconds into the second quarter.

Wright sank a follow shot with 5:47 till intermission to cut the margin to 13-11, and Farrow swished a 15-footer with 1:13 left in the half for an 18-17 deficit. But Yancey connected

Washburn Bound Over

By RICK SCOPE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH — A District Court judge was not convinced by attorneys for Chris Washburn that the North Carolina State basketball player was playing a "prank" when he allegedly stole a stereo from another athlete.

Judge Narley Cashwell ruled on Tuesday that there was enough evidence to bring Washburn to trial on a charge of second-degree burglary, a felony which carries a minimum sentence of 14 years.

"In some ways, I thought it would be over today," Washburn told The News and Observer of Raleigh following the probable cause hearing. "I'd rather not say any more than that."

The case will now be sent to the grand jury, which will consider indicting Washburn on a second-degree burglary charge. Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said.

Wade Smith, one of Washburn's two attorneys, said what his client did was "a dumb thing to do. But it was far more logical that he took the stereo as a prank and intended to return it."

But Riley said that a tape recording of an interview between Washburn and a police officer played at the hearing showed Washburn "intended to take (the stereo) and, furthermore, intended to keep it."

Washburn told Raleigh police officer Donald A. Weingarten he was guilty of taking another athlete's stereo but said he was going to put it back.

"I know I'm guilty of it," Washburn told Weingarten the day after the theft.

Washburn, a Hickory native, is accused of stealing stereo equipment worth about $800 from the dorm room of William West and Jeffrey Davis, both of whom are sophomores on the Wolfpack football team.

on a pair of free throws with 44 seconds left for a 20-17 halftime lead.

Conley, now 1-11 on the season and 0-1 in the Coastal Conference, remains idle until Thursday Jan. 17 when they travel to cross-county rival Ayden-Grifton of the Eastern Carolina Conference.

VALKYRIES, LADY PATRIOTS
After Conley managed a 22-20 halftime advantage, Smith connected on a pair of long-range field goals in the third quarter as the Valkyries held a 6-2 scoring edge.

Trellaney Boyd, who added 11 points for the Valkyries, opened the fourth quarter with a 17-footer for an eight-point Conley lead.

Cindy Murdoch completed a three point for West Carteret to trim the margin to 30-25 with 7:03 left, but Conley outscored the Lady Patriots 6-2 through the 4:54 mark for a 36-27 lead.

After Murdoch dropped in a field goal with 4:08 remaining to cut the gap to seven, Smith sank a free throw with 2:16 on the clock for a 37-29 Conley lead.

But Stephanie Moore sparked a West Carteret rally with seven points as the Lady Patriots outscored Conley 9-3 until there was 40 seconds left and the score 40-38.

Smith sank four straight and Boyd connected on three out of four from the free throw line as the Valkyries opened their Coastal Conference slate with a victory.

"I told the girls that West Carteret would have to go to man-to-man (defense) to get back in the game," Conley Coach Joy Riddick said. "During the second timeout, I told them to get back and let Trellaney have room to work. My girls have a tendency to fire it up; I wasn't really trying to hold the ball, just work around for a good shot."

"We've concentrated on free throws; at the end, I knew they would go in. If they wanted to send us to the line, I was satisfied to win there."

"Going into tonight's game, I told the girls that we're 0-0 — nothing we did in non-conference games matters to anyone. Now we're 1-0."

The Valkyries are now 5-8 overall.

Columbia Stalls Jamesville Rally

JAMESVILLE — Columbia held off Jamesville in the final seconds and took home a 56-55 Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victory last night. The Wildcats also won the girls game, taking a 43-30 decision.

In the boys' game, the two teams played neck-and-neck throughout the evening. It was tied after one period, 18-18, and Columbia managed a 27-26 lead at the half. Jamesville countered that in the third period and the two went into the final eight minutes deadlocked at 49-49.

"We had too many turnovers that hurt us in the final period," Coach William Johnson said. "But we cut their lead back to two and then stole the ball to have a chance to tie it up."

Horacie Stotesbury was fouled as he went up for a shot with one second left, and he missed the first of the two shots, making the second to leave the Bullets one short.

Tony Midgett led Columbia with 20 points while Andre Bailey added 10. Robbie Harris led Jamesville with 12 while Tracy Peele and Stotesbury each had 11.

The loss dropped Jamesville to 2-2 in the conference and 2-4 overall.

Jamesville's girls fell behind in the first period, 9-7 but fought back to tie the game at 18-18 at the half. In the third period the Lady Bullets pushed into the lead, taking a 29-24 edge into the final quarter.

In that, however, the Bullets fell apart, scoring only one point while the Wildcats added 19 to take the win.

Tarsha Clegg led Columbia with 21 points while Kim Simpson had 10. Tammy Crisp had 10 points to lead Jamesville.

The loss drops Jamesville's girls to 0-4 in the league and 0-6 overall.

Jamesville plays host to Aurora on Thursday.

Farmville Romps To 75-55 Victory Over North Lenoir

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central placed five players in double figures as the Jaguars romped to a 75-55 non-conference basketball victory over North Lenoir last night.

Farmville's girls also came away with a win, downing the Lady Hawks, 65-48.

The Jaguars pushed out into a slim 21-18 lead in the first period, then saw North Lenoir run past them in the second quarter. The Hawks held a 20-10 scoring edge in the period and rolled up a 38-31 halftime lead.

But the Jaguars came back to the JV Game: North Lenoir 48, Farmville Central 43.

williamston captured its fourth North-eastern Conference victory and handed Williamston only its second loss of the conference year with a 66-59 victory last night.

The Roanoke girls also came away with a win, downing the surprising Lady Tigers, 58-52.

Roanoke's boys zipped out into a 15-6 lead in the first period, and increased that to 29-17 in the second period. In the third period, however, Williamston rallied, 15-9, and cut the Redskins lead back to 38-32. Both teams rushed to the basket in the final quarter, with Roanoke outshooting the Tigers, 28-27, to preserve the win.

James Duggins led Roanoke with 20 points while Garrett Boyd had 19 and Shawn Chance added 14. Tony Doughty led Williamston with 21 points, while Mike Griffin had 13 and Robert Slade, 13.

The win boosted the Roanoke record to 8-3 overall and 4-1 in the league while, Williamston falls to 7-4, 3-2.

Roanoke's girls ran out to a 19-8 lead in the first quarter of their game, only to see Williamston put on a rally in the second period, 19-11. That cut the lead back to 30-27 by halftime.

In the third quarter, both teams pushed in 12 points, but Roanoke pulled away, 16-13, in the last period to hold on and win.

Glora Duggins led Roanoke with 27 points while Cheryl Randolph added 20. Sonya Purvis led Williamston with 13, while Monique Pou had 11 and Jan Mills had 13.

Roanoke goes to 8-4 overall and 4-2 in the conference, while Williamston drops to 2-9 overall and 1-4 in the conference.

Rocky Mount Tops Aycock

ROCKY MOUNT — E.B. Aycock Junior High suffered its first loss of the young season yesterday, bowing to Rocky Mount, 54-45. The Aycock girls, however, took their second straight, winning 37-25.

In the boys' game, Errol Wooten and Dallas Fornville each scored 11 points to lead Aycock. C. Williams had 15 for Rocky Mount.

Smith, Dixon Lead Ayden-Grifton

By DOUG JOHNSON
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — Marvin Smith poured in 22 points and Mike Dixon accounted for 17 more as the Ayden-Grifton Chargers defeated the Southern Nash Firebirds 60-48 Tuesday in Eastern Carolina Conference high school basketball.

The Lady Chargers also came away with a victory, posting their first win of the season by defeating the Lady Firebirds by a score of 29-25.

The Chargers took command from the beginning as Smith scored on a short jumper, then added another with Danny West hitting to run the lead out to 6-0 before the Firebirds could finally find the mark.

With 5:15 remaining in the period, Randy Pridden finally put the Firebirds on the board on a short jumper. Herbert Perry soon added another for the Birds, pulling them within two. The Nash offense slowly began to pick up, and they matched the Chargers basket-for-basket for the remainder of the period, resulting in a 14-12 Charger lead at the end of the first.

The Chargers continued to lead throughout the second period, with Southern Nash close behind. The Chargers played aggressive defense and controlled both the offensive and defensive boards. The Firebirds, looking to take the lead, began to press full court. The press caused the Chargers to turn the ball over, but because of their own mistakes, the Birds could not capitalize.

Smith posted the brunt of the Ayden-Grifton scoring in the period with six of their 12 points. As a result, the Chargers led by two, 26-24, at the half.

Ayden-Grifton controlled the tap to open the second half and continued to play in the same style that had given them the lead throughout the first half. Doug Anderson came alive for the Chargers, hitting all of his six points in the period.

The Firebirds suffered on offense, barely keeping within striking distance of the Chargers by playing tough defense to remain down by three at 37-34 after the third quarter.

The final period belonged entirely to the Chargers as they slowly began to extend their lead. Southern Nash couldn't seem to pull it together and could only watch as the Chargers went up by 13 with 1:05 remaining. Dixon did the job at the line for Ayden, hitting seven free throws down the stretch to put the game on ice.

"We played really well on defense, but we could have played better on offense," said Charger Coach Bob Murphrey. "We did not pass or execute well. There were too many quick shots and one-on-ones for me. But Marvin Smith played well, and I was really satisfied with our defense."

LADY CHARGERS, FIREBIRDS
Led by center Stephanie Mort with nine points, the Lady Chargers won their first game of the season over Southern Nash.

"Stephanie had a really good game tonight," said Coach Kathy Frazier. "She played well on both offense and defense. As a team, I think we played a good game, especially in the fourth period. We did something tonight that we have practiced all year. We played four quarters of basketball."

Ayden played tough defense throughout, leading almost the entire game. The first half was nip-and-tuck, but in the second the Lady Chargers began to pull away. It was close until the last minutes, when Mort and Juanita Murphy teamed up for five points to put them ahead by six, 29-23, in the waning moments.

Ayden-Grifton's boys are now 3-0 in league play and 8-3 overall, while the girls are 1-2 in the ECC, 1-10 overall. The Chargers play host to Greene Central on Friday.

Mattamuskeet Tops Chocowinity 52-50

CHOCOWINITY — Mattamuskeet drove inside for the winning bucket after a Chocowinity turnover to take a 52-50 overtime victory in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action Tuesday.

Herry Shelton paced Mattamuskeet with 12 points, while Henry Harris led Chocowinity with 18 and Roy Hooker added 10.

"The main thing that killed us was two turnovers in overtime and missing free throws," Chocowinity Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "With 16 seconds left we were holding the ball for the final shot and threw the ball away. Mattamuskeet drove in and scored."

"We shot four free throws in overtime and made one."

In the girls game, Tawanda Gerald posted 13 points, Kim Green 12 and Zena Warren 10 as Chocowinity took a 57-46 victory.

The Lady Tribe rolled up a 24-9 halftime advantage, but Mattamuskeet outscored Chocowinity 23-19 in the final period. Mary Brimmage paced Mattamuskeet with 19 points, while Sheila Perry added 12.

Chocowinity's boys are now 3-3 in the Tobacco Belt and 4-7 overall, while the Lady Tribe improved its record to 4-2 in the league and 7-2 overall. Chocowinity travels to Aurora Friday.

NCSU Pulls Out Win

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State center Cozell McQueen said the Wolfpack needed a victory in the worst way — regardless of what happened with Chris Washburn.

With Washburn watching from the scorer's table, the Wolfpack snapped a three-game losing streak with a 51-45 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia. The triumph also broke a tie for the ACC cellar between the two schools, which were winless in two conference games.

"We needed this victory bad," said the 6-foot-11 McQueen. "It couldn't have come to a team that needed it more. We haven't defeated them in four years in a conference game."

Washburn was bound over to Wake County Superior Court Tuesday after a judge found probable cause to bring Washburn to trial on a second-degree burglary charge.

Georgia Tech lost its second game in a row as Vincent Hamilton's 27 points led Clemson to a 90-81 victory over the ninth-ranked Yellow Jackets. It was also Georgia Tech's second straight conference loss after beating N.C. State in December.

In non-conference play, Delaney Rudd's 19 points in the second half led Wake Forest to a 79-64 victory over Furman.

Tonight, second-ranked Duke returns home to face East Carolina while No. 5 North Carolina meets Maryland.

N.C. State outscored the Cavaliers 12-4 in the first 6½ minutes of the second half to grab a 34-26 lead after being tied, 22-22, at the half.

The Wolfpack's scoring string was keyed by the inside power of Lorenzo Charles, who scored five points during the run, and Russell Pierre who added a three-point play. Virginia cut the lead to four at 40-36 with 7:22 left on Jim Miller's jumper, but the Cavaliers could get no closer.

Terry Gannon led the Wolfpack with 10 points. He hit 5 of 11 field goal tries as he continues to search for the touch on his jumper. Overall, the Wolfpack guards shot 11 for 29.

"I didn't hesitate tonight when I saw a shot," Gannon said.

Gannon, a 48 percent field goal shooter for his career, was shooting 33 percent from the field prior to the Virginia game.

"We were 0-2 in the conference and we needed a victory," McQueen said when asked if a victory was necessary to bolster team morale following the Washburn incident.

The victory leaves the Wolfpack at 8-4 overall and 1-2 in the ACC, while the Cavaliers fall to 7-6 and remain in the ACC cellar at 0-3. N.C. State also ended an eight-game drought in which they had not beaten a league opponent in the regular season.

Virginia forward Tom Sheehy led all scorers with 14 points and was the only other scorer in double figures. Olden Polynice added nine points — all in the first half, while Charles matched that total for the Wolfpack.

Ore Leads Washington By Tarboro For League Win

WASHINGTON — Washington started out strong and rolled up a 67-52 Northeastern Conference basketball victory over Tarboro last night. Tarboro's girls took a 66-63 overtime victory in their game after rallying from five points down with just over two minutes to play.

The Pam Pack charged out to a 22-10 lead in the first period and the two exchanged points in the second frame, giving Washington a 32-20 lead at the half.

Washington increased its lead to 48-31 in the third period and allowed a 21-19 rally by the Vikings in the final period.

Alton Ore led Washington with 14 points while Earl Randolph and Steve Austin each had 12. Tarboro was led by reserve John Hinton with 10.

Washington's girls slipped out to a 16-15 lead after one period and blasted Tarboro, 19-4, in the second frame for a 35-19 edge at intermission. Tarboro rallied, however, 20-9, in the third period to cut the lead to 44-38.

In the final quarter, Washington held a 57-50 lead with 2:21 left, but Tarboro scored six points over the next 35 seconds to cut the lead to one. Both teams went through frustrations with missed shots and turnovers over the next minute plus and with 41 seconds left, Yvette Moore hit the first of a one-and-one for a 58-56 Washington lead.

Tarboro missed on a shot, but Lisa Weimann rebounded and scored at the buzzer to send the game into overtime.

After a 61-61 tie, Tarboro scored five straight points to a 66-61 lead with 26 seconds left, wrapping up the win.

Belinda Winnegan led Tarboro with 28 points, while Weimann had 12 and Vida Johnson had 11. Sarah Gray led Washington with 20, while Gloria Sherrod had 12 and Vevona Youmans each had 12 and Moore had 11.

Bear Grass Downs Bath High School

BATH — Bear Grass rode a second period surge to a 50-42 Tobacco Belt basketball victory over Bath High School last night.

The Lady Bears, however, bowed to Bath, 40-33, in their game. The Pirates and Bears battled on even terms in the first quarter, which ended in a 9-9 deadlock. But Bear Grass began to pull away in the second period, outscoring the Pirates, 15-8, to take a 24-17 lead at the half.

The Bears lost a couple of points in the lead in the third period, but held a 36-31 edge as the final quarter opened. In that, they outscored the Pirates, 14-11, to hold on for the win.

Terry Brown led the Bears with 11 points while Augustus Satchell had 14 and James Spencer had 10 for Bath.

Bath held a slim 11-10 lead after one period, and increased that to 18-16 by halftime. Neither team gained any headway in the third period, which ended with the Lady Pirates up, 30-28. But Bath outscored the Bears, 10-5, in the final period to take the win.

Alice Warren led Bath with 19 points, while Lori Cowan had 10 to pace the Bears.

The Bears are now 4-3 in the league and 6-5 overall, while the Lady Bears drop to 4-3, 7-3. Bear Grass plays host to Chocowinity next Tuesday.

Network Anchors Report On Arms Talks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They didn't unlock any secrets, but by playing foreign correspondent for two days, the networks' top anchormen brought wider attention to the arms control talks in Geneva than they otherwise would have received.

Sending "Today" show host Bryant Gumbel to Geneva "means we made a major commitment to cover the story. If Bryant doesn't go, we don't devote as much time to it," said Steve Friedman, executive producer of the NBC program.

On Monday night, the "CBS Evening News" devoted nearly 19 minutes of its 21 1/2-minute broadcast to the talks. Anchor Dan Rather did a stand-up newscast outdoors in freezing downtown Geneva, Switzerland.

"His Rather's being here at a story like this, where nuance and subtlety are a big part of the story, is a tremendous help," "Evening News" executive producer Lane

Venardos said Tuesday by telephone from Geneva. "Being here allowed us to do more and present things a little clearer and more thoughtfully."

Venardos said planning for Monday's broadcast began two weeks ago. There were pieces on the reactions of American and Soviet citizens and a report explaining the "Star Wars" defense system with graphics that resembled a video arcade shooting gallery.

That broadcast, Venardos said, was "not hype" and should blunt criticism by some, including former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, that the full-force TV presence would burden the negotiations with unrealistic expectations.

Friedman estimated that NBC, CBS and ABC all spent about $500,000 to send a small army of reporters, producers and technicians to the two-day meetings between U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, who appeared on all three networks' evening newscasts Tuesday, and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The most visible members of the contingents were the anchors: Rather, Tom Brokaw of the "NBC Nightly News," Peter Jennings of ABC's "World News Tonight," Gumbel and David Hartman and Steve Bell of ABC's "Good Morning America."

It was an unusual sight. Viewers, used to seeing their nighttime anchors in the cozy confines of New York studios, saw them buttoned up in trenchcoats and topcoats, steam coming from their mouths, as they presented their newscasts from the great outdoors.

"This is Dan Rather reporting from frigid Geneva," Rather said as he signed off Monday. It was so cold that city fathers refused to turn on a famous fountain TV news crews had hoped to use as a backdrop.

Rather, fresh from a Caribbean vacation, was buttressed against the sub-zero wind-chill readings by hot soup and, since his luggage had been lost, a freshly bought trenchcoat. Between takes, he scurried to a nearby car that had its heater going full blast.

On Monday night, Jennings, surrounded by portable propane heaters, anchored "World News Tonight" from a hotel balcony overlooking Lake Geneva. Tuesday night, the broadcast was indoors at the briefing center where Shultz had made his announcement that the two sides had agreed on more specific talks in the future.

Rather and Brokaw, as well as commentators Bill Moyers of CBS and John Chancellor of NBC, stayed outdoors.

The "Today" show never made it outside. "We sent heaters, but then they decided on the scene. We're going inside," said Friedman.

And what did the anchors uncover that the networks' European and State Department reporters wouldn't have?

Nobody could come up with anything concrete, but William Lord, vice president and executive producer of "World News Tonight," said from Geneva: "It gave us a far better sense of the story and greater flexibility."

It also gave the networks a chance to show off their high-paid anchors. "This is Peter's turf," said Lord. "This is an opportunity to reacquaint him with his roots."

Said Venardos of Rather, who also had a report on the "Morning News" Tuesday, "The staple of this business is original reporting. It was all I could do to keep him from giving everything to the 'Morning News.'"

CBS Holds Edge In Ratings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At the halfway point of the prime-time ratings season, the pecking order of CBS followed by NBC and then ABC was exactly as it's been for much of the campaign and the way one CBS analyst expects it to stay.

After 15 weeks, CBS has a commanding one-point edge over NBC, which, in turn, leads ABC by 1.2 rating points. CBS has an average 17.1 rating to NBC's 16.1 and ABC's 14.9, the lowest midway mark for ABC since the 1962-63 season.

"For NBC to overtake us, it would have to win every week by more than one point and ABC would have to do the same thing to overtake NBC," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement. "It doesn't look like that's going to happen."

The week of Dec. 31-Jan. 6 certainly didn't deviate from the norm.

CBS, helped by having football on Sunday and by not having it on Tuesday, built its highest ratings for one week and largest margin of victory this season.

According to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.,

CBS, with eight of the top 10 shows, had a season-high 19.3 rating, compared to NBC's 15.1 and ABC's 14.6.

One rating point equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes watching a network during any given minute of prime time.

Sunday's NFL championship game between Chicago and San Francisco spilled into prime time for eight minutes and became the week's top-ranked broadcast with a 32.6 rating. The 17-minute post-game show was No. 5 with a 25.0 rating.

But CBS and its movie "Victor, Victoria" also benefited from a collision of college football games on ABC and NBC the night of New Year's Day. "Victor, Victoria" became CBS' top-rated movie this season, ranking seventh for the week.

ABC's Sugar Bowl between Nebraska and LSU was the week's lowest-rated broadcast and NBC's Orange Bowl match-up between Washington and Oklahoma was No. 25. The combined ratings of the games was 24.1, down from last year's 32.3, and just slightly better than the 23.6 for "Victor, Victoria."

10. Runover of Rose Bowl Game, NBC, 22.3, 18.9 million homes
11. "The Cosby Show," NBC, 21.8, 18.5 million homes
11. "Crazy Like a Fox," CBS, 21.8, 18.5 million homes
13. "Falcon Crest," CBS, 21.5, 18.3 million homes
14. "Knots Landing," CBS, 21.4, 18.2 million homes
15. "The Fall Guy," ABC, 21.2, 18.0 million homes
15. "Family Ties," NBC, 21.2, 18.0 million homes
17. "Charlie Brown Special," CBS, 21.0, 17.8 million homes
18. "Hotel," ABC, 20.3, 17.2 million homes
18. "Webster," ABC, 20.3, 17.2 million homes
20. "Knight Rider," NBC, 18.8, 16.0 million homes

Public Gets Chance To See Council Of State Meeting

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin, after the Council of State held its first public meeting, says the council will continue to hold open meetings unless it's in the public interest to close them.

"I have felt all through my public life that it is constructive to the public to see things done," Martin said after Tuesday's meeting. He said personnel matters, legal issues and discussion of property purchases that might adversely affect the sale price would remain confidential.

At the meeting, the council approved an emergency loan to help Scotland County residents get drinking water but denied a request to help an ailing Warren County hospital.

Martin said holding meetings of the Council of State in public eliminates unbalanced stories in which a single council member gives the media his version of what went on in closed session.

Secretary of State Thad Eure said the issue of open meetings "has all just been a whole lot of talk. I don't know of a time it's been closed. There's always been various people from government at the meetings."

However, Labor Commissioner John Brooks said that was a "narrow interpretation" of open meetings.

"What he meant by that is he considers any meeting attended by someone other than a council member to be a public meeting," Brooks said.

Brooks said there was "nothing controversial" on the agenda Tuesday, but added that the council's action should show it "does not feel that it is its job to rubber stamp everything on the agenda."

"Everybody felt free to have the same kind of meeting we would normally have," he said.

The council approved after considerable discussion a $160,000 loan to Scotland County residents whose drinking water had been contaminated by gasoline leaked from an underground storage tank. State Health Director Dr. Ron Levine told the council it was "reasonable" to expect that the money could be reimbursed to the state after residents sued the party responsible for the leak.

The council also approved a two-year easement so Lancaster Stone Corp. could operate a quarry in Butler, but deferred requests by the Department of Community Colleges for $35,000 studies of how to retrain laid-off textile and tobacco industry workers. Also deferred was a request for $150,000 to extend services at Warren County Hospital in Warrenton.

Jim Bernstein, director of rural health care for the Department of Human Resources, said the hospital was losing $40,000 a month and was $200,000 in debt. Without emergency funding, he said, it would likely be closed at the end of January.

Agriculture Secretary Jim Graham, however, countered that bailing out the hospital would set a precedent for other rural hospitals that the state would not be equipped to handle.

"I don't see how we can do this and be legally comfortable," Graham said.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said there are other hospitals in North Carolina in worse shape than Warren County.

Tom King, a spokesman for the community colleges, said studies of the textile and tobacco industries would help target areas where retraining could best serve the state.

But Brooks said studies already done have shown that the biggest need among displaced textile workers is for a high school equivalent diploma — a service already provided by community colleges.

Martin Reports Spending

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin raised about $2.5 million before and after his November election, the latest campaign spending reports show, but the reports of his Democratic opponent had not reached the state Board of Elections.

The reports show Martin raised almost $400,000 after his November election.

Martin raised $396,400 and spent nearly $414,000 from Nov. 10, 1984, through December 31, 1984, according to a report filed with the North Carolina Board of Elections by campaign treasurer Larry L. Brittain.

Under campaign reporting laws, the reports were to have been mailed to the elections office by Monday. The report of former Attorney General and unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten had not reached the office Tuesday. He could not be reached for comment.

Other reports received Tuesday included those of unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidates Eddie Knox and former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Knox received $58,000 in contributions from mid-July 1984 through December 1984, borrowed $100,000 in the same period and spent almost $167,000, according to the report filed by campaign treasurer E. Graham McGoogan, Jr.

The contributions, which included a donation of $5,000 from Knox's wife Frances and a total of $10,000 from Knox, raised his total gubernatorial primary donations to about $171,000.

Donations to Knox included $4,000 from the employees' political action committees at both Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power and Light Co.

Green received $123,000 in campaign contributions from June 21, 1984, through December 1984 and spent $125,500 in the same period, according to a report filed by campaign treasurer William H. Franklin Jr. Those donations raised Green's campaign contributions for the year to about $389,000.

IN THE STATE

State Seeking Reason Papers Were Discarded

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg has asked the State Bureau of Investigation to look into the disposition of state records by former Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

"It's currently under investigation ... to see if a crime was committed," Thornburg spokesman John D. Simmons said Tuesday.

Insurance Commissioner James E. Long, who took office Saturday, said Monday that Ingram last week discarded records that filled four to five laundry carts. Ingram on Friday also transferred 45 to 50 boxes of records to the state Division of Archives and History, division director William S. Price Jr. said.

Long, who requested the SBI investigation, contends that Ingram, by removing the records and discarding copies, deprived him of the material he needs to run the department.

State law prohibits destruction of records and requires outgoing department heads to transfer records to their successors. Unlawful destruction of records is punishable by fines of $10 to $500. Failure to transfer records properly is punishable by imprisonment of up to two years or a fine of up to $1,000 or both.

Meanwhile, Price said Tuesday that state law prohibits the division from complying with Ingram's request for the division to keep for five years records transferred to archives by Ingram aides. The records are from Ingram's 12 years as commissioner.

Ingram had asked that the records, transferred Friday, not be removed from the archives division without his consent, Price said.

"As far as I'm concerned, the records are public records and whoever has custody of any public records shall, at the expiration of his term, deliver (them) to his successor or, if there be none, to the Department of Cultural Resources," Price said in an interview.

Price said he would send Ingram a letter notifying the former commissioner of his decision not to seal the records and would transfer the records to the Insurance Department if requested to do so by Long. In the meantime, Price said, division employees would start an inventory of the records.

Price said that after an initial examination by division employees the records appeared to consist mainly of official Insurance Department documents, such as correspondence, internal memos and company financial statements.

"Our cursory examination tends to indicate they are originals," Price said.

State Transition Brings More Employee Changes

By The Associated Press

The removal of state government officials continued Tuesday, with the firing of an employee whose memos about sheriffs' political loyalties caused controversy in 1980 and dismissal of the husband of a long-time employee of House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk fired Joe Barber, the director of personnel for the state Department of Human Resources and Community Development. Barber is the husband of Dottie Barber, Ramsey's administrative assistant.

The order to fire Mather Slaughter came from state Commerce Secretary Howard Haworth, according to Joe Harris, deputy press secretary for Republican Gov. Jim Martin. Ports Director William Green dismissed Slaughter, Harris said.

In 1980, while working as a liaison between the state Department of Crime Control and law enforcement officers around the state, Slaughter wrote Gov. Jim Hunt and his aides memos on the political loyalties of county sheriffs.

Ramsey, a Democrat from Madison County, criticized Barber's dismissal, but Kirk denied politics played a role in the dismissal.

"I don't even know what his politics are," Kirk said Tuesday. "I assume he was a Democrat. The Hunt administration didn't hire many Republicans."

Barber, 44, who said he would have liked to continue to work with the Martin administration, disagreed. "I consider myself a professional. I don't consider myself political, so I would say politics entered into it."

Ramsey said the firing of professional people, who were not active politically even though they were in policy-making positions, could undermine people's faith in government.

"He's not a political animal," Ramsey said of Barber. "He reluctantly accepted the job. Now, for the state to come along and release him for no reason whatsoever — I don't think that is a proper way for the state to conduct business. You can't expect people to have confidence in their government if it is going to mistreat their citizens."

Ramsey said he would reserve judgment, however, on the Martin administration's handling of state jobs until more changes had been made. "We will just have to wait a little longer and see how far they go," he said.

Kirk said he dismissed Barber as director of personnel for the 18,000-employee agency because he felt the need to bring "his own team" into the department.

Others dismissed this week by Kirk were Bryant Haskins, public information director, and Ted Parrish, assistant secretary of intergovernmental relations.

Meanwhile, officials in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development confirmed that its deputy secretary and all three assistant secretaries would be replaced.

An NRCD job created in March for a friend of Hunt's two closest assistants has been abolished, said Elaine Matthews, a department spokesman.

The job had belonged to David J. Mitchell, 53, of Oxford, who was hired March 1 and assigned to wrok out of his home.

Coin Games Lose Favor Across State

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Coin-operated vending and game machines probably are no longer a good investment for the small entrepreneur, say industry officials in North Carolina.

"Business stinks," said Wayne Lasure, sales manager for MGAC Clearing House, a Charlotte-based distributor of video games, pinball machines, pool tables and juke boxes. "The video game business was good a few years ago, but hundreds of people got in and the bottom just fell out."

Vending machines used to be a good moneymaker for the investor with a few machines, "but it's gotten so expensive and the capital requirements have made it a little more restrictive," said Barbara Short, executive secretary for the Durham-based North Carolina Vending Association Inc.

Ms. Short said the association has about 40 members that represent more than 90 percent of the volume in vending sales across the state. They own about 125,000 machines selling food or beverages, she said.

Another association, the North Carolina Coin Operators Association, represents owners of game machines and other machines that don't dispense a product. Association secretary and past president Bobby Earp said most of the small entrepreneurs have dropped out of the business.

"We're finding that our membership of those type of people declined drastically in the last three years," he said. "They found it was harder to make money at the games than it first appeared to be."

He and Lasure agreed that young people seem to be paying less attention to the glut of machines that are still available.

Lasure said he thinks the best type of person to invest in coin-operated games now would be an older operator who had slowed down but who had a lot of pinball machines from earlier years. This person could put the machines back in operation with little further investment.

Pool and Foosball games have remained steady, if not big, moneymakers, and pinball games may be making a slow comeback, he said. Pinball machines can be bought for a few hundred dollars, compared to $4,000 for some types of video games.

Ms. Short said vending machines are also becoming more expensive and complicated, while fewer small entrepreneurs are willing to take the risks involved with perishable products, account turnover, vandalism and theft.

"The trend has been away from the small, family-owned business to the larger company serving a wide geographical area because of the usual economies of scale," she said.

She said machines today not only provide the usual cheese sandwich, but also breakfast, health foods, salad, ethnic foods, coffee brewed from grounds and purified water.

Legislator Will Resign

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Rep. Charles H. Hughes has ended confusion about whether he would give up his House seat to accept a job with the administration of Republican Gov. Jim Martin by placing his resignation letter in the mail.

He also said his wife, Suzie, has decided to become a candidate to replace him in the General Assembly.

Hughes said Tuesday he had mailed his resignation to the Henderson County Board of Elections, to Vince Colan, chairman of the Henderson County Republican Party, and to House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey.

Hughes, a Republican who is resigning to become research director for Martin, said the resignation will be effective Jan. 15.

Asked what the letter said, Hughes replied: "Exactly what I said it would say. That I am resigning the House seat."

Hughes said his wife had decided to ask Henderson County Republicans to nominate her as his replacement to the two-year term he won last November.

"As far as I am concerned, she is the only candidate for the job," Hughes said. "If the people want representation as I would have represented them as they voted for in November, then Suzie Hughes is the only person who can give them that type of representation. That's a guarantee."

"If the board wants to listen to the mandate of the people, they will nominate Suzie Hughes. If they don't want to listen to the people of Henderson County then they won't nominate Suzie Hughes. It's about as plain and simple as that."

Hughes represented the 50th House District, a single-county district made up of most of Henderson County. He just won re-election in November to a third term and served as minority whip in the last General Assembly session.

Prosecutor Discounts Confession

By ERICA JOHNSTON
 Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A federal prosecutor says the latest confession to the murders of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's wife and children comes from a schizophrenic whose testimony doesn't match the crime scene, but defense attorneys say they will seek a new trial for their client.

Defense attorneys presented what they call new evidence of MacDonald's innocence at a hearing in September, and another hearing is scheduled Monday in Raleigh.

Defense attorney Brian O'Neill said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles he will argue next Monday for dismissal of the original indictment and seek a new trial for MacDonald.

The former Green Beret captain is serving three life sentences at a federal prison in Texas after being convicted of the murders in 1979. He has maintained his innocence since his wife and two daughters were murdered at their Fort Bragg apartment in 1970.

MacDonald says a group of drug-crazed hippies broke into his apartment on Feb. 17, 1970, and murdered his family, writing the word "pig" in blood at the head of the MacDonalds' bed.

Killed were MacDonald's pregnant wife, Colette, 26, and his daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2.

Federal prosecutor Brian Murtagh says the new confession shows "off-the-wall" confessions come out of the woodwork in celebrated trials.

The latest to confess to the murders is Cathy Perry Williams, who said she was a friend of Helena Stoeckley Davis, who also confessed to the crime. Ms. Davis died in 1983.

Ms. Williams confessed to an FBI agent in November 1984 in Florida. According to Murtagh, she filed a statement saying she was with a group of people who broke down the front door to the MacDonalds' apartment, injected a male on a downstairs sofa with a drug, then climbed to the apartment's second story and beat two boys, putting one body in a closet and another in a bathroom.

Ms. Williams did not include any names in her confessions and did not give the FBI agent the location of her confessed crime, said Murtagh, who has been involved with the case for about 13 years.

"But there weren't any male victims, and no bodies were found in a closet or a bathroom. The front door had not been broken in, and the apartment was a one-story residence," Murtagh said.

Ms. Williams is a diagnosed schizophrenic who takes the drug thiorazine for her illness, Murtagh said.

"Confessions to celebrated crimes are a fact of life," Murtagh said. "What you look at is the objective facts that aren't in dispute, and they don't fit (Ms. Williams' confession). And besides ... Stoeckley said in a tape-recorded interview that she was the only woman (at the murder) that night."

"The sheer number of confessions demonstrates the fact that these things are the product of hallucinations or attention seekers," Murtagh said, adding that at least six people have confessed the crime to federal investigators. He said the defense hasn't entered the other three confessions as evidence because "they didn't fit their story."

"It makes great press to say that we have three confessions, but what the defense doesn't have is three confessions that are consistent with each other, or explain the evidence (MacDonald) was convicted on," Murtagh said.

Whiteville Man Draws Sentence

WILMINGTON (AP) — Roscoe Forest Hall III of Whiteville, a defendant in the FBI's 1982 COLCOR probe of corruption, has been sentenced to two years in prison for making false statements to a federal grand jury.

Hall, 41, was sentenced Friday in U.S. District Court by Judge James C. Fox. He was convicted Nov. 13, 1984.

He had been one of 22 people indicted by a federal grand jury in July 1982 as federal agents unveiled a 21-month undercover probe of corruption that they dubbed COLCOR, an acronym for Columbus County corruption.

The probe ended with indictments against dozens of people on charges of bribery, racketeering, drug possession and counterfeiting.

Hall was sentenced to prison after pleading guilty to conspiracy charges involving possession of stolen goods and distribution of hashish. The drug plea stemmed from his reported participation in the 1982 sale of hashish to undercover FBI agents at a hotel parking lot in Raleigh.

The perjury charges were brought against him in August 1984 after he was called before a grand jury trying to learn his source of the drugs.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — HAM RADIO ENTHUSIAST COMMONLY STUDIED FREQUENCIES FREQUENTLY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals G

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 10, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is the best time for you to get into all the specific courses of action that you need to attend to, for the afternoon and evening find problems arising.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Early schedule your work load, and then carry through with it without deviating. Find some new method for increasing your vitality.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find new ways of getting your talents working more efficiently, but later be more economical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early get some important matter handled at home and later show poise in handling other work in the outside world.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Communicate with others early and be certain your manner with partners is gentle and kind. Much care must be exercised in driving or walking.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early handling of financial affairs is wise and later do not take on any more obligations than you can handle easily.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get started on your personal plans very early since later conditions are apt to be difficult. Postpone appointments until later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan the day wisely and carry through though you may encounter distractions later. Handle the tasks that will give you more free time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look to a good friend for the assistance you need in the morning since you find acquaintances are not reliable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get outside tasks handled in the morning, and don't get upset later if a higher-up upbraids you without cause.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You get an idea early but later see the flaws in it, so put it aside for awhile and pick it up another day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to please your mate in the morning, and then handle your duties efficiently and conscientiously.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Have long talks with a partner so that the relationship is upgraded and greater benefits are possible in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a fine personality and quick mind and will sparkle at studies in school, and should have a fine education; that can be the biggest asset during the lifetime. Your goal-minded progeny will pick the right path and stay on it until the dreams become a reality.

Pay Cuts

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — Pay cuts agreed to by 8,000 Western Union Corp. employees in two unions will save the communications company $10 million over six months, officials said.

The 10 percent pay cuts extend to July 28, when the current three-year contract expires for technicians, operators and other workers, said Jerry Grim, United Telegraph Workers secretary-treasurer. Warren Bechtel, company spokesman, said 6,000 salaried employees also have agreed to a six-month, 10 percent pay cut.

Western Union lost $59.1 million on revenues of $1 billion last year.

Health Care Changes Could Produce Speciality Hospitals

By The Associated Press

Changes in health care will force big hospitals to specialize and offer mainly two kinds of services by the year 2000: major emergencies and such sophisticated surgery as organ transplants and artificial organ treatments, a health historian and planner says.

Douglas Henderson-James of Duke University Medical Center predicts that advances in monoclonal antibody research will allow companies to market inexpensive home test kits for common cancers. Monoclonal antibodies are materials that can be engineered in the laboratory to detect virtually any substance or cell type in the human body.

"What these companies are working on is a method of bypassing the hospital and the doctor," he said. "They want to duplicate ... what they have done with (home) pregnancy testing."

"Once you identify cancer early in its stage, treatment is much less radical than it is later. 'Much less radical' translates into less hospitalization, translates into fewer admissions, translates into less dollars for the hospital."

The hub of the hospital system will be ambulatory health care centers, where patients will receive more routine treatment and quick-discharge kinds of surgery, Henderson-James said. The centers can handle small emergencies and stabilize major trauma victims like those who have been involved in serious accidents, before the patients are sent to major hospitals.

Tied to those centers will be other services, such as care for the elderly and the terminally ill.

Smaller hospitals will have been converted into such centers by the year 2000, Henderson-James said, or they will have gone out of business. Physicians will become "technicians" who are no longer paid on a fee-for-service basis.

"Much of developments are going to take people out of the hospital," Henderson-James said. "Small hospitals are going to have to change the services they offer their community to keep physicians in the community."

In a talk last year to the Carolinas Hospital Public Relations Society, Henderson-James said: "Physicians basically are going to lose control of the health care system that they've had for the last 100 years. They're going to become in essence technicians.

"They're going to hate it," he told the society. Doctors' roles will change because many will become essentially hired employees, Henderson-James said. He said the people who pay doctors' salaries may be able to dictate how they practice medicine, including how they treat some health problems.

Henderson-James also said he expects the push for cost controls will continue, with the health care of publicly funded patients managed under prepaid contracts with health maintenance organizations.

Health maintenance organizations hire doctors who are paid straight salaries for treating members over a period of time. That contrasts with fee-for-service arrangements, in which physicians bill separately for each consultation and each treatment.

Henderson-James said financing of most future health care would be "predominantly prepaid, whether it be HMO, government or whatnot. It won't be fee for service."

"This is one man's opinion," Jack W. Richardson, Pitt County Memorial Hospital director, said of Henderson-James predictions. "I don't set much store by crystal ball gazing, because medical and administrative expertise change so fast that no one can possibly know what will have transpired by the year 2000."

Richardson said he does believe that the major medical centers like Pitt County Memorial will be involved in caring for person involved in major emergencies and will be perhaps daily doing sophisticated surgery like transplants by 2000. Pitt is already doing kidney and corneal transplants and will probably be adding liver, pancreas and possibly heart transplants in the next few years, he said.

He said he, like everyone else, is hopeful that cancer can become more readily diagnosed so treatment can be less radical as Henderson-James suggests. "Whatever is needed to care for people in this community with the latest scientific procedure is what we'll do," he said. "I think more and more we'll be networking with the hospitals and other medical providers throughout the region to provide the best care possible for everyone."

He agreed with Henderson-James that health maintenance organizations and other prepaid plans for health protection and care will come to the forefront in the years before the end of the century and that ambulatory services for simple surgery will become more and more prevalent. He said about 20 percent of Pitt's surgery used to be ambulatory. Now, since the establishment of a privately owned ambulatory surgery provider in town, about 12 percent is. He estimated that perhaps 30 to 40 percent community-wide and nationwide may already be ambulatory. "More and more, he said, "Pitt will be doing the

Isolation Of Antarctic Village Unsettles Chilean Adventurers

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

Associated Press Writer
VILLA LAS ESTRELLAS, Antarctica (AP) — In search of adventure, Ana Maria Martino de Camacho gave up her nursing job, two servants and a spacious suburban home.

Next, she took a snow survival course in the Andes and moved her family to Antarctica to reinforce Chile's claims to a portion of the continent.

As the Camachos and five other air force families approached their new base on King George Island last March, a snowstorm turned their transport plane back to South America. The colony's delayed start seemed an omen that hostile climate would rule its existence.

But today, after a surprisingly mild first winter (low temperature: 1 above zero), the city-bred volunteers say they feel less unsettled by the cold than by the isolation and awkwardness of communal frontier life in this cluster of pre-fab houses called Village of the Stars.

To a recent visitor, Mrs. Camacho, 34, an ebullient, dark-haired woman, told how the village's beauty and silence had provided the peace she needed to carry her third child, a son born Nov. 21, Chile's first native Antarctic. She also spoke of a new closeness with her husband and two older sons.

Then she totaled up the price of escape from Santiago, Chile's smoggy, agitated capital: She misses fresh meat. Her children long for old playmates. The extended family so important to Chileans is broken up, since grandparents are left behind. Although she is surrounded by ice, water must be chemically treated and tightly rationed.

Mail and fresh produce are supposed to arrive monthly, but sometimes the vegetables freeze between the air strip and the oil-heated storehouse. Once all the eggs came broken. During two dark winter months the plane didn't come at all.

The discontent, at times, is too much for the little colony to contain. Raised voices are heard by everyone. The bickering can defy military discipline. Mrs. Camacho said, so some families simply avoid speaking to each other.

"The Chilean woman can adapt to anything," Mrs. Camacho said over tea in her small but comfortable white home on stilts, with tiny orange-framed windows and freezer doors. "But if they told me I could leave now, I would go back tomorrow to what I had."

Her sentiment is shared by other settlers, but the colony endures. When the original six families end their two-year assignments, air force officials say, 20 more will be taking a turn here. The newcomers will have a new supermarket, a gym and two professional teachers for the one-room schoolhouse.

Under a 1961 treaty, which set the southern continent aside for peaceful purposes, Antarctic claims by seven nations were suspended for at least 30 years. Today 16 countries have year-round scientific stations in Antarctica, whose 6 million square miles of land form 10.3 percent of the world's land area. Europe, by contrast, occupies 3.3 percent of the global land area.

But only Chile and Argentina, whose wedge-shaped claims overlap, are using families with children to enhance those claims if the treaty ever expires.

"We are going to show we can maintain a village with a life practically like any that exists on the continent," said Hernan Huidobro, the air force colonel who runs the colonization campaign from Defense Ministry headquarters in Santiago.

So far, however, Chile's settlement, like a similar one maintained by up to eight Argentine families on the nearby Antarctic Peninsula since 1977, has failed to break an important psychological barrier.

After 90 years of near-continuous exploration, Antarctica remains a remote white expanse where people go not to stay but only to visit, huddled in tiny clusters for a year or two at most, surviving on the knowledge they will return to a hospitable part of the world.

In interviews, the settlers talk about "the real world" back in Chile, where a third of the population lives in the capital. Some worry their children will fall behind in the highly competitive school system or be frightened by the city if they stay away too long. The gold-rush incentive that pushed America's frontier into similar latitudes of Alaska, they note, is absent here.

"I cannot see large numbers of people ever wanting to live here permanently," said Dr. German Camacho, an air force surgeon who volunteered for Antarctic duty out of a sense of patriotism. "It still sounds like science fiction to me."

Meanwhile, the innocent pawns of Chilean sovereignty, eight children aged 2 months to 8 years, wear bright-colored clothing so their mothers don't lose sight of them through the tiny windows. The older ones romp tirelessly in the snow. In the southern summer of near-continuous sunlight, it is hard to get them to sleep.

Pardons

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — President Gaafar Nimeiri has pardoned all 209 defendants charged last fall with plotting to overthrow the government, the Sudanese news agency reports. Chief defendant Phillip Abbas Gaboush and the others had appealed to Nimeiri for pardons.

Singles Seek More Family Planning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Single women make greater use of family planning services than married women because they are more likely to take birth control pills, which require regular medical checkups, a new study says.

"The primary reason (for differing use of family planning services) is the contraceptive methods that they use," explained William D. Mosher of the government's National Center for Health Statistics.

Younger, single women are more likely to use birth control pills, which require regular checkups to renew the prescription and to check for side effects, Mosher said Monday.

The most common birth control method among wives and previously married women is sterilization, which requires fewer follow-up visits to doctors, he said.

The center's new report on the use of family planning services showed that in 1982, the most recent statistics available, women aged 15 to 44 who were sexually active averaged 1,077 visits to family planning services for every 1,000 women.

Silent Pair Find Joy In Toy Trains

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP) — They have never heard the songs of birds, the tone of each other's voice, or the mournful wail of a distant train whistle.

Yet, within minutes of meeting Elam R. and Nita Maude Sprengle, one becomes envious of the senses the couple put to a far greater use than those who are "blessed" with all five.

Nita was born deaf. Elam had eight months of hearing, which he does not remember. He contracted whooping cough when he was 8 months old. His has been a world of silence for 67 years.

Silence is where the Sprengles' shortcomings end.

The couple has been married for 42 years, have two sons, and enjoy a closer companionship than many.

Elam, who retired five years ago from Landis Tool Co., was a pattern maker. "The best pattern maker the tool company ever had, and self-taught, too," said a former co-worker.

It was while he was employed at the local firm that his interest in trains grew to an obsession. He walked the railroad tracks to and from work every day, observing engines shifting carloads of raw material and finished products to and from the plant.

Twenty-nine years ago he bought his first scale model locomotive from a Reading man — a locomotive that needed total overhaul. He finished that chore then began from scratch, with drawings and schematics of an actual train engine.

Twenty-eight years later, he finished it.

It is the fruit of an estimated 4,000 hours of work — a couple of hours a night after work, and as many as five hours on Saturdays.

It now chugs, exactly like its larger counterpart, on Elam's 200 feet of handmade track in his back yard. It is an exact 1-inch to 1-foot scale model of a 1928 model 4-4-2 Atlantic engine — the kind he watched for so many years.

Complete with tender, the engine measures approximately 5 feet and weighs in excess of 300 pounds.

Just as its big brother, it generates steam power by burning hard coal to convert the water fed from the tender.

And every ounce of the remarkable machine was handmade from raw material in Elam's basement, finished to tolerances of thousandths of an inch.

"I finished it completely last year," Elam said. "When I was still working, it seems that I could never get it finished. I took retirement five years ago, and finally got it done."

The intricacies of the minute pieces that make up the whole are mind-boggling. Elam never counted all the rivets on the tender, but he estimates that there are between 1,500 and 1,800, lovingly and expertly placed, one at a time.

Just getting up the necessary 80 to 100 pounds of steam pressure in the engine takes up to an hour of hand-firing the boiler. Yet it is so mechanically perfect that he can't "let it out" when he drives it around his back-yard elevated track — not even with two adults sitting on a flatbed car he also made from raw materials.

"He always had trains on his mind," Nita recalled. "Ever since I first met him. Why, even on our honeymoon, we took a train to Miami — a Pullman."

Now that his lifetime dream of building a locomotive is accomplished, what comes next?

"I'm working on another locomotive, a 3/4-inch to 1-foot scale. It won't take as long this time," he said.

He plans to give the first locomotive to son Ray, and the second to son David.

"If they don't want them, then I'll give them to a museum," he said.

And then, "I have blueprints for a boat. That will be next."

Price Is Right So Neighborhood Decides To Sell

ATLANTA (AP) — Tantalized by the prospect of making tens of thousands of dollars each on their houses in a tree-lined suburban subdivision, an entire neighborhood of 144 people has agreed to sell out to commercial developers.

Some, like Troy and Celia Strange, have spent much of their lives in the neighborhood. The Stranges bought their house three decades ago for $21,000, and now they're getting $225,000 for it — and not because of their meticulously kept azalea garden.

The Stranges and their neighbors in north DeKalb County are selling their combined 85 acres to two development firms, Albritton Development of Dallas and Cadillac Fairview.

Gary Arnold, a partner in the Albritton, said that when the company initially tried to buy a nearby patch of land two years ago, executives were frustrated by trying to negotiate sales with a disorganized group of neighbors.

"Each one had to sign individually," he said. "There was serious work that had to be done to satisfy everybody."

Albritton then turned toward a larger neighborhood — where the Stranges live — and called upon Cadillac Fairview as a joint venture partner. And some homeowners, enticed by the proposal, began to organize their neighbors.

"In July 1983 we put fliers in everyone's mailbox, trying to gauge interest people had in the proposal," said homeowner Randy Campbell. "We got an overwhelming response."

Nine people were elected to form a nonprofit corporation for the sale, and a three-member subcommittee handled negotiations. For Campbell, it meant months of telephone calls and meetings to help bring about the deal.

But he says the long effort, and his family's relocation, will be worth it. "I'm 32 years old and I'm married and I have two children," he explained. "My family doesn't have wealth or anything. I make my car payments. I make my mortgage payments, and I've got sleepless nights worrying about how I'm going to pay my bills just like everybody else."

Much of the discussion was over how much money the residents could get. Negotiations started at more than $300,000 per house, but the developers eventually whittled that down to $225,000. Houses in the neighborhood are currently appraised at $70,000 to $160,000.

Arnold credited the neighbors' organization for bringing the mammoth deal to fruition.

"I'm convinced that we would not have had the time or the patience to do what has been done if they were acting individually," he said.

The bulk-rate deal now hinges on rezoning by the DeKalb County Commission to clear the way for the developers' commercial projects. Arnold said a few houses may be moved to another subdivision, some may be used for parts in low-income housing and others may be razed.

Prime Pets

President and Mrs. Reagan recently received this black sheep dog, named Lucky. Presidential pets have often fascinated the public. Lyndon Johnson enraged many people when he picked up his pet beagles, Him and Her, by their ears. William Howard Taft's cow, Pauline, often munched on the White House lawn, as did Zachary Taylor's horse, Whitey. William McKinley's parrot could whistle "Yankee Doodle," if the President prompted him.

The bidding:

3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♣.

We have often preached that, on defense, you should not play cards at random. It is essential that every card you play carry a message for partner to decipher. Consider this hand from the recent World Team Olympiad in Seattle.

Because of his minimum balanced hand, South decided to suppress his four-card spade suit in favor of rebidding one no trump. North made one more try for a suit contract, but accepted his partner's decision to play three no trump.

Sitting East-West were the two top-ranked American players in the world, Bob Wolff and Bob Hamman. Wolff led his fourth-best spade and Hamman could see that declarer had concealed his four-card spade holding. A lesser defender might have gone up with the king of spades and returned the jack. Declarer would cover and West would not know how to defend.

Hamman could see that, if his partner held the ace of spades, he could not have an outside entry as well. So, to maintain communications, he played the jack of spades at trick one.

Declarer won the queen, but he could not come to nine tricks without either trying the club finesse or tackling hearts. No matter which he tried, Hamman would win, cash the king of spades and continue with the suit to allow his partner to take three more spade tricks.

What if declarer held up the queen of spades on the first trick? As the cards lie, East would continue with the eight of spades at trick two. West should read that as a suit preference signal for clubs, since East is marked with a spade honor. So West can win the ace of spades and shift to a club, and the defenders must come to five tricks — three spades, a club and the ace of hearts.

Smoking Ban

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An anticipated increase in ridership and empty seats on smoking cars helped lead to a smoking ban on Philadelphia commuter trains effective Jan. 20, officials said.

The ban could open up "a couple of thousand" seats on the rail system and enable cars on little-used lines to be moved to where they're needed most. Dave Murdock, spokesman for the Southeast Pennsylvania Transportation Authority, said in announcing the ban.

SEPTA expects its daily ridership of 80,000 to expand to 90,000 by June because of an upcoming expressway reconstruction project and increased interest in service improvements.

Innocent Plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Northrop Corp. engineer accused of trying to sell secrets about the stealth bomber worth billions of dollars to the Soviet Union has pleaded innocent.

Thomas Cavanagh, 40, entered his plea before U.S. Magistrate Ralph Geffen, who continued the case for scheduling a trial date.

Cavanagh is charged with three counts of trying to deliver defense information to aid a foreign government and one of possessing a machine gun. An indictment accused him of taking manuals and other material without authority from Northrop's Advanced Systems Division. None of the material reached the Soviets, the FBI said.

Smuggling

CHICAGO (AP) — The leader of nine people who pleaded guilty to smuggling 80 to 90 Yugoslavians into this country received up to $1,500 from each alien, authorities said.

Oloman Selmani, 53, of Morris, who authorities say was the ring-leader, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to one count of conspiracy to smuggle aliens into the United States and one of transporting aliens into the country. Eight people pleaded guilty to misdemeanor conspiracy counts.

First College for Dyslexics To Open Next Fall

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

At a time when many small colleges are struggling to stay alive, Charles Drake plans to open a new one, Landmark College. It will cost students $17,000, more than Harvard or M.I.T. — and only dyslexics need apply.

When it opens in September, Landmark will be the nation's only college exclusively for youngsters with this learning disorder. It will occupy the now-vacant Putney, Vt., campus of Windham College, which went bankrupt seven years ago.

To start, Landmark will be an associate degree-granting two-year school offering a core curriculum built around English courses and computer literacy. Drake hopes the college will grow into a full-fledged, four-year liberal arts institution with about 500 students.

If that sounds like a challenge, Drake, himself a dyslexic, likes to reply to skeptics that "dyslexics often excel in problem-solving skills, since they must work so hard to solve the problem of their learning disorder."

Dyslexia, an affliction shared by the likes of Nelson Rockefeller, Thomas Edison and Hans Christian Andersen, is a neurological disorder that makes language skills, especially reading and writing, exceedingly difficult to master. The brain makes printed words or numbers appear scrambled. Taking lecture notes, reading a book or writing a term paper can be an exhausting struggle.

Dyslexia is so frustrating because it ties a normal or even superior intellect to the baffling inability to express itself on paper.

A typical case is 19-year-old Nikki, a youngster of normal intelligence from an affluent, educated family in a Philadelphia suburb. Her mother, who spoke on condition that her daughter's last name not be used, said Nikki from her earliest years was slow to speak and physically clumsy.

"By the time she got to second grade, she simply couldn't keep up. She showed the first signs of emotional maladjustment. She didn't want to go to school. She feigned illness," her mother said.

"Nikki didn't have many friends because the normal child rejects the learning disabled," she said.

Through ninth grade, Nikki attended a succession of public and private schools. At a public high school, she was thrown into classes with emotionally disturbed youngsters and assigned courses like jewelry making just to "pass her through" to a meaningless graduation.

Two years ago, Nikki's parents enrolled her in the Landmark School, a forerunner of the college, which Drake opened 13 years ago in a 35-room seaside mansion at Prides Crossing, Mass., north of Boston. Some 2,000 younger dyslexics have attended the school.

Nikki's parents were so pleased with her progress they now want her to attend the college this fall. They are considering other, less expensive schools with well-regarded programs for the learning disabled, but they prefer Landmark, despite the cost.

"Cost is a factor, but you just scrape together every penny you have," her mother said. "If your child needed a heart transplant, you'd do it. This is no different."

Many dyslexics like Nikki have normal or above normal intelligence and could succeed in school and careers, given the right help.

A decade ago, few campuses offered programs for learning disabled students. Now an estimated 700 to 800 schools have them, said K.C. Hegener, an editor of Peterson's Guides Inc. of Princeton, N.J., a private publisher that is compiling a guide to those programs.

Learning experts attribute the increase to better understanding of dyslexia and to federal laws passed in the 1970s that opened the way to equal educational opportunities for the handicapped.

But the quality and depth of those college programs varies greatly. Only a relative few are considered outstanding.

Curry College in Milton, Mass., was one of the first to start a special program for dyslexics in the late 1960s. Now, said Gertrude Webb, who has run the program since its start, one-tenth of the school's 1,200-student population are learning disabled.

Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill., the University of Wisconsin in Oshkosh, Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., and Mount Ida College in Newton Centre, Mass., are other schools noted for expertise in teaching dyslexics.

But Drake and James Olivier, who will be president of Landmark, said their school would differ fundamentally.

First, it will offer an extraordinary amount of individual attention. There will be one staff member for every three students, the chief reason for the exceptionally high tuition.

The close, constant student-teacher contact will ensure a rather spartan academic and social life, Drake said. Anyone caught goofing off, drinking or using drugs won't last at Landmark.

"Anybody who comes here should expect to work harder than they ever have. We're looking for emotionally sound, motivated dyslexics who really want and would value a college education," said Drake.

Many universities, Southern Illinois for example, provide dyslexic students with ways to "get around" their handicap. Common services include student scribes to take notes at lectures and help write term papers, tape recorded books and oral exams with no time limit.

There'll be no such methods at Landmark, said Olivier. The school will start from scratch with students — drilling them in the alphabet if necessary — to make sure they have the language skills to perform genuine college-level work.

"What we will do is ensure students get the language skills they need to succeed in college and professionally. We think it's a waste without those basic skills," he said.

Landmark's teachers and counselors will be trained to watch students carefully for what Drake calls "reality shock."

"At around three weeks to three months into our program, students often learn for the first time that they can achieve with hard work. They leave their safe harbor of excuses and failure. There can be a period of depression," said Drake.

But Landmark also raises questions for educators, parents and children. First, the $17,000 pricetag virtually shuts the door on poorer pupils, until and unless the school attracts enough contributions from outside sources to build an endowment and start granting scholarships.

"It's a problem we're keenly aware of, and we're working on," said Olivier. Second, Landmark resurrects the debate on whether disabled children are better off in a special school or in a school with normal students.

The answer often depends on the youngsters. Some fear they can get lost in a regular college, but others may feel stigmatized by going to a "school for the handicapped" and prefer to take their chances on an ordinary campus.

On one side of the debate is Curry College, where Ms. Webb said: "I just feel very strongly that our goals are related to those in general society. Our program favors very heavily not labeling and not segregating."

But for Nikki and her parents, Landmark seems to be the preferable environment. "The kindness, the knowledge, the whole philosophy of the school is something I'd never run into anywhere else," said her mother.

Israeli Town Is New Melting Pot

By JONATHAN IMMANUEL
Associated Press Writer

NAHARIYA, Israel (AP) — On the west side of the railroad tracks ponies pull honeymooners in jingling carriages along a boulevard strung with fairy-lights. On the east side, cart horses pull wagons loaded with vegetables and old household goods.

These are remnants of a cultural division that once made living on the wrong side of the tracks in Nahariya more than a figure of speech.

The tracks now mark a slowly crumbling border between prosperous German-speaking Jews and their poorer co-religionists from Arab countries and southeastern Europe, turning Nahariya into an Israeli melting pot.

The children of the original settlers see themselves more as Israelis than as Germans, Moroccans or Romanians.

The highly trained doctors and lawyers who fled Nazi Germany 50 years ago established Nahariya as a tidy German-speaking home away from home where they could retain their identity among a sea of Arabs and less well-educated East European Jews.

Just four miles from the Lebanese border, Nahariya soon became a thriving and self-sufficient seaside town of farms and factories. Every cottage had its own garden. Every road was straight and paved with asphalt.

Nahariya attracted honeymooners nostalgic for a slice of Old World civility. Tel Aviv then was a small dusty town populated by Polish and Russian Jews 130 miles down the railroad line.

But after World War II and Israeli independence in 1948, Moroccans, Yemenites, Iraqis, Tunisians, Romanians and Bulgarians streamed to the town where work was plentiful.

The mainly Sephardic Middle Eastern Jews felt out of place in a town of German-speaking Jews, and believed they were intentionally being crowded into new housing on the other side of the tracks so they would not undermine the German character of the town.

"There is a feeling that the railroad marked a kind of social border," said Galia Marciano, a tool engineer of Moroccan origin, who lives in a recently restored house in Givat Katzenelson, the poorest suburb of Nahariya.

"The German immigrants considered us gypsies," said Romanian immigrant Avraham Cohen, a furniture store owner in Givat Katzenelson.

The suburb, which is five minutes walk from the town, has roads that go in circles or often lead to dead ends.

Its cottages are usually too small for the large families who live in them, and the neighborhood's dingy shops contrast with the tidy coffee houses in the rest of Nahariya.

Givat Katzenelson's 2,000 residents have 12 small synagogues that serve as ethnic-based social centers as well as places of worship.

While religious observance is less widespread than it was, ethnic roots run deep. Jews of Tunisian and Libyan origin attend different synagogues only 10 feet apart in a narrow alley.

The rest of Nahariya, with 25,000 residents, has the same number of synagogues.

Thirty years of living side-by-side has smoothed many of the physical differences. Inside the houses the furniture and the children look simply Israeli.

But bookshelves point to different cultural roots. In the home of teachers Victor and Pnina Shoshan, an Iraqi-Romanian couple in Givat Katzenelson, volumes of religious tracts fill the bookshelves.

Yaacov Droni, a German-speaking Pole who came to Israel in 1946, has shelves lined with German novels and scientific works.

But his most valued book is one the secular-minded university lecturer never reads — a small German-language Jewish prayer book dedicated to Kaiser Wilhelm II, Germany's last monarch who was deposed after World War I.

Other material and cultural differences between the communities also have steadily eroded. Today, Givat Katzenelson's residents complain of inferior municipal services but "this is now more due to inefficiency than discrimination," said Yitzhak Aloush, a member of district's housing committee.

Almost all of the 2,000 original German immigrants have left town or died. Nahariya's present mayor is Romanian-born and four of the eight members of the town council are of Middle Eastern origin. Maimouna, a Sephardic spring festival, is a municipal holiday.

The children of the German-speakers and the Arabic-speakers all converse in Hebrew. Because housing in Givat Katzenelson costs less than in most of Nahariya, many European Jews have moved into the area, now considered "bohemian."

Thanks in part to easy loans arranged by the populist Likud government of former Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Katzenelson residents have become more prosperous. Many have built houses that dwarf those across the tracks.

But the mounds of rubble around newly built houses testify that a sense of community spirit has lagged behind growing private prosperity.

Virgin Islands Decry Proposed Development Of Oasis

By MARGARET ENOS
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE AMALIE, St. Thomas (AP) — A proposed $40 million development at an unspoiled oasis on this heavily developed Virgin Islands tourist haven has raised unprecedented public outcry.

The U.S. Virgin Islands Senate that takes office Jan. 14 will consider the proposed repeal of the rezoning in 1983 of pristine Magens Bay with the knowledge that the issue was considered the major reason for the defeat of seven of 12 incumbents who sought re-election.

In one of its last acts before the Nov. 6 elections, the U.S. territory's unicameral legislature of 15 senators approved without debate the rezoning of 166 acres of beachfront land to allow a resort complex next to the public beach. The land is owned by heirs of New York financier Arthur S. Fairchild, who donated the mile-long Magens Bay beach to the people of the Virgin Islands in 1947.

The Magens Bay project was among several development plans approved by the Senate in 1983, but generated the most controversy because it was approved without hearings and because it affects the north-shore beach, a favorite of many local residents. The horseshoe-shaped bay is a stretch of clear sea, white sand and tropical foliage that locals call the "People's Beach" on an island dotted with condominium developments and six-figure houses owned by mainlanders, or "continentals" as they're called here.

The issue escalated in the final weeks of the election campaign and resulted in the unusual strong anti-incumbent vote.

Despite the election results, as well as criticism from the local news media and a petition drive by the League of Women Voters that garnered 3,147 signatures for the repeal of the Magens Bay rezoning,

Superior Court

Judge David E. Reid disposed of the following cases during the Nov. 26, 1984, term of superior court in Pitt County.

Robert A. Flake, Cotanche Street, worthless check (3 counts), called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Johnnie Ray Dupree, Falkland, appeal from revocation of suspended sentence, called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Ronnie Beamon, Vanceboro, worthless check (8 counts), called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Paul Connor Jr., Ayden, driving while impaired, 90 days jail suspended 2 years on payment of fine and costs, surrender operator's license, perform 48 hours community service and pay fee, attend alcohol school and pay fee, 2 years unsupervised probation.

Kosta Gus Maurakis, Winston Salem, breaking and entering (3 counts), 8 years jail, pay restitution.

Ralph Edward Bable, Walstonburg, possession of cocaine, 20 months jail suspended 3 years on payment of fine, costs and probation supervision fee, 3 years probation.

Melvin Rudolph Smith, Washington, assault on a female, called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Lewis Taft Glenn, Pennsylvania, take indecent liberties with a minor, 2 years jail suspended 5 years on payment of fine, costs and probation supervision fee, spend 30 weekends in jail, 5 years probation.

Garry Thomas Pegram, Raleigh, corporate malfeasance, 3 years jail suspended 3 years on payment of restitution, costs and probation supervision fee, perform 320 hours community service and pay fee, disbarment, 3 years probation.

Willie Louis Wilson, Lakeview Terrace, sale of heroin, sale of cocaine, 42 months jail.

Hubert Lee Arthur, Norcott Circle, sell and deliver counterfeit controlled substances, 2 years jail.

Miguel Antonio Soto Perez, West Third Street, sale of cocaine (2 counts), prayer for judgment continued until Jan. 7, 1985.

Michael Cogdell, Hookerton, maintain vehicle for purposes of transporting marijuana, 18 months jail suspended on payment of fine, costs and probation supervision fee, 3 years probation.

Clyde P. Owens, Greenville Boulevard, attempt to evade sales tax (3 counts), attempt to evade income tax (2 counts), 30 months jail suspended 5 years on payment of restitution, costs, fine and probation supervision fee, spend 5 weekends in jail, 5 years probation.

James Richard Johnson Jr., Florida, possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine, 5 years jail, pay $15,000 fine.

Robert Taylor, Arthur Street, damage to personal property, called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Willie James Barrett, Farmville, larceny, called and failed, bond forfeiture.

Donald Gay Taylor, South Greene Street, possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin and sale of heroin, jury verdict — guilty, 5 years jail; possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin and sale, 5 years jail.

William Jason Wood Jr., LaGrange, driving while impaired, jury verdict — guilty, 60 days jail suspended 2 years on payment of fine and costs, surrender operator's license, perform 24 hours community service and pay fee, attend alcohol school and pay fee, 2 years unsupervised probation.

Dana Frederick Haddock, Vanceboro, take indecent liberties with a minor, 3 years jail suspended 5 years on payment of cost and probation supervision fee, report to mental health center and 5 years probation.

Bruce Williams Jr., Farmville, assault on female, jury verdict — not guilty.

Joseph Russell Davenport, Biltmore Street, driving while impaired, 6 months jail suspended on payment of costs, fine and probation supervision fee, 28 hours jail, surrender operator's license, 3 years probation.

Michael Wayne Rouse, Raleigh, improper registration and no financial responsibility, order for remand to comply with district court judgment.

Carroll Vincent Cheatum, Washington Street, breaking and entering, 6 years jail, pay restitution.

David Lynn Mosley, Edgewood Trailer Park, uttering forged check (3 counts), 2 years jail suspended 3 years on payment of restitution and costs, 3 years probation.

Senate President Hugo Dennis excluded it from the lame-duck legislature's agenda in December.

"It's something most senators now believe should be left for the 16th legislature to decide on," said Dennis, who blames the issue for his own defeat. Also defeated was the Senate vice president.

Lloyd Willin't seek re-election.

Attorney Edith Bornn called the action "sneaky and surreptitious" as she led community leaders and residents in protest.

The territory's Democratic Party, the majority party to which four of the defeated incumbents belonged, have endorsed repeal of the rezoning, with reconsideration of the issue under "proper procedures."

But Gov. Juan Luis, in a year-end news conference, maintained strong support of the project. Luis contended that the issue has been "misinterpreted."

"What I hear in the community now is that the Senate acted improperly in approving the rezoning without public hearings, not that the community objects to the project itself," Luis said.

Luis' support for the project means the new Senate would require at least 10 votes, or two-thirds majority, to repeal the rezoning and override a gubernatorial veto.

Developer James Armour has argued that Fairchild had envisioned a resort on the 166-acre site he bequeathed to his heirs. Under the previous residential zoning, Armour said, the only alternative the Fairchild heirs would have is development of a subdivision containing up to 500 single-family homes.

Such a development, Armour added, would have much more serious environmental impact than the well-designed, environmentally sound resort he has planned.

Ms. Bornn replied that the steep terrain in the area would make such a subdivision impossible.

At his news conference, Luis promoted his administration's "aggressive government-sponsored capital improvement program" as the best hope for the economic problems of the territory of 100,000 U.S. citizens. Unemployment is under 10 percent, but the government employs 14,000 people and faces a budget shortfall estimated by Luis at $30 million.

The New Place For Low Prices

Wednesday, Jan. 9, WINN-DIXIE closed 105 stores. Thousands of prices were cut. Thursday, Jan. 10, at 8 a.m., we will re-open. With over 10,000 low prices in every WINN-DIXIE. That's 10,000 prices even Food Lion can't beat. Not now, not tomorrow, not ever.

We'll prove it. Check the prices in our W-D Price Printout. Item for item, price for price, WINN-DIXIE matches or beats the competition. But they can't match our weekly specials on our W-D Brand beef or Harvest Fresh produce, or our carry-out service. The bottom line is WINN-DIXIE helps you get the lowest food bill possible. We're unbeatable!

PICK UP YOUR FREE W-D PRICE PRINTOUT. The W-D Price Printout is a computer-generated list of over 10,000 of WINN-DIXIE's everyday low shelf prices. Copies of printouts are available at every store. Come by and get one. Take it to Food Lion and compare it. If you find an everyday shelf price that is lower, tell us about it. We'll match it. Or beat it!
