Worst Storm In Century Hits South Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Snowmen "popped up everywhere" and the mayor called for businesses and schools to stay closed today after the worst winter storm to hit South Texas in at least a century dumped more than a foot of snow across this city that owns no plows.

Meanwhile, frigid Canadian air spread into the upper Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes region today, bringing heavy snow and high winds to parts of Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Forecasters predicted up to 10 inches of snow would fall on Michigan today, with winds gusting to 30 mph along Lake Superior cutting visibility to near zero and dropping the wind chill to between 20 and 40 degrees below zero. Schools were closed today in some communities along the lake.

"We've got snowing, blowing and poor visibility," Daniel McDonnell, a dispatcher at the Michigan State Police post at Negaunee, said this morning. "In fact, I can't see across the street right now."

The weather service warned of similar conditions later today in extreme northwestern Indiana, with lighter snow in lower Michigan and Wisconsin and eastward into Ohio and western New York state.

The weekend storm in South Texas left highways packed with ice and snow across 700 miles from El Paso, at the state's western tip, to College Station in the east, and south to the Mexican border. Most of northern Texas escaped the snowfall.

"It's a mess," said Bo McCarver, a spokesman for the Texas Highway Department. "One traveler told us it took him 6½ hours to get from San Antonio to Austin — a 90-mile trip. We are discouraging any travel — we don't want people out there."

Before 13.2 inches of snow fell on the city in the 24 hours ending early Sunday, the record for an entire winter's snowfall was 7.4 inches, set in 1926. Record-keeping started in 1885.

"In the last 100 years, no snowfall has ever come close to this event," the National Weather Service said. It declared the storm over at 9 p.m. Sunday, but warned of overnight fog and issued a travelers advisory for slick roads today throughout southern Texas.

The snow was caused by cold air — up to 30 degrees below normal — from the north meeting warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico. Scott Tansey of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

Because San Antonio owns no snow-clearing equipment, crews used road graders. Mayor Henry Cisneros called for schools and businesses to remain closed today.

All San Antonio schools and some businesses agreed to stay closed. Some Austin businesses planned to open after noon. Texas A&M University canceled all classes and the University of Texas at Austin was opening in the afternoon.

"It'll take a couple of days for this snow to melt off," said weather service meteorologist Ken Falk in San Antonio, adding, "I'm happy it's over."

Temperatures hovered around freezing during the night, preserving the icy slush that layered roadways. Temperatures were to climb up to the low 40s today.

Kassab Is Confident Verdict Safe

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The father-in-law of convicted killer Jeffrey MacDonald said today he did not believe that MacDonald's lawyers would be able to get a new trial based on the confession of a Florida woman.

"There's nothing at all in what they filed," Freddie Kassab said just before the hearing began. "It's a lot of nonsense."

Kassab, the father of Colette MacDonald, originally believed MacDonald was innocent of the 1970 slayings of Colette and their two daughters, but later pushed federal officials to bring the Green Beret doctor to trial.

His efforts were the subject of a television movie last November that was based on the book "Fatal Vision." MacDonald received royalties from both the book and the movie.

Kassab said he had traveled to Raleigh from his new home in Jamesburg, N.J., primarily to see if U.S. District Court Judge Franklin Dupree, who presided at MacDonald's 1979 trial, would rule on a prosecution motion "to make him (MacDonald) cough back up the

Arctic Air Will Keep It Cold

Although temperatures moderated into the 50s today, weather forecasters warned that colder air will settle over North Carolina the remainder of the week, keeping highs near 40 and lows below freezing.

Cold arctic air is expected to move into eastern North Carolina tonight and skies are expected to turn partly cloudy Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service. A cold front moving rapidly southeastward across the northern plains early today will move through North Carolina tonight. Behind the front, cold Canadian air will spread across the state with brisk northwesterly winds. This return to colder weather will drop temperatures into the 20s for the next few nights and keep highs in the 30s Tuesday.

At 8 a.m. today, the mercury stood at 32 degrees according to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. A low of 22 and a high of 48 was recorded by GUC on Sunday. Saturday's high was 40 degrees and the low was 23.

Local agricultural officials say the cold is beneficial for crops in the county since it has slowed the rapid growth most plants experienced during December's summery weather.

"For the wheat in the county it is fine that the weather has cooled down," according to Pitt Extension Agent Sam Uzzell. "It will slow the leaf or upper wheat growth but allow the roots to continue growing." Uzzell said the county has received sufficient moisture to predict a good wheat and ryegrass crop this spring.

Horticulture crops in the area "need additional cold weather," Uzzell said. "Peaches especially need the cold to have the necessary chilling requirements and to keep them dormant."

Many ornamentals flowered or experienced swollen buds during the warm weather, he said, and the freezing weather has slowed this growth. Uzzell recommended additional protection for shrubs and ornamentals if temperatures drop into the teens for an extended period. Covering them with cloth is excellent protection, he added.

Vigilantes Get Strong Support

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-nine percent of New Yorkers think crime is the city's worst problem and 43 percent believe citizens "have a right to take matters into their own hands," according to a poll of city residents published today.

The poll of 1,329 adults Jan. 5 through 10 also showed that 52 percent supported the actions of Bernhard Goetz, who said he shot four teenagers after they asked him for money on the subway, the New York Times said.

Asked "Were you satisfied with how the police handled your complaint, or not," 50 percent of those respondents who reported a crime to police said yes, 45 percent said no and the rest had no response.

Six percent of those polled said they or someone in their household owned a gun "for self-protection."

Twenty-eight percent of those polled said they did not support Goetz' actions, which have led to four attempted murder charges against him. Thirteen percent were not sure.

The Times said crime was named the major problem over housing, cited by only 15 percent; public transportation, with 8 percent citing it as No. 1; and public schools, listed by 7 percent.

The high ranking of crime by those surveyed cut across all age, income, education and racial groups and was common to both sexes, residents of every borough and those of all political and religious persuasions, the Times said.

About 28 percent said they or a member of their family had been victimized by crimes ranging from purse snatching to murder in the past year.

Three-fourths of those polled said they thought better schools and more job training programs for youths would reduce crime. Three out of five thought putting more police on foot patrol would cut the crime rate, and about half thought the death penalty would "help a lot."

Goetz' Lawyer Quitting Case Over Disagreement

NEW YORK (AP) — The lawyer representing Bernhard Goetz, charged with shooting four youths he said threatened him on a subway, today said he was quitting the case because of an "irreconcilable disagreement" with Goetz over how his defense should be conducted.

In a statement issued at his office, attorney Frank Brenner said his decision had nothing to do with "the facts of the case, the nature of the charges and the legal questions raised." He declined to specify what the disagreement was about and said he would not charge Goetz for his services.

"Since it is not possible for me to conduct the defense as my experience and judgment dictate, Mr. Goetz and I have mutually agreed that I withdraw as his attorney," he said, adding that Goetz will look for another attorney.

Goetz, who is free on $50,000 bail, told police he shot four menacing youths on a subway Dec. 22. He surrendered about two weeks later in Concord, N.H., and was returned to New York to face four counts of attempted murder and a gun possession charge.

The prosecutor's office has asserted that Goetz, 37, a victim of a mugging three years earlier, opened fire on the teen-agers intending to kill them and stopped shooting only because his gun was empty.

Wide support of Goetz has been voiced by the public in the press and by mail and telephone calls to authorities. Many supporters have sent contributions to help pay for Goetz's defense, but Goetz has been quoted as saying that while he was grateful, he intended to raise the money on his own.

Brenner said in his statement that he would "expeditiously turn over to Mr. Goetz all of the contributions I have received for his defense funds," although he did not say how much money had been collected.

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

KEYS

I recently lost my car and house keys which had no identification on them. I know there's no way anyone would know how to get them back to me. Could Hotline get the word out that anyone who finds unidentified keys would be helping someone a lot if they'd turn them in to the nearest law enforcement office? Then citizens would have some place to check and hopefully find their keys. M.W.

Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said he thinks your idea is a good one, that the Greenville Police Department does occasionally reunite keys and their owners and would be glad to do more of it as a service to the public. Anyone who finds keys is invited to leave them at the Greenville Police Department or any other law enforcement office.

Forecast

Partly cloudy and colder through Tuesday. Low tonight in low 20s. High Tuesday around 40.

Looking Ahead

Increasing cloudiness Wednesday with a chance of precipitation Thursday. Becoming fair by Friday. Highs around 40. Lows near 30 Wednesday and Thursday, about 20 Friday.

The year 1985 will be a challenging and a fulfilling year for medical care in Greenville and eastern North Carolina, it would appear listening to the plans of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the East Carolina University School of Medicine, and the Pitt County Medical Society.

According to Jack Richardson, president of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the hospital will start a helicopter air ambulance service in April which will serve the entire eastern region of North Carolina. It's expected that the existence of the service will increase the acute care load of PCMH, because more patients will survive critical injury and illness and because more acutely ill and injured people will come directly to the hospital here rather than being treated at other hospitals in the region.

The physical plant of the hospital is being changed and some of these changes will come to fruition during this year, some next year. The new Emergency Department will be opened near the end of January and then its vacated space will be renovated into additional space for the Radiology Department. Renovations are also being made to the Surgery section, and both radiology and surgery hopefully will be occupied by September.

A new 18-bed ambulatory care unit adjacent to the present psychiatric unit at PCMH will be finished, additional cardiac care bed space will be provided, a new backup heart catheterization laboratory will be added, a new whole body computerized actual tomography (CAT) scanner will be added, and services of the regional rehabilitation center will be expanded. A new independent and expanded computer system for the hospital with some data-base shared with the medical school, will be largely, but not entirely in operation by the end of the year.

The hospital will continue to support the efforts of various community services such as Hospice and outlying hospitals' services to their patients. Cooperative arrangements are now being worked out with Pungo District Hospital and other arrangements with other medical providers in the area may follow, Richardson said.

Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said two big projects for the medical school this year will be the opening of the new Radiation Therapy Center, built and now being equipped, and the beginning of The Center for Health Improvement.

The Center for Health Improvement will be a regional program which will emphasize wellness — health maintenance, disease prevention and rehabilitation, Dr. Laupus said. He said nutrition, exercise, routine checkups and other means of taking responsibility for one's own health will be taught and demonstrated through faculty, stu-

PRECISION REMOVABLE DENTURES

If you need a partial denture to fill a gap caused by lost teeth, you may want to consider the precision removable denture.

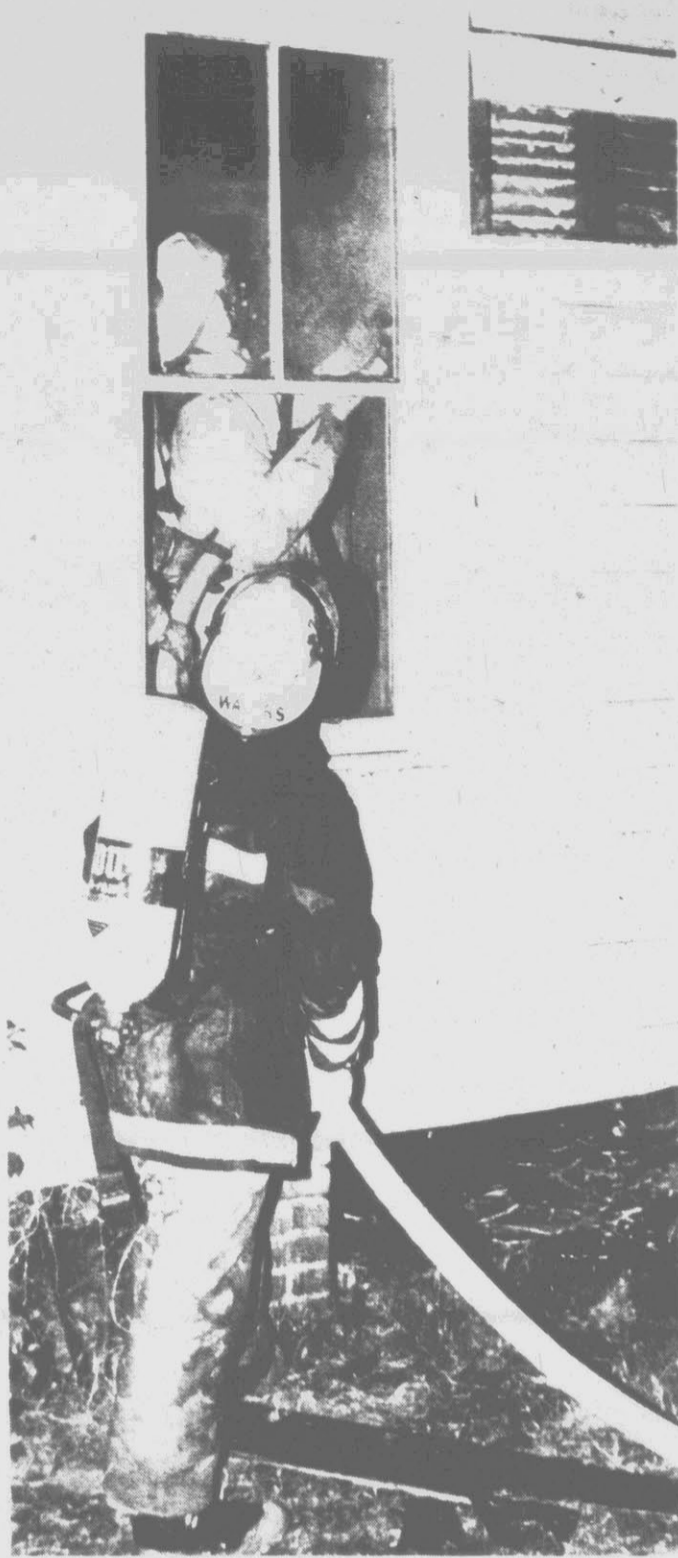

In this technique, the supporting teeth on both sides are crowned. The partial denture hooks INTO the crowned teeth rather than around them. Located on the back of each supporting crown is a "female" attachment. That's what the "male" attachment on the partial denture hooks into. No wire clasps are needed to hold the denture in place. There'll be nothing for anyone to see when you open your mouth except the teeth that now fill the gap that used to make you feel self-conscious.

That's an advantage for you. There's also an advantage for your dentist. By crowning the supporting teeth he can shape them for the best possible fit for your partial denture. That's an advantage for you, too. A good fit not only gives the denture stability, it gives you comfort and good appearance. It is also the most secure type of partial to use for a long span of missing teeth.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126 Greenville 752-5126

Participant

Reanee Ivey, a former Greenville resident who is now a speech pathologist with the Atlanta Public Schools, was among 87 educators chosen to attend the Martin Luther King Jr. Family of Schools Network in New York last week.

The American Can Co. of Connecticut funded and sponsored the series of meetings planned to develop a uniform way of commemorating Dr. King's contribution to society in the public schools across the nation.

Ms. Ivey has served on a pilot committee developed by the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change Inc. to develop a systematic means of recognizing King in the Atlanta schools. She is the daughter of Mrs. Marion G. Wilkes of Greenville.

Alumnus Cited

Syd Bailey of Greenville has been elected 1984 outstanding alumnus of the year for the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity at East Carolina University.

A Greenville native, he is the son of Merryman Priddy Bailey of Greenville and is married to the former Gayle Anne Schoephoerster of Greenville. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. Bailey, who owns a private real estate investment firm, graduated from ECU in 1974 with a B.S. degree in business administration specializing in real estate. Bailey is past treasurer and president of Tau Kappa Epsilon. In 1974, he was honored with the Past President's Award, Top Senior Teke Award and the Top Teke of the Year Award. He was elected president of the Alumni Association and chairman of the board of trustees of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity in 1976. In 1983, he was elected head of the Lambda-Psi Housing Corporation of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, a position he continues to hold.

No Error

The North Carolina Supreme Court has ruled there was no error in the trial of Billy Braswell, sentenced to life in prison in June 1983 in the shooting death of his wife, Lillie Braswell.

Braswell, a Pitt County deputy sheriff at the time, was convicted on a charge of shooting his wife to death near Farmville on Sept. 27, 1982. Braswell's attorneys said they are considering an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Braswell's son, Michael Keith Braswell, has filed suit in Superior Court asking over $2 million from his father and Sheriff Ralph Tyson for the death of his mother. The suit alleges that several people had warned Tyson that Braswell might try to hurt Mrs. Braswell and that Tyson, after assuring protection for Mrs. Braswell, "failed to provide the protection."

Revival Opens

Revival will begin tonight at 8 p.m. at Joy Temple Holiness Church and continue through Friday. Elder Issas Roberson of Kinston will speak. Music will be presented by various choirs.

King Service

A special service marking the birthday of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be held at the Bishop Payton Center Tuesday starting at 7:30 p.m. Evangelist Shirley Williams of Ayden will be guest soloist.

The Deliverance Temple Choir of Stokes, Christ Temple Holiness Church Gospel Choir of Bethel, Robersonville Church of God Gospel Choir and Union Choir of Pitt County will be featured choirs. First Lady Dressed For Inaugural By Top Designers

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don't look in the Smithsonian collection of First Ladies' ball gowns for the designer dress Nancy Reagan plans to wear to next week's inaugural.

The white, single-shouldered Galanos gown worn that Mrs. Reagan wore during the 1981 festivities is on view in the display, which has become a tourist favorite in the museum.

But, explains Mrs. Reagan's press secretary Sheila Tate: "It is not traditional for the gown from the second inaugural to be given to the museum."

This time, the inaugural dresses will become part of Mrs. Reagan's private wardrobe, Mrs. Tate said.

For the second time, Mrs. Reagan turned to her favorite U.S. couturiers — Bill Blass, James Galanos and Adolfo — for her inaugural attire.

Each is renowned for the items they produced for Mrs. Reagan — Blass designed an elegant evening gown, Adolfo a richly tailored coat and dress ensemble and Galanos a sparkly, beaded ball gown.

Although she declined to disclose the cost of the four pieces, Mrs. Tate said the Reagans will be paying for the items themselves.

Fashion industry experts, who spoke on condition they not be named, estimated the price of four such pieces on the retail market would be at least $10,000.

Tom Fallon, a spokesman for Bill Blass in New York, said the White House had asked that such information be kept private.

"We are instructed to give out no information on that whatsoever," Fallon said. Mrs. Tate said that even though the designers know Mrs. Reagan's size and likes so well they could have begun the work long ago, the First Lady was "too superstitious to even think of it before the election."

But after the results of the re-election landslide were clear, Mrs. Reagan gave the green light.

The White House released sketches over the weekend of Mrs. Reagan's two inaugural ball gowns, as well as the coat and dress she will wear during President Reagan's swearing-in ceremony and the inaugural parade next week.

Mrs. Reagan will kick off the night-time inaugural festivities Jan. 19 at the presidential gala, wrapped in a Blass-designed red silk crepe sheath in her favorite color, red.

INAUGURAL WEAR...for Nancy Reagan will include an Adolfo electric blue melton coat trimmed with gold buttons and a gold chain belt. She will wear a matching blue crepe dress with epaulettes beneath the coat. (AP Laserphoto)

The dress has tight, full-length sleeves, a jewel neck and gives the impression of being wrapped around the body because it is shirred at the waist and knee on the left side.

For the round of nine inaugural balls Monday evening, Mrs. Reagan will wear an electric blue Adolfo melton coat over a blue wool crepe dress. Both are trimmed with gold buttons and chain belts. She will also wear a small, off-the-face breton hat of the same color.

For the round of nine inaugural balls Monday evening, Mrs. Reagan has chosen a slim, white Galanos gown that has a short empire bolero.

The dress has a two-piece effect with the top embroidered with a variety of stones, bugle beads and other faux jewels in a variety of colors, while the skirt is beaded and studded with crystals.

Holiday Activities Reported At Meet

A report on the two families and family care center aided at Christmas was given at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club.

The families received gifts, toys for the children, clothes, food and furniture.

A program on interior decorating was given by Karen Forbes of Home Improvement Unlimited.

Meeting hostesses were Renetta Smith, Charlotte Bryant and Eileen Huber.

Next month's meeting will be on the Ronald McDonald House.

Founder's Day Is Observed

The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons meeting was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. R.C. Henry. Dr. Lois Staton gave the Founder's Day program.

She emphasized the life of founder of the organization on Jan. 13, 1886, the role of a state president, the late Hortense Forbes Moye, and of the role of present members.

Helen Perkins and President Polly Dail reported on the Spruil Home Christmas project. Each resident received a personal gift and Christmas treats. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. Dail.

Sorority Members Hear Trish Seagar

Trish Seagar presented the program at the January meeting of Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held at the home of Stephanie Evancho.

A member of the Farmville Women's Club, Ms. Seagar spoke on child abduction and showed slides.

Libby Kinley, president, conducted the meeting which included plans for a square dance to be held this month and a Valentine social in February.

Scholarship Winners Is Announced

Babbi Lois Stanley has been named winner of the Sally Southall Cotton Scholarship by Gayle Sterken, of the Greenville Junior Woman's Club.

A senior at Rose High School, Miss Stanley will receive the club's annual $200 scholarship. She will compete on the district level for an additional $100 Feb. 16 in Windsor.

Holly Edwards reviewed plans for the Marlin Art Auction and Cathy Crawford distributed tickets to members. The auction will be held Feb. 16 at the Greenville Boy's Club.

Glenda Hinnant, co-chairman of the Home Life Department, reported that a Christmas gift had been delivered to the club's adoptive nursing home patient at Greenville Villa.

Guests for the Wednesday night meeting were Billie Jean Humke, Ann Clark, Miss Stanley, Linda Van Doren and Sharon Simpson. President Becky Taylor conducted the meeting.

Meeting hostesses included Ms. Edwards, Cathy Crawford, Linda Barnes and Sylvia Conger.

The board meeting will be held Jan. 23 at the home of Linda Barnes and the next general meeting will be Feb. 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the Woman's Club.

Program Given By Cindy Johnston

Cindy Johnston gave a program on the efficiency of a cleaning system and the medicinal aspects of the machine at the meeting of Xi Gamma Xi.

A report on a recent project was given and the winner was Doris Pleiner.

Xi Gamma Xi is an exemplar chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. Linda McGehee was hostess for the meeting.

Dear Abby

Dad's Empty Promises Leave Children With Broken Hearts And Plans

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman, raising three children under 15, which is not easy, but that's another letter.

This is about a problem I've had since my divorce four years ago. My ex-husband, who lives on the West Coast, has promised our children many wonderful gifts for Christmas—none of which he has ever delivered.

He has called them in October promising to send plane tickets so they could spend Christmas with him! None came, of course. Every year he asks them what they want for their birthdays. They've told him, and received nothing.

I have never talked against him because I think it's important for children to respect their father, but it's growing more difficult to make excuses for him when he keeps disappointing them year after year. His broken promises are breaking their hearts. And mine, too.

If you print this, he may realize how we feel.

IN PIECES IN NEW YORK

DEAR IN PIECES: Why protect him with excuses? Your children will soon conclude (if they haven't already) that their father's word doesn't mean anything.

Facing reality prepares children to live in the real world. Though it's heartbreaking now, the pain will diminish when they learn to expect nothing from their phony father.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to congratulate that young father of two who decided to get a vasectomy. (He's so hard up his grandmother pays his rent and utilities.)

He is a real man in my book. I was advised by my doctor not to have any more children. We have three, and we're saving up for me to have an operation that will cost twice as much as a vasectomy for my husband. He won't even discuss it, and the doctor says not to push him. How about all the times I'm "pushed" to have sex when I'm afraid my birth control might not work?

I'm getting to resent him and sex. I envy my girlfriends whose husbands have had vasectomies. They are real men!

CONSTANTLY WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Quit worrying about birth control methods that might not work, and hot-foot it to your family planning clinic. And don't lay all the blame on your husband. Real women say no when they feel they're being "pushed" or not properly protected.

DEAR ABBY: When you get an invitation that reads, "Join us for some Christmas cheer from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.," what is that supposed to mean? Should you arrive at 6 p.m. and stay until 9? Or does it mean you can arrive anytime after 6 p.m., but you're not supposed to stay after 9 p.m.?

My husband says it means you can arrive anywhere between 6 and 9, but that doesn't make any sense because if you arrive at 8:55 p.m., you certainly wouldn't want to leave at 9.

Also, what is "Christmas cheer"? A cocktail party with hors d'oeuvres? Or should you expect enough in the way of refreshments to call it a meal? Don't say, "Call the hostess and/or the host and ask." That a vague answer like, "Oh, just wear anything." What is that supposed to mean?

HOLIDAY SEASON MYSTERIES

DEAR MYSTERIES: A 6-to-9 p.m. invitation for "Christmas cheer" means drop in anytime between 6 and 9 for a "drink" and snacks—no dinner.

And when you're told to wear "just anything," it means gentlemen should wear jackets and ties and the ladies should dress up a little, but it's not necessary to go to the vault for the family jewels.

Cleaning The Clean Room

Explaining Due

On the face of it, something highly dubious was going on in the final days of John Ingram's rather erratic tenure as N.C. Insurance Commissioner.

His successor found "four or five laundry carts" of papers assigned to waste disposal, and more cartons of records ordered transferred to the state Division of Archives and History, according to division director William S. Price Jr.

It was also reported Ingram had asked the division to keep for five years those transferred records and they not be moved without Ingram's consent. The records are said to be of Ingram's 12 years as commissioner.

(State law provides office records of outgoing department heads be turned over to his or her successor and prohibits their destruction. Punishment of violators is provided.)

Implications of the Raleigh case suggest Ingram looked on his office as a private fiefdom and was attempting to make life difficult for his successor. In any office, governmental or business, continuity is an essential quality. Nor do the complaints convey an image of John Ingram as especially concerned over the welfare and protection of the people he was presumed serving.

He has a lot of explaining to do; and those explanations must convince a lot of people he is more sinned against than sinning. Otherwise his reputation in the political world will be hopelessly fouled, and in the world of private business his dependability would always be suspect.

The State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to investigate and determine if a crime has been committed. Many North Carolina Democrats (almost 70,000 of them) thought well enough of their then insurance commissioner to vote for him to be their party's candidate for governor in the 1984 primary. We don't like to see that trust flagrantly abused.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — North Carolina may soon be home to the cleanest place on earth.

If the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina can achieve its goal, it would meet a standard almost unthinkable to those of us who dust the apartment no more than once a month. MCNC wants its "clean room" laboratory to meet a standard for airborne particulates — that's dust to most of us — that would be 10 times more stringent than the standards the world's leading microelectronics laboratories currently meet.

MCNC is aiming at having no more than one submicron sized particle in every cubic foot of air in the clean room. Think about that for a second. If you line up 2.5 million submicron-sized particles end to end, you've got an inch. They hope they don't have more than one of these little fellers in a cubic foot of air. Outside, floating around in a cubic foot of fresh air, you'd have two million particles, at least, and they'd each be a lot bigger than a submicron.

Aren't they taking this clean stuff a bit too far?

No, says Stefanie Mendell, manager of technical information at MCNC. The cleaner the room, the more research that can be done.

In microelectronics, scientists try to jam as many electrical switches as possible onto a silicon chip. With current clean room technology, about one million switches can be packed onto a chip the size of a couple of pin heads. As amazing as that sounds — each switch does the work of a transistor — scientists want to go farther, cram even more switches onto every chip. Ms. Mendell says the cleanliness of clean rooms is considered one of the leading factors keeping scientists from developing chips with more switches.

MCNC was created in 1979 by the Council of State with about $1 million of state money. In 1980, the General Assembly appropriated another $30 million to build MCNC's 100,000 square foot headquarters. The idea behind the center is to lure microelectronics firms to North Carolina and the clean room is what is doing the luring.

The clean room did not come cheap. Its 9,600 square feet took more than two-fifths of the construction costs for the entire building. One room cost $4.5 million.

Ms. Mendell said corporations aren't ready to put that kind of money into a clean room and then spend more to equip it. By joining MCNC, corporations can use its clean room.

The clean room is currently operating at a level of 10 particles per cubic foot, the highest standard in effect anywhere in the world, Ms. Mendell said. Within several months, MCNC hopes to clean up the operation a bit to get it down to one particle. Corporations which consider a cleaner room essential to expanding the capacity of a chip would then have a place to try out their new ideas.

How do you get a place so clean? Ms. Mendell offered a few housecleaning tips which MCNC practices.

Since humans "are the worst dust particle generators," workers must take an "air shower" before entering and then wear special uniforms and slippers and cover their hair. There is special vinyl flooring and wallpaper because regular flooring and wallpaper shed particles. No ordinary writing paper is allowed because it sheds. And then there are the many air filters which cleanse 36,000 cubic feet of air a minute.

The clean room at MCNC is enough to make even the most diligent housekeeper feel shabby.

Check-Out Goes Too Far

WASHINGTON — At anti-war rallies during the Vietnam period, undercover FBI agents almost always stood out in the crowd. Their typical uniform — "high-top" sneakers, torn sweaters and well-pressed jeans — was hard to miss. They also spent most of their time taking photographs of demonstrators.

Yet red-blooded protesters rarely laughed at the governments' not-so-inconspicuous effort to track "dissidents." FBI cameras were a tool and symbol of a government campaign to suppress domestic opposition while "saving" democracy abroad.

Big Brotherism didn't win much support from the American public back then. But we were recently reminded that it persists when a local federal appeals court publicly reprimanded a governmental agency — in this case the esteemed Library of Congress — for abusing the rights of one of its low-level employees, Harry K. Clark.

During the mid-1970s Clark, then in his early 20s, was reshelving books for the library. His was a full-time position. At night, from 1973 through 1976, he attended classes at the University of the District of Columbia, a public institution.

In 1976 Clark decided to become a full-time day student and reshelve books at night. The switch gave him the opportunity to sample the student organizations on campus. Among the meetings he attended were several of the Young Socialist Alliance. Clark considered the group to be reasonably harmless, and casually mentioned his involvement to friends at the library.

That's when the college student's trouble began. Unnamed "informers" alerted the library's security office of Clark's extra-curricular pursuits. The library, in turn, asked the FBI to conduct a full investigation of his political activities. According to court documents, the Bureau analyzed credit and police records; it also asked Clark's friends and colleagues extensive questions about, among other things, his loyalty, use of vacation time and sexual preference.

Clark didn't discover the FBI's interest in him until, after graduating from college in May 1977, he reapplied to work full-time at the library. His application was repeatedly rejected over the next two years. In 1979, he resigned and sued the library for violating his first amendment right to free speech and association.

A U.S. District Court judge in Washington subsequently ruled against Clark, saying the library had a right to determine the suitability of an employee. But the appeals panel, in reversing the lower court, said, "What we are confronted with here is a situation of a non-sensitive employee with no access to qualified materials, singled out for an extraordinary investigation on the basis of information received by the library to the effect that he was associated with a lawful political group." The library, the judge ruled, had "failed completely" to demonstrate that Clark posed "any national security risk whatsoever."

Though no monetary damages were awarded in this case, the court's opinion ought to remind other government agencies not to step on the rights of any individual — even if he or she draws a government paycheck.

"The frightening part of this case," said Arthur Spizar, the American Civil Liberties Union attorney who represented Clark, "is that the Library of Congress' chief security officer told the court that his investigative request was standard practice. How often does this happen to other low-level employees in other agencies?"

Those who dismiss the relevance of George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-Four" to this country may also heed the Clark case. From time to time, the government reveals the extent to which it improperly intrudes in our lives. Now that, under President Reagan, the nation's intelligence and law enforcement agencies enjoy new latitude to spy domestically (authorized wiretaps, for example, are up), the abuses are likely to increase.

Bernard Crick, Orwell's biographer, reminded us last month that "Nineteen Eighty-Four" pertained as much to the West as it did to the East. Harry K. Clark would probably attest to that.

—Art Buchwald—

Size Is The Thing

There was a time when the status symbol in our crowd was the swimming pool. Then everyone installed a swimming pool and it almost became chic not to have one.

After swimming pools, the thing to own was a tennis court. The persons with the private tennis court had the drop on all of us. Then tennis courts started popping up in the neighborhood, and pretty soon the tennis court owner had as much trouble getting players to come over as the swimming pool proprietor had recruiting sunbathers.

What could possibly replace swimming pools and tennis courts as a social attraction?

We didn't have long to wait. It was the super large TV screen. I discovered this the hard way. At one time the gang used to come over to my house to watch the football games on my new 25-inch set. My wife provided popcorn, potato chips, beer, assorted cheeses and pate, and key lime pie. We had a lock on the Redskin games played away from home as well as the NFL playoffs, New Year's Day college bowls, and, of course, the Super Bowl game, which became the most sought-after invitation in Washington.

We thought it would go on forever. But three years ago at Super Bowl time I started to call up the gang to get a head count on who was coming over. I called Phil and he said he was going over to George's.

"Why are you going to George's? I asked.

" Haven't you heard? He just got a 50-inch TV screen. It will be like seeing the game live."

"How could he do that? The Super Bowl belongs to us."

"I'm sorry," Phil said. "But you can't expect to keep it with a 25-inch screen."

Calls to Jack, Ben, Joe, Harry and Charley all confirmed by worst fears. They were going over to George's to watch the game. Charley said if it were just him, he'd come over to my house, but he had to think of his kids.

When I told my wife that we had lost the Super Bowl to George, she couldn't believe it. "But I've fed those people for 10 years. Why would they leave us now?"

"We're not talking about food. We're talking about 25 inches," I said bitterly. "I never thought George would buy a new house with an extra large living room just to get the crowd away from us."

"What do we do now?"

"I'm going down to the TV store tomorrow and price 50-inch screens."

"Not in my living room," she said. "I'm not going to turn it into a Holiday Inn bar. If George wants the Super Bowl that badly he can have it. Are you going to go over and watch it on his set?"

"What choice do I have? If I don't everyone will call me a sore loser."

I went to George's for the game. The screen was 50 inches as advertised, but the picture was fuzzy and out of shape and you had to sit directly in front of it to see what was going on. Despite all this everyone kept congratulating George on his set and making nasty remarks about mine. It was a bitter pill to swallow, but typical of the fickle behavior of NFL football fans all over America. One Sunday you're cheered and the next Sunday you're booed.

George didn't hold the crowd for long. He had two years before David installed an entire "entertainment complex" in his basement, including a 60-inch screen that came down electronically from the ceiling and a custom-built TV set superior to any on the market. We all left George for David before the Washington-Dallas game this year.

It cost David $40,000, but we told him it was worth it.

What David doesn't know is that Jack is planning to turn his garage into a mini-movie theater, with a 7-foot screen which will be completed for the Redskin Monday night game next season. It's too bad David only has the Super Bowl for one year, but when it comes to football watching you're only as good as the size of your last TV set.

Drill

The city of Greenville held a practice disaster alert to test its new Emergency Management Plan last week and apparently the drill was a success.

The alert came during a session of the City Council and department heads who were involved left to take their stations.

City Manager Gail Meeks reported that 338 people, or 85 percent of the city's workforce, reported for the exercise.

There were some 60 disaster situations including a chemical spill, wrecks, equipment breakdowns, electrical failures, robberies, the collapse of a bridge, vandalism, flooding injuries and one simulated fatality.

Included were "victims" trapped under a tree which was actually felled on Pitt Street. One situation involved a power failure at the Pitt-Greenville Airport requiring the use of police car headlights to provide illumination for the imaginary landing of the governor's helicopter.

It was, of course, all for practice, but there was nothing in the drill which cannot, and has not, happened. Indeed, Pitt County has had its share of disasters.

The Emergency Management Plan is in place and last week's drill proves that it works. Now it must be tested regularly to be certain it will work when the need is real. Our safety, and even our lives, can depend upon it.

Timing May Have Been Bad

WASHINGTON — White House insiders are convinced Michael K. Deaver blundered in quitting as deputy chief of staff, the same day as the Wall Street Journal expose on his finances.

Deaver is described by associates as working himself into a state of anxiety the past few weeks while awaiting the product of Journal investigative reporter Edward Pound. Although presidential aides felt the story was much milder than they had expected, Deaver was determined to hasten his long-planned resignation.

A footnote: Superficially, Deaver was jaunty on the morning the long-awaited expose ran. Commenting on another newspaper story describing his long-running feud with retiring interior Secretary William P. Clark, Deaver snapped: "How could there be a feud? He hasn't talked to me for a year."

Rep. Jack Kemp beat Vice President George Bush in an early sprint prior to their possible marathon for the 1988 Republican presidential campaign by hiring John Buckley, the highly-regarded deputy public relations officer at the Reagan-Bush campaign, as his new press secretary.

Bush was about to interview Buckley as a possible replacement for his retiring press aide, Pete Teeley. But Kemp beat him to the gun as part of beefing up his staff. Buckley, a nephew of columnist William F. Buckley and ex-senator James Buckley, handled press relations for Lewis Lehrman in his 1982 campaign for governor of New York.

A footnote: Another new Kemp staffer, political operative John Maxwell, has presidential campaign value. Although he most recently was executive director of the Texas Republican Party, Maxwell is from Iowa — the state where the presidential nomination begins. He ran successful Senate campaigns there in 1978 and 1980.

Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia did not help his chances to land on the 1988 Democratic presidential ticket with his unsuccessful effort to mobilize fellow Democratic governors behind the selection of a new Democratic national chairman.

When both ex-governor Scott Matheson of Utah and transportation secretary Neil Goldschmidt turned down Robb's bid, the governor ended up pointlessly alienating backers of other possibilities. Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, who also entertains national ambitions, suffered less than Robb only because he was less intimately involved.

Bob Squier, Washington-based campaign consultant who ran Robb's 1981 election for governor and later boosted him as a 1984 vice-presidential prospect, cannot be blamed for the national chairman fiasco. Squier was not consulted by Robb and would have advised against the effort if he had been.

Although Energy Secretary Donald Hodel is considered the front-runner to replace William P. Clark as secretary of the interior, Republican National Chairman Frankahrenkopf has been talked about at the White House as a prospect.

Fahrenkopf, well though of by President Reagan's men as a result of his 1984 campaign performance, has made clear he has no interest, whatever in running in Nevada next year to succeed Sen. Paul Laxalt. But administration insiders think he would be willing to take a Cabinet post.

A footnote: Political strategists are beginning to take seriously repeated assertions by Laxalt, general chairman of the Republican Party, that he probably will not run for re-election in 1986. But he is not in the picture for the Interior post.

New Rule On Tax Records Draws Complaints

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Envisioning stacks of paperwork as high as an elephant's eye, farmers, shop owners, moonlighters and major corporations are demanding the Internal Revenue Service weaken new regulations that require detailed recordkeeping on business use of motor vehicles.

The regulations, imposed on orders of Congress, are designed to keep people from claiming a business-related tax deduction for a purely personal expense, such as a pleasure trip in a business vehicle.

"I invite you to ride in a one-ton pickup all day and see how much pleasure you derive from it," Adkins Farms Inc. of Chandierville, Ill., said in a letter to the IRS.

But business deductions have never been allowed for personal expenditures. What is upsetting taxpayers now is the requirement that they keep "adequate contemporaneous records" of every business use of a vehicle — including boats, planes and motorcycles — and of personal computers for which some business deduction is claimed.

The rules also demand contemporaneous records for deductions for business use of a home computer. In essence, the owner will have to keep a log of all computer use and claim a deduction only for the business portion.

Another new law prohibits an employee from deducting a home computer unless the equipment is used for the employer's convenience and is required "as a condition of employment. Deductions are limited for self-employed people whose home computers are used less than half the time for business.

In the past, a person whose expense records were incomplete could use other evidence to support deductions. But no more. If you claim a deduction that is not supported by contemporaneous records you lose the deduction and face a 5-percent negligence penalty as well. A 50-percent fraud penalty is possible.

The regulations do not define "contemporaneous" except to say that an entry "shall be made at or near to the time the listed property is actually used." But clearly, they prohibit creation of a log a month after expenses are incurred.

Some people have their own ideas of "contemporaneous."

"If my cattle were in the neighbor's field, he would not appreciate me taking five minutes to file a record of the trip while the cattle destroy some of his crops," wrote James Langley, president of the Malheur, Ore., County Farm Bureau. "If I'm doing some field burning and it threatens my neighbor's property, I must stop, get my record book, write down the date, time, mileage and the reason for the trip while the destruction continues."

From R.O. Mayes & Son Wholesale Grain Co., Petersburg, Va.: "Of all the bookkeeping we have to do for the federal government, this is the most ridiculous."

The rules were published in the Federal Register last Oct. 24 and became effective on Jan. 1. The IRS announced them in the instructions accompanying the tax forms that were mailed out over the December holidays. But apparently many taxpayers have not heard the message.

"There are a lot of people out there now taking business trips and they are losing deductions because they don't know about the new recordkeeping requirements," said Steven Wolf of the Laventhol & Horwath accounting firm in Washington.

The regulations are only temporary. The IRS is reading a stack of mail and awaiting a Feb. 5 public hearing before determining how the final rules should read.

In the meantime, Congress is feeling the heat. "My constituents are being forced to keep a log for a trip to church on Sunday in a pickup truck and for a trip to the local coffee shop," Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D., said as he introduced a bill to repeal the new rules.

However, the regulations say that if the overall annual use of a piece of equipment can be determined, only business use — not personal use — need be logged. The overall use of a farm truck, for example, can be determined easily by checking the odometer so logging personal trips is not necessary.

Many of the complaints say Congress never intended to require such detailed records for vehicles used solely for business.

Changes In Tax Laws Bring Hikes

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans will find their federal tax bills a little smaller when they file returns this year, but several selected tax increases will be felt for the first time.

Many Social Security recipients will have to pay tax on their pensions. Non-prescription drugs are no longer deductible. If your earnings rose sharply in 1984, it will be more difficult to reduce your taxes by "income averaging." And tighter rules restrict tax benefits for cars, computers and other equipment whose use is divided between business and personal use.

Before the year is over, the Internal Revenue Service expects to receive 101.4 million individual returns, up from 96.9 million last year. The great majority of those will be filed before the April 15 deadline, and perhaps 80 percent of them will produce refunds.

The final stage of the individual tax-rate reductions enacted in 1981 took effect last year. Averaging about 5 percent below 1983 rates, the changes are already built into the tax tables and tax-rate schedules from which you calculate how much you owe.

Here are some of the other major changes affecting individuals and couples:

SOCIAL SECURITY: As part of the plan to shore up the pension system, Congress voted to tax some of the Social Security checks received by upper- and middle-income Americans. In general, up to half of Social Security is taxable if total income exceeds $25,000 for a single person or $32,000 for a couple filing a joint return.

MEDICAL EXPENSES: Medical and dental expenses exceeding 5 percent of your adjusted gross income may be deducted if you itemize deductions. This filing season, there are two changes: Non-prescription drugs may no longer be deducted; only prescriptions and insulin qualify. Second, you may deduct up to $50 a night for lodging expenses incurred while being treated in an out-of-town hospital or clinic.

INCOME AVERAGING: A person whose income fluctuates sharply from one year to the next, such as a farmer or writer, has saved on past taxes by averaging the successful year against poorer years. Now this is harder to do. To qualify, 1984 earnings must have been at least 40 percent higher than the average of 1981-1983. Schedule G provides the details.

CONTRIBUTIONS: If you don't itemize deductions, you still may write off part of the money you gave to charity. For 1984, the maximum is $75.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: Last year, you could delay making your 1983 deposit to an Individual Retirement Account until you actually filed your tax return; for some people, that meant as late as Aug. 15. The new law says you have only until April 15 to make your 1984 IRA contribution, regardless of when you file your return.

DIESEL: The federal tax on diesel fuel went up to 15 cents a gallon last Aug. 1, but the 6-cent increase was aimed at big trucks, not at cars or small trucks. So if on Jan. 1, 1985, you owned a 1979 or later-model diesel car, van or light truck, you may claim a one-time credit by attaching Form 4136 to your return.

CARS AND COMPUTERS: It is tougher to write off a home computer, car or other equipment that is used only partially for business. If you are an employee, you may deduct a computer, for example, only if your boss requires you to buy it. A self-employed person will fare better, but still tax benefits are severely limited unless the equipment is used more than half the time for business.

Father And Wife Win 'Baby Cotton'

LONDON (AP) — A High Court judge announced today that a 10-day-old girl, Britain's first baby known to have been conceived as a commercial transaction, has been placed in the care of the couple who paid for her.

The judge, Sir John Laty, set a British legal precedent with his ruling in the Family Division of the High Court, turning the baby over to her natural father and his wife, who cannot have children.

The baby's mother, Kim Cotton, 28, of London, became the first British woman known to have given birth for pay. She was reportedly given $7,280 by the anonymous childless couple in return for being artificially inseminated with the husband's sperm and bearing the child.

The infant was removed Friday from the north London hospital where she was born, and, according to a report in today's Daily Mail newspaper, she already has been taken out of the country by the couple who arranged to pay for her birth through a British surrogacy agency based in Washington, D.C.

The Daily Mail quoted a lawyer for the father as saying that the couple secretly left Britain with the baby during the weekend after a court hearing on Friday before Laty.

MENTAL HEALTH CENTER GREENHOUSE

"A Working Program" by Bob DeSoto, Unit Coordinator

Few activities for adults in our culture are more normative than work. We all have a need to be involved in some productive, goal-directed activity for our own physical and emotional well being.

The Pitt County Mental Health Center in association with Pitt Community College has developed a program assisting individuals in developing measurable work and social skills which are necessary to prepare for entry-level employment in the field of Horticulture. Individuals are provided with as much "hands on" experience as possible in a greenhouse setting and also receive an instructional program directed primarily toward practical elements of Horticulture. Participants in the Greenhouse Program earn limited wages and produce a number of marketable greenhouse products.

For more information regarding the Greenhouse Program, contact Rhonda Bailey or Kathy Hammond at 756-3208 (Greenhouse) or 752-7151.

Hecklers Block Out Kennedy

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu says the black hecklers who forced Sen. Edward M.

Kennedy to cancel his final appearance in South Africa don't represent the views of the "vast, vast" majority of the nation's blacks.

Kennedy ended his nine-day visit to white-ruled South Africa on Sunday after expressing regret that he was unable to deliver a speech at a church in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

"I'm disappointed because the message I had was a message about the future of South Africa, and a message that deplored apartheid," said Kennedy before flying to Zambia on the start of his trip home.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, said his remarks would have reflected the thinking of the "overwhelming majority of American people that hold this system repugnant."

He was referring to the apartheid, South Africa's systematic discrimination against the black majority. South Africa denies citizenship to its 22 million blacks.

Rangers Rescue Girl, 13

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Don McNeil and his 13-year-old daughter, who was kidnapped at gunpoint and held for 45 hours, hugged and "danced around" on a country road after two Texas Rangers braved gunfire to whisk the girl to safety.

Amy McNeil, abducted Friday morning on her way to school by gunmen who demanded $100,000 in ransom, was freed Sunday after a gun battle between her alleged kidnappers and police during a chase at speeds up to 100 mph.

In a final shootout near Saltillo, northeast of Dallas, Texas Ranger John Dendy dashed to the car amid gunfire, scooped the girl up and tossed her to Ranger Howard "Slick" Alfred, who drove her away, said Johnson County Sheriff Eddy Boggs.

Two of the five suspects were wounded, police said. All five were arrested.

McNeil, 44, an Alvarado businessman and rancher, said he and Amy embraced and "danced around on some country road for about 10 minutes."

Todd identified the suspects as Liza Ann Bouvier, 18, of Balch Springs; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; Daniel Walter Neckar Jr., 21, of Mesquite; Michael Lynn Mills, 27, of Pleasant Grove; and James Wesley Foote, 34, of Alvarado.

All five were held without bail on charges of attempted capital murder, aggravated kidnapping and kidnapping, authorities said.

Mills and Foote were treated at Franklin County Hospital in Mount Pleasant and transferred to Todd Parkland Hospital in Dallas, Todd said.

Soviets Stand Firm On Space Weapons

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko says U.S. insistence on forging ahead with space weapons research would fuel an arms race and lead to the collapse of negotiations the superpowers have just agreed to resume.

Gromyko, who led the Soviet delegation at talks last week that yielded a U.S.-Soviet agreement to reopen arms control negotiations, made his point forcefully during an unusual live interview Sunday on Soviet television.

He insisted that the United States abandon its so-called "Star Wars" missile defense program and said that without a space weapons accord it was "superfluous and inadmissible" to pursue separate deals on nuclear arms.

The interview, a two-hour session with four Soviet journalists, was his first extensive public discussion of last week's talks with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz in Geneva, Switzerland.

Gromyko's appeared on Soviet television at about the same time that U.S. networks aired interviews with Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Shultz said it "remains to be seen" whether the Soviet Union would agree on one area of arms control without reaching agreement in the other two areas to be negotiated.

Weinberger said the United States ruled out scrapping the "Star Wars" program now. He said U.S. negotiators would use the new round of arms talks to try to convince the Soviets that the proposed space-based defense system would be a better deterrent against nuclear war than offensive nuclear arsenals.

In Geneva, the United States and Soviet Union agreed to open three separate series of negotiations — one involving strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons; another involving intermediate-range nuclear missiles; and a third focused on space weapons. Dates and venues for the talks are supposed to be decided within a month.

Gromyko said last week's agreement does not allow for what he called a "useless, futile seminar" on the merits of space weapons.

"If the U.S.A. embarks on that path, the talks would be blown up," Gromyko said. "There is no choice and no middle way here. Either to deal seriously with space...or there will be an arms race. This question cannot be solved by half-measures. We made such a warning to the U.S. delegates."

Gromyko added: "Without reaching an accord, simultaneous and interrelated in all the three directions, there can be no advancement in the realization of what was agreed upon in Geneva. One would like that fewer frivolous statements of this kind come from the United States of America."

"It is impossible to consider banning strategic weapons separately from outer space issues," Gromyko said. "But if the problems of outer space were considered in the required direction and if accords in this area came to light, it would be possible to advance also in the field of strategic armaments."

He said it was pointless for the United States to say it only wanted to engage in research and to promise the Soviet Union a space weapons system would only be for defense.

"We are told the United States has no intention to deliver a strike at the Soviet Union — I stress, intention," he said. "We say in reply: so is the Soviet Union to rely on your conscience? First of all, we are not very convinced that Washington has very big stock of that commodity."

He also said if the United States developed such an anti-missile shield, "would not it be used for pressure, for blackmail?"

The interview with Gromyko was a first for Soviet television viewers, who are used to hearing their top leaders' messages in formal speeches.

Martin Seeks Good Rapport With Media

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin is trying to cultivate the same rapport with the news media that his predecessor enjoyed, mindful that he may have to appeal to the public if a balky General Assembly derails his programs.

Reporters had little trouble reaching Martin throughout his first week on the job. He granted one-on-one interviews in his office, chatted with journalists before and after meetings and ceremonies, and called the first of his weekly news conferences Friday.

Martin also set a precedent by ordering that the first Council of State meeting over which he presided be open to the public and press.

"Even if you get bored with it, it's better to have it open," he said in an interview, during which he vowed to work for a stronger open-meetings law. Martin and his aides say his accessibility doesn't apply just to the media, citing his decision to appear twice a month at "town meetings" throughout the state. The first is scheduled for Tuesday night in Wilson.

Nevertheless, they acknowledge that it's good politics to take advantage of the heavy news coverage that his position attracts and, as policy assistant Jack Hawke says, "bend over backward" to "make it easier for reporters."

"We're a Republican administration ... facing an overwhelming Democratic majority," Hawke said. "The success of our legislative package as well as our administrative actions depends on how the public perceives them. We feel that the better the public understands what we're trying to do, the better off we'll be."

Thus, Martin won't hesitate to ask the voters — via the news media — to pressure their legislators if such controversial proposals as his tax-cut package hit roadblocks, Hawke said.

Publicly, Martin has portrayed legislative Democrats as above the kind of partisanship that would lead them to oppose his programs simply because he's a Republican. When his Democratic opponent, Rufus Edmisten, said in the campaign that Martin's minority-party status would render him ineffective as governor, Martin replied that Edmisten had insulted his fellow Democrats.

However, some of those Democrats have said that while Martin's proposals might not be killed outright because they're his, they'll definitely come under closer scrutiny than is normal.

Patronage, another tool Democratic governors have used to gain support in the Legislature, will be less helpful to Martin, Hawke said. Although Democrats have been given some high-profile positions in the Martin administration, Republicans who helped Martin get elected must get their share.

"Even if we'd wanted to play the old politics, it wouldn't be enough," added Hawke. "We could hire three relatives of every (Democratic) legislator and it still wouldn't work. ... That's why we'll have to r0856 -b- What's more, Hawke said, Martin thinks dealing with the press 01:27 fun. Former Gov. Jim Hunt felt the same way, once commenting that his news conferences were among the most likable parts of his job. Martin "enjoys ... the give and take with the press," said Hawke. "He enjoys the mental stimulation of being asked tough questions and having to defend his positions. He's an intellectual guy and ... likes to be challenged from every angle to make sure his position is right."

Tug Knocks Out Bridge To Island

SUNSET BEACH, N.C. (AP) — For winter residents and weekend visitors waiting in their cars on the island, the mainland of this southern Brunswick County beach town is only a stone's throw away.

But with the town's splintered pontoon swing-bridge under repair, the distance may as well be miles.

The 65-foot tugboat Angela M., owned by Seatow Inc. of Virginia Beach, Va., was pushing a barge laden with pipe when it blew off course and knocked out a 68-foot section of the only bridge to the island about 11:30 a.m. Saturday. On Sunday, state Department of Transportation workers began repairs as a team of DOT and emergency officials devised plans for getting cars across the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway.

Jack Edgerton, DOT bridge maintenance superintendent, estimated damage at $110,000 to $125,000.

No one was injured in the accident, but DOT officials said it would be two weeks before the bridge reopens. Meanwhile, residents of the 1 1/4-mile-long Brunswick County island will use ferry services to get on and off the island, officials said.

Martin Will Help Green

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin plans to help former Democratic Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green retire the $200,000 campaign debt left after Green's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Martin has asked some of his top supporters, under the guidance of former state Sen. Kenneth R. Harris, R-Mecklenburg, to put together a fund-raiser that would be held after the General Assembly convenes next month.

"The governor wanted me to help coordinate" a fund-raiser for Green, Harris said. "We are working on the details. We have nothing firmed up yet."

Harris said he did not see Martin's help in arranging the event as a reward for Green's help in the Martin campaign or new administration.

"It is more the idea that the guy has been helpful," he said. "He is willing to help us. We are willing to put our heads together for him."

Hospitals Plan Ethics Panels

GREENSBORO (AP) — A proposal urging hospitals in the state to establish ethics committees to deal with the terminally ill is expected to be considered next month by a North Carolina Medical Society committee.

Hospitals in Greensboro, Durham and Charlotte are forming or considering forming such committees. The Duke Endowment, a longtime benefactor of the state's hospitals, has developed a grant to help hospitals and committees grapple with ethical questions.

Doctors and lawyers say a major problem is that most people aren't aware of the opportunity to adopt a "living will." North Carolina is one of about 20 states with living will laws.

Under the law, passed in 1977, individuals may declare their wish for a natural death rather than having life prolonged by extraordinary life-support measures, such as a respirator.

While the law has helped in many cases, doctors and lawyers say that the committees, which would be made up of medical professionals, lawyers, clergymen and laymen, are needed to help patients, family, doctors and hospitals cope with the emotional, legal, economic and technical questions being raised.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices slipped a bit today, giving up some of last week's gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.76 points to 1,214.33 in the first half hour.

Losers took a narrow lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors' mood had improved with the market's rally last week.

However, they said many market participants were still wary enough about the outlook for interest rates and progress toward shrinking the federal budget deficit to want to cash in on some of the recent gains in stock prices.

"Last week's market action was encouraging," said William LeFevre at Purcell, Graham & Co.

"But the market needs some significant news event before we can expect to see the current strength expand to push the Dow above the 1,240-1,250 area that has proved so difficult to penetrate since last August."

That development could possibly occur on Thursday, LeFevre argued, when Inter-national Business Machines issues its yearend earnings report.

IBM is the largest holding of investing institutions, and its shares often exert an influence on the overall market.

Among today's early volume leaders, Mobil dropped 1/4 to 26 1/2. General Electric slipped 1/4 to 37 1/2. Champion International was down 1/4 at 21 1/2, and Chevron gained 1/4 to 30 1/2.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 5.41 to 1,218.09, reducing its gain for the week to 33.15 points.

But advances slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 107.59 million shares, against 124.68 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 14 to 96.99. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 66 at 205.74.

Koreans Rescued

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (AP) — A cruise ship rescued 26 South Koreans who had abandoned their burning freighter in the Caribbean coast of Venezuela, according to a passenger aboard the ship and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The Greek liner Stella Oceanis changed course and picked up the freighter's crew, who were in two inflatable lifeboats bobbing in the rough waters.

Court Will Clarify Racketeering Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to clarify a federal anti-mobster law used in recent efforts to label such businesses as American Express Co., E.F. Hutton & Co. and Lloyd's of London as "racketeers."

The justices, entering one of the legal profession's hottest debates, said they will study conflicting appeals court rulings about the 1970 law's provisions for civil lawsuits.

At issue is the right to file private lawsuits under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), a law aimed at "eradication of organized crime in the United States."

The law makes it a crime for "any person employed or associated with any enterprise in ... interstate or foreign commerce ... to participate (in) a pattern of racketeering activity."

Under the law, a pattern of racketeering amounts to two or more acts from a long list of crimes that include numerous state laws

FDA Proposes Ban On Baldness 'Cures'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today proposed a ban on all lotions, creams and other non-prescription products that claim to grow hair or prevent baldness.

The FDA said a scientific advisory board has determined that no current non-prescription product is effective, and the agency agrees. Under the agency's proposal, products for hair loss could be marketed — but only after the manufacturer proves effectiveness to the FDA.

The regulation will be published in Tuesday's Federal Register and subject to public comment for 120 days. It would become effective sometime later.

In announcing the rule, the FDA said it has taken action before against individual hair-loss products because of fraudulent claims. However, the agency said, such products continue to be an area of considerable fraud.

"Most baldness is inherited," the FDA said. "Hair loss can also result from malnutrition, iron deficiency, hormone imbalance or exposure to radiation."

"Because sudden excessive hair loss or an unusual pattern of hair loss may have an underlying medical cause, FDA recommends anyone having such a problem consult a physician promptly," the agency said.

money from the book and the movie." Kassab said the motion, filed several weeks ago, was based on a federal law passed in September restricting the money that convicted criminals can make from publications and films concerning their cases.

Spectators at the hearing today were required to pass through a metal detector before entering the courtroom.

Defense attorney Brian O'Neill said last week he would seek a new trial for MacDonald based on the confession of a Florida woman, who told an FBI agent she participated in the killings.

But federal prosecutor Brian Murtagh, who has been involved with the case for 13 years, says the confession of Cathy Perry Williams does not square with the facts of the case and shows that "off-the-wall" confessions come out of the woodwork" in celebrated trials. At least six people have admitted guilt in the case, he said.

MacDonald was sentenced to three life terms at a federal prison in Texas after being convicted in 1979 of killing his wife and two daughters at their Fort Bragg apartment. He has consistently maintained innocence.

He says a group of drug-crazed hippies broke into his apartment on Feb. 17, 1970, and murdered his family, writing the word "pig" in blood at the head of the MacDonalds' bed.

Killed were his wife, Colette, 26, who was pregnant, and his daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2.

Ms. Williams told investigators she was a friend of Helena Stockley Davis, who also confessed to the crimes. Ms. Davis died in 1983.

Murtagh said she confessed to being with a group who broke down the door to the MacDonalds' apartment, injected a male on a downstairs sofa with a drug, then climbed to the apartment's second story and beat two boys, putting one body in a closet and another in a bathroom.

"But there weren't any male victims, and no bodies were found in a closet or a bathroom. The front door had not been broken in, and the apartment was a one-story residence," he said.

Struggle For Control

SMU Beats Tar Heels, Makes Hasty Retreat

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Fourth-ranked Southern Methodist escaped with an 84-82 victory over fifth-ranked North Carolina Sunday and dashed from the Greensboro Coliseum in uniform to catch a waiting flight back to Texas.

That left the Tar Heels behind to think over the comeback that didn't come quite far enough.

When asked if his 31-point performance was his best of the season, SMU's 7-foot senior Jon Koncak didn't have much to say.

"It's the win that counts," Koncak said. "Save the statistics for the NCAA."

The victory was the 14th in 15 games for the Mustangs, but they had to sweat out the final second.

Buzz Peterson was fouled on an attempt to put a rebound back in, and went to the free throw line for two shots. Converting both shots would give the Tar Heels a tie at 84.

"I tried to relax and think about practicing free throws last summer," Peterson said.

He missed the first free throw.

The strategy then became to purposely miss the second shot. Peterson was to hit the back right side of the rim. Kenny Smith got his hand on the shot for a tip, but missed.

It ended a number of comebacks the Tar Heels mounted to stay close.

They trailed at 54-43 with about 16 minutes left, but cut the lead back to five. Another SMU spurt put the Mustangs out in front by eight with 12 minutes left, but North Carolina got back to within three. And with about 3½ minutes left, the Tar Heels trailed 78-71, and came back again.

"Obviously we were disappointed," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "We are pleased about the repeated comebacks. We had a chance at the end. We always hope we can make a comeback like that. I told Buzz he got a tremendous offensive rebound at the end or he would have never had the chance to shoot."

For Steve Hale, who scored 12 points in the second half and finished with 18, the comebacks are part of a North Carolina tradition.

"The 'never say die' attitude is one of the things I play here for," Hale said. "When we were down by 11, I kept telling myself that there's a lot of time left. But climbing that hill takes energy."

North Carolina also was hampered by the loss of much of their front line. Brad Daugherty and Dave Popson fouled out with more than 10 minutes left, and that left the rebounding duties chiefly to 6-11 reserve Warren Martin. It also left North Carolina with four guards on the court.

"I think it almost came down to who could keep their big men in the longest there for a while," said SMU coach Dave Bliss.

Joining Koncak in double figures for the Mustangs were Carl Wright with 18, and Butch Moore with 13.

Hale and Smith led North Carolina, which is now 12-2, with 18 points each, with Martin chipping in 13 and Peterson adding 12.

Wadkins Returns To PGA Winners' Circle

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — After a year and a half lapse, Lanny Wadkins is a winner again.

And the gambling, tenacious golfer, perhaps the most aggressive player on the PGA Tour, is just getting into the most productive part of his schedule.

Following his victory over Craig Stadler on the fifth hole of a sudden-death playoff in the Bob Hope Classic Sunday, Wadkins ticked off the tournaments:

"Probably my best overall record is at Phoenix (this week's event). I've won at Riviera (the Los Angeles Open, two weeks away) and it's one of my favorite courses. And I won the PGA at Pebble Beach (the site of the Bing Crosby, in three weeks).

"I'm looking forward to that lineup," he said. "I'm looking for a big year."

"But right now, I just want to enjoy this one for a day or so."

Wadkins had to mount one of the finest comebacks in recent years to set up his 13th Tour triumph and break a non-winning string that extended back to the 1983 Tournament of Champions.

He was four shots down with five holes to play in the final round of the Hope, but caught Stadler with an eagle-par-birdie-birdie-birdie finish at the Indian Wells Country Club course.

That completed a round of 7-under-par 65 and set a tournament record of 333, a whopping 27 shots under par for this five-day event. But Stadler matched that total with a closing 66. Their closest rival, Hubert Green, finished seven strokes back, and the two went to a playoff.

The sudden death, however, wasn't so sudden. It lasted five holes with first one player, then the other appearing to have the upper hand.

"I've seen more exciting golf here than I have in three years," said Lee Trevino, serving as a television commentator. Some viewers were not so fortunate. To meet previous schedule commitments, NBC ended its live coverage everywhere but on the West Coast at the conclusion of regulation play.

Here's what the viewers missed: On the first playoff hole, Stadler stayed alive with a 15-foot par putt after catching a bunker.

On the second, Wadkins had to chip when his ball was frozen against the rough on the apron of the green, and made par.

Baker Fills Vacancies, One Slot Still Open

New East Carolina University head football Coach Art Baker has just one vacancy remaining on the Pirate staff after naming Mike O'Cain, Don Powers and Jeff Farrington to the staff.

"My goal was to try to organize the best possible staff," Baker said. "I wanted to find quality, experienced people."

"I feel like we've hired two of the top coaches in the nation in O'Cain and Powers. I feel Jeff Farrington is one of the bright young coaches today."

"I hope to fill the other position with an experienced coach. I feel that the staff will be one of the finest in the nation."

O'Cain will serve as assistant head coach and quarterback coach, helping Baker with administrative duties. He comes to ECU from Murray State where he was assistant head coach and offensive coordinator. O'Cain served at The Citadel in 1978 when Baker was head coach.

Powers will coach the defensive secondary after serving as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at Western Kentucky. Pirate fans may remember Powers from the days when ECU competed in the Southern Conference, as he was at Western Carolina for 15 seasons.

Farrington, whose defensive assignment remains undetermined, returns to East Carolina after a year as a graduate assistant at Florida State University under Bobby Bowden. Like Baker, Farrington coached at ECU during an 8-3 campaign in the 1983 season before joining the Seminole staff in 1984. Farrington played at The Citadel during Baker's tenure as head coach.

The trio joins a group of five holdovers from the final Ed Emory staff. Offensive coordinator Don Murry and defensive coordinator Tom Throckmorton remain with the Pirates, along with assistants John Zernheld, Ken Matous and Waverly Brooks.

Kosar Remains Undecided On College Grid Future

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Bernie Kosar, disputing a television claim that he will graduate from the University of Miami early so he can be eligible for the National Football League draft, says he has not decided on his "immediate future in football."

WTVJ reported Sunday that Kosar, a redshirt sophomore who threw for 3,642 yards and 25 touchdowns last season and broke a series of school records, planned to declare his eligibility two weeks before the draft, which will be held April 30.

"We confirmed it through several sources," said WTVJ sports producer Don Mariutto. "He's not leaving school. He's going to stay in school. But he's going to declare himself eligible for the NFL draft."

In the normal course of events, Kosar, who led the Hurricanes to the 1983 national college football championship, would not be eligible for the NFL draft until 1986 at the earliest, because that is when his original class will graduate.

However, NFL eligibility rules do offer an opening which Kosar or any other player in his position could take to gain eligibility ahead of time — a player whose class has not graduated may inform the NFL at least two weeks before that draft that he intends to graduate later in the year.

In that case, the NFL would inform its teams that the player is eligible for the draft, but that he may not sign with any team until he has officially graduated from school.

"There seems to be quite a few rumors circulating concerning my status at the University of Miami. I have initiated no contact with anyone, nor made any decisions, concerning my immediate future in football," Kosar said Sunday night.

McEnroe Masters Lendl For Title

NEW YORK (AP) — The end came swiftly, neatly packaged and tied with a check for $100,000. The surprise was that the end came so early and so silently that no one, not even Ivan Lendl, knew it had arrived.

But it came nonetheless, and John McEnroe captured the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships for the second consecutive year Sunday by crushing Lendl 7-5, 6-0, 6-4.

"I felt as though I could do anything I wanted with the ball," McEnroe said afterward. He wasn't bragging.

"I made a few careless mistakes, but for a 10-game period I played as well if not better than any other game I played before."

It started with a smash in the 10th game of the opening set. Three points later, McEnroe had pulled even at 5-5, the match still on serve.

But it was the start of an 11-game streak — a streak of nearly flawless tennis by the game's No. 1 player.

"He played very well," Lendl admitted. "I've seen him play well many times, too many times."

"I wish I would have made more shots. I was returning better, but I still wasn't able to break him. I was creating chances, but he always came up (with a winner). I hit a good low return, but he hit a volley on the line."

"It makes it difficult because every time he was in trouble he would come up with a really good shot."

McEnroe, who defeated Sweden's Mats Wilander in the semifinals and met Lendl in the final of this tournament at Madison Square Garden for the third straight year, capped the 10th game with his second ace of the game and fifth of the match.

Then he pulled off the first service break of the match, the final point coming when he ripped a service return cross-court for a clear winner.

"I started picking up his serve a little bit better," McEnroe said. "I attacked, and I think I caught him off guard. He was mixing it up pretty well in the beginning. He was hitting the ball hard from the ground, and it took me a little while to get adjusted to it. I felt once I got the break, things were really turning my way."

In the 12th game, during a temper tantrum, McEnroe hit himself in the eye with a tennis ball. He needed a three-minute injury timeout, but he later said the incident helped him.

"It helped me pick up my game, made me concentrate a little bit more."

The incident began just after Lendl had pulled to deuce with a forehand passing shot and McEnroe was preparing to serve the next point.

He glowered at the photographers lined alongside the court, then screamed at them. While still staring at the photographers, he bounced a ball off his racket and it hit him in his right eye.

Lendl took the next point with a backhand passing shot down the line. McEnroe pulled back to deuce.

Then the Czechoslovakian right-hander pulled ahead again with an excellent service return that McEnroe, with a half-volley, sent wide.

But the New York left-hander went to his serve again, delivering up his seventh ace of the match, gained the ad point with a smash and closed out the set when Lendl's cross-court backhand service return was just wide.

Navratilova, Maleeva In D.C. Final

WASHINGTON (AP) — All that is standing in the way of Martina Navratilova's seventh Washington championship and 100th career singles victory is 17-year-old Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria.

The two will meet tonight in the finals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Washington tennis tournament. The winner will take home $28,000 in prize money, the loser $14,000.

The top ranked player in the world for the past three years, the Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova will be seeking her 45th title since 1982. In her career, she has won more than $8 million.

On the other side of the net will be Maleeva. One month shy of her 18th birthday, she has risen from No. 154 to No. 6 in the world rankings in two years.

Coached by her mother, former Bulgarian National Champion Yulia Berberian Maleeva, Maleeva exploded on the tennis scene last year, winning five singles titles and $308,967 in prize money.

Seeded fourth here, Maleeva reached the finals after beating Kim Schaefer, Camille Benjamin, Kathy Jordan and Kathy Rinaldi.

Navratilova, despite a much harder route to the finals, has not dropped a set in beating Eleni Rossides, Carling Bassett and seeded players Helena Sukova and Zina Garrison.

On Sunday, Maleeva captured a first-set tiebreaker 9-7 to oust Rinaldi 7-6, 6-1.

Navratilova needed just 48 minutes to dispatch Garrison, the tournament's No. 7 seed in the other semifinal, 6-1, 6-2.

"I couldn't miss," said Navratilova. "For a while it didn't matter where I was aiming, it was going in. I was really moving the ball and they weren't just patty cake serves."

76ers Rally As Bullets Shoot Blanks

By The Associated Press

Once the Philadelphia 76ers got to 77, the Washington Bullets shot only blanks.

The Bullets led 91-75 late in the third quarter of their National Basketball Association game with Philadelphia on Sunday, but they were outscored 40-13 in the final 13 minutes. The 115-104 76ers victory was their 11th straight, longest winning streak in the league this season.

"To go from 16 points down and win by 11 — a 27-point turnaround in 13 minutes — was pretty impressive," said Julius Erving, who scored 21 points for Philadelphia, which is 31-6 but still trails first-place Boston by one-half game in the Atlantic Division.

Philadelphia guard Maurice Cheeks hit all nine of his shots from the field and finished with 25 points to lead all scorers.

In other NBA games, it was Detroit 121, Los Angeles Lakers 98; Milwaukee 140, Denver 116; Dallas

124, Portland 101; New Jersey 100, Houston 99 and Seattle 119, Kansas City 114.

Sedale Threatt and Erving started the Philadelphia comeback by scoring the last four points of the third quarter, cutting Washington's lead to 91-79. Then a 12-2 76er run, with Erving scoring seven points, made it 93-91.

Andrew Toney, who scored nine of his 15 points in the decisive fourth period, scored three points during a 7-0 streak that gave Philadelphia a 100-97 advantage. Then he rebounded in his own missed shot to start a 0217-b- Erving said the bus ride to Landover, Md., may have accounted 04:04 for Philadelphia's poor start.

"We had to get our ground legs after an hour and a half on the bus," Erving said. "It took us awhile to get cranked up. Then things started to shift, and everything snowballed. Washington was due a cold spell."

But he warned that if a team has a string of comeback victories, it can be counter-productive.

"If we think we can do that anytime, we're going to be blown out of the building," Erving said. "We'd like to put games in the can earlier. Let that be the habit, and this be the exception."

The Bullets, hurt in part by an injury to Cliff Robinson, folded in the final quarter, hitting just three of 23 field-goal attempts in the period. Robinson didn't play in the second half after hurting his right knee and ankle in the second quarter.

"It's obvious we need Cliff in the lineup," said Washington Coach Gene Shue. "With him we have an entirely different look, and another weapon. If we could get to full strength, we could go on a roll."

Jeff Ruland, Jeff Malone and Gus Williams scored 21 points apiece to lead Washington.

Bucks 140, Nuggets 116

Milwaukee gave Coach Don Nelson his 400th career coaching victory as Sidney Moncrief, Craig Hodges and Paul Pressey scored 21 points each in the easy triumph over Denver.

The Bucks took a 61-48 lead in the second quarter with a 13-3 spurt, and the Nuggets, who got a game-high 24 points from Alex English, couldn't get closer than 10 points in the second half.

Pistons 121, Lakers 98

Detroit manhandled Los Angeles as Isiah Thomas scored 30 points and added 20 assists to pass Earvin "Magic" Johnson for the NBA lead.

Thomas, who had 19 points by halftime, hit a jumper late in the first quarter to give the Pistons the lead for good at 23-22. Then Detroit outscored the Lakers 35-22 in the second period to take a 62-46 halftime advantage.

The Lakers got 22 points each from Johnson and Mike McGee, while Dan Roundfield added 20 points and 14 rebounds to Detroit.

Nets 100, Rockets 99

Otis Birdsong swished a 20-foot fallaway shot from the baseline with one second to go, giving New Jersey a victory over Houston, which rallied from a 19-point deficit to almost salvage the game.

The Rockets, who got 28 points and 13 rebounds from Akeem Olajuwon, trailed 68-49 midway through the third period and the Nets still had an 11-point bulge with eight minutes left. But Mitchell Wiggins scored the last six points of a 12-0 run that gave Houston its first lead at 91-90 with 5:19 remaining.

With Houston ahead 99-98, Robert Reid missed two free throws and Ralph Sampson shot an air ball in the final minute to give Birdsong a last-second chance.

Mavericks 124, Trail Blazers 101

Dale Ellis hit six of eight three-point field goal attempts and scored 27 points in Dallas' rout of Portland.

Mark Aguirre, who added 23 points for the Mavericks, scored nine points during a 19-5 run that turned a 47-45 edge into a 66-50 bulge in the third quarter. Ellis' fourth three-pointer made it 88-67 after three quarters and Dallas went on to post its eighth victory in 11 outings.

Mychal Thompson led the Trail Blazers with 24 points.

Sonics 119, Kings 114

Seattle handed Kansas City its fourth straight loss behind Gerald Henderson's career-high 31 points, including two clinching free throws in the final minute.

Ricky Sobers' layup with 58 seconds left broke a 114-114 tie, and he added a free throw 20 seconds later. Henderson's two free throws concluded the scoring with 14 seconds remaining.

Henderson was one of three Seattle regulars yanked out of the starting lineup by Coach Lenny Wilkens before Thursday night's victory over the Golden State Warriors. Tom Chambers, another returning starter, added 26 points and center Jack Sikma had 20 points and 16 rebounds.

Forward Eddie Johnson led the Kings with 23 points.

NCAA Delivers Message With Gators

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The NCAA has delivered a message loud and clear to the nation's football coaches — the penalty for violating the rules is going to be a stiff one from now on with no leniency and no plea bargaining.

Like some hanging judge of the Old West, the policy-making NCAA Council sounded its warning Sunday by overwhelmingly upholding a three-year probation against the University of Florida, which included the stiffest penalty in the history of college football — a reduction in total scholarships from 95 to 85 this year and then to 75 in 1986. Florida also was limited to a maximum of 20 scholarships rather than the accustomed 30 in both years.

The vote to reject Florida's appeal reportedly was 43-0, with one abstention — Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn University, secretary of the Southeastern Conference, who had written the Council on behalf of the SEC supporting Florida's appeal for a reduction of the penalty. Bailey's letter called the limitation in total scholarships "unduly severe."

The Council, Florida's court of last resort within the NCAA, wasn't listening.

"Florida just came up at the wrong time," a Council member, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press. The source said there was even some sentiment to chop Florida to 65 scholarships — five less than permitted in Division I-AA — and then revert to 85-75 to make the university's president, Marshall M. Criser, "look good" for cooperating with the NCAA.

"We got their attention," the source said, referring to the nation's coaches. Indeed, the Ethics Committee of the American Football Coaches Association, through its chairman, Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor, delivered a letter Saturday to NCAA President John Toner supporting cuts in total scholarships as a method of punishment.

"It's harsh, but that's the only way to hurt a program — at both ends," said Vince Dooley, head coach and athletic director at the University of Georgia and president of the AFCA. Ironically, Georgia also is on probation — without bowl and television sanctions, however — and is limited to 23 scholarships in each of the next two years, plus a total of 90 in 1985 and 87 in 1986.

While Toner termed the Florida situation "among the most serious infractions cases ever processed by the NCAA," S. David Berst, the NCAA's director of enforcement, said it was "not the most severe case or the most severe violations."

There was no question, however, that the NCAA has decided to adopt a get-tough policy as a deterrent to future violations among its member schools.

Although there have been instances of longer probations and there was a case of a school being expelled from the NCAA for the severity of its violations in basketball, Florida became the first school to suffer a reduction in the permissible total of 95 football scholarships.

The probation also prohibits Florida from postseason play — Florida was banned by the SEC from going to a bowl game after winning the championship last season — or appearing on live television for at least two years. The third year will be suspended if the university's athletic program passes NCAA inspection.

Criser said he was "particularly disheartened" by the imposition of the 85-75 limitations, but added, "The University of Florida will pursue no judicial appeal in this case."

In Gainesville, Fla., Coach Galen Hall told The AP:

"With the things we did to cooperate with the NCAA, we're very disappointed there was no relief. But we're relieved everything's over and we're looking to the future. We've faced adversity before and we're looking to overcome it in the future."

Criser indicated he thought the NCAA might be trying to destroy Florida's program and force the Gators to rebuild to their present level — a 9-1-1 record in 1984 and a third-place finish in The Associated Press poll, their highest ever.

"Past sanctions (the normal penalty has been two years) were not sufficient because of our won-lost record," he said. "Despite the fact that we stand to lose millions of dollars, have been publicly embarrassed and placed on probation, they determined that was not sufficient."

Edwin Moses Arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man identified as Olympic track hero Edwin Moses has been booked for investigation of soliciting a policewoman for prostitution, police said.

Edwin Corley Moses was arrested early Sunday morning during a Hollywood prostitution sweep, said Sgt. David Young of the Hollywood Division.

A very small amount of marijuana also was found in Moses' car, said police Cmdr. William Booth, but he said Moses would not be booked for that, commenting, "He's been booked for all he's going to be booked for."

Young said the arresting officers and others at the police station confirmed the man was the track star. The man's description and date of birth were identical to Moses'.

"It's him," Young said. "The arresting officers recognized him."

A recording answered the telephone at Moses' home, where a message was left seeking comment.

Soliciting an act of prostitution is a misdemeanor that carries a $500 fine and-or six months in jail.

Moses, 28, has long been the dominant 400-meter hurdler in the world. He won his second Olympic gold medal at the Los Angeles Games this summer after having captured his first in 1976 at Montreal.

His victory in the 1984 Olympic final was the 102nd consecutive race he'd won, and Moses has not lost in more than seven years.

The world record holder in his specialty at 47.02 seconds, Moses received the Sullivan Award in 1983 as the nation's top amateur athlete. He received additional honors after his Olympic success this summer.

Moses, who is married and lives in Laguna Beach, a seaside community some 40 miles south of Los Angeles, previously has spoken out against other athletes who used steroids and other drugs.

He also is considered one of track and field's leaders in gaining financial rights for the athletes. One of the highest-paid performers himself, Moses reportedly figured to make almost $1 million during 1984.

NFL Salaries

DALLAS (AP) — The top 1984 salaries by position for National Football League players, according to a listing published Sunday by the Dallas Morning News.

Figures reflect 1984 base salary, reporting and roster bonuses and signing bonuses pro-rated over the length of the contract. For example, Detroit's Billy Sims signed a 5-year contract with a $1 million bonus. His 1984 salary was $600,000, his pro-rated signing bonus is $200,000 a year. In the listing, his salary is listed at $800,000. Many of the contracts contain large sums of deferred money, which reduces the present value.

Knight Promotes Banning Coaches Who Break Rules

CHICAGO (AP) — Fiery Indiana basketball Coach Bobby Knight said start reporting high school coaches who accept payments for peddling their star players, he said.

The executive director of the NCAA, Walter Byers, recently estimated that 30 percent of Division I schools violate recruiting rules.

Knight refused to single out schools or individuals, but said he is sure his sources provided him with correct information. Knight said his sources include players he has recruited, other coaches and former Indiana players who have played professional basketball.

"I operate under the basic premise that I doubt I'll ever be able to prove anything," Knight said. "When I'm ready, I'll name names through the NCAA."

The Indiana coach said college recruits who accept illegal payments experience a moral decline and eventually start taking their education lightly.

"Instead of concrete courses, he takes Mickey Mouse courses," Knight said. "He starts cutting class."

"Pretty soon, you have a decent kid who was a pretty good student who is now trying only to be eligible to play, instead of going after a degree."

Knight has been coaching for 23 years and said he has a sales pitch of his own for teen-age prospects offered attractive financial packages at other schools.

"I tell him not to let anyone buy a piece of his soul," Knight said.

Superstations Ham Baseball

ATLANTA (AP) — Commissioner Peter Ueberroth sees as the most serious issue facing major league baseball the cable television superstations which he says are "tearing baseball apart."

Cable mogul Ted Turner, who also owns the Atlanta Braves, labels the question "a non-issue as far as I'm concerned."

Chuck Adams of the commissioner's office in New York, however, said the issue is far from dead.

"The commissioner has certainly been talking to the owners (about the situation)," Adams said in a recent telephone interview.

Turner owns WTBS-TV, one of four superstations whose signals are carried via satellite to cable systems across the country. The others are WGN in Chicago, owned by the Chicago Tribune Newspapers, which also owns the Cubs; WOR, an independently owned station that carries the New York Mets on cable; and WPIX, also independently owned, which televises the games of the New York Yankees.

A majority of the baseball owners, at their December winter meetings in Houston, agreed that superstation-broadcasts of games were creating a problem and approved a resolution to arrive at a solution.

Ueberroth took over for Bowie Kuhn as baseball's sixth commissioner on Oct. 1. One of his first acts in office was to discuss what he described as the declining financial state of the game, blaming it largely on superstation TV broadcasts of games.

"It's nobody's fault, but they're here and they're a very strong element in our society," Ueberroth said at the winter meetings. "But they hurt baseball a great deal."

Ueberroth said the superstation telecasts were basically unfair to an owner who has a team, fans and a certain area to promote. "The superstation comes into that area and achieves higher ratings than the local club on television. It is a basic unfairness and it's tearing baseball apart," he said.

"The second problem with superstations is that they're affecting attendance negatively on all levels.

"The third thing I hate most of all is their saturation. The networks tell me with the saturation, when the present contract is done (1989), television revenues will come down. If there is a sharp drop in revenues from any source in baseball, we're going to be in some real serious trouble."

Turner, however, in an interview last week, disagreed that the superstations had a negative effect on the game, and said there was no correlation between cable telecasts of games into another team's area and lower attendance.

"I never agreed with that. There are no studies to put any proof in that," Turner said. "Baseball attendance until last year has risen every year ... You'll notice the commissioner hasn't said anything about it lately."

Turner said several meetings have been held between the commissioner and owners on the issue and a decision will be reached soon.

He said he did not know when the decision would be announced, adding, "Ask the commissioner."

"There is no word when the commissioner will have an announcement on the problem," Adams said.

Attendance in both the National and American leagues was off last year, for the first time in a decade, by more than 800,000, and Ueberroth said the proliferation of games on TV had contributed.

Major league attendance in 1984 was 44,539,157, down from the 45,540,338 in 1983. National League attendance was down by 771,285 in 1984 from the year before while the American League was off by only 29,896.

Three of the superstations televise National League games.

Physics Makes Ball Fly, Not Montana

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — People think Joe Montana's fantastic arm keeps those breathtaking passes aloft, but football physicists know it's really Bernoulli's principle of aerodynamics.

At least, that's what about 100 people learned Sunday at San Francisco's Exploratorium when they showed up for a "physics of football" lecture.

Caltech physicist Tom Humphrey used a hair dryer, a pingpong ball and a bicycle wheel to demonstrate what the San Francisco 49ers must do to beat the Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl XIX.

The pingpong ball's dance on the hair dryer's airstream demonstrates Bernoulli's principle of aerodynamics — which explains why Montana's passes escape interception, he said.

The stream of air under a moving football gives it lift, all the way to the receiver. Montana also ought to strive for spiral passes, Humphrey suggested, as he showed that a bicycle wheel is more stable when spinning than at rest.

"The bicycle wheel and the football are just two different kinds of gyroscopes," Humphrey said. "The football rotates in the direction of the force. A ball going end-over-end has four times the drag of a ball spinning around."

For those impressed by statistics, Humphrey offered these: football players tackle each other with a force of 2,000 pounds; they kick the ball with a force of 300 pounds; and they pass with a force of 35 pounds.

The football is "the most unusually shaped projectile used in any sport," Humphrey remarked. "There are a lot of forces acting on a football. Ellipsoidal rotation. Lift. Drag.

"Basically," he concluded, "you really can't expect a football to do anything you expect it to do."

Joseph Leaves Georgia Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Center Yvon Joseph, who left the Georgia Tech basketball team to visit his seriously ill mother in Haiti, will not be back in time for tonight's game against UNC-Charlotte, according to Coach Bobby Cremins.

He probably also will miss Thursday's game against Monmouth College.

Joseph's mother, Byamaire Joseph, has a serious heart ailment which worsened last week.

"This has been on Yvon's mind the past couple of days," Cremins said. "He should be with his mother. That is what's important. He will return to us as soon as possible."

Starting in place of Joseph for the 10-3 Yellow Jackets will be his backup, 7-foot freshman Antoine Ford.

Far-Fetched TV Thriller Questions Vigilantism

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If Orson Welles' classic "Citizen Kane" was one of the best movies ever, then ABC's "The Hearst and Davies Affair" is one of the worst. Not even publisher William Randolph Hearst's yellow newspapers could have found anything nice to say about tonight's dreadful clunker.

Tonight's competing movie, NBC's "The Execution," is a much better choice. It's about five California women who plot the death of a former Nazi doctor who tortured and abused them 30 years before. Although slightly far-fetched, it's an engrossing thriller that generates some of the same questions about vigilantism that the Bernhard Goetz subway shootings in New York City are now raising.

ABC seems to lust after True Confession tales about romance among the beautiful and powerful people ("Malibu" and the upcoming "Hollywood Wives"), and the third-rated network is at it again with the scandalous affair between Hearst (Robert Mitchum) and Marion Davies (Virginia Madsen), the chorus girl he made into a movie star.

In this film, which ABC says is based "on historical records," Hearst, the one-time presidential aspirant whose wife would never give him a divorce, gets to utter the memorable line: "I'm gonna make you a star." He does it by buying a movie studio and spoon-feeding Miss Davies the plum roles.

Hearst, more than 30 years her elder, lives by one morality and foists another on America. He cuts out a kissing scene from one of Miss Davies' films because he said it made her seem cheap. Her movies seem to get only rave reviews in his papers.

Mitchum continues to sleepwalk through the twilight of his career. He turns the power-hungry Hearst into a wounded wimp. What was supposed to be the romance of the century is emotionally unconvincing. For the amount of passion on the screen, Miss Davies, who calls him "W.R." or "Chief," could just as easily have been Hearst's dutiful, old-maid secretary.

The film opens with one of the most stilted scenes ever. It's 1937 and Hearst is $126 million in debt. The lovebirds, having been together for two decades, are in Hearst's mansion in San Simeon, and he wonders whether she wants to end their liaison. No, she says. "It's been one terrific ride."

The rest of the film is all flashback, or, more to the point, slow death. It doesn't even capture the period. The Roaring '20s seem as tired as Mitchum.

It's too bad the moviemakers weren't able to deliver on the philosophy Hearst offers to his reporters and editors: "Just keep the stories exciting. We're not selling the telephone book."

Anybody reading the New York papers knows about Bernhard Goetz, whose alleged shooting of four youths who asked him for money touched off a firestorm of debate.

"The Execution" also ponders the morality of people overruling a justice system they feel is not working properly. When the film, based on a book by Oliver Crawford, was being made last year, NBC demanded it express a viewpoint that vigilantism is immoral. Given the current attention to this issue, NBC must be relieved that the prosecutor in the film is unbending in his characterization of the women as criminals. The public, of course, applauds their action.

The women, played with conviction and credibility by Loretta Swit, Valerie Harper, Jessica Walter, Barbara Barrie and Sandy Dennis, are concentration camp survivors who meet weekly for a game of mah-jongg. Their emotional bond is that they all were sexually abused by a former Nazi doctor.

Beyond the psychological scars, none of the women can have children. Their thoughts turn to revenge when they spot someone they believe is their former tormentor on a TV show. The man, played with a simmering sadism beneath his smooth veneer by Rip Torn, has become a successful restaurateur in Malibu.

To confirm his suspected identity, Marysia (Miss Swit) agrees to seduce him and check for a recollected scar on his shoulder. The restaurateur is indeed the ex-Nazi, and the women conspire to kill him. The ex-Nazi had served 18 months in prison for his participation in 5,450 murders, and the movie points out that he couldn't be tried again, thus creating the need for surrogate justice.

Teen Hacker Helps Police Crack Electronic Diary

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Peter Leppik, a 15-year-old hacker who helped police crack a sex offender's electronic diary, says he's agreed to study 50 software discs belonging to a man police say sexually abused young boys and described the acts in a computer.

Police said it took Leppik less than an hour Saturday to bypass a 37-year-old computer programmer's secret computer code that had baffled authorities for a month, resulting in the suspect's arrest.

Police turned to Leppik for help because they had been asked to investigate his software entry into the computer files of a local bank. He said Sunday the breach of the bank's files was accidental.

On Saturday, Bob Huber, the police department's computer coordinator, arranged for Leppik to use a computer at an electronics store to try his hand at cracking the code.

They traced it to our family phone, and complained to the Minneapolis police," he recalled.

He said police investigated about a week, "and when they found I didn't do anything wrong they just dropped it."

A Little Tip-sy

The tilt of the Leaning Tower of Pisa increased only two one-hundredths of an inch in 1984, the smallest increase in many years. The 179-foot tower has only eight stories. The ground beneath it began sinking after the third story was completed. The Eiffel Tower is usually 984 feet high, but its height can vary as much as 6 inches depending on the temperature. Another European landmark, the Tower of London, has served as a mint, a prison, a palace and even a zoo.

Service Held For Director

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a memorial service for director Sam Peckinpah, the master of cinematic violence, actress Ali MacGraw recalled how he "absolutely demanded the best" and actor James Coburn said working with him was an adventure.

Peckinpah, 59, who raised violence to new levels in movies like "The Wild Bunch" and "Straw Dogs," died Dec. 28 in Mexico of heart failure. In the new Hollywood tradition, his friends gathered Sunday, but not in mourning.

"Working with Sam was an adventure," said Coburn, who appeared in "Cross of Iron" and "Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid." He said, "Sam took me by the hand to the cliff, pushed me over the abyss and then jumped in after me."

"He was difficult sometimes, but never, I thought, without reason," said Miss MacGraw, who appeared in "The Getaway" and "Convoy." "He absolutely demanded the best, and you weren't going to get away with anything less."

About 350 people attended the ceremony at the Directors Guild Theater, where actor Lee Marvin quoted the Bible: "I have fought a good fight. I have followed the course. I have kept the faith."

Film clips were shown from "Ride the High Country," "The Wild Bunch" and "Junior Bonner," and Kris Kristofferson, who appeared in "Convoy," sang and played a rather ribald song he had written in Peckinpah's honor.

CRYPTOQUIP 1-14

NVI VSLWT UHU RTVO: "H RTHJO NWIA LNA RVSJ!"

Saturday's Cryptoquip — DID CLEAR AUTHOR OF THE PONCE DE LEON STORY USE FOUNTAIN PEN OF YOUTH?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: R equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 15, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Early morning changes can actually work out to your advantage since they are followed by an opportunity to use your ingenuity to adopt a new improved course of action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get that new plan formulated so that you can handle all of your business affairs much better.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have reached a stalemate with an associate so compromise is the only answer to save the relationship.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) An inspired thought early can help to make daily routines much better and easier, so utilize it, and become more productive.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be more willing to go along with the ideas of a friend even though you had made other plans for entertainment.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Study the conditions at home and figure out how best to improve them with the assistance of family ties.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Guard against an accident or argument in the morning, and then you will be able to enjoy congenials.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sure not to be pushed into some situation you do not like in the morning, and later you have better judgment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You feel inclined to make radical changes where personal relationships are concerned, but this would only make matters worse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You feel frustrated and want to upset the appeacart in the morning, but keep cool and after lunch all works out better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do not go along with that financial idea which a friend offers you since it could lead to trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day to get into ventures that are full of risk, so keep busy at safe routines. Show that you are altruistic.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't permit some worrisome matter to keep you from making the contacts that can bring you greater success.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will possess great magnetism and have strength of purpose and not be easily swayed by others. Teach to listen carefully to others before reaching a decision, because once the mind is made up, nothing can change it. One who could do well at handling money.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A10 ♥KQ6 ♦QJ87 ♣J654
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Normally, with good three-card trump support and a ruffing value we would suggest that you raise partner's major suit. Here, however, your points are largely "soft," i.e., queens and jacks, so we suggest the less-encouraging rebid of one no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK83 ♥6 ♦KQJ7 ♣Q1072
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1 ♦ Pass Pass 1 ♥ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—There is no question about who has the best hand at the table — you do. Partner should have a fair hand to reopen at this vulnerability, so we would not fault a leap to three no trump. However, we don't want to hang partner for refusing to sell out to the opponents at the one-level, so we prefer the more conservative jump to two no trump.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q65 ♥K952 ♦J9873 ♣6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 1 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—It looks as if your side has a partial misfit. Since you have a minimum hand and partner's rebid was not forcing, there is no reason why you should take another bid. Pass, while you are still at a level and in a strain you can handle.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠5 ♥AK873 ♦AK83 ♣A72
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Dble ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have a very good hand indeed, and you have to advise partner of this fact. Redouble. Partner's spade response has raised the possibility of a misfit, and your best score could come from doubling the opponents. Your action keeps that option open.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠95 ♥Q854 ♦KQ763 ♣72
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Dble Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner must have a pretty good hand to force you to bid at the three-level in the face of two opponents who are both in the auction. With his double, partner has guaranteed four hearts, so you should certainly bid your major suit rather than your minor. As a matter of fact, we would not run you out of town if you chose to jump to four hearts, although we prefer to give partner some leeway by bidding three hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠65 ♥AQ82 ♦AK1073 ♣KQ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—With 18 points in high cards, distributional features and an excellent four-card fit for partner's suit, you certainly want to be in game. The way to tell partner of your desire is simple — jump to four hearts.

Train Fire Kills Scores

BHERAMARA, Bangladesh (AP) — Local officials estimated today that between 150 and 300 people died in a fire that burned for a half hour in three cars of a crowded express train, but the government said it has confirmed only 27 deaths.

The fire started from a short-circuit in the mail van Sunday morning just after the Samanta Express left Puradaha station and spread to the other two coaches, railway sources and witnesses said. The three cars were crammed with 500 passengers, said a local correspondent for the mass circulation Bengali-language newspaper It-tefaq.

The train stopped about a quarter-mile from Bheramara, in the Kushtia district, 155 miles north of the capital, Dhaka.

Railway sources said the exit doors of the packed passenger compartments were almost totally blocked by sacks of clothing carried by traders, and the fabric may have helped spread the blaze.

Gasoline Prices Hit Five-Year Low

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline has dipped to its lowest price in five years, and an industry analyst says the average price for all grades of the fuel could dip another 21 cents to 94 cents a gallon.

The cheapest grade of gasoline, leaded self-serve regular, hit $1.024 last week for the first time since December 1979, when it was $1.013, petroleum industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

Prices at the pump dropped 5 cents a gallon over the past four months.
