REST HOME FIRE — Ayden Rescue Squad members Penny Skinner and Carolyn Jones move resident Lovella Powell in a hallway of the rest home away from a wind that was damaged by fire early this morning. Residents Escape

Fire Strikes Rest Home

GRIFTON — A fire in a lounge area of the Grifton Rest Home about 4:30 a.m. today, disturbed the more than 70 residents, who were crowded into one section of the building until the blaze was extinguished and smoke cleared from the area where the fire was located.

Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner said two people — one resident and an employee trying to help residents from the building — were treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for smoke inhalation. Other residents were examined by doctors at the scene, he said.

Andy McDougald of New Bern, the rest home's owner, said the domiciliary care facility was back in service about 8:30 a.m. today although he said 27 residents had been moved to the Carolina Care rest home in Greenville until the damage caused by the fire can be repaired.

Joyner and McDougald both said the fire was confined to a lounge area at one end of the rest home. "It was not a bad fire" and did not involve any patient rooms, McDougald said.

Joyner noted that four fire walls separated the blaze from the section where residents were gathered at the other end of the facility during the fire. He said officials felt it was safer to keep the residents inside, rather than send them out into the pre-dawn cold.

McDougald said he had no estimate of the damage to the building, but Joyner said the damage might run as high as $20,000 to $30,000.

McDougald said he thought the fire may have started when a patient dropped a cigarette on the floor in the lounge.

Firemen from Grifton and Ayden helped fight the fire, and equipment, including smoke ejectors to clear smoke from the rest home, was sent to Grifton from the Winterville and Eastern Pine fire departments, Joyner said.

Chilling Weather Brings Record Call For Electricity

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The stiff winds and falling temperatures that chilled Pitt County this morning resulted in the season's highest demand for electricity recorded by Greenville Utilities.

"We had the highest demand this morning we have had all winter," said Malcolm Green, superintendent of the Greenville Utilities electrical department. "In fact, it is the highest I remember seeing in the wintertime."

"The demand this morning was equal to the load last July," the superintendent added. "It is unheard of for wintertime loads to be as high as summertime loads."

"Because it was so cold yesterday and the wind was blowing so hard, the houses didn't retain heat," Green stated.

The large demand caused only one minor problem this morning, when several customers on Wesley Road in Lyncdale were without power for about 30 minutes, Green said.

The load management equipment was operated today, he said, in order to help customers save on their electricity bills.

According to figures provided by the Greenville Utilities Water Plant, the highest temperature reached Tuesday was 40 degrees and the low temperature was recorded at 22 degrees. The temperature was 21 degrees this morning at 7 a.m.

Jim Woods, WNCT-TV weatherman, said winds gusted from the northwest at 10 to 20 mph throughout the day Tuesday. Temperatures felt much colder when the wind was taken into consideration.

According to Woods, the chill factor made the temperature fall to 16 degrees at 6 a.m. and noon. The chill factor was 12 degrees at 6 p.m., and at 11 p.m., the temperature was 4 degrees with the chill factor.

There was no rainfall recorded at the Water Plant and the river level was a normal 4.1 feet.

Annexation Bids Given Approval

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday unanimously approved for recommendation to City Council two annexation requests.

Receiving approval were requests by owners of Tucker Estates to annex 7.57 acres located to the west of Tucker Drive, along Minnette Place, and Jeff Farrell and Bill Clark to annex a 5.19 acre portion of Lyncdale Townes, located to the south of Red Banks Road Extension. Both these properties adjoin land included in the Greenville city limits.

According to the city Planning Department, property involved in the Tucker Estates request has been subdivided into 18 lots suitable for single-family development. Annexation of the area, a planning representative said, would generate $1,180 in annual expenses for the city and would bring in an estimated $11,065 in revenues on a yearly basis.

Annexation of Lyncdale Townes property would incur annual expenses of $1,070 and revenues of $18,809. This annexation request, planning representatives said, involves one-half of Lyncdale Townes property. The other half has already been annexed.

Trustees Agree For Hospital To Serve As Emergency Center

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees voted Tuesday night to accept the state's designation of the hospital emergency department as a Level 1 Trauma Center.

The only other Level 1's — emergency departments documented to be equipped for dealing with the most extreme emergencies — in North Carolina are those of Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem, N.C. Memorial in Chapel Hill, and Duke University Medical Center in Durham.

The emergency department-trauma center will be opened soon, with an open house set for Jan. 27 from 2 to 5 p.m.

In discussion of the emergency room and how it should serve the public, trustee Frank Longino said he feels every patient should be seen by a doctor or nurse within 30 seconds after he or she comes in. Then record-taking can follow. Another trustee said he believes that every patient in the emergency room having to wait for service should be checked every five to 10 minutes. The trustees heard an extensive overview and update on the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals requirements. The hospital will be judged by the JCAH in the early spring. Presenters were Jim Cheatham, Dr. Lee West, Fred Brown and Buck Sitterton.

It was announced that the County Commissioners have reappointed J. Reid Hooper, Bernice Turnage, B. Gene Paramore and Norma VanVeld to the hospital board and has sent a letter of appreciation to Ms. Henry C. Humphreys Jr., who resigned late last year.

Noel Lee, Norma VanVeld and Arlee Griffith were appointed a nominating committee for board officers to be voted on in March. Lee is chairman of the committee.

Medical staff bylaw changes were approved, following considerable discussion. Trustee Joe Parker questioned whether courtesy staff privileges should be reserved only to residents of Pitt County, as the new bylaws propose. Trustee Brenda Sumner questioned the workability of the composition of the committee that would choose the chief-of-staff and the chief-of-staff elect — past chiefs of staff. "What if one dies or moves to Florida?" she asked. She also questioned the clarity of another section. Approval was given, with suggestion that the clarifications requested by Ms. Sumner be looked at by the medical staff.

Fitness Program Tailored To Needs Of The Elderly

By SHIRLEY COLLINS
Bethlehem Globe Times
BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Betty Switkes says, unabashedly, her career is part physical therapy and part show business.

Recently, Ms. Switkes, the developer of "Armchair Fitness," showed just how much theatrics counts. With infectious ebullience, she got a roomful of physical therapists and Leader II Rehabilitation Center residents to waltz gaily by sweeping their arms rhythmically through the air.

There's no dearth of exercise programs for the elderly or handicapped. What makes this one different, Ms. Switkes says, is attitude. "I don't say, 'Do it 25 times.' I say, 'Do it a little.'"

Dressed in a pale green sweatsuit with lavender cotton slippers, Ms. Switkes comes on like a favorite aunt about to feed you an ice cream cone.

"Ideas about fitness have changed drastically," she told the group. "They used to say if you're over 60, you belong to the metallic generation. That means, if you've got gold in your teeth, and silver in your hair, it's OK to have lead in your pants. Well, that's not true."

"Now (turning on the cassette player to soft, delicate music) start slowly, easily, with your finger tips on your shoulders. Now reach your arms up in the air and stretch like a cat — or like a baby."

Large parts of the half hour were taken up with twiddling thumbs — and first, second, third and fourth fingers, a challenge to those with arthritis.

But there were bends for the back, and lifts for the legs and twists for the waist.

"Now with the shoulders. This is your waist. You want a tiny waist like Scarlett O'Hara. Does that date me? I don't care."

At one point as she positions her hands to pull up her knee in the leg lift, Ms. Switkes confides smilingly, "We allow cheating. Pull it up. This class gives an A for cheating."

She developed the program for the Manor Healthcare Corp., based in Silver Springs, Md. The exercise instructions come in a bright-colored package containing an audio cassette and a spiral-bound book, now available to the general public.

Ms. Switkes, a graduate of George Washington University, has attended courses in anatomy, kinesiology and the relationship of exercise to body dynamics. Between 1976 and 1980 she served as assistant to the executive director of the National Council of Senior Citizens. She's been a consultant to Manor Healthcare Corp. for four years.

Even in special settings such as nursing homes, she said, there is usually one person who can't do the exercises and ends up leaving. "That person who had to leave is the one I'm interested in," she said.

Yvonne Malloy, activities director for Leader II in Bethlehem, said they usually had 15 in the exercise group.

"Right from the start I liked the program," she said. "I think her choice is good — the idea of a dance, instead of just pull and jerk."

The elderly participants obviously thought so, too. Some with bright yellow T-shirts inscribed "Armchair Fitness" over their other clothes, some with the T-shirts just laid across their laps, they enthusiastically followed the motions of the leader at the front of the room.

Selma Levin is a 90-year-old resident who doesn't look her age and says she doesn't act it either. She reports going "off and on" to the exercise sessions and enjoying the fact that "I'm able to do them."

Madeline Meisel was smiling through the whole program, as she concentrated on the rhythmic motions. Afterward, she said she'd been doing the armchair exercises three times a week ever since they were introduced at Leader.

"I feel so much freer. I find I can do more. I think they do wonders here," she said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Romance Stalls When Mom Sets Ground Rules

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a very pretty, popular, 15-year-old girl I'll call Lucy. She's an honor student and has never been in any kind of trouble. Her father and I had a rule that she couldn't go steady until she reached 16.

Well, Lucy met a boy, 16, from another high school, and they really fell for each other. He asked her to go steady and she said yes. Two days later he came to meet us, and I decided to set the "ground rules." I thought if he knew the rules in advance he might not put any pressure on Lucy.

I told him they must be off the phone by 9 p.m. on school nights as she had to be up at 6, at school at 7, and she needs her rest. I told him she didn't drink, that I didn't care if he drank, but he was not to drink when he was with her. I told him that he should go out with his girlfriends and Lucy would go with her girlfriends—that they shouldn't be constant companions. End of conversation. Well, he immediately got up and left—mad.

The next night they had plans to see a movie. He called Lucy to say he would pick her up, but he wouldn't come inside the house. She felt bad. I told her to explain that we love her and are interested in her well-being. Well, he thinks I don't like him and that's not true.

He didn't call Lucy all week and she was heartbroken. She finally called him and asked what was wrong. He said he wanted to break up because he hadn't felt comfortable since meeting her mom. She hung up the phone in tears and went to bed.

Abby, I feel so guilty. Was I wrong to set the ground rules on our first meeting? Or did I just handle it wrong? How should I handle situations like this in the future? Lucy has been very cool to me, and I haven't slept in a week.

WELL-MEANING MOM

DEAR MOM: Setting the ground rules is an excellent idea, but you should have discussed them with your daughter privately, and asked her to convey them to the boy.

From your description of the ground-rules briefing, you must have come off like a drill sergeant barking orders. The boy can't be blamed for wanting to break up with your daughter.

Well-meaning or not, you blew it, Mom. Apologize to Lucy and promise you will never repeat that performance again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and his two sisters (all married with children) had a studio portrait taken of just the three of them for their parents' Christmas gift this year. Spouses and grandchildren were not included.

Why am I angry?

SEEING RED

DEAR SEEING: Don't assume that because "someone" decided to eliminate spouses and children from the family photograph that you are less valued by your in-laws. It's not necessarily so. Find out who made that decision before allowing negative feelings to develop. Get the picture?

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

At Wits End

By Erna Bombeck

For the last 20 years or so, I have not been able to digest my food and complete a sentence at the same time.

After I eat my lunch, it's all over. I hit the chenille.

I didn't say anything about it for a long time as I figured God was punishing me for eating a big lunch. Now it seems that the problem has reached national proportions and is being studied to find out why. Even people who worked the night shift and took lunch at 2 a.m. were knocked out two hours later.

After all, we don't nod off after we eat breakfast, so why do we do it after lunch? A team of researchers in England is at work to find a solution.

You have no idea what this public concern has done for my marriage. For years, my husband told me naps were nothing more than a habit. I really didn't need them. It was just something to do because I was bored.

I used to lie and cheat to cover up my habit. When he noticed chenille marks on my face, I told him it was bad skin. When the children would yell through the locked door, "Mama, are you asleep?" I told them I was wrapping their Christmas present. (They weren't swift. They never questioned it. Not even in July.)

For years, I ran my home like a Mexican gift shop. At noon I closed the doors (if it was summer), pulled the draperies and pillowed out until about 2 in the afternoon.

Now it seems I was years ahead of my time. They're discovering alertness and efficiency are at their lowest ebb after lunch. Meter readers make errors. Locomotive drivers fall asleep. Executives cannot believe what they dictated after lunch, come the next morning.

My husband comes from the new school of thought that exercise cures everything from a cold sore to a broken leg. The other afternoon as I heated up the coffee to get my heart beating again, he said, "If you had simply run two or three miles after lunch, you would have felt just as rested and refreshed as the nap you just took."

I said, "How dare you talk like that to me — a statistic? You're not dealing with some neurotic. This is a bona fide research area. Scientists are working day and night trying to find a cure for the Post-Lunch Syndrome and you suggest a cockamamie remedy like physical activity. I could actually hurt myself with amateur advice and not know it. I told you years ago I had this medical problem and you wouldn't believe me. Now sit back and watch the experts work."

Yesterday at the breakfast table he said, "Well, it seems they found a cure for Post-Lunch Syndrome."

"I knew it!" I said. "They wouldn't let millions of victims sack out each afternoon, bringing this country to its productive knees. What does it say?"

"Skip lunch," he said. Sometimes they jump the gun on these things. It's better to wait for a second option.

Insect-eating bats may eat 12 insects a minute, and as many as 3,000 insects a night. A large bat colony may consume billions of insects in one evening.

Medical Databank Under Consideration Outposts

Confirmation that North Carolina rural hospitals are suffering financially and some face eventual shutdowns can only be bad news for everybody. The Warren County Hospital was identified as one of them, and we know too well a number of the small medical institutions in eastern North Carolina have to be similarly hurting.

A visitor familiar with the high level of activity displayed in lobbies of hospitals in large population centers is always initially pleased by the hush and calm, the uncluttered corridors and empty parking spaces so obvious at many small hospitals. Those are attractive assets. They are also warning signals that all is not well.

They are symptoms of malaise. Too many small hospitals serving largely rural and sparsely populated areas bear those earmarks. The State Department of Human Resources knows better than we just how prevalent the condition really is across North Carolina.

These small hospitals have a large role to play in their communities. They can and do provide urgent and primary care. They are invaluable outposts in the state's system of health care for all its people.

Those outposts must be maintained because too often the large medical institutions are miles and miles away from the scene of immediate need.

Somehow the Council of State must devise a salvage operation (and presumably finance it). Another remedial proposal has been put forth: convincing large hospitals near rural areas to adopt the small institutions as "satellite facilities."

It makes sense. Our large medical centers in North Carolina are continuing to grow; but even their most ardent supporters know active and prospering small hospitals are essential elements of good health care in our state and to its people.

RALEIGH — If you're an employer paying the ever-rising costs of employee health insurance, you know that it is next to impossible to get good information as to why the bill keeps going up. A legislative study commission is looking at a way to improve the flow of information about medical costs and if it works the way it is designed, it could affect almost every health insurance policy in the state.

The Medical Cost Containment Study Commission is proposing creation of a statewide computerized databank of hospital records. Under the proposal, the records of every hospital patient in North Carolina would be sent to Raleigh for inclusion in the databank. Patient names would not be maintained, only information about the medical procedures and costs.

It's hoped that the information could then be used by employers to design health insurance policies that would help keep their costs down.

Several lobbyists who've been watching the proposal take shape said they saw two scenarios under which an employer could save money.

An employer would be able to tap the databank for the actual medical experiences of his employees. (Not by name, only in data form.) He might find, for example, that his employees are using an unusual amount of emergency room services for non-emergencies and that the cost of these services is the reason for his rapidly increasing rates.

With that information, the employer might want to change his health plan. He might make employees pay a greater portion of the cost when they take their children to the emergency room for some ailment like a cold or the flu. Or, he might pay a greater portion of the bill when his employees took that same child to a much less expensive doctor's office.

The databank might also help employers identify the more expensive hospitals and doctors that their employees are using. Analysis of the information might show that the county hospital is far less expensive for maternity stays than is the private hospital and vice versa for another procedure. He could then write into his policy incentives to use the lower cost facilities.

The databank proposal will have its problems with the Legislature. First, proponents of the idea will have to guarantee skeptics of the privacy of individual health records. An employer does not have a right to the personal medical histories of his employees.

Also, the databank concentrates on hospital use and does not include services rendered in doctors' offices or clinics. Since hospital use represents a shrinking share of medical costs, the ultimate effectiveness of the databank may come under question.

The cost to the state will have to be debated. The estimate being bandied about is $450,000 to operate the databank during the first year.

Finally, there is a turf fight under way. The state Department of Human Resources currently collects some of this information and argued that any databank should be housed in DHR. Businessmen appearing before the commission sound skeptical of the state's ability to analyze the information in a meaningful way. Some would prefer a separate agency which administered the program and had private consultants analyze the data. Then there are those who look at the work Blue Cross Blue Shield has done with some of its major clients and they argue that the whole databank-idea should be left for the private sector to operate.

As usual when medical cost reductions are being discussed, a great many forces begin fighting each other.

Print

We call a brief time-out to draw your attention to National Printing Week (Jan. 13-19).

The industry is a part of your everyday life: involving newspapers, magazines, handbills, books, billboards, business cards, timetables, annual reports, yearbooks, direct mail letters and even packages at grocery stores. The list could go on and on, but you've got the message.

The U.S. Graphic Arts industry is the largest of its kind in the world and ranks seventh in size of all industries within the United States. Total value of shipments in printing for the past year is expected to exceed $100 billion.

There are something like 50,000 printing firms in production across the nation, which ranks the industry first in the number of plants among all manufacturing industries.

A maze of other statistical data designed to impress is available, but only a brief time-out was called to pass the word. All of us take the craft, the art, of printing for granted, but can you imagine a world without print?

Supply Siders Try To Save Budget

WASHINGTON — A recent strategy session of supply-side Republican House members, agreeing President Reagan's budget will be "DOA" (dead on arrival) unless radically transformed, decided on a last-ditch effort to get the White House to breathe life into the stillborn corpse.

Unlike Democrats and orthodox Republican senators who stamped the Reagan budget DOA because it does not cut defense enough and raise taxes, these long-faced GOP congressmen are ardent Reaganites.

Their ranks include House Minority Whip Trent Lott, normally a paragon of party loyalty. Also on hand were Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference, and leaders of the Conservative Opportunity Society.

Despondent over what has happened since the election, Lott and his colleagues decided to request a meeting with the president's senior staffers. The purpose: to collaborate on a less masochistic budget and a better-rounded economic program.

That certainly requires spending cuts, but also tax reform and monetary reform. If the president's men won't go along, the Reaganite congressmen will write it themselves.

Here is prospective rebellion from Reagan's strongest congressional supporters two months after his landslide re-election. It stems from the administration's single-dimension focus since the election on budget director David Stockman's painful expenditure cuts.

That was not the stated intent by the president's top aides after the election. They talked about tax and monetary reform, first and second, and spending cuts third, in emphasis in a balanced deficit-reduction program. Chief of staff James A. Baker III asserts that is still the correct order. Yet, nothing has been done about anything other than spending cuts. No working group on tax reform had been set up two weeks before the inauguration.

The reason may be the monomania of David Stockman. He normally works harder than most people, and the difference was staggering during the recent holiday season. He forced the political community's eyes into a tunnel vision seeing only the federal balance sheet and ignoring the economy's overall performance that ultimately controls spending and revenue.

Consequently, the landslide president begins his second term in holocaust. With a Kill Ratio of five, both sides would still have a margin of safety in case their missiles malfunction or fail to hit their targets.

The U.S. military will argue that the Soviets may sign a treaty agreeing to kill every American only five times, and then cheat, by stashing away enough weapons to kill them seven times.

The Soviet military could balk at cutting the KR in half on the grounds that while the U.S. might reduce its weapons, they are still at a disadvantage because if we refuse to include West European warheads in the count, each U.S.S.R. citizen could still be killed eight times.

At this point the negotiators in Geneva would have to resort to compromise.

The Americans could address the U.S. military fears by insisting on on-site inspection of both nuclear stockpiles. If it were found that the Soviet weapons on hand had enough power to kill the Americans more than the agreed-upon KR of five, the U.S. could abrogate the treaty and proceed to build new weapons that would kill every Soviet citizen 15 times.

In exchange for on-site inspection, we would include the West European nukes in our KR, and reduce American stockpiles until both the U.S. and West European KR came out to five.

If the Kill Ratio formula is unacceptable there is no reason for the superpowers to leave the bargaining table.

Another solution might be to work out a fair agreement on how many people each side may be permitted to wipe out in the event of a war. Neither country would have to reduce its arsenal, but would be limited to firing only enough missiles to waste 100 million people on the other's territory.

The obvious question is, who would monitor the pact to see that the superpowers did not bag more than their limit? This could be done by the International Red Cross, which would have access to all stricken areas. If either side went over the 100 million ballpark figure, the other would then be permitted to match them body for body.

With the limits set by the treaty, it would not only be a waste of money for the superpowers to continue the arms race, but there would be an incentive to reduce their nuclear arsenals accordingly.

I have no illusions that either the Kill Ratio reduction proposal or the 100 million limit on casualties can be successfully negotiated overnight.

I'm throwing them on the table as a starting point in the new negotiations. When it comes to serious disarmament talks you have to start somewhere.

To the editor:

As I read, "odds are it'll be a critical year." Why, yes, I am a tobacco farmer — I don't advise anyone to smoke, chew or dip snuff. I've never seen anyone arrested under the influence of smoking, chewing or dipping snuff. I often wonder why so little is said about the people that make and sell beer, whiskey or drugs. Nor have we written too much about the person that is so fat they can hardly carry their weight. Should we stop raising food to slim down the fat?

I've seen no one refuse to take the money tobacco brings in — again, may I say I advise no one to overeat, oversmoke, overdrink or to ever use drugs "unless" a doctor says so. I pay my bills with tobacco money. I do my best to help others and my church with tobacco money. I had a daughter get killed by a driver — it was not from smoking. Have you ever read in the Bible of the great famine that is to come? Farms are being sold by the hundreds — cement, houses, shopping centers, etc., are coming where tomatoes, potatoes, etc., used to grow. Stop.

Look around. Bring in an industry that a farmer can plant something else in place of tobacco. We must make a living, too. I, for one, would be glad to let tobacco go. But give us farmers something or some place to sell a living product. We'll give you the thanks and all of our farms will not be sold. Wake up, Pitt County.

We need your help. Food must be grown for all of us to buy or sell.

I ask again — give us the answer to how to pay our bills without a good paying income. Thank you for letting me say my piece. I pray we never let the farmer go under. We need you out there and I know you need us.

BIG JOB, BUT HE'S MAKING A START!

But even now, tax increase talk is in the air. Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, privately suggests suspension of Reagan's cherished tax indexation. Republican senators consider transforming tax reform into net revenue gainer.

All this fits the scenario unfolded by Stockman to back-bench House Republicans last September: a "grand coalition" passing a deficit-reducing tax package after Reagan spending cuts flopped. At a recent strategy session, Lott agreed for the first time that this indeed seemed Stockman's intent.

Lott promised over national television at last summer's Republican Convention that he would oppose any tax increase, even if offered by the president. Accordingly, a DOA budget threatens Lott with a choice between party leadership responsibilities and his no-tax pledge.

Mother Sentenced

Diane May, 22, of Bell Arthur, was sentenced to a year in jail Tuesday in District Court in connection with the Oct. 25, 1984, death of her 2-year-old daughter Ervin May.

After the child died in an 11 a.m. fire that destroyed the May home, located on a dirt road which parallels the railroad tracks in Bell Arthur, Mrs. May was charged with leaving Ervin unattended.

Investigators said firemen removed three other children — the oldest 5 years old — from the two-story house, but were unable to reach the 2-year-old.

Mrs. May, officers said, left the children unattended while she went to a nearby store. A neighbor saw smoke coming from the house and reported the fire.

The child's body was found in the kitchen, near a locked door.

The case was appealed to Superior Court.

MOBILE HOME FIRE KILLS THREE — A mother carried her 4-year-old son to safety before going back inside the mobile home above where she and her two other children died in a fire Tuesday afternoon, Lenoir County sheriff's officials say. Sheriff's Deputy Richard Stroud said Florence Davis, 22, her 2-year-old daughter Chasta McCotter, and her 1-week-old son, Joseph McCotter, all died in the blaze near Griffon at Brown's Trailer Park. Ms. Davis had carried Martinez Davis out of the burning home before going back for the other children, Stroud said. He said a preliminary investigation indicates that the fire could have been caused by a furnace.

Wreck Damages

Greenville police said $9,000 in damages resulted from two traffic collisions investigated Tuesday afternoon.

Officers said heaviest damage occurred in a 5:28 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets, involving cars driven by Thomas D. Tysinger Jr. of 1507 Hollybriar Place and Jonathan Modiqn of St. Augustine, Fla.

Police, who set damages at $2,000 to the Tysinger car and $4,000 to Modiqn's car, said Modiqn was charged with failing to stop for a stop light.

Vehicles driven by Deborah Phelps Morrisette of 505 Sedgefield Drive and Preston Eugene Rouse of Route 9, Kinston, collided about 3:55 p.m. on Howell Street, 30 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection.

Damage was estimated at $3,000 to the Morrisette car, while no damage resulted to the truck driven by Rouse, police reported.

Driver Charged

Greenville police have charged Donald Warren, 37, of Shady Knoll Trailer Park with driving while impaired and failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a Jan. 4 wreck on north Greene Street.

Officers identified Warren as the driver of the vehicle which collided head on with a car driven by Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Walter Cobb. Police said Cobb, Warren and Robert Lee Butts, 41, of Farmville, who officers identified as a passenger in Warren's car, were injured.

Investigators said the collision occurred about 10:18 p.m. near Riverside Oyster Bar. Cobb was on routine assignment at the time and was apparently driving at less than the posted speed, officers said.

George Cooper, formerly of Roanoke Rapids, received second and third degree burns over nearly 30 percent of his body in an incident Monday night. A spokesman at the villa said the fire department was summoned at 9:39 p.m. after Cooper was discovered in the bathroom of his room with his pajamas on fire.

Cooper was taken to Martin General Hospital and then to Pitt County Memorial Hospital before being transferred to the burn facility.

Howell Backs Survey Critical Of Reagan Support For Education

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell said he agrees with a survey which ranked the Reagan administration's support for higher education as disappointing, but the chancellor added that support from the state of North Carolina for higher institutions of learning is excellent.

Howell said he concurred with the conclusion by 68 percent of the presidents of the nation's public colleges and universities responding to a survey that the current national administration's support for higher education is disappointing or poor.

The survey, conducted by the State University of New York, polled 507 presidents of four-year, public colleges and universities who are members of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant colleges and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Howell said Reagan has not supported funding for students to attend colleges and universities in the United States, and this attitude has earned the president a bad image with heads of educational institutions.

"In the past, there has been a national policy which basically states that it would be in the national interest to make higher education available to young people regardless of whether or not they had the means to afford it," Howell stated. "This effort is made through congressional appropriations."

"It has been clearly the position of President Reagan that he would like to reduce that (funding) considerably," the ECU chancellor added. "Congress has not agreed with him and has continued to appropriate the money, but it makes the appropriations vulnerable to the administration's budget cutting mood."

Although half of the 261 survey respondents said the most pressing problem facing higher education is inadequate funding, Howell said the state of North Carolina provides sufficient money to the state university system.

"The people of the state and the General Assembly of North Carolina have been much more supportive financially than is the case in a lot of places in the nation," Howell said. "North Carolina is a good place for people in higher education to be."

Howell said the public and governmental support for the University of North Carolina system is a "clear indication that the public favors investments in education as a means of economic development of the state."

He said the citizens of North Carolina realize money is needed to improve the condition in public schools, while throughout the nation the funds have been a problem.

"We feel we (in the university system) have support among both the public and the public office holders," Howell said.

tion to include 49,209 acres owned by Tommie L. Little. Dansey also requested that zoning assigned to the property and included under the same ordinance be dropped. The property is located on SR 1708 near Evans Trailer Park.

In final business, commission members continued a request to amend the Highway Commercial (CH) district to reduce side yard setback requirements and were informed of Planning Department activities to update the city's zoning ordinance. The update, part of an on-going process requested by the City Council, will entail changes bringing the existing ordinance into compliance with statutory requirements and set forth additional performance standards.

The request to reduce side yard setback requirements was made by Mickey Herrin on behalf of Beef Barn owner Bob Abbott, whose plans to expand kitchen facilities at the St. Andrews Drive restaurant will be affected by setback requirements. Current regulations designate a 50-foot setback for side and front yards of corner lots zoned CH.

Bank Offers Home Plan

By The Associated Press

NCNB National Bank of North Carolina will begin offering home banking services this summer to its customers with personal computers, authorities said.

The Charlotte-based bank said services to be available initially will be account balance inquiries, funds transfers, statement displays and payment of bills.

Later, other services such as loan applications and check reordering will be added. The program will be accessible through most home computers being sold today, the bank said.

NCNB's largest North Carolina competitors, Wachovia Bank and First Union National, are considering home-banking systems and First Union is testing one system on a limited basis.

The cost of the NCNB service probably will be between $8 and $15 a month, said Winton R. Poole, NCNB vice president for marketing.

Monopoly Had Escape Aides

LONDON (AP) — Maps, files and compasses were hidden in Monopoly sets and smuggled into German prison camps during World War II to help British prisoners of war escape, the game's British manufacturer says.

Marking the 50th year of the board game, the Leeds-based John Waddington company told of an unusual adaptation that it said was sponsored by MI5, Britain's counter-intelligence agency.

"The job was to make Monopoly sets into whose boards were inserted maps showing escape routes from the particular prison to which each game was sent," Waddington's chairman, Victor Watson, said. "Into the other side of the board was inserted a tiny compass and several fine-quality files."

The map was hidden under the piece of paper on which Monopoly's real estate was printed. A pack that appeared to be Monopoly money would be real money to be used by escapers, with one piece of Monopoly money on the top and bottom of the pack.

Personnel Director Charles Fennessey reported that an employee opinion survey will be conducted by the N.C. Employment Security Commission at the request of the hospital. He said a similar survey was conducted last year and that a number of suggestions and complaints made on that survey brought about positive changes during the year. About 50 questions will be asked.

It was reported that December patient days numbered 11,779, fewer than those of the previous two months, but greater than the 11,181 patient days of December, 1983. Cost per patient day for that month was $514.60, versus $483.60 for the previous December.

It was reported that representatives of the Duke Endowment will visit here Jan. 25 to look at whether to fund the hospital's Clinical Pastoral Education Program.

It was also reported that the hospital has been selected by the Southeastern Hospital Association for a special aesthetics award because of its new art display program. Members of the volunteer office staff which developed the art program will go to Atlanta in April to accept the award, Fred Brown said.

Trustees were told about preliminary plans for the addition of a $9.5 million laboratory medicine addition to the hospital. Planning will take six to eight months and about $700,000 in architects' fees. Trustee Gene Paramore said he'd like to see documentation on the need for this

Martin Receives Warm Welcome In Wilson For First Town Meeting

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Eastern North Carolina wasn't a bastion of support for Jim Martin on Election Day, but the new Republican governor received a warm welcome at a "town meeting" near the home of his Democratic predecessor.

Martin ventured into heavily Democratic territory Tuesday night for the first in a series of question-and-answer sessions with his constituents. For two hours, he blended humor with lengthy discourses on issues ranging from taxes to education to water management before a crowd of 250 in Howard Chapel at Atlantic Christian College.

"If you're going to be a county commissioner in Wilson County, you're going to be a Democrat," said Roy Champion, a Democrat and former chairman of the Wilson County Board of Commissioners.

But Champion said he was "honored" that Martin chose Wilson for his first meeting.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt, Martin's predecessor, was born in nearby Rock Ridge and now lives at the family farm there.

Jack Hawke, Martin's special assistant for policy, said Wilson was chosen for the first town meeting because of its proximity to Raleigh and Martin's good election showing there, although he narrowly lost the county. Democrat Rufus Edmisten generally outperformed Martin in eastern North Carolina.

The next town meeting will be in High Point, probably next week, Hawke said.

Afterward, Martin declared the event a success and said he would attend the gatherings regularly.

"I would say ... this is a very good turnout, and I'm very pleased," said Martin. "I think it's valuable for me to be in different parts of the state ... and spread myself around when I'm listening to what people have to say."

Many people who questioned Martin, who took office Jan. 5, congratulated and praised him. He received several standing ovations.

Spokeswoman Karen Hayes said local Martin campaign leaders and Republican officials were notified, along with local news media, but said she didn't know whether most spectators were Martin supporters or "curious people wanting to see the new governor."

Martin avoided commenting on local controversies, encouraging people who sought his help to express their views to local officials. He asked everyone to write their name, address and question on a card so he could follow up.

The only serious challenges to Martin's views came from speakers who questioned the feasibility of cutting taxes and balancing the budget and others who disagreed with Martin's opposition to tuition tax credits for private school students.

Declining to be specific, Martin said he would propose a state budget that would permit repealing the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicine and the intangibles tax next year. He wants to phase out the inventory tax between 1986 and 1988.

Martin said that the state had a surplus of more than $600 million last year and expected "another healthy surplus" over the next four years.

Carl Brock asked Martin whether he supported tuition tax credits, saying that parents who send children to private schools "save the state money." Bill Mitchell said the credits work in higher education and should be granted for elementary and secondary education.

Martin, however, acknowledging that President Reagan favors the tax credits, said he opposed them because "the principal responsibility of government is to support the public education system, which we're going to have a tough enough time doing with available revenues."

He argued against "socialist" pay equity proposals, although he said he supported paying men and women equally for equal performances, seniority and other comparable qualifications. But Martin said he opposed attempts to arbitrarily declare different jobs to be of equal value.

Martin said his administration would follow closely an ongoing legislative study of pay equity to "be sure that we don't try to come up with some socialist scheme that will bypass the marketplace and have government seek to impose ... something that just will not work."

"Going Bald?"

Try This At No Risk

HOUSTON, Texas—If you have symptoms of "Sebum" hair loss: oily or greasy forehead; dandruff, dry or oily; itchy scalp; and if your hair pulls out easily on top of your head, chances are excellent that you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair...in the privacy of your own home.

A firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for "Sebum" hair loss that has been so successful, they don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss. Many conditions can cause hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help.

So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days...at their risk...if you have the sebum symptoms and are not already bald. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially by mail. ADV.

Honeywell Agrees To Fine

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Honeywell Inc. has agreed to pay the largest fine ever levied by a federal consumer agency in a case involving heater and furnace valves the agency said were associated with 22 deaths and 77 injuries.

In addition to the $800,000 fine,

Honeywell agreed to spend an additional $4.2 million to inspect and repair or replace valves that may be faulty on liquefied petroleum gas furnaces and heaters, the Consumer Product Safety Commission announced Tuesday in Washington.

The agency had charged

Honeywell with failing to report defects and hazards in the valves it produced. The civil fine settled a series of investigations launched by the commission, which charged that Honeywell knowingly failed to disclose defects in the controls and others that were recalled in 1980.

Court Backs Teachers' Right To Search

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Teachers and administrators now have more legal power to attack what the Supreme Court calls the "major social problems" of drug use and violent crime in public schools.

The nation's highest court, in a 6-3 decision Tuesday, made it easier for public school officials generally to search students suspected of violating the law or some school rule.

To conduct such searches, the court said in a case from Piscataway, N.J., teachers and other school officials do not need a court warrant or the same justifications required of police officers.

At the same time, however, the justices made clear that public school officials, like police officers, must adhere to the Constitution's ban on unreasonable searches and seizures by governmental officials.

In other words, students do not surrender all their privacy rights when they walk into the schoolhouse.

The case involved the search of a 14-year-old freshman's purse after she was caught smoking. The search turned up rolling papers, and the girl later was found delinquent after admitting to police she had sold marijuana cigarettes to classmates.

The New Jersey Supreme Court overturned the delinquency finding, ruling that the search had violated the student's rights.

But the high court now has reinstated the delinquency verdict.

Led by Justice Byron R. White, the court said school officials do not have to meet the "probable cause" standard applied when judging whether a police search was reasonable.

The new standard for school officials: whether the search was reasonable under the circumstances.

White noted that "maintaining order in the classroom has never been easy," and that in recent years "school disorder has often taken particularly ugly forms: drug use and violent crimes in the schools have become major social problems."

Tom Shannon, executive director of the National School Board Association, praised the decision.

"We think the court perceived the role of school people properly," Shannon said. "It'll shore up the confidence of school people that they're not looked upon in the same way as law enforcement officers."

Burt Neuborne, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union, said he was "quite relieved" that the ruling preserved the idea that "the Fourth Amendment (outlawing unreasonable searches) does apply to schools."

"The point is that the special circumstances of the school setting requires some tailoring of the Fourth Amendment to students," he said.

The decision was praised a Reagan administration official who helped draft a White House report urging a stronger defense of the rights of educators.

The new ruling should thaw the "chilling effect" some of the past cases have had on teachers and administrators, said Gary Bauer, a deputy under secretary of education.

"There have been some well publicized cases in which teachers and principals have gotten into a great deal of trouble over good faith efforts to maintain school regulations," he said.

White was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Lewis F. Powell, William H. Rehnquist, Sandra Day O'Connor and Harry A. Blackmun.

Justices John Paul Stevens, William J. Brennan and Thurgood

Marshall dissented.

The court did not answer whether materials seized from students in unlawful searches by public school officials may be used as evidence when the students stand trial.

The decision also left unanswered whether students' right of privacy extends to the contents of their desks and lockers, although under Tuesday's decision searches of desks and lockers at least would be lawful if "reasonable."

Supreme Court's Ruling May Help Restore Public School Discipline

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

The U.S. Supreme Court has given what some regard as long-overdue relief to teachers, principals, parents and youths fed up with the drugs and violence in many schools: the right to search students without a court-ordered warrant.

A 6-3 ruling by the court Tuesday was almost universally praised by educators, and even by some civil liberties lawyers, as balanced and needed.

From the 1960s on, the high court expanded student rights in case after case. First it was the right to wear what they wished and say what they pleased. Eventually student rights extended to protection against personal searches unless school officials had a warrant from a judge.

Those earlier rulings, in the opinion of many educators, created a climate that invited a kind of lawlessness that some students couldn't resist and which principals and teachers often feared to combat because of the threat of lawsuits.

The result: In poll after poll over the last decade, the lack of discipline has consistently headed the list of what the public sees as education's chief failing.

Tuesday's ruling may give schools the legal ammunition necessary to regain control over troublemakers.

In a case involving a Piscataway, N.J., high school student who was found by a vice principal to have drug paraphernalia in her purse and was later convicted of selling marijuana to fellow students, the court ruled teachers and school officials do not have to have "probable cause" for searching a student and may now do so without a warrant.

The decision did not strip students of their Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable searches.

"We've had so many cases in the last 10 years increasing student rights. In practicality what they did was make many principals afraid because of the threat of civil suits. I think this ruling corrects the balance," said William Honig, California's Superintendent of Public Instruction.

A leading civil liberties lawyer found little fault with the ruling.

"The truth is, (civil libertarians) can't always play Chicken Little. This ruling is not going to change very much," said Burt Neuborne, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "The point is that the special circumstances of the school setting requires some tailoring of the Fourth Amendment to students."

The case of the 14-year-old New Jersey girl, identified only as T.L.O. in court records because of her age, drew national attention. The Reagan administration filed a brief last year siding with the vice principal who searched the girl's purse. Citing a "growing lack of discipline" in schools, the Justice Department brief urged the court to limit student rights in searches for drugs and weapons.

What the ruling will or won't change in school life isn't clear.

Some educators, including Honig and Sandra Feldman, executive director of the United Federation of Teachers in New York, said some school districts might be more likely to search lockers or use metal detectors to keep drugs and weapons out of school.

But few believe schools will take the ruling as a green light to return to the harsh, often arbitrary disciplinary methods that led to the Supreme Court's decision in favor of student rights 15 years ago.

"If anything," said Joseph Scherer, an official of the American Association of School Administrators, "administrators have become overcautious with respect to student rights. Even with this ruling, administrators will be very respectful of due process. Schools learned very hard lessons in the 1960s in dealing with students. We don't want to turn back the clock."

"I don't think you're going to see the kind of action like teachers taking liberties to see if kids are violating dress codes," he said.

"Almost all cases, at least 85 percent, involving school searches involve drugs and weapons," said Ivan Gluckman, counsel to the National Association of Secondary School Principals. "The court's decision is intended to strengthen the confidence of administrators that they have the authority to conduct a reasonable search."

Government Is Top U.S. Employer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of every six Americans with jobs, one works for government, new Census figures disclose.

The latest Compendium of Public Employment issued Tuesday by the bureau shows 15.8 million Americans were employed by federal, state or local governments as of October 1982.

That amounts to one person in every 15 in the country, or one in six in the civilian labor force.

Compared to a similar survey in 1977, state governments increased their number of workers, rising 7.2 percent to 3,744,000, the study said.

During the same period, the number of people working for local governments grew 0.3 percent to 9,249,000, while the federal civilian work force held steady at 2,848,000.

Alan V. Stevens, head of the employment branch of the Census Bureau's Governments Division, said employment by the federal government has held relatively constant for nearly 20 years.

And while state employment has grown, it has not kept pace with the growth of the population in general, meaning the governments are seeking to serve more people with fewer workers.

Turning just to state and local government workers, Alaska had the biggest percentage at 891.3 workers per 10,000 residents. The District of Columbia and Wyoming were second and third, respectively.

No Family Dinner For Reagans

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan says the White House is going to be bulging with family members for her husband's second inaugural this weekend, but "there just isn't any way" to schedule a private dinner with all four children and their families.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday, Mrs. Reagan said, "We've got a lot of our kids who want to go to different places," and she hasn't scheduled any time during the busy three-day period when they can all sit down together for a family gathering.

The White House, she said, is "going to be bulging" with the Reagans' two children, Ron Reagan and Patti Davis; Ron's wife Doria; the president's daughter Maureen by his marriage to actress Jane Wyman; Maureen's husband, and Reagan's adopted son Michael and his wife, Colleen.

Ms. Davis' husband can't be here because he is starting a new job teaching yoga on Monday, the day of Reagan's ceremonial inaugural, spokeswoman Sheila Tate said.

Asked if she and Michael will ever feel close after their public falling out at Thanksgiving, the first lady said, "No, I do not believe in talking about family matters in public. I never have. I never will. So everything is fine, and that's it."

It was Mrs. Reagan's comment in an interview with a Washington society columnist that Michael was estranged from his father and stepmother that focused on family differences. The first lady's remark prompted Michael's retort that she was just trying to excuse the elder Reagans never having seen their 18-month-old grandchild.

Asked if there would be a chance during the inaugural festivities for everyone to sit down together, Mrs. Reagan said, "I don't know. We'll just have to see what all works out."

But with all the events scheduled for Sunday and Monday, she said, "You know, there just isn't any way" to arrange a family dinner.

Although the first lady said she has been so busy with inaugural arrangements that "my lists have lists," there are no dinners on the first family's public schedule.

During the interview, Mrs. Reagan also admitted she is sometimes afraid when she goes out in public with her husband.

And she said she believes "being in the middle of decisions that are being made that will affect the country and possibly the world" have broadened her horizons and helped her grow during her husband's first term.

"It is fascinating," she said. "Frightening at times, frustrating at times, but fascinating."

But Mrs. Reagan, whose early White House years were marred by widespread criticism of her conduct as first lady, the traumatic assassination attempt on her husband and the death of her beloved father, said no one could ever have prepared her for the glare of publicity and the confinement of life in the White House.

"We've been in public life practically all our lives, but this is different," the first lady said.

"There's no way to prepare yourself for it."

Asked if she is ever afraid when she goes out in public with her husband, her voice dropped to a barely audible "Umhm," and she nodded very slightly. And asked whether she will be afraid on Monday during the inaugural ceremonies and parade, Mrs. Reagan paused and said in a voice barely above a whisper, "Well, we'll see."

SHEILA TATE

Nancy's Aide Leaving Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Press Secretary Sheila Tate, who helped Nancy Reagan through a "tough" first year and is credited with improving the first lady's public image, is leaving the White House to work in public relations.

Mrs. Tate said Tuesday she plans to take a senior vice presidency at Burson-Marsteller, the nation's largest public relations firm, and expects to leave the White House in February, after a replacement is named.

Mrs. Tate started her job just before the 1981 inauguration and after the first lady — new to Washington — was the target of negative press coverage about her expensive designer clothes and society-conscious friends.

"The first year was a tough year," said Mrs. Tate. The turnaround in Mrs. Reagan's public image started with an appearance suggested by Mrs. Tate — a surprise song-and-dance routine at the annual Gridiron Club dinner attended by the nation's most prestigious journalists.

Man Goes To Prison At Age 82

NEW YORK (AP) — An 82-year-old insurance adjuster who admitted taking part in an arson-for-profit ring has been sentenced to 10 years in prison despite his lawyer's plea that any jail term would be a "life sentence."

"If he were a younger and a healthier man, I would impose a much larger sentence," an unmoved U.S. District Judge Thomas Griesa said Tuesday in ordering Bernard Gold jailed immediately.

Defense lawyer Harvey Kaminski had urged the judge to give Gold probation and a fine, saying the defendant suffers from heart disease and diabetes and may have no more than two years to live.

Gold, who pleaded guilty in November to a federal racketeering count, could have drawn up to 20 years in prison. Griesa fined Gold $25,000 in addition to the $25,000 in illegal profits the defendant had earlier agreed to forfeit.

According to federal prosecutors, Gold worked with a ring of landlords who burned at least 17 Harlem and South Bronx apartment houses between 1976 and 1979 to collect on insurance policies. Gold, who had helped the landlords obtain coverage and then file claims, was reportedly known among the group as "Father Dollar."

The string of fires brought insurance payouts totaling $1.2 million, prosecutors said. Forty firefighters were injured and scores of families displaced, but no tenants were injured despite the fact most of the fires were at night.

Four landlords who have been convicted in the plot have drawn sentences ranging up to 14 years in prison.

"All I can say is I'm sorry I got involved in this matter," Gold told Griesa. "It finally got out of control and there was no way I could get out of it. But I didn't instigate the situation whatsoever."

A doctor has reported Gold has "perhaps no more than two years to live," Kaminski told the judge. "Any sentence of incarceration given by this court would in effect be a life sentence to this man."

Kaminski added that Gold is "basically incarcerated by his own illness," which leaves him house-bound.

Family Planning Reunion After Electricity Restored

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio (AP) — Electricity has been restored at the small brick home of Peggy Geis, paving the way for a reunion today with her six children.

"I am relieved — greatly," Mrs. Geis said Tuesday night. "I always thought I'd like it if it was quiet, but I don't."

The Lake County Department of Human Services removed the children on Friday and put them in foster homes. Mrs. Geis, 29, said she was told the reason was that the electricity had been disconnected and the house was too cold. She claimed that her house had been adequately heated with a kerosene heater and a fireplace.

Mrs. Geis, who gets $489 a month in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, faced a $702 electricity bill. But she said a Cleveland lawyer, Niki Z. Schwartz, paid $502 Tuesday. She must pay the balance.

"I guess he just decided he wanted to help," she said.

A secretary at Schwartz's office said Tuesday that he was out of town and unavailable for comment.

A Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. crew restored power to the home about 6:10 p.m. Tuesday. Mrs. Geis' husband Lawrence, 34, then put a light bulb in a living-room socket, next to a camp lantern hanging from the ceiling.

Mrs. Geis said county officials promised to return her children this afternoon after verifying that power was restored at her one-story home.

The couple is separated and both are unemployed.

The children — Jason, 11; Melanie, 10; James, 7; Eric, 4;

Timothy, 3; and Derek, 11 months — lived with Mrs. Geis until they were removed, said Linda D. Cooper, a court-appointed lawyer representing the family.

Ms. Cooper said she received many calls at her office Tuesday, offering financial assistance to the family.

CEI officials said they were willing to help resolve the overdue bill.

"Our goal is that nobody go through the winter without electricity," said spokesman J. Lee Bailey. "When we learned of the special nature of this case, we initiated a call to the welfare department."

Therese Ryan, administrator of the Lake County Department of Human Services, would not discuss the case, saying all department cases are confidential.

The Geises' electricity was shut off in September, but Mrs. Geis said she let a friend restore the power in October without CEI's knowledge.

That later brought a tampering notice against her and the power was shut off again on Jan. 2, officials said.

Dead Fan Recalled

ROCKVILLE, Calif. (AP) — When the Super Bowl begins this Sunday, there will be a television set and a cold can of beer next to Elbert Hausam. But Hausam won't exactly be rooting for his favorite team, the San Francisco 49ers, because Hausam died in 1978.

The television set and beer will be provided by Hausam's son, Barry, who remembers his father as the biggest 49er fan he ever knew. When the younger Hausam got to thinking about his father's pigskin fervor, he decided he had to do something for his father.

So Barry, a machinist from Fairfield, went home and made a sign out of an old board, painting the words, "49er Faithfull (sic) — 24 yrs" on it and sticking it into the ground near his father's grave.

"I loved my father very much," said the younger Hausam. "And he loved the 49ers very much. It seemed like the right thing to do."

The elder Hausam had 49er season tickets since 1951 and attended virtually every game, his son said.

The cemetery's gravedigger, Steve Samo, said he will actually put the television set and beer on the grave. "It will be nice to have another fan to watch the game with," he said.

Lead-Free

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austria plans to be the first European nation to offer lead-free gasoline.

The gas, which will be available in April, is part of a government program to sharply reduce environmental pollution. Other measures include subsidies for newly purchased cars with anti-pollution devices and higher taxes for cars without them.

All regular gasoline will be replaced by lead-free gas as of Sept. 30, 1985, according to the plan announced Tuesday. However, consumers will still be able to purchase leaded high-octane or super gasoline.

RECOVERED — A year after he was pronounced "technically dead" after spending 20 minutes in icy lake water, Jimmy Tontlewicz and his mother, Kathy, walk away from Chicago's Children's Memorial Hospital on Tuesday. Jimmy, 5, is described by his doctor as having completely recovered although his attention span is somewhat shorter than normal. (AP Laserphoto)

Boy Who Was 'Technically' Dead Now Fully Recovered

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmy Tontlewicz, the 5½-year-old boy pulled from icy Lake Michigan after 20 minutes under water, missed a news conference to mark the first anniversary of the accident — but not because of poor health.

The youngster has recovered physically, but suffers from a short attention span, hyperactivity and some behavior and speech problems he had before the accident, said Dr. Robert Tanz, who has been treating the boy.

Jimmy was scheduled to appear at the news conference with his parents and Tanz, but at the last minute doctors advised against it, saying too much excitement was bad for the child.

"He's been interviewed on TV lately, and to see a mass of people is not what he needs," Tanz said.

Jimmy was sledding on the lake Jan. 15, 1984, when he fell through ice and stayed submerged about 20 minutes before divers pulled him out.

Reporters' only glimpse of Jimmy came after the news conference, when his mother picked him up from another part of the hospital and they walked to their car.

The youngster, laughing and pointing, waved to photographers.

Jimmy's mother and his father,

Terrence, were at the news conference, but the couple is in the process of a divorce and Tontlewicz said he had not seen his son in two months.

Scientists say Jimmy may have survived his 20-minute submersion in 32-degree water because of a biological phenomenon called the mammalian diving reflex. That reflex, triggered by the shock of cold water, enables humans to live without breathing for extended periods.

Doctors said Jimmy speaks and walks as well as any hyperactive youngster with a short attention span.

Six Die As Copter Hits Ship

HONOLULU (AP) — A merchant marine ship steamed toward land today after a U.S. Air Force helicopter trying to evacuate a sick seaman from the ship crashed on the vessel, killing six helicopter crewmen and leaving a seventh missing and presumed dead, authorities said.

The HH-53 helicopter was attempting to airlift a crewmember from the Panamanian ship to a hospital when the copter slammed onto the deck and started a fire as the ship was 540 miles north of Honolulu, said Air Force spokesman Sgt. Paul Chute.

The fire aboard the ship, the Asian Beauty, was brought under control, said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Jones, but wreckage of the helicopter was littered on the ship's deck.

Another Air Force helicopter brought back the bodies of two of the deceased crewmen Tuesday night, Jones said. The bodies were taken to the Army mortuary for positive identification at the Coast Guard station at Sand Beach on Oahu.

"The names will be released when positive identification is made and next of kin are notified," said Air Force Capt Kevin Krejcarek.

"I suspect that man is still on board," Krejcarek said about the missing copter crewman. He said the language barrier with the crewmen on the Panamanian ship "has been somewhat of an obstacle in confirming this man's condition."

The Asian Beauty was en route to Honolulu today with the bodies of the four other crewmen who were killed, Jones said.

Chute could not confirm if the seventh crewman was on board the vessel.

Jones said Tuesday the Coast Guard has dispatched the cutter Munro, carrying a Coast Guard helicopter, to intercept the Asian Beauty and offer assistance.

The cutter is expected to reach the Asian Beauty at noon today and the Asian Beauty will dock in Honolulu on Thursday, Jones said.

The ill seaman was in stable condition and further evacuation attempts from the Asian Beauty have been called off, Chute said.

U.S. Tests To Continue Over Border

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Despite protests from both sides of the border after the first successful test, a B-52 bomber bearing U.S. cruise missiles will fly over Canada at least two more times, military officials said.

A B-52 carrying four unarmed cruises returned without incident to the U.S. Air Force Base in Grand Forks early Tuesday evening after conducting tests for about five hours, said Maj. Alton Waller, a base public affairs officer.

A spokesman for the Red River Valley Peaceworkers decried the test, saying that peace activists in the Grand Forks area had been asked to call North Dakota's congressional delegation to express concern.

"We feel, like our Canadian colleagues, that our using of Canada as a testing grounds pushes that country out of a stance of neutrality into a partisan position in relation to the nuclear arms race," said the Rev. Walter Scott of Grand Forks.

The cruise missile, which has the capability of carrying a nuclear warhead, has been deployed by the United States in Europe.

The plane, which took off shortly after 1 a.m. Tuesday, was refueled in midair at least twice and did not land in Canada, Waller said. Of the four missiles attached to the B-52's wings, one was meant as a test missile, he said.

One missile was a backup and the other two served as ballast on the plane's wings, Waller said. None of the four missiles was ever detached from the plane during the test, he said.

"As far as we're concerned, the test went very well," said Capt. Ross Hicks of the Canadian Forces Base in Cold Lake, Alberta.

Safety was one of the major Canadian concerns about the test, and as a result of the exercise, he has no misgivings about further testing over Canadian territory, Hicks said.

The exercise involved flying the B-52 by instructions from the guidance system aboard one of the four missiles, Waller said. Hicks said the test lasted from 10:46 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The Canadian government has a five-year cruise testing agreement with the United States as part of its commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Canadian activists tried placing calls to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and the country's defense ministers to show their opposition.

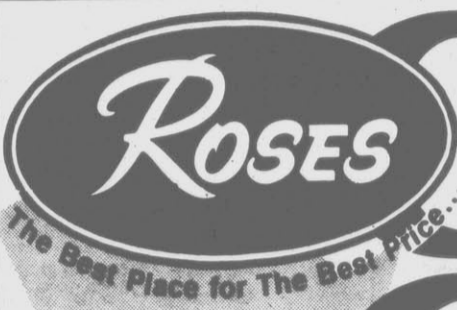

"I think they're very upset with their officials," Scott said. "Canadians involved in peace activities want our country to know they're not anti-American. They feel their leadership has betrayed their position of neutrality."

Observances Mark Birthday Of King

By The Associated Press

Thousands of people nationwide marched, boycotted and attended religious services in honor of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of three Americans remembered with a national holiday marking his birth.

King, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968, would have been 56 on Tuesday. He was honored by blacks and whites, Southerners and Northerners, as a true American freedom fighter.

"George Washington began our American revolution," said Mayor Andrew Young, a lieutenant of King's during the 1960s civil rights movement, speaking at an ecumenical service in King's hometown of Atlanta.

"Abraham Lincoln continued the revolution and united us geographically. Martin Luther King Jr. continued the revolution and united us ethnically, across class lines."

City, county and state government offices were closed in many parts of the nation in observance of King's birthday. The federal holiday in honor of King, enacted by Congress last year, will be observed for the first time on Jan. 20 in 1986.

In the Atlanta neighborhood where King was born, marchers lined up 10 abreast for two city blocks and sang songs of the civil rights movement as they walked from Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King preached, through downtown to a rally at the federal building.

Other marches and observances were held in Savannah, New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, Olympia, Wash., and Birmingham, Tuscaloosa and Tuskegee, Ala.

Texas Gives Lethal Injection To Man For Agent's Murder

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Doyle Skillern was put to death by lethal injection today for the murder of a narcotics agent another man claims to have shot, becoming the fifth person executed since Christmas, the fourth this year and the third in a week.

"I pray my family will rejoice and forgive. Thank you," Skillern said in his final statement, according to Attorney General Jim Mattox, a witness to the execution.

Skillern, 48, stared at the ceiling from a death chamber gurney as the execution was carried out. He coughed three times as a lethal combination of drugs began flowing to his body. He was pronounced dead four minutes later, at 12:23 a.m., said Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections.

He was the fifth Texas inmate to receive a lethal injection since 1982. He was the fourth inmate nationwide to be executed this year and the 36th since 1976. There have been three executions in the nation since Jan. 9.

Skillern was put to death for his role in the Oct. 24, 1974, shooting death of Patrick Randel, an undercover narcotics agent for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Charles Sanne, 51, admitted shooting Randel six times while Skillern was in a nearby car. But a jury decided Sanne was not a continuing threat to society, and gave him a life sentence. He is being considered for parole, and could be released by June.

Skillern, convicted in 1971 and sentenced to a five-year term for the death of his brother, was determined a threat and sentenced to death.

Texas' "law of parties" under which Skillern was convicted, allows juries to convict accomplices of the most severe crime involved.

Charles Butts, a special prosecutor who handled the case says he believes Sanne's testimony that he was the triggerman was a scheme cooked up by the pair, presumably to help Skillern.

Randel's widow, Wanda Randel Hogg, said the execution lessened the pain she's felt since her husband's death.

"It was a great relief that it was all over," she said.

When the news of Skillern's death reached the three dozen spectators outside the death chamber, one person whistled and cheered.

On Tuesday, Skillern lost bids for reprieves from the U.S. Supreme Court and Texas Gov. Mark White.

Guthrie said Skillern showed no emotion when told of White's decision, but said, "A lot of people will still have their troubles tomorrow and mine will be over."

Skillern ate his last meal — steak, potatoes, peas, rolls, banana pudding and coffee — and was visited by Father Cornelius Ryan, who said Skillern was "cheerful all the time" they talked.

Skillern had selected three sisters, a brother and a brother-in-law as witnesses to his execution. But only the brother-in-law, William Sparks III, 54, attended.

Last week, Skillern said he was not particularly upset with the prospect of death "except there's some art work I have to finish." He was doing a portrait for a fellow death-row inmate, he said.

Air Force Restricts Coverage Of Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Air Force has tightened its already strict news coverage rules for the first military-space shuttle flight by barring remote automatic cameras used for close-up shots of Discovery when it lifts off next week.

The new rules, issued and put into effect Tuesday, also prohibit reporters and photographers in the days before liftoff from getting any closer to the launch pad than a roadblock near the Kennedy Space Center press site, three miles away. That will prohibit the close-in sunset and sunrise shots of the shuttle and make television reporters stand farther away from the pad when covering the Jan. 23 mission.

The Air Force previously had said the news media would be able to view the launch from the press site, but they would not have access to the status of the countdown. It said only that launch will occur sometime between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m.

The Defense Department said that all these tight measures are necessary "for reasons of national security," to "deny our adversaries" exact information about launch time and information about the military cargo.

The payload in Discovery's cargo bay also was to have been a secret.

But word leaked last month that it is an advanced spy satellite to be orbited south of the Soviet Union to intercept radio, radio-telephone and satellite signals and to monitor

Discovery of Galaxy May End Debate Over Age of Universe

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The discovery of a galaxy that magnifies dim light from a remote quasar should make it possible to accurately weigh the galaxy and possibly resolve a controversy over the size and age of the universe, astronomers said in a report today.

The galaxy's enormous weight and correspondingly strong gravitational pull allows it to serve as a lens, magnifying light from the quasar behind it, said one of the astronomers, Marc Gorenstein.

"You can't put the galaxy on a scale, but you can see how it deflects light," said Gorenstein, of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass.

The light rays from the quasar are bent as they pass through the galaxy, just as an eyeglass lens bends the light that passes through it. Such bending of light by gravity was originally predicted by physicist Albert Einstein early in this century.

Quasars — short for quasi-stellar objects — are mysterious, distant objects able to generate as much energy as an entire galaxy.

Five other gravitational lenses have been discovered, the first of them in 1979. But the closest of the others is 10 times farther away than the newly discovered lens, said John Huchra, another of the lens's discoverers.

The chances of finding a quasar lined up behind a nearby galaxy like this were about a million to one, said Huchra.

Huchra was scheduled to describe the discovery of the lens today at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society in Tucson.

Huchra said the quasar is about 7 billion light-years away. The galaxy is moving away from Earth at 7,000 miles per second and is now some 350 million light-years away, he said. (A light-year equals about 6 trillion miles.)

"That means we can study the galaxy in great detail, which is impossible with the others because they're so far away," Huchra said.

Three of the five others are so distant, in fact, that astronomers cannot see the galaxies presumably acting as the lenses. They can see only the brightened objects behind them.

The estimate of the distances to the lens and the quasar depends on the assumption that the universe is about 12 billion years old, because at the extremes of the universe, estimates of size and age are mathematically related.

Some astronomers hold to an earlier idea that the universe is 20 billion years old, and the new gravitational lens might help resolve the disagreement, said Gorenstein.

The discrepancy turns on the difficulty of measuring distances to remote objects, but the new lens might, for complicated reasons, make distance measurement simpler.

"We might be able to measure the distance (to the quasar) accurately," said Gorenstein. That would allow more precise calculation of the age and size of the universe, he said.

Huchra said the latest data suggests that the quasar is not only brightened but separated into at least three images, each produced by a different bending of the quasar's light by the galaxy.

Proxmire Gives Out New Award

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire left his "golden fleece" award for wasteful government spending on the shelf this month and instead awarded a "golden star" today to Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker for his efforts to combat inflation.

"The Federal Reserve clearly deserves a gold star for its stunning achievement in bringing down the rate of inflation from 13 percent in 1979 to less than 4 percent by 1982," Proxmire, D-Wis., said in a statement issued by his office.

"During the last two years, the Fed managed to keep the inflation rate from exceeding 4 percent," Proxmire added. "The credit for curbing inflation belongs to the Fed alone."

Not all of Proxmire's colleagues share his view, and some argue that the Federal Reserve, the nation's central bank, has not done enough to ease credit and lower interest rates.

But Proxmire said, "If Volcker had caved in to pressure" to expand the money supply, "we would have been back to double digit inflation today. And while interest rates are still too high, they would be far higher if inflation had not been checked by the Fed."

Meanwhile, some Republicans have suggested that steps be taken to make the independent Federal Reserve Board more accountable to either the executive branch or Congress.

WIRED SENATOR — Utah Sen. Jake Garn was wired for walking Tuesday as he trod a treadmill during his physical at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. Garn is starting his space training with the hope of becoming the first public official to take a space shuttle ride. He would be the first civilian that goes into space that has not been an engineer or a scientist. (AP Laserphoto)

Proxmire, though, said moves to exert greater control "would send an unmistakable signal to the financial community that the war against inflation is over."

The senator, who frequently praises Volcker during the chairman's appearances before senate committees, also congratulated the Federal Reserve for its singular efforts to close loopholes in our banking laws which threaten to undermine our banking system.

The senator, a self-appointed watchdog of government waste and inefficiency, periodically issues a "golden fleece" award citing examples that he says point up wasteful spending.

Expulsion

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A Soviet Embassy employee has been expelled from Spain, according to sources at the Foreign Ministry.

The sources Tuesday identified the employee as Yuri Kolesnikov, an aide to the cultural attache at the Soviet Embassy, but would not say why he was expelled. They said he left Spain last Friday.

Kolesnikov was the 13th Soviet diplomat expelled from Spain since the two countries resumed diplomatic relations in 1977.

Park Proposed For Handicapped

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — No hair-raising turns or spine-tingling drops would lure riders to this roller coaster. But its gentle hills could keep children clinging to wheelchairs as it whooshed down the rails at an amusement park for the handicapped.

Welcome to the wish park envisioned by a Des Moines pressman who spends his free time making life happy for handicapped children. The merry-go-round will welcome wheelchair riders. Skycars suspended on cables will be programmed to halt at each stop long enough to let slower kids board.

David Steiner, 33, founder of the Kids With A Wish Foundation, unveiled a proposal Tuesday to build the nation's first amusement park designed for the handicapped.

"When I see a little girl get a smile on her face, I think how beautiful it would be to see a child go to an amusement park," Steiner said. "They can ride the merry-go-round, drive boats, play games. They can do anything you could do."

Steiner said he has already found corporate contributors in Des Moines, but wouldn't identify them, and he said a non-profit corporation is being formed to accept donations and run the project.

The foundation would like to purchase a 60-acre tract near the Des Moines zoo soon if there are enough contributions, he said.

Helms Says New Changes Won't Block Filibusters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders want to close off one route to snarling legislative action with talk, talk and more talk, but Sen. Jesse Helms says he already knows three ways around the proposed limit on filibusters.

"The Senate as an institution seems to be breaking down," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas on Tuesday as he called for a handful of rule changes and the paring back of committee membership.

To give him and other leaders more control of the flow of bills, the new Republican leader advocated a new rule that would outlaw filibusters on a common Senate logistical move called a "motion to proceed."

"Two layers of filibuster and two cloture votes should not be required," he told the Senate Rules Committee, explaining that filibusters would still be allowed on the measure itself.

Dole thus joined Democratic Senate leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia in supporting a rule change on filibusters, which technically would make the "motion to proceed" non-debatable.

But Helms, the North Carolina Republican who has proved himself a master at using Senate rules to tie up the chamber, warned a new rule wouldn't stop him.

"I can figure out three ways to get around any rule you come up with on a motion to call up (a bill on the Senate floor)," Helms told Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, the Republican who headed a special committee on reforming Senate committees.

Helms expressed similar sentiments to Dole, who then asked

Helms what the three ways are. Helms wouldn't say.

"The convenience of the senators is not the important thing," Helms said. "Protecting the rights of the minority is."

And Helms suggested that cutting back on subcommittees and the number of committee assignments for each senator would not get more senators to the floor when legislation is being considered.

"They are often not at another subcommittee meeting. They are waiting for CBS to do a little taping — or NBC or ABC," Helms said. "We've got to our priorities right."

Jamaicans Riot Over Higher Fuel Prices

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Snipers and rock-throwers harassed police and soldiers overnight as they tried to clear roadblocks put up by demonstrators protesting increased fuel prices. At least three people were killed in violence that spread across the island.

Winter is peak tourist time in Jamaica, but authorities said none of the estimated 12,000 foreign visitors on the Carribean island were reported injured in any of the disturbances Tuesday. Police said the situation at most tourist resorts was close to normal.

Police said that officers killed one man in Kingston after he fired on police at a roadblock and that a motorist in Kingston was shot and killed by someone in another car. A third fatality was a man killed by gunfire from a van in Maypen, 30 miles northwest of Kingston, police said.

Unconfirmed reports said as many as six people had been killed and several others were hospitalized, including a small girl hit by rocks at a roadblock.

A police officer in Kingston, speaking on condition of anonymity, said hundreds of people spent the night at police stations because they were unable to get home.

Most roads in Kingston, the capital, remained blocked overnight. Protesters at some roadblocks offered to clear debris to allow motorists to pass if they paid small amounts of cash, such as $10.

Snipers and rock-throwers frustrated police. "As fast as we get one roadblock cleared away and move on, they go back and block it again," said a Kingston police officer.

Piles of burning tires and other barricades put up by protesters blocked most of the nation's main roads on Tuesday, and smoke from the tires clouded Kingston and other major cities.

Businesses, schools and government offices shut down and most international flights canceled. Rail service was halted after debris was piled onto tracks.

Jamaica Defense Force helicopters transported the injured as well as doctors and nurses to hospitals.

The protests, which apparently began spontaneously, came less than 12 hours after announcement of price increases, the latest in a three-year series of austerity measures by the pro-U.S. government of Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

Gasoline prices were raised from the equivalent of $1.80 a gallon to $2.19; kerosene from 74 cents to 80 cents, and a 100-pound tank of propane gas went from $20.10 to $23.30.

Prices for food and most other items have been doubled and tripled in the past two years, and Seaga, seeking to win approval of favorable loan terms from international lenders for his currency-strapped nation, has raised taxes and laid off 6,000 government employees. Unemployment in the nation of 2.3 million people is more than 25 percent.

Police used tear gas Tuesday to disperse hundreds of demonstrators who marched on Jamaica House, Seaga's office building. Police said the protesters threw burning debris over the gates.

Seaga's leftist opponent and predecessor as prime minister, Michael Manley, called on protesters Tuesday to respect "the property and lives of all Jamaicans," but he also urged security forces not to use violence against peaceful protesters.

Seaga told Parliament during a session late Tuesday: "As a government with a deep commitment to democracy, we accept that demonstrations will take place from time to time."

The prime minister said security forces were in "complete control" and would keep the situation from "escalating into sabotage."

No arson or looting was reported on Tuesday, police said.

In another pro-U.S. Caribbean nation, the Dominican Republic, sharp price increases by the government for food and other items in April 1984 triggered rioting that claimed at least 54 lives.

Jane's Says Soviets Lost Hundreds In Siberian Blast

LONDON (AP) — Jane's Defense Weekly says hundreds of people were killed in an explosion last month at a Soviet underground ammunition research and production center in an old mine near Leninsk-Kuznetskiy in Siberia.

The three-paragraph report on the Siberian explosion was part of a column of news briefs in Tuesday's edition of Jane's. The Soviet Union does not provide information on accidents at its military installations.

The weekly is produced by Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks and reviews considered reliable by the defense establishment.

Jane's said it did not know the exact death toll or date of last month's explosion, which it said did not involve nuclear or chemical weapons. The magazine said the accident was comparable to a blast that killed 200 people last May 13 at the Soviet naval munitions depot at Severomorsk, north of Moscow.

In another article Tuesday, Jane's said the Soviets are expected to begin flight-testing an "operational maneuvering re-entry vehicle" for its ballistic missiles within the next five years to counter the proposed U.S. space-based missile defense program.

The magazine said that maneuverable warheads aboard intercontinental ballistic missiles would "complicate" the so-called "Star Wars" program, officially called the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Soviet effort apparently gathered momentum after President Reagan in March 1983 announced the U.S. research project aimed at shooting down long-range missiles with space-based battle stations and air-launched anti-ballistic missiles, Jane's said.

In an article entitled "Soviet Submarine Accidents — New Details," Jane's reported there had been at least six accidents involving Soviet nuclear-powered ships in the past 20 years.

The report followed similar disclosures by CBS News that CIA papers showed six nuclear accidents aboard Soviet warships between 1966-1981 have gone unreported.

Jane's article said the "potentially most serious accident" was aboard a Soviet nuclear-powered submarine off the U.S. coast in December 1972. It said the cause was believed to be a radiation leak from a nuclear-tipped torpedo designed to destroy harbor installations.

Several men were killed, with most of the crew suffering radiation sickness, Jane's quoted the CIA documents as saying.

The weekly said a 1967 "meltdown" aboard the 17,280-ton icebreaker Lenin "ranks among the most serious nuclear accidents." It said up to 30 Soviet sailors were killed in the incident aboard the nuclear-powered ship.

Australia Hit By Brush Fires

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Dozens of brush fires blazed out of control across southern Australia today, burning farmland and igniting homes in a Melbourne suburb. Authorities said five people and 30,000 head of livestock have been killed.

More than 100 people, including many firefighters, have been injured since the bulk of the fires broke out Monday, and thousands of wild animals, including kangaroos and koalas, were believed to have been caught in the fast-moving flames.

The death toll rose to five after a firefighter in the state of Victoria died from severe burns and a second firefighter drowned in New South Wales after a firefighting boat sank in a lake, officials said.

Authorities in three states said about 220 fires had been extinguished in the past two days and another 70 were under control.

But 60 mph winds and 100-degree temperatures ignited new fires in the parched lands, and officials said there was little chance of controlling many of the blazes for at least two more days.

"The forests are dry. The grass is dead. Everything will burn," said Ted Stuckey, a senior fire fighting control officer.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market churned ahead in active trading today, bidding to extend its early-1985 rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.20 to 1,232.99 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

A survey of economists by the University of Michigan found a majority expecting a recession to set in by the end of the year. But stock-market investors apparently don't agree with that assessment.

Analysts say confidence seems to have grown among market participants lately that growth will continue for some time to come.

That feeling was buttressed by the Federal Reserve's report Tuesday that industrial production rose 0.6 percent in December.

It has also gained support from the recent decline of interest rates and comments by Paul Volcker, the Fed's chairman, suggesting his willingness to pursue a relatively stimulative credit policy.

After declining on Tuesday, rates edged upward in early activity in the credit markets today.

Among this morning's volume leaders, Westinghouse Electric gained $\frac{1}{8}$ to 27; Johnson & Johnson rose $\frac{1}{8}$ to 37 $\frac{5}{8}$; Great Western Financial added $\frac{1}{8}$ to 26 $\frac{3}{8}$, and General Electric was unchanged at 59 $\frac{1}{4}$.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 3.75 to 1,230.79. But most other measures of stock-price trends finished in the plus column.

Advances led declines by about 5 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 155.26 million shares — the eighth highest on record and up from 124.88 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 21 to 98.59. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .97 to 208.46.

Jury Says Time Defamed Sharon

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury in the Ariel Sharon libel case today decided that Time magazine defamed Sharon by indicating that he "consciously intended" Christian Lebanese militiamen to massacre Palestinian civilians in 1982.

The decision was the first of three that the jury must make in order to arrive at a verdict of libel against Time. The jury must continue to deliberate on the issues of falsity and malice.

If the jurors determine Sharon was defamed and the article was false, they then must decide if Time knew the story was false when it was published and if the magazine did so with "actual malice" or "reckless disregard" for the truth.

Each point is to be considered separately. If jurors find in Sharon's favor on all three issues, a minimal trial will be held to determine the damage to his reputation.

During Tuesday's session, the jury of four women and two men sent out notes to the judge requesting a blackboard, a dictionary and such office supplies as file folders and a stapler. They also requested cough medicine and toothpaste.

Just before the jury recessed for the night, Sharon, accompanied by his wife, Lili, and Israeli security guards, made an appearance.

He admired the sketches of courtroom artists and chatted with reporters. "I had my evening rest and my cup of coffee and now I wanted to talk to some people," he said.

Sharon limited his conversation to small talk after his lawyer chastised him for claiming a "moral victory" at a Monday night news conference on the courthouse steps.

"I don't like surprises," Milton Gould, who was informed about Sharon's statements after the news conference, told his client.

"Don't talk to the press," Gould was overheard telling Sharon outside the courtroom.

Donovan Denied Shift Of Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge today denied Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan's bid to have his trial for alleged larceny and filing false business reports moved from a Bronx court to the federal level.

U.S. District Judge Lloyd F. MacMahon denied Donovan's request, saying the doctrines of federalism "mandate that federal courts act with restraint with respect to ongoing state criminal prosecutions and interfere with such prosecutions only when necessary to protect overriding federal interests."

MacMahon said the charges confronting Donovan "in no way pertain to his performance of official duties; nor do his duties as Secretary of Labor provide an explanation or excuse for the crimes for the crimes charged."

MacMahon also noted that Donovan "has specifically testified that he took no action in his official capacity with regard to the subject matter of the indictment."

"Since this prosecution is not brought against (Donovan) for any act under color of such office," he directed the individual events.

Correction

In Monday's edition, the name of Mr. C's Lounge was incorrectly reported in an article dealing with the anniversary of Martin Luther King's death. Also in the same story, event sponsors were listed incorrectly. Although both the Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church and Mr. C's Lounge events came under the auspices of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the church and staff and management of Mr. C's sponsored and directed the individual events.

Dawson Puts On Show As Kinston Tops Rose, 68-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
KINSTON — Tony Dawson turned Kinston High School's gymnasium into a classroom Tuesday night, teaching Rose High School in lesson in offensive board play and at the same time awarded himself the degree of Doctor of Dunkology.
Dawson slammed through half a dozen shots and finished the night with a massive 35 points, many of them off the offensive boards as Kinston rolled to a 68-56 victory.
"I tell you what," Rose Coach Jim Brewington enthused afterwards. "That guy is something. He's some ball player."
Brewington said that there was no question that Kinston was the best team the Rampants had faced this year. "We couldn't do nothing against them," he said. "We got a lesson. They showed us what we have to do to be good."

"We did come back with one of our better halves in the second half, but we didn't do anything in the first half."
"Dawson is just something. He killed us on the boards. He had a lot of those points off the offensive boards," Brewington said.
Kinston did, indeed, beat the Rampants on the boards, by a 45-36 margin, with Dawson and 6-9 Charles Shackelford leading the way. While Shackelford was held in check from the floor — scoring only nine points on the board, he was intimidating underneath, blocking several shots or forcing Rampant shooters too take less than good shots if they got the ball inside next to him.
As a result of the inside pressure, Rose managed to hit only 27 of 66 shots, 40.8 percent. Kinston, meanwhile, dumped in 32 of 60, a fine 53.3 percentage.

Kinston was plagued by turnovers, however, suffering 24 to 17 by Rose.
The Vikings scored the first two baskets of the game before Tyrone Smith put Rose on the board. Kinston then added five more points for an early 9-2 advantage as the Vikings never trailed during the evening.
Rose cut it back to 11-6 before Shackelford hit a free throw and Dawson followed with a three-point play for a 15-6 lead. The margin was stretched to 11, 19-8 on an underneath shot by Dawson. Rose trailed at the end of the first period, 19-10.
Kinston scored the first eight points of the second frame, including three baskets by Dawson, the other by Shackelford for a 27-10 lead. Rose managed to cut it to as little as 13, and trailed, 35-20 at halftime.
In the first two and a half minutes of the second half, Kinston outscored Rose, 10-2, with Dawson scoring six points, as the Vikes ran their lead out to 23, 45-22. Rose got two baskets from Mike Hathaway and a jumper by Carlton Wilson to cut it back to 47-30 before Dawson slammed through two in a row, Shackelford hit a free throw and Rodney Davis scored off a tap for a 54-32 edge. Rose trimmed that to 54-35 at the end of the period.
Martin Norville sparked Rose in the early minutes of the final period as the Rampants scored eight in a row to cut the lead to 54-43. Then, a few minutes later, Dwight Smith hit

Panthers Slip Past Redskins

ROBERSONVILLE — North Pitt gathered steam in the second half and took a 55-46 non-conference basketball victory over Roanoke High School last night.
Roanoke's girls romped to a 51-37 win over the Pant-HERS in their contest.
Roanoke eased out into a 7-6 lead after the first eight minutes of the boys' game, and continued to hang just ahead of the Panthers throughout the rest of the half. The second period ended with the Redskins holding a slim 26-24 lead.
But that was quickly put behind them by the Panthers, who outscored Roanoke, 14-6, in the third period. That allowed North Pitt to take a 38-32 lead into the last quarter. In that, the Panthers outscored the Redskins, 17-14, to take the win.

rally by North Pitt in the final period.
Gloria Duggins led Roanoke with 24 points while Cheryl Randolph added 17. Regina Cox led North Pitt with 18.
The Roanoke girls are now 10-4, while North Pitt's lassies fall to 6-8.
North Pitt returns to Eastern Carolina Conference action on Friday at SouthWest Edgecombe, while Roanoke is back in Northeastern Conference play hosting Washington.

Virginia Snaps 3-Game Skid As Quakers Fall

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Virginia's Cavaliers have snapped a three-game losing streak with a 60-50 victory over Penn's Quakers in Philadelphia.
Freshman forward Mel Kennedy scored seven of his 11 points in the second half to lead the Cavaliers of the Atlantic Coast Conference in Tuesday night's game at the Palestra.

ACC action tonight takes Clemson to Maryland and North Carolina State to North Carolina.
Virginia dominated early in the first half, building an 11-point lead before Penn's Rick Maloney started a 17-0 surge for Penn with a jumper with 7:15 left before intermission. Maloney scored eight of the 17 unanswered Penn points to put the Quakers up 30-28 at the half.

The Quakers controlled the game early in the second half until Virginia came back to score 12 straight points. Kennedy put the Cavaliers ahead 38-37 with a layup at 12:42 and the Cavaliers never trailed again.

Chargers Top Farmville

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — Center Marvin Smith and power forward Doug Anderson dominated the boards in the fourth quarter to lead a 21-8 rally by Ayden-Grifton as the Chargers defeated Farmville Central 58-50 in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball Tuesday.

In the girls game, Ayden-Grifton got on the board early but failed to score again until 1:33 remained in the first half as the Lady Jaguars cruised to a 61-24 victory. Lisa Lang led Farmville with 14 points, while Sylvia Williams added 11.

Danny West paced Ayden-Grifton with 16 points, while senior Mike Dixon chipped in 15 and Anderson 12.

But in the fourth quarter, Anderson posted seven points and Dixon six as Ayden-Grifton erased a 42-37 deficit. Anderson and Smith combined for nine rebounds in the final period including six offensive boards.

"When Smith and Anderson are determined to go after it, they're tough to beat inside," said Charger Coach Bob Murphrey, whose team is now 5-0 in the ECC and 10-3 overall.

"The difference in the game was Smith and Anderson got cranked up in the fourth quarter. I thought we had a great effort from everybody in at the end, and that's what it comes down to.

"We're still a streak team; we can score a lot of points in a short period of time, then go cold for a while. I'd like for us to develop a little more consistency, but that's the way this team is — they've got to play emotional basketball."

While the Chargers' front line was holding a clinic inside, Ayden-Grifton switched to a "triangle-and-two" defense to close down the Jaguar offense.

Smith notched a free throw and Dixon added two field goals as the Chargers finally pulled even at the 6:56 mark of the fourth quarter after trailing since early in the first quarter. Freshman point guard Eric Blount popped in an 18-footer to give Ayden-Grifton the lead with six minutes left, and Anderson added a strong move inside on a follow shot for a 46-42 Charger lead.

Bernard Taylor drove in for a layup for the Jaguars, but Farmville's Andre Vines fouled out with 4:37 remaining and Dixon sank both free throws for a 49-44 margin.

Taylor swished a 17-foot field goal and Dennis Tripp hit a follow shot for the Jaguars, but Anderson posted five points as the Chargers held a 9-2 edge till the buzzer.

"Their triangle-and-two kept us confused," Farmville Coach Mike Terrell admitted. "It was a smart move for Ayden-Grifton; we just didn't play very smart against it. They took us out of our offense; we had the wrong people taking the shots.

"But there were a lot of little things we didn't do well. They got three offensive rebounds off missed free throws that we should have prevented. We had a great chance to get back into it at the end when they missed those free throws near the end, but we just didn't take advantage of it.

"The fourth quarter is usually the best for us, but I think we just panicked tonight."

The Chargers took the early lead with a baseline drive by Dixon and a shot from the corner by West, but Farmville retaliated and took a 16-12 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Ayden-Grifton managed to pull even at 18-18 with 4:55 left in the second quarter, but Farmville rattled off six unanswered points for a 24-18 edge.

The Jaguars went on to take a 34-24 lead at halftime, then expanded the margin to 38-26 with 5:49 left. But Ayden-Grifton dropped in six points with West leading the offense to trim the margin to 38-32 with 4:33 left in the third period.

The Chargers cut the gap to 42-37 going into the final period and scored the first nine points to take control.

"We just didn't compete in the first three quarters," Murphrey said. "In the first half, I thought we played ragged, made some careless turnovers. Then we finally settled down at the end. Our little freshman, Blount, really helped us with good ball handling."

Bobby Evans paced Farmville with 14 points, while Vines, Taylor and Ronnie Barnes had 10 each.

Farmville, which dropped to 2-2 in the conference and 6-8 overall, hosts C.B. Aycock Friday. Ayden-Grifton entertains D.H. Conley Thursday in a non-conference matchup.

LADY JAGS, CHARGERS

The Lady Jaguar defense dogged Ayden-Grifton early in the game, forcing turnovers and creating easy inside shots. Farmville held a 12-2 lead after the first quarter, then posted 14 unanswered points to open the second period.

Cynthia Hicks finally sank a free throw for the Lady Chargers with 1:33 left in the half for a 26-3 margin. Susie Stancill scored inside for Farmville, then Karen Edmonds sank two free throws for A-G.

But Williams added four more from the line for Farmville as the Lady Jags enjoyed a 32-5 halftime bulge.

two straight as the Rampants were able to create several turnovers, to trim the lead to just nine points, 60-61 with 3:33 left.

But Dawson matched Rose on the next four baskets in a row, as the Vikes held on the rest of the way.

In addition to Dawson's 35 points, Davis finished with 14.

Rose was led by Tyrone Smith with 19, while Wilson had 13 and Norville added 10.

The loss dropped Rose to 6-6 overall and 1-3 in Big East play. Kinston climbs to 9-4 overall and 4-0 in league play.

Lady Vikes-Rampettes

Rose's girls fell apart in the final quarter of the game, scoring but three points as Kinston rallied for 12 for their 36-28 win.

Neither team played well in the contest. Kinston scored the first three baskets of the first quarter, but Rose came back to score the last three, tying it at 6-6 after the first eight minutes.

Rose pushed ahead on a free throw by Chris Holec two and a half minutes into the second quarter, 7-6, and held the lead the rest of the half, building up as much as a five-point spread at 13-8. Kinston, however, cut the lead back to 15-12, by intermission.

In the third period, Cathy Murrell hit off a rebound to put Kinston back into the lead, 18-17 and the Valkyries moved out to a 24-19 lead before the end of the quarter. But Rose rallied on four points by Kim Dupree, and then got a basket off a steal by Vicki Parrott for a 25-24 lead at the horn.

Murrell returned the lead to Kinston a minute into the final period, 26-25, and the Valkyries never trailed again. Murrell hit two free throws and Amy Lassiter added one before Murrell scored off a jumper for a 31-25 lead.

Rose was never able to get anything started in the quarter, as Kinston moved out to the eight-point lead at the end.

Murrell finished with 18 points to lead Kinston. Dupree had 15 to spark Rose.

The Kinston girls are now 6-6 overall and 2-2 in league play. Rose falls to 5-8, 1-3.

Vike Wrestlers Gain Revenge

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's wrestlers, after losing their first outing of the year last week at West Carteret, played host to the Patriots last night and reversed things, rolling up a 39-29 victory.

The Vikings, too, were without one of their regular starters, out with an injury, in the rematch, but were still able to put things together for the win.

Conley won seven matches, one of them by a forfeit and another on an injury default. Of the remaining five, four came on pins.

The injury default came in the 100-pound match where David Farris had built up an 11-1 lead over Dan McCormick, the defending league champ, before McCormick had to bow out.

At 157, Sewell Mills won by a pin for Conley in his first outing of the year. He had missed previous matches recovering from a broken leg suffered in the fall. At 197, Ricky Rice took a 12-9 decision over Jay Mulwee, who had defeated Rice last week in their previous meeting.

The win boosted the Conley record to 11-1 on the year and 4-1 in the league. Conley, ranked 19th in the state this week, travels to White Oak on Friday.

More Autonomy For Grid Schools

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Coaches of so-called "minor sports" and schools with Mormon students were gearing up for battle as a sometimes-confused NCAA convention drew to a close.

About 1,500 delegates labored Tuesday through two-thirds of the 145 legislative proposals. Most significantly, Division I-A schools, the major football powers, gained a measure of long-sought voting autonomy and a controversial drug abuse measure was tabled for a year.

At least two proposals figured to draw heated debate today. Many schools were expected to oppose a complicated plan aimed at limiting playing seasons in many sports, including baseball and tennis.

And several Western schools promised a bitter fight against taking away the exemption to the five-year eligibility rule now enjoyed by athletes on church missions. Fifty-two members of Brigham Young's No. 1 football team this past season had served on two-year missions for the Mormon Church and used the waiver exemption.

The controversial drug proposal was expected to draw the most debate. Backing away from the issue was a painful decision, said many delegates.

"A lot of people are going to think that either we don't know how serious the problem is or we don't care," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said. "That's very unfortunate. The legislation as written simply had too many things wrong with it."

"A motion to refer it back to committee for a year was virtually unopposed."

"The importance of this subject cannot be overestimated," said Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn, a member of the committee that wrote the measure. "But despite the efforts that have been made, it is obvious that there are serious flaws with the legislation as it is presented."

Many schools opposed the plan because it banned only performance-enhancing drugs and not "street drugs," such as marijuana. Others argued that substitutes were readily available for every drug the proposal would have banned.

As expected, there was almost no opposition to giving Division I-A broad legislative autonomy. The football powers will be able to vote independently of the smaller schools on such issues as size of coaching staffs, number of scholarships, recruiting rules and academic standards.

It was only a partial victory, said many of the football powers. Any action taken by I-A will be subject to rescission by majority vote of the entire Division I membership. And in addition, a companion proposal that would have given I-A schools greater control over financial aid was defeated.

"We made some progress. It's a step in the right direction," said Carl James, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference. "It was nice that there was not a lot of bitter argument. But change does come slowly sometimes, doesn't it."

There was much confusion over an amendment to lower the number of sports a school must sponsor in Division I-A. The schools believed they were voting to require each institution to reduce the requirements to six sports for both men and women — or to leave the requirements as they are — eight for men and six for women, with the women slated to go to eight in 1988.

But NCAA President John Toner explained after the vote that the requirement would be eight men's and only six women's sports without a scheduled increase for women.

The error was finally reversed by jumping ahead 26 proposals and rewording a measure intended to deal only with women's field hockey and softball, then going back to the original measure.

Division I-A wound up committed to eight men's and eight women's sports, effective immediately.

"It does seem to me that this was not well handled," said one man from the floor. "We feel we didn't get what we voted for."

In other action, NCAA delegates:

- Voted to discontinue the practice of providing complimentary tickets and instead will now use a pass list.
- Gave its Postseason Football Committee the power to levy fines on bowl games that violate NCAA rules.
- Turned down a proposal that would have done away with the late November date for issuing bowl invitations and thrown the selection process wide open.
- Rejected a proposal to raise from 70 to 75 the number of total scholarships for Division I-AA football teams.

Greene Central Downs Aycock, Lady Rams Roll

SNOW HILL — Greene Central, putting together a fine third period, gained a 57-51 victory over C.B. Aycock last night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Greene Central's Lady Rams recorded their 13th straight victory of the season last night with a 52-38 victory in their contest.

Aycock shot away to a 14-8 lead in the opening period of the boys' game, but the Rams outhit the Falcons, 13-11, in the second frame to trim the lead to 25-21 at intermission.

Then, in the third period, the Rams caught fire, outscoring Aycock, 21-10, to charge into a 42-35 lead. They allowed Aycock a 16-15 margin in the final period.

"We've been playing our best ball in the third period," Coach Gregg Ashorn said. "But our starting five all played well in the third period last night. They picked up the intensity and played good defense. In the second period, we had given them nine free throws (Aycock hit seven of those), and in the third quarter they didn't shoot once. We weren't forcing passes. We settled down and took the shots the defense gave us."

Ashorn said Steve Harrison, James Hill, Mike Warren and Anthony Artis all played well in the game.

Artis led the Ram scoring with 18 points. Aycock was led by Tim Fuller with 22 and Tim Alston with 17.

The win upped Greene Central's record to 4-9 overall and was their first in four league starts.

The Lady Rams, 13-0 overall, recorded their fourth ECC victory in downing the Lady Falcons.

Greene Central took an 8-4 lead in the first quarter, then shot away from Aycock in the second, 21-6. That made it 29-10 at the half.

The Falcons rallied in the third period, 13-9, cutting the lead to 38-23. Aycock held a 15-14 edge in the final period to no avail.

Cyndi Hicks led Greene Central with 19 points, while Dalen Herring added 10. Kelly Malpass led Aycock with 23 points.

Greene Central travels to Southern Nash on Friday.

Bullets Rally Past Lakers

MATTAMUSKEET — Jamesville utilized patient offense and a tough zone defense inside to rally for a 50-44 victory over Mattamuskeet Tuesday in Tobacco Belt I-A high school basketball.

In the girls game, Tammy Crisp tallied 11 points and Cindy Getchell 10 as Jamesville edged Mattamuskeet 41-40. Mary Brimmage led Mattamuskeet with 17 points.

Tracy Peele fired in 15 points and Richie Ange added 12 points for Jamesville, now 4-3 in the Tobacco Belt and 4-5 overall. Otis Shaw paced Mattamuskeet with 18 points.

The Lakers trailed 39-37 going into the fourth quarter after falling behind by five in the third period.

"We kept chipping away at their lead," Jamesville Coach Bill Johnson said. "We sort of slowed it down in the fourth quarter, ran a patient offense and worked for the good shot. That opened up a lot of people — Ange had the most points in the quarter with four and six people scored."

"(Mattamuskeet) wasn't shooting too well from outside, so we packed back in a zone defense and shut down their inside game."

Villanova Rolls Past 15th-Ranked Eagles

By The Associated Press
The roller-coaster ride through the Big East continues for No. 18 Villanova.

Junior forward Harold Pressley scored 22 points, senior guard Gary McLain got a career-high 20 and Ed Pinckney contributed another strong game Tuesday night as Villanova beat No. 15 Boston College 85-66 in college basketball.

The victory came three days after the Wildcats had lost in overtime to No. 1 Georgetown, another Big East rival. In its conference opener, Villanova had handed No. 7 Syracuse its only loss of the season.

"After the tough loss on Saturday, I was very pleased with the way we played tonight," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said.

The game was the only one involving a Top Twenty team.

Villanova led visiting Boston College the entire way, building a 39-23 margin late in the first half. It was 51-36 early in the second half before the Eagles made a run, pulling within 57-51.

But Villanova scored six straight points and was in command the rest of the way.

"They responded well, especially on defense," Massimino said of his team after it limited the Eagles to 39 percent shooting from the floor.

Michael Adams, Boston College's leading scorer, was held to eight points, half of his average.

BC Coach Gary Williams thought his team caused some of its own problems.

"I think we missed six layups in the first half," Williams said. "You don't get those shots very often. They played well, but I think missing the shots hurt our confidence."

Pinckney scored 12 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and had nine assists for Villanova, 10-3 overall and 3-2 in the Big East.

Roger McCready scored 16 points for Boston College, 11-3 and 2-3.

In other games, Tony McIntosh scored 11 of his 13 points in the second half to lead Fordham over St. Peter's 62-55 in a Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference game.

Tigers Top Aces, 72-56

WILLIAMSTON — Mike Griffin and Tony Doughty fired in 22 points each to lead the Williamston Tigers to a 72-56 thrashing of Edenton in Northeastern 3-A high school basketball action Tuesday.

David Little added 13 points for the Tigers. Rodney Leigh paced Edenton with 20 points, while Lawrence Holley chipped in 16.

The Tigers raced out to a 20-9 lead after the first quarter, then expanded the margin to 35-25 at halftime.

Trinity Christian Rallies For Victory Over Faith

GOLDSBORO — Trinity Christian School rallied from a nine-point first period deficit and pulled off a 49-46 victory last night over Faith Christian Academy of Goldsboro.

In the third period, Trinity outscored Faith, 14-7, and pushed into a slim 34-33 lead at the horn. In the final period, they outscored Faith, 15-13, to hold on for the win.

Jimmy Powers led Trinity with 12 points, while Todd Jones led Faith with 20.

Banks' Foreign Offices Help State Economy

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina banking is developing a foreign accent, with the state's three largest banks operating overseas offices they say enhance the state's economy in several ways.

Officials of NCNB Corp. and First Union National Bank, both of Charlotte, and Winston-Salem-based Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. say the international market is the place to be for those that thrive in its invigorating and ever-changing economic climate.

"It's going to be hard; not everyone is going to succeed," said F. William Vandiver Jr., executive vice president of NCNB's Merchant

Banking Group. "There's a different mentality with lots of cultural issues, lots of people issues. We've been doing it for 10 years and we just now got our feet wet. We think we know what we're doing now."

He said NCNB was refocusing its international strategy to concentrate on merchant banking, which involves arranging financing for a fee rather than providing the actual capital.

NCNB has a full-service branch as well as a wholly-owned subsidiary, called Carolina Bank Ltd., in London, with branches of each on the nearby island of Guernsey, Vandiver said. There's another NCNB branch in Hong Kong and representative offices in Johannesburg, South Africa; Sao Paulo, Brazil and Sydney, Australia.

First Union and Wachovia have only representative offices, whose staffers seek out and aid customers but who cannot make loans or take deposits. They aid foreign companies building plants in North Carolina and North Carolina companies seeking financing for exports.

First Union's offices are in Tokyo, London and Dusseldorf, Germany, said Dave Dorminey, senior vice president and manager of the international division. Wachovia has one in Zurich, Switzerland, said Donald Carson, senior vice president in the international banking group.

In addition, all three banks have so-called "paper branches" either in Nassau or on Grand Cayman Island. These unstaffed offices are needed to operate in the Eurodollar market, which are not subject to the reserve requirements of the Federal Reserve, Carson said.

Wachovia's Zurich office is aimed primarily at West Germany and Britain, whose companies have made North Carolina one of the leading states for foreign investment, he said. The office helps the companies arrange loans to construct their plants, operating accounts, deposits and personal items like home mortgages and credit cards.

"To do that, we find it advantageous to have people on the spot in Europe to visit with the financial people in the parent corporation and find out their specific needs," Carson said.

Maintaining an overseas office is expensive — about $300,000 a year — but it is also profitable, he said. Overall, Wachovia has about $300 million in loans in Europe.

Thanks in part to its Tokyo office, First Union has banking arrangements with 25 of the 34 Japanese companies in North Carolina, Dorminey said. He said the German and British firms were harder to count because they typically buy into existing plants, while the Japanese usually start from scratch.

"We do coordinate from time to time with ... the (state) Department of Commerce out recruiting for industries and various chambers of commerce doing the same thing," he said. "While there is a competitive aspect to it ... first of all we want to get the industry in the state. Second, we would like to get the banking relationships."

NCNB, whose overseas assets make up about 10 percent of its total $15 billion is also still involved with foreign investors. But it is placing more emphasis lately on U.S. customers doing business overseas, Vandiver said.

"As a commercial bank, we normally lend them money," he said. "As a merchant bank, we're involved in advising them in acquiring and structuring complicated transactions like leveraged leases. ... It's more brain-intensive. It's paid by fees rather than driven by lending money."

For example, one customer, a tobacco leaf dealer in Oxford, needed to borrow local currency to meet its payroll in a joint venture in Brazil. NCNB acted as a go-between for the firm and a Brazilian bank, Vandiver said.

In another case, a mining equipment company wanted to export a $35 million piece of equipment to a developing nation but couldn't find a bank willing to risk additional financing in the Third World.

"We went through our London operation and found banks willing to take the exposure," he said. "We ended up at no risk and we got the fee. The U.S. balance of payments was healthier and the exporters were happy."

IN THE STATE

Not So Official

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's first "official" act in office, swearing in members of his cabinet, wasn't so official, after all.

A day after Martin swore in his appointees, a Superior Court judge readministered the oath of office after Martin's authority to administer the oaths was questioned.

"To be honest with you, we didn't even know what the oath was," said Jack Hawke, special assistant to the governor.

Hawke contends Martin's act was official. He said special Superior Court Judge Donald Smith was called in "so you guys wouldn't raise any questions about whether it was proper. We wanted to cover our avenues," Hawke said.

Law To Be Upheld

RALEIGH (AP) — Superior Court Judge Robert Hobgood says he has decided to uphold all the challenged provisions of North Carolina's 15-month-old bingo law.

Hobgood of Louisburg told attorneys for the state and the Durham Council for the Blind Tuesday that he would reject the council's 15-month-old challenge to the law and would require that all provisions be enforced.

"My guess is that it will affect nearly every bingo parlor game in the state," said Associate Attorney General David Crump, who represented the state in the case.

The challenge has enabled charity groups to continue holding bingo games under old rules that permitted professional consultants to run the games despite a new law that went into effect in October 1983.

Judge Cited In Complaint

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — The lawyer representing former Cleveland County Register of Deeds Marjorie Rogers has filed a formal complaint about the conduct of a Superior Court judge in connection with embezzlement charges against his client.

O. Max Gardner III of Shelby has complained to the North Carolina Judicial Standards Commission that Judge John Friday violated the judicial code of impartiality by acting as a police officer and prosecutor in initiating and supervising the criminal investigation of Ms. Rogers.

The complaint contends that Friday also violated the N.C. Judicial Code of Conduct by speaking publicly to the media about charges against Ms. Rogers.

SBI officers arrested Ms. Rogers, 56, after a search of her desk and purse uncovered $12 in marked bills investigators had planted in the office cash supply. Ms. Rogers, a three-term register of deeds, has resigned pending her trial's outcome.

A county grand jury indicted Ms. Rogers Monday on seven counts of embezzlement of public funds, totaling $142, between Dec. 14 and Jan. 9. If convicted of the felonies, she could face up to 70 years in prison.

More Tornado Relief

RALEIGH (AP) — A change in the way $5 million in state-directed grant money is distributed will mean more housing assistance for victims of the March 28 tornadoes, state officials say.

The state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has revamped distribution guidelines for tornado relief funds of the Community Development Block Grant program.

A new hardship review process will provide assistance to some victims who had been considered ineligible.

Representatives of nine counties and two towns damaged by the storms that swept eastern North Carolina met earlier this month with the staff of the Division of Community Assistance to discuss expanding eligibility criteria.

Extortion Charged

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year-old boy has been charged with felonious extortion after authorities said he and three other youths often threatened a high school classmate with a beating if he didn't turn over his lunch money.

Timothy Jefferson was charged with one count of extortion, a felony charge that carries a penalty of up to 10 years in prison, said Lt. E. Ray Bass of the Wilson County Sheriff's Department. Extortion charges also are being sought against three boys, one age 14 and two 15, he said.

The boys, all from Wilson, and their alleged victim, who lives in the county, cannot be identified because of their age, Bass said.

After a teacher at James B. Hunt Jr. Senior High School saw one student "hit the fellow in the face" earlier this month, the youth told school officials that four homeroom classmates had taken 80 cents to $1 from him almost daily since November, Bass said.

Pair Survive Fire

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A handicapped man and his father, who carried him to where firefighters could reach them, were the only survivors of a fire that raced through a Yadkin County house and killed two people.

Firefighters found the bodies of Tony G. Trivette, 20, and Jean Carol Charpentier, 16, in the basement of the house, Yadkin County Fire Marshal Ronnie Norman said Tuesday.

William E. Brooks Jr., 54, and his son, William D. Brooks, 29, a paraplegic, were both in serious condition Wednesday morning, suffering from smoke inhalation. The elder Brooks was in Baptist Hospital's burn center in Winston-Salem, while his son was in the intensive care unit at Hoots Memorial Hospital in Yadkinville.

Prizes In Poetry

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — John Ashbery of New York and Fred Chappell of Greensboro, N.C., will share this year's Bollingen Prize in Poetry, it was announced Tuesday.

Ashbery, 57, was cited for his mastery of the language, while Chappell, 48, was recognized for his clarity in writing about the complexities of everyday life.

Established in 1949 by the Yale University Library and awarded every other year, the Bollingen Prize honors one or more living American poets for the best collection published in a two-year period or for a body of poetry over several years.

Ashbery and Chappell will receive $2,500 apiece.

Martin Says No To State Holiday

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said Martin Luther King crusaded for opportunities, not for holidays, and said he didn't believe the slain civil rights leader's birthday should be observed with a legal state holiday.

"My belief is that people don't need more days off, they need more days on," Martin said Tuesday after a service commemorating King's birthday held in the auditorium of the state Archives and History Building. "When Dr. King was alive, he did not crusade for days off, he crusaded for opportunities.... What is uppermost in my mind is to work for opportunities for people, for jobs."

Martin said many individuals and groups, including women, were not recognized with legal holidays that closed business and government offices. "There are probably many men and women we could honor with holidays on non-working days," Martin said.

The Rev. Aaron Johnson of Fayetteville, the state's new Secretary of Correction, told an overflow audience in the auditorium that blacks have reached the Promised Land King sought in the 1960s.

"I think back to the 1960s... when we had one token black in state government," Johnson told the predominantly black audience. "When I think of that one man and look out over this packed house (of state employees), I believe we have arrived in the Promised Land. We

SCS Agents Plan Effort To Continue

By The Associated Press
With the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in danger of falling to the federal budget ax, the supervisors of 91 soil and water conservation districts across North Carolina are preparing for a battle to save the agency.

More than 400 North Carolina district supervisors voted unanimously last week at their annual convention in Raleigh to launch a campaign to save the Soil Conservation Service.

Frank Jeter Jr., public relations director of the statewide group of district supervisors, said a plan proposed by federal budget director David Stockman calls for the elimination of the Soil Conservation Service in two phases.

Delegates to the convention agreed to try to block plans to phase out the agency by contacting members of Congress, contacting state legislatures and writing letters to newspapers.

"We need supervisors in 3,000 districts around the nation to get grassroots movements going so that congressmen in every state get the same message," Jeter said.

Man Convicted In Boy's Death

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An Avery's Cove man convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the death of his 12-month-old stepson was playfully tossing the child in the air when the boy fell on a small wooden rocking chair, a defense attorney says.

A Buncombe County Superior Court jury deliberated less than half an hour before returning a guilty verdict against Karl Kevin Wagner, 24, on Tuesday.

Wagner, scheduled to be sentenced this morning by Judge Robert E. Gaines, could receive up to 10 years in prison.

District Attorney Ron Brown alleged that Wagner unintentionally killed the child by failing to get him to a hospital immediately after the accident.

But defense attorney Herbert Hyde said Wagner checked David Eugene Parham for injuries immediately after he fell, but the child appeared to be fine because the injuries were internal.

Medical testimony showed that the child was close to death when he arrived at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville the night of July 11, and 10 hours after Wagner said the boy was hurt in an accident at the family's home.

The boy had massive internal injuries that included bruises and tears in his liver, pancreas and small intestine, according to medical testimony presented during the trial.

Street Honor?

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — Rock musician Bruce Springsteen may get a hometown street renamed in his honor, along with a Main Street parade and a key to the city where he grew up, an official said.

City Clerk Vivian Taylor said the borough council will consider renaming South Street as Bruce Springsteen Boulevard at its Jan. 28 meeting.

However, Mayor John G. Mackin said the honors would not be bestowed upon Springsteen if he accept them in person.

have overcome.

"But we must not stop," he said. "We must possess the Promised Land."

Johnson said everyone must continue to work for equal opportunity and a society based on "equality, justice and love."

"Martin Luther King's name must never die," Johnson said. "He was a man of all time for all people. I still love Dr. Martin Luther King."

"We must remember that it wasn't just the passage of laws that brought us this far," Johnson said. "God brought us this far. We must lift high the moral light."

Asheboro Dog Is Cited For Honors

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — When Burnie Wilson was staring into the face of an angry 600-pound hog, he relied on a little help from man's best friend. And the help Wilson got from his German shepherd, Lady, has earned the dog special recognition.

Lady is one of nine finalists in the Ken-L Ration Dog Hero of the Year program, profiled in the January issue of Consumers Digest magazine.

Last Sept. 8, Wilson said he was confronted by an angry 600-pound sow while he was chasing six piglets. "That old sow, she charged me," he said Tuesday. "I beat her off with a stick, but she was still charging."

Then, Wilson said, he fell and broke his arm. To the rescue came 3-year-old Lady, who jumped on the sow, bit the animal in the neck and led it on a chase.

"I believe that sow would have tore me up," said Wilson. "She (Lady) is a wonderful dog."

Lady, however, faces stiff competition from eight other daring dogs, including:

- A Wisconsin collie that protected a man from an attacking bear.
- A Michigan German shepherd that found and brought help for a woman seriously injured when she fell off a horse.
- A New York mixed-breed puppy that kept a 2-year-old girl warm during the night until searchers found her.
- A California Labrador retriever-Irish setter mix that saved a man from drowning.

Last year's winner, Villa, then a 1-year-old Newfoundland, dug out a young girl trapped in a snowbank and dragged the girl 40 feet to her Villas, N.J., home.

Performers Pay Tribute To Myrna Loy

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In 120 movies, actress Myrna Loy developed from a luscious vamp to the perfect wife, sensible and warm-hearted but sexy and sophisticated, all without a single Academy Award nomination.

But in Tuesday night's "A Tribute to Myrna Loy," the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences honored the ruby-haired star with the languid eyes whose career has spanned nearly six decades, from silent films to the talkies to television.

Two seven-foot Oscars, seen annually during the Academy Awards broadcast, joined several stars on the stage at Carnegie Hall to honor

Miss Loy, 79, who sat in a center box, looking frail but radiant in a spangled gown.

"How I wish I'd been born earlier," said Burt Reynolds, who chose Miss Loy to play his mother in "The End" in 1978. "I don't know if I was a good enough actor, but I would love to have played some of those parts opposite Miss Loy."

"Myrna Loy, what a joy you are," said Lillian Gish. "And how we love you as a result."

Robert Mitchum, who made "The Red Pony" with Miss Loy in 1949, said, "She just knew what makes a heroine, and what keeps a queen a queen."

Tributes from some of the 2,800 people at Carnegie Hall alternated with clips from some of Miss Loy's 120 movies. All who spoke finally marched on stage together and waved at Miss Loy, who returned the salute.

Miss Loy, who teamed with John Barrymore, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Tyrone Power, Cary Grant and Clifton Webb, found her "perfect pairing" with William Powell, who died last year at 91.

They made 13 movies together, most notably the series of six urbane comedy-mystery "Thin Man" films of the 1930s and '40s.

He played suave, retired sleuth Nick Charles. Miss Loy was his peppery, witty socialite wife, Nora, always ready to exchange quips with a safecracker or give a dinner party for murder suspects.

"Of all the leading men, the one

I'd like most to have been is William Powell. Nick and Nora Charles. I wish we could be them," said Reynolds. "I've always worshipped Myrna."

"She was the perfect vamp, sultry and savage, and then became America's ideal as the perfect wife," said actress Lauren Bacall, mistress of ceremonies.

Miss Loy "has always represented class and the highest standards of acting, through one of the longest and most unusual careers in film history," Gene Allen, Academy president, said at the tribute, a benefit for the Academy's educational and film preservation programs.

During the evening, "The Animal Kingdom," a movie Miss Loy made with the late Leslie Howard in 1932, was shown for the first time in 50 years.

All prints were believed destroyed, but one discovered in a Warner Brothers vault was restored by the University of Southern California's film archives.

It was Miss Loy's first leading role as a white woman. She had played a long succession of Oriental femme fatales in her early black-and-white films, despite her red hair and a rash of freckles.

Born near Helena, Mont., on Aug. 1, 1905, she started in show business as a dancing teacher, and was chosen to appear in a stage show with "The Thief of Baghdad" at Grauman's Chinese Theater.

Myrna Williams "temporarily" substituted the last name Loy for its exotic sound. Rudolph Valentino, looking for an Oriental siren for the 1925 "What Price Beauty," saw her at Grauman's and the Third World femme fatale saga was on. Her first Occidental role, a small one, was in 1930 in "Renegades."

In her later years, she has been playing character parts, and was most recently seen as Alan King's secretary in the 1980 movie, "Just Tell Me What You Want."

She appeared once in a television situation comedy, "Love, Sidney."

"Very cleverly we cast her as a movie star and me as president of her fan club," said Tony Randall, the series' star.

'Thorn Birds' Scores High As Rerun

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Thorn Birds," the ABC miniseries about forbidden love between a young woman and a priest soared in reruns last week, as many viewers apparently agreed with the network's promo: "Once is not enough."

Last week's three installments of "The Thorn Birds" all finished in the Top 25, attracting more viewers in repeat than every regular ABC series it pre-empted. The No. 2 miniseries of all time when it was broadcast nearly two years ago, "The Thorn Birds" tied "Shogun" as the No. 3 repeat miniseries behind "Roots" and "Scrupes."

The success of "The Thorn Birds" and the highest rating in the four-year run of "Dynasty" led ABC to its best performance of the season. Still, ABC finished behind CBS, while "Dynasty" was barely beaten by "Dallas" as the top show for the week of Jan. 7-13.

According to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures released Tuesday, CBS won its 14th week out of 16 this season, averaging an 18.1 rating in prime time. ABC had a 17.3 and NBC averaged a 16.2. The three-network total rating of 51.4 was the season's highest.

For the 16-week season, CBS is averaging a 17.2 to NBC's 16.1 and ABC's 15.1.

A rating equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes watching, on average, a given minute of a network's prime-time schedule.

"The Thorn Birds" was on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday (three of ABC's weakest nights), but it skipped Wednesday, ABC's strongest night, when "Dynasty" turned in a 27.7 rating. CBS' "Dallas" had a 27.8. For the season,

"Dynasty" is the top program, averaging a 25.4 to "Dallas" 25.3.

The rest of the top 10 last week, in order, were NBC's "The Cosby Show," CBS' "60 Minutes," NBC's "The A-Team," CBS' "Falcon Crest" and "Murder, She Wrote," tied for seventh, CBS' "Crazy Like a Fox" and CBS' "Kate & Allie."

CBS' Sunday night lineup of "60 Minutes," "Murder, She Wrote," "Crazy Like a Fox" and "Trapper John, M.D." (No. 20) is formidable. Last Sunday, these shows averaged a 22.0 rating to a 14.6 and a 14.2 for the competitive programming on NBC and ABC, respectively.

"Murder She Wrote" was one of the few new hits last fall and "Crazy Like a Fox," which began Dec. 30, is a second-season success.

Carroll Recital At ECU Friday

Robert P. Carroll Jr. of Woodbridge, Va., will present his full senior recital in French Horn at 7 p.m. Friday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Carroll, a student of James H. Parnell, will be accompanied by Cynthia Thompson, piano, and by Parnell in the French Horn composition by Telemann.

He has selected five compositions for his program — Telemann's "Suite in F for Two Horns"; Bozza's "En Foret"; "Villanelle" by Dukas; the second movement of Arnold's "Concerto for Horn"; and Nelyb's "Scherzo Concertante."

Homes Entered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dukes of Hazzard" star John Schneider and his wife, television newscaster Tawny Little Schneider, lost $36,000 in goods from a burglary of their home, and another burglary was reported at a nearby home owned by Michael Wayne, son of the late John Wayne, police said.

The Schneiders returned home Monday night and discovered the burglary at their Studio City home, 11 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, police Detective James Gerardi said Tuesday.

Items stolen included a television, rugs and silverware, Gerardi said.

Tenants at Wayne's Toluca Lake home, about 10 miles northwest of downtown, reported Sunday that about $13,000 in stereo equipment, silverware, and other goods had been stolen.

Dangerfield Tops List Of 'Dullest'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Rodney Dangerfield finally got some respect. But respect like this — who needs it?

The comedian is rated the favorite on a dull group's list of "10 Dullest Americans of 1984," just ahead of actress Bo Derek and popcorn maker Orville Redenbacher.

(Dangerfield) has the respect of dull people everywhere — he's the original dull guy who made good," International Dull Folks, Unlimited, says in a proclamation scheduled for release today.

It calls him America's "dean of low esteem."

Completing the yawn parade of Dull Lifestyle winners are ex-major league baseball player Bob Uecker, newswoman Barbara Walters, cartoon character Mike Doonesbury, television host Gary Collins and auto magnate Alfred Ford.

The group gave Dull Brain awards to the Rev. Jerry Falwell and Barbara Bush, wife of the vice president.

Bo Derek has drawn yawns before — her movie "Bolero" was honored recently by the Boring Institute of Maplewood, N.J.

Mrs. Derek and her husband, John, "made the hilarious mistake of thinking that audiences wanted to see Bo perform with her clothes on," International Dull Folks, Unlimited, said.

CP&L Fights Refund As 'Nightmare'

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say it would be an administrative "nightmare" to repay excess charges and then try to recover the refunds if the state Supreme Court rules in favor of the utility company.

Instead, the company says it wants to delay the refund, ordered by the North Carolina Utilities Commission, until legal questions over its latest rate increase are cleared up.

The utilities commission on Nov. 20 ordered the company to make refunds ranging from $1.70 to $3.40 for the typical residential customer, depending on how much electricity was used.

CP&L estimates the refund would total $3.5 million. It covers revenues collected by the utility under a temporary $92 million rate increase that went into effect Sept. 22. The rate increase exceeded the $64.3 million eventually approved by the commission in its Nov. 20 rate order.

Customers would receive the refunds in the form of credits on monthly bills.

But CP&L claims it shouldn't have to make the refunds now because an appeal of the commission's rate decision is pending before the N.C. Supreme Court. The rate increase was appealed by the state Attorney General's Office, which said the commission approved too high an increase, and CP&L, which said it didn't get enough.

The Supreme Court is not expected to hear the appeals until this summer.

G. Clark Crampton, an attorney for the commission's Public Staff, said Tuesday that he was "not aware of anybody ignoring the clear orders of the commission in the manner that CP&L has done here."

Robert H. Bennick Jr., the commission's general counsel, said CP&L had not followed traditional procedure under which companies seek a commission or court stay or orders that they appeal.

The company also argues that it would not harm customers by a delay in paying the refunds because, under state law, it must pay 10 percent interest on the amount involved from the effective date of the interim increase until the court rules.

Bennick said the commission probably will rule next week on the issue of whether CP&L must make the refunds now or delay the payments until the Supreme Court rules.

He added that the case could break new legal ground on the retroactive rate-making issue, noting that such rate-making is "clearly illegal" under rulings of the state Supreme Court.

Suit Filed Over Body Donation

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The daughter of a Rowan County woman whose body was donated to the University of North Carolina has filed a lawsuit in connection with the alleged sale of 11 cadavers by a former UNC employee.

In a lawsuit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Greensboro, Sherry Hogan Motes charges that UNC sold her mother's body and it was later cremated "in order to hide evidence of wrongdoing."

She asks for $14 million from UNC, its board of governors, medical school dean and former anatomical remains curator and from the Florida Mortuary Service of Miami and its director, Fred Richard.

Ms. Motes, of Tempe, Ariz., said in the lawsuit that the body of her mother, 68-year-old Maggie Cox Hogan of Landis, was given to people "who would use the body for illegal purposes."

"Anybody who didn't have authorization to use the body would be using it for illegal purposes," said Sharif Abdullah, Ms. Motes' attorney.

Mrs. Hogan's body was one of 11 that the university acknowledged in August were sent to the Florida Mortuary Service in Miami. The school said then that they were sent to a medical school in Martinique.

Lester Sandlin, UNC's former curator for anatomical remains, was charged in August with stealing and selling the 11 cadavers. In December, he was indicted on 25 more counts of embezzlement involving cadavers. He also has been charged with cheating the Veterans Administration out of burial fees and "self-dealing" — doing business as a UNC curator with his own Durham mortuary service.

POSTAL EXAM WORKSHOP

CLERK-CARRIER

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Exam at the Rocky Mount Area Post Offices in the 278-279 Zip Code Areas (Excluding Rocky Mount) when it is announced. (Last given in 1982—and since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!)

It is possible to get a very high score with adequate preparation: From years of experience and discussions with our Advisory Board (consisting of former Postmasters, training managers, and examiners), we know that it takes exactly four hours to teach everything you need to know to get a score of 95% or better—which is what you need to get a job!

4-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

Over 100,000 people nationwide have used our methods to successfully prepare for the Clerk-Carrier Exam. But don't take our word for it, take our guarantee: Come to the workshop. If you don't feel at the end of the course that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your final official score is less than 95% after using our techniques, we will refund your tuition in full!

This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you're ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given.

Benefits derived from this course extend far beyond the Postal Exam. The skills and attitudes will help in every area of future learning and testing.

WORKSHOP TUITION—$35 (includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Core Guide to Postal Exams with 6 complete practice tests; a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, POSTAL EXAM ALERT WITH SIGN-UP DATES MAILED TO YOUR HOME. Follow up consultation privileges. Achievement Award to high scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). What's up at Lincoln-Mercury?

Sales, Not prices.

Sales up 33%.
 Lincoln-Mercury car sales were up 33% in 1984, the largest sales percentage increase of all domestics, based on manufacturers' reported retail deliveries. Our share of the automotive market grew by 18%.

First in customer satisfaction among domestic cars.
 Lincoln and Mercury cars earned the highest customer satisfaction ratings of all domestic cars. That's according to the 1984 Customer Satisfaction Index survey of buyers of new 1983 model cars 12-14 months after purchase. J.D. Power & Associates, an independent marketing research company, conducted this survey.

Highest quality ratings.
 Our cars were rated the highest quality cars built in America, based on an average of owner-reported problems in the prior six months in a 1984 survey of '81-'83 models designed and built in the U.S.

No price increase.
 Unlike GM and Chrysler, we have not raised our car prices in 1985. Now is the best time ever to visit your Lincoln-Mercury dealer.

Reagan To Cut Funding Request For Arts Agency

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Performers who count on federal largesse say President Reagan's proposal to slash funding for the National Endowment for the Arts would hurt, but they say they'll survive though some programs may not.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed Tuesday that Reagan will request $144.5 million for the arts agency in fiscal 1986 — $500,000 more than he sought for the current fiscal year, but almost 12 percent less than the $163.7 million appropriated by Congress.

Congressional support for the NEA may fade, however, amid efforts to reduce budget deficits that exceed $200 billion a year.

Smaller, experimental dance, theater, opera and music groups which in the past relied heavily on government grants say they would suffer in competition with larger, more established companies for competitive corporate and private funding. And big and small organizations will press Congress for more money.

"It's going to be a much tougher fight this year because everybody all across the country is biting the bullet," said William P. Wingate, managing director of the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles and a member of the board of the American Arts Alliance.

"In three years, we've dropped the grant program from over 260 theaters to fewer than 200 nationally. All of the theaters getting money and some of the theaters not getting money are deserving," he said.

Nicholas Grimaldi, executive assistant at the National Association for Regional Ballet, said government grants are more than money. "It's a validation of your worth in your field. It really is, in a way, akin to a 'Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval,'" he said.

Federal support "has been strongly successful in stimulating support from others — private, corporate," said Kenneth Haas, general manager of the Cleveland Orchestra. "A reduction can have a chilling effect on other sources."

There are about 400 dance companies in the United States, according to Carol Dioguardi, executive director of the Corporate Fund for Dance.

"Unless they are funded, they will not be able to perform," she said. "Maintaining repertory is most important. Major dance companies seek new choreography which comes from smaller companies that are trying to survive."

The arts community expressed great dismay in interviews with The Associated Press, but no one wrote off the arts in America.

"It's mostly a point of view about the arts that seems to be lacking," said Joseph Papp, producer of the New York Shakespeare Festival. "They have points of view about various other things — Central America and so forth. But you have to have a philosophical attitude toward the arts in order to support it properly in a country this size."

Papp said the festival's 1984 budget is $10.6 million, including $437,000 from the NEA. The proposed cuts would not greatly affect his productions.

But an "art in the schools" program would be among the first to be eliminated in Montana. The state's "Folk Life Program," which maintains a folklore expert who records old fiddle music, cooking methods, tall tales and other folkways, also would probably die with the cuts, according to Dave Nelson, executive director of the Montana Arts Council.

The 11.7 percent slash proposed by Reagan would translate into a cut for the council of about $40,000, the cost of the two programs, he said.

A large cut would also hurt the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said Caroline Smedvig, its public relations director. This year's support from the NEA is $376,000, or 1.5 percent of the symphony's operating budget.

"I think there's a limit on how much you can ask people to contribute," she said. "We really depend on that (NEA) support."

The $15 million four-stage Los Angeles Actors Theater would open later this year, cuts or no, although NEA funding accounts for about 3 percent of the company's budget, said Bill Bushnell, artistic producing director.

"My concern always is that you end up having to do things like raise ticket prices for students and senior citizens, who can least afford it," he said. "Or, you raise prices overall and the net result is the arts price themselves out of the pocketbook of the ordinary American citizen."

Toddler Fights Enzyme Absence To Live Normally

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

MORRISDALE, Pa. (AP) — Unraveling a roll of toilet paper or fibbing about who dumped a drink on the floor are happy milestones in the life of D.J., a 3-year-old who cannot yet truly eat or talk and until recently could not play or walk, due to an extremely rare, potentially fatal enzyme deficiency.

"It's good in a sense. I like it when he does things like that. It shows me he's thinking," said his mother, Linda Rinehart, recalling with a smile how her blue-eyed, touseled-haired son had recently pointed to his younger brother, Jesse, after D.J. had spilled a drink.

"My aunt says a little boy who can blame something on somebody else, there's nothing wrong with him," she added.

Plagued since birth by a lack of dehydrogenase, an enzyme essential to burn fatty acids, D.J. relies on a special liquid diet high in carbohydrates and low in fat to provide him with the energy that his body cannot.

He must take the life-saving sustenance five times a day through long tubes down his nose due, in part, to a tracheotomy that enables him to breathe.

Able to utter little more than high-pitched gurgles and grunts, he's designed a sign language to make his needs known, bouncing up and down for a ride in his father's truck, sticking a finger in his ear to talk on the phone, touching his tongue when he's thirsty.

He cannot laugh or cry but has learned to express emotions, wringing his hands when he's happy, shedding crocodile tears when he's sad.

He's truly a miracle child, a medical trail blazer of sorts who stands a decent chance of leading a long, nearly normal life, said Dr. Charles A. Stanley, an endocrinologist at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

Only three youngsters, with D.J. the first, have been diagnosed as suffering from long-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency, a little-known metabolic disorder that takes its name from the generic form for fatty acids linked to the coenzyme A, Stanley said. The condition is much more severe than medium-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency, which has afflicted about 25 youngsters worldwide.

The second child with the long-chain deficiency, a girl from Baltimore, died at 6 months of age. The third, a 1-year-old girl from New York State, is alive but has brain damage.

"He was a mystery to begin with. Now we understand a lot more," said Stanley, who's chronicling D.J.'s progress for a medical journal.

"Obviously, there's not very much experience (with the deficiency). The future is a bit of the unknown. But D.J.'s doing pretty well on the diet treatment, and we're all keeping our fingers crossed," he said.

Doctors were far from optimistic after the Oct. 25, 1981, birth of Donald James Rinehart, the first child for Mrs. Rinehart, 42, and her 35-year-old husband, Larry.

His heart stopped beating three times in his first three months of life, and his heart and liver became enlarged. His muscles were so weak he could barely move, and he needed a respirator to help him breathe. At 4 months, he got a tracheotomy.

He was constantly ill, unable to hold down food, and had a low blood sugar count. At times, Mrs. Rinehart wondered whether her son would live.

"He lay there so long with all those tubes. He was just lifeless," she said.

"For a long time, the doctors didn't really give him much hope and they didn't know what was wrong with him. We just had to trust in God."

Nine of his first 12 months were spent in hospitals as doctors ruled out Reye's syndrome then noticed a lack of carnitine, a chemical used to transfer long-chain fatty acids through cells. That led to the diagnosis.

"His assembly line (for oxidizing fat) is defective and that has a number of consequences," Stanley said. "You can't get energy from (stored) fat, so you can't adapt to a fasting stage. Since some of the parts of the body depend on burning fuel, namely the muscles and heart, he's had chronic heart failure and chronic skeletal muscle weakness."

Stanley restricted D.J.'s diet to primarily proteins and carbohydrates, which are processed differently than fats, in addition to regular doses of carnitine. The small amount of fat he does ingest is the minimum needed for making tissue and the body's insulating layer of fat.

D.J. must stay on the diet for life, gradually substituting solid food for the liquid.

"The major thing we're doing for him right now is eliminating the need to burn fats as fuel," Stanley said.

Despite D.J.'s dramatic progress — surgeons hope to close the opening in his trachea within the next few months, enabling him to talk — day-to-day living isn't easy for the Rineharts.

A former computer operator, Mrs. Rinehart must be with her son constantly to feed him and clean his tracheotomy tube. Rinehart began driving a tractor trailer in September to supplement income from the chain saw business he operates from their rural central Pennsylvania trailer home. Medical bills, for the most part, have been covered by government assistance.

Despite their struggle and the worry about a relapse, the Rineharts look forward to better times ahead.

"He's (D.J.) missed a lot. But he's had a lot in other ways," Mrs. Rinehart said. "Having laid in a bed, not being able to be heard, he has developed other ways of communication that a normal child would never know."

"I look forward to him marrying and having children and being able to live a normal life. Lots of people have learning disabilities, but you can overcome those with a positive attitude."

"As young as he is, there's no reason that he cannot compensate for errors. He'll learn to make his way in life."

Western News Monopoly Decried

PEKING (AP) — The director-general of China's official Xinhua news agency says news agencies in Third World countries should unite to break what he says is the monopoly of Western news agencies.

Mu Qing made the remark at a Peking banquet for the director of Senegal's news agency, Xinhua reported.

He was quoted as saying the voice of the Third World was still weak internationally, and a monopoly of the Western news agencies should be broken.

"Xinhua is willing to work for that purpose," he said.

Xinhua has more than 700 reporters and 90 foreign branches. It provides news and photographs for the Chinese news media, transmits news and photos overseas, and acts as China's information ministry.

Feel free to call the Finance Director of the City of Greenville if you have any questions about the City's 1984-85 Budget.

Warrants Issued

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Federal Criminal Office says arrest warrants have been issued for four Germans suspected of links to recent terrorist attacks by the radical Red Army Faction.

It said a reward of up to 50,000 marks — about $16,000 — was offered for information leading to the capture of these "new members of the Red Army Faction."

The Criminal Office said they were wanted by police on "urgent suspicion of membership in a terrorist group that has taken responsibility for numerous major crimes, such as murder, taking hostages, explosives attacks and armed robberies."

Rugged Alaskan Terrain Leads U.S. In Plane Crashes That Aren't Found

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — When charter pilot Keith Newstrom and his four passengers flew into the Alaska wilderness and vanished, they set off a long but fruitless search.

The passengers' employer offered $5,000 for information leading to the small airplane. That brought dozens of calls, some from psychics claiming to have divined its location.

"I don't know of one tip we didn't check," said Bob Hayes, a vice president at the company, Newberry Alaska Inc. "How can you not check? Whether you believe it or not, you've got to find out."

Newstrom's plane vanished in July, one of 198 planes that crashed in the state last year. It's still out there somewhere — one of 56 aircraft that have disappeared in Alaska without a trace since 1947. Alaska's rugged and storm-raked terrain hides more downed airplanes than any other state.

In most of the state's trackless wilds, small planes, often flying in dangerous conditions, serve as the only transportation.

The National Transportation Safety Board lists 235 planes missing in the lower 48 states. Most vanish in coastal areas and are presumed to have gone into the sea. In Alaska, about 90 percent of the missing planes are lost over land, according to Lt. Col. Walter Stevenson at the Alaska Air Command's Rescue Coordination Center.

Each time a plane is lost, military and civilian search teams take to the air, typically covering areas of up to 35,000 square miles. The 56 planes searchers have not found become statistics in Air Force case files that are never closed until someone spots wreckage.

Meanwhile, friends and families are left in an emotional tangle; their hopes fight a losing battle with reality.

Pegge Begich knows the feeling well. Her husband, U.S. Rep. Nick Begich, disappeared a dozen years ago.

He and House Democratic Leader Hale Boggs of Louisiana were campaigning for Begich's re-election. On Oct. 16, 1972, they headed from Anchorage to Juneau, a 560-mile route bounded on one side by towering mountains, on the other by the stormy Gulf of Alaska.

Poor weather delayed commercial flights, so the two men and Begich aide Russell Brown chartered a small plane piloted by Don Jonz. Ten minutes into the flight, Jonz made his last radio transmission.

The plane's disappearance touched off the biggest air search in Alaska's history. Aircraft logged more than 3,600 hours and covered nearly 326,000 square miles.

"The search went on and on and on," recalled Mrs. Begich, who waited for reports from her Virginia home. "Every time the phone would ring, my stomach would do flip-flops."

Friends were reluctant to call, not knowing whether to console or encourage her. "Nobody knows what kind of support you need. I found myself consoling my callers, rather than the other way around."

The search ended after 39 days.

Months passed before Mrs. Begich and her six children accepted Begich's death. "For a long time, we never called him dead," she said. "I guess in my gut I knew he would never be found alive. But there was always a little sliver of hope. He was a fighter, a survivor."

Good Impressions

The National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. is now featuring an exhibit of Edgar Degas' paintings of dancers. Degas is considered one of the great "impressionist" painters. Another impressionist, Claude Monet, won the French state lottery in 1871. His new wealth enabled him to wander about, painting the French countryside. In 1883, the mayor of one town had workman remove every bud in a certain oak tree so that Monet could continue to paint it.

DO YOU KNOW — Who painted "Nude Descending a Staircase"?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Sao Paulo is Brazil's largest city.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 17, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A startling event can make you want to act quickly so you can get out from under some untenable position, but you would merely get into some other confrontational crises.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You desire to get off to new interests but don't be forceful otherwise you spoil your chances with one who can assist you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You had better face up to some obligation instead of trying to worm yourself out of it. Be more harmonious with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may want to change partners or add another hastily, but it would be better to sleep on it first and be sure of what is best.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Don't get frustrated with your job but find better ways of handling it efficiently. Hit on a more logical perspective.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Some extravagance you may indulge in today could bring remorse soon or you get severely criticized, so be more economical instead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't make those changes at home until you get the OK from all who dwell there.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may get a letter that can help you to advance very quickly to your career. Get rid of that flaw in the path of your progress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some financial investment you may make could work to your detriment, so study it well. Don't lose your temper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you try to get out of some unpleasant matter, be careful not to act hastily. Enjoy yourself socially in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You think you can quickly rid yourself of some constant worry, but give it more thought and then handle it wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't follow the advice of a person whose ideas are different from your own. Be more willing to accept help, though.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take it slow and easy at your regular work and do it accurately, without trying to make revisions.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have many talents but will have to gradually come out with them since they are advanced and the public would not accept them readily, and therefore have to be proven with the assistance of other pioneers. Teach to be patient and later a big name can be made.

Protest Halted

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Police and troops evicted about 400 protesting former public employees from the Metropolitan Cathedral and arrested six of the demonstrators.

The discharged employees of the Public Works Ministry occupied the cathedral to demand that the government pay them benefits and wages they claim are long overdue.

The protesters, who were dismissed four months ago in a cost-cutting move, asked a priest to offer a Mass to President Roberto Suazo Cordova "so God will soften his heart," one of the demonstrators said.

But Suazo Cordova sent soldiers and police to clear the protesters from the church, located on the main city plaza.

Prison Terms

PARIS (AP) — Four Frenchmen convicted of trying to export banned equipment from the United States to the Soviet Union have been sentenced to prison terms.

The attempt to export equipment of possible use in missile guidance was foiled by U.S. Customs officials at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport in December 1981. The equipment was said to be worth more than $2 million.

Robert Almori was sentenced to three years in prison, while Marcel Goldfarb, Jean-Michel Didat and Maurice Bocquet each received two years. All were charged with forgery or complicity in forgery, and all were fined the equivalent of $11,000 in addition to the prison terms.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

If you were to poll the cognoscenti for their list of the world's most imaginative players, Pakistan's Zia Mahmood would be high on every list. Here's an example of his expertise from the recent World Team Olympiad.

The contract of three no trump was normal, as was the opening lead of a heart. Despite the fact that North-South have 27 HCP in the combined hands, they have only seven fast tricks, and declarer must develop two more for his contract.

Declarer correctly ducked the first heart trick and won the second in hand. He cashed the king of spades and, in an attempt to keep West off lead, would certainly have continued with the eight or ten in an attempt to duck the trick to East. But something happened on the first spade lead—Zia followed with the nine!

Now declarer could no longer afford to duck a spade, for it looked as though East had started with a doubleton J-9 or Q-9. If that were the case and declarer passed a spade to East, West would control the fourth round of the suit. So declarer continued with a spade to the ace, and Zia jettisoned his queen!

This sequence of plays promoted the jack of spades in West's hand to an entry. West promptly drove out South's last heart stopper, and now declarer had to guess the location of the queen of clubs for his contract. Since the early play strongly suggested that there was club length to his right, declarer naturally finessed East for the lady. Down one.

To appreciate the depth of Zia's reasoning, let's follow what would happen had he routinely played a low spade to the second trick. He would be forced to win the next spade, and his only safe return is a spade. Now declarer has a third spade trick set up while he still has a heart stopper, and he can work on diamonds for his ninth trick. Eventually he sets up a long diamond for the fulfilling trick, because West is an entry short to cash his hearts.

Raw Milk Ban Sought

WASHINGTON AP — A consumer group trying to halt the sale of raw or unpasteurized milk in the United States says victory is in reach under a new federal court order that requires action on its request within 60 days.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen Health Research Group, said he doubts the Department of Health and Human Services will deny his group's request to ban domestic sales of unpasteurized milk.

"If they did that, they would be in serious legal trouble," Wolfe said after the decision Monday.

"They've never said there was nothing wrong with raw milk," Wolfe added. "They've just said they needed more time to study the issue. Now the court has said 'You've had all the time you need.'"

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said the department's own top health officials and its papers filed in the lawsuit admit that "the consumption of 'certified' raw milk ... has been linked to the outbreak of serious disease."

He said the department's assertion that it needs more time to study the issue "can be given no credence" and called its excuses "lame at best and irresponsible at worst."

Public Citizen filed suit last Sept. 19 seeking to force action by HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler after two government agencies said unpasteurized milk was associated with human disease and the department failed to respond.

The Centers for Disease Control said in 1983 that raw milk was "inherently unsafe."

That same year, the Food and Drug Administration proposed an HHS regulation banning interstate sale of raw milk and its products. FDA said consumption of raw milk "presents a significant public health problem" and that pasteurization was the only feasible way to assure the safety of milk. No action was taken by the department.

Record Crop Yields Cut Into Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expectations for record world grain crops continue to rise, and growing supplies are pressing downward on commodity prices, say Agriculture Department analysts.

The Department's Foreign Agriculture Service issued a production bulletin this week which increased its estimates for output of most major crops over last month's figures. In a separate outlook report, the service noted that export competition had sharpened over the same period.

"Grain supplies continue to swell with the progress of the Southern Hemisphere harvest, . . .pressuring prices downward," the service said, noting higher wheat and corn export forecasts for Argentina, more exports for Chinese corn and lower export prospects for U.S. corn.

While U.S. wheat export prospects for 1984-85 held steady at 41.5 million tons despite the heavy competition, trade prospects for domestic corn were reduced to 60 million tons, down from 61.3 million a month ago.

Competition is growing especially in the Far East, with China and Argentina exporting more corn to U.S. customers like Japan and Korea, the service said.

In its update of production expectations, the service put U.S. wheat production for 1984-85 at 70.6 million tons, up about 1 percent from last month's estimate and 7 percent above a year ago.

But good weather in Argentina, a major U.S. competitor, has enhanced yields there and production in China and the European Community also is seen as increasing, the assessment said.

Overall, the department said, world wheat production for the year will hit a record 509.5 million tons, up less than one percent from a month ago and 4 percent above year-earlier levels.

The favorable weather in Argentina also has boosted that country's corn yields. Increased production in China and South Africa as well is leading analysts to estimate a record 790.1 million ton world corn crop, up slightly from last month and 15 percent above 1983-84.

Rice production was estimated at 313.8 million tons, another record, based on heightened prospects in China and Thailand. That figure was up slightly from a month ago and 2 percent above a year ago.

World output of oilseeds, led by soybeans, was estimated at a record 185.3 million tons, up slightly from last month and 12 percent better than 1983-84 figures.

Cotton production was put at 81.8 million bales, also a record, up 1 percent from last month and 21 percent higher than last year. Increases in planted area in Brazil and favorable weather in India and China contributed to the rise.

Plush Gate Guards Estate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When most people think about building a gate to adorn their driveways, it's usually just two posts and some chunks of wood or strips of iron.

But the entranceway gate for a 140-acre residential development on prime Lake Travis property is so extravagant one would almost expect to hear trumpets when driving through.

Developers of The Vineyard on Lake Travis spent $1.75 million just for their gate. Construction of the pair of exotic doors required almost 20,000 pounds of wood and 40,000 man-hours of carving.

The developers, a trio of Houston businessmen, "wanted from the start to build the most prestigious development in the country," said Tom Gay, a partner in Trophy Properties, the sales agent for the development.

"First impressions are what everybody deals with," he said. "These gates are a magnificent accomplishment. I can't find anything else like them in the U.S."

The two intricately carved doors, constructed in a Dallas warehouse, are each nearly 17 feet high and 18 feet wide. And while they're not quite Pearly Gates, their designer said getting through them would be more difficult than skirting past St. Peter.

Only residents of the exclusive west Austin subdivision will have access to magnetically coded cards that bid the doors slide silently back into 6-foot-thick, 102-foot-long stone walls, said designer Barnes Davis of Dallas.

Beyond them lie 110 lots on the 140 acres, which Davis described as a Mediterranean-like haven about 20 miles outside Austin. Already several homes are under construction in the development.

And if the gate's cost is staggering, consider that lots in this development start at $125,000 and range up to $700,000.

The group hired Davis in 1982, and work began on the mammoth project in March 1983 in a north Dallas warehouse. Davis said he had recruited 13 carvers from all over, including an Italian artist who learned his craft in South Africa.

High Tech Pacemaker On Horizon

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Pacemakers someday will diagnose and stop a variety of irregular heartbeats and perhaps even dispense drugs, saving the lives of thousands of people who die because existing devices cannot correct rapid or uncontrolled heart rates, a researcher says.

One of the new, high-technology pacemakers should be available for widespread use within two or three years, said Dr. Douglas P. Zipes, adding, "We're at a stage where all of this is highly investigational."

Zipes, who directs cardiovascular research at the Indiana University School of Medicine, displayed one of the experimental pacemakers Monday at an American Heart Association forum for science writers.

Up to 400,000 Americans die each year because of irregular heart beats, Zipes said. But only about 10 percent of those deaths are caused by the type of slow heartbeat that can be corrected by pacemakers that were developed 25 years ago and are widely used.

He said most of the remaining deaths are caused by rapid heartbeat, called tachycardia, or by uncontrolled, irregular heart contractions known as fibrillation.

Pacemakers are battery-operated devices implanted under the skin of the chest while the patient is under local anesthetic. A wire connected to the heart sends a shock to restore a lethally slow heartbeat back to normal.

Existing models cannot correct rapid heartbeats or fibrillation. Scientists so far have been unable to find a drug that can reliably prevent such ailments in all the patients at risk of death, and "surgery has been effective for very small groups of patients," Zipes said.

In the 1970s, Michel Mirowski at Johns Hopkins University developed an implantable device that would shock the heart to stop fibrillation. But Zipes said the device was rather large, weighing about 10 ounces.

So, with funding from the Krannert Institute of Cardiology in Indianapolis and Medtronic, a Minneapolis pacemaker manufacturer, Zipes developed the three-ounce device. In the past 18 months, it has been used experimentally in 19 elderly patients whose clogged arteries make them prone to irregular heart rhythms.

The experimental pacemaker, tested with approval from the Food and Drug Administration, can distinguish between slow and rapid heartbeats — many patients suffer both — then apply the appropriate shock to restore a normal heart rate. For rapid heartbeats, it acts much like the electric paddles applied to the chest of patients brought to emergency rooms.

One of the 19 patients died after a year with the pacemaker, but Zipes said it was impossible to tell if the device worked properly or fatally accelerated the heartbeat.

The experimental pacemaker Zipes developed is implanted under the skin but outside the ribs, just like the type now on the market. For the average case of rapid heartbeat, the patient feels a shock much like a large hiccup. If the heart fails to respond, Zipes said the device transmits a larger shock, which feels like a blow to the chest.

By December, another generation of pacemaker, able to detect and stop fibrillation, will be ready for testing, Zipes said.

Future models may incorporate a drug dispenser that will automatically release a dose of heart drug to aid in correcting irregular heartbeats, he added.

Zipes' pacemaker costs about $15,000 for the device, including doctor and hospital charges — about $3,000 more than current models. But he said even the more expensive future models will be cost-effective because they will allow patients to leave the hospital in about five days, instead of remaining in intensive care for weeks.

Release Sought

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Fred Sinowatz is seeking the early release from an Italian prison of a former SS colonel sentenced to life imprisonment for ordering a massacre in an Italian village in 1944.

The diplomatic step to free Walter Reder, a 69-year-old Austrian, came two weeks after relatives of victims and survivors of the attack voted 237-1 against his early release.

In a note to Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, Sinowatz asked for Reder's "premature repatriation," an official at the chancellery said. The official, who asked not to be identified, said the request was made for "humanitarian reasons."

A hot lunch is provided for any citizen 60 years old or older. The lunches are served at the Senior Citizens Center in the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets.

Peres Wins In Retreat By Israelis

By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government's decision to cut its loss in Lebanon after 31 months of costly warfare and bitter occupation represents a political victory for Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

But Israel faces major uncertainties and the likelihood of continued military involvement in Lebanon despite its plans to begin a three-stage withdrawal within five weeks.

Peres, who heads a multiparty bipartisan government that came to power last September, wooed three ministers of the right-wing Likud bloc to his side to overcome stiff resistance from his major political rival, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

As leader of Israel's left-leaning Labor Party, Peres had campaigned during last July's election for a total withdrawal from Lebanon. He survived the Cabinet showdown without compromising this key point.

Peres has argued that Israel can defend its border with air strikes, artillery barrages and ground assaults originating from within Israel, without a permanent presence in Lebanon.

Shamir, whose party approved the June 1982 invasion, had opposed a complete pullback without guarantees from Syria and Lebanon that Israel's northern border would not be attacked again.

Likud argued that only Israeli soldiers could prevent guerrillas from re-establishing bases in the hills and caves of south Lebanon. Rightists insisted that Israel must demonstrate to its Arab enemies that it had the resolve to stay the course.

There remains a possibility that Likud could block the final two phases of the withdrawal plan if the situation on the ground becomes too explosive and Israel's border is threatened.

But once the withdrawal begins it will be difficult to stop. Peres appears to have better judged the mood of a nation tired of a war that has cost 606 Israeli lives, 3,500 wounded and up to $3 billion.

Peres' popularity has steadily risen in public opinion polls since he took office. His rating stood at 42 percent to 11 percent for Shamir in November. His victory in the Cabinet on Monday is likely to enhance his position as long as chaos does not threaten Israel's border.

But major uncertainties remain and any move by guerrillas to threaten Israel will bring the army back again. "The army will not hesitate to enter and liquidate such reorganization," Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told reporters after the Cabinet meeting.

He added that Israeli forces would back up the Israeli-trained South Lebanon Army which will be used to police a "security zone" along the border.

Israel's failure to achieve an agreement with Lebanon at troop withdrawal talks in the Lebanese border town of Naqoura may result in a dangerous vacuum when Israeli troops leave.

This could ignite a power struggle among warring sects and allow a variety of Israel's enemies to set up heavy weapons and guerrilla bases in south Lebanon.

Perhaps the biggest unanswered question is what the Shiite Moslems will do. They constitute the majority of south Lebanon's 900,000 residents and have taken a leading role in the successful guerrilla war against Israel's occupation army.

In the first phase, Israeli troops will pull back 17 miles from the Awali to the Litani rivers. That will divide the Shiite community and likely result in continued guerrilla attacks.

But even after a total pullout, some experts believe Iranian influence will lead Shiite extremists to attack Israel's northern border as the Palestinian guerrillas did before the 1982 invasion.

There are also questions about whether the Syrians will try to take advantage of the pullback to reassert control over territory evacuated by Israel, either directly with Syrian troops or through Damascus-backed Palestinian groups.

The most daunting question is how much damage has been done to Israel's credibility with its Arab neighbors. The guerrilla campaign has exposed an Achilles' heel — Israel's sensitivity to casualties — that Syria and other militants may seek to exploit in the future.

Clarification
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia says a pact to sell livestock to Egypt was an "agreement in principle" and it has not contracted to export food at a time when 7.75 million of its people are suffering from hunger.
Ethiopian state radio reported Sunday that a one-year trade agreement was signed Sunday under which Ethiopia would send Egypt livestock, meat and farm products in return for metals, fertilizers, medicine and construction materials.
