Club Names Dominick Boy Of Year For 1984

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1984 Boy of the Year was named and new officers and board members were installed Wednesday night at the annual dinner and installation of the Boys Club of Pitt County.

Kirk Dominick, a 17-year-old junior at Rose High School was presented the 1984 award by one of the club's new officers, Mike Aldridge.

At Rose High, Kirk is a representative of the Student Government Association, a member of the Spanish and Key Clubs, and is active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He attended Boys State at Wake Forest in the summer of 1984, and was a junior achiever (with Procter & Gamble) for school year 1983-84.

In the Boys Club, Kirk is president of the Coastal Keystone Club, and is past president of the club's junior toastmasters. He is also the recipient of the Sir Thomas J. Lipton Sportsmanship Award of the Boys Club of America. His primary interests include computers and basketball.

Kirk is the son of John and Nancy Colville. He has two brothers and three sisters.

Outgoing president Ed Stanley installed Griff Garner as the new president for 1984-85. Garner then installed other officers for the year — Cordell Avery, vice president, financial development; Mike Aldridge, vice-president, program and property management; Tom O'Brien, vice president, marketing; Gloria Tipton, secretary; and Edwin Gray, treasurer.

New directors installed for a three-year term are Dr. Michael Bramley, Jeanette Cox, Derek Dunn, Ronnie Greene, Mary Wesley Harvey, Dr. Peter Hollis, Mrs. Teresa Morris, Tom O'Brien, Waighy Scales III, Craig Smith, and Dr. Michael Weaver.

In his report covering achievements during 1984, outgoing president Stanley revealed that during the year, "the club increased its operating budget, increased its staff by adding two part-time positions and a number of new programs, and best of all, increased the overall attendance of boys."

Other developments he touched on included the raising of $3,000 through a yard sale, the realization of $30,000 at the second annual dinner auction, reduction of the building debt to $43,000, and several go-rounds with having the club's bus repaired.

Stanley said the building debt, which had until just before Christmas been $53,000, had been reduced to the $43,000 mark "by a very generous gift of $10,000 from Mrs. Vivian West, widow of the late Greenville mayor, Eugene West."

"Mrs. West was unable to attend tonight," Stanley said, "but I want all of you to know that in appreciation for this and a $5,000 gift from Mrs. West in December 1983, we are naming the arts and crafts room the Eugene West Arts and Crafts Center."

Stanley concluded, "It's been a good year and it all has happened because you have a strong board of directors, a good staff and good community support."

In brief remarks, new president Garner pledged his efforts and those of his officers and board to making 1985 the year that the final payments can be made on the building fund debt.

Dick Ullam, now a supervisor of Boys Clubs in three states and the first director of the Boys Club of Pitt County in the late 1960s, was a special guest. He recalled the beginning years, saying, "We are probably the only club that ever began operations in an old fair-ground, then we moved to a small community church. It's really good to see that Greenville now has a fine club such as this. The Boys Club of America is the fastest growing youth movement in America today."

Bernard Hasselrig, an outgoing director who has served for five years, was presented a walking stick. The stick, of knotty cedar, was made by boys from a Christmas tree used in the old church building club on Skinner Street.

Principals Doubt Search Option Will Be Used Often

By JANE WELBORN

Local principals said the U.S. Supreme Court ruling giving administrators the right to search students without a court-ordered warrant will be useful, but they don't expect to use this new right often.

The Supreme Court this week ruled that teachers and principals have the right to search students without a court-ordered search warrant. Pitt County school administrators said they rarely, if ever, obtain a search warrant.

"The ruling will not change our policies or procedures at all," said Greenville City Schools Superintendent Delma Blinson. "The Greenville City Schools have had a policy which says basically the same thing for the past three years."

"Our policy is based on reasonable suspicion, as is this ruling, so our practices will continue just as they have been," Blinson said.

"Essentially, the Fourth Amendment (to the U.S. Constitution) has been applied to the students in this landmark decision," the superintendent added. "This amendment requires that before a student is searched there should be probable cause or a reasonable suspicion. Teachers and principals may not search indiscriminately; they can't just pick out a certain student and search him or his locker. But if the administrator has probable cause or a reasonable suspicion, he can search students without going through a law enforcement official."

Although the principals interviewed agreed that they will use the new ruling sparingly, they gave various reasons why this ability to search students without an order will be beneficial to school administrations.

Principal Josh Potter of North Pitt High School said he thinks the new ruling will deter students from bringing illegal possessions to school.

"It will serve as a deterrent due to the fact that the students know we (at the school) have this right and they could be searched at any time," Potter said. "If we have reason to believe, based on information that we get, that the student has something illegal, we will use discretion and search the student."

Potter said he has obtained a search warrant in order to search a student on occasion.

Howard Hurt, principal at J.H. Rose High School, said the Supreme Court ruling will speed up the procedure principals have to go through to search students' property. "Before, when a principal was suspicious, he had to call the parent and call the police, and now he can feel comfortable making the search himself."

"It is nice to have a tool you can use if it is needed and not have to worry about the legal ramifications of a search," Hunt said.

"I have never had to get a search warrant because I have never had a student refuse" a request for a search, Hurt said.

He said the ruling will especially be helpful when a principal has suspicion that a student has something illegal in his automobile.

"I would rather pull the law officials in if I suspect something illegal," said William Wiggins, (Please turn to page 12)

Retirement Facility Receives Major Gift

By CAROL TYER

The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons this morning presented $150,000 to the Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. for use in construction of the its Cypress Glen Retirement Community in Greenville and also promised to furnish a parlor to be named for one of its deceased members, Hortense Forbes Moyer.

The presentation was made at Jarvis United Methodist Church by Dr. Lois Staton, chairman of the retirement committee of the Circle whose membership is mostly from Greenville. The gift was accepted by Hugh Jones, chairman of the Methodist Retirement Homes Inc., and W. Don Penley, executive director of the Methodist Retirement Homes Inc.

Those members of the Patient Circle who are not Methodists have been promised the same priority as Methodists in becoming residents of the community. Many of the members were on hand for the presentation.

Jones said the gift of the Patient Circle is the largest single gift that the Methodist Retirement Homes has received for the Greenville project. He said a fund-raising campaign, underway since last May, has now raised more than $900,000, that a little more than $1 million is still needed. It is hoped that construction can begin next summer, with completion of the first phase, a residence for 125 persons with ancillary services like kitchen, dining room and infirmary, due in early 1987. Later a skilled and intermediate-care health care facility is planned on the same 100-acre site, as are two-apartments units as a third phase.

Methodist Retirement Homes Inc., which serves the eastern part of North Carolina, has a retirement home and a health care center in Durham and a retirement community in Lumberton. Greenville will be the third city served.

It is expected that once the project is completed that the community will have a $1.5 million payroll.

Anyone interested in applying for residence in the community is invited to contact the Cypress Glen office at Jarvis United Methodist Church. Anyone interested in donating toward the project may also contact this office.

The Third Street School PTA has asked Hotline to pay tribute to Lt. Gene McAbee from the East Carolina University Department of Public Safety. During December, he gave more than 20 hours of his own time to fingerprint more than 200 Third Street School students, club officers said.

No Major Problems With Freezing Rain

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Freezing rain fell on Pitt County this morning, but according to the Greenville Public Works Department, there was no accumulation of ice on highways during the early part of the day.

"There are no trouble spots reported at all," said Mayo Allen, director of Public Works. "There is ice on windshields and on cars, but because of traffic on the roads, there has been no trouble at all this morning."

"The streets are wet, though, and whenever the streets are wet, they are dangerous," he stated. "But no ice has accumulated on the roads."

Allen said crews were out on the streets checking their condition and the temperature would be monitored throughout the day.

The low temperature in Greenville Wednesday was 18 degrees and the high temperature was 42 degrees, according to figures supplied by the Greenville Utilities Commission. The thermometer recorded 32 degrees at 8 a.m. this morning.

"As long as the temperature is 32-33 degrees, we will have no problem with the roads," Allen said. "When the temperature reaches 28-29 degrees is when we will begin to have more problems with ice."

"I advise the public to be extra careful tonight, especially when crossing bridges," Allen said.

Public Works crews will be on duty tonight and trucks will be ready if the roads become icy, Allen said.

The Pitt County Department of Transportation reported no accumulation of ice on the county roads this morning. The highways in the county were being monitored for problems.

In Martin County, no problems were reported. As a precautionary measure, however, school officials delayed opening of county schools by one hour.

NATURE'S ICING — Freezing temperatures and a drizzle combined to cover trees with an icy coat this morning. Pitt county roads, however, were wet but unfrozen allowing residents an easy, though dreary, drive to work or school. (Reflector photo by Chris Bennett)

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

"I'm sorry." It starts as two little words a child puts together when he has broken a toy or wet his pants.

But the two little words have a great effect on Mama. Her eyes soften, her lips part into a smile and she envelops him with her arms in a show of forgiveness.

To a child, "I'm sorry" is the miracle phrase of the century.

"I'm sorry I pulled up all of Grandma's flowers by the roots." Mama shakes her head and smiles. Grandma even snickers. It's still working.

"I'm sorry I took a candy bar without paying and hid it under my coat." Mama's smile fades. In fact, she insists the child walk right into the store and say those two little words to Mrs. Musselman who doesn't smile at all.

"I'm sorry I didn't clean my room today." "I'm sorry I got an F in geography." "I'm sorry I lost my sweater." "I'm sorry about the TV knob. It just came off in my hand." "I'm sorry I don't like cauliflower." "I'm sorry I forgot to say I'm sorry."

Mama responds numbly to it now. Occasionally she mumbles, "You should be." "I'm sorry I wrecked the car." "I'm sorry I took the money from your purse." "I'm sorry I lied to you."

Mama has now had it with "I'm sorry." She says, "You think it solves everything, well, it doesn't. You've said it too many times before." It isn't working. What happened?

Most of the mothers who write me wonder how they can tell when a child says, "I'm sorry" and means it.

There was the daughter who ran away from home to live with her boyfriend in the home of his parents who were really "neat." She was sorry. There was the son who lied to his grandmother to get money to have his truck fixed and used it for an abortion for his girlfriend. He was sorry.

Maybe I'm naive, but I believe every time they say, "I'm sorry," they mean it. It's the only phrase they've got to try and recapture that wonderful moment when our eyes soften, our lips part in a smile and we take them in our arms and forgive them.

It isn't easy to forgive. Never underestimate how tough it is for parents to go back to square one and start trusting them again. They've been hurt, lied to, humiliated and emotionally ripped off.

I have to remember there's only one thing harder in this world than forgiving.

It's to ask for forgiveness armed only with, "I'm sorry."

Homemaker's Haven

According to Barry Stocks, Extension Family Resource Management Specialist and attorney, the General Assembly of North Carolina, during its short session in June, ratified three bills which make certain changes in the North Carolina Inheritance and Gift Tax Laws. The changes include raising the annual gift tax exclusion from $3,000 to $10,000, increasing the inheritance tax credit for class A beneficiaries, and exempting from inheritance tax one-half the amount of certain personal property held by a husband and wife as joint tenants with right of survivorship.

New annual gift tax exclusion. On or after January 1, 1985, in any calendar year, the first $10,000 of gifts made to any one donee is excluded in determining the total amount of taxable gifts for the year. This change in the North Carolina Gift Tax Law from $3,000 brings it in line with the current federal annual gift exclusion of $10,000.

Mrs. Stokes gives this example: If in 1985, a parent gives $15,000 to each of three children, he/she would receive an inheritance exclusion of $10,000 per child. Hence the taxable gift to each child would be $5,000 ($15,000 minus $10,000). The tax liability (based on tax tables) would be $50 per child for a total of $150. The parent could elect to use $15,000 of his/her $30,000 lifetime exemption and avoid the tax.

New inheritance tax credit. On or after July 1, 1985, the inheritance tax credit for class A beneficiaries will be $4,650. This credit is first applied to the tax liability of the surviving spouse, then to minor and disabled children and then to other children until all the credit is used. Although a credit of $4,650 appears small, it actually permits $130,000 worth of property passing to the surviving spouse free of any inheritance tax. The previous credit of $3,150 permitted only $100,000 worth of property to pass to the surviving spouse tax-free.

New exemption for married couples. On or after July 1, 1984, when a husband and wife hold funds in a joint deposit account as joint tenants with the right of survivorship or own corporate stock or investment securities as joint tenants with the right of survivorship the surviving spouse is taxed on no more than one-half of the amount in the joint account stock or securities. The surviving spouse may be taxed on a lesser amount if the surviving spouse can establish that he or she provided over one-half of the funds in the joint account of stock or securities.

Another example from Mrs. Stokes: Ann and John are married. John is the breadwinner, and Ann is a homemaker without outside income of her own. All income is placed in joint accounts and securities with right of survivorship. John dies. Under the old law, Ann would have to pay inheritance taxes on the entire amount. After July 1, 1984, Ann would pay inheritance taxes on only one-half of the amount in the accounts and securities. If the situation were altered and Ann had been the breadwinner, Ann would be taxed on less than one-half of the amount because she provided more than one-half the funds. If you have any questions about these changes or any other aspects of your estate plan, contact your attorney for consultation and call the Agricultural Extension Service (752-2934) for printed information.

Mother Left Only With Memories When Couple Leaves No Will

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you discussed the importance of leaving a will. May I add this:

Two years ago we lost a beautiful daughter and a handsome son-in-law in a house fire. They had no children and they left no will. According to Michigan law, if a couple has no will, the surviving spouse inherits everything the couple possessed.

Since it was established that our son-in-law died last, everything he and our daughter left went to our son-in-law's nearest of kin—a no-good bum who couldn't wait to sell everything he fell heir to.

We got nothing—not even the few personal items we had given our daughter. This hurt me so deeply I had to be hospitalized. All this could have been avoided if our daughter and her husband had left a will.

Abby, please tell your readers to make a will—regardless of how young they are, or how few possessions they have.

We are now urging our other children to have wills drawn up. Nobody should ever have to experience what we went through.

STILL MOURNING IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MOURNING: Please accept my heartfelt sympathy. I regret that you will never know how many strangers will read this, act on your valuable suggestion and avoid the nightmare you endured. Thank you, my generous friend, for caring enough to write.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young divorced mother, and my problem is that when I get asked out on a date, I end up paying the baby sitter.

I have had to turn down a lot of chances to go out because I couldn't afford a baby sitter. I'm on a tight budget, and things like food and clothes come first.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but isn't the man supposed to pay for the baby sitter? I hate to ask in advance if he plans on paying, but maybe that's what I should do.

Please answer in your column. I'm sure other young mothers have come up against the same problem.

MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: The man is not "supposed" to pay for the baby sitter. But if he offers, it's all right to accept. (Do not ask him in advance.)

Consider making a deal with other young mothers in your neighborhood—sit with their children, and in return they can sit with yours.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle something for me, once and for all! Everybody tells me I am wearing my rings wrong. I think I'm wearing them the way they should be worn, with my engagement ring on the inside. My reasoning:

When I became engaged, the engagement ring was placed on my finger. When I married, the wedding band was placed on my finger right next to it, and that's the way I have worn them.

So why do people tell me I'm wearing my rings "wrong?"

RING PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: Your wedding band should be worn on the "inside"—nearer to your heart.

Planning

Not everyone is aware that there is an organization known as Greenville Industries Inc. and that it has been responsible for a number of substantial industries coming to Pitt County.

The organization was formed many years ago to purchase land and provide sites for potential industries. Much of the industrial development north of Greenville is due to this organization.

Greenville Industries Inc. still owns land in the industrial area and it is available for potential new industries. The County Commissioners met with the board of directors of Greenville Industries and asked its cooperation in developing a plan for better presenting the property to industries.

Greenville Industries owns 300 acres along the eastern bypass and the county wants to prepare a plan of development of that land and some adjoining acreage in eight- to 30-acre tracts. Development Commission Director John Chaffee said the plan would be for "a designed industrial park with Greenville Industries (property) as the core."

He said construction of ditching and a stabilized gravel road into the property would be a tremendous help in showing the sites. Greenville Industries President Gene Prescott set a meeting to consider the plans.

Greenville Industries Inc. has but one purpose and that is to promote industrial development primarily through providing industrial sites at attractive prices. Better planning of the property available can only be helpful in achieving that goal.

Better Care

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees Tuesday night accepted state designation of its hospital emergency department as a Level 1 Trauma Center. The hospital thus joins Bowman Gray, N.C. Memorial and Duke Medical Center as a Level 1 Center.

The designation is, of course, prestigious for Pitt County Memorial. Far more important, however, is what it means for the people of eastern North Carolina. It puts sophisticated emergency medicine within their reach. Time is often all important in treating emergency situations and thus the location of a Level 1 Trauma Center in eastern North Carolina will be important in the handling of emergency medical situations.

Soon helicopter ambulance service will be available at Pitt County Memorial. That will mean that severe medical emergency patients can be transported here in the shortest possible time.

The better emergency care that will be available at Pitt County Memorial will mean prompt treatment for emergency patients — and that will mean many of them will recover and be able to lead their normal lives.

Counter Move Comes Late

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's campaign to hold Moscow accountable for moving the arms race to outer space long before "Stars Wars" came along is an 11th-hour effort, possibly too late and too cautious, to turn the rising tide of Soviet propaganda.

As the Shultz-Gromyko talks started at Geneva, administration insiders said privately there is no room for more mistakes in the all-important propaganda battle. So, in the days leading up to the talks, the Reagan White House publicized for the first time that the Soviets had developed a Fractional Orbiting Bombardment System (FOBS) in the 1960s.

Yet a curtain still covers rich evidence of past and present Soviet plans for arms in the heavens. Here is a gap in the justly vaunted White House public relations machinery that had brilliantly protected Ronald Reagan in more prosaic political endeavors. Anxiety for an arms control agreement has only now led to late and limited revelations of Moscow's own Star Wars.

Last week's belated White House document of Reagan's Star Wars — Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) — was silent about strong Pentagon presumptions that 18 SS-9 missiles in the FOBS system are operational today in the Tyuratam testing area of Soviet Central Asia.

Unlike SDI, Moscow's FOBS is no defensive system. It is designed — and has been throughly tested — to shoot a nuclear weapon into space and keep it there for just under one complete orbit for targeting against the United States. The Carter administration persuaded the Soviets to say they would dismantle those monsters during negotiations on the SALT II treaty, but officials believe all 18 may still be operational. The U.S. has never attempted to develop, much less deploy, such a dread weapon.

The White House finally declared the existence of FOBS in last week's description of Reagan's Star Wars proposal, but said only that the Soviets had developed it "in the late 1960s." That is stunning understatement considering the importance of the propaganda battle over which side is taking nuclear weapons into space.

Another oversight is equally galling to national security insiders fearful that the U.S. will lose the propaganda war as the Soviets turn up the heat in Europe against Reagan's Star Wars. They say that in 1980, Soviet electronic-warfare technology actually took control of a U.S. intelligence satellite, rendering it useless during what was believed to be a key Soviet missile test.

The incident on its face was judged here as a violation of the SALT I agreement not to interfere with what is called "national technical means" of enforcing SALT compliance. It also appeared to be a clear contradiction of what Foreign minister Andrei Gromyko described in Geneva as the Soviet position: "to prevent an arms race in outer space."

Yet the Reagan administration has failed to make a case of the 1980 incident, even though it undercuts the Kremlin's propaganda line that the move to space warfare is inspired by America, not the Soviet Union.

This U.S. propaganda failure is recognized within the White House and the Pentagon.

ban on advertising unconstitutional. The four dissenters — Burger, Powell, Stewart and Rehnquist — passionately deplored the court's abandonment of the old ways. Burger grimly predicted "problems of unmanageable proportions." Powell, foreseeing "profound changes in the practice of law," anticipated that "tens of thousands" of lawyers would rush forth to engage in competitive advertising. Rehnquist found the majority's decision "unfortunate."

What about all this? Last month the Federal Trade Commission released a study of the impact of lawyers' advertising since Bates was decided. To some extent Powell's prophecies were on target. The past eight years have seen a phenomenal growth in law firms that rely upon low cost and high volume to produce a profit.

As for "tens of thousands" of advertising lawyers, it appears that perhaps percent of the nation's urban attorneys have begun to advertise in one way or another.

Burger's "problems of unmanageable proportions" apparently have not materialized. The 50 state bars have continued to experiment with various permissible restrictions on the form and medium of advertising. Maryland, Michigan, Wisconsin and California have almost no restrictions; their lawyers can advertise even on billboards if they choose. Missouri, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Alabama, by contrast, have fairly stiff restrictions.

The significant evidence turned up by the FTC study is that prices for five familiar legal services are lower in the less restrictive states. For three of these services (personal injury claims, personal bankruptcy and uncontested divorce), prices are significantly lower. The FTC staff found no evidence that advertising has reduced the quality of legal service. On the contrary, the study cites one survey in California (admittedly addressed to a small sample) that found greater satisfaction among clients of an advertising clinic than among clients of established firms.

Most lawyers confine their advertising to the Yellow Pages of their local telephone directories, and most limit themselves to an enumeration of their areas of expertise. Few are as flamboyant as the Madison, Wis., attorney who spread the word that patrons could "talk to a lawyer for just 10 bucks" (Most advertisers, in fact, offer an initial consultation without charge.) Some budgets are quite large. Jacoby & Meyers, which launched its operation in California in 1972, had a TV budget in 1982 of $1.5 million. Hyatt Legal Services, which began in Cleveland in 1977, expects to have 300 to 400 offices by 1986; its advertising budget in 1983 was $2.5 million.

I like what's happened. To judge from the FTC study, serious abuses have been few. All states continue to forbid misleading and deceptive advertising, and apart from a few tasteless fellows, most lawyers who advertise have performed a useful service: They have cultivated a whole new class of low-income and middle-income clients who in times past have avoided lawyers out of ignorance or out of a fear of being ripped off. If the advertising attorneys have made an honest buck in the process, that's all right too.

Strength For Today

How rich are you? To be sure, this is none of my business, but it is very decidedly your business. What kind of riches do you have? Some people have a million dollars worth of kindness in their hearts. Some people have a beautiful capacity for love. Some people are never happy unless they are helping others. Jesus employed the simple and understandable figure of laying up treasure in heaven. He said that it was possible to be rich toward God and that the most unfortunate thing in the world to go through life and be poor toward God.

Some men with a million dollars worth of securities, in their safe deposit boxes are paupers. Others who have to be kept by their children are millionaires.

And God, who holds their treasure in his hands, is looking down upon them and smiling upon them every day.

Three funding matters came before the council during the first meeting and all three gave council members a chance to show a reluctance to spend state money. Two of the requests were denied and a third was approved in the form of a loan to a local government.

Had the meeting been closed, the public would not have known why the council chose not to give Warren County money to operate emergency medical services, why the community colleges weren't given some money to perform a jobs study and why some people without water in Scotland County were loaned the money to build water lines rather than given the money by the state.

The open meeting also provided an interesting insight into the relationship between Martin and Secretary of Human Resources Phil Kirk. Two of the requests came from Kirk. One was denied, the other got the loan. Martin didn't seem anxious to run to Kirk's support on either matter. With these meetings open, and joint meetings of the council and Martin's cabinet also open, the public will get a much better look at the dynamics at work within Martin's cabinet.

The Council of State drew coverage it probably won't draw again until a major controversy comes before it. But, because of the importance of its work and the players involved, even the mundane meetings will be important to watch.

Public Forum

To the editor: As a public service to those dependent on the controlled media for news, I'd like to quote other sources to show how we are actually supporting Communism abroad! We have been for years, but I won't dwell on the distant past at this time.

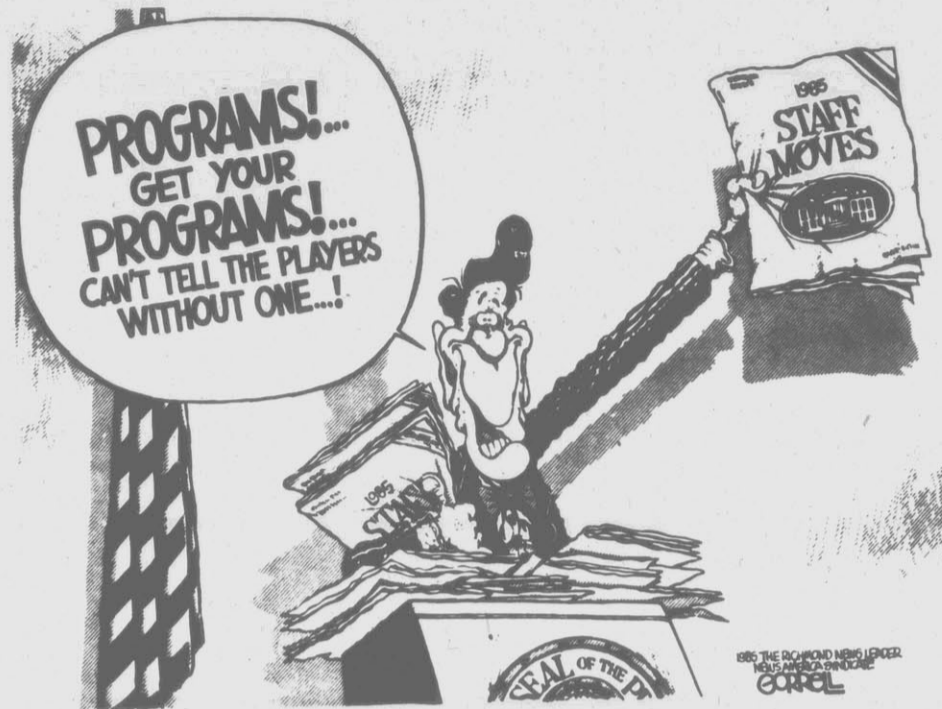

Sasha Rakoczy, reporting in the Spotlight, says that Reagan has welched on his 1980 presidential campaign pledge to aid Afghan freedom fighters in their last-ditch struggle against a massive Soviet invasion, which has been pounding their country with devastation for five years. George Nicholas, senior diplomatic correspondent for Spotlight, says that covert arms shipments for which Congress had willingly appropriated nearly $500 million, were never received by the freedom fighters who are still resisting the heavily equipped Soviet forces with antiquated weapons, some of the bolt-action-type rifle.

This is one country where Soviet aggression could be repelled at moderate expense, and without incurring American casualties, as the Afghans are indomitable fighters and will never submit to an aggressor.

"Conservative" Ronnie's also been busy lately supporting a genocidal war on Timor Island, where freedom fighters have recently captured a manual in the Malay language that is just like the recently exposed CIA manual for use in Nicaragua. The U.S. delegation at the United Nations voted with the Soviets in the East Timor matter, probably because of the oil found there and the money Indonesia (aggressor in the conflict) owes to the international bankers.

Poor, sick and almost blind, 79-year-old Feodor Fedorenko will die in Russia because, on a technicality, he was stripped of his U.S. citizenship and targeted by the Office of Special Investigations.

Lawyers' Ads Still Here

WASHINGTON — Back in the summer of 1853, two Illinois lawyers, having formed a partnership, took out a display ad in the Iroquois Journal: "All business entrusted to them will be attended to with promptness and fidelity." History has pretty well forgotten W.H. Lamson of Danville, but history well remembers Abraham Lincoln of Springfield. Was their advertising unethical?

For the better part of this century, under the urging of the American Bar Association and the several state bars, the answer to that question would have been a resounding "yes." The prevailing view was that it was undignified and unprofessional for lawyers to advertise. The law was far too complex to be marketed in capsules at advertised prices. Lawyers were a cut above commercialization.

All that changed abruptly with what is known as the Bates case of 1977. The case involved two young lawyers who set up a legal clinic in Phoenix in 1974. They took an ad in The Arizona Republic offering specific services at specific prices: $250 for a simple bankruptcy, $175 for an uncontested divorce. Their ad was in deliberate violation of Arizona's state-sanctioned rules. The state bar proposed to suspend the two lawyers, but they appealed, and three years later the Supreme Court, 5-4, held the ban on advertising unconstitutional.

The four dissenters — Burger, Powell, Stewart and Rehnquist — passionately deplored the court's abandonment of the old ways. Burger grimly predicted "problems of unmanageable proportions." Powell, foreseeing "profound changes in the practice of law," anticipated that "tens of thousands" of lawyers would rush forth to engage in competitive advertising. Rehnquist found the majority's decision "unfortunate."

Team Doctor, 2 Others Die In Tennessee Plane Crash

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — A twin-engine Cessna owned by the team physician for the University of South Carolina basketball team took a nosedive into a parking lot near a women's dormitory at East Tennessee State University early today, killing all three people aboard the plane, university officials said.

Dr. Emmett M. Lunceford Jr., a 54-year-old Columbia orthopedic surgeon who pioneered development of a porous-coated hip-joint implant, died in the crash of his plane, said university officials. Lunceford, a native of San Angelo, Texas, was internationally known for his work on implantation of artificial hip joints, according to a university spokeswoman. Lunceford, married with three children, was a graduate of the University of Tennessee Medical School in Memphis.

Colleagues praised Lunceford as a respected physician and community member. "Emmett Lunceford was a professor of surgery in orthopedics and a longtime leader in the medical community with a national reputation as an outstanding orthopedic surgeon and clinical investigator," said Dr. J. O'Neal Humphries, dean of the USC School of Medicine.

Dr. Edward Kimbrough III, educational director for orthopedics at Richland Memorial Hospital, said Lunceford was "internationally recognized as an inventor of orthopedic devices."

University officials said the other passengers were T. Michael Smith of Columbia, 36, and Dr. Michael McGuire, 34, of New York City, a resident working with Lunceford at Moore Clinic.

The plane was carrying all three back from the University of South Carolina-Cincinnati basketball game Wednesday night.

The plane was returning from Cincinnati to Columbia, S.C. when the plane crashed at 1:01 a.m. EDT., said Roger Myers, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Atlanta.

Preston Hicks of the National Transportation Safety Board said he and investigators from the FAA were at the scene and hoped to know by this afternoon what caused the crash.

ETSU public safety director Robert Mossman said he arrived at the parking lot near Lucille Clement women's dormitory just minutes after the crash.

"The plane attempted to land, slipped and nosed right in," he said.

About 200 students rushed out into the snow and sleet, he said. One car was damaged by flying debris.

"I think it's very important to remember that (the pilot) was losing altitude. He went down in a populated area and managed to save as many lives as he could," Mossman said.

"Another couple of hundred yards and we had a dorm full of young ladies. He had to be a heck of a pilot. It's a shame it had to end like this," he said.

The plane's pilot shut down one engine after experiencing engine trouble while flying over Atlanta, Myers said.

FAA controllers in Atlanta instructed the pilot to land at Tri-Cities Airport near Kingport, Tenn.,

but eventually lost radio and radar contact with the craft.

The ETSU basketball team was involved in a plane crash on Dec. 17 in Jasper, Ala.

Thefts Reported

Police are continuing their investigation of three thefts reported to the department Wednesday.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz said a radio-recorder, valued at $400, was taken from a car parked at Kingston Place in a break-in reported at 1:11 a.m., while Officer J.E. Fleming said a kerosene heater was taken from 405 Cedarhurst Drive in a break-in reported at 8:25 a.m.

According to Officer J.G. Bridges, a tool box and tools, valued at $150, were taken from a truck parked at 204 Ash St., in an incident reported at 4:42 p.m.

Indictment

A Pitt County grand jury has indicted Mary Alice Grimes Brown, 39, of Colonial Trailer Park on two counts of death by vehicle in connection with a July 1, traffic collision which killed two of her children.

Collissa Revonda Brown, 14, and Lamont Christopher Brown, 12, died when cars driven by their mother, and Jesse Clarence Palmer, 31, of Route 1, Bethel, collided about 12:15 a.m. on N.C. 11, 5.8 miles north of Greenville.

Their sister, 7-year-old Shanna Brown, Mrs. Brown, Palmer and two passengers in the Palmer car were injured.

Investigators said the Brown car skidded in a curve during a rain and was struck in the side by the Palmer vehicle.

Charge Made

Joseph Milton Taylor, 19, of 84 Azalea Gardens, has been charged with attempted child abduction by Greenville police in connection with an incident at Carolina East Mall Jan. 12.

Officer J.E. Fleming said Taylor was charged after allegedly attempting to take two children - a 7-year-old boy and a 9-year-old girl - from a car parked in the mall parking lot.

Fleming said the children's mother, Mary Whichard of 102 Jay Circle, reported the incident at 2:08 p.m.

Charges Brought

Antonio Taylor, 22 of 403B Dudley St., and Willie James Williams, 24, of 1105 Melody Lane, were arrested by Greenville police about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in connection with an incident at Harris' Super Market on E. Tenth Street about 7:48 p.m.

Officer T.G. Shane said Taylor was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of meat from the grocery store.

Williams, according to Shane, was charged with assault after allegedly striking an employee who tried to stop the two from leaving the store. Shane said Williams also allegedly threw bricks at the employee, who along with others, chased Taylor and Williams after they ran from the store.

Break-In Charged

Greenville police Wednesday arrested Ernest Eugene Roscoe, 28, of Greenville, on breaking and entering charges in connection with an incident at South Greenville School.

Officer J.E. Woolard said a break-in at the school was discovered about 7:08 a.m.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz reported that Roscoe was taken into custody about 7:18 a.m. just outside the school building.

Fire-Rescue Report

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen said that department personnel responded to 250 calls in December.

Allen said calls consisted of 223 for rescue service (180 within the city and 43 in the county) and 27 fire calls. He said 150 city residents, 49 county and 22 non-residents were transported by department personnel. Mileage traveled on rescue calls totaled 1,663 (1,155 in the city and 508 in the county).

Fire-rescue personnel made 182 inspections at 129 commercial buildings, 36 night clubs, 10 residential homes, four medical facilities, two day care centers and one institution. Employees also made 67 rechecks for failures to meet fire prevention codes and spent 420 hours in training and skills development exercises.

An estimated $1,750 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said vehicles driven by Earl Gerome Stencil of 303 N. Sylvan Dr. and Hugh Allen Stox of Route 2, Greenville, collided about 7:31 p.m. on 14th Street, 42 feet west of the Charles Street intersection, causing $150 damage to the Stencil car and $800 damage to the Stox truck.

Cars driven by Sandra Jo Roberts, of 408 Highland Ave. and Lenoris Marie Joyner of 612B Clark St., collided about 5:17 p.m. on Evans Street near the Howell Street intersection, resulting in $500 damage to the Roberts car and $300 damage to the Joyner car.

President's Farm Proposals Under Fire

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In a painful preview of battles yet to come on farm legislation this year, President Reagan's spartan agriculture proposals are already being plowed under by commodity groups and farm-state lawmakers.

With the ink not even dry on the administration's policy blueprint, attacks from powerful lobbying groups and from farm-dependent members of Congress have started in earnest.

Two significant developments came last week: a letter from leaders of nine commodity groups to Reagan, objecting in strong terms to a proposed limit on farm subsidy and loan payments, and the refusal of delegates to a Farm Bureau policy convention to go along with the phase-out of farm income protection through target prices.

In addition, Democratic members of Congress have been criticizing the proposal for a more "market-oriented" agriculture as coming at precisely the wrong time, when producers in many areas still are reeling from the worst financial times on the farm since the Depression.

While they have been more restrained, GOP lawmakers have complained privately about the White House proposal and so far none has stepped forward to sponsor the Reagan bill. Instead, Republicans in both the Senate and House are at work on their own alternative legislation.

Said one top Republican congressional aide of the administration effort: "They're really trying to outdo themselves. In 1981 (the last time comprehensive farm legislation was passed) they put together a bill that was dead on arrival in Congress. Now they've got one that's dead before departure."

The Reagan package, which administration officials say already has been approved in principle by the president, is an attempt to make U.S. farming less dependent on government price supports and production controls and more responsive to the movements in world commodity markets. Details of the package are to be sent to Congress soon after the president's budget is released on Feb. 4.

Criticism of the legislation is one early indication of the rip-roaring battle that promises to be waged over farm legislation in what all sides agree will be a watershed year. Farm program costs have grown out of control in recent years, largely because of overproduction and slowed export demand. Under current law, the government is required to take up the slack when market prices slump.

To hold down costs, the administration is proposing cuts in price-support loan rates, the phase-out of target prices, an end to the farmer-owned grain reserve (a marketing control device), halting the use of acreage-idling programs and caps on loan and subsidy payments to each farmer.

Academics and economists widely agree that more attention needs to be paid to enhancing exports to create the more market-oriented agriculture sought by Reagan. But few in the political arena are willing to take the first step down a road that would likely put more farmers into bankruptcy in the short run.

"Members of Congress will be returning soon, and I suspect they'll be coming in with all sorts of horror stories about growing debt problems," said Eugene Moos, a senior staff member of the Democrat-dominated House Agriculture Committee. "It could well poison the political atmosphere for the kind of changes in farm policy being recommended by the administration."

Hints of that atmosphere have been surfacing for weeks. Last month, at a forum of farm groups discussing the new four-year farm bill to be drafted this year, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, called the administration approach "a production-only-oriented program," or "the POOP policy."

In their letter to Reagan late last week, groups representing wheat, corn, rice, peanuts, sugar, cotton, soybeans and farm cooperatives strongly objected to proposals to limit farm program benefits, saying they would ultimately drive government costs up, not down. "We are unalterably opposed to the principle of a cap or limit on commodity program loans and purchases," the groups wrote.

They said farmers — particularly large producers who would be affected by such caps — depend heavily on loans for operating capital that enables them to wait for the best market price before selling their crop. "That need is still undiminished and compelling," the letter contended.

Republican Rep. Pat Roberts, whose western Kansas district is the nation's largest wheat producer, said he is not particularly worried that the proposals will become law. He sees the legislation as an attempt by administration Budget Director David Stockman to show members of Congress the painful cuts that would have to be made if they refuse to accept a general across-the-board spending freeze that includes entitlement programs and defense.

"It's a lever to force a vote on a freeze, and he (Stockman) has very quietly acknowledged that," Roberts said.

Malpractice Claims Up

NEW YORK (AP) — An American Medical Association report indicates medical malpractice claims are now at a "crisis stage," with three times as many filed today as a decade ago and plaintiffs winning record settlements, The New York Times said today.

Awards and settlements in malpractice suits "are breaking all records," said the AMA report titled "Professional Liability in the 1980's," according to the newspaper.

A second, internal AMA report provided several approaches to deal with the malpractice problem, most importantly self-policing and removing incompetent doctors, the Times said.

"We're going to be emphasizing this more stringently than has been the case before," an unidentified AMA official told the Times.

According to the first report, 16 malpractice claims were filed for every 100 doctors in 1983, a 20 percent increase from the year before. In 1975, fewer than five claims per 100 doctors were filed.

The internal AMA report concluded that malpractice suits are now at "a crisis stage."

An unidentified official with the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., which carries more medical malpractice policies than any other company, said he sees "no change in this trend" of "dramatic" increases.

"It's a steady line of progression — up," he told the Times.

Rest Home Owner Eyes Reopening

GRIFTON — Andy McDougald, owner of the Grifton Rest Home on Wall Street, which was damaged by fire early Wednesday morning, said today that he hopes to have the area affected by the fire "back open in two weeks."

The fire, confined to a smoking lounge at one end of the building, caused smoke damage to several patient rooms in the immediate area of the fire.

Twenty-seven residents of the home were moved to Carolina Care in Greenville — another rest home owned by McDougald — following the fire. But McDougald said "we hope to have the residents back in here" in two weeks.

Describing the fire as "no major thing," McDougald said a "crew is cleaning up today" and the area should be "ready to paint in two days."

An employee and the building's fire alarm system detected the fire about the same time, McDougald said. The door to the lounge was shut to isolate the fire and the residents were moved quickly into another part of the building.

"I'm real proud of the job" rest home employees, and local fire and rescue workers did, McDougald emphasized. "Grifton is a good place to have a rest home."

Officials suspect that a cigarette dropped on the floor of the lounge started the fire.

Australian Government To Protest Seizure Of Its Relief Supply Vessel

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Australia says it will protest Ethiopia's seizure of the cargo and crew of a ship carrying Australian famine-relief food and supplies to rebel-held areas of the impoverished African nation.

Ethiopia's Marxist government seized the cargo ship Golden Venture at the Red Sea port of Assab, and a spokesman for the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry on Wednesday described Australia's plan to aid rebel areas as "tantamount to interference in our internal affairs."

An estimated 7.75 million people are suffering from drought-related food shortages in Ethiopia. Many of the victims live in guerrilla-controlled areas of northern Tigre and Eritrea provinces.

In Australia, Foreign Secretary Bill Hayden said his government would protest the seizure.

"I have directed that our representatives in Addis Ababa should lodge a very strong protest and a demand that the commodities and other items be released," Hayden said in a radio interview in Sydney.

He stressed the estimated $1.2 million in aid for rebel areas was for humanitarian purposes and not intended to support guerrillas. "We only supply humanitarian aid because people are starving," he said.

Hayden said the ship had disregarded instructions and put in at the Ethiopian port Monday instead of one in Ethiopia's neighbor Sudan, where it was supposed to have unloaded the goods.

Diplomatic sources in Nairobi, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the ship was carrying 6,000 tons of wheat for rebel-controlled areas and another 3,500 tons for elsewhere in Ethiopia, plus trucks, medicines, blankets and a well-drilling rig.

Each bag of wheat reportedly was marked as a "Gift of Australia" to the Eritrean Relief Association or the Relief Society of Tigre. Both groups work closely with the rebels who long have been fighting for autonomy in those provinces.

"Legally, the Ethiopians would be justified in saying the cargo is contraband because they know from ship documents that it is being taken to another country in order to be smuggled into Ethiopia," said one diplomat in Nairobi.

Australia has said previously it has sent aid into rebel areas of Ethiopia on humanitarian grounds.

Australia's Freedom from Hunger Campaign, Community Aid Abroad, and the Melbourne Herald and Sun newspapers helped supply the water pumps, trucks, medical supplies and thousands of tons of food dispatched to Eritrea and Tigre provinces.

The Freedom from Hunger Campaign issued a statement calling on Hayden to take the matter to the U.N. Security Council.

"The Marxist-Leninist government of Ethiopia is committing regular and premeditated atrocities on its people with guns and bombs," said the director of Freedom from Hunger, Hans Paas.

"Now comes the hideous obscenity of the obstruction of vital aid from reaching starving people — aid shipped under the auspices of the Australian government and which is the property of the Australian people who donated for its purchase," he said.

The Ethiopian Foreign Ministry official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said his country will do whatever is necessary to prevent aid from reaching the secessionist rebels.

"We ask the government (Australia) to desist from this kind of activity and warn other groups or countries who may do likewise," said the spokesman.

The Foreign Ministry summoned Australia's charge d'affaires in Addis Ababa, Les Luck, and told him "to transmit what Ethiopia feels" to his government, the official said. He described Australia's action as an "unacceptable challenge to Ethiopia's authority" and "an infringement of its sovereignty."

The official did not indicate when the crew and ship would be permitted to leave Assab. Western diplomatic sources in Nairobi said they understood the vessel and crew would be released once it was unloaded.

County Boards Study Martin Tax Proposal

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — The state's county commissioners are asking Gov. Jim Martin to remember his political roots as he seeks to eliminate taxes that generate more than $200 million for county governments.

Martin, a former county commissioner and president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners, wants to eliminate taxes on business inventories and intangibles.

"He is a former county commissioner....He will understand our dilemma if we lose this revenue," said Paul Clapp, a Guilford County commissioner and a delegate to the association's legislative goals session.

Delegates Wednesday voted to oppose the repeal of either the intangibles or inventory tax unless the state provides another source for the tax money they would lose.

Arrests Made In Illegal Fish Sales; 2-Year Probe Involves Stripped Bass

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Authorities have begun arresting at least 25 North Carolina and Virginia residents on federal charges of illegally selling $500,000 worth of inland striped bass to seafood dealers and restaurants from New York to Florida.

The arrests began Wednesday following a two-year undercover probe of illegal sales of striped bass, also known as rockfish.

The investigation, dubbed "Operation Rock," uncovered "far greater illegal sales of the fish than we had ever imagined," said Sam Currin, U.S. attorney for the eastern district of North Carolina.

Federal and state officials documented the sale of more than 110,000 pounds of inland striped bass, Currin said. The fish were taken mostly from Gaston, Kerr and Roanoke Rapids lakes.

"With the arrests today, we think we've accounted for about 75 percent of the known black market (fish) dealers," he said.

The charges include 20 alleged violations of the federal Lacey Act, which prohibits sale and interstate commerce of protected wildlife. Four charges were misdemeanors, and one person was charged with violating state law.

The investigation revealed that the fish black market "was not a case of some 'good ol' boys' selling a few rock, but a highly organized network of poachers and fish dealers in several states," said Vernon Beville, executive director of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Poachers catch the fish in sunken gill nets at night, and then sell them in large quantities to fish dealers," he said. "One individual indicted ... has been charged with selling over 51,000 pounds of striped bass taken from inland waters."

Rockfish populations have been declining so rapidly due to pollution and overfishing that there has been a move to ban all fishing for the species until it recovers.

"The hue and cry of the sportsman is, 'Stop it.' They're the ones paying for it" Beville said of the illegal catches and sales.

The probe marked the first time investigators have gone undercover in a wildlife investigation, Currin said.

"What we found ... is that the traditional methods of law enforcement just weren't working," he said.

Undercover wildlife enforcement officers and federal agents disguised as fish buyers and dealers bought striped bass caught by poachers in inland waters. The agents then offered the same fish for sale to seafood dealers who had been implicated in dealing in illegal striped bass.

In all cases, dealers were told the fish had been caught in inland waters, Currin said.

Coastal striped bass can legally be caught and marketed commercially. Wildlife officials said that only biologists can tell the difference between inland and coastal rockfish.

Beville said the investigation also turned up scattered evidence of illegal wildlife sales, and suggested a probe may be focused on that area.

In other investigations, federal and state wildlife agents arrested or started serving arrest warrants Wednesday on about 105 people in four additional Eastern states on charges of illegal traffic in wildlife, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

The arrests ended investigations that began in Pennsylvania in 1982 and include probes in Delaware, New York and Maryland.

The most serious charge stemming from the probes is for illegal transport in interstate commerce of fish or wildlife taken in violation of state or federal law. A convicted offender faces a potential fine of $20,000 and a five-year prison sentence.

Nun Shot By Ex-Convict In New Orleans

SHOOTING VICTIM — Sister Mary Jude Marlborough, 68, was shot twice in the head and seriously wounded Wednesday by a man who then killed himself in a New Orleans church. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Dominican nun shot twice in the head for no apparent reason by an ex-convict who then shot himself dead was in stable condition today as police sought a motive for the attack in a church vestibule.

Sister Mary Jude Marlborough, 68, had arrived Wednesday for a Mass she regularly attended before teaching fourth grade when the gunman shot her once behind the left ear and once through the neck and cheek, police said.

The gunman, paroled from prison last June on an armed-robbery conviction, fired another shot which struck a statue of Christ above the altar at St. Rita Catholic Church, then put the gun in his mouth and took his own life, police said.

Although gravely injured, Sister Marlborough walked to a patrol car with the help of police. She was taken to Southern Baptist Hospital where she was listed in stable condition today, a hospital supervisor said.

In October, she will have been a Dominican sister for 50 years, said Tom Finney, spokesman for the Archdiocese of New Orleans.

Authorities identified the gunman as Charles Boles, 38, of New Orleans, whose lengthy police rap sheet listed him as a dangerous, "possible career criminal."

Archbishop Philip N. Hannan visited the church shortly after the shooting and said the gunman must have been insane.

"This certainly is the action of somebody who was demented, because there was no reason for it at all," he said.

Police spokesman Gus Krinke said there was no apparent motive. He said there was no evidence of a robbery attempt, and witnesses said they didn't hear any argument beforehand.

"There were only two or three people inside the church," Krinke said. "They said the only thing they heard was gunshots."

"They saw the nun and the man in the back of the church. When they ducked down and looked back up, they couldn't see anyone."

Records showed that Boles had been arrested but never convicted for burglary, attacking law enforcement officers, armed robbery and a list of municipal violations.

He was released from the Louisiana State Penitentiary last June after serving nine years of a 15-year sentence for armed robbery, according to the state Department of Corrections.

In Baton Rouge, state Corrections Department spokeswoman Martha Jumonville said Boles was released early because he had earned 25 days of "good time" for every month he served — even though a judge added a year to his sentence after an escape attempt in May, 1982.

Sister Marlborough, a native of Edgard and one of 10 children, was in her third year of teaching at the school, said Rev. James Tarantino, co-pastor at St. Rita.

Finney said Sister Marlborough has been teaching in schools operated by the Dominican sisters for 48 years in Louisiana and Mississippi.

UAW Union Workers Strike In Mo., Ky.

By The Associated Press
Strikes by 4,800 United Auto Workers union members continued today as local contract negotiations stalled at General Motors Corp. plants in Missouri and Kentucky, officials said.

Meanwhile, the UAW union sought to iron out a conflict over Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday that caused a brief wildcat strike at a Chrysler Corp. plant in suburban Detroit.

No agreement was reached in negotiations Wednesday between GM and UAW Local 2250 in Wentzville, Mo., said GM Assembly Division spokesman Andrew O'Keefe. The 3,125 hourly workers walked off the job Tuesday at the plant that makes front-wheel drive Buicks and Oldsmobiles.

Bargainers said the major issue was a company plan to pay more money to production workers who master 16 or more assembly-line skills. Those workers would belong to a special labor pool and be assigned according to need.

At Bowling Green, Ky., about 1,600 UAW members walked out Wednesday after local negotiations stalled between GM and UAW Local 2164, officials said. The plant produces Corvettes.

GM spokesman Fred Craig said negotiators planned to meet again today after bargaining was resumed Wednesday after the walkout.

Neither side would reveal issues involved in the strike, which was the third walkout in two years at the plant.

Employees at both plants have been working without contracts since Sept. 14, when their old agreements expired.

The five-hour wildcat strike Tuesday by 800 workers at Chrysler's Warren, Mich., truck plant Tuesday began after a supervisor implied that some blacks took an unauthorized day off to observe King's birthday. The UAW said Wednesday.

UAW Region 1 Director Perry Johnson said he would meet today with Chrysler officials to discuss the dispute.

"This began when a production manager decided that he was going to take a survey to determine how many blacks stayed home Monday for Martin Luther King's birthday," Johnson said. "No whites were surveyed."

"People thought it was racist and everybody walked out. They are both blacks and whites on the afternoon shift."

Contrary to the foreman's suspicion, it appeared that Monday's absenteeism was no higher or lower than usual, Johnson said.

Chrysler spokesman Robert Heath said he didn't know whether any supervisors tried to identify absentees by race. He said only 200 workers struck Tuesday and the remainder were sent home.

Grave Found

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — A grave containing 29 bodies has been found in Ayacucho province, the stronghold of the Shining Path guerrilla movement, an official of the attorney general's office reports.

Dr. Jose de la Rosa Bracovich, who led an investigating team to the grave, said some of the bodies had their hands tied behind their backs and showed signs of torture. De la Rosa said the grave was found after an anonymous telephone caller gave the location to the attorney general's office.

Home Building Activity Rose In December

By The Associated Press
 New home construction edged up 2.3 percent in December, the government reported today.
 The gains came from new activity in the Midwest and South, the Commerce Department said.
 New housing was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.59 million units in December, it said. While this is the best performance since September, it is still well below the peak rate of 2.26 million units reached in February.
 The December gain followed a revised 1.2 percent increase in November. That month had originally been reported as a 0.7 percent drop.
 Meanwhile, an increase in merchandise sales in November and a subsequent rise in industrial operating rates in December may signal a renaissance of economic activity, one economic analyst says.

 "We have an economy where growth is reviving, although at a modest level," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of Shearson Lehman-American Express. The Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday that the industrial operating rate hit 81.9 percent in December. The 0.3 percentage point increase followed a smaller, 0.1 percentage point gain in November.
 Before November, the rates had fallen for three consecutive months.
 In another report Wednesday, the Commerce Department said that sales of manufactured goods surged upward by 1.1 percent in November, the largest increase since May.
 Retailers led the gain in sales with a 2.3 percent increase, followed by manufacturers with a 1.3 percent boost and a 0.5 percent gain at the wholesale level.

 Inventories posted a tiny 0.1 percent gain, the smallest gain since a 0.1 percent decline in June 1983.
 Some analysts said inventories, especially at the retail level, were still very high and could cut into economic growth in the first half of this year.
 Roger Brinner, an economist at Data Resources Inc., said the inventory overhang could cut as much as 2 percent off economic growth in the first three months of this year. He forecast a 1.5 percent growth for the first quarter.
 Steven Wood, an economist with Chase Econometrics, said the report on operating rates was a sign that inflation will remain under control this year. As long as operating rates don't climb too high, the economy has enough excess capacity to meet increasing demand without triggering price increases.
 Wood said the current rate of 81.9

percent was in the comfortable range, and that the operating rate would have to top 85 percent before inflation would start to be a problem. He predicted this would not happen until mid-1986.
 The 81.9 percent rate is below the peak of 82.7 percent in July.
 By industry, the operating rate in the manufacturing sector was 82.2 percent in December, compared with 81.9 percent in November. The operating rate at the nation's mines rose to 76.2 percent in December from 75.4 percent. The only segment suffering a decline was utilities, where the operating rate dropped to 81.7 percent from 82.7 percent.
 In other economic news Wednesday:
 —Domestic oil consumption increased 3.5 percent last year from 1983, the first annual gain since 1978, and gasoline prices at the pump fell 2½ cents a gallon to an average $1.18 at the end of the year, a level last seen in the spring of 1980, the American Petroleum Institute said.
 —Almost 300 large companies have ended their pension plans and captured $2.8 billion in surplus assets since 1980, and 90 have announced they intend to end plans and pocket $1.1 billion, putting the private pension industry in a crisis, said professor Edward Harpham of the University of Texas at Dallas.

 —ITT Corp., one of the nation's biggest industrial companies, said it would divest more than a dozen subsidiaries valued at about $1.7 billion, nearly eliminating its interest in natural resources.

FBI Agents In Taiwan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI, seeking the extradition of a gang leader who may have masterminded the 1984 killing of a dissident Taiwanese writer in California, is sending agents to Taiwan to obtain more information about the case.
 The announcement Wednesday from FBI spokesman Lane Bonner came after Taiwanese authorities investigating the murder reported they had arrested Col. Chen Hu-men, the deputy chief of the Defense Ministry's military intelligence bureau.
 The authorities also said they had questioned "several others" in connection with the shooting of Henry Liu, a frequent critic of the Taiwanese regime, last Oct. 15.
 The independent Chinese-language Independence Evening Post reported that two other "ranking officials" in addition to Chen have been arrested in the case. However, the Taiwan government declined to comment on the report.
 Bonner did not say how many FBI agents are being sent to Taiwan nor when they are scheduled to arrive. Such information normally is not made public, he said.
 Liu emigrated to the United States in the 1970s and often denounced Nationalist President Chiang Ching-kuo in his writings. He is said to have been shot by three Asians at his home in Daly City, Calif.

UNC Rally 'Inevitable' In Win Over Wolfpack

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Guard Steve Hale says North Carolina sank so low against arch-rival North Carolina State during the first half that it was "inevitable" the No. 6 Tar Heels would rally.

"We couldn't play any worse than we did (in the opening half). There was only way to go — up," Hale said after the Tar Heels came back from 15 points down in the second half to down N.C. State 86-76.

In the only other Atlantic Coast Conference game Wednesday, Maryland beat Clemson 94-84 to break a three-way tie for second and move within one game of the league-leading Tar Heels, 13-2 and 4-0.

In ACC action tonight, Wake Forest travels to No. 2 Duke and Georgia Tech entertains Monmouth.

Forward Warren Martin scored a career-high 16 points, blocked six and had a game-high nine rebounds as North Carolina captured its 22nd consecutive ACC regular-season victory.

"At the half, we said we knew it would be tight again," Hale said. "We have that confidence. We all new we'd be back. It was inevitable."

Hale, who scored 13 points, said Martin was the difference for the Tar Heels, who had six players in double figures.

"If it weren't for him, we wouldn't have been in the game," Hale said.

Coch Dean Smith said Martin has never played better.

"This was the best game Warren has played, but he's going to get better. He's coming on," Smith said.

Martin, a 6-foot-11½ junior, downplayed his performance.

"I just went out and played. I had a lot of blocked shots... but there were a few things on defense I didn't do that I felt I should have," Martin said.

N.C. State, 9-5 overall and 2-3 in the conference, stretched a nine-point halftime lead to 51-36 before

North Carolina rallied, outscoring the Wolfpack 26-7 over a nine-minute span to grab a lead they never lost.

Hale's half-hook shot in the lane over Lorenzo Charles with seven minutes left gave the Tar Heels a 60-58 lead. The Wolfpack sliced the lead to one two minutes later but never got closer as North Carolina sank 14 consecutive free throws in the final four minutes.

"It was like an avalanche," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said. "It was frustrating. We were up by 15, then nothing."

Smith said injuries to two players — forward Joe Wolf and swingman Curtis Hunter — and the transfer of a third — freshman Matthew Brust — forced him to change his coaching philosophy because of a lack of depth.

"My plan, for the first time in my 24 years as a head coach, was not to apply pressure," he said. "Well, I take that back. We did the same against (Virginia center Ralph) Sampson. I planned to go to it with 10 minutes to go, but had to move it up."

The victory offset an outstanding performance by Charles, who poured in a career-high 33 points — 20 in the first half. Russell Pierre added 12 points, while Nate McMillan had 15 — 11 in the second half.

Smith, Duggins Hold Lead

Both of the leaders in the area scoring race held to their positions this past week, but there was a general drop among the overall averages.

Marvin Smith of Ayden-Grifton continues to be the leader among the boys, with a 19.8 average, down a full point from last week. Roanoke's Gloria Duggins is still the scoring leader for the girls, hitting 21.7 points a game, downing four-tenths of a point from the previous week.

All averages are through Tuesday's games.

Earl Randolph of Washington has moved up a notch to take over second place among the boys with a 19.0 average, while Tony Doughty of Williamston advances from fifth to third at 16.6.

Fourth place is now held by Jimmy Powers of Trinity Christian, down from second place last week with a 16.4 average, while Dan Andrews of Greenville Christian Academy drops a spot to fifth at 16.2.

The biggest advance among the boys comes from Williamston's Mike Griffin, up to eight place from a tie for 12th last week. He's averaging 13.9 points. The lone new member of the boys' top 20 is Ayden-Grifton's Doug Anderson, who moves into 19th place at 10.8.

Cyndi Hicks of Greene Central continues in the number two slot for the girls with a 19.5 average, while Farmville Central's Lisa Lang holds to third at 18.2.

The biggest gainer among the girls is this week's fourth place holder, Kim Green of Chocowinity, up nine spots from 13th to fourth with an 18.0

average. Fifth place is held by last week's #4 scorer, Renee Deans of Trinity, at 17.0.

Washington continues as the highest scoring boys' team, hitting 66.3 points a game, while Williamston moves up from fourth to second at 60.2.

Greene Central and Farmville Central hold to first and second in girls' offensive, hitting 56.9 and 56.1, respectively.

On defense, Trinity's boys are the best, allowing only 44.0 points a game, while North Pitt is second at 45.8. Chocowinity leads the girls' defense, giving up 34.8 per game, while Bear Grass is second at 35.7.

Trinity's boys' have the best winning margin, outscoring their opponents by 12.7 points a game, while North Pitt is second with a 9.7 margin.

Among the girls, Greene Central is outshooting its foes by 18.5 points a game, while Chocowinity has a 14.0 margin.

NCAA Approves Pre-Season NIT

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The struggling National Invitation Tournament, which has been having trouble funding one tourney, suddenly has two.

Approval of a preseason NIT was the highlight Wednesday as the National Collegiate Athletic Association concluded its 79th annual convention, one of the timest in memory.

The delegates overwhelmingly made the NIT, the nation's oldest postseason tournament, the newest preseason one, as well.

Jack Kaiser, athletic director at St. John's University, said 16 teams will be invited to play on the last two weekends in November "to provide a dramatic opening to the basketball season."

The amount of money in the NIT's television contract has decreased and Kaiser said the preseason tourney "will help us stabilize our tournament. We could still make the NIT go without the preseason tournament, but we weren't sure."

The delegates also rejected a proposal that could have wrecked national champion Brigham Young's football program by eliminating the exceptions to the NCAA's limit of four years' eligibility in a five-year period for time spent in the armed services, on official church missions or with organized foreign aid services of the U.S. government. Many BYU players served a two-year mission for the Mormon Church, which does not count against their five years.

"We're elated, really pleased," said BYU athletic director Glen Tuckett, who had prepared a four-page speech opposing the plan but never had to use it. Speaking against the proposal were athletic directors

Carl Ullrich of Army and J.O. Coppedge of Navy and faculty representatives Col. Harvey Schiller of the Air Force Academy and Marvin Johnson of New Mexico.

Wilford S. Bailey, faculty representative at Auburn and a member of the policy-making NCAA Council, which sponsored the legislation, said it was intended "to eliminate inequities. There was nothing vindictive against Brigham Young because of its present position. It's been a concern for years."

Opponents claim the missions gives BYU an edge because players who have been on missions are older and more mature. Tackle Robert Anae turned 26 the day BYU defeated Michigan in the Holiday Bowl while linebacker Marv Allen played in the first and seventh Holiday Bowls.

The postseason NIT format will not be changed by the preseason NIT, which will not count against the NCAA's 28-game limit on regular-season basketball games. Kaiser said the first weekend would consist of a quartet of four-team regionals around the country with the survivors playing the next weekend, "hopefully in (New York's) Madison Square Garden."

He said it would be "different in nature" from the established NIT. "I think the postseason tournament will be for middle-echelon teams that can't get into the NCAA Tournament," he said. "We hope the preseason NIT will attract some Top Twenty-type teams."

The games will be held on Friday and Sunday nights so they won't conflict with pro and college football.

The preseason NIT will try to land the projected top team from a conference but a team would be limited to one appearance in three years. Every conference would be represented over a 10-year period.

Kaiser said the participating teams would receive 80 percent of the revenue and the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Association, which sponsors the NIT, the remainder, which will go to five groups, including the American Basketball Coaches Association.

Kaiser said the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic at Springfield, Mass., the traditional college basketball opener, will choose its two teams before NIT selections.

According to Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, one of the convention's most significant actions was the abolishment of complimentary tickets for athletes. Instead of tickets, frequently sold in violation of NCAA rules, there will be given a pass list which can be used only by an athlete's relatives or fellow students.

"One of the favorite devices has been to give the complimentary tickets to the parents of a prospect and tell them, 'The tickets are yours and you can do anything you want with them,'" Byers said. "Selling them at substantially increased levels would finance whatever was proposed in the recruiting — such as automobiles."

On Tuesday, delegates granted greater autonomy to major football schools and tabled for one year a controversial plan outlawing a variety of performance-enhancing drugs.

In other action, the NCAA's Postseason Football Committee was given the power to levy fines on bowl games that violate NCAA rules.

No Room To Work

Hoyas Crush Providence

By The Associated Press
After suffering through two overtime games in its last three outings, it figured that top-ranked Georgetown would take out its frustrations on some unfortunate college basketball team. Providence became that victim.

In a game that was over early, the unbeaten Hoyas mauled the Friars 85-44 Wednesday night to extend their winning streak to 27 games.

"They made us look bad," said Providence Coach Joe Mullaney, whose club fell behind 21-7 after 12 minutes and never recovered.

Despite the ease of the triumph, Georgetown Coach John Thompson found reason for criticism.

"I'm never pleased with the defense," he said. "This team still hasn't done anything yet this season."

In other Top 20 action Wednesday, No. 6 North Carolina stormed back from a 15-point deficit to bury North Carolina State 86-76. No. 7 Syracuse stopped Seton Hall 90-80 as Mike Brown scored 23 points and Wendell Alexis 21, and No. 13 Oklahoma overcame the foul trouble plaguing All-American Wayman Tisdale to rip Missouri 92-65.

Georgetown led 51-22 after a 16-2 spurt opening the second half and upped the bulge to 66-31 before Thompson emptied the bench with seven minutes left.

All-American Patrick Ewing scored 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds for Georgetown, 16-0 this season. Providence, 8-8, was led by Brian Walker's eight points.

"It was a very bad performance, and sometimes we're capable of that," Mullaney said.

North Carolina State used an 8-2 spurt to build a nine-point halftime edge into a 51-36 advantage over North Carolina. Then the roof fell in on the Wolfpack. The Tar Heels scored 26 of the next 33 points over a nine-minute span in carving out their 13th victory in 15 games.

"We were up by 15, then nothing," North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano said. "It was an avalanche."

The leader of the North Carolina comeback was 6-foot-11 junior forward Warren Martin, who finished with a career-high 16 points, six blocked shots and nine rebounds.

"Yes, this was the best game Warren has played," Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith said. "But he's going to have better ones. He's coming on. It takes big men longer to develop. This has to help his confidence."

Brad Daugherty scored 17 points to lead six double-figure scorers for North Carolina. North Carolina State, 9-5, got 31 points from Lorenzo Charles, including 20 as the Wolfpack built a 43-34 intermission margin.

Syracuse, 11-1, led seven-time loser Seton Hall only 50-48 early in the second half before pulling away, and Coach Jim Boheim wasn't happy.

"We're just not playing the way we have to play to beat good basketball teams," he said. "We're not consistent either as individuals or as a basketball team."

For his part, Seton Hall Coach Pete Carlesimo was upset that his club failed to seize the opportunity. The Pirates missed 12 of 29 free throw attempts.

"We beat ourselves," he said. "You can't make mental mistakes and miss free throws and expect to win."

Andre McCloud scored 23 points for Seton Hall.

Coach Billy Tubbs knew his reserves would be tested after Tisdale, Oklahoma's two-time All-America forward, picked up two personal fouls within 19 seconds early in the first half against Missouri. With Tisdale riding the bench for 15 minutes, the reserves got the call — and came through handsomely.

"I thought Oklahoma's support people really played well," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "We tried to make a run at them in the second half, which we did, but we couldn't crack that 10-point barrier."

Tisdale, who scored 14 of his 16 points in the first half in helping the Sooners to a 52-39 lead, went to the bench with his fourth foul with 18 minutes to play. Missouri trimmed the deficit to 10 on two occasions, but could get no closer.

Darryl Kennedy paced the Sooners, 12-4, with 19 points while Malcolm Thomas had 25 for Missouri, 10-6.

Freshman Richard Madison's two free throws with 18 seconds to play gave Kentucky a 58-57 decision over Mississippi State and sole possession of the Southeastern Conference lead at 4-1. Mark Gottfried's 25-footer with three minutes left gave Alabama the lead for good in a 60-55 verdict over Auburn that pushed the Crimson Tide to 4-2 in the SEC. Georgia beat Florida 71-60 and Tennessee stopped Vanderbilt 87-79 in other SEC matches.

Len Bias scored a career-high 27 points and Jeff Adkins added 24 as Maryland beat Clemson 94-84 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

In the Southwest Conference, NCAA Tournament finalist Houston ran its league mark to 9-1 with a 77-73 squeaker over Rice. In other SWC action, Texas slipped by Baylor 68-65, Texas A&M needed an overtime to subdue Texas Christian 65-60 and Texas Tech surprised Arkansas 64-48.

In the Metro Conference, Southern Mississippi beat injury-riddled Louisville 72-63 and Cincinnati pummeled South Carolina 73-51, while in the Big Eight, Nebraska defeated Kansas State 75-63 and Oklahoma State ripped Colorado 94-76.

In other games, it was Army 69, Fairfield 68; Maine 56, New Hampshire 51; Navy 74, Lafayette 71 in double overtime; Alabama-Birmingham 69, Jacksonville 64; Notre Dame 96, Holy Cross 61; Purdue 50, Northwestern 49; Wichita State 84, Indiana State 80; Nevada-Las Vegas 93, Cal-Santa Barbara 76; Pacific 61, New Mexico State 59; and Wyoming 77, Air Force 75 in overtime.

Duke Students Maintain Originality

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — While the temperatures dipped below the freezing mark, the Duke students set themselves down for the night in tents waiting for the next day's basketball game at Cameron Indoor Arena, the self-styled "home of the nation's most innovative fans."

On the morning after, the area was strewn with beer bottles, whisky bottles, soda and beer cans, pizza cartons and even a couch as other fans strolled to the arena.

The student fans already were settled — standing, which they do for the whole game — subtly needing the opposition in the 8,500-seat stadium.

It's the way the student body wants it — a first come, first served basis — turning down a university offer to allow the tickets on a lottery basis.

The students have a lot more to cheer about these days as Duke, second-ranked in the nation, raced off to a 12-0 record before the its first loss, 78-76 in overtime at Maryland in their Atlantic Coast Conference season-opener Monday night.

Last Saturday, Duke made Washington its 12th victim, 71-59.

In unison the 4,000 Duke students, situated in the front rows on both sides of the court called out in German 1-2-3, etc., an obvious reference to the University of Washington's West German players, Detlef Schrempf and Christian Welp.

They also have repeated chants such as "air ball," when an opposition goes to the free-throw line or "three seconds" as a reminder to the officials.

In the past, the students have worn skull caps when Maryland visits Duke, just to rile up Terrapins Coach Lefty Driesell, a Duke graduate.

They've also reminded players of their past sins, such as a rollout poster of a nude woman for an opposing player who was charged with sexual assault.

Chastised by the university president for their berating of referees, the Duke students came to the next game with signs which said, "We begin to differ" when the call didn't go the Blue Devils' way.

"It's a real happening," says guard Johnny Dawkins, Duke's star player, about the student support.

"It's a great atmosphere," Holding forth in this frenzy is Blue Devils Coach Mike Krzyzewski, a former captain in the U.S. Army who played under Bobby Knight at West Point and coached under him at Indiana.

Krzyzewski served as head coach at West Point for four years and now is in his fifth season at Duke.

When Krzyzewski decided it was time to move on at age 33, he said Knight told him, "Be careful you don't take too big a step."

The ACC was the big time, Krzyzewski realized, and he knew he had to recruit top talent to keep the Blue Devils competitive. He tried without success to land Chris Mullin (St. John's), Uwe Blab (Indiana) and Jim Miller (Virginia).

Despite the signing of Dawkins, a blue-chipper from Washington, D.C., Duke struggled through 17-13, 10-17 and 11-17 seasons before a 24-10 campaign in 1983-84, getting eliminated by Washington in the NCAA West Regionals.

Duke was voted the preseason favorite to win the ACC.

"We needed a foundation, quality players and people," says Krzyzewski, "and we got them, and we've got the right players to fit in."

Duke is doing it with quick guards, Dawkins and Tommy Amaker, the shooting of 6-foot-9 Mark Alarie, the toughness of Canadian Dan Meagher, 6-7, and a beefed up 6-8 Jay Bilas at center. Also there's 6-6 swingman David Henderson, who is averaging 11.5 points as the sixth man.

Dawkins, 6-2, 165-pound junior, and Amaker, 6-0, 155, playmaking sophomore — perhaps the skinniest guard tandem around — have been the key to the Duke success because of their defensive abilities. Dawkins also is the Blue Devils' top scorer with an 18.3-point average.

"We're playing within our system," says Krzyzewski. "Dawkins is creative and Tommy Amaker is Mr. Consistency, and we're doing it without a true center."

"We're not like Georgetown," says Amaker. "We're not going to scare people but we play hard. Georgetown is No. 1. You got to take your hats off to them. We'll see what happens."

In the closing minutes against Washington, the Duke students chanted, "We want Georgetown."

Afterwards Krzyzewski said of the students' enthusiasm, "Don't forget, they were waiting all night for tickets. Maybe the cold got to them."

Mouthpieces, designed to protect the teeth, were not used in boxing until 1902. Ted "Kid" Lewis is believed to be the first fighter to use one.

Phoenix Open Win Opens PGA Doors

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It was in this tournament a year ago that then-rookie Corey Pavin proved to himself that he belonged on the PGA Tour.

"Phoenix opened doors for me and gave me the idea I could go out and win on my ability alone and not have to rely on luck," Pavin said before teeing off today in the first round of the 50th Phoenix Open golf tournament.

"I felt confident I could make it," said the 25-year-old Pavin recalled.

"But you always have a little doubt in your mind, that maybe it won't work out," he said.

But Pavin, playing in only his second event as a full-fledged member of the Tour, chased Tom Purtzer to the title in the 1984 Phoenix Open, finished second and "set up the whole year. It wasn't the money I won, but what the money meant," Pavin said.

It meant he had secured his playing rights for another full year, his primary goal.

Magic Recalls Series, Loss To Celtics

By The Associated Press Magic Johnson remembers last June's National Basketball Association Championship Series with some regret. Although the result was the same, the Los Angeles Lakers' latest trip to Boston Garden won't have the same bad memories.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New Jersey 100, Chicago 94; Philadelphia 122, Atlanta 99; Washington 103, Utah 101; Denver 115, Golden State 107; Phoenix 98, Dallas 95; and Los Angeles Clippers 98, Houston 88.

McHale, despite being Boston's leader in field-goal percentage, had made just three of 12 shots when the Celtics took a timeout with 14 seconds left after Parish rebounded Johnson's miss. McHale said he was surprised when Jones called a play for him in the huddle.

Clippers 98, Rockets 88 NBA field-goal percentage lead James Donaldson scored a season-high 23 points as Los Angeles handed Houston its fourth straight loss.

Nets 100, Bulls 94 Otis Birdsong scored 20 points and New Jersey's 8-0 streak in the fourth quarter carried the Nets past Chicago.

Dolphins, 49ers Feature Top NFL Speedsters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If the Miami Dolphins and San Francisco 49ers weren't otherwise engaged on Sunday playing Super Bowl XIX, the two National Football League teams could stage a terrific track meet.

Joe Delaney, the late Kansas City Chiefs' running back, was also on that championship relay team and talked Duper into trying football.

"But development comes with game experience, and I haven't been able to utilize what skills I have. The toughest part of football is sitting and watching."

I couldn't go four or five straight plays without needing a rest. "They gave me a conditioning program to follow the next two summers before camp opened, and I've always come in early with the rookies."

Theismann To Join ABC

Moore, the 33-year-old receiver who now backs up youngsters Duper and Mark Clayton, is among several Super Bowl performers who competed in track on the high school level.

"Those three-hour practices in my first training camp nearly killed me."

"But I think I've developed now to the point where I won't need that anymore."

Lobster Tales

This lobster can never be "red in the face" — because it's electric blue all over! Only one lobster out of every 30 MILLION caught is blue. Fishermen have also found purple, green, yellow, white and "calico" lobsters. But lobsters are probably color-blind. So are seeing eye dogs. They can't tell a red light from a green one, but lead their masters to a safe crossing by watching the flow of traffic. Bulls react to the motion, not the color, of matadors' capes.

Actor Doesn't Feel Kumar Character In 'Jewel In the Crown' Is Tragic

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Art Malik says that despite everything that's happened in the "Jewel in the Crown," he doesn't consider Hari Kumar a tragic figure.

Malik, in this country for a brief visit, stars as the English-educated Indian in the critically acclaimed miniseries now unfolding on Mobil's "Masterpiece Theatre" on public television. It's based on four novels by Paul Scott, commonly called "The Raj Quartet."

Episode 6 is on Sunday night. Kumar was thrown into jail and tortured by a British police officer (Tim Pigott-Smith) after Daphne Manners (Susan Woodriddle) was raped by a group of Indians. The officer resents Daphne's love for Kumar and the fact that Kumar attended a more prestigious school than he did.

"I don't think Hari looked on himself as a tragic figure," said Malik. "I think he believes something would come, something would take him out of it. I never considered playing Hari for the sympathy vote."

Malik is also currently appearing in David Lean's new motion picture, "A Passage to India."

He was accompanied here by Miss Woodriddle and Charles Dance, whose character of Sgt. Guy Perron of British Intelligence does not appear until the Feb. 17 episode.

Daphne, with her sad, haunting eyes, has cast a spell over viewers, particularly male viewers.

"She's shy but brave," Miss Woodriddle explained. "I think we all know someone like her. I think also that her role is so concentrated in the beginning of the series that you get to know her very well. I feel lucky that way. It was so funny when I was working on the film. Everyone was so fond of me and took such care of me. I think they all thought I was Daphne."

"But you must remember that Daphne drove an ambulance in the London blitz. She made her way alone halfway around the world. When I first started, the director told me I was blinking too much behind my glasses. He said Daphne that helpless wouldn't even be able to catch the No. 9 bus. Yes, she was shy, but she was also very brave and strong."

It is Daphne's rape that is the focus of the series, the metaphor for the British rule in India and the engine that drives the story forward. "Perron is the man who draws all the pieces together and puts the puzzle together," said Dance. "And he gets the girl." (But not Daphne, who dies in childbirth).

Dance, as Perron, is the observer and the character generally regarded as being the author. The actor was spotted in the series when it played in England and was cast opposite Meryl Streep in "Plenty." British journalists called him "the thinking woman's pin-up" and "this year's crumpet."

Miss Woodriddle didn't work for 18 months after she completed filming "Jewel in the Crown" in India. "But I was lucky," she said, "because I knew this was coming up. I was once told the way to survive in this business was to prepare yourself for a lot of disappointment. I don't recommend that much unemployment for anyone, but it made everything that's happened since particularly sweet."

She has since starred in another British miniseries, this one about the "race" to the South Pole between English explorer Robert Scott and Norwegian Roald Amundsen. Amundsen got to the pole first, and Scott and his party died on their return trip. Miss Woodriddle plays Scott's wife.

Malik, who was born in Pakistan but has lived in England since he was 3, said prior to "Jewel" and "Passage," he "played the token Indian in British dramas."

But, he joked, "If people ever stop making films about India I'd never work again."

Rockettes Boot Disney Epcot Offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kicked off their stage at Radio City Music Hall by Walt Disney movies, the Rockettes have given the boot to an offer to perform at Disney's Epcot Center in Florida in return for ending their Radio City picketing.

In place of the Rockettes, Disney plans to rent the 6,000-seat hall from late May through August for the premiere of two of its new movies, "Return to Oz" and "Cauldron."

The Disney offer, made Wednesday, was meant to resolve the dispute that sent the dancers to the streets last week, picketing and gathering petitions that urged they appear at the Music Hall with the Disney players this summer.

"We're not turning down work," Rockette Eileen Collins said Wednesday. "The statement we're making is what a vital part of New York the Rockettes are."

Disney, which is excluding the chorus line from the hall's summer show, offered the Rockettes work for 10 weeks on the condition they immediately stop their demonstrations outside the hall at Rockefeller Center.

But getting 10 weeks' work at Disney World "was not the point of our demonstration," said Miss Collins.

The dancers, a fixture at the Music Hall for more than 50 years, have said a Rockette-less Disney show could set a precedent for the theater's dispensing with them completely when their current contract expires in May 1986.

"We're tremendously hurt," Miss Collins said. "If they'll let us dance with Mickey Mouse in Florida, I don't see why we can't do it here."

Under the offer announced jointly by Disney productions and the Music

Hall, 18 Rockettes and 2 alternates would play 10 weeks at the Disney Epcot Center, or two sets of 18 and 2 could play five weeks each.

Radio City executives, who had agreed to pay the high-kicking chorines for their missed performances in New York, withdrew that offer as well as the Disney work when the dancers voted to keep demonstrating.

"The opportunity to perform at the Walt Disney Center this summer and the one condition asked by Walt Disney Productions cannot be separated," they said in a statement.

"By rejecting that condition, these individuals reject the opportunity in its entirety. Their decision is unfortunate."

Gerald Dunbar, a lawyer for the dancers union, said negotiations were scheduled to resume today. He said he remained hopeful an agreement could be reached.

TV Zappers, Zippers Cause Concern Among Advertisers

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Cable television, video cassette recorders and remote controls have created a generation of TV zappers and zippers who are causing ripples in the advertising industry, researchers say.

Zappers, persistent channel changers, and zippers, people with VCRs who fast-forward past commercials, have prompted TV advertisers to request changes in the way ratings are gathered, according to Carrie Heeter, coordinator of Michigan State University's communication technology laboratory.

Ms. Heeter and Bradley Greenberg, chairman of the university's telecommunications department, have prepared a paper on viewing styles.

It contained findings based on five Michigan State surveys of 1,500 adults and 400 children over the past two years. Four of the surveys were conducted in the Lansing area and one in a Detroit suburb, but their results were nearly identical to others conducted around the country, Ms. Heeter said.

"I cannot imagine that the characteristics we found would not be applicable anywhere where there's remote control or cable TV," Greenberg said.

According to the researchers: —About 24 percent of TV watchers are "super-zappers," people who change channels constantly.

—About 27 percent of the viewers are "channel-loyal," people who make only one channel change every 1½ hours and rarely watch more than one show at a time.

—Men are more likely than women to zap TV commercials.

—Young adults do more zapping than older adults.

—Zappers cannot be categorized by income, education, marital status, household size or number of children.

Zappers and zippers have caused concern among advertisers, Ms. Heeter said Wednesday.

"Some thought of rating commercials instead of programs," she said. "So, instead of the 'Dukes of Hazzard' being No. 1, it could be Pepsi."

"The concern is, are advertisers getting what they paid for when they buy commercial time?" Greenberg said.

Ms. Heeter said the situation isn't likely to improve for the advertisers because children of zappers are more likely to zap than their parents.

"So the quantity of zapping will only increase," she said.

She said the conclusions have a 95 percent probability of being correct.

Music Said Factor In Defection Decision By Former Double Agent

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A former Soviet double agent says the jazz music he listened to as a teen-ager came to symbolize the freedom he hungered for and was one of the reasons for his defection from the KGB to the CIA.

"I tasted something forbidden, and it affected me for the rest of my life," Vladimir Sakharov said in an interview Monday night following his speech to about 1,100 people at Davidson College.

Sakharov said his father was a diplomatic courier for the Soviet Union who traveled the world, delivering secret KGB communications. He often visited Washington and New York and told young Vladimir about American life and about attending jazz concerts. As a teen-ager, Sakharov studied piano and loved jazz.

"I was very lucky to be overexposed to American cultures and values very early in my life through my father," Sakharov said in his speech.

Sakharov, 39, gave the audience a glimpse of how the KGB — the Soviet secret police and intelligence agency — operates in the Middle East. And he warned that the Soviet Union's long-range policy is to subvert American influence and gain control of the strategic, oil-rich Middle East.

From 1967 until 1971, Sakharov worked as a KGB operative in North Yemen, Egypt and Kuwait. He said the KGB owned him, often summoning him to meetings that lasted into the night and commanding him to inform on other Soviets.

Though first contacted by the CIA in North Yemen in 1967, Sakharov didn't become a CIA double agent until 1970 while in Kuwait.

He supplied the U.S. intelligence agency with information on Soviet military and economic aid to Arab countries, along with psychological profiles of Soviet KGB agents stationed in the Middle East. In exchange, the CIA helped him defect.

Today Sakharov is an American citizen who holds a doctorate in international relations and lives south of Los Angeles. He runs a small consulting firm advising businesses on the risks of investing in foreign countries and works as a visiting scholar at Stanford University's Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace.

He lived underground in the U.S. from 1972 to 1981, when he surfaced publicly after writing "High Treason," a book based on his experience as a KGB agent.

Sakharov told the Davidson audience that the Soviet Union has an advantage in the Middle East because it has better-trained intelligence agents. All Soviet diplomats, he said, either cooperate with or work directly for the KGB or GRU, the Soviet Union's military intelligence arm.

About half the KGB's work, he said, involves public relations, trying to convince Arab nations that the Soviet Union is united with them in the fight against Israel.

But the KGB also has developed and trained some 17 national liberation front organizations — designed to overthrow pro-Western governments in countries like Saudi Arabia, he said.

His work for the KGB and, later, the CIA bore little resemblance to the picture painted in James Bond movies, Sakharov said.

He carried no weapon, no electronic bugging devices and no cyanide pill. Instead, much of his job — because he speaks fluent Arabic — involved building good relations with Arabs and developing dossiers on Arabs who might make potential KGB operatives. He also was asked to inform on his colleagues.

"In a while working in the Soviet diplomatic corps, it becomes a question of whether you're going to inform on your colleagues or they're going to inform on you. I didn't want any part of it."

After being assigned to Kuwait in 1970, Sakharov decided to defect and began meeting secretly with a CIA agent.

As a double agent, he lived on constant guard, gnawed by the fear of being found out. A slip of the tongue, a change in character might raise suspicions. His marriage was falling apart and he couldn't say anything to his wife because she might inform on him.

"The psychological pressure was unbearable," he said.

If he had been discovered, Sakharov said, "they would have dragged me back to Moscow and probably executed me sometime."

The most painful part of his decision to defect, he said, was knowing he'd never again see his mother, father or 4-year-old daughter.

New Crime Control Secretary Pledges Drug Problem Focus

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin, who promised during his campaign to crack down on drug trafficking and abuse, picked a secretary of crime control and public safety who's no stranger to the problem.

"Drugs (are) probably one of the most important and highly visible criminal problems in the state," said Joseph W. Dean. "The governor recognizes this and so do I. We're going to look very closely at anything we can do that will be effective."

While an assistant U.S. attorney in the mid-1970s, Dean prosecuted Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, a former Air Force master sergeant whose international heroin smuggling operation was based in his hometown of Goldsboro.

Dean's handling of the case, which resulted in lengthy prison terms for Atkinson and several of his lieutenants, won the prosecutor a commendation from the U.S. attorney general.

"North Carolina has always been a major importation point," said Dean in an interview this week. "During the campaign, (Martin) made reference to this state being fifth in drug importation. That's accurate."

With federal, state and local authorities "turning the screws" in southern Florida, more smugglers are considering North Carolina and neighboring states as drop-off points for marijuana and cocaine shipped from South America, Dean said.

Having been in office barely a week, Dean was reluctant to discuss specific plans for combating the drug problem pending further talks with Martin and the results of studies by the Governor's Crime Commission.

"We hope to be developing something that will be cost-effective and useful," said Dean, adding that he wanted to address the "demand side" — use of illegal drugs — as well as the "supply side," or importation and sale.

Among the tactics under consideration are stepped-up use of National Guard helicopters to spot marijuana fields from the air; pooling of resources among state, federal and local agencies to break up smuggling rings; and "systematic" drug education, possibly during school.

Martin has proposed establishing a "state bureau of narcotics" that would provide undercover agents with enough "buy money" to make connections with ringleaders who otherwise seldom are caught.

"Before the state makes a commitment in funds and resources and energy, it ought to be (sure the program is) something that will work, or have a reasonable expectation that it will work," said Dean. "I don't want to just throw money at things."

Another Martin priority is funding of a program to compensate crime victims, which Dean called "long overdue."

Although the Legislature has endorsed the concept of victim compensation, a squabble over how to do it has delayed implementation.

Martin and Dean want to raise the money by adding $3 per case to the court costs levied on convicted lawbreakers. Some officials say that would violate the state Constitution, but Dean disagrees, saying a law enforcement officers' retirement fund was paid for through a similar assessment.

He says court costs are different from fines and forfeitures, which the Constitution earmarks for local school systems.

"The victims of crime should be reimbursed by those who cause the problem," said Dean. It's the only way to get money out of some criminals, who have no property to seize, he said, adding that 40 states use that method to pay victims.

Dean said he was optimistic that the predominantly Democratic General Assembly would not let politics stand in the way of funding victim compensation.

"I assure you that I ... and the governor's legislative (lobbyists) intend to be pushing the program, and we have high hopes for it," said Dean. "I think the time is right. ... I think the method of funding it is good. It's sound, it doesn't come out of the public treasury. The people need it. I don't think it's a Democratic or a Republican (issue)."

Dean, 40, a Hamlet native, attended The Citadel and Wake Forest University's law school. He was in the Army from 1969-71 and spent a year in Vietnam. After serving as assistant U.S. attorney in the eastern district of North Carolina from 1971-77, he began private law practice in Raleigh.

Jail Sentences, Fines In Wilson Sex Crimes

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Two Wilson County men received sentences totaling 90 years and $120,000 in fines after pleading guilty to charges involving young boys in a pornography scheme described by a prosecutor as a "repulsive hobby."

Superior Court Judge Charles B. Winberry Jr. of Rocky Mount said Wednesday the crime was one "that strikes at the heart of our society ... difficult to describe and impossible to explain or justify."

Winberry sentenced James Willard Ward, 59, of Lucama, who had pleaded guilty to five counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor and five counts of committing crimes against nature, to 65 years in prison and fined him $100,000.

Doral Ray Mason, 49, of Lucama, who pleaded guilty to five counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor and six counts of committing crimes against nature, was sentenced to 25 years in prison and fined $20,000 on nine charges. Sentencing was delayed until February on the other two charges.

Ward had served 141 days waiting for trial and Mason had served 107 days.

Winberry said the two men should not be housed with any youthful offender or first-time offender and recommended both receive psychiatric care at Central Prison in Raleigh.

None of the victims testified in the case. Sheriff's deputies showed the judge photographs of men and boys engaging in sexual activity that had been confiscated from the Ward home Aug. 30.

Economists Predict '85 Prime Rate Rise

By TOM MINEHART

AP Business Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — An improving economy with increased credit demands, combined with the Federal deficit, will mean a gradual increase in the prime rate in 1985, two Charlotte economists said.

Most of the nation's major banks cut their prime rates Tuesday from 10.75 percent to 10.5 percent, the lowest level since August 1983. Among them were North Carolina's three largest banks — NCNB National Bank and First Union National Bank, both of Charlotte, and Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. of Winston-Salem.

Banks use the prime rate to set interest rates for their most creditworthy business customers. The lower rate reflects an increased supply of money due to a softening of the economy during the fall, William Newton, assistant vice president and economist at NCNB, said Wednesday.

Another factor, he said, was a decline from 9 percent to 8 percent last year in the discount rate, the interest rate banks pay for funds from the Federal Reserve.

"Most of the decline in short-term interest rates is over," he said, however. "We think short-term rates will hover around their current level through the first quarter ... and look toward the latter part of the year for them to start back up."

"The economy looks better than it did ... so there'll be a stronger credit demand," he said. "And of course the government will still be in there with their deficit."

Malcolm Murray, executive vice president for the loan division at First Union, said the prime could go to 10 percent or even lower, but probably will head up slowly in 1985.

"We're basically expecting a pretty fair economy — not booming — during 1985," he said. "There'll be a pretty good loan volume and demand during the first half. ... We expect no real progress early on the deficit, so there will be continuing government demand for money."

The prime basically reflects rates for short-term loans and is of interest mainly to businessmen, Newton said. But because it also reflects the general availability of money, the decline indicates that rates for long-term loans, such as home mortgages, probably will also fall slightly after a short lag time, he said.

Murray said long-term loan rates "are more geared to inflation expectations than they are to the here-and-now cost of buying money today."

"The market isn't 100 percent convinced that inflation really has been licked and will stay down in the long haul," he said. "The question is whether we're into a non-cyclical downward trend in inflation, and therefore interest rates."

Controlling the deficit and other factors that lead to inflation could convince lenders that inflation is down for good, he said.

Murray said the decline in the prime and other short-term rates is good news for homeowners with adjustable-rate mortgages, however. Many of these ARM rates are based on rates for short-term loans like Treasury bills.

"With the low rate in the marketplace, some people are making ground pretty quick in paying off their balance," he said.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Five of ♦.

If you don't know what suit to shift to after you win a trick, it is often sound technique to hold off taking that trick until you get a signal from partner. But sometimes, like Godot, that signal never arrives. Look what happened to the Venezuelan defenders in their match against Chile at the recent World Team Olympiad in Seattle.

North's response to his partner's no trump opening bid showed slam interest in a minor suit. South's rebid denied a four-card minor, and North blasted into slam without even bothering to check whether his side had enough aces for the purpose.

West led a spade, and you could not tell from declarer's demeanor that there was anything amiss with his contract. Declarer won the king in dummy and guessed correctly to lead a diamond to the queen. When that won, he continued with a diamond to the jack and king. Now East was in a quandary. He was not sure what to return if he won the ace of diamonds, so he decided to wait one more round before winning the ace to give his partner the opportunity to signal a shift. When we last heard, he was still waiting!

With two diamond tricks in the bank, declarer turned his attention to clubs. A horror-struck East watched his partner win the ace of clubs, only to revert to spades. East's ace of diamonds withered on the vine as declarer quickly wrapped up 12 tricks—four spades, four hearts and two tricks in each minor suit.

Making a slam off two aces was nothing unusual in the World Team Olympiad. Perhaps somewhat rarer was the case of the Swedish declarer who got to a small slam off the ace-king of trumps. The opening leader held both those cards, but elected to lead a plain suit in the hope of a larger set. Unfortunately, her partner revoked during the play, and the small slam made!

Military Board Studies Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army Clothing and Equipment Board is reconsidering a longstanding military policy that has left generations of soldiers standing wet in the rain.

The policy says an Army man, in uniform, never, but never, carries an umbrella, furred or unfurred, rain or shine.

The board is to vote later this month on an umbrella recommendation, which would then be passed up to Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., the Army's chief of staff.

The board considered the same question last year and rejected a change in policy.

It is a sensitive issue, involving questions of image and professionalism. Officers almost uniformly refuse to discuss the matter unless guaranteed anonymity.

The Air Force has allowed the use of umbrellas since 1979, perhaps because the Air Force, the youngest military branch, doesn't have the long tradition of the other services.

Last year, when the Permanent Marine Corps Uniform Board recommended allowing the use of umbrellas, the idea was vetoed by Gen. Paul X. Kelley.

Third-hand accounts suggest the general took a hard-nosed Marine approach along the lines of, "We're not going to carry an umbrella in combat, so we don't need them."

"A lot of the senior officers don't like the idea because they think it's too wimpy," says an Army officer who would comment only on the condition that he not be identified.

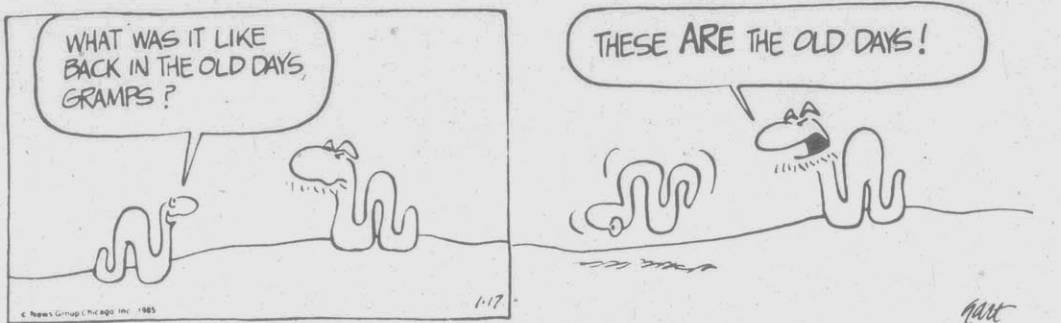

An Air Force officer who likewise requested anonymity extended his sympathy, recalling the furor that accompanied his service's decision.

"I can't think of an event that created more turbulence," the officer said. "It took forever to get this monumental uniform decision through."

Six Die As Bushfires Scar South Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Thousands of firefighters battling bushfires over a huge area of southern Australia for a fourth day finally appeared to be winning, officials said today.

But the death toll rose to six when a firefighter who had been badly burned after being caught by flames earlier in the week died of his injuries, authorities said.

The fires that swept across large areas of New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia injured more than 100 people, destroyed or damaged hundreds of homes and farms and killed about 30,000 horses, cows, sheep and other livestock.

An unknown number of wild animals also perished in the blazes that, fanned by 60 mph winds, roared across the countryside dried by 100 degree temperatures.

At least one major fire continued to rage out of control in the state of Victoria and new outbreaks were reported for the first time in the state of Western Australia. Fires were also spreading north across the wide outback plains of central New South Wales.

But most of the fires no longer threatened populated areas and more than 300 blazes had been extinguished, officials said. Cooler temperatures were helping to control the fires, they said.

Firefighting authorities warned that the situation could change at any time and residents should remain constantly alert for new fires and evacuation orders.

Several houses in a suburb of the capital city, Canberra, in New South Wales, were reported to have caught fire today when a bushfire skirted the area and firefighters were called out to prevent the flames from advancing.

About 70 patients had to be evacuated by stretcher from a hospital at Kalamunda near Perth on the west coast when a fire approached. No one was hurt and firefighters managed to contain the fire.

Police in Western Australia said they suspected a rash of fires that hit the Perth area were started by vandals and an investigation had been launched.

'Living Wills' Can Remove Anxieties

By JAMES T. CHEATHAM

Living wills serve many functions. They are an effort to retain control over what happens at the end of one's life even when one is no longer competent. To many people, the fear of a lingering death is worse than the fear of dying, and living wills permit the choice to be made when there is no doubt the individual is competent.

Living wills remove the burden of decision-making when the patient may not have the strength to consider alternate forms of care; they also help remove anxiety and guilt experienced by both the patient's family and the attending physician in substituting their opinion for that of the patient.

Living wills enable a person to reflect and consider, before he becomes terminally ill, his ability to endure pain and suffering, the loss of control of bodily functions, and the effect of exhaustion of his financial resources on his survivors.

State Interest

No state interest is compelling enough to override a competent patient's refusal of life-saving medical treatment through the execution of a "living will." There is no need for the courts to undertake the duty of balancing interests in cases where the patient is competent; however, where patients are incompetent and thus unable to make a "living will," the state may elect to play a role in preserving life by attempting to guard against the danger of mistaken diagnosis and/or ill-considered decisions.

This article attempts only to define and explain the use of a "living will" in North Carolina in order that the practicing attorney may aid a person who desires to make these life and death decisions while he or she is still able to do so.

Perhaps Justice Brandeis best summarized (unintentionally) the constitutional support for the right to a natural death in a 1928 case: "The makers of our Constitution ... sought to protect Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred as against the Government, the right to be let alone — the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."

The enactment of living will legislation should assist patients, physicians and families in weighing considerations such as the possibility of the patient's return to a cognitive and sapient life versus continuance of merely a biological vegetative existence; the possibility the patient will benefit from future treatments; the quality of life to which the patient may expect to return if treatment is continued; and possible adverse effects on the patient's family if treatment continues.

North Carolina's Natural Death Act

Since 1976, 21 state legislatures have passed Natural Death Acts. North Carolina has recognized, since 1977, an individual's right to a natural death. G.S. 90-320(a) provides: "The General Assembly recognizes as a matter of public policy that an individual's rights include the right to a peaceful and natural death and that a patient or his representative has the fundamental right to control the decisions relating to the rendering of his own medical care, including the decision to have extraordinary means withheld or withdrawn in instances of a terminal condition...."

If an individual has declared, in accordance with the procedure established by the N.C. statute, his desire that his life not be prolonged by extraordinary means, and if it is determined by the attending physician that his condition is terminal and incurable and such condition is confirmed by another physician, then extraordinary means may be withheld or discontinued.

Extraordinary means is defined by G.S. 90-321 as any medical procedure or intervention which, in the judgment of the attending physician, would serve only to postpone artificially the moment of death by sustaining restoring or supplanting a vital function.

Revocation

Our legislature has addressed the method of revocation of a "living will" in G.S. 90-321(e): "The above declaration may be revoked by the declarant, in any manner in which he is able to communicate his intent to revoke, without regard to his mental or physical condition. Such revocation shall become effective only upon the communication to the attending physician by the declarant or by an individual acting on behalf of the declarant...."

A potential problem is created by the last sentence in the above statute. What is meant by the wording "or by an individual acting on behalf of the declarant"? It is suggested that this leaves for speculation too many unanswered possibilities, and an amendment simply striking this portion should be considered.

Caution should be exercised in making too many copies of a living will, since the absence of a copy may result in a resumption of revocation. The policy of revocation in the law of living wills is much stronger than in traditional wills, and rightfully so.

The question of whether the making of a "living will" constitutes suicide is addressed in G.S. 90-321(f): "The execution and consummation of declarations made in accordance with subsection (c) shall not constitute suicide for any purpose...."

The question of possible coercion by an insurer in signing a "living will" is addressed in G.S. 90-321(g): "No person shall be required to sign a declaration in accordance with subsection (c) as a condition for becoming insured under any insurance contract or for receiving any medical treatment...."

The author is a Greenville attorney who wrote this article for publication in the North Carolina Bar Association's "Bar Notes." He is vice chairman of the NCBA's Health Law Section.

Immunity

The question of possible civil or criminal consequences for those who act in accordance with the statutes in recognizing a "living will" is addressed in G.S. 90-321(h): "The withholding or discontinuance of extraordinary means in accordance with this section shall not be considered the cause of death for any civil or criminal purposes nor shall it be considered unprofessional conduct. Any person, institution or facility against whom criminal or civil liability is asserted because of conduct in compliance with this section may interpose this section as a defense."

Unfortunately, the immunity provision leaves some gray areas. It is questionable whether immunity would be available if the "living will" is not properly executed. Other State acts provide that the physician has the burden of determining that a "living will" has been lawfully executed before carrying it out. However, some jurisdictions provide for a presumption that the physician is acting in good faith when carrying out the wishes in the "living will." North Carolina's act is silent on the matter.

Immunity is probably not available in the situation in which a physician ignores a declaration ("living will") and does treat the patient. Perhaps the doctor should be responsible for this unauthorized treatment.

Eligibility

The North Carolina statute establishes no criteria for a qualifying patient beyond "a person." California exempts children and pregnant women from the Act, and imposes special requirements on nursing home residents. As a practical matter, the former two classes will rarely attempt to exercise the right to a natural death under the N.C. statute. The latter category, however, deserves special attention.

The California legislature recognized that "some patients in skilled nursing facilities may be so insulated from a voluntary decision making role by virtue of the custodial nature of their care, as to require special assurance that they are capable of willfully and voluntarily executing a directive." This is essentially a consent problem which, in the absence of amending legislation, will have to be screened by the physician.

Storage

Although many proposals provide for a depository or other filing system for the instrument, the N.C. Act has no such provision. Nevada, by contrast, provides that the will is to be kept among the medical records of the patient; this would seem to be a natural depository, although some have suggested a wallet card to give earlier notice of the patient's intent.

The problem is not one of speed but of notice. It is not necessary that emergency room attendants know of the existence of the living will, but if the will is not on the patient's person or among his records, relatives may hesitate to bring the will to the physician's attention, and the patient's wishes will go unheeded. One practitioner has suggested, in addition to having the attorney retain a copy, also sending a copy to the declarant's family physician and telling him where you will keep the original. A lock box, for obvious reasons, is not recommended for storage of a "living will."

Requirements for Proper Execution

The North Carolina statutory requirements for proper execution of a "living will" are as follows: The declarant must have executed an instrument which states that it is his desire that no extraordinary means be used to prolong his life if his condition is determined to be terminal and incurable, and which states that the declarant is aware that the instrument authorizes a physician to withhold or discontinue the extraordinary means. The statement must be signed in the presence of two witnesses who state that they:

1. Are not related within the third degree to the declarant or the declarant's spouse (first degree includes parents or children; second degree includes grandparents, grandchildren, brothers or sisters; third degree includes aunts, uncles, nephews, nieces, great-grandparents);
2. Would not be entitled to any portion of the declarant's estate under his will or under the Intestate Succession Act; (under the 1981 Amendment — the witnesses must not know or have reasonable expectation to know that they would be entitled to any portion of the declarant's estate under his will or under the Intestate Succession Act.)
3. Are not the attending physician or an employee of the attending physician or of the health facility in which the declarant is a patient or of a nursing home in which the declarant resides;
4. Do not have any claim against any portion of the declarant's estate; and
5. Believe the declarant is of sound mind at the time the Declaration is made. (1981 Amendment added this.)

In addition, the statement must be proved before a clerk or assistant clerk of Superior Court or a notary public.

The 1981 Amendment contains a revised declaration form which reflects the changes made in G.S. 90-321 and provides an expanded role for the clerk or notary to insure that the statutory requirements have been satisfied. The form used which is suggested for your consideration, follows the statute but eliminates any reference to the Clerk of Superior Court, since any notary may perform the same function.

Finally, in an encouraging development, the N.C. Bar Association and the N.C. Medical Association have cooperated in both passage of the "Natural Death" legislation and in making the public aware of the Act. The latter has even recently printed a brochure on the subject which is being distributed in doctor's offices across the state. It behooves all of us in the bar to at least make our clients aware of this choice they have to make a living will. The first step in achieving this is to make our own declaration.

Keys Town Still Laid-Back Village

LAYTON, Fla. (AP) — Back in 1963, when Del Layton agreed to incorporate the land he owned here to create the third city in the Florida Keys, he recalls he did so with one proviso: "I wanted no city taxes and no speed traps."

More than two decades have passed and much about this city remains unchanged. There are still no local taxes, the job of Layton's one-man police department has been vacant for some time and Layton, now 77, remains the city's first and only mayor.

There are few among the estimated 350 residents who would dispute this 80-acre community is "Layton's town" and, over the years, there has been little effort to change that.

That's easily explained. People who come here to live are usually longtime friends, fishing buddies or those whom Layton approves. There are other similarities that bind the community together. Most are members of the Layton Community Baptist Church and enjoy the laid-back atmosphere the city offers.

Layton and his wife, Mary, came here from Miami in 1947 and set up "Layton's Long Key Fishing Camp," using surplus Army buildings he shipped from Camp Blanding in North Florida.

There were no permanent residents living on the island at the time. Layton had sold his Miami grocery business and property he owned there to invest in what he calls his dream — a piece of Long Key covered with red mangroves, sea grapes and coconut palms.

There's little commercial activity here — a bait and tackle shop, a motel, a restaurant, a coffee shop, a convenience store, two service stations and one marina. Most were built by the McAlester, Okla., native, who also established the city's post office in 1962 and was its first postmaster.
