USDA Says Leaf Imports Declining

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco imports, which U.S. growers contend are threatening their livelihood, actually declined by 23 percent during the first 11 months of last year, the Agriculture Department says.

While imports of unmanufactured tobacco totaled $54 million during November, about the same as levels of a year ago, the cumulative figure for the year was $523 million, down by nearly one-fourth from 1983, the department said in a report issued Thursday.

Oriental tobacco was the largest import category, at 72,000 tons for the 11-month period out of a total import figure of nearly 177,000 tons.

Meanwhile, U.S. tobacco exports were strong in November, growing 11 percent over year-earlier figures to 44,000 tons valued at $267 million. That placed the cumulative 1984 export total at $1.3 billion, about the same as for 1983.

That figure did not include exports of cigarettes, which increased 15 percent in November to $120 million, pushing the cumulative 11-month total to just over $1 billion — a 1 percent gain over a year earlier.

Earlier this month, the U.S. International Trade Commission heard testimony from tobacco-state members of Congress that tobacco imports are driving American leaf farmers out of business.

They asked the ITC to impose import quotas or tariffs on the foreign crop, a move opponents said would trigger trade retaliation and would be unwarranted because any problem is due to unJuly high U.S. tobacco price supports.

The commission is studying the testimony and is due to make a recommendation to President Reagan by Feb. 11. The ITC rejected a similar request from the tobacco industry in 1981.

Of U.S. exports, the largest category was flue-cured tobacco. That accounted for 63 percent of the cumulative 1983 export figure and showed a 10 percent increase in volume over 1983. Burley tobacco made up about 15 percent of the total, a decline of 22 percent from the previous year.

The leading markets for U.S. leaf were Japan, West Germany and Spain.

Cigarette exports for the January-November period were $2.1 billion pieces worth $1.03 billion, down 6 percent in volume but up 1 percent in value from 1983. Leading markets were Belgium, Luxembourg, Hong Kong, Saudi Arabia and Japan.

Leaf Compromise Accepted By USDA

RALEIGH (AP) — An aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says a proposed compromise between cigarette manufacturers and tobacco farmers that's been approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is "the best thing that's come down the pike."

The proposal approved by the USDA Thursday would have cigarette manufacturers buy more than 800 million pounds of surplus flue-cured tobacco in exchange for a 25-cent cut in 1985 price supports.

The nation's cigarette manufacturers, who have been lobbied for weeks by tobacco officials, have not yet agreed to the deal.

"It hasn't been consummated," George S. Dunlop, Helms' chief agricultural aide, said Thursday. "It hasn't been signed off on by any of the companies."

But he said that "we're hopeful" about the plan.

Under the proposal, the manufacturers would sign contracts to buy at discount prices — over a five-year period — all the 812 million pounds of surplus leaf held under government loan by the Flue-Cured

Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

The federal Commodity Credit Corp. would lose hundreds of millions of dollars on the tobacco.

In exchange, the USDA would take administrative action to reduce the average price support for the 1985 crop from last year's $1.699 to an effective level of $1.45 a pound.

To achieve the price support cut, the USDA would first lower the average price support by nearly 5 cents — to $1.65 a pound — by using its existing authority to reduce price supports on certain grades.

A Helms news release said the plan would not require legislative action by Congress because the USDA could approve the price-support reduction administratively.

The plan is likely to come under heavy criticism from anti-tobacco congressmen since sale of the discounted tobacco would cost taxpayers millions of dollars in losses absorbed by the CCC, which had loaned Stabilization the funds to acquire its surplus stocks.

The USDA has estimated that the earlier discount program would result in a $450 million loss to CCC because Stabilization would be selling the tobacco at prices too low to recoup its expenses and to repay the

Morning Fog Covers Pitt

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A thick blanket of fog enveloped Pitt County this morning, but no major accidents were reported by the Highway Patrol and local school buses were running on schedule.

The fog hung over the area throughout the morning, causing visibility to be lowered.

"There have been a few minor fender benders which are typical of a foggy day," said Sgt. Glenn Swanson of the N.C. Highway Patrol, "but it has been remarkably quiet."

Swanson said there was a minor school bus accident in the driveway of Ayden-Grifton High School, but there were no collisions "of any consequence."

The Pitt County school buses were running on schedule this morning despite the foggy conditions. Greenville city school buses encountered no problems in getting the students to school in the fog.

Thursday's low temperature was 33 degrees and the high temperature recorded was 40 degrees, according to figures provided by the Greenville Utilities Water Plant. The level of the Tar River was recorded at 4.4 feet Thursday.

Jaycees Cite Hill, Daughtridge

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Douglas P. Hill received the Distinguished Service Award and Bill Daughtridge of Rocky Mount was named Boss of the Year at the Greenville Jaycees annual distinguished service award and bosses night dinner Thursday.

Hill, vice president of Tadlock Insurance Agency, won the award for his dedication to "serving his family, profession and community," Gus Tulloss, former president of the N.C. Jaycees, who made the presentation, said.

A Winston-Salem native and graduate of Greenville's Rose High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Hill is a member of the Greenville Jaycees, has served as a director and vice president, and "has chaired many successful projects ... including the haunted house, wood cutting for the elderly, many ways and means projects, the restoration of the Brickell Cannon to the Town Common, and has been extremely instrumental in making many Fourth of July celebrations successful," Tulloss said.

Jaycee of the Year in 1981, Hill is past president of the Pitt County Underwriters Association, president of the Independent Insurance Agents of Pitt County, has earned the designation as certified insurance counselor, has served on the Greenville Human Relations Council and has served on the board of directors of Volunteer Greenville.

Hill, finance chairman for the Martin for Governor campaign in Pitt County, is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, where he is a Sunday school teacher. He is married and has two children.

In receiving the award, Hill said, "I've always been in awe of the people who stand up here" and receive the Distinguished Service Award. "It means a great deal to me"

In The Area

Eight Arrested

Greenville police arrested eight people on drug law violation charges Thursday in connection with an undercover operation that began "a couple of months ago" according to Chief Ted Holmes.

Those arrested and the charges include: Willie James Williams of 1105 Melody Lane, possession and sale of cocaine; Joyce Barnhill, 503 W. Third St., possession and sale of marijuana; James Corbett, 415 Cadillac St., two counts each of possession and sale of marijuana; Wilbert Ellis, who is in Pitt County Jail on other charges, two counts each of possession and sale of cocaine; Jessie C. Daniels, in prison on other charges, possession and sale of cocaine; Jerry Anthony Moye, 300 Cadillac St., possession and sale of marijuana; Troy McCoy Clemons, 1105 Pitt St., two counts of possession and sale of marijuana; and Kenneth Wayne Caulder of B-12 Glendale Court, four counts of possession with intent to sell marijuana.

Holmes said officers have warrants for two other people in connection with the investigation, but have been unable to serve the documents.

Larceny Charges

Greenville police have arrested Richard Jerome Washington, 17, of Fayetteville, and Frank Ward Jr., 17, of 717 W. Fourth St. in connection with thefts reported to the department.

Officer D.R. Best said Washington was charged with larceny of a radio-cassette player from 1119 Chestnut St. in an incident reported at 3:00 p.m. Wednesday.

Sgt. Doug Jackson said Ward was charged with larceny, entering and larceny in connection with the theft of a car from Truitt County on Jan. 17.

Property Stolen

Officer B. M. Highland said police are continuing their investigation of a theft reported to the department about 12:07 a.m. today.

Highland said a radio cassette player, an amplifier, two speakers and two cassette tapes were reported taken from a car parked near the intersection of Blvd and Cotanche streets.

Officer K.R. Evans said police are also continuing to investigate a larceny reported to the department at 12:17 p.m. Thursday.

Evans said that incident involved the theft of a video cassette recorder from 105 Tredegar.

Annoying Calls

Carolina Telephone, reporting an increasing number of customers receiving annoying phone calls, reminded customers that they can always hang up the receiver if a caller doesn't respond or responds in an unsatisfactory way.

Dick Flye, district commercial manager, said special equipment is being used to track down annoyance callers. But he also pointed out that the customer has control of the phone.

"If a caller remains silent after you answer, hang up the telephone," he added. "Some callers like to listen to your reaction when they remain silent. They do not enjoy listening to a dead line."

"When asked, 'Who is this,' don't answer, but ask, 'What number did you dial?' or 'With whom would you like to speak,'" Flye said.

He urged customers to instruct children, babysitters and anyone else in the home not to talk to anyone

REWARD OFFERED — Enforcement Officer Kay Dunn and Endangered Species Project Leader Melinda Welton look over the body of a bald eagle found shot to death north of Greenville on New Year's Day. Wildlife officials are offering a $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who shot the protected bird.

State Is Offering $2,500 Reward In Death Of Eagle

Wildlife officials are offering a $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who shot and killed a bald eagle whose body was found New Year's Day in a field five miles northwest of Greenville, near the All-Pines Hunt Club.

Melinda Welton, endangered species project leader with the state's Division of Wildlife Management, said persons having information about the shooting should call the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission at 1-800-662-7137, or the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at 755-4786 in Raleigh.

Ms. Welton emphasized that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service "will pay for any kind of leads" connected with the eagle shooting.

Kay Dunn, a Wildlife Resources Commission enforcement officer, said the bald eagle was seen in the area two weeks before its body was found and said the eagle "looked like it had been killed about Christmas" with a rifle.

Ms. Melton, pointing out that the bald eagle is on the endangered species list, and is "protected by more laws than any other wildlife," said the bird killed in Pitt County appeared to be about 2 years old.

they do not positively recognize. "An innocent remark like 'Daddy's out of town' would be helpful to a burglar," he said.

Workshop Set

"Legal Issues Concerning Children" will be the topic of a workshop to be presented by Al Singer from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Singer will present information helpful to anyone who provides professional services to children, particularly those in mental health, social services, public schools, and juvenile and adult court services. For more information, call Cheryl Barnes, 355-5764, by Jan. 17.

Moose Dance

The Greenville Moose Lodge No. 885 will present Larry Anderson and his band Mash for a dance Saturday from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Dress is casual. For more information, call Bob Drew at 752-5415.

Foundation Meet

The Pamlico Tar River Foundation will hold its winter meeting Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in Washington. The meeting will begin with a Dutch treat supper at the Rendezvous Restaurant on U.S. 264.

Manley Fuller of the National Wildlife Federation's Southeastern Natural Resources Center in Raleigh will speak on management problems of North Carolina's pocosin wetlands. In addition, persons interested in a field trip to hike among natural and altered pocosins at Pungo Lake National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde and Tyrrell Counties should meet at the west end of Stewart Parkway in Washington by 8 a.m. on Feb. 9.

Commissioners Meet

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda will be the consideration of bids for a new animal shelter and for rescue squad radio equipment, various reports and other business.

Chapter To Meet

The Eva J. Lewis Alumni Chapter of Elizabeth City State University will meet Sunday at 4 p.m. at the home of Virginia G. Hagans, 512 Greenfield Blvd.

Officer Speaks

Sgt. Doug Jackson of the Greenville Police Department spoke to 53 members and guests at the January meeting of the Greenville chapter of AARP.

Jackson answered questions on the operation of the CrimeStoppers program — in particular the payment of rewards to persons reporting crimes. He said that two-thirds of the persons reporting crimes refused the monetary rewards.

The next AARP meeting is scheduled for Feb. 11 at 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church.

Graduate Council

The Greenville Graduate Panhellenic Council will meet Monday at 6:15 p.m. at the home of Ray and Jennifer Congelton.

Board Appointment

Dr. Sam N. Pennington, a professor of biochemistry at East Carolina University, was named by outgoing Gov. Jim Hunt recently to serve as a member of the North Carolina Alcoholism Research Authority.

The authority is a nine-member board appointed by the governor. The board's objective is supporting research on the causes of alcoholism.

ECU Concepts

Dr. Ennis Chestang, an East Carolina University geography professor and chairman of the department of geography and planning, will be the guest on "ECU Concepts" Sunday at 8:00 a.m. on radio station WOOW.

Chestang will discuss a recent geography awareness test that was given to students enrolled in introductory geography classes at eight North Carolina universities. It was reported that 95 percent of the students taking the test failed.

"ECU Concepts" is a 15-minute program hosted by James Rees of the department of theatre arts.

New Assistant Dean

Dr. Ennis L. Chestang, a member of the faculty of East Carolina University since 1965 and chairman of the department of geography and planning for the past 10 years, has been named assistant dean of the ECU College of Arts and Sciences and coordinator of international programs.

Chestang will coordinate and secure grants and other support for the university's interdisciplinary programs in international studies, according to Dr. Eugene E. Ryan, dean of arts and sciences.

Chestang currently is president of the N.C. Geographical Society, a position to which he has been elected twice. In addition to state and national professional societies, he is a member of ECU's Thomas W. Rivers Foreign Exchange Scholarship Committee and a director of Evergreen of Greenville.

Chestang has resigned as departmental chairman to accept the new assignment, Ryan said. Dr. Wes Hankins of the geography faculty will serve as acting chairman while a search is conducted for a permanent department head.

A 1968 graduate of East Carolina University, Ms. Whitehurst received her masters degree in special education in 1971, and certification in learning disabilities in 1975.

She has taught exceptional children for 17 years at Pactolus School. She also serves as the contact person and the coordinator of testing.

Request Approved

Police Lt. D.R. Bullock has announced the approval of a request by St. Paul Free Will Baptist Church to solicit funds beginning Monday and continuing through April 21 for its church building fund.

Mediation Meet

A public information meeting on Mediation Dispute Resolution Centers will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Willis Building, corner of First and Reade streets.

Sponsored by Phoenix and the Criminal Justice Committee of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, the discussion will be led by Lisa Menefee, an attorney who is director of the Winston-Salem Neighborhood Justice Center and former coordinator of the Family Support Court Observer Program for the N.C. Center for Laws Affecting Women.

Beginning about 3:30 p.m., also at the Willis Building, Ms. Menefee will conduct a one-hour orientation for volunteers serving as court observers of family support cases.

DR. ENNIS L. CHESTANG

Cheerleaders Ranked

The East Carolina University varsity cheerleaders have been ranked 22nd in the nation by the National Cheerleaders Association in a national competition of collegiate cheerleading squads.

Each year the NCA hosts a contest in which 20 college cheerleading squads are chosen to compete in all aspects of cheerleading including dance, pyramids, partner stunts, tumbling and cheer technique. Out of the 90 squads that entered initial activities, ECU's cheerleaders were chosen as second alternate for the competition.

Employees Use 'Quiet Hour' As Time To Get Work Done

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — The telephone keeps ringing; other workers keep asking questions; the boss schedules another meeting.

It's hard to work or think efficiently surrounded by such normal but distracting interruptions, so a "quiet hour" has been set aside for accounting workers at Contel Service Corp., Western region headquarters for Continental Telephone Co.

They reserve 8 to 9 a.m. to work on long-term projects, research, reports or other creative work that requires concentration.

The "quiet hour," officially called "Achieving Maximum Potential," was started this fall because the accounting department staff works in a large open area, making it hard to sneak into a quiet corner to concentrate.

"It's like an invisible force field we can create to allow us one hour of quiet time," said Ted Carrier, Contel's staff manager for general accounting.

"The managers can close their doors to get a quiet moment," added Carrier, chief architect of the project. "The rest of us don't have offices and don't have doors we can close."

The Bakersfield office is Contel's headquarters for 10 Western states, and employees throughout the region are accepting the idea that they can't telephone the accounting department between 8 and 9 a.m., Carrier said.

"During AMP hour, employees aren't involved in meetings, errands, running printers or other distracting activity," Carrier said. "So far, we're in unanimous agreement that the program has been extremely successful."

"Most people outside the department run hot or cold on AMP hour," he added. "Some felt it was an inconvenience, but most thought it was very favorable."

He added that the staff is "flexible. If there's an emergency during that hour, we will respond."

Donna Miller, who processes the regional payroll, said she had received just one emergency call between 8 and 9 a.m. during the first month.

"We've just informed personnel that this hour is not a time to contact us," she said. "And most people think this is a good idea and wish they could have a similar program."

Dan Speidel, a general accounting supervisor, said he had never had time "to get the important things done" before the advent of AMP. "I used to spend my time doing urgent things instead of important things."

Patty Ross, a general accounting supervisor, said workers made a game of seeing "how much we can get done during the hour. I had one project on the back burner for several months, and I was able to complete it in seven AMP hours."

And Carrier says he's more willing to delegate more projects to the staff because "I know they have AMP hours to get the work done."

Group Formed To Help Track Missing Children

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year-old schoolgirl's essay about her greatest desires and fears prompted her mother to start an organization that could help track missing children.

"One of her fears was she would be kidnapped and would never see her mommy again," said Cindy Highfill. "That put a real fear in me."

The Merced woman's answer was to found Children of America. In addition to running public education sessions, volunteers take children's fingerprints and assemble files listing their physical characteristics, medical histories and other background.

"What we want to do is teach kids and parents to be aware of the problems that exist and what they can do," Ms. Highfill said. "People are very uneducated about the seriousness of this. They need to be educated."

Statistics show that about 2 million children are reported missing in the United States each year. More than 90 percent are runaways, about 100,000 involve parental abductions and another 50,000 are criminal kidnappings.

About 90 percent of the missing youngsters are eventually found, but the rest are never located.

"I find that incredible," exclaimed Ms. Highfill.

The group registered 520 children at its first sign-up session. If a registered child is reported missing, the organization will release information to police, school districts, and television and radio stations statewide.

Ms. Highfill was surprised that there was no group in this Central California area already doing such work because of two major kidnappings here in the past. "When you consider two of the most infamous crimes in the history of this area were the kidnapping of Steven Stayner and the kidnapping of an entire busload of children from Chowchilla, it is hard to believe there wasn't already something of this sort in Merced," she said.

Twenty-six schoolchildren from Chowchilla were kidnapped July 15, 1976, and kept in a moving van buried underground until they freed themselves more than a day later. Stayner was kidnapped from Merced in 1972 at the age of 7 and was found more than seven years later.

Speculating why such a program had not been pushed before, Ms. Highfill said, "The main reason is people are scared, and they don't want to listen. Child abduction is a taboo they don't want to think about. People always think it could never happen to them."

The background information collected by Children of America is kept confidential and can be released only with written permission.

"All our files are private, and we keep them here in the office locked up," Ms. Highfill said. "A lot of people are worried if they register their children, anyone who wants to get their hands on the information can do so, and that isn't correct."

New Bern Symposium Set For March

ECU News Bureau
NEW BERN — The influence of 18th century English furniture, ceramics and portraiture upon colonial American decorative arts will be discussed by experts at the 17th annual Tryon Palace Symposium March 24-26.

The symposium, co-sponsored by East Carolina University's Division of Continuing Education, is designed for persons with a personal or professional interest in the decorative arts and lifestyles of the colonial era. Sessions will be held at the Tryon Palace Complex, a group of buildings clustered around the restored home of North Carolina's royal governors.

Topics of symposium sessions and speakers are:

"18th Century English Furniture: Its Influence on American Furniture," Wendell Garrett, editor of the magazine "Antiques," New York; "Tastemakers Surrounding Governor Tryon," Dr. William S. Price, director of the N.C. Division of Archives and History, Raleigh; "English and French Influence on Late 18th and Early 19th Century American Furniture," Edgar deN. Mayhew, director of the Lyman Allyn Museum, New London, Conn.;

"Late 18th Century English and American Ceramics," Philip Curtis, curator of ceramics at Winterthur Museum, Winterthur, Del.; "The Place of the Portrait in the English and American Interior," William Chiego, of the N.C. Museum of Art, Raleigh; and "Issues in Authenticity," Herbert Schiffer, Exton, Pa., antiques dealer.

In addition to the illustrated lectures, the symposium features formal and informal meals, social gatherings and tours of Tryon Palace and its gardens, other restored and authentically-furnished buildings in the palace complex and private homes in New Bern.

Further information is available from "Tryon Palace Symposium," Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, 757-6143.

Cold Or Hot, Oysters Are A Winter Treat

By TOM HOGGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Someone once said, "He was a bold man who first ate an oyster." I can believe it, since it took me 40 years to work up the nerve to consume my first one. But I have been enjoying them ever since.

Up through April, oysters will be available across the land. From the good Lynnhavens off the coast of Virginia, to the tiny Olympias of the Pacific Northwest, American waters abound with these bivalves. But few oysters capture the ocean flavor and buttery quality as do the mollusks from Delaware that are said to have delighted William Penn.

Oysters on the half shell are still the top attraction, but some like them hot, and this is the reason for oyster roasts. Many residents of the suburbs or countryside feature them at weekend cookouts.

A friend of mine hosts such a roast every January, and people come from miles away to partake of the feast. While guests quaff cold beer or steaming coffee, the host and a couple of volunteers poke at the oysters lined up on a steel plate over a log fire. As the oysters pop open, they are removed from the shells and dunked in a skillet of melted butter.

Within handy reach are pots of pickled cabbage and bowls of hot roasted chestnuts.

If you are going to dunk oysters in butter, you'd better equip yourself with a large, absorbent glove and a big napkin to wipe off your chin at intervals.

For those who find such a roast too rugged in winter, oyster stew makes a good substitute. The bivalves, floating in a rich mixture of hot cream and butter, are delicious with plenty of buttered toast.

Since an oyster roast is not available to most city dwellers, here is a recipe for a stew.

- 1½ pints shelled oysters, with liquor
- 1½ pints light cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- 1 pinch paprika
- 1 pinch cayenne
- 4 tablespoons soft butter
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley

In double boiler over boiling water, place oysters, their liquor, cream, salt, pepper, paprika and cayenne. Cook until oysters float and cream is almost boiling. Warm four bowls in hot water. Add one tablespoon butter to each bowl. When oyster stew is ready, ladle it into bowls and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Good with hot French bread and chilled white wine. Serves 4.

Dear Abby

Mumbling Husband Can Learn How To Speak

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 62 years to a man who has the habit of mumbling. No one can understand him because he won't speak up. And to make matters worse, he has the habit of putting his hand over his mouth when he talks.

Everytime he says something, I ask him to repeat it. It really is nerve-racking.

I have asked him in a nice way to please keep his hands away from his mouth when he talks and to speak up, but it's like talking to a wall.

Is there a solution? Or is it true that you can't teach an old horse new tricks?

MUMBLER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: When your mumbler says something you aren't able to understand, don't ask him to repeat it, just ignore him. If it's important (to him), he'll repeat it until he gets his message across.

You can teach an old horse new tricks if it's in the best interest of the old horse to learn.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend of almost 15 years was married for the third time about a year ago.

Two months ago, she asked me if I was interested in "swapping" husbands. I immediately said "No" because: (1) I think it's immoral; (2) I value my marriage; (3) I do not want to have sex with another man ... especially with my best friend's husband. (She said it was her husband's idea.)

Since then, my best friend has been cool to me, but she's been coming on to my husband ... flirting, pressing against him, etc. Also, her husband has been coming on to me. He told me he's been dreaming about me, and ever since he heard I refused to go to bed with him, it makes him want me all the more!

I asked my husband what he thought about the swapping idea just to see what he'd say, and he said, "I'll think about it." I was angry because he didn't say no right off the bat like I did.

I still value my friendship with my best friend, and I feel sorry for her because she married that jerk.

How can we stay friends with this couple without agreeing to swap, which I think is what everybody wants, except me?

NO NAMES,
SMALL TOWN

DEAR NO NAMES: You can't. And the sooner you say goodbye to your best friend and the jerk she married, the healthier your marriage will be.

DEAR ABBY: This is a suggestion for "Hurt Grandmother," whose grandchildren (living in a distant state) never found the time to write thank-you notes for her lovely gifts and generous checks:

On the next gift-giving occasion, send a generous check—but "forget" to sign it.

I guarantee that within three days you will receive some kind of written message plus the check for your signature.

BARBARA

DEAR BARBARA: Beautiful. But most grandmothers are such pigeons, they would probably sign the check and promptly send it back.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

DAR Members Hear Speaker

Anthony D. Holland, retired Air Force colonel and former member of the Central Intelligence Agency, was guest speaker at the Saturday meeting of the Major Benjamin May Chapter, DAR.

His program topic was "Our Duty to Honor Our Country." He read from an address by Frank Barnette to the Association of Former Agents meeting in Washington.

Jerry Bailey, president of the Dr. Robert Williams Chapter of the CAR, gave a yearly report of the chapter's activities. Allison Baker and Kelly Heizer were elected to state offices, attendance at the organizational meeting of the Francis Nash Chapter in Rocky Mount and installation of officers. Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. also addressed the group and a tree was planted on the Town Commons.

Sue Butler, Jinette Hathaway and Mary Kallam Dark were named new members.

Delegates to the Continental Congress in April are Mrs. R.T. Williams and Mrs. Russell Britt. Alternates are Mrs. Albert Lewis and Mrs. Jack Riley. Mrs. Anthony Holland, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Britt were named delegates to the state conference in March.

Mrs. E.P. Bass, chaplain, gave the devotional.

Meeting hostesses were Mrs. Williams, Mary Henry, Roxie Smith Davis and Sarah Tucker Dunn.

Job Protection For Jurors Considered

The Best Medicine

Katie Taylor, of Bethel, recently observed her 100th birthday and the occasion was marked with a story and photo of the young woman. "Young"? Yes. Her front-paged photo was the very antithesis of all that people commonly associate with the toll exacted by a century of living.

The eyes were alert, clear and even mischievous; her smile bespoke frequent laughter and self-confidence beyond her years. "I've always been healthy all my days", she said.

We can well believe it. The writer described Mrs. Taylor as bubbling with good spirits and her narrative was interspersed with contagious laughter and smiles.

Her life has not been easy. Working on a farm since she was six years old can tell you about her. Even today she works a "little bit outside and tend the flowers". There's some housework, too.

Back to the picture and Mrs. Taylor. It could make a believer of those who have read about the value of laughter and a sense of humor in overcoming illness or even deterring it. There might be something of value, too, in making for longer lifespans.

Yes, we know the lady attributes longevity to a life lived according to her religious precepts; and we know medical experts lean strongly to a genetic quality (one of Mrs. Taylor's sisters is said to have lived to 102 and a grandfather to 108). But not all of her family was long-lived; so perhaps another factor was at work.

That sense of well-being after hearing a new joke, reading a narrative with a surprising and humorous finale, subtle comedy or high comedy by a performer ... should tell us something about where an inquiring mind might peer.

Humor might have been given us for a reason, just as we attribute "reasons" for hardship, tragedy and sorrow. (Often stronger personalities result.)

Whoever is the source for "laughter is the best medicine" spoke from experience. Of course, if you're ill, check with your doctor first.

Largest Employer

It should be a matter of concern to our elected leaders that the government is the nation's largest employer.

The Compendium of Public Employment, issued by the Census Bureau, shows that 15.8 million Americans work for federal, state or local governments as of October 1982. One person in every six in the civilian labor force works for the government.

Since 1977 there has been a 7.2 percent rise in the number of state government workers. Local government workforce grew by only 0.3 percent while the federal civilian payroll remained the same at 2,848,000.

We know the figures contain police, fire, refuse collectors, teachers and many other essential employees and we also recognize that the figures show some headway has been made in holding down government employment. Still public employment is too high in relation to the overall civilian labor force and government at every level should be looking for ways to hold down the payroll.

RALEIGH — Losing an employee to jury duty can be costly to an employer so sometimes employers threaten their employees in hopes of getting them to dodge duty. If the Courts Commission has its way, such threats could soon be a crime in North Carolina.

Commission member Giles Clark, a superior court judge, says potential jurors have told him on a number of occasions that their boss had threatened to fire them if they fulfilled jury duty. "You hear it very often, jurors who've been summoned saying that this is their reason for being deferred — they have to report (for work) or they'll lose their jobs."

Clark brought the topic up at the December commission meeting and, in January, staff reported on a federal statute that protects jurors from employer intimidation. The commission voted to have its counsel draft a bill that the commission can then recommend to the General Assembly.

Clark said the juror finds himself in an almost impossible situation. If he reports for work and skips jury duty, he can be arrested. If he goes to court and misses work, he can be fired. North Carolina law currently provides the juror with no protection either from the courts or from his boss.

Under the federal statute, any employer who intimidates an employee in an effort to keep him from fulfilling his jury duty can be cited for contempt of court, be fined and sent to a short jail term.

The proposal being drafted for the commission could make intimidation of an employee in these circumstances punishable either as contempt of court or as a misdemeanor.

The commission also decided to begin the process of getting a new facility for the N.C. Supreme Court and the N.C. Court of Appeals.

Included in the commission's final report will be a request that the assembly create a special study commission to look into the need for such a building. The commission would have to report by June 1987.

The commission has heard testimony that the two state courts suffer from a severe space crunch that means some court records have to be filed in warehouses and in the basements of other state buildings.

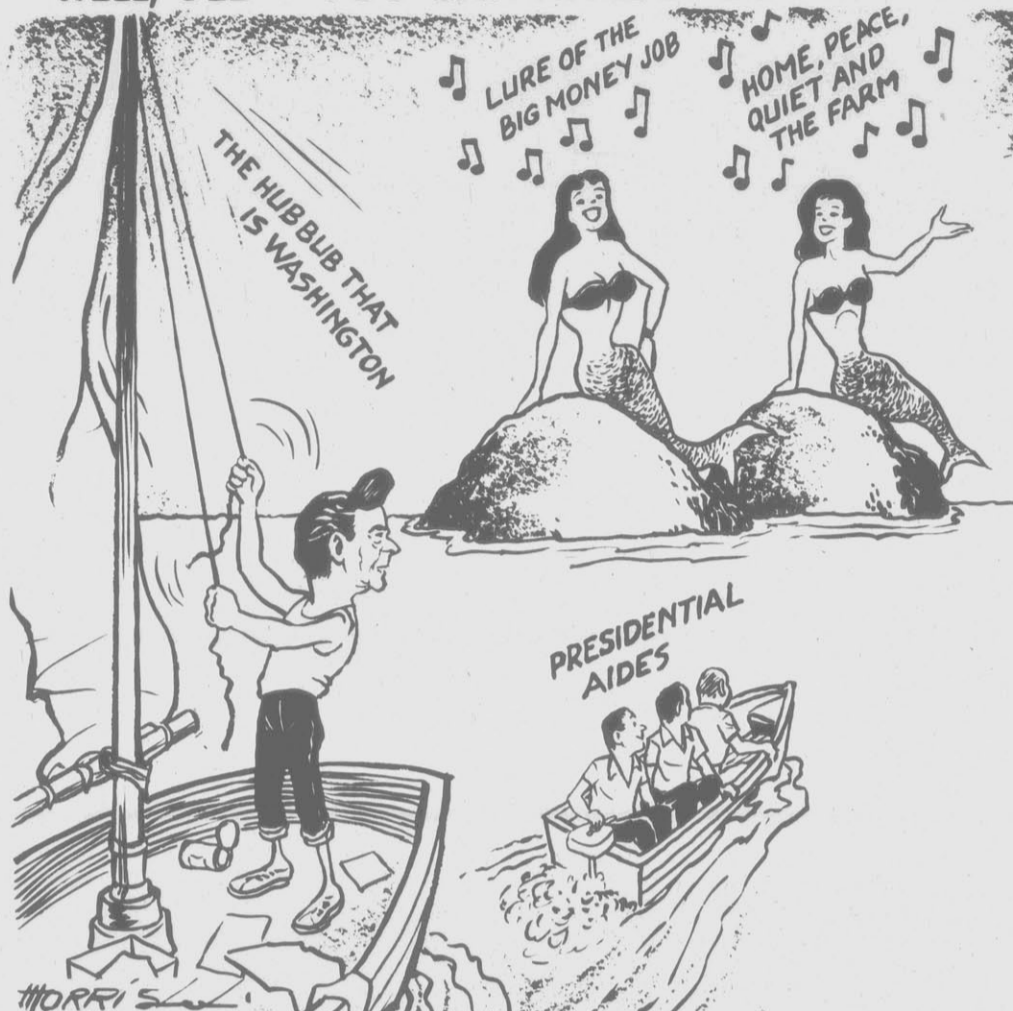

Speaking of state buildings, something has finally been done to make it possible for legislators to get from the Legislative Building to the Legislative Office Building without getting wet and muddy. And it was done at much less expense than previous ideas.

Several years ago, while the building was being constructed, the Advisory Budget Commission tried to sneak funds into the budget to build a tunnel between the two buildings. Public exposure foiled that. Later a pedestrian bridge was built from the Legislative Building to the mall on which the office building sits. But this bridge is not covered.

Recently, George Hall, director of legislative services, had an idea. When it rains, a lot of people walk between the two buildings underneath the bridge and then into the office's parking garage. The bridge thus serves as a roof but this route means crossing some muddy grounds.

Hall found some rejected concrete blocks from another state project and had them laid down as a sidewalk. Total cost: about $2,000. The tunnel would have cost $600,000. The bridge cost about $300,000 and hardly ever gets used because the legislature keeps its doors locked when not in session. If you cross the bridge, you can't get into the Legislative Building.

WELL, GEE -- YOU CAN HARDLY BLAME THEM!

Public Forum

To the editor:

The motto of the Sierra Club is "Think Globally, Act Locally." At Monday's meeting of the Club's Cypress Chapter here in Greenville, Dr. Stan Riggs presented a slide show that was not only food for thought but a veritable feast.

Beginning with that most astounding image of our blue-green gem of a planet seen from space, Dr. Riggs took us around the world, particularly to the Third World regions unfamiliar to our western experience — to China, Central America, Asia and Africa. We went from mountains to deserts, grasslands to farmlands and saw everywhere people going about their daily lives.

The slides displayed the uneven distribution of global resources, primarily soil and water, but also mineral nutrients for fertilizer, and fuel, which in most places means trees. There were signs everywhere, not only of ecological stress and imbalance, but impending ecological disaster caused primarily by human exploitation: deforestation, desertification and overpopulation. "What we see now in Ethiopia," said Dr. Riggs, "is nothing compared to what the future holds as world population climbs from its current 4.2 billion to an estimated 6.2 billion by the year 2000." Throughout the presentation, Dr. Riggs also showed maps and graphs that revealed definite alarming patterns in the processes described.

It was impossible to see this presentation without being deeply moved. We as a community owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Riggs for bringing his experience back home to us. Home, where we are, is the only place we can act, however global our consciousness becomes. It is here that we must remember the fundamental earth processes that we, like any community, can cherish or destroy. It is here that we must acknowledge that the bottom line is soil, water and air, not paved roads, expanding industry or even dollars and cents. The bottom line is the life of our blue-green gem of a planet home whose value is priceless.

To the editor:

On Sunday, Jan. 13 (largest circulation) we were subjected to the ranting and ravings of the editors of both the News and Observer and the Daily Reflector. What had these two champions of "uncontrolled news" so upset?

Well, seems like old Jesse Helms (their favorite subject) advocates that his friend buy stock in CBS so they can influence their editorial policy.

Now it's perfectly all right for the New York Times, Washington Post, News and Observer, Daily Reflector, ABC, NBC, and CBS to spew their daily dose of liberalism, but horrors the very thought of a conservative voice is terrifying!

As we in Eastern North Carolina know, we get a completely unbiased viewpoint from these two papers every day. They never waiver, no change, always the same: if Jesse's for it, it's no good; if it's liberal, we're all for it.

Fortunately for the people of North Carolina, this editorial policy completely backfires. They are so rabid they actually help Jesse and the conservative cause. Could it be that these two editors are really "closet conservatives"?

Now if they get old Jesse mad enough he just might decide to run for President so he can clean up the whole sorry mess. There would be on condition, that both your papers agree to support his opponent as rabidly as you have done in the past. This way Jesse can't lose.

By the way, thanks for the publicity about the stock purchase idea. It helped a lot!

A National Ambivalence About Homeless

WASHINGTON — Two months ago, voters in this city overwhelmingly approved an initiative asserting that every resident and visitor had the right to overnight shelter.

But the initiative's passage has never been interpreted as a mandate by the District of Columbia government. When the city council chairman submits the measure, as required, for congressional consideration later this month, he will do so despite ongoing efforts by D.C. Mayor Marion Barry to kill the measure in court and, some critics believe, discredit its supporters.

D.C.'s dispute over shelter rights underscores what appears to be a national ambivalence about the homeless. Few other groups of Americans have received as much publicity and public sympathy in recent years. But words have not always been followed by positive actions.

The media's attention to the homeless problem has been almost passionate. Abundant cover stories and lengthy profiles may, in fact, have done more than any single protest to spur private and public response. Even Mitch Snyder, D.C.'s leading homeless rights activist, might never have won President Reagan's consent last Nov. 4 to donate an abandoned federal building for a shelter had CBS New's "60 Minutes" not been planning to broadcast a report on Snyder's hunger strike that night.

According to CBS, the "60 Minutes" program (40 million viewers) elicited only 319 letters (16 of them negative) to the network. But Snyder says his group, the Community for Creative Non-Violence, received more than 1,000 letters. "Once people are exposed, once they get information, they respond," he told us.

Yet it's unclear how deep the reservoir of compassion is. Indeed, citizens and governments in some locales have demonstrated a sometimes brutal intolerance that makes good stories seem almost mythological.

In normally serene Santa Cruz,

Calif., for example, gangs of youths are said to have preyed on vagrants with sticks, bats, and fire extinguishers. Down the California coast, near war between "street people" and residents of generally affluent Santa Barbara has led to one death and numerous threats against vagrants.

Meanwhile, Ft. Lauderdale's five-member city council has passed anti-homeless ordinances which, among other things, prohibit anyone from rummaging through outdoor garbage containers without permission. One ultimately unsuccessful proposal would have authorized garbage to be sprayed with poison.

Snyder insists that city officials who submit to such turpitude are out of touch with public attitudes. But editors at the Ft. Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel report that the city council's draconian measures have caused "no public outrage." Evidently, some politicians sense a degree of public contempt shared by other communities. Why else would a mayoral candidate in Tucson, Ariz., have campaigned on a platform that more or less pledged to expel the city's transients?

Mitchell Ginsburg, who once ran New York City's welfare system and now teaches at Columbia University, contends that the public simply doesn't share the media's sympathetic view of homeless people.

"They (the homeless) used to be out of sight," Ginsburg says. "Now, rather than being a curiosity, they're a nuisance."

Undoubtedly, some of the nation's 250,000 to 2 million homeless haven't inspired warm embraces. No one likes being hustled or berated on a public sidewalk or, as even happens across the street from the White House, watched closely while using an automatic teller machine. To a certain extent, antagonism for street people is a byproduct of fear.

But the hostility evidenced by numerous mayoral candidates, city councilmen and teenagers may be ominous. First, it suggests that when the economy goes through its next cyclical downturn, the homeless will have only more enemies. It also means that programs planned or now under way may hang on a string of future newspaper articles and television documentaries.

Sensational reminders of the homeless crisis shouldn't be necessary. But they may be the only means of keeping the attention of city officials. What happens, one wonders, when the media lose their own interest in street people?

Strength For Today

A famous picture entitled, "Flight into Egypt," shows Joseph leading a little donkey upon which is seated the Virgin and the Babe.

In the year the flight into Egypt occurred, the world's attention was centered upon the grandeur of imperial Rome. But in God's sight, the significant thing was that a Babe had been born in the world, of humble origin, and that from his birth human history was to date its events.

In 1809 the whole world was talking about Napoleon and his policies, but the birth of three babies in that year — Abraham Lincoln, Charles Darwin, and Felix Mendelssohn — was to mean more to the 19th century than anything Napoleon thought or did.

"God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty."

Two Men Get Long Sentences

Two Route 1, Greenville, men have been handed sentences following their conviction on drug trafficking and other charges in Pitt County Superior Court.

Judge Henry W. Hight sentenced Dalton Woodrow Worthington, 70, to 63 years in prison and fined him $450,000 after a jury late Wednesday night found Worthington guilty of one charge of possession with intent to distribute cocaine and two counts of conspiring to sell cocaine.

Johnny Lee Warren, 35, was sentenced to 70 years in prison and ordered to pay $500,000 in fines after his conviction on six counts of trafficking cocaine and two charges of conspiracy to sell cocaine.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood, who said the sentences were among the stiffest ever given in Pitt County in connection with drug cases, characterized Worthington as "the wholesaler" and described Warren as the "distributor."

Haigwood, saying an investigation suggested that Worthington was a major supplier of cocaine in the Greenville area, said, "I hope this kind of verdict and sentence will send a message to people who are trafficking in drugs ... that we will prosecute to the fullest extent of the law."

Warren and Worthington were arrested in September, after undercover officers purchased a quantity of cocaine from Warren at a local motel, and a short time later found about two pounds of cocaine, worth an estimated $182,000, and $33,000 in cash at Worthington's residence.

Worthington's sentence included 35 years in prison and a $250,000 fine on a charge of possession with intent to distribute cocaine and two 14-year terms and two $100,000 fines on two charges of conspiring to sell cocaine.

Warren received six sentences of 7 years in prison and six $50,000 fines in connection with trafficking charges, and two 14-year sentences and two $100,000 fines on conspiracy charges.

Haigwood, who said the jury deliberated for 10 hours before returning a verdict, said the case involved "evidence of Worthington's connection with persons outside the U.S. He noted that investigations are continuing from information uncovered during the investigation of Worthington and Warren."

Solon Says Sterilization Funds Short

RALEIGH (AP) — The state funding of abortions for welfare recipients is receiving a lot of attention, says one state senator, but little attention or money is being spent for the alternative to abortion — birth control.

Sen. John Jordan, D-Alamance, said Thursday he intends to introduce legislation in the 1985 General Assembly to provide more birth control funds, particularly money for voluntary sterilization.

"It really doesn't make sense," Jordan said. "We can pay for abortions, but don't have enough money for birth control."

"The bottom line is, how can we best help these people," he said. "Prevention is so much better than abortion. In the long run, voluntary sterilization is the safest and cheapest method."

Officials at the state Department of Human Resources say family planning and birth control programs are operating at capacity, and there are waiting lists for voluntary sterilization.

The current state budget includes $1.3 million for abortions. Federal, state and local spending for sterilization totals $797,000.

Margie Rose of the Family Planning branch of the state Division of Health Services said an overwhelming amount of requests for birth control among low-income families force local health departments to concentrate on less-expensive counseling and contraceptives.

That leaves little money for voluntary sterilization, she said.

"There are many women requesting sterilization and they cannot get it," she said. "That's a tragedy."

Sterilization is available through the state Division of Social Services, but there is not enough money to meet the demand for the little-known service, said Frances Dreps of the agency's Family Services Branch.

"If a client requests sterilization, we try to arrange it," Ms. Dreps said. "But there are waiting lists in a lot of areas, and we have not advertised that it is available."

"If more money was available and we let clients know this was an option, I believe there would be a lot more requests," she said.

Federal regulations require a woman to be 21 or older, mentally competent and fully informed that the sterilization is permanent. There is also a mandatory 30-day waiting period between the time she signs a consent statement and the time of the operation, Ms. Dreps said.

Area Church News

Gammon To Retire

The Rev. Richard Rhea Gammon, senior pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville since 1958, will retire Jan. 31.

Rev. Gammon said he will continue to live in Greenville and will remain in the ministry, supplying churches in this area on an interim basis. He also plans to do some traveling and writing. He and his wife of 41 years, Flora MacDonald Gammon, will continue to participate yearly in the Highland Games at Grandfather Mountain, along with their daughter, Donna Gammon, who is a nurse in Waynesville.

Prior to coming to Greenville, he held pastorates at the Chiquapin and Bethel churches in Duplin County, at Highland Church in Fayetteville, in Dunn and in Columbia, Tenn.

A new senior pastor has not yet been named by the church. Gerald Anders is the associate pastor.

REV. RICHARD R. GAMMON

New Company

NEW YORK (AP) — Tenor Placido Domingo says he'll become the artistic head of a new opera company to be established in Los Angeles.

"Officially, we still have to make the confirmation but ... indeed it is true," Domingo, 44, was quoted as saying in the March issue of Ovation magazine. Domingo said he will become either artistic adviser or music adviser of the Music Center Opera Association of Los Angeles, which plans to import leading international companies while building its own.

"My ideal is to reunite the best conductors and best stage directors and the best possible cast ... and I think, because of my relations with everybody, probably I will be able to do it," he said.

Grandchild

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The first great-grandchild of the late movie legend John Wayne weighed in at 9 pounds, 9 ounces, big enough to make the doctor wonder whether Kathryn Josephine McFarlane was a potential linebacker.

The child was born early Thursday at St. Joseph's Hospital, said her grandfather, producer Michael Wayne.

"We thought we had a linebacker, so did the doctor," Wayne said. "The doctor at first said, 'I think it's a boy.'"

The child's parents are Wayne's daughter, Alicia Maria McFarlane, 25, and James G. McFarlane, 29.

The mother, one of John Wayne's 23 grandchildren, and child were doing fine, said Bill Feeder of the Rogers & Cowan publicity firm.

Sunday Singing

The CSMPPT Choir Union will sing Sunday at 6 p.m. at Sweet Hope Church, Galloway Crossroads, Simpson.

Musical Program

Betty and the Sunrise Singers will present a musical program at the Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church Sunday at 6:30 p.m. Revival will start Jan. 29.

Concert Set

The Singing Layman will be in concert at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Program Set

The Dixie Melody Boys will be in concert Thursday at 7 p.m. at Freedom Baptist Church, Snow Hill Street extension, Ayden.

Revival Scheduled

Revival services will be held at Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church Sunday through Wednesday. The Sunday service will begin at 7 p.m. All other services will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Preston Heath, pastor of Stoney Run Primitive FWB Church of Dunn, will be the guest speaker. Heath is a former Greenville pastor.

Special singing will be featured each night. A nursery will be provided.

Club To Meet

The Willing Workers Club of Haddocks Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the home of Ida Smith. Sunday School will be held at 9:45 a.m. Sunday and a prayer meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Frozen Girl Recovering After Mother Dumped Her

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — A 3-year-old girl who was apparently put out of a car in freezing weather by her mother was clinically dead when she arrived at an emergency room, but within hours her temperature had climbed 30 degrees to normal, officials said.

Megan Birmingham's heartbeat was restored and her condition was upgraded from critical to serious, officials at Olathe Community Hospital said early today. Her body temperature had been raised from 68 degrees to 98 degrees.

"There was no heartbeat," said Dr. Robert C. Matthews. "She was absolutely colorless. Her eyes had glazed over. She was so stiff you couldn't even move her."

Officials said it would be days before they could say if the girl suffered permanent damage.

Megan was found unconscious Thursday morning in the snow, wearing only a dress, pullover shirt and tights. She had been alone outside for at least four hours in temperatures that reached a low of 23 degrees, Matthews said.

"When I got to her she was in a semi-frozen state," said Johnson County Deputy Donald Rutledge, who scanned roadside ditches with a searchlight for two hours before finding Megan.

"The skin on the side of her face that was down in the snow was dark red. The other side was real pale. Her face was like ice," he said.

Rutledge said he put Megan on his warm car hood and administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation for about three minutes, until an ambulance arrived.

"All I was getting were these little gasps of air once in awhile," he said.

"I was yelling and screaming at her, looking for some kind of response. I wanted some kind of reaction, I was looking for some hope. I kept yelling 'Come on, wake up. Let's go.' But when I checked her pulse, I still couldn't get anything," he said.

Megan's father, Charles Birmingham, had called police after his 31-year-old wife Jane took the child from the family's home in Lenexa, about eight miles from where the child was discovered, Lenexa police said in a statement.

Mrs. Birmingham called her husband early Thursday, saying she had "placed the victim out of the car and did not know where the child was," according to the statement prepared by Lt. John Meier.

Megan was found about two hours after searchers using dogs and helicopters had found her mother sitting in her car, police said.

"The lady was disoriented and incoherent and could not provide any information as to what had happened to her daughter," said Capt. John Zemites of the Johnson County sheriff's department.

Mrs. Birmingham was taken to Shawnee Mission Medical Center. Officials there refused to release her condition today or to say whether she was still there.

Bonds Sold

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Local Government Commission sold an issue of $600 million in electric revenue bonds Thursday on behalf of the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency.

Of that amount, said spokesman Lynda Burgess, $400 million were fixed-rate bonds and $200 million were adjustable-rate bonds.

SEN. BOB DOLE

Dole Looks Ahead To '86 Races

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The 99th Congress has met only twice this year, but the new Senate majority leader, Bob Dole of Kansas, is scrambling as if these were the last, not the first, days of the session.

It's not even Inauguration Day, and Dole is thinking about 1986 when 22 Republican senators — including himself — are up for re-election. A slide in the economy could return control of the Senate to the Democrats, who dominated it for a quarter century.

Nevertheless, it's no secret that Dole believes what Congress does in the next few months about the economy may not only determine the survival of the Republican Senate, but perhaps even his own — and his wife's — political future.

So Dole is emphasizing Republican efforts to reduce the budget deficit, charting an independent course from the White House by announcing that Senate Republicans will draft their own document.

"We do have a majority after a long, long dry spell," Dole said in a recent interview. "We've had a majority for four years, and we ought to try and preserve it."

"There ought to be a period of time, six months or hopefully longer, when we do what we ought to do and not try to speculate about anything."

That speculation centers around 1988 when Dole may run for president or, in an unusual twist, his wife, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, might run for vice president.

"She seems more concerned about what I'm going to do in '88," Dole said. "She doesn't seem to have any drive or any desire to push herself in '88 — which may be the best strategy in town."

Mrs. Dole isn't offering a clue about her thoughts, preferring to turn questions about her political future to an energetic discourse on highway safety and airport legislation. "I'm not laying the foundation for anything else," she said, insisting it's too early for them to think seriously about the White House. "I'll be fully supporting him if he decides to join the race in '88."

Dole insisted he's not following the lead of Vice President George Bush, who said last week he has instructed aides to come up with a "prudent" plan to see what he has to do to keep his options open for a 1988 presidential bid.

"I don't think prudent planners are going to get you the nomination in '88," Dole said. "It depends on what happens in the economy and where people want to go."

Dole said he feels a sense of urgency about the economy and the budget. "If we don't finish it soon, we'll flounder and end up on the rocks somewhere," he said.

Dole is spending a lot of time these days shuttling between Capitol Hill and the White House, scheduling back-to-back budget meetings between members of Congress, the Reagan administration, leaders in business and labor. He's laying the groundwork to ensure that when the number-crunchers take out their calculators, there is a united Republican front.

Among those watching closely is Dole's Democratic counterpart, Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, whose job as Senate minority leader is to protect interests of Democratic senators.

"I am very favorably impressed with the way Mr. Dole is tackling these challenging problems," said Byrd, who served as majority leader himself from 1978 to 1980. "Mr. Dole's independence will serve him well and serve the administration well."

Dole said that in past years, Congress has had a tendency to start slowly, that it's unusual for much to happen before Inauguration Day. "Some of that is built in, and you can't change it," Dole said, shrugging. Then he smiled: "But that doesn't mean you can't do a lot of groundwork."

And that is part of Dole's strategy. He wants to include every Republican senator in the budget process in hopes that each feels he or she has a say — and a stake — in the outcome.

President Sued Over Arms Race

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A homeless dog and a woman who says she "doesn't want to see life on this planet wiped out" have sued President Reagan and members of his cabinet to stop the nuclear arms race.

Frances Tyson, 72, of Las Vegas, N.M., and Nanki-Poo, a homeless pup at the Las Vegas pound, filed their class-action lawsuit Jan. 9 in U.S. District Court. It contains Mrs. Tyson's signature and the dog's pawprint.

The suit does not seek damages, but calls for a halt to the production of nuclear arms and ask that Reagan order the prompt dismantling of existing weapons.

"I'm too old to get out and march so I just keep writing," Mrs. Tyson said, adding she realizes her lawsuit probably won't go far in the federal courts, but that "I know of nothing else to do."

"I just want to bring to attention that we cannot keep going this way," she said. "I am not a wild character. I'm a conservative person who doesn't want to see life on this planet wiped out."

The suit says the dog was included to symbolize the plant and animal life that would be destroyed in a nuclear war.

Mrs. Tyson said she was inspired to action after attending a conference of the Congress of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War last year in Helsinki, Finland.

"We cannot leave the chance of nuclear holocaust in the hands of a few men in the White House," she said. "We're really not facing this problem."

Named as defendants are Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George Shultz, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese.

A telephone call Thursday night to the White House press office went unanswered.

IS COMING TO GREENVILLE!

Mayors Fear U.S. Cities Will Bear Brunt Of Cuts

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, warning that Reagan administration budget cuts could hurt cities, says "the nation should not turn its back on the poor among us" as it tries to control federal deficits.

New Orleans Mayor Ernest N. "Dutch" Morial, commenting before the nation's mayors open their annual conference today, said administration plans to cut aid to cities are "not acceptable" and urged that urban ills not be forgotten in debate over the budget.

"Any solution to this nation's economic problems must include a solution to the problems of poverty, joblessness, hunger, homelessness — problems faced by a continuously growing number of Americans," Morial said Thursday at a mayors' task force meeting.

The mayors formally open their mid-winter meeting today following a day of preliminary discussions of the impact of budget cuts and problems of urban poverty.

Morial, the first black mayor of New Orleans, now in his second term, said many residents of the nation's cities have been left out of the economic recovery. "There is a growing sense of hopelessness among those who have been unemployed for a long time," he said.

A shortage of affordable housing is exacerbated by federal budget cuts, he said. And he said a conference survey of 83 mayors last fall found four out of five cities reporting the number of poor had increased since 1982.

"We must bear these trends in mind as we discuss the deficit issue

... Morial said. "We cannot turn our backs, and the nation should not turn its back, on the poor among us."

Speaking with reporters, Morial said he was concerned that programs aiding cities may bear a disproportionate share of President Reagan's deficit-cutting proposals when his fiscal 1985 budget is sent to Congress Feb. 4.

"It's not acceptable by those of us who have the burdens and responsibilities placed upon us at that level of government," he said.

"People who live in the cities have become dependent upon those programs and activities which have been promoted through the federal-city relationship."

He said mayors share "grave concern" about the federal deficit and recognize "it has to be addressed."

But at the same time, he said, the Reagan administration has a policy of "federal-domestic isolationism."

"The administration believes there are three areas they should be concerned with: federal tax policy, defense spending, and foreign policy," Morial said. "And the cities are left out."

Earlier this week, a group of Republican mayors met with Reagan and came away saying they were prepared to accept some cuts, if equitable.

Morial said he hopes to maintain federal revenue sharing, the Community Development Block Grants and economic development aid at this year's levels. John J. Gunther, executive director of the conference, said cities are receiving $4.5 billion in revenue sharing and $3.4 billion in the community grants this year.

The administration's intention is to allow both programs to be phased out by fiscal 1988, Gunther said, citing reports from mayors who have met with White House officials since mid-December. He said he also understood the administration plans significant cuts in the $440 million Urban Development Action Grants in the next fiscal year, and a cutback in the $140 million already in the budget this year for economic development aid.

Gunther said the biggest impact on cities next year would be made by plans to cut the current $2.7 billion in transportation aid by 70 percent, as well as any reductions that may come in social programs such as food stamps and school lunch subsidies.

Protection Costs Exceed School Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of police protection in the nation's cities has exceeded city spending on education for the first time, new Census Bureau figures show.

Educational spending by cities dipped 3.1 percent to $9.8 billion in 1982-83, according to a report released Thursday, while expenses for police increased 8.5 percent to $10.7 billion.

In addition to the rising police costs, the new Census study also showed that cities are paying more of their own expenses than they have in more than a decade.

Education has for many years been the largest single expense for cities, despite the fact they bear a relatively small share of total national educational costs. Most public schools, for example, are financed by counties or special districts rather than cities.

Nevertheless, the costs of education have remained atop city spending in past years, leading police expenses by $10.2 billion to $9.9 billion a year earlier, for example.

And as recently as 1960, police costs ranked only fourth among city general expenses, trailing spending for education, highways and sewers and sanitation. Police expenses remained fourth in 1965 but climbed into second spot in 1970 and remained there until the current report.

Vance Kane, of the bureau's Governments Division, pointed out that at least part of the decline in city spending on education is attributable to New York State assuming responsibility for the senior colleges of the City University of New York, which had previously been a city expenditure.

And his study also noted that several city governments in Wisconsin ceased operating their own school districts. These included Appleton, Eau Claire, Green Bay, Janesville, Madison, Waukesha and Wauwatosa.

On the income side, Kane pointed out that cities now raise nearly three-fourths of the money they spend, the highest proportion since 1970.

"There has been a general decline in federal government aid" to cities, Kane said, and some programs which previously sent funds directly to municipalities now channel them through state governments.

State and federal assistance to the nation's cities peaked in 1976, when it accounted for 33.3 percent of municipal income.

Inaugural Weekend Beginning With Pageantry And Fireworks

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president's $12 million inaugural weekend opens today with thousands of out-of-towners pouring into the capital for a round of parties, pomp and prayer that gets under way with a pageant and fireworks display.

The official kickoff to President Reagan's second inauguration is an evening "Prelude Pageant to the 50th American Presidential Inaugural," featuring actor Fess Parker narrating a history of inaugural music and addresses.

Both the Reagans and Vice President George Bush and his wife are planning to attend the outdoor pageant on the Ellipse.

On the eve of inaugural weekend, several inches of snow blanketed the nation's capital, tying up morning traffic Thursday. Major roads were clear by afternoon. The National Weather Service called for a chance of snow flurries today, but it was not expected to put a damper on the festivities.

Reagan had a busy day Thursday. Among other things, he met with the White House staff, the Cabinet, James Goodby, the U.S. ambassador to a Stockholm disarmament conference, and ate lunch with Bush.

In the evening there was a White House reception for a group of conservatives.

This evening, the Reagans will return to the White House after the outdoor pageant.

But the Bushes will head out to the cavernous Washington Convention Center for the "Salute to the Vice President," the first of two weekend entertainment galas. Tickets to the two galas range from $75 to $200.

Both galas, each two hours long, were produced by entertainer Frank Sinatra. On the roster for tonight's event are Lou Rawls, Pearl Bailey and the Gatlin Brothers, among others.

Headlining Saturday night's gala, honoring Reagan, will be Mikhail Baryshnikov, the Beach Boys, Michael Jackson and Dean Martin, to name a few.

The first item on the Reagans' schedule Saturday is a private luncheon at Blair House, hosted by a small group of friends.

In keeping with the promise to include young people in the inaugural weekend, Bush will make some remarks to the "Leadership Forum for Young Americans," a free event for invited guests at Constitution Hall.

That night, selected young people will go to a concert while the Reagans and the Bushes attend the black-tie gala.

Although the Reagans rarely attend church services during the year, they will join the Bushes at a National Prayer Service of Thanksgiving at the National Cathedral Sunday morning before returning to the White House.

At noon, in a private ceremony attended by about 90 people, Reagan will receive the oath of office from Chief Justice Warren Burger. The event will take place at the landing of the White House's grand staircase.

The public ceremony, watched by some 140,000 people, is Monday outside the Capitol. The two-ceremony inauguration results from Jan. 20 falling on a Sunday.

Traditionally, the public event has been postponed when the official inauguration date is Sunday.

After the Sunday event, the Reagans and the Bushes will attend a reception in the state dining room for those who witnessed the ceremony. Later, the Reagans are hosts at a reception for entertainers from Saturday's gala.

Reagan and Bush will then travel to the Jefferson Memorial for a "National Pageant of Young Americans," which involves 3,500 participants, military choirs and the All American College Marching Band.

A former college football player, Reagan will watch at least part of the Super Bowl football game between Miami and San Francisco.

Monday is the big day for the president and the public.

It will begin for the Reagans and Bushes with a pre-inaugural church service at St. John's Episcopal Church, followed by the trip to the Capitol.

After the mock swearing-in and his inaugural address, the Reagans will have lunch with congressional leaders and others.

Then the Reagans will drive along parade route to a reviewing stand across from the White House where they will watch the inaugural parade.

After a private dinner, the Reagans begin making the rounds of nine inaugural balls, with the president making brief remarks at each ball.

All together, the Washington Convention and Visitors Bureau expects about 50,000 people to arrive for the weekend, and the city's 40,000 hotel rooms have been booked for weeks.

Sinatra Operates As 'The Boss' For Inauguration's Festivities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Sinatra is back in town, running the black-tie inaugural galas for President Reagan with a jar of red, white and blue jelly beans sitting on his desk and a sign reading "The Boss" pasted on his office door.

From a high-backed leather chair at a huge wooden desk overlooking the stage of the Washington Convention Center, the 69-year-old singer is running the whole show, and he's doing it his way.

Sinatra has organized, staged, directed and picked the talent for the two-hour extravaganzas tonight and Saturday night at the center. The shows will be taped and broadcast by ABC-TV on the second night, when Reagan and his wife, Nancy, will be in the audience.

Both invitation-only performances for 12,000 Republican bigwigs and Reagan friends were sold out weeks ago, at a top price of $200 a seat. The cast lineup is heavily larded with Reagan and Sinatra favorites, including Jimmy Stewart, Dean Martin, Charlton Heston, the Beach Boys, Don Rickles, Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Sinatra Jr. and Jill St. John.

Sinatra himself will sing his old classic, "One for My Baby," while ballet virtuoso Mikhail Baryshnikov, clad in tuxedo, dances solo to the music.

"I hope this will be very entertaining for the American people, and it's our way of saying thanks to the president," Sinatra told a reporter as he roamed the hall, testing microphones, checking the view of the stage from the presidential box and inspecting artists' dressing rooms.

The singer is a registered Democrat who has voted for his old friend Reagan since he was governor of California. "I like to go for the guy in an election," he said.

Sinatra will join other performers at a thank-you buffet reception at the White House on Sunday, and the next day, "we'll go to the swearing-in at the Capitol — that's his act," he said.

Sinatra began putting together inaugural galas in 1961, when he did it for John F. Kennedy, and he's doing it again for a president he has known for more than 40 years. Sinatra was a frequent guest at White House social events during Reagan's first term, made appearances on behalf of Mrs. Reagan's favorite causes and served on a presidential task force on the arts.

Since he arrived last Sunday, Sinatra has been working 18-hour days, shuttling from his Madison Hotel suite to the White House to the gala site for a tightly packed schedule of production meetings and rehearsals.

No fan of the press, Sinatra has shunned publicity this week, spending his off-hours dining quietly with friends at his hotel or a local restaurant. He had a warm reunion with his old "Rat Pack" buddy, Dean Martin, who arrived shivering from Los Angeles to find that Sinatra's room was next to his. Another member of the pack, Sammy Davis Jr., is performing at a party given by conservative fund-raisers on Sunday.

Sinatra, the most famous son of Hoboken, N.J., was guest of honor Thursday night at an exclusive black-tie dinner-dance given by Ambassador Rinaldo Petrignani at the Italian Embassy for about 50 people.

U.S. Wants Talks On Central America

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking a broader dialogue with the Soviet Union, intends to propose talks on Central America and other unstable areas of the world now that it has a new agreement to exchange views on the Middle East, according to U.S. officials.

"To the extent that we can clarify positions, it makes the world a little less dangerous place," an official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Thursday.

In the Nixon and Ford administrations, the United States tried to reach an accommodation with the Soviet Union to lessen tensions around the world. Ronald Reagan, campaigning for the presidency, led a charge by conservatives against détente. And in his first three years in the White House, he followed the same hard line, denouncing the Soviet Union as an "evil empire."

But Reagan signaled a shift in a speech Jan. 16, 1984. "We must and will engage the Soviet Union in a dialogue that will serve to promote peace in the troubled regions of the world," he said. Then, in a U.N. speech last Sept. 24, he called for a "better working relationship" that included talks at the expert level.

The agreement reached Jan. 8 in Geneva to resume talks on reducing nuclear weapons reopened the dialogue on an issue that is central to U.S.-Soviet relations. It also cleared the way for talks on other topics, although the agreement on the Middle East actually had been reached earlier. It surfaced when Mark Palmer, a State Department official, briefed the Israeli government on the Geneva meeting a few days later.

The time and place for the Mideast talks have not been set, although Washington and Moscow are likely sites. Richard W. Murphy, a former U.S. ambassador to Lebanon and Saudi Arabia and now assistant secretary of state for the Near East, probably will represent the United States.

However, Secretary of State George P. Shultz may take on the assignment if he makes a trip to Moscow after the arms control talks open. "We'd be happy to chat with them about any number of different regions," a U.S. official, who declined to be identified, said. "This (the Middle East) is the only one where there is an agreement of principle thus far. We have offered to talk about a number of other regions as well. We'd be happy to have that."

Robert E. Hunter, a Mideast specialist who served on the National Security Council in the Carter administration, said he could not recall a U.S.-Soviet meeting that focused exclusively on the Middle East since 1977. The decision to engage Moscow in arranging an Arab-Israeli settlement prompted Egypt and Israel to open the negotiations that led to a peace treaty in 1979. The U.S. decision to hold new talks with Moscow appeared to unsettle Israel since the Soviets usually support the Arabs and are the main arms supplier for Syria. U.S. officials offered assurances, however, that they would not "cut a deal" with the Soviets at Israel's expense.

And, in Jerusalem, David Kimche, the director general of the Israeli foreign ministry, said "if the Soviets want to play a positive role we will welcome that."

Administration officials here stressed, meanwhile, that the talks probably would range beyond the Arab-Israeli dispute to include the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan and the Iran-Iraq war.

An official, outlining the likely

U.S. position, said the goals would be a withdrawal of all foreign forces from Afghanistan and adoption of a neutral, nonaligned policy. "We have no desire to create a regime in Afghanistan hostile to the Soviets," he said.

Both superpowers, meanwhile, have similar interests in trying to stop the spread of the Iran-Iraq war and radicalism in the Persian Gulf, the official said.

In Central America, meanwhile, the Reagan administration's policy is aimed at containing two Soviet allies, Cuba and Nicaragua. While the Soviets could contribute to a lessening of tensions, "we don't want to make them a partner in the negotiations" to promote stability in the region, another official said.

GUM-CHEWING WAITRESS — Waitress Barb Supple, left, alias "Blondie," talks with customers at Ed Debevic's Short Orders Deluxe, a Chicago diner that features a '50s style atmosphere, completed with gun-chewing waitresses. The food has an '80s touch, however, with hamburgers that cost $3.35, and a malted milk with whipped cream going for $2.35. (AP Laserphoto)

Chicago Diner Features '50s Style Atmosphere

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Ike is still president and Elvis remains king at a '50s-style diner where ponytails, poodle skirts, burgers and malteds are still the coolest.

There's a silver-plated counter area, miniature tableside jukeboxes that blare golden oldies, and the waitresses, with names like Bubbles and Suzy Q, serve up rib-sticking grub like meat loaf, chili and homemade hamburgers.

Ed Debevic's Short Orders Deluxe, which opened two months ago, is part of a nationwide trend toward upscale versions of the greasy-spoon restaurant. Even so, most of Debevic's customers think the place is definitely one of a kind.

"I can't really compare it with anything. The closest you could say would be an amusement park," said Debevic's regular John Madsen, 22, a Chicago sales consultant.

The waitresses and waiters at Debevic's are required to assume '50s aliases and "have to lean on the table, be witty with the customers, learn some diner lingo, learn to smack their gum and do the Debevic walk," said Steve Ottmann, project coordinator for the restaurant.

That walk is a "how would you say, sashay," said "Blondie," alias Barb Supple, 23, who's worked at Debevic's since it opened Nov. 14 and has been a waitress since age 16. "It's about the only restaurant that actually wants you to chew gum," said Miss Supple, sporting a roller-skate pin and a button picturing that all-American '50s boy, Beaver Cleaver.

Debevic's, including Ed himself, is the brainchild of Chicago restaurateur Richard Melman, who runs several area restaurants as president of Lettuce Entertain You Enterprises.

"Ed Debevic is made up," and is supposed to sound "like the name of a guy back in the kitchen slinging potatoes," Miss Supple said. "But when people ask, 'Where's Ed?' I usually say 'He's out bowling or playing bingo at the VFW.'"

Melman and business associate Lee Cohen of Phoenix, Ariz., wanted to create a "back-to-basics" restaurant with simple American food. Ottmann said. They toured the back roads of America to get ideas for the decor and the eats.

The result was Debevic's, complete with aqua overstuffed vinyl booths, posters for Kayo's "tops in taste" chocolate drink, cherry Cokes and pinball bowling games.

About the only contemporary things at Debevic's are the prices: A hamburger goes for $3.35, while a malted milk with whipped cream costs $2.35.

"It's not a serious place, it's a fun place," Ottmann said. "We encourage things that other restaurants don't. If you want to pull up a chair in the aisle, you can. If you want to sit six to a booth, do it. It's like anything goes."

According to Ottmann, the nostalgic, let-loose atmosphere at Debevic's has drawn patrons of every age and social strata. "You'll see limos pull up front, and we also have punk rocker-types and working people," he said.

For some, a visit to Debevic's is like a trip down memory lane.

"One guy said, 'Hey, I think I worked here in high school,'" said Miss Supple.

Debevic's is "dynamite," said Carlos Hernandez, 29, a businessman who says he likes almost everything about the place. "I grew up with the music. I love the music of the '50s. The people who serve you are all nuts — and I love it."

Airlines Rush To Cut U.S. Passenger Fares

DALLAS (AP) — American Airlines' plan to undercut discount carriers by slashing rates up to 70 percent was quickly matched by five other airlines, sparking fears of crippling fare wars and sending industry stocks into a tailspin.

Starting next month, fares ranging from $39 for short trips to $129 for one-way cross-country travel will be available in all 92 cities American serves, with 5 million reduced-fare seats offered in the first five months of the "Ultimate Super Saver" plan, American said Thursday.

The cut-rate fares carry restrictions that include purchases 30 days in advance and a provision that 25 percent of the ticket price is non-refundable. A limited number of full-coach fare seats will be reduced up to 70 percent, American said.

The airline said the fares "are also designed to be competitive with low fares offered by carriers like People Express."

Other major carriers responded quickly, as did investors. On Wall Street, the common stocks of eight carriers and airline manufacturers plummeted following American's announcement.

Trans World Airlines, Pan Am, Delta Airlines and Northwest said they would match the fares. United Airlines will do so "reluctantly," said spokesman Joe Hopkins.

Reporter To Make DWI Documentary

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A television reporter fined $500 after causing a fatal auto accident while intoxicated says he will prepare a documentary on the evils of drunken driving "to salvage something out of this."

Kelly Burke, a reporter for WRC-TV in Washington, received a suspended sentence Thursday for driving while under the influence of alcohol. Montgomery County Circuit Judge William Cave also placed Burke on two years' probation on the condition that he produce the documentary.

Burke's van crossed the center line of a Bethesda, Md., street July 1, slamming into a car and killing its driver, Dennis Lee Crouch, 32, of Poolesville.

Originally charged with homicide with a motor vehicle while intoxicated, Burke pleaded guilty to the drunken driving charge and failure to stay in the proper lane. Those charges were part of a plea bargain with prosecutors.

"I was surprised I didn't get jail time, but I was prepared to deal with whatever the judge's decision was," said Burke, who could have received up to 60 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

"I'm not trying to seek sympathy. I'm just trying to channel this constructively to salvage life out of this. What else can I do," Burke said, explaining his request to make the documentary as an alternative sentence.

The judge's sentence was criticized by Crouch's widow, who is a Montgomery County police officer, and officials of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

"All the facts we heard today do not change the one thing I want to change: My husband Dennis is dead," a sobbing Sandra Crouch said at the sentencing.

Mrs. Crouch was eight months pregnant when her husband was killed.

Responding to several witnesses who attested to Burke's good character, Mrs. Crouch said, "If Kelly Burke was so aware and sensitive, why did he drive drunk? He had 11 glasses of wine that night. Only he could have prevented the accident."

"I do not feel that Kelly Burke's sentence or conviction will deter other from drinking and driving," she said. "Our laws need to change. Our laws must set mandatory sentences for first offenders so that others may not drink and drive because they don't want to go to jail."

Great Lakes Face Major Storm With Sub-Zero Cold

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer

A fast-moving storm dubbed the Alberta Clipper whistled out of Canada and raced across Minnesota and Wisconsin today, dumping snow and sending temperatures as low as minus 14 in the North and in the single digits as far south as St. Louis and Kentucky.

Snow fell from Montana to northern New England today as the strong high pressure system over Canada pushed southward into the northern Great Plains, sending a mantle of cold air into the northern half of the Mississippi Valley, the National Weather Service said.

The frigid Canadian air made Minnesota the coldest spot in the country early today, with readings of 14 degrees below zero at Warroad near the Canadian border and minus 9 at International Falls.

In Canada, it was 26 below in Winnipeg, Manitoba, while in North Dakota it was a bone-numbing minus 10 degrees at Devil's Lake and minus 7 at Grand Forks.

The Northeast, meanwhile, recovered from two storms that pummeled the region Thursday with up to 9 inches of snow that piled up quickly, closing schools, shutting down governments and making driving chaotic.

"The Plains probably will be the hardest hit today as far as cold temperatures," Pete Reynolds of the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "I don't think we'll break any records this morning, but maybe tonight."

Since the storms began Wednesday night, eight people nationwide have died in traffic accidents and while shoveling snow.

On Thursday, classes were canceled or delayed at scores of schools in West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, New York City's suburbs and western Pennsylvania, and absenteeism at other schools was up.

New Jersey was plowed under with up to 9 inches of snow Thursday. Schools were closed, the state Legislature canceled sessions and Gov. Thomas H. Kean ordered state workers sent home early.

In Connecticut, there were traffic jams and some school and business closings, but the state was spared the brunt of a major snowstorm.

Four people, all in their 70s, died at the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven, Conn., on Thursday afternoon, officials said, all of them apparently victims of heart attacks suffered while shoveling snow.

Almost all of Pennsylvania got at least 2 inches of snow as the storm swept from west to east, with 9 inches reported at Warren and 8 inches at Corry and Albion in Erie County in the western part of the state.

The snow also was bad news for the homeless. The Human Resources Administration in New York City said 7,212 homeless men and women sought shelter Wednesday night, and an additional 3,285 families, or 11,800 people, were housed in city shelters and welfare hotels.

Wintry temperatures and blustery winds combined to push demand for electricity to an all-time high this week in New England, utility officials said.

The New England Power Pool, an organization of the region's utilities, said a record 16,543 megawatts was supplied to customers throughout the region between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. on Wednesday.

The peak demand surpassed a previous record set on Jan. 9, when demand hit 16,446 megawatts.

Slick roads in West Virginia were blamed for a death of a woman whose vehicle collided head-on with a tractor-trailer, police said. Police in Virginia said two people died Wednesday when their car hit a patch of snow, veered into a creek and overturned. A woman was killed and her two children injured in a collision Thursday morning at Chesapeake, Va., police said.

U.S. Says Famine Spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drought and famine are spreading in Africa and starvation in the Sudan and other nations could become as serious as in Ethiopia, according to U.S. officials.

W. Peter McPherson, head of the Agency for International Development, announced Thursday that the United States would increase its food aid to the Sudan from 100,000 to 200,000 tons in part because of Ethiopian refugees fleeing civil war and spilling over the border between the two countries.

While most attention has focused on Ethiopia, McPherson said, the Sudan and Kenya have gone on the "danger list" of countries threatened with mass starvation in coming months.

"In a number of countries," McPherson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "particularly Ethiopia and the Sudan, it is quite possible many millions will continue to suffer for the next several years."

McPherson and Chester A. Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African Affairs, asked approval for an additional $235 million in emergency help. Some Senate Democrats are planning to propose an aid package of about four times that much.

Eastern Flight Diverted But Crew Cons Hijacker

MIAMI (AP) — A man who threatened to ignite a can of gasoline aboard an Eastern Airlines jet unless he was taken to Cuba was apprehended when the plane landed in Orlando today and he was told he was in Havana, authorities said.

No one among the 120 other passengers and nine crew members was injured aboard Eastern Flight 403, which left Newark, N.J., at 10:30 p.m. Thursday en route to Miami, said airline spokeswoman Paula Musto.

The hijacker, identified by airline and jail officials as Lazaro Hernandez, 30, of Passaic, N.J., was arrested by Orlando police after Flight 403 was forced to make an unscheduled landing, said Carolyn Fennell, a spokeswoman for Orlando International Airport.

The plane arrived in Miami at 4:18 a.m. today. The A300 Eastern jet made an emergency landing in Orlando at 1:14 a.m., and "by 1:50, it was all over," said Roger Myers, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta. "The passengers were taken off the aircraft and the hijacker was taken into custody."

Upon landing at the airport, 2nd Officer Dennis Lawrence spoke with Hernandez, who had been holding a package and a cigarette lighter, said Ms. Fennell.

"Lawrence indicated to the potential hijacker that he had landed in Cuba, at which instant (Hernandez) handed his lighter to the second officer and dropped the substance that he was holding and was apprehended by the Orlando Police Department," she said.

Lawrence and an unidentified passenger overpowered Hernandez and "pinned him to a seat," said Ms. Musto.

Passengers were taken to a holding area in the airport and the jet was refueled, said Ms. Fennell. It left Orlando at 3:32 a.m. for Miami with all the other passengers on board, she said.

Carol Bellamy, president of the New York City Council, was on the passenger list of the plane, said Ms. Musto. Another airline spokesman, Glenn Parsons, said Ms. Bellamy's New York office confirmed that she was aboard the plane and a passenger. Irv Sherman, 39, of East Brunswick, N.J., also said she was aboard.

Michael Internoscia, 16, who traveled to Miami from Old Tappan, N.J., said the hijacker. "He stood up and he was screaming. He looked nuts, crazy. I didn't understand what he was saying except 'Cuba.'"

Sherman said he heard the man shouting in the back of the plane.

"He was holding a bottle wrapped in paper and he was holding a cigarette lighter," Sherman said. "Then the pilot announced that there seemed to be a problem."

Law enforcement officials and emergency vehicles were in place in case of an accident, she added.

Hernandez demanded that the plane be diverted to Cuba and claimed he had a can of gasoline, said Harvey Pechacek, communications supervisor for the Orange County Sheriff's office.

Two Spanish-speaking flight attendants discovered Hernandez in the back of the plane. Hernandez, who reportedly spoke no English, first claimed he had "a grenade or some sort of explosive," but later said he had a can of gasoline, Ms. Musto said.

European Toll From Cold Climbs to 280

By The Associated Press

From ice-bound Scandinavia to the chilly Mediterranean coast, Europe is struggling with a stubborn cold spell that has claimed at least 280 lives in 13 days.

Icebreakers worked round the clock to clear Denmark's Baltic Sea harbors. France suffered its coldest temperatures in 30 years on Thursday — including 7 below zero in Paris — and northern Italy and southern Switzerland were hit by the heaviest snowfalls in decades.

In Bonn, West Germany, an airport arrival ceremony for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain was canceled, reportedly because the 21 degree temperature was considered too cold for the military band to play the national anthems properly.

An unofficial tabulation by European bureaus of The Associated Press put the death toll at 280 Thursday. France has been the worst hit, with 143 deaths attributed to weather-related accidents or illnesses.

Most of those who died were homeless tramps, elderly people living alone without heat, or victims of fires believed caused by frozen pipes bursting and causing electrical short-circuits.

French Railways reported that five workers have been killed in the past 10 days, three of them struck by trains as they were trying to thaw switches.

Fuel industry officials in France and Switzerland said sharp increases in demand for heating oil were causing supply difficulties.

In the Aude region on France's Mediterranean coast, flamingos continued to die by the hundreds, reports said.

In Belgium, gas company workmen checked gas lines in a Brussels neighborhood where three separate gas explosions in the past two days collapsed a half dozen houses, killing five people and injuring 18. Officials said they suspected the leaks were caused by lines ruptured by freezing temperatures.

Schools and factories were closed in several cities in northern Italy including Milan, where traffic was brought to a near standstill despite efforts by workmen and soldiers to clear two feet of snow that fell since last Sunday.

Italy's death toll from weather-related incidents rose to 35 when a 9-year-old boy drowned in a storm-swollen stream in Sicily, a 64-year-old man was found frozen to death outside Trento and a husband and wife were killed when their car went off the road after an avalanche in southern Matera province.

In southern Switzerland's Ticino Canton province, the heaviest snowfalls this century blanketed the countryside with 35 inches in the past three days. Roads were closed, cutting off villages, and train traffic within Italy was badly hampered.

Since Monday, at least eight people have died in Greece, mostly from heart attacks caused by the cold. Three deaths were reported in Austria and three in the Netherlands.

In Turkey, at least 18 people have been killed in the past four days in a severe cold snap that has hit central and eastern regions the hardest.

Warmer weather returned to Spain, with rains melting snow and ice that still covered many highways. Civil Defense officials said more than 40 people have died since the cold wave hit and that about 1,000 remote villages in northern mountainous areas remain isolated after heavy snowfalls.

Much of southwest England and Northern Ireland was blanketed with as much as six inches of snow Thursday, leaving some roads impassable.

A man trying to rescue his dog died when he fell through ice in a partially frozen river.

A British Airways flight from London to Belfast had to turn back Wednesday night because of snow blocking runways at Aldergrove Airport.

London has been spared heavy snow, but temperatures dropped below freezing.

Some 150 legislators of Britain's opposition Labor Party, concerned about London's estimated 10,000 homeless, signed a House of Commons motion Thursday urging the government to keep London subway stations open all night to provide shelter.

The stations normally close at around midnight when the subway shuts down.

The London Times said hostels for the homeless are crowded to "breaking point."

Belgium Decides To Use NATO Nuclear Missiles

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Prime Minister Wilfried Martens says his government has made a "firm decision" to station NATO nuclear missiles in Belgium but won't deploy all of them, if the Soviets agree to reduce their arsenal.

The Reagan administration had urged Martens to commit Belgium to deploying the missiles assigned to it as part of the alliance's plan to put a total of 572 U.S.-built medium-range rockets in five Western European nations.

Martens, who met with President

Reagan in Washington on Monday, had said his center-right government wanted to see how U.S. and Soviet efforts in the arena of arms control negotiations fared before committing his nation to the deployment schedule set by NATO.

But at a news conference Thursday in Brussels, Martens announced: "NATO can be happy that we will decide on a deployment schedule before the end of March and the period of pure evaluation has been transformed into a firm decision (to deploy) by the Belgian government."

NATO's schedule had called for Belgium to deploy by mid-March 16 of the 48 missiles assigned to it. Belgium is supposed to install the remaining 32 missiles by late 1987.

However, Martens' announcement that Belgium wait until the end of March to decide on a deployment schedule means the first group of 16 missiles is unlikely to be in place in time to meet NATO's timetable.

Martens said his government was "no longer" linking the beginning of deployment to an evaluation of progress in East-West arms talks, a policy switch that he called a "major change."

Soviets Building Chernenko As 'Hero'

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — A new film extolling the border guard service of President Konstantin U. Chernenko a half-century ago is being shown, apparently to portray him as a military hero in time for the 40th anniversary commemorations of the victory over Nazism.

The 20-minute documentary, shown to the public for the first time this week at movie theater in an outlying district of Moscow, recalls Chernenko's service as a border guard in the central Asian republic of Kazakhstan from 1930 to 1932.

Many Soviets and Westerners in Moscow see the film as part of the effort by cultural and political authorities to commemorate the victory in the Great Patriotic War, as World War II is known in the Soviet Union.

The anniversary, celebrated by the Soviet Union on May 9, has already prompted Soviet newspapers to run articles recalling World War II military leaders. A daily feature on the evening television news shows footage of Soviet troops advancing toward Berlin 40 years earlier.

In light of the personality cults which surround top Soviet leaders, it would be unnatural for Chernenko to be excluded from this effort.

By the time the Nazis invaded the Soviet Union in 1941, however, Chernenko was already out of the armed services and entrenched in Communist Party work. Thus his two years in the border guard may have been seen as the best vehicle for portraying him as a military figure.

The first sign of this was an article on April 10 in the Defense Ministry daily, Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star).

The article, which officially marked the 60th anniversary of the Red Banner border detachment where Chernenko served, praised him as a "crack shot" who "never missed the mark when throwing hand grenades" and a gallant horseman who always rode at the head of a detail when guarding the border with China.

It did not cite any specific heroic deeds performed by the future leader and gave his work in the Communist Party, which he joined in 1932, as much prominence as his military prowess.

The film also gives no detail of individual feats performed by Chernenko in defense of the Soviet border — a duty always cited as a high priority in this vast, security-conscious nation.

Grigory Konev, a farmer who served alongside Chernenko, recounts that the time of their service was "very difficult" because of the collectivization of peasant holdings into state-owned farms that was taking place in Kazakhstan.

"Every day we had to serve on the border," Konev says, recalling one incident in May 1932 when he, Chernenko and 18 others "liquidated" a band of bandits crossing the border.

Only one still photograph of Chernenko as border guard is shown in the film and it appears repeatedly throughout the film. The picture also appeared last April in Krasnaya Zvezda.

More attention is devoted to archive footage of the mass labor efforts required to collectivize eastern Kazakhstan and to modern film of the Russian wooden-log dacha where Chernenko first got his Communist Party card.

This is spliced with pictures portraying today's border guard duty as a daring adventure full of helicopter and horse rides across the dramatic mountains in the area.

A return visit by Chernenko to his border guard unit in August 1979 also is featured, showing the then newly elevated Politburo member planting a tree and speaking to young recruits.

The speech is not audible in the film but extracts published in Krasnaya Zvezda quoted Chernenko as saying that his "difficult, uneasy and exciting service made an indelible print on my memory."

"Service on the border was the ultimate dream for us young Communists in those days," he recalled, and then adding: "It was here that one of the chief events of my life took place — I was admitted to membership of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

Gang Violence Flares In Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Police said most of Jamaica was calm after two days of violent protests, but two people were killed in a gun battle between rival gangs before security forces chased away the combatants.

Police and soldiers cleared away the roadblocks erected during the protests against Prime Minister Edward Seaga's economic policies, and most businesses in Kingston reopened Thursday. But they closed early after gunfire broke out at midday near the capital's downtown area.

In radio broadcasts, factory managers appealed to their workers to return to work today and schools advised students they would reopen today or Monday.

Since the disturbances began Tuesday, at least 10 people have been killed and 15 wounded, according to authorities.

Seaga charged the protest was timed to harm the crucial tourist industry at the height of the winter season. But he said the government had recorded only 60 cancellations out of the scheduled 21,000 tourist arrivals this week.

There were no incidents reported in the northcoast resort area Thursday, although much of the western part of the island was without power for several hours because a transmitter utility pole caught fire. The state Public Service Company said the fire was set deliberately.

American tourists arriving Thursday said they were concerned about the disturbances but decided to go ahead with their vacations because they were eager to escape cold weather at home.

Police said the overall situation in Kingston, the capital city of 800,000 people, was calm. They said they didn't consider Thursday's gang shootout directly related to the political protest that followed the government's 20 percent fuel price increase, the latest in a series of austerity moves.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today with airline and aviation issues adding to Thursday's losses. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 2.54 points to 1,231.23 in the first half hour of trading. About as many issues rose in price as fell in the early rally on the New York Stock Exchange. Meanwhile, the Dow Jones average of 20 transportation issues, down 10.52 points Thursday, fell another 1.44 to 583.26 in the opening 30 minutes today.

A selloff in airline issues dominated Thursday's mixed showing in the stock market, a slide attributed to an American Airlines announcement of a broad fare-discount program that was quickly matched by many competitors.

Although heavy restrictions, including unusual penalty provisions, apply to the new fare cuts, the development was viewed with concern by some traders who were hoping for an end to fare wars and a return to profitability among airlines.

The selling also spilled over to airline manufacturers. In the early going today, Pan American World Airways slipped 1/8 to 4 1/8, TWA was off 1/4 to 11 1/4, Boeing fell 1/2 to 57 1/4, and McDonnell Douglas dropped 1/4 to 72 1/4.

In economic developments, the Commerce Department said today that personal income rose 0.5 percent in December. That was a smaller-than-expected increase, but analysts said that rather than reflecting sluggish growth, the increase had been held down by a change in the way the government pays military retirement benefits. On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average lost 1.99 to 1,228.69.

Jaycees ...

... a very special honor."
Daughtridge, president of Daughtridge Oil Co. of Rocky Mount and Greenville, was named Boss of the Year for his "outstanding service to church ... family ... community." Larry Harrison, a past president of the Greenville Jaycees, who made the presentation, said, "The Jaycees have meant a lot to me" and "I have grown personally and professionally" because of the organization. Daughtridge said, "You get much more out of it than you ever put in," he said of the organization.
Tulloss, the speaker for the awards dinner, suggested that there are several traits that set DSA winners and other leaders apart. "You've got to set your goals, write them down ... know where you're going," Tulloss said. "Believe in yourself. You can't be worried about the fear of failure," and "be positive in all you do; expect success and it will happen."
Tulloss cautioned, "Don't be susceptible to the negative influence of other people. If you've got a mental block, you've got to get that mental block away from you." He also said "you've got to be a competitor," and "be willing to fail" to be a successful leader.
Jaycee President Jack Myers, who was the DSA recipient in 1983, presided at the session, which was attended by past DSA and Boss of the Year winners, as well as charter members of the Greenville Jaycees and past presidents.
Greenville Mayor Janice Buck, who spoke briefly, encouraged Jaycee members to participate in the city's talent bank, from which members of various boards and commissions are selected.

Personal Income In 1984 Climbed By 6.8 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose a strong 6.8 percent in 1984, after subtracting taxes and inflation, the government said today. The gain was almost double that of 1983 and the best in more than a decade.

The Commerce Department said the improvement in Americans' disposable income — what's left after paying taxes — resulted from a strong increase in employment during the year. In 1984, the labor force grew by 2.2 million, the largest December-to-December increase in five years.

The 6.8 percent gain compared to a 3.5 percent increase in 1983 and a puny 0.5 percent increase in 1982, when the country was mired in recession.

It was the strongest increase since a matching 6.8 percent gain in 1973.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the report "generally supports a view that the economy has strengthened in both November and December" and added that "there is considerable promise for 1985."

After a slump in the late summer and early fall when the economy turned in a sluggish performance, activity picked up substantially in November and December, today's report showed.

For December, the department reported that personal income rose 0.5 percent, down only slightly from a 0.6 percent increase in November.

Personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest payment on debt, rose an even stronger 1.2 percent in December following a 1 percent gain in November. The two strong increases in spending followed a 0.4 percent decline in October.

The gain in Americans' spendable income was also helped along by a low inflation rate. Contrary to the late 1970s, when income advances were substantially reduced by high inflation rates, inflation for 1984 remained low.

According to a price index tied to the income report, inflation averaged only 3.2 percent for 1984, down from 3.7 percent in 1983. This was the best performance for this index since 1967, when it registered a 2.5 percent gain.

Consumer spending, after discounting the effects of inflation, rose 5.3 percent in 1984, the best performance since a 5.6 percent rise in 1976. The increased spending by consumers has been credited as one of the main driving forces behind the nation's recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

Before inflation was taken into account, Americans' personal income rose an even stronger 9.8 percent in 1984, up from 6.2 percent in 1983. This gain was fueled by an 8.7 percent increase in wages and salaries, up from a 5.8 percent rise in 1983.

The department said the 0.5 percent gain in personal income in December would have been an even stronger 0.8 percent except for a large dip of $5.4 billion in government transfer payments.

This decline resulted from a change in how the government pays military retirement benefits rather than in any actual reduction in government spending.

A 1984 law shifted the payment of military retirement benefits from the last day of the month to the first day of the month starting on Jan. 1 of this year. Consequently, the report reflects no payment in this category for December since the regular Dec. 31 payment was not made until Jan. 1.

Wages and salaries increased $18.3 billion in December, compared to a $13.8 billion November gain. Payrolls at manufacturing industries were up $5.1 billion in December compared to a $3.2 billion November gain. For all industries, increases in employment and hours worked contributed to the gains. The payroll increases were the largest in the auto and metal industries.

The department said farm proprietors' income increased $700 million in

Pirates Try To Halt Road String

East Carolina University's Pirates, earlier this year, overcame a hurdle that had blocked them since the 1982-83 season — gaining a victory on the road.

Now, there's another "road" block in their way. They have lost their last 14 road games in the ECAC-South, not having won since their league-opening game with George Mason in 1981-82, three seasons back. Since then, they've lost 14 straight games on their foes' home courts.

Saturday night, the Pirates go on the road for the first time against an ECAC-South foe this year, meeting the University of Richmond in the Robins Center in the Virginia capital. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. Following that game, the Pirates travel on to Washington, D.C., to face Howard University in a non-conference contest. Tipoff is also set for 7:30 p.m. in that game.

The Pirates come into the game with a 5-7 record, having lost their last three outings — all last week — and two of them in the ECAC-South.

Richmond, meanwhile, is 6-5 overall and 2-1 in league play, having downed George Mason, 76-75, in overtime in Fairfax, Va., on Wednesday night.

Howard, 5-8, will meet Delaware State on Saturday night before hosting the Pirates on Monday.

The Pirates haven't beaten Richmond in their last three meetings, having won a 79-75 overtime game in Greenville two seasons ago.

The Spiders hold a 24-20 lead in the long series between the two former Southern Conference rivals.

Leading the way for the Spiders is All-league pick John Newman, a 6-7 junior forward who averages 20.4 points and 5.7 rebounds a game. He's currently third in the league in scoring, tenth in rebounding, fifth in free throw percentage (82.4) and tied for first in steals with teammate Kevin Johnson with 24.

Three other starters from last year's conference and tournament champs return along with Newman. The others are 5-10 junior guard Greg Beckwith (4.3 ppg), Johnson, a 6-2 senior guard (13.7 ppg); and 6-5 junior forward John Davis (9.7 ppg).

They are joined in the starting lineup by 6-8 freshman center Steven Kratzer, hitting 9.7 points per game.

Another freshman, 6-5 Peter Woolfolk is the top reserve, hitting 6.8 points a game.

Howard beat the Pirates, 71-57, in their only meeting last year, that in Minges Coliseum.

Information on the Bison is sketchy, however, as their sports information office has not been accessible this week. It is believed that they have two players in double figures, guards George Hamilton at 10.8 and Fred Hill at 12.0.

The Pirates return to the ECAC-South wars on Saturday, January 26, hosting league-leading Navy in a 7:30 p.m. in Minges. They also entertain James Madison on Monday, January 28, rounding out their play for the month.

Cline Sparks Wake Forest As Duke Falls In Overtime

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM (AP) — Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy hopes his team's victory over second-ranked Duke is a glimpse of things to come as the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race heats up.

"I hope it will set the stage for the rest of the season," Tacy said.

Junior forward Mark Cline scored six of his 12 points in overtime as the Demon Deacons beat the Blue Devils 91-89 to tie Maryland for second place in the ACC at 3-1.

In the only game involving an ACC foe, Georgia Tech rolled past Monmouth 96-66 in a non-conference game.

No games are scheduled tonight involving ACC teams.

Cline was also looking toward the future after Wake Forest won its sixth straight game while handing Duke its second straight defeat and denying the Blue Devils their 400th victory at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

"I think it will give us more respect," Cline said. "I'm not skeptical at all about how far we can go."

But forward Kenny Green, who tied Delaney Rudd for scoring honors with 24 points, said the victory wouldn't change many minds.

"I doubt it" will gain us any respect, Green said. "We think we have a good team, but we will have to win the conference to prove it (to others). We just wanted some respect because we were picked at the bottom of the league. It hurts."

After Rudd hit a driving jump shot from 16 feet with four seconds to go to send the game into overtime, Cline canned a jumper and reserve forward Charlie Thomas added a layup to give the Demon Deacons a 77-73 lead.

Duke, 12-2 and 2-2, cut the margin to two points moments later but could get no closer as the Demon Deacons hit 12 of 16 free throws.

"Our approach to overtime games has been positive," Tacy said. "We try to emphasize that the tempo is in our favor and to play with confidence. This was a tremendous effort by our players ... in just making a run at it."

Wake Forest, 11-4 overall, led 44-32 at intermission, but Duke scored 12 straight points to take a 60-53 lead with 8:30 left before the Demon Deacons used a 12-5 run to tie it four minutes later.

Duke regained the lead at 72-69 on a jumper by Mark Alarie, who scored 14 of his 17 points in the second half before fouling out with 1:11 remaining in regulation. But Wake Forest again rallied — on a bucket and two foul shots by Green and Rudd's jumper.

Coach Mike Krzyzewski, who is now 1-9 against Wake Forest, said the Demon Deacons outplayed his Blue Devils.

"They just played harder for longer periods of time," Krzyzewski said. "Their kids made big shots for them. We made an admirable comeback and had opportunities to win ... (but) we made some very poor decisions."

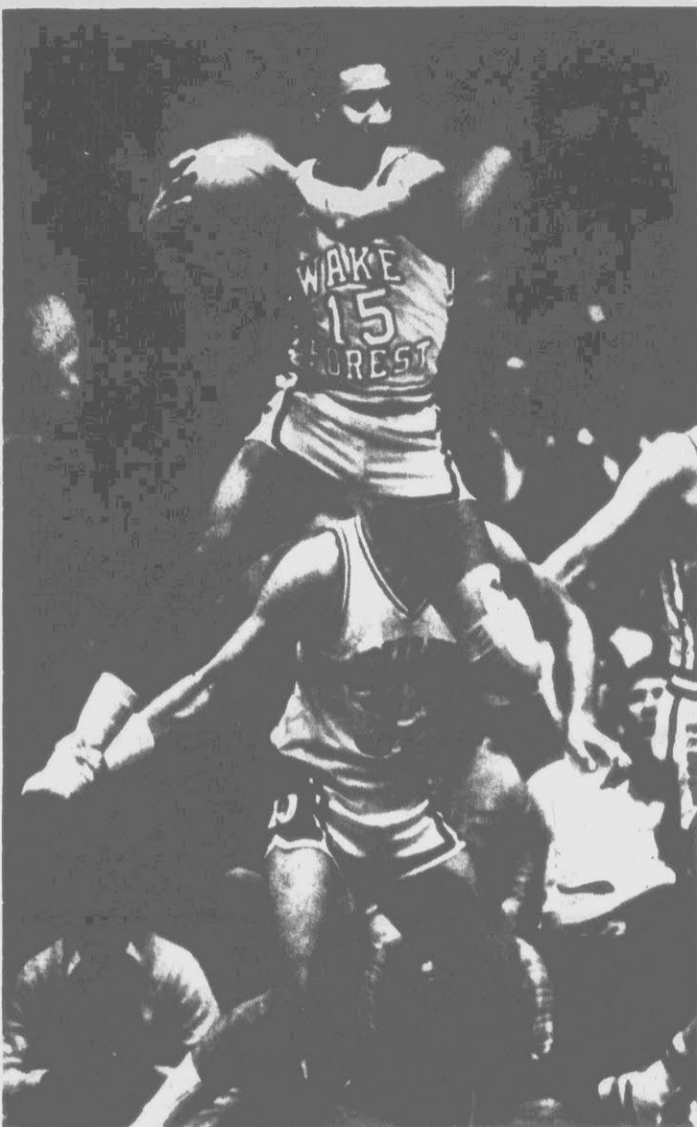

Lee Garber chipped in 13 for Wake Forest while Tyrone Bogues added 12.

Tommy Amaker scored 16 points for the Blue Devils, while Bilas had 13 and David Henderson 11. Guard Johnny Dawkins was held to eight points — breaking a streak of 51 straight games in which he had scored in double figures.

Bogues, who was shadowed Dawkins for much of the game, played the entire game despite a death threat. Police said Warren B. Brooks of Clemmons, N.C., was arrested Thursday on an extortion warrant charging he threatened Bogues' life in order to get the Board of Aldermen to fire a city employee.

In Atlanta Thursday night, Georgia Tech's Mark Price says he was having fun when he dished out a school record 14 assists and scoring 19 points as the 17th-ranked Yellow

Lady Pirates Hosting Mason On Saturday Night

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, resting atop the ECAC-South standings with a 2-0 record, continue their warfare in the league Saturday night playing host to George Mason. It will be their first home game against league competition.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Mason opened its ECAC-South schedule with an 86-58 defeat at the hands of UNC-Wilmington last night. The loss dropped them to 5-6 on the season, and 0-1 in league play.

East Carolina, on the road last weekend, gained victories over William & Mary, 86-57, and Richmond, 77-61. The second victory was their fourth in a row since bowing to South Carolina back on January 2.

Against Mason, the Lady Pirates have lost but once in five outings. In their last meeting, in the ECAC-South tournament last spring, ECU took a 68-41 victory over the Lady Patriots.

Mason features two players in double figures, led by 5-6 senior guard Linda Jones with a 14.0 average. The other is 5-7 senior forward Bobbie Pugh, hitting 12.2 points a game.

Other starters include 5-7 sophomore guard Veronia Gilliard, hitting 6.4 points; 5-11 senior center Valerie Douglas, scoring 8.1; and 5-11 junior forward Susie Adams, with a 6.5 average.

Douglas is the leading rebounder with an 8.0 average.

East Carolina, meanwhile, is led by Anita Anderson, scoring at a 13.9 clip, while Sylvia Bragg had an 11.3 mark. Loraine Foster, with 29 points against Richmond, has boosted her average to 10.3, giving the Pirates three in double figures.

Not far behind them is Lisa Squirewell at 9.5, while the other starter, Monique Pompili, is hitting at a 7.5 clip.

Squirewell is the leading rebounder with an 8.4 mark, followed by Anderson at 6.7 and Pompili at 6.4.

Defense and the running game have been the keys for the Lady Pirate in their win streak. Over the last four games, they've outscored their foes, 303 to 235, using pressure on the defensive end and racing down court with the fast break when ever possible.

East Carolina goes into the game with the Lady Patriots with a five-game winning streak in the league. Ironically, their last loss was at Mason during regular season play last year, when they fell, 58-54.

Following the Mason game, the Lady Pirates will play host to American University, one of the two new ECAC-South members (along with UNC-Wilmington). That game will be played on Monday night in Minges, also at 7:30 p.m.

East Carolina and American met last year for the first time, with the Lady Pirates taking a 59-49 victory.

Cieplicki Leads Tribe By UNC-W

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Keith Cieplicki's game-high 24 points made him the fifth leading scorer in William & Mary history and led the Tribe to a 79-68 victory over North Carolina-Wilmington in an ECAC-South basketball game Thursday night.

The victory boosted the Tribe to 6-4 overall and 2-0 in the conference, while the Seahawks, who lost despite hitting 30 of 45 from the field, slid to 6-6 overall and 1-3 in the conference.

William & Mary held a 34-29 lead at halftime but the Seahawks tied the contest at 50-50 with 10:02 left to play.

Then Scott Trimble sank a pair of free throws and Herb Harris scored five points within a minute as the Tribe went on a 7-0 spurt to put the game out of reach.

Cieplicki's 24 points gave the senior guard 1,420 for his career, moving him past John Mahoney on the school's all-time scoring list. Kevin Richardson added 14 points and grabbed nine rebounds for the Tribe.

Junior guard Bobby Joe Springer paced the Seahawks with 21 points. He also dished out a game-high nine assists.

ECU Offer Said Coming Shortly

East Carolina University is expected to make an offer to former head football coach Ed Emory to settle his contract with the school within the next week.

Marvin Blount, Emory's attorney, met with an assistant attorney general of North Carolina earlier this week to discuss the terms of Emory's bid to receive more than the $50,000 lump sum settlement offered him by the university after he was fired in December. Emory had three years remaining on his contract with the school, calling for $50,000 each year. However, Emory has threatened suit to receive close to $430,000 he says he is out because of the firing.

The attorney general's office is now handling negotiations for the state, after ECU turned the suit over to it. Blount said his meeting with the assistant was Wednesday and lasted for about an hour and a half.

"They said they'd get back to us in about a week with an offer," Blount said. "I am hopeful that it will be something that will resolve the situation."

Blount had said earlier, when Emory first threatened action against the university, that Emory was not seeking the full $430,000, but would be willing to compromise. "I just hope this will put it all to rest," Blount added.

Blount also confirmed that Emory is currently in Florida, working as an unpaid consultant with the Memphis Showboats of the USFL in their pre-season training camp. Pepper Rodgers, who was head coach at Georgia Tech when Emory was hired from his staff to come to East Carolina, is the head coach of the Showboats, and asked Emory to come down and work with them, Blount said.

"He is not on staff nor is he being paid," Blount said. "But it was a good chance for him to get away from the stress of the situation here. It's just going to give him a chance to get his mind more settled and his emotions settled. It's mentally healthy for him to be there."

Marino Provides Some Excitement

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Miami quarterback Dan Marino, one of the stars of the show, provided the most excitement yet in what had been a torpid Super Bowl week.

Marino got dizzy.

It happened Thursday before the Dolphins practiced at the Oakland-Alameda Coliseum for their game Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers.

After going onto the field, Marino returned to the baseball dugout and asked team physician Charles E. Virgin, "Doc, could I still have jet lag?"

The Dolphins had been out here since Monday.

When asked why, Marino replied that he felt dizzy.

Virgin told Marino to relax for a few minutes, which he did. Then Marino returned to the field, began calisthenics and, according to the National Football League's pool report, went through the entire two-hour workout.

Later, in a two-page pool report, Dolphins trainer Bob Lundy said Marino came to the sideline and said he "felt a little funny." According to Chip Namias, the Dolphins' public-relations director, Marino has been taking an analgesic to combat stiffness and that he had taken one on an empty stomach.

Coach Don Shula said after the workout: "It was a good practice. Everyone is healthy." And the pool report said Marino laughed about the incident and said, "It's nothing. I feel fine."

The "nothing" created the biggest leading to Super Bowl XIX, because when word of incident spread among the estimated 2,000 media people here to report on every move and every thought of the Dolphins and 49ers, only three were privileged to be at the scene when Marino felt woozy — two pool photographers and one pool reporter.

The NFL limits the coverage to that, apparently to allow the teams to get ready in peace for what they came for — Sunday's game.

And, of the three working press on hand, only one actually witnessed this moment in Super Bowl history and heard the brief dialogue between the quarterback and the doctor, Joe Skipper, of Miami, an Associated Press pool photographer.

Pool reporter Clark Judge of the San Diego Tribune, who watched the workout, after the quarterback's dizzy spell, said that Marino "took most of the snaps and seemed to be in good spirits. He was joking around with his teammates. Nothing appeared visibly wrong with him."

Of the excitement he had created,

Marino said: "It's a good example of Super Bowl hype."

Later, according to the pool report, Marino on his way to a team meeting pretended to stumble as onlookers laughed. Asked if he had said anything about feeling dizzy, he said he had not, the pool reporter said.

The 49ers, who have spent the better part of the week at home, will be ensconced tonight in a Burlingame hotel, 20 miles from Stanford. The Dolphins, who have been housed in a hotel in downtown Oakland, are to move Saturday down the peninsula to a motel in Palo Alto, just a few minutes' ride from Stanford Stadium.

The 49ers planned to practice for about 20-30 minutes today, Coach Bill Walsh said. Shula said the Dolphins, who worked on the defense and the goal line and short-yardage offenses Thursday, planned a 90-minute workout today, concentrating on down-and-distance situations and the two-minute drill.

Wide receiver Dwight Clark and tight end Russ Francis, each with a pulled hamstring, and defensive end Dwaine Board, with a bruised shoulder, missed Thursday's 49ers workout — an hour-long session conducted in sweatsuits — to receive treatment for their injuries at the team's Redwood City training camp.

Three other 49ers — wide receiver Renaldo Nehemiah and running back-kick returner Carl Monroe, each with hamstring pulls, and Guy McIntyre, with a leg injury — worked out on a limited basis. Tony Nathan, the Dolphins' starting running back, left Miami's workout five minutes early with a slightly bruised leg. He was expected back at practice today.

The 49ers were to advise the league today whether they planned to place rookie reserve tight end John Frank, with a dislocated elbow, on injured reserve. If they do, they are expected to add reserve linebacker and special-teamer Ron Ferrari to the roster. Ferrari has been sidelined with a knee injury.

Both teams are expected to go through light "walk-through" workouts Saturday.

Sunday's Super Bowl is being billed as potentially the most explosive, a quarterback showdown between Marino and Joe Montana, the Most Valuable Player three years ago in the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., when San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 26-21 to win the NFL title.

Marino joined the Dolphins in 1983, the season following their 27-17 loss to the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVII down the coast in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

The team, in fact, is vastly different than the one which only two years ago fell one step short of winning its third Super Bowl. There are 12 new starters among the 24, including the kickers.

The 49ers, although not quite as dramatically different, nevertheless have six starters who weren't with the 1981 team that beat the Bengals in Super Bowl XVI.

The Miami offense is almost entirely new. The only holdover starters from two years ago are Nathan, center Dwight Stephenson and left tackle Jon Giesler.

"This has been one of the most enjoyable years of coaching that I've had," Shula said. "To see how these young guys have developed, come along, is very satisfying."

Walsh said the 1981 San Francisco team was, in effect, a melding of timeliness and collective overachieving.

Greg Briley

Briley Inks State Pact

LOUISBURG — Greg Briley, a former North Pitt High School baseball star, has signed a grant-in-aid to attend UNC State starting next fall.

Briley, who was his team's most valuable player for two seasons at North Pitt, was also a prominent member of the Pitt County American Legion baseball team before entering Lenoir County in 1983.

Last season, as a freshman, Briley hit .300 for the Hurricanes and cracked ten home runs. He also competed in the Valley League during the summer, hitting .315. He led the league in stolen bases with 32 of 37 and was selected to the All-Star team.

Earlier this month, he was selected in the second round of the regular phase of the baseball draft by the Los Angeles Dodgers, but elected to complete his college education at UNC State.

Briley narrowed his choices to North Carolina and South Carolina, before opting to continue his career with the Wolfpack following this spring's Hurricane season.

Pitt Rips Cape Fear

WINTERVILLE — Andrew Edwards scored 22 points in leading Pitt Community College to a 90-51 romp over Cape Fear Technical College last night in an Eastern Carolina Community College Athletic Conference basketball game.

Pitt led from the start, taking a 13-3 lead in the first ten minutes of play as both teams got off to a slow start. But Pitt caught fire from there, and after Cape Fear cut the lead back to nine, the Paladins shot away and built up a 44-29 lead at halftime.

In the second half, both teams again started cold, but Pitt built up a 52-40 lead with 11:19 to go and stretched that to 18 at 62-44 with eight minutes to play. After that, Pitt outscored Cape Fear, 28-7, the rest of the way.

"It was our best defensive effort of the year," Coach Charles Coburn said. "We're also starting to hit the boards better, and we're going to need that against Craven on Monday."

That game will be played at the A.G. Cox gym in Winterville at 7:30 p.m. and at halftime a special administration free throw shootout will be held.

In addition to Edwards' scoring, Pitt placed two others in double figures. Keith Clark had 16 and David Joyner hit 15. Cape Fear was led by Ken Wilson with a game-high 23, while Bill Kemp had 17.

Pitt is now 14-8 overall and 2-1 in ECCACC action. Craven, their Monday night foe, currently leads the league.

Ayden-Grifton Rolls Up 61-45 Win Over Conley

LITTLEFIELD — Doug Anderson hit 18 points and Marvin Smith added 16 as Ayden-Grifton's Chargers gained a 61-45 non-conference victory over D.H. Conley last night in a non-conference basketball game.

Conley's girls rolled up a 53-41 win in their game.

The first period of the boys' contest was tight with the two teams swapping points to a 10-10 deadlock at the horn. But the Chargers took control in the second period, outscoring the Vikings, 18-8. That left Ayden-Grifton up at the half, 28-18.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton stretched its lead to 46-33, and finished off the Vikes with a 15-12 margin in the final quarter.

Ricky Farrow led Conley with a game-high 19 points while Steve Mills added 10.

"I thought we played real well tonight except for our free throws," Charger coach Bob Murphrey said.

A-G hit only 11 of 27 at the line. "That could hurt us down the line if we don't improve," he added.

Their layoff (Conley hadn't played since January 8) may have made them a little flat, too, but I was pleased at the way we played on both ends of the court.

The victory boosted the A-G record to 11-3 overall while Conley dipped to 1-12.

In the girls' game, Conley rolled up a 15-9 lead in the first quarter, and was never in trouble after that. The Valkyries boosted their lead to 24-17 at halftime and rushed through an 18-9 period in the third. That gave them a comfortable 42-26 lead going into the last quarter. In that, A-G outhit Conley, 15-11.

Lisa Mills led Conley with 21 points while Rhonda Jackson added 10. Cynthia Hicks had 21 to lead Ayden-Grifton.

The Valkyries are now 5-9 overall while Ayden-Grifton is 1-13.

Conley returns to action tonight, playing host to White Oak in a Coastal Conference game. Ayden-Grifton, however, is idle until next Thursday night when it faces North Pitt in a home contest. That game is an important one in the Eastern Carolina Conference in that the two are unbeaten in league play.

"I would much rather keep playing than have a layoff like we have (because of exams)," Murphrey said. "I know all the county schools are in the same boat, but the next night (Friday), we have SouthWest Edgecombe, and they don't have the same rules we do. They keep playing."

Pitt County rules forbid practice during the exam period, while Edgecombe County rules allow their schools to continue practicing.

"I don't like layoffs this time of year," Murphrey said. "They don't do you any good. It's better to say in the same routine."

JV Game: Conley 55, Ayden-Grifton 44.

Spurs Finally Get Relief, 141-130

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

After a season's worth of frustration on the road, the San Antonio Spurs pulled into Kansas City at just the right moment.

"When you're 3-15 on the road, it always feels good to win one away from home," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said Thursday night after San Antonio defeated the Kansas City Kings 141-130 in a National Basketball Association game.

"We're playing better and we caught the Kings at the right time. The last time they were red hot. Now they've lost six in a row."

Gene Banks scored a season-high 32 points to lead San Antonio, which has an overall record of 18-20.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Detroit whipped New York 105-89 and Chicago tripped Cleveland 98-93.

"I didn't know it was going like that," Banks said of his high-scoring total. "The guys played exceptionally well all down the line. With me, I have to read off the other guys, get their passes and make sure I get them that assist."

Banks has been exceptionally efficient at converting teammates' passes into points this season. His 11-for-13 shooting performance against the Kings improved his field-goal percentage to .625, one of the best in the league.

Kansas City led 64-62 with 1:27 left in the second quarter before Banks scored six straight points to give San Antonio a 68-64 halftime edge. The Kings never quite caught up in the second half.

"We did not want to get back into a tie ball game — that was the key," said Banks, who also led San Antonio with 10 rebounds. "We were constantly keeping the lead and kept getting the ball and the basket."

George Gervin scored 15 of his 22 points to help San Antonio take a 101-90 lead in the third quarter, and after Gervin left the court with an eye injury, the Spurs extended their advantage to 15 points in the final period. A 17-6 streak by the Kings cut the deficit to 126-122, but a three-point play by John Paxson put the Spurs back in control.

"When we pulled within four points we missed and they got a layup and a foul shot," said Eddie Johnson, who led the Kings with 23 points. "That really did it."

Fitzsimmons, who coached Kansas City along with four other NBA teams, was asked if beating the Kings had special meaning for him.

"If it was a special night every time I beat one of my former teams, I'd be celebrating every night," he said.

Pistons 105, Knicks 89

Bill Laimbeer paced Detroit to its sixth victory in its last seven outings, while New York lost for the sixth straight time.

Laimbeer had 23 points and 12 rebounds and triggered a decisive 12-2 streak in the third quarter with two straight baskets. The Pistons led 66-49 after the surge, during which Kelly Tripucka scored six points.

Isiah Thomas, Detroit's leading scorer and the league's top assist man, hit only one of eight field-goal attempts and scored only two points, but he finished with 15 assists. Reserve guard Butch Carter led New York with 20 points.

Bulls 98, Cavaliers 93

Michael Jordan scored 25 points and Dave Corzine added a season-high 22 points and 12 rebounds to carry Chicago past Cleveland.

The Bulls led 73-63 late in the third quarter, but the Cavaliers rallied to cut the deficit to 89-85 with 2:25 remaining. But Corzine had 10 points in the final period to keep Chicago in front.

Roy Hinson led Cleveland with 19 points.

Jr. High Basketball

TARBORO — Tarboro-Edgecombe Academy's junior high school girls' basketball team gained a 22-17 victory over Greenville Christian yesterday.

Melissa Blake led TEA with 11 points, while Myra Locklear had nine to lead GCA.

GCA returns to action on Monday, hosting Wilson Christian.

BETHEL — Bethel Middle School swept a pair of junior high school basketball games from G.R. Whitfield yesterday.

The Bethel girls gained a 35-14 victory in their outing. Cathy Moore led Bethel with 12 while Clemmie Jenkins had eight. Lori Boyd led Whitfield with six points.

In the boys' game, Bethel took a 46-30 victory. Jeffrey Whitfield led Bethel with nine points, while Marcus Hines, William Morning and Randy House each had eight. Whitfield was led by Douglas Telfair with 12 and Anthony Perry with eight.

The Bethel boys are now 3-0 in league play while the girls are 2-1.

Cline Sparks...

Jackets hammered Monmouth College.

"We just happened to come out and play hard and I think that was why we jumped up on them," Price said.

Price's 14 assists broke the previous school mark of 13 set by Steve Sherback in a game against Oklahoma City on Feb. 23, 1973.

The biggest beneficiary of Price's passing was John Salley, who scored a career-high 24 points, including 10 slam dunks in his 19 of 26 shooting from the field.

The victory lifted the Jackets to 12-3 for the year and Monmouth, which missed its first 10 field goal attempts, left town.

Mason McBride paced the Hawks with 21 points, hitting 4 of 12 floor shots. Rich Pass had 16 for the Hawks.

Tech set a school record for field goal percentage at 71.9 percent, hitting 41 of 57 shots. The Jackets missed only six shots in 29 attempts in the second half.

"Price and Salley played excellent," Coach Ron Konegay of Monmouth said, tabbing Tech the best team the Hawks had faced this year.

Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said, "We really need to build on something. We played very aggressive and did some nice things out there and I thought that's why it turned out to be a very easy game."

Wake Forest has a message for the rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We just wanted some respect because we were picked at the bottom of the league," forward Mark Cline said after Wake Forest made its message a little clearer Thursday night by beating second-ranked Duke 91-89 in overtime.

Cline scored six of his 12 points in the extra period as the Deamon Deacons won at Duke. Still, Cline said he thought Wake Forest still has a way to go before getting the recognition it craves.

"It hurts. We want to prove that we are a better team than people thought," he said. "We think we have a good team, but we will have to win the conference to prove it."

The loss was the second straight for Duke, both of them coming in overtime. The Blue Devils lost 78-76 at Maryland Monday night.

In other Top 20 college basketball games, Iowa tripped No. 19 Michigan State 77-59, while No. 9 Kansas stopped Iowa State 76-72, No. 11 Illinois topped Wisconsin 78-67, No. 12 Louisiana Tech beat North Texas State 68-50, No. 16 Virginia Commonwealth tripped North Carolina-Charlotte 85-75, No. 17 Georgia Tech shelled Monmouth 96-66 and No. 20 Tulsa defeated Illinois State 79-69 in overtime.

Wake Forest's Delaney Rudd sent the game into overtime with a driving jumper with four seconds left in regulation that made it 73-73. Duke had led 60-53, with 8:30 remaining in the second half.

Cline connected on a 16-foot jumper shot just 12 seconds into the extra session and reserve forward Charlie Thomas added a layup to give Wake Forest a 77-73 lead.

Wake Forest clinched its sixth straight victory by making 12 of 16 free-throw tries in overtime. Wake Forest is now 11-4 overall and 3-1 in the ACC.

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski offered no excuses.

"They just played harder for longer periods of time," he said. "Their kids made big shots for them."

Top Twenty
Greg Stokes scored 27 points and visiting Iowa led the entire way to beat No. 19 Michigan State in Big Ten action. Forward Al Lorenzen fueled an 8-0 burst with six points that gave the Hawkeyes a commanding 48-35 lead with 10:59 left in the game.

Iowa kept its lead by making 23 of 27 foul shots in the second half. Lorenzen, who finished with 15 points, made nine of 10 free throws in the final 20 minutes.

The victory raised Iowa's record to 14-3 and 3-1 in the Big Ten.

All five starters for Virginia Commonwealth reached double figures and the Rams led the whole game to trip North Carolina-Charlotte in a Sun Belt matchup.

Rolando Lamb scored 20 points and Calvin Duncan added 18 for the visiting Rams, who made 63.6 percent of their shots from the floor.

VCU, 12-1, made its first four shots in racing to an 8-2 lead in the opening three minutes.

Monmouth missed its first 10 shots from the floor while Georgia Tech surged to a 15-2 lead. Salley and Price each had 14 points by halftime in boosting the margin to 45-24.

Senior guard Steve Harris scored 10 of his game-high 26 points in overtime to lead No. 20 Tulsa over Illinois State in a Missouri Valley Conference game.

Tulsa fell behind early in the game and did not regain the lead until Harris made a 15-foot shot with two seconds left in regulation to give the visiting Golden Hurricane a 67-64 lead. Tulsa is now 13-2 overall and 4-0 atop the MVC standings.

Benoit Benjamin, a 7-foot junior, scored 43 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked 10 shots to lead Creighton past Southern Illinois 96-85 in a Missouri Valley Conference game. Benjamin made 18 of 23 shots from the floor.

Inmate Strikes MacDonald In Texas Federal Prison

BASTROP, Texas (AP) — Jeffrey MacDonald, who is serving three life terms in the murders of his pregnant wife and two daughters, was under medical observation after being attacked by an inmate at the minimum security federal prison near here.

"He's being held for observation in the prison medical facility, although he has no apparent injuries," Marty Vogler, manager of the cell block where MacDonald lives at the Federal Correctional Institute, said Thursday.

MacDonald, a former Army Green Beret is serving three consecutive life terms for the 1970 murders at Fort Bragg.

The case was dramatized in a television miniseries based on the book "Fatal Vision" by journalist Joe McGinnis.

Vogler said MacDonald was struck from behind in his cellblock shortly before noon Monday by another inmate he was unable to identify.

Vogler said prison officials have also been unable to identify the assailant, but that an investigation is continuing.

County Commissioners Say Confident Revenue Available

HIGH POINT (AP) — The president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners said he's optimistic that local governments will not be left to pick up the tab from Gov. Jim Martin's proposed tax cuts for business and investors.

"We look forward to working with Governor Martin and feel that, as a former county commissioner, he is especially sensitive to our needs and concerns," association President James A. Weathers said Thursday after Martin addressed the group at a luncheon closing the association's annual two-day conference.

Martin, a former Mecklenburg County commissioner and former association president, told commissioners from North Carolina's 100 counties that the state would make up any money the counties would lose from a repeal of the state's inventory and intangibles taxes.

"I will assure you again that I do not want you to have to raise property taxes to make up for the loss of these revenues," Martin said.

"Throughout my campaign, this has been a proposal I would make only as a way of providing strategic tax relief but coupled with replenishing those revenues one way or another so that counties and municipal governments would not have to face this difficult choice."

The association voted on Wednesday not to support Martin's proposals to repeal the taxes unless counties were assured that the money — $291.3 million last year — would be made up by the state.

Just before Martin arrived Thursday, the delegates adopted a resolution urging the Legislature to delay action on any tax cuts or the commitment of surplus funds until replacement funds to the counties were certain.

Martin, citing a projected increase of 12.5 percent in state revenues for this fiscal year, said that state surplus funds could compensate the counties, as well as providing for state pay increases.

"I'm convinced that because of the growth of state revenues, we have available revenues not only to provide for replacing those taxes, over a period of time, but at the same time to provide for pay increases for our state employees and our teachers so that they're not left out year to year," Martin said.

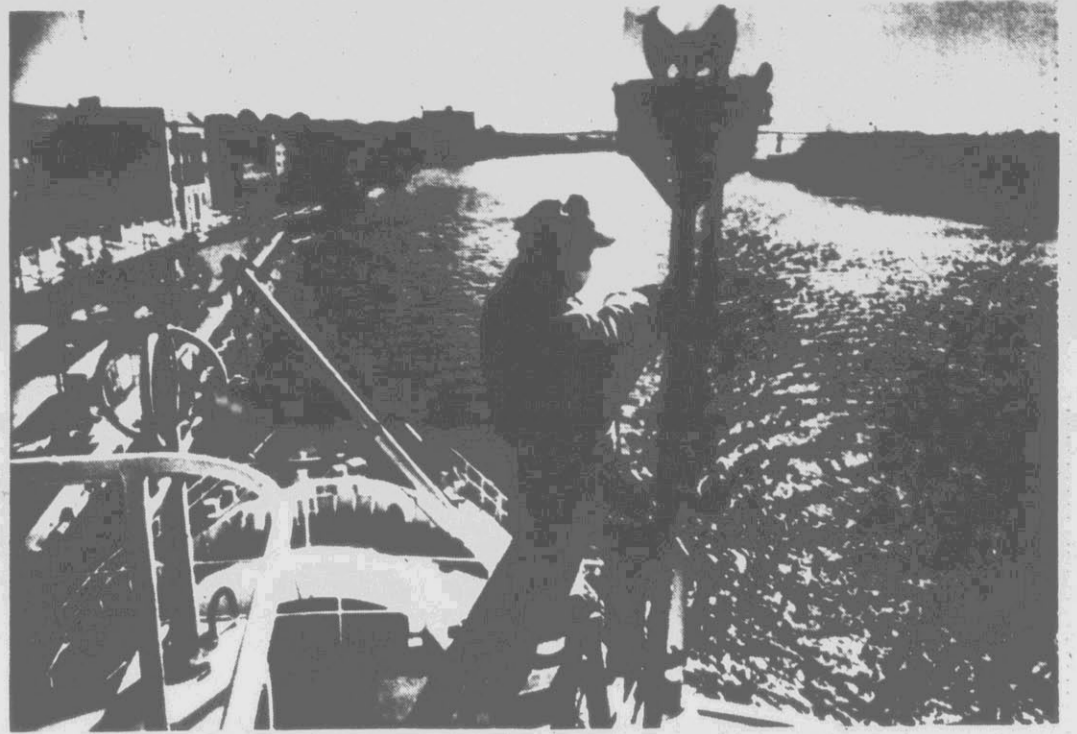

But he left open any specific proposals for reimbursing counties the $66 million provided by the intangibles tax and the $225 million by the inventory tax.

"I have no preconditions as to how the replacement is to be done," Martin said. "I don't have a deep-seated conviction that it has to be done a certain kind of way. The taxpayers themselves ought to have some say."

The inventory tax is a property tax on the inventory of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. The intangibles tax is an annual levy on stocks, bonds and bank deposits.

Martin renewed his campaign pledge to repeal the state's sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs, a tax that he said hits the elderly and the poor hardest.

Editor Produces Hunt-Helms Book

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — For two years, retired newspaper editor William D. Snider chronicled the battle for the U.S. Senate between Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, a battle he says became "a Southern fried back-alley brawl."

Snider's book, "Helms and Hunt: The North Carolina Senate Race, 1984," will be off the presses by the first of February.

Snider, who was asked to write the book by the University of North Carolina Press, said he took the book as his first project after retiring as editor and vice president of the Greensboro News & Record.

"I took it on as sort of a study about North Carolina politics," Snider said Thursday. "I had started with the idea of it being a non-judgemental account and proceeded with the idea I would inject myself into it as little as possible. It was interesting to do it without any preconceived notions of who would win."

The race, with a price tag in excess of $24 million, was the most expensive Senate campaign in history, and one of the most bitter in North Carolina politics.

"It was a long, mean and extravagantly expensive campaign," Snider said. "In many ways it was a struggle for the soul of North Carolina, but it was also a southern fried back-alley brawl."

Snider, who had covered state politics for 30 years, began tracing the early careers of both Hunt and Helms soon after he retired in 1982. He finished the last chapter in mid-December.

"I had known Jesse Helms since 1948...when he was a young radio reporter in Raleigh," Snider said. "I went to school with his wife, Dot. And I've known Jim Hunt from the beginning of his political career. I was able to visit the families, and talk to both of them. I found that helped a lot."

The book was written and edited in sections so it could be ready for publication soon after the campaign ended.

"I did their early lives and careers some time ago," Snider said. "I caught up with the campaign by the end of the summer."

"It was fascinating to go back and look at the records of both men," he said. "They are alike in many ways — they both came from rural backgrounds and had deep religious convictions. And they both are astute politicians."

Woman Kills Self In Police Cruiser

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Massachusetts woman who arrived in North Carolina just weeks ago killed herself in an Asheville police car Thursday after being stopped for questioning in connection with three hit-and-run wrecks on the same day.

Cindy Jo Klingerman, 32, who had lived in Asheville a short time, shot herself in the head with a .38-caliber handgun at 12:30 p.m., authorities said.

The incident occurred in a supermarket parking lot after police officer R.D. Riddle located a car suspected in three hit-and-run accidents Thursday in Asheville, authorities said.

Ms. Klingerman's 1973 Mercury Comet had stopped near the entrance to the parking lot with a flat tire and a leaking radiator, Capt. Will Annarino said. Shoppers near the crippled vehicle pointed Ms. Klingerman out to police as she walked across the parking lot.

Annarino said Ms. Klingerman told Riddle she was going to a telephone booth to call her mother to ask about insurance. Riddle told her to get into the back seat of his cruiser.

Riddle and Ms. Klingerman drove back to her car. Riddle was standing beside it, filling out an accident report, when he heard a gunshot, Annarino said. He ran back to his car to find Ms. Klingerman slumped over in the seat.

Departmental policy dictates searches only of people under arrest or whose behavior presents obvious danger, Annarino said.

Ms. Klingerman gave no indication she might be suicidal, Annarino said. "There was no indication she was anything other than an accident victim," he said.

Two of the hit-and-run accidents involved the same car. The first occurred at 12:24 p.m. Thursday when a car matching the description of Ms. Klingerman's Mercury struck a vehicle driven by Jeffrey Lane Plemmons, 21, of Asheville, said state Highway Patrol Trooper J.K. Reece.

Reece said the Mercury clipped the Plemmons vehicle after leaving a motel "in a hurry."

Reece said Plemmons followed the Mercury but lost it. He was heading back when the Mercury struck his car again.

Plemmons dropped out at that point, but another witness followed Ms. Klingerman's car to the supermarket parking lot, Reece said, passing on the way another hit-and-run in which a Mercury was reportedly involved.

Melissa Ward said she was traveling when a car came barreling toward her in her lane.

Ms. Ward, 19, of Asheville, said she tried to pull into a nearby parking lot, but her vehicle was hit head-on by the car. The car continued on, and Ms. Ward called police.

Police were already on the lookout for the Mercury, however. Ms. Klingerman was first identified through the car's license plate, which indicated she was from Springfield, Mass.

Annarino notified next of kin there. According to Annarino, Ms. Klingerman's mother said her daughter, who had been in North Carolina at least four weeks, "just travels. She'd been all over the country."

Coldest Weather Forecast

By The Associated Press

The coldest air of the season will invade North Carolina this weekend, with highs remaining below the freezing mark by Sunday.

Low temperatures tonight will drop into the mid and upper 20s over the western sections of the state with low and mid 30s in the east, according to the National Weather Service. Highs will be in the 40s Saturday with some 30s for the northern mountains and low 50s for the southeast.

But the temperatures will turn bitterly cold.

A very cold mass of air now in Canada is behind a cold front that trails this low into western Canada. This air will begin to invade the state Saturday night bringing the coldest air for North Carolina this season.

A weak ridge of high pressure over the Appalachian Mountains is now in control of the weather over North Carolina. This allowed skies to clear during the night over many sections, which in turn helped some rather dense fog form this morning.

Clouds should return to the state again during the day as low pressure moving into the Great Lakes states help spread moisture back over North Carolina.

High temperatures Thursday ranged from the 30s over northern sections of the state to a 60-degree reading at Wilmington. During the night temperatures dropped into the upper 20s and 30s as fog developed over the Piedmont.

Asheville Couple Warms Up To Solar Home, Tax Credits

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Mike and Claudia Nix of Asheville warmed up to the idea of solar heat at the end of 1982, but others who want to follow them may want to take advantage of tax credits that end this year.

This is the last year the 40 percent federal tax credits apply. North Carolina credits of 25 percent have no expiration date so far.

That's a combined 65 percent tax credit, not a deduction, Nix emphasized. Sixty-five percent of the equipment and installation costs of active solar heating systems can be subtracted from taxes after all other deductions are figured in.

With the credits and money he and his wife Claudia are saving on electricity, he figures his sunspace and solar-heated water and spa, installed two years ago, will pay for itself in two more years.

And then the heat will be free. "Look at this reading," Nix said this week, pointing to a thermometer in the back door entrance to his house. There, in the coldest part of the 60-year-old house, the farthest point away from the heat-generating "sunspace," the temperature was a balmy 72 degrees. Outside it was 21 degrees.

"I can live with that," Nix said. Recent years have seen a surge in the numbers of North Carolinians who, like the Nixes, have heat and hot water to spare. The N.C. Department of Commerce estimates that there are 7,000 solar-heated homes in North Carolina, with 2,200 being added every year.

Some of those create heat without the use of any other energy source, but the Nixes' house isn't among them. The water in the closed-loop system is driven up to four solar collectors on the roof by a small electric pump.

But once heated, the water filters back down into an 82-gallon tank in the basement. The Nix's domestic hot water is created as it runs through a separate copper coil inside the tank, heating up to 140 degrees before emptying into a super-insulated holding tank.

The sunspace faces south — to get the maximum sunlight — and is a 16-by-20-by-3-foot room walled with glass on the outside and dark brick on the inside.

The brick wall absorbs the sunlight through the glass, and the heat is transferred into the 2,000-square foot house through windows that open onto an enclosed porch, which in turn opens into the Nixes' living room. During the summer, the heat is vented out of the sunspace.

But no solar system can provide heat 100 percent of the time, according to Dave Currence of Solar Contracting Services in Asheville.

It's good to have a backup, he said. The Nixes have oil-generated steam, the same system that prompted them to go solar.

Fuel oil was inexpensive when they bought the house in 1970, but the price of oil skyrocketed during the oil embargo of the early 1970s.

Forced to scrimp on heat, the Nixes shivered through the 1970s. The turning point occurred during the cold Christmas of 1982.

Their dog was asleep on the porch, in the sunlight pouring in through one of four large windows. In an effort to get warm, the Nixes joined the animal in the room, shutting the French doors behind them. Within minutes, they were sweating, Nix said.

That's when they decided to go solar.

The Internal Revenue Service doesn't allow tax credits for the sunspace since it isn't used only for creating heat. But the Nixes aren't upset because they have all that heat, enough to warm even the back door alcove in the rear of the house.

"What can I say?" he said. "It's wonderful to come home."

Investigators Still Seek Cause Of Hotel Poisoning

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — City and county investigators have been reduced "almost to grasping at straws," one county official said, as efforts continue to determine why 30 people were sickened by carbon monoxide poisoning at a Winston-Salem hotel.

By Thursday, only six of the victims were still hospitalized from the Wednesday night poisoning at the Ramada Inn on U.S. 52. Four of those are hotel employees who were taken to Duke University Medical Center Wednesday night for special treatment to clear their blood of the poison and were in satisfactory condition Thursday. Two others were in satisfactory condition at Forsyth Memorial Hospital.

The hotel remained closed to guests last night as two engineers from Research Engineering Inc. in Research Triangle Park went over the first floor with chemical detectors, trying to find the source of the toxic gas.

Dean Davis, director of operations of the hotel, said Thursday that he did not know when the hotel would reopen. He said that would depend on what the engineers are able to find.

Though carbon monoxide, an odorless, colorless gas that can be deadly, was first thought to be the culprit, investigators said they found no trace of the substance in tests Thursday. "We are kind of puzzled about it," said George Laroussini, program manager of the Forsyth

County Environmental Affairs Department. "It could have dissipated by the time samples were taken."

Authorities said a cause might be determined today and hospital officials reported finding concentrations of carbon monoxide in the blood of some patients.

Dr. Ralph B. Leonard, N.C. Baptist Hospital emergency room physician, said one victim had a carbon monoxide blood concentration of 41 percent. Normal carbon monoxide blood concentration is about 1 percent, he said.

Delmer Shelton, a physician's assistant at Duke, said Thursday that carbon monoxide levels in the victims were "very alarming, and if untreated, it could have been fatal." Shelton said there was no doubt that at least four of the victims "really were in serious straits."

Edward Cash of the city-county Office of Emergency Management said Thursday night that the private engineers had discovered nothing new.

"They have been up on the roof to check the ventilation intake, and they have been checking specific areas such as the air vents, but so far they have turned up nothing," he said.

Cash said that most of the 17 stricken hotel workers and guests were in the lobby or the restaurant when they began feeling the effects, although people also became ill in the kitchen and in Cinclair's Lounge. But he said that most of them were employees who had been in several areas of the first floor throughout the evening.

But he said that it was possible that the people had breathed the gas in one area and moved to another before feeling the effect.

Carol Moore, a cocktail waitress in the lounge, said that she and the bartender felt ill for a while that evening, and that shortly after 7 p.m. it seemed that everyone was getting sick.

"I felt like there was a ringing inside my head, and Betty (Manalo, the bartender) said she felt like she was going to faint," Miss Moore said. "I saw a woman slump at the podium in the lobby and then the firemen with the mask on came in and told me to get everyone out."

She said that she smelled nothing before becoming ill.

Robert R. Fulp, director of the county Environmental Affairs Department, said it was unusual to have so many severe reactions to carbon monoxide in a confined area without an identifiable source.

"That much carbon monoxide has to come, usually, from some combustion source — a problem with a heating system or something — but normally in such cases you get smoke or the smell of something burning," he said.

"The plan now is for us to go through the literature (on carbon monoxide) and see what we can put together," he said. "We are reduced almost to grasping at straws for now."

MY SWEETNESS AND DELIGHT!

NAOMI (WHICH MEANS SWEETNESS AND DELIGHT), THE WIFE OF ELIMELECH AND THE MOTHER-IN-LAW OF RUTH, WAS A MEMBER OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH. WHEN SHE FOLLOWED HER HUSBAND AND TWO SONS TO SOJOURN IN MOAB BECAUSE OF THE PREVAILING FAMINE, RAMPANT IN JUDAH, SHE CERTAINLY WAS NOT AWARE OF THE KIND OF DAUGHTER-IN-LAW SHE WOULD ACQUIRE. BUT RUTH, THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW, WHO CHOSE TO STICK WITH NAOMI, AFTER NAOMI'S HUSBAND AND TWO SONS HAD DIED IN MOAB, AND FOLLOW HER BACK TO BETHLEHEM RATHER THAN GO HOME TO HER OWN PEOPLE, WAS WITH HER WHEN THE BETHLEHEMITES WELCOMED HER BACK WITH THIS SARCASTIC REMARK, "IS THIS NAOMI?" AND NAOMI MADE HER FAMOUS REMARK, "CALL ME NOT NAOMI, CALL ME MARA." TO PARAPHRASE THE BIBLICAL LANGUAGE OF THAT TIME, "CALL ME NOT 'SWEETNESS,' CALL ME 'BITTERNESS.'" (RUTH 1:20) NAOMI'S ONLY SOLACE IN THIS TIME OF GREAT TRAGEDY, WAS RUTH, WHO WAS TO BE AN ANCESTRESS OF KING DAVID!

The Lord thy God... A Kind and Loving Father.

Religion To Hold More Prominent Spot In Reagan's 2nd Inauguration

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Religious elements are to play a bigger part in the inauguration of President Reagan this time, with the sequence of formalities sprinkled with reverence and worship.

Evangelist Billy Graham, a long-time friend of Reagan's and an occasional overnight guest at the White House, is to preach the main sermon for the event at an ecumenical service Sunday morning.

That takes place at the Washington Cathedral, an Episcopal center, where about 2,800 mostly invited guests are to participate, along with Reagan, Vice President George Bush, their wives, Cabinet officers and members of Congress.

"O Lord, our governor, whose glory is in all the world, we commend this nation to thy merciful care, that being guided by thy providence, we may dwell secure in thy peace," goes a prayer for the service to be led by Washington's Episcopal Bishop John T. Walker.

"Grant to our president, Ronald, and to our vice president, George, wisdom and strength to know and to do they will. Fill them with the love of truth and righteousness, and make them ever mindful of their calling to serve this people in thy fear."

That hour-long service of robed processions, Scripture readings, hymns, the cathedral's orchestra and male choir, the Howard University Chorale and a U.S. Marine brass ensemble is just part the religious aspects of the inaugural.

At Reagan's swearing-in ceremony four years ago, only one minister, the Rev. Donn D. Moomaw, pastor of the Belair Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, offered a prayer, but this time, and ecumenical foursome are to do so.

Before, "it was one man all across the board, but this time we're spreading it around," says a White House press spokesman, Tucker Eskew. "It was something the president wanted done."

Before that public swearing-in at noon on Monday, Reagan, who has blamed security requirements for his recent irregular church-going, is to attend a Monday morning prayer service at St. John's Episcopal Church.

That church on Lafayette Park near the White House is led by the Rev. John C. Harper.

Shortly afterward at the swearing-in ceremony at the Capitol, the invocation is to be given by the Rev. Timothy S. Healy, a Roman Catholic and president of Georgetown University, with other prayers by Rabbi Alfred Gottschalk, president of Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, and Moomaw.

The Rev. Peter J. Gomes, a Baptist and chaplain at Harvard University, is to offer the benediction.

However, the main religious feature of the inaugural activities comes at the Washington Cathedral service where Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic ministers also take part.

The occasion has been titled, "A national prayer service in thanksgiving for the 50th presidential inaugural," which opens with a processional hymn, "God of Our Fathers."

The presiding minister, Walker is to lead an opening litany with the congregation responding, and then he reads from Psalm 100:

"Make a joyful noise to the Lord, all the lands. Serve the Lord with gladness... For the Lord is good; his steadfast love endures forever, and his faithfulness to all generations."

Rabbi Leonard S. Cahan of Washington's Congregation Har Shalom, reads the Old Testament Lesson from Deuteronomy 10:17-21, which goes in part:

"For the Lord your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great, the mighty... who is not partial... He executes justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the sojourner... You shall fear the Lord your God; you shall serve him and cleave to him..."

Washington's Roman Catholic Archbishop James A. Hickey reads the New Testament lesson from First Corinthians 12:4-11, which goes in part:

"Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of service, but the same Lord, and there are varieties of working, but it is the same God who inspires them all in every one."

"To each is given the manifestation of the Spirit for the common good... All these are inspired by one and the same Spirit, who apportions to each one individually as he wills."

The Cathedral provost, the Rev. Charles Perry, leads a prayer for "the people of our country," which goes in part:

"Almighty God... we humbly beseech thee that we may prove ourselves a people mindful of thy favor, and glad to do thy will. Bless our land with honorable industries, sound learning and pure manners. Save us from violence, discord and confusion, from pride and arrogance, and from every evil way.

"Defend our liberties and fashion into one united people the multitudes brought hither of many kindred and tongues. Indue with the spirit of wisdom those to whom in thy name we entrust the authority of government, that there may be justice and peace at home, and through obedience to thy law, we may show forth thy praise among the nations of the earth."

NOW Plans Vigils At Abortion Clinics

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Alabama abortion counselor, whose clinic is one of more than two dozen planning overnight vigils this weekend, says she won't surrender to anti-abortion terrorism despite injuries she suffered during a protest.

Kathryn Wood, a counselor at the Women's Community Health Center in Huntsville, and others from clinics around the nation spoke Thursday in support of vigils planned by the National Organization for Women at 25 clinics in 18 states. The vigils, to begin tonight, come just before the 12th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

NOW says the overnight stays by women supporting the right to abortion will "signal our determination to stand up to the terrorists and the bullies" who bombed or burned nearly 30 clinics last year.

But some of the clinic workers also said the bomb throwers have taken their toll.

Ms. Wood, who says she underwent surgery for her injuries, told reporters of anonymous letters to her neighbors calling her a baby-killer and of bomb threats on her home. She told of her children being attacked at school by other children and being insulted by some of their teachers.

And she told of fear.

"The closer I get to the clinic in the morning, the more my heart races," she said. "We know we will be verbally assaulted as soon as we get out of our cars, called Nazis, murderers and baby killers. We are afraid..."

In mid-June, a Catholic priest entered Ms. Wood's clinic with red paint that he hoped to pour on surgical equipment used in abortions.

"I was afraid for our patients' lives, and tried to block his way," Ms. Wood said. "He threw me against a wall and I blacked out. Injuries to my neck have already required surgery."

"I keep reading that the anti-abortionists haven't hurt anyone," she said. "The newspapers in Alabama were more interested in the intruder than in the pain I have suffered. Despite my physical injuries and the fear that our clinic staff feels, we are absolutely determined not to give in."

"The psychological harassment has reached levels that are absolutely intolerable," said Judy Goldsmith, NOW president. When clinic workers and their patients are threatened, she said, "That is not free speech. That is illegal harassment."

Ms. Goldsmith said the vigils by NOW members will demonstrate, that they are not surrendering.

Networks Propose Uniform Hours For Voting

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The major television networks want the polls to close at the same time across the nation during presidential elections so that residents of Western states won't learn the probable winner before voting.

Two congressmen pledged Thursday to work for such legislation, saying their job was made easier by network agreements not to characterize voting trends or project election results in a particular state before polls close there.

Reps. Al Swift, D-Wash., and William M. Thomas, R-Calif., told a news conference that adjusting voting hours to permit uniform poll shutdowns appeared to be the least burdensome way to address the problem. But they also promised to look at other options.

Swift is chairman and Thomas the ranking member of a House Administration Committee elections task force that will conduct hearings on the subject.

The congressmen said the networks' promise not to project or even characterize exit poll information before closing time was crucial to gaining passage of a bill.

The networks' promise was to take effect immediately for all elections.

Coupled with the uniform closing time, the pledge means the exit poll information from voters' own states would not reach any Americans before they voted.

Without the pledge, they said, Congress would not pass the legislation. By projecting winners before polls closed, networks could defeat the uniform closing concept, they pointed out.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC

News, said in a statement, "If Congress will act swiftly, we need never again have an election in this country where controversy arises over election results from one section, possibly influencing voters in another section. A nationwide poll closing time is the answer."

President Edward M. Joyce of CBS News said his network "has long advocated a uniform poll closing law as the only realistic solution to an issue that modern technology has produced."

Lawrence K. Grossman, president of the NBC News Division, said there are "considerable advantages of a uniform poll closing time," but cautioned, "there may well be news releases, interviews or statements by candidates, high campaign officials or others that...should be reported in a timely manner."

Swift said chances of the legislation were "a little better than 50-50" for uniform poll closing legislation.

But Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., who has been chairman of the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee, commented, "I question whether it is necessary to rewrite every state's election laws and ask an entire nation to alter its voting habits and traditions to accommodate a handful of network executives."

However, Wirth commended the networks for making their pledge to Congress.

In 1984, legislators such as Wirth urged the networks to refrain from characterizing and projecting the outcome of elections while polls remained open. ABC was the only network to agree not to use exit polls for an early characterization on its evening newscast. CBS and NBC used stronger language foretelling a landslide victory for President Reagan.

Ad Shows Fetus Smoking Cigarette

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — An anti-smoking message depicting a simulated fetus puffing on a cigarette has been rejected by CBS and NBC as too graphic, but ABC considers the public service spot important and will broadcast it later this month.

The American Cancer Society's 30-second announcement, costing $25,000 to produce, shows a fetus (actually a plastic puppet) inside a bubble-like sac. The fetus clutches a cigarette in its tiny right hand as the narrator asks, "Would you give a cigarette to your unborn child?"

Then, just as the narrator says, "You do, every time you smoke when you're pregnant," the fetus draws the cigarette to its mouth, inhales and lets out a puff of smoke.

"We designed that spot to reach a specific audience — pregnant women and women in their childbearing years," said Jerry Angert, director of broadcasting for the Cancer Society. "There's no doubt that this is the strongest, most powerful message we've put out. We think we did it tastefully and professionally."

Dr. Alan Wurtzel, ABC's vice president for broadcast standards and practices, agreed. He said the network evaluated the spot routinely for taste, appropriateness and substantiation and found it met ABC's standards. ABC will begin showing it the week of Jan. 28, Wurtzel said.

"I know the message is important, powerful, unusual and attention-grabbing, but it's not inappropriate," said Wurtzel. "It's unusual and very startling. What you're seeing is a visual metaphor. Everybody knows fetuses don't smoke, so frankly I don't understand all the attention this is getting."

"No one's demonstrated in what way it's offensive," he added. "I think cancer is offensive."

Both CBS and NBC say that this is the first American Cancer Society message they have rejected.

As opposed to commercials, public-service announcements are free messages, often related to health and safety issues, that the networks and local stations broadcast, often late at night after prime viewing hours. For 1983, CBS says it carried $170 million worth of public-service messages, many from the American Cancer Society.

George Schweitzer, vice president of communications for the CBS Broadcast Group, said CBS' program practices department felt the controversial anti-smoking spot was "far too graphic for presentation on CBS." He said one concern was the message would pop up without any warning, as opposed to footage of fetuses that has appeared in news and science broadcasts.

"The viewer knows the context of those shows," said Schweitzer. "In this case, the viewer wouldn't be prepared for it."

NBC's broadcast standards department thought the message "might be offensive to some people," said Curt Block, NBC's vice president for press information. "We also have a policy that PSAs (public-service announcements) have to advocate the positive side of an issue; this did not."

CBS also has rejected the spot for its five owned-and-operated stations, while NBC is letting its five controlled stations decide for themselves.

Angert said the message is currently being offered to network-affiliated stations, independent stations and cable outlets. "We won't know for three weeks how many stations will commit to using it," he said.

Angert said the Cancer Society had no anger or animosity against CBS or NBC. "We respect their decision," he said. "We'll live with it."

But Joseph Vogt, the young filmmaker who produced the spot without the help of any of the Cancer Society's usual high-powered advertising agencies, felt CBS and NBC were being hypocritical.

"There's so much violence and sex on TV, why can't they show something like this," said Vogt. "It's just graphic. Every once in awhile America needs to be punched in the gut."

Vogt, 28, from San Francisco, was looking to break into the business and start a film company, so he decided a powerful public-service message might be noticed by the industry. (Recently, he did rock star Rick Springfield's scary music video, "Bop 'Til You Drop.")

Eye Center Uses Tiny Tacks To Repair Retina

DURHAM (AP) — A surgical instrument company is producing tiny stainless steel tacks developed by surgeons at Duke University Eye Center that are used to repair badly torn and folded retinas, officials say.

The tacks offer hope to some patients whose cases had been considered hopeless, they say.

"The amount of sight I have has doubled at least and seems to be improving," said an Alabama man whose retina was repaired using the tacks. "I can pick up colors now and movement."

The patient, who asked not to be identified, said in a prepared statement issued by the eye center Wednesday that an accident caused his retina to tear away from the eye wall and fold in on itself. Several operations to flatten the retina and reattach it were unsuccessful.

In December, doctors at Duke unfolded the torn retina and attached it to the wall of the eye using five of the tacks, each 2.7 millimeters long.

"The retina around the optic nerve-head in the eye was totally detached and balled up like a fist," said Dr. Robert Machemer, chairman of ophthalmology and director of the eye center. "In the operating room, we were able to unfold the membrane and flatten it, but each time it refolded. It simply wouldn't stay in place."

Machemer and Dr. Eugene de Jaun used the tacks to hold the retina in place and then injected silicone oil into the eye to give it additional support. Machemer said the tacks are left in the eye until the retina heals and then are removed.

The tack and two case histories are described in an article scheduled for publication in the March issue of the American Journal of Opthalmology.

The tack was produced by a special laboratory at the eye center which develops and refines microsurgical instruments.

"The instruments have to pass through a one-millimeter opening in the eye," said research instrument designer Dyson Hickingbotham. "That's the size of the incision the surgeon makes to work inside it."

Hickingbotham made prototypes of the tack under high magnification on a watchmaker's lathe.

"We felt we could improve on the design of a ceramic retinal tack made in Japan by making it easier to insert and remove," he said. The tack has a blade-like tip and a ball head that can be grasped from any direction by a specially designed applicator inside the eye.

Implanted Device Aids Heart Beat

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University Medical Center has become the first in North Carolina to begin implanting miniaturized defibrillators that automatically deliver electric shocks to the heart of patients who are prone to suffer potentially fatal arrhythmias.

Arrhythmias are rapid or erratic heartbeats.

When the pulse rate soars to a dangerous level, the pacemaker-like device automatically delivers an electric shock to the heart, which can correct the irregular heartbeat or start the heart beating again if it has stopped, according to Dr. Lawrence D. German, assistant professor of cardiology and director of the Duke Clinical Electrophysiology Lab.

German said the unit is an implantable version of standard defibrillators found in hospitals and many ambulances.

"Arrhythmias are responsible for a large percentage of sudden cardiac death, a major national health problem," he said. "Typically, the victim can appear very healthy. He may not have any symptoms of an impending attack. He just suddenly keels over."

The device is battery operated, weighs about one-eighth of a pound and can fit in the palm of the hand. It is usually set to activate when it detects an abnormal heart rhythm at a pulse rate of about 160, German said.

"By the time the defibrillator activates, the victim is usually unconscious," German said.

A 57-year-old Fayetteville man was the first patient to receive an implant at Duke.

German said about 400 heart patients nationwide have had the defibrillator implanted since it was first used in 1980. In addition to Duke, about 25 hospitals around the country and only one other in the Southeast — in Miami — have Food and Drug Administration approval to implant the device, he said.

Man Who Had Heart-Lung Operation Has Apartment

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Heart-lung transplant patient Vann Matthews of Gastonia must continue to live near Johns Hopkins Hospital so he can have a weekly check-up, but he has been allowed to move back to his Towson, Md. apartment.

"He's doing very well, and his last biopsy was good," hospital spokeswoman Karen Helsley said after Matthews was released Thursday. "He still will be coming in for his Monday biopsies, so he'll have to continue to live near the hospital for an indefinite time."

The 22-year-old's condition has been upgraded from fair to good since the Dec. 17 operation at the Baltimore hospital, which offered his only chance at life.

Since he was 17, Matthews had primary pulmonary hypertension, a rare disease that constricts and damages the lungs' blood vessels and causes the heart to swell from overwork.

Doctors said without the transplant he would almost surely die. The operation raised his chances of survival to 60-40.

Matthews cannot talk to reporters until at least next week, she said, because of temporary stomach problems not directly related to the transplant.

Matthews complained of a full feeling in his stomach, she said, and his doctors believe his surgery may have damaged a nerve, causing him to digest food too slowly. He is taking medication for the problem, she said.

Matthews and his mother, Annabelle Royster, lived for 19 months in a Towson, Md., apartment near the hospital awaiting the call that a donor had been found. Matthews was dependent on an oxygen tank.

Matthews at 17 was a 5-foot-11, 165-pound Gaston Day School track and football star when he started becoming winded from climbing a flight of stairs.

By 1982, he weighed 125 pounds and was unable to walk or continue at Lees-McRae College in Banner Elk.

Dr. Bruce Reitz, who performed the world's first successful heart-lung transplant at Stanford University Hospital in 1981, and Dr. William Baumgartner performed the transplant.

The heart-lung transplant, the second at Johns Hopkins, is one of about 40 performed at only three hospitals in the world since 1981.

N.C. A&T Seeking Doctoral Candidates

GREENSBORO (AP) — Competition for black Ph.D.s is fierce, and North Carolina A&T State University is at a disadvantage in hiring them for several reasons, Chancellor Edward B. Fort said.

A&T is at a disadvantage because it does not have Ph.D. programs and cannot offer the salaries and research opportunities available at schools that do, Fort said recently in a three-hour work session on faculty recruitment and retention.

Competition is particularly fierce in high technology fields such as engineering where private industry can offer starting salaries far above those in education.

National statistics show that of about 2,800 Ph.D.s graduated in the United States each year, only about 11 percent have an interest in teaching, Fort said. Only a handful of those are black, he said, and the competition for them is fierce.

Trustee Carson Bain suggested that the University of North Carolina System should be able to organize a central recruiting organization and funnel teachers to the schools that need them most, instead of fostering competition.

UNC system also should not be allowed to outbid one another for faculty members on the basis of Ph.D. programs, Bain said. North Carolina State University, for example, has Ph.D. programs in engineering and offers higher salaries than the engineering schools at A&T and the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, which stop at the master's level.

A&T also should encourage blacks to study for doctoral degrees and consider careers in higher education, the board said. Fort said the university is helping minority faculty members complete their Ph.D.s and that several programs recruit high school students and college undergraduates for college teaching careers.

Finally, the board agreed that department chairmen should find out if members of their departments are content.

Arts Council Decries Plan To Cut Funding

By The Associated Press
Proposals to cut the National Endowment for the Arts budget by 11.7 percent could affect the arts scene in North Carolina even if they aren't implemented, the executive director of the N.C. Arts Council said.

Last year it received $500,000 in NEA funds for its budget of $3.5 million, executive director Mary Regan said. Arts Council funds are used to aid 900 visual arts, performing arts, literature and other groups statewide.

One of the first to be affected, she said, are touring performance companies such as those that come to area colleges. Because the groups plan their itineraries a year in advance, even the threat of cutbacks can influence schedules and travel plans. Rumors of cuts can have a psychological effect on the art community, Ms. Regan said. "It's like they circle the wagons," she said, and don't plan unusual projects or try new things.

"The arts have to fight every inch of the way even in good times," Ms. Regan said. "Something like this could really take the edge off their daring."

The proposed cuts in the NEA budget could hurt North Carolina groups in Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Chapel Hill and Raleigh, officials say.

The planned cut is "a very discouraging piece of news for us," said Walter W. Heid, general manager of the Eastern Music Festival in Greensboro, which has received NEA support since the late 1960s.

"To cut further would place an undue burden on the private sector," said Ted Potter, director of the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

The Reagan administration proposal to cut $16 million from the NEA budget also might be felt by Playmakers Repertory Company in Chapel Hill and the North Carolina Arts Council, based in Raleigh. But officials were cautiously optimistic that Congress would not go along with the recommended reductions.

Heid noted that the amount of money awarded NEA is "an infinitesimal part of the federal budget," and noted that in past years when NEA cuts were proposed, Congress overrode the proposals. Last year, for example, the administration asked for $144 million for NEA. Congress awarded it $163.7 million.

Any cuts could be important to the North Carolina institutions depending on the money, officials said.

For 1985, EMF received $60,000 in NEA grants. That represents only 2 percent of the EMF budget, but "it's a very important 2 percent," Heid said. NEA money enabled EMF to raise an additional $100,000 from the private sector in matching funds.

"It's very appealing for a (private) funding source to know every dollar they give is being matched by a federal source," he said.

Playmakers, the professional theater program of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, gets about $5,000 a year from NEA. While an 11.7 percent cut would mean about $550 less for PRC, Robert Tolan, producing-director, said he's more concerned about the affect the cuts will have nationwide. "The health and security of the arts in this country depends on a healthy mix of private, state and federal funds," he said. "If you take any one of those away, the support fabric becomes weakened."

NRCDC Managers Asked To Resign

RALEIGH (AP) — Letters have been sent to 10 employees of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development asking for their immediate resignation and promising two weeks' severance pay.

Five regional managers, an assistant manager and four other NRCDC officials have been asked to resign, said Susan B. Hutchins, the department's personnel officer.

Thomas Rhodes, appointed NRCDC secretary by Gov. Jim Martin, could not be reached for comment. Mrs. Hutchins said other personnel exempted by former Gov. Jim Hunt's administration from the protection of the State Personnel Act also may be dismissed.

"I'm not going to rule that out," she said. "We are taking a look at all people in exempt positions and making a decision on an individual basis ... and this takes time. I think it's still too early in the administration to say that the final decisions have been made in these areas. I don't think that's the case."

NRCDC's seven regional offices coordinate the department's programs in their areas. One of the managers, Edgar P. Israel of Asheville, resigned earlier. Robert J. Jamieson of Wilmington has been retained, Mrs. Hutchins said.

"Basically, the letter said that they were serving in exempt positions at the pleasure of the secretary and, therefore, in order to implement the new management directives of the department, their resignations were being requested," Mrs. Hutchins said.

She said the employees were told that if they wanted to claim career status because of five years continuous service in a non-exempt position, they should get in touch with her.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 19, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Except for taking chances where social and romantic matters are concerned leading to some upsetting incidents, it is a good day and evening to get into practical affairs.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact someone who has the ability to assist you in your career and state what it is you need the most.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have fine ideas of a practical nature that can be made to work with the assistance of out-of-town newcomers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to talk over with business persons just how to become more prosperous in the days ahead.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Think over what demanding partners expect of you and satisfy them only to the right extent.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get right down to the core of any work ahead of you and polish it off nicely, but cooperate more with fellow-workers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into the activities that will give you success from worry and have a delightful time. Show more affection for your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to stay at home and get it into fine condition. Then invite guests in later and treat them very nicely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) An ideal day to join with as many friends as possible and plan for greater success in the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get all those fine ideas down to a workable level and be more practical to get right results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get your personal aims well organized in the morning so that you can gain them quickly. The evening can bring lots of fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to get your visionary ideas down to a practical and workable level today. Buy some charming gift for your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get in touch with that older person you know if you want to attain some personal longing with ease.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a born organizer and should have courses along such lines so that your progeny can become an expert in such an important profession. One who will be able to get along just fine with persons of importance and who can be of much assistance.

The bidding and play of the hand are not two separate phases. What you learn during the auction can be of inestimable value in the play. Consider this hand from the 1984 World Team Olympiad in Seattle.

East's two diamond overall was a transfer to hearts. When South bounced into four spades, East introduced his second suit as a sacrifice, but South was not going to defend with his hand. His bid of five spades closed the auction.

Note that East's decision to compete at the five-level was correct — South would have an easy time at four spades. However, in revealing his distribution East also pointed the way for declarer to make 11 tricks.

West led the jack of clubs. Declarer played low from dummy and ruffed in hand. He led a spade to the queen and ace, and East returned a club. Declarer won the ace, sluffing a diamond from hand, and ruffed a club. Then he entered dummy with the jack of spades, in the process drawing the last outstanding trump, and ruffed a club to strip that suit. Next came the king-ace of hearts and a heart ruff, to eliminate that suit from the combined holding.

Since East was known to have at least 10 cards in hearts and clubs, he had to be short in diamonds. Based on this knowledge declarer led the king of diamonds. West was caught in a bind. If he did not win the ace, declarer would continue with a diamond to the queen and the hand would be cold. So West rose with the ace.

Declarer's technique in stripping the hand was about to be rewarded. West had no choice but to return a diamond. Declarer simply went with the percentages. He ran it to his ten, and when East did not produce the jack, the contract was in the bag.

Suit Filed In Gas Leak

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit seeking more than $400 million in damages has been filed by 62 Scotland County residents who say their wells were contaminated by gasoline.

The suit seeks $93 million in compensatory damages and $310 million in punitive damages, saying the wells were contaminated when gasoline seeped from old storage tanks into the groundwater.

The defendants are: Colonial Motor Freight Line Inc., R.L. Honbarrier Co., A.L. Honbarrier, Union Oil Co. of California, Marshall Oil Co. and Solene Lubricants Inc.

Richard Brown, the Laurinburg attorney who filed the suit, was quoted by the Laurinburg Exchange, a Scotland County weekly, as saying that more defendants and more plaintiffs may be added to the suit.

Joe M. McLaurin of Rockingham, president of Solene Lubricants, said Thursday, "I had read about the problem in Scotland County but I had never noted any connection with any property we owned there in the past."

McLaurin said his firm had not used the property since selling it 10 years ago. He said Solene and Joe M. McLaurin Inc. merged about a year ago.

The plaintiffs are residents of a neighborhood south of Laurinburg on U.S. 15-401.

Tests of water samples analyzed in the state health laboratories indicated the presence of ethylene dibromide in 53 wells serving 60 homes. EDB has been linked with cancer.

Martin Gets Inaugural Plates

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin got a present Thursday from President Reagan — a pair of license plates commemorating Reagan's second inauguration. Jack Hawke, Martin's special adviser for policy, presented Martin the plates at his weekly news conference. "It just so happens, Governor, that you're numero uno," said Hawke, displaying the plates, with the number one imprinted on them.

Inaugural license plates have been issued since Franklin D. Roosevelt took office in 1933.

In The State

Second Meeting

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said Thursday his second "town meeting," at which he will answer questions and hear suggestions from the public, will be next Wednesday at 7 p.m. in High Point's city hall.

Martin said at a news conference that the meeting was being arranged by High Point Mayor Bob Wells.

Martin said he periodically called such meetings during his six terms in Congress and found them a useful way to keep in touch with constituents.

About 250 people attended his first town meeting as governor, which was in Wilson last Tuesday.

Marine Sentenced

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A military judge sentenced a Marine military policeman to eight years' confinement and a dishonorable discharge in the Oct. 8 rapes of a 15-year-old girl.

Lance Cpl. Mark A. Stovall, 22, was charged with three counts each of rape, carnal knowledge and adultery.

Col. R.J. Blum, the military judge, deliberated 45 minutes before reaching a verdict in the general court-martial Thursday. Blum found Stovall guilty of the three rape charges and one charge of adultery.

Col. R.J. Blum, the military judge, deliberated 45 minutes before reaching a verdict in the general court-martial Thursday. Blum found Stovall guilty of the three rape charges and one charge of adultery.

Stovall, who is separated from his wife, told the court that his memory was impaired by the consumption of 12 to 15 beers, but that he was sure he did not have intercourse with the girl.

Central to the prosecution's case was the testimony of three boys, one 15 and two 13, who testified Wednesday that they were present during the rapes.

Green Salary

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who earned $55,368 a year in office, will make up to $45,500 this year, plus $9,100 for expenses, as a special consultant to Gov. Jim Martin, a Martin aide said Thursday.

Martin announced in December that Green, who presided over the N.C. Senate for the past eight years as lieutenant governor, would head Martin's Government Relations Advisory Council and be a paid consultant.

The council's primary job is to help gain legislative approval of repealing the intangibles tax on bank accounts and stocks and counties' business inventory tax, which Martin promised in his campaign. It also will advise Martin on ways to streamline government. Green, as chairman, is the only paid member.

Green's contract is open-ended in length and calls for a fee of $250 a day and $50 a day in expenses. Martin's executive assistant, Jim Lofton, said Thursday.

During the predicted 26-week General Assembly session, Green will work five days a week. After the session, he will work two days a week, monitoring government boards and commissions. Lofton said.

Flaherty Named

RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty will relinquish the post and become chairman of the Employment Security Commission on Feb. 1, Gov. Jim Martin said Thursday.

"I'm excited, looking forward to it," said Flaherty in a telephone interview, saying he would keep a low political profile in his new job.

"One of the reasons I expressed an interest to the governor in taking (the ESC position) was my desire to stay out of politics for a while," said Flaherty, 36, a graduate of Boston University. "I enjoyed my stint, but after four years ... you just get burned out."

Flaherty, a former executive with Broyhill Industries in Lenoir, was a state senator and served as secretary of human resources under former Gov. Jim Holshouser. He was the Republican candidate for governor in 1976 but lost to Jim Hunt.

Martin said he had asked Bob Bradshaw, a Charlotte attorney, to seek the GOP chairmanship. The party's executive committee will select a successor to Flaherty on Jan. 26.

Man Sentenced

COLUMBUS, N.C. (AP) — A Greenville, S.C., man convicted of second-degree murder in the July 1983 slaying of his estranged wife's lover was sentenced Thursday to 15 years in prison.

Thomas M. Hooper, 42, was convicted Wednesday in Polk County Superior Court of the murder of Todd Smathers Bradford, an aeronautical engineer originally from Asheville.

Hooper was sentenced by Judge Lamar Gudger of Asheville.

Bradfield, 50, was living with and planned to marry Hooper's estranged wife once the divorce became final in November 1983, according to testimony. Over Bradfield's objection, the couple planned to move Hooper's children from Traveler's Rest, S.C., to Polk County, causing the trio to become involved in a hostile custody battle, trial testimony revealed.

Hooper could have received a maximum sentence of life in prison, said Alan Leonard, district attorney.

New Chairman

RALEIGH (AP) — Claude E. Pope, who heads his own mortgage company in Raleigh, will serve as chairman of the Economic Development Board in the state Department of Commerce, Gov. Jim Martin said Thursday.

Pope, 50, who succeeds John McNair, is former president of General Electric Mortgage Insurance Co. and former president of Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

"His outstanding record in the financial world will serve him well in this new position," said Howard Haworth, secretary of commerce.

Arena Expansion

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — An $11 million project to expand the Cumberland County Memorial Auditorium arena from 6,500 seats to 14,000 seats has been unanimously approved by the Auditorium Commission's executive board.

The commission's action, which calls for expansion of the arena to begin in 1989, will be submitted to the Cumberland County Board of Commissioners for final approval.

FOCUS

A Plethora of Words

Peter Mark Roget, born on this day in 1779, was a British physician who invented the "log-log" slide rule. But most people remember him as the scholar who compiled the "Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases" in 1852. Some obscure words have common synonyms. For instance, "grobianism" means rudeness. A "phoenixity" is a model of excellence. Rain is "stillatitious," because it falls in drops. A person with "siderodromophobia" is afraid of train travel.

DO YOU KNOW — What word means "fear of cats"?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The "horse of another color" lived in the Emerald City.

FTC May Drop Warranty Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shoppers who want to read the warranty before buying a product might have to send away for the information under rules being considered by the Federal Trade Commission.

Under the proposed rule changes taken up Thursday by the FTC, merchants would still have to provide warranties to consumers who want to read them before making a purchase. But retailers could give customers an address where the warranty could be obtained rather than keeping copies in their stores.

Considerable discussion and revision are likely before any final action is taken before the FTC.

Commissioner Patricia P. Bailey, who proposed the reconsideration of the current rules, asked that the commission staff look into various ways of providing warranty material to people, including an assessment of ways to reduce the burden on merchants.

The commission voted 5-0 to issue what it terms an advance notice of proposed rulemaking, to change the warranty rule which has been in effect since 1976. Such a notice merely means that changes are being considered, but the final form they take won't be known until after comments are received and a formal rule proposed.

No date was set for that action.

The current rule requires retailers to make copies of warranties available for any product they sell on which the manufacturer offers a warranty.

They can do this by posting copies of the warranty on signs near the product, placing it on the product package or collecting warranties in a loose-leaf binder in the store for consumers to read. But it must be available in the store.

Most stores keep binders with warranties, but Carol Crawford, of the commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection, said a survey found that few people actually look for them.

Most consumers seek warranty information on products they buy, she said, but rarely do they get it from retailers.

This proposed change thus may lift a burden from stores while still allowing people who want the material to get it, Ms. Crawford said. The proposed change calls for warranties to be made available on request.

The advance notice of rulemaking suggests as possible alternatives either having the full text of the warranty available in the store or providing an address where the consumer can write to obtain a copy of the material.

Other possibilities will be considered, however, if proposed during the research in the matter.

The commission also tentatively approved several changes in its rules on advertising warranties, easing some of the current requirements for what information must be included in ads.

Ms. Crawford explained that the idea is to encourage advertisers to promote their warranties, but that

Cooperation Ends

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A West German Jewish group has accused the Greens Party of anti-Semitism and says it will no longer cooperate with the party in building a memorial to Jews killed by Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Claiming that the Greens have "defamed" Israel in recent criticism of Israeli policies, the Bonn-based Jewish Association said in a statement it would have no further contacts with the leftist party.

The association said recent comments by some Greens parliamentary delegates were "characteristic of those who took part in the mass murders" of Jews during World War II.
