Reagan Ready To Embark On New Term

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the last day of his first term, President Reagan helped his grandchildren build a snowman in the White House Rose Garden as thousands of old-line conservatives and young Republicans gathered in the nation's capital to celebrate the beginning of four more years.

On the eve of his swearing-in to a second term, Reagan and his wife Nancy joined Vice President George Bush, his wife Barbara and 6,000 invited, paying guests at a star-studded black-tie gala produced by Frank Sinatra, a personal friend of the Reagans.

Five-thousand of the president's younger supporters, many of whom attended a Republican "leadership forum" Saturday morning, rocked at a pre-inaugural concert of their own, across town from the gala at Washington's new Convention Center.

The event featured Kool and the Gang, Jerry Lee Lewis and Johnny Lee, but organizers didn't bill it as an ordinary rock concert. "Coat and tie is recommended," the invitations said.

It was part of the inaugural committee's effort during the four days of inaugural festivities to cement young peoples' allegiance to future GOP candidates.

The 73-year-old Reagan, whose appearance on a college campus at the outset of his poltical career in the 1960s could start a student riot, carried 60 percent of voters between 18 and 30 years old in last fall's election.

In an unannounced and apparently unplanned moment Saturday morning, the nation's oldest president was photographed taking advantage of a gap in his schedule and a recent snowfall to help his son Michael's family make a snowman outside the Oval Office.

The relaxed and happy atmosphere stood in stark contrast to inauguration eve four years ago, when Jimmy Carter spent his last night as president not dancing with his wife and closest friends as he had planned but on a sofa in the Oval Office waiting anxiously for the outcome of the climactic negotiations in Algeria that led the next day to the release of 53 American hostages held for 444 days in Tehran.

When they were finished, Reagan posed for pictures with Michael, Michael's wife, Colleen, and their children, Cameron and Ashley. First lady Nancy Reagan, who told an interviewer just before Thankgiving that there was an estrangement between Michael and the first family, was not in sight, although their differences reportedly have been patched up.

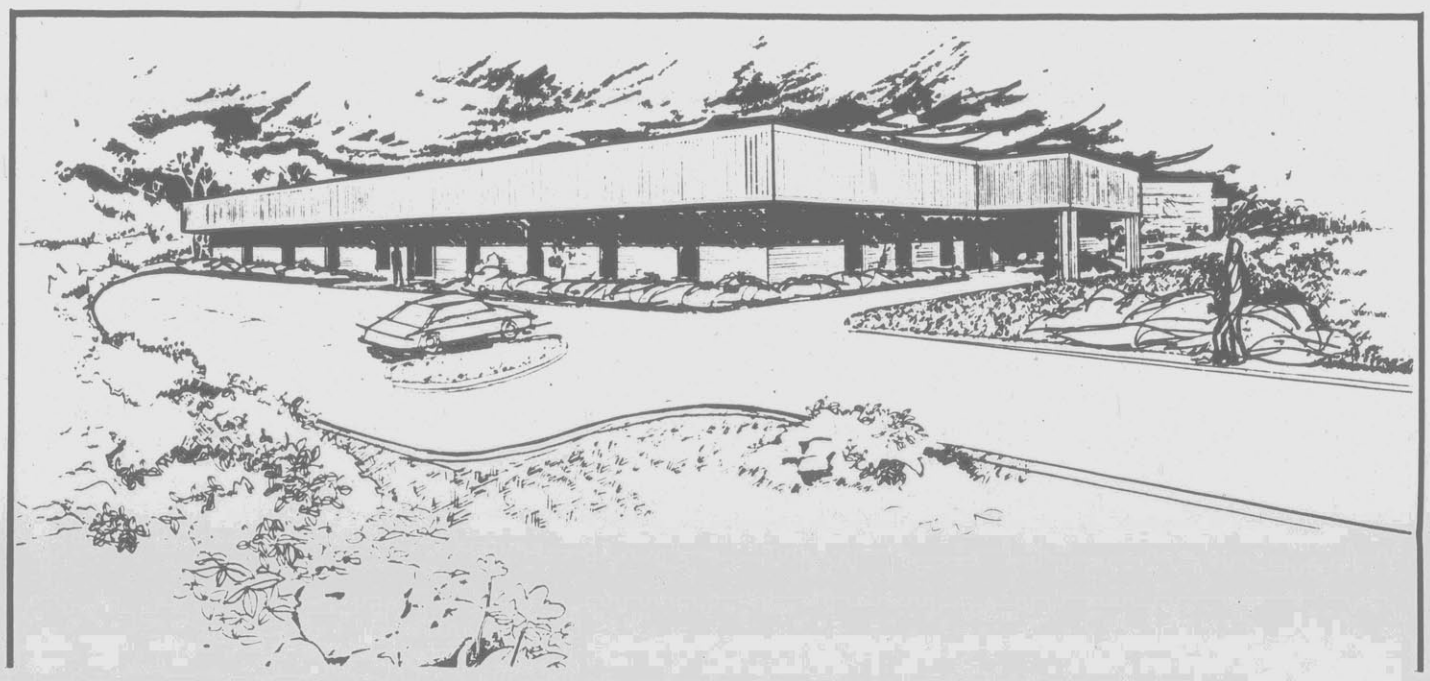

The elder Reagans later crossed the street to dine at Blair House, the government guest quarters, with some of the president's closest aides, a few favorite Cabinet members and several old friends from California. The gourmet luncheon for about 20 couples was billed as a private event, and no reporters or photographers were permitted entry.

On Capitol Hill, the pro-Reagan lobbying group Citizens for America threw a reception for the president's conservative supporters to honor two of their favorite administration officials, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick.

Among the overflow crowd of about 700 guests was Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who predicted Reagan's last term would not be the last for conservatives.

"Is this the last big hurrah? I think not," Grassley said. "The Reagan victory was a personal triumph, but also it was a triumph of the conservative cause."

AN ARCHITECTURAL RENDERING...of the proposed Pitt County Mental Health Center Annex to be started soon. A breezeway will connect the facility with the present Mental Health Center building.

Ground Broken For New MHC Annex

Officials broke ground Friday for a new 10,000-square-foot annex to the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Among those present for the event were Pitt County Commissioners, including chairman Kelly Barnhill, who spoke; Greenville Mayor Janice Buck and state legislators Rep. Ed Warren and Sen. R.L. Martin.

Mental Health Board chairman Van Fleming addressed those present, as did Dr. Stephen Creech, mental health area director, and George Adams, of the regional office of the Department of Human Resources Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Division.

Programs to be housed in the new facility include a day treatment and education center for disturbed children and adolescents, including the Class Action Willie M. youngsters; a day treatment center for adults, including the Partial Hospitalization Program for emotionally troubled adults who need assistance in pre-vocational training, socialization skills, activity and group therapy; and offices and classrooms for patient education, public information, Driving While Impaired classes, Employee Assistance Program, educational workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation.

Ralph Hall, Pitt County Memorial Hospital vice president for facilities management, and James Hite, local architect, planned the facility which will cost about $400,000. The general contractor is Farrior and Sons of Farmville.

Wellness Program Paying Dividends

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The City of Greenville has begun to realize results from its two-year-old Wellness For Working People program, City Manager Gail Meeks reported Friday.

"We have already spotted several potential heart attack candidates who have improved their overall health by participating in the exercise program," she said.

Intitally begun in 1983 to keep city policemen and policewomen physically fit, the program was opened to all city workers in June 1984 — a move Mrs. Meeks said has "proved to be very beneficial."

According to Mrs. Meeks, the program was implemented when city officials became concerned about the well-being of police officers and consequently obtained the services of East Carolina University's Human Performance Lab to evaluate the physical condition of officers. Findings, she said, were typical of other police population studies. The study of Greenville police personnel revealed that officers ran an increased risk of developing heart disease and exhibited a decreased level of aerobic fitness. Following the health appraisals, officers were invited to begin an exercise and nutrition program. Fire/Rescue personnel were given the opportunity to join the program later in 1983.

Mrs. Meeks, as well as other city officials including Mayor Janice B. Buck and two council members, are among the estimated 75 percent of city employees that have participated or are currently participating in the program. Asked how the exercise and health risk identification program is working for her, Mrs. Meeks said she "feels better" and has "lost some weight".

"Employees appreciate that kind of support," Mrs. Meeks said, referring to council participation in the program. "It shows employees that the city cares about their health."

The program also helps employees (as well as the city), Mrs. Meeks added, from the standpoint of decreased health risk, improved attitudes and hence job productivity, lower absentee rates and lower insurance costs.

While program participants are offered some incentives to join and continue exercising, Mrs. Meeks said the program is run on a volunteer basis. "The payback in this base is better health," she said, adding that the city does encourage participants through monthly programs and contests. January, for instance, is Smoking Cessation Month, throughout which information on the hazards of smoking and clinics on consumption of cigarettes are offered to city employees.

Leasing Poses Sticky Problems For 1985

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

If you want a look that could slice hot butter, ask a tobacco grower what kind of rent he's paying in 1985. Or ask a tobacco quota owner what kind of rent he expects for his allotment.

Leasing arrangements for 1985 are on the minds and tongues of most area tobacco growers and quota owners these days. Quotas were mailed to Pitt County landowners Jan. 14, agricultural officials report, and most have received their quotas. For those who don't raise their allotment themselves, that means it's time to negotiate with a producer for a lease price. In 1985, that's a sticky situation for both grower and landlord, officials say. Rent prices will be down sharply from 1984, a fact that benefits neither grower or quota owner.

"In 1985 the leasing situation is a whole new ballgame from 1984," according to Pitt Tobacco Agent Mitch Smith. "The 3.7 reduction in the quota combined with the proposed 25 cent per pound assessment fee and the possibility of a price support reduction make leasing very different this year."

In Pitt County, the average rent price per pound of tobacco in 1984 was around 65 cents. While cautioning that the Agricultural Extension Service "is not in the business of setting rent prices, Smith says "there's no way growers can pay that kind of price" in 1985 and make a profit.

According to a Pitt Extension tobacco budget projection which incorporates a per-pound production cost of $1.15, the 1984 price support of $1.80 and the proposed market assessment of 25 cents, a grower that paid the 1984 average rent of 65 cents per pound could expect to be $500 in the red on a 2,000 pound crop. Based on the projections, paying even 50 cents a pound would mean a loss of $200 on 2,000 pounds.

Smith noted that the above formula contained two very significant variables — the suggested 25 cent assessment and the $1.80 per pound price support. Most agricultural officials say they feel the price support will be reduced in 1985, perhaps as low as $1.55 per pound. A reduction in the price support would likely mean a decrease in the assessment. These variables would have an effect on the figures above, Smith said.

According to the projections, not until rent reaches the 40 cent per pound range does leasing mean a

Teacher Says Values Provide Direction

Pitt County's Teacher of the Year for 1985-86 says her philosophy of teaching is based on a set of education values that demand she be "totally dedicated" to her profession."

These values, she says, include "authenticity, honesty, intellectual integrity and an appreciation of humanness" that have given her direction through her career as an educator.

Barbara Proctor Rouse, an English teacher at D.H. Conley High School, has been selected Pitt County's Teacher of the Year for 1985-86, county school officials have announced.

Ms. Rouse has taught for four years at Conley and is currently teaching English to grades 11-12. She holds bachelors degrees in English and history and a masters degree in education from East Carolina and North Carolina State universities.

Before coming to Conley she taught at Ayden-Grifton Hogh School from 1979-81, at Sanderson High School in Raleigh from 1974-79, and at Enloe High School, also in Raleigh, from 1971-72. Her teaching experience also includes Johnson City Schools in Johnson City, N.Y., from 1969-71, Josephus Daniels Junior High and Vaiden-Whitley High School in Raleigh. Her teaching career began in 1964 at Mark Twain School in Alexandria, Va.

Ms. Rouse says her decision to bcome a teacher was not a conscious one. "I simply grew up knowing that I would become one," she said. Several environmental factors contributed to that choice, she said, including "being born a female and being reared in the 1940's and 1950's in rural eastern North Carolina" and her mother and father who provided "a secure home environment where I was loved, appreciated and accepted," and where her "views and opinions were regularly sought, valued and respected."

The teacher of the year said her parents shared a love of reading and read prolifically. "As a consequence I grew up with a love and appreciation of the written and spoken word," she said. Another interest was travel and vacationing as a family. "Not surprisingly, these role models produced an intellectually hungry and inately curious lady," she added.

"Therefore, I grew up in an environment in which intellectual growth was valued and as a consequence, education became a personal value," Ms. Rouse said. "From this value came the evolving knowledge that I would become a teacher."

"Teaching involves interaction," Mrs. Rouse said. "I recognize that the real test of personal exploration and identity is through human dialogue." In addition, "intellectual integrity is paramount" to successful teaching.

"Because I feel a deep responsibility to my students, a lack of compromise must be present with regard to students' scholastic work and my professional work," she said. "If I exemplify intellectual integrity, my students will more than likely emulate."

As a teacher, "I appreciate humanism and pluralism inherent," Ms. Rouse said. "Humanness implies uniqueness, diversity in philosophy, in approaches to thinking and in methods. It also implies flaws and strengths," she added. "Therefore I appreciate and accept this reality in myself and in my students."

Garrett Gets Interim Post

D.D. Garrett of Greenville was elected interim chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party Executive Committee at its Saturday meeting, according to Betty Speir of Bethel, a member of the county party.

Garrett, the first black to hold this position, was previously vice chairman of the committee. He had been acting as chairman since Katheryn Lewis resigned earlier this year because of health problems, Mrs. Spier said.

Garrett will serve until April as chairman of the committee, which represents Greenville's 24 Democratic precincts. No vice chairman was elected.

Reagan ...

Meanwhile, in the first of several anti-Reagan demonstrations during the long inaugural weekend in the capital, the Rev. Jesse Jackson led several hundred marchers past the White House to the Washington Monument in a "counter-inaugural" parade that he said was intended to show that America is "not all private airplanes and limousines."

The civil rights leader, who failed in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination last year, criticized the Reagan inaugural's "sumptuousness, indeed vulgar expressions of ostentatiousness, private airplanes and long limousines and $25,000 dresses and diamonds from South Africa and gold from South Africa."

Limousines and furs and other trappings of elegance were much in evidence around Washington as Reagan's well-heeled supporters, who contributed $12.5 million to sponsor the inaugural festivities, got together at private parties and crowded hotel ballrooms to bask in the glow of a second Reagan victory.

The president and vice president are to be sworn in at the White House at noon Sunday, when — according to the Constitution — the first term ends. But because it falls on a Sunday, the traditional inaugural oath-taking in front of the Capitol will be staged on Monday, followed by Reagan's second inaugural address, a parade to the White House and an evening of formal balls.

Vice President Bush, looking forward to four years from now, when he could be the one taking the oath as president, told reporters Saturday, "I don't believe I've ever been in better shape nationally with the political party, and yet I honestly don't know what I'm going to say" when he announces whether he will seek higher office.

But at a news conference, Bush said he wouldn't run on a platform that conflicted with positions the Reagan administration has taken.

"I couldn't do what Fritz Mondale did: go around in order to achieve the nomination or the election and say, 'Don't you remember, I was secretly against that position we took back in 1982,'" or, 'All my friends will tell you I wasn't in favor of that foreign policy initiative,'" Bush said. It was was a reference to former Vice President Walter Mondale's presidential bid last year in which he said he had privately opposed some positions adopted by President Jimmy Carter but supported his president after the decisions were made.

break-even situation for the grower at the above cost and price levels. Based on the projections, the grower would not make a profit at these levels unless he paid rent in the 30-cent per pound range. For example, according to the figures, a grower leasing 2,000 pounds of tobacco at 30 cents per pound, spending $1.15 per pound to grow it and receiving $1.80 per pound at market would make $200 profit. Paying 20 cents per pound rent for a 2,000 pound crop would mean $400 profit.

The $1.15 per pound cost-production is accurate for Pitt County, Smith said, and includes line items for pest control, seed, chemicals, including Ridomil, insecticides, cover crops, curing fuel, electricity, crop insurance, building insurance, warehouse charges, market assessment, tractor fuel and repairs, machinery cost and repairs, and labor costs.

Similarly, if the price support were reduced to $1.70, a grower renting 2,000 pounds of tobacco for 65 cents a pound at a per-pound cost production of $1.15 would lose $700, say the projections. If he paid 50 cents per pound for 2,000 pounds and the price support is $1.70 he would lose $400, and if he paid 40 cents per pound he'd lose only $200. According to the projections, only if he paid 20 cents per pound for 2,000 pounds with a $1.70 price support would he make a profit of $200.

Most growers say they have not set rent prices because of the uncertainties. A Chicod tobacco producer, Ronald Evans, says growers as a group "are faced with hard decisions concerning this year's crop. Over the past few years, rising production cost and increased price for quota have taken just about all the increase in price the farmer has received for his crop," Evans said.

With the cuts in the tobacco situation proposed for 1985, Evans said growers must cut costs accordingly. "It seems the only cost that can be cut this sharp would be the price for quota," Evans said. "Quota owners probably won't like this cut but if producers don't get in the profit margain this year quota owners might find it hard to lease quota for any price in the future."

On the other hand, quota owners say they feel they deserve a decent rent for their allotment. "You can look at it from both sides," tobacco agent Smith said. "On the one hand, there's the quota owner who's worked hard for the allotment all his life or who has inherited it with the expectation of value but is not raising the crop. On the other hand, there's the producer who is taking the risks and bearing the price increases," he said.

What has happened to quota owners, aaccording to Smith, is a dramatic decrease in the value of the quota which began in 1982 with the price support level freeze and has culminated in 3.7 percent quota reduction announced in December 1984 and the proposed assessment increase.

In 1985 "a landlord should ask the question, 'Do I want to hold on to a part of the tobacco business?'" Smith said. "If so, he should make preparations to share some of the risk involved in the production of a tobacco crop."

Of utmost importance to the grower in 1985 is "the value of a good record-keeping system or just knowing how much it costs to raise a pound of tobacco," Smith said.

"Although the price support and the assessment are figures that are not concrete at this time, until a grower knows his cost of production, he cannot effectively negotiate a fair rental agreement and still expect to obtain a safe return on his investment," he added.

Any type of leasing arrangement agreed upon at this time, Smith said, should be one which is flexible enough to compensate for any changes that might occur in the price support or the assessment.

In terms of the value of the quota, "though it has been significantly reduced, it still carries a value — a value which should be agreed upon when landlord and tenant sit down to negotiate a rental agreement," Smith said. Landowners should remember, he added, that if the tobacco program were eliminated completely, the value of the quota would be zero. "As it is now, the quota is still an integral part of the production system," Smith said.

"The landlord must share in the risk," tobacco producer Evans said. "The grower must have the flexibility to deal with the variables. We (growers) are not just looking to what we can gain. Something will have to be done between producer and the landowner...or we'll all have to sell out."

Evans said in his opinion, there has "never been a greater need than right now for farmers and landowners to pull together to save the tobacco program."

Smith agrees that cooperation, in addition to flexibility, is the key to successful leasing arrangements in 1985. Both growers and landowners should "strive for a willingness to realize the other's predicament," he said. The year will be a year of many changes, he predicted, "thus rental arrangements for the upcoming season must be structured to cope with those changes."

40 Killed As Plane Crashes

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Cubana Airlines plane crashed shortly after takeoff Saturday from Havana, Cuba, killing all 40 people aboard, including one American, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said.

The report, monitored in Mexico City, quoted "official Cuban sources" as confirming that the plane's 32 passengers and eight crew members perished in the crash.

A later dispatch said those killed were 25 Cubans, including the crew, 10 Nicaraguans and one person each from the Untied States, Argentina, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Mexico.

It gave a list of the names of the victims, but did not provide their nationalities or say where they were from.

In Managua, the state-run radio station Voice of Nicaragua said one of the Nicaraguan victims was Francisco Gonzalez, secretary of international relations for the Sandinista Workers Headquarters.

The Soviet-made IL-18 plane took off from Havana's Jose Marti airport about 8 a.m. EST on a regularly scheduled flight to Managua, and minutes later crashed onto a road in San Jose de las Lajas, on the outskirts of Havana, Prensa Latina reported.

It said the cause of the crash has not been determined.

Anniversary

PEKING (AP) — More than 300 Communist Party leaders and veteran revolutionaries gathered to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Politburo meeting at which Mao Tse-tung became leader of the party and the Red Army.

The historic 1935 session at Zunyi in Guizhou province also was recalled in the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily, which published 1945 and 1972 speeches about it by Mao and the late Premier Chou En-lai.

The newspaper carried the original party report on the meeting by Chen Yun, then as now a Politburo member and one of seven Zunyi veterans still alive.

City ...

Past contests held to encourage employee participation included free vacation time competition and a T-shirt give-away where employees attending afternoon fitness sessions at least 12 times received shirts emblazoned with the Wellness For Working People logo. The winner of the vacation time contest received four hours of leave over the Christmas holiday.

The winner of the city's current incentive program will receive a warm-up suit, valued at approximately $50 and donated by Public Works Director Mayo Allen.

There are basically three steps in the city's wellness program, Mrs. Meeks said. The first involves filling out a questionnaire supplied to the city by the East Carolina University School of Medicine. Once employees complete the forms, they are returned to the Medical School where information is evaluated to determine health levels of participants. Employees are then informed of their level of fitness.

The second step involves a physical exam at the ECU Human Performance Lab, located at Minges Coliseum. The focus of this phase of the program is two-fold — to reassess overall fitness levels and to compile data on participant risk of coronary heart disease.

Each participant is given an electrocardiogram to measure heart functions in resting and active states and is weighed hydrostatically (in a tub of water) to determine body fat percentages. Aerobic capacity, flexibility and blood content are other health concerns tested at the lab.

Results of these tests are passed on to a certified physician who reviews findings and makes recommendations to be passed on to participants in written form.

A usual recommendation might read: "Dear John, It was a pleasure having you as a participant in our health/evaluation/fitness testing program. Dr. Doe reported that your resting and exercise electrocardiograms as well as your blood pressure and heart rate responses to exercise were all within normal limits. However, he does recommend some weight loss and exercise.

"Your aerobic capacity, predicted from your treadmill performance time, places you in the poor fitness category. Aerobic capacity is a measure of the body's ability to utilize oxygen and is directly related to work capacity. By following the attached exercise 'prescription,' you should be able to improve to the good category within a year."

Included in the "prescription" section of each health report are recommendations as to what type of exercise program will most benefit each participant. Workout plans designate time frames and provide information on each kind of exercise.

To help employees develop and maintain good exercise habits, the city holds four exercise sessions a week led by paid professionals. In addition, employees have had an incline bench, a rowing machine and exercycles put at their dispsal should they desire to work out by themselves. The sessions, held at the close of working days Monday through Thursday at the Public Works Department, provide more benefits than giving employees the chance to involve themselves in an organized exercise routine, however. "One of the more positive aspects of this program," Mrs. Meeks said, "is it's a good relief value for daily stress build up. This way, employees can work out their stress and anxiety on a daily basis so when they go home they can deal with and enjoy their families to a greater extent."

Rock Star Arrested

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jerry Garcia, legendary patriarch of The Grateful Dead rock band, has been released on bail following his arrest for allegedly freebasing cocaine in the front seat of his car, police said Saturday.

Police officer Mark Gamble confronted Garcia on Friday as the rock star sat in a BMW parked off the roadway in Golden Gate Park. Gamble said he noticed the car's registration had expired.

Anderson Suit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Bill Anderson has filed a $1 million suit against a driver and a tavern where the man allegedly was drinking before an accident in which Anderson's wife was injured.

Becky Anderson, 38, suffered a concussion and contusions of the brain in October when her car collided with a truck. The Andersons filed suit Dec. 7 in Metro Nashville Circuit Court against the driver, the company that owned the truck and the tavern, said the couple's attorney, Richard Speight.

Mrs. Anderson is recovering at home, Speight said.

Sunday Opinion

Court's Opinion Points Out Need Must Be Present

The Supreme Court's ruling that gives school administrators the right to search students without a court-ordered warrant is useful, but as area principals generally agree, the procedure is unlikely to be often applied.

As J.H. Rose High School Principal Howard Hurt says, it's a nice tool you can use if it's needed and not have to worry about the ramifications. Hurt added, "I've never had a student refuse a request for a search."

Principal Josh Potter, of North Pitt, told The Daily Reflector he thinks the new ruling will deter students from bringing illegal possessions to school. There is general concurrence among other area educators. We're inclined to agree.

Of course, court-ordered search warrants have been available in the past, but the process can be time-consuming and always subject to cumulative self-doubts and even abandonment.

Four or five calls for warrants and subsequent searches that came to naught would leave anyone wondering if perhaps they had been "baited" into possibly making a wrong move; then subsequently throwing up their hands in suspicous instances that followed.

We do not relish the scenario that dictates student searches are necessary.

Still, the public knows from incidents across the country that young people have been known to carry drugs or even weapons on school property.

If the Supreme Court has provided a deterrent to that kind of willful behavior, we happily join others in hailing the court's contribution to a more orderly society.

The case which grew into a near-landmark decision began with a New Jersey high school official's search of a student's pocketbook for evidence of smoking — a relatively minor offense; but it turned into something more when a small quantity of marijuana was turned up.

The court's ruling preserves the concept that searches in schools must be based on reasonable suspicion ... and no one could ask more than that.

Pitt Boys Club Called A Success

The Boys Club of Pitt County had its annual dinner last week at which it honored Kirk Dominick, 17 and a Rose High junior, as 1984 Boy of the Year.

The event focuses once again on the value of the Boys Club to our community.

Outgoing President Ed Stanley reported that 1984 was a good year for the club,which increased its budget, added two part-time positions and a number of new programs. Best of all, he said the attendance by boys has increased.

The club's building debt was decreased from $53,000 to $43,000, thanks to a gift from Vivian West, widow of Eugune West, who was mayor of Greenville.

Stanley said the arts and crafts room would be named the Eugene West Arts and Crafts Center.

Dick Ullam, first director of the Boys Club of Pitt County, recalled the organization started in an old fairground and then moved to a small community church. Ullam, now a Boys Club supervisor for three states, praised the club for what has been accomplished.

The Boys Club of Pitt County provides wholesome activities for the youth of our community. It operates without public funds and comes as near as any organization can to fully accomplishing that mission. It deserves the public's complete support and, indeed, as a community we can pat ourselves on the back for what has been accomplished through Boys Club of Pitt County.

Sunday Morning Notes

Greenville Utilities has a program in which some 40 percent of its customers are participating — and more are clamoring to join.

Customer effort is minimal and customers who do join get a $10 rebate each month for four summer months.

The program is the Utilities' load management effort. Participating customers allow the Utilities to put radio-operated switches on air conditioners and water heaters. The switches can be used to turn off those appliances briefly at times of peak electric loads, hence saving the Utilities money on its $40 million annual electric bill, with the savings passed on to the customer.

Greenville Utilities was one of the first electric companies in the nation to institute such a program. Others are now following, but the local Utilities is becoming more sophisticated in its load management program.

Electric Superintendent Malcolm Green noted that when the program was begun, Greenville Utilities was purchasing power from VEPCO. The summer peak determined the demand for the entire year. Thus the switches were operated during the summer months. With the switchover to CP&L demand loads are determined monthly and starting last January the hot water heater switches were activited during winter months to hold down peaks which usually come between 8 and 9 in the mornings, and on cold days.

"We are saving a lot of money," Green says. "We don't know what it is (at this point). We will keep up with it and the customers will get their share back."

The trick is to turn off water heaters for as long as possible without inconveniencing the customer and that is a constant matter of experimenting. A computer does the actuating from data fed in by Utilities personnel. Many things have to be taken into account, including weather elsewhere on the CP&L system which would cause that system to reach a peak load.

"We are trying to squeeze blood out of a turnip," Green said. "Every dime we save our customers are going to benefit."

The Utilities is working with other methods of peak shaving including having the water treatment plant run its emergency generators during the peak hours. The generators have to be tested regularly and the saving is magnified. A future possibility might be switches on heat pump electric heat strips which would prevent them from coming on at peak hours.

The local Utilities is cooperating with other systems with its knowlege of peak shaving. Tarboro monitors the Greenville Utilities radio system and activates its switches at the same time. Farmville has the same switches as Greenville and the Greenvillle Utilities signal activates Farmville's switches. Since Tarboro and Farmville purchase from CP&L their peak demand situations are similar.

Green presented a paper recently in which he noted that customers feel they are in a partnership with the Utilities. "They say they don't know when we operate it, and don't want to know."

That's right. Just keep the monthly credits coming.

Change Forced

The great White House-Treasury swap, though bizarre and poorly conceived, saves the Reagan administration at a time when James A. Baker III seemed to have painted himself and his president into a corner.

At a time when a tired administration desperately needed new blood, Baker's decisions as White House chief of staff had consolidated his own power following the election. Instead of recruiting innovative new faces, Baker was getting rid of troublesome old ones.

Consequently, two months after President Reagan's landslide, deepening malaise gripped the administration. Morale at the White House had hit zero outside Baker's inner circle, and the rest of the administration was becalmed. That dismal landscape was instantly brightened by the swap between Baker and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

Although neither seems truly suited for his new job, their trade opened the way for at least a partial reconstruction of the administration. Most important, a total restructuring of the White House staff in both function and personnel will transform policymaking.

This reconstruction by accident is testimony to the presient's shortcomings as head of government. Insensitive to the disintegration of his team on the eve of his second term, there is no sign Reagan even contemplated post-election changes.

All he ended up doing was to second, after brief consideration, the quest of two senior officials for greener fields. Longer scrutiny might have raised serious doubts about the suitability of either for his new post.

The question that Regan's closest friends and supporters have been asking each other is: Does Don know what he's let himself in for? Regan, described by one White House insider as "the least political man I have ever known," is assuming one of the world's most demanding political jobs.

Although Ronald Reagan's chief of staff approaches the power of prime minister, he is still a staff man — a new experience for ex-Marine colonel, ex-Wall Street tycoon Regan. White House aides speculated how well Regan would handle killing time at the motel while the president relaxed at his ranch.

Lack of expertise in Treasury questions should not long trouble Baker, who has proved a quick study. A bigger question is whether he will shake off his innate caution to undertake an urgently needed reform of monetary policy.

A more politically relevant question is whether Baker's Republican orthodoxy will restrain him from the risk-taking needed to pass a tax reform bill. Regan's Treasury team was grumbling last month that Baker was overattentive to criticism of the tax reform by organized business.

Nevertheless, the trade's assets far outweigh the liabilities, if only because it forces change — particularly at the White House. Policy aide Richard Darman will join the exodus of senior staffers, possibly rejoining Baker at the Treasury. Regan has been urged to name Ed Rollins, the president's re-election campaign manager, as deputy chief of staff. Regan will bring to the White House key Treasury officials plus an ex-aide, Ann McLaughlin, now deputy interior secretary.

But Regan's real opportunity is to reverse Baker's consolidation of power by filling the half-dozen major posts being kept open.

Loans

WASHINGTON — Many college students may have more reason than ever to watch the federal budget wars. If Senate leaders Bob Dole of Kansas and Alan Simpson of Wyoming win substantial cuts in defense spending, they'll have a difficult time protecting student loans and grants.

Budget Director David Stockman's office has submitted for Education Department review proposals that would withhold guaranteed student loans from families with more than $30,000 in annual income, and limit eligible students to $4,000 in federal aid per year.

The White House has tried and failed before to restrict loans to families with $30,000 or less in income. Families with higher incomes can qualify for loans by proving that they can't meet college costs.

Under the administration's current plan, more than a third of current loan recipients wouldn't qualify, according to estimates provided by an Ohio State University official to The Chronicle of Higher Education.

Of course, a $4,000 aidcap would severely limit the opportunity to attend private colleges and universities. Private institutions account for only a tenth of all students; one reason is that their tuitions and related expenses are already more or less prohibitive.

Critics of the student aid program may draw encouragement from the pro-Reagan climate on campus, as well as from indications that some students, at least, aren't so bad off financially. Indeed, about half of all undergraduates get by without federal assistance. As a survey of 2,400 students by the Denver-based TeleCheck Inc. pointed out last November, 42 percent spend more than $2,500 yearly for items not related to school (57 percent had credit cards in their own names).

But cuts in defense and, maybe, social security spending would assure sacrifice elsewhere, even among the most popular middle-class programs. Students might want to look into their pocketbooks and take the budget fight seriously this time.

Bias On The Network News

WASHINGTON — The Washington press corps, which constantly is in quest of something to laugh about, has been enjoying a fine round of snickers at Sen. Jesse Helms. It seems that Jesse, ho-ho-ho, has come up with the wild idea of gaining control of CBS just so he could fire Dan Rather. Ain't that a knee-slapper? It's the biggest joke since the House Ethics Committee last convened.

OK, OK! First the facts. Helms and a small group of fellow conservatives have indeed filed a statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission, as the law requires, publicly declaring their intention to purchase CBS stock for a specific purpose. Their purpose is to "express their dissatisfaction with the company's liberal bias in its coverage of political events, personages and views."

The Helms group no sooner had announced its intentions than the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), offered to put up $100,000 in matching money toward such a worthy cause. Said NCPAC Chairman John T. Dolan: "It is time that conservatives made an effort to regain control of the airwaves from people who are always running down our country and our values."

This ruckus prompted a formal statement from CBS. Said Vice President Mary Boies, breathing piety and virtue from every pore, "CBS News reports the news as accurately and fairly as it can, independent of any political point of view."

Another CBS spokesman, not identified, noted mildly that CBS has nearly 30 million shares of stock outstanding. The stock recently has been quoted at about $75. For Helms and his partisans to take over the company, an investment of well over a billion dollars would be required. Jesse has some rich friends, as his senatorial campaigns have demonstrated, but the filthy rich are not necessarily quixotic. Dan Rather's hair will be a lot grayer than it's getting before Jesse can ask for his head.

Let me cut through the fat. Are the TV networks, and most notably CBS, biased in their coverage of the news? Of course they are. So are such great newspapers as The New York Times and The Washington Post. The liberal bias is there. It is palpable. It is empirically measurable on the air in minutes and seconds. It pervades the news columne of the Post and the Times in the same way that a stain pervades a fabric.

It could not be otherwise. This is because the Dan Rathers of this world are not saints; they are not ethereal beings of divine grace and wisdom. They are mortals. The editors who put together the CBS Evening News are personable people; they are men and women of professional integrity, but they bring to their tasks all the accumulated observations, experiences and prejudices of their lifetimes. Does anyone seriously believe they take off their opinions when they put on their eyeshades?

Bosh. The judges of our state and federal courts also are persons of integrity, sworn to try cases impartially. On the Supreme Court, William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall are just as dedicted to truth, fairness and justice as William Rehnquist and Sandra O'Connor. Why are they so often on opposite sides in key cases? It is because they see the law, as TV editors see the news, through the filters of all their lives.

Some of my friends have been needling me. Ol' Jesse, they say, wants to throw Dan out and put me in. Ho-ho-ho. I am not nearly pure enough for NCPAC, but put that to one side. If I were anchoring the evening news, I would choose 20 of the same 22 items that a Dan Rather or a Tom Brokaw or a Peter Jennings would chose. This is the nature of news. It would be on those marginal two or three stories a night that our judgments would differ. My judgment as a conservative would say, "This story should be included" or "I don't believe that story makes it," and these would be honest judgments.

They also would be biased judgments — biased as all judgments are biased, by instincts and upbringing, by defeats and victories, and by the shaping influences of every journalist's life. If Jesse & Co. have in mind a propaganda network, count me out; I will fight them all the way. But if their goal is to replace the present liberal bias with the kind of conservative bias I've been talking about, more power to them.

Peace And Prosperity Beckon To Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Peace and prosperity have been the goal of every president. But too often something happens that makes these twin objectives impossible to attain.

Now President Reagan, with lots of dedication and a little bit of luck, has a chance at making both a reality. Not forever, of course, because life doesn't work that way. But within this waning century.

His opportunities are golden, starting with the fact that he does not have to seek re-election. He can have the courage to rock more boats with impunity.

Peace is the essence for all mankind, and there is no better place to start than a new rapprochement with the Soviet Union.

For those who think that superpower accords are impossible, or are not worth the paper they are written on, any exercise may seem futile. But for those who view the headlong arms race into space another nail in humanity's coffin, all attempts to talk, to negotiate, to seek understandings are positive steps, particularly when one considers the alternative.

The president appears to be moving toward a more moderate view of the Soviet Union, not dismissing its aggression in Afghanistan and other world troublespots, but making an effort to determine there is a chance for peace.

There is never a point of no return until conflict breaks out. Reagan seems to be taking a new look at the possibilities that have opened up with the successful outcome of the U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva. No one assumes that the slight breakthrough portends the end of the road.

But clearly both sides agreed to agree — at least on talks — and that is what made the difference. In fact, it is apparent that both sides were intent on not letting the get-together between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko fail. The stakes were too high for all involved.

And so with not too much to lose politically and a lot to gain in terms of his place in history, the president has opted to try to find common ground with the communist adversary. At the same time, he has not moved very far from his dream of a so-called Star Wars, or Strategic Defense Initiative, in hopes that it would provide the ultimate shield against missiles. But that seems far-fetched, even to scientists involved in the research.

So the pursuit of peace, at least by talking to seek a reduction of massive nuclear arsenals, remains at the top of the agenda.

As for prosperity, the president also has different roads to travel, and his decisions are subject to revision by Congress. He believes that growth will solve the problems of the deficit and keep the economy on track.

He also believes that by loosening the regulatory powers of the government business will have a free rein for expansion, and economic independence.

As a president who has questioned the need for most federal programs, Reagan still finds his hands are tied when he would like to make deep slashs in the government bureacracy.

Bucked by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Reagan has handled the Pentagon budget with kid gloves, refusing big cuts as recommended by Republican congressional leaders.

Reagan also remains adamant against a tax increase. But he appears to be giving some ground on freezing Social Security benefits if Congress gives him the go-ahead, which does not seem likely at this point.

So the goals of peace and prosperity are the dream of every president. They are tough to attain, but worth a try.

At this point as he embarks on his second term and four years in the powerful White House, Reagan seems to think so too.

Burger's Staying Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the man who this week will make Ronald Reagan swear to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution," can only hope the president knows where to stand when he takes his oath of office.

Richard M. Nixon did not in 1973, but there was not much the nation's highest-ranking judge could do about it.

At Burger's suggestion that year, inauguration officials had arranged for Nixon to be in a position where his raised right hand would not block his face. Burger had volunteered to stand with his raised hand toward the television cameras.

"But when we got up," Burger has told others, "President Nixon very positively took the other position, leaving me with limited options."

Burger's administering of Reagan's oath of office at the White House on Sunday and during a more public ceremony Monday will mark the fifth time his rich baritone voice has been part of the inauguration ceremonies.

Burger ranks fourth in inauguration staying power among the nation's 15 chief justices.

John Marshall, who served as chief justice for 34 years, swore in five presidents in nine inaugurations. His oath-giving stretches from Thomas Jefferson to Andrew Jackson.

Roger Brooke Taney presided over seven inaugurations in his 28-year judicial tenure, and Melville Fuller administered the president's oath of office six times.

Burger, 77, has been chief justice since 1969.

The Constitution — Article II, Section 1 to be precise — spells out the exact oath the president must take. Nothing in the Constitution requires the chief justice to administer the oath.

But that's been the American tradition ever since John Jay was asked to swear in George Washington to a second term.

Well, almost. Jay apparently had a pressing out-of-town engagement and did not show. He sent William Cushing, the Supreme Court's senior associate justice at the time.

Subsequent chief justices have not missed presiding over inauguration ceremonies, except when a president's sudden death required emergency swearings-in.

Most recently, Lyndon B. Johnson was sworn in by U.S. District Judge Sarah Hughes aboard Air Force One hours after John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

Nixon's resignation in 1974 caught Burger in India. But after a 2 a.m. telephone call from then-Vice President Gerald R. Ford and a little help from a military airplane, Burger made it back to Washington in time to swear Ford in.

"The vice president phoned and asked if I could return to Washington so that the transition could be as nearly in the normal pattern as possible," Burger has told others. "I agreed at once, and three hours later I was enroute to Washington. We arrived just in time for me to put on a fresh shirt and go to the White House."

The chief justice has not revealed what he will wear under his judicial robes to keep out January's chill during Monday's outdoor ceremony, but electric heaters and fans have kept the presidential platform comfortably warm in past years.

"Of course," Burger told people at the court recently, "there is nothing that can be done about the wind."

Never A Graduate

David Brinkley admits he gets a "funny feeling" when educators urge him to lecture to students against dropping out of school.

"I never graduated from anything," said the Wilmington, N.C., native in 1964. "I went to work for a newspaper part-time while I was in high school, and I liked it so much, I quit (school) and went to work at it full time. I've taken college courses but never graduated."

Ironically, at the time Brinkley was confessing he was a "drop-out" from school, he was in Atlantic City, N.J., to accept the Golden Key Award which six national educational organizations present annually to a "citizen who has contributed significantly to the national welfare."

Brinkley, who had skyrocketed to national eminence as co-anchor with Chet Huntley of NBC's Huntley-Brinkley report, chose a high school English teacher to receive a companion Golden Key Award as "the teacher who most influenced him at a formative stage in his life." Mrs. L. Burrows Smith received $1,000 with her award.

In an interview, Mrs. Smith described Brinkley as "a fine student" who "had a flair for writing."

"But I didn't know he was going to be a talker," she added. "He was on the quiet side. And I never thought he was funny, like he is today."

"There wasn't anything about school I thought was very funny," observed Brinkley, who was seated beside Mrs. Smith during the interview.

Brinkley probably regretted many times that he did not collect that high school diploma. One of those times may have come in 1939 when he sought admission to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Brinkley told about it when he returned to Chapel Hill in 1964 to address a symposium.

For two weeks, he said in an interview, "I went back and forth between here and Wilmington. I was working for the paper there. I'd come up here for a day or two, talk with Dr. (Frank P.) Graham, and go back ... The problem was that I ... didn't graduate from high school. I had enough credits but not the right ones. Dr. Graham said — at least he says now — that he wanted to let me in but the rules forbade it." Brinkley then went to Vanderbilt University for a while, but did not graduate.

Meanwhile, he went to work for United Press International and saw service in its Charlotte, Atlanta, and Montgomery, Ala., bureaus before going to Washington in 1943 as a radio news writer for NBC. In the years that followed, Brinkley made the transition from writer to writer-commentator and became one of the most adept writers of the queen's English in the American news media. Critics used such phrases as "witty and urbane" in describing his TV appearance.

Shortly after Brinkley reached the top as co-anchor of the Huntley-Brinkley report, Associated Press radio-TV critic Charles Mercer said the North Carolinian was delivering a television news report from Washington "that is as refreshing as a dry martini."

"Brinkley covers the news succinctly without pretense of omniscience or a too humble objectivity," Mercer added. "He does not force his personal opinions into his report. But he is the master of an asceptic style of writing and speaking and his occasional slightly twisted smile is never a sneer or a leer. As a result, viewers enjoy a quality rare in television newscasting: irony."

The team of Huntley-Brinkley carried the NBC TV news report to the top of the ratings. The climax of their partnership came when they led NBC to victory in the ratings battle for coverage of the 1960 political conventions. One columnist described Brinkley as a "dour sparrow seated high in the rafters of the Los Angeles Sports Arena."

In covering Sen. Frank Church's keynote address, Brinkley observed, "The youthful senator from Idaho spent his first year in the Senate being mistaken for a page boy, who are uniformed in blue suits. Sen. Church used to wear blue suits. He now wears brown ones."

On the third day of the convention when the candidates were making last-ditch efforts to win votes, Brinkley remarked, "This is the first convention of the space age ... where a candidate can promise the moon and mean it."

After Chet Huntley retired, the NBC nightly news report lost the pre-eminence it had enjoyed during the heyday of Huntley-Brinkley and a couple of years ago, Brinkley switched over to ABC where he soon came up with another bell ringer, "This Week with David Brinkley."

Peres Partially Successful

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres has scored some notable successes in his first four months in office, but he has yet to come to conquer Israel's most pressing problem, the economy.

It may be too early to grade his performance on issues, but incumbency seems to have reversed his image as a loser. In part, this may be the result of the intellectualism and stylishness he has brought to an office long dominated by dogmatic politicians.

Critics say Peres is a compromiser, a man who seeks consensus on problems that need decisive leadership. Admirers say only compromise can succeed in a nation where public opinion is so closely divided on key issues.

Peres, leader of the left-leaning Labor party, heads a multi-party Cabinet that includes its longtime rival, the right-wing Likud. It is an uneasy shotgun marriage that resulted from an election standoff last July.

He is pledged to hand over power to Likud's leader, former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, midway through the government's 50-month term in September 1986. Peres would then repalce Shamir as foreign minister.

Peres may look back on the past week as one of his best. On Monday he pushed through his Cabinet a plan to unilaterally withdraw from Lebanon, overriding the objections of Shamir and winning over three Likud ministers in a 16-6 vote.

On Wednesday he defeated the Likud-backed religious parties in a parliamentary battle over the legal definition of who is a Jew. If he had lost, the legislation would have antagonized Israel's supporters in the United States and other non-Orthodox Jewish communities abroad.

Peres has even had some encouraging news on the economic front. The Central Bureau of Statistics announced inflation last month went down to 3.7 percent as a result of wage-price controls imposed in November.

But inflation, which totaled 445 percent in 1984, may again skyrocket unless Peres can get trade unions and business leaders to agree to extend the wage-price agreement that expires in February.

Peres has announced more than $1 billion in budget cuts but concedes they have not been fully implemented. The reason, he said this week, was that half of them had not obtained the required parliamentary approval.

Opinion polls suggest that Peres is shedding the image of a loser that dogged him through two earlier elections lost to Likud and seven years as leader of the opposition.

A poll of 1,200 Israelis in November reported he was chosen by 42 percent as the most suitable candidate for premier, compared to 11 percent who chose Shamir. The two were virtually even just before the election.

A polished speaker, Peres often quotes from memory French or Hebrew poets and philosophers. Anyone who calls one of his assistants is likely to hear classical music in the background.

Peres, 61, has assembled a small band of advisers whose average age is 35.

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although the Republican Party continues to trail the Democratic Party as better serving the interests of many traditionally Democratic population groups, the GOP is perceived by voters as having broadened its appeal to many of these Democratic bastions during President Reagan's first term.

The most striking example may be found in the public's perception of which party better serves the interests of skilled workers. Today, the Republican (41 percent) and Democratic (39 percent) parties share that perception about equality; in 1981, only 21 percent felt skilled workers' interests were better represented by the GOP while 51 percent named the Democrats.

For serving "people like yourself," the Republican Party has edged ahead of the Democratic Party, 43 percent to 38 percent. In 1981 the Democrats had a wide, 45 percent to 29 percent, lead on serving the average American.

The survey results suggest that the GOP may be starting to shed its image as the "party of the rich," while the Democratic Party is losing ground as the "workingman's party." These images of the two major parties had been rooted deeply in the thinking of the electorate since New Deal days.

In addition to registering gains with the public as the party better able to serve the interests of "hard core" Democratic groups, the GOP has improved upon the solid advantage it already enjoyed as better able to serve the interests of upscale groups such as business and professional people.

The Democratic Party has lost ground in terms of many of the groups tested, but continues to hold a substantial advantage as the party better serving the interests of farmers, unskilled workers, labor union members, blacks, women, unemployed people, retirees and small business people.

Here is the question asked to determine political party affiliation:

"In politics, as of today do you consider yourself a Republican, a Democrat, or an Independent?"

Here are highlights of the long-term trend:

ECU Plans To Implement Communications Program

By MELANIE PHILLIPS
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University's new program in communications, approved by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors on January 11, will be officially implemented by this summer, according to Dr. Eugene Ryan, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at ECU.

Ryan said that the communications program will be reviewed during the spring semester and will probably be included in the ECU summer catalogue supplement.

The program as approved offers a bachelor of science degree in communications and offers two tracts: print journalism and radio and television broadcasting. The program is a joint cooperative between ECU's English department, which currently offers a journalism minor, and drama and speech, which offers a broadcasting minor. According to Ryan, a coordinator for the new program will be announced within the next few months.

Edgar Loessin, chairman of the drama and speech department, said that "there has been a great deal of interest in the new major, especially in the broadcasting tract. The new major gives the student a chance for a greater concentration in the communications field and a broader sampling of the art of communication as well as in the practical craft. And our staff have all had experience in the professional field of communication."

Bill Bloodworth, English department chairman, said he is excited about the program and the opportunity to provide students with a major in communications. "We (the English department) will do the best we can to allow students to leave ECU with the best possible degree they can get in communications."

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Angelo Volpe said that other departments on campus have shown interest in the new degree. "We're delighted that the program has been approved and is underway. There is interest and support in the program, not only in the departments involved, but we've also heard from the School of Art and the Industrial and Technical Education Department. Both people in our area and outside our area, even out of state, have expressed interest in the new communications major," Volpe said.

Ryan said that ECU was confident of the Board of Governor's approval and that the new major has been anticipated for several years. "Over the past few years some funds have been earmarked for the communications major. Also, we expressly set aside space in Wright Annex which will be the center of the communications program." Ryan said that ECU already owns equipment needed for this type of program — personal computers and terminals that can be plugged into the university's main frame system.

Both Ryan and Volpe expect the new degree to attract students. If student demand is large enough, addtional staff and a separate department may be needed. Loessin noted that the curriculum will probably be revised and improved as the program takes shape. With the rapid and constant change in technology, Ryan said, the program may have to be upgraded in the future. "Right now, though," he said, "we are reviewing the program and considering the entrance requirements for the program as approved."

In addition to the chairmen of the drama and speech and English departments, faculty committee members responsible for reviewing the communications program consist of Dr. Carlton Benz, associate professor of drama and speech; Pama Mitchell, lecturer, drama and speech; James Rees, associate professor of drama and speech; Dr. James Holte, assistant professor of English; Dr. Jeanne Scafella, assistant professor of English, and Dr. Kim Smith, assistant professor of English.

According to Volpe, the coordinator will handle overall operation of the new program and will keep close working contact with the chairmen of the drama and speech and English departments. These departments are contained in the College of Arts and Sciences, which will oversee the administration of the communications program.

As for the success of the communications major, Ryan says that input from both students that will be currently enrolled in the program and alumni will be considered. "We'd like to hear from our students as to how well the program is preparing them for jobs," Ryan said. "We also want to establish even greater contact and internships between ECU and the media in the area."

A New 'Community' Bank Proposed By Businessmen

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A group of Greenville area businessmen has joined together in an attempt to form a new locally owned state chartered bank, to be named The State Bank of North Carolina.

Two members of the group, Dr. Eric Fearrington and John Melvin, have been named to represent the group.

A prepared statement announcing the formation of the new bank quoted Melvin and Fearrington as saying, "Since Greenville's only local bank has announced it will be merged this spring into one of the state's largest banks, a need will exist by Greenville area consumers and small businessmen alike for the personalized hometown service offered by a locally owned bank. We look foward to providing the community with its own, locally owned and managed bank."

The statement referred to a merger of the locally-owned First State Bank with the Raleigh-based First Citizens Bank.

Asked to comment on the announcement, Fearrington, a Greenville physician, said "our goal is to have a community bank" with "stockholders ... the guy on the street. We want a people's bank."

Fearrington said there is little, because of strict regulations, that can be said about the proposed bank before an offering brochure is circulated. But he said "we're looking at sites now" for a temporary office and "will be looking at people" to manage the new bank.

He said the group organizing the bank "feels this community needs a home-owned bank" which can make decisions on a local level. "A locally owned bank is necessary" Fearrington suggested.

He added that the group is in the process of filing incorporation papers and making application to the State Banking Commission for a charter.

Melvin, owner of Environment I, a commercial laboratory, said about 15 people are now involved in the effort to form the new bank after "a small group got things rolling."

Melvin, who said the establishment of a new bank is "rather a long process," said "we all hope it's a big success." He said the board of directors is expected to include 8 to 12 members.

Present plans are to make a public stock offering to raise capital for the proposed bank, and Melvin noted that a prospectus is expected to be available about mid-February.

The incorporators have hired Bancorp Associates, a division of Electronic Strategy Associates Inc. of Marietta, Ga., as a consultant to coordinate the application progress, and retained the firm of Robinson, Bradshaw and Hinson as legal counsel.

Bancorp Associates, headed by David R. Madigan, has a successful background in banking and bank charter applications, the prepared release said.

Melvin said Madigan was in Greenville Friday looking at prospective sites for temporary offices for the new bank.

Waste Treatment Rules Blasted

RALEIGH (AP) — Proposed regulations to help a new state board select a site for a hazardous waste treatment plant have drawn fire from businessmen who say the rules are unconstitutional and environmentalists who say they won't protect the public.

The Hazardous Waste Siting Commission is to be appointed in two weeks and the proposed regulations are intended to help the panel recommend a potential site for a hazardous waste treatment plant by July 1.

North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry, representing 1,700 businesses, Friday rejected the plans as repressive, unconstitutional and poorly conceived during a hearing by the Governor's Waste Management Board.

Charles D. Case of the business group said the rules ignore reality by including a section that would set requirements for a plant permit based in part on the concerns of citizens who live near the plant site, rather than uniform state standards.

But Robert B. Smythe of the state Sierra Club said the proposed regulations would prompt picketing and community rebellion by allowing treatment plants within 50 feet of the property line and within a quarter-mile of public institutions.

Smythe suggested tripling the distance requirements and tightening guidelines to ensure that no hazardous-waste treatment plants are within a 100-year floodplain or unstable geologic area.

"We share your concerns," said B. Eugene Hill, director of legislative affairs for the business group. "I can't conceive of one of these facilities being located within a quarter-mile of a school or a hospital or a nursing home."

William L. Meyer, the acting director of the state's Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch, conceded that changes are needed in the proposed regulations, which are scheduled to be adopted next Friday.

Singer Will Face Charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cathy Evelyn Smith, accused of killing comedian John Belushi with an injection of heroin and cocaine, has ended her battle against extradition from Canada and could return to face charges in Belushi's death by Tuesday, authorities said Saturday.

Miss Smith, 37, on Monday was to drop her appeal of a September decision by a Toronto court that she be extradited to the United States to face charges in Belushi's 1982 death, district attorney's spokesman Schuyler Sprowles said.

The former backup rock singer was to be returned to Los Angeles within 24 hours after that, probably on Tuesday, to be arraigned in Superior Court, Sprowles said.

Sprowles refused to say if Miss Smith would be arraigned on all the charges on which she was indicted or if the number was reduced in order to get her to agree to extradition.

The agreement was worked out in lengthy negotiations between the Los Angeles County district attorney's office and Miss Smith's attorneys, said Sprowles.

Her attorney, Brian Greenspan in Toronto, could not be reached for comment, his secretary said Saturday.

Belushi, 33, died March 5, 1982, in a rented bungalow of the Chateau Marmont Hotel on Sunset Strip. A coroner listed the cause of his death as acute heroin and cocaine poisoning.

More than a year later, Miss Smith was indicted by the county grand jury on one count of second-degree murder and 13 counts of furnishing and administering narcotics.

Within three days, Miss Smith surrendered to Toronto police and was released on $75,000 bail, and a protracted legal battle began over her extradition.

On Sept. 12, 1984, a Toronto judge ordered her extradited, but Miss Smith appealed that decision to the Court of Appeal for the Province of Ontario.

Belushi gained fame on NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live" for his wacky portrayals of a Samurai swordsman, a blues singer, a bee and other fanciful characters, then went on to star in such films as "National Lampoon's Animal House," "The Blues Brothers," "Continental Divide" and "Neighbors."

Heavy Burden

MIDDLETOWN, Md. (AP) — If President Reagan's inauguration proceeds without a hitch, John Chambers can heave a sigh of relief.

Chambers, who owns a 100-acre farm near this western Maryland town, has been working on the nuts-and-bolts details of Monday's ceremonies for the past six months as executive secretary of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies.

Chambers, a former congressional reporter, was tapped for the job by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., and has put in many 18-hour days since.

There has been a problem "every hour for the last three weeks, and they range over every conceivable subject," said Chambers.

His responsibilities ranged from making sure enough toilets would be available on the inaugural grounds to making arrangements for photographers. He also has been charged with making sure that proper protocol is observed in providing 40,000 tickets for reserved places at the inaugural.

Chambers said he found the job to be "extraordinarily educational, like one of those troubling semesters you might have in school."

Doctors Amazed At Progress Of Child Found Semi-Frozen

By DOUGLASS DANIEL
Associated Press Writer

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Little more than a day after she was found semi-frozen and declared clinically dead, 3-year-old Megan Birmingham was watching cartoons on television and hugging a Cabbage Patch doll.

The little girl had no heartbeat and had stopped breathing after spending at least four hours lying in the snow when her mother, according to police, apparently put her out of their car in sub-freezing weather.

Even the doctors who labored to save her were amazed at her progress and said she has an excellent chance of recovering completely.

"We're extremely pleased and, I have to admit, surprised as well to see her come along so quickly," said Dr. Robert C. Mathews, director of the emergency department at Olathe Community Hospital.

Megan, reported in fair condition today, was found semi-frozen Thursday by a sheriff's deputy who was part of a search in the southwestern Kansas City metropolitan area. Temperatures were in the low 20s when she was discovered about 6 a.m.

Her mother, Jane Birmingham, 31, of nearby Lenexa, took the girl from their home during the night and told her husband that she had put the child out of their car and had lost her, police said.

"Appropriate action will be taken," said Johnson County District Attorney Dennis Moore on Friday, adding investigators were checking to see "what, if any, problems the mother has had in the past."

Moore would not say whether she was being treated for a physical or mental ailment at Shawnee Mission Medical Center.

"We are extremely elated by Megan's recovery," her uncle, Tom Birmingham, said in a family statement read Friday at a news conference. "We are also concerned at this time about Megan's mother. She is in need of prayers and understanding also. We hope for her speedy recovery also."

Police say the child was wearing only a shirt, dress and leotards when she was found. Her cold, stiff body showed no signs of life.

Emergency room personnel restored her heart rate about an hour later. Her body was slowly warmed with fluids in her veins and abdominal cavity and with a heating pad and blankets against her skin.

Mathews said the girl's core temperature was less than 68 degrees when she was brought Olathe Community Hospital. Few adults or children survive after their core temperature drops into the 60s, he said.

Dr. Michael A. Blum, the girl's pediatrician, said Megan was alert and her appetite was improving. She was being treated for mild pneumonia in her left lung.

No significant tissue damage occurred and she had sensation in her fingers and toes, although she had not moved them, Blum said. Her left eyelid was drooping, a condition from which Blum said he expected her to recover.

Blum said it could be months or a year before the extent of any brain damage may be known.

"Her overall prognosis is excellent," he said.

Temperatures Plunge As Icy System Slides Through U.S.

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

An arctic juggernaut dubbed the "Alberta Clipper" sailed down the middle of the nation Saturday, borne on winds blustering to 35 mph and laden with a cargo of bitter cold that threatened dangerous wind chills all the way to Florida.

Temperatures pitched downward and snow piled up as the icy system moved south, with wind chill readings of 86 degrees below zero in North Dakota and up to two feet of snow possible in parts of Pennsylvania, the National Weather Service said. The storm dumped 15 inches of snow on Michigan and northwest New York state, and chilled much of the Midwest with sub-zero temperatures.

Three people died in traffic accidents on icy roads in Michigan on Friday, and authorities in Bemidji, Minn., said an 18-year-old found dead outdoors on Saturday appaently had died of exposure.

In Florida, the coldest temperatures weren't expected until late Sunday and early Monday, when forecasters predicted the mercury would hit the low 20s in the state's citrus-growing midsection.

"We're going to be on our knees praying," said Harry Rixman, an official with the Florida Department of Citrus in Lakeland. "If it gets down into the low 20s, there's not much of anything that you can do if it's for a long duration."

Citrus growers had oil-burning smudge pots out and were preparing to flood groves, Rixman said. The smoke would warm the plants, and the water would provide a protective layer of warmth.

"If you don't have to, I wouldn't go (outside)," said Ross Carlyon of the weather service office in Minneapolis, where a high temperature of 15 below was forecast Saturday.

"It'll warm up a little bit tomorrow," he said — to zero.

At least three people were treated in Minneapolis for exposure, including a 60-year-old man in critical condition after being found with his hands "solidly frozen," said Dr. Brian Mahoney in the emergency room at Hennepin County Medical Center.

Duluth, Minn., recorded a low of 31 degrees below zero, breaking the old record of 30 below set in 1970. Embarrass, in northeastern Minnesota, reported a low of 38 below.

In Peoria, Ill., a reading of 13 below zero equalled the record low for the date, and the temperature was still falling, the weather service said.

The frigid air blasts of 30 mph also temporarily grounded a race by 26 hot-air balloons on Saturday at Lake Mille Lacs in north-central Minnesota, race organizer Paul Petersen said.

Fargo, N.D., bundled up as a minus-26 reading and a 26-mph north wind drove the wind chill index to 85 below zero, the weather service said.

"Alberta Clipper" is the name given to a frigid air mass that spills from Canada into the Midwest, according to Benny Gullach of the weather service's Omaha, Neb., office.

"As far as the air itself, this is by far the most severe outbreak we've had all year," said Dan Houser, a meteorologist in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The weather system dumped heavy snow around the Great Lakes on Saturday, with 15 inches reported at Holland, Mich., since Friday.

The same amount fell near Buffalo, N.Y., on Saturday, forcing the closing of the Greater Buffalo International Airport, Buffalo's lakefront bridges and the New York State Thruway between Rochester and the Buffalo suburb of Williamsville.

Snow was widespread across the upper Ohio Valley and much of the Appalachian region. Winter storm warnings were posted for northern upper Michigan, western lower Michigan and northwest Pennsylvania, where as much as 2 feet of snow was forecast by Sunday.

Locally heavy snow fell over the mountains of northern West Virginia and western Maryland. Snow spread over portions of eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, southeast New York state and New England.

Travelers' advisories were issued for eastern Kentucky, western Virginia and the northern mountains of North Carolina, with 1 to 3 inches of snow expected.

Up to 4 inches of new snow was on the ground in parts of Missouri, Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska.

The blast of cold air and wind, which dropped wind-chill readings to between 40 and 60 below zero over much of the central Plains and the mid-Mississippi Valley, sent shivers deep into Dixie.

By sunrise Sunday, readings will be about 10 degrees in northern Mississippi and 30 along the Gulf Coast, the weather service said. Accompanying north winds of up to 25 mph will drop wind-chill readings near 20 below in northern Mississippi and around 5 above in the far south.

Still, the frigid temperatures in Michigan's Houghton-Hancock area weren't keeping revelers from preparing for a winter carnival two weeks away, said Will Fontaine, owner of the J.W. Dandy Party Store in Hancock.

"We opened at 8 o'clock and we'll be packed today," Fontaine said. "We've got 15 half-barrels of beer going out and people will be coming in to buy schnapps so they can build snow statues. You've got to keep warm."

Authorities Await Surrender Of Man

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police said Saturday they have used a third party to talk to a man who became a neighborhood hero when he fatally shot a knife-wielding teenager and expect the gunman to surrender.

Police have played down any similarity between the Thursday night shooting and the case of Bernhard Goetz, New York's so-called subway vigilante, who wounded four teenagers who asked him for money.

Authorities, who searched a West Side neighborhood for the gunman, say it is unlikely he will be charged since he apparently acted in self-defense but they still want to speak to him.

"We've talked to him through a third party and he wants assurances he that he won't be harassed by the media," Sgt. Ronald Rewers said. "We're hoping he comes in later (Saturday)."

Witnesses told police the man, about 55 or 60 years old, was walking along a residential street carrying two bags of groceries when two youths brandishing knives approached and demanded money.

The man dropped his groceries, pulled out a handgun and fired, striking one of the youths, Detrick Wallace, 18, in the head, arm and leg, authorities said.

Wallace, who had been kept alive through the use of life-support systems, never regained consciousness after the shooting and died Friday, a University of Illinois Hospital spokesman said.

Wallace's mother, Phyllis Wallace, said her son, the youngest of seven children, was not involved with gangs and was a "good boy."

Wallace's alleged accomplice, who fled after the shooting, was taken into custody Friday night. Detective Philip Ducar said the accomplice could be charged with murder because Wallace died as a result of an apparent robbery attempt.

Mayor Plans Trip Abroad

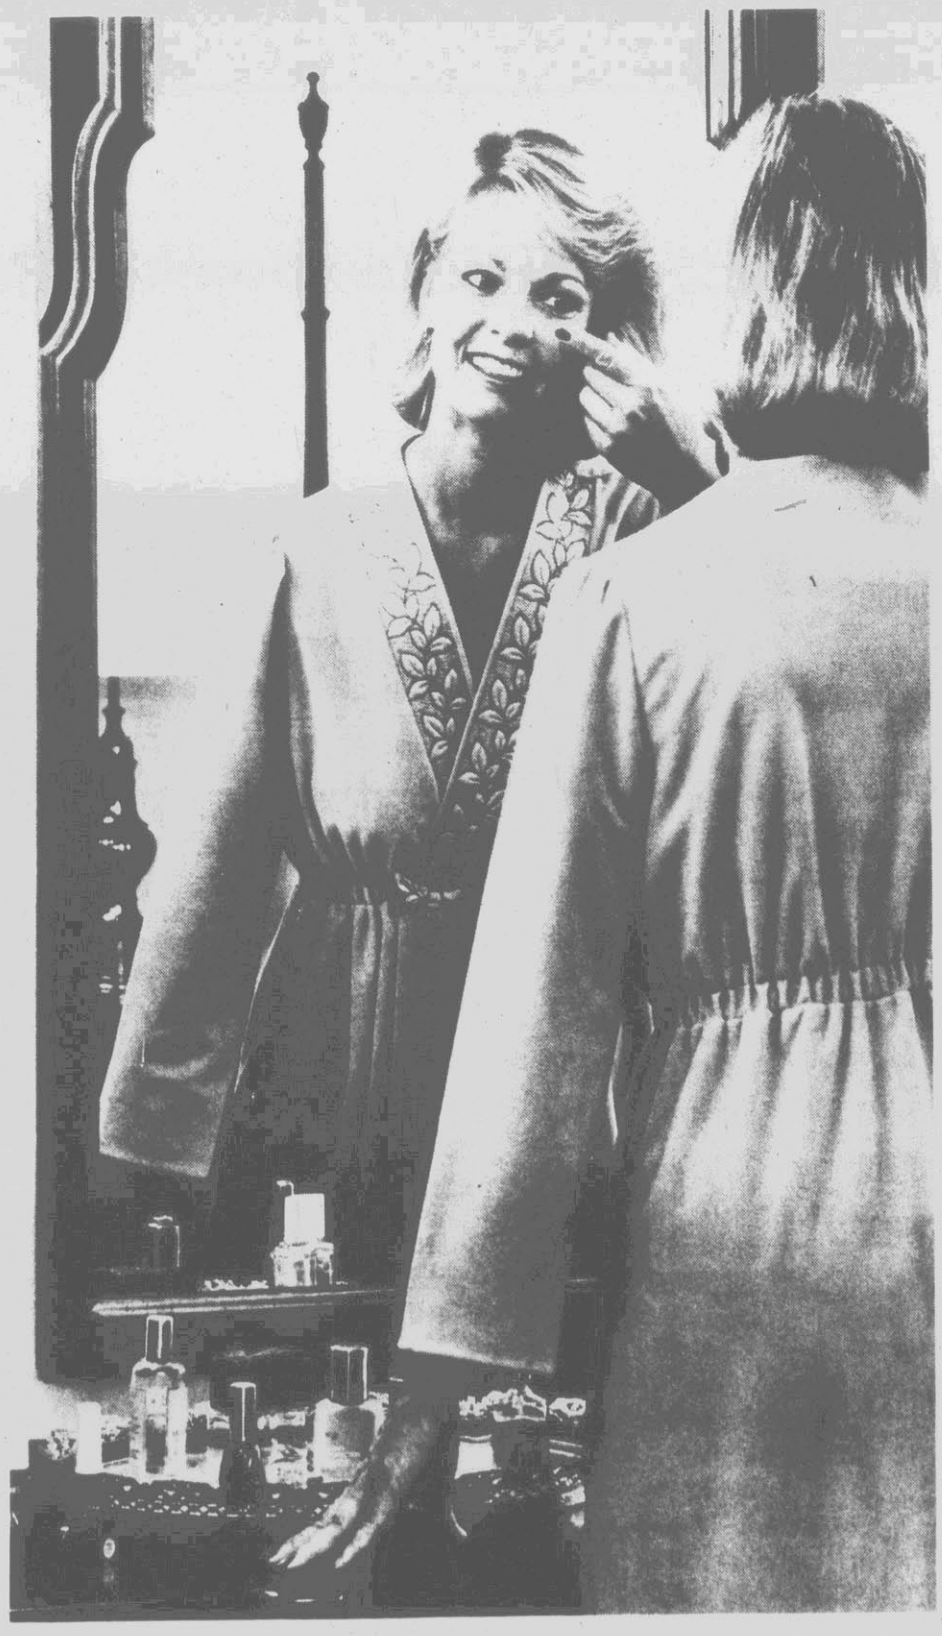

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein is planning a visit to the Middle East in March, her press secretary says. The trip would be her third abroad in five months.

Ms. Feinstein's itinerary will include stops in Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, press secretary Tom Eastham said Friday.

A delegation led by the mayor will travel to Haifa, San Francisco's sister city in Israel, and stop in Egypt at the invitation of Jihan Sadat, the widow of assassinated Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, and visit Jordan at the request of American-born Queen Noor, Eastham said.

The mayor led a city delegation to China, Korea and Hong Kong in November and went to Taiwan in December to sign a shipping contract.

Bush Unsure About Plans For Running

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush said on the eve of his second term Saturday he has never been in better political shape but still hasn't decided whether to seek the White House in 1988.

At a press conference for Texas reporters, Bush said he foresees no second-term change in his role as a quiet adviser to President Reagan, with an emphasis on his foreign policy expertise.

"I have a great chance to shape policy in the next four years," said Bush, with his family sitting off to the side in the ornate Indian Treaty Room two floors above his Executive Office Building headquarters.

Afterwards, Bush invited reporters into his private office and proudly showed them the initials of former presidents and vice presidents carved inside his desk drawer.

Bush also addressed an inaugural youth leadership forum, comparing the Reagan administration to historical "champions of freedom" like George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt.

The vice president was to attend Reagan's gala Saturday night, and drop in at a party given by the Texas State Society, which was presenting him with a longhorn steer as a gift. The animal will be shipped back to Texas and sold, with the money going to charity, aides said.

As for his 1988 plans, Bush — who will be sworn in on Sunday moments before Reagan — said, "I'm not laying groundwork" but that he has given the matter "some thought."

He said he asked an old friend, former Sen. Nicholas Brady, R-N.J., to "get some ideas from a handful of close friends ... as to what it is that minimally has to be done to protect a prudent decision two years from now." But, he added, "There's nothing frantic about it."

In an interview Saturday on CNN's "Evans & Novak" program, Bush said, "I think I will be somewhat more political in the next four years ... but it's not going to be a hyped up political operation of any kind."

He told CNN he would select a "more political" person for his new chief of staff, replacing Dan Murphy, an old friend, who has announced he will leave in a few months.

Bush, asked if he agreed "being vice president does not automatically guarantee you the nomination," replied: "Yeah, I agree" — conceding that he will have to work for the nomination.

In the interview with Texas reporters, the vice president said, "I do think politically I've never been in better shape within our party, and yet I honestly don't know what I'm going to decide to do."

Bush said he learned from Nelson Rockefeller, a predecessor, that his effectiveness could be diminished by battling with the president's staff.

"And I'm determined not only to not get crosswise with the staff but not to get crosswise with the president, because the one thing that matters is the confidentiality between the president and the vice president if this job is going to be more than John Nance Garner described it."

Garner, a Texan who served under Franklin Roosevelt, once described the vice presidency as not worth "a bucket of warm spit."

Asked if he would have to assume a higher profile if he decides after the 1986 midterm elections to run for president, Bush said, "If I should decide to do something ... undoubtedly the profile would be higher. But I don't think that's a near term problem."

Establishing a separate identity from Reagan could be a problem, he conceded, but "I'll cross that bridge if and when I get to it ... I may decide this is something I may not want to do."

Sharon Jury Debates Question Of Malice

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jurors in Ariel Sharon's $50 million libel suit against Time magazine deliberated Saturday on the question of whether Time maliciously published information about the Israeli leader knowing it was probably false.

Weary jurors returned to the U.S. District Courthouse at 9 a.m. after being sequestered overnight. It is their sixth day of deliberations on the complicated three-part verdict.

If the jury rules against Sharon, Israel's former defense minister and now head of trade and industry, he loses his case.

In partial verdicts this week, the six-member jury awarded Sharon two victories by deciding Time's disputed paragraph in a 1983 story was false in linking Sharon to the massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees in Beirut. The four women and two men also found that the paragraph defamed the former Israeli defense minister.

The malice question is the third part of the verdict the jury must consider.

If the jury finds that Time reporters or editors acted with malice, then a "mini-trial" must be held into whether Sharon's reputation was damaged and, if so, how much Time must pay him. Sharon is asking for $50 million.

Under U.S. libel law, a public figure such as Sharon must prove "actual malice" to win a libel suit. He must show either that Time published the paragraph knowing it was false or seriously doubting its accuracy.

On the malice issue, Sharon's attorneys contended Time's Jerusalem correspondent, David Halevy, viciously "fabricated" the dispatch that was the basis for the magazine's disputed account of Sharon.

They maintained that Halevy made up the damning information about Sharon because the Israeli journalist was closely allied to Sharon's political rivals.

At the trial, Sharon's attorneys presented evidence that while at Time, Halevy was a campaign adviser to the Labor Party's Shimon Peres in the 1976 election. Peres, now Israel's prime minister, is a longtime political foe of Sharon and former Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The attorneys also introduced letters written by Halevy in which he denounces Sharon's policies.

On the witness stand, Halevy vehemently denied he had any hostility to Sharon.

He insisted his dispatch in the Time paragraph was accurate and was gleaned from highly placed confidential sources in Israel.

The paragraph in Time's Feb. 21, 1983, edition said that on the eve of the massacre, Sharon "discussed" with Phalangist leaders the need to take revenge for the assassination of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel, commander of the Phalangist militia.

On the courthouse steps Friday, Sharon declared he had won "a clear moral victory" in the jury's partial verdict finding the Time paragraph was false.

"The most important thing we proved is that Time magazine lied," said Sharon, currently Israel's minister of trade and industry. "We spoke the truth and Time magazine lied."

Contending the article was "substantially true," Time managing editor Ray Cave said Time disagrees with the jury's ruling.

Sharon's lawyer, Milton Gould, said the jury's finding exonerated the former Israeli defense minister from an accusation of encouraging a mass murder.

Marine Sues Hospital In Wife's 1983 Death

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A New River Air Station Marine is suing Camp Lejeune's Naval Hospital for $2.5 million in connection with the 1983 death of his 19-year-old wife.

The lawsuit was filed Jan. 9 in the U.S. District Court in New Bern by Jacksonville lawyer L. Robert Coxe III on behalf of Cpl. Tony W. Blevins, 21.

The suit charges that negligence by the hospital caused the death of Blevins' wife, Mary, on Nov. 24, 1983. She was treated by the hospital for an asthmatic condition from April 1983 until her death, the suit says.

According to the suit, Mrs. Blevins was taken to the emergency room of the base hospital suffering from a "severe and life threatening" asthmatic attack about 7 a.m. Nov. 24, 1983. Her treatment consisted primarily of the adminstration of certain drugs to alleviate her "immediate" medical problem and she was released about 9:30 a.m., the suit says.

According to the suit, about noon that day, Mrs. Blevins again suffered a severe attack and her husband attempted to rush her back to the base hospital. She became unconscious en route and Blevins took her to Onslow Memorial Hospital, the suit says. Mrs. Blevins was pronounced dead at 2:04 p.m. at the Onslow hospital following attempts to save her life, the suit says.

The base hospital is charged in the suit with not keeping proper records of Mrs. Blevins' treatment and with negligence for failing to administer correct doses of medicine.

The suit contends she was given "three times" the amount of drugs and medicines that should have been prescribed for her condition and was not "properly instructed" in their use.

In a Nov. 27, 1984, letter to Coxe, Lt. Stephen Merrill, a member of the Navy Reserve and a claims attorney for the Navy, admits the hospital was "remiss" in refilling Mrs. Blevins' prescription in "levels two or three times greater" than medically permissible, but claims she "intentionally" got more medicine by seeing different pharmaceutical aides.

He also pointed to Mrs. Blevins' alleged failure to return to the hospital, as advised, when she began "wheezing again."

In addition, Merrill said a "strong case exists" for implicating the emergency care of Onslow Memorial Hospital as the "actual proximate cause" of Mrs. Blevins' death.

Merrill said the "bottom line" was that Mrs. Blevins' death was "unnecessary" and could have been avoided by any of the parties involved, including "the patient and her husband."

"For its part, the military committed atrocious pharmaceutical record-keeping and failed to identify substance abuse that created an emergency situation," he said. He said the Navy Department wanted to settle the case and offered a settlement substantially less than the amount of the Jan. 9 lawsuit.

Merrill also offered to assist Blevins' attorneys "in whatever way possible" if they decided to pursue an action against the Onslow hospital.

Stuart Popkin, Coxe's law partner, said Friday that his firm has not filed a lawsuit against the Onslow hospital in the Blevins' case.

Shooting Viewed As Criminal Deterrent

By NICK GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — On the mean streets of the South Side, where life grinds hard on the poor and the helpless, a man who turned the tables and a gun on would-be robbers is a hero to some who think his action will make criminals "think twice."

"You've got to carry a gun around here, man," said Willie Young, a customer at an auto parts store a block from the shooting site. "They'll stick you up. It's dangerous."

But Phyllis Wallace, whose son Detrick was killed in the shooting, said: "I feel the man didn't have to shoot my son to kill him. He could have wounded him in the leg.

"I have a lot of grief, but no anger at the man," she said. "I'm just hurt that my son is gone. I was just thinking about how nice my son was, how good my child was."

The man who fired the fatal shot Thursday apparently had bought groceries at Tony Pecho's store and was heading home when two youths stopped him at knifepoint and tried to take his groceries, police said.

Instead, the man, described as 55 to 60 years old, pulled out a gun and shot one youth, while the other escaped, police said. Wallace, 18, of Chicago, died Friday of a gunshot wound to the head, authorities said.

"They (the suspected robbers) got what they deserved," Young said.

"If they wouldn't bother the old man, they wouldn't have got shot.

"He should have shot them both in the head," Young said.

"It's great," said Pecho, owner of Tony's Super Market. "How else are you going to stop this stuff?"

Pecho said he expected the shooting to deter criminals in the area.

"They'll think twice," he said.

A 17-year-old suspected of being the shooting victim's accomplice was in custody Saturday, and police said they hoped to charge the youth if the man who did the shooting came forward.

Police said Saturday they did not know if the man, whose identity they knew but did not release, would be charged.

Pecho, who said he believes he knows who did the shooting, said: "He's a sensible man, if this is the man we're talking about. ... I think he'll eventually come forward. He's known in the neighborhood."

"They (neighbors) agree with what he did," Detective Philip Ducar said Friday.

The shooting occurred on a ravaged residential street marked by untended vacant lots, decrepit houses and junked automobiles.

Broken windows, cracked foundations and graffiti scar the buildings. On the walls of one abandoned brick building, in black paint, are the initials "B.G." identifying the Black Gangsters street gang, and the word, "Disciples," for a rival gang.

The predominantly black neighborhood "has its share of crime," Lt. August Locallo said. "We're not associating this shooting with a gang, but there's gang activity all over the district."

Muggings are "not a daily occurrence," Pecho said. But he noted that his grocery store has been held up several times and that he now employs a full-time security guard.

Other residents say many people have started carrying weapons to protect themselves.

"The young boys shouldn't have messed with that old man," said Jerome, a young man who said he witnessed the shooting. He refused to give his full name.

"They grabbed the old man and twisted his arm behind his back, like the police do," Jerome said.

Demonstrating the man's actions by reaching into his own jacket pocket, Jerome added, "He came out with a .38, and with his left hand he shot three times."

"He's a good man," he said. "He massacred them."

Minnie Oliver, a crossing guard, said Friday she believes the man was right to defend himself. "He had no business handing over the groceries," she said. "He could have got killed himself."

"To a certain extent, it (the shooting) is right to me," added Otis Woods, a grocery delivery truck driver. "People work hard. It is a depression time for people right now. It's not right for some hoodlum to come up and take their groceries.

"There's lots of fear over here," he added.

People outside the neighborhood also were sympathetic.

"So many times, the elderly are being robbed. They're being hurt and being taken advantage of," said Jim Panebianco, a Chicagoan interviewed at a downtown restaurant.

Sylvia Havel, 24, of Chicago said, "It's gotten to the point where communities have to take things in their own hands."

Administration Heads Eye Agreement With GOP Senators On Spending Cuts

By CLIFF HAAS
AP Economic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials said Saturday they hope to reach agreement by the end of next month with Senate Republicans on a compromise package of about $50 billion in federal spending cuts that will be necessary to hold the budget deficit to about $180 billion next year.

The officials also indicated that the political pressures building for the 1986 congressional elections leave the administration and GOP senators little choice but to agree on such a package, including less Pentagon spending than President Reagan wants and more than the senators want.

The comments about the budget Reagan will submit to Congrees on Feb. 4 were made on condition that their source not be identified.

Administration officials last week estimated the value of proposed spending cuts they will propose to Congress at about $50 billion, leaving a $180 billion deficit in the 1986 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

On Saturday, officials indicated that $50 billion has become a benchmark for the cuts they hope to see Congress enact this year and the president's opposition to any tax increases this year to trim deficits was reiterated.

"There can't be any taxes in it," an administration official said of the planned deficit-reduction package. And $50 billion in spending cuts for next year "is the minimum acceptable target for the package."

The president had set a goal of reducing deficits to less than $100 billion by 1988 — a level roughly equal to 2 percent of the gross national product. But administration officials previously acknowledged that the budget the president sends to Congress will fall short of that target.

Senate Republicans, with the cooperation of the White House, are trying to draft a plan that will reach the $100 million goal. White House budget director David A. Stockman has estimated that without action, deficits will be $225 billion to $240 billion in each of the next three years.

But now, it appears that the administration is focusing on achieving the $50 billion in cuts for next year.

The officials emphasized that doing that will take quick action.

"Everybody realizes there's a window of opportunity that doesn't last very long," he said, adding that after about six months action may not be possible.

"Clearly the lead and the initiative has to start on the Senate side," where Republicans control the chamber, the official said.

In addition, Democratic leaders who control the House have said they want to see the Senate Republicans act first this year.

Administration officials want to move quickly, and agree on a package by the end of Congress' recess next month for the Washington-Lincoln birthdays.

"I think there's a decent chance that sometime in the period between when the budget goes up (to Congress on Feb. 4) and the end of the recess (in late February,) we should come to a consensus in the Senate and ... an agreement with the administration that would allow the Senate then to bring a major deficit-reduction package to the floor," the official said.

Senate action, administration officials reason, would put enormous pressure on the House.

"The House will be in a very difficult position if we can get agreement on this package and pass it in the Senate. ... Then it will be clear that the administration and the Senate could move forward effectively, decisively on the fiscal problems ... and now is the House simply going to use its (Democratic) majority to block final implementation?" the official said.

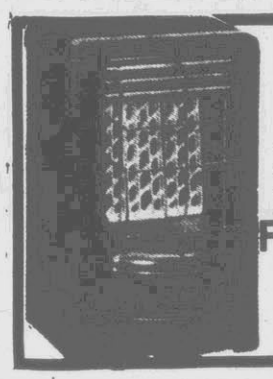

However, the officials concede that even getting agreement between the administration and GOP senators will be difficult considering that the president is pressing for freezing, cutting or eliminating a broad range of domestic spending programs.

But the administration is counting on thoughts about the 1986 congressional elections to spur quick action by the GOP Senate this year.

The pressure facing the GOP senators is "there's 22 of them up (for re-election) in '86, and ... all the rest of them are up in '86 in terms of their powers and prerogatives as committee chairmen" if Republicans lose their majority in the chamber and Democrats take over, the official said.

Committee Says Expand Law

RALEIGH (AP) — Proposals by a legislative study committee would, for the first time, make it a crime in North Carolina for people to give false statements under oath outside a courtroom.

The North Carolina Criminal Code Revision Committee Friday approved expanding the state's perjury law to cover three categories of lying under oath.

Under the new proposals, giving false statements to insurance adjustors, swearing falsely to an official report or making a false affidavit would be considered perjury.

In addition, those who give technically correct statements but intentionally omit key information could be prosecuted for perjury. Committee members studying that proposal expressed concern that it could be abused by prosecutors, especially in cases where someone inadvertently omits vital information while giving testimony.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said defense attorneys often advise their clients to give specific answers and not volunteer additional facts while under cross-examination by prosecutors. He said that omitting information sought by a prosecutor but unknown to a defendant could "make criminals out of about 85 percent of the country."

Davidson District Attorney H.W. Zimmerman Jr., a committee member, agreed that prosecutors expect defendants to avoid giving damaging testimony and must carefully phrase their questions. He said the proposal would make his job easier but added, "I may be pro-state but I'm no neo-Nazi. What are you going to do, indict everyone for perjury?"

Prosecutors who ask open-ended and vague questions could trick defendants, threaten perjury prosecution and use that threat as leverage, Blue said. "I'm not going to say that we're going to see an overwhelming number of prosecutions for this, but we are going to have DA's putting people on the ends of strings. It creates the mentality of a police state."

Sen. Dennis J. Winner, D-Buncombe, applauded the proposal and said omitting key information is as much a lie as giving false statements.

Morgan Mentioned For SBI Position

RALEIGH (AP) — When Attorney General Lacy Thornburg announces a new State Bureau of Investigation director, his selection will likely be former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, well-placed sources told the Associated Press.

Unidentified sources also told the News and Observer of Raleigh that Thornburg will name Morgan at a Raleigh news conference Monday.

Morgan would replace Haywood Starling, a career SBI agent who stepped down as director Jan. 5 after heading the bureau for eight years.

The sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified, told The Associated Press that Morgan and Thornburg discussed the position by telephone Friday. One source said Morgan "definitely" was Thornburg's choice, but another said the decision wasn't final.

Morgan, 59, could not be reached for comment. A receptionist at his Lillington law office said he was "unavailable."

WRAL-FM in Raleigh said the leading candidate for the job was believed to be Charles Dunn, executive director of the North Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association. Dunn was chief of the SBI under the administrations of former governors Bob Scott and Jim Holshouser, but sources told the station Dunn refused the job after he received a pay raise from the association.

The report also said a deal was struck between Thornburg and Morgan earlier Friday.

John Simmons, spokesman for Thornburg, would not say whether Morgan would get the job. He acknowledged that Thornburg had held meetings on the subject Friday, but wouldn't say who the candidates were.

Attorney general himself from 1968-74, Morgan is credited with helping make the SBI more professional. He lobbied hard for more money for the agency and started the North Carolina Justice Academy in Salemburg to train police officers.

Morgan has repeatedly said he would like to return to the Senate. Elected in 1975 to succeed the retiring Sen. Sam Ervin, Morgan was defeated in his 1980 re-election bid by Republican John East.

Morgan bitterly accused Helms of masterminding East's campaign, which relied heavily on television commercials critical of Morgan, and hinted that he might challenge Helms in 1984. He didn't, and Helms won his third term by defeating Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

Morgan hasn't said whether he would run against East in 1986. Political observers have speculated that Morgan and other contenders would wait until Hunt announces whether he will run. Hunt aides say he will wait at least six months to decide.

Since his defeat, Morgan has practiced law in his hometown of Lillington and lobbied the General Assembly on behalf of industry. Last year, he represented the state's soap and detergent industry in its opposition to a proposed ban of phosphates in laundry detergents.

Starling, 62, retired Jan. 5. When he announced his departure last month, he said the SBI needed new leadership.

Ministers Want National Revival To Halt Abortion

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Nine Onslow County ministers called for a national revival to stop abortion Saturday during a memorial service at a Jacksonville park for fetuses aborted since 1973.

About 30 people attended the service, which was sponsored by the Jacksonville chapter of the national Right to Life organization.

Tom Henderson, who organized the service, said it was a memorial for the 2,600 to 2,700 babies he estimated are aborted each year in Onslow County.

"The answer (to abortion) is to have a revival in the nation," the Rev. James Gilbert of the United Pentecostal Church in Jacksonville said. He said large familes are no longer popular, and "No families seem to be popular anymore."

Other ministers representing Baptist, Catholic and Church of God congregations also spoke during the hour-long service. They each called abortion "murder" and said the Bible indicates life begins at conception.

Henderson said he could support abortion when the life of the mother is threatened, but not in cases of rape or incest "because there are two victims — the mother and the innocent baby."

He said about 15 county residents will travel to Washington for an abortion protest march Monday. The 12th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision making abortion legal is Tuesday.

Henderson said the group plans no other observances of the anniversary, but will continue its weekly protests at a Jacksonville abortion clinic.

Petition Rejected

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina State Bar Friday refused to reinstate disbarred Durham lawyer Art Vann III, who contended he did not get a fair hearing before a disciplinary hearing committee.

It was the second time in two years that Vann's petition for reinstatement had been rejected. Vann pleaded guilty in 1979 to 11 counts of forging judges' names to fake traffic court judgements and served six months in jail for forging a client's signature on a check.

Vann, 40, said he would appeal the rejection to the state Court of Appeals.

Girl Scouts Start Annual Cookie Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — The Girl Scouts have kicked off their annual cookie drive with new boxes designed to prevent the tampering that marred last year's campaign, the group's executive director said Saturday.

This year, a "good, substantial glue" holds the ends of the boxes and a tear strip has been added to discourage tampering, said Frances Hesselbein. The inner package also has been heat-sealed.

Cookie sales began Saturday in St. Louis, home of one of the Girl Scouts' largest area councils, and will get under way "on various days over the next several months" in the organization's 335 other councils, said Mrs. Hesselbein, who heads the Girl Scouts of the USA, headquartered here.

Last year's sales were hurt by reports of pins and glass bits found in some of the cookies, causing the campaign to be cut short in some areas of the country.

"What we have noticed is the remarkable support of the American public for our tradition of 49 years," said Mrs. Hesselbein. "We're looking forward to successful sales."

Every council sells butter cookies, peanut butter cookies "and the famous chocolate mint," she said. In addition, individual councils can choose to sell chocolate chip, lemon-filled, coconut and other varieties offered by their area bakery.

Mrs. Hesselbein said the cookie drive will continue in various parts of the country until mid-May.

Although the national organization does not set sales goals, some of the local councils do.

In St. Louis, the 33,000 Girl Scouts in the area's 2,439 troops are hoping to sell 2,226,000 boxes of the cookies at $1.75 per box, according to Council Chairman Sue Clancy.

An FBI investigation cleared the baker last month of any fault in the reported tamperings last year. Businesses and individuals in St. Louis supported a drive called Operation Cookie Jar to help the council recoup its losses from the cookie drive, which was called off when reports of tainted cookies persisted.

Officials said the program raised $600,000 and saved the summer camping programs and other activities supported by the cookie sale.

Black Leaders Discuss Ways To 'Recapture' White Voters

ATLANTA (UPI) — Black Democratic Party leaders from across the South held a unity meeting in Atlanta Saturday to discuss ways of attracting white voters back to the party.

"We all understand what we have to do," said Bob Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. "We have to recapture our white voters."

Slagle said the Democratic Party lost its white middle class voters in the last presidential election partly because of the southern strategy of the Republican Party which concentrated on winning the votes of the white middle class voters.

Paul Kirk, a Boston lawyer and a candidate for the post of Democratic National Committee chairman, said the "national Democratic Party has been a burden rather than an asset to local Democrats."

He said he wants to "bring people together to win back the respect of the people for the party."

"You can't have a northern liberal (running for president) and win in the South," said Bert Lance, chairman of the Georgia Democratic Party.

But at the end of all the oratory and back-slapping the gathering of approximately 100 black party leaders and candidates for the committee chairmanship ended only with an agreement to meet again and no agenda for promoting unity or encouraging white voters to return to the fold.

The conference decided not to endorse anyone for the national committee chairmanship.

Party representatives from 12 states showed up at the conference — Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Joe Reed, a black Democratic leader from Montgomery and coordinator of the conference, said "if we work together we can capture the White House in 1988. We can make national politics behave by working together."

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young and Birmingham Mayor Richard Arrington blamed poor organization and lack of party unity for the defeat of the Democratic presidential ticket in the November election.

"I'm not so sure we lost on issues, but it's clear we were out-organized.

Young said the the purpose of the meeting is to "see where we go from here, to pick up the pieces."

Arrington said "we're not only being out-spent but out-organized and out-worked.

"We are not a party coming apart just because we lost the presidential election. The Reagan election is not a new re-alignment if you look at the past five presidential elections."

Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said "Mr. Reagan didn't win the election because he was right. He won because he was popular."

He said black voters "are going to turn less and less to parties and more to issues."

Attending the meeting were two other candidates for the chairmanship of the narional committee in addition to Kirk. They were Sharon Pratt Dixon, a black national committeewoman from the District of Columbia; and Nancy Pelosi, past chairwoman of the California Democratic Party.

Reagan Plans To Speak At Anti-Abortion Rally

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Abortion opponents rallied across the nation Saturday, kicking off a 3-day protest to be highlighted Tuesday by President Reagan's speech to a "March for Life" in the nation's capital.

Abortion proponents maintained weekend vigils to guard against attacks on clinics.

With the 12th anniversary of the Supreme Court abortion decision Tuesday and the presidential inauguration Monday, federal officials warned of a renewed threat of attacks against abortion clinics.

Feminist groups responded by maintaining vigils over the weekend at clinics, 30 of which nationwide have been firebombed since 1982.

To mark the Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions, Reagan will speak at the "March for Life" protest, the annual rite of dissent against the abortion ruling, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

A group of anti-abortion activists announced they will hold a sit-in at the Supreme Court following Tuesday's march.

Saturday, anti-abortion protests were held in Atlanta, Pensacola, Fla., St. Louis, Mo., Augusta, Ge., Concord, N.H., Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

At a rally in St. Louis, NOW spokeswoman Kathy Krupp said, "The anti-abortion violence is continuing — and it's getting worse."

Evening Contact Lens Clinic

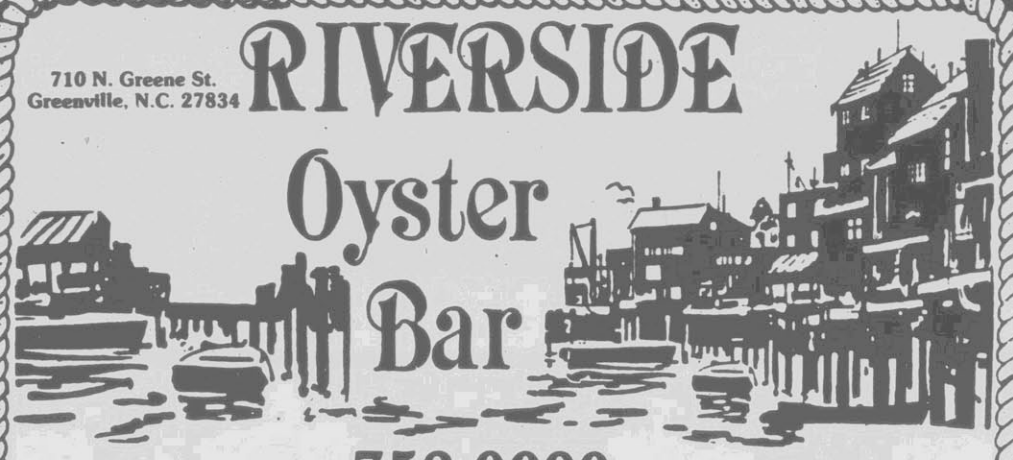

We are happy to announce the inception of a special evening contact lens clinic for difficult contact lens problems. Consultations are available for those who have previously been unable to wear lenses successfully or who have complex problems such as astigmatism, bifocals or keratoconus. Those accepted for fitting, who are not fully satisfied with the result, will receive full refunds in most cases.

Richmond Downs ECU 63-50

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va. — Freshman Peter Woolfolk scored 16 second half points to lead the University of Richmond to a 63-50 ECAC-South victory over East Carolina University last night.

Woolfolk, who finished the game with 20 points, high for the night, helped the Spiders dominate inside play in the second half, as Richmond pulled out to as much as a 15-point lead, then held off the Pirates in the closing minutes to run their league record to 3-1. East Carolina, 5-8 overall, drops to 0-3 in the league.

The Pirates held an early lead, but fell behind by as many as eight in the first half before the Spiders took control for most of the second half. East Carolina shot poorly after an opening spurt, ending up with only 40.4 percent for the game. Richmond hit on 41.4 percent, but made up for it at the foul line.

As they have in their other league starts, the Pirates seldom saw the ball on their own foul line. ECU was whistled for 23 fouls, and sent the Spiders to the line 33 times, where they hit 25. The Pirates went to the line but four times, making two of them, as Richmond committed only nine fouls.

"I don't think that our defense is that bad," Coach Charlie Harrison said of the Pirates. "Most of the fouls came on break down situations. Too, it seems that when we go inside and get bumped, it's incidental contact, and when they go inside and get bumped, it's a foul. But that's my opinion.

"We're more aggressive on the ball than most of the other teams in the conference and that may be a reason, too."

The Pirates did play good defense, especially on Richmond leaders John Newman and Kelvin Johnson. Newman, averaging 20 points a game, hit only 10, and was just three of ten from the floor. Johnson finished with 11, making but two of nine from the floor.

"The defense did just what was needed except for a few times against the fast break," Harrison said.

The Pirate coach thought his team played well until Leon Bass drew his second foul midway through the half and was benched to protect him. After that, the Pirates failed to get the ball inside productively.

"We had the chance. There were a number of opportunities when we created someone on one end of the floor and couldn't on the other. If we could have changed the outcome of several possession, we could have won the ball game."

The Pirates were somewhat handicapped by the loss of freshman guard Herb Dixon, who suffered a chipped bone in his right wrist Thursday in practice. He did not suit up for the game and his status for Monday night's game with Howard is also questionable.

"Not having Herbie to come off the bench to spell Scotty (Hardy) hurt, of course. But Scotty's a gutty player," Harrison noted. He also said that Derrick Battle, who started the last two games, did not play at all against the Spiders because he has not been playing or practicing well.

In the meanwhile, the Pirates got what was probably the best game out of Roy Smith since early last year. The sophomore played 25 minutes, was three of six from the floor and had four rebounds.

The Pirates took the early lead, pulling out to as much as a five-point spread seven minutes into the game, 12-7, led behind the scoring of William Grady and Bass. But after Bass scored from underneath with 13:03 showing, the Pirates didn't get another field goal for the next six minutes. In the meantime, Richmond put on a rally that charged the Spiders into the lead.

During the rally, ECU got only two free throws from Bass, who shortly thereafter went to the bench with his second foul. John Davis hit a free throw and added two jumpers, tying it at 14-14, then putting UR ahead, 16-16 with 9:18 to go.

East Carolina tied it up on a jumper by Curt Vanderhorst from the corner, but Steve Kratzer returned the lead to the Spiders, 18-16, with 6:38 left, and they proceeded

Dawkins, Devils Topple Carolina

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — No. 2 Duke, outsized and coming off two Atlantic Coast Conference losses, found a way to spring Johnny Dawkins free for a career-high matching performance while outhustling No. 6 North Carolina's big men.

Despite his 34-point one-man show in the 93-77 basketball victory, Dawkins spoke of teamwork.

"The guys were deflecting balls, they were running screens to get me open," he said. 'I don't think we've played this hard for 40 minutes this year. I'm supposed to make the open shots and I'm glad I did."

Dawkins, held under 10 points for the second time in his 76-game career in Duke's loss to Wake Forest, said Coach Mike Krzyzewski helped him recover the spark.

"Coach met with me and took steps to make sure I'm mentally in the game," he said. "Once you do that, it's pretty easy."

Krzyzewski said his team did everything he asked in breaking the losing streak and coming back from a halftime tie.

"We had to take advantage of our quickness," he said. "In the first half we were playing too much behind the man. When we came back, there was a concerted effort to play smarter."

North Carolina center Brad Daugherty, who saw countless passes deflected from Tar Heel hands in the second half, said, "they really switched well inside."

"They just denied us the ball real well inside," he said. "We weren't able to post up as well as we'd like to."

"The key to the game was rebounding," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "Their quickness to rebounds was remarkable. At 51-49 we had four good shots and didn't make them. That's when Dawkins hit a couple of long ones from the corner."

Mark Alarie added 19 points in the victory. Meanwhile, Dawkins moved into 11th place in Duke scoring with 1,444, replacing all-America Mike Lewis, who had 1,416.

Duke, after a see-saw first half that ended tied 39-39, never trailed in the final period. The Blue Devils got 10 points from Dawkins as they outscored the Tar Heels 29-14, at one point holding North Carolina scoreless for more than seven minutes.

Duke slowed the pace and North Carolina crept to within 72-64 on a Kenny Smith steal and dunk but could pull no closer. Good free-throw shooting down the stretch helped Duke move to an 18-point advantage in the waning seconds as four Tar Heel players fouled out.

Charles Powers Pack By Seminoles 72-66

RALEIGH (AP) — Forward Lorenzo Charles scored 23 points and guard Ernie Myers added 15 as North Carolina State beat Florida State 72-66 in a non-conference college basketball game Saturday night.

The Wolfpack, 10-5, stretched a 37-31 halftime lead to 44-33 three minutes into the second half when Charles grabbed a behind-the-back pass from Spud Webb and dunked the ball.

N.C. State led by as many as 14 in the second half as the Seminoles never got closer than four in falling to 7-7. Florida St., which has now lost six of its last seven games, beat the Wolfpack 74-71 in overtime in the opening round of the National Invitation Tournament last season.

The Seminoles got 16 points from guard Dean Shaffer, while forward Randy Allen added 14, center Alton Gipson 11 and guard Joe Farrar 10.

Webb added 10 points for the Wolfpack.

N.C. State led by as many as seven points in the first 20 minutes before grabbing a six-point halftime lead over the Seminoles.

Florida State cut a six-point deficit to one with 4:48 left on a baseline jumper by Farrar. But Webb stole the ball and converted it into a layup and fed Charles and Nate McMillan for buckets as the Wolfpack grabbed a 35-28 lead with 2:51 left.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — This is the way it was supposed to be from the start, No. 1 vs. No. 1.

The San Francisco 49ers, tops in the NFC at 15-1, and the Miami Dolphins, best in the AFC at 14-2, play Sunday for the National Football League championship in Super Bowl XIX, a game heavy in hyperbole and boasting two quarterbacks who may be ready to support every word of it.

It is a different Super Bowl in at least one way, even before President Reagan conducts a televised coast-to-coast coin flip to determine who kicks off.

Played just 35 miles south of San Francisco, it marks only the second time in 19 Super Bowls that the game has been played in the home area of one of the participants. The other [illegible] Pittsburgh Steelers in a game played in Pasadena.

It also features the [illegible] coaches who, try as they might, cannot shake off [illegible].

It's Don Shula of the Dolphins, whose winning percentage is the best ever am[illegible] Bill Walsh, who turned the 49ers from the league's worst team into a Super Bowl winner in three years and whose complex offenses have forced defensive strategists to the limits.

And it matches defenses that, if not the most glamorous in the league, certainly are among the best.

More than anything, though, the spotlight that two weeks of buildup and 2,000 news media members brings to the NFL's annual exercise in excess has focused on the two quarterbacks, and has shone most brightly on one man — Miami's Dan Marino.

In just his second profesional year, Marino shattered the NFL records for touchdown passes with 48 and yards with 5,804. His impact is such that he has made San Francisco's quarterback, Joe Montana, merely mortal despite a completion percentage of 64.6, 3,630 yards and 28 touchdowns — All-Pro figures in any other year. Despite Marino's numbers, the 49ers are a three-point favorite.

By all normal signs, then, it should at last be a super Super Bowl, worthy of the $1,000-a-ticket prices being charged by scalpers and the $1 million-a-minute fees charged by ABC for the privilege of advertising on its first-ever NFL championship game, with kickoff scheduled for 6:15 p.m. EST.

If that happens — if the forecast of favorable weather holds and the game is competitive, relatively error-free and close — it will be a godsend for the NFL following two years of declining television ratings, escalating salaries, wandering franchises and lawsuits.

If it doesn't happen — if it rains, if the game ends 10-6 [illegible] if there are too many turnovers — it may be taken as another sign of the NFL's decline.

But a dull game would be a surprise, maybe even a shock. For this one has all the ingredients.

[illegible] the quarterbacks and start there with Marino, who suffered a brief dizzy spell before practice [illegible] in fine shape for the game.

His poise, his quick release — he's been sacked only [illegible] games — and his rocket-like arm bring raves.

"He throws balls that allow receivers that keep running, not balls that make them slow up to catch them," Walsh said.

But even more important is his ability to produce touchdowns in bunches — three, for example, in 3 minutes and 18 seconds in the AFC title-game win over the Pittsburgh Steelers that turned a 14-10 deficit into a 31-14 lead. That ability, in turn, gives the Miami offense confidence that it's unstoppable and the defense the knowledge that if it surrenders a score, Marino will get it right back.

Montana is a different type of quarterback, but just as effective in an offense balanced between Montana and 1,262-yard rusher Wendell Tyler.

Koncak's 29 Leads SMU Past TCU

DALLAS (AP) — Seven-foot center Jon Koncak scored 29 points, collected 13 rebounds and hit four free throws in the final minute Saturday to carry third-ranked Southern Methodist to a hard-earned 74-70 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Texas Christian.

SMU raised its overall record to 15-1 — the best start in the school's history. The Mustangs are 5-0 in league play. The Horned Frogs, who got a season-high 28 points from guard Dennis Nutt, dropped to 9-8 and 1-5.

The Mustangs received help from an unexpected source — reserve sophomore guard Johnny Fuller, who scored 11 points and made two key steals during a 10-point run midway in the second half.

Carl Wright added 15 points and 10 assists to the well-balanced SMU attack, while Larry Davis chipped in 13 points.Carven Holcombe had 17 points for the Horned Frogs and Marc Houston added 10.

The Mustangs led only 31-29 at halftime on Koncak's tip-in of a Wright miss at the buzzer.

The Horned Frogs made excellent use of the 45-second clock to keep SMU out of its run-and-gun game. Holcombe had 11 points in the first half — mostly on long-range bombs over the packed SMU zone.

Wright hit five of his first six shots and had 10 points at halftime.

St. John's (4).....66
Boston College (15)...59

BOSTON (AP) — Guard Chris Mullin hit the 20-point mark for the 50th time in his intercollegiate career and fourth-ranked St. John's rallied in the final six minutes Saturday for a 66-59 Big East basketball victory over 15th-ranked Boston College.

Mullin, an All-American guard and 1984 U.S. Olympic star, scored 24 points, including 16 in the second half, when St. John's overcame a 10-point deficit and went onto its 13th victory and eighth in a row since an upset by Niagara.

Boston College, which had won 12 games in a row at Boston Garden since Jan. 27, 1977, ran out of steam down the stretch.

The small but quick Eagles, who play home games away from the campus only occasionally, shook off the loss of their tallest player, 6-foot-9 center Trevor Gordon, just before game time. Gordon was declared ineligible until he completes first-semester work on one subject.

St. John's, 5-0 in the Big East, jumped to a 14-7 lead, but BC ran off 10 unanswered points to go in front. The Redmen managed to pull into a 22-22 tie before BC grabbed a 28-24 lead at halftime.

BC, 11-4 and 2-4 in the conference, charged to a 40-30 lead in the first four minutes of the second half. However, Mullin cashed two free throws, triggering a run of 11 points in a row and a 41-40 lead for St. John's

With BC ahead 46-44 and 5:44 left, Mullin tied the score for the fourth time in the half with a 20-foot jumper. BC regained the lead on a free throw, but St. John's went in front to stay on a basket by Walter Berry and two by Mullin. BC was unable to get closer than three points the rest of the way.

Berry, with 13 points, was the only other St. John's scorer in double figures. Michael Adams had 15 points and Terrence Talley 12 in topping BC.

Memphis State (5).....69
Louisville 66

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) —Keith Lee, hindered most of the game by foul trouble and a collapsing defense, slammed home a dunk and sank a free throw with 1:38 left to key No. 5 Memphis State's 69-66 Metro Conference college basketball victory over Louisville Saturday.

The victory, Memphis State's first over Louisville in Freedom Hall since 1976, lifted the Tigers to 13-1 overall and 3-1 in the conference. Louisville fell to 9-6 and 2-2.

Freshman guards Vincent Askew and Dwight Boyd keyed Memphis State with 16 and 11 points, respectively, as they made up for a lack of production from Memphis State's big men.

Lee, who had been averaging 22 points a game, finished with 11, and seven-foot center William Bedford, who got all six of his points in the first minutes of the first half.

Lee's three-point play broke a 64-64 deadlock and provided the needed cushion for victory, although Louisville failed on several chances to catch up in the last minute.

Louisville guard Chris West hit a five-footer with 53 seconds left to pull Louisville to within 67-66 and the Cardinals immediately fouled Askew. He missed the front end of a bonus situation, but Louisville's Billy Thompson turned the ball over with 17 seconds left.

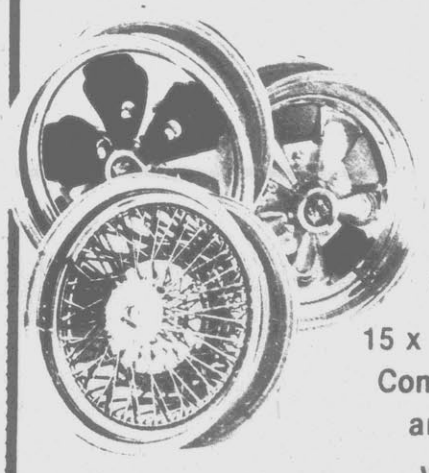

Louisville immediately fouled again, this time picking on guard Andre Turner. Turner again missed the first free throw and Louisville rebounded.

The Cardinals called a timeout to set up a final shot, with Jeff Hall taking a 20 footer with about 10 seconds left. Hall missed and freshman forward Herbert Crook rebounded the errant shot and was fouled as he shot.

Foster's 15 Leads Lady Pirate Win

Guard Loraine Foster paced three Lady Pirates in double figures as East Carolina rolled to its third straight ECAC-South victory, 89-54 over George Mason Saturday night at Minges Coliseum.

Foster's game-high 15 points included 13 in the first half as the Lady Pirates jumped out to a 49-25 halftime lead. East Carolina, after enjoying 77.8 percent shooting from the field in the first half, cooled off in the final half to finish at 58.1 percent with 36-of-62 attempts.

"With so many people playing and scoring it might not help our individual leaders, but that's fine with me," said ECU Coach Emily Manwaring, who watched her team improve its overall record to 7-8 while running its league mark to 3-0 atop the ECAC-South. "Now we can rely on everyone to score, and that opens things up for us.

"We changed from a man-to-man defense to a match-up zone after the Christmas break, and when it works someone is onthe ball everywhere it goes," Manwaring said. "Besides our improvement on defense, we are running the transition better."

Most of Foster's points came off full-court passes as she was able to get behind the Mason defense most of the first half. The Lady Pirate reserves played much of the second half, as Manwaring used the opportunity to gain bench experience.

Center Alma Bethea finished with 13 points, while Anita Anderson had 10 points, six rebounds and two blocked shots. Bethea also grabbed six rebounds.

Junior Sylvia Bragg, averaging 11.3 points going into the game, scored just eight points but handed out seven assists, just one short of her season high of eight against Iona.

The Lady Pirates played one of their best defensive games of the season as no George Mason player reached their scoring average. Only two players, Linda Jones and Bobbie Pugh, reached double figures as each accounted for 10 points.

The loss dropped George Mason to 5-7 on the season and 0-2 in the ECAC-South. The Lady Pirates host American Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Andrews Lead GCA, Girls Drop Decision

WILMINGTON — Dan Andrews pumped in 16 points and Paul Hollingsworth added 12 to lead Greenville Christian to a 45-37 victory over Wilmington Saturday in high school basketball.

The girls game ended in controversy, as Lynnette Campbell came off the bench to sink the winning bucket at the buzzer after apparently fouling out in the third quarter. Wilmington won the game with the shot, 43-42.

Campbell was whistled for her fifth foul in the third quarter and waved off the floor, but a correction was made to the scorebook later in the game. Despite protest by GCA Coach Dale Thatcher, Campbell was allowed to play and eventually hit the game-winning field goal.

"I don't want to point the finger at her, but it just doesn't sit very well," Thatcher said. "I thought we had it at the end, but they made that shot at the buzzer to pull it out.

"We came out slow in the first quarter and got ourselves backed up to the wall, but I'm not satisfied with the game itself."

Karen Suggs led Wilmington with 20 points, while Patti Carr retaliated with 20 for Greenville Christian. Kim Faulkner chipped in 11 for GCA.

Keith Campbell paced Wilmington with 14 points, while John Long added 11.

GCA held a 17-15 halftime edge, then pulled away 33-23 after the third quarter. Wilmington was forced to foul in the final period, and GCA held on despite a 14-12 scoring deficit.

"They're probably one of the toughest teams we play," Thatcher said. "The guys were ready to play. Our guards played well and kept turnovers down; I'm hoping we'll start seeing some more of this.

"Our defense played well double-teaming Campbell and Long, their big scorers. We played the percentages, and we won."

The GCA boys are now 7-8, while the girls stand 9-4. Greenville Christian hosts Trinity Tuesday.

North Pitt Downs Vikes, Pant-HERS Top Tarboro

BETHEL — North Pitt used a balanced scoring attack and stingy defense to defeat Tarboro 59-41 Saturday in 3-A non-conference high school basketball action.

Alfred Braxton paced the Panthers with 12 points, while Clifton Williams added 11 and Levon Shaw 10. Williams and guard Gentry Sneed sparked the North Pitt defense, according to Coach Cobby Deans.

"We've played pretty well the last week," Deans said. "Gentry Sneed and Clifton Williams had an outstanding defensive game for us.

"We take a break for exams next week. If we can come out that we'll be all right."

Tony Bryant led Tarboro with 15 points.

In the girls game, Regina Cox fired in 20 points and Bernice Teen Wilkins chipped in 16 to lead the Pant-HERS to a 48-38 win over Tarboro.

Belinda Winnegon paced Tarboro with 16 points, and Kim Smith added 13.

The Panthers are now 14-1 overall, while the Pant-HERS are 7-9. North Pitt returns to action Thursday at Eastern Carolina Conference rival Ayden-Grifton.

Tigers Topple Cavs

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Glenn Corbit scored 16 points, including nine in a first-half runaway, to lead Clemson to an 82-62 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Virginia Saturday afternoon.

The Tigers already held a 20-6 edge with 11:20 to play in the first half when Corbit hit a 20-foot jumper and then stole the ball and scored on a dunk. He had 11 points in the half.

Virginia hit three of its first 12 shots from the field and turned the ball over 13 times in the first half. Center Olden Polynice, the team's leading scorer, had two points in the first half as Clemson took a 37-18 halftime lead.

Clemson held its biggest lead at 44-20 early in the second period but Tom Sheehey scored 10 points in a five-minute stretch to cut the lead to 55-40 with 9:44 to play. The Tigers pushed the lead back to 60-40 with 7:47 left when they got a field goal from Glen McCants, a free throw from Grayson Marshall and two free throws from Vince Hamilton.

The Cavaliers could get no closer than 16 the rest of the way.

McCants added 14 and Hamilton 13 for the Tigers, who climbed to 10-5 and 2-3 in the ACC.

Forward Tom Sheehey led Virginia, 8-8 and 0-5, with 18. Reserve guard Mel Kennedy had 16.

It was the first game of a five-game home stand for the Tigers and Coach Cliff Ellis said, "I like the possibilities for this home stand. I know that Georgia Tech will be like a pack of wild dogs gunning for us."

The Tigers beat the Yellow Jackets in Atlanta earlier this year.

from there to build as much as an eight-point lead, 28-20, before Vanderhorst scored with two seconds left to cut it to 28-22 at intermission.

The two teams swapped baskets through the first five minutes of the second half, but then Woolfolk sparked a string of nine straight points that gave the Spiders a 43-28 lead with 11:09 left.

East Carolina slowly chipped away at the lead, cutting it to as little as seven, 49-42 with 3:46 remaining, but they were never able to convert after that.

Trailing by ten with 1:04 left, the Pirates began to foul, sending Richmond to the line three times in the final minute, while hitting but once themselves.

While Woolfolk had 20, Johnson finished with 11 and Newman and John Davis each had 10. East Carolina was led, as usual, by Grady with 18 and Vanderhorst with 12.

The Pirates travel on to Washington, D.C., on Monday to face Howard University in an 8 p.m. game. They are back home on Saturday to host league-leading Navy in another ECAC-South game.

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — B.J. Springer made four straight free throws in the final 10 seconds to lead North Carolina-Wilmington a 75-71 victory over American University in an ECAC-South college basketball contest Saturday.

Springer also ignited a 6-0 Seahawk scoring spree that allowed them to turn a 66-65 deficit into a 71-66 advantage late in the game, and UNC-Wilmington never trailed thereafter.

Center Brian Rowsome and Springer each scored 19 points for the Seahawks, who upped their record 7-6 and 2-3.

Hoyas Outrun Pitt 65-53

Taking Aim

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Patrick Ewing turned in a dominating second-half performance at both ends of the court as top-ranked Georgetown, after taking more than half the game to get untracked, raced to a 65-53 Big East Conference basketball victory over Pittsburgh on Saturday.

The All-America center scored 18 points, grabbed eight rebounds, blocked five shots and intimidated many others as the Hoyas, 17-0, remained unbeaten and extended their two-season winning streak to 28 games. They are 6-0 in the Big East.

Pitt, buoyed by a crowd of 16,532, the largest to see a basketball game in the city's history, grabbed a 28-26 lead early in the second half until Ewing ignited a 12-2 scoring surge that gave the Hoyas a 40-30 lead with 12:10 remaining.

Georgetown never led by any fewer than six points after that.

"A couple of years ago, this is the kind of game we would have lost," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson, whose team is trying to repeat its 1984 national championship. "But the kids are learning how to play on the road, win these kinds of games."

Georgetown, coming off an 85-44 Big East rout of Providence, was "stale" early in the game, Ewing said.

"We knew they were going to be all fired up because everybody is fired up when they play us," Ewing said. "But we played our game in the second half. That's what basketball is all about, taking the opportunities the opposition gives you. We did that better in the second half than we did in the first half."

Ewing scored four points during Georgetown's scoring run and set up another basket with a forceful block of a shot by Pitt freshman Charlie Smith.

"I was pleased with our perfomance, considering we were playing against one of if not the best centers in the country," said Pitt Coach Roy Chipman.

Ewing hit a twisting jumper in the lane with 15:47 to play to give Georgetown the lead for good at 30-28. Reggie Williams then connected on a long jumper to give the Hoyas their first four-point lead.

After a Joey David basket for Pitt, the Hoyas ran off eight straight points started by a 15-foot Michael Jackson jumper and a Bill Martin layup on a long outlet pass from Jackson.

Ewing, who constantly intimidated the smaller Panthers into forcing off-balance shots, then blocked a Charlie Smith shot that set up Wingate's driving layup and an eight-point Georgetown lead.

Ewing, who scored 10 points in the second half, closed out the scoring run with a pair of free throws. He also scored the Hoyas' final field goal with 32 seconds remaining as Georgetown scored its final nine points at the foul line, three by David Wingate.

Wingate ended with 18 points and was the Hoyas' only other double figure scorer. Martin added nine points.

Charles Smith, a 6-10 freshman, kept the Panthers close in the first half by scoring 10 of his team-high 16 points. But both he and guard Curtis Aiken played most of the second half in foul trouble, hampering the Panthers offensively.

Keith Armstrong added 11 points for Pitt, which lost its third in a row to drop to 9-5 and 1-3 in the Big East. The crowd of 16,532 was the largest ever to see a college basketball game in Pittsburgh.,

Ohio St.....86
Indiana (8).....84

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ewe Blab missed a short hook shot with two seconds left Saturday for eighth-ranked Indiana, helping Ohio State spring an 86-84 Big Ten basketball victory over the Hoosiers.

Blab, who scored a game-high 31 points, took a pass from Stew Robinson, wheeled and fired. His shot bounced off the rim and time expired before Indiana could get off another attempt.

Troy Taylor missed the front end of a bonus free throw situation to give the Hoosiers a shot at forcing overtime. Instead, Indiana dropped to 11-4 overall and 3-2 in the Big Ten.

Dave Jones, a reserve guard, came off the bench to sink eight of 10 shots from the floor and score a team-leading 19 points for Ohio State, 11-3 overall and 3-2 in the conference.

The Buckeyes, scoring the most points on Indiana this winter, almost blew an 11-point lead with 11:51 remaining. The Hoosiers crept to within 76-75 on Blab's hook shot with 3:08 to play.

Joe Concheck, regaining his starting forward job, scored 16 points for Ohio State while Dennis Hopson had 15, Taylor 14 and Ronnie Stokes 10.

Steve Alford, who helped the United States win the Olympic basketball gold medal last summer, scored 18 points. However, Blab and Alford were the only scorers in double figures for the Hoosiers, who were behind 51-43 at halftime.

Illinois (11).....55
Northwestern.....43

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Anthony Welch scored 16 points and Efrem Winters added 14 Saturday to lead 11th-ranked Illinois to a 55-43 victory over Nothwestern on Saturday in a Big Ten basketball game.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Illini as they increased their record to 15-4 overall and 4-2 in the Big Ten. Northwestern lost its fifth straight and fell to 4-11 overall and 0-5 in the conference.

Northwestern held several four-point leads in the first half, the last at 14-10 before the Illini ran off 10 straight for a 20-14 advantage which they never relinquished.

Illinois went up 25-22 and then scored the next 16 points for a 41-22 lead. Northwestern went 11½ minutes without a field goal in that stretch.

Illinois took a 29-22 halftime lead on Doug Altenberger's basket at the buzzer and the Illini, with Welch and Winters leading the way, scored the first 12 points of the second half to take its 41-22 lead, leaving no doubt to the outcome.

Sooners Upset #9 Kansas

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma forward Darryl Kennedy scored a career-high 34 points to offset a career-low six-point performance by All-America teammate Wayman Tisdale, and No. 13 Oklahoma defeated ninth-ranked Kansas 87-76 in a Big Eight college basketball game Saturday.

The six points by Tisdale marked the first time in his career the two-time All-American did not score in double figures. The 6-foot-9 junior failed to score in the second half, when the Sooners twice overcame three-point deficits and pulled away down the stretch.

Kennedy, a sophomore, scored 26 in the second half as the Jayhawks left him open in their defense of Tisdale. Kennedy was 15 of 19 from the field and 4-for-4 from the free throw line.

Kansas trailed 35-29 at halftime, but a pair of free throws by Kansas' Ron Kellogg at 13:34 in the second half gave the Jayhawks a 45-44 lead. Kellogg led the Jayhawks with 24 points.

Kansas' biggest lead stretched to three points twice before Kennedy scored 10 points in a 14-4 Oklahoma run and the Sooners built a 62-55 margin with 7:25 remaining.

Oklahoma, which hit only three of eight throws in the first half, connected on its last six tries, to protect the lead. The Sooners hit 14 of 18 free throws in the second half.

Oklahoma's Anthony Bowie had 21 points and Tim McCalister 18. For Kansas, Greg Dreiling scored 20 points, Calvin Thompson 14 and Danny Manning had 12.

Oklahoma improved to 13-4 overall and 2-0 in the conference. Kansas is now 13-3 and 1-1.

Seton Hall.....74

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dwayne McClain scored 23 points to lift 18th-ranked Villanova to an 86-74 Big East Conference victory over Seton Hall on Saturday, handing the Pirates their sixth straight loss.

The Wildcats blew the game open early in the second half, running off a 14-4 spurt to expand a 44-33 halftime edge to 58-37. Villanova led by as many as 21 points and the Pirates only gained ground in the closing minutes.

The victory raised Villanova's record to 11-3 overall and 4-2 in the conference. Seton Hall fell to 0-6 in the league and 9-8 on the season.

McClain was virtually unstoppable, hitting 9 of 10 shots in leading the Wildcats in scoring for the fifth time in the last six games.

Dwight Wilbur added 14 points for Villanova, and freshman forward Mark Plansky had his best game as a Wildcat with 12 points. Ed Pinckney and Harold Pressley each had 10.

Andre McCloud topped Seton Hall with 22 and freshman guard James Major added 14.

The Wildcats gained control early, opening a 21-8 lead in the first eight minutes of the game, and then never looking back.

Springs Free After Disturbance

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' fullback Ron Springs was free on bond Saturday following a disturbance at a topless bar in north Dallas where two police officers were assaulted, authorities said.

According to a police report, Springs attacked the officers when they entered the bar to answer a call that he was creating a ruckus.

Springs, 28, was arrested about 5:30 p.m. Friday at the Million Dollar Saloon, police Sgt. J.J. Degan said.

When police arrived at the club, Springs "became belligerent and assaulted the two officers," Degan said. Officers Vanessa Pitz and James Hughes suffered minor cuts and bruises, Degan said.

Degan said police were called to the nightclub after Springs had been asked and refused to leave after "trying to grab at one of the dancers on the floor."

"He's a regular customer of mine, and he's never caused any trouble before," said Ronny Jared, general manager of the Million Dollar Saloon.

Springs was charged Friday night with assault of a police officer — a felony — and misdemeanor counts of criminal trespass and assault. He was released on bond of $5,000 posted late Friday.

Attempts to reach Springs for comment Saturday were unsuccessful. His home telephone number is unlisted.

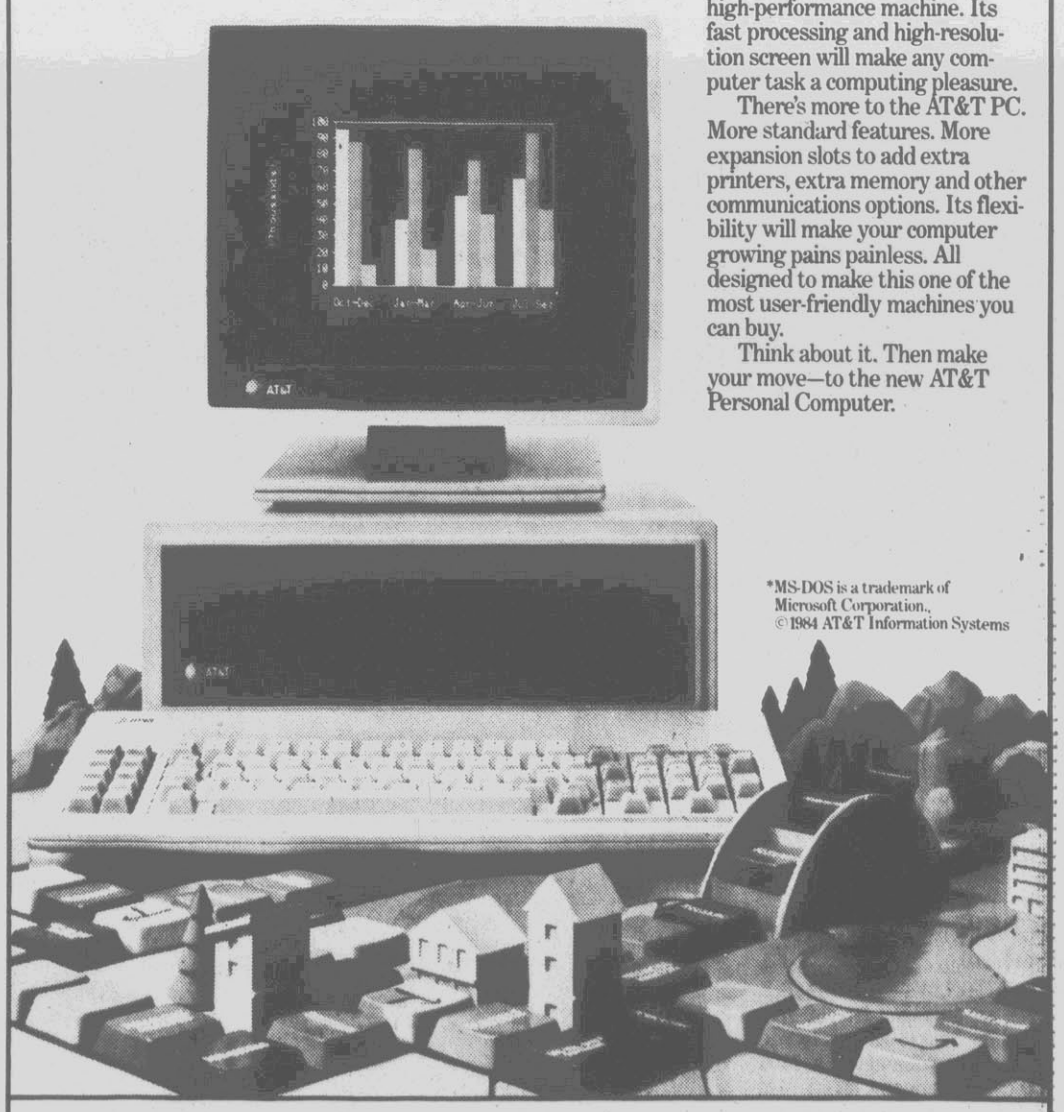

Police said Pitz told Springs that if he did not leave the club, he would be arrested on a charge of criminal trespass. It was at that point that he became belligerent, the officers said.

When the officers tried to handcuff the former Ohio State University standout, he "told arresting officers they better not touch him," and pushed them away, police reports said.

Police said Springs then punched Pitz in the face and placed Hughes in a headlock. When Pitz tried to pull Springs away from Hughes, he "bodyslammed" her against the bar, tossed her across some bar stools, and kicked her in the shin, police reports said.

However, Jay Paskero, the bar's night manager, said it appeared to him that the blow to Pitz was inadvertant as Springs moved his arms to avoid being handcuffed.

Washburn's Height Adds To Burden

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH — North Carolina State freshman center Chris Washburn's size has helped him snare many a rebound on the basketball court but his 6-foot-11 frame may prove a burden he can't overcome in the courtroom.

"In reality, big guys are singled out," said Laurinburg Institute Coach Frank "Bishop" McDuffie, who coached Washburn for two years. "They end up being treated differently.

"Any other kid could have done the same thing and it would have been an in-house thing. When a big kid, with as much ... publicity as Chris had, does something like this, people say, 'What's wrong with him,'" he said.

Washburn was charged with stealing a stereo from another athlete's room in late December. A District Court judge ruled Jan. 8 there was enough evidence to bring Washburn to trial on charges of second-degree burglary, a felony that carries a minimum sentence of 14 years.

Washburn, who was dismissed from the team after the arrest, admitted in a tape-recorded conversation with a Raleigh police officer that he took the stereo equipment but said he was going to return it. His attorneys argued the theft was a "college prank" — a view that McDuffie agreed with.

"I think so much attention (to the theft) is abnormal," McDuffie said in a telephone interview Thursday. "What he did was normal adolescent behavior. The kid admitted he did go into the room and that he did take it.

"So, there was no question he took it. The only question involved is what was his intent," he said. "I don't think he had felonious intent, and that's why I wondered about the whole thing."

McDuffie said he hopes the case may spur authorities to look at the law's impact young people.

"Maybe we need to have another way to handle the situation. If we aren't going to allow kids to drink at 18, why make him an adult," he said. "Our law is set up where Chris can spend 14 years in jail. He's not the type of person we in the state need to be paying to keep in prison."

McDuffie drove to Raleigh to attend the January probable cause hearing and said he was concerned about the atmosphere he felt in the courtroom.

"I got the feeling there was almost a sense of urgency to prove this cat had done this," he said. "If this happened to any other student it wouldn't have got as much publicity."

Both McDuffie and Fletcher Arritt, who coached Washburn for one season at Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia, said the arrest surprised them.

"I think any time somebody does something like this it surprises you," Arritt said in a recent telephone interview.

McDuffie said he had trouble believing Washburn had actually stolen the stereo.

"When I heard about it," he said, "my first reaction was it didn't make sense because Chris had some stereos, not one but more than one. But when Coach (Jim Valvano) came out so strong with his statement that kid wasn't going to play I wasn't sure."

McDuffie and Arritt said Washburn had no scrapes with the police while at their schools. But Arritt said Washburn did a few minor problems with school officials.

"I think occasionally he may he may have done something off the court," Arritt said. "One time he got some demerits, but I was a cadet here and I got some demerits. It's not that big a deal."

Arritt described Washburn as a typical high school kid — only bigger.

"I don't know whether or not he pulled pranks," he said. "But he was a mischievous type of individual. He was probably more playful than the average high school person."

McDuffie disagreed.

"I don't think he was more playful than any other high school kid," he said. "But when a big guy plays everybody says, 'Gee, a big kid is playing.' But when somebody smaller is playing, they just say, 'Old Johnny is playing around.'"

Laurinburg tried to fight that attitude by allowing Washburn to be just what he was — a high school kid, McDuffie said.

"We allowed him to be a kid, and as a kid he made mistakes," McDuffie said. "The philosophy at our school is you have the right to fail. If you don't develop that mentality to deal with failures, you may never succeed because when you attempt something you're going to fail sometimes. And you've got to be able to deal with that."

Washburn may be facing just such a situation now, McDuffie said.

"No matter what happens, he's already lost. It's just a matter of how much he's lost. It's going to be hard for this kid to be normal in college again," he said. "And it's really not fair. But then Chris will also get a lot of things others can't."

Tewell Takes Phoenix Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With Calvin Peete falling victim to a rash of bogeys and an apparent allergy attack, Doug Tewell found the round he was looking for.

Tewell came from six shots back and moved into the third-round lead Saturday in the $450,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

"All I thought about was shooting that low round I felt I had in me," said Tewell, who bounced back from a late double-bogey and compiled a third-round 65, six under par.

A birdie-birdie-birdie finish gave the 35-year-old journeyman pro a 202 total for three trips over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club and a two-shot advantage going into Sunday's final round of the chase for an $81,000 first prize.

"I feel confident," said Tewell, whose only two tour triumphs came in the 1980 season. "I feel like I've got an even lower round in me. I'd like to see myself go out and shoot that low, perfect round."

Peete, a run-away leader through the first two rounds, simply would like to be able to see.

The 1984 Vardon Trophy winner for the tour's low stroke average, Peete had missed only one fairway over the first two rounds. But, with tears streaming down his face and stopping occasionally to wipe his eyes, his tee shots began to stray. He fell victim to four bogeys — his first of the tournament — and had to work hard for a round of one-over-par 72 that left him in a tie for second at 202 with Morris Hatalsky.

Hatalsky, playing in the same group with Tewell, salvaged a 66 with a scrambling back nine.

Peete, who told tournament officials he was having difficulty with his contact lenses, wiped his eyes repeatedly during the round, declined to be interviewed afterwards and sought the services of an optometrist.

Isao Aoki of Japan moved up with a 67 in the warm sunshine and was only three back at 203. Ed Fiori was next at 65-205.

The group at 206 included Johnny Miller, Chip Beck, T.C. Chen, Corey Pavin, George Burns, Bob Eastwood and Tim Norris. Chen had a third-round 66. Miller, Beck and Pavin shot 67s. Burns had 68. Eastwood and Norris matched rounds of par-71.

Peete, a run-away leader through the first two rounds, made his first two bogeys of the tournament on the third and fourth holes, but bounced back with a string of three consecutive birdies.

That rally enabled him to retain two strokes of his lead at the turn in the face of Tewell's challenging 32.

They matched birdies on the 10th.

Peete, playing one hole behind Tewell, appeared to have a little breathing room when Doug made a double-bogey on the 15th, hitting into the water.

"I stepped back from the shot," he said. "I couldn't pick out the pin against the gallery. When I finally located it, I just made a totally bad swing."

But Peete, his eys tearing, three-putted for bogey on the same hole moments later, then drove into trouble, hit into a bunker and bogeyed the 16th.

At the same time, Tewell reeled off a decisive string of three consecutive birdies. The first two, on the 16th and 17th, came on 15-foot putts. The last one, after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day, came on a little pitch and a 3-foot putt.

Rampant Swimmers Claim Double Win

GOLDSBORO — The Rose Rampants took a pair of victories Friday in Big East high school swimming action, defeating Goldsboro and Kinston.

Kelly Barnhill won the 50 freestyle and the 100 free to lead the Rampant boys team, while the Rampettes had five first place finishes.

The Rampants netted 108 points, followed by Goldsboro with 75 and Kinston at 60. The Rampettes tallied 111 points, with Goldsboro at 76 and Kinston six.

The Rose boys are now 8-1 on the season, while the Rampettes improved their record to 5-4.

Rose travels to Durham Jordan Feb. 2 for its next meet.

Board Battle

Stanley Shipman (21) and Anthony Thompson (25) of Wilson Fike battle Martin Norville (50) of Rose for a rebound in the third quarter of Friday's Big East matchup. The Fike Golden Demons defeated the Rampants 68-46. (Reflector photo by Katie Zernheit)

Demons Pound Rampants

Charles Howard pumped in 22 points and John McNeil chipped in 20 as Wilson Fike pounded the Rose Rampants 68-46 in Big East 4-A high school basketball Friday.

In the girls game, Fike rallied in the second half to outscore the Rampettes 35-21 and took a comfortable 51-38 victory.

Stanley Shipman added 11 points for the Golden Demons, while Anthony Thompson had 10. Carlton Wilson paced the Rampants with 18 points.

"You've got to have everything going right against a team like Fike," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "We really thought we'd be ready for them. We were in their face on defense, but it didn't bother them.

"They were as fine a shooting team as we've had in here. (Howard and McNeil) are the same two that led them to the state championship last year, and Shipman came in and didn't miss."

Center Martin Norville got the Rampants on the board first, but Fike scored the next nine points as Shipman connected on a pair of field goals and Thompson added a three-point play.

The Demons maintained a 13-10 lead after the first quarter, and Howard had four points early in the second period to help the Demons build a 17-11 margin. After Norville added two free throws for Rose, Fike scored eight unanswered points and went on to post a 12-2 scoring bulge through the 2:40 mark for a 29-15 advantage.

Mike Herrin popped in an 18-footer for Rose, but the Demons tallied nine more to take a 38-17 lead. In that spurt, Mike Hathaway was whistled for a personal foul then charged with a technical foul to help the Demons post four points in a 15-second span.

Jesse Pratt scored inside and Tyrone Smith stole a pass and drove in for a layup as the Rampants trimmed the margin to 17 with 15 seconds left, but Shipman connected from 17 feet out at the buzzer for a 40-21 halftime lead.

Howard posted eight points in the third quarter as the Demons raced away to a 56-30 spread.

In the fourth quarter, McNeil tipped in a follow shot to open the scoring with 6:28 left, and Wilson responded with a 20-footer for Rose. Howard posted two free throws, and McNeil completed a fast break with a dunk to give Fike its biggest lead of the game at 62-32 with 4:17 remaining.

Wilson posted six unanswered points as Rose trimmed the margin to 24, then added four more points in the final 46 seconds to cut the gap to 20. Fike's Mike Eatmon swished a shot from the corner at the horn for the final margin.

"I thought we'd be able to slow them down a little with our shooting, but we didn't do too well," Brewington said. "I picked them to be number one in the conference, and they're not far from it. On a given night, no one will be beat them.

"It's like I've told our guys, you've got to win the games you're supposed to because every now and then you're going to have something happen like tonight."

Rose, now 1-4 in the Big East and 6-7 overall, remains idle during exams then hosts Northeastern Friday in a conference matchup.

LADY DEMONS, RAMPETTES

Teresa Atkinson posted 14 points and Lynnice Joyner added nine to lead Wilson Fike. Chris Holec paced the Rampettes with 12 points.

Rose took a 10-0 lead in the first quarter before Fike trimmed the margin to 10-5. The Rampettes maintained an 18-16 halftime edge, but Fike outscored Rose 16-8 in the third quarter to take control.

Annette Hayes connected on a pair of free throws to put Fike ahead 27-24 with two minutes left in the third quarter, and the Lady Demons outscored Rose 5-2 through the end of the period for a 32-26 lead.

Kim Dupree opened the fourth quarter with a layup for the Rampettes, but Hayes responded for Fike after a scoring lapse. Holec added two free throws as Rose trimmed the margin to 34-30, but the Rampettes never came any closer.

Pam Smith scored for the Rampettes with 2:59 left to cut the gap to 39-34, but Fike outscored Rose 10-2 through the 48-second mark to put the game out of reach.

Ruby Artis scored eight points in the fourth quarter for Fike including six from the free throw line as the Rampettes were forced to foul.

The Rampettes fall 1-4 in the league and 5-9 overall.

Rice, Harper Lead Conley Wrestlers

Seniors Ricky Rice and Gerald Harper won the final two matches to give D.H. Conley a 35-30 victory over White Oak Friday in high school wrestling action.

For Coach Milt Sherman, who is in his 10th season as Viking head coach, it was his 125th victory against 19 losses since taking over the program.

"We built up 21-12 lead at end of Joel Maye's match, but then we fell behind 30-24 going in to last two and won those," Sherman said. "Ricky Rice and Gerald Harper really came through for us.

"It was kind of an off night for the team. If they had had a 105-pounder we'd have lost the match; we were lucky to win"

Rice took a 12-0 decision over Anthony Banks in the 197-pound division, and Harper followed by pinning John Stroud 2:45 into the heavyweight match.

Harper is now 18-0 on the season, while Kerry Farris is 18-1 and David Farris 16-1.

Conley, now 12-1 on the season, hosts Camp Lejeune Thursday at the Conley Field House.

Fuller, Spruill Lead Falcons By Jaguars

FARMVILLE — Tim Fuller pumped in 26 points and Ray Spruill added 16 to lead C.B. Aycock to a 61-59 overtime victory against Farmville Central in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball Friday.

In the girls game, Lisa Lane fired in 28 points to lead the Lady Jaguars to a 60-32 win over Aycock. The Lady Jags, now 3-2 in the ECC and 14-2 overall, raced out to a 30-12 halftime lead and cruised through the second half.

Tim Austin chipped in 10 points for Aycock. Ronnie Barnes led the Jaguars with 19 points, while Bernard Taylor added 12, and Andre Vines and Bobby Evans 10 each.

Aycock stole an inbounds pass from the Jaguars with four seconds left and scored with one second on the clock to take the victory.

The Jaguars led by a point going into the fourth quarter, but Aycock outscored Farmville 9-8 in the final period to send the game to overtime.

Farmville, now 2-3 in the conference and 6-9 overall, travels to Southern Nash Thursday.

Wright, Farrow Power Conley Win

By DOUG JOHNSON
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Jeff Wright poured in 20 points and Ricky Farrow scored 12 more to lead the D.H. Conley Vikings to a 57-54 victory over the Vikings of White Oak Friday in Coastal 3-A Conference action. Earlier in the evening, the Valkyries of Conley defeated White Oak by a 44-point margin, 69-25.

Conley controlled the tip to open play in the first period only to lose the ball on a turnover, and White Oak took advantage of this to score the first points of the game. They scored again moments later to take an early 4-0.

Farrow finally put Conley on the board after three minutes of play. After that, the teams traded buckets with a slight edge going to White Oak. As a result, White Oak led 16-12 at the end of the period.

Both teams continued to play tough defense and a more conservative, ball-control offense. They continued to go basket-for-basket with neither team able to build a substantial lead, and White Oak held a slim three point 24-21 advantage at intermission.

The second half picked up where the first had left off, with neither team able to dominate the other. Conley managed to stay out front until midway through the period when Gary Meadows scored to put White Oak in the lead. The lead see-sawed, with one team holding the lead, and then the other.

The pattern continued until a Steve Vines jumper gave Conley a 39-36 lead in the wanning moments of the period. That lead was erased seconds later when Meadows turned a three point play for White Oak to tie it up, but Wright hit the front end of a one-and-one to give Conley a 40-39 lead at the close of the period.

Things got a little tighter in the final period, with both teams keeping it close. Midway through the period Conley managed to take a seven point 50-43 lead, but could not hold it as White Oak pulled back within two with two minutes remaining.

The deciding factor for Conley was free throws, with Joel Cox hitting five free throws and Wright adding two more in the final minute of the game to give Conley the victory.

Conley Coach Walter Claybrook was delighted with the victory.

"It was a long time coming," Claybrook said. "We only had one starter back from last year, so we are a very young and inexperienced team. I think we've played most of our games well, but we just couldn't hold on to a lead once we had it.

"This time we did. We hit the free throws at the end to stay ahead of White Oak. They kept the pressure on to make us hit them."

In the opener, the Valkyries soundly defeated the Lady Vikings 69-25 as Lisa Mills led Conley with 24 points. Trellany Boyd added 14, Angela Smith 11 and Rhonda Jackson nine for the Valkyries.

Conley led throughout the game, extending their lead from the opening period until the end. Scoring was slow throughout the first period until the last two minutes when Conley hit 10 straight points while holding White Oak scoreless to take a 19-6 lead.

The Valkyries continued to dominate seeming to score at will, while White Oak had a hard time getting near the basket. The second half was no better for White Oak as Conley continued to score both inside and out.

White Oak could do nothing but watch as Conley marched to the 44-point victory.

J.V. SCORE: Conley 52, White Oak 49

"We played well considering that we played last night," said Conley Coach Joy Riddick. "Our inside game worked very well tonight, with Mills playing very tough inside."

Streeter Lifts Panthers

PINETOPS — Paul Streeter connected five field goals and added six out of seven free throws in the second half as the North Pitt Panthers raced away with a 54-32 thrashing of SouthWest Edgecombe Friday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball action.

Levon Shaw added 13 points for the Panthers, while Gentry Sneed chipped in 11 and Clifton Williams nine. Sneed had just two free throws in the first half, then posted nine points in the decisive spurt.

North Pitt, now 5-0 in the ECC and 13-1 overall, fell behind 13-4 at the end of the first quarter and trailed 24-14 at halftime.

But after a lecture from Coach Cobby Deans at intermission, the Panthers returned to post a 17-3 scoring bulge in the third quarter. North Pitt expanded the margin by outscoring SouthWest 23-5 in the final period.

SouthWest Edgecombe had already pounded North Pitt's Pant-HERS 64-21 in the girls game. Terri Condery paced the Lady Cougars with 16 points, while Veronica Lawrence added 13. Pam Gorham 12 and Teresa Mayo 10.

Regina Cox led the Pant-HERS, now 1-4 in the league and 6-9 overall, with 12 points.

North Pitt takes time off for exams before traveling to Ayden-Grifton Thursday for a showdown with the Chargers.

Hill's 19 Leads Rams

STANHOPE — James Hill fired in 19 points and Mike Warren chipped in 10 as Greene Central held off Southern Nash 54-50 in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball action Friday.

"We played a pretty good ballgame, all in all," Greene Central Coach Gregg Ashorn said. "We got out front in the first quarter for a change, which is an improvement.

"We switched up on defense better than we have so far this year. We changed defense and caused them some problems."

The Rams took a 29-27 lead at halftime, then added a 15-9 scoring bulge in the third quarter. But Southern Nash outscored Greene Central 14-10 in the final period to trim the margin.

"We had a great game out of James Hill," Ashorn said. "We're a pretty well-balanced team, and we're starting to get leadership from lot of people. That will make us better down the road.

"We're really progressing; we came out and played good defense. We tried some new things and didn't get hurt by it. I like to change defense, and we did a good job of it tonight.

"We made some careless mistakes on offense, but we're trying some things there in the last week.

"I was real pleased with the free throw situation; we used pressure defense without fouling."

Herbert Perry paced Southern Nash with 15 points, while Phil Bryant and Wilbert Powell added 10 each.

In the girls game, Cynthia Jones posted 15 points and Anntionnette Wilkes 12 to lead the Lady Rams to a 67-38 thrashing of Southern Nash. Tess Armstrong led Southern Nash with 12 points, and Sandy Montague added 11.

The Lady Rams, now 5-0 in the ECC and 14-0 overall, jumped out to a 15-4 lead in the first period before Southern Nash trimmed the margin to 21-20 at halftime. A 27-11 scoring spurt in the third quarter sealed the victory for Greene Central.

Greene Central, now 2-3 in the conference and 5-9 overall, travels to SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday.

Duggins Boosts Roanoke, Lady Redskins Top Pack

ROBERSONVILLE — James Duggins posted 16 points to lead the Roanoke Redskins to a 51-45 victory over Washington's Pam Pack Friday in Northeastern 3-A high school basketball action.

John Bennett and Shawn Chance chipped in 11 points each for Roanoke, now 7-1 in the conference and 10-4 overall. Earl Randolph was the only Pam Pack scorer in double figures with 13.

Washington pulled even at 19-19 at halftime, but Roanoke held a slim 14-13 scoring edge in the third quarter and pulled away in the final period.

The Pam Pack slipped to 4-3 in the Northeastern standings and 9-4 overall.

The Lady Redskins needed 20 points from Gloria Duggins to pull out a 43-37 win over Washington in the girls game. Gloria Sherrod paced the Lady Pam Pack with 14, while Sarah Gray added 13.

The Lady Redskins outscored Washington 17-5 in the fourth quarter to record the win. Roanoke improved its record to 6-2 in the league and 11-4 overall, while Washington slipped to 3-4 in the conference and 6-5 overall.

Washington travels to Roanoke Rapids Wednesday, and Roanoke remains idle until traveling to Plymouth Friday.

COLLEGE COSTS ARE GOING UP. BUT SO IS THE ARMY COLLEGE FUND.

Tuition, books, lab fees, college living expenses—all seem to be climbing relentlessly. Well, here's some good news from the Army. Today's Army College Fund is climbing too. You can now accumulate over $25,000 for college, if you qualify.

What's more, you'll study, learn and become proficient in a useful skill. It could be a skill with so wide an application in both military and civilian life that it might help you decide what to take in college.

If you're determined to go on to college, but you don't know where the money is coming from, pick up an Army College Fund booklet from your local recruiter. It offers several options you'll want to investigate.

76ers Pass Celtics In Atlantic Race

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics, losing for just the seventh time this season, trail the Philadelphia 76ers for the first time in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division.

The Celtics, 33-7, fell victim to too many turnovers, too many missed shots and too much Herb Williams Friday night as the Indiana Pacers scored the final five points of the game to hand Boston a 91-86 defeat.

Williams scored 27 points, but it was his two free throws that broke the eighth and final tie of the game at 86-86 that proved the Celtics undoing.

In other NBA games Friday, Utah beat Portland 127-122, Atlanta downed Seattle 104-90, Milwaukee defeated New Jersey 102-93, Houston bested Phoenix 112-101, Denver edged Washington 108-106 and the Los Angeles Lakers got by Dallas 110-92.

"Williams always plays well against us," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said of the third-year forward from Ohio State. "He just had another one of his good games."

After Williams' free throws, Jerry Sichting made one of two free throws for a three-point Indiana lead and Boston's Larry Bird was called for traveling with 24 seconds left. Sichting made two more free throws with four seconds left for the final margin.

"We had too many traveling calls and turnovers," Bird, who scored 25 points after being held scoreless in the first quarter, said. "We didn't run our offense well and Williams got loose too many times down low."

"We had too many turnovers in the first half and way too many for the game," Jones said of his team, which that turned the ball over 25 times, six each by Bird and Kevin McHale. "We just missed too many inside shots and a lot of wide-open shots."

Indiana Coach George Irvine gave the credit to Williams as well, but he wanted to talk about the defensive end of his forward's performance.

"The defense was the big key. We have the best basketball player in the league in getting back on defense," Irvine said of Williams. "I've been associated with a lot of good defensive players, including (Philadelphia's) Bobby Jones, but there's no one getting back better than Herb Williams. He's unbelieveable in getting back. That's something that doesn't show up on stat sheets."

Jazz 127, Trail Blazers 122

Mark Eaton scored 12 points, pulled down 20 rebounds and blocked a club-record 14 shots and Adrian Dantley added a season-high 42 points for the Jazz. Dantley received a standing ovation from the home fans when he passed the 15,000-point mark for his career in the first half. Darrell Griffith added 33 points for the Jazz, who made 43 of 51 free-throw attempts.

Eaton's block total, which was just three short of the NBA record set by Elmore Smith of the Los Angeles Lakers in 1973, gives him 226 as the Jazz reached the midway point of the season. The NBA season record is 393 by Smith in that same season.

Kiki Vandeweghe led the Trail Blazers with 29 points and Darnell Valentine added 25.

Hawks 104, Sonics 90

Dominique Wilkins scored 26 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead the Hawks, who had a season-high 13 blocked shots against the visiting Sonics. Randy Wittman's jumper with 4:10 left in the first half gave the Hawks a 42-41 lead and Atlanta never trailed again. Eddie Johnson scored 16 points for Atlanta, while Wittman added 14 and Antoine Carr 11. Jack Sikma paced Seattle with 16 points, while Tom Chambers added 15.

Bucks 102, Nets 93

Paul Pressey scored 29 points and Sidney Moncrief managed 14 of his 18 points in the final quarter as the Bucks won their fifth straight. The Bucks trailed 76-70 after three quarters but finally tied the game at 81-81 on a 15-foot jumper by Craig Hodges with 8:44 remaining. Milwaukee then went on a 13-5 tear and easily handled the vistors from there. Terry Cummings added 25 points for the Bucks, while Albert King led the Nets, who had their three-game winning streak stopped, with a season-high 25 points.

Rockets 112, Suns 101

Houston snapped a four-game losing streak as Ralph Sampson scored 29 points. The lead see-sawed throughout the third quarter, in which Sampson scored 12 points, before Akeem Olajuwon's basket put the Rockets ahead to stay 73-71 with 4:11 remaining in the period. Phoenix did come within 87-85 in the final period, but the Rockets put together a 7-0 run to close the door.

Nuggets 108, Bullets 106

Mike Evans nailed a 10-foot jumper at the buzzer to give Denver the victory at home. Washington's Gus Williams had tied the game 106-106 with two free throws with 24 seconds left. The Nuggets ran the clock down until Evans scored his only basket of the second half. Alex English and Lafayette Lever, who also had 10 assists, led Denver with 24 points each.

Lakers 110, Mavericks 92

James Worthy scored 19 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson dished out 18 assists as the Lakers, who led from the opening tap, snapped a three-game losing streak.

GCA Pounds Goldsboro

Paul Hollingsworth fired in 24 points as all five starters notched double-figures to lead Greenville Christian to a 97-61 win over Goldsboro Chirstian in high school basketball Friday.

Kerry House and Dan Andrews chipped 15 points each for GCA, while Robin House added 12 and Maury Harris 11. Jimmy Boyd paced Goldsboro with 18 points, Scott Boyette added 12 and Russell Lanning 11.

Goldsboro held a 22-20 lead at the end of the first quarter, but Greenville rallied for a 20-6 scoring advantage in the second period. GCA posted 57 points in the second half while Goldsboro managed 33.

"I didn't realize how many points we had until the game was about over," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "I knew that once it turned into running game the bulge would come. They got in foul trouble early in first half, we got to the line more and their guys got tentative inside.

"We kept our turnovers low and had good team play. We're seeing some good things out of ourselbes; I'm hoping it's an indication of things to come."

Greenville Christian, 6-8 after the Friday win, hosts Trinity Tuesday.

Myers, Harris Lead Tribe By Bath 50-44

BATH — Curtis Myers tallied 16 points and Henry Harris added 12 to lead Chocowinity's Indians to a 50-44 win over Bath in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action Friday.

The Tribe held a slim one-point lead after the first quarter, then pulled out a 27-22 margin at halftime. A 13-10 scoring edge in the third quarter paved the way to victory for Chocowinity, now 5-4 in the Tobacco Belt and 6-8 overall.

Bath outscored the Lady Tribe 25-13 in the second half to pull out a 51-37 victory in the girls game. Kim Green paced Chocowinity with 19 points. The Lady Tribe is now 6-3 in the league and 9-3 overall.

Chocowinity entertains Aurora Tuesday in another Tobacco Belt matchup.

Trinity Tops Immanuel

Art Reynolds posted 19 points and Jimmy Powers 17 to lift Trinity to a 53-40 victory over Immanuel in high school basketball action Friday.

Renee Deans fired in 22 points to lead the Trinity girls to a 54-18 thrashing of Immanuel. Stephanie Stevens added 15 points and Tammy Martin 12 for Trinity.

Mike Ange of Immanuel had a game-high 20 points, while Robbie Holland contributed 14.

Trinity held a 28-18 halftime lead, but Immanuel trimmed the margin with a 12-11 scoring edge in the third quarter. Trinity retaliated with a 14-10 spurt in the final period to seal the victory.

The Trinity boys are now 7-3 on the season while the girls are 5-3. Both squads travel to Greenville Christian Tuesday.

Steel Shot Use May Be Expanded In Future — The problem of lead poisoning in waterfowl is so severe that the Atlantic Flyway Waterfowl Council recently voted to advise the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to require that steel shot be used for all waterfowl hunting in the flyway beginning with the 1986-87 hunting seasons. The flyway council is composed of directors of all state wildlife agencies in the Atlantic Flyway. Vernon Bevill, executive director of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, also recently participated in a national committee organized by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to review federal polity for evaluating led poisoning problems.

How serious a toll does lead poisoning take in waterfowl populations? "An estimated two milliin waterfowl in North America die of lead poisoning annually," said Grady Barnes, section manager of the research and regulations for the Division of Wildlife Management of the N.C. Wildlife Recourses Commission. "The birds feed on small insects and plant seeds near the bottom of wetlands, and ingest spent pellets as they feed. Steel shot passes through their systems without causing any harm, but even one or two lead pellets can be lethal. In some popular hunting areas, there are literally thousands of pellets lying on the bottom."

Problems with led shot aren't confined to waterfowl. Poisoning from lead shot is also a serious mortality factor for endangered bald eagles. Many of these birds winter near federal wildlife refuges where waterfowl populations are high. A duck that was crippled by lead shot is easy prey, and the eagle ingests lead pellets when it eats the duck.

Some hunters have objected to steel shot regulations because they feel that steel shot is not an effective killer of ducks, and will result in more crippled birds. However, this is not the case. Steel shot is an effective a load as lead shot, but the ballistics of the two differ—and a change in shooting techniques may be needed to use steel shot effectively.

Hunters may find that they need to change shot sizes when using steel. For large ducks—such as pintails and mallards—the best choice is #2 steel shot. Number four steel shot may be used for smaller ducks such as teal. The best all-around choice for the duck hunter, however, is #2 steel shot. Goose hunters should not use anything smaller than #1s, or BB shot in steel.

One difference between steel and lead shot is the shot pattern. Steel shot is considerably harder than lead shot, and doesn't become deformed by the gun barrell when it is fired. Consequently, the shot pattern for steel shot is smaller, shorter and faster tthan the pattern for lead shot. In fact, the diameter of a steel shot pattern may be one-third smaller than a lead shot pattern, and the "shot string" may be only 60 percent as long.

Hunters should compensate for smaller patterns by using a different choke. The tighest choke that should be used with steel shot is a modified, and this will shoot a very tight pattern—especially at close shot. It's also a good idea to "pattern" your shotgun for steel shot before hunting.

Another difference lies in muzzle velocities. Since steel shot is lighter than lead, and doesn't become deformed when fired, it travels over 100 feet per second faster than lead shot. Hunters will find that they need to shorten their leads to adjust for this difference. At close ranges—from 20 to 25 yards—hunters shooting steel shot should use virtually no lead, but should place the gun barrel right on the duck's head. From 30 to 40 yards, lead the birds by one or two feet. If you find yourself missing ducks, try shortening your lead. The chances of crippling ducks with lead or steel shot increase considerably past 40 yards, and hunters should pass up these long shots.

Finally, it's best to use steel loads in newer shotguns. Improved loads have resulted in the virtual elimination of barrel problems, and probably 95 percent of the shotguns used by waterfowl hunters today are suitable for steel shot. It's best, however, to avoid using steel shot in very old, expensive, classic double-barreled shotguns. Steel shot should also not be reloaded into shells made for lead shot—special components are needed for reloading steel.

Wildlife Note — As late as the Civil War, moose ranged as far south along the Atlantic seaboard as Long Island. But by 1880 they had vanished throughout New York and southern New England because of habitat loss. Today the moose is most commonly seen in Maine, but on occasions, a half-ton moose has brought traffic to a screeching halt in downtown Worcester, Massachusettes.

Bogues Fills Big Roll

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM — Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy says Tyrone Bogues hasn't received the attention he deserves, but the 5-foot-3 sophomore guard got more attention than he bargained for after receiving a death threat.

Bogues was put under added security and was not allowed to talk with the media after Wake Forest stunned second-ranked Duke 91-89 in overtime in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Thursday night.

A Forsyth County man was arrested and later released Thursday after being charged in an extortion warrant with threatening the life of Bogues.

Warren B. Brooks of Clemmons was released on $10,000 bond after being charged with threatening the life of Bogues to get the Winston-Salem Board of Aldermen to fire a city employee.

Brooks denied the charges.

While Tacy didn't want to talk about the death threat, he was more than willing to discuss Bogues' play against the Blue Devils.

"I thought Bogues was tremendous," Tacy said of the Baltimore native. "I don't know how long he is going to have to play like this before he gets the recognition he deserves. We certainly know what he means to our team."

Bogues, who played the entire 45 minutes against Duke, held guard Johnny Dawkins to eight points — breaking a streak of 51 games in which Dawkins had scored in double figures.

Bogues scored a career-high 12 points while dishing out seven assists and getting four steals. He also canned both ends of a one-and-one opportunity with nine seconds remaining to clinch the victory.

"Tyrone's a gutsy defensive player," said Dawkins, who was averaging 18.3 points a game but connected on four of 16 shots against Wake Forest. "You can run off of as many picks as you want and he keeps bouncing off them and coming right back as strong. He's so small, it's hard to put the ball on the ground against him.

"He was always creating havoc," Dawkins said. "He plays tough the whole 40 minutes."

Forward Mark Cline, who scored six of his 12 points in overtime to spark Wake Forest, said Bogues "played him tough."

"He made Johnny work 94 feet," Cline said. "Sooner or later, Johnny was going to wear down."

Tacy said he didn't expect Bogues, who is nicknamed "Muggsy," would be a star at Wake Forest.

"We just felt like he'd be a role player," Tacy said. "This year, he's just worked himself into being a starter."

Bogues' play was particularly important because the Demon Deacons lost two guards this week.

Cycling Federation Suspends Pair

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The U.S. Cycling Federation has suspended two of its top staff members and has asked a board member to resign after confirming that American cyclists received "blood doping" transfusions only hours before they pedaled in Olympic events.

The Colorado Springs-based federation also apologized to the American public, Olympic cyclists and athletes, and to the U.S. Olympic Committee "for the pain and embarrassment" caused by the incident.

David F. Prouty, the executive director of the federation, said the organization's board of directors adopted a rule Friday banning the controversial procedure.

Blood doping involves the transfusion of red blood cells into an athlete's body, supposedly to help the athlete's performance by allowing the bloodstream to carry more oxygen.

Since the transfusions didn't violate international cycling or International Olympic Committee rules, the cyclists involved are in no danger of losing their medals, he said, adding that "nothing should be considered to have tainted any medal."

"There is no indication whatsoever that, based on past performance, any United States cycling athlete performed at a level different than what had been anticipated," Prouty said.

The 1984 Olympics marked the best effort ever for American cyclists, who won nine medals.

At a news conference to announce the results of the federation's investigation, Prouty said one of the three staffers involved was Mike Fraysse, a board member who was the group's secretary last summer, and was the Olympic team manager.

Also involved was Eddy Borysewicz, the national and Olympic cycling coach, and Ed Burke, the federation's Elite Athlete Program director.

Prouty said Burke and Borysewicz would be suspended without pay for 30 days, and would receive a letter of reprimand.

Fraysse was demoted from first vice president to third vice president of the federation and was asked to resign from the board, Prouty said.

After Prouty's announcement, board member Tracy Lea — the wife of former USCF president Robert C. Lea, who resigned to protest the weakness of the federation's probe — announced that she was resigning. She described the sanctions as inadequate.

Prouty refused to identify the cyclists or say how many were involved. Previous reports listed five medal winners among those receiving the transfusions.

"No athletes will be held or considered responsible for the incident," he said. "Those athletes underwent incredible physical, emotional and intellectual preparation in preparing for, and participating in, the ultimate athletic event in the world."

Phil Voxland, the federation's president during the Olympics,—was elected Friday to his old post, replacing Lea, who became president after the Olympics. Voxland is from Minneapolis, where he teaches at the University of Minnesota.

"We should have the rule (against blood doping) even though there is currently no way we can test for it," Voxland said. "I am convinced that just having such a rule will dissuade athletes from doing such a thing.

"I don't think that people are out there cheating. I think athletes will play by the rules if those rules are there."

The news conference came as the 25-member U.S. Cycling Federation board of directors opened its regular meeting in Colorado Springs, the home of the USCF and the USOC.

Dr. Irving Dardik, head of the USOC's panel investigating the blood doping, said that "the same individuals also were looking at caffeine to improve performance."

While the IOC has set limits on the amount of caffeine allowable in an athlete's blood — allowing for the consumption of coffee, tea, and soft drinks — a "handful" of U.S. cyclists, coaches, and doctors "were involved to see how much caffeine could be used, but not illegally," said Dardik.

The federation confirmed that the experiments — using caffeine suppositories Borysewicz bought in Europe — were conducted, but said there was no evidence that the drug was used during the Olympics.

The "blood doping" controversy surfaced last week when Dr. Thomas B. Dickson Jr., an Allentown, Pa., orthopedic surgeon, revealed that he had witnessed the transfusions being made in a motel room.

The reports of the caffeine experiments came shortly after that.

Dickson, who was cycling team physician, first reported the transfusions in November, saying "what was done, in my opinion, was second-rate and you don't treat your athletes that way."

He said he didn't report the incident at the time of the Olympics because it "would have become public knowledge and embarrassed the team" and probably force the team to be sent home from the Los Angeles Games.

Burroughs Lifts Bears

BELHAVEN — Ed Burroughs netted 16 points as Belhaven held off a second-half rally to defeat Bear Grass 49-48 Friday in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball.

Darryl Brown paced the Bears, now 5-4 in the conference and 7-6 overall, with 10 points.

Belhaven took a 12-9 lead in the first quarter, then pulled out a 22-18 halftime margin. But Bear Grass rallied to outscore Belhaven 15-12 in the third quarter before the teams played even in the final period.

Terry Cotton scored 18 points and Valenca Rodman 10 as Belhaven took a 51-49 win in the girls game. Amy Lilley led Bear Grass with 18 points, and Sharon Land added 12.

The Lady Bears, now 4-5 in the league and 7-5 overall, led 27-23 at intermission, but Belhaven held a 17-9 scoring edge in the third quarter to take control.

Bear Grass remains idle until hosting Aurora Friday.

Nations Agree To Cooperate On Currencies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The five leading industrial nations say they are willing to work with each other to stabilize their currencies by changing exchange rates, but they have stopped short of saying they will do so now.

The agreement was announced at the end of an all-day meeting Thursday among finance ministers and central bank chiefs of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan.

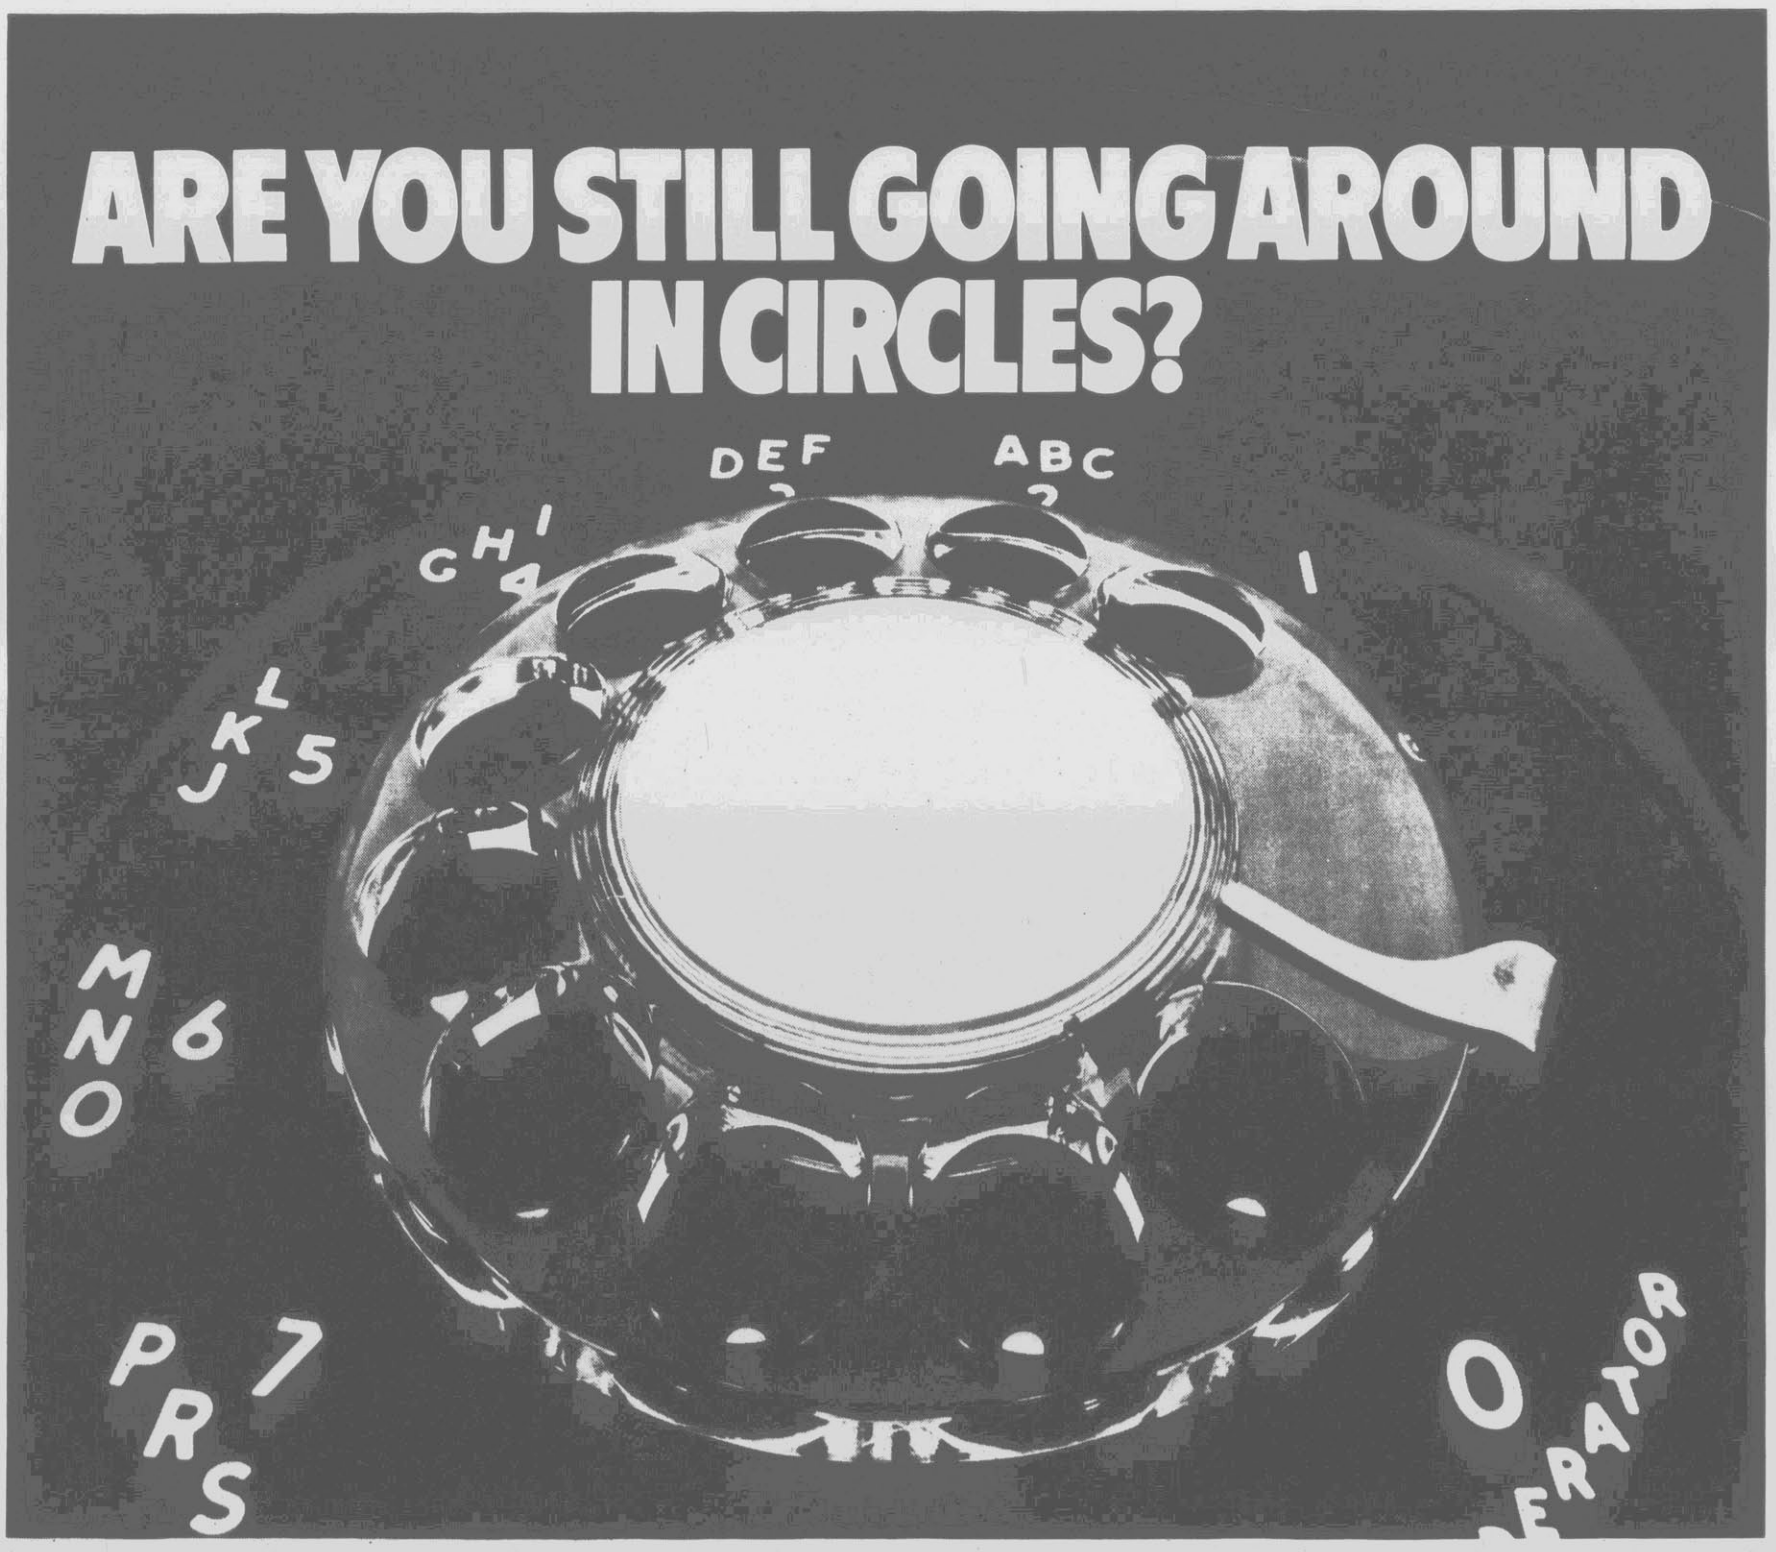

Specifically, the group reaffirmed a commitment made by these nations at their summit meeting in Williamsburg, Va., in May 1983, "to undertake coordinated intervention in exchange markets in instances where it is agreed such intervention would be helpful."

This means, if they decide to do so, governments of these countries, through their central banks, would make coordinated purchases and sales of currencies in exchange markets in an effort to stabilize exchange rates.

The announcement comes at a time when the dollar has been strong and other major currencies, particularly the pound, have been weakening.

While the idea of coordinated intervention "if necessary" is not new, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told reporters, "We are now putting emphasis on it by calling attention to it."

Asked whether the time is now ripe for such intervention, Regan told reporters at the end of the day, "Our markets are closed and I can't tell you at this moment."

Copper Futures Prices Increase

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Copper futures prices surged Friday on the Commodity Exchange in New York and closed the week with solid gains stemming from decreasing supplies.

"There's been general improvement in the market for the past six to nine months," said Steven Chronowitz, a metals analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., but prices have failed to make any advances.

Chronowitz said many industries that use copper concentrate their buying in the first quarter of the year, and prices frequently advance during that period.

Bette Raptopoulous, senior metals analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., noted that inventories of copper at the Commodity Exchange and the London Metals Exchange fell to 379,000 metric tons from 803,000 metric tons a year earlier. Miss Raptopoulous said many domestic mining companies cut back operations over the past 18 months because competition from foreign producers pushed prices below the cost of production.

Because of their low inventories, some producing companies were said to be buying contracts at the futures exchange to meet delivery commitments, Miss Raptopoulous said.

She said such buying has "created a bullish aura" in the copper market.

Copper settled .55 cent to 1.10 cents higher with the contract for delivery in January at 60.75 cents a pound.

Orange juice futures retreated slightly after posting sharp weather-related rallies in the previous two sessions.

Concern that a freeze in Florida might damage the orange crop there over the weekend prompted the earlier buying, but buyers became nervous in Friday's session when the rally stalled, and some sold contracts back to take profits, said Pamela Rockley, an orange juice analyst in New York with Pershing Futures, a division of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette.

Orange juice settled 1 cent to 2.10 cents lower with the contract for delivery in January at 161.05 cents a pound.

Corn and soybean futures prices were higher and wheat was lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans were supported by concern that dry conditions in Brazil might damage the crop there, said Jerry Gidel, a grain analyst in Chicago with Paine-Webber.

Buying by traders who follow trends on price charts also pushed soybean prices higher, Gidel said. Computer directed accounts were believed to be among the buyers, sources at the floor said.

Reports that farmers in the Great Plains states foresee possible record yields this year, and the cancellation of a purchase of 100,000 metric tons of hard red winter wheat by the Soviet Union combined to pressure wheat prices, Gidel said.

Floor sources said a major exporting country was a major buyer in the corn pit.

Wheat settled $\frac{1}{2}$ cent to 2 cents lower with the contract for delivery in March at 3.50\frac{3}{4}$ a bushel; corn was 1 cent to 2$\frac{1}{2}$ cents higher with March at 2.72\frac{3}{4}$ a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 2$\frac{1}{2}$ cents higher with March at $1.77 a bushel; and soybeans were 6 cents to 8$\frac{3}{4}$ cents higher with January at 5.96\frac{1}{2}$ a bushel.

Bitter cold weather moving into the Midwest prompted a rally on livestock on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Analysts said producers probably will reduce shipments of both hogs and cattle rather than risk shipping them in the cold temperatures.

Cold temperatures also interfere with normal weight gains.

But retailers and meat packers appear to be well supplied and buying interest was minimal, traders said.

Live cattle prices settled .15 cent to .38 cent higher with the contract for delivery in February at 65.42 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .15 cent to .42 cent higher with January at 72.82 cents a pound; live hogs were unchanged to .47 cent higher with February at 41.95 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .40 cent to .70 cent higher with February at 72.17 cents a pound.

Metals prices settled slightly lower in quiet trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Gold settled $1.20 to $1.30 lower with the contract for delivery in January at $306.60 a troy ounce; silver settled 1.4 cents to 1.5 cents lower wtih January at $6.281 a troy ounce.

Crude oil settled 1 cent lower to 6 cents higher with the contract for delivery in February at $25.68 a barrel; and heating oil was .25 cent lower to .56 cent higher with February at 78.73 cents a gallon.

Stock Market Movement Leaves Averages Behind

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock-market followers who monitor only the Dow Jones industrial average have missed a lot of the action on Wall Street lately.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of the past week, for example, the oldest and best known yardstick of trends in stock prices posted declines of 3.75 and 0.11 points.

But in Tuesday's session, 1,025 New York Stock Exchange issues rose in price, while only 577 declined. On Wednesday 1,092 were up and 541 down.

Then, on Thursday, the Dow Jones industrials' modest 1.99 loss gave no hint of a stormy selloff in airline and aircraft stocks prompted by word that American Airlines planned new cut-rate fares, albeit with restrictions.

For evidence of that drop, you had to consult Dow Jones's average of 20 transportation stocks, which took a 10.52-point tumble that day.

These events stoked up a long-running debate over the various tools used to measure the market's fluctuations, and the relative merits of each.

In his market commentary for Wednesday, Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co. reported having heard on his car radio the previous evening, "The stock market was down almost four points today."

That was, Zinder said, "another instance of the news media misleading their audience by equating the DJIA with the market."

The point has been made on Wall Street many times over the years: The Dow, with its relatively narrow sample of 30 old-line industrial stocks, can often give a distorted impression of what is going on.

Yet somehow the average has weathered all the criticism, however compelling, and retained its position as the everyday emblem of the market.

When forecasters want to make waves with some dramatic prediction of where stocks are headed, you don't hear them calling for "225 in the Standard & Poor's 500" or warning of "a plunge to 150 in the Value Line composite." They talk in terms of the Dow.

Though it did indeed lag behind the rest of the market, the Dow Jones industrial average managed to post a gain for the past week, rising 9.27 to 1,227.36.

The NYSE's composite index gained 2.06 to 99.04, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 5.35 at 211.09.

Big Board volume averaged 126.79 million shares a day, up from 101.96 million the week before.

Aside from any confusion they may have caused, the divergent paths of the indicators in recent days served as a reminder that at any given moment, the relative fortunes of all the different sectors of the market can be shifting.

In 1984, many commentators have pointed out, not only the Dow but also the S&P and NYSE composite indexes tended to overstate the market's strength.

They gave little sign, for one thing, of the rough treatment suffered by shares of newer, smaller companies that Wall Street likes to call "emerging growth stocks."

In a different context, John Mendelson, analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. recently observed, "The stock market is fickle, and investors' affections change rapidly."

After examining the performance over the past 15 years of the various industry groups monitored by Standard & Poor's, Mendelson reported, "those groups that have topped the performance list in one year are very often way down the ladder in the next.

"There are exceptions when a group maintains its top slot for two consecutive years, but this has been a rare event. The lesson of these statistics appears to be that one should be nervous about maintaining positions in groups that have been leading for more than a year."

Port Industry Threatened By Scallop Supply

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Martin Manley had just spent two sleepless days guiding his dredging boat home from a 10-day hunt for scallops. But it was the catch, not fatigue, that was getting him down.

"I don't think I've ever seen it as bad as this," said the 51-year-old fisherman from East Freetown. "This business is really gone."

Manley's concern is shared by government officials and by just about everyone even remotely connected with this town's fishing business, which supplies about 90 percent of all sea scallops eaten in America.

The National Marine Fisheries says New Bedford's scallop catch has fallen to record lows, with the catch for many months in 1984 falling at least 100,000 pounds below the levels of the previous year.

"The resource has gone to hell," said Phillip Coates, director of the New England Fishery Management Council, a federal agency.

"It's a desperate situation right now," Coates said. "Scallopers are facing some dramatic decisions. They're going to lose some of their vessels. Fellows just aren't catching enough to make ends meet."

The dearth of scallops drove prices up to a record $7.50 per pound at the New Bedford fish auction last March. In 1983, the last year for which figures are available, New Bedford earned $109.2 million from fishing, the most of any port in the nation, largely because of the price of scallops.

As sea scallops keep rising in price, some restaurants have begun adding notes to their menus explaining frequent price increases.

Scallops have come and gone from Atlantic waters since they first became popular in the 1950s, old-timers say. Fishermen would clean out scallop beds a few years after finding them, forcing prices up until new beds were found.

But only in the past few years have fishermen flocked to the scallop industry, lured by high prices.

"We've got 150 boats doing what 75 did 10 years ago," said Manley, who has been a commercial fisherman for 34 years.

To add to scallopers' troubles, a recent decision by the World Court gave Canada half the enormous Georges Bank off the northeastern Atlantic — the half that held 50 percent of the U.S. scallop fishery.

"I think that really stinks," Manley said. "Right now a lot of scallops from that part of bank would be our answer to survival."

The high price of scallops has kept Manley afloat so far, but he admits having trouble meeting his monthly mortgage and insurance bills of $14,500 on his $1 million, 100-foot boat, the Mary Anne.

His crew faces tough times, too. Manley estimates they dredged up $34,000 worth of scallops in a 10-day fishing trip just before Christmas. But after deducting expenses, each of the eight men ended up with $300 for the trip. "And we're one of the better boats," Manley said.

Last year, fishery officials put a limit on the size scallop that could be taken. Their hope was that fishermen would bring in scallops over three inches across and leave the smaller ones to multiply.

But officials admitted they did not have enough officers to enforce the quotas, and fishermen said it might be too late anyway.

"Scientists tell us to leave the small scallops alone and in six months we'll really make money," Manley said. "But no small ones are showing up. We can't fish the small ones, so we're killing the big ones. We're killing the bottom."

Manley said scallopers want to meet with Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and state representatives to ask them to carry a message to Washington: Impose duties on cheaper Canadian fish, or watch the American industry die.

Meawhile, Peter Doeringer, director of Boston University's Institute for Employment Policy and an expert on the fishing industry, said the fishing crisis could be hardest on New Bedford's newest immigrants, many of whom are fishermen.

"It will take away jobs from the Portuguese," said Doeringer. "My sense is that the people who will stay in business will be the traditional scallop fleet because they are families who own several boats, they have low mortgages or no mortgages, and they are equipped to switch to groundfishing during slow times."

Brian J. Lawler, mayor of the port, which has about 98,000 residents, said the scallopers will have to turn elsewhere.

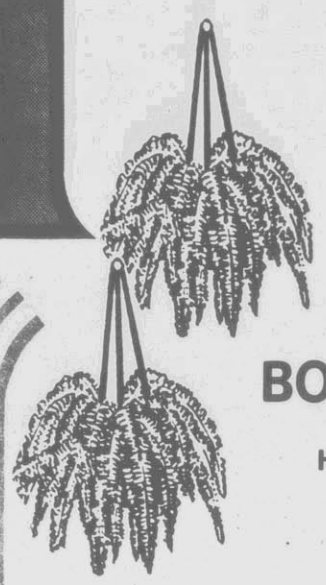

"It means some boats will be re-outfitted to go after different fish, and some will go out of business," he said. "The fishing industry always has to be described as survival of the fittest.

"It's safe to say that between Portland (in New Hampshire), Gloucester, Boston and New Bedford (in Massachusetts), one of us will close as a fishing port soon," he said.

Remembering First Ladies — 'They Are Human'

By INK MENDELSOHN
Smithsonian News Service

Nearly everybody knows that George Washington spent a hardship-filled winter at Valley Forge. But how many know that Martha endured the miserable experience with him? "To me, that never see anything of war, the preparations are very terrible indeed," she confessed to a friend, "but I endeavor to keep my fears to myself as well I can."

"Historians have understandably treated the presidency as a men's locker room," University of Texas historian Lewis Gould told an audience earlier last year at the Gerald R. Ford Mureum's Modern First Ladies Conference. "By ignoring first ladies," Gould said, "we have truncated the humanity of presidents and diminished them as men. Our grasp of the presidency is poorer for that action."

Headlining the historic conference were former first ladies fron opposing parties, Betty Ford and Rosalyn Carter. The two-day forum reflected a growning interest among historians in what has been called the most demanding volunteer job in America. Historians have been ranking presidents for years, but recently, they partieipated in a pioneering poll ranking first ladies and placed Eleanor Roosevelt at the top.

All the first ladies are popular at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington. "The eagle eye of the public has become ever more closely fixed on the first lady," curator emeritus Margaret Klapthor observes. Klapthor, creator of the First Ladies Hall, thinks that, through the first ladies, people are drawn to the "personality of the presidency" — those human qualities in their presidents with which they can identify.

America's first first lady had no precedents to guide her. The Constitution didn't mention a first lady. In fact, no one mentioned a "first lady" until 1877 when reporter Mary Clemmer Ames wondered in print if Lucy Hayes, wife of President Rutherford B. Hayes, would be affected by the world of Vanity Fair: Would it "friz" the hair and bare the shoulders of the Madonnalike "first lady of the land"?

Martha Washington — Lady Washingvton to the citizenry, "dear Patsy" to her husband and an "unassuming charactor" to "second lady" Abigail Adams — made only one public statement in her life — a quick thank-you to an admiring Philadelphia crowd. Her entire world revolved around her husband. She wrote to a friend: "...though his feelings and my own were in perfect unison with respect to our predilections for private life, yet I cannot blame him for having acted according to his ideas of duty in obeying the voice of his country." But that didn't mean that she never complained: "I never goe to any publick place...indeed, I think I am more like a state prisoner than anything else...."

Abigail Adams, called "her Majesty" and "Mrs. President" by critics, was just as devoted to second President John Adams as Martha was to George. She was not, however, unassuming: "I know not how...to impose a silence upon myself when I long to talk."

John Adams depended on Abigail for physical comforts and moral support — but also for ideas. "I want to hear you think or see your thoughts," he wrote to her. She had ideas on most subjects. She advocated the abolition of slavery, the expansion of education and woman's suffrage. As the Founding Fathers were drawing up the nation's first code of laws at the Continental Congress, Abigail urged Adams to "remember the ladies."

Privy to most governmental affairs, Abigail Adams — who hung out the presidential laundry in what is now the East Room of the White House — shared her opinions only with family and friends. And although, as her daughter said, her real taste was for a "dish of politics," Abigail was, like her model Martha Washington, an excellent national hostess.

As a hostess, however, no first lady has ever topped Dolley Madison, with or without her satin and velvet turbans garnished with ostrich plumes. Dolley was hostess for two presidents — the widowed Thomas Jefferson and "the great little Madison" named James. She simply loved people and parties. Dolley was planning a banquet the very day the British were marching to capture the capital and her with it. Urged to flee, she calmly packed the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and other state papers in a small trunk. Then, out of "respect for General Washington," she had his portrait by Gilbert Stuart freed from its ornate frame and carted out of town for safekeeping. Today, this portrait is the only object in the White House ghat was in the original "President's House."

Dolley also managed to save her red velvet curtains and some silver plate. but she had to leave behind most of her lavish wardrobe. "What Mrs. Madison wore" was fashion. Guests at her imaginative and unceasing parties were invited without regard to political philosophy. Dolley herself never commented on political matters and modesly admitted to her husband, "I am not much of a politician." But everybody loved Dolley and some of her popularity inevitably rubbed off on James Madison.

Alike in their devotion to their husbands, Martha Washington, Abigail Adams and dolley Madison were all women of their time but distinctly different personalities. And each created a mold filled by some memorable first ladies who followed then.

The dutiful Martha Washington had spiritual heirs in sunny Lucy Hayes, a temperance advocate and one of the best-loved women in the White House, and in Mamie Eisenhower, another well-loved first lady. "I have but one career and its name is Ike," Mamie once said. "Mrs. Ike," said the president, "refused to get involved in public life herself."

Abigail Adams, who gave her husband the benefit of her intellect, had soul sisters in Sarah Polk, Edith Wilson and Bess Truman. During his term of office (1845-1849), James Polk ran the country with his wife, a confidante and co-worker in all aspects of governing. "None but Sarah knew so intimately my private affairs," Polk said. As befitted a "perfect lady" (her highest compliment), Sarah Polk gave her husband credit for everything.

The second Mrs. Wilson was a perfect Southern lady who took up upon herself to manage the presidency for some months when Woodrow wilson was partially paralyzed by a stroke in 1919. During her "stewardship," Edith Wilson always maintained, "I myself never made a single decision regarding the disposition of public affairs," except for "the very important decision of when to present matters to my husband." Some historians dispute her claim, but it was fortunate for the country that Woodrow Wilson had traveled nowhere without Edith and had shared every idea and policy decision with his "little girl."

For Harry Truman, his ladylike Bess was "my chief adviser always." He consulted the "Boss" about using the atom bomb, about the value of the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe and about whether to fight in Korea. "I discussed all of them with her. Why not?"

President John F. Kennedy once noted: "A man marries a woman, not a first lady. If he becomes president, she must fit her own personality into her own concept of a first lady's role." Like Dolley Madison, Jacqueline Kennedy set the style for a nation. American women wanted the "Jackie look" in their clothes and hairdos. Her glittering, non-political White House parties created trends in party-giving and focused new attention on the arts.

Jacqueline Kennedy, like Dolley, was mindful of history and made millions of Americans aware of the historical necessity of preserving America's "first home" — the White House. "It would be a sacrilege merely to 'redecorate' it — a word I hate. It must be be restored — and that has nothing to do with decoration. That is a question of scholarship." She conceived the first White House guidebook, and, thanks to her, the White House has museum status to protect it, a curator to advise it and an active historical association.

The ladies of the White House followed familiar 18th- and 19th-century pathways well into the 20th. Lou Hoover — a brilliant woman who had majored in geology at Stanford, spoke Chinese plus four more languages and had seen the world — was an honorable heir to Martha Washington. Lou supported Herbert Hoover and dedicated herself to the Girl Scouts.

Her successor, called by one disgruntled soul "an unscrupulous Girl Scout," was the first first lady to take full advantage of the 20th century. Eleanor Roosevelt added a new power to the example of Martha Washington, the influence of Abigail Adams and the grace of Dolley Madison. During her White House years, from 1932 to 1945, she showed that the first lady could act as an individual, quite apart from her husband, the president.

Eleanor Roosevelt broke first-lady precedents by holding press conferences, giving lectures, writing a syndicated daily column and making radio broadcasts addressing the critical issues facing an America in depression and at war. Eleanor expressed controversial opinions, sometimes differing with FDR. She traveled everywhere, showing her concern for people — logging 40,000 miles a year in her first eight White House years. She reported to FDR on the conditions in the cities, in the dust bowl, in the coal mines and in the army camps of the Pacific. Soldiers in the New Hebrides were told not to shower naked in the rain, lest Mrs. Roosevelt turn up. She did.

President Roosevelt, who delighted in quoting the "missus," was not one of her many crticis. "Lady," he told her, "it's a free country. I have my own way of getting my views across to the American people. If you get me in hot water, I'll manage to save myself."

First ladies have always had their critics. As Pat Nixon once pointed out: "It takes heart to be in political life." But modern first ladies have seen, as Eleanor Roosevelt saw that there is "so much to be done, so much that can be done."

"Well who elected you?" Rosalynn Carter has quoted critics of her active governmental role. "Well nobody elected me, but I was there and nobody would have like it if I had done nothing. So you do the best you can and don't worry about it."

Prescribing that people should do "what makers their hearts sing," Lady Bird Johnson battled the ugliness on the landscape she called "an eroding force on the people of our land." Betty Ford lobbied for the Equal Rights Amendment and spoke out about her breast cancer. Nancy Reagan is fighting drug abuse among America's young. Betty Ford summed it up this way: "First ladies, first families are human. They bleed red blood. They have normal human emotions."

Clearly the role of the first lady has expanded as the roles of American women have expanded. A major role for women remains. One day, someone may once again be faced with Martha Washington's dilemma. Will he be called the "first gentleman"?

Eleanor Roosevelt, the model for the modern First Lady, celebrated her husband's birthday one year with movie stars Lana Turner and Deanna Durbin.

The title of "First Lady" was first seen in print describing Lucy Hayes.

Abigail Adams, shown here in a portrait by Gilbert Stuart, cautioned her husband, President John Adams, to "remember the ladies" in the first code of laws.

Edith Wilson, Woodrow Wilson's second wife, in a period she called her "stewardship," took on the management of the nation for a time after the president suffered a stroke which left him partially paralyzed.

When Martha Washington married George, "dear Patsy," as he called her, was slender and brown-haired.

Wedding Vows Exchanged In Candlelight Ceremony

Leigh Bryan Messner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stanley Messner, and Worth Dunn Albea, son of Mrs. Carmon Dunn Albea, all of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday evening in a candlelight service in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr. assisted by the Rev. Herbert Messner, senior Protestant chaplain of the Veterans Administration Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio.

Sharon Irwin presented a program of organ music. Jeanne Resus sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Two Shall Be as One." Assisting in directing the wedding was Mrs. Roger Lafayette Mann.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The gown was designed by Eve for Milday featuring a high neckline encircled with silk Venise lace appliques. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a sheer yoke of imported English net outlined in the silk Venise lace in a floral pattern interspersed with a scroll design. An overlay of embroidered organza in a floral pattern also enhanced the bodice. The full Renaissance styled sleeves were fashioned in the sheer embroidered organza with deep fitted cuffs appliqued in the silk lace with calla points extending over the hand. The full skirt and attached chapel length train were embellished with sprays of embroidered floral garlands. She wore a brial hat overlaid in matching embroidered organza. The hat was styled with an upturned brim centered with silk roses and wisteria. The bride carried a formal cascade featuring white cattleya orchids, stephanotis and white tea roses accented with foliage and ivy.

Laurie Smith was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of emerald satin. The gown was fashioned with an open neckline and pouf sleeves that featured elasticized pleated ruffles in an off-shoulder effect. The fitted bodice was embroidered in a floral motif of matching teal satin. A tie sash encircled the modified waistline from which fell the gathered skirt. She carried a flowing cascade of white snowdrift pom pons, miniature carnations and freesia accented with foliage.

Both mothers wore phalaenopsis orchids.

Mrs. Wade Clifford Cline and Mrs. Whitney Francis Miller III, sisters of the bride, and Mrs. Douglas Wales Grimes, sister of the bridegroom, Robin Leigh Bass, Lydia Karen Woolard, Rhonda Butler and Kerri Rae Logue, all of Greenville, were bridesmaids. Their dresses were identical to that of the honor attendant and they carried identical bouquets.

Honorary attendant was Mrs. Waightstill Morehead Scales III of Greenville. She wore a corsage of white miniature carnations and freesia.

Sidney Worth Dunn Jr., uncle of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included Jospeh William Albea, brother of the bridegroom, Wade Clifford Cline, Whitney Francis Phillip Miller III, Waightstill Morehead Scales III, Douglas Wales Grimes, Howard Patrick Vainright, Jesse Moye Baker and Christopher Scholes Garrett, all of Greenville.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the Parish Hall of the church. Assisting in receiving and serving were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Franklin Dail, Mrs. James Knott Proctor, Mrs. Ralph Northcutt, Mrs. Waverly Erwin Hester, Mrs. Whitney Frances Phillip Miller Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frank Chamberlain.

Robbin Louise Miller presided at the guest register and Pamela Chamberlain and Gail Elizabeth Chamberlain assisted in serving.

The bride attended Virginia Intermont College and is a dance major at East Carolinas University. She is employed by the ECU School of Medicine.

Following a wedding trip to Montego Bay, Jamaica, the couple will live in Greenville where the bridegroom is associated with Carolina Office Equipment Co.

The bride and her attendants were entertained at a luncheon held at the home of Mrs. James Edward Clement. A dinner was held at the Greenville County Club Friday evening after the rehearsal. It was given by the mother of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Worth Dunn Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W.M. Scales III and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Wales Grimes. Friends of the bridal couple entertained at a cocktail dance following the dinner at the Elks Club.

Nuptial Vows Solemnized In Parkers Chapel Church

Pamela D. Briley and Harold E. Garland Jr. spoke their nuptial vows Saturday at 3 p.m. at Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Larry Stevens.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Ray Briley of Route 5, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of of Barbara Grimes Williams of Robersonville and Harold Garland of Knoxville, Tenn.

A program of wedding music was presented by Frances Cain of Greenville, organist, the Rev. Donnie Miles and Billy Bazemore, soloists.

The bride's father was her escort. She wore a bridal gown of sata peau with a sweetheart neckline accented with a ruffle enhanced with Venise and schiffli lace. The Victorian sleeves were highlighted with Venise lace and seed pearls and ended in a ruffle of schiffli lace. The full skirt fell into a brushed hemline eged in a ruffle accented with bows and schiffli lace which extended into a cathedral length train. She wore a chapel length veil attached to a cap of Venise lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of cymbidium orchids, white sweetheart roses, statice, cloudy blue starflowers, eucalyptus and ivy.

Terrie Whitehurst of Greenville was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a formal gown of cloudy blue matte taffeta designed with a bateau neckline with a scooped back crossed with bands of self-fabric. The elbow length fitted sleeves featured a pouf effect at the shoulder and the modified natural waistline was enhanced by a tie sash of contrasting bluestone taffeta. The intermezzo length wrap skirt was fashioned with a petal hemline.

Bridesmaids were Ann Corey of Winterville, sister of the bridegroom, Donnell Evans and Kelly Briley, cousin of the bride, both of Greenville, and Sarah Frances Garland of Knoxville, Tenn., sister of the bridegroom. Their gowns were styled identically to that of the honor attendant in bluestone matte taffeta accented with sashes of cloudy taffeta. Each carried a natural designed bouquet of bluestone and cloudy blue starflowers, ivory freesia, statice, miniature carnations with ivy, eucalyptus and ivory satin streamers.

Paige Manning of Danville, Va., cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She was dressed similar to the other attendants. She carried a white garden basket filled with ivory freesia, miniature carnations, eucalyptus, ivy and baby's breath.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Billy Evans, Joseph Briley, cousin of the bride, both of Greenville, Tony Riggs of Ayden and George Dowling of Tampa, Fla. Joey Whitehurst of Greenville, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and carried a white satin pillow with a cluster of cloudy blue starflowers.

The mother of the bride wore a silk wild raspberry formal gown with a draped flare extending to the waistline. The bridegroom's mother wore a mauve pink satin formal gown with a lace over blouse embroidered in pink satin. Both carried clutch bouquets of white cymbidium orchids with sweetheart roses. Mrs. George Briley, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Annie Grimes, grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages of white gardenias.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony given by the bride's parents.

Serving cake were Christine Stocks, Shirley Henderson, Glenda Briley and Elba McLawhorn, aunts of the bride. Edna Simmons, Audrey Leggett, Larue Griffin, aunts of the bride, and Judi Wingate poured punch. Rice bags were distributed by Paige Manning of Danville, Va., and Amy Williams of Winterville.

MRS. GARLAND

The coupe will live in Hillsville, Va., after a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and North Pitt High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Western Carolina University, Pitt Community College and J.H. Rose High School. He is the administrator of Blue Ridge Highlands Nursing Home in Galax, Va.

The bridal couple, members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained Friday night at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton given by the parents of the bridegroom.

A miscellaneous shower, pig picking and two teas were given for the couple prior to the ceremony.

The bride was entertained at a lingerie shower and a bridesmaids luncheon given by Terrie Whitehurst, sister of the bride, and Anne Briley, aunt of the bride.

Capt. Cyril Turner of the Royal Air Force gave the first skywriting exhibition in 1922. It was over Times Square in New York City. He spelled out "Hello U.S.A. — Call Vander... 7200." Forty-seven thousand people did in 2½ hours.

Historic Hotel Get New Life

By SUE CROSS
Associated Press Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The Hillcrest Hotel was the pride of the city when it opened 55 years ago, but old age made it a laughingstock of the local industry. Now, its manager is counting on that age to give it new life.

The Hillcrest spans a full city block, a work of 1929 elegance that redecorators have largely hidden behind a modern decor. Solid mahogany doors have been painted, intricate brass door fixtures are dulled, and plastic potted palms share the lobby with modular furniture that seems out of place.

Manager Lois Boerst says the days of trying to make the Hillcrest look young are over, and its recent 55th birthday began a celebration of its age.

"I think people are more into nostalgia now," says Ms. Boerst, pointing out wood moldings, coved ceilings and many-paned windows not found in the contemporary hotels she calls "boring, modern places."

"From a marketing standpoint, there are a tremendous number of people who like the old hotels, the service," said Bill Burchett of First Capital Communicaions Inc., who plans a marketing campaign for the Hillcrest among convention-goers.

The hotel's 130 rental rooms now are frequently filled with overflow from the only other downtown hotel, a Holiday Inn, and nearly all the 100 apartments in the building are rented.

"I think I have seen it come around full cycle," Ms. Boerst said of business during the 12 years she has been at the hotel. "When I came here, business was booming. Then there was a time when it leveled off, sort of, and now it's real busy again."

To a large extent, the hotel's well-being is tied to that of its neighborhood.

The hotel stands between downtown Toledo, the once-elegant Old West End, and an enterprise zone — all three targets of city redevelopment.

Industries that get tax credits for moving into the enterprise zone will bring more business people to the area; rebuilt Victorian mansions of the Old West End draw increasing numbers of sightseers; and downtown is about to see construction of a convention center and hotel.

Ms. Boerst is counting on all three to boost her business.

Couple Speaks Vows In Ceremony Performed Saturday

MRS. DENNISON

Pamela Ann Mason and Larry Brewster Dennison Jr. were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in a ceremony performed in the Church of God.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Curtis Haislip. Nelda Pope was organist and Starr Pope was vocalist.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Mason of Roanoke Rapids, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Mr. and Mrs. Larry B. Dennison Sr. of Farmville are parents of the bridegroom.

The honor attendant was Connie Boyd of Greenville and bridesmaids were Pamela Barber of Goldsboro, Reba Lewis of Greenville, Tonia Reason of Elm City, sister of the bridegroom, and Ellen Cannon of Farmville.

Leah Greene of Greenville was flower girl and Mark Andrew Dennison of Farmville, brother of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Michael Cannon of Farmville, Bryan Mason of Chester, Va., and Kevin Mason of Roanoke Rapids, brothers of the bride, and Melvin Boyd Jr. of Greenville.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress. The gown was white satin fashioned with a shoulder wide sheer yoke and outlined with flowerettes of seed pearls. Long satin sleeves ended in wedding peaks over the hands and the basque bodice buttoned up the back with self-covered buttons. It was accented by a full gathered skirt with a sweep train. She carried a sheaf of white roses with English ivy and white and burgundy satin ribbons. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion with pencil edging attached to a capulet overlaid in Brussels and embroidered silk Venise lace. Motifs of the mating lace were scattered over the illusion.

Each of the attendants wore long burgundy wine colored dresses of silk and each carried an arrangement of carnations and English ivy tied with satin ribbons.

The flower girl wore a dress of cranberry colored velvet with a V-lace white collar. She carried a basket of roses, carnations and baby's breath.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents.

The couple will live in Greenville after a trip to the New York mountains.

The bride is a graduate of Roanoke Rapids High School and East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Richmondville High School in Richmondville, N.Y. She is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and he is employed with Braswell Equipment Co. in Wilson.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents on Friday.

Couple Drives 14,000 Miles

By THOMAS H. BROWN
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Brian and Margaret Wilson arrived here five months after they set out from Philadelphia in their second-hand camper with the idea of driving all the way to La Paz, Bolivia.

They didn't quite make it to their ultimate destination, but in their 14,000-mile odyssey from Philadelphia to Panama City, the Wilsons of Essex, England, saw more of America than most people will see in a lifetime.

"The strange idea of wanting to drive through Central and South America was something that had been on my mind a long time," Wilson, a 57-year-old headmaster of Chigweel School in Essex, said of the trip.

Though suffering from dental problems and cramped from "living in a box 10 feet by 6 feet," Wilson said he and his wife would have continued their trip to South America if they hadn't "run out of time and money."

They were also running out of roadway. The Pan-American Highway they followed most of their way ends here abruptly before reaching Panama's border with Colombia and the South American continent.

The Wilsons spoke in an interview about their trip and the joys and sorrows of life on the road.

Their memories include haunting images that stayed with them throughout their journey like dead horses lying abandoned along the roadside and the sad brown eyes of children who always scurried to beg from them in small towns and cities across Mexico and Central America.

Other images include what Mrs. Wilson described as the "magic" of Palenque and Tikal, the pre-Columbian ruins tucked away in isolated, jungle areas of southern Mexico and northern Guatemala where visitors are reminded of the fact that America was civilized long before it was "discovered" by Christopher Columbus.

Above all, however, the Wilsons say the variety of people they met during their long trip is what they'll remember most.

Mrs. Wilson, 44, said she kept busy throughout the trip by working on the 15,000-word thesis on pre-Columbian art and culture she'll present soon after her return to London's Central School of Art and Design.

Wilson said he read a lot during the trip. Apart from a well-worn copy of the "South American Handbook," he said his reading material included one book that he found it easy to relate to: John Steinbeck's "Travels with Charley."

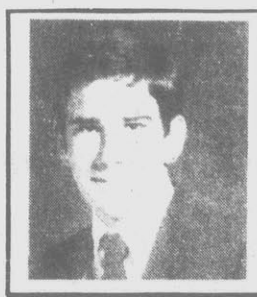

This wasn't the first long road trip the Wilsons have made. Several years ago they drove through Turkey, Syria, Iraq and Iran.

"In retrospect I suppose it was a bit silly," Wilson said of the latest adventure. He added that they wouldn't try anything similar "for another two years or so."

On The Young Side

By CLAY DEANHARDT

Two times each year, a new group of students are inducted into the Haskett Chapter of the National Honor Society here at Rose High.

This year's inductees are: Mary Helen Allen, Carol Ambert, Kelly Barnhill, Anissa Boyer, Amy Dohm, Ginger Galloway, Kevin Hewett, Leigh Lanier, Kim May, Mary Jon May, Rebecca Murphy, Danielle Nieman, Ginny Robbins, Jody Ross, Sara Scott, Nancy Sneed, Rebecca Thompson, Lisa Trevathan, Karla Turner, Luanne Wallace, and Marty Welch.

The inductions were held Thursday evening at the First Christian Church with Dr. Erwin Hester as the keynote speaker. Congratulations to each of these superior students.

Kelly Jones will soon be advancing to the state level of the Voice of Democracy speech contest sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. She has already won the school and district levels for her speech entitled "My Pledge to America." Kelly is a junior at Rose.

Senior Kevin Hewett has been named the local Century III Leadership award winner. He was judged on his abilities as a leader, his school and community activities and a current events exam. He also wrote a short essay "The Breakup of the Family Due to the High Divorce Rate and the Mobile Society of the U.S." Kevin will go on to compete at the state level where he can win a $1,500 scholarshnip.

This will be exam week at Rose and students will be involved with their studies for the next few days. The following two days, Thursday and Friday, will be student holidays. Due to this mid-year break, this column will not appear in next week's paper.

Stock Broker Is ABWA Guest Speaker

Wesley E. Singleton, a stock broker with Edward E. Jones Co., gave the program Tuesday night for Greenville's Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Singleton, who also conducts classes on investments and securities at Pitt Community College, discussed the complexities of the financial industry and the advantages and disadvantages of various forms of investing.

Members and guests were welcomed by Barbara Cleary, president. Susan Bizzaro gave the work related talk on her duties as public information officer for Greenville Utilities Commission.

The chapter plans a spring enrollment event for prospective new members to be held March 19. Linda Shore, membership chairman, will be in charge of the event. Carol Bullard, ways and means chairman, announced plans for a "celebrity" auction to be held in May and the publication of cookbooks scheduled for September. Money realized from the events will be used for the group's scholarship fund.

Mattie Bridgers, Sylvia Little, Carol Bullard and Laura Berenson were welcomed as new members in a candlelight ceremony. An orientation session for new members will be hosted by Janet Worley, vice president, at the home of Deborah Daniels Feb. 13.

Miss Worley announced the award of the pearl guard of friendship from the national organization of ABWA to Mrs. Cleary for her efforts in bringing new members into the club.

The next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 19.

Randy Doub Is Guest Speaker

The Pitt County Republican Women's Club met Wednesday at Sweet Caroline's with Randy Doub, newly appointed member of the North Carolina Board of Transportation, District II, as the guest speaker.

Officers for 1985 were installed and plans were made for local representation at the State Federation of Republican Women meeting to be held in Raleigh in February. Those interested in attending should contact Laura Brown, 756-8992.

Eighteen new members were welcomed. The next meeting will be held Feb. 13 at 11:30 a.m. Interested persons may contact Sally Keel, 757-0179, or Laura Brown, 756-8992.

SHE SETS THIRD SPEED RECORD

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Barbara Blackburn, a 64-year-old grandmother from Salem, Ore., who failed typing in high school, has set her third world speed typing record.

In 1981, she earned Guiness Book of World Records titles for standard typewriters with a speed of 150 words a minute for 50 minutes, and for computer keyboard typewriters at 170 words a minute.

This past October, using the software program, Mastertype, published by Scarborough Systems of Tarrytown, and a Dvorak keyboard, she broke her computer speed mark by typing at a rate of 194 words a minute.

The Democratic Party in the United States was represented for the first time as a donkey in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly in 1870.

Technology Is Reducing Pain In Dentistry

CHICAGO (AP) — Computer-age tools are taking a good deal of pain out of dentistry, according to one of the nation's largest dental organizations, with headquarters in Chicago.

The Academy of General Dentistry (AGD) reports that a number of technological advances in the field are contributing to pain-free dental visits. And, it adds, much of the new technology is also responsible for healthier teeth.

"The future is already here in dentistry," says Dr. Howard Glazer, of the AGD. "Dentists are making use of sophisticated hardware. We're using machines to detect caries (cavities) and microscopes to quickly and accurately fill them. We have tomographs and myo-monitors for diagnotic purposes, and laser dentistry is just around the corner."

Glazer points out that these devices and others not only make a dental visit more comfortable, but many of them can identify a problem before it gets to a serious stage.

Though the incidence of caries among children has been cut by a third in the past decade, decay has not been eradicated altogether, he says. But an ultramodern set of tools sharply reduces discomfort associated with the filling process, Glazer adds.

The cavities detector is a minicomputer that gives the dentist an optical readout, he explains. A needle point is placed on the tooth groove and, based on a numbers scale, indicates whether decay is present. It also tells the dentist what kind of filling material to use, from amalgam to sealant.

A special dental microscope is now being used by dentists to make cavity-filling precise, Glazer notes. This device allows the dentist to survey the tooth in great detail, so just the decayed portion is removed.

"You don't have to remove extra tooth to be sure decay is out," explains Glazer. "The microscope clearly outlines the area to be removed."

Another detection device has been developed for root canal work. In simple terms, it measures the electric potential between the periodontal ligament and the body, so the dentist knows exactly where the ligament is and can quickly and accurately perform the procedure. It is especially effective for work on older people and pregnant women because it eliminates the need for multiple X-rays, the dentist points out.

Tomographs are used to identify jaw misalignment, TMJ dysfunction and other disorders. They are X-rays that resemble a stop action camera. The high speed machine is able to photograph the jaw as it moves, so the dentist can make a diagnosis. Myo-monitors are designed to measure electrical impulses in the facial muscles, revealing how and where a person bites. This provides important data so the dentist can assess jaw and bite disorders.

Lasers are not far behind existing technological breakthroughs in dentisty. Academy members see small hand-held dental lasers available in a few years for such in-office procedures as decay removal, preparation of teeth for fillings, crowns or caps and periodontal surgery.

Among the most welcome tools — by dentists and patients alike — are newly designed needles for injecting local anesthetics, Glazer says. These are pistol-like instruments with an extra-fine needle that deaden just the tooth, not surrounding tissue and the face. The needle barely penetrates the gum and the anesthetic takes at once.

"No more waiting 15 uncomfortable minutes for the procedure to begin," Glazer says.

Check Your Insurance Coverage Frequently And Make Adjustments

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Bob Crowley, a Baltimore contractor, sat down recently to figure out how much a $100,000 life insurance policy he bought in 1974 was worth in inflated 1984 dollars.

The answer shocked him: barely more than $50,000.

Inflation can devastate insurance -- not just life but nearly all kinds. What was sufficient a few years ago may be woefully insufficient today.

There's only one way to combat this erosion: Check your coverage frequently and make appropriate adjustments as often as necessary.

Life insurance:

The key consideration is what it will take to assure your spouse or others of some measure of financial security in the event of your death. Life insurance can be used for other purposes, but that's the major one.

The National Insurance Consumer Organization (NICO), a private research and consumer-advocacy group, says most families with two young children should have coverage equal to about five times annual income, assuming your employer provides group coverage equal to a year's salary and your spouse will be eligible for Social Security survivors' benefits.

You can get by with less or no life insurance if you are single, your children are grown, your net worth is substantial, or you're confident your spouse would have an adequate income from employment, deferred compensation, a pension or other sources when you die.

Annual renewable term insurance provides the most protection per premium dollar for most buyers, particularly younger ones. A few of the new universal life policies compare favorably with term.

Whole life, or cash value, insurance, the most widely sold form (it pays bigger commissions to salespersons), combines protection with a savings plan. You get less protection per dollar, since part of the money goes into the savings fund, usually earning lower-than-market interest rates.

Health insurance:

You're risking financial disaster if you're not well insured, either on your own or through your employer.

That means comprehensive, basic protection, which pays for hospitalization and certain other costs, and major medical, the high-limit coverage for catastrophic illnesses and injuries.

Your major medical should provide at least $250,000 in lifetime benefits, and your out-of-pocket expenses shouldn't exceed 20 percent of the cost of care after deductibles.

Disability insurance:

At age 22, you're 7.5 times more likely to be seriously disabled for three months or more than you are to die during the year. At 35, you face 1 in 3 odds of suffering a serious disability before 65.

Disability insurance provides income while you're out of action. It's better to get it through your employer or another group, because it's expensive if bought on your own -- about $15 to $30 a year per $100 of monthly coverage for a 30-year-old male.

Don't be certain you could collect Social Security disability benefits. To get them you must have a physical or mental condition that prevents you from doing any gainful work and the impairment must last at least 12 months or be expected to result in death. You can't collect any money for at least five months after applying.

Auto insurance:

Raising the deductible or dropping comprehensive and collision coverage on an old car are a couple of fast ways to reduce your insurance costs.

The editors of Changing Times magazine recommend you carry as much liability insurance as you can comfortably afford, because the incremental cost is low and you could be sued for millions.

Umbrella liability policies:

These add to your auto and residential liability protection and cover such other possessions as recreational vehicles and watercraft. Umbrellas are sold in increments of $1 million and pay judgments arising from accidents, libel, slander, wrongful prosecution and other situations.

It makes sense, especially if you have substantial assets to protect. It generally costs less than $100 a year for $1 million of protection, although you may have to raise your auto and residential limits first in order to qualify for coverage.

Homeowners and renters insurance:

Better check the market value of your home if you don't carry inflation-guard insurance, the kind that automatically increases your coverage in line with inflation. Also, this might be a good time to consider replacement-cost insurance.

In assessing all your insurances, see if you're paying for coverage you really don't need.

For example, credit life insurance, the kind that pays off a home mortgage or loan if you die, is of doubtful value; using the premium money to increase your regular life insurance would probably give you more protection at the same price.

Health policies that pay off for only one disease, such as cancer, or are otherwise highly restrictive are a poor way to buy insurance. You should have comprehensive coverage that pays in case of any kind of disease or injury.

Scholarship Recipient Named

Ann-Lynne Davis, a senior at Rose High School, has been selected by the Greenville Woman's Club for the Sally Southall Cotten Scholarship. She will compete in February for the district scholarship.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Davis of Greenville.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The more science breakthroughs I read about, the more depressed I get.

I don't know if you're ready for this one, but now they've discovered "baby talk" is more than babbling. Babies are really telling you something. The study said that some mothers not only inhibit their baby's attempts to communicate by talking to them in the wrong way, but they dominate the conversation.

This could explain why my kids only speak six words a year . . . none of them to me.

I was never good at baby talk. To cover my self-consciousness, I would bend over the baby and not only fire questions, but answer them as well. "So, whatya wanta do today? Wanta go bye-bye in the car? Well, don't we all, bunkie, but the battery is as dead as a doornail and your daddy took the car that runs and we're in for the laundry experience. How does that grab you?"

Like most mothers in the survey, I never shut up. I "held the floor too long" and didn't give my children time to respond, so they eventually gave up.

Had I waited, according to the study, I might have heard the child coo, smile or say Mama and Dada. You cannot imagine how rotten this makes me feel. Just look at all the magic moments I missed by talking too much. Why couldn't I have listened occasionally?

Is it too late? It's never too late.

I stopped by the bathroom door where my son was entombed and decided to make up for my past sins. "I'm sorry," I said, "for all the times I've talked when I should have listened, but I never realized that in silence there is communication. If there's something you'd like to say, I'll be quiet.

"That's the trouble with people. They're afraid of silence. Me? I've learned to live with it. Heaven knows I've had a lot of practice living with your father. That man wouldn't say mush if he had a mouthful of it. Anytime you want to respond, just know I'm listening here on the other side of the door.

"We've so much catching up to do. I want to know how you feel about life, the tax structure, broccoli. Is Mary Lou Retton overexposed? Has the Mafia taken over aerobics classes? Is MTV life-threatening?

Mother is listening.

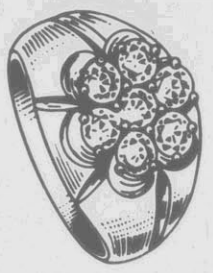

"It's funny, but in all these years we've had such a bond. I always seem to know what you're thinking . . . and I forgive you for it. You don't have to say anything and I know what is going on in your mind. That's the way it ie with mother and child . . .

"I'm going to be quiet now and not say a single word until you tell me what is on your mind."

After what seemed like hours, a voice emerged. "Are we out of toilet tissue?"

It's funny. At that moment, I had a feeling I hadn't missed a thing in all those years.

Couple Marries In Landmark Church

MRS. DAIL

Michelle Sue Woodley, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. John Thomas Woodley of Route 1, Greenville, became the bride of Jack Jolly Dail Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jolly Dail of Route 1, Winterville, Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the Landmark Baptist Church by the Rev. C.L. Patrick and the Rev. Woodley.

A program of music was presented by Louise Wainright, pianist. Judy D. Bowen sang "Surely the Presence of the Lord is in This Place" and "The Wedding Prayer." Mille Imbrado sang "With This Ring I Thee Wed."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her maid of honor was Treva Woodley of Lynchburg, Va. Bridesmaids included Dana H. Hollingsworth, Jackie D. Allen and Judy D. Bowen, both sisters of the bridegroom, all of Winterville and Anne D. Booth of Ayden. The flower girl was Dava Allen of Winterville, niece of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Jim Booth of Ayden and Kent Allen of Winterville, brothers-in-law of the bridegroom, Mike Bowen of Winterville, Kedd and John Woodley of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

The bride wore a formal floor length gown with a chapel train of organza with Venise lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a portrait neckline outlined with scalloped Venise lace edged with a point d'espirit ruffle and bishop sleeves. Venise lace edged with seed pearls appliqued the bodice and the sleeves. The skirt extended into a chapel train. Garlands of Venise lace in a scalloped pattern encircled the skirt and train and Venise lace motifs bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a lace covered headpiece trimmed in pearls attached to a two tiered fingertip illusion veil. The bride carried a cascade of creamy white lilies, white roses and miniature carnations.

The attendants were each dressed in a formal gown of periwinkle blue designed with an open neckline. The fitted bodice featured a mock wrap effect and the elbow length sleeves featured self-fabric rosettes at the shoulders. A tie sash encircled the waistline from which fell a gathered skirt. Each carried colonial nosegays of daisies and statice.

The mother of the bride wore a midnight blue gown accented with rosettes on the sleeves. She wore a cymbidium orchid wrist corsage. The mother of the bridegroom selected an aubergine silesta floor length gown and a white orchid shoulder corsage.

The flower girl was dressed in a periwinkle blue dress with a white embroidered pinafore trimmed in lace with matching ribbon insertion. She carried a white basket of daisies and statice.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. Sybil McLawhorn, aunt of the bride, poured punch and Faye Adams, aunt of the bride, served wedding cake. Debra Lee registered guests. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Barham, aunt and uncle of the bride.

The refreshment table was decorated with mixed carnations, daisies and lilies.

The couple will live near Winterville after a wedding trip to Disney World.

The bride attends Pitt Community College and is employed by Blount Harvey. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is engaged in farming with his father.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party, family and out-of-town guests at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Three Steers.

The couple was also honored at a dinner at Jauncey's and a bridesmaids luncheon was given for the bride. A kitchen shower and a bridal shower were also given for the couple.

Changes Seen In Role Grandparents Now Play

WASHINGTON (AP) — Longer life expectancies, higher marriage ages, varying birthrates and more women in the work force have changed the roles grandparents play, says Christopher Hayes, director of The Catholic University of America's Center for the Study of Pre-Retirement and Aging.

"Today's family patterns reflect decades of social and economic change," he says. "Consider a classic image from American folklore: several generations of a middle-class family gather at the dinner table as a white-haired grandmother, her husband beside her, proudly presents the Thanksgiving turkey."

Such Norman Rockwell portraits of harmonious, multigenerational family life may have been the norm 40 or 50 years ago, Hayes says. Then, many Americans spent their lives in the towns where they had been born and raised. But the picture has changed, he points out.

"Today's grandparents include full-time Wall Street investment bankers, retired Detroit steelworkers and Sunbelt nursing home residents." All of them can make significant contributions to society, Hayes says.

"We've developed means of prolonging life. The challenge facing us is to improve the quality of that life by examining the role of the grandparent in the family and the role of the elderly in society."

"Baby boomers" will have to find ways to meet that challenge, he adds, because they will be elderly in the next 20 to 50 years.

"Families should discuss what part grandparents can, should and want to play in their grandchildren's lives," Hayes advises. "Parents are often too tired from earning a living to respond to all their children's needs. Grandparents, who may have more free time and patience than do parents, can fill the gap. Because parents are the disciplinarians, children may find it easier to talk to their grandparents than to their mothers and fathers."

Hayes doesn't deny that grandparents have earned the right to their own time and space. The different generations of a family should candidly discuss what involvement each generation wants and needs from the others, he suggests. The family should discuss how the grandparents' roles would change after a disruption, such as divorce, illness, death or relocation.

Divorce can create serious problems for grandparents who have played a significant role in their grandchildren's lives, says Hayes. The grandparents related to the parent who does not gain custody may lose all contact with their grandchildren, particularly if the divorce is bitter and the spouse with custody remarries or moves.

Several states recognize the legal rights of grandparents to maintain ties with their grandchildren, he says.

"Families should foster the positive aspects of the grandparent-grandchild relationship. By associating with their grandparents, young children can see the potential of older adulthood. Through stories and photographs, grandparents can enrich their grandchildren's awareness of events such as the Depression, daily life in another country and immigration."

Grandparents can impart cultural, religious and social values to their grandchildren, Hayes points out.

"Immigrants who worked at skilled trades can pass on the lore of dying crafts such as stone carving and cabinet making to grandchildren raised with microcomputers and mass-produced furniture.

"Frequently, the children of immigrants are caught up in the race to become 'Americanized.' If ethnic and minority groups pass on their heritage to their grandchildren through oral histories, recipes and reminiscences, they perform a useful service."

For the grandparent isolated from family or for the elderly who are childless, homebound or institutionalized, foster grandparent and adopt-a-grandparent programs offer valuable opportunities for communication, Hayes says.

"The elderly adults in such programs develop vital links to the community, and the young people, many of whom have no other contact with the aged, often begin to question their parents about older adulthood and their parents' plans for it," Hayes says.

¾ cup (about) buttermilk

In a 1-cup measure dissolve yeast in warm water. In a large bowl stir together flour, sugar, baking powder, soda and salt. Cut in butter until it is fine. Stir in yeast mixture and enough of the buttermilk to make a fairly soft dough. Turn out on a pastry cloth; knead a few times to smooth dough. With a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll dough to ½-inch thickness. Cut out with a round, floured 2-inch cutter. Place a few inches apart on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 15 to 18 minutes. Serve hot. Makes about 2 dozen.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Assembly-Line Thank You Notes Save Time But Not Feelings

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of the enclosed thank-you note we just received for a wedding gift we sent to a couple?

As you can see, not only is it a form letter, it was made on a copy machine. The senders had left blanks in which they filled in the names of the givers and the kind of gift they had sent.

If we had not received this, we never would have believed that anyone would send such a "thank-you."

Please don't use any real names.

APPALLED

"Dear (Marty and Mary),

"Just a personal note to let you know how much we enjoyed your presence at our wedding and reception. You were who we most hoped would attend. We decided that your gift of (a pewter ashtray) was our favorite. What a coincidence that we were discussing just before the wedding how much we needed (a pewter ashtray).

"Sincerely, (Bride and Groom)

"P.S. Please don't show this note to anybody else."

DEAR APPALLED: I, too, am appalled. However, I doubt that this type of acknowledgment will ever catch on.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our family has been having a strong disagreement about what happens to relatives by marriage after a divorce occurs in the family, so my husband suggested we write to you.

My brother was married to "Sally" for 13 years, during which time she was an aunt to my children, right? Then my brother and Sally were divorced, and my brother married somebody else. Sally then cut herself off from our family and didn't want to know any of us. My brother says that since Sally was only an aunt by marriage, she is no longer my children's aunt.

My husband says that since Sally was married to my brother when our children were born, she will always be their aunt even though she divorced my brother.

Who is right, my brother or my husband?

DISAGREEING IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR DISAGREEING: When people are related by marriage, the relationship technically ends if the marriage ends. Your brother is right.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I mailed a birthday card with a generous check to my granddaughter. I heard nothing from her, but when she visited me at Christmas, I asked her in a nice, polite way if she had received my card and check. She said she had. Then I said, also in a nice, polite way, that I had half expected her to let me know that it had been received.

Then she said, "Oh, that's not done anymore! That old custom has faded away"—or words along that line.

I was flabbergasted. She is a smart girl, Phi Beta Kappa and a last-year medical student.

I am an old man, but I still have all my marbles (I think), and I cannot believe that the common courtesy of acknowledging a gift has "faded away"—at least not in our Western civilization. Or am I mistaken?

Also, what do you think my attitude should be regarding future gifts to this granddaughter?

GRANDPA

DEAR GRANDPA: Nothing has faded away—except perhaps your granddaughter's good manners. As for future gifts: When the resentment over an unacknowledged gift exceeds the pleasure of having given it, it's time to quit giving, Grandpa.

Workplace Problems Reflect State Of Mind

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"The quality and quantity of a person's work pretty accurately reflects his or her state of mind. A person having trouble on the job is usually a person troubled in his or her personal life," Lorraine Shinn, occupational program consultant with the Pitt County Mental Health Center, said.

Many times an employer or manager can know without knowing that an employee is having trouble with his spouse, with his child, with the amount he drinks each evening or each weekend, yet feel stopped in knowing how to deal with the problem or assist his employee in dealing with it. He may value the person as an employee and as a person, yet feel tempted to relieve him of his job rather than deal with the problems being created in the workplace. This is a dilemma for a conscientious employer or manager.

The Employee Assistance Program offered by the Pitt County Mental Health Center provides the employer a way to deal with such dilemmas. The program is designed to identify, motivate and refer employees with personal or medical problems that contribute to declining job performance.

Ms. Shinn and Randy Horton, community services coordinator with the Mental Health Center, conduct education sessions with employees and supervisors. She also is responsible for visiting employers contracts and large groups of working people like those who work for Greenville Utilities, the City of Greenville, the Town of Farmville and a number of private businesses are now being served. Anyone wishing more information about the program is invited to call Ms. Shinn at 752-7151 or 752-0118.

LORRAINE SHINN

in the community and enrolling them in the program for the good of the business and the employees.

Under the program, the employee can confidentially ask for services and can have free initial counseling at the Mental Health Center and then can be set up to pay according to his or her ability if additional counseling is needed. The same service is extended to each member of his or her family.

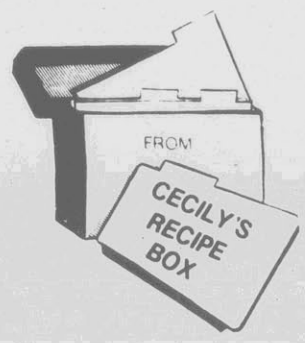

Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the Pitt County Department of Social Services have renewed their

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Interestingly enough, French-Fried Sweet Potatoes have never been well-known. But some cooks who have tried our recipe for making them tell me they have now added it to their permanent collection. They find French-Fried Sweet Potatoes as tempting and succulent as I do.

The trick in making them is to fry pared raw sweet potatoes, cut in ¼ to ½-inch strips, twice in deep oil in order to have them crisp. And crisp they must be.

However, the first frying may be done well in advance. Then, just before serving, the once-fried potato strips are lowered into hot oil again for a minute or two. This way they achieve their excellence.

FRENCH-FRIED SWEET POTATOES

4 medium (1¼ pounds) sweet potatoes
1 quart (about) corn oil

Peel sweet potatoes. Cut lengthwise into strips ¼- to ½-inch thick; as you do so, drop strips into a bowl holding 1 quart very cold water and 1 teaspoon salt. Soak 30 minutes.

Pour corn oil into a heavy 3-quart saucepan, filling no more than 1-3rd full. Heat over medium-high heat to 375 degrees.

Meanwhile, drain sweet potatoes and dry thoroughly with a towel. Add about 1 cup of strips at a time to frying basket; do not overcrowd. Fry until tender but not brown — 1 to 2 minutes. This can be done several hours in advance of serving. Drain on paper towels.

At serving time, reheat oil over medium-high heat to 375 degrees. Place potatoes in frying basket. Fry until golden brown and crisp — 1 to 2 minutes. Drain on paper towels. If desired, sprinkle with salt. Serve at once.

Makes 4 servings.

Former Rock Band Gains Acceptance In New Field

GETTING THEIR SHARE OF ATTENTION . . . Former rock band Exile had some trouble gaining acceptance from country music radio station when they first crossed over into the country field in 1983. The group gets plenty of air play now, however, with three singles in a row going to number one on the country charts. (AP Laserphoto by Mark Humphrey)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Exile, the former rock 'n' roll band, had some trouble gaining acceptance from country music radio stations when the group's first country record was mailed a year ago.

"A lot of radio stations threw it in the trash can because they thought it was a mistake," recalled Exile drummer Steve Goetzman.

The five-member band was best known for its controversial 1978 rock hit, "Kiss You All Over," which has sold nearly 5 million copies worldwide.

So when the band changed musical style in 1983 and released "High Cost of Leaving," described by Goetzman as a "beer-drinking country song," many country radio stations exiled the record to the nearest wastebasket without listening to it.

But not anymore.

The next three singles by the five-piece band made No. 1 on the country charts: "Woke Up in Love," "I Don't Want to Be a Memory" and, most recently, the rousing "Give Me One More Chance."

The group, from the lush horse-breeding area around Lexington, Ky., decided to try country music after follow-up rock records to "Kiss You All Over" fizzled.

So they holed up for 1½ years in a 125-seat bowling alley bar-lounge in Lexington and perfected their country sound while playing for the bowlers.

The band members made $200 a week each, with a raise to $250, for playing before a crowd often more interested in discussing their strikes and spares than listening to music.

But they eventually got the attention of Epic Records executives in Nashville and were signed with hopes of achieving the success of the trend-setting country band Alabama.

"The bowling alley enabled us to get to where we are today," said Sonny Lemaire, Exile vocalist and bass player.

"It was the school of hard knocks: we had to swallow our pride," said Lamaire, who took and delivered pizza orders when not playing at the bowling alley lounge.

The band is still probably best known for "Kiss You All Over," which gave them three European and two South African tours. However, some radio stations refused to play the song because of what some programmers regarded as graphic sexual content.

"It wasn't dirty, just ahead of its time," Goetzman said in an interview.

Band members were making $85 a week in 1978 when the song thrust them to short-lived rock 'n' roll stardom.

"We went from one end to another in six weeks," Goetzman said. "We thought we were home free. Then it all started collapsing."

These days the five still sing "Kiss You All Over," but they devote most of their concerts to country music. They also do a stirring medley of Motown songs: "Stop in the Name of Love," "My Girl," "I Can't Help Myself," "Reach Out" and "Signed, Sealed and Delivered."

Exile has been compared to Alabama, the award-winning, four-piece group — the first band to mark such success in country music.

In a September article about Exile, one newspaper ran the headline: "Look out, Alabama — here comes a little competition."

"Alabama opened doors for us," Goetzman said. "They created group acceptance in country music."

Two songs co-written by Exile member J.P. Pennington, "The Closer You Get" and "Take Me Down," were hits for Alabama before Exile began its country career.

"By doing two Exile songs, they gave us credibility," Goetzman said. "They helped get us where we are.

"The press has compared us all year, and we consider it an honor. We're both self-contained bands and we play and sing (a lot of) our own stuff."

Exile guitarist Les Taylor co-wrote Janie Fricke's country hit "It Ain't Easy," and Exile writers also have penned "Stay with Me" by Dave & Sugar and "Take This Heart" by Kenny Rogers.

The group has released two country albums, "Exile" and "Kentucky Hearts," and is working on a third.

Their success has been especially welcomed by Lemaire, who tried 10 years ago to get in to see executives at Epic Records about a recording contract. He didn't get past the receptionist, but he did have his picture taken outside the building as a memento.

Though thrilled with the success he's had with Epic during the past year, Lamaire still can't quite believe it. "I have to pinch myself occasionally," he said.

Tuesday Premiere Of Local Composer's Work

Sarah Pierce, local composer and music teacher, will have her composition, "The Four Small Things Which are Very Wise," premiered at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 22. The premiere performance will take place in the chapel at N. C. Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount.

Mark Shelton, marimbist, will be performing the work, one he commissioned in 1984. Shelton is the Visiting Artist at Wayne Community College, Goldsboro.

The performance is free and open to the public.

The title of the four-movement piece for marimba is taken from Proverbs 30:24-28. Each movement represents a different animal or insect: the ant, rock badger, locust, and spider.

Other works to be performed on the program will be Gaetano's "Prelude No. 1;" "Etudes for Marimba" by Gordon Stout, "Three Technical Sketches for Marimba" by Margolis; Christopher Deane's "Etude for a Quiet Hall;" and "Three Pieces for Delicate Landscape" by Kunugiyama.

Shelton will be assisted in the performance by Becky Tyndall.

The composer, Mrs. Pierce, received the B.M. in theory and composition from Greensboro College and the M.M. degree in composition from East Carolina University. Shelton is a graduate of Louisiana Tech University and from ECU, where he received the M.M. degree in percussion performance.

Flowers And Fruit Art By The Gordleys At Arlington Gallery

POINSETTIAS . . . A flower study by Marilyn Gordley.

STRAWBERRY SOUFFLE . . . a Trans Gordley food painting.

The weeks of winter may have its quota of gray days, but in Arlington Hall, the art gallery on Arlington Boulevard, all is summer bright inside with a splash of flower and fruit paintings by husband-wife team Tran and Marilyn Gordley.

The two painters, both long-time faculty members at East Carolina University, are now showing a selection of their smaller works at the gallery.

Marilyn's forte for some time has been flower paintings — especially zinnias, of which the Greenville Museum of Art has a fine example in its permanent collection, and more recently and well represented in this show, poinsettia paintings. In a recent statement about her newer work, Marilyn said "the . . . nature of my art may be recognized in the fragmentation and reconstruction of incidental images into new subject-matter." This approach to breaking apart a basic image into fragments, then reassembling into a new entity is evident in the painting of poinsettias (illustrated), and in a different handling in the acrylic painting, "Song of the Sea," with its sweep of sea forms orchestrated above a wash of slow swirling water. This method of treating a basic subject results in a refreshing viewpoint of seeing an object or collection of figurative objects.

Another variant (again of poinsettias) by Marilyn present in this show is a crisp, small pink and blue work, "Poinsettia: Structure I," a pastel-like computer drawing.

Tran's food paintings, on this scale as in larger works, continue to reflect his strong inclination to use full-blown colors to depict luscious arrangements of food — mostly fruits and berries, and in particular, rich red strawberries. Some paintings, such as the one titled "Strawberry Souffle" (illustrated), combined with generous dabs of cake icing and swirled mounds of cream, will either whet one's appetite for food or turn them off with its super-rich image of excessive calories. In another strawberry painting, a small acrylic and pencil work, Tran shows a seated pensive young male nude veiled by (food vapors?) with strawberries encircling him (a prisoner of the strawberry syndrome?).

Two acrylics, "Gelatin Fallout" and "Gelatin Turbulance" are well structured patterns of lush gelatinous surfaces — somewhat in the manner that artists have traditionally painted arrangements of tapestries.

Viewers familiar with typical work by the Gordleys and those new to their work will enjoy this dual show.

Gallery hours at Arlington Hall are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Operation Crossroads

Operation Crossroads Africa, Inc., a non-profit organization focusing on international development and educational exchange, is seeking high school and college age students to participate in community development programs in rural Caribbean and African villages.

The seven-week projects in Africa, sponsored jointly by Crossroads and the governments of the different African countries, involve specialized projects in medicine, nursing, community development, archaeology, architechtural photography, sports, environmental management, farming and agricultural development, veterinary work and tutorial assistance in the up-grading of educational standards.

Each team consists of about 10 Americans joined by an equal number of African specialists and students. Except for health-related projects, there are no occupational or academic requirements for participation.

In the Caribbean, Crossroads sponsors high school age students to assist villagers in rural locations on English, French, Spanish and Dutch-speaking islands. For six weeks, participants work side-by-side with local counterparts in constructing medical clinics, schools and community centers and in establishing day camps for children.

Crossroads, founded 27 years ago, has sent more than 5,200 volunteers to 34 African countries and over 800 high school participants to 18 Caribbean islands and the newly independent Central American country of Belize.

Both volunteer and leader positions are open. Persons interested in applying should contact Crossroads Africa, 150 Fifth Ave., Suite 310, New York, N.Y. 10011, phone (212) 242-8550.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeature

"Butterflies of Botswana" is the theme of the latest set of four stamps issued by that country. Botswana was formerly the British Protectorate of Bechuanaland.

The butterfly set has been declared Botswana's Christmas stamps, but the only indication that it is a Christmas commemorative are the words "Christmas 1984" in small type at the lower left of the stamps.

The 7-thebes stamp features the citrus swallowtail butterfly, the most common of all African swallowtails. It is most often seen during the months of September to April.

The 25-t depicts the common joker, which is seen throughout the year but is more abundant in summer. The joker's coloring turns from creamy brown to deep chocolate with yellow bands in winter.

The 35-t shows the diadem, one of the most common of all African butterflies. The males and females are very dissimilar, since the female changes its colors frequently.

The 50-t illustrates the tabora swallowtail (papilio taboranus). This species of butterfly is rare in Botswana and is usually sighted during and after the rainy season. Its habitat is the Tsodilo Hills of Botswana's northwest region.

Topical collectors who specialize in butterflies (or insects) on stamps will find these new Botswana butterflies not only beautiful in color but also a fine addition.

This is the second consecutive year that Botswana has chosen to issue a set of stamps featuring insects for its Christmas celebration.

The Botswana butterfly stamps, as well as most other stamps discussed in this column, are available at your local dealer.

The "Youth Exhibition Stamps" YES project sponsored by the U.S. Postal Service has extended its deadline for entries to March 1. The YES project offers young collectors an opportunity to exhibit their collections and compete for prizes at the state, regional and national levels. The competition is divided into age and experience levels, thus giving all those who participate an equal chance to win a prize.

Level I includes collectors 11 years old and younger. Level II is for collectors from 11 to 15. Level III is for entrants 15 and older who did not reach their 19th birthday by Oct. 31, 1984.

A total of 1,260 prizes will be awarded, with the top six national winners receiving expense-paid trips to AMERIPEX International Philatelic Exhibition in Chicago next May.

Additional information may be obtained by writing to: YES Project, National Program Manager, Room 5630, U.S. Postal Service, Washington, DC 20260-6355. YES Packets, which include complete gudelines and instructions for young collectors plus a special postage-paid mailing envelope for sending entries will be provided.

In Popular Music, 1984 Was The Michael Jackson Year

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

No question, 1984 was the year of Michael Jackson. Some of his brothers and sisters toured with him and made solo albums but the attention was on the lad who wants never to grow up.

The Jacksons' Victory Tour was the richest in history, grossing more than the Rolling Stones' $30 million in 1981, with $1 million overhead a week. But it wasn't alone in rocking the nation. Prince, the flip side, the seducer, made a big splash with the song and movie, "Purple Rain."

Bruce Springsteen, most idolized keeper of the flame of American rock 'n' roll, painting few rosy pictures, was the toast of every town he played. Spain's Julio Iglesias conquered America.

Elton John toured, saying it was goodbye to the road. Rod Stewart toured, toasting the wild life and saying he's not yet too old to rock. Cat Stevens, now known as Yusuf Islam, went into the studio for the first time in six years, recorded lectures on the Islamic faith.

Julian Lennon, 21, put out an album, "Valotte," and was interviewed a lot about being John Lennon's son. Tina Turner, after trouble finding a record label, had a hit with "Private Dancer," proving she's not over the hill at 45. Paul Kantner, founding member, left the Jefferson Starship, which flew on without him.

Punk is passe and nostalgia is in. The Everly Brothers made their first studio album together in more than a decade, "EB '84." Critics loved it. Country music experienced a traditional-style revival. Heavy metal stays in. Antiwar lyrics proliferated. People peeled off from groups all over the place and "went solo." For instance, Peter Wolf and the J. Geils Band made albums, separately. Videos were everywhere.

The Moody Blues toured all year. Crosby, Stills and Nash toured. Aerosmith's five original members were together for the first time since 1979. Steven Tyler fell off the stage in Springfield, Ill., but the tour went on. Bob Dylan toured in Britain. There was a riot at his concert in Slane, Ireland. John Denver gave three concerts in Russia. Last year's darling, Boy George, got irked at being asked about clothes and makeup and, it was said, the press and Culture Club got irked at him.

Cyndi Lauper, a 1984 Bette Midler, got attention. Frankie Goes to Hollywood captured the British imagination but not the American. A floor gave way during a Frankie concert in Chicago; nobody was injured.

Linda Ronstadt tried opera, "La Boheme," in New York, but had more success with her second album of torch songs, "Lush Life." Barry Manilow also recorded torch songs, "2:00 A.M.-Paradise Cafe." Mel Torme sang a track on a rock record, "Born To Laugh at Tornadoes." Robert Plant, Jimmy Page, Jeff Beck and Nile Rodgers recorded vintage rhythm 'n' blues, "The Honeydrippers, Vol. 1."

Maybe "Saturday Night Live" and "Beverly Hills Cop" isn't enough for Eddie Murphy. He made a single record, "Party All the Time." Rick James wrote and produced. Singer Sting added a film career, acting in "Dune," plus two movies out in '85.

Little Richard wrote his autobiography. So did Mel Tillis.

The Recording Industry of America started multi-platinum LP awards, for two million or more in sales. Of the 106 awards, "Thriller" was the biggest, at 20 million. Five awards went to Van Halen and four to Billy Joel.

At the Grammy Awards in 1984, record of the year was "Beat It" and album of the year "Thriller," two of Michael Jackson's eight Grammys. Song of the year was Sting's "Every Breath You Take." Jazz performance Grammys went to Ella Fitzgerald, Mel Torme, Manhattan Transfer, Wynton Marsalis, the Phil Woods Quartet and Rob McConnell and the Boss Brass.

"La Cage aux Folles," music by Jerry Herman, got the Tony as Broadway's best musical. Oscar for best song went to "Up Where We Belong" by Jack Nitzsche, Buffy Sainte-Marie and Will Jennings from "An Officer and a Gentleman," and for best score to John Williams for "E.T."

The Statler Brothers were named vocal group of the year for the ninth time by the Country Music Association. Anne Murray won album of the year for "A Little Good News." Best vocalists were judged to be Ronnie McEntire and Lee Greenwood. The Ricky Skaggs Band was best instrumental group and the Judds, mother and daughter, best new artists.

Twenty years ago, Willie Nelson borrowed $500 from Faron Young, promising to raise a calf for Young. It became a standing joke. In 1984 Nelson told the punch line, giving Young a registered bull, worth about $50,000.

Pop music and its practitioners were all over the movie screen in 1984. Talking Heads' "Stop Making Sense" stood out among rock concerts films. Rob Reiner wrote "This Is Spinal Tap," a satire on rock groups and rock documentaries. Paul McCartney played a rich rock star in "Give My Regards to Broad Street."

The Kool Jazz Festival in New York was dedicated to the late Count Basie.

Reggae Sunsplash, a festival-party in Montego Bay, celebrated Jamaican music. Fifty bands, some from Japan, West Africa and Britain, played to more than 100,000 people during the week. Milton Nascimento, Brazilian singing star, who has been recording since 1967, appeared in the United States for the first time.

Carole King campaigned for Gary Hart. Peter, Paul and Mary sang for a dozen congressional Democratic candidates.

Janet Jackson, 18, married James DeBarge, 21. Roger Taylor, drummer of Duran Duran, married Giovanna Cantone, former hat check girl, at the Capo di Monte Church overlooking the Bay of Naples. The group's lead guitarist, Andy Taylor, and wife had a baby. Mick Jagger and model Jerry Hall became parents of Elizabeth Scarlett. Sting and actress Trudie Styler had a daughter, Michael. Huey Lewis and wife Sidney had a daughter, Kelly.

Beach Boys guitarist Al Jardine, 39, married marketing executive Mary Ann Helmandollar, 27; at a private home overlooking Phoenix. Frankie Valli, 47, married Randy Clohessy, 24, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York.

Bette Midler, 39, married commodities trader Martin von Haselberg in Las Vegas. Olivia Newton-John, 37, married actor Matt Lattanzi, 26, at their Malibu ranch.

Among people who died in the music world in 1984 were:

Soul singer Marvin Gaye, 44, shot by his father, Los Angeles; rhythm 'n' blues singer Jackie Wilson, 49, who collapsed on stage in 1975, was in a coma and incapacitated, in Mt. Holly, N.J.; Philippe Wynne, 43, former Spinners lead singer, collapsed during performance with heart attack, Oakland, Calif.; Nat Nelson, 52, former lead singer with the Flamingos and the Platters, heart attack, Boston;

Singer-song writer Steve Goodman, 36, "The City of New Orleans," after 15 years of leukemia, Seattle; sitar player-percussionist Collin Walcott, a founding member of Oregon, after a bus crash, East Germany; TV quartet leader Billy Williams, 74, heart attack; New York; blues singer Willie Mae "Big Mama" Thornton, 57, heart attack, Los Angeles;

Ernest Tubb, 70, pioneer of country music's honky tonk sound, emphysema, Nashville; bluegrass banjo player Don Reno, 58, circulatory ailment, Charlottesville, Va.; Nudie Cohn, 81, maker of flashy country outfits, kidney failure, Los Angeles;

Northern Mexicans Closely Allied To The U.S.

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — To the north of them is "Gringolandia," the United States; to the south are the "chilangos," the chili-pepper eaters — their derogatory term for the people who live in the rest of Mexico.

They are the Northern Mexicans, 11 million proud and independent-minded people living in six states spread over an overwhelming emptiness that stretches from the Sierra Madre chains to the dry tableland that spreads out in between to the fishing villages along the Gulf of California in the west and the Gulf of Mexico in the east.

Their homeland was born of the pioneer spirit — as opposed to the Spanish conqueror to the south — and it has produced a breed of its own. Their six states — Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, Chihuahua, Sonora and Baja California — are as different from each other as they as a whole are different from the rest of Mexico.

They are miners and farmers in Coahuila, cattle raisers in Sonora, industrialists and citrus growers in Nuevo Leon, fishermen and tourist-trade workers in Baja California and border merchants and oil shippers in Tamaulipas.

Many of them who cross into Texas, New Mexico, Arizona or California — to visit, to shop or, sometimes surrepticiously, to work — see themselves as going to their own homeland, for the U.S. Southwest was Mexican until the mid-1800s.

And this is how they speak of themselves and outsiders:

—Romeo Flores, education secretary of the northeastern border state of Nuevo Leon: "We have open spaces, not huge populations. The struggle for survival is going to be different here than in the center of Mexico. Here, your personal effort is more important than those old concepts of honor and wealth ... which said you had to be rich and own land to be honorable. The Northerner sees himself as proud, self-sufficient, capable, daring, audacious, and with a special conception of freedom, too."

—Manuel Bejarano, general manager of the Mexicali newspaper Novedades: "The chilango is not well-received here. The people who came here from other parts came with the intention of improving themselves, of surviving the inhospitable conditions. The chilango comes to take advantage of the people."

While national pride runs fierce among Northerners and they identity strongly with Mexico's cultural heritage, an underlying feeling of resentment prevails toward the control the federal government in Mexico City exerts over them and what they view as the easy life their compatriots have in the country's central region.

In the Northerners' view, the bureaucrats in Mexico City make their living off a system that has existed for centuries, while the Northerner moved to a howling wilderness to create new societies by sweat and determination.

Many of those who came to Northern Mexico were part of a migration that came long after those who settled in central Mexico, the Spanish colonial heart.

Northerners, more so than any others in Mexico, have been forced to come to terms with their feelings toward the overpowering influence of the "Other Side," as the United States is often called here.

That need is heightened in the major cities stretching along the 1,760-mile U.S.-Mexico border — Matamoros, Reynosa, Nuevo Laredo, Piedras Negras, Ciudad Juarez, Nogales, Mexicali, Tijuana and even Monterrey, which is about 135 miles south of the border — which face a constant bombardment of the "American way."

"Juarez citizens contemplate the U.S. way of life day by day on televison screens, on the radio and in the press, comparing, of course, those ideal conditions of life with what they have in Mexico," writer and politician Heberto Castillo said in an analysis published in the national magazine Proceso.

And, although border residents move freely back and forth to work, shop or visit relatives, they often are offended by what they see as U.S. attitudes of superiority, as cultural encroachment on their societies and what the "dollar economy" has done to their standard of living.

"People at the border have a very intense and daily interaction with Americans and these interactions tend to force a need for identity," said Jorge Bustamante, director of the Tijuana-based Border Studies Center of Northern Mexico.

Areas along the Mexican side of the border have become virtual camping grounds for people waiting for a chance to cross.

"More Mexicans than you can imagine aspire to stop being so in order to become U.S. citizens," Castillo wrote.

Some cities in Northern Mexico began essentially as way stations between Mexico City and settlements farther north in what later became part of the United States. Monterrey, an industrial center that now is Mexico's third-largest city with 2.5 million people, was one of the way stations.

Northerners interviewed maintain, however, that border residents have overcome the personal and national ambivalence.

"The nationalism at the border is very well defined," said Rodolfo Pataky, director of the Border Cultural Program set up by President Miguel de la Madrid to help all Mexicans develop their cultures. "The Mexican of the border feels more Mexican than any other because he needs to identify with his roots, his land, his culture in order to maintain a point of difference with those on the Other Side."

"We have our own country, our own culture, our own language and our own education," said Javier Contreras in Chihuahua, the capital of Chihuahua state.

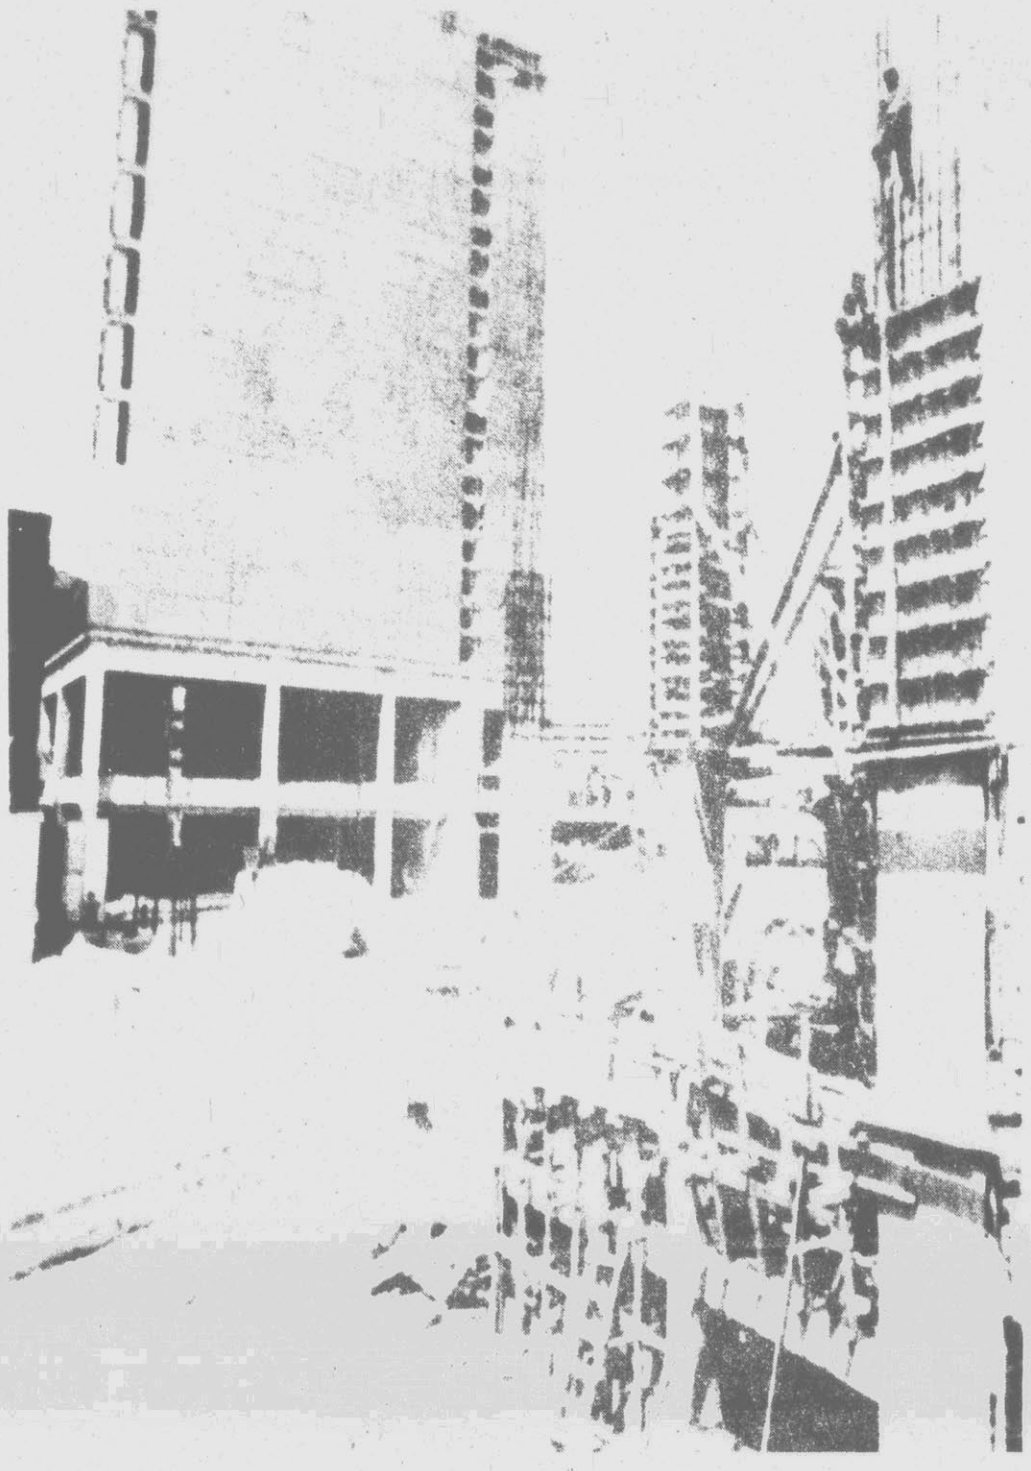

"We see the United States as the most powerful country in the world, as our neighbor and as investment, not influence."

Ingolf Otto, an American economist who has lived in Monterrey, said the U.S. proximity to Mexico has had a "demonstration effect" especially in the North, which has led many Northerners to question their economic conditions.

"All a Mexican has to do is walk across the border and he sees, 'My God, economies can work, buses don't have to be broken down and smelly.' The Mexicans of the North don't understand why they have to be poor and abused and take a lot of stuff from the bureaucrats," he said.

Otto recalled a recent news story of a salesman in Reynosa who walked across the border to Hidalgo, Texas, each day to sell brooms. When business improved the man bought a truck to haul his goods, but ran into red tape with Mexican customs.

"Being an intelligent man, he said 'The hell with it' and he moved to Texas where he is now a wealthy man," Otto said. "So in the North, you don't have to put up with it. There are alternatives."

NORTHERN CAPITAL . . . Modern buildings go up in the downtown area of Monterrey, an industrial and agricultural center in northern Mexico. Monterrey began as one of many northern way stations in the middle of vast, dry tableand, but is now Mexico's third largest city. (AP Laserphoto)

—Facts And Figures—

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Here are some facts and figures on Northern Mexico:

GEOGRAPHY

Mexico's northern states take up more than 316,000 of the country's total 761,600 square miles. Bordered to the east by the Gulf of Mexico, to the west by the Pacific Ocean and to the north by the United States, Northern Mexico's landscape is diverse. Its most outstanding physical features are the two mountain ranges that extend along the coasts from north to south, the Sierra Madre Oriental (East) and the Sierra Madre Occidental (West). Vast tablelands lie in the isolated area in between.

HISTORY

The northern states are young in comparison to the central region of Mexico. Baja California Norte, in fact, didn't become a state until 1952. Spaniards first settled in parts of the North in the 1500s but the main part of the region's history is tied to that of the southwestern United States.

PEOPLE

The population of Mexico's six northern states is about 11 million of the nation's 72 million inhabitants.

The North does not have the large Indian populations found in the central and southern regions of Mexico. Also, because the Europeans who moved north did not mix as much with those Indians who were here, the region does not have the large Mestizo population prevalent elsewhere in the country.

As a result, Northerners in general are lighter complexioned, taller by about two inches and a bit more filled out than those of the central and southern regions.

Highly industrialized Monterrey is the largest city in the North with nearly 2.5 million people in its metropolitan area. Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, is the second largest city in the North with nearly 600,000 residents. Tijuana, just south of San Diego, Calif., has about 500,000 inhabitants, according to the 1980 census.

ECONOMY

Although there are some similarities in the economies of the northern states, each has a distinctive economic profile.

Tamaulipas state lives mostly on border transactions and the oil industry. The economy of Nuevo Leon centers around its capital, Monterrey, where industry prevails. Coahuila is known for its agricultural and mining centers, where silver, lead, copper and iron are produced.

Sonora and Chihuahua states in the northwest are known for cattle ranches and agriculture although tourism is popular in cities like Hermosillo and the border city of Nogales. The Baja California peninsula, with the Pacific Ocean on one side and the Gulf of California on the other, makes its living off fishing, tourism and some agriculture.

The economies of most border cities depend to a great extent on tourism, although an industry in which Mexicans work in American-run assembly plants producing items for export, has created thousands of new jobs in the past two decades.

Tough Political Views

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Mexico (AP) — Northern Mexico's independent spirit is manifested in its political inclinations.

The Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, which has controlled Mexico for more than half a century, faces its stiffest opposition in the six northern states.

It is the North that has given the opposition National Action Party, known as PAN, its strongest support.

The new year started in Piedras Negras with workmen cleaning up the rubble at the municipal complex, burned in a protest of alleged electoral fraud.

The outburst was an indication of increasing impatience in Northern Mexico with the traditional ways of Mexican politics and PRI dominance.

PAN supporters in Piedras Negras, across the border from Eagle Pass, Texas, protested what they called a stolen election by burning the municipal complex in a night of violence that ended with at least one person dead and nearly 80 injured.

The army restored order and patrolled in at least three other cities in the border state of Coahuila, where the PRI claimed victory in 35 of 38 municipal elections in December.

The groups that form the PRI coalition — such as peasant and labor federations — have not been as strong in Northern Mexico as elsewhere in the country.

Encouraged by progress in local elections in 1983 in Chihuahua and Durango states, PAN is convinced it can mount strong challenges for the governors' races in the border states of Nuevo Leon and Sonora this year.

The PRI has controlled the national presidency, the Congress and the governors' offices in all 31 states for more than 50 years.

President Miguel de la Madrid has promised clean elections as part of his campaign of "moral renewal" to rid the government of endemic corruption. But opponents of the PRI charge that the 1983 election results scared the governing party and made electoral manipulation again the government's common standard.

The Invisible Border

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Mexicans who cross into U.S. Southwest feel they are going into their own historical homeland and see little reason not to do so just because it became part of the United States in the 19th century.

"The international border is an artificial line," said Richard Sinkin, a Mexico specialist at the University of Texas at Austin.

"Twenty-five miles either side of that line, with spikes up into San Antonio and Los Angeles and down into Monterrey and Saltillo, constitutes an independent nation which is neither Mexican or North American," Sinkin said in a telephone interview.

Just as the culture of many of the largely Hispanic border towns on the U.S. side includes tortillas and Mexican music, the culture of communities south of the international line includes white bread, videocassette recorders and rock music.

"The border is a unique zone," Sinkin said. "Its economies are linked to each other and individuals have personal and cultural connections. When the border economy as a whole went bad, it didn't go bad just on the Mexican side. In Laredo (Texas) tax revenues fell 45 percent in 1982. That's a clear indication of the linkage."

Sinkin said the open northern border is often a thorn in the side of the Mexican government.

"When Mexico tried to establish exchange controls (two years ago at the peak of the economic crisis), it was the border that defeated the controls," he said. "There's just no way to enforce that kind of sealing off.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — SAID THE ANGRY RABBIT TO HIS MATE: "I'M HOPPING MAD ALL DAY!"

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

THE TALE OF THE TWO OF DIAMONDS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH
	♠ 9 4
	♡ A 8 5 2
	◇ 9 6
	♣ Q J 9 7 3
WEST		EAST
♠ 10 2		♠ Q J 8 7

◇ K 4 3 2		◇ J 10
♣ 10		♣ K 6 5 4
	SOUTH
	♡ Void
	◇ A Q 8 7 5
	♣ A 8 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♣.

The Two of Diamonds was resplendent in his scarlet coat. "It's the award for the best defense at the recent Biarritz tournament," he boasted proudly to anyone who remarked on his attire. As witnesses of the event, we can testify that the coat in all its glory matched the quality of the play.

It was in the final of the team event, and both sides ended in four spades. "I hardly thought I would feature in the play," remarked the Two. "I was part of such a drab collection.

"At both tables the lead was the ten of clubs, and dummy's jack was allowed to win. But the defense soon parted ways. In one room, declarer led a diamond to the queen, and West won the king. It made no difference what West returned. In practice, he chose a heart. Declarer won on the table, discarding a club from hand, and led the nine of diamonds. When the jack appeared, the diamond suit was high, so declarer won the ace and led the ace, king and another spade. The defenders got two trump tricks in addition to the diamond, but that was that. The contract was home.

"In my room I was in the possession of one of the world's great players. Here, too, a diamond was finessed at the second trick, but my expert smoothly played me to the trick! It all looked so easy to declarer.

"He continued with the ace of diamonds and a diamond ruff in dummy, fully expecting East to produce the king. But East over ruffed and returned a club for my owner to ruff. Another diamond ruff by East provided the entry for another club lead, and our ruff was the fourth and setting trick for the defense.

"A curious case. Where the defenders scored a diamond trick, the contract was made. Where they did not, it was defeated."

Patriotic Thief

DALLAS, Ore. (UPI) — Police wonder whether an overly patriotic thief is on the loose — two American flags have been stolen over the past two weeks from outside Dallas manufacturing plants.

"It's weird," a police spokesman said Thursday.

The latest theft occurred Wednesday when a young man was seen cutting the cord that held a flag aloft above the Towmotor Corp. forklift truck manufacturing plant. The thief, described as between 17 and 20 years old, was seen fleeing with the flag and rope.

Jim Hoffman, Towmotor spokesman, said the flag measured approximately 6 by 4 feet and was worth between $75 and $100.

Police said a flag also was stolen earlier this month from outside Praegitzer Industries, an electronic firm. They said they do not know if there is a connection between the two thefts.

Illustrator's Art Begins To Receive Wider Respect

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Illustrations communicate ideas, convey feelings and sell products.

Yet, despite the fact that a single picture is said to be more powerful than a thousand words, they are tossed out casually in last month's magazine, yesterday's newspaper. And the originals of the images are often thrown away by the artists who created them.

That used to be the scenario where illustrations were concerned. But lately, the illustrator's art has been treated with more respect by a growing number of enthusiasts and collectors.

Recently in New York, for example, there were two large illustration exhibitions at the same time. One, at the Society of Illustrators' headquarters, traced the history of American illustration between 1880 and 1980 and featured hundreds of framed originals.

Another, at the Smithsonian Institution's Cooper-Hewitt Museum of Design, revealed the art of contemporary European illustration. After closing in February 1985, this exhibition will tour a number of American cities for two years beginning in May, under sponsorship of SITES, the Smithsonian's traveling exhibition service.

According to Edward Booth-Clibborn, chairman of the Designers & Art Directors Association of London, who selected the 150 examples in the Cooper-Hewitt show, some of the most imaginative and creative art work in Europe appears in the mass media.

Although some of the world's most talented artists have been illustrators, Clibborn says they have not been given the recognition and acclaim they deserve from the public or from art critics.

The annual juried exhibitions he arranges are designed to remedy this omission.

Despite some neglect, illustrators are gaining more recognition in the United States, says Walt Reed, co-author of "The Illustrator in America 1880-1980," recently published by Madison House. Reed finds there has been a dramatic increase of interest in original illustrations as collectible art works. The work of older artists and those now deceased has appreciated most in value. But living illustrators are also finding there is a market for their originals among collectors, he says.

In the 10 years since he began publishing a collector's newsletter, adds Reed, the number of collectors has grown from a handful — mainly illustrators themselves — to encompass collectors among the general public. Auction houses, investors and decorators have also supported the development of the market which periodically booms and languishes.

One test of the viability of a medium as an art form is if museums choose to collect and show it. By this measure, illustrations are becoming more acceptable. Several museums with illustration collections, such as the Corner House Museum in West Stockbridge, Mass., the New Britain (Conn.) Museum of American Art, the Delaware Art Museum in Wilmington, and the Brandywine River Museum in Chadds Ford, Pa., are expanding.

According to Reed, today's interest in illustration merely returns it to the position of importance it formerly occupied. This position was toppled when television usurped the role of magazines, in the mid-'60s and when photography began to dominate as an advertising and illustration technique.

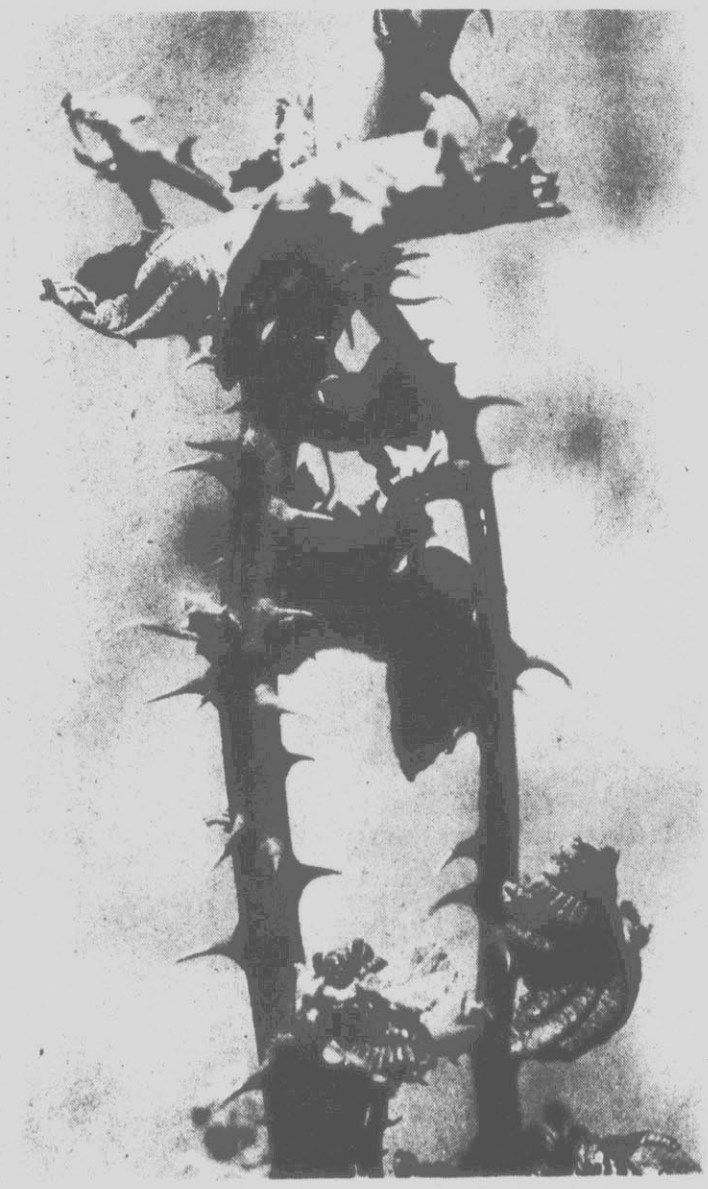

Photography continues to dominate, said Reed, but he feels the development of special interest publications and of a more various public has helped generate a new demand for high quality illustrations.

Reasons for the popularity of illustrations as an item of home decor include their lower price, high decorative value and the appeal of their subject matter.

The older examples are especially appealing because of their nostalgic recreations of the past. Furthermore, the requirements of the illustrator's art for attractive and clear communication of a feeling, idea or situation make this work easier to understand and relate to than some "fine" art is.

Those who shop for illustrations to use as decorative art in the home often find they are relatively inexpensive measured against other types of art. Though prices may go up to $100,000 for the important work of a very well-known illustrator, such as the late Norman Rockwell, several hundred dollars is usually enough to get started.

Besides a handful of galleries, collectors or incipient collectors may find examples of current or past illustrations at auction houses, rare and second-hand book outlets, antique shops and even at garage sales and second-hand shops.

THORNY ARCHWAY — Two stems of a wild briarberry bush have entangled to fomr this small thorny archway, with a few leaves still clinging to the stems in mid-winter. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

A Winter Favorite

Can you guess which one of America's favorite outdoor activities takes place right in your own backyard? If you thought of attracting wild birds you guessed correctly as over 40 million Americans feed and enjoy wild birds every year.

The reason for this popularity and rapid growth is simple, according to the Wild Bird Feeding Institute of Chicago. It's vastly entertaining, highly educational and relatively inexpensive. And a wild bird feeding program may range in scope from windowsills to large backyards. With a tremendous selection of feeders and wild bird food mixes on the market, it's easy to get started, too.

Begin your feeding program anytime; the sooner the better. Start with a well-constructed feeder and a good commercial wild bird mix. Both are readily available in grocery, garden center, hardware, feed and pet outlets. For better viewing, place the feeder a short distance from the house, not far from a bush or tree. Birds like to first fly to "cover" and look around before approaching the feeder.

Feeders come in all sizes and shapes from simple platforms and shelters to fly-through, chimney and glass-enclosed styles. By placing two or more feeders at different heights, you'll avoid friction among playful Blue Jays and shy Cardinals, small Goldfinches and Nuthatches, while allowing a greater variety of colorful birds to feed at one time.

Make sure your feeders are full and accessible and free from snow and debris. Be consistent in your feeding habits. Don't provide an abundant supply of food, then suddenly on the coldest week of the year let the feeders stand empty.

Some wild bird admirers feed only during the winter months. Enthusiasts, however, have learned to attract and enjoy wild birds all year long. Winter is a more critical period in a bird's life; shorter days make finding food more difficult and cold weather depletes their natural food supply. Birds, for example, use nearly 20 percent of their total body weight in near-zero weather just to keep warm.

Winter creates a special demand for a high-energy diet of seeds, grains and suet. As a source of energy, suet is an important part of any winter feeding program. Commercial suet-seed cakes are widely available and most have the advantage of being highly refined and very hard, retarding spoilage.

Unless birds in your neighborhood have access to a fresh, clean water supply nearby, you may want to provide water in the form of a birdbath or garden pool.

Adding Color To Old Films

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Would you like to see the colors of Monument Valley in "Stagecoach"? The blue of the sea in "Captains Courageous"? Bette Davis' red gown in "Jezebel"?

All this and more may be possible with an electronic marvel that converts black-and-white movies and television shows into color on videotape. Film purists, who believe that classics of the screen should not be tampered with, will probably see red. But greenbacks are in the minds of the film companies that are contemplating color conversion.

Why is color so important? Because television stations, especially those in Europe, are reluctant to broadcast black-and-white movies. And buyers and renters of videocassettes prefer color movies by a great margin.

The leader of the infant color conversion business is the Hollywood-based Color Systems Technology, headed by inventor Ralph Weinger and two veterans of film marketing, Buddy Young and Charles Powell.

Their company has already contracted with MGMUA to convert "Camille" (Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor), "Yankee Doodle Dandy" (James Cagney), "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" (Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman) and "Mutiny on the Bounty" (Clark Gable, Charles Laughton).

Ralph Weinger, who began designing electronic equipment in Philadelphia in 1950, experimented with a color conversion process in the mid-1970s. He explains how the system works:

"The black-and-white film is transferred to one-inch videotape. A computer operator picks out key frames from each individual scene and by using an electronic light pencil assigns color values to the actors and objects. Then the computer takes over and colors all the other frames in the scene.

"A minute of the scene can be colored in one hour," Weinger declares. "A 100-minute movie can be completed in a day and a half." The reported cost: $180,000 per movie.

The first job for Weinger's process was the 1978 TV docu-drama "King." Filmways could find no color footage of the 1963 March on Washington to interweave with the dramatized Martin Luther King, Jr., story. Weinger provided four minutes of the March in color.

NBC heard about the process and hired Weinger to color a half-hour of World War II newsreels for "Ike," the biography of Dwight D. Eisenhower. Weinger was encouraged to shift from Philadelphia to Hollywood.

Color Systems is not the only firm in the field. The Toronto-based Colorization has become a unit of Hal Roach Studios, which is converting "Topper" and other Roach films to color.

Young and Powell, both former marketing heads at major studios, are understandably bullish about the system's commercial potential.

"More than 1,500 TV series were created before 1964," says Powell. "Shows like 'Sea Hunt' and 'I Love Lucy' could have a whole new life in color. So could feature movies, especially in Europe, where they rarely show black-and-white films."

"This is not a theatrical business," adds Young. "The kids who go to theaters today don't care about classics. Our market is for more mature people, the ones who buy and rent cassettes. And statistics show that 11 per cent of the cassette market is classic films."

Says Weinger: "It's amazing what happens when color is added. The film seems newer, fresher, more updated. And you can see more than you can in black and white; there is more depth to the picture, you're getting more information. Black and white is not natural."

Maybe not, but many film buffs would shudder at the thought of "Citizen Kane" or "On the Waterfront" in living color. The Color Systems people are sensitive to such opposition and insist they will strive to follow filmmakers' intentions. If a film was made in black and white for mood and effect, it will not be converted.

As evidence, they have hired a new consultant on quality control: Gene Allen, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and longtime art director for George Cukor.

To this reporter, the added color seemed remarkably true, especially the crucial skin tones. While not totally resembling an original color print, the conversion process gives a strong, overall impression of color, adding depth and dimension to a scene.

The level of detail is impressive, with an amazing variety of color seen in clothing patterns, landscapes and the like. But Young concedes there is a limit to the kind of color mix that can be produced. He said football games, for instance, would be next to impossible.

$1.75 Million Gate Graces Elegant Texas Housing Project

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When most people think about building a gate to adorn their driveways, it's usually just two posts and some chunks of wood or strips of iron.

But the entranceway gate for a 140-acre residential development on prime Lake Travis property is so extravagant one would almost expect to hear trumpets when driving through.

Developers of The Vineyard on Lake Travis spent $1.75 million just for their gate. Construction of the pair of exotic doors required almost 20,000 pounds of wood and 40,000 man-hours of carving.

The developers, a trio of Houston businessmen, "wanted from the start to build the most prestigious development in the country," said Tom Gay, a partner in Trophy Properties, the sales agent for the development.

"First impressions are what everybody deals with," he said. "These gates are a magnificent accomplishment. I can't find anything else like them in the U.S."

The two intricately carved doors, constructed in a Dallas warehouse, are each nearly 17 feet high and 18 feet wide. And while they're not quite Pearly Gates, their designer said getting through them would be more difficult than skirting past St. Peter.

Only residents of the exclusive west Austin subdivision will have access to magnetically coded cards that bid the doors slide silently back into 6-foot-thick, 102-foot-long stone walls, said designer Barnes Davis of Dallas.

Beyond them lie 110 lots on the 140 acres, which Davis described as a Mediterranean-like haven about 20 miles outside Austin. Already several homes are under construction in the development.

And if the gate's cost is staggering, consider that lots in this development start at $125,000 and range up to $700,000.

The group hired Davis in 1982, and work began on the mammoth project in March 1983 in a north Dallas warehouse. Davis said he had recruited 13 carvers from all over, including an Italian artist who learned his craft in South Africa.

"People have to have something to attach themselves to," he said. "This is something my children and grandchildren can see — it's creating a heritage that blends art and the developers' interests."

Davis says the bas-relief designs on the doors reflect traditional themes of family unity and strength as depicted in nature.

The doors' scenes are all topped with various bouquets and curtain scrolls that frame the central theme below. All of the scenes are based on nature — including swans, a stag, a beehive and a heron — making them timeless.

When the doors slide open, quatrefoil openings in the stone walls allow the scenes to still be seen.

"There are 2,500 grapes (to emphasize the "Vineyard" theme) that had to be carved individually to give the right depth and perspective," Davis said. "Everything, including the hand-planing of the wood, was done by hand."

Monster Machine Crunches Forests

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer

SKILAK LAKE LOOP, Alaska (AP) — The crack of shattering wood pierces the roar of the 318-horsepower diesel engine. Three wheels, each six feet in diameter with six-inch cutting blades, methodically chew 60-foot trees into 20-inch logs.

It's a rough, meandering ride on an ungainly machine resembling a tricycle being driven backwards. But with 40 tons of steel on the move, nothing stands in the way.

Although the amchines are most commonly referred to as "crushers," they also are laughingly called "frustration release devices" by the men who run them.

The Alaska Department of Fish & Game is using them to try to convert an overgrown forest on the Kenai Peninsula into more productive moose habitat.

The crushers operate in areas where aspen, birch and willow have grown beyond the reach of the moose, leaving them with only tree trunks instead of succulent buds and branches.

Crushing makes room for new growth, which does not have to compete for light and water with taller trees and other vegetation.

The no-frills operator's cab sits over the front wheels. A pusher bar, made of 10-inch pipe, juts ahead 12 feet off the ground to bend or break the trees, and the huge wheels finish the job. The rear wheel is mounted on a massive gear to provide the steering and crush the trees that pass directly under the 16-foot wide machine.

Looking like some sort of prehistoric monster, the crusher is swallowed as it makes a turn into the dense timber. A perpetual storm seems to precede the beast as snow and frost from the trees' upper limbs are jarred loose. The crisp, clear air is filled with the fragrance of freshly cut evergreen.

THE BLOUNT HOUSE — Shown in its renovated condition, right, the Blount House on 10th Street has become headquarters for all East Carolina University public safety activities. The twentieth century home, initially owned and built by a local tobacco family named Glass, was purchased in 1948 by Mrs. F. Leighton Blount who lived there until his death in 1982. Upon acquiring the home in late 1984, the university proceeded to have the interior repaired and reworked to fit office needs and have the exterior torched, scraped and coated with a fresh finish of white paint. The extension off the left side of the building (once the master bedroom) now houses Public Safety Director Joseph M. Calder's office. Located in the lower left portion of the main body of the house (once a living room) is the dispatcher's office and the right lower portion (previously the dining room) has been converted for traffic office purposes. The garage (extension far right) has been closed in and is being used as a maintenance-repairs room. (Reflector Photo by Sue Hinson)

Stately Home Becomes ECU Public Safety Headquarters

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Although East Carolina University has never actively embraced the popular philosophy of buying up old homes and renovating them for university purposes as have Cambridge, Harvard and Iowa University, ECU has, in recent years, acquired and revitalized several older buildings, according to Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs Cliff Moore.

Recent university purchases, Moore said, include the Blount House, located at 609 E. 10th St., and the Howard House, 1001 E. Fifth St. These homes are only two of many structures acquired with state money for ECU in past years, but are, however, part of a small minority of homes that have been restored for use, Moore said.

Since its founding in 1907, ECU (then known as East Carolina Teachers Training School and later as East Carolina Teachers College and East Carolina College) has acquired and replaced many exisiting properties. The most comprehensive acquisition of privately owned homes to allow for university expansion occurred in the 1960s when approximately 65 homes along a now non-existent portion of Eighth Street and sections of Ninth Street were bought and torn down to allow construction of such university facilities as Mendenhall Student Center and the Joyner Library addition, ECU History Professor Mary Jo Bratton said. Dr. Bratton also noted that the university has purchased a great deal of 10th Street property over the years, a observation Moore supported. According to Moore, ECU now owns the majority of property located along the north side of 10th Street between Lawrence Street and the College Hill intersection.

Dr. Bratton, also the ECU Historian, has compiled a book on ECU's history which will be released some time in the near future. Dr. Bratton is also familiar with histories and growth trends of many American universities.

While Moore said university officials favor new construction to house ECU's growing population, he added that homes ECU has renovated for office use do add to the character and history of the university.

The Blount House, built sometime in the late 18th century, was purchased by ECU in late 1984 and has been put to use as headquarters for the university's public safety program. Historical details about the house are sketchy, but according to local attorney Danny A. Harrington, who did the title search required for purchase of the house, the property the home is located on passed through three families before it became university property.

The first recorded owner of the home itself — built sometime after 1938 — was W.G. Glass of Greenville who sold the white columned house to Margaret Little Blount in 1946. Upon Mrs. Blount's death in 1982, the house passed to her husband, Ferrell Leighton Blount. Mr. Blount died later in 1982 and the house then passed to his children, who sold the house to the university in October 1984.

Prior to Blount and Glass ownership, the property the house now stands on was part of the W.L. Anderson Farm. "Upon his death in 1885, or therebouts — the records aren't quite clear — the property went to Anderson's three children, Louis, Alena and Georgia," Harrington explained. Then in 1916, Louis deeded his portion of the property to his two sisters who had married into the Gilbert and Forbes familes. Therefore, the Anderson Farm became known as the Forbes-Gilbert subdivision. The subdivision was sold off parcel by parcel over the years, with the 10th Street lot the Blount House stands on ending up in the hands of W.G. Glass.

The Howard House, vacated by public safety employees in December, was built around 1926, and will be headquarters for the ECU News Bureau once modifications are made to accomodate the information service.

In addition to the Howard and Blount houses, the university has purchased three other old homes, two of which have been pressed into institutional use. Those homes include brick structures located on Ninth Street which are being utilized by the Parks and Recreation (Leisure Systems) Department and by the university's international organization as a dormitory for foreign students. The third home, purchased in the same deal with the Blount House, is also a brick structure and is located next to the Blount House on 10th Street. Moore said the university plans to move some computer center employees to the house once renovations are complete.

The only other "older" home used for institutional purposes, Moore said, is the Taylor-Slaughter House. Donated to the university around 1980, the house is used by General Alumni services.

But if the ECU's Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology realizes its current goal, at least one more old home will be added to the university's roster. According to department chairman, Bob Muzzarelli, SLAP officials are hoping to have an older home, preferably in the downtown Greenville area, donated for use as a clinic. Muzzarelli said SLAP has outgrown its clinical facilities and needs the home to house language stimulation sessions for pre-school children. "We want to get away from the sterile atmosphere of regular clinical settings," he said.

OLD LOCATION — Acquired in 1981 and renovated in the same year, the Howard residence housed ECU public safety until the recent move to 10th Street. The ECU News Bureau will replace securify services at the Howard House after modifications are made to accommodate the information service. Built around 1926, the house features such architectural detail as floor, rail and ceiling molding as well as French doors throughout the interior. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

A GREAT PLACE — Moving public safety personnel from their former central location on Fifth Street may have its disadvantages for campus visitors, but Public Safety Director Joseph Calder (shown center along with Capt. Jay Pennell and Lt. Bill Barnes, l-r) says he's very happy with the new location. Tops on Calder's list of improvements are increased parking facilities and more room in which to rattle around. Although both the Blount and Howard houses have the same number of rooms, Calder said the layout of the Blount House is better suited to office use. (Reflector Photo by Sue Hinson)

WHAT A VIEW — Although winter has left much of the Blount home's back yard brown and tan, ECU Public Safety Director Joseph Calder said he still enjoys looking out these first floor French doors and imagining how beautiful spring will be. The once jungle-like-backyard, Calder said, was cleared out, revealing camellias and other flowering shrubs. Gardeners also added azaleas to the backyard to complete the landscape. Rental Furniture Gains In Popularity

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Some Americans have always been willing to pick up their lives and relocate to another place for better land, a new job, or the novelty of the unknown.

Today, however, instead of traveling in a wagon train with all their belongings or having the things sent in a mover's truck, some individuals are leaving the furniture behind and renting new household effects when they arrive at their destination.

Corporate employees on short-term assignments, college students, and those who maintain seasonal homes are among those helping furniture rental firms [illegible]nd, according to the Furniture Rental Association of America which claims over half a million homes in this country are furnished with rented furniture.

The group recently intitiated a toll-free telephone number to provide information on the location of 450 rental furniture showrooms across the country and is also offering a brochure with the list and general information on renting furniture.

According to Jonah Sherman, a spokesman for the trade group and its past president, there is a new sophistication in the business, reflecting the growth of affluent clients who rent for convenience, not because they can't afford the cost of a houseful of new furniture.

Sherman has been in the rental business since 1961 when he converted his family's retail appliance and furniture store in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., to a rental firm.

Today, he says, it is not uncommon for rental firms to employ interior designers and to solicit business as creative consultants to builders, furnishing model homes and apartments and to provide guidance on interior fittings. Most rental firms maintain showrooms stocked with fashionable furniture and accessories, all available for rental by the month.

Services to corporations are also growing. Sherman, for example, furnished 50 apartments for a corporation with household appliances and linens as well as furnishings. The firm supplies weekly cleaning service, as well. Tenants stay for periods that range from one week to six months and when they leave, Sherman refurbishes the apartment for someone else. The corporation saves about 50 percent of the cost of putting the employees up in a hotel and can offer them a better quality of life in the apartments, he said.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A clear wood preservative that contains no creosote, penta, or arsenic.

Manufacturer's claim — That this preservative is EPA approved for over-the-counter sale ... that it contains a water repellent ... that it is absorbed deep into the wood fibre, providing a tough and invisible barrier against moisture penetration and damaging algae, fungi, black mold mildew and wood rot ... that it is stainable and paintable and acts as a protective undercoat ... that it works for any above-the-ground surface, including shingles, shakes, fences, decks, outdoor furniture and smooth or rough cut siding ... that it is safe for planter boxes ... and that its coverage is 400 to 600 square feet per gallon.

THE PRODUCT — A new jelly for brass and copper.

Manufacturer's claim — That this product is for cleaning and brightening tarnished copper and brass surfaces ... that it is gentle to the hands ... that it is applied like soap, cleanses in seconds and is rinsed away with fresh water ... that buffing with a wet cloth after rinsing will produce a shiny finish ... and that leaving it on a bit longer will make it work on surfaces that are extra heavily tarnished.

THE PRODUCT — A hook and loop system for attaching abrasive discs and polishing bonnets to electric drills and sanders.

Manufactuer's claim — That the system utilizes a hook and loop pad and specially textured fabric backing on the discs and sheets ... that a sheet or disc is simply pressed to the pad for a fast, positive connection ... that contact is provided over the entire surface area, reducing the possibility of creasing or ripping the abrasive while in use ... and that changes of paper can be made easily and quickly by pulling off one piece and putting another in place without any adjustments to clamps and washers.

THE PRODUCT — Steel bars to discourage burglaries through windows.

Manufacturer's claim — That these bars are especially recommended for first-floor and basement windows ... that they are made of solid steel welded to heavy channels and are adjustable by sliding the bars to the window width, then fastening them in place ... that the bars are spaced 6 inches apart ... that, in the event of an emergency, the bars have a built-in quick release in the locking arrangement, permitting easy swing-open clearance for fast exit as well as for easy access window cleaning ... and that the release control box is away from the window and only within reach of those inside the room.

(The wood preservative is manufactured by United Gilsonite Labs, P.O. Box 70, Scranton, PA 18501; the brass-copper cleaner by Loctite Corp., 4450 Cranwood Court, Cleveland, OH 44128; the sanding system by Black & Decker, 701 East Joppa Road, Towson, MD 21204; and the window bars by Sterling Corp., P.O. Box 469, Rochmond, IL 60071.)

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful data in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the Answer

AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I read about using pumice powder and oil to produce an especially fine surface on a regular varnish finish. However, the article did not say what kind of oil to use and exactly how the mixture should be applied. Can you help?

A. — Some years ago, as an experiment, I used the pumice-oil mixture, each time making it with a different kind of oil. Once I made the mixture with paraffin oil, another time with mineral oil, and a third time with linseed oil. After the three tests, it was difficult to tell them apart. How did I apply them? Each with a piece of felt taken from an old hat that had been cleaned before it was cut up. A small section of a varnished table top was sprinkled with a little oil, then with a little pumice powder. Using a bit of the felt, the section was rubbed, lightly and carefully. After rubbing for a few minutes, the area took on a satiny appearance. The procedure was repeated several times until the surface of the table was completed. The varnish lost a little of its shine, but took on a patina that made it worthwhile. Of course, if you haven't finished the wood properly, the pumice-oil rub isn't going to make all imperfections disappear magically, but it takes away most of them. You can buy special rubbing compounds and pads that will help you achieve good results.

Q. — My husband is going to put up wall paneling in a small bedroom. We haven't yet selected the kind of paneling, but before we do that, we can't seem to agree on color. He wants to use knotty pine and I want to use a darker wood. Which do you think will best suit a bedroom 12 feet by 13 feet?

A. — Almost an impossible question to answer without knowing more details. Besides, color is often a matter of personal taste. However, because this is not a large room, a lighter color usually is a better choice.

Q. — I thought you would be interested in knowing how I solved a problem — a small scratch in a coffee table. I touched it up with a bit of brown shoe polish. I put a little on the scratch and then rubbed it in. It completely covered the mark and I actually had to look for it to find it.

A. — Congratulations. But watch out for two possibilities. One is somebody might have the polish or wax rub off on a sleeve or other piece of clothing. The other is that the table top should not be refinished while the polish is still there or it might interfere with the action of the finishing material. Shoe polish sometimes can be used as a temporary disguise in a location where it won't stain clothing.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain remover, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. What are some plants that can be grown as totems? (L.N., Lexington)

A. Grapeleaf ivy, English ivy, hoya, creeping fig, monstera, philodendrons and pothos are some plants that can be grown as totems. For gardeners unfamiliar with them, a totem is a wooden slab, tree fern slab or slab of bark on which vining plants are grown.

Q. Does the Kousa dogwood grow as large as our native flowering dogwood? (K.M., Mecklenburg County)

A. No. Our native flowering dogwood can grow 20 to 30 feet tall and have a spread of 20 to 25 feet across. The Kousa dogwood grows only 10 to 15 feet tall with a spread of eight to 10 feet. The Kousa dogwood is not recommended for the Coastal Plain.

Q. Can aucuba be used as a houseplant? (T.C., Raleigh)

A. The varigated Japanese aucuba is sometimes used as a houseplant. It is also commonly called gold-dust aucuba. The plant will grow in filtered sunlight or intense indirect light to low amounts of light. A window with a northern or eastern exposure is preferable. Allow the soil to become slightly dry between waterings.

Q. How much sunlight should a vegetable garden receive? (W.W., Smithfield)

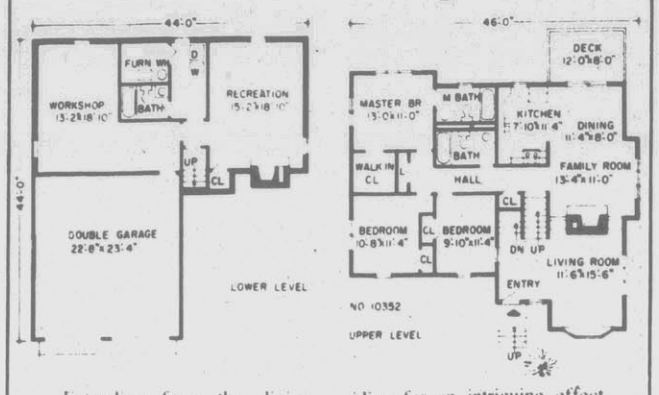

A. All vegetables need some sunlight. The garden site should receive at least six hours of direct sunlight each day. Eight to 10 hours each day is ideal. Therefore, vegetables should be planted away from buildings, trees and shrubs which shade the area. The roots of trees and shrubs will also compete for nutrients and water.

The Glengrove

Deck Edges Multi-Level Contemporary

Extending from the dining area of the Glengrove, a split level contemporary, the deck both enlarges the family dining area and accents the open planning in use throughout the home.

Other highlights of the design include its efficient traffic pattern, large lower level recreation and workshop areas, and the bay-windowed living room, set on a level apart.

The contemporary exterior merges an assortment of roof lines with horizontal and vertical siding for an intriguing effect.

At left of the family living area, three bedrooms are clustered around two full baths. The master bedroom boasts a walk-in closet and private bath, and a linen closet is shown.

The lower level features a recreation room with woodburning fireplace and a workshop large enough for the most ardent hobbyist. In between the two, the floor plan shows a full bath, utility closet, and laundry center.

Elegance You Can See...

Heat Efficiency You Can Feel

Circ-heat can make your fireplace as energy efficient as it is beautiful by converting your fireplace to a forced hot air furnace for that warm fireside feeling.

Select comfortable room temperature with the variable speed blower and cut down wood consumption with the draft control. The tempered safety glass slides out for ease in cleaning and provides a full view of the fire.

Available in a size to fit your fireplace, the unit is also safety approved to UL Standards for use in factory-built fireplaces.

Whether you choose solid brass, nickel, or the black finish to compliment your decor, you will enjoy the elegance and heat efficiency of Circ-heat.

RIVER HILLS

Beautiful, new, affordable homes are the reason. If you've thought rising prices and difficult to understand financing were going to keep you out of an attractive home in an attractive neighborhood, then River Hills deserves a close look.

Still, it takes more than beautiful new homes to make a great neighborhood. Things like a location just two minutes from the city limits, no city taxes, spacious yards, friendly people and a quiet setting your family will love.

Come to River Hills today. Once you see what it's like living in a great neighborhood, you'll never settle for less.

Pamlico Plantation

Ever notice how wildlife picks the best places to live — the quiet places with lots of trees and clear water. We like those places, too, so we made a deal with some of the local inhabitants on a secluded cove of Broad Creek along the Pamlico River. If they'd share their home with us, we'd keep it clean and beautiful and add a few extras for people.

Extra's like a waterfront clubhouse and pool, tennis courts and trails for biking and jogging. We added a security guard and a marina. We built cedar-clad townhomes and sculpted homesites in the woodlands. And still, the ducks swim and deer roam. They approve. You will, too.

Pamlico Plantation near Washington, N.C. — secure, secluded, luxurious.
Homesites from $19,000.
Townhomes from $92,500.

Relics Preserved In Luang Prabang Despite Socialist Pressures

By CHUTHARAT THAWORNKIT
Associated Press Writer

LUANG PRABANG, Laos (AP) — The king's sword, seal and bedchamber are still carefully preserved. But communism has begun to stamp its authority on this 600-year-old, fairy-tale royal capital.

The big drums of Luang Prabang's 54 Buddhist monasteries still sound at 4 p.m. each day, calling the faithful to prayer. But these are followed in monastery courtyards by moderator-led discussions on how to build socialism.

The nation's red flags mingle with the saffron robes of some 350 monks. The Laos-Soviet Association has set up an office next to the old royal palace, a white stucco building that was converted to a museum in 1976.

Only state guests are allowed to enter the palace, which contains an audience hall, private apartments and a collection of gifts to King Savang Vatthana, deposed in 1975 by victorious Communist forces.

Little is said or known of him now. His 77th birthday was last Oct. 13.

Savang was initially named an "adviser" to the new Communist government but then sent for "re-education" in the remote northeast. The government has issued no official word on his fate, but Thonglai Krommasith, a senior Defense Ministry official, said: "It's quite understandable for the health of an old person with an uneasy mind to deteriorate."

But the atmosphere of the royal past lingers in this town of 20,000 inhabitants, nestled among misty hills and girded by the mighty Mekong River. Many once described it as Indochina's Shangri-la.

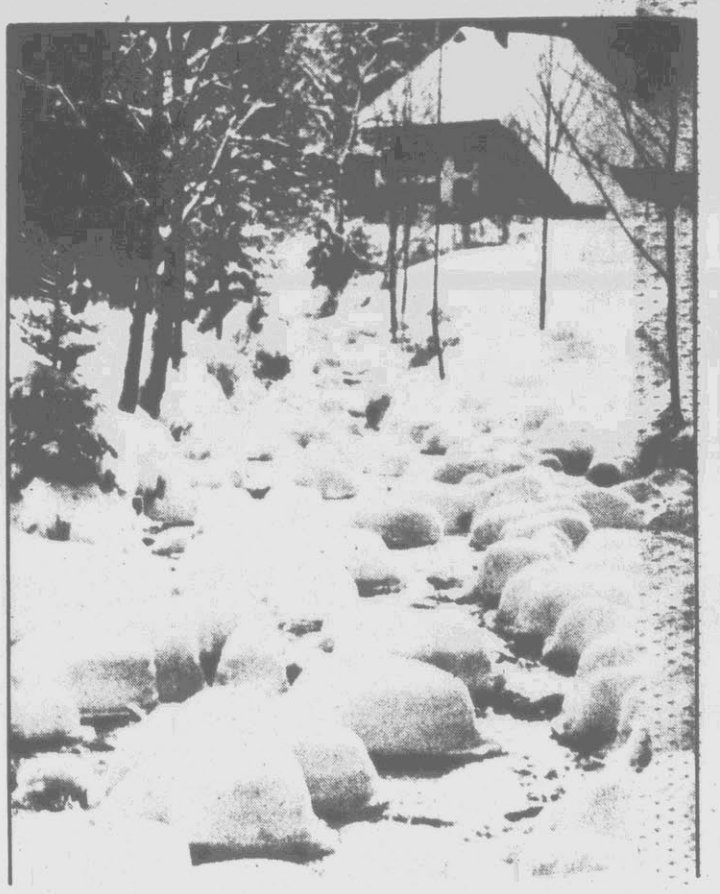

The pastoral quiet is broken only by the town's few vehicles and an occasional political education program over a public loudspeaker from Vientiane, the national capital, 350 miles to the south over a tortuous mountain road.

Life is still family-oriented. Public entertainment is restricted to traditional festivals and the Indian and Soviet movies showing at two movie houses, the "King" and "Queen." The town's two markets offer gossip, bowls of noodles, excellent local coffee and a wide variety of fruits and vegetables brought down from the hills by tribal folk in vividly colored dress.

Singkham Siriwattana, a tourism official who once served at the royal court, said Luang Prabang hoped to attract tourists in the future. But he said facilities now are very limited and local socio-economic development takes first priority.

There has indeed been barely a trickle of foreign visitors since 1975. State guests are put up at the 48-room Mittaphap (Friendship) Hotel while others stay at the Phousi.

Luang Prabang became the royal capital of a united Laos in 1353 and 63 kings ruled from here over the next six centuries. King Savang — the last of the line — was crowned in 1959. Despite the royal tradition, citizens are reluctant to talk of the former monarch in any but the vaguest way.

TRANSFORMATION — Snow and temperatures well below zero have transformed this little valley near Prechtal in West Germany's Black Forest into an idyllic winter landscape with stones in the brook seeming to wear snow hats. A typical Black Forest farmhouse is seen in the rear. (AP Laserphoto by Thomas Meyer)

New Housing, But No Jobs In Israeli City

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

MITZPE RAMON, Israel (AP) — Workers are putting the finishing touches on a new 110-unit block of government-subsidized apartments in this Negev Desert development town.

What should be a cause for celebration, however, is greeted with sour jokes by many of the 4,700 inhabitants. The reason is that there are no takers for the new apartments and the town 122 miles south of Tel Aviv is rapidly losing its young because of the lack of jobs.

"They build and build and build, but nobody comes here to live," said 17-year-old Moshe Azulai, hoeing a flower bed in front of a row of nearly completed bungalows.

He explained that he cannot find a job as a welder and will probably have to leave the town where he grew up.

Since Mitzpe Ramon was founded by a few dozen pioneers in 1956, the government has pumped in more than $30 million to help the town sink roots on the windswept plateau overlooking the moonscape of shrub-studded flatlands and barren hills.

The nearest settlement is Sde Boker, a flourishing communal farm where Israel's first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion, spent his final years. It was Ben-Gurion who urged Israelis to settle the Negev which makes up more than half the nation's land area. The aim was to build self-contained development towns to absorb new immigrants as well as spread out Israel's population more evenly.

Flanked by a portrait of Ben-Gurion, Mayor Shmuel Cohen conceded in an interview that some of the idealism has faded.

"Nowadays, throughout Israel, this pioneering spirit does not exist any more," he said.

But he remains optimistic that Mitzpe Ramon will fill up the 400 apartments that are now vacant, giving the town the silent eeriness of a ghost town.

His hopes are pinned on plans to attract more nature ethusiasts and hikers to the geological and wildlife park in a nearby meteor crater and to find investors to start high-technology industries.

"A situation has been created in which the older population stays and the new population doesn't come," said Mayor Cohen, who also is a banker. "There is a danger that within 10 to 15 years this will lead to the withering of development towns."

Mitzpe Ramon, which got half its 1.7-billion-shekel ($3.2-million) budget from the government this year, built some of its new apartments to attract settlers who were forced to leave the Sinai Desert when it was returned to Egypt in 1982. Some came, but residents recalled most soon left for central Israel or to build new settlements in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

The new four-room apartments, which cost $50,000 each to build, are being offered to buyers for the equivalent of $25,000 or for rent at $25 a month.

Cohen said the nationwide recession has aggravated the drain of skilled workers and halted growth, even though the population has remained relatively stable. His proposed solution is to have the government finance new export-oriented industries and transfer unemployed workers from elsewhere in the country to Mitzpe Ramon.

The town's textile factory and rock quarry have reduced their work force because orders keyed to the domestic market have fallen off during the economic slump.

About $1.1 billion in government spending cuts designed to curb Israel's 800 percent annual inflation rate has also led to a reduction of defense contracts, another key industry in Mitzpe Ramon.

"The state, which was the greatest consumer, is cutting orders and the factories are getting into difficulties and are closing" or cutting back their work force, Cohen said.

Moshieh Samson, a 21-year-old soldier who will soon be out of the army, told a reporter he plans to look for work in Tel Aviv even though he would prefer to stay with his family here.

"It's the government's fault," he said. "I don't know why they are building so many houses when we have no place to work. They should be creating jobs, because if they don't there won't be anyone left in a few years time."

ACC Offers May Tour

WILSON — The Atlantic Christian College Department of English and Modern Languages will offer a travel course to Massachusetts, the Boston and Concord areas, May 11 to May 21.

Dr. Richard Schneider, ACC professor of English, will be the teacher/tour guide for the course. He will provide background lectures, guided tours, and arrange for presentations by guests.

The courses will include study of important works of American literature, history, and art through visits to landmarks such as the Old North Church, Fanueil Hall, the U.S.S. Constitution, and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. The group will also visit Concord, Walden Pond, Concord Battleground, and the homes of writers such as Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, and Louisa May Alcott. Side trips will be made to Salem, Plymouth, Sturbridge Village, and Cambridge.

For complete details, contact Dr. Schneider at 237-3161, extension 216.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful Sunday to think out how you can live your beliefs in a very practical manner and you will be able to build a more secure structure to any department of your existence.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Think over how you can make the future brighter by more progressive methods and do not branch off in different directions.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to best combine past experiences with current undertakings so that you get the greatest success in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Follow your intuition and you know how best to realize your fondest ambitions. Be more willing to meet the right people.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get in touch with bigwigs and state your aims and desires and gain their favors.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early plan next week's work as well as today's labors and then all will flow along smoothly. Show appreciation for co-workers' ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day for seeing persons you like at the right places and gaining benefits thereby. Don't lose your temper with anyone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Home is your best bet today where you can talk over the future with kin. Invite important individuals into your home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Early attend meetings where the highest morals and precepts are taught and have fellowship with congenials.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take time today to study your monetary status and see the best way to improve it. Talk over your ambitions with an expert.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early plan how to improve health, wealth and romantic interests. Know which influential persons it is best to meet with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A fine day for meditating and then gaining the benefits that are rightfully yours, and plan for greater things later.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be with those who can assist you in social circles and gain their cooperation quickly. Join a club that is worthwhile.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can easily make a good impression on bigwigs because of the ability to carry through with whatever has been started conscientiously. One who will be able to take over established businesses and make an even greater success of them. Make sure you send to the right schools.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JAN. 21, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to put your attention into being more up-to-date in your thinking and in your activities and you can make a fresh start to be successful by the use of current inventions and methods.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact those friends who show originality and gain much from them. Make the evening a happy one at home.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Enthusiasm for your work can make it more efficient and you gain greater benefits from it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study into current trends that can help you to achieve a greater success in the future. Become more open-minded.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Find better methods through which you can improve your business affairs, such as computers and the like.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) It would be well to confer with lesser conservative persons which could prove to be both understanding and profitable.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find the mechanisms that can make your work lighter and also save you hours of time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day and evening to get into new kinds of entertainment that may please you very much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Something rather serious may happen at home today, but take it in your stride, since conditions will improve later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day to communicate well with others and get the right results. Make new contacts of worth even if it takes effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study into more up-to-date systems and ideas that are best for improving your property, and holdings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine talents and can put them across admirably to others now. Then later be with persons who are lots of fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you do any studying, let it be of modern ways so that you can get out of that old-fashioned rut.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very capable and go along with the New Era people, and it would be well to convince your unusually bright progeny to study modern inventions, scientific subjects, rocketry, etc. Do not neglect psychology since there will be many an opportunity to specialize in such.

Whistle Missing

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A big blowhard at the University of Kansas, blown away by a big blowout, has been missing since blowing its top, campus officials say.

The campus power plant's domed, 1920s-vintage steam whistle that blows at the end of each class blew off its blowpipe Wednesday, said maintenance director Bob Porter, blaming a blowup of steam.

Workers have been searching for it without success, he said.

School spokeswoman Robin Eversole said it was too soon to say when the whistle will be repaired, but added that the loss was no blow.

A FORLORN FATE — The torso and one leg, gray from exposure, are all that remain of this rather rotund rubber doll, deteriorating all alone on a forest floor. A cruel ending for what likely was once the adored possession of some girl. Most dolls, when no longer cherished, end up stored away in a closet, attic or barn. One wonders why this particular doll was abandoned to the loneliness of a forest cast-off site. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Englishman's Fantasy City Fading Into Mexican Jungle

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

XILITLA, Mexico (AP) — The phantasmagorical city of spiral staircases that lead nowhere and sculpted columns supporting nothing but sky fades daily into the jungle gloom.

Rust attacks the unfinished fountains, and the summer rains wash away the sculptures built over 33 years ago.

It seems a fitting end to the life's work of Edward James, a multimillionaire English surrealist and patron of the arts who dedicated himself to spending his family's fortune with a flourish of absurdist abandon.

One of James' poems, written in pencil on a wall, can barely be made out:

"My house grew like the chamber of Nautillus
After a storm opened up a larger room
My house sings and sometimes
In the dead of night, takes flight."

James died on Dec. 2 at the age of 77. Since last August, when he suffered a heart attack and lost consciousness, the payments he used to send to continue construction here ended.

Then the jungle began its slow, finishing touches on a city that was never meant to be inhabited and was a monument to the random growth and decay of wild nature.

The surrealistic art-park James built on a 100-acre hillside 260 miles north of Mexico City, at the meeting-place of the Sierra Madre mountains and the coastal plains, is slowly turning into ruins.

"We called him our uncle," recalled Plutarcito Gastelum, 23, the administrator of the park. "Life was constant fun with uncle. I never thought he would die."

"There were always a lot of weird people in the house," said Maria Yamasares, a relative of the Gastelum family, who live in the nearby town of Xilitla.

The multimillionaire son of British aristocrats and the grandson of a Canadian timber baron, James first came to Mexico in 1944 at the invitation of psychiatrist Erich Fromm. He joined a salon of intellectuals and artists at Cuernavaca, the resort city just southeast of Mexico City.

There James met Plutarco Gastelum, a Yaqui Indian with as restless and rambling a mind as James', although the two were from different stations in life. Gastelum, who had previously worked as a professional boxer and laborer, was manager of the local telegraph office.

They began a lifetime friendship and partnership.

"Don Eduardo used to send telegraphs from my office," Gastelum said. "He wore cheap clothes and a silver belt and I thought he was a Polish hippie. Then he showed me his Lincoln Mercury."

In 1947, during wanderings through Mexico, James came upon a beautiful waterfall where "thousands of butterflies" flitted about, said Plutarcito, one of the elder Gastelum's four children.

Because under Mexican law foreigners cannot own property outright, James had Gastelum buy the land, called Las Pozas, and work began there in 1951.

The centerpiece at Las Pozas, if there is a center, is a wall-less, roof-less house containing an unfinished, spiraling staircase and surrounded by thin white bamboo-shaped concrete columns.

From the house, a black and green stone-embossed path leads past blue-painted snake statues and strange-looking looping columns.

All are lit up at night by a complicated network of electrical wiring.

At a waterfall above the house, there are dozens of partially-submerged and broken columns and support beams. Many times, James would build the beams in the middle of the stream, knowing that during the rainy season they would be broken or washed away, Plutarcito said.

The overall effect is one of finding the ruins of a bathing house built for the wealthy of some long-extinct civilization.

"Maybe he was playing a joke on history," Plutarcito said.

The architecture is a surrealistic rendering of nature. The structures blend in with and imitate the forms of the lush jungle plant life. The city sprawls unfinished, with no apparent plan, imitating the randomness of jungle growth and decay.

James shuttled between Xilitla and France, Italy, and his 55-room mansion near Sussex, England, which he converted into a surrealist museum and art-restoration center and renamed the Edward James Foundation.

During World War II, he supported surrealist painter Salvador Dali.

Roanoke. The Abandoned Colony. By Karen Ordahl Kupperman. Totowa, New Jersey, Rowman and Allenheld. 1984. 177 pages. paperback, $12.50

"The story of the lost colony at Roanoke is one of lost chances and near misses." The colony had all the basic ingredients for success, but the venture seemed star-crossed . . . and it failed.

Karen Kupperman, assocaite professor of history at the University of Connecticut, has researched her story meticulously. She begins with a vivid account of English history that explains why and how the colonization of North America took place. The reader becomes quite familiar with the personality of Sir Walter Raleigh, whose brilliant mind foresaw the need for a weak and backward England to gain a foothold in the New Land if she hoped to compete with Spain and France as a world power.

The author acquaints us with Queen Elizabeth I and her foreign policies, and with Captain John White, whose inability to lead his men and control his ships resulted in a rescue mission that was too little and too late.

Set against the backdrop of fierce, self-serving struggle for power, the story of Roanoke is a tragic one. From the first the goals for the colony were never clearly defined: was it to be a permanent, family-oriented colony; or was it merely to serve as a base for privateers? Since the Outer Banks had no deep-water port, it could not succeed as a privateer's base; and since it was not sufficiently supported, it could not succeed as a permanent colony.

There were other things that contributed to the failure of Roanoke — it was an English custom to put "gentlemen" in command, whether or not they had experience and competence. England had to depend almost entirely on Spanish navigators whose loyalty was questionable, because England at the time was woefully short in experienced seamen.

It was also unfortunate that the main supply ship sank in a storm off Cape Hatteras, so food and clothing were in short supply to begin with, and the colonists were dependent on the Indians.

The author delves deeply into the lives and customs of the numerous Carolina Indian tribes — the Algonquins, the Croatoans, the Secotans, the Choanokes, the Moratucs. The harsh treatment of the Indians by the first two groups of Englishmen to land on the Carolina coast was also a factor in the failure of the colony. The author sums it up like this:

"The final colony carried the legacy of Lane's military colony and the privateering connection on its back. That inheritance haunted this colony and eventually destroyed it."

Karen Kupperman tells one of the most gripping stories in our history — a story of courage, greed, mistakes, and plain bad luck. In this dramatic tale she explores all of the myths and legends of why and how the colonists disappeared into the American continent and then makes an educated guess as to which is the correct one.

More Tales of the South Carolina Low Country. By Nancy Rhyne. 1984. Winston-Salem, John Blair, Publisher. 120 pages. $5.95.

Nancy Rhyne has collected stories along the coast of three continents as well as the British Isles. While her home is in South Carolina, the haunts she writes about could be found wherever storytellers congregate.

"More Tales of the South Carolina Low Country" is a collecton of 22 stories handed down to Ms. Rhyne for retelling here.

Some of these stories have to do with mind control — "Look! It's Alice, the Ghost" and "A Boy Called Light" — where the characters want something to happen badly enough and it does.

Dr. Buzzard appears in two of these tales. In one he's shot by the sheriff and in another he's found guilty of "rooting" those around him. But neither he nor his manipulating mind can be gotten rid of.

"The Ghost in the Attic" bears a reseumblance to Marley as well as ghosts wandering the British Isles today. This, as well as some others in the collection, could be developed into longer stories, their plots are that interesting.

But not all of these tales are ghoulish. There is wry humor when strichnine-fed poulets prove to be harmless in "The Browned-down Hen" and when a reptile saves a root-doctor's reputation in "The Lizard in the Medicine Chest."

Not to be outdone by the legendary tortoise and hare, "Jack's Pychological Warfare" tells of still another way to win a race.

Ms. Rhyne includes directions to Edingsville Beach, Land's End Road, and All Saints' Church Cemetery — in case you've never seen a ghost. This adds a dimension to the book.

I found the author's style tighter than in her earlier "Tales of the South Carolina Low Country" and would recommend it for those interested in folklore. Otherwise, the book should have more appeal for pre-teens than the average adult reader.

Flood Show On View At Gray Gallery

An exhibition of drawings and wall sculptures by Ed Flood, East Carolina University Visiting Artist for the 1985 spring semester, is currently on view at Gray Art Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center, on the ECU campus.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 24, Flood will present a lecture in Jenkins Auditorium, to be followed by a reception in Gray Gallery. The lecture and reception are both free and open to the public.

A native of Chicago, (born in 1944) Flood is a graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago. He has taught in several American universities and lectured extensively. Flood is perhaps best known for his "Amanita Series" of painted wall sculptures made of resin-covered wood and Masonite which bridge the gap between painting and sculpture. (Amanita is the Latin word for the species of poisonous mushrooms), and seem an apt title for Flood's malevolent constructions that twist out from the wall, casting a thicket of shadows.

The heavily textured black acrylic paint used on the forms heightens their contrast with the wall and emphasizes their surface through which brighter colors break.

The dialogue between two-dimensional and 3-D space continues the sculptural drama in Flood's "Palisade." It relates to sculpture in its carved-out quality, to be viewed from different vantage points. Painterly concerns are visible in layer upon layer of pigment creating a sensual surface of color and density.

Flood's most recent pieces are autonomous works which do not fit into painting or sculpture, but must be seen on their own terms as active presences which possess their implied sphere of movement.

Also on view at this time in Gray Gallery (through Feb. 3) is a joint work by performance artist Joseph Nechvatel and composer-performer Rhys Chatham, titled "XS," an opera/opus dealing with nuclear proliferation.

Hours at Gray Gallery are 10 am. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sundays.

ECU Offers Summer Art Tour

The Continuing Education Division and the School of Art, East Carolina University, is offering a summer trip to the British Isle with optional college credit.

The 16-day tour, July 10-26, is open to any interested person age 16 and over, and to teenagers 12-15 when accompanied by an adult. The price of the trip is $1895, which includes round-trip air fare from New York, all transportation and tours within the British Isles, hotel rooms, all breakfasts and some dinners, a complimentary flight bag, and admission to some special sightseeing locations, as well as tourguides.

The tour is being handled through Passages, Inc., a San Francisco agency, and in Greenville is being coordinated by Mindy Machanic, assistant professor of enrivonrmental Design at ECU.

Optional undergraduate or graduate-level college credit will be offered through the ECU Department of Continuing Education, with coordination by Worth Worthington.

Fees for registration and tuition for those who want credit are separate from trip fees, and cost $155 for undergraduate credit or $185 for graduate credit.

Efforts will be made to find roomates for those traveling alone who do not wish to pay a single supplement of $160 for a private room.

"The trip will be leisurely, and an interesting way to see the British Isles," Ms. Machanic says. "We will be driving through the countryside rather than flying over it, and we'll have lots of time for both sightseeing and shopping. Because the group will be contained on one bus, there shouldn't be the problem of overcrowding that there is on some tours."

Worthington commented that "for those who need a few extra units toward their degree, or professionals such as teachers who need continuing education credits, the trip is a wonderful opportunity."

For detailed information on activities and places planned for visitation during the tour, contact Ms. Machanic at 757-6563 and Worthington at 757-6143.

Spaces for the tour are limited, so that those who plan to make the trip are advised to make arrangements early.

Guide To Gem Finds In North Carolina Mines

From Christopher Columbus to Sir Walter Raleigh's voyages, one of the main purposes of the exploration of the New World in the 15th and 16th centuries was to find riches.

The first English colonists happened upon the best find in America when they settled on the coast of North Carolina 400 years ago. But it took hundreds of years to realize that not only were there stores of gold in the western part of what would become North Carolina, but silver, emeralds, rubies, sapphires and diamonds.

North Carolina remains today the only state in America which has the four most precious gems: diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds. Nicknamed "nature's samplecase," the state has stores of over 400 precious and semi-precious stones.

It was also the location in 1799 of the discovery of the first gold nugget in America. The nuggett, which weighed 17 pounds, was found by 12-year-old Conrad Reed on his father's land. It was used as a doorstop by the family until its value was discovered. The realization that there was gold in the North Carolina foothills prompted America's first gold rush.

Additional gold discoveries were made in nearby areas as a result of the gold rush. Finds in the South Mountains district of Burke and McDowell counties were prompted in 1828 when a traveler, Sam Martin, spent the night in a shoemaker's home and noticed the next day that the mud used to fill the spaces between the logs of the house was flecked with gold.

The first gold coins made in America were minted by Christian Bechtler in Rutherford County from 1831 to 1847.

Gold mining flourished in North Carolina until 1849 when gold was discovered in California. That prompted the exodus of many of North Carolina's most experienced miners, and the closing of many of the state's mines. The Civil War closed the rest. Following the Civil War, gold mining in the state has been conducted only sporadically.

From 1803 through 1828, North Carolina was the only recorded producer of gold in the United States. At one point there were 250 gold mines in Charlotte alone. In 1972, the site of the nation's original gold mine — the Reed Mine — was purchased by the state of North Carolina and is now preserved as a state historic site. There are currently 52 gold mines in the state, some of which are open to the public so that private individuals can pan for gold. Every year there are people who find gold or gemstones in these mines.

In the hunt for gold in North Carolina, early miners found several other riches. The first silver lode in America was found at the Silver Hill Mine in 1838.

Some of the early panners found diamonds in their search for gold. Altogether 13 authentic diamonds have been found along streambeds in the state, but the main source of these diamonds has yet to be discovered. It is possible that many other uncut diamonds have been found and discarded by those who did not recognize what they had.

Early gold diggers labored under the misunderstanding that diamonds were so strong, nothing could break them. A diamond, however, can be shattered if it is placed on an anvil and struck with a hammer.

A 1886 handbook relates the following: "A very beautiful diamond of considerable size, like a small chincapin, and of black color had been found at the same locality by three persons while washing for gold. In their ignorance, believing that it could not be broken, they smashed it to pieces. Dr. Andrews tested the hardness of a fragment, which scratched corundum with facility, proving it to be a diamond."

Rubies and sapphires began being mined in North Carolina in the 1870s but by far the most valuable finds have been of the official state gemstone — the emerald.

The first emerald was found in 1875 near Stony Point in Alexander County. Emeralds are still found today in this early mine. The largest single emerald crystal found in North America was found at the Rist Mine at Hiddenite in 1969. The crystal weighs 1438 carats. The Carolina Emerald, a 13.14 carat emerald cut gem was found at the Rist Mine also. Cut by a North Carolinian, the Carolina Emerald is now the property of Tiffany and Company, New York.

Semiprecious gems can also be found in the state's mountains and foothills.

Following is a list of mines which are open to the public:

Emerald Valley Mine, Hiddenite.
Tweedy Garnet Mine, N.C. Highway 18, Morganton.
Bonanza Mine (ruby, sapphire), Box 625, Franklin, N.C. 28734.

Matamuskeet Bird Count

SWAN QUARTER — The annual Audubon Christmas bird count at the Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in coastal Hyde County was conducted on Sunday, Dec. 30.

A total of 133 species and 129,522 indiviual birds were counted. Highlights from the count include: 26,625 tundra swans, three bald eagles, six black-bellied plovers, and a peregrine falcon.

The count area has a seven and one-half mile radius centered near Lake Mattamuskeet, with the birds counted only within the designated area.

This year's 15 participants in the counting of the birds came from Swan Quarter, Greenville, Raleigh, and from Maryland, Arkansas, Utah and New York.

Persons who would like to take part in the Christmas 1985 bird count are to contact Allen Bryan at 584-4613.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The movie "Better Off Dead," being directed by Steve "Savage" Holland, does not star Charles Bronson or Chuck Norris or Clint Eastwood.

The fact is it's a youth-oriented comedy that Holland wrote, partly based on his breakup with his high school sweetheart. Holland, 25, this week's wunderkind, is making the movie for CBS Productions.

"I hate to refer to this as a youth comedy, (though) it obviously is," said Holland. "I want it to be a little more mature — my age group."

Sculptor Sijan Finds Niche

BY LAURA A. SALSINI
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — To sculptor Marc Sijan, the human form is the "most overused subject matter" in the art world.

But this much-used subject matter has provided the 38-year-old former high school art teacher with the artistic niche for which he has searched.

Using a technique called hydrocal to create his sensuous lite-like figures, Sijan has taken his creations from the relative obscurity of a Milwaukee studio to the walls of a glittering, luxurious club in New York City. In addition, a prestigious Chicago gallery has asked him to show his work there next fall.

"With art you have to try and find a niche, a cove, somewhere that's totally unique — something that hasn't been done before," he said during an interview in his studio.

The walls are adorned with his graceful sculptures, some resting on sculpted pillows, others holding mirrors aloft. One sinuous creation wears dark sunglasses; another is shaded by her floppy hat.

Sijan calls his art "realist sculpture," which he says means interpreting the human form in a natural, believable way.

"I portend to freeze motion rather than suggest life," he said. "The sculpture appears passive, but this is so much going on inside."

STONEFACED MODEL . . . Milwaukee sculptor Marc Sijan, whose work has been featured in a New York nightclub, cuts finishing touches in his latest work. (AP Laserphoto)

His life-sized wall relief works are primarily portions of the female figure, usually the upper chest and head. He originally glazed his figures but now uses soft, neutral tones to bring more realism to his work.

Sijan uses a process called "raku," in which each piece is hand-molded from clay and then fired to a temperature of about 1,900 degrees Fahrenheit. The piece must then be pulled from the kiln and plunged into a "reduction" atmosphere to reduce the amount of carbon and oxygen.

Sijan acts as his own salesman, and spends about two months on the road each year traveling to different markets across the country.

But learning to represent himself hasn't been easy.

"I've had to be an artist, and I've had to represent my work," he said. "I've had to learn how to market it and how to sell it."

And breaking into the art world also proved difficult.

"A totally personal statement doesn't mean it's an object that's saleable," he admitted wryly.

"It's a tough nut to crack for an artist in Milwaukee," Sijan added. "The market in Chicago is far more receptive to what I'm doing."

In 1977, Sijan felt confident enough to quit his job teaching art to high school students and devote himself entirely to his own work.

He is now successful — and fortunate — enough to pick and choose his own projects, he said.

"I try to do projects that are meaningful," he said. "Ultimately, an artist wants to create something that has a major magnitude."

Sijan said his technique and imagery are similar to the works of George Segal, John D'Andrea and Duane Hanson.

The New York club called Visage recently commissioned Sijan to do 25 life-sized sculptures of woman bathers. They appear throughout the club, adding an almost Art Nouveau touch to the glittering elegance of the discotheque. And the Byer Museum of Arts in Chicago has asked him to do a showing of his work next fall.

As a child, Sijan felt no particular leaning toward art. But interest was sparked in college where he experimented with other art forms while attending the University of Wisconsin in Whitewater, where he received his bachelor's degree, and at the University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, where he received a master's degree in 1971.

But while he tried his hand at painting, he admits that he can "hardly draw a stickpin."

He wanted a medium that was three-dimensional, and found it with his wall relief sculptures, which he calls "fat paintings."

"I wanted depth to it," he said. "Paintings, no matter what the subject matter, are flat."

But finding a medium he can work with doesn't mean he always approves of the finished product.

Work is often frustrating, he said, because he is so particular about his pieces.

"It could be the slightest thing that could be wrong, but it throws off the entire piece," he said. "It's a mood that they have."

Forest Plan May Affect Wildlife

EDGEFIELD, S.C. — The U.S. Forest Service's 50-year plan to manage the Sumter National Forest in South Carolina will have a serious impact on wild turkey populations, according to a report by Dr. James Earl Kennamer, director of research and management for the National Wild Turkey Federation.

"If this plan is any indication of what the other plans throughout the nation include, we can expect declines in the multiple-use concept of the public's national forests and an increased emphasis on wood and fiber production," said Kennamer.

The proposed plan requires careful study to understand its full implications, but it will increase the 0-10 year classes of timber stands from the present 29,701 acres to 66,071 acres. The 45-50 year age class, currently covering 55,860 acres, will be reduced to 33,939 acres, and correspondingly, the 51-60 year class will be reduced from 82,007 to just over 10,800 acres.

The loss of important mast-producing shrubs and trees normally occurring in these older stands, coupled with the apparent loss of the mixed pine-hardwood type as a management unit, will create a food problem for wild turkey and other mast-dependent wildlife species.

The plan additionally calls for a reduction in the rotation age of pine stands from 60 years to less than 50 for most stands, with some 159,609 acres to be shortened closer to 40 years. The plan for hardwood stands projects a similar goal, with a reduction from 100 years to 80-year rotation.

Kennamer explained that "initially, these reductions seem minor, but you must keep in mind this will mean almost 20 years of productive mast yields on thousands of acres will be lost as the stand starts over in young trees."

The plan calls for one management area encompassing over 170,000 acres of the 359,412-acre forst to be "managed intensively for production of timber products. Intensive silvicultural practices will be utilized to increase timber production to a high level of yields, while providing for at least the minimum management requirements for other resources."

Throughout the plan, reference is made to maintaining viable populations of wildlife, which, by the Forest Service definition, means "sufficient numbers to maintain its existence over time . . . " This is a far different approach from managing wildlife populations of suitable huntable numbers," explained Kennamer.

Kennamer urges the public, who own the national forests, to respond by voicing their concerns over the proposal before the plan becomes law. Interested persons are to write to: Don Eng, Forest Supervisor, Sumter National Forest, 1835 Assembly Street, P. O. Box 2227, Columbia, S.C., 29202.

The period for public comment on the proposed plan for Sumter National Forest closes Feb. 15.

Has money replaced sex as the great taboo of our time? In "Money Talk: The Last Taboo," Carole Phillips, a financial consultant, contends that the subject of money remains locked up in a dark and stuffy little room marked "do not enter." It remains difficult for men and women encouraged to "communicate" and "get in touch with their feelings" to talk about money with those closest to them. She maintains that many people feel no need to consult or share information about money matters with their families.

"Money Talk" is about the way people in close relationships deal with money — husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters, couples who live together. Carole shows that there is more to money management than making a household budget, getting the highest interest rate, or the lowest interest loan. She presents the human side of money management, the one we all face across the kitchen table and in the bedroom every day of our lives. She sees money as an emotionally loaded subject and a source of tension and dissension in far too many relationships. "Money Talk" can help overcome the emotionalism and ignorance that prevent most of us from coping constructively with family financial matters. The practical and valuable counsel it provides will enable you to handle your money and make informed decisions about how best to plan for its use with some foresight and confidence.

Mary Kay Ash demonstrates the business philosophy that brings out the best that people have to give and puts it to work for you and your company in "Mary Kay on People Management." Mary Kay Cosmetics, one of the most remarkable success stories in American business today, owes its success to the "golden rule management" philosophy, based on the age-old golden rule, "do onto others as you would have them do unto you." Ever since Mary Kay Cosmetics opened its doors, everyone at every level, in every position has been treated with the same fairness and consideration. Confident that the true assets of her company were its people, Mary Kay made happiness, needs, desires and feelings her top priority. She passed her management philosophy on to others, teaching them to handle people with the same care and concern they would want for themselves.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, completing her role as columnist Louella Parsons in CBS' "Malice in Wonderland," has been signed as the flamboyant madam of a New Orleans bordello for the ABC miniseries "North and South."

Miss Taylor joins such stars as Robert Mitchum and Lesley-Anne Down in the 10-hour David L. Wolper production. She will play Madam Conti.

The series, based on John Jakes' best-selling novel, covers a period from 1842 until the seizing of Fort Sumter in 1861. It will be filmed in Southern California, South Carolina, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Los Angeles Piano Quartet To Perform January 28

THE LOS ANGELES PIANO QUARTET . . . will perform in Greenville at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 28 in Hendrix Theater. The concert is part of the ECU Chamber Festival. Tickets are priced at $4 and are available at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. The performers, left to right, are James Bonn, Clayton Haslop, Ronald Copes and Peter Rejto.

The Los Angeles Piano Quartet will be in concert in Hendrix Theater on the East Carolina University campus at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 28. The concert is being presented by the ECU School of Music and Department of University Unions as part of their Chamber Festival.

Tickets are priced at $4 and can be purchased from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m., or by calling 757-6611. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Members of the quartet are pianist James Bonn, violinist Clayton Haslop, violist Ronald Copes, and cellist Peter Rejto.

Bonn has performed with numerous orchestras under conductors such as Dorati, Fiedler and Davies. He is a professor of music at the University of Southern California. Haslop is currently on the faculty of Pomona College and made his debut with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra.

Violist Copes, also a violinist, has been heard with Music from Marlboro and has recorded for Columbia Records. He serves on the faculty of the University of California at Santa Barbara and at the Music Academy of the West. Cellist Rejto, winner of the International Young Concert Artists Award, has been in recital at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Y in New York City, as well as performing with the Dallas and St. Louis orchestras. He is an associate professor at California State University, Northridge.

The group has received critical acclaim for their performances of piano quartet literature. The Listener, magazine of BBC television, England, notes the quartet "gave a performance that positively danced with joy."

Founded in 1977 with the encouragment of Neville Marriner, the quartet made its debut at the Music Center in Los Angeles. Since then, they have been heard in more than 35 U.S. cities, and in March 1984 had their official New York debut in Tully Hall, Lincoln Center.

Some Good Promise Films For 1985

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now comes the season that movie lovers love: the first quarter of the year, when a wide variety of unheralded films can be seen in the nation's theaters.

It's like a nutritious health-food diet after the gluttony of holiday feasts. Film companies traditionally release their modest attractions during the first three months of the year, when cold weather limits attendance and young patrons are in school.

Of course many of the films are throwaways that looked good on paper but not on the screen. But discriminating filmgoers can also find occasional gems that revive their faith in cinema. Here are some of the more promising:

"The Falcon and the Snowman," with Timothy Hutton and Sean Penn in the roles of the real-life young spies.

"Turk 182," with Hutton on the right side of the law, as a crusader against civic corruption.

"Baby," the third release by Touchstone, Disney's mature label, about a young couple who discover a young dinosaur in Africa.

"Witness," Harrison Ford in a drama about a murder witness who hides out in an Amish community.

"Purple Rose of Cairo," Mia Farrow and Jeff Daniels in a Woody Allen film in which he does not appear.

"That's Dancing," Jack Haley Jr. covers film dance in the manner of "That's Entertainment."

"The Mean Season," Kurt Russell and Mariel Hemingway in a thriller about a reporter tracking a serial killer.

"The Slugger's Wife," Neil Simon's script about a baseball player (Michael O'Keefe) at the beginning of the season.

"Rustler's Rhapsody," a western spoof with Tom Beringer as hero and Andy Griffith as the gay villain.

"Movers and Shakers" (tentative title), chicanery in a movie studio written and produced by Charles Grodin and starring Walter Matthau, Grodin and Vincent Gardenia.

"Ladyhawke," a supernatural adventure with Matthew Broderick as a medieval youth trying to break a curse.

"Fast Forward," Sidney Poitier directing 10 newcomers in a New York dance contest.

"The Aviator," Christopher Reeve flying again, this time with the aid of vintage aircraft.

As with movies of all seasons, the accent will be on youth. Among those with youthful appeal:

—"Fandango," five college kids on a spree before facing the Vietnam War.

—"Vision Quest," Matthew Modine as a Spokane 18-year-old seeking his place in the sun as a wrestler.

—"Desperately Seeking Susan," comedy-fantasy with Rosanna Arquette and rock star Madonna.

—"Mischief," Doug McKeon ("On Golden Pond") and three newcomers in a 1950s coming-of-age comedy.

—"Breakfast Club," dramatic comedy with Molly Ringwald and Judd Nelson.

—"Sylvester," Melissa Gilbert and Richard Farnsworth in a heartwarmer about a girl and her horse.

Hospitality House Broadcast Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Education, dog grooming and forthcoming museum events are topics to be covered by guests on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" today. The weekly magazine this week will air from 5 to 5:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington.

Today's first guest, Dr. Don Corlette, director Learning Resources Center and Telecourse Coordinator, Beaufort Community College, gives details on credits for 12 to 16 week courses offered on PBS television. The second guest is Barbara Walker of The Village Groomer in Greenville, who discusses dog grooming.

The final guest on the show is Albert Potts, director of the Onslow County Museum in Richlands, with details on a two-day show, Jan. 26 and 27 at the National Guard Armory in Jacksonville. Potts will also discuss the annual quilting show and a kite show and festival due in April.

Tales Of Hoffman To Air January 26

WASHINGTON, N. C. — Offenbach's colorful opera, "Les Contes d'Hoffmann" will be aired beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 26 over two area radio stations — WITN radio, Washington, 930 on the radio dial, and WTEB radio, New Bern, 89.5 on the dial.

Julius Rudel conducts the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. Cast members are Catherine Malfitano, Ariel Bybee, Alfredo Kraus, James Morris, Andrea Velis, Anthony Laciura and John Macurdy.

The Saturday afternoon broadcasts of opera productions live from the Met stage are now in their 45th year of sponsorship by the Texaco Company.

New York Hopes To Lure More Film And Video Producers

PLAYS WWII COMEDIAN — Emmy winner Tony Randall stars as Putzi, the anti-Nazi comedian who mocks the Third Reich to his own peril, in "Hitler's S.S.," a drama about two German brothers at opposite ends of the Fuehrer's elite corps during World War II. The show will be telecast Sunday, Feb. 3 on NBC-TV. (AP Laserphoto)

By DIANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

COHOES, N.Y. (AP) — A group of 19th century, three-story brick row houses in this once-booming factory city in upstate New York hopes to break into films. Their "agent" is the state of New York.

The Governor's Office of Motion Picture and Television Development has many such "clients," ranging from New York City skyscrapers to a castle in the Thousand Islands.

If the office brings filmmakers and video producers to New York's sites, jobs and revenue will follow. It is estimated to be a $2 billion industry in New York state and that figure could reach $6 billion by 1990 if growth continues at the present rate.

But the competition is tough. .

Close to 100 state and local film commissions dot the country, all vying to get their locations in front of the lens and their production people behind the scenes, says Jaynne Keyes, a deputy commissioner who heads the office within the state Commerce Department.

"There have been times when we've been told we've been up against 15 other states," she says. Trips to California are already a part of the program to sell New York to producers.

One of the department's successes was "The Natural." That movie, starring Robert Redford, was filmed in Buffalo in 1983.

Scenes from the Burt Reynolds and Goldie Hawn film, "Best Friends," and the opening of the television series, "Buffalo Bill," were also shot in the western New York city.

Other parts of the state also have been under the bright lights, including the Troy Music Hall for "The Bostonians" in 1983. Schenectady's Union College provided the setting in "The Way We Were" in the early 1970s.

Westchester County is the backdrop in the recently released "Falling In Love," starring Meryl Street and Robert DeNiro. New Rochelle was the scene of the ABC television movie, "Mom's On Strike."

And though located in the East, the small Adirondack community of North Hudson was chosen by Brazilian Television for the production "Far West." Foreign producers are target for the future, Ms. Keyes said.

"I'd really like to get over to the Cannes Film Festival," she says, to develop contacts among foreign filmmakers.

Among the productions shot in late 1984 in New York was "Compromising Positions," filmed by Paramount for eight weeks in Nassau and Suffolk County. The Onondaga County Jail was picked as the site for 18 days of shooting for "Slammer Girls," produced by Chuck Vincent and the Playboy Channel.

"There is definitely a trend toward location shooting," Ms. Keyes says. "With new technologies and more mobility, people want realism."

In 1983, New York City provided the backdrop for 66 feature films and 54 television movies and specials. In upstate New York and Long Island, seven feature films and five television movies and specials were shot.

A typical feature film shot on location in New York spends at least $49,800 per day on wages and salaries and $38,200 on goods and services, according to state figures.

A made-for-television movie similarly spends an average $38,000 on wages, and $24,400 on goods and services.

"All areas in New York City are more marketable because of per diem and lodging...certainly Westchester and Long Island (are also marketable)," Ms. Keyes says.

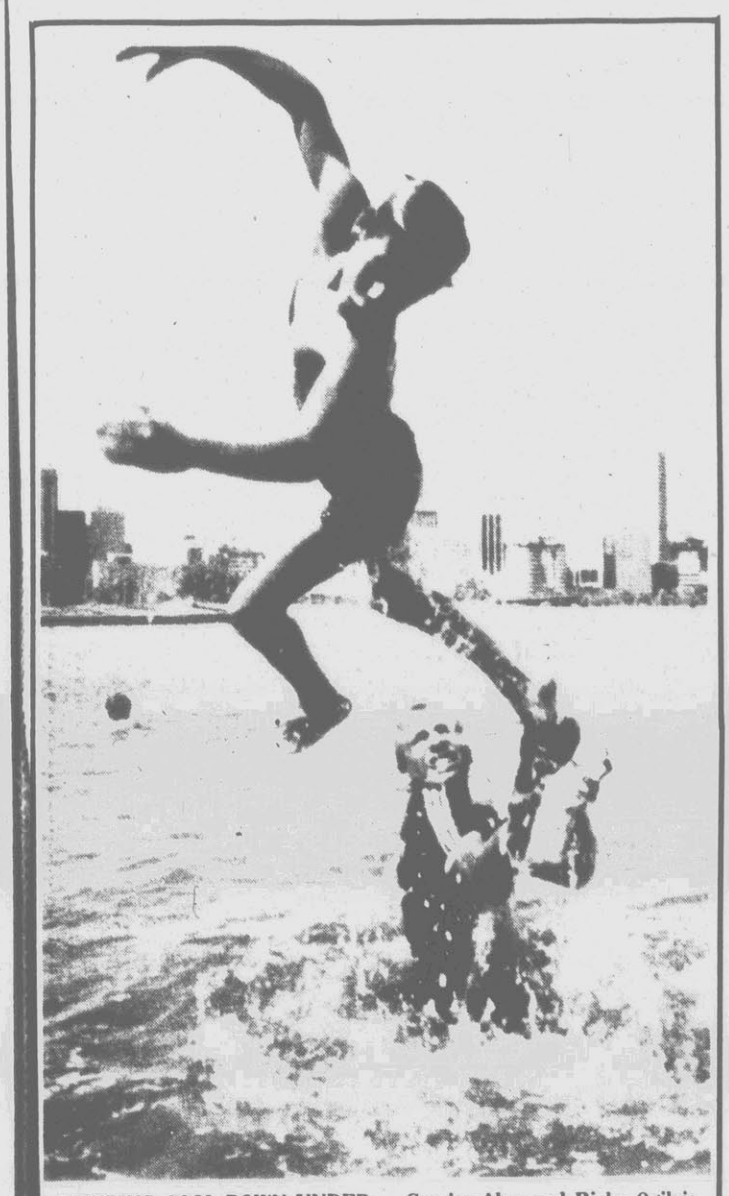

But in five years of existence, the office has done more than just promote locations.

"There are three things we can do for producers: save time, save money and solve their problems," she says.

That includes marketing the state's locations, talent and production facilities. It also involves securing locations and finding hotels to accomodate crews, as well as arranging for permits and licenses.

The office, backed by Gov. Mario Cuomo and a 66-member Motion Picture Advisory Board, also boasts of New York's seasons, services and tax incentives and a cooperative relationship with unions.

Feature film and television location shooting in 1983 increased 400 percent over 1982 outside of New York City to 409 days. In dollars, that meant $27 million for Long Island and upstate New York. Expenditures in New York City reached $883 million.

Unperturbed By Costs

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — More than a decade ago, young art student David Lynch spent $200 to make a one-minute film, and it almost kept him out of moviemaking forever.

"I thought this would be the last film I'd ever do. It was just too expensive," said Lynch, who directed the $40 million "Dune." It opened earlier this month to negative reviews: Critics called it a disaster.

The Montana-born Lynch appeared before the film's opening earlier this month at London's National Film Theater to discuss a career marked by a notable increase in budgets: from the experimental films of his art student days and the cult favorite, "Eraserhead," to the critically-acclaimed "The Elephant Man," to "Dune."

But the soft-spoken, wavy-haired Lynch seemed unperturbed by the escalating costs of his projects.

"'Dune' really did take that much time and that much money to do," said Lynch, who has spent 3½ years adapting Frank Herbert's 1965 science-fiction classic for the screen.

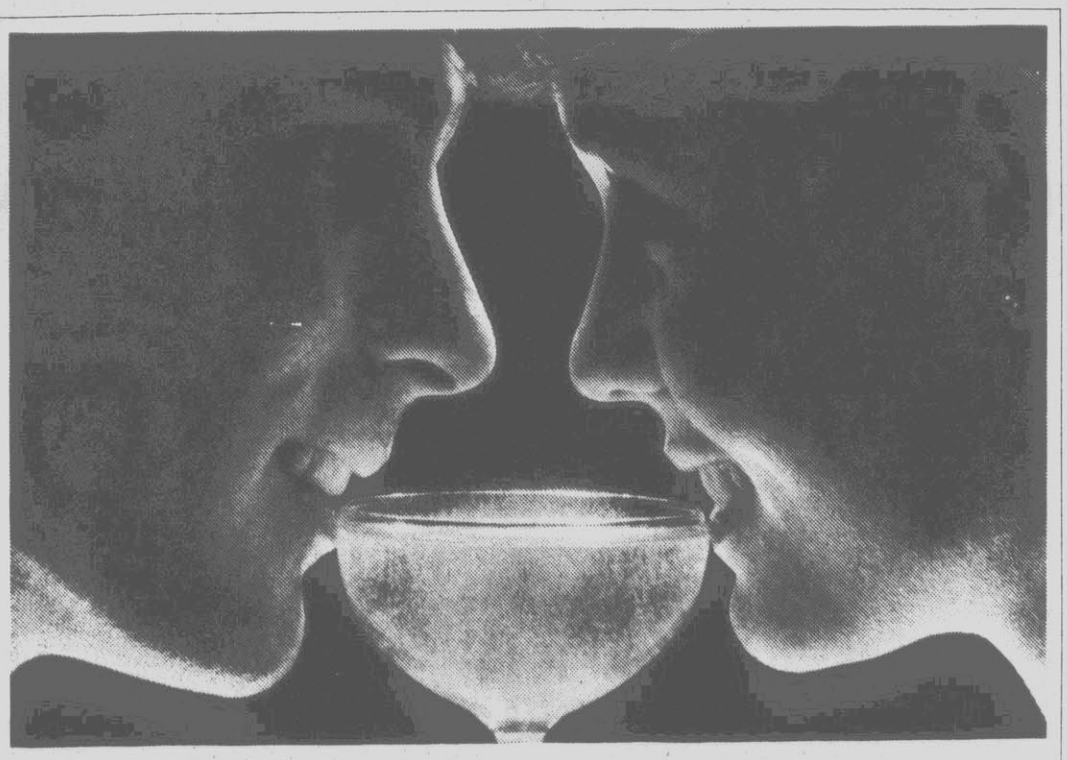

Set in the year 10,991 on four different planets, "Dune" reportedly required 70 sets and 20,000 extras to tell its epic tale of savior Paul Atreides's defeat of the evil Harkonnens.

Max Von Sydow, Linda Hunt, Sting and newcomer Kyle MacLachlan head the cast — along with the giant, man-eating sandworms designed by "E.T." creator Carlo Rambaldi at a cost of $2 million.

S'ana Is Little Changed From Its Early 7th Century Days

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is one of a series of periodic dispatches by AP correspondents on life and customs in the byways of the world.

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

SAN'A, North Yemen (AP) — Here you can find a dagger shop or a sword dealer in a marketplace that dates back to the 7th century and has changed little since.

Or you can follow along behind camel caravans and donkey-drawn carts, not much different from the time of the Queen of Sheba who reigned in this area in the 10th century B.C.

San'a has retained its ancient ways over the centuries — it is said to have been first built by Noah's son Shem — but it is moving perforce into the modern age — although not too far into it.

"You run astray if you ignore your past," said a farmer. "We like to relive the '1,001 Nights,' emulate our forefathers and promote their undying styles and creed."

Nowadays the camel caravans clip-clop over asphalt roads past new high-rise buildings, but still wind up in ancient, winding alleys with their cargoes of tin trinkets, alfalfa, and khat — the national narcotic that Yemenis chew for a daily lift.

And the people look much as they did in ancient times. Men in turbans and beards, wearing skirts with a dagger at the waist, drive automobiles as well as donkey carts. Women remain heavily veiled and secluded, in accordance with Islamic tradition, but in recent years they have taken to chewing khat.

Virtually every adult chews khat, also known as qat, for about three hours a day, and spends a sizable sum to do so. The government recognizes it as a serious problem.

Shortly before noon every day, Yemenis crowd the old souk, the marketplace where they also sell pearl-studded daggers and ornately crafted swords, to haggle over prices of various brands of khat, displayed now in polyethylene bags. The leaves are Yemen's biggest business, with prices ranging from the equivalent of $20 for the top quality down to $4 for the low quality. It's a $1 billion-a-year business for those who cultivate and sell it.

In keeping with its move into the modern age while preserving its past, San'a recently opened its ancient gates to play host to its first international conference ever, a meeting of the foreign ministers of the world's 45 Islamic nations.

Once the prestigious capital of Arabia Felix (Happy Arabia), San'a has a versatile history of affluence and poverty, victories and defeats, a long record of absolute monarchies, and the recent birth of a republic that has sought to bring it cautiously into the modern age.

Over the centuries, the city has retained its arabesque buildings and sand-color domes. But now there are also high-rise office buildings nudging the houses of dried mud that sheltered the populace for centuries.

The souk is a living embodiment of the past. It retains a rare type of decorative architecture dating back to pagan and early Islamic eras, as well as its traditional dagger shops, coffee and spice vendors, and sword dealers.

Almost all houses have similar facades, a repetitious harmony of dark-and-faint yellow stones, arched glass windows and zigzags of white plaster decorations. The lower floors are of stone and the upper floors of clay bricks.

The government of President Ali Abdullah Saleh has asked the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to draw up a plan for the city's old sector that will allow for the new but preserve the past.

UNESCO's secretary-general, Amadou Mahatar M'Bow of Senegal, visited in December and issued an appeal for international funds to restore 19 mosques, 17 public bath-houses, 17 historic buildings and 29 old schools.

M'Bow said the preservation plan also will introduce electricity, telephone service, water systems and drainage networks to the ancient sector of the city.

UNESCO also will seek ways to ease traffic congestion without widening streets and demolishing old structures.

But khat, a mild amphetamine, is a more ticklish problem.

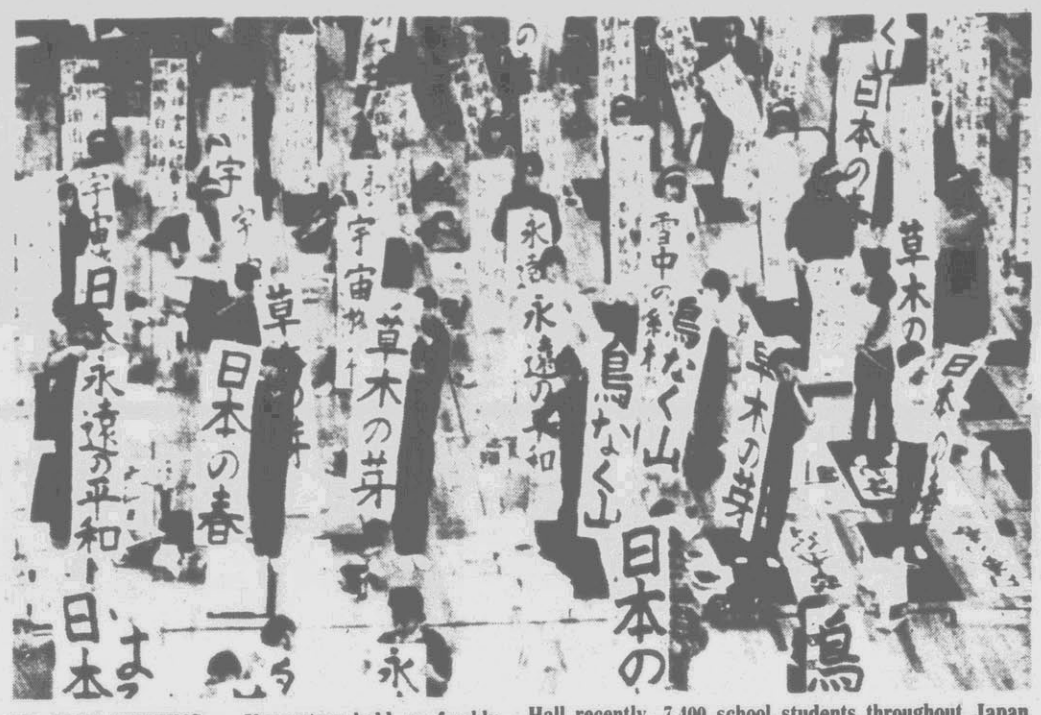

Khat chewing is a time-honored social habit. Well-to-do men and women have separate khat-chewing parties to listen in semieuphoria to ballads and lyrics. It is a daily ritual even for government officials, traffic policemen, peasants and paupers.

President Saleh said khat is a problem that requires a "prudent" remedy, a judicious mixture of persuasion and distraction.

"Khat chewing is a social phenomenon among our people," he said in an interview. "We believe we can displace this by broadening the scope of businesses, spreading sports and social and cultural clubs throughout the country. This would limit the negative acuteness of this phenomenon."

Coffee, Yemen's traditional cash crop, has been suffering because of the popularity of khat. Farmers complain they have to grow more khat and fewer vegetables because people tend to chew more khat and eat less food.

But doctors say they are worried because they suspect khat causes intestinal cancer.

32 Countries Entering Films

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Films from 32 countries have been entered in the Best Foreign Language Film category for the 57th annual Oscar Awards on Monday, March 25.

It's the largest number of entries submitted since the award was established in 1956. Each country submits only one film. There were 26 entries last year. Thailand submitted its first entry this year.

All of the films will be screened and the Foreign Language Film Award Committee will vote to nominate five achievements.

The movies may also qualify for other Academy Awards, except Best Picture of the Year or Best Documentary Feature. Over the years, such winners as "A Man and a Woman" won the Oscar for best original screenplay, "Fanny and Alexander" for best costume design, best cinematography and best art direction.

Even films that were not nominated as Best Foreign Language Film have won awards. "La Dolce Vita" won for best costume design and Sophia Loren of "Two Women" won as best actress.

CBS's 'Wicked Ways' Offers Flynn-Flam

By Bob D. Matteo

Errol Flynn was the Hollywood star as irresistible rake — his off-screen exploits adding to his appeal as the dashing leading man of such movies as "Captain Blood," "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Objective, Burma." Flynn seemed remarkably free of hypocrisy, too. His highly readable best-selling autobiography, "My Wicked, Wicked Ways," is anything but your typical "authorized" whitewash of a star's peccadilloes. A standard sentence reads: "I enter a whorehouse with the same interest as I do the British Museum or the Metropolitan — in the same spirit of curiosity." By the time he died at 50 in 1959, this adventurer-provocateur had survived, however barely, a stint in the Spanish Civil War, battles with studio head Harry Warner and a sensational statutory rape trial.

One expects "My Wicked, Wicked Ways... The Legend of Errol Flynn," (CBS, Jan. 21), the three-hour adaptation of the star's autobiography to dish up some choice dirt, while providing a colorful, behind-the-scenes portrait of the decadent, free-wheeling Hollywood of the 1930s and '40s. Primarily, this moderately diverting movie tends to offer just the sort of whitewash that Flynn himself tried to avoid. Very little of what we see could pass for "wickedness" — the sexual innuendoes and cavorting are of the banal sort that "Dynasty" traffics in. It all seems innocuous — even the side trip to the Mexican whorehouse. There's no suggestion of Flynn's rumored bisexuality, or of any other sexual kinks.

Canadian-born Duncan Regehr plays Flynn with a colorless suavity that is characteristic of the movie as a whole. Regehr is an Omar Sharif type — with Sharif's limitations as an actor, too. What's missing from his performance — and from this comic-strip bio in general — is any sense of the complex, reckless man behind the myth. Surely, the real Flynn had more lascivious fun than Regehr is allowed to have on network TV. This Flynn is a greatly simplified figure — a Hollywood sheik who ends up a victim of the American public's desire for outlaw heroes that it can revere and then excoriate.

Lee Purcell and Duncan Regehr star as movie greats Olivia de Havilland and Errol Flynn in "My Wicked, Wicked Ways...The Legend of Errol Flynn." The film, based on Flynn's autobiography, airs Monday, Jan. 21 on CBS.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Did Bruce Lee die from a drug overdose? Can you give me a short summary of his life? — JASON ZIER, EDISON, N.J.

Born in San Francisco in 1941, Bruce Lee was a philosophy student at Washington University. A series of supporting roles in the TV shows "Green Hornet," "Batman" and "Longstreet" preceded a string of martial-arts films that made Lee a Kung Fu cult hero. His sudden, mysterious death at 32 has led to much speculation. It is rumored that he was murdered by members of the Iron Fist for exposing too many of their ancient secrets on film. Others believe Lee may have been poisoned by envious colleagues. Officially, Bruce Lee died of a cerebral hemorrhage. Both the prescription drug Equagesic, which he had taken for a headache, and marijuana were found in his system.

Dear Michele: I've read that Emilio Estevez, who starred in the movie "Repo Man," is the son of actor Martin Sheen. Can you tell me why they have different last names? — IDA SAYLOR, TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.

Martin Sheen, 44, was born Ramon Estevez in Dayton, Ohio. The seventh of 10 children, he changed his name because casting directors couldn't pronounce it. He looked Irish, so Bishop Sheen came to mind, Martin went with it, and Martin Sheen was born. Sheen has four children: Emilio Estevez, Ramon Sheen, Carlos "Charlie" Sheen (also an actor, and a look-alike for his famous father) and daughter Renee Sheen.

Dear Michele: Was, or is, Maureen O'Hara married to Andy Devine? — DIANE CALLAHAN, SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Miss O'Hara, the fiery redhead best known for her feature-film work during the '40s and '50s, has never been married to Andy Devine. She was married to director Will Price ("Tripoli"), and she was also married to the noted Brig. Gen. Charles Blair, the first man to fly solo over the Arctic Ocean and North Pole.

Dear Michele: Why haven't I seen any Robert Shaw movies lately? — RUTH DRYE, ZEBULON, N.C.

The actor, novelist and playwright died in 1978 of a heart attack at 51. His last film was "Force 10 From Navarone" (1978).

CBC Special Explodes Myths About Arthritis

By Jay Carman

According to the CBC's John Zaritsky, "all kinds of interesting doors open up to you" if you are talented and lucky enough to win an Academy Award. The Toronto-based producer should know — he won a coveted Oscar for his sensational 1981 documentary, "Just Another Missing Kid."

In the time that has since elapsed, Zaritsky has been kept extremely busy by a variey of subjects that are worthy of the kind of TV treatment he can give them. But the one that interests him most at the moment — arthritis — was under his nose all along, since his wife, Virginia Storring, is herself a victim.

"I was shocked that someone as young as Ginni could have arthritis," he says. "But then she told me the research she had done since her condition was diagnosed, and I found out that it's not only the most common disease in Canada and in many other countries, but that it hits people at all ages."

It wasn't long after Zaritsky and Miss Storring began talking about arthritis that they decided to do something about it. They co-produced the remarkable CBC documentary, "I'll Get There Somehow," which airs Sunday, Jan. 20.

Often labeled as "simply the aches and pains of old age," arthritis is instead a serious disease for some 3.5 million Canadians of all ages. In an effort to explode this myth as well as other myths about arthritis, Zaritsky and Miss Storring decided to focus on four relatively young women who are courageously getting on with their lives despite their crippling diseases.

Says Zaritsky: "We took a lot of time to build up relationships and trust with these women. They had to know that we wouldn't sensationalize their story."

Indeed, each of the women's lives is dramatic enough as it is. Gail Green is a North Bay, Ont., teenager whose condition was misdiagnosed for so long that, by the time she finally got proper help, she was, to quote her doctor, "walking around with her joints on fire."

Betty Wheeler, who lives in Kingston, Ont., lived with osteoarthritis for 30 years before her illness was diagnosed and has since had to endure many operations. Yet she retains her strength and humor.

Carolyn Thompson, also from Kingston, has against all odds and despite acutely affected limbs, pursued a career.

Honey Agar, from Toronto, has a particularly vicious form of arthritis called lupus, which has caused her years of agony and nearly killed her four times. Despite nearly constant pain she has becomean out spoken crusader on behalf of her fellow sufferers.

TV Chatter

Through the power of television, you will be there at Stanford Stadium in Palo Alto, Calif., on Sunday, Jan. 20, when ABC presents America's No. 1 sporting event — Super Bowl XIX. Television will also take you to Washington, D.C., on Monday, Jan. 21, to the inauguration of President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush. All three commercial networks are providing extensive coverage of this historic occasion.

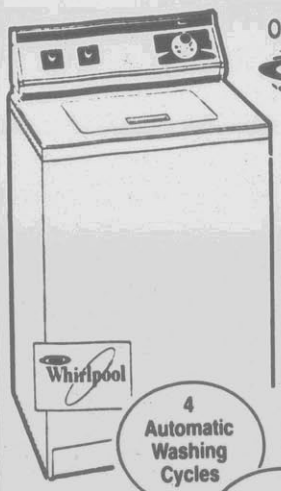

Less newsworthy events on TV this week include a dramatization of "My Wicked, Wicked Ways ... The Legend of Errol Flynn," airing Jan. 21 on CBS. The story is based on Errol Flynn's autobiographical book of the same title. Duncan Regehr, Barbara Hershey, Darren McGavin, Lee Purcell, Hal Linden and George Coe head a cast of 40. On Jan. 22, CBS televises the "Miss Teen USA Pageant" from Miami with Lorenzo Lamas and Lisa Hartman as hosts. Cherise Haugen, current reigning queen, will crown her successor and award the prizes of more than $100,000.

Looking forward to a prosperous New Year are Billy Dee Williams of "Dynasty" and Richard Thomas's 3-year-old triplets. Williams has signed a $200,000 contract as spokesman for Jovan Musk cosmetics. For the next three years, Thomas's triplets will be featured on TV and in print enjoying their Minute Maid orange juice while earning a cool $1 million per year. Lynda Carter shouldn't be shedding any tears over her canceled series, "Partners in Crime," either. She recently signed a million-dollar contract with Maybelline to continue as its spokeswoman for the next two years.

While filming the ABC suspense-thriller "Kicks" in San Francisco's deserted Alcatraz prison, Anthony Geary and Shelley Hack were greeted by 65-mph winds and torrential rain. Upon returning to the comforts of a Beverly Hills mansion for further scenes, they were faced with an unusual and unruly co-star — a 6-foot African python. The snake appears in a key sequence in the drama.

February will be Shirley MacLaine Month on Showtime. Her critically acclaimed Broadway special debuts, along with the exclusive television premiere of "Terms of Endearment." Exclusive interviews with Miss MacLaine will also be featured during the month.

THURSDAY

It's a tall order to fill, but Joan Van Ark fills it. The actress stars as Val — who thinks she's Verna because of temporary memory loss — on the series "Knots Landing." Catch the show on Thursday, Jan. 24 on CBS.

Big TV Names Don't Guarantee Hit Series

By Andrew J. Edelstein

When it comes to creating a successful TV series, one thing is clear: Big names don't necessarily mean big hits. Many TV stars making comebacks from other series have not fared all that well this TV season.

The most obvious success has been Bill Cosby, the former star of "I Spy" and the first "Bill Cosby Show." His Thursday night sitcom has been in the top 10 all season and has hastened the revivalof NBC in the ratings.

Two other big names, Michael Landon and Anthony Franciosa, have achieved a moderate degree of success this season in their comeback series, both of which are treacly creations with lots of hugs, kisses and tears. But both series are far from being the runaway smash that "The Cosby Show" is. Landon ("Bonanza," "Little House on the Prairie") returned playing an angel on "Highway to Heaven," the NBC series that has ranked in the top 30. Meanwhile Franciosa ("The Name of the Game") has found a modest niche as Cary Maxwell, the title character of "Finder of Lost Loves."

But other well-known TV names haven't fared as well. Both Tony Danza, the former "Taxi" star, now starring in "Who's the Boss?" and Scott Baio, formerly Chachi of "Happy Days," now of "Charles in Charge," have seen their shows rank in the bottom third of the Nielsens all season.

Four canceled shows featured stars from some of the most popular series of the 1970s. Lindsay Wagner, the one-time Bionic Woman, couldn't cut it as a police psychologist in "Jessie."

Soap Scrapbook Is Accurate, Challenging

By Connie Passalacqua

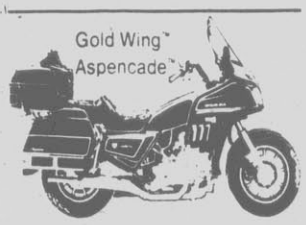

Do you know me?

"I became the wife of a nagging intern; had a one-night stand with my husband's brother-in-law, which produced a son; ruined my second marriage because of greed and lust towards my child's father; and disapproved so vehemently of my daughter-in-law that I hired the girl's sleazy ex-flame to shatter my son's marriage."

This is not an American Express commercial. "I" am Rachel Cory, the former villainess of "Another World," and the above list of misdeeds is part of a mix-and-match quiz called "Hell Hath No Fury..." in the new trade paperback, "The Soap Opera Digest Scrapbook" (Contemporary Books, $6.95). The book is a potpourri of quizzes, crossword puzzles, detailed family trees and trivia tidbits on every soap opera currently on the air (except for the new "Santa Barbara").

Most books about soap operas are marred by serious misinformation and blunders made by authors who are far from being masters of the soap opera subculture. This paperback is free of such errors; it's written by John Kelly Genovese.

How Super Will The Game Really Be?

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

This Sunday, Super Bowl XIX will take place at Stanford Stadium in Palo Alto, Calif., and on your TV screens on ABC. If it turns out to be a great game, it will become one of only five to have this distinction. If it turns out boring, uninspiring and humdrum, it will be business as usual on Super-saturated Super Bowl Sunday.

The first great Super Bowl belonged to Broadway Joe Namath and his band of rebels from New York. In Super Bowl III (1969), the Jets, 17-and-one-half-point underdogs before the game, defeated the Baltimore Colts, 16-7, and changed the balance of pro football.

After the Jets, it was the Snooze Bowl until 1975 when Pittsburgh and Dallas went at it for the first time. The Steelers won by four (21-17), the game was marred by fumbles and errors, but it was the most exciting Super Bowl since Namath spent his afternoon handing off to Matt Snell.

Pittsburgh and Dallas did it again in 1978. This time, both Terry Bradshaw and Roger Staubach put the points on the board, the plays were long and wild. John Stallworth and Lynn Swann showed America's team what they were all about, and the Steelers had another title, 35-31.

Things calmed down, the Steeler dynasty ended, and a new crop of exciting teams were developing into Super Bowl contenders. The best and most explosive of the lot met in Super Bowl XVI (1981) when the San Francisco 49ers went up against the Cincinnati Bengals. The Niners had a fresh face at quarterback, Joe Montana. The Bengals had an old pro, Ken Anderson. Together, those two combined for the most offensive and exciting Super Bowl ever. The final score — 49ers 26, Bengals 21 — reflected only the slightest fraction of just how much fun this game was for TV viewers and stadium spectators to watch.

Aside from these four Super Bowls, that lack of fun has been obvious in all the other Super-hyped games that failed to deliver a punch worthy of all that hype. Last year we were told about the volatile Washington Redskins. What we saw told a different story. We saw the Los Angeles Raiders win, 38-9, in a walk — a long, tedious and boring walk. This year, if we want greatness, if we crave excitement, if we want points on the board and action on the field, the odds tend to be in our favor. Viewers are due for such a Super Bowl and this year's teams hold out an enormous amount of scoring promise.

What To Watch Instead Of The Super Bowl

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Do you feel as if Jan. 20 is just the third Sunday of the month and not a day of gridiron Armageddon? Are you oblivious when millions of Americans plunk themselves in front of their sets to watch the Super Bowl? If you feel this way, don't despair: there's interesting alternative viewing on cable.

Sunday afternoon, Showtime airs "Local Hero," Bill Forsyth's quirky, charming 1983 film about what happens when an ambitious young American oil company executive (Peter Riegert) is sent by his boss (Burt Lancaster) to buy a Scottish coastal village in order to build a refinery. But this isn't an ordinary village; it's sort of a New Age Brigadoon as Riegert soon learns.

Two other 1983 films, "The Outsiders" and "Tender Mercies," highlight HBO's afternoon and early evening viewing on Sunday.

Francis Ford Coppola's "The Outsiders" stars a who's who of today's teen dreams: C. Thomas Howell, Rob Lowe, Matt Dillon, Diane Lane, Tom Cruise and Ralph Macchio. The well-cast, but overblown film, based on S.E. Hinton's novel portrays two opposing groups of teenagers in Oklahoma in 1966.

Robert Duvall won an Oscar for his performance in "Tender Mercies," a low-key, but powerful film by Australian director Bruce Beresford. Duvall plays a down-and-out country singer who rebuilds his life when he meets a young widowed mother (Tess Harper). Duvall also wrote everything he sings in the film.

Later that afternoon, HBO repeats its "Elvis: One Night with You" special. This concert features previously unreleased footage from Elvis Presley's acclaimed 1968 "comeback" TV special.

Also for Presley buffs, The Movie Channel airs "It Happened at the World's Fair," one of the singer's better mid-1960s films. In this 1963 film, the King romps around at the Seattle World's Fair.

Cinemax pulls out an oldie for Sunday afternoon — "The Inn of the Sixth Happiness," a fine 1958 film featuring a memorable performance by Ingrid Bergman as an English missionary who leads children through enemy territory in pre-World War II China.

"Peyton Place," another 1950s classic, airs Sunday on WTBS. The 1957 potboiler, based on Grace Metalious's steamy novel, portrays life behind closed doors of a sleepy New England town. The shenanigans seem tame compared to what viewers can see each week on "Dynasty" and "Dallas." The film, starring Lana Turner, Hope Lange and Lloyd Nolan, received nine Oscar nominations.

8:00 (2) Movie "Santa Fe Passage" (1954) John Payne, Faith Domergue. Despite the fact that he is an Indian-hater, a man falls in love with a half-breed. (2 hrs.)
(3) (5) (12) T.J. Hooker

HEADLINERS

THE ALLENS: DRESSED FOR SUCCESS

Steve Allen may not have changed since his days as host of The Tonight Show — he's as zany as he ever was — but to his mind, at least, the television audience has changed. "There's been an increasing shortness of its attention span," believes Allen, who's now host of Steve Allen's Music Room on the Disney Channel. "Audiences have become accustomed to new technologies. In the '50s, TV had a magical glow. People were spellbound by merely watching. These days, viewers don't stay with you. If they don't like what they see, they press a button to see what else is on. I know. I do it myself."

□

It's a nasty job, being the wife of J.R. Ewing, but somebody has to do it. And Linda Gray, who plays the put-upon Sue Ellen, couldn't be more pleased. "I'm happy. I love my success. I love being who I am, the age I am, all of it," she gushes, Texas-style. "Dallas has given me that spark of confidence. It's like someone tapping me on the head with a magic wand and saying, 'You can do it all.'" Married at 22 and a mother soon after, Gray was 32 before she became an actress. "I always had the desire to perform," she explains, "but I was a good wife and mommy with two kids. I was brought up to be 'nice,' which meant living up to everyone else's expectations, giving of myself even when there was nothing left to give. Eventually, I decided I'd taken care of everyone else, and now it was my time." Then she got hitched to J.R.

□

"I'd rather get on a spaceship with one engine missing," says One Life to Live star Janice Lynde when asked for her views on marriage. To be sure, this attitude doesn't stem from sour grapes. It's just that she's already been in an altared state and didn't much care for it. For the last four years, Lynde has been living with actor David Bailey, whom she met when the two were on another soap, Another World. "He'd like to be married to me," says Janice, "but I rebelled against the wife-and-mother thing a long time ago. I am my own woman. Marriage would still seem like being put in jail." And after all, if you only have one life to live....

□

The French have always considered Jerry Lewis a genius. For that matter, so has Jerry Lewis. At the recent Jack Oakie lecture on comedy he delivered in Los Angeles, the one-time nutty professor told the audience that he continues to be surprised by the critical plaudits for his handling of the "serious" role of the talk-show host in King of Comedy. "The role was not that tough," says Jerry. "I just had to respond to Robert DeNiro, and I was credited with a great acting job. But what really requires great acting is when you have to act like a jerk." Maybe we took The Three Stooges too lightly.

□

You don't hear about many people like Pam Dawber anymore. While others of the Big Chill generation have jumped on the Hollywood bandwagon of jiggle shows and prime-time soaps, Mork's earthling friend has built herself a passive-solar house in the Catskills and champions the Media Project. "It's a P.R. firm for alternative energy sources," she explains. "Most people are lazy; they build houses the regular way." She's also been riding elephants, consorting with maharajas, and bartering in Nepal. She, Brooke Shields, and *Star Trek*ker Persis Khambatta were flown to the far corners of the earth for a syndicated travel special, Exciting People, Exotic Places, to air this month. "It was great," Pam says. "I got to be the Barbara Walters of the trip." All things considered, though, Detroit's Dawber says she's "glad to be living in this country," where she depends on people like "my high school girlfriend Linda, who's always been my touchstone. Linda is living her '60s ideals. She and her husband have a farm in Michigan, where they're raising vegetables and bringing their kids up without TV. She sends her extra money to Mother Theresa." Quite a contrast, in Pam's view, to today's world of "fast-food relationships. Everything moves too fast, and people aren't often willing to work at something they believe in."

Partners With Japan?

The U.S. Secretary of State Explains Why Our Links to Japan Are Extremely Vital to America

By Secretary of State George P. Shultz

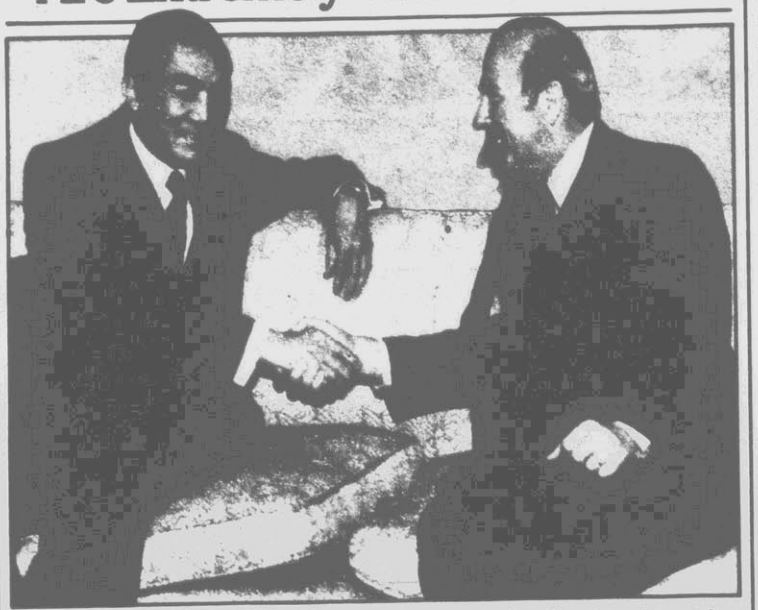

In May 1983, just before the Williamsburg summit conference, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone visited Washington. It happened to be the prime minister's birthday, and the president surprised Nakasone with a birthday cake after lunch at the White House. Later, the prime minister told the president, "Ron, you do the pitching and I'll do the catching." The president replied, "Yasu, I promise to always throw them straight."

Although we share the same national pastime, the two leaders weren't talking about baseball. Instead, they were referring to the growing sense of cooperation and teamwork that marks the relationship between the United States and Japan. When Mike Mansfield, our ambassador to Japan, tells visitors that the relationship between the two nations is "the most important bilateral relationship in the world, bar none," he's expressing a view that more and more of his fellow Americans are coming to share. In fact, in a recent Gallup poll, the American people ranked Japan the third most liked country and the third most important to the United States, just after Canada and Great Britain. There are many examples of America's growing interest in Japan, from the popularity of sushi to books on Japanese management, from higher enrollments in Japanese language classes to ninja and samurai movies.

This is an important development in American public opinion, because the United States and Japan are bound to each other by common vital interests. Our relationship with Japan is not merely important but crucial to our prosperity, our security, and our future. Together, the United States and Japan account for over one-third of the world's "gross national product," and one-half of international bank lending. Together, we export and import 22 percent of the world's products. And together, our two governments provide over $11 billion in economic aid to the world's developing countries.

Building this kind of relationship hasn't been easy. Differences between our two societies, cultures and languages will always be barriers to better understanding, so we have to work harder to build and maintain our relations. Yet we know what our differences are, and we know how to work together to try to overcome them.

Japan's emergence from the devastation of war to become one of the world's most dynamic economies is a well-known success story, and one that has earned the admiration of the American people. The other side of this coin, however, is concern about Japan's success in penetrating the American economy while making it difficult for us to sell our products in Japan. Last year our trade deficit with Japan was nearly $20 billion.

Prime Minister Nakasone and Shultz: The Japanese leader offered to play catch.

The Japanese understand that in order to strengthen both our relationship and the world trade system, their remaining barriers must be removed. The United States will continue to press for their complete elimination. We think that this will benefit not only us but Japan itself in the long run.

We have bargained hard to resolve the problems in our trading relationship and open Japan's markets wider, and we have made progress. We're not looking for equal results in our trade account, but for an equal chance to compete. But at the same time, we need to remember that our trade with Japan brings us a lot of benefits, too.

A recent Gallup poll ranked Japan the third most liked country . . . after Canada and Great Britain.

Last year $21 billion in American products were purchased by the Japanese. That's as much as our exports to France, Italy and West Germany combined. Only Canada buys more from us. Japan bought more beef, more citrus products, more chemicals, more lumber and logs, more fish, more commercial aircraft, and more industrial raw materials from the United States than did any other country in the world. Last year, Japan took in almost $7 billion worth of U.S. farm products — twice as much as any other country in the world. Twenty million acres of American farmland are used to produce food for Japan — and that's more farmland than there is in Japan itself!

Simply stated, the jobs of many Americans and the quality of our life are directly related to our exports to Japan. We welcome this trade and hope that it will continue to grow larger.

Many people charge that because America is committed to the defense of Japan, the Japanese people are getting a "free ride." What they don't know is that at over $12 billion, Japan's defense budget is the eighth largest in the world (and the fourth largest among our allies). Japan's Self-Defense Forces have 13 army divisions to defend an area the size of the state of Montana; approximately 400 tactical fighter aircraft, which is more than the U.S. Air Force has in Japan, South Korea, and the Philippines combined; and 50 destroyer-type vessels, over twice as many as our Seventh Fleet, which is responsible for the entire Western Pacific and Indian oceans.

Nevertheless, we believe that Japan can and should do more. When Japan is better able to defend itself, the United States will be better able to defend our common interests elsewhere in the world.

We also need to remember that the bases Japan provides to us rent-free on her soil are not there just for the defense of Japan. Our treaty with Japan says that these bases exist also for "the maintenance of international peace and security in the Far East." Our bases in Japan — which Japan supports to the tune of over $1 billion a year — play an important role in protecting U.S. interests in some of the most vital areas of the world. When we needed to respond to the hostage crisis in Iran in 1979, we sent our aircraft carrier Midway from Japan.

Our security arrangements with Japan truly are mutual, and both sides benefit.

Japan's economic strength has made it the second largest economy in the free world. But now the Japanese are showing a greater concern for international political questions. No matter where you look — trying to de-escalate the Iran-Iraq war, providing aid to Afghan refugees, proving and condemning Soviet responsibility for the shooting down of KAL-007, increasing food assistance to Africa, looking into building a new Panama Canal, alleviating the debt crisis in Latin America, trying to persuade Vietnam to withdraw its military forces from Kampuchea — the Japanese are involved.

All of this means that we now consult with the Japanese on a vast number of important international issues. Since becoming secretary of state, I have met with my Japanese counterpart and friend, Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, 14 times. Foreign Minister Abe and I have gotten to know each other well, and we have learned how to conduct our business with typical American (and Japanese) efficiency. At one recent meeting, Abe was looking at the large stack of briefing papers in front of him, and I was looking at mine. I could tell we were thinking along the same lines.

"Well, Mr. Foreign Minister," I said, "I know you've got a list there. Let's go down it." And that's what we did. Then I went down my list. It is hard to think of any part of the world or any major international issue that we didn't discuss.

Perhaps the best way to summarize our relations with Japan is to say that America now has a real partner on the other side of the Pacific, and it's no longer our junior partner.

Japan and the United States are moving toward the 21st century together. There is every reason to believe that our ties with Japan will continue to grow and prosper. In any relationship as large and complex as ours, there are going to be problems from time to time. When they do arise, we will work together to solve them. But as we go about this task, we and the American people must always keep in mind the immense value of this important relationship. FW

Wealthy Man Wants to Give You His Wealth Secret Before It's Too Late!

Dear Friend,

My name is John Wright. Not too long ago I was flat broke. I was $30,000 in debt. The bank repossessed my car because I couldn't keep up with the payments. And one day the landlord gave me an eviction notice because I hadn't paid the rent for three months. So we had to move out. My family and I stayed at my cousin's place for the rest of that month before I could manage to get another apartment. That was very embarrassing.

Things have changed now. I own four homes in southern California. The one I'm living in now is worth more than half a million dollars. I own several cars, among them a brand new Mercedes and a brand new Cadillac. And as of now, I have $178,000 cash in certificate of deposits in just one of my bank accounts in Beverly Hills.

I'm not really trying to impress you with my wealth. All I'm trying to do here is to prove to you that if it wasn't because of that money secret I was lucky enough to find that day, I still would have been poor or may be even bankrupt. It was only through this amazing money secret that I could pull myself out of debt and become wealthy. Who knows what would have happened to my family and me.

Knowing about this secret changed my life completely. It brought me wealth, happiness, and most important of all peace of mind. This secret will change your life, too! It will give you everything you need and will solve all your money problems. Of course you don't have to take my word for it. You can try it for yourself. To see that you try this secret, I'm willing to give you $20.00 in cash. (I'm giving my address at the bottom of this page.) I figure, if I spend $20.00, I get your attention. And you will prove it to yourself that this amazing money secret will work for you, too!

You probably are asking yourself, why is he sharing his secret with me? My response is, "why not". First, I've already made enough money to retire for the rest of my life. Second, my secret is so unique that we won't be competing with each other. Third, nothing is more satisfying to me than sharing my secret only with those who realize a golden opportunity and get on it quickly.

This secret is incredibly simple. Anyone can use it. You can get started with practically no money at all and the risk is almost zero. You don't need special training or even a high school education. It doesn't matter how young or old you are and it will work for you at home or even while you are on vacation.

Let me tell you more about this fascinating money making secret:

FAST MONEY

With this secret the money can roll in fast. In some cases you may be able to cash in literally overnight. If you can follow simple instructions you can get started in a single afternoon and it is possible to have spendable money in your hands the very next morning. In fact, this just might be the fastest legal way to make money that has ever been invented!

ALMOST NO-RISK

This is a very safe way to get extra cash. It is practically risk free. It is not a dangerous gamble. Everything you do has already been tested and you can get started for less money than most people spend for a night on the town.

"WORK" AT HOME

One of the nicest things about this whole idea is that you can do it at home in your spare time. You don't need equipment or an office. It doesn't matter where you live either. You can use this secret to make money if you live in a big city or on a farm or anywhere in between. A husband and wife team from New York used my secret, worked at home in their spare time, and made $45,000 in one year.

SIMPLE

This secret is simple. It would be hard to make a mistake if you tried. You don't need a college degree or even a high school education. All you need is a little common sense and the ability to follow simple, easy, step-by-step instructions. I personally know a man from New England who used this secret and made $2 million in just 3 years.

AGE DOESN'T MATTER

You can use this secret to make money no matter how old or how young you may be. There is no physical labor involved and everything is so easy it can be done whether you're a teenager or 90 years old. I know one woman who is over 65 and is making all the money she needs with this secret.

NO PERSONAL SELLING

When you use this secret to make money you never have to try to convince anybody of anything. This has nothing to do with door-to-door selling, telephone solicitation, real estate or anything else that involves personal contact.

LEGAL AND HONEST

Everything about this idea is perfectly legal and honest. You will be proud of what you are doing and you will be providing a very valuable service.

NO LONG HOURS

It will only take you two hours to learn how to use this secret. After that everything is almost automatic. After you get started you can probably do everything that is necessary in three hours per week.

I know you are skeptical. That simply shows your good business sense. Well, here is proof from people who have put this amazing secret into use and have gotten all the money they ever desired. Their names are not mentioned here in order to protect their privacy but I have full information and the actual proof of their success in my office.

PROOF

- A woman from Oregon started out by using my secret method in its simplest form. She later reported that it had brought her $14,000 in cash.
- A man from Rhode Island applied my secret and with the help of his family, made over $40,000 in a year in his spare time.
- A man from California, who was broke at the time, tried my secret and made $147,000.
- On the basis of my secret, a husband and wife team from Virginia grossed over $100,000 cash in eleven months.
- A man from California made over $265,000 in one year, with this incredible secret.
- I talked to a man from Ohio, who now lives in Santa Monica, CA. He said: "Thank you for sharing your secret...with this amazing, yet simple secret, I received $220,000 in just two months."

As you can tell by now (to say the least) I have come across something pretty good. All in all, as I said in the beginning, I believe I have discovered the sweetest little money-making secret you could ever imagine. Remember — I guarantee it.

Most of the time, it takes big money to make money. This is an exception. With this secret you can start in your spare time with almost nothing. But of course, you don't have to start small or stay small. You can go as fast and as far as you wish. The size of your profits is totally up to you. I can't guarantee how much you will make when you use this secret but I can tell you this — so far this amazing money producing secret makes the profits from most other ideas look like peanuts!

Now at last, I've completely explained this remarkable secret in a special money making plan. I call it "The Royal Road to Riches". Some call it a miracle. You'll probably call it "The Secret of Riches". You will learn everything you need to know step-by-step. So you too can put this amazing money making secret to work for you and make all the money you need.

To prove that this secret will solve all your money problems, I'm not even asking you to send me money. Instead, postdate your check for a month and half from today. Obviously it is not actually money because it is not negotiable for 45 days. You can easily stop payment on it any time you want. I can't cash your check for 45 days before I know for sure that you are completely satisfied with my material.

IMAGINE HOW YOUR WHOLE LIFE WILL CHANGE IF YOU USE THIS SECRET TO GET ALL THE MONEY YOU NEED!

- You won't have to worry about bills.
- You will be master of your own time and fate and nobody can boss you around.
- You will have more time to spend with your loved ones and you will be able to take care of them in emergencies.
- You can have the house you want, the car you want, the vacations you want.
- And most of all, you will finally have PEACE OF MIND!

If you need (or just want) more money, there are a lot of reasons why you should take advantage of this amazing secret. (And I can't think of a single reason why you shouldn't). It will probably solve all your money problems forever. In fact, I am so completely convinced that my powerful secret works money miracles, that I'm willing to give you the most unusual guarantee ever offered. That is, if it doesn't solve all your money problems, I'll return your original uncashed check, plus an extra twenty dollar cash bonus just for doing me (and yourself) the favor of giving the secret an honest try according to my simple instructions.

$20.00 FREE!

There is no way you can lose. You either solve all your money problems with this secret (in just 30 days) or you get your money back plus $20.00 in cash FREE!

Do you realize what this means? You can put my simple secret into use. Be able to solve all your money problems. And if for any reason whatsoever you are not 100% satisfied after using the secret for 30 days, you may return my material. And then I will not only return your original UNCASHED CHECK, but I will also send you an extra $20.00 cashiers check just for giving the secret an honest try according to the simple instructions.

I GUARANTEE IT! I have given references, therefore, there is absolutely NO RISK ON YOUR PART.

CANDY'S DANDY

A SWEET WAY TO BEAT THE BLUES

By Marilyn Hansen

Snowbound? Got the winter blahs? At this time of year, cabin fever can hit the best of us. Try this prescription: After taking a long walk, maybe to the local supermarket, why not come home and make one of these easy homemade candies? Candy making in one's own cozy kitchen is a time-honored winter evening's occupation, to be followed by a couple of hours playing charades or your favorite board game. A candy thermometer will help ensure good results for those not used to making confections.

CAPPUCINO DIVINITY

½ cup dark corn syrup
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons dark rum
2 teaspoons instant coffee powder
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon

1. In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar, corn syrup, water and salt. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat. 2. Reduce heat. Without stirring, cook until temperature on candy thermometer reaches 248 F, or until a small amount dropped into very cold water forms a ball which does not flatten when removed from water. 3. Just before temperature reaches 248 F, in large bowl with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. 4. With mixer at high speed, slowly pour about ½ of the hot syrup over egg whites. 5. Cook remaining syrup to 272 F or until a small amount of mixture when dropped into very cold water separates into threads which are hard, but not brittle. 6. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla and dark rum. Beating constantly, slowly pour hot syrup over egg white mixture. 7. After last addition of syrup, beat in coffee powder and ground cinnamon. Continue beating until mixture begins to lose its gloss and a small amount of mixture holds a soft peak when dropped from a spoon. 8. If mixture becomes too stiff for mixer, beat with a heavy wooden spoon. 9. Drop by teaspoonsful onto waxed paper. Store in a tightly covered container at room temperature. Makes 1½ lbs.

Note: If you wish, 1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans may be stirred into mixture with coffee powder and cinnamon in step #7.

TOASTED ALMOND BARK

2 cups sugar
⅔ cup milk
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup toasted, unblanched almonds

1. In 2-quart heavy saucepan combine sugar, milk, corn syrup and salt. Cook, stirring constantly, until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil. Continue cooking without any stirring until mixture comes to the soft-ball stage (235 F). 2. Remove from heat and add butter, but do not mix in. Cool until lukewarm (110 F); mix in vanilla. Beat with wooden spoon until mixture thickens and is creamy. Add toasted almonds. 3. Spread mixture to a thickness of ½ inch on lightly buttered heavy-duty-foil-lined baking sheet. Allow to cool, then break into pieces. Makes 1½ lbs.

DORCHESTER FUDGE

1 pkg. (8 squares) semisweet chocolate, finely chopped
½ cup marshmallow topping
½ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1½ cups sugar
⅔ cup evaporated milk, undiluted (not condensed milk)

1. Place chocolate in a bowl with marshmallow topping, walnuts, butter and vanilla; set aside. 2. Combine sugar and evaporated milk in 2-quart saucepan; cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full rolling boil (a boil that cannot be stirred down). Keep at full rolling boil for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. 3. Carefully pour boiling sugar-milk mixture over chocolate mixture and stir until chocolate is melted. Pour into a buttered 8-inch square pan. Chill until firm, about 1 hour. Cut into squares.

Makes 1½ lbs., 3 dozen pieces

Mocha Almond Fudge: Prepare Dorchester Fudge as directed, using chopped, toasted, blanched almonds for the walnuts and adding 2 teaspoons instant coffee powder to the sugar-milk mixture.

CRISPY CARAMEL POPCORN

1 cup sugar
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup dark corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
4 quarts popped corn

1. Stir together sugar, butter, corn syrup, salt and vanilla in 1½-quart saucepan. 2. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil; boil 5 minutes. Remove from heat; pour syrup mixture over popped corn in large, shallow baking pan. Stir to coat well. 3. Bake at 250 F for 1 hour, stirring every 15 minutes. 4. Remove from oven and stir mixture occasionally to prevent it from sticking together while cooling. Store in tightly covered container. Makes 1 lb.

"Vitamin Side Effects Revealed!"

An Interview with Frank K. Wood, President, F C & A

(Atlanta, GA) — FC&A, a nearby Peachtree City, GA, company announced today the release of a new $5.99 book, "Vitamin Side Effects Revealed".

It reveals surprising side effects and other secrets about vitamins . . . facts that aren't generally known by the public. Read on through this interview with FC&A President, Frank K. Wood.

Question: Can vitamins cause side effects like drugs do?

Answer: Yes, two vitamins can actually be harmful in high doses. Other vitamins can sometimes cause diarrhea, dizziness, sleepiness, depression, upset stomach, cramps, high blood pressure, fear, ringing sounds or poor heart function.

Even so, the good effects of vitamins outweigh the bad effects. But you must know what vitamins you need and how much to take. That's why you need my new book.

Question: What other vitamin secrets are revealed in this new book?

Answer:

- How you can get vitamins for free.
- Not one but two vitamins which can help fight hardening of the arteries, and coronary heart disease.
- Two minerals that help protect against cancer.
- A vitamin that helps protect against schizophrenia.
- Two minerals and a vitamin that can combat osteoporosis, which causes the collapse of the backbone in older women.
- Two minerals that can help lower high blood pressure.
- A mineral that helps regulate blood sugar levels.
- A vitamin that helps heal wounds or surgical incisions.
- A vitamin that helps increase fertility.
- A vitamin that protects against sunburn.
- A vitamin that helps fight viruses.
- A vitamin that helps prevent kidney stones.
- A mineral complex that may slow down aging.
- An amino acid that combats cold sores and Herpes infections.
- A vitamin that helps increase circulation in the legs.
- A vitamin that helps alcoholics control their drinking.
- A vitamin that helps control premenstrual tension and fights depression.

Question: What else is in the book?

Answer: Complete descriptions of every vitamin. What each does for you . . . How much you need to take . . . What foods contain different vitamins . . . How prescription drugs, alcohol, and smoking can destroy certain vitamins . . . How particular vitamins can fight many diseases . . . How much of each vitamin you can safely take . . . How long your body stores each vitamin . . . Deficiency symptoms for each vitamin.

Questions: How can readers get a copy of "Vitamin Side Effects Revealed!"

Answer: It's easy. Simply cut out and mail the coupon today. There's a no time-limit guarantee of full satisfaction or your money back.

Don't wait to order "Vitamin Side Effects Revealed." If you don't get this new book . . . you'll never know all the things different vitamins can do for you — and their side effects.

The Ronald Reagan "Double Eagle" Commemorative

Mint-Perfect Layered in pure .999 Silver

Enlarged to show detail

Honoring the 40th President of the United States

The authentic Reagan "Double Eagle"

You may now acquire direct from the National Historic Mint a first-edition Reagan Commemorative—the authentic "Double Eagle" Series "AA"—honoring the 40th President of the United States.

Layered in .999 pure silver

Each specimen is mint-perfect, layered in pure .999 silver and will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity to that effect from the National Historic Mint.

Limited Series Rare Mint Quality

Rarer than any silver dollar ever minted, the Reagan Commemorative is uncirculated and embodies the American Numismatic Association's standard of perfect mint state quality. Not more than 1,000,000 will be minted in the "AA" Series. Thereafter, the dies will be destroyed, thus assuring permanent rarity.

A Unique Historic Event

This Reagan issue was commissioned and struck by the National Historic Mint as a unique commemorative medallion and has never been nor intended to be designated or circulated as currency. We therefore recommend storage in its protective sleeve to protect against mishandling.

Price honored only until February 17, 1985.

We cannot guarantee to honor requests at the original issue price after February 17, 1985. Your uncashed check will be returned if postmarked later than midnight of that date.

50-Year Repurchase Guarantee

Should you ever wish to sell or redeem your Reagan commemorative, the National Historic Mint pledges to repurchase it from you upon demand, at any time within the next fifty (50) years, for the full cash price you paid.

"Double Eagle"—Extra Collectors Bonus

Note that this Commemorative also memorializes the bicentennial (200 years) of the bald eagle as America's national symbol—represented by double eagles, one for each century.

Lower Serial Number

Many collectors desire a low Certificate of Authenticity serial number. Therefore please order your Commemorative promptly. There is a limit of two (2) Commemoratives per address at this price, but requests mailed early enough (before February 9) are permitted to order up to 5.

Since this offering is limited, please respond promptly—use the toll-free number below to avoid disappointment. Or mail (promptly) to address below.

Send $10 for each Commemorative together with your name and address. Add only $3 shipping and handling no matter how many you order. (New York residents add sales tax.) Allow up to 6-8 weeks for shipment. Mail to: National Historic Mint, Ronald Reagan "Double Eagle" Commemorative, Dept. 603-136, Box 1290, Westbury, New York 11595. (E26760)

DON SHARP'S MONTHLY CAR CARE COLUMN

WHEN IT'S GOOD TO RUN BEHIND

In 1769, Nicholas Cugnot built a steam tractor that drove from its single front wheel. Thus, the world's first self-propelled vehicle used front-wheel drive (FWD).

In the early years, automotive engineers argued the merits of front-drive vs. rear-drive, and the industry largely settled on rear-drive for the sensible reason that asking one pair of wheels to both drive and steer was too much.

Others, particularly John Christie around 1905 and Harry Miller in the 1920s, kept the FWD faith. Christie and Miller proved the FWD concept in racing, and Citroen of France went into production of FWD cars in 1934 and has never built anything else.

Tim Grajek

The current popularity of FWD, then, does not arise from any brilliant, new engineering wisdom. In fact, it arises from recent economic conditions. Pollution controls and safety features increase the cost of a car, and fuel economy dictates a lightweight vehicle. FWD eliminates several drive-train components, simplifies the body and rear suspension, and reduces the assembly operations; all these lower the manufacturing costs.

In other words, FWD provides a relatively cheap solution to a number of engineering problems. That's why it was found on some of the cheapest cars of 20-odd years ago. For example, the Goliath, DKW and Taunus from Germany; the Citroen 2CV and Simca 1100 from France; and the MG1100 and Austin Mini from England. That doesn't mean that FWD is the best way to do things. If it were, Mercedes-Benz and Ferrari would both have it.

If neither new nor the best, FWD does do a good job of getting a car down the road in normal conditions. In abnormal conditions, though, the error of making one pair of wheels do two jobs begins to show.

Those two front wheels have only so much traction. The traction that enables the car to steer is a direct subtraction from the traction that moves the car. In slippery conditions, the total traction may not be enough for both requirements. In that case, turning the steering wheel will not alter the direction of the motion, and the car will continue straight ahead. Or the steering demand will simply set the wheels spinning. Students of physics can analyze these phenomena through vector analysis.

Vector analysis also applies to the much-touted but fallacious claims about the ability of FWD to climb a slippery hill. The claim is based on the fact that FWD does, indeed, put more weight on the driving wheels. Unfortunately for the claim, going uphill effectively shifts weight to the rear, and FWD thus loses its advantage. A rear-drive car effectively gains weight at its traction wheels when pointed uphill just as an FWD car is losing traction in its drive wheels. A rear-engine car does better on a slick uphill slope; hence, the astonishing uphill ability of the Volkswagen Beetle.

The opposite occurs when going downhill: The weight shifts forward, and the front wheels of a FWD car may find they don't have enough traction for the extra weight. They are particularly likely to make this discovery when the brakes are applied, for putting on the brakes increases the weight shift. The shift may unload the rear wheels so much that they slide and provide nothing for the control of the car, or they may decide to "trade ends" with the front.

The forward weight shift affects rear-drive cars, too, but the shifts are less pronounced, because the weight is more evenly distributed in the first place.

If FWD can be so tricky in slippery conditions, then why does it enjoy such a great reputation? Because people react subjectively, and FWD does give a strong sense of security and control. On dry pavement, that control is real. On ice, it cannot be assumed.

All this is not to disparage FWD but simply to point out some of the relevant physics. Buy FWD if you like, enjoy it if you have it — just respect its limitations on slippery surfaces, whether mud, snow, or simply wet grass. FW

PHYLLIS GEORGE

THE TRICKY EQUATION OF FAME AND PRIVACY

Ever since Phyllis George's reign as Miss America in 1971, her rise to stardom has epitomized for many Americans how a small-town girl with brains and beauty can become successful beyond even her own wildest dreams.

In 1975 George joined NFL Today as the television show's first female sportscaster. Two years later she joined her new husband, John Y. Brown, in the governor's mansion as the first lady of Kentucky. Most recently George was selected to replace Diane Sawyer, who became a member of the Sixty Minutes team, as co-anchor of The CBS Morning News.

An independent, self-assured career woman, Phyllis George spoke to FAMILY WEEKLY assistant editor Melanie Menagh about her home life with her husband and children, Lincoln, 4, and Pamela, 1.

Q: What qualities from your own upbringing are you including in the raising of your children?

George: I think the small courtesies in life: saying "please" and "thank you." That was always very important to my mother and dad, and to this day I thank the elevator man and I say "please."

Q: Have you ever spanked your son Lincoln?

George: One time. And believe me, it hurt me more than it hurt him. It wasn't even a spank. It was what I call a pop. A little pop on the tush. It was in a department store. Lincoln was throwing a little temper tantrum. And I popped him. I don't mean a spank. I mean pop. Well it shook him, and then he stopped. We got in the car and we were driving back, and of course, as I said, it broke my heart more than his. He said, "I'm sorry, Mommy, I won't ever do it again." Now that's when you take the opportunity to say, "Lincoln, I love you very much, and if I didn't love you I wouldn't discipline you, but it's out of love for you and caring and concern that Mommy had to spank you. . . ."

Q: How did your parents raise you?

George: We were a very traditional family. My mother would fix breakfast for us every morning. My dad would always say, "Splash some cold water on your face," and I never would. I hated that. I lived at home until I was 21. We were a very caring family — touching, loving, always expressing that.

Q: Your career is really booming. How do you maintain the balance of power in your marriage?

George: My work would be nothing without a stable, loving marriage with a caring and supportive husband. John is very supportive of what I'm doing. He knows that it's important for me as a

ELIMINATES DIETING

Thrilling Japanese Super Pill Guarantees Rapid Weight-Loss!

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — There now exists for the first time, an all natural, bio-active weight-loss compound so powerful, so effective, so relentless in its awesome attack on bulging fatty deposits that it has virtually eliminated the need to diet. News of this super pill from Japan is sweeping the country. The product is called AMITOL/AM™ and it's dynamite! In fact, thousands of people are now trying AMITOL/AM™ and losing weight faster than ever before! Some people have reported as much as 3 pounds the first 24 hrs!

FLUSHES CALORIES RIGHT OUT OF YOUR BODY!

AMITOL/AM™ was developed in Japan by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association). It contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? For years it was a widely held belief that the Konjac root had magical properties. When a person ate a small amount of this delicious root he would miraculously lose weight! The JMA investigated this phenomenon and discovered, thru sophisticated testing, that the Konjac root did indeed cause rapid weight-loss. Actually the way it works is truly extraordinary: Shortly after taking small portions of the Konjac root it dissolves into a completely natural gel which surrounds the excess figure destroying calories you've eaten and then gently flushes them right out of your body. Thereby altering the time contact is made with the intestinal membrane!

The JMA was so impressed with the Konjac's abilities that they produced an amazing weight-loss tablet (AMITOL/AM™), which uses only the key ingredients of the Konjac root. But what's even more impressive, AMITOL/AM™ actually surpasses the incredible powers of the Konjac root because AMITOL/AM™'s ingredients are so highly concentrated. In fact, AMITOL/AM™ is so effective at producing massive weight-loss in record time that it was recently awarded a patent by the United States Patent Authorities!

EAT ALL YOU WANT AND STILL LOSE WEIGHT (PILL DOES ALL THE WORK)

By now it should be obvious that AMITOL/AM™ is no ordinary diet pill. Unlike other diet programs, once you've taken AMITOL/AM™ there is really nothing else to do. You'll marvel at the way AMITOL/AM™ literally reverse years of over eating. You need only follow the simple instructions. That's it! You can continue to enjoy those foods you love to eat. AMITOL/AM™ simply does not allow your body to absorb excess calories. Period! Each day you'll notice absolute visible results as your unwanted pounds of fat, flab, and cellulite completely disappear.

However, a word of caution is in order: Because AMITOL/AM™ is so effective at rapidly removing years of ugly fatty deposits, and because AMITOL/AM™ has absolutely no side effects, there is a tendency for some people to over do it. Do not allow yourself to become too thin. If you start to lose weight too rapidly limit your tablet intake, or even skip a day or two. Have a goal in mind and try not to go beyond it. Also, before starting any weight loss program you should check with your physician to determine that you are in normal health!

COMPANY OFFERS EXTRAORDINARY GUARANTEE

Dyna Labs, a division of Continental Health Industries Inc., is the only company in the United States authorized to sell AMITOL/AM™. They have tested the product thoroughly and are convinced that with AMITOL/AM™ you can achieve the body of your dreams. They don't care if you've tried to lose weight before and failed. They have documented the results of literally thousands of skeptical people who now swear by AMITOL/AM™. Dyna Labs means it when they say you can lose a maximum amount of fat in record time.

In fact, as proof that they believe AMITOL/AM™ is everything they say it is they offer an extraordinary guarantee, one they wouldn't dare make if they had even a single doubt! If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a trial period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send you your entire purchase price. No questions asked! What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. AMITOL/AM™ is available, it's easy and it works!

$19.95 — 30 day supply or $35.95 — 60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to DYNA LABS, 237 MAMARONECK AVENUE, SUITE 206, WHITE PLAINS, NY 10605 DEPT. 101 (enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: 1-800-453-4101. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Either way you order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin! Thank You.

"I LOST 51 LBS IN JUST 6 WEEKS"

BEFORE: June 15-Weight 169 lbs

AFTER: July 29-Weight 118 lbs

I hate to diet. I used to think that I'd almost rather be fat than give up the foods I love to eat. AMITOL/AM™ made the difference! I lost 51 pounds in just 6 weeks, and never knew I was going on a diet! I've never felt or looked better. AMITOL/AM™'s got my vote!—Stephanie Brennan, Venice, CA

"Lost 24 lbs in three weeks and still going down." — D.K., Canton, Ohio

"Thought I was going to have to miss the summer season at the beach. Lost 36 lbs in 4 weeks and had a great summer!" — D.S., Tampa Beach, FL

These happy customers are only a sample of what thousands of people are now saying about AMITOL/AM™. The newest and most effective weight-loss compound ever!

woman and as a professional to broaden my experience and that I need a challenge. We're only here once, and life is to be enjoyed. I want to be fulfilled. I'm all for the family unit. It takes a lot of love, respect, trust and work. John and I talk three, four, five times a day if we're not together. You've got to make that happen. It doesn't just happen. And I call home to the kids when I'm away three or four times a day.

Q: Women newscasters are supposed to exhibit some degree of attractiveness that men may not be required to have. What do you think about that?

George: People were of the mentality several years ago that if you were halfway attractive, you'd gone through life getting by because God had given you nice features. But that's not the way it is. I take pride in being a well-read person who can speak on a lot of subjects. I knew I wanted to go into broadcasting when I was in college, so it's not that all of a sudden, Phyllis is doing the news. It's something that I always wanted to do. A lot of women weren't doing it, and I like to be different.

Q: How did your stint as Miss America fit in?

George: I got my "Ph.D." that year in human relations. I wish I'd kept a diary. Being Miss America means you have to talk to everybody and be happy and cheerful at any time, even if you have PMS or whatever.

I am a basically friendly person. I always have been. I won "friendliest" in school. I've always been a pretty good-natured person. But that doesn't mean that in the morning when I'm up that I'm just going around like this wonderful smiling doll. I don't feel like that. It's unnatural to get your hair and makeup done every morning at 5:30.

Q: How much influence do you think a political wife should have on her husband?

George: Well, I think you're going to have pillow talk, regardless. You can't say, "I'm not going to talk to my husband at night, because he's governor and I don't want to influence him." That's ridiculous, especially if you have a mind of your own, which I certainly do. He would certainly listen to me, but that doesn't mean that would affect his decision in any way. That's interchange. That's healthy. That's your best friend talking to you. I think it would be very naive to say that a woman has no influence on her husband who's in political office.

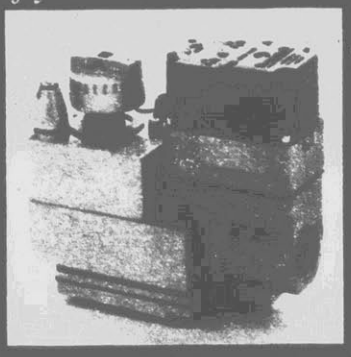

Q: Do you think it was right for Vanessa Williams to resign? Do you think it hurt the Miss America pageant?

George: Everybody blames [Bob] Guccione [the Penthouse publisher]. Guccione is a money man. He's in there to make money and to sell magazines. And granted, it was an ethical issue. I don't think he ever should have done it to any young girl reigning as Miss America. But I think the photographer was to blame. He knew her personally. He said he even liked her. She's a very lovely girl. She was ambitious; she got overly ambitious. This is what I would tell young women starting out in the world: Have ambition, but don't get carried away. Don't let it start to rule you. Do your homework; be prepared. Those are the important things. And when the opportunity comes, you can achieve what you want with your head held high. FW

PRODUCES HUNDREDS OF BIG, FANCY PRIZE WINNERS

This summer – feast on big, sweet, juicy tomatoes with meaty centers and solid divisions from your own vines. This is the best way we know to have delicious garden-fresh tomatoes for the table – and to beat the price squeeze at the food stores. You won't even need a garden – just a few feet of space – to harvest bushels of huge, crimson, mouth-watering Burgess Trip-L-Crop tomatoes.

SEND JUST $1.00 NOW FOR THESE REMARKABLE SEEDS

Grow all the tomatoes you, your family and your friends can eat. You'll still have plenty left for canning, sauces and relishes! Burgess Trip-L-Crop Climbing Tree Tomato is not one of those gigantic, watery, no-taste novelty tomatoes. It's world-famous for taste and productivity – yields crop after crop of plump and juicy tomatoes all summer until frost. Also, blight-free and drought resistant. Trip-L-Crop was developed especially for easy-climbing. But you don't have to have a trellis – it will out-yield other varieties even when grown in bush form. Many customers have written us that they've picked over 2 bushels of tomatoes from just one vine! A breeze to grow – even beginning gardeners have good luck with Burgess Trip-L-Crop Climbing Tree Tomatoes.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

Dave Coulson

FROM THE SINAI DESERT

DON'T WORRY, YOU LOOK FABULOUS IN BLACK

Several months ago, this column learned of some, well, arid research. We weren't sure that the world was ready for it then. But maybe the time has come for revelation.

You know those black robes that Bedouins in the Sinai Desert wear? Like in Lawrence of Arabia? We wouldn't be surprised if you thought about them constantly. Well, it seems that those robes aren't nearly as hot as everybody assumed.

Three of Harvard University's crack researchers were dispatched to a Middle Eastern desert to conduct an investigation. They compared the heat gain via radiation, the heat loss by convection and evaporation, heat storage, and metabolic heat production for men wearing (1) a black Bedouin robe, (2) a white robe, (3) a tan army uniform, and (4) short pants. The results showed that though the initial heat absorption was greater for those in black robes, the actual temperature at skin level was the same in the various outfits!

We apologize for keeping this revelation under wraps for so long.

FROM PENNSYLVANIA

CLAMPING DOWN ON KLEPTOMANIACS

What's more thrilling for a crook than shoplifting and not getting caught? Getting caught for shoplifting and then being released — scot free. Surveys show that this nationwide problem is tough to fight because most stores don't have the time or resources to prosecute — unfortunately shoplifters know this, too.

But Shoplifters Anonymous, of Glen Mills, Pa., now weighs in with some advice for beleaguered merchants.

The organization suggests that stores release shoplifters with the understanding that the business "may or could" prosecute anytime in the next two months. Since prosecution obviously spoils the thrill of shoplifting, the mere possibility of prosecution may be nearly as effective at getting shoplifters to keep their itchy fingers in their pockets instead of in handcuffs.

FROM NEW YORK

A DIFFERENT KIND OF BROWN-BAGGING

First there was the Unknown Comic, who wore a paper bag over his head to hide his identity. Then there were the New Orleans Saints and Houston Oilers spectators who took to wearing grocery bags over their heads for fear of being identified as fans of their cities' particularly inept football teams.

There's now a more creative use for grocery bags. The Second Annual Paper Grocery Bag Art Competition is under way. Last year's contestants folded, embroidered, sculpted, painted, and even crayoned their bags. This year's winner will collect a $500 prize, and the works of runner-up bag people will be displayed in the lobby of the International Paper Company headquarters in New York City.

The contest is designed to "display the versatility and durability of the paper bag." We assume that it's also designed to display the versatility and durability of the artists. For info, write to: Competition, c/o NASS, 1200 Hempstead Turnpike, Franklin Square, N.Y. 11010.

FROM CHINA

MAYBE BABIES

Here's some news fairly pregnant with meaning. Apparently the Chinese census bureau's calculator may have been shanghaied all along. The Chinese now admit that their national birth rate during the 1950s was underestimated by 15 percent, during the '60s by 10 percent, and since 1979 by another 15 percent.

In a country of over a billion people, that's a rather large oops. But the Chinese error may have balanced itself out, because the death rate, too, was underestimated — by 38 percent.

Population control remains a top priority in the People's Republic of China, where officials estimate that fertility is down 50 percent over the past decade. Despite all this, and even allowing for further error, we still conclude: There are a lot of Chinese in China.

BEDSIDE READING

What are your countrymen and women reading before they retire for the night? Here are two reports:

General (Ret.) Chuck Yeager, test pilot

"I recently read Iacocca. I found it fascinating and read it very quickly. It is not only interesting for the story of the man, but everyone in the country should read it for what it says about business."

Stanley A. Voynick, licensed pilot, Phoenix, Ariz.

"I read A Gift of Wings by Richard Bach for the first time in junior high school, before I became actively involved in aviation. I rediscovered the book recently and it had taken on a new, more personal meaning. In his stories, Bach talks about the intangible quality that separates a real pilot from someone who just steers a plane."

IN AMERICA

HUMOR TAKES ITS TOLL

Charlie Immethun is a toll collector on the Eads Bridge, which spans the Mississippi River between St. Louis and southern Illinois.

Charlie comes on at 6:30 a.m., when the morning is gray with river fog and car fumes. The old bridge shakes and rumbles under the traffic. Charlie will spend the next eight hours in his booth, making change for about 1,000 commuters.

"I've spent 33 years on this bridge," Charlie said. "But I've only enjoyed the last four."

What happened?

Charlie started telling the corniest jokes he could find. Now, every morning, he tapes a new joke on his tollbooth window. He only puts up the first half of the joke. The commuters try to supply the rest. Here's an example:

What do Winnie the Pooh and Jack the Ripper have in common?

The same middle name.

"Oh, Charlie," groaned a regular. "That's awful." It is, but it's no worse than yesterday's joke:

Why did the chicken cross the playground?

To get to the other slide.

"I love their reaction when I give the answer," Charlie said. "The people smiling back at you make the job. Of course, you've got to give some a little push. Look at that woman. She doesn't know whether to laugh or cry."

Jimmy Mooney, a bus driver, pulled up right behind her. He steals jokes for Charlie off a computerized bank sign. Regulars will give Charlie jokes scribbled on business cards, backs of envelopes and scraps of paper. Charlie swipes the others from joke books. He'll even use material from children's workbooks.

"Like Milton Berle, I'll steal from anybody," Charlie said.

Like Milton Berle, Charlie is the Thief of Badgags.

But Charlie faces problems no other stand-up comedian has. "I have to keep my jokes short. Ten words is all that will fit on my sign. And I have to keep traffic moving."

Charlie also runs into choreography problems. "I loved this joke," he says. "Where do all the fleas go in cooler weather?"

No answer.

"Search me," Charlie said, scratching his midsection.

"It's a great joke. The only problem is, my belly got red after 600 cars. I started scratching my neck, then my arms."

Charlie scratched everything but the joke.

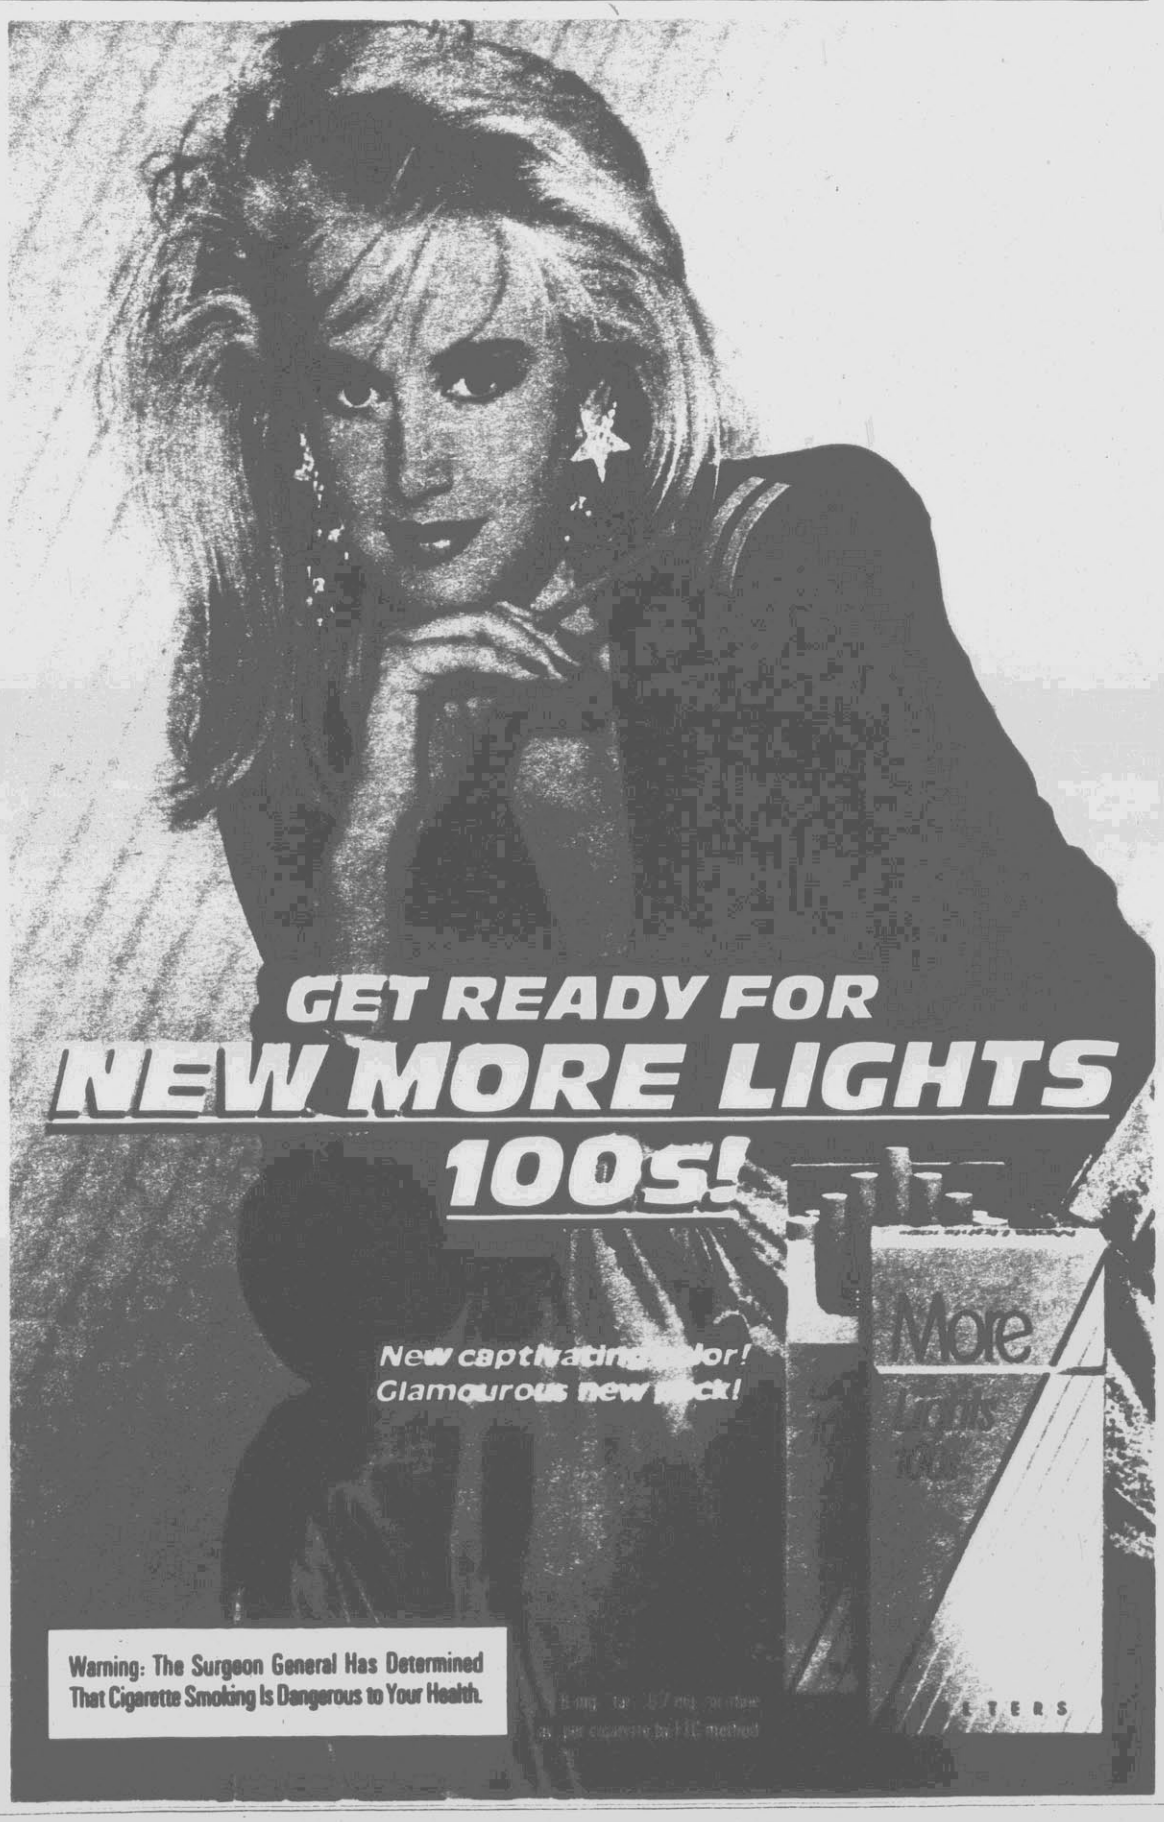

Charlie keeps a record of each day's joke. "I'm afraid I'll repeat them," he said. He worries with good reason.

"Some of my early jokes were so bad, people didn't laugh. They just humored me." But that morning's joke was a hit. A big woman driving a beat-up green car said, "Morning, Charlie. What's the answer?"

He told her. The woman laughed, long and loud. Her laugh turned into a siren-like howl as she drove away.

"Gee," Charlie said, "I didn't think it was that good."

6 ALBUMS-1¢

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial membership basis.

Just fill in the special "Trial Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them! And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ to cover shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for up to 75% off regular Club prices (only $2.49). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

Fill in this "Gold Box" to get an extra selection

Yes! you can go on a shopping spree and get any 11 of your favorite albums all at once! Just fill in the entire application and mail it together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

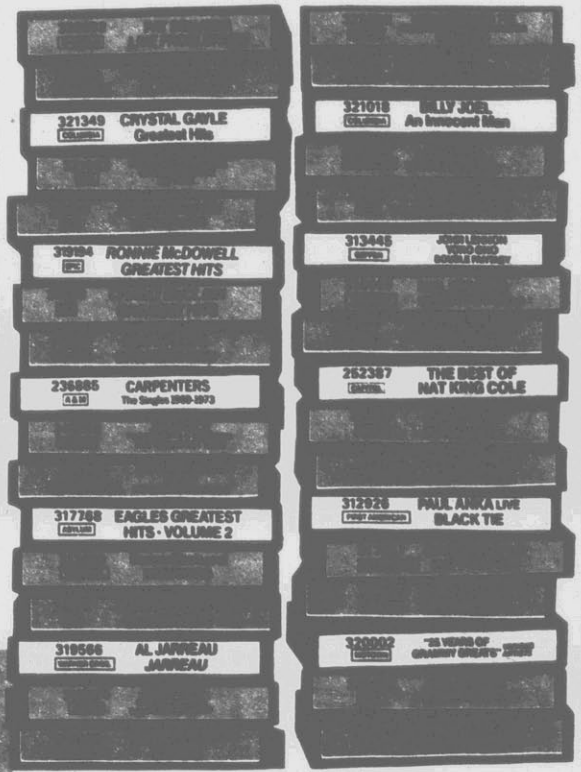

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities in one year.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll then be eligible for our generous, money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So you risk nothing by acting now!

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Light fixture is missing. 2. Head is moved. 3. Desk support is different. 4. Nameplate is missing. 5. Frame is smaller. 6. Arm is moved ® SUPER WORD! A word indicating something that should be kept in mind every day can be made to appear in the empty spaces of the diagram at right. Just add the right letters to form words reading downward. Correct letters will form the super word.

What word is it?

A	B	O	S	A	E
H	T	F	T	E	E

The super word is ..safety .. Other answers may be possible

CHECK OUT TRAVELER!

An observant subway rider drew three conclusions about a fellow traveler:

1. He was not left-handed.
2. He would not be traveling far.
3. He had spent some time on the telephone recently.

It was easy to see he was not left-handed for he was busy solving a puzzle.

It was apparent he would not be traveling far for he had not opened his coat.

What might have revealed he had been on the phone?

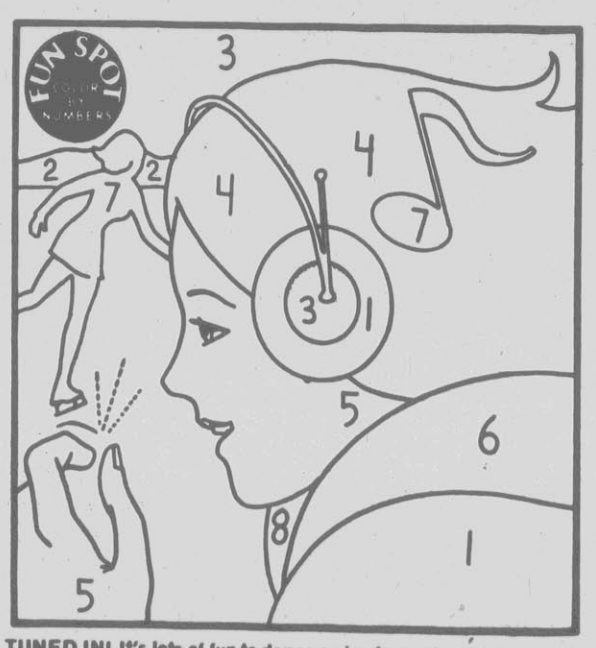

An ear muff was red from pressure of the receiver

® SUM FUN! I am thinking of a number which is twice as large as the number which is four more than one-third of the one I have in mind. Of what number am I thinking?

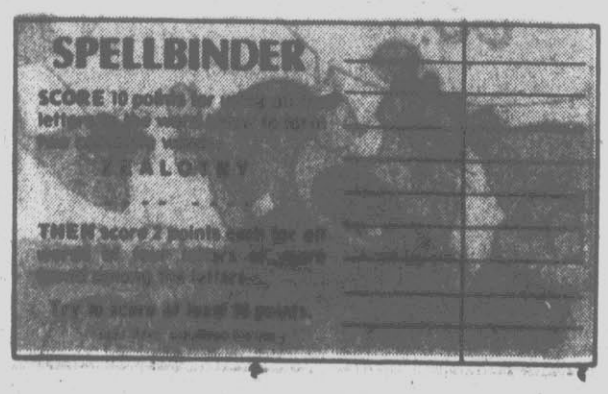

The number I am thinking of is twenty four

SLOW MOVER! Our young friend's steed above isn't known to hurry. What can it be? Insert lines dot to dot to see.

TUNED IN! It's lots of fun to dance on ice to music of one's choice. Add these colors: 1—Red. 2—Dk. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. purple. 8—Dk. green.

Our Story: THE MYSTERIOUS CASE OF THE PENNIES HAS PIQUED ALETA'S CURIOSITY. NIGHT AFTER NIGHT SHE SLIPS AWAY AND PROWLS THE DRAFTY HALLS OF VIKINGSHOLM. SEEKING WHAT? SHE DOES NOT KNOW. WEEKS GO BY, AND THE MYSTERY DEEPENS.

AND EVERY MORNING MORE PENNIES ARE FOUND, ALWAYS EXUDING THE SAME FRAGRANT BOUQUET. WHAT CAN IT MEAN?

MEANWHILE, ACROSS THE WINTRY SEA, MORDRED HAS SECURED HIS THRONE. NOW, DRIVEN BY GREED, HE RAISES TAXES AND SENDS OUT HIS THUGS TO COLLECT. PEASANTS, WHO CANNOT PAY, BARRICADE THEMSELVES INSIDE THEIR COTTAGES. THE POOR FOOLS.

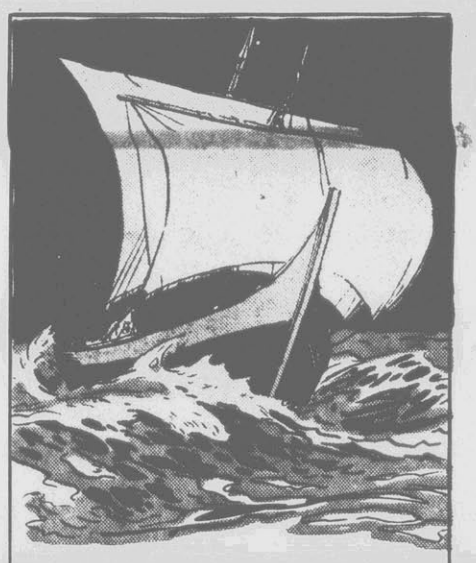

MORDRED'S AUTUMN CAMPAIGN HAD DESTROYED THE HARVEST. NOW, IN MIDWINTER, FAMINE STRIKES, THEN DISEASE. BUT THE USURPER DOES NOTHING FOR THE VICTIMS, EXCEPT EVICT THEM WHEN THEY ARE TOO WEAK TO WORK. HE SEEMS BENT ON DESPOILING HIS NEW KINGDOM.

"BETTER TO REIGN IN HELL THAN SERVE IN HEAVEN," THE POET HAD SAID, AND MORDRED WAS QUICK TO AGREE. IN THE RUINS OF THE CITY OF MARVEL, HE WALLOWS IN IMPERIAL DECADENCE. BUT MORDRED WILL NOT REST EASY UNTIL HE HAS SETTLED ACCOUNTS WITH ARTHUR AND PRINCE VALIANT. IT IS TIME TO SET HIS PLAN IN MOTION.
