Temperatures Hit 4 Below In Pitt

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Today was the first time many area residents saw the thermometer dip into a deficit.

A record-smashing low of 4 degrees below zero drove electrical usage sky high today and froze water pipes until they burst. Although no official records for local temperatures are available, Greenville Utilities employees who monitor weather equipment say the low of minus 4 degrees recorded just before dawn today is the coldest reading they remember. By mid-morning, the mercury had risen to a mere zero degrees.

GUC personnel gauged the early morning wind chill factor at minus 45 degrees — cold enough to freeze exposed skin in a short period of time. That temperature range, combined with the one inch of snow GUC recorded Sunday, made today a hazardous time to venture outside the house.

Department of Transportation officials warned that driving remained hazardous today because of streaks of ice that lined roads in the county. "We hope by the end of the day we will have all the pavement in the county bare," according to C.L.

Haislip, assistant division engineer for DOT. "We put out salt on the main routes Sunday but the temperatures dropped so low last night it stopped the action of the salt."

Haislip said the western part of Pitt County had more accumulation of ice than other areas and that DOT workers were continuing to salt roadways today.

In Greenville, Public Works Director Mayo Allen said his department was working on problem areas "as quick as we get calls about them." Some streets are "still dangerous," he noted, "particularly shady spots and curves." Allen advised motorists to use extreme caution and to stay off streets if possible.

Greenville's sanitation service will be delayed one day due to the cold, he said, and the city's bus service also got a late start today. "The biggest problem we've had is equipment that won't start," Allen said. "Another is garbage cans that are frozen to the ground in some areas."

The cold also played havoc with Greenville Utilities equipment, according to Superintendent Malcolm

Green of the electrical department. "When we went to crank the trucks we found out they wouldn't crank and once they did, the buckets wouldn't crank up because the hydraulic fluid was frozen," Green said.

When the mercury hit its 4 below reading early today, a utilities worker was stuck in a bucket 30 feet in the air for around 15 minutes, Greene said, when the truck that powers the bucket cut off and refused to crank. The worker was finally lowered unharmed, he said.

but the incident caused some tense moments "when we couldn't get a truck to crank to get him down."

Not only did the cold hamper utility repairs, it sent electrical peaks soaring to levels Green said were "absolutely phenomenal." At 9 a.m. GUC reported a peak usage of 180 megawatts — 40 megawatts higher than a normal cold weather peak. "In late 1983 during the Christmas cold snap we hit a peak of 140 megawatts," Green said. "We

FIRST SNOW FOR 1985 — Rob MacKenna and his sister, Holly, of Martinsborough Road have a snow fight Sunday afternoon after the first significant snowfall of 1985 for this area. A blast of arctic air blew into North Carolina Sunday, bringing one to three inches of snow across the Piedmont and Coastal Plain and temperatures that dipped well below zero. Greenville's low was listed at 4 below. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

WINTER'S WHITE — Temperatures dropped rapidly Sunday morning as a winter storm moved across North Carolina, leaving snow in its trail. The white stuff hid a treacherous coating of ice on streets and roads but added beauty to the countryside, as this view of Green Mill Run in Greenville clearly shows. ### REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

HOSPITAL BED NEEDED

The Falkland Church of God has asked Hotline to appeal for the donation of a hospital bed or money gifts toward the purchase or rental of a hospital bed for Robert Lee Buck. Buck has just come home after being hospitalized since Jan. 4 for injuries sustained in a head-on collision on North Green Street. Anyone wishing to help is asked to call 752-1966.

WITNESS APPEAL

Jim Blocker has asked Hotline to appeal for information about a hit-and-run accident in the Sheraton Hotel parking lot Thursday, Dec. 6, between 6 and 9 p.m. Blocker's white Mercedes was hit in the rear by the vehicle which did not stop. Anyone who witnessed the accident is asked to call him at 746-4231.

Car Hits Bus On Icy Road

A Greenville driver and her two passengers were injured Sunday when her car hit a bus which skidded into its path near Frog Level on U.S. 264 west of Greenville.

Trooper John Tomer said Mary Ross and her passengers, Bernice Edwards and William Nanney, both of Greenville, were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital following the 2 p.m. accident. Neither the bus driver, identified as Terry Weatherington of Washington, N.C., nor any of his passengers was injured. The bus, owned by the Seashore Transportation Co., reportedly was chartered by a group headed for ski slopes near Boone.

Tomer quoted Weatherington as saying he was braking for a turning car in front of him when the bus skidded on ice sideways into the path of the car. Tomer said he filed no charges.

Stores See Sunday Rush

By JANE WELBORN

Milk, eggs, bread. The grocery list for snow-covered shoppers in the Greenville area contained those staple items, as well as canned foods and soft drinks, according to area supermarket managers.

When snow began to fall Sunday morning, Greenville area residents flocked to grocery stores and supermarkets to stock up on food. Local grocery managers agreed that sales were higher than on a usual Sunday.

"When you've got bad weather, people storm the grocery store," said Larry Rast, manager of the Big Star in Farmville. "I don't know why. When you get a little bit of snow, people are afraid they will be snowed in for days."

"We opened at 10 a.m. and people started pouring in. At a quarter of 10, people were waiting at the door," Rast added.

He said that from 10 a.m. until 3 or 4 p.m., the store was a "mad house."

Gamblers Plane Crashes Near Reno

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A chartered Lockheed Electra airplane carrying up to 74 people to Minneapolis after a gambling junket crashed and burned shortly after takeoff early today, and at least three people survived, authorities said.

The pilot of Galaxy Airlines Flight 203 had reported vibration and wanted to return to the airport, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Ed Pinto in Washington, D.C.

A sheriff's deputy said he saw the plane on fire before the crash, said Washoe County Sheriff Vince Swinney. He said 68 passengers and six crew members were scheduled to be on the flight, but he was not sure whether all had actually boarded.

The plane took off from Reno Cannon International Airport at 1:05 a.m. PST and crashed 2½ miles from the airport, a couple of miles south of downtown Reno, Pinto said.

The plane crashed about half a mile from a large apartment complex but did not hit any living quarters, a Red Cross official said. Four people on the ground suffered minor injuries, Swinney said.

"It was really shocking. The plane never seemed to get off the ground," said Mark Brenner of Reno.

Brenner, who was driving by the scene of the crash, near U.S. 395, said everything was engulfed in flames.

The plane crashed in an open field, then skidded past a store, through a recreational vehicle dealership and onto a busy highway.

Brenner said one person, burned beyond recognition, ran from the airplane crying, "help me, help me," and was rolled in the dirt by passers-by. He was taken to a hospital, but his condition was not immediately known.

"The pilot notified the tower that he was experiencing some vibration and wanted to come back," Pinto

"The next thing we know he was down two and a half miles from the airport."

Swinney and hospital officials said three people from the plane survived, including a maintenance employee of the airline.

In Minneapolis, where the plane had been scheduled to land at 5:45 a.m. CST, friends and relatives had gathered to meet the flight.

Pinto said the plane was a Lockheed Electra 188, a four-engine turboprop with a passenger capacity of 96.

"The aircraft is Galaxy charter, a

Awards Planned

The Winterville Jaycees are now accepting applications for their annual DSA Banquet. The following awards will be given, all for outstanding services by young persons. These are for: farmer, educator, law enforcement officer, firefighter, rescuer, youth of year, citizen of year, and a recipient for the Distinguished Service Award.

Persons interested in making nominations are to contact: Steve Evans, chairman, 355-2727, or 355-2035 (after 6) for more information or to suggest nominations.

Deadline for nomination is 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 23.

Arrests

Police arrested two men accused of attempting to break into the Discount Shoe Outlet on Ninth Street, at the Washington Street intersection, about 4:49 a.m. Sunday, but are continuing their investigation of a break-in reported at the same store this morning.

Cpl. Chet Jernigan said Tony Pernelle Ross, 17, of 418 Bonner's Lane and Leslie Todd Ennis, 17, of 1206 Clark St. were charged with attempted breaking and entering shortly after they allegedly threw a rock through a window of the shoe store.

Officers said shoes also were taken in a break-in at the same store which was reported at 4:22 a.m. today.

Revival

The Christian Mission Chapel will sponsor a revival from Monday through Friday beginning each night at 7:30. Evangelist Everette T. Murray will conduct the five-night revival.

Rose Exams

J.H. Rose High School students will take their exams during the next two days. The schedule is: Tuesday, first and second periods; Wednesday, third and fourth periods.

Thursday and Friday will be observed as student holidays. Fifth and sixth periods will be given Jan. 28. Students exempt from exams do not attend Tuesday, Wednesday or next Monday.

Bike Meeting

The Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the first floor conference room of the municipal building. The meeting is open to the public.

Canceled

The meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education, scheduled originally for tonight, has been canceled. A make-up meeting date will be announced later.

Larceny

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said Greenville police arrested two men on larceny charges shortly after the theft of a beer keg from 300B-1 Kings Row apartments was reported about 3:20 a.m. Saturday.

Mendenhall said George Franklin Whitfield III, 22, and Mark Shane Bishop, 20, both of Hamlet, were taken into custody about 3:25 a.m. at the intersection of Third and Jarvis streets in connection with the incident.

Officer G.W. Williams said Bishop also was charged with resisting arrest.

Nurses Meeting

The Coastal Plains Occupational Health Nurses Association will hold a business meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

Promoted

Col. Thomas Edwards, son of Mrs. Hal Edwards of Ayden, has been promoted to deputy chief of staff for personnel and administration at Fort Ritchie, Md. Edwards supervises all aspects of enlisted and officer personnel management, command safety and civilian personnel advisory responsibilities.

COL. THOMAS EDWARDS
Edwards graduated from The Citadel in Charleston, S.C., with a bachelor of science degree in education. He received his master's degree in public administration from the University of Missouri in Kansas City.

Edwards has served 22 years in the Army and has held a variety of jobs, including assistant professor of military science, historian, and division adjutant general. He and his wife, Jane, have two sons who are currently attending North Carolina State University, and two daughters. They live in Hagerstown, Md.

Fireman Honored

Gordon L. Prescott, secretary-treasurer of the Winterville Community Rural Fire Association, has been named Pitt County Fireman of the Year for being a "loyal and dedicated fireman."

GORDON L. PRESCOTT
Prescott, who joined the Winterville Volunteer Fire Department in 1978, has volunteered 178 hours service to the department. He has attended 12 departmental meetings, four county association meetings and three Eastern Firemen's Association meetings. He completed a volunteer fire service management course at Wilson Community College.

As secretary-treasurer, Prescott spends 10 to 12 hours a week attending to departmental business and "can always be counted on to help out with any maintenance work on the fire trucks, assistance needed on training or any other function concerning our fire department."

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Agricultural Extension Agent

Everyone who produces anything or anybody who sells any type of commodity has a dream. That dream is to have a whole lot of something that no one else has and everybody wants. This means that the seller can charge whatever he wants to for the commodity. This does not occur too often.

A situation that does occur occasionally is one when a grower produces a commodity with no marketing outlet established before planting. There are numerous instances each year where vegetable crops are planted, tended to all season and then not harvested because of the lack of a market outlet. This is regrettable because it shows that eastern North Carolina farmers have the expertise to grow many different horticultural crops but do not possess the marketing skills necessary to sell the product.

The point is, it is relatively easy to grow a vegetable but often difficult to market it. Tobacco farmers are, by and large, very skilled technically in crop production. Unfortunately, they are unskilled in marketing.

It is very difficult to find horticultural markets that are not already crowded with fair, good or even excellent quality local produce. Local farmers markets are sometimes not appropriate for larger farmers needs. As a result, contacts must be sought out by a grower, production arrangements finalized between grower and buyer and then an orderly and efficient production program initiated.

Crop diversification has been popular as a word to ease the financial burden of eastern North Carolina farmers in the last few years. Information is available on the production of many commodities for agricultural extension offices. The market contacts are more difficult to arrange.

Any grower who would like to look more into crop diversification, alternative cash crops and more economical production of the traditional crops we grow should contact the Pitt County Extension Office at 752-2934 to arrange a time to discuss this possibility.

One good meeting to begin this information-gathering procedure would be the record-keeping workshop scheduled for Jan. 29 at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth St. The proposed agenda includes an outlook for 1985, hedging and agricultural options and how to start and use a good record-keeping system. For further information on attending call the office at 752-2934 by Tuesday.

Break-Ins

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of four break-ins reported to the department over the weekend.

Officer J.E. Fleming said $15 in change was taken from Coggins Tire Center on Greenville Boulevard in a break-in reported at 8 a.m. Saturday, while Officer M.J. Nobles said a quantity of change was taken from 2604 Crockett Drive in a break-in reported at 7:56 a.m. Sunday.

Officer Officer W.A. Moore said a kerosene heater, seven cases of beer and two cases of wine were taken from 602 Bonner's Lane in a break-in reported at 9:15 p.m. Sunday. Officer S.D. Furr said a television set and jewelry were taken from a dwelling at the intersection of 11th and Lawrence streets in a break-in reported at 7:50 p.m. Sunday.

Exams Rescheduled

Pitt County school officials announced today that mid-year exams will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday beginning at the normal school schedule.

Exams were scheduled to begin today but schools closed due to extreme cold and treacherous road conditions. Schools will reopen Tuesday at the regular times.

Thursday was originally designated a teacher workday but now will be a regular school day for students and teachers, officials say.

Council Workshop

The Greenville City Council will hold a workshop session at 5:30 p.m. today in the first floor conference room of the Municipal Building, corner of West Fifth and Washington streets.

Council members are scheduled to discuss an affirmative action plan with the Human Relations Council, hear a police department update, a review of 1984 accomplishments and a report on the North Carolina League of Municipalities' legislative policy.

Donation

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital House Staff Auxiliary has made a $125 donation to the Ronald McDonald House.

This money was raised primarily with a Doctor's Day project — the sale and delivery of carnations to area physicians. The auxiliary is composed of spouses of residents serving at PCMH. Barbara Woods accepted the check for the Ronald McDonald House. Construction of the house is expected to begin in June.

WHEN DENTURES NEED A CHECKUP

For most people, it takes a while to get used to wearing full dentures. Once they achieve a degree of comfort and usefulness, you may think you no longer need help from your dentist. Far from true!

The issues on which dentures rest are changing constantly. Sometimes the ridges that support dentures recede and shrink, causing the dentures to loosen. When this happens, your dentures will have to be adjusted to fit properly again.

Dentures have to be kept clean and free of deposits or they can have an adverse effect on the health of the mouth. This is another reason for regular check-ups. A minor irritation can cause infection and inflammation of the gums.

Like any device that is subject to constant wear, it has to be properly maintained. Occasionally, dentures must be relined, and if your mouth undergoes major changes, it may be necessary for you to be fitted with new dentures. Full dentures solve the problem of missing teeth, but they need periodic checkups, just like real teeth do.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126. Greenville 752-5126. Vanceboro 244-1179

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

For gals and guys who take a vested interest in their knit wardrobes, here is a fashion right pullover to add a special flair to your favorite separates. It is a special design for you, created by the Craft Yarn Council of America — an organization of major American yarn spinners dedicated to fashionable ideas for you and your family.

The sweater is designed to be knitted from worsted-weight acrylic yarns, and the directions are for finished chest measurements ranging from 34 inches to 40 inches for women and from 40 inches to 46 inches for men.

To obtain directions for making the Fair Isle vest, send your request for leaflet No. KL-0120 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0120 by sending a check or money order for $11.50 for women's sizes or $13 for men's sizes to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, wintuk yarn in three colors and full instructions for all sizes. Off-white is used for the background with the following combinations of contrast colors available: Colonial Blue/Cranberry; Camel/Walnut; Light Rose/Dark Rose. Please specify your color choice.

Technically speaking, Fair Isle knitting usually combines only two colors and is worked on fairly fine yarns. In common usage, however, it has come to mean almost any charted knitting where more than one color is used. So if language and history buffs will forgive me, I will use the term for all such knitted designs.

If you have never done this type of knitting, you're in for a treat! It can be a sleep robber, though, as you are likely to keep doing "just one more row" as you watch the fascinating patterns develop from your yarns and needles.

Even if you have been knitting for only a short while, there are very few new things to learn in order to work Fair Isle Patterns.

On most patterns of this type, you will be told to twist the yarns when changing colors and to carry strands not in use loosely across the back of the work. And even if this is not specified, you should do so.

To "twist the yarns" simply means this: when you finish with one color, drop that strand and pick up the strand of the next color to be used from under the strand you just dropped. This twists one strand over the other and prevents holes in your work. If there are more than three stitches between any color change, it is wise to twist the yarns after every third stitch by draping the yarn not in use over the one you are using.

To carry the yarns not in use loosely across the back means that each time you pick up another color, you must be careful not to pull the first strand tight. If you do, your design will pucker, and no amount of blocking will take out the pucker.

Most knitters will work in this fashion, holding only one color at a time. But those more advanced knitters who know how to knit in both the usual way (holding the yarn in the right hand) and in the Continental fashion (holding the yarn in the left hand), can use the method known as stranding.

To do this, hold the color that is to be used over the larger span of stitches in the right hand and the color used for the smaller number of stitches in the left. When you are knitting with the color held in the right hand, pass your needle under the contrast strand before one stitch, and then under the same strand for the next stitch. This gives you a woven effect on the wrong side that actually makes it a superior method to use.

Giving Mother More Personal Time Is Gift

DEAR ABBY: It is Christmas Eve. I have just finished wrapping my mother's gift—a large, expensive color TV. She is elderly and living on Social Security, and she'll love it.

But I have just decided to give her another, more important gift: the gift of myself.

I will drive her to the supermarket instead of letting her walk to a high-priced convenience store.

I will take her to the long-running play she wants to see, which I have seen five times.

I will invite her to dinner more often, not just on holidays and special occasions.

I will curb my anger at her forgetfulness, and try not to answer a request on short notice with, "I don't have the time."

And above all, I will tell her I love her—something I haven't done in years.

I have read many, many letters in your column from people like me—full of regret after their parents were gone. In this case, it's not too late.

As I write this I am in tears at my thoughtlessness. But thank God they are not tears of grief at my mother's funeral. Please sign me ...
JUST WOKE UP IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: Although this is too late for Christmas, I have some advice for your readers that is applicable all year.

When the mail carrier leaves mail for someone not living at your address, i.e. mail for 913 South Elm St. delivered to 913 North Elm St., do not write "Wrong Address" on the envelope and drop it into a mailbox!

A postal employee may not know that the letter was delivered to the wrong address—he may assume that it was incorrectly addressed, in which case the letter will be returned to sender, if there is a return address on the envelope. If there is no return address on the envelope, it will go to the dead-letter office.

So instead of writing "Wrong Address" or "Not for This Address" on the letter (or package), write "Delivered to Wrong Address," then place it where your mail carrier, who probably made the error in the first place, can see it and deliver it to the correct address.

JIM MILLER, POSTMASTER,
JUNCTION CITY, KAN.

DEAR POSTMASTER: Thanks for the helpful information.

DEAR ABBY: Our beautiful college sophomore came home for the Christmas holidays, and her father and I were thrilled to see her. We live in the Midwest, and she goes to an Eastern college where she's a top student.

Now for the bombshell. She told me that she had had an abortion two months ago! I nearly dropped dead. I didn't even know she wasn't still a virgin. She said she had been intimate with two boys—both college students. Worse yet, she wasn't sure which one got her pregnant. (I am shaking so hard as I write this, I can hardly hold the pen.)

Of course I forgave her, and I told her to go to confession. She said she had already gone. She begged me not to tell her father.

Why, oh why did she tell me? There is nothing I can do about it except feel rotten. How I wish she hadn't told me! Should I tell my husband? He would be crushed. I feel very guilty keeping this from him because we've always been so close.

Please tell me what to do. I don't think I can handle this alone.

SICK AT HEART

DEAR SICK: Tell your priest, tell your God, and if that doesn't lighten your burden, talk to a counselor, but please don't tell your husband. It would be a kindness to spare him the heartache you are experiencing.

Justice

It is a common trait, we suspect, for people to look on justice as enjoying an even-handed quality; that when someone cites instances of human flaws and errors, there would inevitably also be instances of exemplary actions and services to others.

Sen. William Proxmire over the years has acquired a degree of notoriety in his self-appointed role of judge and jury in bestowing his mythical "golden fleece" award on those he finds guilty of abusing their positions of trust to fleece the public. It has always been a one-sided form of judgment.

So we were almost stunned to read the senator had done an about-face and awarded a "golden star" to the Federal Reserve Board chairman, crediting him with achieving the defeat and retreat of inflation to less than 4 percent.

The change of pace was welcome, but the choice of saluting Paul Volcker rests on shaky ground. The difficulty stems from all the uncertainty as to precisely what turned the tide against inflation in the United States. It could have been any one or group of policies and people that were decisive.

(You could lay odds an army of economists would like the answer, too. It would provide a wonderful prescription the next time inflation reared its head.)

And, lest we forget, there is another saying — "justice is blind" that might be applicable. Its interpretation could cast a shadow of doubt on the validity of all of Proxmire's golden fleeces, past and future.

Withdrawal

Preliminary Israeli plans for a troop withdrawal from Lebanon are a long way from becoming an accomplishment. Anything could happen to upset the tentative timetable.

True, the military presence is an abrasive element in the Lebanese search for domestic peace and tranquility, but there are a number of other factors behind the civil warfare which has plagued the land.

Much of the Middle East is embroiled in those underlying frictions; and one could trace some of those basic irritants back to competing interests of the United States and the Soviet Union.

So the Israeli presence is just one of many and varied root causes. Still, it would be a faintly hopeful note if even one irritant were resolved.

If the land of Lebanon is ever freed from becoming a battleground for outside elements, there is no certainty rivals within that country could or would lay down their arms.

Selection Of Judges May Change

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — All of a sudden, momentum is growing for a basic change in the system under which North Carolina selects its judges.

The judicial selection process was neither an issue in the recent gubernatorial campaign where it went almost unmentioned nor did it come under any in-depth public scrutiny during the second administration of former Gov. Jim Hunt.

But several recent developments have sparked renewed interest in a system called "merit selection." First, a Republican governor was elected and with the potential to serve eight years in office, he scared a lot of Democrats. Second, Chief Justice Joseph Branch of the N.C. Supreme Court said in a television interview that one of the things he'd like to accomplish before his approaching retirement is the implementation of a merit selection system. Third, Hunt made a pair of controversial appointments to the Court of Appeals.

Martin's administration is now openly advocating changes in the selection process. Currently, the governor can appoint just about anyone he wants. Hunt had initiated his own system which he said was based on merit, but it would not be binding on Martin or any future governor.

The N.C. Courts Commission, which reports to the Legislature, is now getting into the act. It has revived the 1979 merit selection bill which then-Rep. Parks Helms, the commission's chairman, introduced. That bill never got out of committee. The bill has been changed slightly to make it mesh with current law and it appears likely that it will be introduced again in the 1985 session with the commission's blessing. Martin's ideas appear to be very similar to the merit selection bill before the commission.

Merit selection is designed to replace the politics of the judicial selection process with wisdom. In theory, men and women of character gather to choose the best lawyers in their communities as nominees to the governor. The governor, presented with a list of three candidates, then chooses his favorite. When the next election rolls around, the voters decide whether or not that judge can retain his job. Only the judge's name appears on the ballot and the voters say either yes or no. The system is often called the Missouri Plan because it originated in that state.

Branch told the commission that the current system leads to "very political appointments." He, himself, he reminded the commission, was former Gov. Dan Moore's campaign manager and Moore appointed him to the high court.

Once in office, the judge is supposed to cut his political ties. But he can't, Branch said, because he has to run for re-election. "It is very difficult for a man who is running for political office not to get involved in politics. It is very difficult for a judge to raise enough money to compete without having to call on lawyers."

Branch argues that a merit system allows people in the communities, where lawyers and judges are personally known, to start the nomination process. "A weakness in the present system is that nobody knows you. You're nominated locally but you are elected statewide."

"A person with some money and a lot of charisma can get elected statewide regardless of whether or not he knows any law," Branch warned the commission.

The N.C. Bar Association has made passage of a merit selection program its top priority for the coming legislative session and its leader, Allen Head, told the commission that such a system "gives us a greater assurance of excellence (in our judges) than any other system. Many states have gone to a merit selection process and I don't know of any that have changed back."

The Choice Of An Inaugural Date

If anyone is wondering why the inauguration of the president of the United States was postponed from Sunday, January 20, to Monday the 21st, all they have to do is go back to their history books and read about the creation of the Constitution of the United States.

Fifty-five of the founding fathers met in Philadelphia in the summer of 1787 to write the greatest document in the history of mankind. It wasn't easy because every paragraph was fought over to protect the interests of the individual states.

One of the biggest stumbling blocks was when to swear in the president of the country. The suggested date for his inauguration was January 20, and there didn't seem to be any argument about it until John Adams of Massachusetts stood up and said, "Suppose January 20th falls on a Sunday, the same day as the Super Bowl is to be played? Do we still hold the president's inauguration on that day?"

The founding father from Rhode Island said, "I say verily the inauguration of the president of the United States must have precedence over the Super Bowl."

A founding father from Pennsylvania, who also owned a piece of the Philadelphia Eagles, jumped up and cried, "The American people will never stand for it. They didn't fight a bloody revolution to see the Super Bowl be moved from Sunday to Monday. I say verily the Super Bowl be played on its traditional Sunday and the president have his inauguration at a less auspicious time."

Another founding father from Pennsylvania said, "Speaking for the Pittsburgh Steelers, I fully concur."

The founding father from New Jersey, who never dreamed the New York Giants and the New York Jets would one day move to his state, took the floor. "How can the United States become the most powerful nation in the world, when it would put off the inauguration of its leaders to pander to the sports tastes of its countrymen?"

This enraged the representative from Georgia, who had received PAC money from the Atlanta Falcons. "Nobody in my state cares when they inaugurate a president, but everyone knows you only play a Super Bowl on Sunday. I cannot go back home and ask my people to ratify this Constitution if the day of the Super Bowl has to be postponed in the name of political expediency."

The founding father from North Carolina hooted. "What difference does it make to you? The Atlanta Falcons will never get to the Super Bowl anyway."

The house broke into boing and laughter.

George Washington, who was presiding and had no idea that someday an NFL team would be named after him, said, "I think we should table this matter for the moment until we can speak to football commissioner Pete Rozelle, to see if his feet are in cement on the January 20th date."

John Adams rose and said, "I can speak for Commissioner Rozelle, as I represented the New England Patriots at the last league meeting. He said he would be breaking faith with the millions of people in the 13 states if the game was not held on a Sunday two weeks after the playoffs."

The founding father from Delaware roared, "The president comes first — first in peace, first in war, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Alexander Hamilton, who had season tickets to all the New York Giants games, said, "The delegate can easily say that since Delaware could never support a NFL franchise if every person in the state came to every game."

The constitutional convention was in shamble and about to disintegrate when James Madison offered his famous compromise. "Gentlemen, in deference to the states that do not have NFL franchises, I propose we do not put it in writing that the Super Bowl have precedence over the inauguration of the president. But let us include in the minutes that it was the will of this body that if the 20th of January falls on a Sunday we wanted the Super Bowl to be played first."

The motion was adopted and the Constitution was saved. That is why this year President Ronald Reagan, a strict constitutionist, was sworn in privately on Sunday but his inauguration, according to the wishes of the founding fathers, will be held on Monday.

Tax Reform Questionable

WASHINGTON — On its surface, the stunning Baker-for-Regan-for-Baker switch moves an ardent booster of tax simplification and reform capped by a "flat" personal income tax into the seat of White House power, a step viewed by some insiders as assuring President Reagan's all-out fight for tax reform.

But Treasury Secretary Donald Regan's abrupt shift to the White House chief of staff job now held by James Baker III, and Baker's shift to the Treasury, puts a less certain fiscal hand at the Treasury's helm. While Regan has been President Reagan's truest anti-tax follower for the past four years, hanging tough when the going got toughest, Baker has been accused by conservative Republicans of bailing out of the president's ardent anti-tax-hike posture at least twice and cooperating with higher-tax forces from the orthodox Republican mainstream.

Thus the questions asked here tonight are: Will Baker prove to be as hard-minded an anti-tax force at Treasury as Regan has been? And will Regan, as the less-than-all-powerful chief of staff — at least at the start — exercise his anti-tax clout there with as much impact as he has exerted in the Treasury?

President Reagan's modified support for Regan's tax reform package recently began to give the plan high-level parentage. That argues in favor of the thesis that Regan's switch to the White House could indeed help give his tax proposals top standing for a major Reagan second-term tax-reform campaign.

What has shaped the President's clear move toward all-out endorsement of the Regan plan is that Regan has been steadily changing it, mainly to meet fundamental objections by organized business lobbies. The key direction of these changes is to lower the cost of capital accumulation for investment, thus winning the allegiance of powerful business groups. Concessions drafted by business are now being wanted on two major issues: depreciation and capital gains.

That will breed a new political problem: the threat that liberal Democrats, who loved the original Regan plan, may bail out. Without tight bipartisan cooperation between the administration and mainstream congressional Democrats, tax simplification will not survive.

A backdrop of the Baker-Regan switch, the best secret of the Reagan administration, was laid out last October for conservative Republicans by a Treasury insider who predicted that Regan would not stay in his job much longer. Baker had told the president at least several weeks ago that the job he wanted was Treasury. What may have triggered the timing was Interior Secretary William Clark's surprise decision to return to California, costing Reaganites their most valued ally.

Strength For Today

"When the burnt offering began, the song of the Lord began with trumpets" (II Chronicles 29:27).

The picture is that of the Jewish people assembled in the temple for worship. When the burnt offering is offered up; then comes a burst of jubilant music. The song of the ministering priests rises, and with this the sound of trumpets. Then the worshippers respond not in a perfunctory manner but with genuine delight. To use the words of an ancient saint, "the inward self leaps with joy, the soul is completely one with God." The act of sacrifice has culminated in a jubilant spirit. Sacrifice should always lead us to joy.

If we sacrifice because we love God and our fellow men, because there is some great need to be met, then God is ready with his rewards to pour them bountifully into our hearts.

Public Forum

To the editor:
I am appalled that 21 women's health clinics across the country have been attacked by anti-abortion arsonists this year. What is even more astonishing, however, is the Reagan administration's refusal to investigate this national wave of violence.

The FBI gives highest priority to investigating acts of terrorism, which the agency defines as "the unlawful use of force or violence against persons or property to intimidate or coerce a government, the civilian population or any segment thereof, in furtherance of political or social objectives." This is a perfect description of the violence, threats and harassment being directed at abortion clinics, health care personnel, and American women exercising their constitutional right to obtain birth control or abortion services.

However, FBI Director William Webster is justifying his refusal to investigate by claiming that anti-abortion arson and harassment is not terrorism. This defies common sense, as well as the agency's own definition of the word.

Is the Reagan administration selectively enforcing the law? The president doesn't believe that women should have the right to determine for themselves whether and when to have children. Is that opinion leading him to overlook the acts of violence committed by those who agree with his position?

If 21 churches, polling places or department stores had been set on fire this year, government officials would be rushing to denounce and calling for investigations of the violence. Why do they do nothing about these acts of violence directed against women?

Republicans Trying To Avoid Infighting

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's selection of Bob Bradshaw as chairman of the state Republican Party exemplifies the effort he and other party leaders are making to avoid a return to the bitter infighting of the 1970s.

"Those catfights were the one thing that kept people from joining (the GOP) in the '70s," said a top party official who asked not to be identified. "Now, I think ... the Helms people, the Martin people, the Holshouser people — they all want to project a better image."

In stark contrast to 1976, when a disagreement over the chairmanship caused an already simmering feud between the party's conservative and moderate wings to boil over, Martin last week chose a candidate apparently acceptable to both sides.

The party's executive committee will elect a successor to outgoing Chairman David Flaherty on Jan. 26, but the committee traditionally abides by the wishes of the titular leader, who is Martin.

Insiders say Martin preferred state Sen. Cass Ballenger of Hickory, but decided against him because of his past clashes with the National Congressional Club, Sen. Jesse Helms' organization. Former U.S. Rep. Eugene Johnston, who managed President Reagan's state campaign, also drew opposition from Helms loyalists.

Helms is said to have supported J.A. Dalpiaz of Gastonia, chairman of the 10th District GOP. But when Martin asked if Bradshaw would be acceptable, Helms agreed. Martin also sought and received approval of Bradshaw from Sen. John East.

"I am satisfied ... that Bradshaw would be acceptable to a wide spectrum of the party" and "bridge all the rivalries" within the GOP, Martin told reporters.

His gesture of consulting with Helms and East — and allowing them, in effect, to help pick the chairman — forestalled what could have been a nasty battle. It suggests that neither Martin nor the two senators relish the thought of a return to 1976, when passions ran so high that former Gov. Jim Holshouser was booted at the state GOP convention and denied a delegate's spot at the Republican National Convention.

The bloodletting — and Watergate — canceled many of the gains made by the Republicans in the Nixon landslide year of 1972, when Helms won his first term and Holshouser became the first GOP governor since the 1890s.

In 1974, all but 10 of the 50 Republicans who had won General Assembly seats two years earlier were defeated. Two of the four GOP congressmen elected in 1972 lost in 1974.

Last November, the Republicans came back. Reagan won over 60 percent of the state's votes; Helms won his third term, defeating Gov. Jim Hunt; Martin became the second Republican governor of the century; five Republicans went to the U.S. House of Representatives; and the GOP doubled its numbers in the state Senate and House.

Although Martin and Helms conducted independent campaigns, they appeared on good terms and often praised each other. Shortly after the election, both announced they would co-chair Operation Switch, a campaign to persuade conservative Democrats to become Republicans.

Bradshaw, a longtime Martin adviser who also has raised money for Helms and served on Sen. John East's campaign finance committee, says the media have exaggerated the party's internal strife. But he said in a telephone interview last week that the current harmonious atmosphere is conducive to party growth.

"The results of the election ... show a desire and ability to work together," he said.

Bradshaw sees his short-term role as consolidating the party's 1984 gains, helping East and the state's five Republican U.S. representatives prepare for the 1986 election.

Later, Bradshaw wants to strengthen the GOP on the grassroots level, improving its local organizations and thus helping Republicans win county and city offices and General Assembly seats long dominated by Democrats.

The best way to do that, of course, is to increase the number of Republicans. Bradshaw's strategy is twofold: pushing longtime conservative Democrats to switch parties and targeting young, first-time voters for special recruiting efforts.

"I think we have the right message; we just need to make sure that it's conveyed properly and articulated well," said Bradshaw.

Health Official Reports 30 Hospitals Endangered

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — At least 30 North Carolina hospitals could face serious financial problems in the next couple years because of rapid changes in the health care system, a state health official says.

"The health care system is going through rapid change, probably more than ever before in the history of this country," said James D. Bernstein, director of rural health services for the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

"The impetus for all this is coming from pressures of a high-quality health-care system balanced against how much the country — the government, individuals — want to pay for it," Bernstein said.

Bernstein declined to identify hospitals facing financial woes. But he said small hospitals are suffering the most.

"Four or five are in real trouble," he said.

On Saturday, the board of Warren General Hospital moved tentatively to close the facility, faced with a declining number of patients and mounting deficits.

With a deficit of $170,000 in its $1.8 million annual operating budget and running in the red by about $30,000 a month, board members said tentative plans called for the hospital to remain closed for at least five to six months. Board members said they hoped to maintain emergency room services during that time, and hope to reopen the facility as a satellite of a larger hospital.

Bernstein said small, rural hospitals have been especially hard-hit because they tend to have a higher percentage of elderly patients on Medicare.

N.C. Bands Lose Inaugural Chance

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Two North Carolina high school marching bands lost their only chance to play a presidential inaugural parade when a winter storm doomed today's procession.

"It's very discouraging not to be able to perform, but it's the only wise decision about the parade," said Mickey Driver, director of the A.L. Brown High School band from Kannapolis. "There's no way anyone could perform in that," he said.

The 209-member band, along with the 156-member Lincolnton High School band, were scheduled to play at President Reagan's second inauguration today, but frigid temperatures and high winds forced cancellation of the parade.

The Presidential Inaugural Committee, besieged by North Carolina's congressional delegation, parents and even a band director's mother, named Kannapolis as the official state representative. They would have marched in the parade with 47 units from other states.

Lincolnton band members would have played on the sidelines at 14th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, two blocks from the president's reviewing stand.

Grace Rohrer Says Lure Of Government 'Strong'

By The Associated Press

Politics didn't fit into Grace Rohrer's plans a year ago, but she said she couldn't resist returning to state government when Gov. Jim Martin appointed her the new secretary of administration.

Ms. Rohrer, who was secretary of cultural resources under former Gov. Jim Holshouser in the 1970s, a year ago was director of development and public relations for the Central for Public Television in Chapel Hill and working on her doctorate.

"The lure of state government was just too strong," said Ms. Rohrer, the first woman to hold a cabinet-level post in North Carolina. "I enjoyed it when I was here before very much. It's exciting to come back into state government because it's challenging, in many ways rewarding and always very controversial."

With no specific changes in mind for the Department of Administration, Ms. Rohrer prefers instead to move slowly.

"It's a very complex organization with programs that are not necessarily relative to each other as in cultural resources," she said.

Agencies in the department include in the Office of Child Day Care Licensing, the Office of State Construction, Commission of Indian Affairs, Office of Marine Affairs, Division of Purchase and Contract, Division of Veteran Affairs, Council on the Status of Women and the Office of Youth Advocacy and Involvement.

"It's going to take a while," she said. "I'm not going to master this in the next month. I am the kind of person who does not jump in and start making decisions. I give myself time to really get a good grip of the situation and the organization before I propose making changes or start making suggestions."

During the early 1970s, Ms. Rohrer encouraged other women to get involved in politics. And in 1974, she was one of three finalists considered for appointment as U.S. Treasurer.

"When I look back as to what (women's involvement) was in 1970 to what it has become, I feel good," she said. "I don't feel we're out of the woods particularly, but now nobody blinks an eye when a woman is appointed or elected."

Prisoner Hangs Self

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 34-year-old Guilford County man charged with driving while impaired hung himself with a scarf in Rockingham County jail on Sunday, authorities said.

Archie Steve White of Greensboro was arrested by the state Highway Patrol near Madison early Sunday morning. He was taken to the Rockingham County jail in Wentworth where he was put in jail about 2:20 a.m., according to Rockingham County Sheriff C.D. Vernon.

White was being held on $200 unsecured bond. Vernon said White could have signed himself out of jail or telephoned someone else to sign him out after four hours of detention.

Vernon said jail officials asked White several times — including Sunday morning at breakfast — if he wanted to leave or call a friend or family member. Each time, he refused.

"He said he didn't want to call anyone," Vernon said. "He said he didn't have anyone to call. When they went in to feed him at lunchtime, the jailer found him hanging."

Vernon said he could offer no explanation for the suicide.

"Two of the jailers talked with him," he said. "He appeared to be all right."

VA Hospitals Cutting Services

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina Veterans Administration medical centers, in following federal regulations, are treating fewer veterans with illnesses unrelated to military service.

"We hate to have to do this," said Margretta Adams, assistant to the director of the Fayetteville VA center. "Most of these veterans have come to depend on us over the years. They have won the right to this treatment, I think."

Federal rules give priority to veterans with service-related ailments, but allow VA hospitals to treat, free of charge, any ailment a veteran might have. The regulations say treatment for nonservice-related illnesses will end after a set number of visits or a time period determined by a VA doctor.

But officials at the state VA centers say those rules weren't being followed rigidly until recently.

"It's not a change in policy," said Jack Humphries, medical administration officer at the Durham VA center. "We're adhering more closely to the guidelines and regulations now. If we don't, things could get totally out of hand."

In 1983, North Carolina's 657,000 veterans made 312,712 outpatient visits to VA medical centers in Durham, Salisbury, Oteen and Fayetteville, records show. Almost 60 percent of those visits were for treatment of ailments not connected to the service.

"This is a problem that is going to get worse," said Phil Elkins, associate director of the Durham center. "The veteran population is getting older, and as they get older, they get sicker."

Joe Cherry, assistant director at the Salisbury center, said outpatient visits this fiscal year are running 14 percent above projections.

"We have to reduce them," Cherry said. "We have told our staff to go by the rules."

However, officials at the centers assured that no veteran requiring emergency treatment will be turned away.

James Collins, 57, of Guilford County, was one of the veterans notified last week that the VA would no longer treat him for ailments not connected to his service in the Navy in World War II.

Inauguration Ceremony Moves Indoors

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the nation's capital shivered in 50-below wind chills, President Reagan moved his inaugural replay indoors, scrapped the traditional parade down snow-strewn Pennsylvania Avenue and prepared to summon the country to an "American renewal" at the dawn of his second term.

With a risk of frostbite facing hundreds of thousands of parade marchers, spectators and guests at an outdoor swearing-in ceremony, Reagan accepted the advice of inaugural planners and doctors and canceled the most spectacular events in a four-day, $12-million extravaganza.

The president was advised that "exposed flesh can freeze within 5-10 minutes" in the capital's record cold. Musical instruments carried by the parade's 43 bands would have been frozen useless.

Today's swearing-in ceremony, a repeat of the oath Reagan recited at the White House on Sunday, was moved from the steps on the west front of the Capitol inside to the ornate Rotunda.

The audience was restricted to the 535 members of Congress, the Cabinet, Supreme Court justices, the nation's governors and the diplomatic corps. The 140,000 invited guests who poured into Washington from every state to witness the 50th presidential inauguration were not allowed to watch.

"Nancy and I are disappointed that the weather in Washington caused this change, but the health and safety of those attending and working at these outdoor events must come before any celebrations," said Reagan, who enjoyed spring-like temperatures with an afternoon high of 56 degrees at his first inauguration four years ago.

This time, overnight temperatures plunged to minus-five to minus-10 degrees in the region, with a wind chill in excess of 50 below, the National Weather Service said. A wind chill as low as minus-30 degrees was expected by afternoon when the parade would have started.

Some 25,000 bleacher seats along the parade route had been sold at costs ranging from $12.50 to $100. Upwards of 300,000 other people had been expected to line the streets to watch for free. Inaugural organizers promised full refunds for bleacher tickets returned by Feb. 10.

The two-story blue and white presidential reviewing stand, built in front of the White House at a cost of more than $1 million for Reagan to watch the parade from behind bullet-proof glass, immediately became Washington's biggest white elephant.

More than 300,000 federal workers who had been given a holiday for security and traffic control purposes still got the day off even though the public ceremonies were canceled.

Reagan said he hoped to see many of the disappointed guests tonight at the nine inaugural balls, the finale of a long weekend of partying and entertainment that filled Washington's plush hotels and expensive restaurants with men in black tie and women draped in fur and jewels.

Even the White House was booked solid, with every guest room occupied by members of the president's family.

"It may be cold outside, but our hearts will always be warmed by the many wonderful memories of thousands of our fellow citizens coming to Washington this weekend to join us as we continue our work to make America great again," Reagan said.

As word of the cancellations spread through town, many Republicans seemed more relieved than disappointed. Larry Laws of Rockville, Md., said, "William Henry Harrison died 18 days after he was inaugurated and the temperature on inauguration day was 14 degrees above zero." (It was actually about a month later and not that cold.) "Mr. Reagan is probably hearty enough to take this cold but I don't think the rest of us are."

Previewing Reagan's inaugural address, outgoing White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said, "There will to some degree be a new call to arms ... the overall theme of American renewal."

Today marked the second time an inaugural parade was canceled because of the cold. It also happened in 1833 at Andrew Jackson's inauguration, said inaugural committee spokesman James Lake.

In this century, bad weather forced William Howard Taft to deliver his inaugural address inside the Capitol, Lake said. That was in 1909.

Inaugural organizers worked throughout the night trying to arrange a ceremony in the suburban Capital Centre coliseum where Reagan and his wife Nancy could thank the 10,578 people — most of them youths — from all 50 states who would have participated in the parade.

Reagan Family Gathers For Inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is bulging with Reagan relatives, a rare reunion for a first family with some well-publicized differences. And despite the inauguration, the president is having to share the spotlight with his 20-month-old granddaughter.

Guests on hand for the inauguration include President Reagan's brother, first lady Nancy Reagan's brother, the Reagans' two children, the two children of his first marriage, a niece and nephew and various in-laws.

But much of the focus is on 20-month-old Ashley Reagan, the granddaughter the president had never seen until Dec. 28 when he met with son Michael in Los Angeles to settle a highly publicized family scrap.

The first lady's press secretary, Sheila Tate, briefing reporters on plans for Sunday's private but televised swearing-in, told reporters there would be 96 and one-half guests in the hall.

The half, she said, would be Ashley on her father's knee. The line got a laugh, and also drew attention to the presence at the White House of Michael, whom Nancy Reagan described in November as estranged from his father.

Actually, there were 94 guests and, instead of sitting on her dad's knee, Ashley was sucking on a bottle in the arms of a baby-sitter in the huge Cross Hall, adjoining the State Floor where the ceremony was held.

Ashley's 6-year-old brother Cameron was the youngest guest at the oath-taking itself. He got last-minute instructions and a kiss on the head from his father before they walked in to take their seats.

Ms. Tate said 14 members of the family were staying at the White House, filling all its bedrooms.

Arctic Blast Ices Nation

By MARK BERNIS
Associated Press Writer

A brutal arctic storm blamed for at least 29 deaths brought record cold to dozens of cities today, pushing the mercury to 17 below zero in Tennessee and into the single digits in Florida, as the blast of frigid air dubbed the Alberta Clipper sent shivers across the eastern half of the nation.

Snow, meanwhile, stretched from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic, stranding motorists and turning highways into ribbons of ice.

"It would probably rank as one of the major cold snaps of the century," said forecaster John Hendrickson in Indianapolis.

In Washington, D.C., today's traditional inaugural parade was canceled at President Reagan's request Sunday after swirling winds, snow and sub-zero wind chills left a frozen white crust on the capital. Reagan's inaugural address and a repetition of his oath-taking were moved inside to the Capitol Rotunda.

Temperatures as low as 9 degrees in Milton, Fla., today and 12 degrees in Tallahassee, posed a major threat to the state's citrus industry and promised a repeat of the 1983 freeze that killed 120,000 acres of trees.

Record low temperatures for the date were set Sunday in at least 57 cities, and by 2 a.m. today, records had shattered in 23 cities in 14 states, including Beckley, W.Va., where it was 21 below — 8 degrees below 1984's coldest ever.

Twenty-five deaths in 10 states since Friday had been blamed on the storm. "Those people who wanted cold weather have it now," forecaster Allen Collins said Sunday in Charleston, S.C., as the low dipped to 12 degrees today. "Now that they have it they're crying for it to be warm again."

In Atlanta temperatures fell to 3 below zero by 10 p.m., after a posting of 7 degrees set a record earlier Sunday. Winds of 25 mph wind made it feel like 35 below zero in Atlanta, the National Weather Service said. The wind chill at Lexington, Ky., was calculated at 60 below zero and in Chicago at minus 80.

"You can't stay out for more than 10 minutes before it starts to go through you," said New York City police Officer Mike Cooke, who was assigned to patrol a concert at Radio City Music Hall on Sunday night but was driven by 4 degree temperatures in a building lobby for warmth.

"I've been walking in and out all night," he said. "It's the coldest I've ever been in my life."

The cold was accompanied by snow as far south as Shreveport, La., and Jackson, Miss., and Tennessee got up to 11 inches over Knox County north of Knoxville.

The cold and snow forced officials in every county in Tennessee to close public schools today.

Freezing rain mixed with sleet and light snow fell on New Orleans Sunday, forcing officials to order all bridges and elevated highways closed today.

Record lows were reported today in Ohio, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Kentucky, Virginia, Louisiana, Florida, the Carolinas and Maryland.

Florida citrus growers readied heaters to keep their groves from freezing as temperatures dropped through northern and central Florida and scattered sleet and light snow fell in the Panhandle.

"Interstate 71 looks like a parking lot, there are so many cars broken down," said police dispatcher Carol Shlander in Blue Ash,

Trial Provides Inmate's View Of Death Row

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — William Groseclose is waiting to die. But death, he says, would be a relief compared with life on Death Row, a "Twilight Zone" with a constant stench, no sense of night or day, no exercise and no hope.

It is a place where getting a pillow to sleep on can be a problem, where cockroaches are the only companions for inmates confined 23 hours a day to windowless cells. It is, some say, like being "entombed."

Tennessee's Death Row is the subject of a federal lawsuit by inmates who contend that conditions amount to cruel and unusual punishment barred by the U.S. Constitution. A judge is expected to decide the issue in a few weeks.

During testimony that ended last week, the state did little to rebut witnesses who offered a revealing glimpse into the bleak life on Death Row that prison consultant Seymour Halleck said was "the worst I've ever seen."

The state contends that the U.S. Constitution requires that inmates receive only "adequate" care, and hinted that Death Row inmates may not be entitled to better conditions.

Inmates, in depositions or court testimony, echoed Halleck's opinion. "Basically, I'm depressed all the time," said Richard Simon, 20, sentenced to death for a 1979 murder.

Michael Dutton, warden of the Tennessee State Prison where the 41 Death Row inmates live, testified that security is a primary reason the condemned men are locked in their cells 23 hours a day with no jobs, educational programs or group religious services and little contact with the outside world.

The cells, from 35 to 44 square feet, are oppressively hot in the summer and cold in the winter and are cockroach-infested, inmates testified.

Halleck, a psychiatrist at the University of North Carolina, said the isolation and lack of sunlight is enough to drive the already desperate men toward "further physical and mental deterioration."

Interviewing inmates on Death Row last December, Halleck said he also felt "entombed," with no sense of night or day. He said the forced idleness "makes for depression and lethargy" and a higher risk of suicide.

Groseclose, on Death Row for 7½ years for hiring four men to murder his wife, said in his deposition that "death can only be a relief to this madness that seems to never end."

"I don't care anymore. It's the Twilight Zone. There is no hope anymore."

Gerald Laney, condemned to die for murder, has slept in his tiny cell with his jacket balled up under his head for the nearly four years he's been on Death Row. He was never issued a pillow.

The warden acknowledged that when a crew filming a movie needed a pillow for a shot on Death Row, several new ones were quickly produced.

Laney, who is illiterate, said he wants to "at least learn the basics" but "they have no program."

Inmates said the prison counselor and chaplain spend little time with Death Row prisoners who, Halleck said, undergo the same "emotional torment" as do cancer victims facing death.

The inmates are seeking improved ventilation, more exercise, better medical care, an end to the constant lockdown and more access for volunteer ministers.

Although conditions have improved somewhat since the lawsuit was filed last June, there are still problems.

Food, always cold because of the distance between the dining room and Death Row, now is heated on a steam table, though Simon said "eggs are always green or brown" and there is "blood on the bone" when chicken is served.

Inmates still eat all their meals in their cells, which stink from open toilets.

Suspect Claims Up To 300 Rapes

MIAMI (AP) — A man who says he has committed up to 300 rapes since 1970 because he felt women and society rejected him was arrested at the home of a rape victim, police said.

Ralph Nathaniel Miller, 45, was charged with burglary and three rapes after his arrest Saturday. Although he claimed responsibility for between 200 and 300 unsolved rapes, he cannot be charged with attacks that happened more than four years ago because of the statute of limitations, according to police.

Miller was released from prison in 1969 after serving five years of a 15-year sentence for rape, records show.

Early Saturday, officers were summoned after a man returning to his home around 1 a.m. noticed a window screen had been removed from the rear door — the same method by which an attacker got into the house Sept. 30, 1984 and raped his wife, police said.

The man alerted his sleeping wife and other family members, who escaped and called police. When officers arrived at the home, the intruder was sexually assaulting the wife's sister, who had been sleeping in another room with her children.

Police chased and caught the man in a yard nearby.

"He's been doing about one rape a week, here and there," said Rape Squad Detective Linda Ares, adding that Miller "has a pretty good memory" about cases he discussed with police.

Miller led Ms. Ares and another detective, Michael Osborn, to locations where he allegedly claimed to have committed 15 rapes.

"He's been doing this for a long time," Osborn said.

Ms. Ares said Miller told her he felt "rejected" by women and "society turned him down."

Mental Health Perspectives

Parent/Child Relationships
by Marsha Mills,
Communications Specialist

Beginning the moment a child is born, his/her parents assume a new role. Parenting, or raising children, is one of the happiest events that can happen in a person's life. It can also be one of the toughest tasks a person encounters. In addition to physical and intellectual needs, a child also has emotional needs such as love, acceptance, understanding, security and praise. As a parent, one should devote time to providing these emotional needs.

Your child needs guidance to forming appropriate behaviors by being disciplined with love, taught social skills (good manners, sharing, listening, etc.) and encouraged to be independent.

The child, in return, should view the parent not only as an authoritative figure, but also as a friend. Communication, the key to effective parenting, greatly enhances the positive relationship between parents and children.

Count Set For Secret Mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — America's first top-secret space shuttle mission edged toward reality today as officials began the countdown to a Wednesday liftoff timed to avoid the prying eyes and ears of Soviet spy satellites.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Pentagon will say only that Discovery will take off between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. Wednesday. Officials are considering opening the countdown to reporters nine minutes before the liftoff, but did not indicate when they would decide.

The Defense Department argues that keeping the precise time classified will make it more difficult for spy satellites and Russian trawlers sitting offshore to monitor the flight. Pentagon officials are especially concerned about photo-reconnaissance or electronic eavesdropping satellites that could record the release of the secret payload carried in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Sources say the liftoff is timed to ensure that no Russian spacecraft is in the area when the payload is deployed.

Once the payload has been released, it will be rocketed into a 22,300-mile-high stationary orbit, out of range of the Soviet satellites.

The countdown, which started at 4 a.m. today, provides no clue to the launch time because the count includes several "hold" periods of unannounced length during which the clock is stopped.

The Defense Department tried to keep the shuttle payload secret, but sources report it is an advanced intelligence-gathering satellite capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and intercepting radio, radio-telephone, microwave and satellite communications.

The satellite, the sources say, is to be parked over the equator south of the Soviet Union, where it will be able to listen in on military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Daredevil Dies In Fall Under Dome

HOUSTON (AP) — A Canadian daredevil, curled up inside a specially designed barrel, plunged from the roof of the AstroDome to his death before 35,000 spectators as the barrel missed a water tank meant to cushion the fall.

Karel Soucek, 37, who in July became the first person in 23 years to go over Niagara's Horseshoe Falls in a barrel, had planned the 180-foot drop Saturday night as part of a Thrill Show and Destruction Derby.

The barrel began spinning as it plunged earthward and clipped the edge of the tank. The impact crushed Soucek's chest and abdomen and fractured his skull, the Harris County medical examiner's office said.

The crowd applauded at first, thinking the stunt was successful, said Brian Becker, a spokesman for Pace Management Corp., which promoted the show. But a hush spread quickly when paramedics were called and Soucek was taken away in an ambulance.

He died at 12:05 a.m. Sunday at Ben Taub Hospital, authorities said.

Becker said the show was still in progress when officials received word that Soucek, who was still alive as he was cut out of the barrel, had died. He said no announcement was made "out of respect for Soucek and his family."

Soucek was to drop into a water tank about 9 feet deep and 12 feet wide, Becker said. But workers said that after Soucek was nailed into the barrel, there were problems stabilizing it.

"It started spinning real bad. After a while the people started getting so impatient that we went ahead and dropped him," said a worker who asked that his name not be used. "Just as we started to release the barrel, it started spinning again."

Instead of landing in the center of the tank, the barrel struck the rim and splashed in.

"The barrel was hoisted to the ground immediately," Becker said, "but we were not aware of the extent of his injuries until he was taken out."

Stuntman Evel Knievel called the stunt "the most dangerous I've ever seen" and said he tried to persuade Soucek to cancel it.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠762 ♥6 ♦AJ6 ♣AK8762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Two spades doesn't describe the playing strength of your hand and a jump to three spades overstates your trump support. Committing the hand to no trump also is rash; if no trump is the right spot, partner should probably declare. And three clubs is used to show a hand with sub-minimum values for a two-over-one response. That leaves only one option. Bid three diamonds and see what develops.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K7632 ♥83 ♦Q62 ♣843
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ Dble ?
What do you respond?
A.—Not only do you have a weak hand, but your right-hand opponent has announced at least four cards in your long suit. If you contemplated anything other than pass, your assets must surely exceed ours.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ ♥A6 ♦Q954 ♣KJ872
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—We can think of all sorts of "clever" bids to make, but none seem any better than a good old-fashioned jump to three no trump. You have tenaces to protect from a lead through, and you should prefer contracting for nine tricks to 11 at five diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠943 ♥A62 ♦KJ1063 ♣AJ
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Since partner is a passed hand, we really can't see how your combined values could stretch to game. Therefore, we would pass. To rebid two diamonds could easily land your side in an inferior contract. You know you have tolerance for partner's clubs. Partner has offered no such guarantee about diamonds.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠754 ♥AQJ5 ♦AJ9 ♣972
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 1 ♦ 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand is no trump oriented, but you are still unsure of a spade stopper. We suggest that you cue-bid two diamonds for the moment. That can't show all that strong a hand because you didn't make an immediate cue-bid. However, it does advise partner that he is free to suggest a no trump contract if he has something in spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ103 ♥J6 ♦Q10 ♣AQ53
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—A difficult choice. Three no trump, two no trump, two clubs and three clubs are all possible. At this vulnerability, we tend to be a little conservative, so we would rule out three clubs and three no trump. Despite the 5-4 distribution in the black suits, this hand is suitable for no trump because of the honors in all-suits, so we would settle for 2 raise to two no trump.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, extending last week's advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which has fallen in five of the past six sessions, was up 4.42 at 1,231.78 after the first half-hour of trading.

Advancing issues took an early 3 to 2 lead over declining issues among those listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Advances in the blue-chip issues have in recent days trailed those in the overall market.

Recent economic reports have indicated that the pace of economic growth is picking up. The government is expected to report later this week on how strong the economy was in the fourth quarter and on consumer prices in December.

The economy grew very rapidly at the beginning of 1984 before slowing significantly in the second half of the year. Worries that the economy could slip into a recession have prompted speculation that the Federal Reserve will accommodate lower interest rates at least in the short term.

In the early going on the NYSE, Baxter Travenol was unchanged at 13 1/4, General Electric was up 1/2 at 61 and ITT was up 1/8 at 31 1/8.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrials fell for a fourth straight session, slipping 1.33 to 1,227.36. But the blue-chip average still finished the week with a gain of 9.27 points as a result of last Monday's 16.45-point rise.

More than three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume slipped to 104.72 million shares from 113.55 million Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 29 to 99.04.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.04 at 211.09.

hit 140 megawatts just before the Superbowl Sunday and didn't get below it at all. When we saw this morning's levels we were completely floored." GUC was activating full load management when the peak was reached, he said.

Despite the cold, GUC had "very few outages" Green said, "and the ones we did have were caused by aluminum wire that shrunk from the cold and split" or an overheated transformer. Outages were in the Stokestown, Stantonsburg Road and Lyncdale areas.

Superintendent Bill Weston of GUC's gas department said Pitt County was not currently affected by problems North Carolina Natural Gas Co. was having with a gas line to the Washington area. "The gas situation in Greenville is pretty good although we do feed off that line," he said. "We've had some meters freeze up and we've called our interruptible customers such as industries but currently we're in good shape."

County and city schools were closed today but both expect to reopen Tuesday on regular schedules. East Carolina University began classes at 10 a.m. and Pitt Community College canceled both day and evening classes. No schedule was available this morning for PCC's Tuesday classes.

Area plumbers reported a large number of calls from customers with frozen or burst pipes today and said they expected more as the county thaws in the next few days. "We've had about 25 calls this morning," according to Dawn Williams of City Plumbing. "That's a whole lot for a Monday."

A spokesman for J.C. Tetterton Plumbing said the company received about eight calls about frozen pipes by mid-morning, unusual for that time of day. The spokesman said more calls were expected.

Highs today remained in the low 20s and lows tonight are expected to dip into single digits again. The forecast calls for highs just above freezing on Tuesday.

gamblers' special junket from Minneapolis to Reno," said Carolyn McKee, a dispatcher at the Reno airport. "They were at Caesar's Tahoe. This aircraft was the return from Reno to Minneapolis."

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Jerry McCormick, who would only say he works in operations for Galaxy Airlines Inc., confirmed that Flight 203 was a privately chartered Galaxy flight. Galaxy is a Fort Lauderdale-based "supplemental air carrier," which means the company operates only chartered flights.

McCormick said Galaxy was founded in 1983, and that this was the first Galaxy plane to crash.

"The FAA and the NTSB have set up a command post in Reno and are asking us to refer all calls to them there," he said.

"All I remember is the explosions," said Elisa Pagni. "I saw flames flying up in the air. It was so loud. I was terrified."

The force of the crash threw flaming recreational vehicles from the dealership onto U.S. 395 south of Reno. At daybreak, the fuselage of the plane and the charred skeletons of the vehicles littered the highway, along with ice from firefighters and travel bags and a football autographed by Dallas Cowboys player Tony Dorsett.

Democratic Women Vote To Buy Share Of CBS Stock

When the Executive Council of North Carolina Democratic Women met in Raleigh Saturday, the participants gave a unanimous vote of confidence to CBS television anchorman Dan Rather.

Betty Speir, North Carolina National Democratic Committee member from Bethel, said the council unanimously agreed to purchase one share of CBS television stock. "In the resolution, we instructed the treasurer to have a proxy drawn up and send it to Dan Rather, CBS commentator," Mrs. Speir said. "The treasurer is working on buying the stock today."

Earlier this month, North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms urged conservative members of the Republican Party to purchase shares of CBS stock.

In a letter, mailed to 1 million conservatives, Helms accused the national television network of biased news coverage and suggested that a new group called Fairness in the Media take over CBS.

"One can draw one's own conclusion as to the purpose of this gesture," Mrs. Speir said. "However, the Democratic women have much faith in freedom of the press, CBS and the professionalism of Dan Rather."

Stores ...

"We sold out of bread and almost sold out of milk. Bread is usually the first thing to go," Rast said. "We sold out of Pepsi and almost sold out of Coke." Other big sellers for the Big Star in Farmville included lunch meat and snack items.

"Business picked up right when the snow started," said Philip Obrist, manager at the Food Lion in Ayden. "We had a 40 percent increase in sales over a normal Sunday."

Obrist said fresh meat and canned goods sold well, along with milk, eggs and bread.

Canned goods and soup, in addition to bread and beer, were big sellers at Farm Fresh Supermarket in Greenville, said Manager Jerry Dalton.

Randy Johnson, assistant manager of the Harris

Supermarket in Bethel, said shoppers crowded into the store for milk, eggs and bread as soon as the snow began to fall Sunday.

Hot chocolate and hamburger sold well at the Greenville Food Lion store Sunday, as did soup and soft drinks. "Everybody came in in the morning and things were slack last night," said Food Lion Assistant Manager Harold Dilley.

"We sold out of milk, eggs and bread yesterday," said Buddy Boyd, manager of Harris Supermarket on 10th Street in Greenville. "Business probably tripled yesterday. We had a big rush around 11 a.m."

At Overton's Supermarket, all the bread and almost all the soft drinks in stock disappeared from the shelves Sunday. Roy Byrum, the store's grocery manager, said other sought-after items included milk, eggs and snack items.

"When we opened the door at 1 p.m., people were waiting for us," he said. "Business was probably up 40 percent."

India Reveals Crackdown On Big Espionage Case

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Several people in sensitive positions in the Defense Ministry, the president's office and on the prime minister's staff have been arrested in India's largest espionage case since independence, Home Minister S.B. Chavan said today.

Chavan also told Parliament that a foreign agent involved in the spy case "has been withdrawn from our country," apparently referring to a French military attache who was recalled to Paris on Sunday. The minister gave no specifics on the country involved or the number of people arrested.

The Indian Express newspaper said Sunday that a French diplomat was being deported for involvement in the alleged spy case and that he worked for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Another newspaper, the pro-Soviet Patriot, said six American, French and West German diplomats "behind the espionage ring busted last week are being asked to leave India."

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said, "We don't have any comment on this." The West German Embassy called the report "absolutely baseless." A spokesman for the Indian External Affairs Ministry refused to comment.

Chavan said the government "would not hesitate taking action against (even) the highest authority."

The United News of India, meanwhile, reported four more arrests, including a deputy secretary of the Defense Ministry and an official of the Commerce Ministry.

The news agency quoted unnamed intelligence sources as reporting that more than 20 arrests would be made in the next few days.

There were conflicting reports about the exact number of arrests.

Government sources, who asked not to be named, reported 14 people, 11 of them government employees, from Thursday through Sunday in connection with an alleged plot to turn over defense secrets and information about internal operations and policies to an Indian civilian for transmittal to a foreign agent. But UNI put the figure at 15, including the latest arrests.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi reported the plot and the first arrests to Parliament on Friday.

Attorneys OK Audits

RALEIGH (AP) — Members of the North Carolina State Bar Council have voted to have their trust accounts audited first as part of a crackdown on lawyers who embezzle from clients.

With no opposition from its nearly 60 members, the council on Friday agreed that it would be audited before beginning a program of randomly auditing the accounts of the state's 11,00

San Francisco Solves Miami Mystery

Montano Eludes Dolphins, Marino Trapped By 49ers

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — When the San Francisco defense went after Dan Marino, he had nowhere to go. When the Miami defense went after Joe Montana, he went wherever he wanted.

"When you hear all week long, 'Miami, Miami, how're you gonna stop Miami?' you get to feeling overlooked," Montana said. "Nobody was asking, 'How're they gonna stop us?'"

Neither, for that matter, does any other team in the National Football League — save for the Pittsburgh Steelers. But for that loss last Oct. 14, the 49ers would have finished this season 19-0.

Instead, Sunday's 38-16 victory was San Francisco's 18th of the season, an NFL record, and the 49ers' second Super Bowl victory in four years.

"Dan Marino is a great quarterback, a great young quarterback," 49er coach Bill Walsh said, "but in my mind, Joe Montana is the best quarterback in the game today and maybe of all time."

"Marino will have his day, but this was Montana's day and this was a San Francisco 49er year."

It was supposed to be the greatest Super Bowl ever.

Instead, just as last year's pregame publicity blitz bombed under the weight of the Los Angeles Raiders' 38-9 blowout of the Washington Redskins, so did Sunday's super-hyped meeting disintegrate by halftime.

The only difference was that last year's happened in Tampa, a continent away from the Raiders' home. This one happened in Stanford Stadium, an hour's drive from the City by the Bay.

Nice to be in the neighborhood, 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said. But no big deal. "It could have been played in Phoenix, Albuquerque or a cow pasture and we would have played with the same intensity and emotion," he said.

Montana said he didn't have anything to prove, but the 49ers' quarterback ended up proving that his two strong legs are every bit the equal of Marino's one rifle arm.

"He's bigger, stronger than I am," Montana said. But not faster.

The Dolphins rushed just nine times, a Super Bowl low, for 25 yards, and Marino was forced to go to the air 50 times, a Super Bowl high.

"All we heard all week was what a quick release Dan Marino had and what a good offensive line they had," said Gary Johnson, one of San Francisco's shutting defensive linemen. "I guess we took it personally."

When the 49ers' secondary took away his deep receivers, the immobile Marino was all but helpless — sacked four times, the most in any game in his two-year pro career and the first time his sacks outnumbered his touchdown passes (one).

"Nobody expected us to get down by two or three touchdowns, but we did," Miami offensive tackle Cleveland Green said. "When we got behind, they just put their ears back and played 'Let's get the quarterback.' Four sacks is not bad — but it's still too many."

Montana also was sacked. Once. For five yards. When it didn't matter.

"Not their fault," he said, absolving his offensive line of all guilt. Sheepishly, he added: "I slipped."

When Montana's receivers were covered, he could always call his own number. He did — five times, rushing for 59 yards, a Super Bowl record for a quarterback, and a touchdown.

"When he takes off like that," 49ers wide receiver Dwight Clark said. See 49ERS page 11

Tyler Boosts 49er Attack

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Just winning Super Bowl XIX may not be enough for the San Francisco 49ers.

"Maybe we started something out there. Maybe a dynasty," said running back Wendell Tyler after the shattering 38-16 victory Sunday over the Miami Dolphins.

If not what they started, 49ers Coach Bill Walsh would like people to know how they finished.

"It was a truly great performance by a truly great team," he said. "I think it's one of the best teams of all time."

Certainly one of the best teams in a Super Bowl, as the record book will attest.

The 49ers ran up a record 537 yards on offense, and the San Francisco defense humbled the NFL's highest-scoring team. The 38 points tied the Super Bowl record set last year by the Los Angeles Raiders. Joe Montana had a double-record day with 331 yards passing and 59 running, the most yards by a quarterback on the ground. Running back Roger Craig's three touchdowns, two on passes and one on a run, also set a record, as did his 18 points.

And by finishing the season with a 12-game winning streak for their second title in four years, the 49ers became the first NFL team to win 18 games in a season.

To hear Walsh, there wasn't even anything very difficult about it.

"At one point, I think the Dolphins knew they'd have to move the ball and score every time, because we were moving the ball so well," Walsh said. "There was no turning point other than rolling up the score."

If there was a turning point, however, it could well have been early in the second period when the 49ers' defense forced the Dolphins, then leading 10-7, to punt from their 10-yard line.

Miami Looks Ahead After Disappointing Loss

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Miami's Bob Baumhower paused a moment and then reflected on the road to Super Bowl XIX.

He recalled all the hard work, the thrill of going 16-2 to reach Sunday's National Football League championship game, and then the disappointment of losing.

"It tough. It's the last game of the year and very hard to swallow," the 265-pound nose tackle said after the San Francisco 49ers whipped the Dolphins 38-16 in Stanford Stadium.

The loss was the Dolphins' second in three years in the Super Bowl and Coach Don Shula's fourth in a record six appearances.

"It's a sad thing for a team to end the season this way," Shula said. "When we get home, we'll look at areas where we need to improve.

We're a young team that's going to get better."

Quarterback Dan Marino also looked ahead.

"I hope we get another chance. You don't get here often," he said.

"Emotionally, we had a great year as a team overall, but this kind of takes away from it," Marino added. "It's a shame we can't be the world champs because we did play well."

"It's hard to describe what I'm feeling ... I don't think a physical injury could hurt as much," guard Roy Foster said. "Everybody wants to be No. 1 and this time it's them. We're going to have to put this on the back burner, come back and try to be No. 1 next year."

The 49ers, capping an 18-1 campaign with their second Super Bowl title in four seasons, outplayed

Miami offensively, defensively and on special teams.

San Francisco amassed 537 total yards against the Dolphins' Killer B's defense and held Marino, who averaged three touchdown passes a game during the regular season, to only one TD pass.

Miami used a no-huddle offense during its only touchdown drive of the day, a 70-yard march that gave the Dolphins a 10-7 lead late in the first quarter.

But the 49ers then shifted to a four-man defensive front with six defensive backs and eventually forced the Dolphins out of their game plan.

"Our offense has been slowed down this season," Shula said. "But it was stopped for the first time today."

Shula tried to attack the four-man front with a running game, but it produced only 25 yards on nine carries. As the 49ers expanded their lead, the Dolphins were forced to throw on almost every down.

Once that happened, the 49ers unleashed a relentless pass rush that produced four sacks — two by end Dwaine Board — and contributed to two interceptions.

"That was an ideal situation for them," Shula said. "They had the lead, our running game wasn't working and they could get after us."

Marino completed 29 of 50 passes, both Super Bowl records, for 318 yards and flipped a 2-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dan Johnson.

The Dolphins, who got field goals of 37, 31 and 30 yards from Uwe von Schumann, trailed 28-16 at halftime and were shut out after intermission.

"Offensively, it was our poorest game of the year. We didn't make things happen," Shula said, also pointing out that punter Reggie Roby was not up to par.

Roby, whose high, long punts frustrated returners all season, had a disastrous stretch in the second quarter when the 49ers took charge. Three times his low kicks beat his coverage downfield, and three times San Francisco started touchdown drives near midfield — at the Miami 47, the San Francisco 48 and the San Francisco 46.

"I'm disappointed in the way that we played," Shula said, "but I'm not going to let it take away from the year we had."

Miami's defense had been a concern for Shula all season.

The Dolphins ranked 19th in the NFL in total defense and were 22nd among 28 teams against the run. They were doomed Sunday when the 49ers scored on five straight possessions in the second and third quarters.

"There was some confusion, some mix-ups on defense," safety Glenn Blackwood said. "We could have given our offense better field position, but we couldn't hold them."

"We can't depend on our offense popping downfield all the time. We have to take some of it on our own. We weren't able to stop them and give our offense the ball in the second half."

San Francisco's defense, meanwhile, took away the Dolphins' deep passing game, holding the Marks Brothers — Clayton and Duper — to seven catches between them.

"I felt we were doing good things, but we just did not execute the right way," Duper said. "Give them all the credit in the world. They won."

Former Coach Reports Steroid Use

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A former Clemson University strength coach has reportedly said steroids were readily available to interested athletes.

The Greenville News quoted former assistant strength coach Jack Harkness as saying he once provided football players with steroids and accepted payments from track athletes for the prescription drug.

"I think that was the whole key to it — it was there if they wanted it," Harkness said. "I was told to make the drug available and that is what I did."

When asked who told him to make the drug available, Harkness said, "My boss, (former Clemson strength coach) Sam Colson." Colson and men's track coach Stanley S. Narewski resigned Dec. 11, after they were suspended pending an investigation by the State Law Enforcement Division into drug use among athletes.

Harkness, a graduate assistant coach, left Clemson Dec. 15 and returned to his Mississauga, Ontario home. SLED agents traveled to Canada two weeks ago to question Harkness.

Steroids, which can be injected or taken by pill, are substitutes for hormones normally produced by the body. Doctors prescribe them primarily to treat muscle-wasting diseases or after surgery to reduce muscle atrophy.

In an article printed Sunday, Harkness was quoted as saying he and three Clemson track athletes paid Colson $1,100 last September for steroids, including liquid dosages injected by syringe.

Harkness, a former Clemson discus thrower and Canadian National champion, said he and the track team members purchased liquid and oral steroids — Dianabol, Anavar and Decadurabolin — from Colson in September.

"We just wanted something and we got it," Harkness said. "We put our money together and gave a piece of paper over to Mr. Colson and after a certain period of time he just delivered a package to me." The $1,100 shipment fit in a box about eight inches square, he said.

Harkness also said he gave steroids to four Clemson linemen last spring and to another this fall, but said he doesn't remember if the athletes paid him for the drugs. Harkness worked mainly with offensive linemen on the Clemson football team.

"The quantities were so small that whatever money it might have been — I'm aware of the price of these things — it's not very much money, so I wouldn't really pay much attention to it," he said.

Colson has referred calls in the matter to his lawyer, John Gentry, who has made no comment.

The SLED probe is continuing, and the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation has begun a similar investigation of illegal prescription drug use at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. Vanderbilt strength coach E.J. Kreis took a leave of absence when the Tennessee probe began.

The Tennessee investigation began when SLED agents, searching for the source of a prescription drug found in the blood of a dead cross country runner, traced leads to Nashville.

Augustinus Jaspers, 23, was found dead Oct. 18 in his dormitory room. The death was ruled natural, and the cause attributed to a congenital heart defect.

Investigators began their probe when the drug phenylbutazone was found in Jaspers' blood and in his room. The runner did not have a prescription.

Unlawful distribution of prescription drugs is a misdemeanor offense carrying a maximum penalty of 18 months in prison, a $500 fine or both.

SLED first interviewed members of the men's and women's track teams, but expanded its probe to include all athletes at Clemson.

Marino 'Merely Mortal' As 49ers Silence Miami

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
STANFORD, Calif. — The San Francisco 49ers tugged on Superman's cape and it came off right in their hands.

Dan Marino turned out to be merely mortal, and that was not nearly good enough against a defense getting a teeny bit tired of hearing his name and numbers preached to it all week.

Most Valuable Player. The first 5,000-yard season in history. A record 48 touchdown passes.

It was all anybody wanted to talk about in the days before this Super Bowl. The 49ers heard much more than they cared to about Dangerous Dan.

"He destroyed defenses all year," noted Lawrence Pillers, resident philosopher of the San Francisco front. "But he didn't play the 49ers. Nobody else has got a defense like we do."

On the Dolphins' first possession Sunday, Marino came out firing. His first play from scrimmage was a 25-yard pass to Tony Nathan. He completed nine of his first 10 attempts, including a string of seven straight and a touchdown.

"It made us sort of mad," Pillers observed. "We think we're pretty good."

And from then on, they were. Five of Marino's next six passes were incomplete. His next hot streak, five straight completions, came on the last series of the game.

Even when he had time, he was underthrowing, overthrowing or throwing behind his receivers.

"The chances we did have, when guys were open, sometimes I didn't hit them," he said. "We didn't play as well as we're capable of playing offensively. That's probably because they dictated some things to us as far as their four-man line and playing five, six and seven defensive backs. It's tough to throw against seven defensive backs."

The 49ers started the game with a three-man rush and went to the four-man front on the third series, after Marino had led the Dolphins to a field goal and a touchdown.

"We had scored. We knew he'd have to put it up in the air. We felt confident with what we can do," tackle Manu Tuiaosopo said. "We weren't going to concede anything to Marino. They were going to have to earn it."

The four-man front is the Elephant Defense in the 49ers' lexicon, a tribute to 232-pound Fred Dean, the designated pass-rusher who is a trifle more lightfooted than your average pachyderm.

"We used Fred more on a regular basis than in situations, because the situation was pass all day long," Coach Bill Walsh said.

In the secondary, the 49er defensive backs celebrated the thundering arrival of the elephants.

"Regardless of the nickel defense or six defensive backs we used, the key was the four-man rush," cornerback Ronnie Lott said. "We used it all the time on passing situations."

Suddenly the foot races Miami wide receivers Mark Clayton and Mark Duper had been winning with cornerbacks and safeties all season became manageable jogs because Marino was busy running away from the elephants.

Clayton caught six passes, but only three after the first quarter. Duper's only catch was in the first quarter.

"I don't know if he got rattled," linebacker Keena Turner said. "But he got a lot of pressure. That's the way to defend a guy like that. The defensive line made it easy."

Four times in the second half, the elephants sacked Marino. He had gone down that way only 14 times all season.

Twice, the San Francisco secondary intercepted him. "The defensive backs were on a personal vendetta to stop Clayton and Duper," linebacker Riki Ellison said. "And Marino, too."

Marino had been bouncy and jovial at the start of the game. By the time the elephants were done, though, he was coming off the field throwing his hands up, as if to ask, "What can I do?"

"Dan Marino had some problems," Coach Don Shula said. "The offense had a tough time. We hadn't been stopped all year, but we were stopped today."

Marino set Super Bowl records with 29 completions and 50 attempts. But for the first time all year, he had more interceptions than touchdown passes, two to one. He also didn't put a single point on the scoreboard in the second half.

His 318 yards passing tied the old Super Bowl record set by Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw. The only problem was that the 49ers' Joe Montana had 331.

"Marino will have his day," Walsh said.

Sunday wasn't it, though, and Marino was left to wonder when it will be.

"You don't get here too often," he said.

Hidalgo, Poust Lead Pirates Past UNC-W

Kevin Hidalgo, Bruce Brockschmidt and Chris Pittelli took three first places to lead the men and Caycee Poust and Scotia Miller won three to lead the women as East Carolina swept UNC-Wilmington Saturday at Minges Natatorium in ECAC-South swimming.

The Pirate men won their meet 72-41, while the Lady Pirates took a 77-36 victory.

"We are swimming very fast right now, which is pleasing because we are training hard," ECU Coach Rick Kobe said. "We swam extremely well; we totally dominated both meets."

The ECU men won 12 of the 13 events in the meet, while the Lady Pirates took nine.

Miller won the 1,000 freestyle with a time of 11:03 and the 500 free in 5:24.11. Miller, Jenni Pierson, Nancy James and Jessica Feinberg won the 200 free relay in 2:43.89.

Poust took the 200 back in 2:22.03 and the 200 individual medley in 2:16.11. Poust, Feinberg, James and Ellen McPherson won the 200 medley relay in 1:55.70.

Hidalgo teamed with Brockschmidt, Lee Hicks and Keith Kaut to take the 400 medley relay with a time of 3:35.45. Pittelli, Hidalgo, Jeff Brown and Andy Cook won the 400 free relay in 3:17.77.

Hidalgo also won the 200 backstroke, while Pittelli took the 100 and 200 free.

ECU Runners Set Records At Eastman Invitational

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — Five East Carolina records were broken and two runners qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships Saturday at the Eastman Kodak Invitational Track Meet.

Julian Anderson, who finished third in the 600, and Lee McNeil, who was third in the 60-yard dash finals, qualified for the NCAA championships with new ECU records. McNeil's ECU mark was set in the preliminaries with a time of 6.2, and ECU's Henry Williams took second in the finals with a time of 6.25.

Craig White finished third in the 60-yard high hurdles with a new Pirate record of 7.27. The event was won by Olympic 110 high hurdle gold medalist Roger Kingdom of Pitt in 7.16.

Chris Brooks won the 440-yard run with a time of 47.41 for a new school record, and Ken Daughtry set an ECU mark with a 31.21 in the 300-yard event.

"We had more people score in individual events than any other team in the meet," ECU Coach Bill Carson said. "We are way ahead at this point. I was amazed; there were 72 kids who ran the 60, and we had the second, third and ninth fastest times. We did it against some of the top track schools in the south and the country."

Three Qualify For State Gym Meet

RALEIGH — Danica Luehm, Courtney Bishop and Christie Arnold each qualified this weekend for the state Class III-C and Class IV gymnastics meet to be held Feb. 16 in Winston-Salem.

Bishop qualified with an all-around score of 30.30, while Arnold followed at 30.20 and Luehm at 31.15. It was the first time Luehm had competed with the Greenville Gymnastics Club.

Summary:

Courtney Bishop all around 30.30, Christie Arnold 30.20, Danica Luehm 31.15 in first competition.

Peete Hangs On For Title

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Calvin Peete, suffering from a painful eye irritation, thought seriously on Saturday of withdrawing from the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

He also had just about made up his mind to skip the PGA Tour's Western swing next year.

Things changed on Sunday. "Well, I'll make it out to the West again next year," Peete said after he had scored his ninth career victory in Phoenix's 50th anniversary tournament.

Peete, stopping occasionally to administer eye drops, won with a closing 3-under-par 68 and a 270 total, 14 shots under par.

"Under the circumstances, I'd have to say this was my best tournament," said the 41-year-old Peete, the most successful black golfer the game has produced.

The circumstances involved:

—Peete, playing near flawless golf, completing the first 36 holes without a bogey and a 5-shot lead.

—An eye irritation, which he blamed on a problem with his contact lens caused by sun glare and dry desert air, which almost forced him out of the tournament.

—A last-round comeback in which he made up two strokes on the leading Doug Tewell, gained a share of the lead at the turn and then won it when Tewell fell victim to a triple bogey-7 on the 14th hole.

"If I hadn't been leading the tournament by five (on Saturday), I probably would have withdrawn," said Peete, a notoriously slow starter who never before has experienced appreciable success in the West.

"My vision was blurry. And it was very painful."

"I'd just about made up my mind not to come to the West Coast next year," he said. "I hadn't played very well out here and I sometimes have these physical problems and I'd just about decided to skip it."

But the victory, worth $81,000 from the total purse of $450,000, provided Peete with the fastest start of his career and changed his plans. He will compete in both the Los Angeles Open this week and the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am the following week.

"And I'll be back to Phoenix next year," he said.

Although Peete had taken a one-shot lead, with one of his deadly-accurate approach shots that set up a 3-foot birdie putt on the 12th, the turning point came on the 14th.

Tewell, trailing by only one, drove into a fairway bunker then hit a shot that was ruled out of bounds.

Tewell wasn't quite so sure.

"I never did have visual confirmation the ball was out of bounds," he said.

Bird, Celtics End 76ers Streak

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran Cedric Maxwell predicted the Super Sunday showdown between his Boston Celtics and arch-rival Philadelphia 76ers would be "like two trains colliding."

There was no collision. Boston super star Larry Bird derailed the Philadelphia express once again.

Bird scored 38 points, including 12 in the last 4½ minutes, and the Celtics ended Philadelphia's 13-game winning streak Sunday with a 113-97 victory over the 76ers.

That enabled the Celtics to regain the National Basketball Association's best record less than 48 hours after surrendering it to Philadelphia in a stunning upset by the Pacers in Indiana.

With their 18th victory in 19 home starts this season, Boston's defending NBA champs hiked their overall record to 34-7. Philadelphia dropped to 33-7 despite a whopping 17-4 road record.

The Celtics led at every turn, but had to withstand repeated Philadelphia challenges until Bird took command in the stretch. His 12 points included a pair of three-point bombs which killed the 76ers' last hopes.

"When they needed hoops, he was there — shooting or making the pass or doing something," Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said.

Bird also grabbed nine rebounds, collected four assists, blocked three shots and had two steals as the Celtics won for the second time in three meetings with the 76ers this season.

"You just hope he doesn't completely dominate the game," Cunningham said. "In the three games we've played this season, he has been great. He has hit all the baskets that they needed. I don't know if any one person can stop Larry Bird."

"He has fantastic imagination and creativity," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "The shots are there, the offensive rebounds, the defensive rebounds, what more can you ask?"

"With all that Larry is doing, he still goes to the boards and that is energy-draining stuff," Jones added. "So if he wants to take a three-pointer, that is fine."

"I struggled early in the game," said Bird, who hit 15 of 26 shots from the floor and all six of his free throws. "I missed some shots early, but after the first quarter I settled down."

"They used the trap defense like they always do and we moved the ball on them. Whoever had the open shot took it."

"I took some shots at the end when we were trying to run out the clock and I made them. Otherwise, I might have been under 30 points."

Bird, who scored 42 points in less than three periods before being ejected for fighting with Julius Erving on the 76ers' last visit Nov. 9, greeted the Philadelphia super star warmly at midcourt before the game. Then he went out and burned the 76ers in a renewal of one of the NBA's top rivalries.

"I think we proved we can beat the 76ers," Bird said. "They're a great team, but we won."

"Larry seems more offensive-minded than he has been in the past and when he gets hot no one can stop him alone," said Erving, who had 17 points. "He was fantastic down the stretch."

Bird was helped in the scoring department by Maxwell and Kevin McHale with 17 points apiece and hot-shooting guards Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge with 14 each.

The 76ers were led by Moses Malone with 20 points. Charles Barkley had 16, but starting guards Andrew Toney and Maurice Cheeks managed just 12 apiece.

Heels Return To Cage Action

By The Associated Press

North Carolina will try to bounce back from a 93-77 Atlantic Coast Conference defeat at the hands of No. 2 Duke as the Tar Heels face Jacksonville in a non-conference basketball game tonight.

In other action involving ACC teams tonight, Virginia travels to Georgia Tech, while Maryland hosts Holy Cross.

On Saturday, it took some yelling to pull the Blue Devils out of a two-game losing streak and help them win their first game since 1966 in North Carolina's Carmichael Auditorium, junior guard Mark Alarie said.

The Blue Devils breezed past the Tar Heels 93-77 just one day after Duke's coaches called a closed-door team meeting to discuss overtime losses to Maryland and Wake Forest, the team's first losses of the season.

"The two losses were heart-breakers," said Duke guard Johnny Dawkins, who scored 34 points against the Tar Heels. "What we were looking for today was a way to dig ourselves out of a hole. We didn't want to come in here and dig ourselves a grave."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski credited the Blue Devils' inside defensive play with breaking a 39-39 halftime deadlock.

"Our inside guys did a better job defensively," he said of the second half. "We made the adjustment of staying between their post men and the ball, while putting pressure on the ball handler."

questions about the 18-year dry spell on North Carolina's home court, Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith mentioned it.

"It must have been kind of eerie for Duke to come in here and feel like an underdog when they're ranked No. 2 in the country," Smith said. "So much has been written and said about their losing streak here."

In other ACC contests Saturday, Clemson handed Virginia its fifth conference loss, North Carolina State avenged last year's NIT loss to Florida State and the University of Nevada-Las Vegas held off a late rally to beat Maryland.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said his team was conscious of the clock in Saturday's 72-66 victory over Florida State, especially after watching a 15-point lead disappear against North Carolina Wednesday night.

"I felt like we needed to work the clock, and I thought we did a good job of that," Valvano said. "We played Florida State last year in the NIT, and they're an explosive team."

The Wolfpack held the ball on each of its possessions, delaying its attack until the 45-second shot clock was down to 10 seconds.

The victory was the third in the last seven games for the Wolfpack, 10-5, which faces Duke Wednesday.

"It's always better to go into a game like that (Duke) off a win," Valvano said. "We will have to play our best game of the year against them."

49ers Surprise Miami...

said, "I wonder about him. I wonder if he's been hit on the head too hard."

Not that his receivers were covered all that often. Montana completed 24 of 35 passes for 331 yards, another Super Bowl record, and three touchdowns.

"I don't see how he could play better," Clark said. "Nobody likes being called second best. I'm sure that bothered him, especially when it's not true."

If Montana didn't feel like passing or running himself, he had Wendell Tyler and Roger Craig behind him. They plowed through the Miami defense for 123 of the 49ers' 211 yards on the ground.

The 49ers' offense in general and Montana in particular did just about anything they felt like doing as San Francisco won its second Super Bowl and Montana his second most valuable player award.

"He was outstanding in every way," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "Every time it seemed we had some kind of pressure on him, he scrambled and made big plays on his own. He just knew what to do with the football the entire day. He hurt us in every way, running and throwing."

After a flag-waving pregame show, President Reagan tossed a coin on a satellite hookup from the White House.

"Heads," said Dwight Stephenson, Miami's center and one of the team captains.

"It is tails," the president said.

Not much went right for the Dolphins after that, either.

The game began somewhat like the grand battle everyone expected it to be. Miami scored the first time it had the ball, on Uwe Von Schamann's 37-yard field goal. San Francisco scored on its second possession, on Montana's 33-yard pass to Carl Monroe. And Miami scored on its second possession, on Marino's 2-yard pass to Dan Johnson.

The first quarter ended with Miami on top 10-7. But the end of the quarter also signaled the end of Dolphins' offense.

They had rushed for 12 yards; they got 13 the rest of the way. They had managed seven first downs; they got 12 the rest of the way. Marino had passed for 103 yards; he got 215 the rest of the way, more than half of that when the game was out of reach in the fourth quarter.

They got two field goals — one an outright gift — in the final 12 seconds of the second period after the 49ers had punched in three more touchdowns on Montana's 8-yard run and Craig's 2-yard run.

The 10 points in the third quarter — Ray Werschling's 27-yard field goal and Montana's 16-yard pass to Craig, giving him a Super Bowl-record three TDs and 18 points — enabled the 49ers to tie the Raiders' year-old Super Bowl record for the most points in a game.

After Miami's first two possessions, the 49ers made a simple yet dramatic adjustment. They went from a three-man line to a four-man line, with five, six, sometimes seven defensive backs.

"We tried to get some runs against it, but the runs we used didn't work," Shula said. "Our offense has been slowed down this season, but it was stopped for the first time today. We hadn't been stopped all year long."

"They played the best any team has played against us defensively," Marino added. "We knew they had this type of defense. We kind of expected it from them. We knew what we had to do: We had to throw the ball against a four-man line."

He couldn't. Of his 29 completions, only six went to Mark Clayton and just one to Mark Duper, the speedy wide receivers who had helped Marino collect his record 48 touchdown passes during the year. Three of Clayton's catches came in the first quarter.

With his long game taken away, Marino had to look to running back Tony Nathan, who had 10 receptions.

"We just conceded the short passes," safety Dwight Hicks said, "and didn't give him anything long. And it worked. When a quarterback has time, he can look off his primary receiver and then come back to him. We were getting so much pressure on him that he had to stare down his primary receiver, because he thought if he tried to look off, he wouldn't be able to come back to him. Short passes aren't going to beat you."

Tight end Joe Rose, whose 30-yard catch just before halftime was Marino's longest completion of the game, put it more simply.

"They were willing to give us the short game," he said. "When it came time to hit the big pass, we just didn't have it. They were loading up with six defensive backs and we couldn't go long."

But Nat Moore, the Dolphins' running back-turned-wide receiver, put it most succinctly.

"We had some opportunities for big plays," Moore said, "but when we were open, Dan didn't get the time — and when he had the time, we couldn't get open."

"We really stunk out the joint."

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — At the end of three rounds, co-manager Lou Duva told Olympic lightweight champion Pernell Whitaker in his corner that he wasn't going to give him any more water until Whitaker started throwing more body punches.

It didn't take Whitaker long to shake his thirst.

In the fourth round, Whitaker, of Norfolk, Va., who had been scoring well to the head, went to Danny Avery's body with a vengeance, hurting Avery, and at the end of the round Dr. Frank Doggett stopped the fight Sunday at Harrah's Marina.

It was Whitaker's second straight victory as a pro. Whitaker, 134<sup>1/2</sup>, had scored a second-round knockout in his debut, and for a while Sunday it looked like Avery, 134, of Lynn, Mass., also would go in two. Whitaker knocked down Avery with a left early in the round and had him bleeding from the nose and mouth at round's end.

Whitaker Gains Motivation

Two other Olympians also won their second straight pro bouts on national television — Meldrick Taylor, the Olympic featherweight now fighting as a lightweight, and Evander Holyfield, the light heavyweight bronze medalist — each six-round decisions.

Taylor, 18, 135<sup>1/2</sup>, of Philadelphia, who had won his pro debut on a first-round knockout, showed poise and effective body punching throughout in winning all six rounds on all three officials' cards over Dwight Pratchett, 134<sup>1/2</sup>, of Chicago.

In gaining his second straight six-round decision, Holyfield, 178<sup>1/2</sup>, of New York, in the second round and forced him to take a standing eight count in the fifth. Holyfield did almost all of the fighting in the dull bout.

"I feel satisfied with the work, said Taylor. "I was going six rounds with an experienced fighter." Pratchett had gone the distance in losing 10-round decisions to lightweight contender Jimmy Paul and former featherweight champ Juan LaPorte.

Whitaker, who punches economically but with power, also was satisfied with his performance.

"I didn't seek to stop him," said Whitaker. "I wanted to get work because I had never gone four rounds before."

CBS Version Of Errol Flynn Story Leaves Feeling Something Left Out

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Movie rogue Errol Flynn was the kind of king-size character who would make great copy for the screaming headlines of today's checkout-counter tabloids.

Tonight, those sleazy supermarket papers get appropriately rude treatment from ABC's "Scandal Sheet," while Flynn is handled with kid gloves in CBS' competing "My Wicked, Wicked Ways ... The Legend of Errol Flynn."

Although both films are watchable, "Scandal Sheet," starring Burt Lancaster in a rare TV role, is more substantial. "My Wicked, Wicked Ways" is engagingly light-hearted, but viewers will leave the three-hour film feeling they've missed the full story.

Based on Flynn's autobiography, the movie is a whitewash, a glorified, sanitized profile of an on- and off-screen idol who comes across as more college prankster than wicked womanizer.

fun, sport," as Flynn would say. Duncan Regehr, a strapping Canadian actor who was a bronzed gladiator in "Last Days of Pompeii," plays the character with an endearing twinkle. Above everything else, Flynn seems to have been a charmer.

Hal Linden is also believable as movie mogul Harry Warner, who was blustery, shrewd, pragmatic and even fatherly in his dealings with Flynn.

The film begins with Flynn's arrival in Hollywood in 1935 as a 26-year-old unknown and ends with his acquittal in a 1943 statutory rape case. In between, there's his failed marriage to French film queen Lili Damita (Barbara Hershey), his battles with the movie studio and assorted adventures, including a stint fighting in the Spanish Civil War when he was wounded and reported to be dead by at least one newspaper account.

That breathless headline undoubtedly sold newspapers, which is all that the sensationally vulgar Inside World in "Scandal Sheet" is in the business of doing. In this no-holds-barred indictment, "Scandal Sheet" demonstrates that the basic differences between these sex- and scandal-crazed weeklies and responsible publications are integrity and conscience.

Lancaster, who played the savage gossip columnist J.J. Hunsecker in the 1957 film, "Sweet Smell of Success," does well as the manipulative, demanding and insensitive Inside World publisher Harold Fallen. He buys people, has his reporters stage embarrassing incidents and doesn't care about the human consequences.

One reporter takes pictures of dead Siamese twins in separate coffins. They had been separated in an effort to save their lives. Fallen says the reporter got the wrong picture; the twins should be together in death as they were in life.

The reporter, played to an unsavory turn by Peter Jurasik (a former drug dealer on "Hill Street Blues"), offers the grieving parents money to drape the kids over each other in a new burial. The parents, who look like the subjects in Grant Wood's painting, "American Gothic," turn him down flat, so he bribes a funeral home official to get the right shot.

Fallen believes he's doing a public service, at least for some segments of the public. He says ordinary people lead gray lives, and he works hard to give them excitement and vicarious thrills. "The world doesn't just belong to college graduates," he says.

Based on an article by a former National Enquirer writer, "Scandal Sheet" reveals some of the insidious ways tabloids get their stories, dangling sums of money to low-salary workers on movie sets and in studios for "information."

Besides this inside look into Peeping-Tom reporting, "Scandal Sheet," which was done by Henry Winkler's production company, also rises above standard TV fare because of Pamela Reed's performance as a straight journalist who sells out to Inside World for an $80,000-a-year salary.

Her character study ponders where necessity begins and conscience ends.

Although she's too naive about the job expectation, Miss Reed's Helen Grant symbolizes what can happen when decent people get into situations that conflict with their instincts and values. It's often folly and self-deception to think they can change the system when, in fact, the system will corrupt them.

Doctors In Triangle Area Joining Radio Network

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Doctors in the Research Triangle area are the latest to gain access to the "closed-circuit" Physicians Radio Network, which network officials say offers a shortcut through volumes of medical literature.

Preston C. Williams, president of the 24-hour-a-day network, said in a recent telephone interview that as many as 500 area doctors are expected to sign up with the service. Most will receive a free radio from the Stanford, Conn.-based network so they can tune in the special FM side band transmitting the programs.

"Clinicians today are so concerned about falling behind the flow of medical information and there is so much happening in medicine," Williams said. "Those who have become accustomed to using PRN use us because they realize we can give them a little information about a lot of things."

A press conference was scheduled for 10 a.m. today to officially unveil the 10-year-old service's entry into the Triangle.

The Triangle will be the 38th market served by PRN, which has some 78,000 members, Williams said. Each market is defined by the 40-mile radius served by its regional transmitter.

"We are a scanning service, really," Williams said. "They (doctors) receive 50 or 60 medical publications a month free of charge.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JAN. 22, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite delays in unfinished duties and an older person who wants to restrict your movement, you now have the chance to make a considerable amount of progress.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have an opportunity to handle problems wisely that have been bugging you for some time. Think more objectively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find better ways of handling business problems and show that you persevere at regular work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get better organized and you can accomplish much more and branch out to new, more profitable, interests.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Listening to a partner who is very practical is wise and your work will not be such a bore to you.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at your work and avoid that erstwhile friend who does not comprehend your viewpoints and likes to argue.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to get your work load diminished in some way so that you need not be confined so much.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Instead of putting problems out of your mind, talk them over with family ties who can assist you in solving them properly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you have a talk with one involved in your business routines, you get good ideas for improving the situation at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Stick to business and don't run off on some tangent and show you are sensible. Talk to a monetary expert.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Different action is needed in order to get better results with some plan you have started. Be practical yet conventional.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are in a mood to upset your apparent interests, but go to an advisor who can soothe your anger.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some situation that has you at sixes and sevens can be improved with the assistance of good friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can easily combine standard methods with new and up-and-coming ones and produce excellent results, so give the right type of education that will be helpful in such direction. One who will adhere to any course once started with steadfastness but take time for good suggestions.

Award Winner

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) - William Shawn, editor-in-chief of The New Yorker magazine, and eight other people prominent in the arts were named winners in the 29th annual Brandeis University Creative Arts Awards.

Two types of awards - medals recognizing lifetimes of achievement, and citations recognizing artists of great distinction - are being given in the fields of painting, poetry, music and photography.

Wayne Children Joining Forces

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - John Wayne's sons Ethan and Patrick are teaming up for a dinner-theater production of "Come Blow Your Horn," but they're no "pilgrims" - they made their debut last year in the same play.

The appearance by Ethan Wayne, 22, and Patrick Wayne, 45, is being billed by the Grand Dinner Theater as "The Sons of John Wayne Together for the First Time," despite their appearance in the Neil Simon comedy in Amarillo, Texas.

John Wayne died of cancer in 1979 at age 72.

"Sure, being his sons has opened up doors in the industry," said Patrick, who has appeared in movies and television since 1956. "You can't ignore that factor. But I feel I've accomplished a lot of my own, that I'm not just John Wayne's son."

Ethan, named for his father's character in "The Searchers," made a 1983 film in Spain, "In Point," and has completed a film with Ernest Borgnine.

Wayne's five other children are Marisa, Aissa, Toni, Melinda and Michael.

Paper Stops

MONTREAL (AP) - The Sunday Express, the only English-language Sunday newspaper in Canada's second largest city, has ceased publication after 15 years.

"Unfortunately, the newspaper has fallen upon difficult times, and, as a consequence, this will be our final edition," executive editor M.A. Lawton wrote in a front-page letter Sunday under the headline "Farewell."

The Express tried in 1971 to go daily in competition with the Gazette and the Montreal Star, but scrapped the venture after three months and became a weekly. The Star folded in 1979 after a lengthy strike.

Drop-Out

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Actor Dean Stockwell says he did a "classic '60s drop-out" - but he did it in the '80s after several years without good roles - and now he's glad to be back, with two movies currently in theaters.

Stockwell, 48, a popular child actor in the late 1940s and early '50s, is now in Wim Wenders' "Paris, Texas," playing Harry Dean Stanton's brother.

Monsoon Rains Critical To Millions Of Asians

National Geographic News Service
WASHINGTON — Asia takes a deep breath, then exhales. For half the world, it is the breath of life, that seasonal wind that shifts direction twice a year: the monsoon.

The inhalation is the summer, or southwest, monsoon that blows from mid-May through September and brings heavy rains from tropical oceans into the continent. The winter, or northeast, monsoon is a reverse flow that begins in October. It brings cool, dry, continental air to most of India and China, and rain to Indonesia, Australia, and places with northeast coastlines.

One of the most massive weather systems in the world, the monsoon is revered as the verdict of the gods. When the monsoon falters, drought and famine paralyze continents. When it swells, cyclones and floods terrorize low-lying coastlines.

Where Fortune Rides

What may look like black clouds to Westerners are usually welcomed with joy and relief in the monsoon world. The fortunes of Asian agriculture, and thus the survival of half the world's nearly 5 billion people, ride on the monsoon's promise. Vital economic decisions await its whims.

For more than half of Asia's farmers, who are still primarily dependent on a single growing season, the monsoon can mean survival itself. In India, about half the nation's electricity is generated by hydropower, and thus by monsoons.

When the rains don't come on time, people die of heat exhaustion, dust storms engulf cities in darkness, reservoirs dwindle to puddles, and fistfights erupt at public water taps, writes Preet J. Vesilind in the December National Geographic.

His diary account of waiting for the monsoon on the Malabar Coast of India describes the scorching suffering when the summer monsoon is late. At Trivandrum in June 1983, it had been so late only four times in the previous 83 years.

"So we waited. We waited as the sun stoked the powerful atmospheric engines of heat and water. We waited as the dusty streets of Trivandrum baked in sweat and evil smells. Wandering cattle licked their lips. Julius Joseph (chief meteorologist) studied his charts," reports Vesilind.

All power to heavy industrial users had been cut off. Home air conditioners were turned off. Movie houses were restricted to one show a day, neon display lights were outlawed, stores had to close by sundown, and public schools didn't open. Not enough water for drinking and sanitation, officials explained.

Across southern India at Madras, someone had scrawled on a concrete wall, "Repent! Jesus will give you rain." In the previous year, only a puja, a Hindu prayer ceremony in which a thousand women in red robes sat with a thousand candles and chanted heavenward, had succeeded in bringing brief showers.

Few Days' Warning

Forecasting monsoons is often called the world's most important weather prediction. But although meteorologists, armed with satellite pictures and computer models have made great strides, most agree that the onset of the monsoon rains can't be predicted for more than a few days, Vesilind reports.

When the monsoon finally approached Trivandrum, it might have inspired the fifth-century Indian poet Kalidasa, who wrote, "The clouds advance like rutting elephants, enormous and full of rain. They come forward as kings among tumultuous armies; their flags are lightning, the thunder is their drum ..."

In Bombay, life sashes to a halt, Vesilind writes. Muddy water fills the taps. Many old buildings collapse. Garbage and cattle dung clog drains, turning streets into stinking canals. Train service, lifeline of the city, is severed.

Once again the grand lottery begins. The monsoon, the name of which is derived from the Arabic word mausim (season), blesses, denies, and destroys at random. The rains fall, as an Indian proverb says, on one horn of the buffalo but not the other.

NO CUSTOMERS . . . call on a drenched vendor in the Indian city of Delhi as the summer monsoon rains drowns the street. The monsoon, which brings badly needed rain to half of the world, is a seasonal wind that shifts direction twice a year — the summer, or southwest monsoon which carries heavy

Muscle Power Is Still An Integral Factor In The Rural Life Of China

By ROBERT M. POOLE

National Geographic News Service
SHASHI, CHINA — The old man sip hot tea in a cold upstairs room that is barren of decoration. They look so frail that it is hard to picture them as younger men — "trackers" who work in harness, like mules, pulling ships upstream against the infamous current of the Yangtze River.

"It was miserable work," says Zhang Jianming, one of the trackers who recalls how he once hauled ships upriver. "We would sweat and our skin would burn in the summer. In the winter we would freeze. Often we had no place to sleep, so we slept in teahouses or in the open. Many of my friends died in this work."

Zhang and his comrades trudged the dangerous trails high above the great river. Tethered by long, woven bamboo cables to their mother ship, they muscled their way upstream through the mountains of Hunan and Sichuan provinces, dragging wooden junks loaded with cargo.

Zhang Cites Progress

Zhang, now 57, works as a stevedore here in Shashi, or "Sand City," on the banks of the Yangtze. Along with other former trackers, he points proudly to improvements brought on by the establishment of the Communist government in 1949 and by the current regime's modernization campaign.

"We have come from little boats to big boats, from wood to iron, from muscle to mechanization on this river," says Zhang.

While such advances are impressive, the visitor to China is still struck by the nation's abiding reliance on human muscle, the same sort of fiber that, long ago, built the Great Wall and dug imperial canals across thousands of miles, shaping China out of an obstinate landscape.

Muscle Is Driving Force

Today, despite all the progress and passage of time, human muscle remains the driving force behind this nation of one billion people.

It is most noticeable in the countryside, where four out of five Chinese live as farmers, tending small plots impractical for tractors and other machinery. In the steep mountains of Sichuan Province, one sees these peasants working just as their ancestors did, with little more than a hoe and a chant, chopping the earth from dawn until sunset. The difference now is that farmers can take their surplus to sell in market cities like Wanxian.

The girl, women, and old men come into Wanxian, country people at a glance, their skin bronzed by the sun, their shoulders broad from hard work, their harsh voices carrying along the stone streets. They trudge up from the river, taking slow steps under the great weight of their yokes of shoulder baskets, which are jammed with the various crops of autumn — oranges, peppers, and peanuts, potatoes, cabbages, and pig feet. A boy of 15 sets up shop in the gathering dusk, arranging his oranges in baskets on the main street.

Hard Journey To Market

"It took me most of the day to get here," the youth says. He walked two miles to a bus stop near his home, rode the bus three hours to a Yangtze crossing, waited for the ferry, made the 20-minute passage, and finally entered Wanxian. "My family stayed home to continue working. I'll stay here until my oranges are sold — probably tomorrow."

Other farm families hire out their muscle, working as day laborers in town when their planting and harvesting are finished.

In the riverside town of Baicheng, peasants load huge white bags of fertilizer onto ox carts by hand, wrestle the one-ton cargo down a steep hillside trail that is slick with mud, then lift the bags, one by one, onto their backs. They file onto barges to stack the bags for shipment on the Yangtze, then climb uphill for another load.

"We come here three or four times a month," says a teenager who glistens with sweat from his morning's exertions. His brothers and sisters stand in line with others, waiting to transfer the fertilizer to a barge. On a good day, this family can earn the equivalent of $7.50. "We load quickly because we are paid on the basis of how many bags we load." The extra money, he says, helps feed the family's eight mouths.

In Yichang, one of the most modern of the Yangtze River cities, even the elderly perform strenuous labor for extra money. A group of 20 retired men sit on a mountain of rice sacks, which have been stacked alongside Liberation Road. The men, most in their 60s and 70s, bask in the mild autumn sunlight, using the rice sacks as loungers until trucks arrive to take the rice away.

High On The Rice

Then the men swing into action. Two of them open a gate on the truck's side. Atop the mountain of sacks, groups of four start singing, "Ahyah! Ahyah! Ahyah! Ahyah!" as they lift a 50-pound bag onto the back of a colleague, who chants as he descends the slope to the truck and flips the sack aboard with a resounding thump. When the first load is finished, the men switch positions, the lifters becoming bearers.

When a second load is done, the old men sit around pouring rice from their shoes, laughing, and talking about the work.

"See that man there?" one worker asks, pointing at a bald colleague with his shirt unbuttoned all the way down. "He's 71 and he can lift 90 kilos (198 pounds). It is good for a man to work."

Another chimes in: "We work a day and buy a jug of wine with the money. We work to get drinking money. This one," he says, pointing to a comrade, "already had a little wine at lunch."

The wine-at-lunch comrade turns grave: "The important thing," he says, "is that we are all working for socialist construction." His comment prompts laughter all around.

"Either way," says another, "we all have wine to drink."

Student Author Says Travel Is The Art Of Knowing People

By KAREN ANDERSON

WCU News Bureau
CULLOWHEE — Travel is not tourism. It is spending time in a place and getting to know the people.

That philosophy is the heart of a book recently published by Western Carolina University student Marcus Endicott.

"Vagabond Globetrotting: State of the Art" gives practical information on low-cost travel in foreign and familiar places.

"Travel is experience. It will teach you about the world," Endicott, 25 and a senior at Western, writes in the introduction. He should know. Endicott has lived and traveled in some 40 countries on five continents.

He has been regaled with tales from the Raj by a nephew of Lord Mountbatten who gave him a lift in an antique Bentley on the Trans-Canada Highway. He has hopped freights from Minneapolis to Seattle, "over the hump" (the Continental Divide in hobo slang). He has stayed in sleeping bags and Hiltons from California to India.

Endicott saw new as well as familiar faces on the globe. He met a young Turkish student on a train from Ankara to Erzurum, Turkey, who took him home and fed him a native feast, which didn't sit well on the torturous, 30-hour bus trip to Tehran, Iran, the next day. He ran into Dr. David Littlejohn, WCU Spanish professor, on the square in Merida, Mexico, almost as casually as if they were passing on campus.

And Endicott experienced the kindness of strangers. On a return flight from Mexico, he was digging in his pockets for money to pay an airport tax when a man tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Let me pay for it, because I was in Switzerland one time and someone did that for me."

Endicott's book is a compilation of knowledge he gained on his journeys and from his collection of travel books. "It's a theoretical manual, a tool," he says, not a listing of hotels and restaurants.

Born in Australia, he grew up mostly in Chapel Hill and graduated in 1977 from the American International School of Zurich, Switzerland. His subsequent travels took him by train, bus and thumb through Europe, Scandinavia and Asia, including Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan and India. He crisscrossed North America, freight-hopping and hitchhiking from Key West, Fla., to British Columbia and Baja California, Mexico, before entering Western in 1980.

The chapters of "Vagabond Globetrotting" tell how to be a smart traveler. They cover subjects such as common-sense traveling, credentials, finance, gear, health, food, shelter, work, transport, study, maps, guidebooks and language.

The chapter on health is perhaps the best and most thorough, Endicott says. It discusses immunization requirements and common travelers' afflictions, giving simple remedies for some including diarrhea, coughs, scrapes and scratches, bites and stings. Even attitudes toward women in foreign countries as well as the intrigue and risk of love when strangers meet in strange lands are covered.

"In the book, I'm trying to show people that if they want to travel, it's easy," he says. "The hardest thing is deciding to take the first step."

Endicott's theory is that travel is more than a vacation activity. It is spending time in a place, living as closely to the inhabitants as possible and becoming sensitive to and respectful of the local customs. The traveler need not stay in plush hotels, eat elaborate meals and carry several suitcases of clothing. The one thing a vagabond traveler needs is time. "Time is more valuable than money," he writes in the introduction.

"Vagabond Globetrotting" gives much practical advice: "Eat well and you will stay well. Food is the bottom line. Without enough money to feed yourself, travel becomes, instead, survival."

"When you are unknown, appearance is everything. You can count on being treated according to how you look. If you look like a bum, you will be treated like one."

"Almost always, the cheaper your accommodation, the more interesting your trip," he writes. "Diversity is the key to successful travel; sample as broad a spectrum as possible."

Endicott wrote "Vagabond Globetrotting" last year in his WCU residence hall and published it during the summer through a company he established. He is majoring in psychology and minoring in German.

"One reason I wrote the book is that friends started traveling after listening to me," he says. "The university might have lost some students because of me."

The book is available from Endicott for $8.95 postpaid by writing Enchiridion International, P.O. Box 2589, Cullowhee, N.C. 28723.

STRAINING LIKE BEASTS OF BURDEN . . . Chinese "trackers" haul their boat upstream against the powerful current of the Yangtze River. Until recently, this was a typical scene all up and down China's main artery of commerce. Countless trackers fell from cliffs high above the current. Many
