Auditor Praises County For Its Financial Level

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County government is operating at the "best level" than at any time in the past five years, Lloyd Moody, who heads the accounting firm which conducted the county's 1984 audit, told members of the Board of County Commissioners Wednesday.

Moody told the board that reserves and investments have continued to climb over the past few years so that the county is at "the best level of operations in the past five years."

Moody said "my personal opinion" is that "this county has got a lot of valuable resources. I think things are going very well. You are to be commended."

"It just seems like you are on top of things," the auditor told the board, after reviewing trends in the financial condition of the county over the past several years.

Moody also reviewed the latest Internal Revenue Service travel regulations with commissioners, saying that the use of county-owned cars to drive to and from home is considered personal use under the new regulations and should be reported as income for employees.

He also told commissioners that any amount paid by the county to employees over the 20.5 cents per mile allowed by the IRS for travel reimbursement should be reported as employee income and taxes withheld.

In light of Moody's report, commissioners voted to reduce the mileage reimbursement paid by the county from the present 25 cents a mile to 20.5 cents.

In the past, the board has followed state policy for mileage reimbursement, which is 25 cents a mile.

Pitt County school Superintendent Eddie West and Delma Blinson, former Greenville school superintendent who now serves as a consultant for the city Board of Education and a joint school consolidation committee, met briefly with commissioners to give the board members copies of proposed legislation which would consolidate the Greenville and Pitt County school systems in one system effective July 1, 1986.

The consolidation committee, which includes all 12 county school board members, approved the proposed legislation at a meeting Tuesday. The city Board of Education is expected to give its approval next week.

Blinson said the city board would prefer July 1, 1985, as the effective date for the merger, but said "I feel

WATER MAIN BREAKS — Greenville utility workers and Greenville police blocked a section of Memorial Drive this morning after a four-inch cast iron water main broke below ground near the Fairlane Road intersection, causing water to come to the surface and freeze. According to

Wayne Bryant, superintendent of the water and sewer department, said the ice (in front of the cars above) caused hazardous driving. Bryant said the main was expected to be repaired by midday with the street to be reopened to traffic by the end of the day. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Evangelists Report Threats

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Whittington brothers — Jim, Ray and Larry — have put up a $5,000 reward through Greenville Police Department CrimeStoppers for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons they say have been harassing and threatening them for the past three weeks.

"We've always received our share of threats and annoyances. Everybody in the public eye does sometimes," television evangelist Jim Whittington said at a news conference held Wednesday afternoon. "But the last two weeks has been too much. We're beginning to think that whoever is harassing us is beginning to get fanatical and may do something harmful to us or some of our families. That's why we're doing what we can to assist the police in moving ahead with an arrest."

The Whittingtons say dozens of expensive vehicles — from vans to limousines to antique models — that were not ordered have been sent to their Fountain of Life religious organization headquarters in the last few days. They've had dozens of magazine subscriptions they did not request begin at their residential addresses. They've had reservations at local restaurants made in their names.

And they've been called and talked to antagonistically by people who've claimed to be other people. Larry Whittington, the organization's minister of music, said he believed for a while he was being "talked ugly to" by Bennie Rountree, head of the local Southern Christian Leadership Conference, only to find out it was someone representing himself as Rountree.

"We believe whoever this is out to destroy our credibility with the business community and with the black community of Greenville," Jim Whittington said. "We have good relationships with both and we intend to keep these. We just won't sit still for this kind of mischief."

The Whittingtons said they were aware that an "organization" has existed in the Greenville area for some time which, they said, has as its stated purpose, "sinking the Whittingtons' boat." Jim Whittington said he understood the organization is called "The Concerned Citizens of Greenville" or something similar. Whittington said the names of individuals reportedly connected with the organization have been supplied to law enforcement agencies.

"These people may or may not be the ones making the threats and ordering the cars," Jim Whittington

No Order

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

ANSWERS WOULD BE NICE

Recently, in my husband's search for employment, he has found that many companies advertising available positions in The Daily Reflector fail to respond to resumes and/or letters received. It is very disappointing and discouraging to find that your time and money have been spent in vain when more than 90 percent of the time you do not receive a response at all. As professional organizations, companies, etc., it seems that they would take the time to send a letter or make a phone call acknowledging the receipt of the resume or letter. Just having someone take the time to respond could make a big difference in someone's self esteem. S.C.

Daily Reflector Writer Wins Award

Don Schlien of The Daily Reflector took a third place award in editorial writing in the 15,000-34,499 circulation competition of the 1984 North Carolina Press Association Newspaper Contest.

Schlien was scheduled to receive his award during ceremonies in Chapel Hill today. Gov. Jim Martin was to present the press awards and deliver the keynote speech.

Schlien's winning entry was a group of three editorials published in July and August 1984, titled "Leafy Justice," "Good Outlay" and "Wishing List." "Leafy Justice" dealt with the poetry contest associated with the 1984 Ayden Collard Festival; "Good Outlay" addressed the funds spent on preparations for North Carolina's 400th Anniversary celebration, and "Wishing List" tackled the 1984 pork barrel allocations.

The writer is a 38-year veteran of the news business. He began work for the Daily Reflector in 1946 and retired as news editor in June 1984. He currently works part time as a member of the paper's editorial staff.

Schlien says he owes a "great deal to the (newspaper) publisher for giving me the opportunity to write and a great deal to Managing Editor Alvin Taylor for his prodding."

"The editorial writing is a team effort, not individual work," Schlien said. "We read each other's work and discuss it, and the work becomes a team expression, not an individual opinion." The writer also credits his co-workers for providing him materials and subject matter for his editorials.

Schlien says he learned to write "through writing letters when I was in the service" and that he was "influenced by a fellow soldier who was a journalist and wrote beautiful letters." He learned editorial writing, he said, "through years of reading news stories and absorption of their content."

Party-Loving Youngster Finds Place As A Monk

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Can you imagine sending your beer-drinking, party-loving son who played football in college off to visit the relatives in Ireland and having him come home five years later a "dress"-wearing Buddhist monk?

This was the experience of Jim Dougherty's parents who live in upstate New York. But if Dougherty (or Thubten Pende, as he's now called) is telling it correctly, the elder Dougherties have adjusted and now understand that he's a happy, contributing person sharing his happiness and commitment with others.

Thubten Pende is in Greenville this week to conduct a seminar titled "The Six Perfecting Practices — Generosity, Ethics, Patient, Enthusiastic Effort, Concentration and Wisdom." Now a resident of the Noland Monastery in the south of France who's spending several months teaching in California and other places in the United States, he talks easily and with humor about his spiritual journey.

"I graduated in 1971 from the University of Wisconsin with a degree in business administration," he said, "and knew I wasn't quite ready to enter the corporate world. That's about all I knew. But I worked at some part-time jobs to make a couple of thousand dollars and I went to Ireland to visit my grandparents and aunts and uncles and cousins I hadn't seen since I was 3 years old. That was great. I stayed there a month or so, then went on to Amsterdam and Copenhagen, meeting a lot of neat people along the way. Then it was Greece. I found I was learning a lot, traveling alone, mostly that I was able to travel (Please turn to page 12)

Brussels Sprouts Come To The Fare

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

For a good many years the little buds called Brussels sprouts have appeared in small baskets and cartons in supermarkets. But nowadays if you visit a farmer's market you may be able to buy them in the fascinating form in which they grow.

Here is how the botanist, the late Alex D. Hawkes, describes that growth in a new edition of his book "A World of Vegetable Cookery" (Simon & Schuster).

"Growing erect, with a big apical tuft of coarse crumpled leaves, the stout stem bears quantities of small compact globular buds through most of its length. These, much like miniature cabbage heads, are the 'sprouts.'"

Now to buying Brussels sprouts. Hawkes' advice: "When purchasing the vegetable acquire only those specimens which are vivid green in color, firm to the touch and un-wrinkled. The sprouts quickly lose their unique flavor after being picked."

In recent years Brussels sprouts have been relished more than they once were because today's good cooks are aware that they need only brief cooking. This way their bright color, crisp texture and light flavor are retained.

Brussels sprouts take well to other vegetables. For example, they add admirably to a stir-fry of carrots, scallions and mushrooms. And, in the following recipe, Hawkes uses onion, chicken broth, butter, parsley and chives as their partners.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS
CHEZ NOUS

- 4 cups (1 quart) Brussels sprouts
 - 3 tablespoons butter
 - 1/2 cup small white onions, sliced wafer-thin
 - 1-3rd cup rich chicken stock
 - Salt and white pepper to taste
 - 2 teaspoons chopped fresh parsley
 - 1 teaspoon snipped fresh chives
- Cook Brussels sprouts in a small amount of rapidly boiling salted water, tightly covered, for about 5 minutes. Drain and keep warm. In a sizable heavy skillet, melt the butter and over low heat saute the thin onion rings until they are barely soft, stirring often but with care. Add the stock, season rather highly with salt and white pepper, and simmer for 5 minutes. Add the Brussels sprouts, and cook, basting the vegetables constantly, until they are just tender but not overly soft. Serve at once, sprinkled with parsley and chives. Serves 6.

From "A World of Vegetable Cookery," by Alex D. Hawkes (Simon & Schuster).

LIGHT SUPPER
Cheese Macaroni
Salad
Maple Pears & Cookies
MAPLE PEARS

- 3 medium-size ripe Bosc pears (about 1 1/4 pounds)
- 3 tablespoons maple syrup
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice

Stem, peel and core pears; halve lengthwise. In a 10-inch skillet over low heat stir together maple syrup, water and lemon juice. Arrange pear halves in skillet in one layer.

Cook gently, turning as necessary, until tender — about 15 minutes.

Chill. Arrange pears in shallow individual dessert bowls and pour liquid around them. Fill each core cavity with extra maple syrup. Makes 3 to 6 servings.

Cat Trapped In Tree Causes Neighbor Trouble

DEAR ABBY: I am a 69-year-old grandmother who lives alone and suffers from high blood pressure.

Last week I noticed a strange woman in my backyard, so I went out to see what she was doing there.

Well, it seems she lives directly behind me. She said her cat ran out of the house, into my backyard, and climbed to the top of my tallest pine tree. We both tried to coax her down, but the poor thing was too frightened to move.

I won't bore you with the details, but that poor cat was up in my tree crying piteously for three days! It turned bitter cold, so I finally telephoned this neighbor and said, "You must get your cat out of my tree before she freezes or starves to death. Please call a tree man or somebody!"

She said, "You call one; I can't afford it!"

Abby, she lives in a nice house and drives an expensive car, and this is a very affluent neighborhood. So I said, "If you can't afford a pet, you shouldn't have one," whereupon she hung up in my face.

The next morning, the cat somehow managed to scamper down and run home. I later learned that this neighbor telephoned my son's ex-wife and said, "How in the world did you ever stand that dreadful mother-in-law of yours?" (My little grandchild let the cat out of the bag—no pun intended.)

This woman invaded my property, shattered my nerves, then bad-mouthed me to my ex-daughter-in-law. What do you think of her behavior?

OUTRAGED IN GEORGIA

DEAR OUTRAGED: She was rude, inconsiderate and catty (no pun intended). It's said, "Tall fences make good neighbors." Get one.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. I have two grown children by a previous marriage. He has three. We have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money since our marriage.

Under Ohio law, what would happen if one of us were to die without a will? Would the surviving children be entitled to anything? Does the estate have to be probated? And does the person who probated it automatically receive a percentage of the estate?

Your answers to these questions concerning Ohio law will be greatly appreciated.

CONCERNED IN OHIO

DEAR CONCERNED: You say that you and your spouse have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money. Congratulations.

Ohio is teeming with lawyers whose education cost them a lot of money. Please consult one, and be prepared to pay a reasonable fee for receiving authoritative answers to your legal questions.

DEAR ABBY: My son was married recently. His father and I are divorced and his father is remarried.

My question: Should my ex-husband's wife have been in the receiving line? If so, where should she have been standing?

Abby, she stood in the receiving line beside the bride, and I had to stand at the very end.

Please answer in the paper. I want to show it around.

MOTHER OF THE GROOM

DEAR MOTHER: Somebody goofed. She should not have

EXCLUSIVE FASHIONS FOR THE LARGE SIZE WOMAN

At Wits End

By Erna Bombeck

In the beginning was the car. It had a motor and four wheels and when the motor turned over and the wheels went around, it was good.

And Detroit said, "Let there be light."

And the windows were covered with glass and headlights succeeded wicks. It couldn't possibly get any better than that.

Then Detroit said, "Let there be sound," and a radio was installed to bring music to the ears of the driver. Sometimes the motor wouldn't turn over and the wheels wouldn't go around because the radio ran the battery down, but it was good.

Eventually style came to the car and the seats were soft to the touch, interiors lined with velvet and the carpet under the brake pedal was lush and plush. The carpet outlasted the transmission, but it was good.

And Detroit said, "Let there be climate control," and a heater was installed and air conditioning became an option. It was a car for all seasons, except when it rained and the windshield wipers never made contact with the glass window.

Then it came to pass that one day someone figured out families spend a lot of time in the car. And Detroit had another flash. Let there be comfort. Ashtrays were placed near every seat. A little cup holder was incorporated in the console. The seats reclined and a tape deck provided music on cassette. Children fought over the two windows and dripped secret sauce and onion rings between the cushions, but it was good.

There was no doubt anymore that the car was becoming one of the most important forces in American lives.

But it had to hold their attention. No longer would they be content to just drive around. They had to be entertained. Electric windows were installed, lights were primed to flash when the brake was on, and a CB radio where they could drive and talk to truck drivers they didn't know was added.

When they tired of this, Detroit added voices. You could carry on a conversation with talking headlights, chatty brakes and hostile seatbelts.

You could pick up the phone and talk about the traffic. If that wasn't enough, you could decipher personalized license plates or figure out what a person was all about by reading his bumper stickers.

Some days the motor turned over and the wheels went around, but if the power went out in your house, the electric garage doors wouldn't go up and you couldn't get the car out the garage.

But it was good.

Reception Invitation

The members of the First Presbyterian Church invite friends of the Rev. and Mrs. Richard Rhea Gammon to attend a reception in his honor upon his retirement as pastor of the church. The reception will be held in the church fellowship hall Sunday from 3-5 p.m. The church is located on the corner of 14th and Elm Streets.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

When choosing day care for the baby look for a place where the babies are kept clean, dry and comfortable, hear gentle voices and cheerful sounds and receive lots of praise.

VA Care

Last September the American public was warned Veterans Administration hospitals were approaching a crisis point, and the impact is already beginning to be felt.

VA medical centers in North Carolina have begun treating fewer veterans for conditions unrelated to their military service. Federal rules give a priority to veterans with service-related medical conditions, but the centers have been allowing treatment (free) for any ailment a veteran might have.

(Regulations say treatment for non-service connected ailments will end after a set number of visits or a time period determined by a VA doctor.)

Already it poses problems. Some, who by-the-book do not qualify for non-service related care but have been enjoying free benefits over a period of time, have come to look upon their care as a "right" — the same thing happens in other fields — and will use whatever clout and sympathy they can gain to keep that privilege.

Officials at the four VA medical centers in North Carolina assure veterans that those requiring emergency treatment will not be turned away.

We are told that, at the VA center in Salisbury, outpatient visits this fiscal year are running 14 percent above projections; it's probable much the same is happening at centers in Durham, Osteen and Fayetteville.

It is not just North Carolina's problem. There's something more than 28 million veterans in the country today, nearly all of them qualifying for services of the Veterans Administration health program; and by 1990, half of all U.S. males over 64 are expected to be veterans. The increasing age level is accompanied by a growing list of more costly health needs.

Suggested remedial actions about care of vets with non-service-connected medical needs have been talked about. Possibilities include cost-sharing, wider use of the private health care system and reimbursing of VA by Blue Cross-Blue Shield, Medicare and other health insurers when veterans have such coverage.

Limiting treatment of non-service-connected medical needs among veterans who can afford to pay for their services offers only a partial and temporary solution. Still ahead, and just a few years down the line, more VA medical centers (and enlarging of others) will be required to meet needs of qualified and priority patients.

Well Served

When municipal services that are accustomed to moderate temperatures can be maintained in zero and sub-zero cold, a community is truly being well served.

Utilities workers, public service workers and Department of Transportation workers all came through for us during a frigid weekend. They were accompanied by scores (more like hundreds) of others in supportive roles: lawmen, firemen, rescue units ... and on and on. It was a class act.

Over and over we've heard about the penetrating and even painful cold that accompanied the mercury's fall and reluctant rise to more familiar levels. Many people whose duties involved facing up to that as well as accompanying difficulties of meeting their responsibilities, endured that, too.

We owe them an expression of appreciation and thanks. Consider it done.

To them we say: you overcame discomforts and obstacles rarely encountered. Thank you. It has been an occasion of collective and individual heroics.

Aspin Making Presence Known

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Les Aspin, the new man at the helm of the House Armed Services Committee, is letting the administration know it must detail its arms control positions if it wants to win friends and money on Capitol Hill.

And in doing so, Aspin is hinting that his past support for the MX missile the administration wants may be waning.

Aspin, D-Wis., took over as chairman of the influential committee a bit over two weeks ago. He turned down all requests by reporters for interviews, and instead drafted a speech on one of his favorite topics — arms control — and then delivered it to reporters and defense analysts to give a glimpse of his thinking.

He raised a number of interesting questions for the administration.

Aspin said the injection of the "Star Wars" Strategic Defense Initiative into arms talks has shifted the emphasis of nuclear strategy from deterrence to defense, even though the SDI program is purely research to see what might help down ballistic missiles.

The former Pentagon economist now in his eighth term in Congress warned the administration it must keep Congress posted on arms talks and the U.S. position if it wants budgetary help. "Congress is not likely to vote the administration's way on all these issues just because arms talks are going on. There is an enormous deficit going on too. It is not enough to say that defending the country against ballistic missile attack is good and therefore we ought to fund it all, or to say some of these weapons are needed for bargaining leverage and therefore we ought to approve them automatically," he said.

Aspin said what he and others in Congress want to know is where is the SDI program headed, and since that may take some time to find out, just what is the administration going to do with the more immediate arms issues such as the approaching launch of a new submarine that will put the United States over sub-launched missile limits unless others are decommissioned.

And, he said, members want to know the U.S. positions on strategic and intermediate range missile talks as well as why it would not be a good idea to trade off defense (read "Star Wars") for a reduction in Soviet offensive capability.

Aspin's hint that he might not be entirely thrilled anymore with the MX missile comes in a question asking, "What should we do with the MX now that it is no longer central to the negotiations?" His past support has been based upon its role in negotiations, not its abilities as a weapon.

Farm Tax Bill Considered

RALEIGH — North Carolina farmers may soon get some local property tax relief thanks to a proposal being put before the General Assembly.

The Property Tax Study Committee is proposing that the assembly implement a statewide uniform land valuation system under which farmers would be taxed according to their land's ability to produce revenue.

Farmers have long complained that their land is valued according to the local market. They say land should not be taxed according to its potential sale value but according to the amount of money a farmer can earn working that land.

Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, incoming Senate agriculture chairman, says the problem has existed for as long as he can remember. "I introduced the first bill in 1967, or was it 1969," Speed said during an interview. "Land was being valued at the fair market value rather than the value for what it's being used for now."

Speed's bill eventually became law in 1973. It said that farmland would be valued against the prevailing market for agricultural land.

A farmer with 50 acres near an industrial park would be taxed according to that farm's market value as a farm, not its market value as a site for new industry or homes. The difference could be considerable because industrial and residential land is far more expensive than farmland.

But the 1973 bill did not solve the problem. During the hearings the committee has held since the end of the 1983 session, there has been testimony that some tax supervisors have continued to increase the valuations on farmland despite falling prices. Also, the committee heard stories of farms selling for inflated prices — due to extraordinary conditions — which in turn raised the land values and tax bills of neighboring farms.

So the committee wants to implement a statewide valuation system linked to the productivity capacity of the land. Market values would not be used. Instead, land would be valued according to a formula which took into account its soil types and the market value of corn and soybeans.

Under the proposal, the agricultural extension service would place

North Carolina's many different soil classifications into a half dozen groups. Agricultural economists would track the potential yields for those land groups and the price corn and soybeans are bringing.

Every two years, the N.C. Department of Revenue would then calculate a land value based on those factors. To keep the calculation from taking wide swings, several years' experience on the market price for corn and soybeans would be used. Farmers would then pay the locally set tax rate on that productive use value.

Several other factors will probably be added. Since tobacco earns a great deal more per acre than do corn and soybeans, a tobacco allotment would raise the land's value. The local market for tobacco would be the determining factor in the size of the addition. Also, because climate variations across the state effect yield, some factoring process for climate may have to be added.

An effective date for the system has become a matter of controversy. In the original proposal, the system would have been implemented as counties revalued over the next eight years. That would save counties the trouble and expense of an unscheduled revaluation. But several members of the committee complained that some farmers would get relief as early as 1986 or 1987 and others would be stuck with the old system until 1993.

Strength For Today

The story of Moses hearing the voice of God speaking to him out of the burning bush is familiar to every Bible reader. "And Moses said, I will now turn aside and see this great sight why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called to him out of the midst of the bush and said, Moses, Moses, and he said, Here I am" (Exodus 3:3-4).

There are burning bushes lining your pathways and mine. If we pass them by, they have no message for us. If we turn aside to see, God speaks to us out of these things.

There may be circumstances in home, office, school, aflame with a message from God. Disappointment and frustration are often God's beacons. Opportunity for advancement is sometimes the means by which God speaks to us.

Watch for the burning bushes along your pathway of life. God will speak to you if you turn aside to see.

Persistence Pays Off

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's famed political intuition and less celebrated managerial talent were confirmed during a break in the tough Geneva bargaining sessions when an impatient Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko growled to Secretary of State George Shultz, "I've already heard that half of 10 times (Russian for half a dozen)."

Shultz had just explained Reagan's insistence on continuing research for Star Wars — the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). "All right," Shultz replied, "if you want, I'll explain it to you a sixth and a seventh and an eighth time."

Such persistence in pressing a much ridiculed program ("The Stars Wars phrase has hurt us," the president told a private briefing of congressmen the week before Geneva) with Shultz fully in support constituted Reagan's triumph at Geneva. Without the strategic defense concept to put fear into the Soviet heart, and steel into the U.S. spine, Gromyko probably would not have gone to Geneva. Or, once there, he would not have agreed to offer up on the bargaining table the huge Soviet advantage in hard-target, counterforce ICBMs.

Vague on facts and ignorant of arms control history, the president nevertheless perceived that the U.S. desperately needed a credible counter to awesome Soviet offensive nuclear power. That delivered the Soviets to the negotiating table they swore they had abandoned.

While sticking to Star Wars in the face of ridicule, Reagan enforced an unusual degree of discipline on all key players. The tone was set in a New Year's Day meeting at Walter Annenberg's desert mansion in Palm Springs and the chief enforcer was self-effacing, soft-spoken Robert McFarlane, the president's national security adviser.

McFarlane has formed a close bond with Paul Nitze, Shultz' special arms control adviser who has helped convince him of SDI's value. At Palm Springs, McFarlane wrung agreement on a tightly worded 16-page presidential instruction limiting maneuver room for the Shultz-lead American delegation. Those instructions were then initiated back here by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the CIA's William Casey.

Shultz was instructed not to trade any particle of Star Wars research for hints of major Soviet concessions in its dangerous armory of counterforce weapons (ICBMs aimed at American silos and bomber fields). Far more difficult, Shultz must get a Soviet commitment to put its own rapidly growing, land-based defensive systems (ABM) on the table: otherwise, the U.S. would propose a long Geneva adjournment to give Moscow time to change its mind.

Toward the end of the last session at Geneva, Gromyko was hanging tough against the ABM demand. Shultz thereupon asked for a recess and sent to the room next door to give his colleagues the bad news. No member of the American delegation suggested that the U.S. should tone down its demand to avoid a politically damaging failure.

When Shultz returned with his position unchanged, Gromyko yielded. The Soviet imperative of trying to find ways to examine and dilute Reagan's Star Wars programs overrode the Kremlin's desire to hide its own many-sided defensive systems.

Thus was Reagan's political intuition vindicated in this first breakthrough round of new U.S.-Soviet arms talks. The victory is small compared to what lies ahead. Thwarted in their original negotiating offer limiting talks solely to Star Wars, the Soviets have many poisoned arrows in their quiver. For example, a call for a moratorium on new medium-range missiles in Europe would have to be rejected by Reagan, regenerating anti-nuclear activists here and in Western Europe.

The U.S. response to such Soviet maneuvers may be less fractured than previously. Hitherto feuding State and Defense Department arms control specialists are in a state of truce. Shultz has shown an openness to Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle and other hard-liners. Perle, the State Department's hairshirt these past four years, praised Shultz on the return flight from Geneva for having handled the delegation as a "team."

Will this new cordiality persist? Certainly in nothing like its immediate post-Geneva warmth. But if the key players gave the President's intuition free rein, the new round of talks might conceivably produce a good result or two. That's not the utopian dream of devotees of arms control for its own sake, but it might be more than the disappointing and dangerous harvest of the past 15 years.

Larceny Charges

Greenville police arrested two people Wednesday in connection with thefts from local stores.

Officer B.D. Dobbs said Amye Jean Vezina, 18, of Wilmington, was charged with shoplifting in connection with an 8:37 p.m. incident at Nichols Discount Center on Greenville Boulevard in which Ms. Vezina allegedly concealed a quantity of cosmetics in her purse.

Dobbs said that Ms. Vezina was also charged with larceny after several items allegedly taken from Kerr Drugs at Carolina East Mall earlier in the evening were found in her car.

Officer P.W. Worthington said Henry Andrew Tyson, 33, of 1406B Colonial Ave. was charged with larceny after $84 worth of meats and $75 worth of gloves were taken from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard about 11:54 p.m.

Worthington said Tyson was taken into custody on Clifton Street after allegedly placing the merchandise taken from the store in a wooded area near the street.

Thefts Investigated

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of two thefts reported to the department early today.

Officer G.W. Williams said an undetermined amount of cash was taken from the Fresh Way store at 1401 Dickinson Ave. when a man reached into the cash register and took all the $1 bills from the cash drawer about 12:05 a.m.

According to Sgt. D.D. Heinz, 70 cartons of cigarettes and a quantity of tools were taken from the Fast Fare convenience store at the intersection of Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard in a break-in reported at 5:45 a.m.

Heinz said entrance to the building was gained by forcing open a rear door.

Second Lieutenants

Three recent graduates of East Carolina University have been commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force. All completed their studies at the end of the fall semester.

The new lieutenants are Don Hughes of Grifton, David Padilla of Fayetteville and John Scott Wilkins of Laredo, Texas.

Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester P. Hughes, earned a bachelor's degree in industrial technology. He will be assigned to undergraduate pilot training at Laughlin Air Force Base, Texas, in June.

Padilla, who earned a bachelor's degree in computer science, will also report to Laughlin Air Force Base for undergraduate pilot training in June. He is the son of retired Air Force Lt. Col. Frank G. Padilla and Patricia Padilla of Fayetteville.

Wilkins, son of Leslie and Jarusha Wilkins, has finished his studies for a bachelor's degree in psychology, and will report to Mather Air Force Base, Calif., for undergraduate navigator training.

The three cadets received their commissions in a ceremony held on campus.

Galaxy Crash Spotlights Laxity Of Rules

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — This week's crash of a Galaxy Airlines plane in Nevada spotlights the government's occasional practice of granting airlines waivers from the thousands of detailed and strict safety requirements it enforces.

The small charter airline obtained an extension last fall from the Federal Aviation Administration for a routine, but mandatory, replacement of a propeller on the plane that crashed. The reason: It didn't have a spare propeller and had to borrow one.

No one is suggesting that the propeller incident, which began last November and was still unresolved when the plane crashed, is linked to the accident that killed 68 people seconds after the turboprop Lockheed Electra departed Reno early Monday.

Investigators still are trying to determine what caused the plane to severely vibrate and rash, and FAA officials said Wednesday the propeller was inspected within weeks before the crash and found to be airworthy.

But the disclosure brought into focus a practice by the Federal Aviation Administration to occasionally legally bend strictly written safety rules by waiving them or, as was the case with Galaxy, giving an airline more time to comply.

FAA officials insisted in interviews that these practices pose no safety hazard and each exemption or delay in compliance of a rule by an air carrier is weighed individually before it is approved. Federal law, in fact, specifically allows for such exemptions or extensions.

"You can't write a regulation that's going to totally fit each situation," FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said Wednesday. "In each case there is a very careful review that safety is not compromised."

Farrar said exemptions or even postponements of safety requirements are rare, but could not estimate how many times the practice occurs. "Nobody keeps track of those," he said.

But some critics of the FAA practice say deviations from the rules are too widespread.

"We think they grant far too many exemptions and waivers (from safety requirements)," said John O'Brien, safety specialist for the Air Line Pilots Association. "The FAA establishes minimum safety standards and every time you grant an exemption waiver, deviation or extension you're reducing the minimum standard."

The pilots' union has criticized the FAA for exempting airlines completely from some safety requirements. O'Brien cites the decision by the FAA to allow some airlines, even though they fly up to 50 miles from land, to be exempt from rules requiring safety rafts on all aircraft flying over water.

Representatives of several larger carriers say they rarely ask for postponement of safety requirements. "I don't recall us ever having asked for one," said Delta Air Lines spokesman Bill Jackson.

For smaller carriers, say aviation sources, such requests can often mean the difference between taking a badly needed plane out of service or being allowed to comply at a more convenient time.

The federal safety requirements cover a broad spectrum of items from dictating what procedures a pilot must follow before and during flight to how often hundreds of pieces of equipment are to be inspected, cleaned or replaced.

Galaxy Airlines' request for an extension sheds light not only on the FAA's practices, but also on some of the ticklish problems facing a small airline. According to the FAA, it went this way:

FAA rules required that the hub of each propeller on the airline's Electra be closely inspected for corrosion, cleaned and recoated every 42 months. The deadline came for one of the propellers on Nov. 5, but Galaxy asked for and was granted an extension to Nov. 15.

Normally an airline simply replaces the propeller so the plane can remain in service while the work is being done. But Galaxy, which has three Electras in its fleet, didn't have a spare propeller and was faced with having to ground the plane. In the extra two weeks it borrowed a propeller from another airline to keep the plane flying.

But toward the end of December the airline said it wanted its propeller back, so Galaxy told the FAA it wanted to put the original propeller back onto the plane and asked for an additional two-week grace period, presumably while it searched for another propeller.

Farrar said the second extension was granted, but only after an FAA inspector and an independent company examined the propeller and declared it safe. The second extension was to have run out last Tuesday, 24 hours after the crash in Reno.

Dole Says GOP Senators Won't Try To Cut Existing Defense Spending

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole said today that "nobody is talking about cutting" defense spending below current levels, but declared that Republican senators' $50 billion deficit-cutting package will trim President Reagan's proposals for future increases in the Pentagon budget.

Dole reiterated that he is counting on the cooperation of recalcitrant Sen. Barry Goldwater, the new head of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The Kansas Republican leader remained optimistic even in the face of Goldwater's public refusal Wednesday to suggest any possible reductions in Reagan plans for increased defense spending.

"I'm not here to argue about numbers with (Secretary of Defense) Caspar Weinberger, to disagree with Sen. Goldwater or the president; I'm here to suggest that we've got to find a way to include everyone," Dole said in a breakfast speech to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "We're waiting for Sen. Goldwater, Sen. (Ted) Stevens, Sen. (John) Warner and other key players on the Armed Services Committee to help us in this area."

Goldwater flatly refused to comply with Dole's request that all committee chairmen submit recommendations by Friday on where their respective areas of the budget can be cut to reduce the federal deficit. The Arizona Republican said he is waiting on Reagan's budget, due out Feb. 6.

"He's the commander-in-chief," Goldwater said of Reagan. "I listen to him."

But Dole said defense is one key to putting together a package aimed at reducing federal spending by $50 billion in fiscal 1986, even though the Senate would do nothing to undercut the U.S. negotiating position with the Soviet Union.

"We don't want to do anything that would thwart those efforts ... or indicate to the Soviets that the Congress is going to do what they can't do at the negotiating table," he told the business leaders. "But, having said that, that doesn't mean defense is off limits. ... A number of solid, conservative Republican senators have said, 'Unless defense is on the table, forget it.'"

Goldwater said Wednesday he will not discuss actual cuts in defense outlays from current levels and Dole said today no one is suggesting that.

"Nobody is talking about cutting outlays in defense," Dole told the breakfast gathering. He added that the reductions would be made in the increased budget authority the Reagan administration will request for future years in its budget.

Such reductions in budget authority could reduce 1986 outlays below Reagan's requests and still leave them substantially higher than 1985 outlays.

Dole also said it would be tough to reach the $50 billion in cuts unless cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other social programs are included.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Goldwater is not the only one having difficulty with the idea of suggesting cuts.

"We are biting some very tough bullets" on the budget, Domenici said.

He said several committee chairmen already have submitted budget recommendations and some have suggested alternatives, but "some have indicated that they cannot achieve" reductions.

"We want a $50 billion cut in 1986. We want something larger in 1987 and something larger still in 1988,"

Dole said, referring to the overall GOP goal.

He predicted that in the end, "Sen. Goldwater will be cooperative ... We don't see any effort by any committee chairman to sidetrack what we're doing."

In fact, Goldwater declared defense spending should not be frozen and should increase in real terms — that is, increase even after inflation is taken into consideration.

"I would like to see a higher figure, but 5.7 per cent, 5.8 percent or even 6 percent is a figure we can meet without doing any damage to the economy," Goldwater said.

Foundation Gives $25 Million To Help Create Safer World

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disturbed by the near-monopoly on war and peace research by the military-industrial complex, the MacArthur Foundation will give away $25 million over the next few years to entice American scholars to study routes to a safer world.

The program will double the yearly U.S. expenditure for independent research in the field, according to the Chicago-based foundation, one of the largest gift-giving institutions in the country.

Details of the program were to be announced at a news conference today by Jerome B. Wiesner, science adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson and chairman of the foundation's international security committee.

The largest single grant, $6.24 million over a five-year period, will go to the Social Science Research Council in New York, which will administer 32 two- and three-year fellowships for young scholars.

The Brookings Institution, a Washington think tank, already doing several major studies each year on international security issues, will get $1.5 million over five years.

About 25 other major research organizations and universities will receive grants ranging from $50,000 to $150,000 annually.

The decision to make the grants stemmed from a report by Kenneth Prewitt, president of the Social Science Research Council. He found that of about 30,000 doctorates granted in the social and behavioral sciences between 1979 and 1983, fewer than 200 dealt with international peace and security, economic warfare, weapons, nuclear strategy, arms control and other war and peace issues.

Prewitt found that most of the research on these topics was being done by physicists, engineers and foreign policy experts — the traditional brain trusts of the Pentagon and State Department.

"Given the nuclear stalemate and concerns that the arms race may swerve out of control, the current intellectual base of security and arms control studies may be too narrow," Prewitt said.

Despite the national debate fueled by media blockbusters such as "The Day After," and the public outcry for arms control, too few American scholars are engaged in serious study of peace and international security issues, Prewitt said.

In remarks prepared for today's news conference, Wiesner said the foundation wants to "reduce the 'knowledge gap' between what we understand now and what we need to know to save the planet from extinction. In a world capable of almost instant self-destruction, we must re-think our options and discover new strategies that will insure a safer and more secure world."

He described the sums involved as an "unprecedented infusion," which would have a "strong catalytic effect on the public at large and on research institutions grappling with the life and death issues of nuclear war and international security."

The institution, officially known as the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, gave away $57 million in 1983 and is best known for its $9 million-a-year MacArthur Fellows Program. That program gives creative thinkers and doers sizeable sums of money over five-year periods to spend as they wish.

The foundation was activated in 1978 at the death of its founder, John D. MacArthur, owner of the Bankers Life and Casualty Company.

Reagan Offering Choice Of Jobs To Kirkpatrick

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jeane Kirkpatrick, who is stepping down as ambassador to the United Nations, will be offered two foreign-policy jobs outside the White House, according to a Reagan administration source.

Reagan will ask Mrs. Kirkpatrick to take the top post at either the Agency for International Development or the United States Information Agency, according to the source, who spoke only on condition of not being identified.

"She has a choice," the source said Wednesday night, adding that Reagan has does not have a preference for a position he would like her to take.

The president plans to meet next Wednesday with Mrs. Kirkpatrick and will discuss the offers, the source said.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Reagan met last month to discuss a new position for her and agreed to talk again after the president's inauguration.

Another administration official, speaking only on the condition he not be identified, said Reagan "has a job in mind that would be in line with her experience, not in the White House but in the executive branch, in keeping with her area of expertise."

The Washington Post in Thursday editions quoted Mrs. Kirkpatrick as saying through an aide: "As I said, after my Dec. 10 meeting with the president, I will have no further comment about my future until we meet again."

There also was no comment from AID Administrator M. Peter McPherson, who has not indicated that he plans to leave the government, the newspaper said.

Hard-line conservatives had hoped Reagan would give her a position such as national security adviser or head of the State Department or Pentagon, but the president asked each of the incumbents to stay on for his second term.

Reagan said he did not have a job worthy of Mrs. Kirkpatrick in the White House.

Reagan Says Aid Must Continue To Nicaragua

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the United States must continue supporting anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, but that it would be very difficult to provide money openly because that could be "considered acts of war."

Reagan expressed his views Wednesday amid new warnings that Congress will turn down any request for additional secret aid for the rebels battling Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

"The covert aid situation, I suspect, is not a viable proposition," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in a speech at the National Press Club.

Reagan, who gave the first interview of his second term Wednesday to The Associated Press, also revealed that he has proposed Geneva as the setting for a new round of nuclear arms control talks with the Soviet Union, beginning early in March. He said there has been no reply yet from the Kremlin.

"Obviously, if there is some reason that's not satisfactory to them, we'll continue trying to find a date," the president said.

He noted that Moscow and Washington agreed to try to fix a time and a place for the talks within a month of Secretary of State George P. Shultz' meeting Jan. 7-8 with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. "We're still in that single month," Reagan said, "so I don't think that this is much foot-dragging."

He said "there just is no way of knowing" whether the uncertainty about Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko's health will affect the outcome of the arms talks.

However, he noted there have been as many Soviet presidents since he took office as there were in the preceding 48 years, and said, "The long periods of ill health and so forth obviously had to have an effect" on Kremlin decision-making during his first term.

Congress imposed a ban on additional secret aid to Nicaragua last October until Feb. 28. A number of lawmakers, including Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, have said the United States should fund the rebels openly instead of with secret funds.

Asked about that proposal, Reagan said, "I think there are great difficulties in doing that ... because in the world of international law, you find that you've changed the situation completely. And you then find yourself having to weigh what are then considered acts of war."

Durenberger, himself, has acknowledged there would be problems with providing overt aid.

The administration has never officially admitted that it is financing a rebel force trying to topple a government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations. The administration has argued that its efforts have been directed not at overthrowing the Sandinistas but at preventing Nicaragua from exporting revolution to El Salvador and other Central American nations.

Video Raps Drug Scene

By DAVID EGNER
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York state has entered the music video business with a rap tune called "One Dumb Move," to warn teen-agers: "Do not fall under the spell of smoke, drugs or alcohol."

The star of the one-minute video is Gary Byrd, the self-styled "Professor of the Rap." A former Buffalo disc jockey, Byrd uses fast talk, fast moves, and music with a heavy beat to chant his message on "One Dumb Move."

"Alcohol may cause you no alarm, until you wake up and find that you are harmed," Byrd raps.

"You may laugh and think cigarettes are a joke, but is it worth bad breath and health to smoke?"

"And when you check out the score in drug abuse, what you find is a game you can only lose."

The refrain of the song is: "One dumb move, can blow your groove!"

Byrd said at a news conference on Wednesday that he tried in the song to combine education and entertainment to create "edutainment."

The survey and production of the records and the music video have cost the state $80,000.

"One Dumb Move" is patterned after typical music video programming, and TV stations around the state have agreed to broadcast the video 2,783 times this year as a public service announcement, said Penny Murphy, director of health education promotion for the Health Department.

Radio stations will also play the song, she said Wednesday.

In addition, the Health Department has released 50,000 "One Dumb Move" records for free distribution and hopes to use the song as the foundation of a proposed 45-minute program for presentation in schools, Ms. Murphy said.

The whole production was triggered by a Health Department scientific survey of 1,214 New York teen-agers who are considered to be a representative sample of the state's 2.15 million teen-agers. The survey found that:

—65 percent have tried illegal drugs and 19 percent use drugs at least once a week.

—36 percent drink alcohol at least once a week and 21 percent have five or more drinks at a time.

—21 percent of girls and 18 percent of boys smoke.

The statistics are "mind-boggling," said Matilda Cuomo, wife of Gov. Mario Cuomo and the honorary chairwoman of the state Council on Children and Families.

Mrs. Cuomo said the video is designed to reach youngsters in a way they find entertaining to convince them that "God gave you one body ... take care of it, because you're not going to get any more."

Lutheran Bishops Voice Alarm Over Indictments

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal infiltration of the church sanctuary movement and indictment of 16 leaders is "alarming," say Lutheran bishops who predict a confrontation between the government and churches helping Central American refugees.

The heads of three Lutheran denominations totaling more than 5 million members said in a statement to be released here and in Tucson, Ariz., today that the action was based on a "questionable interpretation of the law."

The bishops said they were "deeply disturbed" by the 71-count indictment, and that "it is particularly alarming that the indictment came as a result of a 10-months-long investigation which included the infiltration of several churches by federal informers and undercover agents."

The statement was issued by Bishop James R. Crumley of New York, president of the Lutheran Church in America; Bishop David Preus of Minneapolis, president of the American Lutheran Church; and Bishop Will Herzfeld, president of the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

New Aspirin Labels Due In Some Stores This Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warnings of a link between aspirin and the often fatal children's disease known as Reye Syndrome will begin appearing on supermarket shelves this week, but some critics say the industry's voluntary notices are not enough.

The government announced Wednesday that the aspirin industry has agreed to a warning campaign including posters and shelf stickers in stores and supermarkets and public service ads on radio and television.

The warnings will tell parents not to give aspirin to children or teenagers suffering from chicken pox or influenza unless a doctor is consulted first.

The warning is based on a study by the Centers for Disease Control that indicates children treated with aspirin for those ailments may face a 25 times greater risk of contracting Reye Syndrome than children who have flu or chicken pox but do not receive aspirin.

Reye Syndrome is a fast-developing sickness that occurs in children and teen-agers following a viral infection such as flu or chicken pox.

It is characterized by a sudden onset of vomiting, often with fever. Other symptoms include lethargy, severe headaches and sudden changes in behavior. The illness can progress rapidly to convulsions, delirium and coma.

Of the 190 cases reported in the year ending last November, about one in four died, and many of the survivors suffered brain damage.

The aspirin industry's leaders have agreed with the Department of Health and Human Services to spread word of the possible link voluntarily, although industry leaders have said they still do not feel the evidence is conclusive.

But the public health activist who originally released the study to the public says the industry does not go far enough because aspirin products now on the shelf — some of which recommend aspirin for children suffering from the flu — would remain on the shelf through this winter's flu season rather than be recalled.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the activist Health Research Group, said companies "should be required to put a strong, uniform label on and should be required to take steps until then to either remove unlabeled products from the shelves or put warning stickers on...."

"The question is how many children will die or suffer brain damage before the government orders a more thorough response," Wolfe said.

HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler announced the aspirin industry's campaign in a statement

Wednesday, commending the Aspirin Foundation of America for "its prompt and responsible action, which will be getting the message to Americans within a week."

One Washington-based supermarket chain — Giant Food — plans to have posters in place Thursday, Mrs. Heckler's statement said.

Baker Sails Toward Confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although James A. Baker III is coasting toward confirmation as Treasury secretary, his claim that the Reagan administration will put tax overhaul on the same footing as deficit reduction is drawing opposition from within his own party.

Key Senate Republicans have told Baker, whose nomination was unanimously endorsed Wednesday by the Senate Finance Committee, that they consider action to trim deficits around $200 billion more pressing than simplifying the tax code.

"I don't mean to fault Jim Baker ... but our first priority must be deficit reduction," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

At his confirmation hearing Wednesday, Baker told the committee that President Reagan viewed the two items as "of equal priority on the domestic agenda" but would like the two legislative packages to proceed through Congress on "separate tracks" and not get lumped together.

"It seems that in the real world, it's pretty hard to two-track that. It's going to be very difficult. It may be two tracks, but the first track is deficit reduction," Dole told reporters.

Dole is overseeing a separate effort by Senate Republicans to come up with a plan to cut deficits by $50 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Baker, White House chief of staff for the past four years, said the administration would present a proposal to freeze some spending while cutting other programs as well as a "major tax initiative" based on some form of modified flat-rate tax scheme.

He said Reagan would outline both in more detail in his State of the Union Address on Feb. 6.

Baker, who is swapping jobs with the current Treasury secretary, Donald T. Regan, is expected to be overwhelmingly approved by the full Senate next week.

Baker stressed that the tax plan unveiled recently by his predecessor was just a "starting point on the road to reforming the tax system" and could be substantially modified before it is sent to Congress.

That proposal would slash current tax rates while at the same time broadening the tax base by eliminating reductions and making more income subject to taxes. Baker said that, whatever tax simplification plan is endorsed by the administration, it would be "revenue neutral" — that is, it would result in neither an overall tax hike nor a tax reduction.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., told Baker that "I'm not sure getting tangled up in tax reform might not divert our energies from deficit reduction."

And Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the committee chairman, told reporters after the hearing that Congress' first priority clearly would be deficit reductions. However, he predicted the Senate will have finished its initial round of budget decisions within six weeks, after which the president's tax plan could be addressed.

Baker was approved by the Finance Committee after a hearing lasting under three hours, at which he was the sole witness. Senators and Baker exchanged numerous pleasantries during the session and several senators even got the jump on the Senate vote by calling Baker

"Mr. Secretary."

Baker told the panel the president's budget, to be submitted to Congress on Feb. 4, would call for "a total freeze on total federal program outlays for fiscal 1986 relative to 1985."

However, Baker said the president still intends to honor a campaign promise to not reduce Social Security benefits.

Study Says Tax Heavier On Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxes are more costly for lower-income families than they were 20 years ago while the tax burden on the wealthiest Americans is down about 10 percent, a new study says.

The study by Brookings Institution economist Joseph A. Pechman also concluded that increases in benefits from such federal programs as Social Security and food stamps have prevented tax changes from drastically shifting wealth from the poor to the rich.

While taxes have little effect on the distribution of income, federal benefits such as Social Security payments have "a major equalizing effect on the distribution of income," the Brookings Institution said Wednesday in releasing Pechman's book, "Who Paid the Taxes, 1966-85."

Pechman concluded that the system of federal, state and local taxes is not as progressive — based on ability to pay — as it was two decades ago because:

—The burden on those at the low end of the income scale (about $25,000 or less) is rising because payroll taxes paid by employers and employees to finance Social Security and by employers for unemployment compensation continue to rise. Periodic adjustments in the personal tax exemption and standard deductions failed to keep pace with inflation.

—The share borne by those at the top of the income ladder — about $72,000-plus — is declining because of the lessening role of the corporate income tax and the property tax as revenue sources.

Wealthy people get most of their income from property, including shares of corporations.

The across-the-board tax cuts enacted in 1981 at President Reagan's request also have played a role in the shift, Pechman said. Lower-income taxpayers lost a big share of their tax cut to inflation, which nudged them into higher tax brackets.

Milder Weather Causing More Problems In Florida

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Citrus growers, stunned by the devastating effects of the worst freeze this century, are now faced with rising temperatures that officials say could burst juice cells and ruin the fruit.

"What we do not need now is any 80-degree weather," said Doug Bornique, executive director of the Indian River Citrus League. "That would be extremely harmful" because the frozen citrus would thaw too quickly, ruining it before it can be processed into concentrate.

"A gradual escalation of temperature would be the best thing that could happen to the citrus in this area now," Bornique said.

The National Weather Service predicted temperatures in the upper 60s today as far north as Orlando in the heart of the Central Florida citrus belt, and in the mid 60s in Jacksonville and the high 50s in Tallahassee.

As citrus growers rushed their freeze-affected fruit to juice-making plants to salvage as much as possible, the Florida Citrus Commission planned to meet today to consider temporary restrictions on the packing of fresh fruit.

Such a measure, usually lasting a week to 10 days, is meant to keep damaged fruit out of markets.

Temperatures were expected to drop again by

Saturday, but forecaster Ron White said, "It doesn't look as severe as the cold wave we've had in the past few days."

The damage to citrus, vegetables and other crops in Florida was expected to exceed the $1 billion in losses brought by the December 1983 freeze, officials said. Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency.

The frigid weather also caused more than a dozen deaths, caused blackouts and triggered sinkholes that swallowed trees and threatened homes in one rural farming community on Florida's west coast.

Farmers in Dover had used millions of gallons of water to spray blooming berry plants, trying to protect them. That caused the water pressure to drop in the porous limestone that underlies much of Florida. Once the water pressure drops, limestone caverns collapse, causing sinkholes.

State agricultural experts say the cold weather might have delivered the "knockout blow" in Florida's battle against citrus canker, a highly contagious bacterial disease that kills citrus trees.

Subfreezing weather kills the canker bacteria, but pathologists cautioned that the disease could survive in warmer South Florida locations and then spread to other parts of the state.

FROZEN IRRIGATION — Crew leader Tom Kynder checks a cabbage patch near Bunnell, Fla., to determine damage after three successive nights of sub-freezing temperatures. The round objects in front of him are iced-over wheels on an irrigation system. Kynder says many of the cabbage can be saved, although Florida citrus growers now are concerned that thawing weather may cause fruit cells to burst. (AP Laserphoto)

Measure Filed To Restore Scope Of Civil Rights Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of lawmakers said today they are introducing legislation to "restore the broad scope and coverage" of the nation's civil rights laws.

Designed to revive protections lost in a Supreme Court ruling, the bill is backed by a coalition of the nation's civil rights organizations.

The Reagan administration opposed a similar bill last year, and White House officials said they plan to back less-encompassing legislation to be sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

The controversy centers on just what language is needed to restore the protections lost in the 1983 court ruling, especially in the enforcement area.

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights says these powers must be restored through broad language that protects women, the elderly, the handicapped and minorities against discrimination in many facets of their lives.

The coalition, representing 165 organizations, coordinated and helped draft the legislation, called the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985.

But Dole and administration officials have said the restoration bill should only protect against discrimination in educational institutions — the subject of the Supreme Court ruling. Anything more, they contend, would lead to a massive new federal intrusion in Americans' lives.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, said the bill will "effectively prohibit federal funding of discrimination against women, minorities, senior citizens and the disabled."

"Our bill would restore the broad scope and coverage of our fundamental civil rights statutes," he said.

Hawkins said he hopes to bring the legislation to the House floor in early spring.

Last year, a similar bill with somewhat different language passed the House 375-32 in June, but died in the Senate when conservatives mounted a filibuster in the waning days of the 98th Congress.

The Supreme Court, in the case of Grove City College in Pennsylvania, stripped away an enforcement weapon against colleges that receive federal money while practicing sex discrimination.

Milk Carton Ad Brings Girl Home

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The day after a photograph of a missing teen-ager appeared on thousands of milk cartons, the girl who left home two months ago rejoined her family with "a bunch of hugs and tears," her mother said.

Doria Paige Yarbrough, 13, was watching television with friends in Fresno about 160 miles northwest of her family's home in Lancaster when she saw a report on a dairy's campaign to help find missing children, authorities said.

Miss Yarbrough, who disappeared Nov. 11, was urged by the friends to go home and called her mother on Tuesday.

"I had pretty much given up," her mother, Velma Herman, said Wednesday from the Beverly Hills office of state Assemblyman Gray Davis. "I'm happy, excited."

"I'm happy to be home," was all that Miss Yarbrough would say at an afternoon news conference.

The two did not discuss why the teen-ager left home nor what she has been doing the past two months, Ms. Herman said.

"We haven't really discussed anything yet. First we're going to get settled in. Then we'll discuss the who, what, where and when," Ms. Herman said.

Miss Yarbrough's disappearance was widely publicized after Alta-Dena dairy announced Jan. 17 that it would place her photo and that of another missing girl on their milk cartons.

Television stations and newspapers ran pictures of the cartons, which began appearing on store shelves Monday, and Doria called home Tuesday after watching a television report on the campaign.

Judge Overturns Potty Paper Firing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Calling it "The Purloined Potty Paper Caper," a judge has ordered back pay and reinstatement for a department store employee fired for taking a half-roll of toilet paper worth 11 cents to clean his car windows.

"And to think, that there are those among us who have the effrontery to suggest that frivolous matters are presented to the courts," U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin wrote in Wednesday's ruling.

Sarokin said Schlesinger's Department Store in West New York should give Enrique Cuevas his old job and pay him an amount to be determined by an arbitrator. A lawyer for Cuevas says $25,000 in back pay is at stake.

"Now," Sarokin wrote, "the majesty of the federal courts is called upon to announce, to trumpet, to clarify, that which all people have known since bathrooms were moved inside:

"That he who takes a dirty half-roll of his employer's toilet paper from the floor has not committed a grievance sufficient to justify the loss of a job."

Cuevas was fired by the store's general manager, Vincent DeGennaro.

Francisco Lugo, who had been waiting to be called as a witness in the Cuevas case, was later convicted of manslaughter in the shooting and is appealing, the judge said.

Arbitrator Ernest Weiss found that Schlesinger's was not justified in firing Cuevas over a half-roll of tissue worth about 11 cents. He said Cuevas was reasonable in believing the half-roll was refuse.

Weiss ordered the company last April to reinstate Cuevas with full back pay and seniority, but the store refused on both accounts and has since announced its closing, the court said.

The dispute was submitted to arbitration, but DeGennaro was fatally shot by another employee he had fired while en route to an arbitration meeting in November 1983.

Soviets Compile Spy Shopping List

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Soviet Union has compiled a secret 27-chapter "shopping list" identifying high-technology equipment that its spies in the West are instructed to acquire, Interior Ministry sources say.

The book, as thick as a city telephone directory, is part of the Kremlin's campaign "to catch up with Western technology" through espionage, according to a ministry report compiled for internal use.

"It's called the 'Red Book' and it's the wish list — or shopping list — for Soviet secret service officers abroad," the four-page report said. A copy of the report was made available to The Associated Press.

The report said Soviet agents abroad are expected to obtain four items from the book a year, and added that those who acquire high-technology equipment would earn prestige.

Items in the book range from sophisticated equipment used in guiding long-range missiles to technology that could help military vehicles start in cold weather. A ministry source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Soviet book "has come to the attention of our secret services," but did not elaborate.

The ministry report said copies of the "Red Book" have been issued to a limited number of Soviet embassies and trade delegations in the West.

According to the report, the book — "as thick as a large city's telephone directory" — was compiled for Moscow's State Committee for Research and Technology and is officially titled "Coordinated Requests for Technological Information."

The committee has established a new department, headed by a Soviet KGB general, "to intensify and accelerate" the acquisition of technology from the West, it said.

The ministry memo did not say when the Red Book was issued, or how many copies existed.

High-priority items listed in it include microelectronic equipment used in guiding inter-continental ballistic missiles or in the defensive systems on submarines and tanks, according to the report. Radar and "super mini-computers" are other important areas of concern.

The secret list also gives top priority to items used in military research, the report said without elaboration.

Twenty-six chapters of the book concern high-technology equipment listed under headings such as Theoretical Physics, Lasers and Atomic Technology, according to the report.

U.S. May Drop SALT II Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Administration is leaving open the possibility of abandoning its policy of voluntary compliance with the never-ratified SALT II agreement with the Soviet Union when the Navy's seventh Trident submarine begins sea trials next fall.

The USS Alaska will put to sea with 24 nuclear missile launchers this fall. That would be enough to put the United States beyond the limits specified in the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Officials decline to rule out the possibility that they will allow the ceiling to be breached.

"We are keeping our options open," said Robert Sims, deputy White House press secretary, when asked Wednesday what options the administration was considering.

Sims refused to say whether the administration is considering exceeding the limits of SALT II. "I won't go into that," he said.

President Reagan, asked during his Jan. 9 press conference about complying with the voluntary limits, said, "We feel we can live within" the treaty.

He also said that "we will continue" to eliminate some older missiles and to take out of service some older submarines, indicating that would be a way to remain within the boundaries of the pact as the new Trident is put into action.

The Carter Administration instituted the policy of holding to the terms of SALT II, even though it was not ratified, as long as the Soviets comply with them. The Reagan Administration continued that policy.

At the Pentagon on Tuesday, spokesman Michael Burch said the administration has "a number of options which we are exploring" regarding the Trident missiles and SALT II.

"At this point, I'm not prepared to say what those options are or which course we're most likely to take. But as yet, we have not exceeded the SALT limits," Burch said.

Federal Study Says Union Carbide Failed To Report 28 Chemical Spills

INSTITUTE, W. Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. employees failed to report 28 spills of methyl isocyanate that occurred over five years at the only U.S. plant that makes the chemical responsible for more than 2,000 deaths last month in India, a federal study said.

The leaks, including one of 840 pounds and another that forced the evacuation of a building, are detailed in a report of inspections and hearings the Environmental Protection Agency conducted after the Dec. 3 escape of methyl isocyanate in Bhopal, India, the only other place Union Carbide made the chemical.

In New Orleans today, a special panel of federal judges was to hear arguments on designating one court to hear the 28 multibillion-dollar lawsuits filed in the United States against Union Carbide over the leak of the chemical, also known as MIC.

In Washington, the chairman of the House Health and Environment Subcommittee charged today that Union Carbide knew in September there was a potential for a tragedy similar to that in Bhopal to occur in the United States.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said the information is contained in an internal memo from Union Carbide that discusses plant safety in Institute.

"The most significant finding is in the report where they say that there is a concern that a runaway reaction could occur in one of the MIC unit storage tanks and that response to such a situation would not be timely or effective enough to prevent catastrophic failure of the tank," Waxman said on the "CBS Morning News."

"We don't know if they ever told the people in India that their plant was subject to the same incredible situation and EPA now seems to be giving assurance that no law has been broken, no harm is going to be done and that people should feel that they're going to be protected," Waxman said.

The government's report on Wednesday also noted that the Institute plant's safety equipment failed to detect leaks of toxic toluene in the past two months.

The EPA said it will continue to investigate the methyl isocyanate leaks and numerous other chemical spills since 1980 at Institute.

However, EPA spokesman Dave Cohen in Washington said Wednesday that the agency believes the plant's "overall compliance with environmental regulations was above average."

Cohen said the leaks of toluene, used as a solvent and to make dyes and explosives, apparently "created no imminent danger." Regarding the methyl isocyanate leaks, he said, "Our concern is that they were not reported as they should have been."

Union Carbide spokesman Dick Henderson at Institute said the company needed to examine the EPA report before it could comment.

The "releases occurred because of equipment failure, residual quantities of MIC in lines released during equipment repair or replacement, human error, sample collection, etc.," the EPA report said. "In general, the majority of these MIC releases are attributable to the types of product releases inherent to the large-scale production of any chemical product."

In all cases, "the appropriate alarms were sounded and MIC unit personnel implemented the necessary contingency and cleanup procedures," the EPA said.

Both the EPA and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspected the Institute plant after the Bhopal leak, but OSHA has not released its report.

Forty-five tons of MIC reportedly escaped in Bhopal, but Carbide has not confirmed that, saying it will probably release its report next month. MIC production in India and Institute was stopped after the Bhopal disaster, and the company said it plans to use up the remaining MIC here this week.

In addition to the 28 spills cited by the EPA, Union Carbide has reported to state officials that it leaked 0.14 tons a year of MIC into the air during routine production.

The EPA said the Institute plant's safety and operating employees failed to report the 28 leaks to the company's environmental protection department, which is responsible for making required federal reports. But the EPA said at least seven of the leaks did not have to be reported to federal officials.

The EPA report provided the first public disclosure of the 840-pound spill. The Dec. 31, 1983, leak was recovered and "returned to production," and "actual MIC losses (to the environment) cannot be estimated," it said.

The leak occurred when ice caused a line to break, releasing methyl isocyanate in mixture with other substances, according to the EPA.

Another leak, on Aug. 27, 1981, released an undetermined amount of the chemical in gaseous form, knocking out a flare that is supposed to burn escaping MIC, the report said.

The toluene leaks to the Kanawha

River occurred in December 1984 and this month and were disclosed only after state authorities traced the toluene to the plant. The West Virginia Department of Natural Resources said the substance was also found in the Ohio River but that the company had taken steps to control the leak.

The report did not say why the toluene leaked, why the company's safety equipment did not detect it immediately, or why it was not disclosed until it was reported by the DNR.

Fire Damages Building

NEW YORK (AP) — A malfunctioning oil burner apparently touched off a 10-alarm fire that turned an eight-story warehouse into a roaring inferno, forcing the evacuation of more than 100 people from a nearby motel, authorities said.

More than 700 firefighters battled the flames to submission around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, about three hours after the first trucks arrived at the Hell's Kitchen building housing office furniture and brass bed companies and a silkscreening business, said fire department spokesman John Mulligan.

Officials called it the city's worst single-building blaze in 17 years. No serious injuries were reported.

The gutted warehouse looked like "the coliseum in Rome," Mulligan said. "You can see the sky through the building from the street. The easterly portion of the building is gone.

alone and enjoy it or enjoy companions when they showed up.

"People shared just the books I needed with me and somewhere along the way I read James Michener's 'The Source' and also met someone who'd lived in a kibbutz. So I hopped some islands to Haifa and was lucky to be able to sign up for work in Ein Hamifratz, the very kibbutz Michener had written about. Living there and visiting Jerusalem, I checked out my feelings about Christianity and Judaism. I respected both, but felt neither had the answers I was seeking.

"Then it was time to decide whether to go back to Europe and home or eastward. I felt an emptiness when I thought about turning back, so it was on to Istanbul, known as 'the meeting of the Orient and the Occident.' There and in Afghanistan, which I visited next, I felt as if I'd stepped back into the 14th Century, yet there was a familiarity, almost a feeling of 'coming home.'

"I then traveled across Pakistan and was at the border to India with hundreds of other people for its once a week opening. India was wonderful. You could see the women again. They'd been totally veiled in the previous several countries. I met someone who told me probably the most beautiful place he'd ever been was Dharam Sala, a Tibetan refugee camp in the foothills of the Himalayas. I went there on his advice and found it as beautiful as he'd said. There were the most gorgeous sunsets I'd ever seen played against white mountains and huge banks of rhododendron as fiery pink as the sunsets. This was where the Dalai Lama of the Tibetan Buddhists lived in exile and classes were being offered. I was a little wary of religion, so I decided to take a class in Tibetan language. Gradually, though, I realized the religious classes were not to be feared and I joined these also.

"I found I had a keen interest from the beginning. I learned meditation and found it wonderfully helpful in my quest for peace and happiness.

"Later I heard the Lama Yeshe speak and knew I had to get serious. I had to either fully devote myself to my faith or quit playing around with it and at the same time leading a hedonistic life. I decided to dedicate myself and become a monk. Soon, though, my visa was to expire and I was down to my last $300. So I decided I had to go to Japan and make some money. I knew I could make some money in either Japan or Australia, but I figured in Japan I could keep my hand in with Buddhism while teaching English lan-going home to spend time with my family. I went home in 1976. Now I wear regular street clothes when I'm not teaching, but then I was really into wearing my monk's robes all the time and I know that put them off. Nevertheless, they did see that I was different from and better than the old Jim in many ways, not as wild as I'd been. I helped my father move my brother's furniture to his new job site in Maryland. I talked with all of them a lot. Not fully then, but gradually they've come to accept that what I do is what I must do. They still wish I'd at least had a job at a university and teach Oriental philosophy or something, so my future, by their standards, would be more secure. But overall, they love me and want my happiness and I theirs."

"On the way I met an American Russian-born woman who'd come to Nepal on her spiritual quest. She guessed my intentions to go to Japan to make money and even how much money I had left. She advised me, if I was truly interested in Buddhism, not to leave the best place on earth to pursue my studies. She said to stop by on the way back from my trek and she'd tell me how to get my visa extended and that $300 would go a long way. When I stopped back by, she'd died three days earlier, but someone else helped me and I went to the center of Lama Yeshe, a teacher I'd met in India. There I started work toward becoming a Buddhist monk. I was one of 11 monks and nuns who underwent novice ordination in 1974.

"All this time I'd been writing to my parents and brothers and sisters. I know now I sounded like a religious fanatic and they couldn't have been expected to understand. Nevertheless, I felt somehow they would. It's very important to Buddhists to have the blessing of their parents, the people they know love and want their well-being most in the world. I kept studying and took my full ordination from the Dalai Lama in 1975.

very good" about the schedule for merger and the mechanics for consolidating the two school units as outlined in the proposed legislation.

Commissioners set a meeting for Jan. 30 to consider the legislation.

Following a discussion with Sheriff Ralph Tyson, commissioners approved the purchase of a washing machine and a self-contained breathing unit for the jail, and instructed Tyson and County Manager Reginald Gray to begin looking for facilities that could house people sentenced to serve weekends in jail for driving while impaired convictions.

Tyson told the board that DWI offenders are causing overcrowding of jail facilities on weekends. Many times he said, there will be 30 to 35 persons serving weekend sentences.

Commissioners also discussed with Tyson and Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner the possibility of creating a separate department of the county's emergency operations center and moving the center, now located in the court house and supervised by Tyson, to the county office building.

Commissioners are considering moving the center if a county-wide 911 emergency telephone system — "something that would be very nice to have," Chairman Kelly Barnhill said — is put into operation.

Joyner told the board that if the 911 system is installed, and the communications center were to handle all emergency calls for all police, fire and rescue agencies in the county (including Greenville police)," five additional dispatchers would be needed.

He also suggested that EOC operations should be controlled by "a users board" composed of representatives of agencies served by the center.

An expanded center to serve all emergency agencies in the county, Joyner said, would cost about $253,800 a year to operate as compared to the present budget of $146,600.

Commissioners are scheduled to meet with mayors of the various municipalities in the county Tuesday night to discuss a county-wide 911 system, that would allow anyone in the county to summon emergency assistance from law enforcement, fire and rescue agencies by dialing the three digits 9-1-1 on any telephone in the county.

Pack Attack Hands Duke Third Loss In Four Games

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The game plan was designed for five players to attack the Duke defense. It was an idea that suited North Carolina State's Ernie Myers perfectly.

By spreading the Blue Devils and emphasizing one-on-one basketball, the Wolfpack rushed to an early lead and romped to an 89-71 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the fifth-ranked Blue Devils Wednesday night.

"He told us to take it to the hole," Myers said of Coach Jim Valvano's instructions, devised in two days of practices prior to the contest. "He said if you have a drive, drive. And drive with confidence."

Myers followed orders and scored 18 points.

"When somebody's right on you, you can drive right by them," Myers said. "Duke played man-to-man and that's my game. They ran the ball up and down and that's my game."

Lorenzo Charles sparked the Wolfpack with 20 points, while Spud Webb added 18 points.

"When we come to play like that, we can play with anybody," Charles said. "It's just a matter of coming out excited and maintaining it for 40 minutes."

Myers and Charles gave the Wolfpack a 5-0 lead in the first minute. Duke never caught up as Valvano's plan worked to near-perfection. As for the excitement factor, the 5-foot-7 Webb brought down the house with a breakaway one-handed dunk for a 24-12 edge midway through the period.

Nate McMillan's tap-in with 7:36 left gave N.C. State a 32-14 advantage before Duke's Billy King scored four straight points to get the Blue Devils within 36-23 with 4:44 left before halftime.

Duke continued its pressure defense and cut the Wolfpack margin to 75-63 on Tom Amaker's two free throws with 3:17 left. N.C. State then pulled away again with 10 straight free throws. Myers hit four straight before fouling out. McMillan added a pair and Webb chipped in four more to lead the Wolfpack to its 11th victory in 16 games. N.C. State also evened its ACC record to 3-3.

"There are certain things that are obvious. One is that North Carolina State played pretty well and we were pretty bad," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "State had something to do with that, but I think we had a lot to do with that."

The Blue Devils dropped their third contest in their last four outings, all conference games. Johnny Dawkins scored 14 points and David Henderson added 11 as Duke dropped to 13-3 and 3-3.

"We were just very bad. We were very good Saturday," Krzyzewski said of his team's 16-point defeat of North Carolina last weekend. "Somewhere in between there is the kind of team we are. We couldn't have played at two more extreme ends. It's just very disappointing."

In other ACC action Wednesday night, it came down to clutch free throws and Georgia Tech's Mark Price and Yvon Joseph hit them as the Yellow Jackets defeated Clemson 64-59. In a non-conference contest, Wake Forest rolled over Rider 81-59.

"We played smart basketball tonight," said Tech coach Bobby Cremins. "I was very pleased with the play of our bench. In the second half, we were able to get the ball inside and that is what we were trying to do."

The triumph avenges an earlier loss to Clemson in Atlanta and gives Tech, ranked 16th in the nation, a 3-2 ACC mark and a 14-3 overall record. Clemson is 2-4 in the conference and 10-6 overall.

The Tigers took an early lead, but Tech came back and built a 30-20 lead before Clemson scored the final four baskets of the half, leaving Tech ahead 30-28.

Price, who scored 18 points, sank two free throws with 17 seconds left for a 62-59 Tech lead after Clemson had chopped an 11-point deficit to 1-point on a basket by Glen McCants with 24 seconds to play.

Joseph went to the line with 11 seconds left and sealed the victory with two free throws.

Burce Dalrymple led Tech in scoring with 19 points. Guard Glenn Corbit led Clemson with 13.

The difference was in the transition game, said Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy, as his Demon Deacons, 12-4, built a 13-point halftime lead and coasted to their seventh straight victory. Rider fell to 6-9.

Kenny Green scored 22 points, 14 in the first half and Wake Forest

Smith, Duggins Hold Lead In Week Of Little Action

With many schools taking at least one playing day off for exams, and some not playing at all in the past week, there were few changes in the area scoring race during the past seven days.

Ayden-Grifton's Marvin Smith continues to lead the boys' of the area, while Roanoke's Gloria Duggins continues to set the pace for the girls.

Most of the changes in the boys' rankings were small, one or two places. Only one girls' placing was a major move as Chocowinity's Twanda Gerald tumbled seven places from a tie for sixth to 13th place.

Smith paces the boys' standings with a 19.5 average, downing three-tenths of a point from last week. Earl Randolph of Washington is second (not counting last night's game at Roanoke Rapids) with an 18.5 mark, followed by Williamston's Tony Doughty at 16.9. Dan Andrews of Greenville Christian leaps up one place to fourth at 16.4, while Trinity's Jimmy Powers slips a notch to fifth at 16.3.

Duggins continues to pace the girls with a 21.5 average, down two-tenths of a point from a week ago. Farmville Central's Lisa Lang has moved up one spot to take over second at 18.9, while Greene Central's Cyndi Hicks drops one spot to third at 18.5. Renee Deans of Trinity is up one position to fourth at 18.4, while Regina Cox of North Pitt advances from sixth to fifth at 16.5. Last week's fourth place holder, Chocowinity's Kim Green, drops to sixth at 13.8.

Washington continues to be the boys' leader in team offense at 64.7, while North Pitt moved past Trinity to take over the boys' defense at 44.5. Trinity continues to hold the widest winning margin, topping opponents by an average of 11.3 points a game.

Greene Central retains the girls' offense lead at 57.3, while Chocowinity holds the defensive lead at 34.9. Greene Central continues as number one in winning margin with a 17.6 average.

St. John's Preps For Georgetown

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

So much for Syracuse, it's on to Georgetown for the St. John's basketball team.

"I think people who saw this game got their money's worth five times," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca after his third-ranked team beat No. 11 Syracuse 82-80 in overtime Wednesday night and set the stage for Saturday's long-awaited summit meeting with top-ranked Georgetown.

A sold-out crowd of 19,591 at Madison Square Garden in New York saw Chris Mullin and Walter Berry carry the Redmen in a second-half rally and offset the shooting of Dwayne "Pearl" Washington.

They also saw Mullin, already the leading scorer in St. John's history, surpass the 2,000-point mark with 29 points as the Redmen improved their record to 14-1, 6-0 in the Big East.

"You saw some big shots from him," said Carnesecca of Mullin, "and not medium-range shots."

Georgetown, meanwhile, rolled to its 29th straight victory over two seasons with a 79-66 win over Connecticut. The Hoyas improved their overall record to 18-0 this year, 7-0 in the Big East.

In other games involving the national's ranked teams, No. 2 SMU defeated Texas 54-46; No. 4 Memphis State tripped Florida State 74-69; No. 5 Duke was beaten by North Carolina State 89-71; No. 6 Illinois stopped Ohio State 84-66; No. 9 Oklahoma whipped Iowa State 81-74; No. 14 Villanova turned back Providence 65-57 and No. 16 Georgia Tech defeated Clemson 64-59.

Top Ten

St. John's, which had led only briefly in the first quarter, put the game into overtime tied at 72 on Berry's jumper with one second left. Mullin then scored five of his points in overtime, including a free throw that gave the Redmen an 81-78 lead and their actual winning point with 14 seconds left.

Washington, who had been listed as a doubtful starter because of a swollen ankle, played 41 minutes and hit 9 of 16 from the field in pacing the Orangemen with 26 points.

"I thought when the game started, Pearl would have come down on a parachute," Carnesecca. "He might as well have — he makes it look so easy."

Bill Martin scored 15 of his game-high 19 points in the pivotal second half and Reggie Williams added 18 points to lead Georgetown over Connecticut.

After fighting to a 33-33 halftime tie, the teams were never more than two points apart for nearly nine minutes of the second half. Then, with 11:35 to play, Williams ignited a 10-2 Hoya scoring spree that enabled Georgetown to turn a 49-47 deficit into a 57-51 lead, and the Huskies never cut the advantage below three points the rest of the way.

Jon Koncak scored 18 points as Southern Methodist celebrated its highest college basketball ranking ever with a Southwest Conference victory over Texas. Koncak scored three consecutive field goals in the last five minutes to give SMU its cushion before 11,499 spectators at Austin, the largest crowd at Texas since Bob Weltlich took over as head coach three years ago.

Koncak also swatted away at least three field goal attempts by Texas' 6-10 John Brownlee, who scored just 10 points — about eight below his SWC average.

Vincent Askew tossed in 16 points and snared seven rebounds as Memphis State held off a Florida State surge to beat the Seminoles. Florida State, led by Alton Lee Gipson's 18 points, fought back from a 10-point deficit with two minutes to play, but sputtered in the last 20 seconds to drop its fifth game in a row.

Lorenzo Charles scored 20 points, while Spud Webb and Ernie Myers 18 points apiece to pace North Carolina State over Duke. The Wolfpack's larger front line and man-to-man defense forced Duke to depend on perimeter shooting in the early moments, thus limiting the Blue Devils to one shot on most possessions.

"When we come to play like that, we can play with anybody," Charles said. "It's just a matter of coming out excited and maintaining it for 40 minutes."

Anthony Welch scored 16 points as Illinois beat Ohio State and took sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. Illinois centers Scott Meents and George Montgomery held Ohio State center Brad Sellers to just six points. Sellers had entered the game as Ohio State's leading scorer, averaging nearly 17 points a game.

"Illinois did a very good job against us offensively and defensively," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "I think they are the strongest team we've faced this year."

Wayman Tisdale, bedridden by the flu for two days earlier in the week, scored eight straight Oklahoma points late in the game to rally the Sooners over Iowa State.

Tisdale, who did not start but played all but four minutes of the game, finished with 20 points as Oklahoma racked up its 16th straight Big Eight victory, leaving the Sooners three short of Kansas State's record for consecutive league wins.

"I really wanted the ball late in the game because we were in a do-or-die situation," Tisdale said. "I knew one player had to take control. The other guys were doing a good job, but it was time for me to do something."

Second Ten

Dwayne McClain scored 18 points in leading Villanova over Providence. McClain's hot shooting in the second half boosted Villanova's lead to 48-38 with 11:49 left, and at one point he scored eight straight points.

"Dwayne McClain responded well," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "He was much more active than against Drexel (a 63-55 non-conference win Monday night). It was a Big East game and that gets him up."

Mat Meet In Field House

D.H. Conley's wrestling team will take on Camp Lejeune in a non-conference match tonight at 7 p.m. at Conley, but the match will not be held in the gym, as usual.

Instead, the action will get underway in the field house. The match was originally scheduled to be held there because of a conflict with a scheduled basketball game between the Vikings and North Lenoir.

The basketball game, however, along with several others, has been shifted because of the bad weather earlier in the week, which played havoc with the examination schedule at a number of schools.

Conley's game with North Lenoir will now be played on Wednesday, Jan. 30.

Other games rescheduled from tonight include: North Pitt at Ayden-Grifton, reset for Saturday; Farmville Central at Southern Nash, reset for Saturday, Feb. 2; and Creswell at Jamesville, reset for Thursday, Jan. 31.

Yellow Jackets Stop Washington

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Brian Barnes pushed through 21 points to lead Roanoke Rapids High School to a 59-45 Northeastern Conference basketball victory over Washington's Pam Pack last night.

Washington's girls, however, rolled up a 63-35 win in their game with the Lady Jackets.

Washington and Roanoke Rapids matched points throughout the first period, but the Pam Pack ran out of gas after that. In the second quarter, the Yellow Jackets pushed into the lead, building up a 29-22 lead at the half.

They continued to pull away from the Pack in the third quarter, extending the lead to 47-28 as the final quarter got underway. Washington rallied, 17-12, but it wasn't enough.

In addition to Barnes' 21, Kerr Putney added 16. Washington was led by Earl Randolph with 22 points.

The loss dropped the Pack to 4-4 in the league and 9-5 overall. Washington's girls had little trouble with Roanoke Rapids, barreling out to a 16-2 lead in the first period. That was swelled to 34-10 by halftime and to 44-19 by the end of the third period. The Lady Pack enjoyed a 19-16 margin in the final quarter.

Gloria Sherrad led Washington with 23 points, while Sarah Gray had 14 and Deanna Davis hit 12. Janice Martin paced the Lady Jackets with 12.

Washington is now 4-4, 7-5. The Pam Pack returns to action on Friday, hosting Edenton.

forced 14 Rider turnovers to lead 40-27 at the half.

Guard Tyrone Bogues and reserve forward Dennis Calvert scored 11 points each for Wake Forest. Bogues also handed out 10 assists and made four steals.

"Bogues did play well and he has been playing very well for us," Tacy said. "He's playing with great confidence and is running the offense very well. He still caused havoc on the defensive end which creates a lot of things for us."

The Sting

Boxing promoter Don King reacts to an article in Wednesday's edition of Newsday during a press conference in New York Wednesday. According to the article, the FBI reportedly tried and failed to catch King in illegal acts. King said he knew nothing of the operation. (AP Laserphoto)

King Wondering Why FBI Sting

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI reportedly tried unsuccessfully to catch boxing promoter Don King in a sting operation, and King wondered: "Why were they trying to frame me?"

"I wasn't aware of it (the sting)," said King, until he read of it in Wednesday's editions of the daily newspaper Newsday.

"My lawyers told me not to talk, but you know me," said King at a news conference to formally announce Larry Holmes' International Boxing Federation heavyweight title defense against David Bey March 15 at Las Vegas, Nev. The 35-year-old Holmes said it would be his final fight.

The FBI tried to infiltrate boxing and catch King in illegal acts through an Abscam-type sting operation in which an undercover agent posed as a wealthy fight promoter in 1983, wrote Newsday reporter Manny Topol.

No charges have been filed against King, who was indicted last month in a separate investigation on charges of conspiring to evade federal taxes on more than $1 million income.

"I'm so proud of this guy (Topol) and Newsday who had the guts to print it," said King.

Newsday said the undercover operation was part of the FBI's ongoing, four-year investigation of boxing. "All I know is they're working on me. They've been working me. All I know is I'm outcompeting them (rival promoters). Take them off my back and we'll rewrite the American dream."

"It would be inappropriate for us to comment at this time with regard to any undercover operation that may have been conducted by the FBI," Newsday quoted Lane Bonner, an FBI spokesman in Washington, as saying about the King affair.

Topol said he had listened to part of a recording of an encounter between Victor Quintana, an FBI undercover agent, another man involved in the operation and King.

The "... tapes are unclear and contain much small talk between Quintana and Barrett, street noise and even sounds that may be flushing toilets. No specific offers to King could be heard," Topol reported.

"Quintana is heard saying he would try to catch up with King in Puerto Rico (where the promoter was going) to continue discussing possible deals. 'Good, good. That would be great,' King said."

The story said that Quintana and Barrett continued to try to involve King in fight promotions, but were unsuccessful.

Bennett Named By Tampa Bay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Leeman Bennett, though he tried his hand in business and collected a hefty paycheck from the Atlanta Falcons the past two years, didn't feel very productive away from the National Football League.

He missed coaching. "Every phase of it," Bennett said Wednesday as he stepped back into the game — accepting the challenge of trying to rebuild the Tampa Bay Buccaneers into a championship contender.

"I come here with a goal in mind and that's to put together the very best football team that we can and get to the Super Bowl as soon as possible," Bennett told a news conference. "Those goals are automatic."

Bennett, 46, is no stranger to reconstruction projects. He took an Atlanta team that had won 11 games in three years and produced a 7-7 record in his first season (1977) with the Falcons. Atlanta earned its first playoff berth ever the following year and by 1980 was 12-4 and NFC Western Division champions.

Tampa Bay was 8-24 under John McKay the past two seasons, but Bennett said the Bucs have a fine nucleus of talent that he looks forward to working with.

"This team is so much better than the football team I had when I took over in Atlanta in 1977," Bennett said, adding that the Bucs were one of the league's most improved offensive clubs during a 6-10 finish in 1984.

"I would expect us to contend for the championship ... I'm looking for a team that will play consistently ... up to its ability each and every Sunday," he added.

Bennett, fired after Atlanta compiled a 5-4 record and lost in the first round of the playoffs during the strike-shortened 1982 campaign, replaces McKay who compiled a 44-88-1 record in nine years as Bucs' coach.

Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse, who announced the appointment, said of his new coach: "I'm impressed with him. He's a competitor and will not accept failure," said Culverhouse, who passed over Wayne Fontes, a longtime McKay assistant who was believed to have the inside track for the job.

In seven seasons with Atlanta, Bennett compiled a 46-41 regular-season record. The Falcons earned playoff berths in 1978, 1980 and 1982 and were 1-3 in post-season play.

While Bennett had not yet signed a contract, Culverhouse said the two had a "five-year understanding" that would afford the new coach time to put together the best available staff and install a new system.

"I hope this is the last time I have to do this for 10 years," Culverhouse said, adding that he won't exert any pressure on Bennett — only the second head coach in Bucs' history — to produce a winner right away.

Bennett spent the past two years operating a recreational vehicle dealership and said he remained on the Falcons payroll until he accepted the job with the Bucs.

He said his dismissal in Atlanta still puzzles him.

"Whenever a coach is fired and has a winning record in professional sports, I think people look for a reason," Bennett said. "I think in all honesty that there probably are some people in Atlanta who are looking back and thinking they made a mistake."

Others interviewed for the Bucs' opening included former New England Patriots Coach Ron Meyer; Seattle defensive coordinator Tom Catlin; Washington Redskins quarterback coach Jerry Rhome; former Michigan Panthers Coach Jim Stanley, and ex-University of Florida Coach Charley Pell.

Culverhouse said he decided early Wednesday that he had found his man. He said breaking the news to Fontes, who carried the title assistant head coach and defensive coordinator, was difficult.

"Wayne was broken-hearted," the Bucs' owner said, citing Bennett's prior head coaching experience as the deciding factor. "Like a true winner, nobody likes to come out No. 2. It's too bad we couldn't hire two head coaches."

Fontes, who came to the Bucs with McKay at the team's inception in 1976, was in Tempe, Ariz., on Wednesday representing Tampa Bay at a scouting combine. McKay, 2-14 in 1983, resigned on Oct. 8 but remained with the team until the season ended.

Henderson Enjoys Beating Former Celtic Teammates

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Gerald Henderson, a starting guard on Boston's National Basketball Association championship team last year, could think of nothing better than beating his former teammates as a member of the Seattle SuperSonics.

"I hoped, thought, wished, prayed we could come out of here with a win and that's what we did," said Henderson, who had 16 points and 15 assists to help the Sonics upset the Celtics 107-97 Wednesday night. "Our defense and execution held up down the stretch."

The SuperSonics, four games under .500, handed the Celtics only their second loss in 20 home games and eighth defeat in 42 outings overall despite trailing by as many as 14 points in the second quarter.

"You come in here against the Celtics and you really don't expect to win," said Jack Sikma, who had 34 points and 16 rebounds and dominated Boston center Robert Parish. "So I guess you have a tendency to play loose and free ... Even when we were down by 14 points we weren't frustrated."

In other NBA games, Atlanta edged Phoenix 101-100, Dallas bombed San Antonio 122-110 and Portland crushed Indiana 136-104.

Seattle trailed 49-35 midway through the second quarter, but the Sonics held the Celtics to 14 points in the third period and 22 in the fourth to overcome the deficit.

"We had no intensity," said Larry

Bird, who led the Celtics with 30 points. "Maybe we became overconfident and looked at the team's record and not their personnel."

Boston, which went into the game with an 11-0 record against Western Conference teams, outbounded the Sonics in the first half but was beaten on the boards 26-21 thereafter. The Celtics also fell from 62 percent shooting in the first half to 34 in the second half, while the Sonics improved from 49 percent to 53.

"Against the Sonics, you've got to run, rebound and be physical to win," Bird said. "We didn't do that." "Our defense in the third period was the key to the game," said Sikma, who hit 14 of 19 shots from the field while Parish was 3-for-13 for six points. "We didn't give them second shots."

Boston's 61-51 halftime lead faded into a 75-75 tie after three quarters. Henderson's long fallaway shot gave the Sonics an 83-82 lead with 8:22 left in the game and they never trailed again.

"We didn't change our strategy after the half," Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We just worked for better board control and ball movement."

Trail Blazers 136, Pacers 104
Portland snapped its three-game losing streak and Indiana's three-game winning streak behind Jim Paxson's 28 points.

The Pacers never recovered after the Blazers scored eight straight points in the second quarter for a 44-31 lead. Portland, which also got 24 points from Kiki Vandeweghe, never led by fewer than 20 points in the fourth quarter.

"Overall, I think this was one of our best games yet, if not the best," Portland Coach Jack Ramsey said. "We need these kind of games to build confidence; to know that if we do things right, we can win."

Mavericks 122, Spurs 110
Rolando Blackman scored 27 points as Dallas ended San Antonio's four-game winning streak.

Three straight baskets by George Gervin, who celebrated his election to the All-Star team with 28 points, brought the Spurs within three points with 5:40 to play. But Dallas responded with a 7-0 streak for a 106-97 advantage with 2:56 left.

Mark Aguirre scored 18 points and Derek Harper 17 for Dallas, while Johnny Moore had 21 for San Antonio.

Hawks 101, Suns 100
Eddie Johnson and Randy Wittman scored 10 points each in the fourth quarter to highlight Atlanta's comeback from a 15-point deficit against Phoenix.

The Suns led 72-57 midway through the third quarter, but 12-2 and 10-0 streaks by the Hawks gave them the lead for good at 83-81. Phoenix got two consecutive baskets to get within 99-98 with 1:12 remaining, and Wittman and Alvan Adams traded baskets in the final minute.

Johnson led all scorers with 28 points for the Hawks, while Larry Nance led the Suns with 21.

Jordan Selected As Starter In NBA's All-Star Contest

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics, who trailed in the race for a starting forward spot until the final week, will be back home in Indiana for the 35th National Basketball Association All-Star game on Feb. 10 in Indianapolis.

Bird, last year's NBA Most Valuable Player, joins forward Julius Erving and center Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers, rookie guard Michael Jordan of Chicago and guard Isiah Thomas of Detroit in the Eastern Conference's starting lineup, which was selected by fan balloting.

"I was not all that worried that I might not start," said Bird, who is from French Lick, Ind., and played in college for Indiana State. "But I'm glad it worked out the way it did because I'll be going home for the game and playing before a lot of my friends."

"It's a great opportunity to go back there this year with the All-Stars and meet up with all my buddies," Bird added.

Last week, Bird was third among East forwards with 285,375 votes and trailed Erving's 336,873 and Detroit's Kelly Tripucka, who had 316,139.

More than one million votes were counted during the last week and Bird, the NBA's Most Valuable Player last season and fourth-leading scorer this year, finished with 564,521 votes. Erving wound up with 591,003, while Tripucka was third among forwards with 468,455.

For the Western Conference, guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers' received a record 957,447 votes and will be joined in the starting lineup by teammate Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. It will be a record 14th All-Star game for the Lakers' center, breaking the mark he currently shares with Wilt Chamberlain, Bob Cousy and John Havlicek.

Other West starters are forwards Ralph Sampson of Houston and Adrian Dantley of Utah and guard George Gervin of San Antonio.

"Longevity is the key," Gervin said after being named to the All-Star team for the ninth consecutive year.

Adding his three appearances in the American Basketball Association, it will be the 12th consecutive season Gervin has suited up for an All-Star game.

The 32-year-old Gervin said that while he appreciates the fan's votes, he has no idea why he is so popular.

"I have never looked into it and since I have been making it so long it doesn't make any sense to do it now," he said.

Gervin said the only disadvantage to making the All-Star team is that he misses the midseason vacation.

"I'd love to go to the Bahamas," said Gervin. "But my day will come."

Malone is the NBA's leading rebounder and eighth-leading scorer with a 26.1 average. Jordan is the sixth-leading scorer at 26.6, while Thomas, the MVP last year in Denver as the East won for the fifth consecutive time, leads the NBA in assists.

Malone got 662,445 votes, most among the East players. Robert Parish of Boston finished second in voting for East centers with 269,810.

Thomas was second in overall East voting with 660,017, followed by Jordan's 608,193. Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee was third among East guards with 403,033.

Johnson's vote total, from the record overall count of 2,852,996 cast for the All-Star Game, surpassed the previous individual record of 927,779 received by Malone last season, during which a then-record 2,569,336 ballots were cast.

Twin Towers Are Amazingly Alike

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

They call them the Twin Towers, and their similarities do not end with their size and skill on the basketball court.

Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, the No. 1 picks in the last two National Basketball Association drafts, are compiling remarkably similar statistics for the Houston Rockets, who have won 24 games at the season's halfway point, only five fewer than they managed in all of 1983-84.

The 7-foot Olajuwon is averaging 20.5 points, 11.6 rebounds and 2.5 blocked shots per game, while Sampson's norms are 20.5, 10.3 and 2.3. Olajuwon has scored 863 points to 862 for Sampson.

"They are a lot alike in the number of times they get the ball, the number of times they shoot and the spots they play on defense, so it's not surprising that they have similar stats," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "If they weren't evenly distributed, the press would be jumping all over me and the guy who was behind, wondering what was wrong."

So dramatic has the Rockets' improvement been this season that the big postdraft question of whether two All-America college centers could co-exist in the same frontcourt has been rendered moot.

"Experiment" was just a word that fit the headlines in the newspapers," Fitch said. "I never looked at it as an experiment."

Despite their similarities, when the Twin Towers are on the floor together, it's obvious that Sampson is the designated Mr. Outside and Olajuwon the designated Mr. Inside.

"We have different games," Olajuwon says. "That is why I knew from the first day of training camp that I would enjoy playing with Ralph. And I have. I have been content."

"I'm not surprised by our success," Sampson said. "Too much was made about us that being able to play together. I'm enjoying playing at forward, and facing the basket. And I like winning. But most of all, I like playing basketball."

"Their record has shown they can play together," New Jersey center Mike Gminski said. "It helps that they both can run as well as a 6-footer. Akeem is such a good transition player that once he gets more experience, the only way he's going to be stopped is if his mother and father order him back to Nigeria."

With small forward Rodney McCray, who is averaging nearly 15 points a game, the Rockets have a starting front line that only the Boston Celtics can rival.

"They are the only team in the league that could run a 100 percent job offense," New Jersey Coach Stan Albeck said after a game with the Rockets. "On defense, their size is intimidating. If you're going to take a shot in the paint, it better be a dunk, because they're going to reject it."

For all their strength inside, the Rockets' chances for beating out Dallas, Utah and Denver for the Midwest Division title should rest on their backcourt. Before John Lucas tested positive for cocaine last month, he was averaging 15 points and nine assists per game.

Lionel Hollins, 31 and a non-regular for three years has had to carry a heavy burden since Lucas' departure.

Before Lucas left, Hollins had played a total of 127 minutes in 22 games. In Houston's next 20 games, Hollins has played 671 minutes and has performed adequately, with 8.8 points and 7.8 assists per game.

"I've never bragged about our situation, but we're doing okay and we're going to get better," Fitch said. "People say our backcourt is weak, but they're doing everything they have the ability to do. Hollins has done an excellent job, but the minutes are starting to tell."

Congress Seeks End To Quick Moves By Professional Teams

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two bills restricting moves by professional sports teams aim to prevent what sponsors see as unwarranted switches that leave behind broken-hearted fans and debt-ridden cities.

"This bill finally protects the fans from losing important parts of their cities," Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., a co-sponsor of one measure, said Wednesday.

"We've protected sports leagues and franchises by allowing them to depreciate players and to be exempt from antitrust legislation," added Stark. "The people who are unprotected are the fans who buy the under-arm deodorant advertised in sports telecasts, and the T-shirts at the stadium."

The two bills, introduced Wednesday in Congress, would bar teams from moving from city to city unless the franchises are losing money or playing in inadequate arenas. Neither bill would permit a league to approve a franchise shift if there is a solid offer by local interests to buy the club.

One of the measures, sponsored by Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., and Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., would force the National Football League to expand by two teams in 1988 and put one of those teams in Baltimore. By 1990, the bill says, the league must expand by two teams again — and one must be located in Oakland.

"When professional sports teams leave a city, they not only leave behind the broken hearts of millions of fans, they often leave an empty stadium with enormous financial debts they helped create," said Mikulski, whose hometown Baltimore Colts moved to Indianapolis last year.

The Mikulski-Gorton bill, introduced in both the House and Senate, would apply to big-league football, baseball, basketball and hockey.

The other bill, introduced by Missouri Sens. Thomas Eagleton, a Democrat, and John Danforth, a Republican, would apply to franchise shifts involving professional football, hockey, basketball and soccer. It would not affect baseball clubs, which the two senators say are well-regulated by their own leagues.

Under the senators' proposal, owners of a sports franchise must obtain approval of a move from their league. The measure was prompted by reports that the football Cardinals might leave St. Louis and that the Kansas City Kings may move to Sacramento, Calif.

The Eagleton-Danforth bill spells out standards by which leagues could make their decisions, including the adequacy of a team's stadium and other facilities, the willingness of a community to correct deficiencies, and the amount of fan support as measured by ticket sales.

Earlier this year, after the city of Philadelphia narrowly averted an Eagles move to Phoenix, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., introduced a bill that would block the abrupt movement of football teams.

Congressional attention to the sports franchise issue stems in large part from the 1982 move of the Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles. The NFL unsuccessfully sued in federal court to block that move.

Last year, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle urged Congress to enact legislation to limit franchise movement, and the National Basketball Association and National Hockey League have cooperated with creation of the Mikulski-Gorton bill. Major league baseball, however, has asked that it be allowed to operate without congressional interference.

CAN YOU TOP THIS?

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas State football team was in a battered, if somewhat whimsical mood, after returning from a visit last fall to Nebraska, where it lost, 62-14.

Steve Willis, the Kansas State kicker, glumly observed: "I knew we were in trouble when our team bus got a ticket for speeding on the way to Lincoln."

Jim Dickey, the coach of the losers, topped that one. "When Nebraska took the field," he said, "it looked like a landslide coming off a mountain."

Future Tar Heel Enjoys Trouble Free Senior Year

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — There are no college recruiters calling Jeff Lebo, even though the Carlisle High School senior is considered one of the top three basketball players in the state.

That's because Lebo is already signed by the University of North Carolina.

Lebo took advantage of the early signing opportunity offered by the NCAA, and said it's the best move he ever made.

"It's great to have that decision out of the way so I can concentrate on playing basketball," he said. "I was lucky because I knew what schools I would consider. I made my visits early."

"If I wasn't signed, our phones would be ringing all the time. We saw what that could be like when schools first started contacting me last year."

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith got the jump on the others when he visited Carlisle last year. It was only the second time in his long coaching career that Smith had come to see a junior.

Lebo said he got some excellent advice from his coach, who happens to be his father, Dave Lebo.

"I was in a unique position to help Jeff because in addition to being coach, I'm his counselor and his father," said Lebo. "I've been able to see what takes place. I know the kind of pressure a top prospect must face."

"I told Jeff that if he was ready to make a decision, it would be best to do it early. I was able to protect him from all the outside pressures."

"I told him to make up a list of the schools that he liked. Then I told him to check the colleges he wanted to visit."

Jeff visited Maryland, Virginia,

Kentucky and Pike in addition to North Carolina.

It is the Lebo father-son team that draws sell-out crowds to every Carlisle game.

"We get complaints from other schools because we don't give them enough tickets," said Lebo. "We always fill our gym. The people want to see Jeff."

The reason they want to see young Lebo is that he can do it all. He can start the fast break or finish it with a two-handed dunk. At 6-3, he's taller than most high school guards.

Earlier this season, he became the 31st Pennsylvania high school player to score more than 2,000 career points.

Justice Clears Way For Surplus Leaf Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department announced Wednesday that it does not plan to challenge a proposal by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. of Raleigh, N.C., to offer its entire inventory of surplus tobacco for sale to domestic cigarette manufacturers.

Responding to a request by the cooperative to state government enforcement intentions if the cooperative went ahead with the offer, J. Paul McGrath, assistant attorney general in charge of the Antitrust Division, responded:

"After discussing the proposal with you and consulting with USDA (Agriculture Department) about the tobacco program, and absent any evidence that the program is a product of any agreement among cigarette manufacturers, we have concluded that the department has no present intention of challenging your offer of the inventory to the cigarette manufacturers."

McGrath's letter to Fred G. Bond, general manager of the co-op, noted that the organization is composed of all domestic growers of flue-cured tobacco and that under a contract with the Commodity Credit Corporation, it administers the government's loan program for flue-cured tobacco.

"Its members' crops are automatically consigned to the cooperative at the government price support price if they do not bring at least the support price on the open market," the department said in a statement, adding:

"The present support price for flue-cured tobacco is about $1.70 a pound, which is higher than the world price. This has led to increasing purchases of imported tobacco by domestic cigarette manufacturers, which in turn has increased the amount of inventory held by the cooperative."

McGrath said the cooperative will negotiate a price for the tobacco, "which shall be contingent upon the cooperative's ability to move the entire inventory," according to the statement.

"It intends to offer the tobacco to all customers at the same price," the statement said. "One effect of such a sale would be materially to lower the current high carrying costs for the inventory which are borne by the tobacco growers."

In concluding that the department has no present intention to challenge the offer of the inventory on antitrust grounds, McGrath said in the letter:

"This conclusion is based upon your representations that you have decided that disposal of the inventory in its entirety is in the best interest of your members and that the cooperative is most likely to achieve its goal if it offers the inventory for sale at the same price to all of the manufacturers."

The Justice Department action comes as the Senate is considering tobacco legislation that its sponsor, Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., says would benefit both the American farmer and the American consumer.

The bill would amend a 1938 law by prohibiting the importation of tobacco that has been grown or processed using pesticides and other chemicals prohibited in this country for health reasons.

The bill by Gore, a former House member, is similar to a proposal offered by Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., in the past. It has the support of both the American tobacco industry and consumer organizations.

Gore said the amount of foreign tobacco imported into this country has increased dramatically. Close to one third of the tobacco in American cigarettes now is imported. In 1983, imports of unmanufactured tobacco exceeded $743 million.

U.S. tobacco farmers are required to abide by regulations prohibiting use of pesticides and other chemicals such as Paraquat, DDT, Dieldrin, Endrin, Toxophone and others that have been banned for health reasons. No federal agency keeps track of what chemicals are used on tobacco being imported into the United States.

"Our failure to act harms America's tobacco farmers seriously and jeopardizes the 50 million to 54 million Americans who smoke. Six hundred billion cigarettes a year are smoked by Americans, one-third of the tobacco in those cigarettes comes from foreign producers, yet we have no information about what hazardous substances contaminate that tobacco," Gore said.

"We do not even have records of the countries from which we import and have never attempted to determine what their policies are with regard to substances banned for use in the United States. How can the American farmer compete, how can the American consumer protect him or herself if we do not even collect this vital information?" he asked.

Turkey, Bulgaria, Lebanon, and Zimbabwe are large suppliers of tobacco leaf imported into the United States. A survey conducted last year by the State Department produced no information about the chemicals used in those countries.

"To some, the bill may appear to be motivated by protectionist concerns. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This bill only seeks to place foreign producers of tobacco on the same grounds as our American farmers," Gore said.

The United States is not the first country to impose such requirements, he noted. West Germany has gone even farther by prohibiting the importation of tobacco containing any chemical or additive not on an approved list, he said.

TOWN MEETING — Gov. Jim Martin seeks out a questioner during a session with the public Wednesday night at a meeting of the High Point City Council. It was the second "town meeting" Martin has held since taking office earlier this month. (AP Laserphoto)

Town Meeting Martin To Study Tax Safeguards

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has agreed to consider a proposal by former state Sen. Tom Gilmore to appoint a "blue ribbon" committee to make sure local governments aren't short-changed by tax reform proposals.

The tax structure needs to be changed, Gilmore said, "But Governor, not at the expense of our children. Not at the expense of our environment."

Gilmore, of Greensboro, was among the 200 people who on Wednesday night attended Martin's second town meeting since being elected governor in November.

The unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial hopeful also joined those who aired their concerns about Martin's plan to repeal the intangibles and inventory taxes, as well as the sales tax on food and non-prescription medicine.

Residents said they feared the tax cuts would take funds away from education programs or cause local governments to raise property taxes.

Speaking for the High Point Chamber of Commerce, Jim Morgan said the inventory and intangibles taxes should be repealed, but that the chamber is concerned local governments might be forced to compensate for any shortfall by increasing property taxes.

The state inventory tax, levied on goods stored by businesses, and the intangibles tax, levied on stocks and other investments owned by businesses and individuals, go to local governments. In 1984 the taxes generated $414 million.

Martin has said economic development in the state would get a boost from the tax repeals. He also has said the sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs are regressive and hurt the poor.

Gilmore, who was defeated in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last year, said during the campaign that he agreed with Martin's tax plans. But Wednesday he asked the Republican governor for the special task force to closely examine the ramifications of the proposals.

Guard Getting New Apache Helicopters

RALEIGH (AP) — Assigning the $7.7 million Apache helicopter to North Carolina "is a graphic demonstration of the high respect our National Guard commands among this nation's military leaders," Gov. Jim Martin said.

In fact, North Carolina's National Guard will be the nation's first reserve unit to receive the laser-equipped aircraft. The 18 Apaches, 12 observation helicopters and three Blackhawk helicopters the state will receive are worth a combined $300 million.

The Army decided to give the National Guard an early crack at the Apache because the Guard is expected to be "prepared, ready, trained and able to go to war in the event we should have to mobilize," said Lt. Gen. Charles P. Graham, commander of the U.S. Second Army.

In such a case, the Guard would be associated with the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, Graham said.

"This (the Apache) is not an ordinary helicopter," said Vel J. Varner of Culver City, Calif.-based Hughes Helicopter Corp., which manufactures the aircraft for the Pentagon. "It is a very superb machine, easy to maintain, highly agile and highly lethal ... the most advanced attack aircraft in the helicopter arena that's ever been produced."

Accompanied by National Guard and Army officials at a news conference Wednesday, Martin called the decision a "major milestone" for the North Carolina National Guard, which "will have the Apache years ahead of most of its active Army counterparts."

Governor Opposed To State Lottery

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — If a proposal for a state lottery is seriously considered during the upcoming legislative session, Gov. Jim Martin says he'll feel free to voice his opposition.

"It bleeds money from a lot of people who need it," Martin said Tuesday night in an address to the North Carolina Retail Merchants Association.

He said a lottery is a "tax on the weak" and should not be examined as a way to replace state revenues lost through tax repeal.

The state would make less than a 50 percent profit on a lottery, Martin told the merchants, adding that such get-rich-quick promotions are offensive because of the negative effect they have on poor people struggling to make a living.

Earlier Tuesday, the Winston-Salem Board of Aldermen suggested that a lottery might provide revenue to compensate for Martin's proposed tax reforms. Martin has proposed repealing the inventory tax, the intangibles tax and the sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs.

Former state Sen. Richard Barnes of Forsyth County almost succeeded in pushing a lottery proposal through the General Assembly in 1982.

Barnes has said the lottery failed only because of an 11th-hour intervention by Gov. Jim Hunt's legislative lobbyists. His bill called for a statewide vote on the issue.

In his speech Tuesday, Martin repeated his call for repeal of the taxes, saying they discourage industry from locating in the state, particularly in the border counties.

"It is a self-inflicted handicap and penalty on those who do business in our state," he said. "These taxes have become anti-jobs."

Martin said he could never ask for the repeal of a tax unless he was sure the replacement revenue was available.

Last year, he said, dramatic growth and economic recovery left the Legislature with a $640-million surplus, which it spent without handing out any tax relief.

The projections for growth for this year are even better, he said, and so are the chances of tax relief.

Three Tar Heels Missing

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Searchers made sonar contact with what may be the sunken wreckage of a U.S. Air Force plane with 21 Americans aboard that splashed into the Caribbean off Honduras' north coast and divers were sent to investigate, officials said.

The Pentagon said three of the missing Americans are North Carolina residents.

The North Carolinians listed among the missing are Senior Master Sgt. David B. Reid, 37, of Caldwell County's Dudley Shoals community, assigned to Shaw Air Force Base, S.C.; Lt. Col. Robert E. Dalton, 38, of Fayetteville, N.C., assigned to Pope Air Force Base, N.C. and Sgt. Larry G. Ward, 28, of Boone, N.C., assigned to the 193rd Infantry Brigade, Panama.

On a beach north of Puerto Castillo, searchers Wednesday found

Views Of Trees In Winter

Photographs By Jerry Raynor

... twig bouquets sprout in a trimmed sycamore

Trees are among the outstanding natural marvels of North Carolina. They range from small, shrub-like beauties such as the yaupon to soaring ancient cypress trees.

In all seasons of the year they add a special grace to the landscape — in spring with a new covering of soft pastel leaves, in summer with a concealing cloak of dense foliage, and in autumn when they display their finery of color.

It is in winter, however, that trees can be viewed in the basic starkness of their shapes and configuration of limbs, all except evergreens shorn of concealing leaves.

Getting a Boost from the "Saturn"

General Motors Corporation plans to create a new division to manufacture a new line of cars called the Saturn. This will be the first new division of GM since the Chevrolet line was added in 1918. Cadillac is another GM division. The first Cadillacs, produced in 1903, cost $750. The original Model T Ford cost $875. Most early Fords were black, but a few were "Brewster" green with red striping. Each "Wasp" auto, made in the 1920s, came with a St. Christopher medal.

PBS To Premier 'The Living Planet' By David Attenborough On Feb. 3

By TOM JORY
 Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In the very first hour of "The Living Planet," David Attenborough directs our attention, cinematically speaking, to a point on the ocean floor inhabited by huge worms and clams that exist on energy generated by submarine volcanic eruption.

Just when we're sure Attenborough has shown us all there is to see, he takes us someplace new, where no man has ever been.

"It's a great picture," Attenborough promised in an interview, "of underwater lava coming through the plates on the bottom of the sea."

"Great, black clouds!" he exclaimed, and his enthusiasm — as it is when he is on camera — was infectious. "The energy of the heat, plus the bacteria that exist there, combine to support animal life that will never see the light of the sun."

On the screen, it is indeed an awesome sight, but one we have come to expect from Attenborough, whose previous series, "Life on Earth," was widely acclaimed for its extraordinary film and clear, comprehensible narration.

"The Living Planet: A Portrait of the Earth," Attenborough's 12-hour sequel, premieres on public television Sunday, Feb. 3. The newest production is similar in style to "Life on Earth," neither stuffy nor academic, and eminently entertaining.

While the previous series dealt primarily with the development of plant and animal life, "The Living Planet" is a global examination of the environment, a look at how living organisms of all sorts, including humans, adapt to their diverse surroundings.

The series, more than three years in production on all seven continents and at sea, ranges in locale from the ice-covered slopes of the world's tallest mountains (for "The Frozen World" Feb. 10) to the depths of the Atlantic ("The Open Ocean" April 14).

As remarkable as some of the footage may be, Attenborough, who studied zoology and geology at Cambridge University, is the series' unobtrusive star. Much more than a knowledgeable narrator, he is a companion who should be short of breath after a steep Himalayan climb, and is:

"Certainly, when it comes to walking at these high altitudes," he puffs, observing mountain folk at work in their precipitous environment, "they are much better adapted than I am."

"Life on Earth" and now "The Living Planet" might have been superior television without Attenborough, but his presence generates an excitement, an anticipation of imminent discovery, that sets the series apart.

"Around the equator," he proclaims moments into the first episode, "where those two essentials of life, sunshine and moisture, are most abundant, great forests grow and here plants and animals proliferate in such numbers that we still have not even named all the different species."

Indirectly, Attenborough has heightened expectation for subsequent installments — "Jungle" on Feb. 24, "Seas of Grass" on March 3 and "Sweet Fresh Water" on March 24.

Though Attenborough, 57, proclaimed in the interview "there is a limit to the amount of tub-thumping one should do," "The Living Planet" does make a point, that man must do something to curb destruction of his habitat.

"The series is a celebration of the natural world," he said, "but in the end, I think I'm within my rights to make a clear lesson."

In the final installment, "New Worlds" on April 21, he demonstrates how humans use their unique intelligence to exploit the adaptive qualities of other species to live in less hospitable surroundings, and how man, over the centuries, has transformed wide areas of land to his own use.

Britain, for instance, was thickly forested before man arrived, and populated by a variety of animal life, including brown bear, wolf and elk, Attenborough explains. Now, he says, vast portions of the island are treeless, and the three animals and others have completely disappeared.

"Now," he says, "we're completely changing the whole of the globe, and we must equally accept our responsibilities for that. But so far, we're making a poor job of it."

Attenborough concludes the series in a characteristically passionate manner: "As far as we know, the Earth is the only place in the universe where there is life. It's continued existence rests in our hands."

He shrugs, turns and walks away from the camera.

PBS, ABC Top Winners List For DuPont Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television and ABC led the field of winners of Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Awards, with each taking two of the prestigious broadcast-journalism honors.

The awards, announced at a Wednesday night banquet televised live on public television, brought PBS awards for the critically acclaimed "Vietnam: A Television History," and for its weekly documentary series "Frontline."

ABC News scored with "World News Tonight" for its 10-part series on the United States and the Soviet Union, and for its late-night news program "Nightline."

Brian Ross and Ira Silverman of "NBC Nightly News" won for an investigative report on Robert Vesco's alleged drug trafficking in the Caribbean.

And "60 Minutes" took home an award for its piece about Lenell Geter, a man from Greenville, Texas, who was serving a life sentence for a robbery he did not commit.

Other winners:

—In the category of radio, KOSU, the Oklahoma State University radio station in Stillwater, Okla., for a report about two conservative religious broadcasting networks threatening to dominate the limited FM frequencies.

—In the category of major-market local TV, KRON-TV in San Francisco, for an account of nine Americans who were murdered in war-torn El Salvador.

—In the category of medium-market local TV, WJZ-TV in Baltimore, for a humorous documentary on how the 76 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964 changed America.

—In the category of small-market local TV, WJXT-TV in Jacksonville, Fla., for a series of reports about odor pollution in Jacksonville.

—In the category of independent TV, Medvideo, Ltd. and Group W, for an examination of Alzheimer's Disease, and Quest Productions and public TV, for a documentary on 50 years of U.S.-Soviet relations.

—In the category of cable TV, Suburban Cablevision of Avenel, N.J., for its close-up look at integration.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you with all kinds of possibilities to enjoy the loftier and more worthwhile things of life and to aid whatever can bring you long time advancement toward a well-organized venture.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Early contact advisors and plan the future more intelligently, but tonight be concerned with the cultural side of life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can come to a fine understanding with friends and allies and achieve much today. Make plans for the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Smile more in the outside world and you will gain your aims more readily and the backing you need from bigwigs.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You can make a fine impression on newcomers today so make yourself available to them.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be willing to do what the one you love most desires and make this person happy. Spend some money on a new outfit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you show your appreciation for the alliance of your partners, they will cooperate with you more readily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to add art pieces, music, etc. to your environment and be happier in it in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) During spare time see those persons you truly like, but be sure to handle business matters well first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A day when you can have much fun at your home and be happy. Keep active and cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact persons you admire in the outside world and plan to see more of them in the future. Take it easy tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get your property and other possessions beautified and made more valuable now. Be active and happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You arise feeling aces and can get much accomplished today and be happy at duties. Later see as many good friends as you can.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have much ability at whatever is connected with beauty, color, music, embellishments, and the like and will also be good at business. A very artistic person here who will constantly be perusing books, going to museums, art classes and be quite popular.

Bardot Course Draws Crowd

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A course on French actress Brigitte Bardot, featuring eight of her films, is packing them in at Middlebury College.

About 175 students of the small, private college are viewing the movies, writing a short analysis of each and discussing "popular culture, eroticism, aesthetics, voyeurism and misogyny," according to the course description.

Claire Schub, the 29-year-old professor of French who is teaching the class, said she thinks most of the students signed up for the four-week course out of curiosity.

"Most of them have heard of Brigitte Bardot, but hardly any have seen her movies," she said. "She was a sex symbol for their parents."

Wolper Rejects Reagan Suggestion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer David L. Wolper has decided against President Reagan's suggestion that he mount a show similar to the opening and closing Olympic ceremonies and "take it on the road."

"I just don't want to do something in that nature that soon after the Olympics," said Wolper, who produced the acclaimed Olympic pageantry.

Wolper said he had looked into the venture and had talked with potential financial backers, but wasn't sure that he wanted to do it in the first place.

"I didn't want to try to top myself," said Wolper, who produced the "Roots" and "The Thorn Birds" television miniseries.

He is about to begin production of "North and South," a 10-hour miniseries for ABC based on the best-selling book by John Jakes.

Dolly Parton Sees Self As 'Fat Girl'

CROSS LANES, W.Va. (AP) — You may not think of Dolly Parton as "a fat old girl," but that's the image the singer has of herself, says the woman Ms. Parton has hired to get her in shape.

"I'm just a fat old girl. You think you can get me in shape?" Mary Cox quoted the country-western star as saying.

Ms. Cox, 23, says she met Ms. Parton through a mutual friend while vacationing in Los Angeles and was offered the job.

"I was concerned about fitness being a phase that she was going through," Ms. Cox recalled. "I told her, 'I take my work seriously. I don't want to be just a phase.' She said she was serious about this."

After accepting a one-year contract and departing for Los Angeles Tuesday, Mr. Cox's plans for Ms. Parton seem anything but leisurely.

At rubber bridge an overtrick usually doesn't matter much. At duplicate, however, it can sometimes make the difference between a top and a bottom score. Here, it earned a top for West Coast star Tony Kasday on this hand from the Mixed Pair Championship at the recent Fall North American Championships in San Diego.

North's jump to four clubs was a splinter bid. It showed a singleton in the bid suit and the equivalent of a game force in opener's suit. Since the king of clubs was now a wasted value, South had no interest beyond game.

West led a trump and declarer drew a second round. The normal line of play is to cash a high diamond and then take the diamond finesse. If it works, or if the suit splits evenly, declarer makes an overtrick—either he loses no diamond trick or he gets a spade discard on the 13th diamond.

That is how declarer started to play the hand. However, when he led a diamond to dummy's ace, West started an echo with the six. Declarer returned the jack of clubs from dummy, covered by the queen and king and won by the ace. West shot back the deuce of diamonds, to complete an echo in the suit.

Now it made no difference at all to East how many diamonds his partner held. But declarer was greatly interested to learn that West had an even number of diamonds, and he elected to play him for a doubleton. He rose with the ace of diamonds, crossed to the ace of spades and ruffed a club. Next came the king of spades and another, and West found himself on lead with nothing but clubs. His forced return of that suit presented Kasday with a ruff-sluff that enabled him to get rid of his losing diamond for the all-important overtrick.

By RICH KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Stained and discolored after a 56-year vigil, North Carolina's monument at the Gettysburg Battlefield has become the first at the national park here to be moved away for badly needed restoration.

The bronze monument, which depicts five North Carolina soldiers heading into battle, was lifted onto a trailer Wednesday for shipment to Cincinnati, Ohio. There, a restorer will undo the effects of acid rain and long exposure to other elements.

The Tar Heel state, which contributed $10,000 to the $12,000 effort, is the first participant in the National Park Service's new program seeking contributions to help the Gettysburg National Military Park.

"Certainly we hope other states will follow suit," said James Roach, chief of the park's visitors services.

The park service has produced a glossy catalogue listing items benefactors can buy for the park.

"In these times of budgetary cutbacks we found it necessary to go towards a donation catalogue," Roach said.

Restoration to the Pennsylvania and Virginia monuments goes for $100,000 plus each. The park's cyclorama presentation needs new equipment, with a $500,000 price tag.

Other needed items: $5,000 for a reservations computer, $25,000 for a new display case for one of the original copies of President Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and $3,000 each for new wayside exhibits throughout the 3,595-acre park.

Smaller contributions are also welcome: from $2.25 to $4 a foot for new wooden post and rail fences, $14 a gallon for paint and 40 cents each for duplicate slides for educational programs.

At the park Wednesday, former North Carolina state Sen. James Edwards presented a check for $10,000 to park superintendent John Earnst. The money had been appropriated by the state Legislature.

The monument was sculpted by Gutzon Borglum and put in place in 1929 to honor the large contingent from North Carolina who fought in the 1863 battle. Twenty-five percent of the Southern troops at the three-day engagement were from North Carolina.

When he was approached by the state, Borglum was at work on his best known work, the faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt and Abraham Lincoln chiseled on the face of Mount Rushmore in South Dakota.

While in Cincinnati, the monument will be restored by Eleftherios Karkadoulas. He will steam clean the bronze, scrub it with detergents, solvents and mild abrasives, restore its color and coat it with hot wax. The monument is expected back at the park by June, when it will be rededicated.

Efforts to restore the monument began in 1983 after members of the Society for the Historical Preservation of the 26th North Carolina Troops Inc. visited the battlefield and noted the monument's deteriorating condition.

State's Jobless Rate Rises Slightly

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate for December rose slightly to 7.2 percent from 7.0 percent in November, the state Employment Security Commission announced today.

"The slight rise in unemployment is attributable to a decline in two sectors of the labor force," said N.C. Employment Security Commission chairman Glenn Jernigan. "Manufacturing, which has been steadily influenced over the year by losses in the textile and apparel industries, and agriculture, which experienced an expected seasonal low during December, were major contributors to the decline of 12,000 workers over the month."

The 7.2 percent figure translates to 216,800 jobless workers. The national unadjusted rate for December was 7.0 percent.

Durable goods manufacturing was up by 800 workers, but all other sectors experienced only minor gains and losses, Jernigan said.

Nondurable goods was down 3,100, influenced mainly by losses of 1,700 jobs in textile mill products and 1,100 in apparel and related products.

Nonmanufacturing employment was up 300, and trade increased by 6,500 workers, mostly because of seasonal hiring for Christmas. Losses were reported in service and miscellaneous with 1,800 job and government with 3,500. The layoff of temporary election workers was the major influence in the loss of government workers.

There were 2,812,400 North Carolinians working in December, compared with 2,735,000 in December 1983, according to Jernigan.

"Although North Carolina's jobless rate rose by 0.2 of one percentage point in December, figures show that 77,400 North Carolinians gained employment over the year," Jernigan said.
