Farm Bill Will Phase Out Controls

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block is taking his case for a lean, austere farm program to the public, preaching its free market gospel on television and in frequent news interviews.

On Thursday, Block appeared on network television and in a satellite hookup with Farm Belt TV stations, and produced an opinion column for The Washington Post.

In all of them, the message was the same: the nation can no longer sustain policies that lead to surpluses of government-owned milk and grain, and farmers must no longer look to federal programs for salvation.

The forces hurting U.S. farmers, from declining land values to a strong dollar that dampens farm exports, "are huge, and are bigger than a farm bill, they're bigger than a secretary of agriculture, and honestly they're probably bigger than the Congress and the president," Block said.

"For the country, or farmers, or agribusinessmen, or whoever, to always look when they have tough times to the secretary of agriculture or the government, and say, 'What are you going to do to save us?' — As much as I would like to say, I've got the solution, honestly I don't have it," he told reporters.

Block said the administration's long-term farm bill, to be sent to Congress the second week in February, will gradually phase out government's role in influencing markets and production and will apply to all crops that now benefit from price supports, from cotton to tobacco to wheat.

He also said it will include an absolute upper limit on farm spending "so that it cannot get away from us" like it did in 1983, when the "payment-in-kind" program helped push federal farm costs to nearly $30 billion.

Block said he was not convinced the Reagan administration should liberalize a federal credit aid program for farmers, as several members of Congress and rural banks are urging. To do so would set a dangerous precedent that would be a "bottomless pit" of loan subsidies, he said in an interview.

He said the Farmers Home Administration, which makes direct loans to the least creditworthy farmers and is administering a $650 million credit aid package for those who borrow from commercial banks, is hard pressed to cope with the current credit crisis.

"The circuits are overloaded," he said. "This is a time to tough it out, and we are going to see a lot of people toughing it out."

Block said while the administration is examining possibilities for short-term credit help and talking to lawmakers and state officials, "they don't have any good ideas, they come from a lot of different angles, and there's no consensus as yet."

The farm bill, he pledged, will provide enough aid to producers to see them through the transition to reliance on markets instead of federal price supports.

He said it will continue the current "recourse" price-support loan system, although perhaps at a reduced level. That system allows farmers to borrow money against their crops, then forfeit the crops to the government if market prices do not rise high enough to enable them to pay off the loan.

And he said it will include a "very strong" trade section, one that will insist that trading partners behave fairly and one that promises strong retaliation against nations that try to bolster their competitive advantage through export subsidies.

Rose Says Farm Plan May Pose Serious Threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Considering President Reagan's popularity and the minority status of farm congressmen, the administration's plans to phase out tobacco price supports and the leaf quota system could be "serious threats," says U.S. Rep. Charles Rose.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block said Thursday the administration's long-term farm bill, to be sent to Congress the second week in February, will gradually phase out supports for all crops, from tobacco to wheat.

"I am angered and outraged at this administration for proposing this kind of additional burden on the already over-burdened farmer," said Rose, D-N.C., who is chairman of the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee.

Rose said he had been told by a Republican colleague who had been briefed by the administration that both price supports and quota controls would be eliminated over the next five years.

Block spoke briefly with reporters following a meeting at the office of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Block and budget director David Stockman briefed Helms and other Republican members of the committee.

Block said growers would receive direct payments in the period to ease the transition to what the administration hopes would become a "market-oriented" system of farm programs.

Helms could not be reached for comment, but his top agriculture aide, George S. Dunlop, said the senator would oppose phasing out the allotment system. Although Dunlop heard Block's remarks, he said, "I'm not particularly concerned."

Dunlop said Helms should be able to convince the administration and Congress that the reasons for keeping the "allotment quota system are compelling." Ending the tobacco quota system, he said, would have an adverse economic and social impact on the Southeast.

Under the federal tobacco program, farmers are allowed to grow a certain amount of tobacco each year, called a quota. In return, they are assured a certain price for their tobacco. If they can't sell their leaf above the federal price-support level, cooperatives buy it at the support level and try to sell it later.

Several participants in Thursday's meeting said tobacco was not singled out for discussion, and Stockman declined to comment when he emerged from the meeting.

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., who attended a similar briefing Wednesday for House Republicans, said the end of allotments and production controls was not precisely spelled out. But he said the administration "basically" proposed that "all commodities, price supports (would) end in five years."

Loss Would Bring 'Chaos'

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Passage by Congress of a long-term farm bill designed to phase out price supports for all crops would mean "economic chaos" for tobacco farmers, local grower Graham Mills said this morning.

According to the Ayden farmer, approval of the legislative package, scheduled for consideration the second week in February, will increase the already overwhelming number of problems facing growers today; problems that range from declining land values to dwindling intake on tobacco warehouse floors.

"For instance, if you paid $350,000 for a farm five years ago that had a tobacco base of 16 to 17 acres, and things keep going the way they look for tobacco, you're still going to have to come up with those payments, but it will be for land that no longer retains its value."

Mills said he is also "deeply concerned" about declining prices for leases. "This year prices will be cut drastically, as much as 40 cents, bringing prices to 30 cents a pound. That's down from 70 cents a pound last year," he explained.

Asked what he intends to do to prepare for possible elimination of the price support program and expected revisions of additional federal policies governing tobacco production, Mills said there's "nothing to do but wait and see."

"It's a wait and see game," he said. "I haven't leased yet because it hasn't even been established what's going to happen this year."

Whatever happens to the tobacco program, everyone, including landowners and tenants, "is going to have to share in the risk of raising tobacco," Pitt County Agricultural Agent Mitch Smith said.

"Basically any kind of reduction in the price support program being looked at by Congress is an attempt to make tobacco more competitive on a piecemeal basis, both on the domestic and export markets," Smith said. "But, at this point, I do not think we will see a reduction in support right away."

"Nothing has been done and nothing has been written down so the likelihood of anything happening to the tobacco program before fall 1985 is very small. It takes time to get

Reynolds May Is Named '84 Citizen Of Year

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Seth Reynolds May's pleasure shone as brightly from his eyes as his peers say his contributions shine in his community.

"I am very grateful for this award," May said, "but most of all I'm grateful to live in the best town and community in the entire United States of America — Greenville and Pitt County."

May was chosen Citizen of the Year for 1984 by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and received his award from Dr. Leo Jenkins at the chamber's annual meeting Thursday.

In his presentation speech, Dr. Jenkins told the audience that there are three types of citizens — the minimum, the average and the maximum. The minimum citizen, he said, "doesn't vote and criticizes the results of elections ... he never offers constructive comments." The average citizen, he said, "votes but follows slogans ... doesn't think much ... enjoys playing follow the leader."

Finally, the maximum citizen is one who "gets things done ... he thinks, works, initiates projects, completes projects, encourages, has divine discontent and loves his country," he added. "He is involved in mankind, knows that everyone's death diminishes him and everyone's success helps him and all of us."

S. Reynolds May "became involved because he is a maximum citizen," Jenkins said, "one who has stood out above the others in his concerns and contributions to this community."

May's involvements include the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Community Chest, Industrial Committee, chairman of the board of directors of the Salvation Army, Pitt County United Way, Greenville Little League, Greenville Jaycees and Greenville Golf and Country Club. Jenkins pointed out that May was an original member of many of these groups and was instrumental in forming them.

His fund-raising memberships include the original committee of seven who raised funds for Ficklen Stadium and the committee that raised money for the expansion, committee who raised funds for Scales Field House, chairman of the Pitt United Way Special Gifts Committee, committee who raised funds for the Pitt County Boys Club and the committee who raised money for the local Ronald McDonald House.

In addition, May has served as a trustee of Louisburg College and the Methodist Children's Home. At Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church he has taught Sunday school for over 40 years, served as chairman of the board of stewards, co-chairman of the committee to raise funds for the educational building, head of the special gifts committee to raise money to enlarge and renovate the sanctuary and head of the pastoral committee.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the new citizen of the year "was extremely involved in trying to put ECU sports, especially baseball, back on its feet and into the Southern Conference," Jenkins said. Contacts he made "led to the scheduling of games with ... teams such as Duke, State, Carolina, Wake Forest, Maryland, Clemson, South Carolina."

Shuttle Ready To Deploy Spy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's commander, his voice encoded, reported the shuttle was performing flawlessly today as the astronauts readied for deployment of a $300 million superspy satellite whose fate depends on a rocket stage which failed its only other shuttle assignment.

Sources reported the satellite was scheduled to be deployed sometime today, but the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Pentagon said they will not confirm it has been released until much later in the flight. The reporting delay is one of several secrecy steps being taken to confound Soviet tracking efforts during this first completely classified U.S. manned space flight.

The mission began at 2:50 p.m. EST Thursday after a secret countdown, whose status was revealed publicly just nine minutes before liftoff.

Missing as the spaceship rose spectacularly into space were the voices of the astronauts. Throughout the mission, expected to last at least until Tuesday, reporters will not be able to listen to space-to-ground communications, as has been allowed for years. Even if they could listen in, the conversations are encoded.

NASA plans to issue a statement about every eight hours on condition of the spaceship and crew.

The Reeps live in Greenville where she is a local quiltmaker and teacher of quilting for Pitt Community College. He is a professor of art for the School of Art at the university.

The Stearns and Foster and the New Hanover Museum quilt collections will be on view as well as the regular quilt show.

The show hours Saturday are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The armory is located on Georgetown Road at the intersection of U.S. 17, 24 and 258.

Mrs. Helms Is Club Speaker

A program on mosses and lichens was given at the meeting of the Greenville Garden Club held last week. Mrs. R.H. Helms presented the program illustrated with slides.

Bunny Stone, Mary Leggett and Edna Seeley were welcomed as new club members.

Mrs. J.C. Galloway, garden therapy chairman, reported that 75 assorted bulbs were planted at the garden at the psychiatric unit of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital. A metal edging was placed around the garden.

Mrs. Helms, civic concerns, said that hollies, dwarf yaupons and nandinas had been planted in the cafeteria courtyard at E.B. Aycock Junior High School. Mrs. Fenner Corbett, president, conducted the business session.

The luncheon meeting was held at the Holiday Inn with Mrs. Albert E. Youmans as hostess. She was assisted by Mrs. J.R. Carrington, Thelma Harris, Mrs. F.S. Corbett and Mrs. Gilbert Peel.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk

Salt and pepper to taste
3/4 pound mild cheddar cheese, shredded medium-fine

5 1/2-ounce can pitted ripe olives, drained and sliced
Paprika

Cook macaroni according to package directions; drain. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, milk, salt and pepper; keep hot. Spread half the macaroni in a buttered 2-quart baking dish (11 1/2 by 7 1/2 by 1 1/4 inches). Sprinkle with half the cheese. Arrange olives over cheese. Top with remaining macaroni and cheese, pour hot sauce over top and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until bubbling hot — about 20 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Makes 4 servings.

FOLLOWING COLUMBUS'

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (AP) — A 104-year-old Italian sailing ship is en route from the Canary Islands to San Salvador on the final leg of its voyage tracing the route of Christopher Columbus.

The 72-foot wooden vessel "Felice Manin" has a crew of nine. It began its journey from Genoa, Italy, and plans to visit several American cities after completing its Atlantic crossing. It is to appear in the "HarbourFest '85" celebration next Fourth of July in New York City.

It is to participate in the Boating Week-USA and Miami International Boat Show in the last half of February. Then it will travel up the East Coast with stops at Cape Canaveral, Jacksonville, Savannah, Charleston, Wilmington, Elizabeth City, Norfolk, Washington, Annapolis, Baltimore, Wilmington and Philadelphia before reaching New York.

Federal Reserve Board Extends New Safeguards For Debit Cards

The Kiplinger Magazine

New safeguards for debit cards:

The Electronic Fund Transfer Act has protected credit card users since 1978. The Federal Reserve Board is now extending that protection to debit cardholders, said to number about 6 million, whether or not the transactions flow through electronic channels.

Most debit card transactions involve electronic records of transfers of money when you withdraw cash from a bank account through an automated teller machine or buy something with a debit card from a store equipped with a point-of-sale terminal. Money is immediately deducted from your account.

One key section of the regulations has been in effect since last November and limits your liability for unauthorized use of the card to $50 if you notify the company within two business days and to $500 if you wait longer.

On April 16 additional safeguards will kick in, including a requirement that the company issuing the card provisionally recredit to your account any amount that you claim was deducted in error if it fails to clear up the problem within 20 business days. The company has up to 90 calendar days to resolve the error.

Bigger returns for smaller savers:

Starting this month the minimum deposit requirement for super-NOW and money-market deposit accounts drops to $1,000 from $2,500. And competition for your money is heating up.

Sears, Citibank and others are rushing to squeeze through a loophole in the banking laws allowing them to open so-called consumer banks that can take deposits and make consumer loans but not offer checking accounts or commercial loans.

It may pay to hold off buying a new car:

An easing of import quotas is in the works, meaning later in the year may be a better time to bargain on prices.

Commerce Department trade negotiators expect the Japanese to boost their voluntary quota by as much as 20 percent, putting some 350,000 additional cars on the market.

More cars for customers to choose from should put downward pressure on import prices and spill over into the market for American cars as well.

A new form 1099:

This one is being mailed to Social Security recipients this month as a reminder that some of them will owe taxes on their benefits.

If you get an SSA-1099, note that the amount reported as income to you includes amounts withheld for Medicare premiums. It counts, too.

You can see double on your TV screen:

The latest in television technology may wreak havoc with TV ratings but could prove a hit with indecisive viewers.

Digital TV sets let you watch two programs simultaneously by using split screens or window insets. They also deliver sharper picture quality than standard sets, allow you to blow up and freeze a single frame, and have fewer components for more reliable service.

The new sets should make their debut this year, but not every model will offer every feature. For example, Sony, which has already introduced digital technology in Japan, will focus on improved picture quality instead of costly extras like split screens. Sony's 13-inch set sells for the equivalent of $500 in Japan. A 27-inch model that can be programmed to display birthdays and appointments and turn on and off automatically goes for $1,300.

Some manufacturers worry that the new sets will flop if viewers aren't convinced that all the convenience justifies the cost. General

Electric, for one, is hanging back a bit. "It's definitely the TV system of the future," says a GE representative. "But we don't want to be first for the sake of being first."

SUSAN PURDY

Expert Seeks To Preserve Pie Baking As National Art

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
Associated Press Writer
ROXBURY, Conn. (AP) — Ever since Susan Purdy made pies her kitchen specialty, she says her friends have stopped inviting her to dinner.

It's not that Mrs. Purdy's pies aren't tasty. On the contrary, her pies are exquisitely formed and filled, with nary a crack in the bottom crust or a blemish on the flaky top crust.

It's Mrs. Purdy's skill at making pies — and tarts and turnovers and tortes and quiche, pizza, cobblers, or anything with a crust — that has intimidated her friends. The advent of her latest book, "As Easy As Pie," was the icing on the cake — or, in this case, the crust on the pie.

"Since I began writing cookbooks, people are very intimidated by me," the Roxbury resident says. "It's really sad — it distresses me. I'm not critical of other people's cooking. I'd love to eat it, not review it."

Mrs. Purdy wrote "As Easy As Pie" to preserve what she says is a national art.

"Pies strike a chord in many people that brings images of motherhood, childhood and nostalgia," she says.

But pies are much more than apple pie on the Fourth of July or pumpkin pie on Thanksgiving, Mrs. Purdy says.

The advent of freezer pie crust, pre-packaged graham cracker crusts and even prepackaged frozen pies has made pie baking almost a lost art, she says. Her new cookbook's goal is to alleviate some of the fear associated with handling delicate crusts.

But the book is also a delightful diary of personal recollections about pie from the many people Mrs. Purdy met in her search for new recipes.

"The story behind 'four and 20 blackbirds baked in a pie' is fun," she says. "And it's true. It's a medieval pie, a huge pie that had live birds inside. The lord or king would cut the pie and the birds would fly out to amuse his guests."

"That's also the origin of the birthday girl popping out of a birthday cake today."

Mrs. Purdy includes in her book the modern-day version of blackbird pie — minus the live birds, instead made with game birds.

Among the dozens of other pies, there's milk pie, the custard recipe for which Mrs. Purdy received from a man with Pennsylvania Dutch roots.

There are Portuguese bean-custard tartlets, which she discovered in a Massachusetts bakery operated by a man who had emigrated from Lisbon.

There are chess pies, including the famous pecan pie, which are characteristically clear and typically of Southern origin. Mrs. Purdy says "chess pie" may have originated from the plantation cook who was asked what she was baking that smelled so good. "Jes' pie," was her answer.

Many people's fears of making a pie from scratch begin with the fear of a sticky wad of pastry that sticks to the rolling pin, the table, the hands, Mrs. Purdy says.

"The secret is to add an egg yolk to your recipe," she says, happy to divulge the hint. "There are lots of tricks to a good crust. It's not magic."

Mrs. Purdy is a former textile designer who has written more than a dozen children's books. She also teaches pie baking at a local cooking school owned by musician Skitch Henderson and his wife, Ruth.

Mrs. Purdy's travels around the world, including her cooking courses in France, turned up many of the recipes in the book.

"In Vermont, I discovered they use granulated maple syrup in their pumpkin pies and maple syrup in their pecan pie instead of corn syrup," she says. "Down south, any kind of nut pie is popular — peanut pie, walnut pie, and of course pecan pie."

"At a phyllo factory in Greece, I brought a friend who could translate for me," Mrs. Purdy says, explaining that was the only way she could learn the precise technique for achieving the flaky pastry crust.

("As Easy As Pie" is published by Atheneum.)

A company survey revealed that more than half of recent buyers put their washers and dryers in kitchens, bathrooms or even bedrooms out of the basement.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband gave me his class ring when he asked me to marry him. He said he wanted it back when he gives me a "real" engagement ring.

Well, we have been married for 26 years, and now he wants his class ring back. I won't give it to him because he hasn't come up with a real engagement ring yet.

What should I do?

STILL WAITING

DEAR WAITING: Technically, an engagement ring is one that symbolizes a commitment to marry. It can be a tin ring from a box of Cracker Jacks, a paper band from a cigar, an expensive ring with a diamond or a class ring.

So, keep the class ring; it is your engagement ring. And don't give it back until your husband replaces it with another one.

DEAR ABBY: I am faced with a unique and delicate situation and need some information in a hurry. I am in love with a man who wants to marry me, but I don't know if we can legally marry.

He is a transsexual (female to male), but he has not yet had the necessary surgery to make the change complete.

He has been on hormones for seven years and has the appearance of a male, but he still has female genitals.

He has had his name legally changed, and has lived as a man for six years.

I need to know if we can legally marry before he has had his sex-reassignment surgery.

D. IN NEVADA

DEAR D.: In order for a transsexual to marry, he or she must be examined by a physician, who then must verify that the transsexual is medically of the opposite sex from the person he or she wants to marry. (Same-sex marriages are not legal.)

A female-to-male transsexual is not considered a male, medically, unless her ovaries have been removed. And a male-to-female transsexual is not considered a female, medically, until his testes have been removed.

For more information on this subject, write to the Janus Information Facility, 1952 Union St., San Francisco, Calif. 94123.

This is a non-profit service, so please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: If I don't tell someone, I am going to explode! One day last week, a neighbor came over to visit me. She is an intelligent, educated woman who has a good job, but apparently not much common sense. She said she'd called in sick because she had a bad cold and a cough or "whatever was going around"—so she came over to spend the afternoon with me.

My daughter brought her baby over that afternoon, and you guessed it. The next day the baby came down with whatever it was my neighbor had, and so did I.

I am furious with her for coming to my place to spread her germs. Please print this as a warning to thoughtless, stupid people who go visiting when they're too sick to go

TEATIME FARE
Cocoa Madeleines & Tea
COCOA MADELEINES

- 1/4-pound stick butter, cut in 16 equal pats
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup cocoa
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 large eggs
- 1/2 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder

Beat together until blended the butter, sugar, cocoa and vanilla; beat in eggs one at a time, until blended. Sprinkle in the flour and baking powder; beat gently until blended. Spread a rounded tablespoon of the batter in greased madeleine pan wells (each 2 tablespoon capacity). Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 5 minutes.

With the tip of a paring knife, loosen edges; with a small spatula remove to a wire rack, shell-shape side up. Makes 24. Give on request.

Secretary 'Fills' The Need

Road Funds

Jim Harrington, the new transportation secretary in the Martin administration, has said that North Carolina's continued economic growth depends on the condition of its roads.

He emphasized that he was talking about all roads, not just interstates.

"We've got major problems in the North Carolina economy, and transportation linkage is a key part of addressing those," he said. However, he noted that the demand for road funds is 10 times the amount of money available.

As with every new administration the Department of Transportation board will study highway plans and make revisions. Harrington said a "menu" of needed projects will be drawn up and he will discuss them with the governor.

The need for adequate highways, particularly in a far-flung state like North Carolina, cannot be over emphasized. While various regions compete with one another for highway funds, the effect of good highways once they are built is to draw the regions together.

Obviously all highway needs will not be met, particularly since a large portion of the highway funds now go for maintenance of roads which are already there. We must, however, stretch our transportation dollars to the limit if we are to meet the needs of our citizens and continue economic growth.

Assurances

North Carolinians have assurances of the one man who may have the most to say about state spending in the next four years that outlays for education are going to be increased.

Lt. Governor Robert Jordan told an audience in Greensboro that educational needs will be considered at the same time lawmakers consider cuts in the state sales tax and inventory and intangible taxes.

It bodes well.

Jordan was quick to remind that what the General Assembly would be able to do in the tax-cutting field depends heavily on the state's economic condition and upon the budget. But he left no doubt as to his commitment to education.

Tar Heels have reason to look upon their state as being rich in many ways; but insofar as money goes, there never seems quite enough. Most of its tax money goes to education, but 45 other states spend more per pupil than does North Carolina.

This time around, Jordan vows teachers will see salary increases, reductions in class sizes and more funds for textbooks. He says those things will come to pass as the private economy is being encouraged; and the tax proposals recommended by Gov. Jim Martin will also see the maintaining and improving of essential state services.

Those kind of assurances are welcome.

Democrats Worry Over Future

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — On the day after Gov. George Deukmejian publicly pressured the California Supreme Court to stop blocking capital punishment, Democratic politicians here reflected the outrage and frustration that is becoming a common reaction of their party to demands of the public.

Democratic leaders of the state Legislature agreed it was improper to insert in the governor's State of the State address recently an appeal "on behalf of the overwhelming majority of voters" for the court to "implement our state's death penalty law." But it is Deukmejian, not the Democrats, who reflects public opinion — and it galls them.

The sense of being the anti-populist party is not only ironic for the heirs of Andrew Jackson. It also explains why Democratic gloom persists here and elsewhere two months after Ronald Reagan's landslide. Reminiscent of Republicans a generation ago, today's Democratic politicians seem impatient with the ignorance of lowly voters who argue with their betters.

"I am concerned about what is now being called populism and the way certain people are exploiting it," state Sen. Bill Lockyer told us. Lockyer and fellow Democratic senators are no longer comfortable with California's populist Democratic system of putting legislative issues on the ballot. The ballot has become a loaded tax-reduction gun pointed at the Legislature.

Democrats never have recovered from the 1978 Proposition 13 cut in property taxes, which did not produce predicted disasters. Although tax-cutting referenda since have been defeated, fear persists that public pressure will convert the present big budget surplus into lower taxes. Democratic legislators appreciate that their desire to use those burgeoning surpluses to replenish the public sector runs against popular opinion.

WASHINGTON — Rosemary Furman knows how to incite the wrath of lawyers: offer legal advice without a license. Because the 57-year-old stenographer gave her customers cut-rate counsel on filling out wills and other do-it-yourself legal forms, the Florida Bar Association successfully fought to have her convicted of practicing law without a license and put out of business.

Last month, Florida Gov. Bob Braham, with six other state officials, excused Ms. Furman from serving a 30-day sentence imposed by the state Supreme Court at the Florida Bar's request.

But the controversy over her claim to be a piece of the legal business endures. Three would-be Furman clients have filed a class action suit to undo the state bar's restriction against lay assistance on ostensibly do-it-yourself functions. The suit could be an inspiration to similar efforts around this litigious nation.

Americans enjoy the highest lawyer-per-capita ratio in the world. Despite a slight decline in the size of law school enrollment, at least 30,000 new lawyers will graduate this year.

But aside from occasional examples of walk-in legal services, the private sector hasn't let its enormous supply of lawyers lead to bargain prices, even for the most rudimentary services. The result is that many people who require legal help don't get it.

Rosemary Furman met a need, if only on the most purfuctory of legal exercises. Wills, adoptions, name changes and simple divorces were her specialty. Her fee of $50 was only slightly more than the hourly rate some law firms pay their photocopying personnel.

But Ms. Furman's service threatened some lawyers' vacations and others' bread-and-butter. That's why the Florida Bar inflated the importance of the tasks Furman was performing: Those tasks had to be performed by a qualified lawyer and no one else.

Ms. Furman's potential clients may not be the only ones who have a stake in the pending class-action suit, the merits of which have yet to be determined by U.S. District Court in her hometown of Jacksonville. Alan Morrison, the director of Ralph Nader's litigation group, who represented Ms. Furman and took on the current action, says he'll fight the issue in the U.S. Supreme Court, if need be.

But a final ruling could be a long way off. In the interim, legal reforms might prove sufficiently remedial. One set of proposals was to be issued recently by the Committee on the Next Agenda, a 14-member panel representing six of the nation's most influential think tanks. The proposals were to be submitted to President Reagan.

In its report, the group recommends that bankers and other professionals be allowed to compete with lawyers in many of the services that Ms. Furman was providing. It also boosts the increased use of mediation to resolve disputes, citing the estimated 15 million civil suits that will probably be filed this year.

Normally, even the best suggestions must compete for the president's ear. But this panel may have more luck than most. Among the group's members were the Heritage Foundation's Edwin Fuelleter, one of attorney general-designate Edwin Meese's best friends, and such former Reagan administration officials as Martin Anderson and Norman Ture. The more but not extremely liberal Brookings Institute was also represented, giving the panel some ideological balance and credibility.

Washington's political climate alone favors the notion of opening basic legal functions to competition. Indeed, the Civil Aeronautics Board's recent dissolution gave department stores and other vendors access to the airline ticket market once enjoyed only by the carriers themselves and travel agencies.

Total "deregulation" of the legal services industry would be out of the question. In difficult cases, trained and accredited attorneys, like credentialed surgeons and accountants, may be the average citizen's best friend. Short-term savings with a quack may lead to serious complications in the long run.

But Rosemary Furman was probably as competent as any lawyer or lawyer's secretary at the legal services she provided. What ultimately put her out of business was the aversion of a proliferating population of law school graduates to competition. The legal profession may either have to provide all Americans with the benefits of oversupply, or endure a rising tide that favors opening up the system.

A Question Of Paying The Tax

RALEIGH — In the future, you may need to bring along more money when you pick up your license plates. A proposal receiving serious consideration from a legislative committee would have motor vehicle owners paying registration fees and property taxes together.

The Property Tax Study Commission is trying to catch some of the deadbeats who don't pay the local property tax on their vehicles. It's no small problem. Counties estimate that they lose $7 million a year in revenue and probably spend a lot more than that pursuing people who don't want to pay these taxes. In Wake County alone, the commission was told, nearly $1 million is spent annually trying to collect auto taxes.

The state changed its policy regarding registration several years ago in hopes of helping the counties with this problem. Anyone seeking to register a car had to declare that they had listed it for property tax purposes.

That step apparently has not proved to be enough. Counties report that some vehicle owners aren't complying with the law. They lie on the form, saying they've listed a car or truck when they haven't.

The state has tried to help counties collect their taxes by making computer lists of all cars registered available by counties. But this has proved to be both expensive and often futile for the counties.

Some people register their vehicles in one county and actually live in another, so they don't get caught. Other people register the car in one name but pay their taxes in another. As one legislative staffer said after the committee meeting, "My car is registered in my name but my husband and I pay taxes jointly, so I'm sure it (the car) is listed in his name and since I didn't take his (last) name, I got a letter" from the tax collector.

Apparently many counties are spending a lot of time and effort trying to catch these tax dodgers only to be frustrated by an inability to find them, or sent off trying to collect taxes from someone who has already paid, like the legislative staffer. The commission thinks that by linking registration and tax payments they could end the tax dodging and save the counties a great deal in administrative expenses.

The idea raises several questions, however, and they were enumerated when a commission subcommittee looked at the proposal. The state would be assuming an administrative burden which would almost certainly require the hiring of new employees. If that cost was passed on to the counties, then counties which currently feel that they're doing a good job of collecting these taxes might squawk.

The state would be taking over a previously local function which would run counter to the general rule that local government best renders service. But in 34 other states, the decision has been made to collect these taxes at a state level. They obviously decided that the state is better suited to this "service."

The biggest problem is with vehicles of less than two tons. So it has been suggested that the new statewide system apply only to vehicles this weight and less. But then anyone who owned a car and a recreation vehicle, for example, would have to register and pay taxes under two different systems.

Finally there is the question of checks. Currently, registration stations don't accept them. If the vehicle owner had to pay both registration and taxes, they'd almost have to change that — and with it accept some bad checks.

This year the counties are going to be looking for new revenue. They might be desperate enough to support a new collection system.

Strength For Today

What makes people old?

There can be no doubt that certain deteriorations take place as the years pass, producing gray hair and feeble knees, trembling hands, stiff joints, dull ears.

But there is undoubtedly a psychological aspect to the situation also. If we eat too much, worry too much, long to have people wait on us, and give in on all occasions to irritation and anger, we may expect to grow old prematurely. If we strive to live a useful life, continue our activity to the very limits of its reasonable bounds, take an interest in our fellows, and love all people, we may expect to live longer.

A man was recently telling about his father who lived to be almost one hundred years of age. "And did he then die of old age?" someone asked. "Oh no," was the reply, "he fell out of an apple tree."

The chill for Democrats derives from their preview of the 1986 campaign. California Chief Justice Rose Bird, Gov. Jerry Brown's most far-reaching appointment, will be up for retention or dismissal by the voters (another populist device and one that used to be anathema for conservatives).

Justice Bird has set the court's liberal tone, particularly in blocking executions. Deukmejian told us the Bird court "thwarts the will of the people and the will of the Legislature" — a formation that incenses Democrats. Since polls show Californians favor the death penalty by 80 to 20 percent, Democratic officeholders worry about getting ploughed under in 1986 by twin campaigns to eliminate Bird and re-elect Deukmejian.

In 1982 the colorless state attorney general squeaked by favored Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley (who failed to win normal Democratic votes in white rural areas). But he is considered a cinch in a rematch that prominent Democrats regard as so hopeless they are unobtrusively lobbying the mayor not to try again.

That is not because Deukmejian has suddenly contracted charisma in the tradition of California governors. Republicans complain he is remote and inaccessible. Unlike Reagan, he is no ideological godfather of the conservative movement. Pat Nolan, the aggressive new Republican leader of the state assembly, does not even consider him a true conservative.

While Nolan would like a tax cut, Deukmejian wants to sit tight fiscally. Indeed, it was prodding from Nolan's "cavemen" in the assembly that led to the cornerstone of the governor's popularity: his no-tax-increase stand in the recession-bred fiscal crisis of 1983. But his law-and-order, fiscal conservatism is precisely what California wants.

Accordingly, many Democrats say only an economic downturn will revive their fortunes next year. Such talk bothers Gray Davis, once Jerry Brown's top aide and now a state assemblyman. Davis believes his party is in major trouble if the voters are forced to look to the Republicans for economic and physical security.

Davis has his own problems with the new populism. While not joining his old boss in opposition to capital punishment, he condemned Deukmejian for "court-bashing."

But the notion that courts are beyond political criticism is an anti-populist hallmark. The party that adopts it can then only rely on the mistakes of its opponents and misfortunes in the economy to win elections.

Planning Nears End For PCC Center

Working drawings for the proposed Pitt Community College Library and Learning Center will be submitted to the state for approval around March 1, the PCC Board of Trustees was told at its quarterly meeting Thursday.

According to Joe Hunnicutt, dean of administrative services for the college, the plans for the new facility will be completed by March 1. In addition, he said that development and design drawings for the campus drainage plan are expected to be submitted to the state for approval by Feb. 15.

Sen. Vernon White, a member of the college's Board of Trustees, reported to the board that the North Carolina Department of Transportation had agreed to fund the extension of the road near the Humber and White buildings on the southern side of the PCC campus. Extension of the road will be in conjunction with the building of the library-learning center and drainage project.

PCC President Charles Russell reported that winter enrollment for curriculum students is 2,321, a decrease of 49 students from winter quarter 1983. He also reported that in October 1984, 100 percent of the 44 students who completed the first year of nursing education and took the practical nurse exam passed it.

Dole Says Weinberger Hiking Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, delivering a sharp attack on Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, warned today that efforts to reduce federal deficits could falter seriously if the Reagan administration doesn't yield more on defense spending.

"I'm willing to go after sensitive programs ... but don't count on me if Weinberger continues to sit it out," the Kansas Republican told a breakfast gathering of public relations officials.

"We're in real trouble if we can't get together on defense numbers," Dole added.

The Republican leader accused Weinberger of exaggerating estimates of Pentagon belt-tightening in an effort to shelter his agency from budget cutters.

"I think the rest of the country needs to survive too," Dole said. "I won't say everything is lost if we don't get more defense spending restraint — but we might be close to it."

Dole is leading an effort among Senate Republicans to develop their own budget plan, but the endeavor has bogged down in a dispute over defense spending levels for 1986.

Dole disclosed today that he will seek to use a parliamentary shortcut to try to win quick congressional action of the entire budget package. But Dole's announcement drew immediate criticism from House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Greenville police have arrested Howard Lee Moore, 26, of 2523 Memorial Drive on four counts of breaking, entering and larceny. Detective J.E. Nichols said Moore was charged in connection with a Sept. 27 break-in at 101 Heritage Drive where a quantity of jewelry and other items were taken; a Dec. 7 break-in at 104 Pineview Drive where a rifle valued at $100 was stolen; a Dec. 10 incident at 206 Pineview Drive where jewelry and wine glasses valued at $350 were taken, and a Jan. 3 break-in at 212 Pine St. where a pistol and jewelry valued at $3,800 were stolen.

Fresh Way Robbery

Greenville police are investigating a robbery that occurred at the Fresh Way store at 1401 Dickinson Ave. about 12:58 a.m. today, the second theft in as many days from the convenience store. Officer P.W. Scheutzow said one of two men who entered the store jumped over the counter and demanded that the clerk, Deborah Ann Williams, open the cash register. The second man then jumped the counter and began hitting Ms. Williams in the head with a rock, the officer said. Scheutzow, who said an undetermined amount of cash was taken from the register, said Ms. Williams and a friend ran from the store, leaving the two robbers inside, then called police.

An undetermined amount of cash was taken from the same store about 12:54 a.m. Thursday when a man reached into the cash register and took all the $1 bills from the cash drawer while the clerk was making change.

Thursday Thefts

Greenville police are continuing to investigate three thefts reported to the department on Thursday. Officer H.D. Hines said 15 steaks and four bottles of dental mercury were taken from 1005 E. Fourth St. in a break-in reported at 8:28 a.m.

Dortch To Speak

The Rev. W.C. Dortch will be the keynote speaker for the inaugural convention of the Pitt County-Greenville Black Coalition Saturday at 6:45 p.m. at York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church. Dortch is a Kinston city councilman. He is a graduate of Shaw Divinity School and is a member of the executive board of the United Free Will Baptist Denomination, vice bishop of the Northwest Conference "B" Division and president of the District Union No. 2 Northwest Conference. He is pastor of Post Oak Free Will Baptist Church, Kinston, Beautiful Valley Free Will Baptist Church, Dover, and Saint Matilda Free Will Baptist Church, Trenton.

at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive. The meeting is open to the public.

New Director Named

David B. McDonald, a development officer at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro for the past 15 years and a leader in UNC-G's $12 million capital gifts campaign, will become director of institutional advancement at East Carolina University. McDonald's appointment, effective March 1, will involve corporate and foundation work in addition to supervising and planning the overall fund raising program for ECU. As director of annual giving, McDonald designed and implemented an umbrella-type fund raising program that increased UNC-G's annual giving by nearly 300 percent in four years. As ECU director of institutional advancement, he succeeds Dr. F. Douglas Moore who resigned last November to become executive assistant to the president at James Madison University.

Greenville Police Officer Howard L. Connor has completed a two-week interviewing course conducted by the North Carolina Justice Academy in Salemburg. The course included instruction in interviewing witnesses, victims and suspects.

Tax Listing

Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee said today that many Pitt County property owners have not listed their property for tax purposes so far this month and he reminded them that the last day for listing is Jan. 31.

Hardee said "less than 50 percent" of the 34,000 mail abstracts sent out by his department have been returned so far. They must be postmarked before midnight Jan. 31 or a late listing penalty will be added, Hardee said.

Among those who visit the various listing places in the county, Hardee said there are still "25 to 30 percent" of the property owners who have not listed.

Hardee said that the listing places will be open until noon on Saturday for people who are unable to list during the week. But he emphasized that persons not listing their property before closing time on Jan. 31 will face the late listing penalty.

May graduated from Duke University in 1935 and came to Greenville as a baseball player with the Coastal Plains League in 1934. He is married to the former Doris Lynn Garris and they have a son, Louis Garris May, a daughter, Mary May Brown, and three granddaughters.

Before the citizen of the year presentation, Ray Boleman, the chamber's chairman of the board for 1985, told members that education, jobs, transportation, agriculture and entertainment would form the focus for chamber work in 1985.

"Education is a high priority for the chamber in the coming year," he said in his message for 1985. "We ask you to join with us in urging our county government and school officials to continue their work to fulfill the tentative plan of merger of the two school systems."

In addition, the chamber will work to bring "more service jobs, industrial jobs and jobs in the medical sector" to Pitt County in 1985, Boleman said. "It is imperative that we add payrolls to the community in these areas."

Transportation, particularly better roads and expanded air service, will also be a high priority, he said. "In order to get a stepped-up completion date on the 264 project and get the proposed northern loop, we have to get organized and make our concerns known," Boleman noted. "We will also have to work for the much-needed air service to Norfolk and Greensboro."

The community must "look objectively into the future" of agriculture, Boleman said and "help our farmers." "The tobacco program is in trouble, there's no doubt," he said. "We must develop a priority for the future."

Support of a regional activity center located in Pitt County will also be a project for 1985, Boleman said. "There is a need for a center of this type in the east and Greenville is the place for it," he noted.

In his annual report for 1984, outgoing board Chairman Jon Tingelstad told members that the past year was the "best year ever for chamber memberships" and that the organization experienced the "highest retention rate in history."

In addition, 1984 "was a successful year financially," Tingelstad added, with "more new businesses than ever before opening in the community."

The tentative consolidation in 1986 of the Pitt and Greenville school systems was "one of our most exciting innovations" in 1984, Tingelstad added.

Local Residents Back Cancellation

Two Greenville residents who were in Washington for the inauguration of President Ronald Reagan say they feel it was wise to cancel the outdoor swearing-in and parade Monday.

Chip Laughinghouse, who along with Steve Colt and Steve Blackwell had tickets for the inaugural ceremony, said he has never experienced cold like that before. When the three arrived in Washington about 7:30 p.m. Sunday, "the wind chill factor was minus 50 degrees."

According to Laughinghouse, "after experiencing the weather, I think it was a good idea to cancel" the outdoor activities. "You could have handled it if you dressed warm enough. But it was really too cold."

But Laughinghouse said the city "looked perfect. The town looked the best I've ever seen it." He said it was a shame the reviewing stand and other facilities erected for the inauguration and parade couldn't be used.

But Laughinghouse said, "We went to a few parties, enjoyed the scenery around D.C., visited the congressman's offices," and "had a good time being around fellow Republicans."

Peggy Cox, who works in Sen. John East's Greenville office, said she "couldn't believe how cold it was" and was glad they didn't hold the out-door inauguration and parade, although she said some people with tickets to the inauguration were upset. But she said "it was very cold. We all froze."

"I didn't have tickets to the inauguration," Ms. Cox said, although she did have tickets to one of the inaugural balls — the youth ball held at the armory near the John F. Kennedy Stadium Monday night.

"We saw President Reagan. I'm happy about that," she said. Ms. Cox said the ball she attended was for about 6,000 to 8,000 people between the ages of 18 and 30.

"All the kids were very excited about seeing President Reagan," Ms. Cox said. "President Reagan and the First Lady danced to the Tennessee Waltz," to open the ball.

Caesarean Birth Guidelines Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many women who had babies by Caesarean section may be able to deliver subsequent children vaginally without fear of serious complications, according to new medical guidelines released today.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said it is loosening similar guidelines released three years ago because of greater confidence that vaginal delivery is safe for many of these women.

Women with previous Caesareans may try labor and vaginal delivery when they have no recurring conditions that require surgical delivery, and if they had a low, horizontal incision instead of a vertical one for their prior delivery, according to the guidelines.

"We estimate that between 50 to 80 percent of these women who choose a trial of labor can deliver vaginally and still maintain the present low infant and maternal death rates," said Dr. Luella Klein, president of ACOG.

The professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Emory University Medical School said the guidelines would "over a period of time help stop the rise in the nation's Caesarean delivery rate and result in a decreased number of repeat Caesareans."

The benefits of vaginal deliveries include no surgical risks, less anesthesia, no post-operative complications, shortened hospital stays and decreased costs, she said.

Federal health statistics show that surgical deliveries have increased from 5.5 percent of all births in 1970 to 10.4 percent in 1975 and 20.3 percent in 1983, the last figures available.

From 1980 to 1983, 55 percent of the increase in these operations were repeat Caesareans in women who had previous surgical deliveries, 24 percent for prolonged labor, 13 percent for fetal distress and 5

Study Shows Vaccine Can Prevent Meningitis Strain

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A vaccine awaiting government approval is a cost-effective way to protect thousands of children from a bacterial illness that often leads to a serious form of meningitis, according to a study published today.

The vaccine would be especially beneficial for children in day-care centers, who are at an increased risk of developing hemophilus influenzae, the illness that can lead to bacterial meningitis, said researchers at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The study in today's Journal of the American Medical Association said the optimal time to immunize all U.S. children with the polysaccharide vaccine is 18 months of age, said Dr. Stephen Cochi, one of the study's authors.

Cochi said a second vaccine should follow at 24 months of age.

But a doctor writing in a journal editorial disagrees, saying that even though he believes the vaccine should be licensed, it should be used initially for children 24 months of age, especially those in day-care centers.

Dr. Joel Ward, of the UCLA School of Medicine, said the vaccine should be considered as an interim measure until more promising ones are available.

With immunization beginning at 18 months, an estimated 2,582 cases of the bacterial illness and 129 deaths could be prevented annually, the study said. In addition, neurological damage, ranging from learning disabilities to paralysis, would be averted in 368 children.

Long-term savings, including hospitalization, treatment, and caring for those with neurological damage, could total about $30 million a year, the study said.

Hemophilus influenzae affects about one in every 200 children during the first five years of life. About 5 percent of the cases are fatal, Cochi said.

About 12,000 cases of bacterial meningitis occur annually, the study said. The bacterial illness that can lead to it also is responsible for thousands of other ailments, such as pneumonia and arthritis, he said.

Cochi, a medical epidemiologist at the CDC, said the study was designed to determine at what point the vaccine is sufficiently effective to warrant its use universally.

He said available data suggested that at 18 months, it would be 50 percent to 90 percent effective.

Safety Standards Challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal standards for a gas commonly used in making synthetic rubber might be too weak, say the authors of a new study in which most of the laboratory mice exposed to the gas died of cancer.

A majority of the mice died after exposure to levels well under federal limits for U.S. workers, the authors said.

In fact, the study ended early because so many of the mice died, according to a report to be published in today's issue of Science magazine.

The authors made no claims involving possible application of the results of their study to humans. But they concluded that the government should take another look at standards for the gas, 1,3-butadiene.

Officials at the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the agency that sets government limits, declined to comment.

About 2.3 billion pounds of the gas were produced in the United States in 1983, according to the study by the National Toxicology Program of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences at Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Institute researchers exposed separate groups of mice to air containing 625 parts per million or 1,250 parts per million of the gas — well below and slightly above the 1,000 ppm federal limit for workers.

The study, which was to last about two years, was ended after little more than one year "because of reduced survival due to fatal tumors," the report said.

By that time, 74 of 100 mice exposed to the lesser concentration of the gas had died as had 63 of 100 exposed to the higher concentration. There was no explanation given for the higher death rate at the lower concentration.

Union Carbide Finishes Disposal Of Deadly MIC

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp., being sued and cited over its handling of methyl isocyanate, says it has disposed of most of its remaining stocks of the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people last month in India.

Federal and state inspectors supervised the six-hour neutralization of Union Carbide's final 3,000 pounds of the chemical, known as MIC, company spokesman Dick Henderson said Thursday. A few barrels were saved for testing, he said.

The processing, which produced a chemical less harmful than MIC, "went pretty smooth" and there were no major problems, Henderson said. The resulting chemical was dumped into the Kanawha River, officials said.

The Institute plant is nearly identical to and 10 times larger than Union Carbide's MIC manufacturing unit in Bhopal, India, where the chemical leaked Dec. 3.

After the Bhopal disaster, MIC production was halted at the two plants, the only two in the world that produced the chemical. Henderson said he expects Union Carbide to release a report next month based on its study of the disaster and that the company will use the document to decide whether to resume MIC production.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency released a report this week detailing 28 MIC leaks at Institute over the last five years that had not been disclosed. The EPA said many of the leaks should have been reported to the agency.

Meanwhile, 37 lawsuits have been filed against Union Carbide stemming from the Bhopal disaster. They involve billions of dollars in claims, many of which contend that Union Carbide handled MIC negligently.

Since the disaster, the company has been working to draw down its remaining store of MIC at Institute.

Company officials said Jan. 10 that all remaining MIC at Institute had been converted to pesticide. But state officials disclosed this week that another batch of 3,000 pounds had been discovered.

Government officials said Thursday's process had never before been used to dispose of such large quantities of the chemical, but they said it posed little danger.

"We believe it's safe," said Tim Laraway of the state Department of Natural Resources.

Instead of being converted into pesticide, the chemical was neutralized in a pollution-control device that normally is used only in an emergency. The resulting chemical, dimethylurea, then was dumped into the Kanawha River, said Laraway.

State Air Pollution Control Commissioner Carl Beard said the dimethylurea is more stable and less harmful than MIC and that the amounts dumped in the river will not pose a hazard.

Security guards at the sprawling plant barred reporters from observing the neutralization process, which was monitored by officials from the DNR, the APCC, the EPA and the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The bidding:
West North East South
1 ♦ Pass Pass 4 ♥
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Sometimes you have to play a number of tricks before you can learn what you need to know about the distribution. On this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships in San Diego, declarer had a complete picture of the hand as soon as the opening lead was made!

You will find differing opinions about how South should treat his hand in the balancing seat. A double is certainly one way, but we won't quibble with South's decision to jump to four hearts.

West led the queen of spades, and the whole hand was an open book. The lead marked East with the king of spades. Also, East surely had a top club honor, for with K-Q-J in the suit West would certainly have led the king of clubs rather than a spade.

Since East had passed his partner's opening bid, he could not possibly have the king of hearts as well as an honor in each of the black suits. Therefore, that card could be consigned with certainty to the West hand.

Declarer could not avoid losing two diamonds and a spade. Therefore, the only way to make the contract was to hope that the king of hearts was bare.

To confirm his analysis, declarer ducked the opening lead and won the spade continuation. He cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club, then ruffed out East's king of spades. When another club ruff fetched the queen from East, declarer tabled the ace of hearts without further ado. The king came tumbling down and the contract was home.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

NOT EVEN GRANDMOTHER WAS SPARED!

ASA, SON OF ABIJAH, WAS THE THIRD KING OF JUDAH (B.C. 956-916). HE WAS COMPLETELY EARNEST IN HIS SUPPORT OF THE WORSHIP OF GOD. HIS ZEAL AGAINST PAGAN WORSHIP WAS SO SINCERE THAT HE DIDN'T EVEN SPARE GRANDMOTHER MAACAH, WHO OCCUPIED THE ROLE OF "KING'S MOTHER." WHEN HE HEARD THAT SHE HAD MADE AN ABOMINABLE IMAGE TO ASHERAH, A PAGAN GOD, HE REMOVED HER FROM THE COURT AND BURNED THE SYMBOL OF HER HEATHEN RELIGION AND THEN THREW ITS ASHES INTO THE BROOK KIDRON! HIS REIGN BEGAN WITH TEN YEARS OF PEACE (2 CHRON. 14:1). HE DESTROYED ALL STRANGE ALTARS THROUGHOUT JUDAH AND PLACED IN THE TEMPLE CERTAIN GIFTS WHICH HIS FATHER BEFORE HIM HAD DEDICATED AND IN THIS WAY RENEWED THE GREAT ALTAR WHICH IDOLATROUS PRIESTS HAD DESECRATED. WHEN THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH WAS INVADED BY THE ETHIOPIAN KING ZERAH AT THE HEAD OF AN ENORMOUS HOST OF AFRICANS, HE DEFEATED THEM WITH A LESSER ARMY AND GAVE THE VICTORY TO GOD. IN ALL THINGS HE ENCOURAGED A COMPLETE RELIGIOUS REFORMATION AND INDUCED THE PEOPLE TO RENEW THEIR COVENANT WITH YAHWEH (2 CHRON. 15:1-15). HE REIGNED FOR FORTY ONE YEARS AND WAS LOVED BY ALL THE PEOPLE AND WAS BURIED WITH ROYAL HONORS.

Sanctuary Leaders Say Government Faces Trial

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 AP Religion Writer

As accused Christians see the case, it poses a classic conflict between church and state, with the government also facing judgment.

Before the court were federal prosecutors and leaders of the church movement to provide sanctuary for refugees from strife-ridden Central America.

"My only hope is that the courts allow the whole story to be told," says Sister Darlene Nigorski.

She is among 16 church workers, including two Catholic priests, three nuns and a Presbyterian minister, charged with conspiracy to aid illegal Central American refugees smuggled into this country.

A preliminary hearing on Wednesday in Phoenix, Ariz., for those indicted marked the first of what bids to be a sharp court battle. Simultaneously, a national symposium of religious scholars met there this week on the matter.

"We're being considered criminals by the government, but the government itself is going to be on trial before the American people," says Renny Golden of the Chicago Religious Task Force which coordinates underground transport for the refugees.

The government terms them illegal aliens, fleeing poverty, with no right to asylum, but the church movement contends they faced persecution and are legally entitled to protection.

The U.S. Refugee Act of 1980 assures asylum for refugees in danger of persecution. Church sanctuary leaders say the government in the last three years has sent back 30,000 Central American refugees in that status.

"I've talked with enough refugees to know personally their stories of persecution," Sister Nigorski said in a sometimes sobbing telephone interview. Having worked with them in Central America as well as this country, she added:

"Some have been in prison for months. You can't tell me that if they're returned, they're not going to be watched, followed and possibly tortured and killed. Most who get out of prison are later killed or leave."

The mid-January crackdown on the church sanctuary movement came after it had operated for three years, with about 170 churches,

Protestant and Roman Catholic, providing haven for the refugees.

Leaders say about 70,000 people and an additional 250 supporting churches are involved in an "underground railroad" of private automobiles used to transport the refugees from place to place.

At present, about 400 refugees are reported inside churches. Sixty were arrested as co-conspirators outside churches, most of them at orientation or language classes.

The others now "stay in the churches," says Ms. Golden, noting that federal officers so far have not entered churches, apparently respecting their traditional role as havens.

Most major Protestant denominations have voiced encouragement to the sanctuary movement, as have several Roman Catholic bishops. The Rev. Arie Brouwer, chief administrator of the National Council of Churches, says:

"It is deeply regrettable that our nation which became a symbol of safe haven from adversity and persecution in past years now denies this protection to persons manifestly in need."

Sister Nigorski, who served in Phoenix to arrange food, clothing and Bible studies for refugees before they were transported elsewhere, said federal agents searched her apartment, leaving a two-page list of items confiscated.

The government says it acted on the basis of recorded tapes made by two undercover agents and two confidential informants.

"We've always been very open about what we were doing," Sister Nigorski said. "If we're guilty of anything, we're guilty of the Gospel of Christ."

Mike Barnhill is from Rocky Mount, N.C. He is married to Carol and they have two sons, Mike, Jr. (21), Jeffrey, (19), and a daughter, Marion (11).
 Mike is a 1963 graduate of N.C. State University in Industrial Engineering. He is president of Commercial Builders, Inc., a general contracting company which builds restaurants, shopping centers, nursing homes, apartments, and churches in North and South Carolina and Virginia.
 Mike is presently serving God as a Field Representative and as Good News Treasurer of the Eastern Carolina Association of FGBMFI chapters.
 The Barnhills feel that their children's ages as well as the fact that Jeffrey is mentally handicapped, has caused them to be presented with a fairly large scope of family situations.
 Come and hear how God used the handicap of their second child to draw the Barnhill family close to Him.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, marking time after its recent strong advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up .44 to 1,270.87 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a small lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Bond prices shot upward and interest rates fell in the credit markets Thursday amid hopes for continuing low inflation and a stimulative Federal Reserve credit policy.

After the stock market closed Thursday afternoon, the Fed reported a larger-than-expected $2.8 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended Jan. 14.

As many traders interpreted them, those figures seemed to leave ample room for the Fed to stick with its recent relaxation of monetary policy.

Falling interest rates in recent months have lowered the competitive allure of interest-bearing investments in comparison to stocks.

A less positive note was sounded this morning, however, when the Commerce Department reported that new orders for durable goods fell 2.1 per cent last month. They had risen 8.3 percent in November.

Among today's early volume leaders, Honeywell rose 1/4 to 60 1/4; Bankamerica gained 1/8 to 19; Black & Decker dropped 1/4 to 25 1/2; and Sperry was off 1/4 to 46.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 4.30 to 1,270.43.

But advances outnumbered declines by about 6 to 5 on the NYSE, marking the 14th consecutive session in which gainers have been in the majority.

Big Board volume came to 160.74 million shares, the eighth largest total on record, against 144.43 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .24 to 102.03. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .37 at 219.57.

these kind of proposals through Congress.

According to Smith, passage of the legislative package designed to phase out supports for all crops from tobacco to peanuts to wheat will affect all tobacco producers in some form, but will most immediately (perhaps by 1987) affect leasing and transfer arrangements. "We're really losing a place in our system for the non-producer; he's being forced out," Smith said.

Chester Don Worthington, chief executive officer of Worthington Farms, said he and others at Worthington Farms foresaw such problems with the tobacco program years ago and have been diversifying ever since. "We've been trying to prepare ourselves for over 20 years and have diversified primarily into hogs," Worthington said.

Tobacco now constitutes 15 percent of Worthington Farms' operations, while 20 years ago, Worthington said two-thirds of the farm was devoted to tobacco production. However, Worthington Farms remains one of Pitt County's largest tobacco producers.

GRIFTON — Andy McDougals, owner of the Grifton Rest Home, which was damaged by fire Jan. 16, said today that all residents of the home have moved back into the facility.

Twenty-seven of the home's residents were moved to Carolina Care in Greenville following the fire. But McDougals said the residents were returned to Grifton this week after all repairs were completed.

"Boy, they were happy they were going home," he said.

McDougals estimated damage from the fire, confined to a smoking lounge area, at "more than $20,000."

Pirates Brace For Naval Attack

East Carolina University's struggling Pirates try to get their act together Saturday night as they return to Minges Coliseum, but with top-ranked Navy coming in for an ECAC-South game, the odds would seem against them.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges.

The U.S. Naval Academy, led by super soph David Robinson, has been mowing down the opposition like grain on harvest day. The Middies are currently 13-2 overall and 6-0 in ECAC-South play, having demolished UNC-Wilmington last night, 78-51, in their latest outing.

The Midshipmen are in the midst of a 10-game winning streak, the longest in nearly 40 years for the Naval Academy. They've also won 10 straight regular-season league encounters going back into last season. There have been several reasons for all the success, but the primary one is Robinson, who came to Navy as a just-eligible (height-wise) 6-7 freshman, but who has sprouted to a 6-11 giant killer. So far this season, Robinson is scoring at a 22.9 clip while pulling down 10.5 rebounds a game — tops in both categories in the ECAC-South.

But it's not just a story of Robinson. He's had help. Joining in up front to make a true dynamic duo is 6-7 junior Vernon Butler, who's been pushing through 16.7 points a game and grabbing off 9.1 rebounds. Butler was the leader in last night's win over UNC-W, hitting 20 points.

Usually, when Robinson is not the high scorer, Butler is. But there are exceptions even to that rule.

The Middies also feature in their starting lineup three others who have held high-scoring honors at one time or another. Rounding out the front court is 6-6 junior Kylor Whitaker, hitting 13.7 points a game. In the backcourt are 6-4 freshman guard Cliff Rees, scoring at a 10.5 clip, while 6-1 sophomore Doug Wojcik has a 4.1 average — but more important, is dishing out a league-leading 7.2 assists per game.

And while the offense is nice, the defense is tough too, led by Robinson, who is blocking 4.5 shots a game — second in the nation.

"Their inside game is something else," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "No one has stopped them inside, so what we have to do is just keep them from annihilating us between Robinson and Butler."

Harrison has said before and continues to say that no team can win consistently with just outside shooting. And, for the most part, that's what the Pirates have had to rely on — the shooting of big guard Curt Vanderhorst and the outside-inside game of William Grady. There has been little help inside, however, although 6-11 Leon Bass continues to show signs of improvement. He still has not returned to full strength after a pre-season stress fracture of the foot, and has to be given rest spells. Opponents have used those spells to dominate play and capture momentum.

"We just have to keep working on it," Harrison said. "We have to try and eliminate the things that are hurting us. People have been getting to the glass before us and we've got to stop that too."

Harrison said the Pirates got inside with the ball with results in the first ten minutes against Richmond, and for most of the first half against Howard, only to lose control after that — and go down to defeat. "All we can do is work to get better."

The Pirates have been without the services of reserve point guard Herb Dixon, suffered from a chipped bone in his right wrist, for the past two games. Harrison is hopeful that he will be able to play on Saturday night. "It's up to Herbie," he said. "He's going to be a little tender, but he can do as much as he feels like doing. We really needed him against Richmond and Howard."

While Navy will be attempting to extend its win streak, the Pirates will be trying to snap a losing skid. They've yet to win in three conference games, and have lost their last five in a row to fall to 5-9 overall.

Grady leads the Pirate scoring with a 16.7 average, while Vanderhorst, who was held below double figures for the first time in 16 games at Howard, is now at 16.4.

One thing troubling Harrison is the disparity in free throw shooting in league games as compared with non-league games. In the three conference contests, the Pirates have been to the line 16 times, hitting six. Their league foes, meanwhile, have hit on 59 of 83 tries — a 67-shot difference in .ries.

In comparison, against 11 non-league opponents the Pirates have hit 134 of 230, while foes have made 167 of 255 — only 25 more shots.

Following Saturday night's game with the Middies, the Pirates play host to James Madison in another league game on Monday, also at 7:30 p.m. in Minges.

Lady Pirates Face Stern Tests In Two Road Games

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, after a successful home stand against two ECAC-South opponents, take to the road Saturday and Monday for a pair of games, one of them in the league.

East Carolina will be at Radford University in Radford, Va., on Saturday at 7 p.m., then will travel on to James Madison in Harrisonburg, Va., on Monday for a 7:30 league encounter with the Dutchesses.

In that latter game, the Lady Pirates will be attempting to win their fifth straight league game against no losses.

However, Madison should turn out to be one of the top contenders for the title this year, having posted the best overall record in the league thus far.

In the latest available standings, Madison was 2-0 in league play while posting a 12-3 overall mark.

Sophomore Betsy Witman leads the Dutchesses in scoring with a 16.5 average, while Julie Franken is the team's top rebounder with a 6.8 average per game. Sue Manelski is scoring at 11.1 while Alisa Harris is 10.8.

Madison is a hot-shooting free throw team, leading the league with a 68.5 mark, and they are second in field goal percentage, making 48.6 percent of their shots.

Witman has converted on 54.5 percent of her shots, while Harris, a freshman, has made 50.5 percent of her attempts. Manelski, a senior, is hitting 84.6 percent of her charity shots, while Witman makes 80.9 percent of her free throw tries.

Radford brings an 11-3 record into the game after a 69-39 win over Western Carolina.

Leading the team — but in a non-starting role — is Joyce Sampson, a 6-2 sophomore. And yes, the name is familiar — she's Ralph's sister.

Sampson is averaging 11.0 points per game and 7.1 rebounds, both tops on the team.

Also in double figures is 5-10 sophomore forward Darlene Adkins, with a 10.2 ppg average.

Among their wins is a 82-76 victory over North Carolina.

Following the road trip, the Lady Pirates return home for a three-game stand starting January 31. In that string, they face ECAC-South foe UNC-Wilmington, along with non-conference opponents South Florida and Hampton Institute.

Only One Hitch In Future Of Middie Star Robinson

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — David Robinson, at 6-foot-11 the tallest athlete in the history of the U.S. Naval Academy, may have developed his basketball skills too quickly.

After playing only one year in high school and 1½ seasons in college, Robinson has been so impressive that many observers feel he is a budding pro prospect.

There's only one hitch ... a five-year hitch ... standing in the way. If he starts his junior year at the academy next August, Robinson would be obligated to five years of active duty in the armed forces.

Robinson could drop out of the academy before that time, play two more years at another school, then take his chances on a lucrative pro contract. The possibility intrigues Robinson, but he wants more input before making up his mind.

"I don't know if everyone is exaggerating the situation," Robinson said of those evaluating his basketball talent. "I'm going to take my time and think about it. I like it here. I have to be convinced that my (pro) chances are great."

Although mindful that former Navy quarterback Roger Staubach became a star in the National Football League after his five years in the service, Robinson said, "It would be hard for any athlete to wait five years. It would make anybody stop and think."

Robinson, who has grown about 3½ inches since entering the academy, would face restrictions on aircraft and submarine duty because of his height. But that probably wouldn't influence the decision of the engineering student, who scored 1,300 on his college boards.

The academy has a 6-6 height limit for incoming plebes, with a 6-8 waiver allowed for 5 percent of the incoming class. Robinson checked in at 6-7½ and has continued to grow since adding an inch during his plebe season.

Robinson tried out for basketball in junior high school at Virginia Beach, Va., but quit when he didn't see much action. He didn't play in the 10th and 11th grades, but rapid growth improved his chances after the family moved to Manassas, Va., as the start of his senior year.

"The team had already been cut to 15 and they were only going to keep 13," Robinson recalled, "but the coach asked me to try out."

As a freshman at Navy, Robinson set a school record with a 62.3 percent shooting average. Playing only a little over 13 minutes a game, he averaged 7.6 points and four rebounds.

This year, with Navy off to a 13-2 start, Robinson ranked ninth in the nation through last Tuesday's games with 11.5 rebounds a game, 10th in field goal percentage at 66.4 and 15th in scoring with 23.5 points. He also had 50 blocked shots and 26 dunks.

"David is a super athlete," Coach Paul Evans said. "He is playing so much better, without a great deal of effort. It's hard for him to practice in the off-season."

Navy, Richmond Post Loop Wins

WILMINGTON (AP) — Vernon Butler scored 20 points and Kylor Whitaker and David Robinson added 16 each to lead Navy to a 78-51 ECAC-South basketball victory over North Carolina-Wilmington Thursday night.

Navy, 13-2 overall and undefeated in six conference games, took the lead for good at 11-10 with 14:22 left in the opening half on a jumper by Whitaker. The Midshipmen built a 38-26 halftime lead behind 56 percent shooting from the field, while the Seahawks, 7-7 and 2-4, shot 38 percent.

The Midshipmen, who won their 10th straight, increased their lead in the second half by taking advantage of foul shooting and the Seahawks' continued cold shooting. The Seahawks shot only 31.6 percent in the second half as Navy hit eight of 10 free throws.

Navy sank 20 of 24 free throws while North Carolina-Wilmington sank one of two from the line. Navy committed only eight fouls to the Seahawks 20.

Cliff Rees added 10 points for the Midshipmen, while Whitaker added a career-high 11 rebounds.

The Seahawks were led by Brian Rowson's 16 points and Derrick Johnson's 10. Terry Shiver also grabbed nine rebounds.

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Kelvin Johnson scored 21 points and sank three of four free throws in the closing minute to lead Richmond to a 72-68 ECAC-South basketball victory over James Madison Thursday night.

Johnson's free throws came after the Dukes, who fell to 7-9 overall and 1-3 in the conference, had chipped away at a 35-25 halftime deficit and had pulled to within 68-65 with 41 seconds to play on John Newman's layup.

After Newman missed a free throw that could have pulled the Dukes to within a bucket, Johnson made the front end of a one-and-one. Following a James Madison turnover, Johnson canned two more free throws to ice the victory.

Butler, Woolfolk Capture League's Weekly Honors

Navy's Vernon Butler, a 6-7 junior forward, has been named as the ECAC-South Player of the Week, while Richmond freshman, Peter Woolfolk, was named as the Rookie of the Week.

Butler will be a part of the Midshipman crew that will visit East Carolina on Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Butler helped lead the Midshipmen to three wins last week, over Bethany College, Lafayette and ECAC-South foe William & Mary, scoring 51 points and grabbing 33 rebounds. He hit 16 of 29 shots from the floor.

Woolfolk, a 6-5 center-forward, scored 35 points and had 3 rebounds in leading Richmond to wins over George Mason and East Carolina. In the latter game, he scored a career high of 20 points.

Navy sophomore David Robinson continues to lead the conference in both scoring and rebounding with 22.9 and 10.5 averages, respectively. Carlos Yates of George Mason is second in scoring at 22.7, followed by Richmond's John Newman at 19.4.

UNC-Wilmington's Brian Rowson is second in rebounding at 9.2, followed by Butler at 9.1.

Robinson also leads the conference in field goal percentage, hitting 65.0 percent, and in blocked shots with 4.5 per game. He is ninth in free throw percentage, hitting 76.6.

East Carolina's William Grady stands sixth in the league in scoring at 17.2, followed in seventh place by Curt Vanderhorst at 17.0. Van-derhorst is tenth in free throw percentage at 75.6, while Scott Hardy is sixth in assists with 4.6 per game. Leon Bass stands third in blocked shots with 1.0 per game.

Scott Coval leads the league in free throw percentage at 92.0, while Doug Wojcik of Navy is tops in assists at 7.2 per game. Newman leads the league in steals with 2.3 per game.

Navy is the top field goal percentage shooting team at 55.0 while ECU is third at 49.4. George Mason leads the league in free throw percentage at 77.8, while ECU is eighth at 57.2.

UNC-W scored a double triumph last week in landing both the Player and Rookie of the Week.

Gwen Austin, a 6-2 senior center, was named Player of the Week for the third time this year as the Lady Seahawks took conference wins over William & Mary, George Mason and American. He scored 62 points and pulled 40 rebounds in the three wins.

Freshman Phyllis Edwards, 5-10 forward, took rookie honors with 43 points and 26 rebounds in the same three games.

Austin is the league's leading scorer and rebounder, hitting 20.0 and 12.6 respectively.

Richmond's Karen Elsner is second in scoring at 19.5, while James Madison's Besty Whitman is third at 16.5. American's Kia Cooper is second in rebounding with 9.9 per game, followed by Elsner at 9.8.

Elizabeth Bell of UNC-W leads the league in field goal percentage at 57.6, while Bobbi Pugh of George Mason is the leading free throw shooter at 92.3.

Little Opposition To Academic Rules

By RICK SCOPPE Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH — A set of academic proposals that would toughen eligibility requirements for North Carolina high school athletes is moving ever closer to implementation, state officials say.

The proposals were expected to face little or no opposition today during a public hearing — one of the final steps required to get the standards approved, state officials said.

"We've heard from about six or seven people, all but one saying they're not coming but expressing approval of the standards," said Tom Davis, a spokesman for the state Department of Public Instruction.

"One athletic director said he was opposed to the requirement of having (athletes required) to pass four subjects," Davis said Thursday. Davis said that he did not know who the athletic director was.

The proposed requirements include an increase in the number of courses an athlete must pass to be eligible for sports as well as raising the attendance rate.

Al Proctor, director of athletics and activities for the state Department of Public Instruction, was to preside over the public hearing.

"We're not expecting more than one or two" people to present arguments at the hearing, Davis said.

After the hearing, Proctor will file a report and state Superintendent Craig Phillips is then expected to make a recommendation on the new standards at the Feb. 5 meeting of the state Board of Education, Davis said.

"The board can approve it, delay it or turn it down," Davis said. Davis said he expected the board to approve the new requirements. If that happens, the standards, under the present schedule, would take effect during the spring semester of 1985-86.

Under the new requirements, high school athletes would have to pass four courses and have a 75 percent attendance rate per semester. Now, athletes must pass three courses and have a 60 percent attendance rate.

The state's high schools voted overwhelmingly in favor of the standards in a recent survey by the North Carolina High School Association. Of the 334 high schools in the state, 236 voted in favor of the standards and 19 were against them.

Williams Inks Pact

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Henry Williams, the Memphis Showboats' first draft pick this year, has joined the squad, the team has announced.

Williams, a 5-foot-6, 181-pound wide receiver from East Carolina University, led the nation in kickoff returns in 1983.

The Showboats, of the United States Football League, chose Williams in the third round of the USFL draft after trading away their first and second-round picks.

Williams, a Memphis native who played high school football at Tunica, Miss., played at Northwest Junior College at Senatobia, Miss., before transferring to East Carolina.

In other personnel actions Thursday, the Showboats cut rookie defensive back Brian O'Neil from the team at pre-season training camp in Melbourne, Fla.

Lewis Battles Nerves, Sparks Purdue

By The Associated Press
Purdue guard Troy Lewis was a nervous wreck preparing for the Indiana game — and then went out and helped to wreck the Hoosiers.

"I was nervous when I got up in the morning," the freshman said. "I've got a lot of friends on the Indiana team."

When the chips were down, however, Lewis was up — helping to bring the Boilermakers back from an eight-point deficit and a 62-52 victory over the nation's 13th-ranked college basketball team.

"The crowd (in Purdue's Mackey Arena) brought me back to my high school days — the Anderson gym is just as noisy as Mackey," said Lewis, who averaged 35.3 points a game as a senior at Anderson High School last year and shared the "Mr. Basketball" title with Delray Brooks, now a freshman at Indiana.

Lewis, a 56 per cent shooter with a 9.3 scoring average going into the game, finished with 12 points, hitting five of 10 from the field and both of his free throw attempts.

"I always have confidence I can hit," Lewis said. "That's why I'm at Purdue — to shoot the ball."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 Oregon State beat Arizona 59-55; No. 12 Louisiana Tech tripped McNeese State 88-69; No. 17 Tulsa defeated West Texas State 110-90; No. 18 Michigan stopped Michigan State 86-75; No. 19 Virginia Commonwealth beat South Alabama 71-70, and No. 20 Nevada-Las Vegas routed New Mexico State 92-70.

Top Twenty
The Boilermakers were trailing by eight points midway through the final period with team leader Steve Reid on the bench with four fouls. But Lewis then hit three straight baskets to help bring the Boilermakers back, and Reid re-entered the game to keep them there. Reid finished with 17 points.

"We took Lewis out and put Reid in to take advantage of Reid's leadership after we got ahead," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "Besides, Lewis was getting tired and wanted a rest."

"I'm proud of our team for coming back after being eight down. I think we got more intense on defense during that period. Lewis got the crowd in the game with his three straight baskets, and that made us play more intense on defense. This was a tremendous ballgame, since we won. I might not have felt so if we had lost."

Indiana Coach Bob Knight refused to talk to reporters after the game. Dean Derrah sank a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left as Oregon State held off Arizona. The Beavers never trailed after bolting to an 8-0 lead, but had to withstand a late rally that narrowed the margin to one point with 23 seconds to play.

"We didn't give up," said Arizona Coach Lute Olson. "We didn't play as well as we could have. We got great shots. We missed an awful lot of easy ones. Oregon State didn't outplay us, they outshot us."

Louisiana Tech, led by Karl Malone's 21 points and 14 rebounds, outscored McNeese State 30-9 en route to a runaway Southland Conference victory.

Louisiana Tech, dominating every phase of the game, outscored McNeese 20-9 in the last 8:44 of the first half to take a 40-27 lead at intermission. Then, after the break, Louisiana Tech went on a 10-0 spree to go up 50-27 and the Bulldogs never led by fewer than 15 points thereafter.

"They were awesome," said McNeese Coach Glenn Duhon. "I knew they were good. They're even better than I thought. They played errorless ball. They rebounded like a Top 10 team."

Steve Harris scored 30 points and dished out nine assists as Tulsa defeated West Texas State. Trailing by two points at halftime, Tulsa took a 54-53 lead at 15:58 of the second half and never trailed again.

"In the second half we played like we are capable," Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson said. "Tonight was similar to others in that at first we struggled and then eventually got into our game."

Roy Tarpley scored 17 points and Gary Grant keyed a ferocious Michigan defense with three steals as the Wolverines defeated Michigan State. Michigan led 37-28 at halftime and opened the second half with a 13-2 scoring spurt, fueled by two Grant steals, that gave the Wolverines a 50-32 lead with 16:51 to play.

Grant, a 6-foot-3 freshman, also converted a three-point play at 10:15 of the second half that boosted Michigan's lead to 66-39.

Rolando Lamb collected 25 points, 10 assists, three steals and five rebounds as Virginia Commonwealth nipped South Alabama. Lamb led three teammates in double figures — Neil Wake with 13, Micheal Brown with 12 and Mike Schlegel with 11.

Richie Adams scored 22 points and collected 14 rebounds to lead Nevada-Las Vegas over New Mexico State. The victory was the 13th straight for the Rebels since they took an 82-46 beating from defending national champion Georgetown on Dec. 8.

"We played extra well in the second half," said Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian. "We got our break going and wore them down after a while."

Elsewhere, Chris Morris scored 29 points and Chuck Person added 24 as Auburn hammered Mississippi 93-73; Reggie Miller scored a career-high 23 points to lead UCLA to an 80-69 victory over California;

Young Golfer Makes First LPGA Threat

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mina Rodriguez-Harden looked at the leader board after the first round of the $200,000 Mazda Classic golf tournament and realized she was somewhere she had never been before, among the leaders.

One stroke in front of her was leader Lauren Howe.

Howe, returning to professional golf after her second extended absence, produced a 4-under-par 68 Thursday at Deer Creek Country Club.

Rodriguez-Harden, the first Mexican to qualify for the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, was a little startled to be among of four women at 69. She said she couldn't remember ever being among the leaders in a tour event.

In fact, her best finish in her two years on the tour was 32nd in the S&H Golf Classic in St. Petersburg last year. She has won only $4,072 in her short career.

"Before I was playing with people I idolized," the 24-year-old said of her mostly ignored past. "I came out with a different attitude this year. Now I'm a part of it."

Rodriguez-Harden would have tied for the lead Thursday if not for a three-putt bogey on the par-3 14th hole. "I missed only one green all day at the fifth hole, but I chipped in from 18 feet for a birdie," she said.

She is tied with defending champion Silvia Bertolaccini of Argentina, JoAnne Carner and Shelly Hamlin. Ten more golfers were bunched at 70 over the 6,079-yard par-72 course, including veterans Jane Blalock, Sandra Palmer and Pat Bradley.

Howe was out of action for three years after sustaining a serious wrist injury in 1979. Soon after her return to the tour, she suffered an intestinal illness which forced her to cut her schedule to 13 tournaments last year.

"I'm thrilled with the 68," Howe said after her round of seven birdies and three bogeys. "I was nervous when I started, I was real shaky. But Blair Rasmussen scored a season-high 30 points and grabbed nine rebounds to power Oregon to an 81-72 victory over Arizona State; Johnny Rogers' 27 points led UC-Irvine to a 99-84 victory over Long Beach State and Timo Saarelainen scored 31 points and Brigham Young University committed just one turnover on the way to a 78-65 win over Wyoming.

Kent Lockhart came off the bench and scored 14 points to lead Texas-El Paso to a 79-45 rout of Colorado State; Tommy Davis led Minnesota with 21 points as the Gophers defeated Wisconsin 72-62; Voise Winters scored 24 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead Bradley to a 73-66 win over Southern Illinois; Derek Rucker scored 19 points as Davidson tripped South Carolina 77-61 and Willie McDuffie scored a career-high 22 points to lead Jacksonville to a come-from-behind 69-65 victory over Western Kentucky.

Watson Trails Despite Fast L.A. Open Start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Watson opened his 1985 PGA Tour season with a 67, 4-under-par on one of golf's better courses.

That's good, he said. But he's four shots off the pace after the first round of the Los Angeles Open.

That's bad. He's four shots back of Lanny Wadkins.

And that's worse. "He's playing really, really well," Watson said Thursday. "Right now he's at the top of his game. And when Lanny gets it on a roll, he can shoot numbers as low as anybody. You never want to overlook Lanny."

"He's like a cobra in a basket with the lid off."

Wadkins, who opened the PGA Tour season with a victory in the Bob Hope Classic, scored four deuces, missed only one green and didn't even come close to making a bogey as he tied the Riviera Country Club course record with a 63, a spectacular performance that could have been even better. He missed one putt from about 6 feet and lipped out four others.

"We caught Riviera on a very vulnerable day," Wadkins said. "The greens were soft, the tees were up and there was practically no wind."

Farris Leads Vikings Win

HOLLYWOOD — Kerry Farris pinned his opponent in the 128-pound weight class to put D.H. Conley ahead of Camp Lejeune 12-9, and the Vikings held on for a 45-15 victory Thursday in high school wrestling action.

The Vikings fell behind when Davis Farris lost his second match of the year in the 100-pound class.

"We got behind 9-0 after the first couple of weight classes," Conley Coach Milt Sherman said. "I was concerned about how we would look tonight because the snow and county exams kept us out of practice all week. This was the first time we were on the mats; we were not real sharp on technique, but we were trying hard."

"Camp Lejeune had been practicing during the week since they didn't have exams, so I was pleased with the final outcome."

Conley, now 13-1 on the season, travels to West Craven tonight.

100: Andy Neal (CL) d. David Farris 12-6

107: Bobby Griesmer (CL) won by forfeit

114: double forfeit

121: Jackie King (DHC) p. Jim Vasilko 1:25

167: Clifton Clemons (DHC) p. Robert Medford 3:20

197: Ricky Rice (DHC) d. Joe Fitzgerald 8-4

HVW: Gerald Harper (DHC) won by forfeit

The 1932 Chicago Bears held the combined opposition to only 44 points, setting a National Football League record.

Watson agreed. "It played about as easy as I've ever seen it," he said that ranks among the more demanding of the touring pros encounter.

The ideal conditions produced some of the lowest scores Riviera has ever yielded.

Tony Sills, who once caddied at Riviera, chipped in for an eagle-3 on the first hole and used that start as a springboard to a 65 that tied him for second with Pat Lindsey, two shots back.

Hal Sutton, who won the PGA title at Riviera two years ago, was another stroke behind at 66 and was tied with Bruce Lietzke, Bob Gilder, Gary Koch and Scott Simpson.

Jack Nicklaus scored six birdies and an eagle and was in a group tied with Watson at 4-under-par. Calvin Peete, the winner of last week's Phoenix Open, pitched in for eagle-2 on his way to a round of 68.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, however, struggled to a 78 that he called "one of the poorest rounds I've ever played."

Wadkins, one of the boldest, most aggressive players on the Tour, said he was "ready for the year when it started. I'd been grinding, beating balls, practicing, working hard. Hard work doesn't always pay off. But this time it has."

He said, however, he was taking nothing for granted.

"By no means would I want to get cocky at this point," he said.

But he noted that "I know when I'm playing well and when I'm playing bad."

"When I'm paying well, I'm sometimes able to keep it going for a while. All it does is just pump me up. I'm able to keep my concentration better. And that makes it easier to keep it going."

And Wadkins, in 10 rounds this season, has yet to go over par.

Hunt Tops Rose Matmen

Wilson Hunt won four matches by forfeit and gained a 45-25 wrestling victory over Rose High School last night.

Each team won four of the remaining matches while the other ended in a draw. Of the matches contested, Rose actually held a 25-21 edge in scoring.

The defeat dropped the Rampant record to 6-5 overall and to 4-2 in league play. The Rampants travel to Elizabeth City Northeastern tonight.

Nothing 2nd-String About The Back-Ups

HONOLULU (AP) — When Neil Lomax and James Wilder take the field for the NFC in Sunday's Pro Bowl game, they'll do it as backups — Lomax to Joe Montana and Wilder to Eric Dickerson and Walter Payton.

But there's nothing second-string about either.

While Montana was leading the San Francisco 49ers to the Super Bowl title and Dan Marino was shattering passing records for the Miami Dolphins, while Payton was taking over the National Football League's all-time rushing lead and Dickerson was shattering the single-season mark, Wilder and Lomax were having seasons almost as impressive.

But they were doing it in obscurity — Wilder with the 5-11 Tampa Bay Buccaneers; Lomax with a 9-7 St. Louis team that faded quickly from national consciousness when it lost by two points to Washington in its final game and lost a shot at the title in the four-team jumble that was the NFC East.

"I think the recognition is beginning to come. With the stats I get, people can't overlook me too much," says Wilder.

True enough. Those stats include 1,544 yards rushing and 85 receptions for another 685 yards this season and games of the kind that caused linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants to call Wilder the best running back he'd ever played against.

Lomax' stats also tell a story — a 61.6 completion percentage, 4,614 passing yards and 28 touchdown passes. The yardage was second in the NFL to Marino's and the fourth-best of all time, and the touchdown passes tied him with Montana for second-best this season behind Marino's record-busting 48.

"I wouldn't be playing if I didn't think I was as good as those guys," Lomax says of Marino and Montana.

Lomax and Wilder have several things in common besides their second-string superstar status. Both are in their fourth year and their first Pro Bowl. They were selected a few picks apart in the second round of the highly fertile 1981 draft — 16 of the 82 players here come from the class of 1981, including two-time NFL defensive player of the year Taylor and Seattle's

Kenny Easley, who won the award this season.

Wilder had the harder time this year. The Bucs got off to an 0-3 start and were never really in contention for even a wild-card playoff spot, leaving him with nothing but personal achievement to pursue.

"It was tough," he says. "When you don't have a good season as a team, it's hard to get up every week. You always have to remind yourself how hard you have to work to do your best."

Some of the notice Wilder got came under rather bizarre circumstances — in the final game of the season, when outgoing Coach John McKay, with a comfortable lead, ordered his defense to let the New York Jets score in order to give Wilder a shot at the record for combined rushing-receiving yards in a season. He didn't get it, which was all right with him.

"If they're gonna lay down to give me a record, I don't want it," he says.

As for Lomax, he feels better things are coming.

"If we'd gotten to the playoffs, I'd have gotten more attention," he says. "That's the way it goes in this league. We've got a good young team and we're coming on. I think my time is near."

Meanwhile, they're happy for at least the Pro Bowl recognition.

"It's quite a thrill the first time," says Lomax. "You're chosen by your peers. That's what counts."

College Blocking Rules To Allow Extended Arms

By The Associated Press

College football will have a new rule this fall designed to bring uniformity to run-blocking and pass-blocking. And while it may indeed benefit teams that like to run the ball, the people it will probably help the most are the officials.

In the most significant rules change — none of which should raise the ire of too many coaches — the NCAA has fully liberalized its blocking rule to permit blockers to fully extend their arms on both running and passing plays.

"This will certainly help from the standpoint that officials will be able to call penalties," said Army Coach Jim Young, whose team led the nation in rushing last fall. "It's been a real problem to figure out what's legal and what's not."

Under the old rule, blockers were not allowed to extend their arms "more than one-half of a full extension" unless they were blocking "behind the neutral zone while retreating" — i.e., pass-blocking. They may now legally block with the shoulder, hands, outer surface of the arm or any other part of the body provided the hands are in advance of the elbows, inside the frames of both the blocker's and the opponent's bodies and at or below the shoulder of the player being blocked.

"It's not that big a deal and I don't think it will make any difference," said Pat Dye of Auburn, another team that likes to run the ball. "They're just legalizing something that everyone's been doing."

There have been numerous complaints in recent years that offensive linemen were holding on almost every play. The uproar reached a peak following national champion Brigham Young's 24-17 victory over Michigan in the Holiday Bowl when BYU Coach LaVell Edwards claimed it was a misconception that passing teams do more holding than running teams. He cited run-oriented Michigan and Ohio State as two of the principal offenders. Michigan's Bo Schembechler replied that BYU, the nation's top passing team in seven of the last nine years, "should be outlawed, absolutely outlawed" for its alleged holding tactics.

"I don't think this (new rule) will help anybody (i.e., running teams)," said David M. Nelson, secretary-editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee. "We're just getting into the flow of the game the way 75 percent of the teams are playing. The American Football Coaches Association's rules committee asked that this be done."

The rules committee met this week at Point Clear, Ala., and the changes were announced Thursday at NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan.

In another key change, the committee abolished after one year the rule that gave the receiving team the ball at its 30-yard line when a kickoff carried beyond the end zone on the fly. It went back to the old rule which puts the ball at the 20 on all touchbacks.

Nelson said the blocking rule "is now the same for running plays as it is for passing plays. This was done to accommodate the way the game has been played and officiated recently. We haven't been able to separate the run- and pass-blocking rules. We now have one blocking rule instead of two. "Basically, blockers can have their arms fully extended anywhere on the field. There's no more restriction within zones and the full arm extension isn't limited to a retreat block. You no longer have to be retreating or not moving toward anybody (for full arm extension)."

Although coaches said it would be easier to teach blocking now, there was some doubt that the new rule would help running teams.

Edwards said he was "not really sure it will be as big a change as a lot of people think. The main reason is for the officials. They were pushing for it. My only concern is that holding will become even more of a problem than it is. All joking aside, that's a major problem in football and I don't know what the answer is."

Bobby Collins of Southern Methodist, another ground-oriented club, said "it might be true" that running teams will be helped "but I'm not sure how until we've been through a season with it. Maybe where we'll see the benefit is on draw plays. We got called on a number of occasions for a retreat block when we were firing out and running downfield."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, a member of the NCAA committee, said the liberalized blocking rule "has been coming for some time now. We've been concerned about the methods of teaching blocking across the country. Blockers have been using their hands more and more. We're not trying to teach anything illegal, but it's difficult to teach extending your hands behind the line of scrimmage and not extending them in a drive-type block. In essence, all this does is allow you to come off the ball with your arms extended."

"I don't foresee any more use of the hands than we're having now — and we're having a lot right now. The first thing you want to say is, 'Horror! We'll have pushing fights out on the field.' But it's not that radical a thing."

Teaff said he voted to restore the old touchback rule "on the recommendation of the AFCA. I liked the 1984 rule. I thought it was a good rule. There were approximately 1,100 more kickoff returns than the previous year in Division I, about one per game."

Four rules changes were adopted concerning player safety. An automatic first down was added to the penalty for flagrant face mask violations and for fouls out of bounds. Hurdling, previously defined as an attempt by a runner to jump with one or both feet or knees foremost over a player who is still on his feet, now will apply to all players and still carries a 15-yard penalty. Also, the exception for blocking below the waist on field goals and conversion kicks was deleted.

Other rules changes include placing the football at the beginning of tie-breakers from the 15- to the 20-yard line (this affects playoffs in Divisions I-AA, II and III), allowing any offensive player who participated in the previous play to call a timeout and changing the basic enforcement spot on violations that occur behind the neutral zone on running plays to the previous spot (line of scrimmage).

In addition, goalpost uprights must extend to at least 20 feet above the crossbar by 1987 to help officials rule on field goal tries, players no longer must report to the umpire before a scrimmage kick and quarterbacks will have an unlimited amount of time in which to get a play off if crowd noise is too loud.

Dueling Congressmen

When Congress was sworn in January 3, Indiana's 8th Congressional District still had no representative. The vote was so close that the contest must be decided by the House of Representatives. In the past, politicians occasionally settled their differences violently. In 1804, Vice President Aaron Burr killed Alexander Hamilton in a gun duel. In 1856, Senator Charles Sumner of South Carolina insulted a fellow senator. The maligned senator's nephew later beat Sumner senseless.

New Look For Theater Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peter Sellars, the avant-garde young director who once had Mozart's Don Giovanni eating a McDonald's hamburger and French fries on stage, is ready to give American theater a startling new look — and won't mind if his audiences are outraged.

The 27-year-old "boy wonder" announced his plans Thursday for the newly formed American National Theater at the Kennedy Center. Sellars, who shoots off ideas like a Fourth of July sparkler, will have a $6 million annual budget and three theaters to try them out as the company's director.

For starters, an Americanized version of Shakespeare's historical classic, "Henry IV, Part I," will open March 23 for a six-week run in the Eisenhower Theater. Sellars says it will be "quite an opening flourish."

Productions for the first full season starting in September will be announced later.

'Today' Ties For Morning Lead

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Next week, NBC's "Today" show becomes the "Tomorrow" show when it starts broadcasting live to Australia, where it will be midnight, not mid-morning. How appropriate. With the latest ratings results in, "Today" looks like the program of the future.

For the first time since Feb. 1, 1982, "Today" tied the perennial leader, ABC's "Good Morning America," in the fierce fight for news-and-information viewers in the morning, A.C. Nielsen Co. figures showed Thursday.

"That's great," said executive producer Steve Friedman. "I've been waiting three years for this day."

The measured week, Jan. 14-18, also marked Phyllis George's debut as co-anchor of the "CBS Morning News." The revamped CBS broadcast also improved its rating slightly over the week before.

But Mike Eisenberg, director of audience measurement for CBS, said Miss George's impact wasn't clear. "It's too early," he said. "I'm thrilled that (the CBS) numbers are up, but so are NBC's... If anything, ABC is down competitively."

All three broadcasts increased audiences from the previous week, but "Today," with co-hosts Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley, had the biggest gains.

"Today" and "Good Morning America" each had a 5.3 rating and a 22 share. The "CBS Morning News," which introduced Miss George, a new set and more specialized segments Jan. 14, had a 3.9 rating and a 16 share.

A rating point equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes. A share measures the percentage of sets in use tuned to a particular broadcast.

If "Today" maintains its lofty ratings for the rest of the first quarter, advertising revenues would shoot up by July, Friedman said.

"Today" has been steadily gaining on "Good Morning America" since Ms. Pauley returned from maternity leave a year ago. "She surprised us and returned as a different persona," said CBS executive Van Gordon Sauter.

Motherhood had mellowed her, noted Gumbel. She was relaxed and eager to do the job. "The biggest change is the performance of Jane," he said.

It hasn't hurt that NBC's prime-time fortunes have improved, mostly at the expense of ABC's. That keeps some TV dials on NBC overnight, and it affords "Today" better promotional exposure.

"Where would you rather be promoted? In 'The Cosby Show,' or the No. 72nd show?" said Gumbel.

Friedman says that "Today" could not have made such big strides without NBC's improvement. "Sunday through Thursday night, NBC is the No. 1 network," he said.

Gumbel and Friedman rejected the notion that hiring media consultant Frank Magid had contributed to the turnaround. "His first research report was last June, and we began to take off in February and March," Friedman said. "Frank just told us what we already knew."

Which was that "Good Morning America" was predominantly David Hartman's show (co-host Joan Lunden is clearly a subordinate), so NBC pushed hard the duo of Gumbel and Ms. Pauley. "We had to knock them out with our one-two punch," Friedman said.

On the air, "Today" has emphasized its friendly family. CBS, for one, has noticed. Hiring Miss George brought mom and apple pie to its morning.

"Don't write any obituaries for Phyllis George based on one week," said Friedman. "The only important thing is how you do over the long haul."

And with ratings so fickle, "Today" could drop back to second next week. But two things are now clear: "Today" has had a year-long trend upward in the United States, and it will be one (and only) in Australia starting Monday.

"It's a good cooperative deal," said Friedman. "They need us, and we need them. We'll share footage, such as on fires and (yachting's) America's Cup. I guess they call it the Australian Cup now."

Letterman Celebrates 3rd Season

NEW YORK (AP) — With three years of "Stupid Pet Tricks" behind him, David Letterman says he regrets bringing on more celebrities and fewer "civilians" to entertain a loyal audience willing to lose sleep for the chance to be amused and sometimes confused by his antics.

The 37-year-old comedian celebrates the third anniversary of NBC-TV's "Late Night with David Letterman" on Saturday with a 90-minute special featuring remotes from two New York City hospitals to document where the first "Late Night" third anniversary baby would be born.

Larry "Bud" Melman provides the prizes for the lucky parents and baby, more fun than an adult — or infant — human ought to have.

Letterman noted there has been a dropoff in the number of "remote segments" — filmed outings to New York City locations — and the "man-in-the-street" interviews that provided spontaneous comedy.

"That was something in the beginning... We were in every nook and cranny of New York City," he said in a news conference after taping Thursday. "There has been a 'respite' from remotes, he noted, despite the fact they are "exciting and a little adventurous forays."

"I feel what we started out to do was a great idea," Letterman said. "But you have to face realities."

He said the initial concept was to have fewer of the regular talk-show guests who push movies and books and more of the antic comedy such as "Stupid Pet Tricks," segments in which pet owners show off what they've taught their cats, dogs or birds. But the show has had more of the former in recent months.

"It's great to have 'civilians' on the show, but there may not be that many civilians around," Letterman said.

David Letterman

Asked whether his creative well has run dry, he flashed a grin and said that occurred "long ago."

"The first two years were easier than the third year," he said. "I hope that ratio doesn't drop off."

Letterman said he has no plans for prime time and prefers the 12:30 a.m. time slot, which has been a ratings boon for NBC in the final quarter of 1984, according to the network.

Letterman, who has a five-year contract to do the "Late Night" show, wants to fulfill that and dismisses repeated speculation that he might succeed "Tonight" show host Johnny Carson.

"I've never had any discussions with anyone at NBC about replacing Johnny," he said, adding he that he fears the inevitable comparisons that would be made about whoever replaces Carson.

Sharon, Time Claim Victory In Split Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Both sides claimed victory after the jury in Ariel Sharon's $50 million libel suit against Time Inc. said the magazine acted "negligently and carelessly" but ruled against the former Israeli defense minister on the crucial issue of actual malice.

The verdict Thursday meant that even though the panel had earlier found the Time article about Sharon's alleged role in the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians to be false and defamatory, it decided the piece did not libel Sharon.

"We find that certain Time employees, particularly correspondent David Halevy, acted negligently and carelessly in reporting and verifying the information which ultimately found its way into the published paragraph of interest in this case," the jury said in an unusual statement released after the verdict was announced.

Halevy was Time's Jerusalem correspondent.

"He (Halevy) was careless, and we found him to be careless, but we didn't think he was actually out to hurt Sharon with malice," juror Patricia DeLoatch, 27, said after the verdict.

Another juror, Lydia Burdick, 35, said, "The bottom line was that he believed what he had written was true, which meant he did not act with actual malice."

The verdict gave both sides an opportunity to claim victory.

"There's no question we won," Ray Cave, Time's managing editor, said after the ruling ended a 10-week trial. "You can only have one verdict in a legal case — either you win it or you lose it."

"We came in order to prove that Time magazine lied and we managed to prove that they lied," said Sharon, now Israel's minister of industry and commerce.

The jury decided a disputed paragraph published by Time on Feb. 21, 1983, was defamatory and false, but did not show evidence of "actual malice" — that Time published the paragraph knowing it was false, or with "reckless disregard" for whether it was true or false.

Sharon claimed the Time cover story libeled him by saying he reportedly had "discussed" revenge for the assassination of Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel — head of the Phalangists — one day before the Christian militiamen massacred hundreds of Palestinians at two refugee camps in Israeli-occupied West Beirut.

During the trial, which began Nov. 13, Sharon's lawyers performed a courtroom dissection of the magazine story and in effect placed the entire Time "machine," as they called it, on trial.

At issue in the case were the confidential sources of an internal memo from Halevy on Dec. 6, 1982, reporting that Sharon had given the Phalangists "the feeling" he understood their need for vengeance, and how the phrase was turned into a story reporting "Time has learned" Sharon "reportedly discussed" revenge.

Halevy, 43, a native Israeli, had worked for Time since 1969, earning a reputation for good sources in the country's military intelligence community. His inside connections helped Time break stories on the rescue of the Israeli hostages at Entebbe, Uganda, and the aborted rescue of U.S. hostages in Iran.

Sharon's lawyers noted, however, that Halevy had been placed on one year's probation when Time was forced to retract part of a 1979 story that said then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin was too ill to function in office.

At that time, Richard Duncan, Time's chief of correspondents, told Halevy he wanted "printed, reliable information" in the future and not just "informed speculation."

When an Israeli inquiry commission into the Palestinian massacre criticized Sharon, Time's Jerusalem bureau chief, Harry Kelly, used Halevy's memo as background when he filed a story on it.

Kelly and Halevy decided the commission's criticism of Sharon was not backed up with much evidence and the rest of the information must be in Appendix B, a classified section of the report.

Although Halevy's sources did not specifically tell him the information was in Appendix B, he "regarded it as confirmed" through his analysis of what he did learn. Kelly wrote that "at least part of the commission's case against Sharon is between the lines, presumably in the secret portion."

Cave later said he had "total faith" in Halevy's sources "because they are so highly placed."

IRS May Yield To Flood Of Complaints And Ease New Record-Keeping Rules

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers, businesses and moonlighters who have been flooding the mail with complaints about tough new Internal Revenue Service record-keeping requirements are about to get some relief.

The regulations, which went into effect Jan. 1, require that "adequate contemporaneous records" be kept to substantiate claims for business deductions for motor vehicles, home computers, entertainment equipment and the like. No deduction will be allowed without detailed logs; claiming the writeoff without the records can result in a 5 percent penalty for underpayment and conceivably a 50 percent penalty for fraud.

Once farmers and business executives became aware of the rules, members of Congress began demanding a change. Dozens of bills have been introduced to repeal the rule; one repeal bill has the support of a majority of the Senate Finance Committee.

"We are going to be making some changes on that ... in the near future," Mimi Feller, deputy assistant secretary of the treasury, told a tax seminar Thursday. "It should be within the next couple weeks."

She noted the issue was raised by several senators Wednesday when James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff, went before the Senate Finance Committee in his bid to be confirmed as secretary of the treasury. "He noted a letter from some poor guy who takes his wife to dinner in his pickup truck" and fears he will have to keep records of that mileage, Ms. Feller recalled.

The Treasury Department has not decided what changes to make in the rules, she said. However, she added, one option being considered would simply allow a person to declare that a minimum share of mileage on a vehicle — perhaps 10 percent — was for personal use without having to keep detailed logs. A deduction could then be claimed for the 90 percent business use.

The regulation was imposed by the Internal Revenue Service after Congress last year ordered a crackdown on taxpayers who disguise personal expenses as tax-deductible business expenses. Before the new rules went into effect, a taxpayer was not required to keep a detailed log of how equipment was used, although substantiation was required.

Under the new rules, records must be kept "at or near the time the ... property is actually used." A single use, such as a round trip in a car, may be accounted for by a single entry, the rules say, but they do not say, for example, whether every stop a farmer makes during the day must be logged separately or whether that a full day constitutes a single use.

In the case of motor vehicles, whose total yearly use can be determined by checking the odometer, only business mileage — not personal use — must be logged. But in the case of a home computer, for example, a taxpayer probably would have to keep records of every hour of use, business and personal.

Most of the congressional complaints have been in response to outcries of farmers. But some of the nation's largest businesses, including telephone companies, also have called for changes in the regulation. They insist that if a company's vehicles are used 100 percent of the time for business, there should be no logging requirement.

A typical complaint was filed with the IRS by the Associated General Contractors of America. The group wrote: "Construction contractors are outraged that they now have to maintain individual logs for exclusively business-use vehicles, the private use of which would cause the immediate dismissal of any employee who would even attempt to use such vehicles for personal use."

Reagan Says Iran Helping Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, pushing for renewed CIA backing of Nicaraguan rebels in the face of congressional opposition, is raising the specter that Iran may funnel arms or terrorists into leftist-ruled Nicaragua.

President Reagan brought up the subject of Iranian aid Thursday, telling a group of legislators from Western Hemisphere democracies: "A new danger we see in Central America is the support being given to the Sandinistas by Col. Khadafy's Libya, the PLO and most recently, the Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran."

Administration officials had previously linked Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy and the Palestine Liberation Organization to Nicaragua, but Reagan's statement was the first suggestion that Iran had joined the radical forces assisting the country's Marxist-led Sandinista regime.

Reagan gave no details, and White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "I don't think I want to go beyond what the president said, at the moment."

A U.S. official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified, said the current Nicaraguan visit of Iranian Prime Minister Mir Hossein Mousavi had created concerns about a possible arms deal and a possible oil deal between the two countries.

"Our third and most serious concern has to do with terrorism," the official said. "Western Hemisphere terrorism has so far not been of the Iranian suicide-bombing style."

Speakes said Reagan's remarks about Iran were based on "other factors" in addition to Hossein Mousavi's visit, but declined to say what the factors were.

Radio Havana, in a broadcast monitored in Miami, said Hossein Mousavi went to Nicaragua after conferring with Cuban President Fidel Castro in Havana about "problems of the area." The broadcast said Hossein Mousavi would wind up his visit today.

Although Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the administration is seeking a new way to put pressure on Nicaragua, Speakes said the president would continue to speak out for support of the rebels.

Pamlico Plantation

Ever notice how wildlife picks the best places to live - the quiet places with lots of trees and clear water. We like those places, too, so we made a deal with some of the local inhabitants on a secluded cove of Broad Creek along the Pamlico River. If they'd share their home with us, we'd keep it clean and beautiful and add a few extras for people.

Extra's like a waterfront clubhouse and pool, tennis courts and trails for biking and jogging. We added a security guard and a marina. We built cedar-clad townhomes and sculpted homesites in the woodlands. And still, the ducks swim and deer roam. They approve. You will, too.

Martin To Seek Bipartisan Backing For Tax Proposals

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Most major tax bills are usually held for consideration toward the end of legislative sessions, but Gov. Jim Martin doesn't plan to waste any time when the 1985 General Assembly meets next month.

"It's always been presented right at the end when there's very little time left to maneuver," Martin said at his weekly news conference Thursday. "This time, we're going to have a little more time for discussion of that and I hope ... gather a majority around some consensus as to how it's going to be done."

Martin said he would ask Democrats and Republicans to introduce his tax-cut plans shortly after the Legislature convenes Feb. 5, but wouldn't say who he is recruiting for the task.

Important tax legislation has traditionally been delayed until the latter part of the legislative session, when revenue collection estimates are updated and the budget is nearing completion.

Martin said that's one reason repeated attempts to repeal the intangibles and inventory taxes have failed, despite widespread support.

His proposals would eliminate the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicine on Jan. 1, 1986, while the tax on intangible assets such as savings, stocks and bonds would be repealed on July 1, 1986. The tax on business inventories would be phased out between July 1, 1986, and July 1, 1988. The state would reimburse county and city governments that receive most of the intangibles and inventory tax revenues.

Martin said he would keep a close eye on the bills' progress through the Legislature and "take my share of the heat," but said he would let lawmakers decide how state money is distributed to city and county governments to replace lost revenues.

The cuts would cost the state about $460 million, Martin estimates. Some legislative leaders say the cost could exceed $600 million.

Martin said he opposed appointing a commission to try to craft a widely acceptable tax package, as former Gov. Jim Hunt often did when facing controversial and complex issues. During a town meeting in High Point Wednesday, former state Rep. Tom Gilmore, an unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidate last year, urged Martin to appoint a commission.

"I want us to move forward with these tax proposals," said Martin. "I don't want us to miss this opportunity. I'm not going to fall for some device that will say we're not going to do anything until we have another committee. Somebody else may fall for that, but I won't."

Patrol Changes Leaders

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed Lt. Col. Jack F. Cardwell as commander of the North Carolina Highway Patrol and Capt. O.R. McKinney as an executive officer of the patrol, officials announced Thursday.

Both are scheduled to be sworn in Friday at 2 p.m. in the Old House Chambers of the Capitol. Secretary of State Thad Eure will administer the oaths.

Cardwell, 55, has served as the patrol's executive officer since 1979. He joined the patrol in 1951 and is being promoted to the rank of full colonel. Cardwell, a native of Ellerbe, succeeds retiring Commander David L. Matthews.

Since 1972, McKinney has served as commander of Troop D, headquartered in Greensboro. The 60-year-old McKinney, who succeeds Col. Cardwell, is being promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Col. JACK CARDWELL

As executive officer, McKinney, past president of the North Carolina Police Executives Association, will coordinate the staff at patrol headquarters and perform routine administrative duties for the commander. He will serve as acting commander in the absence of Col. Cardwell and will be the patrol's chief liaison with state and federal agencies and with the Legislature.

Claims Mounting For Cold Damage

By The Associated Press

Damage figures still pouring in after this week's harsh cold snap could be comparable to that of Hurricane Diana in claims from homes and businesses and in dollar loss, insurance adjusters say.

"Asheville and Boone are still frozen," said Tom Crozier, commercial claims manager for the Charlotte office of Aetna Life and Casualty Co. "That's where we expect most of the claims."

Crozier said because some pipes haven't thawed, it's hard to assess the total damage.

"With the hurricane and the tornado, within a couple of days, you could have been 80 percent confident of your total losses," he said.

Crozier said he had sent two Charlotte representatives to Boone to help adjusters handle claims there.

Damages from across the state so far have ranged from $300 to $50,000, say insurance adjusters, and many more claims could be filed during the next two weeks.

The claims, mostly for repairs to plumbing, walls and flooring damaged by burst water pipes, are creating a backlog of work for plumbers, drywall repairers and carpet and flooring installers.

Art Ivey of Allstate Insurance Co. said it's still a little early to tell, but he expects the company's North Carolina freeze-related claims to reach 1,200 by the end of the next week, representing between 1 percent and 1.5 percent of Allstate's total accounts in the state. The firm already has received 300 claims, he said.

Ivey said damages assessed so far ranged from $300 to $3,000 with a typical loss of about $750. The average after Hurricane Diana last September was $1,000, he said.

T.M. Mayfield Jr., vice president of T.M. Mayfield and Co. in Charlotte, independent adjusters with 30 employees in six North Carolina locations, said his offices are handling three to four times the normal daily load of 15 to 20 claims.

"Our claims have ranged from $1,000 to $50,000," Mayfield said. "It's comparable to Christmas a year ago" when temperatures dipped to near zero. Mayfield said the estimate of $50,000 was to cover losses when a sprinkler system burst in a hospital in Sylva west of Asheville, pouring water on computers and other office equipment.

Changes Proposed For Code

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Answering complaints by federal prosecutors that pornography is overflowing in North Carolina, a legislative panel has suggested the state's criminal code be toughened against obscenity.

"North Carolina is No. 1 per capita in adult bookstores and X-rated theaters," assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Showers told the Criminal Code Revision Committee Thursday. "The Postal Service says it's one of the three in the country in availability of child pornography per capita."

Recommendations approved Thursday are part of a major legislative package proposed by Rep. Daniel T. Blue, D-Wake, that also would rewrite criminal laws pertaining to perjury, robbery, murder, cruelty to animals and gambling.

Blue's committee is charged with recommending changes in the criminal code to the Legislature, which convenes Feb. 5.

The proposals will be reviewed by another legislative committee before they are submitted to the General Assembly.

The recommendations call for cracking down on child abusers, adult bookstores and X-rated movie theaters. In addition, a controversial section of the law requiring judges to declare material obscene in pre-trial court hearings before dealers can be prosecuted would be eliminated.

New Speaker

TOKYO (AP) — Lawmakers of the lower house of Parliament elected former Justice Minister Michita Sakata as the chamber's 64th speaker.

Sakata, 68, a veteran lawmaker from the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, succeeds Kenji Fukunaga, 74, who resigned his post last week due to poor health.

Sakata has represented a district in southwestern Japan for 16 terms. He has served in three Cabinet posts and also was director general of the Defense Agency.

Firms Dispute Nader Report

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Ralph Nader report listing nine North Carolina plants among 249 nationwide it says didn't tell workers their jobs posed a high risk of cancer and other diseases is outdated, one company official said.

"I see a list 14 years old and I begin to wonder what kind of idiot brought this thing out," Kenn Vitek, president of Scandura, a Charlotte-based manufacturer of conveyor belts, said Thursday.

Nader's Public Citizen Health Research Group, which accused the Reagan administration of withholding the list to protect employers from lawsuits, on Wednesday listed the plants. Three of the nine in North Carolina spoke to The Associated Press, four apparently do not exist as listed and two did not return telephone calls.

"My company stopped using asbestos in 1971," Vitek said. "You're talking to me, you're talking to a dead duck. You're talking to history."

Nader's group said Scandura had employees who weren't notified of the risk of lung cancer they faced because they worked with asbestos. But Vitek said when he took over the company in 1971, the plant quit using asbestos and even stopped making brake linings because he foresaw possible health problems with the fire-resistant fiber.

The health research group obtained the list from the federal government under the Freedom of Information Act. The National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health had listed the names of 250,000 workers after studying employee medical records beginning in 1972.

The Nader list said the Hitchcock Corp. of Murphy had workers who were not told that they faced an increased risk of respiratory disease from talc mining. But company president Ben Warner said the firm, now called Warner Corp., has conducted dust tests in the mines and medical tests on employees for 25 years.

"Our workers are well aware of what's going on," he said. "They have to have a clean bill of health to work here."

He said the mine was inspected regularly by state and federal mine officials, who make sure dust-control procedures are working.

Warner said although some types of talc can contain asbestos, the kind his plant uses does not.

"People like Nader just include everybody," he said. "It's guilt by association."

Also on the list was a Marshville plant of Raybestos-Manhattan, now called Raymark Corp. Spokesman Wade Cloyd said in an interview from company headquarters in Trumbull, Conn., that workers are "routinely notified about potentially hazardous substances in the workplace."

Workers at the Marshville plant, which makes asbestos yarns for clutch plates and other friction surfaces, are protected from asbestos by vacuum machines and respirators, he said. In addition, employees who work near dust have annual X-rays, he said.

The Nader group also listed "Johns Manville" of Marshville, which is now part of Raymark.

H.K. Porter Co. plants in Charlotte and Davidson was listed for asbestos and lung cancer risks, but Charles Jeffress, assistant commissioner of the state Department of Labor, said there was no record of Porter plants in the state.
