Discovery Returns After Secret Mission

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Except for minor damage to heat-protection tiles, NASA said today Discovery returned in excellent shape from America's first military manned space trip, a secret mission that successfully deployed a giant spy satellite with a once-troubled booster.

Because of the success of the rocket stage, three more shuttle flights using the same booster can proceed as scheduled this year, space officials said. Had the rocket failed again, as it did on its only other shuttle assignment two years ago, those shots would have been in jeopardy.

The mysterious mission ended Sunday afternoon with a perfect landing just three miles from the launch pad where the flight began Thursday.

Left behind in orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, south of the Soviet Union, was a $300 million satellite that sources say is capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on selected military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

NASA reported that only about a dozen tiles were damaged on Discovery, less than on most flights.

"There were no significant orbiter systems problems during the flight," a statement said.

The five astronauts, all military officers, flew back to their training base in Houston Sunday night for debriefing sessions. In keeping with the secrecy imposed by the Air Force on much of the mission, they did not make the usual public departure statements.

But as they arrived in Houston, reporters overheard one of the crew, Air Force Maj. Gary Payton, ask some mission control officials, "Why did you bring us home so early?"

Replied one of the officials, "We were really worried."

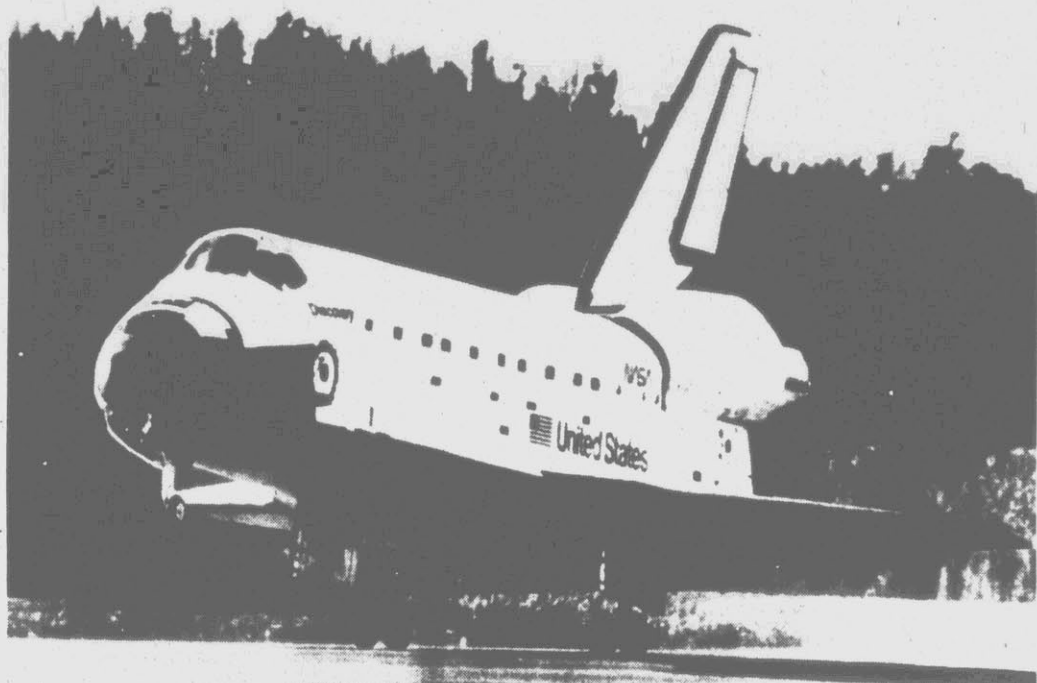

The commander, Navy Capt. Thomas K. Mattingly, was overheard to say: "It was a long two years, but it was worth it. It all went super." The two years apparently referred to the long training period.

Sources reported Discovery was ordered to bring the ship home early because the weather forecast called for deteriorating conditions here today. The weather Sunday was sunny. But today the skies were cloudy, with a possibility of rain and high winds in the afternoon.

Mattingly is hanging up his flight suit after three space missions. He is leaving NASA to become space program director with the Naval Electronic Systems Command. The other crew members are Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force majors Ellison Onizuka and Payton.

Throughout the flight, the astronauts' voices were not heard on the space-to-ground circuit normally opened for the news media. Their transmissions from space were encoded to prevent anyone from listening in.

New Middle School Off To Good Start

AYDEN — Students attended classes in the new Ayden Middle School for the first time this morning and school officials said things were going well.

"I wouldn't say things are perfect," Ayden Principal Gaston Monk said, "but it's pretty close to it. I've been real, real pleased."

Monk, who said about 430 students began classes in the new school this morning, reported "there were just a few minor problems. The heat in certain sections" wasn't operating properly, "but we got that straightened out." And Monk said "there were an abundance of parent volunteers here today to help get the kids to their classes. The ones that would have gotten lost had plenty of help."

The old Ayden Middle facility, located on S. Lee Street, was built in 1929. The new replacement just off N.C. 11, which houses children in grades 5-8, cost $2.6 million.

"There's really no comparison" between the old and new schools Monk said. "It's like going from a Model T Ford to a Cadillac." And "there's a lot of enthusiasm among the children, parents, teachers. I think the building will be an incentive to the children to do better work."

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

PLEASE CALL

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Evans, owners and operators of Evans Upholstery Shop on N.C. 43 south of Greenville, have asked Hotline to appeal to everyone having scheduled work with them for the next two months or so to please call. Their shop burned Saturday and all their records were destroyed. Their phone number is 756-1802.

TIME & TEMP CONTINUATION?

I appreciated the recent Hotline item about why Pepsi is no longer sponsoring the time and temperature phone service here. Probably none of us ever let the Pepsi Company know how much we appreciated it when we had it. Couldn't the phone company or some other business or group of businesses in the Greenville area take over the service? D.B.

Dick Flye, area manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, said the phone company is not willing to provide the service itself and will no longer rent the equipment as it did to Pepsi. He said he will share information with any business or group of businesses that would like to discuss buying the equipment to provide the service and having the phone company run access lines to it. He offered no estimates of costs.

Forecast

Cloudy with 40 percent chance of snow tonight. Lows in upper 20s. Partly cloudy Tuesday with highs in lower 40s.

Looking Ahead

Fair Wednesday and Thursday. Highs both days in 40s. Lows each night in 20s. Increasing cloudiness Friday. Highs 40s, 50s and lows in 20s and 30s.

Light Dusting

A light layer of snow lingered in some Pitt County locations this morning following a pre-dawn dusting that left fields and forests pretty as a postcard.

Although sleet pelted the Greenville area Sunday night before turning into rain, area roads were not hazardous and city and county schools opened on schedule today.

According to information provided by the Greenville Utilities Water Plant, temperatures in the past 24 hours ranged from a high of 50 degrees to a low of 15 degrees recorded at 4 a.m. Sunday. At midnight Sunday, the temperature was 36 degrees, falling to 31 degrees at 8 this morning.

The river level was measured at a steady 3.4 feet above sea level.

CT&T Parent Supports CCSP Research Work

RALEIGH — United Telecommunications of Kansas City, Mo., the parent company of Tarboro-based Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., has contributed a $50,000 annual membership fee in support of the Cooperative Research Center for Communications and Signal Processing (CCSP) at N.C. State University.

The center's research activities are focused in the high technology areas of communications and signal processing oriented to the needs of its industrial sponsors.

"The Center is renowned in our industry for its research in telecommunications," and in reviewing the center's area of research, "we found its programs in computer networks, speech processing, and video compression to be very synergistic to United Telecom's business," UT Executive Vice President Dr. John C. Hancock said.

"Our participation in the center not only will enhance our internal technical strength in the developing technologies but will allow us to draw upon and learn from the expertise of the university."

The NCSU research center was established in 1982 by a National Science Foundation grant. United Telecom became the center's 13th industrial member.

Other members are Carolina Power and Light Co., Digital Equipment Corp., Exxon, General Electric Co. International Business Machines, ITT Telecommunications Corp., GTE Corp., Northern Telecom, Rockwell International, Western Union, Westinghouse Electric Corp., and M/A-Com Development Corp.

Throng Greet Pope

By VICTOR SIMPSON

Associated Press Writer
MERIDA, Venezuela (AP) — Pope John Paul II, stressing discipline and fidelity to church teaching on his tour of South America, arrived in this Andean mountain town today after an overnight stop in the oil center of Maracaibo.

In anticipation of the pope's arrival, hundreds of people streamed into Merida, a town of 100,000 in the Andes highlands. Many arrived late Sunday and camped by the steep, red-carpeted altar set up for a Mass to be celebrated by the pontiff this morning.

The Vatican describes Merida, the home of the University of the Andes, as one of the most religious areas in Venezuela. It has been the seat of a bishop since 1778.

John Paul II also planned to attend a youth gathering tonight at a stadium in Caracas, the Venezuelan capital, and to meet with members of the Latin American Ecclesiastical Conference, which includes archbishops Arturo Rivera y Damas of San Salvador, El Salvador, and Miguel Obando y Bravo of Managua, Nicaragua. The pontiff welcomed them during a Mass celebrated Sunday night.

John Paul has offered to mediate the Central American conflicts, and Obando y Bravo has held frequent talks with him about the tense church-state relations in Nicaragua and the four priests in the leftist government. The four face suspension for refusing to resign their posts.

More than 1 million people turned out for papal Masses on Sunday in Caracas and on a muggy evening in Maracaibo, whose offshore oil production has brought Venezuela one of the highest standards of living in South America.

Since arriving in this nation of 16 million people on Saturday to start a 12-day, four-nation tour, the pontiff has restated traditional teaching on family issues and told the country's Roman Catholic bishops to discipline theologians who deviate from church doctrine.

In a Mass on the theme of the family, celebrated near a poor

Caracas neighborhood, the pope condemned contraception, abortion, euthanasia and divorce.

He said the "plague of divorce" ruins families and told the huge throng: "Remember, it is never legal to end a human life with abortion or euthanasia."

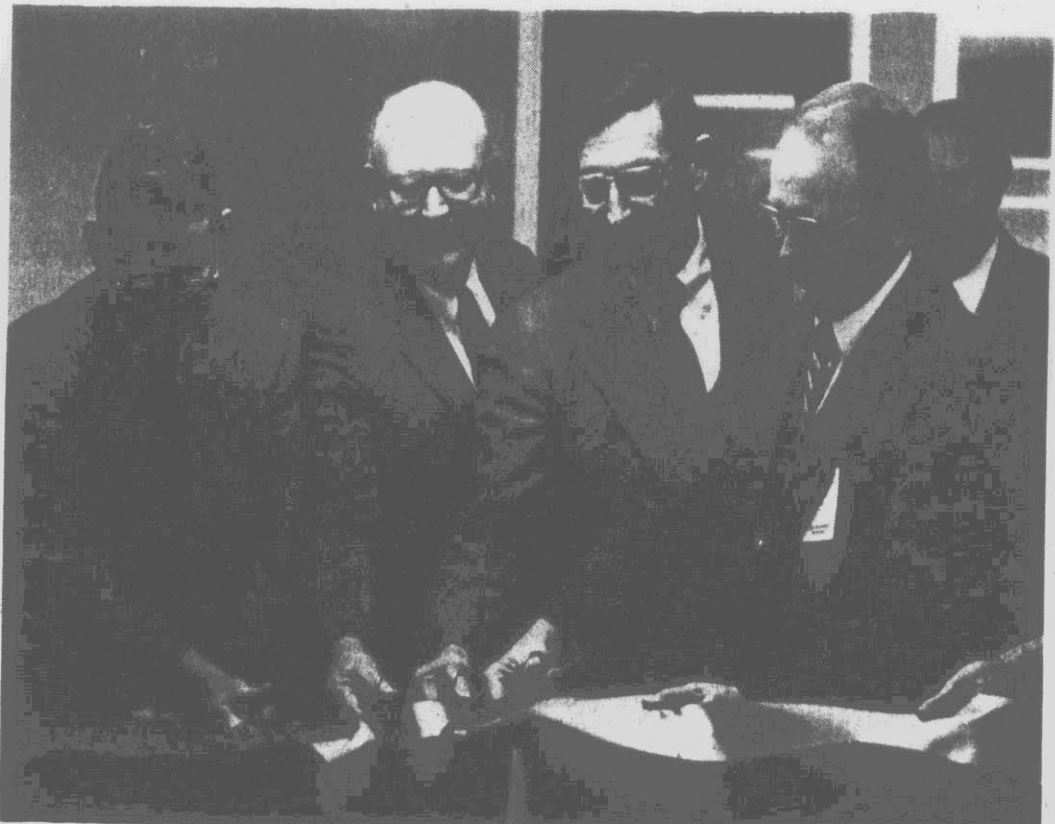

In Maracaibo, John Paul, the first pope ever to visit Venezuela, stressed the importance of Catholic education.

On the eve of his departure from the Vatican, the pontiff announced that an extraordinary meeting of the world's bishops would be held in Rome in November to examine the changes in the church in the 20 years since the Second Vatican Council.

John Paul gave an insight into his thinking on Sunday when, responding to the greeting of a rabbi at an ecumenical meeting in Caracas, he said, "Doctrine is not just on paper, but is an expression of faith, an inspiration of the spirit, a law to follow."

The pope, in a speech to bishops on

New PCMH Facilities Open

An open house and ribbon-cutting were held for the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department and Trauma Center Sunday.

Jack Richardson, hospital president, welcomed those attending and the Rev. Lewis Lint, hospital chaplain, gave the invocation. Remarks were made by Charles P.

Gaskins, chairman of the hospital building committee; J. Reid Hooper, chairman of the hospital board of trustees; Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine; Dr. Joseph E. Williamson, associate chairman of the Department of Emergency Medicine, and Dr. John D. Rose, chief of the medical staff-elect.

Today was moving day for the department. Nettie Evans, head nurse for emergency, said this morning that everything was going smoothly considering the department was moving and serving more patients than usual at the same time. She said all the patients were transferred to the new quarters by 8:30 a.m. and that equipment and supplies would be moved the remainder of the day.

Times Blames Bhopal Leak On Multiple Irregularities

NEW YORK (AP) — Inoperable safety systems, undertrained workers and inadequate warning sirens were among violations that led to the deaths of more than 2,000 people from a gas leak at Union Carbide Corp.'s plant in Bhopal, India. The New York Times reported today.

The Times said a seven-week investigation of the deadly Dec. 3 leak of methyl isocyanate gas revealed at least 10 procedural violations by Union Carbide and its Indian-run subsidiary.

Among the irregularities reported by The Times were:

—Employees who discovered a methyl isocyanate leak reported it to a supervisor, who was quoted by one worker as saying he would deal with it after his tea break. The supervisor said he was informed only of a water leak.

—In violation of plant procedures, a refrigeration unit designed to keep the chemical cool and inhibit reactions was shut down by managers several months before the accident, employees said.

—There were no effective public warnings of the disaster. The alarm used the night of the accident was similar or identical to alarms sounded as many as 20 times a week for practice drills and other non-urgent activities.

—Training levels and experience requirements for plant workers were cut back, in part for budgetary reasons.

—One of the three safety systems at the plant had been inoperable for several days and a second was taken out of service for maintenance several weeks earlier.

Union Carbide told The Times it would be several weeks before its team of investigators finished their inquiry into the accident.

"Anyone who attempts to state what caused the accident would be only speculating unless he has more facts than we have and has done more analysis, tests and experiments than we have," the company said in a statement.

The newspaper cited company documents and interviews with present and former Union Carbide employees and chemical experts in its report. It said the company declined to make top executives or scientific experts available, but released previously unpublicized documents in response to questions.

Sorrow But No Remorse For Goetz, Lawyer Says

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for Bernhard Goetz says his client feels a great deal of sorrow but no remorse over the four subway shootings which led to weapons possession charges against him.

"The word remorse ... would imply that it was his fault," the attorney, Joseph Kelner, said Sunday. "The men who approached him, surrounded him and demanded money, brought this on themselves."

Kelner said a grand jury's decision last week not to indict Goetz for attempted murder charges does not mean that others should follow his example. He said Goetz was in "a special situation."

New York Mayor Edward Koch, who appeared with Kelner on the CBS News program "Face the Nation," reiterated his support for the grand jury decision and said he deplored "vigilantism."

Goetz, who is white, allegedly shot four young black men on Dec. 22 after they approached him and asked for money. One of the men, 19-year-old Darryl Cabey, remains hospitalized in a coma. The other three have been released.

"The question will always be on the individual case and a grand jury will decide whether what you did was a normal reaction involving self-defense or an over-reaction involving a crime on your part," Koch said.

Kelner said Goetz, 37, will plead innocent when he is arraigned sometime next week on firearms charges.

"I'm not going to forecast what is going to happen. But in my own opinion there will be no plea bargain," the lawyer added.

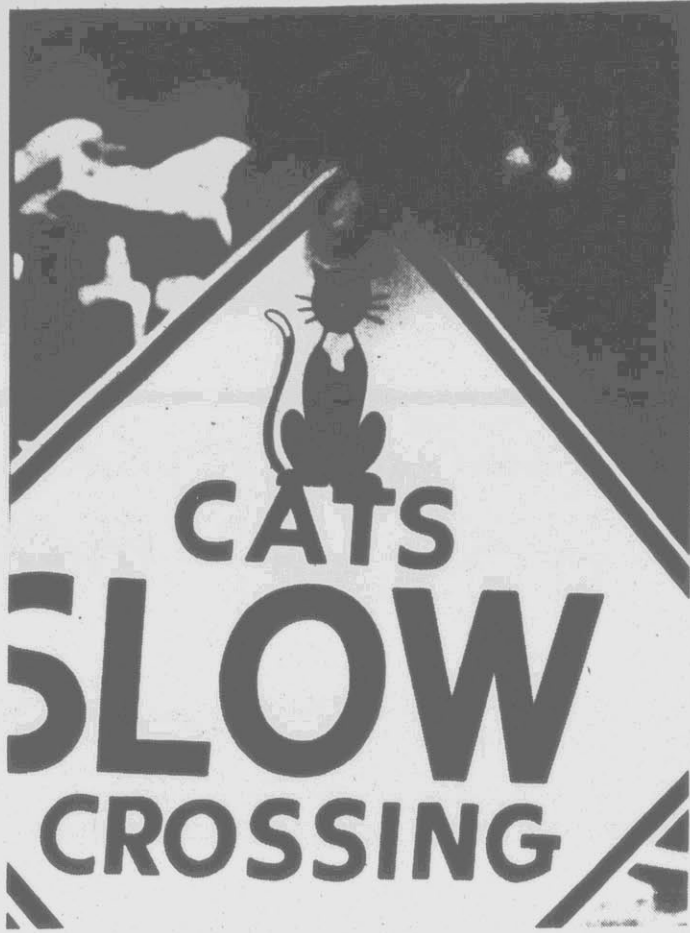

The Rev. Al Sharpton, a black activist, said he and other black and minority leaders planned to ask U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani today to prosecute Goetz under civil rights law.

"We're going to the U.S. attorney's office to demand a meeting with either him or one of his assistants and we won't leave until we get it," Sharpton said at a news conference in front of Goetz' West Side apartment building.

He said they also would ask Giuliani to investigate whether racial prejudice against the four black youths may have tainted the grand jury's decision.

In Boston, meanwhile, the board of trustees of the Unitarian Universalist Association of congregations voted 22-0, with three abstentions, to condemn what it called Goetz's widespread glorification by the news media.

"This public support of the taking of the law into his own hands by an individual undercuts our entire system of law and order and the responsible maintenance of public order," the trustees said in a statement issued early today.

Polish Boy Stable After Heart Surgery

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Three days after life-saving heart surgery, the 6-year-old son of a former Polish Solidarity activist remains in critical but stable condition today, authorities said.

Piotr Sternik on Friday underwent a seven-hour operation paid for by more than 1,000 donations from across the nation.

Hospital officials reported Sunday that while the boy still was quite weak, his condition was improving steadily and he could now gesture with his hands. He remained in critical but stable condition today, they said.

Piotr woke up in Stanford University Medical Center on Saturday, still groggy from additional surgery to repair internal bleeding caused by a ruptured suture from the first operation. The bleeding was described as a minor problem, and physicians said it would have no effect on the boy's recovery, which is expected to take up to two months.

During the first operation, surgeons grafted a new valve from a donor heart onto the boy's heart and repaired a hole between his heart chambers.

Polish doctors had been unable to repair the congenital heart defect that caused much of his blood to bypass his lungs.

The boy awoke to find his mother, Halina Sternik, at his bedside, said Peter Wasowski, a family friend who has been host to the pair at his San Carlos home since their arrival on Dec. 28 from Gdansk, Poland.

Farmers Seek Jobs

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Tough times on the land are propelling a growing number of Iowa farmers into state and private employment agencies, where many are finding only more frustration.

"I would say we are seeing at least three to four times as many farmers as we normally do," said Bonnie Jergenson, manager of the Humboldt Job Service office. She said she noticed the increase about two months ago.

Farmers used to come to the state's Job Service to hire extra field hands, she said. Now they come seeking work for themselves.

Although farmers are hard workers and have a variety of skills, Ms. Jergenson said she's having a hard time placing them in new jobs.

"They don't like what's happened to them. They are used to being respected members of the community. Now the economy has gotten them. Definitely there is some bitterness," she said.

Larry Moneysmith, Job Service office manager in Red Oak, said he can find jobs for about 20 percent of the unemployed farmers in his area and that his office also provides farmers with food from a relief pantry.

Larry Paul, Job Service district manager in Mason City, said most of the farmers he sees tend to be age 40 and under. Some bought land at high prices in the late 1970s and early '80s and now can't afford to pay for it. They also can't sell it because of falling land values.

The state Office of Planning and Programming has 80 men training for new jobs in its Dislocated Farmer Program, which began last July, said Nicky Schissel, an executive assistant with the agency.

"Considering what we are seeing with the devaluation of farm land, I'm sure we will see a steady flow of farmers who will have to change occupations," Ms. Schissel said.

Peter Brent is one farmer who made the change. In September 1983, after nine years of farming in the Stuart-Menlo area, Brent sold his farm.

A succession of odd jobs followed, including driving trucks and delivering papers. Now, he's taking calls from farmers on the Farm Crisis Hotline for Rural America, a rural advocacy group, in Des Moines.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1963 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for eight years and have two beautiful children. My husband is a very loving father, but he never expresses any affection for me. For instance, I always have to go to him for a hug or kiss. He never reaches out to touch me, or even take my hand. I am naturally very affectionate. He is not. He's always been that way, but I thought after we were married he would change. We've talked about it, and he says it's just not "in him" to be demonstrative.

Last night he said, "When you were in the kitchen washing dishes, I wanted to sneak up behind you and put my arms around you, but I just couldn't do it."

I thought, how sad! If only he had done it, he would have made me the happiest woman in the world.

Abby, is it because of the way he was brought up? Nobody in his family touches or kisses much. My family is just the opposite.

How can I make him change? I know he loves me, but it's really painful living with a man who never shows any affection.

HUNGRY FOR AFFECTION

DEAR HUNGRY: You can't make him change; only he can change himself. He's inhibited because (you guessed it) that's the way he was brought up.

You don't have to spend the rest of your life hungering for affection. Verbalize your need to be touched, hugged and kissed, and stress that he can learn to express his feelings without embarrassment. Then ask your family physician to recommend a therapist who specializes in behavior modification.

Other options: Call your local mental health facility and inquire about sex therapy. If you live near a university whose medical school has a human sexuality program, you're in luck.

DEAR ABBY: After 40 years of a beautiful marriage, I lost my husband. We were a childless couple with no relatives living nearby; I had to take care of everything. When going through his chest of drawers, I found a large plastic bag of keys, a few with identifying labels, but most without.

Abby, I am going crazy trying to find out what these keys are for. I don't think I should just toss them out because I'm sure my husband wouldn't have kept them unless they were of some use.

Abby, you could save your readers a lot of unnecessary grief by advising them to label every key they have right now! And if a key is no longer useful, to throw it away.

KEY CRAZY IN SUN CITY

DEAR KEY CRAZY: I wouldn't recommend labeling keys. Should you be burgled, the labeled keys would save the thief a lot of time. More practical advice would be, label keys in a code known only to family members, and toss out keys that aren't currently useful.

DEAR ABBY: "New Mom," whose baby had been born with a strawberry birthmark on her forehead, was tired of being asked, "What's wrong with your baby?"

"Mom" handled such rude and insensitive questions with, "Nothing. What's wrong with you?"

My grandmother was born with one arm—a condition that never seemed to be a handicap to her. Once when I was small and traveling with Granny, a lady came up to her and said, "Honey, did you lose an arm?"

Granny smiled and replied, "Why, honey, did you find one?"

I was very proud of the way she handled those rude and insensitive people. I'm sending this in loving memory of "Granny Grump." If you use this, sign me ...

East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra Performs At Gala

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

A musical variety was provided for the third annual Friends of Music Scholarship Gala held Saturday evening at the Greenville Country Club.

Highlighting the evening was the appearance of the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Robert Hause.

This year several Friends of Music Board members participated on the program. Mary Ruth Hardy and Jon Shaw played violin in the orchestra. Carolyn Ipock and Jon Shaw sang two operatic duets with the orchestra. Peggy Shuping played background piano music as guests arrived. Special appearances were made by Paul Tardif, who played "I Got Rhythm" Variations for Piano and Orchestra. Bill Congdon was a guest conductor.

The gala is the primary source of monies for Friends Scholarships to the School of Music. After expenses incurred by the gala, the remaining funds will go into the scholarship fund. There are currently 20 students receiving Friends Scholarships and they represent almost every area in the School of Music. Over $5,000 was used for scholarships this year and the scholarships are usually in the amount of $250.

Orchestra members on Friends Scholarships are Kexi Liu, Coralie Patterson, Jonathan Sills, Gail Muncey, Ed Schutte, Hugh Whaley, Sandra Phillips, Richard House and Robert Wright.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Lee Jr. of Greenville presented $1,000 to Dean Charles Stevens, of the School of Music. The contribution was made for the Friends Scholarship Endowment Fund. "The money was given because of my love for ECU in general and the School of Music in particular and in honor of Carolyn Greene Ipock, a member of the Friends of Music Board of Directors," said Lee. Mrs. Ipock is a graduate of the ECU School of Music where she received B.M. and M.M. degrees.

Members of the gala committee were Mrs. Ipock, Mrs. Shuping, Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Hardy.

Reid Hooper served as first president of the Friends of Music which was organized in 1982 by Dean Charles Schwartz, School of Music. "Friends are persons who care for music, who share the belief that music in its many aspects is an important cause and who support and sympathize with endeavors to assure its quality..." said Dean Schwartz. He returned to the School of Music teaching faculty last year.

Nelson Crisp is currently serving as president of the Friends of Music. Other board members are Hooper, past president, Mrs. Ipock, programs, Francine Rees, newsletter, Larry Talbert, membership, Mrs. Hardy, social events, Cheryl Taft, publicity, Julia Allen treasurer, Mrs. Shuping, recording secretary, Ms. Shaw, corresponding secretary, Marilyn Lucht, Brad Foley, Dr. Stevens, Robert Hause and Gladys Howell, advisors.

Reception Given For Rev. And Mrs. Gammon

A reception was given honoring the Rev. and Mrs. Richard Rhea Gammon by members of the First Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon.

Guests were greeted by church members and invited into the reception room. Thelma Flye, president of the women of the church, introduced the receiving line which included the honorees and their daughter, Donna.

The reception table was decorated with an arrangement of mixed spring flowers flanked by five branch candelabra. Candelabra, greenery and flowers also decorated fellowship hall.

Special music was presented by Lynne Marks, who played the flute and Ruth Walker-Moskop, who played the harp. The church youth choir, directed by Carla Doub, sang a special song for Gammon, "You Gave Me Love."

Gammon has been pastor of the church for almost 27 years. During the Jan. 20 worship service, he was elected pastor emeritus by the congregation and presented a plaque and a gift.

Special guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander MacRae MacDonald and John E. MacQueen, the Rev. Joseph Moore Gammon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Gammon, Caroline Gammon, Mrs. James L. Jessup Jr. and Suzanne Jessup-Staton, Mr. and Mrs. Morris McGahey and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Day, Charles B. MacDonald, Dr. Phyllis B. MacDonald and M. Bruce MacDonald, James Roderick MacDonald, Mrs. J. Marilyn MacQueen and Mrs. George White Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacLaurion MacDonald.

The Gammons will continue to live in Greenville. He will be supplying the Snow Hill Presbyterian Church.

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — In the bitter winters of Montana, the wrong plastic trash container can shatter like glass.

To avoid this, city officials chose a polyethylene called Marlex CL-100 for trash containers. Molecules in the polyethylene become cross-linked in the manufacturing process and increase the container's strength and toughness.

Indigent Hospital Care Studied

Right Man

Lillington attorney Robert Morgan opted to be our new director for the State Bureau of Investigation ... and we're happy for us.

We North Carolinians have an SBI director who has a unique interest as well as experience in the field of rooting out crime. During his years as N.C. attorney general, Morgan is credited with upgrading and developing the bureau into a first-class, "effective and highly professional" organization.

His past record of interest in the SBI as well as familiarity with its workings holds much promise for the war on drug traffickers to which Gov. Jim Martin has given high priority. There are probably others who could effectively direct that war, but we simply know of none so admirably qualified as Morgan.

The news report on Morgan's decision to take the SBI post carried much political speculation and possible implications; but to us, the real significance was that the right man was matched up with the right job.

Robert Morgan has many friends in eastern Carolina who know of his long and close relationship to East Carolina University. Couple that with 10 years in the state Senate, six years as attorney general and as U.S. Senator during the 1974-80 term, all provide Morgan a background of familiarity with shakers and movers in government and political arenas.

The very nature of that background makes him wary of politization in what should be non-political fields of public service. He has privately voiced his concern about that in the past, and the subject apparently was very much on his mind on moving into the SBI post. He vowed then he would keep politics out of the agency.

There is no reason to doubt his word.

Danger

There is real danger ahead for the tobacco grower, as well as other farmers of the nation. The Reagan administration, with the election behind it, has proposed elimination of crop price supports, including tobacco price supports and the leaf quota system.

Can they do that? They sure can, given the unpopularity of tobacco in Congress and the possibility of full administration backing.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block said last week that the long term farm bill which will go to Congress in February will gradually call for the end of all crop supports, including tobacco.

While the phase out of supports would affect all crops, in this area the tobacco program is of prime concern.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., expressed concern over the proposal. "I am angered and outraged at this administration for proposing this kind of additional burden on the already over-burdened farmer," he said.

We agree. Obviously this administration has no conception of the seriousness of the economic crisis that faces American farming today, nor the consequences of a farm economy collapse for the nation.

Public Forum

To the editor:
A few weeks ago your paper printed a letter to "Dear Abby" from a dental hygienist who seemed upset and angered at two older dentists in her community for failing to keep up with modern dental education. It was implied that, due to this, all of her patients were suffering from advanced gum disease.

Although this was a very informative letter for the public concerning gum disease and its causes, the fact remains that not all dentists ignore their patients' total oral health. Our office specializes in the treatment of gum disease and we have worked with the professional dentists in this area for many years. We know that most are keeping up with the changes in dentistry to make treatment more comfortable and effective.

Certainly, the manpower study by the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry reveals that gum disease in our state has reached epidemic proportions, but it is unjust to single out the "older dentists" as being unaware of the existence of gum disease or failing to inform patients of such.

Recent clinical investigations have now shown that jaw bone deterioration may take place rather suddenly and rapidly. This is known as the "Theory of Random Bursts" and tells us that gum disease may go undetected simply because it has not yet begun. However, just as patients have asked, "Doctor, do I have any cavities?", they should also ask, "Doctor, do I have any signs of gum disease?"

To the editor:
I am the veteran of whom you wrote in your editorial of Thursday, Jan. 24. I am the one who volunteered in World War I and II. I am the one who gave four and a half years of his life to service of his country. I am the one who fought mosquitoes, malaria, pneumonia, tuberculosis. I am the one who gave up a good war-time job to serve my country for $21 per month.

I am the one who braved a murderous barrage to capture a small piece of enemy terrain. I am the one who felt the shock, the numbness, the escalating pain, the jolting trip to the hospital. I am the one who endured the plastic surgery. I am the one who carries the festering shrapnel after 40 years. I am the one who rides a motorized wheelchair because of a bad heart and crippling arthritis. I am the one who goes to the Veterans' Hospital because to go elsewhere would immediately reduce my status to that of a welfare recipient. And I go there because I earned it.

The veterans of Korea, Vietnam and Grenada have gone through similar service to their country. Their patriotism and service have earned them the right to medical care. North Carolina has honored its veterans by memorials and public approval of past and present service personnel. Can we not honor them by providing a medium of medical care? Will the editor promote veterans care in state-supported hospitals rather than swaying public opinion toward reduction of Veterans Hospital care?

I hope you will and I invite you to appear at our next Disabled American Veterans meeting Feb. 14, Valentine's Day. Please bring your camera and then run an expose of these rascals who "have been enjoying free benefits."

Take pictures of those who "use whatever clout and sympathy they can gain to keep that privilege."

I feel that a thorough investigation is in order. Please write another editorial. I'll bet you $10 to $1 that it will be substantially different.

As if we didn't have enough to worry about, there is trouble in America's bedrooms. The information comes from syndicated columnist Ann Landers who, in conducting a reader survey, discovered that 72 percent of her women readers would rather be hugged and treated tenderly by men that have sexual intercourse with them.

Although the figure came as a shock to many people, it did not come as a surprise to me. Ever since I reached puberty a few years back, I have been dealing with nothing but the group who would rather be hugged.

In my high school years, the figure was more like 99 percent, and even those girls who only agreed to be hugged and treated tenderly thought that was very big deal.

When I went from high school to the U.S. Marine Corps. I was hoping the odds would change in my favor. After all, I did have a uniform and was going off to fight for my country. Either I attended the wrong USO clubs, or the wrong Salvation Army canteens, but I could never meet the women who preferred "the act" to the hug. This was very frustrating, because while my buddies came off leave with happy smiles on their faces, I dragged myself in at 4 in the morning, my arms dead from hugging my dates all night long.

You would expect in a wartime situation that you could find some women who enjoyed both being hugged and the ultimate experience as well. I never did.

I would hug and hold them tenderly till the sun came up, but every time I suggested we go one more step they would reply, "I'm not that kind of girl."

"What kind of girl are you?" I would ask.

"I'm the kind of girl who just likes to be held in someone's arms."

If I got angry enough I would reply, "You don't need a boyfriend — you need a nanny."

Okay, the conflict was over, and according to my U.S. Marine discharge papers, I was now a man entitled to all veterans' benefits as well as the adulation of a grateful nation who had been spared the horrors of war.

Surely the University of Southern California coeds would understand that man cannot live by hugs alone. But once again the odds were stacked against me. A survey on campus revealed that 85 percent of the women said they would rather be hugged and held tenderly, while only 15 percent admitted that they would "go further," providing the person was either on the first string football team or his father owned the Bank of America.

In no time I developed a reputation at USC. The word was out on sorority row that if you wanted to have a tender evening, go out with Buchwald. But if you wanted the earth to move date somebody else. After three years of hugging and frustrating tenderness I decided to go to Paris, where women were noted for pleasing themselves by pleasing their men. They considered hugging just the soup course to a wonderful night.

As with most legends of love this one turned out to be slightly exaggerated.

I hugged under the bridges of Notre Dame, I hugged under the Eiffel Tower, I hugged in the streets of Montmartre, and I treated French women as tenderly as the filet mignon they had ordered in a restaurant I couldn't afford. And all they ever did when I took them home was thank me at the door and say, "You've not like other Americans who only want French girls to make love."

Well, that was some time ago, and I forgot all about such things until the Ann Landers survey was splashed over the front pages. I showed the article to my wife, and thought she would laugh. But all she said when she finished was, "Why don't you ever hug me?"

"Because," I screamed. "I've been doing it all my life and it never got me anywhere!"

Hospitals across the country are getting caught in an awful squeeze, especially government sponsored hospitals in small communities. There are a great many of those in North Carolina.

The hospitals are getting hit from all sides. A recent study conducted for the Medical Cost Containment Study Commission said North Carolina hospitals are being asked to absorb as much as $100 million annually in charity care and bad debts. Steve Morrisette, the N.C. Hospital Association's chief lobbyist, says other kinds of losses from unpaid or partially unpaid bills — including Medicare and Medicaid — are factored in, the annual loss may be as high as $450 million.

That money has to be made up somewhere and hospitals have been tacking most of it onto the bills of people who can afford to pay. That has the insurance companies howling. They don't want the bills of their clients inflated to cover the bills of non-clients. And it has the business community howling because the insurance companies cover the inflated charges by increasing the fees they charge employers for health insurance.

The problem has come full circle on the hospitals because private facilities are providing many out-patient and clinical services much more cheaply than the public hospitals because they don't have the indigent burden. So paying patients aren't going to the hospitals.

To add to the hospitals' burdens, the federal government keeps re-treating on Medicare and Medicaid payments, cutting the percentage of the cost which they'll cover. And in Washington these days, there's talk of a freeze in these programs which would amount to another cut.

"If Medicaid and Medicare are frozen, it just further exacerbates this shortfall (in hospital revenues) because Medicaid is the only payment the hospitals get for some of these uninsured people," said Jim Johnson, a legislative fiscal analyst.

The hospital problem is money and no one wants to pay the bill. Morrisette says, "We see (indigent care) as a social problem not as a hospital problem, and society has an obligation to see that these people have access to care. In other words, the hospitals need help."

Talk around the commission is of a state program that would help pay for indigent care. It would come in addition to the nearly $200 million the state already pays as its share of the nearly $700 million Medicaid program that operates in North Carolina. (Some of the indigent care problem might be addressed, it should be noted, with changes in Medicaid regulations and funding, a move which would draw more federal dollars to the program at the current seven-to-three, federal-to-state and local, funding ratio.)

Given the anti-spending, pro-tax cut atmosphere in Raleigh these days, it would appear that any new spending program would have little chance of enactment. But as Morrisette sees it, there isn't a county hospital in the state that can survive indefinitely in the current economic situation without an infusion of state or local money. When local hospitals start going belly up, he figures the legislature will have to act.

When the army of the Assyrian King Sennacherib was besieging Jerusalem centuries ago, the first thing he did was cut off the aqueduct which supplied the city with water. We can imagine him saying, "I'll bring them to terms by cutting off their water supply." But what Sennacherib did not know was that within the city was the Pool of Siloam made by an unfailling spring which was adequate to keep the people from perishing.

It is believed that about this time were written the words of the 46th Psalm: "There is a river, the streams of which will make glad the city of God ..." We may take "the city of God" to mean the church of Christ, or the religious faith and convictions which support us as individuals. We may have everything in life turned off, as it were, but if we have real power in the inside of our lives, we have something to sustain us.

For "there is a river ..."

Hearings Set For 2 Death Row Inmates

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — A hearing in Cabarrus Superior Court on Wednesday could lead to new trials for death row inmates. Francis Anthony and Andrew Craig.

Anthony and Craig were sentenced to death for the murder of Edith Ritch under Rocky River Bridge on July 8, 1981.

Defense attorneys said Betty Jean Howie, the state's key witness during the trial, has recanted her testimony implicating the two Charlotte men. The Charlotte woman, now serving a life sentence for second-degree murder, says she alone stabbed Ms. Ritch, who lived in Concord.

Defense attorneys Erwin Spainhour and Jim Johnson, both of Concord, have requested a motion for appropriate relief in hope of getting their clients off death row.

If Judge William Freeman rules in favor of Craig and Anthony, he could order a resentencing hearing or a new trial, which would remove the men from death row, Spainhour said.

The defense attorneys filed their request in January 1984, citing Ms. Howie's recantation and alleging that jurors were heard laughing as they deliberated, indicating "total disregard" for the men's lives.

Ms. Howie, 23, testified that she, her brothers Bobby and John Howie of Charlotte and Craig and Anthony were drinking and fishing with Edith Ritch, 43, and her husband, Seab, 42, before an argument began about money.

Seab Ritch was beaten and left unconscious. Edith Ritch was stabbed 37 times. The battery and radio converter from the Ritches' truck were stolen.

Ms. Howie, in a handwritten statement made before the defense attorneys at Women's Prison in Raleigh in January 1984, cited religious reasons for recanting her testimony.

Anthony and Craig, who pleaded innocent, did not testify at their trial. Their convictions have been upheld by the state Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear an appeal.

During the trial, Anthony and Craig also were convicted of common-law robbery and armed robbery, and each was sentenced to a total of 50 years in prison in addition to the death penalty.

Hundreds Mourn Fire Victims

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Seven caskets lined the front of the overflowing National Guard Armory as families and friends mourned the loss of seven youths killed in a fire ignited by a wood stove during last week's cold weather.

"Words are inadequate at a time like this," the Rev. J.T. Marrow told the parents of the victims during a funeral service Sunday. "But ... I want you to think with me of a simple subject that Christ's greatest commodity is children. It is through children that he has shown so many things."

More than 1,000 people filled the armory, while hundreds more stood outside in freezing temperatures to pay their last respects.

Several local clergymen offered words of comfort to family members and residents of the community.

"Why do bad things happen to good people and innocent children...?" said the Rev. M.D. Lark, pastor of First Baptist Church of Henderson. "For now, it is a matter of accepting the fact that no one is immune from tragedy... We must pick up the pieces and go on living."

Dr. Roland W. Perry, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church, said the large number of mourners showed community support for the families.

"We have a city that cares for you," Perry told family members. "We will continue to work to make life better for you in the time ahead."

The young people, ages 3 through 17, were planning a birthday party for one of the victims Tuesday when a fire trapped them in an upstairs bedroom of a two-story frame house. Six of the victims were half-brothers and half-sisters, and one was a playmate.

The burned bodies of the victims, who died of smoke inhalation, were found piled between two beds. Fire officials said a wood stove on the first floor apparently sparked the fire.

The victims were Tericia Johnson, 3; Quashone Johnson, 4; Loshia Johnson, 5; Fred Johnson, 7; Nancy Seward, 10; Kim Johnson, 11; and Lyndon Johnson, 17.

Inside the armory, mourners stood in the aisles, and hundreds more listened to the service on loudspeakers outside the building. The service was broken at times with the sound of sobs and crying.

"This was the best thing that could have happened" to the children, said Mildred Terry, a family friend who wept as she spoke. "They may have suffered a moment or two...but now they are resting in God's love. Though it may seem hard, we should thank God. We should thank God they don't have to cry anymore."

Va. Beach To Honor Hero

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A Durham, N.C., father of two who drowned in an icy lake while trying to save his roommate and a 5-year-old boy will be honored by Virginia Beach officials for his "selfless and heroic" efforts.

"That's exactly how he was," said the man's aunt, Ruby Brodie of Durham. "We know that what happened didn't happen in vain. He was always trying to help somebody. He was a very happy person."

Reginald Thomas Johnson, a 26-year-old computer programming student, died Thursday after pushing his roommate within reach of rescuers and then slipping under the icy water at Lake Whitehurst.

Clarence Neely III, 5, drowned in 5½ feet of water after falling through the half-inch-thick ice while playing.

The roommate, 22-year-old Bruce Payne of Virginia Beach, survived.

Johnson and Payne, students at the Electronic Computer Programming Institute in Virginia Beach, were returning from playing basketball when someone told them a boy had fallen in the nearby lake. When they approached the boy, the ice gave way.

Called to the scene, Chesapeake Beach Fire Lt. J.D. Hicks extended a ladder and crawled to the end so he could reach the three.

Johnson pushed Payne "up on the ice so J.D. could grab him," said Mark Meredith, a Chesapeake Beach Rescue Squad paramedic.

As Payne was rescued, Johnson went under.

Johnson and Payne will receive a resolution of bravery from the City of Virginia Beach.

Clarence Neely, 27, a member of a Coast Guard search-and-rescue team, watched as efforts to save his son failed.

"I do this for a living. I couldn't pull my own son out of the water. I never want to see a body of water again," he said.

State Near Bottom Of Wage Scale Despite High-Technology Openings

RALEIGH (AP) — The high-technology boom in North Carolina, where the average hourly manufacturing wage ranks 49th among 50 states, doesn't necessarily translate into high-pay, analysts say. "High tech has nothing to do necessarily with high wages," said state Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks. "North Carolina is the most attractive state in the nation for assembly line employers. This is the No. 1 buyer's market in America for unskilled labor ... and businesses that are defined as 'high tech' nevertheless use 90 percent unskilled labor."

The manufacturing wages remain low because North Carolina still has more workers in textiles, apparel and furniture than any other state, analysts say, and because many high-tech industries offer mostly low-skill jobs that don't pay much better than the state average.

"It's a transitional, not a revolutionary change we're going through," said Michael G. Rakouskas, research director in the state Department of Commerce. "We've laid the groundwork for an improvement in wages, but when you have so many people in textiles, any incremental (improvement) will be swamped."

Brooks said most high-tech companies coming into the state hire unskilled labor locally and bring in their own skilled labor.

Christopher L. Scott, president of the North Carolina AFL-CIO, said the high-tech description can disguise some low-skill, low-wage operations.

"You go out there on the country roads and find plants that (offer) assembly-line work and (some) pay below $5 an hour, sometimes on a piece basis," he said. "And high tech is greeted as a savior."

In November the state's average hourly manufacturing wage was $7.15, compared with a national average of $9.30 and a Southeastern average of $7.54. Only Mississippi fared worse with an average wage of $7.02.

Industrial recruiters in the commerce department said about 10,000 of nearly 15,000 new jobs announced last year were in categories paying higher than the average pay.

The new, higher-paying jobs still are outweighed by traditional manufacturing jobs. North Carolina has a higher percentage of its workers in manufacturing than any other state, slightly more than 32 percent.

But some economists say North Carolina is moving toward improved pay. The state average wage was 50th nationally in 1952, and now is closer to the national average than at any time since 1950.

North Carolina manufacturing workers in November earned 76 percent of the national average, compared with 68 percent in 1960.

"We're much closer to the norm, and in the short run that may be all you can expect to accomplish since other states are competing for the same industries," said John E. Connaughton, associate professor of economics at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and director of the UNCC-First Union National Bank economic forecast.

"Structures of state economies change very slowly," Connaughton said.

N.C. Growers 'Confused,' Says Cyrus; Delays Result In Leaf Quota Leasing

RALEIGH (AP) — Confused about proposed changes in the federal tobacco program, Tar Heel growers have delayed making plans for planting and negotiating lease rates with allotment holders, officials say.

"They don't know what they can do to make sure they don't go in the hole on this year's crop," said John Cyrus, chief of the tobacco section for the state Department of Agriculture. "We can't tell them what to do. All we can do is take the proposals before us."

Cyrus said farmers are in a "complete state of confusion and frustration" over the constantly changing tobacco outlook. He said in 36 years with the tobacco affairs section, he had never seen so many growers unsure about their upcoming crop.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, said farmers are "mighty confused and depressed, and I don't blame them."

"Because they don't know what the assessment will be or the support price, many farmers are just holding back," said Kenneth R. Bateman, a Johnston County agricultural extension agent. "There is simply no way a tobacco farmer or a quota owner can come up with a realistic price for quota at this stage."

Last week the confusion worsened after U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block said the tobacco program would be included among the Reagan administration's proposed overhaul of farm programs.

Final proposals are still several weeks away, but Block indicated the changes would include linking crop prices to free market prices, rather than federal support prices and phasing out production controls such as allotments over five years.

The North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation is encouraging its members to wait until some decisions are made on the proposals, said William B. Jenkins, assistant to Farm Bureau President John Sledge.

In addition to Block's announcement, other factors are complicating plans for the 1985 crop.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. has recommended that the fee farmers pay to support the tobacco program be increased from 7 cents a pound to 25 cents a pound for this year's crop. That recommendation has not yet received approval from the U.S. agriculture department.

A proposal for cigarette manufacturers to purchase more than 800 million pounds of leaf stored by stabilization in return for a 25-cent cut in price supports is awaiting the endorsement of tobacco companies.

Harold Allen, Harnett County farmer, said he normally would have his contracts for leased quota in hand by this time, but not this year.

"With all the talk about changes in legislation and talk of a phaseout, I can't do it just yet," Allen said. "I read in the paper here that there were only 10 lease and transfer agreements in this county so far."

Newspaper Questions Chemical Wastes' Storage At Buncombe County Landfill

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Federal officials assure no immediate danger is posed by powerful chemical warfare agent wastes buried in a chemical company landfill near Asheville, a Charlotte newspaper says.

The Charlotte Observer reported Sunday that a hallucinogen known as BZ was made in strict secrecy on the site of the present Chemtronics Inc. plant near Swannanoa.

The chemical, which causes disorientation and hallucinations similar to LSD, was loaded in bombs, but never used because it makes some people docile and others violent, the newspaper reported.

Between 300 and 500 barrels of BZ waste were neutralized with a "kill solution" before being buried on a 1,027-acre tract in Buncombe County. The Observer reported, but questions have been raised about the treatment's success.

"We were told unofficially by the Army that that particular solution didn't always kill BZ," said Chemtronics President John Schultheis. "We were led to believe that since the days of (previous owners) Ancel and Northrop, that the ratio of kill solution to waste material had been insufficient."

The Environmental Protection Agency has the Chemtronics site on its superfund cleanup list, primarily because of acid lagoons that leaked into the ground several years ago.

Ancel Propulsion Co., a subsidiary of Celanese Corp., produced BZ until 1965, when the subsidiary was bought by Northrop. Schultheis said Chemtronics makes no chemical warfare agents at the plant it acquired from Northrop, but does produce chemical warfare decontamination kits for the military, commercial explosives and flame retardants.

Schultheis said four Army officials visited the landfill Sept. 6 after two barrels marked "BZ" popped out of the ground. The Observer said the two drums were still exposed three weeks ago when two reporters visited the site.

The official who oversaw BZ production at the site from 1962-1966 for both Ancel and Northrop said he believes the caustic kill solution neutralized the BZ wastes.

"Our experience was that it was effective," said Lewis Rothstein, 64, who now works for the Navy. "I'm confident it would have been broken down by the (solution) a long time ago."

Schultheis said for safety reasons, he would not allow the Army officials to sample the contents of the two drums. Testing of residue from the exposed inner wall of one drum showed no active BZ, The Observer reported.

Schultheis said he also refused to transport the drums to an airfield where they would be flown to the Army's Pine Bluff, Ark., Arsenal for further testing. He said he refused because he is not licensed to transport hazardous wastes.

Boys' Bodies Found; Caretaker Charged

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Boy Scout camp caretaker has been charged with murder after the bodies of two teenage cousins were found buried in a grease pit at the Camp Grimes reservation in McDowell County, sheriff's officials say.

James Keith Ross, 32, of Nebo near Marion, was being held without bond Sunday night in McDowell County jail on two counts of first-degree murder, sheriff's officials said.

Ross is a caretaker at Camp Grimes, about six miles south of Marion on U.S. 221, which is closed for the season, according to the McDowell County Sheriff's Department. The Mecklenburg County Council of Boy Scouts owns the camp.

The bodies of Richard Buchanan, 15, of Marion, and Gary Bailey, 14, of Morganton were found about 9 p.m. Saturday in a pit about 100 feet from the caretaker's cottage where Ross lived. They had been reported missing Wednesday.

Autopsy reports released Sunday showed the boys died of gunshot wounds, said Michael Shkrn, North Carolina assistant chief medical examiner.

In a statement, McDowell County Sheriff Haynes said his department and the State Bureau of Investigation arrested Ross after investigating a missing person's report filed by the boys' parents.

Walton Clapp, McDowell County coroner, said he was told the grease pit, about five feet deep, was used to change the oil on farm vehicles used at the camp.

Understanding Stress

by Lou Gilbert - Adult Services, Psychologist

Stress in everyday life basically comes from three sources: our body, our environment, and our thoughts. Physiological stress may result from illness, accident, or poor diet. Environmental stress includes pollution, weather changes, crowding, time limits and other visible pressure producers. Environmental threats also produce body changes which are themselves stressful. When we feel threatened, physically or emotionally, our brain automatically speeds up in preparation to confront or escape the threat.

Our pupils become larger to see better, muscles tense, heart and respiration rates increase and the body mobilizes its resources to fight or flee. This is called the "stress response".

This response may also be activated simply by thinking of a past or anticipated problem. These thoughts can increase muscle tension, and raise heart and blood pressure rates causing an unpleasant feeling commonly labeled "anxiety." Anxiety, then, may contribute to other stress-related problems such as headaches, ulcers, high blood pressure or other illnesses.

When indicators of stress are persistent or recurring it is advisable to have a thorough physical examination and then to consult a mental health professional trained in stress management. Stress management involves a learning approach emphasizing health maintenance through self-control of behavior and body functions.

A PAIN IN THE NECK CAN MAKE YOU A PAIN IN THE NECK

If you're feeling irritable and argumentative, if you snap at someone and later wonder why, it could be caused by that slight pain you feel in your neck, it's the sign of a pinched nerve. Feelings of irritability, depression and being tired, even after a good night's sleep, can also be symptoms of a pinched nerve. Left untreated, you may suffer from headaches, shoulder pains, arm pains, and an overall lack of energy. If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, WE urge you to have a chiropractic examination.

MORE THAN ONE TREATMENT PLAN

It's truth time. Your teeth have been x-rayed and examined. Now your dentist explains in detail what, if any problems exist and how he intends to proceed. It is called the treatment plan. There are usually several ways to reach the desired results, therefore many dentists will prepare two or more treatment plans. Dental needs and financial resources can vary from patient to patient. The patient will then decide which plan he desires.

For example, a few missing teeth can be replaced with either a fixed bridge or a removable partial denture. The fixed bridge, due to the time involved and laboratory expense, will cost more, however, it does have the advantage of being fixed in place. Many individuals can't afford a fixed bridge so they may opt for the less expensive alternative plan of a removable partial denture.

Within reason, the patient should know exactly what is going to be done, how long it will take, the cost, the alternatives, and the chances of further treatment of the future.

Professionalism can be priceless, but it costs no more.

In funeral prearrangement or pre-need grave or crypt site selection nothing is more important than consultation with professionals. It helps ease the burden when the time comes. And it helps you be sure there are no surprises.

There are many questions to be answered. Like marker selection. Site selection. Vaults and differences between them. And then there are the "what ifs?"... Like "what if" you're thousands of miles from home?

As professionals with 50 years as funeral directors and 26 years as ceterians, we can help you with these questions in private consultation.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today, extending its broad rally of the past three weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.53 to 1,279.58 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Many analysts said they expected stocks to take a pause sometime soon after their recent sharp runup.

The Big Board has had 15 consecutive sessions in which advances outpaced declines. The further the rally proceeds, market-watchers reason, the greater the temptation is likely to grow among investors to cash in at least some of their profits.

Nevertheless, simultaneous rallies in both the bond and stock markets lately have generated a great deal of enthusiasm on Wall Street. Talk has subsided about nagging issues like the federal budget deficit, and attention is focusing instead on prospects for continued economic growth with low inflation.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list and rose 1/8 to 21 7/8. The company reported earnings of $1.25 a share for 1984, its first year of operation after the breakup of the Bell System.

"We expected to do better," said Charles L. Brown, the company's chairman. "We intend to do better in 1985 and better still in the years ahead."

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.63 to 1,276.06, bringing its gain for the week to 48.70 points.

Advances outpaced declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 122.44 million shares, against 160.74 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .39 to a record 102.42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .95 at 220.52.

Discovery was towed into a processing hangar to be prepared for its next mission in March — in which one satellite is to be deployed and a second recovered.

And because of Discovery's success on the just-completed flight, NASA can proceed with launching Challenger on Feb. 20 with a pair of communications satellites and a crew of seven that includes a French astronaut and a U.S. senator, Jake Garn of Utah.

One of Challenger's satellites is a NASA tracking and data relay satellite to be boosted to high orbit by the same type of rocket stage that drilled Discovery's spy satellite to its lofty outpost.

The rocket is called an inertial upper stage, or IUS. It failed its only previous shuttle assignment, in April, 1983, propelling a communications payload into a wrong orbit. The trouble was traced to second stage motor overheating that collapsed a flexible seal in the steering mechanism.

Major modifications were made and extensive testing was done before officials felt confident in flying an IUS on the secret mission. Because both NASA and the Air Force plan to use the stage many times, the Air Force removed its performance from the secrecy list and reported it "successfully met its mission objectives."

"We were confident we had checked and rechecked it (the IUS) all over, but the proof is in the flight demonstration," said Edward Bangsund, an official with Boeing Aerospace, the manufacturer. "We can now look forward to a successful operational program."

NASA now can return to its open information policy, until the next military mission, scheduled in September. Full-scale briefings with flight directors, the astronaut crew and payload experts are scheduled this week for Challenger's February flight. That was not done before the Discovery launch.

How did the uneasy marriage between the military and the civilian space agency work?

"It was very difficult for NASA to switch from being open about everything to this sort of mission," said agency spokesman Hugh Harris. "But I think that all of our information people and the press, being interested in the security of our country, recognized their responsibility and tried hard to make it work. In the future, I think it will be easier because of this experience, but I think there will be even less information given out."

Said Lt. Col. Robert Nicholson, an Air Force spokesman: "We wanted something different than most of NASA's customers and that presented a real challenge for the agency to adapt its policy of years to meet our needs. We placed some unusual constraints on NASA personnel and to a person they lived up to the letter and agreement of the instructions. I think it worked very well."

Saturday night, set the tone for his tour of the region, where a number of priests and theologians have adopted Marxist theories in the struggle to help the poor. The pontiff warned against those who "disfigure the evangelical message, using it as the service of ideologies and political strategies in search of an illusory earthly liberation."

The pontiff also will travel to Ecuador, Peru and the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago before flying back to Rome on Feb. 6.

Mike 'Can't Leave'

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Wallace says he's getting older and "will begin to back off," which is one reason Diane Sawyer was signed on to CBS' "60 Minutes" last year, but Ms. Sawyer says Wallace "can't leave."

"I'm going to have my teeth in his ankles to prevent him from going out the door," she says in an interview with Playboy magazine. Wallace, Morley Safer, Ed Bradley and Harry Reasoner also discussed the highly rated new show in the magazine's March issue.

The 66-year-old Wallace, who has signed a new contract with the network for a reported $1 million, told Playboy he is "getting a little older and (I) don't travel the way I used to."

EASTERN PINES RESCUE SQUAD

My family and I would like to extend our very deep appreciation again to you for the quick response to our emergency call last year when my father, Merryman Priddy Bailey, became desperately ill on January 22, 1984.

My father eventually died on January 27, 1984 at Pitt County Memorial Hospital after a long and determined fight to keep living. The doctors were utterly amazed at his will and fight to live against numerous odds.

He would not have had this chance to fight for life as he did if it had not been for your unselfish devotion and dedication to helping others in their time of need.

Thank God there are people like you on which others entrust their most valuable asset - HUMAN LIFE.

Escalator Accident Claims Child's Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transit authorities say they are examining safety precautions on the Washington, D.C., subway system following the death of a three-year-old girl on an escalator.

The girl, on a shopping trip with her identical twin sister a day before their third birthday, choked to death Saturday when she fell down the moving stairs and the nylon strings to her parka caught in the treads at the bottom of the escalator. The children were with their grandmother at the time.

"This is such a freak accident," said Theodore Weigle, deputy general manager of the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. "When you consider the hundreds of thousands of people who use the escalators every day without incident — we'll have to be very deliberate and cautious about what we do to further improve their safety."

Ga. Tech Tops Heels, Terps Take ACC Lead

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

While Maryland was busy defeating non-conference opponents over the weekend, it didn't have to do anything to take the lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

No. 16 Georgia Tech took care of that chore for the Terrapins, as the Yellow Jackets defeated eighth-ranked North Carolina 66-62.

"The league is going to be crazy," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins after Sunday's victory. "Anybody who sits on their laurels is not going to live long. The league winner will really be deserving."

Forward John Salley scored 11 points in the second half, including a three-point play to propel the Yellow Jackets into a tie for second place in the conference with the Tar Heels. Both teams are 4-2.

The Terrapins are 3-1 in the league, and raised their overall record to 16-5 with a pair of non-conference triumphs this weekend. Coach Lefty Driesell's team knocked off Notre Dame 77-65 on Saturday, then beat 14th-rated Villanova 77-74 on Sunday.

Virginia followed its first conference triumph on Saturday — a 58-56 victory over Wake Forest — with a 54-52 victory over Arkansas.

Also Saturday, fifth-ranked Duke rushed past Clemson for a 100-83 victory, while Louisville avoided its fifth straight loss with an 84-78 triumph over North Carolina State.

North Carolina mounted several comebacks, including one from 10 points down at 44-34 with 16:09 left. But Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said it was rebounding that finally defeated North Carolina.

"If there was one thing that beat us, it was rebounding," Smith said. "They had nine more offensive rebounds than we did... Our backs are to the wall. We have a lot of road games left. That's why we need to improve."

Mark Price led Georgia Tech, 15-3, with 17 points. Salley had 13, while Duane Ferrell and Yvon Joseph added 11 apiece. Steve Hale led North Carolina, 14-4, with 19 points.

At College Park, Len Bias provided the spark that helped Maryland to its third straight victory. The 6-foot-8 junior forward scored nine of his career-high 30 points after Villanova had pulled to within two points.

"They know when I want the ball," Bias said. "I get that expression on my face and slap my hands a couple of times."

Guard Keith Gatlin said he knew who would get his team points in the clutch.

"When the game's close and we need a basket, I go to Lenny," Gatlin said.

Ed Pinckney scored a career-high 29 points for Villanova, which is 13-4 after having a four-game winning streak snapped. Gary McLain scored 12 for the Wildcats, and Dwayne McClain had 13.

Tim Mullen, who scored 13 points, saved the day for the Cavaliers with four free throws in the final 17 seconds against Arkansas. Coach Dave Odom said it was a little more than luck.

"At the end of the game, we definitely told Tim Mullen to get the ball," Odom said. "He's our most experienced player and our best free throw shooter.

On Saturday, the Cavaliers gained a victory without Coach Terry Holland, who was hospitalized a second time with an intestinal ailment.

"This was Terry Holland's game plan," Odom said. "I talked to him (Saturday morning). Everything we did was gone over and carefully reviewed by him."

It probably didn't help Holland's condition that the game was decided by an Olden Polynice jumper with seven seconds left. The result ended Virginia's winless streak in the conference at six and raised its overall record to 9-9.

Gastineau Sparks AFC

HONOLULU (AP) — Mark Gastineau's "Sack Dance" was outlawed by National Football League rulesmakers this season. His ability to get to quarterbacks continues undiminished.

The New York Jets' defensive end, who led the NFL with 22 sacks in the regular season, added four more Sunday as the American Conference beat the National Conference 22-14 in the annual Pro Bowl game.

He also dumped the Los Angeles Rams' Eric Dickerson in the end zone for a safety that produced the first score of the game with 4:10 left in a first half that was so dominated by defense it appeared it might end in a scoreless tie.

"In a game like this, with only one week's preparation, the defense will have that advantage," Gastineau said after the game. "That was obvious with the number of sacks today."

The number of sacks, in fact, was 17, a Pro Bowl record for the two teams. Nine were by the AFC, eight by the NFC, for which Chicago's Richard Dent played Gastineau by dumping AFC quarterbacks three times.

Overall, 19 of the AFC's 22 points were set up by the defense or special teams, including the play that turned the game around, an 83-yard run with a Neil Lomax fumble by Kansas City defensive end Art Still that turned a 14-12 AFC deficit into a 19-14 lead with 5:24 left in the game.

The fumble resulted from the kind of play common to all-star contests.

On a third down and three from the AFC 15, Lomax tried to hand off to Dickerson. But the two collided, the ball came loose and Still fell on it. He was pushed to his feet by Seattle's Joe Nash and the Los Angeles Raiders' Rod Martin and continued untouched on a run the 6-foot-7, 257-pound end said "seemed like it took a couple of days."

Norm Johnson added a 22-yard field goal set up by another defensive play — New England's Andre Tippett's recovery of another Lomax fumble.

To Lomax, playing in his first Pro Bowl, the botched play that led to the winning score was one of the things that happens when the offense has only a couple of days to get its timing down.

"I guess I was a little tight to Eric," said the St. Louis Cardinal quarterback, who alternated with San Francisco's Joe Montana for the NFC. "That's what happens when you have two or three days to work on the plays. If we had two or three weeks, it wouldn't happen."

The NFC, which won last year's contest 45-3 and holds a 9-6 edge since the merger of the NFL and the American Football League, had a huge statistical edge — 426 yards total to 204 for the AFC.

But the AFC led 9-0 at the half on Gastineau's safety — which was preceded by sacks of Lomax by the Jets' Joe Klecko and Martin — and Miami's Dan Marino's 6-yard touchdown pass to the Raiders' Marcus Allen. The second score came three plays after Seattle's Fred Young, in the game with Dallas' Bill Bates as the Pro Bowl's first designated special teams players, tipped a punt by New Orleans' Brian Hansen to give the AFC the ball at the NFC 15.

Meanwhile, Minnesota's Jan Stenerud was missing 35-and 39-yard field goal attempts for the NFC and Lomax had a pass intercepted in the end zone by Kansas City's Deron Cherry that stymied an NFC scoring threat in the dying seconds of the first half.

But the NFC came back from to take a 14-9 lead on a 13-yard TD pass from Montana to Green Bay's James Lofton and a one-yard run by Chicago's Walter Payton 35 seconds into the fourth quarter.

In fact, Montana was the more effective of the NFC quarterbacks. The MVP in last Sunday's Super Bowl completed 10 of 14 passes for 112 yards and was more effective in evading Gastineau and the other AFC pass rushers.

But NFC Coach Mike Ditka stuck with his plan to alternate Montana and Lomax, whose 4,614 passing yards this season were second only to Marino's record-breaking 5,084 and the fourth best mark of all time.

"I planned from the start to alternate the quarterbacks by quarters so that's why Neil Lomax played the final period," the Chicago Bears' coach said. "They're both all-stars and I had confidence in both."

Evert Lloyd Sweeps Navratilova For Title

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP) — Even with a 6-2, 5-4 lead in her title match against Martina Navratilova in the Virginia Slims of Florida, Chris Evert Lloyd didn't think she had it won.

Even though she was serving for the match, Lloyd said she was thinking about the possibility of losing. She was still wary of the woman who had beaten her 13 straight times and in 16 of their past 17 meetings.

"I think I was kind of in a daze," she said Sunday after finally breaking through against her nemesis. "I was a bit tentative on my first two match points, and I started thinking how I didn't want to blow it."

"I've had so many chances to beat her during the streak and haven't been able to. I didn't want that to happen again."

It didn't. Lloyd held on to win 6-2, 6-4, handing Navratilova only her seventh loss since the beginning of the 1982 season.

Lloyd broke Navratilova's serve in the first and third games and never trailed on her own serve in the first set at the Sheraton Royal Biscayne Racquet Club.

In the second set, Lloyd scored three service breaks, including love games in the seventh and ninth against Navratilova's serve. She won her third match point when Navratilova looped a forehand long.

"I was a little afraid after the first set," Lloyd said at a joyful news conference after the 66-minute match. "because I don't think I've ever played that well in my life."

"My passing shots and my return of serve were the best ever, and I have to do that to beat Martina."

Navratilova, now tied with Lloyd 31-31 in their lifetime series, had said Saturday that she thought she could beat Lloyd even if she had a bad day. But she admitted Lloyd didn't play Sunday like she has the past two years.

"She didn't miss any shots at the beginning," Navratilova said. "I think this is probably the best she has ever played against me. I don't think I would have been able to win if I was playing a little better, but at least I could have made it interesting."

The loss was the first for Navratilova since her record winning streak was ended at 74 matches by Helena Sukova in the semifinals of the Australian Open last month. She had a 54-match winning streak ended by Hana Mandlikova in January 1984.

Navratilova won her only previous tournament this year, the Virginia Slims of Washington.

The last time Lloyd beat Navratilova was in the finals of the December 1982 Australian Open, where she won 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

After several blowouts against her friendly foe, Lloyd pushed Navratilova before losing 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the U.S. Open last fall. She called her victory Sunday "a breakthrough."

"I think she had a real psychological edge over me after winning 13 straight," said Lloyd. "It's great to know I can compete with her."

While racing to a 4-0 lead Sunday, Lloyd played nearly flawlessly from her baseline perch and Navratilova struggled with her serve.

"In my past matches when Martina has jumped on me right from the start, I've gotten disheartened and she has gained confidence," Lloyd said. "It was important that I got a good start."

McEnroe Holds Off Mecir

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe, nearly forced into a fourth set by newcomer Miloslav Mecir, says a change in his style of play helped him pull off his fourth straight U.S. Pro Indoor tennis title.

"If something isn't working, you don't have to bang your head against the wall," McEnroe said Sunday after earning the $54,000 first prize with a 6-3, 7-6, 6-1 victory over the 20-year-old Czechoslovakian.

McEnroe, 25, the U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion, had trouble with the unseeded Mecir only in the second set of the $300,000 tournament when he fell behind 5-1 after twice having his service broken.

McEnroe said he decided to stay back and rally and instead of rushing the net on Mecir, a pro for three years.

"I think it threw him off. And I think he got demoralized after I won the tie-breaker," McEnroe said.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, broke Mecir's service twice to get to 5-5, held service and then came back from 0-3 in the tie-breaker to win the set.

Mecir, who advanced to the finals after an upset over Jimmy Connors, ranked No. 2 in the world, said he wasn't bothered by McEnroe's change of style.

"I was bothered by him protesting calls. I lost concentration," said the Czech, whose $27,000 second prize was more than half of what he earned last year.

McEnroe did not formally protest during the match, although several times he pointed to spots where he felt a ball had landed out when called good.

Wadkins Runs Over L.A. Open Field

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lanny Wadkins has a reputation as a streak player.

Recent success notwithstanding, he denies it.

"I've won 14 tournaments and more than $2 million. If that's a streak, it's a pretty good one," he said Sunday after a run-away, record-setting triumph in the Los Angeles Open golf tournament, his second victory in a three-week-old PGA Tour season.

"I don't think I'm a streak player at all. I know I have that reputation. But last year was the only time I've been completely healthy for a full season and gone through the year without winning or without being in the top 10 (money-winners).

"And that was close to being a good year," said Wadkins, who played well most of the season, won $198,996 and was runner-up in the PGA national championship.

"Actually, the PGA may have been a turning point for me. I was awfully disappointed, but I told Penny (his wife) we were just going to take it from there and make 1985 the biggest year I've ever had."

Wadkins paused for a moment, let the hint of a smile play across his face, and added:

"I've got an awfully good start on it."

Wadkins, who said he was playing about as well as he ever has, fired an aggressive, 7-under-par 64 in the final round and won the Los Angeles title by 7 strokes, the largest winning margin on the Tour in more than two years.

More significantly, it gave Wadkins a 264 total, 20 under par, six shots better than anyone ever before had played the tough Riviera Country Club layout, long considered one of this country's premier tests of tournament golf.

"To play Riviera 20 under par, well, I'm almost speechless," Wadkins said. "It's something I'll remember for a long time."

The victory was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and lifted his earnings for the young season to $172,350. It also enabled the 35-year-old Wadkins to become only the ninth player to go beyond $2 million in career earnings.

Wadkins won the Bob Hope Classic that opened the Tour three weeks ago. In that one, he had to come from four shots back with five holes to go to tie Craig Stadler, then struggled through five holes of sudden death before winning.

This one was as easy as that one was tough.

It was, simply, no contest.

Wadkins started the final round two shots in front, and was never even tied.

He nailed it down with a string of four consecutive birdies beginning on the ninth hole and ending with a short-iron approach that came to within two inches of being eagle-2 on the 12th.

That gave him a 7-shot lead with six to play and he brought it home in style, finishing with a card that showed no bogeys, no 5s and reduced the rest of it to a fight for second.

"It's a funny thing about a big lead," said Wadkins, one of the game's most aggressive players. "The more of a lead I have, the more of a lead I want. I just kept the pedal to the metal."

Hal Sutton gained the No. 2 spot with an 18-hole birdie that lifted him one shot in front of Corey Pavin. Sutton, who hasn't won since taking the 1983 PGA national championship at Riviera, had a closing 69 and a 271 total. Pavin was 70-272.

Stadler came on with a 66 and was tied at 273 with Chip Beck and Gary Koch. Beck played the last 18 in 70, Koch in par 71.

Calvin Peete, winner of the Phoenix Open, was well back at 70-278. Jack Nicklaus was 71-279 and Tom Watson 72-281.

Stacy Breaks Tie At LPGA Mazda Classic

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy said she was "rusty" during the first three rounds of the Mazda Classic, but she played like a well-oiled machine in the final round to win the LPGA's first tournament of the season.

Stacy sank a pressure 20-foot birdie putt on the final hole Sunday to break a three-way tie and win the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association event at the Deer Creek Country Club.

That gave her a 5-under-par 67 over the 6,079-yard course and a 72-hole total of 8-under-par 280.

"I've been hitting the ball well all week, but my concentration wasn't so keen, this being the first tournament of the year," said Stacy, whose 10-year tour earnings stand at $976,888. "I knew if I could play the same way today and not make mistakes I'd have a chance."

"Today was the result of three practice days of rusty nerves and rusty concentration."

Japan's Ayako Okamoto, who shot a 70 in her erratic final round, suffered three bogeys and finished a stroke behind at 281. Her final effort to force a playoff failed when a 20-foot putt at No. 18 rimmed the cup and stopped 3 inches away.

Pat Bradley, who began the day as the leader, dropped to third at 282 when she three-putted for a bogey on the final hole.

Bradley, who held a two-stroke lead after nine holes, started the back nine with three straight bogeys. Still, she managed to forge a tie with Okamoto and Stacy with a hole to play.

But after Stacy dropped her big putt, Bradley sent her 20-foot birdie putt at the 18th past the cup, missed a four-foot return and settled for a bogey and a final-round 74.

Bradley began the day three shots ahead of Okamoto and five in front of Stacy, who slowly moved up on the leaders with her round of five birdies.

Playing in the group ahead of Bradley and Okamoto, Stacy produced the winning birdie on the last hole with what she described as "a great 240-yard drive, a good five iron into the wind and the putt — three great shots."

"I was intent on getting a birdie," she said. "I didn't want a playoff with players like Okamoto and Bradley. When it came time to putt, I wasn't calm but I concentrated on the speed of the putt and thought how wonderful if it disappeared in the cup. But if not, please make it stop about a foot from the hole."

One of three women to have won three U.S. Open titles, Stacy began her climb with birdies at the third and eighth holes, sinking putts of 10 and 20 feet.

Bird Gives Jones All-Star Slot

By The Associated Press

Larry Bird, who put himself in the National Basketball Association All-Star game with his all-around excellence this season, gave K.C. Jones a ticket to Indianapolis with one stroke of brilliance.

The coach of the Eastern Conference in the All-Star game in Indianapolis Feb. 10 is determined by which team has the best record after games of Jan. 27. Before Boston met Portland Sunday, both the Celtics and idle Philadelphia were 35-8.

With three seconds to go, Portland took a 127-126 lead on a basket by Clyde Drexler. But Bird connected on a basket from deep in the corner as the final buzzer sounded, giving him 48 points and the Celtics a 128-127 triumph.

A loss by the Celtics would have sent 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham to the All-Star game, but Bird's basket means Jones will go instead.

"It means a lot to me to have K.C. as the coach," Bird said. "I'd rather play in the All-Star Game with my own coach on the bench."

"I could have used the three days off, but Larry messed it up by hitting that shot," Jones said kiddingly. "But if he can hit a shot from behind the backboard the least I can do is to go to Indiana."

In the only other NBA games, Detroit tripped Washington 115-105 and Milwaukee beat San Antonio 106-93.

Bird said a severe angle made him think he had little chance to make the game-winner, but he had no time to adjust his position.

"I took what they gave me, but at first I thought it was going to hit the side of the backboard," he said. "It was a fadeaway, not a great shot."

Everyone else who saw it disagreed.

"The angle behind the glass made it an incredible shot," Celtics guard Danny Ainge said.

"That shot says everything about Larry," Boston's M.L. Carr said.

"The game meant a lot to K.C. and the organization and everyone was saying it was over. But Larry would not be denied. The guy gave 100 per cent all day."

"Obviously, the shot was not impossible for him," Portland Coach Jack Ramsay added. "He's the best player in the league, one of the best of all time. There's nothing he doesn't do extremely well."

Bird hit 17 of 28 field-goal attempts, including a pair of three-point bombs, and all 12 free throws in equalling his scoring high for the season. He also grabbed 10 rebounds.

Robert Parish added 30 points for the Celtics, who are now 20-2 at home and 31-0 in games that they've led after three periods.

The Trail Blazers, who got 25 points from Jim Paxson, 21 from Kiki Vandeweghe, 20 from Mychal Thompson and 19 from Drexler, trailed by seven points with less than four minutes remaining.

But Drexler's 15-footer and free throw climaxed a rally that put Portland ahead 125-124. A layup by Bird with seven seconds remaining preceded Drexler's go-ahead shot

Pistons 115, Bullets 105

Detroit won its eighth straight game as Bill Laimbeer had 27 points and 16 rebounds and John Long added 21 points against Washington.

The Pistons, after leading by seven points at the half, started the third quarter with a 16-7 streak to take a comfortable 80-63 lead.

Jeff Malone, who scored 12 of his game-high 32 points in the period, helped the Bullets cut the deficit to 90-78 going into the final period, but Washington could get no closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

Bucks 106, Spurs 93

Milwaukee also won its eighth straight as Terry Cummings scored 30 points, seven of them in a 26-8 run at the end of the first half that carried the Bucks past San Antonio.

The Central Division-leading Bucks hit 59 percent from the field in the second quarter while outscoring the Spurs 30-23 in the period for a 65-54 halftime lead.

Mike Mitchell led all scorers with 35 points for San Antonio.

Baseball Mystery Continues

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

There is a certain mystery, a certain charm about baseball and it never lets up. Never.

As ex-pitcher Jim Bouton, a keen observer of the sport, once noted, "You spend a good piece of your life gripping the baseball, and in the end it turns out it was the other way around all the time."

That is why the Hall of Fame near-miss that the late Nellie Fox experienced earlier this month produced so much emotion from his followers, fans who were gripped by the infielder's firebrand play a quarter century ago.

Fox came within two votes of election to Cooperstown, receiving 295 votes — 74.6 percent — in a year when 297 was needed for the "pure 75 percent" required. In other years, when less than the 395 veteran writers who cast ballots this year voted, 295 would have been plenty for election.

That's the mystery, the charm. How many writers merely overlooked Fox? How many just forgot to vote in time? How many can truly say they carefully considered his accomplishments — a .288 career batting average, 2,663 hits, 798 consecutive games played at second base, a flawless fielding record — and simply decided he didn't qualify?

At its best, voting for the baseball Hall of Fame is a subjective, less-than-precise science — something like the game itself. You might vote for a player one year and pass him up another time, even though his credentials, obviously, are unchanged.

Many writers struggled with Harmon Killebrew's 256 lifetime batting average weighed against his 573 career home runs. Do you vote for a one-dimensional player? The answer last year was "yes" — in Killebrew's fourth year of eligibility. Others are already agonizing over

Gaylord Perry's 314 lifetime victories and his spittal admissions. Do you vote for a guy who broke the rules? The answer is "perhaps."

Fox's candidacy did not include those dilemmas. He simply had very thorough credentials that were long overlooked.

Too long, as it turned out. Falling two votes short this time, there is almost no question that Fox would have been elected to the Hall of Fame next time. He was too close now for the writers to ignore him again. The irony, though, is that Fox has run out of next times with the writers. This was his 15th and final year of eligibility on the writers' ballot. His name now passes to the veterans committee.

Because the writers don't have another opportunity to vote for him, there has been considerable debate over the possibility of rounding off Fox's 74.6 percent and making it 75 percent to admit him to the Hall of Fame. There is precedent for that because baseball routinely rounds off fractions in computations of batting averages and earned run averages.

The Hall of Fame's Board of Directors considered the matter at its annual meeting today, although there was no formal request for a change in the vote count from the Baseball Writers Association.

Rather than bend the rules to satisfy these strange circumstances, there is a much better solution available, one that would maintain the integrity of the 75 percent requirement while at the same time serving the interests of Fox's followers.

Ordinarily, the candidacy now would require a three-year wait before the veterans committee could consider it. Given the unique nature of his near-miss, why not waive the three-year wait and make Fox eligible for the oldtimers' vote immediately?

Hoyas Still Face Pressure After Loss To St. John's

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Before the season began, Georgetown basketball Coach John Thompson, wondered, "If we're as good as everyone says, why don't they cancel the season and just give us the trophy?" Now that his No. 1-ranked Hoyas have proven to be mere mortals by losing a game, 66-65 to No. 3 St. John's at the Capital Centre Saturday, Thompson was asked if the snapping of the 29-game winning streak lessened the pressure. "Losing never helped me do anything," said Thompson, whose team won the NCAA crown last year. "Pressure has been a lifestyle with us because we'd really gotten accustomed to winning. I don't know what effect it's going to have on us yet. "This program wasn't built on quitting after losing one ball game." Patrick Ewing, the Hoyas' All-America center, added, "I hate to lose anytime. We have to forget about it and move on." The Hoyas, 18-1 overall and 7-1 in the Big East Conference this season, have an opportunity to bounce back tonight in a conference game at No. 11 Syracuse, 12-3, 4-3. Georgetown has had close games with the tougher Big East teams, beating both Boston College and Villanova in overtime, but few doubt the Hoyas will be around Final Four time. If there's any weakness in the Georgetown armor, it's the Hoyas' free-throw shooting which now stands at a woeful 59 percent after hitting only 11 of 22 against the Redmen. "Even with everything that went wrong," said Ewing who had nine points on only seven field-goal attempts, "if we capitalized on a foul shooting we may have won." "We've been sort of snake-bitten by the free throw thing the last few years," Thompson said. "I think you create a problem by over-emphasizing it. We practiced a lot on free throws, and maybe we should stop practicing so much." The Hoyas, who trailed by 18 points with 12:04 remaining, cut it to 59-51 but the free-throw weakness again cost them dearly. Bill Martin missed two one-and-one situations and Ewing blew two free throws. Michael Jackson missed two free throws later in the contest. A free throw by St. John's Chris Mullin with 25 seconds left stood as the margin of victory, raising the Redmen's record to 15-1, 7-0. Jackson scored two baskets after that before time ran out. "Luckily, it was only a 40-minute game," said Mullin, who topped the Redmen with 20 points and got help from Walter Berry, who had 14 points and 13 rebounds. "They keep coming at you in waves," Mullin added. "If you make a turnover then it snowballs." The last team to beat the Hoyas before Saturday was St. John's 75-71, also at the Capital Centre, last February. "A phenomenon, an unusual thing," St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca said. The two teams meet again at Madison Square Garden Feb. 23. Carnesecca and Mullin both believe Georgetown should be No. 1. "I think they're No. 1," said Mullin. "They're a tough team. They've been to the mountain and they might be there again."

Top Slot Remains Open

By The Associated Press Well, who is the No. 1 team in college basketball? It depends on whom you ask. "Who's No. 1? I really don't care. Let Georgetown be No. 1," St. John's center Bill Wennington said Saturday after his third-ranked Redmen beat top-rated Georgetown 66-65. After the game, Georgetown Coach John Thompson said his team — which has been No. 1 all season and took an 18-0 record into the Big East matchup — probably would not be No. 1, and said St. John's probably shouldn't be, either. "What are you going to do, jump from No. 3 to No. 1?" Thompson said. But that was before No. 2 Southern Methodist fell 64-63 to unheralded Texas Tech on Saturday night. So, where does that leave things? St. John's, 15-1, has never been ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press poll. Earlier last week, the Redmen knocked off No. 11 Syracuse 82-80 in overtime. Still, St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca and guard Chris Mullin pressed their case for Georgetown, which was a unanimous selection for

Phils May Send Oliver To Dodgers For Zachry

The much-traveled Al Oliver, a seven-time All-Star with a career batting average of .300, may be ready to pack his suitcases again. Philadelphia Phillies President Bill Giles said Sunday a trade had been worked out to send Oliver to the Los Angeles Dodgers for relief pitcher Pat Zachry. But the deal cannot be completed until Oliver reaches agreement on a contract with the Dodgers. So far, Giles said, the Phillies have not been able to reach Oliver's agent to tell him to contact the Dodgers. Giles said ("General Manager) Paul Owens and (chief scout) Hugh Alexander completed the trade last week. Meanwhile, the San Francisco Giants also rustled the trade winds during the weekend. On Saturday night, they dealt reliever Gary Lavelle to the Toronto Blue Jays for pitcher Jim Gott, minor leaguer pitcher Jack McKnight and infielder Augie Schmidt. And today, a physical examination scheduled for outfielder Jack Clark should determine whether the Giants trade him, along with an unnamed minor-league pitcher, to the St. Louis Cardinals for pitcher Dave LaPoint, outfielder-infielder David Green, infielder Jose Gonzalez and first baseman Gary Rajski. Clark injured his right knee last June 26 and missed the remainder of the season. He underwent surgery on his knee after the season. Sources have indicated both teams have agreed to the six-player swap, pending the examination. Oliver, 38, began the 1984 season with San Francisco, but was traded to Philadelphia in August for two minor-league pitchers. The Phillies had hoped the first baseman could help with the stretch drive, but by the time Oliver got settled in, the team had faded badly in the Na-

Schlesinger OKs TV Version Of His Book

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Gratefully, television didn't tamper too much with his history.

So says Arthur Schlesinger Jr., now a savvy veteran of one television project, after his "Robert Kennedy and His Times" was adapted into a seven-hour miniseries. The second of three parts is on CBS tonight.

Now that he's seen the finished product, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author can puff on his cigar and laugh about some TV-inspired changes. As the saying goes, that's entertainment.

For example, the TV beach at Hyannis Port, Mass., where the Kennedys gathered for vacations and, according to the miniseries, hammered out U.S. policy, was an improvement over the real thing. "The movie version (using a different Cape Cod beach) had waves crashing all the time, and that just wasn't the case," Schlesinger said.

Besides walks on the beach, another Kennedy compound activity was touch football. In the miniseries, patriarch Joe Kennedy (Jack Warden) was a sidelines cheerleader. Not so, says Schlesinger. "Actually he never watched. Joe Kennedy hated touch football." And what about President Lyndon Johnson? Did he really poke Bobby Kennedy in the chest and order his advance man out of New Hampshire before the 1964 primary?

"Whether he put the finger on his chest, I don't know," said the historian. "But it seems to me to be permissible dramatic license. A docudrama is just that — a docudrama, since they didn't have television cameras in the Oval Office at that time."

"Docudramas don't purport to be history. Anyone who wants to actually find out what happened can look at my book," Schlesinger, 67, said in a recent interview at his office at the City University of New York Graduate School, where he is the Albert Schweitzer Professor of Humanities.

Books were stacked everywhere — the floor, chairs, tables. One of them, "Robert Kennedy and His Times," became a miniseries through the efforts of Swift Lazar, wheeler-dealer to the stars. "He's my television agent. I don't have a literary agent," said Schlesinger, who professed to rarely watch TV.

Schlesinger said the resulting transformation from book to screen was never "terribly offensive," adding that he preferred the second half of the miniseries. "The first was much more familiar, the second much more original. In balance, considering the medium, I think they did a good job."

Going into the project, his concerns were that the story would be "vulgarized and soap-operized." Protecting himself by writing the screenplay wasn't an alternative. "That's not my business," he said. "It's a highly specialized job, for which an historian is not competent."

For that same reason, he de-emphasized his consultant's role. Although he saw various scripts and made a few comments, he "didn't want to get too deeply involved. The more involvement you have, the more responsible you get for the result."

He was informed of Brad Davis' casting as Bobby Kennedy, and if he had strenuously objected, he thinks the producers would have listened. "I think that came out very well," he said.

Schlesinger's trepidations about TV trashing his book were enlarged by last season's "Kennedy" miniseries, which concerned President John Kennedy. "The difference comes in the historical fidelity and persuasive characterizations," he said. "The 'Kennedy' docudrama seemed to be sort of a soap opera."

Not so the forceful "Missiles of October," the 1974 TV movie about the Cuban missile crisis. Schlesinger casted." Schlesinger said he didn't expect Ethel Kennedy, Robert's widow, to watch the miniseries because of its painful connections, but he's watching it again, this time with commercials. He thinks it's good for the country's conscience.

"Parts 2 and 3 have great things to say to America," he said. "We're in a mood of complacency, a period of great indifference to injustices and disparities in our society. I think to be reminded of a time when someone like Robert Kennedy tried to get action for these concerns is very important."

'Amadeus' Leads Golden Globe Parade Of Winners

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Amadeus," the life of Mozart as seen through the insanely jealous eyes of another composer, won four Golden Globe awards, leading all other films in the ceremony's 42nd year.

Elizabeth Taylor also won a special tribute from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for her 52-year screen career, and comedian Bill Cosby shared top television honors for his "The Cosby Show" with the incest drama, "Something About Amelia," and the mystery series, "Murder, She Wrote."

Other top film winners were "A Passage to India" and "Romancing the Stone" as the Foreign Press Association unveiled what many in show business see as a preview to the Academy Awards.

"Amadeus" won Golden Globes for best film drama, best actor (F. Murray Abraham), best director (Milos Forman) and best screenplay (by Peter Shaffer).

Abraham, who narrated "Amadeus" as the demented composer Salieri, was absent from the awards ceremony on Saturday. His award was accepted by Tom Hulce, who played Mozart and also had been nominated for best actor.

"Well, after plaguing Salieri's life, I think it's only fitting that Mozart should accept his award," Hulce quipped to a star-studded audience of about 1,000 at the Beverly Hilton.

The British epic "A Passage to India," based on E.M. Forster's novel, was honored as best foreign film, and also won for best supporting actress (Peggy Ashcroft) and best film score (Maurice Jarre).

The film marked the return to the screen of director David Lean after 13 years.

Kathleen Turner was named best actress in a comedy for her portrayal of a timid novelist thrust into a South American treasure hunt in "Romancing the Stone," which was also named best film comedy.

Dudley Moore was a surprise winner as best actor in a film comedy for his portrayal of a newscaster who finds himself married to two pregnant women in "Micki and Maude," edging out Eddie Murphy in "Beverly Hills Cop," Steve Martin in "All of Me," Bill Murray in "Ghostbusters" and Robin Williams in "Moscow on the Hudson."

"I suppose Eddie, Steve, Robin and Bill were just not up to par this year," said an astonished Moore.

Sally Field, who portrayed a Depression-era farm widow in "Places of the Heart," was honored as best actress in a film drama, and Dr. Haing S. Ngor, who played a Cambodian reporter in "The Killing Fields," was voted best supporting film actor.

The best original film song award went to Stevie Wonder for "I Just Called to Say I Love You" from "The Woman in Red."

Angela Lansbury, playing a mystery writer solving real murders, won best television drama actress, and her series, "Murder, She Wrote," was named best drama series.

Bill Cosby won best actor in a television comedy series and "The Cosby Show" was named best comedy series.

Ted Danson picked up the the award for best actor in a mini-series or television film for "Something About Amelia," which was voted best television mini-series or film.

Ann-Margret won a second consecutive Golden Globe for best actress in a television mini-series or film for "A Streetcar Named Desire." Last year, she won for "Who Will Love My Children."

Shelly Long won the award for best actress in a television comedy series for "Cheers," and Tom Selleck was named best television drama series actor for "Magnum P.I."

Paul LeMat, who played the wife-beating husband of "The Burning Bed," was named best supporting television actor. Best supporting television actress was Faye Dunaway in "Ellis Island."

Elizabeth Taylor, introduced by Liza Minnelli, received the Cecil B. DeMille Award for outstanding contribution to the entertainment field. Clips were shown from such films as "National Velvet," "Butterfield Eight," "Cleopatra" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

Crossroads of the Mideast

Israel recently announced it would soon begin pulling its troops out of Lebanon. That Middle Eastern nation has been ruled or occupied by other nations many times since antiquity. The Romans occupied Lebanon in 64 A.D. Two main mountain ranges run north and south through the country — the Lebanon Mountains near the ocean and the Anti-Lebanon mountains near Syria. King Solomon used wood from the famed "cedars of Lebanon" when he built his temple in Jerusalem.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the President of Lebanon?

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ10854 ♥93 ♦AK6 ♣86
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?

A. — You have a one spade overall, and that's the bid you should make. You are not quite good enough to double and then bid spades, especially since you are not really prepared to play in another suit. An overall need not deny a pretty good hand.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A105 ♥QJ7 ♦J63 ♣QJ92
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1♦ Dble 1NT ?

What action do you take?
A. — Something doesn't quite add up here. Partner should have a near opening bid for his vulnerable takeout double, you have 11 HCP and both opponents are bidding! You must tell partner that this is your hand, and the way to accomplish that is to double.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ654 ♥Q5 ♦Q7 ♣AK83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1NT Pass 3♦ Pass
 4♦ Pass 5♦ Pass
 5♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A. — You started a cue-bidding sequence, giving partner the chance to cue-bid a red ace in response. When he chose not to do so, you can only trust him and presume that either your side is missing both red aces or partner has decided that his hand is not suitable for slam purposes. Pass.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQ1063 ♥AQ54 ♦7 ♣AQ3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1♦ Pass
 4♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A. — Had North not been a passed hand, his leap to four spades would have been preemptive and you would have passed. As a passed hand, however, it shows a good hand, almost the equivalent of an opening bid. No matter what he holds, you should have excellent play for slam, and we suggest you get there quickly — by jumping to six spades.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ ♥AKJ92 ♦AQ6 ♣AKJ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2♥ Pass 2NT Pass
 3NT Pass 4♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A. — Partner can't have too much — after all, he didn't respond to your demand bid with three diamonds. However, even if he has nothing more than six diamonds to the king, the small slam should be virtually a laydown. Bid six diamonds.

Q.6 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A10652 ♥7 ♦A854 ♣762
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1♦ Dble Pass ?

What action do you take?
A. — At this vulnerability, it is tempting to convert partner's takeout double to penalties by passing. Resist! You have the wrong trump holding for that action because you are sitting under declarer. For the moment be content to simply bid two diamonds.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — PRETTY ACE JOURNALIST, JUDY, IS KNOWN TO CO-WORKERS AS A PAPER DOLL.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals X

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Demonstrators Jailed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of anti-riot police charged through a crowded shopping district today, clubbing and arresting demonstrators who were supporting a citywide transportation strike.

Witnesses said they counted at least 50 injured and 10 people taken away by police.

Police earlier clashed with hundreds of striking "jeepney" drivers and their supporters in a downtown university district. Some schools closed for the day and thousands of passengers were stranded.

Traffic remained normal, however, in most parts of the metropolitan area of 8 million people, with colorful jeepneys filling the streets. The modified jeeps form the Philippines' most popular mode of public transportation, although they have recently been augmented by a modern elevated transit train on one major Manila route.

The strikers were protesting a recent 10 percent cut in jeepney fares while most other prices have increased. The cut followed a slight dip in gasoline prices.

Problems With Safety Seats Remain Although Deaths Drop

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Highway safety experts say use of the child safety seat has reduced traffic deaths among small children, but they are concerned that too often the seats are not being used properly — or not used at all.

Alarmed by the situation, the National Transportation Safety Board brought together auto manufacturers, safety experts and government officials for a symposium today on how to get greater use of the seats that 49 states now require by law.

A new study by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration shows that during the last six months of 1984, the usage rate of child seats for children 5 years old or younger was only 49.3 percent, although somewhat higher — 69.2 percent — for infants.

More alarming, the safety experts say, is another study that shows many child safety seats in cars are used incorrectly, resulting in only partial protection, said Patricia Goldman, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Of 1,006 automobiles with child safety seats observed at parking lots of a fast food chain in 10 cities, 64.6 percent of them were misused, according to the study done for highway safety administration. The report said the most common problem was that the seats either were not properly secured or the children were not strapped in snugly.

Ms. Goldman suggested in an interview that some parents misuse the seats because they are in a hurry or "have some other excuse." But she said other cases of misuse are the result of designs and complicated instructions that confuse parents and lead to improper installation.

Automobile design also contributes to the problem since many standard safety seats are not designed to accommodate a child seat.

Tennessee became the first state in the nation in 1978 to require vehicle safety seats for children under the age of 4. In recent years, 48 additional states have enacted similar laws. The holdout is Wyoming, where Ms. Goldman said there are solid indications child safety belt legislation will be enacted this year.

Nevertheless, federal safety officials say, there are still 600 fatalities and 50,000 serious injuries among small children in traffic accidents each year.

NTSB investigators say that even a seat that is not used properly can save a child's life. But improper installation can mean the difference between serious injury and a minor scratch.

That was the case in an accident in Pine County, Minn., in January 1983, when a car carrying a woman and her 20-month old daughter collided with a pickup truck. The child was strapped in a safety seat, but the harness was not strapped properly for the infant's size and weight.

As a result of the improper routing of the harness straps, the infant

"sustained a serious whiplash injury — a contusion of the spinal cord resulting in paralysis," an NTSB report concluded.

Ms. Goldman said there are "a lot of design questions" that still must be resolved by the seat manufacturers. She suggested a need for greater standardization to prevent confusion in use and installation.

The NTSB also has recommended that automakers be required to provide anchors for safety seats with tether straps because such seats often aren't secured properly.

Ms. Goldman also suggested that conventional seat belt design needs to be changed to better accommodate child safety seats. Many are designed to be secured in the center position of the rear seat using the car's safety belts. If the safety seat is placed near a window or beside the driver, however, the belts often do not provide a secure anchor, she said.

Westmoreland Trial Moves Into 16th Week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS lawyers have turned to a third former CIA analyst to buttress arguments that Vietnam War intelligence data was distorted, a claim that led to retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit.

Douglas Parry, who worked for the CIA during the Vietnam War, had just begun to testify Thursday when the trial in U.S. District Court recessed for its usual three-day weekend break.

Parry was scheduled to return to the witness stand today as the trial entered its 16th week.

Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. troops in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, says he was defamed by a 1982 broadcast which falsely accused him of suppressing reports showing higher-than-expected communist strength shortly before the January 1968 Tet offensive.

Parry, now a partner in a Salt Lake City law firm, had testified in a deposition that estimates of enemy strength issued by Westmoreland's command were "analytically low" and "public propaganda, to show that the war was being won." Those were essentially the conclusions of "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," which said that Westmoreland, in order to maintain political support for the war, insisted on a "ceiling" of 300,000 enemy troops, despite evidence that the true figure was more than 500,000.

Earlier, lawyers for the network obtained similar testimony from Samuel A. Adams, a one-time CIA analyst who became a consultant to the network, helped produce the documentary and is a co-defendant in Westmoreland's suit, and from George Allen, a long-time Vietnam specialist who was Adams' mentor at the CIA.

Westmoreland says the program falsely accused him of misleading his superiors, including President Lyndon B. Johnson, about the progress of the war.

25 Perish In Bus Crash

TOKYO (AP) — A chartered bus taking college students to a ski resort crashed through a guardrail today on a snow-covered road and fell 12 feet into a reservoir, killing 25 people, police said.

Spokesman Masataka Kanaki of the Nagano state police said 21 people escaped or were pulled by divers from the bus, which sank in a 30-foot deep reservoir of the Sai River on the outskirts of Nagano City, about 100 miles northwest of Tokyo. Eight those rescued were hospitalized.

The dead included eight men and 14 women students and an official of Nihon Welfare University in Aichi state, central Japan. They departed Sunday night for Shiga Heights, Japan's most popular ski resort. Two drivers of the bus also were killed.

Eight divers from a nearby dam helping in the rescue operation counted 25 bodies in the vehicle, of which only the rear remained above the surface of the artificial lake, Kanaki said.

The bus, one of three chartered by the university, ran off National Highway No. 19 shortly before dawn, police said. The two other buses arrived at Shiga Heights unaware of the accident.

A similar accident occurred Jan. 2, 1975, when a packed bus plunged into Lake Aoki in Nagano state, about 17 miles west of Nagano City, and 22 skiers drowned.

Baker Expected To Breeze To Treasury Post Approval

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, exercising its constitutional power of "advise and consent" on the first batch of nominations of President Reagan's second term, is expected to give overwhelming approval this week to James A. Baker III as treasury secretary.

"I don't imagine anyone will vote against him," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who has scheduled a vote on the nomination by the full Senate on Tuesday.

Baker, Reagan's chief of staff for the past four years, was unanimously endorsed last week by the Senate Finance Committee.

Baker is switching jobs with the current treasury secretary, Donald T. Regan. The vote on his nomination is expected to be the first major action of the 99th Congress, which convened on Jan. 3 but has met only briefly since then.

The Senate will also hold confirmation hearings this week on William J. Bennett, named to be education secretary, and on one controversial nomination that languished most of last year and that died with the end of the 98th Congress. That nomination, of Edwin Meese III to be attorney general, was resubmitted recently by Reagan.

Bennett's nomination was scheduled before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee today; Meese will be the lead-off witness on Tuesday before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Majority-party Republicans on the Judiciary Committee predict the panel will recommend confirmation of Meese and that the full Senate will go along.

Meese originally went before the committee last March, but no action was taken on the nomination while an independent counsel investigated allegations of misconduct.

However, the counsel, Jacob A. Stein, subsequently found "no basis" to prosecute Meese for criminal wrongdoing, although he declined to reach any conclusions on whether Meese violated ethics regulations in his financial dealings and other matters.

Both the House and Senate were to meet today, but the sessions were expected to be brief and not deal with legislation.

House Democrats also were to hold a party caucus today to firm up committee assignments for 1984, while House Republicans were to complete the job of naming their members to committee vacancies Tuesday. The full House will ratify the assignments on Wednesday.

Little work was scheduled all week in either chamber, although House Republicans may make a move midweek to force the seating of Republican Rick McIntyre of Indiana.

McIntyre, whom the House has refused to seat despite his certification from the state of Indiana, claims a recent recount shows that he defeated former Democratic Rep. Frank McCloskey by 415 votes.

The Democrat-controlled House has refused to seat either contender until a review is completed by the House Administration Committee.

Off the floor, Republican Senate leaders will continue the effort this week to craft their own deficit-reduction package to help trim federal deficits of $200-billion-plus by about $50 billion this year.

Senate leaders have set Friday as a deadline for when committee chairmen should submit recommended budget cuts in programs under their jurisdiction; but the process was complicated last week when Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, refused to cooperate.

Goldwater said he wanted to see what kind of defense spending levels would be contained in the president's budget, to be formally submitted to Congress a week from today.

Dole has said the impasse over defense spending could hamper efforts of Republicans to come up with a budget package.

Reagan's budget is expected to contain some form of freeze on federal spending, a concept which has wide bipartisan support in Congress. However, the administration's plan to also push for tax simplification this year seems to be running into trouble in both the House and the Senate.

Bennett, Reagan's nominee to be Education secretary, is expected to win easy approval from both the Labor and Human Resources Committee. Bennett has been chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities since late 1981.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has said he wants to question Bennett about hiring practices at the endowment and Bennett's refusal to meet a request by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission that federal agencies report on their minority hiring goals.

In other congressional action this week, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the new chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on Thursday is opening what he promises will be a sweeping review of U.S. foreign policy.

The committee will first hear from Secretary of State George Shultz, then from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. Others who have agreed to testify over six weeks of hearings are former Secretaries of State Henry Kissinger, Dean Rusk, Alexander Haig and Cyrus Vance, and former Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Gas Prices Fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices continued a four-month slide toward $1 a gallon last week, and many service stations nationwide were already selling regular leaded gasoline for less than a dollar, an industry analyst said.

Unleaded gasolines, however, generally remained above the dollar-a-gallon threshold, said Dan Lundberg, publisher of the oil-oriented Lundberg Letter.

His bi-weekly 50-state survey of 17,500 service stations found thousands of stations already selling regular leaded gasoline for less than a dollar a gallon, both self-serve and full-serve.
