County Wants 911 Emergency System

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, at a meeting with mayors and town administrators of the municipalities in the county Thursday night, proposed the implementation of a county-wide 911 emergency telephone system and the establishment of a new emergency communications center to handle emergency law enforcement, fire and rescue calls.

Board Chairman Kelly Barnhill told the city officials that a county-wide system would allow residents of the county to reach emergency assistance by dialing a three-digit number — 9-1-1 — rather than one of the 15 seven-digit emergency numbers now in use in the county.

Barnhill also said that if the 911 system is placed in operation, a new emergency communications center will be established at the county office building on West Fifth Street, under the supervision of a director reporting directly to the county manager.

A users board, composed of representatives of emergency agencies throughout the county, Barnhill said, would be treated to establish policy and operating procedures for the new center.

"We realize there are different needs in each municipality," Barnhill said. So he suggested a committee composed of representatives from each municipality be created "to work up a specific proposal ... (on) what each municipality would like to have in 911."

Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner told the city officials "some of the concerns I'm hearing" from various areas of the county include "we'd like to do our own dispatching." The system is designed, Joyner said, to allow local agencies to do their own dispatching if they wish to.

Barnhill said that six new employees would be required if the central communications center were to do all the dispatching for all towns in the county, including Greenville, which would add $107,200 to the present $146,600 communications center budget. But he said if Ayden, Bethel, Farmville and Greenville wish to continue to do their own dispatching, the present nine employees might be enough to staff the center.

"I just think we're building an empire," Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger suggested. "It's a heck of a lot better to keep it (dispatching) on a local level."

But Grifton Mayor Ralph Thaxton said, "Grifton doesn't have a dispatcher. To us it's ideal."

"I'm personally in favor of 911," Greenville City Manager Gail Meeks said. But she said "we would prefer to dispatch our own calls."

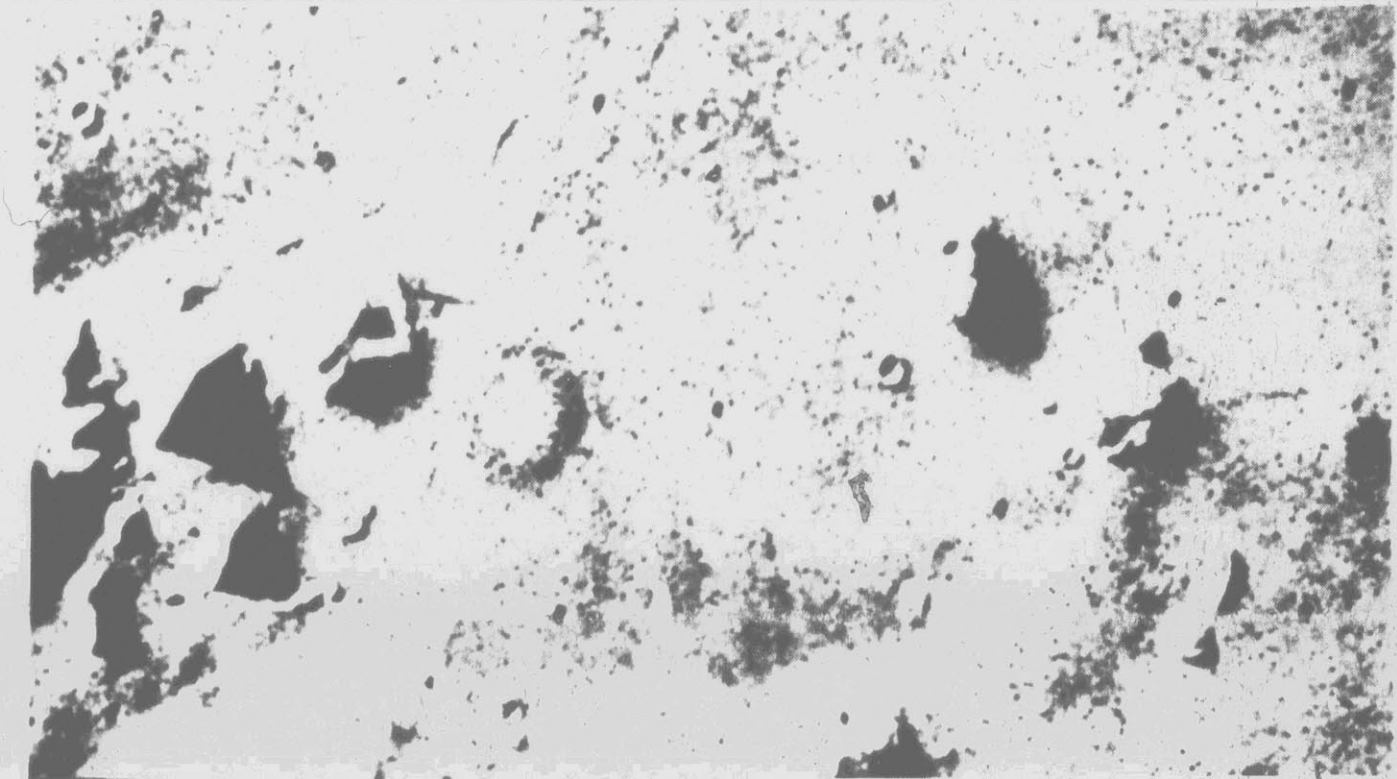

Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway said "it worries me about the cost," but he said, in putting in 911, "we will be expanding what we have. It looks like to me that we will be expanding our capabilities."

"I appreciate the County Commissioners inviting us here tonight. I know we can work it out," Hemingway said.

The Ayden town board is considering the installation of a 911 system which would serve the area covered by the Ayden telephone exchange, and Persinger told the gathering, "You all can have all you want of it (a county-wide 911 system.) I don't think Ayden wants any part of it."

"I don't think anybody wants to take anything away from anybody," Joyner said. But he pointed out that if Ayden installs a 911 system in the 746 exchange area, Ayden would receive 911 emergency calls from portions of areas presently served by Eastern Pines Fire and Rescue departments, Winterville Fire and Rescue departments, Grifton Fire and Rescue departments, and Black Jack and Gardnersville Fire departments.

The city officials then agreed to establish a committee to work out details for a 911 system.

FACE OF MARS — A group of scientists studying photographs of the face of Mars made in 1976 contend that features shown above indicate cosmic colliding cards were left on the planet by visitors thousands of years ago. They point to what appears to be a mile-long monkey's face (in box) and four

Reagan Proposes $973.7 Billion Budget For '85

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will send Congress a $973.7 billion budget for the next fiscal year, just 1.5 percent above the current spending total, administration officials said today.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the figure, while higher than projected spending for fiscal 1985, remains consistent with Reagan's effort to freeze overall spending for federal programs.

Although Speakes refused to confirm the total spending figure reported today by The New York Times, he told reporters he "wouldn't guide you off of it." Another official, when promised anonymity, said the number was accurate.

Speakes said the 1.5 percent increase in total spending included interest payments on the national debt, which the government cannot control and does not count when reporting its outlays for specific federal programs.

The administration estimates total spending for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 at $959.1 billion.

Farm Credit Revisions Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, under fire over a growing farm credit crisis, has offered to ease the rules for $630 million in agricultural loan guarantees if GOP lawmakers agree to a sharply slashed farm budget.

To try to win their support, Budget Director David Stockman and Agriculture Secretary John Block convened today with both Democratic and Republican senators as well as representatives from four state Farm Bureau groups: Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa.

"We're trying to arrive at some solution on how to infuse money" into the farm credit system, said Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb. Zorinsky said some action has to come within four weeks or "I think you're going to see some violent reaction in the grain belt."

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said he expects action soon.

The credit proposal, as outlined by several lawmakers who attended the closed meetings, calls for:

— A rewriting of the rules for the loan guarantee programs announced last September, so that banks could offer interest-rate relief to qualifying new borrowers in return for a 90 percent federal loan guarantee. Current rules call for at least a 10 percent writedown in the loan principal, which banks say is too costly for them. Because of that reluctance, only $25 million of the $630 million has been used so far.

— Establishment of a farm credit coordinating group, including the agriculture secretary, the Federal Reserve, the comptroller of the currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

— Special action teams in the Farmers Home Administration, which administers the loan program, to go into the field and speed processing of loan paperwork.

— An easing of pressure on farm banks by federal regulators, pressure which bankers say is forcing them to foreclose on some farm borrowers prematurely and is making them reluctant to extend new loans, even to farmers who are in relatively good financial shape.

While several members of Congress expressed approval for the credit proposal, there was no immediate agreement, and another meeting was scheduled today.

Church Ministries United gave away $16,786 and served 559 persons during 1984, according to a report issued by CMU in January.

Nineteen churches — Gloria Dei Lutheran, Jarvis Memorial United Methodist, St. Gabriel's Catholic, St. Paul's Episcopal, Our Redeemer Lutheran, Oakmont Baptist, First Christian, First Presbyterian, St. Timothy Episcopal, St. Peter's Catholic, Hooker Memorial Christian, Hollywood Presbyterian, Greenville Seventh-Day Adventist, First Free Will Baptist, St. James United Methodist, Peace Presbyterian, First Pentecostal Holiness, Holy Trinity United Methodist and Immanuel Baptist — contributed $16,876.59.

In addition, 15 individuals, Sunday School classes, Women's church groups, the CROP Walk, and a book club contributed and three persons who had been assisted repaid assistance that had been given them. Of the 559 persons helped, monetary assistance was given to 274. The rest were counseled with and/or referred to other agencies and programs. Some $9,653 was spent on utility bills; $5,225.27 on rent payments; $1,243.08 on fuel oil and gas bills; $196.32 on bus tickets and motor fuel; $95.75 on medications, $103.86 to repair a fuel tank, $150.73 for an emergency mobile home payment, $110 for a school fee and $8.54 for food.

Ten volunteers worked 9 to noon Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, except during June, July and August. Incorporation of the non-profit organization was completed, so contributions directly to CMU can be tax-deductible.

The program's director, Mrs. Jack Wilkerson, said, "We continued our practice of trying to discourage persons from getting into the habit of asking for assistance, but rather to try to take care of themselves and their families whenever that is possible. We know from the numbers of people we see, the kinds of situations we come across, and the gaps, widening of late, between the help available in the community and persons who need help that what we do is needed service. It's one we perform willingly for our churches."

Ed Garrison, social service department director, said he has found CMU "a very valuable service, someone in the community to whom we can send people when there's just nothing more we can do."

Mrs. Wilkerson said more CMU volunteers are needed so hours of service at the Dickinson Avenue office can be extended this year. Anyone wishing to help by donation or volunteer service and other churches interested in being a part of this way of contributing to the needy of the Greenville area may contact Church Ministries United, P.O. Collecting Stuffed Animals Need Not Be Embarrassing

By RHONDA EBBERS
Eau Claire Leader-Telegram
EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — James Benning is an arctophile.

If that's Greek to you, try this modern-day translation: lover of bears. Teddy bears, to be exact. And if you think that's a little strange for anyone old enough to tie his own shoelaces, Benning can call upon his expertise as a professor of psychology at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire to explain that an attraction to teddy bears is normal at any age.

"Often you get a bear or stuffed animal when you're little," he says, "and that bear represents security." The bear comes to be "a symbol of faithfulness, trustworthiness, loyalty. Bears never tell. You can tell them secrets ... and they're always there."

In scientific terms, he says teddy bears have a "solacing effect" on young and old. As troubled adults look for psychological comfort, he explains, it's only natural for them to return to their trusted childhood friend.

Bears are so deserving of Benning's professional regard that he maintains a teddy bear file, brings bears to some classes for discussion, and delivers teddy talks to civic groups.

Among the tidbits in the expert's file:

— A book on how to make stuffed teddy bears that includes an introductory chapter on the history of the creature. The most accepted explanation has them named after President Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt because he refused to shoot a cub or sickly bear that had been caught by a member of his hunting party.

— The Arctophile, a newsletter for bear collectors. It explains that arctophile comes from the Greek "arkto," meaning bear, and "philos," meaning friend or love.

— An article reporting on studies at three universities that found 80 percent of all female and 40 percent of all male students keep a teddy bear or other stuffed animal in their room.

But Benning's interest goes beyond the professional. "They are all unique," he explains, sitting in his campus office stuffed with books and "bearaphernalia" accumulated in his 27 years at the west-central Wisconsin university. "They have different expressions. They have a quality about them that's intriguing."

Benning traces his affair with bears to his childhood — yes, he had a teddy bear — and to the bears he and his wife, Carol, have given to their three children.

At first, Benning found himself buying "a bear here and a bear there." Now he has bears everywhere.

His campus office contains just the bear necessities: a few teddies, a bear calendar, an "anatomy of the teddy bear" poster and the like.

The rest of the professor's four to five dozen bears stay at home, where the three bears first given to his children sit in their own chairs in front of the fireplace.

Then there's the bearaphernalia. He has a bear mug, teddy tray, pens, a "bear lovers are the best" T-shirt, note pads — and a lot more.

Benning has also made 15 to 20 teddy bears of different sizes and styles. Perhaps out of respect for his furry friends, Benning doesn't sell his handmade bears. They become gifts for family and friends on special occasions, such as birthdays and weddings.

"It's the satisfaction of creating something that makes people feel good and brings a smile," he says.

And that's the reaction Benning says he usually gets from people who find out about his hobby.

Indeed, he says there has been a real increase in interest in teddy bears. He points to books and newsletters about bears and stores that specialize in teddy sales.

That's good news if Benning is right when he says: "Anybody who likes teddy bears can't be all bad."

Tell Gentleman Friend That You'll Help Tip

DEAR ABBY: What advice have you for a lady when she is out to dinner in a top restaurant with an older gentleman she knows to be very well-to-do, and he leaves a very poor tip? The service on all of these occasions was excellent. Abby, I'm talking about a "tip" of $1 for a dinner check in the neighborhood of $50.

This has occurred several times with the same gentleman. So far, I've pretended not to notice, but I've been so embarrassed that I've considered leaving a few dollars of my own on the table. Of course, I'd do this subtly so he wouldn't see me.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: (A) Tell him you'd be glad to "pitch in" for the tip if he's a little short. (B) Add enough of your own money to his to make it a respectable tip. But why be subtle? If he sees you, so what? It might help loosen the old tightwad up a bit.

DEAR ABBY: Help me, please! My doctor has informed me that I have to have both breasts removed. He said a reconstructive plastic surgeon could give me implants that would make me look normal—even pretty!

My problem is my husband. He's against it. He says it's just for "looks," and I don't need breasts for him. Abby, I am not a vain woman, but I want breasts for myself. I've already seen the plastic surgeon, who explained the implant operation, and my hopes are so high. It would mean the world to me.

My husband is very tight with a dollar and says he's not going to waste his money on breasts I don't need, and for a woman my age it would be just that—a waste. (I'm 48 and he's 70.)

Abby, do you think I'm a terrible woman to want breasts? Please help me to persuade my husband. I have no money of my own and I don't have much time. Thank you.

NEEDS YOUR HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You are not a "terrible woman" to want breasts; you're honest and courageous.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I've enjoyed French Silk Chocolate Pie several times in restaurants, but I've never been able to obtain the recipe. Do you have it? — DESSERT FAN.

DEAR DESSERT FAN: The recipe for French Silk Chocolate Pie first appeared in 1951, when it won $1,000 in a bake-off contest. The prize-winner was Mrs. Kendall Cooper of Silver Springs, Md. Nowadays, Mrs. Cooper lives in Kensington, Md., and is personal secretary to a U.S. senator.

The pie, perhaps because its mousse-type filling was new to American cooks, caught on and was widely served in restaurants and by home cooks.

We tried the original 1951 bake-off recipe and found its directions were excellent. — C.B.

FRENCH SILK CHOCOLATE PIE
1/2 cup butter, cut into 8 equal pats
3/4 cup sugar
1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled

1 teaspoon vanilla
2 large eggs
8-inch baked pastry shell
Whipped cream (for garnish)

In a small mixing bowl, cream butter and sugar. Beat in chocolate and vanilla until blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating with an electric mixer at medium speed, for 5 minutes after each addition. Turn into pastry shell. Chill. Garnish with whipped cream.

SUPPER FOR FOUR
Creole Seafood & Rice Salad & Bread Basket
Maple Custard & Coffee
MAPLE CUSTARD

3 large egg whites
1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cups milk
Maple Syrup

In a medium bowl gently beat whites until slightly foamy. Add sugar, vanilla and milk; beat gently until sugar dissolves. If very foamy, let stand until foam subsides. Pour 1 tablespoon maple syrup into each of four 6-ounce custard cups. Pour egg white mixture over syrup. Place cups in a baking pan (about 8 by 8 by 2 inches); add very hot tap water to the pan so the water comes up about as high as egg white mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a metal knife inserted halfway between rim and center comes out clean — about 50 minutes. Cool quickly by standing cups in a pan of cold water. Chill. Serve in cups. Makes 4 servings.

Disposal Is Problem

The magnitude of America's problems in disposing of its toxic wastes is ever-growing in the public's perception.

One more instance was reported by The Charlotte Observer in a Sunday edition. It's safe to assume that with the passage of time other instances of potentially fearful dumpings will surface.

This particular one involved between 300 and 500 barrels of a powerful chemical warfare compound buried in a chemical company landfill near Asheville. (The exact number of barrels appears unknown...possibly just undisclosed.)

Two drums apparently containing the chemical (they were so marked) popped out of the ground where they had been buried at the landfill site.

We are told the chemical wastes were neutralized with a special solution before burial; we are further told (unofficially) the neutralizing solution didn't always work, but a production overseer has expressed confidence in its effectiveness. What are we to think?

An Environmental Protection Agency spokesman said that agency will proceed with the landfill cleanup "prepared for the worst".

The EPA has the landfill site on its superfund cleanup list primarily because of acid lagoons that leaked into the ground several years ago. Now there is one more reason.

Risks entailed in the chemical warfare mix dumping are still to be characterized as potential; but this instance, as do others, underscores a certain quality of uncertainties over neutralizing capabilities as well as to actual quantities of dumped toxics.

It may dismay any observer that the EPA cleanups appear to move at snailpace until one remembers the scope of their assigned task. Surveys, assigning priorities, assembling work crews and equipment are all part of a time-consuming process.

The disposal problem is undeniably big and is growing. We've got a mess on our hands.

Shifts In Kremlin

Foreign observers are pretty much in agreement that USSR President Constantin Chernenko is fast approaching an end to his ability to meet the responsibilities as head of government, and talk of his successor is rife.

Attention has turned to his possible successor. Whoever it may be, he will represent another generation with an accompanying puzzle as to the direction his leadership will adopt.

Two presumed factors are present: the possibility of renewed vigor he represents, coupled with different attitudes resulting from personal experiences and background; all of which will be pitted against the continuing power of the Old Guard and they, as "king-makers, are in a position to limit authority of the new chief of state to something less than that enjoyed by his predecessors.

If a guess is appropriate, the latter appears more probable in the early stages of the newcomer's leadership.

In any event, it is reasonable to anticipate any real shifts in Kremlin policies will be slow in coming.

Lame-Duck Congressmen Take Trips

WASHINGTON — Taxpayers will soon be able to review the extent to which lame-duck congressmen traveled at government expense during the last three months of the year. Foreign travel reports for the first nine months of 1984 are already on file with the House Office of Records and Registration. Among those who took trips are numerous members who had previously announced their retirement plans or had been defeated in a primary earlier in the year.

Three months after former representative Katie Hall (D-Ind.) lost a

May primary, she toured West Germany, Switzerland, Spain and the Netherlands. Hall made the $6,100 "fact-finding mission" as chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Subcommittee on Census and Population. It was her first and only foreign trip on subcommittee business.

Ex-representative Abraham Kazen (D-Tex.) also lost in May, only to take a trip in August. As a member of an Armed Services Committee group, he ostensibly went to inspect allied defenses in Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden and the Netherlands. The taxpayers' bill for the journey was $7,099.40.

Two retiring congressmen also made sure to indulge in free travel at least one last time. For Barber Conable (R-N.Y.), the stops were in Israel and Portugal; the bill, more than $8,500. In Washington Republican Joel Pritchard's case, the countries were different — Australia, New Zealand and Indonesia — but the bill about the same.

Each of the travelers may have hit the road while still a sitting member of Congress. But, given their brief time left in office, they'd all have a tough time arguing that their junkets were a good investment of federal revenues.

Unfortunately, the public often doesn't learn of a trip until it's long over. If elected officials would be more forthcoming, and the press more vigilant, the non-pleasure trips could be separated from the rest. A soon-to-be-ex-congressman or senator shouldn't be able to soak taxpayers so easily.

The Gallup International Research Institute recently asked people in 19 nations whether there was at least a 50 percent chance of a world war breaking out in the next decade. In only one of the countries, Columbia, did more than half (58 percent) of the respondents answer affirmatively. The U.S. had the second highest "yes" quotient, with 47 percent; in Costa Rica, Australia, the Philippines and Uruguay, the percentage of affirmative answers was also 40, or more. Norwegians were the least pessimistic; only 25 percent of them said there'd be a world war by 1994.

West German Defense Minister Kurt Wuerzbach said last week that U.S. forces in his country possess 100 nuclear mines. He declined to acknowledge whether NATO plans to plant the "backpack" bombs behind enemy lines in the event of a superpower confrontation. According to U.S. military experts, the portable weapons might be used to supplement conventional explosives.

As one might have expected, college students who registered to vote last year were more likely to call themselves Republicans than Democrats. The 55-percent-to-32-percent edge (13 percent of the newly-registered students called themselves independent) was bigger than that which Republicans enjoyed among new registrants as a whole (49 percent to 38 percent).

More polls: U.S. teachers apparently think highly of themselves, according to a Gallup Organization survey. When academics were asked to rank professions in terms of their contributions to society, teachers placed themselves at the head of the class.

A "Poor Taste Award" might go to the demonstrators who, on inauguration night, hoisted a placard with the slogan "Hinckley for President" outside the Washington Hilton, one of the many ball sites that President Reagan was going to visit.

School Tenure Question Debated

RALEIGH — Do public school principals and assistant principals need tenure?

The N.C. Association of School Boards says no. The N.C. Association of Educators says yes. When the legislature tries to decide what it should say, one of the most inflammable elements of the whole issue of merit pay for educators might be ignited.

The school boards group says the merit pay plan for school administrators should be limited to those principals and assistant principals willing to give up their tenure. If a principal chooses not to do so, he would not be eligible for participation in the new program.

Jan Holem, lobbyist for the school boards, says eliminating tenure would make principals more accountable. If a merit pay plan is to work, then principals must be good evaluators of teachers. In turn, the local school board must be able to get rid of principals who don't measure up.

"Getting rid of the mediocre people is what is really tough," she says. "It is not tough at all to get rid of somebody if they're really bad." The current tenure law takes care of that situation. "The tenure law isn't market sensitive. You can't replace mediocre people with excellent people simply because the law has been on the side of the employee, not the children," she says.

John Dornan, executive director of NCAE, doesn't see things that way. He says the school boards are "trying to change the rules after we've begun the game. When the state board (of education) got districts to apply for the pilot projects of the career ladder (merit pay) program, they said there would not be a change in the tenure law. No one even mentioned it."

Dornan argues that tenured principals and assistant principals give a measure of stability to the public schools.

"There is a great deal of turnover in the ranks of the superintendents. It's running on an average of every four or five years," he said. If a new superintendent could come in and clean house of all school principals, then the public schools would come under a sort of political spoils system, he said. Every time a superintendent left a school district, all the principals would be vulnerable to being fired by the new boss.

Ray Sarbaugh, executive director of the N.C. Association of School Administrators, is caught in the middle. His group has as members both principals who favor tenure and superintendents who do not. Therefore, the group has not taken a stand on the issue. Still, it is an issue which Sarbaugh says he hears a great deal about.

Sarbaugh said there are several other arguments being made. Those who oppose tenure argue that it means a guaranteed lifetime job.

"Some feel that is an unreasonable degree of security," he said. Also, opponents of tenure argue that a school board and superintendent must be able to select middle management personnel without all the constraints of the tenure law.

Sarbaugh says he also hears from those who want to keep the tenure law. A principal catches grief from all sides, he said. Teachers and parents complain. The school board and the superintendent complain. If a principal is to make the correct decisions, he must be secure in the knowledge that he won't be penalized. Supporters of tenure argue that it keeps principals insulated from political pressures.

For years, the school boards have been trying to get rid of all educator tenure — and they've gotten nowhere. This year, however, they think they may break through with principals and assistant principals.

JOLTED BACK TO REALITY!

Great Words Spoken

Now that the inauguration is over, historians can ponder some of the great words spoken during the weekend by spokesmen who participated in the events.

Probably the most memorable were not uttered by President Reagan in his inaugural address but by Frank Sinatra, who told "Entertainment Tonight's" Barbara Howar, "You're all dead, every one of you. You're all dead."

At the time it was believed Mr. Sinatra was reacting to a piece about him in the Washington Post concerning his association with Hollywood's so-called "Rat Pack," said he was addressing the media in general when he made the remark.

But after giving it a lot of thought, Washington historians are now divided on the meaning of the singer's outburst.

Last Friday night the issue was discussed at the "I Did It My Way Bar and Grill."

A reporter from the National Review said, "I can't believe Frank was talking about the press. No one let him finish his sentence. What he was trying to tell us was that we were all dead if we didn't support President Reagan's 'Star Wars' program."

"Then why didn't he say that?" the New York Times man asked.

"Because he just assumed that anyone with intelligence knew where he was coming from."

A columnist from the Washington Post disagreed. "I ran the tape of his remarks over and over again and he was talking about the media. The only thing I still haven't decided is whether he meant it figuratively or literally."

"I'm sure he didn't mean it literally," a lady from Women's Wear Daily said. "Even Frank Sinatra couldn't put out a contract on every person covering the inauguration. My interpretation of his remarks is that we were all dead as far as talking to him was concerned."

"But we've all been dead for years in Frank's mind," a CBS reporter protested. "That's not news."

"It was only news," I said, "because Frank was in charge of the inaugural gala. I'm inclined to go along with my colleague from the National Review that Sinatra's words were misinterpreted. I have it from a high source in the Surgeon General's office that what Frank was really trying to say is that we'd all be dead if we had to cover the inaugural parade in minus-20-degree weather. His main concern was that we would bundle up and keep warm."

Miss Howar, the only one who had been there, said, "He didn't sound as if he was worried about me getting pneumonia."

"Frank never likes to show his true feelings," I told her. "Every time a sparrow falls he cries."

The Washington Post reporter refused to be persuaded. "I still believe he wanted us all dead. Maybe not dead dead, but enough so we would never write about him again."

A photographer from People Magazine said, "Is it possible Frank was saying we'd all be dead if we bet on the Miami Dolphins in the Super Bowl?"

"Could be," I agreed. "Now that you mention it, Frank was always a big '49ers fan."

The Wall Street Journal man said, "The big question is, if Sinatra was referring only to the media, was he speaking for the administration or just himself?"

"Ronald Reagan doesn't want us all dead," Sam Donaldson said. "I talk to him every day."

"What about the CIA?"

"No one knows who they want dead, and who they don't," a reporter from Jack Anderson's office mused.

I insisted on having the last word. "I don't believe we're in a position to judge what Frank meant by his remarks. The important thing is they will be remembered long after all the other 1985 inaugural utterances are forgotten, and will be an inspiration to generations of inaugural gala chairmen for years to come."

Strength For Today

Some people crave sweets because they have a definite taste for sweets. But for others this craving is an indication of insecurity. It reveals a desire to live a different type of life than the one we are actually living. We long for romance after the days of romance are past. We count the lines in our faces as we stand before the mirror and think with regret of how we looked many years ago. We think of the successes we might have had and didn't. We look with envy upon those people who seem overwhelmingly popular.

Then we reach for the sugar bowl. If we can't have these big things in life, at least we can put an extra teaspoon of sugar in our coffee or nibble on candy.

Physicians tell us that there is plenty of sugar in the ordinary foods of a balanced meal. There is also plenty of satisfaction to be found in the activities of a life lived sincerely.

DAMAGED BY FIRE — Richard Jennings surveys damage to a storage trailer behind his house in Naples, Fla., after brush fires destroyed it and its contents. Florida has counted more than 1,400 fires that have burned 100,000 acres in the last few days. (AP Laserphoto)

Florida Turns To Helicopters In Effort To Halt Brush Fires

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — An uncontrolled brush fire, one of more than 1,400 that have burned 100,000 acres, destroyed eight homes in a subdivision where residents fought back with shovels and hoses as the governor called in helicopters to battle the flames.

Homes surrounded by firelines stood as green islands amid gray, smoldering forests. Some homes were half burned while others were little more than concrete blocks, melted lawn furniture and ashes.

Gov. Bob Graham surveyed fire damage in the Naples area Thursday and declared a state of emergency. More than 1,400 brush fires have been reported since the first of the year and the blazes have accelerated since the Jan. 22-23 freeze combined with bone-dry weather to turn vegetation into kindling.

At least five new fires broke out Thursday across the state, each claiming more than 100 acres, but they were brought under control by nightfall, said Larry Amison of the state Division of Forestry.

Three major infernos remained: one in the thinly populated Golden Gate subdivision east of Naples, one near Interstate 75 northeast of Naples and a third on the east side of the state, in the grasslands of the Florida Everglades.

"It's more severe than I had anticipated," Graham said. His emergency declaration will enable the National Guard to put two water-carrying helicopters into action and the Department of Transportation to lend two bulldozers.

"They've done all they can," said state Sen. Frank Mann, who toured the area with Graham. "At this point, it's up to the good Lord, because somebody's got to bring us rain."

The Everglades fire was the largest, consuming about 50,000 acres of uninhabited grasslands in northwest Broward County. Paul Wills, a forestry division spokesman, said the fire easily could double in size.

Wills said that if winds turn, the fire could obstruct Alligator Alley, one of two highways crossing the Everglades.

The fire near I-75 was under control. There was no acreage estimate available.

The only fire that threatened homes was the Golden Gate blaze, where some 100 people were evacuated Wednesday as the flames inched closer, Amison said.

"We're not trying to stop the fire," said John Webster, another Division of Forestry spokesman. "We're trying to protect residences."

Although dense smoke made it difficult to tell how many homes were destroyed, Amison said he believed eight homes were lost.

Some of the residents went back

Thursday to help firefighters. Graham promised National Guard and Department of Transportation equipment to help in the battle. A National Guard helicopter, equipped to dump water on hot spots, was expected to arrive today.

Noreen and Dennis Burt joined with 11 neighbors to beat back the fire from their homes. They formed a shovel brigade and started work Wednesday afternoon.

"We're tired but we're fortunate," Mrs. Burt said.

The fire, which was two miles wide Thursday afternoon, was contained during the night but was not under control, Amison said.

Firefighter Marco A. Miranda, 26, was killed Wednesday when the tractor he was operating was surrounded by flames.

Police were holding Eddie Richardson, 34, of Naples on arson charges in connection with a blaze south of Golden Gate, said Deputy Chief Ray Barnett of the Collier County Sheriff's Department. He said deputies also were investigating Richardson in connection with the fire in which Miranda died.

By late Wednesday, 1,429 fires had destroyed 51,124 acres of forested land since Jan. 1, Wills said. That compares with 25,500 acres lost during the same period last year.

The figures do not include grassland such as that burning in the Everglades fire.

New Rules On Student Aid Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $75 that many students earn each month from campus jobs would count against the annual limit on federal aid of $4,000 per student that Reagan administration budget cutters are shooting for.

Education Secretary-designate William J. Bennett has confirmed to a Senate committee that students' earnings in the College Work-Study program would count along with their loans and Pell Grants in the proposed $4,000 annual aid ceiling.

Some needy college students now get more than $7,000 in various forms of federal aid each year, including their salaries from subsidized jobs, in which the college pays a fifth of their salaries and the government the rest. The almost 750,000 students in the Work-Study program in 1984 averaged more than $750 in earnings.

The Associated Press reported last Saturday that President Reagan will ask Congress in his fiscal 1986 budget to clamp on the $4,000 aid ceiling and to bar students from families with incomes above $32,500 from the Guaranteed Student Loan program. Also, those with family incomes above $25,000 would be ineligible for Pell Grants.

The proposals have provoked criticism on Capitol Hill, where both Republican and Democratic lawmakers have dismissed them as unacceptable, even in the face of huge federal deficits.

Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., told the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities on Thursday the cuts were "an unwarranted attack on working middle-class families who are struggling to try to send their kids to college. ... A family earning $30,000 to $35,000 a year is not rich."

Student aid experts told private college presidents at the association's meeting that the government will have to ask for a supplemental appropriation of up to $1 billion in the next few weeks to cover higher than anticipated costs in the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

Groundhog Tales Go Back To Folk Customs Of Past

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Americans watch for the weather prognostications of groundhogs this weekend they will be harking back centuries to rural folk beliefs that this midwinter day foretells the future.

Falling halfway between the Winter Solstice and the Spring Equinox, Feb. 2 has been celebrated in folk culture as the day to turn our backs on winter and begin looking forward to spring.

The Christian church adopted the celebration — calling it Candlemas — to commemorate the feasts of the Purification of the Virgin Mary and the Presentation of Jesus.

It was the early German and English settlers who brought the tradition of predicting the weather with them to this country, and Saturday's ceremonies at Punxsutawney and Quarryville, Pa., and Sun Prairie, Wis., trace their roots to that source.

The weather is crucial to farmers, and centuries ago rural folk were forced to depend on folklore instead of the modern meteorologists of today.

The search for weather signs was especially important as spring approached. With stored food and wood supplies dwindling, farmers hoped for signs of an early spring so they could begin planting and shorten the time to harvest.

"Candlemas Day! Candlemas Day! Half our fire and half our hay!" was an ancient English rhyme used as a reminder to take stock of food and fuel at this time — supposedly the midpoint of winter.

In centuries past many people believed that animals had some ability to predict the weather — indeed such beliefs persist today.

The Germans and English observed that hibernating bears and badgers sometimes began to stir around this time of year, and hoped that it was a sign of the weather to come.

The marmot, or woodchuck, gained the honor of making the predictions in this country, and carries on today, popularly known as the groundhog.

Traditionally farmers wanted the animal to sally forth as a prediction of warmth to come, and not to retreat back into the den. So sunshine, casting a shadow to frighten the animal, was seen as a predictor of bad weather to come. Clouds prevented the shadow, so the furry creature could leave his den without fear, foretelling early warmth.

This "reverse prediction," in which a cloudy day predicts good weather and a sunny one foretells cold, spread over many rural European cultures.

"If Candlemas Day be fair and clear, there'll be twa (two) winters in the year," was the chant of Scottish farmers.

In France, too, rural folk warned that sunshine at Candlemas meant another winter was on the way, while rain in Spain on this day was believed to mean that the cold was over for the season.

In Germany it was said the shepherd would rather see a wolf enter his stable on Candlemas than the sun.

"As long before Candlemas as the lark is heard to sing, so long will he be silent afterwards on account of the cold," was another tradition common to both Germany and Scotland.

And the English sang, "If Candlemas Day be fair and bright, winter will have another flight; But if it be dark with clouds and rain, winter is gone and will not come again."

The late outdoors writer Hal Borland termed this reverse prognostication a "perverse symbol of man's indomitable hope," but noted that a few residents of northern New England seek the opposite results of tradition.

Some folks in that hearty country hope that the groundhog will see his shadow and retreat back into the burrow. Borland wrote, in the hope that will portend "only" six more weeks of winter.

More Citizens Turn Guns Against Crime

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer

A Georgia man shot a 14-year-old alleged burglar in the head, while a husband and wife chased three robbers from their Connecticut store with gunshots, comparing it to a recent New York subway shooting and warning, "It's either them or us."

In another case involving an armed citizen, police in Highland Park, Michigan, said they won't arrest a 78-year-old woman who yelled "Stop or I'll shoot," then killed a 17-year-old who tried to enter her home with another youth Wednesday morning.

But in Decatur, Ga., David Harold Meyers was jailed on a charge of aggravated assault Thursday after he shot one of two youths he found in his apartment. Meyers, 49, told police he discovered a rear window open and saw his stereo system stacked up.

He found two boys hiding in a laundry room and beat them on the head with his gun, said DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson. The gun discharged and a bullet lodged in the head of one youth, he said.

The boy was listed in critical condition today at Northside Hospital, officials said. The second youth fled but was arrested later by police and charged with burglary.

"People might compare this to the New York subway case, but this was different," Johnson said, referring to the Dec. 22 shooting of four youths on a New York subway by a man who said the victims had asked him for money.

"Meyers, instead of holding them at gunpoint and calling police, instead began striking them in the head with his gun. We feel his actions justified the aggravated assault arrest."

Two proprietors of a neighborhood grocery store in New Haven, Conn., compared their routing of three robbers to the case of Bernhard Goetz, who faces weapons charges for his actions on the New York City subway.

When one of the robbers pointed a gun between the eyes of William McGilton, his wife Carmen pulled a .22-caliber pistol from her pocket and started firing.

McGilton drew his gun and got off two shots, sending the men fleeing, at least one with a wound.

"If it's war they want, it's war they're going to get," said McGilton, 45. "I was in the service and I know what it's all about. I wasn't scared ... It's either them or us. You have to protect yourself."

Mrs. McGilton, 33, said she has kept her gun in her pocket ever since the couple were robbed of $1,000 at gunpoint six months ago. The McGiltons say they "will be damned if it's going to happen again."

Asked to compare her actions to those of Goetz, Mrs. McGilton said, "It's the same, more or less. It's either me or you."

New Haven police were searching for two of the would-be robbers, but arrested the third after he went to a hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound.

In Michigan, Marie Morrison, 78, told police she warned a teen-ager and his companion not to try to enter her home before shooting him dead Wednesday morning. The 17-year-old died Thursday.

"She was home alone and feared for her life," said Inspector John H. Holloway. "It's unfortunate that some people here have to protect themselves. Police wish they could do more, but we just don't have the manpower."

Highland Park Police Chief William Ford said he did not anticipate seeking a criminal warrant against Mrs. Morrison.

Mrs. Morrison's son James, a lieutenant with the Detroit Police Department, said his mother had lived at the house in the Detroit enclave for 27 years and had no problems there. But a neighbor said the woman's purse was snatched last year while she walked along a nearby street.

DOUBTS — Wilma Hennessey holds footprint charts of the man she has called son for 48 years, Barry Hennessey. Mrs. Hennessey says she does not believe he is her son, and now is trying to track down other men born at the same time in a Denver hospital. She believes the hospital mixed up the babies on the day her son was born, contending that her baby's footprint does not match that of Barry Hennessey. (AP Laserphoto)

Mother Believes She Got Wrong Son 48 Years Ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Wilma Hennessey brought her newborn son home from a Denver hospital in 1936, something in the back of her mind said, "I'm not sure this is my baby."

Now, armed with two unmatched footprints and a firm belief that her 48-year-old son Barry was someone else's baby, Mrs. Hennessey is searching for a long-lost child and getting little help in her quest.

Mrs. Hennessey, who lives in the Washington suburb of Alexandria, Va., discovered the evidence four years ago when she was making an ashtray for Barry, using his footprint as the design.

Then, by coincidence, she came across his birth certificate from Mercy Hospital in Denver and noted the stark difference in the two footprints.

"The footprints are like night and day," she said in a telephone interview Thursday night. "The baby ones have three little 'H's' in them. The adult print doesn't have them at all."

The prints reminded her of the many times that Barry's friends had joked that he didn't look like either Mrs. Hennessey, or her husband, an accountant who died several years ago. Barry's eyes are bluish, while everyone else in the family has brown eyes, Mrs. Hennessey said.

"I told my husband when a fingerprint analyst compared Barry's adult footprint with his baby footprint he found they were taken from two different people, she said.

"Any mother would want to know," Mrs. Hennessey said, justifying what has become a four-year quest for her son. "It doesn't mean you don't love the other one any less."

Barry, a real estate broker in northern Virginia, is equally eager to find out what happened, but said he was shocked at first.

"I felt like I wasn't a human being; all of a sudden I had no idea who I was," Barry told The Washington Post, which interviewed many of the participants in the unusual case.

Mrs. Hennessey's search began with a request that the hospital open their records of babies born at the same time as her son so the footprints could be compared.

But they wouldn't.

Television's Mr. T Adopts Child Molestation Victims

CASTAIC, Calif. (AP) — As the second car of the day is demolished before whirring cameras, Mr. T takes a break on the "A-Team" set to talk about "his tots."

"I'm their protector," the actor said, the ghost of a smile flickering across his solemn, powerful face. "I call them Mr. T's tots because Charlie has his angels. Jerry's (Lewis) got his kids."

"Mr. T has his tots. The kids like it, too."

Mr. T's tots are the 41 children who allegedly were abused at the McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach, 50 miles south of this rural hamlet where the popular NBC action series was filming one recent afternoon.

The 32-year-old former bouncer and bodyguard to boxers Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali has appointed himself guardian for the McMartin children, encouraging them not to be afraid and to tell the truth as they testify.

So far, he has talked to 18 of the children, and plans more trips to court to support them.

Mr. T, whose involvement in the McMartin case was requested by one of the children, says his involvement is his "Godly duty."

He sharply criticizes anyone who questions the motivation for his recent appearance, amid packs of reporters and cameramen, outside the preliminary hearing in Los Angeles where the children are testifying. Seven teachers, including the owner of the now-closed McMartin Pre-School, are accused of 208 counts of conspiracy and child molestation.

"I think it should be plain as day and night why I'm doing this here, but people figure I'm Mr. T, I'm in it for publicity or to capitalize," the actor said as he sat in his makeup trailer, a well-worn Bible beneath his clasped hands.

"I don't need no publicity," he said. "I'm already twice a week on TV (on the 'A-Team' and in a cartoon show based on his character). I've got dolls. I've got a cereal. I've got, you name it. I'm a millionaire. I'm not bragging. I'm blessed by God."

But Mr. T — born Lawrence Tureaud — seems to thrive on controversy and the publicity it brings.

"They say I'm not the right role model. Mr. T this. Mr. T that. Fine. I don't mind.... As long as they mention my name and spell it correctly. That's why I shortened my name and made it easy for everybody. You'd have to be an idiot to misspell it...."

"Every time they mention my name, I jack my price up $25,000. Personal appearance, 100 grand. If my fee's too high for people, don't call me. Call a new actor."

Mr. T, who began his acting career as Sylvester Stallone's nemesis in "Rocky III," sees no contradiction in the rough action of NBC's "The A-Team" and his concern for the children.

Scientific Group Says Features On Mars' Face Made By Visitors

By LARRY RYCKMAN
 Associated Press Writer
 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mile-long monkey's face silently stares at the stars from its perch on Mars, according to a group of scientists who believe the strange profile was left as a cosmic calling card hundreds of thousands of years ago.
 The 30 scientists, known as the Mars Investigation Group, believe two photographs sent back from Mars in 1976 by the Viking spacecraft indicate the existence of an ancient civilization, Richard Hoagland, group member and science writer, said Thursday.

 The photos show what appear to be four huge pyramids lined up symmetrically with the face about six miles away, suggesting a parallel with Stonehenge, the ancient monument of huge stones in England, Hoagland said.
 "Geometrically, the face could be seen in profile (from the pyramids) as the summer solstice sun rose over it" an estimated 500,000 years ago, he said in a telephone interview from Berkeley.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials and other skeptics contend the figures were accidentally formed by natural elements or by the play of light and shadow.
 Larry King, a NASA spokesman in Mountain View, Calif., said he doubts the previous existence of life on Mars and likened the face to "the man on the moon."

But Dr. C. West Churchman, a professor at the University of California at Berkeley and the group's principal investigator, said there are too many details pointing to the possibility of an extinct Martian race.
 "It's hard to believe that all that symmetry could have been done by winds and sand as we know it on Earth," he said in a telephone interview from Philadelphia. "If it had just been the face, I would not have been that convinced. But the fact that these (pyramids) are lined up in a certain way with the face makes me inclined to believe that there was (an ancient civilization)."

The two Viking photographs were taken at different times of day, reducing the chance that the figures were illusions cast by tricky shadows, Hoagland said.

The face — a mile long and three-quarters of a mile wide — appears to be looking toward the stars, Hoagland said. It bears a resemblance to the Egyptian sphinx, but looks more like an ape, he said.

If the scientists believe there was an ancient civilization on Mars, they must learn the significance of the face and the pyramids, Churchman said.

"Why in the world did they ever create a face looking upward?" he said. "I understand that similar faces have been constructed in civilizations on Earth. The faces are looking up at the sky because they are looking up to God or some divinity."

The Berkeley scientists, who first discussed the photos last spring, have raised $250,000 of a $475,000 goal toward further research into the mysterious face.

Farm Prices Down For Second Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second straight month, the government's farm price index in January dropped below year-earlier levels, further evidence of a financial crunch that has hit many of the nation's producers.

According to the latest figures released Thursday by the Agriculture Department, prices farmers get for raw products declined 0.7 percent in January.

Lower prices for eggs, apples, turkeys, hogs and cattle were mostly responsible for the January decline, the department said. However, price increases for lettuce, broilers, corn, calves and lemons helped temper the losses for other commodities.

The index, down in January for the sixth straight month, began dropping in August after holding fairly steady since last spring.

In December, the price index dropped below its year-earlier level for the first time since September 1983. The January decline put the price index 7.6 percent below a year earlier.

Meanwhile, the prices farmers paid in January held steady for the seventh consecutive month, said the department's Crop Reporting Board. But those still averaged 0.6 percent above their year-earlier levels.

Declines in the prices of fuel and energy, and easing of interest rates were offset by increases in costs of feeder livestock, feed and taxes, the report said. Interest paid on farm real estate debt is expected to decline 0.4 percent in 1985 from last year's estimate.

As 1985 began, crop prices generally were unchanged from December but averaged 10 percent below January 1984, the report said.

Livestock and livestock products prices were down 1.4 percent from December, averaging 4.7 percent less than a year earlier.

Crop prices have been weak for months as farmers returned to larger plantings in 1984.

Reynolds Proposes $1.30 Price Base, Less Government Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. is calling for a sharp cut in tobacco price supports and a more appealing offer to cigarette makers who have been asked to buy 812 million pounds of flue-cured leaf surpluses.

In a letter hand-delivered to congressional leaders Thursday, the Winston-Salem-based manufacturer called for an average support price of $1.30 per pound — nearly 24 percent less than last year's rate of $1.70.

Tobacco farmers, dealers and manufacturers — not the government — should determine how much tobacco is grown each year, Reynolds said.

"Unless fundamental changes to the present program are made, 1985 could well be the last year for any program," wrote G.H. Long, Reynolds' chief executive officer. "And we hope that doesn't happen."

Carlton T. Blalock, executive director of the 3,000-member Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, praised most parts of the Reynolds plan, but said the $1.30 figure was too low.

He said his organization's board of directors in a secret vote last week had recommended a support price of about $1.35 per pound. The group has made other suggestions, which it was circulating confidentially to legislators and manufacturers, Blalock said.

"We think it is a good plan, and I think farmers will accept it," he said in a telephone interview from Raleigh, N.C.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported tobacco industry sources said Thursday that Gov. Jim Martin had been recruited in an effort to sell Reynolds on the surplus proposal.

Sources said Martin met Wednesday with Reynolds executives, including Long and J. Tylee Wilson, board chairman of R.J. Reynolds Industries, the tobacco company's parent corporation, the newspaper said.

Martin spokesmen would not confirm the reports, and Reynolds officials could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

Cigarette manufacturers have been asked to purchase at greatly reduced prices over the next five years all the surplus leaf being held by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

In return, the U.S. Department of Agriculture would cut the effective price support to $1.45 per pound.

IN THE STATE

Gubernatorial Pay

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin received his first salary check Thursday and the $6,661.89 check is the highest monthly paycheck ever taken home by a North Carolina governor.

The General Assembly voted in June to increase the governor's pay to $93,516 a year, but the raise didn't take effect until this month.

Martin's monthly checks will total $7,793. The January check is lower because he wasn't on the payroll until noon Jan. 5, the day of his inauguration.

Governors' salaries in other states vary from a low of $35,000 in Delaware, Arkansas, Maine and Puerto Rico to a high of $100,000 in New York, according to figures from the Council of State Governments.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt had been making $57,864 a year until 1983, when the Legislature increased all state employees' salaries by 5 percent, raising Hunt's pay to $60,768 a year.

At the same time, the Legislature voted to increase the governor's salary to $85,000 in January 1985. The new governor's salary was raised another 10 percent as part of an across-the-board increase enacted last year.

Port Chairman Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed James M. Berry as the chairman of the State Ports Authority Board, replacing state Sen.-elect Thomas Taft of Greenville.

Berry is the executive vice president of corporate and international banking for North Carolina National Bank.

"I am confident that Jim Berry will be a fine chairman of the State Ports Authority Board, exemplifying the type of public servant the people of North Carolina deserve," Martin said.

Berry, 54, is a 1952 graduate of the University of Oklahoma.

Monitor Trust Established

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and private preservation experts are joining forces to protect the Civil War ironclad vessel Monitor.

Plans for the joint effort were announced Thursday by the private National Trust for Historic Preservation and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a division of the Commerce Department.

The Monitor, lost in a storm following its famous battle with the Confederate vessel Virginia, rests in about 220 feet of water about 16 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C. That area was designated a marine sanctuary in 1975.

The two groups are developing a plan to preserve the ship, combining the government agency's oceanic expertise with the historic preservation and fund-raising abilities of the national trust.

Room A-Plenty To Work

DURHAM (AP) — Like all dentists, Dennis Torney says he sometimes wished mouths were big enough for him to work in comfortably.

Torney got his wish Thursday, but wasn't so sure he relished the opportunity. The large mouth in which he was working belonged to a 150-pound cougar.

Torney, a professor at the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry in Chapel Hill, performed a root canal on Jody, an 8-year-old female cat that is a permanent resident of the state Museum of Life and Science in Durham.

Museum officials noticed Jody's dental problems a few weeks ago. "When that cat snarls, you can see the infection," Torney said before the surgery.

Torney said he has had some practice on non-human mouths, but those were dogs, not wild animals.

Jody was given a sedative to make her docile before being wheeled into an operating. She was then put under anesthesia.

Deputy Secretary

RALEIGH (AP) — Former state Commerce Secretary W. Scott Harvey has been appointed deputy secretary of the North Carolina Department of Correction by Secretary Aaron J. Johnson effective Feb. 11.

"We look forward to Scott Harvey's seasoned management abilities and I know his judgment will be valuable to the Department of Correction," Johnson said in a prepared statement.

Harvey, 61, served as commerce secretary under former Gov. James Holshouser from 1973 to 1976, then served as state utilities commissioner.

Busing Vote Proposed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, is exploring the possibility of putting a school busing referendum on the fall ballot.

Warren said the 15-year-old integration plan in which 12,000 of the system's 72,000 students are bused, should be put to a vote.

"Should the time come in the future when the school board is granted more flexibility to deal with busing, they would have a clear statement of public opinion to guide them," he said. A nonbinding referendum would require General Assembly approval.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools Superintendent Jay Robinson said the move could polarize the community.

"I certainly don't believe that most people in the community want children bused," he said. "But I seriously doubt that the majority of people want to return to segregated schools."

Court Imposes Ban

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — After attorneys said police witnesses were being intimidated, a federal judge in a $10 million police brutality lawsuit ordered Fayetteville law officials not to discuss the case with officers who may testify.

Judge James C. Fox's order Thursday did not say who allegedly intimidated witnesses, and Henry Z. Spell's attorney, Gerald Beaver, declined to discuss the allegations.

Spell's lawsuit charges that he was left sterile after Fayetteville police Officer Charles D. McDaniel kneed him in the groin during a November 1983 arrest for driving while impaired and possession of methaqualone.

The suit alleges that the city of Fayetteville, city manager and police officials are liable for his injury because they condoned and covered up a pattern of police misconduct. The defendants deny the allegations.

Committee Chairman

RALEIGH (AP) — There will be some "turf battles" as efforts are made to consolidate child and youth programs now spread throughout the bureaucracy, says the head of a new Senate Committee on Children and Youth.

"There will be some exciting times, but we can get a lot done," state Sen. Charles Hipps said Thursday after Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan announced his appointment as committee chairman.

In a speech to the North Carolina Child Advocacy Institute, Jordan said Hipps' committee will study proposals to improve day care, which he said was important because 59 percent of mothers with pre-school children work outside the home.

Jordan said it was important not to allow the price of day care to rise too high for working parents, but said tougher standards were needed for facilities and staff.

Martin Will Air Budget This Month

RALEIGH (AP) — Feeling pressure from lawmakers to accelerate this year's budget process, Gov. Jim Martin says he'll release his budget figures sooner than former governors did, but not until late February.

"I don't believe my proposal is unnecessarily depriving the General Assembly of the right to receive those figures," he said at his weekly news conference Thursday.

Martin told reporters he expects to submit a fiscal 1985-87 budget to the Legislature within 10 days of his Feb. 19 State of the State address, which will include a general outline of his budget plans.

He also said he has signed his first executive order, relaxing the state ethics code to exempt top administration officials from publicly disclosing most property and assets owned solely by their spouses.

Admitting Republican and Democratic legislators have prodded him to present his budget earlier, Martin said he's ahead of the pace set by former Govs. Jim Holshouser and Jim Hunt, who waited several months after the Legislature convened to submit their first budgets.

"There are some (legislators) who feel that for strategic purposes, I ought to do what has previously been done ... hold things back until the last minute," said Martin.

"That would be ... treating the General Assembly like mushrooms — keeping them in the dark and covered over with manure. I won't do that. I want to get that information out to them early. ... And I think I'm doing that better than anyone else."

Legislative leaders have complained that without Martin's proposed revisions to the $16.8 billion budget prepared by Hunt, they can't consider his tax-cut package, which is expected to cost $400 million to $450 million a year when fully implemented in 1988.

Martin wants to eliminate the sales tax on food and non-prescription medicine, the property tax on intangible assets, and the property tax on business inventories.

Earlier this week, House Speaker Liston Ramsey proposed a $98 million tax-cut package including an income tax reduction and a credit or rebate for food tax payments by the poor.

Martin rejected claims that Ramsey's proposals were designed to give more relief to the poor and middle-class taxpayers, while Martin's was stacked in favor of big business.

He said the rewritten version of the state ethics order signed by Hunt increases the amount of money exempt from public disclosure because "the dollar ain't what it used to be." The exemption under the Hunt order was $20,000 and would be $30,000 under the Martin proposal. Public officials would not have to report in detail on assets owned and controlled solely by their spouses.

"That's been a question of some delicacy in ... Congress," said Martin, a six-term representative before his election as governor.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. Fifth Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on February 14, 1985, at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance by adding a definition of, and specific regulations for, satellite dish antennae.

Section 1. Section 32-3 will be amended by adding the following definition:

"Satellite dish antenna - an apparatus capable of receiving communications from a transmitter or a transmitter relay located in planetary orbit."

(3) Where abutting a residential use and a buffer is not already established, a buffer shall be required between the satellite dish antenna and the residential use. Such buffer shall be in accordance with the buffer requirements of section 32-95 A-5d-2."

A public hearing was scheduled on January 10, 1985; and during this public hearing, there was some concern voiced by a citizen stating that the TV dish antennae should not be located in a side yard. This item was continued until the February 14, 1985 meeting of City Council. During this meeting, consideration will be given to locating TV dish antennae in side and rear yards in residential districts. The ordinance to be considered may add additional requirements, such as the color of the dish antennae and the buffer requirements shall be at a minimum height of six feet when the dish is located in the side yard.

During this public hearing scheduled for February 14, 1985, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

Coastal Permits Challenged

By The Associated Press

State permits for dense development near shellfish-rich coastal waters are being rubber stamped, violating state and federal law, an Environmental Management Commission member says.

"This is shown by a simple observation," Dr. Richard T. Barber, a biological oceanographer at the Duke University Marine Laboratory at Beaufort, wrote in a critique of the commission staff.

"The Division of Environmental Management has never given a negative comment to the (Office) of Coastal Management on the water quality implications of a high-density development adjacent to (shellfish) waters.

"The permit process as it is now administered by the staff of DEM and (Coastal Management) is a rubber stamp process, notwithstanding that it is a slow and expensive process."

In the memo this week, Barber complained that water quality protections were overlooked in appeal hearings to permit the proposed Sugarloaf Marina in Atlantic Beach and the proposed Bermuda Landing condominium at Topsail Island.

Sanford Loses Ground In Race For Party Post

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul G. Kirk Jr. is a strong favorite to win election as Democratic Party chairman and take on the task of trying to lead the Democrats back from two presidential election drubbings by Ronald Reagan.

The former aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy prevailed easily Thursday on a test of strength set up by his three rivals for the post.

But the other candidates in today's vote to succeed Charles T. Manatt as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, including former North Carolina governor and Duke University President Terry Sanford, remained hopeful.

Kirk's other rivals are Nancy Pelosi of California and Robert J. Keefe, a Washington political consultant.

The test of Kirk's strength came on the question of whether 25 at-large members of the national committee had to stand for reelection immediately or whether their terms would run until the spring meeting.

Kirk had the support of 20 of the 25 at-large committee members and supported having their terms run until spring.

His rivals insisted that under party rules the terms of the 25 expired at the start of the meeting.

Kirk prevailed on a vote of 178.05 to 146.45.

A major factor in Kirk's majority was the strong support he received from organized labor.

John Perkins, political director of the AFL-CIO, was a formidable presence at the meeting.

Joseph Crangle of Buffalo, N.Y., backing Kirk's position, noted that more than half the at-large members were labor representatives.

"I can't vote against the AFL-CIO," said Crangle. He said a vote against the incumbent at-large slate would be "a vote against the best damned friends the Democratic Party has."

Willie Brown, speaker of the California Assembly and a supporter of Ms. Pelosi, urged the committee members not to make the vote "a litmus test of the Democratic Party's commitment to organized labor by suggesting we have to ignore fairness, ignore the rules."

Kirk, who served eight years as an aide to Kennedy and managed his 1980 presidential campaign, told the committee, "The most important thing this party has to do is reclaim its heritage."

Kirk noted that when Reagan was citing great leaders in the past, all the names he invoked were former Democratic presidents.

"Did he invoke the name of a single Republican?" asked Kirk. "No, he didn't."

All the candidates addressed the committee.

Ms. Pelosi said the party had to send a message to the voters that "We will not change our principles, but we will change our tactics. We will not change our goals, but we will change our techniques."

Sanford said that "the unity of the party, the success of the party is worth far more to me than winning this office."

Keefe said that "we have but one special interest, that is the interest of the American people."

Fear of an overruff can prove almost as damaging as the overruff itself. Witness this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships in San Diego. East-West were Karen McCallum and Rita Rand of New York. In theory, McCallum's weak two spade opening bid showed a six-card suit, and that had important repercussions later in the play. Against four hearts, Rand found the excellent lead of the king of spades. She continued with a spade to the ace, and East played a third spade. If East had started with six spades, declarer was trapped. If she ruffed high, she would certainly promote a trump trick for the opponents, and she feared that, if she ruffed low, she would be overruffed. So she made what she thought was a clever move—instead of ruffing, she sluffed her losing diamond. All would have been well had East shifted to another suit. But East persevered with a fourth spade, and now declarer was truly caught in an overruff situation. No matter what she did, she was down one. Declarer's loser-on-loser play would have been the correct technique had here been a high trump in dummy. Since that was not the case, declarer's only hope was that trumps would split 3-3 and that a low ruff would stand up. Even though it appeared certain that she would be overruffed, it could have cost declarer nothing to ruff the third round of spades. If there was going to be an overruff, it was simply a matter of choosing which way to go down.

Burr Quits TV

CHEHALIS, Wash. (AP) — Actor Raymond Burr of "Perry Mason" and "Ironside" television fame says he's finished with the tube and is returning to his first love, the stage. Burr, 67, said he would return to the theater in a play on Henry the Navigator which is now being written and is scheduled to open in 1987 in England. "Twenty years of years of TV is enough," Burr, on a promotional tour for independent insurance agents, said Tuesday. "Many demands are placed upon you. You have little time for anything else. My next seven or eight years are fairly well planned out. If I were to do another series, all those plans would be out the window." Henry, a 15th century Portugese prince, is "a man that the world doesn't know very much about," Burr said. "He started most of the great explorations of the world."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

FIERCE SONS OF THE DESERT!

THE AMALEKITES WERE DESCENDANTS OF ESAU, JACOB'S TWIN BROTHER (GEN.36:12) THEY INHABITED THE PENINSULA OF SINAI AND THE WILDERNESS BETWEEN THE SOUTHERN HILL-RANGES OF PALESTINE AND THE BORDER OF EGYPT (NUM.13:29; I SAM.15:7). THEY, LIKE THE ISRAELITES, WERE NOMADS, KEEPING VAST FLOCKS OF SHEEP, GOATS, CAMELS, ETC. WHEN MOSES LED THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL OUT OF EGYPT, RIGHT SMACK INTO THEIR LANDS, THE AMALEKITES BEGAN TO HARASS THE REAR OF THE ISRAELITE COLUMN--AFTER ALL, THERE WASN'T ENOUGH GRAZING FOR THEIR CATTLE LET ALONE THE FLOCKS OF A STRANGER! THE HARASSMENTS DIDN'T STOP THE ISRAELITES, SO...

...QUICKLY, THE AMALEKITES GATHER FOR A COUNCIL OF WAR--THESE DESERT DWELLERS ARE FIERCE, PROUD, AND CRUEL, ALLOWING NO STRANGERS TO ENTER INTO THEIR LANDS, ESPECIALLY WHEN THE STRANGERS ARE DESCENDANTS OF JACOB, WHO CHEATED THEIR ANCESTOR, ESAU, OUT OF HIS OWN BIRTHRIGHT!

JOHN LEHTI

...THINGS CAME TO A HEAD, FINALLY, AT REPHIDIM, WHERE THE AMALEKITES ENGAGED ISRAEL IN A BIG BATTLE AND WERE DECISIVELY DEFEATED BECAUSE OF THEIR HOSTILITY TO ISRAEL THEIR UTTER DESTRUCTION WAS AUTHORIZED! (EX.17:8-16; DEUT.25:17-19). YEARS LATER, AFTER DAVID SEVERELY CRUSHED THEM AT ZIKLAG, THEY NEVER SEEMED TO RECOVER AND IN HEZEKIAH'S REIGN, THE LAST REMNANT OF THEM DISAPPEARED IN THE WILDERNESS!

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined broadly today as traders cashed in profits from the market's strong January advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 11.48 to 1,275.29 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 75.20 points, or more than 6 percent, in January. Advances outnumbered declines in the last 19 trading sessions of the month.

Analysts said some traders evidently concluded that the market was due for a pullback, or at least a rest period, after such an extended rally.

The market also had to digest the news of the larger-than-expected $4.7 billion jump in the basic measure of the money supply reported by the Federal Reserve after the close Thursday.

That news helped to increase conjecture that the Fed, which followed a strongly expansionary credit policy in the latter stages of 1984, might now be moving toward a more cautious approach.

This morning, the Labor Department said the unemployment rate rose 0.2 percent in January, to 7.4 percent. The increase was attributed to growth in the labor force and post-holiday layoffs.

Among today's early volume leaders, Hewlett-Packard dropped 3/8 to 37 1/8; Sony 1/4 to 15 3/4; U.S. Steel 3/8 to 26 3/4; and Transamerica 3/8 to 29 1/8.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.11 to 1,286.77.

Advances slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 132.47 million shares, against 170.02 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .10 to 103.75, a new high. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .33 at 224.00.

Infant Deaths

DURHAM (AP) — Even with careful attention to high-risk mothers, North Carolina probably won't dramatically improve its infant mortality rate in the near future, a University of North Carolina medical school professor says.

"North Carolina has the highest proportion of women in the labor force in the nation," said Dr. Earl Siegel, professor of maternal and child care at the UNC School of Medicine in Chapel Hill.

He said stress in the workplace is a major cause of premature births and infant deaths in the state, which has one of the nation's highest infant mortality rates.

Premature birth, he said, is the leading cause of infant deaths.

With 13.2 infant deaths per 1,000 births, North Carolina had one of the worst infant mortality rates in the country in 1983, the last year for which statistics are available.

Me and My Shadow

Tomorrow Americans will be watching to see if their local groundhogs come out of their burrows and see their shadows. The idea of groundhogs predicting the arrival of spring is one of many old superstitions. So are the notions that birds roost before a storm or that a person's corns or joints ache as bad weather approaches. However, crickets do chirp faster as the temperature rises. The number of chirps in 15 seconds, plus 37, equals the Fahrenheit temperature.

DO YOU KNOW — How many times per hour does a groundhog breathe while hibernating?

Speakes said the figure for program spending for next year would be under $900 billion, but he refused to give a specific figure.

The Times, quoting administration officials and budget documents, said the president's proposal, which goes to Congress on Monday, will call for reductions in spending for the departments of Agriculture, Education, Energy, Interior and Housing and Urban Development.

Defense spending would increase to $277.5 billion from the current $246.3 billion, representing about 27 percent of the total expenditures, The Times said.

If the budget is approved by Congress as Reagan proposes, the growth rate for total spending would be 1.5 percent, the smallest since 1965. Federal officials last month projected the federal deficit for the fiscal 1986 Reagan budget at $178 billion; in the current fiscal year, it is more than $200 billion.

Lady Pirates Hold Off Seahawks For 88-75 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Lady Pirates reeled off 10 straight points at the end of the first half and added four more at the start of the second half, then rode that to an 88-75 basketball victory over UNC-Wilmington last night.

Both Sylvia Bragg and Loraine Foster canned 24 points for the Lady Pirates in leading them to their ninth straight victory and their sixth against no losses in the ECAC-South women's race.

For Wilmington, it was only their second loss in six ECAC-South contests. Wilmington, like American, is in its first year in the league.

Bragg, hitting well from the inside and outside, hit on nine of 11 shots from the floor and added all six free throw attempts for her 24 points. Foster made good on 12 of 21, mostly from the outside, but several times on the lead end of fast breaks, to account for her 24. She had no chances at the line.

In addition, Bragg served up 12 assists, while Foster added five. The 12 was only two off the record of 14 held by ECU assistant coach Laurie Sikes.

Although Wilmington held the early lead, East Carolina took it for good on a layup by Bragg after a pass from Annette Phillips at 8-7. Foster hit the next two baskets for a 12-7 lead and the Lady Pirates stretched the lead out from there to as much as 11 over the next few minutes at 19-8.

The Lady Seahawks battled back to within three, however, behind the scoring of Sonya Pickard and Jenny Owen. That cut it to 27-24, but the Pirates matched them over the next few minutes, until they held a 35-30 lead with 2:33 left to go.

After that, however, UNC-W had its problems and failed to score again in the half. Meanwhile, Lisa Squirewell hit on a short jumper and Bragg canned a 12-footer. Foster, Bragg and Monique Pompili each hit shots off the glass in the final 1:14 to run the Lady Pirates out to a 45-30 lead at intermission.

"The last five minutes of the first half was the difference in the game," ECU coach Emily Manwaring later declared. "She (Wilmington coach Marilyn Christopher) took her starting guards out, and the people who came in just couldn't handle the ball against our press. I don't know why she did it."

Anita Anderson hit the first two baskets of the second half to run the Lady Pirate lead out to 19, 49-30, before Wilmington finally broke the ice again.

But Foster hit after a UNC-W free throw to up the lead to 20, 51-31, with 18:53 left in the contest.

But rather than blowing the Lady Seahawks away, the Pirates began to get a little sloppy after that. They appeared to tire physically on defense, a step slower than they had been. And they looked mentally tired on offense, taking shots that were not quite as good as they had been taking earlier.

That left the Seahawks get back into the ball game as Pickard and Phyllis Edwards began to connect again.

Wilmington finally cut it to less than 10 at 72-64 on a jumper by Pickard with 5:17 left, giving them plenty of time to pull it out.

But seven was as close as they were to get. The Lady Pirates found new life and got two free throws from Phillips, followed by a basket by Foster, who then added two more for an 84-69 lead with 1:45 left, and the two teams matched points the rest of the way.

The game was foul-filled with 30 called on ECU and 25 on UNC-W. Two ECU players went to the bench with five, while three of Wilmington's were disqualified.

East Carolina outrebounded the Lady Seahawks by two, 42-40, despite 12 by Edwards and nine by Gwen Austin, the league's leading scorer and rebounder. Elizabeth Bell added eight rebounds.

Squirewell, Anderson and Alma Bethea each had seven to lead East Carolina's board work.

Squirewell added 13 points to the 48 by Foster and Bragg. Pickard finished with 20 for UNC-W, while Austin and Edwards each had 16 and Owen had 10.

"What almost destroyed us was the fouls," Manwaring said. "Thirty is 15 too many."

She said that the plan for the Lady Pirates was to press coming downcourt and then drop back into a zone, putting pressure on the shooter.

"All five of their starters were hitting in the 50 percent range and they hit 50 percent as a team, but we held them under that (44.4)," Manwaring said. "But we had to go to man-to-man in the second half, and I think that helped them get back into it. Still, I felt confident that we would win and we needed to work on our man defense."

Manwaring was pleased with the 25 assists recorded by the Pirates, and praised both the play of Foster and Bragg.

"We have the type team on which anybody can be the scoring leader. We take what they give us," she said.

Manwaring also said she wasn't surprised by the nine-game winning streak. "After the South Carolina game, I felt that we could win the rest of our games. And the way we're playing now, I'd like to have a few of those earlier games back again."

The big problem now could be overconfidence as the Lady Pirates take a two-game non-conference break and then finish their league schedule. They're halfway through without a loss, having played all the league teams. "My job is to keep them from going to sleep in the second round," Manwaring said. "Our problem was lack of confidence when we were 2-8; nothing was going well. Now, they believe in themselves."

The Lady Pirates play host to South Florida in a non-conference contest on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Pirates Try Again Against Patriots

It's back on the bus and on the road again for the East Carolina Pirates Saturday night, as they travel to Fairfax, Va., to meet ECAC-South rival George Mason.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. on the Patriots' home court.

The game is the second meeting of the two teams this year. Mason earlier won an 81-69 victory over the Pirates in Greenville, as ECU was opening its league schedule. In five ECAC-South contests, the Pirates have yet to post a win.

East Carolina will be trying to end a dual loss string in the conference. In addition to trying to win a league game on any court this year, the Pirates will be out to win a road game in the league for the first time since they entered ECAC-South play three seasons ago.

The Pirates' last league win, ironically, came against George Mason in their Greenville meeting last season, 70-68. Since then, the Pirates have dropped nine straight league contests.

And, the Pirates haven't won a road contest in the league since the 1981-82 season — losing 14 straight — when they, again ironically, beat George Mason 66-64 in Fairfax. In fact, that's the only game the Pirates have won on their league opponents' court since joining the conference.

The loss last year, the Patriots believe, cost them a bid to the National Invitational Tournament despite posting a fine 21-7 mark, the first 20-game victory season in the school's history.

The Patriots are led by their high scoring senior, 6-5 forward Carlos Yates, who posts a 23.1 average, topped only by Navy's David Robinson (23.4) in the league. But Coach Charlie Harrison of East Carolina considers 6-5 sophomore forward Rob Rose (14.0) and 6-3 junior guard Ricky Wilson (13.9) just as deadly, if not more so, to opponents.

Their other starters include 6-4 freshman guard Brian Miller (12.6) and Vincent McQueen, a 6-7 junior center (5.9).

The Patriots stand 4-3 in league play and 9-8 overall following their upset victory over Navy at Annapolis last night, 78-74. That win snapped a long winning streak in Halsey Pavilion by the Midshipmen.

The win by Mason snapped a two-game losing streak. The Patriots lost their previous league outing with William & Mary, and then fell to Maine in a non-league encounter.

"I don't think this game is any more difficult (than the first one)," Harrison said. "It's just a game on the road. I don't know how (Mason will) react to their win. Basketball is a game of momentum. They're coming back home after a long road trip, too. We've just got to try and keep them from keeping that momentum going. They've got good talent, as good as anyone."

Harrison was critical of the way his team played against James Madison on Monday night, saying they had played the way they practiced. But has practice improved? Harrison was cautious.

"(Herb) Dixon has arrived and that helps a lot. But we're still looking for leadership from Curt, both by the coaches and the kids."

Harrison also said that there will probably be some lineup changes for the Mason game, but he was not sure yet on them. "We'll probably put Herbie in and bring Scotty (Hardy) off the bench. As far as inside game, I'm not sure, it'll depend on how they practice between now and then."

The game is the first of three straight league games on the road for the Pirates. Next Thursday night they travel to UNC-Wilmington for an 8 p.m. game to be telecast over Home Team Sports Network, then on Saturday, Feb. 9, they travel to William & Mary.

Johnson, Austin Capture ECAC's Weekly Honors

Richmond's Kelvin Johnson, a 6-2 senior guard, was named as the Player of the Week in the ECAC-South for the week ending January 29, while Michele James of James Madison garner the women's honors.

Johnson scored 71 points in three road victories in the league for the Spiders, including a career-high 31 against William & Mary. The DeMatha alumnus shot 57 percent from the field and 89 percent from the line with ten assists and six steals.

James helped the Lady Dukes to a 2-1 week with wins over William & Mary and Richmond. The 6-0 senior scored 47 points, pulled 20 rebounds and hit on 71 percent of her shots from the floor. She surpassed 1,000 points for her career during the week.

Richmond's Peter Woolfolk, a 6-5 freshman front-court player, was named as the men's Rookie of the Week. He is named for the second straight week after scoring 49 points and pulling 16 rebounds in three games.

Elizabeth Bell of UNC-Wilmington takes the women's rookie honor. The 6-0 freshman forward hit 20 points and had eight rebounds in a 76-63 win over Richmond.

Navy's David Robinson continues to lead the league in four categories this week. The 6-11 sophomore is the leading scorer at 23.4, the leading rebounder at 10.5, the leader in field goal percentage at 63.4, and the leading shot blocker at 4.3 per game.

George Mason's Carlos Yates is second in scoring at 23.1, followed by Richmond's John Newman at 18.7. East Carolina's William Grady stands eighth in scoring at 16.6, while teammate Curt Vanderhorst is tenth at 16.1.

Vernon Butler of Navy is the #2 rebounder at 9.9, followed by Brian Rowsom of UNC-W at 9.2.

Keith Cieplicki of William & Mary is second in field goal percentage at 56.9, followed by Butler at 56.7.

Scott Coval of William & Mary is the leader in free throw percentage, hitting 93.8, while Johnson of Richmond is second at 88.9. Yates is third at 82.0. ECU's Vanderhorst is ninth with 77.8 percent.

Doug Wojcik of Navy leads in assists with 7.2 per game, followed by Mike Sampson of American at 5.6. ECU's Scott Hardy is sixth at 4.7.

Rob Rose of Mason is second in blocked shots at 1.3, with ECU's Leon Bass third at 1.1.

Newman, Johnson and Sampson are all tied for the lead in steals with 2.1 per game.

Navy leads the league in team field goal percentage at 53.6, while ECU ranks sixth at 48.1. Mason is the leader at the foul line, hitting 77.9, while ECU is last at 57.8.

UNC-W's Gwen Austin is the league leading woman scorer with a 19.8 average, closely followed by Richmond's Karen Elsner at 19.1. JMU's Betsy Witman is third at 16.5.

East Carolina's Anita Anderson stands seventh in scoring with a 13.5 average.

Austin is also the leader in rebounding with a 13.0 average. Kia Cooper of American is second at 9.7, followed by Elsner at 9.5. Lisa Squirewell of ECU is tied for fifth at 8.1.

UNC-W's Bell is first in field goal percentage at 57.6, while Witman is second at 54.5. ECU's Loraine Foster is eighth at 47.7, while Anderson is ninth at 47.6.

Cooper leads in free throw percentage at 83.9, while JMU's Sue Manelski is second at 83.9. ECU's Sylvia Bragg is ninth at 65.1.

Jody Thornton of American leads in assists with 6.4, while Bragg stands fourth at 3.9. Austin leads in blocked shots with 2.3 while Anderson is third at 1.2 and Monique Pompili of ECU is fifth at 1.1.

Linda Jones of Mason is first in steals with 4.1, while Bragg is sixth at 2.4.

UNC-W leads the teams in field goal percentage at 50.4 while ECU is third at 43.9. American tops the field in free throw percentage at 69.3, while ECU is fourth at 61.7.

Iowa Tops Hoosiers, Maintains Lead

By The Associated Press
Although he apparently had solved the quandary of Bobby Knight's revolving lineup, Iowa basketball Coach George Raveling wanted no part of the controversy surrounding it.

"I have enough problems coaching Iowa without worrying about what other coaches are doing in the Big Ten," Raveling said.

Iowa held onto its share of the Big Ten Conference lead with a 72-59 victory Thursday night over the Hoosiers in Bloomington, Ind., even though Coach Knight decided to return his veteran upperclassmen to the lineup.

The loss was the fourth straight for the Hoosiers, who hadn't lost that many conference games in a row since 1972, and came as Knight dodged verbal bullets from angry alumni and fans.

In Sunday's third loss in the skein, at Illinois, Knight had benched four of his five starters, including leading scorer Steve Alford. Only Uwe Blab, a 7-foot-2 senior, remained in the starting lineup.

With the rest of the regular supporting cast surrounding him, it was Blab this time who sat. He spent 14 minutes of the first half on the bench with three fouls and finally fouled out with 6:11 left.

"If we're trying to get our inside game going, we're going to have trouble when Blab gets in foul trouble," Knight said, avoiding direct reference to his change of lineups. "Blab continued to play well tonight... we didn't give Blab a lot of help."

Even Knight's players were instructed not to discuss the shakeup. "We're not supposed to talk," Blab said. Even to questions about his fouling out, Blab would say only: "It was just bad luck."

Raveling said he intended to force the ball inside, using his big front line of 6-10 Greg Stokes, 6-11 Michael Payne and 6-8 Gerry Wright to get Blab into foul trouble "because we feel that they are a weaker team on the boards without him." Iowa had a 29-22 rebounding edge.

The victory kept Iowa tied with 10th-ranked Michigan, a 76-52 winner over Northwestern, in the Big Ten at 6-2. Iowa is 17-4 overall. Indiana fell to 11-7 and 3-5 in the conference.

Stokes wound up with a game-high 21 points and 10 rebounds for Iowa. Despite the foul trouble, Blab led Indiana with 17 points, but he had only four rebounds.

The Hawkeyes went on a 21-8 spree midway in the second half to put the game away.

Michigan was the only Top Ten team in action. In games involving other ranked teams, California upset No. 14 Oregon State 42-36, No. 15 Louisiana Tech defeated Arkansas

State 80-73, No. 16 Nevada-Las Vegas beat San Jose State 70-56 and Old Dominion edged No. 20 Alabama-Birmingham 59-58.

Iona, meanwhile, lost the distinction of having the best record in the nation when it was beaten 102-85 by Holy Cross and dropped to 17-2.

Top Ten
Roy Tarpley, who missed two days of practice this week with the flu, scored 16 points as Michigan beat Northwestern for its sixth straight victory. Richard Rellford and Gary Grant had 12 each for the Wolverines, while Shon Morris led Northwestern with 17 points.

Michigan led 37-27 at halftime and scored the first eight points of the second half to open up an 18-point lead. Northwestern cut the lead to 49-37, but Michigan again took control, scoring six straight points to go ahead 55-37.

Second Ten
Sophomore guards Kevin Johnson and Chris Washington scored 16 points apiece, and Johnson's four points in the final minute helped California hold onto its lead in a Pacific-10 Conference upset of Oregon State. California led throughout the second half en route its first victory in seven conference games. Oregon State fell to 15-3 and 5-2 in the Pac-10; Cal is 10-8 overall.

Karl Malone scored 21 of his 26 points in the second half to help erase a two-point halftime deficit and lead Louisiana Tech over Arkansas State in the Southland Conference. Tech, 17-2 and 4-1 in the conference, did not take the lead until Wayne Smith's layup made it 53-42 with 13:23 left. With a little more than 10 minutes left, Malone hit a slam dunk that put the Bulldogs up 54-44, and Tech was never threatened.

Nevada-Las Vegas got 13 points from Anthony Jones, and the Rebels extended their winning streak to 15 games. The 16-2 Rebels have not lost since Dec. 8 to Georgetown, the team from which Jones transferred to UNLV. Nevada-Las Vegas, 9-0 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, led 36-21 at halftime.

Kenny Gattison scored the game's final six points, including the go-ahead basket with three seconds left, as Old Dominion rallied to beat Alabama-Birmingham in a Sun Belt Conference game. Gattison ended with 21 points. Old Dominion led by as many as 11 in the first half, but the Monarchs trailed by 58-53 with 2:20 left when Gattison took over. Alabama-Birmingham fell to 18-5 and 7-1 in the Sun Belt; ODU is 12-6 and 6-2.

Unranked
Jim McCaffrey scored 46 points and had 15 assists to pace Holy Cross over Iona in the Metro Atlantic Conference. Iona's only previous loss had been to third-ranked Memphis State. Holy Cross is 5-14 overall and 4-3 in the conference.

Moore's 28 Leads Creswell By Bullets

JAMESVILLE — Danny Moore fired in 28 points to lead Creswell to a 46-42 victory over Jamesville in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action Thursday.

In the girls game, Tammy Crisp pumped in 17 points and Robin Gardner added 12 to lead the Lady Bullets of Jamesville to a 40-16 thumping of Creswell.

Stenie Rogers chipped in 12 points for Creswell, now 10-2 in the conference and 12-3 overall.

Richie Ange led the Bullets with 12 points, while Robbie Harris tallied 11.

Jamesville held a 33-31 lead going into the final period, but Creswell outscored the Bullets 15-9 to take the win.

"We missed a couple of free throws in one-and-one opportunities that we didn't get anything out of," Jamesville Coach Bill Johnson said. "And we had a couple of turnovers that hurt us in the fourth quarter."

Jamesville, now 6-4 in the Tobacco Belt and 6-6 overall, hosts Bath tonight. The Lady Bullets are now

3-7 in the league and 3-9 overall, while Creswell's girls dropped to 5-7 in the conference and 7-7 overall.

New Putter Gives Miller Crosby Pro-Am Golf Lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller has his new putter, an elongated club of his own making. It's 46 inches in length, the longest in his bag. He puts with the handle tucked under his left elbow.

He said it keeps his wrist from breaking down, may extend his PGA Tour career, and "might make me a factor again."

It's a gimmick. Sure. He used that word himself.

"I just hope it's not a WOO-Week," Miller said. "That's what I call a gimmick that works only one week."

WOO-Week or not, it worked Thursday in some of the most difficult weather ever produced in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, a tournament infamous for weather that blunts and frustrates the efforts of golf's more celebrated performers.

This was among the worst. Bright and sunny, yes. But cold. Very cold — in the low 40s. And extremely windy. Gale force. So windy that 38 pros shot in the 80s, only 8 broke par.

"Throw grass in the air to check the wind, and if somebody gets hit with it, they get lacerations," Miller said after he'd hit 16 greens on the way to a 4-under-par 68 in the howling blasts at Spyglass Hill.

Most of the damage, however, was in the form of bruises to pride and patience and poise at Cypress Point — the most exposed — and thus most vulnerable to the wind — of the three courses used for the first three rounds of the Crosby.

It was at Cypress Point that Lanny Wadkins' subpar string came to an end. Wadkins, a record-setting winner of two of the three tournaments held this year, was 4-under-par after six holes. But he played the 12th and 13th holes 7-6, triple bogey-double bogey, and came home in 73, his first round of the season over par.

Actually, that wasn't so bad. At least by comparison. Par 72 was the best recorded on that course. And it was much, much better than these other developments at Cypress.

Tom Watson and PGA champ Lee Trevino each had a 75. Jack Nicklaus was one shot higher.

Others were not so fortunate. Defending titleholder Hale Irwin had a 77. Masters champ Ben Crenshaw shot 79. Cal Peete, who led the Tour in scoring average last season, withdrew after an 81.

And Hal Sutton, runner-up to Wadkins last week in the Los Angeles Open, had the highest number of his pro career: 87.

George Archer, who won this title in 1969, had a 69 at Pebble Beach and led the group within one shot of Miller's pace — T.C. Chen, who played at Spyglass, and Willie Wood, at Pebble Beach.

Tied at 70 were Lee Elder and Mark O'Meara at Spyglass and Mike Reid at Pebble Beach.

Big Bucks For Flutie

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Doug Flutie's five-year contract with the New Jersey Generals could earn the Heisman Trophy winner about $50 million over the next 40 years if he invests the money wisely, a Wall Street analyst says.

Flutie reached a contract agreement with the Generals of the United States Football League a week ago that reportedly will pay him between $1 million and $1.5 million a year. The pact also reportedly has incentive bonuses in the contract that could earn him another $1 million a season.

"Let's assume between taxes and living expenses he has $1 million a year to invest for the first five years," said William LeFevre, a stock broker with the firm of Purcell, Graham & Co. "If he put that $5 million into Treasury bills paying 7 percent interest he would earn about $53 million."

LeFevre added that total would be earnings before federal taxes.

There have been reports that Flutie could earn $100 million over the next 40 years from his contract with the Generals, but LeFevre said Thursday that figure was high.

"Many people in the financial community are looking for that type of investment all day long, and most are not finding it," said LeFevre.

The New York Daily News, quoting sources close to the team, reported Flutie could earn as much as $100 million over the next 40 years. It also reported the entire non-deferred contract is guaranteed by Generals' owner Donald Trump.

"In order to get $100 million you have to take a lot of risks and I don't think the 'Prudent Man Rule' would let anyone managing someone else's money do that," LeFevre said.

The money also might be invested in higher-yielding blue-chip stock like IBM, but LeFevre said even stocks like that sometimes don't have the best of years.

"To get $100 million requires a return that's once in a blue moon," LeFevre said. "It's a fantasy."

Generals spokesman Gary Croke said Flutie probably would sign sometime next week.

Attorney Bob Woolf has represented Flutie in his negotiations with the Generals and reportedly will manage the quarterback's finances. He was quoted as saying that the money from the contract could grow to $100 million over the next 40 years if invested wisely and conservatively.

Miller, who won this title in 1974 in the glory years when he was golf's Golden Boy, said his new, longer putter may "give me a few more years out here."

"It's kind of an anti-yips putter."

He said he lays the long shaft along the inside of his left forearm, tucks it inside his elbow and uses "the same posture, the same stroke."

"It works good, believe me," he said.

"I've got more confidence with it. I'm putting a foot harder on every putt, on some putts ramming it right through the breaks."

"It gives me a new dimension. I felt like a kid again."

He made a pair of birdie putts in the 15-20 foot range and holed another from some 45 feet.

But it was his ball-striking that may have been the key.

"I missed only two greens (one of them his last hole, where he made his only bogey) and on a day like today, that's not bad."

"It was a very, very tough day to play golf," he said.

Lee Marvin Deliver's Goods In 'Dirty Dozen'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The last suicide mission was just that. Twelve went out; only one came back.

"Those are lousy odds," snarls one new "volunteer" in "The Dirty Dozen: Next Mission."

"This is a lousy war," the recruiting major spits back. "And this is a lousy prison, and you have a lousy future."

Lee Marvin, the gruff, throw-out-the-book major, may be nearly 20 years older since the last "Dirty Dozen," but he can still deliver the lines and the goods. If you loved the 1967 original, you'll like NBC's "Dirty Dozen: Next Mission." You may even like it a lot.

The action-packed yarn is on Monday night, a male-oriented film going directly against ABC's "Consenting Adult," starring Marlo Thomas and Martin Sheen as parents who discover that their teen-age son is homosexual.

It's classic counter-programming.

Macho vs. sensitive. A male-oriented film competing against a movie that is expected to attract female viewers. Both efforts should be appreciated by their audiences.

The premise of Monday's "Dirty Dozen" hasn't changed. It's Europe, late 1944. A bunch of army convicts is given one chance to leave long-term prison sentences or slip away from the hangman's knot.

At best, it's a long shot: join Major Reisman (Marvin) in a mission behind enemy lines. The plan is to kill a German colonel before he can assassinate Adolf Hitler. The thinking is that Hitler is the Allies' best ally. His crazed policies are paralyzing the German army. A saner commander could mean a prolonged war.

Enter Reisman, a tough-as-nails leader who's in hot water with the army brass again. He's about to be jailed for a rules violation. General Worden, played again by blustery Ernest Borgnine, explains Reisman's alternatives:

Three years hard labor.
"New friends," the major dead-pans.

And a discharge, too.
"Now, you're getting somewhere," Reisman says.

But Reisman soon sees the plan to save Hitler as his own salvation.

Reisman is a classic anti-hero, the kind of figure war movies revere. He's a good soldier, but a poor marcher, particularly when the drummer is an incompetent officer. He respects military authority, he explains, "just not who they give the authority to sometimes."

Reisman, assisted again by Richard Jaeckel as the military police sergeant, hand-picks "as a diseased bunch of psychopathic misfits as the army has to offer." His lure is a get-out-of-jail-free card, provided they all obey his orders, and they can make it back alive.

Some of the same type dregs are back, but a weakness here is that the characters are not very distinguishable. They fuse into a blob, despite the movie's best efforts to find superficial markings. There's a black, a bigot, a Frenchman, a German-born American, a con-man and a hayseed among the bunch, but there's little memorable about them.

The big screen indelibly burned into our memory the original's misfits: Telly Savalas, John Cassavetes and Jim Brown with screen-size close-ups and hefty characterizations, but that doesn't happen in the TV mission.

Once again, the best part is the build-up: the selection process and training. Reisman is a master manipulator, a psych-job major on the order of the intimidating football motivator Vince Lombardi. On one level, Reisman even identifies with his Dirty Dozen; he's an outsider with a healthy disrespect for the system.

On Reisman's recruiting rounds in prison, a French prisoner takes an existential position on the penal system's short-range plans for him. "C'est la vie," he says.

"You don't have that many 'vies' left," Reisman responds. "But I happen to sell life insurance."

The script has no compunction about copying the original. (There's been talk of a "Dirty Dozen" series, but that could stretch the premise past breaking point.) Some scenes are familiar, some speeches sound identical.

Just the settings have been changed. For example, Reisman, symbolically, is on one side of the tracks; the men are lined up on the other. He tells them they have three ways to go: if they foul up in training, he'll scrap the mission; if they foul up in action, he'll blow their brains out, or they can succeed.

The mission itself is anti-climactic and far-fetched. It's full of twists, but also full of plot holes — and bullet holes, too. "Dirty Dozen: The Next Mission" will never be mistaken for the cartoon violence of "The A-Team." This shoot-'em-up fires real bullets.

Rivers' Town

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers has won a court review of her plan to establish a new town where she can set up a movie studio and condominium community.

A higher court overturned Wednesday a judge's rejection of a suggestion by Miss Rivers and associates that would have circumvented objections to the development.

She and her husband, Edgar Rosenberg, and developer Thomas Pileggi had asked the court to allow the land where they planned the development to secede from Northampton Township and form a new municipal body.

The Commonwealth Court ordered a committee set up to investigate the idea.

The development, outside Philadelphia, would feature a movie studio and sound stage, plus 300 condominiums that would sell for $100,000 to $1 million.

GREENSBORO (AP) — Twenty-five years after four North Carolina A&T University students sat down at a F.W. Woolworth store and asked for coffee and donuts, a plaque depicting the men will be unveiled in a ceremony today.

"We acted like we had been there before, very casual," said Jibreel Khazan, one of the former students, whose name in 1960 was Ezell Blair. "The waitress looked at us as if we were from outer space."

Khazan and the other sit-in participants said the event changed their lives.

"Ezell Blair, the boy, died there," said David Richmond, who now works at a Greensboro retirement home. "I'd rank it among the top 10 events in this century."

"It's the most important thing I've done in my lifetime," said David Richmond, who now works at a Greensboro retirement home. "I'd rank it among the top 10 events in this century."

"I don't think I can ever top... the feeling I got that first day," said

Franklin McCain, an executive at Celanese Corp. in Charlotte.

The sit-in on Feb. 1, 1960, lasted about 45 minutes. The store manager and counter waitress told the four that custom prohibited serving them. Two elderly white women encouraged them. A black lunch counter employee rebuked them.

The next day, the men returned with 23 fellow students, and 66 students came the following day.

On the fourth day, more than 100 students — including for the first time white students from what is north the University of North Carolina at Greensboro — demanded service at the lunch counter. Also for the first time, white teenagers and young men mobbed the store and heckled the demonstrators.

By the end of the week, 1,000 students flooded the streets of downtown Greensboro.

Within two weeks, similar demonstrations broke out in 15 other Southern cities, including Winston-Salem, Durham, Raleigh and Charlotte. Within two months, sit-ins spread to 54 cities in nine states.

In July 1960, Woolworth integrated the lunch counter.

Scientists Find Antibody That Neutralizes AIDS Virus

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer
NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Scientists moved closer to a possible vaccine against the deadly AIDS virus by identifying for the first time an antibody that neutralizes it in the laboratory, a prominent researcher says.

The finding by Maryland and Massachusetts scientists doesn't mean a vaccine is possible, but "it does prove man is able to make a neutralizing antibody" to inactivate the AIDS virus, Dr. Robert Gallo, of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., said Thursday.

Gallo, chief of the NCI's Laboratory of Tumor Cell Biology, said the antibody knocks out the ability of the AIDS virus to infect cells. The AIDS virus attacks a type of white blood cells called helper T-cells, which help the body ward off disease.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is marked by the inability of the body's immune system to resist disease.

Considerable research must be done to determine whether the anti-AIDS antibody will destroy the virus in the human body as effectively as in human cells grown in the laboratory.

The antibody was found to be particularly prevalent in blood serum taken from healthy people who carry the AIDS virus, possibly explaining why they don't develop the disease even though they are infected, said Gallo, who headed one of two teams that announced discovery of the likely AIDS virus last April.

The virus is known as HTLV-3, the third of a class of human viruses called human T-cell lymphotropic virus. HTLV-1 causes a form of leukemia, or blood cancer.

The recent discovery of the anti-AIDS antibody has yet to be published in a scientific journal. Gallo mentioned it Thursday while talking to reporters at a scientific conference sponsored by the City of Hope National Medical Center.

The so-called "neutralizing antibody" was identified by Dr. Marjorie Robert-Guroff in Gallo's laboratory at the NCI and independently by Dr. Martin Hirsch at Massachusetts General Hospital, Gallo said.

Reached in Boston, Hirsch confirmed the discovery of the antibody. But he declined further comment, except to say his findings soon will be published in a letter to the editor of a medical journal — which he declined to identify — and will be presented in April during an AIDS conference in Atlanta.

Gallo said Ms. Robert-Guroff found the antibody by growing a type of human T-cells in the laboratory and infecting them with HTLV-3. Then, in separate experiments, she combined the AIDS-infected cells with blood serum from people with AIDS, people with a condition called pre-AIDS and people who carry the AIDS virus but do not have the disease.

She then tried to infect more healthy human cells with the AIDS virus-infected cells that had been treated with the blood serum, but was unable to do so, showing "there are antibodies (in the blood serum) that knock out the virus," Gallo said. "It seems to be one type of antibody."

He explained that when the blood serum and AIDS-infected cells were mixed, the neutralizing antibody present in some of the serum attached itself to the covering or "envelope" of the AIDS virus.

HTLV-3 is closely related to LAV or lymphadenopathy associated virus, which researchers at the Pasteur Institute in Paris discovered about the same time Gallo's group discovered HTLV-3. Gallo said HTLV-3 and LAV are essentially the same despite a 5 percent to 10 percent variation in their genetic codes.

It is not known if those genetic differences mean the viruses act differently biologically, he said. If they do, it might mean that a vaccine effective against one of the 104 identified varieties of AIDS virus would not work against another.

Homosexuals, Haitians, abusers of injectable drugs and hemophiliacs are most likely to get AIDS, which is apparently spread by sexual contact, contaminated needles and blood transfusions, but not by casual contact.

Pharmacists Say New Herpes Drug To Be Available Soon

BY STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

It may be a month or more before Zovirax, the first oral medication to prevent or reduce recurrent outbreaks of genital herpes, is available at local drugstores.

Burroughs Wellcome Co., the drug's manufacturer, announced the approval of Zovirax capsules by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday.

Jack Tyler, pharmacist at Kerr Drugs on Jarvis Street, said the new Zovirax "will come through our warehouse channels," but "I'm not sure if it is in the warehouse."

"We will be ordering it. We've been knowing it was in the offing for some months," Tyler said, "and people have inquired about it. There's a lot of interest in it." But he acknowledged it could be some time before the capsules are actually available.

Kroger Save-On pharmacist Alison Peacock said it "may be two months" before Zovirax capsules are available locally, and said "I imagine it will be very expensive."

"We had a physician call in a prescription two weeks ago. Of course, it was not out then," she said, adding "there's been right much discussion, questions," about the new drug and "I think it will be used widely."

"People have been using the cream and want the tablets. It's a major breakthrough," Ms. Peacock said and "I imagine it will do fairly well."

Another pharmacist, Bill Brown at Hollowell's on

Memorial Drive, said a drug salesman was in Tuesday and said oral Zovirax would probably be available "next week."

"I don't know about price," Brown said. "New drugs are usually high."

Dr. Wallace Wooles, the chairman of the department of pharmacology at the East Carolina University Medical School, said, "So far it's the only drug proven to have any activity against genital herpes. In that regard it's a very positive contribution."

But Wooles emphasized that Zovirax "doesn't cure ... doesn't prevent repeated attacks," although "it does restrict the severity of attacks."

Dr. Jack Wilkerson, a physician with Greenville Family Doctors, suggested that "it will be a month or two before (Zovirax) is available for use. It will not be in drug stores for a least a month."

But Wilkerson said the oral drug could "certainly revolutionize the treatment" of genital herpes.

"All I know is what I've read and heard ... that it is somewhat effective for controlling herpes."

"Time will tell. Most of us will have to try this and see," Wilkerson said, but he added that the Zovirax cream has been available for three or four years and is "quite effective."

Wilkerson said, "We see a fair amount of patients" with genital herpes. "We used to see it occasionally," he said, but there seems to have been "an explosion in the last eight to 10 years."

Alzheimer's Tests Sought For New Drug

DURHAM (AP) — People diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease are being asked to try a new drug that may help some 1.5 million Americans suffering from the disease, Duke University Medical Center researchers say.

The disease is a progressive disorder that causes memory loss and personality changes. It is estimated to affect about 5 percent of people over the age of 65 and 20 percent of those older than 80, said Dr. James Moore, a clinical assistant professor of psychiatry and community and family medicine at Duke.

Duke researchers are recruiting Alzheimer's victims to try a drug called nimodipine, he said.

"Nimodipine increases blood flow to the brain and affects the movement of calcium ions in and out of brain cells," Moore said. "But it's not known if these or other, as yet unknown, effects of the drug can keep the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease from worsening."

Patients accepted for the study will go to Duke six to 10 times in the 12-week period for examinations.

"Some weeks we'll simply see how well the person is tolerating the medicine and measure blood pressure, pulse and respiration rate," said Shari Waldstein, a research technician for the study.

Cancer Databank Service Operating

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cancer Institute says it wants to team the family doctor and the personal computer to ensure that cancer patients get the most advanced treatments available.

The institute on Thursday unveiled a computer databank that doctors can call for the latest information on cancer treatment and research, plus directories of specialists and institutions.

The computer can save the physician hours of combing through medical library shelves, said Dr. Vincent DeVita Jr., director of the cancer institute. And it can help ensure that a patient doesn't miss out on advanced treatment techniques because his doctor wasn't familiar with it.

"Cancer is many different diseases, each with a different treatment," DeVita told a news conference. "In addition, changes and improvements in treatments are occurring rapidly. No one individual can keep up."

"As a result, problems faced by a primary care physician — who is not a cancer specialist — are monumental when planning the treatment of a cancer patient," he said.

The cancer institute's answer is called PDQ, for Physicians Data Query. It is now available through BRS-Saunders, a commercial databank company, and through more than 2,000 medical libraries, he said. The institute is negotiating with other services that may also carry PDQ, he said.

Martin Kahn, president of BRS-Saunders, said the service is available for a $50 sign-up fee. DeVita said the average search likely would cost a physician less than $10.

More than 80 different types of cancer are covered by the database, DeVita said, and the physician can quickly determine if a particular cancer is curable and, if so, how.

The information will be updated monthly based on reviews of new research by more than 70 physicians who serve on editorial review boards.

Should a standard treatment not be available, DeVita said, the physician can also see a directory of more than 1,000 clinical studies under way, where the patient may get experimental treatment.

And, should doctors want to refer the patient to a specialist, they can also see a list of 10,000 cancer specialists and some 2,000 institutions with cancer programs.

The PDQ system is not being offered to the general public, DeVita said. But people with questions about cancer can call the cancer institute.

Drug May Offer Effective Deterrent To Gum Disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers are trying to determine if a drug used to treat arthritis can effectively slow the bone loss associated with gum disease — an ailment believed to afflict most adults in varying degrees.

The anti-inflammatory drug flurbiprofen shows promise stopping bone loss in animal tests and researchers say they have begun a human trial to see if it works for people.

Scientists with the Harvard School of Dental Medicine said Thursday that the drug blocks a chemical that apparently plays a major role in destroying bone tissue in the jaw.

In a report published today in the journal Science, researchers said a two-year study with dogs showed that daily administration of low doses of flurbiprofen greatly reduced the expected amount of bone loss with periodontal, or gum, disease.

Bone loss is a major complication of gum disease, which is believed to affect the majority of adults to varying degrees. Those with this disease lose healthy teeth when the supporting jaw structure wastes away, experts say.

"If flurbiprofen has the same inhibiting effect on bone resorption (loss) in the human," said the report, "this agent could provide an effective method for treating chronic destructive periodontal disease."

Dr. Paul Goldhaber, dean of the Harvard school and senior investigator during the study, said in a telephone interview that researchers have begun a human test with 60 patients.

"Based on the results with beagles, we think the treatment looks promising for humans," Goldhaber said. "We have started a trial that probably would to go on for a couple of years to find out."

Past research has linked the breakdown of arachidonic acid in the body with bone loss. The resulting byproduct chemicals have been associated with bone degradation in a number of conditions, including gum disease, dental cysts and rheumatoid arthritis.

Drs. Ray C. Williams, Marjorie K. Jeffcoat, Michael L. Kaplan and Goldhaber decided to test flurbiprofen on dogs because it inhibits the action of some of these byproducts.

H.G. Johnson and W.J. Wechter of the Upjohn Co., in Kalamazoo, Mich., which markets flurbiprofen under the name Ansaid, also worked on the study.

Twelve adult beagles were selected for the test because these animals have naturally occurring gum disease with bone regression that is very similar to the human problem.

The researchers measured progressive bone loss for six months before beginning a 12-month treatment period. Some animals received no treatment and some surgical gum separation and routine cleaning, a common therapy for humans.

In each of these two groups of animals, half received daily, oral flurbiprofen and half did not.

"With flurbiprofen administration, the observed amount of bone lost in the treatment period was 66 percent less than the expected amount," the report said.

"When flurbiprofen administration was combined with local periodontal treatment, bone loss in the treatment period was 91 percent less than the expected amount," it continued.

The report noted that after treatment was discontinued, bone loss returned during the next six months.
