Commissioners OK Merger Bill

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners — by a vote of 5 to 1 — gave its approval Monday to proposed legislation which would merge the Pitt County and Greenville school units on July 1, 1986.

The board met Jan. 30 to consider the proposed bill, approved by the schools consolidation committee earlier this month. The proposal outlines steps needed to consolidate the school systems, including the make-up, terms of office and election of a board to govern the new system. The commissioners earlier had postponed action after a group of about 35 citizens voiced concerns over the measure.

Although consideration of the proposed legislation was not on Monday's agenda, Commissioner Charles Gaskins asked the board to consider the question "right now." Commissioner Eugene James said "I would object, of course," but other members of the board agreed to Gaskins' request.

In the ensuing discussion, Gaskins questioned a section of the bill which refers to a resolution, adopted by the commissioners last September, creating a capital reserve fund for school construction.

The last sentence of the section says, "The continuation of the capital reserve fund is subject to any dramatic change in the economic conditions in Pitt County as the County Commissioners, in their discretion, shall deem advisable if the said continuation should become unduly burdensome on the taxpayers of Pitt County."

Gaskins said, "I just think that statement is not needed." Board Chairman Kelly Barnhill agreed. "It doesn't change anything," he said.

County Attorney Bill Watson said the sentence "may be redundant. The same language is used in the resolution." Although pointing out "it's your escape clause," Watson said, "I see no purpose in it remaining in the act."

James then told commissioners, "I've never said I was against merger ... or for merger. I'm for the betterment of Pitt County."

"A lot of misunderstanding has developed" over the consolidation issue, James noted.

Gaskins then moved to "approve the legislation," with a suggestion to delete the "repetitious and superfluous" sentence. The motion was seconded by Commissioner Burney Tucker.

"There's a lot of dissatisfaction with the plan," James said then. "Minorities will not have anybody to represent them. Local areas will not determine who they will elect. We will lose more and more control of our public schools."

James then made a motion to amend the proposed legislation by adding a section calling for a referendum on the question of merger — "that the citizens of the County of Pitt be given the opportunity to vote and upon approval ... (the merger plan) be implemented."

"On the showdown, I'd probably vote for it," James said. "When I politicked" for election to the board, "I said I would let the people decide," James said.

"I will ... regardless of what happens, be with you 100 (percent)," James told his fellow commissioners.

There was no second to James' proposed amendment, and (Please turn to page 10)

Legislators Meet

RALEIGH (AP) — House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan today urged the 136th General Assembly to improve North Carolina's schools, spend carefully and help rural counties participate in the state's economic growth.

"We must be cautious and prudent with our spending," said Ramsey in a speech prepared for delivery on the 1985 legislative session's opening day. "We must not lay out a single dime or dollar that is not absolutely needed to meet a clearly demonstrated need."

Jordan, presiding over his first Senate session as lieutenant governor, said lawmakers should allocate money "where it will do the most good for the most people without waste and without duplication."

"This state's ability to provide for its future needs is dependent on its sound economic development," Jordan said in prepared remarks. "We must look for ways to encourage sound economic development without penalizing local governments and without depriving citizens of the basic needs of life."

Warning that the economy "could slip into a mild recession" this year, Ramsey said the Legislature had to fund public schools and the community college and university systems. Other needs that must be met include health care and other human services, environmental protection and good roads, he said.

While the state should seek federal funding and develop its interstate system, the 65 counties through which interstates don't pass shouldn't be forgotten, Ramsey said. Less developed counties also should get help with their school systems, he said.

"I feel that the underdeveloped counties are making a maximum effort but simply do not have the financial resources of the more industrialized counties," said Ramsey, a Democrat from mountainous Madison County.

ECU Nuclear Satirists Win Approval As Political Club

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Some Brown University students may think suicide is the answer to surviving nuclear war, but a group of East Carolina University undergraduates who call themselves the Wolverines say they won't take holocaust lying down.

The Wolverines, a budding, conservative ECU student organization whose mission is to convince others that coping out gets you nowhere, received formal recognition from the ECU Student Government Association Monday night after having its constitution turned down last week by skeptical student legislators.

The legislature, by a vote of 13 to 15, initially refused to sanction the Wolverine constitution on the basis of inappropriate language, especially in a passage that said members "may be required to vandalize pictures of Sandinistas and to own at least one weapon."

Saying the legislature was taking the whole situation out of context, Wolverine organizers Dennis Kilcoyne and Gordon Walker told legislators Monday night they had hoped the constitution would bring a laugh or two. "We are a bunch of students who are very serious about our views, but we want to have fun while we're getting those views across. The constitution reflects that attitude," Kilcoyne explained.

In order to comply with university standards, the Wolverines revised the constitution, leaving out more offensive passages. The student legislature, in turn, then gave its approval accompanied by such comments as "this request reflects great creativity and imagination."

ECU Vice Chancellor Elmer Meyer, who regularly attends student legislature meetings, reflected that "the Wolverines could be a group that will offer stimulating comments on the political scene."

The gist of the Wolverine message, a jubilant Walker explained following the Student Government Association meeting, "is that under any circumstances, life is better than death. And while we don't advocate nuclear war, we would rather give life a try in the event of holocaust instead of taking a pill and ending it all. That would be coping out."

An avowed conservative and satirist like Walker, Kilcoyne elaborated. (Please turn to page 9)

Merger Plan Is Accepted By City

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night unanimously approved a plan of merger of the Greenville and Pitt County schools.

The resolution, due to be considered today by the county school board, and another resolution approved Monday by Pitt County Commissioners constitute the official enabling instruments which authorize putting into action phased-in merger plans over the next two years.

Adoption of the resolutions by the three boards concludes the path to consolidation following a request to the two school boards by the commissioners in 1982 for a merger feasibility study.

Jack Wall's motion to accept the joint resolution was amended to include a request by Frank Grooms that the city school board staff go back and re-study the issue of the election of school board members and consideration of a six-year term for members.

It was emphasized that inclusion of the amendment to the acceptance vote in no way affects the resolution. Consultant Delma Blinson, former superintendent of the city schools, said the amendment was a means of making official the desire of the city school board to have such a study made and to hold discussions on the issue.

Cold Rain But Little Ice

Although freezing rain spread a slippery path across much of central and western North Carolina today, Pitt County had only gray skies and cold rain to contend with.

C.R. Haislip, division engineer for the Department of Transportation, said area roads were wet but his office had no reports of icy roads in Pitt County this morning. "We have no problems at this time," he said.

A spokesperson for Greenville's Public Works Department said the department had its sand trucks loaded but by mid-morning had received no calls concerning icy streets. The department also had no reports of ice on bridges in the city, the spokesman said.

According to Greenville Utilities Water Plant, the low Monday night reached 25 degrees. By mid-morning the mercury climbed into the mid-30s, just warm enough to keep the precipitation that fell throughout the day in a liquid form. GUC recorded .02 inch of rain by 7 a.m. today.

A mixture of light freezing rain and sleet today in some areas prompted the National Weather Service to issue travelers' advisories for all but southern and central coastal sections of North Carolina.

Heavy rain threatens tonight, and a flood watch may be warranted for western North Carolina where streams and creeks were still near bankfull. Thunderstorms are possible along the coast, where a small craft advisory remained in effect today in the coastal waters and sounds.

More rain is in the forecast for Wednesday with high temperatures ranging from the 30s in the northern mountains to the upper 50s in the southeast.

Lows tonight will be above freezing and mostly in the mid 30s to mid 40s except near 50 along the coast.

Committee Accepts Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee, on a 12-6 vote, approved the nomination of Edwin Meese III to be attorney general today and sent its recommendation to the full Senate.

"Not only is Mr. Meese qualified to be attorney general, but he is a man of honesty, competency and dedication," said committee chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., moments before the roll call on Meese's nomination.

Meese's nomination was approved largely along party lines with all 10 of the panel's Republicans voting for him and all but two of its Democrats voting against.

"The degree of Mr. Meese's commitment to fair and impartial enforcement of laws is in question," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said before casting his vote against Meese. "Mr. Meese is associated with this administration's policies that undermine the principles of fairness and justice and with an administration which has hung out a sign saying 'white men only.'"

Democrats voting for Meese were Howell Heflin of Alabama and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona.

"Mr. Meese has been through a great ordeal, but he has not responded to the committee as I would have liked him to, nor has he been as forthcoming as I would have liked him to have been," DeConcini said.

The Arizona senator said a report of an independent ethics council which found no illegalities but questioned some of Meese's conduct and said the report was akin to a medical report saying "you have some warts and some skin cancer but nothing terminal."

The presidential counselor was first nominated as the nation's 75th attorney general in January 1984, but since then has been through two rounds of committee appearances — last March and last week.

The nominee said he did nothing wrong, but promised to be more careful in the future about creating appearances of conflict of interest.

In The Area

Eight Thefts

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of eight thefts reported to the department Monday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said the thefts included: a stereo, several T-shirts and a quantity of hair conditioner taken from Grier Rental Agency, 1100 Charles St., in a break-in reported at 9:16 a.m.; a purse containing $20 in cash taken from St. Gabriel's School, 1101 Ward St., in an incident reported at 11:16 a.m.; and two ladders taken from 622 S. Elm St. in an incident reported at 12:42 p.m.

Officer E.C. Moore said a bicycle was taken from 951 E. Tenth St. in an incident reported at 2 p.m., while Officer J.E. Fleming said $145 in cash was taken from 111 River Bluff Apartments in an incident reported at 12:06 p.m.

Two pistols valued at $400, a ski coat valued at $100, and two tie tacks valued at $70, were taken from apartment C-20 at 101 Laura Lane in a break-in reported at 6:16 p.m., Officer R.S. Sawyer said.

Officer J.C. Mulford said a large iron cooking pot was taken from a patio at apartment D-3 at 100 Laura Lane in an incident reported at 2:13 p.m., while officer C.A. Sharpe said $270 in cash was taken from 500 Elizabeth St. in a break-in reported at 4:05 p.m.

Drivers Charged

Cars driven by Sheila Hope Nelson of 110F River Bluff Apartments and Vickie Lynn Parrott of 303 Glasgow Lane were involved in a mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Ash streets about 3:16 p.m. Monday that resulted in an estimated $1,000 damage to the Parrott car.

Officers said the Nelson car pulled into the intersection, causing Ms. Parrott to swerve, lose control of her car and strike a utility pole.

Police charged Ms. Nelson with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety and charged Ms. Parrott with exceeding the posted speed.

Deputy Injured

An off-duty Pitt County sheriff's deputy received burns Monday afternoon when his mobile home was destroyed by fire.

A neighbor, Dennis Thomas, said deputy Ammie Eason of Route 6, Greenville, was apparently asleep in the rear of his mobile home when fire broke out. Thomas, who lives about 400 yards from the Eason residence, said he saw smoke, went to investigate and found Eason trying to get out through a rear door.

Firemen arriving on the scene found the structure completely involved in flames. Eason was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

The mobile home and its contents were a total loss.

Members of the Greenville fire/rescue squad and Staton House fire department members responded to the 5:02 p.m. call.

Investigation is continuing.

Curriculum Kit

Local McDonald's restaurants have donated to school systems in Pitt and Martin counties a curriculum kit to be used during February's Black History month.

The kit, "Black History Through Music: A Recorded Account of Life in America," includes a cassette tape of music, a teacher's guide, and student support materials. The program is applicable to students from kindergarten through 12th grade.

Wells Scholarships

Eight students at East Carolina University have been awarded $750 scholarships as recipients of Ausmus G. Wells Memorial Fund Scholarships. All are from Pitt County, as the program provides.

Recipients are Angela Fussell of Ayden, a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School; Kelly Hobgood, Farmville, Farmville Central High School; Veveca Adele Pulliam, Greenville, North Pitt High School; and David Matthew Jester, John Thomas Little, Timothy Wayne Brock, Lisa Bobette Barnhill and Kelly Moore Hardison, all Greenville residents and graduates of J.H. Rose High School.

The new scholarship program, founded by a joint arrangement between ECU and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., provides for awards to be given outstanding students and entering freshmen who are graduates of Pitt County or Greenville schools. Awards are based on character, leadership, scholastic ability and financial need.

After this year, two awards per year will be made to entering freshmen. The award is renewable for four years, as long as the student remains eligible.

Volunteers Cited

Greenville Recreation and Parks Department honored more than 270 people and several civic groups Monday night for volunteering time, money and equipment during the last two years.

Among the programs that volunteers participate in are the Special Olympics, Little League and Babe Ruth programs, Senior Games, Senior Citizens Club, Swim Club and many others.

East Carolina University football coach Art Baker, who had been scheduled as speaker at the awards session, was unable to attend the banquet due to obligations out of town. Parks-Recreation Director Boyd Lee spoke in Baker's place, recognizing contributions by city employees and urging Greenville citizens to become involved in the department's programs.

Lee said volunteers have saved the department $260,000 in manpower during the last two years. "We figured all the hours the volunteers put into helping the department and divided it by minimum wage. Of course, we know that the volunteer's time is worth much more than that," he said.

The highlight of the volunteer banquet was the presentation of a special award to Sarah Ashton for her outstanding work in promoting an active life for older citizens. Mrs. Ashton has been a member of the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club for 12 years, and for the last eight years has been president of that club. She has also been an officer at every level for the American Legion Auxiliary and a "resource consultant" for programs devoted to activity of the aging.

Selecting The 'Right' Day Care Place

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't pick a day care center because of a sales pitch, glossy brochure or spotless reception area with pictures of Mother Goose on the walls.

Rather, shop around, ask questions and ask for references. Also, inspect the premises and look for certifications.

It's even good to drop in for a surprise visit before signing up. This is one way of making sure the first time around you didn't get the cook's tour. Your child's well-being and safety are some of the stakes.

The American Academy of Pediatrics says such pre-planning before enrolling your child is the best course. To help, the Academy has put out a bulletin full of questions to ask. Here they are:

—Is the center willing to allow you to visit and observe your child any time? Parents should be allowed to drop in on their child at will.

—Who are the child watchers? "Workers should have warm, friendly personalities," the Academy says. They should enjoy their work. There should be enough of them to guarantee each child's needs are met and enough to get every child out in the event of an emergency, say a fire. The director, incidentally, should have a background in early childhood education.

—Is the facility licensed or registered with the state?

—Is there a supervised space for a child who needs rest and quiet?

—Is the child helped in making home-to-center transition at start of the day? And in making center-to-home transition at end of day? (Children should not be dumped at a day care center or picked up on the rug.)

—What is the center like physically? Playground and play area should be safe? "Look for loose-filled cushioned surfaces beneath all climbing equipment. Building should have adequate heat and light as well as proper plumbing and ventilation. Stairways should be equipped with handrails children can reach. Exit doors should be clearly marked."

—Is the center clean? "Attendants should wash their hands frequently. Specifically, they should wash their hands before feeding, and after diapering or helping the child use the toilet. In addition, the diapering surface should be cleaned and sanitized with a solution such as diluted bleach water. There should be adequate facilities for the children to wash, as well."

—Are there a variety of activities for the children? Plenty of books and toys? Time should be appropriately scheduled for play, rest, meals, other activities. How much time is spent watching television? What programs are viewed?

—Does the center provide adequate health services? All centers should have a medical consultant — preferably, a pediatrician or another doctor knowledgeable in child health when a pediatrician is not available. Staff should be able to fully explain emergency medical set up to you. Ask how emergency contact information is maintained and updated.

—What about nutritional needs? Does the center depend on junk food. Find out if the center can change its menu to accommodate specific allergies or other dietary requirements.

"The day care center you choose should meet the same high standards you maintain in your own household," the Academy reminds in a bulletin on day care facilities.

There a caveat for parents who may want to leave the main part of child-raising up to the center staff.

"... remember that a day care center should function as a supplement to, not a substitute for, the attention and care your child receives at home," the Academy said.

LIKES POTATOES
DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Baked potatoes are more popular in New England than in other parts of the nation, according to a restaurant chain.

William Welter, executive vice president of Wendy's International, said the mid-Atlantic and West Central regions are second and third, respectively, in baked potato consumption.

He says that since Wendy's introduced hot stuffed baked potatoes to its menus nationwide in late 1983, the chain has sold more than 600,000 a day, a rate of about 225 million potatoes a year.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Mechanic Has Problem Whistling Co-Worker

DEAR ABBY: Lately your column has been filled with letters from "poor widows" who are having a hard time coping. I, for one, am tired of these whining widows who don't know how lucky they are. They cry that they are alone, but they don't know what "alone" really is. I would rather have my husband dead than know that he left me for a cocktail waitress. That is alone!

Widows don't have to live with the pain of rejection. Widows don't have to lie in their beds alone at night, knowing that their perfectly healthy ex-husband is sleeping with another woman. A widow gets sympathy and invitations from old friends who knew her when she had a husband. Divorcees are avoided like they have leprosy.

A widow has a better chance of remarrying because no man wants a woman who has been publicly dumped. (He also knows that a widow has the whole pie—financially—while a divorcee has just a piece of the pie.)

Widows have no reason to cry about being alone. I see ads for tours and clubs for widows and widowers, but I've never heard of a club for 60-year-old rejects; have you?

I know there's no answer to this, but I feel better just getting it out of my system. Sign me ...

SEATTLE DIVORCEE,
OR I'D RATHER BE A WIDOW

DEAR RATHER: I know you're hurting, but don't measure every divorce by your own yardstick. Not all divorcees are "rejects"—some divorcees have dumped their husbands.

And yes, I've heard of tour groups and clubs for "singles" of all ages without regard to why they are single.

A word of unsolicited advice: If you don't want to be alone forever, lighten up and get rid of all that anger and bitterness. Group therapy could help you. Please give it a try, and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: While traveling in Europe last summer, I met a girl from New York, and we hit it off so well that we traveled around together for a week.

When she told me her age, I didn't want to scare her away by telling her mine, so I lied about my age to make up the difference. (She's five years older than I am.)

She's planning to visit me in Minnesota soon. Even though it will be embarrassing to tell her the truth regardless of when I tell her, I wonder if I should tell her before she comes to visit me. Or should I wait until she gets here? I'd hate to lose her.

MINNESOTA SWEDE

DEAR SWEDE: Tell her before she makes the trip. If you were sufficiently mature to have passed yourself off as five years older, I doubt that you'll lose her.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a mechanic with a problem I've never seen in your column. Please help me before I go nuts.

Have you ever worked with a whistler?

At 10 minutes to 8 in the morning, I can hear whistling as he is coming into the shop. And he whistles for eight hours continuously! No tune—just whistling. I don't know whether to cry, throw something at him, choke him or what. One day he was out sick, and I thought I had died and gone to heaven!

I finally told the boss. He said if I didn't like it, I could quit. (The whistler is his brother-in-law.) I need this job. What do you suggest?

GOING NUTS IN DUNKIRK, N.Y.

DEAR GOING: (1) Complain to the whistler—not the boss. (2) Wear earplugs. (3) Feed him crackers.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

For years, women tap-danced around their worth as wives.

Occasionally, someone came up with an impressive figure on how much you would pay a chauffeur, nurse, nutritionist, cook, mistress, laundress and bookkeeper. But it was all sorta light and amusing.

Until now.

A courageous woman, Diane Skomars Magrath, who is married to the new president of the University of Missouri, entered into a contract with her husband that would guarantee her $30,000 of his $100,000 salary for her contributions to campus life.

Ms. Magrath is not the only woman who has been a part of a package deal for too many years.

Let's hear it out there for a minister's wife who is in charge of bringing the house that came with the job up to code, teaching bible class, attending every pot-luck supper and bazaar, hostessing young people and women's guild in her home, raising children who are natural paragons of virtue and being a role model by smiling and looking holy every day of her entire life.

And what about the woman who stands at the right elbow of a school administrator? She's a staple at every sports event, glee club recital, graduation and variety show. She's a chaperone at every prom and shows up at every faculty dinner. In the early years she carpoools the team, grades papers, sells candy for the band and hustles change to refurbish the Statue of Liberty.

Military wives should share in the loot. If it takes a uniform to command a little respect, then the government should outfit them, along with compensation for diplomatic service in foreign countries, PR with natives and the hostessing of a thousand parties for good will.

Plumbers' wives should be given a per diem for answering the phone six hours out of their day and taking messages. The wives of politicians deserve a trust fund for their part in campaigning, not to mention those five-minute speeches they are called upon to give when they represent their husbands. (Plus a bonus for every speech they've heard 85 times and remained awake.)

It would be hard to put a price on doctors' wives who live by microwaves and die by the ring of the phone in the middle of the night. It would be impossible to reward the wives of editors who must field everything from the controversial lead editorial to why the paper boy insists on wrapping their paper around the antenna on their roof.

In fact, it would be hard to come up with a split for all the wives who keep it all together while their husbands are out there trying to make it.

If Ms. Magrath sets a trend, don't be surprised to find out wives are a luxury that most men cannot possibly afford.

In 1960, 24 percent of women between 20 and 24 who were married or had ever been married didn't have children. By 1982, 43 percent of the women in this category didn't have children.

Change

On the surface it might have appeared a rather discouraging report from the Industrial Extension Service at NCSU on the integrating of computers and robots to industries in the state.

The study concluded factory automation was slowed by a lack of trained people to operate the systems (so what else is new?). Only 36 percent of manufacturers surveyed said robots were being used, and some of those acknowledged problems.

On the other hand, more companies are using computers; mostly to keep track of productivity and inspect results, a first step toward robots. All this points to an edging into the automated manufacturing field. It does take time. There is no similarity to installing a television set in one's living room.

We have to remember that adapting to change is always difficult. There is an inborn quality of resistance involved in every person.

Unquestionably the field requires a lot of learning as well as much teaching. North Carolina's labor force is made up of all kinds of people; some of whom have limited education and many of whom have scant familiarity with the high tech concepts and equipment now moving into our lives.

Automation permits no tolerance for error. Under familiar manufacturing processes a worker might encounter minor misadjustment in a given machine and quickly correct the condition. Tomorrow's process will see all "corrective" measures taken before productivity begins. Computers have become the bridge between today and tomorrow.

Educators are very aware of the role computers will play in lives of their students; explaining why schools are bringing computers to students at an accelerating pace. Robotry is the next step.

Cultureshock is no catchword; it's very real. The big surprise is that people and society have been adjusting as quickly as they have to changes brought by new technology.

Not everybody can adapt to automation. Neither are all forms of employment adaptable to foreseeable changes in industry, business, professions and services. The human factor prevails.

Memories

Some Marine veterans of Iwo Jima will be marking their 40th anniversary in February with a rendezvous in Mississippi. The reunion is being held as an alternative for vets who can't pay to return to the island for ceremonies on Feb. 19.

Iwo Jima was drenched with blood of the Marine divisions assigned to capture the eight-square-mile volcanic island. Almost 7,000 Marines died there, and the count of wounded would have to be correspondingly high.

The invasion was a bloodbath for the Japanese defenders, too. Only a handful survived.

There will be a reunion of perhaps 225 American veterans of the campaign on the island. Maybe as many as 70 Japanese veterans of the 25-day battle will share in memorial services.

Survivors agree they share a special bond. All endured an ordeal only they can appreciate.

Death was a constant companion. Their memories include nightmares.

Legislative Battles Are Likely

RALEIGH — For political junkies, the 1985 legislative session will be less a battle of tax cuts and education reforms than of byzantine struggles for power. In this game, it matters not whether teachers get a 5, or 15, percent raise. What matters is who gets his bills passed and who doesn't.

In a political sense, this session will have as many exciting battles as an ACC basketball tournament. Each legislative chamber will have its intramural feuds. Between the WASHINGTON — Yet another "death watch" over the Kremlin by U.S. policy-makers has concluded that President Konstantin Chernenko's death would continue weak rule by the Soviet gerontocracy rather than challenge President Reagan with a new generation of resilient and imaginative leaders.

It is a fact established beyond a reasonable doubt both by State Department diplomats and the CIA that, one year after Yuri Andropov's death, the 73-year-old Chernenko is seriously ill. Private, though still unconfirmed, word has been passed to appropriate American officials by the Romanian intelligence service that the third supreme Soviet leader in two years has suffered a stroke.

Surprisingly, the charismatic Mikhail Gorbachev, at 52 the Politburo's youngest member, is no longer considered the heir apparent. The Politburo is viewed here as ready to gamble with another elderly stalwart — possibly Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, 75 — rather than hand power to the new generation that never knew Josef Stalin. That view by responsible officials in the Reagan administration suggests power in the Soviet empire is still split along the faultline of age, playing into Reagan's hands.

In the words of one administration official, Gorbachev made "too much of a good thing" out of his visit to Britain last fall, stirring jealousy among the Old Guard. Secretary of State George Shultz was told recently by ex-Carter administration foreign policy specialist Zbigniew Brzezinski of Eastern European communist leaders who believe Gorbachev is being groomed to succeed Gromyko in the Foreign Ministry.

Blocking Gorbachev or Grigory Romanov, the former Leningrad party leader who is young by the Kremlin's standards at age 62, makes Reagan's second-term push for nuclear arms reductions seem all the more dynamic. It would guarantee continuance of sluggish Soviet policy-making, ruling out bold initiatives in arms control or decentralization of the domestic economy that now approaches gridlock. It once again would sacrifice a change for daring Soviet open-field running against the U.S.

Reagan proved last year that he could test Soviet arms control policy and compel it to change. The Russians walked out of both strategic and European nuclear missile talks — then gingerly returned when Reagan made credible his commitment to the Strategic Defense Initiative.

When Washington policy-makers saw Gorbachev's immense success on his British selling tour, they uneasily watched an expert performer capable of charming the Western news media. Gorbachev became viewed in their minds as a dangerous Soviet leader who could influence public opinion against the U.S.

But a Politburo decision to stay with the gerontocracy would not likely present a similar threat — not even with the wily Gromyko and his knowledge of the West and command of English. Neither would Prime Minister Nikolai Tikhonov, 79, nor Viktor Grishin, 70-year-old head of the Moscow party organization.

The emergence of any one of these power-huggers — Gromyko, Tikhonov or Grishin — would replicate last month's selection of a new defense minister. The choice of Sergei Leonidovich Sokolov, an unexciting, 73-year-old bureaucrat to succeed Dmitri Ustinov, who died at 76, confirms Washington's judgment that the Politburo is not looking for bold breaks with the past. "They couldn't bite the bullet after Ustinov," one official told us. "Biting it after Chernenko won't be any easier."

That leaves President Reagan and his imaginative arms reduction policy facing Soviet trench-warfare tactics and a reduced element of surprise. The Kremlin must find a way to revise current positions to make concessions if there is to be real progress in the talks, and that demands resilience and daring — precisely the qualities now lacking in Moscow.

Moreover, the firmness of the U.S. position is not yet understood in Moscow. Max Kampelman, the new chief negotiator, wants on-site inspection to verify agreements on mobile missiles. He favors immediate construction of a $60 billion system providing "limited" defense against Soviet nuclear attack.

Such major departures from pre-Reagan arms control tactics would challenge resourceful minds of the younger men in the Kremlin. For the entrenched Old Guard, they threaten stalemate that would make the successors of Chernenko look bad and make Ronald Reagan look good.

Doctor: the bad news is that you've got genital herpes. The good news is on the front page of your paper of January 30th, titled "New Herpes Drug Being Produced Here."

What a boon to our local economy that little old virus promises to be. To (should I say Ms.?) Tyler's article's last sentence, "This would make acyclovir the second most commonly prescribed daily prophylactic medication, next to oral contraceptives," add "thus averting that other unpleasant complication of indiscriminate sexual behavior."

Columnist Now Likes Meese

WASHINGTON — Let it be said once more, loud and clear: Edwin Meese III is an honorable gentleman, well-qualified to serve as attorney general of the United States. Let this be said as emphatically: Archibald Cox is a pain in the neck.

As his most visible means of support, Cox holds down a job teaching law at Harvard, but for the past four years he has satisfied his squirrely passions as chairman of Common Cause. The man and the outfit are perfectly suited for each other; both are paragons of virtue. In a world of ordinary mortals, Archie and the Cause are creatures of light. They are insufferable.

Lately Cox has turned his formidable energies to a cause that appears to have obsessed him. He is working night and day to prevent the confirmation of Meese as attorney general. If Meese should be confirmed, he says, "we will be taught a dismaying lesson about the state of our public ethics, and about the moral code of the United States Senate."

The gravamen of Cox's relentless assault is that even though independent counsel cleared Meese in every way that counsel was empowered to clear him, that is not enough. Through a glass darkly, Cox sees evidence of "impropriety" at every turn. He sees "ethical derelictions and violations" wherever he looks.

Cox concludes a Polemic in The Washington Post with a paragraph that comes oddly from the hand of so pure a spirit: "The president of a large university asked me last spring: 'How can you and I continue to try to teach young men and women to recognize moral standards, if the Senate votes that what Ed Meese did does not bar his confirmation as attorney general of the United States?'"

That is what is known in my trade as "trust me" journalism. It is the coward's shot from ambush. No names. No attribution. Just an anonymous "President of a large university" weeping, sobbing, tearing his hair, bemoaning that he and Archie never again could teach moral standards to anyone if Meese were confirmed. Poor fellows!

Pfui! Cox implies in his newspaper article that he has read the whole of the 385-page report submitted last September by independent counsel Jacob A. Stein. I have read it too. Cox has his biases; I have mine. We see the report quite differently. Because my own soul is not illuminated by the blinding light of purity, I see in Stein's report no more than ordinary manifestations of politics and friendship, and I see no lapses of ethics or propriety at all.

I suspected such lapses a year or so ago, when the Meese nomination first was announced. For the good of the Republican ticket I publicly urged Meese to withdraw until the allegations against him could be explored. Enough had been disclosed to suggest a pattern in which Meese had peddled his influence in exchange for financial favors from persons he placed in fat federal jobs.

We now know there is not a word of truth in that allegation. Stein's meticulous investigation took in thousands of pages of documents; more than 200 persons were interviewed. Cox leaves the impression that Stein merely found no evidence "to warrant prosecution." The truth is that time after time Stein found no evidence, period. No evidence of impropriety. No evidence of ethical violations. Just no evidence.

To cite one matter only: It was alleged that an old friend of the Meese family, Edwin Thomas, made a loan of $15,000 to Mrs. Meese, without interest, and that in return Meese arranged federal jobs for the whole Thomas family. The facts were that Thomas came reluctantly to Washington at Meese's insistence to serve as his assistant; that Thomas hated Washington and wanted nothing so much as to get back to California; that with Meese's knowledge Thomas sought and obtained a post in San Francisco with the General Services Administration; that entirely on her own Gretchen Thomas first got a job as an unpaid intern on a criminal justice project, and then got a job in California with the Merit Systems Protection Board; and that their son Tad Thomas, unknown to Meese, got a temporary, low-paying job in the Department of Labor.

Stein found Thomas' employment entirely understandable. The loan was "not unusual, given the relationship of the two families." Only "the weakest possible inference of willfulness could be drawn" from Meese's failure to report the loan. As for Thomas' job in San Francisco, "the uncontradicted evidence is that Mr. Thomas obtained this position himself."

And so forth. Meese is a fully qualified lawyer, a former professor of law, and a faithful soldier for the president. Let us send Archie to revel in realms of glory, and Meese to head the Justice Department.

Strength For Today

We speak of habit formation as if this were something bad or unworthy. The truth of the matter is that habit formation lies at the basis of all our living. If every time we performed an act we had to start from scratch, we would never develop any skills whatsoever.

Throughout the whole of our lives we would be like infants doing everything gropingly and awkwardly. As a matter of fact, we would be even lower than infants in our achievement for the infant is growing. Were it not for the established processes of habit formation we would not grow at all.

We can create good habits as precisely as we create bad habits. The process is identical in both cases. Our lives radiate vitality and purpose when we establish the habit of automatically choosing the right and rejecting the inadequate, the insufficient, or the unworthy.

Stockman Dares Congress To Fix Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director David Stockman, conceding "problems in many places" in President Reagan's 1986 budget, is challenging a skeptical Congress to try to devise a fairer plan.

"There aren't many good alternatives and I think Congress will discover this," said Stockman, who was to argue the case for the president's $974 billion budget before the Senate Budget Committee today. Republican House and Senate leaders have made it clear they're not about to swallow the president's $974 billion budget whole and will use the document more as a starting point in their own deficit-reduction efforts.

At least two major programs spared from Reagan's budget knife — defense and Social Security — will be "on the table" along with other federal spending, budget leaders in both chambers said Monday. But Stockman said that, while he anticipated "a very noisy debate on defense," the administration felt it had already gone as far as it could go on Pentagon spending restraint. "Our plan is balanced and it's fair," Stockman told a press briefing. "I have no doubt political resistance and opposition will be strong. And maybe that is an understatement. But there are no alternatives." Stockman was the only witness before the panel as it began a full week of hearings on the president's budget. The committee was to hear from Rudolph Penner, director of the Congressional Budget Office, on Wednesday; Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Thursday, and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volker on Friday. Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said that neither Reagan's defense budget nor the president's vow not to touch Social Security benefits was sacred. However, even with further cuts in defense spending and even if Congress goes along with a freeze on Social Security cost-of-living benefits, "we still have to find a big chunk of domestic spending," said Domenici. "There's going to be problems in many places. The politics of this are going to be difficult," Stockman told reporters after he met Monday with House and Senate budget leaders. Asked whether the administration would be willing to reduce its Pentagon spending request, Stockman said the increase in the budget is "what we think is needed. It's too early to say what we're going to give on." Reagan's budget, which would abolish, freeze or slash scores of familiar federal programs, found few outright champions on Capitol Hill, even among Reagan's usual allies. House Republican Leader Bob Michel described the plan as a "starting point," and said, "I do not endorse every recommendation." Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., proposed cutting Reagan's $30 billion defense increase in half and declared: "It's going to be very difficult to do many of the things he (Reagan) wants to do." Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Reagan had proposed "a fantasy budget conceived in the land of never-ending deficits." And Democrats, who earlier this year had kept a low-profile on budget matters, came out swinging on Monday. Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, called Reagan's budget "unacceptable." Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas, the deputy Democratic whip, called it "unrealistic, unfair and wrong" and said it exhibited an administration that wanted "to ravage once again those who are poor." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Reagan's proposal "takes the pain of budget cutting directly to Middle America," although he reiterated his earlier promise that it would receive "serious consideration" in Congress. The proposed budget would end the $4.6 billion revenue sharing program to local governments; impose larger costs on the users of Medicare; eliminate the federal subsidy for Amtrak; trim the pay of federal workers by 5 percent and make deep cuts in farm and education programs. The Small Business Administration would be abolished, as would the Job Corps and the Legal Services Corp. The president on Monday agreed to voluntarily take a pay cut of 5 percent himself in his $200,000 salary — if Congress approved the pay cut for other federal employees. Spokesman Larry Speakes said the president would return the excess salary to the Treasury, where it would be used to help reduce the national debt.

Reagan Issues Economic Report That Praises His Administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a "told-you-so" message on the economy, President Reagan is reminding Congress about the two-year-old recovery and promises an even better performance if lawmakers and the Federal Reserve Board would only help. Reagan, in his annual Economic Report of the President sent to Capitol Hill today, takes full credit for "the strongest recovery in 30 years," mentioning the severe recession that preceded it only long enough to blame the Federal Reserve for making things worse than they needed to be.

Other references to the Federal Reserve provide two of the very few new policy suggestions in Reagan's brief message and in the report's 200 pages of economic analysis by his depleted Council of Economic Advisers.

The president himself says the administration expects "to cooperate closely with the Federal Reserve in defining and carrying out a prudent and predictable monetary policy" — a provocative statement in light of other officials' suggestions that the board's independence be curtailed.

William Niskanen, sole remaining member of the council, told reporters the idea of pushing for White House representation on the board — as suggested by new presidential Chief of Staff Donald Regan, among others — has not been considered at high levels of the administration. Pressed for elaboration, Niskanen said only, "It suggests that we may have something else in mind." One thing, apparently, is a recommendation in the council's section of the report that the Federal Reserve calculate this year's expansion of the nation's money supply from a different yearend 1984 base than it has used. The change would have the effect of expanding the board's money growth targets this year by $5 billion. That adjustment, arcane to most Americans, seems intended to forestall Federal Reserve monetary restraint that some officials fear could cramp the recovery. Reagan mentions the revival often in his report, crediting it to his longstanding policies of keeping taxes down and scaling back the federal government whenever possible. What the economy needs now, he said, is more of the same medicine, the president said. Noting that his new budget assumes steady economic growth through the end of the decade, he said, "We know that economic recoveries have not been stable in either duration or magnitude, in part, because monetary and fiscal policies have often been erratic." His own fiscal policy, despite record deficits, is properly aimed toward less spending and, eventually, a balanced budget, he said. He asks Congress to cut spending, to give him authority to veto items within bills and to pass the balanced-budget constitutional amendment. Reagan said another goal of his second term will be passage of a "tax simplification" proposal, which he intends to send Congress shortly. He reiterated his earlier statements that the proposal would be "revenue-neutral" — that is, designed to bring in the same amount of tax revenue as the current tax code. But his wording also seemed to suggest there might be an attempt to sell the plan as a tax-reduction proposal.

Atlanta Calls For CBS Suit

ATLANTA (AP) — The city council has given Mayor Andrew Young the authority to sue CBS Television over its docudrama, "Atlanta Child Murders," which suggests that Wayne Williams may have been railroaded on murder charges.

The council acted Monday as Young and other civic leaders met with network officials in New York without resolving their concern over the film about the Atlanta child killings. The meeting was to resume today.

The five-hour film, which is scheduled for national broadcast on Feb. 10 and 11, probes the case of Williams, who was convicted in the murders of two young men in Atlanta.

Authorities publicly blamed Williams for the slayings of 22 other young people, but he was never charged in any of the other cases. Young and others want air time to rebut the film's reported thesis that Williams was railroaded.

The council resolution says the film "greatly transgresses the bounds of decency and fair play" and authorizes the mayor to "take any appropriate action in order to obtain the relief due the city and its citizens as a result of the damage to be caused."

"I think it makes an almost unlimited amount of options available to the mayor," including legal action, City Attorney Marva Brooks said of the resolution.

Atlanta's delegation to New York was headed by John Clendenin, commissioner of the city's chamber of commerce and chairman of the BellSouth Telephone Co.

"We had a lengthy and candid dialogue and presentation of the feelings and concerns on both sides," Clendenin said, reading from a joint statement by the task force and CBS. "The session was mutually productive and we expect to continue and resolve our discussions tomorrow. Therefore, it would be inappropriate to comment further at this time."

Frozen Boy Recovering In Hospital

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A 2½-year-old boy who froze almost to death after wandering outside his house in 20 below weather wearing only pajamas is back to his playful self, kicking toys and balloons around his room as he makes medical history, doctors say.

"Our son was dead and he is alive," says Judy Troche, the other of Michael Troche.

On Monday, Milwaukee Children's Hospital upgraded Michael's condition from critical to fair.

Michael was found the morning of Jan. 19 after he wandered from his parents' home in the subzero cold. His body temperature was 60 degrees, compared with the normal reading of 98.6, said Dr. Kevin Kelly, associate director of the pediatric intensive care unit at the hospital.

"When he came in, the legs and arms ... felt like blocks of ice, and as you squeezed the tissue, you could feel ice in the blood, as you would crush ice under the skin," Kelly said. He said the blood plasma appeared to have frozen.

At a news conference with the boy's parents Monday, Kelly said there was no known case of an accidental victim of hypothermia surviving a body core temperature that cold.

"Accidental hypothermia has been reported down to 19 degrees Centigrade (66 Fahrenheit), as best we can tell in the world's literature," he said. "No one has any reports less than that."

Michael faces another three to four weeks in the hospital because of frostbite and skin grafts to his arms and legs, the doctor said.

He said Michael's neurological functions were 100 percent normal. The boy is expected to regain most use of his extremities, although there was an indication of muscle damage to his left hand.

Mrs. Troche had left for her job as a registered nurse before Michael wandered from the home. Her husband, James, was sleeping and their 6-year-old daughter, Chris, was watching television.

Michael may have been outside anywhere from 30 minutes to 3½ hours, Kelly said. His heart stopped.

"When he was brought into the hospital, he had no vital signs," said hospital spokesman Leigh Morris. "If you didn't know better, you would have said he was clinically dead."

Oxygenated blood was forced through Michael's body, he was connected to a heart-lung machine to warm his blood, and drugs were used to prevent swelling of brain tissues.

His arms and legs became swollen with fluid from ice-damaged cells, and cuts were made to allow tissues to expand. Skin grafts were used later to heal the cuts and frostbitten areas.

It took five hours to warm Michael's body to normal, Kelly said.

Chickens Die In Ice

By The Associated Press
The collapse of ice-laden coops housing more than three million chickens has crippled Alabama's $800 million poultry industry, while in Mississippi the loss of hundreds of thousands of birds has wiped out 60 percent of their stocks, farmers say.

National Guardsmen were helping water and feed chickens in five northwest Alabama counties after ice buildup from a weekend storm destroyed 300 to 400 houses, burying more than three million birds.

"It may have been more. The companies that own the birds are still counting," Holley Midgely, a spokesman for the Alabama Farm Bureau, said Monday. "There's no telling what the final figure might be."

Officials in both states said it was too early to determine the impact the loss of the chickens would have at the supermarket.

Chicken house roofs in the northwest Alabama counties of Lauderdale, Colbert, Franklin, Lawrence and Winston began collapsing after a severe winter storm invaded the state Friday night with a heavy coat of ice.

Midgely said chicken farming is an $800 million a year industry in Alabama.

Maj. Jack Underwood, director of National Guard assistance operations, said little could be done to help prevent cave-ins. National Guardsmen were helping to feed and water birds at about 116 chicken houses, he said.

"The only way really to prevent cave-ins is to get on the roof and break off the ice," Underwood said. "But they probably couldn't take the extra weight and we don't want to jeopardize the chickens further."

Across the border in Mississippi, the collapse of chicken houses has caused an estimated $5 million in damage to the structures alone, excluding the loss of many of the 750,000 chickens inside, said Conrad Twitty, Lee County extension agent.

Weather Eye-In-Sky Goes Blind

WASHINGTON (AP) — An old eye-in-the-sky has finally gone blind in the blackness of space, ending almost a decade of telling the country whether it would be rain or shine tomorrow.

The nation's oldest operational weather satellite — GOES-1 — has succumbed because of a burned-out lightbulb after more than nine years of service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced Monday.

The satellite officially expired at 12:05 a.m. EST Sunday after 9½ years of hovering 22,300 miles above the equator at various positions around the globe.

Loss of GOES-1, which in recent years has served as a backup for the more modern spacecraft that followed it, should not have much impact upon weather coverage, said NOAA, home of the National Weather Service.

GOES-1 lost its infrared scanner, which allowed it to see in the dark, in 1979 and recently has been used to take daytime weather pictures of the Far West regions of the country, such as Alaska and Hawaii. The agency said GOES-1 data would be replaced by information from its polar-orbiting weather satellites.

The old satellite, built by Ford Aerospace Corp. and launched on Oct. 16, 1975, died with the failure of the last of two incandescent lamps which controlled its optical scanner. The first bulb failed last year on Oct. 8.

GOES is an acronym for "geostationary operational environmental satellite." These satellites, because of their position and speed above the Earth, appear to remain over one spot unless purposely moved to another position.

The spacecraft take pictures of the United States every 30 minutes, enabling forecasters to track cloud and wind movement for their weather predictions.

GOES-1 went on standby status in 1978 after more than three years of front-line service. It subsequently became operational on three occasions when other satellites failed.

The weather watcher also supported the Global Atmospheric Research Program while on loan to the European Space Agency in 1978-79. During this period, it was moved to a spot over the Indian Ocean to observe Asia.

The satellite was pressed into service last August when GOES-5 failed because its lightbulbs burned out and spacecraft had to be moved to make up for the lost coverage. GOES-1 took over some of the surveillance duty until it lost its first bulb, which caused its scanner to rotate too far and stick.

Engineers brought the spacecraft back on line Oct. 17 when they repeatedly fired one of its small thruster rockets, shaking the satellite back and forth until they freed the scanner bearings that had been stuck in congealed lubricant.

Now that GOES-1 is dead, NOAA said it plans to boost the satellite out of its stationary orbit so that the position can be used by a future spacecraft.

Nerve Gas OK Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's latest request for money to build new U.S. chemical weapons may be headed for the same close defeat it suffered the past three years, a leader of the Senate's anti-nerve gas effort says.

The budget sent to Congress on Monday by President Reagan includes money to permit the Army to build a new generation of nerve gas weapons, the only weapons system Congress has refused Reagan during his record defense buildup.

The rationale used Monday by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was the same as the past three years: new U.S. weapons are needed to offset an expanding Soviet threat and give the Soviets incentive to approve a new treaty banning the weapons.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said, "I have a feeling we can defeat it this time. Maybe by only one or two votes, but I think we can defeat it."

The vote in the Republican-controlled Senate will likely be as close as it was two years ago, Pryor noted, when Vice President George Bush twice cast the tie-breaking vote to keep alive the effort for new weapons. But the Defense Department lost when the issue later went to a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differing versions of defense spending bills.

The United States stopped making gas weapons in 1969 when President Nixon ended the U.S. program. The American stockpile is composed of gas weapons built before then, but the Pentagon says about 90 percent of the U.S. weapons are so old they are dangerous to use or store.

Meanwhile, according to the Reagan administration, the Soviets have built a large amount of gas weapons and have used them, or sponsored their use, in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

Libya Frees Four Britons Held Since May

LONDON (AP) — As a goodwill gesture to the Church of England, Libya today freed four Britons it had held since May 1984 in the aftermath of the Libyan Embassy siege in London, a Libyan government spokesman said in Tripoli.

At a news conference televised live in London, the spokesman said the four Britons "henceforth ... are free either to stay in Libya or leave for any other country."

The prisoners, two of whom were never charged, were turned over to Terry Waite, special envoy of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, head of the Church of England.

The release, originally scheduled for Monday, had been delayed for 24 hours, apparently because of Libyan anger over a memorial service held in London for the British policewoman killed during the Libyan Embassy siege in April 1984.

The four Britons — engineers Malcolm Anderson and Robin Plummer and teachers Michael Berdinner and Alan Russell — appeared at the news conference after the decision was announced.

It was not clear when they would leave the north African country.

The government spokesman, Mohammed Alhijazi, announced their release at a hall packed with foreign journalists and brightly lit by television cameras.

Speaking in Arabic with a sentence-by-sentence English translation, the spokesman said the decision to free the men was made by the Basic People's Congresses, Libya's socialist legislative bodies, "as a courtesy and gesture of good will toward the Anglican Church."

Waite, a towering soft-spoken man, had made four trips to Libya since Christmas to secure release of the men.

He had several meetings with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, whose clenched-fist portrait loomed behind the government spokesman as he painstakingly outlined the steps leading to the men's release.

The spokesman said Khadafy had left the matter in the hands of the Basic People's Congresses.

"The congresses gave the item priority," he said. "This was done in the belief that lasting relationships are between people and because of their keen desire to maintain good relations with the British people."

Britain broke diplomatic relations with Libya following the embassy siege during which policewoman Yvonne Fletcher was killed by shots police said were fired from inside the embassy during an anti-Khadafy demonstration. Eleven Libyan demonstrators were wounded.

Libya has consistently denied that the shots were fired from inside the embassy.

Adding further drama to the release, Alhijazi said that some of the Basic People's Congresses had wanted to attach conditions to the release.

Among the conditions, the spokesman said, were that the British government attempt to free four Libyans who went on trial in Britain Monday on charges of taking part in a bombing campaign aimed at Khadafy.

However, "the overwhelming majority" of the congresses favored the immediate release of the men, the spokesman said.

The four Britons had been held under armed guard at a villa outside Tripoli.

Monday's delay was believed to be linked to the memorial service during which Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher unveiled a plaque to the policewoman killed during the embassy siege. The official Libyan news agency had hinted her gesture could delay the planned release.

Russell, a 49-year-old English teacher, was arrested May 13, 1984, on charges of possessing state secrets, communicating with the British Broadcasting Corp. and being in Libya without proper documents. Four weeks ago, a Libyan court ordered him jailed for three months.

Anderson, 27, an engineer with the Arabian Gulf Oil Co., was accused of trying to leave Libya with letters containing defamatory information about the country. He was arrested at Tripoli Airport last June but was not charged until December.

Plummer, a British Telecom engineer, and Berdinner, a lecturer at the University of Tripoli, were held without charges.

Spain Restores Link With Gibraltar

GIBRALTAR (AP) — At 30 seconds past midnight, a Spaniard swung open a green metal gate today, letting the first cars cross the border from Gibraltar in the 16 years since Spanish leader Francisco Franco shut off the British colony from Europe.

Franco's hope was that he would win back for Spain the "guardian of the Mediterranean." His wish has not come true.

But the opening of the frontier barrier was a precondition for the start of talks today in Geneva, Switzerland, between British and Spanish officials over the future of the 2.2 square-mile fortress colony and its 31,183 inhabitants.

The negotiations, to settle centuries of enmity over the rock at the point where the Mediterranean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean meet, could take years. They mark the first time Britain has agreed to discuss Spain's claim of sovereignty.

Rejoicing over the easing of travel restrictions between Gibraltar and Spain was tempered by uncertainty over how the changes will affect the colony's unusual lifestyle.

Since 1969, Gibraltarians have depended on deliveries from Britain for meat and other staples, and fruits and vegetables are brought in daily from Morocco, some 10 miles across the Strait of Gibraltar.

Police in Gibraltar wear blue British bobby uniforms and speak Spanish, girls who keep shop wait on foreigners in English but chat among themselves in Spanish and winning numbers in the weekly lottery are read out in both languages in the central square.

Moroccan women in ankle-length robes, the lower-half of their faces covered with a white cloth and their feet painted with henna, walk down the sidewalk along with schoolgirls in Scottish tartans and "punk" followers wearing black leather and gold earrings.

With the easing of restrictions today, people who are not Gibraltarians or Spaniards can cross the border. Spaniards and Gibraltarians have been allowed to cross on foot since December 1982.

Britain has had possession of Gibraltar since 1704. Spain ceded Gibraltar to Britain through the 1713 Treaty of Utrecht but has been trying through the years to gain back area, which today is taken up mainly by military installations.

The electronic eyes and ears of NATO keep watch from Gibraltar over the strait through which 50,000 ships of all nations pass every year.

Tiles Force New Delay For Shuttle

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Troublesome thermal tiles and backlogged paperwork have combined to force a delay of at least one week in the next space shuttle launch, originally scheduled for Feb. 20, a published report said.

The launch of space shuttle Challenger will be "no earlier than the 27th, possibly the 28th," the newspaper Today quoted NASA spokesman Charles Redmond as saying Monday night. "We expect a firm launch date by the end of this week."

The flight, Mission 51-E, has attracted attention as the first shuttle voyage to carry a civilian passenger, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

But the civilian payload has nothing to do with the delay. The problem is the thermal protection tiles on the underside of Challenger, Redmond said. A chemical reaction in their adhesive has caused about 4,000 of the more than 32,000 tiles to loosen.

Though most of the faulty tiles already have been replaced, the repair work hasn't been properly certified, Redmond said.

"It's not so much the tiles as the documentation that goes with the tiles," Redmond said. "All that paperwork needs to catch up with that work now."

Other members of the crew include mission commander Karol Bobko, co-pilot Donald Williams, mission specialists M. Rhea Seddon, Jeffrey Hoffman, S. David Griggs and French astronaut Patrick Baudry.

The astronauts are scheduled to deploy a Telesat Canada commercial telecommunication satellite and a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay satellite into higher orbit.

Guerrillas Cut Electric Power During Pope's Visit

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Guerrilla saboteurs blacked out Lima's airport shortly before Pope John Paul II's plane landed, and then cut power to the sprawling capital of 5 million, police and airport control tower officials said.

Moments later, a huge hammer and sickle — the symbol of the Maoist Shining Path Movement — was set ablaze on a mountainside north of Lima.

The show of sabotage appeared to be a dramatic rejection of the pope's call for an end to violence in Peru.

In the fourth and final day of his visit to Peru, the pope goes today to the shantytown of Villa El Salvador and the Amazon city of Iquitos. He then travels to Trinidad-Tobago, the last stop on his 12-day, four-nation journey.

Police tightened security after the Monday evening incidents which started, according to police and airport control tower officials, after two explosions occurred northeast and east of the city as the pontiff's two-engine jet returned from northern Peru.

The officials said the runway lights went out at 8:45 p.m., but the pontiff's plane landed safely in the darkened military section of Lima airport. They said power at the airport was restored almost immediately by a back-up generating system.

Shining Path guerrillas have caused blackouts in the past by blowing up utility poles, and it was believed those might have been the explosions the air controllers saw. But the controllers were unsure if the blasts caused the airport blackout.

The chief Vatican spokesman, Monsignor Pierfranco Pastore, gave a different account of the incidents, saying the pope's plane was on the ground 10 minutes before the runway lights went out.

Officials of Electrolima, the state utility, blamed the power outages in the city on the Shining Path. They said the power was cut when a main line that delivers electricity was downed in Huancayo, 200 miles east of Lima.

It was the tenth blackout in the capital in 2½ years that has been blamed on the guerrilla group. There was a 70-minute blackout in parts of Lima the day the pope arrived.

Power was restored in some parts of Lima within an hour but others remained in darkness.

John Paul spent the night at the papal ambassador's residence.

'Symbol Of Humanity'

ROME (AP) — Mehmet Ali Agca says that when he tried to kill Pope John Paul II almost four years ago, he viewed the pope as the "incarnation of imperialism," but he now rejects terrorism and sees the pontiff as a "symbol of humanity."

The 25-year-old Turk, who is serving a life sentence for the shooting, was interviewed in Rome's Rebibbia prison by Italian reporter Enzo Biagi for the state-run television.

The TV station said the interview took place "a couple of days ago." It was broadcast Monday.

Joyner Recognized By Pitt Board For State Honor

The County Commissioners belatedly honored Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner Monday for his selection as fireman of the year for 1984 by the N.C. State Firemen's Association last August.

Board Chairman Kelly Barnhill, telling Joyner the board learned of his selection for the state honor in January, read a resolution offering the board's appreciation for Joyner's "dedicated and loyal service to Pitt County" and the board's "congratulations and commendation."

Joyner has served as county fire marshal since Jan. 15, 1971. Joyner, responding to the resolution, told commissioners he "would not be standing here," except for the support of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the support given by members of the various fire and rescue departments in the county.

In other business Monday, the commissioners approved the acceptance of an additional $22,570 in crisis intervention funds from the state to help pay heating and utility bills in emergency situations; authorized an application for matching funds of up to $37,500 to help fund the purchase of a new Bookmobile for Sheppard Memorial Library, and endorsed an application by the town of Ayden for a $25,000 grant from the state to help develop a park near Strawberry Banks subdivision.

The board also reappointed Sarah B. Sugg to the Sheppard Memorial Library board, Bob Langston to the Farmville Planning and Zoning Board, Allen Roundtree and John E. Smith to the Grifton Planning and Zoning Board, Commissioner Charles Gaskins to the Martin County Community Action Board, and Dave Stevens as a member and Martin Goldfarb as an alternate member of the Greenville Board of Adjustments.

Leroy James, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, told the commissioners that total farm income in Pitt County in 1984 amounted to $123.1 million. James noted that tobacco accounted for more than $52 million of the total.

rated: "Students are supposed to be the future leaders of society and we owe it to society to try and survive in the event of nuclear war."

Kilcoyne, also developer of the Wolverine ideal, said he came up with the idea to organize the student group in late 1984 following controversy created by Brown University students who asked university officials to stockpile cyanide pills for those who preferred death to life in a world poisoned by nuclear fallout.

"That's an attitude we can do without," Walker commented.

Now that they have approval to use university facilities for meetings, the Wolverines will begin the second phase of Operation Educate.

"Our next step will be to set up tables on campus and entice people to enlist in the organization," Walker said, adding: "I guess enlist would be the right word because this is war. It's a war against apathy."

During the membership drive, Wolverine members will also seek enough signatures to validate a referendum request on creation of an ECU Nuclear War Survival Kit. "We have to collect signatures of 10 percent of the student body or approximately 1,300 signatures, to have a referendum on this issue," Kilcoyne said.

The proposed imaginary nuclear survival kits would hold such items as gas masks, compasses, knives, first aid supplies, food, and a book called "What to do When the Russians Come," by Robert Conquest — an authority on the Soviet Union.

"The book tells you how to react when the Soviets come," Kilcoyne explained. "For instance, if you suspect you might be somebody who would be viewed with suspicion, say you're a journalist, the book tells you how to act and prepare yourself for possible arrest. If you feel you're someone who fits into this category, you will want to note passages where Conquest advises you to dress warmly at all times in case you're arrested and carried off to a labor camp somewhere in the north."

According to Kilcoyne, the Wolverine organization is pretty radical for a purported conservative group. "But if you just stick to your old college Republican meetings you're not accomplishing anything," he said. "Maintaining the status quo is not what this is all about. You have to be aggressive and go all out to educate the student body about a cause. Humor or satire can help you do that."

A little satire can go a long way toward helping you achieve a cause, if your audience doesn't take the wrong things seriously and miss the whole point, Kilcoyne commented. However, he added, "a lot of people have taken us too seriously and think we're a bunch of Nazis or something. We're just trying to get a point across and have some fun."

"We want people to take us seriously up to a point, because this is a very important matter," Walker elaborated. "A university is where most people form the attitudes they carry with them through life and we want people to walk away from ECU with an appreciation for life. We want them to walk away believing that life's worth it at any cost. We don't want them to leave thinking that whenever it gets rough they can just take a pill and end it all."

Kilcoyne and Walker are hoping their enthusiasm will catch on and spread, and by all indications, Kilcoyne added, it appears their dream is coming true. "Some friends at UNC-Wilmington and NCSU have picked up the idea so we're looking for them to pursue the survival kit idea, if not organize Wolverine clubs."

Dubbed Wolverines after a fictional group of patriotic youths who fight off a Soviet invasion in the movie "Red Dawn," the ECU organization now has approximately 10 members.

terms and procedures of merger action discussed is a recommendation made by the County Commissioners to delete from the study made by the consolidation committee Section 3f, which deals with the creation and maintenance of capital reserve funds for a period of five years.

Blinson said "the real issue we are dealing with in approving the joint resolution is whether or not the city school board members agree with deletion of the 3f section. County Commissioners have stressed the point that acceptance is not a condition for their approval, that they are offering it only as a recommendation."

A final recommendation for consideration, agreed on but not part of a formal approval, was Francis Mebane's request that the county board be approached to determine its stand on an affirmative action plan.

For the benefit of a contingent of East Carolina University students attending Monday night's meeting, Blinson briefly reiterated the terms of phasing in consolidation drawn up by a joint committee of eight county and four city school board members, spelling out dates of separate actions agreed upon by the committee and approved earlier this year by the two boards.

In discussions on approval of textbooks from the list of book choices approved by the State Board of Education in January, Blinson noted that some of the choices, particularly in the sciences, will create "some very real problems." He cited the textbook allocation of $15 per needed book for students versus the actual cost of several books which range in price from $18.58 to as much as $27.19 per book.

Two budget amendments were approved. Budget amendment No. 3 to State Funds is for an increase of $31,089, bringing the total state appropriations for the current school year to $7,837,571. Budget amendment No. 3 to the Capital Outlay fund is for an increase of $78,062, resulting in a current school year total of $353,338 for that fund.

Approval was given to two student trips. One trip is to Paris, France, to be taken by 15 students during the spring Easter break under the guidance of Sylvia Briley, who is a native Parisian. The group will visit Paris and other areas, including the provinces of Brittany and Normandy. The second trip is a three-day field trip to be made to Washington by ninth graders April 3-5, with a large group expected to be making the trip.

Two resolutions dealing with people were adopted. One is to the family of the late Johnson Elbert Spruill, who died Dec. 5, 1984. Spruill was principal of Sadie Sautter School for 14 years. The second resolution commends city school attorney Phil Dixon on his recent election as president of the N.C. Council of School Attorneys. Board members also asked that the school staff draft a resolution of appreciation to the family of Dr. Eugene Piner, former principal of Wahl-Coates School, who died last Saturday. Piner served as principal at the school at two separate times for a total of 17 years.

In a report to board members, Director of Administration Richard Preston said that, during recent rains, the roof at Greenville Middle School had developed leaks in five places. The tracial portion of the roof was recently replaced at no cost by the manufacturer; however, it was noted at the time that the shingles on the slope portion of the roof were brittle and would possibly result in leakage problems.

Preston said that school architect George Shoe was working up a study on future action, and indications are "that from the latest analysis, it will probably cost something in the neighborhood of $50,000 to carry out the necessary repair-replacement work ... something for you to think about down the road."

A report by Director of Pupil

Personnel Ann Harrison reveals that Greenville schools rank fourth lowest in North Carolina in the percentage of students dropping out of school. The dropout rate at Greenville's secondary schools, Aycock and Rose, is now 4.1 percent, compared to a statewide rate of 6.9 percent. At Agnes Fullilove, site of the extended school program, the dropout rate is 26.9 percent, considerably less than the statewide rate of 47.8 in similar types of programs.

"Our high standing, what has been achieved, is the result of a lot of hard work and planning on the part of many people," Mrs. Harrison commented.

Mrs. Harrison also reported on the results of the fall 1984 dental screening of elementary students carried out in six schools with 1,519 pupils screened. The screening shows the percentage of students needing dental care ranging from 6 percent at South Greenville to 24 percent at Third Street School. Local dentists volunteering time to carry out the screening were Drs. Dick Evans, Bill Lee, Dan Warren, Jim Morris and D.H. Taylor.

Announcement was made of the appointment of Stella Chambliss as the new principal at Elmhurst Elementary School. She succeeds Leslie Martin, who has been transferred to Wahl-Coates as co-principal at that school.

Charles Ross, director of education at the elementary level, reported that a new type of IQ test was being administered this year for students in grades 3, 6, and 9. The tests are being administered today.

Major Janice Buck will continue to serve during 1985 as the City Council's representative to the Greenville board.

In executive session, the board granted four maternity leaves, one extended sick leave, and approved the election of eight personnel.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market forged ahead today, making a new run at record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 2.21 to 1,292.29 in the first half hour, challenging the all-time closing high of 1,292.62 it reached a week ago.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was no special news development driving the market. But they said traders had been impressed when stock prices advanced broadly Monday, defying many expectations of a pullback after their sharp rise in January.

Investors have appeared lately to be buying stocks as an alternative to interest-bearing vehicles like bonds and money market mutual funds, because falling interest rates have lowered their yields to relatively unattractive levels.

Stocks have also benefited lately from reports that the debt problems of several developing countries have eased significantly. It has long been feared that those problems might sooner or later put a severe strain on the international financial system.

Phillips Petroleum led the active list and jumped 3 3/4 to 50 1/2. Financier Carl Icahn made a $55-a-share offer to take over the company.

Among other early volume leaders, Hewlett-Packard rose 1/4 to 38 1/4; NCR gained 1 1/4 to 30 3/4, and International Business Machines was unchanged at 137 3/4.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 12.36 to 1,290.08.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 115.72 million shares, against 105.44 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .92 to a new high of 104.15. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.59 at 225.55.

Board ...

Barnhill ruled the motion dead. Gaskins then asked for a roll-call vote, "so the people will know how we voted."

Board members voting to approve the proposed bill included Gaskins, Barnhill, Bruce Strickland, Tucker and Charles McLawhorn.

When James' name was called by the clerk, he said "I abstain ... I don't know enough about it."

Told by Watson that "it's not legal to abstain" unless there is some financial involvement which would constitute a conflict of interest, James then voted "no" to approving the legislation.

The legislation proposes that: the county be divided into nine residence districts for the election of board of education members; that the terms of office be for six years on a staggered basis, and that board members be voted on by the electors of the total county.

GHA Expecting Full Occupancy

Greenville Housing Authority Director Joe Laney announced Monday that units at the authority's new West Meadowbrook project should be full by mid-February.

"We've been moving families in since Jan. 28 and 23 of the 40 available units are filled. We don't anticipate any problem with the rest, of course, and they should be rented up in about two weeks time," Laney told GHA board members attending the authority's regular monthly meeting last night.

Constructed with HUD funds and owned by GHA, the West Meadowbrook development is located in the vicinity of Pitt-Greenville Airport. The two-, three- and four-bedroom apartments that compose the new development are scattered throughout an existing residential area, bounded by Greene Street, Memorial Drive, the Tar River flood plain and Airport Road.

In other business, Laney reported the coming addition of 30 Section 8 existing units to the GHA roster. Section 8 housing is composed of private residences leased by the authority and rented to income eligible families.

"Two months ago," Laney explained, "HUD contacted us and asked if we desired any additional Section 8 housing. Of course we applied." The last time GHA was authorized to provide Section 8 rental assistance was in September 1982 when the addition of 20 rental rehabilitation units was sanctioned by HUD. The Greenville agency now has the authority to provide rental assistance to 150 qualifying Section 8 families.

Modernization efforts at Kearney Park, the authority's oldest development which will be 20 years old this year, are temporarily at a stand still, according to Assistant GHA Director Ken Nolan. Kearney Park improvements provided for in GHA's 1984-1985 fiscal budget include storm sewer maintenance, weatherization of all units and installation of new kitchen cabinets.

Laney said 111 of 120 existing Section 8 units are occupied and that 106 of 109 moderate rehabilitation Section 8 units are full. University towers, he added, is full as usual with all 60 units occupied.

Bias Leads Terps; Duke Rolls

Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell was glad to see his team rebound from a weekend loss. Virginia coach Terry Holland was just glad to see his team in person.

Len Bias scored 20 points as 20th-ranked Maryland coasted to an 87-75 victory over Old Dominion on Monday and snapped back from a loss to Georgia Tech. It was also Driesell's 498th coaching victory spanning careers at Davidson and Maryland.

At Charlottesville, Olden Polynice scored 15 points and Virginia limited George Washington to four points in the final 11½ minutes as the Cavaliers pulled away to a 51-42 victory, marking Holland's return to the bench after an intestinal illness which caused him to miss four games.

Fifth-ranked Duke breezed to an 82-53 triumph over Harvard as Mark Alarie scored 18 points and Johnny Dawkins chipped in 16 points and a career-high 11 assists.

Atlantic Coast Conference teams have tonight off, but on Wednesday, Duke goes to Georgia Tech, Maryland is at Wake Forest and Clemson visits North Carolina State.

The Terps, 18-6, led 33-16 with 7:28 left in the first half after running off its string, including four by Adrian Branch and four by Tom Jones. Maryland connected on 68 percent of its first-half shots while taking a 45-30 lead, and led by at least 12 points the rest of the way.

Branch finished with 15 and Jones had 14 as Driesell edged close to victory No. 500 in a 25-year career.

"Sometimes a defeat makes you play worse, or you lose confidence," said Driesell, reflecting on the loss to the Yellow Jackets that narrowed his first-place lead in the ACC.

Jones, who scored his points in 27 minutes, said he took Driesell's advice and came out shooting.

"Coach told me to go out and play the way I know how," Jones said. "He told me to take shots when I got them and not pass them up."

Kenny Gattison led Old Dominion with 19 points as the Monarchs dropped to 12-8.

Trailing 38-37, Virginia gained the lead for good on a three-point play by Polynice with 7:38 remaining. Kennedy lofted a lob pass to Polynice, who dropped it through and added the free throw for a 40-38 Virginia advantage which was followed with four more points on a Polynice dunk at 6:16 and Darrick Simms' free throws with 3:39 left.

Mike O'Reilly's jumper at the 2:48 mark, George Washington's first points in more than nine minutes, cut the margin to 44-40, but Virginia converted seven unanswered free throws over the next two minutes to put the game out of reach.

Virginia raised its record to 11-10 after losing to Maryland five days ago. Holland hinted that the layoff might have been responsible for his team's performance.

"If there's such a thing as an ugly win, this was it," Holland said in his post-game critique. "We didn't play very well offensively and we did a variety of things to try to pick up the tempo."

Holland said the game also corresponded with his physical condition.

St. John's Wins Three To Remain Atop Cage Polls

By The Associated Press

St. John's, which has won all three of its games since assuming the No. 1 ranking, remains atop The Associated Press college basketball announced today.

The Redmen, 18-1 and winners of their last 13 games, received 60 of 62 first-place votes and 1,238 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

St. John's made up a 14-point deficit and beat Seton Hall 87-76 Monday night after beating Providence 77-60 and Connecticut 97-64 last week.

Georgetown, Memphis State and Southern Methodist remained second through fourth, respectively.

The Hoyas, 19-2, who held the top spot in the preseason poll and the first nine regular-season polls before losing two consecutive games last week, received one first-place vote and 1,153 points. Memphis State, 17-1, received the other first-place vote and 1,126 points, 93 more than Southern Methodist, 18-2.

Duke improved one spot in the poll, taking the fifth spot with 909 points. Syracuse, the only team besides St. John's to beat Georgetown, jumped from ninth to sixth with 899 points, while Oklahoma remained seventh with 855.

Michigan, eighth last week, Illinois, which fell from fifth after a 20-point loss to Purdue, and Georgia Tech, which fell from eighth after losing to North Carolina State, rounded out the Top Ten. Michigan had 769 points, Illinois 748 and Georgia Tech 704.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which has the current longest winning streak in Division I—16 games—jumped from 16th last week to lead the Second Ten.

The Runnin' Rebels were followed by Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Oregon State, Tulsa, DePaul, Villanova and Maryland.

Last week's Second Ten was North Carolina, Tulsa, DePaul, Oregon State, Louisiana Tech, Nevada-Las Vegas, Maryland, Villanova, Kansas and Alabama-Birmingham.

Iowa, ranked 12th, is the only newcomer to the poll this week. The Hawkeyes, 18-4, recorded road victories over Big Ten Conference foes Indiana and Ohio State last week.

Alabama-Birmingham, 19-5, which rejoined the Top Twenty last week after a six-week absence, split its two games—losing to Old Dominion and defeating South Alabama by one point in overtime.

St. John's is one of three Big East teams in the first six—Georgetown and Syracuse are the others—and there are four representatives of the conference in the Top Twenty. Villanova is the other. The Atlantic Coast Conference also has four teams in the Top Twenty—Duke, Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Maryland.

turned it over a few more times, I might have been back in the hospital," Holland said. "I tried not to get too excited."

George Washington dropped to 11-8 as Joe Waffel scored 14 points.

The Blue Devils, 16-3, held Harvard to only two baskets in its first 21 possessions to build a 43-19 halftime lead. The Crimson, 11-3, and second in the nation in field goal percentage, hit only six of 19 shots in the first half and committed 13 turnovers.

Coach Mike Krzyzewski said his team might have been thinking about last season's narrow 89-86 victory on Harvard's home court.

"We maintained our intensity throughout. We played good defense and we were a better basketball team," Krzyzewski said. "We should win if we show up and play well for 40 minutes."

Lady Pirates Host Hampton

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, riding a 10-game winning streak, put it all on the line tonight against Hampton Insitute, and a familiar name will be along with the visitors.

East Carolina, now 12-8 and sitting atop the ECAC-South, plays its final non-conference game of the year against Hampton at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Minges Coliseum. Hampton comes in with a 19-1 record, and will be playing the Pirates for the first time ever.

Leading the visitors will be 6-2 senior Darlene Chaney—and if that name sounds familiar, it should. Chaney was just one of a parade of players who came to East Carolina and then left for better surroundings elsewhere during the coaching era of Cathy Andruzzi, who resigned last spring. Chaney played two years with the Pirates before leaving at the end of the 1981-82 season. She transferred to Hampton, and in the year since then has been one of the team's leaders.

She is currently hitting 22.0 points a game and pulling 14 rebounds. One other member of the team also scores in double figures, 5-10 junior forward Anita Cooper, who's scoring at a 19.0 pace. She also is pulling 8.0 rebounds per game.

The other starters for Hampton include 5-10 sophomore guard Demetra Kee (3.0 ppg); 5-8 sophomore guard Karen Drewry (6.0), and 5-10 junior forward Robin Miller (8.0).

East Carolina has been led recently by the scoring of junior guard Loraine Foster, named last week as the ECAC-South's woman player of the week. Foster has scored in double figures in each of the last 10 games—since the Lady Pirates started their winning streak and has raised her average to over 12 points a game.

Following the Hampton game, the Lady Pirates head back on the road for a pair of games as they close out the regular season with six straight ECAC-South contests. The first of those is Saturday at American, followed by a Monday date at George Mason. The Lady Pirates return home on Saturday, Feb. 16, hosting William & Mary.

Pats Top Eagles; Navy Is Winner

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP)—Senior Carlos Yates scored 13 of his team-high 23 points in the second half as George Mason held off American University for a 77-71 ECAC-South college basketball victory Monday.

Rob Rose added 18 points and Ricky Wilson 17 for the Patriots, who trailed 33-32 at intermission before pulling away for their third straight win. They are now 11-8 and 6-3 in the conference.

American, 6-14 and 1-7, got 23 points from forward Steve Nesmith. But a late rally fell short as the Patriots canned six free throws in the closing eight seconds to seal the win.

Down 57-48 with six minutes to play, the Eagles got three baseline jumpers from sophomore forward Pat Witing during a 17-10 spurt to cut the margin to two with a minute to go.

But the teams traded baskets before Rose hit four foul shots and Brian Miller two in the final eight seconds to stop the rally.

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—David Robinson scored 31 points and grabbed 21 rebounds Monday night as Navy defeated Fairleigh Dickinson University 83-74 in a non-conference college basketball game.

The victory upped the Middies record to 16-3, while the Knights slipped to 12-8 with their first home loss in eight games this season.

FDU scored the last six points of the first half to lead 42-20 at intermission, but Navy came out strong in the second period.

With the 6-foot-11 Robinson and Vernon Butler leading the attack, Navy ran off a 21-6 spurt to take the lead for good, 61-50, with 9:30 to play.

Butler scored 13 points during the streak, while Robinson added eight.

Butler finished with 26 points and 10 rebounds while FDU was led by Ron Duncan with 20 points, Larry Hampton with 18 and freshman Jaime Latney with 16 points and 15 rebounds.

Redmen Rally, Down Seton Hall

By The Associated Press

For a half, it seemed as if No. 1 St. John's was playing out of uniform. The guys in the white shirts hit 59 percent of their shots in building a 42-30 halftime edge in Monday night's Big East basketball game. But the guys in white represented not St. John's but Seton Hall, loser of nine previous conference games. Order was quickly restored in the second half, however, and St. John's rolled to an 87-76 triumph.

"Seton Hall dominated the first half, but in the second half we kept them to one shot," said St. John's All-American guard Chris Mullin, who scored 20 of his 26 points after intermission. "We wanted to get it down to six with 10 minutes left in the half. We did it a little quicker than that" in breezing to victory No. 18 in 19 games.

No. 16 Oregon State was faced with the same predicament but didn't have a Mullin to save the day. The Beavers rallied from a 15-point deficit into a tie, but Larry Friend's off-balance shot at the buzzer gave Southern California a 60-58 Pac-10 Conference victory.

In more routine outings, No. 5 Duke smashed Harvard 82-53, No. 13 Kansas ripped Colorado 88-69 in the Big Eight, No. 14 Louisiana Tech took a 73-63 Southland Conference game from Northeast Louisiana, and No. 20 Maryland topped Old Dominion 87-75.

Even though his club was down 12 points to a team that had lost 11 of 20 games, St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca spared the rod at halftime.

"I said, 'Look, I'm not going to yell at you because you know how poorly you are playing,'" he said.

St. John's hit bottom after Mullin went to the bench with his third personal foul with St. John's leading 25-24 with 7:18 left in the first half.

"I don't think we lost our composure without Chris, but we were very, very technically inefficient," said Carnesecca. "We didn't box out, we didn't pick up lost balls."

"Give them credit, too," he added, "but thank God our experience helped in the second half."

Seton Hall built its margin to 48-34 at 17:15 of the second half, but then Mullin took over. He hit three consecutive baskets in less than a minute to fuel a 20-2 run by the Redmen.

Seton Hall regained the lead at 56-54 when Andre McCloud, who finished with 18 points, sank a layup with 8:55 remaining.

But St. John's blew out to a 63-56 edge, thanks in large part to a pair of three-point plays by center Bill Wennington, and Seton Hall was finished.

"We knew we had a long way to go" in the second half, said Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo. "The problem for us was stringing together another 20 minutes. We played well for 25 minutes, then went south for the next seven."

It appeared that Southern California's rise into first place in the Pac-10 would be easy after the Trojans rolled to a 40-25 lead over Oregon State early in the second half.

But the Beavers went on a 20-2 roll over the next six minutes to reclaim the lead. Southern Cal regrouped, slowed down the pace and got a chance at the winning basket when Oregon State was guilty of a turnover with 58 seconds to play.

With the final seconds ticking off the clock, Flowers dribbled into the key, jumped and looked for a teammate to take the ball. At the last instant, Flowers extended his arms and the ball floated into the basket.

"We were lucky, but you need some luck to be where we are now," said Trojan Coach Stan Morrison, whose team is 7-2 in the league and 13-5 overall.

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller shared the sentiment.

"The last shot comes under luck," Miller said. "It's just one of those things that found their way into the hoop."

Wayne Carlander and Derrick Dowell led the Trojans with 15 points apiece, while Ron Holmes added 14. A.C. Green had 15 to pace Oregon State, which fell to 6-3 in the Pac-10 and 16-4 overall.

Mark Alarie scored 18 points and Johnny Dawkins contributed 16 points and 11 assists as Duke ran its record to 16-3. The Blue Devils roared to a 43-19 halftime edge and strolled home.

Duke "just has better athletes and things started to snowball," said Harvard guard Bob Ferry, who scored 19 points. "They hurt us on the boards. They just jumped right over us."

"Duke is much better than we are, but we didn't play well tonight," said Harvard Coach Frank McLaughlin.

Kansas, 18-4 overall, got 12 points apiece from Calvin Thompson and Milton Newman in a romp over Colorado that kept the Jayhawks in touch with Big Eight leader Oklahoma. Kansas is 6-1 in the league, Oklahoma 6-0.

Colorado pulled into an 8-8 tie on Tony Pruitt's jumper at 16:58 of the first half, but Kansas went on a 29-4 roll to settle the contest before halftime.

"We did great for about eight to 10 minutes in the first half and then we just kind of played it out," said Kansas Coach Larry Brown.

Colorado, 13-7 overall but only 1-6 in the league, got 17 points from Pruitt.

Karl Malone scored 20 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and made four steals in fueling Louisiana Tech's second-half resurgence against Northeast Louisiana. Tech led only 47-46 with 11:09 to go, but Malone triggered a 22-9 streak that ended any NLU hopes of an upset.

Tech is 17-2 overall and 5-1 in the Southland while Northeast, which got 20 points from Michael Saulsberry, dropped to 14-6 and 3-3.

Len Bias scored 24 points, Adrian Branch added 15 and Tom Jones' 14 as Maryland, 18-6, gave Coach Lefty Driesell his 498th coaching victory. The Terps scored 16 consecutive points in building a 33-16 first-half edge and didn't look back. Maryland led 45-30 at halftime and enjoyed margins of at least 12 points throughout the final 20 minutes.

In other games, it was Navy 83, Fairleigh Dickinson 74; Pittsburgh 77, Duquesne 61; Rutgers 96, Monmouth 74; St. Bonaventure 64, Penn State 59; Florida 86, Florida State 79; Marshall 90, Furman 62; Mississippi 60, Vanderbilt 55; South Carolina 90, Georgia State 66; Virginia 51, George Washington 42; Virginia Tech 96, Southern Mississippi 80; Creighton 87, West Texas State 63; St. Louis 80, Oklahoma City 51; Fullerton State 52, Fresno State 51; and San Jose State 76, Pacific 46.

Flutie's Deal Guaranteed Against Injury, Merger

NEW YORK (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie, armed with one of the most lucrative contracts in sports history, doesn't have to worry about the solvency of the United States Football League.

Calling the Boston College All-American's $7-million contract with the New Jersey Generals "the most difficult one I've ever done," sports agent Bob Woolf said Monday night that Flutie is protected against all contingencies.

The five-year contract covers everything from injuries to a possible merger between the USFL and the National Football League, Woolf said. "We're in pretty good shape. Every provision has been covered as to every eventuality."

The document was 50 pages long and attorneys for the two sides took 10 days to reach the agreement Flutie signed Monday.

"Because of the newness of the league and all the contingencies that could happen, I had to make sure that Doug was protected," the Boston-based attorney explained. Though he refused to divulge terms of the contract, Woolf admitted speculation about its length and value was "quite accurate."

Woolf, who has negotiated more than 2,000 sports contracts, said the agreement he reached with Generals' owner Donald Trump was "a contract that is deserving of a Doug Flutie. I've always said that it's something that should be in the vicinity of a Herschel Walker or a Steve Young and that's what it is."

Young, who preceded Flutie as the All-American quarterback, for Brigham Young in 1983, signed last year a contract said to be worth $40 million over 43 years with the Los Angeles Express. Walker, the 1982 Heisman Trophy-winning running back from Georgia, signed in 1983 a four-year contract with the Generals for an estimated $6 million.

With Walker, Mike Rozier and Flutie, who could not be reached Monday night for comment, the USFL now has the last three Heisman winners under contract. Rozier, an All-American at Nebraska, played for the now-defunct Pittsburgh Maulers last season. He is now with the Jacksonville Bulls.

Woolf, whose clients include some of the nation's top professional athletes, said Flutie's contract could be the most significant with which he had ever been involved. "It could be very historic. It could be like Joe Namath coming to the American Football League."

Namath's signing by the New York Jets 20 years ago was credited with giving the AFL the credibility that led to an eventual merger with the National Football League.

Flutie, who at 5-foot-9½ is thought by some to be too short to be effective in pro football, was to fly today to the club's training camp in Orlando, Fla.

Flutie has said he does not expect to start as quarterback just because of his salary. And Generals Coach Walt Michaels said he would not give Flutie any special treatment.

"I'll do what is fair," Michaels said at the Generals' camp. "I want every player to be the same."

Flutie is expected to begin practice Wednesday. But he probably won't play in the team's exhibition game Saturday against in Tampa, Fla., against the Tampa Bay Bandits.

"He (Flutie) has a lot of things to learn," Michaels said. "Only a punter could come in and work two days and be ready for a game."

Letters Show Move Reasons

NEW YORK (AP) — A series of 18 letters between New York Jets owner Leon Hess and Mayor Edward I. Koch detail deteriorating negotiations that led to the decision to move the team to Giants Stadium in New Jersey, according to a published report.

The letters, written during a period from February to September 1983 and released to the New York Times by City Corporation Counsel Frederick A.O. Schwarz Jr., reveal Hess's impatience with the mayor and his annoyance with the condition of Shea Stadium.

Valvano Remains Quiet On Washburn's Return

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH — Jim Valvano usually comments on just about anything, but when the subject of Chris Washburn came up on his radio talk show, the North Carolina State basketball coach did something out of character.

"As strange as it sounds, I have nothing to say. We know that's impossible," Valvano said only hours after his 6-foot-11 freshman star pleaded guilty to three misdemeanor charges stemming from the theft of stereo equipment last December.

"Strange but true," he added. Washburn's plea came as a Wake County grand jury was to consider indicting the center-forward on a second-degree burglary charge.

Valvano refused an interview with a Raleigh television station at the Wolfpack's practice, then went on his radio show and continued to say nothing.

Valvano didn't remain completely quiet about Washburn, however. One listener commented that he thought Washburn should be reinstated to the Wolfpack squad immediately. Washburn was suspended from the team after his arrest last December, but Valvano suggested that he might consider returning the freshman to the squad based on the outcome of court proceedings.

"It's like a block-charge call," Valvano said. "People will find fault in any direction it goes. I still believe (we should do) what's in the youngster's best interest."

"It's a young person's life that we're talking about, not a basketball game," Valvano continued. "When you look at it in those terms, you have a better concept of what to do and what not to do."

Last Dec. 21, Washburn was arrested in connection with the theft of $800 worth of stereo equipment. His attorneys told a Wake District Court judge that he took the equipment as a prank. Washburn told police he took the equipment from the room of William West and Jeffrey Davis, both sophomores, but said he was going to return it.

Superior Court Judge Milton Reid gave Washburn a suspended six-year sentence and placed him on probation for five years. Reid sentenced Washburn to a jail term which would coincide with the anniversary of the incident. Attorney Daniel Blue, a North Carolina state representative who also represented Washburn, said the 46-hour term will begin on 6 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 19, and will end on Saturday, Dec. 21 at 4 p.m. Those times represent the hours during which the stereo was reported missing.

As part of a plea agreement, Washburn consented to a 20-point probation order, which included provisions that he get mental health treatment, perform 320 hours of community service and pay $1,000 to a crime victims' fund. As for playing again, Blue said the school has placed no pressure on the courts.

"There has been some communication with the coaches and various people associated with the university," Blue said. "But they've not tried to intervene in any way to affect any resolution of it."

Washburn declined comment when he left the courtroom and there was no answer at his dormitory telephone.

Defense attorney Wade Smith may have issued the statement many Wolfpack fans wanted to say when he approached Reid toward the end of the trial.

"It is very clear to us ... that this young man has to be punished. We recognize that ... and he recognizes that," Smith said. "While there must be punishment, we hope the punishment does not close the doors to his future."

Raveling, Iowa Return To Cage Elite

By The Associated Press
"I was the new guy on the block," said Iowa basketball coach George

Raveling. "Everybody wanted a piece of me and I was trying to please everybody besides do my job."

Big things were expected when Raveling was brought in as Iowa's coach last season when Lute Olsen unexpectedly left for Arizona, but he suffered through a 13-15 season, including 6-12 in the Big Ten. It was the Hawkeyes' first losing record since 1978.

Iowa, now back in the Top 20 at No. 12 after victories over Indiana and Ohio State, has turned things around with an 18-4 record, and is tied with No. 8 Michigan for the conference lead with a 7-2 record.

Raveling, 47, has cut down on his speaking engagements and availability to the media, freeing himself to concentrate on coaching a winning team.

The Hawkeyes have the biggest front line in the conference with 6-10 senior center Greg Stokes and forwards 6-11 Michael Payne, a senior, and 6-7 Gerry Wright, a transfer from Southern California who is among the eight newcomers on the Iowa squad.

And guess who leads the Hawkeyes in assists and steals? The big men.

"This team is quite unusual because Payne leads us in assists and Stokes in steals," said Raveling, whose previous head coaching job was at Washington State where the Cougars had a 23-7 record in his final season, the high point of his career.

According to Raveling, Wright has been like a breath of fresh air, and not primarily because of his playing ability.

"He took the pressure off," said Raveling, who found time to assist to Coach Bobby Knight on the gold medal U.S. Olympic team. "He transformed us, a new phenomena. He's outgoing, a rah-rah type. The gung-ho attitude carried over."

Stokes, who Raveling calls the "most consistent man in the Big Ten," has averaged 20.9 points and 9.2 rebounds. Wright has hit 10.5 points and 6.6 rebounds, while Payne, who can score from the 10-15-foot range, has figures of 7.2 and 7.5.

Iowa's giant front line, backed by 6-8 freshman Al Lorenzen, is well respected, but the big question has been whether the guards could produce from the outside to keep the defense from sagging on the big men.

Senior playmaker Todd Berkenpas is sidelined with back spasms, but junior Andre Banks and freshman Jeff Moe have been especially effective of late with their outside shooting.

"I admire Banks as much as any player I've had," said Raveling, a former Villanova player who served as an assistant at Villanova and Maryland before spending 11 seasons in Pullman, Wash. "The fans and the media were down on him, but he never gave up. He's scored double figures in six of the last seven games."

Raveling's team also is among the nation's leaders in defense, defense against the field goal, margin of victory and rebounding.

As for the Big Ten race, he said, "Iowa, Michigan and Illinois can feel comfortable because of the position they're in, but it's like a mile race. We're only at the half-mile. We still have two laps to go."

Commissioners Seek Law To Inhibit Team Movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Professional sports commissioners say they want a law, but no regulatory meddling from Congress, to help them inhibit the movement of big league teams from city to city.

"It is the leagues themselves, and not the federal government or a regulatory board, that are best suited to weigh the variety of competing considerations and balance the numerous relevant factors involved in a proposed relocation," National Basketball Association Commissioner David Stern told a Senate panel Monday.

"What is needed is simply legislation that will enable professional sports to make these judgments," Stern said.

The commissioners, testifying before the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation, endorsed major provisions of a bill that would allow leagues to control team location. But they flatly rejected another measure that would give that power to a federal board.

Controversy over the moves of sports teams has arisen because some owners have relocated their teams despite league objections, and others are threatening to follow suit.

Stern, and the commissioners of the National Football League, the United States Football League, the Major Indoor Soccer League and a representative of major league baseball, testified before the committee on two bills that would prevent professional sports teams from leaving a city unless they are losing money or playing in an inadequate arena.

All of the professional sports spokesmen said they favored the less restrictive bill sponsored by Missouri Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton, a Democrat, and John Danforth, a Republican, that would allow leagues final say in restricting team movement.

The other measure, sponsored by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and several House members, contains the same basic provisions as the Eagleton-Danforth proposal — but it would create a federal arbitration board to make final decisions on franchise movement.

Gorton's bill also requires the NFL to expand by two teams in 1988, and that one of those teams be located in Baltimore. By 1990, the bill says, the league must expand by two teams again — and one must be located in Oakland, Calif.

"We want to pick our own cities when we expand; we want to pick our owners," National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle said. "I don't know of any business where the government can tell a company to expand, by how much, and in what years."

Harry Usher, the new USFL commissioner, attacked "the anti-expansionist policies of the National Football League" which, he said, was a root cause of franchise instability.

"The NFL teams, because of the league's policy against expansion are able to extract large concessions from taxpayers either in cities that want their teams to stay or from cities that are attempting to lure such teams," Usher said.

He added that there is a need for pro football teams "in many cities that do not feel part of the NFL power circle."

Pressure for a federal law limiting team relocation started building three years ago when the Los Angeles Raiders of the NFL moved from Oakland, Calif. When the NFL lost its three-year legal battle to block that move, other football and basketball teams began citing the case as a precedent supporting their relocation.

Last year, the NFL's Baltimore Colts moved to Indianapolis, and the NBA's San Diego Clippers moved to Los Angeles. This year, the NBA's Kansas City Kings have announced their intention to move to Sacramento, Calif., and the St. Louis Cardinals of the NFL are considering a move to another city.

'Bull' Hangs Up Cleats

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Luzinski will be calling the shots rather than hitting them.

One of baseball's most feared sluggers over the last 15 years, Luzinski said Monday that he was retiring and would become freshman baseball coach at a New Jersey high school.

"The realization was nobody wanted me," Luzinski said in an interview with USA Today.

Luzinski, who became a free agent last November after four seasons with the American League's Chicago White Sox, was selected only by the Pittsburgh Pirates in the free-agent draft.

"The Orioles invited me to spring training with the understanding I make the team," said Luzinski.

Luzinski, who has battled a weight problem since breaking in with the Philadelphia Phillies, would have been forced to reduce to have a chance of remaining in the major leagues.

"There was some concern about his weight," said Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters. "He wasn't in playing shape when we talked. He said his best playing weight was 240 to 250 pounds. Had he accepted our invitation, he would have had time to reach that."

"No team offered him a contract," said Jack Sands, Luzinski's agent. "Because of investments we have made, he will receive $200,000 a year for the rest of his life."

Luzinski said he had been appointed freshman baseball coach of Holy Cross High School at Delran, N.J. He resides at Meford, N.J.

Donahue To Keep Doing Live Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue will continue to do his television program live despite a hoax in which seven people pretended to faint, says a spokeswoman for the talk show.

"We've been live for 17 years and we have no plans to change that now," spokeswoman Penny Rotheiser said Monday. "We're going to tighten up our security on ticket distribution," she said, refusing to give details.

It was revealed Friday that seven members of the "Donahue" audience who fainted during a live broadcast Jan. 21 were part of a hoax orchestrated by trickster Alan Abel.

Abel said the hoax was a protest of poor-quality television and a statement supporting live TV.

"The irony is that he (Abel) made a pro-live TV statement but it may stop other people from having live TV," Ms. Rotheiser said Monday.

Concert Melee

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Police arrested more than two dozen people after a melee that erupted when people who waited all night to buy tickets to a concert by the heavy-metal rock group Iron Maiden mistakenly thought it was sold out.

"There were seven broken windows, things turned over, some small fires started" at Long Beach Arena, Sgt. Mike Sergi said following the disturbance at dawn Monday. Building superintendent Fred Corsi Jr. put the damage at $4,000 to $5,000.

'Passage' Beautiful As Period Film

A Reflector Review

"A Passage to India" is one of the two movies currently in town which are serious examples of filmmaking art, rather than blatant commercialism. (The other is "The Killing Fields," the stronger of the two films.) "Passage" is a beautiful periodic piece based on E.M. Forster's novel of the same name, directed by David Lean, who also wrote the screenplay.

Mrs. Moore (Peggy Ashcroft) and Adela Quested (Judy Davis) have come to India from England. Adela is to decide whether or not to marry Mrs. Moore's son Ronnie (Nigel Havers). They both hope to find a little adventure. Broadminded women of character, they are shocked at the callous way the British treat the Indians, and determine to get to know the "real" India beyond the world of British offices and exclusive clubs. Mrs. Moore meets Dr. Aziz (Victor Banerjee) one night when she goes walking to escape a boring play at The Club; they are charmed by each other. Mr. Fielding (James Fox), from the local English college, brings them back together in the company of Miss Quested and Professor Godbole (Alec Guinness), a mystic with a large appetite for his vegetarian cuisine and a penchant for spouting fatalistic reincarnation theory.

Dr. Aziz so wants to impress Mrs. Moore and Miss Quested that he invites the group on a picnic at some unusual caves some distance from the railway station, an undertaking of great expense and complexity. Mr. Fielding offers to help him get out of the invitation, but Dr. Aziz insists on moving forward, with the help of his Indian friends. In the meantime, Adela finds out what approaching came a British lady who just dropped Mr. Fielding at the lower caves.

What follows is a mockery of British justice, a setup of Dr. Aziz brought about by the racist inclinations of the ruling class and Ronnie's jealousy. Miss Quested hears the echoes of the caves in her ears and allows her fellow Britishers to use her confusion about events in the cave to press charges.

Aziz faces jail, the loss of his honor. Declaring his innocence, he becomes a folk hero in the mounting Indian movement for political independence; only Fielding among the English believes him, and Fielding becomes an outcast.

The movie spends too much time at the surface and not enough time exploring the depths and motivations of its characters, the British racism and the personal and political implications of this behavior. Things happen to people and people do things that don't make sense in light of what we think we know about them: why does Mrs. Moore really leave before the trial when she knows what Ronnie's doing and she genuinely likes Aziz? Her poor health is a weak excuse for such a strong woman? Why does Miss Quested allow herself to be pushed into the trial? Surely the cave echoes, and a little sexual imagery she saw on a ruined shrine that swarmed with monkeys cannot have disorganized such an intelligent woman that completely. And why is Ronnie such a twit?

In spite of its shallow spots, "A Passage to India" is ambitious, well-crafted and beautiful. It is well acted. Banerjee is excellent as the obsequious Dr. Aziz. Ashcroft is a joy as the wise and tolerant Mrs. Moore, and Davis is beautiful, strong and vulnerable as Miss Quested. Havers is the quintessential fairminded Englishman, and Guinness is surprising in his role as the "what-me-worry?" Godbole. The photography, directed by Ernest Day, is gorgeous. I couldn't figure out why this movie was a PG (except that filmmakers are afraid that a G rating is the kiss of death for adult-audience movies), because there isn't anything in it that children shouldn't see.

MINDY MACHANIC

'Cop' Boosts Gross

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Beverly Hills Cop" brought in $7.1 million over the weekend, easily maintaining its status as the favorite of movie audiences nationwide and boosting its nine-week total to $142.7 million.

A Christmas release that has outlasted the holiday season, the Eddie Murphy action comedy declined slightly from an average of $4,510 per screen a week earlier to $4,187 last weekend.

Despite the decline it was still well ahead of the No. 2 film, "The Killing Fields." The Warner Bros. release grossed $3 million, benefitting from wider release in its 11th week. A week earlier it was 16th in weekend gross.

"A Passage to India" held steady in third place, bringing in $2.5 million.

Orion's "The Falcon & The Snowman" dropped to fourth a week after debuting at No. 2. The story of convicted spy Christopher Boyce grossed $1.8 million.

Columbia's "Micki and Maude" was fifth with $1.4 million, followed closely by "Amadeus," "Nightmare on Elm Street" and "The Flamingo Kid."

Here is a list of the top grossing films over the weekend, with distributor, weekend gross, number of screens, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Beverly Hills Cop," Paramount, $7.1 million, 1,706 screens, $142.7 million, nine weeks.
2. "The Killing Fields," Warner Bros., $3 million, 657 screens, $7.2 million, 11 weeks.
3. "A Passage to India," Columbia, $2.5 million, 639 screens, $9.8 million, eight weeks.
4. "The Falcon & The Snowman," Orion, $1.8 million, 265 screens, $5 million, two weeks.
5. "Micki and Maude," Columbia, $1.4 million, 806 screens, $22.6

Block Says 'Still Looking' At Leaf Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block, who startled tobacco growers last week when he said he would recommend phasing out the tobacco program, now says he won't suggest eliminating the leaf program.

"I haven't said exactly what I will do," Block told a group of reporters Monday.

Block said he doesn't know yet whether he will recommend changes in the tobacco acreage allotment and quota controls.

Asked if he had changed his mind because of pressure from tobacco farm groups, Block said, "We are still looking at it."

The secretary did say a tobacco proposal would be included in the Reagan administration's proposed 1985 farm bill. In the past, the tobacco program has not been a part of the four-year omnibus farm bill.

Tobacco-state congressmen want to keep it that way. They fear the tobacco program would be more vulnerable to attacks from anti-tobacco lawmakers if it is included.

Block said the administration's farm proposal should be ready by the end of this week.

The North Carolina Tobacco

Growers Association is drafting its own proposal, which calls for lowering price supports by 34 cents to $1.35 per pound and making tobacco allotments more responsive to annual market demands, said association Vice President Carlton Blalock.

Blalock said the plan also incorporates the main point of another proposal approved last month by the U.S. Department of Agriculture — the discount sale of 812 million pounds of surplus tobacco to cigarette manufacturers.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. rejected the USDA plan, which would set price supports at $1.45 a pound, saying it was too high.

Blalock said his group also will recommend that tobacco companies join growers in paying assessments to support the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., which pays for and stores tobacco that doesn't bring the support price at auction.

"We feel like this could be the answer for the tobacco program," Blalock said. "We're really in the ballpark with everyone else on this."

He said the details of his group's plan for tobacco allotments have not yet been worked out, but the growers want to set up a system so the allotment can change according to demand.

Offering Congress a sound way of revitalizing the tobacco program may be the only way to kill Block's proposal, Blalock said.

"Unless we can go in there with some other legislation for tobacco, it will be thrown in with everything else," he said. "We need to make a strong case."

Association officials have been lobbying tobacco companies and North Carolina's congressional delegation to support their plan, which Blalock said will be finished later this week.

"We don't have any commitments from anybody yet, but we're getting some positive response," he said.

Meanwhile, other tobacco groups said that they are counting on the state's congressional delegation to choose the right tactic in fighting Block's proposal.

"We're waiting right now to see how serious he (Block) is about it," said Bob Jenkins, assistant to the president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau. "We don't want to get a cannon out to fight a fly."

"We feel like our congressional delegation will be united in this whatever they decide to do," Jenkins said.

EXCAVATION — McDowell County Sheriff Bobby Haynes, on the backhoe, digs around a grease pit at Camp Grimes, a Boy Scout facility near Dysartsville, where the bodies of two teen-agers were found last week.

Several items of clothing were found in the pit Monday, Haynes said. A caretaker at the camp, James Keith Ross, 32, has been charged with murder in the deaths of the two boys. (AP Laserphoto)

Charges Continue To Mount Against Scout Camp Worker

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Boy Scout camp caretaker accused of fatally shooting two teen-age cousins has been charged with taking indecent liberties with two McDowell County youths, sheriff's officials said.

In charges filed Saturday, James Keith Ross, 32, is accused of assaulting two McDowell County boys last Dec. 18 and Dec. 28 and on Jan. 11, McDowell County Sheriff Bobby Haynes said Monday.

Ross, a former Boy Scout leader in Hickory, had been charged with taking indecent liberties in Forsyth and Catawba counties, Haynes said. "There are also other charges (in other counties) we're aware of," he said.

Ross is being held without bond in the McDowell County jail on first-degree murder charges in the slayings of Richard Buchanan, 15, of Marion, and Gary Bailey, 14, of Morganton.

Deputies say Ross led them to the bodies of the two boys Jan. 26, three days after they were reported missing by their parents.

The teen-agers were buried beside a grease pit 100 feet from Ross' cottage at Camp Grimes, a camp near Dysartsville owned by the Mecklenburg County Boy Scout Council.

On Monday, a search of the grease pit turned up one coat, one shoe and a couple of hats that authorities say may have belonged to one of the victims. A backhoe was used to dig up the pit in search of further evidence.

Haynes said he did not expect to find more bodies, but said the digging was to "tie up some loose ends."

A spokesman for the Catawba County Clerk of Court said Ross, then a resident of Hickory, was charged in 1979 with taking indecent liberties with a boy, but pleaded guilty instead to simple assault. As part of his sentence Ross was ordered to undergo psychiatric treatment and stay away from the boy.

A minister of First United Methodist Church, who asked to remain anonymous, said Monday that Ross was a scoutmaster for a troop sponsored by the church from 1981 through most of 1983.

"We sponsor and charter the troop," said the minister, who said the church did no background check on Ross' record. "The scouting organization has their own regulations."

Area scout executives said no local background checks are done, and a spokesman for the Boy Scouts of America's national office said no check is done by the national organization.

Paul Moore, executive of Mecklenburg County Boy Scout Council, which owns the 1,088-acre camp, said scout administrators do not have access to National Crime Information Center records where criminal files are kept.

But even if they did, they would not have found Ross's record, according to Haynes, who said an NCIC check made two months ago when Ross applied to enter the sheriff department's reserve deputy training program indicated that Ross had no record.

Not all law enforcement agencies in North Carolina entered felony arrests in NCIC files at the time of Ross's arrests in 1972, 1973 and 1979, Haynes said.

Earlier reports that the sheriff's department knew of Ross's simple assault conviction in 1979 were incorrect, Haynes said.

FEC Papers In Helms' Case Read

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Elections Commission says a busy election year, "difficult and novel issues" in the case and "vigorous" opposition by groups linked to Sen. Jesse Helms caused its delay in finishing a probe of those organizations.

The FEC's defense of its two-year investigation was among about 150 pages of previously sealed court documents that were opened Monday in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The FEC is expected to file a civil suit this week in federal court in Raleigh accusing the National Congressional Club and its advertising agency, Jefferson Marketing Inc., of election law violations.

The Congressional Club last week filed a suit against the FEC, claiming the agency had harassed the club and Jefferson Marketing. The suit said the FEC had ruled in October that the two organizations violated federal elections laws.

The FEC investigation was sparked two years ago after U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., filed a complaint against the two groups, charging that they had violated election laws in supporting his 1982 re-election opponents.

The documents released Monday are in a lawsuit filed by Rose against the FEC, trying to force the commission to finish the investigation before last fall's election.

Rose's complaint figured in Helms' re-election campaign last fall because similar allegations were raised by the North Carolina Democratic Party.

Judge Denies Bond In Child's Hanging

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A former mental patient charged with kidnapping, rape and murder in the strangulation death of an 8-year-old Chinese orphan was convicted of arson in North Carolina and Ohio, officials say.

District Court Judge Donald Paschal denied bond for George Richard Fisher, 36, who was returned to the Orange County jail following his first court appearance Monday.

A probable cause hearing was scheduled for Feb. 26 in Chapel Hill District Court.

Fisher, a Hillsborough construction worker, was charged Sunday with first-degree murder, rape and kidnapping in the death of Jean Har-Kar Fewel. The girl's body was found in a remote area of Orange County Wednesday with a plastic-coated rope tied around her neck and the other end tied to a low tree branch.

Records show Fisher had three arson convictions in North Carolina and at least one in Ohio. Records in both states also show that he has received treatment for mental illness and was diagnosed at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh as a "probable pyromaniac."

Fisher has been free on parole since 1982 after serving eight years of a 30-year sentence for three arson convictions and five breaking and entering and larceny convictions in Onslow County in 1974, said Patty McQuillan, spokeswoman for the state Department of Correction.

Convicted of arson in Franklin County, Ohio, Fisher was sentenced to Oakwood Forensic Center under Ohio's insanity code. Hospital records show Fisher was admitted March 14, 1973, and escaped June 15, 1973. A hospital official said Monday that Fisher never returned to the hospital.

Meanwhile, a search warrant application filed by the State Bureau of Investigation an hour before Fisher's arrest said fibers found on the girl's pants matched the carpet in Fisher's car, court documents show.

STORES INDEPENDENTLY OWNED AND OPERATED

An Institution's Coming To An End: Falkland's W.W. Wooten's Store

FALKLAND — From Pampers to plowshares, from onions to oilcloth, from milk to melon seed, the W.W. Wooten Store in Falkland has long been a source of varied essentials of farming and day-to-day living. From old-fashioned items seldom seen elsewhere for many a year to the most up-to-date conveniences and grocery items, its wares have been displayed on shelves to the ceiling and in ornate glass-enclosed cases and bins. Hatboxes have graced the top shelves; nails have been weighed and sold by the pound; and salt licks and barbed wire have been sold across the same counter as wedges cut from rounds of cheese and tins of Vienna sausage.

It's also been a place local folks could get credit and have it extended a year if hail hit or drought or drowning ruined crops. Some farmers have even used agreements with Mr. Wooten as means of paying their household bills and children's school fees through the non-harvest months, with payment due when crops were harvested in the late summer and fall. Some shopped with cash; some with merchandise coupons purchased on credit.

Saturday, Feb. 9, and Saturday, Feb. 16, everything in the store is to be auctioned off. The store is going out of business. Its owner and long-time operator, Woodrow W. Wooten, says he's not retiring. Soon to celebrate his 70th birthday, he will continue to look after his and his extended family's farming interests, but he's not going to be a merchandiser any longer. For the time being, he'll have his office where it's been for many years, in the rear corner of the store, but he and his "shadow," his dog Lassie, who adopted him a few years ago, may move a few doors away if someone wants to rent the high-ceilinged old building.

Wooten joined his uncle, K.R. Wooten, in 1933 to learn the business. "I'd graduated from Fountain High School," he said, "and had attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for a while. Then I'd transferred to East Carolina Teachers College and started working with my uncle weekends, summers and holidays. I had thought I'd be a doctor, but doctors and lawyers were walking the streets looking for work then and I gradually began to feel I'd be better off in business."

For some years he roomed with Mrs. Daisy King in the house where he now lives and boarded — had his meals — in the home of Mrs. Emma Mayo across Highway 43 which runs through Falkland. In 1940, he and his wife, the former Gladys Reid Moore, were married and in 1946 he became a partner with his uncle who'd opted to "take it a little easier." Though he was of drafting age during World War II, he never went to war because of an eardrum ruptured, he's told, when he was a baby, the eldest of William Henry and Carrie Blanche Langley Wooten's seven children.

In addition to pursuing farming and business interests, Wooten has over the years served Falkland and the Falkland township as a town commissioner, mayor, Boy Scout leader, school board member and fund-raiser for such efforts as construction of the community building; Pitt County as a hospital board member, airport commission member, library board member, welfare board member, and county commissioner; the Falkland Presbyterian Church as an elder and building fund-raiser; the Democratic Party as a precinct chairman; and the Pitt County Farm Bureau as a director. He and Mrs. Wooten have one son, Woody, a graduate student at East Carolina University.

"Sometimes I wonder what my life would have been like if I hadn't chosen to spend it as I have," he said, "but I can't imagine it being more satisfying. Some years I've made money, some years I haven't. But all in all, it's worked out. I've dealt with people and their real concerns just as much so as if I'd been a doctor or lawyer. I've done some of them good and tried to do none of them harm. I've enjoyed it. I've been dedicated to it. And I wouldn't trade places with anybody."

Flannel shirts, enameled canning pots and rural mailboxes are just some of the items that have been available at Wooten's Store and which will be auctioned for the next two Saturdays.

Text & Photos by Carol Blackley Tyer

Woodrow Wooten and his employees weighed nails for sale by the ounce on old-fashioned hanging scales.

Oilcloth, used mostly for table coverings, has only been available from one company for many years, Wooten says as he and his wife Gladys pose before the rolls that were left late last week.

Two Firms Will Pay $800,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two North Carolina construction companies accused of conspiring to rig bids for a sewage treatment plant agreed to pay the government $800,000, U.S. Justice Department officials say.

Announced Monday, the accords were reached with the Crowder Construction Co. of Charlotte, the Dickerson Group Inc. of Monroe and two officials of the firms, justice officials said in a prepared statement.

Richard K. Willard, acting assistant attorney general in the department's Civil Division, said the government had alleged that the bid-rigging conspiracy involved a contract awarded by the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Utility Department for construction of the McAlpine Creek Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Justice officials said the utility department had received federal funds from the Environmental Protection Agency to pay for 75 percent of the work.

The bid-rigging conspiracy caused false and inflated claims to be submitted to the EPA for payment, the statement said, adding that the government is entitled to recover damages under provisions in the federal False Claims Act.

The government charged that the bid conspiracy involved Crowder Construction; Otis A. Crowder, vice president of Crowder; the Dickerson Group, and Frank W. Carpenter, executive vice president of Dickerson.

Crowder Construction and Dickerson, Inc., the predecessor to the Dickerson Group, jointly submitted a bid and received a $12.6 million contract November 1978, the statement said.

It said that one agreement obtained by Justice requires Crowder Construction to pay the government $425,000 — half of it within 20 days of the effective date of the agreement and the remainder — at 9 percent annual interest — within two years.

The other agreement, according to Monday's announcement, requires the Dickerson Group to pay the government $375,000 — one-third of it within 10 days of the effective date of the agreement.

At a 10 percent annual rate of interest, the remainder is to be paid on this schedule — one-third within one year, and the rest within two years.

Air Force Changing Patterns

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — For a county without an airport, Watauga got some pretty powerful help recently when residents complained about planes flying too close to their homes.

U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger became involved last month when U.S. Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., told him about the problem.

Donald Sink, chairman of the Watauga County Airport Commission — which is studying the possibility of building an airport — said Monday that several county residents complained to him last fall about low-flying Air Force planes.

Sink said the complaints were the most recent in a series he has received off and on for years.

The planes, mostly from Shaw Air Force Base in South Carolina, practice "terrain avoidance" maneuvers, which simulate low-altitude wartime conditions, he said.

"I've seen them several times myself, closer than I'd like to see them," Sink said.

After complaining several times to the Federal Aviation Administration with no result, Sink wrote to Broyhill who got in touch with Weinberger.

Two weeks ago, Broyhill received a letter from Weinberger, saying he had ordered the Air Force to fly training missions above 1,500 feet and at least three miles from Boone, Sink said.

Body Found, 80

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Fire officials say a badly burned body was found Monday afternoon in a Charlotte apartment, but the body was unidentified pending an autopsy Tuesday.

Investigators and neighbors said the apartment was the home of Virginia R. Neely, a retired teacher and principal.

FOCUS

“Neither a Borrower Nor a Lender Be”

This is National Pay Your Bills Week, designed to encourage wiser use of consumer credit. Fred Halleman, who counsels debtors, uses this broken credit-card tree to make the point that money doesn't grow on trees. The Federal Reserve Board estimated that, at the end of 1983, Americans owned $493 billion in consumer debts. That's almost $2,100 for each man, woman and child in the United States!

DO YOU KNOW — What was the last year in which the federal government had a budget surplus?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Until 1972, Sri Lanka was called “Ceylon.”

6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

How many times could you have you kicked yourself immediately after playing a hand for not spotting the correct line? Chances are you might want to do so again this deal. Certainly, a number of experts had to suffer that embarrassment.

We are not thrilled with North's decision to jump shift at his first turn. Strong two-suited hands are easier to describe if you start with a simple response and then jump in your second suit. However, the final contract was certainly reasonable.

West led the queen of spades, and we hazard a guess that the majority of players would win and start on clubs to force out the ace. A clever East will win and shift to the jack of hearts, and not a declarer in a million would dare finesse. They would count two spade tricks, one heart, five diamonds and four clubs, so there would be no reason to risk the heart finesse.

Unfortunately, when they start to play diamonds East shows out on the second round. Now declarer has only 11 tricks, and there is no way to collect a 12th.

If you elected to play the hand this way, you will surely want to give yourself a hard boot for not recognizing the problem at the table. The solution is really so simple. After winning the first trick, you should cash the queen and ace of diamonds! If both defenders follow, knock out the ace of clubs and claim 12 tricks. But if, as is the case, one defender shows out, you know that you will need the heart finesse for your contract.

Reward Raised

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Authorities in Hesse state have raised the reward for information leading to the arrest of Nazi doctor Josef Mengele to the equivalent of $316,000, believed the most ever offered in such a case.

The reward had been $15,800. Herbert Guenther, state justice minister, said he believed the new reward — 1 million German marks — was the highest ever offered in Germany for such information. He said authorities have new leads that could advance the case, but did not elaborate.

Mengele has been sought on charges that he killed thousands of Jews in medical experiments during World War II at the Auschwitz concentration camp in southern Poland.

EPA Moving Waste From Buncombe Site

ASHEVILLE (AP) — While officials re-examined Buncombe County's hazardous waste ordinance, an Environmental Protection Agency team was moving two barrels of chemical warfare agent waste to a dump outside the state.

The two barrels of BZ waste were to be moved today to a federally approved waste disposal site, George Moein, chief of the emergency response program for EPA Region IV, said Monday.

Last Friday, the EPA assumed jurisdiction over the barrels, which surfaced at a landfill at the Chemtronics Inc. plant near Swannanoa last August. The site was formerly used for the production of BZ, an hallucinogenic drug intended for use in bombs.

The two barrels are part of some 300 to 500 barrels of waste and substandard BZ believed buried on the site nearly 20 years ago by U.S. Army contractors.

Moein said the lids were removed from the barrels, which contained rags and trash as expected. They were neutralized with two different chemicals, methyl cellulose and sodium hydroxide.

“The reason they didn't leave then is because the appropriate hazardous waste site is outside of the state of North Carolina and we have to get the necessary permit from all the state folks,” Moein said. “They've been very cooperative in assisting us.”

He said he would “rather not say” where the disposal site is until the barrels are on their way. They will be transported by GSX Co. in Reidsville, an EPA contractor. The Army is not involved, he said.

EPA officials will not know if there is active BZ in the barrels. “I'm not sure,” Moein said. “But we were told that they contain perhaps — and I emphasize perhaps — some BZ material, and that is a lethal drug. Therefore we took the precaution of neutralizing them.”

Meanwhile, Buncombe County commissioners were expected to hear from their advisory board on hazardous waste today.

“This is our first real brush with hazardous waste,” said Earl West, chairman of the waste advisory board.

Craven Deputy, Suspect Shot In Legs

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A Craven County sheriff's deputy and a break-in suspect were hospitalized Monday after an early-morning scuffle left each with a gunshot wound in the leg.

Sheriff Pete Bland said Lt. Kerry Ensley and Curtis Williams were injured about 5 a.m. Monday when Ensley tried to arrest Williams, who allegedly was beating on the front door of a Craven County home in a break-in attempt.

A fight began when the deputy started to search the suspect, and both were shot as they struggled for Ensley's gun, Bland said.

Ensley was undergoing surgery Monday morning to remove bullet fragments from his right thigh, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Williams was to be operated on later Monday for injuries to his lower right leg, the spokeswoman said.

Williams, 25, of Newport, was charged with assault with a firearm on an officer, possession of cocaine and attempted breaking and entering, Bland said, adding that authorities found at least eight grams of the drug on him.

Bland said the scuffle occurred after authorities responded to a call of a break-in in progress.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 6, 1985

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, you will have a very good opportunity to decide the policies under which you feel you can best operate in the days ahead, so get into these early.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get your talents working more efficiently in the morning, and later get routines perfected so that you can have success.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to make your home conditions more harmonious and functional in the morning, then later go out for a little fun and relax.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do whatever will make routines run more smoothly in the morning and be very efficient later; then be happy at home with your family.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be concerned with improving your monetary status in the morning, and consult with an expert in this, also.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early analyze your desires and ambitions and decide how best you can gain them. Then start making big money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Early make plans for gaining your cherished goals and then put out the effort necessary and you make great progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good pal can give fine advice for gaining your ambitions more quickly, so listen, then work toward such ends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to improve your worldly status and then talk with friends and gain their assistance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are inspired as to how to gain your fondest aims and then talk them over with one who can be very helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study how to make real progress where business matters are concerned, then get a new system working nicely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listening to suggestions of a prominent person can help you to become more affluent, and later you can handle details.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You see how you can advance more quickly in your career in the morning, then later you get help from outside contacts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be full of good ideas during adolescence and will love to study, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can, and send to college. Give praise when merited and your progeny will do very well. There is a strong possibility of becoming quite wealthy.

DOUBLE COUPONS

Double Your Savings At Kroger

This Wednesday, February 6

WE GLADLY WELCOME
FEDERAL FOOD STAMPS

Your Food Stamps Go Further At Kroger Sav-on.

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY
Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale in each Kroger Sav-on, except as specifically noted in this ad. If we do run out of an item we will offer you your choice of a comparable item when available, reflecting the same savings or a rain-check which will entitle you to purchase the advertised item at the advertised price within 30 days. Limit one manufacturer's coupon per item.

THIS OFFER EFFECTIVE ON WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6
IN OUR GREENVILLE STORE ONLY!

Clip the Manufacturer's cents off Coupons from Your Mail, Newspapers and Magazines... Then Bring Them to Kroger Sav-on

FOR EVERY $10.00 PURCHASE WE WILL DOUBLE 5 MFG'S COUPONS - EXAMPLE
$10 Purchase - 5 Coupons
$20 Purchase - 10 Coupons
$100 Purchase - 50 Coupons

This Wednesday, February 6, we will redeem all national manufacturer's cents-off coupons up to 50¢ for double their value. Offer good on national manufacturer's coupons only. (Food retailer coupons not accepted.) Customer must purchase coupon product in specified size. Expired coupons will not be honored. Coupons for free merchandise excluded from this offer. Offer does not apply to Kroger or other store coupons whether manufacturer is mentioned or not. When the value of the coupon exceeds 50¢ this offer is limited to $1.00. If double the value of a coupon exceeds the retail of the item, this offer is limited to the retail price. Limit one cigarette and coffee coupon per customer. Limit one coupon for any particular item. If you, for example, have two coupons for 15¢ off on Miracle Whip and intend to purchase two jars of Miracle Whip - only one of these coupons will be doubled. You may use the second coupon but it's face value remains at face value.
