Reagan Tax Proposal Finding Support

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's appeal for tax simplification, the only new initiative in a State of the Union litany of revived first-term proposals, is drawing hesitant support from a Congress preoccupied with deficit-reduction.

In the first congressional address of his second term, Reagan Wednesday night proclaimed a "Second American Revolution" that would include "historic reform" of the nation's tax code.

Reagan indicated that his proposal would be a modification of a flat-rate plan advanced by the Treasury Department, but that it would allow homeowners to continue deducting home mortgage interest payments. It should not be "a tax increase in disguise," the president said in his nationally broadcast address.

Reagan's spokesman Larry Speakes said today the White House switchboard was open for about 45 minutes after the speech and received 349 calls praising the speech and 35 from people who didn't like it.

"It was not an exceptionally heavy volume, but a pretty good turnout," Speakes said.

Many House and Senate members suggested that tax revision would have to be put on a back burner while Congress wrestles with ways to reduce deficits soaring above $200 billion.

"I prefer one at a time," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., suggesting that deficit-reduction had the highest priority. However, he said Reagan could probably win approval for the tax plan if he "gets behind it" in a major lobbying effort.

Reagan did not endorse the Treasury Department plan as such, but said he was directing newly sworn-in Treasury Secretary James

T. Baker to begin working with congressional sponsors of a flat-rate tax plan so "together we can pass, this year, a tax bill for fairness, simplicity and growth."

He said his plan would lower tax rates "as low as possible by removing many tax preference" and would propose a top rate "of no more than 35 percent."

The president's fourth State of the Union speech restated such familiar Reagan themes as smaller government and family values, and he gave lawmakers a pitch for major elements of his new budget — with its call for a $30 billion increase in defense spending and $39 billion in domestic spending cuts.

"Tonight was a night of eloquent generalities. Tomorrow he must begin to inform people as to the sometimes difficult realities of the Reagan revolution," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Although Republican congressional leaders have been near unanimous in their criticism of the high level of defense spending in Reagan's budget proposal, the president told Congress: "We must not relax our efforts to restore military strength ... Spending for defense is investing in things that are priceless: peace and freedom."

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Service Committee, pronounced the speech: "good show biz, that's all."

On the domestic side, Reagan called for an end to government support of Amtrak, the nation's rail passenger corporation.

But the president emphasized that his deficit-cutting proposals would leave intact programs designed for "the elderly, needy, disabled and unemployed."

ABC Board Will Remove Speight Name From Sign

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The state's new $5.5 million "Marvin L. Speight Jr. ABC Office and Warehouse Complex" on Old Garner Road, between Raleigh and Garner, will keep the Speight name. But there may be no sign to remind people the complex was named for Speight, a Farmville businessman and former chairman of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

The ABC Commission has voted to remove Speight's name from the $22,595 sign at the office-warehouse complex.

Speight, who supported former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten in his bid for governor against Jim Martin last year, was appointed chairman of the state ABC Commission by Gov. Jim Hunt in January 1977 and served as long as Hunt was governor.

Martin named Charles E. Knox, brother of Eddie Knox, who was defeated by Edmisten in the race for the Democratic nomination as governor, to replace Speight.

Knox said Wednesday that "we're not changing the official name of the building. All we're doing is changing a sign out at the highway."

A plaque on the building will continue to bear Speight's name along with the names of other ABC officials instrumental in building the complex, Knox said.

Knox also said he was uncertain when or how the sign will be altered. Asheville attorney Robert Orr, one of three members of the commission, made the motion to remove Speight's name from the sign.

"It was inappropriate for a state office facility to have a sign that sort of personally reflected one individual involved with the commission for a period of time," Orr said.

Hospital Spokesman Says Existing Medical Arts Zoning Satisfactory

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital spokesman Ralph Hall told members of Greenville's Medical District Study Committee Wednesday the hospital was "well pleased" with existing zoning classifications assigned to land surrounding the 100-acre PCMH-ECU School of Medicine complex.

"We're pleased with the medical arts zoning and think it suits very well," Hall, PCMH vice president of facility management, said. Land surrounding the hospital is principally composed of acreage zoned medical arts, a designation that allows construction of doctors' offices, medical clinics and like enterprises.

Hall, the first of a series of speakers who have been invited to address the Medical District Study Committee, added that zoning classifications and the often unrealistic alternative of buying up adjoining land are the only two avenues available to hospitals wanting protection from encroaching development. Hospitals in areas where they don't have that kind of zoning protection have often become "smothered by industry," he said.

"It's very difficult to hold off development in areas around hospitals. Everybody moves to them. Fast foods, pancake houses ... the closer they can get the better off they are," Hall said.

Information provided by Hall and future speakers will be used by Medical District Study Committee members to develop recommendations on future development of Greenville's 1,790-acre medical district. The nine-member committee, created by the City Council in December in response to "significant controversy" over the use of land in the PCMH area. That controversy was in part brought about by Guy B. Mayo's request to rezone property across from the hospital to allow development of a shopping center.

Committee members include Chairman Dick Flye, Wayne Adams, Tom Baines, Charlie Berkey, Phil Dixon, Janice Faulkner, Wes Hankins, Dick McKee and Dan Worthington. The committee is expected to pass on its recommendation for review by the Greenville Planning Department within four to six months. The recommendation will then be sent to the City Council.

The importance of this study and the resulting recommendation is paramount, Flye said, because "everybody in the city of Greenville and Pitt County has a stake in this."

The medical center, initially started in 1973 as a "small community hospital," has grown into a major complex that serves as the regional referral center for a 29-county eastern North Carolina area, according to Hall. The importance of PCMH as a regional center, he added, is reflected in the number of outside patients using the facility. "Fifty-two percent of our patients now come from outside the county," he said.

The hospital now has 560 beds. PCMH development plans, however, call for the addition of 190 beds between 1990 and 1992, to bring bed capacity to 750.

Improvements currently in the works, Hall added, are expansion of the PCMH surgery department to include a new open heart program and enlargement of the radiology

Poles Convict Policemen In Priest's Death

TORUN, Poland (AP) — A panel of judges today convicted three secret policemen of murdering a pro-Solidarity priest and sentenced them to prison terms of 14 to 25 years. A fourth officer, convicted of instigating the killing, also received a 25-year sentence.

The five judges rejected the prosecution's demand for the death penalty against Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, accused of leading two other officers in the kidnap-murder of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko. Piotrowski, 33, was sentenced to 25 years in prison, the most severe sentence in Poland next to death.

Piotrowski's superior, Col. Adam Pietruszka, 47, was found guilty of aiding and abetting the killing last October and also was given a 25-year sentence. Lt. Leszek Pekala, 32, was sentenced to 15 years in prison and Lt. Waldemar Chmielewski, 29, was given 14 years in prison for participation in the murder.

During the trial the two lieutenants had testified that Piotrowski led them in the kidnapping and killing of Popieluszko, a Roman Catholic priest.

Piotrowski and Pietruszka also will be denied all civil rights 10 years after they get out of prison, meaning they will lose military rank and honors, the right to vote and to hold office.

Chief Judge Artur Kujawa, announcing the verdict, said

Piotrowski, Pekala and Chmielewski were guilty of premeditated murder. "They wanted to kill him and they implemented their plans," he said.

However, he said Pekala and Chmielewski were "victims of the actions of their superiors." Pietruszka's assistance "was a necessary condition for the success of the whole operation," he said.

Observers in the 100-seat courtroom stood as the verdicts were announced.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Ever since the President of the United States started to work out of his home, everyone thinks they can save on busfare and lunches by doing it too.

The figure now is somewhere around 23 million people who are working part-time or full-time from their homes.

I've been doing it now for 20 years and I can tell you it's no day at the beach. All of these stories that talk about creating an "atmosphere" for business, and "zoning" your own space, are right out of "Alice in Wonderland." If you're going to create anything, it should be a chapel right next to your desk.

No one takes you seriously when you work from your home. If you worked in a big office building with egg crate lighting and bottled water, would anyone call you from a repair shop and ask you to give them the serial number off the bottom of the toaster?

Or if you were in the middle of a high-level corporate meeting, would a child call you to the phone and tell you you just ran out of toilet paper in the hall bath?

And who in their right mind would call the president as he works on the National Deficit and chirp, "You busy?"

No, there is just something non-professional about a home office that invites people to leave a half-eaten doughnut on your desk and a telephone receiver with a Popsicle stick and your only pen woven into the cord.

If I had any advice about home offices, it would be to never locate them outside of a bathroom door. We're talking freeway traffic here, plus outbursts of steam, blaring radios, off-key singing and heavy gargling.

Be an unlisted mother or you'll fall into the trap of, "Does your mother stay at home or does she work? She's at home? Then she can drive the Future Homemakers of America to a meat processing plant."

Have business hours or at least 50 times a day you will have someone interrupt your chain of thought with, "Don't get up. Just tell me where it is."

Don't share your "office" with another business. This translates to a room that houses a sewing machine, ironing board, stereo, exercise bicycle, or a guest who is sleeping over. These are distractions you don't need.

Wear your heart on your sleeve and your supplies around your waist. Years ago, I created a utility belt that holds my scissors, pen, tape, ruler, envelopes and white paper. Every night before I go to bed, I hide them in a different spot. A loaded utility belt in the hands of children is a dangerous thing.

I read one story that said a home office can offer you exactly what you have always wanted: a challenge, efficiency, effectiveness and fun.

You'll do well to get one out of four.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Youth Can't Hide From Maine's Concealment Law

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old senior in a Christian high school and my problem is this: Recently I was stopped in a department store for shoplifting, but I didn't steal anything. Here's the whole story, OK?

I went into that store to buy some cassette tapes when I saw a rack of sunglasses. I tried some on, found a pair I liked, and for some stupid reason I stuck it in my pocket. (Oh, maybe I should mention that I had been caught stealing in that store before, but was let off.)

Well, I found the tapes I wanted, and while paying for them, I kept thinking about all the trouble I got into with my family when I was caught shoplifting, and I thought to myself, "I don't want to go through that again," so I headed for the sunglasses rack to put the sunglasses back when I was stopped by a security guard. He asked if I was going to pay for the sunglasses I had in my pocket. I told him no, I was putting them back.

Well, he took me into his office and asked me a lot of questions, then he told me they had me on "concealment." I asked why I was in trouble when I hadn't left the store with anything I didn't pay for, and he said that under Maine law, concealment was the same as stealing.

Now I'm in big trouble with my family and my school administrator, too. I don't think this is fair. I didn't steal anything.

How do you feel about this law, Abby? I think a person should have to leave the store in order to be caught for stealing.

INNOCENT IN MAINE

DEAR INNOCENT: How I "feel" about a law makes no difference. And regardless of whether or not the law is "fair," you broke it. And maybe I should mention that because you had been caught stealing in that store before but were let off, you may have a tough time trying to prove that you had no intentions of stealing the sunglasses. However, if "concealment" is the same as stealing in Maine, you are in a lot of trouble, my friend.

DEAR ABBY: You said, "Sex therapy is in—faking it is out."

I wholeheartedly agree; that's why I'm writing. I faked satisfaction for 25 years, then I went to a counselor who said, "Most women are happy just satisfying their husbands."

Now what?

NOT HAPPY ENOUGH

DEAR NOT HAPPY: Tell your "counselor" that you differ from "most women"—and you will not be happy until you get the same kind of satisfaction a sexually satisfied man enjoys.

DEAR ABBY: The born-again Moravian Baptist lady (signed "Curious in Dayton") asks what "low church" means to an Episcopalian. Let me assure her that it has nothing to do with how tall the building is.

Actually the difference between high church and low church is the degree of pomp and ceremony in the ritual. The more formal the service, the "higher" the church. High churches use holy water, prayer bells and a lot of fancy trappings. Low churches are more laid back, and their rituals are as plain and unpretentious as any Baptist service.

However, please tell the Baptist lady that if her country club friends regard "low church" as inferior to high church, and Baptists as "worse," she should look elsewhere for lunch, and friends.

NEW YORK (AP) — When his freight-wagon business lost out to the new railroad lines in 1853, John Jacob Mack left Germany and settled in Pennsylvania.

He and his children worked as farmers. Then, in 1900, the Mack teamster tradition came to the fore once again as his grandsons founded the Mack Truck Co. in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Stalemate

The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee has finally approved a $7.25 billion measure allocating federal interstate highway funds that made the scene last year and ran into roadblocks. Even full Senate approval does not guarantee clearance by the House of Representatives.

Without those funds, projects in as many as 45 states could come to a halt. The outlook is not much better than it was last year when House and Senate negotiators were unable to compromise their two versions.

This time around, the Senate committee has stripped all of the added special projects (known as "demonstration projects" which are outside the interstate system).

Last year's measure included 14 such projects (10 of which were for states which had senators on the E&PW Committee). The Senate projects were about one-third the number in the House version. They were the stumbling blocks.

We know too well the importance lawmakers attach to their pet projects and we are also familiar with the tactic of attaching pet projects to major bills as a sort of gentle blackmail. A number of worthwhile undertakings have resulted, just as there have been some dogs.

Still, the mere fact those projects are chiefly local interest affairs (House Speaker O'Neill, for instance, is keenly supportive of a bridge-tunnel dream in Boston) they rarely fall clearly within the national interest scheme of things which should be a priority quality for action by the Congress. It's questionable whether the House committee will match the Senate committee's action in separating "demonstration projects" from the overall funding measure ... just as the full Senate may not accept the committee's action.

Result: stalemate again.

We keep toying with the hope both houses could assemble their special interest projects apart from national interest measures. Get the national interest measures passed, then tackle the demonstration projects.

A first-things-first process, you know.

Among the demonstration projects it is possible there are concepts worthy of broader application. Taken separately, some might emerge ... some might not.

WASHINGTON — The way our parents recall it, Victory in Europe (VE) Day was a memorable moment. On the night of May 8, 1945, they danced at the best clubs and strangers kissed. On German soil, Russian and American troops embraced and toasted a peaceful future.

Forty years later, however, a haze of suspicion clouds relations between the former allies. Talk of a joint Soviet-U.S. 40th anniversary celebration of the Nazis' defeat seems to be out of sync with the times. And the problem is much bigger than the opposition that West Germany and other European allies have demonstrated against such a remembrance.

In public rhetoric both parties still lay claim to peace but their actions often speak to the contrary. The Russians pursue a decade-long arms buildup; the U.S. prepares to carry the arms race into space. The end result is a world on the brink, with 50,000 nuclear warheads in stockpiles, more than 95 percent of which are in custody of the U.S. and Admittedly, the almost daily charges and countercharges that both sides make against one another erode the confidence essential to arms control treaties. The U.S. has frequently pointed to unauthorized nuclear tests and missile production in the U.S.S.R. But, in the past year alone, the Soviets have challenged the U.S. 14 times on alleged violations.

Unfortunately, many of the Soviet complaints have contained a kernel of truth. "I know of several instances," a well-placed congressional aide told us, "in which the United States has violated an arms control treaty, if not compromised the intention of an agreement."

Intentions are important. Just last month, for example, the Government Accounting Office (GAO) reported that highly enriched uranium (HEU), extracted from foreign research reactors' spent fuel, was being used by our government to make nuclear weapons at home. This previously undisclosed practice didn't constitute a technical violation of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) since the pact doesn't apply to weapons-producing states.

But more than 100 nations have signed the non-proliferation treaty, agreeing that they won't transfer nuclear materials from civilian to military purposes. How can the U.S. expect other nations to live up to their promises when it appears so two-faced? How easily can it play holier-than-thou to the Russians?

The routine exchange of accusations is symptomatic of a dangerous lack of trust between the superpowers. That is why efforts toward improving relations between Moscow and Washington are so critical and make a VE day celebration sound so reasonable. The long road to agreement, if not absolute truth, is bumpy — the SALT II treaty required seven years of negotiation, the SALT I four — but begins with one step.

Of course, arms control experts say that in any arms agreement a certain degree of risk exists. There is no such thing as perfect verification; imperfect verification reflects the residual doubts between superpowers. The question is only how large a risk either nation is

WASHINGTON — To dramatize his concern that continued Reagan administration inaction could blow the lid off the Middle East, Saudi Arabia's Prince Bandar has taken the startling tack of urging American officials to read the published foreboding of Abba Eban, a famed founder of Israel.

Bandar, the Saudi ambassador here and a kingly policymaker, has surprised American friends with private praise for the article in Foreign Policy magazine's winter issue by the former Israeli foreign minister. Eban was not speaking for Labor Party Prime Minister Shimon Peres. But because he is now chairman of the Knesset's powerful Security Committee, Eban's warning to President Reagan of a Mideast explosion stands on its own.

Trumpeting the words of a hated Israeli thus becomes Bandar's way of cautioning Reagan that King Fahd's visit to the White House Feb. 11 may end in disaster for both the U.S. and Saudi Arabia. The king's sole purpose in finally accepting the latest of five Reagan invitations is to learn details of his presumed second-term plans to solve the Palestine crisis. Fahd wants to learn them directly from the president, in particular how Israel will be brought into camp.

But is there such a plan? State Department policymakers have been quietly signaling the Saudis not to let hopes soar. To the contrary, Secretary of State George Shultz and his aides are looking for new ways to pressure moderate Arab states, but not Israel. The hope is to force Jordan into West Bank peace talks and to pressure Egypt back into full embrace with Israel.

In short, the U.S. appears to have nothing new for the Mideast despite the fact that, as one diplomat told us, Reagan's second-term victory should have immunized him, "now and forevermore" from pro-Israel political pressure by the Jewish community.

Recently, rumors swept the State Department that the king might cancel his visit to avoid a fiasco. Saudi Arabia has slightly more than $70 billion invested in mostly U.S.

government bonds held in New York banks. The cancellation rumors fed speculation that the Saudis, using the only tool they have to influence the U.S., might liquidate those securities and take their cash somewhere else.

Nothing remotely so drastic is contemplated today. The cautious Saudis, buffeted by economic pressures weakening OPEC, are facing what may be a lengthy period of declining oil prices. Fahd is giving no serious thought to any break in the long alliance with the U.S. Yet Saudi concern that even a second Reagan administration may be unwilling to pressure Israel on the Palestinian issue hints at future pain for the U.S.

That presumption is strengthened by the warning contained in Abba Eban's article. He wrote that unlike the Likud regime of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the new coalition government, headed by the Labor Party's Peres, is not entirely hostile to Reagan's Sept. 1, 1982, West Bank peace plan. The president, in short, should resurrect that plan or something like it and push it hard.

"We have reached a stage in which American passivity would amount to active intervention against a possible era of reconciliation," Eban said. "Passivity" would condemn the Middle East to "a volcanic status quo leading to a possible explosion."

That is the gist of what Fahd is preparing to tell Reagan when he arrives here and asks this question: How will you carry out your 1982 plan?

As each side develops new weapons, a mutually verifiable arms control treaty becomes that much more difficult to achieve. If one nation insists upon total verification of the other side's weaponry, the chance of securing a worthwhile arms agreement diminishes.

Even if the Soviet and the Americans enter into serious arms control talks in the future, we may have to settle for an agreement in which the verification process is less than complete.

But that's where confidence-building enters the equation. A VE Day meeting between Reagan and the Soviet leader, who may still be Konstantin Chernenko, in Germany or a mutually agreeable site would remind Russians and Americans alike of their mission in Europe 40 years ago and send a strong message of hope to an anxious world. That objective is paramount today, as even the Germans might argue. There's no reason to pass up this opportunity, permitting the Soviets to cite our reluctance as a sign of American belligerence.

They do not come close to meeting.

If Congress is to achieve truly significant reductions in the federal deficit, Congress will have to find recourse in Sutton's Axiom. Where is the money? It is in defense. It is in Social Security. A 10 percent cut in defense outlays would mean $100 billion in savings over three years. Denial of a cost-of-living adjustment in Social Security for one year would save $19 billion over three years. Now we are talking of finding big bucks, but neither the president nor the Congress is much disposed to look for savings there.

This is in response to the article in Sunday's Daily Reflector called "Sunday Opinion." I am among the little group, as the writer calls us, who would like to see the merger plan put before a vote of the people. I am opposed to the way the County Commissioners and the Board of Education have gone about informing the public when my children's future education is concerned. A good example was the underhanded way they announced the merger on the 6 o'clock news on Channel 9 Feb. 4 and kept their meeting secret from the public because they don't care one way or the other how we feel. Why were they so secretive?

Since the merger plan got started, we as parents and taxpayers have not had an input or say so in any way. They have avoided us. Mr. Barnhill says he can live with his decision. I hope so, because God help us, our children's futures are in their hands. I hope they remember once before when we gave up our community schools and bused our children, what happened to the parent support in the schools.

We would like the school board and commissioners to talk to us as equals and give us honest answers. You owe us that and more at this point.

is. The Senate Budget Committee has provided some estimates of savings over a three-year period. These are examples:

By requiring much higher payments from oldsters on Medicare, we could save $9.6 billion.

By making drastic cuts in farm price supports, we could save $9 billion.

By abolishing the Small Business Administration, we could save $5.3 billion.

By charging higher interest rates on mortgages insured by the FHA and the Veterans Administration, we could save $3 billion.

By terminating interest subsidies for rural electric and telephone cooperatives, we could save $1.2 billion.

Over the next three years, a 5 percent pay cut for federal workers would save more than $5 billion. If Congress were to end general revenue sharing with the states after 1986, about $8 billion would be retained. Postal subsidies, rural housing, veterans' health benefits — there are substantial savings here. By changing the eligibility rules for student loans, so that families with incomes above $30,000 would be excluded, another $5.4 billion would be saved.

The Senate Budget Committee, in its search for answers, has itemized 68 possible cuts in spending. A few hundred million could be pared here and there from child nutrition, military retirement, railroad retirement, health grants, library grants, sewer and water grants, and aid to families with dependent children. Congress could abolish the Job Corps, get out of Amtrak, sell off the Conrail system, kill the Legal Services Corp., end subsidies for urban mass transit and put a halt to the strategic petroleum reserve.

And if Congress were to do all these things — if Congress were to adopt all 68 economies, and if Congress also were to impose seven user fees, as well — can you guess what these draconian measures would achieve?

Taking them all together, this politically inconceivable package would improve the situation by $126 billion over the three-year period. This is the same three-year period in which cumulative deficits of $700 billion are in prospect. The administration no longer even dreams of a balanced budget by fiscal '88. The goal is to hold the three-year deficits to $441 billion instead of $700 billion. Under any of these assumptions, tongue and buckle do not meet.

Strength For Today

It is interesting to ponder the fact that we live in a universe in which the atoms which make it up are continually in furious movement. The chair on which you happen to be sitting seems to be a solid piece of furniture. As a matter of fact, it is an innumerable cluster of atoms revolving on orbits at almost immeasurable speed.

Furthermore, we are being hurled about the axis of the earth at 18 miles a minute and around the orbit of the earth at 18 miles a second.

Can we be serene in such a world? Is not the nature of the world such that we must necessarily be in a state of agitation? Not at all. We are led to believe that in the realm where God abides there is peace and absolute serenity.

It is not so much one statement of the Bible but the whole teaching of the Bible that indicates this. "Peace," said Jesus, "I leave with you."

Highlights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the highlights of the State of the Union address President Reagan delivered to Congress Wednesday night:

TAXES
He called for a tax simplification bill to help unleash "the tremendous pent-up power of our economy." He said he was directing his Treasury secretary to begin working with Congress to write bipartisan legislation based on principles of "fairness, simplicity and growth."

There would be no "tax increase in disguise," he said. In particular, he would not "jeopardize the mortgage interest deduction" for family homes.

Reagan also vowed a top tax rate of "no more than 35 percent, possibly lower," to replace the current top rate of 50 percent.

He proposed tax breaks for companies that locate in depressed urban "enterprise zones" and tuition tax credits to help families that send their children to private schools.

ARMS CONTROL
He warned that while the United States remains determined to defend its interests, "We are poised as never before to create a safer, freer, more peaceful world." But he added, "We cannot play innocents abroad in a world that is not innocent. Nor can we be passive when freedom is under siege."

He called anew for funding of the MX missile despite congressional skepticism about the 10-warhead nuclear weapon. He said a vote in support of the MX would be a "critical test of our resolve" during a period of arms negotiations.

CENTRAL AMERICA
"It is essential that the Congress continue all facets of our assistance to Central America. I want to work with you to support the democratic forces whose struggle is tied to our own security."

FARMERS
Free-market principles must apply to American farmers, many of whom are "in great financial distress," he said.

"We need an orderly transition to a market-oriented farm economy," Reagan said. "We can help farmers best, not by expanding federal payments, but by making fundamental reforms, keeping interest rates down and knocking down foreign trade barriers to American farm exports."

SOCIAL PROGRAMS
He pledged that "the social safety net for the elderly, needy, disabled and unemployed will be left intact," but said Medicare and Medicaid growth "will be slowed."

DEFENSE
"Spending for defense is investing in things that are priceless: peace and freedom."

FOREIGN TRADE
The president called for a new round of negotiations with America's trading partners within the next year "to expand trade and competition."

MINIMUM WAGE
He called for a sub-minimum wage for teenagers seeking summer jobs.

FOREIGN AID
He reaffirmed American support for rebel movements in Afghanistan and Nicaragua.

MINORITIES
Blacks and other minorities "will not have full and equal power until they have full economic power."

SCHOOL PRAYER
He called for a constitutional amendment to permit organized prayer in public schools and legislation to outlaw abortion.

AMTRAK
"We must reduce or eliminate costly government subsidies. For example, deregulation of the airline industry has led to cheaper airfares, but on Amtrak, taxpayers pay about $35 per passenger every time an Amtrak train leave the station. It's time we ended this huge federal subsidy."

THE PAST
Of his first four years, the president said, "We did what we promised, and a great industrial giant is reborn."

"We have begun well. But it's only a beginning. We are not here to congratulate ourselves on what we have done but to challenge ourselves to finish what has not yet been done."

THE FUTURE
"The time has come to proceed toward a great new challenge — a Second American Revolution of hope and opportunity; a revolution carrying us to new heights of progress by pushing back frontiers of knowledge and space; a revolution of spirit that taps the soul of America, enabling us to summon greater strength than we have ever known; and a revolution that carries beyond our shores the gold promise of human freedom in a world at peace."

Reagan ... (Continued from page 1)

"Growth of our major health care programs, Medicare and Medicaid, will be slowed, but protections for the elderly and needy will be preserved."

Reagan made no specific mention of Social Security, even though a vow to leave benefits alone was a major campaign theme. His budget would permit a scheduled cost-of-living hike in Social Security benefits to take effect next year, although there has been considerable support among Senate Republicans to freeze these payments.

The president reiterated his support for a long list of proposals of his first term that never made it through Congress: school prayer and anti-abortion legislation; merit pay for teachers, a crime-control package, approval of the MX missile.

When the president renewed his appeal for a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget, some jeers and laughs were heard from the Democratic side of the aisle in the crowded House chamber.

"This man just presented a budget with a $180 billion deficit that he now wants to make illegal," said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.

While proposing a tax simplification plan, Reagan renewed his call for two earlier proposals that would add to the complexity of the tax code: tuition tax credits for parents of private-school students, and special tax treatment for businesses that locate in inner cities.

"I think you could make that a birthday present," said Reagan, who was 74 on Wednesday, referring to his so-called "urban-enterprise zone" proposal.

His audience stood at the conclusion of his speech to belt out a chorus of "Happy Birthday."

"Thank you for making the the 35th time I have been 39 the happiest of them all," Reagan said.

Speakes, the White House spokesman, said the president "thought the reception in the chamber was, he said, unusually warm. He was touched by the birthday greeting," Speakes said.

He said the president received 100 calls, tabulated separately, wishing him birthday greetings.

Reagan ended his half-hour address by saluting two people seated in the gallery, a practice he has followed in past State of the Union appearances.

One was Army Cadet Jean Nguyen, who arrived in the United States 10 years ago as a refugee from Vietnam and will soon graduate from the West Point Military Academy; and 79-year-old "Mother" Clara Hale of Harlem, whom Reagan praised for her work with infants born to heroin addicts.

He praised both for their heroism and for proving that "anything is possible in America."

Reagan was enthusiastically received by members as he stepped to the podium to deliver his first speech to Congress since his landslide re-election victory last November.

Reagan Ignores Own Tax Plan

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — While asking Congress for action this year on legislation to simplify the income tax system, President Reagan has stepped deftly away from the plan his own Treasury Department proposed on his orders after nearly a year of study.

In his State of the Union address Wednesday night, Reagan pledged support for the concepts presented just two months ago, but he backed off or ignored its most controversial elements.

"The Treasury Department has produced an excellent reform plan whose principles will guide the final proposal we will ask you to enact," Reagan told members of the House and Senate.

However, when he specified the elements to be included in an eventual bill, only a shadow of the original remained.

It was one year ago, in his State of the Union address, that Reagan called for "a plan for action to simplify the entire tax code so all taxpayers, big and small, are treated more fairly."

On Wednesday, he adopted the plan he had ordered — but only as a guide to eliminating most brackets in the 15-tiered progressive tax system, and most deductions as well, in order to ensure that all but the poorest wage earners bear a share of the tax burden.

Reagan announced he was directing his new Treasury Secretary, James A. Baker III, to begin working with congressional committees and authors of other so-called "flat tax" plans to draw up bipartisan legislation incorporating these principles:

— A maximum tax rate of 35 percent, "and possibly lower," down from the current 50 percent and equal to the Treasury Department's proposal.

— Preservation of "the mortgage interest deduction families need," not just a writeoff of the first $5,000 recommended by Treasury.

— A total exemption from federal income taxes for "individuals living at or near the poverty line."

— A significant but unspecified increase in the personal exemption, which the Treasury Department proposed to double from its current $1,000.

— Reduction of corporate tax rates "while maintaining incentives for capital formation."

— Removal of "many tax preferences" and addition of at least two new ones: tax breaks for businesses that open or expand in depressed areas and tax credits for parents who pay tuition to sent their children to private or parochial schools.

But Reagan never mentioned the most controversial elements of the Treasury Department plan, such as strict limits on deductions for charitable contributions, elimination of the accelerated depreciation formulas for businesses adopted during his first term and cancellation of the investment tax credit.

Nor was there any mention of Treasury's proposal to do away with the deduction for state and local taxes.

U.S. Starts Hunt For Nazi Doctor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a mock trial by Auschwitz survivors to dramatize the torture inflicted by Dr. Josef Mengele, the Justice Department is launching a search for the most notorious Nazi war criminal still at large.

Calling Mengele "one of the world's most vicious criminals," Attorney General William French Smith said the investigation falls within the department's "general authority," although Mengele is not wanted for any crimes committed in the United States.

Smith's announcement Wednesday came shortly after Holocaust survivors, marking the 40th anniversary of the liberation of the Nazi concentration camp known as Auschwitz, concluded a mock trial in Jerusalem with a declaration that Mengele's freedom "brings shame and dishonor upon the free world."

"The Israelis are intensely interested in this subject matter," Smith said. "I can't exactly say they urged it, but I know they will welcome it."

But the attorney general also acknowledged that the investigation was triggered in part by disclosure last month of a declassified document indicating that American military occupation forces in Austria may have taken Mengele into custody — and then released him — in 1947.

The documents were disclosed by Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, a private institution for Holocaust studies.

Reached by telephone in Paris, where he is working to coordinate commemorative activities marking the anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz, Hier said: "I am gratified that the Reagan administration has finally decided to launch a formal investigation — something that we had asked the president to do in a formal letter on Dec. 11."

"It is particularly timely. The whole world has just witnessed the harrowing tale of the Mengele twins," he said. "We have a moral obligation to leave no stone unturned in bringing this monster to the bar of justice."

Mengele, a physician and former major in the Nazi secret police, is wanted by the West German government on murder charges. The Bonn government has offered a one-million mark ($350,000) reward for information leading to his arrest.

Among Mengele's alleged crimes were experiments on twins and the gassing and cremation of prisoners at the Auschwitz camp in Poland, where an estimated 4 million Jews and others were killed.

He would be 73 if still alive. Mengele was reportedly last seen in Paraguay in the 1970s.

Smith pledged that the investigation would be intensive and speedy, but said "it's futile for me to speculate" on its chances for success.

"The allegations have been such, and the public interest has been such, and the notoriety of the individual has been such that it seemed to be appropriate" Smith said of his decision to order the probe by the Office of Special Investigations, a division of the Justice Department that specializes in hunting Nazi war criminals.

Hier announced last month in New York that two documents obtained by his organization under the Freedom of Information Act showed that U.S. Army occupation forces may have captured Mengele after the war, but then set him free.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said at the time that "none of the documents indicate any American units had any contact or captured the doctor after the war."

Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott, who heads the department's criminal division, said Wednesday, "I have personally been given assurances" that the Pentagon will cooperate in the investigation.

ARSENAL EXPLOSION — Only a crater, twisted metal and splintered wood remained after 5,000 pounds of nitroglycerin exploded at an Army ammunition plant near Radford, Va., Wednesday, killing one man and leaving another missing and presumed dead. About 10 workers were treated for minor injuries at the plant hospital and discharged. The blast felled loose ceiling tiles and light fixtures at the administration building about a mile away, and knocked a man out of bed 1½ miles away. The 7,095-acre arsenal, operated by Hercules Inc. as a contractor to the Army, is the nation's primary producer of propellants for Army rockets and artillery.

Revised Farm Credit Plan Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration's revamped credit-aid program for debt-ridden farmers is receiving a tepid reception on Capitol Hill, but Agriculture Secretary John Block says it is up to banks and state governments to make up for any shortcomings.

"We need to put out the fire, not make an orderly pile of the ashes," said Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., reflecting a widely held view in Congress that the aid offer is insufficient.

Two congressional hearings on the issue were to be held today.

"This is nothing more than the same game with a new name," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "Once again the Reagan administration is raising false hopes among farmers... It's like a spit in the ocean."

There also was bipartisan disappointment in Iowa, one of the states hardest hit by the credit squeeze, where state lawmakers already are working on supplemental lending help for farmers.

"It's totally inadequate," said state House Speaker Don Avenson, a Democrat. "Basically, they have abandoned 10 percent to 15 percent of the farmers in the Midwest."

Despite the administration action, more than a dozen bills are pending in Congress to strengthen credit aid available to farmers, many of whom are caught between high interest rates and low values for their land and crops.

But Block, announcing details of the credit package at a news conference Wednesday, said farmers and their bankers weren't likely to get anything more from Washington, where the administration is trying to cut federal spending.

"I believe that most everyone concerned has an obligation to play a part in working for a solution," Block said, adding that state governments, lending institutions and local communities will have to come up with any additional aid needed to keep their farmers in business.

"You have to decide, how far do you reach?" in offering help to farmers, he said. "I think we've reached quite a ways in this administration."

Under the administration plan, bankers will be able to receive federal guarantees for a portion of their troubled farm loans if they agree to "write down" enough of the loan principal or interest to bring payments within the reach of farm borrowers.

The guarantees will be available on at least $650 million in loans, money earmarked last September in a credit aid program that went unused because banks said it was too restrictive. More could be transferred from other Agriculture Department accounts if banks use up that amount.

In addition, the Farmers Home Administration will guarantee up to 90 percent on new operating loans made to farmers whose lenders have gone out of business and who have been unable to find a new "credit home."

The package also includes credit coordination among various federal agencies, special action teams to help with loan paperwork and credit "hot lines" to help provide information and advice to troubled borrowers.

Several Republican senators welcomed the announcement, saying it was a step toward restoring confidence among hard-pressed farmers.

"It's a good interim step," said Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

"There is still evidence of sensitivity ... that we have a real crisis out there," added Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Block denied that the package was offered as a result of political "blackmail," a charge leveled on Tuesday by administration budget director David Stockman in unusually blunt testimony on Capitol Hill.

Opponents Call For Ban On Alcohol Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of wine and beer commercials say the advertisements should be banned from the airwaves because they “glamorize alcohol” and contribute to its abuse, especially among young people.

The proposed ban was discussed today at a Senate subcommittee hearing at which spokesmen for brewers, wineries, advertisers and broadcasters asked lawmakers not to meddle with the commercials.

They said public service announcements and programs sponsored by industry groups are more effective ways to warn young people about alcohol abuse.

The conflicting views were presented in prepared testimony to the Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee on alcoholism, headed by Republican Paula Hawkins of Florida. No legislation on the subject has been introduced this year in either house.

Groups advocating a ban have formed Project SMART — Stop Marketing Alcohol on Radio and TV. If a ban proves politically impossible, the coalition is willing to accept an equal time requirement for ads depicting the social and health problems associated with alcohol.

Depending on their position, witnesses cited different studies that confirmed or disputed a link between advertising and alcohol abuse. There was also disagreement over whether broadcasters have aired enough public service warnings about alcohol.

“We are particularly concerned about the impact of such advertising on vulnerable populations including young people generally — children of alcoholics, specifically, and heavy drinkers,” said Martha Baker, president of the National Council on Alcoholism.

On the other hand, she contended, “Public service announcements and entertainment programming which depict adverse consequences associated with drinking are rare and frequently relegated to viewing hours when most Americans are asleep.”

Edward O. Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said radio and television stations “have for many years led efforts to inform the public about the dangers of irresponsible alcohol use, most particularly drinking and driving.”

He told the committee, “A free society should tolerate no restrictions upon the advertisement of lawful products.” And he warned that a counter-advertising requirement “would set a precedent that Congress would be pressured to apply to a plethora of other products that may present health risks when misused.”

The content of the beer and wine advertising also was criticized.

Michael F. Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said, “Objective minds can hardly deny that the overall effect of the ads is to glamorize alcohol and foster the notion that drinking is the key to achieving personal goals.”

John A. De Luca, president of the Wine Institute that represents 493 California wineries and thousands of wine growers, said content is regulated by voluntary advertising codes.

He said that since 1978, the institute’s members “have voluntarily and scrupulously” adhered to their self-imposed code, which “has effectively prevented advertising of our wines that in any way appeals to underage drinkers and high-risk consumers.”

Stephen K. Lambright, vice president and group executive for Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc. handed out a large binder with information on alcohol abuse prevention programs supported by his company.

Research Project Touts Fake Mail

CINCINNATI (AP) — People trying to find the Plummet Mall they've been hearing about on local radio stations for the last three weeks will discover their efforts are in vain.

The advertising campaign for what is billed as an underground shopping mall under construction is actually a test of the impact of radio advertising on the public, a newspaper says.

The man who engineered the campaign, advertising executive-broadcaster Jerry Galvin, says he can't talk about the effort or its goal.

"I can't say anything," Galvin told The Cincinnati Post. "I had an assignment to do the ad campaign, and I'm being paid not to say anything else. This is a research project, so I've got to keep my mouth shut. If I shoot my mouth off, hey, I've got no research project."

He said the research results are due in about three weeks.

FCC Is Reviewing Fairness Doctrine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is beginning a sweeping review of a requirement it placed on broadcasters more than 30 years ago — the obligation to be fair.

The Fairness Doctrine, established in 1949, requires broadcasters to allow time for the discussion of controversial issues of public importance and to allow “for the expression of contrasting views.”

In beginning the inquiry last April, the commission noted that “developments in First Amendment jurisprudence and communications law in general suggested that continued adherence to the doctrine might be contrary to the public interest and constitutional principles.”

After hearing from almost 40 people, including retired broadcast journalist Eric Sevareid and Phyllis Schlafly, president of Eagle Forum, the FCC will propose a course of action, including the possibility of throwing out the Fairness Doctrine.

In a statement prepared for delivery at today's opening of the two-day hearing, FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said “It is no secret that I as well as some of my fellow commissioners philosophically oppose content regulation of the electronic press.”

But a coalition of individuals and groups, including former U.S. Solicitor General Erwin W. Griswold, who successfully defended the Fairness Doctrine before the Supreme Court, says it should be left in place.

At a news conference Wednesday, Griswold quoted from the high court's decision in the case. “It is the right of the viewers and listeners, not the right of the broadcasters” which is paramount.

The very fact that there are so few fairness cases taken to court shows that it works, coalition members said. A requirement of the doctrine is that those with complaints try to work their problem out with the broadcaster before bringing the case

Military Unleashes Wrath On Stockman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fellow Republicans pilloried David Stockman. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the budget director had "defamed" those in uniform and Sen. Barry Goldwater said "I'd fire him" for suggesting that military people care more about their pensions than their country.

Stockman had nothing more to say on that subject Wednesday, although Edwin Dale, his spokesman, said he "in no way intended to impugn the patriotism or devotion of our men and women in uniform, but was expressing personal frustration with bureaucratic resistance — not peculiar to the Department of Defense — to reform."

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, in a telegram to President Reagan, demanded that "the 4-F draft-dodging Stockman" be removed. Stockman had a draft deferment during the Vietnam war as a divinity student.

The White House kept a cool distance from the controversy, but Stockman found some GOP support for himself, if not for his controversial views.

"If he needs support, I'm happy to support him," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said and the House Republican leader, Robert Michel of Illinois, expressed sympathy for his workload.

"It's the toughest job in government," said Michel of Stockman's post.

The uproar was touched off by Stockman's outburst Tuesday in congressional testimony against what he depicted as the greed of retired military men and of farmers, who he suggested wanted the government to bail them out because of their own bad business decisions.

The $18.3 billion-a-year military pension system permits a military man to retire at half pay after 20 years service. The average retiree is 42 years old when he or she leaves the service.

Stockman deplored military resistance to modifying the pension system. He said, "the institutional forces in the military are more concerned about protecting their retirement benefits than they are about protecting the security of the American people. When push comes to shove, they'll give up on security before they give up on retirement."

Weinberger, in a formal statement, charged Stockman had defamed men and women who "endure great personal hardships and make many sacrifices for the security of the United States." He called the military pension system "fair but by no means lavish."

In the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes had little to say except to underscore that Stockman had said he was expressing a personal opinion. He added that Reagan "probably" doesn't share Stockman's views on the pension system.

That didn't deter Goldwater, R-Ariz., who opened a hearing of the Armed Services Committee by calling Stockman's remarks "about as distasteful as anything I've heard from any administration official since I've been in Washington."

Later, Goldwater told reporters "I'd fire him" if Stockman was in his employ. He said he wasn't, however, seeking the budget director's resignation.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.,

said "I don't know of any group of people who deserve more than the people who wear the uniform."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said people don't join the military "or risk their lives for this country because of the retirement system. They do so because they love this country and what it stands for."

Weinberger noted that military retirement benefits had been reduced over the past several years through cuts in cost-of-living adjustments, and said, "people who have come on active duty since 1980 have now had their potential retirement benefits cut by 12 percent."

Military Pensions Offer Half Pay After 20 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military pension system, which provides a minimum of half pay for hundreds of thousands of service personnel who retire as early as their late 30s, has been the target before of reformers inside and outside the Pentagon, but has resisted attempts to change it.

Budget Director David Stockman is the latest critic, castigating the system as "a scandal... an outrage."

He told Congress on Tuesday that "institutional forces in the military are more concerned about protecting their retirement benefits than they are about protecting the security of the American people."

The counterattack on Capitol Hill was quick, but even some of Stockman's strongest opponents conceded the pension system needs reform.

"I do think we need to take a look at the pension system," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., at a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing. Nunn, one of the most widely respected defense experts in Congress, then blasted Stockman's comments.

The military retirement system began after the Civil War, conceived as a method of luring Union veterans out of the service. Over the years, it was also considered to be a prime lure for recruits, offsetting the relatively low pay and postings to far-flung locations that were the lot of military men.

But with millions of men pouring into the service in World War II and the Korean war, the system expanded.

In 1960, there were only about 300,000 retirees. But now, that total has ballooned to 1.4 million people drawing military pensions.

A military person is eligible to draw half his base pay after 20 years in the service, rising to a maximum of three-quarters of base pay after 30 years service. There is no pension for less than 20 years.

But he can also draw the pension in addition to any salary he earns in a new career.

According to the Pentagon, a lieutenant colonel who retires after 20 years would be paid a pension of $1,706.70 a month and a sergeant first class would get $702 monthly.

The benefits are taxed but they also increase along with active duty pay.

The Pentagon currently is spending $16 billion for pensions, a figure that will rise to $17.8 billion next year and an estimated $44 billion by the year 2000. Currently, the total accounts for 5.7 percent of the defense budget.

The average retired officer is 42 years old and draws a pension of $17,500 a year while the average enlisted man gets $9,600 a year, according to the Retired Officers Association, a private group.

Since 1970, as the cost of pensions has risen steeply, there have been at least nine studies of the pension system, including five sponsored by the Pentagon.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and the new chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said last year that the pension system needed to be changed.

The Grace Commission, a panel of businessmen appointed by President Reagan, said a military pension "costs more than six times as much as the better private-sector plans" and recommended that benefits not be paid until a retiree was 62.

The latest Pentagon study said 20-year retirees should be limited to 35 percent of base pay instead of 50 percent.

Nunn, in noting the system needs change, said "the retirement system we have in the military today was one that was installed back in a period when pay was woefully inadequate, when we had a draft, when we basically had a totally different compensation system than we do today, and when first and foremost, we had an enormous number of people who were actually serving in combat and the military system was geared to a very high ratio of people out in the field who had short careers because they were in extremely dangerous positions."

"Today, we have a totally different world," he said. "We have a relatively smaller number of people in combat, a huge number of people doing technical jobs."

Senators Confirm Hodel, Herrington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of President Reagan's three choices to head departments that make environmental policy have won Senate confirmation, leaving only an expected perfunctory vote to approve a new Environmental Protection Agency chief.

By identical 93-1 votes, the Senate approved President Reagan's choices of Donald P. Hodel to be interior secretary and John S. Herrington, the White House personnel chief, to succeed him at the Energy Department.

The action Wednesday afternoon came several hours after the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee voted 16-0 to send the nomination of Lee M. Thomas as EPA administrator to the floor for a vote this week.

No opposition has surfaced against Thomas, who headed the agency's "Superfund" program to clean up toxic waste dumps for two years before becoming acting EPA administrator when William Ruckelshaus left last month.

Thomas told his confirmation hearing Wednesday that he has "a firm commitment to the goals of protecting human health and the environment." He offered no specifics on how he would manage the agency.

But Thomas won pledges from Republicans and Democrats on the panel for any help he may need in getting money out of the Office of Management and Budget and in obtaining proposed major regulations approved by OMB.

Convict Ran Betting Pool On Chance Of Execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Executed convict J.D. Autry was so confident he would escape the death chamber last year that he ran a betting pool that would have paid him $280 if he had lived, a fellow inmate said.

"If he got a stay, the whole pot would have been his," death row inmate Wayne East disclosed Wednesday in an interview.

Instead, Autry, who was spared just moments before a scheduled execution in late 1983, was put to death in March 1984. And $280 worth of merchandise from the Ellis Unit commissary went to convicted killer James DeMouchette, East said.

"He (Autry) initially drew it up, but he couldn't run it (at the end) because he was taken to the Walls Unit," East said. The Walls Unit, about 15 miles from Ellis, houses the state's death chamber.

The betting pool was based on the exact time of death for the executed inmate, as reported by a Texas Department of Corrections physician who examined the prisoner following the injection of deadly drugs, East said. The inmates would get word of the time through radio, television or newspapers.

"There are pools run all over this penitentiary," he said. "Even the officers get involved."

Prison spokesman Charles Brown said officials had no way of confirming the existence of the Autry betting pool.

"There's no way we could ever know," Brown said. He said any prison guard participating in such a pool could be fired.

East, facing death for the slaying of an Abilene woman during a burglary in 1981, said he did not participate in the pool.

"I couldn't see myself gambling on someone's life," he said. "But here, they bet on everything — game shows, soap operas, movies — anything to make a dime."

East said as far as he knew, no pools exist for Chester Lee Wicker, who had been slated to die next Monday. Wicker's attorneys obtained a stay Wednesday from a federal judge in Galveston.

"I don't think too many people knew about the date," he said.

Airlines Expanding Price War On Fares

CHICAGO (AP) — Continental Airlines is taking credit for allowing travelers to fly cheaply on short notice in certain markets after American and United airlines accepted its challenge to match Continental's unrestricted fares.

Continental threw down the gauntlet Wednesday, claiming in full-page ads in major newspapers that it "will force United and American out of business."

The nation's two largest airlines took up the challenge, announcing they would match Continental's fares by extending their own unrestricted coach fares indefinitely.

"It's the consumers who are the winners — it's they who will decide if American and United will go out of business," said Continental spokesman Mike Cinelli in a telephone interview from the company's Los Angeles headquarters.

Arabs Visit Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is hoping to stir wider Arab interest in a settlement with Israel during the back-to-back visits of Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia starting today.

Despite a temporary U.S. freeze on new Mideast arms sales, Abdel-Meguid and the Saudi king were both expected to make a pitch for new U.S. weapons. Egypt wants to buy Hawkeye radar planes used by the U.S. Navy while the Saudis would like to add to their stock of 62 F-15 jet fighters.

The budget President Reagan sent to Congress on Monday requested $1.3 billion for Egypt to use to buy U.S. arms. Oil-rich Saudi Arabia, on the other hand, uses its own funds — and generally runs into stiff opposition in Congress where the kingdom's interest in peace with Israel is questioned.

Abdel-Meguid, who took over as Egyptian foreign minister last summer, had talks scheduled today with members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs committees. He meets Friday with Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz and has a farewell breakfast with Shultz on Saturday.

Fahd arrives on Monday for the first Saudi royal visit to the United States since 1977. He will see President Reagan and senior members of the Cabinet, including Shultz.

Since Egypt signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979, it has had relatively little trouble in Congress in gaining approval of U.S. arms purchases.

Aussies Still Friendly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Australian Prime Minister Robert Hawke was prepared to give President Reagan assurances today that Australia remains committed to its U.S. security ties despite its refusal to help the United States monitor MX missile tests.

Also on the agenda for the meeting was a discussion of the state of the Australia-New Zealand-United States (ANZUS) alliance following New Zealand's decision not to allow a U.S. destroyer to make a port call.

The MX issue involves a Pentagon plan to fire the missile into the Tasman Sea east of Australia. On the eve of Hawke's meeting Wednesday with Secretary of State George Shultz, Australia disclosed it would not allow the United States to use Australian territory to monitor the test.

Shultz indicated he does not believe the Australian decision is a serious setback to U.S.-Australian relations. He said there are a variety of ways to monitor an MX test "and the monitoring effort need not involve the provision of Australian support."

Shultz added that the United States will conduct the test "without the use of Australian support arrangements."

Hawke said it would be "totally mistaken" to assume that the Australian decision "has any impact on the ANZUS relationship. It has none." He added that Australia's commitment to the alliance remains firm.

He acknowledged that Australia has "concerns" about playing a role in MX test monitoring.

Feuding Siblings Find Mother's Body After A Year

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — A brother and sister who feuded for years didn't know their 80-year-old mother had died until they asked each other where she was and went to her home. Her body was found in the living room, where it had been decomposing for a year.

"It sounds dumb, but that's what happened," said Ken Evenson, the son-in-law of Blanche Hansen, who was found Wednesday in her locked and dilapidated bungalow.

Neighbors said they thought Mrs. Hansen, a widow who cursed "like a lumberjack" and often shooed visiters away with a broom, had moved.

"Everybody thought she had gone away to live with her daughter or in a nursing home," said Arthur La Plante, the woman's neighbor for about 30 years. "There hasn't been any activity over there for a couple years, at least."

Evenson said the lack of contact between Mrs. Hansen and her children, Carol Evenson and Robert Hansen, both of whom live in the area, caused a mixup as to who was taking care of her.

The silence was broken after brother and sister got together Monday night to settle the estate of their mother's brother, 82-year-old Harold Hansen, who died Jan. 29 at his Duluth home.

Evenson said that when the children ended their feud, "He (Robert Hansen) asked, 'So, where are you keeping Mom?' And we said, 'We thought you were taking care of her.'"

Evenson said his wife and her brother had avoided one another since an argument years ago involving the family's lake cabin.

He also said Mrs. Hansen, who suffered emotional problems, had been a recluse for many years and often wouldn't let her children in when they did visit.

Evenson said his wife and her mother quit seeing each other three years ago at the mother's request, but Carol Evenson continued paying her mother's property tax and utility bills. Mrs. Hansen also had refused to reinstall the telephone she had removed 10 years ago after the death of her husband, Hans, the son-in-law said.

Hans Hansen retired from his job as a bus mechanic at least 20 years ago and continued to care for his wife, Evenson said. After her husband's death Mrs. Hansen became suspicious of everyone, including her children, and behaved oddly, Evenson said.

"Sometimes when you went there she wouldn't let you in," he said. "Half the time the refrigerator was unplugged." Her children arranged to have utility meters installed outside the house because Mrs. Hansen refused to allow meter readers inside.

Union Carbide Suits To Be Merged

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judicial panel has ordered the merger of 18 lawsuits filed against Union Carbide Corp. in connection with the gas leak that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, for presentation in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

The ruling Wednesday prompted attorney Melvin Belli, who is involved in several of the suits, to predict "all the cases will be settled by Christmas, speedily and with good amounts."

"I think we can get a fast and fair shake in New York," Belli said.

The ruling does not settle the question of whether the suits will be thrown out on the grounds they should be heard in courts in India. It is generally recognized that any settlements in India would be lower than those reached in the United States.

The Washington-based Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation said the federal court in Manhattan "will best serve the convenience of the parties and witnesses and promote the just and efficient conduct of the litigation."

The Manhattan court is the busiest among the 94 federal district courts and "is ... relatively more convenient for many parties, including plaintiffs and defendant Union Carbide and witnesses," the panel said.

The Dec. 3 leak of toxic methyl isocyanate gas at Union Carbide's pesticide plant in Bhopal, India, killed at least 2,000 people and affected 100,000 others.

Royal Review

LONDON (AP) — A British lawmaker says Buckingham Palace is reviewing its practice of appointing royal cigarette manufacturers following last month's lung operation on Princess Margaret.

Ernie Roberts, a member of Parliament from the Labor Party, said the Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Airlie, who supervises the naming of royal suppliers, wrote to him saying: "It is only for the supply of cigarettes to official guests at royal residences that the grants of warrants of appointments to tradesmen have been given."

"This policy is under review, and I am grateful to your bringing to our attention the concern of members of Parliament."

The queen, her husband Prince Philip, her eldest son Prince Charles and his wife Princess Diana all are non-smokers.

ECU Official Hopeful About Funding

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"I'm not nearly as pessimistic this time as I was when Reagan delivered his State of the Union right after he was first elected," Robert H. Franke, director of the East Carolina University Office of Sponsored Programs, said.

Franke, whose office channels all grants from outside entities to university programs, says he hears President Reagan's requests for cuts in funding of medical and other academic research. $5.2 billion in biomedical research alone, but he also has faith that the Congress won't let him have his way.

Last year East Carolina University received 790,000 federal dollars in research funds in various academic programs and $245,000 in teaching and training programs.

In addition, the medical school received $891,000 in research funds; $491,000 in non-research — teaching, training. In addition, the school received an $89,000 grant to make buildings more energy-efficient.

Millions in student financial aid was also received.

Last year, as this year, the federal Office of Management and Budget said it was cutting the number of biomedical grants nationwide back from 6,500 to 5,000. The Congress funded 6,500. OMB is saying the same thing this year, Franke said, and it's his prediction that Congress again will oppose and prevail.

Martin Board Freezes Funds Until July 1

WILLIAMSTON — A decision to freeze unbudgeted funds was approved by members of the Martin County Board of Commissioners at its February meeting. The move will stop the spending of any unbudgeted money until July 1, except in emergency situations to be approved by the board on an individual basis.

The freeze was recommended by Commissioner John House of Robersonville, who said, "I think it's important that everybody understand the situation we've got in the economy in Martin County."

"The (economic) picture looks terrible, what with the tobacco program and all the other things going on. We've got a hospital situation and we're really not sure what's going to happen."

Commissioners also discussed possible merger of the Martin and Bertie County hospitals. "We're trying to rekindle these fires and get both boards to discuss these matters," board Chairman Joe Griffin commented. "All small hospitals are in a strain. We have to make a concerted effort to maintain our own hospital and this may be the best way to do it."

In other matters considered by commissioners, they:

- Adopted a resolution to encourage four-laning U.S. 64 and U.S. 17, in response to the regional discussion on the roads held last week at Martin Community College.

- Approved a measure to rescind the local doe season law in Williams, Griffins and Jamesville townships, with the state to set the season.

- Cut the county employees' travel reimbursement from 25 cents to 20.5 cents per mile.

- Agreed to the extension of boundaries for Pitt County's Stokes Fire Department which will qualify some Martin County residents for lower fire insurance rates.

- Approved a request of the Martin County Historical Association for two filing cabinets to be used in the Francis Manning History Room.

Four Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $3,900 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Lotis Eugene Joyner of 11-7 Forbes St., and Christine Fisher Mewborn of Route 1, Kinston, collided about 5:11 p.m. on Forbes Street, 23 feet north of the 12th Street intersection.

Police, who charged Joyner with driving while his license was revoked, set damage at $400 to the Joyner car and $1,500 to the Mewborn vehicle.

Cars driven by Edward Arnold Reep of 201 Poplar Drive and Joseph Jolly of Ayden, collided about 3:18 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 300 feet south of the Millbrook Street intersection, causing $350 damage to the Reep car and $450 damage to the Jolly vehicle.

Investigators said an estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 5:13 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 2 mile west of the Evans Street intersection.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as Mary Anne Hulon of 91 Edgewood Trailer Park and Thomas Edwin Trolley of 100 Wilbon St., and police said Trolley was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Cars driven by Yvette Ellis of 602A W. 14th St., and Timmy Lee Blount of 2702 Shawnee Place collided about 5:08 p.m. at the intersection of Hooker Road and Cozart Street, causing $350 damage to the Ellis car and $250 damage to the Blount car.

Relics Found

BERLIN (AP) — The Egyptian Museum in East Berlin has discovered its "most sensational relics" of the last 35 years stored in an old trunk owned by an East German family, the official news agency ADN reported.

The pieces include 66 bronzes, small sculptures, amulets and tools dating from 653 to 525 B.C., and 16 urns and terra cotta vessels from the Classic and Hellenic periods, ADN said.

Researchers determined that the relics had been given by an impoverished German count to his servant in the 19th century in lieu of wages. It was not clear how the pieces got to Germany.

Fatal Clash

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Seventeen communist guerrillas and five army soldiers have been killed in a clash in the northern Philippines, the official Philippines News Agency said.

The agency quoted military officials in Cagayan province, where the fight took place this week, as saying six of the New People's Army guerrillas were mistakenly killed by their own comrades. Guerrillas, retreating in the face of government reinforcements, broke into two groups and afterwards mistook each other for soldiers, the agency said.

Taft Expects Influential Pitt Delegation

RALEIGH — "It looks like our delegation is going to have substantially more influence than might normally be expected for a county the size of Pitt," Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said Wednesday while commenting on the opening of the 1985 session of the General Assembly.

"Already the key issue appears to be how much of a tax reduction, if any, to give," Taft said, adding that a second key issue is "how much new money to spend on education."

And Taft said, "My special interest is in trying to stimulate new initiatives by the state to deal with agricultural interests and problems."

Taft said that, "for too long, agriculture has been the main industry in North Carolina. But state government has not shown much innovative interest in supporting the agriculture sector."

"That's where I hope to make my mark in this session," Taft emphasized.

Taft's committee appointments include: "vice chairman of Agriculture, which pleased me greatly; Appropriations, which pleases me because we have so many interests in Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties that are affected by state appropriations;" Children and Youth; Education; Human Resources; Judiciary 3; and State Government.

Full committee appointments for members of the House were announced Wednesday.

Committee appointments for Rep. Ed Warren include: vice chairman of Appropriations' Base Budget Committee, chairman of Appropriations' Base Budget Committee on Education; vice chairmans of Appropriation's Expansion Budget Committee; Appropriations' Expansion Budget Committee on Education, vice chairman of Agriculture, vice chairman of Banking and Thrift Institutions, Corrections, Higher Education, Natural and Economic Resources, Pension and Retirement, and Public Utilities.

Rep. Walter Jones Jr.'s committee appointments include: vice chairman of Children and Youth, vice chairman of Election Laws, vice chairman of Human Resources, Education, Finance, Highway Safety, Local Government 2, State Personnel and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors Nominating Committee.

department. A project to expand laboratory medicine facilities is still in the planning stage.

While the hospital itself is expanding, so are the numbers of people who visit the complex daily. Hall estimated that about 5,000 people come to the medical center each day. "If I was a businessman and had access to 5,000 (or more) people a day, I would certainly want to locate there. Not many places can get that much traffic," he said.

And the number of people in and out of the medical complex daily is expected to increase in coming years, Hall added. "I think as we see more and more health needs being handled on an outpatient basis, we'll see more and more people in the area."

As the number of people utilizing the hospital increases so will traffic volume; a situation Hall said has prompted concern on the part of PCMH officials. PCMH is concerned, he said, that rerouting 264 traffic through the medical area will cause more congestion. The portion of U.S. 264 prompting concern is now under construction from Wilson to Greenville and has a projected completion date of 1987. Completion of the project, city planning officials have noted, will increase the volume of traffic coming through the medical district by 6,000 cars a day.

To handle the ever-increasing traffic problem, Hall said PCMH is looking into internalization of medical center traffic by tying hospital parking lots together with private drives sometime in the near future. "It's got to be internal circulation," he said. "The streets are going to develop and be so busy we're not going to be able to put in multi-entrances."

Other concerns of hospital officials include storm water run off, Hall noted. The hospital area is now drained through a central pipe that empties into a retention pond, eventually going to the Tar River. Further construction of impervious surfaces like parking lots could add to the problem.

"The system is known now to back up and lift man holes in the parking lots," Hall said. "If we further develop surrounding land, run-off will be increased," he explained.

Although it would be "unrealistic" for PCMH to buy up all the immediate surrounding land as other hospitals have done, Hall said the hospital is now looking into the purchase of additional property. "The existing facility cannot go up, it is not designed to go up," Hall said. PCMH is built on the campus concept plan, in which the majority of structures are one story with all departments linked by a central corridor. The only multistoried buildings at PCMH are bed towers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly higher today, paced by a strong early advance by the market's blue chips.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off nearly 10 points over the two previous sessions, jumped 7.40 to 1,287.99 in today's opening half-hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among all New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Following the market's surge during January, the closely followed stocks in the Dow Jones industrial average had struggled to maintain their advance earlier this week.

The broader market continued to rally, lifting such indicators as Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index to record highs before they slipped Wednesday.

However, brokers had said the inability of the Dow Jones industrials to make further progress was not worrisome, since it mainly reflected temporary pressure from investors wanting to cash in on the stocks' strong gains last month.

On the NYSE's active list today, Motorola slipped 1/8 to 37. Pan American World Airways rose 1/8 to 4 1/2 and Schlumberger, which reported higher fourth-quarter earnings, climbed 1/8 to 40 1/2.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 4.64 to 1,280.59.

Advances led declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE, but the exchange's 65-stock composite index slipped 0.02 to 104.40.

Big Board volume totaled 140.98 million shares, against 143.90 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.98 to 228.70.

Paper Sold

PARIS (AP) — The founder of Le Matin, a Socialist daily newspaper in Paris, said he is selling a majority holding in the paper to a group of leftist investors headed by a discount store owner who once worked for Leon Trotsky.

Claude Perdriel said the paper, which he founded in March 1977, has suffered heavy losses in recent years and had been particularly badly hit by the unpopularity of the Socialist's government austerity plan in 1983.

Perdriel, who is publisher of the leftist weekly Le Nouvel Observateur, said he would leave the management of Le Matin because of the transfer of ownership. The newspaper "will not change and will remain independent and of the left," he said.

Officers Killed

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Marxist guerrillas blew up a police post in the Andes foothills and killed three officers at about the same time as other guerrilla units blacked out Lima during the visit of Pope John Paul II, the civil guard reported.

It said the attack occurred Monday night in the same area where the Maoist Shining Path group dynamited four power pylons, blacking out Lima for half an hour after the pope arrived during his 12-day Latin American tour.

The pope returned to Rome on Wednesday.

Baptists Reject Ban On Women

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — References to the ordination of women will continue in church school literature published by the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board despite objections by some fundamentalists.

On a 43-20 vote Wednesday, the board trustees approved guidelines treating the issue of the ordination of women "factually and fairly with neither point of view being ignored or disparaged."

The Rev. Robert Tenery, a trustee from Morganton, N.C., objected to the guidelines, calling them "a very dangerous position."

"The Southern Baptist Convention is our market for this literature and Southern Baptists are overwhelmingly against ordination of women," Tenery said.

Tenery said tolerance of women's ordination could lead to tolerance for homosexuality. "There's already a homosexual church in Charlotte. What are we going to do, ordain them? It's exactly the same thing," he said.

Gryphons Hold Off Rose, 46-43

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROCKY MOUNT — Ervin Griffin fired in six points from the free throw line in the final 3:37 of the game as the Rocky Mount Gryphons held off a Rose High rally for a 46-43 victory in Big East 4-A basketball Wednesday.

In the girls game, the Rampettes rallied from an eight-point halftime deficit to take a 47-36 victory over Rocky Mount. Kim Bridges fired in 12 points and Vicki Parrott added 10 to lead the Rampettes.

Griffin paced the Gryphons with 14 points. Lenny Langley led the Rampants with 14 points including four as Rose trimmed the margin to one point in the fourth quarter.

Rose held a 26-14 lead with 56 seconds left in the second quarter, but Carlton Wilson connected on a free throw and Dwight Smith added a field goal to trim the margin to 26-17 at intermission.

Melvin Jenkins posted a pair of buckets in the first minute of the third quarter to cut the gap to 26-21, but Griffin responded with a move inside for the Gryphons.

A 16-footer by Mike Mabry gave the Gryphons a 30-22 lead with 6:11 remaining in the third quarter, and the Rampants netted six unanswered points through the 3:44 mark to cut the spread to 30-28.

Terrance Dickens sank one of two from the line for Rocky Mount, and Tyrone Smith connected on a follow shot for Rose to cut the deficit to 31-30.

But the Rampants never managed to even the score or take the lead. Rose trailed 35-30 going into the final period, and the Rampants cut the lead to one point twice before bowing to the Gryphons' free throw accuracy.

"We've got to regroup; we missed a golden opportunity to move up to .500 in the conference," Rose Coach

Jim Brewington said after the Rampants slipped to 4-5 in the Big East and 9-8 overall. "In the first half, we just weren't ready to play. Then in the second half it was just a little too late — but we still had a chance at the end to pull it out."

Wilson went to the free throw line four times in the fourth quarter but sank just one attempt. Likewise, Jenkins missed an opportunity to complete a three-point play midway through the period.

"Carlton had a tough game to-night," Brewington admitted. "He missed those free throws, and a couple of times he had chances to take the ball inside and just pulled up short to take the shot."

"We just seem to play according to the competition; we just can't stand prosperity."

"We had a kid (center Martin Norville) leave his away jersey behind, so he had to sit out the game. That threw us out of our defense. Carlton had to play inside more, and Jenkins got in foul trouble."

The Rampants host Wilson Beddingfield Friday hoping to improve on their conference standing.

"I guarantee they'll be ready to play Friday night," Brewington said. "We'll work on that first thing when we get to practice."

RAMPETTES-LADY GRYPHONS

Bridges put the Rose girls ahead to stay on a field goal with two minutes left in the third quarter, and Kim Dupree added a baseline drive to give the Rampettes a 30-27 advantage going into the final period.

The Rampettes expanded the margin to 36-27 with 4:45 left as Chris Holec sank a pair of free throws. After a Rocky Mount free throw, Pam Smith drove in for a layup and Bridges stole the ball and scored to give the Rampettes a 40-28 margin.

Rose bounced back with two field goals, but Rose connected on five out of six free throw attempts and Holec added another fast break bucket to set the final margin.

Jewel Sharpe paced Rocky Mount with a game-high 19 points.

The Rampettes improved their Big East record to 4-5 while 8-10 overall.

Tech, Maryland Pulling Away

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Although a month remains until the end of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball regular season, Maryland and Georgia Tech are beginning to pull away and make the rest of the league chase them.

Jeff Adkins hit three of four free throws in the last 10 seconds as the 20th-ranked Terrapins downed Wake Forest 64-62 to raise its league mark to 5-2 and a .714 percentage.

The 10th-ranked Yellow Jackets got 22 points from Mark Price to take an 81-71 victory over fifth-ranked Duke. With John Salley and Yvon Joseph scoring 17 points apiece, Georgia Tech improved its conference record to 6-3, or .667, to pull into second place behind the Terrapins.

Cozell McQueen scored 17 points and pulled down 17 rebounds to lead

North Carolina State to a 69-57 victory over Clemson.

Tonight, last-place Virginia meets No. 15 North Carolina, now third in the league at 4-3, in Chapel Hill.

Maryland held a 12-point lead with 2:16 left, but Wake Forest went on a 12-4 spree and, on Delaney Rudd's basket with 24 seconds left, pulled to within 61-60.

Adkins was fouled in the backcourt and hit two free throws with 10 seconds left. Rudd scored on a layup five seconds later, but Adkins was fouled again and sank one of two free shots. Lee Garber attempted a shot from midcourt, but the bid bounced off the rim.

"I thought we did a great job until the last minute," Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said. "At the end of the game they pressed us and we missed free throws."

Len Bias led Maryland, with 26 points, while Adrian Branch scored 14 points. Adkins had 10 as the Terps climbed to 19-6 and Driesell captured his 499th career victory.

Rudd scored a career-high 26 points while Kenny Green added 16 as Wake Forest fell to 13-7 and 4-4 and sixth place in the ACC. Coach Carl Tacy was impressed with Bias.

"I don't think you can stop Bias," Tacy said. "You just have to slow him down."

Within the first three minutes, Georgia Tech ran off eight unanswered points. Duke never got closer than five points after that and trailed by 41-28 at halftime. Price said a fast start was crucial as his team climbed to 17-4.

"We didn't want to have to struggle all the way back like we did earlier (at home) against Clemson and Virginia," said Price.

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said the fast start was too much for his Blue Devils, 16-4 and 5-4, to overcome. Duke and N.C. State are tied for fourth in the league.

"Their inside strength was the dominant factor," Krzyzewski said. "And I believe if you look at the shooting percentages their ability to score inside on us was really the telling tale in the ballgame."

Georgia Tech shot 62.7 percent while Duke managed 42 percent.

A fast start enabled the Wolfpack to get away from the high-speed attack of the Tigers. McQueen scored the first five points, while four more points by Nate McMillan gave N.C. State an 11-4 edge at the

Chambers Is New Grid Aide

East Carolina head football coach Art Baker announced today the hiring of Wally Chambers as assistant football coach, filling the last position on his staff.

Chambers will coach the defensive line and comes to East Carolina from the University of Northern Iowa, where he was defensive line coach during the 1983 and 1984 seasons. While at Northern Iowa, Chambers helped the Panthers to a Mid-Continent Conference championship in 1984 while his defense set a conference record for quarterback sacks in a season with 54 and was second in the nation against the run in Division I-AA.

"We are delighted to have someone of Wally Chambers' experience joining our staff," Baker said. "I feel he is a person with great credentials. His defensive front had 54 sacks last year which is a very impressive statistic. We feel very fortunate to have him."

Chambers enjoyed a seven-year professional football career with the NFL's Chicago Bears and Tampa Bay Buccaneers. He was an all-Pro selection from 1973-76, captured NFC Defensive Most Valuable Player honors in 1975 and 1976 and was voted Most Valuable Lineman those same years.

Chambers played with Chicago which made him a first round draft choice out of Eastern Kentucky in 1973, from 1973-77 and ended his pro career with Tampa Bay from 1978-79.

This brings to four the number of assistants Baker has hired since being named head coach in December. The other three are Mike O'Cain, assistant head coach and quarterback coach; Don Powers, defensive secondary coach; and Jeff Farrington, who will also work with the defensive secondary.

Hogs Keep SMU Streak Going

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Southern Methodist and DePaul both had long streaks going. The fourth-ranked Mustangs kept theirs alive with a loss to Arkansas, and the 18th-ranked Blue Demons ended theirs with a loss to Dayton.

Southern Methodist went into Wednesday night's Southwest Conference game at Fayetteville, Ark., not having won at Barnhill Arena since 1976. The Razorbacks handed SMU a 69-66 loss, only the Mustangs' third of the season, behind the clutch free-throw shooting of Kenny Hutchinson.

"While I was on the line, Carl Wright (of SMU) spit at me," Hutchinson said. "The refs didn't see it, but I didn't let it bother me. I just shot the ball." And thus continued SMU's troubles at Arkansas.

DePaul, meanwhile, had a 36-game home-court winning streak going until Dayton came into the Horizon and beat the Demons for the second time this season, 67-63, behind the 22 points of Sedric Toney, who also helped from the free-throw line in the final minute.

"The one player I told them not to foul seemed to have the ball all through the end of the game," DePaul Coach Joey Meyer lamented of Toney.

Two other ranked teams also were beaten Wednesday night. Georgia Tech, ranked 10th, defeated Atlantic Coast Conference rival, No. 5 Duke, 81-71, and Illinois State beat No. 17 Tulsa 73-72 in overtime in the Missouri Valley Conference.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 2 Georgetown 71, Florida Southern 39; No. 7 Oklahoma 83, Nebraska 74; No. 12 Iowa 70, Minnesota 65; No. 13 Kansas 84, Oklahoma State 72, and No. 20 Maryland 64, Wake Forest 72.

Another long streak approached NCAA-record proportions in a Division III game as Rutgers-Newark lost for the 42nd consecutive time, 103-71 to Stockton State, N.J. The all-time NCAA record for consecutive losses is 46 by Olivet, Mich., and Southwest State, Minn.

Top Ten

Hutchinson's 20 free throws with 16 seconds left gave Arkansas a 67-64 lead and enough padding to beat SMU. Center Jon Koncak came back with a basket on an offensive rebound with seven seconds left, but Arkansas' center, Joe Kleine, polished off the victory with another two free throws with only two seconds to play.

Koncak, a 7-footer, led all scorers with 22 points for SMU, which dropped to 8-2 in the SWC and 18-3 overall. Byron Irvin had 18 for Arkansas, which rebounded from a 56-39 loss at Georgetown on Sunday to go 16-8 and 7-3 in the conference.

"I've been dreaming for a day like this," Irvin said. "To play this well against one of the best teams in the nation is special. I guess you could say that about our whole team."

Georgia Tech got 22 points from Mark Price and 17 each from John Salley and Yvon Joseph to end a three-game winning streak by Duke, now 16-4 and 5-4 in the conference. Georgia Tech is 17-4 and 6-3 in the ACC. Georgia Tech built an 8-0 lead to start, and the Blue Devils could get closer than five the rest of the way. Johnny Dawkins had 21 points for Duke.

Oklahoma set a record for consecutive regular-season Big Eight Conference victories with its 20th when the Sooners beat Nebraska. All-American Wayman Tisdale had 25 points in the victory as the Sooners boosted their record to 18-4 and 7-0 in the conference. Dave Hoppen scored a game-high 32 for Nebraska.

Second Ten

Iowa took over sole possession of the Big Ten Conference lead by beating Minnesota. The Hawkeyes built a 12-point lead in the second half en route to their eighth victory in 10 Big Ten games. Greg Stokes scored 18 points and Jeff Moe hit two free throws down the stretch to give Iowa, 19-4 overall, its final margin of victory.

Freshman forward Danny Manning had 19 points, and Calvin Thompson and Ron Kellogg had 16 apiece as Kansas cruised past Oklahoma State in the Big Eight, raising its record to 19-4 and 7-1 in the league. Kansas scored the first six points of the game and never trailed.

Michael McKenny's layup with seven seconds left in overtime gave Illinois State its one-point victory over Tulsa. Byron Boudreaux had a final chance to put Tulsa ahead, but his last-second shot hit the rim and bounced away. Lou Stefanovic had 18 points for Illinois State, 16-4 and 6-3 in the MVC. Steve Harris had 26 for Tulsa, 17-4 and 8-2 in the conference.

Toney's 22-point total for Dayton included eight free throws in the final 1:04 as Dayton upset DePaul. The Flyers beat DePaul 12 days ago, 65-64, on a basket at the buzzer by Dave Colbert. Marty Embry had 17 points for DePaul, which fell to 14-6. Dayton went into a delay game with four minutes left and a 58-57 lead. The Flyers controlled the ball for three minutes until DePaul was forced to foul, and that's when Toney took over from the line.

"I knew coming in we had a better chance at a sweep than they did," Dayton Coach Don Donaher said. "That might have put the pressure on them. I don't know much about psychology, but then I don't know much about coaching either."

Jeff Adkins, a reserve guard, hit three of four free-throw attempts in the final 10 seconds as Maryland held on to beat Wake Forest. Maryland led by as many as 12 points with 2:16 left, but Wake Forest outscored the Terrapins 12-4 in the final minute. The Demon Deacons held the deficit to 61-60 before Adkins went to the line. Maryland now is 19-6 and 5-2 to lead the ACC.

Craven Rolls By Pitt, 90-62

NEW BERN — Craven Community College put five players in double figures, led by Linwood Harris with 22, and rolled up a 90-62 basketball victory over Pitt Community College last night.

The Paladins, playing patiently, stuck with Craven most of the way, but lost their composure in the final 12 minutes of play and saw their host pull away from them.

The victory left Craven with a 5-0 record in the league and clinched the Eastern Carolina Community College Athletic Conference championship for them. Pitt falls to 2-3 in the league, 17-12 overall, in second place. Pitt can clinch second place with a victory over Cape Fear on Friday.

Pitt fell behind early as Craven shot out to a 20-4 lead after 6:40 of play. "But we hit the boards well and stayed patient and cut their lead back to five at 38-33 with 1:30 left," Coach Charles Coburn said. Craven, however, scored the final four points of the half to take a 42-33 lead into the dressing rooms.

In the second half, Pitt remained patient and finally tied it at 47-47, but then got impatient and began to take some bad shots. "We also didn't play good defense after that," Coburn said. "I was completely disgusted with our play the final 12 minutes."

Craven took advantage of the play to outscore Pitt, 43-15, to sew up the victory and the title.

Donald Johnson added 18 to the Craven scoring column, while Shelton Johnson had 12 and Ed Lowmes and Clinton Monford each had ten.

Pitt was led by David Joyner with 15, while Keith Clark had 13 and Andrew Edwards and Kevin Tyree each had 12.

VMI Stuns Tribe, 50-48

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Gay Elmore dropped in two free throws with one second remaining to lift Virginia Military's Keydets to a 50-48 college basketball victory over William & Mary's Indians Wednesday night.

Elmore was fouled by Herb Harris when he went up for a shot after grabbing the rebound of Darren Sawyer's misfire from 20 feet.

VMI improved its record to 12-7 while William & Mary dropped to 10-8.

The Keydets took their first lead, 44-43, with 3:10 remaining on Sawyer's two free throws.

But Kevin Richardson's 3-point play with 47 seconds left tied it at 48 and set the stage for Elmore's winning free throws, which came after William & Mary Coach Barry Parkhill called two timeouts in an attempt to shake Elmore before he went to the line.

Elmore finished with a game-high 20 points while Sawyer contributed 14 and Cedric Wins 10.

Keith Cielicki paced the Indians with 16 points and Richardson added 14.

"I couldn't have wanted anyone else at the foul line in that situation than Gay," said VMI Coach Marty Fletcher. "He has made so many big ones for us."

"We have been in a lot of close games this year and the more you are in them the better off you are," said Fletcher. "Our guys are confident down the stretch."

"I was disappointed with our defensive effort," said Parkhill. "We weren't playing hard enough, especially in the second half."

Chris Had Problems

RALEIGH (AP) — A long-term struggle with a learning disability and a fondness for mischief plagued North Carolina State freshman basketball center Chris Washburn during his high school years, according to court records.

"Although a bright child, Chris experienced some academic problems and was found to have a learning disability in the language area," said a report prepared by the community penalties program of Re-Entry Inc., a private, non-profit organization that oversees program alternatives to prison sentences.

The report released Monday didn't elaborate about the learning disability.

Smith, Duggins Continue To Hold Scoring Leads

As the 1984-85 high school basketball season begins to wind down — there's just a little over a week left of regular season play — the scoring leaders who have headed the pack all year continue at the top.

Marvin Smith of Ayden-Grifton has improved his lead in the boys' division, while Gloria Duggins has also made headway in the girls' race.

Smith is currently scoring at a 20.4 pace, two points a game better than second place Earl Randolph of Washington. Randolph is now in at 18.4.

Trinity's Jimmy Powers moves up from fourth to third at 16.4, while Dan Andrews of Greenville Christian falls from third to fourth at 16.4. Rounding out the top five are Tony Doughty of Williamston and Carlton Wilson of Rose, tied at 15.9.

Duggins of Roanoke continues to lead the girls with a 21.4 average, over three points better than second place Cyndi Hicks of Greene Central and Lisa Lang of Farmville Central. Hicks and Lang are currently averaging 18.2 points a game.

Fourth place is held by Renee Deans of Trinity at 17.8, while Regina Cox of North Pitt is fifth at 17.5.

Washington again is the leader in team scoring among the boys with a 65.8 average, while Williamston has moved into second at 61.3.

North Pitt leads the boys defense with a 45.8 average, while Bear Grass is second at 48.9.

The Panthers are also the team with the largest winning margin per game. They are defeating their opponents by an average of 10.7 points a game. Washington is second at 8.9.

Greene Central heads two girls' categories, offense and winning margin. The Lady Rams are averaging 60.7 points a game and winning by an average of 20.4 points a game. Chocowinity is the top defender allowing only 35.9 points a game.

Pirate Tankers Down Richmond

East Carolina's men's and women's swimming teams claimed victories over the University of Richmond last night in a meet held in Minges Natatorium.

The men swam to a 61-46 victory that raised their record to 7-4 on the season, while the women took a 62-51 win, boosted their record to 5-5 on the year.

Two events saw ECU women meet national qualifying times in Division II standards. Lori Livingston's time of 2:14.53 qualified for the national in the 200 backstroke, while the team of Chris Holman, Scotia Miller, Jenni Pierson and Nancy James swam home in 1:41.52 in the 200 freestyle relay to meet standards in that event.

The men's 200 medley relay team of Kevin Hidalgo, Chris Pittelli, Keith Kaut and Lee Hicks set a new varsity record with a time of 1:38.50.

East Carolina's teams both return to action on Friday, Feb. 15, at American.

Block Pulls Tobacco From '85 Farm Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco-state congressmen won a victory when U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block bowed to pressure from them and removed tobacco from the Reagan administration's proposed farm bill.

The congressmen had insisted that tobacco not be included in the proposal, which calls for phasing out all government price supports for farm commodities. Last week Block proposed that the federal tobacco program and its system of allotments and acreage quotas be eliminated.

It was unclear whether Block's action means that he will try to push his tobacco proposal in separate legislation. U.S. Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said in a prepared statement Wednesday that it was his "clear understanding" Block would do just that.

However, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., vowed to keep any anti-tobacco measure from Block bottled up in his Senate Agriculture Committee.

"They are not going to be able to do anything about tobacco," Helms said in an interview.

Helms said through his administrative assistant, Clint Fuller, Wednesday that Block had finally responded to several "prayer sessions" he had with Helms in the past week. Helms said he simply told Block it was "up to the administration as to what kind of a senator I'll be this year."

"I can be a senator who spends all of my time fighting for tobacco, or I can be a senator concerned about other things important to the administration, like the budget," Fuller quoted Helms as saying.

Fuller said Block met with Helms three times before deciding to pull tobacco from the administration's farm bill.

He said he seriously doubted that the administration would propose another bill aimed at eliminating the program.

"Whom would they get to introduce it," he asked. "Certainly not Senator Helms."

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., and other tobacco-state lawmakers said they remained wary of Block's threat to dismantle the leaf program.

Rose said the decision not to include tobacco in the administration proposal was "good news," but "I do not believe the allotment system is no longer threatened."

Even before he learned of Block's action, Rose predicted that deleting tobacco from the farm bill would not sit well with other farm state congressmen faced with the proposed phaseout of wheat, corn, milk and other commodities.

"We could get trapped if the administration decides to take tobacco out and give it special treatment just because it is so important to Senator Helms. They are not going to stand for this. Either the administration is going to treat everybody the same or it must back off from all" commodities, Rose said.

"It's like in a family," Rose said. You can't show favoritism to just one child."

Rep. Charlie Whitley, D-N.C., also was skeptical, saying he did not "attach much significance" to the Block decision because anti-tobacco amendments still might be attached to the farm bill.

South Carolina Growers Debate Future Of Flue-Cured Industry

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina tobacco growers prepare for another season in the fields under the specter of huge tobacco surpluses, sluggish demand and the possibility of a complete phase-out of price supports.

"There's a myriad of problems we're dealing with here and problems that have to be solved," said Harry Bell of the South Carolina Farm Bureau. He spoke Wednesday during a meeting that attracted an overflow crowd of some 200 tobacco growers, warehouse operators and industry officials.

Good news was scarce at the annual meeting of the South Carolina District of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. — the grower-owned agency that administers the federal price support program for flue-cured tobacco in five Southeastern states.

Fred G. Bond, the corporation's general manager, called the session "the most crucial and critical we have ever held," and said tobacco surpluses are the biggest problem facing the industry.

At the end of last year, stabilization warehouses held 812 million pounds of tobacco, and 541 million pounds were bought under the government's "No Net Cost" program that took effect three years ago.

Under that program, the cooperative buys flue-cured tobacco when the leaf doesn't bring the minimum price support. The government loans money to the cooperative to buy tobacco from farmers, but the loans must be repaid with interest.

The program does not cost the government anything, but farmers are assessed a few cents for every pound of tobacco sold at auction to cover the support.

Since so much tobacco is ending up in stabilization, assessment costs are increasing to finance the interest. Farmers who paid only a 7-cent assessment in 1984, may be asked to pay as much as 25 cents this year.

"We've had three years of No Net Cost. I don't think we can stand another three years," Bond said. The cooperative is negotiating with tobacco companies to buy out the stabilization inventory. In return, the assessment would be reduced and the price support cut to $1.45 a pound. Last year's average support was $1.70.

Growers agreed they must grow better-quality tobacco to keep low quality leaf out of stabilization.

"We've got to carry some of these problems on our own shoulders," said one farmer. "The problem starts in the tobacco field."

Bond said some imported tobacco from southern Africa sells for only 68 cents a pound on the auction floor.

"There's no way you can compete dollar-to-dollar and head-to-head," he said. "But if we can get into a more competitive range and keep our quality up, they'll (buyers) will pay a premium."

Charlie King of Tobacco Associates, a Washington-based organization that promotes U.S. tobacco overseas, said while U.S. exports declined by 70 million pounds during the past five years, imports were up 15 million. And he said world cigarette consumption has leveled off.

Excise taxes also are weakening the demand for what Reggie Lester called "America's most over-taxed commodity."

Lester, of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee in Raleigh, N.C., said domestic cigarette consumption dropped 5 percent when the federal excise tax doubled to 16 cents in 1982. The tax is to be rolled back to 8 cents this year, but Lester there's already a move afoot to increase the tax again.

He warned tobacco will be a "convenient target" for lawmakers looking to raise taxes to ease the deficit. He noted that in 1983, the government collected $9.5 billion in tobacco taxes, while only $2.3 billion went to the growers themselves.

Some people attending the meeting were concerned about Agriculture Secretary John Block's proposal to phase out tobacco price supports.

Bond said such a step would have a "very devastating effect," and added that removing price supports is "calling for bankruptcy" for growers.

Payments Total $537 Million Dairy Farmers Are Paid To Reduce Milk Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dairy farmers who signed up in the government's "diversion" program to reduce milk production have collected about $537 million so far, according to a new tabulation by the Agriculture Department.

The payments are for cutting back on milk production during the first nine months of the 15-month program, which began on Jan. 1, 1984 and will continue through March.

A number of farm groups have urged the program be continued, and legislation has been introduced in Congress to extend it. The administration, however, has been cool to the idea and wants the entire federal dairy program overhauled and scaled back.

Officials said Wednesday the payments so far include $140.5 million paid to 27,891 dairy farmers for the first quarter of 1984, $194.5 million to 29,974 in the second, and $201.7 million to 31,277 in the third.

In all, the payments — measured by government checks actually paid, cashed and processed through December — represent about 90 percent of the total payments USDA expects to make for milk reductions in the first nine months of the program.

Wisconsin, the largest dairy state, led the payment list in the first nine months with $64.4 million paid to 6,161 producers. California got $52 million paid to 625 producers, while Minnesota collected $43.9 million paid to 4,839.

The program was authorized by Congress in 1983 to help reduce the U.S. dairy surplus. Farmers who signed contracts get payments for cutting back milk production 5 percent to 30 percent. The payments are at the rate of $10 for every 100 pounds of milk they keep off the market.

As part of the congressional action, federal milk price supports were reduced, with further cuts authorized this year if production is not brought into line.

The program also assesses dairy farmers 50 cents per 100 pounds of milk marketed to pay for the diversion program. The fees are collected from all farmers who sell milk, while the payments go only to those enrolled in the program.

Officials said the milk marketing deductions, which began a month before the 15-month diversion plan went into effect, totaled about $650 million through December.

"At this time, deductions exceed payments, but ... over the life of the program, deductions and payments will be nearly equal," the report said. "While the $10 per hundredweight diversion payments are funded almost entirely from the 50-cent deductions from the industry, the cost of the dairy price support program to the government is still averaging near $1.5 billion per year."

The department's Commodity Credit Corp. supports the farm price of milk by buying and storing surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk.

Purchases by CCC dropped are expected to drop sharply to about 7.3 billion pounds of milk equivalent in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1 from 10.4 billion pounds in 1983-84 and 16.6 billion pounds in 1982-83. But the report said the decline "has resulted more from increased commercial use (of milk) and increased farm use than from a drop in production."

Oscar Nominations Pinpoint Art, Not Ticket Sales

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The Oscar nominations are in and Sir David Lean says the selection of his film, "A Passage to India," for 11 nominations signals a triumph of artistic integrity over financial concerns.

"What's so wonderful about it is that we had the greatest difficulty in making the film," he said from London. "Nobody wanted to back it. It's a terrific triumph over the money people that we've come through on the artistic side."

Another sign that Academy voters ignored box office receipts was the short shrift they gave the year's biggest hit, "Beverly Hills Cop," with only one nomination for its screenplay.

Lean, a 76-year-old past Oscar winner who returned to filmmaking after a 14-year absence, was nominated as director, writer and editor of "A Passage to India," the sweeping saga which dramatized E.M. Forster's novel of Indian-British tensions in the 1920s.

The only other movie to garner as many nominations Wednesday was "Amadeus," the majestic adaptation of Peter Shaffer's play about the consuming jealousy of a minor composer over the genius of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Three other powerful dramas were among the five nominees for best picture of 1984: "The Killing Fields," which took seven nominations in all; "Places in the Heart," with seven and "A Soldier's Story," with three.

The most excited nominee was Haing S. Ngor, a Cambodian doctor who catapulted from anonymity to stardom as the reporter's assistant in "The Killing Fields." He was nominated for best supporting actor.

"I just got the news!" exclaimed Ngor at the Chinatown Service Center where he counsels other refugees. "I laughing all the time."

"I like acting," said Ngor, a refugee whose own escape from Cambodia was as harrowing as the one in the film. "It is happy life in movies."

The category of best supporting actor presents Academy voters with a tough choice. Besides Ngor, there are the late Ralph Richardson in his final role as Tarzan's aging grandfather in "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes," Adolph Caesar, the doomed sergeant of "A Soldier's Story," John Malkovich, the blind boarder in "Places in the Heart," and Noriyuki "Pat" Morita, the guru of "The Karate Kid."

In the best actor category, there were honors for both stars of "Amadeus," Tom Hulce and F. Murray Abraham; also Jeff Bridges of "Starman," Albert Finney of "Under the Volcano" and Sam Waterston of "The Killing Fields."

Bridges' nomination for his portrayal of a gentle space creature surprised everyone but the actor himself.

"I'm as happy as I could be. I was sort of hoping for it," he said. It was Bridges' third nomination and his first for best actor.

Judy Davis, the British visitor in "A Passage to India," was the only one of five best actress nominees who doesn't already own an Oscar. Three nominees cited for their gritty roles as struggling farm women were Sally Field, "Places in the Heart," Jessica Lange, "Country," and Sissy Spacek, "The River." Vanessa Redgrave was nominated for "The Bostonians."

"Yahoo!" yelled Sally Field when her publicist relayed the news to her by mobile phone at a film location in Arizona.

"Isn't that nice," said Geraldine Page when she heard of her seventh nomination, this time for supporting actress in "The Pope of Greenwich Village." She has yet to win the Oscar. "I like being nominated," she said. "It means somebody responded to the character."

Others in the race: Peggy Ashcroft, "A Passage to India," Glenn Close, "The Natural," Lindsay Crouse, "Places in the Heart" and Christine Lahti, "Swing Shift."

Woody Allen was the dark horse nominee for his direction of "Broadway Danny Rose." The other director nominees were Robert Benton, "Places in the Heart," Milos Forman, "Amadeus," Roland Joffe, "The Killing Fields," and Lean, "A Passage to India."

The list of nominees for original song was led by Stevie Wonder's current hit, "I Just Called to Say I Love You," from "The Woman in Red." Also nominated were title tunes from "Against All Odds" ("Take a Look at Me Now"), "Ghostbusters" and "Footloose," and "Let's Hear It for the Boy" from "Footloose."

The Oscar ceremonies at the Los Angeles Music Center will be telecast March 25 by ABC. Jack Lemmon will be the master of ceremonies.

A Reflector Review

'The Diviners' Is Play That Gives Something Different

Theater patrons in the area who have been wanting to see something different should see Jim Leonard Jr.'s play, "The Diviners," directed by Don Biehn. The production has three more performances, tonight, Friday and Saturday at McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus. Curtain time, 8:15 p.m.

Set in an un-named village in Indiana during the Great Depression, "The Diviners" brings to life a strong sense of community sharing, a close but misguided family love, and unfulfilled male and church house longings on the part of seemingly menless women.

Essentially, "The Diviners" is the story of an unusual stage character, 17-year old Buddy Layman, his mind permanently crippled since young boyhood by the terror of near drowning in which his mother died rescuing him.

Bradley C. Beasley, a handsome young actor despite the dirt that covers his body in the play, gives an outstanding performance of what must be a very difficult role to sustain, a physically healthy young man whose mind is forever locked into young childhood. He is the eternal innocent, trusting, loving. His brush with watery death has left him with an obsessed fear of water. This fear has resulted in itchy skin and ringworms — a condition that is over-emphasized to the point of tediousness at times. Paradoxically, Buddy has the gift of divining the presence of water and of prophesying the coming of rain. This gift makes him looked upon as a blessing by the community people.

The stranger who enters the life of the tight-knit community, C.C. Showers, is a well-defined, interesting character, portrayed with a fine understanding of the role by Robert Ruffin. A minister, not by choice but by family tradition, at 30 he has mustered the courage to break away, to seek a new life. Accepting mechanic work from Buddy's father, Showers forms a close, protective friendship with the strange boy, a friendship that ironically culminates in tragedy.

Handsome, more articulate than the people he makes his new home with, Showers soon becomes the object of admiration and hope among the menless women — some dream of matrimony, others of having a church house with a preacher once more after 10 churchless years.

It is something of a surprise (a pleasant one) that Claude B. 'Kip' West, a playwright and retired local teacher, has opted to perform instead of write in his stage appearance as Ferris Layman, Buddy's father. His is a solid, effective characterization of a widower whose philosophy is "to let children grow naturally like a weed... did you ever see an unhealthy weed?" His one great passion in life is hatred of Herbert Hoover.

Veteran performer Hazel Stapleton as the (obvious) widow who tenaciously clings to the dream of a church, and Tracy Clark as the cafe owner who steadfastly requires her patrons to say a blessing or not eat, both give stellar performances.

Other members of the cast are Angela Maynor as Buddy's sister Jennie Mae Layman, Tammy Visconti as Darlene Henshaw, Rick Marshall and Sherrie Dee Brewer as Basil and Luella Bennett, (the only visible couple in the play), and Billy Ray Tyson and Hal Wells as the two bachelors, Melvin Wilder and Dewey Maples.

Spared

MARGATE, England (AP) — A man who jumped bail to join the French Foreign Legion was spared from going to prison after magistrates heard how he won three medals in Chad in seven months.

Mark Ellison, 22, admitted stealing the key to an earth digger and driving the machine on a building site, causing $224 worth of damage.

Chad, a former French colony, is torn by a civil war, with one side backed by France and the other by Libya.

The court fined Ellison $168 and ordered him to pay $268 in compensation and $22 for legal costs.

New Bills Call For Tax Relief For Poor, On Food

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Better day care and a lighter tax burden were in the forefront of a flurry of mid-week bills in the General Assembly.

"If we are able to afford tax relief, things we need to look at is the income tax," said Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, who filed a bill Wednesday to cut taxes for people in the two lowest income brackets. "The income tax has increased from 26.5 percent of the state budget to 46.8 percent in the past 20 years. It's an area off tax reduction that (House Speaker Liston Ramsey) has some interest in."

Also filed Wednesday was a bill allowing up to $152 in tax credits for sales taxes paid on food and eight bills revamping day care in North Carolina.

Hunt's bill calls for the income tax on people with less than $2,000 of taxable income to fall from 3 percent to 2 percent. People making between $2,001 and $4,000 would pay 3.5 percent instead of 4 percent.

A report by the Fiscal Research Division said the bill would save a taxpayer with a gross income of $2,981 about $12, or 33 percent. Someone with a gross income of $5,023 would save $23.48, or 26.7 percent. The report says 3.25 million taxpayers would have reduced taxes.

If enacted, the measure, to take effect Jan. 1, 1986, would cost North Carolina $36.7 million in 1985-86 and $88.2 million in 1986-87, the report says.

The food-tax bill, filed by Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, would allow an income tax credit up to $152 a year for a family of eight or more earning $18,000 to $18,999 a year. A single person earning less than $1,000 a year would get a tax credit of $9.

Mavretic said the income tax credit could cost up to $20 million a year.

The day-care bills, many recommended by a legislative study committee, could mark the first major revision of day-care law since the early 1970s, said Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, co-chairman of the study panel.

"This is really just the tip of the iceberg, because this is the first stab in over 10 years at trying to get something done," she said.

The bills propose that:

— Day-care workers be at least 18 or a high school graduate, except for people 16 or older who are supervised by a registered worker.

— Day-care centers be registered every two years and abide by health, sanitation and safety rules adopted by the Division of Child Day Care. Several agencies now dealing with day care would be consolidated into one division, which would be under the Department of Human Resources.

— Regular, unannounced inspections be made, and that funds for the purpose be provided.

— A child-abuse licensing unit be created in the division.

— Day-care centers with 30 or more children have child-staff ratio limits ranging from six children per staffer for one-year-olds or younger to 25 per staffer for children 5 and older.

— Social Services workers be required to report any suspected cases of child abuse, anonymously if desired.

Some of the proposals have been attacked by day-care center operators, who say burdensome regulations could boost costs that would put some centers out of business and price others out of the range of many parents.

In other legislative action:

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, who chairs the Senate Committee on Children and Youth, filed a bill to make permanent the state's laws on child restraints in vehicles.

Showdown Postponed

RALEIGH (AP) — Another showdown between legislative Democrats and Republicans over Gov. Jim Martin's budget proposals has been delayed, but the GOP leadership says it's only a matter of time.

A resolution urging Martin to submit his 1985-87 budget ahead of schedule went before the House on Wednesday. But Speaker Liston Ramsey sent it to the Rules Committee, where it won't be debated until next week.

"The battle lines are drawn, and there's not much we can do," said House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie. "But I think the fight must go on, as much for principle as anything else."

Ramsey said the House didn't suspend its rules and bring the resolution to the floor immediately as the Senate did Tuesday because there was "no urgency."

"I don't see what all the fuss is about," added Ramsey.

On Tuesday, the Senate's Democratic majority ignored Republicans' protests and adopted the resolution asking Martin to delay his State of the State address, scheduled for Feb. 19, until Feb. 28. The measure asked that Martin accompany the speech with his budget proposals.

Republicans said it was unprecedented for the Legislature to tell the governor when to submit his budget.

The law, enacted in 1981, is scheduled to expire June 30. It requires that parents of children under age 2 secure them in restraining seats.

Hipps' bill would make the law apply to everyone transporting a child, not just parents. It also would require that children under age 3 be restrained, and would raise the fine for violations from $10 to $50.

"I've been hearing highway patrolmen saying it's been a great program and should be continued, but I don't know of any formal studies that have been done on it," said Hipps.

The Senate voted 42-5 to approve and send to the House a bill loosening the restrictions on who may be appointed to the Advisory Budget Commission.

The panel is comprised of five members appointed by the governor, five by the lieutenant governor and five by the speaker of the House, but the law specifies that members must include the chairmen of the Finance and Appropriations committees.

Sen. Tony Rand proposed deleting that requirement and the bill was passed over the objections of Republicans, who said they saw no reason to change a procedure dating back to 1925.

House and Senate committees were briefed by legislative analysts on the fiscal 1985-87 budget proposed by former Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission.

"We've got more new people up here (41) than I've ever seen," said Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham. "This allows us to get all the members together and explain the procedure, gives them a better perspective."

Royall said he was concerned that revenue collections might lag behind the 12.5 percent growth rate projected earlier, which could necessitate up to $75 million in spending cuts.

A resolution asking Gov. Jim Martin to submit his budget and tax proposals by Feb. 28, which angered Republicans as it was rushed through the Senate on Tuesday, was sent to the House Rules Committee by Speaker Liston Ramsey.

"I see no urgency," said Ramsey. Rep. Dan Lilley, chairman of the Rules Committee, said the resolution will be debated next Wednesday.

House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said Republicans would fight the measure in committee and on the floor.

"Obviously we're very concerned," she said. "This is breaking all precedent. ... Other governors haven't been told what to say to the General Assembly."

Reps. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, and John C. Hasty, D-Robeson, filed bills to raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 19 to 21.

"There might be some concern (among opponents) about college students," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who introduced a bill to raise the age. "But we might be doing them the biggest favor of their lives."

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Surrender

TOKYO (AP) — Three suspects in the Jan. 26 slaying of underworld boss Masahisa Takenaka have surrendered after a 10-day pursuit by both police and members of Takenaka's gang, a police spokesman said.

The three were arrested and placed under heavy guard after they reported to the headquarters of the Osaka prefectural police, the spokesman said.

The three, all members of the Ichiwa-kai, a rival splinter group that had broken away from Takenaka's Yamaguchi-gumi, also surrendered two Colt revolvers and a West German-made handgun that they claimed were used in the assassination, he said.

Henry VII's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Cardinal Morton, had a simple formula for taxing London's merchants. If they lived lavishly, they were obviously making pots of money and could afford high taxes. But they could not escape Morton's fork by living frugally, for then he claimed that they had to have substantial savings, and he taxed them as harshly.

In bridge, a Morton's Fork Coup denotes a line of play whereby a defender is given alternative methods of committing suicide. Here is a somewhat unusual example of the coup.

Once North showed reasonable values by bidding two no trump, South felt he would have to play for a game in spades no matter where those values were situated. He reached his goal by the most direct route available.

Against four spades West led the ace of clubs, then shifted to the ace of diamonds followed by the queen. Since declarer was not sure which suit he wanted to sluff, he wisely postponed the decision by playing low from dummy and ruffing in hand. He drew three rounds of trumps, then led the jack of clubs and overtook with the queen in dummy.

East was impaled on Morton's fork. If he elected to take the king of clubs, declarer would win the heart return and he would still have a club as an entry to the table for two heart discards. Unfortunately, holding up the king would be no better, for then declarer would discard his remaining club on the king of diamonds and he could then afford to lose a heart and still make his contract.

Blood Supply
Is 'Adequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is no widespread shortage of blood despite the public's fear of contracting AIDS through transfusions, says a new report on the nation's blood supply by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

"AIDS has shaken the public's confidence in blood supplies far beyond its actual risk to blood recipients," the report says, "yet no widespread shortages have resulted, and both donors and blood collection organizations have generally responded to the challenge."

The report was released Wednesday by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which requested it.

The study cautioned, however, that "it remains to be seen if AIDS will have a long-lasting effect on blood resources."

Lawrence Miike of the Office of Technology Assessment told a press briefing on the report that about 1 percent of AIDS cases have been connected to transfusions, or about 100 cases over the last several years. There are between 10 million and 12 million transfusions a year, he said.

AIDS is a deadly, incurable disease that strikes mainly homosexuals, hemophiliacs and drug addicts.

"Although recent attention on the safety hazards of blood transfusions has focused on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), individuals have a much greater chance of contracting some form of hepatitis from transfusions of blood components and some plasma derivatives than they do of contracting AIDS, despite a number of medical advances and the decrease in paid whole blood donors," the report said.

However, it said, "OTA concludes from this broad review of blood policy and technology that the policies implemented over the past decade have been successful in assuring a safe and available blood supply."

UNC-A Filled Job Without Advertising

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Asheville is accepting applications for the special assistant to the chancellor post that has been filled on a temporary basis since Jan. 2 by R. Wayne McDevitt, director of former Gov. Jim Hunt's western office.

Chancellor David G. Brown said Wednesday the position is being advertised about a month after McDevitt began work because the university is looking for a "permanent occupant."

The appointment was originally classified as temporary, he said, "because we felt an urgent need to fill the position and there was a person who could fill it on a temporary basis, but we needed to take the time to survey the field to determine who was the best candidate ... to get the best continuing candidate person we could for the long run."

The special assistant position was not formally advertised before it was filled by McDevitt, but Brown has said he had mentioned the job to several people.

A UNCA graduate, McDevitt had served as director of Hunt's western office since 1980. He lost his job in January when the Republican administration of Gov. Jim Martin took office.

An advertisement for the special assistant position ran Friday, Saturday and Sunday in three state newspapers and the job also was posted on the UNCA campus, Brown said.

Brown said Wednesday he had received two telephone calls about the position and had seen about five applications.

According to the ad, the special assistant will be responsible for special projects and special assignments. Preferred qualifications include experience throughout western North Carolina, knowledge of state politics and the UNC system, immediate availability. UNCA alumna and a master's degree.

Required qualifications for the job are a bachelor's degree and availability by July 1. Deadline for applications is Feb. 22.

According to the ad, the salary for the position "is competitive." McDevitt is being paid $41,649 a year.

McDevitt submitted an application "in conjunction with his being appointed to the job on a temporary basis," Brown said. "Of course, he'll be given an opportunity to update those credentials if he wishes."

McDevitt said he is an applicant for the job, but has not had an opportunity to think about whether he will update his application. "I've been working," he said. "I was in Raleigh yesterday and last evening with the legislative delegation so I haven't had a chance to address it yet."

Tiny Town Unhappy Over 3-Day Concert

MORVEN, N.C. (AP) — Some residents of this crossroads community of 750 are protesting a proposed three-day country, bluegrass and gospel concert that could attract 15,000 people.

The promoter, Charles Deaver, 33, of Bladenboro, is planning to hold the "Carolina Country Jam" concert May 31, June 1-2 on a 60-acre site near Morven on N.C. 145.

Deaver said he hopes to promote two outdoor concerts a year at the site near the South Carolina state line.

About a dozen residents of Morven at the Anson County commissioners' meeting Tuesday objected to the concert plans. They cited problems at past outdoor concerts at Charlotte Motor Speedway in Cabarrus County and Love Valley in Iredell County.

Anson County Health Director Hank Collins said there's not much the commissioners can do to prevent the concert as long as Deaver gets a permit from the state.

The concert plans worry Anson County Sheriff Tommy Allen. He said there is "no way my small department of 15 officers could hope to police this number of people. We would have to rely on the Highway Patrol to handle traffic and private security to handle people at the site itself."

"These kind of events could have problems with alcohol, drugs and fights," Allen said Wednesday. "I will have to anticipate the worst and hope for the best."

Morven is a rural community about 8 miles south of Wadesboro on U.S. 52.

Deaver plans to meet with Morven residents at 7 p.m. Monday at the community center to explain his concert plans.

"I'm afraid they (the residents) may have the idea it is going to be a rock concert and that just isn't so. We are planning a family oriented, country, bluegrass and gospel concert and we want it to be a success."

Police To Patrol With Ultralights

WADESBO, N.C. (AP) — Anson County and Wadesboro law enforcement officials soon will be looking for criminals in an unusual way — in an ultralight airplane.

The Wadesboro Police Department and Anson County Sheriff's Department have agreed to use a $6,000 ultralight airplane donated by a Mount Airy company, officials said.

The two departments will share the airplane, officials said.

Harold Brown, president of Ultralight Flight Inc., said his company is giving the Phantom ultralight plane to be used for surveillance in the city and county.

The company gave a similar plane to the Surry County Sheriff's Department in 1984.

"The biggest advantage for us will be searching for marijuana plants during the warmer weather," Surry County Sheriff Bill Hall said.

Anson County Sheriff Tommy Allen said he plans to use the plane in aerial searches for marijuana plants and missing persons.

The one-person plane has a wingspan of 28 feet and weighs just over 250 pounds, Brown said. The plane has a 37-horsepower engine and can take off on 100 feet of pavement.

Brown said ultralight planes are being used by law enforcement agencies in California and several other states.

School Unit OKs Reform Of Curricula

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education has endorsed major changes in public schools, including a basic education plan for students and a career ladder plan for administrators, but balked at stripping tenure from principals.

The proposals adopted by the board Wednesday now go to the General Assembly for approval.

Aimed at reducing inequities among the state's school districts, the Basic Education Program calls for a $627.6 million overhaul of public school programs. The board voted to gradually phase in the reform measures over the next eight years.

The plan would mandate uniform course offerings in each of the state's 142 school districts, add foreign language and art instruction in elementary schools and create the first statewide promotion standards.

When the program is fully implemented by the 1992-93 school year, the state's schools would have an additional 31,575 public school employees. Currently the state has about 52,000 teachers and 107,000 school workers.

The program also calls for hiring more administrators.

Calling the plan "grandiose" and "a dream," state Treasurer Harlan Boyles said Wednesday he's concerned the expensive price tag may be unrealistic when compared with other multi-million dollar school reform proposals to be presented to the Legislature this year.

But board Chairman C.D. Spangler told Boyles the state must act to provide all of its one million students with equal education opportunities.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips said all the money won't be needed right away.

"We're not talking about a $700 million new money item tomorrow. We're talking about an accumulative point that is to be reached when the day comes when every youngster has English and math and has the right science class and has the right kind of place to do his job."

The board also approved a career plan for administrators, resembling a program for teachers the board approved last September.

Like that program, the version for administrators establishes a five-tier advancement ladder, rewarding them with higher pay for superior work. To get the increased salaries, administrators must successfully complete continuous training programs and pass evaluations of their work.

For the first time, local school boards and superintendents would be empowered to deny a principal a pay raise for poor performance and reward excellent principals with a higher-than-usual raise.

Currently, all administrators are paid flat, across-the-board percentage pay raises.

In other action, the board rejected a proposal to remove principals from the state's tenure law governing the hiring and firing of professional public school employees.

The executive director of the N.C. School Board Association, Gene Causby, said he would approach the Legislature himself about changing the state's Fair Employment and Dismissal Act.

"I'm disappointed, but we hope the Legislature will reflect what we believe is the public's feeling on this," Causby said.

With no discussion, the board approved a motion not to recommend altering the act, also known as the Tenure Law, after spokesmen from both principal and superintendent organizations discussed the matter for more than an hour.

Under the law, a principal receives career status, or tenure, after completing three years employment with a school system. Superintendents work on a contract basis.

The education board also approved tougher education plans for high school athletes, beginning in junior high. The changes restrict and standardize the number of games played in each sport and increase the number of courses a student must pass each semester to be eligible for high school sports activities to four from three.

Meanwhile, the board heard four options under which county governments would pay from zero to 15 percent of the cost of education. The county share is now about 23 percent, with the state and federal governments picking up the rest.

Phillips said he plans to ask the board to choose one of the four options soon, and then he will draft a legislative proposal for the General Assembly.

The board also voted to require high school athletes to attend 75 percent of all their classes each semester rather than the previous 60 percent.

Charlie Adams, executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, said Wednesday night in a telephone interview that "there was some confusion" about when the new academic standards go into effect. "We proposed that it be effective in the spring of next year, but we were told the other day it would be effective in the fall," Adams said.

Privette Targets Happy Hours, TV Sex

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Happy hours and sexually explicit cable TV are among the targets of legislation planned by Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, a freshman lawmaker and executive director of the Christian Action League of North Carolina.

"I think North Carolinians are embarrassed at being the smut capital of the United States," Privette said Wednesday in an interview. "They're tired of having more X-rated movie theaters per capita than every state in the nation."

Privette, who said he may be the first Baptist preacher named to the House Alcohol Beverage Control committee, said he hopes to wipe out pornographic movies, get sexually oriented magazines off newsstands, clean up cable TV, eliminate promotions aimed at "glamorizing" liquor consumption and bring North Carolina into compliance with federal drunken-driving laws.

"A man has a right to consume alcoholic beverages, but a man does not have a right to endanger the lives of other people," he said. "We are glamorizing the world's most addictive drug when we ought to be discouraging it."

Privette said Massachusetts and Nebraska have passed laws controlling happy hours, in which bars offer alcoholic beverages at reduced prices.

"Massachusetts is perhaps the most liberal state in the nation," he said. "If they can pass legislation to ban happy hours, I don't see any problem with doing it in North Carolina."

North Carolina must eliminate a law that lets pornographers avoid prosecution simply by changing the titles on X-rated films, Privette said.

Under current law, a judge who decides material is obscene issues an injunction against each film, book or magazine. The seller can be prosecuted only if he continues to sell items named in the injunction.

"All they do is get a new leader on the film," Privette said. "If it was 'John Rapes Mary,' they sell it as 'John Rapes Suzie.'"

A public display law would prevent stores that admit minors from displaying sexually oriented materials.

"It means they're going to have to stick them under the counter," Privette said.

As for pornography on cable television, he said the U.S. Justice Department has decided regulating that is up to the states.

"It's time we did something about it," he added.

Another bill that may draw fire from liberals is one Privette said would require that parents be notified before a doctor performs an abortion on a minor.

Privette said he is enthusiastic about legislation to raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 19 to 21 but that even tougher measures are needed to comply with federal guidelines on drunken driving laws.

He said he will back legislation to increase the mandatory revocation of a driver's license from 10 days to 90 days after conviction of driving while impaired. And Privette hopes to require jail terms for second offenders without the option of serving on weekends.

The net result would be an additional $3.25 million in federal funds currently withheld because North Carolina is not in line with the federal law, he said.

The General Assembly's conservative climate is "perfect" for the legislation, Privette said.

"The elections happened to reflect the sentiments of the people," he said, referring to gains among conservative Republicans. "I think people are going to recognize that."

Although he has been in the General Assembly less than a week, Privette said that after 15 years of lobbying, "I doubt if I'll get many surprises. What might be a surprise to some of the other freshmen, I'll just consider part of the normal flow."
