Mandela Rejects Conditional Release Offer

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela, the black rights leader who has been jailed for 21 years, has defiantly rejected the white-ruled regime's conditional offer of freedom and demanded an end to its racial separation policy.

Zinzi Mandela, 24, announced her father's response to the offer Sunday at a rally attended by about 10,000 people of all races in Soweto, the huge segregated black township outside Johannesburg. She said her father gave the statement to her mother, Winnie, on Friday when Mrs. Mandela visited him at Pollsmoor prison near Capetown.

President Pieter W. Botha told Parliament last month that Mandela and others jailed with him could go free if they renounced violence as a tool to end apartheid, the government's legal policy of racial separation.

But Mandela, who was president of the outlawed anti-apartheid African National Congress when he was arrested, said he could not accept freedom while the congress remained banned and unable to take part in the debate on the nation's future.

"Let him (Botha) renounce violence," Ms. Mandela quoted her father as saying. "Let him say that he will dismantle apartheid."

"I cannot sell my birthright, nor am I prepared to sell the birthright of the people, to be free," Mandela said. He was jailed for life in 1964 for planning sabotage.

A spokesman for Botha said the president had not seen a copy of Mandela's statement, and he had no immediate comment. The spokesman said South African newspapers could publish the statement, an exception to policy barring Mandela and other leaders of his organization from being quoted.

In Pretoria, Prisons Department spokesman Maj. Abri van Vuuren said two political prisoners serving life sentences with Mandela had accepted Botha's offer for release. Van Vuuren said the prisoners' names would not be disclosed until they were released, which he said would be "soon."

Ms. Mandela said prison authorities "tried to stop this statement being made, but he (Mandela) would have none of this and made it clear that he would make the statement to you, the people."

She said her mother could not deliver the message because she was "banned," meaning she is not allowed to meet with more than one person at a time and cannot be quoted. The crowd greeted Mandela's daughter with wild applause and foot-stamping, and carried her to the stage as she entered the packed Jabulani outdoor amphitheater.

Mrs. Mandela later slipped into the stadium, almost unnoticed, and joined in the singing of freedom songs acclaiming her husband and other African National Congress leaders. The rally was in honor of black Anglican bishop Desmond Tutu's Nobel Peace Prize last year.

Mandela said the African National Congress, banned in 1960, turned to armed struggle only after trying for decades to negotiate peacefully with the white government and after "all other forms of resistance were no longer open to us."

"I cherish my own freedom, but I care even more for your freedom," Mandela wrote. "Too many have died since I went to prison. Too many have suffered for the love of freedom. I owe it to their widows, to their orphans, to their mothers and to their fathers who have grieved and wept for them."

ECU Scientists Plan To Study Algae In Neuse

By GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

Blue-green algae could be called the aquatic equivalent of Kudzu. Like the stringy green vines that mat and choke roadside fields and forests, blue-green algae periodically pants its malodorous scum in the lower reaches of the Neuse River. The algal blooms are a nuisance and almost impossible to eradicate.

But scientists Don Stanley of the East Carolina University Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources, and Bob Christian of the department of biology will take another crack at it this summer.

Funded by a $45,000 grant from National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the UNC Sea Grant College Program, the scientists hope to determine how the blue-green algae in the river respond to changes in nutrient levels. They will study the role of "new" nitrogen and recycled nitrogen in the blue-green algal blooms.

New nitrogen originates from sources such as wastewater effluent and urban or agricultural runoff. Recycled nitrogen forms from the excretion of animals and organisms in the estuary.

Previous research has implicated nitrogen as the most critical of the algal bloom promoters. Yet little is known of the dynamics of nitrogen in the estuary and how varying amounts of it affect algal productivity.

Information gathered from the two-year research project will help managers determine what effect reduced nutrients inputs will have on the Neuse River and algal blooms. And they can incorporate this knowledge into the management plans proposed for the basin.

Algal blooms become a nuisance about once in every three years and only during the months of July and August. When it occurs, it affects an area of the river starting near the Cliffs of the Neuse in Wayne County stretching to within a few miles of New Bern. It covers the river with a smelly, blue-green scum that may be responsible for fish kills and threatens the use of the river for fishing, boating, drinking water and for agricultural and industrial purposes.

ECU scientists say growth of the scum is triggered by a combination of low water flow and by the presence of nutrients that trickle into the river from farm fields, and from urban and industrial sites. In previous research they have devised methods for predicting algal blooms based on light and temperature conditions as well as on the current flow in the river.

WINTER IN THE FOREST — The recent days of cold weather has transformed the dark waters of swamp areas into a study in black and silver. Upcoming GUC Bills May Stun Customers

Greenville Utilities customers may have attempted to forget the severe cold weather of the week of Jan. 20, but they will get a reminder when their utility bills arrive in February, according to George Reel, customer assistance supervisor.

"After spot checking and reviewing several of our accounts, I noticed sharp increases in electric and natural gas usage," Reel said. As a result, he added, "many (customers) may find this month's bill could be the highest experienced ever."

Reel said, however, that is impossible to predict how much customer bills will increase. "The combination of different lifestyles and billing periods will cause varied bills," he explained.

According to Reel, there were 927 degree days of heating during the calendar month of January as compared to 445 degree days of heating in December. A degree day, he added, is an index of fuel consumption indicating the "amount of cold" experienced.

Bills will also be affected, Reel said, by reduction in heat pump efficiency which usually accompanies severe weather. In this area, a heat pump normally supplies two to three times more heat than the energy used to produce the heat. When temperatures drop well below seasonal norms, as they did in January, the pump's back-up heating supply steps in. This back-up costs more to operate than the heat pump compressor.

Greenville Utilities electric customers set an all-time record peak demand of 180 megawatts on the morning of Jan. 21. The former peak of 160 megawatts, set in August 1983, was also surpassed Jan. 22 when customer demand peaked at 175 megawatts. A megawatt is 1,000 kilowatts.

Dedication Of School Culminates Ayden Community's 10-Year Effort

AYDEN — The scene could have been anywhere, USA.

A sunny Sunday afternoon, a new school, band and chorus students dressed in navy and white and restless babies whimpering. The smell of fresh varnish permeated the new gym and the plastic protecting the shiny wood floor cracked under passing footsteps. In the audience were dignitaries, farmers, teachers, students, businessmen and community members.

The scene was the dedication of the new Ayden Middle School, the first new school built in the county in over 15 years. Sunday's ceremony was the culmination of a 10-year struggle by the community to replace the old Ayden Middle facility built in 1929. The old facility was considered unsafe by many residents whose children attended classes there.

"The real dedication of this facility is in dedicating ourselves to using it to create an atmosphere of achievement where all boys and girls can accomplish their goals," said State Schools Superintendent Craig Phillips, guest speaker for the dedication.

To create this type of atmosphere requires three specific ingredients — ingredients now present in the community of Ayden, Phillips said. "First, it requires students like the ones who are here today, students who care a little bit more about what they do and understand themselves a little better. It requires students who plan a little better."

The second ingredient, he said, is "parents who care about their youngsters and take time to work with the school and students." Also important, he said, is a "faculty and staff made up of all kinds of people." The staff and faculty "is hovered around the teacher since the focus is on the teacher and student," he added.

"Finally, the third ingredient is having in the community all kinds of people willing to work for an atmosphere of achievement," Phillips said. "A community that demands betterment and constructively criticizes. The concept of the community school in North Carolina grows stronger every day and the here at Ayden Middle School this is strongly illustrated."

Phillips said the Basic Education Plan under consideration by the state includes "a call for adequate facilities no matter where learning takes place."

"This school facility is the example of what we must do across the state and Pitt County to ensure each student has not only the right teacher and curriculum, but the right facility," Phillips said. "This community (Ayden) has always believed in quality education and this is obvious in this facility."

At the dedication ceremony, school architect Cameron Dudley and contractor Bill Farrior presided. (Please turn to page 2)

Gillam Eyes Candidacy

Former State Representative John B. Gillam III said last week that he would seek the First Congressional District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives now held by Walter Jones again in 1986.

Gillam told reporters at a North Carolina Society reception at the U.S. Botanical Gardens in Washington, D.C. that "I'm here as a candidate for Congress in 1986."

But he quickly added he was an unofficial candidate. Gillam tried to unseat Jones in the Democratic primary last year. He outspent Jones, who has held the seat since 1966, 3-1. But Jones took 61.5 percent of the vote to Gillam's 38.5 percent.

Warplanes Attack Base

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked a Palestinian guerrilla base in eastern Lebanon today, the second such air strike in 24 hours. Beirut radio stations said Syrian forces unleashed a screen of ground-to-air missiles against the jets.

The military command in Tel Aviv said all its planes returned safely to base after scoring "accurate hits" on a suspected guerrilla base along the Beirut-Damascus highway in the Bekaa Valley.

The Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the main pro-Soviet faction in the Palestine Liberation Organization, reported "heavy human losses among civilians, including women and children." It gave no figures.

Lebanese state radio said civil defense units were unable to move into the bombed area three hours after the attack.

The Beirut radio quoted police sources as saying Israeli jets dropped delayed-action bombs during the raid near Taalbaya and said some were still exploding three hours later.

It was Israel's second air strike in the area within 24 hours and the third this year.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Celebrate the coming of spring with one of this year's newest looks in knits — the roll collar pullover. The purl side of the knitted fabric is used as the right side with just a touch of fascinating pattern stitchery to bring it right out of the ordinary.

This new-look knit was designed for this column by the staff of the Craft Council of America, a coalition of leading American yarn spinners. Unabbreviated, easy-to-follow directions are written for sizes 32 through 40 (body bust sizes) using knitting worsted-weight yarn.

To obtain directions for making the Roll Collar Pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0210 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0210 by sending a check or money order for $10 for sizes 32 through 38 or $11.50 for size 40 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and Wintuk yarn in your choice of the following colors: winter white, light rose, dark rose, camel, walnut, colonial blue or cranberry. Please specify size and color choice.

I have often said in this column that unusual cables are no more difficult than the traditional ones, which even the beginning knitter often masters with ease. If you find this hard to believe, just try the Tic Tac Toe Cable Stitch.

Cast on 20 stitches for your practice piece. For the first row, knit 4, place a marker on your needle, purl 2, knit 8, purl 2. Place another marker on your needle and knit 4. The stitches between the markers are your pattern stitches. The first and last stitches of every row will be worked in stockinette stitch (knit on right-side rows and purl on wrong-side rows).

In these directions, you will be told to work front and back cables. To work a front cable, slip next 2 stitches to a cable holder and hold in front of your work while you knit 2 stitches from left needle; then knit the 2 stitches from the holder. To work a back cable, do exactly the same, except hold the cable holder in back of your work.

All of the directions below are for only those stitches between the pair of markers. For Row 2 and all other even-numbered rows, knit 2, purl 8, knit 2 on the pattern stitches.

For Row 3, purl 2, make a front cable on next stitches and purl 2. For Row 5, purl 2, knit 8, purl 2. For Row 7, purl 2, make a front cable on 4 stitches, then make a back cable on next 4 stitches and purl 2.

There are a number of ways to keep track of the rows as you work. Perhaps the easiest for this pattern would be to jot down the instructions for each odd-numbered row on a sheet of notebook paper, allowing one line for each row. Then, as you finish a row, make a check mark beside that row on your notebook paper.

You might even want to use a different color pen or pencil for each full repeat of the pattern stitch to make it even easier to identify your exact location when you pick up your work at any time. For example, the first time you work from Row 1 to Row 32, make the checks with a pencil. The next 32 rows could be checked with a black pen, the following 32 rows with a blue pen and so on.

With these simple aids, you should have no trouble with this pattern and, I hope, you will be encouraged to try other beautiful cables.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Dan Curtis swore never again after spending about five years making "The Winds of War," the largest single film project ever undertaken. Quick cut: Dan Curtis at work preparing the sequel, "War and Remembrance," which will probably run 20 hours or more and will not be broadcast by ABC until the fall of 1988.

"As tough as ('The Winds of War') was — and believe me, it was tough — this is at least twice as tough and, more than that, far more complicated, far bigger, sequences far more difficult to do," he said. "Massive. Makes the other one look like a Mickey Mouse cartoon."

Girl's 'Perfect' Love Has Major Flaw: He's Married

DEAR ABBY: I met a terrific guy last summer. I was love at first sight. "Frankie" told me he worked for Boeing out of Seattle and lived with a couple of buddies from work. We saw each other only two evenings a week and Saturday afternoons because he said he was taking some classes at night.

Everything was perfect until I saw his car parked in a shopping mall last Sunday, so I waited around to see him, and a woman came along, opened the car with her keys and started to get in.

I asked her what she was doing with Frankie's car, and she said she was his wife! I nearly had a heart attack, then I started to cry and told her the truth about me and Frankie. She was very nice and said I wasn't the first girl he's done that to, but she was hanging in there because they had two darling children. She also told me that Frankie didn't work at Boeing; he worked in a sawmill.

Abby, he told me he loved me and even asked me to marry him. Can a man love two women at once? What shall I do?

HURTING

DEAR HURTING: Tell Frankie that a man is entitled to only one wife at a time and he already has his, so to leave you alone. And yes, a man can love two women at the same time, but it could be hazardous to his health.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just moved into a new home. Everyone who comes here admires it because it's so beautifully decorated and unique. We had some special cabinets custom-made for us. An acquaintance was here, saw the cabinets and raved about how beautiful they were. (We told her at the time they were handmade for us.)

She telephoned a few days later, asking where we had our cabinets made because she wanted some made exactly like ours for her home.

How can I tactfully tell her that we had ours custom-made because we wanted cabinets that were different from everybody else's?

Abby, please don't tell me that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. I'm not flattered, I'm ...

TICKED OFF
IN SCRANTON, PA.

DEAR TICKED OFF: Tell her—just as you told me. And don't hesitate to inform her that the craftsman who made your cabinets can custom-make some for her that will be just as lovely—but different.

DEAR ABBY: "Alone in Florida" didn't know his wife had damaged her liver drinking beer—until it was too late. Please remind your readers once again that the non-complaining liver will probably not give them any warning that it is in trouble until the damage is far advanced.

Everything we eat, breathe and absorb through our skin has to be cleared by the liver. This remarkable organ has the job of removing the poisons from what we take in and converting the remainder into useful chemicals vital to our body functions. We should think twice before overloading our livers with alcohol.

The City of Greenville has a radio program, "City Hall Notes", which is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 10:25 A.M. on WOOW Radio. The public is invited to listen to this program each week and learn more about Greenville City Government.

Planning

Ralph Hall, Pitt County Memorial Hospital vice president of facility management, painted an excellent picture of how the hospital area should be as he appeared before the Medical District Study Committee last week.

The committee is studying the medical area between Stantonsburg Road and N.C. 43 with the mission of making recommendations to the City Council concerning zoning in the area. It is now zoned principally medical arts and Hall said that zoning is very suitable from the hospital's vantage point.

Hall left no doubt that the hospital-medical school complex will continue to grow as a regional facility. It now has 560 beds and plans call for the addition of 190 beds between 1990 and 1992. Given the fact that referral hospitals draw thousands of workers, patients and visitors daily, it is difficult to hold off development around them. "Everybody moves to them," he said. "Fast foods, pancake houses ... the closer they can get the better off they are."

Hall indicated that traffic congestion will soon be a problem with the rerouting of U.S. 264 along the improved Stantonsburg Road. For that reason the hospital is developing an internal routing system by tying the parking areas together with private drives.

Hall also said the hospital is looking into purchasing additional property although it is not in a position to purchase all of the surrounding land in order to control it.

Hall saw the medical area developing as a park-like setting which conjures up visions of trees, park benches and a generally peaceful setting — not an easy task with some 5,000 people coming and going every day and 6,000 vehicles whizzing by on Stantonsburg Road. With careful planning it can be accomplished, however, and what Hall had to say about the needs of the hospital should have heavy bearing on the committee's recommendations.

Concerns

If you don't think that officials in rural eastern North Carolina counties are concerned about the farm economic situation, you only have to take note of an action by the Martin County commissioners last week.

The commission ordered a freeze of unbudgeted funds for the remainder of the fiscal year. Such funds could be spent only in emergency situations and with the approval of the commissioners. Commissioner John House recommended the freeze, citing the tobacco program problems and the hospital situation.

"I think it's important that everybody understand the situation we've got in the economy in Martin County," he said.

It is also important to remember that the economic problems which concern Martin County also concern most counties in eastern North Carolina. It is not a time for panic in Martin or elsewhere, but it is certainly a time for caution. The Martin County Commissioners are acting properly in conducting the county's fiscal affairs with concern for the future.

WASHINGTON AP — In comparison with some of the cuts President Reagan has proposed in his new budget, the once-unthinkable idea of freezing Social Security benefits for a year looks positively appealing to a growing number of members of Congress.

And that same list of politically painful cuts — including elimination of revenue sharing, federal subsidies to mass transit and the Job Corps — makes the president's $30 billion defense spending increase an even more irresistible target for the deficit-cutters in Congress.

That was the irony of the $973.7 billion budget the president delivered to Congress last week for the 1986 fiscal year.

He called for another large installment in his defense buildup and a deficit-reduction program financed almost entirely with cuts in domestic programs. But the result will be a bipartisan assault in Congress on his Pentagon buildup and almost certainly a major effort to eliminate RALEIGH — For a state that boasts so much about its natural resources, North Carolina certainly doesn't do much in terms of state parks. Every brochure emanating from the Travel and Tourism Division sports a glossy photo of the mountains or beaches but North Carolina ranks just about last among the states in the amount of money it's willing to spend on public recreational land and facilities.

A study commission that finished its work a few days before the opening of the 1985 General Assembly says the voters should be asked how they feel about state parks. The commission is proposing a $50 million state bond issue to be used, if approved by the voters, solely for the acquisition of land for state parks.

North Carolina is not without state parks. The state owns 41 land and water parcels on 119,000 acres that include 28 parks, eight natural areas, one state lake, three recreational areas and a scenic river. In addition, the federal government owns a great deal of park and wilderness area inside the state's borders.

But the commission has decided that that is not enough for a state with 6 million residents. The parks, says the commission, draw 5.7 million visitors each year.

The N.C. Division of Parks and Recreation says the state has a "critical need" for 9,559 acres of land. In some cases, new parks would be created. The most urgent need, according to testimony the commission heard, is for land that would either complete original plans for a park or offer a buffer zone around a park.

Park officials are especially concerned, for example, that the state owns only half of the lake at Carolina Beach State Park, only half of Kings Pinnacle in Crowders Mountain State Park, only two-thirds of the lake shoreline at Merchant's Millpond State Park. There is concern that private development of these non-state areas could ruin the parks.

In voting to seek a bond issue, the commission recognized what will be a few of the political realities of this session. There are great demands for spending increases in essential services. There are also demands for tax cuts. A major spending program for the state parks — even if it was a one-time appropriation for land purchase — would have had tough sledding.

A number of special tax programs were suggested but it might not have been much more realistic to expect any of them to get through the assembly either.

The commission heard what some other states are doing. Florida, for example, put a special sales tax on all sporting goods with the money going towards recreational purchases. (Problems with that law have kept it from being implemented, however.) Missouri has a one-eighth cent sales tax for parks. South Carolina has a two percent sales tax on hotel accommodations and money from that fund can be used for parks. Alabama is taking some of its offshore drilling revenues and spending them on parks.

Ideas discussed for North Carolina included a state lottery. (It seems everybody is suggesting a lottery this year.) Also, an increase in the cost of a revenue stamp for land purchase was discussed. The stamp now costs one dollar per $1,000 of purchase price. By raising that to $2.50, the state could raise $6 million yearly for parkland.

In the end, Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, won out with his idea for a bond issue. By state standards, a $50 million bond is small, he said. The cost of the land isn't going to drop. The public, he said, can decide whether or not it wants the parks.

Running Back Takes A Nap

The big story in Washington last week was not the president's budget or the Ed Meese hearings, but the nap John Riggins took at a Washington Press Club black-tie affair honoring new members to Congress.

The accepted version of what happened is that the Redskin running back was the life of the party at his table, which included Justice Sandra O'Connor, Virginia Gov. Chuck Robb and staffers of People magazine. When the politicians started making speeches, John just stretched out on the floor and went to sleep, not even waking up in time to hear Vice President George Bush.

Waiters stepped over him gingerly as they poured coffee and Justice O'Connor excused herself from the table, explaining she had a early day at the court.

After the speeches were concluded Riggins woke, thanked everyone for the wonderful evening and was driven home.

The capital's social arbiters have been discussing the incident ever since.

Many people have fallen asleep during speeches at large black-tie functions in Washington, but this is the first time anyone can recall someone actually sacking out on the floor.

To put the incident into perspective you have to understand the 1984 Washington Redskin game plan. Riggins was the only running back the team had. For 16 games he was asked to pick up four or five yards with 300-pound guards, tackles and linebackers trying to pull him down. He did the job manfully and without complaint, despite the fact that the Redskin offensive line wasn't what it used to be.

Therefore, friends say, Riggins came off the season very tired and he's been trying to catch up on his sleep ever since. Since the majority of the people in the ballroom were Redskin fans, they saw nothing wrong with the running back taking a catnap.

As one loyal rooter put it, "As long as he didn't do it during a game."

But there are people in Washington who still have a problem with it.

A senator said, "I have no quarrel with Riggins' behavior, but he may have started a precedent for political dinners that could be very dangerous. What happens if every guest decides to sack out on the floor when one of us gets up to speak? We could face a sea of empty tables."

A check with the hotel brought this response. "We have rules about people sleeping in the lobby, but to my knowledge we don't have any concerning people sleeping next to their tables. We'll probably have to look into it, as we've had several complaints from the waiters, who claim it's hard enough to serve everybody when they're sitting up."

Because Washington is so protocol-minded, I called an expert on etiquette to find out if Mr. Riggins had made a boo-boo.

She gave me her ruling. "You can only go to sleep on the floor during dinner if the highest-ranking official at the table decides to do so first. Since Justice O'Connor did not stretch out, Mr. Riggins committed a serious faux pas."

"Suppose he was below the salt?" I asked.

"It doesn't matter where he was seated," she said. "Lying down at the table after coffee is a no-no and the hostess should have insisted that Riggins be placed back in his chair."

"Do you think when the word gets out, John may not be invited to Washington's better parties?"

"Not necessarily. Mr. Riggins is still a social catch. I know one hostess who is entertaining him next week and to make him more comfortable she is putting a sleeping bag on the floor, next to his place card."

Strength For Today

How marvelous is a sense of certainty! As we fumble about in semi-darkness not knowing where we stand on the big issues of life or what we are to do in the handling of our problems, we find ourselves miserable beyond description. It is only when certainty enters our minds, when we know that we are on the right track and pressing toward the right goal, that we really begin to look up and live.

There is no one rule laid down whereby we can gain certainty. However, certainty usually comes with the exhilarating sense of a clear conscience and with complete commitment on our part to do the right thing in every circumstance we confront, come what may. The thrill of certainty appears to be a physical thrill. As a matter of fact, it is a spiritual thrill. It arises out of our conviction that we are able to handle life because we are honest, straightforward, and committed only to good ends.

75th Anniversary For Couple

GIBSON, N.C. (AP) — In 75 years of marriage, the only times Birch and Annie Newton have been separated were when each had an operation and for one or two overnight visits.

They say they don't talk about the time they won't be together anymore.

"Of course, we know it'll happen one of these days but we'll have to take it when it comes," said the 94-year-old Newton. "We know one thing. It won't be no divorce."

The Newtons say before their wedding in 1910, they made a pact not to fight and to always believe what the other said.

That pact and a faith in God, they say, has kept them together.

"You take someone telling the truth and say he's not telling the truth," Newton said, "there's nothing much worse than that."

Their anniversary is Wednesday, the day before Valentine's Day, and a celebration is scheduled for Saturday in the Scotland County town of Gibson.

"Some folks think the 13th's unlucky," said Newton. "Now, it didn't work out that way for us. We've been together this long and never passed a lick between us, and never called each other a liar."

"The Master's been good," said his wife, who is also 94.

On Feb. 13, 1910, Rev. D.D. McKenzie pronounced them man and wife. They were 19 years old, and had been engaged one month.

"We went down to his house at 2:30," Newton said. "It was as cold as it was the other Monday but it was fair."

Farm Scene

Agricultural Extension Agent

There is no occupation in the world which carries any greater risks than farming. Farmers face enormous uncertainty each year through adverse weather conditions and price fluctuations. Growers who produce grain can eliminate some of this risk through forward pricing. Studies have shown that growers who participate in forward pricing record profits in eight of every 10 years. In 1985, a forward price mechanism called "Agricultural Options" will be available to assist farmers in reducing risk.

Options trading of agricultural commodities gives one the right but not the obligation to buy or sell a commodity at a given price during a given period of time. There are two types of options — "puts" and "calls." These options are traded in the same delivery months as the underlying futures contracts currently being traded in a certain commodity.

The price paid for a put or call is called the premium. Premiums on options are established in open competitive trading on the floor of the exchange trading the option, just as are prices of the underlying futures contract. Producers of crops of livestock interested in protecting a price should purchase a put, which gives the buyer the right to sell the underlying futures contract at a given price (strike price) at any given time prior to the expiration date of the option. Options will expire about one month before the futures contract expires. Instead of exercising the option and receiving the futures contract, one may simply offset (sell) the put option prior to its expiration and have the profit from the futures position credited to your account.

An option is a wasting asset. When it expires, it becomes worthless. However, producers know at the time of the transaction the total cost of the option (premium and commission fees) and do not have to worry about margin calls. Initial studies estimate that the premium will be between five and 15 percent of the futures cost. The cost will depend on such factors as the strike price chosen, the volatility of futures prices, the prevailing interest rate and the length of time until the option expires.

By purchasing put options, farmers can protect 100 percent of expected production against price declines. Typically, farmers who use futures contracts hedge only 50-60 percent of their expected production to protect them against yield losses. With options, however, the option buyer can let the option expire when yield is low and price high, losing only the premium. In addition, if 100 percent of expected production can be hedge against using put options, a larger percentage of production will have protection when yields are high and prices low.

Severe Winter Storm Churns Eastward

By The Associated Press
A storm that claimed at least two lives moved slowly east in a band stretching from the Gulf Coast to the Plains states today and an avalanche warning remained in force in Utah after a weekend of snow that dumped more than a foot on already unstable mountain slopes.

The National Weather Service predicted heavy snow in the Northwest today as a new storm system entered the nation from the Pacific. Snow also was forecast for the Great Lakes, much of Pennsylvania and western New York.

Winter storm warnings for heavy snow were in effect throughout the Cascade Mountains, the Columbia Gorge in Oregon and Idaho's panhandle.

Travelers' advisories for snow and winter storm watches were posted across parts of Missouri, Ohio, Oklahoma, Iowa, Arkansas, Kansas, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, West Virginia and Michigan.

The storm threatening the Midwest today blanketed the northern Rockies and the Sierras over the weekend, dumping 6 inches in Boulder, Colo., and forcing avalanche warnings in Idaho, California, Montana and Utah.

Trails high on the northern and eastern slopes of the Wasatch Mountains of Utah remained dangerous today after several avalanches were reported because of up to a foot of snow on top of unstable slopes, said Duaine Bowles, an avalanche forecaster with the U.S. Forest Service.

Near Tahoe City, Calif., where about 100 residents were evacuated Friday night through Sunday, the avalanche threat was downgraded to moderate and Squaw Valley skiers went back to the slopes.

"This is definitely what the doctor ordered," said Marshall Lewis of Alpine Meadows ski resort. "It's provided a psychological lift for the skiers who were looking for a big storm to get them for the season."

The storm also left up to 4 inches of snow on northeastern Kansas and northwestern Missouri, 3 inches across northern Wisconsin and the Twin Cities in Minnesota, and 3 to 6 inches along Lake Superior's northern shore.

A mobile home was severely damaged five miles south of Wharton, Texas, on Sunday by what the weather service said was an unconfirmed tornado. Marble-sized hail fell at Buna, Winnie and Sea Rim State Park.

Tornadoes also were sighted at League City, Texas, Galveston, near Houston and near El Campo.

The weekend storm also glazed Midwest roads with ice, making travel dangerous. A 23-year-old man died when his pickup truck slid out of control in Illinois and a 69-year-old Iowa woman died in a weather-related accident.

"The snowplows have been out all night," Sgt. Clint Underwood of the Illinois State Police in Crestwood said Sunday.

Police used crowbars to remove the body of a 52-year-old woman found frozen Saturday to the floor of her unheated apartment where water pipes had burst. An unidentified man, about 30, was found frozen outside an apartment building Saturday in Burnham, a suburb south of Chicago.

North of Chicago, a Coast Guard helicopter crew rescued five men from their commercial fishing boat on Lake Michigan when it became lodged in ice near Waukegan late Saturday.

Pullout Could Have Long Range Effects

AP News Analysis
By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The impact in the Middle East of Israel's impending troop pullout from south Lebanon will largely depend on two factors — how much territory it actually relinquishes and what group comes forward to take its place.

If the Israelis stand by pledges to withdraw all of their estimated 20,000 troops from Lebanon, the move would vindicate Syria's strident opposition to the U.S.-brokered agreement of May 17, 1983, in which Israel would have gained economic and security concessions in return for leaving.

The Syrians could claim that they had shown the Arab world that Israel can be pressured through force into abandoning occupied Arab territory and that the negotiated peace which Egypt signed in 1979 to gain the return for the Sinai peninsula is not the only avenue open to the Arabs.

An Israeli withdrawal also would likely improve the relationship with Egypt which was formally established by the peace treaty. A complete withdrawal would remove a major condition President Hosni Mubarak set for returning Egypt's ambassador to Israel and accepting an offer by Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres for a summit.

Egypt's ambassador was withdrawn in September 1982 following the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut refugee camps under Israeli military control.

An improvement in the frosty relations between Egypt and Israel since 1982 would substantially boost prospects for reviving peace talks between Israel and moderate Arabs.

In Washington, Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid said an Israeli departure would help revive the peace process but warned that a "cosmetic" withdrawal — in which Israel maintained some troops on the Lebanese side of the border — would be insufficient.

Mubarak said in Cairo last week that Israel should withdraw to its northern border "because Israel is not a weak country and can defend itself against any aggressor."

Whether Israel will clear completely out of Lebanon soon remains uncertain. Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin has announced a first stage withdrawal from the Sidon area to be completed by Feb. 18. But Israel has not announced a timetable for removing its troops from the eastern Bekaa Valley, where they face Syrian forces, or from areas adjacent to the Israel-Lebanese border.

Family Battles IRS

DALLAS (AP) — The family of billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt, believed to be one of the richest in the country, is fighting Internal Revenue Service claims for more than $250 million, Cox News Service reported.

The IRS says individual family members owe at least $200 million and family-owned Placid Oil Co. of Dallas owes nearly $55 million in taxes, the news service, quoting tax documents, said in a report published Sunday in the Dallas Morning News.

Most of the claims involve the 1980 tax year, Cox said.

Helms Group Said Interested In CBS

RALEIGH (AP) — A group tied to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is considering, but has not decided, conducting a proxy campaign to elect one or two directors at CBS' 1985 annual meeting, spokesman for the group said.

Fairness in Media filed a document last week with the Securities and Exchange Commission that is an amendment to a document the group filed last month. Originally, the filing stated the group did not intend to seek proxies from shareholders, but indicated it was holding that option open.

The group soon will file new federal documents to further its plans to "seek control" of CBS, said FIM spokesman Robert J. Rosser. But, he added, "We really don't know when" the filing will occur.

Rosser declined to describe what the new filings will say.

Meanwhile, FIM filed a document with the SEC Friday in which the group said it has taken steps beyond merely asking conservatives to buy CBS stock.

According to the document filed Friday, FIM on Thursday began "conducting discussions with third persons" about "transactions to seek control of" CBS. The third parties have not been identified.

James P. Cain, a spokesman for FIM, declined to comment about the text of the document. CBS officials in New York also would not comment about the latest filing by the Helms group.

In letters sent in January to nearly 1 million supporters, Helms asked conservatives to buy as much CBS stock as they could afford, amass a majority and elect a new board of directors that would end the liberal bias that Helms alleges.

Free Loan For State Through Refunds

By The Associated Press
The state of North Carolina got a $417 million interest-free loan in the form of too much state income tax withheld last year from North Carolinians' paychecks, some economists say.

"Lots of people don't resent over-withholding," seeing it as kind of a savings plan, said Charles Liner, an economist who studies state taxes at the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"But I do personally. I'd prefer to put the money in my own bank account. The state's earning money I could be earning interest on."

Richard Sylla, professor of business and economics at North Carolina State University, said the state probably was collecting too much in withholding tax.

"You don't want to sail too close to the wind" by under-collecting, Sylla said. But the steady percentage of taxes over-withheld in the past 25 years since withholding of income taxes began "suggests the withholding rates are probably too high."

The $417 million over-withheld in 1983 amounted to 18.96 percent of the $2.2 billion the state withheld that year. The percentage withheld has averaged about 18 percent each year since 1960, state officials say.

Of the 2.4 million state income tax returns filed in 1984, 78 percent resulted in refunds, for an average of $220.42 per return.

Although the state eventually refunds the extra collections, it benefits from the practice by investing the over-withheld money and earning a return on it.

T. Michael Kiltie, an economist with the state Office of Budget and Management, estimated that the $417 million over-withheld in 1983 brought in about $20 million in additional revenue from the state's investments.

There's no interest on refunds mailed to North Carolina taxpayers. But if a taxpayer under-withholds his taxes by claiming too much in exemptions, the state can slap him with a penalty of 50 percent of the amount under-withheld.

The state trend parallels that of the federal government, which turned back 23 percent of federal income tax collected — $61.2 billion of $266 billion — during the fiscal year ending October 1983.

Any change in the state's withholding tables would have to be approved by the General Assembly, said B.W. Brown, the state Revenue Department's director of individual income tax.

Legislative tax officials said last week they saw little interest in adjusting the tables.

"If there was a way to make (refunds) come out at zero, it would probably be a good idea," said Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who is cochairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "But you have to remember that most people like getting a refund back at the end of the year. It's a kind of forced savings plan."

Rauch said taxpayers concerned about over-withholding can reduce the bite by estimating their year-end deductions and claiming more exemptions on the forms they file with employers. But few do so, the Revenue Department said.

"I don't think (over withholding) is all that bad," said Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House Finance Committee. "Most people get a refund by their own design."

He said changing the withholding system would be "reinventing the wheel."

Courtroom Security Tightened In State

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Metal-detectors, surveillance cameras, alarms and bulletproof judge's benches in some North Carolina courtrooms are evidence of a nationwide drive to boost security in federal courtrooms, the state's two chief U.S. Marshals say.

"With the organized criminal activity we have in North Carolina, particularly with the importation of illegal drugs, we just can't be too careful in this district," said William I. Berryhill Jr. of Raleigh, chief marshal for the Eastern District. "The potential is here for terrorist activity."

The security improvement program began last year when the responsibility for court security was transferred from the General Services Administration to the U.S. Marshal's Office, said Max Wilson, chief marshal for the Western District in Asheville.

"It was something the marshals had wanted for years," Wilson said. "Court security was under GSA, but they didn't do a very good job with it."

Berryhill said the tighter security was prompted by a dramatic increase in terrorist activities nationwide, particularly those that result in threats to judges and other court officials.

"It's a very common occurrence," Berryhill said. "I doubt a month goes by we don't get a threat against judges, jurors, protected witnesses or somebody else connected with the courts."

Berryhill and Wilson said the biggest immediate improvement was the hiring of additional courthouse security officers. Two have been added in Charlotte and Raleigh, while one was added in Asheville, Fayetteville, Wilmington and New Bern.

The officers, who help with security in corridors and other areas outside the courtroom, have not replaced deputy marshals in the courtroom. They are supplied by a private security firm under contract to the Marshal's Office.

Wilson said bulletproof panels have been added to judge's benches so a judge could duck behind the bench in case of an armed attack. Alarm buzzers also have been installed in judges chambers, probation offices, the clerk's office and other locations.

Berryhill said similar measures were being taken in Eastern District courthouses.

Wilson said the magnetometers used at courtroom doors in Charlotte had already turned up an array of illegal weapons.

"In Charlotte, in 60 days time, we had 17 illegal weapons show up, ranging from guns to butcher knives to steel knuckles," Wilson said. "We knew it was going on, but didn't have any idea how bad it was. People are just crazy."

Berryhill said the machines have only been used in the Eastern District for a few weeks and have not yet turned up illegal weapons.

"It is really amazing," Berryhill said of Charlotte's experience with illegal weapons, "but it says something about the age in which we live."

It would be indicative of the fact that what may have been unbelievable for somebody to do in the past is a rather mundane thing to do in the times in which we live."

Both Wilson and Berryhill said an increase in drug cases in federal courts contributed to the growing number of threats against judges.

"We have the (drug) task force working in the district now, and our judges are giving stiff sentences for narcotic deals," Wilson said. "That generates threats. These people we are dealing with now are people that have money and have friends on the outside. It makes it so we have to watch it closely."

The magnetometers were used earlier this year in Raleigh at a hearing on Dr. Jeffery MacDonald's petition for a new trial. Berryhill said the machines normally would not be used at civil hearings, but the MacDonald case is unique.

The former Green Beret doctor is serving three life sentences for the slayings of his pregnant wife and two daughters in their Fort Bragg apartment.

Small Hospitals Face Financial Problems

DURHAM (AP) — The lifeline to many of North Carolina's small county hospitals will be cut off if they don't change their business practices, state officials say.

In the last 12 years, patients in the state have "dramatically shifted" from small county hospitals with less than 100 beds to large facilities with more than 400 beds, said Glenn Wilson, chairman of the department of social and administrative medicine at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

The occupancy rate of all county hospitals in North Carolina that provide acute care is about 55 percent to 60 percent, he said. But the 16 hospitals in the state with more than 400 beds have an occupancy rate of 80 percent.

Studies suggest that 30 North Carolina hospitals — most of which have 100 beds or less — are at the point of insolvency, said Wilson, who took part in a city and county management seminar last week at the Institute for Government at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Wyatt Roye, director of management service for the North Carolina Hospital Association, cited several reasons why small county hospitals are ailing financially:

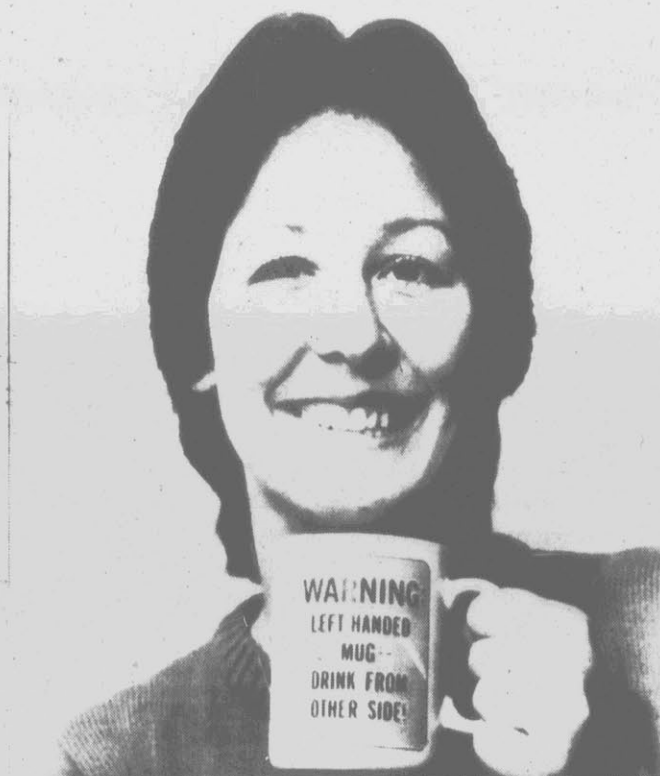

— The federal government has cut back on reimbursements to hospitals for the care of Medicare patients, forcing hospitals to discharge patients as soon as possible.

— Use of hospitals is dropping.
— The number of physicians is increasing, meaning more competition.

— More people are bypassing small hospitals that have obsolete equipment and going straight to major medical centers.

There are several possible solutions, including allowing some hospitals to simply go out of business, officials said.

Roye said some hospitals might consider creating chains with other not-for-profit hospitals or expanding the medical services they offer.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today after last week's brisk advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 12.25 last week, was down 3.31 at 1,286.66 after the first half-hour of trading.

But advancing issues took a slight early lead over declining issues among those listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stock prices have been moving steadily higher in early 1985 with the broadly-based measures of market performance generally making greater strides than the blue-chips.

Some analysts says that bodes well for the long-term outlook for stock prices.

A new survey released over the weekend says consumer confidence improved in January. Nearly 22 percent of the 5,000 families surveyed by the Conference Board, a business sponsored research group, said they believe business conditions will improve during the next six months. Twenty percent of those surveyed felt that way in December.

Among the early volume leaders on the NYSE, Sony Corp. was unchanged at 16 1/4, American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/8 at 21 1/2, and Phillips Petroleum was down 1/4 at 49 1/2.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 0.11 to 1,289.97, leaving it short of its record 1,292.62 reached Jan. 29. For the week, however, the average rose 12.25 points.

Advances led declines 9 to 7 on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.21 to a record 105.39.

Big Board volume slowed to 116.46 million shares from 151.73 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.16 to 231.05.

Carbide Plans Bhopal Clinic

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. is working to establish a medical care and research program at a university hospital in Bhopal, India, where a leak from its plant killed more than 2,000 people in December, a company spokesman said today.

The leak, of a chemical called methyl isocyanate from a Union Carbide pesticide plant, also injured up to 20,000 people, leaving many blind and suffering from other eye injuries.

The spokesman, Tom Failla, said at company headquarters in Danbury that he could not confirm details of a report in today's Wall Street Journal that said Union Carbide has agreed to follow the recommendations of a New York eye physician it hired as a consultant.

Dr. Peter Halberg, an ophthalmologist, told The Journal he recommended the company establish an up-to-date eye clinic at Hamidia University Hospital to treat problems stemming from the leak. He said Indian doctors at the hospital support the plan.

Sampson, West Break Losing Streak

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ralph Sampson, only in his second National Basketball Association season, has received one of the few honors to elude veteran Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in 16 years.

Sampson was selected Most Valuable Player in the league's All-Star Game Sunday after scoring a game-high 24 points and helping the Western Conference end a five-game losing streak with a 140-129 decision over the East.

"It's about time a true big man was selected," said Abdul-Jabbar, who was making a record 14th All-Star appearance in the 35th edition of this annual game. "And the way he's progressing they may be giving it to him many more times."

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, who broke a deadlock with Wilt Chamberlain, Bob Cousy and John Havlicek for All-Star appearances, started at center with the 7-4

Sampson at forward.

Sampson, one half of the Houston Rockets' Twin Tower front line, also led the West in rebounds with 10 before a record crowd of 43,146.

"His talents at forward haven't really been exploited," said Abdul-Jabbar about Sampson. "In college and last year he had to play at center. I think he's doing a lot better at the forward. I think it's a natural position for him."

Abdul-Jabbar's Los Angeles Laker teammate Earvin "Magic" Johnson contributed 21 points and 15 assists.

"It's fun playing with Magic Johnson. He puts the ball on the court and all you have to do is run with him. He'll hit you with the pass," said Sampson, who was selected to the All-Star team for the second time in his two-year career.

"Anytime you got big men that can go to the basket, you've got something," said Johnson, adding that he thought Sampson "would be much better if he played with me. I think a lot of times you have to know when to give it to him and when not to."

"Sampson was awesome today," said East Coach K.C. Jones after Sampson hit 10 of 15 from the field. "He came down the middle on the fastbreak, filled the middle on defense and hit the boards."

"He was head and shoulders above most of the players when the game was on the line," West Coach Pat Riley said. "Sampson's a great young player and will get nothing but better."

The East hardly shot like All Stars, finishing with a .408 shooting percentage after making only 49 of 120 field-goal attempts.

Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons led the East with 22 points but sat out most of the second half with a thigh injury.

"Isiah wanted to play but I had seen enough," Jones said. "I didn't see any reason to risk a serious injury. I wouldn't do that to one of my players in a regular game."

Thomas, who won MVP honors in last year's game, was injured late in the second quarter.

"Magic made a pass to George Gervin. I stepped into the lane and stole the pass. As we were going back in the transition game, I got a knee in the thigh from somebody," said Thomas, who had the bruise on his left thigh heavily taped in the second half.

"I knew how bad it was. I was limping. It was pretty obvious I was favoring it a lot," he said, adding that he didn't expect the injury to keep him out of action.

The West never trailed after taking a 34-33 lead late in the first quarter, although the East managed five ties after that.

The final deadlock was 70-70, but Larry Nance of the Phoenix Suns, dethroned Saturday as the league's slam-dunk champion when he finished fifth behind winner Dominique Wilkins, started a 24-13 streak with two straight baskets.

Sampson completed the run with a layup that gave the West a 94-83 lead with 2:20 left in the third quarter. The closest East came after that was 97-93 early in the fourth quarter, but Sampson scored the next two baskets and the East never seriously threatened again.

Gervin followed Sampson in the West scoring column with 23 points, 15 of them in the first half.

For the East, Larry Bird had 21 and Terry Cummings 17.

The previous high attendance for any NBA event was 41,163 on Feb. 4, 1969, for a regular-season double-header at the Houston Astrodome. The previous high for an All-Star Game was 31,745 in 1979 at the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome.

"It was a feeling that's undescribable. You want to do something for them special, because they were really into it (the game)," said Johnson about the crowd at the Hoosier Dome. "You really feel good. They had you up before the game. They had you really ready to go out there and play hard, not treat the game like an exhibition."

The game capped an impressive weekend in Indianapolis, which was on the verge of losing its franchise before brothers Mel and Herb Simon purchased it in 1983. Saturday, a crowd of 16,665 filled Market Square Arena for the slam-dunk competition and the league's oldtimers game. The East, led by Earl Monroe's 14 points, won 63-53. Zelmo Beaty and Pete Maravich each contributed 10 points to the victory. Roger Brown, a star for the host Indiana Pacers when it won three American Basketball Association titles, was high for the West with 10.

Pompili, Dixon Top ECAC-S

Herb Dixon and Monique Pompili of East Carolina won rookie of the week honors for men's and women's basketball in the ECAC-South.

Pompili, a 5-11 freshman from Fayetteville, was honored for the second time. She scored 26 points, grabbed 17 rebounds and had two blocked shots in wins over Hampton and American as the Lady Pirates' winning streak reached 12 games. The Lady Pirates are now 14-8 overall and 7-0 in the conference.

Dixon scored 39 points and dished out 11 assists in losses to UNC-Wilmington and William & Mary. He posted a career-high 23 points against the Indians Saturday and had seven assists against Wilmington.

Every freshman recruited by Coach Charlie Harrison has won rookie of the week honors.

In the Pirates' last five games Dixon has scored 72 points and averaged 14.6 points. Dixon has started last three games, scoring 53 points in those games.

Patty Sheehan Wins In LPGA

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Patty Sheehan saved her best for last, capping a final round 66 with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to win the $200,000 Sarasota Classic.

Her 6-under-par effort Sunday was the best of the day and allowed her to finish the tournament at 10-under 278, one stroke ahead of Nancy Lopez.

Lopez couldn't duplicate Sheehan's final hole heroics as she missed a 10-footer which would have forced a playoff for the $30,000 first prize.

Sheehan gave Lopez, who played in the foursome just behind her, credit for pushing her to victory.

"I felt it was a two-person race all along," Sheehan said. "Even though I wasn't paired with her, she was the force that kept me going. I knew after the second hole it was going to be me and Nancy."

Sheehan began the day one shot behind third-round co-leaders Lopez and Patty Hayes. Her birdies on her first two holes set the stage for the duel with Lopez.

Then, it all came down to the final hole, the par-5 18th at the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf & Racquet Club. Sheehan said she had heard a roar coming from the 17th green and thought Lopez had birdied to move ahead of her.

She hit a 5-iron short of the green, then put a sand wedge eight feet from the hole and calmly made the putt. Only then did she realize the cheer hadn't been for Lopez, and she was all alone in the lead.

Pirates Face American, Look To End League Skid

East Carolina University's Pirates play host to one of the new kids on the ECAC-South block tonight at 7:30 p.m. as American University visits Minges Coliseum for the first time ever.

American, located in Washington, D.C., joined the conference along with UNC-Wilmington last year at the close of the 1983-84 basketball season, but this isn't the first meeting between the two.

Their first occurred 11 years ago in the Presidential Classic, held in Washington, when American gained an 82-75 victory over the Pirates.

But while it might be their first league meeting, it is a meeting with great importance to both teams. As the ECAC-South race moves into its final three weeks, East Carolina is trying to escape from the cellar — and a tournament date with the top-seeded team — while American is trying to keep the Pirates there and thus avoid that first round tournament matchup.

Who that matchup might come against appears foggy than it did a few days back when the Midshipmen of Navy were roaring through the league. But two weeks ago, George Mason went into Halsey Athletic Center and knocked off the Middies, and Saturday night, James Madison also did the job, leaving Navy with an 8-2 league record.

Richmond, meanwhile, with a chance to pull into a tie with the Middies, fell by a point to Mason, putting Mason and Richmond into a 7-3 tie for second place. And tied with them in the loss column is William & Mary at 5-3. James Madison, at 5-4, cannot also be counted out of the picture yet.

East Carolina goes into a game without a win in league play, 0-8, and 5-14 overall. The Pirates have lost their ten games in a row, and haven't won a conference game in 11 straight regular season outings.

American, meanwhile, has only a home-court 64-62 victory over William & Mary to show to its advantage in the league. They are 1-8 in league play and 6-15 following Saturday night's 68-53 loss at UNC-Wilmington.

Jim Lutz, a 6-5 senior forward is the leading scorer for the Eagles, hitting 12.6 points a game, while Steve Nesmith, a 6-4 senior forward, is the only other player in double figures at 10.2.

The other starters are expected to be 5-11 freshman guard Mike Sampson, hitting 9.0 per game; 6-2 freshman guard Charles West, scoring at a 7.6 clip, and 6-5 freshman center Eric White, scoring at 9.4 per game. White is also the leading rebounder with a 6.0 average.

Thus, American is one of the few teams in the conference that probably has less experience than the Pirates — starting three freshmen. East Carolina the last few games has been starting one junior, three sophomores and a freshman.

That freshman — the lone Pirate rookie this year — has come on strong in the last three weeks. Herb Dixon has played quite well in each of the last five games since missing two with a wrist injury. In those five, he's scored in double figures four times in a row, and averaged 14.6 points a game, with a career high 23 against William & Mary Saturday night.

A win by the Pirates would not only snap their losing string but would move them a half-game ahead of the Eagles — and out of the cellar for the first time since January 28.

East Carolina has two more home games this week, hosting Winthrop in a non-conference affair on Wednesday and Richmond in a league game on Saturday.

USOC Establishes 'Friendship' Fund

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Reluctant to give outright refunds to foreign countries for expenses incurred at the 1984 Summer Games, the U.S. Olympic Committee has instead established a "Friendship Program" to promote visits by U.S. athletes to other countries and vice versa.

The program would be funded by up to $7 million in surplus money from the Los Angeles Games.

Under the five-point resolution approved Sunday by the USOC's executive committee, the program would be administered by the USOC.

The program is aimed at improving international relations by funding visits of foreign athletes and coaches to U.S. Olympic Training Centers to learn more about training routines and sports medicine. Also, it funds visits by U.S. athletes to other countries, particularly third-world nations.

The resolution was approved after lengthy debate. It was to be considered today in Los Angeles at a meeting of the executive board of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, which earlier voted to distribute $6.8 million in surplus funds to some 130 nations as reimbursement for expenses.

USOC officials were cool to the LAOOC idea. Some board members pointed out that direct payments to participating Olympic organizations would constitute payments to governments, since many national Olympic committees are arms of their governments.

Robert Kane, former USOC president, warned the USOC executive board that "having us administer the money just won't fly in LA. They generated the surplus money, and I doubt very much if the people in LA will buy this."

But Peter Lippett, an executive board member representing rowing, argued that the USOC "is the only proper organization to administer the money. The LAOOC, after all, is going out of business."

If the LAOOC board turns down the USOC plan, the designated funds would be returned to the general surplus pool, which is expected to total about $250 million. As a partner with the LAOOC in staging the 1984 Summer Games, the USOC is entitled to 40 percent of the proposed dispersal funds, with national governing bodies of various sports getting 20 percent and Los Angeles keeping the remaining 40 percent.

According to the USOC resolution, the total Friendship Program funding would amount to the expenses paid by countries for housing their athletes in the Olympic Village or a total of $7 million, whichever is less.

"We feel other countries will perceive us as greedy and selfish if we don't do something with the money," said newly elected USOC president John B. Kelly Jr. "A lot of countries sent additional athletes to Los Angeles at great expense because of the boycott. We urged them to send the extra athletes so we wouldn't have to cancel events and refund ticket money. Countries that supported us are deserving of our consideration."

In other board action Sunday, national Olympic governing bodies were given authority to use their share of Los Angeles surplus money in whatever manner they choose, and not specifically related to Olympic or Pan American Games activities. Each governing body is expected to receive about $1.1 million.

A tentative budget for the 1985-88 quadrennium of $118 million was approved, and U.S. Synchronized Swimming was reinstated as the sanctioning body for the sport after being put on probation for removing an athlete from the team without holding a hearing beforehand.

The executive committee also voted to change the title of the USOC executive director to secretary general to conform with the title used by other nations for that same position.

George Miller, a former Air Force general from Omaha, Neb., thus becomes the first U.S. official to take the new title. He succeeded F. Don Miller over the weekend.

In other weekend action by the USOC, the organization's House of Delegates approved Northern Michigan University as the site for a third Olympic Training Center.

The USOC also plans to have the controversial practice of blood doping outlawed.

Tar Heels Pound La. State, 75-70

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Fifteenth-ranked North Carolina was the same team when it trailed by 10 as it was when it erased that deficit and went on to win, said Louisiana State University guard Derrick Taylor.

"They didn't do anything different. They didn't lose their patience at all," Taylor said. "They just kept doing the same thing for 40 minutes, coming at us, banging the boards...."

North Carolina beat Louisiana State University 75-70 in a nationally televised college basketball game on Sunday.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said it was probably the best game his team played — from start to finish — this year.

"It was a superb college basketball game," Smith said.

LSU hit 11 of its first 14 shots from the field to open the game, going out to a 24-14 lead with 10:32 left in the first half. It was 39-36 in LSU's favor at intermission.

Then North Carolina burned the nets, hitting 12 of its first 14 shots to open the second half, taking a lead that see-sawed down to the last minute — six ties and six lead changes in the final 15 minutes.

"I don't feel like we ever took charge," Smith said. "I felt like we had it won when we had that four-point lead (with 24 seconds to go) and they were out of timeouts."

Brad Daugherty hit nine of his team's last 21 points and finished with a game-high 19 points and 10 rebounds. Most of his points came from inside on the tight LSU zone.

"I've never been one to feel you can't get inside on a zone," Smith said.

And when they couldn't get the ball in to Daugherty, Steve Hale and Kenny Smith popped from long range. Smith hit 5 of 9 from the field, finishing with 15 points, and Hale was 6-12 and 14 points.

Smith clinched the game for North Carolina by hitting five clutch free throws in the final two minutes.

Taylor led LSU with 16 points. Nikita Wilson had 15, Jerry Reynolds 14 and John Williams 10.

North Carolina is now 18-5 for the season, and LSU is 14-7.

LSU Coach Dale Brown said the game was so well played that it took some of the sting out of losing.

"It was really an excellent college basketball game," he said. "Both teams played clean and hard."

"You don't like to lose, but losing like this doesn't bust our spirits."

Taste Of Victory

O'Meara Holds Off Stadler In Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — The competition on the PGA Tour, it would seem, is getting to be rather severe.

Consider Craig Stadler. In two tournaments this season he was a total of 47 shots under par. And he didn't win either one of them.

Or consider Lanny Wadkins. He won two of the first four tournaments of the 1985 season and played well in the other two. So he takes a week off and somebody blows right past him on the money-winning list.

Mark O'Meara did the job Sunday, turning back Stadler's late upset bid and scoring his second consecutive victory on the Tour in the Hawaiian Open.

The triumph, nailed down on a critical, 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole just as it appeared the wheels were coming off for O'Meara, was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and lifted him into the money-winning lead with $194,625 for the young season.

"It means a lot to me," said O'Meara, who added this title to the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am he acquired a week earlier and became the first man in two seasons to win consecutive tournaments. "To play as well as I did — one bogey for the tournament is quite an accomplishment for me. To win two in a row...."

He paused, smiled and continued:

"I wanted to win the money title last year and didn't do it. This time, well, I didn't want to let Lanny get too far in front."

Wadkins, winner of the Bob Hope Classic and Los Angeles Open, did not play in the Hawaiian Open and dropped back to second on the money list at $185,850.

Stadler, beaten by Wadkins in a playoff at the Bob Hope after each finished regulation play at 27 under par, was 20 under par this time.

"Whatever it was, it wasn't quite good enough," Stadler said after a last-round 64 that included: an eagle-birdie-birdie start, a birdie-birdie-birdie finish and a total of six birdies and an eagle. He also had two bogeys and "those were the killers," he said.

Mercersburg, Calvert Hall Win Atlantic Seaboard

Mercersburg Academy took five first place finishes in the girls' events while Calvert Hall of Maryland won the boys' 200 medley relay and went on to win the Atlantic Seaboard Swimming and Diving Championships.

Mercersburg, located in Pennsylvania, won the girls' competition with an overall score of 409.5, while the Peddie School out of New Jersey was second at 232. W.T. Woodson High School of Virginia was third at 229.5, and South Mecklenburg was fourth at 182.5.

In the boys' competition, Calvert Hall posted 324.5 points, followed by W.T. Woodson with 240, Greensboro Grimsley at 158 and R.J. Reynolds with 124. Rose High School placed ninth in the boys' standings with 98 points.

Lefty Still Chasing 500th Win

By The Associated Press

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell is still chasing his 500th victory, and he could join 16 other college coaches who have reached the mark right in his own backyard when the Terrapins host North Carolina Wednesday.

Duke soured Driesell's plans to get 500 at his alma mater with a 70-62 victory over the 20th-ranked Terrapins.

"We were all pumped up to win it for him," said Maryland guard Jeff Adkins. "All the guys wanted him to win it here. 'We were ready to carry him off the court and everything."

In other Atlantic Coast Conference games, 10th-ranked Georgia Tech, which jumped into the top spot in the ACC with the Blue Devil's help, defeated Wake Forest 94-75 Sunday, and No. 15 North Carolina got a non-conference victory over Louisiana State 75-70.

In another Saturday game, North Carolina State upset fourth-ranked Southern Methodist 82-78 in overtime.

Johnny Dawkins got four free throws in the final minute, thanks to two technical fouls called against Maryland. One technical was called against Len Bias after an altercation with Blue Devil forward Danny Meagher. It was followed by another on Driesell, when he protested the two-shot foul on Bias.

"Dawkins broke our backs when he hit those free throws," Driesell said. "He really took over when the game was on the line."

Dawkins hit 20 points, and Mark Alarie led the Blue Devils with 21, as Duke, now 6-4 in the conference and 17-4 overall, took a 34-30 halftime lead. Maryland led only once at 43-42 on Jeff Adkins jumper with 10:34 to go.

The Terrapins, now 19-7 and in second place in the ACC at 5-3, came as close as 61-57 with 1:12 left before the technical barrage started.

"It was a big letdown," Adkins said. "We came out all pumped up to win it for him, but now I guess winning it at home against (North Carolina) will be even better."

John Salley, who led Georgia Tech with 27 points, said he didn't have revenge in mind when he took to the court Sunday. Wake defeated Georgia Tech 68-54 Jan. 5, after the Yellow Jackets had captured the Rainbow Classic by beating Arkansas, Washington and Maryland.

"Naw, we just wanted to win," Salley said. "We're trying to reach the peak we reached in Hawaii. 'We came at them with the same intensity that they came at us with in Wake Forest.'"

Georgia Tech, now 7-3 and 18-4 overall, built a 20-point halftime lead at 47-27 and finished shooting 59 percent overall.

"We played very poor transition defense, which hurt our chances in making a run at it," said Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy. "We were out of our pattern offensively most of the game. We spent most of our time in the first half on the defensive end of the court. When you do that you obviously have problems."

Mark Price and Yvon Joseph both added 18 points for Tech.

Delaney Rudd led Wake Forest with 21 points and Lee Garber chipped in 17.

North Carolina, now 18-5, had to overcome a 10-point deficit in the first half and trailed by only three at 39-36 at halftime despite deafening noise at the LSU Assembly Center.

"They played with a great deal of confidence and poise," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "The surest way to quiet down a crowd is to score some points."

Steve Hale's layup with five minutes left gave the Tar Heels their first lead. Then center Brad Daugherty led North Carolina on a harrowing stretch drive, hitting of nine of the Tar Heels final 21 points. He finished with a game-high 19 points.

Kenny Smith, who missed eight games after breaking his wrist during last year's LSU contest, sealed the Tar Heel victory with five clutch free throws in the final 24 seconds.

Smith had 15 points and Hale added 14.

Guard Derrick Taylor's 16 points led LSU, which fell to 14-7.

While North Carolina State got key points from guard Terry Gannon in a comeback effort against SMU, an unsung hero on defense was center Cozell McQueen. McQueen covered 7-foot Mustang center Jon Koncak, holding him to five points and three rebounds, his lowest total in either category this season. Koncak averages more than 18 points a game, and 11.1 rebounds.

The Wolfpack rallied from a 10-point deficit at 71-61 with 8:14 left, holding the Mustangs scoreless for the rest of regulation, tying the score at 71-71 on a pair of Gannon free throws and throwing the contest into overtime.

N.C. State then jumped out to a 75-71 lead in overtime, and the Wolfpack used free throws down the stretch to ice the victory.

"This is a big game for us, because we're trying to make the (NCAA) tournament," said Gannon, who led the Wolfpack with 19 points. "And when you beat the No. 4 team on national TV, it's got to help you."

Anthony "Spud" Webb added 17 points for 14-7 N.C. State. Carl Wright led LSU, 18-4, with 23 points.

Navratilova Cruises To Final

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two of the biggest names in the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships — Martina Navratilova and Mats Wilander — are still in the tennis tournament. But they have nothing to praise for their latest victims.

"I don't go into matches expecting to lose, but I could have lost this one," Navratilova, the women's No. 1 seed, said after struggling past Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 Sunday night.

"I think he should have beaten me today," said the men's No. 2 seed, Wilander, after his 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory over unheralded Bob Green.

Four seeds were upset Sunday as the most of the women moved into the quarterfinals and the men into the fourth round. Kathy Rinaldi defeated No. 8 Zina Garrison 7-5, 6-1; West Germany's Bettina Bunge downed No. 14 Pam Casale 6-2, 2-6, 7-5; Greg Holmes eliminated No. 5 Aaron Krickstein 7-6, 7-6, and Mike Leach ousted No. 10 Jimmy Arias 7-6, 6-3.

Navratilova was joined in the quarterfinals of this inaugural two-week tournament by second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 7 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 10 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 12 Barbara Potter and Bunge. Advancing to the fourth round were Rinaldi and No. 13 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary.

In fourth-round matches today, Temesvari played third-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia and Rinaldi faced West Germany's Steffi Graf.

The quarterfinal pairings will send Navratilova against Bunge, Bassett against Mandlikova, Lloyd against Potter and today's winners against each other.

Wilander, Holmes and Leach led the wide-open bottom half of the 128-player men's singles draw into the fourth round. Also posting victories Sunday were 12th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, Tim Mayotte, Jan Gunnarsson of Sweden, Brod Dyke of Australia and Tarik Benhabiles of France.

Only two seeds remain in the bottom half of the draw, with Arias and Krickstein following earlier losses by No. 3 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden, No. 7 Kevin Curren of South Africa, No. 14 Juan Aguilera of Spain and No. 15 Ben Testerman.

The men's top seed, Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, took to the hardcourts at Laver's International Tennis Resort today, facing 13th-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden.

"For some reason I wasn't surprised it went three sets," Navratilova said of her match with Lindqvist. "I was surprised how much I was struggling just to break her serve, but she was creaming the ball, hitting it really hard and making it difficult to come in."

Lindqvist, who lost to Navratilova easily in their only other meeting, saved three match points before falling.

"I enjoyed the match. I don't know if she did," Lindqvist said.

Green was matching Wilander shot for shot until the seventh game of the decisive third set when he double-faulted three times, giving the Swede the service break he needed.

"Green's serve is very steady, one of the best," Wilander said. "One of the keys (to the match) was when he double-faulted. Maybe he got a little nervous and didn't know how to end the match."

Green admitted the double-faults caused him to let down mentally.

"It definitely brought me down," he said. "I like to close out matches against the top guys. It's very seldom you get away with breaking somebody and then getting broken and then breaking back again."

"Once you let them back in — or they let themselves back in — it's very tough to take it back away from them."

Krickstein's feared forehand failed him repeatedly as he lost the first tiebreaker 8-6 and the second 7-1.

"You have to serve well to win against him," Holmes said of Krickstein. "I tried to mix it up. He has a huge forehand. If he gets hold of it...."

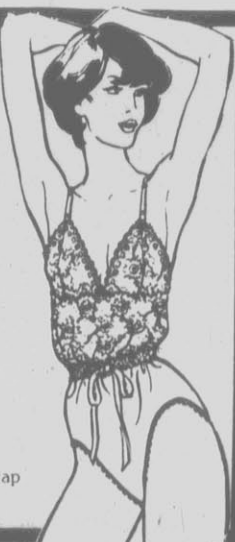

He left the sentence there.

'The Amen Corner' Set For Two Performances

James Baldwin's play, "The Amen Corner," will be presented in two performances, a matinee at 2:30 p.m. and an evening performance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University.

All seats for the matinee performance are $3. Admission for the evening performance is $5 per person at the door, $10 for reserved seating. Reserved tickets can be purchased from: East Carolina University's Gospel Choir; Flamingo Records, 505 S. Evans St.; Gorham's Beauty Salon, Rivergate Shopping Center; and the office of Pitt-

Greenville Arts Council, 117 West Fifth St.

The play is being presented by the Shaw Players and Company under the auspices of the Pitt County Chapter of the Shaw University Alumni Association and the East Carolina University Gospel Choir.

"The Amen Corner," set in a store-front church in Harlem, centers around the trials and tribulations of the church's head, a self-anointed woman preacher. A critic in the New York World Telegram & Sun wrote that "through Baldwin's artistry, (the woman) emerges in a wholly rich and beautiful characterization." At the play's opening the woman's son, also the church's organist, seems intent on following the footsteps of his jazz musician father. Eventually, the son comes home to die.

This production is being dedicated to the memory of two Shaw alumni who died during 1984 — Bishop Willie Lewis Jones, who was pastor of Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist, and Mrs. Lindsay Dillard Payton, a retired math teacher who taught in Ayden.

'Plaza 85'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie jammed with Cuban jazz artists and played some be-bop tunes at the opening of the "Plaza 85" jazz festival in Havana, says the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina.

"We did not come to compete, but to show that although our governments do not agree, we, through music, can know how to communicate," Gillespie, 68, was quoted as saying.

Gillespie dedicated the Saturday concert at the Karl Marx Center to the late Cuban percussionist Chano Pozo, whose rhythms influenced the be-bop style of the 1940s, Prensa Latina reported Sunday in a dispatch monitored here.

ROBERT CONRAD AND GEORGE HAMILTON

TWO FATHERS' JUSTICE

WORLD PREMIERE MOVIE! 9PM

7 WITN TV EyeWITNESS News at 11:00pm

Hamilton, Conrad Star In TV Drama

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Hamilton and Robert Conrad are as unlikely a pair of partners as you'll find on television in this timely story about vigilantism.

The two of them, Hamilton playing a Boston blueblood executive and Conrad a tough steelworker, team up in the NBC movie "Two Fathers' Justice" Monday night when they are drawn together by a common tragedy and a common desire for justice.

"When tragedy strikes it doesn't matter what side of the track you're on," Hamilton said. "So it's an unlikely combination of Bob Conrad and George Hamilton. We become the best of friends."

Their children, on the eve of their wedding, are in the wrong place and are gunned down by two cocaine dealers. When the drug dealers skip bail and flee to a Caribbean island, the fathers join forces to bring them to justice. Hamilton seeks justice in a trial; Conrad wants to render justice from a gun barrel.

It's quite interesting to watch this odd couple warm to each other, reluctantly at first, then with enthusiasm as they come to realize their lives depend on each other.

"I play a guy from Boston who went to Harvard, I would say," said Hamilton. "He has a very ethical sense about the law on one hand. But he's hypocritical because he says government contracts were meant to be broken. He wants to punish the men who killed their children, but his reaction is to call in more lawyers. Conrad is strictly an eye for an eye."

"I liked it because it's something that doesn't answer the question but is provoking. With all this vigilante stuff in New York, I think it's come at the right time. It's a challenging statement. How would you handle it? You don't really know until it happens. I'm split down the middle myself on how I'd react."

"Two Fathers' Justice" was filmed in Chicago and southern Florida by Conrad's company. Rod Holcomb directed from a screenplay by David Kinghorn.

Hamilton doesn't do much television, but said he accepted because of the script and other reasons. "For me to become involved I want the people to be serious and pay my price," he said. "I try to do something that's an event."

"When I read the script I saw that it's not what you'd usually expect me to be involved with. It's not comedy or larger-than-life. It has to do with the impotence of the judicial system."

Hamilton's recent films include "Love at First Bite" and "Zorro, the Gay Blade," which he helped create. He also had a role in "Roots" and in the late 1960s was involved in two TV series, "The Survivors" with Lana Turner and "Paris 7000."

Hamilton shrugged off a recent allegation by People magazine that he was "one of the 10 laziest actors."

"I'm glad Bob Conrad wrote them a letter that I was a hard worker and was on the job no matter what the weather or the hour," he said. "The thing is I like to make it look easy. I want to make it look light because people don't pay to see dirt."

For six weeks he's been writing a screenplay for himself. "I'm getting a bigger kick from that than anything else I've done," he said. "I just talk into a tape recorder and sometimes I act it out. That's how 'Love at First Bite' and 'Zorro' originated."

The project is called "Serving Time." Hamilton will play an actor left owing the government $6 million when his manager cheats him. He winds up as a butler to a black man in his former mansion. He and his new boss work together to recover his stolen millions.

Hamilton originally sold the idea to a network as a series. "The first thing they wanted to do was make the black man white," he said. "It took me three years to get it back from the network."

Movie Criticism Continues

By MARC RICE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta's tragic string of child slayings played as TV drama while community leaders kept up their attack on the CBS program as a "disgusting" distortion, psychologists counseled worried parents and broadcasters got instant viewer criticism.

The first part of "The Atlanta Child Murders" aired Sunday night after weeks of criticism from local officials. The conclusion of the five-hour, two-part movie is scheduled Tuesday night.

"It's totally disgusting," said City

Council member Carolyn Long Banks. "I've seen it two times and the more I see, the madder I get about the content of it and its effect on children across the country."

The movie contained "absolute lies," she said.

CBS, which has defended the project as a balanced "docudrama," met with city representatives and agreed to air an advisory saying the movie is not a documentary and is partly fictionalized.

It is based on the slayings of 29 young Atlanta blacks and the two 1982 murder convictions of Wayne B. Williams, a self-styled talent scout. Sunday's segment of the movie covered the events leading up to Williams' arrest.

The movie suggests that Williams was railroaded, a notion that has outraged community leaders. Prosecutors have cited trial transcripts to show the movie presents a distorted picture of the case.

The network's local affiliate, WAGA-TV, reported that viewers began calling Sunday night after the movie had been on about 20 minutes and the station received about 150 calls by the time the program concluded.

"Most were complaining that we — or CBS — shouldn't have shown it in the first place," said Kevin Dunn, the station's assistant news director.

"The most common complaint was of the portrayal of people here as hicks."

George Schweitzer, a CBS spokesman in New York, said the network received about 50 calls, "mostly negative."

More than 100 telephone calls were received by an Atlanta school system hot line. Ruby Tatum, a psychologist with the school system, said many calls were from parents whose children were upset by the movie and several were from out-of-state callers who wanted to know if Williams is free or locked up.

Williams, serving two life sentences at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center in Jackson, watched the movie on a black-and-white television with about 100 fellow inmates, said John Siler, a state spokesman.

Siler said Williams was not given a private screening because prison officials did not want to give him special treatment. Asked whether the film might put Williams in danger from other prisoners, he said, "We're keeping a good, close eye on him."

Siler said prison officials were not allowing reporters to question

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A8 ♥KQ1076 ♦J8542 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ 1♠ 2♥ Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—In terms of point count you might not have all that much, but your trick-taking potential is excellent. For his free raise partner needs little more than the ace of hearts and king of clubs, or heart length and diamond shortage, to make game a near certainty. Bid four hearts.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ1042 ♥5 ♦AJ9 ♣763
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♠ 3♥ Dble Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—Defensively, you do not have as many quick tricks as partner could reasonably expect, even allowing for spade shortness in his hand. Unless your opponents are known to be wild bidders, it's unlikely that you will punish them severely. Since the double would be a toss-up, we would take out insurance by beating a timorous retreat to three spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A7 ♥AQ65 ♦AQ109652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♠ 1♦ 1♠ 4♦
? What do you bid now?
A.—East's preemptive bid has attained its objective—it has turned the hand into a high-level guessing game. On the strength of your partner's free bid of one spade, which suggests scattered values outside the opponents' suit, we would take our chances and gamble out six clubs. We won't quibble with a five diamond cue-bid en route.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♥9874 ♦AKJ5 ♠AQ763
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♦ 3♠ 4♥ Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—What started out as a fair hand has suddenly become enormous. Partner must have an excellent suit to introduce it at the four-level, so you should begin thinking in terms of a grand slam. The first thing to do is to tell partner of your intentions by cue-bidding four spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦742 ♥AKJ83 ♦J6 ♣QJ3
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♠ 1♦ 1♥ Pass
2♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is worth a move toward game, and the obvious bid is a raise to three clubs. As is the case in many fields of endeavor, the obvious should not be overlooked, and this hand is no exception.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦6 ♥K5 ♦AKQ76 ♠AJ543
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 1♠ Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very good hand IF a fit can be uncovered, but that is a very big if. The hand already has the appearance of a misfit, so you cannot afford a jump shift—that is forcing to game and you cannot guarantee 11 tricks in a minor or nine at no trump. Had your suits been the majors rather than the minors, it might be different. For the moment, bid two clubs. You need help from partner to get to game.

Vows Renewed

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro and her husband, John Zaccaro, marked their upcoming 25th wedding anniversary by renewing their marriage vows at their church.
Ms. Ferraro's mother, Antonetta, and the couple's children witnessed the Sunday morning ceremonies for couples celebrating their 25th and 50th wedding anniversaries this year at Our Lady of Mercy Church in Forest Hills, Queens, said church spokesman Jeff Smith.
The ceremony is an annual event at the Roman Catholic church.
Ms. Ferraro, who ran unsuccessfully last year with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, and her husband will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary in July.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: U equals A

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

The "Big Three" at Yalta

The Yalta Conference ended 40 years ago today. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin met to consider the fate of post-war Europe. Roosevelt had narrowly escaped death while on his way to an earlier secret meeting in Cairo, in November, 1943. A United States Navy destroyer accidentally fired a torpedo at the President's ship. The torpedo missed, but the destroyer was not so lucky. The Japanese sank it in 1945.

DO YOU KNOW — On what day did World War II end in Europe?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The federal government last had a budget surplus in 1969.

States Eye Ways To Improve Education

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Their treasuries benefitting from economic recovery, state after state is considering ways of making good on all the talk about improving education, an Associated Press survey finds.

"This is the year for states to put their money where their mouth is," said Steven Gold, fiscal analyst with the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver. "If it isn't going to come this year, it may never."

After lean years that saw cutbacks and salary freezes through the 1982 and 1983 recession, most state legislatures are finding budget surpluses, the AP survey found.

The upturn is attributed to both economic improvement that has enhanced tax revenues and to the budget cutting states resorted to in 1982 and 1983, Gold said. "Nearly all the states are in much better shape than they were before. ... Compared to '82 and '83 things are better, but they could hardly have gotten worse."

While at least 15 states are considering some kind of tax cut, many are looking for ways to put more money into education.

Many states are considering proposals for merit pay or other teacher incentives such as "career ladder" advancement plans, new testing programs for students, and increased standards for teachers. Such career and pay advancement programs based on performance were a recommendation common to the many recent studies on education.

Some states are stepping up levels of state support for local school districts or raising teacher pay. Boosts of 10 percent or more in teacher salaries or other education support are on the table in states including California, Georgia, Alabama, Kansas, Connecticut, Vermont, Utah and Nevada.

"1983 was such a bad year that despite all the attention to education, many of them couldn't do anything because of a lack of funds," said Sharon Brown of the legislative organization's Washington office.

In Oklahoma, facing a $120 million shortfall due to depressed oil prices, Gov. George Nigh has proposed a 5 percent pay raise for teachers and a new career ladder program — the first pay raise for teachers or state workers there in three years.

In Massachusetts, Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is proposing a four-year, $220 million schools program, less ambitious than one he failed to win last year. It would establish statewide skills testing for students and give teachers a salary increase while subjecting them to periodic evaluations and tightened certification and tenure requirements.

"This is the year we're going to have to do something — and I mean something fundamental, something sweeping," Dukakis said.

In Nevada, Gov. Dick Bryan proposed a 25 percent increase in education support over two years, including a 15 percent pay increase.

Minnesota, with a $1 billion surplus projected, is considering major education changes as well as a $604 million tax cut proposed by Democratic Gov. Rudy Perpich.

Perpich proposes a voucher plan to let 11th- and 12th-grade students go to the public school of their choice without regard for district lines; he has also proposed a swap of tax responsibilities with local governments that would increase state support of schools to 80 percent from 63 percent. And he would increase state spending for kindergarten through post-secondary education by 19 percent over two years.

In Alabama, Gov. George Wallace is proposing career ladders, teacher evaluations and a 15 percent raise for tenured teachers — while state workers would go without a cost-of-living raise.

The AP survey found that in sharp contrast to the fight over federal deficits and budget cuts, some states are expecting huge surpluses: $986 million in California, $600 million to $800 million in New Jersey, $400 million in Wisconsin, at least $268 million in New York.

"My expectation is at least a dozen states will lower taxes this year," said Gold. "But overall, most states are not going to be cutting taxes, and most states that do, it's going to be a fairly modest cut."

States with serious tax cut proposals on the table include: Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. And in Maryland a small cut for Social Security recipients was passed last month.

The AP survey also found tax increases proposed by governors or legislative leaders in at least 14 states. In many cases states are looking at gasoline tax increases for roadbuilding or at increases in cigarette and liquor levies.

There are some big exceptions to the economic good times, too. The decline in oil prices has hit states that depend on oil taxes or get oil royalties; Texas is facing a $1 billion shortfall over the coming biennium, Oklahoma has a $120 million shortfall, and Louisiana has a $100 million deficit.

Looking for new sources of money, at least eight states have proposals for establishing a state lottery: Missouri, Mississippi, Iowa, Indiana, Hawaii, New Mexico, Alabama and Oklahoma. But with the pressure for new money reduced, passage won't be easy in many of them.

"When we've got plenty of money we think about morals, and we've got plenty of money this year," said Alabama state Sen. Earl Hilliard.

Social issues are generally quiet this year, the survey found. In North Carolina, GOP Gov. Jim Martin wants to cut state abortion money for poor women, while Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes wants to remove all restrictions on state money for Medicaid abortions.

South Carolina has a $90 million proposal for indigent health care and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo proposes a 10 percent increase in the state's basic welfare grant, the first such increase since 1981.

Mandatory seat belts and raising the legal drinking age are issues in many states. But in several — Wyoming, Kansas and Wisconsin — there is significant resistance to the federal pressure to raise the drinking age to 21. States will lose federal money if they don't raise the age.

"Federal blackmail," said Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler, whose Legislature killed a bill to raise the legal age to 21.

Bans on bar "happy hours" are proposed in Florida, Texas, Rhode Island, Arizona, Arkansas and Pennsylvania.

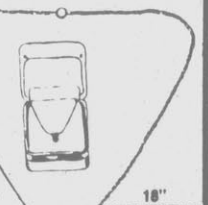

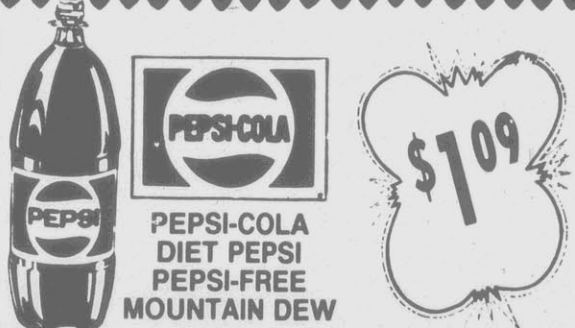

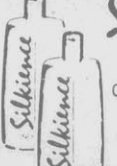

And two states, Kansas and Oklahoma, are wrestling with bills on "liquor by the drink," or legalizing mixed drink sales.

Mayors Blast Reagan Plan

CHICAGO (AP) — The massive defense spending in President Reagan's proposed 1986 budget would force tax increases at the local level and "devastate the nation's cities," according to mayors of 12 U.S. cities meeting here.

The mayors may have to "take our case to the U.S. Congress" to protect local services, said Mayor Ernest Morial of New Orleans. "We simply don't have the revenue capacities to raise what the new budget takes away."

The dozen mayors began meeting Sunday, and another 13 mayors — mostly from Midwestern cities — planned to join them today.

The mayors were critical of Reagan's budget plan, which Mayor Henry Maier of Milwaukee said would force city officials "to cut ... city services or raise property taxes to the moon."

"It is a plain fact that if the proposed cuts go through, we will have to raise taxes at the local level."

Chicago Mayor Harold Washington, host of the meeting, said the proposed budget would "devastate the nation's cities." Washington noted that federal aid to his city has been cut 25 percent since Reagan took office.

Large City maps may be purchased at the Engineering and Inspections Department at a cost of $2.50 each. Call 752-4137, Ext. 234, for more information.
