School Merger Wins OK In Legislature

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina House and Senate Monday approved a bill paving the way for merger of the Greenville and Pitt County school systems.

The local bill, approved by the city and county boards of education, the Board of County Commissioners and the consolidation committee, was introduced last Thursday and given approval by both houses of the General Assembly Monday.

The bill — now law — calls for the consolidation of the two school units on July 1, 1986, and outlines the makeup, terms of office and election of a board of education to govern the new system.

Rep. Ed Warren said this morning that "we just followed the request of the elected officials — the two boards of education and the County Commissioners" — in introducing the legislation. He said the three boards "adopted resolutions requesting" that the bill be intoduced.

"We supported those resolutions," Warren said. "We were just doing what was requested of us. That's the normal way local legislation is handled."

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. said "we received a resolution from the County Commissioners and the two boards of education" and as "normal ... when a delegation receives a resolution, followed through with their request."

"Consolidation of school systems is always a difficult issue in any county," Sen. Tom Taft said. He explained that "historically, North Carolina legislators receive petitions from county officials, not only for school mergers but many other matters requiring local legislation. The tradition is to introduce those bills and guide them to passage. That's what Pitt County's ... members of the General Assembly have done.

"We hope that it's the best thing for Pitt County and Greenville," Taft said.

Sen. Bob Martin noted "we got the request from the three boards" and did "as they have requested us to do. We have done as legislators in the past have done ... honored a request of the local boards.

"I'm sure it will work to the advantage of the educational opportunity of school children in the county," Martin said.

Kelly Barnhill, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, said "we are very happy. From the very start" members of the General Assembly "led us to believe that if the three boards approved it, they would push it on through. I'm happy they decided to do that."

Eddie West, superintendent of the county school system, said "now that unification of the two school systems is official, I am hopeful that all citizens of Pitt County, and each community within it, will join together to assure continuance of a 'lighthouse' school district, which is reflective of the finest in educational programs and services. I am confident," West continued, "that the staffs of the existing school systems will work diligently to assure that this goal is attained."

The interim board, which will have the power to contract for the construction of buildings and employ personnel, will become official as soon as and organizational meeting is held.

School food services, maintenance, personnel and staff development will be consolidated no later than July 1, 1985, under the unifica-

Yards Turn To Lakes

A storm this morning dumped about 1.8 inches of rain on the Greenville area and brought winds of up to 40 mph to the area.

Lawns turned into lakes this morning throughout much of Pitt and Martin counties, but Fred Edwards, roads maintenance supervisor, said there was little to no damage to roadways.

Greenville Utilities crews worked from 3 a.m. to about 7:30 this morning repairing damages to a transformer and electric lines that created outages of power in the West End Circle, Hopkins Park and Kearney Park areas of Greenville, according to Dick Haddock, supervisor of line constrruction for GUCO.

In Williamston, there was one incidence of transformer damage that was quickly repaired.

The National Weather Service forcast cold, windy weather for tonight, with a 40 percent chance of snow. The low was forecast to be in the low 20s.

Ayden To Put All Business Firms On Demand Meters

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — All merchants in the town will now be charged for electricity used under peak demand conditions, the Ayden Board of Commissioners has voted.

At its monthly meeting Monday the board approved a policy that "brings equity to the demand billing situation for merchants," according to Town Manager Don Russell. Currently, some merchants' electrical service does not include demand usage meters. Under the new policy, demand meters will be installed for all merchants.

"The way I understand it (the policy,) it will bring all merchants on the same level," Commissioner Sue Moody said. "It will set policies for everyone to be metered alike."

Commissioner Marvin Baldree said he'd "rather we (the board) take the others off demand" than add demand meters to merchants who currently don't have them. "We've squeezed the businessman and squeezed him what with this garbage collection policy," Baldree said. "I just think this time we could give him a break." Baldree added that he was "in favor of treating everyone equally."

•The board approved a resolution requesting that the North Carolina General Assembly annex North Cemetery Road, Cemetery and the town's old dump site. Once the property is annexed, Russell said, Powell bill monies will be available to the town.

John East Released

WASHINGTON — Sen. John P. East was released from Bethesda Naval Hospital Sunday and is recuperating from surgery at his Alexandria, Va., home.

Jerry Woodruff, East's press secretary, said East will "probably be out one or two weeks recuperating."

East is recovering from a Feb. 1 operation to remove a benign obstruction of the uniary tract.

Dr. Kevin O'Connell, the chief of urology at Bethesda Naval Hospital outside Washington, described the operation as "common surgery."

The senator, 53, was admitted to the hospital Jan. 30, on an emergency basis, after complaining of discomfort.

Woodruff said the operation will have "no effect" on East's plans to seek re-election in 1986.

REVIEWS WORK — Commander Chet Harrison of Snow Hill, seated, looks over administration reports being shown him by a Navy man. Snow Hill Naval Officer Headed Suez Minesweep

NORFOLK, Va. — When a U.S. Navy minesweeing squadron was dispatched to the Gulf of Suez recently to clear that strategic waterway, a Greene County, N.C., native was in charge.

Commander Chet Harrison, the 40-year old son of Addie H. Cunningham of Snow Hill, is the commanding officer of Helicopter Mine Countermeasures Squadron 14. The Norfolk-based unit was part of the multinational minesweeping effort requested by Egypt after a series of ship-damaging explosions in the Suez last summer.

"The job of commanding officer essentially means I hold the responsibility for what the squadron does," Harrison says. "It's an awesome responsibility. However, it's one to which I aspired. I get to have a direct impact on the readiness posture of the Navy."

The 17-year Navy veteran says the purpose of his squadron "is to be ready to be dispatched rapidly to any part of the world and conduct minesweeping operations as required."

In the case of the Middle East deployment, the unit was notified it was going at 4 p.m. Friday and by 4 p.m. Saturday his men had four Sea Stallion helicopters torn down and ready to be loaded on Air Force cargo jets.

The squadron crossed the Atlantic by air, landing in Rota, Spain, a 10-hour flight. There the helicopters were reassembled, and the men and equipment were sailing for the Gulf of Suez on board the amphibious transport ship USS Shreveport within 74 hours of leaving Virginia.

"Once in the Gulf of Suez, we had outstanding aircraft availability, and morale was tenfold better than anything I had anticipated," Harrison said.

The minehunting missions didn't turn up any live ordnance. Once the minehunting was complete, the Shreveport headed back toward Rota — but the terrorist bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon at that time kept them in the area longer. The unit was diverted to stand by off the coast of Lebanon and provide support to the embassy.

Squadron helicopters flew medical evacuations and other general logistic flights. Also, 20 members of the squadron went ashore to assist in the bomb investigation.

Harrison says his assignment as commanding officer has been the highlight of his Navy career. A 1963 graduate of Greene Central High School and a 1966 gradaute of East Carolina University, Harrison leaves the squadron this month for duty on board the amphibious assault ship USS Saipon where he will be the "air boss" overseeing flight operations that get Marines ashore via helicopters.

He is married to the former Dorothy C. Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Thomas of Snow Hill. They have two sons, Brian, 16 and Robert, 14.

Harrison has seen duty in several stations, including tours to Vietnam and Iran.

Harris joined the ABC Board staff on March 9, 1943 and officially retired Dec. 31, 1984. He has been working part-time since then but will bow out this month, he announced.

Harris was 23 years old when he was hired as a clerk at store No. 1 — then on Dickinson Avenue — and as the youngest employee, he said one of his duties was to start up the pot-bellied coal stove used to heat the building. Harris later served as stored manager and worked in the ABC warehouse on Memorial Drive until he was named a supervisor in 1971.

Winterville Board Asked For Additional Funding

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — John Robertson of Talbert, Cox and Associates requested additional funds for engineering and administrative costs for the Winterville Community Development project at Monday night's regular meeting.

Robertson said the additional funds — $1,747 — were needed to cover the cost of the Myrtle Street project. A total of $992 was spent for additional labor for engineering and $755 was spent for added adminstrative costs, he said.

Alderman John Weatherington made a motion to table the request to amend the budget to include the bill until furthur investigation could be done. The motion carried.

Alderman Leland Tucker was appointed to represent the town at a meeting on the county's proposed 911 emergency phone number program to be held at the county office building Thursday.

Mayor E.C. Hines said the town was ready to proceed with some street projects including a section of North Railroad Street near the old depot location. The street now has a slight curve and the plan is to straighten the section. Other projects pointed out by the mayor were Sylvania, Chapman and a portion of Jones streets. The board authorized Town Engineer Linwood Stroud to proceed with maps to outline the North Railroad Seet project.

M.F. Hunt, builder of the Winterville Square Apartments, asked the town for help in alleviating an erosion problem on the ditch near the apartments. The board informed Hunt of the town's policy of providing the labor if the landowner provided the tile for the ditch. It was furthur explained processes for digging out the ditch that would help the problem. No action was taken by the board.

Attorney Jim Bullock presented the board a plat concerning an alley off Cooper Street between the G.M. Vincent and S.J. Waters property. Bullock asked the town to adopt a resolution to abandon whatever rights may have been acquired by the public. Bullocked noted the alley was blocked at one end by the A.M. Mumford property line and has not been utilized by the adjoining landowners as an alleyway. The attorney said the owners of the alley, the Jane Cox heirs, would give a quick-claim deed to Vincent. The board took no action on the matter, pending notification of the Jane Cox heirs.

Florida Keys Is Paradise

By MARK SCHWED

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Cutthroat pirates like Lafitte, Morgan and Teach who ravaged the shipping lanes of the Florida Keys are long gone, replaced by a more congenial sort — tour guides, charter boat captains and shrimpers.

This year, more than 1 million landlubbers will leapfrog the Florida Keys, 45 strips of land linked by 42 bridges that split the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico.

Getting to Paradise U.S.A. is almost as fun as being there.

Emerald-green lagoons, nodding palms, roseate spoonbills, leaping fish and the famous Seven-Mile Bridge are highlights of the cruise down the Overseas Highway, an island-hopping odyssey that begins at Key Largo and ends at U.S. 1 "Mile Marker 1." Final destination is Key West, a postage stamp island less than 10 miles square that happens to be the southernmost city in the continental United States, closer to Havana than Miami.

Key West is the gold at the end of the rainbow, the end of the road for all but the fish, where the sun rules. If there is a single attraction that is a must for a Florida Keys visit, it is the sunset in Key West. The glowing orange ball seems to drop off the edge of the universe as it dips into the Gulf in one of nature's true spectacles.

But the awesome sunset is more than a natural phenomenon. It is a celebration.

Daily, as the sunset nears, islanders arrive at Mallory Square Pier for entertainment that ranges from toe-tapping string bands to a foot-peddling unicyclist in a straight jacket. But the ovation is greatest when the sun dives out of view.

Ernest Hemingway loved it so much he decided to live in Key West. His house still stands at 907 Whitehead Street. Although the author sold it shortly before his death in 1961, the house and its furnishings have been kept intact, as if Hemingway were about to return from a Keys' fishing trip or perhaps from a drink or two at his favorite watering spot, Sloppy Joe's Bar. Six-toed cats, descendants of the author's pets, still roam the lush, tropical grounds.

In this house, Hemingway built Key West's first swimming pool and wrote "For Whom the Bell Tolls," "Green Hills of Africa," "A Farewell to Arms," "The Fifth Column," "Snows of Kilimanjaro," and "The Macomber Affair."

There is no better time to bask in the flavor of Key West than during Old Island Days (Jan. 26-March 31), when the city comes alive with historic house tours, sidewalk art festivals, a conch shell blowing contest and a traditional blessing of the shrimp fleet.

Along the way down the Overseas Highway there are 150 hotels with 5,000 rooms, 120 freshwater swimming pools, 40 tennis courts, five golf courses, a fleet of 200 deep-sea charter, drift and guide boats, 40 dive shops and 130 restaurants and lounges.

Whether the tourist is in search of lazy days on the beach or lively nights on the town, the Keys have it all.

Upper Keys: (Key Largo through Long Key) A must for tourists is the John Pennekamp State Park. America's first underwater state park is a 75-square-mile refuge for delicate coral and almost 400 different species of fish. Tourists will like the glass-bottom boats. The Florida rookeries are home to many rare winged species. Movie buffs know that Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall battled both Edward G. Robinson and a hurricane in the movie of the same name, but they may not know that the famous "African Queen," a boat from another Bogart movie, is on display here. The Theatre of the Sea, located on Windley Key, is an outdoor aquarium.

Middle Keys: (Long Key to the Seven-Mile Bridge) The old pirate haven of Marathon is the "heart of the Florida Keys," with 7,000 residents. It is the world-famous center for tarpon and bone fishing that features a multimillion-dollar country club, an 18-hole championship golf course, yacht basins and a convention hall.

Lower Keys: (Seven-Mile Bridge to Key West) It is here where relics of Spanish galleon and pirate ships are being salvaged. Key deer, a rare species about the size of a dog, makes its home on Big Pine Key. Bahia Honda State Park is another campers' paradise where coconut palms grace white sandy beaches that are lapped by both the Atlantic and Gulf.

Key West: This city rich in old world charm is steeped in the lore of island people. Its history of rum runners, pirate ships and civil war intrigue will dazzle even those who hated history in school. Sample anything to do with conch or Key lime and ride the Conch Tour Trains.

For a free information kit on the Florida Keys write Box 1147, Department MH, Key West, Fl 33041, or call toll-free 1-800-FLA-KEYS.

When the kids were small and I was looking for a career change from bathroom to boardroom, I made a list of my skills.

As it turned out, the only job I could have filled without additional training was one of those phone answering services. They're an "at home" business where a person has 15 or 20 clients and cuts into the phone call and says, "Miss Snowflurry isn't here now, but if you'd care to leave your name and number, she'll get back to you."

I guess in my lifetime I have answered thousands of phone calls for my kids, giving me insights that no one could believe.

For example, everyone who calls has the same name . . . Steve or Debbie. In 30 years, you'd think just once I'd get someone with a different name, but I never did. Steve and Debbie have no last names. It's always, "They know who it is."

And they never do.

I have never answered the phone for my children that the first words of the caller weren't "Who is this?" They always are surprised it is the number they called. When I tell them, their second response is also suspicious. "It doesn't sound like you."

Another revelation is that people who call your kids expect them to be there. That is possibly why, when they're told they're not, there is a two-minute pause while they adjust to the news. They never have a Game Plan B.

It's always, "Are you sure?" followed by, "Wow. I thought they'd be there. Gee, let me think a minute." Five minutes later, they come up with the dreaded request, "Can you take a message?" The message usually involves 15 names, five time zones, 14 meeting places contingent on weather and circumstances, and finally, "Have him call me if he can't get the car."

I don't know how they do it, but your children's friends call only during the hours the family is eating. You can be as cute as you like about trying to trick them by eating lunch at 3 and dinner at 8:30 p.m., but they'll know and before you can get the first bite into your mouth, the phone will ring.

There was one caller who was struck dumb when a different voice answered than the one he called. He never said anything. He just hung up.

When I mentioned this to the kids my son said, "That's Steve. He doesn't like to waste time."

I thought a lot about becoming a professional answering service. The routine was simple and the hours predictable. But I probably made the right decision to write. Today, I'd have been replaced by a little electronic device that wouldn't bite the telephone cord in half every time Steve hung up before the sound of the beep.

Marshall has since moved on to feature films and directed the current "The Flamingo Kid."

Kids Paying Rent At Home Learn Living Within Means

DEAR ABBY: To "Furious in Dallas," who thinks it stinks that parents would ask their child to pay room and board for living at home: ("Children don't ask to be born," said "Furious." "Their parents brought them into the world, and they're responsible for feeding, clothing and housing them until they decide to leave home.")

When I finished my schooling and entered the working world, I, the child, was required to pay my parents room and board every week. My family was fairly well off, so at first I was angry, but my parents told me it was for my own good—that it would teach me responsibility and prepare me for the "real" world.

They were right. That's how I learned the value of money—how to spend it and how to save it and how to live within my means.

The day I went to buy my wedding gown, my wonderful mother pulled out a little book and gave it to me. Inside was a savings account with all the money I had paid for room and board! She smiled and said, "It's yours."

Actually, I learned two lessons: responsibility and love.

LEARNED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR LEARNED: Lucky you to have had such wise parents. Read on for another example of how responsibility is taught:

DEAR ABBY: I know a couple whose daughter got pregnant when she was in high school. She kept the baby and her mother raised it while she (the young mother) ran around and got pregnant again.

Abby, my daughter will be taught the facts of life as soon as she is old enough to understand them. If she decides to have sex before she's willing to take responsibility for her actions, she will have to pay the consequences. In plain language, if she gets pregnant, she will have two choices: She will either have to put the baby up for adoption or she will have the baby, stay home 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and take care of it like any other mother!

If she wants a high school diploma or a college education, she will have to figure out for herself how to do it.

OLD-FASHIONED MOTHER

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in a heated discussion over something that is so trivial I'm almost ashamed to ask, but I'm afraid if I don't find the answer, it could escalate into something serious.

We have a 9-month-old son who has just started to walk a little. My husband says, "Put shoes on him right away to help him walk better, and hurry up or the kid will grow up with flat feet."

I say, "He has 74.6 years to wear shoes; what's the hurry?"

Please, Abby, help us.

FOOTLOOSE MARY

DEAR MARY: Assuming the boy's feet are normal, he doesn't need shoes until he starts walking outside—then he'll need them only for protection. And tell your husband that walking without shoes does not a flatfoot make.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, who is getting married next summer, suffers from asthma and is allergic to cigarette smoke.

With the wedding invitations we plan to enclose a separate card noting that there will be a reception and dinner following the wedding. On that card, we shall (in polite words) ask the guests to please refrain from smoking.

Is it acceptable to do that?

WONDERING IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

DEAR WONDERING: Absolutely! The well-mannered invitees who cannot make it through the festivities without a nicotine fix will know that they will be expected to step outside for a smoke. And those who object need not attend.

Together

A recent report of services performed by Church Ministries United was most gratifying. The organization is not new; but the report illustrates what can be done when many hands, hearts and minds are joined in one work. In CMU's case, our area needy were of concern.

Together they helped 559 persons last year. Together they gave away more than $16,700. Nineteen churches were involved and more than the actual cash total went into their charities.

Volunteers gave many hours of their time and talents. We would assume there was uncompensated mileage involved as well as small incidentals such as stationery, stamps, telephoning, etc.

A large share of the money was given by congregations, above and beyond coping with financial needs of their own churches.

Together they represent the kind of lower level community help people can provide the less fortunate in our midst. It would be surprising if there were not other churches (unassociated with Church Ministries United) quietly engaged in their own works of charity. That is what they all teach: acts of love.

Not surprisingly, utility bills dominated the CMU list of outlays. That was followed (not necessarily in order) by rental payments, fuel bills, bus tickets, medications, food ... even a school fee was included. In many cases we must presume CMU was the last resort for many people. Social service Director Ed Garrison cites the organization as "someone in the community to whom we can send people when there's just nothing more we can do."

It is a wonderful project.

The CMU is looking for more volunteers so that hours of service can be extended this year. The work is not seasonal, though we'd think the need is especially great during the weeks of winter that remain. Think about it. Your time is valuable.

Benefit

Carving up Pitt County into several state House and Senate districts wasn't very palatable for voters or the candidates who had to seek election last year.

The court-ordered redistricting caused delays and confusion. The resulting districts often separated neighbors from neighbors and left most of us wondering in which district we would vote.

The end result, however, may be more strength from an enlarged Pitt County delegation.

Sen. Tom Taft said it appeared the delegation "is going to have substantially more influence than might normally be expected for a county the size of Pitt County."

Because Pitt County is involved in so many districts we have more representation in the Legislature. In addition our legislators have received some important committee assignments which should put them in the position of influencing the courses the Legislature takes this year.

Snow Magically Creates An Illusion

SCRABBLE, Va. — One writes about snowfall in the Blue Ridge Mountains with a sense of hesitation that approaches diffidence. Stacked against the blizzards of Nebraska and the awesome snows of Utah, our snows are like that fellow who irked Winston Churchill by boasting of his modesty. The gentleman, snapped Churchill, has much to be modest about. So do our snows.

All the same, the snow that hit Rappahannock County a week ago was by our standards a quite considerable snow. I put a ruler to the glass-topped table on the kitchen deck and came up with a measured 4 1/2 inches. That's nothing in Buffalo, but in these parts it was enough to close the schools and to paralyze traffic. Our traffic, you will understand, is easily paralyzed by even the threat of snow. It is not necessary for snow actually to fall for drivers to panic, They panic at a weatherman's hint.

The snow began a little after 4 a.m. By 5 o'clock, when I turned on an outside light and had a peek, the flakes were falling in great steady sheets. Briefly a wind came up — just enough to whip up some spatula swirls of icing on the woodpile. Then the wind subsided, and by 11 o'clock the storm had moved on east toward Washington, D.C.

The magic of snow is that it creates an illusion — the kind of trick the Great Blackstone used to do in which familiar objects change or disappear. Up in my wife's cutting garden are some little round boxwood, maybe 14 inches high. They had turned into green leather hassocks with pillows on top. The bluebird houses had taken on thatched roofs. Long loaves of unbaked French bread lay on the fences. Where the snow had drifted, walks and bushes had vanished altogether.

And the silence! We have four or five inches of white batting to insulate us from the everyday sounds of country life. No school bus goes rattling by at 7:48. No one is ripping the air with a chainsaw. No pickup trucks are moving on Rudisill's Mill Road today. Even the cattle are quiet; they are motionless figures over on Manwaring's hill, paper cut-out cattle, brown as the brown-paper bags from Wilson Burke's store.

Only a few birds are moving. Right outside my office window, just on the other side of the windowpane, is a bird feeder. All day long we have been serving a free lunch to four doves, a cardinal, a chickadee, a gang of urchin sparrows. The doves look as if they had just modeled for Picasso: hourglass curves and eyes as round as the bottom black eyelets in buttontop shoes. The cardinal chews his food like an old man with poor teeth — nibble, nibble, nibble — but the doves go at the feeder like hungry lumberjacks. On a nearby tree is a suet holder. All day the woodpeckers have been working on it. A female bluejay, bedraggled as a bagwoman on the Washington streets, pushes in for her place in the suet line...

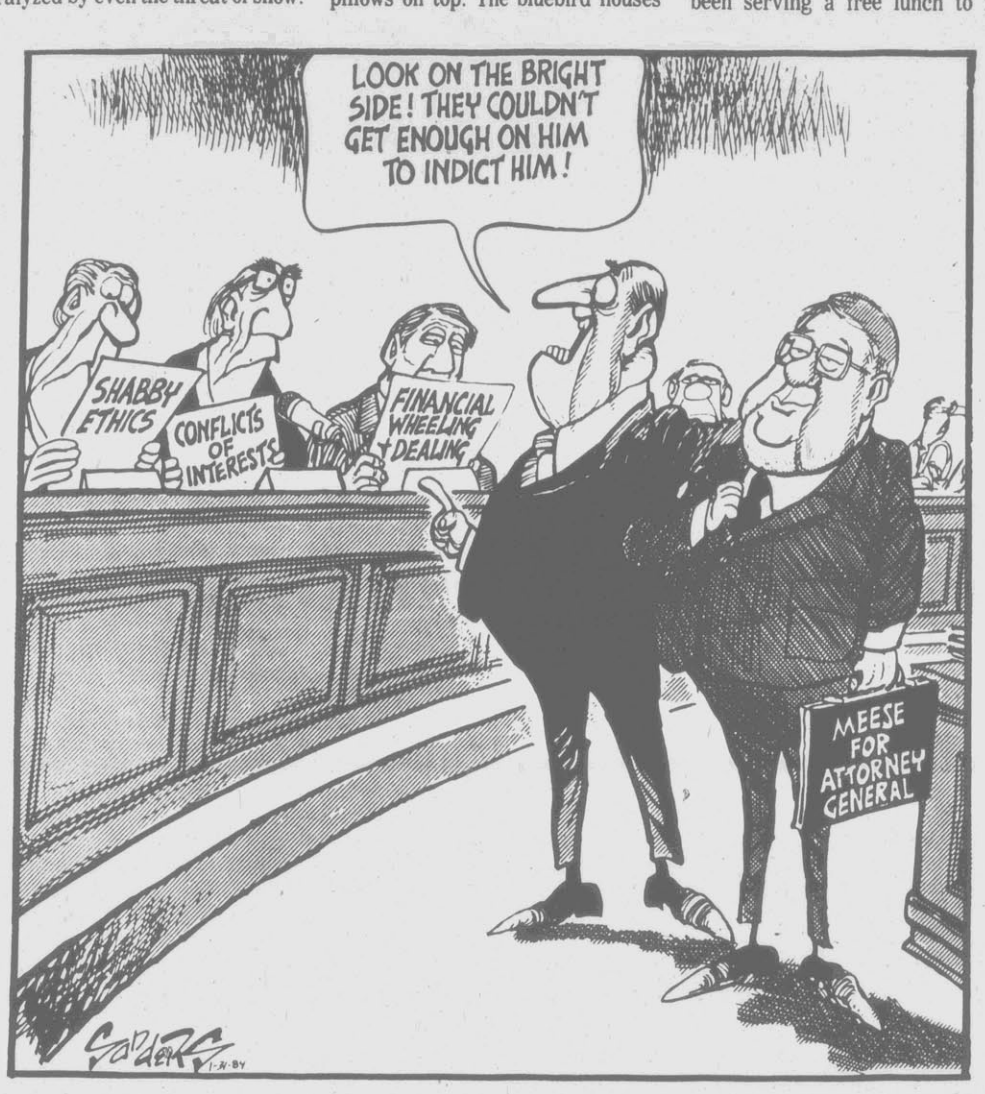

I stopped writing at the end of that sentence because a deer just went by. A yearling doe, not 25 feet from my desk. She came up the hill by the springhouse, as awkwardly graceful as a granddaughter practicing ballet, and stood for a moment by the barn. I went to the window to look. She looked back, head cocked in curiosity.. Who knows? She may never have seen an old gray-sweatered newspaperman before, Then she tucked up her heels and ran down the fencerow, running as horses sometimes run in a pasture, running for the sheer joy of running.

Now my snowed-in world is as motionless as it was before. Twilight is coming on. Against the ash-gray sky the poplars are etched as delicately as the stylized trees of a Japanese painting. The world is black on white, and brown on white, and where snow has tipped the lashes of the pines, the world is a somber green and white. My tenant has come home to his house at the foot of the hill. The smoke from his chimney climbs pencil straight, and then smudges and ravels.

Soon it will be time for my own fire on the kitchen hearth. Temporarily I am living the bachelor life while my wife, sensible woman, avoids pneumonia by sojourning in Charleston, but there are books to read and I may even bang on the piano to break the silence. Before banking the fire I want to walk outside for a minute or two.

There won't be stars out tonight, but I can smell the snow, and breathe the clean cold air of a luminous winter night, and reflect that it is not too bad to be snowbound — for a time.

Farm Credit Offer Falls Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's offer of seed money for the nation's farmers has fallen on hard ground, and cries for more help continue to mount as the deadline for spring planting loans grows near.

The credit crisis, which the administration had hoped would be cooled by its offer of $650 million in loan guarantees, instead heated up in a week that saw bankers and farm groups reject the offer and the split between the administration and farmers widen over harsh comments by budget director David Stockman.

And the administration's new farm bill, intended to wean farmers from government subsidies and force them to rely on the market for their income, is drawing fire even before it is introduced in Congress after the recess ends Feb. 19. Critics say the proposal is ill-timed and would merely accelerate the current stream of farm bankruptcies.

Just a day after Agriculture Secretary John Block announced the availability of $650 million in farm loan guarantees last week, members of Congress, bankers and farm groups criticized it as anemic at a Capitol Hill hearing.

Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said his Agriculture credit subcommittee would try to move ahead with new legislation soon after Congress returns from its recess, and he will have no lack of raw material to work with — more than a dozen such bills already have been introduced.

On Friday, the sponsor of one of the bills, Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., indicated that House leaders had promised fast action on his credit legislation. That means the battleground is likely to be the Senate, where Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas has expressed support for the administration's effort but where more than a dozen of his farm state GOP colleagues face re-election in 1986.

The Independent Bankers Association, which represents some 3,000 of the nation's 4,100 farm banks, said it would press for an emergency congressional appropriation of loan guarantees that would be free of the restrictions the administration imposed on its program.

And Donald Wilkinson, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, is calling for a new governmental corporation that would purchase the shakiest loans from the quasi-governmental Farm Credit System to free it from its bad-debt burden.

All of this is in answer to a farm debt crisis which experts agree is the worst to strike the Farm Belt since the Depression. Many producers, encouraged by booming export markets in the 1970s and by their bankers, borrowed heavily to expand, assuming market growth and the rapid escalation of the value of their land would outweigh the effects of high interest rates.

But by this decade, recession had spread around the world and export markets quickly contracted. Land values began to drop, crop prices deteriorated and farmers suddenly were on financial thin ice.

Block, as he announced the credit-aid package on Wednesday, laid the responsibility for any further action at the doorsteps of governors, local bankers and communities. The position was underlined on Thursday when Block's undersecretary for credit programs, Frank Naylor, hinted that the administration will oppose any further federal action to bail out farmers or their lenders.

But the bluntest message came from Stockman.

Defending Reagan's proposed budget — which reflects an austere farm price-support program — Stockman said, "I cannot figure out why the taxpayers of this country have the responsibility to go in and refinance bad debt that was incurred by willing adults, who went out and bought farmland when the price was going up because they could get rich..."

Maine Democrat Still Optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man in the middle of the Democratic Party's effort to recapture control of the Senate in 1986 is Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, who remains incurably optimistic despite all the signs of disarray within his party.

As for the political blood spilled during the recent fight for the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, Mitchell shrugged off the bitter statements made by many party activists following Paul G. Kirk Jr.'s election.

"These things have a way of healing with time," Mitchell said, recalling that there was an equally bitter contest for the chairmanship in 1972. The winner was Robert Strauss, and hardly anybody recalls that Mitchell was one of the men Strauss defeated.

Mitchell's bullish expectations for 1986 are not universally held by other Democrats still reeling from the drubbing they took from President Reagan in the 1984 presidential election.

But the new chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee insists his party can pick up the four seats it needs to regain the Senate majority it lost in 1980.

"I think the real question will be whether we regain control by a margin sufficient to sustain us through the next two elections when the numbers will not be as favorable," he said in an interview.

In part, Mitchell's optimism may have been based on his conviction that if it doesn't happen in 1986, the Democrats are in for a long spell as the minority party in the Senate and may have lost their chance to regain the White House in 1988.

"If we hope to regain the presidency in 1988, an essential step in my view is to regain the Senate in 1986," he said. "If we don't retain control of the Senate in 1986, we are likely to be a minority party here for a substantial period of time.

"In terms of measuring whether the party is coming back, this will be, rightly or wrongly, fairly or unfairly, the single most important standard of measurement used by the media and average citizens around the country."

That's a heavy burden to place on the outcome of contests for 34 Senate seats next year. But Mitchell probably is correct in assuming that how the Democrats fare will be used as a measure of the party's health.

What is the basis for the senator's optimism?

"We will have going for us, first, history," he said. "Every off-year election, the party out of power made gains, and that's particularly true in the (president's) second term."

The second factor he cites is the numbers.

"Of the 34 seats up, 22 are held by Republicans, 12 by Democrats," said Mitchell. "Of the 22 Republicans, 16 are completing their first terms; of the 12 Democrats, only three. Of the 22 Republicans, 16 received less than 55 percent of the vote in the last election; of the 12 Democrats, only two received less than 55 percent of the vote."

Mitchell also was optimistic about the Democrats' ability to recruit strong candidates for Republican seats. He cited several Democratic governors who are looking at Senate races — including Bruce Babbitt in Arizona and Robert Graham in Florida.

But some of Mitchell's numbers are not as solid as he claims. Two of the 1984 Senate losers — Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., and Charles Percy, R-Ill. — had served more than one term and had been re-elected in the past by strong margins. The only first-term senator to lose was Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa.

And many of the those freshmen up for re-election in 1986 defeated long-term incumbents in 1980. Being a first-term senator is not a particular handicap in a re-election campaign — if the incumbent has paid attention to the folks back home. Far more vulnerable can be the senior senator who has lost touch with his home state.

Added to that is the fact that many of the Republican seats considered the most vulnerable by the Democrats are in states that voted overwhelmingly for Reagan in 1984.

But the number that bothers Mitchell the most has a dollar sign in front of it and it represents the vast financial advantage the Republican campaign committee has over its Democratic counterpart. During the two-year period leading up to the 1984 elections, the Democratic committee raised $9 million, a figure Mitchell said represented "enormous success and a dramatic growth."

During the same period, the Republican committee raised more than $80 million.

Strength For Today

Plato, the Greek philosopher, wrote on one occasion that "only by some divine disclosure coming into life from outside it could men find the way of truth and freedom."

We look upon the created world and can easily come to the conclusion that a Creator must have been present in the beginning. But the truth that God has the nature of a father, that He is so concerned about our welfare that He is willing to take any step to promote it, that life has a purpose, that we have powers within ourselves adequate to every situation — these truths come to us not through reason but through "some divine disclosure coming into life from outside it."

We call this revelation. The continual work of God's purpose in our hearts we call guidance. The end to which our lives are being directed we call providence — realities from the outside which continually strengthen, sustain, and guide us.

Tour To Feature Cardiac Operating Room

Open House Set For Surgery Unit

Public tours of facilities used for open cardiac surgery will be held at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine on Sunday.

Public viewing of the facilities will be available between 2:30 p.m. and 4 p.m.

It is the first time in the hospital's history that an operating room has been opened for public viewing, PCMH President Jack W. Richardson said.

Operating Room 12, which is used exclusively for cardiac surgery, will be set up exactly as it is during an operation. It is distinctively different from others in the surgical suite because of the specialized instruments and support equipment required for heart surgery.

One of the room's special features is the heart-lung pump, a sophisticated machine that peforms the crucial job of maintaining a patient's circulatory and respiratory functions during surgery.

Visitors will also be able to see videotapes of an open heart procedure in progress. Also included on the tour is the cardiac intensive care unit, where patients are admitted immediately following surgery for skilled nursing care and careful observation.

The tours will be conducted by medical center staff associated with the cardiac surgery program.

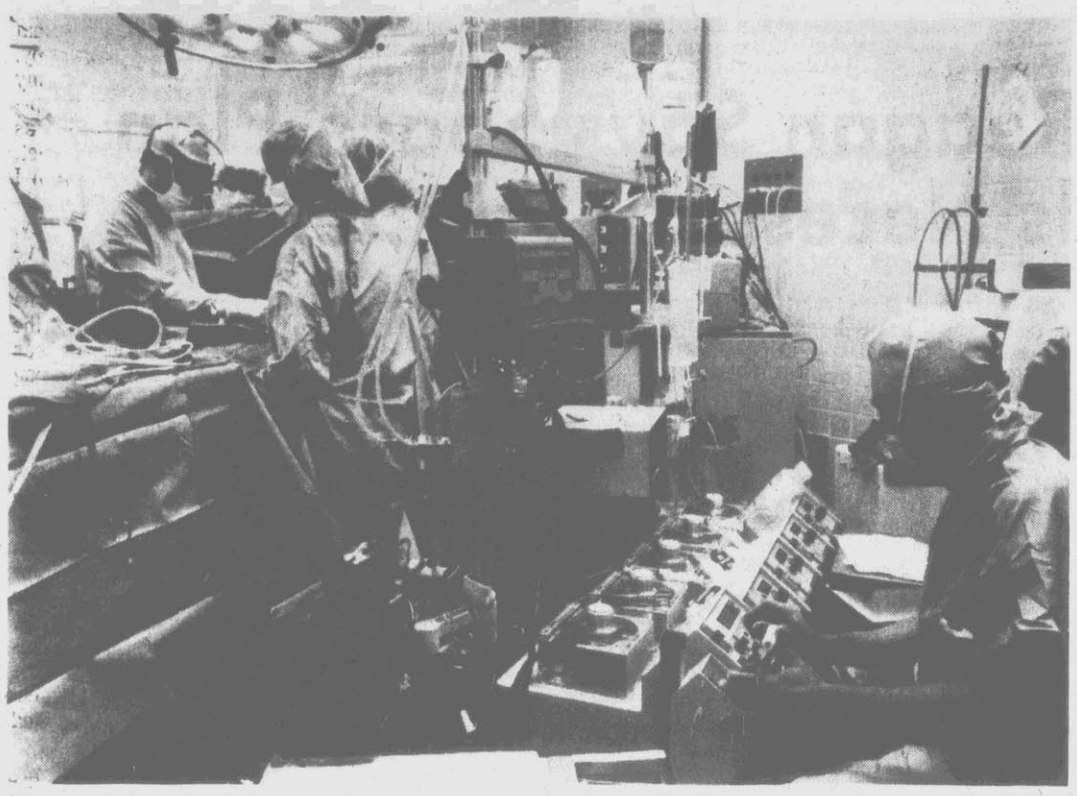

The cardiac surgery team at PCMH performed the first open heart surgery in eastern North Carolina last July.

The week the program began, Dr. Randolph Chitwood Jr., chief of cardiac surgery, predicted the team would perform 125 operations in the first year. But during the program's first six months, 92 patients from 21 counties in the region had already undergone heart surgery at PCMH, and another cardiac surgeon had been recruited to meet the demand for the specialized service.

Of the first 92 patients, 69 were men, 14 were women, and nine were children. The majority of procedures have been coronary artery bypass grafts, although 25 percent of the operations have involved valve replacement and other types of corrective surgery.

GAO Says 'No-Cost' Leaf Plan Still Costing Money

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional efforts to stem the flow of federal money into price-support loans for tobacco farmers, the subsidies still cost taxpayers millions of dollars, a government report says.

The General Accounting Office said Monday the Agriculture Department's inspector general estimates losses on price-support loans for the 1982 flue-cured tobacco crop could reach $164 million over 8½ years.

Losses over the more limited period of July 1982 to June 1984 were estimated by the GAO at $6 million dollars. The agency, an investigative arm of Congress, said its figure could not be compared directly to the $164 million Agriculture Department forecast, based on much longer-range calculations.

The GAO blamed the losses on a major difference between the method by which interest is calculated by the Treasury Department and the Commodity Credit Corporation, which makes the price-support loans.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., one of two lawmakers who requested the report, issued a statement saying it was "unconscionable for the government to subsidize the tobacco industry while at the same time spending millions of dollars to discourage the products use and treating related health problems."

The Treasury Department compounds the interest it charges on loans to the the corporation, the GAO report said. It said, however, that the corporation, a component of the Agriculture Department, does not compound interest on price-support loans to tobacco producer associations.

Nor are measures enacted under the 1982 "no net cost" plan — designed to halt the use of taxpayer dollars for the subsidies — sufficient to close the gap between what interest the corporation pays the Treasury and receives from the associations, the report said.

Under the no-cost program, assessments paid to the Commodity Credit Corporation by the tobacco producers associations were supposed to offset the losses. These payments, which have been 7 cents a pound over the last two years, have been inadequate, the report said.

The report said the Agriculture Department could remedy the situation by bringing its interest computations into line with those of the Treasury. One Senate aide, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said this would intensify pressure to raise the assessments, perhaps to 25 cents a pound.

Ron Buckhalt, an aide to Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Ford, said declined to comment when the report was issued late Monday afternoon. Calls to the Tobacco Institute, a trade association, went unanswered.

Under the 47-year-old loan program, the loan money is funneled from the Commodity Credit Corporation to tobacco associations.

If the market price for any lot of tobacco falls below its federally set price-support rate, the producer may put it "under loan" by getting a cash advance from the tobacco association at the price-support rate. The grower is relieved of further obligation and the association then sells the tobacco at a price it sets jointly with the corporation.

Study Says U.S. Consumers Increase Standard Of Living

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans have a higher standard of living in the 1980s than they did in the '70s and spend a larger percentage of their income on items other than food, a new study says.

They also paid four times more for pet food than baby food and twice as much caring for their hair as caring for their teeth.

The study titled "How Consumers Spend Their Money" shows that changing lifestyles, smaller households and rising numbers of working women have altered consumer markets across the nation. In the last decade, for example, one- and two-person households have become a significantly larger market, while larger households have become a smaller market.

The study sponsored by Hearst Magazines was prepared by The Conference Board's Consumer Research Center, which based its report on findings by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. It focuses on how much money different groups spend on 150 kinds of food, household supplies and personal and health care products.

Merchants use such information to determine where they can sell their products, according to Fabian Linden, the author of the study released Monday.

"If you're peddling pickled peacock tongues, you want to know who is buying them," Linden said. "It's the kind of information that marketers spend millions on each year to find out who is buying their products."

The study also provides a look at how spending patterns and lifestyles have changed during the past two decades.

In 1960, an American family spent 22 percent of its income on food. That dropped to 19 percent in 1970 and 17 percent in 1980, when the government data used in the report was collected.

"This is an impressive demonstration of how our living standard has improved, because the amount you pay for food is an indication of how much you have left over for other things," Linden said.

Americans have also been spending a larger share of their food money eating out, the study said. Over 32 percent of the nation's food dollars was spent on restaurant food in 1980, up from 28 percent in 1970 and 17 percent in 1960.

Working woman were a major factor in the eating-out trend, the study said. Families with working wives spent more than one-third of their food budgets on food away from home, compared with 25 percent in homes where wives do not work.

The study said single people and two-person families have proliferated, and accounted for more than 40 percent of all supermarket purchases, up from about 33 percent a decade ago. The number of households with five or more people has diminished and large families bought less than 20 percent of all food, down from 30 percent a decade ago.

Americans are also more educated than they were 20 years ago.

"By the time we get to 1980, there was an extraordinary increase in the (number of) college-educated customer(s), so that the American consumer, in terms of bucks spent for food, is a considerably more educated cat than the one 10 years ago," Linden said.

•Commissioners approved a low bid of approximately $1,300 from Alligood Roofing for work under the town's Community Development Block Grant program. A $1,772 bid from Eastern Fence Co. for fence work at the old Ayden Middle site was also approved.

•April 18, 1985, was set as the date for advertising delinquent town taxes.

•A meeting between the Town Board and residents of Edgewood and New Circle was set for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 27 to discuss an electric easement.

•The board authorized advertisement and sale of the following surplus Housing Authority property: 600 baseboard heaters, bid in lots of 50 or lump sum; 125 doors bid in lots of 50 or lump sum, and two push lawn mowers. Bids will be opened March 8.

•Russell reported that the town received its electrical bill for January Monday which "represented an all-time high usage" of electricity and "the highest demand usage we've ever experienced." Bills received in February "will be very high ... much higher than last month," he cautioned. The town's electrical usage peaked the morning of Jan. 21, when temperatures plunged to a frigid 4 degrees below zero. "In Ayden and every city that serves electricity you can echo the fact that bills will be very high because of the extreme cold," Russell said.

•Mayor Ross Persinger reported that a meeting of the county's 911 committee will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday and that he will serve as the town's representative.

•Russell reported that all dumpster locations should be ready by March 1 although adverse weather had delayed the construction of the concrete pads for the containers.

Scientific Group Blasts 'Star Wars' Plan

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense program is being criticized as an extremely costly experiment that is destined to fail at its main mission of providing a space-based shield to protect against incoming nuclear missiles.

The Federation of American Scientists made that assessment in a report issued Monday, and called on Congress to cut money for the program before it develops its own momentum and becomes unstoppable.

The federation, which also has criticized the MX missile and other elements of Reagan's military buildup, said the so-called Strategic Defense Initiative is likely to cost between $70 billion and $100 billion in the 1984-1993 development phase.

And, it said, there is no guarantee that the system will work if a decision is made to actually deploy it.

"The defensive umbrella will be more effective in reducing the effects of a retaliatory drizzle than a torrential first strike," the report declared. "This increases incentives to strike first in a time of crisis."

It said the defense system "will be vulnerable to direct attack," will fuel the offensive arms race, undermine the solidarity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and make nuclear arms negotiations difficult.

In addition, the report argued that the program "will soon violate" the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union. The treaty forbids testing a prototype, which Pike said the United States would be technologically ready to do in about four years.

"To assume that somehow or another we are going to cajole or trick the Soviets into going along with this frankly boggles the imagination," said John E. Pike, associate director for space policy at the federation and author of the report.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., alleged that many European officials fear "that NATO is being shoved out on a thin limb," by the program.

Proxmire called for a congressional review of the implications of ballistic missile defenses, "so we don't stumble into a crisis in NATO that we can't get out of."

Reagan, meanwhile, says he would continue "Star Wars" research even if the two superpowers agreed to eliminate offensive nuclear weapons. In an interview published in today's editions of The New York Times, Reagan said that he believed the "Star Wars" defenses would be needed even if there were an agreement to eliminate all nuclear weapons.

The president drew a distinction between research and deployment. He added that he would be willing to talk with the Soviets about "internationalizing" the system before deploying it.

Reagan is asking Congress to spend $3.7 billion on Star Wars research during the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The amount is more than twice that made available for this year.

Pike said he estimated the probable 10-year cost using figures from non-government experts.

Despite the criticisms against the program, the administration is pushing it strongly on Capitol Hill and in Europe, where U.S. allies are concerned that it could leave them more vulnerable to attack by "decoupling" Europe's interests from those of the United States.

The Washington Post reported today that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the House Appropriations Committee in a letter that the Pentagon would reduce five "Star Wars" demonstration projects next year in response to congressional demands to cut the program.

Weinberger said cuts totaling $141 million were being applied to five Army anti-ballistic missile programs.

Reward Set In Kidnap Of Agent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Saying the United States will not "be intimidated by mafia thugs," the U.S. Embassy has offered a $50,000 reward for information on the whereabouts of a Drug Enforcement Administration agent kidnapped by suspected drug traffickers.

An embassy statement Monday announced the reward offer in the case of Enrique Camarena Salazar, 37, abducted in Guadalajara on Thursday.

Camarena Salazar was last seen when he left the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara for a luncheon date with his wife. Four armed men were seen intercepting him at gunpoint throwing him into a car, DEA officials said.

They said there has been no contact with the kidnapper and no ransom demand.

"If the kidnappers hope by these actions to deter the cooperative effort of the United States and Mexico to rid our citizens of the plague of drug trafficking, they are mistaken. Neither this mission (embassy) nor our governments will be intimidated by mafia thugs," U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said in the embassy statement.

DEA agents have been sent from Mexico City and Texas to Guadalajara, a big drug trafficking center 322 miles northwest of the Mexican capital, to assist police police authorities with the search.

Embassy officials refused to provide further information for security reasons.

A DEA agent since 1974, Camarena Salazar was assigned to Guadalajara in 1980, where officials said he worked with Mexican drug-enforcement officials but was not an undercover agent.

Camarena Salazar was born in Mexico, became a U.S. citizen, was a graduate of Imperial Valley College in Imperial City, Calif., and served with the Marine Corps. He is the first agent kidnapped since the DEA agent started working in Mexico in 1963, mainly exchanging information and lending technical assistance in an ongoing crackdown against drug trafficking.

An unidentified person machine-gunned a U.S. government vehicle assigned to another DEA agent in Guadalajara outside the agent's home in October but there were no injuries or arrests in that incident. The agent was transferred elsewhere.

In a speech in December, Gavin described Mexico as a major supplier of illegal drugs to the United States, but said Mexican government was making "significant improvements" in its anti-drug campaign.

Guadalajara has long been considered a haven for drug traffickers and a large-scale drug distribution center.

HEROINE — Rae Moskovitz, 78, is shown in her little Trenton, N.J., store Monday with a black eye and a bump on her head. Woman, 78, Takes Knife From Robber

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A 78-year-old retired butcher who wrestled a knife from one of two would-be robbers and screamed until they fled her grocery store says she "looks like a wreck" but feels good.

"It made me so mad," Rae Moskovitz said, recalling the incident at her small store Sunday. The 5-foot-tall widow was back in business Monday, sporting a huge bump on her head and a black eye.

"She's got style. She's got guts," said police Sgt. Pete Manetto.

The Prospect Food Market here has been held up three times in as many weeks, and Mrs. Moskovitz said she was "fed up." She said she was slicing bacon in the store's back room Sunday morning when a man and a teen-age boy entered.

When she asked what they wanted, Mrs. Moskovitz said, the teen-ager pulled a steak knife with a 4- to 5-inch blade from his jacket and said, "This is a stickup."

"That's all I had to hear," she said. "I was desperate. And I didn't want it to happen again.

"I grabbed that knife and ran for the door. I fell but I wouldn't let go," she said. "He jumped on me and beat on me, but I just started screaming until he ran out the door."

Police responding to her screams arrested Vernon K. Howell, 20, and a 16-year-old boy.

Howell was being held without bail in the Trenton jail on a charge of robbing the grocery, as well as a charge of holding it up Feb. 5. The boy was being held at the Mercer County Youth House on a robbery charge.

Mrs. Moskovitz turned the store over to her son and daughter 13 years ago, but said she still goes there every day.

In five robberies at the store since May, she has lost about $600, said police Lt. Joseph Golden.

"She's been hit hard. She's a tough lady," he said.

Reagan Says Space Plan Is Necessary For Defense

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Star Wars" space defense program is necessary for national defense regardless of whether the Soviets agree to abolish all nuclear weapons, President Reagan says.

"I want a defense that simply says that if somebody starts pushing the button on those weapons, we've got a good chance of keeping all or at least the bulk of them from getting to the target," Reagan said in an interview published in today's New York Times.

The president, however, drew a distinction between research and deployment of a defense system. He said the United States would conduct research even if the Soviet Union agreed to deep cuts in offensive weapons.

"In other words, to negotiate then before there would be any deployment or anything to make sure that they understood that we weren't trying to create the ability of a first strike ourselves, that our goal was still the elimination of nuclear weapons," he said.

The government plans to spend $26 billion in exploratory research on the "Star Wars" plan.

Reagan was interviewed on a variety of issues at the White House by four Times reporters.

Hen also told them:

—New covert aid to the insurgent forces in Nicaragua was "necessary" and "desirable" because "the Sandinista government seized power out of the barrel of a gun."

—He blamed both the South Korean government and the Americans escorting exiled South Korean opposition leader Kim Dae Jung for the airport melee that occurred when Kim return to his homeland. "There was bad judgment on both sides," Reagan said.

—He was "not greatly optimistic" about Fidel Castro's comments for improved relations between Cuba and the United States. "We've heard this before. Early in my administration there were signals sent of this kind, and we took them up on it, and we tried to have some meetings with them, and nothing came of it."

—He didn't believe peace in the Mideast could be achieved without King Hussein of Jordan "or at least with the permission of the Palestinians representing them in direct negotiations with the Israelis."

—He said he had completed a set of shots to combat allergies that he said have plagued him for years. "I always looked down my nose at them," Reagan said about the allergies, but added that his wife Nancy had convinced him to do something about the problem.

Student Dies

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — At least one student has died from injuries received when riot police dispersed a prayer meeting on the campus of the University of Nairobi, hospital sources say.

Riot police moved onto the downtown campus on Sunday to disperse a gathering held after several days of student unrest. At least two student leaders were arrested and hospital sources said more than 60 were injured.

The boycott began five days ago after the University of Nairobi expelled three student leaders and withdrew scholarship grants from five others without explanation. The unrest is the first at the state-run university since it reopened in October 1983 after being closed immediately after an Aug. 1, 1982, coup attempt.

Missile Hits Ship

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes today fired a heat-seeking missile at a Greek-owned oil tanker filled with some 230,000 tons of crude oil, setting it ablaze in the Persian Gulf, marine salvage executives reported.

The Exocet missile punched a hole in the right side of the Liberian-registered steam tanker, Fellowship I, after the ship had picked up oil at Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, the executives said.

Salvage tugboats rushed from Dubai and Manama to offer help and later reported that the crewmen had extinguished the fire on their own and that no casualties were reported. The vessel was heading for Dubai for repairs, they said.

Castro Embraces Papal View Of Social Justice

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro, accusing the United States of perpetuating an unjust social order in Latin America, says his proposed changes for the region echo suggestions made recently by Pope John Paul II.

Responding to U.S. allegations that Cuba is seeking Marxist-Leninist revolution in Latin America, Castro said the pope "could also be accused of practicing subversion."

He noted that during the pope's visit this month to several South American countries, the pontiff said "land had to be given to the natives, he declared that schools were necessary for children, jobs for the workers and for the families, medicines and doctors for the ill, and also foodstuffs and housing."

"What we preach is more or less that," Castro said in an interview broadcast Monday night on public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour."

The United States, on the other hand, "wants to maintain an unjust social order that has meant for the peoples of this hemisphere poverty, hunger, underdevelopment, diseases, ignorance," he said.

"If we are accused of wanting to promote change, we can also accuse the United States of wanting to avoid change. But, actually, neither can we export it nor can the United States avoid it."

Castro also reaffirmed his desire for improved relations with the United States but said it will not accept demands by Washington that Cuba end its close allegience to the Soviet Union.

"I am a revolutionary, and I shall always be a revolutionary, and I will not change a single one of my principles for a thousand relations with a thousand countries like the United States," the Cuban leader said.

"If someone thinks that we are going to sell out, or that we are going to give up our banners, our flags, or that we are going to change our ideas, that is an error. Cuba is a country that cannot be bought, and countries that are bought are simply not respected."

The interview was the latest in a series of recent contacts with the U.S. media, members of Congress and American church leaders in which Castro has expressed interest in an accommodation with the United States.

He said that policy is based on Cuba's "obligation" to ease global tensions but that his country is in no hurry. The United States would benefit more than Cuba from an easing of East-West tensions because the "fabulous cost of the arms race cannot be sustained by the U.S. economy," he said.

In taking up Cuba on his offer, Castro said, no one would accuse President Reagan "of being weak, of being soft on socialism or communist; there's no risk of being charged with being a communist or a reformist."

President Reagan, in comments published in today's New York Times, said he was "not greatly optimistic" about improving relations between the two countries.

"We've heard this before," Reagan said.

Analysts Say Rates Leveling Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates, headed on a downhill path since September, should remain at current rates through June with the help of a hands-off policy by the Federal Reserve, private economists are predicting.

Most analysts hold this belief even though growth of the nation's money supply has been extremely robust in recent months. Such a surge in money growth in the past has prompted the nation's central bank to apply the brakes in order to keep inflation from getting out of hand.

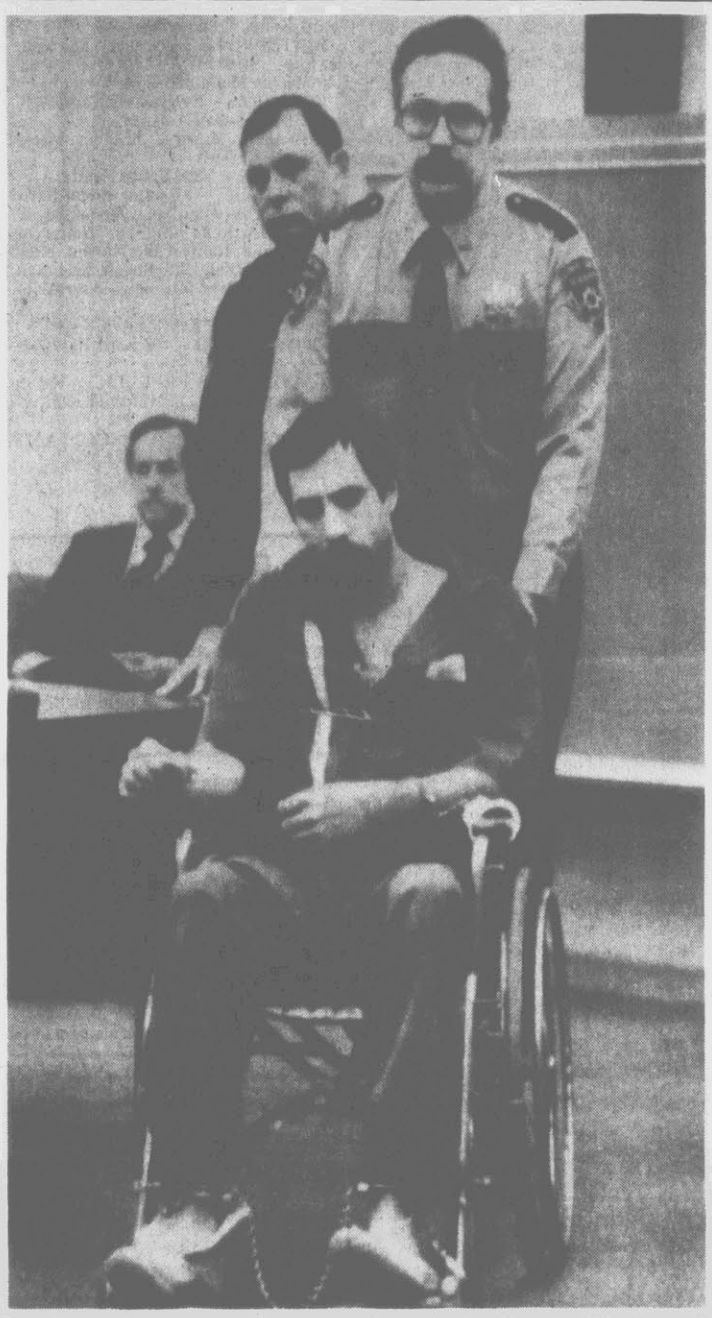

However, since there are no warning signs that inflation is about to ignite, analysts believe the Fed is more likely to take a wait-and-see attitude.

Policymakers for the Federal Reserve were to begin two days of closed-door meetings today to chart monetary policy and reach final decisions on overall money growth targets for the full year.

The group — known as the Federal Open Market Policy Committee — meets seven to eight times a year, keeping the decisions secret until after the next meeting. This time, however, results of the annual growth targets will be known sooner since Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker is scheduled to report on these targets in congressional testimony next week.

Analysts were predicting the overall growth targets will be very close to the rates announced tentatively last July. They also expect this week's meeting will produce no deviation from the current short-term strategy.

"They obviously want to keep interest rates about where they are now," said economist Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm. "They have taken actions recently to keep rates from going any higher and also to keep them from going any lower."

CHAINED — Bryan Stanley is wheeled into a courtroom Monday in La Crosse, Wis., to be charged with three counts of murder in the shootings of a priest and two other people in an Onalaska, Wis., church last week. Stanley was handcuffed and chained to the wheelchair for security reasons during the hearing, officers said. Funeral services for the victims were held Monday afternoon. (AP Laserphoto)

Squabbles Blamed For Road Delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional squabbling over pet public works projects has created a legislative roadblock that is preventing completion of the interstate highway system, say officials from 11 states.

The officials, most of them representing Southern states, urged lawmakers Monday to abandon efforts to add costly special interest items to a construction allocation bill and pass the measure without amendments.

The states have worked hard "to raise our 10 percent share of the money and assign highway contracts and now we're being left out in the cold," Tennessee Transportation Commissioner Robert Farris said at a public meeting with congressional aides.

"We've done our part. Now the federal government must follow through with its part of the bargain," Farris said.

The delayed construction money is part of a $14 billion fund raised in the last two years by the 5-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax. Revenue from that tax boost was to have gone toward completion of the final 2,000 miles of the nation's 45,500-mile interstate highway system.

But that money has never been released.

Tar Heel Plea

RALEIGH (AP) — State Transportation Secretary James E. Harrington urged congressmen in Washington Monday to release highway construction money which is delaying several North Carolina projects.

Among those projects, Harrington said, is portions of Interstate 40 through the Research Triangle Park.

Of concern is about $147 million for North Carolina and $7 billion for all 50 states, supplied mainly by federal gasoline taxes, Harrington said. He said the money ordinarily is approved routinely, but was bogged down last year in the House because of debates over projects that some congressmen wanted included.

Citrus Crop Worst In Years

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — With an anticipated 13 percent loss in the state's billion-dollar orange crop from last month's freeze, industry leaders fear Florida is headed toward its smallest citrus harvest in 17 years.

Federal officials cut the orange harvest estimate by a hefty 15 million boxes Monday after surveying damage in the wake of the Jan. 21-22 freeze.

The Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, an arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, lowered its forecast on the number of oranges the state can expect to harvest from 119 million 90-pound boxes to 104 million.

That represents a 13 percent drop from the January forecast and 11 percent less than 1983-84's 116.7 million boxes.

If the new forecast holds true for the rest of the season, it will be the smallest harvest in Florida since 100.5 million boxes were picked during the 1967-68 freeze-hit season, according to Florida Citrus Mutual in Lakeland, the state's biggest grower cooperative.

The freeze also is expected to cost the state an estimated 18 percent of its anticipated frozen concentrated orange juice production.

"The price of frozen concentrated orange juice at the wholesale level has increased about 6 percent since the January freeze and this forecast will likely hold the new price firm," said Bobby McKown, Mutual's executive vice presindet. He said the Febuary wholesale price for a dozen 6-ounce cans of non-branded Florida frozen concentrate increased from $5.02 before the freeze to about $5.32.

Chernenko's absence is expected to further fuel speculation about his health. He is reportedly ailing and has not appeared in public since late last year.

South Koreans Cast Votes For Assembly

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A record number of South Koreans were voting today in National Assembly elections hotly contested by President Chun Doo-hwan's ruling party and an increasingly vocal opposition, officials said.

The election is seen as the first real, if limited, test for Chun's Democratic Justice Party, but it was not expected to upset Chun's strong legislative majority in the pro-Western nation.

The central election management committee said 75.7 percent of the nation's 24 million eligible voters had cast their ballots by 5 p.m., an hour before the polls closed at 6 p.m. (4 a.m. EST).

The turnout compared with 70.1 percent recorded by the same hour in the last election in March 1981, and election committee officials predicted the final turnout easily would exceed the 78.4 percent voting in the last election. Officials said voting seemed to be particularly heavy in Seoul, Pusan and other major cities, where the opposition is strongest.

Although the campaign had been heated, often bitter, there were no reports of violence from the nation's 12,911 polling places.

The 1981 election came shortly after Chun, a former general who took control of the government in 1980, had weakened the opposition by purging hundreds of active politicians, outlawing old parties and overseeing the formation of new one.

Chun and his wife, Lee Soon-ja, cast their ballots at mid-morning at a school near the Blue House presidential residence.

U.S. Resists Fahd Appeal For Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia is facing stiff resistance as he appeals to President Reagan for U.S. pressure on Israel to make concessions to the Palestinians.

Fahd returned to the White House today for more talks, over breakfast, with Reagan.

The discussions took place against the backdrop of Monday's announcement that Jordan's King Hussein and the Palestine Liberation Organization had agreed on "a framework for common action" toward peace in the Middle East.

Reagan on Monday registered his support for the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians at the start of Fahd's five-day visit. But he stressed the Arabs would have to negotiate an agreement with Israel that also guarantees the country's security.

So far, only Egypt has taken that step. Reagan and his senior advisers are urging Fahd to make it possible for Hussein to follow by giving him the support of the influential Saudis.

Until then, a senior U.S. official told reporters, the administration would devote its efforts to such "building blocks" as urging Israel to provide a better life for Palestinians living under Israel's jurisdiction.

"The major break would come the day that Jordan is able to announce its readiness to move into direct negotiations," said the official, who demanded anonymity.

The announcement Monday in Amman, Jordan, by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat did not provide any indication of Jordan's role in a possible peace initiative.

In an interview published in today's editions of The New York Times, Reagan said peace in the Mideast could not be achieved without Hussein "or at least with the permission of the Palestinians representing them in direct negotiations with the Israelis."

The senior U.S. official said it was clear the Arabs would not be satisfied if Reagan appointed a special envoy to the Middle East. "They would like us to use our influence with Israel," the official said.

"They want results, they want action," he said.

For years, U.S. diplomacy has focused on Hussein as the logical negotiating partner for Israel. Hussein has consistently declined, but last December he resumed talks with Arafat.

"Let's wait and see what the facts turn out to be," the senior U.S. official said.

Students Botch Business Lingo

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — Students who want to become employees had better learn to spell "employees," one of several business-related words frequently botched by beginning business students.

After surveying business students at 350 high schools, a list was compiled of the 500 most frequently misspelled words, with "personnel" and "employees" leading the pack, said researcher Scot Ober.

"The purpose wasn't so much to gauge the extent of the problem, but to identify where the spelling problems are," said Ober, chairman of Central Michigan University's Department of Administrative Services and Business Teacher Education.

"I had expected spelling problems, but I had not expected so little rhyme or reason to the misspellings," said Ober said Monday. "There was no rational basis for many of the spellings."

Ober said survey spelling tests were taken by 11,075 high school business students nationwide. Each student took a 100-word spelling test that contained words from the 15,500 most commonly used in business correspondence, he said.

The Delta Phi Epsilon Research Foundation, which sponsored the study, is publishing a list of the 500 most misspelled words for teachers to use in improving their students' spelling skills, he said.

"I've already received a couple of hundred letters telling me how they intend use it," he said.

Each of the 15,500 words were on the tests of at least 70 students, he said, and 19 words were incorrectly spelled 100 percent of the time.

No one correctly spelled the words "promissory," "mortgagor," "accommodate" and "commensurate," said Ober.

But words such as "personnel," "its," "their," "committee" and "employees" are considered bigger problems because they're used more often, he said.

"'Personnel' would be No. 1," Ober said. "You have to balance the frequency of occurrence with the frequency of misspelling."

"Subtract," "welcome" and "unquestionable" were among the 836 words that were spelled correctly by every student on whose test the words appeared, he said.

Preliminary Hearing Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cathy Evelyn Smith will take her chances with a murder charge rather than plead guilty to manslaughter in the drug overdose death of comedian John Belushi because grand jury testimony shows she's innocent, her lawyer says.

Ms. Smith, a onetime backup singer with rock music groups, asked Monday for a preliminary hearing to determine if there is sufficient evidence to try her.

Superior Court Judge Robert Devich ordered her and her attorney, Howard Weitzman, to appear in Municipal Court again Wednesday, when the district attorney will file a formal complaint and a preliminary hearing date will be set.

"We're back on a case of murder," said Deputy District Attorney Michael Montagna.

Belushi, 33, a comedian who first gained fame on TV's "Saturday Night Live," died March 5, 1982, in a bungalow at the Chateau Marmont Hotel on the Sunset Strip. The coroner said he died of acute heroin and cocaine poisoning.

A year later, a grand jury indicted Ms. Smith, who was with Belushi before his death, on one count of murder and 13 counts of furnishing and administering narcotics.

Reporter Arrested

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A reporter for a leading Milan newspaper has been arrested on charges of publishing secret information about an investigation into the Mafia, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

Paolo Longanesi, 40, was charged on the basis of an article appearing in Il Giornale which said that unidentified magistrates, police officials and industrialists have been implicated in a probe into drug trafficking and gambling.

Bennett Says Parents Soured On School Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents have been "burned" by schools using controversial teaching materials and are justified in keeping close watch on what their children study, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett says.

"If I were a parent with a child in school ... I would take a very close look at what my son was being asked to study, because there are lots of things in the schools that in my judgment don't belong there," Bennett said Monday.

At his first news conference since becoming the new education secretary this month, Bennett defended the Hatch Act regulations that require schools to get parents' permission before giving children any psychological tests or inquiring about their personal beliefs.

Twenty-five major school groups are lobbying to get the rules repealed. They contend conservatives are trying to use them to exercise veto power over school curriculum.

"It's not hard if one looks at the last 15 years in education to understand why parents were distressed about the things that were going on in the schools," Bennett said.

"Parents have been burned. Parents have looked at materials that students have brought home from school and have gotten upset. I think in many cases they're entirely justified," he said, without giving specifics.

He expressed the hope that parents and educators can return to a situation of "mutual trust."

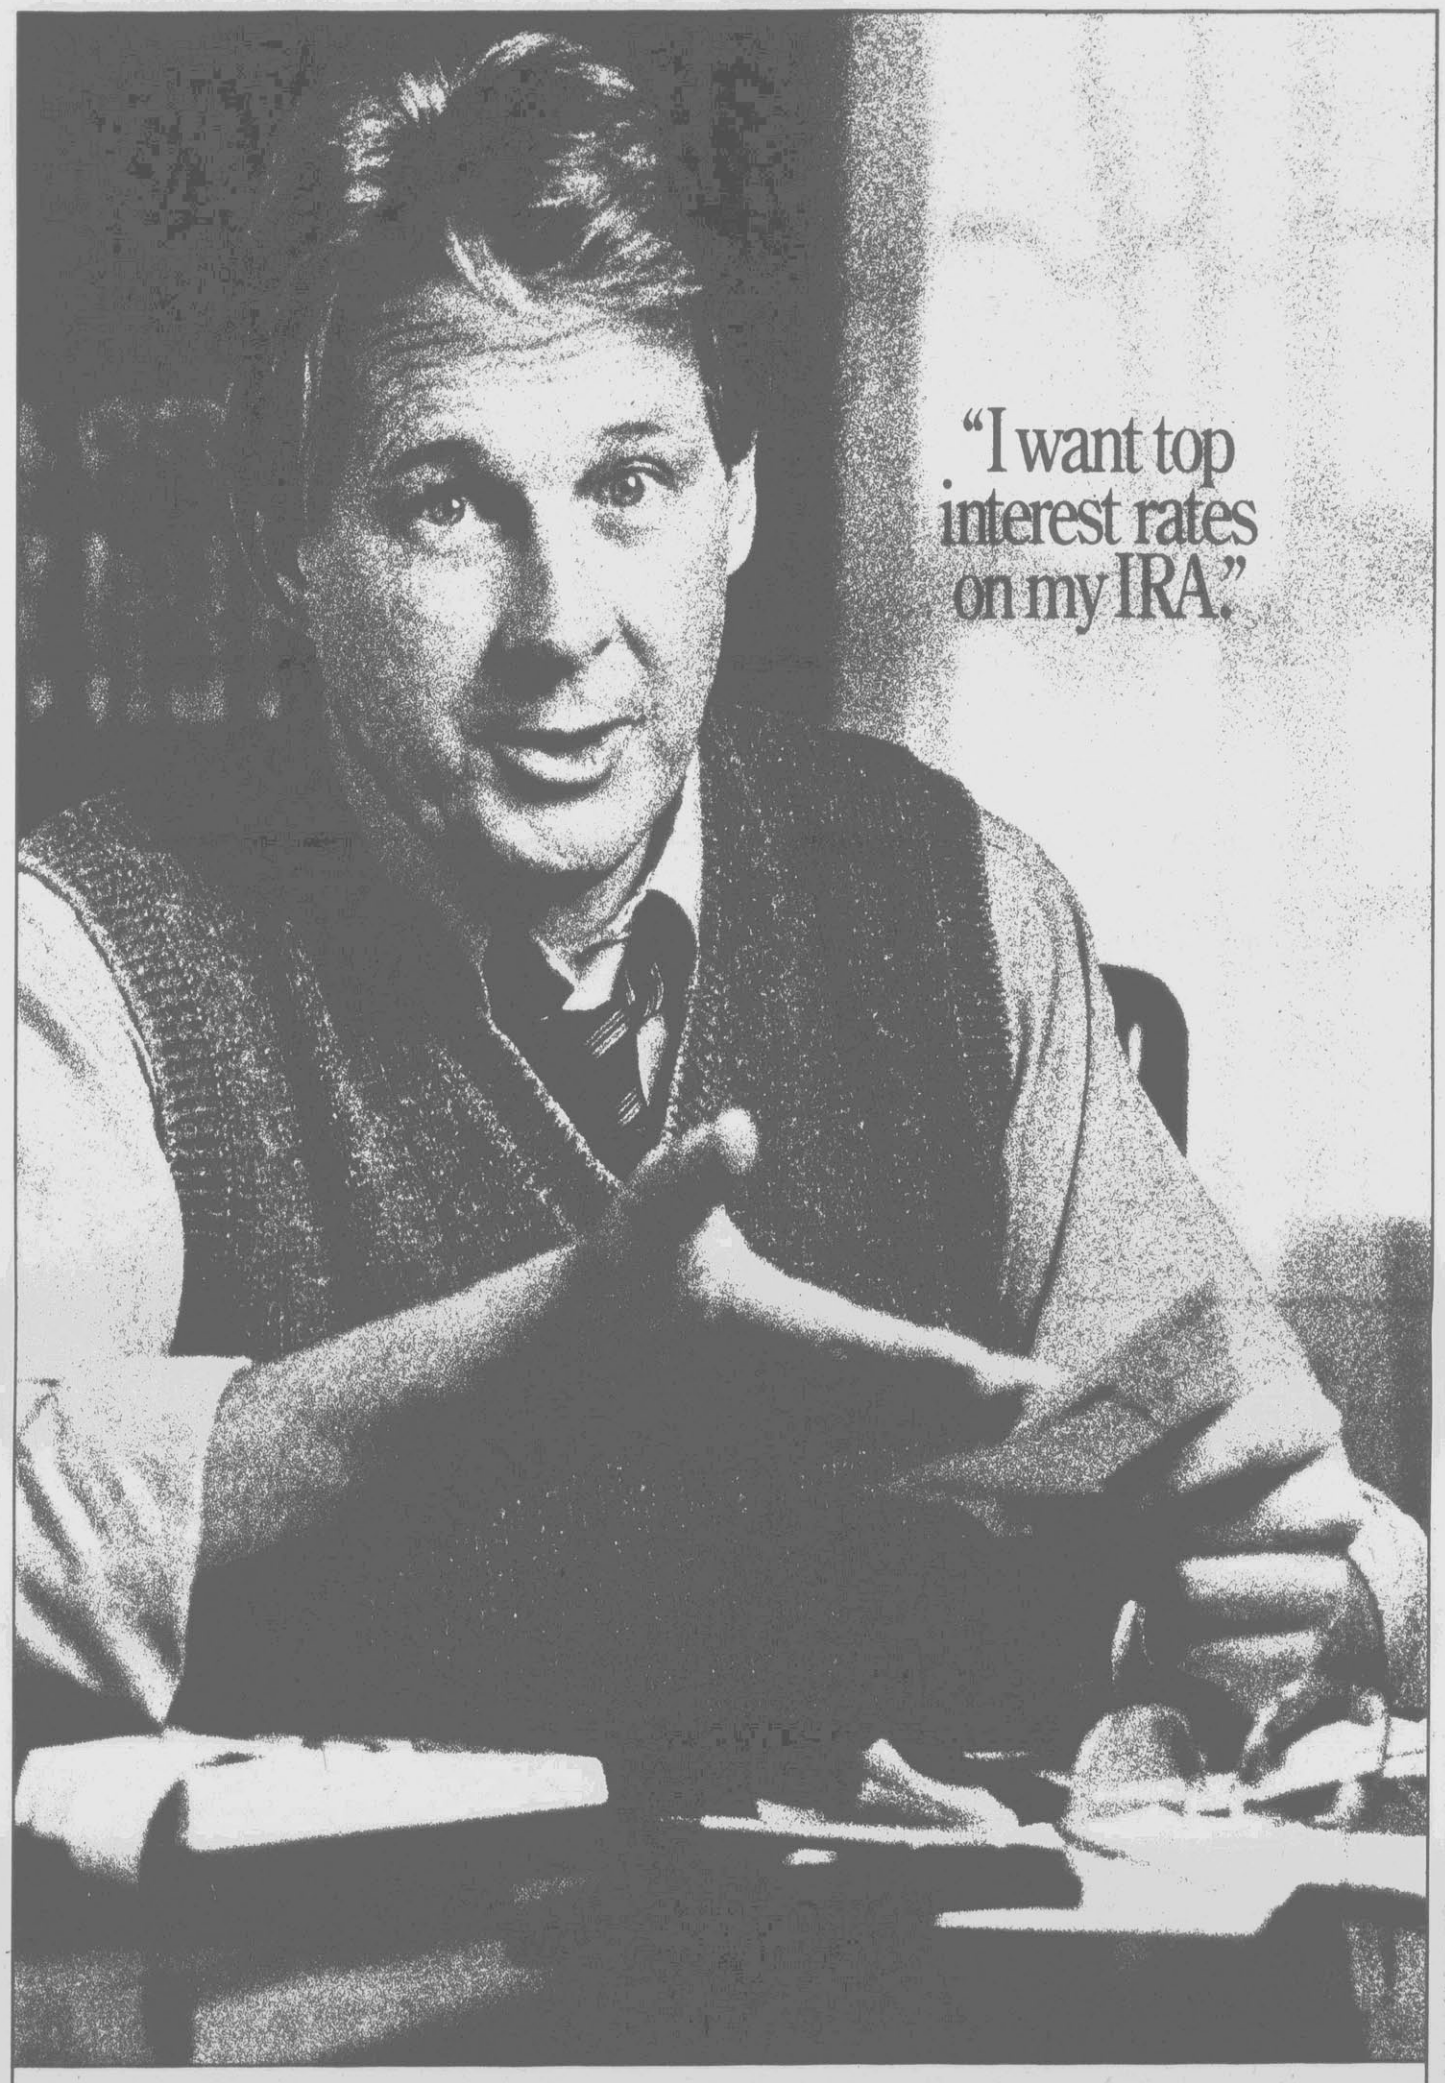

Conservatives have charged that so-called situation ethics and amorality have seeped into the classroom in the guise of "values clarification" courses and exercises in which students are asked to act out certain circumstances and decide for themselves what is right and wrong.

Bennett, a former philosophy professor, said, "Just because a thing calls itself 'values' doesn't mean it's going to be constructive." He said schools should concern themselves with passing on Americans' shared values and "character development," but that "is not the same question as what kind of materials should we use."

Research suggests that "the most effective kind of moral teaching is the example of adults around (children), not games, not exercises, not simulations, but the presence in the classroom and at home of people who seem to take morality seriously."

Bennett said the outcry over President Reagan's proposals to cut loans, grants and other aid for more than 1 million college students "has been way out of line."

He said the cuts were justified by the federal deficit and by the government's desire to make sure that the neediest can afford some college.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today, extending the sharp selloff in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which erased last week's 12.25 gain with a decline of 13.91 on Monday, was down 6.07 at 1,269.99 after the first half-hour of trading today.

Declining issues took an early 2-to-1 lead over gainers among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading was expected to be light today as some U.S. banks, as well as the government bond market, were closed in observance of Lincoln's Birthday.

Analysts attributed Monday's decline to profit-taking and drops in several key blue-chip issues, particularly IBM and Eastman Kodak.

Federal Reserve Board policymakers were to begin a private, two-day meeting today at which they were to discuss monetary growth targets for the year.

Many analysts expect the Fed will decide to maintain its current degree of restraint on credit despite rapid growth in the money supply over the past three months.

They say the pace of economic growth has been moderate and inflation has remained low, while credit-tightening moves would risk pushing the dollar even higher on foreign exchange markets.

In early trading today on the NYSE, Atlantic Richfield was unchanged at 45 1/4, Mobil was down 1/8 at 27 3/4 and Computervision was down 1/8 at 41 1/4.

On Monday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 13.91 to 1,276.06.

Mt. Mitchell Gets 20-Inch Snow As Storm Drifts East

By The Associated Press

As much as 20 inches of snow fell in North Carolina's mountains today as a low pressure system pushed frigid air into a moisture-laden atmosphere, causing Cherokee County officials to open shelters for residents without electricity.

Forecasters predicted snow over most of the rest of the state, and in the east, high winds eroded beaches and caused scattered flooding.

Eighteen inches of snow had fallen by 11 a.m. this morning in the Hanging Dog community of Cherokee County, and officials opened shelters to house 850 county residents whose power lines had been downed by the snow.

Officials at Mount Mitchell reported 20 inches had fallen there, causing 5-foot drifts.

The 18 inches of snow in Cherokee County brought life to a standstill at Murphy at the state's far southwestern tip. The sheriff's department said depths ranged to 1½ feet in the Hanging Dog community and customers of the Nantahala Power Co. were without power.

Travelers advisories were extended to include North Carolina's mountains, foothills and western Piedmont, the National Weather Service said. Gale warnings were posted on coastal waters and the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds.

Snow accumulations up to 3 inches were expected in the foothills and western Piedmont as the snow moved eastward, the service said.

At the other end of the state, the weather service said shallow flooding and beach erosion would continue along beaches — particularly in Brunswick and Carteret counties — through Tuesday afternoon.

Holden Beach Town Administrator R.W. Buck said the erosion was the worst he had seen in the three years he had been there.

"It's blowing," he said. "The end of the road of Ocean Boulevard East is being threatened. Apparently, around midnight the tide was washing over the road. No homes have been lost, but several sets of steps down to the beach appear to be missing."

At Caswell Beach, high water was threatening to isolate the Brunswick County beach.

Paul Osborne of the Caswell Beach Police Department said the road linking Caswell and Long beaches was closed by high water about 4 a.m. and was open to a single lane of traffic.

He said the high water caused no problems with emergency services to the community, which has about 150 residents in the winter.

Far to the north on the state's long coastline, there was water in roads from a storm but no damage to structures or the beach and blue sky was reported.

Paint Plant Is Rocked By Blast

MIDDLESEX, N.J. (AP) — An explosion rocked a paint plant here today, shaking houses, sparking a fire and injuring a number of people, officials said.

"I can't give you a number or extent of injuries. We have a disaster plan in effect," said Joanne Thorsen of the Somerset Medical Center in Somerville, where some of the injured were taken.

Police departments, a newspaper office and radio stations in the area of the Chemray Coatings Corp. plant said they received calls after a loud explosion shortly before 10:30 a.m.

"It didn't have to be reported, everybody's houses shook in the area," said dispatcher Steve Spolarich at the nearby Bound Brook police department.

Radio station WBRW in Somerville received a telephone call from a worker saying the plant was being evacuated.

"All I can tell you is we have units responding," said Andrew Ely, deputy director of the county's Disaster Control Center. He said disaster officials were informed that the plant manufactures paint.

Rescue and fire units from Middlesex, Bound Brook, Dunellen and Bridgewater were on the scene.

The plant is located in "an industrial area but there are houses on the next street," one dispatcher said.

Eagles Drub Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It was, for all practical purposes, a battle for the ECAC-South basement last night in Minges Coliseum. East Carolina's Pirates, winless in eight previous conference games this year, had a chance to move out of eighth place in the standings while American, 1-8, had the chance to push the Pirates a little deeper.

And before it was over, it was obvious that the Pirates were going to be mired even deeper in the basement — perhaps for good this year — as American rolled up a 79-62 win that was not even that close.

American, which hadn't won a road game since January 7, 1984, snapped an 18-game tumble on the road, while East Carolina kept some of its own streaks going. They've now lost 11 straight games and 14 consecutive league games going back to February 4, 1984 when they upset George Mason.

American put all five of its starters in double figures, led by 6-4 forward Steve Nesmith who had 20.

Ironically, American's leading scorer for the season, sophomore guard Frank Ross, has missed the last eight games.

The game was decided for the most part on the backboards, where the Pirates continue to be nearly absent. American held a 47-31 edge in the rebounding department, led by 6-5 forward Jim Lutz who pulled 10. East Carolina's Roy Smith led the Pirates with nine, but some of those came after the game was decided and the Eagles cleared their bench.

On the offensive boards, American made big strides, pulling in 15 to give them second and third shots. East Carolina managed 13 offensive rebounds — but again, most came in the final few minutes after the regulars went to the bench for American.

Too, the area where the Pirates are usually the best found them lacking — defense.

"We didn't play any defense all night long," Coach Charlie Harrison said afterwards. "It was atrocious and I just don't understand it. They hold William & Mary to 43 percent and Wilmington below 40 percent, then let American shoot 52 percent, I just don't understand it.

"American wanted the game more, that's plain. Coach (Ed) Tapscott told me they were atrocious at Wilmington, and we saw them and they were. But they wanted to attone for it tonight, and our kids played like all they had to do was show up."

Harrison said he couldn't blame any one individual, "They're all not playing well. We have some kids with good basketball ability, but they're not using it. You can't get beat on the boards and on loose balls like we're doing and expect to win. That's just wanting to get it done."

East Carolina held the lead throughout much of the first 10 minutes of play, moving out to as much as a five-point lead at 15-10. Prior to that, American had slipped ahead twice, 8-7 and 10-9, before Roy Smith hit two straight and Leon Bass followed with a pair of free throws for the five-point margin.

The two teams traded baskets until the 11:23 mark when American suddenly took control. The Eagles ran off 12 straight points after that with six different people scoring to take a 26-20 lead with 9:03 left in the half. The lead was stretched to as much as nine, 30-21 and 32-23, before the Pirates rallied to cut it to four on several occasions and trailed by six, 41-35, at the horn.

American scored the first two baskets of the second half as the Pirates turned it over twice and opened a 10-point spread, 45-35. ECU cut it back to six on five different occasions, the last at 59-53 with 10:24 remaining.

But the Eagles again spurted away scoring seven straight, four of them by Charles West, to take a 70-55 lead with 6:19 to go.

American ran the lead to as much as 21, 79-58, with 1:20 left before Tapscott cleared his bench and the Pirates scored the final four points of the game.

"Something positive?" Harrison responded to a question. "I can't think of much, unless it was Tree's (Leon Bass') free throw shooting." Bass hit 13 of 14 tries and finished with a team high 17 points. "I guess Herbie (Dixon) played well, too — again."

Harrison said he's perplexed as to how to get the Pirates going. "We can be nice, we can be mean, we can plead, we can put 'em in the right place, but we can't do it for them. They have to do it for themselves, and if they can't then I guess we have to find someone who can.

"It's sad when you have to beg people to play hard. I really thought that they had quit at one time, but they came back. They should have won at Wilmington and they could have won at William & Mary.

"This was their chance to redeem themselves, but they just went through the motions. They've just got to grow up."

In addition to Nesmith's 20, Lutz and Mike Sampson each had 13 points, West had 12 and Eric White had 10 for American. Curt Vanderhorst added 14 to the Pirates (12 in the second half) total, while Dixon finished with 12.

American boosted its league record to 2-8, 7-15 overall, while East Carolina falls to 0-9 in ECAC-South play, 5-15 overall.

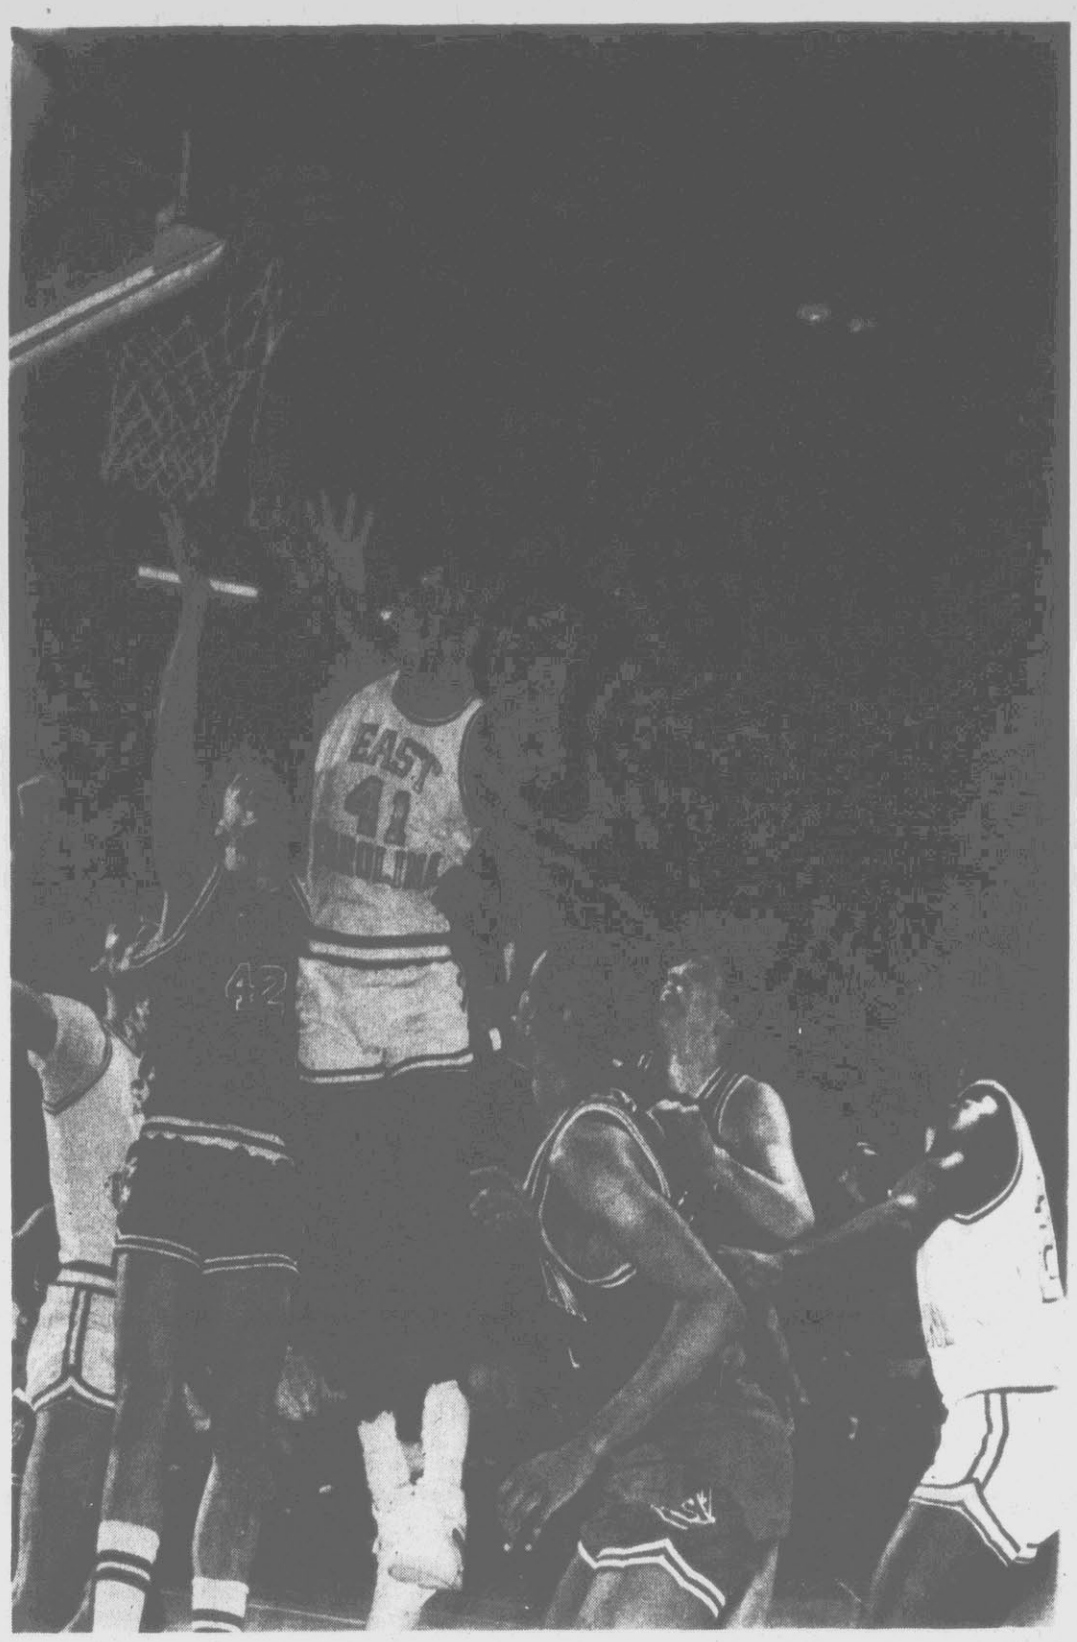

East Carolina plays host to Winthrop College Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum in a non-conference game, then returns to league action Saturday hosting Richmond.

ECU Women Nip Mason

FAIRFAX, Va. — Anita Anderson fired in 19 points and grabbed 12 rebounds while freshman Monique Pompili tallied 13 points in just 20 minutes to lead the Lady Pirates of East Carolina to a 68-66 overtime victory over George Mason Monday in ECAC-South women's basketball.

The victory lifts the Lady Pirates' to 8-0 atop the conference standings and 15-8 overall, including a 13-game winning streak.

East Carolina erased a 33-30 halftime deficit to send the game to overtime, then outscored the Lady Patriots 9-7 in the extra period for the victory.

Linda Jones connected on 11 out of 21 shots from the floor and added six of 11 from the line for 28 points to lead Mason, now 10-9 overall and 3-4 in the ECAC-South. Valerie Douglas tallied 14 points and Sheila Ragland added 10 for the Lady Patriots.

Douglas pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds for Mason, but East Carolina pounded the boards for a 54-42 advantage as Pompili and Annette Phillips grabbed nine each.

Michigan Up, St. John's Tops

By The Associated Press

It has been eight years since Michigan has run with such fast basketball company and Coach Bill Frieder says he is a little surprised to find the Wolverines so near the head of the pack.

Michigan vaulted from No. 8 to No. 3 in this week's Associated Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters, trailing only top-ranked St. John's and No. 2 Georgetown.

Oklahoma, Memphis State, Georgia Tech, Duke, Syracuse, Southern Methodist and Kansas round out the Top 10. Iowa leads the second 10, followed by Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Nevada-Las Vegas, Tulsa, Villanova, Illinois, Oregon State, Alabama-Birmingham and Maryland.

It is the highest a Michigan team has rated in the weekly poll since 1977 when the Wolverines finished the regular season ranked No. 1, then bowed to North Carolina-Charlotte in the Mideast Regional.

"These things happen when you're on a winning streak like we are right now," said Frieder, who directed the Wolverines to a 23-10 record and the National Invitation Tournament championship last season. "The ratings are for the people and the fans, but they have nothing to with winning basketball games."

Michigan, 18-3 overall and 9-2 in the Big Ten, is riding a nine-game winning streak and has won 27 of its last 31 games over the past two seasons.

The Wolverines, who lost veteran guard Eric Turner and center Tim McCormick, who made themselves available to the National Basketball Association draft ahead of time, have done it without a single senior in their starting lineup. The bench isn't deep, but so far it hasn't had to be.

Freshman guard Gary Grant more than made up for the loss of Turner and teams well with Antoine Joubert in the backcourt. Richard Rellford and Butch Wade have performed well at forward while Roy Tarpley, the team's biggest man at 6-foot-10, has made himself into a dominating center.

Frieder, however, declined to single out any one player.

"It's been a solid team effort," he said. "We're getting a lot of mileage out of a lot of people at different positions."

Could the big leap in the rankings give his players a big head?

"I don't think this rating will affect our players," Frieder said. "There's no question we're an improved team. We're playing very close to our potential. But, we've got to work very hard to keep it there.

"Our goal was to get into the NCAA tournament this year, but now we can maybe aim higher. We've got a chance to win the Big Ten, but we got to play five of our next seven games on the road — including our next three in a row."

St. John's received 63 of 64 first-place votes and 1,279 points from the nationwide panel. The Redmen are currently on the nation's longest Division I winning streak — 14 games — and they set a Big East Conference record with Saturday's 70-68 decision over Villanova, 11 consecutive league victories.

Georgetown, which received the other first-place vote, was named second on every other ballot to finish with 1,217 points.

Michigan finished with 1,044 points. The Wolverines, who beat Big Ten foes Purdue and Illinois during the week, have improved from 18th to 10th to eighth to third in the past four polls. On Thursday, Michigan will face Iowa, which trails by just one-half game in the race for the automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

"I'm sure this will give Iowa incentive to knock off a good team," Frieder said. "You know, we can go in there and play well and still lose. We're just going to have to work hard."

Baylor Upsets Southern Methodist

By The Associated Press

In pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the Southwest Conference basketball season, the Baylor Bears surprised just about everyone but Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss.

"The last four games Baylor had played super basketball," Bliss said Monday night after his ninth-ranked Mustangs suffered a 94-90 loss to the SWC's last-place team. "They deserve all the credit for this win. We've just got to bounce back."

It was the third straight loss for the suddenly reeling Mustangs, who lost 69-66 at Arkansas and 82-78 in overtime at North Carolina State.

In the night's only other game involving ranked teams, No. 2 Georgetown tripped No. 16 Villanova 57-50.

The Baylor victory was keyed by freshman guard Eric Johnson, who came off the bench to score 24 points. Johnson teamed with backcourt mates Carlos Briggs and Michael Williams, another freshman, to lead Baylor's offensive show.

Williams' clutch free-throw shooting put what had been a very tight game away for the Bears. He hit nine of 10 free throws in the final 3:34 and finished the night with 11 points and 10 assists.

"Nobody but our coaching staff and players believed this, but going into this game we expected to win," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "After playing Arkansas into overtime and losing by two at (Texas) A&M, we learned how to play in big games."

"Our guys just fought their guts out," added Haller, who came into this season with seven of his top eight players either freshmen or junior college transfers. "We're not freshmen anymore. We're not junior college players anymore. Tonight we were winners."

Georgetown's Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as the Hoyas held off Villanova in a Big East Conference game. The Hoyas, winning their fourth straight game after a two-game losing streak, took the lead for good at 46-45 on Ewing's turnaround jumper from the baseline with 2:57 remaining.

After Bill Martin's free throws increased the lead to 48-46, Ewing converted two free throws and then assisted on a basket as the Hoyas opened a 52-47 lead with 40 seconds left. Villanova, which led by as many as nine points in the first half and led 45-44 with three minutes remaining, was outscored 13-5 down the stretch.

"We just can't catch a break," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino, after watching his team lose for the fifth time this year after leading at halftime. "We just can't get a basket when we need it."

Georgetown, which beat Villanova 52-50 in overtime earlier this year after trailing by 10, proved too strong again for the Wildcats, outrebounding Villanova 20-7 in the second half.

"They wear you down but we shouldn't take a backseat," said Massimino, noting that Monday night's loss was the fifth time his club has been beaten by teams ranked in the top five in the nation.

Others

In other action, Detlef Schrempf scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Washington past Arizona 81-63; Chad Tucker scored 21 points as Butler defeated St. Louis 66-61; Michael Foster scored a career-high 27 points and handed out seven assists to lead South Carolina to a 73-65 victory over Tulane; Maurice Myrick's 23 points led Florida State to a 91-79 victory over Southern Mississippi; and Glenn Clyburn scored 20 points and Appalachian State sank 23 of 27 free throws in the second half to beat Tennessee-Chattanooga 76-60.

Also, Terry Catledge hit a jumper with 1:24 left to play to give South Alabama a 60-59 victory over South Florida; Tony Neal scored 17 points and had nine rebounds as Fullerton State posted an 86-64 victory over Pacific; Scott Barnes scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Fresno State to a 52-40 win over UC-Irvine; and Barry Sumpter scored 18 points to lead Louisville over Virginia Tech 70-65.

Waltrip Knew Cale Would Win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip knew he wasn't going to win the 1984 Daytona 500 even when he was leading on the last lap.

"Everybody's equal except for the car that's fastest," Waltrip said. "If you have the superior car, you can sit anywhere you want, anytime you want.

"I knew Cale (Yarborough) had the fastest car and he was in second place. I don't see any way I could have kept him behind me."

Yarborough flew past in the third turn, hauling Dale Earnhardt with him in a fast draft, shunting the frustrated Waltrip to third place at the checkered flag.

It was the latest in a long series of difficult days for Waltrip at Daytona International Speedway, where he never has captured the big prize.

"I've won about everything else they've had here — the Busch Clash, the qualifying races, the Sportsman race, but it always seems like something happens in the 500. For the most part, it's been engine failures.

"It gets to the point where people start making you believe you can't drive Daytona. Pretty soon I'm starting to think maybe I can't drive this place. They don't ever relate to anything other than the driver, you know. It's not your fault that it blew up or it's not your fault you got in a wreck, you just ain't too good at Daytona."

Monday, following practice, Waltrip noted, "People remember who won the Daytona 500. They don't remember who won seven races last year (which Waltrip did). It's a jewel and you need it in your crown."

The 38-year-old driver, a two-time Winston Cup champion and winner of 64 Grand National races in 10 years, has had his problems here again this spring.

He was 21st in qualifying Saturday at 197.754 mph and, on Sunday, he ran second to Terry Labonte in the Busch Clash, succumbing to a transmission problem in his Budweiser-sponsored Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS that cost him power at the end.

"Actually, finishing second in the Busch Clash gave me a boost. My car is just fast enough to win the race," he said.

"I think there's gonna be times in the race when there are people that'll probably outrun me. But I think that the car is very comfortable, it's very consistent, very driveable. It's all the things that you'd want a car to be to drive 500 miles here.

"We're not ate up with horsepower," added the Franklin, Tenn., resident. "We proved that when we qualified. I feel the best about the car itself than I've ever felt here, as far as starting the race. If I had to start the race now, I'm ready."

Waltrip says there's really no substitute for horsepower on the 2.5-mile, high-banked Daytona oval.

"What makes you look good here is if you're on the pole," he said, "If you look at every year down here, the guy that Daytona favors is the guy that's the fastest ... Buddy Baker, Cale Yaroborough, maybe this year Bill Elliott. Through the years, the fast car down here is the car to beat."

Elliott set an all-time stock car qualifying record of 205.114 mph and Yarborough was clocked at 203.814 Saturday in taking the two front row positions for Sunday's race.

"I qualified 21st, and last year I qualified ninth or 10th," Waltrip said. "I've never had what I call a fast car here.

"You can come here behind and expect to catch up, but you can't come here behind and expect to win.

"In 1981 I sat on the outside pole, I won the Busch Clash, I won the qualifying race and I was leading the 500 when I went out. That was a fast car. I've not run much better here since then than I am now.

"But I know one thing for sure: there's no way I'm going into this race thinking I'm not going to win it. I expect to win every race I run and this one's no exception.

"I've found out it's harder to learn how to lose than to learn how to win."

Moses To Take Stand Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Olympic hurdles champion Edwin Moses will take the stand to defend himself against a charge that he solicited a plain-clothes female police officer for prostitution, one of his lawyers says.

Edward Medvene said that Moses wasn't required to testify in the trial which began with jury selection Monday, but that the two-time Olympic gold medal winner would take the stand and "tell what happened."

Medvene explained that the burden of proof was on the City Attorney to prove Moses' guilt, not on his client to prove his innocence.

A Municipal Court jury of six men and six women was selected in the courtroom of Judge David M. Horwitz. Two alternates, a man and a woman, were also chosen.

Moses has won 109 consecutive 400-meter hurdle races dating back to 1977 and holds the world record of 47.02 seconds in the event. He won his Olympic gold medals in his speciality at Montreal in 1976 and at the Los Angeles Coliseum last summer.

Moses, 29 years old, is charged with soliciting the officer for prostitution, a misdemeanor, on Jan. 13.

Moses arrived at the courthouse promptly with his wife, Myrella, his mother, and attorney Harold Lipton, a member of his legal team. Selection of the jury began a little more than an hour later and was completed late in the day, leaving no time for opening statements.

Moses didn't speak to a small group of reporters outside the courtroom. A gag order has been imposed in the case by Horwitz.

Before the jury selection process began, NBC-TV asked the judge to permit television cameras into the court, but Horowitz refused, saying, "This is a criminal courts building, not a sound stage at 20th Century Fox."

Horwitz, who told prospective jurors that the trial would last about a week, said cameras will be allowed in the courtroom to hear the verdict.

Moses was arrested last month during a police prostitution crackdown in the Hollywood area.

If convicted, he faces up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine, or both, although first-time offenders usually are given a small fine and put on probation.

Moses has pleaded innocent. His agent, Gordon Baskin, says the woman beckoned to Moses, who was in his car, and asked him if he had any money. Baskin said Moses replied that he had $100, then laughed and drove away, treating the matter as a joke.

Police say, however, that Moses drove to where he had agreed to meet the woman.

Forty-five prospective jurors were called to the courtroom Monday. Nearly all raised their hand when asked if they had heard of the case, but none did so when asked if they would be unable to be impartial.

Wake Christian Tops GCA Knights, 85-60

RALEIGH — Wake Christian Academy got 25 points from Billy Buffaloe and 21 more from Paul Kelly to roll up an 85-60 basketball win over Greenville Christian Academy last night.

Wake's girls also had an easy time of it, taking a 45-23 victory in their outing.

Wake slipped out into a 22-20 lead in the first period of the boys' game and managed to increase that to 39-34 in the second quarter. In the third period, Wake really began to pull away, running the lead to 56-44. Wake then outscored the Knights, 29-16, in the final period to win going away.

Danny Brown added 14 points to the Wake total. Greenville was led by Dan Andrews with 22, while Darrell Harris had 11 and Derrick Leupen had 10.

"It was a good game through the first half," GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "In fact, it was one of the better games we've played as far as teamwork is concerned. We did well offensively, but we just couldn't stop them at the other end. They have a good inside and a good outside game and can score from anywhere."

Wake held the Lady Knights scoreless in the first period of their game, taking a 5-0 lead. That was extended to 17-7 by the end of the half, and to 28-15 after three periods. Wake finished off Greenville with a 17-8 final quarter.

Annette Stone led Wake with 16 points while Tina Arvin added 13. No one scored in double figures for Greenville.

The Greenville boys are now 8-10 while the girls are 11-5. Greenville returns to action on Tuesday, Feb. 19, hosting Wilson Christian.

Decision In 'Best Interest'

RALEIGH (AP) — When he reaches a decision on Chris Washburn's status with North Carolina State's basketball program, coach Jim Valvano said it will be in the best interest of the freshman center.

"On Dec. 21st ... I dismissed Chris from the team because, at the time, I thought it was in his best interest," Valvano said Monday. "Today I met with Chancellor Bruce Poulton and N.C. State athletic director Willis Casey to discuss Chris' rehabiliation as far as the courts are concerned and what role basketball is to play in the rehabilitation.

"It is my decision at this time (that) I have none except as regards to my original statement that it (the decision) will be in the best interest for Chris," Valvano said.

Washburn, a 6-foot-11 forward from Hickory, was sentenced Feb. 4 to a suspended six-year sentence and was placed on probation for five years after pleading guilty to three misdemeanor charges stemming from the theft of a stereo from a fellow athlete. He must serve 46 hours in jail and is required to 320 hours of community service.

Valvano, who didn't indicate when a decision might be made, said he was still seeking advice.

"I hope to seek counsel from people wiser than myself in and out of the university setting," Valvano said. "I will listen to what the professionals tell me about the role basketball may play (in his rehabilitation.)"

"I am pleased that Chancellor Poulton has confidence in my decision making process, but I wouldn't do it (make the decision) without consultations with certain bodies within the university," Valvano said.

Williamston Tops Ahoskie

AHOSKIE — Williamston High School rolled up a 52-42 Northeastern Conference basketball victory over Ahoskie Monday night, as the Tigers opened the final week of the regular season.

Ahoskie's girls downed Williamston, 49-27, to keep their hopes of a league title alive. They are currently in second place behind Plymouth with only one game left to play.

Williamston's boys jumped out into a 12-5 lead in the first period of their game, then extended that to 26-16 by the end of the first half. Ahoskie trimmed one off that in the third quarter to trail 36-27 going into the final quarter. But in that, Williamston outraced Ahoskie, 16-15, to the wire to claim the win.

Tony Doughty led Williamston with 18 points, while Steve Lassiter and Danny Whitaker each had 11 for Ahoskie.

Ahoskie's girls wasted little time in taking command of their game, moving out to a 12-6 lead in the first quarter. They improved that to 24-10 by the end of the half and held a comfortable 35-16 edge going into the final period.

Carla Holley had 16 points to lead Ahoskie while Cindy Smallwood added 12. No one scored in double figures for Williamston.

Williamston plays host to Washington tonight.

Cremins' Experience Guides Program

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

Coach Bobby Cremins, who has turned around Georgia Tech's basketball program, says the tragic thing he remembers from his younger days in the Bronx, N.Y., is that "some great college players became almost bums, hanging around bars and doing drugs" because they didn't bother to get an education.

"That always stuck in my mind," said the prematurely gray 37-year-old coach, who found his way to the University of South Carolina in the late 1960s on Coach Frank McGuire's "underground railroad."

"I used to see them in the schoolyards, play against them, watch them on TV as a kid, but there they were back on the streets," Cremins said Monday night from Atlanta.

It didn't happen to him, and he's doing his best to see it doesn't happen to his players.

Just as McGuire did in producing a national champion at North Carolina in 1957 and winning the 1970 Atlantic Coast Conference title at South Carolina with Cremins' help, Cremins has reached into New York since his first head coaching job. That was at Appalachian State where he won three Southern Conference Coach of the Year honors in five seasons.

Two New Yorkers, 6-foot-4 sophomore guard Bruce Dalrymple of Manhattan, by way of St. Johnsburg (Vt.) Academy, and 7-0 junior forward John Salley of Brooklyn, are starting Yellow Jackets, who have an 18-4 record and lead the ACC with a 7-3 mark. They are ranked No. 6 in the lastest Associated Press poll.

Since taking over a downtrodden program in 1981-82 after Tech posted a 4-23 record, Cremins also brought in players from Haiti, Oklahoma, Maryland and Illinois to form the nucleus of the present team. And there's only one senior among them.

Mark Price, a 6-0 junior guard from Enid, Okla., has gone from shooter as a freshman to playmaker-shooter the past two seasons.

"If I had to point to a key, it's him," Cremins said. "He's in charge of running the team."

Price, averaged 20.3 points as a freshman and led the ACC in scoring, but while taking on playmaking duties last season, his average slipped to 15.6. He's up to 16.3 points this season plus 111 assists and 43 steals.

"We just can't rely on Price, though," Cremins said, "we need help from the inside players." They are Salley, 6-11 senior center Yvon Joseph, the Haitian that Tech found at Miami Dade Junior College, and 6-6 freshman Duane Ferrell of Towson, Md.

So far, so good. All five starters are averaging double figures, led by Price, and Salley is averaging 7.9 rebounds, Joseph 6.9, and Dalrymple 5.8.

" I'm proud of what they've done because this is only my third recruiting class," said Cremins, whose team bounced back after consecutive ACC losses to Wake Forest and Clemson in January. "We're near our goal of making the NCAA playoffs. That would make me very happy."

Cremins and his top aide, George Felton, also from the Bronx, don't rely on the New York Connection, especially since the Big East Conference, in its sixth year, manages to keep players close to home.

"At first it was tough recruiting anyone from the South here," Cremins said, "because the basketball program was weak. But we'll be going more and more to the South for players now."

But he adds, "New York has been good to me. I haven't recruited in the Bronx in a couple of years. I'd love to give opportunity to a kid who's willing to work — a hungry kid."

Just like Bobby Cremins once was.

Leach Pounds Wilander, Tomas Smid Upsets Jarryd

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It was a dream come true for Mike Leach — and a nightmare for two members of Sweden's Davis Cup team.

"I was unseeded, unheralded and a naive country boy, and I won the NCAA (tennis championship in 1982, beating Brad Gilbert in final)," Leach said.

"When I went from the NCAA to the tour, I was the guy walking around the lockerroom getting autographs. There were guys I read about growing up.

"A couple of weeks after I joined the tour I went on the court against Vitas Gerulaitis. I was actually shaking on the court. He beat me so fast he didn't even shower."

With a serve faster than his quips, Leach pounded second-seeded Mats Wilander 7-5, 6-2 Monday to move into the quarterfinals of the inaugural $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships, a two-week event with identical 128-player singles draws for men and women.

Also falling Monday were fourth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden, a 6-1, 6-4 victim of No. 11 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia, and the women's No. 3 seed, Wendy Turnbull of Australia, who lost to Yugoslavia's Andrea Temesvari 6-4, 6-3.

Other winners on a card that was curtailed by rain included Gerualaitis, seeded 12th here, Scott Davis and Sweden's Jan Gunnarsson in the men's singles, and West Germany's Steffi Graf in women's play.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia lost the first set and was leading in the second 6-5 against No. 13 Stefan Edberg of Sweden when the rain began. That fourth-round match was to be completed today.

The rain also halted a fourth-round match between two other former NCAA champions, Greg Holmes (1983) and Tim Mayotte (1981). Mayotte had a 1-0 lead in the opening set when play was halted.

Yannick Noah of France, seeded ninth, had his night match against Sammy Giammalva postponed.

Leach said he is constantly confused with Rick Leach, another player on the tour, or Rick's father, Dick Leach, the University of Southern California tennis coach. He also noted the Association of Tennis Professionals' media guide lists his residence as Weston, Mass.

"I grew up in Boston, so the ATP press guy has me on the east end and the crowd has me in California — you know, wherever Dick and Rick live. But I live in Ann Arbor (Mich.). I have a house there, and house payments. You can ask the bank."

On Monday, for the second straight day, Leach conquered the winds that swept the hardcourts at Laver's International Tennis Resort. He had upset 10th-seeded Jimmy Arias to reach the fourth round.

"Reaching the round-of-16 at Wimbledon was a great week" Leach said of last year's tournament. "But beating Arias and Wilander back to back was probably my best.

"I felt with the way I was playing, beating Arias gave me confidence. And I saw (Bob) Green's match with Wilander (on Sunday), and Green and I play similar games."

Green gave Wilander problems with his big serve before the Swede was able to pull out a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory.

"I always serve well," Leach said. "It's my best shot. Obviously I'm not used to the quarterfinals in major events or I wouldn't be 96th (on the computer rankings).

"The wind was terrible, and gusty," he said of the conditions. "He was definitely hurt by it more than I was. I have a short ball toss. If it was a calmer day, obviously it would be a reverse score.

"At 5-1 in the second set, I was still going for it. He's dangerous," Leach said of Wilander. "He's a Swede. That may not say it all, but it does to us."

Noting the 17 mph wind, with gusts to 23 mph, "was the same for all of us — I can't say it affected me more," Wilander said:

Globetrotters To End 'Men Only' Tradition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Harlem Globetrotters are putting a new spin on the ball, as they prepare to end a 58-year "men only" tradition and welcome the first woman basketball player to their ranks.

Not everyone on the team of court comics is happy over going coed, but head coach Charles "Tex" Harrison says woman players have become too good to ignore.

More than 200 women across the country have answered the Globetrotters' call for applications. Harrison said that the winner — perhaps more than one — will be chosen in time to join the team next year.

Harrison said a woman's size will be no problem. But she should be skilled at handling a basketball and fast on her feet, he said, and she should have "a radiant personality."

The coach said Cheryl Miller of the University of Southern California would be an ideal choice, but that only non-students would be considered. Ms. Miller was a member of the U.S. women's basketball team that won an Olympic gold medal last summer in Los Angeles.

The Globetrotters were honored Monday by the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History as "an important part of American social history." They gave the museum a game uniform, a warmup suit, tour books, posters, photographs and other memorabilia of their performing career.

Hubert "Geese" Ausbie, 45, who is playing his 24th year with the Globetrotters, says the team's adjustment to having a woman player in its midst "will be kind of rough."

Ausbie said traveling by bus will be especially difficult, and he expressed concern over the "wear and tear on the body" that a woman will experience playing against "some big guys" on opposing teams.

Curly Neal, the bald, 20-year veteran of the team, said, "I think it's wonderful."

Harrison announced that after the Globetrotters break the sex barrier, they will make history again. "We will be the first sports attraction to play on the moon," he said.

Toymakers Creating Cartoons To Sell Products

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Television will be flooded this year with children's programs created by toymakers hoping to duplicate successes like Mattel's Masters Of The Universe characters, the popular playthings that spawned a television series to help sell them.

In what is apparently the hottest marketing strategy in the toy business, manufacturers plan to introduce feature-length cartoons, Saturday morning series and holiday specials featuring animated versions of their new toys.

Critics say the practice makes the children's shows into commercials at the expense of other programming.

The Cabbage Patch Kids have already had a Christmas special, and Strawberry Shortcake has starred in a half-hour film. The Masters of the Universe action figures, one of the hottest selling toys, got their own animated series at the end of 1983. The Go-bots, which had a television show in 1984, will get a year-long series in 1985.

"There is a clearly observable trend in the industry that children want this type of fantasy concept with a toy product," said Stephen G. Shank, chairman of the board of the Toy Manufacturers Association and president of Tonka Corp.

But it is controversial. "What isn't OK is to give over programming to manufacturers and not have it identified as commercial speech," said Peggy Charren, president of Action For Children's Television. "It completely displaces all of the other kind of programs we should be offering to children."

Ms. Charren, who filed a complaint with the Federal Communications Commission about the practice, said her organization counted 20 such programs advertised in the trade press for the coming season.

The 1985 Toy Fair opened Monday, and the industry trade show drew thousands of buyers seeking the "hot" new toys of 1985. How the manufacturers market their creations is important to the buyers. Among the new toys to be introduced with movies, specials and television series in 1985 are:

—The "Princess of Power" collection by Mattel, which are female counterparts to the Masters of the Universe. The "Princess of Power" collection will be introduced by a feature-length animated film to be released in March and a five-day-a-week television series to begin in September.

—The Hugga Bunch dolls created by Hallmark Properties, to be marketed by Kenner with a $1.5 million, one-hour television movie.

Kenner also plans a five-part miniseries and a 65-episode series to introduce its MASK action characters, at a cost of $12 million.

—The Sectaurs, action figures created by Coleco, which makes the Cabbage Patch dolls. The Sectaurs will be introduced with a mini-series in October.

Hasbro-Bradley and Tonka Toys also plan to expand their use of television shows in 1985.

Industry and broadcast guidelines prevent manufacturers from advertising a product during a show featuring their characters. Kenner, for example, does not advertise Strawberry Shortcake dolls during a Strawberry Shortcake show, but it does advertise other Kenner products.

The shows are often syndicated to independent television stations, who "tend to judge the shows on their merit," said Herman Land, president of the Association of Independent Television Stations. "What inspires them is not as important as their merit."

Isn't a television show about a toy an extended commercial?

"I don't refer to it in terms of a half-hour commercial," said David Mauer, vice president of marketing for Kenner. "The way I look at it is, it's a show that obviously improves sales of my products because we're showing the kids how wonderful the fantasy is."

Rita Weisskoff, director of the Children's Advertising Review Unit of the Better Business Bureau, said the practice would be a problem "if there is added confusion for the child. We hold the advertiser responsible for making a clear distinction between the program and commercial."

Ms. Weisskoff said her unit has not received a single complaint on the issue, but "consumers don't know about us as a place to register concern."

Mauer said using television shows as a marketing tool doesn't guarantee success.

"If the kids don't like what they see, I would say it hurts your sales," he said. "You don't win if the program doesn't have quality because the kids have lots of choices, and they're not foolish. It happens all the time on Saturday morning — if you don't draw ratings, you're off."

TV Offers Viewers Something Physical

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a new way of watching television — on your feet, to the beat, in motion.

From disco dancing to hatha yoga, television programs are offering something physical for everyone. It's cheaper than joining a health club, and fancy workout clothes aren't needed to sweat in the privacy of your home.

Cable networks are in the vanguard of this video fitness craze. And while some commercial stations carry exercise programs locally, they're usually broadcast in the wee hours.

Fitness programming dates to 1951 when exercise guru Jack LaLanne and his dog "Happy" encouraged kids to wake their mothers and drag them in front of the television set. He's still at it.

"I want every man, woman and child to be physically fit," said LaLanne. "If you don't exercise, you can't be physically fit, and if you're not physically fit, you have nothing."

After more than a quarter of a century, the "Jack LaLanne Show" went off the air in 1979, but the 70-year-old muscle man is making a comeback. He's currently negotiating a TV deal for his "Wake Up America," a daily, half-hour program produced from his home in Moro Bay, Calif. LaLanne is also marketing a videotaped regimen.

If LaLanne's rigid physique isn't the inspiration you need, there are women in skimpy leotards demonstrating various aerobic exercises to the home audience in the syndicated "20-Minute Workout." Designed to become part of the viewers' daily routine, the show starts with slow stretches and builds to jogging in place to raise the heart rate, followed by a cool-down period.

Throughout the routine, women who don't need much toning up themselves demonstrate proper breathing, while exhaling through pouting, painted lips.

Showtime, a pay-TV channel, carries "Aerobicise" as filler between movies. The fit, firm female bodies are accentuated by scanty outfits, tight camera shots and throbbing rock music.

Not all the exercise shows are suggestive, though.

The Disney Channel, a cable supplier, was first to target children with "Mousercise," featuring members of the Mickey Mouse Health Club. Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy make daily appearances to encourage Mousercisers to stretch their bodies as well as their imaginations.

ABC also is aiming at children in its first national exercise segment. "ABC Fun Fit," set to begin this September, will feature kids doing aerobic exercise to popular music. The three-minute segments will be shown Saturday mornings.

But the bulk of the body shows are aimed at adults, who can choose from homey living room decor with girl-next-door instructors or bare backgrounds with sexy hostesses.

Other shows are aimed at blacks, Hispanics, office workers and yogis.

Cable News Network interrupts its news coverage three times a day with a two-minute "Fitness Break," featuring exercises that can be done anywhere, including sitting at a desk.

And the Christian Broadcasting Network carries "Fit For Life."

"Lilias, Yoga and You," first produced in 1970 by WCET in Cincinnati, is no longer in production, but the reruns still command a loyal following on many Public Broadcasting Service stations.

A video recorder offers another whole realm of packaged exercises.

"The Jane Fonda Workout," which stirred the home video market three years ago, has been emulated by many, including Raquel Welch. And there's also Playboy Video, which offers the "Playmate Workout."

For those who need a more disciplined approach to exercise, Vestron Video produces the "Armed Forces Workout," narrated by Bill Dower, the Marine drill instructor who trained Lou Gossett for his role in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Rather than dance routines, Dower concentrates on old-fashioned boot camp basics: squat thrusts, jumping jacks, toe touches and push-ups. The tape, which begins with reveille and a flag raising, is not just an exercise routine — it's a motivational aid.

Is this what they mean when they say TV is an involving medium?

Manila March

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than 10,000 protesters, most of them Roman Catholic school children, marched through Manila's tourist district to protest sexual exploitation of women, child prostitution and pornographic comic books.

The marchers sang hymns and waved banners as they converged on a downtown park where Mayor Ramon Bagatsing set fire to a 12-foot-high incinerator stacked with publications the group considered offensive.

Roman Catholic nuns, high school and college students wearing uniforms and carrying school books, members of civic groups and a U.S. senator joined the protest which stopped traffic along Del Pilar street for nearly an hour.

U.S. Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who has been on a trip to the Philippines, spoke to the crowd at the park and said he supported the group as a "fellow Roman Catholic."

Fruit Company's Pullout Leaves Costa Rica In Economic Shambles

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — United Brands, successor to a giant fruit company once synonymous with yankee imperialism in Central America, is pulling out of its huge banana plantations in southwestern Costa Rica.

The move already has cost the jobs of 2,000 members of a work force of 3,000, brought the isolated area's economy to a virtual standstill and left the Costa Rican government scrambling to find a way to sustain the region.

The government, after months of negotiations with the American firm, has reached a tentative agreement that will permit it to salvage at least some of the lost banana production.

Danilo Jimenez Veiga, Minister of the Presidency, said late last week that the tentative pact, if finally approved, would "buy time and social peace while we prepare new development projects" in the region.

Under the tentative agreement, Jimenez Veiga said, Costa Rica will buy about 2,900 acres of the 7,500 acres in United Brands' Golfito Division for $1.25 million, about a sixth of what the fruit company originally asked.

In addition, United Brands would buy up to 4 million boxes of bananas annually from the government once the 2,900 abandoned acres are back in production, a process that could take up to a year or more.

Jimenez Veiga said the price per 44-pound box had not yet been fixed, but would include a 70 cent export tax and a 40 cent surcharge for disease control.

The government said it would employ about 1,200 workers on the land it plans to buy from the fruit company, slightly more than a third of those formerly employed.

United Brands had been gradually reducing its operation on Costa Rica's southwest coast for several years, citing weak demand, rising labor costs and increased competition.

Then, last November, it announced it was pulling out altogether, leaving an area that had come to depend on it with virtually no other industry.

That followed a 57-day strike by banana workers that left the untilled plantations in ruins. What was left after the strike was further devastated by heavy rains and floods and an outbreak of sigatoka, a crippling plant disease.

United Fruit Co., which later became Standard Brands, began work on the Golfito Division in 1936 and by the 1950s was shipping 16 percent of the world's bananas from southwestern Costa Rica.

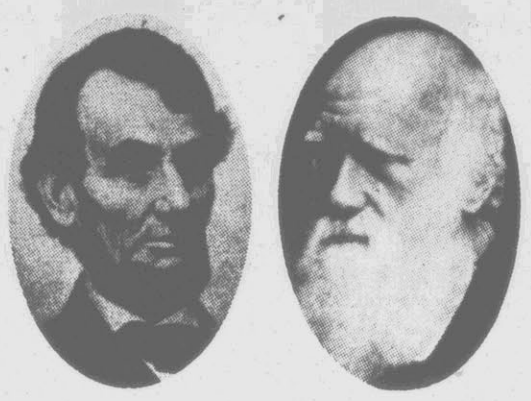

United Fruit Co. had been active in Costa Rica since 1899.It was born in that year of a merger of the Boston Fruit Co. and the Tropical Fruit and Trading Co. and soon became known in Central America as "the octopus."

But worldwide overproduction, tough competition from other Latin American countries and steadily increasing production costs gradually whittled away at the operation.

"The West Coast is now being supplied by Panama, Ecuador and Nicaragua, all of which land fruit in the United States at prices well below our costs," said Richard Johnson, United Brands manager in Costa Rica.

"Ecuador bananas pay no export tax and the Ecuadorian government subsidizes maritime fuel costs for banana shipments," Johnson said. "And now the Sandinistas are shipping out of Chinandega (Nicaragua) and landing bananas in Los Angeles at half of our Golfito price."

Two Famous Birthdays

Two famous figures — Abraham Lincoln and Charles Darwin — were both born on February 12, 1809. At 6 feet 4 inches, Lincoln was the tallest President. When he courted his future wife, his main rival was Stephen Douglas — whom he later debated during a Senate election campaign in 1858. Darwin was nicknamed "Gas" by his schoolmates because of the chemistry experiments he performed. His headmaster rebuked him for "wasting time" on these projects.

TOKYO (AP) — Vietnam's official Radio Hanoi claims Chinese forces along the Vietnamese border fired 3,000 rounds of shells and rockets into Vietnamese villages in two separate attacks, causing damage to residents and property.

In the first attack, Chinese artillery fired 2,000 rounds of shells against locations in Vietnam's Ha Tuyen state for more than six hours until noon Monday, Radio Hanoi said in a report monitored in Tokyo.

The Chairman of the Board — the Goren Editorial Board, that is — Richard L. Frey celebrates his 80th birthday today. In the 1930s, Frey was a member of the Four Aces team that dominated bridge. He left the team to become business manager for Ely Culbertson. When the American Contract Bridge League created the master point scheme, Frey became Life Master No. 8.

He still is a prolific writer whose articles appear in many magazines. In his days as editor of the ACBL Bulletin, he raised the standard of that publication to where it was regarded as one of the world's premier bridge magazines.

That he retains considerable prowess as a player is evident from this hand from a recent rubber bridge game. His reverse bid might not be to everyone's taste, but the final contract was certainly reasonable.

West led the four of spades, and Frey won in hand with the jack. Since a 3-3 heart break was only about a 35 percent chance, Frey decided to look for a better line. He ran the nine of spades at trick two, and when that held he continued with a spade to the queen. East sluffed clubs on these two tricks.

Since a club finesse was not likely to help, Frey led a club to the ace, on which West played the nine. In case West started with the 10-9, declarer continued with the queen of clubs. East won the king and shifted to a diamond, the ten losing to the jack. West led a spade to the table's ace, and declarer came to hand with a diamond to the ace to lead a heart. When West followed with a low heart, declarer inserted the table's eight.

East won the ten of hearts and continued with the king, but declarer allowed him to hold the trick. East's goose was cooked — if he returned a heart, dummy would score the last three tricks. If, instead, he played a club, declarer would take the last three tricks in hand.

Well played, and happy birthday, Dick!

An area offering inducements to travelers with varied interests

A One-Day's Journey To Savor The Attractions Of Coastal Hyde County

Text and Photographs by Jerry Raynor

On US 264 fifty-seven miles east of Greenville is the western boundary of Hyde County at Leechville Bridge spanning the Pungo River. People in Hyde are not prone to making exaggerated claims, but as any native will tell you, or as a traveler will soon happily discover, Hyde County has a lot to offer in several areas — history, bountiful wildlife for the huntsman and fisherman, picturesque fishing villages and fishing boats of all sizes, huge spreads of farmland, large inland bodies of water, and an incredible array of canals and streams.

For the seeker of rural solitude, the traveler who longs for occasional journeys on back roads that can be traveled in near isolation, and for the artist or photographer out to discover rewards in panoramic scenes or in exquisite small details, Hyde County is a treasure house.

Ideally, a journey from Greenville into Hyde County should be more encompassing than one day — several motels make a stay-over feasible. However, if time is a restricting factor, much can be seen by an early morning departure from Greenville with an evening return.

Three Circular Routes

Basically, a get-acquainted journey into Hyde County can be planned in a logical sequence of three circular routes. After crossing the new high-rise Walter B. Jones bridge, the first swing away from the U.S. 264 main travel artery is the paved road into Scranton and on into Sladesville. Scranton has the post-office for the area. Sladesville has a typical wood-rail bridge crossing over a small curving stream, and a charming Episcopal church painted in an unexpected shade of brownish-plum. From Sladesville, the return route to US 264 can include a quick visit to Germantown, an off-the-road settlement serving local fishermen.

A few miles farther east on 264, take the old road to the village of Swan Quarter, county seat of Hyde. The town a few years ago was cut off from the mainstream of traffic by the construction of a bypass. Of interest are the cream-colored court house, several fine homes and a new construction, the facility serving the twice daily ferry across the Pamlico Sound to Ocracoke on the Outer Banks.

Just beyond the road leading to the Lake Mattamuskeet causeway, a visit to the former pumping station which now serves as headquarters for the Mattamuskeet Wildlife Refuge, a short distance from 264, is worthwhile. The huge brick structure straddles a canal and has an imposing 120-foot tower. The building is a tangible reminder of grandoise dreams of an agricultural empire in the early part of the century. Investors, one after another, went bankrupt in efforts to drain the 50,000 acres of Lake Mattamuskett to hopefully turn the lakebed into a vast farm. At the headquarters (open weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.), visitors can get brochures containing information on wildlife here and at nearby Swan Quarter Wildlife Refuge. Weekend visitors can pick up brochures at a visitors shelter at the site.

No Rocks At Gull Rock

The second circular sightseeing route begins with a right turn-off at Lake Landing, proceeding on a paved road to Gull Rock. From what can be determined, there are plentiful gulls but no rocks in the area — some local people claim the name derives from a large mound of oyster shells dubbed by an imaginative resident as a rock. Rocks or no rocks, there's much to see in the Gull Rock community. Foremost is an immense live oak tree — possibly one of the largest in the state. Nearby are two old cemeteries, one with a mysterious prevalence of people interred there in the year 1842 — coincidence, or a now nearly forgotten epidemic? The road to Gull Rock has fine roadside canals, unfortunately made unsightly by a super-abundance of debris littering the smooth black waters.

From Gull Rock the return takes the visitor on the remainder of the second circle, through the crossroads villages of Nebraska and Middletown. Nebraska, currently the scene of old-store renovations, is a neat, attractive place. Middletown will appeal to the lovers of the rustic, with several weather-silvered buildings covered with wood shingles. From there, the second circle is completed by traveling to Englehard.

Engelhard is noted for a wide canal in the residential area with bridges spanning the water over driveways into the yards of individual homes. Here too, a few hundred yards away from the main road, are docking areas where boats ranging from small up to 90-foot trawlers can be seen at dockside, especially on weekends.

Circling Mattamuskeet

The final of three sightseeing circles begins a short distance west of Engelhard on US 264. A couple of miles outside Engelhard, a paved road to the right defines a long arc enclosing the northeastern part of Lake Mattamuskeet and leads into Fairfield on the lake's northern shore. The last half-dozen miles of this drive provides excellent vistas of the lake with small and huge cypress trees along the shore and in the water — some with fantastic root formations like swamp monsters coming ashore.

Fairfield, fast becoming a thriving center serving lake visitors, has a fine tiny Episcopal church, an architecturally interesting Methodist Church which marked its centennial a few years ago, a couple of pre-20th century stores decorated with wood trim, and several pre-20th century houses, one, rich in gingerbread, painted in a combination of baby blue and cream.

The final leg of a one-day sightseeing journey into Hyde County ends with taking NC 94 south from Fairfield across the seven-mile long causeway bisecting Lake Mattamuskeet. This drive reveals the vast expanse of the shallow lake (average depth two feet). Mattamuskeet is North Carolina's largest natural lake. Two theories about its formation exist — one is that over long centuries, Indian inhabitants continually burned the forest, thus creating the lake bottom; the other is that Mattamuskeet, along with Alligator Lake (also in Hyde County), and the not distant Phelps and Pungo Lakes in Washington County were formed in ages past by the crash of meteors into the area.

If time permits, a visitor should travel the northwestern segment of the road encircling Mattamuskeet — from Rose Bay to Fairfield.

Hyde County was formed nearly three centuries ago — in 1705 by breaking away from Bath. Until 1712 it was known as Wickam, before the name was changed to Hyde, in honor of North Carolina Governor Edward Hyde, grandson of the Earl of Clarendon, one of the Lords Propietors, and a first cousin of Queen Anne.

Today, the Hyde County Historical Society is active in gathering and recording the history of people and places, cemeteries and events. A surprising number of spacious old homes have been in the same families for generations.

Churches, Stores, Barns

Throughout the county, an abundance of tiny churches, former country stores and huge barns now abandoned to silver in the weather, attest to a way of life common to the county earlier in the century.

Everywhere one travels, canals and streams crisscross the land — undoubtedly the exact number is unknown even to the most knowledgeable. Marsh grasses, green myrtle, pines, reeds and vines add patterns of dark green and gold to the countryside. Tapering native cedars dot the landscapes of farms and villages, and in winter, the call of thousands of migrating geese and ducks fill the air with their honking music.

The elevation of Hyde County comes in two measurements — flat and flatter. Because of this, travelers are advised to go prepared with galoshes or boots.

But within this limited topogrpahy, Hyde County offers some of the most distinctive rewards to be encountered anywhere in coastal North Carolina.

Hyde has one of the smallest populations of any North Carolina county, approximately 6,000 in a population density of about 10 persons per square mile. What residents lack in numbers, they definitely make-up in friendliness.

The itinerary outlined in this article, entailing travel amounting to approximately 250 miles, covers only the more populous, settled areas of the central portion of Hyde County.

The 16-mile long island of Ocracoke forms the outer land perimeter of Hyde County, a narrow ribbon of land on which is located the tourist town of Ocracoke, far better known to the average traveler than the villages on the mainland. Until a few years ago residents of mainland Hyde wishing to visit Ocracoke had to go across Pamlico Sound by boat or make the long circuitous route to Roanoke Island, then down the Outer Banks and across Hatteras Inlet to Ocracoke by free ferry. Today, the trip can be made in a two and one-half hour crossing across the Pamlico Sound on the toll ferry that leaves Swan Quarter twice daily — at 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., with return trips from Ocracoke at 6:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

In addition to the Ocracoke doorway to the Atlantic Ocean, a full exploration of Hyde will necessitate additional visitation time, with assistance from persons who have the means of taking a traveler to remote areas not otherwise easily accessible. Such areas include the 20-mile long scenic Intracoastal Waterway that connects the Alligator River in the north to the Pungo River in the west; a visit to Alligator Lake northwest of Lake Mattamuskeet, and visits by boat to the inner coastline along the inland shore, including Rose and Wysocking Bays.

Congressman Returns Pay Raise To Help Cut Deficit

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Believing President Reagan's proposed 1986 budget is too high, U.S. Rep. Alex McMillan is returning his congressional pay raise to the U.S. Treasury to help lower the federal deficit.

"I plan to continue doing that the rest of the year," McMillan said Monday after marking a poster-sized check "for deficit reduction." "If I don't specify, it goes to a discretionary fund for the speaker of the House, and I don't want Tip O'Neill to get it."

Reagan is seeking outlays of $974 billion for fiscal 1986, compared with $959 billion for fiscal 1985.

"I think the 1986 budget should spend no more than we will in 1985," the 9th District Republican said in a Charlotte news conference. "That means $15 billion less than the president proposes."

McMillan signed the check for $208.33, the amount of the monthly raise Congress voted itself effective on his first day in office. Returning the increase means he will receive $72,500 a year while other congressmen earn $75,000.

McMillan said "we should ask tough questions" about Reagan's proposal to increase defense spending from $292.6 billion to $322.2 billion in 1986. But he said he did not have in mind any specific weapons systems that could be cut.

Congress should reconsider cost-of-living adjustments not only for military pensions, but for all federal pensions and salaries, he said.

Federal spending has grown to 25 percent of the U.S. Gross National Product while tax revenues have stayed at about 19 percent, said McMillan.

"The resulting deficit will, if not eliminated, rekindle inflation, drive up interst rates, drain investment capital from the private sector and kill real growth so essential to new jobs and healthy state and local economies," he said.

Watkins Calls For New Office To Settle Administrative Spats

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Government agencies that police North Carolina professions and businesses should not act as judge and jury when there's a dispute, some legislative leaders say.

An independent agency that would arbitrate such stalemates would be established under a comprehensive rewrite of the Administrative Procedures Act introduced Monday by Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville.

The bill would establish an Office of Administrative Hearings consisting of a chief administrative judge and a group of hearing officers.

They would conduct hearings when people accused of violating the rules contest the case. Formerly, officials of the same agency levying the charge conducted the hearings and rendered the verdict.

"I like the concept of having an independent person to do that," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey. "I don't like an agency being the policeman, jury, district attorney and the judge. That seems to stack things against the general public."

The bill would curb the rule-making authority of executive-branch agencies, barring the boards, councils, and departments from imposing criminal penalties for violations.

It also would create a mechanism for review and possible extension of hundreds of regulations due to expire July 1 under a law passed in 1983.

"Making laws it the duty of the General Assembly," said Watkins. "These agencies really have done too much of this."

The bill would establish a set of procedures and a timetable for making rules, and would require a public hearing before any final decision.

A similar version of the bill, produced by a study committee, was approved by the House in the waning days of last summer's short session.

But the Senate Rules Committee didn't take it up. Senate leaders complained that they hadn't had time to study the complex bill.

Some lawmakers said privately that the Senate leadership was retaliating for the House's treatment of several Senate bills, including proposals to phase out the intangibles tax and grant coin dealers a sales tax break.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Monday he hadn't had time to study the bill. He acknowledged that the biggest reason for its failure last year was its appearance late in the session, instead of its content.

"I certainly want to know the cost," said Jordan. "I do think there are ways to get the House and Senate to agree on something. ... The important thing is to get started on it earlier."

In other legislative action:

Legislative budget and finance committees will continue meeting jointly this week as briefings on the state's financial condition and the budgeting process continue, leaders said.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the panels will begin meeting separately and considering bills next week.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, filed a bill to make the state sales tax 4½ cents across the board. Currently, the state tax is 3 cents, while 96 counties add 1½ cents.

The change, Mavretic said, would save about $6 million that slips through the cracks during the process of administering and collecting money under the two-tiered system.

He acknowledged the four counties that have resisted the additional tax might protest. "But we have majority rule under our system, and 96-4 is a pretty big majority," he said.

The partial sales tax exemption on horses, except draft horses, would be removed under a bill filed by Reps. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir.

Rep. Jonathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, filed a bill to make the election of the members of the Lincoln County Board of Election non-partisan.

Lawmakers More Optimistic Over Envrionmental Measures

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawmakers and lobbyists frustrated when environmental bills foundered during the 1983-84 Legislature are predicting more success this term because of concerns over hazardous wastes and the state park system.

"I feel that the climate for environmental protection here is stronger than it has ever been," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, who will likely see many of the bills as chairman of the House Water and Air Resources Committee.

Hackney said House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan have signaled a willingness to consider environmental legislation. And he said Gov. Jim Martin "tipped his hand" by appointing Tommy Rhodes as secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"I see that as a signal that he was going to continue the progress we've made on matters regarding the environment," Hackney said.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Committee on Natural and Economic Resources and Wildlife, said the climate for conservation issues is "better than it's been in the past."

"I think it's because of the pollution things that have happened and the waste problems," she said. "South Carolina soon will stop taking our hazardous wastes (into its Barnwell landfill) and we don't want to take hazardous wastes from other states."

Jordan, in his charge to Ms. Tally's committee, said "... it will be your duty to ensure that legislation comes to the floor which will be effective in safeguarding the purity of our waters and air, and carefully managing our forests and wildlife. You must balance our need for raw materials to help provide jobs for our citizens while maintaining our ability to pass on these natural resources to our future generations.."

Hackney and Bill Holman, a lobbyist for several environmental groups, said the General Assembly would be asked to pass laws to:

— Give workers the right to know what hazardous chemicals are in the workplace.

— Allow North Carolina to adopt environmental-protection laws more stringent than federal laws.

— Clean up "orphan dumps" left by unidentified industries.

— Make waste producers liable for damages due to chemical spills even without proof of negligence.

— Appropriate money to improve state parks and raise pay for rangers.

Holman said a committee co-chaired by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, came out strongly for the parks system.

"They recommended better pay for rangers, more rangers, funds for land acquisitions and funds to develop facilities in the parks," he said.

The panel suggested buying 10,000 acres of land for some $22 million, $75,000 to increase salaries and $700,000 in 1985 to hire more rangers, Holman said. They estimated it would take $45 million to complete the park system as it was envisioned.

"The most important thing is to have adequate staff at adequate pay and get the land," Holman said. "They're not making any more land, and it's getting gone."

Holman agreed that the picture was bright for environmental legislation, especially with Hackney on Water and Air Resources, Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance, chairing Natural and Economic Resources and Ms. Tally chairing the NER&W panel.

League Agrees To Drop Some Taxes

RALEIGH (AP) — The intangibles and inventory taxes are so unpopular that fighting to save them apparently would be futile, says a spokesman for the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

"There is a major shift in the (attitude) of the General Assembly and the public" toward the taxes, said S. Leigh Wilson, executive director of the organization representing 476 towns and cities.

With Gov. Jim Martin, influential legislators, and a sizable portion of the electorate convinced that the taxes discourage industrial prospects and investors, "it would not be wise for us to attempt to hold onto" them, Wilson said in a news conference Monday.

Instead, the league will push for a formula under which the state would repay cities and towns every cent they stand to lose without the taxes, Wilson said.

"We are asking only that (the taxes) be replaced, dollar for dollar, and that it be replaced with a permanent source of revenue such as ... the income tax, so that every two years we don't have to go to the General Assembly hat in hand, begging for replacement revenues," said Wilson.

"I think it's a practical, pragmatic position."

Jack Hawke, Gov. Jim Martin's special assistant for policy, hailed the league's decision not to renew its traditional opposition to any reduction of the taxes.

"We hope they'll consider supporting the entire package," said Hawke, referring to Martin's call for repeal of the sales tax on food and medicine along with the intangibles and inventory taxes.

In addition to Martin's proposals, legislative Democrats have introduced bills to phase out or repeal some or all of those taxes, which are expected to provide local governments with $230.1 million in fiscal 1985-86. Of that, $73.6 million would go to towns and cities; county governments would get the rest.

The league's proposed reimbursement formula is bound to meet heavy opposition. Some legislators — including powerful House Speaker Liston Ramsey — favor a per capita system, under which money would be distributed based on a locality's population. That would favor smaller, rural towns at the expense of the more heavily populated cities.

Seventy-five counties would get more money than they do now under the per-capita system, while 23 would get less, Baggett said.

Wilson said that during a recent meeting with the league's board of directors, Martin indicated that he would not get involved in the battle over the reimbursement formula.

Hawke, however, said Martin had not meant to suggest that he would not propose a formula.

Solar Energy Filling Heating Need

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Although the energy crisis that sparked interest in solar power has ended, North Carolinians increasingly are turning to the sun to meet their energy needs as heating bills continue to rise, authorities say.

"Solar has gone from being a fad to becoming a practical consideration," said Leon Neal, past president of the North Carolina Solar Energy Association.

Before the first U.S. oil crisis in 1973, "solar power was considered strange and unusual. But now, it's a business," Neal said.

Neal said thousands of North Carolina homes use solar energy principles, such as south-facing windows, or devices, such as solar water heaters. "I think we're way beyond counting," he said.

And although states including California and Arizona have a greater number of solar houses, North Carolina "is right up there in the top in terms of smarts," Neal said.

"From the start, the approach in North Carolina has been different," he said. "We never went for being out on the fringe .... We went for the education of the average home-owner, and the basic, low-cost solar ideas — not the extravagance."

The Farmers Home Administration has loaned money for more than 700 passive solar homes in North Carolina, which Neal said could be the highest number of such loans in the country.

Passive solar energy uses only the forces of nature to collect heat, while active solar energy refers to systems that use pumps, valves and fans.

North Carolinians also have been encouraged to consider solar energy devices through government incentives such as tax credits, solar house plans available from by the energy division of the state Department of Commerce and the Solar Energy and Energy Conservation Bank, which subsidizes the purchase of solar energy devices.

Federal tax credits for installation of solar devices are expected to expire at the end of fiscal 1985, Neal said.

"That's probably a lot of the reason why solar businesses are busier now than they ever have been," he said. "There are a lot of people who've been looking and solar, and now they're doing something about it."

Water heaters are the most popular solar device. Solar water heaters typically provide about two-thirds of a family's needs for a $4,000 initial investment, which can be government-subsidized and usually is returned upon sale of the house, Neal said.

"Very few people realize how much they spend for hot water," he said, adding that solar heaters can reduce a water heating bill from $30 to $10.

Although Neal predicted that interest in solar power would wane if federal tax credits expire, he said other financial assistance programs, such as the "solar bank," and the cost of other energy sources will keep solar energy a viable alternative.

"The cost of electricity is going to keep going up, and people are always interested in getting lower bills," Neal said.

IN THE STATE

Party Director Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh attorney Ed Turlington has been named executive director of the state Democratic Party and will assume responsibility for day-to-day management and operations.

Turlington last year served as director of the North Carolina Mondale-Ferraro presidential campaign.

A native of Clinton, Turlington graduated from Duke University in 1979 with a degree in political science. He received his law degree from the University of North Carolina in 1982 and became a law clerk for Judge Gerald Arnold of the state Court of Appeals. In 1983, he was appointed a deputy commissioner of the state Industrial Commission.

While in college, he worked on the staffs of Sen. Robert Morgan, Rep. Charles Whitley and Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth.

Martin Agrees On Date

RALEIGH (AP) — Worried he might become embroiled in a bitter dispute, Gov. Jim Martin has agreed to deliver his State of the State address about a week later than planned and include some of his budget proposals.

"I ... was concerned that the dispute was about to become a bitter quarrel distracting us from the more substantive issues," Martin said Monday in a statement issued by his press office.

Martin said he had dropped his plan to make the speech Feb. 19, moving it back to Feb. 28, after meeting Friday with House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan at the Executive Mansion.

Martin said he agreed to submit his spending recommendations for continuing operations — known as the "base budget" — and his sweeping tax-cut proposals with his speech.

Bond Set In Roxboro

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Roxboro man facing charges of first-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense involving two children has been ordered held under $250,000 bond.

Lonnie Torain, 48, was arraigned Monday. He is charged with rape and sexual offenses involving an 8-year-old boy and 7-year-old girl he allegedly was babysitting Dec. 15, 1984, and Jan. 19, 1985.

Torain is being held in Person County Jail.

Abortion Clinic Picketed

RALEIGH (AP) — A conservative student group says it wants a Raleigh doctor who owns an abortion clinic to pay for a home for pregnant women.

About 20 members of Students for America Monday picketed the Fleming Center, which also offers infertility counseling. They said they would also picket the home of Dr. Paul Fleming once a week.

"Dr. Fleming is profiting from babies being killed," said Ralph Reed, 23, director of the group. "We demand that he should use those profits to save babies."

In a press release announcing its drive to raise $25,000 for a home for pregnant women, the group said Raleigh is one of 14 cities in the United States where there are more abortions than live births.

But state officials said Wake County figures for 1983, the latest year available, did not substantiate that claim.

Final Arguments Heard

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Attorneys for a man charged in the beating death of Belk-Tyler department store executive Luther Anderson Bailey say the prosecution failed to show a motive for the killing.

Assistant Public Defender John Britt, one of defendant Richard Dale Johnson's two attorneys, also argued Monday that the prosecution provided no evidence or testimony to contradict Johnson's denial of involvement with Bailey.

Assistant District Attorney John Dickson argued that when all physical evidence and statements by Johnson are put together, it shows that Richard Dale Johnson killed Mr. Bailey."

Cumberland County Superior Court Judge Robert Farmer heard final arguments Monday in the retrial of Johnson, a former Fort Bragg cook accused of first-degree murder in the 1983 slaying Bailey.

Farmer earlier denied a defense motion that the murder charge be dismissed on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Bailey, 56, of Nashville, supervised 15 Belk-Tyler stores in eastern North Carolina. His nude and beaten body was found in a Fayetteville motel room on Feb. 11, 1983. Evidence presented by the prosecution suggests Bailey was killed after engaging in homosexual activity.

Jordan Names Aide

RALEIGH (AP) — John C. Crumpler, manager of former U.S. Rep. James McClure Clarke's unsuccessful re-election campaign, has been named executive assistant to Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

In his new position, Crumpler, 27, will manage the operations of the lieutenant governor's office, assist Jordan in his legislative work and make public appearances for him.

His salary will be about $40,000 a year, said Brenda Summers, Jordan's director of communications.

Crumpler managed Clarke's Washington staff for two years, then was named campaign manager for the 1984 re-election bid by the Fairview Democrat, who was defeated in November by Republican Bill Hendon of Asheville.

A Vance County native, Crumpler also worked as an aide to Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C. and was a political consultant for Public Communications Group of Washington, a political consulting firm.
