State Hit By Coastal Storm, Mountain Snow

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

A low-pressure system roared across North Carolina, dumping up to 28 inches of snow in the mountains and churning seas that stole huge chunks of beach and flooded roads along the coast.

Residents and officials at Caswell Beach in Brunswick County said Tuesday's winter storm caused more erosion damage than Hurricane Diana last September. About 300 feet of pavement on Caswell Beach Road was destroyed by erosion as 45- to 60-mph winds drove tides higher than normal.

No serious injuries were reported in Tuesday's storm.

The National Weather Service said driving conditions in the northern mountains remained extremely hazardous today, with all secondary roads closed and primary roads barely passable.

Snow flurries there were expected to accumulate another inch or two today.

It will be partly cloudy and cold tonight and Thursday, with some moderation expected toward the latter part of the weekend.

At the other end of the state, heavy snow paralyzed mountain communities, knocking out power for some 9,000 residents, closing roads and prompting officials to open emergency shelters for people without heat.

"Everything's just at a standstill," said Agatha McAfee, a restaurant owner in Murphy, where town residents were digging out from an 20-inch snowfall and streets were littered with broken tree limbs and downed power lines.

"We're pretty used to snow, but this one is really something else," Mrs. McAfee said. "It's beautiful ... but it's also a mess."

Radio station WKRK in Murphy reported that 22 inches had been measured in the Hanging Dog community of Cherokee County at 2 p.m.

The National Weather Service said locations in Ashe, Cherokee, Watauga, Graham, Swain and Macon counties received at least 8 inches of snow. Mount Mitchell got 24 inches and 5-foot drifts.

The Cherokee County Sheriff's Department said depths ranged to more than 1½ feet at Hanging Dog. Ice-laden branches crashed across telephone lines in Cherokee, Clay, Graham and Avery counties, cutting off service to more than 300 people, telephone officials said.

About 3,000 of Blue Ridge Mountain Electric Membership Corp.'s 5,000 customers who lost power Tuesday were still without electricity late in the afternoon with little chance of getting them all back on line by evening, officials said.

In Jefferson, state Highway Patrol Trooper J.G. Judson said high winds and heavy snow left visibility at near zero.

"It's a whiteout," he said. "Anybody who comes up here with radial tires without studs or chains is looking for a ticket."

Along the coast, Stephen and Mary Canonico watched their gazebo tilt toward the sea as the ocean edged nearer to their Long Beach home.

"This does prove the logic of the 60-foot setback," said Canonico, who has lost 20 feet of his oceanfront lot in the past three years.

School Consolidation Panel To Form Interim School Board On March 5

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The consolidation committee of the Pitt and Greenville boards of education will meet March 5 to hold a formal organization meeting, committee members have agreed.

Under the consolidation bill passed by the North Carolina House and Senate Monday, the committee must meet within 30 days to organize an interim board of education responsible for budget, policy and procedure pertaining to the merging school systems. The interim board will exist in addition to the Pitt County and Greenville boards of education.

The interim board, according to the legislation, will be composed of four members of the Greenville Board of Education and eight members of the Pitt County Board of Education, as is the current consolidation committee. Until the bill was passed, the board could not be formally organized or given legal power as a body.

At its monthly meeting Tuesday the committee heard progress reports on the proposed elementary school for Winterville, the 1985-86 school calendar and consolidation of personnel and instructional services of the two school systems at its monthly meeting Tuesday.

The committee, composed of four members of the Greenville Board of Education and eight members of the Pitt County Board of Education, heard an update on site location, floor plan and elevations of the new elementary school proposed for the Winterville area from James G. Hite, architect for the project. The school will be located on rural road 1725 on the old county home property and will house grades kindergarten through five.

The site location, Hite said, includes two entrances, one for private autos, including parents dropping off or picking up youngsters at the school, and another for buses loading and unloading and service vehicles. According to the schematic design of the structure, students could board and exit buses under a covered bus loading area. The tentative schematic separates lower grades and higher grades in the school. Hite also noted that "great care has been taken in designing the elevation of the roof" to eliminate leaks.

The committee also heard the recommendations of the 1985-86 calendar committee concerning a school calendar for the upcoming academic year. The committee, which has met three times, made the following suggestions:

•Pitt County and Greenville adopt the same calendars for the 1985-86 school year.

•A calendar designated option one by the calendar committee be adopted by the systems. Option one requires teachers to begin school Aug. 19 and students to begin Aug. 26, before Labor Day.

•The option two calendar, which requires teachers begin school Aug. 21 and students start Sept. 3, after Labor Day, should be the second choice.

Oilman Says Bosses Protecting Salaries

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Oil entrepreneur T. Boone Pickens Jr. says what's wrong with corporate America and, indeed, largely what's wrong with the American economy is that executives of many of the country's top companies are more interested in protecting their large salaries than in productivity of their companies and the well-being of their stockholders.

The Texas oilman, who has developed the $1.300 he had in 1955 into Mesa Petroleum Co., a firm with assets of $2.3 billion, plus many other holdings, says he's done it largely by never forgetting who he and his employees work for — the stockholders.

Pickens told leaders of the Greenville business community Tuesday that companies that do not do a good job for their stockholders usually fail to do so because the chief executive officers and other employees don't own stock in the company themselves and don't really care how much profit is made. He said he's done studies of failing and non-profitable companies and found CEOs who make a million dollars a year, yet have either none or very few shares of stock in the companies for which they work.

He said Mesa Petroleum has no pension plan for its workers, but offers a profit-sharing and stock purchase plan. Mesa puts an amount equal to 15 percent of each employee's pay into a profit-sharing account. Workers can also contribute up to 6 percent more of their pay into the stock plan and the company will match the investment dollar for dollar. He figures that a 30-year-old earning $30,000 can expect to get $2.9 million from the two plans if he or she stays on until age 65. He said he is not surprised that his 700 employees are deeply interested in the productivity and success of the company.

Pickens was invited to Greenville by Branch Bank and Trust Co. and East Carolina University, co-developers of the BB&T Center for Leadership Development. He spoke to businessmen Tuesday afternoon and to a small group of Leadership Development Seminar scholars early Tuesday evening. He's been a newsmaker lately by mounting merger and acquisition attempts with several large oil companies, including Cities Service and Gulf Oil. A Phillips Petroleum Corp. merger confrontation is now under way.

He told the Greenville group that merger and acquisition activity is a function of the free market and the

Kreps Supports Increase In Tax

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The most serious economic problem of the Reagan administration, according to former U.S. Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps, is the "huge federal deficit" which will have "long-term effects on sources of private credit."

Dr. Kreps, speaking at a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce breakfast today, said she believes the only solution to the deficit is "tax increases of some sort" coupled with "cuts in defense spending."

"Some cuts remain possible in social programs," Dr. Kreps said, "but the majority of the cuts must come from defense." Dr. Kreps said the $200 billion federal deficit forces the government to borrow money that otherwise would go to private sector borrowers. "This tightens credit to private borrowers and drives up the interest rates they pay," she said.

The long-term solution to this credit squeeze, she said, is "a

Cable TV Cutting Free Access To Channels

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A new "addressable system" for Greenville Cable TV Inc. will increase the price of cable television for some of the company's 13,000 Pitt County subscribers who now get part of the service for free.

At a news conference Tuesday, cable spokesmen unveiled plans for technically advanced equipment to link the cable television subscriber's home converter box to the Greenville office. The new system, which will be in effect beginning March 1, will require owners of cable-ready television sets to rent a converter box in order to be hooked into the addressable system and to pick up cable channels 23-31.

The equipment also will monitor home boxes which allow cable to be picked up on television screens to determine if users are "pirating" pay TV channels such as Home Box Office and Showtime, said John Pait, general manager of Greenville Cable TV.

"Customers will receive exactly what they pay for," Pait said. "It is now a federal crime" to rig television sets to receive pay cable channels. "It (rigging televisions) costs hundreds of thousands of dollars in lost service."

Besides monitoring the cable system, the addressable equipment also will help Greenville Cable TV provide services to the customer, Pait said. "We will be able to address the converter from the office. We will no longer have to dispatch a truck if (the customer) wants addition or deletion of channels," he said. "The major benefit to the customer is convenience."

Pait said the long-range advantage of the addressable system will be security for the home user of banking and shopping services which will be provided through cable television in the future.

The manager said owners of cable-ready televisions, which do not require converter boxes in order to pick up cable signals, have been able to pick up all but two channels (Home Box Office and Show Time) without paying for the entire service as subscribers with converters must. Customers with cable-ready televisions will now have to rent a converter box at a charge of $3.20 per month if they want to watch cable channels 23-31; the signals for these channels will be "scrambled" so the frequency cannot be picked up without the aid of the converter.

Also announced at the news conference was the addition to three pay television channels for Pitt County cable television subscribers: The Movie Channel, Cinemax and The Disney Channel. The channels will be added to the service March 1.

The Greenville area will be a test market for four package programs including the basic cable service and one or more pay television channels. Pait said the package systems will be less expensive for subscribers.

For instance, Pait said the Core Pac will include basic and super basic cable service, as well as Home Box Office and Cinemax for the price of $32.95, $6 less than the individual program prices. The Family Pac will consist of basic and super basic service, HBO or Showtime and The Disney Channel, at a savings of $6. Several different movie packages will be offered with savings of $10-$17.

Another innovation for the Greenville area will be a cable television guide which will be presented to subscribers free of charge for two months. The guide will have

About a year ago you reported that a left turn signal light at the intersection of 10th and Cotanche streets had been approved by the Department of Transportation. What has happened to it? L.S.

Gerald England, division traffic engineer with the N.C. Department of Transportation, said the project is right where it was when that report was made: the plans are in Raleigh and are approved and awaiting funds. This project involving modification to traffic signals at the Evans Street, Cotanche Street, Washington Street and Charles Street intersections with 10th is to be completed with federal safety funds and these are given out all over the state on a priority basis. This project has not reached the top of the list. A major part of the project, he said, will be the addition of protected left turns at Cotanche Street and also at Evans Street, something he sees as being greatly needed. He said he would not guess how long it might be before the money is allocated.

Task Force Says TV Helps And Hinders

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Academy of Pediatrics Task Force on Children and Television says TV has become a powerful tool to promote learning, create aspirations and induce pro-social behavior.

In a policy statement, "Children, Adolescents and Television," the task force said TV deals well with medical topics, passing on messages that promote health or prevent illness.

On the downside, however, it also says TV advertising and programming can adversely affect learning and behavior in a number of significant areas.

To wit:
—"Repeated exposure to televised violence promotes a proclivity to violence and a passive response to its practice."

—"Television viewing increases consumption of high caloric density snacks and increases the prevalence of obesity."

—"Although the evidence that TV may have a deleterious effect on school performance may be confounded by other factors, learning from TV is passive rather than active, and detracts from time spent reading or using active learning skills."

—"Television conveys unrealistic messages regarding drugs, alcohol and tobacco and indirectly encourages their use."

—"The portrayal of sex roles and sexuality on TV is unrealistic and misleading; sexual relationships develop rapidly; the risk of pregnancy is rarely considered; adolescence is portrayed as a constant state of sexual crisis. These characteristics may contribute directly or indirectly to the risk of adolescent pregnancy and clearly alter age-dependent experiential learning with respect to sexuality. Pornography on cable TV is a particularly important concern."

—"TV promotes ethnic and racial stereotypes and does little to promote a sympathetic understanding of handicapped people."

—"Television conveys an unrealistic view of problem solving or conflict resolution."

The task force recommends that the academy educate pediatricians about all of the above and develop materials to teach same to medical students and others who deal directly with the health of children and adolescents.

The pediatricians also expect to continue and expand their approach to counseling children, adolescents and their families regarding effects of television.

But that's not all. The task force wants the academy to encourage legislative activity to increase quality programming and reduce advertising directed at children.

"Establish liaisons with networks, producers, writers and other professional organizations to improve the quality of programming and advertising and to act as a resource for these groups," the task force instructed the academy.

"Provide an ongoing review of new technologies that enable families to alter or control their children's TV viewing habits

'Lousy' Service Should Be Reported To Manager

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I had dinner at a very nice restaurant. The food was good, but the service was lousy.

When we got outside, my wife said, "I hope you didn't leave him a tip." I said, "I sure did. I left 15 cents. Had I not left anything, he might have thought I stupidly forgot. This way he knows I did not forget, and he also knows what I thought of the service."

DAN B., SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR DAN: A waiter usually knows when he has given "lousy" service. You should have given the manager a "tip." Managers appreciate knowing how their customers rate the service.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago I met a fantastic woman I'll call Clara. She's 38 and divorced. I'm 42 and divorced. She's intelligent, has a wonderful sense of humor, is fun to be with, and she's great in bed. I really care for her and she says she loves me, and she shows it. I guess I'm lucky to have found her.

You're probably wondering, So what's the problem? Clara has a nice face but a terrible figure. She has practically no bust, and she's quite overweight. She says she's been heavy all her life but can't lose weight. I suppose this sounds immature, but my ex-wife had a terrific figure and so have all the other women I've been with, and I am not proud to be seen with Clara.

This is all that's stopping me from asking her to marry me. She's a super woman in every other way, but I just can't see myself married to a woman with a figure like hers. I can't help it. Am I a jerk to feel this "Encourage involvement by local and chapter groups to interact with network affiliates, independent television stations and cable companies to improve local programming and advertising directed at children."

Next to family, the task force said, TV may be the most important source of information for children and a principal factor influencing their development.

That's the reason for so much concern. Here's another:

Authorities say children 2 to 12 in the United States watch approximately 25 hours of TV weekly. On an annual basis, kids spend more time in front of their TV sets than they spend in school.

Gov. Jim Martin Is Speaker

Joan Warren Installed As Sir Walter Cabinet President

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Joan Warren of Greenville was installed as president of The Sir Walter Cabinet in Raleigh Tuesday. Highlighting the meeting was a talk given by North Carolina Governor Jim Martin.

"I have learned things about your organization this morning and I hope to learn more over the years," Gov. Martin said.

"Dottie and I learned a new schedule last year — setting up individual campaigning schedule. She had the responsibility to become an active campaigner," he added. Gov. Martin told of several of his wife's experiences.

"I want to tell you of several of my concerns — tax reforms and the budget. I am concerned that two particular taxes are a classic and are damaging to our state — inventory and intangible taxes. Only a couple of states still have those and I am convinced they are anti-business and anti-jobs. These taxes are doing more for the economy of our border states than they are doing for our state. They are providing additional revenues to them. It is a golden opportunity to do something else," Gov. Martin said. He stressed that he wanted to be fair in taxing in order to get industry into the state.

"It is my recommendation that we eliminate a burdensome tax — the tax on food and medicine which was imposed in 1961. I am interested in a strategic tax reform — if we don't need it for revenue, give it back. If we need it that's a different matter," he continued.

"Public education is the most important issue we will face and it's going to be a long haul. We have a deep commitment to the state and there are things we have to do to restore more faith in the teaching profession...to turn it around and give more incentives to become better teachers," he continued.

"Another concern is the drug traffic in the state and we have to come to grips with the situation. Our state is fifth in the nation in drug traffic," he added. He also told of the possibility of using National Guard helicopters for nighttime flying to combat drugs and dope smuggling.

Gov. Martin told the women he hoped to get them involved in state activities like their husbands.

Gov. Martin was accompanied to the meeting by his wife, Dottie. Both were introduced by Mrs. J. Ruffin Bailey.

Judge Earl Vaughan, of the N.C. Supreme Court, installed the new Sir Walter Cabinet officers and gave an oath of office. Serving with Mrs. Warren, who is wife of Rep. Edward N. Warren of Pitt County, are Mrs. William T. Watkins, vice president; Mrs. Paul Woodard, recording secretary; Mrs. Vaughan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marvin Ward, treasurer; and Mrs. John C. Brooks, chaplain. Mrs. James Speed gave the report of the nominating committee.

Mrs. Alton Barbee, outgoing president, presented the gavel to Mrs. Warren. Mrs. Warren gave brief acceptance remarks and made several meeting announcements. Mrs. Barbee recognized guests, past presidents of the Sir Walter Cabinet and new members. Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Bob Jordan were given special recognition.

The Sir Walter Cabinet is an Angry Words

Words of a frustrated, angry man make good news copy but are rarely helpful. For Budget Director David Stockman, they may have vented some of the pressures he labors under, but they didn't help his boss nor contribute to his political future.

He exploded while defending budget figures before a Senate committee. He blew up over the military retirement system, farm subsidies and questioning why taxpayers "should have the responsibility to go in and refinance bad debt which was willingly incurred by consenting adults," and then claimed futility in proposing a freeze on Social Security benefits.

His remarks on the military budget came after telling the panel he was tired of hearing complaints about its size without any specific recommendations from Congress on what programs to trim.

No doubt about it, Stockman is saddled with one of the most difficult, unpleasant and least wanted jobs on Capitol Hill. He has been in hot water before; and survived partly because he is brilliant and diligent, conscientious to a fault, and just maybe because no one else would take the responsibilities.

His hair has grayed over the years as budget director.

The fact remains, one does not gain cooperation by publicly lashing out at people and causes when their cooperation is vital in good government.

Priorities

We're pleased a number of Pitt County school officials have endorsed toughening eligibility requirements for high school athletes.

The State Board of Education raised its standards even as the public was being treated to disclosures involving athletes on the college and university level. The eyebrow-raising patterns pretty plainly had their roots in the high schools.

Principal Ike Baldree of D.H. Conley High contributed the thought that the new requirements should not be limited only to athletics, but be extended to cover all extra-curricular activities. He's got a point. There are other distractions.

The new rules become effective next school year. They lend weight to the old idea that academics are the real reason for having schools. Our priorities are being re-asserted.

Secretary of Defense "Cap" Weinberger looked into the mirror in his private Pentagon washroom wearily. He had just been on the "Today Show" at 7 o'clock. "Good Morning America" at 7:30, and the CBS "Morning News" at 8:15 to make his case for a 13 percent increase in his budget.

He said, "Why can't people understand that I've cut budget to the bare bone, and if Congress doesn't give me my money the Soviets will never bargain in good faith in Geneva?"

"I understand it," the mirror replied.

Weinberger said, "I don't make up America's defense budget — the Russians dictate it. Is $26 billion too much to develop a foolproof 'Star Wars' system?"

"It's a drop in the bucket just to find out if it will work or not. Even if it doesn't, the commies will have to spend a lot of rubles on their own 'Star Wars' program."

"Am I being unreasonable about spending billions for an MX missile program which will protect us until we have our killer satellites in place?" Weinberger asked.

The mirror said, "You've overplayed your hand. You've thrown all the B-1 bombers on order down the tube, not to mention the fighter planes you need to protect our battleships."

"Cruise missiles don't come cheap either," Weinberger said defensively.

"Don't I know," the mirror answered. "But they're a bargain compared to the Trident II submarine program which will cost $42 billion."

"Fifty-two billion," Weinberger corrected. "Can you believe Congress wants me to stretch out the weapons over a period of years so they can bring the budget deficit down?"

"It would be a big mistake," the mirror said thoughtfully. "When you slow down production each weapon costs more to make. Any fool is aware that the more you order the cheaper they are."

"Cutting the military budget doesn't help the deficit, you know," Weinberger said.

"I probably do, but tell me why again."

"Because every time you chop a billion dollars from the military you eliminate 35,000 jobs. The only real choice the government has is to put the money into either unemployment benefits or weapons."

"You ought to use that argument with Congress," the mirror said.

"I already have. They're still giving me a hard time. They claim since they're cutting out the farmers, the students, welfare, Medicare and WASHINGTON — You couldn't have followed the recent Senate confirmation hearings of Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese without concluding that Meese's conduct was only one of the ethical issues on trial.

For some observers, in fact, the performance of the Office of Government Ethics was ultimately more disturbing than Meese's alleged use of public office for personal gain. The hearings exposed inconsistencies in the ethics office's review of his financial disclosures, not to mention flaws in the rules by which the office functions.

The ethics office became an issue upon the discovery that two of its staff attorneys had, in a 16-page memorandum on Jan. 14, contended that Meese appeared to have violated ethics standards in at least three instances. David H. Martin, the ethics office's director, subsequently overruled the attorneys' determination, which he failed to mention in a letter to the Senate certifying the probity of Meese's financial statements.

Both attorneys were given the chance to express their reservations about Meese before a roomful of senators and television cameras. But instead of rising to defend their finding, they more or less disavowed it.

The memorandum, they insisted, was only a "starting point." Since its writing, they and Martin had come to the "mutual" conclusion that Meese hadn't violated any ethics laws in the financial transactions they studied; if anything, they'd agreed, Meese had created the appearance of impropriety in at least one political appointment.

That finding alone would seem sufficient under the Ethics in Government Act, which specifically proscribes actions that might "result in or create the appearance of using public office for private gain" or in "losing complete independence of impartiality of action." But Martin told the senators that the prohibition was a "broad-based rule" that was "aspirational in nature."

Martin, a Reagan appointee, denies that he based his unusual interpretation on political grounds and compelled his subordinates to swallow it. The two lawyers, F. Gary Davis and Nancy Feathers, publicly agree that there was no coercion.

But a credibility problem is likely to persist at the agency now that the flip-flop has come to light.

When Congress established the government ethics office, it was compelled for constitutional reasons to make the director a presidential appointee. It reckoned that a president has the right to determine the ethical standards, within boundaries, of the people who worked for him.

Two years ago, Congress tried to remove politics from the office by giving the director a five-year term. Yet the new provision did not eliminate the inherent conflicts of interest that a presidential appointee might bring to the ethics office. Presidents are continually submitting nominees for ethics office certification — not simply in the first year, when a holdover director from the previous administration might still be in charge.

Politics is a major threat to the ethics office because so much of each determination is subjective interpretation. The ethics office, which by now has screened thousands of financial disclosure statements in its brief history, is wont to find political considerations controlling when the distinctions between proper and improper are fuzzy.

High standards for ethics office attorneys might be a buffer against bad judgment. But no matter how competitive the selection process (25-year-old Feathers, the first staff attorney hired in the last three years, was picked from a field of 150 applicants), a specialized background in ethics is not — perhaps cannot be — a prerequisite. Nor does the law necessarily encourage dissent or protect the jobs of attorneys who disagree with their politically-appointed superiors.

Grounds for improving the law, perhaps by making the ethics office independent of the White House, are found in the transcript of the recent Meese hearings. Congress, whose membership isn't above ethical improprieties, might have some trouble imposing stricter standards on the Executive Branch than it's willing to impose on itself. But without some reform, ethics laws aren't worth the paper on which they're recorded.

To the editor:

Is Gov. Martin the same man who wasn't going to have any axes to grind?

Taking the Marvin L. Speight Jr. letters off the North Carolina ABC Commission office and warehouse complex sign was a low blow. I guess my trip to Raleigh back in November for the dedication was a waste of time.

We all knew what to expect from the Knoxes. We were hoping the Martins would be above being used by such vindictive people.

Is it a coincidence that Marvin L. Speight Jr. was a strong supporter of Rufus Edmisten? Who will be next on the grinding block?

I would like to commend Commissioner Eugene James for his vote against merger and his motion to have this issue voted upon by the citizens of Pitt County. I am pleased to know that there is at least one county commissioner who is aware of the democratic process in this country. Hopefully, we will demonstrate democracy to the other five in their bids for re-election.

The people of this county expressed a desire to vote on merger as manifested by the petitions circulated and signed by a large number of citizens. If I lose by the democratic process, then I have fought the good fight. As it stands, I was not even allowed the opportunity to skirmish.

Sheppard Memorial Library offers many fine services to the citizens of Pitt County. One of their services is the Pitt County Quiz Bowl, which provides area high schools with the opportunity to participate in academic competition. This past Saturday, the Sheppard staff sponsored the annual Pitt County Quiz Bowl. Many people are to be commended for their efforts in making Saturday's Quiz Bowl a memorable occasion for the students who participated.

Among the many to be commended are: the moderators, Dr. C.E. Van Zandt and Mr. Stan Little; the judges, Dr. Thomas Durham, Dr. Edward Seykora and Dr. Gene Lanier; and library staff members, Diane Taylor, Suzanne Long, Hansy Jones, June Parker, Julie Hicks, Willie Mae Gibbs, Charlotte Proctor, Chris Smith, Trina Fields, Willie Nelms, and Meredith Foltz. The team members from Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, North Pitt, and J.H. Rose impressed a large audience by responding well to tough questioning throughout the morning.

Strength For Today

Masaccio, an Italian painter of the early 15th century, died at the age of 26 — probably killed in a street brawl. Yet one of his pictures, "The Tribute of Money," stands as perhaps the most important picture ever painted. The reason is that Masaccio first brought perspective into painting. Giotto's painting and the paintings of those who came before Masaccio had been flat with no sense of depth.

Here an obscure young man found something new which was to revolutionize a whole area of creative techniques.

This incident illustrates how history often turns on little events. The birth of a babe in a stable is one of many examples. World history is being made in our own day and probably in events so insignificant that we give them no attention.

We look to "great events" to perform this function. But destiny (which is God), looks to the little event and uses it to turn the course of history.

Jordan Brings Discontent

RALEIGH — It's hard to imagine Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan making anyone very angry. He's a personable sort. He's soft-spoken, as humble as a politician can be, and he's open-minded.

But less than a month into his four-year term, Jordan has managed to rile a collection of interests in Raleigh that spans the political spectrum. Discussions with about a dozen lobbyists and active political types found discontent with Jordan from both liberal and conservative camps.

The criticism comes from several different directions. Some Democrats are unhappy with Jordan's handling of the Democratic Party which he now leads by virtue of being the party's highest ranking elected official. Others criticize his handling of Senate committee assignments. Others are unhappy with the staff Jordan hired, especially his budget officer.

Jordan didn't expect to head the Democratic Party. Rufus Edmisten was supposed to do that job after he got elected governor. Jordan moved slowly to nominate a chairman for the party and his indecision rankled some. Then he suggested Thad Eure Jr., a businessman and the son of the secretary of state.

Jordan wants the Democratic Party to present a more business-oriented public face and many applauded the mention of Eure's name. But others were upset because Eure has not been a very active Democrat. "There are 6,000 people in Raleigh who've worked hard for this party and he picks someone who's never been active. That was just stupid," one active Democrat said.

Wade Smith, a Raleigh lawyer, eventually got the job. He's more political than Eure but Jordan still is relying on someone who will not be able to commit large amounts of time to the job, the Democrat said.

When Jordan began running for lieutenant governor, he promised to bring new faces into leadership roles and to open up the process. Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, powerful chairman of Appropriations under Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, became a marked man. Jordan was constantly badgered with questions about Hardison's future.

Jordan created a new committee for Hardison, a Commerce committee that will oversee banks and utilities. Hardison's enemies immediately blamed Jordan for putting the fox in the chicken coop. They say Hardison, a business conservative, got a more important job than he deserved. Hardison's friends, of whom there are many, said the distinguished senator had been degraded with such a flimsy assignment.

Then there's the phosphate ban which Jordan supported in 1984. Now he's been quoted as saying he's neutral on the issue and that angered a few folks who are working for the ban.

Even the press is getting in on the discontent because Jordan has, for the first time, ordered that reporters covering the Senate exhibit credentials to enter the upper chamber.

Finally, there was the appointment of John A. Williams Jr., state budget officer under Gov. Jim Hunt, to be Jordan's budget adviser. Williams is a master of the budget and is sure to help Jordan in the coming budgetary battles with Gov.

Jim Martin. But Williams is also a crusty old Machiavellian who made a lot of people angry while he was serving Hunt. One state employee said he'd heard a good bit of discontent among fellow state workers about Williams' having been given a new life.

Several business lobbyists came to Jordan's defense, however. They said Jordan had done all he could for Hardison and other conservative senators who had been aligned with Green. In a few months, things will settle down, they said, and Jordan will be fine.

Retail Sales Post Slight Increase Despite Weather

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, held back by record cold weather in much of the country, still managed an increase of 0.7 percent in January despite sharp declines at department and clothing stores, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales climbed to a seasonally adjusted total of $110.7 billion last month following a 0.5 percent drop in December.

Much of the gain was attributed to a strong increase in auto sales, which rose 4 percent in January. It was the fourth month out of the last five in which auto sales have advanced. Auto sales in January were 7.1 percent higher than a year ago.

But sales at clothing stores dropped 5.1 percent in January, the biggest decline since October 1967. Sales at larger department stores were also off a sharp 5 percent.

The report said both declines may have been caused by "the record cold during the month."

The weakness at apparel and department stores contributed to a 0.2 decline in sales of all nondurable goods — items not expected to last at least three years.

Sales of durable goods, led by the surge in auto purchases, were up 2.5 percent in January over the December level.

Sales of building materials rose 1.1 percent in January while sales at grocery stores were up 3 percent and service stations posted a 1.1 percent rise. However, sales at restaurants and bars dropped 1.2 percent.

The 0.7 percent overall gain was in line with expectations. Most private analysts were looking for a recovery following disappointing December sales.

Retail sales had jumped 1.5 percent in November and were a key factor to a surge in economic activity following four months of sluggishness.

Most analysts believe the overall economy is growing at a rate of about 4 percent in the current quarter and they expect this level to be maintained through all of 1985.

Breaker Darkens Four-State Area

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — A malfunctioning breaker in an Oregon substation caused a power outage that blacked out sections of four states for up to an hour, shutting off traffic lights, darkening homes and forcing a halt to a session of the Montana Legislature.

"There must be a power company bill up tomorrow," one senator joked in the darkened chamber Tuesday evening after a major power line failed near the huge hydroelectric dams at The Dalles, Ore.

The problem, which knocked out electricity to parts of Montana, Wyoming, California and Oregon, was traced to a malfunctioning breaker at the Big Eddy substation, said Bruce Rogers, system operation and maintenance manager for the Bonneville Power Administration.

That doomed the power line, "the main intertie from the Pacific Northwest to California," said Montana Power Co. spokesman Dean Conklin. The result was a big power surge that rolled east into Montana and Wyoming, causing a major power system breakup, he said.

In Helena, the outage forced the Montana Senate to adjourn and businesses to close, while officials at Montana Power's Butte headquarters answered telephone calls by candlelight.

"Our switchboard was lit up like a Christmas tree," said Montana Power spokesman Jim Schwartz.

The outage snarled rush hour traffic because signals didn't work at intersections.

The surge knocked out the 700-megawatt Colstrip 3 power plant and the 320-megawatt Colstrip 1 plant in southeastern Montana and the 180-megawatt Corette plant in Billings, Conklin said. The three facilities resumed operations around 6:30 p.m.

Montana cities affected included Helena, Bozeman, Butte, Missoula, Great Falls and Billings, Conklin said. Utility officials said that almost all power was restored by 8 p.m.

Outages also were reported in Sheridan and Cody, Wyo., officials there said. Lights flickered briefly in the Wyoming cities of Buffalo, Worland and Cody, while Rogers said power went out briefly in The Dalles and elsewhere in Wasco County, Ore. That outage lasted about 45 minutes, said The Dalles police dispatcher Mary Curtiss.

In Northern California, about a dozen large industrial customers automatically "tripped off" during the power interruption, said Pacific Gas and Electric Co. spokesman Chuck Peterson. He said power was restored in less than 15 minutes, and no other customers were affected.

There was no power loss in Idaho sections of the power grid, although a few customers in the eastern part of the state may have had lights flicker briefly.

Abortion Foes Using Tape To Lobby For Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-abortion activists have carted hundreds of copies of a controversial videotape to Capitol Hill, calling its images of an actual abortion a powerful new weapon in their battle for legislation outlawing the practice.

"The Silent Scream," which has been in circulation since late last year, got a big push in January when President Reagan praised it in remarks to thousands of abortion protesters.

Critics, though, are crying fraud. They say the videotape's powerful impact comes not from its images, which often are difficult to make out, but from its dramatic narration. And they say the narration is highly misleading in claiming a 12-week-old fetus feels pain, has human functions "indistinguishable from ours" and can even sense approaching danger.

The producer and narrator of "The Silent Scream" displayed more than 500 copies of the videotape Tuesday at a gathering of like-minded activists in the Old Executive Office Building on the White House grounds.

They had hoped to give a ceremonial copy to Reagan personally but settled for a presentation to an aide.

Dr. Bernard Nathanson, the New York abortionist turned anti-abortion crusader who narrates the videotape, said copies would be given to every member of Congress and the Supreme Court.

Their reaction, he said, would be "a measure of this society."

Congressional legislation to negate the 1973 Supreme Court ruling allowing abortions has failed several times in recent years. However, supporters say they will continue the fight, buoyed in part by Reagan's encouragement.

The president told about 70,000 demonstrators on Jan. 22, "It's been said that if every member of Congress could see that film, they would move quickly to end the tragedy of abortion, and I pray that they will."

The title of the videotape comes from Nathanson's narration in which he says, "We see the child's mouth wide open in an silent scream" as an abortionist introduces an abortion instrument into the womb.

Pro-abortion groups have criticized that particular language, arguing that a three-month fetus is not aware of its surroundings, let alone able to recognize danger and react to it.

In addition, those groups have protested contentions by Nathanson — and Reagan himself — that fetuses are able to feel pain. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists also disputed Reagan on that last year, saying that "we know of no legitimate scientific information that supports the statement that a fetus experiences pain early in pregnancy."

Nathanson dismissed such arguments as "semantic acrobatics, an evasion."

In the videotape, which was played for reporters Tuesday, Nathanson shows a sonogram, which uses computer-reconstructed high-frequency sound waves to produce an image inside the womb.

In the description accompanying the sonogram, Nathanson says the fetus "does sense aggression in its sanctuary; it is moving away, one can see it moving to the left side of the uterus in an attempt to escape the inexorable instruments which the abortionist is using to extinguish its life."

"There is no question this child senses the most mortal danger imaginable."

Among critics, Barbara Radford, executive director of the National Abortion Federation, called the videotape "merely another piece of propaganda from the opposition."

"They do a nice job of focusing on the fetus in this piece" rather than the mother, she said. "What we have to continue reminding people is that this is not the whole truth; it is happening inside a woman's womb. The emphasis for us clearly is on that woman."

"We will continue to write about, talk about the public health impact of abortion ... how many women's lives have been saved by abortion," she said.

Despite controversy over the videotape's narration, Tuesday's showing was clearly an emotional experience for the 150 or so "pro-life" supporters who watched it.

Portions have been shown on the major television networks, and Nathanson predicted the networks eventually would show the 28-minute tape in its entirety. "I don't think they can resist the public pressure that's about to build," he said.

Falwell, Feminist Trade Barbs Over Abortion Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — They didn't shout or yell, but the head of the Moral Majority and the president of the National Organization for Women used tough rhetoric as they debated the volatile topic of abortion.

At a National Press Club luncheon Tuesday, Judy Goldsmith and the Rev. Jerry Falwell were civil but sometimes resorted to verbal barbs in their speeches and during a question-and-answer session.

Ms. Goldsmith portrayed the anti-abortion movement as dominated by men who have little understanding of women.

"Their exclusive focus on the fetus can only be grounded in an utter disdain for women, their moral character and their choices about their lives," she said.

Falwell rejected that argument.

"The reason I happen to be in this is not because I am a man, an American, a Baptist," he said. "I happen to believe that the civil rights of all human beings are important."

In her speech, Ms. Goldsmith criticized the rash of bombings against abortion clinic around the country.

These "terrorist attacks," she said, indicate the anti-abortion movement has failed to persuade Americans that abortion should be outlawed.

Those opposed to abortion have resorted to a campaign of "emotional manipulation, willful deception, vicious harassment, threats and outright terrorism," she said.

Falwell condemned violence against abortion clinics as the work of fanatics.

Despite his opposition to those tactics, he said the anti-abortion movement is winning.

production that was suspended after the chemical was responsible for more than 2,000 deaths at Union
Carbide's plant at Bhopal, India, on Dec. 3.

An internal investigation of the Indian leak probably will be finished by April and any concerns about safety in Institute "will be satisfactorily resolved" by then,

Carbide said in a statement.

"The restart will not be initiated until a full assessment of the Bhopal incident has been reviewed relative to the operation of the Institute plant," the statement said.

Moore said he is pleased that the methyl isocyanate, or MIC, unit will be going back into operation.

"The planned reopening of the MIC unit at Union Carbide is welcome news for the employees of the Institute plant and for the state of West Virginia in general," he said in a statement.

But Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.,

said he will call Union Carbide Chairman Warren Anderson before a congressional committee in Washington before production resumes.

"I find it astounding that they would go ahead and open the MIC unit without explaining further whether they know what happened in Bhopal and know whether it couldn't happen here," Waxman said.

Waxman and Rep. James Florio,
D-N.J., have pushed for tougher regulation of the U.S. chemical industry following the Indian catastrophe.

Florio said that he, too, was surprised by Carbide's announcement in light of Anderson's testimony before a congressional panel in Institute.

"Mr. Anderson indicated it would not re-open until they had a full report on the cause of the Bhopal accident. Either he's changed his mind, or he's expecting to get the report by then," Florio said.

The company "seems to be pre-judging" the results of its Bhopal investigation, said Waxman aide Jerry Dodson.

But Dodson said neither state nor federal agencies have the statutory authority to prevent startup of the MIC unit, adding that the only recourse would be a "public nuisance" lawsuit that would require a great deal of evidence.

U.S. Report Cites Improved Civil Rights In Latin America, Violations By Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, in its annual review of international human rights problems, says Soviet-bloc nations have "the most serious" rights violations, while "real progress" is being made in Latin America and the Caribbean.

And although the report praised the rights records in most democratic countries, the situation in Uganda, one of Africa's few parliamentary democracies, was described as "grave," with tens of thousands reported killed as a result of insurgent terrorism and government counter-measures.

Other countries singled out for unusually harsh appraisals were Albania, where conditions were said to be "exceptionally bad," with "extremely harsh prison conditions," and North Korea, described as "one of the most highly regimented and controlled" nations in the world.

Among anti-communist countries found to have rights problems, the report said there was a "general deterioration" in Chile following the imposition of a state of siege in November. The measures taken by the government included the internal exiling of 257 persons without trial and severe restrictions on political activity. The report also noted, however, that leftist terrorists were responsible for an undisclosed number of murders and hundreds of bombings last year.

Other pro-Western countries where human rights performance was said to have improved last year included the Philippines, South Korea and El Salvador.

The 1,453-page report, which is mandated by Congress and has been issued annually since the late 1970s, covers conditions in 164 countries through the end of 1984 and, in some cases, early 1985.

Asserting that objectivity was an important goal of the department's annual review, the report said that "while the Soviet Union presents the most serious long-term human rights problem, we cannot let it falsely appear that this is our only human rights concern."

According to the report, "Soviet performance in the realm of human rights fails to meet accepted international standards. The regime's common response to efforts to exercise freedom of expression is to incarcerate those concerned in prisons, labor camps or psychiatric hospitals."

Vietnam, a close Soviet ally, maintains "pervasive" surveillance and control over its citizenry, while the pro-Hanoi "puppet government" in neighboring Cambodia is responsible for "executions, forced labor, denial of legal process, forced relocations and arbitrary arrests."

The study said human rights groups have estimated the number of political prisoners in Cuba at between 250 and 1,000 and that many suffer from deficient medical treatment and deplorable living conditions.

But in an interview shown on the Tuesday night, Cuban President Fidel Castro said there are no

Cubans detained for their political or religious beliefs.

The State Department report called democracy "the surest safeguard of human rights" and said it was "encouraging" to see real progress coming about in the strengthening of democratic institutions, particularly in Latin America and the Caribbean.

President Reagan has said, the report noted, that 90 percent of the people of those regions live in nations either democratically governed or moving in that direction.

Democratic allies of the United States, including the West European nations, Japan, Australia and New Zealand, all were depicted as havens of individual liberty.

However, the report suggested that Uganda's return to democracy in 1980 has not produced improved protection of human rights, partly because of the country's "ill-disciplined army."

In Uganda's Luwero Triangle, "insurgency — and military reaction to it — has disrupted the lives of possibly 1 million persons" since 1981, the report said.

In addition to the reported tens of thousands dead, "an estimated half million people may have been forced from their lands, losing virtually all of their possessions," the report said.

The human rights situation in South Africa, a focal point of U.S. public attention in recent months, was marked by increased state repression and widespread detentions to put down urban unrest last year, the report said.

Under the apartheid system there, "the black majority suffers from pervasive discrimination in political, economic and social life," the report said.

In Iran, the report said that while "serious abuses" continue, including a probable several hundred political killings in 1984, there has been improvement over the immediate post-revolutionary period.

Much of that progress has occurred since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in December 1982, ordered an end to mail censorship and most unauthorized police searches of private homes, among other measures.

China, the study said, has undertaken a number of liberalizing reforms, but nonetheless the Communist Party or the socialist system

A hazardous chemicals team has been organized within the Fire-Rescue Department in order that officers may be better prepared to respond to chemical fires and disasters. For information, call 752-4137.

Feds Approve Space Funeral As Way To Go

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For $3,990, about the price of an upscale funeral with casket, vault and tombstone, a Florida firm will help you send the ashes of a loved one whirling around Earth.

The ashes will stay up for eternity, or 63 million years, whichever comes first.

A 300-pound capsule that could hold the ashes of as many as 10,330 people is planned for a late 1986 or early 1987 launch aboard a four-stage Conestoga rocket. The capsule will have a highly reflective outer skin, making it visible on clear nights as a comfort to those left behind.

The venture received the blessings of the Reagan administration Tuesday as "a creative response" to the president's urging of more commercialization of space.

The Transportation Department's approval — its first to a private venture — was given to Space Services Inc., headed by former Mercury astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton.

Slayton said his firm will receive $14 million from the Celestis Group of Melbourne, Fla., to launch the capsule into a 1,900-mile circular orbit.

The life of a spacecraft at that altitude is estimated by experts at 63 million years.

"We will begin marketing this in the next few weeks," Celestis Vice President James Kuhl said in a telephone interview. "The first mailing will go out this weekend to 23,000 funeral directors in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom."

He said Celestis will charge $3,990. For a full load, that would mean gross receipts of more than $40 million.

A midwest funeral director, Stan Louis of Kansas City, said the average price of a funeral is $2,500. Another $1,500 he said, would buy a "moderate to high-priced" service.

"We've already gotten calls from (relatives of) people who were cremated in the past, say 10 years ago, whose ashes are sitting around and haven't done anything," Kuhl said. "A lot of funeral directors have ... (cremated remains) sitting around their offices because families don't know what to do with them."

He said Celestis has a secret process to reduce ashes so that one human's remains will fit into a capsule two inches by 58ths of an inch. "Nothing is thrown away," Kuhl said.

For the first flight, the capsules — plated in gold or platinum with names engraved on the outside — will remain in the spacecraft. Later flights, which may be sent past the moon into outer space, will have ejection mechanism to make each capsule a separate space traveler, he said.

Kuhl was a cemetery executive for 19 years; the president of Celestis, John Cherry, has been a funeral director for 30 years. A third person involved is Buford Franklin, an engineer with a space contractor.

"Space Service Inc., which proposes to launch 'cremains' — cremated human remains — in history's first space burial, has shown that its mission meets the tests required for approval," the Transportation Department said in a prepared statement.

"They gave us a real fast response," Slayton said. "It took just a little over a month (since the application was filed) and that's pretty good in getting something through Washington."

The burial launch, when it happens, will represent reality catching up to fiction.

"The Loved One," a 1965 movie based on a novel by Evelyn Waugh, was a spoof on the funeral industry. It ended with the then-outlandish notion of a body relegated to space.

Study Cites Greater Number Of Poor, One-Parent Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's school population has changed radically in the past 15 years, with large increases in the number of children from broken homes and those living in poverty, an education analyst reported today.

Emily Feistritz, director of the private National Center for Education Information, released a demographic report on America's 44 million elementary and secondary school students.

The report provides compelling evidence of the need to improve the nation's schools, said Ms. Feistritz, a former teacher-educator who publishes several Washington-based newsletters.

"The difference between American children of today, compared with those of 1970 ... is nothing less than startling," said the report, "Cheating Our Children: Why We Need School Reform."

"Today we deal with a new kind of child, from a different background, with a different set of values, hopes and dreams," it said.

The study cites a wide range of statistics from the U.S. Bureau of the Census, the National Center for Education Statistics and other sources. Among them:

—One in five children now live in poverty; 23 percent of children under age 6 are poor.

—One in five children is being raised by a mother with no father in the home.

—The number of households headed by females with no husband present has doubled since 1970 and tripled since 1960. One-third of all households headed by women are poor.

—Only 27 percent of all households now have children living with them. Among married couples, only 49 percent have children at home, compared with 57 percent in 1970.

—Seventy percent of single parents work. Both parents work in more than half the families in which both the mother and father live in the home.

Goldwater Backs $33 Billion Defense Cut

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is proposing a three-year, $33 billion reduction in President Reagan's defense buildup as part of a Republican deficit-cutting strategy, congressional sources say.

Goldwater understands that Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., "needs cuts in defense in order to leverage Republicans and Democrats into making the unsavory cuts" contemplated for domestic programs, one congressional official said Tuesday.

The aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Arizona Republican stressed that his recommendation is dependent on the development of a comprehensive deficit-reduction plan that would include deep cuts in domestic programs.

The officials said Goldwater's proposal would allow Pentagon spending to rise by 4 percent annually for each of the next three years, in contrast to Reagan's call for a 5.9 percent hike next year and increases of 8.2 percent and 8.8 percent the following years.

In actual spending, Goldwater's plan would trim $2.1 billion from the president's recommendation next year, $9.2 billion in 1987 and $21.8 billion in 1988 for a total of $33.1 billion.

No details were available about what weapons, if any, would be affected by the proposal.

Many Republicans have conditioned their support of sensitive domestic spending cuts — including a one-year freeze on Social Security benefits — on a reduction in the defense budget.

But Goldwater's proposal was likely to be viewed by many lawmakers as too little to rally support for politically sensitive cuts such as a Social Security freeze.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has said, for example, that a spending freeze in defense is the "absolute minimum requirement."

Other lawmakers have discussed the possibility of holding defense spending rises to 3 percent annually for each of the next three years, a level that could satisfy the nation's commitment to NATO allies while achieving deeper budget cuts.

Dole is trying to produce a program to cut deficits to $100 billion by 1988, an effort that will require cuts totaling more than $260 billion over the next three years.

Republicans have been working in private for several weeks on a list of possible cuts, and so far, the most dramatic proposal to emerge is the Social Security freeze.

Paint Factory Explosion Kills 1, Injures 14 People

MIDDLESEX, N.J. (AP) — Smoke seeped from the rubble of a paint factory today after an explosion that killed a man and injured 14 other people sent a "huge ball of flames" 50 feet high and threatened to ignite a nearby chemical plant.

Middlesex County Prosecutor Alan Rockoff said it was "miraculous" that most of the 18 plant workers escaped injury Tuesday at the Chemray Coatings Corp. plant. Half of them were outside on a coffee break when the blast tore through the two-story brick building at about 10 a.m..

Ten hours later, authorities announced the blast had killed a man who Rockoff said apparently was a missing duplicating machine serviceman believed to "have been caught in the fire."

One of the injured was thrown through a window by the force of the blast — and nearby businesses and homes were evacuated as the sky filled with black smoke and flames.

Police Sgt. Gregory Sharkey said smoke continued to come out of the rubble today and a few firefighters remained on the scene.

High winds and pelting rain hampered firefighting efforts and drove the flames to nearby buildings, damaging a radiator repair shop and a tile company.

But Rockoff said firefighters kept the blaze from spreading to a nearby Union Carbide plant where drums of chemicals were stored.

"It could have set off a chain reaction," he said.

The blast occurred in this borough about 15 miles southwest of Newark and the fire was brought under control at 3:10 p.m., two hours before the evacuees were permitted to return.

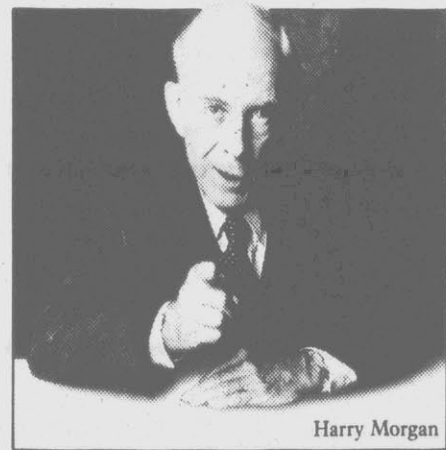

The cause of the explosion was under investigation but officials said it appeared it occurred in a room where chemicals are mixed to produce paint.

Police Sgt. Jerry Nowak, who was across the street from the plant in his patrol car when the blast occurred, said: "I felt the entire rear end of the car lift up and then drop down. I looked out the window and saw a huge ball of flame coming out of the center of the building."

The plant produced paint, varnishes, enamels and lacquers.

French Chefs Prepare Bash

NEW YORK (AP) — Armed with 70 pounds of truffles and 500 frogs, the five greatest chefs of France flew here to create the ultimate meal in honor of Pierre Franey, the man who popularized French cooking in the United States.

But the benefit dinner organized to raise $300,000 for the March of Dimes came close to culinary disaster when pastry chef Gaston LeNotre's plane — and his dessert — was delayed by bad weather for 14 hours.

"Can anyone do backup?" moaned the guest of honor Tuesday night as he wandered through the steamy kitchen of the Tavern on the Green restaurant. "Can we fry crepes?"

It was not until the 500 paying guests had sampled the sweetbreads with truffles, the frog's legs soup and the lobster dumplings with zucchini blossoms that LeNotre's plane landed from Paris.

Two station wagons whisked the chef and his confection from the airport to the diners as they sampled lamb with carrot, spinach and mushroom puree. LeNotre arrived just in time to serve an original creation called "Pleasure."

Franey, the author of the syndicated newspaper column "The 60-Minute Gourmet" and two cookbooks with the same name, awarded LeNotre with a Steuben glass snail for his efforts.

"There were 300 people in the plane, and by the end, we were prepared to feed them the dessert," joked LeNotre, whose concoction featured Grand Marnier custard and chocolate mousse. "Too bad for you!"

The four main dishes were created by Paul Bocuse, Roger Verger, Alain Chapel and Jacques Maximin, who all run restaurants granted the highest four-star rating awarded by the prestigious Michelin guide.

Their tall white hats waving like church spires, the four men stirred, whipped, rolled and pattered with the food for only two hours before it was served by 100 waiters, cleared by 40 busboys, and cleaned by 13 dishwashers who ate only pasta for dinner.

Three Americans Killed As Fire Hits Manila Hotel

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Fire raced through a luxury bayside hotel today, killing at least 24 people including a cook who leaped from the seventh floor, a U.S. Internal Revenue Service agent and two other Americans, authorities said.

Some of the 300 guests ran screaming from the 11-story Regent of Manila hotel in suburban Pasay when the fire began shortly after midnight, witnesses said.

It was the sixth hotel fire in the Philippines in four months. Police blamed three of the previous fires, which killed a total of 40 people, on arsonists, possibly Communist guerrillas.

The fire still burned in some parts of the building in the afternoon. Firemen, arriving in more than two dozen trucks, pumped water from the hotel swimming pool to help fight the flames.

Fire district superintendent Alfredo Garcia said firemen had difficulty getting into the smoldering building because of the dense smoke and intense heat.

"It's too hot and there's too much smoke," he said in a television interview. "So what's happening is we're fighting the fire only from the outside. We can't get in even with breathing apparatus."

Elevator shafts and air conditioning ducts sucked up the smoke like chimneys and spewed it into hallways and rooms, forcing firemen to retreat again and again in their struggle to recover bodies and search for survivors.

Later, firemen leaned out of windows on the upper stories, lowering bodies as crowds gathered to watch.

Many of the dead were foreigners, including at least three Americans, authorities said.

Policeman Enrico Palomar said one of the victims carried a Filipino drivers' license with the name Lewis Carrol Rowney, 62, with an address at the U.S. Subic Navy Base. But Chief Petty Officer Jack Leigh said officials at the base couldn't find the name in their records.

A group of guests who work for the IRS said one of their party had been killed and identified him as Edward Carroll, an agent based in Tokyo.

The U.S. Embassy declined to identify any American dead until relatives had been notified.

"I was screaming. I tried to block the smoke with wet towels and then went running down the hall," said Ann Douglas of Washington and one of 14 IRS officials attending a weeklong meeting at the hotel.

"It was the smoke that was most deadly," said Col. Rolando Siquijor, area police chief.

Church Of England Tests Basic Beliefs

LONDON (AP) — Spurred by a bishop's doubts over Jesus Christ's resurrection and virgin birth, leaders of the Church of England today debated some of their most basic beliefs. But they were urged by the church's spiritual head not to lose sight of their mission.

"The church has a gospel to proclaim, a faith to affirm. ... It is not a debating society," said Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, leader of 65 million Anglicans worldwide, including 3 million Episcopalians in the United States.

Church House in Westminster was packed for the debate by the General Synod, a 560-member leadership council of bishops, clergy and laity.

Listening intently was the Bishop of Durham, the Rt. Rev. David Jenkins, who sparked controversy last year by questioning the Virgin Birth, comparing the biblical account of the resurrection to a "conjuring trick with bones" and declaring that Christians are not obliged to believe that Jesus was divine.

Church officials stressed that the 60-year-old cleric was not on trial. No vote was to be taken afterward.

But his remarks were central to the main question under discussion — the role of bishops as guardians of church doctrine. Traditionalists had sought the debate to counter Jenkins' opinions.

Runcie said he welcomed the debate. He assured his flock: "The doctrines of the incarnation and the resurrection are not in doubt among your bishops."

He added, "Uncertainty about matters of belief and insecurity about authority (of bishops) are nerves never far from the surface in a church which takes pride in its breadth."

The attack on Jenkins' opinions was launched by Bishop John Taylor of Winchester, who said he was worried that questioning basic tenets would divide the church.

"In the past decade, in all walks of life, I have watched the broad middle ground being eliminated," he declared.

"The extremists occupy the field. Compromise is a term of abuse and confrontation is the order of the day. Anyone with clear eyes can see that it is a recipe for self-destruction, both to the nation and the church," he said.

He added, "People everywhere look to their religion for a sense of certainty, order and meaning. ... It helps nobody in the long run if we lose the balance."

Archdeacon Michael Perry of Durham defended his bishop, saying news accounts had distorted Jenkins' remarks. He said the bishop's faith was firm.

"Hands off the Bishop of Durham," Perry demanded.

But Phillip Lovegrove, a businessman, complained that Jenkins had "damaged the members of the Church of England in the pews and damaged the faith."

He urged the Crown Appointments Commission, which recommends bishop candidates, not to name "bishops who when they say the (Nicene) Creed ... give the impression that they have their fingers crossed behind their backs." The Nicene Creed is a confession of faith for many Christians.

Since his appointment last year by Queen Elizabeth II — temporal head of the church — Jenkins has often been in the headlines, not only for his religious views but over opposition to the economic policies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. He also has expressed sympathy for coal miners in their 11-month strike against pit closures.

At his consecration last June in York Minster, a parish priest seized the lectern and denounced Jenkins' religious views.

Three days later, the 700-year-old minster, one of Europe's finest Gothic structures, was struck by lightning and heavily damaged by fire. Critics claimed it was divine wrath over what they called Jenkins' blasphemy.

Jenkins, a former theology professor, said in a television interview about the Virgin Birth: "I'm pretty clear (it) is a story told after the event in order to express and symbolize a faith that this Jesus was a unique event from God."

Jenkins also said he believed in Christ's resurrection, but not that Jesus physically rose from the tomb, an account he likened to a "conjuring trick with bones."

The controversial bishop said he didn't think Jesus walked on water, doubted other New Testament miracles, and did not feel Christians were obliged to believe the Savior was divine.

Dismay spread in the state church

Exile Calls Korean Election Gains Democratic Victory

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who returned home from two years of self-exile less than a week ago, today called his new party's surprising gains in the National Assembly elections a "great victory for democratic forces."

Faced with the challenge to its authority, the ruling party of President Chun Doo-hwan said it will work with its opponents but declared stability in South Korea will be maintained.

Tuesday's National Assembly balloting saw the hastily formed New Korea Democratic Party emerge as the country's second strongest party, exceeding even its own expectations.

The outcome was likely to inject a fresh note into legislative proceedings that have largely been dormant during the past four years.

The new opposition party, which calls Chun a military dictator, is backed by South Korea's two leading dissidents — Kim Dae-jung, who returned from self-exile in the United States last Friday, and Kim Young-sam. Both have been barred from political activities since 1980.

With final results in at mid-afternoon today for the 92 two-seat districts, Korean media networks and headquarters of various parties gave the government's Democratic Justice Party 87 seats and the New Korea Democratic Party 50.

The rest of the seats were split among the old minority and splinter parties and independents.

With 92 seats in the 276-member, single-house assembly divided on a proportional basis, the ruling party should get another 61 seats to ensure its sizable margin, while the new opposition party should gain 18 more.

Before the voting, opposition figures had predicted the new party would get 20-35 seats.

The election campaign had drawn large, enthusiastic crowds and the voter turnout was tentatively put at a record 84.2 percent of the country's 24 million eligible voters. The last election was held in 1981.

There were no reports of major disturbances or election irregularities.

While ultimate power rests with the president in South Korea and Chun's term does not expire until 1988, the election was seen as the first test of popular support for the government since Chun rose to power following the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in October 1979.

The president's office did not comment on the voting tally.

But Kwon Ik-hyun, chairman of the ruling party, said the party would try to "reflect the electorate's desire on national administration as much as possible." He said the ruling political party "will conduct dialogue with any opposition group and with anyone in the opposition camp."

The party leader added, however, that the ruling group would seek "conciliation through dialogue within the framework of not disrupting the stability achieved in the past four years."

The results of the election and the expected activity in the assembly were likely to exert increasing influence on the political scene into 1988, when Chun has said he will step down to give South Korea its first peaceful transfer of power.

The outcome also is expected to prompt a quick Cabinet reshuffle and a shakeup in the top ranks of the party's organization. Cabinet changes have been predicted for months, in part because Prime Minister Chin Iee-chong has been ailing, but political observers said they likely would be expanded to try to minimize the effects of the election.

Kim Young-sam, who has been in-and-out of house arrest for weeks as he sought to carry out his political actions, said police were withdrawn late Tuesday from outside his home.

Clergy Week

The Civitans of Greenville are celebrating Clergy Appreciation Week this week in commemoration of the night in 1943 that the troop ship Dorchester was sunk with four chaplains aboard who had given their life vests to crewmen.

Keynote

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville will deliver the keynote address at the 1985 Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD) state conference in Raleigh Friday.

SADD, with 7,000 chapters in all 50 states, is a nationwide organization that educates high school and college students about drinking and driving. There are 50 chapters in North Carolina.

"This SADD conference, the first of its kind held in the state, will help SADD achieve its goal of one chapter in each of the state's counties," Jones suggested.

The conference will include workshops Friday and Saturday, with the keynote address set for 7 p.m. Friday at the North Raleigh Hilton.

Rep. WALTER JONES JR.

Pastor Honored

Elder Nathan Darden, pastor of Line Oak Free Will Baptist Church, was recently honored with a surprise birthday dinner party. Approximately 60 guests joined his wife, Patricia, in the celebration.

Gifts Presented

During the past Christmas season, 130 children received gifts through a program administered by the Pitt County Department of Social Services. According to Kurt Fickling, chairman of the Greenville Rotary Club's Christmas project over one-half of these children were provided with gifts by the local service club.

Stamps Available

An adequate supply of "D" stamps and other non-denominated postal items are available at the Greenville post office to help customers make a smooth transition after the postal rate change Sunday from the current 20-cent first class rate.

The items can be purchased in advance at the post office windows.

Nancy Wood, officer-in-charge at the Greenville post office, says the non-denominated "D" stamps in sheet, coil and booklet formats represent the new 22-cent first-class stamp going into effect Sunday.

She said "the non-denominated items are being made available because we estimate that stamp inventories in post offices at present will fall short of public demand, and we want to avoid customer inconvenience."

Commemorative stamps, beginning with the issue honoring composer Jerome Kern and other 22-cent stamps, are expected to replace the "D" stamps by the end of March.

Buddy Harrison

LIVE SEMINAR

FEB. 13, 14 & 15 7:00 p.m.

Buddy Harrison is a man walking after love with a vision for what God is doing today. He moves in the gifts of the Spirit with sensitivity and understanding.

Buddy was healed of paralyzing polio as a small boy and it was over 15 years ago that he answered the call of God on his life. During the 10 years with the Kenneth E. Hagin Evangelistic Association, he served as platform man, he developed the monthly magazine WORD OF FAITH, and he developed radio programs, tape ministry, video ministry and the correspondence school.

He is Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Harrison House, Inc., which began in November of 1975. Harrison House publishes and distributes Word teaching books for Christians by such authors as Fred Price, Norvel Hayes, Charles Capps, T.L. Osborn, Oral Roberts, Hilton Sutton, Marilyn Hickey, John Osteen and other great ministers throughout the world.

Buddy is the founder and pastor of Faith Christian Fellowship International Church in Tulsa, Ok., where over 1,300 people attend each Sunday. It is a family church, a teaching center, and a world outreach ministry.

Not only is Buddy Harrison a singer of psalms and spiritual songs, he is an excellent teacher of the Word of God, with the ability to communicate the principles from the Word with a New Testament love. He attributes any success he has to obeying the Spirit of God and living the Word.

Pastor Harrison had two years of classwork at Southwestern Assemblies of God Junior College in Waxahachie, TX., and earned his Bachelor and Masters Degrees in Business Administration and Ph.D. in Ministry from Golden State University. He and his wife, Pat Hagin Harrison, have three children, a son and two daughters.

The option two calendar contains less flexibility in makeup days than does option one, and the committee suggested "there appears to be no way to improve this flexibility."

The guidelines which the calendar committee worked with include:

- Ten holidays for 1985-86, including Sept. 2, Labor Day; Nov. 11, Veterans day; Nov. 28-29, Thanksgiving; Dec. 24-26, Christmas; Jan. 1, New Year's; March 31, Easter Monday; May 26, Memorial Day.
- There must be 180 student days.
- Ten annual leave days for teachers must be scheduled.
- The number of teacher workdays was arrived at by subtracting the first three guidelines from the total number of workdays in the 10-month calendar — generally 17-18 workdays.
- The calendar should be designed with efficient energy use in mind.
- Workdays should fall on Fridays and Mondays but not successive Fridays and Mondays.
- Mid-year exams should be held on a consecutive Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
- No orientation day is scheduled for the beginning of school.
- Calendar should allow days lost from snow to be made up easily.
- The teacher pay dates should be kept reasonably close to the previous school year.
- The beginning date for teachers must be selected so that the ending date does not fall on a Saturday or Sunday.
- Graduation and the last student day should not fall on the same day.
- No action was taken on the calendar and consolidation committee members noted they wanted to take the options to constituents and get feedback before a decision was made.
- In a report on consolidation of personnel services, Superintendent Eddie West of Pitt County told committee members "there's not that much gap" in the salaries of employees in the two systems. The biggest difference, he said, is in the area of custodial services, because response of a changing economy and he urged them to let their congressmen and senators know that they are against proposed legislation to ban or curtail merger and acquisition activity. He said those asking the legislators to enact this type of legislation are "management scared of losing their kingdoms who are putting in devices to insulate themselves from takeovers."

"Stockholders," he said, "and there are 42 million Americans who hold stock in publicly-traded companies, are the cornerstone of the free enterprise system. Without their confidence, the free enterprise system would crumble. We must protect their interests at all costs."

a prime time grid format to allow viewers to see at a glance the programs offered each night.

"This is a guide custom-designed for Greenville Cable TV," said Mary Jobe, marketing director of Multimedia, owner of Greenville Cable TV Inc. "The guide will make it much easier for the customer to plan family viewing."

The guide will be delivered to subscribers free during the months of March and April. After that time, the guide will cost $2 per month; the guide will continue to be free for subscribers with two or more pay television services.

Ms. Jobe said this is the first cable magazine Multimedia has produced in North Carolina.

Greenville cable subscribers will be able to rent remote control converters beginning in March, Pait added. The remote control will include a parental control device which allows parents to lock certain channels so children cannot view them.

Pait said Greenville Cable is adding these improvements "to ensure that we are on the leading edge of our technology."

In an interview after the news conference, Pait said that because of the 31-channel capability of the local cable system, old programming must be dropped to make a place for new programming.

Commenting on the recent deletion of Satellite Programming Network (SPN) in order to add the Black Entertainment Television (BET) channel, Pait said: "Recent surveys of ratings show that SPN was one of the least watched channels anywhere in the country. In order to add BET, we knew we were going to have to drop a channel. We looked at the entire viewing audience and 33 percent of the subscribers in Pitt County are black. We looked at the programming and decided to drop SPN."

Pait said a survey of area subscribers has not been conducted, but that requests are made at the cable television office. He said that because of requests, the Arts and Entertainment channel would be offered again in the future.

load management operations for January reduced the January billing for electricity by $181,917. This included a reduction in billing demand for water heaters of $86,202, voltage adjustments which saved $92,861, and a reduction in demand at the GUC Water Plant which saved another $2,854.

Wadie Lewis, superintendent of the water and sewer systems, reported that equipment tests at the city's new sewage treatment plant will begin Feb. 19, and said plant start-up might be during the first week of March.

In other business the commission awarded contracts to: Rigby

Brook Valley residents opposed to the line suggested a possible hazard to children and health. Representatives also said that trees would have to be cut, the power lines would be placed too closely to homes, and suggested that property values would decrease.

The commission is expected to entertain motions for reconsideration of the transmission line route at a workshop session on Feb. 26. Plans have been made to look into some questions raised by the Brook Valley residents within the next two weeks.

Commission members also discussed the question of annexation, and staff members were told to prepare a request for proposals for engineer surveys on installing sewer service to Brook Valley.

Green told commissioners that consolidation committee, told committee members work on an instruction management policy for merger of the two systems in on schedule and that recommendations should be available in the near future.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, after posting a tiny gain in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 0.55 on Tuesday after a 13.91 decline on Monday, was up 3.65 at 1,280.26 after the first half-hour of trading.

Advancing and declining issues were running nearly even among those listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts have said this week's break in what had been a generally steady five-week advance is only a temporary condition during which some traders have taken profits. The Dow Jones industrial average rose more than 100 points from early January through Jan. 29, when it peaked at a record 1,292.62.

But other analysts have said it is unlikely that companies will be able to maintain the rapid pace of earnings gains they turned in last year, and they say that could that cloud the outlook for stock prices.

In economic news, the government reported today that retail sales rose 0.7 percent in January following a revised 0.5 percent drop in December. The December figure had originally been reported as a 0.1 percent decrease.

The report said sales declined sharply in January at department and clothing stores, while auto sales gained strongly.

Among today's early prices on the NYSE, American Telephone & Telegraph was un-changed at 20 1/2. Unocal was down 1/2 at 47 and Phillips Petroleum was down 3/8 at 49 3/8.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up 0.55 to 1,276.61.

Advancing issues outpaced declines by nearly 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index was up 0.07 at 104.57.

Big Board volume totaled 111.12 million shares against 104.00 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.33 at 229.20.

Some of the stocks normally reported in this listing were not available today.

federal fiscal policy discouraging deficits and limiting demand for interest." Dr. Kreps said she "suspects by the end of the 1980s, we'll see some shifts" in economic policy.

Dr. Kreps, speaking on the economic policies and problems of Reagan's administration, gave the president high marks for reducing inflation and revitalizing growth of private business and industry. "It would have been difficult, however, not to have increased growth with huge government spending," she said. "The results in terms of reducing inflation have been spectacular but the question of who gets the credit (for the results) remains. The federal reserve was the one that opened up credit."

Dr. Kreps also gave Reagan high marks for his tax cuts, saying they "added spending power, particularly in capital-intensive industries and businesses."

The former commerce secretary said deregulation, another of Reagan's proposed goals, gets medium marks for success. "More progress was actually made during the past administrations than under Reagan," Dr. Kreps said. "The jury is still out on the AT&T decision." She said the decision was, in her opinion, "a horrible mistake."

Aside from the success of Reaganomics, current economic policies "leaves us and Reagan with huge problems," Dr. Kreps said. "They are problems that face the administration for the next four years and they are our problems — yours and mine."

Farmville Tops Aycock, 58-51

PIKEVILLE — Farmville Central, with four players in double figures, gained a 58-51 victory over hosting Charles B. Aycock in Eastern Carolina Conference basketball action last night.

Farmville's girls also came away with a win, rolling past Aycock, 71-53.

The Jaguars held a slim 16-13 lead after one period, but expanded that to 27-21 by intermission. They continued to pull away in the third period, running the lead out to 43-29. In the last quarter, Aycock attempted to rally, outscoring the Jaguars, 22-15, but they were too far back.

Bobby Evans led Farmville with 14 points while Bernard Taylor had 12 and Ronnie Barnes and Eric Baker each had 11. Tim Fuller led all scoring with 27 points for Aycock.

The Lady Jaguars built up a 20-15 lead in the first period of their game and ran that to 35-25 by the end of the first half. After adding just one point to the lead in the third quarter, Farmville ran away from Aycock, 24-17, in the final quarter to wrap up the victory.

Lisa Lang led the win with 24 points for the Jaguars, while Debra Joyner had 14 and Joy Peaden had 10. Kelly Malpass had 29 points, while Toni Coley and Emily Coley each added 10 for Aycock.

Kinston High School's Vikings lost their first Big East basketball game Friday night, and they quickly let Rose High School's Rampants know last night that there would be no repeat of it.

The Vikings — despite the fact that they really only seemed to be going through the motions — quickly ripped off a big lead and coasted to a 72-52 victory over the Rampants in the contest.

The win also clinched at least a tie for the Big East title for the Vikings, who are now 10-1 with three games left to play.

Kinston's girls also came away with a win, downing the Rampettes, 38-29 with a surge through the final five minutes of play.

Charles Shackleford, Kinston's 6-9 star who is headed for N.C. State, scored a game-high 20 points, but even he didn't appear to always be on top of his game. He missed on several dunk attempts and saw several rebounds snatched out of his grasp by shorter Rose players.

McKinney Is 1st Signee

Running back Reginald McKinney of Southern Wayne High School was the first East Carolina recruit to sign a national letter of intent today, confirming an oral commitment made last week.

As a senior, McKinney rushed for 2,037 yards on 231 carries for an 8-8 average, played defensive back, punted and returned kickoffs and punts for the Saints. McKinney ran for 1,423 yards in eight games as a junior.

McKinney represented North Carolina in the Shrine Bowl and was selected for the East-West All Star Game. He was also honored as All-State and All-East for his performance in 1984.

The Pirates have also received oral commitments from Brad Walsh, considered the top quarterback out of South Carolina, and defensive back Lynn Porcher of Dalzell Hillcrest (S.C.) High School. Walsh started at QB for South Carolina in the Shrine Bowl. Porcher reportedly chose ECU over Penn State.

Neither Walsh nor Porcher had signed as of press time.

A CLASSIC QUOTE

DETROIT (AP) — When Monte Clark was fired as head football coach of the Detroit Lions at the end of the 1984 season, he accepted the bad news with a quotation from Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"What lies behind us and what lies before us are small matters compared to what lies within us," was the comment of the one-time star offensive tackle.

Not that it was anything of a regular event, however. With Shackleford leading the way, Kinston held a 48-34 rebounding edge over the Rampants.

Kinston, getting the ball inside much of the time, shot 52.6 percent for the game while Rose made just 38.6 percent of its shots, taking a number from the outside.

The Rampants were successful on a number of inside shots, however, as forward Melvin Jenkins led the scoring for Rose with 16 points.

"They took advantage of everything we did," Coach Jim Brewington said. "We got no inside defensive game although our inside game was pretty good on offense. But they were just too powerful for us with Shackleford."

The Rampants, for the third straight game, were playing without a starter. Two games back, center Martin Norville sat out the Rocky Mount contest after having left his uniform in Greenville. Last Friday, Carlton Wilson missed with a knee injury, and last night, guard Lenny Langley was out with an ankle injury he suffered against Beddingfield.

"It seems like the good teams are catching us when we're not at our strongest," Brewington said. "I'm really not counting on Lenny being back for Fike (Friday). But we've still got the tournament and if we can win two games, we're in the state playoffs."

Kinston came on strong from the start, scoring the first eight points of the game while Rose was missing its first four shots, turning it over twice and getting no rebounds. Adrian Brewington finally broke the ice for Rose after 3:06, but Kinston still continued to pull away, barreling out to an 18-5 lead before the period was over. Rose made only two of 12 shots from the floor during the period and was outrebounded 15-6.

Early in the second period, Kinston ran its lead to 15 at 22-7 and then to 17 at 26-9. Rose then put on a small rally, trimming the lead to 28-17 before Kinston ran off seven more in a row, including a three-point play by Shackleford for a 35-17 lead, the Vikings' biggest of the first half. They finished the half up 37-19.

Kinston scored the first four points of the second half to run the lead to 22-41-19 but after that Rose was able to make a little headway, cutting the margin back to 16 on several occasions, finally trailing 51-35 at the end of the frame.

Shackleford boosted them back to a 23-point lead with 4:01 left, 62-39, and Vike Coach Paul Jones cleared his bench after that with Rose only able to cut three points off the lead the rest of the way.

In addition to Shackleford's scoring, Rodney Davis scored 16 for Kinston. Tony Dawson, who had scored 35 against Rose in the first meeting, got only six points and was twice stung with technicals. One came as he swung in the nets after a rebound attempt, and the other came after he slam-dunked the ball after a foul against Shackleford — well after the whistle.

Rose also got ten points from Tyrone Smith.

Rampettes-Valkyries

Rose's girls jumped off to a 7-0 lead and held a 9-2 margin after one period, but was unable to hold to it. Kinston rallied behind the scoring of Cathy Murrell and tied it twice in the second period, the last time at 15-15, the halftime score.

In the third period, Kinston twice more tied it up before moving ahead for the first time at 20-19. The two swapped it back and forth through the rest of the quarter, with Michelle McGleen hitting with three seconds left to give Kinston a 24-23 lead.

Kinston moved up by three on the first basket of the final quarter, but Rose rallied and went back out 29-26 with 6:26 left.

But with 5:29 to go, Pam Smith fouled out and Rose failed to score another point in the game as Joann Whitfield and Murrell led Kinston on a 12-0 string over the final 5:58.

"We just couldn't put it in the hole when it counted," Coach Bill Kurkyndall said. "Murrell killed us, but we expected that. We just tried to stop the others and couldn't do enough ourselves."

Murrell finished with 17 for Kinston while Chris Holec led Rose with eight.

The loss dropped Rose's boys to 4-7 in league play and 9-10 overall. The Rampettes are now 4-7 and 8-12.

Rose travels to Wilson Fike on Friday.

Belhaven Nips Bullets In OT

BELHAVEN — Braddy Cox scored five points in an overtime period to lead Belhaven to a 45-36 overtime basketball victory over Jamesville last night.

The loss kept the Bullets from taking over second place all alone in the Tobacco Belt Conference as Bear Grass also lost.

Belhaven's girls nipped Jamesville 37-35 in their game.

Jamesville sped out to a 15-10 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but the action slowed considerably in the second frame. The Bullets got only four points but held Belhaven to just two for a 19-12 lead as the half ended.

Belhaven took control in the third period, outscoring the Bullets, 12-6, to cut the lead back to 25-22. In the fourth quarter, Belhaven moved ahead, but Robbie Harris hit with about 30 seconds left to tie it at 34-34. Belhaven missed a chance to move back ahead and a shot by Jamesville at the horn rimmed out.

In the overtime, Belhaven outscored Jamesville, 11-2, led by Cox' five points.

Ed Burroughs led Belhaven with 16 points while Wayne Moore hit 10. Tracy Peele led Jamesville with 10.

Jamesville falls to 9-6 in the league, 9-8 overall.

In the girls' game, Jamesville failed to score in the opening quarter while Belhaven rolled up an 8-0 lead. But the Bullets outthit their hosts in the second quarter to cut it to 16-10 by halftime. In the third period, the Jamesville rally continued, finally tying it at 21-21.

In the final quarter, however, the Lady Bullets could not pull it out. After tying it again at 35-35, Jamesville saw Belhaven score the final goal of the night, then the Lady Bullets missed on one last chance to tie at the horn.

Tellie Cotton led Belhaven with 18 points while Cindy Getchell and Tammy Crisp each had 16 for Jamesville.

The Lady Bullets are now 4-11, 4-13.

Jamesville closes out the regular season on Friday hosting Chocowinity.

BETHEL — North Pitt went without a field goal in the second half, but Paul Streeter sank six free throws in the final 40 seconds as the Panthers pulled out a 47-40 victory over SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday to set up a showdown against Ayden-Grifton Friday for the Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference regular season title.

Ironically, the Panthers connected on 14 out of 24 attempts from the free throw line in the second half to hold on for the win after jumping out to a 33-21 halftime bulge.

"Sometimes we're our own worst enemy," said North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans, whose team is now even with Ayden-Grifton at 10-1 in the conference. "If we don't play any better than this, it won't be a game (Friday against Ayden-Grifton)."

"In the first half we played well; everybody was in the offense. In the second half, we got some shots but had individuals decide not to play well. You've got to have five playing as a team."

Senior Levon Shaw led the Panthers with 12 points and 13 rebounds, while junior forward Clifton Williams posted 11 points and grabbed eight boards.

Tim Walker paced SouthWest, now 2-8 in the ECC, with 10 points, and Earl Wooten tallied nine points and pulled down eight rebounds.

The Cougars posted the first seven points of the third quarter to trim the margin to 33-28 before Shaw connected on three out of four free throws for the Panthers. But that was all the offense North Pitt could manage, as SouthWest cut the gap to 36-32 going into the final period.

Billy Gray scored inside to open the fourth quarter for SouthWest, but Shaw, Williams and Gentry Sneed each hit on one free throw and Link Little added a pair to spread the margin to 41-34 with 53 seconds left. Columbus Sharpe sank a shot inside for the Cougars, and Streeter responded with his first two free throws to maintain a seven-point Panther advantage.

Gray scored and was fouled on a follow-shot with 30 seconds remaining. Gray missed the free throw, but Wooten grabbed the carom and scored inside cut the margin to 43-40 with 28 seconds left.

Streeter added a pair from the line at the 25-second mark, then set the final margin with two more with three seconds left.

"That was one good thing he did," Deans said. "If I had to look for a bright spot, it was the play of Clifton Williams. His mistakes were hustling mistakes; I can accept that. It's when they're from not trying hard enough that it hurts the team."

Williams posted eight points in the first quarter, as the Panthers scored the final six points of the period to take a 16-9 lead. Williams drove inside for a bucket and Shaw added a pair of field goals to spark the Panthers.

North Pitt outscored SouthWest 7-2 through the 6:11 mark of the second quarter to take control. Sneed completed a three-point play and added a follow-shot inside to lead the Panther surge. A 17-footer by Little gave the Panthers their biggest lead at 31-17 with 2:10 left in the half.

The Panthers, now 19-2 overall, host Ayden-Grifton Friday before entering the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament next week.

LADY COUGARS, Pant-HERS
Pam Gorham fired in 22 points to lead top-ranked SouthWest Edgecombe to a 74-37 thrashing of the Pant-HERS in the girls game.

Teresa Mayo added 15 points and Terri Conderly 11 for SouthWest.

Regina Cox pumped in 25 points including 11 out of 15 from the free throw line to spark the Pant-HERS, now 3-8 in the conference and 9-13 overall.

"I told the girls they've got to have mental satisfaction that you've done the best you could," North Pitt Coach Randy Avery said. "Our whole idea was to keep three people inside and let them shoot outside. The fouls we committed on layups didn't bother me; I'd rather put them on the free throw line than let them have (layups).

"We played well; they just have more talent and experience than we do. We held them under 90 points; that's not great, but it was one of our goals."

The Lady Cougars jumped out to a 23-9 lead at the end of the first quarter, then expanded the margin to 38-16 at halftime. SouthWest outscored the Pant-HERS 18-8 in the third quarter, then opened the final period with 11 unanswered points to take a 67-24 lead with 5:48 left.

SouthWest Edgecombe is currently in first place in the ECC with a 10-0 record, while 20-0 overall. The Lady Cougars are also in a showdown Friday for the top slot in the ECC tourney, as SouthWest owns a 11-0 conference mark while Greene Central follows at 10-1. The Lady Rams host SouthWest Friday looking for revenge in the rematch.

Southern Nash Defeats Rams

SNOW HILL — Phil Bryant pumped in 25 points and Wilbert Powell added 16 as Southern Nash used a 19-3 third-quarter scoring advantage to take a 60-48 victory over Greene Central Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school basketball.

Cyndi Hicks connected on 14 consecutive free throws and finished with a game-high 28 points while teammate Cynthia Jones posted 22 points as the Lady Rams of Greene Central thrashed Southern Nash 66-31.

The victory lifts the Lady Rams to 10-1 in the Eastern Carolina Conference standings, while SouthWest Edgecombe is 12-0 atop the standings. Greene Central hosts SouthWest Friday for a regular-season title showdown.

"We came out very cold in the third quarter," Greene Central Coach Gregg Ashorn said. "I can't really explain it except that we had three kids under the weather. Bryant came out and hit three big jumpers to get them going."

The Rams held a 28-26 halftime edge before collapsing in the third quarter. Greene Central outscored the Firebirds 17-15 in the final period after trailing by 14.

"We've just got to regroup and get ready for Friday night," Ashorn said. "We've slid the last two games; we've got four or five days to get them together."

Greene Central hosts SouthWest Edgecombe Friday to close out the regular-season schedule. The Rams are now 3-8 in the ECC and 6-15 overall.

Lakers Rally By Bears, 38-35

BEAR GRASS — Mattamuskeet rallied after a one-point first quarter and pulled off a 38-35 upset of Bear Grass last night in the Tobacco Belt Conference basketball race.

Bear Grass' girls, however, came away with a 49-39 win in their outing.

The loss dropped the Bears to 9-6 in the league, 13-8, with one game left to play. Going into the day, the Bears had been tied for second place in the league standings.

The Lady Bears, meanwhile, improved their record to 8-7 in the conference, 11-7 overall.

Bear Grass held the Lakers to only one free throw in the opening quarter of the boys' game, scoring six points of their own. But the Lakers took over in the second period with a 13-7 advantage. That pushed them into a 14-13 lead at the half.

In the third period, the Lakers stretched the lead out to 27-23, then saw the Bears come back to tie it up at 33-33, before pulling away to gain the win.

Jerry Shelton led Mattamuskeet with 14 points while Brian Colettrain had 11 to lead the Bears.

Bear Grass' girls inched out into a 9-8 lead after one quarter, but Mattamuskeet came back to take a 16-15 lead at the half. The Lady Bears, however, took control again in the third, 18-11, building up a 33-27 lead. They finished off the Lady Lakers, 16-12, in the final period.

Amy Lilly led the Bears with 15 points while Mary Rogerson had 14 and Sharon Land and Lori Cowan each had 10. Nadine Whitfield and Mary Brimmage each had 18 for Mattamuskeet.

Missouri Free Throws Upset Kansas

By The Associated Press
Making those foul shots is always important. But the ones at the end of the game get noticed more.
Jeff Strong and Dan Bingenheimer each provided clutch shooting from the foul line in the late moments Tuesday night to help Missouri hold off No. 10 Kansas 62-55 in a Big Eight basketball game.
"When you hit the free throws in the last few minutes, it seems to be more critical," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said after winning his first game in four trips against Kansas Coach Larry Brown.
Derrick Chievous led host Missouri with 15 points and Malcolm Thomas added 14. Strong finished with 11 and Bingenheimer had 10.
The two other ranked teams that played each won. No. 1 St. John's beat Columbia 68-49 and No. 8 Syracuse tripped Providence 82-76.
Missouri's victory continued its return to winning ways in the Big Eight. The Tigers lost their first four games in the conference, but have won five straight since then.
Kansas trailed 30-27 at halftime and never got closer than three points. The Jayhawks pulled within 56-53 on a basket by Danny Manning with 2:10 left before Strong countered with a basket.

After Greg Dreiling scored for Kansas, Strong sank two foul shots for a 60-55 lead that stood up.
"We're happy because we're playing well and beating the teams that are doing well in the conference," Stewart said.
Missouri improved to 15-9, while Kansas slipped to 20-5 overall and 7-2 in the Big Eight.
"Life's tough in the Big Eight," Brown said.
"We're playing hard, playing well and having a good time now," Stewart said. "We've accepted our shortcomings and we're doing the things we do well now."
Calvin Thompson scored 16 points for Kansas and Dreiling had 13.

Top Twenty
In a matchup of New York teams, St. John's pulled away in the second half to down Columbia. It was the 15th straight victory for the Redmen, the longest winning streak in Division I.
With a record crowd of 3,509 watching at Columbia's Levien Gym, St. John's bolted to a 26-8 lead and appeared headed toward a rout. But Columbia stuck with its deliberate style and trailed 30-22 at intermission, and then got the first basket of the second half to pull within six points.

"Of course, I had the sugar plums dancing in my head," Columbia Coach Wayne Szoke said. "If not, I shouldn't be coaching."
That was as close as the Lions got, however, as All-American Chris Mullin and Walter Berry helped St. John's pull away. Mullin and Berry each finished with 14 points for the Redmen, now 20-1. Columbia is 7-11.
At Syracuse, Rafael Addison scored 31 points and the Orangemen fought off stubborn Providence in a Big East game.
Addison got 21 points in the second half and his long jump shot with 3:16 left gave Syracuse a 70-64 lead and appeared to drain Providence's momentum.
The Orangemen raised their record to 17-4 and 7-4 in the conference. Providence, which has never beaten Syracuse since the Big East was formed in 1980, is 9-16 overall and 2-10 in the league.
Dwayne Washington added 16 points for Syracuse, while Keith Lomax had 18 for the Friars.
Others
Alfredrick Hughes scored 28 points and climbed into seventh place on the all-time NCAA scoring list in leading Loyola, Ill., over DePaul 78-71. Hughes now has 2,634 points. Loyola led almost the entire way in beating the Blue Demons, who were unranked this week for the first time this season.
Michael Adams scored 21 points and handed out nine assists to lead Boston College past Seton Hall 101-83 in a Big East game. It was the 12th straight loss for Seton Hall.

Boys Leads Third-Round Qualifying At Daytona
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Canadian driver Trevor Boys led third-round qualifying Tuesday with a fast lap of 197.092 around Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile oval.
Boys, driving a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, improved considerably from his 194.809 lap in the first round of time trials last Saturday.
Fifteen drivers braved gusty winds Tuesday to make qualifying attempts.
Jimmy Means, in another Chevy, was the second fastest Tuesday, jumping all the way from a first-day lap of 185.801 to 195.376 in another Monte Carlo.
Not far behind were Morgan Shepherd at 194.928 and J.D. McDuffie 194.192. Satch Worley followed at 193.970.
Tom Sneva, an occasional stock car racer, but a regular on the CART Indy-car circuit and winner of the 1983 Indianapolis 500, improved his qualifying somewhat to 192.728. His Pontiac didn't even get to Daytona until the night before the first qualifying session.
The laps turned in during the time trials, which end with a session Wednesday, will determine starting positions for Thursday's twin 125-mile qualifying races.
Those two races will determine positions two through 30 in the 40-car starting lineup for Sunday's feature. The rest of the field will be filled by virtue of the speeds being turned in this week.
Bill Elliott and Cale Yarborough, both in Ford Thunderbirds, locked in the front-row starting spots last Saturday with the two fastest qualifying laps in stock car history. Elliott took the pole at 205.114, while Yarborough got the outside spot at 203.814.
Earnhardt, the 1980 Winston Cup champion, was third at 184.809, followed by Morgan Shepherd at 184.733 and L.D. Ottinger, the top qualifying Sportsman series regular, at 184.649, all in the dominant Pontiacs.

Tuesday's qualifying speeds for the Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

West Craven Downs D.H. Conley 69-44

VANCEBORO — Morris Jones scored 20 points to lead West Craven High School to a 69-44 Coastal Conference basketball victory over D.H. Conley's Vikings last night.
Conley girls rolled up a 52-42 win in their game over the Lady Eagles.
The Eagles inched out into a 14-12 lead after one period of the boys game and then blew the Vikings right off the court in the second quarter. West Craven scored 24 points in the period, holding Conley to just nine and soared out to a 38-21 lead by intermission.
In the third quarter, both teams matched points with West taking a 51-34 lead into the final period. In that, West held an 18-10 advantage over the Vikings.
Tim Cox added 15 and Marvin Dawson had 10 for West Craven, while Jeff Wright had 13 and Steve Mills had 12 for Conley.
The loss drops Conley to 3-6 in league play and 4-17 overall.
Conley's girls held only a 10-8 lead after one quarter of play, and saw West Craven rally to take a 23-16 lead in the second half.
But in the third period, Conley struggled back and cut the lead to 33-29, then outscored West, 23-9, to power past the Lady Eagles and take the win.

Trellen Boyd led Conley with 22 points while Lisa Mills added 18. West Craven was led by Linda Gath with 15 and Jarwan Cox with 14.
The Conley girls up their record to 6-3 in league play and 11-11 overall.

Tigers Upset Pack In Double Overtime

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School upset Washington, 53-52, in a double overtime Northeastern Conference basketball game last night. Washington's girls, however, rolled up a 43-25 win in their outing.
The win boosted the Williamston record to 8-7 in the league and 12-9 overall while Washington falls to 10-5, 15-6. The Washington girls are now 9-6, 12-7, while Williamston is 3-12, 4-17.
Washington jumped off to a strong lead, 20-7, in the first period, but Williamston rallied in the second frame to make a big comeback, 19-7. That cut the Pam Pack lead to 27-26 at the half.
Williamston eased into the lead, 36-35 in the third period, and the two stayed neck-and-neck the rest of the way. Both had the chance to win the game in regulation, with Mike Griffin tying it with two free throws at 40-40. Washington missed on its final shot.
In the first overtime there was no scoring until the final 12 seconds when Griffin and Earl Randolph hit single free throws for their teams to make it 49-49. Washington had the ball for the final six seconds, but did not get a shot off.
In the second overtime, Jesse Ward hit a free throw with 43 seconds left to go in the period, putting the Tigers ahead, 53-52, and Washington failed to connect after that.
Griffin led Williamston with 18 points while Tony Doughty had 12 and Ward had 13. Washington was led by Adrian Dudley with 19 and Steve Austin with 11.

Washington's girls, after leading 11-8 in the first period, ran the lead out to 21-12 by the end of the half. In the third period, the Lady Pack outhit Williamston, 15-4, pushing the lead to 36-16. Washington then coasted home with the win.

Indianapolis Tabs 'Arrows'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — If a group of Indianapolis investors seeking a baseball expansion team for the city has its way, Hoosiers could be cheering the home team "Arrows" in 1987.
Thomas A. Binford, chairman of Indianapolis Baseball Inc., announced Tuesday the group had chosen the nickname Arrows for a possible expansion franchise.
He said the group considered 300 names. Several other Indian-related names were discarded, Binford said, either because other pro sports teams already use them or because of possible trademark problems.
"We think the name Arrows is distinctive and carries forward an important Indian heritage for our city and state," said Binford.

Jackets in the second quarter, 23-4, taking a 37-14 halftime lead. Roanoke Rapids rallied in the third, 18-11, cutting the margin back to 48-32. But in the final quarter, Roanoke outraced the Jackets to the wire, 22-10 to record the easy win.

Gloria Duggins led Roanoke with 22 points while Cheryl Randolph hit 20 and Robbie Harris had 18. Elizabeth Barden had 14 and Lisa Price, 12, for Roanoke Rapids.

Roanoke closes out the regular season tonight hosting Ayden-Grifton in a non-conference game.

Hooker, Harris Lead Tribe Past Creswell

CHOCOWINITY — Roy Hooker and Henry Harris fired in 16 points each as the Chocowinity Indians held off Creswell for a 58-53 upset victory in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school basketball action Tuesday.

Daryl Moore added 12 points for the Tribe, now 7-8 in the Tobacco Belt and 7-14 overall.

Vick Blount pumped in 21 points to lead Creswell, while Danny Moore finished with 14 points. Creswell still leads the conference with an 11-5 mark, while 13-6 overall.

"We came out with a box-and-one defense" on Danny Moore," Chocowinity Coach DeWayne Kellum said. "He'd been averaging about 21 points a game, and we wanted to see who else would come forward for them and score."

"We did what we wanted to do. We had them shook up; they didn't know who was going to shoot for us. This was probably our best game of the year in keeping with the game plan."

Creswell took and 11-8 lead after the first quarter, but the Tribe outscored Creswell 25-11 in the second quarter to take a 33-22 halftime edge.

Creswell posted a 20-14 scoring advantage in the third quarter to trim the margin, but the Tribe held even at 11-11 in the final period to earn the upset.

"In the first quarter, we started letting them run," Kellum said. "You can't let them get their running game going, so we started dropping two people back on defense to cut them off. (Danny) Moore came alive at the end — even with someone on him."

In the girls game, Tawanda Gerald pumped in 20 points and Kim Green added 16 as the Lady Tribe downed Creswell 62-50. Zina Warren added 13 points for Chocowinity, while Cassandra Davenport paced Creswell with 20.

The Lady Tribe is now 11-4 in the Tobacco Belt and 15-4 overall.

Chocowinity travels to Jamesville Friday to close out the regular season.

Heels, Terps Look To Close ACC Gap

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With Georgia Tech taking the night off, North Carolina and Maryland tangle in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action tonight to break a tie for second place and get a half-game closer to the No. 6 Yellow Jackets.

Both the 13th-ranked Tar Heels and the 20th-rated Terrapins are 5-3 in conference play, one game behind 7-3 Georgia Tech after Sunday. Maryland lost ground Saturday when No. 7 Duke posted a 70-62 victory and denied Coach Lefty Driesell a chance at his 500th career victory.

North Carolina's last conference action was nearly one week ago, when the Tar Heels held on to beat Virginia 82-73. Coach Dean Smith's team then went to Baton Rouge and took a 75-70 victory over Louisiana State.

In other conference action, Wake Forest goes to Clemson. Also, North Carolina State hosts Maryland-Eastern Shore and Stetson is at Duke.

Driesell hasn't had much success against Smith lately, having dropped three straight games to the Tar Heels. But Driesell is quick to mention that it's the players who will earn his 500th victory.

"I have never scored a point, and neither has Dean. It's North Carolina against Maryland. If it's me versus Dean, then I'm not doing too good," said Driesell, who is 9-27 lifetime against Smith since he arrived at Maryland in 1969.

"I hope it happens soon, because I'm getting tired of talking about it," he added. "This game is important because we're going for our 20th win of the year, and it's an ACC game."

Kenny Smith sank five straight free throws in the closing seconds to give North Carolina its 18th victory. Coach Smith was pleased with his team's response in Tiger Territory.

"Traditionally, we are pretty good on the road. We play with poise and confidence," Coach Smith said. "But I think this was the best we've played all year."

Clemson defeated South Carolina last Saturday after taking their lumps from the Wolfpack earlier last week. Wake Forest guard Delaney Rudd said he and his teammates are wary of Clemson's run-and-gun attack.

Lawmakers Expect Early Debate On Tax Measures

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — If the Legislature is to approve significant tax reform this year, it will have to break tradition and begin debating the bills before adopting the biennial budget, lawmakers say.

"My guess is some tax bills — inventory, intangibles — will be considered early enough to know what effect cuts would have on the budget," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, co-chairman of the Revenue Laws Study Committee.

"If they're not considered early, and we follow the usual procedures, there will not be any major tax reductions this year," he added.

Traditionally, major tax proposals have been put on hold until the appropriations committees decided how much to spend. If more money was needed, the finance committees provided it by sending tax-increase measures to the Senate and House.

That's what happened in recession-plagued 1983. Facing a budget shortfall, the Legislature approved $135 million worth of tax increases on alcoholic beverages, automobiles, and boats, plus an accelerated corporate income tax schedule. Lawmakers hammered out the package over the July 4 weekend.

This year, the process may be reversed, said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"It will be my intention to get the tax bills enacted before the appropriations process is completed," said Rauch, president of a Gastonia firm that manufactures Christmas ornaments. "It's the way business operates. The costs are determined before the product is marketed."

The Senate Finance Committee's first meeting is tentatively scheduled for next Wednesday, Rauch said. No inaugural meeting of the House Finance Committee has been set, said its chairman, Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus.

Decisions on cuts probably will await the Department of Revenue's biennial tax-collection forecast, which usually is made in mid-April, lawmakers said.

The centerpiece of Gov. Jim Martin's legislative program is repeal of the taxes on intangible assets and business inventories and the sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines. He is expected to give details of the plan during his State of the State address Feb. 28.

Rauch, Lilley, Rep. J. Paul Tydall, D-Onslow, and Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, have proposed partial or total elimination of the intangibles tax. Winner favors giving local governments the option of repealing the inventory tax.

Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, at the behest of House Speaker Liston Ramsey, introduced bills to reduce income tax rates for the first $2,000 of income. Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, would give the poor an income tax credit for the sales taxes the pay for food.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, last week proposed increasing the sales tax by one-half cent and exempting money in safes, safety-deposit boxes and bank accounts from the intangibles tax.

"It's my guess that after all the revenue bills come in, we'll take a look at the whole spectrum ... and put together an omnibus bill similar to the one in 1983, except that we'll be cutting," said Mavretic, a House Finance Committee vice-chairman.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee, said neither the spending nor the tax-writing committees will dominate.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Wednesday, February 13, 1985 21

"We'll be coordinating with them closely," Rand said. "We've got competing interests — tax reform and education, where we need to increase spending. We'll have to keep abreast of what the finance committees are doing, because it's got to come out even in the end. We've got to balance the budget."

That's one reason spending and finance committees are meeting jointly this week for briefings on the state's fiscal condition and the budgeting process, Rand said.

School Fire Ruled Arson

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A fire that caused more than $600,000 damage to an east Charlotte elementary school was started deliberately, according to investigators.

Assistant Fire Chief Robert Ellison said investigators concluded the fire was set at Albemarle Road Elementary School on Friday night, but declined to reveal how or if there are suspects.

"Arson investigators finished sifting the remains of the 12-room wing at Monday and then allowed school officials to try to salvage books and other materials."

"I'm not surprised," Charlotte-

Mecklenburg Schools Supt. Jay Robinson said, "but I'm disappointed to find that it was set."

In the last 10 years, Ellison said, between 25 and 30 school fires have been set, but all were small.

"This is the largest we've ever had in a school," he said.

Investigators estimate the fire caused $600,000 to $700,000 damage, he said.

School officials on Monday prepared to move 300 of Albemarle Road's 650 students to Midwood Elementary for the rest of the school year.

Lee Named Personnel Director

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed Richard V. Lee as the state personnel director and Richard G. Chaney as district court judge in the 14th Judicial District.

Lee, 60, will direct the Office of State Personnel under the supervision of the State Personnel Commission and Martin. A former U.S. Army sergeant, Lee is the vice president of human relations for Jones Group Inc. in Charlotte and former vice president of industrial relations for J.A. Jones Construction Co. in Charlotte.

"With Richard Lee's background in labor relations, I am confident that he will do a fine job as state personnel director," Martin said.

Chaney, 35, is filling a vacancy in Durham County created when Judge J. Milton Read Jr. was appointed to the Superior Court.

House Panel Approves Legislation Spelling Out Property Settlements

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee has approved unanimously a bill that would keep one spouse from taking property belonging to the other in the middle of a divorce.

"If you and your wife separate, and you try to take her clothes or ... a family heirloom, there's currently no provision to stop you," Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said after the bill was approved by the House Judiciary I committee Tuesday. It now goes to the House floor.

The problem isn't widespread, Hackney said.

"But if you're one of the people victimized, it's a big problem to you," he said. Furniture, automobiles, and valuable documents are among the items that have been seized improperly, he said.

The bill would extend the same protection to personal property as the 1981 Equitable Distribution Act gives to jointly-owned property. The 1981 act requires that both spouses get a fair share of their jointly-owned property in event of divorce.

The bill would allow judges to issue injunctions to stop the disposal of separately owned property, as well as jointly owned property, Hackney said.

Violators could be forced to pay for the items they take.

If passed, the law would take effect Oct. 1. Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said he was worried the delay would leave people unprotected. But Hackney said it's customary to give judges, attorneys and others a few months to become familiar with such changes in the law.

In other legislative action:

A local bill filed in the state House would allow the Bladen County town of Dublin to continue operating without a police force.

The town of 477 people has not had a policeman for three years because of financial factors, Mayor Irene Brisson said Tuesday, but is required to hire a constable, regular policemen or special policemen by its 1913 charter.

"We've really got a problem because Dublin essentially has two charters," Mrs. Brisson said. "The first one was in 1913, but it really wasn't kept up. In the early 1950s, people decided to go with a town again and came up with a charter that superseded the one from 1913." For three years, the county sheriff's department has provided law enforcement for the town.

The bill, filed by Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, would revise the original charter, but would not prevent the town from hiring a policeman in the future, Mrs. Brisson said.

"It's either do without a police department or go up on the tax rate substantially," Mrs. Brisson said. "In a little village like Dublin, a big tax increase is pretty hard to take. Anytime the board wants to have a police force, they can put it in when we consider the budget."

Troopers
The North Carolina Highway Patrol would have 100 more troopers over the next two years under a bill filed Tuesday by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

The bill would appropriate $2.15 million to add 50 troopers in fiscal 1985-86 and $3.7 million to add 50 more in the following year.

"I feel this is absolutely necessary," Miller said. "Our highway patrol ... has not had a manpower increase since 1973. In that time, car registrations have gone up, highway miles have gone up and the duties of our officers have increased."

Miller said the new troopers, which would give the patrol a nearly 10 percent increase in manpower, would be added where they are most needed across the state.

Rep. Joe Mavretic said his bill to amend the utility service sales tax is "basically a cleanup bill for one we passed in 1984."

The bill makes all retail sales of electricity, piped natural gas or telephone service subject to sales tax and gives municipalities or state agencies selling electricity or gas a 3 percent deduction on their markup on taxable sales.

"The way it was written, 14 or 15 municipalities or associations were outside the original bill or were overtaxed," Mavretic said. "This should correct that."

The Senate Insurance Committee passed a bill to clarify the priority of claims against insurers in financial trouble and being run by the Insurance Department.

Under the bill, the first claims against the company's assets would go to administering the insurer's assets. The second priority would be to pay employees whose paychecks were interrupted when the company faltered. Then money would go to claims of less than $300,000, claims for unearned premiums and, finally, claims for more than $300,000 and claims for under- and uninsured motorists coverage.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said the bill is intended to "make sure individual policyholders are taken care of first."

State House Democrats, meeting in their first caucus of the young legislative session, emerged after nearly an hour with little to say about discussions they held behind closed doors.

"We had some real good discussions, but we didn't do much of anything significant," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said after the caucus.

"We mostly just recognized this is the first caucus of the year, but there probably will be some more," said Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt.

Hunt said Democrats discussed Gov. Jim Martin's decision to comply with the Legislature's suggestion that he give his State of the State address on Feb. 28. He added that the resolution asking Martin to appear would likely pass the House on Wednesday.

Asked if any strategy sessions went on in the meeting, Hunt said, "I don't think any strategy's necessary. Everyone is pretty much in agreement."

Legislators Get New Locations

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Several lobbyists carrying handfuls of letters addressed to each state legislator have been victimized by a biennial ritual of musical offices.

This week nearly 100 House and Senate members switched offices — some moving across the hall and many braving chilly winds to change buildings — to accommodate new committee chairmen. Their offices are often adjacent to committee rooms.

"It seems like 75 to 80 percent are having to change offices," said Rep. Charles Woodard, D-Wayne, on his second trip from the Legislative Office Building to the Legislative Building. "It's mostly because of committee assignments. If you got an appropriations committee you go over here (to the LOB) and if you got another committee you go over there."

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, said the big crop of new lawmakers made things worse.

"I guess with such a high turnover (in legislative membership) there probably is more than usual," he said.

Legislative halls were filled with aides pushing carts loaded with books, posters and office paraphernalia. Belongings were often piled outside offices waiting to be picked up as new occupants moved in.

A secretary in the House clerk's office said all but 49 representatives had new room assignments on a list issued Tuesday. Asked if the list would be final, she said, "I wish it were, but I'm not going to lie. There are already some changes in the new list."

In the Senate, where a new list of room assignments was issued last week, 27 senators got new quarters.

"I hope this is it," one Senate secretary said after several lobbyists, hands filled with misaddressed letters, lined up to get copies of the new list.

The division of meetings between the two buildings prompted Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, to unsuccessfully lobby last year to shift everything to the Legislative Building.

Miller would not say Tuesday whether he had abandoned the idea. "I just took that walk over there and I still say my original bill was a good one," he said.

USDA Set To Reveal Assessment

WASHINGTON (AP) — An announcement by the U.S. Department of Agriculture setting the fee assessed to flue-cured tobacco growers at 25 cents per pound has been delayed for at least a week, an aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said.

The department had planned to set the assessment Monday but delayed the announcement to allow another week of negotiations on a proposed buyout of leaf surpluses by cigarette makers, officials said.

"The department was going to move ahead because farmers are telling them (USDA officials) they really need to know. And they do need to know," Helms' top agriculture aide, George S. Dunlop, said Tuesday.

Dunlop confirmed that he secured a one-week delay in the assessment announcement from Richard W. Goldberg, deputy undersecretary for international affairs and commodity programs. Dunlop said it would be "fair to say" that the USDA would wait only one more week before announcing the assessment.

Officials of the Raleigh-based Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. are negotiating with tobacco companies for the purchase of 812 million pounds of surplus leaf in exchange for reduced federal price supports.

Stabilization suggested two months ago that the assessment growers pay to support the program be more than tripled to 25 cents per pound for the 1985 crop from the seven cents-per-pound levy they paid in 1983 and 1984.

Growers say they need to know the assessment and price support levels to complete rental and lease agreements.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, said it would be "neater" for the USDA to wait on an assessment announcement, but said an announcement would not put the negotiations off.

Dunlop said he sought the delay at the request of Stabilization officials after the cooperative's directors decided Friday to continue negotiations.

IN THE STATE

Solar House Featured

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University's solar house is featured in the February issue of Southern Living magazine for its energy-efficient design that combines both traditional and solar house styling.

The magazine article focuses on the excellent heating and cooling performance of the house, which is the result of passive solar architectural features and special interior designs.

The house is a cooperative industry-education-government project administered by the NCSU School of Engineering. The aim of the project is to inform the public of solar energy uses in housing for energy conservation through demonstration, education and research programs.

The NCSU solar house project received a 1984 National Award for Energy Innovation from the U.S. Department of Energy.

Body Discovered

DURHAM (AP) — An unidentified man who had been shot and burned was found dead at Falls Lake. Durham County sheriff's deputies said.

The man's face was disfigured by the burns, and no papers were found that would reveal who he was, said Lt. C.J. Dobies.

The body was found Monday in a gully between the edge of the lake and a parking lot about 100 yards from the boat ramp, Dobies said. It had not been in the water.

Dobies said no drugs or weapons were found. The man's wallet was gone.

Hospital Sues

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University has filed a lawsuit against an accused drug dealer and Durham County for the cost of hospital treatment for the man.

The lawsuit, filed in Durham County Superior Court, seeks $25,000 plus 8 percent interest for treating Wade Thomas Remington, who was shot about seven times in February 1984 during an attempt by undercover officers to buy 6.6 pounds of cocaine from him and another drug suspect.

The lawsuit against Remington and Durham County said Remington was in custody of the sheriff's department at all times after he was wounded until his discharge from Duke University Medical Center.

Therefore, the county should be "responsible and liable for payment of Wade Remington's medical bills," the suit contends.

Scientists Honored

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two North Carolina scientists have received the Farber Brain Tumor Award presented by the American Academy of Neurology.

Dr. M. Stephen Mahaley Jr. of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Dr. Darrell Bigner of the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center will receive the $15,000 annual award.

The recipients were recognized both for their collaborative work and their individual achievements.

Flags Donated To School

GASTONIA (AP) — A businessman who wants patriotism back in Gaston County schools put his money where his mouth is, donating more than 1,000 American flags to the county school system.

J.A. Dalpiaz of Bessemer City donated 1,400 classroom-size flags to the county's 56 schools on Monday at a "Pride in Patriotism" ceremony. The event was attended by Gov. Jim Martin and Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., 850 flag-waving students, faculty members and local officials.

Dalpiaz's flag offer came after he visited Sherwood Elementary School last fall and was told classes didn't say the Pledge of Allegiance because they didn't have flags.

Former U.S. Attorney Pleads Guilty

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A former U.S. attorney faces up to 110 years in prison after pleading guilty on Tuesday morning to embezzling about $250,000 from 11 clients.

Warren Coolidge pleaded guilty to 11 counts of embezzlement in Cumberland County Superior Court as part of a plea-bargain. Coolidge is scheduled to be sentenced March 11. No sentence was agreed upon under the plea-bargain.

Judge Robert Farmer placed Coolidge under a $10,000 secured bond.

Coolidge's attorney, Knox Jenkins, said in court Tuesday that he expects to have information within 30 days on whether Coolidge will be able to repay his former clients.

Coolidge pleaded guilty on a "bill of information" in which both sides agree to the facts.

Coolidge, a Fayetteville attorney, surrendered his law license in December after saying in legal documents that he embezzled more than $175,000.

In an affidavit filed with the North Carolina State Bar, Coolidge said he took money from clients' trust accounts and deposited them into his own account six times between January and November 1984.

Coolidge practiced real estate and general law since stepping down as U.S. Attorney in 1972.

President Nixon named Coolidge as U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina in 1969. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst forced Coolidge to resign in 1972 after he said he had leaked to news media details of a federal tax probe of contributions to the 1968 campaign of Gov. Bob Scott, a Democrat.

Martin Appoints Efficiency Committee

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders responded warmly to Gov. Jim Martin's creation of a non-partisan panel to ferret out government waste and inefficiency, which Martin hopes will save up to $500 million.

"The governor is doing what he can to see if he can find fat in the budget," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee. "I don't think there's a lot of fat, because we've been very prudent with our spending."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said the Legislature will consider expanding the role of its joint Governmental Operations Committee with an eye toward increasing efficiency.

"We recognize that we have not done a proper job of monitoring (legislation) to see whether a program is doing what the money was intended to do," said Jordan.

On Tuesday Martin announced the formation of his 72-member Governor's Efficiency Study Commission, to be chaired by Thomas I. Storrs, retired chairman and chief executive officer of Charlotte-based NCNB Corp. Storrs is a member of the Grace Commission, a group that recommended cost-cutting methods to President Reagan.

The vice-chairman will be J. Gregory Poole Jr., chairman of a development firm and chief executive officer of a Raleigh equipment company.

"Their mission is to save taxpayers' dollars by making the best use of state government resources," said Martin.

"You'll find that the private sector is very interested in good government, efficient government ... that provides needed services to the people without undue and unnecessary tax loss."

The panel will consist of executives and management specialists on loan from private industry, Martin said. Their areas of expertise will include general administration, accounting, finance, data processing, strategic planning, personnel management, purchasing and construction.

Day-to-day operations will be performed by Warren King and Associates, a Chicago management consulting firm that did a similar study in North Carolina 12 years ago under former Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Beginning in mid-March, the commission will spend about 30 weeks examining five areas of state government: general government, transportation and public protection, regulation and control, resources and public education.

No government money will be used for the study, Martin said. The management specialists will be paid by their employers, while tax-deductible contributions are being sought from private organizations. The fund-raising goal is $500,000.

The commission will stress elimination of overlapping and duplication, cutting non-essential activities, increasing operational effectiveness and better responsiveness to citizens' needs, Martin said.

He said the panel, unlike the Grace Commission, probably would not recommend significant policy changes.

"That's not our objective, to overhaul the policies of government," said Martin. "We would rather see what we can do to improve cost-effectiveness of management practices for this new administration."

Martin noted that spending on General Fund operating costs had increased 100 percent over eight years — from $1.9 billion to $3.8 billion.

Johnson Convicted In Bailey Death

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Richard Dale Johnson was found guilty in Cumberland County Superior Court on Tuesday of second-degree murder in the 1983 death of a Belk-Tyler Stores executive.

A jury of eight men and four women returned the verdict Tuesday morning after deliberating about two hours. Johnson, 38, was sentenced to 30 years in prison, court officials said.

Johnson was on trial for the second time for the death of Belk-Tyler department store executive Luther Anderson Bailey, who died of strangulation in February of 1983. His body was found in a motel room by a maid.

A November 1984 trial of Johnson for Bailey's death ended in a mistrial when the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict.

Johnson, a former Army cook assigned to the 307th Medical Battalion, was arrested in Sonoma, Calif., shortly after his discharge from the Army in May 1983.

Bailey supervised 15 eastern North Carolina department stores for the Rocky Mount-based chain.

Critics Blast TV Film On Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — As CBS aired the conclusion of "The Atlanta Child Murders," the head of the NAACP and Mayor Andrew Young suggested action should be taken to keep such "docudramas" off the air. Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, joined the ranks of the show's critics, calling it "criminally irresponsible."

His parents said the shows brought to light evidence that exonerated their son. "I hope the movie will bring to the attention of the people of Atlanta, especially, that justice has not been done," said his father, retired teacher Homer Williams.

BEAUFORT — The North Carolina Maritime Museum, 315 Front St., is continuing to offer public events while moving to new quarters on Front Street. On Feb. 19, the museum staff will conduct a winter birdwatching field trip to the Beaufort-Morehead City area from 10 a.m. until noon. Those attending should bring binoculars. NBC Scores In TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC won the week and confounded the experts with successful movies about a wacky summer camp and a perilous wartime mission that beat ABC's sensitive films about suicide and homosexuality.

NBC's effective counter-programming thwarted ABC's recent ratings comeback and illustrated the popularity and resiliency of made-for-TV movies, which one Madison Avenue executive credited with returning some disenchanted viewers to network television.

With the 30-week prime-time season now exactly two-thirds over, last week may have assured NBC of its only second-place finish in a decade. And it may be remembered as the week when "Poison Ivy" outperformed "Surviving" and "The Dirty Dozen: The Next Mission" had higher ratings than "Consenting Adult."

"I'm sure ABC expected more from those two movies," said Bob Igel, senior vice president of the NW Ayer advertising agency. "It didn't happen. They were blunted."

According to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures released Tuesday, NBC won the weekly prime-time competition with its highest rating since the World Series, an 18.2, well above its 16.3 season average. CBS, top-rated for the season, had a 17.0, slightly off its 17.2 20-week average, and ABC had a 16.6, nearly one point ahead of its season-to-date 15.7.

A rating equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes.

The major match-ups occurred on Monday and Sunday, two of the heaviest viewing nights. On Monday, Feb. 4, it was ABC's "Consenting Adult," about a family dealing with its son's homosexuality, vs. "The Dirty Dozen: The Next Mission," a macho World War II yarn, vs. CBS' regular female-appearance series, including "Kate & Allie" and "Cagney & Lacey."

"The Dirty Dozen" ranked fifth, "Consenting Adult" was sixth, while none of CBS' competing series cracked the Top 30.

"The two movies did very well.

They split the audience between male and female, and we were caught in the middle," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement.

On Sunday, the competition stacked up this way: ABC's heavily promoted movie about teen-age suicide, "Surviving," and CBS' controversial "Atlanta Child Murders," against NBC's unsung teen-age film about summer camp hijinks, "Poison Ivy."

"The Atlanta Child Murders" ranked 12th, "Poison Ivy," 17th, and "Surviving," 23rd.

"I think NBC snuck away with a low-budget film," said Igel. "I watched it. It was cute, but nothing to think about."

Those three made-for-TV films attracted heavier-than-usual viewing to the networks Sunday night.

A Reflector Review

'Soffel' Is Slow Moving Movie

"Mrs. Soffel" is an unusual and tragic love story. Set in Pittsburgh in 1901, and starring Diane Keaton as Kate Soffel and Mel Gibson as Ed Biddle, the movie is a true story with some fictional details added for dramatic value.

Mrs. Soffel is married to Peter Soffel (Edward Herrmann), the warden of the Allegheny County Prison; she is a virtuous Christian lady who has suffered from a mysterious three-month malady. Upon her sudden total recovery, she returns to her prior calling of bringing God to the prisoners in her husband's keeping.

Among the prisoners are Jack (Mathew Modine) and Ed Biddle, two young men sent up for a murder they claim they didn't commit. Many others agree with them including Mrs. Soffel's daughters, because in 90 or so bank robberies, the Biddles never seriously hurt anyone. In the course of trying to save their souls, Mrs. Soffel comes to believe in the Biddles' innocence, and begins to fall in love with Ed.

This puts her into a precarious position, not only in light of her strong religious views, but also because of her position as the warden's wife. However, she decides to save their lives and to give in to love when her husband not only rebukes her for writing a letter about the case to the governor but also tells her to be patient and wait a while when she asks him to take her away for a month, or even for a few weeks. The movie chronicles the results of that decision.

In spite of the rich and moody photography (mostly beautifully composed available-light images in grays and browns) by Director of Photography Russell Boyd, able direction by Gillian Armstrong, as well as a good characterization by Trini Alvarado as Kate's Daughter Irene, and a luminous performance by Diane Keaton, the story is often slow-moving and the movie doesn't quite make one believe in its premise. This is at least partially due to Mel Gibson's acting.

Gibson is a sexy box-office hunk, but in this movie his character doesn't show enough charisma for us to see how Kate Soffel could fall in love with him. She'd feel pity, yes, and sympathy, but fall in love? After they escape, the interaction is easier, but at that point the whole setting is looser and less demanding of good acting. Somehow, we do care about these people by the end of the movie, but not quite as much as we should.

(There is a scene of classic understated comedy which shines light on Ed Biddle's character and does help us to care: Biddle has come face to face with a man who wants to catch them, both for the reward money and to be the man who got the Biddles. Ed knows he should kill the guy, but he can't do it. Instead, he tells the man to trust him so he can just knock him out. The man bends his neck, and Biddle clunks him over the head with his rifle. "Ya out?" asks Biddle. "Almost," comes the reply. "Well hang on, I'll try it again.")

This movie sometimes reminded me of several quite different movies. In its use of setting, light, costume, and framing of shots for mood, and in its undertone of inevitability and doom, it reminded me of Bergman's "Fanny and Alexander." In the way its story developed, it reminded me somewhat of "Bonnie and Clyde." Unfortunately, it's not as good as either of them, though it tries hard. It's not a bad movie, or even a not-good movie. It's a serious, above-average movie that doesn't quite live up to the expectations it sets up for us and which we bring to it. It's worth seeing, though, especially for the quality of Diane Keaton's performance and the richness of the visuals in the movie.

The movie is rated PG-13 for adult subject matter and a small amount of violence at the end. Older preteens could see it and understand it, though they might be a bit bored by the pace.

Japanese Still Seeking Bodies Of Soldiers Killed On Iwo Jima

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese officials hope a reunion of American and Japanese survivors of the battle of Iwo Jima 40 years ago will lead them to thousands of bodies of Japanese killed there and never recovered.

Specifically, they wonder if any of the visitors will be able to point out hidden entrances of tunnels and caves from which the Japanese fought a tenacious but losing struggle through five bloody weeks of February and March 1945.

It was this battle that produced the memorable photograph of Americans raising their flag on Mount Suribachi, and the Japanese say it is possible many bodies could be found in Suribachi's caves.

As the battle progressed, U.S. Marines blasted shut many of the cave and tunnel entrances, sealing unknown numbers of defenders inside. Afterward, more entrances were bulldozed with rocks and dirt to keep out looters and amateur explorers.

Officials of the Welfare Ministry's War Victims Relief Bureau say there may be as many as 4,000 to 5,000 human remains still in the underground labyrinths of Iwo Jima, an island about five miles long and two miles wide in the western Pacific. Recovery of the dead is important to the Japanese, primarily because of a Buddhist belief that the souls of the dead cannot repose in peace without proper burial.

"We are earnestly hoping to hear from any U.S. veterans any clues that they can provide on the location of tunnels, especially the entrances," said Tsuneo Hamamatsu, who heads the Iwo project for the relief agency.

The reunion Feb. 19 is expected to bring together some 225 American veterans, widows and other relatives, and about 100 Japanese, including some of the few remaining survivors.

A highlight of the one-day event is to be the dedication of a memorial, erected on high ground above the black-sand beaches where two divisions of Marines stormed ashore against withering Japanese fire Feb. 19, 1945.

Jointly paid for by veterans' associations of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Marine Divisions and the family of the late actor John Wayne — who starred in the 1949 Hollywood film "Sands of Iwo Jima" — the marble plaque proclaims in English and Japanese a "reunion of honor" and expresses hope that "our sacrifices will always be remembered and never be repeated."

The battle of Iwo Jima, in which U.S. forces for the first time captured a piece of Japan's own territory, has been called the second bloodiest land battle of the Pacific war — exceeded only by Okinawa — but the worst in ratio of casualties to the size of forces involved.

The Japanese garrison of about 21,000 army and navy men, ordered to fight to the death, was virtually wiped out. Only 1,083 were taken prisoner, according to U.S. records. Of those, more than 800 were stragglers who had survived the five-week battle.

The Americans suffered nearly 26,000 casualties, including 6,800 killed. The great majority were part of the 30,000-member first-attack force.

Since 1968, when the Bonin and Volcano islands reverted to Japan, teams of government technicians, veterans and volunteers have conducted annual 30-day searches of Iwo's rugged terrain and tunnels. It is hazardous work because of unexploded shells and the stifling sulphur fumes from which Iwo Jima, or "Sulphur Island," gets its name.

Hamamatsu said excavations and searches in 600 different locations have led to the recovery of 5,728 bodies. But Japanese engineers had carved out more than 10 miles of interlocking tunnels and underground chambers, and the effort so far is "only a scratch," he said in an interview.

He added that although Iwo Jima is small, "it's a very big island when you're on it."

Because most searches so far have concentrated on the northern end of the island where Japanese forces under Lt. Gen. Tadamichi Kuribayashi made their last stand, there is special interest in Mount Suribachi, the 550-foot dormant volcano that dominates the southern tip.

Honeycombed with caves and bunkers, bristling with hidden weapons that could sweep the invasion beaches, the squat mountain was a mini-fortress. It also was the Marines' first major objective, and it took them five days to reach the crest, where the raising of an American flag was recorded on film by Joe Rosenthal, then a photographer for The Associated Press.

The Japanese had about 2,000 troops defending Suribachi, according to U.S. records. Virtually all were killed outright or sealed in the caves. Few if any of Suribachi's caves have ever been opened, and Hamamatsu said the Welfare Ministry has "heard rumors" that the mountain contains a "mass graveyard."

Waterless and scrub-covered, Iwo Jima had been marked for conquest because of its two air strips and its location, midway between Tokyo and the Marianas, from which U.S. bombers were raiding Japan. Many disabled U.S. B-29s made emergency landings on Iwo, and their fighter escorts were based there.

A few pre-war inhabitants raised sugar cane and mined sulphur on Iwo, but civilians have never been allowed to return. The only permanent residents today are a small Japan Air Defense Force unit and a handful of U.S. Coast Guardsmen manning a directional-signal station for aircraft and ships.

The Japan Defense Agency has looked into building a larger base there as part of an expansion of sea-lane defenses — an idea that has drawn objections from pacifist and Buddhist groups.

In 1982, the U.S. Marines gained Japan's permission to use Iwo Jima for a one-day training exercise. The landing craft came ashore on the beaches where 20,000 Marines landed in 1945.

Actor Faces Murder Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — On the screen, in "Fort Apache, the Bronx," Tito Goya was a cop. On television, in "Miami Vice," he was a killer. In real life, he was a fugitive, wanted for murder in Texas.

From 1978, when he allegedly shot a man in Austin, until last month, when he was stopped in a car on Long Island, Goya appeared in two feature films, a top-rated television series and several television commercials and stage plays.

"He wasn't hiding in no basement," said Miguel Pinero, an author who met Goya while both were in prison. "He was there on the screen, bigger than life."

But to Texas police he is Andrew Butler, who shot a man and ran. The 33-year-old Long Island resident was arrested in the town of Bay Shore on Jan. 22 after a policeman noticed he was not wearing a seat belt in his car, a violation of a new New York state law.

Police said Goya, who was born Andrew Butler, has been charged with more than 30 crimes since 1966, including assault, robbery, grand larceny, bribing a witness and possession of drugs.

Goya's lawyer, Philip Murphy, says his client never knew he was wanted. If he did, why would he have spent the next seven years trying to appear before as many people as possible?

Goya was born April 4, 1951, to Puerto Rican parents. He grew up in several tough New York neighborhoods, and police say he was first arrested at 15. By 1972 he was in Sing Sing prison for violation of parole following an armed robbery conviction.

Goya's chest is covered with scars of prison life. "Tito was young and handsome when he went in, and he went through a lot of changes there," Pinero said.

Pinero turned their prison experience into "Short Eyes," a play first staged in 1974 by "The Family," a troupe of ex-con actors. Goya played "Cupcakes," the cellblock sex object. Reviews were excellent, and "Short Eyes" moved to Broadway. A film was released in 1977.

Goya landed roles in several films, including "Fort Apache" and "Going in Style."

Executive Says Stock Programs Help Production

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Robert Strickland wonders why more companies aren't improving worker productivity and easing the tax bite through employee stock ownership plans, but he thinks they'll catch on eventually.

"ESOPs inexorably will grow," said Strickland, chairman of Lowe's Companies Inc. of North Wilkesboro and president of the ESOP Association of America. "The ESOP links up human nature with a basic economic principle. It makes sense employees will take better care of a business if they own it."

The 1984 tax law gives companies with ESOPs a number of tax breaks, including allowing them deductions for dividends paid to the ESOP. Strickland said Lowe's, the nation's largest home-improvement retail firm with annual sales of about $1.6 billion, would save some $1.5 million in taxes in 1986.

"I think there's conservatism and a lack of understanding" among business leaders reluctant to share profits and power through ESOPs, he said. Many bankers still don't know about some tax benefits they can gain by lending to companies with ESOPs, and some employees have had to be taught from the ground up.

"At one meeting there was an employee who stood up and said, 'What is stock?'" Strickland said. "The schools have failed miserably in basic economics." Lowe's since has begun a video and literature campaign to tell employees about the plan.

Some 5,000 U.S. companies and several dozen North Carolina firms have some form of ESOP. But Strickland said the Treasury Department's new tax reform proposals could "throw it all back up in the air again."

"If Chernenko wanted to think of a way to demoralize American workers, there wouldn't be a better way than to subject retirement benefits to taxation," he said.

Lowe's founder Carl Buchan began a profit sharing program in 1957. Strickland likes to tell how Buchan took him that year to visit a local store and watch the manager point out some damaged goods.

"Buchan said, 'That's not what I see when I look over there. What I see is money — my money — and before the year is out, we're going to have a plan whereby part of that will belong to you and the other employees, and when you look you'll see money too, and you'll take better care of your money than you're doing now.'"

Lowe's began its formal ESOP in 1978, and some 16 percent of its stock is owned by employees through the program. About 9 percent of the stock is owned by employees through the old profit-sharing plan.

That total 25 percent employee ownership of Lowe's is expected to reach 51 percent in about 14 years as more employees receive stock, said Strickland.

The company contributes 15 percent of an employee's annual salary to the ESOP. That means if an employee earns $20,000 a year and stock is selling at $30 per share, he gets 100 shares.

But the employee can collect his shares only when he retires, and then only at a rate of 5 percent for each year he's worked up to 10 years; if he retires at 10 years or after, he gets all of it.

"We want people to make Lowe's a career," said Strickland, noting that turnover is less at Lowe's than at other retail companies.

Giving workers a stake in Lowe's has benefitted them and the firm, he said. Profits and sales per employee are as high as three times those for employees of other retail firms, company surveys show. And inventory shrinkage due to pilferage and damage is about 0.5 percent, compared to about 2 or 3 percent for the retail industry.

"I tell them, if there's someone who hasn't paid their invoice, they're snatching money out of your pocket," he said. "I say, 'Collect your money! I only have to tell that story once.'"

ESOPs have been used to keep alive plants threatened with closing, and other companies have used them to fend off takeover bids, he said.

Some advocates stress "worker power" as a reason for ESOPs, but Strickland said most American employees are more interested in the economic dividends than in actually managing a company.

Lowe's employees sometimes vote with management and sometimes against, but Strickland doesn't know for sure because he doesn't look at their cards to see who voted for what.

"We want the employees not to feel like hired hands ... that we're all in the same boat," he said.

RJR Launches New Ad Plan

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Winston-Salem-based R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has begun its latest round in its year-old national advertising campaign calling for "open debate" on smoking issues.

The most recent ad, titled "passive smoking: an active controversy" appeared Sunday in Parade magazine supplements to newspapers around the country.

The ad said no connection has been "scientifically established" between nonsmokers' inhaling tobacco smoke and lung cancer.

It also said "There is a high probability that cardiovascular damage due to (environmental tobacco smoke) can be ruled out in healthy people."

The spokeswoman for the New York-based American Cancer Society said Monday the environmental tobacco smoke issue remains "unresolved."

"The question of the effects is still open," said Joann Schellenbach. "It's not been scientifically proved, and it's too early to make a definitive statement. But future research may establish such a relationship."

Officials of the American Lung Association in New York declined to comment directly on the ad. The association actively supports national efforts to ban smoking in public places, however, said spokeswoman Michelle Kling.

David Fishel, Reynolds Tobacco vice president, said Monday the company began the campaign because the press "hasn't had enough information from the other side, our side, to adequately cover the issues."

Navy Says Action Just

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John Lehman denies that the admiral who was "cautioned" for trying to bring Soviet rifles back from Grenada received preferential treatment while other servicemen were court-martialed for smuggling captured weapons.

Lehman, in a two-page letter issued Tuesday to the chairmen of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees, asserted the Navy had handled each case involving men who returned from Grenada with Soviet weapons "on its own merits and ... consistently and appropriately."

Lehman's letter was delivered as congressional sources disclosed that the House and Senate Armed Services committees had opened investigations of the discipline meted out by the Navy and Army to men who smuggled arms back from Grenada.

The panels are trying to determine if Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf III was given favored treatment, said the sources, who would discuss the probes only on condition they not be identified.

Metcalf, then the commander of the Navy's 2nd Fleet and head of the 1983 Grenada invasion, received a written "caution" from his superiors after U.S. Customs agents discovered 24 Soviet AK-47 rifles on his returning airplane.

Five Army soldiers and four Marines were court-martialed for smuggling similar rifles or U.S.-made weapons back from Grenada.

It is against military regulations as well as federal law to import any type of automatic weapon such as the AK-47.

"On the surface, it looks like we got a double standard of justice," Rep. William Dickinson of Alabama, the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday. "But I only know what I've read in the newspapers. And whether that's really so, I want to wait for the facts before I make up my mind."

"It strikes me that the Army seems to have been too severe in this," Dickinson added.

Collector Sees Toys As History

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Lehigh County Executive David Bausch believes it's necessary to have a knowledge of history to understand the present.

For Bausch, the past comes alive in the form of antique toys he's been collecting for 35 years.

Many toys in his collection were purchased at auctions — most within 60 miles of the Lehigh Valley — that he began attending as a child when he and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Elmer Bausch, spent time on his uncle's Lynnville farm.

While his mother and late father went to public sales primarily to buy farm implements, the Allentown resident looked for purchases he could make for a quarter, which, at that time, bought far more than it does today.

Bausch seldom purchases an item without knowing something of its history. He reads numerous books and magazines on the subject of collecting and serves as president of the Antique Toy Collectors of America. Although wheeled vehicles form the bulk of collection, Bausch is also interested in banks, political toys and related memorabilia, and dioramas.

Some items in his collection were made locally; others were manufactured in various parts of the country and in Europe.

A number of the toys were made to commemorate specific historic events. One Model T Ford is a reproduction of a car used in playing polo, Bausch says. Recalling that the games were held at the Allentown fairground years ago, he produces a postcard showing an actual polo car used in that era.

There's a story, too, behind the long horse-drawn farm wagon whose wooden top opens up to form the wings of an airplane. An aviation pioneer in France was thought to be a sorcerer because of his experiments and was forced to smuggle the parts for his airplane out of town in such a vehicle so he could assemble them in the country. Bausch has a photograph of the original wagon.

One unusual toy in the collection is a double-decker bus with a body, exterior stairs and top deck made from wood fretwork.

Another toy features a tap dancer who goes into action when a person speaks into the accompanying microphone. A coin placed in the slot of a mechanical bank sets a dog, which jumps through a hoop, into motion. Bausch also has a miniature reproduction of a Model T assembly line.

One toy in Bausch's possession was never sold commercially by the manufacturer. After the factory closed and the contents were sold, the unassembled parts for several Amos and Andy cars were found in a barrel. The purchaser arranged to have the cars put together and finished with paint found on the premises before selling them.

Legislator Expects More Greying Hairs

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, says he picked up a few grey hairs in the last session of the General Assembly, but he expects to leave Raleigh later this year with solid white hair.

Hipps says he likes to be good-natured about the Legislature, but he expects his job as the chairman of the new Senate Committee on Children and Youth to call for a lot of hard work and hard decisions.

"I like to look at things with a little humor and we laugh and carry on," Hipps said, "but when the time comes for hard decisions, I'll make them."

Hipps expects the committee to consider the creation of a new agency for missing and exploited children, as well as a number of changes in day-care legislation and the health care of children at school. He expects the committee will have a busy session.

"I'm 300 miles from home and I can't practice law here, so I feel like I might as well work hard," Hipps said. "And if I'm going to work hard, they (other legislators) are going to work hard."

Hipps said he was appointed by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan to chair the new committee. Jordan promised to create a special committee on children's matters during last year's campaign.

"I've got three kids and I've still got some kid left in me, so there's a connection," Hipps said. "And I think Bob Jordan may just like my kids."

After being appointed to fill an unexpired term in August 1982, Hipps was named the most effective freshman in the Senate during the 1983-84 session.

Hipps said he expects the new committee to develop expertise in the Senate on children's issues, bringing together senators with knowledge in specific areas to create a comprehensive panel.

He also expects the committee to be a focal point for children's issues, giving people interested in children and youth a place in the Legislature to be heard.

"We've also got to develop some status in the Legislature, so that when we recommend things, we can get the funding for them," Hipps said. "Recommending things to do is fine, but it's not worth much if you can't get the appropriations to make them work."

Hipps said he thinks the committee should also consider the possibility of creating a state day-care program for the public schools.

February 10-16 is National Crime Prevention week. More people live in American jails than in Tucson, Arizona. The Guardian Angels, youthful crime fighters, claim they have more than 3,000 trainees and members in 41 American cities. In 1984, almost 14,000 crimes were committed just in New York's subways. In the United States, nearly 25 percent of all fires are started intentionally. Washington D.C. has five times as many prisoners as it does members of Congress.

Volunteer Posse Fosters Good Will

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A volunteer posse, available for routine duties, promotes good will in this south Georgia county and enables the sheriff to make more efficient use of his full-time deputies.

"This has been a program that has been extremely good for Thomas County," said Sheriff Carlton Powell, who estimated the value of the volunteers' services last year at between $15,000 to $20,000.

Thomas County's 12 armed volunteers donated about 3,000 hours to the county last year in assignments ranging from traffic control to searching for escaped prisoners, according to Jerry Funk, a body shop foreman who holds the rank of captain as head of the posse.

A Georgia law dating from the 1800's gives sheriffs the authority to form posses. Volunteers currently augment the paid staffs in most of the state's 159 counties, according to Irene Munn, a spokeswoman for the Georgia Sheriffs' Association.

Ms. Munn said volunteers in Gwinnett and Lowndes counties have become certified officers by taking the state-mandated 240-hour basic law-enforcement course.

Powell emphasized that his posse members do not work as arresting officers, although they could make citizens arrests like any citizen.

Instead, they often ride with Powell's 15 sworn officers and serve as backups. They also control traffic during the annual Rose Show and at football games, assist in the radio room and help in transporting prisoners.

"A lot of the things they do are a service to the community, rather than law enforcement," Powell explained.

Because they carry guns and represent the county, candidates undergo an extensive screening process that includes a background investigation and an FBI fingerprint check, Powell said.

There also is a one-year residency requirement, which the sheriff said is needed "to learn about the spirit" of the applicant.

Although posse members seldom make arrests, the sheriff's staff has developed a training program for the volunteers that includes some of the same subjects covered in the state-mandated instruction given to full-time law-enforcement personnel. Among the subjects covered are first-aid, the basics of law and marksmanship.

Funk noted that all members have to qualify with their weapons before being allowed to wear the posse's distinctive uniform, which consists of tan shirts and brown trousers — the reverse of full-time deputies.

The posse used to require an average of four hours work a week from its members, but all of them exceeded that rate, so the requirement was dropped, said Funk.

"Any member could easily put in 30 to 40 hours a month," said Funk, who was called out recently to search for an escaped prisoner and is credited with the recapture.

Lincolnton Man Spends 40 Years In Chasing UFOs

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — In 1944, a 15-year-old Boy Scout named George Fawcett read a news story about "silver balls floating in the air" that the Nazis planned to use to confuse the Allies during bombing raids.

The Associated Press clip led to a 40-year interest in unidentified flying objects — a mission that has cost Fawcett $27,000 of his own money and at least one job, sent him around the country to investigate some 1,000 reported UFO sightings and filled more than 20 file drawers in his Lincolnton home with UFO-related documents.

"I'm not the Billy Graham of UFOs, I'm more like the Curious George," Fawcett, 55, said during an interview at his wife's Lincolnton sandwich shop, which features a "UFO Room" full of framed pictures and clippings.

"It was just curiosity," he said. "Two, there was the deep feeling I got that they were not being treated with the respect due them. I felt that anything that's been going on for four decades in 140 nations deserves close scientific scrutiny."

Or if there has, the government's not telling us about it. Fawcett said that despite new efforts in China and the Soviet Union to investigate UFOs, official America is more tight-lipped about them than ever.

"Americans have accepted them without a government announcement," he said. "The skeptics are in the minority. ... People don't ask me if UFOs are real anymore, they ask what they've been up to."

Fawcett is the public relations director for the North Carolina chapter of the Mutual UFO Network, which has 75 field investigators in 45 cities across the state. He was MUFON's state director from 1969 to 1980.

But this year, for the first time since 1952, he won't be providing his annual report of North Carolina UFO activity for the previous year.

He's had to look for a job because the newspaper where he worked closed down. He's also been spending more time on worldwide research — particularly a study comparing human reactions to UFOs with the hard evidence of radar trackings and ground markings.

He collected information on three sightings in the state in 1984: — On Jan. 7 near Edenton, a man and his 15-year-old son reported seeing a meteor-like object making 90-degree turns, loops and wave movements at high speed for about 50 minutes.

— In February near Lincolnton, four people in the same car reported seeing a circular object with two windows casting a beam of light on the ground.

— On April 25 near Lincolnton, four people in two cars reported seeing a long object about 64 feet long with 10 windows hovering over the ground. They said it caused their headlights to go out and shined blinding orange and red floodlights at them.

Of the 1,000 reported sightings he has investigated over the years, Fawcett explained all but about 22 percent as natural phenomena, man-made objects or hoaxes.

"It's frustrating — we put a man on the moon, but if we were using volunteers, we wouldn't have made it," he said. "We suffer from a lack of funds."

He said UFO investigators also suffer from a lack of cooperation from government agencies he believes are probing UFOs, including the Air Force and the CIA.

Fawcett said his early efforts at researching UFOs were met with ridicule. But he said a wave of sightings in his hometown of Mount Airy in 1973 vindicated him there.

He's seen one UFO personally — an object "like an orange cut in half" hovering over Lynchburg College in Virginia in 1951.

Later, he was one of three candidates for a YMCA post in Florida. But when YMCA officials found out about his interest in UFOs, someone else got the job.

UFOs gained credence in the 1960s and 1970s, and from 1979 to 1983, Fawcett taught a three-credit, 12-week course on UFOs at the Lincolnton campus of Gaston College. His total of 125 students came from 24 North Carolina cities and from a variety of professions and trades.

When he began his research, Fawcett had four dreams: to lecture on UFOs, to teach an accredited course, to write a book and to found a museum.

He's finished one book — "Quarter Century Studies of UFOs in Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee" — and is starting another. And he's begun to get nibbles on his proposal to build a UFO museum in Boone. All he needs is money and material to add to his considerable collection.

Fawcett said North Carolina ranks fourth in the nation in UFO sightings, possibly because of the large number of fresh-water bodies and power plants that he said attract extraterrestrial spacecraft.

Fawcett has collected 44 North Carolina cases from 1842 to 1983 in which people reported UFO landings or encounters with UFO occupants.

"I feel more comfortable with someone flying them," he smiled. "A taxicab without a driver is far more hazardous."

Fawcett, however, said UFOs are a "serious problem to national security and human survival." At least two North Carolina people have reported being abducted by UFO occupants, and other people worldwide have been burned, tested or knocked down.

Other UFO occupants may be benevolent, he said. "I'm one of the few who believe there are good guys in white hats along with the bad guys in black hats," he said.

Dentist Offers New Art For Your Crowns

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — In nail art, manicurists paint small decorations on fingernails.

Now there's tooth art, in which a Fresno dentist and his porcelain ceramist transfer designs to dental crowns.

The ceramic artwork ranges from the symbolic, a ram's head for a Basque sheepherder; to the picturesque, a Yosemite Valley landscape; to the humorous, including cartoon character Foghorn Leghorn, and a jackass.

For patients in medical need of a crown, Dr. William Clark offers to add the decoration for free. About half of them accept the offer, and he says hundreds have been supplied.

"It started about five years ago as sort of an experiment with putting colors and designs on porcelain," the dentist explained. "It started with one patient, and it went from there."

The first painted crown was a picture of eagle feathers embedded in a turquoise stone for an Indian woman who was nicknamed "Feather."

Clark acknowledges the public generally has a negative impression of dentistry and hopes the ceramic art can change some attitudes.

Patients need crowns to replace decayed, broken or missing teeth. They receive a man-made version of a tooth above the gum line, and the tooth art generally covers about one-fourth of a tooth face.

After patients are fitted for a crown and pick a design, "they usually can't wait to come back in for the next appointment," Clark said. "They can appreciate the crown by appreciating the art."

The decoration generally appears on the outer surface of a tooth behind the smile line.

"I don't want it to look like a piece of spinach when they smile," he said. "Usually, most of the designs are not visible when a patient is in a normal function of chewing, eating, smiling or talking."

Alligator River Plan Gets Grant

CHICAGO — A $500,000 grant for the Nature Conservancy has been announced by Amoco Foundation Inc. The grant, to be contributed over five years, will be used for the National Wetlands Conservation Project, which range from the Alligator River in coastal North Carolina to the Thousand Palms Oasis in California's Coachella Valley.

The conservancy is seeking to acquire 35,000 acres in the Alligator River area, which has extensive white cedar swampland and is a critical habitat for coastal plain black bear.

Other project areas include the Upper Colorado River Basin, Sandusky Bay, Ohio; the glacial wetlands between Long Island Sound, N.Y. and Buzzard's Bay, Mass.; Ash Meadows in Nevada; and Block Island, Rhode Island.

William D. Blair, Jr., president of The Nature Conservancy, said the program "identifies areas that offer critical habitat for rare and endangered plants, animals, and ecosystems and follows up by purchasing or accepting gifts of endangered parcels."

"It also," he added, "provides for the long-term protection and stewardship of the areas it acquires and occasionally transfer them to appropriate government agencies."

Since its inception, The Nature Conservancy has preserved 2.3 million acres in the U.S., Canada, Latin America, and the Caribbean. It is supported by 230,000 members, and owns and manages the largest private nature sanctuary system in the world.

Recruiting Difficult In Remote Locations

PAGE, Ariz. (AP) — A Phoenix-based company which operates five marinas on Lake Powell says recruiting — and keeping — employees for the remote locations can be a problem despite the area's desert beauty.

"I know it's trite, but it really does take a special kind of person to live and work up here and like it," said John Reilly, general manager of the Bullfrog Resort and Marina on the lake's northwestern shore, in Utah.

Generally, he said, workers must have an affinity for the outdoors. "There's not much to do after work except outdoor nature-type things," he said. "They've really got to enjoy living up here."

Because of the remoteness and the small number of employees, potential workers should be able to get along with people even if they don't work directly with customers, he said.

Reilly says the remoteness is the apparent cause of a pattern that has emerged among permanent employees of Webb Recreational Properties, a subsidiary of Phoenix-based Del E. Webb Corp.

About nine months after starting work, the employee seems to approach "burnout," probably because of the remoteness and the close living proximity with fellow employees and customers. If the employee survives the "burnout," he or she usually seems content for another year or two, he said.

Although many leave for more populous areas, "quite a few — we've been surprised at how many — return sooner or later to work at Lake Powell again," Reilly said.

"They find the beauty and lifestyle are in their blood, and they're hooked," he said.

Long-time employees tend to develop a strong dislike for urban areas and — because the nearest supermarket and department stores are 180 miles away — grow accustomed to shopping from catalogs, he said.

One former employee now working at Webb's headquarters in Phoenix said his wife still turned to catalogs for Christmas shopping even though they now live in a large metropolitan area.

Almost all employees live in trailers. Single seasonal workers share a unit with other singles, while permanent employees landscape and customize their trailers.

Cajun Valentines Feature Cuddly Gators, 'Possums

By CAROLYN AYON LEE
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Instead of saying it with chubby Cupids, you can now say it with grinning gators and cuddly Cajun 'possums.

Critters from Louisiana's bayou country waltz across the colorful valentines and greeting cards created by Robert Harris, a 26-year-old lifelong doodler from Lafayette who started his unique greeting card business last year.

"I've always been pretty decent in making people laugh and making them happy when they're not so happy," Harris said. "Now I'm just putting it on paper so people can keep it instead of trying to remember what I told them."

The cards, with hand-scratched captions in Cajun dialect, are available only in Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, although their distributor, Cajun Novelties of Broussard, hopes to start selling them on the East and West coasts, where Cajun restaurants are popping up.

About 60,000 of the valentines hit the market last week.

One features a bright green alligator pulling a wagon brimming with bright red hearts. Inside, the card says, "mais (well), let me told you somethin' cher (dear), i always needed some body like you to pick my heart up!"

In another, two possums dangle by their tails from a tree limb over the message: "I cant play possum with my feelings no mo'." Inside: "would you be my valentine, cher?"

Harris' personal favorite is a big green frog sitting on a lily pad and looking lovesick. Hearts float overhead. Inside, the message reads, "I love you so much I could croak!"

"You don't live long enough to let things bother you, to be unhappy," Harris said. "It's such a waste of time. Smiling is good for your face, anyway. A smile a day keeps the wrinkles away."

Pete Lina, a fourth-generation Cajun who is president of Cajun Novelties, dismissed the question that French purists might take offense at the cards.

"These particular cards, there's no way, shape or form that we're making fun of the French background," he said. "I think they're real cute, French-type cards, and people will laugh with them, not at them."

"Actually, we're communicating with people in a humorous way, reflecting the Cajun culture. A lot of people we sent the cards to out of state rang the phone off the hook wondering where they could get them," said David Gordon, general manager of the company.

He said the company, begun in May, has sold about 300,000 cards, which retail for $1.25 each. The selections include invitations for a crawfish boil and cards for Easter, birthdays and other occasions.

Harris described the language in the cards as the gently lilting Cajun that he heard as a boy at his grandparents' home.

He said he has been influenced a lot by his 84-year-old Cajun grandmother, who calls him "cher" or "Robbie," given a French accent on the last syllable.

While his last name is not typically Cajun, Harris, who grew up in Jeanerette, La., said, "I've been one ever since I can remember."

He said he has been making cards for family members and friends since he could wield a pencil.

"I've been doodling and drawing and making cards for as long as I can remember. This is the first time I've decided to do it for profit."

In time, Harris says the company hopes to produce calendars, books, notepads, stationery and stuffed animals, all featuring his Cajun drawings.

Meanwhile Harris — who never had an art lesson — spends his days as an account executive at a Lafayette television station.

"Right now, this is something I do in my spare time," he said. "My goal is to some day do this exclusively."

1 ♦	1 ♥	1 ♦	2 ♥
3 ♦	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♥.

There is a whole compilation of safety plays to show you how you can limit your losses in a particular suit. But sometimes your safest play is to ignore them all.

The auction is reasonable. Once North has shown a good hand by freely rebidding his clubs at the three-level, South is justified in introducing his second suit, then going on to game over partner's preference.

West led the ace of hearts and shifted to a club. If trumps break 3-2, the hand offers no problem. Declarer simply wins, draws two rounds of trumps, then runs clubs until someone ruffs. But what if trumps are 4-1?

Obviously, then declarer would run the risk of losing control of the hand. There are ways to protect against losing two trump tricks in the event of a 4-1 split, but none of them will really work on this hand.

However, declarer can afford to lose two trump tricks and a heart. Therefore, the safest way to play the hand is simply to allow the defenders to make their two trump tricks while there is no chance of declarer losing control.

Declarer should win the club in hand and cash the king of trumps. If both defenders follow, the contract is assured. Declarer simply abandons trumps in favor of running his clubs. Let's assume that West ruffs the second club and reverts to hearts. Declarer ruffs, crosses to the table with the ace of trumps and continues clubs. Whether or not West ruffs, the defenders can get no more than three tricks, because declarer still has an entry to the board with a diamond ruff.
