151 Persons Feared Lost In Plane Crash

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — An Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 crashed today in northern Spain, civil aviation authorities said. Police said rescue parties reported they had found no survivors among the 144 passengers and seven crew members.

Earlier reports from Bilbao airport officials quoted rescuers as saying there were believed to be at least 20 survivors.

Civil aviation authorities said Flight 610 from Madrid, the Spanish capital, crashed into 3,340-foot-high Oiz Hill just before it was to land in this Basque industrial city.

Air traffic controllers said the aircraft disappeared from their monitors at 9:35 a.m. (3:35 a.m. EST), some 15 minutes before it was due to land at Sondica airport.

Civil aviation authorities, who refused to be identified by name, said the crash occurred 18 miles southeast of Bilbao near the town of Durango as the plane was making its approach.

"Ten minutes before the expected landing in Bilbao, the control tower at the airport lost contact with the aircraft," Iberia Airlines spokesman Frank Mendoza told Associated Press Radio in a telephone interview from Madrid. "About 40 minutes later a telephone call was received at Bilbao airport from a peasant in the city of Durango, stating that possibly an aircraft had crashed in the mountains nearby."

The authorities said the weather was cloudy in Bilbao at the time of the crash, but airport officials said flights to and from Bilbao in similar weather conditions were common.

Initially, it was reported that 141 passengers and six crew members had perished. Iberia later said a total of 144 passengers and seven crew members were aboard.

Airport officials who refused to give their names told The Associated Press by telephone that rescue parties were reporting there were "at least 20 survivors." But they said rural police radioed from the scene that they had not been able to find any survivors in the burning wreckage scattered over 2,000 yards.

The Bolivian ambassador in Madrid, Luis Adolfo Siles, said Bolivia's labor minister, Gonzalo Guzman, and three Bolivian engineers were on the plane and on their way to Bilbao to negotiate an electric train construction project.

Iberia sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported that the former Spanish foreign affairs minister, Gregorio Lopez Bravo, was also aboard, but that could not be confirmed. A person named Lopez Bravo was listed on the flight manifest released by Iberia.

There were no immediate reports on the nationalities of the other passengers, although most of them were believed to be Spaniards.

Mendoza said the airline couldn't be sure whether any Americans were aboard. He said, "There are six to seven family names who could be Americans, could be British, could be foreigners to Spain."

Two commercial plane crashes in Spain in late 1983 killed 274 people.

On Nov. 27, 1983, a Boeing 747 of the Colombian airline Avianca crashed and exploded in flames a few miles outside Madrid, killing 181.

On Dec. 7, 1983, an Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 and a DC-9 belonging to a domestic carrier, Aviaco, collided on a fog-shrouded runway at Madrid's Barajas airport, killing all 42 people aboard the DC-9 and 51 aboard the 727.

Cherry Oaks Man Appeals For 'Fairness' In Merger

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners were urged Monday to make sure the planned consolidation of the county and Greenville school systems treats all students in the county fairly.

Bobby Hazelton of Cherry Oaks, a spokesman for a group of county residents which last month asked for a referendum on the question of merger, told County Commissioners Monday "I'm not here to chastise anybody" because a referendum was not held before a merger plan was enacted into law by the General Assembly. Instead, Hazelton said he wanted to "set the record straight."

"We're not opposed to merger," Hazelton said. "There is no where money can be spent better than in education."

But he suggested that "we opposed" the legislation approved by the General Assembly last week "because we couldn't get fairness from it."

Citing school attendance figures, Hazelton suggested that having four school board members elected from the Greenville high school attendance area and only two board members from the other high school attendance areas, as provided for in the legislation, is not equitable. (Actually, representation on the school board is based on population of the various areas rather than school attendance figures.) "All we ask is to be fair ... have fair representation," Hazelton said.

"Something is wrong in this formula. We as county citizens haven't been treated fair," Hazelton said. He then suggested that the board "have a ward-type system for the election" of school board members.

Hazelton asked the board, "Please, please become very knowledgeable about our school system. We want Greenville to have everything they are entitled to, but not one square inch of our area."

He also urged commissioners,

"when this thing (the merger plan) comes to you for final approval" from the boards of education, "read it carefully."

In other business Monday, commissioners approved leasing the county-owned farm land. Johnny Harris submitted the only bid — $40 per acre — for the 58 acres at the county home farm, and 6½ acres east of Moye Boulevard, while Charles L. Stocks submitted the only bid — $25 per acre — for a 12-acre tract adjacent to the county landfill off the Allen Road.

The board also met with County Attorney Bill Watson and Elections Board Chairman Clifton Everett Jr. to discuss contracts with Airmac Technology Systems for maintenance of the county's vote tabulating machines. Following the meeting, commissioners instructed Watson and Everett to gather more information about the status of the contract.

Commissioners also reappointed Joseph M. Parker to the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and appointed William Flowers and Wayne Peterson to the board, as recommended by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors; and appointed James A. Tripp, Glenn Jones, Marie Neal and Lorraine Shinn as members of the Juvenile or Community Based Alternatives Task Force.

CELEBRATION BEGINS — King Arthur, also known as Pete Fountain, leads his Half-Fast Marching Club down St. Charles Avenue in New Orleans this morning, signalling the start of the largest celebration in the city's Mardi Gras. Observers say an older, more affluent and better-behaved crowd is expected this year. The festival clears the way for the start of the austerity of Lent in the predominantly Catholic city. (AP Laserphoto)

Utilization Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The operating rate at the nation's industries rose again in January, but the rate remained below levels reached last summer, the government reported today.

The Federal Reserve Board said the country's factories, mines and utilities operated at 81.9 percent of capacity in January, up 0.2 percentage point from the 81.7 percent revised December level.

WRITER LIVED HERE?

I understand that the movie "Vision Quest" was written by someone who used to live in Greenville. Is this true? D.J.

The movie "Vision Quest" is based on a novel by the same title published in the late 1970s by Terry Davis, then an instructor in the department of English at East Carolina University. Davis left here and went to Virginia in 1981. He has since returned to the Pacific Northwest, setting of the book reportedly based loosely on his teen years. A local resident reports that Davis may be seen in a crowd of spectators at a wrestling match in the movie.

City School Board Approves Bid For Mobile Computer Classroom

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Approval was given Monday night by members of the Greenville Board of Education to the purchase of a mobile unit to be used as a mobile computer classroom for the city schools.

Dr. Richard Preston, director of administration for the city schools, reported that the $12,601 bid by USRY Inc. of Richmond, Va., was the lowest of two bids received from seven firms asked to submit bids. Five of the firms failed to bid. The 12 by 44 foot mobile unit will house the computer equipment for student classes, currently housed in a smaller mobile unit.

A change in travel reimbursement for school employees, lowering the rate from 25 cents to 20.5 cents per mile, was approved. The change is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1985. Dr. Delma Blinson, former superintendent and now consultant to the board, explained that the accounting procedures for reimbursement above the 20.5 cents prescribed by the IRS entailed a formidable amount of bookkeeping, as well as imposing a burden on the recipient of travel pay in reporting the excess amount as taxable income.

In view of the pending merger of the Greenville and Pitt County school systems, the board approved a recommendation offered by Blinson that the banking contract with Branch Banking & Trust Co. for the city schools be extended for one year. Blinson said BB&T was asking for a few changes, but noted that even with the suggested contractual changes, BB&T would still be low bidder compared to contractual bids offered by other banks two years ago.

Jaycees Select Local Teacher

Beth Stephenson Crumpler, consulting teacher at Eastern and Elmhurst elementary schools, was named "Outstanding Young Educator" by the North Carolina Jaycees Friday. She was selected for the award from nominees submitted by Jaycee chapters throughout the state.

Mrs. Crumpler graduated from Coats High School in 1968 and earned degrees in secretarial science and early childhood education from Campbell University. She received degrees in learning disabilities and elementary education with graduate certification in reading from East Carolina University.

She is married to Charles Crumpler and they have a son, Glen.

Mrs. Crumpler was nominated for the award by the Greenville Jaycees. She was recognized at a banquet in Greensboro Friday and was presented the award by Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction.

Delores Stancill Barnhill of Greenville was a finalist in the competition for the statewide award.

AWARD WINNER — Beth Stephenson Crumpler, left, was recognized Monday night by the Greenville Board of Education for her selection as the North Carolina Jaycees' Young Educator of the Year. Ann Harrison, right, director of pupil personnel for the city schools, presented Mrs. Crumpler to the board. Mrs. Crumpler holds the plaque designating her as state winner; Mrs. Harrison displays the plaque awarded earlier to Mrs. Crumpler as winner in the regional young educator competition. Council To Meet

The Greenville Human Relations Council will meet at 7 p.m. today in the first floor conference room at City Hall.

Fire/Rescue Report

Fire/Rescue Chief Jenness S. Allen reported that during January, the department responded to 252 calls, consisting of 218 rescue calls (181 within the city and 37 in the county) and 34 fire calls.

The total number of city residents transported was 150, while 61 county residents and 23 non-residents were transported. Total mileage traveled on rescue calls was 1,706 miles, including 1,195 in the city and 511 in the county.

Fire/rescue personnel made 85 inspections involving 69 commercial buildings, 11 residential buildings, two day care centers, one hospital/medical center, one institution and one family care center. There were 30 rechecks for failure to meet fire prevention codes. Personnel also spent 1,879 hours in various training exercises and skills development.

Dental Health

Students at Carolina Country Day are celebrating Dental Health Month with plays, classroom visitors and contests, school officials reported.

First and second grade classes visited a local dentist's office to learn about dental health, dental disease and tooth and mouth-cleaning procedures. Sheree Donley, dental health hygienist in Greenville, spoke to grades kindergarten-five on dental care.

Fourth grade students Pattie Davenport and Tempe Harrington wrote and presented a puppet play for the student body. The play, "The Lady With Bad Teeth," centered around the effects of not caring for teeth.

The entire school is participating in the local and statewide "Let's Get Dental" contest by earning points for activities about dental health. The school with the most points will win a plaque and money.

Board Meeting

The pastor, mothers, deacons and trustees of Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church will hold a board meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Finalists Chosen

Two area high school students are among 10 finalists selected in competition for the first five University Scholar awards at East Carolina University.

William C. Deanhardt of Greenville and April Weatherington of Washington will be interviewed by a selection committee March 9.

The finalists were chosen by a screening committee which interviewed more than 25 semi-finalists. University Scholar awards at ECU have been established by private endowments and will provide full tuition and expenses for the chosen scholars for each year of the scholarship award.

Publisher Files Suit Against CBS

RALEIGH (AP) — A newspaper publisher helping a conservative group trying to end what it calls a "liberal bias" at CBS filed suit against the network today in his effort to obtain a list of CBS stockholders.

"I think they're just blowing bubbles in the executive suite," said Hoover Adams, editor and publisher of the Dunn Daily Record, who had lawyers file the suit in New York's Supreme Court after the network filed suit against him last week.

The network charged that Adams and the group Fairness in Media would use the list for political purposes. Adams and FIM leader Carter Wrenn are defendants in the CBS suit.

CBS executives "know they'll have to give (the stockholders' list) to us," Adams said, adding he thinks the network is trying to delay furnishing him the list until after its annual stockholders' meeting, usually held in April.

Adams said he would use the list to solicit the votes of stockholders in his effort to replace directors on the company's board.

"The people who invest in stock are conservative businessmen and women," Adams said. "I would guess 80 percent would be sympathetic to us, and they know that."

Federal law gives individual stockholders the right to demand a list of stockholders, and Adams owns 111 shares of CBS stock.

MASONIC NOTICE

William Pitt Lodge No. 734 AF&AM will hold a stated communication at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Third degree will be conferred.

Meetings

Scheduled meetings for Greenville and Pitt County governmental agencies for the week of Feb. 17-23 include:

Wednesday
Noon — Medical District Study Committee, third floor Greenville Utilities Board Room, Greenville Utilities building, corner of Fifth and Washington streets.
7:30 p.m. — Planning Board meeting, 1st floor commissioners conference room, Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

But the network said in its suit last week that it should be excused from the policy.

"CBS has reason to believe that, because of the political nature of the campaign mounted against it and the political interests of the group supporting the campaign, its shareholder list may be used for improper purposes," the network's lawsuit said.

Adams filed his original request for the stockholder's list Feb. 7, and the lawsuit names CBS as its only defendant, he said.

CBS has five days to respond to the lawsuit, Adams said.

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and FIM distributed a letter in January urging conservatives to buy stock in CBS to become "Dan Rather's boss."

Adams said he is not a member of FIM, but added that he asked for the stockholders' list on behalf of the group.

Planning Board

The Pitt County Planning Board will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda for consideration is the final plat for Cherry Oaks Subdivision Section 7, the revised preliminary plat for Grey-stone Subdivision located in Winterville Township, and the preliminary plat for Foxboro Subdivision Section 2 in Bethel Township and Santee Mobile Home Park in Pactolus Township.

Correction

Army Spec. 4 James L. Mercer, listed in Monday's armed services column, is the son of George D. Mercer and the brother of Blondie Simms, both of Farmville.

Court To Rule In School Prayer Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, urged on by the Reagan administration, today agreed to decide whether public high schools may allow students to meet during school hours for prayer and religious worship.

The court will review a ruling that banned such meetings at a Williamsport, Pa., high school even though the school allows students to conduct virtually all types of non-religious meetings during the same periods.

Administration lawyers attacked a federal appeals court ban on the meetings, saying it casts constitutional doubt on a new federal law requiring public schools to provide "equal access" for student religious groups.

The dispute, another outgrowth of the Supreme Court's 1962 decision outlawing organized prayer sessions in public schools, arose when a group of students at Williamsport Area High School sought permission to form a religious group.

The students wanted to meet twice a week during the school's 30-minute activity periods.

During those periods, held just after homeroom, about 25 different student groups as varied as the Future Homemakers of America, the Spanish club, the ecology club, band, choir and the school newspaper meet.

Students also have the option of remaining in their homerooms, studying in the library or seeking career guidance.

Wayne Newton, principal of the 2,500-student school, initially granted the student religious group permission to meet after the students agreed not to use the school's bulletin boards, newspaper or public address system to promote their meetings.

About 45 students attended the first meeting, but school officials disallowed further meetings.

The students were told it would be "legally improper" for school officials to give the impression that the meetings were officially endorsed.

The Constitution's First Amendment bans the "establishment" of religion by government.

Ten student members of the group sued the school district in 1982, charging that their freedoms of speech, religion and association and their right to equal protection had been violated.

A federal trial judge ruled for the students, and their group was allowed to meet during activity periods for the 1983-84 school year.

But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the judge's ruling by a 2-1 vote last July 24.

Weighing the students' rights against the school's obligations, the appeals court said, "The constitutional balance of interests tilts against permitting the (religious group's) activity to be conducted within the school as a general activity program."

The students' appeal to the Supreme Court said they were being discriminated against "solely because their speech is religious."

In a "friend-of-the-court" brief, the administration sided with the students.

Justice Department lawyers noted that the president last August signed into law an act of Congress making it unlawful for any public high school receiving federal money to deny access to students on the basis of "the religious, political, philosophical or other content of their speech" when extracurricular groups generally are allowed to meet in school during class hours.

"If allowed to stand, the decision of the court of appeals would cast doubt on the constitutionality of the Equal Access Act," the government said.

Noting that in 1981 the Supreme Court ruled that a university must allow a student prayer group to use campus facilities for its meetings if other student organizations are allowed such use, the government said the court should not treat the issue any differently in a high school setting.

In its 1981 decision, the high court said university students are "less impressionable than younger students and should be able to appreciate that the university's policy is one of neutrality toward religion."

But in urging the justices to allow the student prayer group to meet at Williamsport High, government lawyers said, "The presumed greater impressionability of high school students is not a basis for permitting discrimination against religious groups."

The justices already have under consideration an Alabama law that allows public schools to provide a daily moment of silence for student prayer or meditation.

Society Tracks Down History Of Garments

By SARA CASHEN
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Connecticut Historical Society is plugging holes in its collection of historic garments — but not holes like the one in Col. William Ledyard's shirt from the sword that killed him.

Since September 1983, the society has been organizing and dating more than 4,000 items that make up the collection, ranging from homespun diapers to silk gowns and dating from the early 18th century to the mid-20th century.

As many as half of the items have a documented history, but often those records are off by a generation or two, according to Nancy Rexford, the society's clothing consultant and until recently curator of costumes at the historical society in Northampton, Mass.

The Connecticut society has been collecting costumes since it was established in 1825, giving it an advantage over similar groups in other states.

"Many historical societies were not founded until the late 19th or early 20th century. Connecticut really has a big lead," Mrs. Rexford said in a recent interview at the society's Hartford headquarters.

Now the society is recording the condition, description, maker, year, style and source of each item.

With a $22,470 grant from the Institute of Museum Services and $10,000 in matching funds raised by members, the society is working to ensure that the collection is properly stored so that it lasts longer and can be more accessible to staff, researchers and the public.

"Clothing is as yet an almost unexplored resource in giving a sense of how people live," Mrs. Rexford said.

For example, when revolutionary soldier and congressman Jeremiah Wadsworth of Connecticut visited the French court of Louis XVI in 1784, he wore an elaborate ensemble that included a crimson velvet coat and an ecru silk vest embroidered with pastel flowers and tiny red sequins.

Such were the clothes diplomats used at the courts of Europe's royalty.

But the society's goal is to educate the public by striving for a varied, well-kept and documented collection, including everyday clothing.

Without such efforts, "people will have a crazy view of what people were wearing," Mrs. Rexford said.

The society's collection includes a 1758 calamanco petticoat with quilted designs made for a Hartford woman, a 1920s women's bathing suit, an 1878 suit worn by a female Marlborough doctor, and the World War I uniform worn by a female member of the Jewish Welfare Board.

Other items of historical interest include the shirt Ledyard wore during his final American Revolution battle at Groton and a hat with a hole in it made by the bullet that killed Phineas Meigs during the 1782 Battle of Madison.

The everyday items, however, are the ones hardest to come by because they were of less value to the people who used them and they got the most wear.

Historical museums must rely on contributions from the public, and what gets saved by people tends to be of sentimental value, things put away to be altered, and things saved by accident, Mrs. Rexford said.

"You get a lot of wedding dresses, christening dresses, the clothing of toddlers who died young. Everything that's been kept has been kept for its intrinsic beauty, or it's been kept by a very sort of accidental group of circumstances," she said.

Textiles are sensitive to changes in temperature and humidity, so the society is spending its grant funds to purchase storage equipment such as racks, specially padded and sloped hangers, and shelves. Christopher P. Bickford, the society's director, said the equipment should be in use by the spring.

"Textiles are very complicated," Mrs. Rexford said. "You can't just set it on a shelf like a candlestick or a dish. They're organic things, made of plants and animals, and they do degrade over the long term."

Three Generations Join Greenville White Shrine

Three candidates received the degree of the Order of the White Shrine of Jerusalem at the February meeting of Greenville Shrine No. 9.

The candidates included a grandmother, Lucille A. Smith, her daughter, Agnes Smith Bunch, and granddaughter, Melanie Anne Bunch.

Worth High Priestess Jean Tharp expressed appreciation to the officers and pro tems and Alvia Hearren (associate watchman of shepherds of Coastal Shrine in New Bern) for pro temming as first wise man. She recognized Frances Waters (worthy high priestess), Milton Emer (watchman of shepherds) and the other members attending from New Bern.

Mrs. Tharp and husband, Watchman of Shepherds Bryce Tharp, honored all past worthy high priestesses and watchmen of shepherds present with miniature plaques holding miniature gavels.

Greenville Shrine will host the North Carolina-Virginia States Club March 2-3.

Jane Adams, Irene and Charles Ledbetter, Elba Rowe and Elizabeth Sumrell were members of the refreshment committee.

Ladies Car Care Clinic Announced

A ladies car care clinic, sponsored by Good Year Tire Center, will be held Wednesday from 7-9:15 p.m.

Discussion topics will include brakes, exhaust system, tires, belts and hoses and engine trouble shooting.

A session will be held at each of the two store locations at West End Shopping Center and 729 Dickinson Ave.

Persons interested in attending are asked to call 756-9371 or 752-4417 to register.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I had only to hear my husband, Jack the Clipper, riiip the story slowly from the newspaper and shout, "Aha!" to know that all of us were in for it.

I have not seen the man so excited since he caught the bank in a 17-cent error.

He summoned the family about him and when all was quiet, told us how he had just come across some startling statistics regarding the price of electricity.

"Did you know?" he asked, "that it costs each of us $135 a year to take a hot bath and that the washer costs $3.50 a year to operate?"

"Are you suggesting that we all bathe together in the soak cycle of the washer?" I asked.

"I am suggesting that we all take a good look at what is going on around here. A shower is a lot cheaper and uses less water." As we thanked him for sharing that revelation with us and got up to leave, he said, "And another thing. A waterbed cost $4.35 a year to heat while an electric blanket costs only $2.20."

I grabbed the clipping. "Why don't we all stand under a hair dryer to keep warm? That only costs $1.75 a year."

For a nickel more," said my son, scanning the list, "we could use the vacuum sweeper to suck the dirt off."

My husband left the room, once again in defeat.

The stories of fathers vs. family in the war against excessive utility costs are old ones. There isn't a father in this world who has not followed a beacon of light in the sky and expected to find a Hollywood premiere at the end of it, only to find it came from his own home.

They cannot see, the humor in air-conditioning the garage by leaving the door open the summer or heating it in the winter by the same process. It's all dollars and cents.

I said to the kids, "Your father has a point. After all, he pays the bills and all he gets back for it is waste. From here on in we stop and think about how much it costs in electricity before we turn on a single appliance."

When my husband came to breakfast, he said, "Where's the coffee?"

"I made it in the popcorn popper," I said. "It only costs 40 cents to run while the electric coffee maker costs $5.40."

One son didn't shave because it cost 40 cents a year. The other one was late for work because the clock ($1.03) was unplugged and a strange smell was coming from the freezer because it cost $109.45 a year to keep it plugged in.

I offered him a piece of solar toast from the window sill, but he just kept walking toward the door.

He hasn't won in 35 years... but you have to give him credit. He never stops trying.

Readers Ask Who Ends Telephone Conversation

DEAR ABBY: "Anxious in Kentucky" wrote in part: "My mother said it's an old tradition that the person who makes the telephone call should be the one to end the conversation. Is that true?"

You replied, "This old tradition is news to me."

Well, Abby, it's not news to me. I was raised in the South, and my mother told me the same thing.

"Anxious" also said that she had been late countless times waiting for the caller to end the conversation because her mother had told her that she would talk all night before terminating a conversation she didn't initiate.

I consider myself well-mannered, but I doubt if I would go that far.

SOUTHERN BELL(E)

DEAR BELL(E): Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 63-year-old woman who grew up in Rhode Island, and I, too, was taught that it was impolite to end a telephone conversation I didn't initiate.

I am now enrolled in a communication course for nurses, and I submit the following from one of our textbooks: "Many people act non-assertively under the mistaken notion that certain behavior defines politeness and consideration for others. They have learned, for example, that it is impolite to end a conversation with someone who has called them; to enter ongoing conversations between two other people; to ask dinner guests to leave when the evening has grown late; to agree with compliments, or to praise themselves. These sorts of behaviors are neither impolite nor aggressive; they are assertive."

DOROTHY BARNETT,
SAN GABRIEL, CALIF.

DEAR DOROTHY: Thank you for debunking an outdated rule of etiquette that never made much sense in the first place.

For the callee to wait indefinitely for an inconsiderate caller or a bore to terminate a telephone conversation is, in my opinion, more idiotic than impolite.

In conclusion, Dear Readers, everything your Mama done told you 40 years ago ain't necessarily so today.

DEAR ABBY: In the old days, when a woman wanted to meet a man who caught her eye, she used to drop a handkerchief. I guess they still do.

If a man wants to meet a lady, what should he drop?
CURIOUS IN WOODSTOCK, ILL.

DEAR CURIOUS: His wallet.

DEAR ABBY: I'm putting the thin world on notice. I am sick and tired of your belittling putdowns.

I'm not going to feel guilty any more because I don't exercise until I drop. I'm not going to feel guilty because when I buy three dozen doughnuts for my family, the clerk looks at me like she thinks I'm going to eat them all myself, because I know skinny people with bulimia who do that.

I am not going to let thin people tell me that being overweight is bad for my health, when I know that constant dieting is worse.

I'm not going to any doctors and nurses who give me shots like they're harpooning a whale.

I'm not going to watch skinny people down three Big Macs and wonder why I gain weight eating one.

I'm not going to give up swimming because people stare at the sight of me in a swimsuit.

One thing I will do is be kinder to thin people than they are to me. Diet? Maybe. Self-respect, you bet.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

At BB&T, The Quality Comes Through.

When more and more banks seem preoccupied by the idea of crossing state lines, we thought you might appreciate hearing from a bank that calls North Carolina home and not just home base.

Our overriding interest is in delivering the highest quality financial services to the people in North Carolina in ways that offer the best overall value.

A case in point is UVEST® Brokerage Services. UVEST was designed as a way for our customers to save up to 70% in brokerage commissions.

With toll free service, UVEST provides up-to-the-minute market information as well as prompt execution of trades.

But it's what UVEST doesn't have that's really impressive.

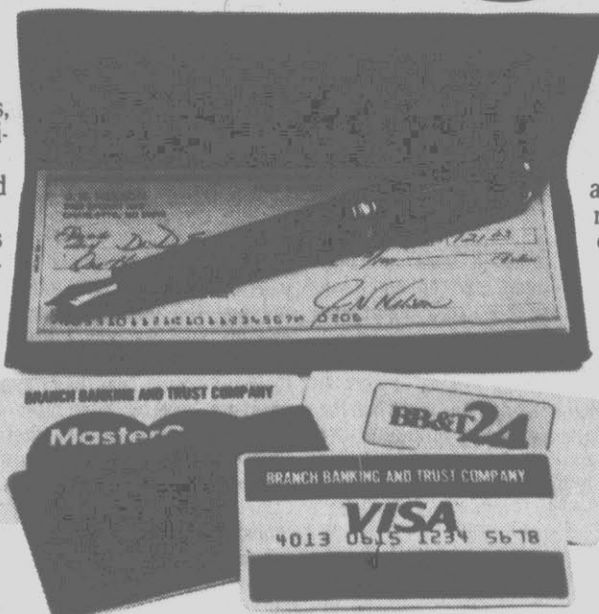

UVEST commissions are up to 70% lower than those of most brokerage houses. And since the brokers receive no commissions, you'll find you're never under any pressure to buy anything.

UVEST is available by itself or as a part of a much more comprehensive personal financial plan we call OMNI BANKING.

OMNI BANKING supplies a wide range of financial services designed to facilitate, not only your day-to-day banking, but also your long-term financial planning.

Every element of OMNI BANKING is of the highest quality. You receive, for example, interest-earning checking with checks designed to identify you as a special customer.

Member Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. UVEST® is a service mark and a division of Mercantile Securities Corporation.

You have access to a pre-arranged line of credit at prime rate for your personal use. We even provide a special personal financial review to assist you in analyzing your financial objectives and devising strategies to meet them.

And that's just a sampling. At BB&T, we realize that the quality of the service is inseparable from the quality of the person who renders it.

That's why we place such importance on the attitude of our people. It's an attitude that's reflected, for example, in our deeper commitment to understanding the full range of your long-term financial needs.

It becomes apparent, too, in our responsiveness to your requests. Because we know that, in today's fast changing world, your requirements will become ever more varied and complex in the future.

Finally, the BB&T attitude is evident in the kinds of insight we can provide. Because we realize that, the more insight we can provide for you, the more rewarding the relationship will be for both of us.

Come to BB&T. And discover how the quality comes through in everything we do.

Youth Care

This past week saw Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan tackling the problem of N.C. programs and related laws on the essential area of day care for children. He was speaking to the Senate Committee on Children and Youth about a field of widespread interest and concern to the public.

The quality of day care for juveniles is a pressing matter in North Carolina because among so many families there are several hours of every day when children at very tender ages are alone while their parents are at work.

Jordan pointed up the degree of need for protective measures in reminding that 285,000 children between the ages of 5 and 11 are alone some part of every day while their parents could not be with them because of work responsibilities. (North Carolina also leads the nation in the number of mothers working.)

The root causes are economic and social. Average household income in the state is relatively low among the other 49 in the nation; and as we are all aware, the number of households headed by women is especially high. The panel was told 79,000 children under the age of 5 today live in poverty.

In dealing with the inherent problems our legislators necessarily walk a fine line insofar as what the state can do. They must set standards and rules posing all the necessary safeguards. At the same time they have to avoid raising barriers to their implementation in terms of quality and quantity. Their purposes can be drowned in a sea of red tape and costly proceduralism.

That the problems are widely recognized is underlined even this early in the session: more than a dozen bills have already been introduced concerning day care rules and enforcement. The panel is also expected to deal with bills concerning juvenile justice, child abuse and other issues involving the young. Risks of losing sight of their target are high.

Responsibility for North Carolina's citizenry of tomorrow, in terms of physical and mental health, very much depends on us today.

Far Out

There must be something to be said for the concept of putting a loved one's ashes into orbit; and we've been trying to find the words. It isn't easy.

The Transportation Department approved the venture just before Valentine's Day — which might be explained as mere coincidence.

Briefly, a human's remains would be reduced to ashes that would fit into a capsule measuring 2 inches by 58th of an inch. As many as 10,300 such capsules could be launched in the first such mission into a 1,900-mile-high circular orbit. We are told the ashes will stay up for eternity or 63 million years ... whichever comes first.

The undertaking must be presumed economically feasible. It prompted one writer to remark it had the Reagan administration's blessing as a "creative response" to the president's urging of more commercialization of space. Fair enough. But being of a conservative persuasion ... both feet on the ground, you know ... it appears too far-out to strike a chord among our tradition-bound and earth-bound people.

Somehow we do not really expect to see a drop in the price of cemetery lots under pressures of space-age competition.

WASHINGTON — This is how it would be reported in the Congressional Record if the president's budget for 1986 ever gets to the floor of the House:

"Mr. Speaker! I have an amendment to offer."

"The gentleman will state it."

"The amendment calls for a new Section One to be inserted following the title, and for subsequent sections to be renumbered accordingly. The new section would read: 'The laws of human nature shall be, and they are hereby, repealed.'"

Without that modest little saving amendment, the budget is done for. For the past 10 days the ordinary noises of this capital city have been drowned by the greatest chorus of lamentation since Joshua sacked the city of Jericho. We have discovered what the voters meant to say in their mandate of last November. This was their message to Congress and the White House:

"Don't cut me; cut the other guy. And don't raise my taxes; raise his instead."

If it weren't such a sorry reflection on our sense of national purpose, the situation would be comic. Abstractly, almost everyone knows that the prospective federal deficits must be reduced. Their growing burden upon the economy is intolerable. As a practical matter, almost everyone knows that the deficits can be reduced in only two ways — by cutting expenditures, or by raising revenues, or by both.

The president proposes substantial reductions over the next few years in farm subsidies. These proposals are wholly justified. The present contradictory policies are indefensible. But not in the view of Sen. James Abdnor of South Dakota. He finds the proposals "unthinkable."

Among the farm programs to be abolished are tobacco supports and rural electrification. Rep. Charles Rose of North Carolina calls the tobacco proposals "ridiculous" and "disastrous." Spokesmen for the REA cooperatives are aghast.

The city boys have another point of view. "Threat to City Programs Grows," says a headline in a municipal newsletter. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney of Connecticut finds the idea of reducing urban development grants and ending aid to local sewer projects "very, very dangerous to the urban areas of our country."

Under the Reagan budget, funds for education would be cut and funds for the Job Corps would be eliminated. Rep. Augustus Hawkins of California heads a committee on education and job training. You may guess, if you are a good guesser, what Hawkins thinks of these ideas.

The budget would limit guaranteed student loans to students from families having incomes of less than $32,500. Says the head of the American Council on Education: This would "jeopardize the national security." The president would cut housing subsidies. To a spokesman for the housing industry, "This would represent a devastating blow."

So it goes. The opera people are singing the blues; even a 3 percent cut would ruin them. Government workers are howling with outrage. Directors of charitable institutions are warning that their activities will go to the bowwows if contributions are made less tax-deductible. The veterans lobby is warming up for one colossal protest against cutting benefits in any way.

"Don't cut me; cut the other guy." Yes, this is exactly the way human nature works. Virtually no one is willing to sacrifice anything toward the national purpose of reducing those deficits. It is too much to condemn this as pure selfishness. The librarians, school teachers, college presidents, social workers, railway engineers, airplane pilots, small-business men, tobacco growers and middle-income parents truly believe that the programs that most dearly concern them are good programs. They don't want to see them cut. They want to see them expanded. Go cut rural housing, says the city fellow. Go cut mass transit, says the fellow on the farm.

These attitudes have to change. It will take Reagan's leadership to do it. If we fail to rise as one people to a sense of common purpose, the whole cause of deficit reduction will collapse.

Publication Doubts Soviet Buildup

WASHINGTON — While flipping through the latest edition of Soviet Economy the other day, we discovered a dirty little secret in one of the magazine's articles: The Russians aren't building up their military like they used to. In fact, they haven't done so for years.

You might suspect that the assertion was just another piece of disinformation produced by the KGB to lull the NATO allies into complacency.

But Soviet Economy is a publication of the Brookings Institution, a middle-of-the-road Washington think tank. Moreover, the author, Richard F. Kaufman, drew his conclusions from Central Intelligence Agency documents. You can't get much more American than that.

Kaufman, a defense specialist with the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, writes that, according to CIA studies, the much ballyhooed Soviet defense buildup began to slow down in 1976 — just when anti-detenteniks were harping about the decline in U.S. military expenditures.

"During 1977 to 1981," Kaufman writes, Soviet "procurement of military hardware grew only slightly ... when measured in rubles, and did not grow at all in dollars." Overall, according to the CIA's figures, the growth of Soviet military expenditures (including procurement, R&D, and maintenance and operations) has been "slightly less" than 2 percent per year in constant dollars since 1976.

Ironically, the CIA, which had previously pegged the Russians' military build-up at 3 to 5 percent, didn't revise its estimates until 1983 — long after national paranoia about military insecurity helped bring Ronald Reagan to office.

Kaufman's analysis of the intelligence agency's data has left us even more interested in another piece of current reading, a review of the Pentagon's 1986 budget by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

The center has been one of President Reagan's biggest critics when it comes to cuts in social programs, which might leave some people skeptical about the group's bias. But the author of this analysis is Gordon Adams, a respected defense expert whose accuracy may be more consistent than the CIA's.

Adams' main point is this: The Pentagon's so-called "cuts" of $35.9 billion in 1986 are not really cuts at all but, rather, the result of manipulating budget figures. "In fact," Adams writes, "real ... growth (after inflation) in defense spending of $21 billion increases the anticipated (fiscal year) 1986 budget deficit."

But most striking are the numbers that Adams uses to illustrate the increasingly uncontrollable share of Pentagon expenditures. In the administration's proposal, almost 40 percent of the defense budget is tied up in long-term contracts, which are more or less beyond a budget-cutter's reach. Six budgets ago, the share was only 27 percent.

Thanks in part to CIA analysts, the U.S. entered into those long-term contracts on the assumption that Soviet leaders were deliberately placing weapons before consumers' needs. Now it appears that Soviet citizens and weapons builders both got the short end of the stick during the last nine years.

What a revelation like this might mean in Washington is unclear. Assorted congressional leaders, ranging from liberals to Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz), don't think the Pentagon should be paying $640 for toilet seats when other government programs are taking the heat. Senate Majority Whip Alan K. Simpson, a straight shooter if there ever was one, has predicted that there will be cuts in Defense spending by the time Congress is through.

But Democrats and Republicans will still probably let the Pentagon's budget grow by 3 to 5 percent after inflation, or about double the Soviets' rate. Congress doesn't want to seem soft on communism, you know.

Nonetheless, while the administration says the defenses of the nation haven't been better, it's still stressing commitment. That's why Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger isn't likely to make a big deal out of articles in Soviet Economy. The rest of us will just have to go to the bookstores ourselves.

Local Income Overshadows Tax Issue

RALEIGH — There can be little question that in the early days of the 1985 General Assembly there is widespread sentiment for cutting taxes. In the first week alone, six significant tax cut bills were filed.

But within the tax cut debate there is another debate which has the potential for destroying the tax cut mood. When the General Assembly cuts local taxes, it must somehow pay back local governments. Ask how to make those repayments and you start the fight.

This trouble wouldn't exist if the Legislature were looking at cuts in the income tax or sales tax. Then the Legislature would be cutting its own revenues.

In the tax debates of 1985, however, the Legislature wants to cut a pair of local taxes, the intangibles tax and the inventory tax. Local officials have long opposed repeal of these taxes but now appear resigned to losing them. They have exacted promises, however, from most of the state's leading politicians that any tax cut made by the Legislature will be made up to local governments.

So how does the Legislature transfer state money to local governments to reimburse them for the loss of inventory and intangibles tax revenues? The N.C. League of Municipalities favors a dollar for dollar payment to each town and municipality. If somebody loses $500 in inventory taxes, they ought to get a check for $500 from the state.

As Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, the Senate's most powerful member, says, "The money ought to go back where it came from. We're not going to give it to anyone who didn't put any in."

But there are others who don't like this idea. House Speaker Liston Ramsey, for example, thinks the money ought to go back to the counties on a per capita basis. This is state money that is being redistributed, he says, and it ought to be distributed evenly.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, who last year tried to get the intangibles tax repealed, agrees with Ramsey. "That's General Fund money which belongs to the general public. If you redistribute it to the point where it was collected, the rich counties will get richer and the poor counties will get poorer."

The difference in the two methods could mean a lot of money lost to some counties which currently collect a large amount of intangibles and inventory taxes. They'd lost under per capita redistribution. About 70 percent of the counties would gain at their expense, however.

If the tax cutting goes no further than the intangibles tax on money, then the distribution debate won't develop. That tax is now collected by the state and redistributed on a per capita basis.

The tax cutting may go beyond the intangibles on money alone. One bill filed the first week would call for the elimination of all intangibles tax. That would include stocks and bonds along with bank accounts. Rep. Paul Tyndall, D-Onslow, threw another hat into the redistribution ring with his bill.

Tyndall wants the Legislature to increase the local option sales tax by a half-cent. The state wouldn't reimburse the counties for any of loss of intangibles tax revenue. But the counties could raise the sales tax by a half-cent, Tyndall says. By doing so, the counties would not only make up for the lost intangibles tax revenue but also have extra money for needed school construction.

Cutting taxes sounds simple but when the Legislature starts cutting someone else's revenues, it gets much more complicated.

—Elisha Douglas—

Strength For Today

A few days before John Wesley died, as he lay in bed he raised his gaunt arms toward heaven and cried: "The best thing of all is that God is with us." These words are carved on his tomb in Westminster Abbey.

It must have been hard for Wesley to believe this sometimes. He was a minister of the Church of England, yet the doors of practically every church in the communion were barred against him. When he appeared in public to preach the gospel of love, he was often met with a volley of stones. He began to preach when the morals of England were at a low point, and all his life he had to protest against evil in a country where the light to true religion was waning.

Certainly the best thing in the world is the certainty men have of God's support. No tragedy is too deep, no disappointment too devastating, no sinful relapse too shameful to dim the reality of this great truth.

Schools Use Computers to Fight Truancy

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — School systems across North Carolina, including one in Caldwell County and Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools, are using computers to call the homes of absent students and inform their parents.

It's part of an effort involving high technology, expanded course offerings and special incentives to discourage absenteeism, which some officials say is the worst educational problem.

"The old notion of the truant officer grabbing kids by the scruff of the neck isn't the answer to the problem," said A. Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction. "We're not simply pulling kids off the street. We're working with the problems or the reasons that keep kids out of school."

Statewide, about 94 percent of high school students attend school on an average day, Phillips said.

"That's not a bad percentage, but it's not satisfactory," Phillips said. "We're very concerned about any evidence of poor attendance. If a youngster's not in school, we don't have a crack at doing those things that need to be done."

He said 300 school social workers or attendance officials across the state work to encourage school attendance.

"We feel strongly that once we get them here we can teach them," said Shirley B. Page, Garner High School principal. "But if they're not here, we can't teach them."

At Wake Forest-Rolesville High School, students with two straight months of perfect attendance are given discount coupons for a local Hardee's restaurant, principal Charles H. Rose said.

Factors that discourage attendance include family problems, lack of interest, social rejection and outside jobs, Phillips said.

"What we're really trying to do ... is to make school attractive enough to the individual youngster so he or she wants to come and feels the need to come," he said. "If the full program is there in the schools, chances are that the youngster will be there."

Parents also add to the problem, sometimes taking children out of schools for family trips or medical appointments that could be made after school.

At South Caldwell High School, the $4,000 computer system that calls an absent student's home as many as nine times in a day to deliver a taped message to parents that their child was absent has proved helpful since the county school board bought the program in December, Assistant Principal Wayne Kirby said.

"I think it helps," Kirby said. "Kids are paranoid about staying out now. We like to make personal contact" with an absent student's home. "and the computer takes time off us. And now we know that most parents will be contacted. The ones we usually have a hard time contacting are the ones we need to contact the worst."

Kirby said he hoped the computerized telephone message would boost the school's average attendance rate from 92 percent to more than 95 percent.

UNC Study Sees Research Future

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A study of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's research mission can be a blueprint for development as one the nation's top 10 research facilities and suggests more state funding and higher salaries, one of its sponsors says.

The report, released Monday, was prepared for the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities by a faculty steering committee. The association's accreditation committee will visit the school late next month.

"This report can serve as a blueprint for development of the university into one of the top 10 research universities in the nation," said Dr. John D. Kasarda, chairman of the steering committee. "If followed, these recommendations can become the university's springboard for excellence in the 1980s and beyond."

The steering committee recommended upgrading faculty salaries to be competitive with national research universities and for staff salaries to be made comparable with local private businesses.

When UNC is compared with nine other major universities including Duke University, the reports says, it is not competitive in faculty salaries and fringe benefits. In fiscal year 1983-84, UNC ranked ninth in average salaries for professors at $42,500, and sixth for associate professors at $31,200. It was eighth for assistant professors at $25,100.

It also called for special funding for scholarly work, with direct state funding to stimulate research.

"With the accelerating increase of knowledge, students are best able to learn the latest and the likeliest in the setting of a research university," Kasarda said. "If we were to teach yesterday's knowledge today, the quickening rate of its obsolescence would betray our students tomorrow."

The report also recommended that the university administration be given more autonomy from state regulations on personnel and equipment purchases under $15,000.

"With the relaxation of rigid controls imposed by the state, the university can be managed more efficiently, and its faculty can respond more effectively to research opportunities," Kasarda said.

The report also called for creation of an Office of Research, headed by a vice chancellor, and coordination of computing, communication and electronic information services.

Road Project 'Alive'

RALEIGH (AP) — A highway project supported by former Democratic state Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson has not been killed, but has been held up for further study, a state official says.

Randy D. Doub, a member of the GOP-controlled Board of Transportation, said Monday that the board told the transportation department to re-evaluate the project.

He said the board wanted to compare the merits of the project with others in the district.

As part of the $2.8 million project, a 3.1-mile segment of N.C. 32 from Washington Park east of Roberson's hometown of Washington, N.C., to State Road 1300 would be widened from two to four lanes. Curbs and gutters also would be installed.

Center Supports Insurance Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A report on automobile insurance in North Carolina has echoed Insurance Commissioner Jim Long's call for a legislative study committee investigation of the industry.

"The only thing more complicated than understanding insurance is trying to explain baseball's infield fly rule to a group of Tibetan yak handlers," said Bill Finger, editor of the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research's quarterly magazine, North Carolina Insight.

The center's report released Monday charged that car insurance in the state is governed by a hodgepodge of rules that don't protect consumers from such problems as age and sex discrimination.

"The auto insurance regulation system ... is out of kilter," said the report from the non-profit, Raleigh-based organization.

"Much of the industry continues to advocate age and sex discrimination," said the report, "and many industry representatives seem to consider only statistical equity — not social equity — as a measure of fairness."

The center recommended several reforms in its 76-page report, which the organization called a "primer" that describes how 12 types of insurance are regulated by the North Carolina Department of Insurance.

In a telephone interview, Long said he hadn't had time to read the center's report, but would urge the General Assembly to fund the proposed study.

GOP Drops Three Suits Over Plane

RALEIGH (AP) — Three of four counts in a suit against former Gov. Jim Hunt and his administration for misusing the state's airplane have been dropped by the North Carolina Republican Party, officials say.

The three counts against Hunt were dropped Friday.

But Richard C. Titus, an attorney for the GOP, said the group will continue its efforts to make the Jim Hunt for Senate Committee repay the state for using state aircraft on political business.

The suit, filed in October, charged that Hunt improperly flew himself and eight other Democrats on campaign business aboard state airplanes and helicopters.

Last fall, Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey delayed further action in the case until after the Nov. 6 elections, in which Hunt lost a bid to unseat U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms.

In a document submitted to the court Friday, former GOP chairman Dave Flaherty dropped a request for a permanent injunction barring Hunt and his campaign staff from using state airplanes. Flaherty also dropped portions of the complaint involving N.C. Commerce Secretary C.C. Hope, whose agency controlled use of state aircraft.

Titus said the party would pursue a portion of the complaint that seeks to make Hunt pay extra money for using state aircraft.

Attorneys for Hunt and the Republicans are scheduled to take up the case in a hearing scheduled for Feb. 28.

Wayne Man Held In Parents' Deaths

GOLDSBORO (AP) — A Wayne County man has been jailed on two charges of first-degree murder in the deaths of his father and stepmother, authorities said.

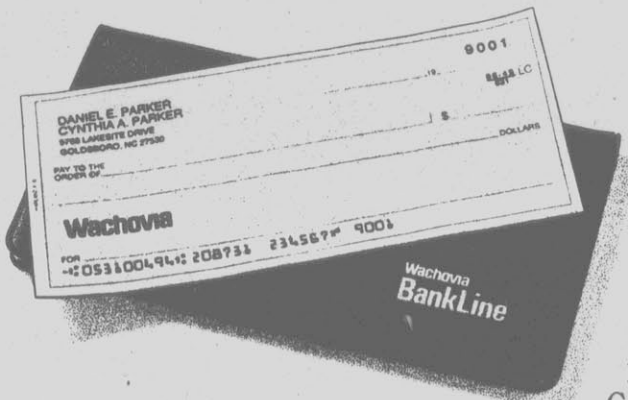

Terry Wayne Weeks, 20, was charged Sunday in the deaths of Jerry Trumar Weeks, 37, and Peggy Carol Weeks, 45, both of Mount Olive, Wayne County James Sasser said.

District Court Judge Rodney Graham set Weeks' bond at $200,000 at a first court appearance Monday. A probable-cause hearing is scheduled for March 4.

"They were good people. It's a tragedy and a very sad case," Sasser said. "We had no knowledge of any domestic problems."

Wachovia BankLineSM

The prime-based line of credit up to $50,000 or more that's as easy to use as writing a check.

There's no easier way to borrow in North Carolina than Wachovia BankLine, a prearranged line of credit up to $50,000. Simply write a check — at any time, for any amount up to your credit limit.

BankLine is inexpensive, too. The interest you pay is tied to Wachovia's Prime Rate.* And unlike most banks, Wachovia bases your interest rate on your credit line, not the amount you borrow.

Wachovia also offers Equity BankLine, a line of credit of $10,000 or more based on the equity you have in your home. There are no loan origination fees, although the normal mortgage loan closing expenses apply when the line is established and at every 10-year anniversary.

BankLine	Your credit line:	Your interest rate:	APR for February is:
(unsecured or secured with liquid assets)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 1%	11.50%
	$ 5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%	12.00%
	$ 2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%	13.00%
Equity BankLine	$10,000 or more	Prime + 2%	12.50%
(secured by real estate)

Your rate may vary monthly. If the Prime Rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the Prime Rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged on unsecured lines is 18%; on secured lines, 15%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

*"Prime Rate" refers to that interest rate set by the Bank from time to time as an interest rate basis for commercial and consumer borrowings. The Prime Rate is one of several interest rate bases used by the Bank. The Bank lends at interest rates above and below the Prime Rate.

Bond Says Leaf Talks Are Continuing

By The Associated Press
Negotiations between the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. and U.S. tobacco companies have narrowed the difference to 10 cents a pound on how much the 1985 flue-cured price support should be, a Stabilization official says.

Stabilization General Manager Fred Bond told the 246 farmer-members who registered for the co-op's annual Old Belt district meeting in Forsyth County on Monday that negotiations are continuing.

The co-op originally offered a plan to lower the 1985 price support from almost $1.70 a pound to about $1.50 a pound if tobacco companies would agree to buy all the surplus tobacco at discount prices over the next five years.

Two weeks ago, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., one of manufacturers involved in the negotiations, called for a support level of about $1.30 a pound.

Bond said Monday that the companies now are willing to agree on $1.35 a pound. The co-op board voted to come down to $1.45.

The price support guarantees farmers a minimum price for their tobacco. Tobacco grades that do not bring the support price at auction are paid for by the co-op with government loans.

The co-op in turn pays the farmer the support price and stores the tobacco in hopes of selling it later. Tobacco companies have been asked to buy about 812 million pounds of surplus flue-cured leaf in storage.

Bond said he hopes a decision can be reached in the next few days because he knows how frustrated tobacco farmers are.

For several weeks, growers have delayed leasing quotas and preparing their plant beds because of uncertainty over the price support and the assessment fee they may pay to finance the support program.

Several growers interviewed after the meeting said their production costs — excluding quota leasing costs — ranged from $1.15 to $1.30 a pound, depending on the land the tobacco was grown on.

Bob Adams, a Surry County grower, said in an interview, "If they set the proposal to drop support to $1.45 or $1.35, you can't afford 10-cents-a-pound leasing cost."

Adams said he has not yet leased any quota or fumigated his plant bed in preparation for seeding his tobacco this year.

"You can't make a proposal to anyone (to lease quota) unless you know what the price support and what the fees are going to be," Adams said. And, he said, the cost of fumigation is expensive.

Bond said the co-op has been delaying a decision on the assessment fee pending the outcome of the negotiations.

He said if a plan is agreed upon and the price support is lowered, growers may not have to pay an assessment fee.

Before the plan was proposed, the assessment fee was recommended to increase from last year's 7 cents a pound to 25 cents a pound this year.

"There's going to be changes in the tobacco program this year," Bond said. He said the agriculture department has proposed a $1 support level for tobacco and doing away with controls, and that other anti-tobacco proposals in Congress are likely.

"And I don't think we can keep what we've got because we can't afford it," Bond said, referring to the $1.3 billion worth of tobacco under loan. That is costing $9 million a month in interest, which accounts for the high rate of the growers' assessment, he added.

ARRESTED — Conover police escort one of two men arrested Monday to a waiting police car. The men were accused of being involved in an armed robbery that subsequently led to a shootout with a Conover police captain, who was wounded in the gunfire. One of the suspects also was wounded. Officer Wounded In Gunfire Exchange CONOVER, N.C. (AP) — A wounded Conover police captain radioed for help, then drove himself to the hospital, after exchanging gunfire with two armed robbery suspects in a residential area northeast of Conover, authorities said.

Word of the 10:30 a.m. Monday shoot-out drew more than 150 local, state and federal law officers with bloodhounds, a military helicopter and a plane to comb a one-square-mile wooded area.

By 1:30 p.m., Catawba County sheriff's deputies had apprehended two suspects, one with a bullet fragment in his cheek.

"It's been a right busy day," said Conover Police Chief Franklin Travis.

Veteran Capt. D.C. Stewart, 45, was shot twice in the left arm with bullets fired from .357 Magnum and .45-caliber handguns, Travis said. Late Monday, he was in satisfactory condition, undergoing exploratory surgery at Catawba Memorial Hospital to revive circulation in the arm.

The wounded suspect, identified as Irvin Kenneth Scales of Winston-Salem, was treated for a bullet fragment in the cheek and released to deputies.

Scales and the other suspect, who told police he is Robert Williams of Sumter, S.C., were in the Catawba County jail in Newton Monday night. Each is charged with two counts of armed robbery and one count of assault on a police officer with a firearm, said Catawba sheriff's Detective Tony Keller. Because of his injury, Scales was to be moved to N.C. Central Prison in Raleigh today.

Keller said deputies believe Williams may have given a fictitious name and address.

The incident started shortly after 10 a.m. Monday, when Conover police and Catawba sheriff's deputies received word of an armed robbery at the Continental Insurance office near Conover.

Two men ordered employee Jack Rollins into the office bathroom at gunpoint, said Rollins's son. Conover reserve police officer Gary Rollins. The suspects stole a watch, ring and about $450 before fleeing in a white Toyota, witnesses said.

Stewart, driving alone in his unmarked police car, pursued and stopped the Toyota. As he walked toward the Toyota the suspects sat with their hands clenched in their laps, Travis said.

"They waited till he got right up to the window and said, 'All right, boys, let's see some I.D.' They raised pistols and started firing on him at close range," Travis said.

"He shot back while he tried to take cover, emptied his pistol into the vehicle with them still firing, too. He was hit on his fifth round and again on his sixth round," he said.

One bullet Stewart fired from his police handgun went through the car window, which slowed it before it hit a suspect's cheek.

Stewart returned to his car, called for help and drove to the hospital two miles away.

Sheriff's deputies found Scales, wounded and hiding in a ditch. For about three hours students and faculty at an elementary school in the search area were locked in and guarded while classes continued.

The white frame house is the home of Stewart's aunt, Travis said.

Flu Outbreaks

RALEIGH (AP) — Outbreaks of influenza have been recorded in the Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Greenville areas, but the state is still less flu-ridden than the rest of the nation, state officials say.

Cases of flu recorded at 10 university hospitals took their first sharp jump last week, going from 99 in the week of Feb. 1-8 to 150 for the week that ended Friday, said Dr. John E. Parsons, epidemiologist with the state Division of Health Services.

"This is not an increase above what you'd expect for this time of year," Parsons said. "And the outbreaks are still in counties with less than 50 percent of the population. But it's definitely above the sporadic level."

North Carolina was listed as one of 10 states with "regional" outbreaks of flu, a lower ranking than 10 states with "widespread" outbreaks.

Last week's outbreak did not push the state into the widespread category, and the lateness of the increase suggests that the state may avoid the worst of the national outbreak, Parsons said.

State Appealing Court Order To Design Treatment Program

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The state is appealing a judge's ruling ordering North Carolina to design a treatment program for a 21-year-old Gaston County man and at least 400 other mentally retarded people.

Thomas S., 21, of Gaston County, whose last name was withheld to protect his privacy, won two victories in September and December when U.S. District Court Judge James McMillan issued his ruling, saying the lawsuit should apply to all people who are mentally retarded but kept in psychiatric institutions.

A similar lawsuit filed for another group that didn't fit existing programs led to the Willie M programs, aimed at a small group of violent, disturbed youngsters. The state has budgeted $21.6 million for those programs in fiscal 1985.

Allen Childress, a regional adult mental health specialist for the state, said Thomas was shuffled through more than 40 foster homes and mental hospitals, and was in a Burke County home for the elderly when Childress was made his guardian three years ago.

The shuffling made him emotionally immature, Childress said.

A lawsuit filed by Thomas' lawyers in 1982 charges that the state and county-level agencies are legally bound to provide Thomas with better care — care in a group home or foster home that would include vocational and education training.

Airline Leaving

RALEIGH (AP) — New York Air, which scheduled about 20 flights a day from the Raleigh-Durham Airport last spring, will pull out of the airport March 15, an airport executive said Monday.

The company, which came to the airport in 1982, has been trimming its service since September.

New York Air's departure means that Piedmont Airlines will be the only carrier flying between the Raleigh-Durham Airport and Newark. Brantley said he expected the fare on that route to rise after it becomes a monopoly for Piedmont.

Artificial Heart Recipient Now Breathing On Own

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Murray P. Haydon began his third day with an artificial heart today by asking a nurse to turn on a television so he could see "if I'm alive and how I'm doing," a hospital spokesman said.

While doctors beamed about Haydon's recuperation as he resumed breathing on his own, they said a "discouraged" and fever-plagued William J. Schroeder may never be well enough to leave the hospital.

After a quiet night, Haydon this morning asked a nurse, "Would you please turn on the television? I'd like to see if I'm alive and how I'm doing," according to Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical spokesman for the team that implanted the Jarvik-7 heart on Sunday.

On Monday, Haydon could only mumble yes and no after a respirator was removed from his irritated throat, but his condition "is so good it's frightening," Lansing said.

Haydon, 58, of Louisville, ate ice chips Monday night, his first step toward sipping fluids rather than taking them through a tube. Doctors expect him to take clear fluids sometime today, Lansing said.

Lansing said the "next plateau" would be ridding Haydon of all his tubes and monitoring lines, except for the compressed-air lines that keep the plastic and metal heart beating. His chest tubes had been removed, Lansing said at a briefing today.

Haydon was in critical but stable condition showing no complications today, a hospital spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Schroeder, the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, continued to suffer an untraceable fever and memory lapses and was described as "withdrawn."

"We still have no indication of what the etiology (cause) of his illness was, but he seems to be improving," Lansing said today. Schroeder had only a mild fever of 100 degrees Monday, Lansing said.

Schroeder, accompanied by his wife, Margaret, was taken in a wheelchair to see Haydon through a window. Haydon was sleeping, but Schroeder smiled and waved, Lansing said.

"Bill, that's another member of the club," Mrs. Schroeder said, according to Lansing.

A day earlier, Lansing had said Schroeder "spends most of his time in bed. The quality of life is not good."

Schroeder, 53, of Jasper, Ind., was nearly well enough to go home when the fever struck him about two weeks ago, doctors said.

"This appeared to be a setback, as though he might never get out of the hospital," Lansing said. "I am not sure that he will go home."

Westmoreland, CBS Differ On Pact To Drop His Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortly after retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland dropped his $120 million libel suit against CBS, the dispute switched from Vietnam War troop estimates to an argument over whether the settlement constituted an apology from the network.

Westmoreland said he got the apology he had been seeking all along. CBS officials said that the network had not apologized and that the 1982 broadcast that prompted Westmoreland's suit had withstood the test of 2½ years of scrutiny, both in and out of court.

Van Gordon Sauter, executive vice president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said that Westmoreland declared a "victory" so that he could withdraw from a losing case. He said Westmoreland "may read into the (CBS) statement what he wishes to read into it."

Like the war in Southeast Asia that was the heart of the trial's testimony, Westmoreland's abrupt withdrawal from the 18-week legal battle in New York left matters on an ambiguous note, emotions simmering and many questions unanswered.

The final act of the lengthy drama was to be played out today in U.S. District Court, where Judge Pierre Leval was to dismiss the 12 jurors and five alternates.

Richard Benveniste, jury foreman, said Monday he was "still stunned" by the settlement.

'Glad To Be Free'

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Television journalist Jeremy Levin, who spent 11 months in "irons and misery" while being held captive in eastern Lebanon, says he feels no animosity towards his abductors and just hopes four other American captives will be let go.

Levin, who was cheered by about 100 family members, friends and State Department officials upon his return here Monday, thanked President Reagan, Syrian leaders and soldiers, and "many officials who you and I may never know (who) worked long, hard and anonymously to rescue me."

"Boy, I missed you," the 52-year-old Cable News Network reporter told well-wishers at this suburban Washington, D.C., air base. But he said he was not angry with his captors, even though he "literally sat in darkness and deep gloom ... in irons and misery" during his captivity, which began with his March 7 abduction from war-torn Beirut.

"I am not bitter, I am not angry," Levin said after he departed an Air Force C-135 jet while waving a small American flag and hugging his wife, Lucille. "But I am glad to be free."

Levin, who may have been held in the same house in eastern Lebanon with four other Americans believed to be hostages, appealed to the kidnappers: "Let my brothers go. Let your brothers go. In the name of our common lord, God and Allah, please let them go."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated again today, extending its decline in the last two sessions of last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 15.90 Thursday and Friday after hitting a record high on Wednesday, slipped another 3.42 to 1,278.60 in the first half hour today.

Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The economic news has been generally upbeat during the market's period of retrenchment, and it remained so today.

The Commerce Department reported that housing starts increased 14.9 percent in January to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.83 million. Building permits, an indicator of future construction activity, also rose.

"Residential construction should make a positive contribution to economic growth in the current quarter and in all of 1985," said Malcolm Baldrige, the secretary of commerce.

Separately, the Federal Reserve Board said that the nation's industries operated at 81.9 percent of capacity last month, up from 81.7 percent in December.

With all the upbeat news, however, Wall Streeters have developed some doubts lately about the chances for much further decline in interest rates. Brokers say that question mark has been sufficient to prompt many traders to cash in their profits from the recent rise in stock prices.

Unocal led the active list, down 1 1/4 at 45. Last week an investment group including Mesa Petroleum said it had bought a big stake in Unocal, but added that it had no present plans to seek to gain control of it.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 5.86 to 1,282.02, finishing the week with a net loss of 7.95 points.

Declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 106.47 million shares, against 139.73 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .43 to 105.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .14 at 230.97.

Some of the stocks normally listed are not available today.

Court Says Mass Transit Systems Must Follow Federal Wage Laws

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a ruling that could mean fare increases for the nation's bus and subway riders plus higher local taxes, said today that publicly owned mass transit systems must pay federal minimum wages and overtime.

In a 5-4 decision that struck a blow to state's rights, the court said in a case from San Antonio, Texas, that the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act, which sets minimum wage and overtime requirements, applies to transit systems owned and operated by state, local and county governments.

The court discarded a doctrine it established in 1976 that said all "traditional" local government services are exempt from such federal regulation.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun, in his opinion for the court today, said the nine-year-old rule is no longer applicable in all cases.

Instead, Blackmun said, federal laws may apply to state and local governments as long as they are not "destructive of state sovereignty or violative of any constitutional provision."

In San Antonio's case, the minimum wage and overtime provisions as applied to publicly owned mass transit are the same "obligations that hundreds of thousands of other employers, public as well as private, have to meet," Blackmun said.

Groups representing state and local governments predicted the ruling will mean major cost increases for them, particularly to pay overtime for such workers as bus drivers whose normal work day may stretch over more than 12 hours to accommodate morning and evening rush hours.

Mass transit systems operate frequently at a loss and any cost increases are likely to be passed on to the general public in the form of tax hikes and to riders through higher fares.

Most bus and subway systems are now publicly run, particularly in major metropolitan areas. An estimated 94 percent of the nation's urban bus riders use publicly run systems.

The San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority argued that its local bus system is as essential a government service as keeping the streets repaired or providing police and fire protection, and those jobs are exempt from federal wage and overtime law.

The San Antonio agency was created by Texas law in 1978 to take over a city-owned transportation system. The transit authority sued in 1979 to avoid complying with the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act.

The federal law requires employers covered by it to pay workers a minimum hourly wage and no less than 1 1/2 times their regular pay for each hour worked in excess of 40 hours a week.

Most transit workers earn more than the federal minimum wage, now $3.35 an hour. But generally they are not entitled to overtime pay at the federally required rate.

graders at Aycock to points across North Carolina April 3-5 was approved. Places to be visited on the itinerary include the Reed Gold Mine, Fontana Dam, Biltmore Estate, Linville Caverns and other scenic and historic places. Money for students who cannot afford the approximately $90 cost will be provided, and it is expected that nearly all students will be making the trip.

A resolution of appreciation for the services of the late Dr. Rexford Eugene Piner was adopted. At its previous meeting, board members asked the staff to prepare a resolution for formal adoption at Monday night's meeting. Piner, a long-time educator and for several years principal at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School, died Feb. 2.

Freager Sanders, director of federal programs, reported to the board that a monitor study of the federal programs resulted in a high rating for the city schools' federal accounts. The monitoring visit was made by personnel of the State Department of Public Instruction. In all areas except one, that of a comparability plan, the Greenville program received ratings of meeting requirements in a commendable manner or meeting program requirements. The report covers 50 requirement areas.

Director of Elementary Education Charles Ross presented an update report on the 379-page guideline manual for STAR (Steps to Attain Reading). Ross said revisions had been completed and published. The revised manual is being distributed to teachers. Students in the graphics class at Rose High printed the manual, and notebook covers were donated to the school by the Social Security Office.

Dr. Jasper Lewis reported to the board on the status of activities carried out in schools by local dentists. Emphasis on dental care for young people has been highlighted in February.

A vote of approval was given for inclusion in school board minutes of the total text of House Bill 29. This is the North Carolina legislative act creating authority for consolidation of the Pitt and Greenville school systems.

In executive session, board members approved maternity leave for one staff member, and a leave of absence due to health reasons for another. Also approved was the list of East Carolina University student teachers authorized as substitute teachers for the city schools.

Navy Sails Past Pirates, 76-66

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
ANNAPOLIS, Md. — What a difference an All-America candidate can make to a team.

The Naval Academy was cruising along maintaining a comfortable 20-point cushion Monday against the Pirates of East Carolina, but 6-11 center David Robinson suffered a cut finger with 7:24 left and the Midshipmen leading 61-42.

Navy Coach Paul Webb chose to rest Robinson, who finished with 18 points and 17 rebounds, the remainder of the game rather risk further damage, and the Middies held off an ECU rally to take a 76-66 ECAC-South victory for 20th win of the 1984-85 season.

After Robinson's departure, the Pirates outscored Navy 18-6 through the 2:43 mark to trim the margin to 67-60. Curt Vanderhorst, who led the Pirates with 26 points, posted eight in the spurt and William Grady added six. Grady finished with 24 points.

The Midshipmen connected on nine out of 12 free throws in the final 2:32, including four consecutive by Kaylor Whitaker, to seal the win and improve their overall record to 20-4 while 11-2 atop the ECAC-South standings.

"We cut the lead some while (Robinson) was in there," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "Robinson's a good player; when you've got a horse like that, he can carry you a long way."

"We made some very unintelligent plays in the first half; not a lot, but enough to get us behind early. We were taking good shots; they just weren't falling."

East Carolina connected on 10 out of 31 from the floor for a miserable 32.3 percent but improved to 42.9 for the game with 20 out of 39 field goals in the second half. Navy, meanwhile, shot 44.8 percent in the first half and 65.2 in the second.

The Pirates quickly fell behind by 10 at the start, as Robinson opened the game with a pair of buckets inside and Vernon Butler scored six of his team-high 19 points to put the Midshipmen ahead 12-2 with 12:29 left in the half. The Pirates' only offensive production in that stretch was a dunk by Grady on a fast break, as Vanderhorst missed his first three shots before finding the mark with 11:12 left.

East Carolina was faced with another familiar problem early, as 6-8 Roy Smith picked up his second foul with 14:46 left in the half. Despite playing just 23 minutes, Smith led the Pirates with 11 rebounds. Center Leon Bass, despite connecting on just one of seven field goal attempts, grabbed 10 rebounds for East Carolina.

A 15-footer by Vanderhorst trimmed the margin to 17-10, and he later stole the ball and cruised in for a dunk to complete a four-point swing for a 21-16 margin at the 7:41 mark.

Vanderhorst cut the lead to five with layups two more times through the end of the half, but he missed a possible three-point play on the second with the score 25-20 with 4:36 remaining.

The Pirates went scoreless through the end of the half as Robinson posted five points to lead a nine-point spurt by the Middies for a 34-20 halftime lead.

Navy, shooting over the ECU zone, scored two field goals for every one the Pirates posted through in the opening 5:33 of the second half to take a 48-26 advantage, but Grady scored on a fast break and Smith jabbed through a follow-shot to trim the margin to 18 with 13:27 remaining.

Cliff Rees scored inside for Navy, and Bass responded with a turnaround jumper for the Pirate. But then Butler went on a tear, scoring six unanswered points inside for to put Navy in control 56-32 with 11:43 left.

The Pirates outscored Navy 10-5 before Robinson was forced to leave the game.

The Midshipmen held a 65-48 lead with 4:50 left, but Vanderhorst canned eight points and Grady added four as the Pirates cut the gap to 67-60 with 2:43 left.

Doug Wojcik sank two free throws and Butler added a pair for a 71-60 Middies lead, but Grady responded with a jumper from the corner to trim the margin to nine with a minute left. Tony Wells hit the first of two free throws for Navy with 49 seconds remaining, and Smith connected on two for the Pirates at the 38-second mark for a 72-64 tally.

Whitaker swished four from the line for Navy, and Vanderhorst closed out the Pirate scoring with an 18-footer with 12 seconds on the clock.

"Our kids played hard," Harrison said. "Roy Smith was much more aggressive; he went after the ball on the boards better. Keith Sledge has been playing the role we've asked of him all year; he comes off the bench and gives us a lift offensively."

"Curt got off to a slow start, but Curt's a rhythm shooter. He got it going later on into the game and kept us in there."

"Navy has three very good ballplayers in Robinson, Butler and Whitaker. Butler's a Curt Rambis (of the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers) type player; he plays hard every minute he's on the floor, and he'll battle you for every loose ball. (Cliff) Rees and Wojcik know their roles on their team very well. (Navy) has a lot of very good, intelligent basketball players."

The loss drops the Pirates to 6-17 overall while winless in 11 ECAC-South contests. East Carolina travels to American University Thursday for a televised game that was originally scheduled to be played as part of a two-game road trip.

"This is a tough road trip," Harrison said. "If we stayed up here (until Thursday), that would mean the kids would miss class through Friday. That's not fair to them; they're here as students first and playing basketball comes second."

Greene Central Girls Have Easy Time; Pitt Girls Out

LITTLEFIELD — SouthWest Edgecombe pulled off a mild surprise in the first round of the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball tournament last night but C.B. Aycock's and Greene Central's higher seeded girls teams moved on as play opened last night at Ayden-Gritton High School.

Greene Central, which finished second in the regular season, rolled up a 70-23 win over Southern Nash, while C.B. Aycock nipped North Pitt, 53-49, in the girls' action.

SouthWest's boys, which finished fifth in the standings, upset #4 C.B. Aycock, 67-65, in their game.

Greene Central had little trouble with Southern Nash, scoring almost enough in the first period to win the game and putting it away by the end of the half. After the first eight minutes, the Lady Rams held a 16-2 lead, and they increased that to 33-11 by the end of the half.

The Lady Rams pushed the lead out to 51-16 after three periods and finished off the Lady Birds, 19-7, in the closing quarter.

Cyndi Hicks led Greene Central with 29 points while Dalen Herring added 11 and Melody Bowen and Cynthia Jones each had ten. No one scored in double figures for Southern.

North Pitt tried for the upset in their game, but couldn't pull it off. The Pant-HERS held a 12-10 lead after one period, but Aycock came back to capture a 24-20 halftime advantage.

Both teams pushed through nine points in the third period and again matched points in the final frame, scoring 20 each as Aycock maintained its four-point margin to the wire.

Kelly Malpass led Aycock with 23 points while Toni Coley had 18.

Lady Pirates Nip Dukes To Clinch Tourney's Top Seed

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Thanks to a tough defense and Sylvia Bragg's 17 second half points, East Carolina's Lady Pirates can breathe a sigh of relief today.

Their quest for the number one seeding in the ECAC-South's post-season tournament came to a successful end last night as they nipped James Madison, 61-57, in Minges Coliseum.

The victory, the 15th straight for the Lady Pirates, boosted their ECAC-South record to 10-0, while Madison, the only team with a chance to catch them, dropped off to 8-2. Now, with only two games remaining, the Lady Pirates have clinched at least a tie for the title, and — having beaten Madison in both their head-to-head meetings — has sewed up the #1 seeding for the tournament which carries with it a first-round bye.

A victory in either of the last two ECAC-South games, against UNC-Wilmington or Richmond, or a single loss by Madison in either of its last two games, would wrap up first place for ECU all alone.

The victory wasn't an easy one. Madison, playing a patient game, stayed with the Lady Pirates most of the way, and even after Bragg accelerated the lead out to as much as nine points late in the going, the Lady Dukes put on a rally with came within a hair of pulling back even.

"Our number one goal was defense, and I think defense was what won it for us," Coach Emily Manwaring said. "I know they got a lot of open shots, but we had a hand in their face most of the time."

East Carolina, meanwhile, was impatient for most of the first half and the early part of the second half before finally settling down to get the job done. "In the first half, we didn't make very good shot selections," the coach said. "The tempo was about where we wanted it, but we just weren't getting good shots. If (JMU) has any weakness, it's their quickness and we had hoped to make gains on that. Too, in the first half we didn't get many second shots."

Madison outrebounded East Carolina overall, 43-39, but the Lady Pirates, thanks to some good work in the second half, held a 14-12 offensive rebound edge, and that proved important.

Neither team show well: Madison hit only 37.0 percent and ECU, 39.3, as both played good defense. That made the second shots that much more important.

Madison led throughout most of the first half, going out by as much as five points late in the period. They took an early 6-2 lead but the Lady Pirates fought back to take the lead for the first time at 10-9. The two swapped baskets for a few minutes until Sue Manelski hit to put Madison back up 13-12. They held it until Loraine Foster hit for a 16-15 ECU lead, but it couldn't be maintained.

JMU regained the lead and ran back out to a 23-18 edge on a jumper by Julie Franken with 4:52 left in the half. But Anita Anderson hit two free throws and Monique Pompili hit on a follow-up to cut it back to one. Then, with 16 seconds left, Anderson hit off a layup from a feed by Bragg to put ECU up by one at the half, 26-25.

Madison scored the first two baskets of the second half to take a 29-26 lead, and moved that out to 32-28 before te Lady Pirates took command.

Foster hit to tie it at 32-32 and Bragg followed with a short jumper by Bragg. Half a minute later, the Pirates forced a 30-second clock violation and Bragg hit again for a 36-32 lead.

Madison never caught up again. "I thought that the 30-second call was the turning point of the game," Manwaring said. "That threw them and they never really got back on track. Too, Bragg started penetrating when they were looking for her to dish off. They were spreading the defense to stop that and she just took it to the basket."

Bragg scored 18 of the final 29 points scored by the Lady Pirates to lead the way from there on out.

Midway the half, Lisa Squirewell hit a three-point play and Bragg added two at the stripe to run the lead out to seven, 43-36. Madison cut it back to three twice before the Pirates upped it to seven again, and finally to nine at 53-44 on a jumper by Foster with 3:52 left.

Madison struggled back and finally cut the lead to three, 58-55 with 53 seconds left, but the Pirates were able to hold them off in those final seconds to pull out the win.

Bragg finished with 25 points while Squirewell had 13 and Foster, 11. Madison was led by Michele James with 18, most of them on long-range bombs, while Manelski had 16 and Franken, 11. Franken led the rebounding with 12 while Alisa Harris snatched away 10.

The win boosted the ECU overall record to 17-8, while Madison falls to 19-6.

St. John's Maintains Basketball Poll Lead

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Sports Writer

St. John's, which registered three victories last week by a total of 43 points, remained atop The Associated Press Top Twenty today as the first three teams in the college basketball poll held their places from last week.

The Redmen, 22-1 and currently on the nation's longest winning streak — 17 games — received 59 first-place votes and 1,199 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. St. John's downed Columbia 68-49, Pittsburgh 84-63 and DePaul 93-80 to remain atop the poll.

Georgetown, 23-2, which is second to St. John's in the Big East Conference standings, held the second spot in the poll as it received the only other first-place vote and 1,141 points. Michigan, 20-3 and the leader in the Big Ten standings, remained third with 1,044 points.

The first change in the poll came as Memphis State and Oklahoma switched places from last week's rankings. The Tigers, 20-2, who finished with 975 points, enjoyed Metro Conference victories over Cincinnati, Florida State and South Carolina in the last week, while the Sooners, 21-4 and 958 points, also registered victories over Big Eight foes Iowa State and Missouri.

Duke, 18-4, and Syracuse, 19-4, each improved one spot from last week's poll. The Blue Devils, who defeated Seton and Notre Dame in a pair of non-conference games, received 913 points, while the Orangemen, 19-4, who beat Big East foes Providence and Seton Hall as well as Louisiana State, had 873 points.

Georgia Tech, 18-5, which lost its only game of the week to Virginia, fell two places from last week and was eighth with 720 points, while Southern Methodist, 20-5, held the ninth spot with 675.

Louisiana Tech, 22-2, which made its debut into the poll nine weeks ago, joined the Top Ten for the first time this season as the Bulldogs received 622 points. Louisiana Tech narrowly escaped defeat in two Southland Conference victories, an overtime decision over Southwestern Louisiana and a one-point victory over McNeese State.

Nevada-Las Vegas leads the Second Ten — which has three new members — followed by Tulsa, North Carolina, Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Virginia Commonwealth, Georgia, Oregon State and Boston College.

Virginia Commonwealth, 20-4, and Boston College, 18-6, personally knocked out two members of last week's Second Ten. The Rams beat then-No. 19 Alabama-Birmingham 67-53 in a Sun Belt Conference game and the Eagles downed then-No. 16 Villanova 62-61 with a wild comeback in the final four minutes of the Big East clash. Villanova was also beaten by Georgetown during the week. Virginia Commonwealth had not been in the Top Twenty for three weeks, while Boston College had dropped out one week earlier.

Georgia, 17-6, one of four teams tied for the Southeastern Conference lead and in the Top Twenty for the first time this season, is the other new member of the second 10, replacing Maryland, which lost Atlantic Coast Conference games to North Carolina and Clemson.

Rowsom Lifts UNC-W 74-66

WILMINGTON (AP) — Sophomore Brian Rowsom scored 28 points, hitting 13 of 16 shots from the field, to lead North Carolina-Wilmington to a 74-66 non-conference college basketball victory over Campbell Monday.

The Seahawks, 11-11, grabbed a 26-11 lead with seven minutes left in the first half before taking a 36-26 halftime lead. Rowsom scored 14 of his points in the opening half.

The Camels, 4-20, cut the lead to 64-60 with 1:52 left on a jumper by Juan Austin, but the Seahawks sank several free throws down the stretch to pull away.

The Seahawks hit 26 of 37 free throws for the game, while Campbell sank only 12 of 18.

Bobby Jo Springer added 13 points for the Seahawks, hitting 11 of 13 from the free throw line. Mark Gary had 10.

Andrea McGee led the Camels with 17 points, while Larry Spencer had 16.

Mississippi State Holds College Baseball Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Mississippi State, still yet to play a 1985 game, is ranked No. 1 in the latest ESPN-Collegiate Baseball poll, replacing early favorite Texas, which is off to a 4-2 start and has fallen to fourth.

The top-rated Bulldogs, who open their season Saturday, were picked as the second-best team during the preseason, with the top returning 1-2 batting combination in the nation in outfielder Rafael Palmeiro, who had 29 home runs, 94 RBIs and a .415 average, and first baseman Will Clark, who hit 28 home runs, had 94 RBIs and batted .386.

Florida State, 11-0, paced by 23 home runs and 135 runs scored, jumped from seventh to second place. Defending national champion California State-Fullerton and Arizona State, the preseason No. 3 and No. 4 picks, dropped out of the top 20.

Miami, Fla., 9-3, moved from fifth to third, while Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, both without records yet, dropped from third and fourth to fifth and sixth, respectively.

In seventh, down from sixth, was San Diego State, 6-0, while Stanford,

Bird Lets Record Slide

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Larry Bird was one steal away from National Basketball Association history and was too tired to care.

Bird had 30 points, 12 rebounds, 10 assists and nine steals and Boston had a 22-point lead after the third quarter of Monday night's 110-94 victory over the Utah Jazz. But after playing 42 minutes the day before in a loss to the Los Angeles Lakers, Bird was in no mood for record-setting.

One more steal would have given him the first regulation "quadruple double" — double figures in four categories — in NBA history. Bird was told he had a chance for the record, but he chose not to play in the fourth period.

"I already did enough," Bird said. "If it had been close, I'd have been in there trying, but when you're ahead by 30 points, what do you have to prove?"

In other NBA games, Cleveland defeated Philadelphia 120-113, Detroit crushed Phoenix 122-103 and the Los Angeles Clippers tripped San Antonio 125-121.

The Celtics had only nine players in uniform because starters Robert Parish and Cedric Maxwell are injured and backup guard Quinn Buckner was ill. But Bird, and Utah's miserable shooting early in the game, kept Boston in control.

"Bird took it away from us," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "It was a great effort on his part. He played a lot of minutes yesterday in Los Angeles. But he knew his team was short a couple of key guys, so he went out and played real hard. He's as good as there has ever been."

The Celtics led 34-10 after the first period and Utah never got closer than the final margin the rest of the way. The Jazz shot 3-for-25 from the field in the first period and didn't get their first field goal until only 4:07 remained in the quarter.

"We had a running start and the Jazz couldn't make their shots go," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "The first quarter says it all. I've never seen any team in the NBA go cold for that long."

After losing to the Lakers Sunday, Jones said, "We were down so it really helps to win one like this. This game was way beyond my expectations."

Bird hit 13 of 22 shots from the field en route to his game-high 30 points, while teammate Kevin McHale added 29 points while hitting 11 of 17 field goal attempts.

The only official NBA quadruple double was recorded by Nate Thurmond of the Chicago Bulls, who had 22 points, 14 rebounds, 13 assists and 12 blocked shots in a 120-115 overtime victory over Atlanta on Oct. 18, 1974. Statistics on blocked shots and steals have been kept only since 1973, so there may have been others that went unrecorded.

Utah got 22 points from backup forward Fred Roberts, who is getting more playing time because Utah scoring leader Adrian Dantley also is injured.

"If there is anything bright in a defeat of this magnitude it is the fact that Fred has blossomed," Layden said. "Since Dantley's been out these past three games, Fred has shown us what he can do."

Cavaliers 120, 76ers 113
Cleveland, which won at Philadelphia for the first time in 23 tries last Friday, made it two straight over the 76ers as World B. Free scored 35 points.

Tigers, Washington Advance In Tourney

WILLIAMSTON — Washington's boys and girls and Williamston's boys, all higher seeded teams, advanced to the semifinals of the Northeastern Conference Tournament with victories last night as play got underway.

Washington's girls downed Tarboro, 49-39, in the first game of the evening, while Williamston nipped Bertie, 66-62, in overtime in the first boys' game. Washington eliminated the Tarboro boys in the final game of the night, 55-45.

In what may have been the most exciting game of the night, Williamston slipped ahead of Bertie by three points in the opening period, 9-6, and added two to that in the second for a 26-21 lead. Bertie rallied in the third period, trimming the lead to 40-39. Bertie then took the lead and almost pulled it out before Mike Griffin hit two free throws with four seconds left to knot it at 56-56.

In the overtime, Griffin scored a field goal and a free throw to pace the Tigers to a 10-6 margin for the victory.

Tony Doughty led Williamston with 21 points while Griffin added 19 and Jesse Ward had 12. Bertie was paced by Tim Farless with 13, Andrew Ryan with 12 and Guy Haynes with ten.

Washington's boys eased out to a 14-12 lead after one period and doubled that lead in the second quarter. By the half, the Pam Pack held a 30-26 lead. Washington was unable to gain any headway in the third period, moving the margin to only 39-34 during the frame. But in the last period, Washington outscored Tarboro, 16-11, to put the game away.

Earl Randolph led Washington with 19 points while Adrian Dudley had 11 and Steve Austin had 10. Tony Bryant led Tarboro with 14 points.

Washington's girls eased ahead, 10-8, in the first period of their game with Tarboro, then sprinted out to a 22-10 halftime advantage. They increased that to 34-19 by the end of the third period and allowed Tarboro at 20-15 rally in the final quarter.

Sarah Gray and Gloria Sherrod each hit 14 points for Washington, while Tonya Holley added 11. Tarboro was led by Belinda Winnegun with 14 and Vida Johnson with 12.

Play continues tonight in Williamston with the Roanoke girls facing Edenton tonight at 5:30 p.m., followed by the Plymouth and Williamston girls at 7 p.m. and the Roanoke and Roanoke Rapids boys at 8:30.

Smith Sentimental, Far From Last Carmichael Game

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith says he's slightly sentimental about his team's last game at Carmichael Auditorium this week, but he's more concerned about it getting sidetracked.

"It's been a great 20 years," Smith said Monday. "It's been a happy experience."

"But it's dangerous, so much hype about this now. I hope all this won't affect our preparation. We need to concentrate on Wake Forest (Wednesday night) and Clemson (Saturday afternoon). We're still trying to get an NCAA bid."

Built for slightly more than $1.4 million and completed in 1965, Carmichael Auditorium has been the home for UNC's men's and women's basketball programs, wrestling, gymnastics and volleyball. In Smith's 21st year of coaching — his 17th in Carmichael — he finally earned an NCAA championship banner to hang from the steel girders.

Next season, the Tar Heels will play their games in the 21,800-seat Student Activities Center, in the final stages of construction on the school's south campus.

As far back as 1972, UNC officials were talking about a new arena to replace Carmichael, which at the time seated 8,800. Theatre-type seats were torn out in 1975 and replaced with bleacher-type seats to increase the capacity to 10,000.

Although twice the number of Tar Heel fans will be able to see their team, Smith said seating capacity was not what the school had in mind.

"I know former Chancellor Ferebee Taylor even said it was important that it not be the biggest because we have never been concerned with the biggest. That isn't how we think," Smith said. "Some people probably want it to be the biggest. I don't think that has anything to do with it."

While not the biggest in the country, the SAC will be the largest facility in the ACC with 7,000 more seats than Cole Field House at the University of Maryland. The SAC also will be unique in that its $34 million price tag was raised from private sources. No state money was used.

Smith hopes to dedicate the new arena with a game between former Tar Heel players in September. The first collegiate game will be against UCLA next November.

Memphis State Averages Loss

By The Associated Press

Revenge was sweet — but not sweet enough for Memphis State's William Bedford.

"We should have gotten 150 on 'em. We owed 'em something," the 6-foot-10 Bedford said Monday after contributing 19 points to fourth-ranked Memphis State's 99-75 romp over South Carolina which avenged the Tigers' only Metro Conference loss of the season.

The only other member of The Associated Press Top Twenty in action was 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, and the Runnin' Rebels beat Fullerton State 76-69 in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association contest.

Keith Lee led Memphis State, playing at home, to its 20th victory in 22 games with 26 points and 13 rebounds. The 6-10 Lee scored nine points as the Tigers opened a 51-37 halftime lead, then ran off 12 straight points — four field goals and four free throws — in the first 10 minutes of the second half. Andre Turner, the Tigers' 5-10 point guard, also had 19 points, 14 in the first half. Keith James had 20 for South Carolina.

"Lee had a heck of a game," said South Carolina Coach Bill Foster. "When he plays like that, you can't stop him."

"We're on a good roll now," said Lee. "We can go a long way if we keep playing like we know how."

At Fullerton, Calif., Richie Adams

had 20 points — 15 in the second half — and 13 rebounds as UNLV rallied from a 37-28 halftime deficit. The Rebels took the lead for good in the second half on Armon Gilliam's tip-in that made it 42-40 and UNLV extended it to as many as 15 points with Adams and Frank "Spoon" James, who had 19 points, leading the way.

Nevada-Las Vegas is 20-3 over-all and 13-1 in the PCAA. Fullerton was led by Kevin Henderson, who had 19 of his 28 points before the intermission.

Elsewhere: —At Des Moines, Iowa, Xavier McDaniel, the nation's leading rebounder and No. 2 scorer, had 31 points and 11 rebounds while Aubrey Sherrod added 26 points as Wichita State downed Drake 95-77 in a Missouri Valley Conference game. The Shockers are only 14-11 overall but 10-4 in the MVC, one-half game behind league-leading Tulsa.

—Alfred Hughes, the nation's No. 3 scorer with a 27.2 average, was held to six first-half points but had 15 after the intermission in helping Loyola of Chicago defeat St. Louis in a Midwestern City Conference game.

—At South Bend, Ken Barlow scored 14 points as Notre Dame held off an upset bid and edged Loyola of Maryland 61-60. Loyola rallied from a 16-point deficit to come within one point with 42 seconds left and had the ball with seven seconds left, but David Gately missed a jumper from the free throw line. A tip-in attempt by Kevin Carter, who led all scorers with 20 points, bounced off the rim.

"We wanted to win this game, not just stay close," said Loyola Coach Mark Amatucci. "We were concerned with their height. Except for the height disadvantage (Loyola had no one over 6-5) we thought we matched up pretty well with our talent and quickness."

—At Morehead, Ky., Bob McCann scored 36 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Morehead State surprised Ohio Valley Conference leader Tennessee Tech 79-70 for the 700th victory in the school's history.

—At Annapolis, Md., Navy defeated East Carolina 76-66 and became the first service academy to win 20 games in consecutive seasons as Vernon Butler scored 19 points and David Robinson grabbed 17 rebounds.

—At Louisville, the Cardinals had four players in double figures, paced by Billy Thompson's 19 points, and climbed over .500 at 13-12 by trouncing Southern Mississippi 88-71 in a Metro Conference game.

—At Stanford, Calif., UCLA reached the .500 mark at 11-11 by defeating Stanford 72-66 as Nigel Miguel scored 18 points, 14 in the second half. UCLA led 35-22 at halftime and stretched it to 21 points with 7:06 remaining before Stanford ran off a 16-5 spurt to make it close.

—Kenny Gattison scored 30 points and keyed a second half surge that erased a seven-point deficit and propelled Old Dominion over Dayton 91-82.

—Clinton Smith scored 25 points and Clinton Ransey hit four free throws in the last three minutes of overtime to help lift Cleveland State to a 78-69 victory over Western Illinois. The first-place Vikings took a 1½-game lead over Western Illinois in the Association of Mid-Continent Universities.

—Tony McIntosh's 22 points led Fordham to a 74-65 Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference victory over Army in the completion of a game that was suspended Feb. 5 due to a bomb threat. Special precautions were taken with the addition of New York City police and special security guards but there were no incidents. The game was resumed with four minutes left in the first half and Fordham ahead 26-23.

—Jimmy Tharpe scored eight points and Dan Matthews hit two free throws with three seconds remaining in overtime to boost The Citadel to an 82-79 Southern Conference victory over Davidson. It was The Citadel's home finale and gave the Bulldogs a 23-game winning streak on their own court.

—The player with one of college basketball's great names, Anicet Lavodrama, scored a career-high 38 points and pulled down 17 rebounds to lead Houston Baptist to an 86-75 victory over Pan-American. Lavodrama connected on 13 of 17 field goals and 12 of 15 free throws to take most of the suspense — er, drama — out of the contest.

Louganis Not Ready For Retirement, Wins Sullivan

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Greg Louganis, having achieved unequalled levels in men's diving, has abandoned talk of retirement and is eyeing new goals.

"I'm going to continue diving. I'm working with National Spa and Pool Institute to promote diving. We're promoting water diving safety," said Louganis, who became the 55th winner of the Sullivan Award as the nation's top amateur performer on Monday.

Louganis, 25, received the award in his sixth year as a finalist. He placed first in voting by some 2,500 participants who made the choice from a group consisting of 10 Olympic gold medalists.

"I've had a big change in my plans. I really thought I would retire after the Olympics and last year's national championships," he said. "Now, I'm going to take it one year at a time. I'm going to go to next year, the world championships. If I do well, then I'll hang on for another two years (the 1988 Olympics)."

Louganis, the winner of a record 29 national championships who swept last year's Olympic diving competition, also plans to continue studying for an acting career and will soon publish his autobiography.

"I was afraid there was going to be a tremendous down after the Olympic Games," he said. "But they've had me going everywhere. Now when I go to the pool, it's like a luxury. It's kind of my sanctuary. I love it."

"There's no place that I'd rather be at that moment when I'm working out. It's great. I've gotten a different perspective of diving now and I'm really enjoying it more now than ever."

His first competition this year will be in the indoor nationals at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

"I don't expect to be in top form," he said, admitting that he was a little heavier than the 160 pounds he weighed last summer. "I'm having a lot of fun and this is an exciting time for me. I don't have real high expectations (for the nationals)."

Louganis, who plans to continue training at Mission Viejo, Calif., under the watchful eye of Ron O'Brien, brought impressive credentials to this year's balloting. In sweeping the diving competition at Los Angeles last summer, the three-time world champion accumulated 710.91 points and became the first to break the 700 barrier on the platform.

He credited revised rules that allow him to receive trust funds and retain his amateur status for keeping him active.

"This way I don't have to live off my mother and train. I can have my cake and eat it," he said. "He (O'Brien) encouraged me to continue competing. I've achieved the goals I set earlier, but now I've got new ones," he said.

Those goals are to become the first diver to score 800 points on the springboard and to top 700 again on the platform, he said.

Hope Says TV's 'National Peep Show'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — What does Bob Hope, who takes a humorous look at television in his next special, really think about the medium that has supported him for 35 years?

"Television has become a national peep show," he said. "You know, when you walk by an adult film place and they have a peep show for a quarter? That's what's happening today. Every week they have another social problem."

"It seems writers just sit around thinking up disasters and these things. What will grab them next? I don't know how much further they can go. They did dad as a homosexual and then they did son as a homosexual. What's next?"

In an opinion that will surprise no one, what Hope thinks television needs most of all is more comedy. In fact, he would like to see a new network created that is devoted entirely to humor.

"I think people want to laugh," said Hope, 81, who has been making people do just that since 1924. Hope pokes fun at TV in his next special, "Bob Hope Lampoons Television 1985," which will be shown by NBC this Sunday. As always, Hope has an all-star cast on hand for the spoofs.

One target will be ABC's "Hollywood Wives," the three-part miniseries that concludes tonight. "You know people will jump at that because of the title," he said.

"I think they ought to put on the TV evangelists after those kind of shows," he added. "To balance it out, the way they give time to the Democrats to answer President Reagan. After 'Hollywood Wives' I think they ought to put all of the evangelists on the air. Jerry Falwell, Oral Roberts, all of them."

He said he didn't consider such shows amoral, adding, "In fact, some of these subjects might help people. It might bring things out into the open where they can be discussed so that people can get help."

Hope also expressed concern about television's emphasis on ratings. "When I started out we never thought about ratings," he said. "Now, that's all you hear. Everything is done with an eye on the ratings."

He admitted he wasn't able to watch much television because of his heavy schedule of personal appearances. "I won't miss a football game and I won't miss golf," he said. "I do try to catch other shows when I can."

"I'm particularly intrigued right now by Bill Cosby," he said, referring to the new hit comedy series "The Cosby Show" on NBC. "The material is so good. He is so deft."

He said he was also a great admirer of the comic acting talent of John Ritter, currently starring in ABC's "Three's a Crowd."

Hope said what he'd really like to see is a comedy network. He suggested that Ted Turner, the Atlanta television and cable entrepreneur, might be the man to try it.

"I've been yelling about this for 10 years," he said. "It would be a great showcase for new talent and to run such classics as 'The Honey-mooners,' 'Burns and Allen' and all the other great comedy shows from the past."

"I think it would work. I think after all the tragedies, people would like to lighten up. There are 150 million people who know Jack Benny and Sid Caesar and Jackie Gleason and would like to see their shows again."

Hope offered this proof: "Cosby is first in the ratings. I put my comedy flag out front. People pay me big money to go places and talk. I know people want to laugh."

Despite his complaints, Hope said he thinks that, overall, television is pretty good.

"You can imagine what television means to people around the country and to people shut in hospitals," he said. "No matter what your gripes are, you can still get good entertainment."

Illness Shadows Actress' Glory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Rachel Kempson says the recent acclaim she's received for "The Jewel in the Crown" is shadowed because her husband, Sir Michael Redgrave, is battling the final stages of Parkinson's disease.

"Aside from the fact that I want to act — I must act — (this illness) is one of the most terrible things to have happened to one of the greatest actors," said Lady Redgrave, who played the regal Lady Manners in the TV series about colonial India.

Lady Redgrave, 74, who began her acting career long before her husband, said that later this year the couple "might" celebrate celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary together. "It's really quite difficult to discuss."

She said recently that she rarely sees her controversial daughter, Vanessa, adding, "we just don't talk politics."

She was unfazed by daughter Lynn's unconventional film roles as a mistress in "Georgy Girl" and brothel madam in "The Happy Hooker."

"Oh, those were fun!" she said. "I mean, all this business about virginity — if people tried it (sex) out, they wouldn't make as many mistakes."

A Reflector Review

'Vision Quest' Holds True To Standard Set By Author

I was apprehensive about the approach filmmakers would use in translating Terry Davis' fine novel, "Vision Quest" to the more restricting demands of the silver screen. The popularity of growing up or coming of age films in recent years has seen a veritable deluge of noisy, surface-only senseless movies contrived to fit a standard pattern — young man with his buddies on a spree of beer-drinking and sexual-seeking laced with defiance of elders and all authority.

This, fortunately, is not the fate of "Vision Quest," now playing at Plitt Theaters. Darryl Ponicsan's screenplay and Becker's direction of the film are admirably faithful to Davis' often comic but always intelligent story of a boy growing into young manhood in Spokane, Wash.

Matthew Modine is an excellent choice for the title role of 18-year old Loudon Swain, a high school wrestler who, against advice from his coach and friends, chooses to go on a crash diet-training regime to lose 10 pounds in order to take on a formidable opponent, a state champion in a lower weight competition class.

This seemingly insane choice is the first clue to the complex, at times incongruous, personality of teen-ager Loudon Swain, one of the most appealing characters to appear in literature in recent years, and just as real on screen as he is in the printed word.

This is not to imply that the emphasis on wrestling gets relegated to the sideline in the film. Wrestling remains the focus on which all else revolves. The result is a solidly focused insight into wrestling as a sport while at the same time providing a framework for other facets of Loudon's day by day life. The duality of Loudon's obsession for the sport, which reveals the stubborn determination of the character, coupled with the normal frustrations of being 18, makes this a consistently satisfying film.

Louden Swain is caring, sensitive, intelligent. Because he is sensitive, he is prone to exciting possibilities about the future, at the same time emotionally subject to typical teen-age indecisiveness. At various times he expresses desires to be a writer, a biologist, a doctor in outer space. His best buddy, Kuch, is a perfect foil for Swain — and is himself an exceptionally well-defined, interesting fictional character, a youth with a brutal drunken father, who compensates for the cruelty of his home life by pretending to be half-Indian as a device to get attention, and masks his basic tenderness under studied nonchalance.

Linda Forrentino, as the girl in the story, Carla, is indisputably one of the most attractive young actresses to grace the screen in some years — a brunette beauty who somewhat resembles a cross between Gail Russell and Dolores Del Rio in their young years. And she can act. Her portrayal of a 21-year old woman tough enough to take care of herself, while still remaining essentially innocent and vulnerable, is a joy to watch. Given shelter by Loudon and his father while temporarily out of luck because of an unwise investment in a lemon of a second-hand car while in Spokane on her way from New York to San Francisco, she little by little becomes drawn to the sterling qualities of Loudon. Eventually, she is the instrument to ending Loudon's frustrated status as an 18-year old male virgin — an act given a low-key treatment, typical of the intelligence that guides all aspects of the film.

Supporting actors — Loudon's

father, his grandfather, his English teacher, his coach — all lend noteworthy support.

The appropriate-for-the-times music score is composed and performed by Tangerine Dream, with Madonna singing her latest hit, "Crazy For You." The song brings to mind what I found to be the only major discordant note in the movie, the unnecessary intrusion of the song in the gentle forest love scene — the song worked splendidly in a disco, but not in the woods.

"Vision Quest" is a wrestler's dream movie — and a movie that will please any movie fan who appreciates honest, intelligent filmmaking, whatever the genre.

JERRY RAYNOR
(Editor's Note: The author of "Vision Quest," Terry Davis, a native of Spokane, Wash., was on the faculty of the English department at East Carolina University for four years, from 1976 to 1980.)

Davis had substantially written most of the book, published in 1979 by The Viking Press, New York, before coming to Greenville. While in Greenville, Davis was active in the Greenville Writers Club, where he periodically took chapters of the then unpublished book to be read and critiqued.

Moviegoers who knew Davis will be able to spot him in a couple of audience sequences in the film).

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 20, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day and until evening brings you an opportunity to get into your most cherished desires and to arrange to put them into motion tomorrow.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan some new way of handling your affairs so that you can gain your aims more quickly and easily.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Think over how best you can gain your personal aims and then get busy with new arrangements made.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make a special effort to get career work done since the aspects are very good and you make big headway.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Find some newer ways of gaining your aims and the results are better, but tonight be very conventional.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Think about promises you have made and how best to carry through with them so that all are satisfied.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you go into every angle of agreements with partners you can come to a fine understanding today. Be willing to compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your environment as you would like it to be so that you can be more efficient and comfortable in it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan amusements during spare hours that can relieve tensions and uplift your spirits. Your mate may be in a bad mood this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get your home in better condition in the morning and tonight remain poised if an argument starts there.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can handle business affairs very well during the daytime, so get busy early and accomplish a great deal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get financial affairs nicely solved during the day but do not be extravagant in the evening. Get good ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) After a day concentrating on personal aims, the evening is not good for being social.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will early comprehend how to use idealistic concepts so that they can become practical realities and should have a fine education that will be very helpful in improving this ability. Good ethical and spiritual studies should be given early in life, and good manners taught.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Opening lead: Four of ♦.

Sponsorship of bridge is quite common in Europe. The latest example is the financial assistance offered by a commercial firm to one of Britain's finest young pairs, John Pottage and Mark Smith, to enable them to compete in British and European events and so gain international experience without having to worry about the expense.

In a recent British tournament, Pottage showed why he is regarded as a bright prospect. He and his partner reached four spades in a competitive auction and West led his fourth-best diamond. Declarer ruffed and many players took advantage of the fact that they were in hand to finesse the eight of hearts. East won the king and returned another diamond and, because of the 4-1 trump split, declarer could not get back to hand to draw trumps and, in most cases, went down three tricks.

Pottage found a way to protect against a bad trump break. Since East was likely to be short in hearts, declarer gave up on the immediate heart finesse in favor of cashing the ace-king of trumps. Had the suit split 3-2, he would have come back to hand with a diamond ruff, drawn the last trump and now taken a heart finesse. He would still have a trump to ruff another diamond as the entry for a second heart finesse.

When trumps split 4-1, however, declarer led a low heart from dummy! Had East ducked, declarer would later have played to drop the remaining heart honor. As it was, East rose with the king and returned a diamond. Declarer ruffed, drew the last trump and ran the ten of hearts to secure his contract.

J.P. Stevens Cuts Back

By The Associated Press

J.P. Stevens & Co. officials have announced the closing of the company's Robinson yarn plant in Dallas, N.C., and the sale of a commercial printing subsidiary in Atlanta.

The closing will affect 120 people at the Gaston County plant and should be completed by March, according to a company statement released Monday.

"The closing is due to the impact that imported textiles is having on our markets," said Ron Copsey, director of public relations. The plant produces yarn that is used in various products, including apparel.

Employees affected by the closing will be the first considered for openings at nearby Stevens plants in Gastonia, Lincolnton and Stanley, according to the company.

All employees except those who transfer to other Stevens plants will be eligible for severance pay and those who qualify will receive profit-sharing payouts and pension benefits.

Recently, Stevens sold a commercial printing operation, Foote & Davies Inc. of Atlanta, to a management group headed by Frank E. Kutcher Jr., president of the printing company, and to Purcapital Inc. and some of its subsidiaries.

The purchase price was not released, but Stevens will use cash proceeds from the sale to reduce the company's outstanding debt, according to a company news release.

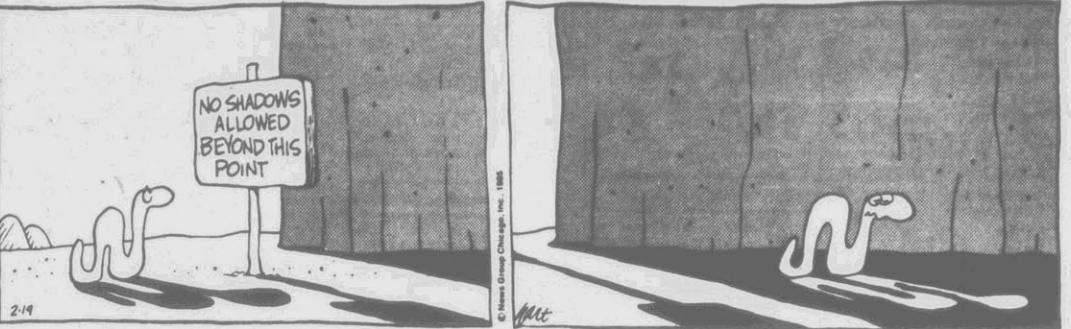

The announcements follow a move last week to close the company's Piedmont, S.C., plant by the end of February, putting about 165 people out of work. In the previous two months, an additional 165 people were laid off at the plant, with about one-fourth of those finding jobs at other Stevens plants.

Also, company officials in January announced that an undisclosed number of employees would be laid off at the company's Clemson and Seneca plants.

Woman Dies In House Fire

ASHEVILLE (AP) - An 80-year-old woman died Monday when fire started by a small heater swept through her house at the base of Beaucatcher Mountain, and a policeman and a friend who tried to save her were treated for smoke inhalation.

Elmira Thomas was sitting in her living room talking to a friend when the fire broke out about 2 p.m., Capt.

Mike Owens said.

The friend, John Corner, 56, leaped to safety through a window. He said the living room was heated by a kerosene heater and an electric space heater placed close to a couch, according to Fire Investigator Harley Shuford.

Fire officials said one of the heaters caused the fire.

Ahead of His Time

The astronomer Nicolas Copernicus was born on this day in 1473. Copernicus suggested that the sun was the center of the solar system. Galileo was later excommunicated for agreeing with him. In 290 B.C., a Greek astronomer, Aristarchus of Samos, proposed the same idea. But he was ridiculed by the philosopher Archimedes. An earlier Greek, Anaxagoras, suggested the sun was a glowing rock, 100 miles across. For that "outrageous" statement, he was exiled from Athens.

Talks On Mideast Resume

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — U.S. and Soviet delegates met for five hours today to discuss their differences in the Middle East, resuming a superpower dialogue on the region after a seven-year pause. But the Reagan administration cautioned against expecting any breakthroughs.

Chief U.S. delegate Richard S. Murphy indicated to reporters that another session would be held on Wednesday, but he declined to give any substantive comment about the meeting. "We agreed before that a statement would come out of Washington and Moscow," he said.

Murphy, an assistant secretary of state, emerged from the Soviet Embassy, a former mansion surrounded by an iron-bar fence, at about 2:30 p.m. The Soviet hosts did not come outside. The talks were expected to move to the U.S. Embassy on Wednesday.

The Soviet negotiating team is headed by Vladimir P. Polyakov, a ranking official in the Foreign Ministry. Neither he nor other Soviet officials met the arriving Americans at the entrance.

Both sides have imposed a virtual news blackout in Vienna on the planned two-day talks, saying all comment would come out of Moscow and Washington. The discussions were to move to the U.S. Embassy on Wednesday.

The official Soviet news agency Tass announced the meeting without comment today in a four-line statement.

U.S.-Soviet discussions on the Middle East were broken off in 1977, and a spokesman in Washington said the new talks would be "merely an exchange of views." Neither side has used the term "negotiations" to describe the talks.

The Reagan administration has cautioned against expecting breakthroughs, suggesting that the Soviets would not likely change key Middle East positions on which they differ with Washington.

The consultations coincide with a time of flux in the Middle East.

Israeli troops in Lebanon withdrew last week to a new line farther south. Israeli Prime Minister Simon Peres, now in Italy, is scheduled to go on to Romania, the only Soviet-bloc country that has diplomatic relations with Israel. A week ago King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, agreed on a joint negotiating position for possible peace talks with Israel.

No More 'Uncle Sucker'

WASHINGTON (AP) — American officials say they won't play "Uncle Sucker" when Japan opens its telecommunications market to foreigners for the first time April 1.

Since the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a year ago, Japanese manufacturers have flooded the U.S. market with equipment ranging from telephones to sophisticated switching gear. Now, the Federal Communications Commission wants U.S. manufacturers to have the same access to Japanese consumers.

The Japanese market for communications products is the second largest in the world, behind the United States. And to make sure U.S. manufacturers are treated fairly in that new marketplace, the FCC is studying retaliatory options in the event Japan does not give equal treatment to American and Japanese companies.

In ordering a study of those options, FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said he wanted to see how the regulatory program could be used "to assure reciprocal openness" and "a free and open marketplace."

"They're dealing with Uncle Sam, not with Uncle Sucker," Fowler said a month ago when he confirmed the still uncompleted study was being conducted.

Fowler has discussed the study with Commerce Under Secretary Lionel H. Olmer, who is leaving soon for talks with the Japanese.

One option being studied by the FCC is slowing the processing of applications by Japanese manufacturers or making the FCC's acceptance procedures "a mirroring device" for Japanese certification rules.

Ex-Investigator Says Nazis Allowed To Live In U.S.

ROCKLAND, Mass. (AP) — Formerly classified federal documents provide the "smoking gun" to prove that U.S. officials allowed Nazi collaborators to live in this country, says a former Department of Justice investigator.

A secret unit of the State Department recruited leaders of a group of Nazi collaborators from Byelorussia, or White Russia, which Nazis occupied from 1941 to 1945, according to lawyer John Loftus, author of "The Belarus Secret," written in 1981 after he left the Office of Special Investigations.

The collaborators were brought to the United States after World War II so U.S. authorities could learn about the Soviet Union, and at least 300 are still living in this country, Loftus said Monday.

"Now, we have this smoking gun — a written proposal by a Nazi president to unite his collaborators with U.S. intelligence," Loftus said following a news conference at his Rockland home.

Loftus wrote about the documents, which he saw while he worked for OSI, in his book, but agreed not to quote from them directly or mention his source. The documents were subsequently declassified.

A CBS television movie, "Kojak: The Belarus File," based on Loftus' book, aired Saturday night.

Loftus said he sent the 32-page packet of documents, plus his 19-page summary, to Congress and the U.S. General Accounting Office. Two years ago, the House Judiciary Committee ordered the GAO to study the Nazi-U.S. intelligence connection following another report Loftus did for CBS.

The GAO is expected to report its findings to Congress in about 90 days.

Justice Department spokesman Thomas Stewart in Washington said Sunday the agency would not comment until it examined Loftus' documents, which are censored copies of microfilm of carbon copies.

—Document A, drawn up by the U.S. Army in 1948, appeared to list about 30 of the former leaders of the Nazi collaborators, including several wanted war criminals, living in U.S. refugee camps and the British zone of Germany without being prosecuted. A few months before the document was published, Congress denounced some of these people by name and insisted they never be allowed into the United States.

—Document B, dated 1952, was drawn up by several of the Byelorussian leaders as a "peace treaty" between the Nazi collaborators and the U.S. government.

Signed by R. Ostrowsky, who had been president of the Nazi puppet state in Byelorussia, it pledges the cooperation of the Russians in return for a promise not to prosecute them for war crimes, noting that "if your intelligence agencies come to the conclusion that they would like to work in conjunction with our modest forces, a condition of such collaboration would be complete frankness and trust between us."

—The third document is a State Department roster for a 1954 convention held in South River, N.J., for 100 former Byelorussian Nazi collaborators.

He said the documents identified one of the alleged collaborators as Sviatosau Kous, a priest at the Church of St. Euthrosynea of Polzk in South River. He said Kous was a Nazi administrator.

Kous, reached at his home Monday, denied the claim and said, "This guy Loftus is a liar. Because we are anti-Communist, the Justice Department thinks we were Nazis."

Kous said that he had held a job he likened to "county clerk" for about six months when the Nazis occupied the Byelorussian town of Sasule in 1943.

South Africa Arrests Six

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six prominent anti-apartheid campaigners were arrested today on high treason warrants and security police raided activists' offices in major cities, police confirmed.

Col. Vic Haynes of police headquarters in Pretoria said the six were arrested in the same investigation that led to treason charges being brought last year against seven other anti-apartheid activists.

Police said the six arrested in Johannesburg and Durban today were Albertina Sisulu, wife of jailed African National Congress leader Walter Sisulu; Sam Kikine of the South African Allied Workers Union; Isaac Ngcobo, whose affiliation was not immediately known; Dr. Ishmael Mohammed of the Transvaal Indian Congress; and Frank Chikane and Cassim Saloojee, both senior officials of the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition.

Security police raided offices of the United Democratic Front, the nation's largest anti-apartheid organization, in Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban, seizing some documents and banners at each office, United Democratic Front officials said.

Police picked up those charged at their homes and offices at dawn and in the early morning.

Haynes said the six would appear in court in Durban on Thursday. The case of the other seven arrested last year has been postponed until March 29.

Chinese New Year

PEKING (AP) — One billion Chinese stocked up on food and firecrackers to welcome the Year of the Ox, and the Communist government cautioned them to avoid "extravagant waste" in festivities ringing in the lunar New Year.

Work in China virtually comes to a halt during the three-day holiday, which officially starts Wednesday — the first day of the Chinese new year. Most factories and offices close, and trains and buses overflow with travelers who want to spend the holiday, known as Spring Festival, with their families.

In preparation for the occasion, surging crowds at Peking markets snapped up fish, pork and vegetables for sumptuous New Year's Eve dinners that traditionally include bite-sized dumplings in the capital, spring rolls in Shanghai and lavish fish dishes in the south.

Peking station alone is expected to handle nearly 6 million travelers, and at least 600 million people likely will use public transportation for visits and trips.
