Flu-Like Illnesses Cutting Into Work, School

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Many people in eastern North Carolina have missed several days of work or school this month due to a regional outbreak of influenza. Although no figures are available as to the number of people in Pitt County stricken by the flu, local doctors and school teachers say they know many local residents have been affected.

"In the last three weeks, we have seen a significant number of cases of influenza," said Dr. Jack Allison, director of the emergency department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. "We have had a few less cases in the past week than in the previous two weeks, but we don't know if that means the cases are actually decreasing.

"We are averaging 30 patients a day more in the emergency department than for the previous three months," he said. "A significant number of those patients are flu victims."

Allison said flu victims have been "hit hard" and have taken up to a week to recuperate. "People have been really sick," he said. "They have had high fevers and have been coughing and aching all over. Some patients have had diarrhea, and some have had difficulty breathing. This strain of flu seems to be very tough. It really knocks people for a loop and many people have been sick for the better part of a week."

Students at East Carolina University also have been stricken by the flu. "The latest report (from North Carolina universities for the week of Feb. 9 through Feb. 15) on the incidence of the flu had 52 cases of flu-like illness seen at East Carolina University," said Dr. Robert Ehinger, director of the Pitt County Health Department. The previous week's report listed ECU as having 31 cases of the flu.

"The national report that goes out each Monday indicates that it is regional in nature," Ehinger continued, "and from looking at the deaths for pneumonia and flu-like illnesses, it would indicate that it is regional."

A spokesperson for the Pitt County school system said attendance has dropped from 96 percent to 92 percent during the past 20 days and the school officials have attributed the decline to influenza. The drop in attendance has been noticed mostly in the lower grades; the county high schools have maintained their attendance percentage.

No attendance figures were available from the Greenville city schools.

Zoning Change Proposal Draws 'No' From Board

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

In a move city Planning Director Bobby Roberson called "not unusual," members of Greenville's Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday unanimously declined to support a rezoning request that would have made high density residential construction possible in an area adjoining an established neighborhood.

The commissions' decision not to recommend the rezoning request to City Council, Roberson explained, was not out of the ordinary in light of the history of the request. Over a period of three years, he said, the acreage in question has "been chipped away at and the commission felt that eventually the approximate 200-foot area that was left would eventually be converted to high density residential."

According to the city planning department, the acreage concerned in the request is part of a larger parcel known as Fairlane Farms that was once zoned R-15S (low density single-family residential). However, since 1979, the parcel has by portions been rezoned to R-6 to allow construction of duplex and multifamily dwellings. The latest rezoning request brought by land owner Harvey D. Bradshaw to rezone eight acres to R-6 would have left only an approximate 200-foot

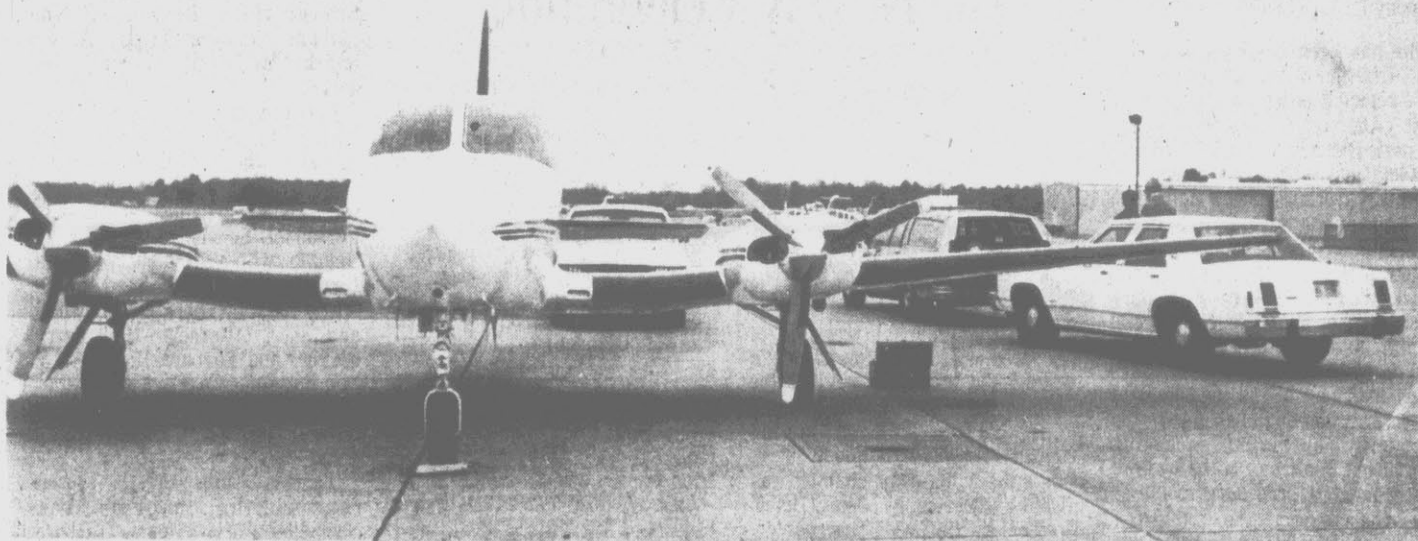

R-15S buffer between the proposed multifamily development and single-family homes on Fairlane Road and St. Andrews Drive which back up to the property involved in last night's rezoning request.

In asking for approval, Bradshaw told the commission the proposal to construct a multifamily structure off Hooker Road would not be "low rent" as some residents of the area feared, but would be a "quality project." He also noted a study done by city engineers indicating that construction of a multifamily structure on the property would not pose traffic problems and that similar projects done in the area had no adverse effect on tax values of adjacent properties.

Bradshaw's request was met with opposition from neighborhood residents, who initially asked that the request be continued until the commission's March meeting because of the unusual time of last night's meeting. The meeting was held at 6 p.m. to allow commissioners and planning staff to attend an annual banquet.

St. Andrews Drive resident W.R. Brewer told the board that holding the meeting at 6 p.m. instead of the regular time of 7:30 p.m. was a "hardship on 70 to 80 percent of

PLANE RECOVERED IN GREENVILLE — Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation look over a twin-engine Cessna 414A, valued at $300,000; that authorities say was stolen in Key Largo, Fla., on Monday and flown to Greenville. Four men were arrested on charges of possession of stolen property after they were found with the plane at the Pitt-Greenville Airport Tuesday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Four Arrested With Stolen Plane

Greenville police and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation Tuesday arrested four men on charges of possession of stolen property after they were found at the Pitt-Greenville Airport with an airplane stolen in Florida.

Detective C.E. Weatherington said Michael Lawrence Ducharme, 23, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Forrest George Reese, 38, of Delray Beach, Fla., Steven Dale Brewer, 36, of Greensboro, and Harley Brent Jacobsen, 37, of Houston were taken into custody between 6:30 a.m. and 6:45 a.m. as they prepared to leave the airport in the plane.

Jacobsen, Weatherington said, was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon after officers found a .380 caliber pistol in his possession.

Bond for Jacobsen was set at $500,000, while bond for the other three men was set at $200,000 each.

Weatherington said the plane involved, a twin-engine Cessna 414A valued at $300,000, landed at the local airport about noon Monday. Owned by Sunset Construction Co. of Pittsfield, N.H., the plane was stolen from the Oak Ridge Club landing strip at Key Largo, Fla., before dawn Monday.

White House Decries Farm 'Blackmail'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House spokesman today denounced a threat by a number of farm-state senators to hold up confirmation of Edwin Meese III as attorney general in what Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole called an attempt at "blackmail" to get an emergency farm credit bill.

"To hold the Meese nomination hostage for farm legislation is just not the way to do business," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. "We want the Meese nomination to come forward and be voted on, so the new attorney general can take office."

Declaring the administration has the votes to confirm Meese, Speakes said, "The president wishes the Senate to act promptly on the Meese nomination on its merits ... and the president thinks the Senate should get down to the business of voting on Ed Meese and do so promptly."

"We're adamant" on the issue, the spokesman said, adding that the White House would be willing for farm issues "to come up in the Senate and stand on their own two feet."

Speakes said Reagan considers the farm debt package already announced by the administration adequate to deal with the crisis in farm credit.

Dole, meanwhile, charged that senators threatening to hold up Meese's confirmation are engaging in "blackmail" to get an emergency farm credit bill.

Dole said "there is a lot of posturing going on" on the farm credit bill that is holding up a multibillion-dollar interstate highway bill as well as the Meese nomination.

"I wish they would let us go ahead and proceed," Dole told reporters before the Senate went into session today.

The threatened delay by Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., appears to be the only hurdle to approval of White House counselor Meese after a 13-month confirmation process. Others siding with Boren include Sens. J. James Exon, D-Neb., David Pryor, D-Ark., Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.

Zaccaro Draws Non-Jail Sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — John Zaccaro, whose finances haunted his wife's vice presidential campaign, was sentenced today to perform 150 hours of community service for his role in a scheme to fraudulently obtain a loan.

Acting State Supreme Court Justice George Roberts told the millionaire husband of former Rep. Geraldine Ferraro before pronouncing sentence, "It is not my intention to impose a jail term."

No jail time was part of the bargain for Zaccaro's plea of guilty Jan. 7 to one count of scheming to defraud.

Ms. Ferraro, who was Walter Mondale's running mate last year on the Democratic ticket, was not in court as Zaccaro was sentenced.

Negotiations Completed For Start Of Helicopter Ambulance Service

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Trustees were told Tuesday night that negotiations are complete with Omni Flight Services and that a name "EastCare Flight" has been chosen for the helicopter ambulance service which will begin here about the second week in April.

A flight nurse training program is under way, with 10 nurses participating. Approval was given for the flight nurses to be able to perform certain advanced procedure on patients en route with the direction via radio of a physician or if he or she has demonstrated skill achievement in the particular area. Approval was also given for the provision of a flight center adjacent to the helicopter pad for the crewmembers.

A request for bids has gone out to 30 vendors of computer equipment. Bids are expected to be opened Feb. 25. It will be approximately two years before the system being purchased is totally "on line," hospital administrators say.

The board was told that utilization of the emergency department has unexpectedly increased since the new emergency department has been opened. Nursing administrator Marilyn Rhodes said the increase has caused some problems with triaging patients promptly and that adjustments are being made to take care of the increased activity.

It was reported that a consultant to talk about employee benefits will be here next month.

New officers of the board will be chosen next month during the board's annual meeting.

Facilities Services Vice President Ralph Hall was congratulated for his recent presentation at a public meeting supporting the retainment of the medical arts district. The board went on record as endorsing the actions of the Greenville City Council concerning the zoning action.

A written report by Lewis Lint, director of the Department of Pastoral Care, on pastoral care programs of the hospital was presented to the board by pastoral committee chairman Noel Lee. The establishment of a Clinical Pastoral Education Program is being considered, the report indicated.

The board accepted $200,000 from the Duke Endowment for use in completion of the expansion and modernization of the surgery, radiology and emergency departments of the hospital. Duke Endowment also gave $200,000 to PCMH last year for the same purpose.

It was announced that Joseph Parker of Ahoskie has been reappointed to the board and William Flowers of Plymouth and Wayne Peterson of Tarboro have been appointed.

Dr. Lee West and Carol Smith presented information about a 78-page quality assurance plan which will be part of the hospital's material for the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals evaluation to be carried out soon. They said the report is available to anyone who wishes to read it.

Get Rid Of Creosote

Woodburning stoves are being used by many people to heat their homes and home fires that result from improper care of the stoves are becoming more prevalent. So here are some suggestions on how to prevent such fires.

A common cause is creosote buildup inside the chimney. Creosote is a shiny, black substance that's a by-product of wood combustion. It's highly flammable and if it gets thicker than half an inch, it's likely to ignite and cause a chimney fire.

To prevent creosote buildup, burn dry wood only. Also, about once every week or 10 days burn a load of wood in the stove with the drafts open. This will help burn away creosote.

About twice during the heating season, go up on the roof to check out the chimney. Using a flashlight, peer down into the chimney to see if there's a creosote buildup. If you suspect there is a buildup, clean the inside of the chimney. Use a short piece of chain to break the stuff off. Or tie a rope to a steel brush with weight on it and slide that up and down the chimney. If there's more buildup than you know how to get rid of, call in a chimney expert.

Creosote buildup can also be a hazard with woodburning furnaces. But it doesn't usually present much of a problem with fireplaces. Fireplaces are usually so hot that there's not much chance for creosote to accumulate in the chimney.

Removing Soot and Stains From Fireplace Facings

First, you'll need to scrub the fireplace facing with strong soap and water. You'll probably need to use a stiff brush for brick or rough textured areas. After scrubbing, rinse the facing thoroughly with clear water. If stains and soot still persist, you may need to use a mild acid bleach, such as vinegar or acetic acid. Again, apply the bleach with a stiff brush. And be sure to rinse the facing with water after scrubbing.

If stains are really stubborn, you may need to scrub them with a hydrochloric acid and water solution. To prepare it, mix one part hydrochloric acid to 10 parts of water. After scrubbing, rinse immediately with water.

There are a couple of cautions: Whenever you use the hydrochloric acid and water solution — use rubber gloves to protect your hands. And never, never use the acid solution on stonework.

You might also want to check the hydrochloric acid solution out on a small, inconspicuous place before you scrub the whole fireplace facing. It is possible that the acid solution could discolor some types of brick.

Farm Families Under Stress Program Set

Jan Lloyd will be in Pitt County Friday to discuss with farm families practical suggestions for dealing with the physical and emotional effects of stress and for reducing stress through improved family financial practices.

She will be speaking at 10 a.m. in room 201, Pitt County Office Building. Mrs. Lloyd is an Agricultural Extension Service family resource management specialist.

According to Mrs. Lloyd, the number of farms in North Carolina is down by 13,000 in five years, more than any other state. Economic stress felt by farm families include heavy debt load, low prices for products, and high costs for land, equipment and labor. Further stress includes work overload that many farmers use to cope. This type of stress moves out into the community through businesses, banks, local government, clergy and anyone who deals with farm families.

Mrs. Lloyd joined the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service in 1984. Her responsibilities include developing new consumer education programs and materials, organizing urban money management centers and helping county agents provide money management information for rural families.

Before moving to N.C., she was associate and acting director of the Michigan Consumer Education Center in Ypsilanti. She has also worked as a newspaper reporter in Illinois, a curriculum designer in Nebraska, a free lance editor and writer while living in Virginia, Connecticut and Missouri, a college instructor at William Woods College in Missouri and Eastern Michigan University and a vocational home economics teacher in Virginia.

Persons interested in attending the Friday session are asked to call 752-2934, extension 370, to pre-register.

Do you have a citizen concern? If so, just call the Citizen Concern Office at 752-4137, ext. 224.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Man Reads Abby's Advice On Writing

DEAR ABBY: Your booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," has been a mainstay of my reference shelf for many years. Just how long, I cannot recall, but I've used it for 10 years at the bank where I am employed, and nearly twice as long when I was in the Navy. Add to that my years as bulletin editor and secretary of my Lions Club, and a regular correspondent to six brothers and sisters.

I love to receive letters, and as you say, "The way to get a letter is to write one."

It's amazing the way I keep going back to your booklet for ideas on how to write good letters for all occasions. Your suggestions for letters of condolence have been coming into use more and more lately, but I suppose that's to be expected as one grows older.

Over the years I've been highly complimented on my letters, and I want to thank you, Abby. You have my permission to use my name.

EDWIN R. BAKER,
STUART, FLA.

DEAR MR. BAKER: Thanks for a genuine upper. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you said that nobody should open his or her door to a stranger. Well, recently my car broke down 30 miles from home on a dark highway on a cold winter night.

I am very thankful that a woman in a nearby farmhouse opened her door to me. She was all alone, small and appeared to be in her late 20s or early 30s. (I'm a 6-foot-tall man, weighing 200 pounds.)

This nice lady let me call a towing service who sent someone out to rescue me. It would be very sad indeed if all people took your advice and allowed fear to govern their actions.

Abby, please don't encourage people to abandon their trust in their fellowman, most of whom are decent, law-abiding citizens.

SINCERE IN IOWA

DEAR SINCERE: Even though most people are decent, law-abiding citizens, to assume that everyone is could be devastating. You need only to read this newspaper thoroughly to realize that one cannot be too careful these days.

I submit the following from a reader:

"Recently, at a neighborhood watch meeting, a police officer told us about a team of girls working in a nice residential area in Berkeley. A young woman, apparently in distress, would ring the doorbell and implore urgently, 'Please, please may I use your bathroom?'

"It would seem cruel to turn her away under the circumstances, so of course, she would be let in. Her mission, however, was not to use the bathroom; it was to case the house to see if there was anything of value around. She then pretended to use the bathroom, after which she unlocked the bathroom window. Late that night, she and her partner returned to rob the place.—Careful in California"

DEAR ABBY: I need to know if something is true or not. I had a high school teacher who told the class that she used to write your columns for you when you went on vacations. Half the kids believed it, and the other half didn't. I'm in the half that didn't believe it. Who's right?

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: You're in the winning half. When I go on vacations, I write my columns in advance.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Evolution

And so exits the case of retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland versus CBS.

Westmoreland sued CBS after a documentary which accused him of surpressing information about enemy troop strength during the Vietnam war. The trial has been under way in New York for 4 months. With suddenness the word leaked out during the weekend that Westmoreland had settled with CBS and the trial would be ended Monday.

That happened, with the issuance of a joint statement and the agreement there would be no cost to either party. Thus CBS stands behind its documentary and Westmoreland presumably stands behind his own beliefs as to what occurred. Both agreed that the issue will be decided in the court of public opinion. That is proper, but one has to ask, was not that the way it was supposed to be in the beginning?

CBS raised a historical question in its documentary and its purpose should primarily have been to open public debate on the issue. Instead it went to court with all the costs and time involved in that. The end result was the accomplishment of nothing.

In pursuing his career Westmoreland assumed a major role in world events. In choosing to do so he also accepted becoming a part of history. That carries with it considerable importance and personal satisfaction, but it also involves the acceptance of criticism for one's actions. Public officials must recognize and accept this. It is a part of how history evolves and it should not be short circuited by torturous and exhausting trips to the courthouse.

Open House

A ribbon-cutting ceremony highlighted an open house for Pitt County Memorial Hospital's open heart surgery facilities Sunday.

A large number of people toured the recently expanded facilities, including some former heart bypass patients and their families.

The open heart surgery unit has been in operation since July 1984. It is steadily expanding, however, and is offering a medical service in eastern North Carolina that has never been available here in the past.

The prospects of heart surgery is awesome for most of us. The prospects seem easier, however, for patients and families with the knowledge that it can be done closer to home.

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital has developed a competent team for open heart surgery. Now expanded and improved facilities provide an even better medical service to the eastern area.

'Common Sense' Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you thought Washington's birthday was the only national observance this week, check again and pencil this one on your calendar: National Engineers' Week.

It's one of dozens of special weeks, days and months set aside each year by Congress and the president — and largely ignored by the public.

There are days and weeks honoring black history, grandparents, eye donors and ice cream. But when it came to mules, muffins and tap dancing, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., decided enough was enough.

McCurdy is the sponsor of a bill to set up an 11-member, presidentially appointed advisory commission that would sift through each year's batch of offerings and recommend which causes should warrant national attention.

Over 300 commemorative bills were introduced in the last session of Congress and this session promises to be just as active, McCurdy said.

"I don't want to diminish the significance of each of these commemorative requests. In fact, there are some like National Child Abuse Prevention Month which have extremely good intentions," McCurdy said.

But, he added, a "common sense approach" seems needed.

Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., a sponsor of the measure that designated Feb. 17-23, 1985, as "National Engineers' Week," told colleagues that "every form of transportation except animals and our own legs is a product of engineering."

No member of Congress has yet come proposing a day honoring human legs, but a measure saluting that familiar four-legged beast of burden — the mule — is gaining considerable attention.

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., has introduced a bill to designate the week of Oct. 26, 1985, as "National Mule Appreciation Week." He's been actively seeking co-sponsors.

"We've received over a dozen phone calls on mule appreciation week. He (Cooper) has really going after that thing," said Steve Pat-

"Hear ye, hear ye. In the case of the American taxpayers vs. Ed Meese's lawyers, the court is now in session."

"Proceed."

"Your honor, as counsel for the American taxpayers I hold in my hand a bill for legal services for $721,000. We believe this is too high a price to pay to make sure the next attorney general of the United States is not a crook."

"Objection."

"Sustained. Counsel will stick to the facts."

"The facts, your honor, are that Mr. Meese's attorneys charged my clients $250 an hour to defend him against charges of conflict of interest in helping get government jobs for individuals who loaned him money. We feel these fees are totally out of line with President Reagan's vow to cut spending in the government."

"Objection, your honor. President Reagan's political promises have nothing to do with my client's legal fees."

"Sustained. Counsel will refrain from mentioning Mr. Reagan unless it has something to do with the case."

—Art Buchwald—

Paying The Legal Cost

"There isn't a lawyer in America worth $250 an hour, your honor..."

"Objection, your honor. Counsel has no right to decide what lawyers are worth."

"Let's see where he's going with his argument."

"The Justice Department policy — a policy I hope Mr. Meese will continue — has a ceiling of $75 an hour on what a private lawyer can charge in a government case. Why doesn't it apply to this case?"

"Your honor, the Ethics in Government Act, under which Mr. Meese was investigated, placed no restrictions on hourly rates. If a self-respecting lawyer in Washington charged less than $250 an hour he would become the laughingstock of the capital."

"It is so noted. Counsel for the taxpayers will continue."

"Thank you, sir. American taxpayers resent the fact that Mr. Meese's attorneys are socking it to them. I wonder if learned counsel would submit a $721,000 bill if they knew Mr. Meese was paying it out of his own pocket."

"Objection. That is a theoretical question."

"Sustained."

"Your honor, counsel for Mr. Meese has charged my clients $250 an hour for conversations with the press over a period of five and one-half months. Why should the taxpayers pay for attorneys meetings with reporters?"

"I can answer that, your honor. Mr. Meese was being tried in the press as well as investigated by the special prosecutor. It was necessary to insure accurate reporting of allegations against him, or else Meese would take over the Justice Department under a dark cloud. It's in the taxpayers' interest to have a U.S. attorney general who is squeaky clean."

"Your honor, just because Mr. Meese was cleared of criminal charges against him doesn't necessarily make him qualified for attorney general. What about his bad judgment?"

"Objection. Mr. Meese's bad judgment has nothing to do with our legal bill."

"Your honor, I say it does. If Mr. Meese didn't show such extraordinary bad judgment in the first place, the taxpayer would not be stuck for $721,000."

Does Federal Aid Corrupt?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David Stockman and Education Secretary William J. Bennett are offering an unusually candid view of an attitude that drives the Reagan administration in the battle over budget priorities — namely, that federal aid corrupts its recipients.

Both officials made headlines with their comments. There was talk of Stockman taking another trip to the president's woodland for a reprimand after he lashed out at veterans, farmers and educators.

Bennett wasn't far behind with caustic words for middle-class recipients of federal education aid.

Their comments brought howls of protest, and also some words of sympathy from veterans of losing battles against the more entrenched sacred cows that graze off the federal budget.

But beyond the immediate headlines was the question of whether Stockman and Bennett were giving voice to the belief that people who get government checks are somehow corrupted in the process.

If that is the prevailing belief in the administration, the budget debate can be seen in the context not merely of a drive to reduce record deficits, but as a crusade to eliminate the social role government has assumed since the New Deal.

President Reagan has stated often enough his conviction that government assistance creates dependency, not just on the part of the recipients, but among the givers as well.

That sort of dependency was a recurring concern in his State of the Union address.

"This government will meet its responsibilities to help those in need," he said. "But policies that increase dependency, break up families and destroy self-respect are not progressive."

A moment later, he said, "Let us resolve that we will stop spreading dependency and start spreading opportunity, that we will stop spreading bondage and start spreading freedom."

No one would argue with the overall sentiment. But the only hint of how the president would stop spreading dependency was in his budget with its sharp cuts in domestic programs.

As for the agencies that disburse the aid, Reagan talked in a recent interview about "something that happens even in government bureaucracies that are set up to solve a certain problem. But once the bureaucracy is set up it never quite wants to admit that the problem has been solved because then there's no need for the bureaucracy."

Look at Reagan's statements on dependency and the bureaucracy and Stockman's remarks don't seem all that far out of line.

"The institutional forces in the military are more concerned about protecting their retirement benefits than they are about protecting the security of the American people," said the budget director.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger quickly responded that Stockman had "defamed" the men and women in the armed forces. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said of the budget director: "I'd fire him."

The reaction was a little more tempered at the White House, where spokesman Larry Speakes said Stockman's statement was "a personal opinion probably not shared by the president."

Bennett chose a more vulnerable and less organized target — students from families earning more than $32,500 a year.

When the new education secretary was asked about the impact of an administration plan to deny federally guaranteed loans to such students, he replied:

"It may require of some students divestiture of certain sorts — stereo divestiture, automobile divestiture, three-weeks-at-the-beach divestiture."

Strength For Today

The Bible has a lot to say about holiness. The word "holy" means "set apart." A thing is holy if it is set apart for a sacred use.

This word has come into bad repute in modern life. We don't like holy people. We don't like holy projects. We speak of the holier-than-thou attitude toward others — and we don't like it. The word holy is not a favorite one in the modern world.

Yet holiness in its true

To the editor:
A few days ago in a corridor of Pitt Memorial Hospital, I involuntarily reached out to touch the face of a beautiful little black girl. Even as I touched her smiling face, I thought, "Good heavens! With the present hysteria about child abuse, can one dare even to respond to the cheerful face of a child?" I haven't decided on an answer to that question yet.

Father Bruce Ritter runs a number of houses for runaways and he offers the following in a recent letter from Covenant House, 460 W. 41st St., New York City:

"The street is a brutal parent.... A kid becomes gun shy, violence shy, hand and fist shy... they don't believe the language of love any more....

"We have become more paranoid about touching a child. Some parents are almost afraid to hug their kids any more. I think the reaction is understandable, but definitely unhealthy."

Father Ritter goes on to say that he and his staff are careful in their touching of children who come to the Covenant House shelters, insuring that touching is clearly appropriate.

However, says Father Ritter, "Children and adults, too, have a need, and a right to be touched, to be caressed, to be held...."

Sometimes a simple loving gentle touch is worth a thousand words: "One way to reach (these abused street kids) is to reach to them, to touch them."

I hope our fears don't cause us to insulate our children and ourselves so much that we all become less gentle, less expressive and natural. Have you hugged your child today?"
William C. Byrd Sr.
Route 3, Greenville

To the editor:
The news media and especially outstanding magazines, plus the big mouths in Washington, are quoting that the farmers of America are in a situation similar to the Great Depression of the 1930s. They are having foreclosures, losing their homes and farms and are panic-stricken with depression. At the same time, Washington is planning more revenue for defense, aiding other countries and any area calling for help. Our motto should be the same as the Chrysler Corporation's that came back from the brink of oblivion, "We Take Care of Our Own" and if every country had to do the same, we would not be witnessing the mess before our eyes.

The farmer is our breadbasket and does not compare with any business, profession or activity because these individuals are the outside people.

They face the weather, storms, tornadoes, droughts, earthquakes, fires, insects, pests of every descriptions and health problems as well as everyone else. When they go, we shall soon follow.

The first priority before this nation and its leaders is to see this segment of humanity through these trials and tribulations. Life as I have seen it for many years, through wars, depression and prosperity, is nothing more nor less than the pendulum swing from good to bad and back again. This shall always be, I believe.

The main problem is to try to sing or hum to reduce the stress that will do no good, but plenty of harm, for it is only mental torture. otherwise.

Like the flow of blood, it cannot stand congestion and I repeat the words of former President Richard M. Nixon, minus the vulgarity and expletive, but with the exact same meaning, "If You Can't Use the Pot — Don't Sit on It." There is talent in this great nation that is capable, with thought and suggestion, to break up this temporary congestion.

Textile Jobs Fall

Southeastern textile plant employment declined for the fourth consecutive month in December, according to Donald M. Cruse, regional commissioner for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, in Atlanta.

The December employment level of 499,900 (not seasonally adjusted) was down 1,400 from November and 28,600 from December 1983.

Over-the-month decreases occurred in Alabama and North Carolina, while gains were recorded in Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee. Employment levels were unchanged in Florida, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Seven of the eight Southeastern states recorded over-the-year employment reductions. North Carolina lost 16,800 workers, followed by South Carolina (4,900), Alabama (4,000), Georgia (1,500), Tennessee (1,400) and Florida and Mississippi (200 each). The only increase occurred in Kentucky (400).

Textile plant production workers averaged 39.4 hours per week in December 1984 — up 0.1 hour from November but down 1.7 hours from a year ago.

Gross average hourly earnings of $6.49 were up three cents over the month and 34 cents over the year. Gross average weekly earnings at $255.71 increased $1.83 from November but decreased $1.17 from December 1983.

Car Import Quotas May Be Dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional and industry pleas for limits on Japanese auto imports, administration officials are recommending that President Reagan, in effect, do nothing to extend "voluntary" quotas that expire next month.

Sources who commented on condition they not identified said the president's Cabinet council on commerce and trade agreed Tuesday to make such a recommendation to Reagan.

The fourth year of the quotas expires March 31. Under the arrangement, Japanese exports to the United States were limited to 1.85 million cars last year.

Although the administration and the Japanese refer to the current quotas as "voluntary" on Japan's part, it is an open secret that the limits were put in place in 1981 following quiet pressure from the Reagan administration and outcries from Congress over the flood of Japanese imports.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed Tuesday that officials discussed the matter and adopted a single recommendation, but he declined to disclose it.

One White House official, speaking to reporters on condition he not be named, said the administration is "understanding" of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's problems in persuading his own government to permit greater imports of U.S. beef, citrus and other products.

But, at the same time, the official said, the United States is anxious to overcome Japanese trade barriers and can use its flexibility on the auto issue to encourage greater Japanese cooperation in other areas of bilateral trade.

Speakes said Tuesday it will be up to Japan whether to extend the quotas.

Speakes said the president would consider the issue in the next few days, while insisting "the matter has not gone before the president yet." He added that Reagan may feel he does not have to make any decision.

"We're not required to make a decision because it's voluntary on the part of the Japanese," Speakes noted.

landowners.

"If everybody out there had a chance, they would express their opinion," he said.

The commission declined to continue the matter before hearing remaining opposition comments.

Fairlane Road resident William R. Thompson said he was "vehemently against" having R-6 behind his house — a house he said he only purchased a year ago.

St. Andrews Drive homeowner Ken Smith concurred with Thompson, adding that while construction of buildings other than single-family in the area may not affect the tax value of property, construction does affect resale value.

Bill Cherry, another neighborhood property owner, said this morning that he was "really happy" about the commission's decision. "Surprised? Well, no, I'm not surprised," he said, "because we went through this same thing in 1983 and had the same results. What surprised me was that he (Bradshaw) came back and tried to do it all over again."

Bradshaw made a similar request in 1983 to rezone acreage in approximately the same area to R-6 with an R-9 buffer instead of the R-15S buffer designated in last night's request. Designating the buffer area R-9 would have allowed for construction of duplex as well as single-family units.

In other business, the board approved a request by John F. Moye to rezone approximately five vacant acres located at the western end of Allendale Drive and Pearl Drive in the Red Oak Subdivision from residential/agricultural to medium density single-family residential.

Also approved was a request by Harry D. Bateman, president of Greenville Eastgate Inc., to annex approximately 6 vacant acres on the south side of N.C. 33 across from Rivergate.

Mass Funeral Set For 148 Persons Killed In Crash Of Spanish Plane

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — Authorities investigating the fiery, mountainside crash of an Iberia Boeing 727 have dismissed claims that a bomb planted by Basque separatists caused the disaster, which killed all 148 people aboard.

A funeral service for all the victims, whose charred bodies were scattered along with wreckage in a pine-covered forest in the Basque countryside, was set for this evening in Bilbao.

Two American passengers were reported on Flight 610, traveling the 200 miles from Madrid to Bilbao on Tuesday morning when the jet clipped two television transmitting towers and slammed into 3,336-foot Oiz hill on its approach to Sondica Airport.

U.S. Embassy sources in Madrid identified the Americans as Tim Markey and John Steigerwald but did not provide hometowns.

Relatives of the dead were converging on Bilbao to identify their loved ones and make arrangements for private burial services to be held after today's mass service.

The crash was the third air disaster in Spain in 14 months.

Iberia's president, Carlos Espinosa de los Monteros, quickly rejected the possibility of a terrorist attack as the cause of the crash.

Espinosa told reporters late Tuesday in Bilbao that the state-owned airline had received an anonymous telephone call from a man saying he represented ETA, a Basque separatist organization. Espinosa said the man claimed responsibility in ETA's name for the crash.

The Iberia official said the small amount of evidence collected so far indicated the plane did not explode before plowing into the mountainside.

Although he ruled out a bombing, he said: "We have no hypotheses yet, we have no idea how the crash occurred," including why the craft was flying 900 feet below the normal altitude for that point in the flight — 20 miles from the airport.

He said Iberia was not taking the call seriously although officials received a telephoned bomb threat just before Flight 610 was due to take off Monday. Monday's flight was delayed for 30 minutes, but no bomb was found.

ETA has claimed responsibility for some 500 assassinations of police and military officers since 1968. It seeks complete independence for the three-province northern Basque country near the border with France.

Sources close to ETA, including Luis Nunez, editor-in-chief of Egin, a Basque daily newspaper, said such an act by the separatist group would be "highly unlikely and highly illogical."

At about the time the plane crashed, four gunmen in Madrid killed the head of Spain's second largest private bank, the Central Bank. An anonymous caller to several newspapers later claimed responsibility for the killing of Ricardo Tejero in ETA's name.

Initial reports blamed fog for the crash of the Boeing 727, but meteorological officials said later that visibility had been sufficient for a safe landing.

On Nov. 27, 1983, a Boeing 747 of the Colombian airline Avianca crashed and exploded five minutes before its scheduled landing in Madrid, killing 181 people.

On Dec. 7, 1983, an Iberia Boeing 727 and an Aviacco DC-9 collided on a fog-shrouded runway at Madrid's Barajas Airport, killing all 42 aboard the DC-9 and 51 aboard the 727. Aviacco is Spain's internal domestic airline. Iberia flies domestic Spanish routes and international routes.

aboard the aircraft. A mass funeral for the victims was scheduled today. (AP Laserphoto)

Excavation Team Finds Bones, Personal Effects

NONG SONG HONG, Laos (AP) — A U.S.-Laotian team, working on hands and knees in an unprecedented joint search in the forests of southern Laos, has excavated human bones and personal effects which may have belonged to some of 13 U.S. airmen whose gunship was shot down during the Vietnam war.

In a patch cleared of trees and brush, American and Laotian soldiers have unearthed bone fragments, teeth, shreds of military uniforms, live ammunition rounds, twisted guns and other remnants of a C-130 gunship shot down near the village of Nong Song Hong more than 12 years ago.

Chunks of what officials said were probably human bones appeared as Laotian soldiers sifted the dug-up dirt through wire meshes. The Americans put the bone fragments, which resembled greyish-white chips of volcanic rock, into small canvas pouches.

Col. Joe Harvey, head of the U.S. team, said the joint excavation had turned up "many parts" of personal equipment, including shreds of uniforms, steel inserts for jungle boots and parachute harnesses.

"We've found human remains at this crash site, but I don't feel it would be appropriate to comment on exactly what they are until they are analyzed. We also have to think about the families (of the missing airmen)," said Harvey, head of the Honolulu-based U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center.

The center is entrusted with resolving the cases of nearly 2,500 Americans listed as missing in action from the war.

The joint team was in its ninth day of the painstaking work on hands and knees when Western reporters were given an hour-long tour of the area Tuesday.

Israelis Storm Lebanese Village

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli forces stormed a south Lebanese village near the port city of Tyre today, conducted a house-to-house search and rounded up about 200 men for interrogation, security sources said.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said an Israeli unit of 20 armored personnel carriers and other vehicles entered the village of Bazouriyeh at 7 a.m. to conduct the search for suspected guerrillas. They said 200 men were rounded up.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, confirmed the Israeli operation in Bazouriyeh and said one dead male, shot in the head, was found outside the village.

Goksel said two other villagers were found injured. One seriously injured villager was being evacuated to the U.N. field hospital in the Lebanese border town of Naqoura, Goksel said. He did not elaborate.

The U.N. Interim Force has been stationed in southern Lebanon since a 1978 Israeli invasion of the area.

South Africa Says Death Toll Rising

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The death toll from two days of fierce rioting in the Crossroads squatter city rose to 16 blacks, and police said today a seventh person was charged with treason in the largest crackdown in years on apartheid opponents.

Cape Town police spokesman Lt. Attie Laubscher said three more bodies were recovered from the Crossroads shanty town overnight. Thirteen other blacks also were killed in rioting Monday and Tuesday.

Laubscher said 224 residents and six policemen had been injured in fighting between police and squatters that involved gasoline bombs, rock-throwing, tear gas, birdshot and rubber bullets.

"Everything is very quiet, almost back to normal" today, Laubscher said. "Police are still present, patrolling the area."

About 100 youths gathered at the edge of Crossroads and set piles of wood alight, but police withdrew a short distance and there were no clashes, said a reporter who visited the scene.

Rumors that the white-ruled government was about to begin demolishing the city of at least 60,000 black squatters outside Cape Town and move residents to a new site ignited the violence Monday and Tuesday. The government denied that a move was imminent, and said it would only take place after consultation.

In Pretoria, police spokesman Lt. Henry Beck said Sisa Njikalana, a leader of the South African Allied Workers Union, was charged with treason as part of a nationwide swoop on anti-apartheid campaigners.

The arrests of six other opponents of apartheid, South Africa's legal system of racial segregation, on treason charges was announced Tuesday. The raids put nearly the entire leadership of the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition in custody.

The seven defendants' cases will be joined with eight other United Democratic Front leaders and supporters charged with treason late last year. Their trial will be the largest in a treason case since the government tried 156 foes of white-minority rule in 1956. The 1956 case resulted in acquittal of all the accused in 1961.

Two of three front presidents, Archie Gumede and Albertina Sisulu, and national treasurer Cassim Saloojee are among the 15 facing treason charges, crippling the main opposition within the country that seeks rights for blacks, those of mixed race and Asians. None of those charged is white.

Police raided dozens of homes and offices of United Democratic Front officials, seizing documents, posters and leaflets as potential evidence. Many activists were questioned, and police said one black man, Tom Manthata of the South African Council of Churches, was detained without charge.

Foreign Aid

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile is expecting to sign soon a three-year agreement with the International Monetary Fund that will allow the South American nation to receive needed foreign aid for this year, authorities said.

Details of the pact will be made public "in the next few days," Central Bank President Enrique Seguel said.

The government has said that as soon as the agreement is signed it will open talks with international banks to renegotiate payments on its $20 billion foreign debt and try to obtain more credit. News reports said Chile expects to get $500 million-$700 million from the IMF during the first year of the agreement.

Bazouriyeh is part of a cluster of villages that form the so-called "arc of resistance" east of Tyre where guerrilla attacks have been mounted almost daily against the Israeli occupation army.

The latest guerrilla attack in Bazouriyeh was Monday, when Israeli army Maj. Shaul Zehavi, 27, was killed by a bomb that exploded next to his convoy as it passed through the village.

In Beirut, the command of a French truce observer team said today that gunmen shot and killed a French observer southeast of the city Tuesday night.

A communique identified the victim as Commandant Paul Rhodes and said he was the commander of an observation post in the Druse town of Shweifat, seven miles from the capital.

The communique said Rhodes was shot dead by "unidentified elements" as he was entering the Shweifat post Tuesday night.

The French officer who read the one-paragraph communique by telephone declined to give further details beyond saying that four French observers who served under Rhodes at the post were "safe and okay."

Earlier, Christian-controlled radio stations said the four French observers were missing and presumed kidnapped.

Lebanese police chief Brig. Gen. Osman Osman told The Associated Press that he had received information that the four observers were back at the Shweifat post.

The radios had accused Druse militiamen of mounting the attack on the French post.

They said the command of the 65-member French observer team was in contact with Druse militia leader Walid Jumblatt to arrange for the return of Rhodes' body.

An earlier communique by a security committee representing Lebanon's principal civil war factions said Rhodes died in crossfire between Druse and Christian militiamen. It said negotiations were under way to get his body from the "buffer zone" where he was killed.

But all Beirut newspapers said today that Rhodes was the victim of a direct attack. They quoted an unidentified spokesman for the Lebanese army command as saying the assailants "fired volleys from automatic rifles and retreated after the attack."

A spokesman for Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist party who declined to be identified by name denied the charge.

Rhodes' death brought to five the total number of French observers killed since they were deployed in and around Beirut last April to monitor the latest truce in Lebanon's almost 10-year civil war.

Beirut radio stations, meanwhile, said a collaborator with Israel identified as Khalil Akar was found shot dead near his house in the south

Lebanese port city of Sidon on Tuesday night.

The radio stations said the victim was a nephew of Hussein Akar, who commanded an Israeli-sponsored militia in Sidon before the Israeli withdrawal from the city. Hussein Akar fled Sidon before the withdrawal last Saturday.

NO DOUBT ABOUT IT — Midwest City, Okla., policeman Ed Forman displays a bumper sticker that a judge can order a convicted drunken driver to place on his vehicle. The sticker warns other motorists of the conviction and asks that they report any erratic driving to the police department. (AP Laserphoto)

Oklahoma Town Publicizes Motorists' DWI Convictions

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — If Delmar Warren doesn't drive straight home, pops into a tavern for a quick one, or parks outside a liquor store, sharp-eyed passersby may blow the whistle on him after reading the back of his car.

That's because Warren's car carries a bumper sticker identifying him at the wheel as a convicted drunken driver and asking others to monitor his performance.

He is one of 10 drivers carrying the stickers on their cars in the Oklahoma City suburb of Midwest City as part of their sentence for conviction of driving under the influence.

If any of them violates a list of strict rules — or removes the sticker before six months is up — he faces 30 days in jail.

Drivers must drive with care and consideration, showing no erratic tendencies on the road, may not park in front of any establishment selling liquor, and must drive the car that the sticker is on, said

Midwest City Police Chief Jim Cox. Any driver using another vehicle without a sticker will face the music, he said.

Police check the vehicle's odometer at the beginning and end of the six months to be sure the vehicle hasn't simply been stored in the garage, Cox said.

Warren, 40, said he knows he did wrong by driving under the influence, but he finds it embarrassing to advertise his conviction.

Other drivers laugh at him or are discourteous, he said.

He thinks, too, that it is unfair to issue the stickers only to some convicted drunken drivers and not to all.

"I saw people in there (court) who I know personally and who I know had been in there before, but they didn't get chosen because they had a lawyer," he said.

"If you paid $500 in lawyers' fees, you could get off."

"If you're going to make a program work, make it work for everybody," said Warren, a first offender, who was arrested at Christmas.

But Municipal Court Judge Ken Spears, who ordered the sticker on Warren's car, said, "If you gave it to everybody ... it really loses its effect."

Spears said he uses several factors in determining who should be given a bumper sticker, including previous offenses and — particularly for first-time offenders — blood-alcohol readings.

Others convicted could be jailed or fined $200. The sticker can be handed out with any of the other penalties, or separately, Spears said.

The sticker says, "I am a convicted DWI-DUI driver in Midwest City Municipal Court. Any erratic driving should be reported to the Midwest City Police Department."

Cox thinks the sticker program is a good weapon in the fight against drunken driving.

"At any time when the provisions are violated, you're back in the cooler for 30 days," Cox said. "That's reasonably good incentive to not mess up."

Warren said the program has had some effect on him.

"I was guilty. I have no qualms about it," he said. "I've slowed down. I don't overdo it any more."

He got a six-month deferred sentence and was fined $150 in addition to his sticker sentence.

Jet's Engines Stall

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Passengers aboard a China Airlines jumbo jet popped into the ceiling "like popcorn" when the plane lost power in all four engines and plunged more than six miles toward the Pacific Ocean before the engines restarted, authorities said.

Many of the 252 passengers and 20 crew members were hurled from their seats, some smashing into the top of the cabin, as the aircraft fell toward the ocean and then limped into San Francisco International Airport after flying 500 miles with a torn tail section and bent wing, authorities said.

The plane was diving so fast that the pilot lowered his landing gear to slow down, an airport spokesman said. The force of the plunge ripped off the landing gear doors and pieces of the horizontal tail stabilizers.

Fifty passengers suffered injuries, mostly minor, and two flight attendants remained hospitalized today.

"I thought it was time to meet the maker," said passenger Bill Peacock.

Seksan Caniyo said the plane dived once, leveled out and dived again. Those without seatbelts flew into the air, some hitting their heads on the ceiling.

"People were popping up like popcorn," he said.

The jet was en route from Taipei, Taiwan, to Los Angeles on Tuesday when it hit turbulence known as wind shear — a rapid change in wind speed and direction, said airport spokesman Ron Wilson.

The plane stalled and plummeted from a cruising altitude of 41,000 feet to 9,000 feet during the incident, Wilson said.

Confusion Hinders Hunt For Columbus' Body

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Columbus may have discovered America, but now a worldwide search is on to find him — or his remains, that is.

The problem isn't so much that Columbus' remains are missing as that there are so many contradictory stories about the whereabouts of one of history's best-known figures. Since his death in 1506, his body was moved at least three times, historians say. Some claim more. Whatever the case, the travels of Columbus continued after death.

He was interred in Valladolid, Spain, where he died, but his remains were moved to either Triana or Seville in Spain in 1509.

In 1541, the remains were moved again, this time to Santo Domingo. Some historians say the body was shipped to Havana, Cuba, in the early 19th Century, then back to Seville afterward.

And one unsubstantiated report claims Columbus was returned to his birthplace of Genoa, Italy, in the early 20th Century.

The question of Columbus' whereabouts has arisen often lately as the 500th anniversary of the explorer's most famous discovery — the 1492 finding of America — approaches.

Enter Jonathon Ericson, 42, a professor of social ecology at the University of California at Irvine and one of the scientists who used forensic tests to help archeologists in Peru identify the remains of South American conquistador Francisco Pizarro.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Ericson said the most believable story of Columbus' remains comes from Santo Domingo, where a small lead casket was found in the local cathedral in 1877 bearing the initials

CCA, possibly standing for Christopher Columbus, Admiral.

"They believe they are the remains of Christopher Columbus," Ericson said, adding that he believes he can settle the issue.

"It could be for some reason that Columbus was not placed there (in the lead casket)," Ericson said. "There are so many things that could have happened" he said: grave robbers, looters, mistaken identity or someone else being buried in the casket.

In an attempt to see whether the casket in Santo Domingo contains Columbus' body, Ericson will use strontium isotope characterization, a method he developed while teaching at Harvard in 1972.

Strontium is an element that enters food and ultimately, human bodies. Ericson said atomic forms of strontium called isotopes vary according to where the strontium existed when it entered food.

He plans to take samples this summer from Columbus' birthplace in Genoa, Italy — rocks, soil, plants and the like — and compare them with a piece of a tooth from the casket. The explorer lived in Genoa until he was 22.

"Columbus, in eating the plants and animals from Genoa from the 15th Century, in forming his teeth, picked up the characteristics of strontium isotope from Genoa," Ericson said.

Ericson said he has received permission from the government of Santo Domingo to bring the remains in the lead casket back to an "ultra clean" lab in the United States for testing.

Thief Steals, Repairs, Returns Truck

DEWITT, Mich. (AP) — Kelly Terrell says he has no idea why someone would steal his pickup truck, make sweeping repairs to it and then return the vehicle two months later.

"I have no idea who the man is," Terrell said. "It is all very strange."

Terrell said he recovered his 1975 Chevrolet pickup

after receiving a phone call Sunday from a man who said Terrell could find the truck in the same parking lot from which it was stolen in December.

The man who called him lectured Terrell about the poor condition of the truck and about leaving his keys in the vehicle, Terrell said. Terrell said he found the truck complete with a new paint job, body work and a three-page list of repairs made by the thief.

Georgia Electrocutes Former Minister

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Former Baptist minister Van Roosevelt Solomon thanked "all the people who tried to save my life," then died today in Georgia's electric chair for the murder of a college honors graduate and convenience store manager.

Solomon, 41, a former assistant pastor at a Baptist church in his hometown of Lawton, Okla., was pronounced dead at 12:27 a.m. by Ralph Kemp, warden at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center near Jackson.

He was executed for the 1979 murder of Roger Tackett, an honors graduate of Georgetown University who managed a Cobb County convenience store because he was unable to support his family as a teacher.

Solomon was the fifth man executed in Georgia since the state resumed using the electric chair in December 1983 following a 19-year hiatus. Like Solomon, three of the other four inmates executed since then have been black. He was the 38th person executed in the United States since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976 and the sixth this year.

Also sentenced to death for killing Tackett was Brandon Jones, also known as Wilbur May, who is on death row while his case is being appealed.

During Solomon's trial, when his attorneys said evidence was wrongly interpreted, prosecutor Tom Charon said Solomon "was in the building when Mr. Tackett was being executed. Both defendants were caught within inches of the gun and within feet of the deceased."

Solomon was led unassisted into the death chamber at 12:10 a.m. Dressed in a white prison uniform, he watched intently as six guards strapped him into the white oak chair.

He occasionally spoke to the guards, but his words were inaudible to the 13 witnesses, seated in wooden pews in an adjoining room with a thick glass window.

Solomon carefully looked over the witnesses, which included George Kendall, the American Civil Liberties Union attorney who represented him on appeal and before the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Kendall and Solomon looked at each other momentarily. Solomon broke the contact with a nod.

Asked by Kemp if he had a final statement, Solomon said, "I would like to give my blessings to all the people who tried to save my life."

Following a prayer by a minister, a guard placed a cap on Solomon's shaved head. A mask was fixed over his face, and at 12:18 a.m., the 2,080-volt current was applied, forcing Solomon's body up and back.

Prison officials said his body would be claimed by his wife, Beatrice, and taken to a nearby funeral home for cremation.

Prisons spokesman Fred Steeples said Solomon ate a last meal of apples, oranges, raisins and chocolate ice cream.

Outside the prison, about 50 opponents of the death penalty and eight proponents of capital punishment gathered in a steady rain.

The opponents carried signs, many of which had biblical references. One read: "Let he who is without sin cast the first stone."

The placards carried by the supporters of the death penalty were more direct. One said: "Let me pull the switch."

Solomon lost two court appeals Tuesday.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to grant a request that it reconsider an earlier ruling upholding his conviction and sentence. The court also refused a request that the full 12-member court hear the appeal.

Earlier in the day, the U.S. Supreme Court refused, without comment or recorded dissent, to reconsider its rejection last month of his appeal.

The parole board also refused to commute his sentence.

Thatcher Returns For New Talks With U.S. Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is preparing to give British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher reassurances about his "Star Wars" defense initiative, but he isn't likely to offer aid for Britain's beleaguered pound.

The prime minister arrived here Tuesday night for two days of meetings with Reagan and top administration officials, but her first official event was an address a joint session of Congress today.

Mrs. Thatcher, who is having political troubles in Britain, asked to be the first British prime minister to address Congress since Winston Churchill in 1952.

In her speech, Mrs. Thatcher was likely to convey her concern over the strength of the U.S. dollar and the importance of the March 12 nuclear arms talks between the United States and the Soviet Union in Geneva.

Afterward, the prime minister scheduled a White House meeting with Reagan — their 12th — including a private talk and a luncheon.

Mrs. Thatcher began her day with a round of interviews on morning television network news shows.

On NBC-TV's "Today" she reiterated her concerns about the dollar, saying its strength made the United States the world's "safe haven" for investment and the steep, persistent deficits are "drawing in capital from the rest of the world," which makes the dollar "extremely stronger than other factors would indicate that it should be."

As for "Star Wars" research, Mrs. Thatcher said on the ABC-TV "Good Morning America" program that "I don't think it's realized how much research the Soviet Union has already done. ... I'm absolutely sure the president had to announce he was going to do it in order to keep the balance so that we on the Western side did not fall behind what the Soviet Union's already doing."

On prospects for a new arms treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union, the prime minister said on the "CBS Morning News" she feels the Soviets do want an agreement.

"First, because the weapons we deal with get more and more horrendous. ... Secondly, I think that the expense of maintaining the weaponry that we have now is getting to be such a strain on economies that everybody wishes to have mutual security."

After meeting with Reagan, Mrs. Thatcher was to see top administration officials to discuss arms control and the so-called Strategic Defense Initiative, a research program into the feasibility of establishing a space-based system to intercept incoming nuclear missiles.

Fed Reserve Holding Course That Favors Rate Reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board confirmed today it is holding to the course that has allowed interest rates to drop significantly from the peaks set last summer.

In a report to Congress, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker revealed that the central bank last week decided to loosen still further target ranges for monetary growth in 1985.

While the changes are not dramatically different from the tentative ranges set in July, the new targets are likely to bolster the belief among financial markets that the Fed is still working to keep interest rates from rising.

The report by the chairman of the central bank also contained an economic forecast very similar in tone to the optimistic projections being made by the Reagan administration.

"Economic growth is expected to remain strong enough in 1985 to produce some further decline in unemployment, with little if any pickup in inflation," Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee.

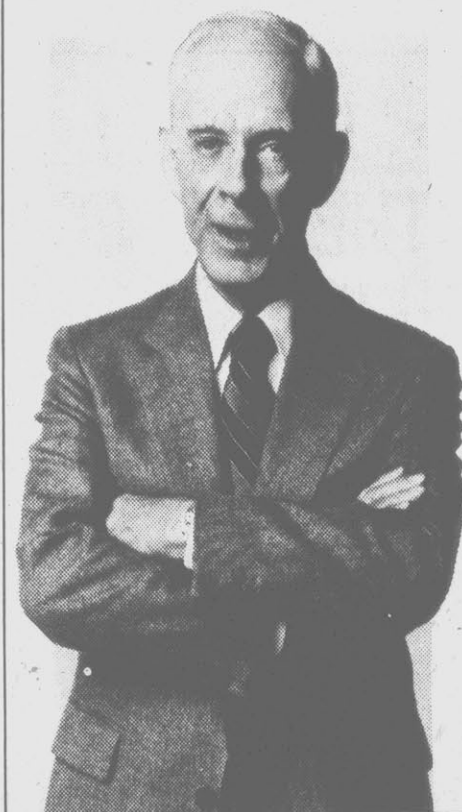

As he has in the past, Volcker warned that the country must not "be beguiled by tranquil forecasts into any false sense of comfort that all is well."

Volcker said a "sense of urgency" was needed on the part of Congress and the Reagan administration of the need of reducing giant federal budget deficits.

Volcker has said several times recently that the budget deficit must be trimmed by a minimum of $50 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 to ensure further economic prosperity and to keep interest rates from rising. The budget that President Reagan sent to Congress calls for a reduction in this range but would still leave the deficit around $180 billion.

Billy Taylor Returns Home As Portion Of Second Tour

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
 Musician Billy Taylor, currently on a second annual tour sponsored by McDonald's Corp. as a part of the celebration throughout America of February as Black History month, was in Greenville on a whirlwind schedule this week.

It was a typically grueling entertainer's schedule, but according to Dr. Taylor, the kind of thing "I'm accustomed to, I love it." The calendar for his one day in Greenville was jammed with appointments for television and newspapers; talks to students at D.H. Conley High and Aycock Junior High; and in the evening hours, a free concert at East Carolina University.

"I don't get to North Carolina nearly as much as I'd like to," Taylor, who was born in Greenville, said. "Today, I'll only have time to say hello to a few people before I'm on my way again."

One of the things Taylor emphasized about his visits to North Carolina in recent years is "the tremendous talent in indigenous jazz talent in North Carolina. The talent here is comparable to anything in the world, something I doubt that many people realize."

"I'd like to see someone, some group in the state, organize a North Carolina Jazz Festival to celebrate our native players. North Carolina has produced some important jazz musicians, people like the legendary John Coltrane."

Taylor, the father of two sons, voiced enthusiasm for the opportunity the McDonald Tours gives him to come into contact with a cross-section of young people in various locations — this year in Greenville, Raleigh, Durham, Chicago and Baton Rouge, La., among other places.

"It's really heartwarming," he commented, "to see the extent of interest young people have in all fields of American music. They show excitement, enthusiasm, and energy about music. I personally feel that music is important to them socially, culturally. True, most are not as knowledgeable about jazz as they are about rock music, but they are keenly receptive to information about any kind of music. This is where I can introduce them to something they may not get from others."

Commenting on the current popularity of rock videos, Taylor said "I have mixed emotions. It's interesting, but many of the videos trouble me. I don't think they are using this tremendous technology as effectively as I'd like to see it. There are so many things they don't do with their music. If the visual content was as artistic as the music, I feel that would be better. The two, the music and the visual, should fit each other."

As a medium, Taylor thinks "it has great potential. In fact, I'm thinking, been talking to others about making jazz videos."

Year round, Billy Taylor maintains a busy schedule after nearly four decades of being constantly in public demand. His trio — Taylor on piano with accompaniment on brass and drums, "plays about 100 concerts a year. We perform in many places."

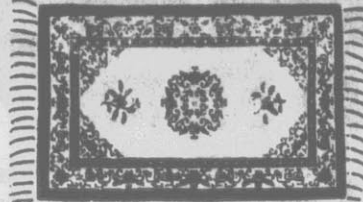

"One of my real joys has been opportunities to play with symphony orchestras. A few years ago I toured with the North Carolina Symphony, a truly wonderful experience. My latest appearance with a symphony was with the Atlanta Symphony in the performance of my composition, 'Peaceful Warrior,' in memory of Dr. Martin Luther King. We performed it with the trio, the symphony and a chorus of 100 voices."

It would take pages simply to summarize Billy Taylor's achievements in the music world. Justifiably, he can be called the Thomas Jefferson of music — having been consistently active as a composer, singer, pianist, recording artist, radio and TV personality, author, arranger, conductor, and as teacher and lecturer. Pick a jazz name great, and chances are that Taylor somewhere along the way has worked with that person.

His talent and dedication have been rewarded — with an Emmy, two Peabodys, along with being the first ever recipient of a Certificate of Recognition given by the U.S. Congressional Arts Caucus.

JERUSALEM (AP) — A former U.S. Army intelligence officer has given Hebrew University a rare color film of Adolf Hitler reviewing German troops during World War II.

Hebrew University spokesman Jerry Barach said it was not certain when and where the film was taken. However, it was believed to date from 1941 or 1942 somewhere in the eastern front, which would have been either Poland or the Soviet Union.

Leo deGar Kulka of San Francisco gave the film to the university this month.

Study Shows 'Superwomen' Tend To Have Good Health

WASHINGTON (AP) — Busy women who combine job and marriage tend to be healthier than those who are either unmarried or unemployed, a new study of government statistics discloses.

And the so-called "superwomen" who add children to the responsibilities of job and spouse are just as healthy as those who don't have to deal with offspring, the report adds.

Contrary to popular belief, the triple roles of job, spouse and mother are linked with good health," reported Lois M. Verbrugge of the University of Michigan and Jennifer H. Madans of the National Center for Health Statistics.

Their findings, reported in the March edition of American Demographics magazine, are based on information collected in the National Health Interview Survey taken in 1977-78.

Of the three factors we examined, employment has by far the strongest and most consistent tie to women's good health. Marriage ranks second and parenthood ranks a weak third," they reported.

Working women had fewer days of restricted activity because of illness, spent less time bedridden, had less chronic illness and in general felt better than unemployed females, they found.

"These differentials are true for all age groups, and may reflect the fact that unhealthy women stay out of the labor force, or that working outside the home has a positive influence on the well-being of women," they commented.

The researchers found that "the busy women who are both employed and married are the healthiest ... those who have children are just as healthy as those who do not."

On the other hand, they observed, "the combination of no job and no spouse is strongly linked to poor health, especially for women aged 25 to 34."

"The women with no roles (no job, no spouse, no children) have the worst health of all," they added.

"Involvement in activities that use one's skills and education, that offer social contacts and intimacy, and that provide income, probably helps people maintain good health or even improve their health," the two researchers wrote.

"Stress may damage mental or physical health," they went on, "but our analysis indicates that inactivity, rather than multiple social roles, may create the most stress. Good health also helps people find and keep a job, get married and bear children."

While married women were rated healthiest, single females with jobs felt better than those who didn't work. But among single women, children did have an effect, with single working mothers being less healthy than single working women without children.

This finding, they suggested, may reflect "either the financial pressures that draw not-so-healthy mothers into employment, or the negative impact of having the sole responsibility for providing the family's income and child care on an unmarried mother's health."

Among women who do not have jobs outside the home, those having children tended to be healthier than those without, although mothers did experience more acute sessions of sickness, "probably the result of infections they pick up from their children."

The findings compared a variety of health problems reported by women including days bedridden, days their activities were limited by illness, acute sessions of illness and a general feeling of good health.

Across the board, employed women reported higher rates of excellent or good health than those without jobs outside the home.

Hunt Embarrasses Rose, 69-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

All in all, it was a good night for the Hunt High School basketball program.

First off, the Lady Warriors watched a late Rose shot fall harmlessly off the rim as they escaped with a 31-30 victory that clinched the Big East championship for them.

Then, the Hunt boys, who hadn't won a Big East game all year, rolled up a 69-56 victory over the icy-handed Rampants, who have now lost their last five games in a row.

For their efforts, the Rose girls, who have won but four times in 13

Big East outings, deserve accolades. They worked hard and nearly pulled off what would have been one of the major upsets of the year.

For their efforts, the Rose boys deserved only raspberries. They couldn't shoot, didn't rebound and had only the inept ballhandling of the Warriors to thank for keeping the game as close it was.

"I just don't know what's wrong with us," Coach Jim Brewington bemoaned after the game, which was Rose's home finale. The Rampants still have one game left on the road, Friday at Elizabeth City, then they go into next week's tournament.

Continued play like last night's will assure them of a swift demise.

Hunt's Warriors, who fell behind by 18 points in the first meeting of the two teams only to come back and have the chance to win it, didn't let themselves get that far behind last night. The Rampants' biggest lead was eight points early on, but they were out of it by the late stages of the third period when the Warriors built up a 13-point lead, 48-35.

The Warriors shot a warm 55.8 percent from the floor — Rose hit a chilling 31.3 percent. Hunt snatched away 50 rebounds — Rose got only 34. Hunt missed 10 chances at the foul line — Rose missed 15.

About the only statistic the Rampants managed to win was the turnover count. They had only 16 while Hunt recorded twice as many.

Without that figure in its favor, Rose might have suffered a total rout.

Rose, which has been without a different starter for one reason or another for the last four games, was intact for the Hunt game but couldn't snap out of its slump. "When we got into this tailspin, we just couldn't pull out," Brewington said. "It's a lack of concentration. Our defense is not what it should be."

"I don't know. Maybe we can get it going before it's too late."

After a 4-4 tie, Rose suddenly ran off eight straight points, four of them by Carlton Wilson, to take a 12-4 lead with 4:33 to go in the first period.

But over the next two minutes, Hunt took command, scoring 10 in a row, four by Willie Hopkins, to push ahead, 14-12 with 2:06 remaining. The two teams then swapped baskets until Charles Jones scored off the fast break for a 20-16 Hunt lead. Rose closed it back to 20-18 as Wilson followed his own miss at the horn.

But after Tyron Smith tied it up at 20-20 at the start of the second period, Hunt scored seven in a row for a 27-20 lead, the first four by Jerry Wingate, and never looked back. Rose trailed by six, 32-26, at intermission.

The two again swapped points back and forth until with 2:56 Rose closed it to 40-35. But over the next few minutes, the Rampants went dry again and Hunt hit four straight baskets, each by a different player, to take a 48-35 lead with 54 seconds left in the third quarter. Rose did score a free throw late in the period to cut it to 48-36.

Hunt ran its lead out to 16, 52-36, before Rose scored again, and finally upped it to 17 at 55-38 with 5:19 left. Rose never came closer than 11 the rest of the way as Hunt rode out the rest of the game to finally get a win.

Reggie McCray and Jones each had 19 points to lead Hunt while Wingate added 12. Rose was led by Wilson with 19 while Lenny Langley had 16 and Melvin Jenkins added 10.

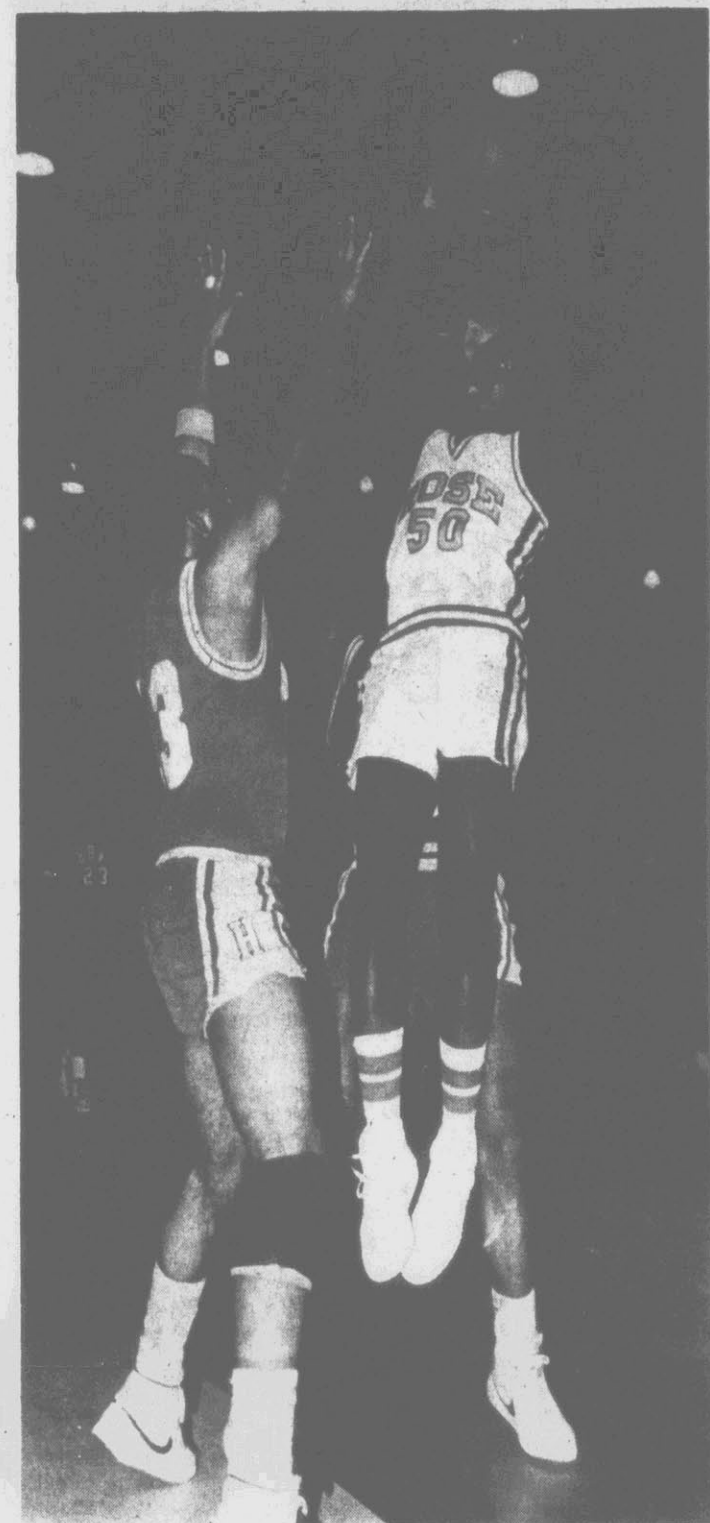

Rampettes-Lady Warriors

The girls' contest wasn't over until the final shot bounced off the rim at the horn.

The two started slowly with Hunt easing into a 6-4 lead after one period. They ran their margin to four early in the second quarter, 8-4, but two baskets by Kim Dupree tied it at 8-8. Hunt, however, went back out by four before Rose again rallied, tying it once more at 12-12. Gloria Cox' three-point play gave the Lady Warriors a 15-14 edge at the half.

Rose surged and took a 20-19 lead on a basket by Pam Smith with 5:24 left, but couldn't hold the lead. Jamie Mills drove in to put Hunt back up, 21-20, and the Warriors got their transition game going for the

Pirates Test American Again

East Carolina's Pirates, still trying to find that elusive first victory in the ECAC-South, will try again Thursday night at a spot they haven't visited before — American University.

It's the second time the two teams have played this year, American rolling up a 79-62 victory over the Pirates in their game played in Greenville just over a week ago.

The game, set for 8 p.m. in Fort Meyer Gymnasium just outside Washington, D.C., will be regionally telecast over Home Team Sports Network, a pay cable enterprise.

The Pirates, 0-10 in league play this year, enter the game with a two-game losing skid, having snapped a 12-game skid against non-conference foe Winthrop College last week. But — the Pirates have a 14-game losing streak in league play, not having won since the middle of the 1983-84 season when they nipped George Mason in Greenville, 70-68. And they haven't won a conference road game now in their last 19 tries. The last win on the road in ECAC-South play came back in 1981-82 when the Pirates won the first game they even played in the conference, downing — again — George Mason, 66-64.

American, one of the newest members of the league having entered this year with UNC-Wilmington, brings a 2-10 record into the game, having beaten William & Mary earlier this year in addition to topping the Pirates.

The Indians reversed things earlier this week, trapping the Eagles on the Indian court, 89-61.

Now the Pirates will be trying to do the same thing, except on the Eagles' home floor.

Following the American game, the Pirates return home to host UNC-Wilmington on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

EC Women Seek Title Wrapup

With top seeding in the ECAC-South's post-season tournament wrapped up, East Carolina's Lady Pirates go about the business of trying to insure the regular season title all to themselves tomorrow night at UNC-Wilmington.

East Carolina, now 10-0 in league play, has only the UNC-W date, plus a Sunday home game against Richmond left on the schedule. James Madison, now 8-2 following their 61-57 loss to the Lady Pirates Monday night, can still catch the Pirates if it wins its last two and ECU bows in both games. A single ECU win or JMU loss would wrap up the regular season title for the Pirates.

Since East Carolina beat Madison in each of their head-to-head meetings, the Lady Pirates would take the higher seed in the case of a tie.

With the top seeding, East Carolina will have a bye in the first round of play, set for Friday, March 1, and would then play the winner of the #4 and #5 game, those positions still to be decided, on Saturday, March 2.

Finals are set for the University of Richmond's Robins Center on Sunday, March 3. The championship does not carry with it an automatic berth into the NCAA women's tournament, although league officials are hopeful that it will come in the next few years.

Meanwhile, the Lady Seahawks stand as a major roadblock to the Lady Pirates' 15-game winning streak and the 10-game string in league games. In their earlier meeting in Greenville, East Carolina took a 88-75 win.

Wilmington comes into the game with a 13-10 overall and a 6-5 conference record.

next few minutes, scoring a total of nine straight for a 28-20 lead. Mills hit the first five of the string.

Rose scored twice at the end of the period to pull back to 28-24.

In the final period, Rose closed to within two twice. After Jackie Davis missed on the second of a two-shot foul, Dupree scored with 1:47 left to cut the lead to just one, 31-30.

Hunt chose to freeze the ball, but turned it over with 30 seconds to play. Rose, against Hunt's pressure defense, tried to move to the basket but ended up having to take a desperation shot just before the horn from too far out. The ball fell away, preserving the Lady Warrior win.

"We played hard, but losing is losing," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "They scored nine straight points on the fast break and that's what did it. I thought we played real well, but obviously not well enough to win. I really thought that we were going to do it."

Mills led Hunt with 11 points while Dupree had 14 for Rose.

The Rampants travel to Elizabeth City Northeastern on Friday to close out the regular season. They enter Big East Conference tournament action next week, the boys' tentatively set for Monday night and the girls' for Tuesday.

Nash 70-56 Tuesday in the opening round of the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball tournament being played at Ayden-Grifton High School.

In the girls action, Lisa Lang fired in 16 points and Stephanie Newton added 14 to lead Farmville Central to a 60-35 rout over Ayden-Grifton's Lady Chargers.

Greene Central moves on to the semifinals Thursday night at 8:15 p.m. against North Pitt, while Farmville Central's Lady Jaguars face Greene Central at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

"(The game) surprised me to the extent that we were flat; we had lost six or seven in a row," Greene Central Coach Gregg Ashorn said. "It's hard to get ready for a team that's kicked your tail twice. I told them tonight that if we could keep them off the (free throw) line, prevent them from getting the ball inside and then execute our offense we would be in the game."

"I've got to give our kids credit; they executed the game plan as well as could be expected. Our kids showed a lot of character."

Maurice Edwards and James Hill had 12 points each to lead the Rams, but it was the defensive effort of sophomore O.J. Sheppard inside that prevented the Jaguars from utilizing their strengths. Sheppard finished the game with nine points and eight rebounds.

"O.J. definitely had his best effort; he played a big-league game," Ashorn said. "What really showed me that was that he was getting down the floor on defense quickly. On offense, he's getting more sure-handed. There were several passes out there tonight that he'd have lost earlier in the year."

Bobby Evans led Farmville with 14 points by connecting on long-range shots. Bernard Taylor followed with 13 points, and Ronnie Barnes added 10. Andre Vines was held below his season average with six points.

"We tried to shut Barnes out, and to a large extent we were able to keep him out of their offense," Ashorn said. "I thought we did a super job of keeping Vines out of the (lane)."

"James Hill had the responsibility of stopping their shooter (Evans) and keeping him off the free throw line. (Evans) worked free a couple of times and made some tough shots on the move, but we kept him off the line."

Greene Central held a 36-33 lead going into the final period, but Taylor scored inside for the Jags to trim the margin to one 16 seconds into the quarter.

Steve Harrison, who had seven of his nine points in the fourth quarter, hit from the corner and Hill completed a three-point play to give the Rams a 41-35 lead with 7:03 remaining.

Farmville cut the gap to two points twice — at the 6:11 and 5:18 marks — but never pulled even with the Rams as Harrison and Edwards each connected four straight free throws in the final 2:07 to insure the win.

The Jaguars led most of the first quarter, but Sheppard gave the Rams a 19-18 lead on a follow shot with 6:55 left in the second period. The lead changed hands four times through the end of the half, with Greene Central taking a 26-24 advantage at intermission.

The Rams scored the first six points of the third quarter, but Farmville responded with seven unanswered points to trim the margin to 32-31 with 3:01 remaining. Hill posted two field goals for Greene Central and Evans added a 20-footer for the 36-33 tally at the end of the third quarter.

"Everytime we had a chance to tie or get back into the game, we just couldn't do it," Farmville Coach Mike Terrell said. "This was not one of our better ballgames. We had the opportunities, but the ball just wouldn't go in."

PANTHERS-FIREBIRDS

The Panthers rebounded after two shaky performances to easily dispose of Southern Nash, allowing North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans to substitute freely in the second half. Levon Shaw added 10 points and six rebounds, while freshman Ashley Sheppard led the Panthers with seven rebounds and Williams hauled down six.

"I think everything considered they came back pretty well (after losing to Ayden-Grifton Friday)," Deans said. "It would be hard to single out any one player who did well. We got some good minutes out of Ashley Sheppard coming off the bench, along with Greg Whitaker and Alfred Braxton."

Moorman Will Appeal Verdict

RALEIGH (AP) — An attorney for North Carolina State quarterback Percy Moorman said the all-white jury that found the freshman guilty of rape was largely motivated by racism, but a prosecutor called the verdict a victory for women.

A Wake County Superior Court jury Tuesday convicted Moorman, 18, of Danville, Va., of second-degree rape, second-degree sexual offense and misdemeanor breaking and entering.

His sentencing was scheduled for 9:30 a.m. today. Moorman faces a maximum of 84 years imprisonment on the three counts.

Defense attorney Jerry Paul said the verdicts would be appealed. He said Moorman told him after the verdict, "It's going to be a long fight, but I'm ready for it."

Paul compared the case to the highly publicized rape convictions in the 1930s in Alabama of nine black men accused of raping a white woman in what became known as the trial of the Scottsboro Nine.

"We've fought these cases since the 1930s," he said.

Assistant Wake County District Attorney William Hart said the case tells women they "don't have to fight for your life or be cut up" in resisting sexual assault in order to file criminal charges.

Aycock Tops Hunt, 61-45

WILSON — Errol Wooten fired in 21 points and Kevin Cobb added 10 to lead E.B. Aycock to a 61-45 victory over Wilson Hunt Tuesday in junior high basketball action.

L. Hines and S. Hines paced Hunt with 12 points each.

Aycock, now 10-3 on the season, hosts Elizabeth City Friday.

"I was glad it wasn't a real close game; it gave us a chance to get back into a pattern with our starters and play some of our young players."

Jeff Epps got the Firebirds on the board first with a layup off the opening tap, but North Pitt opened its attack with a three-point play by Williams and went on to take a 7-2 lead through the 6:30 mark.

Williams connected on a 12-footer and Gentry Sneed added a field goal with four seconds left in the quarter to give the Panthers a 19-12 advantage at the end of the opening period.

Wilbert Powell, who led Southern Nash with a game-high 15 points, completed a three-point play with 2:19 remaining in the second quarter to trim the margin to 27-22, but North Pitt outscored the Firebirds 10-1 through the end of the half for a 37-23 spread. Braxton had four points in the rally including two free throws, while Sheppard and Streeter added a pair of free throws each.

Streeter scored inside to open the second half, and Dwight Carr netted two free throws to respond for the Firebirds. But North Pitt rattled off 12 unanswered points through the 1:26 mark for a 51-25 advantage as Sheppard led the way with six points.

The Panthers built the lead to 26 two more times through the end of the period, but Southern Nash trimmed the margin to 55-33 with four consecutive points in the final 18 seconds.

The Firebirds continued to chop away the margin at the start of the final period with Powell connecting twice. Southern Nash cut the gap to 59-41 with 3:21 left, but North Pitt posted the next five points to spread the margin to 23 with 2:28 remaining.

Southern Nash eventually trimmed the Panthers' lead to 12 with 32 seconds, but the Panthers had already sealed the victory.

LADY JAGUARS-CHARGERS

Karen Edmonds and Michelle Whitfield posted 11 points each to lead the Lady Chargers, but in the end it was an old story as they were miss-matched against the stronger and more experienced Lady Jaguars of Farmville.

"I thought it was a good opener; I thought we played real well," Farmville Coach Hilda Worthington said. "My second and third string played a lot in the second half, so we should be ready Thursday."

"I watched (Greene Central Monday) night against Southern Nash. If you can slow down (Cyndi) Hicks and stop Cynthia Jones you have a good chance against them, but that's not going to be easy."

The Lady Jaguars jumped out to a 17-6 lead at the end of the first

Lowly Roanoke Rapids Stuns Redskins By 48-47

WILLIAMSTON — Lowly Roanoke Rapids, seeded eighth in the Northeastern Conference tournament field, knocked off regular season champion Roanoke, 48-47, last night in first round competition at Williamston High School.

Two other lower ranked teams were not so lucky. Plymouth's girls, regular season champs in their division, took a 39-26 win over Williamston while #3 ranked Roanoke's girls bested Edenton, 48-26.

Tonight, first round play winds up with Bertie facing #2 Ahoskie in a girls' game, while #2 Plymouth takes on Edenton in the boys' game. Semifinal play is set for Thursday and Friday with the finals on Saturday.

Roanoke and Roanoke Rapids played match-up in the first quarter, which ended in a 15-15 deadlock. But the Redskins began to pull away in the second period, moving out to a 26-22 halftime lead.

Roanoke Rapids rallied in the third period, 11-4, and pushed ahead, 33-30. Roanoke rallied and held the lead with ten seconds left in the game, but Brian Barnes scored from underneath the basket with two seconds left to make the Yellow Jackets the upset winners.

Kerr Putney led Roanoke Rapids with 13 while Todd Arthur added 12. John Bennett hit 16 for Roanoke while James Duggins had 15 and Shawn Chance scored 12.

Williamston's girls' threatened a surprise of Plymouth early on, taking a 10-6 lead after one period, but soon ran out of gas. Plymouth came back to move into a 13-12 lead by halftime.

In the third period, Plymouth outscored Williamston, 12-5, boosting the lead to 25-17. They polished off the Lady Tigers, 14-9, in the final quarter.

Debra Norman led the Valkyries with 18 points while Paula Owens added 12. No one scored in double figures for Williamston.

The Edenton-Roanoke girls' game opened the evening with the Lady Redskins easing out into an 10-8 lead after the first eight minutes. They continued to pull away in the second quarter, boosting their lead to 19-12 by the end of the half.

In the third period, Roanoke outscored Edenton, 14-3, running to a 33-16 edge and they finished off the Lady Aces, 15-10, in the last period.

Gloria Duggins led Roanoke with 20 while Cheryl Randolph added 14. No one hit in double figures for Edenton.

The Plymouth girls now face quarter and maintained a 25-12 halftime edge. Farmville blasted the Lady Chargers in the third quarter 24-12 to put the game away.

Knights Avenge Earlier Defeat

Greenville Christian, with four players in double figures, romped to an 80-37 victory over Wilson Christian last night, avenging an earlier loss.

GCA's girls, however, bowed, 46-32, in their game against Wilson.

"Our guys came out very intense and ready to play," Coach Dale Thatcher said of his Knights. "We played great defense to get a healthy lead, and our guards were in great control of the game."

The Knights ripped their way out to a 22-4 lead in the first quarter and were never in any danger. They boosted that margin to 50-18 by halftime. From there on, they coasted in, running the lead to 66-33 in the third period and outscoring Wilson, 14-4 in the final quarter.

Paul Hollingsworth led Greenville with 18 points while Dan Andrews had 16, Maury Harris had 14 and Darrell Harris had 12.

Wilson eased out to an 8-6 lead in the first period of the girls' game, then shot out to a 24-13 halftime ledge. Greenville rallied to within 30-27 after three period, but was outscored 16-8 down to the wire.

Melinda Deans led Wilson with 24 points while Paige Bragg had 12 for Greenville.

Greenville's girls are now 11-6, while the boys' are 9-10. Both teams

Jackets Prolong Lefty's Quest

ATLANTA (AP) — Charles "Lefty" Driesell's quest for his 500th coaching victory has hit another snag.

Two free throws each by Bruce Dalrymple and Scott Petway in the final 12 seconds carried eighth-ranked Georgia Tech to a 48-43 victory over Maryland Tuesday night, marking the fourth loss in a row for the Terps since Driesell reached the 499 mark with a 64-62 victory over Wake Forest on Feb. 6.

"I thought we played about as well as we can play," Driesell said. "I don't know if we're trying too hard, or we're choking up at the end, but we just can't seem to get it over the hump at the end. We played well, they played well, and they won. What else is there to say."

Driesell, in his 25th season, will try to become the 17th coach in the NCAA's Division I to reach the 500 plateau when the Terps return home to entertain Towson State Thursday night.

"Going after win number 500 is not weighing on my mind at all," he said. "If it was, I'd be insane by now."

Tuesday night's game turned into a defensive struggle that left both teams with poor shooting percentages (40 percent for Tech and 46.5 for the Terps). Tech had two scoreless stretches of 5:30 and 5:32. Maryland didn't score for the first 4:22 of the game and then lost what appeared to be a commanding 29-22 lead with 10:57 to play when Tech went on a 15-0 burst during the next 5:32.

John Salley, who led Tech with 11 points, scored nine in the decisive run that created an eight-point Yellow Jacket lead. The lead almost got away when Len Bias sparked a Terps comeback that chopped the margin to 44-43 in the final minutes before the free throws at the end put the game on ice.

The victory lifted Tech, the Atlantic Coast Conference leader, to 19-5 for the year and 8-4 in the league. Maryland fell to 19-10 and 5-6.

Bias, who hit 10 of 17 shots from the field, led all scorers with 21 points.

Mark Price added 10 points for Tech, including a 35-footer for a 43-39 lead with 2:25 to play just as the 45-second shot clock was about to expire.

It was Tech's third victory over the Terps this season, giving Coach Bobby Cremins an 8-2 record against Maryland since becoming the coach at Tech.

"It just took an incredible clutch performance to win the basketball game," Cremins said. "This was a big win for us in the conference. We had to fight and struggle right down to the end."

Tobacco Belt Seeds Survive Tourney's Opening Round

The upper seeded teams all came through unscathed in the first round of the Tobacco Belt Conference's post-season girls' tournament last night. Top seeded Belhaven rolled over Mattamuskeet, 77-44, while #2 Bath took a 37-31 win over Jamesville. Third-seeded Chocowinity downed Creswell, 38-24, while Columbia, fourth seeded, slipped past Bear Grass, 42-34.

First round games were played at the site of the higher seeded teams. First round boys' play opens tonight with Chocowinity at Creswell, Bear Grass at Cape Hatteras, Belhaven at Mattamuskeet, and Columbia at Jamesville. Play moves on to Washington High School starting Thursday for semifinal and final play.

Bath slipped into a 10-7 lead over Jamesville in the first period of their game, then pulled away to an 18-10 lead after the half. In the third period, Bath stretched its lead out to 28-16, then allowed Jamesville a 15-9 rally in the final quarter.

Amy McWayne led Bath with 15 points while Alice Warren added 11. Cindy Getchell paced Jamesville with 12.

Chocowinity held only a 7-6 lead after one period of play against Creswell, but began to pull away in the second period. By the end of the half, the Lady Indians had built up a 17-11 lead. That was stretched to 27-19 in the third period and the Tribe outscored Creswell, 11-5, in the last frame.

Twanda Gerald led Chocowinity with 13 points and she was the game's only scorer in double figures.

Bear Grass shot out to a 14-9 lead in the first period of its game with Columbia. Columbia nipped one point off that before halftime, trailing 21-17 at intermission. In the third period, Columbia continued to chip away at the Bear lead, and trailed only 31-29 going into the final period.

The Bears ran totally out of gas in the last quarter, scoring only three points while Columbia ran past them with 13 to claim the win.

Tarsha Clegg led Columbia with 14 points while Sharon Land and Mary Rogerson each had 12 for Bear Grass.

In semifinal girls play, Belhaven will meet Columbia Thursday at 7 p.m., while Chocowinity and Bath collide Friday at 7.

Different Goals For Champions

MIAMI (AP) — The American and British Open golf champions, Fuzzy Zoeller and Seve Ballesteros, have different goals in mind this week as they begin their 1985 PGA Tour seasons in the Doral-Eastern Open.

The easy-going Zoeller is coming back from major back surgery that sidelined him much of last season and, at one time, raised questions as to whether he could return to competitive golf.

"I'm just glad to be walking and breathing and playing again. I don't expect anything this week, or for the next couple of weeks," Zoeller said after a practice round on the Blue Monster course, site of the $400,000 tournament that begins Thursday.

"I'm still kind of weak. I need to get my strength back, and it'll take me a while to get back in shape," said Zoeller, who has played only two competitive rounds since his victory in the American national championship last summer.

While Zoeller is simply attempting to get his game back to a competitive level, Ballesteros is looking at an opportunity to establish himself as the outstanding player in the game.

"He's the man most likely to dominate the game in the next few years," Jack Nicklaus said of the 27-year-old Spaniard who already owns four major titles (two British Opens and two Masters) and is just now entering his golfing maturity.

"He could win many, many major titles," Nicklaus said.

Georgetown Pounds Pitt, 'Peaking At Right Time'

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Unless they're surprise winners in the Big East playoffs, the season is just about over for the Pitt Panthers. For the Georgetown Hoyas, however, it's just getting started.

"Georgetown is peaking at the right time," said Pitt Coach Roy Chipman after a 70-46 loss to the nation's second-ranked college basketball team Tuesday night. "It will take a great team to beat them."

Making their annual February run, the defending national champions notched their sixth straight victory this month. In the last six years, Georgetown's February record is a slick 41-6.

"This is February and all of Coach (John) Thompson's teams play in February," said center Patrick Ewing, who led the Hoyas with 16 points and nine blocked shots. "We're playing better, the offense is better and we're hitting the break better. Everything is starting to click."

In the only other game Tuesday night involving a ranked team, No. 8 Georgia Tech tripped Maryland 48-43.

Ewing dominated both ends of the court while joining Eric "Sleepy" Floyd as a 2,000-point career scorer. With 2,007 points for his career, the 7-foot center now is the second-leading scorer in Big East history, trailing only St. John's Chris Mullin.

The Hoyas took control early in the contest at Landover, Md., scoring the game's first 13 points as the visitors missed seven shots and turned the ball over four times on their first nine possessions.

Despite the wire-to-wire triumph, Thompson still gave his players a chewing-out in the locker room after the game because of some "lapses."

"You're looking for a level of perfection now as the tournament gets closer," Thompson said. "We cannot afford mental lapses."

If there were any mistakes made by the Hoyas, they were not noticed by Chipman. He was too busy watching Ewing.

"He is an awesome presence," Chipman said. "He is the greatest defensive player I have ever seen. We seemed to be looking for him every time we went to the basket."

Bruce Dalrymple and Scott Petway each sank two free throws in the final 12 seconds as Georgia Tech trimmed Maryland at Atlanta and denied Terp Coach Lefty Driesell his 500th coaching victory.

It was the fourth loss in a row for Maryland, which returns home Thursday night to face Towson State in Driesell's fifth shot at becoming the 17th coach in the NCAA's Division I to win 500 games.

Dalrymple hit his free throws with 12 seconds remaining to give Tech a 46-43 lead and, after Maryland failed to score, Petway hit two more with only two seconds to play.

"Going after win number 500 is not weighing on my mind at all," Driesell said. "If it was, I'd be insane by now. The players aren't concerned about that, either. Hopefully, we can regroup and go out and win our next one."

The Terps blew a seven-point lead in the final 11 minutes and Tech almost lost an eight-point advantage in the final 4:06, but Maryland never got closer than one the rest of the way.

"I thought we played about as well as we can play," Driesell said. "This is just like our last four losses. We are close, but we just can't get over the hump."

Others

In other action, Tim O'Toole scored eight of his 21 points in the second overtime period as Fairfield rallied from a 20-point deficit to defeat La Salle 106-105 in a Metro Atlantic Conference game in the opener of a doubleheader at the Spectrum in Philadelphia. A free throw by O'Toole with 23 seconds left gave the Stags a 106-103.

In the nightcap, Dwayne McClain scored 18 points, including a three-point play with two seconds left, to give Villanova a 47-44 victory over St. Joseph's. Villanova's victory snapped a three-game losing streak that had knocked the Wildcats out of the Top Twenty.

Chris Hardin scored four of his 18 points in overtime to help McNeese State beat Lamar 72-68 in a Southland Conference game at Lake Charles, La. McNeese outscored Lamar 10-6 in the extra period but really won the game at the foul line, where an 11-for-11 performance in the second half sparked a Cowboy comeback. Overall, McNeese converted 18 of 21 shots from the foul line. Lamar hit just three of eight free throws in the second half to finish at 10 for 17 for the game.

Steve Mitchell scored 21 points, including two game-winning free throws with two seconds left, as Alabama-Birmingham defeated South Florida 62-61 in Sun Belt Conference basketball at Birmingham. Junior Jerome Mincy scored 13 points and pulled down nine rebounds to set a UAB career rebound record of 588.

Malcolm Thomas scored 27 points and pulled down eight rebounds to lead the Missouri Tigers to a 78-74 Big Eight Conference victory over Oklahoma State. About the only bright spot for Oklahoma State in the first half was when reserve forward Terry Faggins hit a 60-foot shot at the buzzer to pull the Cowboys within 39-31 at intermission.

Washburn's Situation Reflects On State Of College Athletics

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

When Chris Washburn took his 470 Scholastic Aptitude Test score — 70 points above the minimum — and went shopping for a college, he found plenty of schools only too willing to accommodate a 6-foot-11-inch student who could do the wonderful things he does with a basketball.

Sometimes the system, anxious to cash in on an athlete's abilities, thrusts him into a life situation with which he is simply not equipped to deal.

Washburn's difficulties at North Carolina State are an indictment not so much of the young man as they are of our national fascination with collegiate athletic excellence. And perhaps, in a way, they are even something of an endorsement of the occasionally fanatical academic demands of a coach like Bobby Knight.

It seems there ought to be a middle ground between the two extremes. You shouldn't have to be a bookworm to be allowed to play a collegiate sport, but you ought to, at least, meet minimal standards.

The NCAA has said a 2.0 high school average is enough for admission. Washburn achieved that qualification. But in the fall of 1986, that standard will be expanded to define just how the 2.0 was achieved. Proficiency in core curriculum subjects like math and English, as well as a score of 700 on the SAT — 230 more than Washburn managed — or 15 on the ACT, a similar college entrance exam, will be required.

Those standards, which would have kept Washburn out of NC State and circumstances he was unable to handle, have been the subject of great debate among educators. The debate should concern itself not with the standards, but instead with why it has taken so long to establish them.

Pitt's Legislators Introduce Measure Prohibiting Coercion

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has ordered state law-enforcement employees to steer clear of politics and two state House members have independently filed legislation to protect state employees from political coercion.

Martin said law enforcement officers should not be politically active even when off duty because they "are full-time representatives of all the people" and should do nothing that would "impair their ability to perform their duties in a competent, fair and impartial manner."

"It is essential that these officers be viewed by all the people of the state as being completely free of personal or political bias when enforcing the laws," Martin said Tuesday in a prepared statement.

Martin's guidelines affect employees of the Highway Patrol, Alcohol Law Enforcement division of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, and the Division of Motor Vehicles' License, Theft and Weight Enforcement Section under the Department of Transportation.

The guidelines also bar law enforcement agents from asking people other than their superiors to help them get promotion, transfer or other preferential treatment.

Pitt County Democrats Ed Warren and Walter Jones co-sponsored a bill that would levy a $5,000 fine against officials or legislators who reward or punish government employees for their political activities.

"We felt the time had come to address the problem," said Warren, although he said he knew of no specific cases of coercion.

Martin, who complained during last year's campaign that some of his Democratic supporters in state government were being harassed, will likely support the bill, said spokesman Joe Harris.

In other legislative action:

A legislative subcommittee looking at day-care standards met resistance from operators who fear higher standards will put child care out of the financial reach of average parents.

"If this passes, most day-care centers would eliminate infant care," said Cathie Lancaster of Smithfield, a spokeswoman for the Coalition of Day Care Professionals. "We want what our parents can afford."

The day-care subcommittee, created from the Senate Committee on Children and Youth, met for the first time to consider a bill introduced by Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland. The bill seeks tougher nutrition requirements, fewer children per staff member, better training for staff members at day-care centers and a maximum group size for centers.

Mrs. Lancaster, joined by more than a dozen coalition members, said her group opposes requiring more staff members but not the training requirements.

"You've heard that North Carolina day-care centers keep more children than any other state," she said. "This is because people can afford it. Quality of care, not quantity, is what's important."

A legislative commission on day care found North Carolina leads the nation in the number of children under age 1 that each day-care staffer serves.

Susan Law, president of the North Carolina Day Care Association, said her group endorses the package before the committee.

An attempt to limit smoking in the Senate chambers for the sake of "decorum" rattled members of the Senate Rules Committee before being shuffled out.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, suggested smoking be banned for the first hour of each Senate session, saying, "There needs to be a certain amount of decorum for the Senate."

Rauch said that until eight years ago both smoking and eating had been prohibited during the first hour.

Then Lieutenant Governor Jimmy Green, with his tobacco connections, took office and we were happy to change that," he said.

Senate Majority Leader Ken Royall, D-Durham, quickly moved to keep the rule as it stands and Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, agreed.

"With the trouble tobacco farmers are having at this day and time, I don't think the Senate should be giving any negative publicity to tobacco," Warren said.

Rauch, commenting after the committee adopted its 1985 rules, said he had not intended to take a stand against tobacco.

"I oppose tobacco, but the motion was a matter of decorum for the Senate," he said. "I can see what Senator Warren said, that it might be considered a negative stroke at their (tobacco growers') livelihood. But we don't allow smoking in the galleries. I guess really I'm a formal person."

Rauch said he had no objections to lawmakers dipping snuff or chewing tobacco "because you can't see that."

The House Judiciary I Committee approved and sent to the House a bill to give cotenants of lock boxes access to life insurance policies sooner.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, said current law requires that a widow wait for the Department of Revenue to approve the release of the policies — sometimes causing a wait of up to six weeks "when they need the money the most."

Divorce

Several options were offered in the House Judiciary I Committee to streamline divorce proceedings by eliminating mandatory jury trials in some instances.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, told the panel current law presumes any allegations concerning a divorce are denied and requires a jury trial if either party demands one "even if there is nothing for a jury to decide."

Hackney proposed to direct the judge to determine whether a jury trial is warranted. Otherwise, the judge could enter a summary judgment based on testimony from both parties.

The Senate unanimously approved a House bill paving the way for Duplin and Wayne county developers to build what Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, called the "world's largest turkey processing plant" in Warsaw. Hardison said the bill was needed to make sure the plant qualified for federal Urban Development Action Grants.

The plant is expected to employ more than 1,000 people.

Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, filed a resolution urging Congress to approve quickly the interstate cost estimate made by Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

The resolution notes that congressional approval of the plan is needed for the U.S. Department of Transportation to allocate interstate money.

Divisions within Congress over the past two years has delayed the money and led lawmakers to approve the estimate on an interim basis in 1984.

The delay "has resulted in severe adverse impacts on highway users, citizens, businesses, and industries by bringing to a halt further construction of highway improvements," says the resolution.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham told the House Agriculture Committee that he would be open to any suggestions on how the state can help tobacco farmers who may lose their allotments under tobacco program changes proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

That's strictly a federal program run by USDA, but we're in constant contact with them," Graham said. "I think we'd take a look at anything the state could do to help our small tobacco farmers."

Graham, appearing at the first meeting of the committee, said he believed the Agriculture Department's budget "is one you can live with."

Graham presented an outline of the proposed expansion budget, which calls for $11 million to be spent over the next two years on projects ranging from expanding museum programs to adding personnel in crop and livestock areas.

The House Education Committee will operate with six subcommittees this session to handle issues ranging from a proposed statewide basic education program to salary increases and a career ladder for teachers.

Chairman Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Forsyth, Tuesday appointed Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, to chair the subcommittee on curriculum and personnel; Rep. Caspar Holroyd, D-Wake, will chair the education policy subcommittee; Rep. George Brannan, D-Johnston, will chair the governance subcommittee; Rep. Aaron Fussell, D-Wake, will take the school law subcommittee; Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, will chair the finance subcommittee and Rep. J. Paul Tyndall, D-Onslow, takes over the vocational education subcommittee.

Getting Together

Valdese Firm Makes Monitors That Make Sure Robots Are Doing Jobs

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer
VALDESE, N.C. (AP) — Machines designed to make sure robots move properly are being applied to everything from golf swings to space stations, says the president of a Valdese company that makes the devices.

"There are hundreds of applications," said George Squillario, 67, president of Selcom Inc. "We've had to discipline ourselves, there are so many things they could do."

The Selspot II provides precise measurements of motion through light-emitting diodes placed on the object that flash at 350 times per second. Cameras aimed at the LEDs record the motion in three dimensions and send the data to a computer, which provides a printout or screen image of the movement.

Another Selcom machine, called the Optocator, measures motion by bouncing a laser beam from the object onto a sensor that detects the distance the beam has traveled. The device can measure changes in thickness to within 80 millionths of an inch.

The Selspot is being used in hospitals for gait rehabilitation for cerebral palsy victims and other patients, jaw therapy and sports medicine applications. A tennis college has bought one to check motion in tennis, volleyball, shotput and other sports. And the U.S. Navy has acquired one to measure how heavy seas deform ship hulls.

"They say those things twist like hell," Squillario said. "It can affect your gun accuracy."

NASA is using Selspots to test the vibrations and movement of prototype space stations, capsules and bodies inside space suits, he said. The European satellite program is using one to measure movements of a capsule that must be blown apart to deliver a satellite.

The auto industry — and related industries like rubber and steel — are also using Selspots and Optocators to make sure robots work accurately and to maintain the proper thicknesses of materials. Some companies require robot "footprints" that show how the robot moves before it is installed.

"Everyone is pitching American now, emphasizing quality and productivity," said Squillario. "We're closing the loop in the manufacturing process. ... Now we can make it completely automatic ... measure machinery while it is working and correct it."

Selspots can actually "teach" robots the correct movements so a human does not have to program them, he said. One possibility, not yet in practice, is to have a Selspot record the movements of an expert human painter, for example, then teach the motions to a robot.

Foundries use Optocators to pour an exact amount of molten steel into a mold. Squillario said the device saves about 15 percent of the steel, which formerly was poured so the mold overflowed.

In addition, the auto industry is using Selspots in crash tests to map the movement of dummies and auto parts during simulated wrecks.

Selcom has sold more than 100 Selspots at a basic price of $75,000 each and more than 500 Optocators at a basic price of $12,000 each, Squillario said. Most of Selcom's competition comes from companies marketing high-speed films to detect movement. But he said his company's equipment is faster and more accurate than film or video.

The Selspot was developed by a Swedish inventor in the early 1970s and sold to Rang Invest of Sweden, which still owns 94 percent of the company. The device was sold in the United States by a joint venture with the Valdese textile firm Squillario worked for. In 1979, Selcom was formed separately with Squillario, who quit his textile post at age 62, as president. In 1983, Selcom Inc. became the parent firm of Selcom operations in Sweden and Germany.

The U.S. portion of the firm has grown from two to 14 employees, and sales are about $5 million a year. Most of the group's total 60 employees — 30 percent of whom are in research and development — are in Sweden, where most of the research and manufacturing is done.

But Squillario said the long-range plan is to bring most of the research and manufacturing to Valdese.

"There's no reason to move to California," he said. "It's easy to get people to come to a small town these days. We've got a very good labor pool and travel to the Charlotte airport is only about one-and-a-quarter hours."

Valdese, about 60 miles northeast of Charlotte, was founded by Italian Protestants in the late 1800s.

Squillario said Selcom eventually would sell stock as it opens offices "wherever the customers are." There's already a Selcom office in Detroit.

The biggest need right now is to find computer software experts who can apply the technology to different fields so the raw data can be put to us, he said.

For example, the device can be used to measure motion in bridges, but no one has come up with a program yet to determine what specific movements might mean for the safety of a bridge.

"This is just the beginning for us," he said. "We're not that big yet, but we like to think we're innovative and growing."

ROBOT MONITOR — George Squillario, president of Selcom Inc., explains a company device that monitors the motion of robots, golf swings, space stations and other applications. In effect, the monitor makes sure that robots are doing their jobs properly. (AP Laserphoto)

Ramsey Backs Measure To Limit Governor's Term

RALEIGH (AP) — Governors should not be allowed to serve consecutive terms because it lets their appointed bureaucrats get too powerful, says House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

"Any good bureaucrat, when he gets to the top, will try outdo the others, get more money, build bigger organizations," Ramsey said Tuesday. "They learn tricks of the trade, such as using lapsed salaries to add people to the payroll."

Ramsey endorsed a bill introduced by Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, that urges repeal the 1977 constitutional amendment letting governors and lieutenant governors seek re-election to second four-year terms.

Wicker's bill would return the state to the old system of one four-year term for governors. Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, filed a bill Tuesday favoring a single six-year term.

Because both the Hardison and Wicker bills call for constitutional amendments, either would have to be supported by 60 percent of the House and Senate membership and a majority of those voting in a referendum.

Both would schedule the referendum for the November 1986 election.

"Everywhere I go, people ask me if we're ever going to give them another chance to vote on that thing," said Hardison.

The Hardison and Wicker bills would allow Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan to seek re-election in 1988. Under the Wicker bill, the amendment wouldn't take effect until the 1992 election. But Hardison's amendment would take effect in 1988, meaning that Martin and Jordan could end up serving 10 consecutive years.

Even so, Martin opposes changing the system, said press secretary Tim Pittman.

"Philosophically, he supports the idea of a governor being able to seek two terms," said Pittman. "He believes it strengthens the office in a state that doesn't have veto power."

Wicker disagreed, saying four years is enough time for an effective governor to implement his program.

"I feel that eight years is just too long for one person to serve as head of the executive branch," said Wicker.

Succession, which was approved in a 1977 referendum, is unpopular in the Legislature. Lawmakers have complained that it slowed to a crawl the normal leadership turnover.

'Hollywood Wives' Falls Short In Debut

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The failure of "Hollywood Wives" to ring up blockbuster ratings shows that future miniseries may have to offer more than mere sex, sin and scandal to attract the discriminating viewer faced with a potpourri of choices, network officials say.

"These things go in cycles," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement. "But the one thing that goes through my mind is that sexy type films, like 'Hollywood Wives,' are the kind that are on all the time on pay-cable."

Eisenberg added that "the excellent miniseries will continue to do well, but not that many people will make a commitment to mediocre shows. People are more selective and have more alternatives to be selective with."

"Hollywood Wives," ABC's lavishly trashy miniseries about some of Hollywood's beautiful people, performed solidly, finishing as the week's No. 7 show, but it did not live up to many expectations and could not prevent the third-rated network from another last-place finish.

The first installment of "Hollywood Wives" had a 22.0 rating and a 33 share on Sunday night, according to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

CBS, which won Sunday (with its regular series) and four other nights, was the top-rated network for the week of Feb. 11-17 with an average prime-time rating of 18.2. NBC, with "The Cosby Show" No. 1 for the third consecutive week, was second with a 16.2. ABC had a 15.3.

With nine weeks left in the 30-week prime-time season, the ratings are: CBS-17.2, NBC-16.3 and ABC-15.6.

CBS estimates that ABC would have to beat NBC by an average of 1.6 rating points a week to tie NBC, while NBC would have to beat CBS by an average of 2.1 rating points a week to tie CBS.

One rating point equals 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes. A share measures, on average, the percentage of sets turned on that are tuned to a particular network.

In ABC's bid to prevent its only third-place finish in a decade, the network has scheduled several special-event programs, but none was more highly touted than "Hollywood Wives."

"We forecast it would get a 40 share," said Eisenberg. "It's certainly not going to do that, and that's got to hurt."

Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects, said he forecast that "Hollywood Wives" would attract 37 percent (share) of the viewing audience, and "it must be a tremendous disappointment for them."

"The levels are not very much off what we had hoped," said Marvin Mord, ABC's vice president for marketing and research. "We were not as optimistic as the other networks. We were looking for levels in the mid-30s, slightly higher than what we got. But remember, that was in a very competitive time period, and 'Hollywood Wives' was still the leader by a significant amount."

NBC's Sunday movie, "Hitler's SS: A Portrait in Evil," ranked 39th for the week, while CBS' "Crazy Like a Fox" and "Trapper John, M.D.," finished 28th and 38th, respectively.

"It's unlikely that miniseries like this will perform at the 40-share level, considering the tough competition on Sunday and Monday," said Mord. Besides the network competition, "Terms of Endearment" had its first pay-cable exposure on Showtime on Sunday.

CBS, exhibiting series strength throughout the week, had top-10 shows on Sunday (No. 4 "60 Minutes"), Monday (No. 8 "Kate & Allie"), Thursday (No. 6 "Simon & Simon"), and Friday (No. 2 "Dallas"), as well as a No. 10 ranking for the second part of the "Atlanta Child Murders" last Tuesday.

ABC had two top-ten shows: "Dynasty" was fifth and "Hollywood Wives," seventh.

NBC's power was concentrated in its Thursday night lineup. "The Cosby Show" was No. 1, "Family Ties" was No. 3 and "Cheers" was ninth. "Cheers" was a repeat episode that showcased Nick Colasanto's Coach character. Colasanto died of a heart attack last week.

As no surprise to anyone, NBC announced Tuesday that "The Cosby Show," ranked third for the full season, and "Highway to Heaven," rated 23rd, were renewed for next season.

Animal Bequest

ST. HELIER, Channel Islands (AP) — A wealthy woman has left $1.9 million to the Royal Society for the Protection of Animals, according to her will.

Aetheldreda Hadow, widow of local hotelier Maj. Hubert Hadow, was a well-known figure in St. Helier, capital of Jersey on the British-ruled Channel Islands near the French coast.

She died last May and was believed to have been in her 70s, said Albert Able, proprietor of the Royal Hotel in St. Helier, where Mrs. Hadow spent the last six months of her life.

Exercises End

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — U.S. and Panamanian troops have concluded a week of joint military exercises aimed at improving defenses of the Panama Canal.

Some 4,000 American troops and 800 Panamanians participated in the exercises, which took place in an isolated region of southwestern Azuero Peninsula.

The war games, called Kindle Liberty '85, were part of regularly scheduled canal defense exercises, but the first involving American troops held outside U.S. military installations in the canal area.

Judge's Remarks Result In Order For New Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — A Cumberland County woman convicted of second-degree murder will be getting a new trial because of remarks made by a judge during jury selection.

The new trial was ordered Tuesday by the state Court of Appeals, which said remarks made at the bench by Superior Court Judge Samuel Britt were overheard by two jurors and were prejudicial to the case of Ann Majors.

Ms. Majors was convicted in November 1983 of stabbing her boyfriend through the heart with a kitchen knife.

During jury selection, Britt pointed out that the defense attorney had excused five white prospective jurors and said "the court didn't know what in the hell (defense counsel) was doing," the ruling said.

Two jurors later said they heard the comments and repeated them when questioned in front of other jurors who had not heard the remarks. Britt instructed the jury to disregard his comments.

In a majority opinion, the appeals court ruled the remarks were prejudicial since they seemed to reflect on the abilities of the defense attorney or questioned the defense tactics.

Appeals Court Judge Robert M. Martin, in a dissenting opinion, said he believed the remarks were an error, but did not prejudice the jury.

In other rulings, the court said a "factual dispute" exists between Sperry Corporation and former Administration Secretary Jane Patterson over whether Mrs. Patterson exceeded her authority in bidding for computers.

The court upheld decisions by Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey in March 1984 not to issue an injunction halting sales of computers by IBM to the state and dismissing one section of the suit claiming the state used unfair trade practices. Bailey also refused a defense request to dismiss sections of the suit dealing with alleged unfair bid specifications and asking for the contracts with IBM to be set aside.

The appeals court said the state is not included in laws dealing with unfair trade practices, but said the suit should proceed with questions about Mrs. Patterson's drafting of bid specifications. Sperry has charged those specifications favored IBM over all other companies bidding.

The court also ruled Tuesday that Union National Bank is liable for certificates of deposits it cashed, even though it knew the certificates were being held by the State Bureau of Investigation as part of an embezzlement investigation.

The ruling showed that an employee of Champion International purchased three certificates totaling $60,942.41 using money embezzled from the company.

A bank employee acknowledged that the bank knew in August that the certificates had been seized by the SBI. But the bank cashed all three certificates between August and November 1980 after the former Champion employee signed a lost certificate bond.

Teachers, Take Newspapers Back To School

National Newspaper in Education (NIE) Week is coming March 4-8, 1985. The Newspaper in Education program encourages the use of newspapers for a variety of educational purposes. National NIE Week emphasizes the importance of reading and writing and is a cooperative effort of the International Reading Association and newspapers.

Teachers, use ads, maps, graphs, and schedules to teach reading and math. Show students how to write news stories, editorials, ads, and reviews. Also have them write letters to the editor and use newspapers to update research projects. Ask them to discuss the judgments that are made in interviews and editorials. Most important, have them read daily to develop the habit of reading and to keep well informed.

Use The Daily Reflector for one or more days each week. To place an order, call Margy Blount at 752-6166 or write her at P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. During NIE Week and throughout the year, classroom sets of newspapers are available at a reduced rate. Each newspaper costs 12¢. Hurry and place your order today, so your students may use The Daily Reflector during NIE Week.

A special edition of the state's Newspaper in Education newsletter, DATELINE NC, is available free of charge. The newsletter features teaching ideas for use during NIE Week. To receive the newsletter, send the coupon below to the N.C. NIE Foundation. Return the coupon before February 24.

Carter Says Human Rights Help Needed

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — As the world's most powerful democracy, the United States is obliged to defend human rights throughout the world, former President Jimmy Carter said.

"Human rights is just another word for democracy and freedom," Carter told an overflow crowd of about 2,700 at Wake Forest University Tuesday. "If the greatest democracy on earth doesn't care about those who suffer, who in God's name will care? The answer is no one."

At a news conference earlier, Carter criticized President Reagan's approach to both human rights and nuclear arms control. He said if Reagan makes no significant foreign policy achievements and doesn't lower the record deficit, "I don't think the Reagan administration will be popular in the last couple of years of his term."

Reagan's commitment to human rights has been disappointing, Carter said. While many American citizens are condemning apartheid in South Africa, he said, "The administration has climbed back into bed with the South African government."

The former president said the United States is the strongest nation on earth militarily, economically and politically. America won't realize its full potential, however, until it becomes a moral and ethical force of equal power, Carter said.

"Government has a responsibility to look at those who are deprived and to find some special compensation — not to pay them for what they have suffered, but to give them a chance to stand on their own feet and make their own decisions."

During his presidency, Carter said, he tried to extend the principles of equality and fairness to foreign nations where governments oppressed their citizens. He said American embassies should be "havens for those who suffered violations of human rights."

Carter told reporters he is distressed by the Reagan administration's approach to nuclear arms negotiations. Since the atomic bomb was developed, every American president has worked to negotiate arms control with the Soviet Union, he said.

"Since President Reagan came into office, this effort was abandoned," he said. "President Reagan has publicly and enthusiastically condemned every single nuclear arms agreement ever reached by any American president."

Yesterday's Cryptquip — HOW DID YOU ENJOY OUR BIG DEMOLITION DERBY LAST NIGHT? "IT WAS JOLLY SMASHING."
Today's Cryptquip clue: K equals C

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

Lost Horizons

Archeologists recently found the remains of a legendary "lost city," called Gran Pajaten, in Peru's Andes Mountains. The terraced fortress of Machu Picchu, to which the Incas fled in 1533, was not found until 1911. The ruins of Pompeii, buried when Mount Vesuvius erupted in 79 A.D., lay under tons of ash until discovered in the 18th century. The remains of Homer's city of Troy were found in 1873, the third deepest of nine strata excavated by an amateur archeologist.

DO YOU KNOW — What civilization flourished in Central America before 900 A.D.?

Opening lead: Queen of ♦.

It is with a sense of personal loss that we report the death of Egmont von Dewitz. For almost half a century, as a member of Germany's national team, he graced the international scene with his wit and charm.

He was known as much for his long cigarette holder as for his twinkling eyes and sense of humor. He would derive more pleasure from swindling someone out of a trick than from a great technical play to land a slam. In the years immediately following World War II, when his family assets were frozen, he was something of a bridge bum. But after he regained his heritage he more than repaid his creditors with his generosity.

This hand is from his country's match against Austria in the 1954 European Championship. Germany was trailing, so "Eggie" blasted into slam on learning that his partner had two aces in the hope that they would be the right two. They were not, but as a result this became one of his favorite hands.

He won the diamond opening lead in hand, crossed to the ace of hearts and led the jack of trumps. Naturally, East ducked, and West saw no reason why he should take the king. Now declarer came back to hand with a club ruff and led a low spade. West thought long before going up with the king and East was not amused as he was forced to capture with his ace. The slam was home with the loss of only one trump trick!

For years, Eggie made great capital of this story. He would describe in vivid detail how East's neck got redder and redder as West thought about his play to the second trump trick, for it was obvious then that he could only be considering whether or not to play the king.

Drug May Help Babies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today approved an intravenous drug that could spare as many as 16,000 premature infants each year from emergency heart surgery.

The drug, approved by the Food and Drug Administration, is an intravenous form of the 20-year-old drug known as indomethacin. It will be marketed by Merck Sharp and Dohme of West Point, Pa., under the trade name Indocin IV.

An anti-inflammatory drug, indomethacin in its new form can close a blood vessel in the heart that is supposed to close automatically at birth but sometimes doesn't, the FDA said.

The blood vessel is necessary for the unborn infant to use the mother's blood before birth. But if it remains open after birth, it circulates oxygenated blood back to the lungs rather than to the rest of the body, straining the infant's heart and lungs.

The condition is life-threatening and calls for emergency heart surgery without the drug therapy. Margaret M. Heckler, secretary of health and human services, said as many as 16,000 premature infants each year may avoid the surgery because of the drug.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young noted that while surgery can correct the condition, the drug "saves the babies from the strain and risks of surgery which may also mean moving the child to another hospital or city."

Intravenous use of the drug is also safer for the infant than oral or rectal forms, the FDA said, because dosage can be controlled more precisely.

War Proves Costly To El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — From attacks on bridges and dams to lost crop production, the five-year-old civil war between leftist rebels and the U.S.-supported government has cost the fragile Salvadoran economy an estimated $1 billion or more.

Sabotage accounts for some of the damage, fear and intimidation the rest.

The rebels' war against the economy is an important part of their long-term strategy: it ties down soldiers protecting targets. They also have shown they can continue to wage it despite a bigger and better-trained army.

The power system and the country's vital agricultural base have become the chief targets.

"I think many of the attacks are perhaps a warning of the damage they can do to nerve centers," said Miguel Sandoval Guerra, a deputy director of the government power monopoly.

"The destruction isn't always that great. In many cases the things that were destroyed or left standing reveal considerable technical knowledge on the part of the guerrilla planners."

An electrical workers' union was declared illegal by the government in 1980, and Sandoval said members who later joined the rebels may have taken considerable knowledge with them.

In 1984, damage from attacks on the system was calculated by the power monopoly at just over $40 million, more than half of which went to pay for diesel fuel to generate electricity while damaged lines from hydroelectric dams were repaired.

Parts of the country have been without energy for more than two years, and the eastern third of the country was blacked out so often the government opened a turbogas plant there last year to make it less dependent on the highly vulnerable power grid.

"There is no way to stop the attacks," Sandoval said in an interview. "Our policy has been to develop a rapid reaction capacity to repair the lines as fast as we can."
