WORKMEN DEMOLISH BUILDING — Workers demolish the old Tucker Building at the intersection of Third and Greene streets, built in 1927 and owned by the county from 1935 until September 1984. The building is

Tucker Building Coming Down

The Tucker Building at the intersection of Third and Greene streets, built in 1927 and owned by the county from 1935 until September 1984, is being demolished.

Planters Bank and Trust Co., which purchased the two-story, 6,654-square-foot building and 14,000-square-foot lot for $105,000 at public auction, is clearing the site to make room for future expansion of the bank's downtown offices.

The Tucker Building was used by the county to house county school board offices and agricultural extension service offices. But the building has been vacant since the new county office building on West Fifth Street was opened in mid-1980.

Commissioners decided to dispose of the property after architects reported that, although the building was structurally sound, costs involved in renovating the space might be prohibitive. Cameron Dudley of Dudley & Shoe Architects said the cost of renovation could be as much as $60 per square foot.

Ray Boleman, Planters' local manager, said "our long-range plans are to construct a new main office facility in Greenville, which hopefully will include some professional office space. The purpose of our acquiring the property was to expand our downtown office facility."

Boleman, saying, "we have a commitment to downtown Greenville," said that although the bank has hired an architectural firm to do preliminary planning, Planters' has no time schedule for the expansion project.

Mob Bosses Caught In New York Sweep

NEW YORK (AP) — The bosses of New York's five major organized crime families and four other reputed mobsters were arrested overnight in a federal sweep, a source close to the case said today.

The announcement of the arrests was scheduled to be made later today at a news conference with FBI Director William Webster, Assistant Attorney General Steven Trott and U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani.

In an announcement of the news conference, Giuliani's office described the suspects as associated with "the Commission of La Cosa Nostra."

The so-called Commission reputedly settles disputes among members of the five New York Mafia families.

Arresting agents found all the suspects they sought, said the law enforcement source, who spoke on the condition that he not be named.

Spokesmen at the offices of Giuliani and the FBI in New York declined to give any details in advance of the news conference.

The indictments, based on a federal anti-racketeering statute, were believed to stem from an investigation by the New York State Organized Crime Task Force.

Investigators planted an electronic surveillance device on a car used regularly by reputed Lucchese family head Antonio Corallo, allowing them to trace Corallo to a "sit-down" of family bosses and to hear him discussing afterward what transpired at the meeting.

One suspect was identified by the New York Post as Paul "Big Paul" Castellano of Staten Island, believed to be boss of the Gambino family, which the federal government says is the largest and most powerful organized crime family in the country.

The Daily News reported that Castellano has been "fingered by his underworld associates" as a leader of the commission. It said his role was to be revealed in the indictments being announced today against the top bosses and underbosses of the five crime families.

The Post said police arrested Anthony Salerno, an alleged leader of the Genovese family and reputed Lucchese boss Corallo, as well as several other top reputed mob figures: Aniello Dellacroce of the Gambino family; Salvatore Santoro and Christopher Furnari of the Lucchese family; and Gennaro Langella and Ralph Scopo of the

Consumer Prices Holding Steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, reflecting an across-the-board moderation, inched up 0.2 percent last month, the government reported today, buttressing analysts' predictions that 1985 will be a fourth straight year of modest inflation.

Gasoline prices were off a sharp 1.4 percent, their steepest decline in six months. Since March 1981, those prices have fallen 15.2 percent.

Food prices rose just 0.2 percent, despite some late-month increases in fresh fruit and vegetable prices stemming from the Florida freeze, which promises to have a more pronounced effect on February's price activity.

The January overall figure compared to a revised 0.3 percent rise in December and a 0.2 percent gain in November.

Inflation for all of 1984 was 4 percent, a slight deterioration from the 3.8 percent performance of 1983 and the culmination of the lowest three-year inflation rate since the late 1960s.

With the exception of the "other goods and services" category, which was up 0.9 percent, all major components of the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index were either unchanged or showed only modest gains last month. A 2.2 percent jump in tobacco prices was largely responsible for the 0.9 percent increase.

Detailing January's price activity, the department reported these seasonally adjusted changes:

—The 3.2 percent increase in fresh

Council Seeking Meeting Over GUC's Power Line

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council in special call session Monday agreed to seek a meeting with Greenville Utilities representatives on a GUC plan to construct a transmission line along railroad property running through the Brook Valley neighborhood.

Saying they had received numerous "emotional" calls and communications on the issue, council members said they would like to meet with GUC officials so they could better understand the proposal. "The council just really needs to know more information so they can respond to these questions," City Manager Gail Meeks explained.

Mrs. Meeks said this morning she had contacted utilities officials and notified them of the council's request to hold a workshop on the proposal before the commission makes its final decision on the project.

The commission tonight in workshop session will consider a motion to reconsider routing of the proposed transmission line and will review bids received on transmission line materials. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor board room of the Utilities Building, located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

According to GUC reports, the 115,000-volt proposed overhead transmission line is slated for location on Norfolk Southern property and will connect the Eastside substation, located near the intersection of 14th Street and Greenville Boulevard, to the new Simpson substation, located approximately one mile east of Brook Valley. The cost of establishing an overhead

Poor Planning On Cut-Over Forests May Turn Area Into 'Green Junk'

Last of a series

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

When a forester or a conservationist says "green junk," he's not talking about the film that covers stagnant ponds. He's not talking about cash either.

"Green junk" is what grows, or "volunteers" when a forest is logged and neither reforested nor converted to other uses. Green junk is just one of the reasons a landowner should reforest after cutting timber, according to David Harrison, former soil conservationist for Pitt County.

"Green junk is a problem both to the landowner and the timber industry," Harrison said. "It occurs when landowners cut timber and then they let the land grow back up in whatever is there. They will not have any timber worth anything when it grows back."

Despite the loss of resources and revenue that occurs when a logged tract of land is allowed to volunteer its way back to a forest, that's what many area landowners do, Harrison said. But "there are too many benefits to reforestation" to "do nothing with the land," he added.

After a forest is logged, Harrison said, a landowner has several options about what to do with the land. It can be converted to cropland, residential land, or be kept as forest, whichever is the most suitable, he said, and the Pitt Soil Conservation Service has information that can help the landowner make the best decision.

"The biggest service the SCS can provide a landowner comes in identifying the soils on the land and identifying which are good for what purpose," Harrison said. "The SCS is doing a progressive soil survey in every county in North Carolina, and here we have already completed the Pitt County Soil Survey, which is available to the public at the SCS Office."

The soil survey identifies the soil types of all land in the county, he said. It also gives estimated crop yields for the soil types and contains a table on woodland productivity. By doing some research with the survey, Harrison said a landowner can find what to expect from his field or forest and make an informed decision on its use. "The survey can inform an owner about the potential of his land in terms of soil types and their problems," he said.

The SCS's main interest in forestry is in erosion control, Harrison said. "We feel the forest adds to the diversity of the farm, increases wildlife values, helps control erosion, provides windbreaks and prevents wind erosion," he said. "Our interest goes back to why we (SCS) were created to begin with — to control erosion and eliminate washouts. The interest returns to the concept of each piece of land being used to its best abilities."

He admitted the SCS would like to see land "go back to trees" in many instances. "Some land is not suited for farmland, and we'd like to see it go back to trees or grasses for pasture," he said.

Harrison said landowners considering converting logged land to cropland must consider the actual cost of converting the land. "He (the landowner) must figure in the cost of drainage tile, labor, etc., and compare it to the expected productivity in terms of crops," he said. "He must consider whether he actually needs the land for farming." Finally, a landowner must compare the return on crops versus the return on trees, Harrison added.

"In Pitt County we have a lot of soil that's good cropland but much of that is already being used as cropland," Harrison said. "We have a limited amount of soil that is actually superior for development in terms of real estate. We do have a

In The Area

Armed Robbery

Greenville police are investigating an armed robbery at the Medical Pavilion on West Fifth Street that was reported about 8 p.m. Monday.

Officer C.R. Anderson said Glenda Lee Heath of Route 1, Farmville, and Janice Craft of Farmville were approached by a man armed with a pistol as they walked to their car in the parking lot.

The robber, Anderson said, took Ms. Heath's purse containing $80 in cash, as well as Ms. Craft's pocket-book, which contained about $10 in cash.

Fugitive Warrant

Greenville police have arrested Steven Braswell, 29, of 101 Terrace Court on a fugitive from justice warrant, Detective C.E. Weatherington said today.

According to Weatherington, Braswell is wanted by New York authorities for violating his parole from a New York prison where he was serving a sentence on larceny and falsifying financial records charges.

Braswell was taken into custody Friday.

Thefts Probed

Three thefts reported Monday are under investigation by Greenville police.

Officer J.C. Mulford said an air conditioning unit valued at $1,000 and a portable electric generator valued at $500 were taken from a storage shed at Azalea Mobile Homes in a break-in reported at 9:13 a.m.

Officer J.E. Fleming said a coat, several cassette tapes and a tape case were taken from a car parked at 9 Quail Ridge in an incident reported at noon.

According to Officer J.M. Jones, a turntable, watch and N.C. State University class ring were taken from 505 Pine St. in a break-in reported at 12:05 p.m.

Sasser-Carter Wedding Vows Spoken Saturday

Elizabeth Bailey Carter and Steven Russell Sasser were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Beaufort. The Rev. George Muir performed the single ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George William Carter of Beaufort, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Frances Sasser Salt of La Grange and the late John Robert Sasser. Bill Sasser of Goldsboro was best man for his cousin.

Mrs. Len Gilstrap of Weldson was matron of honor and Jean Carter of Beaufort was maid of honor for their sister. Bridesmaids included Carol Hooper and Mary Leigh Uzzell of Greenville and Cecelia Parker of Kinston.

Warren Brothers of La Grange, Eddy Myers of Snow Hill, George Carter Jr., brother of the bride, Roy Mitchell and Charles Ward, all of Raleigh, were ushers.

Felecia Phillips was acolyte. A program of organ music was presented by Dorothy Porter.

The bride wore a floor length gown of ivory bridal satin featuring a cathedral train edged with re-embroidered alencon lace and schiffli embroidery. The fitted alencon lace bodice, worn slightly off-shoulder, was outlined with scalloped schiffli embroidery extending to the satin Juliet puffed sleeves. Her veil of silk illusion fell fingertip length and was attached to a cloche of satin and lace. She carried a bouquet of white phalaenopsis orchids, sonia roses and freesia.

Each of the attendants wore a floor length gown of ivory moire taffeta with a modified sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves. Each carried a bouquet of peach gerbera daisies, sonia roses and freesia.

A reception followed at the Beaufort House on the boardwalk.

The couple will live in La Grange after a cruise to the Caribbean.

The bride is a graduate of the East

MRS. SASSER

Carolina University School of Nursing and is a registered nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is vice president of Sasser Lumber Co. in La Grange.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Josiah Bell House given by friends. A rehearsal dinner was held at the Channel Marker Restaurant in Atlantic Beach and was given by the mother of the bridegroom. The couple was also honored at a barbecue and a dance prior to the wedding. The bride was also given a lingerie shower and a bridesmaids luncheon.

Family Gardening: Questions And Answers

Q. I'm about to order my seeds. Do you have any advice on getting crops to harvest sooner?

S.P., Mansfield, Ohio.

A. First off, look for "days to maturity" in the catalogs, or on seed packets themselves. Count the days between final spring frost and first fall frost for your area, so you'll be able to grow the faster-growing varieties. Also select cold-tolerant varieties, when that feature is specified, if you've got a short growing season.

In many areas it's short but hot and dry, so heat-tolerant is helpful, too. You can start seeds indoors in small flats to get a real jump on spring. I transplant most vegetables at least twice, to encourage the strongest possible root system. This will anchor my young plants quicker, and bring them sooner to the fruiting stage.

Concentrate on spinach, onion sets, kale, lettuce, the crops that do real well even in cold and wet conditions of spring. You can of course buy your already-started plants to set out in your garden. The cabbage family plants — broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, etc. — will do real well in cold spring weather, so they can go in early.

Protecting your earliest transplants with collars and other simple devices will also trap heat and sun for more vigorous and rapid early growth.

Q. I'm getting tired of the same old vegetables. How about some fun things to grow?

F.B., New Windsor, Md.

A. Have you heard of the bath sponge that grows in the garden? It's called the Luffa Sponge Squash. It grows just like summer squash, only when it's mature you peel off the skin — which has grown into a thin but brittle outside shell — and then shake out the seeds. The membrane inside is a very flexible and smooth sponge, used over the ages as a scrubber for dishes but fine enough for the skin.

I get a big kick out of growing some cukes in bottles, pickling them when grown full-sized and up to limits of the bottle, and giving them to friends. I just slip a bottle with about a one-inch neck over a tiny developing cucumber. The cuke will grow big right inside, but you must pick it before it squashes itself up against the bottle. Folks can never figure out how that big dill pickle got inside! You just slice it into chunks with a knife and spear to remove them.

Kohlrabi is fun to grow, and not too many gardeners do. I call them the "spatniks" of the garden, with their branches and leaves flying out from the above-ground bulb in all directions. I eat them raw like apples. The taste is close to a cabbage (to which they are related) but sweeter. They're good fresh-grated into slaws and salads, or sliced thin and served with dips.

Also, don't forget to autograph your pumpkins! If you have youngsters around, this is a must.

Pro Forma Thank-You Note Gets Responses Pro And Con

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed "Appalled" sent you the form thank-you note, and you ran it, saying that you, too, were appalled.

Abby, have you lost your sense of humor? That photocopied thank-you letter had me in stitches! And in case you didn't realize it, it was supposed to be a gag!

Why should anybody be offended? The givers received a "thank you" for their wedding gift, although it was not in the traditional stuffy style to which they were accustomed.

You will probably find this letter equally appalling and toss it in the trash, but at least I've had my say.

Paul Bocuse Famed As Master Of Culinary Art

By TOM HOGE
 AP Wine and Food Writer

I lunched recently with one of France's most distinguished sons, Paul Bocuse, the world-famous chef whose record is an enviable one.

Bocuse was the first French chef to win the Legion of Honor, France's highest civilian award. Now he has been named by the French Academy as an exemplar of French cooking, which it ranks as a fine art, along with music and literature.

There is nothing pretentious about Bocuse. When I first interviewed him in New York several years ago, we lunched at his request at a hamburger eatery. The open delight with which he downed the meat patty fascinated me.

My recent interview took place at one of New York's finest French restaurants. Bocuse consumed an exquisite gourmet meal with the same gusto.

"I like good food," he observed, "wherever it is served."

Bocuse travels all over the world in a constant search for new dishes to add to his cuisine. He also keeps watch for fine wine and spirits to accompany his meals.

"In my travels," he said, "I have observed that French cognac has become increasingly well known throughout the world, even in such distant lands as Japan."

Bocuse won the French Chef of the Year award in 1961. By 1965, he had won three stars in the prestigious Michelin Guide.

His restaurant near Lyons is a gathering spot for France's top actors, musicians and many political leaders.

Bocuse also likes simple dishes such as this recipe for Shepherd's Pie.

2 1/4 pounds of mature potatoes, peeled
 1 1/2 cups milk
 1 egg
 1 cup grated Swiss cheese
 Salt and pepper to taste
 Pinch of nutmeg
 1 heaping cup leftover cooked meat or poultry, chopped
 2 medium-size onions, peeled and chopped

Editorials

Elusive Goal

Greenville's growth and changing residential and commercial patterns are reflected in plans for new fire/rescue station construction.

City officials say that the Gardner Fire/Rescue Station, now on Brownlea Drive, will be moved to a new station to be constructed at Arlington Boulevard and Charles Boulevard. Plans are also under way to build a new main fire/rescue station on West Fifth Street which will replace the one at Fifth and Greene streets.

Officials say that both the Gardner station and the main station are too small to accommodate the men, equipment and training necessary to serve the city.

The Gardner station was built in the late 1960s and it contains only 1,300 square feet of space. In addition, the city officials say that Greenville's growth has shifted more to the southeast since the station was built.

It is clear that improved facilities are needed for both stations. We can't forget, however, that with three fire/rescue stations, all have been moved over a period of time. (The Memorial Drive station was once located on Chestnut Street). We suppose that is the price we pay for growth and shifting population and business areas, but it surely seems to make the placement of fire/rescue stations an elusive goal.

Change Likely

It's quite probable we're going to see a repeal of that constitutional amendment permitting North Carolina governors and lieutenant governors to seek second terms.

We have heard no voices raised to continue the practice ... other than a sort of early consensus Jim Martin and Bob Jordan should have their chances to run one more time. Both sought election thinking that opportunity was open to them, and the element of "fair play" becomes involved.

Gov. Jim Hunt had personal reasons for wanting his second term: it would provide a launching pad for the contemplated bid for the U.S. Senate seat, though that aspect was more of a tacit understanding within the public at large than an avowed reason for the amendment. Gov. Hunt could and did point to some unfinished business he would like to accomplish in his second term.

The experience did not encourage retention of the two-term rule. Lt. Gov. Jordan agrees a second term gives a governor more time to present programs and follow through on them; but he also reminds it tends to put a stopper on upward mobility within the Legislature. Some people who might consider staying in government might not do so because of the brake on advancement.

Other observers blame the experience for the large field of Democrat Party candidates seeking the gubernatorial nomination last year. It contributed a divisive quality within the party.

Speaker Liston Ramsey added another objection, saying a two-term role lets appointed bureaucrats build up their power structure. That bothers him; and it should concern all who prefer to see governmental power firmly in the hands of elected office holders. So there's a number of sound objections to the second term privilege among the most powerful men serving in Raleigh.

Under such weighty opinion, a return to the single term rule appears almost inevitable.

Conflict Coming To An End

WASHINGTON — Two years of underground ideological and personal conflict will climax when chief of staff Donald T. Regan decides whether to keep the public liaison office's present connection to the right by putting it under newly appointed communications director Patrick J. Buchanan.

That is more important than which woman (and it will be a woman) replaces Faith Whittlesey in the public liaison job that is being downgraded from the highest staff level. Buchanan surely would continue Ms. Whittlesey's two years of building support for anti-Communist policies in Central America and reaching out to anti-abortionists and other social conservatives. Under somebody else, the office likely would revert to pre-Whittlesey ideological neutrality.

But describing that choice hardly does justice to the passion over a small, obscure office. The question of what follows Faith uncovers disputes raging beneath the Republican Party's superficial conservative harmony: orthodox Republicans vs. social issues, pragmatists vs. ideologues, old Reaganites vs. New Rightists.

That contrasts with the first nine tranquil years of the office created by President Gerald R. Ford as a link to outside organizations. Nor was an explosion expected when Elizabeth Dole, upon becoming secretary of Transportation in 1983, was replaced by the ambassador to Switzerland: Faith Ryan Whittlesey, a former Pennsylvania state legislator who had been criticized for playing down social issues while running for lieutenant governor.

But she quickly became battering ram for the right and hairshirt for Chief of Staff James A. Baker III. She hewed to a conservative agenda rather than Baker's marching orders. White House leaks accusing her of incompetency failed to provoke her resignation. Frank Donatelli, a prominent Republican political operative, was brought in nominally as her deputy but actually was Jim Baker's eyes and ears.

That began the Whittlesey-Donatelli war of attrition, reflecting hidden Republican tensions. Mutual hostility was unspoken. Donatelli, a conservative movement veteran as a Young American for Freedom, was accused of selling out. Ms. Whittlesey was branded a New Right zealot without regard for Ronald Reagan.

being funded by state government appears safe, they said.

Rep. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, House minority leader, says she got that impression from remarks Martin made to a group of Republicans over lunch. "Their feelings were that there would be a minimum amount of cuts ... There'll be no drastic cuts at all."

Rep. Roy Spoon, R-Mecklenburg, has come away from meetings with Martin administration officials with the same impression. "I got the feeling that they're not going to cut much, anywhere."

Martin is proposing a broad range of tax cuts that, when fully implemented, might deprive the state treasury of as much as $500 million annually. But Martin proposes to phase in those cuts over several years. The trick at hand for Martin now is not to make up for all those cuts but only for the amount of revenue he'll cut in the next two budget years.

According to Martin's press office, Martin's cut in the sales tax on food would cost $80 million in the first year and $160 million in the second year. And, his plans for cutting the intangibles and inventory taxes would not have an effect on state revenues until the 1987-89 biennium.

If he's unwilling to cut current spending, where can Martin turn to make up for this lost revenue? First of all, he can jack up the revenue projections a bit. Former Gov. Jim Hunt's budget for the next two years took a mighty bold estimate of revenues, more than 12 percent. But Martin may feel comfortable for an even higher projection.

Martin can also cut from Hunt's proposed expansion budget. Hunt sought $1.7 billion in expansion spending over 1985-87. Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin, and Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, both Advisory Budget Commission members, agree that it is there that Martin will find the money needed to pay for tax cuts.

"Look at the expansion budget because any new program you can do without if you want to cut taxes," Ballenger said.

Holmes said, "The majority of that money is in public education and human resources." Ballenger pointed out that Hunt scheduled $70 million of spending for a teacher's merit pay program in the second year. That program is not likely to be in place by that time, he said, so most of that money should be available for cuts. He also noted that Hunt proposed a 10 percent increase in payments for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) while the inflation rate was below five percent and when state employees are scheduled for only a five percent raise. Hunt's proposed AFDC increase is another likely target, one administration official speculated.

Martin is certain to call for a cut in the state-funded abortion program but that is more a matter of political, rather than fiscal, philosophy.

In general, expect Martin to propose cuts in Hunt's plans for expansion rather than cuts in programs already operating.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It goes without saying that within the family our lives should develop a trust in God and a concern for one other. Many Christian homes have been greatly blessed because of commitment to these basics; nevertheless, it is also true that we are tempted to show more concern for people outside the family than for those closer to us. We believe that within a Christian home there should be peace and harmony, love and concern, sharing and togetherness, and a healthy respect for the individuality of each family member. Even so, there are times when we are more courteous and understanding with outsiders than with our own family circle.

In many homes today we need a devotion to God. Our children need the example and the encouragement of both father and mother in the things of the Lord. Every child needs this and when it is lacking, tragedy often results. How many a child longs so deeply for just one word of approval, instead of constant criticism and blame! Only thus can he know that he is loved and accepted, that he has a secure place in the home.

Discipline never should be lacking.

Let me hasten to say that all discipline should be the expression of love and not of anger. Some think of discipline as punishment. It may include this at times, but it is more. Children have abilities and aptitudes that need to be encouraged. They also have urges and impulses that need to be directed.

Communication, likewise, is lacking in many homes. As long as husbands and wives and children can talk opening and not be ignored or shamed, there is hope of solving any difficulties that may arise. But this also involves listening — listening with the heart as well as with the ears. Many children desperately try to communicate their need for help, but the message doesn't get through. Let us be more alert to these distress signals.

Strength For Today

To those of us who live under a free government, freedom is as essential to our lives as the air we breathe and the food we eat. The word "liberty" is derived from a Sanskrit word which means "to grow up." We know the difficulties of growing up, but we still covet the opportunity for ourselves and our children.

Yet freedom can kill us as readily as it can make us live triumphantly. Alfred the Great declared many centuries ago that freedom "is never a good thing unless he is good who has it." Every day we are coming to see that the freedom we have must be kept by dint of great energy and sacrifice. It cost our forefathers much to gain this liberty in the first place. It will cost as much to keep it. And let us always remember that freedom is a gift of God designed to enable us to grow up until we are in some measure worthy of fellowship with our Creator.

lot of soil that is good for growing trees."

For that reason and because forestry industry officials forecast a timber shortage in 10 years to 20 years, Harrison said reforestation of logged areas is often the best answer. Tax benefits are also encouraging, he said.

According to Jim Kea, area forester for the N.C. Extension Service, one out of every nine areas logged in the South is reforested. In eastern North Carolina, one of every three is reforested and "grows back sufficiently," he said. Kea said timber forecasts call for minor shortages in 10-20 years but most forestry industry officials agree there are spot shortages now. One concern to foresters, Kea said, is a current shortage of good quality hardwood. "One of our needs is to keep areas forested with hardwoods managed better to keep this shortage from escalating," he said.

Tax incentives to landowners who reforest land are also enticing according to North Carolina Forest Ranger Mark Webb of Pitt County. The federal benefits include a $1,000 investment tax credit for the cost of reforestation and a cost-sharing forestry incentives program that can provide as much as 50 percent of a specified ceiling cost up to $10,000 a year. In addition, the North Carolina Forestry Development Program will pay as much as 40 percent of a specified ceiling cost for reforestation on up to 100 acres per year.

Foresters agree, however, that there are other less tangible benefits to reforesting cut areas. "In Pitt County, there are many acres getting cut that won't get reforested," Webb said. Economics "demand that we think about the future," he added, and "much land is more profitable under management as a forest."

"But beyond that, reforestation is good for erosion control, wildlife habitat and the aesthetic appeal of the area," Webb added.

"Many folks located here (in eastern North Carolina) because of the beauty, the aesthetic appeal of the area," Kea, of the extension service, said. "If the trees were not here, not as many would have come because it wouldn't be as beautiful."

Harrison said the benefits of reforestation "are not just for the man that owns the land." "You've got other generations that will benefit from it," he said. "Reforestation provides an inheritance, both aesthetically and financially, for generations to come."

transmission line has been estimated at $672,000. If the transmission line was buried for 2,800 feet through Brook Valley, the cost would be $2,740,900. To bury the whole line from the Eastside substation to the Simpson substation would cost approximately $8.3 million.

In other business, council members approved a resolution authorizing submission of a transportation application grant. The three-part application calls for grants totaling approximately $440,000, with $108,400 of that sum being requested to assist in the purchase of a transit bus. Matching funds of approximately $110,000 would be provided by the city if the three applications are approved.

In final business, the council approved an application for $100,000 in assistance to be used in the Greenville Housing Authority's rental structure rehabilitation program, and a request to install a crypt in the Brownhill Cemetery.

fruit and vegetables prices was offset a 13.6 percent drop in egg prices. Beef and veal prices also were off. Prices for pork, poultry and fish rose for a second straight month, however.

The costs of meals eaten outside the home and of alcoholic beverages were unchanged.

Overall, the 0.2 percent food price gain was half the 0.4 percent gain in December.

Housing costs rose 0.1 percent, following a 0.2 percent gain in December. Prices rose 0.2 percent for homeowners and 0.4 percent for renters last month.

Energy prices overall declined for the second month running, down 0.3 percent. Fuel oil prices fell 2.9 percent and were 15.4 percent under their peak of April 1981. Prices for natural gas and electricity, however, rose 0.2 percent and 0.5 percent respectively.

Overall transportation costs rose 0.8 percent. New cars prices rose 0.3 percent while used car prices rose 1.8 percent.

Medical care costs rose just 0.3 percent. Such costs are up 5.9 percent for the year.

Clothing prices held steady. Entertainment costs were up 0.3 percent.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

Gromyko Woos Italian Support

ROME (AP) — Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union met with Italy's foreign minister today in what was seen as an effort to dissuade the government from supporting President Reagan's "Star Wars" defense plan.

The Soviet Union also is at odds with Italy over its acceptance of U.S.-built nuclear missiles in Sicily — part of a NATO arsenal deployed in Western Europe to counter Soviet rockets in Eastern Europe.

Gromyko met with Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti on the first day of his four-day visit to Italy, which is considered one of America's staunchest allies in Europe.

No details of the talks were released, but the Italian news agency ANSA said the principal subject was East-West relations in light of the opening of U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland, on March 12.

The agency said the two men also discussed the Middle East and Italy's growing trade imbalance with the Soviet Union, which hit 4.1 trillion lire, the equivalent of $2 billion, last year.

Officials said the two men met privately for 20 minutes and then were joined by their aides and other officials at the talks at the Italian Foreign ministry. After the talks, Andreotti hosted a lunch for Gromyko at Palazzo Barberini.

Also on today's agenda for Gromyko was a meeting with Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi, who will meet with Reagan early next month in Washington.

The Vatican has said that Gromyko will meet with Pope John Paul II on Wednesday.

The arms control talks between the United States and the Soviet Union resume after numerous Soviet statements that the Star Wars program must be included in the discussions. But the Reagan administration maintains it will not compromise the Star Wars plan.

Reagan insists that the Star Wars program is a research operation that is strictly defensive in aim, but the Soviets have contended that implementation of such a defense system would necessitate an arms buildup on their side.

Commenting on the Star Wars plan at a news conference in Rome Feb. 12, Andreotti said: "It would be contradictory for us who champion a reduction of nuclear and conventional weapons to encourage the increase in a third area."

Gromyko has been leading Moscow's fight against the NATO missiles — which have gone into place in Britain and West Germany — and against Washington's research into space defense weapons.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization began installing nuclear rockets in late 1983, prompting the Soviets to quit two sets of talks aimed at reducing nuclear arms. NATO plans to deploy a total of 572 such missiles.

NATO said last November that 16 cruise missiles had been installed in Italy, 45 Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany and 32 cruise missiles in Britain.

Governors Balk At Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic governors, charging President Reagan with playing "political gamesmanship" on the deficit, pressed today to call on him to submit a balanced budget to Congress.

The Democrats, who constitute a 34-to-16 majority in the National Governors Association, drafted their proposal for consideration at today's closing session of the group's annual winter meeting.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, chairman of the Democratic Governors Association, told reporters that there was "a large element of political gamesmanship" in how Reagan was dealing with the governors on the deficit issue.

He added that "the president has effectively politicized the deficit issue."

Many governors, Republicans and Democrats, were angry and disappointed after a White House meeting Monday during which Reagan refused to consider further cuts in defense spending or a freeze on cost-of-living allowances for Social Security recipients.

Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina offered the proposal calling on Reagan "to immediately demonstrate his commitment of a balanced budget by stating how he would balance the federal budget in a revised budget request to Congress."

Riley, a Democrat, said his proposal was a way of asking the president, "How will you balance it? When will you balance it?"

In addition to the Riley proposal, the agenda included resolutions on a budget freeze and a balanced budget amendment.

And while several governors expressed misgivings about the freeze resolution, it appeared to have majority support.

JERRY RUBIN

Ex-Yippies Talk Yuppies

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Once brothers in the counter-culture of the '60s, former Chicago 7 member Jerry Rubin takes credit for the term Yuppie, while ex-colleague Abbie Hoffman claims to be "probably the best grass-roots activist in the country."

"I'm trying to show you can dress well, you can make money, and you can succeed in America ... and still want to change the political system," Rubin said in a news conference at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill before a debate Monday night.

Wearing a navy suit and running shoes, Rubin called Hoffman shortsighted and said he belonged "in Madame Tussaud's wax museum."

But Hoffman called the Yuppie movement "a self-centered, materialistic consumption trying to legitimize itself ... I find it appalling that the average college student ... doesn't know what's going on in the world."

The two men co-founded the Yippies activist group in the 1960s during the anti-Vietnam War movement. Nearly 20 years later, Rubin contends young urban professionals can bring social change, but Hoffman describes the 1980s as "the decade of designer brains."

Rubin and Hoffman were members of the Chicago 7, a group charged with conspiring to incite a riot during demonstrations at the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. They were later acquitted.

"I'm proud of what I did in the 1960s and I'd do it all over again," Rubin said during the debate. "But to make this a '60s rally is a waste of time."

Yuppies will rise up, choose presidents and pass laws in the next 10 years and "change America like America has never been changed in all its history," Rubin predicted.

"Jerry Rubin does a disservice to the 1960s," Hoffman shouted.

An environmentalist, Hoffman cited his work with the New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware anti-nuclear and anti-pollution coalitions that he continued while living underground as a fugitive from cocaine and conspiracy charges.

"Campuses today have become a hotbed of social rest," he said. "It's now the people under 30 I don't trust."

During the news conference, Rubin likened his relationship with Hoffman now to a "divorce."

ABBE HOFFMAN

"There's a certain level at which we hate each other and there's a certain level where we love each other," he said.

Hoffman, 48, said he did not see the same spirit carried so strongly these days as he did 20 years ago.

Farm Talk

Helms, Martin Say Antitrust Plan For Leaf Companies Wouldn't Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Sen. Jesse Helms ponders whether to push for legislation that would seal a tobacco company buy-out of flue-cured surpluses, Gov. Jim Martin says such a measure wouldn't stand a chance.

"Well, if that's what it takes, we'll try," Helms, R-N.C., said Monday through aide Ron Phillips. "But it has about as much chance as my getting a free weekend in Philadelphia."

The manufacturers have said they won't agree to buy 812 million pounds of surplus leaf from the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. unless Congress passes legislation protecting them from charges of price-fixing.

Meanwhile, U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block was expected to announce today that the 1985 grower assessment will be 25 cents a pound, more than triple last year's assessment of 7 cents.

Helms said he would wait at least a week before deciding whether to pursue legislation being sought by the tobacco companies.

Stabilization officials were scheduled to meet with Helms Wednesday to discuss possible legislation, Phillips said. He also said Helms would talk with manufacturers and representatives of tobacco and farm organizations this week.

"There is a division of opinion among the farm leadership in North Carolina about (whether legislation should be sought)," Helms said. "I want to get with them and just say, 'Here are the hazards both ways. What's your pleasure?'"

In Washington for the National Governors' Association meeting, Martin told reporters that the cigarette makers' demand for legal exemption from antitrust challenges could not be passed as part of a legislative package.

The former congressman said such a measure would never clear the House Judiciary Committee because of the controversy surrounding tobacco.

"It's a moot point — it's not going to happen," he said.

Martin said the "best thing"

Helms and Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., — Congress' chief tobacco leaders — could do would be to pass a simple bill lowering the tobacco price-support level to $1.35 a pound.

Last Friday, Stabilization's board of directors voted to hold to its recommendation of a 25-cent grower assessment for the 1985 crop and a $1.70-per-pound price support.

However, in hopes that the major cigarette makers still would purchase the surplus, cooperative officials agreed to seek a price support of $1.35 a pound.

The six domestic tobacco manufacturers and cooperative officials have been negotiating since late last year on a Stabilization proposal calling for the companies to buy its surplus in exchange for reduced support prices.

Stabilization Executive Director Fred Bond said the companies are insisting on the legislation although the Justice Department has said it would not bring antitrust action against the companies if they bought the surplus tobacco.

"They are concerned about what might happen down the road, two or three years from now," Bond said.

Governor Will Request Delay On New Programs

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature this week will receive a request from Gov. Jim Martin to postpone several new programs to make room for tax cuts but leave most existing programs untouched, a top Martin aide says.

"I can't think of a thing that we've come across that Governor Martin has said, 'This is no good, I don't like it, scratch it,'" said C.C. Cameron, Martin's executive assistant for budget and management.

Martin's request will come Thursday when he details his plan for the base budget in his first State of the State Address. Although he also will outline his expansion budget, Martin has said the specifics won't be known for several days after that.

"It's just a question of do you start something statewide or do you try it on a pilot basis first," Cameron said of proposed new programs. "I'd say just about all of the public education issues fall into the category of a pilot phase-in."

For example, Martin has said he wants to see full implementation of any merit pay program for teachers delayed until fiscal 1988, allowing for two years of experimentation.

Only a week before Martin was to present the first of his budget proposals to the Legislature, Cameron said many major issues, including the pay package for state workers, remained unresolved, while the proposed package of nearly $450 million in tax cuts was undergoing "fine-tuning."

Cameron and other administration officials are careful to distinguish between the current state budget; the spending necessary to continue those existing programs, known as the base budget; and new spending proposed by Hunt, known as the expansion budget.

He said the administration has found it almost pointless to try to make short-term changes in the base budget. Instead, Martin has named a commission of businessmen to examine state government for ways to improve efficiency and trim fat in future base budgets.

But Cameron depicted Martin and his staff as conducting a line-by-line examination of the expansion budget.

The centerpiece of Martin's gubernatorial campaign was the elimination of inventory, intangibles and some sales taxes over three years.

Although the legislature enacts a budget for two years at a time, Cameron said Martin plans to show how he would make his tax cut proposal work in the years beyond the immediate budget.

"We're going to go ahead and show four years, so there won't be anybody saying we're using 'funny money' to make it work," he said.

Dixon Rejected $100,000 Offer

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The city of Fayetteville offered to pay a $100,000 out-of-court settlement of a police brutality lawsuit in which a federal court jury last week awarded the plaintiff $1,000, a defense attorney said.

"I consider the case a tremendous victory for the city anytime we try a case where we offered $50,000 (to the plaintiff) and where the award is $1,000," said attorney Carl Barrington Jr., who represented former Police Chief Danny Dixon and two other officers in the lawsuit.

The city's offer to settle the case out of court, in addition to the $50,000 for Spell, also included $50,000 for Spell's attorney fees.

The U.S. District Court jury last Wednesday ruled in favor of Henry Spell of Autryville, who claimed that a police officer kneed him in the groin, leaving him sterile. The jury ruled that the assault by officer Charles D. McDaniel stemmed from an unofficial policy of police brutality.

Senate Democrats Push Farm Credit Bill

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm-state senators, in a showdown with Sen. Majority Leader Robert Dole, are seeking approval of emergency legislation to bail out farmers so deep in debt banks won't lend them money for spring planting.

The credit-relief measure, headed for a vote perhaps as early as today, was introduced Monday as an amendment to a bill authorizing $175 million in non-food drought aid to African nations.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., provides $1.85 billion in federal guaranteed farm loans in addition to $650 million already available for 1985.

It also eliminates a requirement that farmers show they can generate a profit before obtaining such loans, and authorizes the Farmers Home Administration to provide $100 million to "buy down," or induce banks to lower interest rates.

"This bill doesn't create any new bureaucracy. It merely calls for cooperation among the government, lenders, and farmers," said Zorinsky, ranking Democrat on the Senate Agricultural Committee.

"Not all farmers will be saved by this, nor should they be," he continued. "This measure is crucial for farmers who are fighting for economic survival."

Zorinsky, who was backed by Sens. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said the measure won't cost much because federal money would be spent only when a borrower defaults on a guaranteed loan. Historically, the default rate for FHA loans is about 5.5 percent, Zorinsky said.

Dole, R-Kan., reluctantly agreed to allow amendments to the African aid bill to end a filibuster on Saturday by farm-state Democrats against Senate confirmation of Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

On the Senate floor Monday, Dole — unwilling to give more ground to Democratic adversaries — said attempts to alter this year's farm aid package are unnecessary.

"We have a good, solid farm program already in place," Dole said. "I don't believe we do the American farmer any good by advancing more loan payments to him. We would be accomplishing more by concentrating on the nation's top priority — getting the deficit down."

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., was preparing an amendment similar to Zorinsky's to be offered in the event that the first measure is tabled, or put aside without a Senate vote.

All day hundreds of farmers, state legislators, and governors from the Farm Belt testified at hearings and met with congressmen to plea for federal help.

"Some farmers took bad risks and got themselves into credit trouble, but most farmers didn't get into crises on their own," South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow told a House-Senate farm caucus chaired by Zorinsky.

"It is our government policy of deficit spending which increased interest rates and overvalued the dollar. The farmer isn't to blame for that," said Janklow, a Republican.

At a hearing of the Joint Economic Committee, 10 legislators from farm states testified about the impact of the farm credit crunch.

"Since the first of the year, in the state of Iowa, we've closed three banks and we believe many more may follow," said state Rep. Bob Skow. "Agriculture's economic problems have brought our state to its knees."

Many farm-state senators who support the Zorinsky amendment want to make sure the Senate also has a chance to vote on a broader measure expected to be approved next week by the Democrat-controlled House.

That bill, sponsored by Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., would advance payment of price-support loan money from fall to spring to help farmers get past their immediate credit crunch, and provide $3 billion in new loan guarantee authority. Dole predicted that bill would fail in the Senate.

Long To Leave Senate In '86

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell Long, heir to a Louisiana political dynasty and the Senate's second-ranking member, says he announced his decision not to seek a seventh full term simply because it was time to retire and give would-be successors plenty of time to fight for his seat in 1986.

Long, 66, who served as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee for 15 years and is still its ranking Democratic member, said Monday during a hastily called news conference that he had made his surprise decision to retire with mixed emotions.

"The Senate's been been my life for 36 years and I love this body," Long told reporters. "But after 36 years here, I've decided that that is enough."

"At some point I think if the good Lord permits you to live a long life and if the people are good to you, a senator ought to consider at what point he ought to retire — and that's my decision," Long said.

"I am making this statement at this time so that anyone interested in running for the job will have ample time to consider it and to raise funds to conduct a campaign," he said.

But the decision caught most senators unaware and unprepared.

Shortly before making his announcement, Long met privately with Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, according to Byrd aide Linda Peek. Byrd was apparently one of the few Long colleagues to get even that much advance notice.

Long was just one day short of his 30th birthday — the legal minimum for serving as a senator — when Louisiana voters first sent him to Washington in 1948 to fill an unexpired term, which began when he was of legal age to serve.

Now, after seven election victories, only Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who was first elected in 1947, outranks him in seniority.

Ex-Lawman Says Arrest Is 'Show'

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A former Mexican lawman, one of four men being held for questioning in the abduction of a U.S. drug agent, claims he is being used as a scapegoat by authorities desperate for an arrest in the case.

"It's a show made by the Mexican police," Tomas Morlett Borquez said Monday, a day after he was picked up in connection with the abduction of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

The kidnapping in Guadalajara caused tension between the United States and Mexico as the U.S. stepped up border inspections along the 1,700-mile border in the search for the veteran agent.

Car-by-car checks at U.S. border stations, which led to delays of hours for northbound motorists over the past 10 days, were ended Monday shortly after Mexican police announced the apprehensions, said U.S. Customs Service spokesman Jerome Hollander.

Mexican officials had complained that the intensified checks damaged their nation's economy because tourists were avoiding border areas.

Authorities said Monday they had no information on where Camarena, 37, was and whether he was dead or alive. Witnesses said they saw four armed men abduct him on Feb. 7.

At a news conference, Mexican police officials said the four men in custody, including one detained in Guadalajara, had been picked up in response to a request from DEA Administrator Francis Mullen Jr.

Mullen had been critical of Mexican authorities over their handling of the Camarena kidnapping. On Sunday he had accused Mexican officials of allowing a suspect in the kidnapping to evade arrest.

"Up until 2½ years ago, Tomas Morlett was with the Direccion Federal de Seguridad," said Vince Hovanec, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City. Hovanec described the Mexican agency as "a sort of combination of the FBI, the CIA and the Secret Service."

Crafty Canines

In a recent show of purebred dogs at Madison Square Garden, this female Scottish Terrier won "Best in Show." Scottish terriers were first raised in the Scottish highlands in the 1800s. For many years, earls and higher peers there owned Scottish wolfhounds. Greyhounds have been clocked at speeds as high as 41.7 miles per hour. This breed was known to exist in Egypt 6,000 years ago. In Russia, dogs have been trained to sniff out ore deposits that contain iron sulfides.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) The stock market opened mixed today as worries over interest rates and the dollar's record breaking rise tempered enthusiasm over the economy's renewed strength.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.30 points to 1,281.80 in the first half hour of trading.

But more stocks fell in price than rose in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

Among the encouraging developments today were separate government reports of fresh economic strength and moderate inflation.

The Commerce Department said factory orders for durable goods shot up 3.8 percent in January, a bigger than expected increase, and the Labor Department said consumer prices were held to a modest 0.2 percent increase last month.

But the economy's strength has dampened hopes for further interest rate relief.

Last week, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker told Congress that the central bank no longer was accommodating lower interest rates — a practice the Fed started last fall to prevent the economy from slipping into a recession. Volcker was to testify again today.

Meanwhile, the dollar's historic rise continued to put pressure on profits of U.S. companies that compete for business in international markets. With the dollar at all-time highs against many European currencies, goods made in the United States are more expensive while foreign products are cheaper.

In early trading today, American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 21. American Express rose 1/8 to 41 1/8, International Business Machines fell 1/8 to 133 1/4, and General Motors was off 1/8 at 77 3/4.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average edged up 1.66 to 1,277.50.

But declines outpaced advances by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume fell to 89.74 million shares from 93.68 million on Friday.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .19 to 103.82. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.73 at 224.37.

Plane Crashes

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A Saudi air force C-130 crashed while attempting to land after a training mission, killing all eight persons aboard, the official Saudi Press Agency said.

The agency said the dead included one "contract technician" but did not specify the nationality of the victim. Diplomatic sources said there was "a high possibility" the contract technician was an American.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in the Saudi capital said the embassy could neither confirm nor deny the reports that an American had died in the crash.

Obituary

Wyatt
Ethel Burkhead Wyatt, former Pitt County resident and teacher in the Winterville Schools from 1930-1937, died at a Lumberton Hospital on January 5. Funeral services were conducted on January 7 by her pastor at the Candor United Methodist Church with burial in the Candor Cemetery.

Mrs. Wyatt, native of Candor, was the wife of John C. Wyatt of Pitt County who was associated with Greenville Tobacco Company for twenty years before they moved to Candor. She taught in the Candor Schools for many years and was very active in church work and civic organizations. In recent years they became residents of Wesley Pines, United Methodist Retirement Home, in Lumberton.

In addition to her husband of Lumberton, she is survived by two sons, John C. Jr., of Candor and Frank B. of High Point, a daughter, Margaret W. White, of Long Beach, nine grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Medical District Panel Discusses Water, Sewer

Availability of water and sewer service to Greenville's medical district and zoning options for the area were topics of discussion at Monday night's meeting of the Medical District Study Committee.

Information on Greenville Utilities services available in the district was provided by utilities representative Wayne Meads, who told commission members future GUC service to the 1,790-acre medical district will depend largely on development of the area. However, Meads said utilities would be provided to a southern portion of the district when Arlington Street is extended from N.C. 11 to a portion of U.S. 264 now under construction.

The third of several city thoroughfare priorities earmarked by the council in late 1984, extension of Arlington Boulevard will also depend heavily on development of the area, City Manager Gail Meeks said today. The extension, she explained, will either be built by developers or by the state. "But it's hard to say when," she added. "The need for that road will be even greater when traffic from 264 enters Stantonsburg Road."

The portion of U.S. 264 Mrs. Meeks referred to is slated to intersect Stantonsburg Road near SR 1204. This section of highway, scheduled for completion in 1987, will increase the number of vehicles passing through the medical district from 14,000 to 20,000 cars per day.

Meads also told commission members he foresaw no problems with utilities services servicing Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine should either institution expand.

Assistant City Attorney Mac McCauley spoke to the commission about conditional use zoning and legal implications of using that kind of designation. Simply, conditional use zoning is a restrictive device that allows more discretion in development of areas. Conditional use and other types of zoning will be discussed by the commission to aid in development of a recommendation on future development of the medical district.

Memphis State Wraps Up Metro Regular Slate Title

By The Associated Press
Memphis State has been making believers out of opponents all season long. The latest is Southern Mississippi Coach M.K. Turk.
"There's no doubt in my mind Memphis State is one of the best teams in the country," Turk said Monday night after the fourth-ranked Tigers scuttled Southern Mississippi 78-63 to wrap up the Metro Conference's regular-season title.

"They really dominated the backboards both offensively and defensively," Turk said. "They really shut down our inside game and their big people were really intimidating inside."

Forward Baskerville Holmes scored 17 points and grabbed six rebounds and center William Bedford added 15 points and 10 rebounds as Memphis State ran its record to 23-2.

In another game, 17th-ranked Virginia Commonwealth got 18 points from Calvin Duncan in a 78-66 triumph over Old Dominion that gave the Rams the Sun Belt Conference regular-season title. Alfrederick Hughes scored 25 points and Andre Battle added 21 to boost No. 20 Loyola of Chicago, the regular-season Midwestern City Conference champs, to an 86-77 victory over Oral Roberts.

Southern Mississippi, 7-19, knew it had to slow down the pace if it had any hope of beating Memphis State, so Tiger Coach Dana Kirk was glad to see his team in a running mood.

"We knew we had to up the tempo because if the tempo wasn't up, we would be playing into their hands," Kirk said.

Thanks to its deliberate style, Southern Miss managed to cut a nine-point halftime deficit to 39-33. But Memphis State went on a 9-0 spree that ended all doubt about the outcome.

The balanced Tigers also got 12 and 10 points, respectively, from guards Vincent Askew and Andre Turner to compensate for the poor outing by forward Keith Lee. The 6-foot-10 Lee hit only one of six shots from the field and finished with eight points.

Top Twenty

Virginia Commonwealth, 22-5, used a 14-1 spurt in the first five minutes of the second half to take command against feisty Old Dominion. The Rams charged to a 46-34 advantage and never looked back.

"VCU did a good job of defending our inside game, and that forced us to shoot even more shots outside," Old Dominion Coach Paul Webb, whose club wound up 17-10 overall and 9-5 in the Sun Belt, three games back of Virginia Commonwealth.

"We kept them from doing what they had done all year," said VCU Coach J.D. Barnett. "We wanted to make them beat us from the outside."

Mark Davis led Old Dominion with 18 points while Kenny Gattison added 14 points and 18 rebounds.

Loyola had a tussle on its hands before chalking up its 13th consecutive victory. The Ramblers broke away from a 50-50 deadlock to forge a nine-point second-half lead, only to have Oral Roberts cut the deficit to 74-71 with four minutes to play. But Loyola got four free throws down the stretch from Carl Golston to keep the Titans at bay.

Oral Roberts Coach Dick Acres was looking forward to the league's post-season tournament and another chance at the Ramblers.

"We'll play them a third time and they better be ready to play," he said.

Mark Acres, the coach's son, was a standout in defeat with 32 points, including 15 baskets in 22 shots from the floor.

Unranked Teams

In other games, Tennessee Tech clinched the regular-season crown in the Ohio Valley Conference by defeating runnerup Youngstown State 64-54; East Coast Conference regular-season champ Bucknell beat Lehigh 75-58; Southern Conference champion Tennessee-Chattanooga beat Appalachian State 64-59; Southwestern Athletic Conference titleist Alcorn State ripped Prairie View 104-86; Connecticut shaded Boston College 74-68 in the Big East; Holy Cross nipped Fairfield 58-56 and Virginia Tech beat South Carolina 78-67.

Pete Maravich, starring for Louisiana State in basketball 1968-1970, had 28 games in which he scored 50 or more points.

State Moves Back Into Top 20; St. John's #1

By The Associated Press

The memories of the 1983 NCAA basketball championship are still fresh in North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano's mind, but he'll be proud of his 1985 team even if there are no banners to hang from the rafters of the school's gym.

The 1983 season was the dream season for Valvano, when his team came from nowhere to defeat Houston for the national crown.

But if 1983 was a dream, 1985 has been something of a nightmare.

"This team has been given a lot of adversity and they've been able to focus on the job at hand," Valvano said Monday after the Wolfpack moved back into the college basketball rankings at No. 16. "If they have anything in common with the 1983 team, it's that they don't quit."

Valvano has suffered through the loss of freshman center Chris Washburn, a highly recruited player who was dismissed from the team after he was arrested on charges of stealing a fellow athlete's stereo. He has been criticized for spending too much time promoting cookbooks and doing television commentary, and not enough on coaching the team.

But Monday, as he oversaw practice, he could smile because NC State once again was ranked. He smiled because his team has beaten Southern Methodist, Duke and North Carolina, which were all ranked in the Top 20 at the time. He smiled because it was about time.

"I don't believe there is a legitimate Top 20," Valvano said. "There are so many good basketball teams, that we probably need a Top 40. But it's nice."

The Wolfpack is riding a six-game winning streak and is tied for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead with North Carolina at 8-4. Once 7-2, the Wolfpack fell to 9-5 after losing three straight to St. John's, Maryland and Kentucky.

"We've made some readjustments," Valvano said. "We were too high after wins and too low after losses. But basketball tends to give you another opportunity."

"Given that we were ranked in the Top 20 during preseason, and then were deemed banished, it feels good," Valvano said.

NC State was as high as ninth on Dec. 10 and was last ranked in the Dec. 31 poll, coming in 17th.

Valvano is reluctant to draw too many comparisons between the 1983 championship team and the present squad. Though forward Lorenzo Charles, center Cozell McQueen, and guard Terry Gannon were members of the 1983 team, Valvano says the situations they have faced have been markedly different.

In 1983, hot-shooting guard Derrick Whittenburg broke his foot in January and was lost until late February. The Wolfpack slipped to 9-7 and finished the regular season at 17-10 before defeating Virginia and Ralph Sampson in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

But Whittenburg did return. Chris Washburn won't be back this year.

"That kind of adversity (in 1983) brought the team together," Valvano said. "The kind of adversity we've had this year can tear a team apart. I have special pride in this team. I'm probably more proud of this group."

Two new teams in the Top 20 were Arizona, which is 19th, and Loyola, Ill., which came in No. 20. Arizona,

Final Home Date For ECU Cagers

East Carolina's basketball Pirates close out their 1984-85 home season Wednesday night, playing host to Campbell University in a 7:30 p.m. game at Minges Coliseum.

For the Pirates, it will be a chance to win two in a row for the first time since the opening weeks of the season. East Carolina downed UNC-Wilmington on Saturday night to win their first ECAC-South win of the year, and will be aiming to hand Campbell a second defeat of the year.

The two met early in the season at Fayetteville, with freshman Herb Dixon hitting a jumper at the horn to give the Pirates a 58-56 victory over the Camels. At that point, it was the first road win in over a year for the Pirates, who have won only once more since then away from Minges Coliseum.

WILMINGTON (AP) — Keith Cieplicki scored 27 points and Kevin Richardson added 20 to lead William & Mary to a 67-59 victory over the University of North Carolina at Wilmington in ECAC-South basketball Monday.

The Indians, who led 30-29 at the half, and maintained a lead for the entire second half, had to hold off a challenge from the Seahawks. North Carolina-Wilmington pulled within two at 58-56 with 2:24 left, but Richardson scored the next six points for the Indians.

The Seahawks couldn't pull closer than four points down the stretch.

Cieplicki, a senior guard, hit 10-of-15 shots from the field and hit all seven of his free throws. The Indians are now 14-10 and 8-4 in the ECAC-South.

Brian Rowson led the Seahawks, who dropped to 11-14 and 4-9, with 21 points. Bobby Jo Springer added 10 points.

Top seeded Kinston had little trouble in advancing to the second round of the Big East Conference tournament, breezing past Wilson Hunt last night, 80-48.

The Vikings will thus serve as the host team for the next two rounds of the tournament, Wednesday and Thursday night.

In the only other game played last night, #3 Northeastern rolled over Rocky Mount, 65-53, to also advance to the second round.

The remainder of the first round for the boys, plus the entire girls' second round will be played tonight. In single girls' action, Hunt hosts Northeastern and Kinston entertains Northern Nash in 7:30 p.m. games. In doubleheader action, Rose travels to Beddingfield for a girls' game at 7 p.m. and a boys' game at about 8:45, while Fike hosts the Rocky Mount girls at 7 p.m. and the Northern Nash boys at 8:30 p.m.

'Sweet Science' Enters New Era

By The Associated Press
Computer science has come to boxing, which is known to aficionados as The Sweet Science.

For its telecast of Livingstone Bramble's 15-round unanimous decision victory over Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, HBO used Fightstat, a compilation of punches thrown and landed, which is compiled by Sports Information Data Base of Hasbrouck Heights, N.J.

"This is a toy we're playing with," said Larry Merchant, who does between-rounds commentary for HBO.

Fortunately, Merchant, who is an astute boxing observer and who doesn't talk just to hear himself, used it as a tool instead of a toy.

At the outset, Merchant let it be known that as a "quantitative analysis it does not tell you the effectiveness of the punches."

In professional boxing, a fighter does not need to land the most punches to win a round or a fight if his punches are judged to be more effective than his opponent's.

Fightstat is provided by two men, one for each fighter, who punch into a computer the number of blows thrown and landed. The punches are broken down into jabs and other punches. Punches landed are supposed to be punches that count in the scoring. Those that land on arms or gloves are misses.

Of course, there is human error involved, but Logan Hobson, one of the SIDB employees who worked the fight, said there probably was no more than a "two to five percent margin of error."

SIDB also recorded the number of punches when Bramble won the title by stopping Mancini in the 14th round last June 1 at Buffalo, N.Y. But the information was not used by Katz Sports, which televised the fight.

Before the start of the rematch Feb. 16 at Reno, Nev., Merchant pointed out that Mancini landed 336 of 1,408 punches while connecting on 125 of 667 jabs in the first fight. Bramble's figures were 464 of 880 and 77 of 186.

This information was useful in spotting trends and in seeing if Bramble and Mancini were following their fight plans.

Bramble had said he wanted to throw more jabs and combinations in the rematch, while Mancini said he wanted to be more in control of himself, to box more.

The final figures showed Bramble connected on 674 of 1,220 punches for a 55 percent scoring average, while Mancini landed 381 of 1,349 for 28 percent.

Bramble scored with 255 of 495 jabs, almost three times as many as he threw in the first fight, and he threw an average of 81 punches a round and landed an average of 45. Mancini connected on 229 of 705 jabs, threw 90 punches a round and landed 25 a round.

HBO did not show the final statistics, but concentrated on what was going on in the ring, the decision — each of the three judges favored Mancini by one point — and interviews with the fighters. Rightly so.

At the end of the third round, Merchant noted that Bramble had landed five of nine jabs, topping his average for the first fight. "Whatever that portends," said Merchant, chuckling, "it's for the future to decide."

Statistics for the sixth round showed Mancini landed 53 of 109 punches, including a big right. Merchant then backed up the statistics by noting that a reason for the challenger's success was that the counter-punching Bramble, in trying to be more offensive, was leaving himself open.

No statistics were shown after the seventh round. Instead, the HBO team of Merchant, Sugar Ray Leonard and blow-by-blow announcer Barry Tompkins concentrated on the condition of Mancini's eyes.

They concentrated on Mancini's corner again after the eighth round and wondered if the fight might be stopped. A doctor had been called onto the ring apron to examine Mancini's left eye during the eighth.

So it went, with the statistics not being ignored, but not being hampered at the defenseless viewer either.

After the 14th round, Merchant, noticing how busy Mancini had been for a few rounds while Bramble seemed to take breaks during the rounds, said, "Ray Mancini may be stealing the fight."

Then Tompkins said, "The gutsy way he's coming back may capture the hearts of the officials. They're human, after all."

The broadcast performance showed that Fightstat can add interest to a match if used properly. But it seems it will be best used by cable television. On network fights, commercials are shown during the minute between rounds. It's doubtful that fans would like seeing statistics flashed on the screen or even being told what they are while the action is going on.

Showboats Run Past Gunslingers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Walter Lewis fired three touchdown passes to spark the Memphis Showboats to a 20-3 victory over the San Antonio Gunslingers Monday night in the United States Football League.

Lewis passed 25 yards to wide receiver Greg Moser for a second-period score and connected on a 35-yard scoring play to wide receiver Derrick Crawford in the third period.

Lewis' last scoring pass went to tight end Gary Shirk for 4 yards with just 35 seconds gone in the final quarter.

The score came four plays after linebacker Lemont Jeffers recovered a fumble by San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel on the Gunslingers' 15. Alan Duncan kicked the extra point.

Duncan converted after the first touchdown, but missed after the second.

San Antonio, held without a touchdown for the first time in its two-year history, averted a shutout when Nick Mike-Mayer kicked a 22-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Running back Leonard Williams gained 136 yards in 19 carries for Memphis. His rushing total, the Showboats' 243 yards and their 22 first downs were all-time highs against the Gunslingers.

"Memphis is to be complimented," San Antonio Coach Jim Bates said. "They did an excellent job on both sides of the ball. They ran the ball better than anyone we've seen."

San Antonio's offense never got untracked. Besides the 15-play, 65-yard drive that led to the Mike-Mayer field goal, the Gunslingers' only other threat ended at the Memphis 5 when running back Scott Stamper fumbled.

Wilson Ends GCA Hopes

WILSON — Melinda Deans scored 27 points to lead Wilson Christian Academy to a 39-33 victory over Greenville Christian last night in a state tournament preliminary game.

The win boosted Wilson into the state field, while Greenville closes out its year at 11-9.

Wilson came out hot and burst out to a 10-4 lead in the first period. That lead was extended to a 22-13 margin at halftime.

In the third period, Greenville rallied, pulling to within one point, but Wilson pulled away to a 31-24 lead. Greenville outthrew Wilson, 9-8, to no avail in the final quarter.

"We were able to rally but they held off each effort we made," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We played about as well as we could. We just couldn't stop Deans."

Paige Brown led Greenville with 10 points.

Frobel To Fight For Slot With Pirates

By The Associated Press
Doug Frobel was expected to step into Dave Parker's shoes as the right fielder for the Pittsburgh

Pirates. Now Frobel might be following Parker's footsteps out of town.
Pittsburgh Manager Chuck

Tanner said he plans to keep only six outfielders this season and that Frobel will have to earn a spot with the Pirates during spring training.

"He doesn't have a job. He must win one," Tanner said of Frobel, who batted only .203 last season with 12 home runs and 84 strikeouts in 275 at-bats in 1984.

"I turned into a brutal player last season," Frobel said. "I'm ready to fight for a job. If I don't win a regular job, I'm prepared to come off the bench and help the team."

Frobel's dilemma was shared by many players taking part in early workouts Monday at baseball spring training sites in Florida and Arizona.

Another player attempting to overcome a disappointing 1984 is New York Yankees infielder Andre Robertson. He spent much of last season in the minors in a continuing effort to overcome the affects of a 1983 auto accident. Although he is still experiencing some pain in his right shoulder, he threw effectively during a workout Monday at the Yankees' Fort Lauderdale, Fla., training facility.

Cincinnati Reds outfielder Cesar Cedeño reported to the club's Tampa, Fla., camp on Monday, three days after pleading no contest to a charge of driving while intoxicated. Cedeño entered the plea in a Houston courtroom in connection with a Jan. 23 auto accident. No one was hurt in the crash, in which Cedeño's car crashed into a tree. He was fined $400 and ordered to pay $7,000 for damage to property. He also received a suspended 120-day sentence and was placed on two years' probation.

Rookie Manager John Felske opened the Philadelphia Phillies camp at Clearwater, Fla., by welcoming seven catchers and 21 pitchers. The first workout involving the entire team is slated for Sunday.

The club announced the signings of pitchers Kevin Gross and Rocky Childress, catcher Mike Diaz, infielders Francisco Melendez, Rick Schu and Ken Jackson and outfielder Randy Salava.

Still unsigned are pitchers Charlie Hudson, Mike Maddux and Rodger Cole, catcher Darren Daulton, and outfielders Jeff Stone and Chris James.

Jerry Remy and Dave Stapleton, veteran Boston Red Sox infielders who missed much of 1984 with knee injuries, began their respective comebacks Monday at Winter Haven, Fla. Remy, 32, and Stapleton, 31, participated with battermen in the muscle-stretching calisthenics and worked out in the infield, but skipped batting practice.

New York Mets pitcher Ron Darling, overshadowed last year by fellow rookie Dwight Gooden, said he hopes to ring up some Gooden-like numbers this season.

"I want to pitch at least 225 innings, complete a minimum of 10 games and cut down on my walks," said Darling, who won 12 games for the Mets as a rookie last season, but only two after the All-Star break.

Third baseman Paul Molitor, out last year following elbow surgery in May, made his first batting appearance as the Milwaukee Brewers staged a workout at Peoria, Ariz.

"It was kind of a strange feeling after not being in there for nine months," said Molitor. "It was a good feeling."

Another veteran on the mend is Detroit pitcher Milt Wilcox, who is trying to overcome a shoulder injury and reclaim a spot in the starting rotation for the World Series champions.

"He's coming along fine," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "The only thing we want to make sure of is that we don't rush him."

For that reason, Wilcox took part only in an exercise session Monday. He might get the go-ahead to throw next week, Anderson said.

The San Francisco Giants hope that coach Chuck Hiller's misfortune isn't an omen for the upcoming season. The former Giants second baseman was struck in the back of the neck by a batted ball during a workout at San Francisco's Scottsdale, Ariz., camp. Hiller stepped from behind a protective screen near second base to pick up a baseball and was struck by another ball. He suffered facial cuts when his glasses broke.

Richard Petty To Meet Young Race Enthusiast

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — A 4-year-old boy who might otherwise be interested in teddy bears and cartoons likes fast cars and race drivers.

Donnie Jennings gets to meet his all-time hero, Richard "The King" Petty, today. The meeting with auto's winningest driver comes just a month before the boy must have a life-threatening tumor removed.

"Ever since he could talk, which is barely a year ago, he always talked about Richard Petty," said Donnie's mother, Linda Jennings. "He's got Richard Petty toy cars and a big picture of Richard Petty in his bedroom. He's got a cowboy hat and sunglasses that he puts on and walks around the house saying 'I'm Richard Petty, I'm Richard Petty.'"

"I guess if he could meet anybody it'd be Richard."

Donnie is set to meet Petty at his garage, Curb Motorsports in Kannapolis, N.C. He'll sit in a STP-red-and-Petty-blue racecar with a big "43" emblazoned on the sides and, if Donnie feels up to it, Petty may drive him around town in a Pontiac pace car.

Petty admits a little bewilderment over his young fan.

"Everybody's got heroes. We've all got people we look up to and admire. You'd think someone 4 years old wouldn't be old enough to learn something about racing and know something about it. When you're 4, you're interested in teddy bears and cartoons. I don't know where he picked up auto racing.

"But when they're that young and their only wish is to meet you, it makes you feel super good. I hope this trip makes him feel the same."

Some Spartanburg residents made Donnie a miniature racing outfit with the appropriate racing patches and bought him a pair of Petty wrap-around sunglasses for the trip. He will get police escort from Spartanburg.

The trip was made possible by the Upstate South Carolina chapter of the national Make-A-Wish Foundation. The group tries to grant "absolute, all-time" wishes of children who are terminally or catastrophically ill, said Jack Morrow, a group spokesman and Spartanburg radio disc jockey.

"It's really wonderful, everybody has been going out of their way to do something for this boy," Morrow said. "We (Make-A-Wish) have $2,000 in our coffers, but we can't spend it. Everyone wants to do it for no charge."

Donnie's was a two-part wish. The first was granted last week, when he was made an honorary police officer by the Spartanburg Police Department.

Donnie's mother said she thought her son's enthusiasm for Petty may have evolved from spending weekends watching races on television with his father, L.B. Jennings.

Payton Winding Down Record-Setting Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Take a good look at Walter Payton in the next couple of seasons because the leading rusher in National Football League history doesn't plan on sticking around forever.

"Two or three years," he said Monday. "Whatever happens, who knows?"

After that, Payton will take his rushing records off into retirement. "I'm gonna do just what the word itself indicates I'm gonna do — retire," he said. "I'm gonna sleep late, fish, hunt, try and be lazy. You know the best hunting season is during the football season."

Payton will be 31 in July and is coming off the second most productive season of his 10-year career with the Chicago Bears. He rushed for 1,684 yards last season, pushing past Jim Brown's record of 12,312 to 13,369 yards for his career. He also played in a championship game for the first time as the improved Bears reached the National Conference title game before being eliminated by San Francisco.

The scent of the Super Bowl won't alter his retirement plans, though. "It took 10 years to get that far," Payton said. "It might take another 10 to get farther." He said he thought the Bears were capable of more, though, and perhaps as soon as the 1985 season.

"We weren't overachievers," he said. "We were underrated. That's gone on for a lot of time. Now we're proving ourselves. People are taking another look. We've got to improve, though. Our schedule will be improved. We rise to the occasion."

Payton was in town to pick up the Gordon's Gin Black Athlete of the Year Award. He beat out New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, Olympic hurdler Edwin Moses and Georgetown center Patrick Ewing for the award, which carries a $25,000 prize with it.

While Payton was shattering Brown's career record last season, Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams was breaking O.J. Simpson's single season record. "It was magnificent to see that done, but you don't measure it to what you've done. You just appreciate what you've done."

Payton sees Dickerson as the top threat to his career rushing record. "Unless another Tony Dorsett or Curt Warner comes out, and they always do."

He said he might even stick around a little longer than planned, just to make a challenger's task tougher. When he goes, though, it will be for good.

"You can look for me in the woods, then," he said. "You might not find me, though."

Usher Unsure Of 1986 Fall USFL Slate

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Harry L. Usher, the new commissioner of the United States Football League, said he isn't sure 1986 is the right time for the league to switch to a fall playing schedule.

"I'm convinced that fall is the right decision. My only doubt is when, not whether," Usher said Monday at a press conference.

Usher, who became USFL commissioner on Feb. 1, was vice president and general manager of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

He said he will try to make the change work because team owners voted for it. But he said he would suggest alternatives if the change from a spring schedule by 1986 "is not workable."

Discounting suggestions that players such as Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie would be the "savior of the USFL," Usher said the league most needs "the ability to compete for network time."

Usher told reporters he disagrees with reports of "gloom and doom" for the league as it enters its third year.

"I am not here to rearrange the deck chairs on the Titanic, but I'm here to take this ship forward. It's going to be a tremendous year," Usher said.

Prep Player Awarded $11 Million

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — A high school football player who was left a paraplegic after he suffered a broken neck in a practice field accident has been awarded nearly $11 million in a lawsuit against the company that made his helmet.

The San Bernardino County Superior Court jury on Monday decided after a 20-day trial that Riddell Inc., the manufacturer of a low-cut football helmet, should pay the money to Daniel Jaramillo, who was a 14-year-old freshman at Ontario High School when the accident took place.

Riddell now is required to attach a label warning that the helmet should not be used in ramming or spearing tackles, but the one Jaramillo wore when he was injured was an old one without the label.

Jurors in the court of Judge Kenneth G. Ziebarth decided after four days of deliberation that Jaramillo sustained damages amounting to $15 million.

But they deducted $3 million Jaramillo already had received in settlements with Chaffee Joint Union High School District and Richco, the firm that reconditioned the used helmet he wore.

They also decided that the youth, who is now 17, was partly to blame, and subtracted another 7.5 percent to make the judgment against Riddell $10,875,000.

Vitale Tabs Hoyas

By The Associated Press

In Wednesday night's Big East Conference basketball showdown at Madison Square Garden, ESPN's Dick Vitale sees second-ranked Georgetown ending top-ranked St. John's 19-game winning streak.

"Georgetown is at the top of their game now," the effusive cable television network commentator said Monday. "They've become a finesse club, they're quicker and not so physical, and they're playing eight players now instead of 10. They're not similar to last year's team because they don't have Michael Graham up front and Gene Smith, probably the most dominant defensive guard I've seen."

"I'm in awe of (Patrick) Ewing. I've been candid in pointing out his offensive deficiencies, but he's Bill Russell, one of the greatest winners of all times. Ewing does so many other things. He's great defensively and on the boards. All he can give you is W's (wins)."

"Reggie Williams is shooting better now and so is David Wingate."

St. John's, 24-1, hasn't lost since a three-point setback to Niagara Dec. 15. The Redmen hung on for a 66-65 win over Georgetown earlier this season at Landover, Md., and has clinched at least a tie for the Big East title with a 14-0 mark compared to the second-place Hoyas' 12-2 record, 25-2 overall, including seven straight triumphs.

"There's a lot of hype, a lot of talk about the great matchup," said Vitale, who coached at the University of Detroit and the NBA's Detroit Pistons. "But what does it really mean? They're both going to the NCAA tournament. That's the bottom line. The real pressure is on the 64th team (the NCAA field consists of 64 teams this season)."

ESPN will telecast the St. John's-Georgetown game starting at 9 p.m. EST.

Vitale, who chit-chats at as many as four college games a week — Big East and Atlantic Coast Conference — is still high on St. John's despite his choice of Georgetown.

"Not too many teams have two outstanding players like Chris Mullin and Walter Berry complemented by a 7-footer like Bill Wennington," he said. "The NBA scouts I talk to say Wennington is a sure first-rounder. And Mike Moses and Willie Glass do a top job."

Arlen Clark of Oklahoma State made 24 free throws without a miss in a basketball game against Colorado in 1959.

As for his NCAA Final Four picks, he said, "After Georgetown it's an open lottery. But I'd say St. John's, Memphis State because they've got a 6-10 player in Keith Lee and a 7-footer (William Bedford) who makes them tough to beat, and Michigan or Oklahoma (the nation's highest scoring team). I lean to Michigan because of its defense. I always say teams that live by the score, die by the score, and Oklahoma's defense isn't that good."

Vitale, a nonstop talker as ESPN viewers well know, said he is a "basketball-holic" and that he tries to put the fun aspect into his commentary "rather than make it a life and death situation. People get bored with the X's and O's."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 27, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Have as flexible an attitude as you possibly can for there are tensions present by having attitudes that are too fixed on most any subjects. Try to make this a constructive day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have unique ideas and should garner the right information so that you can make them operate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get your business affairs handled intelligently and don't permit a jealous partner to get you off the track.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A new acquaintance who is familiar with modern trends can be of assistance to you now in gaining your aims.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) One prominent in business can give you the backing you need, so don't hesitate to ask for it.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A good friend could act as a go-between where a stubborn partner is concerned and then you can come to a fine understanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use more modern methods at your work and gain more prestige as well as benefits. Bring your finest talents to the attention of those who are prominent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It is important you meet that person of whom you are very fond at least halfway, if you want to get good results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A home tie gives you a good idea that will help you to put your points across with one in business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Put personal ideas across with partners and get them to see things as you do. Come to a fine agreement with a bigwig.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find some more modern way of handling your routines and get far better results. Be happy at home.

Grammy Show Tonight At 8

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Top contenders for the Grammy Awards tonight include Cyndi Lauper, Prince and Tina Turner, each with hit albums, hot styles, lots of fans, critical acclaim and five nominations — guaranteeing them nothing.

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, whose three-hour awards show is set to begin before CBS-TV cameras at 8 p.m. EST, has a 26-year voting record that rewards cautious music and easy-listening lyrics.

The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen, the Beach Boys and Elvis Presley have a cumulative career Grammy total of nine. Easy-listening king Henry Mancini has 20.

The Beatles, as a group, could only convince academy members that they deserved four Grammys.

In the 1965 awards, the band won best performance by a musical group for "A Hard Day's Night," and best new artist. In 1967, the Beatles' "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" won album of the year and best contemporary album. And that was it for John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison, and Ringo Starr as a group.

The Rolling Stones, rocking since 1963, are unlisted in Grammy annals. Not one trophy for a crew that has sold millions of records and can still fill baseball stadiums on a 22-year-old reputation as rock's bad boys.

Academy members apparently don't like to be rattled by lyrics. Bob Dylan was ignored by the academy in the 1960s when he was writing million-sellers such as "Blowing in the Wind," "Like a Rolling Stone," and "Just Like a Woman."

Facing the vagaries of academy voters tonight are Miss Lauper, nominated in a rare sweep of the academy's "Big Four" categories: album, record and song of the year and best new artist.

Her album "She's So Unusual" has sold 4 million copies and generated five hit singles, including "Girls Just Want to Have Fun," nominated for best female pop vocal and record of the year.

Prince, the 26-year-old superstar from Minneapolis, has four nominations with his group Revolution, including album of the year for the 9-million seller "Purple Rain," the soundtrack from the top-grossing summer movie.

"Purple Rain" also was nominated for best rock group performance, best film score recording and producer of the year. Prince also has a best rhythm and blues song nomination for writing the Chaka Khan hit, "I Feel for You."

Miss Turner's "Private Dancer" is nominated for best album of the year. She also has Grammy nominations for the single "What's Love Got to Do with It," which earned her nominations for best record of the year and best female pop vocal.

Two other tracks, "Better be Good to Me" and "Let's Stay Together," are nominated for female vocal nominations in the rock and rhythm and blues categories, respectively.

Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the USA" and Lionel Richie's "Can't Slow Down" complete the album of the year nominees.

Also in the record of the year category are Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark" and "The Heart of Rock & Roll" by Huey Lewis and the News.

Winners in 67 categories were to be revealed today, but only about 16 categories were to be announced on-camera during the telecast from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles, with the rest announced beforehand. John Denver was to host the awards.

Sellers Widow Sues Over Film

LONDON (AP) — Peter Sellers' last movie, "The Trail of the Pink Panther," was "an appalling film" made in defiance of the late actor's wishes, his widow, actress Lynne Frederick, claims in a lawsuit brought against the picture's makers.

The trial of the suit opened in High Court on Monday.

Sellers died during production of the movie, which was completed using discarded clips from previous "Pink Panther" films and released in October 1982.

The 29-year-old actress's suit names director Blake Edwards, United Artists and Lakeline Productions, which is owned by Edwards' wife, actress Julie Andrews.

The defendants say they hold full copyright and were not contractually banned from making the film.

Rock Musician David Crosby Skips Drug Treatment Center

SUMMIT, N.J. (AP) — Rock musician David Crosby fled a private hospital where a judge had sent him to be treated for his cocaine addiction, the hospital's research director said today.

Crosby, an inpatient, was on a walk at the Fair Oaks Hospital Sunday when he got away from his attendant and hopped into a waiting car, said research director Dr. Mark S. Gold.

He would not say whether Crosby, 43, had been committed to the 144-bed facility. Many patients at the hospital are wealthy professionals addicted to cocaine and other drugs, Gold said, adding that Fair Oaks is considered the nation's foremost narcotics treatment center.

"I really can't comment directly on his case, or anyone else's case," he said.

Crosby, a member of the rock group Crosby, Stills and Nash, had been confined to the hospital for six weeks after his conviction on a 1983 drug and weapons charges in Dallas, his attorney, Gerald Banks, told the San Francisco Chronicle.

Crosby was convicted of freebasing cocaine and carrying a loaded gun in the dressing room of a Dallas nightclub where he was performing.

He was given a five-year prison term, but was free on bond while the case was being appealed. After an arrest in California for another drug charge while free on bond, Dallas Judge Pat McDowell ordered Crosby into the New Jersey program.

McDowell issued an arrest warrant for Crosby Monday after learning the performer had escaped from the treatment center, the Chronicle reported in today's editions.

Gold said the hospital routinely notifies state and local police when a committed patient escapes.

A Summit police patrolman who would not give his name said "the hospital did not call us" about the escape. He also said police are usually notified when a committed patient leaves the grounds.

Meanwhile, an FBI agent in Newark, N.J., who would not give his name, said he had no knowledge of an escape.

Arrest Ordered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A court has ordered opposition politician Aquilino Pimentel arrested when he returns to Manila from overseas speaking engagements, says the Philippine News Agency.

State prosecutors filed a charge of rebellion against Pimentel Jan. 11 when he left for Europe and the United States, on the grounds he gave $6 to a Communist guerrilla.

Pimentel heads an opposition group, the Pilipino Democratic Party, which calls for the removal of U.S. military bases from the country.

MTV Spurring On Record Business

NEW YORK (AP) — Pardon the pun, but MTV is the unsung hero of the resurging record business, which spotlights its leading artists tonight in the "Grammy Awards" show on CBS.

Record sales, which had been declining for years, began picking up in 1982, about the same time the economy improved and MTV was created.

"It's had a positive effect, although there's no way to measure it," said Harold Vogel, a Merrill Lynch vice president who monitors the music industry.

Bob Pittman, MTV's executive vice president, calls the all-music cable channel "a catalyst" for introducing new artists to the public and for brightening the record industry's profit picture.

"The record industry has recovered quite nicely, but only in the musical categories in which MTV plays," Pittman noted.

MTV's rock 'n' roll videos appeal to young adults, and that age group appeals to advertisers. A recent weekend sampling of MTV showed that many newly released movies, featuring energetic dancing and targeting that same 18 to 34 audience, were advertised on MTV.

There also were commercials for jeans and shampoo and even one for the Break Board, a portable mat for break dancers. (Just call 1-800-GETDOWN, the ad said.)

Pittman said only 10 percent of MTV's viewers were younger than 12, but he wasn't watching earlier this month with a bunch of fifth graders from Hastings, N.Y., who were helping this columnist do a highly unscientific study of MTV. They said many of their 10- and 11-year-old friends were music-video fans.

"Whenever there's a commercial during a football game, I'll change the channel to MTV," said Milo Reznikoff.

"I'll watch it when there's nothing else to watch," said Jan David Deahl.

Even Bruce Springsteen is aware of MTV's pre-teen appeal.

"All my friends' kids, they always tell me, man, they're glued to that MTV," Springsteen said in an interview for NBC's "Friday Night Videos." "My own nieces, they call me up, 'Uncle Bruce, we saw you and 'When are you going to be on?' ... So it's taken the place of cartoons."

MTV has been criticized since its inception for showing overly violent and highly suggestive videos. Recently, several groups in Utah tried to ban the channel, and one Mormon bishop labeled it "pornography."

Pittman said the critics are misinformed because they don't watch MTV. "Anything that represents change and is on the cutting edge will be objectionable," he said. "We're dealing with rock music. A lot of people don't know what to make of artists with green hair."

Pittman said MTV has a stringent broadcast standards department, which rejects videos that have nudity, profanity, gratuitous gore and violence, and those that glamorize drugs and alcohol.

"We don't need sex and violence to be successful," he said. "Nobody is going to tune us out because we don't have sex and violence."

Studio Eyes Grammy

TODD, N.C. (AP) — You won't be able to find his name on the list of nominations, but Carl S. Rudisill's handiwork is up for a Grammy Award today.

Rudisill owns North Start Productions, a small recording studio in his house on the banks of the New River in Ashe County, where country singers Doc and Merle Watson have recorded their last two albums.

"Twin Sisters," a song from the Watsons' most recent album, "Down South," has been nominated for Best Country Instrumental Performance by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, which gives the Grammy awards each year in Los Angeles.

It is not the first time Doc Watson has been nominated — he was won four Grammys — but Watson is Rudisill's first customer to record a nominated song.

"To be nominated is the big thing for me," Rudisill said Monday. "We're proud just to have Doc and Merle in the studio."

U.S. Was Set To Block Cuban Flights In Grenadan Invasion

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon secretly moved F-15 fighters and airborne radar planes to Puerto Rico before the 1983 invasion of Grenada just in case Cuban forces tried to interfere, a new Pentagon report discloses.

As a result, the United States was prepared "to detect and deter any Cuban aircraft flights," the report says, adding the operation "vividly demonstrated" the importance of Puerto Rico as a base for operations in the Caribbean.

The report, prepared by the chief of the Pentagon's Atlantic Command, also says the U.S. invasion force did not do enough to suppress enemy anti-aircraft fire and thus protect its helicopters, in part out of a concern for civilian casualties, and that nighttime medical evacuation missions were hampered because Army helicopter pilots hadn't been trained to land on ships.

Overall, the report concludes, planning for the invasion was conducted over such a short period of time that U.S. forces suffered from coordination and communication problems, but the invasion was still "accomplished in a most successful manner."

Those and other observations are contained in a special "Lessons Learned" analysis prepared by Adm. Wesley L. McDonald and submitted to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in February 1984. A heavily censored version of the report was obtained Monday.

Despite the censorship, McDonald's report provides a fairly detailed look at the chronology of the Grenada invasion and some of the problems that U.S. forces encountered.

It discloses the Pentagon moved two days before the invasion to make sure Cuba couldn't interfere. While details are not provided, the report says a special "tactical force command" was established by the Air Force at Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, on Oct. 23, 1983.

"Tactical Air Command F-15 and AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control Systems) aircraft were positioned to provide surveillance and defense against possible interference by Cuban forces ... (and) to detect and deter any Cuban aircraft flights transiting from Cuba to Grenada," it says.

The report concludes the "importance of the airfield facility at Naval Station Roosevelt Roads was vividly demonstrated, particularly in view of the present instability in the Caribbean region."

McDonald's synopsis also discloses the initial planning for Urgent Fury, the invasion's code name, began as something much smaller on Oct. 14, 1983. That was one day after Grenada Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was overthrown.

On Oct. 14, the report says, McDonald received a "what if" phone call from the Joint Chiefs of Staff "requesting possible options for show-of-force-presence operations in the vicinity of Grenada and possible non-combatant evacuation operations."

On Oct. 20, the day after Bishop was killed, McDonald said he received a "warning order for non-combatant evacuation operations," which prompted him to direct the carrier Independence and a Marine Corps amphibious group on the way to Lebanon to turn toward Grenada. By Oct. 22, the Pentagon had begun planning a full-scale invasion and the joint chiefs "issued an Execute Order for Operation Urgent Fury." The invasion began on Oct. 25, 1983.

Physicians Report Hunger Reaching Epidemic Levels

BOSTON (AP) — Hunger has reached epidemic proportions nationwide, leaving up to 20 million people vulnerable to fear and illness because of economics and "conscious" government policy, a group of doctors and public health experts said today.

The report by the Physician Task Force on Hunger in America follows a year-long investigation by researchers who traveled back roads, opened refrigerators and searched out "the human face of hunger."

They found that despite the economic recovery, "hunger is getting worse, not better." The evidence: growing lines at soup kitchens and food pantries, upsurges in infant mortality, and widespread testimony about malnutrition among the elderly, infants and the unemployed.

"Clearly, lack of food is not the cause of hunger in America," said the report, titled "Hunger in America: The Growing Epidemic." The task force was headed by J. Larry Brown of the Harvard School of Public Health.

According to the authors, hunger is due to the lingering effects of recession, combined with Reagan administration cutbacks in income and nutrition programs, which have left 35.3 million Americans below the federal poverty line.

"Hunger is a problem of epidemic proportions across the nation," said the report released today. "While no one knows the precise number of hungry Americans, available evidence indicates that up to 20 million citizens may be hungry at least some period of time each month."

"The recent and swift return of hunger to America can be traced in substantial measure to clear and conscious policies of the federal government," the study charged.

The authors called on Congress to increase welfare and food stamp benefits and ease eligibility requirements; restore free and low-price meals programs to the schools; expand the Women, Infants and Children nutrition program; and offer more meals for the elderly.

In Washington on Monday, assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin said the administration had not received the report.

With $120,000 in grants from a dozen foundations, the task force reviewed previous studies on hunger and added to that data through interviews and field studies.

"We saw hunger in Hollister (N.C.) in the home of a young mother of four children whose husband had lost his job... When we asked to look inside her refrigerator, we found the remains of an omelette, some government commodity cheese and nothing else. There was no milk," the authors wrote.

Promise Of Prize Snares Fugitives

By The Associated Press

In Michigan the bait was a "new and exciting product," in California the hook was a seafood "sting" operation. The net result was the arrest of 32 people wanted on a variety of charges and 24 alleged poachers who sold six tons of fish to undercover agents.

"It was a class operation," boasted Grand Rapids, Mich., police Chief William Hegarty. "The 'new and exciting product' was the arrest warrant, and the prize was an escorted, all-expense paid trip to the jail."

In California, authorities said their phony fish store reeled in only a small fraction of the salmon, steelhead, striped bass and sturgeon that was being caught illegally and sold to black market retailers and restaurants.

Faced with hundreds of outstanding arrest warrants, Grand Rapids police decided to rely on that element of human nature which cannot resist the offer of something for nothing.

They sent letters to more than 500 people wanted for everything from traffic violations to assault with intent to commit murder. The bait was a show by New Dimensions Promotions and the chance of winning a 1985 Lincoln Town Car, a Cadillac Seville, cash or trips.

About 100 people responded. Among the 32 who were curious enough to show up at a downtown Grand Rapids building Saturday night was Donna Collins, wanted for ignoring a year-old $55 traffic ticket.

"There were chaparrones ... who escorted you upstairs," said Ms. Collins, a 37-year-old mother of three who left a baby shower to see if she won anything. "Coffee, doughnuts, cakes were set up. The escorts were nice. They told you what you might win."

"There was a car sitting out front (of the building) with New Dimensions stickers on it," she said. "But as soon as you turned the corner, they (plainclothes police) grabbed you ...

"I felt real stupid," she said. "At first I laughed. I couldn't believe it."

The California sting consisted of a fake fish market in Oakland staffed for six months by agents of the state Department of Fish and Game.

When people sold fish to New China Specialty Foods, they were paid and secretly videotaped, officials said. At least two of the fish were saved from each sale.

The result: six tons of illegal fish and 24 arrests.

"There seems to be an unending market for fish, and a declining supply," said Jack White, a spokesman for the department.

Authorities believe as much as 90 percent of the illegal catch was bought by restaurants "from California to Canada" and by black market retailers, White said.

Warrants were issued for 12 people in San Francisco, 11 of whom had been arrested, said San Francisco District Attorney Arlo Smith. Thirteen residents of the Hoopa Valley Indian Reservation northeast of Eureka also were in custody, records indicated.

Some of the fish were taken from waning populations of salmon and steelhead in the Klamath River, and striped bass and sturgeon in San Francisco Bay.

Under federal law, it is legal for Hoopa and Yurok Indians to catch salmon and steelhead in gill nets in the Klamath for food or ceremonial use, but not for sale.

"We knew pretty much who they were, but we had no way of infiltrating their ranks," White said of the alleged poachers.

A Fish and Game officer just out of the academy managed to crack the black market operations, he said. "She just left the word around that this market would buy the fish and not ask too many questions."

"We have to keep her under wraps until the trials are over," he said of the officer, explaining that some suspects had threatened her.

The bidding:
South West North East
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

It is not always easy to spot the extra chances that are available to you. On this hand from a rubber bridge game, South made the most of his opportunities.

The bidding was old-fashioned textbook. The opening bid showed a balanced hand of 25-27 points, and North had no reason to look for another contract.

West led the top of his heart sequence, won in the closed hand. Obviously, if the ace of diamonds was guarded no more than once, the contract was a cakewalk. However, if the defenders could hold up the ace for two rounds, declarer had only eight tricks. And the only place to develop the ninth was in clubs.

At trick two declarer exited with a low club. West won and continued with a heart. Now declarer tried the ace of clubs, felling the queen. Suddenly, South could assure the contract provided clubs were 3-3 or East held the king.

Declarer continued with the king of diamonds, and West had to hold off. Next came the jack and, when West ducked again, declarer overtook with dummy's queen to gain an entry to the table. Now he led dummy's remaining club and, as long as East followed, the ninth trick was sure.

If East produced a low club, declarer would insert the jack and, if that lost to the king, the 13th club would be high. And if East came up with the king of clubs, the jack would be the fulfilling trick. Easy, isn't it.

Briton Freed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A Briton arrested for alleged involvement in a plot to kill an exiled Libyan politician has been freed after paying bail, says a British Embassy spokesman.

The spokesman, Alan Conyard, said Godfrey Shiner was staying in a Cairo hotel pending further court proceedings.

Shiner and a fellow Briton, Anthony Gill, were detained Nov. 17 by Egyptian security forces on charges they were involved in a foiled plot to assassinate former Libyan Prime Minister Abdel-Hamid Bakoush, who lives in exile in Cairo.

Egyptian officials said in November that his security forces had belated Libya into believing its agents killed Bakoush.

Some Of The Best Things About BB&T Have No Limits, Penalties, Or Federal Regulations.

A handshake may seem like the simplest of pleasantries these days, but at BB&T, we regard it as quite a bit more than that.

We think of it as a commitment on our part. And, one without limits.

It's a commitment, most importantly, to make every effort to understand your long-term financial needs, not just your immediate ones.

It's this kind of overview that assures our ability to provide meaningful financial counsel over time, and to help you make the best informed decisions to reach your objectives.

We're also resolved to become your total financial planning resource. Which means we want to assist you, not only with your day-to-day banking, but with cash management, credit, trust, insurance and retirement planning.

Because at BB&T, we think the only way to help you get the most from your resources is to place ours at your disposal. Come see the difference the BB&T attitude can make. Between the two of us, there's no limit to what we can accomplish.

BB&T
It's More Than A Bank.
It's An Attitude.

Gang Killings

KOCHI, Japan (AP) — Police say they arrested three gangsters on charges of killing two rival gang members in what appeared to be the first revenge killing for the slaying of Japan's most powerful underworld leader last month.

The arrests followed the pistol shooting deaths of two men and the wounding of a third at a city-run bicycle race track in southwestern Japan. None of the 2,500 track spectators was injured.
