Martin Seeks $328 Million Tax Cut

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin today asked the General Assembly to cut taxes by $328 million during fiscal 1985-87 and to spend $1.28 billion on new programs, including higher teacher pay and reduced class sizes.

"The plan I submit to you fulfills my chosen obligation, endorsed by the voters of this state by a larger total vote than any other North Carolina candidate has ever received, to (grant a) tax cut," said Martin in his first State of the State address.

Martin also proclaimed 1985 as the "Year of the Child" in North Carolina and called for a crackdown on drug trafficking, a career growth program for public school teachers, reform of the State Personnel Act, and merit selection of judges.

In a surprise move, he asked for veto power. North Carolina is the only state that doesn't have a gubernatorial veto, and a Republican senator's proposed constitutional amendment that would grant it is given virtually no chance.

Urging lawmakers to "really think about it," Martin asked, "Can we not do more of genuine value for North Carolina if we are compelled to share responsibility and accountability for the tough decisions through a system that works in every other state?"

Predicting that the state's economy will experience "healthy" growth over the next several years, Martin said taxes could be cut without jeopardizing existing programs.

"It can be done. And it should be done," he said in a 22-page text prepared for delivery before a packed House chamber in the Legislative Building.

In a move Martin described as "a historical innovation," he also offered to appear before legislative budget committees at 7 p.m. Monday to outline details of his spending plans." He said he would ask for $519 million worth of new programs in fiscal 1985-86 and $760 million in new expenditures in 1986-87.

In keeping with his campaign platform, Martin made the centerpiece of his speech his proposals to repeal the state sales tax on food Jan. 1, 1986 and the property tax on intangible assets July 1, 1986. He asked that businesses receive a 50 percent rebate on their inventory tax payments beginning Jan. 1, 1986. The rebate would increase to 100 percent Jan. 1, 1988.

The state should reimburse cities and counties for lost revenues stemming from the intangibles tax cut, Martin said.

Fulfilling a campaign vow, Martin proposed cutting the state's $1.3 million fund to provide abortions.

SUSPECT CHARGED — Greenville police, shown here off West Rock Springs Road during a search for a break-in suspect, charged Leslie Todd Ennis, 19, of 1206 Clark St. with breaking into two homes after he was found in the wooded area north of 14th Street Wednesday afternoon. Detective John Nichols said Ennis has been charged with breaking into a garage at 103

Dellwood Drive Wednesday afternoon, and a house at 202 E. Ninth St., where $1,900 worth of jewelry and a television set were taken on Feb. 10. Nichols said the chase Wednesday that resulted in Ennis' arrest began after he returned to the Dellwood Drive home to get his bicycle which had been left at the scene. ## Meeting Planned To Promote Area City Coalition

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of chambers of commerce from eight eastern North Carolina cities, including Greenville, are scheduled to meet in Kinston tonight to discuss a proposed coalition to promote what organizers are calling the Octad region of North Carolina.

The confederation — which organizers stress would not be another chamber of commerce — would be similar to alliances such as the Triangle, composed of Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill, and the Triad, which includes Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point. One proposed name for the consortium is Octad, representing the eight-city membership.

In addition to Greenville, cities included in the alliance are Washington, Kinston, Goldsboro, New Bern, Rocky Mount, Tarboro and Wilson.

The proposed confederation and an invitation to today's meeting was outlined to area chambers in a letter from Dr. Jon Tingelstad, immediate past chamber of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. Tingelstad's letter said cities of "similar nature and size in a particular region can have a greater impact on regional development when they work together in a communicative, supportive and productive fashion." He cited the Triangle and Triad areas as examples.

The letter specifically mentioned regional development of business, agriculture, manufacturing, education, medical services and recreation.

An alliance in the east, the letter stated, should have a name that "would bring instant and lasting recognition." For this reason Tingelstad said he favored the name Octad over other suggestions such as The Eight Cities and East Coalition.

According to Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the alliance is an idea frequently tossed around by chamber executives from the eight cities. "Chamber executives have been discussing for some time the camaraderie we (cities in the east) have, whether it be education or economics," Walker said. "We feel like the eight cities and their proximity have a real need for sharing and regional promotion." He said the needs of the region included promotion of agriculture, improved air transportation, keeping existing industries and attracting new ones.

Tonight's meeting will be an opportunity for representatives from the eight cities' chambers to "all voice their opinions" on the Octad proposal, Walker said. "We have invited the elected officers of the chambers to discuss the issue and if it goes well, we'll spread it out next to governmental officials in the eight cities," he said.

Walker emphasized the group "is not organizing another chamber" and that the proposed coalition "would not be in competition with the eastern chamber." The Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce is an organization that represents 43 counties in eastern and northeastern North Carolina.

Walker said the area represented by the proposed coalition has a population of approximately 500,000 people. Around 210,000 of them are residents of the eight Octad cities.

Agent Orange Pay May Be Limited

NEW YORK (AP) — A new court plan to distribute the $180 million Agent Orange settlement to Vietnam veterans or their survivors would make direct cash payments to only 10,000 of the 200,000 claimants estimated to be eligible.

The plan by Kenneth R. Feinberg, a Washington lawyer appointed special master of the case by U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein, was released Wednesday.

"The settlement fund is simply not large enough to allow a significant cash payment" to each member of the class-action suit, Feinberg wrote.

The rest of the money would be split between an endowment for children suffering from birth defects and another for a social service program for Agent Orange victims and their families.

The plan recommended maximum payments of $25,000 to "the most qualified claimants." Feinberg said that if all 200,000 eligible claimants were paid directly, they would get only $650 apiece.

Weinstein has scheduled a hearing here Tuesday on distributing the funds. Veterans and lawyers have proposed several other plans and at least two groups are challenging the settlement and asking for a trial.

Last September, Weinstein tentatively approved a $180 million settlement of the suit against seven chemical companies that manufactured Agent Orange, a herbicide widely used in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The suit, first filed in 1978, claims veterans exposed to Agent Orange, and their families, have suffered a variety of ills ranging from skin rashes to birth defects.

The settlement rests on whether an acceptable plan can be set up to distribute the money, which has been accruing interest, to the claimants.

In his 623-page report to Weinstein, Feinberg noted that the 200,000 eligible claimants consisted of all U.S., Australian and New Zealand veterans of Vietnam from 1961 to 1972 who were injured by exposure to Agent Orange.

Foreign Trade Deficit Worsens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suffered a $10.3 billion trade deficit in January, 28 percent higher than the December figure, as a flood of imports swamped a record showing for U.S. exports, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the January deficit was far above the $8 billion deficit recorded in December although the United States exported a record $19.4 billion in goods during the month.

The export total exceeded the old record of $19.2 billion set last July and reflected increases in sales of machinery, office machines and new passenger cars.

However, the 1.4 percent gain in exports over the December total was swamped by a 9.2 percent jump in imports, which totaled $29.7 billion during January.

The United States posted a record trading deficit of $123.3 billion last year and many analysts expect the figure this year will could hit $130 billion.

The country's poor trading performance has been blamed primarily on the remarkable strength of the dollar, which has been headed upward since the end of 1980. After posting almost daily records during most of February, however, the dollar has retreated in the last two days.

However, most analysts say the fundamental forces that have kept the dollar strong have not changed.

Those forecasters predict the currency will stay at near-record levels for 1985.

The strong dollar means imports are much more attractive to U.S. consumers because they are cheaper and it makes U.S. goods more difficult to sell overseas because they are more expensive.

The January surge in imports came from increases in passenger cars, telecommunications equipment and iron and steel mill products.

Sales of passenger cars from Japan, the leading importer, totaled $1.06 billion in January, up 1 percent from the December total. But the increase in car shipments from other countries was even more pronounced, jumping 66 percent, to a new total of $897.4 million.

Oil imports were down 3.3 percent during January as the average number of barrels per day dropped to 4.86 million from 4.96 million in December. The price per barrel was also down, dipping to $28.25 in January compared to $28.61 in December. Oil was selling for $29.05 a barrel one year ago.

Exports of agricultural products totaled $3.07 billion in January, a drop of 9 percent from the December level.

However, despite the decline in sales of agricultural products, total export sales rose to their highest level ever and were 8.5 percent above the level of a year ago.

PCMH Sets Patient Record

A patient occupancy record was set Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which reported 517 patients for the day.

The previous record was 509, set on Sept. 11, 1984. "Actually we've seen a trend of a 5 percent higher occupancy than that of last year in just the first four months of this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1," Fred Brown, hospital executive vice president, said.

"We suspect that the flu may have some impact on our census, but new services such as cardiac surgery and pediatric cardiology also have increased our number of patients. We have reason to believe that all our services are becoming better known to physicians throughout eastern North Carolina and that's had a definite effect, too."

He said that there has been a 100 percent occupancy in some medical and surgical units in the last several weeks.

He said the increase in patients has slowed the admissions process somewhat, but that managers are working to assure fast admissions whenever possible. The hospital is still discouraging visitors to protect patients during the flu season, he added.

Researcher Says Age Stereotypes Aren't Valid

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Despite an obsession with youth, the U.S. grows grayer every year. At 73, Ronald Reagan was the oldest man ever inaugurated as president. And the number of people over 85 is expanding 3.5 times faster than the population as a whole.

But perceptions about old age are still based on obsolete information, especially the view that the aged are a uniform mass of people with identical needs, according to a researcher toiling to explode myths and stereotypes.

"Perhaps the most pernicious stereotype of all is to talk about the old as a homogeneous group," said Andrew Achenbaum, a Carnegie-Mellon University history professor who has studied the aged for the past 10 years.

"People who are 6 weeks old are a homogeneous group. But at 65, there is a diverse grab bag of experience. The only common denominator is having lived a long life," Achenbaum said in a recent interview.

"If we're going to meet the needs of these long-lived people, we're going to have to understand more about the diversity of their resources and get a more accurate assessment of their health and social needs," he said.

As a historian, Achenbaum has probed the origins of myths about the elderly. In his book called "Old Age In The New Land," Achenbaum found varying views about the aged.

"Early Americans chose the image of a sinewy old man with long white hair and chin whiskers to symbolize their new land," Achenbaum said. "Uncle Sam seemed to personify the honesty, self-reliance and devotion to country so deeply cherished in the early decades of our national experience."

But perceptions changed after the Civil War as the United States was transformed from a farm culture to an industrial one that prized muscle and sweat. The image of the old became one of unhappy, useless, spent people, and the image persists today, Achenbaum said. "After the Civil War, people decided old age was a disease, a pathological disorder," Achenbaum said. "Those who heard the descriptions of the sufferings of aged people may have had their own fear and distaste confirmed."

"Who could possibly look forward to the pain, boredom, anxiety and loneliness that seemed to be a part of old age?" he said. The aging of America is documented. In the 13-year period ending last July, the number of people over 65 had reached nearly 28 million, an increase of 37 percent and more than double the growth of the general population, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The number of people 55 and older will hit 74 million or one quarter of the entire population by 2010, according to Census Bureau projections.

This growth means the federal government and social agencies must update their thinking on the elderly, especially in the area of Social Security and right-to-die issues, Achenbaum said. He called the debate about right-to-die "potentially as controversial as abortion."

"It's time to rethink the argument. We can't defend the basis of our policies on old stereotypes," said Achenbaum.

Gradually, myths are being discredited about the elderly declining in mental capability or "losing your marbles" and declining in sexual activity, Achenbaum said.

"Where once we labored under the illusion there was no way to salvage older peoples' intellectual ability, we've now gotten to the point where we realize they are and probably will continue to grow intellectually," he said.

"There are decrements associated with old age, but they are so small, so imperceptible, they shouldn't debilitate us," he added. "It's a game of use it or lose. You can't let your mind vegetate. If you're willing to grow, your mind can stay vigorous way in the 80s and 90s."

Hassle-Free Voting System Works

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you wrote: "Confidential to You: If you are not registered, you cannot vote."

Abby, North Dakota does not require registration. In our state, any U.S. citizen over the age of 18 can vote if he or she has lived here for 30 days.

While your statement was valid for the vast majority of U.S. citizens, it doesn't apply in North Dakota. Our unique, hassle-free voting system works well here.

TIMOTHY W. RAND
IN GRAND FORKS

DEAR TIMOTHY: No registration? I'll vote for that. It would be interesting to know what percentage of eligible voters vote in North Dakota as compared with the states in which registration is required.

DEAR ABBY: I've been wanting to write to you for years, but never had the courage.

My children, now middle-aged, are demanding that I write a family history, as I've had a very successful, colorful life, have traveled extensively and have many grandchildren.

I have avoided doing so because I was illegitimate and had a very unhappy and humiliating childhood.

Should I confess all to the entire family and brazen it out? As for friends, I doubt that they would care. I'm nearly 75 and have few contemporaries left.

At the time of my birth, my mother was in her teens and my father was in his mid-40s, married, fairly well-off and the father of three. I remember seeing him only once when I was 9 or 10. That's all I know about him, as my mother became hysterical whenever my father's name was mentioned and refused to discuss the matter. She did marry, but it was a brief and unhappy marriage. I took care of her until she died 10 years ago.

Do my children and grandchildren need to hear this dismal story?
MISSING LINK

DEAR LINK: Yes! It's a fascinating story and a part of their heritage. You have nothing to be ashamed of. If you fear that your family will think less of you, you're wrong. They will probably value you even more.

Unlike breast implants, which are considered cosmetic surgery, breast reduction operations are covered by most health insurance companies because overly large breasts are considered a health hazard.

Until my early 20s, I, too, had breasts much too large for my body frame. I was leered at, and sometimes grabbed (if you're big-breasted, it's erroneously assumed you're loose). Another stereotype I endured was the unconscious assumption many people have that women with big breasts are stupid. It really is true that if you're treated like you're dumb, you'll begin to believe it after a while.

I also had back problems and red marks on my shoulders from the constant chafing of my bra straps. I felt as if I were carrying an albatross around my neck.

The operation changed the way others treated me and the way I felt about myself.

There's no age limit for the operation; I've heard of women in their 50s having it.

I hope the woman in Texas will get in touch with her health insurance company to see if her policy covers it.

GLAD I DID IT

DEAR GLAD: I have heard from many women who have had breast reduction surgery. They tell me it is neither painful nor inexpensive, but all have said it was well worth it.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

For a couple of decades, the only role model a married woman had was the Flying Nun.

We'd sit there at night in front of the TV set snapping beans and folding diapers and fantasizing what it must be like to be single, celibate and subsidized.

Today, there are all kinds of single women on television who Personify a new breed of independents: Chris ("Cagney and Lacy"), Kate and Allie, Sara, Laura ("Remington Steele"), Christine ("Hotel"), Pam Ewing ("Dallas"), Mrs. King ("Scarecrow and Mrs. King"), Alice, Angela ("Falcon Crest") and Jessica ("Murder, She Wrote").

God, what a life. Not one of them owns an ironing board. They never have to shop for food or make a bed and you never see them throw all their bills in the air at the end of the week and pay only the ones that stand upright in the cracks in the floor.

Their cars always run. Their septic tank never needs cleaning. If they have children, they have a permanent sitter and see the kid five minutes at bedtime. They never wear the same outfit twice. To them SAG is a union — not a condition.

Is it any wonder marriage fell out of favor? After all, we were supposed to have a partnership of mutual respect. But the husbands got the evening paper, we got the shelf paper. They got the NFL, we got the K-I-D-S. They got the chores needing brute strength. We got the ones requiring Industrial Strength.

I was visiting a friend of mine the other night who was recently divorced. It was like a stop-off at Oz.

"What's it like to eat onions whenever you want?" I asked.

"It's not as great as I thought," she said.

"Imagine! Getting a letter for 'Occupant' and having it be for you. That's got to be a kick."

"It gets old."

"And to be nuzzled without going all the way. That's the dream of 74 percent of all American women."

"Actually, I haven't had a date since the divorce."

"Don't try to make me feel good," I said. "I watch all the sitcoms. Don't you think I know how you singles live? Why, Pam Ewing tools around in her sports car and hasn't spent a night at home in months. By the way, where's your daughter?"

"I don't know. One morning I was trying to repair the drain in the sink and I was late for work. I had just gotten an increase in car insurance which meant I had to look for a cheaper apartment. She had eaten the slice of boiled ham I was saving for my lunch and I said, 'Just think' one day all of this will be yours.' She bolted."

Come to think of it, the Flying Nun had suppressed Gidget feelings and was never happy. She went on to lead a crazed life with Smokey and the Bandit and then got serious with the unions and now I hear she's married.

I don't know WHO to believe anymore.

Cover up your clutter in the newest and brightest way with crewel stitches on a pastel plastic canvas. There's no need for tedious background filling as the luscious colors of the canvas are designed to show.

These clever "plastic point" boxes are great for desk or dresser, counter or tabletop, sewing room, bedroom, den or kitchen — wherever you need to keep a few small items handy but out of sight. Best of all, they're quick and easy to make.

To obtain directions for making the Plastic Point Boxes, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-0224 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-0224 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, and all materials to make three boxes — each a different pastel color.

Those of us who have been stitching for years often assume that everyone knows what is meant by the basic stitch names. A set of instructions might tell you simply to work in tent stitch, half-cross or continental stitch, leaving the beginner completely in the dark.

So let's get down to real beginner basics today — starting with threading the needle. If you have never done any needlepoint or embroidery, you will probably approach this with the "spit and twist" method you use with sewing thread. Frustration sets in immediately as this just won't work with the yarns used for needlepoint.

A commercial needle threader is a boon for the beginner, but you are not likely to have one on hand, so let me give you a couple of alternatives.

From the sides or bottom of an envelope, cut a little piece about an inch long and no wider than the eye of your needle. Place the cut end of the yarn strands in the fold of this strip and insert the folded strip into the eye. It will slide right through with the greatest of ease.

There is another technique that I prefer since it requires no aids at all, but some find it difficult to master. Hold the needle in your left hand and fold the yarn ends over the needle. Pinch the fold tightly between your thumb and forefinger, withdrawing the needle from the fold. Now, with the fold barely visible, press the eye of the needle down onto the fold and watch it pop through the eye almost magically.

The most common stitch in needlepoint is the tent stitch. It is a single stitch worked diagonally over one canvas mesh. (A mesh is the point where the vertical and horizontal threads — or ribs — of the canvas cross.) On the stitch diagrams, the chart lines represent these threads or ribs, while the blank spaces represent the holes of the canvas.

There are at least three versions of the tent stitch, all looking alike from the right side of the work, but different on the wrong side. Most beginners prefer the half-cross stitch. This is worked from the left to the right. To practice, bring the needle up in one hole (No. 1 on the chart) and take it down in the hole one row up and one row over (No. 2 on the chart). Continue to work from left to right, bringing the needle up in odd-numbered holes and taking it down in even-numbered holes.

The continental stitch is worked in the same manner, but it moves from right to left, creating a padding on the wrong side. Try a row of each and then look on the back of your work to see the difference.

The third version is the basketweave, but this is a little more advanced. We'll discuss it more in another column.

("Pat's Pointers: The Needlepoint Handbook" by Pat Trexler guides the needleworker from the beginner basics through more detailed instructions and projects. This 200-page book also includes sections on counted cross-stitch and aids for the handicapped who wish to participate in needlecraft activities. To order, send $8.95 plus $1 postage and handling to "Pat's Pointers Needlepoint Handbook," in care of the Daily Reflector, 4400 Johnson Drive, Fairway, Kan., 66205. Please make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate.)

Signals

The administration had something to crow about with release of the gross national product figures for 1984 ... up almost 5 percent and well above December's estimate. Economic activity (and growth) was heartening after a long period of discouraging data.

That good news is somewhat dampened by other developments that do not bode well.

For instance, the agriculture picture is a disaster. Our balance of trade has red ink as the dominant color motif, and no cure in sight. Employment figures are high, but unemployment figures in selected categories are also unacceptably high.

In this land of perennial plenty there is little agreement as to what will be done to resolve our farm dilemmas. The foreign trade picture is bedeviled by the impact of our own general prosperity and the prescriptions are still only generalities. The result appears to be a continuing imbalance and more dependency on domestic markets, which in turn are threatened by cheaper imports.

The suspicion grows that ranks of our unemployables are probably growing because of mounting complexities in the new levels of basic skills required by the labor market ... a requirement too many people are unable or unwilling to face.

Yes, we needed some good news; if only to give us time to cope with all the other ominous signals.

Worthwhile

It seems only yesterday that smallpox was one of the dread curses of humankind. Everywhere you turned there was somebody wearing a vaccination scar or boasting "mine didn't take."

Things have changed.

The World Health Organization says the last case of smallpox was in Somalia in 1977, and the disease is now considered non-existent.

WHO's reasoning is thus: the smallpox virus must be passed on from one person to another at least every three weeks or it dies out. "So, when competent worldwide surveillance systems cannot detect anyone with smallpox, we can be sure it doesn't exist. And if it doesn't exist, it cannot come back."

It makes those small oval scars so many people still wear today worth the price.

Reagan Outlasts The Governors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chalk up another landslide victory for President Reagan, this time over the nation's governors in the political battle over federal deficits.

The governors scored some stylistic points with their call for a budget freeze that would include defense and cost of living allowances for Social Security recipients.

But when it came to substance, it was no contest. In the battle to force the president to make concessions, the governors made Walter F. Mondale look like a contender.

As the state leaders ended their three-day winter meeting here Tuesday, it was clear they had failed to move the president when they appealed for a shift in his budget priorities. At the same time, he got their endorsement for a constitutional amendment to mandate a balanced budget and to give presidents authority to veto individual items in appropriations bills.

"We've proved, representing the 50 states, that we could do it," said Gov. John Carlin of Kansas, at the post-meeting news conference.

Proved they could do what? "What we accomplished is what Congress is going to have to accomplish, and that is to show guts, to be courageous, to set aside at least enough self-interest, put enough on the table to get the job done," said the Kansas Democrat who is chairman of the National Governors Association.

The only way the governors could declare victory and go home was to declare they were directing their appeals to Congress, not the White House.

A determined president against 50 governors in a battle over federal budget priorities isn't a fair fight. The president will win every time.

Consider the budget resolution the governors adopted.

They sounded tough as they called for including the Pentagon in a one-year budget freeze, a position the president made clear he would ignore just as he did previous appeals to scale back his defense budget.

"Don't bother," was how one governor quoted him as responding.

When the governors went to the White House on Monday, Reagan also was firm on the question of including Social Security cost-of-

WASHINGTON — Joe Garcia, bus driver, recently joined Bill Crump, game warden, in the annals of American constitutional history. They are bit players in a drama that began with the founding fathers and continues to this day.

No question more passionately engaged the authors of the Constitution than the question of national powers as opposed to state powers.

Proponents of the Constitution argued persuasively that the powers delegated to the national government, extensive as they were, nonetheless were limited powers. The states, they said, were assured of sovereignty over their own affairs. Those who opposed the Constitution were not convinced. Patrick Henry pointed to the Commerce Clause and warned that it could be used to reduce state powers to imbecility. As a condition of joining the union, Virginia and New York — the two most powerful and populous states of that day — insisted upon one amendment above all others. It became the 10th Amendment: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

Last week Justice Lewis Powell complained bitterly that five of his brothers on the Supreme Court had "effectively reduced the 10th Amendment to meaningless rhetoric." The majority had ruled that Joe Garcia, who works for the publicly owned San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority, is just as entitled to overtime pay under the federal law as if he were driving for a private company.

The court's decision in the Garcia case could have a stunning impact on many state and local programs. The opinion appears to make every federal regulation of "commerce" fully applicable to every political subdivision. But before the proponents of strong national power celebrate a mighty victory, or the proponents of states' rights dissolve in despair, something more should be said: The Garcia case dramatically makes the point that ours is in truth a government of men, and not of laws.

Back in June of 1968, the high court decided Maryland v. Wirtz. The ruling: Federal labor laws apply to state hospital workers: In June of 1976, the high court decided National League of Cities v. Usery. The ruling: Federal labor laws do not apply to state workers.

In June of 1981, the court decided Hodel v. Virginia Surface Mining. The ruling: Federal strip-mining laws pre-empt state laws. The National League opinion of 1976 was significantly narrowed.

In March of 1982, the court decided a case involving collective bargaining on the state-owned Long Island Railroad. The ruling: The state of New York is subject to the federal Railway Labor Act.

In March of 1983, the court decided a case brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The ruling: The federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act prevents Wyoming from retiring game warden Bill Crump at age 55.

Now comes the Garcia case of 1985, overruling the League of Cities case of 1976, which overruled the Wirtz case of 1968. The principal character through this revolving door is Justice Harry Blackmun. He provided the necessary fifth vote in 1976, but it was a wavering vote: "I am not troubled," he said, "by certain possible implications."

Last week Blackmun again provided the necessary fifth vote — but in the opposite direction. Again he was wishy-washy. Speaking for the majority, he said that "undoubtedly" there were limits on the power of the federal government to interfere with state functions. He just couldn't immediately think of any.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I received a blue insert in my cable television bill stating that I was being given an array of new services. The news services were movie channels — Showtime. I was not excited that Channel 21-TBN was being moved to make room for more sex and violence. The communists say they can take over this and any other country without firing a shot. How? Through the minds of its people. If all we program ourselves with is sex and violence, then that is all we'll get every night on the news — exactly what we've programmed our world to do.

The TBN station not only had good viewing for adults, but all of my children's favorite programs are now gone (all that I allow them to view, that is). They include the following: Monday 10:30 a.m., Gospel Bill; Monday 6 p.m., Circle Square; Tuesday 10:30 a.m., KPTL; Wednesday 10:30 a.m., The One Way Game; Thursday 10:30 a.m., Toddler's Place; Friday 10:30 a.m., Joy Junction; Saturday 10 a.m., Toddler's Place; 10:30 a.m., Gospel Bill, 11 a.m., Joy Junction; 11:30 a.m., KPTL.

As you can see, there is no TV for my little ones now. What a shame that this community will sit back and continue to allow more and more evil to pervert the minds of our youth.

Strength For Today

Anyone who has ever visited the church in Assisi, where St. Francis labored and lived for God many centuries ago, must be impressed by the simplicity and effectiveness of this man's service. He did not have much to give the Lord, but he gave all he had. And because he did, millions of Christian believers of widely different affiliations have been blessing him throughout the centuries.

"Lord, make me an instrument of thy peace," prayer Francis. "Where there is hatred, let me sow love; where there is injury, pardon; where there is doubt, faith; where there is despair, hope. It is in thee that we are born to eternal life."

Such a man was St. Francis of Assisi. He is the saint of every believer. He is the brother of every needy person. He makes the lives of everyone he comes in contact with shine with new splendor. He is an example of what God can do through a truly committed life.

Succession Debate Rages

RALEIGH — The debate over gubernatorial succession has been smoldering for the past nine years. Two bills filed in the General Assembly this year should mean the debate either ignites into a full burning fire or that it finally gets snuffed out.

In an unusual off-year election, voters in 1977 ratified a constitutional amendment that allowed the governor and lieutenant governor to seek two consecutive four-year terms for the first time in state history.

But that election, rather than settling the issue, seems to have kept it alive. Only a handful of voters bothered to come to the polls and critics have charged that that was just how former Gov. Jim Hunt, who was the driving force behind the succession amendment, wanted it.

The issue has smoldered since with former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and several other Democratic candidates for governor making noise about it during the 1984 campaign. Editors, commentators and other political types have said that the succession amendment backed up the political talent in the state and precipitated the huge field in the Democratic primary. Others say the succession amendment killed the House's tradition of one-term speakers.

Hunt has been the most vocal supporter of succession. He has regularly said that succession allows a governor enough time to put his program into effect. He's also said that with the possibility of reelection, a governor doesn't lose his effectiveness in the third and fourth years of his term, that he doesn't become a lame duck.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, is proposing that North Carolina become the first state to elect a governor to a six-year term. "For all the folks who said four years isn't enough to get a program implemented, this is an option," Hardison said.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, has sponsored a bill that would simply repeal the succession amendment. He says succession has effectively increased the length of the governor's term to eight years. The power of incumbency will make it pretty hard to unseat a governor, he said.

Wicker said he thought the voters would reject a six-year term. "I think the (1982) referendum on four-year terms for legislators showed that people don't necessarily like long terms for office-holders."

Others argue that six years without having to come before the electorate, even if the odds are heavily weighted in the incumbent's favor, is just too long.

But Hardison says six years is not too long a term. "We elect senators for six years and no one is complaining about that."

Wicker said four years is enough. "A governor can come in and get his programs and policies implemented in one term. Other governors did it... And, I also think that a four-year term would help keep down the costs of having to seek these kinds of offices." Wicker argues that big-time contributors would be less likely to invest $25,000 in a candidate if the man could be governor for only four years.

Both bills would go into effect only after the 1988 election so Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan would not be affected if they chose to seek second terms.

There may be a lot of sentiment for changing the succession amendment but it is not easy to do.

living increases in the freeze.

But in that case, the president would love to have the governors — most of them Democrats — on record with a tough stand in favor of freezing the increases for Social Security recipients. He'd also like to see Congress bite that politically explosive bullet and force him to go along with a freeze.

The big question in Washington and out in the various states continues to be: who is going to take the political heat from the unpopular decisions required to cut the budget deficits?

Social Security is among the most sensitive of those issues. Raising taxes is another tough one.

Republican governors quoted Reagan as saying that he was concerned about being "set up" politically by the Democrats urging him to support a freeze that included Social Security.

Of course, the Democrats believe if anyone is being set up on that issue, they are.

The debate among the governors provided a footnote to the question of whether Reagan's campaign pledge to protect Social Security included the cost-of-living adjustments.

"I never specifically mentioned that," the president told a news conference on Jan. 9. "I did say, however, that I would resist anything that would reduce the benefits and the payments."

According to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, the president told the governors he didn't intend to include the cost-of-living hike in his campaign pledge.

"However, the American people misunderstood me and I'm going to go with their interpretation," Cuomo quoted the president as saying.

Study Links Prenatal X-rays And Cancer

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Even low doses of radiation may be harmful to the unborn, say researchers who conducted a study indicating that children exposed to medical X-rays while still in the womb face about 2½ times the usual risk of cancer.

The study of 32,000 twins conducted by National Cancer Institute researchers supports the theory that prenatal X-rays cause childhood tumors, leukemia and other forms of cancer.

"I don't think anything definitive can be said from this study because of the small numbers involved," said Dr. Elizabeth B. Harvey, director of the study released today. "But I think the fact that it is consistent with previous studies certainly adds an interesting bit of information to a very controversial issue."

Doctors once routinely used X-rays to check the health of fetuses, but the practice was replaced in the 1960s by ultrasound examination, which does not employ radiation.

Ms. Harvey said aid the research may be useful in setting radiation standards for pregnant women. However, she noted that standards are already strict and hospitals now try to avoid exposing pregnant women to X-rays.

The study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, surveyed twins born in Connecticut from 1930 to 1969. Although about 30 percent were X-rayed in the womb, only 32 of the youngsters developed cancer by age 15.

Several other studies have found higher-than-usual cancer rates among children who were X-rayed before birth. However, some experts suspected that the medical condition that prompted the X-rays — not the X-rays themselves — might have caused the cancers.

The researchers hoped to avoid this criticism by studying twins. Doctors once routinely X-rayed pregnant women who were especially big to determine whether they were carrying twins, not because they suspected anything was wrong with their fetuses.

The study showed that twins who got cancer during childhood had been exposed to diagnostic X-rays in the womb more frequently than those who had not. The researchers calculated that the cancer risk was about 2½ times higher for those who had been X-rayed.

"The results, though based on small numbers, provide further evidence that low-dose prenatal irradiation may increase the risk of childhood cancer," they wrote.

The X-rays typically exposed the fetuses to about 1,000 millirems of radiation. A rem is a standard unit of measurement of absorbed radiation. By contrast, Americans ordinarily receive about 100 to 200 millirems each year of natural background radiation.

Earlier research has shown that obstetric X-rays are not powerful enough to cause cancer in lab animals. The doctors said their work suggests "the human fetus, as opposed to the fetus of other species, may be especially sensitive to the carcinogenic (cancer-causing) effects of ionizing radiation."

In an editorial in the journal, Dr.

Brian MacMahon of the Harvard School of Public Health wrote that this study and an earlier one "push us some way toward thinking" that prenatal X-rays can cause childhood cancer, but he said it's unlikely that the issue will ever be settled beyond all doubt.

Researcher Says Asbestos Is 'Probably Everywhere'

CHICAGO (AP) — Asbestos has been found in the lungs of infants less than 10 months old, suggesting that the flame-retardant mineral fiber linked with lung cancer is "probably everywhere," a researcher says.

"Nobody had ever looked at (possible asbestos exposure in) either children or infants," said Dr. Abida K. Haque, a pathologist at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

"I started looking at ones that had died of various diseases," Ms. Haque said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "I was surprised that in the first one I looked at, I found a few asbestos bodies."

Asbestos bodies are microscopic fragments of asbestos that become coated with iron and proteins after they lodge in the lung. Over several years, they give rise to fibrous tissue that displaces lung tissue and reduces breathing capacity. Researchers believe prolonged exposure can cause lung cancer.

Concentrations of asbestos bodies in some infants were comparable with those in some adult lung-cancer patients, Ms. Haque and her colleagues said in a report in the March issue of the American Medical Association's Archives of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine.

"The number (of asbestos bodies) I found was really small," Ms. Haque said. "What I was concerned about was the duration of exposure — being exposed when they are small ... what effect it might have when they are 20 or 30."

The study was based on 17 autopsies on infants ranging in age from 2½ months to 10 months. Ten had died from sudden infant death syndrome and seven had died from pneumonia, skin infections, meningitis and other diseases.

Ms. Haque cautioned that the Galveston study was "very preliminary" and that at least 50 to 100 more infants will have to be studied to determine whether the findings are meaningful.

Educators Honored

Two East Carolina University educators who conducted research on teacher certification and the effectiveness of math teachers have won the 1985 Distinguished Research Award from the Association of Teacher Educators.

Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the school of education, and Dr. Parmalee Hawk, a clinical professor of education, were named award recipients at the recent ATE national conference in Las Vegas.

The award was given for their Spencer Foundation-funded research on the validity of math teacher certification standards. The study found that math teachers certified in their field scored "significantly higher" on instructional presentation in the classroom than did math teachers who were certified in other fields.

Religious Leaders Petition Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious leaders, buffeted by recent federal arrests of church workers, are appealing to Congress to side with ministers and others harboring Central American refugees in a growing U.S. "sanctuary movement."

The religious leaders, representing a broad cross-section of faiths, were taking petitions to Capitol Hill today, asking for investigations of Reagan administration conduct.

Organizers said the appeal was being made by more than 200 bishops, ministers and rabbis and called it "the first challenge on this scale by religious leaders opposed to the administration's policy toward refuge-seekers from El Salvador and Guatemala."

Names cited included Avery Post, president of the United Church of Christ; Jim Andrews, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, USA; Rabbi Irwin Blank, past president of the Synagogue Council of America; and Lutheran Bishop Gus Schulz of California.

The group is making two main complaints:

—The administration is deporting many refugees who make their way to the United States from Central America. The government argues the refugees are merely seeking economic gain rather than fleeing persecution as claimed by the churches providing them sanctuary.

—The government has infiltrated the sanctuary movement with undercover agents carrying hidden tape recorders in order to buttress legal cases against church workers protecting people the administration deems illegal aliens. Some religious leaders call that infiltration a violation of constitutional religious-freedom rights.

By the movement's count, more than 200 U.S. churches and synagogues are now active in providing help for Central American refugees — or in transporting them or supporting other churches that do so.

The "sanctuary" label comes from the ancient concept that government authorities mustn't violate religious property to arrest anyone, although relatively few refugees are actually being harbored on church grounds.

Public attention has been growing since last month's federal indictment of 16 people in Arizona, including two Roman Catholic priests, three nuns and a Protestant minister.

Takeover

Battle Of Fast-Buck 'Dudes' And 'Unfit'

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While executives of major American corporations describe takeover specialists as fast-buck "dudes" trying to mug their companies, the corporate raiders say they are only trying to get rid of unfit managers.

Those positions were staked out Wednesday during a House panel hearing when some of the big guns of recent corporate wars loosened their tongues. Carl Icahn, the New York financier who is fighting for control of Phillips

Petroleum Co., contended that modern corporate management is based on an "anti-Darwinian theory: survival of the fittest."

He talked of "mediocre" and "arrogant" managers, applying the second term to the Phillips officials he has dealt with during the last three weeks.

"I don't think I'm arrogant," Phillips executive vice president Charles M. Kittrell retorted. "I think I have more respect for the shareholders of Phillips than anyone at this table."

Kittrell said he was talking about those who had held Phillips stock for, perhaps, 30 years to 50 years and "had faith in the company," not necessarily "Johnny-come-latelies."

He called Icahn and Mesa Petroleum Chairman T. Boone Pickens "dudes."

Kittrell said he was proud of his lengthy association with the firm and its commitment to long-term energy production — a goal he said was not helped by having to divert resources to fight takeover attempts.

"We not only get competition from these dudes but competition at the pump," he said.

Kittrell commended the telecommunications, consumer protection and finance subcommittee of the Energy and Commerce Committee for its hearings on takeovers even though "we are in it up to our eyeballs and there's not time enough to do anything for us."

Taking a swipe at corporate executives, Icahn said the best managers often do not rise to the top because "the fittest often are a little abrasive."

He said many chief executives get their jobs "because they have been there 20 years and kowtowed" to the man they succeed and "because they know how to get along with the board."

"Management has a vice-like grip on these companies," he said. "The only way you can get half these guys off the golf course is to file a 13-D" — the notice to the Securities and Exchange Commission of an investor's intention to take over a company.

Pickens, an earlier Phillips suitor, was in an equally combative mood. "Mergers don't divert management from running companies," he said. "Mergers divert management attention from hunting and fishing camps."

Icahn said raiders such as he and Pickens often pay more than a financial price for their efforts.

"A lot of people with the money to do it don't want to get into these things because you start reading about yourself in the newspaper," Icahn said. "I used to read that I'm a gangster. Now they say I'm not real."

Icahn referred to Phillips newspaper ads questioning whether Icahn was "for real" in the sense of whether he could put together the credit that would be required to follow through on his offer.

AGENT RETIRES — Jerry Parr, the Secret Service agent credited with saving President Reagan's life by shoving him into a limousine when he was shot four years ago, said goodbye to his boss Wednesday. # House Panel OKs Interstate Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel, insisting it has sworn off "pork barrel endeavors" and "political nonsense," voted to send $7.2 billion in bottled up interstate highway funds to state governments.

The House Public Works and Transportation Committee approved on a unanimous voice vote Wednesday a stripped-down, two-page version of the Interstate Cost Estimate (ICE).

The chairman of the House panel, Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., predicted the measure would receive quick approval in the House, even though it was at sharp odds with a 34-page version passed by the Senate 94-0 on Saturday.

Howard, joined by the panel's top Republicans, said the House would not seek a conference committee with the Senate to resolve differences between the two versions. Instead, he said, the House would press the Senate to yield and pass the House version.

But if the Senate doesn't yield, there could be further delays in disbursement of the funds. Such a delay, state highway officials and roadbuilders say, could force cancellation of many 1985 construction projects in states where rough weather shortens the building season.

Both houses of Congress have been billing their versions as "clean ICE," stripped of special home-state projects. The measure approved Wednesday diverged from last year's House bill, which contained 40 extra home-state projects dear to the lawmakers and their constituents but not part of the interstate system.

But Rep. Gene Snyder of Kentucky, the panel's ranking Republican, disputed claims by his Senate colleagues that the Senate bill had been stripped of special projects. In fact, he said, it is a "dirty ICE," containing 38 special provisions.

Howard also claimed his panel's version represents the real "clean ICE," containing "no additions, add-ons or U.S. Senate pork barrel endeavors."

"The time for political nonsense is over," Howard told reporters following the vote.

Howard did say, however, that the House version contains funds for the Boston Central Artery, a planned four-lane highway and tunnel dear to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Howard said the Boston project, which is not in the Senate version, "has always been part of" the interstate system. The Federal Highway Administration argues that it is not.

Under 1982 legislation, the cost estimate must be approved before the $7.2 billion can be released from the Interstate Highway Trust.

Navy Planning Major Job Layoffs At Its Shipyards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is planning layoffs at its eight government-owned shipyards under a new policy that will put more stress on the use of private yards for ship overhauls and maintenance, officials say.

The decision, disclosed Wednesday by sources close to Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr., will mean layoffs of roughly 5,100 workers at the eight yards between now and Dec. 31. The layoffs will be accompanied by a crackdown on overtime work at the yards announced last Friday.

According to sources who agreed to discuss the matter if not identified, Lehman wants overall employment at the Navy yards to drop from roughly 78,100 to 73,000 by Dec. 31. No decision has been made as yet on how the "reductions-in-force" will be spread among the various yards, but meetings to decide that question are planned next week.

The eight shipyards owned and operated by the Navy are located in Portsmouth, N.H.; Philadelphia; Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S.C.; Puget Sound, Wash.; Mare Island, Calif.; Long Beach, Calif., and Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The layoffs will have no effect on the construction of new ships; that work is already performed entirely by 21 commercial firms. The sources also said that while the cutbacks and overtime freeze may slow some overhaul work at the Navy yards, Lehman does not anticipate any major slippages.

The Navy sent 57 of its ships into port for overhaul in fiscal 1984 — 25 to its own yards and 32 to private yards. Similar figures are expected during the current year, one source said. At the same time, however, the Navy has decided to send more of its smaller jobs — those that fall short of a complete overhaul — to private yards.

SOUND AND FURY — Eileen Ringel, with her 4-month-old daughter, stands inside her apartment in Evanston, Ill., which is only 25 feet from a siren (upper right) that sounds every hour during snow. The siren is used to alert motorists to keep their cars off the city streets. Mrs. Ringel and other residents have complained repeatedly about the siren, but city officials have kept it. (AP Laserphoto)

Babies Cry, Dogs Howl ... It's Snowing In Evanston

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — If World War III broke out in the winter, Evanston residents probably would go out and move their cars.

The city's air-raid siren sounds for 30 seconds each hour when it snows at least 4 inches, a reminder to people in this northern Chicago suburb to move their cars off certain streets to accommodate snowplows.

But when the alarm goes off, dogs howl, babies cry and tempers boil in Evanston — and nearby Chicago, Skokie and Wilmette.

Alderwoman Evelyn Raden has been fielding complaints from citizens, like the woman who called to ask what would happen if Evanston's air raid siren wailed in time of war.

"I had to acknowledge that people would probably go to move their cars," she said.

The first time Eileen Ringel heard the siren, she "thought it was a joke. I looked at my husband and we said 'The Russians have landed,'" she recalled Wednesday. Their apartment is only 15 feet from the yellow siren atop the police station.

Mrs. Ringel and her physician-husband Edward have a 4-month-old daughter, Meredith. "When the siren rings, she starts to cry. Babies are suppose to sleep at this age," said Mrs. Ringel, who took her complaint to a meeting of City Council on Monday night.

The siren is tested at 10:30 a.m. every Tuesday, but the Ringels, who moved into the apartment in May, didn't know about the parking warnings until a big snowstorm hit two weeks ago.

"The siren rang every hour on the hour for six days," she said.

"We might have to move. I can't let it go on," she said. "It snows a lot in Chicago, you know."

Mrs. Raden asked the city to study alternatives "so the whole community doesn't suffer."

"It will take some brainstorming," said Brian Coyman, assistant city manager. "We could end up recommending that the city continue with the sirens."

Coyman said the sirens work. "During the snow and wind two weeks ago, we had the snow cleared on all streets, curb to curb, in just two days," he said.

But, Mrs. Ringel said, "The sirens haven't worked very well because they still had to go out with loudspeakers and tell people to move their cars."

President's Tax Reform Plan To Be Ready By May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is promising to make taxpayers out of wealthy Americans and profitable corporations that avoid paying taxes under the present system.

But most other details of the tax-overhaul plan the president will recommend to Congress apparently will remain secret until it is sent to Capitol Hill, probably by about May 1. Between now and then, the administration aims to put together a package it hopes will have enough support to win approval.

"The worst thing we could do is come up here (at this time) with a very specific piece of legislation that didn't have bipartisan support," Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Wednesday while steadfastly denying requests to provide details of the plan to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Under the best of circumstances, overhauling the tax system will be an uphill fight, said Rep. William Gradison, R-Ohio, as the panel opened hearings on taxes.

"Potential winners are skeptical they will be helped and potential losers are organizing..." Gradison said. "This venture can only succeed with presidential leadership. Efforts to stop comprehensive reform are well-financed and well under way."

Similar statements came from several other committee members, along with complaints that the far-reaching Treasury plan recommended last November by Baker's predecessor, Donald T. Regan, would make it more difficult for businesses to get the money they need for expansion.

"Everything in the Treasury plan is up for discussion," Baker said, adding that unspecified provisions in it were unacceptable to Reagan. Every proposal will be studied carefully "to make certain we don't do something that will seriously impact capital formation (business investment) in this country," Baker pledged.

The Treasury plan, aimed at making the tax system fairer, simpler and more efficient, would cut individual tax rates and double the $1,000 personal exemption. It would pay for those reductions by eliminating or watering down numerous deductions. Corporations would lose some major incentives, including the investment tax credit and quick depreciation, but would get lower rates in return.

Baker, who in the last four years was White House chief of staff, the job now held by Regan, said five principles underlie the administration's tax goals: no tax increase; a tax exemption for individuals at or near the poverty line; no changes in the tax treatment of interest paid on the mortgage for principal homes; dropping the top individual tax rate from 50 percent to 35 percent, with the cut being financed by reducing or repealing many deductions, and lower tax rates for corporations.

Some of those principles may conflict with each other. For example, Baker conceded that if individual tax rates are cut, "you are going to see some increased taxes paid by business — it's that simple."

Judge Does Quick Strip

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — When it comes to seeking justice, Municipal Court Judge Peggy Hora doesn't like anything to stand in her way. Not even her clothes.

So when the judge was faced with a women defendant in an ill-fitting, khaki dress issued by the Alameda County jail, she decided that was no way to appear before a jury Wednesday.

The judge stepped into her chambers, slipped off the size 16, beige-and-black striped dress she was wearing and gave it to the defendant.

The defendant, a 34-year-old woman from Oakland facing grand theft charges, was unable to post bail at the time of her arrest on Jan. 19 and has been held in jail in Santa Rita awaiting her court appearance.

"I certainly wasn't going to let a jury see a defendant sitting in jail clothes," the judge said, "And I just couldn't see hanging up three attorneys, a judge and a jury over her not having something to wear."

But the quick-change act went for naught when the defendant decided to plead guilty before facing the jury.

Tale Of Big Bass Set Off Fishermen

HOUSTON (AP) — Schools of bass fishermen eager to reserve a spot on a new lake overwhelmed an AT&T long distance telephone computer with more than a half-million phone calls and affected service from Houston all day.

"It was like trying to pour Niagara through a funnel," said AT&T spokesman Randy Shields of the calls that began about 9 a.m. Wednesday from anglers trying to land one of 100 daily spots on the Gibbons Creek Reservoir operated by the Texas Municipal Power Agency in Navasota.

A Tuesday night television program showed large bass snapping at lures dropped by reporters in the agency's widely publicized power-plant cooling lake. It opens for fishing March 11, and the agency is allowing only 100 fishermen per day to reserve a slot by telephone.

The calls, routed to Navasota through the Houston computer, were heaviest between 10 and 11 a.m. when 143,500 calls were blocked. All told, the computer dumped about 530,000 calls, Shields said.

"I didn't know we had so many bass fishermen around here," Shields said.

Shields said he understands that there is only a single telephone to take all of the calls and it was swamped on Wednesday, the first day reservations were being accepted.

He said a computer that was designed to handle 507,000 calls per hour at one point received 571,106 calls. During one five-minute period, he said, there were 16,599 calls made to the power agency number.

The overload of calls were blocked by a three-tier system, he said.

The first system gives the caller a recording saying that the circuits are jammed. When that became overloaded, callers began receiving a "fast busy signal." When the busy signal system became jammed, callers received no indication at all, "the line just went dead," said Shields.

Officials could not be reached at the Texas Municipal Power Agency because the phone circuits were busy.

Dog Sentence

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A man convicted of throwing his pet dog 14 floors to its death has been sentenced to three months in jail. Noel Lipsett, 48, was also banned from ever again keeping a dog by Birmingham Magistrates Court.

"This is the worst case that I have ever heard in all my years on this bench of cruelty to an animal," said Magistrate Horatio Growcott.

The dog's body was found on a concrete canopy at the foot of an apartment building last August with multiple fractures and internal bleeding.

White House Threatens To Veto Farm Bills

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has moved to extend credit to struggling farmers just in time for spring planting, but the White House says the proposal is too expensive and will likely be vetoed.

Both the House and Senate on Wednesday passed separate legislation offering various forms of credit relief to farmers having trouble getting operating money this spring. They include interest rate subsidies and loan guarantees and advances — all opposed by President Reagan as unnecessary.

Backers of the credit-aid moves, mostly Democrats and farm-state

Republicans, hailed the moves as a way to keep farmers caught in a credit pinch alive for at least another year.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said the action signaled a breakdown in budget discipline early in a year when Congress is grasping for ways to reduce the federal budget deficit.

"We haven't demonstrated we're willing to face up to the deficit," Dole told senators. "We're adding a billion-plus (dollars) to our problem."

Dole vowed that the credit legislation is "never going to become law," and that was backed up by a threat from deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, who said: "In all likelihood, we'll veto" if the measure reaches Reagan in its present form.

The GOP-dominated Senate slipped from the control of its leaders and approved the credit help 62-35 under the pressure of the mounting problems in rural America. Many producers, particularly highly leveraged farmers in the Midwestern grain belt, have found themselves unable to get planting loans as the value of their land and crops have plummeted.

Senators first passed, 54-45, a measure that would provide $100 million to "buy down" interest rates for farmers whose income is unable to meet payments on a loan at market rates. Commercial lenders would match the interest subsidy to bring down interest rates as much as four percentage points.

The bill, sponsored by Sens. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and John Melcher, D-Mont., also would earmark an additional $1.85 billion in loan guarantee authority, on top of the $650 million or more set aside by Reagan, and boost the level of guarantees to 90 percent of principal.

The provisions are virtually identical to ideas advanced several weeks ago by the Independent Bankers Association, and Dole and other opponents labeled the amendment a bailout for banks that had made questionable loans. Proponents argued that the health of rural banks is essential to the survival of farmers and small towns.

The Senate also approved, 50-48, legislation to give farmers immediate advances on crop loans that normally would not come until harvest. Both were tacked onto a bill authorizing non-food aid for drought-ravaged areas of Africa, similar to one passed by the House earlier this week. The measure now goes to a House-Senate conference to work out differences.

At the same time, the Democrat-dominated House voted 318-103 for a bill, similar to one of the Senate amendments, offering advances of up to 50 percent of next fall's price-support loans to farmers unable to get loans to plant this spring. That measure, which also boosts money available for loan guarantees by $3 billion, was sponsored by Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

Unlike the Senate version, Daschle's bill restricts the advance loans to farmers who are unable to find credit through conventional sources.

While President Reagan has argued that the administration's existing credit-aid program is in place and working, a majority in Congress disagreed.

"The Farmers Home Administration has been about as effective in getting money to farmers in this disaster as a worm chasing a bunch of chickens, trying to corral them," said Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo. "They've withheld the necessary personnel to get the job done. This bill will get the money to the farmers in time to help them."

Melcher said a Reagan veto of the legislation "would risk posturing the Republicans in a position that they have completely turned their backs on American farmers and ranchers when they most desperately need some support."

An ABC News-Washington Post poll, conducted between Feb. 22 and 26, asked 1,506 men and women by telephone:

"Some farmers are saying that they stand to lose their farms because of economic problems beyond their control. Do you think the government should or should not give special aid such as loans or loan guarantees to farmers who are in economic trouble?"

In the poll, 82 percent said yes, the government should give special aid, such as loans or loan guarantees, to farmers; 15 percent said no, and 3 percent had no opinion. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

FROZEN BUT RECOVERING — Michael Troche, 2½, wandered away from his home in Wisconsin five weeks ago and spent several hours in snow and bitter cold. When he was found, his body temperature had fallen to 60 and doctors said his heart had stopped beating. The bandages are for skin grafts. (AP Laserphoto)

Pentagon Raises Estimate For Cleaning Up Wastes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is preparing to administer two hazardous waste "Superfunds," a civilian version run by the Environmental Protection Agency and its multibillion-dollar military counterpart.

The Defense Department's program to clean up toxics at present and former military installations has vaulted into the "super" class with a new cost estimate: $5 billion to $10 billion and possibly even more.

The new price tag compares with the $1.6 billion estimate given to Congress last year and a revision to $3.2 billion provided only last month to the House Appropriations military construction subcommittee.

But Carl Schafer, Pentagon director of environmental policy, told the panel Wednesday that the estimate is rising as the Defense Department learns more about the extent of the problem and how to correct it.

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., who calls the Pentagon cleanup effort "the military Superfund," says he thinks the latest cost estimate is low.

"Based on what I've seen, I'm worried about $20 billion by the end of the year," said Fazio, a member of the subcommittee.

The Pentagon, which may have 800 or more sites to purge of toxic waste produced by weapons manufacturing and day-to-day military operations, is not covered by the EPA's "Superfund," which is not used for military sites.

The Reagan administration is asking Congress to give the Superfund $5.3 billion for the five years beginning next Oct. 1. In the current five-year program, the Superfund has $1.6 billion.

The EPA estimated in December that Superfund costs could eventually total $22 billion, about half of what congressional scientific advisers say could be the eventual civilian cleanup cost.

Hot-Cold Extremes

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Yellowstone, Mont., retained its title as the nation's coldest place for 1984, but Bullhead City topped its Arizona companion Gila Bend for hottest.

West Yellowstone, perennially one of the nation's coldest places, scored both the single coldest day of 1984 and the most daily low readings of any place in the country, according to National Weather Service statistics.

The comparative readings covering the 48 contiguous states were compiled by David H. Hickcox of Ohio Wesleyan University and are reported in the February issue of Weatherwise magazine.

The year's record low was 43 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, recorded at West Yellowstone on Jan. 18. However, the article noted that there was an unofficial report of a minus 65 degree reading at Middle Sinks, Utah.

Overall, Hickcox calculated, West Yellowstone was the nation's coldest place on 80 different days last year, the largest number of daily lows for any singular place.

Second was Gunnison, Colo., with 57 daily lows, moving up from third place the year before.

Turning up the heat, Bullhead City was the nation's hottest location on 71 different days, to move from fifth to first in that category.

The single hottest reading was 123 degrees, recorded at Bullhead City on July 5.

Gila Bend, Ariz., which had recorded the most days as the nation's hottest in 1983, dropped to seventh place last year with only 21 top readings.

Ortega Offers Proposals To Have Talks Reopened

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega says his leftist government is willing to send 100 Cuban military advisers home and stop acquiring new weapons systems to persuade President Reagan to reopen talks and drop his support for Nicaraguan rebels.

Ortega outlined to reporters Wednesday seven pages of proposals he said could help persuade the Reagan administration to discontinue "the hostile policy against Nicaragua, in violation of the principles and norms of international cooperation."

The first 50 Cuban military advisers could leave in May, Ortega said. Nicaragua also was willing to impose an "indefinite moratorium" on acquiring new weapons systems, including "interception aircraft," he said.

Ortega did not say what he meant by "interception aircraft." Nicaragua maintains it has the right to acquire Soviet MiG fighter planes but says it has not obtained any of them.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Vivienne Ascher said of Ortega's proposals: "We haven't received anything directly. When we receive the full text we will study it." The United States in January suspended a series of talks being held in Manzanillo, Mexico, saying it wanted to evaluate the Central American peace process and the discussions with Nicaragua. Reagan is leading an effort to persuade Congress to restore $14 million in aid for rebels fighting to overthrow Ortega's government.

Ortega said the proposals should prompt Central American governments to sign a peace plan drawn up by the four-nation Contadora group, encourage the United States to return to the Manzanillo talks, and convince the administration to withdraw its request for aid to the rebels.

The proposals were "a first step toward the fulfillment of the objectives" advocated by the Contadora group — Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela, Ortega said.

The four countries are seeking a negotiated settlement to conflicts in Central America, and one of the points in their draft agreement is the withdrawal of all foreign military advisers.

Referring to what he called "the false arguments on the supposed militarization of Nicaragua," Ortega also said he had invited U.S. congressional leaders to send a delegation to see the "defensive character of the armed forces and defense means of our country."

U.S. government officials claim there are as many as 10,000 Cubans in Nicaragua. The exact number of military advisers, teachers, engineers, health workers and others is not known, but U.S. officials contend many of the Cubans have at least paramilitary training.

In November 1983, when Nicaragua ordered more than 2,000 Cubans out of the country, the government said the country had 200 Cuban military advisers.

The Reagan administration maintains that Nicaragua is building a military force that threatens other nations in the area.

In early November, the Sandinistas received what Western sources said were at least six Soviet MI-24 helicopters — heavily armored aircraft capable of saturating a battlefield with rocket and machine-gun fire. They also have 73 Soviet-made tanks, 120 armored cars and personnel carriers and about 100 howitzers and multiple rocket launchers.

Ortega revealed some aspects of his proposals after a meeting with visiting U.S. bishops Tuesday night.

The bishops traveled to El Salvador on Wednesday, and called for a negotiated settlement to the five-year-old civil war between the

DANIEL ORTEGA

U.S.-backed government and leftist rebels.

"At this point we will say precisely what we have been saying for years about Central America and about every country in the world — that we urge, we plead for political negotiated solutions to all conflicts," said Archbishop John J. O'Connor of New York.

The bishops visited the tomb of Monsignor Oscar Arnulfo Romero, San Salvador's archbishop and an outspoken advocate of the poor who was assassinated while saying Mass on March 24, 1980.

O'Connor said the bishops would report to the U.S. Catholic Bishops Conference, which has called for an end to U.S. military aid to Nicaraguan rebels and to the Salvadoran government.

Islanders Expel French Governor

ST. PIERRE, St. Pierre-Miquelon (AP) — Fishery workers quarreling with dockworkers on this tiny French territory marched the islands' governor down to the waterfront, forced him into a boat and sent him off in "exile" to nearby Newfoundland.

But instead of going to the Canadian province as the angry mob ordered on Wednesday, Prefect Gerard LeFebvre went to Miquelon, the larger but less populous island in this barren, twin-island overseas department of France.

In a statement broadcast in St. Pierre after he arrived in Miquelon, LeFebvre vowed not to quit his post "at the demand of a small group of disorderly people."

A prefect is France's equivalent of a state governor. France reportedly was sending a special commission from Paris to try to restore order among the territory's 6,000 residents.

The fishery workers were angry that LeFebvre has not taken a firm stand on who will unload a new canning ship — they or the island's dockworkers. The dispute has cut off most supplies to the territory 20 miles from Newfoundland and near the Atlantic's merger with the waters of the St. Lawrence river.

The ship is run by Interpeche, a private French company which is the territory's main employer.

LeFebvre, who is appointed by the French government, suggested the dockers and fishery workers alternate or share unloading of the ship, Bretagne.

The Bretagne is supposed to unload canned fish about six times yearly, requiring about 12 dockhands to work about 20 hours.

"You see what a small thing this really is," said Alain Thivon, LeFebvre's chief aide. "That's how it is here."

None of the territory's two dozen gendarmes appeared at the icy waterfront when the prefect was put to sea.

Gromyko Carrying Aid Plea To Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko arrived today for talks with Spanish officials at a time of growing Western concern about Spain's position in NATO and of chilly U.S.-Spanish relations.

The 75-year-old Gromyko arrived aboard a special Aeroflot flight from Rome, where he had met with Italian officials and Pope John Paul II. He was greeted at Barajas airport by Foreign Minister Fernando Moran and Soviet diplomats based in Spain.

Before Gromyko's departure, the Italian government released the text of a joint Soviet-Italian communique that said both sides favor eliminating nuclear arms and reserving outer space for "exclusively peaceful uses."

The joint communique, however, stopped short of referring specifically to the Reagan administration's so-called "Star Wars" plan, which the Soviets claim would fuel a new arms race.

Following brief discussions with Moran at Madrid airport, Gromyko traveled by motorcade to the Moncloa government complex where he was to lunch with Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez.

Less than an hour before Gromyko's arrival, Gonzalez met with President Reagan's roving ambassador, Vernon Walters, who arrived Tuesday.

Walters, who is soon to take up the post of U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is scheduled to remain in Madrid until Friday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today amid worries about interest rates and the course of the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell .88 point to 1,280.15 in the first half hour of trading.

Nearly four stocks fell in price for every three that rose in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks began losing ground on Wednesday as open-market interest rates shot sharply higher. Interest rates leveled off early today, however.

Traders also were watching the dollar, which plummeted Wednesday after a concerted intervention effort by European central banks dumped an estimated $1.5 billion on world foreign exchanges. The dollar appeared to have stabilized after the sharp sell-off.

A major retreat by the dollar could bring on higher inflation, although many analysts say the dollar's fall is only temporary.

Meanwhile, modest declines by the dollar would help multinational companies which had lost business to foreign competition because of the dollar's historic rise.

The Commerce Department said today that the nation's foreign trade deficit widened to $10.3 billion in January against $8 billion in December and $9.5 billion in January 1984.

Pan American World Airways, which was struck today by mechanics, baggage handlers, flight dispatchers and food service workers, dropped 1/4 to 4 1/4 in early trading.

Among other active issues, ITT rose 3/8 to 30, American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/8 to 21, Asarco was unchanged at 22 1/2, Zenith fell 1/8 to 22 1/2 and Sony rose 1/2 to 18 1/2.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrials fell 5.08 points to 1,281.03. Declines outnumbered advances by a small margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume fell to 107.69 million shares from 114.15 million Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index lost .16 to 104.66. But at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .26 at 226.48.

Musical Escape

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of white whales swam out of a frozen strait of the Bering Sea after the icebreaker Moscow broke open a 12-mile channel and blared out classical music to lure them, says a Soviet newspaper.

"When the waters were cleared of ice, the belugas still wouldn't follow the icebreaker," said the newspaper Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya.

"Then someone recalled that their kin, the dolphins, react very well to music.

"Several melodies were tried out, and it turned out that classical music was to the taste of these Arctic belugas," the newspaper said.

The newspaper said hundreds of the whales swam to freedom behind the icebreaker, but did not say if any remained behind and gave no further details.

Newspapers said the whales had been trapped since mid-December, when they followed a large school of Arctic fish into shallow waters. A strong wind then blew ice floes into the opening of the strait and closed off the exit to the open sea, the newspapers said.

Camels Nip ECU On Final Shot

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In many ways, it was ironic. Early in the season, Herb Dixon hit a jumper at the horn in Fayetteville to give East Carolina a 58-56 victory over Campbell University.

Last night in Minges Coliseum, the two teams met again, and Campbell's John Huffstetler hit an 18-foot jumper with 12 seconds left to allow the Camels to come away with a 60-58 win.

For Campbell, ranked third from the bottom among all Division I basketball schools by USA Today, it meant the end of a 19-game road losing streak. In fact, in their last 67 road games, Campbell was recording only its fourth victory. On the season now, the Camels are 5-21.

East Carolina, which had hoped to take a two-game winning streak into its final regular season game at James Madison on Saturday, saw its record fall to 7-19 with the defeat.

The game was fairly close all night, although the Camels led for most of the evening. East Carolina put on several runs at them, and appeared to be finally putting things together at halftime when the Pirates took a 31-30 lead into the dressing rooms.

But Andrea McGee quickly got things going for the Camels in the second half. He put the Camels back into the lead and East Carolina never caught up again after that. After Juan Austin and Huffstetler each hit, McGee added the next four baskets, one of them a three-point play, powering Campbell out to as much as a ten-point lead.

The Camels hit their first five shots, eight of their first ten and ten of their first 14 before missing eight of their final 11 — but it was enough.

McGee, meanwhile, canned all six of his shots in the half to finish with a game-high 19 points.

Coach Charlie Harrison blamed much of the Pirate problems on the play of his number three men, William Grady and Keith Sledge. "We didn't get a lot of production and defense from them," he said. Grady, who scored nine first half points went 0-for-5 in the second half, including missing on three straight fast breaks, while Sledge missed on four of six shots in the second half, one of them a layup on a fast break.

"William and Keith did not play well and I don't understand it," Harrison said. "We came off a good game (the win over UNC-Wilmington), but I warned them that it was a big game for Campbell; that they'd be ready."

"Campbell did a good job of shadowing Curt (Vanderhorst) to keep him off balance," Harrison added. Vanderhorst shared a team-high 14 points, but was six of 16 from the floor. "William and Keith had some good shots, but they also made some terrible decisions. Between them, they were seven of 22 from the floor and three of seven from the line. But what really bothers me is their rebounding. That position accounted for only one rebound (Sledge's). And I didn't think they played that well defensively. They knew they had to stop McGee, but no matter who we put there it made no difference."

"I'm not blaming them for the loss. But we do look for them for consistency and we didn't get it from them tonight," Harrison said.

If there was a bright spot, it might have been the play of Leon Bass, who hit on six of eight from the floor, two of two from the line and had seven rebounds, four of them offensively. He tied Vanderhorst for high honors with 14 points.

"Leon wanted the ball tonight and we got it to him some, but not enough. He still needs to learn to play defense with his feet and with his hands up, not out. He's getting a lot of cheap fouls that way: they're fouls, but not good fouls."

After ECU held the opening lead, Campbell came back to take the lead at 6-4 on a layup by Huffstetler and they opened that to a 12-4 lead over the next few minutes.

East Carolina stormed back after a time out and tied it up at 12-12, scoring eight in a row. But Campbell went right back out on a jumper by McGee and built up as much as a ten-point lead, 27-17, before the Pirates rallied once more. Roy Smith slammed one through to pull ECU within one and Grady followed with a 10-footer that put the Pirates up, 30-29, with 15 seconds left and that held the rest of the way.

Behind McGee, however, the Camels went right back out to a 42-32 lead in the opening minutes of the second half. The Pirates chipped away at the lead and finally cut it to one, 51-50 with 6:51 left on a turnaround jumper by Bass.

But Austin canned a 20-footer and McGee made a free throw. Kelvin Nash followed with a tip-in to run it back to six, 56-50, before the Pirates rallied one last time.

After twice cutting the lead to two, ECU finally tied it up with 34 seconds left on a short jumper by Sledge, 58-58.

"We didn't want to hold it for a final shot," Harrison said. "I believe in playing to win. First you have to tie it up, then try and get a steal or keep them from scoring. I thought we could do it and we nearly did."

Campbell called time out at mid-court with 19 seconds left and the Pirates doubleteamed Tracy Williams just after the in-bounds. "That's exactly what we wanted to do," Harrison said. "We were hoping the ball would go to Williams and we wanted to tie him up and try and get the ball. But one man, who was supposed to be guarding the middle, came up and made it a triple-team."

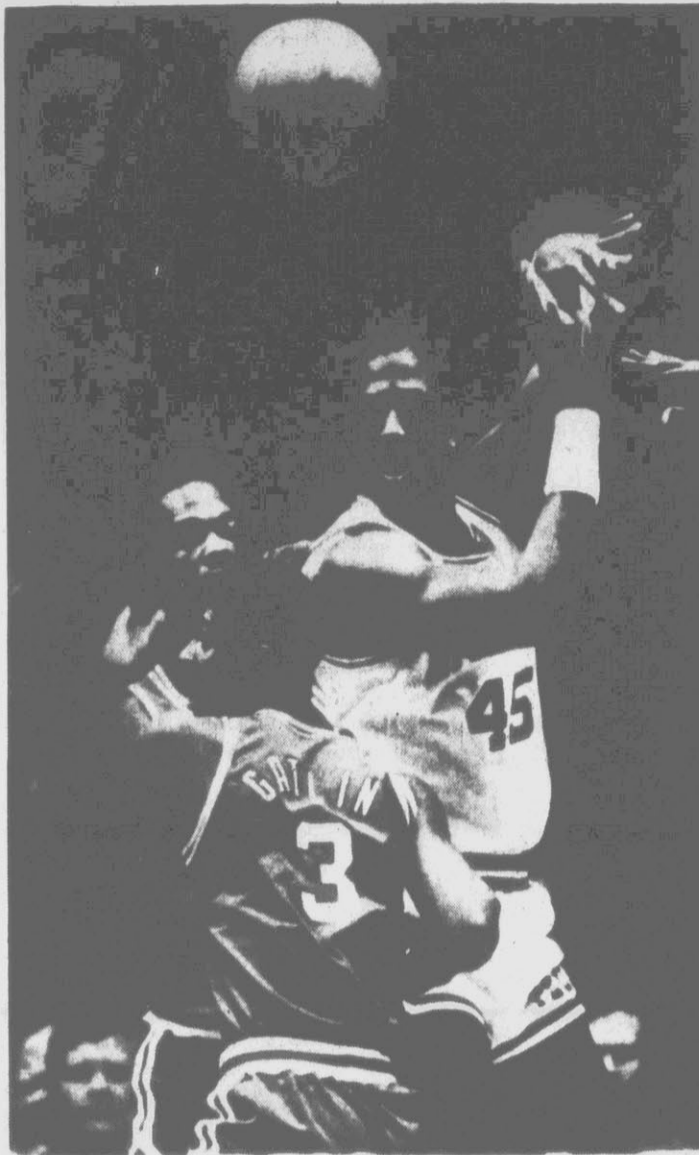

"I had told them that if there was anybody we didn't want to get open it was Huffstetler..."

Williams, fighting for his life, saw Huffstetler open just to the left of the top of the key and hit him with the ball and the 6-3 sophomore responded, launching a jumper that swished the nets with 12 seconds left to give the Camels the lead, 60-58.

East Carolina hurried down, but the first shot was knocked away and a second came too late.

Huffstetler added 12 points for the Camels, while Austin had 12. Campbell enjoyed 38-30 rebound advantage, led by Nash's eight. Dixon led ECU with eight.

And now the question remains: if Campbell is the third from the bottom team in Division I, where does that leave the Pirates?

Tech Moves Back Atop The ACC

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Georgia Tech's basketball program has completed a six-year climb from the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar to the league's penthouse, but it may have to share the room with others until next week's ACC tournament.

The 10th-ranked Yellow Jackets, who entered the league in 1980 with a 1-13 mark, downed eighth-ranked North Carolina 67-62 to gain at least a tie for the top spot in the conference with a 9-5 record. The loss dropped the Tar Heels into a three-way deadlock for second place with North Carolina State and Duke.

That logjam occurred when Len Bias sank two free throws with six seconds left to lead Maryland to a 70-69 victory over the Wolfpack. Duke took a 90-73 triumph over Clemson as six Blue Devils scored in double figures.

Wake Forest knocked off Virginia 68-65 in the other league game. North Carolina, N.C. State and Duke are all 8-5, and while Georgia Tech has finished its conference schedule, six of the remaining seven members play their last league games this weekend.

North Carolina is at Duke, while N.C. State hosts Wake Forest. Virginia play Maryland on Sunday. No matter the outcomes, the ACC office will have to flip a coin to break at least the tie for first place and top seed in next week's tournament in Atlanta.

Clemson, also done with its conference slate, hosts Winthrop on Saturday.

Mark Price said when he was being recruited out of Oklahoma, they told him the Georgia Tech basketball program was a loser. Guess who's laughing now.

"What we did tonight proves we're not losers," Price said. "As far as a great win for our program and our school, this was it."

It was the clutch free throw shooting that saved the day for Georgia Tech. Yvon Joseph hit four free throws and Bruce Dalrymple added three in the last 37 seconds to hold off a Tar Heel rally.

"Dalrymple had a fantastic game," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith also had praise for the Yellow Jackets, who knocked off his team twice this year for the first time ever.

"I was impressed with Georgia Tech," Smith said. "They played well and they also played aggressively."

Price led Georgia Tech, 21-7, with 18 points. Dalrymple had 15, freshman Duane Ferrell had 13 and Joseph 12.

North Carolina, 21-7, got 16 points from Kenny Smith and 15 from Brad Daugherty.

Maryland, 22-10 and 7-6 in the ACC, trailed by as many as seven points in the second half before rallying for a 67-64 lead on a Keith Gatlin jumper with 40 seconds left.

The Wolfpack cut the lead to 69-68 on a driving layup by Anthony "Spud" Webb with seven seconds left, but Bias, who scored 16 points, hit both ends of a one-and-one.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said the victory served a purpose.

"I told the club before the game that a win here would put us in the NCAA and that's what we're aiming for," Driesell said.

Adrian Branch scored 23 points to lead Maryland, scoring 15 of those points in the surge that led the Terrapins rally in the second half.

"It was a tough loss, particularly at this time of year," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said. "But we've got to suit up again and play well on Saturday. We didn't get the job done tonight."

Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points and became Duke's all-time assist leader in the Blue Devil rout. Dawkins collected six assists to raise his career mark to 405, topping the record of 399 set by Jim Spanarkel from 1976 through 1979.

Center Jay Bilas scored 18 points, including 16 in the second half. Danny Meagher added 13 points, while guard Tommy Amaker scored 12 points. Mark Alarie and reserve David Henderson scored 10 points apiece.

"I got great passes and all I had to do was catch the ball and put it in the basket — no big deal," Bilas said, scoring 16 of his points in the second half. "Our guard play was awesome. I think we have the best guards anywhere."

Clemson's Cliff Ellis said his team's woes were similar to those suffered in the loss to North Carolina last Saturday.

"After seven minutes we started giving up too many shots in the paint," Coach Ellis said. "Our defense just broke down. That hurt because our defense has carried us when we have been successful."

Senior guard Delaney Rudd celebrated his last home game by sinking two free throws with three seconds left to lead Wake Forest to the victory. Rudd was fouled by Tom Calloway after the Demon Deacons inbounded the ball with five seconds left. Then, after a Virginia time out, Rudd made both ends of a one-and-one.

"I looked at it as my last time going to that free throw line. I was looking forward to it. That is the way to go out," Rudd said. "We had a big win tonight, but we still need a win Saturday."

Panthers, Jaguars Ousted In District

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
HAVELOCK — Farmville Central missed its opportunity for an upset; North Pitt squandered its chance to prevent one.

Marvin Dawson fired in 34 points as West Craven outran Farmville Central 66-56 in the District II 3-A high school basketball tournament Wednesday.

In the nightcap, host Havelock closed down North Pitt's inside game to take a 63-48 victory in the tourney's first upset.

In a girls' game that started the evening, Havelock downed Charles B. Aycock, 55-34.

Gentry Sneed led the Panthers with 19 points, while Clifton Williams added 16.

"We got some good play out of Gentry Sneed and Clifton Williams, but other than that, there wasn't much to talk about," North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans said. "When your two guards are your leading rebounders, you know something (bad) is going to happen."

"We knew they were a good team. They took good shots and blocked out well."

Ananias Jenkins and Tony Moore posted 16 points each to lead Havelock, while Prentice Bryant added 13 for the Rams.

Havelock held a 43-35 lead with 5:53 left in the fourth quarter, and Jenkins posted eight points as the Rams outscored North Pitt 20-6 through the 1:32 mark for a 63-41 lead before the Panthers rattled off the final seven points of the game.

"We wanted to stay even with North Pitt; to stay out of a cat-and-mouse game with them," said Havelock Coach Shelly Marsh, who coached D.H. Conley until this season. "North Pitt is one of the best teams in the eastern part of the state at that. They got out to a good start, and we made some adjustments. I knew we had to keep them off the boards."

"I think the difference in the fourth quarter was that we played to win and not to not lose. Basically, we played a good all-around game. Right now, we're playing as well as we've played."

The Panthers jumped out to a 6-2 lead at the 5:10 mark of the first quarter with the help of four points from Williams and maintained an 8-6 edge with 3:42 left. But Havelock outscored North Pitt 11-2 through the end of the period for a 17-10 Rams advantage.

North Pitt cut the Havelock lead to three points three times in the second quarter, each time on a bucket by Sneed, but the Rams held a 28-21 halftime edge.

The Panthers trimmed the margin to five with a move inside by Levon Shaw with 5:46 left in the third quarter, but that was as close as they came. The Rams posted a 5-2 scoring spurt through the end of the period for a 37-29 tally.

Havelock faces West Carteret Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the semifinals.

EAGLES-JAGUARS

Bernard Taylor led Farmville with 14 points, while Bobby Evans contributed 13 and Andre Vines 11. Tim Cox chipped in 13 points for West

Craven.

The Jaguars never led in the game and fell behind 10-2 with 3:44 left in the first quarter. Farmville outscored the Eagles 8-1 through the end of the period to trim West Craven's lead to 11-10.

But Dawson scored six points as the Eagles built the lead to 21-14 with 5:45 left in the second quarter.

The Jaguars cut the margin to 25-19 on a field goal by Kennedy Williams with 1:33 till halftime, but Dawson scored twice in the final 1:17 to give West Craven a 29-19 halftime lead.

The Eagles appeared to have control of the game in the third quarter when Jesse Campbell soared down the baseline for an alley-oop dunk on a pass from Mickey Rasberry for a 38-21 lead with 4:46 left in the third quarter, but Farmville Central posted the next seven points to trim the deficit to 10.

In the final period, the Jaguars cut the gap to nine with 3:40 remaining but never came closer until Vines hit two free throws with four seconds left to trim the margin to eight.

"I thought we played very tight in the first half," Farmville Coach Mike Terrell said. "We had spurts in the first half when we played well, and we had spurts when we played poor. We didn't do a very good job blocking out at times."

"In our zone (defense), we left the baseline open more than we wanted. I felt like if we ever cut it below 10 points, we could make a run at them."

"Playing West Craven in the tournament, we knew our chances were very slim; they are a very talented ball team. I'm very pleased with our regular season; I thought our kids did a heck of a job."

Tonight, first round play concludes with two games. Greene Central and D.H. Conley collide in a girls' game at 7 p.m. with Ayden-Grifton facing Conley at 8:30 in a boys' contest.

Ross Loses Protest Bid

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Fayetteville Reid Ross High School lost its appeal before the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's executive committee and must forfeit games in which an ineligible player took part.

The committee, which represented all four prep classifications in North Carolina, heard the appeal during a three-hour meeting Wednesday.

On Saturday, NCHSAA Executive Director Charlie Adams ruled that former reserve forward Terri Wright was an ineligible player in 16 Reid Ross games because of residency requirements. Eleven of those 16 games were Reid Ross victories, and five of the victories came in the Southeastern 4-A conference.

Adams said the games would be forfeited. Ross, which led the conference along with Laurinburg's Scotland and Fayetteville's E.E. Smith, would lose that share of the conference championship. It also would lose the top seed in the conference tournament, and its automatic berth in the state playoffs.

Judge Edwin S. Preston issued a restraining order Tuesday, acting on a motion by Fayetteville City Schools' attorney Rod Guthrie on behalf of Reid Ross. He set a hearing for March 5.

The tournament had been scheduled to begin Tuesday night with four games.

"Where this leaves us is right where we were Tuesday," NCHSAA Executive Director Charlie Adams said in a telephone interview. "Until this matter is resolved, we're not going to allow the boys to play."

Adams said if the dispute is not settled in time for the tournament to be completed by March 5, the conference might not be represented in the state playoffs.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Adams said time currently favored the association's effort to get the tournament in before the next round of playoffs.

"If we can get something figured out, we can get back on schedule," Adams said. "If we don't get anything done (Thursday), it just means the two representatives would have to play back to back."

Wright established his legal residence in Greensboro with his divorced mother, where he attends Greensboro Dudley High School, Adams said. Fayetteville school officials claim that Wright's residence was in Fayetteville, where he lived with his father.

Roanoke Wins In District

AHOSKIE — Roanoke High School, behind 20 points from James Duggins, outdistanced Northampton County East, 62-54, last night in the first round of the District I, 3-A basketball tournament.

The victory moved the Redskins into the semifinals on Saturday night against the winner of tonight's Northampton West-Washington game.

In the girls' game played last night, Plymouth downed Northampton West, 48-34, to move into the semifinals.

The Rams threatened an upset in the first period, squeezing out an 11-9 lead. They expanded that in the second period and took a 25-22 lead into the dressing rooms at the half.

But in the third period, Roanoke began to take charge. They closed the gap and tied it up after three frames, 41-41, then outtraced the Rams to the wire, 21-13, to gain the win.

In addition to Duggins' 20, Roanoke got 15 from John Bennett and 13 from Shawn Chance. Charles Harris led Northampton with 20 while David Pope added 18.

Tonight's girls' game sends Warren County up against Roanoke.

Kinston Is Upset By Fike

KINSTON — Both Kinston and Wilson Hunt, the top seeds in the Big East tournament, went down to defeat last night, dropping both of them out of the field, and assigning them to the Number Two State Tournament berths.

Wilson Fike pulled off the 50-46 upset of Kinston's boys, moving them into the finals against the winner of tonight's Northeastern-Beddingfield game.

In the girls' contest, Hunt bowed to Northern Nash, the fifth-seeded team in a triple overtime, 36-35. Northern will now meet the winner of tonight's Rocky Mount-Beddingfield game for the title.

The finals will be played Friday night at either Northeastern or Beddingfield, which ever wins in the semifinal game tonight. The winners in the boys' and girls' championships will claim the #1 state tournament spot for the conference.

D. Watson Pays Price

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Denis Watson is paying the price for success.

"I'm a little tired right now. It's been a very busy time for me," Watson said before teeing off today in the first round of the $500,000 Honda Classic.

"I suppose it's part of the price you pay," said Watson, a South African who won three times on the American PGA Tour last season and came within a couple of points of winning Player of the Year honors in 1984.

That success, centered on a seven-week span in which he collected all three titles and some $360,000, "was the product of a couple of years of very hard work," said Watson, 29, a native of Rhodesia who now is in his fifth year on the American PGA Tour.

And the late-season spurt made him an international attraction and prompted invitations to a number of overseas events.

"I played in Sun City (a $1 million tournament in South Africa) late in the year, took a couple of weeks off, played three more, took a week off and played five more," Watson said.

"And even the time off I had was busy, busier than when I was playing in tournaments," he said.

"I just haven't had much time and I'm beginning to feel it a little."

The effects, however, were not evident in his opening event on the U.S. Tour in Miami last week.

"I had a chance to win, but hit a couple of poor shots in the last round," said Watson, who tied for fifth in the difficult conditions.

"I feel I'm still playing very, very well.

Hoyas Average Loss To Redmen

By The Associated Press

This time, Georgetown was wearing the look of winners.

The second-ranked Hoyas got another strong game from All-American Patrick Ewing, a surprising performance from Reggie Williams and an all-around good defensive effort to rout No. 1 St. John's 85-69 in a Big East Conference game Wednesday night.

It was sweet revenge at sold out Madison Square Garden for Georgetown, which was ranked No. 1 when it lost to then-No. 2 St. John's 66-65 on Jan. 26 in Landover, Md., a loss that broke the Hoyas' 29-game winning streak.

"This was more a game of pride," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said after his team snapped the Redmen's 13-game winning string. The Hoyas, 26-2 overall, began pulling away in the first half and kept attacking to beat St. John's, 24-2 and the unanimous choice as the nation's best team in the most recent Associated Press poll.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 5 Duke rolled Clemson 90-73, No. 6 Oklahoma topped Oklahoma State 89-84, No. 10 Georgia Tech stopped No. 8 North Carolina 67-62, No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas edged California-Irvine 97-95, Texas Tech tripped No. 13 Southern Methodist 59-54, No. 14 Georgia routed Mississippi 94-66, and Maryland nipped No. 16 North Carolina State 71-70.

Thompson, known for his serious demeanor, provided a little levity prior to the game when he opened up his suit jacket to reveal a shirt that resembled the tri-color, V-striped sweater that St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca has worn as a good-luck charm during the last 13 games, all victories.

"I think sometimes you've got to laugh," Thompson said. "It was all done to loosen the atmosphere."

Carnesecca, who jokingly called Thompson's attire "a poor imitation," had only words of praise for Georgetown, the defending NCAA champions.

"It was an unreal performance," Carnesecca said. "They were marvelous in every department. It was their night."

Despite the loss, St. John's still leads the Big East race with a 14-1 conference mark, while Georgetown is second at 13-2.

St. John's can win the regular-season title by beating Providence on Saturday. "They pretty much got the league won," Thompson said.

But he had to be pleased with what he saw Wednesday night.

The Hoyas scored the game's first seven points, and after St. John's rallied to take its only lead at 24-22, Ewing and Williams led Georgetown to a 44-33 lead at halftime.

In the second half, the Redmen got within seven points early but could not contend with Georgetown's relentless pressure at both ends of the court.

Ewing, the 7-foot center, finished with 20 points - several on uncharacteristic outside jump shots - along with nine rebounds and six blocked shots.

"I told him just to circle around outside and take the jump shot and he did just that," Thompson said. In the first meeting between the teams, St. John's collapsed its defense around Ewing inside and managed to hold him in check.

Williams, a 6-7 sophomore swingman, scored a career-high 25 points on nine of 13 shooting from the field.

Chris Mullin led St. John's with 21 points, but could not give his team the spark it needed.

"They did a great defensive job," the 6-6 Olympian guard said. "They made it hard for me to get the ball in scoring position."

Top Ten

Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points and became Duke's all-time assist leader as the hot-shooting Blue Devils cruised past Clemson in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Dawkins' six assists gave him a career total of 405, moving him past Jim Spanarkel's total of 399.

Duke made 20 of 28 shots from the floor in the first half in taking a 45-31 lead. The host Blue Devils sank nine of their first 10 shots in the second half in expanding the advantage to 64-38.

Jay Bilas scored 18 points for Duke, 21-5, which finished with six players in double figures.

Oklahoma got 21 points from Darryl Kennedy and 20 from All-American Wayman Tisdale to win its second straight Big Eight regular-season crown by beating Oklahoma State.

The Sooners, 23-5 overall and 12-1 in the league, ran their homecourt winning streak to 31 games. They used an 18-4 surge early in the game to take a 26-16 lead that they held the rest of the night.

In Atlanta, Yvon Johnson sank four foul shots and Bruce Dalrymple made three in the final 37 seconds to help Georgia Tech beat North Carolina and clinch at least a tie for the ACC regular-season championship.

Georgia Tech took the lead for good five minutes into the game and went on to raise its record to 20-6 overall - its fourth 20-victory season in history - and 9-5 in the league. North Carolina is 21-7 and 8-5.

Mark Price led the Yellow Jackets with 18 points and Dalrymple 15. Kenny Smith scored 16 points for North Carolina.

In Las Vegas, forward Armon Gilliam scored 24 points, including 12 of 13 free-throw attempts, as UNLV downed California-Irvine to win its third straight Pacific Coast Athletic Association regular-season title.

UNLV, 16-1 in league play and 23-3 overall, made seven of eight foul shots in the final 42 seconds of the game to hold off the Antebears, 8-9 in the PCAA and 13-15 overall.

Second Ten

Texas Tech, behind Tony Benford's three foul shots in the final 40 seconds, beat Southern Methodist and clinched at least a tie for the Southwest Conference regular-season title and also gained the No. 1 seed in the league's postseason tournament.

Benford, whose jump shot with three seconds left beat SMU earlier this season, made two foul shots with 22 seconds left to seal the victory. While Benford was shooting, the crowd of 9,007 at SMU's Moody Coliseum became so wild that it pelted the floor with ice and literally shook the basket.

Texas Tech is 19-7 overall and 11-4 in the SWC. SMU, which will seeded second in the conference tournament that begins March 8 in Dallas, is 21-7 and 10-5.

Donald Hartry and Horace McMillan scored 16 points apiece to help Georgia beat Mississippi and move within one game of clinching a share of its first Southeastern Conference regular-season title.

Georgia, 20-6 overall and 12-5 in the SEC, can clinch at least a tie for the league title by beating Tennessee on Saturday.

The Bulldogs went on a 12-2 spree early in the second half to break a 43-43 tie and kept pulling away.

Len Bias scored 16 points, including two clinching foul shots with five seconds remaining to lift Maryland over North Carolina State in an ACC game in Raleigh, N.C.

The loss broke the Wolfpack's six-game winning streak and knocked them out of their share of the ACC lead. N.C. State is 18-8 overall and 8-5 in the league. Maryland, which got 23 points from Adrian Branch, is 22-10 and 7-6.

Usher Says NFL Needs Competition

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Harry Usher, commissioner of the United States Football League, says the National Football League has grown stale and needs the marketing competition that could be provided by the USFL.

"It's become the same thing day after day, Sunday after Sunday," Usher said at a press conference Wednesday, referring to NFL football. "They need the excitement of competition... I think the NFL, if it can wake up, would benefit."

The club owners in the USFL, now in its third season, have decided to change from a spring to a fall schedule - to go up against the NFL in 1986.

"Our only real challenge is to make sure we'll have an opportunity to compete fairly in the fall, on national TV opposing the NFL," Usher said, commenting that the NFL has tied up all three television networks.

The USFL filed a $1.32 billion antitrust suit against the NFL last October, saying it has evidence of a secret NFL committee set up to put the USFL out of business. A spokesman for the NFL denied the charges.

Usher said that two healthy football leagues could eliminate one of the NFL's current problems: franchises shifting to the highest bidder.

"If we can create a competitive environment, the problems of Phoenix and Oakland... would go away," said Usher, who became the USFL commissioner after serving as vice president and general manager of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

Usher also chided the NFL for banning overly demonstrative celebrations by players and for not using instant replays to help officials make close calls.

"We believe football is a game, not a religion," he said. "Let the players celebrate in the end zone; use instant replay even if it's not perfect."

State Could Lose $357 Million Federal Aid

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Figures showing North Carolina could lose more than $357 million in federal aid were not released to cast doubt on Gov. Jim Martin's tax-cut proposals, legislative leaders say.

"There was no attempt to do that," said Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, chairman of the House Appropriations Base Budget Committee, after figures were released on the eve of Martin's State of the State address. "Some of these things the members had asked about and it just happened that we took this up today."

Figures released Wednesday showed the state would lose more than $131 million — 7 percent — its 1985-86 federal funding if Congress approved all of President Reagan's proposed spending cuts. When reductions in aid to local governments and private colleges are added, the loss exceeds $357 million.

Fiscal analyst David Crotts said if all Reagan's cuts are approved, Martin's $443.5 million tax-cut proposals would force the average county to increase property taxes 25.4 percent to maintain existing services. Martin has proposed having the state reimburse counties for any losses incurred through the cuts.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee, warned that large federal reductions could force sharp increases in local property taxes.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said he hopes massive federal cuts do not come, but added, "It appears to me it would have the effect of making us very cautious."

According to the Legislature's Fiscal Research Division, state government stands to lose $131,037,739 if all of Reagan's cuts are approved for fiscal 1985-86.

Losses to local governments — including general revenue sharing, which Reagan wants to eliminate, and such programs as support of public transportation and wastewater construction — would cost $205 million. Aid losses to private college students would total $13,460.

Etheridge said Martin's tax cuts are not out of the question.

"We can afford to do anything," said Etheridge. "But the question is what do you do with education and other programs that decide the quality of life we will have."

In other legislative action:

A bill to require that all children under age 6 use safety seats or seat belts when riding in cars stalled in the House Highway Safety Committee while members devised even tougher amendments.

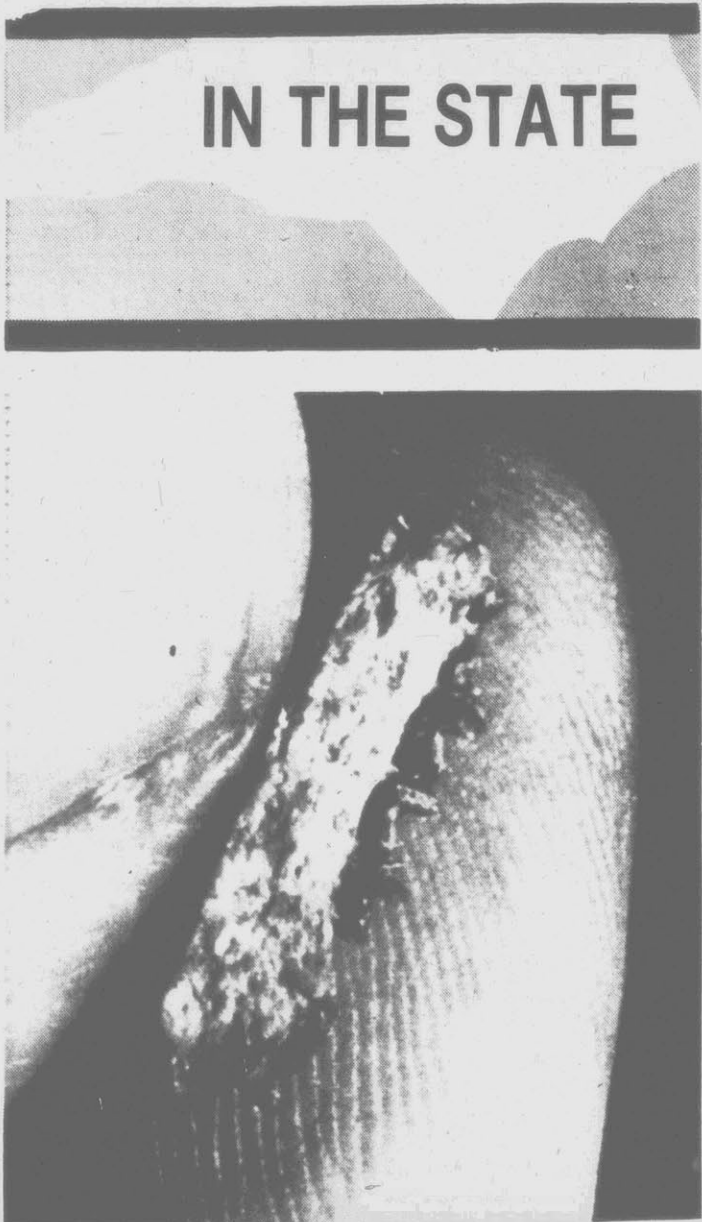

Legislation introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would extend the current child-safety law, which requires that children under age 2 be restrained. Miller's bill would also levy a $10 fine for violators, although penalties would be waived after parents present evidence they have purchased a child-restraint system.

Miller's bill gives parents the option of restraining children in regular seat belts after age 2. But Rep. Charles Woodard, D-Wayne, suggested amending the bill to require safety seats up to age 4 so small children don't slip under seat belts in crashes.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, also suggested the bill be held over so he could consider eliminating loopholes for children held on a parent's lap or lying in the back of a station wagon or pickup truck.

IN THE STATE

FOSSIL — This fossil jawbone from a 33 million-year-old ancestor of the modern Asian tarsier was found by Duke University paleontologists in the Egyptian desert last fall. The discovery has been described as a "major surprise" by some scientists. (AP Laserphoto)

Fossil Discovery Reported By Duke

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University fossil-hunters say they have "substantial" new evidence that all the higher primate groups — not just man's ancestors — originated in Africa.

"It's like finding an Eskimo in New Guinea," Duke paleontologist Elwyn L. Simons said Wednesday.

Last fall Duke scientists found in Egypt the jawbone of a 33-million-year-old ancestor of the modern Asian tarsier, a small primate which is related to the lemur and lives in trees in the East Indies and Philippines.

Fossil remains of the primate's ancestors in Southeast Asia are virtually nonexistent, Simons said in a news release.

Simons and Thomas Bown of the U.S. Geological Survey in Denver used the jawbone to identify the animal it belonged to, naming it Afrotarsius chatrathi. The 2.4-inch-long jawbone was found in the desert by Prithijit S. Chatrath, the curator of fossils at the Duke Primate Center.

The newly found jawbone is the property of the Egyptian government, Simons said, and when study of it is completed at Duke it will be returned to Cairo's Geological Museum.

The Duke center, which is directed by Simons, features the largest colony of prosimian primates for study and conservation, the news release said.

Simons described Afrotarsius as a tropical forest animal about the size of a chipmunk. It lived 33 million years ago in what is now the Fayum Depression, a windy desert southwest of Cairo, Egypt, he said.

"What is really remarkable about this fossil is that it is not at all what we expected," Simons said. "It does not belong in the group of either the monkeys or apes found in the Fayum. Rather, this small jaw is allied to an Asian primate."

Only one other fossil primate, a tiny European animal called Pseudoloris that lived 45 million years ago, closely resembles Afrotarsius and modern tarsiers, Simons said.

"What we might have expected to find was a prosimian or lower primate related to the later East African fossil bushbabies, or even a relative of the living lemurs of Madagascar," he said.

A hazardous chemicals team has been organized within the Fire-Rescue Department in order that officers may be better prepared to respond to chemical fires and disasters. For information, call 752-4137.

Federal Cuts Would Hit Student Aid

By The Associated Press

President Reagan's proposed cuts in student aid could wipe out about one third of the assistance University of North Carolina students got last year, but the head of an education support group downplayed the proposals.

"We want to tell people that anyone who's planning on a post-secondary education should go ahead with it," said Stan Broadway, executive director of the North Carolina Education Assistance Authority. "The chances of all of these cuts passing is very slim."

Students at 16 UNC schools last year received about $85 million in federal aid, Broadway said. If all of the proposed cuts are made, about $30 million of that aid would be lost.

But Broadway noted that the cuts are "merely proposals, and they've received little sympathy in Congress."

The association — an education support group that keeps tabs on student aid — is North Carolina's representative to the federal government on student assistance.

Meanwhile, Ralph Byers, executive director of the North Carolina Center for Independent Higher Education, said Tuesday he has not finished estimating the possible effects of cuts on the state's 43 private colleges and universities.

But, he said, if the one-third ratio holds true, students at the private schools might lose $15 million of the $45 million in aid they received during 1982-83.

"Per student," Byers said, "we have more federal aid than the public colleges, but their enrollment is so much bigger in aggregate, the effect looks bigger there. Per institution, though, federal aid is far more important to the private institutions than the public ones."

Private colleges would be the hardest hit by Reagan's proposal to limit aid from all sources to $4,000 per student, both Byers and Broadway told UNC chancellors Tuesday during a meeting in Chapel Hill.

"The average cost at private institutions last year was $9,000. At public schools, the average was $4,800. The higher your annual costs, the more that $4,000 limit is going to hit you," Broadway said.

"If it passes," Broadway added,

"it's definitely going to cause some enrollment shifts (from private to public schools), although we can't estimate how much. It's also pretty clear that it will mean some people will cancel or defer going to college...."

Raleigh-Durham On 'Best' List

NEW YORK (AP) — If you fear crime, flee to Wheeling, W.Va. If public schools are your top priority, you'd rather be in Philadelphia.

But for overall civic perfection, Pittsburgh is tops, according to the new edition of Rand McNally's "Places Rated Almanac," which ranks the quality of life in the 329 cities where three-fourths of the nation's people live.

Authors Richard Boyer and David Savageau say they hope the almanac will become required reading for the 6 million mobile Americans who move from one state to another each year.

At the bottom was Yuba City, Calif., which, until the list was released Wednesday, was best known for its almond groves and the mass murder of 25 migrant farm workers in 1971 for which Juan Corona was convicted.

The No. 2 city was Boston, up from 18th place in the first edition. No. 3 honors went to Raleigh-Durham, N.C., which also was in the top 10 last time, followed by San Francisco and Philadelphia.

New York City's Long Island suburbs, Nassau and Suffolk counties, ranked No. 6, up from 48. Similarly, the previous edition's "worst" city, Lawrence-Haverhill, Mass., near Boston, shot up to 154th.

The authors attributed those big jumps to a new rating method affecting areas where many people commute to work: such areas can be credited for the cultural resources of the larger city while not being penalized for any of its flaws, notably crime.

St. Louis, Louisville, Norwalk, Conn., and Seattle rounded out the top 10 while Atlanta slipped to 11th place. There were 32 ties, including Washington and Baltimore for 15th place.

New York City, which moved up a notch to 25th overall, one place ahead of Chicago, also ranked No. 1 in three categories; transportation, the arts and health care. The nation's largest city also went to the other extreme, ranking worst in crime.

Joplin, Mo., came in first in housing but 230th overall. Midland, Texas, had the brightest economic picture, while scoring in the bottom third at 257. Philadelphia, No. 5 overall, got the best grade for education. San Francisco and its neighbor across the bay, Oakland, tied for the best climate.

Pittsburgh, perceived by some to be a dying mill city of the industrial northeast, moved from No. 4 to the top spot, eclipsing booming Atlanta in the Sunbelt.

"Pittsburgh's strength is that it doesn't rank terribly low in any category," Boyer said.

Yuba City was rated near the bottom in eight of the nine general areas: climate, housing, health care, crime, transportation, education, the arts, recreation and economics. Only in climate did it enter the top 100, ranking 68 of 329.

Yuba City was not rated in the first edition in 1981 because at the time it was not considered a metropolitan area by the Census Bureau. Located in California's agricultural Central Valley near Sacramento, its population is booming.

In all, 52 new metropolitan areas identified by the Census were included in the 1985 edition, up from 277. And many of the new cities did not fare well.

"I feel we've been dealt a bum deck of cards," said Yuba City Mayor Charles Pappageorge.

But Rand McNally vice president Russell Voisin defended the study's statistical methodology saying, "We didn't make the places good or bad."

Pine Bluff, Ark., ranked next to last.

"I'm just livid about the whole ranking thing," said Pat Lile, executive director of Pine Bluff 2000, a non-profit development organization. "A city of 12 million won't have the same types of qualities as a city of 56,000," Ms. Lile said. "That's like comparing a steak to an apple."

Others in the bottom 10 were, from the bottom: Modesto, Calif.; Dothan, Ala.; Albany, Ga.; Benton Harbor, Mich.; Gadsden, Ala.; Casper, Wyo.; Rockford, Ill., and Anderson, Ind.

Justices Uphold Kornegay Verdict

RALEIGH (AP) — Former North Carolina State Bar president-elect George Kornegay Jr. received a fair trial in 1983 on charges of embezzlement and corporate malfeasance, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

In a ruling handed down Wednesday, the state's high court upheld Kornegay's conviction for embezzling money from clients and depositing legal fees in his personal bank account.

Kornegay, a Mount Olive attorney, resigned in 1982 one week before taking office as president-elect of the state bar after the State Bureau of Investigation began a probe of his client trust funds.

A Wayne County jury deliberated 30 minutes before returning the guilty verdicts. He was sentenced to 30 months in jail, suspended for three years, and was disbarred. The disbarment was withheld pending his appeal.

Kornegay was charged with writing a $14,500 check on an invalid client's trust fund to make a payment on personal property he was buying. He was also charged with telling a client he had settled a damage suit for her for $125,000 when he had settled it for $104,000.

In other rulings, the court said a 1975 lawsuit brought by residents of the Corolla area against an Outer Banks developer should have gone to a jury instead of being dismissed.

The suit was brought by residents who claimed a developer's plan for a private paved road infringing on their right of access to their property. The suit was dismissed in 1976.

The developer built the road, the only thoroughfare linking Corolla to the Kittyhawk area, and put a guard gate at its southern end to limit public access. The road was taken over by the state last year, making it a public thoroughfare.

Anti-Tobacco Bills Filed In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — While two major tobacco foes deemed it time to put the leaf program "out of its misery," tobacco-state congressmen were asked to draw up legislation to save the federal program.

After a briefing Wednesday by a top official of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., tobacco-state lawmakers said they doubted they could pass legislation sought by the cooperative. Stabilization requested the legislation to pave the way for cigarette manufacturers to buy 812 million pounds of surplus tobacco.

"I am very pessimistic about any legislative solution along the lines proposed by Stabilization," said Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C.

At a news conference an hour later, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Rep. Thomas E. Petri, R-Wis., announced legislation in the House and Senate to kill the leaf program.

"It is time to put the tobacco program out of its misery," Petri said.

He and Metzenbaum, who have unsuccessfully offered similar amendments in past years, said their chances were better this year in part because the tobacco program was not living up to the 1982 law that says it must "operate at no net cost" to taxpayers.

Metzenbaum said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a strong supporter of the tobacco program, may try to filibuster any such legislation, but the Ohio lawmaker said he is optimistic he will have more support than in the past.

"Why should there be subsidization from the federal government with respect to farming of tobacco?" Metzenbaum said. "Why should there be restrictions imposed by law, paid for with federal taxpayers' dollars, if this end product winds up being a major factor in the loss of life and health for many Americans?"

Proposing to end federal price supports for tobacco, Petri said tobacco farmers in most states who want to market their product have had to own or rent allotments, which were distributed by the government in the 1930s. The benefits of the tobacco program go to the allotment owners rather than the farmers, he added.

"While taxpayer subsidies persist on the order of $100 million per year and tobacco loan stocks mount," he said, "our imports of tobacco are zooming, exports are dropping, total domestic production has plummeted, and farmers' profits are soaked up by a largely absentee class of landlords who own the government-granted rights to market their crop."

Meanwhile, Rose said Stabilization's legislative plan didn't stand much of a chance unless the cigarette companies drop their request for immunity from antitrust suits.

Stabilization General Manager Fred Bond declined to predict what would happen next year, but he confirmed that the antitrust provision was a "critical point" from the companies' standpoint.

Inmate Caught

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A state Highway Patrol trooper captured an inmate who failed to return to a North Carolina prison after being released to attend a funeral, authorities said.

Clyde Wallace Stamey, 58, was recaptured Tuesday night by Trooper William T. Evans, 41, said Chrystal Stowe, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Mrs. Stowe said Stamey, who failed to return from the funeral last week, was stopped by a roadblock after refusing to stop for Evans on Interstate 40. Evans works out of the patrol's Statesville office.

Stamey was in the federal correctional institution in Butner for robbing a bank and allegedly robbed another bank on Feb. 22 in Gastonia, Mrs. Stowe said in a news release.

The ceiling of the Sistine Chapel will soon be restored so that the paintings of Michelangelo can be more thoroughly admired. It took Michelangelo four and one-half years to paint nine scenes of the Biblical stories of the creation of the world, the fall of Adam and Eve, and the flood. His altar fresco, "The Last Judgment," shows the dead being rowed across a river, in a scene based on Dante's "Divine Comedy." He carved "The Pieta" when he was only 23 years old.

Miniseries Examines Life Of Douglas MacArthur

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur was called an "American Caesar" by biographer William Manchester, but to the GIs slogging through jungles in World War II he was known less affectionately as "Dugout Doug."

Everybody seems to have a subjective view of MacArthur, who wove his own myth from the time he entered the military academy at West Point in 1899 until his death in 1964.

"One of his aides was asked about MacArthur's ego," said Michael Maclear, the executive producer of a new five-hour documentary miniseries based on Manchester's book, "American Caesar."

"The aide said, 'Yes, he has an inflated ego, but would you want to go into battle with a general who has an inferiority complex?'"

President Dwight D. Eisenhower, an aide to the general in the Philippines before World War II, was asked if he had known MacArthur. He replied, "Yes, I once studied dramatics under him in Manila."

Director John Huston is the host and John Colicos is the narrator. Biographer Manchester is among those interviewed about MacArthur. It's a joint presentation of the Turner Broadcasting System and Metromedia Television. Superstation WTBS, which goes to 2,000 cable systems, will telecast the series in four parts next Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The Metromedia stations in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas and Houston will present it in two segments on Sunday and Monday.

"MacArthur was a fascinating figure," said Maclear in a telephone interview from his office in Toronto, Canada. "He was certainly America's greatest general and one of the most romantic figures of this century. He and Winston Churchill were distant cousins and very much alike. They both had a mystical sense of destiny that they were born to do what they had to do."

The series, using rare newsreel footage from this country as well as Australia and Japan, traces MacArthur's career through three major wars and his sojourn as a field marshal in the Philippine Army. It's a fascinating look at this controversial and enigmatic figure, and it examines him through his words and those of his supporters and critics.

It might seem odd that a Canadian company produced the series, but Maclear points out he also did the 26-part "Vietnam: The 10,000-Day War."

Maclear, a foreign correspondent for the Canadian networks for 25 years, said he leans toward news-based productions.

"It's just where one's instincts lie, and I spent a lot of time in the Far East," he said. "I felt the Pacific war had never been as fully covered as the war in Europe. I was interested in looking at the wider aspect of it through a single individual."

"There's more of a tradition in Canada for this kind of programming than in the United States. The American networks have such series as '60 Minutes' and '20-20,' but they don't give much time to documentaries. I think people will find that history need not be dull. It can be as entertaining as any miniseries."

Maclear said he had no trouble getting MacArthur's old cohorts to talk. "It was if they'd all been waiting for someone to call. Most of them are in their late 70s, but with vivid memories and strong emotions about MacArthur."

The foot soldiers called him "Dugout Doug," implying that he stayed safely away from danger. But his associates, backed by the film footage, point out that MacArthur frequently exposed himself recklessly to enemy fire. MacArthur felt that it was his destiny that he would not die in battle.

As supreme allied commander in the Pacific, MacArthur chafed under the attention President Franklin Roosevelt gave to the war in Europe, and he worked mightily to keep from being outmaneuvered by the Navy and the Marine Corps. He helped shape the future of Japan after the war, and when the North Koreans invaded South Korea in 1950 he took to the field again.

But he clashed with President Truman over conduct of the war and was relieved of his command. He returned to a hero's welcome and defended his policies in his famous "old soldiers never die, they just fade away" speech to a joint session

Iowans Hold Farm Protest Meeting

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Sporting signs and stirred by high school bands, 15,000 farmers filled a college stadium to express outrage over federal farm policies, with one lawmaker calling the rally "an alarm clock to wake a sleeping president."

"I think anyone looking around here, seeing this place jammed to the rafters, would have to call it a success," Roger Blobaum of the National Farmers Organization said of Wednesday's rally at the Hilton Coliseum.

Those who couldn't fit inside the 15,000-seat facility at Iowa State University gathered outside to hear participants in the "National Crisis Action Rally" by loudspeaker.

"The American heartland is rising up," said Jon Weford, chancellor of the Minnesota college system. "We're doing it together. Republicans and Democrats have let us down and we're tired of it."

"We are producing $2.50 corn in a $9 world," said Darrell Ringer, a Quinter, Kan., farmer who said he was facing foreclosure. "Thirty-three years of wrong farm policy and now this administration has declared war on the family farm."

"This is an alarm clock to wake a sleeping president," said Iowa Senate Majority Leader Lowell Jankins.

Rally organizers brought in consumer advocates and union members to demonstrate the broad base of support for farm aid.

"In order for our government to hear our complaints and do something about it, all laborers must come together," said Carlos Polit, a United Auto Workers member from Rock Island, Ill.

"We are a proud people, yet our pride has sometimes been a barrier rather than an aid," said Joan Blundall, who works in a farm counseling office in Eagle Grove. "That silence makes fertile ground for suicide, family discord, health risks and violence."

As a series of speakers berated federal farm policy, lawmakers in Washington debated measures expanding farm assistance for the spring planting season, and organizers said they hoped the mass rally would build pressure.

"Farmers are good managers and we'll be better in the future," said Dean Kleckner, head of the Iowa Farm Bureau. "We're hard workers. But we need a boost, some short-term assistance."

There was a carnival atmosphere around the rally, as high school bands played and farmers sported signs like "Save the Heart of America," "Keep the Faith" and "Doesn't Anybody Hear Us?"

In addition, farmers hanged Budget Director David Stockman in effigy, in response to his battle against more farm aid.

Farmers say a combination of high interest rates, falling land prices and low prices for their products are forcing thousands off the land.

Prisoner Dies

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's national police say a leftist guerrilla suspect arrested last week died in their custody after suffering respiratory problems.

The victim, identified as Carlos Godoy Etchechoven, 22, was the second political prisoner to die in police custody this month. His death was reported in an official announcement of 13 arrests at what the police called a leftist guerrilla training center.

Police said the suspects were picked up in a raid on a house in the Pacific coastal town of Quintero and taken to a police station.

Chile's military government is ruling under a state of siege to break up opposition political activity.

South, declarer at six hearts, achieved two firsts on this deal from a recent tournament. He was the fastest declarer of the hand and, as a result, the only one to go down.

The auction was normal. North had just enough for a jump raise of hearts and, once the cue-bidding sequence revealed that there were not two fast losers in diamonds, South checked on aces and settled in a small slam when he learned his side had a sufficient number.

West led a trump and declarer wasted no time in thinking about the play. He won in hand and drew a second round of trumps. Next came five rounds of clubs, on which he stuffed diamonds. Now he led a spade from the table and, faced with a guess, he elected to go in with the king. West won the ace and returned the suit — down one.

Had declarer adopted a plan before playing the first trick, he might have found the winning line. While there is a natural reluctance to discard high cards from hand when you have low ones that you can pitch, declarer would have done much better had he discarded his two spade honors on the clubs rather than his low diamonds.

Since dummy has only two diamonds, the rest is easy. Declarer simply cashes the ace of diamonds and concedes a diamond. He can ruff his last diamond on the board to bring home his slam.

Newsboy Cited For Saving Girl

DETROIT (AP) — A teen-age newsboy, credited with foiling the attempted rape of an 11-year-old girl and decorated by police for bravery, insists he's nobody special.

"Anybody could have done it," said Collin Boatright, 14, after accepting the Michigan Association of Police "badge of courage" Wednesday for his action. Today he was to accept the keys to the city from Mayor Coleman A. Young.

"I think Collin sets an example for us all — not only the youth of the community but also the adults of the community," said Neil Craig, president of the 1,500-member police group, which also gave the boy a $500 savings bond.

Police said the Detroit News carrier was delivering the Sunday paper when he saw a 6-foot-2 man force a young girl into a vacant house. He ran to a neighbor to summon help when he heard the girl scream, then went into the house and held the man at bay with a stick until police came.

The young hero has patiently repeated his story to local and national reporters, and got a congratulatory phone call from President Reagan on Tuesday.

"I love it," Boatright said, but admitted he was "still scared" by his sudden celebrity.

His mother, Sue Brown, said Wednesday she was hard-pressed to express her pride in her son.

"If I sat here and tried to explain it I don't think I could," she said. "Words can't explain what he did."

Henry Cabot Lodge Is Dead At Age 82

BEVERLY, Mass. (AP) — Henry Cabot Lodge, whose half-century of public service included ambassador to South Vietnam during the early days of U.S. involvement, a Cold War post at the United Nations and three terms in the U.S. Senate, died after a lengthy illness. He was 82.

Lodge, a Republican vice presidential candidate in 1960, died "very peacefully" while asleep at his home on Wednesday after suffering from congestive heart failure, said his son George.

Lodge's role in South Vietnam stretched from 1963, when he became ambassador just before the overthrow of the Diem regime, to 1969, when he represented the United States at the Paris peace talks. In the United Nations, he was known for his biting responses to Soviet charges. He also was presidential envoy to the Vatican under Richard Nixon.

In Washington, the White House released a statement calling Lodge "a very distinguished American."

"The president regrets his loss and extends his personal sympathy to his family," the statement said.

"Henry Cabot Lodge was one of the greatest statesmen from one of the greatest political families in the history of the commonwealth," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., whose late brother, John, twice bested Lodge at the polls.

"He is also remembered by all of us in the Kennedy family for the warmth and friendship that endured despite our political rivalry," Kennedy said.

Lodge changed the image of his celebrated family from isolationist to internationalist, and was regarded as a model Eastern liberal Republican.

Lodge was born July 5, 1902, in Nahant, to a family with two of Boston society's most famous names — Cabot and Lodge — and a history of public service that included six U.S. senators, a secretary of state, a secretary of the Navy and a governor of Massachusetts.

His father, a poet, died when Lodge was only 7, and the young Lodge was brought up by his grandfather, Henry Cabot Lodge, who led the Senate fight against the League of Nations because it was joined to the Versailles Treaty.

Pan Am Struck

NEW YORK (AP) — Picket lines went up from Miami to Honolulu today as transport union workers struck Pan American World Airways, virtually shutting down the financially troubled carrier's domestic service and severely curtailing its overseas flights.

"I think it is going to be a long strike," said Transport Workers Union airline division director John Kerrigan, who announced the strike of 5,753 mechanics, baggage handlers, flight dispatchers and food service workers at 12:35 a.m. EST.

Picket lines immediately went up at airports in Miami, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Honolulu. Kerrigan said Pan Am pilots — who settled their contract with the airline Tuesday — have promised to honor TWU picket lines, and other unions have advised their members to stay off the job.

"The picket lines have already formed," said Matt Popejoy from a TWU strike hotline phone at Miami International Airport. "We have over a hundred out already tonight, and they'll be picketing all night until this thing is over."

Pan Am spokesman James A. Arey said the airline will originate 14 flights from airports in the United States today: two from San Francisco, three from Miami, eight from New York and one from Los Angeles.

The only flight with both departure and arrival in the U.S. is a New York to Los Angeles trip. Pan Am usually runs 400 flights per day in the U.S. Forty night shift workers set up picket lines at Pan Am ticket counters and at other locations at Honolulu International Airport, said Ken Olaso, vice chairman of TWU's Hawaii unit.

"The picket lines are being set up right now, we don't know if they will be honored," Olaso said. "That's the biggest question right now."

Pan Am made fresh contract offers to mechanics Wednesday night, but Kerrigan said they were rejected.
